British armada put on second highest alert

LONDON (AP) — Britain put its armada on the second highest state of alert Friday as it neared the Falkland Islands, and broadcast the most urgent appeal yet for Britons to leave the Argentine mainland.

The Times of London said the fleet's officers felt it might be necessary to attack the Argentine air force on mainland bases to prevent them from hitting the task force at sea.

There was no confirmation from Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of the report, which said the government agreed with the strategy on grounds the armada's 20 jet fighters were outgunned by Argentina's 240 warplanes.

The Argentine Foreign Ministry said Argentina had advised the Organization of American States that two British destroyers were spotted 54 miles north of South Georgia Island.

The ministry confirmed a report by the official Argentine news agency Telam, which quoted Argentina's OAS mission as saying the presence of the destroyers "reveals the clear British intention to complete the aggression" and "an attack is imminent." Argentine troops seized South Georgia, 850 miles east of the Falklands, on April 3, the day after they occupied the Falklands.

Two days of talks in Washington between British Foreign Secretary Francis Pym and Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. offered little hope for a peaceful solution.

A British source, authorized to speak with reporters, said Pym would return to London with an "American" plan that is "not satisfactory" and leaves "a great deal to be desired." He said it would be up to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher to decide if the negotiations should continue.

Argentine Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez, in an interview with the British Broadcasting Corporation's reporter in Argentina, said there was a 50-50 chance of war. He was asked about the possibility of war and said, "I haven't got a crystal ball. But if I were to be very objective, I would say half and half."

The Defense Ministry declined to comment on the London Times report about a possible strike against Argentine air bases, but said the armada's crewmen were ordered to "defense stations," the highest state of war-readiness short of combat alert, as the fleet approached the Falklands.

Half the crews of the armada were on permanent battle stations, manning weapons and radar.

Orders posted aboard the estimated 26 warships leading the 61-ship armada provided crews must wear battle dress or overalls at all times.

The orders came amid fading hopes of a negotiated settlement to avert war over the tiny South Atlantic colony 250 miles east of Argentina's southern tip.

The Defense Ministry refused to confirm whether the alert meant the task force's lead vessels were within the estimated 465-mile strike range of Argentine warplanes.

"That would be giving the positions of our vessels," a Defense Ministry spokesman told The Associated Press.

Speculation persisted of an imminent British attack on South Georgia.

A Defense Ministry spokesman confined comment Friday night to the statement: "The task force has not landed anywhere."

But the Foreign Office was broadcasting its most urgent appeal yet to the estimated 17,000 Britons in Argentina, urging them to leave the South American country.

Plan 'not satisfactory'

British Foreign Secretary Francis Pym leaves the State Department in Washington Friday following talks with Secretary of State Alexander

M. Haig Jr. Pym is returning to Britain with a plan designed to avert war between his country and Argentina. However, a British source said the plan was "not satisfactory."

Fed member optimistic in WTCC talk

"When we can get ourselves out of this recession, we can look forward to a decade of economic growth and achievement."
— Nancy Hays Teeters

"We have the potential of having one of the finest economic decades on record," once the United States gets past the hill of high interest rates, Nancy Hays Teeters with the Federal Reserve System in Washington, D.C., told the audience attending the 54th annual West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention. The concluding event held at Midland Country Club Friday night featured Ms. Teeters, who was appointed to the Fed's board of governors in 1978 for a six-year term. It also gave incoming president Joe Kloesel of Midland an opportunity to outline plans for the coming year. Ms. Teeters projected that interest rates will be dropping, "but I doubt if we have the interest rates dipping below the double digits for a long time. When we can get ourselves out of this recession, we can look forward to a decade of economic growth and achievement." To explain how the U.S. tumbled into its current economic problems, Ms. Teeters outlined the operations and history of the Federal Reserve System briefly, then listed factors attributing to the country's situation.

"WE'RE THE BANKERS for the U.S. government," she began. "A bank holding company can't sneeze without our permission."

From World War II through the 1970s, the monetary policy set by the Fed was successful with inflation, growth and interest rates staying low. "There was more inflation and less unemployment during the two war periods. But with the decade of the '70s came a painfully different story."

There was a low growth rate and the baby boom began to come of age and hit the labor market. Meanwhile, productivity dropped and prices shot up, she summarized.

The monetary restraint policy practiced by the Fed then involved slowing down the rate of growth of the Gross National Product. But in October 1979, the Fed reversed its policy and "turned the system upside down."

"We had a large number of problems then. There was a declining international value of the dollar and high interest rates. We now control the supply of reserves. It's not possible to control interest rates, and so they have fluctuated over the past 2 1/2 years."

The board of governors had "hoped to get through this without a major recession. However, inflation has been faster than expected and it was due to the surplus gasoline, although that isn't good news for you," she said to the audience whose primary interest lies in petroleum.

Lowering gas prices have resulted in "greatly improved prices in the economy."

She confessed her doubts that the oil cartel — Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries — will carry the clout in the future that it

Pym taking plan back to Britain

WASHINGTON (AP) — British Foreign Secretary Francis Pym will carry back to London a new American plan to avert war with Argentina over the Falkland Islands, a well-informed British source said Friday.

But the source said the American plan is "not satisfactory" from the British point of view and leaves "a great deal to be desired."

The "American-label" plan emerged in nearly 10 hours of talks over two days between Pym and U.S. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr.

The source, whose name cannot be divulged but who was authorized to talk with reporters, said it is "not inconceivable" that British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher would reject the American proposal.

But if that happens he said it is "also not inconceivable that Mr. Haig would ignore that" and proceed with his attempts to mediate the dispute.

"The ideas are from the British point of view unsatisfactory," the source said. "But the question is not do we like them. But, rather, are we prepared to live with them as American ideas to carry the negotiating process forward?" he asked.

He said that is a question that only Prime Minister Thatcher can answer.

As Pym left for the airport and his flight back to London after his third meeting of the day with Haig, he said he and the secretary had spent "considerable time" putting together the conflicting positions.

"That's as far as we can take the process at the moment," he said.

Asked whether the British government finds the new proposal unacceptable, he replied, "I've never disguised to you that there are difficulties and difficulties do indeed remain. We are going to do, and I am doing, everything that it is possible to do to achieve a peaceful settlement. The next stage is for Mr. Haig to decide."

Pym took off for London about 8:30 p.m.

The ambassador told reporters earlier at the British embassy that while he will do "all that is humanly possible to avoid a conflict, Britain is determined to use force if the crisis cannot be resolved peacefully."

Pym said that while negotiations continue "of course the (Reagan) administration must remain unaligned with one side or the other."

Pym did not seek nor was he offered "specific assurances on that score," the source said.

He said the British government is confident that if the United States cannot negotiate a peaceful solution and is faced with a choice between a democracy and a close ally in Britain and an authoritarian regime in Argentina, "between the aggressor and his victim," that the United States will align itself with Britain without being asked.

"I'm not saying force is about to be used," he said. "I've merely declined to say that it isn't."

Water highlights candidates' forum

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Water bubbled up as the most popular issue from the audience during a candidates forum Friday morning, but not one of the candidates admitted to being the source for a solution. Organized by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce as a segment of its 64th annual convention headquartered at The Midland Hilton, the forum featured 16 candidates for statewide offices. While intended to give convention goers a chance to meet the candidates and hear their spiels, it evolved into a last-chance for the politicians to get one more jab in at their opponents or to answer the latest charges.

Answers varied on the water question. Max Sherman, Democratic candidate for attorney general, claimed that West Texas has the job to convince the rest of the state of its need for water. "It's an inter-related economy; if we hurt, the rest of the state hurts," he said.

Raymond Frank, Republican contender for comptroller, answered, "I

Daylight-saving time change time here again

WASHINGTON (AP) — At one time or another both the House and Senate have approved an extension of daylight-saving time beyond the current six months. But so far the two sides of Congress have been unable to agree at the same time.

And as daylight-saving time begins for another summer this weekend, congressional sources say there is virtually no likelihood an extension will be approved this year.

The House approved legislation last October that would begin the longer daylight hours on the first weekend in March instead of the last weekend in April as currently is the law. But that legislation is bogged down in the Senate Commerce Committee.

Eleven of 17 members of the committee oppose an extension and many of those senators don't like daylight-saving time at all.

"If you live on a western fringe of a time zone, daylight-saving time is the pits," says an aide to Sen. Wendell H. Ford, D-Ky. Because of the zone changes, communities in such areas already have longer afternoon daylight under standard time, she said.

'FOCUS' begins Sunday

"FOCUS," a new weekly feature about Midland oil and business leaders, will make its debut Sunday in the Energy-Business Section.

Oilman, rancher and commercial developer Clayton Williams Jr., who is again putting his imprint on the Tall City, will be the first subject. He will recount his life from when he began to work in the third grade to the present day as owner of 17 companies and developer of ClayDesta Plaza in north Midland.

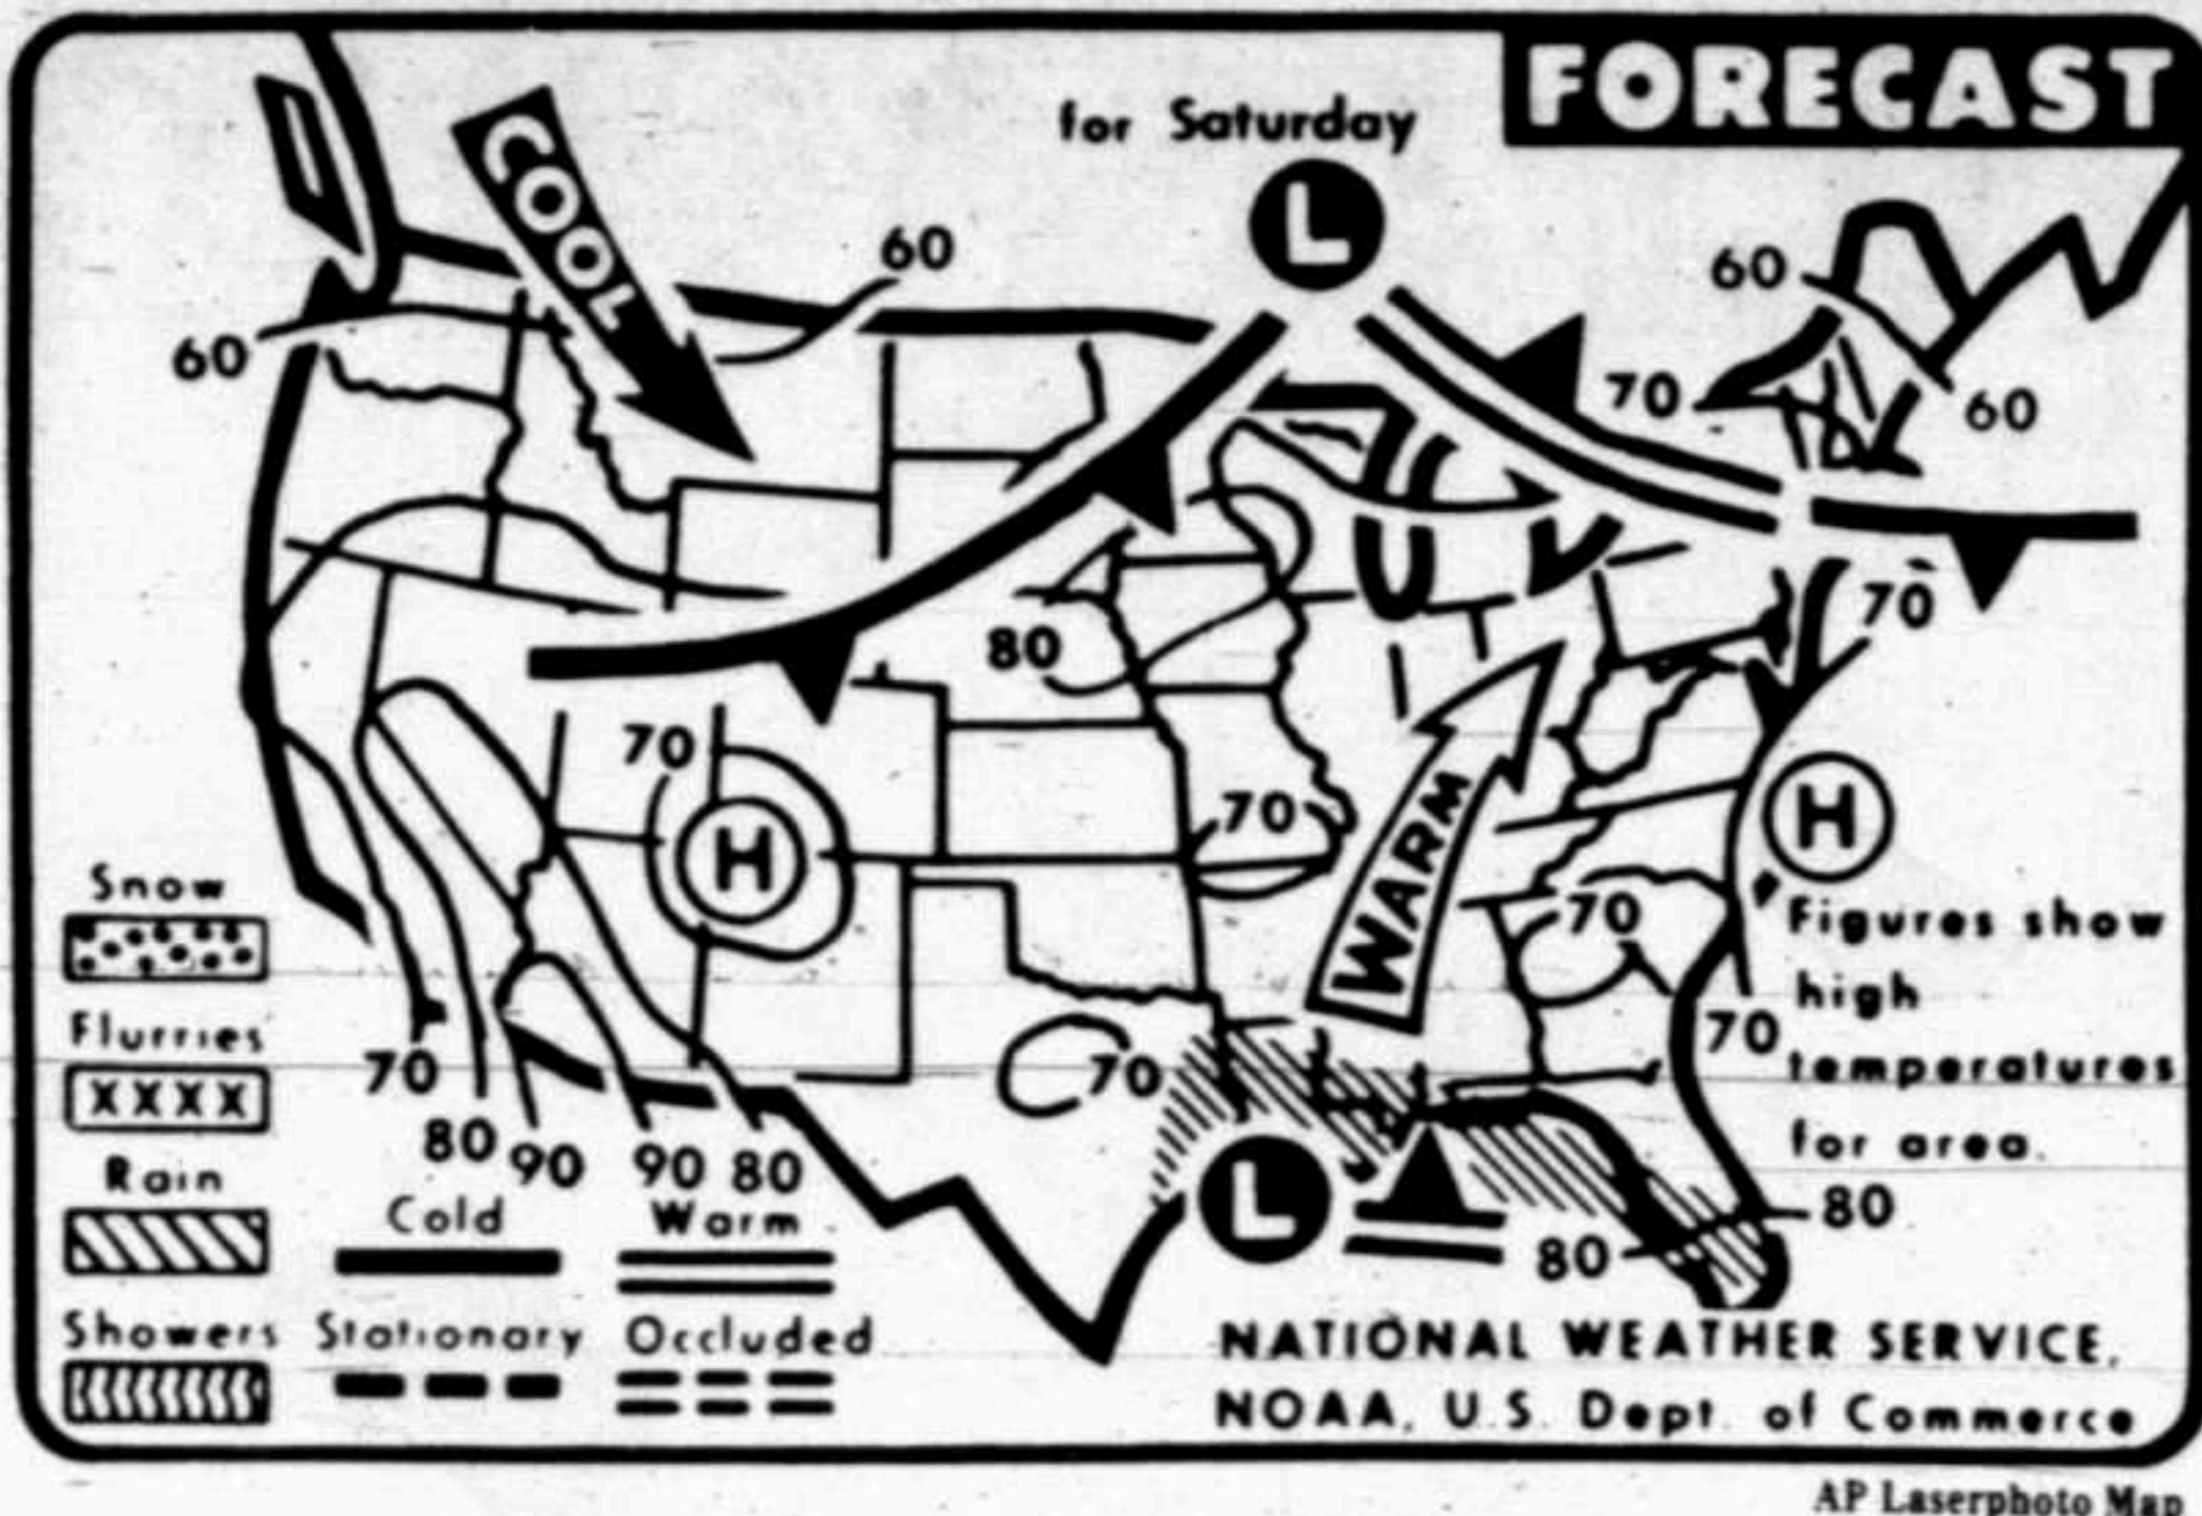

Be watching for "FOCUS" and read about some of the interesting people who are making Midland what it is and what it will be...this Sunday and every Sunday in the Energy-Business Section of

don't know of a solution."

PETE SNELSON, Democrat seeking the land commissioner's post, said, "It's not just a West Texas problem. There are no provincial solutions; it's a whole state problem."

David Young, Democrat seeking the gubernatorial nomination, replied, "There needs to be a lot of water technology research and stricter pollution standards. We're not in the position to give details of a plan yet."

Sitting in one room, Democrat Warren G. Harding, who is under felony indictment, defended his term as state treasurer and claimed that he had never violated the laws of Texas.

Meanwhile, in another room sat Lane Denton, also seeking the post of state treasurer on the Democratic ticket, proclaiming that "we're going to have a new state treasurer come January 1983. It will be someone who believes very strongly in public trust and accountability" and the audience knew Denton wasn't talking about re-electing Harding.

Harding gave an accounting of his life, starting with his birth on a farm in Collin County and progressing up to his first job as a county treasurer. Under his tutelage as state treasurer, he claimed the state's investments made $306.8 million in 1981. For the three years of his term, that interest has totaled $800 million, he claimed, or more than any other administration in Texas.

The felony indictments stemmed from his using a state employee to write thank-you notes, Harding said. "It has marred my campaign. I don't write any of these laws, but I administer them well."

IN THE MEANTIME, Denton talked of setting up a comprehensive cash management system, getting the best market rates on tax dollars and installing the latest electronic system.

Snelson, of Midland, defended remarks made earlier this week that were critical of one of his proposals involving mining rights during the last session of the legislature.

"It's nothing more than a political charge," he began. "I worked with the Land Office to draw up that plan. I felt the landowners had a role to play in developing the minerals. We have to have cooperation of the landowners if the minerals are ever to develop." And his proposal actually only included those minerals which had been excluded under earlier laws.

In outlining the duties of the land

Pete Snelson, left, of Midland takes his turn during a Meet the Candidates forum Friday morning in the Midland Hilton. Snelson is seeking the Democratic nomination for land commissioner in the May 1 primary.

commissioner and General Land Office, Snelson said it administers public lands for public education. The money from leases flows into the land office but is sent on to the Permanent School Fund and is administered by the State Board of Education. Incumbent land commissioner Bob Armstrong has managed his office effectively, said Snelson, but after Armstrong's 10-year tenure he wants to take "a good management review."

Also on the Democratic ticket for land commissioner was George Fore. Placed in an adjacent room to Snelson, the cattle rancher advocated reduced petroleum production to keep reserves for future generations. Instead of state revenues coming primarily from petroleum, he suggested the state turn to mining revenues.

In addition, Fore called for a resources education program in schools, monitoring of the ground water table and keeping nuclear waste storage sites out of Texas.

ON THE REPUBLICAN side of that table sat Woodrow Glasscock Jr., former mayor of Hondo. He opposed any plan to allow veterans to purchase homes under the Veterans Land Fund. Seeking the post of governor on the Democratic ticket was David Young, who said he has always been an "aspiring statesman." His qualifications, he said, include "love of Texas, freedom, ideals and concern about imbalance in state government."

He contended that the State Legislature and executive branch are dominated by "lawyers, lobbyists and corporations."

Young said he is opposed to the new federalism idea proposed by President Reagan in which states take over control of various federally-funded programs.

"It's a pre-Civil War ideology... more of a Clements-Reagan philosophy," he said. Calling it "callous," he added that the plan is a "step backward to survival of the fittest."

Coming up on the lieutenant governor slate on the Democratic ticket was Troy Skates, a 20-year Navy veteran who then spent 20 years in his own business. He called for more highway patrol officers, better pay for teachers and a change in the law to allow veterans to purchase homes under the Veterans Land Fund.

HE ALSO CALLED for every Texan between 18 and 65 to donate $1 a year to a disaster fund and then Texas wouldn't have to wait on federal money when a disaster, such as a tornado, hit.

As with Young, Skates was opposed to new federalism. "This governor (Clements) don't care if you die or exist. There's a clan down there (in Austin)."

Raymond Frank, Republican candidate for state comptroller, who claimed he "saw the light" and switched from the Democratic party, later was asked to explain that "light."

"God didn't descend upon me," he replied, saying that he was a "tightwad" and had tired of watching Democratic county commissioners in Austin "spend, spend, spend."

blame can be laid on the rising unemployment, she said. But she pointed out that even as the employment rolls grow as the recession declines, the deficit will remain.

Part of that remaining deficit will come from the international valuation of the dollar.

"You can't conduct domestic policy in a vacuum in the U.S. No longer is the U.S. policy confined to within its borders. Our policies impact directly onto the international valuation of the dollar and this country's imports and exports are rising," she said. Looking ahead, she noted that the baby boom children of the '60s have been absorbed into the mainstream and now are demanding goods and services.

High interest rates have priced people out of the housing market, she acknowledged, but denied that the Federal Reserve can be traced as the source for poor car sales.

In looking at automobile sales, she said, figures reflected only about a 12 percent increase in interest costs while the price to maintain the vehicle had jumped far above that.

"They simply priced themselves out of the market," she said of automobile manufacturers.

In one of his first official speeches as president of the 132-county West Texas Chamber of Commerce, Kloesel said his goals include contributing to specific action programs, promoting a more active and involved membership and strengthening the financial structure.

"I'm humbled by the responsibility you've passed on to me," he told the audience. "We're going to do a good job."

Wood lauds Texas economy, says state doing well

By LESLIE HAINES Energy and Business Writer

Texas is in "excellent shape" and is attracting more new industry and more jobs than almost any state in the Union, although other Sun Belt states outspend Texas in advertising and promotion, per capita.

"Our recession started later, is less severe, and will end sooner" than elsewhere, said Charles B. Wood, the new executive director of the Texas Industrial Commission. Wood spoke Friday to the 64th annual convention of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce in Midland.

He cited many impressive statistics showing the health of the Texas economy. "We have the lowest unemployment rate of any industrialized state. Between 1970 and 1980, we added more new industry than any other state and our population growth was second highest in the nation. We ranked third with personal income in 1980."

The robust Texas economy is the result of cooperation between business and state government leaders, Wood said.

"Fortunately, we ride piggyback on our industrial allies," Wood said, adding he would like to see "even wider" cooperation between industry, city, county and state officials.

"This town is moving fast. People here are nervous because they can't find a recession." — Charles B. Wood

The Texas 2000 Commission recently ordered by Gov. Bill Clements determined Texas must add 165,000 new jobs annually to the economy. According to data from the TIC, this many jobs, and more, have been added in each of the last two years, Wood said.

This record was achieved in spite of the fact other Sun Belt states devote more money per capita to their advertising budgets and to industrial development programs, Wood said. Texas targeted $89,000 last year for advertising, while South Carolina, for example, spent $500,000 and Florida spent $1.3 million, he said.

Texas spends 15 cents per capita on industrial development, Wood said; but Arkansas spends $1.55.

Texas can deliver the favorable business atmosphere it boasts of, Wood said. "Our overseas contacts tell us Texas has a favorable image, and when they get here, it's what we said it would be."

The industrial revenue bond program used in Texas is another big factor, Wood told the West Texas Chamber group. Since 1980, a little more than $1.5 billion in bonds has been approved, creating 32,500 new jobs directly and another 48,300 indirectly, he said.

In West Texas in the past two years, 81 bond projects were approved, creating new jobs for almost 18,000 people, Wood said. "On these bonds, the average interest rate was 10 1/2 percent, which is good in this capital-intensive

Mattox talks on utilities in Midland

Candidates began to run into each other Friday afternoon — only eight days before the May 1 primary — as Jim Mattox walked into Chaparral Aviation for a brief news conference and ran face-to-face into Max Sherman on his way out of Midland.

Both are running for state attorney general on the Democratic ticket. Also on that slate are Jack Ogg and John Hannah.

During his final appearance in Midland before the Day of Decision, Mattox reiterated his earlier stands to set up a strong consumer representation section of the attorney general's office, to take on public utilities requesting rate hikes and to institute a litigation section in the state office.

"Right now the consumer has no real voice in rate increase requests made by the utility companies," Mattox charged. "The attorney general's office needs a Unit of Consumer Representation that would speak up for the consumer before the Public Utility Commission and other state agencies."

Consumers are losing at both ends of the deal, he contended. If a utility company makes a bad managerial decision, it still is guaranteed a profit.

Southwestern Bell, he cited as an example, is getting a fair return on their investment. "Yet, they ask for rate increases far in excess of what they hope to get."

And noting that Bell sometimes has put a rate increase into effect before gaining final approval from the Public Utilities Commission, Mattox said the PUC could stop the telephone company from taking such actions.

After Sherman and Mattox had exchanged pleasantries and Sherman had departed Midland, Mattox commented that his opponent had voted against "utility regulation when he was in the Senate. Utility companies are backing him in this race."

In setting up a litigation unit, Mattox contended that the state would save money by not doling out dollars to outside legal firms.

Describing himself as a middle of the road person who thinks conservatively on business issues and progressively on social issues, such as civil rights and women's rights, Mattox said he is a person that Gov. Bill Clements can't bully.

"Our governor is a pretty difficult man to get along with, and it's helpful if the governor and attorney general can work together," he said. "If he thinks he can bully someone, he'll bully them. I'm not one to be bullied."

According to Mattox, the latest polls show him ahead although it also reflects that 30 percent of the voters are still undecided. "A lot of things could happen in these last eight days."

area.

"The industrial revenue bond system is doing what it's supposed to do."

Wood discounted the alleged losses to the Federal Treasury because of the use of tax-free revenue bonds, at least as far as Texas' contributions are concerned.

Through the tax-free bonds, $79 million was lost to the Treasury in direct taxes, but federal income taxes of $372 million were generated by the many new jobs created, in the form of Social Security and other payments, he said.

"The bottom line to all this is that we've created 80,000 additional jobs for Texans, and had a net gain to the federal government of $293 million in new taxes, and that's pretty substantial."

Wood said he was amazed at Midland's growth, which he called "symptomatic of Texas' growth. This town is moving fast. People here are apparently nervous because they can't find a recession."

The purpose of the Texas Industrial Commission is to promote new jobs for the state, offering assistance to industries in site location and technical and financial problems, Wood said.

"We're in excellent shape in Texas," he concluded.

UTPB students have chance for Mexico trip

ODESSA — Students at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin once again will have an opportunity to combine study and travel this summer.

Panorama of Mexico, Univ. 489.01, with final destination Mexico City, can be taken for three hours of undergraduate or graduate credit in history or literature. The course also can be taken through ENCORE, the no-grade option to learning.

Classes will meet from 5:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Mondays and Wednesdays beginning June 1, with the trip scheduled June 18-21.

Dr. Frank N. Samponaro, UTPB associate professor of history, and Dr. Genaro J. Perez, assistant professor of Spanish, will be co-teaching the course.

"Before the trip, we will be studying the history and literature of Mexico," Samponaro said.

"Students who participated in the trips to Merida or Spain are eligible to take this course for credit, since the subject matter is different," he noted.

Samponaro said another trip is already being planned for future semesters to include visits to Peru, France or Italy.

Approximate cost of the trip is $450, which includes round trip airfare from Midland Regional Airport, three nights accommodation (double occupancy) at Geneva Hotel in the heart of "Zona Rosa," transfers, luggage tips, hotel tax and a full-day tour June 19.

The group will leave at 8:45 a.m., arriving in Mexico City at 2:21 p.m. June 18. The rest of the afternoon is at leisure.

A full-day tour will begin at 9 a.m. June 19. The tour will include the National Palace, Metropolitan Cathedral, Basilica of Our Lady Guadalupe, travel to the Pyramids and return. The tour also includes a drive through Chapultepec Park and residential districts and visits to the University City and Plaza of Three Cultures.

June 20 and the early part of June 21 are free for personal sightseeing. The return flight is scheduled to depart at 1:05 p.m. June 21, with arrival scheduled for 7:40 p.m. at Midland/Odessa.

For more information regarding the course, contact Samponaro at 367-2116, or Perez at 367-2249.

Search continues for missing worker

INTRACOASTAL CITY, La. (AP) — Searchers used sonar equipment Friday to look for a helicopter and an oil worker missing since the chopper crashed in the Gulf of Mexico with 12 aboard, killing the pilot.

Ten men were rescued after the crash Thursday in rough seas Thursday. An air-sea search continued Friday for the missing worker, J.G. Nelson of Jeanerette, La., said Exxon USA spokesman Dick Dorney.

Dorney said a search boat was using sonar to scan the 60-foot-deep water, trying to find the sunken helicopter. Divers were standing by.

He said the helicopter, owned by Exxon and operated by Rotor-Aids Inc., was taking 10 oil workers inland from Exxon's High Island 343 platform when it went down about 45 miles southwest of Intracoastal City. The chopper had been headed to Exxon's Intra-coastal City terminal.

Learn of 'scarlet' affairs at UTPB talk

ODESSA — Intrigue, passion and deep, dark secrets will be discussed Wednesday as Dr. Margaret Neussendorfer, associate professor of literature at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin, will present a lecture pertaining to the novel, "The Scarlet Letter," written by Nathaniel Hawthorne in the middle 1800s.

Hosted by the UTPB literature club and scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in the Devonian Room on the UTPB campus, the lecture will reveal some new information on the family background surrounding the novel.

According to Ms. Neussendorfer, the talk will center around discoveries she made as a result of research done on Elizabeth Palmer Peabody, a relative of Hawthorne's. She added that her research involves discoveries of extramarital affairs, an illegitimate daughter and anonymous letters, all of which frame the background for Hawthorne's novel.

Ms. Neussendorfer, who was named a research associate at Mary Ingraham Bunting Institute of Radcliffe College for 1979-80, was one of 29 women selected to pursue independent scholarly and artistic work on the studies of Elizabeth Palmer Peabody. She also has received grants for manuscript research from the American Philosophical Society and The American Council of Learned Societies and has recently returned from the Library of Congress where she did additional manuscript work in the National Archives.

The lecture is free and open to the public.

Apparent murder-suicide discovered in Florida

PERRY, Fla. (AP) — Three children and two adults were shot and killed Friday in an apparent murder-suicide, Taylor County Sheriff Grady Murphy said.

He identified the victims as Lois Sadler, 55, and Marshall Cash, 35, and her two children, Anthony Tonaine, 7, and Joseph Tonaine, 6. Another child for whom Ms. Cash was baby-sitting also was killed, but Murphy was withholding the identity pending notification of his parents.

"All of them were shot from one to four times apiece," Murphy said.

"At this time it is my opinion that it was a murder-suicide situation," the sheriff said, adding he believes Sadler was the gunman.

He said Ms. Cash's home burned down recently and that she and her two children were staying with Sadler until she made new living arrangements.

"They'd had some words last week and she apparently was a pretty heavy drinker," Murphy said. Perry is about 50 miles south of Tallahassee.

Acting Perry police chief Slim Ivester said the weapon, a .22-caliber automatic pistol, was found at Sadler's feet and that his body was in a chair in the living room of the house. The woman's body was found lying on a couch across from him and the children were found in a back room.

Suit burns cause suit

HOUSTON (AP) — A technician severely burned while testing a suit designed to be used by space shuttle astronauts sued a New York firm Friday that manufactured the suit's oxygen pack regulator.

Robert A. Mayfield and his wife, Brenda, of nearby League City, filed the suit in federal court here against Carleton Controls Corp. of East Aurora, N.Y., seeking unspecified damages.

Mayfield, 26, was testing the spacesuit under high pressure oxygen at a Johnson Space Center laboratory in April 1980 when it "burst into flames," the suit said.

Mayfield received burns over 32 percent of his body and massive scars, and has suffered "permanent impairment" to his sweat glands and an intolerance to heat and cold, said Harvill Weller, the couple's attorney.

To Haviland Strode-Jackson, seen here displaying his military miniatures which are on exhibit at Midland County Library, collecting the objects reflects the nostalgia of lost boyhood. The Midlander began collecting toy soldiers at 8 years of age and undertook more serious acquisition 15 years ago. "As a child, I used to have grandparents in England who, as a Christmas present, would send me a box of toy soldiers," he says. "Because I had toy soldiers as a young boy, the fascination has held over." That modest beginning has resulted in a collection of approximately 150 pieces, representing military eras such as medieval Europe, the American Revolution and World War II, and includes several of his own design. Some of the pieces, says the 39-year-old former resident of Brea, Calif., are "one of a kind."

Sul Ross president says pride causes success

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Bob Richardson seemed to be sitting high like a proud cowboy on a trusted mount.

Richardson is holding the reins on Sul Ross State University, which, he proudly told the Midland Downtown Lions Club this week, is "the best-kept secret in this part of the country."

"We were Western down there before it got popular in New York," the Sul Ross president said of the Alpine university, a liberal arts college of 1,514 enrollment in Big Bend Country in mountainous southwestern Texas.

"We have something to go with our cowboy hats down at Sul Ross," which is observing its 65th anniversary this year and which was named after Lawrence Sullivan Ross, a Texas governor, president of Texas A&M University and Texas Ranger.

That "something" down at Sul Ross is pride and substance, said Richardson, a certified public accountant who has been Sul Ross' president for the past six years.

"Sul Ross is a class outfit," he touted. "What we do, we do extremely well." He mentioned Sul Ross' offerings, including the humanities, the sciences and the fine arts.

The Sul Ross president said he tells incoming freshmen that they can gain success via Sul Ross.

"They'll have to want to," he said he tells new students at orientation. "They'll have to take primary responsibility and work like hell."

Richardson said that he has a tendency to "look at Sul Ross as a business whose product is educating people." He said that the university's recent $10.2-million renovation of academic buildings was "quite cost-effective" and was about one-third of the cost of constructing new buildings.

The Sul Ross president said that the academic faculty members are "bright. They work hard and they're interested in their students." The teaching faculty could "stack up quality-wise with anybody's (university)."

"We have some real high-class folks down there," he said.

Richardson, who came to Sul Ross by way of The University of Texas at Austin and who said that if he had an opportunity to get educated all over again he would attend Sul Ross rather than UT, said "We're proud of what that 'People are there at we do,' he said. 'We're a Sul Ross because they proud people.'"

Government says lumber industry may be hurting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lumber interests, caught holding high-priced contracts for national forest timber when the bottom fell out of the housing market, may be forced to default if the economy doesn't rebound quickly, the government says.

"I'm afraid it does (mean default) unless we see a substantial turnaround in the economy," Assistant Agriculture Secretary John Crowell, who oversees the 191 million-acre National Forest System, says.

"We are monitoring the situation" while looking for ways "to prevent severe defaults or bankruptcies we all are afraid of if things don't improve in the next year," Crowell says.

He told the Senate Appropriations interior subcommittee on Thursday that about 10 billion board feet of federal timber is currently under sales contracts at prices so high the purchaser can't afford to harvest it.

Default on those contracts would force the government to seek penalties from the purchasers, which would drive many of them into bankruptcy, he said. It would also have an effect on the industry's ability to meet future production demands once the nation's economy does strengthen.

The 10-billion board-feet in question are part of what Crowell said will probably be 40 billion board feet of timber in the national forests this year that has been sold but not cut. It is also 17 percent more timber than will be cut in the entire National Forest System this year. The system holds more than 50 percent of the nation's standing softwood sawtimber supply.

"But that may not be enough to furnish relief," he told the subcommittee.

Supplier debating antitrust appeal

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — The nation's largest supplier of health care products says it is deciding whether to appeal a federal judge's ruling that it illegally conspired to monopolize the health care products business.

U.S. District Judge Douglas W. Hillman ruled Thursday in a case filed by four smaller competitors that a contract American Hospital Supply Corp. signed with Voluntary Hospitals of America was anticompetitive and said the antitrust decision might lead to lower hospital costs.

In awarding $430,638 in damages to the competitors of American Hospital, Hillman said the contract was an attempt to monopolize or restrain trade in medical and surgical supplies in Michigan, Ohio, West Virginia, Kentucky and Indiana.

The ruling "is being studied to see if an appeal is desirable," American said in a statement released from its Evanston, Ill., headquarters.

"We would respectfully disagree with Judge Hillman," said W. Donald McSweeney, a Chicago lawyer who argued on behalf of American Hospital. "We are disappointed with this finding."

Hillman said some VHA hospitals "vigorously switched business" to American Hospital after the contract took effect July 5, 1979.

Controller front news good, bad

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — More than eight months after the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization strike, it is still a "good news/bad news" situation for controllers, passengers and the aviation industry.

The good news is that there have been no aircraft accidents shown to result from the controller shortage or inadequately trained controllers. The number of reports of near mid-air collisions or operational errors is less than before the strike. There will be some easing of restrictions at the busiest airports. Overtime for controllers is reported returning to normal levels.

THE BAD NEWS IS flight cutbacks are still causing delays for passengers and problems for an airline industry already hurt by recession and air fare wars. There are only about half as many controllers as there were before the strike. A flood of applicants produced only a trickle of controller school graduates, who need on-the-job training before they actually handle air traffic. It will be mid-1984 before things return to normal, by Federal Aviation Administration estimates that some pilots think are optimistic.

For controllers who walked off the job, there is additional bad news in that few have been rehired. For those who crossed picket lines to remain at their posts, the bad news is that Congress still has not acted on legislation providing an average 6.6 percent pay boost, and they are spending a higher percentage of their workday handling traffic.

For passengers, the major strike-produced changes are fewer flights available and the likelihood that they will be sitting out delays on the ground rather than circling in the air due to safety precautions triggered by the controller shortage.

"There are still delays, and there probably will continue to be some delays," said Fred Farrar, an FAA spokesman.

"But, for the most part, it is working pretty well. Airline pilots say the system is working even better than before."

A SPOKESMAN FOR the Air Line Pilots Association says ALPA has not taken a position that things are better than they were, but he adds some pilots have voiced that view.

The ALPA spokesman agrees with Farrar that airline safety has not been jeopardized by the controller shortage, but he attributes the favorable statistics to the reduction in "capacity," aviation jargon for the number of flights.

The airline industry is ailing primarily because of the recession and "cutthroat competition" brought on by deregulation of the industry three years ago, the ALPA spokesman said. He said those problems would be present if there had not been a strike, but the shortage of controllers "probably made it worse to some degree" because of the flight reductions.

As evidence that air travel remains safe, Farrar said the number of unconfirmed reports of near misses in the air average about 4.4 per week, compared to a pre-strike level of 8.3 weekly. The number of reports of operational errors — instances where aircraft are closer to each other than FAA rules allow — is running about 6.3 a week, compared to 11.9 reports on a weekly average before the strike.

Those statistics come at a time where there are only about 84 percent of the flights that there were in July. The FAA estimates it will be May of 1983 before the number of flights is back to the pre-strike level, and July of 1984 "before things return completely to normal," according to Farrar.

Even when back to normal, there will not be as many controllers as there were before the strike because the FAA contends they had been overstaffed. The FAA plans a peak of 12,500 controllers, compared to more than 16,000 before the strike. About 11,500 were fired by President Reagan when they refused to return to work after the strike began on Aug. 3. About 50 have been rehired as controllers.

"THEY (THE REHIRED controllers) were able to prove — and we mean prove — that they were either frightened or harassed or had other legitimate reasons for not coming back to work at the deadline," Farrar said.

A call for controller trainees brought more than 115,000 persons interested in a job with a starting pay of $15,922 and a top pay of $51,596 — excluding overtime — for an experienced controller in a busy airport.

Most could not pass muster. Some did not even try. About half of the respondents did not show up for the initial tests. And only about half of those who showed up for the tests got a qualifying score of 70 percent or higher.

Between Aug. 11 and the end of March, 2,029 trainees were admitted to the FAA Academy in Oklahoma City for either 12 weeks training for jobs in the 20 air route traffic control centers that handle traffic between airports or the 15-week course for jobs in airport terminals handling traffic in the vicinity of airports. Of that number, little more than half — 1,166 — have graduated. They will have about 21 months of on-the-job training, reduced from a three-to-four year period before the strike, before they are allowed to control air traffic.

The FAA suspects the high drop-out and flunk-out rates occur because those groups included candidates taken not only from the top scores among the post-strike applicants but also from lower scorers from a list of applicants who had been waiting up to two years for a chance to enter the academy.

That theory will be tested with the 1,385 applicants now in training who come primarily from the high scorers on the post-strike tests and from future high scorers on a new list that will be drawn from applicants who respond and qualify when the FAA advertises next month for controllers.

NONE OF THE post-strike FAA Academy graduates are far enough along in their training to be among the 8,300 "operational controllers," a group that includes supervisory personnel who are now handling traffic and some controllers who are not yet qualified to handle all of the duties of a "fully developed" controller.

In addition to reducing flights, the FAA has taken other steps to "take the edge" off the shortfall in controllers. About 100 military controllers are doing support work but not actually controlling civilian air traffic because of the additional training it would require. Also doing support work are about 1,200 temporary "flight data specialists" who are former military controllers or furloughed pilots.

The manpower shortfall is not universal. The busier centers and airports and those with "more militantly PATCO" controllers have been the hardest hit. O'Hare International Airport at Chicago is among those on both counts. O'Hare is among the 22 busiest airports where there were flight changes intended to reduce the "peaks and valleys" and spread the number of flights throughout the day. There will be some easing of those restrictions at 15 of the 22 airports starting this weekend, Farrar said.

Despite the continuing shortage, Farrar contended that the 60-hour workweeks in the wake of the strike are over, that most controllers are working 40-hour weeks and a "worst-case" situation is a 48-hour week.

But during their workdays, controllers are spending more time in the demanding job of actually handling air traffic than before the strike.

In the pre-strike days, an eight-hour work day would include about four hours handling traffic and four hours attending training, having lunch, taking breaks, or performing other duties. Now, a controller working in an airport tower spends about six and a half hours each day handling traffic, and a center controller spends about five hours and 45 minutes each day in traffic-handling.

Nothing dull about state comptroller primary race

DALLAS (AP) — Nothing is dull about the May 1 primary elections for state comptroller.

The incumbent has recently admitted being an alcoholic. His challenger in the Democratic primary is hoping voters will think he's somebody he's not.

On the Republican ballot, one of the candidates is a former Democrat. The other GOP candidate has been accused of illegally raising and spending campaign contributions.

Most of the headlines so far have been grabbed by incumbent Democrat Bob Bullock and Republican challenger Mike Richards. They have paid little heed to their primary opponents, choosing instead to battle each other in the race for state comptroller.

Bullock, 52, first elected the state's top tax official in 1974, complained that Richards illegally raised and spent contributions for his comptroller's race before officially designating a campaign treasurer. Richards called the charge "unfounded" and said Bullock was just trying to scare him out of the race.

Richards, a one-term state senator from Harris County, characterized Bullock as "a human tragedy...in every aspect of his life."

While Bullock and Richards trade charges, their primary opponents fight on.

Challenging Bullock is Democrat Robert C. Calvert, 51, of Hurst. Richards, 44, faces Republican Raymond Frank, 56, of Austin, the former Democratic sheriff of Travis County.

Calvert hasn't raised a lot of money and says his campaign largely consists of visits to newspaper offices around the state. He travels mostly by air with the 30-day airline pass his wife gave him.

Calvert's main campaign strategy, he says, will be name recognition. Not his own name, however.

Except for the middle initial, his name is the same as the late Robert S. Calvert, who served as comptroller for 26 years before retiring in 1974.

Death Valley is myriad of sights

By JOY STILLEY

DEATH VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — Furnace Creek, Funeral Mountains, Coffin Peak, Dry Bone Canyon, Hells Gate, Devils Golf Course, Dantes View. The awesome names suit the awesome scenery in Death Valley, lowest point in the Western Hemisphere and one of the hottest, driest places in the world.

The 3,000-square-mile National Monument in California and Nevada, some 250 miles northeast of Los Angeles and about 100 miles west of Las Vegas, is an area of stunning contrasts.

Summer temperatures of 120 degrees are common, with a July 1913 reading of 134 degrees a record maximum for North America. But in January of that same year the temperature plunged to 15 degrees, the lowest ever recorded on the floor of the valley.

Though the average annual rainfall is less than 2 inches, the higher elevations are usually covered with snow from November to May. Sand dunes near Stovepipe Wells cover 14 square miles, and salt flats stretch for 200 square miles, stark terrain compared to the forested mountains.

A visitor approaching Death Valley from the west on California state highway 190 can descend from Towne Pass at nearly 5,000 feet to Bad-water, the lowest point in the Western Hemisphere at 282 feet below sea level, in less than an hour's drive.

Hikers who reach the summit of Telescope Peak at 11,049 feet, can see the highest and lowest points of the 48 contiguous states — the floor of the valley and Mount Whitney in northern California, 14,494 feet high.

Death Valley received its forbidding name from a party traveling to the California gold fields in 1849 who lost their way while looking for a shortcut. Almost out of food, they barely escaped from the desert with their lives. However, others did die there.

Borax deposits were discovered in the area in 1873, and the famous 20-mile teams hauled the wagonloads of the processed mineral 165 miles across the desert to the railroad at Mojave. The Borax Museum at Furnace Creek displays early mining tools, stagecoaches, wagons, a steam road engine and other historic equipment from that time.

An excellent network of paved roads permits visitors to reach numerous low- and high-altitude observation points for startling views of widely varied terrain. One glance can encompass everything from an array of spectacular geological features, unusual vegetation, wild animals and fantastic multicolored rock formations to snow-topped surrounding peaks.

Other spots can be reached by bicycle or four-wheel-drive vehicle. Still others must be approached on foot, a hike in some cases requiring considerable stamina.

The best times for viewing all aspects of the monument — and for taking pictures — are early morning and late afternoon, when the terrain seems to pop forth in 3-D color.

Tourists can drive to several "ghost towns," such as Rhyolite, where the end of the golden dream left only hollowed-out ruins of stone buildings, striking reminders that a once-booming gold-rush city stood on the now-deserted site.

But the most popular attraction is Scotty's Castle, at Grapevine Canyon in the northern extremity of the valley, where guided tours take visitors through the sprawling Spanish-type house.

Despite its name, the showplace didn't belong to Walter E. Scott, a colorful Western character better known as Death Valley Scotty. He had persuaded a wealthy Chicago businessman friend, Albert M. Johnson, to start building it in 1922 as a vacation home. But he was a frequent guest and after Johnson's death in 1948 lived there for the six remaining years of his life.

Formally known as Death Valley Ranch, it was bought in 1970 by the U.S. government and is a part of the National Monument, which is administered by the National Park Service.

Because of the extreme heat, travel in the valley during the summer months is not encouraged.

Men questioned on kids' deaths

McLEAN, Ill. (AP) — Two men were questioned Friday in the deaths of two children who went out to get the mail and were later found dead, McLean County authorities said.

Sheriff Steve Brienen said in a news release that the two men were taken into custody separately Thursday, the same day the bodies of the children were found. However, State's Attorney Ron Dozier said he expected one of them to be released.

The children, 8-year-old Mary Elizabeth Roughton and her 7-year-old brother, Russell, were found beaten to death, Brienen said. McLean County Coroner William Anderson said each child suffered a skull fracture from a blow to the head.

The children disappeared Wednesday morning after walking to the post office in this central Illinois community of 800 to pick up the mail.

Their bodies were found by two deputies near a burned pickup truck in woods about a mile from their home, authorities said.

Police said the pickup truck had been reported stolen from a Pontiac service station Monday.

No date set for U.S., Nicaragua talks

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — The United States has diplomatically rejected Mexico's offer to moderate the dialogue with Nicaragua, informed sources indicated Thursday.

But that does not mean that talks between the United States and Nicaragua on easing tensions in Central America will not take place.

In fact, the United States is expected to respond "quite promptly" to Nicaragua's request that a date be set for the talks and negotiators named, one authoritative source said.

However, the State Department is making every effort to soften the impact of its still unannounced decision, although Mexico is aware of it and is "satisfied that the key role they played put the discussions on the right track," the source said.

The United States takes "a very favorable view" of Mexico's desire to help in Central America, State Department spokesman Dean Fischer said.

BUT, HE added that "we obviously reserve the right to conduct diplomatic dialog directly with Nicaragua, as well as Cuba."

Questioned about the possible imminent start of talks between the United States and Nicaragua, Fischer said he does "not have anything on that."

Will the United States start the talks when Nicaraguan foreign minister, Father Miguel D'Escoto is in Washington to attend the hemisphere foreign ministers' conference on the dispute between Argentina and the United Kingdom over the Falkland Islands next week?

"I know of no plans at this point for anyone in the department to meet with him," Fischer said.

Reminded that the Nicaraguans are demanding that Mexico be the moderator in discussions on what the United States considers the threat that Nicaraguan arms buildup and the heavy Cuban-Communist presence there pose to other Central American countries, Fischer replied:

"We have addressed our view, and a very favorable view it is, of Mexico's desire to be helpful in our diplomatic dealings with other countries in the region."

IN RESPONSE to another question, he said "I do not think there should be any doubt about our position with respect to Mexico's offer."

However, doubt there is.

Some U.S. sources have suggested that Mexico's interests in Central America are in conflict with the United States' because of Mexico's close ties with the Sandinistas.

In any case, as Assistant Secretary of State Thomas O. Enders has said, "quite promptly, we will be in touch with the Nicaraguans."

Expectations are that the United States will reply to the Nicaraguan offer to participate in talks on mending relations within a few days.

A Nicaraguan embassy spokeswoman, Angela Saballos, said that Ambassador Francisco Fiallos has visited the State Department twice to emphasize Nicaragua's willingness to enter into a dialog.

She said that Nicaragua wants the negotiations to take place in Mexico City, with Mexico as a mediator. The date for the start of the talks is up to the United States.

U.S. OFFICIALS have said that Nicaragua's reply of April 14 to an 8-point initiative that U.S. Ambassador Anthony C.E. Quainton delivered Managua April 8 was "procedural" and that it did not address all the points in the U.S. plan.

Those points included:

1. Cessation of Nicaraguan support for insurgencies in the region.
2. A declaration by the United States promising to prosecute Nicaraguan exiles for planning or launching an invasion of Nicaragua from U.S. territory under the Neutrality Act.
3. A joint pledge by the United States and Nicaragua not to interfere in each other's affairs or those of Central American or Caribbean countries.
4. A ban on heavy, offensive weapons in Central America, limits on the size of armed forces, and reduction in the numbers of foreign military advisers.

5. INTERNATIONAL policing of Central American seaports, airports and other areas to insure they are not used for arms trafficking.

6. Resumption of U.S. economic assistance to Nicaragua.

7. Confidence-building cultural and other exchanges between the two countries.

8. A Nicaraguan recommitment to "political pluralism," a mixed economy and non-alignment in foreign relations.

Neither U.S. nor Nicaraguan sources would release the text of the Nicaraguan reply to that U.S. initiative.

In Managua, though, the Sandinistas sound as if they reject it.

Voters to decide on river, reservoir link

By JOHN MORGANTHALER

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — It's 43 miles long and wider than a 12-lane freeway, a mammoth, winding ditch designed to carry California's lifeblood — water — from north to south.

On June 8, after more than a generation of fierce debate, California voters will decide whether to build the $1.3 billion Peripheral Canal.

The proposed canal is the final link between an extensive river and reservoir system in water-rich northern California and the cities and irrigated farmlands of the south. It gets its name from the path it will travel around the periphery of northern California's lush Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta at the northeastern tip of San Francisco Bay.

Currently, 250 million gallons of water flow daily through the meandering channels of the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta to the northern end of the California Aqueduct, a 400-mile water project completed a decade ago.

THE PERIPHERAL Canal and $4.1 billion in related reservoir and pump projects are intended to double that flow of water to the south.

The proposal has divided Californians sharply — principally north vs. south, where about 70 percent of California's population lives, and agricultural vs. environmental interests.

Pollster Mervin Field's latest survey showed 68 percent of the voters in Southern California favor the canal, while only 16 percent of voters in the northern part of the state support it. Field reported 71 percent of the voters in the north and only 15 percent in the south oppose the project.

In the debate, there has not even been agreement on basic facts, such as whether the canal will help or hurt the environment, whether water will cost more or less because of it, and whether the project will produce the water its sponsors say it will.

State engineers say the combined projects listed on the ballot as Proposition 9, including the Peripheral Canal, would nearly double the "yield" of the State Water Project over the next 20 years.

THE PROJECT, authorized by voters in 1960 and constructed over the next decade, is a package of major water works aimed at improving the state's water delivery system.

The Peripheral Canal is the so-called "missing link" in the network of dams and aqueducts that ship northern water to the San Joaquin Valley and Southern California.

In 1960, the north-south fight had already been going on for years, but then Gov. Edmund G. "Pat" Brown pushed the state project bill through a reluctant Legislature and campaigned successfully for voter approval of construction bonds.

His son, Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., helped get the Peripheral Canal bill through a still-reluctant Legislature last year after a four-year fight.

But when opponents succeeded in qualifying a referendum — the first since 1952 — to force a public vote on the Legislature's action, the governor backed off. Now running for the U.S. Senate, the younger Brown says he still favors the canal, but he is not campaigning for it.

BESIDES THE Peripheral Canal, the bill would authorize two additional reservoirs in northern California, groundwater storage facilities in both northern and southern California and facilities to protect fish, wildlife and water quality in the Delta and the Suisun Marsh.

Altogether, the state says it would increase the amount of water the state project could deliver from 1.6 billion to 3.1 billion acre-feet a year.

In the Field poll, people said the biggest argument against the $5.4 billion water plan was that it was too expensive and would raise taxes. The state says it won't affect taxes because most of the cost will be paid by water users.

LI Gov. Mike Curb, who is seeking the Republican nomination for governor, says that adding all interest and bond payments, it's "a $17 to $20 billion package" that will send water bills out of sight.

Curb's opponent for the GOP gubernatorial nomination, Attorney General George Deukmejian supports the canal. Both men are from Southern California.

THE LEADING candidate for the Democratic nomination, Mayor Tom Bradley of Los Angeles, is also for it.

The Peripheral Canal would be 300 to 400 feet wide and 30 feet deep. It would be an unlined ditch, which at several places would be carried under waterways of the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta in huge siphons.

A mile-wide fish screen would prevent fish from being pumped into the canal.

Canal backers say Southern California will need the water soon because it will lose more than half of its Colorado River water, to be diverted to the Central Arizona Project starting in 1985. But opponents contend Southern California wouldn't need the water if people would conserve, and farmers worry that diverting fresh water to the south will allow salt water from San Francisco Bay to flow into the Delta, increasing salinity and damaging rich farmland.

Kids learn how to be entrepreneurs

BELFAST, Maine (AP) — An experiment in free enterprise by fifth-graders at East Belfast School produced one problem: How to slake the thirst created by their fast-selling bags of Colonel's Kernels popcorn.

With a professional approach to problem-solving nurtured by frequent corporate-style board meetings, the young entrepreneurs decided to diversify into Kool-Aid, teacher Louis Solebello Jr. said.

The idea took shape in January. Meeting as 28 shareholders, counting Solebello and a teacher's aide, the class broke up into committees to manage advertising, cooking and packaging, selling and purchasing and organization.

After leasing several corn poppers, testing the target market inside the school and buying raw materials, the students began to make Colonel's Kernels. Kicking off their sales campaign at a special school movie, the students sold 190 25-cent bags the first day, saturating a market of about 150 students. Profits were four to five cents on each bag.

Hard times ahead for Mexico

By RICARDO CHAVIRA
Copley News Service

MEXICO CITY — This city's newest and tallest skyscraper — the nearly completed 45-story headquarters of Mexico's national oil company, PEMEX, stands empty and silent these days.

Conceived in the late '70s oil boom days as a fitting edifice for Mexico's prospering petroleum company, the building has seen no construction activity for weeks. The reason: Pemex officials can't find the money to finish the building.

The structure's stark incompleteness serves as a monumental sign that this country's economy, until a year ago one of the world's most robust, is starting to falter badly.

The current global oil glut has sent PEMEX revenues tumbling $6 billion since last year. Public-sector foreign debt has doubled to $48.7 billion in the past five years. Combined with February's devaluation, which cost the peso 60 percent of its value against the dollar, these figures have some government officials and many economists and bankers here forecasting serious trouble.

The government showed official concern by announcing new austerity measures aimed at strengthening the economy and stabilizing the value of the peso.

THE MEASURES, which will be in effect through the end of the year, include a 5 percent cut in the federal budget, an $11 billion limit on new foreign credits, and a reduction of $3 billion to $4 billion in the balance of payments deficit.

The plan, announced by Treasury Secretary Jess Silva Herzog, also calls for import reductions.

Bankers and economists here are convinced that whatever the government does, there are likely to be hard times ahead, and some paint a gloomy picture of increasing social unrest and a threat to political stability.

"It is like a truck rolling down a hill, the situation we face now," said Clemente Ruz, a professor at the Center for Economic Investigation here. "The problem is that no one is stopping the truck."

The price of inaction this year, says David Colmenares, vice president of El Colegio Nacional de Economistas, a national association of economists, will be an inflation rate of about 48 percent — more than 15 percent higher than the current rate.

To make matters worse, another hefty devaluation is rumored.

"We are seeing the real possibility of this country falling into the cycle of hyperinflation followed by devaluation, a la Argentina," warned Ruz.

Such a scenario hardly seemed possible a year ago, when Mexico rose to become the fourth-largest oil producer in the world and the economy was expanding at an average annual rate of 8 percent.

MEXICO'S LEADERS during that heady period of huge oil discoveries declared that, unlike Iran or other oil-producing nations, their country would not become dependent on oil for economic growth. It would be only the "engine" to power such growth, they said.

But it was not long before the country's high officials opted to use oil earnings for rapid industrialization rather than the measured economic growth they had promised.

One immediate and very visible result of the policy was the creation of almost a million new jobs yearly — an important accomplishment in a country with chronic high unemployment.

"Lopez Portillo (the Mexican president) deserves a lot of credit for that," says a foreign banker here. "But he screwed up everything else. His thinking seemed to be that horrendous inflation and a growing foreign debt were OK as long as he could create jobs."

But inflation, which during the '70s averaged well below 20 percent, began to approach levels near 30 percent, where it has remained. As a result, non-oil exports and tourist-industry revenues — second only to petroleum as an earner of hard currency — have fallen substantially.

FACED WITH A drop in hard cash flow, Mexico has been forced to borrow heavily. Today it is the world's most heavily indebted developing nation.

"Lopez Portillo (the Mexican president) deserves a lot of credit for that (creation of jobs). But he screwed up everything else. His thinking seemed to be that horrendous inflation and a growing foreign debt were OK as long as he could create jobs."

February's devaluation was supposed to change that. The government's intention was to increase the sale of Mexican goods abroad by making them less costly and to slow the pace of capital flight to other, stronger economies.

However, the move has come under criticism because, as economists and bankers point out, the peso was already being readjusted through mini-devaluations, and a big overnight devaluation actually helped fuel inflation.

One example of how the devaluation didn't work, said Ruz, was the government's recent increase of between 10 and 30 percent in the minimum wage, depending on the job. That action was meant to offset the loss of consumer buying power caused by the devaluation. However, the foreign banker notes, at most only 8 percent of workers' buying power was lost, making the recent increase overly generous and inflationary.

AND THE RESULT, argues Ruz, is that when price controls on a wide range of articles are lifted next month, prices will zoom — nullifying any benefits of the wage increase.

TO ALL INTERESTED AGENCIES, GROUPS, AND PERSONS

On or about April 19, 1982 the above named City of Midland will request the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development Act request the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to release Federal Funds under Title 1 of the Housing & Community Development Act of 1974 (P.L. 93-380) for the following project:
Parks Community Development-
Improvements to Huff, Sparks, & Washington Parks
Midland, Texas

Notice of Finding No Significant Impact on the Environment

It has been determined that such request for release of funds will not constitute an action significantly affecting the quality of the human environment and, accordingly, the above named City of Midland has decided not to prepare an Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (P.L. 91-190).

The reasons for such decision not to prepare such Statement are as follows:
1) NEIS enhances the neighborhood parks in the area.
2) NEIS upgrade the quality of these parks.

NEIS will make the parks more attractive & useful to the residents in the area.
An Environmental Review Record respecting the within project has been made by the above-named City which documents the environmental review of the project and copies fully sets forth the reasons why such Statement is not required. This Environmental Review Record is on file at the above address and is available for public examination and copying upon request, at Room 205, between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.

No further environmental review of such project is proposed to be conducted, prior to the request for release of Federal Funds.
All interested agencies, groups and persons desiring with this decision are invited to submit written comments for consideration by the City of Midland, P.O. Box 1152 on or before May 4, 1982.

NOTICE TO PUBLIC OF REQUEST FOR RELEASE OF FUNDS

An Environmental Review Record respecting the within project has been made by the City of Midland which documents the environmental review of the project. This Environmental Review Record is on file at the above address and is available for public examination and copying upon request.

The City of Midland will undertake the project described above with Block Grant funds from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) under Title 1 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974. City of Midland and G. Thome Akles, in his official capacity as Mayor, consent to accept the jurisdiction of the federal courts if an action is brought to enforce responsibilities in relation to environmental review, decision-making and action, and that these responsibilities have been satisfied. The legal effect of the certification is that upon its approval, the City of Midland may use the Block Grant funds, and HUD will have satisfied its responsibilities under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969. HUD will accept no objection to its approval of the release of funds and occurrence of the certification only if it is on one of the following bases: (a) that the certification was not in fact executed by the chief executive officer or other officer of application approved by HUD; or (b) that applicant's environmental review record for the project indicates omission of a required decision. Finding may be addressed to HUD in Dallas or office, Department of Housing and Urban Development, P.O. Box 10200, Dallas Texas 75207. Objections to the release of funds on bases other than those stated above will not be considered by HUD. No objection received after April 27, 1982 will be considered by HUD.

System to use human, automatic qualities

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Scientists are working on a sophisticated system for pinpointing the human factors that cause air accidents in hopes of avoiding problems with highly automated aircraft of the future. Human factors play a major role in 60 percent to 80 percent of all air accidents, said David Nagel, a flight psychologist at the Ames Research Center where an $8.2 million center to simulate flight stress is under construction.

Citing studies by the National Transportation Safety Board, Nagel said many of the human factors that cause accidents also crop up in flight simulation tests. The Mountain View lab facility, set to open in January 1984, is the first flight simulation center designed specifically to study the human element in flight safety, officials say.

Nagel, deputy director of the facility, said it will contain a mockup of an air traffic control board and two airplane cabin simulators — one based on a current model Boeing 727 and the other on a hypothetical advanced airplane of 1985.

"There's a whole bunch of problems" with highly automated systems, said Nagel. "The most straightforward of them is that pilots like to fly...they don't like to be button pushers."

For instance, Nagel said that pilots obliged to rely on automation too much could find their skills eroded.

Whale watcher's life is marine-type

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — If it's a whale you want to see, you can hop a Whale Watch boat, grab some binoculars and spot your whale.

But if you want to spot the man who launched Whale Watches 10 years ago, your job is a little tougher. Forget the binoculars; you need running shoes, preferably for webbed feet.

You can look in John Olguin's office at the Cabrillo Marine Museum, where he is co-director, but chances are you'll find an empty desk and a wall full of whale photos.

Better you should check the museum itself, where the damsel fishes and the angel sharks play. Or maybe the auditorium, where the squirmiest school kid sits spellbound while Olguin tells how he named his son Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo Olguin after the explorer who first sailed into San Pedro in 1542.

Then again, you could try the Pico Maru, the 15-foot rowboat that Olguin keeps behind the museum for days when he feels like an all-day row to Catalina for a steak dinner.

But your best bet is to wander down to the Point Fermin tide pools, where Olguin — part Santa Claus, part John Wayne, part Neptune in a plaid shirt — asks visitors in three languages to look but not take.

"Folks, this is a refuge," he says, easily alternating between English, Spanish and Japanese. "You're welcome to come, look, explore, but please, don't take anything."

Then, with a child's enthusiasm and a parent's protectiveness, Olguin follows the visitors to the pools, launching a discourse on the fanciful sea hares.

"They lay 21,000 eggs a minute, like a machine gun," he says. "But they aren't all fertilized. If they were, within a year, you wouldn't be able to open your garage door."

"These animals lived here before any animals walked on the land," he continues, gesturing at the teeming tide pool. "This is where life began."

For Olguin, this is indeed where life began. Olguin frolicked in the sands of Point Fermin as a child and saw his first whale. As a young man, he worked the lifeguard station there, continuing to monitor the gentle giant off the shore. And as an adult, he sleeps outside to maintain a constant link to the sea below.

"You can hear all the activity; the ships creaking," he says. "I can tell you when the fog comes in and when the moon comes up."

Mexican complains of policy

By MARJORIE MILLER
Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO, Calif. — U.S. officials have misinterpreted Mexican President José Lopez Portillo's silence on U.S. immigration proposals as support for this country's current policy on undocumented workers, a Mexican immigration expert said here Thursday.

Jorge A. Bustamante, Mexico's leading authority on migration and border issues, also said a proposed immigration control law would create a "virtual situation of slavery" for Mexican undocumented workers in the United States.

"It is an offense to think that someone in Mexico would accept a law underlining a sub-class for Mexican nationals," Bustamante told a national conference on Mexican affairs. He said the bipartisan bill proposed by Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., and Rep. Romano Mazzoli, D-Ky., would deny civil rights to Mexican workers in the United States.

BUSTAMANTE SAID that U.S. officials wrongly complain that the Mexican president has remained quiet on specific immigration proposals.

"The preparation of the law is an internal matter of the United States. There has been no action of government to which the Mexican government could legitimately respond," he said.

At this point in the legislative process, said Bustamante, a comment by the president would be "interference in the internal affairs of the United States."

"The silence on the part of the Mexican president has been nothing but that — silence," he said.

But he added, "Nevertheless, there have been clear signs on the part of the Mexican government that have not been received in the United States."

Bustamante said that two important Mexican leaders, Senate leader Joaquin Gamboa Pascoe and Fidel Velasquez, president of the Mexican Workers Congress, the country's largest labor federation, have been outspoken in their opposition.

But he said Americans have not been listening.

The immigration bill, which Bustamante said is almost certain to pass, would create "a virtual situation of slavery, a class of human beings that does not have the rights of human beings, the laws of the land, the rights of workers."

"We in Mexico profoundly disagree," said Bustamante, who explained he was speaking as an individual, not a government representative. Bustamante has been an unofficial adviser to Mexican Presidents Luis Echeverria and Lopez Portillo and to presidential candidate Miguel de la Madrid, who is virtually assured of election.

He made the remarks at a session of a two-day conference of Mexican and American diplomats, businessmen, journalists and scholars sponsored by the University of California, San Diego's Center for U.S.-Mexican Studies.

BUSTAMANTE SAID the Simpson-Mazzoli bill to control immigration is a political move on the part of the U.S. government to give Americans the impression it is trying to do something about the U.S. economic slump.

"The proposal is based on the premise that immigration is an ill that has to be cured with drastic measures. The proposal is made at a time when the economy of the United States is in a period of crisis with unemployment reaching 10 percent," he said.

"The proposal is going to solve one problem — a political problem not associated with the presence of undocumented workers," Bustamante said. He said he believes the demand for cheap labor, or undocumented workers, will continue and that the new law will not stop the flow.

The bill, which has been reviewed by a joint hearing of the House and Senate immigration subcommittees and generally endorsed by the Reagan administration, would make it a federal crime for employers to knowingly hire undocumented workers. It would require all job applicants to present two common identifications, such as a birth certificate and driver's license, and to sign an affidavit that they are legally eligible to work in the United States.

Employers would also be required to sign statements that they have no reason to believe they are hiring an undocumented worker. Employers would be subject to penalties of up to $2,000 and six months in jail for each illegal employee. Workers would be subject to deportation, and those who used false identification could be fined $5,000 or jailed for five years.

Bustamante said 16 states already have sanctions against employers of undocumented workers and that they have not been a successful deterrent. He said he fears the bill would give employers ammunition to intimidate their workers by threatening to turn them in for using false identification, and would subject them to the fines and possible jail sentences.

THE BILL WOULD grant amnesty to workers who came to the country before January 1980, and would allow those who arrived before 1978 permanent residency and the use of health care and social services.

But Bustamante said only a small percentage of workers would be eligible for permanent residency, since most workers come for a year or so and return. So, he said, the rest of the workers would continue to pay taxes and Social Security, but would not be allowed services or access to U.S. courts of law.

Quasar-galaxy connection stronger

Hearst Feature Service

Drawing on the most advanced equipment for studying faint starlight, astronomers have managed for the first time to identify the fuzzy light surrounding a quasar as the shining of a huge galaxy of stars.

The discovery adds significant weight to the long-held notion that quasars — distant, powerful objects emitting light and radio waves — are located at the centers of galaxies.

Until now, it had been impossible to confirm that the irregular clouds of light surrounding some of the 600 known quasars were in fact galaxies — immense assemblies of stars, dust and gas like the Milky Way. The light from them was too dim and was overpowered by the far more luminous quasars.

Astronomers from the California Institute of Technology, however, report in the latest issue of the British journal "Nature" that with a supersensitive light-gathering device they analyzed the "fuzz" around a quasar called 3C 48 and found it contained the chemical signature of starlight.

Therefore, they said, the quasar is contained in a galaxy of billions of stars.

"We believe this is the first unambiguous determination of the link between a quasar and a surrounding galaxy," said Caltech research fellow Todd A. Boroson. He and astronomy professor J. B. Oke chose this particular quasar, first discovered in 1963, because it was relatively near — about 5 billion light-years away — and had long been known to have a fuzzy wreath of light.

Though it cannot be seen with the naked eye, quasar 3C 48 is one of the brightest known. Quasars are peculiar objects. They blaze with so much power that their light output equals that of 100 super-giant galaxies. Yet quasars are probably less than one light-year across and appear as mere points of light to observers on Earth.

To generate so much energy in so small a volume, quasars are believed by many astronomers to be the visible result of a black hole — an unimaginably dense remnant of a collapsed star forming a gravitational well in space from which nothing, not even light itself, can escape. Lying invisibly at the core of a galaxy, the black hole sucks hot interstellar gas into its gravitational maw, driving the atoms to such speeds that just before they disappear forever into the black hole, they emit strong bursts of radiation in the form of light, radio waves and sometimes X-rays.

Doomsaying author says he isn't what title implies

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Best-selling author Charles Berlitz dismisses the notion that he is a prophet of doom.

"You do not have to be a prophet to see what is happening to mankind," said Berlitz, who lives in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., in an interview with the Associated Press in Caracas recently.

The 68-year-old grandson of M.D. Berlitz, the founder of the Berlitz language schools, was in Venezuela to promote his new book, "Doomsday 1999." He also plans to soon continue his lifelong search for the "lost city" of Atlantis with a diving expedition off the coast of the Bahamas.

Berlitz cites several major reasons for his prediction of the demise of man before the turn of the century.

According to scientists, an alignment of the planets in July 1969 may force a giant asteroid to crash into earth, said Berlitz.

"If this happens the minimum impact would be equivalent to a 200-million-megaton blast, which would trigger massive volcanic eruptions and earthquakes," he said.

"Even Nostradamus wrote of a great king of terror that will come out the skies to smite the earth" in this year. For me this is further proof of the asteroid theory," continued Berlitz, referring to the 16th-century French astrologer and prophet who is interpreted by some to have predicted, among other events, the rise of Adolph Hitler and World War II.

Nuclear proliferation could also lead the world to disaster either through war or accident, said the writer whose previous credits include "The Bermuda Triangle," "The Mystery of Atlantis" and "Mysteries of Forgotten Worlds."

"By 1969 there will be 44 countries capable of producing 2,000 atomic bombs a day. And that is precluding assorted terrorist organizations," he said.

"We are in great danger of blowing the world up by war or by chance. We still do not even know what to do with nuclear waste."

"Man is poisoning his own planet. He is destroying the oceans, seas and forests, his own lifeblood. Unless we get ourselves under control we will soon kill all life, leaving only mice, rats and cockroaches."

Ill-planned industrialization and overpopulation leading to scarce food resources are other factors that he predicts could lead to an insurmountable world crisis.

Yet, despite his message, Berlitz feels civilization has not lost all chance of averting Armageddon.

"I am not a prophet of doom and I am not leading a crusade. I know that there are millions of people like me who share the same fears. We could, for example, use our nuclear expertise to shoot the giant asteroid back out into space if it should start a plunge on earth."

Akins named to committee

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Midland Mayor G. Thane Akins is among 25 members of the Mayors Advisory Committee announced Friday by Gov. Bill Clements.

The panel is chaired by Mayor John Sammons, Temple.

The committee is to "examine the efficiency and effectiveness of programs now funded and managed at the local level," along with making recommendations on how to improve those programs "at the lowest possible cost to the taxpayer," Clements said in a statement.

The committee is to meet at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday in the Texas Law Center, Austin.

Administration optimistic decline heralds change

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices took the sharpest drop in 29 years last month, declining at an annual rate of 3.3 percent, the government reported Friday. The White House boasted of the "good news," even though it was largely due to a global oil glut and a steep U.S. recession.

The March figures, reflecting the first cost-of-living reduction since 1965, had the immediate effect of dampening a scheduled benefit increase in July for Social Security recipients. But coupled with the rises of earlier months, they still will get a boost of 7.4 percent, or $27 in the average monthly check for a retiring 65-year-old.

WHETHER THAT increase will actually be paid remains to be seen. Congress is considering scrapping or delaying the automatic boost to help reduce the budget deficit.

The drop-off in consumer prices, as measured by the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index, was driven by record monthly falls in gasoline and fuel oil prices, and by lower mortgage interest rates and house prices. Medical care costs posted substantial gains.

"Today's goods news is evidence of the dramatic progress made in this area," said Larry Speakes, deputy presidential press secretary. "We believe it is because of our consistent economic policy, which has cut the rate of increase in federal spending, our support of a stable monetary policy and our policy of non-intervention in the marketplace."

Allen Sinai, senior economist for Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass., said "This is clear-cut, additional evidence that we have broken the back of the inflation problem in the U.S. economy."

"Double-digit inflation is absolutely dead," said Albert H. Cox Jr., president of Merrill Lynch Economics Inc. in New York.

ECONOMISTS ATTRIBUTED the falling prices — or deflation — to the steep recession and the tight money policies the Federal Reserve Board has imposed in an effort to fight inflation. The worldwide oil glut, partly due to the recession, has helped reduce energy costs, they said.

Sinai said the falling prices should help the economic recovery later in the year. The amount of money consumers have to spend will rise, and interest rates should continue falling, he said.

"It's basically like a tax cut," said Donald Ratajczak, Georgia State University's economic forecaster.

Most analysts did not expect the falling prices to last long, particularly once the recovery gets under way.

In its new report, the Labor Department said the Consumer Price Index fell a seasonally adjusted 0.3 percent in March — or at an annual rate of 3.3 percent. It rose 0.2 percent in February and 0.3 percent in January. For the first three months of 1982, consumer prices advanced 1 percent, the smallest three-month rise since 1965.

The March decline was the first since the 0.1 percent drop of August 1965 and the biggest since the 0.4 percent plunge of November 1953 when the economy was in a recession, according to Labor Department figures.

Murray Weidenbaum, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, said the new numbers likely meant the inflation rate for 1982 would "be lower than we expected — 6 percent or less." The administration had been forecasting roughly a 7 percent rate.

For all of 1981, the Consumer Price Index rose 8.9 percent, under the 12.4 percent of the previous year and the smallest increase in four years.

In a separate report, the Labor Department said Americans' inflation-adjusted average weekly earnings increased 0.2 percent in March, following an increase of 2.1 percent in February. Over the past 12 months, average weekly earnings fell 1.6 percent since March 1981.

The decline in March's consumer prices was driven by a 4 percent drop in gasoline prices, the biggest fall since the department first recorded those costs on a monthly basis in 1967. Overall transportation costs fell 1 percent in March, the third straight monthly drop.

HOUSING COSTS fell 0.3 percent, partly reflecting a 1.3 percent drop in mortgage interest rates and a 0.4 percent decline in home prices. Rent rose 0.5 percent.

Fuel oil prices dropped 3 percent last month, the biggest decline since the department began compiling those costs on a monthly basis in January, 1982.

Food and beverage prices were off 0.3 percent, with prices for food bought at groceries declining 0.6 percent.

Fruit and vegetable prices fell 3.5 percent, and beef, poultry and egg prices were down. Pork prices rose a bit.

The report also said that in March:

—Medical care costs rose 1 percent. Charges for hospital rooms were up 1.3 percent and physicians' fees advanced 0.5 percent.

—Entertainment costs grew 0.5 percent.

—Apparel costs advanced 0.4 percent.

All the figures are adjusted for normal seasonal variations.

In all the unadjusted Consumer Price Index stood at 283.1 in March, meaning that goods costing $10 in 1967 would have cost $283.31 last month.

T-shirt takes Nixon a bit by surprise

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The smile on former President Richard Nixon's face faded as he took the beige T-shirt from two Whittier College students who were among hundreds of people greeting him at a Republican Party fund-raiser in Orange County.

Part of the shirt's message read, "All the President's Men." Gift-giver Terry Van Loon, who attends the same college Nixon had graduated from, appeared unaware that the phrase was the title of a book and film about the Watergate investigation that led to Nixon's resignation.

"It's Wardman Hall, your old dorm, Mr. President," Van Loon said. "It's our theme this year."

The former president quickly recovered his poise in the Wednesday night incident.

"Well, come on up here then," he said, gathering the youths round for a photograph. He held up the shirt to reveal the complete inscription: "Wardman Hall. All the President's Men. And his First Ladies."

Van Loon explained the residence hall went closed this year. A bystander then instructed him of the message's meaning.

"You don't think he'll be offended, do you?" Van Loon wondered.

Koch Queen Beatrix

NEW YORK (AP) — Queen Beatrix of the Netherlands was honored Friday with the symbolic key to New York City, which her countrymen settled in 1625.

Edward I. Koch greeted the 44-year-old monarch with a bouquet of tulips when her motorcade pulled up to a red carpet in front of City Hall.

After a private meeting, the queen and mayor joined public officials and guests in the ornate City Council Chambers on the second floor.

CPI may offset Social Security hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's 36 million Social Security beneficiaries on Friday became entitled by law to a 7.4 percent benefit increase in July, or $27 a month for an average retiree.

But their automatic benefit hike may be imperiled by current White House and congressional efforts to cut the $100-billion plus budget deficit.

The increase was triggered by the release of the Consumer Price Index for March. It matches the inflation rate from the first quarter of 1981 through the first quarter of this year and will add $11.3 billion to the annual outflow from Social Security's sagging trust funds.

Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker refrained from issuing his department's customary news release to announce the hike.

But in response to questions from reporters, Social Security spokesmen said the average single retiree, who now gets slightly over $379 a month, will get a $27 increase in July, to $406.

The increase would be almost $28, but because benefits are rounded down to the next dollar, it works out to $27, according to spokesman John Trollinger.

Trollinger said the average benefit for all retirees, single and married, has been just under $386 and will rise by $28 to $414.

The maximum benefit for a 65-year-old person retiring in 1982 will rise by $50 from $679 to $729. The average aged couple will get a $47 increase from $648 to $695.

The CPI figures also translate to a 7.4 percent increase for the 4 million aged, blind or disabled Supplemental Security Income recipients in July. That will boost the maximum monthly benefit by nearly $20 to $284.30 for individuals and by more than $29 to $426.40 for couples.

Although the CPI fell 0.3 percent in March, the average inflation rate for the full 12 months stayed at the 7.4 percent mark. Social Security's trustees on April 1 had predicted a 7.6 percent rise, and the White House in February had forecast an 8.1 percent hike.

Several elderly district residents went before a House panel Friday to implore Congress not to interfere with the scheduled Social Security increase.

Emma Johnson, 80, who lives with her husband, Walter, on $466 a month in Social Security and $14 in food stamps, told the House Select Committee on Aging, "On behalf of all Americans who live their old age in poverty, I am asking you today to leave us with what little dignity we have left. We live as cheaply as we possibly can right now."

Her husband, 72, a retired janitor who is nearly blind, said their Social Security increase last July was eaten up by a rent hike.

"Now they're talking about raising my rent again. That's still hurting. I can't make it if it keeps on going up," said Johnson, who complained that he cannot afford to go to his church's picnics. "It's just humiliating for me to have to sit home all of the time."

Rep. Marc L. Marks, the renegade Republican from Pennsylvania, was moved to tears by their testimony. Marks, who is not seeking re-election, attacked President Reagan's "harsh and ugly policies" and said it would be a crime to deny or delay the Social Security increase.

Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., called it "unconscionable" to even consider reducing the cost-of-living hike. A staff report estimated that delaying the cost-of-living hike to October, then limiting it to 4 percent paid at 15-month intervals would cost Social Security beneficiaries $46 billion by 1985.

By 1990, Pepper charged, retirees' benefits "would be steadily eroded until they are worth only 77 percent of what they are today."

Clements talks about property tax

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — If there is a special legislative session for abolishment of the state property tax, Gov. Bill Clements said Friday, it probably will include his recommendations on college construction funding.

"I have an open mind on how college construction should be funded but there is no open mind that it must be funded," Clements told a news conference.

Clements said his stand on a special session for abolishment of the state property tax had not changed since his statement at a news conference last August.

"If Midwestern University wins its suit (to re-establish the 10-cent state property tax), I will call a special session to address abolishment of the state property tax, to repay anyone who has to pay the tax retroactively, and probably a funding device for construction funds for schools outside the Permanent University Fund."

The Midwestern suit, which has been pending since 1981, is set for trial June 2 in an Austin district court. It challenges the right of the 1979 Legislature to pass a state law that reduced the state property tax from 10 cents per $100 property valuation to .0001 cents. The university claims the 10-cent levy was written in the state constitution by voters and could not be changed by a simple legislative act.

The 10-cent tax had been used to finance new construction at 17 state colleges and universities outside the University of Texas and Texas A&M systems.

When the 1979 Legislature tried to change the property tax levy it sought to provide college construction funds from general revenue. Later, an attorney general's opinion said general revenue could not be used because the constitution provided for construction funds.

Clements said his legal advisers tell him that Midwestern is likely to win its suit.

"As I understand, we would have to move (with a special session) between the time the district court rules on the suit and the time it is acted on by a higher court for a final judgment," Clements said.

He indicated there would be no special session called until after the June 5 primary election runoff.

He also said he did not expect any special session to last the maximum 30 days decreed by law.

"I will call it in a few days after the lower court rules and I will put only one subject on the agenda," Clements said.

On other subjects, Clements said:

—His Task Force on Higher Education had re-polled its members and changed its initial recommendation that Texas college teachers' salaries be doubled. "The new recommendation says that teachers' salaries should be not less than the national average," he said. "Teachers' salaries have increased 45 percent since I came in office and right now are barely under the national average."

Martin tells of plans to start new life

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The back-row legislator who became front-page news as a suspect in his own shooting says he plans to change his looks, move out of Texas and search for a new life.

"I have got to become a new man, a new person. My face has been publicized statewide and in most of the surrounding states I would be recognized. It would be impossible to be considered a normal person," said Mike Martin.

Martin, R-Longview, cleaned out his Capitol office late Thursday after pleading guilty to a reduced misdemeanor charge of lying to a Travis County grand jury. The grand jurors were looking into Martin's July 31 shooting here.

In exchange for dropping a felony perjury charge that carried a 10-year prison term and $5,000 fine, Martin pleaded guilty to the misdemeanor, paid a $2,000 fine, quit his House seat and withdrew from the May 1 primary.

Gov. Bill Clements said Friday he would call a special election, probably for shortly after the June 5 run-offs, to fill Martin's seat.

In his own eyes, Martin, who filed just one bill during his only legislative session, is a "statesman without a state."

"I feel like a soldier in the Army who has been brought before a court-martial and had all his braids and buttons pulled off his uniform," Martin, 30, told the Austin American-Statesman.

Prosecutors claimed Martin staged the shooting at an Austin trailer park. It was a publicity stunt, they said.

"I would never admit to that," said Martin. "I'll go to my grave denying any such charge or any such ridiculous set-up."

"Does that make sense that a man would lose an arm for $600 a month?" he said, referring to his elbow wound and legislative salary.

The charge to which he pleaded guilty said he lied when he told grand jurors he did not cause his sister-in-law Diane Martin to rent a car later used in the shooting.

Martin said he "misunderstood" the question. The future is uncertain for the little-known carpenter who unseated an incumbent to win a seat in the back row of the Texas House.

"The only way for me to find work is to leave the state and let my hair grow long and grow a beard and change my name," said Martin, who plans to do construction work.

Martin said authors and movie producers have expressed an interest in his story.

"Will the truth as Martin sees it ever come out?" "At this point I'm not really sure."

Ambassador pledges continued U.S. aid

SAÑ SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — American Ambassador Deane R. Hinton said Friday that U.S. aid to El Salvador will continue "whatever the outcome of its government-in-the-making."

Hinton's statement at a news conference appeared to strengthen the position of ultra-rightist Roberto d'Aubuisson, named Thursday to head El Salvador's constituent assembly.

The ambassador's remarks appeared to be a reversal of policy, but U.S. Embassy spokesman Howard Lane said later that continued "support" for the Salvadoran government did not necessarily mean economic aid. He said it could mean moral or other forms of support.

"I admit that it's ambiguous," Lane said, adding that it did not mean economic aid would be forthcoming whatever political complexion the new government takes.

A tape recording showed that Hinton had said: "Now, it is true that we indicated our belief that some actions would be more helpful to El Salvador and to our support of El Salvador, which will continue in any case, than others. But the decisions are made by the Salvadorans."

Hinton later was asked if he thought Congress would approve continued aid to a Salvadoran government led by d'Aubuisson. "I would certainly hope so. He's been elected freely by the Salvadorans," he replied.

The United States had said Congress might balk at supporting a rightist Salvadoran government that had no Christian Democrat participation, since the Christian Democrats got 40 percent of the vote in constituent assembly elections March 28.

Reassurances of continued U.S. support are likely to diminish Christian Democratic leverage on the four-party rightist coalition that holds the balance of power in the assembly, and slow the movement for reforms that the U.S. government had said it backed.

The assembly is empowered to pick a provisional president and rewrite the constitution.

It was the second boost in as many days for the rightists, who named d'Aubuisson, head of the Republican Nationalist Alliance —

ARENA — to head the assembly on Thursday night. The Christian Democrats were shut out of the 10-member directorate, and all the positions went to rightists.

Hinton called the selection of d'Aubuisson "an example of democracy at work" and angrily rejected a suggestion that American pressure for a government of all the parties was intervention in Salvadoran affairs.

He said such a suggestion implies that the new assembly is not acting in a sovereign manner.

So far the Christian Democrats have been locked out of influential positions in the new government, but negotiations continue.

Differences remain among rightists over who should be provisional president of the country but voting on procedural matters Thursday, the first two days of the assembly, generally saw the 36 deputies in the rightist bloc voting together.

The Christian Democrats share power now with the military on the junta, and 22 of their 24 members voted against d'Aubuisson for the assembly leadership. The other two abstained. D'Aubuisson was the only abstention on the conservative side, saying he did not want to vote for himself.

Assembly members say they expect to pick a provisional president next week, and disagreement over that choice is the only crack visible so far in the rightists' unity.

The Christian Democrats and the second most powerful rightist party, National Conciliation, say they could accept Dr. Alvaro Magana, 57, a political independent who has run the state mortgage bank for 15 years.

D'Aubuisson's ARENA opposes Magana but the Christian Democrats and the National Conciliation Party, bitter enemies for two decades, have the votes between them to elect him.

Since the assembly has yet to decide on what form the government will take it is not certain how much power d'Aubuisson will have and whether it would override that of a more moderate provisional president.

At stake may be the U.S.-backed reforms initiated by the current junta.

Doctor says space travel prospects good

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP) — Up to 85 percent of the nation's adults could easily stand the stress of a ride aboard the space shuttle, an astronaut-physician says.

Dr. Bill Thornton, a medical researcher expecting assignment to a future shuttle flight, said most adults would meet the physical qualifications for a brief trip into space.

"I would qualify that to say that anyone with no underlying disease process, such as cardiovascular problems that could be made acutely worse by moderate stress, could go," Thornton said at a Medical Association of Alabama meeting on Thursday.

He said anyone who can pass a life insurance physical can look forward to space travel if it is made available to the general public.

"It would be foolish to put someone with significant coronary blockage up in space away from help just as it would be foolish to send that person across the Sahara Desert," he said.

But he said people who want to go into orbit would have to adopt an astronaut's rigorous exercise program if they expected to spend more than a few days in weightlessness.

Thornton said muscles in the legs begin to atrophy after several days of weightlessness and must be exercised to carry the body's weight upon return to gravity.

The problem means astronauts who might man an orbiting space station one day probably would be rotated back to Earth after a month of duty.

The problems associated with the human body in weightlessness could mean that children born in space might not be able to visit Earth unless they are rigorously exercised from birth, Thornton said.

Kleindienst suspended from practice for year

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Former U.S. Attorney General Richard Kleindienst was suspended Friday from practicing law for a year because he lied under oath about his role in an insurance fraud.

The state Supreme Court's suspension order came about four months after the Tucson lawyer was acquitted in Maricopa County Superior Court of 12 counts of perjury involving statements he made under oath during a State Bar Association investigation.

The association was investigating his conduct as an attorney in connection with the siphoning off of about $7 million from the Teamsters union health and welfare fund in 1976. One of Kleindienst's clients, Joseph Hauser, was later convicted of racketeering.

Kleindienst, who had said earlier he would "look for work" if suspended, could not be reached immediately at his Tucson office or home for comment.

His wife, Margaret, said when given the news, "Oh, no! It's wrong! We've been trying to tell the truth."

"He was struggling so hard to put his practice back together," she said, noting he was enthusiastic over what seemed to be new business.

The court said it found "clear and convincing evidence" of two allegations that Kleindienst, when deposed, gave untruthful testimony concerning conversations with his client's agents about a state Department of Insurance order.

The department had declared illegal the $18 million dividend that Family Provider Life Insurance Co. of Phoenix had paid to Great Pacific Corp. and had ordered that the money be returned to the Arizona firm. To meet that requirement, the state said, the money must be deposited in an Arizona bank.

The State Bar had charged that Kleindienst lied in Oct. 28, 1977, and April 14, 1978, depositions "when he unequivocally stated that he never had a conversation with anyone about whether the dividend funds should be deposited in an Arizona bank rather than in out-of-state banks," the court noted.

The court said evidence showed "Kleindienst adamantly refused to comply with this requirement," adding that it found "that Kleindienst either knew or believed his statements to the state bar concerning conversations about returning the funds to an Arizona bank were untrue."

In the opinion written by Vice Chief Justice Frank X. Gordon Jr., the high court also held that two allegations by the State Bar dealing with Kleindienst's purported knowledge of his client's misrepresentations to the Arizona Department of Insurance lacked support of "clear and convincing evidence."

Some of the evidence available to the bar but not to jurors who tried Kleindienst was that he billed his clients for $125,000 for what the high court said was five hours' work in helping get the Teamster contract. The jury knew only that he shared in a fee for such help, not how much he did for his share or how much he got.

The jury would have had to have been convinced "beyond a reasonable doubt," but the high court had only to find "clear and convincing evidence," the justices noted.

The court adopted the State Bar's recommendation that a one-year suspension from practice "would protect the public from Kleindienst's unethical conduct and deter other attorneys from engaging in unethical conduct."

Under the court decision, the suspension is to begin May 9. The court also ordered that Kleindienst must pay the cost of the court proceedings before he could be reinstated.

Justice Stanley Feldman agreed about disciplinary action but said Kleindienst should be disbarred.

Residents return to burned-out homes

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Some residents displaced by a wind-driven firestorm returned Friday to search through a square mile of charred rubble for any possessions that survived the inferno.

They were among the 1,500 people forced from their homes by the $50 million fire, touched off Wednesday when the Santa Ana wind pushed two power lines together, setting a palm tree afire like a torch. Flames jumped from residence to residence.

The people first had to register with the Red Cross to get permission to enter the area, and 1,034 people did so Friday, said Red Cross spokesman Bill Morgan.

The residents were then assigned police escort officers.

Officials limited those going in to one evacuee and three helpers per address, each with a badge, and every four-person party was restricted to two hours of searching. Officers began escorting the groups into the blackened area at 2 p.m.

Among the first 100 or so people waiting for an escort officer were Blanche Hibbits, who had lived at the Barcelona apartments for 12 years, and her daughter, Ruth Loeb of Los Angeles.

"We stopped dead in our tracks because it was all gone. I said it looked like a ghost town," Mrs. Hibbits said.

"It's just real grim to go back and stand in front of what was your home," Mrs. Loeb said. "You see things like this on the news and you feel a moment of sorrow, but you never really know what it's like until it happens to you."

One end of the Palm Lane apartment complex, U-shaped around a debris-filled pool, was destroyed — the other end virtually untouched. But the entire building has been condemned, residents said.

Committee wants say in picking Inman successor

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Richard Lugar, one of President Reagan's strongest supporters, said Friday the Senate Intelligence Committee wants a role in picking a successor to Adm. Bobby R. Inman as deputy CIA director.

"I'm frankly trying to engender a dialogue and send some signals" to the White House, the Indiana Republican told reporters. "This is a traumatic occasion and I say that advisedly."

"This is a watershed event, not simply a resignation, a replacement and life goes on," Lugar said of the departure of the 51-year-old admiral, whose resignation from government was announced Wednesday.

He said he and his colleagues on the Senate panel "should be heavily involved in the selection process" before candidates' names begin emerging in public. Lugar said this was necessary to assure the American people that the committee was performing its role as a check to prevent recurrence of past intelligence abuses.

He specifically said the consultation should not wait for Reagan to nominate a successor whom the panel and the Senate would then have to confirm.

"Lugar is absolutely, dead right," said another committee member, Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del. "They better get his message, because with Inman gone the foxes are now guarding the chicken house at the CIA."

Inman was extremely popular with the committee, and its chairman, Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., made no secret that he would have preferred Inman as head of the CIA instead of William J. Casey.

Casey's management of the CIA and past business practices were investigated by the panel last year when several senators called for his resignation. The committee came to the conclusion that Casey was "not unfit to serve" in the post.

But Lugar said, "Many of us voted for Casey and Inman as a package. Casey was important to the president, who had absolute confidence in him. Inman has been our man in a way."

Lugar has been a friend of Inman's for 24 years, since they served together at the Pentagon from 1958 to 1960 as junior naval intelligence briefers for Chief of Naval Operations Arleigh Burke. Indicating that his views were shared by others on the committee, Lugar said, "Inman was accessible to us at any hour of the day or night. He was reassuring and honest."

Yamit rubble-filled as soldiers remove last resisters

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli troops drove the last pockets of militant resistance out of the Sinai town of Yamit on Friday and began their own withdrawal, leaving the town in rubble, Israel Radio reported.

Helicopters scoured the area in search of resisters who might try to return and camp on sand dunes, refusing to accept Israel's Sunday withdrawal from Sinai.

Troops broke into a bomb shelter where American Rabbi Meir Kahane and a dozen disciples had locked themselves. They were dragged out screaming and taken away by police.

A dozen students barricaded on top of Yamit's 80-foot-high war memorial were brought down without force and were driven out of Yamit.

With the last resisters gone, soldiers began blowing up underground shelters after bulldozers had razed the rest of Yamit.

The radio said police were holding 68 militants detained during evacuation efforts Wednesday and Thursday. It was not known whether Kahane was among them.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin told members of his Likud bloc that 5,000 soldiers had taken part in the evacuation of the estimated 2,000 squatters. No casualties were reported.

A military spokesman said an army presence would be maintained in Yamit until the withdrawal deadline. "There will be soldiers there until noon on Sunday," he said.

French increase security in wake of terrorist threats

PARIS (AP) — France increased security at home and abroad Friday — in some cases with attack dogs and paratroopers — following a terror bombing off the Champs Elysees, a bomb scare that evacuated the Justice Ministry and a rash of letters signed Carlos.

Dozens of letters with the signature of the shadowy international terrorist who goes by the name of Carlos have been received by French authorities in the last few weeks but none has been verified, an Interior Ministry spokesman said.

An Interior Ministry spokesman also dismissed press reports that a new threat had been received from Carlos, the international terrorist whose real name is Ilich Ramariz Sanchez.

"We've received dozens of letters signed Carlos in the last few weeks — none of which have been verified," the spokesman said. But the newspaper France Soir reported the French National Railroads received a letter Wednesday night carrying the signature of Carlos saying a bomb would be planted on a train.

Security was stepped up in Paris railroad stations and luggage storage lockers were searched. The paper said in one locker, at the Gare de Lyon, 45 sticks of dynamite were found.

The time-bomb blast Thursday occurred across the street from the offices of the Arab newspaper Al Watan Al Arabi, which is pro-Iraqi and stridently anti-Syrian.

Iraq is Syria's arch-enemy in the Arab world. The publication was the first to accuse Syria of complicity in the Sept. 4, 1981 assassination of the French ambassador to Lebanon.

Painter Sam makes his work 'play'

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Staff Writer

He attracts others wherever he goes. Curiosity draws them to him as iron is drawn to a magnet. People just naturally want to see what this jeans-clad man with the red bandana tied pirate-style in his hair is doing quarterbacking the ground. Moving closer, some recognize him.

"That's 'Sidewalk Sam,'" one observer whispers to another. "I saw him on 'Real People.'"
"Sidewalk Sam," alias Bob Guillemin, spends his working time on his hands and knees. His purpose — recreating the works of the Old World, as well as the New World, masters. He's a counterfeiter, not of money, but of art.

Today he will be recreating Renoir's "Two Girls Reading," circa 1890, at Midland Park Mall. Friday, he spent the afternoon and early evening hours copying, in acrylics, Renoir's "Pierre Drawing," circa 1888.

He has no favorites when it comes to the masters, but he chose Renoir for what is his Texas debut because "he is a warm-spirited, people-loving man. His art work reveled in the beauty of happy children, robust young women and young couples in love. He had a positive spirit — he was attracted to life," he explained during a brief break from painting.

The paper or fabric he uses contains fiber glass. It is "fast, strong and takes a beating. It lies flat and keeps absorbing the paint."

Sam came to town to paint one Renoir; however, during a Friday morning press conference he announced he would paint two, "one today and one tomorrow. It's a real thrill for me to set out to do it in a day."

One of the works will be donated to Midland Memorial Hospital.

His credentials include a bachelor of fine arts from Boston Museum of Fine Arts and a master of fine arts from Boston University plus further certification from the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris, France, where he worked for the Louvre Museum as a certified copyist.

The job of certified copyist entails repainting paintings at the Louvre on "the same kind of canvas with the same ground work." In order to do so, a "craftsman" must be a "good clue finder."

Laughing, something Sam does frequently, he says, "I just happen to be a good clue finder. I can craft a painting with very precise detail."

He is quick to point out that any expert would easily recognize the difference between his work and the original.

When asked if he does any original work, Sam replied, "I do plenty of art on my own."

His originals have been shown in a number of museums and galleries in the U.S., including the Lincoln Center in New York, the Institute of Contemporary Art in Boston and Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

Although he enjoys painting original works, he said, "The thing I never want to lose is the time I share with others. I've always known I needed people in my life. I need lots of contact. I like crowds — the banter that goes back and forth."

A typical day might include his being sprawled across a sidewalk somewhere and a "dog will come up and lick me in the face." Then someone in the crowd may say, "Isn't that mouth too red?" For Sam, "It helps

"Sidewalk Sam" recreates Renoir's "Pierre Drawing" Friday at Midland Park Mall. Today he will be painting another Renoir, "Two Girls Reading," in the mall's foyer in front of Dillard's. He and his work have been featured in me to have the art work be created by the group.

"If you can get through the day with all the stresses that come in instead of breaking down," then that's a part of the challenge. "It's pitting yourself against a tough day, adding as many distractions — sore knees, sore back, heat reflecting off the sidewalk till it almost exhausts you — struggling against that" and being able to accomplish what you set out to do that creates "the thrill of victory and it's a real good reason for doing sidewalk art."

But Sam has another reason for what he does. He enjoys "recreating the great masters of the past," in a public arena where all people, regardless of their backgrounds or ages, can be a part of "a legacy we all share." It is "the spirit which finally determines what's beautiful in art." Sam wants to bring the work of the great artists out of the enclosed confines of museums and galleries into the arena of life.

He has a way of making the observer feel free to talk with him. He said, "It helps if you're a ham." It also helps if you enjoy what you are doing. For Sam, this work "is play."

Those who came and went while he was painting Friday at Midland Park Mall made comments ranging from "You work fast," to "We came back and it looks good."

To that statement he responded, "Hey, you're my kind of art critics."

Four continue up Mt. Everest

TIBET — Four members of an American climbing expedition have reached the 22,500-foot level on the north face of 29,028-foot Mount Everest, in an attempt to scale the world's highest mountain from the Tibetan side by a route never before trod, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer reports.

The four climbers, including expedition leader Lou Whittaker of Ashford, Wash., have established a camp at that level, the third such high-altitude camp made on the mountain. Lower camps lie at the 20,320-foot and 18,500-foot levels, while base camp is at 16,900 feet.

The remaining 12 members of the climbing party, which includes 30-year-old Marty Hoey of Wuana, Wash. who is attempting to become the first woman up Everest, are shuttling food and supplies between the lower camps.

All climbers are reported to be in good health. Whittaker, who lectured in Midland last year, is attempting at age 53 to become the oldest person to scale Everest, revered by the Tibetans as Chomo Lunga: "Goddess Mother of the World." In an interview with The Reporter-Telegram the week before his departure for Tibet, Whittaker expressed hopes the summit would be attained by May 1.

Red Cross releases rebuilding expenses

American Red Cross has spent $262,501, so far, rebuilding and repairing more than 150 homes as a result of the tornadoes that struck northeast Texas and southeast Oklahoma April 2.

Additional assistance will cost $2 million, according to Elvis Curb, executive director of the Midland Red Cross.

"Over 40,000 meals have been served to disaster victims and emergency workers. Orders for food, clothing and other emergency needs have been issued and we will continue to work closely with federal and state relief efforts," Brady Fisher, Lamar County Red Cross chairman, said.

A majority of the 1,800 families affected from the recent tornado were low income-uninsured homeowners over the age of 65 with no resources.

According to Red Cross statistics, 142 families did not have insurance, 163 were over 65 and 165 families' annual incomes were less than $6,500. Because these people will not qualify for low-interest loans, the Red Cross will assist in the repairs or rebuilding.

Persons wishing to make financial contributions to the Red Cross should mail donations to the Midland County Red Cross, P.O. Box 1706, Midland 79702.

Amtrak fares to increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amtrak will increase fares by 6.5 percent on most of its trains Sunday, the passenger railroad said Friday.

Some fares will increase less than 6.5 percent, while some other charges, especially for overnight facilities on some long-distance trains, will go up as much as 25 percent, the railroad said.

Advances slow for kids brought from dark room into light of life

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The frail 6-year-old, locked up in a dark room for most of his life with five baby brothers and sisters, now scurries about his playroom, squealing and wailing while reaching for the hugs he craves.

The boy — identified by officials only as "C" — has the mental and emotional development of a 10-month-old baby, juvenile officials say, the result of a lifetime of incarceration in a rundown home.

The director of a juvenile home calls it the worst case of child neglect she has ever seen.

"C," a tiny 45 pounds and about 3 feet tall, can't talk now, two months after he and his siblings were freed from seclusion. And officials say "C" may never recover from the neglect.

The others, 4-year-old twin girls, a twin brother and sister 8 months old, and a 3-year-old girl, have fared better, and they are in foster homes. The older twins are speaking short sentences.

But "C" can only say "hi" and "bye" so far, and not always that much. What he wants is to be constantly held or hugged, and he runs from one adult to another, arms outstretched for the affection he apparently missed.

When he is picked up, he shrieks and screams with delight, but the sounds are more like those of an animal than those of a little boy.

"C" lives at Child Haven, the juvenile home where he and his brothers and sisters were taken two months ago after a police officer found "C" wandering in a Las Vegas street.

The officer was alarmed because the boy couldn't talk, and took him to Child Haven. His mother was found and turned in two children, then three more.

"The prognosis is very poor," for "C" ever learning to talk or communicate properly, said Nancy Williams, Child Haven's director. "He needed that brain stimulus in his early years. The chances of recovery are very, very poor."

"When they first arrived here they would stand in a group and make noises to each other," Nedra Scott, supervisor of "C's" cottage, recalled Friday. "The way they looked at each other, it was obvious they were communicating in some fashion."

Brian Albiser, deputy director of Clark County juvenile services, said the 6-year-old was very protective of his brothers and sisters.

The children's 25-year-old mother, who Albiser described as "very limited" mentally and emotionally, visits them occasionally.

Albiser said officials are looking for the children's 30-year-old father, who was supposed to have cared for the youngsters while the mother worked at odd jobs.

Juvenile officials say the children apparently were locked in a darkened room and bowls of food were slipped to them.

Albiser said the children did not appear to have suffered physical abuse, although "C" may have suffered neurological damage from being denied environmental stimulation.

Some doctors say children deprived of contact with adults in their first three years face severe mental, language and personality retardation. Muscle development of a child's tongue is also critical to speaking, Albiser said.

Albiser said the children's mother sometimes left them with other people, adding, "Some of the people she left them with were not a helluva lot more capable of dealing with the children than the mother."

First lady changes anti-drug text

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nancy Reagan, about to add her own voice to her husband's criticism of the news media, retreated at the last minute on Friday but nonetheless scolded the advertising and entertainment worlds for allegedly encouraging children to use illicit drugs.

A prepared text of the first lady's speech to the Advertising Council, in which she charged that the news media as well as television programs, movies and popular songs glamorize drugs, was distributed to the White House press corps.

But shortly before Mrs. Reagan appeared before the group, a member of her staff slipped into the press room during a briefing on another matter and removed copies of the speech from reporters' desks, leaving a note saying the first lady's remarks "have been revised."

Sheila Tate, Mrs. Reagan's spokeswoman, said Mrs. Reagan "edited those remarks at the last minute. That was her decision. She felt the emphasis and focus was the entertainment and advertising media that she wanted to talk about."

Mrs. Tate said the first lady felt the word "media" brought to mind the news media, "and that was not what she meant."

President Reagan has complained, most notably in a recent newspaper interview, that national television news coverage of the economy has concentrated too much on individual workers losing their jobs. And his chief spokesman, David R. Gergen, charged Thursday that a CBS special report on victims of the Reagan economic program hit "below the belt."

The White House staff in recent days has restricted television coverage of the president's appearances and now holds a closer rein on when reporters may question Reagan.

In her original text, Mrs. Reagan, who has taken an increasingly active role in the battle against drug abuse, said: "So many of my emotions get tangled in this (drug) issue: hurt and fear, when I see what drugs have done to some of our kids; hope, when I visit prevention programs where elementary school children are learning the dangers of drugs; and anger, when I think how some in the media have glamorized drugs to our young people. The fact must be faced that all too often the media — and here I'm talking about those in entertainment, advertising and news — present the idea, perhaps unconsciously, that drugs are acceptable."

"Well, drugs are not acceptable; drugs injure individuals and shatter families."

When she delivered the talk, however, Mrs. Reagan dropped her general reference to the mass media and said she was speaking only of "those in entertainment or advertising."

In the first text, Mrs. Reagan suggested that the news media don't realize that news stories about the therapeutic effects of a chemical in marijuana lead children to believe "if you smoke pot you won't get cancer and have to wear glasses."

She urged the nation's advertisers to tell their colleagues in the media of "the subtle damage they are inflicting on our young people."

Daily News talks stopped

NEW YORK (AP) - Talks between unions at the Daily News and the Texas millionaire who wants to own the financially troubled newspaper have broken off, three days before a deadline for a work agreement.

The unions said they wanted to bargain over a wage freeze and a five-year contract, but Joe L. Allbritton, who is negotiating to buy the newspaper, is demanding those terms as non-negotiable items.

Allbritton's representatives and leaders of 11 unions representing 3,800 News employees said they were ready to resume talks in an attempt to beat Allbritton's Sunday night deadline for labor agreements. But each side set conditions for the agreements.

Allbritton seeks to cut labor costs by $70 million and demands a no-strike provision be included in the five-year contract.

Administration wants rebuttal time for show

WASHINGTON (AP) - CBS News is refusing to give the Reagan administration 30 minutes of air time to rebut a TV program that White House officials say hit "below the belt" in attempting to illustrate the effects of President Reagan's budget policies on three families.

"We did not believe that it was journalistically appropriate or necessary to include an administration spokesman in 'People Like Us,'" Van Gordon Sauter, president of CBS News, said in a telegram late Thursday to David R. Gergen, Reagan's assistant for communications.

Reagan was described as feeling that CBS did not portray fairly his administration's work in the one-hour show Wednesday night. But the president did not display any anger about the program when he discussed it with aides Thursday morning, said White House sources, who asked to remain anonymous.

The "People Like Us" program, narrated by Bill Moyers, depicted the straits of three families whose incomes hover around the poverty line. It blamed their predicaments on federal policies and said the families "have slipped through the safety net and are falling away."

Moyers concluded that "the president and Congress have chosen not to offend the rich, the powerful and the organized."

"It is easier to take on the weak," he said.

GERGEN DESCRIBED the program as "a moving, emotional, powerful production" but said it "was below the belt." He showed reporters two telegrams he had sent to CBS asking to present the administration's point of view and for time to respond.

"We don't question the right of any news organization to present shows which go into such questions," Gergen said. But he complained that "no one in government was approached" to present the administration's view.

Sauter defended the show as "a newsworthy and relevant part of the ongoing coverage by CBS News of issues related to the administration's economic and budgetary programs."

"In light of the extensive coverage which CBS News has and will continue to provide to administration viewpoints, we do not believe that a special administration rebuttal broadcast to this documentary is called for," Sauter said in his telegram to Gergen.

Robert Rubin, assistant secretary for planning and evaluation at the Department of Health and Human Services, said the CBS program distorted each of the individual cases.

The program cited Larry Ham of Brooke Park, Ohio, as an example. Ham, who suffers from cerebral palsy, had been eliminated from the Social Security disability program. At the time the program was taped, his wife was out of work and the family sought welfare and food stamps.

Rubin said the administration had not changed the regulations for the disability program. But he acknowledged that it speeded up from January 1982 to March 1981 the time for conducting a congressionally mandated review of disability cases to weed out ineligible and save money.

Ham, Rubin said, had failed to go through the entire appeals process through which his benefits might be restored.

The second case CBS cited was that of Frances Dorta of New Jersey.

Mrs. Dorta said she quit her job so that she could become eligible for Medicaid. She said it was the only way she could obtain aid for one of her three children to undergo surgery for a serious medical condition.

Moyers charged that changes in the eligibility rules for welfare which took effect last Oct. 1 made Mrs. Dorta ineligible for Medicaid while she was working.

RUBIN RESPONDED that Mrs. Dorta was ineligible for Medicaid while she worked because she made too much money under New Jersey rules, not because of the federal law changes.

He noted that the new federal standards require states to limit eligibility to those earning less than 150 percent of whatever is considered the poverty line in a state.

Mrs. Dorta took "the option that made the most sense" - quitting work and going on welfare, Rubin said. He said her case was an example of "how the system worked in an appropriate way."

Rubin also maintained that the Reagan administration was not at fault in a Wisconsin case cited on the CBS program.

In that case, Mrs. Carrie Dixon chose to institutionalize her mentally retarded daughter because she feared that home visits by a nurse under a Medicaid program would be curtailed or eliminated.

Rubin said Mrs. Dixon's fears were groundless since the program has not been cut and there is no reason why her daughter could not be cared for at home.

Colleges join party circuit in efforts to woo students

NEW YORK (AP) - Leading colleges across the nation are competing on the party circuit this week, wooing bright students who are weighing offers from more than one school for next September's freshman class.

Tufts University, located in Medford, Mass., threw a party for New York-area students on the 86th floor of the Empire State Building. The students, like others across the nation, must decide what college they will attend by May 1.

Such parties used to be strictly tea-and-crumpets affairs thrown by Ivy League schools, usually at the homes of alumni.

But the practice of having "holding parties" - parties aimed at netting bright youngsters accepted at several top schools - has spread in recent years as even the best schools worry about getting enough qualified freshmen to fill their rolls.

This year, besides the Ivy League schools, Washington's Georgetown University is throwing 28 parties across the country. Maine's Bowdoin College entertained students at the Empire State Building. North Carolina's Duke University has an affair planned in Paramus, N.J.

Williams College, Colgate University, Middlebury College, and Rice University are among others throwing scores of holding parties in practically every major city in the country to woo top youngsters.

The parties have a two-week season: from April 15, when students start getting letters of acceptance from competitive schools, through May 1, the deadline most of those schools set for students to decide which college they will actually attend.

"There's a sense that if you don't have these receptions when other schools are doing them, it can work against you," said Fred Newberger, director of admissions at Middlebury College in Vermont.

Ivy League schools have not abandoned the party circuit. Yale University's director of admissions, Linda V.T. Smith, said the school has had "at least 25 or 30" parties nationwide this year.

"What we are doing," said Philip Moriarty, a Yale alumnus who organized a party in Chicago to be held Sunday, "is extending our congratulations to students we accept. The students haven't necessarily made up their minds to matriculate to Yale. Hopefully, we can answer their questions and encourage them."

Charles Deacon, Georgetown's director of admissions, said the fierce competition for students is the main factor in throwing the parties.

"There obviously are more schools doing this," he said. "There are clearly some that are afraid if they don't, it'll seem to students they aren't interested in having them come."

At the Tufts party Thursday night, New York City senior Nicole Felton said she was undecided whether to accept a spot at Duke, the University of Pennsylvania, or Tufts.

Scientists shoot laser at cloud

HONOLULU (AP) — Scientists atop a Hawaiian volcano shot a ruby laser Friday at a "monster" cloud of volcanic ash circling the globe to gather new information about its size, density, speed and direction.

"We made an observation this morning and the back-scatter reading was much lower than it had been," said Tom de'Poo, an engineer at the Mauna Loa Observatory, part of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. "That means the cloud has moved away from Hawaii."

He said it appeared the cloud had moved north over the Pacific Ocean.

Latest calculations indicate the cloud may contain 10 million tons of ash and debris, almost certainly from an April 9 eruption of the Chichonal volcano in Mexico, according to scientists at the Ames Research Center in Mountain View, Calif.

De'Poo and Kinsell Coulson, director of the observatory at the 11,200-foot level of the Mauna Loa volcano, used a "lidar" — which uses a ruby laser — before dawn Friday to measure the cloud's thickness and density.

Coulson said the cloud may be the largest to spread across the planet since the 1912 eruption of Alaska's Mount Katmai.

The cloud has turned Hawaii's normally sparkling blue skies to a milky shade during the past three weeks, producing sunrises and sunsets with brilliant red and orange hues.

Scientists had said there might be some drop in temperatures as less sunlight reaches the earth's surface. The cloud is estimated to be about 2.5 miles thick with a base 13.7 miles above sea level.

But a NOAA scientist in Golden, Colo., on Friday downplayed such a possibility.

Meir: Part of Bergman legend?

By FRED ROTHENBERG

ENTERTAINMENT

NEW YORK (AP) — Ingrid Bergman is Swedish, not Jewish, but her superb characterization of Golda Meir is bound to be another landmark in the Bergman legend.

Forty years ago, Miss Bergman tearfully flew away from Humphrey Bogart in "Casablanca." Next week, on "A Woman Called Golda," the 66-year-old actress soars above some plodding material and dramatically becomes the physical and spiritual embodiment of the late Israeli prime minister.

In the television age, it's harder to impersonate recent historical figures, particularly one with the distinctive public persona of Mrs. Meir. But Miss Bergman, a three-time Oscar winner, has thoroughly recreated the gait, speech and personal effects, including, of course, the cigarettes and hair bun.

"A Woman Called Golda," a four-hour movie over two nights next week, will be on Operation Prime Time, a 120-station syndicate with a history of steamy novels. Previous TV productions include "The Bastard," "The Immigrants," and books by Harold Robbins, Irwin Shaw and John D. MacDonald.

Proposed originally as a two-hour film, it was rejected by the commercial networks. In four hours, the production, filmed entirely in Israel, takes on epic proportions and a greater historical reach, chronicling the growth of Israel through Mrs. Meir's personal life and political dedication to Zionism.

The sacrifice is too much historical detail, but it's a fair exchange for the expansive glimpses of Mrs. Meir's diplomatic and political arm-twisting. In 1948, she was sent on a secret mission to keep Transjordan from joining an Arab alliance against Israel. In the dramatized account, she's not cowed by King Abdullah's demands. He criticizes her stubbornness, blaming her for an inevitable war.

Twenty-five years later, as prime minister, she's negotiating for planes with an American senator (Ned Beatty). Serving tea, honey cake and her unique "kitchen diplomacy," Mrs. Meir wins him over with a mixture of soothing persuasion and toughness.

"A Woman Called Golda" presents both sides of the controversy over Israel's limited preparation for the Yom Kippur War that inflicted heavy casualties. The advice of the best military minds is not to mobilize.

Golda, who left Russia with her family during the pogroms in the early 1900s, grew up in Milwaukee, where she became an elementary school teacher. Her early years are remembered in flashbacks, sparked by questions from students during Mrs. Meir's return visit to the Fourth Street School.

We see how her Russian experience imprinted her with a fierce Zionism. America could only be an adopted land, and, after marrying a sign painter named Morris Meyerson, they emigrated to a kibbutz in Palestine.

Judy Davis ("My Brilliant Career") plays the young, energetic Golda, while Leonard Nimoy ("Star Trek") is the overshadowed, gentle Morris.

Novel called 'rubbish' makes best-sellers list

By MARLENE AIG

NEW YORK (AP) — When Martin Cruz Smith first learned that a Soviet critic had condemned his novel "Gorky Park" as "rubbish" and labeled him "scum," he says, "I became quite irritated. It was so low, so nasty. I was not amused."

Smith viewed the attack as "character assassination." His Soviet emigre friends, however, "were pleased. They told me I was being treated as the best Russian writers were treated."

And the 40-year-old author, whose tale of a Soviet detective investigating a bizarre series of murders has topped both hard- and soft-cover best-seller lists, now laughs. "It is a form of literary criticism new to me, but not to them."

The critique was written by Kirill Senin in the journal of the Soviet Union of Writers, Literaturnaya Gazeta. It begins as a parody of Smith's novel, switching the location from Moscow's Gorky Park to New York's Central Park and then launches the assault. The review calls the novel "anti-Soviet" and says Smith's portrayal of KGB as well as FBI-CIA corruption "discredits all supporters and friends of detente."

The book has not been translated into Russian, but the British edition seems to be fairly available, especially to students, according to Smith, "many of whom know a good deal of English."

The scathing attack "tells us that someplace books are still important, that Russia's respect for words is stronger than ours," Smith now says, having recovered from the shock of the critique.

"Gorky Park" is an atypical best seller, not just because it is set in the Soviet Union, but because it is not a quick and easy reading novel. The characters are painstakingly well-drawn, the mystery intricate and dependent on an understanding of two ways of life, the American and Soviet.

Soviet life is more complicated than most people think," Smith says. "There's an enormous amount of corruption in the Soviet Union. If I'd written this about America, no one would have noticed. It's a Soviet fabrication that life is perfect."

And that, Smith maintains, is why the book has found such popularity in the Soviet Union. "It connects with reality and it's about ordinary Russian people. It's a shock of recognition."

All things considered, it's somewhat of a surprise that "Gorky Park" has managed to touch such a tender Soviet nerve.

Smith spent only two weeks in Russia, in 1973. He spoke no Russian and, as with all American tourists, his trip was carefully planned so that he wouldn't see the wrong things.

He did stroll through Gorky Park and managed to figure out the places he wanted in his book. But when he applied to return to Moscow, "telling them what I wanted to do," he was denied a visa. "I did try to give them a chance."

Through a reporter friend, Smith contacted Russian emigres who gave him the inside information he needed to write the book.

Finally, eight years later, the book was published and Smith, who wrote minor mysteries and minor novels to support himself while "trying to get recognized," now is.

Smith's early literary career was not brilliant. He graduated from the University of Pennsylvania, then had a few brief stints as a reporter and editor.

He wrote two novels featuring a gypsy hero, then did a series of books with the secret world of the Vatican as their locale.

While doing so, he was working on "Gorky Park," backed only by his wife and agent.

"I always assumed it would be a best seller," Smith now says, smiling. "It's too good a story."

The book is perfect for him, he says, because he sees himself as a "19th-century narrative writer." And the Russians, he says, "are a 19th-century narrative people. They live a narrative life and have a sense of the narrative of life and country. Our lives are broken into daily newscasts."

Refugees plant American dream

Hearst Feature Service

GRANITE FALLS, Wash. — Fifty-two Cambodian refugees hope to turn 85 acres of muddy pasture and overgrown forest into the American dream. They're risking a lot, but they have little to lose.

The refugees, all members of a family headed by 89-year-old patriarch Fouey Thongdy, are about to become tenant farmers. Cut off from government stipends next month and unable to land jobs, the refugees plan to plow the pasture and fell the trees. The alternative may be starvation.

Blackberries, cucumbers, lettuce and corn will be planted on eight acres of a farm near here. Trees will be cut and dragged out of the forest to be sold as firewood. The money earned will buy fertilizer and seed.

Advice, berry starts and two trucks to haul the wood have been lent to the Cambodians along with the land.

But the chain saw wasn't working and the tractor was slow to start one morning. The old homestead cabin on the farm is uninhabitable. The dirt road leading into the forest is so muddy the refugees have left their cut and split wood piled along the roadside. If someone wants to buy it, Davoth Un said quickly, they will get the wood out.

Davoth Un, 21, is the only family member able to speak English. His enthusiasm is tempered by apprehension.

"I don't know if it will work, but we will try very hard," he says softly. "I think it is not very hard for us if someone will show us how to do it."

District Attorney's office hoping to cancel Sirhan Sirhan's parole

SOLEDAD, Calif. (AP) — Sirhan B. Sirhan — the man who killed Robert F. Kennedy — faces his parole board next week as it ponders whether to cancel his date with freedom, now two years away.

The Los Angeles District Attorney's office has rallied public opinion to keep Sirhan behind bars. It believes the parole board, which set his release date in 1975, made a serious mistake and the decision should be rescinded.

"We will argue that the board didn't properly assess the impact or severity of political assassination in this society," says Deputy District Attorney Larry Trapp. He will appear on behalf of District Attorney John Van De Kamp at the hearings which begin Monday in Soledad Prison and may last two weeks.

"They treated this as they would any other murder," Trapp says, "and we don't believe you can treat a political assassination that way."

VAN DE KAMP, WHO appealed last year for public protests against Sirhan's release, says state officials have received thousands of letters supporting his position.

Sirhan was convicted of fatally shooting Kennedy on June 5, 1968 — the night of the senator's triumph in the California Democratic presidential primary. He died early the next day.

Although Sirhan contends he has since "regained my good senses," Trapp intends to offer the board "new evidence" of Sirhan's continuing propensity toward violence.

"The evidence indicates that Sirhan hasn't changed immensely," says Trapp, referring to letters written by Sirhan and comments allegedly overheard by other inmates.

Unlike a trial, prosecutors are not allowed to call witnesses at the hearing before the California Board of Prison Terms. Only the board itself and the prisoner, Sirhan, may summon those who will testify.

But because of the unusual nature of the hearing, the board has decided to allow the prosecutor to question witnesses.

Among those witnesses will be the two former parole board members who first set Sirhan's release date. One of them, James H. Hoover, has said he was led to believe he "had no choice" but to set a definite date for release under guidelines then being used.

Sirhan was originally sentenced to death, but won a reprieve when the California's death penalty law was ruled unconstitutional in 1972. He became eligible for parole after serving seven years of his life sentence.

About half of those subpoenaed to testify at the rescission hearings are prison inmates who have reported hearing comments by Sirhan which could indicate future plans for violence. However, at least two of those inmates' stories have been the subject of recent controversy and might be discounted.

Sirhan's attorney, Luke McKissack, says he believes inmates "concocted" stories about Sirhan in order to curry favor with officials.

MCKISSACK WILL TELL the board that Sirhan, a Palestinian immigrant who has been promised asylum in Libya, should be set free to "wander into obscurity in an Arab world."

At 38, Sirhan is a model prisoner at Soledad, where he is kept in special protective custody along with about 100 other inmates. He has a clean disciplinary record and has earned straight "A" grades in college courses taken behind bars.

But at his previous parole hearings, he has shown a quick temper.

He has never expressed remorse for Kennedy's slaying, says he doesn't remember everything that happened and commented three years ago that he believed he would not be convicted of first-degree murder if his trial were held then.

"I was drunk at the time," he said of the shooting at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles. "I had no control of my faculties. I'll bet if the same evidence was presented to a jury now, a first-degree conviction would not be obtained, considering the time lapse and the emotions at the time."

At the 1979 parole hearing, when his prison term was reduced by four months for good behavior, Sirhan offered an excuse for the killing.

"I would refer to my experiences as a child, the turmoil I have seen in the Middle East," he said. "I was just an imperfect, mentally sick person at the time."

"I believe myself to have matured since then and to have regained my good senses."

When Van De Kamp appealed for public pressure last August to help stop Sirhan's release, he received 2,686 letters and postcards from 39 states, the District of Columbia, the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico. He said twice that much mail deluged the parole board, the governor's office and other officials.

"This has struck a real nerve," he says.

A similar hearing earlier this year for another prisoner resulted in rescission of his parole date. The board decided to cancel the scheduled release date of William Archie Fain, a convicted murderer-rapist, because of a "widespread, unprecedented and extraordinary public outcry."

FAIN HAD BEEN convicted in the 1967 murder of a high school student and the rapes of two others in Oakdale, Calif. Residents of the small central California town and relatives of the victims gathered 62,500 signatures on a petition to keep Fain in prison.

Bid riggers get bids

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Four highway contractors accused of rigging bids were awarded contracts by the Texas Highway Commission after commissioners said there was no legal way to reject the bids.

But the commission adopted a new procedure to prevent contractors from bidding on state highway projects if they plead guilty or are convicted of bid-rigging.

The Jenn-Air kitchen. More than a match for any menu.

A Jenn-Air kitchen is so versatile. Consider the amazing Grill-Range. Conventional or glass ceramic cooktops lift out easily to accommodate the famous Char-Flavor grill and a variety of other accessories, including a rotisserie, shish-kebab and griddle. The Grill-Range also offers a dual-use oven with both radiant heat and convection style cooking for faster roasting at lower temperatures. A powerful built-in surface ventilation system keeps your kitchen free of smoke and odors. And, topping everything off is Jenn-Air's Touch Control Microwave, available separate or built-in with Jenn-Air's full-size, self-cleaning, radiant-heat oven.

Salvadoran Catholic church, like nation, divided

By KENNETH FREED
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — In this land littered with the carnage of civil war, the one institution that could be the engine of unity stands nearly as divided as the nation itself — the Roman Catholic Church.

It is a split that has sundered church from government, priest from priest, bishop from bishop and bishop from priest. It is a division that is the result and, in a sense, a cause of the fratricidal conflict that has left more than 30,000 Salvadorans dead over the last two years.

IN MANY WAYS, the division is obvious. One bishop, for instance, wears the uniform of an army colonel, while some priests and nuns travel with Marxist guerrillas.

Three of the country's five bishops refused to attend the funeral of their archbishop, murdered two years ago as he celebrated Mass, apparently by right-wing extremists. Another priest, killed by a rightist death squad, was said by his bishop to have been murdered "as a leftist, not as a priest."

The priests of El Salvador are divided between those who practice the "theology of liberation" and those who oppose urging the faithful — no matter how oppressed they might be by poverty and exploitation — to seek relief through political and social action, particularly by violence.

If not the root, the theology of liberation is certainly the spark for the division of the church here. Briefly, as explained by a Jesuit theologian, it is the idea that the church has an obligation to show its followers that God approves of struggle to overcome injustices.

THE THEOLOGIAN, who asked not to be identified by name, said liberation theology is an ageless belief. "It is in the Bible," he said. "Damned are the rich."

He continued: "It was always there, but we priests never read it. Now we are reading it."

Another Jesuit said: "God didn't mean for some men to be rich and some men to be poor and miserable. Men don't have to accept their lot like some ox."

In the late 1960s and the 1970s, Salvadoran priests began putting the theology into practice. They created "Christian base communities," a form of cooperative in which priests and nuns organized self-help projects. They also organized the Christian Federation of Salvadoran Peasants, a movement that has sought to redress injustices against the landless farm workers.

Those developments frightened and challenged the rich oligarchs who had controlled El Salvador's economy and politics for 100 years. The reaction was vicious. Ten priests and nuns, including Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero, have been murdered. At least 60 others have fled the country, or were evicted. In the province of Morazan alone, 30 leaders of the Christian base communities have been killed.

IN SAN SALVADOR, the Jesuit faculty of the University of Central America has been terrorized. In two years, the Jesuits' living quarters have been bombed four times and raked with machine-gun fire.

But the majority of the bishops and many other leaders of the conservative wing of the church have little sympathy for the practitioners of liberation theology.

According to Msgr. Freddy Delgado, secretary general of the Conference of Salvadoran Bishops, a leading spokesman for Catholic traditionalism:

"Liberation theology is political. It is a creation of Western, industrialized Europe and cannot be successfully adapted in a society like El Salvador."

Many of its advocates have accepted Marxism, Delgado said in an interview, charging that some priests have taken the crooked way and led the peasants with them. The peasants would never have thought of adopting the measures except for their love and respect for the priests.

"Liberation theology has gone too far," he charged. "It is revolution."

DELGADO AND OTHERS like him say they, too, oppose social injustice. Archbishop Pedro Aparicio, the 74-year-old head of the diocese of San Vicente, ascribed all of the country's social ills to "El Salvador's upper classes."

He recalled to a reporter his view, stated in a 1971 speech, that "horses and dogs are treated better and fed better" than the peasants here.

"This is the command of Jesus," Aparicio said of such criticism, but added that "the church has no obligation to support all protests against the authorities."

Neither, Aparicio believes, should priests organize these protests nor should they publicly denounce authority.

The Christian base communities and the peasant federation "fell into the hands of the Communists," Aparicio charged. "The role of the church is to deal with spiritual matters. Politics should be left to politicians. The pope says that the work of priests should not be political."

In a two-hour interview, the archbishop also defended the role of the government security forces, often accused of terrorizing — and sometimes massacring — peasants. "The army does not attack people," he said. "The guerrillas attack people."

In his own diocese, which is a rebel stronghold, he claimed that 1,000 people have been killed by guerrillas. "They don't deserve any succor from the church. They kill, kill and kill."

THE CONFLICT over the role of priests in war is a sharp one. Aparicio and two other bishops maintain that it is proper for priests to serve the military because as Delgado put it, "military men need spiritual guidance."

This guidance has taken unusual forms at times. Bishop Marco Rene Revelo of Santa Ana recently blessed a fleet of helicopter gunships on their arrival from the United States. Bishop Eduardo Alvarez, whose diocese of San Miguel is largely under guerrilla control, is the chaplain of the armed forces with the rank of full colonel. He speaks of himself as a military man.

Revelo, Aparicio and Alvarez have all attacked Catholic clergymen who work with the guerrillas, for spiritual or other reasons.

"It is an error for a priest to be in the service of the left, but it is not an error to be a priest in the service of the armed forces," Aparicio said.

Archbishop Romero, who was a near saintly figure to the liberal priests, argued against violence, except in the most extreme situation.

And the man named as his acting successor, Msgr. Arturo Rivera y Damas, has tried with great difficulty to find a middle ground.

He has bravely and sharply criticized the violence of the military and has argued sympathetically for the need to act against injustice. But he will not offer any aid, spiritual or otherwise, to the rebels.

NEARLY AS EXPLOSIVE as the debate over violence was the argument over the church position on the recent constitutional elections.

Many liberal priests thought the elections were senseless since they were boycotted by the left, largely on grounds that a leftist candidate would be an open target for murder. Other reasons for non-support: the possibility of fraud, and the concern that the election would not solve the basic social injustices but might serve to distract attention from them.

Rivera y Damas at first refused to endorse the voting, as the other bishops demanded. Finally, under the urging of the Vatican's representative here and in an effort to avoid an open split among the bishops, he signed an endorsement of the election. His price was to include in the statement a condemnation of government violence and the need for an honest vote.

But while the endorsement of the bishops conference urged all priests to promote voting, Rivera y Damas carefully refrained from such encouragement in his sermons.

While the bishops and theologians have been battling, largely with words, the priests and nuns in the countryside have had to apply the church's teachings in the real world.

For a group of Franciscans in a remote province, this has meant dealing with thousands of refugees, an often hostile and suspicious military and a near-starving parish.

"We don't think much about phrases like 'liberation theology,'" one of the Franciscans said, "but we do think about suffering — and we see a lot of suffering."

AN UNBORN BABY FILLED WITH JOY!

A few days later Mary hurried to the highlands of Judea to the town where Zacharias lived, to visit Elizabeth.

At the sound of Mary's greeting, Elizabeth's child leaped within her and she was filled with the Holy Spirit.

She gave a glad cry and exclaimed to Mary, "You are favored by God above all other women, and your child is destined for God's mightiest praise."

"What and honor this is, that the mother of my Lord should visit me! When you came in and greeted me, the instant I heard your voice, my baby moved in me for joy! You believed that God would do what He said; that is why He has given you this wonderful blessing."

Mary responded, "Oh, how I praise the Lord. How I rejoice in God my Savior!"

"For He took notice of His lowly servant girl, and now generation after generation forever shall call me blest of God."

"For He, the mighty Holy One, has done great things to me. His mercy goes on from generation to generation, to all who reverence Him."

"How powerful is His mighty arm! How He scatters the proud and haughty ones! He has torn princes from their thrones and exalted the lowly. He has satisfied the hungry hearts and sent the rich away with empty hands."

"And how He has helped His servant Israel! He has not forgotten His promise to be merciful. For He promised our fathers—Abraham and his children—to be merciful to them forever."

Presbyterian women set second annual meeting

The Rev. Joan Salmon Campbell and the Rev. Flynn Long will keynote the second annual meeting of Presbyterian Women of the Union Presbytery of Ties Tuesday at First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave.

The meeting, "Discover Your Ministry — Surprise! You're the Minister," will include women from 35 churches encompassing an area from El Paso east to Ballinger, south to Sanderson and north to Seminole. It will begin with registration at 8:15 a.m. followed by a call to order at 9 a.m. The Rev. Robert B. Smith, host pastor, will give the opening prayer.

Officers to be nominated include Mrs. Roy Neely of Midland, president; Mrs. Dean McLain of Sonora, secretary; Mrs. Jack Norbeck of El Paso, district one chairman; and Mrs. Billy Wilfong of San Angelo, district four chairman. The current president is Mrs. Harold Newsom of El Paso.

Campbell, pastor of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church of Kansas City, Mo., has been music director at the National Women's Meeting at Purdue University and platform speaker at various conferences and seminars, including the Women's Conference at Montreat, N.C.

Long, associate stated clerk of the PCUS General Assembly at Atlanta, Ga., is a former pastor of Trinity Presbyterian Church of Midland.

The meeting will conclude in the afternoon with the installation of officers by the Presbytery executive, the Rev. Charles Hollingsworth. A special communion quilt, made of squares representing each church, will be used for the first time.

World oil glut worsens Mexican economics

By RICARDO CHAVIRA
Copley News Service

MEXICO CITY — This city's newest and tallest skyscraper — the nearly completed forty-five story headquarters of Mexico's national oil company, PEMEX, stands empty and silent these days.

Conceived in the late '70s oil boom days as a fitting edifice for Mexico's prospering petroleum company, the building has seen no construction activity for weeks. The reason: PEMEX officials can't find the money to finish the building.

The structure's stark incompleteness serves as a monumental sign that this country's economy, until a year ago one of the world's most robust, is starting to falter badly.

THE CURRENT GLOBAL oil glut has sent PEMEX revenues tumbling $6 billion since last year. Public sector foreign debt has doubled to $48.7 billion in the past five years. Combined with February's devaluation, which cost the peso 60 percent of its value against the dollar, these figures have some government officials and many economists and bankers here forecasting serious trouble.

The government this week showed official concern by announcing new austerity measures aimed at strengthening the economy and stabilizing the value of the peso.

The measures, which will be in effect through the end of the year, include a 5 percent cut in the federal budget, an $11 billion limit on new foreign credits, and a reduction of $3 billion to $4 billion in the balance of payments deficit.

The plan, announced by Treasury Secretary Jesus Silva Herzog, also calls for import reductions.

Bankers and economists here are convinced that whatever the government does, there are likely to be hard times ahead, and some paint a gloomy picture of increasing social unrest and a threat to political stability.

"It is like a truck rolling down a hill, the situation we face now," said Clemente Ruiz, a professor at the Center for Economic Investigation here. "The problem is that no one is stopping the truck."

THE PRICE OF inaction this year, says David Colmenares, vice president of El Colegio Nacional de Economistas, a national association of economists, will be an inflation rate of about 48 percent — more than 15 percent higher than the current rate.

To make matters worse, another hefty devaluation is rumored.

"We are seeing the real possibility of this country falling into the cycle of hyperinflation followed by devaluation, a la Argentina," warned Ruiz.

Such a scenario hardly seemed possible a year ago, when Mexico rose to become the fourth-largest oil producer in the world and the economy was expanding at an average annual rate of 8 percent.

Mexico's leaders during that heady period of huge oil discoveries declared that, unlike Iran or other oil-producing nations, their country would not become dependent on oil for economic growth. It would be only the "engine" to power such growth, they said.

But it was not long before the country's high officials opted to use oil earnings for rapid industrialization rather than the measured economic growth they had promised.

One immediate and very visible result of the policy was the creation of almost a million new jobs yearly — an important accomplishment in a country with chronic high unemployment.

"Lopez Portillo (the Mexican president) deserves a lot of credit for that," says a foreign banker here. "But he screwed up everything else. His thinking seemed to be that horrendous inflation and a growing foreign debt were OK as long as he could create jobs."

BUT INFLATION, WHICH during the '70s averaged well below 20 percent, began to approach levels near 30 percent, where it has remained. As a result, non-oil exports and tourist-industry revenues — second only to petroleum as an earner of hard currency — have fallen substantially.

Faced with a drop in hard cash flow, Mexico has been forced to borrow heavily. Today it is the world's most heavily indebted developing nation.

February's devaluation was supposed to change that. The government's intention was to increase the sale of Mexican goods abroad by making them less costly and to slow the pace of capital flight to other, stronger economies.

However, the move has come under criticism because, as economists and bankers point out, the peso was already being readjusted through mini-devaluations, and a big overnight devaluation actually helped fuel inflation.

One example of how the devaluation didn't work, said Ruiz, was the government's recent increase of between 10 and 30 percent in the minimum wage, depending on the job. That action was meant to offset the loss of consumer buying power caused by the devaluation. However, the foreign banker notes, at most only 8 percent of workers' buying power was lost, making the recent increase overly generous and inflationary.

And the result, argues Ruiz, is that when price controls on a wide range of articles are lifted next month, prices will zoom — nullifying any benefits of the wage increase.

However, some government officials maintain that things are not as gloomy as they seem.

Jose Luis Bernal, the foreign ministry's director general of bilateral economic relations, says there are promising signs for the economy, including the prospects of Mexico becoming a major supplier of engines for Detroit's auto industry, and that there will be a strong rebound in world oil prices late this year or early next.

STILL, THAT is not the prevailing mood here.

"We bankers are looking, at the minimum, at two very difficult years," says the foreign banker. "We're kind of in the eye of the hurricane right now. We know we're going to have 50 percent inflation, but it's not here yet. So some people think the devaluation is past and things will get back to normal. I wish it were true."

Already the economy is contracting, says Ruiz, who predicts a 4 percent growth rate this year. "But what we really may be seeing," he said, "is the beginning of stagflation (the combination of a stagnant economy and rapid inflation) — a very dangerous development."

He and other economists say Mexico's economic difficulties could provoke social unrest. Ironically, Ruiz says, by taking steps to cure the economic ills, the government may have no choice but to cause discontent among Mexicans.

It is this general discontent, according to some officials, that could spill over into specific disaffection with the Mexican political system and its ruling party — the Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI.

Ruiz said there appear to be two scenarios for federal action.

The government, he says, could continue to expand public-sector spending — it was up 26 percent in 1981 from the previous year — thereby creating jobs, but at the same time feeding inflation.

Or, says Ruiz, public spending can be reined in and economic growth deliberately slowed — in turn slowing the rate of inflation, but resulting in massive unemployment.

The government appeared to lean toward the latter formula in its actions this week.

New road test aids cycle safety

LINTHICUM, Md. (AP) — If state officials institute the improved motorcycle licensing package that was tested recently in California, they can expect a 15-20 percent reduction in the number of new-rider accidents, says Dr. Charles Hartman, president of the Motorcycle Safety Foundation.

An evaluation of the licensing package by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration compared driving records of all 40,000 license applicants who participated for one year in a project to monitor driving violations and accidents.

Based on comparisons between riders who took the improved licensing tests and those who took the regular California exam, the highway administration concluded that states can substantially reduce motorcycle accidents by upgrading their existing motorcycle operator testing requirements and materials.

The upgraded licensing program includes stricter written and skills tests and a comprehensive Motorcycle Operator's Manual. Significantly higher initial failure rates were recorded among those who took the new tests as compared to those who took the regular California exam, particularly in the skills portion of the tests.

California is now one of 29 states that use the new program, at least in part. Many states continue to award motorcycle operator licenses to any rider who returns from an unsupervised road test unhurt, Hartman says.

Still others do not bother with licenses at all — in six states any licensed automobile driver can legally operate a motorcycle.

Permian claims soggy District 5-5A track title

By TERRY WILLIAMSON Sports Writer

Now we know why Odessa had no objections to running the District 5-5A track meet at Memorial Stadium because it was the Permian Panthers who ran to a wire-to-wire team victory Friday night with 135 points while most of the other 5-5A squads did their slip-sliding-away routine on the soggy cinders.

The last time the 5-5A meet was held in Midland, it was the Panthers who captured a one-point victory over Midland Lee. This time it was even easier since Abilene High was a distant second with 113 and Lee was third with 107.

And Lee could have made a much stronger challenge had it not been for a disqualification in the 400 meter relay and a collapse in the 300 intermediate hurdles. Those two events swallowed Lee and gave Permian and Abilene High the big edge.

AHS HAD a chance to overtake Permian in the 1600 relay when they were trailing by only 10 points, but Permian rolled in second to Lee while the Eagles dropped the baton and it was the Panthers who everyone was pulling for to turn that trick.

But Permian led a charmed life in this one while qualifying six individuals and two relays for the Region I meet in Lubbock in two weeks. Both Lee and Abilene High qualified six individuals and one relay each and that didn't leave many region berths for the rest of the field. San Angelo qualified four, Cooper two and Big Spring and Midland High one each.

Many thought this meet would be a forgettable meet at best, running on the slow Memorial track where lane eight was soft enough to swallow competitors, but Lee's Darren Williams left one lasting mark by blasting to a 10.56 in the 100 meters for the meet's only new record.

The old mark of 10.71 by Midland High's Jeff Robinett in 1980, could not withstand the assault Williams put on. It was his career best and was the only time turned in that even closely resembled a record with the exception of the 6-7 leap turned in by Abilene High's Eric Jordan in the high jump.

"The track didn't seem that soft to me, but I had a good lane (3)," Williams said. "I seem to run better with the long spikes we use here, but I had the best start that I can ever remember. I got out real good."

IF LEE had run the middle of the meet like they started and finished, they would have run away with the title. Early Friday afternoon, Lee got some field event surprises with a 1-2 sweep in the long jump and a victory in the shot put.

Roosevelt Fort, who was suffering from a pulled groin muscle, won the long jump with a 22-5 1/2 on his last jump of the day, moving up from fifth place. His jump beat teammate Luther Johnson, who had a career best of 22-4 3/4.

"I just had to forget about the injury and jump. I couldn't get any speed, so I had to go hard off the board to do it," Fort said.

"I had first until Fort beat me on that last jump, but this was the best I have ever done and we're both going to the regionals," Johnson said.

And Isaac Garnett, a sophomore who had never been over 52-feet in the shot put, shot to a 54-1 1/4 for a surprise victory. "I just put a little more Ahhh into this one," Garnett said.

BUT THEN came the disqualification in the 400 meter relay before Damon Polk won a region berth with a second place 14.56 in the 110 high hurdles. But Polk was favored in the 300 intermediates, and ended up fifth. Luther Johnson, who was second at one point in that race, fell at the last hurdle to lose a bid and Lee lost a lot of potential points.

But Lee came back with a 3:24.06 victory in the 1600 relay, despite missing Sam Morney, who hurt a foot in the 400 meter prelims Friday afternoon. Troy Barber brought Lee from fifth to first on the third lap and Williams cruised to victory. That was an event Midland High led as late as the third lap before falling to fourth. However, that was a strong Bulldog showing.

MHS' only region qualifier was Chuck St. Germain, who placed second in the 800 meters with a 1:57.55. He led most of the race, but Permian's Bruce Bennett caught him in the last 10 yards to win with a 1:57.44. Still, it was one of the better races for St. Germain, who had not run all that well against district foes this year. He has come on strong in the last two weeks.

Permian's Billy Howell won the 200 meters with a 22.45 while teammates Carl Chancellor took the discus with a 165-8 and Coy Brown won the pole vault with a 13-0. That was Permian's only other victories with the exception of the sprint relay, which posted a 42.77.

SAN ANGELO won four events with Steve Yarbrough winning both hurdles with a 14.34 and 40.33. Ruben Aguilon won the 3200 with a 9:58.59 and David Jackson took the 400 meters with a 50.16.

Despite the strong showing by Abilene, the Eagles won only two events with Eric Morris taking the 1600 meters with a 4:34.65 and Eric Jordan winning the high jump with his 6-7, one-inch off the record.

Midland High, Odessa High, Abilene Cooper and Big Spring failed to win an event.

Permian also won the Junior Varsity

Division with 96 points while Abilene High was second with 94. Midland High's Ross Petree won two events in the JV run with a 5-10 in the high jump and a 52.65 in the 400 meters. Lee's only win came from Billy Cornelius in the 800 meters with a 2:00.27.

Despite a pulled groin muscle, Midland Lee's Roosevelt Fort won the District 5-5A long jump with a leap of 22-feet-5 1/2 Friday at Memorial Stadium to qualify for the Region I meet in Lubbock on May 7-8.

MHS hosts Cooper; Lee off to Abilene

If the first half of the District 5-5A baseball race is any indication, then Midland High can't afford to lose today against Abilene High if the Bulldogs hope to be in contention for the second half title. Likewise for AHS.

Both MHS and AHS have 1-1 records in the second half race and one loss was all that AHS and Big Spring (first half co-champions) had in the first half, and it doesn't look like the winners' this time around will do any worse.

The Bulldogs and Eagles are trailing three teams in the standings, Big Spring, Abilene Cooper and Midland Lee, and only one will remain within striking distance after today's games.

Since Abilene High has already proven to be a tough ball club this season with a 16-6 overall record, MHS coach Tim Whalen will probably put his ace pitcher Billy Miles on the mound. Miles has a 4-1 district record and has dropped his earned run average to 2.49. He has also been the only Bulldog pitcher to record a 5-5A victory this season. Wes Davis or Joel De La Garza could see relief action if Miles gets into trouble.

WHILE MHS is fighting to remain alive, Midland Lee will be in Abilene against Cooper battling to remain on top of the 5-5A standings. With the right combination of wins and losses, the Rebels could find themselves alone in first place, but things must fall right.

Since Lee and Cooper are two of the second half unbeaten, at least one will drop off the top leaving Big Spring as the only other first place possibility. The Steers will play 0-2 Odessa Permian.

In both of their second half victories, the Rebels have used two new pitchers on the mound, Kerry Robertson (won 6-1 over Odessa High) and Craig Ray (2-1 over San Angelo). So, it seems that Coach Ernie Johnson has found some depth in his pitching staff behind Bryan Willis who has the team's only other 5-5A victories this season with two.

One player lost for the season is catcher Scott Page. In Tuesday's game against San Angelo, he was involved in a collision at home plate and suffered a broken jaw in three places and a concussion. Page trying to stop a squeeze play by Bobcat Mark Smith when the injury occurred.

ELSEWHERE IN the 5-5A, the Steers will be out to hold onto first place when they travel to Odessa to take on Permian. Big Spring is easily the surprise team of the district this season and of late is playing outstanding baseball, winning 12 of the last 13 games.

The other matchup of the day sends Odessa High to San Angelo where the 0-2 (4-19 overall) Bronchos will face the 0-2 (10-15) Central Bobcats. About the only thing riding on that game is whether or not OHS will win its first 5-5A game of the season and whether or not San Angelo will be the first team to lose to them.

MC women clinch title

The Midland College girls tennis team won five of six matches Friday to wrap-up the 1982 WJCAA conference title. With the six finals to be played today MC holds a 14 point lead over the New Mexico Military Institute 48-34.

In the mens division NMMI placed finalist in eight of the nine categories to guarantee them the conference title. MC will finish second as they have six competitors in the finals.

Liz Alvarado (MC) defeated Elva Roman of Odessa College 6-4, 6-2 and will face Yousoke Yoshida (NMMI) in the No.1 girls finals. Jodi Wertenberger (MC) beat Dora Berroteran (OC) 6-0, 6-2 to gain her finals berth against April Webb (NMMI). Kym Somerville (MC) defeated Sheila Shoemaker (NMMI) 6-1, 6-1 and will play Elsa Roman in the No.4 girls finals. Karen Mannheimer (MC) completed the sweep in the girls semi-finals for MC and will face Kerri Healey (NMMI) in the No.3 finals.

In the No.1 girls doubles, Mannheimer-Alvarado lost to Healey-Yoshida 6-4, 6-4. It was only their second loss to a conference team this year. Wertenberger-Somerville defeated Shoemaker-Webb 6-1, 6-0 and will face Tammy Marfield and Brenda Bewley in the finals of the No. 2 girls doubles.

Tony Macken (MC) will square off against Shoichi Horiuchi (NMMI) in the mens No.1 finals. Macken beat Adam Cavazos of South Plains 6-3, 6-0 Friday. Barry King (MC) defeated Gene Reed (OC) 6-0, 6-4 and will face Ben Sparkman (NMMI) in the No.2 mens finals. Luis Zavala (MC) beat Doug Wright (SP) to gain his finals match-up against Carlos Vargas (NMMI). In the No.4 mens category Monty Saul (MC) lost to Jeff Porter (SP) 6-1, 6-4. Neal Paige (SP) had to retire against Andre Peters (MC) when he severely twisted his ankle in the third set of their match. Peters will play George Gonzales (NMMI) in the No.5 mens finals. Norm Weber (MC) lost to Krisinan Wickorsing (NMMI) 6-3, 6-4 in the No.6 mens semi-finals.

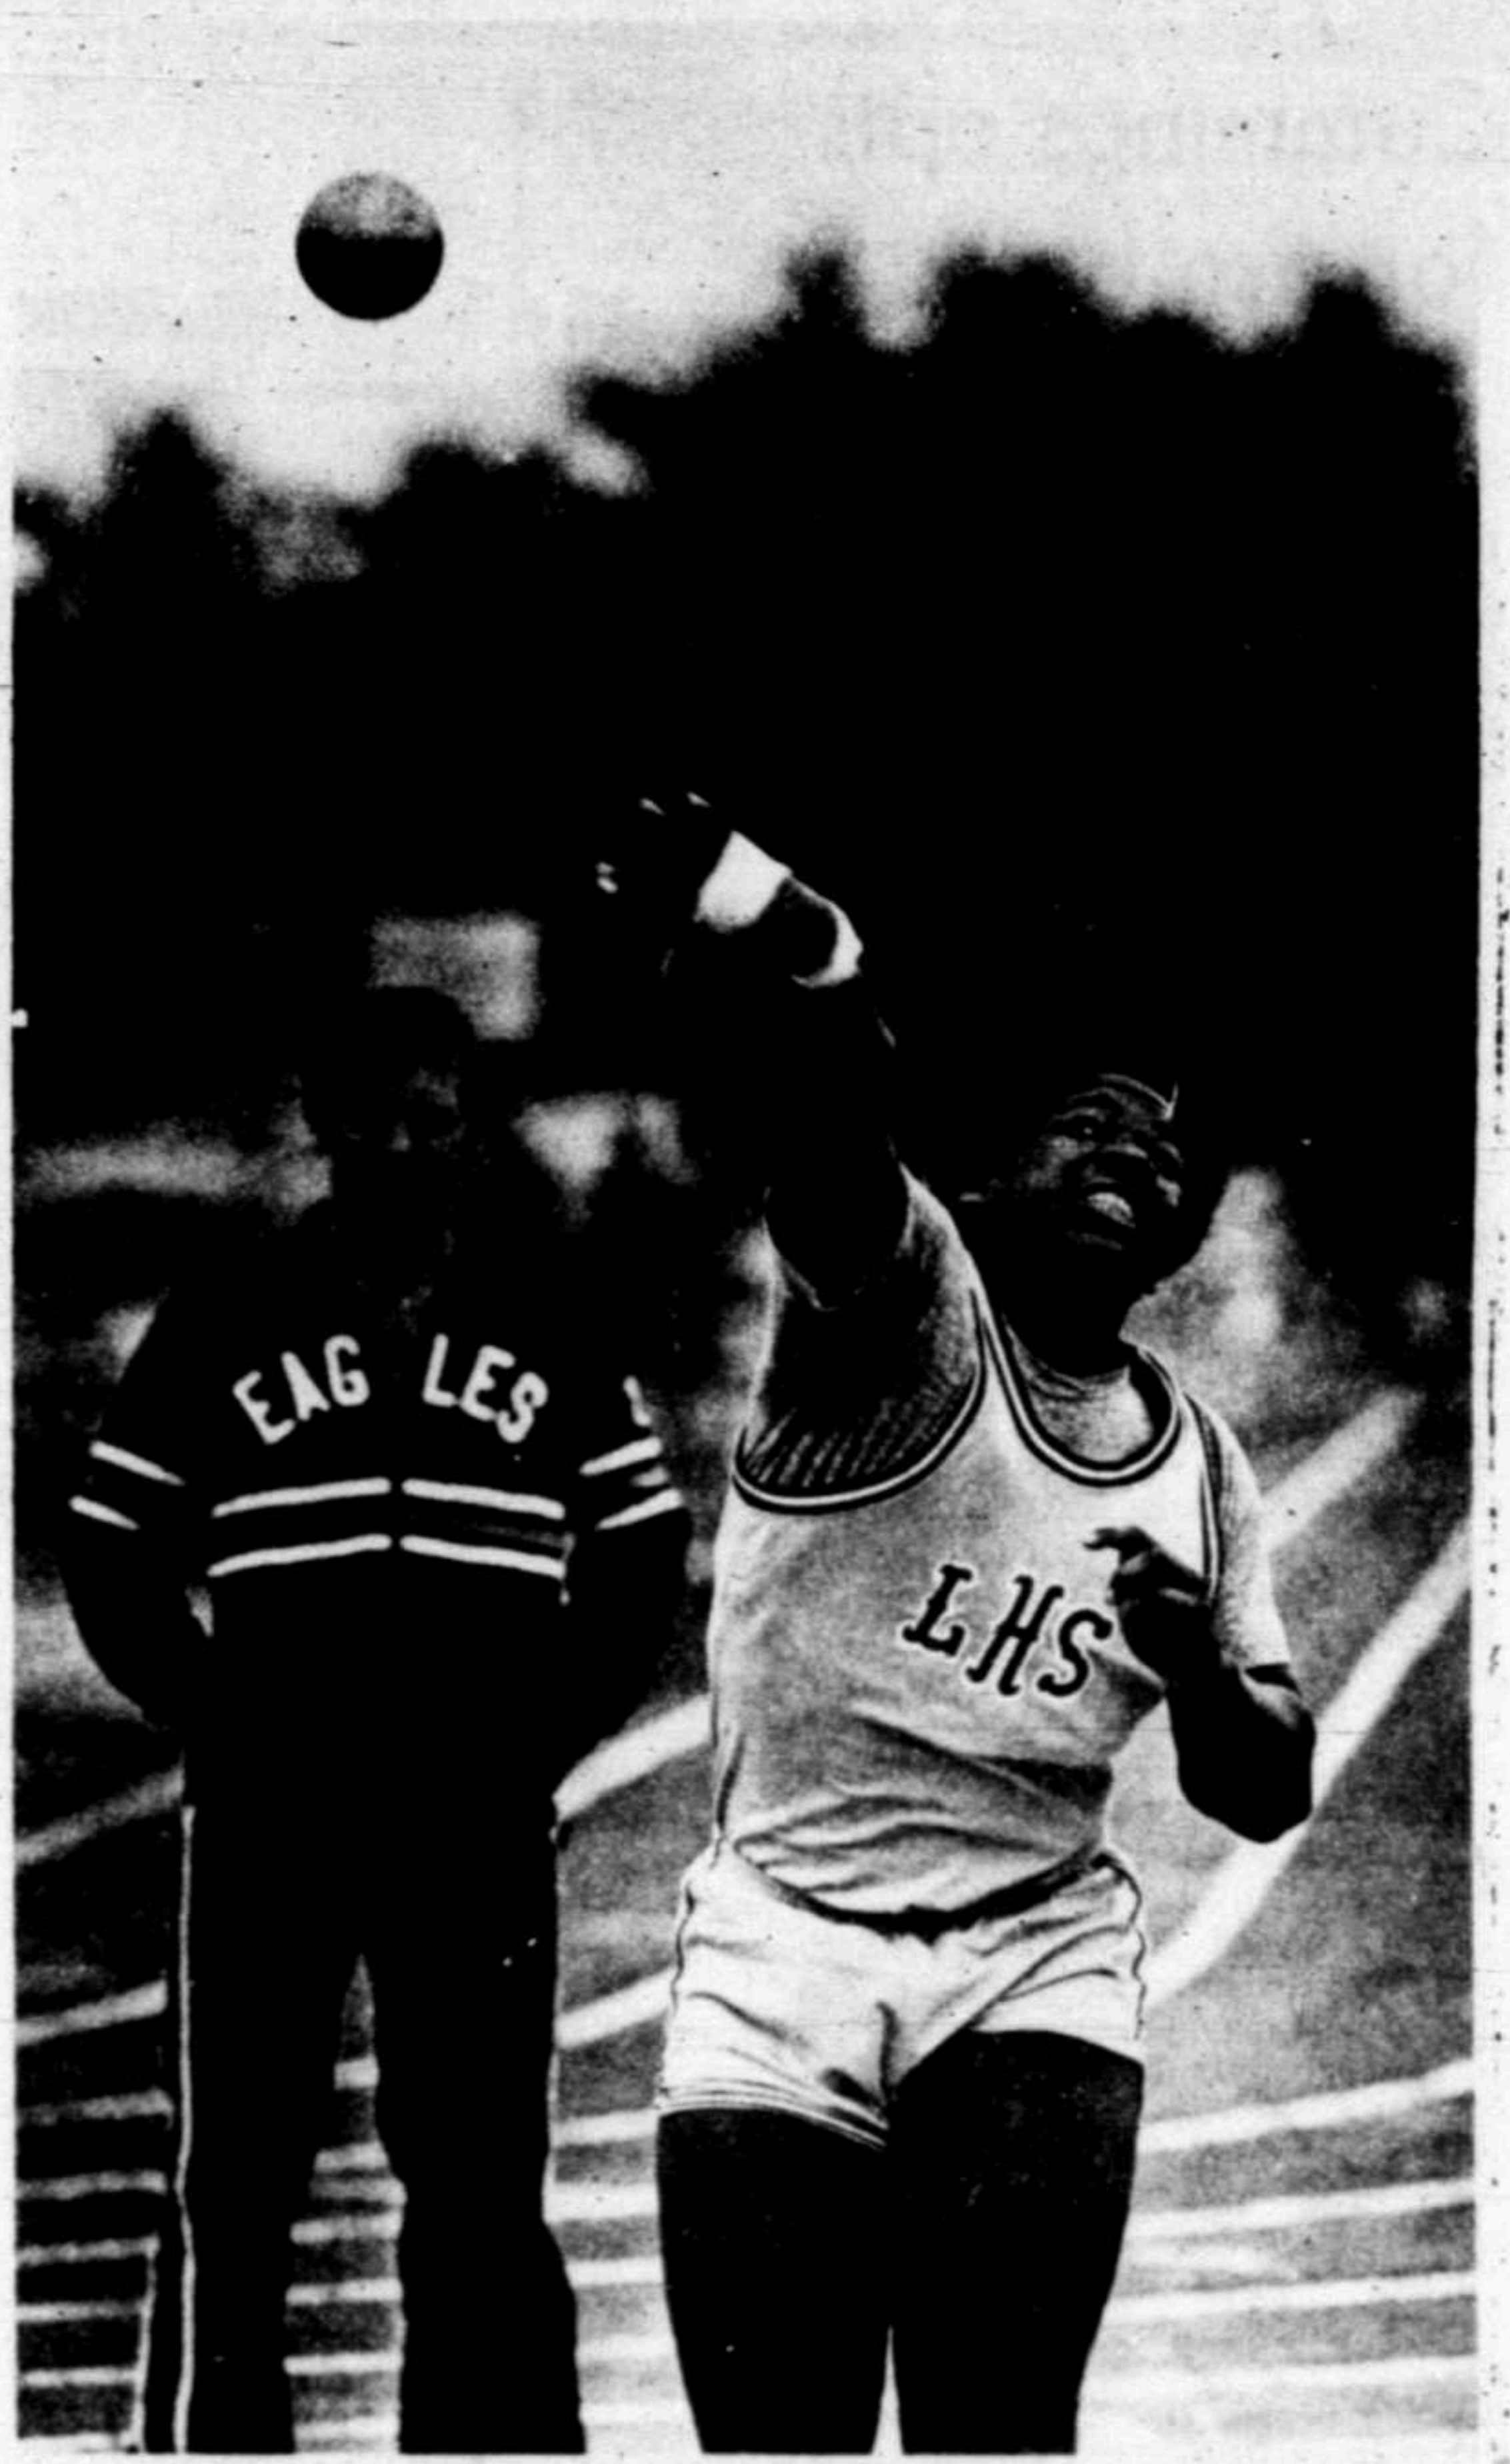

In mens doubles action Macken-Zavala defeated Porter-Cavazos 6-4, 6-4 and will face Sparkman-Crosser in the No.1 mens finals. Saul-King beat Vargas-Horiuchi 7-6, 6-4 to gain their finals match-up against Frank-Karam and Rick Cargill (NMMI). Peters-Weber lost their match to Cordoba-Gonzales 6-3, 6-0.

All singles finals will begin at 9 a.m. at the MC tennis courts with doubles scheduled to start at 11 a.m.

Midland Lee Sophomore Isaac Garnett pulled off an upset Friday at the District 5-5A track meet when he won the shot put with a throw of 54-feet-1 1/4 to qualify for the Region I meet in Lubbock on May 7-8.

Houston evens series by beating Seattle 91-70

HOUSTON (AP) - Houston's Moses Malone keyed a controlled-tempo offense with 28 points and 23 rebounds and the Rockets shut down the fast breaking Seattle SuperSonics 91-70 Friday night to even their National Basketball Association mini-series playoff at one game each.

The final game of the best of three series will be played Sunday in Seattle. The Rockets, stunned by the running Sonics 102-87 in the opening game at Seattle, led from start to finish and overcame a brief Sonics rally in the third quarter when the visitors rallied to a five-point deficit, 55-50.

Seattle, which hit only 27 percent from the field in the first half, was led by Gus Williams with 18 points and Jack Sikma with 16 points and 11 rebounds.

Malone, almost shutout in the second half of game No. 1, piled up the points in the second half of the second game.

The Rockets went cold for 5:30 of the third quarter when the Sonics ran off eight unanswered points and cut Houston's lead to 55-50 before Malone ended the turnaround with three straight buckets. Houston maintained a 63-53 lead at the end of the quarter.

Levell gave the Rockets the outside shooting they didn't have in the first game of the series.

Seattle hit only three of its first 11 shots and finished the first quarter hitting only 27 percent from the field.

The Rockets led by as much as 40-27 in the second quarter when Malone spurred for 12 points.

Atnipp falls in Region I tennis

LUBBOCK - Vee Ann Atnipp, Midland's sole representative in the 5A Region I Tennis Tournament, lost her semi-final match to third seed Sandra Torres of El Paso-Irvin 3-6, 6-4, 4-6 today. Atnipp was seeded second in the tournament held at the Lubbock Municipal Tennis Center.

In the quarterfinals the 18 year old senior defeated Mayela Rivera of El Paso-Ysleta in straight sets 7-5, 6-4. Atnipp drew a bye in the first round of play.

Atnipp will face Karen Shelby of Amarillo High today at 9 a.m. for third places and the alternate position for state. Shelby and Atnipp faced each other once this year in the Tall City Invitational which Atnipp won in a dramatic come-from-behind victory.

MHS girls qualify in two events in Region I track

LUBBOCK - Midland High has qualified in two events through the first day of competition in the Region I Girls Track Meet here at the R.P. Fuller Track.

Lydia Jackson finished with the second fastest time in the 100 meter dash preliminaries with a 12.63 to qualify for the finals. Jackson also anchored the 4x100 relay team with Demetra Fort, Sheila Christian and Arlene Adams. Their time of 49.29 was the fourth best time in the preliminaries which qualified them for the finals.

Lady Bulldogs earn berth in state tourney

LUBBOCK - "We have one more trip to make," the elated voice said. The voice belonged to Mary Baird, Midland High Girls Golf Coach. The reference was to a trip to the Texas State Girls Golf Championships in Austin on May 6-7.

The Lady Bulldogs earned the trip by finishing second in the 5A Region 1 Girls Golf Championship here, Thursday and Friday.

Westwood High won the tournament with a two day total of 693 while MHS had a 782. The Lady Bulldogs edged out Bryan High by five strokes as the Eagles shot a 787.

Entered as an individual only, Sami Brown of Temple had rounds of 81 and 82 to capture the Medalist Honors. Sherry Greiner, of Westwood, finished second, with a 168 total, one stroke ahead of District 5-5A Medalist Janis Littlefield of MHS. Bulldog teammate Kelle Moberly finished fourth with a 170 for the two rounds.

Competing in her first tournament for MHS Karen Wagner had a two day total of 219. Shelle Parker shot a 224 and Kendra Cox came in with a 260 to round out the MHS scoring. For the Lee Rebels Leila Lockhart was the only competitor to break the century mark each day as she had a 194 total. Gayla Strickland shot a 203 and sophomore teammate Lesa Burnett shot identical rounds to finished with a 222 total. Staci Childers had a two-day total of 243 and Joni Fye came in with a 257.

Snead-January shoot 62 to lead Legends of Golf

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Sam Snead and Don January, taking advantage of winter rules that allowed them to improve their lie on the fairway, scorched soggy Onion Creek Golf Club with an 8-under par 62 Friday to capture the first-round lead in the Liberty Mutual Legends of Golf Tournament.

Fueled by the 69-year-old Snead's 35-foot putt for birdie on the sixth hole, the duo went out in 4-under par 31 and came home in 4-under 31 over the tight but tricky 6,584-yard layout.

They owned a one-shot lead over defending champions Gene Littler and Bob Rosburg, who shot 33-30 for a 7-under par 63.

The $450,000 best-ball tournament was shortened to 54-holes after the opening round was canceled by rain Thursday. First prize is $100,000.

Snead, who won this tournament along with Gardner Dickinson in 1977, birdied three holes on the front nine. January had a 35-foot birdie putt of his own on the front side and birdied four holes on the back.

"When Sam made that birdie putt on the sixth hole it just released everything... it got us going," said January.

"That put it what I call a 'sea-goer'" said Snead. "It just kind of disappeared over the hill and went into the hole."

January said, "Sam was just hitting every shot at the hole. He's so good. I have a tendency to get defensive in team play but not with him around."

Julius Boros, bouncing back from heart surgery, and Miller Barber were three shots behind the leaders with a 5-under par 65.

At 4-under par 66 were Tommy Bolt-Art Wall, newcomers Bill Collins-Harvie Ward, and Dan Sikes-Gardner Dickinson.

Snead said of January, "When he plays his normal game I'm just a crutch out there... he's a stud."

Rosburg said, "Being able to lift and dry the ball really helped the scores today. We got out of a couple of tight spots because we could tee the ball up."

Littler said, "We're in good position. We just wanted to get off to a good start."

The final 36 holes of the tournament were scheduled to be nationally televised by NBC.

Yankees trade Watson to Braves

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees traded veteran first baseman Bob Watson to the Atlanta Braves Friday in exchange for minor league pitcher Scott Patterson.

Patterson, a right-hander, will move from the Braves' Richmond

International League club to the Yankees' Columbus affiliate.

Watson, 35, signed as a free-agent with the Yankees Nov. 8, 1979. He was the Yankees' leading hitter in 1980 when he batted .307 in 130 games with 13 homers and 68 runs batted in.

Meyer to stay, Cummings opts for pro ball

By JOE MOOSHIL
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Ray Meyer will be back to coach a DePaul basketball team that won't have All-American Terry Cummings next season.

Meyer, 68, officially announced Friday he will return for his 41st season as head coach. But Cummings, a junior, said he will be available for the National Basketball Association draft.

The two lauded each other before going their separate ways and Meyer, who has a career record of 676 victories against 339 losses, said fans should expect a different DePaul team next season.

"From Frank Corzine to Mark Aguirre to Terry Cummings, we have played through the superstar," said Meyer. "Now we will be a different team. We will be a good team but I don't know if we will be great."

The past three seasons, DePaul has been on the brink of greatness with 79 victories and only six defeats. But three of those defeats came in first games in each of three seasons of NCAA tournament competition.

"We have built a monstrosity at DePaul by winning so much and then losing in the NCAA," said Meyer, whose loss to Boston College this last season was such a disappointment that he contemplated retirement.

"But I'm very much an active person and I realized that if I stopped coaching I'd be unhappy. I enjoy coaching. I love coaching and the challenge of coaching."

However, Meyer admitted his outlook might have been different if DePaul had been more successful in the NCAA tournament.

"If I had won it, I believe I would have retired," said Meyer. "Maybe not winning, because you have to be lucky, but at least getting to the final four."

Cummings, who averaged 22.3 points and 11.9 rebounds last season, said he gave turning pro "hard consideration."

Midland College Athletic Director Delnor Poss receives a Monte Carlo from Frank See as an aid to the recruiting campaign of the National Champion Junior College basketball champion Chaparrals.

Before the tournament, See offered a car to Coach Jerry Stone for recruiting if his team brought home the national bid.

NCAA hits USC with stiffest probation

By DOUG TUCKER
AP Sports Writer
MISSION, Kan. (AP) — The University of Southern California football program, which has won national championships in four decades, was hit Friday with one of the stiffest three-year probations ever leveled by the NCAA.

Citing a ticket-selling scheme used to funnel cash to players over a 10-year period, the NCAA's Infractions Committee banned the Trojans from bowl games following the 1982-83 and 1983-84 academic years and prohibited television appearances during 1983 and 1984.

"The most flagrant example of willful circumvention of NCAA legislation," occurred in the case, Charles Alan Wright chairman of the Infractions Committee, said in a prepared statement.

In addition, an unnamed Southern Cal assistant football coach is to have his salary frozen and not be allowed to recruit for two years. The ruling specifies that Southern Cal cannot replace him with another recruiter.

The university will be eligible for television appearances this season.

NCAA policy is not to make public the names of individuals cited in infractions cases. However, Los Angeles area newspapers have linked Mary Goux, a long-time Southern Cal assistant, with the ticket-selling scheme.

The NCAA said an assistant coach "during the period of 1971-79 deliberately violated NCAA rules by selling complimentary tickets of varsity football team members at prices in excess of their face value in order to provide large sums of cash to the team members who chose to participate in this arrangement."

The violations "represent a significant and extensive pattern of improper benefits made available to enroll student-athletes, particularly members of the university's football team, over a period of about 10 years as well as a lack of administrative control of the conduct of the university's intercollegiate athletic program," said Wright.

"The Committee on Infractions believes that because of the benefits that accrued to student-athletes who had been instrumental in contributing to the successful football team records of the university, the institution realized a significant competitive advantage over other member institutions."

"The committee believes such an improper competitive advantage and the resultant athletic prestige gained by the university should not be realized without substantial disciplinary action."

University officials appealed the committee's decision this week to the policy-making NCAA Council at the Council's regularly scheduled meeting in St. Louis. The appeal was denied.

The ruling also specified that 16 unnamed individuals who bought the complimentary tickets shall be barred from helping Southern Cal recruit during the probation period.

"The university will also curtail, to the extent of its authority, any involvement of the individuals and the university's athletic program during that period," Wright said.

USC has turned out numerous all-Americans and several Heisman Trophy winners and claims national championships in football in 1928, '31, '32, '62, '67, '72 and '78.

The Pacific-10 Conference barred the school from bowl games the past season because of academic violations concerning athletes.

The announcement Friday marks the second time in less than six months a highly successful Pac-10 athletic program has been penalized by the NCAA. During the past basketball season, UCLA was put on a one-year probation for violations in basketball recruiting. Southern Cal has long been the dominant power in Pac-10 football, and currently holds a 254-96-26 record against conference competition.

The NCAA said its investigation began in 1980 as a result of newspaper articles which quoted former Trojan players talking about the ticket-selling pattern.

"During the investigation, the Pacific-10 Conference took punitive action against Southern Cal in August, 1980, as a result of violations concerning arrangement for unearned academic credits for student-athletes enrolled in the university," said the NCAA release.

"The Pac-10 penalty prohibited the school's participation in conference championships or in post-season competition during the 1980-81 academic year in football, and men's outdoor track, and required the adjustment of team scores and track records for the 1978 men's outdoor track season."

Wright said the Infractions Committee reviewed the conference penalties in regard to the academic abuses, but "the violations in this case were found independently from the academic matters," considered by the conference.

Nation's top ranked college tennis players keep winning

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — The nation's two top-ranked college singles players, Texas Christian's David Pate and Southern Methodist's Rodney Harmon, won their quarterfinal matches Friday in the Southwest Conference tennis championships.

75. Arkansas' Peter Doohan and Pat Serret, last year's runners-up, lost to Houston's Mike Livshitz and Steve Couch 1-6, 6-2, 7-5. SMU leads the tournament with 67 points following

SMU won all six of its singles matches and two of its three doubles matches Friday to increase its team lead to six points over second-place TCU.

Pate defeated Tres Cushing of Rice 6-3, 6-1, and Harmon beat Fred Viancas of Texas Tech 6-4, 6-4.

The Arkansas Razorbacks were victimized twice by upsets Friday. Jean Van Rensburg lost to Texas A&M's Greg Hill 6-2,

Astros dump Reds 7-3

HOUSTON (AP) — Consecutive home runs by Art Howe and Phil Garner highlighted a six-run third inning that powered the Houston Astros to a 7-3 victory Friday night over the Cincinnati Reds.

With two out in the third inning, Denny Walling, Terry Puhl and Alan Ashby were on base with walks, issued by losing pitcher Tom Seaver, 0-2, when Ray Knight's single brought in the first two runs of the game.

Howe then socked Seaver's 0-1 pitch over the left field barrier for his second homer of the year. Garner's solo shot, his first of the season, made it 6-0.

The Astros padded their lead with a run in the sixth when Garner doubled and came in on Dickie Thon's two-bagger.

Joe Niecko, 2-1, was the winner for Houston but was chased in the seventh, when the Reds score three runs on five straight hits.

Reds pinch-hitter Rafael Landestoy doubled with two out and was knocked in by Ed Milner's single to right. After Dan Driessen singled, Dave Concepcion's single up the middle scored Milner to make it 7-2.

Mike LaCoss, released by the Reds in the spring and picked up by the Astros, relieved Niecko. Johnny Bench blooped a run-scoring single to drive in Driessen. LaCoss then ended the rally by striking out Larry Bittner and went on to earn his first save.

Sixers eliminate Hawks

ATLANTA (AP) — Julius Erving scored 28 points and Caldwell-Jones nailed four free throws in the final 67 seconds as Philadelphia trimmed Atlanta 98-95 in overtime Friday night and advanced to the second round of the National Basketball Association playoffs.

The victory gave the 76ers a two-game sweep of Atlanta in the mini-series, and advances them to a best-of-seven second round confrontation with the Milwaukee Bucks.

Jones broke a 93-93 deadlock when he sank two free throws with 1:07 remaining and Atlanta was unable to seriously challenge after Maurice Cheeks made a steal to give the 76ers possession again.

Erving had a basket nullified on a charging call with 30 seconds to play, but came through with a block of a Dan Roundfield shot with 13 seconds to go.

Nine seconds later, Jones added two more free throws for a 97-93 advantage and Roundfield, who had a game-high 29 points, hit a stuff shot with two seconds to play.

Erving added the final point with only one second remaining. Roundfield had forced the game into overtime when he drilled a 15-footer with 12 seconds remaining in regulation to get Atlanta even at 90.

Roundfield then teamed with Rory Sparrow to trap Cheeks as the horn sounded.

Morrison hits Chisox to victory

BALTIMORE (AP) — Jim Morrison, who had only four hits and a .138 batting average in Chicago's first 10 games, banged out three hits in four trips Friday night, including a game-winning triple in the ninth inning, as the Baltimore Orioles handed their ninth consecutive setback, 4-2.

Morrison's triple off the left field wall scored Harold Baines to snap a 2-2 tie and hand Jim Palmer, 0-1, the loss.

"Palmer threw some tough pitches to me, but I managed to get the ball in the holes," Morrison said. "The ball I hit in the ninth was a breaking pitch that I pulled down the line.

This was a big win for us. We lost two in a row and we wanted to get started on another winning streak."

Bob Shearer of North Myrtle Beach, S.C., lines up his birdie putt on the last hole of the first round of the New Orleans Open Friday. Shearer, the winner of last week's tournament in Tallahassee, carded a 6-under-par 66 for a one-stroke lead over Scott Hoch and Jim Colbert over a wet and soggy 18 holes.

Shearer up by one shot in New Orleans Open golf

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Bob Shearer slogged over wet, soggy fairways to a 6-under-par 66 and the first-round lead Friday in the rain-delayed $400,000 USF&G New Orleans Open Golf Tournament.
The Australian played his back nine in a 5-under-par 31 and took a 1-stroke lead over veteran Jim Colbert, who holed a 113-yard 8-iron shot for an eagle-2, and Scott Hoch, who played without a bogey. They were tied at 67.
George Archer, Ron Commans, Larry Ziegler and Jim Simons, a winner at the Bing Crosby earlier this season, were at 68.

TOM WATSON, who has won this title the last two seasons, and Jack Nicklaus were 5 shots off the pace at 71.
Nicklaus birdied the last hole from about 6 feet to get under par for the mild, sunny, breezy day, while Watson had to rally to overcome a bogey-bogey start.
"Generally, I played very well," said Nicklaus, who is seeking his first victory of the season.
But he had continuing problems with his putting, missing birdies putts of about 6 feet on three of the last five holes and failing twice on par-saving putts of about 3 feet.

"I didn't putt well at all," said the man who owns a record 17 major professional titles. "I felt like I should have had a 67 or 68 off the way I played."
THE TOURNAMENT'S start was delayed a day by heavy, day-long rains that flooded the 7,080-yard Lakewood Country Club course Thursday and left it spotted with puddles of water Friday. The tournament format now calls for a single round Saturday and a double round of 36 holes, weather permitting, Sunday.
Shearer, who recently converted to a cross-handed putting style, last week scored his first victory on the American PGA Tour.
"I really didn't know what to expect after winning at Tallahassee last week," said Shearer, 33, now in his seventh full year of competition on the American tour.
"I was playing with confidence, but after winning sometimes it can turn around and you have a letdown. But I played my back nine about as well as I can play."
Shearer, winner of more than a half-dozen international titles in a globe-trotting career, had to make a 10-foot par-saving putt on his eighth hole, then scored from 20 feet on his ninth.
He made his big move on his last nine holes. He flipped a sand wedge to within 3 feet of the cup on his 11th hole, dropped a couple of 12-15 foot birdie putts, then closed birdie-birdie, hitting mid-irons inside of 5 feet on his 17th and 18th.

NFL lives and dies by draft

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — National Football League teams live and die by the draft.
Just ask the Pittsburgh Steelers or the San Francisco 49ers. Then watch next Tuesday and Wednesday, when the future of your favorite team will be decided.
The two-day, 12-round selection process by which the nation's best collegiate players are divided among 28 franchises has come a long way since the Jay Berwanger era.
The University of Chicago back was the winner of the first Heisman Trophy, awarded by the Downtown Athletic Club in New York to the premier college player. He was also the first player picked in the first NFL draft, in 1936, by the Philadelphia Eagles. They traded his rights to the Chicago Bears. He and George Halas, the owner of the Bears got together over a cup of coffee. Halas made an offer. Berwanger rejected it. Berwanger got up and left the table (Halas paid the check) and never played pro ball.
On Tuesday, at 10 a.m. EST in the Grand Ballroom of the New York Sheraton Hotel, NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle will bring the proceedings to order and, barring a late trade, will read from an index card the New England Patriots' choice. And another instant millionaire will be created. The consensus is that if New England still has the No. 1 choice, it'll be Texas defensive tackle Kenneth Sims.
It would be nice, the Patriots think, if Sims does for them what Joe Greene did for the Steelers.
In 1969, the Steelers won one game and lost 13 for their new head coach, Chuck Noll. But also in 1969, Noll perused the scouting sheets and, to the dismay of a lot of Steeler fans, used his first-round choice to take Greene, a defensive tackle from North Texas State.
That year, when the draft still covered 17 rounds it was reduced to 12 in 1977. Noll also selected quarterback Terry Hanratty, center Jon Kolb and defensive end L.C. Greenwood.
The next year, he picked quarterback Terry Bradshaw and defensive back Mel Blount. In 1971 he added wide receiver Frank Lewis, linebacker Jack Ham, guard Gerry Mullins, defensive end Dwight White, defensive tackle Ernie Holmes and defensive back Mike Wagner. In the following three seasons they were joined by running back Franco Harris, defensive end Steve Furness, wide receivers Lynn Swann and John Stallworth, linebacker Jack Lambert and center Mike Webster.
By then, what had been the worst team in the NFL just five years earlier was about to win the first of an unprecedented four Super Bowls.
Since 1974, though, the drafts have been leaner for the Steelers. And in the past two seasons, they've failed to even make the playoffs.
Now consider the 49ers, the reigning Super Bowl champions.
In 1979, they suffered through their second consecutive 2-14 season. That was also the season they drafted in the third round, mind you, a quarterback out of Notre Dame named Joe Montana. Oh, yes, in the 10th round that year they picked up a wide receiver out of Clemson named Dwight Clark.
In 1980 they chose running back Earl Cooper, defensive end Jim Stuckey, and linebackers Keena Turner and Craig Puki. And last year they picked cornerbacks Ronnie Lott and Eric Wright and safety Carlton Williamson. In three years, they went to the top of the mountain.
Also consider the New York Giants.
For years, their drafts were questionable at best. First-round picks failed to last through training camp or bombed out in their first or second years. Giants fans still wince at the names Joe Don Looney, Rocky Thompson and Eldridge Small.

But in the past three seasons, the Giants have used their first-round picks to select quarterback Phil Simms, cornerback Mark Hayes and, last year, the NFL Defensive Player of the Year as well as Rookie of the Year, linebacker Lawrence Taylor. And last year, the Giants — who hadn't been in the playoffs since 1963 and hadn't had a winner since 1972 — went 9-7 and knocked off the defending National Football Conference champion Philadelphia Eagles in the playoffs before losing to the 49ers.
The big speculation in this draft is not what the Patriots will do but what kind of choice the Baltimore Colts will make with the No. 2 selection in the first round. It all revolves around the future of Bert Jones, their quarterback. He is the subject of trade rumors, with Los Angeles most often mentioned. Many experts, therefore, expect the Colts to select a quarterback, either Jim McMahon of Brigham Young or Art Schlichter of Ohio State.
The rest of the first-round order, barring any late trades, is: Cleveland, Los Angeles, Chicago, Seattle, Minnesota, Houston, Atlanta, Oakland, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, New Orleans, Los Angeles, Detroit, Kansas City, Tampa Bay, the Giants, Denver, Philadelphia, Buffalo, Green Bay, the New York Jets, Miami, Dallas, Cincinnati and San Francisco.
New Orleans' own pick, No. 3 overall, was used last year in a supplementary draft to take quarterback Dave Wilson from Illinois. But the Saints have Green Bay's first-round pick (No. 14) in a complicated deal in which wide receiver John Jefferson went from San Diego to Green Bay, wide receiver Wes Chandler went from New Orleans to San Diego and Green Bay's first-round pick, which had gone to San Diego, was transferred to the Saints in the Chandler trade.
Los Angeles has two picks in the opening round — its own (No. 5) and Washington's (No. 15) as a result of choice-swapping in the draft a year ago.

Bullets eliminate Nets

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Kevin Grevey scored 13 points in less than four minutes early in the fourth quarter, as the Washington Bullets came from behind and defeated New Jersey 103-92 Friday night, knocking the Nets out of the National Basketball Association playoffs.
The victory gave the Bullets the best-of-three series 2-0, and moved them into the Eastern Conference semifinals against the Boston Celtics. The first game of the best-of-seven series will be in Boston Sunday.
With Albert King sinking all eight of his shots from the floor, the Nets took a 50-47 halftime lead before Spencer Haywood led a third quarter rally which put Washington on top 71-68.
Haywood scored 11 of his 15 points during that period and Frank Johnson added seven of his 19.
A six-point streak, capped by a Grevey basket which ignited his hot streak, gave Washington a 79-70 lead early in the fourth quarter.
In the next few minutes, Grevey had three three-point plays, one after a foul and the others on long field goals. Grevey added another three pointer in the closing minute and finished with 23 points.
King, who sank 11 in a row before missing, finished with 25 points for New Jersey and Ray Williams had 23. The Nets took the regular season series from Washington 4-2, winning all games by six points or less.

Winds don't slow down Postlewait in Lady Classic

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Kathy Postlewait defied tricky winds, fired a record-tying 66 and took the first-round lead in the $150,000 Orlando Lady Classic golf tournament Friday.
Postlewait's 6-under-par performance over the 6,106-yard par-72 Rio Pinar layout was 4 strokes better than the second-place score posted by five golfers — Janet Coles, Donna White, Patty Sheehan, Sandra Haynie and Dot Germain.
The 66 also tied the low-opening round score this year for the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour.
Five golfers were tied for third with 71 in the 54-hole event which carries a first-place purse of $22,500.
"I'm a fairly good wind player," said

Postlewait about the swirling gusts that turned the round into a cautious one for many players, particularly on the front nine. "It didn't bother me too much today obviously," she added. "The most problem I have in the wind is putting, believe it or not."
Postlewait, a non-winner in her 8th year on the tour, is in 10th place on the money list with $25,740.93 so far this year. Her best finish in the current campaign was third in Sarasota after leading it in the first round.
In third place were Sally Little, this year's leading money winner, with $103,788.34, and Kelly Fuiks, Nancy Lopez-Melton, Jan Stephenson and Kyle O'Brien.

Scott wins for Baylor

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Baylor's James Scott won the 3,000 meter steeplechase and the Bears also won the 400 meter relay and the distance medley relay Friday in the opening night of the Texas A&M Relays.
West Texas State won two events in the men's division Friday night and Texas A&M won one.
Scott posted a time of 9:04.7 and Mitch Smith, Greg Harbour, Kyle Wargo and John Robinson clocked a 7:28.22 in the 4 X 400 meter relay. Harbour, Doug Tucker, Bobby Burkhalter and Robinson had a winning time of 9:49.01 in the distance medley.
West Texas' Dave Mayfield won the discuss with a throw of 175 feet 6 inches, and teammate Earl Wilson took the 400-meter dash in 45.88.
Texas A&M's James Washington, Darrell Austin, Vernon Pittman and Rod Richardson won the 800-meter relay in 1:21.61.
Barbara Collingsworth of A&M won the 5,000 meter run for women with a time of 16:52.33, and teammate Ellen Smith won the 400-meter hurdles in 59.89.
Texas' Jo Beth Palmer won the women's discuss with a 157-9 and Robin Coleman of Texas won the 400-meter dash in 53.50.

Cards beat Phillies for 11th straight

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — George Hendrick homered and singled twice to knock in three runs and Ozzie Smith homered in the seventh inning to lead the St. Louis Cardinals to their 11th straight triumph, a 9-2 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies Friday night.

Smith also singled twice as the Cardinals extended their longest winning streak since 1943. St. Louis scored three runs in the fourth, sixth and seventh innings in handing the Phillies their 10th loss in 13 games.

St. Louis starter Bob Forsch, 30, scattered eight hits over eight innings and helped his cause by triggering the Cardinals' three-run sixth with a two-out single. Doug Bair relieved Forsch to start the ninth.

The Cards scored three times in the fourth when Philadelphia starter Mike Krukow, 1-2, walked Keith Hernandez and Darryl Porter to open the inning. Hendrick, Dane Iorg and Smith followed with RBI singles.

In the sixth, Forsch singled off reliever Sid Monge and Lonnie Smith beat out an infield hit. Tom Herr drove in Forsch with a single and Smith scored when left fielder Gary Matthews bobbled the ball. Hernandez followed with a single, driving in Herr from second.

Hendrick homered in the seventh after Porter's leadoff single and Ozzie Smith hit his second homer of the season two outs later. The Cardinals shortstop had not hit a home run in three seasons.

Pete Rose knocked in both Philadelphia runs with a first-inning sacrifice fly and a third-inning single.

Evans throws out tying run to help Bosox win 5-4

TORONTO (AP) — Jim Rice belted a two-run homer, Carney Lansford added a solo blast and right fielder Dwight Evans threw out the potential tying run at the plate to end the game as the Boston Red Sox nipped the Toronto Blue Jays 5-4 Friday night.

Boston starter John Tudor, 3-0, blanked the Blue Jays until the eighth when he needed help from Luis Aponte and Tom Burgmeier as Toronto scored its first three runs.

Boston took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Jerry Remy drew a leadoff walk from Jim Clancy, 0-2, moved to second when Rice walked and scored on Carl Yastrzemski's single. Lansford made it 2-0 in the fourth with his first homer of the season over the right field wall.

In the sixth, Dwight Evans led off with a triple and scored on Rice's single. Rice smashed his first homer of the season in the eighth

Padres down Braves in 12

ATLANTA (AP) — Sixto Lezcano's second home run of the game, a three-run blast in the 12th inning, gave San Diego a 6-3 victory over the Atlanta Braves Friday, extending the Padres' winning streak to nine games, second longest in club history.

Gene Richards led off the 12th with a double that bounced over the fence in right-center field, and he moved to third on a sacrifice by Juan Bonilla. After Ruppert Jones was intentionally walked by Rick Camp, 2-1, Lezcano drilled a shot to left field.

reliever Larry McWilliams. After Padres reliever Gary Lucas sacrificed Lezcano to second, McWilliams walked Luis Salazar intentionally. Kurt Bevacqua then drove in Lezcano with a single.

Lucas could not hold the lead. Pinch-hitter Rufino Linares led off the Atlanta 11th with a single, and he took second on Brett Butler's grounder. Glenn Hubbard then singled to tie the score.

Lucas could not hold the lead. Pinch-hitter Rufino Linares led off the Atlanta 11th with a single, and he took second on Brett Butler's grounder. Glenn Hubbard then singled to tie the score.

Tailing 2-1, Hubbard slugged a sixth-inning homer, his first, that eventually sent the game into extra innings.

Padres starter Tim Lollar gave him self a 1-0 lead when he led off the third inning with a homer, his first. San Diego increased its lead in the fourth when Lezcano led off with a homer, also his first.

The Braves cut the margin to one in their half of the inning when Bob Horner walked and scored on Dale Murphy's double.

Pirates down Cubs 12-10

CHICAGO (AP) — Omar Moreno drove in four runs and Bill Madlock and Mike Easler each rapped three hits Friday as the Pittsburgh Pirates snapped a four-game losing streak with a 12-10 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Moreno had a two-run single and a pair of sacrifice flies. Madlock scored three runs and Easler and Tony Pena drove in three runs apiece.

Pena had a pair of doubles and Jason Thompson hit his third homer as the Pirates launched a 17-hit attack, their biggest of the season.

Eddie Solomon, 1-2, the first of four Pirate pitchers, earned the victory with Kent Tekulve posting his first save of the year. Dickie Noles, 2-2, was the loser. The Cubs took a 2-0 lead in the first inning on a run-scoring single by Leon Durham followed by Keith Moreland's wind-blown triple.

The Pirates scored four in the second on a run-scoring single by Easler, a two-run double by Pena, and a sacrifice fly by Moreno. Easler singled in a run in the third and Moreno had a sacrifice fly in the fourth before the Pirates scored four more in the fifth capped by Moreno's two-run single.

Tigers romp Yankees 9-1

NEW YORK (AP) — Dan Petry fired a seven-hit and Larry Herndon, John Wockenfuss and Alan Trammell drove in two runs apiece as the Detroit Tigers romped to their seventh straight victory Friday night by routing the New York Yankees 9-1.

Detroit scored two runs off loser Dave Righetti, 1-2, in the second, two more in the third and chased him in a two-run fourth in beating the young left-hander for the second time in six days. Four victories in the Tigers' seven-game string have come against the Yankees.

Righetti started his own downfall by walking Wockenfuss and Glenn Wilson, the first two batters in the second inning. Center fielder Jerry Mumphrey threw Wockenfuss out at the plate on a single by Howard Johnson but Trammell singled one run across and a sacrifice fly by Lou Whitaker produced another.

In the third, Enos Cabell singled and was forced by Kirk Gibson. Herndon tripled to make it 3-0 and scored on John Wockenfuss' fielder's choice.

Brewers nip Rangers 2-1

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Moose Haas scattered six hits in eight innings and Don Money singled home the winning run in the fifth as the Milwaukee Brewers edged the Texas Rangers 2-1 Friday night.

Haas, 1-0, did not walk a batter and struck out two before Rolife Fingers came on to start the ninth and earn his second save, striking out two of the three batters he faced. Haas and Fingers combined to outduel Rick Honeycutt, 0-2, who struck out seven, walked four and hit a batter but surrendered only six hits.

Milwaukee scored a run in the first inning on a leadoff walk to Paul Molitor, a double by Charlie Moore and a sacrifice fly by Cecil Cooper.

Texas tied it in the fourth when George Wright singled and scored on Billy Sample's double.

The Brewers broke the tie an inning later when Gorman Thomas doubled and scored on Money's single.

A throwing error in the sixth by Texas first baseman Pat Putnam ended a string of 74 errorless innings by the Rangers, a team record.

Expos edge Mets, 5-4

MONTREAL (AP) — Al Oliver's infield single scored Rodney Scott with the winning run in the seventh when he fanned sluggers George Foster and Dave Kingman to escape the jam.

New York had taken a 3-2 lead in the fifth on Wally Backman's one-out triple and a sacrifice fly by Foster.

But the Expos tied it in their half of the inning off Frank Taveras drew a leadoff walk. Gullickson pitched a sacrificed and one gut later, Jerry White delivered an RBI double.

Montreal overcame a 2-0 deficit in the fourth as Oliver cracked his third homer following Dawson's leadoff double.

After John Stearns provided the Mets with a second-inning run on an RBI-single, Kingman made it 2-0 in the fourth, leading off the inning with his sixth homer, tops in the National League.

The Mets tied the score in the ninth when pinch hitter Rusty Staub walked and Mookie Wilson tripled, scoring pinch runner Bob Bailor.

The Expos led 4-3 after Warren Cromartie tagged a bases-empty homer in the sixth. The homer, against Randy Jones, was the third of the season for Cromartie and broke a 3-3 tie. It was also the Expos' fourth off Jones in his two starts against them this year.

Expos starter Bill Gullickson struck out nine including five in a row splitting headache coming on...

...relax with the Want Ads!

When you've got interesting reading at hand, it's easy to relax and put your problems aside. When it comes to reading that captures the interest of the whole family, it's hard to beat the Want Ads.

Everyone is interested in bargains. Dad may be thinking of a better car, or a larger home. Perhaps he needs help with some remodeling project around the house, he can check the Business Services directory.

Mom can look through the Classified Pages and find a seemingly unending source of fascinating reading. There are great bargains in household furnishings of every description.

The kids have a ball, too, drooling over the enticing offerings in such things as bicycles, trikes, sporting equipment, a cuddly puppy or kitten and, for the musically inclined, a wide range of instruments.

Persons looking for a job, a change of employment, or a business opportunity find the Help Wanted ads of unusual interest. Many a promising career has been started in the Want Ads.

Of all the interesting things about Want Ads, possibly the most interesting is the money factor. Not only do you save on great bargains, but you have access to ready cash by selling off your no-longer-needed articles. Take inventory of these usable items and call our Classified department to place a fast-acting selling message.

NOW ROGERS FORD BLASTS TRUCK PRICES!

$750 BACK ON FORD LARIAT PICKUPS $2000 BACK ON FORD XLT CLUB WAGON CASH BACK 100% FROM FORD ON ALL THESE TRUCKS!

It's one of the biggest Ford buyer assistance programs ever and it covers most new 1981 and 1982 light- and 1982 medium-duty trucks.

One big Ford advantage is this: Unlike a financing deal, you don't have to wait for any savings to be able to use it. You can get your money right now, 100% from Ford. And this cash back offer is on both cash and financed deals.

Just see us today and work out your best deal. Take delivery by June 6, 1982, and Ford will send a check direct to you. Limit one per customer. Or if you prefer, use the cash back to reduce your down payment.

If you're even thinking of a new truck this year, see us today.

Ramcon Homes New Lower Prices Limited Closing Costs 12 1/2% Financing Excellent Locations Great Investment a Good Deal For You

That's The Bottom Line

Ramcon has new lower prices beginning at $75,200. Ramcon will limit your closing costs. In most cases that saves you up to 50% or more on normal closing fees. Our 12 1/2% financing* enables you to qualify for more house and lower monthly payments. Ramcon homes are always built in the finest locations and if you'll check around you will find that Ramcon homes built in the past couple of years are now re-selling at top dollar figures. If your bottom line is a "Good Deal," make your first stop a Ramcon sale office.

Model Homes open Daily 10:00-Dark

*The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 12.5% for 90% loan-to-value. Interest will be charged at the most recent six-month Treasury Bill rate plus 3.5% rounded to the highest 1/8% of 1%, but not to exceed the maximum rate allowed by law. Payments on GPAM mortgages are graduated so as to increase 7.50% each year for the remaining four years. At the end of the first five year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 3.5%. The 7 1/2% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principal exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan.
ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATELY 13.25% ON 90% LOANS
