Coming home

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — Troops of the 24th Mechanized Infantry Division packed their bags and prepared to fly to the United States early Thursday, part of the first large American unit to return home. The first plane-load of more than 100 troops were to be aloft before midnight Wednesday, President Bush said in Washington. About 900 troops from the 27,000-man division were returning this week, said Sgt. 1st Class Wayne Corey at the unit's Fort Stewart, Ga., base. Two brigades of the 24th Mechanized were in the first wave of U.S. forces deployed to the gulf last year for Operation Desert Shield.

Fear of fleeing

CHARLOTTE — A federal judge denied bond Wednesday for Jim Bakker, saying the PTL founder might flee while awaiting resentencing on fraud and conspiracy charges. U.S. District Judge Graham Mullen said he found prosecutors' arguments that Bakker posed a danger to the community "unpersuasive." But the judge said Bakker's attorneys did not prove he did not pose a flight risk. Last month, the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., upheld Bakker's convictions on fraud and conspiracy but threw out his 45-year sentence and ordered a resentencing by Mullen.

Witness talks

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — The stalled trial of Winnie Mandela on kidnapping and assault charges lurched ahead on Wednesday when a prosecution witness came forward to testify that the wife of the African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela had repeatedly slapped, punched and whipped him and three companions who were abducted to her Soweto home in late 1988. The trial had been postponed for three weeks when Kenneth Kgase and his companion, Barend Thabiso Mono, refused to testify against Mrs. Mandela, citing fear for their lives, after a third witness, Gabriel Pelo Mekgwe, 22, disappeared on the eve of his appearance in court. But after the threat of five-year jail terms if they refused to cooperate, the two witnesses agreed to give evidence, the prosecutor, Jan Swanepoel, on Wednesday told the presiding judge.

Videotaped beating appalls L.A., nation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Outrage mounted Wednesday over the videotaped police beating of an unarmed black motorist with thousands of angry calls to police headquarters, the mayor's office and civil rights activists.

The startling video, shot from a balcony by a resident and shown nationwide on network television news programs, showed officers using an electric stun gun to subdue Rodney King, then clubbing the prone man as he begged for mercy.

"Please stop! Please stop!" King pleaded Sunday as he was struck at least 40 times with police batons, said witness Dorothy Gibson, adding the officers "were all laughing and chuckling, like they had just had a party."

Reports from police officers at the scene said King made a potentially threatening gesture, made one officer lose his balance and fall, charged at officers and

Bullock's bombshell: A call for income tax

AUSTIN (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, in a bombshell announcement Wednesday, called for a state income tax.

Bullock said imposition of personal and corporate income taxes should be coupled with property tax relief. But the income tax is needed to pay for schools, more prisons and increased welfare services, he said.

"I have every belief that this will pass before the year is out . . . I'm going to work very hard for its passage," Bullock said.

"It was a difficult decision because I personally dislike — and I imagine most Texans do — any type of new taxes. But I also know deep down in my heart, deep down in my heart, that it's the right thing to do for Texas," he said.

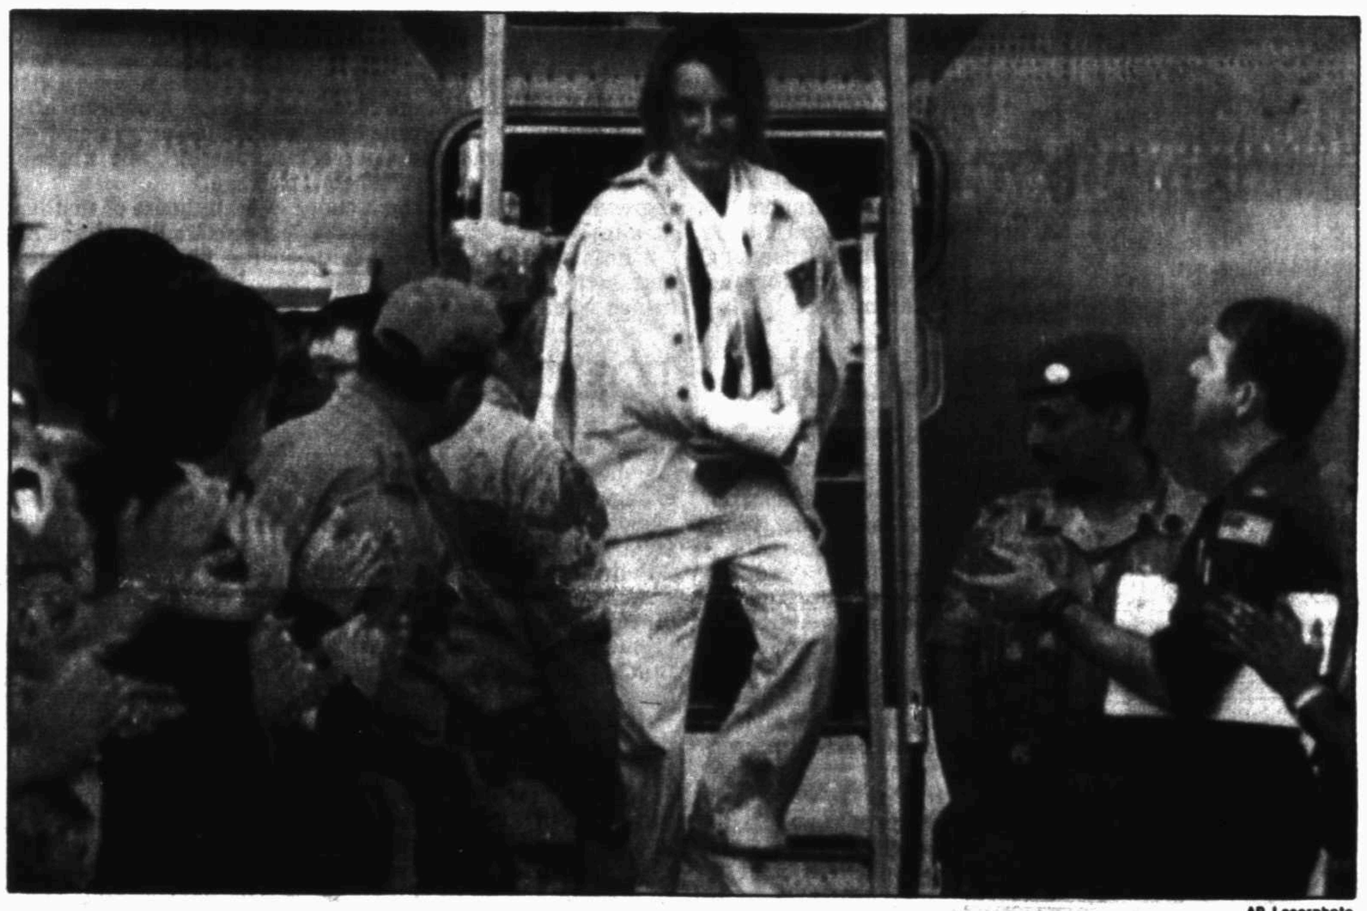

Speaker Gib Lewis said no more than 40 of the 150 House members would vote for an income tax today. One key legislator said many of his colleagues consider it political suicide.

"What it will take (to pass) is a perception on the floor of the House that voting for an income tax will not spell political death," said

Bush hails victory

It's 'time to end Arab-Israeli conflict'

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush proclaimed a triumphant end to the Persian Gulf War on Wednesday night and set his sights on a broader peace. "The time has come to put an end to Arab-Israeli conflict," he said, urging compromise in the troubled Middle East.

A hero's welcome greeted Bush on Capitol Hill, exactly one week after he announced a conditional cease fire in the 42-day conflict.

"As commander in chief," Bush said to a cheering House chamber, "I can report to you: our armed forces fought with honor and valor. As president, I can report to the nation: aggression is defeated. The war is over."

Bush said he would seize the moment to "close the gap between Israel and the Arab states, and between Israelis and Palestinians." Secretary of State James A. Baker III flies to Saudi Arabia Thursday morning for the first round of diplomacy.

With Saddam Hussein's army driven out of Kuwait, Bush announced the first large withdrawal of American troops from the gulf. He said the vanguard 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), bound for home in Fort Stewart, Ga., would leave Saudi Arabia by midnight. More than 537,000 U.S. troops were sent off to war.

"This is just the beginning of a steady flow of American troops coming home," Bush told a joint session of Congress in a nationally broadcast speech.

"We're coming home now — proud. Confident. Heads high. There is much that we must do at home and abroad. And we will do it. We are Americans," Bush said, his voice cracking at times with emotion.

"Tonight in Iraq, Saddam walks amidst ruin," Bush said. "His war machine is crushed. His ability to threaten mass destruction is itself destroyed. . . . For all

U.S.: Israel planned massive retaliation

By Patrick E. Tyler
A N.Y. Times exclusive

WASHINGTON — When Israel was attacked by Iraqi missiles on Jan. 18, Israeli leaders informed Washington that they planned to retaliate with a large air and land incursion into Western Iraq to wipe out the missile launchers, administration officials say.

The Israeli plan was kept on hold for weeks and ultimately abandoned as Bush administration officials pressed Israel to stay out of the war.

It called for an Israeli armed sweep through Western Iraq by helicopter gunships and "significant ground forces," including commando teams, all protected by Israeli air force planes that would have secured an air "corridor" through Jordan or Saudi Arabia to support the operation, the officials said.

Their account provides the first detailed picture of how Israel planned to retaliate for the missile attacks that began with seven incoming strikes on the second day of the war, and led to frantic consultations between American and Israeli leaders.

The intensity and scale of the military operations contemplated by Israel was the primary reason President Bush and his senior advisers devoted a large amount of time in the first weeks of the air war to persuading Israel to avoid any miltary action that would threaten the anti-Iraq coalition and play into the

MHCC bid 'dares to dream'

■ Chamber seeks to establish southwest cultural center by acquiring shopping center.

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

The Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce has big plans for Mission Square shopping center at North Loop 250 and Big Spring Street that, if realized, could have a major impact on the area economy.

The chamber has made a bid to acquire the 100,000-square-foot center for $406,000 and is in the process of finding financing for the project.

At Wednesday's meeting of the chamber's officers and board of directors, Jim Slaton, who is helping organize the project, reported that he and MHCC President Elvia Hernandez have received positive responses from those contacted, particularly NCNB Texas Midland, which is working with the chamber to fund the acquisition and rehabilitation of the center.

They pointed out that rehabilitation — at an estimated cost of $450,000 — would not have to be done at once but per unit as tenants are signed.

Also, Clayton Williams has pledged $5,000 as earnest money and promised to help the chamber raise an additional $50,000, Slaton said. His company owns Plaza Inn just south of the Council support dims for outside-lighting ordinance

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

The Midland City Council may be flickering on an ordinance to snuff obtrusive residential and commercial outdoor lights, a councilman said Wednesday.

The ordinance, approved 5-2 on first reading Feb. 19, would be implemented April 1 if accepted on a second and final reading scheduled Tuesday.

Councilman J.D. Faircloth said councilmen are having second thoughts over the proposal, which would regulate beam control and light intensity in residential areas.

Faircloth, who opposed the ordinance, said there may be enough dissent to strike down the proposal.

Also, public outcry over the regulations has been growing, he said.

"I think there's some people who feel the light ordinance was extremely stupid," Faircloth said. "I think there are a few people who are upset about it. Everyone I've talked to thinks we're nuts."

Only a handful of people spoke out against the ordinance before it came up for initial review last month.

"I think we could reverse it if people kind of focus on it," Faircloth said.

Councilman Tony Carrillo also opposed the ordinance, while Mayor Carroll Thomas and councilmen Bill Williams, John Castro, Tom Johnston and Bob Monaghan voted for it. Thomas, Williams, Castro and Monaghan could not be reached for comment.

Johnston said he plans to be steadfast in his support of the regulations.

"I don't see that it causes any inordinate problems with any of the citizens," Johnston said. "It's not detrimental. It may help resolve problems between neighbors in the future."

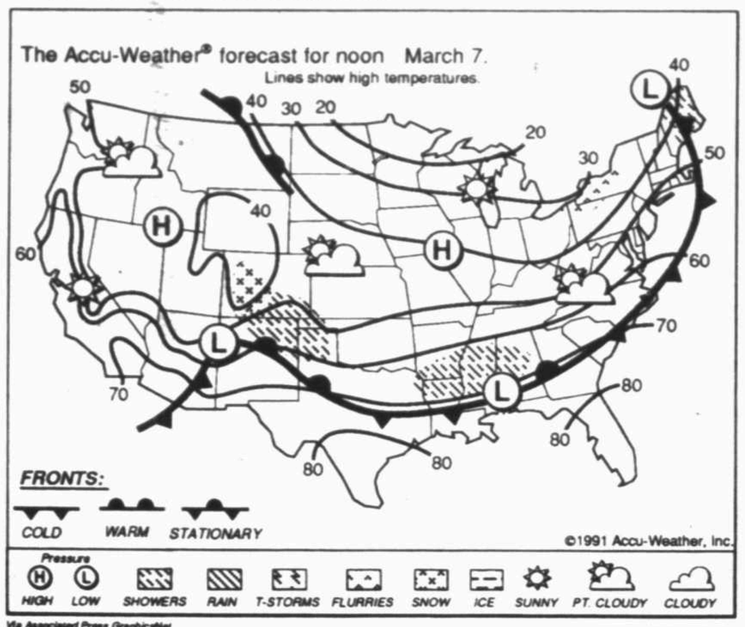

Development of the ordinance followed the airing of a feud between neighbors over outdoor lights.

Councilmen subsequently argued over whether the ordinance is needed and how difficult it will be to enforce.

Clouds, high near 60 on tap

Staff Report

The National Weather Service forecast for today calls for cloudy skies, with a high near 60. Winds will be from the east at 5 to 15 mph. Decreasing cloudiness tonight, with a low in the upper 30s.

Friday is expected to be partly cloudy and warmer, with a high in the mid-60s.

After an overnight low of only 61, Wednesday's high was 80, compared to the date's record of 90 set in 1946. The record low for today's date is 16, set in 1931.

STATE

South Texas continued to broil under mostly fair skies Wednesday while clouds contributed to milder temperatures in North Texas.

Record highs were set at Austin, San Antonio and Corpus Christi while the record was tied in Brownsville as South Texas had temperatures ranging from the middle 70s in the southeast to near 100 degrees along the Rio Grande. Winds were generally from the west and northwest statewide.

A cold front located across North Central and West Texas was accompanied by strong high altitude winds that spread middle and high cloudiness across the regions. After a day of record-breaking 90-degree temperatures Tuesday, readings moderated Wednesday to 60s in the Northwest to near 90 in East Texas.

NATION

Snow fell Wednesday from the Northwest across the northern Rockies and in parts of the Great Lakes region and rain dampened the Midwest and Ohio Valley.

Snow fell across southwestern Oregon, southeastern Idaho, northwestern and north-central Montana, southeastern Wyoming, south-central Colorado and southwestern Nebraska.

Snow showers continued over the mountains and sections of eastern Colorado. Snowfall since Tuesday morning in the ski areas of the northern and central mountains ranged from 10 to 18 inches and more. Heaviest snowfall was 27 inches at Winter Park.

As much as 5 inches of snow fell overnight in the mountains of eastern and southwestern Oregon.

Midland statistics

Today: Cloudy, high near 60, winds east 5-15 mph.
Tonight: Decreasing cloudiness, low in the upper 30s.

BUSH: Thunderous applause greets president that Saddam has done to his own people, to the Kuwaitis and to the entire world, Saddam and those around him are accountable."

The House chamber was awash with red, white and blue from 600 American flags as lawmakers greeted the president. In the audience were Kuwait's ambassador, Saud Al-Sabah, and the architects of the war, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney and Joint Chiefs Chairman Colin Powell.

The ambassador, his eyes filling with tears, rose to thunderous applause and clenched his hands above his head in a victory salute when Bush said, "Ambassador Al-Sabah, tonight Kuwait is free."

The speech marked a sweet moment of personal triumph for Bush. Many congressional Democrats had second-guessed Bush throughout his seven-month showdown with Saddam, urging him not to go to war and then not to launch a ground offensive.

In welcoming Bush, House Speaker Thomas Foley bestowed Democratic congratulations on the president and the troops for their "brilliant victory of the Desert Storm operation." Bush was interrupted 22 times by applause.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said the victory in the gulf was "President Bush's finest hour. ... Thanks to the brilliant leadership of President Bush — who had to make the toughest calls of his life and our times — the war is over."

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, said the war has given Bush "enormous prestige" to work for a settlement in the Middle East. "I am pleased the president is seizing the initiative," Mitchell said.

Addressing the longstanding dispute between Israel and its neighbors, Bush said differences were "so painful and intractable. Yet, in the conflict just concluded, Israel and many of the Arab states have for the first time found themselves confronting the same aggressor.

"By now, it should be plain to all parties that peacemaking in the Middle East requires compromise," the president declared. "We must do all that we can to close the gap between Israel and the Arab states, and between Israelis and Palestinians."

A comprehensive peace must be grounded in U.N. Security Council resolutions calling on Israel to withdraw from occupied territories and declaring the right of all nations in the region to live in peace within secure borders.

"This principle must be elaborated to provide for Israel's security and recognition, and at the same time for legitimate Palestinian political rights," Bush said. "Anything else would fail the twin tests of fairness and security.

"The time has come to put an end to Arab-Israeli conflict," Bush said.

He said other challenges still remain after the war.

Praising the performance of U.S. forces, Bush said they had rekindled a patriotism and pride across America. "The brave men and women of Desert Storm accomplished more than even they may realize," he said. "They set out to confront an enemy abroad, and in the process, they transformed a nation at home."

He urged that every community to make July 4 a day of special celebration for troops coming home.

Turning from the war, Bush said his first priority is to end the recession.

ISRAEL: Attack plan kept on hold for weeks hands of President Saddam Hussein by bringing Israel into the war.

Israel's disclosure of its plan to conduct such a large operation may have prompted the brief discussion among Bush and his senior advisers, first alluded to in The Washington Post on Monday, about possibly going along with a limited retaliation plan in which Israel would fire a salvo of its Jericho medium-range ballistic missiles at Iraqi targets. But both plans were ultimately opposed by Washington.

The ambitious Israeli plan for a air-ground operation, which would have been carried out over a number of days, was favored by Israeli military officials who argued that the United States could not guarantee the destruction of all mobile and fixed Scud missile sites in Iraq without inserting ground forces to search for and help destroy the missiles.

U.S. officials familiar with the incursion plan described it as the kind of bold and dramatic operation that would have been possible with allied air superiority over Iraq. The plan also explains the great importance Israel attached to obtaining the American aircraft identity codes that would have allowed Israeli air forces to recognize as friend or foe any allied and Iraqi warplanes over Iraq.

Administration officials said that in order to head off Israeli retaliation, they sent U.S. special operations forces into Western Iraq to help locate the mobile Scud launchers.

U.S. officials believed they had Israel's tacit agreement not to retaliate for Scud attacks after President Bush discussed the Scud threat on Dec. 11 with Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and assured him the U.S. war plan called for aggressive attacks on the Scud sites in Western Iraq.

Administration officials said that tacit agreement was reaffirmed when Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence S. Eagleburger visited Israel in January, five days before the onset of the air war.

But when Iraq launched the first seven modified Scud-B missiles against Tel Aviv and Haifa on Jan. 18, the tacit agreement was replaced by pressure to respond.

The "infrared signature" of the Iraqi boosters were detected by the United States early warning satellites, which simulaneously transmitted the launching warning to the Pentagon, which in turn relayed the warning instantly over a newly established and secure hotline, called "Hammer Rick," to Tel Aviv, officials said.

U.S. intelligence also monitored Israel's initial response as it scrambled about a dozen jet fighters — what one American official described as an "intensive combat air patrol" but not a "strike package."

Within hours of that launching, Defense Minister Moshe Arens was on the hotline to Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, who spent that evening at the White House fielding calls with Israeli leaders along with Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Bush.

Arens described the plan for a full-scale assault in the Iraqi desert to Cheney and requested U.S. military assistance for a full retaliatory raid. Administration officials said the Israeli plan called for flying air transports filled with Israeli troops through Jordan or Saudi Arabia to the Iraqi desert, where they would systematically attack the fixed Scud sites at Iraq's large H-2 and H-3 air bases.

The Israeli helicopter and ground forces also would conduct search-and-destroy missions for mobile Scud launchers while Israeli warplanes flew strike and reconnaissance missions and held the skies over western Iraq.

The plan called for Israeli aerial tankers to fly through Saudi Arabia or Jordan to support the air operations, including refueling the large attack helicopter fleet that would set up a temporary base in the Iraqi desert to support the ground forces.

BULLOCK: Proposal would exempt first $25,000

(From 1A)

Rep. James Hury, D-Galveston, chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee.

Midland Rep. Tom Craddick voiced quick opposition to the idea. "I don't think we need an income tax at this point. I don't think the people of Texas want an income tax and I know the people in my district don't," he said.

Bullock said a 5 percent personal income tax and an 8 percent corporate earnings tax would generate $2 billion in 1992 and $6 billion in 1993. Such a levy, he said, could lead to reductions of up to 35 percent in property taxes in 1993.

Bullock said his proposal would exempt the first $25,000 for the personal income tax and would exempt retirement income.

State leaders are grappling with a projected 1992-93 budget deficit of $4.6 billion, plus a Texas Supreme Court order to equalize funding for rich and poor school districts.

Gov. Ann Richards described the possibilities for legislative approval as "slim and none."

While declining to flatly rule out an income tax, Richards said she first wants to see audits of agency spending and a review of all taxes by a panel of experts before making any decisions about new revenue.

"I can tell you that I detect no sympathy or support (for an income tax) in the general public," she said.

"We must tell the people of this state that we have done everything we know how to do, short of any additional taxation or new revenues that might impose a hardship on the public," Richards said.

"I think we need to see cuts in spending. We have had a higher tax bill the last three or four sessions, one right after the other," said Craddick. "We've had huge creeps in spending and I think we've got to get it under control.

"We need to look at cutting programs back and we need to look at bills we're sending out of committees with huge fiscal notes that are going to end up costing greater dollars in a year or two years from now," he said.

Bullock's push comes after some business groups began indicating their support for corporate and personal income taxes over other levies — such as new taxes on businesses or professional services.

While Texas is one of the few states with neither a personal nor corporate income tax, its sales tax rate already is 6¼ percent.

PLANS: Purpose is to make chamber self-sufficient center.

(From 1A)

Plans are to establish a Southwest cultural center on the property and also to lease shops in the center.

Inquiries already have been received from a record store, video store, tuxedo shop and two offices, Hernandez said.

Long-range plans would make the complex the centerpiece of an area development including a second hotel, a 20-acre recreational lake, convention center and amphitheater.

Slaton cautioned the group that the project "has the potential to make you or to bankrupt you. But sometimes you have to dare to dream."

He noted the chamber's plans have a potential for "a $5 million cash flow," within five years.

Hernandez observed that while the main purpose of the project is to make the chamber self-sufficient, "it could make Midland a regional convention center."

As Slaton and Hernandez visit banks to assemble financing for the project and hope to attract investor interest, they also are looking at converting the chamber's education foundation from a foundation to a community development corporation (CDC).

In a CDC, a group of local banks purchase stock in the CDC to help fund the community project, with the stipulation that the group manages the project, and during a specified number of years, the CDC repurchases the stock either through cash flow or from contributions.

Slaton said, "I can almost smell success. I feel we're getting real close to realizing this."

In other business, the chamber officials were presented a check for $7,000 from the Women's Department, to be used for scholarships and other chamber projects. The money came from last month's "Hearts on Parade" fashion show.

The directors and officers then voted to earmark $3,500 of the money for scholarships, a $500 increase from last year when the chamber presented eight scholarships.

Also, the chamber will be taking nominations for Midland Hispanic Businessman and Businesswoman of the year, Member of the Year and Corporate Member of the Year. The winners will be presented at a special dinner on May 9 and will compete for state honors at the state Texas Association of Mexican-American Chambers of Commerce meeting in Lubbock July 25-28.

The chamber will host the TAMACC quarterly board meeting on March 22-23 at the Plaza Club. Among speakers invited to the meeting are Texas Railroad Commissioner Lena Guerrero and Alan Kahn, chairman of the Texas Department of Commerce.

BEATING: Thousands call

fought back. Ms. Gibson and other witnesses said they didn't see King fight the officers.

About 10 officers surrounded King. Three or four struck him and kicked him.

Thousands of outraged callers from as far away as the East Coast and including police officers from other states swamped police headquarters, Mayor Tom Bradley's office and the American Civil Liberties Union.

Many callers demanded the firing of Police Chief Daryl F. Gates and the officers involved, who remained on duty.

King, 25, of Altadena was still in the county jail infirmary Wednesday with a broken leg and battered face. King, a parolee on a Nov. 3, 1989, robbery conviction, was in custody with no chance of bail for allegedly violating his parole. Charges had yet to be filed against him.

The incident began when California Highway Patrol officers tried to stop King for allegedly speeding. Officers said he wouldn't stop and a high-speed chase ensued.

Civil rights leaders said the incident was only the latest in a pattern of police violence in the nation's second largest city.

The FBI was investigating for possible civil rights violations, the district attorney's office was considering criminal charges against the officers and the police department was conducting an internal investigation.

None of the investigative teams would discuss the case.

"People all over the country are furious," said ACLU spokeswoman Linda Burstyn, adding that five receptionists were called in to handle the hundreds of calls. "It has been a phenomenal outpouring of rage.

"They are asking for Daryl Gates to step down," she said.

Bradley, a former police officer, said: "I am as shocked and outraged as anyone." Asked about getting rid of Gates, the mayor said: "The chief is protected by the charter and by his civil service status. He must choose when the time has come for him to retire."

Gates' office received about 1,000 angry telephone calls by midday Wednesday.

"The people are outraged by what they are seeing," said Officer Bill Frio, a department spokesman. "But the average citizen out there must realize those officers don't represent a department of 8,400 officers."

Frio said the officers involved were still working, on desk duty.

LIGHTING: Dissent might strike down proposal

(From 1A)

3305 Douglas Ave. became the source of the controversy, said he is rallying people for a show of opposition at Tuesday's 10 a.m. meeting.

"I've been inundated with callers saying, 'Gee, I hate this ordinance. This is a stupid thing,'" Gafford said. "People are a little more excited than they were two weeks ago. Maybe they'll show up this time.

"I haven't talked to anyone yet who is in favor of the ordinance. People who call ask what these city idiots are doing."

In general, the ordinance, which has no grandfather clause, states that residential and commercial use of outdoor lights must not create a problem for those on adjacent properties.

The rules are specific for residences.

Residential outdoor lights must be shielded to prevent direct beams from hitting abutting property any higher than 3 feet above the ground. Light intensity on adjacent property cannot exceed 0.5 foot candles.

City code enforcement authorities will serve as the outdoor light police, acting primarily on complaints.

The officers would issue warnings to first-time offenders. Failure to comply could result in a maximum $2,000 fine. Municipal court judges will hear cases and levy fines.

Outdoor lights can exceed regulations if adjacent owners agree in writing to allow the direct beams on their property.

Also excluded is lighting installed by a governmental entity for public benefit on public rights of way, parks, playgrounds and recreational facilities.

Lighting authorized by the city for construction or maintenance of streets, facilities or utilities also is exempt.

The ordinance does not regulate holiday lighting, such as Christmas lights.

Other Texas cities, such as Abilene and Lubbock, have similar ordinances.

The issue came to light in Midland late last year, when Gafford and neighbor Ralph Miller began arguing over outdoor lights.

Miller, 3303 Douglas Ave., complained to councilmen that the city needed an ordinance regulating outdoor lights. He claimed Gafford had installed far too many outdoor lights in his yard.

Gafford said the lights were erected for crime prevention in the wake of recent criminal activities in the neighborhood.

He presented councilmen with a petition signed by 242 people opposing outdoor light regulations.

In a computerized telephone survey Gafford conducted polling about 3,500 Midlanders at random, he said only four of 183 respondents wanted outdoor light regulations.

Miller said the public has misunderstood the point of the ordinance, which is to protect neighbors from obnoxious lighting.

"It does not cause anybody's lights to be dimmer," Miller said. "It only affects lights that may be a nuisance to your neighbor.

"The issue is that my neighbor has four sodium vapor lights in his yard. People assume he has two 100-watt bulbs."

Since the issue erupted, Gafford said a steady stream of motorists have cruised by his house to inspect his lights.

Pentagon announces troop withdrawals

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon said Wednesday night that 7,168 American servicemen and women would begin the initial withdrawal of U.S. forces from the Persian Gulf, arriving at their home bases on Friday and Saturday.

The "24th Mech" led the withdrawal. Overall, the earliest redeployments will total more than 14,000 troops: 7,386 Army, the Air Force 1,854, the Navy 2,177 and the Marines 2,900.

"Less than two hours from now, the first planeload of American soldiers will lift off from Saudi Arabia, headed for the U.S.A.," President Bush announced to Congress. "It will carry men and women of the 24th Mechanized Infantry Division," bound for home, Fort Stewart, Ga.

Some 900 troops from the 82nd Airborne Division also will be among the first group of soldiers coming back to the United States, as the Pentagon moved to implement a "first in, first out" withdrawal program.

The 82nd Airborne was the first to be deployed to the Persian Gulf, last Aug. 8. The 24th Division was sent two days later. Detachments from other key units also had fast tickets home. Among them, the 2nd Armored Division, the 197th Separate Brigade (Mechanized). Mechanized units include

A Pentagon official said the first returning contingents had been delayed one day by air transport problems.

The 24th Mech, as it is known, played a key role in the ground war. Positioned far to the west along the Iraqi border, its troops sped deep into enemy territory all the way to the Euphrates River. They blocked east-west roads, a move that cut off Iraqi forces.

The Pentagon issued a statement Wednesday advising military family members not to travel to Middle Eastern or European hospitals treating troops injured in the Persian Gulf War, even though several airlines are offering them free or reduced fares.

It said family members may have trouble finding the injured personnel because in some cases the wounded will already have been evacuated back to the United States. Also, military medical facilities abroad may be off-limits for security reasons.

In cases in which the Pentagon deems it necessary for a family member to be with an injured service member, medical authorities can authorize travel at government expense, it said.

On Tuesday, the Pentagon source — speaking on condition of anonymity — said a large contingent of returning troops would arrive to a presidential welcome at Andrews Air Force Base. But White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said no time or place had been fixed for a homecoming event.

"I'm sure he'll be meeting returning troops, but it could be various communities around the country," Fitzwater said of the president. "Could be a base. Right now we don't have any fixed dates when it might occur."

Letter from Kuwait City: Reprisals cloud liberation

By Stewart M. Powell
Hearst News Service

KUWAIT CITY — This city of commerce by the sea, reeling from seven months of horror at the hands of Iraqi plunderers, has descended into lawlessness as vigilantes stage cold-blooded reprisals against alleged collaborators during the occupation.

Street-corner justice often is meted out beyond public view, mocking the declaration of martial law that has barely curbed the sidewalk beatings and executions.

Most of the bloodletting after the expulsion of Iraqi occupation forces appears to have shifted direction to the 180,000 Palestinians who live here.

Some Kuwaitis apparently are hunting down suspected collaborators with the same vengeance that Iraqis displayed as they searched for Kuwaiti resistance fighters barely 10 days ago.

But in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, Marine Brig. Gen. Richard I. Neal, deputy director of operations for U.S. Central Command, downplayed the development Wednesday. "Isolated incidents" of retribution have occurred, he said. They were "fully expected" and they are "not an emerging pattern."

"I think the initial rush of liberation and the initial payback — the revenge type of thing — has actually been mitigated," Neal said at a briefing. "I think it's really been tampered down."

Yet for visitors to Kuwait City these days it's clear that the long-awaited expulsion of Iraqi troops has unleashed many of the same passions that convulsed France after the Nazi occupation in World War II.

Now as then, victims of occupation avenge fallen comrades and loved ones who were fingered by traitors and suffered unspeakable torture — from cigarette burns and broken legs to gouged-out eyes — before they died.

"I want to cry for these people — blood, not tears," said Dr. Hisham al-Nisef as he examined the broken corpses of some of the 800 Kuwaitis whose bodies were dumped in front of hospital entrances during the seven months of hell that ended with Kuwait's liberation last week.

Palestinians appear to be bearing the brunt of Kuwaiti vengeance in a part of the world known for eye-for-an-eye retribution. Many Kuwaitis charge that Palestinians here supported Saddam Hussein's bid to make Kuwait a pawn in an effort to force Israeli withdrawal from the West Bank.

An estimated 350 Palestinians are in custody, charged with security violations, according to Kuwaiti officials. But they will be dealt with under Kuwaiti law, not hanging-tree justice, the officials say.

Government efforts to gain control of the streets show few results, however.

The return from exile of Crown Prince Saad Abdullah Sabah earlier this week failed to stabilize the situation or set the stage for a scheduled return by the ruler, Emir Jaber Ahmed Sabah.

"All possibilities of danger exist because of so many weapons (are) in the hands of the people who we don't know who they are," said Abdul Rahman al-Awadi, a senior Kuwaiti cabinet minister.

Not all the same

This photo shows one end of a pack of Sudafed 12-Hour capsules, which authorities investigating three cyanide-poisoning cases in the Puget Sound area say contains another suspect capsule, upper right. It was taken from a drug store shelf after the poisonings led to a national recall. Close examination reveals no markings on the capsule like the others, a more powdery look to the medication and the fact a dark line appears next to the suspect capsule where the protective foil around it has been cut, then pushed back into place.

Jury convicts man of threatening Reagan

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A jury Wednesday convicted a man who claimed to be Jesus Christ in his second coming of making a threat against former President Reagan.

Gregory Stuart Gordon was convicted of one count of threatening a former president.

Gordon, 33, faces up to three years in prison and a $250,000 fine when he is sentenced April 29. Federal prosecutor Robert Calo wouldn't comment on what sentence he will recommend.

Gordon, who has lived in New Jersey and in Hollywood, climbed over the fence of the Reagan home in suburban Bel-Air on July 4. He ran up the driveway, through the house and out a back door before Secret Service agents stopped him, according to court documents.

Prosecutors said that Gordon described himself as Christ in the second coming and told arresting agents: "Ronald Reagan is the Antichrist. He must be killed and I must kill him."

Forfeiture law needs amending

Use of forfeiture funds seized by law enforcement officers or other agencies in Texas raises a question as to the prudence of a 1987 law written by Attorney General Dan Morales while he was a member of the Texas Legislature.

The issue arose in Midland County recently when county commissioners denied a request from District Attorney Al Schorre to use $10,000 of the $26,000 his office has accumulated this fiscal year in forfeiture funds to supplement salaries for his seven assistants, investigators, secretaries and clerks. The commissioner's court voted 3-2 not to permit that use of the forfeiture money because of the appearance of "entrepreneurial government" that it could create, and the fact that it could create bad feelings among other county employees not subject to such funds.

In addition to the district attorney's forfeiture funds, the Midland County Sheriff's Department has budgeted $381,000 in forfeiture funds for this year from items confiscated in drug cases and other confiscations.

The forfeiture funds, while providing needed monies to some law enforcement agencies, can raise a question in the public's mind about whether law enforcement activities are being carried out in the interest of enforcing the law or making a sizeable economic return. Schorre and Sheriff Gary Painter both have said that the activities of their offices are both in the interest of the public.

The major point of concern is that the money is not being overseen in a proper fashion. Forfeiture funds, under the way the statute is drawn, must be used for law enforcement purposes, but that very fact means that in some instances the practice could lead to "entrepreneurial" law enforcement, or at least open the door to suspicion of that practice.

"No one's alleging that the money's not being handled according to the statute," said Schorre recently. "The argument is over who decides how it is spent."

That's a good point and a good argument in favor of putting all forfeiture funds into the general fund of the county for the benefit of all county taxpayers. Under the present law as written by Attorney Gene4ral Morales, law enforcement is by and large the recipient of forfeiture funds and that's probably justifiable — to an extent. Beyond that point, it can produce the appearance of biased law enforcement.

As County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer said at a recent commissioner's meeting, "The taxpayers pay the salaries and share the liability in the event that an agency violates someone's rights, so it's the taxpayers who should benefit from the forfeitures."

The forfeiture law needs to be amended. Bills can be introduced in the Legislature until 6 p.m. Friday. We hope that State Rep. Tom Craddick of Midland or a lawmaker from another involved county that has experienced problems with these funds will introduce an amendment to the current law that will stipulate that forfeiture funds from drug cases or other sources be placed in the general fund of the respective county to reduce the tax burden on taxpayers.

LETTER

Complaints bring abusive regulation

The United States came into being because the people who formed the original 13 colonies were sick to death of being ruled, taxed and generally abused by their government, with no voice of the people ever being heard.

Some 200 years later, enter the Midland city government with its whimsically- adopted ordinances. Apparently the City of Midland is not run as a democracy, but as a dictatorship. It took one complaint from one disgruntled citizen about his neighbor's outdoor lighting to get a city ordinance passed regulating such.

Several years ago "Big Brother" took it upon himself to pass an ordinance regulating the parking of RVs and boats based upon the complaints of a few citizens. More recently, "Big Brother" passed a smoking ordinance based upon the complaints of a few non-smokers. Since when, in a democracy, does the minority rule? Homeowners pay for their residences with blood, sweat and sometimes tears. When those residences are violated by vandals and burglars who might have been deterred by adequate outdoor lighting around the premises, who is the Midland City Council to forbid such lighting by passing an ordinance against it?

The government — federal, state and city — has too many fingers in the taxpayer's pie as it is. The rights that Americans have fought and died for are slowly, one by one, being taken away by governments catering to the minority rather than the majority. I pray that our city fathers don't have a complaint from a citizen who is accusing his neighbor of breathing his air, for the city council will surely come up with an ordinance regulating the amount of air each citizen may breathe.

And by the way, what about the outdoor lighting that burns 24 hours a day at the Hogan Park baseball diamonds? Seems to me that might be a nuisance to the surrounding residences. Any complaints from them?

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, March 7, the 66th day of 1991. There are 299 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On March 7, 1926, the first successful trans-Atlantic radio-telephone conversation took place, between New York and London.

On this date:

In 1849, horticulturist Luther Burbank was born in Lancaster, Mass.

In 1850, in a three-hour speech before the U.S. Senate, Daniel Webster endorsed the Compromise of 1850 as a means of preserving the Union.

Today's Birthdays: Photographer Lord Snowdon is 61. TV weatherman Willard Scott is 57. Auto racer Janet Guthrie is 53. Actor Daniel J. Travanti is 51. Actor John Heard is 46. Rock singer Peter Wolf is 45. Football Hall of Famer Franco Harris is 41.

Thought for Today: "If you're not feeling good about you, what you're wearing outside doesn't mean a thing." — Leontyne Price, American opera singer (1927-).

Pentagon forgot about compasses

WASHINGTON — With few, if any landmarks in the Saudi desert, one of the major hazards of the six-month buildup to the war was getting lost. Some U.S. armored vehicle crews had to pop the hatch, climb out and get a crude compass reading for their bearings in the desert.

Anderson

The problem is the Pentagon never bothered to develop an adequate built-in navigational system for the M-1 Abrams tank and the M-2 Bradley fighting vehicle.

In the days leading up to the ground offensive, the Bradleys were used as scouting vehicles for tank and infantry units, probing enemy positions to make sure there would be no surprises for the troops who followed. On a mission like that, the last thing a man wants to do is show his head to find out which way is which.

FMC Corp. manufactures the Bradley. A spokesman told us that the vehicle was designed for fighting in Europe with landmarks, roads and varied terrain. The Iraqi desert has no such conveniences. In Europe, a map makes more sense than a high-tech navigational system. But the chances of having to use the M-1s and Bradleys in Europe are not as great as the chances that they will be used again in the unstable Middle East.

A lost armored vehicle, or one that shows up where it isn't supposed to be, is as much a target for "friendly fire" as enemy fire.

Hughes Aircraft Co. has a contract with the Pentagon to build a system that allows commanders to track the location of their armored units on the battlefield, but it will not be available in large numbers for years. A lack of coordination with allied aircraft on the whereabouts of friendly ground units resulted in "friendly fire" casualties in the Persian Gulf War.

To compensate for the lack of built-in gadgetry, the Pentagon ordered thousands of portable receivers that use the Global Positioning System — a network of 16 satellites used for sea navigation. Trimble Navigation and Magellan Systems Corp. make the hand-held devices called Small Lightweight GPS Receivers (SLGRs), nicknamed "sluggers." They pick up signals from the GPS satellites and can pinpoint the user's location within 50 feet.

The 16 GPS satellites can't give 24-hour-a-day coverage, but the hand-held receivers got rave reviews from U.S. troops who figured they were better than nothing.

The units that got "sluggers" before the ground war started were few and far between. The Pentagon won't give out numbers, but our sources estimate there were between 2,000 and 5,000 of the hand-held receivers available for use during combat. Ideally, the troops could have used about 50,000 of them.

A spokesman for the Air Force Space Systems Division, which buys the receivers, told us the companies couldn't keep up with the demand. "These are small companies. They can't pop these things out like TVs."

But officials at Magellan Systems told our associate Dean Boyd that the Pentagon has been too prudent in its orders for the "sluggers." The Pentagon is considering replacing the existing models with a new system in 1993 that would have greater military capabilities and may have been reluctant to stockpile sluggers that would soon be obsolete.

The sluggers have been ordered in relatively small increments. When the ground war began, Trimble Navigation was booked up through May with Pentagon orders. But Magellan Systems had excess sluggers in stock.

The receivers were in such high demand on the front that some soldiers wrote home to their families asking them to buy one. "We have mothers here in the states making credit card orders to us on behalf of their sons over there," one Magellan Systems official told us.

Jack Anderson's and Dale Van Atta's column is distributed by United Feature Syndicate.

GEORGE WILL

What's the Democratic Party to do in '92?

WASHINGTON — All eyes here are on the shattered, smoldering infrastructure, the twisted pile of blasted hopes. Iraq? No, the Democratic Party.

Last Aug. 1, which now seems light-years away, Bush was stuck to the tar baby of the budget negotiations. He had jettisoned the one principle that gave him a clearly-defined political profile — "no new taxes." Then came Aug. 2 and the Great Clarifier, Saddam Hussein. Suddenly Bush possessed what he had lacked — a clear purpose and convincing passion.

Will

The almost party-line vote on authorizing the use of force has done to the Democratic Party what it can least afford: Attention is now focused on its national security record. And that vote has done for the Republican Party, especially as led by George Bush, what it most needs for its most cherished goal. That goal is not to win the presidency (Republicans assume that) but to win elsewhere, particularly in congressional races. For that it needs a strong single theme of the sort an ideological leader like Ronald Reagan provided. The war may have provided it.

The Democratic vote against force was not a defining moment but a reinforcing moment for the party, deepening the already deep public perception of the party as semi-pacifist. That perception was fixed 19 years ago by the nomination of George McGovern. To many Americans, the January vote against force was part of a Democratic pattern extending from McGovern's campaign promise to slash the defense budget by 30 percent, to Carter's astonishment at the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, to Mondale's denunciation of the liberation of Grenada, to Dukakis' attempt to expunge his party's record, and his own, by riding in a tank.

Republicans have been dealt a strong hand, but they could play their cards too crudely. It is one thing to say that the Democratic Party is unrealistic; it is another to say it is unpatriotic. So far, Republican rhetoric is tough but acceptable.

Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, chairman of the National Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, says, "Democrats voted to position themselves to the left of the United Nations." Newt Gingrich of Georgia, House Republican whip, who is urging local Republican organizations to recruit Desert Storm veterans to run against Democratic incumbents, says: One party just won a war, and as for the other party, "the last time it was in power it couldn't get eight helicopters across the desert."

Who should march into the teeth of such withering fire? Only a Democrat who voted to support the use of force.

For some Democrat — the names Tennessee Sen. Al Gore, Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton and Oklahoma Rep. Dave McCurdy come to mind — 1992 could be a win-win situation. He might win. Stranger things have happened. Not often, but if the banking crisis aborts the recovery, this Era of Good Feelings will be brief.

Besides, if a young Democrat gets blown away by Bush, so what? He is not expected to win. And by going around the track he will hone his skills, sharpen his message and make friends for the next time. It took George Bush two times around the track to win and Ronald Reagan two and a half times (counting his 1968 effort).

History does not encourage anyone now serving in Congress or a statehouse. Before Dukakis did it, Nelson Rockefeller was the last sitting governor to mount even a semi-serious campaign for president. Rockefeller did not even get nominated. The most recent sitting member of Congress to receive his party's nomination was McGovern in 1972. Before him there was Goldwater in 1964. The last time a sitting member of Congress was elected was Kennedy eight elections ago. Before that? Harding in 1920 and Garfield in 1880.

But the nation needs a serious Democratic candidacy. In 1984 Reagan coasted to a 49-state sweep while saying, "It is morning in America." In 1988 flags and furloughs were sufficient to reduce the election to a referendum on the political culture of Dukakis' Massachusetts Democratic Party. If the Democratic challenge in 1992 is perfunctory and without relevance to the future — if it is too weak to influence the content of the Bush campaign — we will have the third consecutive campaign without a clear argument.

That would mean that by 1996 the country would have gone 16 years — almost a generation — without the clarifying conversation of a serious presidential contest. If that happens, the tone of American politics will join the Democratic Party as a war casualty.

There's much to be said about going to war

Now that the war is over, people are attending parties again. If you want to attract attention, these are some of the things you might say:

"I told my wife that if she is going to continue flying helicopters in Iraq, she'll have to get someone else to clean the house."

Buchwald

"If a grateful nation really wants to thank Gen. Schwarzkopf, they should give him his own S&L."

"I wish I could find a friend for King Hussein of Jordan."

"Just because an evil leader loses his entire army and is responsible for the destruction of every city in his country doesn't mean you have to bad-mouth him at parties."

"My mother was the first one in Bethesda to plant Patriot missiles in her rose garden."

"The Russians should get credit for everything they tried to do to stop the war. My minister told us, 'Blessed are the peacemakers who want to stop the fighting in Iraq, but see nothing wrong in beating the hell out of Lithuania.' "

"My barber said, 'Don't turn your swords into plowshares until Iraq pays for the damage in Kuwait.' "

"If the Iraqis have any sense they would put Peter Arnett in charge of the country."

"I wouldn't have felt as confident about the outcome of the war if President Bush hadn't let Dan Quayle carry his briefcase."

"How come we never saw Mrs. Saddam Hussein visiting an Iraqi USO?"

"One thing I didn't like about the war was the way they interrupted the basketball games on TV to give us cease-fire bulletins from the Pentagon."

"If every American family would take in four Iraqi POWs, it would relieve a lot of pressure on our troops in Kuwait."

"My teen-age daughter wants Arthur Kent of NBC to come live with us."

"Even if you find a good buy on a house in Baghdad, you'd still have a tough job getting someone to fix it up."

"I don't know if we are allowed to try Saddam Hussein as a war criminal, but there is nothing wrong with wishing him my bad back."

"Gen. Schwarzkopf used to be in my Weight Watchers' class."

"Can the Republican Guards still call themselves an elite force if they surrendered without their boots on?"

"I'll take an Iraqi fanatic over an Iranian fanatic any day."

"I believe that the military experts on ABC were more aggressive in their fighting than those on CBS."

"I guess Arafat didn't help Saddam militarily as much as we all thought he would."

"They say that this war was fought over oil and I say, if it was, then thank God for oil."

"My son is depressed. He protested against the war, but it was over before he got arrested."

Fearing he'd flee, judge refuses bond for Bakker

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A federal judge denied bond Wednesday for Jim Bakker, saying the PTL founder might flee while awaiting resentencing on fraud and conspiracy charges.

U.S. District Judge Graham Mullen said he found prosecutors' arguments that Bakker posed a danger to the community "unpersuasive."

■ More nation news/4D

But the judge said Bakker's attorneys did not prove he did not pose a flight risk.

Last month, the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., upheld Bakker's convictions on fraud and conspiracy but threw out his 45-year sentence and ordered a resentencing by Mullen.

Mullen has said he would hold a resentencing hearing April 25. Mullen had the authority to release Bakker on bond while awaited that hearing.

In his decision, Mullen referred to the testimony of Daniel Foster, chief of psychology services at the Federal Medical Center at the Rochester, Minn., prison where Bakker has been held for the past 16 months.

Bakker was accused of overselling lodging guarantees, called "lifetime partnerships," at his Heritage USA religious retreat.

Prosecutors said Bakker diverted $3.7 million in ministry funds to finance his extravagant lifestyle while at the same time knowing the now-bankrupt ministry was in precarious financial condition.

The appeals court said the trial judge, U.S. District Judge Robert Potter, was influenced by his own religious beliefs when he sentenced Bakker.

During Friday's hearing, one of Bakker's attorneys, Alan Dershowitz, said Bakker would be willing to accept any conditions placed on him by the judge for his release — including wearing a 24-hour monitoring device.

Witness testifies against Winnie Mandela at her trial

■ More world news/8B

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (NYT) — The stalled trial of Winnie Mandela on kidnapping and assault charges lurched ahead on Wednesday when a prosecution witness came forward to testify that the wife of the African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela had repeatedly slapped, punched and whipped him and three companions who were abducted to her Soweto home in late 1988.

The trial had been postponed for three weeks when Kenneth Kgase, who is 31, and his companion, Barend Thabiso Mono, 21, refused to testify against Mrs. Mandela, citing fear for their lives, after a third witness, Gabriel Pelo Mekgwe, 22, disappeared on the eve of his appearance in court.

But after the threat of five-year jail terms if they refused to cooperate, the two witnesses agreed to give evidence, the prosecutor, Jan Swanepoel, on Wednesday told the presiding judge, Michael S. Stegmann. Mekgwe's whereabouts are unknown, as are those of four co-defendants of Mrs. Mandela who jumped bail in December.

Kgase took the stand to describe how Mrs. Mandela's bodyguards removed him and three companions on Dec. 29, 1988, from the Methodist Church house where they were living in Soweto.

They were taken to Mrs. Mandela's home, he said, and accused of engaging in homosexual relations with the white minister at the manse. When they denied it, Kgase said, they were badly beaten by Mrs. Mandela and her bodyguards.

The incident occurred on Dec. 29, 1988, more than 13 months before Mandela was released from prison. One of the youths, James (Stompie) Moeketsi Seipei, who was 14, was found on Jan. 6, 1989, in a field with his throat cut. On the testimony of the survivors, Mrs. Mandela's chief bodyguard, Jerry Richardson, was convicted last May of Seipei's murder and sentenced to hang.

Mrs. Mandela, who pleaded not guilty to four counts of kidnapping and four counts of assault with intent to commit grievous bodily harm, has contended that the youths, who were black, were induced to come to her house to escape sexual assaults by the Rev. Paul Verryn, the white Methodist minister. She also said she was away from home when the incident occurred, an assertion that Kgase contradicted.

His testimony is scheduled to resume Thursday.

On Wednesday morning, Mandela escorted his wife to the trial and sat in the center of the spectators' gallery, but he left before Kgase testified against her.

Craddick files DWI legislation

■ Midland legislator's bill calls for impounding cars of repeat DWI offenders.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A bill pending in the Texas Legislature that would make impounding the car of a repeat DWI offender mandatory offers a leading weapon in the fight against drunk driving, according to the local chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving.

If the bill filed by Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, becomes law, it will require the vehicle of second-time DWI offenders to be impounded for 30 days. Offenders with two or more previous DWIs would have their car impounded for 60 days.

"The idea is to get habitual offenders of DWI off the streets. He won't have a car to drive," Tom Craddick said.

Craddick said he decided to introduce the bill after several people sent him information on similar laws in other states including New Mexico.

"I think people are fed up and are ready to crack down," he said.

Craddick said he expects a hearing on the bill, filed Feb. 25, within a few weeks. "I think there is a good chance it will pass," he added.

Faye Higgins, president of the local chapter of MADD, expressed enthusiasm about the bill.

"It's the first major step I've heard in a long time to deter DWI offenders," Ms. Higgins said.

If passed, the law would probably be the number one deterrent for driving while drunk, Ms. Higgins said.

Other DWI offender punishments such as fines may be effective but don't stop some motorists from driving drunk again, Ms. Higgins said. Not having a car will reduce the chances of repeat of-

Videodisc program to open 'Windows on Science'

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Several school administrators and teachers expect the videodisc program "Windows on Science" to open up new vistas of knowledge for all pupils, including those limited in English proficiency.

School board administrators recently approved a $40,000 proposal to purchase 88 laser disc players from Optical Data Corp. for 22 schools. The laser disc players will include "Windows" discs. The proposal included 45 set-ups — laser disc players and color monitors — with 50 of the 88 players being given to the school district free of charge.

The laser disc players have a unique feature, according to Jan Artley, science coordinator for Midland Independent School District. The audio capability can be played in Spanish, English or in both languages simultaneously.

The simultaneous audio capability will allow pupils with headphones to hear the program in the language of their proficiency.

"I like it," said John Martinez, "The Spanish is good. The audio is good and the material is grade level appropriate."

Martinez said that he and a committee of bilingual teachers previewed the program. "We were all pleased," he said.

Ms. Artley said the program also allows pupils to view science experiments which would require expensive equipment and dangerous materials to perform in the classroom.

Ms. Artley applauded the "unprecedented move of the Texas State Board of Education for approving videodisc-based curriculum for adoption as a textbook."

The videodisc program "Windows on Science" will compete with two traditional textbooks for more than $40 million in state textbook funds.

"Windows" includes videodiscs, lesson plans, student activities and a companion reading guide. The English edition is designed for pupils in grades first through sixth.

Ms. Artley expects to have the program in place by next September.

Seminar to be offered for plane passengers

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Non-pilot passengers in general aviation planes will have a chance to learn how to bring the aircraft safely down in an emergency should something happen to the pilot in a Flying Companion Seminar from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday at Cutter Beechcraft Aviation at Midland International Airport.

The seminar is to familiarize passengers of single-engine airplanes with what's going on in the cockpit and with the aerodynamics of the airplane in flight, said Betty Jones, a private pilot who helped organize the seminar.

"In case they do have to take the airplane over," said Ms. Jones, "they won't be totally lost" after they have taken the seminar.

"Hopefully, then they would be able to land the airplane without killing themselves or at least know how to get help on the radio," she said.

"A lot of people (passengers) fly and don't even know where they are," she said.

The seminar is being sponsored by the Purple Sage Chapter of The Ninety-Nines, an international organization of female pilots.

Ms. Jones, who has been flying for 13 years, will be teaching "survival on the ground if you have to land out in the middle of nowhere."

"Never fly without water," she suggested. "You can live a few days without food but you can't without water."

"Even if the ELT (emergency-locator transmitter) goes off, if you're 60 miles from an airport — and that's not hard to do in West Texas — you'll need to know how to survive until someone finds you

House committee approves cleanup bill

■ Under law, oil spill cleanup would be funded by tax on crude oil entering Texas ports.

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A House committee Wednesday passed a bill that would tax crude oil entering Texas ports to pay for oil spill cleanup, but only after attaching amendments that spelled trouble to its sponsor.

Rep. Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, said amendments to Senate Bill 14 placing a $15 million cap on liability of environmental damage for oil-carrying vessels and diverting money from the Coastal Protection Fund could bust the deal that was carefully crafted with the oil industry, waterway operators and environmentalists.

The bill would put the Texas land commissioner in charge of the prevention and cleanup of offshore spills. It also would place a 2-cent fee on each barrel of crude oil that passes through Texas ports to raise at least $25 million for the fund. Fines and reimbursements could increase the fund to $50 million.

The bill earmarks $4 million to buy spill-fighting equipment for five regional offices along the coast, $2 million a year for staff at the five centers and $1.25 million for research.

The bulk of the fund would pay spill cleanup costs, including compensation to third parties for damages.

Each regional center would have approximately five employees who wold make sure oil-carry-

Midlanders find space ball, newspaper says

■ Weekly World News reports that mysterious metal orb falls in Gerri Betz's yard.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Space-balls — 24-pound spheres of mystery metal — are falling from the sky. And they're landing in Midland.

If you believe that, you'll probably also believe that U.S. Navy pilots rained death and destruction on Iraqi troops from a captured UFO.

The Weekly World News, a black-and-white supermarket tabloid, reported both incidents this week. The paper also featured stories about a woman who's been chewing the same piece of gum for 31 years and a "space alien health manual found at UFO landing site."

According to the News, Midland has the dubious distinction of being the only U.S. city to be struck by one of 122 metal orbs that have rained down worldwide over the past six months.

A Midland woman, Gerri Betz, and her son, Terry, found the 24-pound metal ball in their garden, according to the News. They took it inside their home — for which no address was listed — where it started to "roll about on its own."

Although the frightened Betzes supposedly notified authorities of their find, local officials denied any knowledge of the space sphere.

House OKs measure that would protect car buyers

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas House of Representatives Wednesday tentatively approved new measures to protect car buyers as part of a bill to renew the agency that regulates car dealers.

On a non-record vote the House approved House Bill 524 by David Cain, D-Dallas, which would reauthorize the Texas Motor Vehicle Commission until Sept. 1, 2003. The House must vote on the bill again to pass it to the Senate.

The bill also amends the "lemon law" to make creation of a serious safety hazard, as defined in the bill, grounds for recovery of damages under the law.

While consumer advocates supported the bill, Rep. Al Price, D-Beaumont, said he does not expect it to help consumers.

DEATHS

Jose Valenzuela

A vigil prayer service for Jose Valenzuela of Midland will be held at 7 p.m. today at the Ellis Funeral Home Chapel. Funeral Mass will be Friday at 1 p.m. at Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church with the Rev. Edward Murphy officiating.

Valenzuela

Burial will follow at Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Wednesday in a local hospital.

He was born Dec. 14, 1914, in Pecos, where he grew up and attended school. He married Petra Flores in the early 1930s in Pecos. She preceded him in death in 1982.

In 1944, he joined the Navy and served in the South Pacific. After his discharge he returned to Pecos and went to work in the local theater. In 1966, he came to Midland and was employed with South Texas Construction. He retired in the late 1970s.

Valenzuela was a member of Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church.

Survivors include: one son, Oscar J. Valenzuela of Midland; three daughters, Nora Renteria of San Jose, Calif., Reynalda Ramos of Midland and Victoria Lujan of Midland; three sisters, San Juana Granado of Pecos, Tomasa Diaz of Barstow and Amelia Navarete of Odessa; 20 grandchildren, 20 great-grandchildren; and numerous nieces and nephews.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Assault charge

Staff Reports

A 40-year-old Midland man was arrested about 2 a.m. Wednesday for aggravated assault and unlawfully carrying a weapon outside a local bar, police officials said.

Marion Ronald Smith remained in jail Wednesday with bonds of $10,000 for the assault charge and $2,500 for the weapons charge, both set by Justice of the Peace Keith Jobe.

According to police, officers responded to Bojangles, 3709 W. Wall Ave., in response to gun shots fired.

Witnesses told police that Smith and another man, Brian T. Nikolai, 32, were arguing in the bar. A fight followed outside the bar and Smith reportedly pulled a gun and pointed it at Nikolai's head, witnesses told police. A bystander, who disarmed Smith, grabbed Smith's arm and the gun fired twice in the air.

Police confiscated a .25-caliber semi-automatic handgun.

Accident victims

Two Midland women injured in a Tuesday night car accident remained hospitalized Wednesday, officials reported.

Cara Rathburn Chicon, 32, was listed in critical condition at Odessa's Medical Center Hospital, where she was transferred Wednesday.

The other woman, 46-year-old Susie Hitchcock Hall, was in fair condition in the Critical Care Unit of Midland Memorial Hospital, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Police said the women were injured when Ms. Hall's car collided with Ms. Chicon's after Ms. Chicon pulled into Ms. Hall's path.

The accident occurred about 7 p.m. Tuesday at the intersection of McDonald Street and Andrews Highway.

Store robbery

ODESSA — Two men remained in jail Wednesday in connection with the robbery of the True Value Hardware store, 2022 E. 42nd St., about 1:55 p.m. Tuesday, police officials said.

Bonds for Gary J. McCoy, 27, of Odessa and John Iva, 31, of Midland, were set at $10,000 each by Municipal Judge Otis Moore.

According to police reports, Iva allegedly went inside the store, grabbed a bank bag, shoved two clerks and fled. McCoy reportedly was waiting outside by the door. Both headed toward a car parked nearby.

McCoy was apprehended in the car and Iva was stopped nearby running away from the scene, police said.

The bank bag was recovered.

House burglary

A 14-year-old boy was arrested in connection with the burglary of a home about 5:27 a.m. Wednesday, police officials said.

The boy was apprehended near Norwood Street and Westminister Drive following an apparent burglary in the 4100 block of Westminister Drive. He was transported to Culver Youth Home.

Specifics concerning whether any items were taken from the residence were not available.

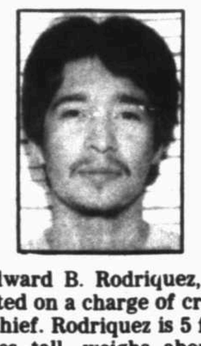

MIDLAND CRIME STOPPERS 694-TIPS

Crime Stoppers will pay a cash reward for information leading to the arrest of the following fugitives. In Midland, call 694-TIPS. In Odessa, call 333-TIPS. All callers can remain anonymous.

WANTED

Kimberly Menchaca, 32, is wanted on a charge of theft by repetition. Menchaca is 5 feet 2 inches tall, weighs about 106 pounds with brown hair and green eyes.

Edward B. Rodriquez, 30, is wanted on a charge of criminal mischief. Rodriquez is 5 feet 11 inches tall, weighs about 160 pounds with black hair and brown eyes.

Domingo Estrada, 26, is wanted on a charge of sexual assault. Estrada is 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighs about 145 pounds with brown hair and brown eyes.

Danny Beckett, 49, is wanted on charges of forgery by passing and theft of property. Beckett weighs about 220 pounds with brown hair and brown eyes.

LEMON: House OKs car-buyers law

(From 1B)

Price sponsored the "lemon law" bill in 1983, but he said car dealers managed to get that bill amended until it was unrecognizable.

Price said the car dealers did similar work on the reauthorization bill this year.

"The car dealers take care of each other," he said. "If they take care of the consumers, it's an accident."

But Tom Smith, director of Public Citizen of Texas, counted the House passage as a victory. "It's not a perfect bill, but it's a lot better than we had before," he said.

Smith noted that owners would have to make two attempts to correct safety problems, instead of the current four tries, before the owner could make a complaint to the commission.

If the commission does not act within 150 days, the owner could file a civil lawsuit under the bill, which also provides for recovery of up to $250 in out-of-pocket expenses for the consumer.

Smith said consumers now must wait an average of nine months or as long as a year for the commission to resolve their complaints. He also said he hopes to improve the bill in the Senate.

fenders, she said.

"About 95 percent of the victims that I work with in Midland County are killed or injured by people on probation from a prior DWI," Ms. Higgins said.

Mark Dettman, county attorney, said the proposed law sounds favorable but the effectiveness won't be known until if and when it is put into practice.

If the bill passes, only vehicles driven by the offender at the time of the offense and owned on the date of conviction will be impounded.

In addition to the physical impoundment, offenders will have to pay $15 a day for each day the vehicle is impounded.

If passed, the law would go into effect on Sept. 1.

Legislation changed DST

On July 8, 1986, a bill signed by President Reagan moved the start of Daylight Saving time up from the last Sunday in April to the first Sunday in April. The bill did not change the end from the last Sunday in October.

Businessman files for City Council seat

Staff Report

Jose Alfredo Zertuche said stirring up business activity in east Midland would be one of his primary ambitions should he be elected to the Midland City Council on May 4.

Zertuche

Zertuche, 30, filed Tuesday for the District 2 position, which represents the city's east side. It is his first run at an elected office.

No one else had filed for the seat, currently held by Tony Carrillo, who had not announced whether he will run. Carrillo replaced Jose Cuevas, who resigned after he moved his residence late last year.

If elected, Zertuche said improving business and living climates in east Midland will top his political goals.

"My plans are to advance and improve the economic prosperity and the economic welfare of the north and southeast sides as well as the Midland community as a whole," he said.

He said he also will push for enhanced communication between the community and City Hall.

Zertuche said he also would hold monthly community meetings geared to field suggestions and concerns from his constituents.

"I've been a member of the community here all my life and see this election as an opportunity to push for the betterment of the community," he said. "I like to think I've contributed in a positive way to the organizations for which I have worked in the past."

Born Oct. 30, 1960, in Eagle Pass, Zertuche moved with his family to Midland nine months later and has lived here ever since.

He earned a diploma from Midland High School and attended Texas Tech University.

Starting in 1980, he worked with his father in a landscaping business for eight years. Zertuche has operated an independent management company, which oversees The Limitz night club, for the past five years.

He is a member of the local chapter of the League of United Latin American Citizens and president of the Hispanic Advancement Association. He served as vice president of the Guadalupe Federal Credit Union.

Zertuche is single, has no children and attends Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church.

and how to help them find you."

Ms. Jones said that the aircrew should carry a survival kit, including first-aid supplies, flashlight, matches, large trash bags for shelter and water.

Teachers for the seminar include Pat Day, a flight instructor and aerobatic pilot who will talk on in-flight emergency procedures; Sabrehna Wyche, a commercial-rated pilot who will demonstrate a pre-flight airplane check and speak on what makes an airplane fly; Patricia Petosky, a pilot and chief air-traffic manager at Midland International Airport, who will talk on the medical aspects of flying and radio communication, and pilots Janet Koonce and Mary Alice Tidwell who will talk about the instrument panel.

The per-person fee of the seminar is $25, which includes lunch and seminar materials. For information or to pre-register, contact Betty Jones at 332-8959 in Odessa or Janet Koonce at 563-0239 in Midland.

OIL: Tax would fund cleanup

(From 1B)

ing vessels and terminals had spill contingency plans and proof of financial responsibility.

As it emerged from the Senate, the bill limited each vessel's liability for cleanup costs, but it placed no limit on the amount the state could recover for environmental damage, and Berlanga said he could not go along with that change.

"To allow people to continue to pollute and not be held accountable for it is totally irresponsible," Berlanga said.

"Everybody that negotiated in good faith tried to come up with legislation that we could live with," he said.

He blamed barge operators, which he said "have a terrible record of environmental pollution of coastal waters and obviously they're trying to get out from under having to be held accountable and full liability for their actions."

The diversion of money for inland and hazardous waste spills and well plugging is "clearly out of the scope of what the intent of the bill is," he said. "But obviously the committee did its will and I'll do my will as the bill proceeds."

Rep. Gerald Yost, R-Longview, sponsored the amendment which, on a 5-3 vote, capped liability for environmental damages at $15 million.

Rep. Harold Dutton, D-Houston, sponsored the amendment which, on an 8-1 vote, earmarked the first $5 million in interest income after the fund reaches $50 million to the Texas Water Commission's inland spill cleanup fund and the next $5 million to the Texas Railroad Commission's well-plugging fund.

The dissenter on the fund diversion, Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, had favored an unlimited contribution to the well-plugging fund.

Craddick also said he was concerned that the Legislature was creating a new bureaucracy.

"I believe we have more than adequate people in some state agencies in this state now, with the bureaucratic nightmare that we've got over there in (the General Land Office), the Water Commission and the Railroad Commission," Craddick said, but Land Commissioner Garry Mauro said the additional employees would be needed.

on it," said Midland Fire Marshal Jerry Petree.

Midland Police Chief Richard Czech and Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter also said they unaware that the object had landed.

"We haven't seen any metal balls falling out of space," Painter said.

His advice for people finding space balls in their yards: "Don't touch it."

"Call the authorities and let them bring in some kind of specialist," he added.

Gerri and Terry Betz, whose names are not listed in local telephone or city directories, could not be reached for comment. There was no answer Wednesday at the Florida offices of the Weekly World News.

HEALTH

It's not easy being Linus Pauling

By Keay Davidson
Hearst News Service

Some regard his vitamin C campaign as a sour end to a magnificent life — 'a fall as great as in any classical tragedy,' chemist R.J.P. Williams wrote in Nature in 1989.

Mention Linus Pauling and most people think of a big glass of orange juice.

But Pauling's promotion of vitamin C treatments for colds and cancer is just the latest battle in his long and incredible life.

The two-time Nobel laureate, who lives in Big Sur and whose offices are in Palo Alto, Calif., turned 90 in late February, but he's as feisty as he was in the 1920s when he transformed chemistry; the 1940s, when he shook up biology and medicine; and the 1950s and 1960s, when he molded Americans' attitude toward The Bomb.

One of the greatest scientists in American history, Pauling helped marry 19th-century chemistry to 20th-century quantum theory and showed how molecules are bound by chemical bonds. For that and other work, he won the 1954 Nobel Prize in chemistry.

But he angered many Americans in the 1950s by opposing tests of nuclear weapons. His visa was temporarily confiscated and he was investigated by the FBI. U.S. News & World Report asked in 1961: "Did Dr. Linus Pauling, Nobel Prize winner, work with the Communists to line up 11,000 fellow scientists to oppose nuclear testing?" Pauling unsuccessfully sued William F. Buckley's National Review magazine after it called him a "megaphone for Soviet policy."

A "weird insult from Norway" is what Life magazine — then a bastion of Cold War journalism — called Pauling's second Nobel, in peace, in 1962.

Pauling still hates militarism. He attacked President Bush's handling of the gulf war and, on Jan. 16, wrote in the New York Times: "As human beings, we have the duty to strive to decrease the amount of suffering ... We've acquired the capability to kill millions, to end the human race, which means we have to think of war differently. We have to avoid it."

Born Feb. 28, 1901, in Oregon, Pauling taught for decades at CalTech. He was one of the youngest Americans ever named to the prestigious National Academy of Sciences, the Mount Olympus of U.S. research.

But he might have been just another acid-stained chemist if he hadn't married one of his students, Ava Helen Miller. An outspoken leftist and feminist, she awakened his political conscience and urged him to speak out on issues such as nuclear testing. Together they had four children and more than two dozen grandchildren and great-grandchildren. She died in 1981.

Why did Pauling make more discoveries than the average scientist would make in a hundred lifetimes? One reason is pleasure: He enjoyed the work so much that he toiled endlessly in the lab, and grinned that incredible grin each time he discovered something.

He's still fascinated by the nature of matter at its tiniest levels. On plane flights, he fusses with paper, pen and calculator, trying to unlock mysteries of crystals and nuclear shells. He especially enjoyed determining the molecular structure of proteins, a crucial building block of life forms. For example, in the 1940s he showed that hair and other materials are, at the microscopic level, shaped like a winding staircase — an "alpha helix."

He might have won a third Nobel Prize if he hadn't lost his visa to Cold War hysteria. In the early 1950s, scientists were struggling to determine the chemical structure of DNA, the genetic code. Pauling proposed DNA is a triple helix like three intertwined spiral staircases. But his proposal contained a fatal chemical error that startled even his admirers.

Later, in England, James Watson and Francis Crick realized DNA is actually a double helix. Historians have suggested Pauling might have beaten them to the discovery if the U.S. State Department, upset by Pauling's criticism of its foreign policy, hadn't temporarily taken away his visa and prevented him from traveling to England and seeing X-ray crystallography images of DNA.

Pauling's last big battle began two decades ago, when he became a fanatical advocate of vitamin C as a treatment for colds. Later he claimed it was effective against cancer. He takes 18 grams of vitamin C a day — the equivalent of about 260 glasses of orange juice.

Recently, his colleagues at the Linus Pauling Institute of Science and Medicine in Palo Alto claimed their research indicates vitamin C might help fight the AIDS virus.

But the Mayo Clinic and most physicians regard Pauling's vitamin C claims as premature or unfounded. In fact, some regard his vitamin C campaign as a sour end to a magnificent life — "a fall as great as in any classical tragedy," chemist R.J.P. Williams wrote in Nature in 1989.

Those are mean words, and such criticism from the scientific community — which once revered Pauling — "hurts his feelings," said his son Crellin, who heads the biology department at San Francisco State University.

Otherwise, his dad stays busy: "He's constantly working. He subscribes to a good number of (scientific) journals ... He's got a tremendous storehouse of information and he's also got a tremendous intuition." For relaxation, Pauling reads science fiction and detective stories, and enjoys old movies — especially Doris Day flicks.

Americans praise quality of health care but not the cost

N.Y. Times News Service

Although many consumers are worried about the cost of medical care, two surveys have found that Americans are generally satisfied with the quality of health services.

Based on telephone interviews in six countries last fall, one of the poll-takers, Louis Harris & Associates, said on Monday that Canadians were even more likely than Americans to say they were "very satisfied" with medical services.

Canadian and American consumers differed as to which types of services were satisfactory.

A separate poll of Americans by the Gallup Organization on Monday reported similar results.

Canada has a national health care system that is financed by taxpayers, and doctors' incomes are lower, on average, than in the United States.

"Nobody in either country hates the care they are getting," said Robert J. Blendon, chairman of health policy at Harvard University's School of Public Health. "It is the payment system that makes Americans angry."

The Commerce Department estimates that national spending on health care will be $756.3 billion in 1991, $80 billion more than last year.

Thomas O. Pyle, chief executive of the Harvard Community Health Plan, a health maintenance organization based in Brookline, Mass., that sponsored the Harris survey, said, "The increase alone would be greater than the estimated cost of Desert Storm."

He said rising medical spending "is beginning to cut into our ability as a nation to educate people and deal with other pressing problems."

More than 70 percent of the 1,006 Americans surveyed by Harris said too much is spent on hospitals and doctors, while fewer than 25 percent of the 1,026 Canadians questioned said doctors and hospitals receive too much.

Polls of 1,000 people typically have a margin of sampling error of plus or minus three percentage points.

In a telephone survey of 1,000 middle-class Americans by the Gallup Organization last fall, 56 percent gave "fair" or "poor" grades to the American health-care system.

But 82 percent praised the care they had received in hospitals, and nearly everyone with a family doctor said they received excellent or good care.

The Gallup survey was sponsored by the Employee Benefit Research Institute, a non-profit organization in Washington.

Senator blasts drug price hikes as 'unbridled greed'

N.Y. Times News Service

'It is time the drug manufacturers understood that price increases and cost-shifting ... is totally unacceptable to Congress.'
— Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark.

WASHINGTON — Recent price hikes by pharmaceutical companies to the federal government were criticized Wednesday as an attempt to circumvent a new Medicaid rebate law.

Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., chairman of the Special Committee on Aging, said in a speech to the Senate that drug companies have used a new law requiring them to provide rebates to state Medicaid programs as an excuse to shift higher prescription costs to government agencies such as the Department of Veterans Affairs and the Department of Defense.

As part of the budget agreement passed last fall, Congress ordered pharmaceutical companies to provide rebates of between 12.5 percent and 25 percent — based on the amount of each drug used in a state every three months — and charge state Medicaid programs the lowest price charged to any other volume purchaser, such as government agencies.

The government estimated that it would save about $55 million this year and $460 million in fiscal 1992. States, which share the Medicaid program's cost, would save roughly the same amount.

Instead, Pryor said, drug companies have raised the bottom prices for volume purchases. Such increases are expected to cost the Department of Veterans Affairs $150 million this year, he said.

"It is greed, not any law, that is responsible for these actions," Pryor said.

Jeffrey Trewhitt, spokesman for the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association, said, "We don't think he is right regarding the Medicaid rebates. We think there will be the rebates as intended."

But Trewhitt said the issue of whether individual drug prices had been raised would have to be addressed by the various pharmaceutical companies.

Among the price hikes aimed at veterans and the armed forces, Pryor said, were those by DuPont Merck — a DuPont subsidiary until the end of 1990 — for pain killing medications Percodan and Percocet. A bottle of Percodan which had cost $5.11 now costs $47.60, an 832 percent increase. A bottle of Percocet which had cost $1.07 now costs $43.70, an increase of more than 4,000 percent, Pryor said.

DuPont Merck spokesman Roger Morris said no price hikes were passed to the Department of Defense. Instead, he said, the price of those and other drugs to troops engaged in the Persian Gulf war were reduced in January.

Morris said the bulk price for prescription drugs to the Department of Veterans Affairs had been raised to reflect the same price the company charged to retail outlets.

Pryor said other companies had raised their prices to the VA or the Pentagon for tranquilizers, pain relievers, anti-ulcer medication and diabetes drugs. He said the higher prices would be used to pay for expensive advertising and public relations material produced by

"It is time the drug manufacturers understood that price increases and cost-shifting to soldiers and veterans or any other vulnerable population of Americans is totally unacceptable to Congress and the constituents we serve," Pryor said. "If the drug manufacturers believe we in Congress will allow them to get away with this unbridled greed, they are wrong."

Blood-pressure drug keeps heart vessels open longer, studies show

ATLANTA (NYT) — After surgery to open heart vessels, patients may be able to keep them open longer by taking a type of drug usually given for high blood pressure or congestive heart failure, according to a report presented at the American College of Cardiology meeting here.

University of Pennsylvania researchers found that people taking angiotensin converting enzyme inhibitors only had a three percent incidence of the renewed narrowing of the vessels that usually takes place after angioplasty, an operation that uses a miniature balloon or rotor to clear out clogged arteries.

These findings contrasted with a 30 percent incidence of recurrent closure for patients on other drugs, the researchers reported.

Angiotensin converting enzyme, or ACE, inhibitors block the action of a naturally occurring enzyme in the body that raises blood pressure.

The researchers studied 322 patients from June 1988 to December 1989 at Graduate Hospital in Philadelphia. A total of 36 patients in the series were on the inhibitors at the time of discharge. The remainder were on other drugs.

Lawmaker files bill allowing island casino

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Whether it takes a constitutional amendment or a simple law, state Rep. Frank Collazo said he hopes the Legislature will allow casino gambling on an island off Port Arthur.

The Port Arthur Democrat this week filed House Joint Resolution 63, which proposes a constitutional amendment to allow casino gambling on Pleasure Island, a landfill in Sabine Lake.

The resolution specifies the island must be located within city limits, on a body of water connected with the Gulf of Mexico and have no church or school on the island.

Collazo also filed House Bill 1524 to enable Port Arthur to approve casino gambling as a local option.

The bill would allow slot machines, roulette, card games, dice and other games of skill or chance on the island if the city's residents approve in a local-option election.

The bill also would create the Pleasure Island Commission, a state panel of six members appointed by the governor, with at least one member from Port Arthur and another member from Jefferson County. The commission would regulate the casinos.

The bill would set a gaming tax of 3-to-6 percent on gross revenue, with 60 percent of that tax revenue returning to local governments.

The constitutional amendment would require a two-thirds majority and a statewide ratification vote while the bill would require a simple majority in the House and Senate and the governor's signature.

Collazo said he filed the bill in addition to the joint resolution because an opinion by former Attorney General Jim Mattox this past December left open the possibility that some casino games might not fall within the state constitution's prohibition against games of chance.

State courts have ruled the Constitution allows games where skill is the dominating element, but Mattox declined to say whether that includes card games, sports pools or other games that involve skill.

But an anti-gambling lobbyist said there is no question the Constitution bans casino gambling of the types described in Collazo's bill.

The lobbyist, Sue Cox of Texans Who Care, predicted neither measure would get very far in the gambling-weary House.

Ms. Cox of Dallas said gambling supporters spent their efforts in the failed attempt to authorize a lottery. The 90-56 House vote on Feb. 26 fell nine votes short of the two-thirds needed for a constitutional amendment.

"They cast their big gambling vote in this session," Ms. Cox said. "We don't find there is any interest in the Legislature in voting on casinos."

Collazo said he thought the local option would make the casino bill more palatable to legislators who otherwise would oppose a gambling bill.

Tech organizing trip to study New Zealand teaching method

Staff Report

Texas Tech University educators are organizing a trip to New Zealand to observe reading and writing techniques used in the New Zealand education system. Shirley Koeller, an associate professor of education at Texas Tech and director of the Caprock Writing Project, will conduct the tour.

The tour will depart Lubbock July 11 and return Aug. 3. The expected cost will be approximately $3,400 per person and includes roundtrip airfare, admissions and guide fees, land and air transportation to scheduled events and arrival and farewell dinners. A deposit of $600 is required when reservations are made. Deadline to register is March 15.

Legal expert testifies on school finance

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A Senate-House conference committee heard testimony from a legal expert Wednesday in an attempt to devise a public school financing bill that the state Supreme Court will accept as constitutional.

Dean Mark Yudof, of the University of Texas School of Law, said he did not know how much help he could be, and called the court's rulings on what the state could do "an enigma within an enigma."

Yudof testified before the 10-member committee on bills sponsored by Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, and Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice.

The court ruled in 1989 that the financing system is unconstitutional because the state relies so heavily on property taxes, and school districts have such a wide variance in the value of property to be taxed. It ruled again in 1990 in a 9-0 vote that a plan the Legislature approved to solve the problem fell short of equalizing property taxes for all students.

In what amounted to an advisory opinion, written in February as part of a decision to deny further review of the case, the court added to the confusion. Previous decisions indicated the court would not allow school districts to enact additional property taxes and keep the money for "local enrichment." But the latest opinion, in a 5-4 vote, said districts could raise extra money once the state had adopted an "efficent" system of financing that used property taxes equally for students.

The court gave lawmakers until April 1.

Any bill will have to take some money from property tax-rich districts and give it to poor districts, but wealthy districts want as much leeway as possible to raise extra revenue.

Occupancy up for Houston-area inns

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston area hotels are reporting brisk business following a slump some attributed to the Persian Gulf War.

Hotel occupancy increased to 64.9 percent in February from 57.6 percent in January, according to a survey by John M. Keeling Hospitality Services. The February rate also was up from 64.4 percent during the same period a year ago, the study said.

Hotel managers said a fear of war-related terrorism cut down on travel for companies.

"There was no question the war had something to do with it," Steve Musatto, general manager of the Adam's Mark Hotel, said Tuesday.

"I couldn't sleep for a month," said Gregory Clark, general manager of the Westchase Hilton & Towers.

Keeling said the end of the war has helped end the slump.

Suit dropped against firm in Big Spring

Staff Report

The president of a Big Spring corporation said this week he hopes business will return to normal in the wake of an unsuccessful patent-infringement lawsuit against his company.

"Rumor has circulated throughout the oilfield that we might not be in business after this suit was settled," said Russell P. Rutledge, president of Fiberglass Technologies.

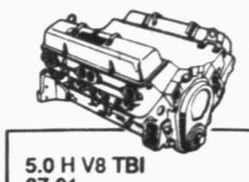

The company manufactures fiberglass sucker rods for oil wells. A Houston company, Fiberflex Inc., sued Fiberglass Technologies for stealing its sucker-rod design.

On Feb. 28, however, a U.S. District Court jury in Midland ruled that no patent infringement occurred. Court records indicate that no damages were awarded to Fiberflex.

Guy Matthews, an attorney for Fiberglass Technologies, said the sucker rod design in question was originally owned by Rutledge and his brother, Woodrow, but was sold to Fiberflex in March 1985.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, MARCH 7, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Few people relish a challenge the way you do! Your enthusiasm for hard work is bolstered by a clear vision of what you hope to accomplish. Seize a golden opportunity to promote your personal interests in July. Although romance may be stormy at times, you and your mate gradually develop a deeper, more fulfilling relationship. Business prospects are brightest next November. Be careful not to slack off over the winter holidays.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: tennis pro Ivan Lendl, actor Daniel J. Travanti, photographer Lord Snowdon, auto racer Janet Guthrie.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Look forward to an upbeat day! By evening, you will know the satisfaction of having won an important battle of wits. Domestic affairs require patience. Be willing to compromise.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A member of the opposite sex is the major factor in a personal decision you make today. A career choice is involved. You resolve to forge an important alliance. Repay old debts and favors.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Seek the advice of your old friends. They may be able to shed new light on how you should proceed. Good luck is your secret ally. Beneficial changes are in the wind.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Unexpected developments can slow progress. Stick to the tried-and-true. Someone you have long admired will contact you. Count on close friends to go to bat for you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A decision could be taken out of your hands. An influential associate will be sympathetic. Concentrate on taking care of a family obligation. Preventive safety measures are worth the cost.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Exercise special caution when handling money. Temporary problems with your mate can be easily resolved if you are tactful. Wait a while before trying to contact a prominent friend.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You may have to pinch pennies now, especially where household purchases are concerned. Your creative juices will flow freely this afternoon. You make a dynamic impression on someone special!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): New trends denote a welcome financial development. Travel could give you the opportunity to accomplish several aims at one time. Be a goodwill ambassador to your colleagues.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): High spirits make this a day to remember. The telephone plays an important role in business affairs. Stay in touch with your associates. Spend more quality time with offspring.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Shifting priorities cause changes in your basic plan. This is a highly sensitive time for romance; be conservative. Seize an opportunity to sow seeds for future financial security.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Progressive projects are favored at work. Make long-range plans and put any extra money into a savings account. A yen for exciting romance could lead you in a new direction. Be careful.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do not let fear of failure prevent you from trying new things. Take any setbacks in stride. Your day is coming! A friend tries to wangle an invitation to a special event.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are original thinkers with great depth. However, they prefer others to think of them as easygoing and fun-loving. These Pisces' intellectual curiosity makes them wonderful academics and researchers. They are apt to do especially well in science. Marriage may come late in life. Their high ideals sometimes make it difficult for them to find the "perfect mate." They would rather stay single than settle for second best!

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Two of ♠

Over the years, we have tried to instill in our readers the belief that the finesse is really quite a complicated subject. If you would like to find out just how difficult the field of finessing can be, you would do well to buy Test Your Finessing, by Hugh Kelsey (Victor Gollancz, 80 pp., paperback. Available from The Bridge World, 39 W. 94th St., New York, N.Y. 10025, $7.50 postpaid). To test your skill on one of the problems from the book, cover the East-West hands with your thumbs and decide how you would play three no trump after the lead of the spade deuce.

The bidding is in the English style, with weak no trump opening bids and limit raises. On this side of the Atlantic the same contract would have been reached via a one no trump opening from South and a raise to game by North.

"Five club tricks will see you home, and you know that it is possible to bring in the club suit without loss even if the suit breaks 4-0 because you have a finessing position against either opponent. Which way do you play it?

"The clue to the correct play is found in the opening lead. West appears to have led from a four-card suit, in which case it is a fair assumption that he does not have a five-card or longer suit. Players tend to lead from their longest suits against no trumps. It follows that West must have at least one club. Only East can be void in clubs, and you should, therefore, cater for this possibility by playing the queen of clubs at trick two.

"When East shows out on the first round of clubs it is a simple matter to pick up five tricks in the suit by finessing twice against West."

Even if you reached the same conclusion as the author, you will find the hands challenging, and the book will give you a whole new slant on the art of finessing.

Available is a two-for-one package of DOUBLES booklets. For your copies send $3 to "GOREN DOUBLES," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 4426, Orlando, Fla. 32802-4426. Make checks payable to "Newspaperbooks."

Darrell Royal gets Willie's Pedernales spread 'cheap'

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — One of Willie Nelson's properties has been sold to another Texas legend: former University of Texas football coach Darrell Royal.

Nelson

Royal paid $117,375 Tuesday for Nelson's 76-acre Pedernales spread, which has a nine-hole golf course, recording studio and country club, at a public auction by American Federal Bank of Dallas, which held the first lien on the property.

"It was a cheap price," said Royal. "I know a lot of people enjoyed playing that golf course, and I wanted to see it stay open."

Royal, a close friend of Nelson's, said he had played many rounds of golf on the course. But he said he was not yet sure what he would do with the club.

The Internal Revenue Service, which seized Nelson's property in several states to help pay $16.7 million in back taxes and penalties, had tried unsuccessfully to auction the property in January. They set the minimum bid at that auction at $575,478.

Royal coached the Longhorns from 1957-1976, leading them to three national championships.

The IRS has 120 days to redeem the property from Royal for the price he paid plus a percentage, said IRS spokeswoman Valerie Thornton. She said she did not yet know if the IRS planned to do so.

Nelson's house and 44-acre ranch in Dripping Springs were sold to an Arkansas lawyer in late January for $203,840. The lawyer, who represents foreclosed farmers, said he planned to return the property to Nelson in recognition of his work raising money for Farm Aid, which helps farmers facing foreclosure.

Nelson, known for such hits as "On the Road Again" and "Always on My Mind," blames his financial woes on his accountants.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rapper L.L. Cool J says taking on acting was easy.

"I have to be honest with you. I don't see what's so challenging about acting," the 23-year-old singer said this week. "It just doesn't seem like something that's so ridiculously overwhelming or difficult.

"I hope that other actors aren't offended by what I've said," he added.

Cool J's movie debut is a minor role in "The Hard Way," starring Michael J. Fox and James Woods. The film is about a Hollywood actor who teams up with a real-life cop to prepare for a movie role.

Cool J's role originally had but one line. But producer Rob Cohen said it kept expanding as filming progressed.

"He was so good at it, so natural at acting, that we kept giving him more lines," Cohen said. "Now my company is looking for a bigger project for him."

"The Hard Way" opens Friday.

WINTER PARK, Fla. (AP) — Mr. Rogers is headed for his old neighborhood.

Rogers

Fred Rogers, host and creator of television's "Mr. Rogers' Neighborhood," will attend homecoming activities Friday at Rollins College, his alma mater.

The soft-spoken, sweater-wearing pioneer of children's television received a degree in music composition from Rollins in 1951. He will be honored with a stone placed in the private school's Walk of Fame, a campus pathway lined with stones engraved with the names of prominent people.

Rogers and his wife, Joanne, who graduated from Rollins in 1950, will meet faculty and students and visit the Rollins Child Development Center in addition to joining in class-reunion activities.

NEW YORK (AP) — The man who brought Madonna to Broadway is leaving his post as director of Lincoln Center Theater to return to more creative pursuits.

"I just want to spend more time in a rehearsal room than behind a desk," Gregory Mosher told The New York Times in a story that appeared Wednesday.

Mosher, 42, will be a resident director at the center during 1992, and will also stage productions elsewhere, said John V. Lindsay, the theater's board chairman.

In his eight years with Lincoln Center, Mosher helped turn the not-for-profit performance complex into one of the city's most thriving theatrical enterprises.

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Timmy T may be taking Tinsel Town by storm, but he still likes to get back to his roots and visit his old school.

With his pop single "One More Try," at No. 2 on the charts, Timothy Torres has come a long way from starring in talent shows and school plays at Fresno's Fort Miller junior high school.

But he hasn't forgotten that's where it all started almost a decade ago.

"I wouldn't be here if I didn't love this town," he told Fort Miller students Tuesday. "Even if I was the next Michael Jackson, I'd be here."

"You can't forget where you came from."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Albanians flee by sea to Italy

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Police fired warning shots Wednesday over the heads of thousands of Albanians who besieged Tirana's Embassy Row, and 8,000 would-be emigres were reported to have fled Albania.

Continuing unrest in this turbulent Balkan land of 3.2 million residents cast doubt on the ability of either the ruling Communists or opposition parties contesting elections this month to control popular discontent.

The exodus appears to reflect mistrust of Albanian President Ramiz Alia's promise to improve political and economic conditions in Europe's poorest nation.

Thousands have tramped overland to Greece and Yugoslavia since the Communist leader reversed 46 years of one-party rule in December and allowed opposition parties to form following student demonstrations for democracy.

Arab uprising resumes

JERUSALEM (NYT) — After six weeks of enforced calm, Palestinians on Wednesday renewed their protests against Israeli occupation.

A general strike was called in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, riots broke out in several places and within hours one Palestinian was shot dead by Israeli troops.

The army said the youth was shot after soldiers were attacked with rocks by Arabs who ignored orders to disperse.

The stone-throwing, street demonstrations and clashes with soldiers that characterized the 39-month-old Arab uprising halted when the Persian Gulf war began. This was partly because of a harsh military curfew on the 1.75 million Arabs in the occupied areas, and partly because the Israeli army warned that any Palestinian upheaval would be dealt with as if it were an act of war.

Prime minister quits

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Prime Minister Chandra Shekhar resigned in anger Wednesday, accusing former premier Rajiv Gandhi of betrayal and making new elections a virtual certainty.

A veteran politician but a novice in the top circles of government, Chandra Shekhar, 63, lasted three months as head of a minority government in the world's largest democracy.

Gandhi, 46, is the heir to the prime ministerial dynasty of Jawaharlal Nehru and Indira Gandhi. He was the man who made Chandra Shekhar prime minister.

Republics OK draft

MOSCOW (AP) — Eight of the 15 Soviet republics tentatively approved Mikhail S. Gorbachev's proposed treaty to preserve the union, officials said Wednesday, but there was still uncertainty about how to put the document into effect.

The Russian Federation, by far the wealthiest and most populous republic, was among those signaling tentative agreement. Basic disputes remain between Soviet President Gorbachev and Russian President Boris N. Yeltsin, however, on taxation, ownership of natural resources and other issues.

Eduard V. Kovalev, a spokesman for the national parliament, said the draft was completed last Friday and was returned to Gorbachev to resolve disputed points, which make up about 20 percent of the document.

Urology

Q. During my previous marriage, I had a vasectomy done. Since then, I have divorced and remarried. We would like to begin our own family. Can vasectomies be reversed, and if so, how successful are they?

A. Yes. Vasectomy reversals (called vasovasostomy) are commonly performed using an operation microscope. The procedure takes 2-4 hours and requires anesthesia. It is, obviously, a much more difficult and complicated procedure than a vasectomy.
Depending on whether sperm are found at the time of the surgery, the success rate varies from around 60-90%. The best results occur in men who had their vasectomy less than 10 years prior to the reversal.

Weight Management

Q. Why is obesity so common?

A. Obesity results when energy intake exceeds energy output over a period of time. The excess energy is stored in the form of fat. Americans ingest a diet 36% higher in fat than did our ancestors in 1900 when obesity was relatively uncommon. Fat contains 9 calories/gram whereas protein and carbohydrate contain only around four. Thus our "modern" diet is calorically dense - in a given volume of food we get more calories - but do we stop eating at a lesser volume to compensate? Not often! As a society, we achieve 75% less physical activity than did our ancestors in 1900 due to our modern conveniences and relatively inactive lifestyle. So how can it be that we expect to be able to have a higher energy intake and lower energy output and not have problems with excess energy storage? People as well as falling apples obey the laws of physics.

Ophthalmology

Q. How does weather this time of year affect your eyes?

A. In the Permian Basin we have allergens (pollens, dust, molds notably) blown in with the spring gusts, even from Lubbock, resulting in the "Spring hay fever" that many allergic diathesis individuals experience. Similarly, this can occur again in the fall when a different group of allergens arrive in the area. Treatment can involve antihistimine eye drops and possibly oral or injection routes of medication. Occasionally the person working out in the elements of wind and dust begin to develop what ophthalmologists call Pingueculae or Pterygiums. The pingueculae are like small water blisters or yellowish spots on the conjuctiva, which is the white part of the eye. A pterygium is a fleshy growth with an advancing head that can invade the limbus, which is the junction of the cornea and the white part of the eye, and the cornea itself. Frequently, this growth becomes quite a problem as it can interfere with the nasal or temporal fields of vision and if not surgically removed can invade and scar the central cornea. If medical attention is not seeked at an early stage and the corneal scarring occurs then the scarred cornea would need to be replaced by a donor cornea. This procedure is known as a penetrating keratoplasty, or corneal transplant. Many people are merely inconvenienced with no lasting eye problems by the elements, except for tearing. Rubbing the eyes of course will irritate the lids and cause local lid infections which will require nighttime medications for the lids.
Thus, the weather can affect our eyes, expecially the wind and dust during this time of the year. The "Ides of March" can be welcome but can cause problems with our eyes.

Cosmetic & Reconstructive Surgery

Q. What is the difference in a skin graft and a skin flap?

A. A skin graft is shaved off another area to cover a wound that has lost its skin, either from a burn, trauma, or cancers, particularly a melanoma. Effectually one is taking the outer layer of skin, generally from the buttock or hips or legs, transferring that skin and letting it "grow in" to an open wound. The donor site heals without any treatment but does leave a blemish or some type of scar. A graft is not as thick as normal skin and often there is an indentation.
A skin flap is a transfer or rotation of full thickness skin with its fat and blood vessels to cover an open wound and is healthier, thicker and more normal in color. Whereas a skin graft is an "Orphan" and must be nourished by the wound over which it is laid, a skin flap brings its own blood supply and nutrient system at its pedicle or "handle" (where it is left attached at the point of rotation). Skin flaps are often used on the face and scalp for coverage of wounds for skin cancer removal, trauma, or burns or otherwise. Larger flaps which contain muscle, are often used in the lower extremity to cover exposed bone and plates; these are called musculocutaneous flaps in that they do contain muscle, full thickness skin, and blood vessels.

Cosmetic & Reconstructive Surgery

Q. Discuss skin cancers -- their danger and treatment.

A. Unfortunately skin cancers are exponentially on the increase and by the year 2010 it is predicted they will surpass all other cancers of the human body. This is due to the general lifestyle of the 50s, 60s and 70s and even today, and we are all at risk. Skin cancers are inordinately rare below the age of 21 but they are quiet common in the 60s, 70s and even 80 year old group. The cause of skin cancers is very simple, exposure to ultraviolet light which includes sunlight, reflected sunlight, and includes ultraviolet light from tanning bulbs. Many speculate that due to the decreasing layer of ozone that ultraviolet light has become more severe in the past years and will in the future. The results of exposure are accummulative and one never loses the effects. Skin cancers are most common in the light complexioned race are rare in blacks. Three types are: (1) Basal cell carcinomas. These are most often treated by simple excision surgically but can be treated by radiotherapy. (2) Squamous cell carcinomas which are more aggressive and occur around the lips and ears which if allowed to enlarge past a centimeter can slowly spread to the blood stream. These are most effectively treated by surgical excision or radiotherapy. (3) Melanomas are the most lethal form of skin cancers and generally arise from a dark birthmark or flat black mole such as a black freckle. They are most commonly seen on the torso but can occur anywhere. Melanomas are uniformly lethal if left untreated.

Cardiology

Q. What are the warning signals of a heart attack?

A. 1. Uncomfortable pressure, fullness, sqeezing or pain in the center of the chest lasting more than two minutes.
2. Pain may spread to the shoulders, neck, or arms.
3. Severe pain, lightheadedness, fainting, sweating, nausea or shortness of breath may occur.
These signals aren't always present. Or sometimes they may subside and then return. Prompt action can reduce the risk of a fatal heart attack. The early warnings of a heart attack are a special "body language". They tell you that the blood supply to the heart is seriously reduced. A coronary artery, which supplies the heart with blood, has become narrowed or closed and part of the heart muscle has begun to die because it is getting no blood and oxygen.

Oral Surgery

Q. If I loose several teeth, is there an alternative to wearing full or partial dentures?

A. Yes, if you have lost one, several, or all of your natural teeth, there is an alternative to wearing full or partial dentures. The solution is called dental implants. A dental implant is a metallic cylinder which is made of surgical titanium coated with a synthetic "bone-like" substance called hydroxylapatite. The hydroxylapatite allows the surrounding jaw bone to actually grow into the implant, a process called osseointegration. The implant is surgically implanted into the jaw to replace the root of the missing tooth. This process is performed in the dental office under either local or general anesthesia. The implant must remain "buried" under the gum for approximately three months. After the implant is exposed, your general dentist would then proceed with he fabrication of crowns, fixed bridge work, or fixed implant dentures.

Otis Evans (10), here in Region I final Saturday at the Chaparral Center, leads Fort Worth Dunbar into the Class 5A semifinals at Austin's Frank Erwin Center.

■ None of 1990's champions return to this year's state basketball tournament, but many of the teams involved in the battle for titles in five classifications have been to the semifinals before.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — There are no defending champions in the boys' state schoolboy basketball tournament, but there are several teams steeped in the title tradition.

The University Interscholastic League tournament gets under way today with semifinal action in Class A, 3A and 4A at the Erwin Center.

Friday is reserved for Class 2A and 5A semifinals. Finals in all five divisions are scheduled Saturday.

Thursday's Class A matchups are Bronte (28-4) vs. Paducah (28-8) at 8:30 a.m. and Moulton (35-1) vs. Tenaha (26-7) at 10 a.m.

Paducah won the title in 1987 and 1988, while Moulton, the smallest school in the tourney with an enrollment of 76, has come in second the past two years. Moulton has been ranked No. 1 for most of the season by the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches.

Class 3A action follows at 2 p.m. with Clarksville (34-1) against Bowie (26-9) and Sour Lake Hardin-Jefferson (35-1) playing tournament newcomer Stafford (22-13) at 3:30 p.m.

Bowie won four straight championships from 1951 through 1954 and added another in 1974. Clarksville last came to the tournament in 1989 and lost in the finals to San Antonio Cole. Hardin-Jefferson won a crown in 1967.

In 4A matchups, Port Arthur Lincoln (32-3) plays Dallas South Oak Cliff (27-7) at 7 p.m., and Pampa (34-3) faces San Antonio Alamo Heights (30-5) at 8:30 p.m.

Lincoln dominated schoolboy basketball in the 1980s with five championships, but was stunned in last year's semifinal by Boerne for their first tournament loss ever. Pampa won four titles in the 1950s and Alamo Heights won two.

On Friday, 2A action features Krum (33-2) vs. Troup (32-2) at 9:30 a.m., and Abernathy (35-1) plays Liberty Hill (30-4) at 11 a.m.

Krum, a two-time champ in the 1970s, lost to Troup in last year's semifinal matchup. Abernathy won a title in 1980.

Liberty Hill, which averages 103 points per game, is led by the tournament's top scorer, 6-foot-6 forward Richard Hastings, who averages 34 points per game.

"When Richard is on, it's really hard to stop him," Liberty Hill Coach Danny Henderson said of the Texas Tech recruit.

In 5A, fifth-ranked Duncanville (35-2) plays Galena Park North Shore (35-3) at 3 p.m., and second-ranked Fort Worth Dunbar (35-2) plays San Antonio Jay (33-3) at 7 p.m.

Duncanville, making its first trip to the tournament, is led by 7-foot-1 Greg Ostertag.

Dunbar has failed to win a championship in nine tournament appearances.

Pearson coaches

DALLAS (AP) — Former Dallas Cowboys wide receiver Drew Pearson was named Wednesday as the head coach of the Dallas Texans of the Arena Football League.

He succeeds Ernie Stautner, who resigned to become an NFL assistant coach with the Denver Broncos.

In 1985, Pearson, 40, was the wide receivers coach for the Cowboys, for whom he played 11 seasons, from 1973 to 1983, until he was seriously injured in an automobile accident.

"I am so excited about this opportunity. It really has my competitive juices flowing," Pearson said.

Pearson went to the Cowboys as an undrafted rookie out of Tulsa and went on to become the team's all-time leading receiver. He was named to the all-decade team of the 1970s.

Velarde renews contract

Associated Press

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — New York Yankees infielder Randy Velarde, a product of Midland Lee, elected to be renewed at a lower figure Wednesday rather than agree to the contract the team was offering.

Velarde was offered $155,000 in base salary plus $20,000 in incentives. Both the team and Velarde agreed that some of the incentives were reachable. Velarde demanded $175,000 in base pay.

The Yankees took away the incentives and renewed him at $145,000, which still represented an $8,500 raise following a season in which he batted .210 in 95 games.

Velarde, a utility player last season who is competing for the third base job, characterized the Yankees' proposal as "ridiculous" and "a slap in the face."

Velarde, who has two-plus years in the big leagues and is not eligible for arbitration, based his salary request on a comparison with 10 other players with similar length of service and statistics.

'Money is really not the issue. Fairness is the key issue here. In this game, you compare yourself to what other players make.'

— Randy Velarde

"Money is really not the issue. Fairness is the key issue here," Velarde said. "In this game, you compare yourself to what other players make. The bottom dollar is at $175,000 and they're at $155,000. Is that fair? No, it's not."

General manager Gene Michael met with Velarde for five minutes after Wednesday's workout and followed through on his promise to renew Velarde if they could not come to terms.

"He didn't think the numbers were right and I do," Michael said.

The general manager said he did not understand why Velarde took the stance he did. "I don't know if it's advice from his agent or what," Michael said.

Williams' legacy long

■ After 39 years of coaching in Midland, Johnny Williams touched — and was touched by — his pupils.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Johnny Williams never coached baseball for the Midland Independent School District in his 39 years of service, but it feels like he should have. He's touched all the bases, so to speak.

Over that span of time, Williams coached at Carver, Midland Lee and Midland High. He gave up his spikes as head track coach at Midland High in January for the soft shoe of retirement.

And he will always carry with him the memories he left behind at those three schools.

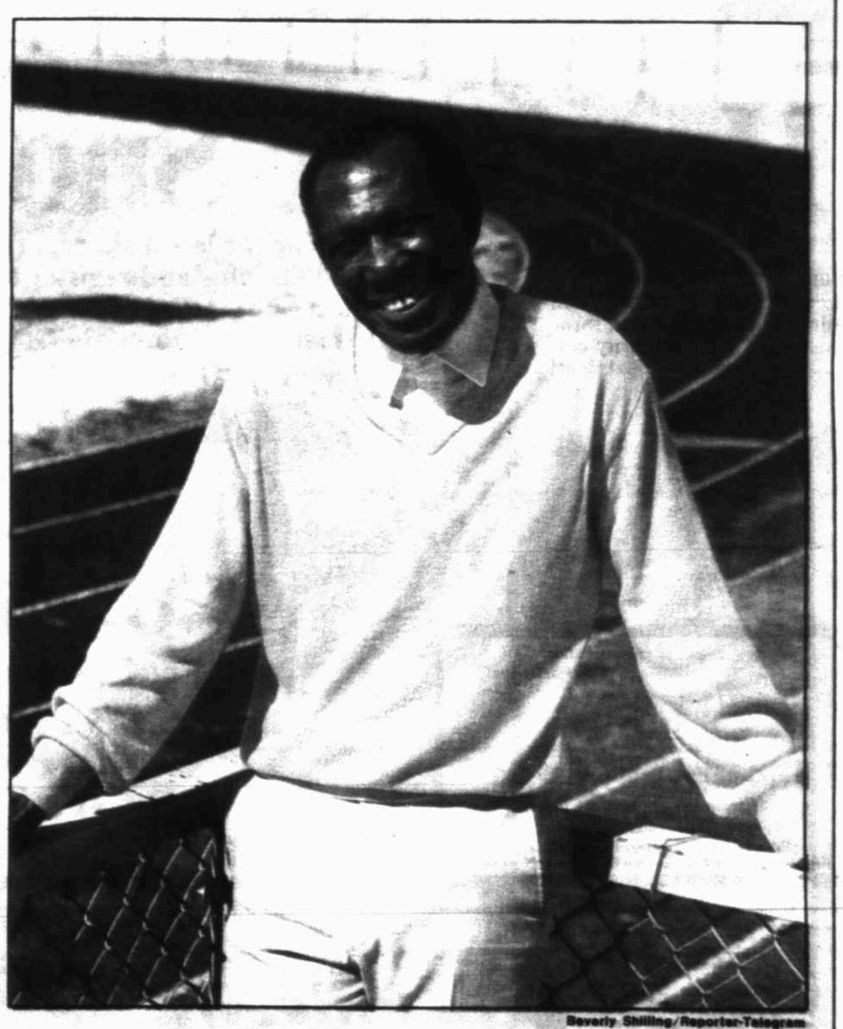

One of the special memories comes from 1961 when Williams led the Carver Hornets to a state championship in football at Memorial Stadium.

"That was a special time for a special school," Williams says. "Carver was ahead of its time, a unique situation, second to none. The athletic facilities were excellent and we were able to focus in the right direction.

"C.A. Thomas (Carver principal) had a new high school and wanted to set up a good program. He had a good vision and could find ways to get things done. He gave me a lot of guidance and I'll never forget that.

"We had a lot of help from the community. (James) Doc Dodson helped us with our kids, Dr. Reed Collins was our team physician and sat on the bench with us at our games and St. Ann's Father Kennedy sat on our bench. Dr. (Thurston) Dean was always available. There were so many who helped."

Williams posted a 124-31-2 record at Carver in his 16 years, but the state championship season was special.

Beverly Shilling/Reporter-Telegram

Johnny Williams has moved from life in the fast lane of coaching track and football to the pace of retirement.

"It was our second year to the state finals, but we lost to Conroe in Conroe the year before," Williams said. "The game was in the first part of December and it was cold. We bulldozed snow off the field into five-foot drifts. We had smudge pots, hand warmers and jackets. We were prepared. We lacked for nothing.

"The whole community was behind us. We had two full pages in the Reporter-Telegram. A lot of the civic organizations, including the Chamber, helped us out.

"Bobby Johnson, at 200 pounds, was one of our big players and he went on to Arizona. Henry Wood was our quarterback, and he played at Nebraska as a sophomore. Charles Collins was our leading rusher with

Henderson hides out; Ranger pitchers report

Associated Press

Rickey was missing and so were Jack Armstrong and Joe Oliver. But Kevin Brown and Kenny Rogers decided to end their walkouts after just one day.

Wednesday was the official reporting date under baseball's collective bargaining agreement and American League MVP Rickey Henderson was nowhere to be found.

Not even his agent, Richie Bry, had a clue to Henderson's whereabouts.

"I really don't know," Bry said from St. Louis. "I have no more idea than you do."

Oakland general manager Sandy Alderson wasn't surprised. He said the club hadn't determined whether or not it would fine Henderson.

"If Rickey is trying to make a statement I wouldn't have expected him on the first day that he can be fined," Alderson said. "The fact that he's not in camp only means that he can be fined."

Henderson, the Most Valuable Player in the American League last year, apparently is upset that the A's haven't been willing to renegotiate the four-year, $12 million contract he signed before the beginning of last season.

"It has been intimated to me that's the reason," Alderson said. "I haven't gotten a telegraph."

Henderson's agent didn't seem that concerned with the absence.

"I'm sure it will all take care of itself in the next few days," Bry said.

At Plant City, Fla., Armstrong and Oliver continued their walkout for a second day and Cincinnati officials said they were angry.

"The fines will start tomorrow if they're not here," Reds general manager Bob Quinn said. "I'm not going to disclose the amount, but it is a fixed amount of fine. Yes, they know it."

Baseball Roundup

The two are angry that the Reds renewed their contracts and say they'll stay away until the team resumes negotiations. Armstrong was renewed at $215,000 and Oliver at $185,000.

"I'm going to stay out as long as it takes to state my case," Oliver said. "I'm just trying to get a fair shake. They've changed their policy for other non-arbitration-eligible players."

Armstrong said he had heard nothing new from Scott Boras, who represents both players. Asked when he might return to camp, Armstrong said: "It's up to Bob Quinn and my agent."

Reds manager Lou Piniella said he's concerned about the situation.

"They've received bad advice," Piniella said. "Joe is coming off of an arm injury and cut himself off from treatment, and Armstrong was scheduled to pitch Sunday. This is one of his throwing days and he misses it, so this is a setback. When it starts to interfere with us getting ready to defend our championship, I get upset, too."

Reds first baseman Hal Morris, renewed at $180,000, said he's watching closely.

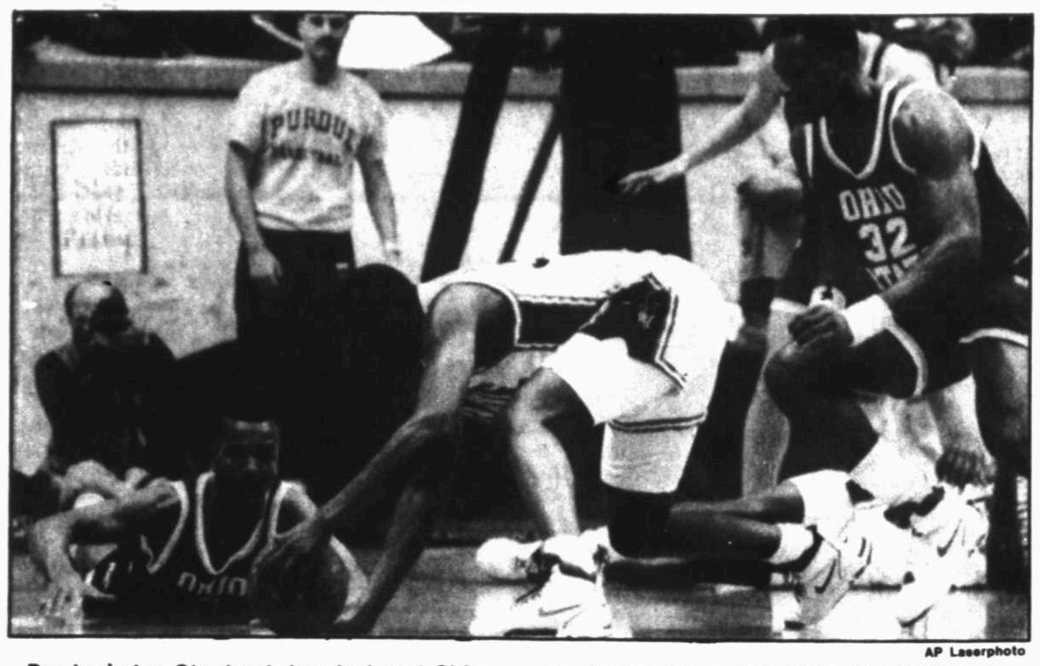

"If they do renegotiate the contracts, they're opening a Pandora's box," Morris said. "I wish we could be insulated from this part of the game. I hate it. It has alienated everyone."

Brown and Rogers worked out with Texas at Port Charlotte, Fla., saying they had made their point.

"I'm confident they understand my viewpoint and my reasoning behind feel-

Purdue's Ian Stanbeck (center) and Ohio State's Mark Baker chase the ball as Perry Carter (32) watches in the Boilermakers' upset of the No. 2 Buckeyes.

Purdue keeps Ohio State from clinching Big 10 title

Associated Press

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Jimmy Oliver scored 27 points, including 9 of Purdue's final 15, as the Boilermakers upset second-ranked Ohio State 72-67 and kept the Buckeyes from clinching the Big Ten title outright Wednesday night.

It was the sixth straight loss for Ohio State (26-2, 15-2) in West Lafayette since 1985.

Ohio State closed to 68-67 when Perry Carter hit the first of two free throws and Jim Jackson sank a jumper off Carter's missed second shot with 1:14 left.

But Oliver and Linc Darner sank two free throws each in the final 1:03 to hold off the Buckeyes, who need a victory in their final game at Iowa or a loss by second-place Indiana to win their first outright Big Ten title since 1971.

Top 25

The victory kept Purdue (16-11, 8-10) in contention for a berth in the NCAA tournament.

Ohio State trailed 53-45 with 6:38 remaining, but then outscored Purdue 11-2 as the Boilermakers went nearly 4 minutes with just one basket on Chuckie White's dunk.

Mark Baker's layup capped the run and gave Ohio State its first lead of the second half, 56-55, with 6:38 remaining. The Boilermakers responded with a 17-10 spurt, including 9 points by Oliver, over the final 5:55 to win the game.

No. 25 DePaul 75, Miami 58

ROSEMONT, Ill. (AP) — Melvon Foster scored all 10 of his points during a 20-2 second-half run as No. 25 DePaul beat Miami of Florida 75-58 Wednesday night.

DePaul (19-8) has won 11 of its last 12 games and seven straight at home.

Miami (9-19) finished 0-11 on the road this season, stretching its road losing streak to 13.

Stephen Howard led the Blue Demons with 12 points. DePaul got 10 points apiece from David Booth, Terry Davis and Foster.

Lady 'Horns cruise past Rice

Associated Press

SWC Women's Tourney

DALLAS (AP) — Cinietra Henderson scored 23 points and Texas shot a record 78.1 percent in the first half of a 108-61 victory over Rice on Wednesday in the opening round of the Southwest Conference women's basketball tournament.

The No. 14-ranked Lady Longhorns (21-7) made a SWC-tournament record 25 of 32 shots before the half.

Rice (10-17) trailed 59-26 at halftime and fell behind by 52 points in the second half. Meanwhile, Texas used a balanced attack and shot 67.2 percent for the game.

The Longhorns were also led by Johnna Pointer, who scored 16 points on 6 of 7 shooting, and Vicki Hall added 14 points.

Freshman guard Marsha Frese, who was 4-for-4 from 3-point range, and Yalonda Stiner paced Rice with 16 points apiece.

Texas, which won its 18th straight SWC tournament game, broke its tournament record of 104 points set against Arkansas in 1985.

The Lady Longhorns will play Texas Tech Thursday in the semifinals.

Texas Tech 71, SMU 56

Center Tami Wilson scored 20 points, leading Texas Tech past Southern Methodist.

Guard Krista Kirkland added 18 for the Lady Red Raiders, whose double-figure effort also included 10 points by forward Jennifer Buck.

The Lady Raiders (22-6), shooting only 11-of-29 or 37.9 percent from the field in the opening half, warmed up in the second period. The Lady Mustangs finished the season at 9-19.

Junior center Vicki Walterscheid led all SMU scorers with 26 points.

The Lady Raiders were ahead 34-25 at the half and led by as many as 19 points twice in the second period.

Although the Mustangs trimmed the lead to 40-35 at one point, Tech went on a 15-2 run in the final minutes to put the game out of reach.

Arkansas 108, Baylor 63

Baylor's Maggie Stinnett became the SWC all-time leading scorer as top-seeded Arkansas beat the Lady Bears.

Stinnett, of Waco, finished with 22 points to give her 2,027 career points.

Stinnett broke the SWC career mark of 2,008 points by Texas' Clarissa Davis set from 1985 through 1989.

Baylor, which finished the season at 9-17, also got 19 points from Jennifer King.

Houston 84, Texas A&M 68

LaShawn Johnson scored a game-high 21 points as Houston posted a victory over Texas A&M.

The Lady Cougars (19-9) turned a one-point advantage late in the first half into a 42-33 halftime lead.

Texas A&M (14-14) only shot 40.7 percent from the field, compared to Houston's 50.7 percent. The Lady Aggies were led by Yvonne Hill, who scored 16 points.

Darla Simpson added 16 points and 9 rebounds for the Lady Cougars.

Bernard King's 50 not enough

Associated Press

LANDOVER, Md. — Bernard King scored 50 points — the eighth 50-point game of his career — but it was not enough Wednesday night as the Utah Jazz beat the Washington Bullets 104-93.

NBA

King was 18-for-31 from the field and 14-of-16 from the free-throw line. It was his second 50-point game of the season; he scored 52 points on Dec. 29 against Denver.

Sixers 97, Mavericks 92

DALLAS — Charles Barkley scored nine of his 33 points during a 23-10 run to open the third quarter and Philadelphia went on to a victory over Dallas.

The Sixers, who trailed by three points at halftime, took a 63-53 lead with 2:49 left in the third period on Hersey Hawkins' 3-pointer and never allowed their lead to fall below three points the rest of the way.

Knicks 102, Pistons 99

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Trent Tucker made a 3-pointer at the buzzer as New York sent the Pistons to their sixth loss in seven games.

Detroit tied the game at 99 on Joe Dumars' 3-pointer with 2.5 seconds left. After New York called timeout, Tucker made an off-balance shot from well behind the 3-point line to give their Knicks their sixth victory in seven games.

Celtics 126, Heat 117

BOSTON (AP) — Larry Bird made four 3-pointers in the last eight minutes of the third quarter as Boston spoiled Miami's bid for a franchise-record winning streak.

Magic 89, Clippers 86

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Scott Skiles scored 8 of his 17 points in the final five minutes to key a 16-5 stretch run for Orlando.

WILLIAMS: Carver unique

(From 1C)

over 1,200 yards, and offensive guard Billy Young still lives here.

"We played in places like Oklahoma, El Paso, San Antonio and Fort Worth, but we were lucky. We always traveled by charter bus. That was unique at the time, but our booster club was really active."

Integration of the school system ended the Carver era and Williams moved to Midland Lee as an assistant coach in football and track.

"I'm glad I had the opportunity of coaching at Lee because it gave me an overall perspective of the school system. I later moved on to Midland High and my wife, Margaret, moved from Midland High to Lee as a counselor. It was easy for me to have a special feeling for both schools.

"One year at Lee, when I was coaching with Sam Volpe, we had an average track team that hadn't scored high in any meet, but we won six events in the district meet and won the championship."

Williams moved on to Midland High in 1972 as an assistant coach in football and track. He replaced Ed Nixon as head track coach in 1978. But regardless of which school Williams was coaching, it is the kids he remebers.

"James Beverly was one of the best," Williams remembers. "At Midland High James posted the fastest 800 meters in the world for 15-year-olds with a 1:52. He was third in the state as a sophomore and I had him only one year. He still stays in touch.

"David Simmons (Midland High) won a state discus championship. He had all the tools and concentrated on track alone."

But a special place in Williams' heart goes to some lesser talents who produced big results.

"You remember those kids who you thought wouldn't have much success, but overcame the lack of talent with hard work," Williams said. "John St. Germain (MHS) was a hurdler with little speed or agility, but he won the intermediate hurdles in district and ran under 50 seconds on the 1600 relay.

"Anthony Adkinson (MHS) won the district meet two years in a row and qualified for the state meet and really didn't have the tools of a sprinter.

"It's hard to forget people like Bruce Brenneman, Mike Holt and Alan Wilson, who we had at Lee the year we won that championship. Wilson went on to coach a state football championship at Paris.

"You quickly learn that each kid is an individual. They're all different. It's really enjoyable to pattern a direction for a kid, help them become proficient and then see them light up like a neon sign when it all takes hold."

Coaching, however, is just a small part of the legacy Williams leaves behind. In 1986, he was named as a Centennial Citizen. He has received the Exxon award of teaching excellence in mathematics. He was teacher of the year and coach of the year twice and has served on the Texas High School Coaches Association track advisory board for the last three years.

"Coaching is rewarding in many respects, but I enjoy the teaching a great deal. I think coaches turn out to be exceptional in the teaching field because of the variety of kids they are in touch with after class."

Williams considers Midland home.

"I can't compare Midland to any other place because it's all I know. I was never in another school district, I was married here and my kids (son Michael and daughter Pamela) were both born here," Williams said.

And it's going to be hard for Midland to adjust to not having Williams in a coaching uniform. After all, Midlanders have known little else.

Rangers' Bush leads AL threat to block expansion

Associated Press

IRVING — Texas Rangers managing general partner George W. Bush said Wednesday that the American League is willing to block National League expansion if it does not get part of the money.

Pittsburgh chairman Douglas D. Danforth continued to express the NL's position against sharing the $190 million in expansion money, and said he hoped the final selection of expansion cities could be made by June.

Bush, speaking at the quarterly owners meetings, said he is the most hard-line of the AL owners on expansion. The NL will receive $190 million from the two new teams, which start play in 1993, and Philadelphia owner Bill Giles has said that the NL will not share.

"We want the money bad enough," Bush said after Wednesday's AL meeting. "Now I can't speak for every team, but I guess it will end up in the commissioner's hands."

If the leagues deadlock, commissioner Fay Vincent will have to decide. Vincent discounted Bush's comments, saying: "I think George is not up to date on some developments. The decision has already been made by the two leagues to attempt to negotiate and resolve the issue of expansion revenue without dragging me into it."

Vincent said he wants the league to work it out themselves. The NL intends to pick from among Buffalo, N.Y.; Denver; Miami; Orlando, Fla.; St. Petersburg, Fla., and Washington by September, but the cities need majority approval from the AL.

"Our feeling is the same as it's always been. There's no history of sharing," said Danforth, the head of the NL expansion committee. "There's no reason to share. Now, having said that," he added, "I'm not going to tell you there won't be any give-and-take, any negotiating."

The expansion committee visited the Florida cities last month. It will go to Buffalo and Washington on March 25 and to Denver the following day. Danforth said he hoped to mail the owners an expansion report before the next quarterly meetings at Los Angeles on June 12-13.

Giles, a member of the expansion committee, said he was not optimistic about the leagues reaching a settlement without the commissioner's involvement.

"As far as one man," he said, "the feeling is that this won't be easily resolved."

Bush, the president's son, and Seattle Mariners owner Jeffrey Smulyan both said they were told by former Commissioner Peter Ueberroth at the time they bought franchises that they would receive one-twenty-sixth shares from the pending expansion.

"But a lot of things have happened since then," Smulyan said. "It's not fair to say it was ever in writing."

Danforth reiterated the NL's position that both franchises could be awarded to Florida cities.

"We're going to propose the two best sites, regardless of where they are," he said.

The leagues will meet in joint session Thursday, but a formal vote isn't expected on any major issues.

Houston Astros owner John McMullen emerged from NL meetings Wednesday saying the league had "agreed to work with us" regarding his pledge to rent the Astrodome between July 27-Aug. 23, 1992, for the Republican National Convention in 1992.

Earlier this year, McMullen rented the domed stadium to the GOP without approval.

BASEBALL: Fielder sits

ing the way I do," Brown said. "Really, this is all I can do. I can't force them into doing anything else. The big thing is making sure they recognized I didn't agree with the way the negotiations were handled and, because of that, the outcome of the negotiations was I'm not being paid what I'm worth."

Brown's contract was renewed for $327,500, while Rogers' was renewed for $287,500.

In other camps news on Tuesday:

— Cecil Fielder was left off the traveling squad for Detroit's game against the Los Angeles Dodgers on Thursday.

"They're going to have nine million reporters over there," said Tigers manager Sparky Anderson, referring to Darryl Strawberry's first game for Los Angeles. "I ain't going to get (Fielder) mixed up in all that baloney."

Oil prices dip

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices retreated Wednesday, snapping a seven-day rise as traders speculated OPEC's attempts to cut crude production might not proceed smoothly.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in April settled at $19.73 per barrel, down 70 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Oil ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries meet Monday in Geneva to discuss cutting back production, which has been outstripping global demand for crude.

It is OPEC's first formal session since the Persian Gulf War ended with Iraq's rout from Kuwait.

Home heating oil for delivery in April fell 1.01 cents a gallon, settling at 56.08 cents.

Natural gas for delivery in April closed at $1.356, up .1 cent per 1,000 cubic feet.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar was mixed against other foreign currencies Wednesday, falling on profit-taking in New York after posting gains overseas.

Gold prices moved higher.

The dollar closed at 1.5380 marks in New York, down from 1.5440 late Tuesday.

The British pound gained against the dollar in New York, rising to $1.8950 from $1.8913 late Tuesday.

The dollar also lost ground against the Japanese yen, falling to 135.70 yen in New York from late Tuesday's 136.30.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Tuesday's quotes, included: 1.3390 Swiss francs, down from 1.34545; 5.2360 French francs, down from 5.2590; 1,148.00 Italian lire, down from 1,153.50; and 1.15855 Canadian dollars, up from 1.15695.

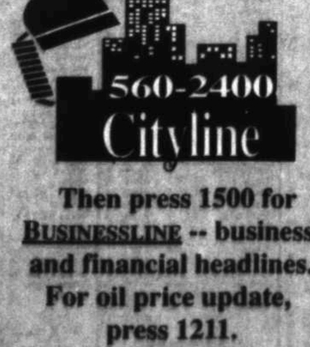

Gold advanced in New York, rising $1.20 on the Commodity Exchange to close at $365.90 a troy ounce. Republic National Bank later quoted a bid of $366.25, up $2.25.

Silver advanced to $3.868 a troy ounce on the Commodity Exchange from late Tuesday's $3.856.

Bankruptcies up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Personal bankruptcies jumped 16 percent in 1990, but delinquent mortgages, surprisingly, declined in the final three months of the year even as the recession deepened, according to court and trade association reports.

Bankruptcies totaled 718,107 last year, with the worst increases coming in the Northeast, the American Financial Services Association noted on Wednesday.

First City suspends dividend payments

■ First City Bancorp., under pressure to increase capital levels at some of its banks, has suspended dividends on its common and cumulative preferred stocks and says it will announce plans for new capitalization.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — First City Bancorp. of Texas, hoping to bring some of its banks' capital up to regulatory minimums, is suspending dividends on its common and cumulative preferred stock.

The Houston bank-holding company said Tuesday it soon will announce specific plans for bringing new capital into the bank.

First City, recipient of the largest investor-led bailout in U.S. history when it received $970 million from the federal government and $586 million from investors in April 1988, lost about $158.3 million last year. Regulators have told the holding company to raise capital levels at some of its banks, including its largest banks in Houston and Dallas.

First City spokesman Jim Day said the company has enough money to pay the dividends and has not been ordered to suspend the dividends. But he said the board of directors decided it was "not prudent to pay dividends when we're not earning them."

Based on last quarter's record, the company will save more than $6 million for the quarter by suspending the dividend.

"It didn't take a crystal ball to see that this was coming," said Sandra Flannigan, senior banking analyst for Alex. Brown & Sons in Baltimore.

Standard & Poor's Corp. lowered or put on credit watch Tuesday about $100 million of First City debt.

S&P dropped to CCC from B- its rating of First City preferred. S&P will lower that rating further — to C — if First City goes through with its plans and doesn't pay the March 31 dividend.

The rating company also said it would consider downgrading more debt of First City Bancorp. and its Houston bank. S&P said it will discuss First City's capital enhancement plan and its financial flexibility with the company's management to determine future ratings.

The bank is completing a major capital enhancement plan that will include provisions for converting the preferred shares into common stock, Day said.

If the company can't convert those shares, it will be forced to pay an unusually high dividend of the prime rate plus 6 percent after March 31. Dividends on those shares, which were $5.50 per share, would jump to $7.25 per share at today's rates.

Greenspan cautiously upbeat about economy

■ The end of the Persian Gulf war has Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan more upbeat about the nation's economy, but he warns the nation still has troublesome weak spots.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, in a cautiously upbeat assessment, said Wednesday the end of the Persian Gulf War had removed a "troublesome uncertainty" overhanging the U.S. economy.

Greenspan said that there was not yet firm evidence that the recession was at an end. But he said a variety of factors, including the end to the war, lower interest rates and falling energy prices, should help to bolster consumer and business confidence in coming months.

"A number of elements appear to be moving into place that should enhance prospects for recovery," Greenspan told members of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Greenspan's comments were viewed by financial markets as a signal that the central bank has decided to delay any further credit easing while awaiting future economic reports.

"He was basically telling the markets that this recession was caused by the war, the war is over and therefore he thinks the recession is going to end without further prodding from the Fed," said

Alan Greenspan

David Wyss, an economist with DRI-McGraw Hill, a consulting firm in Lexington, Mass.

The central bank, under pressure from the Bush administration, began in late October an aggressive easing campaign in an effort to fight the recession. The effort pushed banks' prime lending rate down by a full percentage point and helped to send longterm mortgage rates to their lowest levels since early 1987.

Many economists had been looking for the Fed to ease again following release of what was expected to be a weak unemployment report this Friday. However, some analysts said Greenspan's comments may mean the Fed will wait until it sees post-war economic data in March

Anthonys announces more store closings

■ Anthonys announced Tuesday it is closing operations in five states and closing 24 stores in Texas, Oklahoma, Colorado and the five states it is leaving. The closing closest to Midland is the Kermit store.

Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY — Anthonys plans to eliminate its clothing stores in five states as part of a restructuring of its operations.

Anthonys filed a petition last month for protection from its creditors while it reorganized. The petition was necessary after a banking group removed its line of credit for the chain.

The company will eliminate operations in Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Idaho and Mississippi. It will continue business with 182 stores in 10 states.

Anthonys said Tuesday it was closing 24 stores. Seven are in Oklahoma. Eight are in the five states where the company is eliminating its businesses and the rest are in Texas and Colorado.

In Texas, the company is closing two stores in Longview and one each in Kermit, Paris, Seguin, Stamford and Wichita Falls.

The latest round of closings will affect 359 employees.

With Tuesday's announcement, store closings have reached 34, affecting 464 of the retailer's 5,300 employees, said Jack Weisner, Anthonys chairman.

The Oklahoma closures include three stores in Tulsa, and stores in Chandler, Cleveland, Holdenville and Pryor.

"The vast majority of our stores here are performing extremely well, but we do have a few that do not, for different reasons," Weisner said.

Weisner said the company's stores in Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Idaho and Mississippi had long been a drain on profits.

"We have stayed with them, making every possible effort to reverse the situation and protect the jobs," Weisner said. "Now, it is time to face the reality that exists in these areas."

Weisner said Anthonys is still evaluating and renegotiating the balance of its leases. The company is hopeful these renegotiations will be completed to its satisfaction, but it is possible the outcome will not be in the retailer's best interest — perhaps forcing the closing of additional stores.

Historic Dr Pepper building foreclosed on by NCNB

DALLAS (AP) — A bank foreclosed on owners of the historic Dr Pepper building, which served as the company's headquarters until four years ago.

The art deco-style building just east of North Central Expressway has been vacant since the soft drink company relocated its headquarters four years ago. NCNB Texas National Bank foreclosed Tuesday on an investor's group that owned the building.

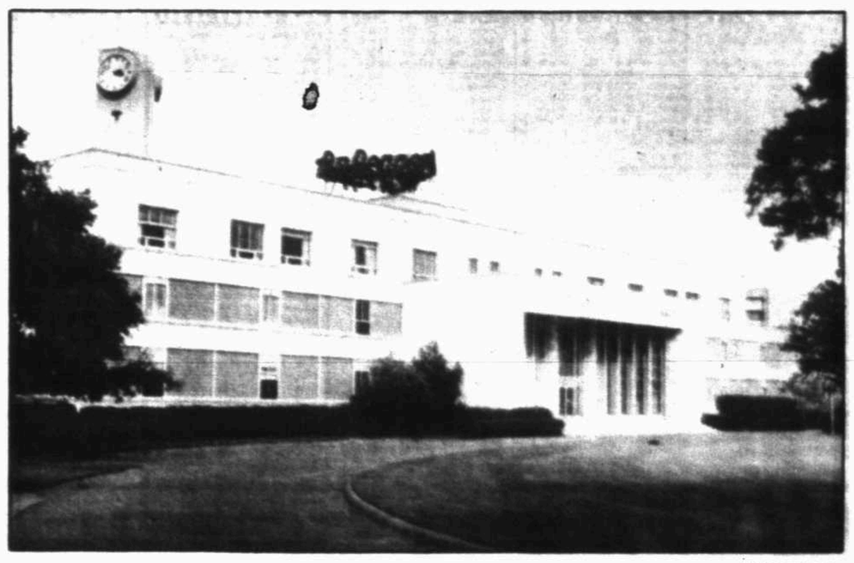

Harbord Properties had bought the former headquarters with plans to build a retail and office complex, company officials said. The 27-acre property was sold despite the fact that investor Sydney Steiner had place Harbord under bankruptcy court protection in August.

"The bankruptcy judge allowed it to happen," Steiner said. "We couldn't come to terms with NCNB."

Through foreclosure filings, NCNB Texas said it was seeking repayment of a $37 million loan made in August 1985.

"We are marketing it (the property) and attempting to obtain the highest possible value," said NCNB spokeswoman Martha Larsh.

Dr Pepper, founded in Waco, Texas in 1885, is the country's oldest major soft drink manufacturer.

NCNB Texas has foreclosed on the owners of the historic Dr Pepper building, located northeast of downtown Dallas that served as company headquarters from 1947 to 1987.

Children's educational future takes planning

By Scott Burns

Q. We are concerned about financing our children's future education. We have high school to be concerned with now as two of our three children will need to attend a school that will cost us about $3,500 per year. We have already done our homework establishing what is needed for their high school years and have chosen the best possible school for their needs.

Burns

We have no idea how to save or invest to help ease the burden of these costs, coming in four years. My husband has two jobs with the full time employment clearing $34,000 per year. His part-time side work had a net profit last year of $14,000. I am a student at the university taking an average of nine hours a semester and the cost for my education averages $3,500 per year total.

Our house is worth $90,000 in the current market and our mortgage is $70,000 with a payment of $795 including taxes and insurance. We have $900 in savings. With three children we just make ends meet. We are still recovering from having lost a business and our total investment of $75,000... so we have no "nest egg."

Our children are 11, 9, and 6 years old. We are 39 and 35. I am a homemaker and a student, spend a great deal of time helping my children with school and do not count on making much money working full-time when I graduate. The children's private school tuition now is $4,900 a year for all three children.

Should we sell our home and get into a smaller house payment for 15 years? With two hyperactive children we are also considering a four bedroom house to separate all three children, as advised by our physician and psychologist. Should we move? Can we lower our costs? Can we invest anything at all to save for the future? We are determined to get ahead and need some advice.

A. The greatest resource any of us has, as a single person or as a couple raising a family, is our capacity to work and earn. Then we need to measure that capacity and set our personal agenda for spending.

Here are some suggestions:

FIRST, look for alternatives to private education. There is a federal law that requires "mainstreaming" of all children with special needs; some states are better at implementing it than others and some school districts are better at implementing it than others. The best effort you can make as a parent is to research where the best public school programs might be. If you can avoid the expense, your income crunch disappears.

SECOND, reconsider your own education. There are many ways to learn without paying tuition and you have no direct need to credentialing tuition buys since you have stated that you don't expect to earn much money in the future. The amount of money you spend on your tuition now could finance the future schooling for your children. As an alternative, consider working; by the time the children are in high school there will be less to do at home. Your husband may not say anything but your financial agenda is more than he can handle alone. Most families, with or without children with special needs, require two earners to make ends meet.

Yes, I know you have children with special needs and may be afraid to work. But it may be the only way to avoid a terrible collision between the cost of raising your children and pressures it brings for you and your husband. I speak from personal experience as a parent and husband on this one.

Q. I have no faith in brokers anymore, as all those I talk to advise changing all our investments into their "families," thereby creating new commissions for their benefit. I have just retired, am 65, and my wife is 72.

Robert L. Glossop has completed a well in the Spraberry (Trend Area).

Reagan County producer

Staff Report

The Spraberry Trend Area gained another producer with completion of Robert L. Glossop, No. 4 Nunn "A", 36 miles northwest of Big Lake. It was finaled to pump 43.35 barrels of 40.4 gravity oil plus 21 barrels of water, with gas-oil ration of 1,730:1.

Production was through perforations at 6,670 to 8,255 feet, which had been acidized with 4,256 gallons and fractured with 200,000 pounds of sand.

It was drilled to 8,400 feet, where a 4 1/2 inch casing was set and plugged back to 8,335 feet.

Location is 1,980 feet from south and west lines of Section 6, Block B, L&SV survey.

GREENSPAN: End of war removes some worries before making any changes in interest rates.

Greenspan's comments were carefully hedged to include the dangers still facing the economy such as a continuing slowdown in bank lending and weak real estate markets. But he was still more optimistic than the assessment he made just two weeks ago when the Persian Gulf War was still underway.

"Certainly, the successful end to the hostilities in the gulf has removed a troublesome uncertainty and should provide some lift to consumer and business confidence," Greenspan said. "On balance, when these positive forces are weighed with the negatives, the scales appear to tip slightly in favor of suggesting that the current downturn might well prove milder than most of the recessions of the past 40 years."

Greenspan said there were already some encouraging, although sketchy, reports of a return of consumer confidence. He said that in the days immediately following the end of the war, traffic picked up in real estate offices and auto showrooms, raising "the possibility that stronger consumer demand may be emerging."

While sounding a tentative note of optimism, Greenspan made it clear that he was still worried about a variety of problems facing the economy.

"It would be most unwise to ignore the possibility that all or some combination of these negative factors could cause the contraction in economic activity to last longer or be more serious than is currently anticipated," Greenspan said.

He said all of the available data indicated that the recession was continuing in February although he suggested that the March data should look better.

"I think the turn is going to come in a reasonably short time but that is a forecast. The economy is still moving lower," he said.

The Bush administration, which is forecasting that the recession will end in the April-June quarter, has continued to apply pressure to the central bank to lower interest rates further.

The last rate cuts occurred in early February right after the government reported that the unemployment rate had climbed to 6.2 percent in January.

In further evidence of the size of the slump, the Commerce Department issued a revised report Wednesday showing that Americans' productivity fell by 0.8 percent in 1990, the worst showing since a 0.9 percent drop in the recession year of 1982.

An industry group said that personal bankruptcies jumped 16 percent to 718,107 last year. The American Financial Services Association said it was the biggest annual increase since 1986 and was led by a sharp rise in bankruptcy filings in the Northeast.

BURNS: Change cash flow

(From 5C)

This year our income, $1,953 a month, will be from:

Social Security ($1,184 a month);

Union pension ($250 a month);

$10,000 tax free bond ($77 a month);

Wife's IRA distribution ($87 a month);

Promissory note ($355 a month).

Our expenses will be $1,758 a month:

Home mortgage ($288) and taxes ($366 a month);

Extra mortgage payment ($100 a month); Car payment ($131 a month);

Insurance ($240 a month);

Taxes on vacant property ($86 a month);o Income taxes ($95 a month)

Food, clothing, gas, utilities, etc. ($740 a month).

In addition to our house, worth $125,000 with a mortgage balance of $18,000, we have the bond mentioned above and $53,000 in fixed income bond funds. One of those funds is a junk bond fund that has gone down in value; we can redeem a portion without a fee but would have to pay 4 percent on the balance or transfer to another fund in the same group. What should we do?

A. Change your cash flow. Your mortgage is so small that you don't benefit from itemized deductions. I suggest you redeem the fund shares that can be redeemed without expense and enough cash from the other fund to pay off your mortgage. This will reduce your income by about $160 a month... but it will reduce your federal income taxes by about $24 a month... and eliminate your mortgage payment of $288 a month for a net saving of $152 a month.

The result of this change is that your spending will go down to $1,446 a month while your income, EXCLUDING THE PROMISSORY NOTE, will be $1,598. You'll still be producing a surplus and the proceeds from the note can be added to one of your mutual funds.

Then you should reinvest the remaining junk bond fund shares in something safer, a common stock fund with an above average rating from Morningstar, a Chicago firm that tracks mutual fund performance. This fund has a lower yield and should further reduce your taxable income even as your principal grows.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Capital loss can offset gains in other stocks

By Bill Doyle

Q. Two years ago, I purchased 9,000 shares of a certain stock at $8 a share. It has plummeted to $1 a share. The company is now seeking a buyer. What can I expect when the company is sold?

If I incur a $63,000 loss — my $72,000 purchase price minus a $9,000 reimbursement — can I take a $3,000 capital loss for each of the next 21 years?

Doyle

A. Your expectations hinge on the terms of the buy out, when and if the company is sold.

If the buyer purchases your shares at $1 each, you will have a $63,000 capital loss. Your loss might be somewhat higher than that, because your "basis" — cost for tax purposes — includes any commission you paid when you bought the stock.

A capital loss can be used to offset any capital gains you realize by selling another stock or any other capital asset at a profit in the same year you incur the capital loss. Capital gains and capital losses are reported on the Schedule D you file with your Form 1040 federal income tax return.

Assuming you have no capital gains to offset ordinary income, you can use up to $3,000 for the year of the sale. Any excess capital loss — and you would have a bundle — can then be carried over and used in future years.

You use that carryover capital loss first to offset any capital gains you have in future years and then to offset ordinary income of up to $3,000 per year until the capital loss is all used up. In your unhappy situation, that could take 21 years — a bit longer if you paid a commission at the time of your purchase.

However, all buy outs are not for cash. Very often, the purchasing company pays with its stock or other securities. In such a case, that's an exchange and no capital loss is realized right then and there.

If that happens, you will have to sell the securities received in the exchange to establish your capital loss. Then, your capital loss will be the different between the basis of the 9,000 shares you purchased and the money you receive when you sell the securities received in the exchange.

From that point on, you would use that capital loss to offset first capital losses and then ordinary income as explained above.

Q. Is there any benefit to a brokerage firm for holding the stocks, bonds, cash, etc. in my account other than "locking in" my business?

A. The use of customers' securities and money is always beneficial to brokerage firms.

If your customer's agreement contains a hypothecation clause, as virtually all do, the brokerage can put your securities out on loan. That's frequently done to take care of customers who make short sales — sell securities they do not own. Also, the brokerage might lend your securities to other brokerages and collect fees for that service.

As the expression goes, an efficient brokerage firm or other financial business "doesn't keep a dime in the house overnight." Instead, it puts all the money it has on hand — including customers' cash — to work. It's a safe bet your brokerage is earning more interest on your money than it is paying you for the use of that money.

Q. How safe — or risky — are securities and cash left with a brokerage firm?

A. There's no risk of losing the securities or the cash, providing it is within the limits of Securities Investor Protection Corp. coverage — $500,000 total, no more than $100,000 of which can be cash.

SIPC was founded by act of Congress to protect investors who leave securities and cash in "street name" accounts with brokerages. When a brokerage firm fails, SIPC sees to it that securities and cash are returned to customers. Many brokerages carry private insurance above and beyond SIPC coverage.

Of course, this does not eliminate the risk of loss if the market values of your securities fall.

Gumshoe Granny works on the wild side

By Mike Cochran
Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH (AP) — Nina Neal realized she was in deep trouble when her assailant grabbed her, threw back his head and let go a shrill, satanic wail.

She broke free but he caught her, jerking her back so severely she felt her entire body had been "whiplashed." She knew now he would kill her.

With his fists, he broke her nose, blackened her eyes and dislodged several teeth.

"What do you think about that?" he snarled.

"I think you're a dirty, rotten son-of-a-bitch," she whispered.

"I HAVE never been afraid of anything or anyone," she recalls now. "I was terrified. He almost broke my neck."

But, she sighed, it goes with the territory. No one forced her to become a private investigator. She just wanted to find the person who murdered her father.

At 51, Nina Neal is a 5-foot-3, 115-pound, blue-eyed blonde, a mother, a grandmother and a veteran divorcee with no desire to alter her marital status a fourth time.

Her first husband was a "career criminal" and the carefree second was permanently disabled in an industrial accident.

The third, she said, enjoyed hunting, fishing and wife beating.

"Daddy told me don't ever have anything to do with a non-drinking man," she said of her third marital fling. "I ignored my daddy's very good advice."

WHEN NOT joking about exhusbands or brawling with satanists, Nina Neal runs her own private detective agency, Pyramid Investigations, and a newly acquired bail bond company.

She often is the low-profile, behind-the-scenes investigator in a high-profile case, including some recent ones. You'll not find her in an office but zipping around town in a pickup truck, a mobile phone stuck in her ear.

"It's hard to nuke a moving target," she says airily.

Female private eyes are not uncommon, but ones like Nina are.

"You can't help but like her, at least until she gets mad at you," says veteran homicide Detective Danny LaRue. "Then she's a tiger. Nina's credible, although sometimes I get the impression she just arrived on the last flight from Mars."

Born and raised on the wild side, Nina never strayed from the hard, fast track. Bright lights and darkened bars were a way of life that spilled over into adulthood.

"MY DADDY was a hell raiser, and I grew up on the Jacksboro Highway, is what it boils down to," she said. "I was Daddy's favorite and I got to go places with him because I wouldn't tell on him."

In the '40s and '50s, flashy underworld figures and just plain old hoods had a way of dying or disappearing, often at the same time, on the Jacksboro Highway.

In its heyday, the highway was a neon strip of nightclubs, liquor stores, gambling joints, saloons and dance halls. Slot machines were exceeded in popularity only by hotels and motels that rented rooms by the hour.

For Nina, the mid-50s was a pivotal period, but for all the wrong reasons.

That was when she met Odis Hammond, a dashing "career criminal" who would change her life forever. And that was also when someone killed her father.

"They were having a shutdown strike at the Lone Star Steel Mill in East Texas," she said, "and my father and the others from Fort Worth were staying in a motel there. He was thrown into a vat of coke acid."

Nina Neal, a private investigator, poses with her truck on Fort Worth's Jacksboro Highway. Ms. Neal has an office but seldom uses it preferring to work via a mobile phone out of her truck.

His remains were not discovered until weeks later.

"AFTER THAT," Nina said, "I set out to find out who killed him."

Just 16 at the time, she dropped out of high school and headed to Daingerfield, arriving not long after the Texas Rangers. The Rangers didn't solve the case, but they did conclude that the killing was not strike-related.

Her own investigation would one day point to an infamous Texas gambling figure, but she could never prove her suspicions. Her other suspect was a guard at the steel mill.

"I still don't know for sure," she said.

If nothing else, her inquiry introduced her to the intricacies of law enforcement — "how it worked and didn't work." While attending night classes and getting a diploma, she became a courthouse regular, adept at rooting out information in obscure or bewildering legal documents.

With her courthouse expertise, Nina had little trouble landing a job with a law firm headed by several of the city's best known attorneys, including Doug Crouch, who was eyeing the district attorney's office.

One night at a dance hall Nina met Odis. He was, she said, 27 years old, a close friend of C&W singer Willie Nelson and the "handsomest man I ever saw."

HAMMOND ALSO was a police character, a pimp by preference and a killer more or less by accident.

"Odis was the biggest pimp ever to hit Fort Worth," Nina recalled with a wry smile. "He had 30 prostitutes working for him, including Jackie Bottoms, a beautiful $200-a-night call girl."

It was during a debate over Ms. Bottoms' earnings, if not her affections, that Hammond shot and killed his lifelong buddy, Wylie D. Bartley.

"Odis didn't mean to kill him," Nina said. "He grieved over that shooting for years."

In between his grieving and his gun battles, Odis found time for an affair with Nina, who was then 17, still a bit naive and soon quite pregnant.

Odis was not opposed to marriage, but Doug Crouch was.

He felt his chances of being elected DA would be damaged if word got out that one of his investigators had wed a known pimp, particularly one under indictment for murder.

IN THE END, Nina and Odis were quietly married in nearby Weatherford, and she left the next day for California.

"Everyone just wanted me out of there," she said.

Crouch won the election, although Nina returned to Fort Worth prematurely when Odis got himself seriously wounded in another shooting, again involving a woman.

When the inevitable divorce was final, in 1959, Odis and a pal celebrated by killing a hood in Houston, which almost got them both the electric chair.

With Odis off in jail, Nina remarried, choosing ironworker Gary Carter.

ON JAN. 31, 1962, Nina's life all but unraveled, beginning with the funeral of Carter's father.

That same day, Nina's younger sister Nita telephoned to say she had run off and gotten married. Nina met her after the funeral and then tried to contact their mother, Ruby, at the doctor's office where she worked.

"It was after 5 o'clock, but they kept putting me on hold," Nina said. Finally, she called the office and said angrily:

"I've got to talk to Mother."

"Just a moment," she was told. Then a doctor came on the line.

"She's gone," he said.

"WHEN DID she leave?" Nina asked.

"She's dead," he replied.

A coin machine dealer named Dan Starns, 53, had shot and killed Nina's mother as she sat in her car behind the clinic. According to witnesses, he jerked open the car door and said:

"Ruby, this is it. I can't stand it any longer."

Starns shot Mrs. Pearce four times with a .38 pistol. As he turned to walk away, he whirled and fired again. He then crawled into his pickup truck and blew his head off.

"Starns visualized himself in love with Mother," Nina said. "But she spurned him and married Jack Pearce. He was vice president of a bank."

NINA SPENT the '60s with Gary Carter, who she said gave her "direction and stability" and a second son. She sharpened her investigative skills in a variety of projects, some for lawyers, some for free and some for John Herrick, a well known and respected personal injury attorney.

It was Herrick who eventually encouraged her to get her license and become a fulltime investigator, which she did in 1985.

In the meantime, Nina went through one more husband and two more divorces and acquired four grandchildren via her two sons, both ironworkers. She also worked off and on as a welder, bartender, bookkeeper, hand driller and saleswoman.

"You can't be a good PI without personal experience," she said, "and doing all the things I've done and being all the places I've been was a positive experience.

Bucking Tradition

Momma's one of the few surviving early aviators

By Theasa Tuohy
Associated Press Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Like all other Mommas before her, my Momma told bedtime stories to her children. But with a difference.

Hers were about the thrills of flying in the early days, about spills and all manner of forced landings. Including the story about the pilot who got them back into the air after plugging a leaky gas tank with a manicure stick from Momma's purse. The only harm done was to the farmer's waving corn stalks that were flattened by their landing.

Momma wasn't exactly a wing-walker, but she came close. She flew open cockpit planes upside down and is among a select few surviving early aviators who flew CX5s, the engines that powered the famous World War I Jennys.

Momma soloed in 1929. She remembers it well. She came in too fast for her landing. The rubber wheels hit kerplunk, bouncing her straight up in the air. She gunned the engine and took off. Here she was, on her own for the first time, no instructor to tell her what to do.

My father, standing in the field, figured she was going to run out of gas while she kept circling, trying to get up her nerve to try again. It was that fear of a dry tank that finally brought her down to a smooth, fine landing. Now she was eligible for the coveted license that in those days was signed by Orville Wright.

Grannie brought up three daughters who knew how to support themselves. They taught school, worked in judges' and doctors' offices, one became county treasurer, the first woman in Young County, Texas, to be elected to public office in the county.

So my mother's mother didn't bat an eye when Momma put on pants and a helmet and took to the skies at age 18.

My father loved to tell about one barnstorming pal who jumped from the wing of a plane into Belle Isle Lake for $25. The guy almost lost his nerve, and the pilot was screaming at him to jump. The plane was so low and slow for the stunt that the engine was about to stall and the added weight on the wing was making it impossible to pull out of it.

This was the Depression. Most folks were not only broke, but they were pulling all sorts of stunts to make a dollar. Flagpole sitting, marathon dancing, walking on wings or hanging from them by a rope clutched in the teeth. This last stunt usually included a few supporting wires that were invisible to the gaping crowd gathered below.

"Watch Oswald, the trained duck, make a parachute jump from 2,000 feet," reads an old poster at the Air and Space Museum here. It was advertising an air circus for July 19, 1936, in El Reno. Admission was 15 cents and you could take a plane ride for $1. A free ride went to the person who found Oswald and returned him to the field.

It's funny how memory is. Momma remembers the time Wiley Post — the little guy with the black eye patch who wowed the world in 1933 with his solo flight around the world — dropped by the house for a look at her new baby. But she has no recollection of his funeral a few months later, even though it was said to be the biggest thing Oklahoma City had ever seen.

Post and humorist Will Rogers had crashed taking off from a strip of Alaskan tundra. Flowers and crepe paper funeral streamers were dropped from planes flying over the state capitol.

Momma has a vivid recollection of a state air tour she was on, but she can't remember when it was — sometime during the Hoover administration. She remembers at Fort Sill, Okla., being lifted out of the lead plane by its pilot, Capt. Ira Eaker, and the thrill of the fleeting view over his head of the entire fort standing at attention in parade salute.

"At 19, you're self-centered enough to feel they're saluting you," she always says with a laugh when she tells that story. But when you try to pin the 81-year-old memory down to when or who, she says: "Oh, I rode mostly in the Braniff plane with some Cabinet official. We started in Tulsa with a big party and everything, then we landed at different towns. They entertained us every place we landed. We'd have civic luncheons one place, tea another, a formal dinner dance at night. I had a beautiful evening gown."

She remembers about Eaker: "He's the one who flew the Question Mark and set the first record of refueling in the air. Later he was General Eaker, who commanded the 8th Air Force in World War II."

"Some of this stuff I've forgotten," she says in apology for her memory. "But a lot of it I didn't pay any attention to at the time. I was too busy doing and having fun."

In an early 1930s photo, Theasa Tuohy stands in front of the plane in which she learned to fly. It was a single-engine Great Lakes trainer biplane with a 4-cylinder British-built Cirrus engine. The engine was inverted to give the plane more maneuverability when flying upside down. The plane was owned by Tuohy's instructor, Roy Hunt, who used it to win a transcontinental speed derby during the 1932 Cleveland Air Races. He also set a world's record of 124 outside loops in the plane in 1931. Photo was shot at Curtiss-Wright Field in Oklahoma City when she was "22- or 23-years-old."

The air museum gave us part of the answer during a recent visit there. Momma spotted a picture of the nameless Cabinet official — who turned out to be Secretary of War Patrick Hurley, standing in the snapshot next to President Hoover.

What was all this for?

"To promote flying," says Momma. "They wanted all the little towns to build airports. Our government was pushing that."

Momma intended to be a stunt pilot. But she hated flying upside down, so she wasn't very cooperative in the grand plan to make her famous doing stunts. "I was always worrying I would fall out of the plane. I had to fly with a pillow behind me, and I was always thinking: 'What if that pillow falls out.'"

She needed the extra padding to help hold her in the open-cockpit planes because she weighed only 87 pounds and the seatbelts were too big. Besides, the pilot's seats were generally not much more than a hole in the fuselage.

Momma may have hated stunts, but she adored flying. She told me once when I was a little girl that when she was flying aloft she used to look down with pity at all the people stuck down there on the ground. But, she assured me, when she started having children she found that was an even bigger thrill so she didn't miss the adventure of flying.

Momma remembers a testimonial dinner for Post; she can't remember when it was or what he had just done. It sticks out in her memory because he turned the tables by giving inscribed gold watches to a bunch of Braniff pilots and mechanics who had helped him out of a spot.

Braniff, it seems, had fixed up his round-the-world plane, the Winnie Mae, after a crackup, but Post didn't have the money to pay his repair bill. So a bunch of the airline's employees gave back paychecks to get Post's plane out of hock.

Momma's embarrassed by the things she can't remember. I'm flabbergasted by the things she can. Take this exchange at the museum after she spotted a picture of a 1930s vintage single-engine plane with Braniff markings and three little portholes, indicating it could carry several passengers.

"Paul Braniff and your father and I drove to California to ferry that plane back. Or one just like it."

What was it called?

She frowned, gave an exasperated little stomp to her foot and said: "Well, I can't remember what it was called. But I know it had a Wright Whirlwind engine."

They all knew their engines in those days.

Boston's not ready to give up ancient escalator to museum

By Ceci Connolly

BOSTON (AP) — In a city that boasts the country's first subway system, Yankee ingenuity and New Englanders' thrifty ways have kept another old relic running longer than anywhere else in the world.

A 1914 Otis escalator with wooden treads, similar to one first displayed at the 1900 Paris Universal Exhibition, still carries commuters from an underground subway station to the street above in the heart of a downtown shopping district.

Travelers board the clanging, narrow machine cautiously, gingerly stepping onto a row of handcrafted slats of Vermont rock maple. Most feet are large enough to safely span the gaps between the slats, but children, animals and women wearing high heels beware.

Homeless people turn it off because the constant clickety-clack disrupts the silence between trains.

But it is a gem to people like William Worthington, noises, slats and all.

"Who has not felt a little thrill when about to hop onto an escalator," Worthington, a specialist at the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of American History in Washington, wrote in a 1989 article for American Heritage Of Invention & Technology magazine.

The museum collects all sorts of people movers, including elevators.

But it doesn't have a single escalator.

"This is more or less a priority," Worthington said this week, noting the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority has promised him the ancient escalator. "One should be saved."

"We'd like to give them the Downtown Crossing escalator," MBTA General Manager Thomas Glynn told a state legislative committee.

But the MBTA can't afford the $50,000 to replace an escalator that still works.

And even if the replacement money came through, Glynn's not so sure they would give up the relic.

"Bostonians like old stuff," he said.

The city's trolley system started in 1889 and part of it was converted to underground operations in 1897, making it the oldest subway system in the nation, with more than 30 miles of track.

The escalator, designed by Jesse Reno around the turn of the century, is driven by a single electric motor. It climbs 34 feet at a 25-degree angle and carries up to 7,200 people an hour, according to a history published in Elevator World magazine.

The steep incline combined with a slope on the worn treads makes riding a delicate balancing act. Passengers grip rubber-covered steel handrails for the slow journey upward.

In the early days, getting off was so tricky the Metropolitan Transit Authority hired "catchers" to help riders, said Anne Millbrooke, archivist for United Technologies, parent company of Otis Elevator Co., the firm that bought out Reno.

Worthington said he is patient and can keep waiting for the escalator as long as the noisy, dilapidated machine doesn't disappear.

"I just have to wait and hope the chaps I was dealing with don't retire before I get the machine," he said.

A Boston commuter makes his way up the Downtown Crossing subway station escalator Tuesday in Boston. The Smithsonian Institute wants the people mover — which dates back to 1914 and is made of handcrafted Vermont rock mape — for its museum.

CARRIER WANTED, WEEKLY INCOME!

The Midland Reporter-Telegram needs a Carrier in the Washington Park area. This route requires dependable transportation and an average of 2 hours each day. There is a weekly route allowance, an auto allowance plus regular monthly commissions.

CONTACT CHRIS BRADFORD
687-8807

HOW THE CITYLINE RESUME HOTLINE WORKS:

CITYLINE

It's quick, easy and convenient. You may respond anytime - 24 hours a day. To respond, dial 560-2400, then enter the category number listed in the ad to which you are responding. At this point you will hear a brief message: "If you are responding to (blank) ad, leave your name, address, phone number and any other pertinent information," and you simply leave the requested information at the tone. The employer placing the ad will be able to access this information from his or her location anytime 24 hours a day.

FREE...For a short time only. If you as an employer would like to try our new CITYLINE SERVICE, you may do so ABSOLUTELY FREE!!! Call one of our friendly consultants at 682-6222, for additional details.

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several routes which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Now is one of the best times ever to obtain a route in your area!

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 75% adult and 25% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- YOUTHS who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the route(s) from $300 to $700 monthly! Some motor routes make even more!

How long does it take?

The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carrier's choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!

RESERVE YOUR ROUTE NOW!
