U.N. seeks sanctions against South Africa

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Security Council on Friday adopted a resolution calling for worldwide voluntary sanctions to force South Africa to dismantle its system of race separation. The United States and Britain abstained, and the vote was 13-0.

Earlier, the United States and Britain teamed up to veto a proposed amendment by the council's six nonaligned members that would have threatened South Africa with mandatory sanctions if it failed to eradicate its system of apartheid.

France, which co-sponsored the adopted resolution with Denmark, abstained on the amendment put forward by Burkina Faso, Egypt, India, Madagascar, Peru and Trinidad and Tobago.

Even without the threat of mandatory sanctions, the resolution is the strongest anti-apartheid measure to be taken by the 15-nation council since it proclaimed a mandatory arms embargo against South Africa in 1977.

French Ambassador Claude de Kemoularia, speaking after the vote, called the resolution the "gravest warning" to South Africa and added: "Let us hope this warning will be heeded.

Kurt Von Schirnding, South Africa's ambassador, told the Security Council Thursday that the internal situation in his country is not a matter for council discussion, and nothing it may say or do will deter his white-minority government from "what we believe is in the best interests of all the peoples of South Africa."

Apartheid is the system under which South's Africa's 5 million whites retain power and deny the vote and citizenship to 22 million blacks.

Earlier Friday, France resisted pressure from black African nations to toughen the resolution, which it and Denmark introduced the day before.

After telephone consultations with his Foreign Ministry, de Kemoularia agreed to only minor changes in the draft resolution, which also demands that South Africa lift its state of emergency.

Soviet delegate Vassily Safronchuk said that, although the United States and Britain criticized apartheid in words, their abstention "once again indicates on whose side these countries are."

British delegate Peter M. Maxey said before the vote that his delegation was not able to support the resolution's provisions for economic sanctions because they could "prove counterproductive."

"It would not be responsible to try to engender economic disruption in South Africa when it is clear that the economic advancement of all sections of the population, particularly of the poorest, has been a powerful catalyst for change and increases the pressure on the South African government to dismantle completely the apartheid laws," the British envoy declared.

During protracted behind-the-scenes negotiations, black African states were said to have dropped their earlier demand for inclusion in the resolution of condemnation of the Reagan administration's policy of "constructive engagement" with South Africa.

Such a feature undoubtedly would have drawn a U.S. veto. While calling Friday for an end to the state of emergency in South Africa, the White House reaffirmed "constructive engagement." The policy aims to bring about change in South Africa through diplomatic means rather than punitive measures.

The United States maintains that mandatory sanctions don't work and would harm blacks in South Africa.

To meet some of the black African objections to the draft resolution, France and Denmark agreed to add a paragraph reaffirming that "only the total elimination of apartheid and the establishment in South Africa of a free, united and democratic society on the basis of universal suffrage can lead to a solution."

Patrick Wayne joined Arf and about 400 Midlanders at Friday's SPCA benefit.

Wayne, too, has 'Cause for Paws'

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

About 400 Midlanders showed up at "A Cause for Paws," a benefit for the Midland chapter of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Friday evening at The Racquet Club.

The event was sponsored by The Canopy, a local women's apparel store, and several Midlanders and their pets. Featured guests were Patrick Wayne, well-known actor and son of the famous western movie star John Wayne, and Arf, Texas' "Best Brave Dog."

Wayne, who hosted "The Monte Carlo Show" and has appeared in several movies and television shows, is a frequent guest at benefits.

"I support the John Wayne Cancer Clinic — all my brothers and sisters are involved with it — and I ask a lot of people to help us out," said Wayne at a pre-benefit gathering at the home of longtime Midlander, Bobby Holt.

"So when people ask me to help them, I try to do what I can," he said.

Wayne's famous father died of complications from lung cancer in 1979.

Although he is not directly involved with groups like the SPCA, Wayne said the Friday evening benefit was the second such one he had attended this week.

"Last week, I did a benefit for the Actors and Actresses for Animals in California," he said.

The visit is the second time Wayne has been to Midland, the actor said.

"I was here 25 years ago, when I was campaigning for a friend," he said. The friend, he noted, did not win the election.

Wayne has proven to be a successful actor in his own right, having appeared in more than 24 motion pictures, including "Big Jake," "The Deserters" and "Eye for an Eye," five made-for-television movies such as "Flight to Holocaust" and the "Grizzly Adams Special" and one television pilot, "Susan Mahoney."

He has also starred in three television series, "The Monte Carlo Show," a variety program set amid the glamor of the French Riviera, "The Rounders" and "Shirley." Wayne has made appearances in more than nine other television series, including "Fantasy Island," "Love Boat," "Police Woman" and "Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea."

His live theatrical credits include "Here Lies Jeremy Troy" at the Beverly Playhouse in New Orleans, "L.A. and The Tender Trap" at the Country Squire Theater in Amarillo.

Arf, the 3-year-old Chesapeake retriever owned by Oksana and Eric Sparks of Midland, was the chairman of "A Cause for Paws."

Arf received national attention in October 1982, when he saved the life of the Sparks' 2-year-old son, Eric Jr. The canine hero protected young Eric from getting bitten by a deadly coral snake by intervening between the snake and the child, receiving poisonous bites as a result.

It took 26 viles of antitoxin to save Arf, who recovered and went on to national fame, appearing on cable television and in two magazines, both Associated Press and United Press International, and was invited to visit the White House to meet President Reagan in February 1984.

The fund-raising benefit, held among the courtyard-like atmosphere of The Racquet Club, featured informal modeling by The Canopy and entertainment by Queen Cobra, a Dallas group.

According to coordinator, Johnna Curie, more than 400 people attended the event, which cost $100 per couple. Ms. Curie indicated that she hoped to raise $20.000 for the SPCA.

Saturn plant site sees pros, cons

SPRING HILL, Tenn. (AP) — The jobs that General Motors' coveted Saturn plant would bring are welcome, but some Spring Hill residents said Friday they hate to forfeit the intimacy of their small town, where the main industry once dealt in another mode of transport — mules.

"Property already is ... beginning to rise sharply," said Mayor George Jones. "A lot of options are being taken and some properties are being bought. It'll drive up the economy considerably."

But while the small-car plant would bring new jobs and industry, some residents said they objected to what else they expect would accompany it.

"It's a great opportunity, but it will end the rural atmosphere. I don't want to see a Wendy's on every corner and a four-lane highway through town," said Louise Mallory-Elliott, a Tennessee State University psychology teacher who said she'll move if the Saturn plant comes to town.

U.S. Sens. Albert Gore Jr. and James Sasser, both Tennessee Democrats, on Friday confirmed earlier reports that GM has chosen Spring Hill, a town of 1,110 people 30 miles south of Nashville, for the Saturn plant.

"We won. It's a great day for Maury County, for Tennessee and for the country," Gore said.

"The 16,000 direct and related jobs that Saturn brings is really only the tip of the iceburg," Sasser said.

The plant, part of a $5 billion project designed to cut into the import market, surely would change the complexion of this community, which, Jones said, "in the '20s and '30s was known as the mule capital of the world."

The area still holds an annual Mule Day celebration to commemorate the industry that reached its heyday in the 1930s, when Spring Hill had the country's largest mule trade auction.

"In the last five years, farm land has brought from $3,000 to $5,000 an acre. Right now farm land is going for quite a bit more because of this. Some land is going for 30 percent more," said the mayor. GM's final announcement is expected within a few days.

The gentle rolling farm land reportedly optioned for the site is just outside city limits.

Farmers' co-op employees Larry Baxter, right, and Larry Robinson fear the arrival of a General Motors plant will damage Spring Hill, Tenn.'s, quiet lifestyle.

Location hurt Texas' chance for plant

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' bid for General Motors' Saturn plan was hurt by an inalterable factor — location, an aide to Gov. Mark White said Friday.

A Texas plant would be far from Midwest suppliers and Eastern markets.

"We can't do too much about that. We did something about everything else," White aide David Nesenholtz said after the Detroit Free Press reported that Spring Hill, Tenn., had been picked for the high-tech car plant.

By midday Friday, no official word had come from GM officials. But the Texas Economic Development Commission issued a release conceding defeat.

"Though we are disappointed, we know that Texas' efforts to locate the Saturn facility will continue to reap benefits as we redouble our efforts to broaden our economic base," said Dan Petty, the commission chairman.

Texas was a "long shot" in the Saturn sweepstakes, according to Rebecca Heflin, the commission's executive director.

A total of 84 Texas communities — big and small — bid for the plant.

In the end, Texas apparently was deemed too far from the plants that make the parts used to make cars, said Nesenholtz, director of finance in the governor's economic development division. GM went for what's known as a "centroid" location, he said.

The prime area was a "reasonably small geographic area between Tennessee, Kentucky, southern Illinois, Indiana, southern Michigan and northern Missouri," said Nesenholtz.

"That's where the lion's share of the auto industry is located already. In recent weeks we had come to think they would go with a more traditional site. (Spring Hill) is a very traditional site and it's not surprising to auto insiders," he said.

The Texas pitch included $15 million to train workers and a promise to help find private funds. But the location problem apparently could not be overcome.

Patino assessed 50-year prison term

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A 70th District Court jury of 10 men and three women Friday found 17-year-old Israel Patino guilty of murder in the April 1985 shooting death of 19-year-old Daniel A. Castillo Jr. and sentenced him to 50 years in prison.

The jury deliberated about one hour and 15 minutes Friday morning to find Patino guilty and just short of three hours Friday afternoon to set his sentence.

Before bringing in the jury after being told a sentence had been determined, Judge Gene Ater stationed four deputy sheriffs in the courtroom's corners and warned members of the audience that, regardless of the jury's decision, he would tolerate no demonstrations or outcries of any kind. Ater also told spectators he would jail anyone who caused any kind of a scene.

Patino still faces charges of attempted murder and aggravated assault, although District Attorney Eric Augesen hasn't indicated if he will bring Patino to trial on the additional charges.

Because a deadly weapon was used in the murder of Castillo, Patino technically will not be eligible for parole until he serves nearly 17 years of the 50-year sentence.

Also charged with murder, attempted murder and aggravated assault are two cousins of Patino, Robert and Carlos Patino, ages 20 and 18 respectively.

The charges grew out of an April 2 incident in which Castillo was killed and 17-year-old Terrence Lopez was wounded. A third youth, 18-year-old Rene Gomez, escaped injury by ducking down on the rear floorboard of the car.

According to testimony during the three-day trial, the shooting began on the parking lot of the old TG&Y store on West Clements Street on Odessa's southside and ended at the intersection of West Clements and Summer Street.

In a statment to investigating officers following his arrest, Patino said he had gone home and got his 30.06-caliber rifle after someone in the car of Terrence Lopez had flashed (pointed) a silver-colored handgun at him. A later statement given officers by Patino described the gun displayed as being a black handgun.

Taking the stand in his own defense Thursday, Patino stated he began shooting at the Lopez car on the old TG&Y parking lot only after someone shot at him.

In final arguments Friday afternoon, Patino's attorney, David Martinez of Lubbock, asked jurors to grant Patino probation, saying that Patino had already suffered and thought about what he had done.

Referring to a long-standing southside feud that police speculate may have prompted the shooting, Martinez said Patino "was not responsible for starting the feud and doesn't even know when it started. Sending him (Patino) to prison won't stop it."

In his instructions to the jury before attorneys began final arguments, Ater had said sympathy and compassion should not be a factor in their deliberations. Martinez recalled the judge's instructions and told the jury, "We do want sympathy. Do you think Israel has not learned from this? Do you think those in the audience have not learned?"

Assistant District Attorney Dennis Cadra began his closing argument to jurors by noting "Martinez just said something of importance."

"If you come back with probation you will educate this audience," he said, telling them that "they get one free shot."

Cadra went on to say that jurors must broadcast loud and clear that when anyone decides to take the law into their own hands to settle their differences they will face the maximum penalty provided by law.

Jurors could have handed Patino a sentence of 99 years or life and fined him as much as $10,000.

Next week's Spacelab 2 shuttle flight will carry educated crew

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The most educated crew in history will be on board space shuttle Challenger for the seven-day flight of Spacelab 2 scheduled for next week.

Between them, the seven-man crew has a total of 21 college degrees.

"If there's a problem, we can just overwhelm it with education," vows mission commander Gordon Fullerton.

Fullerton, 48, has two degrees, as does the mission pilot, Roy D. Bridges Jr. Mission specialist F. Story Musgrave, 49, holds five degrees — two bachelors, two masters and a doctor of medicine.

Two other mission specialists, Tony England, 43, and Karl Henize, 58, hold three degrees each, including doctorates. Payload specialists Loren W. Acton, 48, and John-David F. Bartoe, 41, also hold doctorate degrees.

Passers-by look into the blood-stained trunk of a car, found in Sidon, Lebanon, Friday, which contained the mutilated bodies of four Palestinians loyal to PLO leader Yasser Arafat. The bodies were found when police examined the orange Opel found abandoned outside the Mieh Mieh Refugee Camp.

Slayings deepen rift in Mideast

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — Four Palestinians loyal to PLO chief Yasser Arafat were found tortured and slain Friday in a refugee camp, with notes on their bodies calling them Israeli collaborators.

Arafat's joint effort with King Hussein of Jordan toward Middle East peace negotiations has deepened the split between his loyalists and radical guerrilla factions. Lebanese leaders said they feared another round of warfare, and an Arafat commander blamed the killings on Israel.

"The hand of Israel is behind this to start another war between us," the commander told The Associated Press as two white ambulances led by a battered brown car bore the bodies from a hospital morgue to the cemetery.

Police found the victims Friday morning in an orange Opel sedan on the edge of Mieh Mieh, one of two refugee camps on the outskirts of this south Lebanon port. The camps, run by the United Nations, are home to 27,000 Palestinians.

They said the men's hands and feet were bound and they appeared to have been tortured before being shot in the head two or three times each at close range. "This is the punishment for every collaborator with Israel" was scrawled on sheets of paper pinned to their chests.

Anwar Abu Sharaf, PLO spokesman in Sidon, said the four men were Arafat loyalists and anti-Israel.

Lebanese political leaders, who are trying to enforce a Syrian-sponsored security plan aimed at ending a decade of civil war that has left the country in chaos, worried that fighting in the crowded camps could disrupt their plans.

Some of them met with local leaders of Palestinian factions at the Ein Hilweh camp, denounced the killings and said the purpose was "fueling tensions and to push the sides to retaliate."

They urged unity between the Palestine Liberation Organization and Col. Saeed Musa's rival Palestinian faction. Musa is an ally of Syria, which is the real source of power in Lebanon since factionalism rendered the government powerless.

Musa has a history of warfare with Arafat's loyalists and opposes the PLO chief's joint peace effort with Jordan, as does Syria.

Rival guerrillas joined the funeral procession to the cemetery for the four slain men but most of the 3,000 marchers, including women and children, wore PLO T-shirts and shouted PLO slogans.

As the bodies were lowered into graves — draped in the green, white, black and red Palestinian flag — guerrillas fired bursts of automatic weapons fire into the air.

Abu Yussef, an Arafat commander in Ein Hilweh, said the four were driving through the Mieh Mieh camp when they were evidently stopped by gunmen.

A young PLO fighter standing nearby said: "It's a plot to make the Palestinian refugee camps time bombs for both the Israelis and the Lebanese."

At least 600 people were slain and 2,500 wounded when fighters of the Shiite Moslem militia Amal assaulted three Palestinian refugee camps in Beirut for five weeks earlier this year, with the help of the army's mainly Shiite 6th Brigade.

The Shiites had vowed to prevent the Palestinians from rebuilding the power base they lost when the Israeli invasion drove them out of Lebanon three years ago. Israel withdrew most of its troops from Lebanon early in June.

Reports have said Arafat was moving men and weapons back into south Lebanon and the PLO chairman has confirmed it, according to an interview published Friday by the English-language newspaper Arab News in Jidda, Saudi Arabia.

"We have the right ... to help our people protect themselves, and to help the Lebanese people protect themselves. So it is our duty and right," he was quoted as saying.

Security efforts stepped up

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — In Beirut, efforts to restore security at the American University and its hospital were to get under way today. In the past three years, four employees have been kidnapped and the university's president, Malcolm Kerr, was assassinated.

Measures to protect the university and hospital were approved Thursday at a meeting of a Syrian-sponsored security committee. Beirut newspapers and radio stations said soldiers and police are to be the only armed presence on or near the campus.

U.S. 'dangles' information to lure away Soviet agents

EDITOR'S NOTE: Espionage charges against American citizens — most notably an FBI agent and a current and several former Navy enlisted men — have focused attention on U.S. efforts to detect and apprehend Soviet spies. This look at the ongoing American counterintelligence effort was drawn from court records from other cases and interviews with current and former U.S. agents.

By ROBERT E. KESSLER
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

As he was leaving the Soviet liner Kazakhstan at a Manhattan pier after a week's cruise to Bermuda in 1977, U.S. Navy Lt. Cmdr. Arthur Lindberg handed the purser a sealed envelope.

Inside was an awkwardly written letter addressed to Soviet officials that said: "I am a career American naval officer stationed in the New York City area and with retirement in six years. I am interested in making additional money prior to my retirement and can provide you with information which may be of interest to you."

The letter went on to list the number of a pay telephone outside a diner in Neptune, N.J., and a date and a time that Lindberg would be waiting there.

Soviet intelligence agents contacted the Navy officer and offered to pay him for documents relating to anti-submarine warfare and U.S. missiles. Lindberg agreed.

Eight months later, three Soviet intelligence officers dealing with Lindberg were arrested for espionage.

But Lindberg himself was not arrested. He had been playing a role, operating as what the intelligence community calls a "dangle."

Dangles are part of the stock-in-trade of the espionage world. Each year, scores of Armed Forces personnel, government officials, businessmen, and scientists approach Soviet officials at the direction of the FBI and the various Armed Forces intelligence agencies.

But "Operation Lemonade," the joint FBI-Naval Investigative Service case Lindberg took part in, had some complications.

ONE OF THE Soviet spies lured by Lindberg was a Soviet diplomat and automatically immune to criminal prosecution. But the other two — Rudolf Chernyayev and Vladik Enger — were civilian employees of the United Nations and thus had no diplomatic immunity. A fierce battle broke out within the U.S. government among the FBI, the CIA, the State Department and the Justice Department over whether they would be tried or quietly returned to the Soviet Union to avoid retaliation against CIA agents and to avoid hurting detente.

The argument went all the way up to then-President Jimmy Carter, who decided the two should be prosecuted, partly as a warning to the Soviets that their espionage activities were getting out of hand.

As a result, then-Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko excoriated the United States for breaking a longtime unwritten understanding that neither country would go out of its way to embarrass the other in espionage activities. And the Soviet government widely publicized a 5-year-old case in the Soviet Union involving a CIA agent who had been arrested and quietly expelled.

For obvious practical reasons, the U.S. counterintelligence effort is not aimed so much at the 4.3 million Americans with security clearance, but at the Soviet, Soviet Bloc and Cuban intelligence agents in the United States.

While the officials declined to talk about the number of U.S. counterintelligence agents, it is believed that they are outnumbered by the 1,300 agents here — agents of the Soviet KGB and GRU, the Czech STB, the Cuban DGI and those of other Soviet Bloc nations.

THE AREA WITH the largest concentration of Soviet agents is New York, with both the large complement of Soviet diplomats assigned to the United Nations and the large number of Soviet citizens who work directly for the U.N.

"We can't watch everybody, so we watch the choke-points...where they have to eventually do business," said a long-time counterintelligence agent, explaining the underlying counterintelligence philosophy in the country.

The watching includes intense surveillance of almost all known Soviet and Soviet Bloc offices in the country. People going in and out are routinely photographed and followed and the phones are tapped.

Although U.S. counterintelligence agents are outnumbered, the game is not as uneven as it seems. For one thing only about 15 percent of KGB agents in the country are believed to be engaged in classic espionage. Many of the others are interested in collecting technical information openly available or in influencing the opinions of prominent Americans.

In addition, the FBI recruits scores of informants, people euphemistically called "assets," to help watch Soviet and East Bloc agents. These could be neighbors or friends of the Soviet agents.

The U.S. effort has been shaken in recent weeks by the Walker spy case, in which four current or former members of the Navy have been charged with espionage — relaying military secrets to the Soviet agents for up to 20 years.

SOME OFFICIALS see the publicity surrounding the Walker case as an unfortunate diversion from a recent record of improvement in U.S. counterintelligence capabilities.

"For every case that makes headlines or goes to trial, there are many you never hear about," said James Fox, head of FBI's New York anti-Soviet counterintelligence unit, the largest in the bureau. "It's just the nature of the beast. I'm reminded of what President Kennedy said, you never hear about our successes, but our failures make headlines."

Only one-quarter of new FBI agents were interested in counterintelligence several years ago, but now about half of them are, Fox said.

The work can be tedious and frustrating. Wiretaps and surveillances that go on for years are standard. When such lengthy efforts lead to an arrest, the accused spy may be quickly traded back without even standing trial.

"It can be a frustrating business," said Charles Weis, a retired FBI counterintelligence supervisor.

"There's no instant gratification," said Donald McGorty, the Special Agent in charge of one of the FBI's counterintelligence units in New York. "It's more cerebral than visceral."

But the prestige of such assignments is rising after years of neglect because of U.S.-Soviet detente and negative reaction to the CIA abuses uncovered during the 1970s, according to Fox and other officials. The Reagan administration's emphasis on counterintelligence, they say, has brought an end to the days when the counterintelligence floor of the bureau's New York office was known as "Sleepy Hollow."

THE NUMBER OF warrants for foreign intelligence wiretaps and bugs has risen from 199 in 1979 to 635 last year under the jurisdiction of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court. The court, whose proceedings are top-secret, was created in 1978, partly in reaction to allegations of abuse.

But critics think that the Walker case, whatever its legal outcome, belies the claimed improvements in the U.S. effort.

"The most important lesson of the case is how poor our counterintelligence is," says James Bamford, a long-time scholar of American intelligence activities. "Here were four amateurs over 20 years...and the most effective counterintelligence technique we have is a Tarot card reading."

Bamford was referring to the Tarot card reader who supposedly advised the wife of the head of the Walker ring to turn her husband in.

Other experts say that concern about counterintelligence is overblown.

"If they (the Soviets) know where our missiles and submarines are and we know where theirs are, so what?" said Harry Rositzke, the former head of the Soviet Division of the CIA. "This has been going on for more than 40 years and the world is still stable. It only matters if there is a war and I don't think there's the slightest chance of that."

"The Midland SPCA is the only humane society between El Paso and Fort Worth providing emergency service, shelter and care for homeless animals," she said. "They rely solely on private contributions."

Ms. Curle said she hoped the benefit "would be the first of many future ones to benefit the society."

The local SPCA building was constructed in 1984 at 15 Kerry Road and was designed to offer alternatives to dumping animals in the country or placing them with the city animal control department.

Today, the local organization provides food, shelter, veterinary care and neutering services to hundreds of animals each year.

According to SPCA Director Dalton Byerly, the association's primary purpose is to offer educational programs, including films and other material, to inform persons about the prevention of cruelty to animals.

The Spacelab 2 mission is the second space flight for Fullerton, an Air Force colonel. In 1982, he was the pilot on the third flight of the space shuttle.

Fullerton was born in Rochester, N.Y., but grew up in Portland, Ore. He earned engineering degrees at California Institute of Technology and worked in aircraft design for a time before joining the Air Force. He was selected as an Air Force astronaut in 1965 and became a NASA astronaut in 1969, when the Air Force manned space program was cancelled.

The astronaut is married and the father of two.

Bridges, also an Air Force colonel, is a veteran of 226 combat missions in Vietnam as an F-100 pilot.

He was born in Atlanta, grew up in Gainesville, Ga., and graduated from the Air Force Academy. Bridges later earned a master of science degree from Purdue University.

After his tour in Vietnam, Bridges served as special assistant to a deputy Chief of Staff at the Pentagon. He was selected as an astronaut in 1980 and Spacelab 2 is his first space flight.

Bridges is married and the father of two.

Musgrave holds five degrees from five different colleges, is a former U.S. Marine enlisted man who served as an aircraft crew chief on the USS Wasp, a pilot who has flown 140 different types of aircraft, and is a master parachutist with more than 400 free-fall jumps to his credit. The astronaut also is an experienced surgeon and has published 44 scientific papers in medical journals.

Musgrave made his first spaceflight in 1983 on the sixth flight of the space shuttle. On that mission, he made the first space walk in a suit that now is standard equipment on the shuttle.

The astronaut was born in Boston, but considers Lexington, Ky., to be his hometown. He is divorced and the father of five children.

England was selected as an astronaut at age 25, younger than any selectee before or since. He holds three degrees from MIT, including a doctorate in geophysics.

Prior to joining NASA, England conducted research throughout the American west and spent two seasons in the Antartic.

Time to quit asking machines to make media decisions

Computers don't have all the answers. Cost per thousand is not a magic talisman. You have to factor in some imponderables, because what do machines know about human emotions like trust and believability? Asked in which medium they found the advertising most believable, more consumers said "newspapers" than the other four major media combined:*

Believe in newspapers. They can work marketing magic.

Texas couple runs away to play with traveling circus

By KAY MOHR

AMARILLO (AP) — A few years ago, Jim and Jeanne Ann Phillips were teaching music in the Texas Panhandle. Now Gibson is conductor of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus traveling band, and Mrs. Gibson sits in front of him, playing the clarinet in the 15-member ensemble.

Gibson was band director for the Phillips Independent School District from 1980-82. Mrs. Gibson, a native of Shamrock, taught music at Sanford-Fritch elementary school and was a librarian at a Borger elementary school. This summer they were back in Texas with the circus.

Gibson jokingly admits to running away to join the circus some years ago.

He was not a freckle-faced boy in rolled-up jeans, but a student at the University of Texas at Austin. A member of the Longhorn Marching Band, the UT jazz ensemble and symphonic band, Gibson left school in 1972 to "go on the road as a professional musician." He joined the Circus Vargas as the lead trumpet player, and for the next seven years, traveled the country playing trumpet with various circuses. Five of those years he served as conductor.

He returned to the University of Texas in 1979 and received his bachelor of music in education degree in 1980.

Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus officials approached Gibson to become music conductor in 1982 — a move that "shocked" the Phillips band director.

"I never expected it," Gibson said. "Jeanne Ann and I used to laugh that Ringling was the only circus we would ever join."

Working with the circus is not all cotton candy, however. Schedules are fast-paced and time often runs short.

"We carry five full-time musicians with us, and I hire 10 more local musicians in each city," Gibson explained. "We usually have about one hour rehearsal time for an almost three-hour show, so we rehearse some and talk the rest of it through."

Circus audiences may not be fully aware that a 200-song musical score — played by the band — accompanies the three-hour, three-ring circus.

"The music sets the atmosphere and mood of the circus," Gibson pointed out. "This becomes really evident if you ever watch an act practicing without music and then see the difference in it."

Circus musicians must play the spectrum of the scale — circus marches, gallops, show tunes, rock and swing.

"The circus band goes continuously, and physically we work hard," Gibson said. "In a symphony, the trumpet player occasionally gets a rest, but not with the circus. I try to stress to the musicians not to spill their guts all the time because it's non-stop."

The 15-member ensemble consists of clarinets, saxophones, trumpets, trombones, tuba, drums and synthesizer.

"There are no silences during the show, even drum roll accompanies the highwire acts," the conductor said. "Many times we will watch the animal trainer as he will set the pace of the music for his act...If he works faster, so do we. We have had to follow a horse that was prancing to make it look like it was in time."

Gibson tells the story about a circus which used records for accompaniment. "I don't know if it's true or not, but I heard during the elephant act, the record started skipping and the elephant wouldn't stop standing and sitting."

Perpetual motion is synonymous with circus life, however.

While 90 percent of the circus people travel by train, Gibson and his wife follow in a fifth-wheel trailer as do about a dozen others in motorhomes and trailers. The Ringling organization includes 135 performers, 100 workers, 50 concession members and 50 staff people. Mrs. Gibson tutors some of the performers' children in their correspondence school work.

"We logged 25,000 miles last year," said Gibson. They spend about a month in rehearsals at Ringling's winter home in Venice, Fla.

Plant's 'job one' to get rid of spiders

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. has turned exterminator in an effort to put a halt to the poisonous black widow spiders that have hitched rides in parts racks from Mexico to one of the automaker's Michigan plants.

At least 24 black widows have been found since June 25 in dashboard parts sent to a Ford plastics plant in Saline, company and United Auto Workers union officials said.

"There has been no injury as a result of any of this, but it obviously is thoroughly disquieting," Ford spokesman William Selover said. "The sorting racks apparently have hollow tubing and the suspicion is that these spiders were hitchhiking in the tubing."

The possibility is remote that a spider made its way into an assembled car, said spokesman Richard Judy. "The parts that were in the racks where the spiders were found are taken out one at a time and installed."

The parts are small and, even before the company began taking additional precautions, each one was inspected before being installed, said Judy.

Ford's efforts to get rid of the spiders have included ringing its 175,000-square-foot Carplastics Plant in Monterrey, Mexico, with a three-foot-wide strip of insecticide, fumigating racks in Monterrey and Saline, hand inspecting the dashboard parts and torching the racks to burn out the spiders.

Neither Selover nor Richard Graham, UAW barganing chairman for Local 892 at the Saline plant, could name the chemical used in the fumigation, but Graham said the union had been notified and the toxin is not harmful to humans.

The grape-size spiders have a red hourglass shape on their bellies, said H. D. Cameron, arachnid curator at the University of Michigan's Zoology Museum in Ann Arbor. The spiders' bites usually aren't deadly, but symptoms include chills, fever, sweating, abdominal cramps, vomiting and pain.

"If you are bitten by a black widow, you will know it," Cameron said. "You'll be sick, really sick, for two days and then it'll be over."

The last spider was seen a week ago, nearly a month after an assembly worker at the Saline plant first discovered one in the cardboard packing around a part, Graham said.

That spider was captured and identified by an "authoritative source" as a black widow, Selover said.

Four truckloads of backplates — a part attached to the rear of dashboards — were shipped back to Mexico to be fumigated, but when they were returned to Saline, more spiders were found, he said.

A Ford health and safety representative was dispatched to the Mexican plant and worked with plant officials there to solve the problem. No one is quite sure of its origin.

The Mexican government is clearing an area near the Monterrey plant for low-income housing, and Graham speculated that the operation may have destroyed the spiders' natural habitat.

'Mr. Bagel' run by Arab baker

ARLINGTON (AP) — This just in: Mr. Bagel is an Arab.

"I know it's strange, an Arab running a bagel shop, but I like bagels," said Jack Khashou, "so I ask myself, 'Why fight it?' "

Khashou is the proprietor of Mr. Bagel, the only bagel bakery in town.

It's a seven-day-a-week operation that produces 10 kinds of bagels, including pumpernickel, raisin and cinnnamon, whole wheat and onion.

The fancy cream cheese and lox are extra.

Unfortunately for Khashou, who moved to the United States in 1958 to attend college, there are only about 400 Jewish families in Arlington. So, Khashou is hoping the average Texan-on-the-street will learn to love his chewy Jewish delicacies.

"Ninety percent of the people who try a bagel, like a bagel," he said. "The trick is getting them to try it."

So far, Khashou says the raisin and cinnamon bagel — which was the worst seller in his Southern California bagel stores — is the No. 1 choice among local bagel lovers.

"Two weeks ago, I had a man come in, point to a pumpernickel bagel and ask for the chocolate-covered doughnut," Khashou said. "I told him we sold bagels. He asked what bagels were and I suggested the raisin cinnamon bagel with cream cheese.

"Now he comes in every morning and always, he gets the raisin cinnamon bagel with cream cheese."

Stalin's daughter finds privacy she says alluded her in West

TBILISI, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Svetlana Alliluyeva, Josef Stalin's daughter who defected to the United States in 1967, is now living on a hillside overlooking this capital of Soviet Georgia, the homeland of her father. Residents say she has found the privacy she claimed had eluded her during 17 years in the West.

"You can see her taking her garbage out like any woman," reported one resident who said he jogs by her home every day.

Her American-born daughter, Olga Peters, 14, is with her and one resident said she is being tutored in the Russian and Georgian languages to help her in school studies.

Georgian officials said the 59-year-old Miss Alliluyeva works at the Georgia Institute of Foreign Languages.

The residents spoke to reporters only on condition of anonymity.

The officials said Miss Alliluyeva has turned down all requests for interviews, even if the questions concerned only to her role in expanding the collection at Stalin's museum at Gori, her father's birthplace 45 miles northwest of Tbilisi.

In defecting from the Soviet Union, Miss Alliluyeva left behind a 22-year-old son and a 17-year-old daughter. In the United States where she married William Wesley Peters, an architect who is Olga's father. They divorced in 1973. Miss Alliluyeva, who retained the married name Peters and her American citizenship, went to live in Cambridge, England, in 1983. It was from there she returned to the Soviet Union last October.

Soviet officials restored Miss Alliluyeva's Soviet citizenship that was revoked in 1970 and granted citizenship to Olga. Miss Alliluyeva has reverted to using her mother's maiden name.

Upon her return, Miss Alliluyeva said she returned to the Soviet Union because she felt guilty about leaving her son and daughter and was unhappy in the West. She also had two grandchildren she had never seen. She told a news conference in Moscow that "I intend to live a quiet, personal life" in contrast to the one in which "I was in the hands of businessmen, lawyers, political figures and publishers who turned the name of my father, my own name and my life into a sensational commodity."

> "I was in the hands of businessmen, lawyers, political figures and publishers who turned the name of my father, my own name and my life into a sensational commodity."
> — Svetlana Alliluyeva

While in the United States, Miss Alliluyeva published her memoirs which were critical of the Soviet Union.

At the Moscow news conference in November, she also said Olga would be allowed to make her own decision on where to live "when she grows up." Olga was born in California and under U.S. law is still an American citizen.

Everybody in Tbilisi who claimed to know something about Olga's situation said she has experienced the same problems in Georgia that any teen-ager would have being uprooted and moved to a new culture.

The mother and daughter first lived in Moscow after their arrival from England. In moving to Tbilisi they now are in the city where Stalin, at his mother's insistence, attended a seminary which is now an art museum bearing a plaque testifying to his studies there.

Tbilisi people — both official and unofficial — showed visiting reporters where Miss Alliluyeva and Olga live. The building they pointed out is a high-rise apartment building in the developed suburban hills and near an indoor swimming pool.

The residence is not sumptuous, compared to some private homes and gardens in this capital, but it appears comfortable from the outside.

The resident who jogs past the apartment house said that when Miss Alliluyeva first returned she was guarded by militia.

He said Georgians have mixed feelings about Stalin, and therefore about his daughter. Some feel Stalin, who died in 1953, was a hero, but others say he brought people unnecessary suffering.

In Gori, the huge museum dedicated to Stalin has received a new collection of family photos that the curator said Miss Alliluyeva provided. The curator added that Miss Alliluyeva has visited at least three times, twice with her daughter.

The donated photos include shots of Stalin with his daughter and her brother Vasily. The museum also now has the train that Stalin used to shuttle between Moscow and Yalta and other areas important during World War II.

The museum curator, Tbilisi officials and citizens refused to discuss Miss Alliluyeva in detail. At the museum, she was said to have taken an interest in the work there. Olga was reported to have been curious but perhaps not completely understanding about her ancestry.

Olga's opportunities to learn more about her grandfather are abundant on the streets of Tbilisi. Stalin's father was a shoemaker, and shoemakers everywhere sell little Stalin artifacts. In one shoe repair shop, a picture of Stalin with flower-bearing children is displayed along with a portrait of today's Soviet leader, Mikhail Gorbachev.

WORLD IN BRIEF

U.N. chief diagnosed

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, hospitalized with abdominal pains, has been found to be suffering from an irritation of the esophagus, his spokesman reported Friday.

"The news of the secretary-general is good," spokesman Francois Giuliani told a news briefing after medical tests at New York University Hospital showed the U.N. chief was not suffering from diverticulitis as originally suspected.

Diverticulitis is an inflammation of the colon.

Giuliani said Perez de Cuellar, 65, expected to be released from the hospital by Saturday.

Hijacker overpowered

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — A father who held his two children hostage in a commandeered helicopter and demanded to be flown to a U.S. Air Force base in Japan was overpowered by police after a five-hour siege Friday at Brisbane airport.

Police identified the man as Milomar Petrovic, 41, of Yugoslavia. They said he had recently divorced and won custody of his children.

Petrovic will be charged with a number of offenses under the criminal code, including endangering the safety of an aircraft and assault, a police spokesman said.

Petrovic was grabbed after holding his 8-year-old son and 4-year-old daughter hostage and threatening to blow up fuel from a tanker near the helicopter, police said.

Patora to release tape

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Eden Pastora, the hero of the Sandinista revolution who turned against his former comrades for their Marxist policies, will release a tape recording to prove he is alive, a leader of his rebel group said Friday.

Pastora is recovering in a jungle camp in southern Nicaragua from exhaustion and injuries he received in a helicopter crash, said Jose Davila of Pastora's Revolutionary Democratic Alliance.

Davila told The Associated Press that Pastora would use the tape to announce from the the camp on Monday that his group will continue its armed struggle against Sandinista troops in southern Nicaragua.

Shultz makes comments

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Friday that U.S.-Mexican differences over United States policy toward Nicaragua have not reached a stalemate.

But he said the "most visible" area of disagreement between the two nations on Nicaragua is over the talks, which the United States suspended in January. The talks had been conducted in Manzanillo, Mexico.

"I don't think that we're at a stalemate. There are differences of opinion about a variety of practical issues about how to handle the situation," Shultz told reporters.

On Thursday, Shultz said the United States rejects the Contadora group's call for the United States to resume direct talks with the Sandinista government until they can lead to a church-mediated dialogue with opposition forces.

Prison uprising averted

POINTE-A-PITRE, Guadeloupe (AP) — Police put down a prison uprising, but looting spread on Friday and protesters' barricades kept this French Caribbean commercial center virtually cut off from the rest of the island.

It was the fourth day of protests in support of Georges Faisans, a militant independence advocate jailed in Paris. He reportedly has been on a hunger strike in prison since June 3.

Ugandan rebel 'in retreat;' Advances reported

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — The government said Friday that a mutinous brigadier was in retreat, but reports persisted that he and his rebel army units were marching on the strategic eastern town of Soroti.

Accounts of the advance appeared bolstered by the Uganda State Railway's suspension of service beyond Soroti, which is about 120 miles northeast of Kampala, the capital of this East African nation.

President Milton Obote's top aide, who is in charge of internal security, maintained that the government side was winning.

"We have loyal troops and they are pushing out the rebels," Cris Rwakasisi, minister of state in the president's secretariat, said in a telephone interview. "Two hundred men deserted the rebel forces already ... and already are fighting the rebels."

Informed sources said most of the deserters joining loyal units apparently were Langi, the tribe of Obote and the army chief of staff, Brigadier Smith Opon Acak.

Brigadier Basilio Olara Okello, the northern brigade commander who is leading the rebellion, and his supporters are from the Acholi tribe, northerners like the Langi. Most army personnel are either Langi or Acholi, and there has been friction along tribal lines.

The Defense Ministry announced that Okello has been dismissed and ordered to report to Kampala. He was not expected to obey.

Reports were unconfirmed and confused, but indicated that the mutineers had passed through Lira.

Soviet icebreaker finally frees bound research ship

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet icebreaker Friday sliced through the last stretch of a drifting Antarctic ice field surrounding the research vessel Mikhail Somov and freed the ship and its crew from a cold captivity that lasted 133 days.

A brief Tass news agency report announcing the rescue did not say how many crew and researchers were still aboard when the Vladivostok cleared a path to the ship, but previous reports said 53 Russians had remained with the vessel.

The Vladivostok was dispatched from the Soviet Far East on June 10, nearly three months after the Mikhail Somov was sealed into a huge ice floe in the Ross Sea area during a severe storm.

A special Tass correspondent aboard the icebreaker reported that at 11 a.m. Moscow time Friday (3 a.m. EDT), the "last barrier of perennial ice" was crushed by the Vladivostok and the Mikhail Somov was freed.

"We saw tired and hollow-cheeked, but smiling and lively faces of the people from the courageous vessel," Tass correspondent Viktor Gusev reported from the scene. He has been traveling with the icebreaker since it set off from the Pacific port it is named after.

Few rescue details were provided in Friday's one-paragraph Tass dispatch.

Those aboard the research ship would be transferred to a permanent ice station, Tass reported.

A few hours earlier Tass said the icebreaker was making good progress toward the trapped vessel, but that about 43 miles still separated the ships.

"At present the Mikhail Somov is sailing under its own steam through a channel opened in the ice by the Vladivostok," Tass said in concluding its brief dispatch.

No details of the crew's condition were given. Tass reported Tuesday that Vladivostok crewmen had established a helicopter shuttle to and from the trapped ship to ferry supplies and provide a standby evacuation service if conditions grew worse.

Fears were expressed in earlier reports that the drifting ice field would tighten around the Mikhail Somov and damage it.

Periodic reports on the drama said the 53 people still on the Mikhail Somov kept up their research work as the icebreaker forged toward their ship, and that those aboard were doing all possible to keep the ship from serious damage.

Temperatures regularly dipped to 22 below zero.

Wet clothes hang from tents lines — and anywhere else handy — as those attending the National Boy Scout Jamboree at Ft. A.P. Hill, Va., dry out after heavy rain Friday.

Boy Scout Jamboree hosts fair share of girls

By JEAN McNAIR
Associated Press Writer

BOWLING GREEN, Va. — There are girl scouts at the National Scout Jamboree, but instead of camping, canoeing and playing sports with the 24,000 Boy Scouts, they are working.

A dozen girls who belong to Explorers, a career-oriented program of Scouting for youths from their mid-teens to 21, are helping to provide security at the 7,000-acre Jamboree site at Fort A.P. Hill.

"I found out my brother was coming down here, and I didn't want him to come and not me," said Jeanette Biggerstaff, 17, of Marble Falls, Texas.

Miss Biggerstaff, whose brother is a 14-year-old Boy Scout, said she hopes to turn her Explorer experience into a career as a police officer.

She and the other Explorers, 12 girls and 18 boys, were selected to direct traffic and control crowds at the week-long Jamboree, which ends Tuesday. They spent a week in Washington getting FBI training to prepare for the job.

The Explorers are being helped by about 150 adult volunteers and a few dozen Army firefighters and police, said Howie Lansdale, chairman of the security service.

"Our fundamental job is to help people," he said. "You don't see any guns or distinctive headgear."

Like any small city of 31,000, the Jamboree needs fire and police protection, hospitals and bus service for its temporary residents.

Each of the 21 subcamps where Scouts and their leaders are staying has its own medical clinic with five doctors. An Army hospital also is available on the base, said James E. Sonneborn, spokesman for health and safety services.

Warnings urged on smokeless tobacco

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saying "your child should not have to endure the pain and suffering I watched my son bravely face," the mother of a 19-year-old boy who died from mouth cancer urged Congress Friday to require warning labels on smokeless tobacco.

Betty Ann Marsee told a House subcommittee that her son, Sean, from Ada, Okla., died last year. She said he began using snuff at age 12, and operations left him disfigured and in pain, but failed to remove the cancer that appeared in his senior year of high school.

She said he had rebuffed her requests to stop using snuff, and had argued that smokeless tobacco carried no warning label and was advertised on television by athletes.

"Sean would not have used snuff had there been a warning label," she said. "He did not smoke cigarettes because there was a warning label. He was a track star, and the fact that the athletes advertised it (smokeless tobacco) to him meant it was safe."

Near the end of his life, Sean tried to warn other youngsters of the danger, Mrs. Marsee said.

"My son was a handsome boy, but after three major operations he was so disfigured that people found it hard to look directly at him," she said. "Sean realized the shock that his looks caused, and yet it was his wish to go ... from school to school to show other kids what could happen to them and to warn them of the dangers."

She urged the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on health to approve legislation requiring warning labels on snuff and chewing tobacco and to ban their advertising on radio and television.

"If you do not force them to put warnings on their products, we could have the deaths of many more promising young men like my son," she said. "Your child should not have to endure the pain and suffering I watched my son bravely face."

Smokeless tobacco products, including snuff and chewing tobacco, are of growing concern in the health community because of their popularity among children. In a Colorado study, more than 25 percent of high school boys used smokeless tobacco; in Louisiana, 20 percent of white males between the ages of 8 and 17 said they used the products.

One Texas study showed that 88 percent of smokeless tobacco users began the habit when they were younger than 15, and 55 percent said they started at or below the age of 12.

"I can walk through the grade schools and see youngsters with Skoal cans in their hip pockets that are 6, 7, 10 years old," said Ron Freeman, head football coach at Muskogee, Okla., high school, who also testified.

"The youngsters feel that snuff, smokeless tobacco, is not hazardous because there's no smoke involved," he said. "There's no warning label, so therefore it must be safe. ... It's very popular right now, and I think that's a crime."

The Smokeless Tobacco Council, a trade group, called warning labels "unnecessary and unwarranted" and said the health effects of snuff and chewing tobacco are "a controversy that remains unresolved."

"It has not been scientifically established that smokeless tobacco is the cause of any human disease," said council president Michael J. Kerrigan. Two scientists testifying for the council said medical opinion on the risk was not unanimous, and a third said smokeless tobacco did not fit the technical definition of an addictive substance.

Witnesses from the American Dental Association, the American Cancer Society, the American Lung Association and the American Heart Association endorsed the bills.

Marriage may be seen as 'ticket to America'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amita Narielwala testified Friday that she learned foreigners sometimes marry Americans to gain U.S. residency when her new husband suddenly told her: "I married you for a green card. Thanks for the ticket to America."

Patricia Beshara said her husband made a similar statement, aftr beginning affairs with numerous women, breaking her jaw and cleaning out her bank account.

"If you throw me out, a hundred women will bring me back," Mrs. Beshara said he told her. "I don't doubt it. The message is out that the easiest way to stay in America is to marry an American."

The two American women testified before the Senate Judiciary immigration subcommittee, which is investigating a growing problem of marriage fraud by foreigners seeking a convenient way to get to the United States.

The husbands of the two women could not be located by a reporter seeking reaction. For privacy reasons, the Immigration and Naturalization Service does not give out addresses, according to spokesman Duke Austin.

Because the U.S. government considers it important to keep families of immigrants together, an foreigner wishing to enter this country virtually jumps to the head of the line if married to an American.

"Marriage has become the single largest qualifying mechanism for immigration because it is the easiest to pursue," INS Commissioner Alan C. Nelson told the panel.

"By virtue of a simple ceremony taking only a few minutes, marriage to a United States citizen confers 'most favored alien' status on the beneficiary and almost instantly results in immigrant status. It is also perceived as the cure-all for any immigration problem or illegality...."

According to Nelson, while total immigration to the United States dropped 9.6 percent — from 601,442 in fiscal 1978 to 543,903 in fiscal 1984 — the number of immigrants acquiring legal status as spouses of U.S. citizens increased 43 percent, from 78,057 to 111,653, in the same period.

Nelson had left the hearing by the time Ms. Narielwala, of Alexandria, Va., and Mrs. Beshara, of New York City, told their personal stories and described the lack of help they received from the immigration service.

Ms. Narielwala's family in India arranged a marriage for her in that country with an Indian medical student, but she said after they arrived in the United States, "his attitude changed completely and he didn't want to have anything to do with me." She said he left her after three months and moved to Texas.

"He said he has a green card, which is the only thing he needs in this country and they can't take it away from him. He's applying for citizenship," she testified.

A so-called green card allows a person to live in this country as a legal immigrant and to stay indefinitely.

Ms. Narielwala said she has been to the INS "at least 50 times to ask them to look the matter over, and had no reply. They said their reason is backlog."

Mrs. Beshara, who said, "it's not easy to get up and make this statement because you feel like a fool," told how she met an Egyptian cook in Italy. He sent flowers, gifts, and "didn't want to go anywhere without me. Even my friends said, 'You picked a winner.'"

After they were married in Italy and came to the United States, she said, "My husband had become another person. He was sullen. He wouldn't talk to me."

One day, she related, a woman came to Mrs. Beshara's apartment to say she was having an affair with her husband. Mrs. Beshara said she later learned he had affairs with some 20 women.

Mrs. Beshara conducted her own investigation, produced witnesses who testified her husband married her for his green card, and finally was granted a hearing after a two-year effort.

She said her husband was issued a deportion order, but has appealed.

Failure forecast for impeachment effort

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Gov. Bill Sheffield prepared Friday for an appearance before a Senate panel deciding whether he should be impeached, but a veteran lawmaker predicted failure for any Senate motion to oust the governor.

Sheffield is accused of manipulating lease specifications to steer a $9.1 million contract to a friend and fund-raiser, and then lying about it to a grand jury. The lease has since been voided.

Impeachment hearings before the Senate Rules Committee were to continue for a fifth day Friday, but a revolt was brewing within the 20-member Senate over the contention that the grand jury that sparked the proceedings had overstepped its bounds.

A grand jury probing the lease negotiations returned no indictments, but recommended July 2 that the Legislature consider removing Sheffield from office.

Sheffield, who is tentatively scheduled to testify before the rules panel this weekend, has denied any wrongdoing.

"The governor is aware of the importance of his appearance. ... He's preparing, not rehearsing," said aide Bob Miller.

Soldiers learn how to manage clubs in posh surroundings

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Colored lights frame a dance floor while exotic vapors envelop dancers. A computerized bar dispenses shots of alcohol into glasses. Cooks prepare a feast not for four-star restaurants, but four-star generals.

All in the name of the U.S. Army.

Operating on the theory that the military deserves the best, students at the U.S. Army Club Management School at Fort Benjamin Harrison are learning how to properly set a table, garnish food and manage a disco.

Graduates of the 10-week course are assigned to manage clubs at some 700 military bases worldwide.

The Harrison & Co. Club on the base "looks nicer than most officers' clubs," said Maj. Richard A. Kubiak, director of the school. "That's the way I want it — I want a model club facility."

One unusual feature of the club is its computerized bar.

At the touch of a button, the price of a drink is displayed on a cash register at the bar. Two stainless steel racks hold bottles of liquor. The liquid travels through hoses to the drink dispenser.

The system offers about 1,000 drink combinations, including many exotic non-alcoholic drinks in line with the Army's campaign to deglamorize alcohol, Kubiak said.

With as many as 26 students — military personnel and civilians — in each class, Kubiak said about 207 people graduate each year.

DE WITT, Iowa (AP) — Shirley Clark expects the small box under her Christmas tree each year. She knows it holds yet another toenail from her husband, Jerry.

Each of the past 30 years, he has attached a toenail to a gold chain and given it to his wife. The necklace, which his wife has never worn, now contains about 30 yellowish toenails grown especially for her.

"Pardon me, but he has a warped sense of humor," Mrs. Clark said.

"My wife thinks it's the most horrible thing she's ever seen," said Clark, a retired United Telephone employee. "She won't have anything to do with it at all."

Clark said his hobby began as "just a hare-brained idea. One Christmas when we'd been married about five years, I had a rather large (toenail) and thought, 'Gee, that would be good to put on a gold chain.'"

Clark said he grows his two big toenails all year, then cuts them off with a hacksaw just before Christmas. The nails generally measure three-fourths of an inch, but some reach an inch.

While one toenail goes to his wife, the other is made into earrings, rings and necklaces for relatives, Clark said. "I don't think there's any market at all for them. In fact, most people won't take them as a gift."

Will UT resist developers' dreams for Austin land?

By MONTY JONES

AUSTIN (AP) — The kingfishers, mud turtles, fox squirrels, and dragonflies were going about their business at the Brackenridge Field Laboratory, unfazed by rumors that the University of Texas has big plans for developing its West Austin land.

Two cardinals darted silently through the pecan trees in the late-afternoon heat. If they knew about the rumor that UT had hired a consulting firm for advice on what to do with the 80-acre lab and 365 other acres in the area, they were keeping it to themselves.

And far below the surface of a giant, newly barren mound, a colony of leaf- cutter ants was tending to the recent harvest of vines and other underbrush, too intent on one of nature's most impressive construction projects to pay attention to any that humans might be dreaming of.

If the leaf-cutter ants and the other animals seemed unconcerned about the most recent rumors about the field laboratory and the other acreage known as the Brackenridge tract, it may be because a lot of rumors have come and gone in their time.

The ant mound of the leaf-cutter ants, for example, may have been there more than a century — long before the field laboratory was established in 1967 and before UT Regent George W. Brackenridge gave his West Austin land to UT in 1910 with the hope that the campus would be moved closer to the river.

The ants are among thousands of animal species that have survived in the oasis of the laboratory, between Lake Austin Boulevard and Town Lake, minutes from downtown.

THE FIELD LAB — a research site for zoologists and botanists, and a site for student field trips and interdisciplinary ecology work — has had a low budget throughout its 18-year history, and has perhaps the lowest profile of the land in the Brackenridge tract.

But the lab and neighboring UT land have been much on the minds of developers, who think UT is sitting on a gold mine of 445 close-in acres — prime land for residential or commercial development. Speculation about the land has accompanied the state budget problems and the search by UT for ways to stretch resources during a time of no growth in state appropriations.

The Brackenridge tract also includes UT housing for married students, the Lions Municipal Golf Course leased to the city, and athletic fields leased to the West Austin Youth Association. Large areas north of Lake Austin Boulevard and south of Town Lake are vacant. Smaller areas are leased by the Lower Colorado River Authority, Boat Town, Safeway, 7-Eleven, and the Lakeview Cafe.

When Brackenridge donated the tract to UT, he stipulated in the deed that the land could be used only for educational purposes during the lifetimes of six people who were children in 1910, and that the land would become the property of Jackson County if UT violated the deed.

IN A biography of Brackenridge published by UT Press, author Marilyn McAdams Sibley says UT "handled the property gingerly and kept a discreet eye on the children as the years passed."

The deed restrictions were eliminated in 1966 when the university persuaded the Legislature to enact a law allowing UT to buy out the Jackson County interest in the deed.

University officials say proposals by developers for the Brackenridge tract and the rumors that UT is considering changes are nothing new. The officials also say they have been evaluating the tract for a long time, but have made no decisions.

"All of our assets need to be re-evaluated periodically, and this is one of them," said UT Regent Beryl Milburn, chairman of the regents' Land and Investment Committee.

Milburn said the regents, contrary to one rumor, have not hired a consulting firm to help evaluate the tract, and that UT has not been under pressure from developers to open more of the tract to commercial use.

"We are simply in the process of appraising the value of our assets," Milburn said. "We are not getting into the subject of the present use of the land or its best use and we just don't have any plans at this time for the land."

Mike Patrick, executive vice chancellor for asset management, said UT receives proposals from developers "all the time," but that "the expectation of something dramatic happening with the land is overdrawn." Patrick said he is "a little bit surprised" about the high interest in the rumors because they "are almost perpetual."

THE GOLF COURSE lease, which expires in 1987, has been the focus of a lot of the speculation concerning UT plans. UT says no decision has been made about renewing the lease.

"We know the city would like an answer soon," Patrick said.

Texas vets remember POWs, MIAs

TYLER (AP) — Ambivalent feelings lingered in the bare, muggy meeting room where about 200 people had gathered for a candlelight vigil to remember men still missing in Vietnam.

The Texas veterans cried and boasted as they remembered their past. Several dressed in their old uniforms beamed with pride and saluted as they watched an American flag pass by them in a silent parade.

But those same men quickly chastised their government for its slowness in arranging the return of American soldiers still missing in Vietnam.

"It's a long time overdue," said Sam Atwood, a 1966-67 Army veteran. "I don't think they are doing enough about it. It's really still going on over there."

Atwood was left paralyzed by wounds in Vietnam.

Hanoi announced in an early July meeting that it would return the remains of 26 Americans. Negotiations between the United States and Vietnam have been ongoing for the last 10 years. Most recently, at a February meeting, the countries agreed to meet six times a year to trade information and search for the missing.

Lewis and Lora Wall, of Jacksonville, said they are afraid one of the bodies to be returned may be their son who has been missing for 19 years.

"We're not convinced he's dead. They never found his body," said Mrs. Wall, mother of Jerry Wall, who was sent to Vietnam in 1966.

Mrs. Wall said her son had been in Vietnam for six months before she received a telegram that he was presumed dead.

"Someday, I'm afraid I'll get that call and it will be mine," she said. "If it is, I'd like to have it, but that's not all I want. I want a person."

She and her husband said they don't believe the government has done enough to find the missing soldiers.

"If they can get a task force together to rescue the hostages," said Lewis Wall referring to hostages of Trans World Airlines Flight 847, "why can't they get together a task force to rescue the MIAs? Someone needs to care."

The Texas veterans and MIA families met last weekend in Tyler for National POW-MIA Day of Recognition. The veterans said they plan to use their political forces and encourage government officials to speed negotiations with Hanoi.

Officials estimate that 2,464 American soldiers still are missing in Southeast Asia. Among the missing are 161 Texans.

"It'd be the same if a brother was missing from a boat in the Gulf," said Ron Edwards, Vietnam veteran from 1964 to 1966. "I'd want someone to find him...I'd want something nice said over his body. They (the missing) are family."

Battle of the beauty queens now considered in New Jersey court

By FRANK BAJAK
Associated Press Writer

Toni Georgiana

Laura Ann Bridges

JERSEY CITY, N.J. — A battle of beauty queens moved into court Friday with the runner-up in the Miss New Jersey pageant claiming the reigning queen should be dethroned because she falsely represented herself as a student in the state.

Runner-up Laura Ann Bridges contends Toni Georgiana, a Pennsylvania resident, has no right to her title, which enables her to compete to become Miss America in September.

But Miss Georgiana testified Friday that she was "just too busy" preparing for the pageant to attend the college course she registered for, partly to qualify as a contestant.

Miss Bridges, 24, of Jersey City, alleged that Miss Georgiana, 21, of Uniontown, Pa., should never have been allowed to enter the county pageant she won to advance to the July 6 state contest because she neither lived, worked nor was a "bona fide student" in New Jersey.

Superior Court Judge Robert E. Tarleton scheduled closing arguments Tuesday and said he would rule then.

The state pageant's executive director, Nathan Zauber, testified Friday that he considered Miss Georgiana eligible to compete in the Miss Mercer County Pageant, held May 31, because she had registered for a two-week health course at Trenton State College.

Zauber is named as a defendant, along with pageant sponsors.

Miss Georgiana said she registered May 20 for the course, which she eventually failed, in part because she knew it would make her eligible to compete in the county pageant. But she denied that was her sole motivation.

Miss Georgiana said she would have attended classes had she not won the county contest and subsequently found herself with just a month to prepare for the state pageant.

"I was just too busy. It just didn't work out," Miss Georgiana said.

Tarleton earlier this week agreed to an accelerated trial because the start of the 65th Miss America Pageant in Atlantic City is less than two months away.

Miss Georgiana said that between the time she registered for the course and the Miss New Jersey contest, she never set foot on the Trenton State campus.

State pageants follow national contest rules, which stipulate that a contestant is eligible if she is "a bona fide student registered at a college or university, whether or not she has been registered for six months," Zauber said.

Miss America Pageant officials have declined to comment.

The suit charges the defendants with fraud, breach of contract, deceit and wrongfully denying the crown to Miss Bridges, a dental student who has competed in the pageant three times in as many years.

Miss Georgiana, who has attended Pennsylvania State University, said she has participated in three pageants since 1982, when she was third runner-up in the Miss Pennsylvania contest.

In 1984, she became first runner-up in that competition after winning the Miss Westmoreland County, Pa., contest, in which Zauber was a judge.

In response to questions by the plaintiff's attorney, Philip Feintuch, Zauber sought to dispel notions that he had shown preference for Miss Georgiana.

"I judge all over the country," Zauber said.

Miss Bridges said outside court that she was "definitely not a sore loser."

NATION IN BRIEF

California bees studied

LOST HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Scientists hunting for fugitives from the first U.S. "killer bee" colony studied honeybees less than a half-mile away Friday in commercial and hobbyists' hives.

Searchers already had used the "quick and dirty" test of stirring up the insects in the group of commercial hives and two hobbyists' colonies in rural Kern County, said Rex Magee, associate agricultural director.

The bees appeared to quiet too quickly to be the more aggressive African honeybees, popularly known as "killer bees" and depicted in disaster movies.

Bones likely Mengele's

ATLANTA (AP) — It would have been "practically impossible" to fake the remains of Josef Mengele, said a forensic pathologist who was part of the U.S. Justice Department team that examined remains said to be those of the Nazi doctor.

"We can say within a reasonable scientific certainty that this skeleton is this man," Dr. Ali Z. Hameli, Delaware's chief medical examiner, said Friday at the annual meeting of the American Association of Clinical Chemistry.

Scientists from the Justice Department, the Simon Wiesenthal Center, Germany and Brazil found dozens of apparent similarities between photos of Mengele; photos of "Wolfgang Gerhard," the man whose identity Mengele apparently adopted in hiding in Brazil; and the skeletal remains exhumed at Embu, Brazil, on June 6.

But Hameli said he is not ready to close the book on the Mengele case because scientists don't have a single X-ray of Mengele to compare to his purported corpse.

Teamsters strike begins

BOSTON (AP) — Picket lines went up from Boston to Los Angeles on Friday as 20,000 Teamsters union car haulers launched a strike, and auto industry officials said the walkout could hurt production unless a settlement was reached quickly.

"Of course we're going to be affected because they haul for us," said Larry Caron, supervisor of labor relations at the General Motors Corp. plant in Framingham, Mass., where 300 Anchor Motor Freight workers picketed at a truck terminal.

Workers, who said companies had forced the strike by offering a contract with unacceptable job security and mileage pay provisions, also walked picket lines in Detroit and Flint, Mich.; Kansas City; Oklahoma City; Shreveport, La.; Birmingham, Ala.; Los Angeles; Boston; Dallas; Newark, Baltimore, Phoenix, Ariz., Oakland, Calif., and other cities.

Funeral services are pending for Margaret A. Pointer, 69, of Los Angeles who died there following a lengthy illness.

Survivors include a daughter, Eloise Patterson of Midland.

Correction

In the Friday, July 26 edition of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, an article stated that the new expansion under construction at Midland Memorial Hospital cost $77 million. The project cost $15 million. The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

Have we made an error? Call us at 682-5311, extension 130, and a correction will be published.

Homeowners can expect increase in insurance rates

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Homeowners in Midland County can expect an average drop of 6.2 percent in their insurance rates effective Nov. 15, under proposals approved by the State Board of Insurance.

The three board members accepted SBI staff recommendations which will result in a statewide increase of 6.7 percent in homeowners insurance rates, and an increase of 2.2 percent statewide for homeowners, farm and ranch owners, fire and extended coverage classes combined.

Tenant homeowners insurance rates — for renters insuring household contents — will decrease 25 percent in all three of the SBI's rating territories.

Fire insurance will increase an average 7.0 percent for all classes, including 10.5 percent on dwellings, 4.6 percent on farm classes, 4.1 percent on cotton classes, and 0.5 percent on "all other" classes.

Extended coverage rates are to decrease by 15.5 percent statewide, while the changes in the North-Northwest territory, including Midland, is minus 23.6 percent.

An example used by SBI shows that for a $50,000 brick veneer home, on a one-year "Form B" homeowners' policy, in North-Northwest, the change would be from $410 to $384.

On a $100,000 home, the change would be from $715 to $670.

Theft of racing tires investigated by police

From Staff Reports

The theft of several racing tires amounting to more than $1,095 was reported to the Midland County Sheriff's office early Friday afternoon, according to reports.

Doug R. Pyle, No. 27 Chisolm Trail, told officers that between 7:30 p.m. July 20 and 1:30 p.m. Friday, several racing tires were removed from a two trailers he had stored in a warehouse at 410 Wakefield.

Reports said that entry was gained by cutting a hole in a fence surrounding the storage building. Locks were cut on the rods used to hold the tires on the trailer, Pyle told the officers. He indicated that the tires were special and could only be used on a racing car.

A trailer was reported stolen sometime between 5 p.m. Wednesday and noon Friday, according to Midland Police Department reports.

Randel Givens, 3034 Fredna, told police that a white, homemade trailer was taken from his residence. The trailer was valued at $1,000.

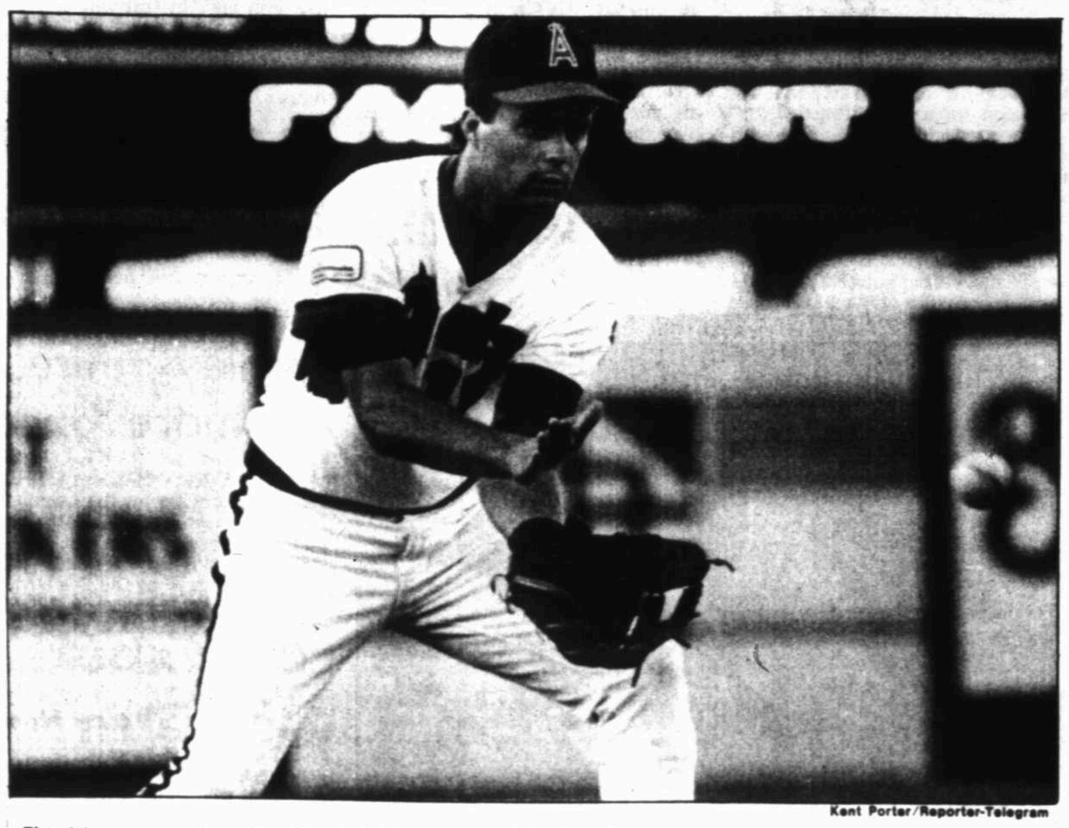
Angels blow chances, tumble in 12th, 7-5



Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Third baseman Billie Merrifield fields a ground ball in Friday's Angels-Mets Texas League game.

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Jackson scored three runs in the top of the 12th for a 7-5 Texas League win before 1,226 fans at Angels Stadium Friday night, but it was happened in the 11th inning that had the Midland Angels muttering to themselves after the game.

How many times do you see a catcher pull off an unassisted double play at third base? That's what happened in the 11th, just when the Angels seemed on the threshhold of a victory.

Mike Madrill, who had walked, was on third and Mark McLemore, who beat out a bunt single was on second. Billie Merrifield's sacrifice, which moved the runners into scoring position, was the only out.

"All we had to do was get the ball out of the infield," lamented Midland Manager Joe Maddon later. "And if we had gotten ahead in the count, I was even thinking of a squeeze."

GREG KEY'S topped roller in front of the plate turned out to be worse than a squeeze. Madril broke for home only to find catcher Greg Olson had pounced on the ball and was in his path. Madril beat a hasty retreat, fell and regained his footing as Olson, unfortunately, made a hasty swipe at the runner and missed the tag.

When Madril reached third, it was a case of "Mr. McLemore, I presume?"

As third base umpire Mike Winters explained it later, "With two men on base, the back runner is out. The lead runner, Madril, in this case, has the right to the bag. Olson tagged both, and I called McLemore out. I even pointed to him.

"Then, Madril took a walk and when Olson tagged him, he was out, too."

"I think everybody was confused," said Maddon. "I thought the catcher had tagged out Madril between home and third."

Winters explained, "He made the swipe with his glove and missed. Even if he had made contact, he was holding the ball in his bare hand."

ALTHOUGH Reggie Montgomery opened the home 12th with his fourth hit of the game and 17th homer of the season, the three runs in the top of the 12th off Julian Gonzales had done the damage.

Dave Magadan, College Baseball's Player of the Year in 1983 at the University of Alabama, singled home what proved to be the winning run , Barry Lyons singled in another with his fourth hit and a wild pitch let in the third.

Tom Burns, 6-2, got the win with four innings of four-hit relief and Ed Pruitt, who came in after Montgomery's homer, picked up his second save.

Until Montgomery homered, Midland hadn't scored since the second inning when the Angels took the lead 4-1 on three unearned runs, but still left the bases loaded.

Merrifield homered for Midland in the first, his ninth, a solo to left.

Lefthander Ken Angulo, coming off the Disabled List, turned in five strong innings, but Jackson tied it with two runs in the sixth. Infield singles by Lyons and Jason Felice sandwiched around Randy Milligan's hit did Angulo in. And when Kevin Elster singled in the second run before Todd Fischer came on in relief.

Fischer served up a double play ball to Olson to end the rally and then pitched four more innings of scoreless relief.

It was a game of missed opportunities for the Angels. First, the three runners left on in the second. In the fourth, Madril singled and McLemore's hit up the middle was turned into a force out as second baseman Keith Miller made a chest-skidding stop behind second and flipped to shortstop Elster for the force. Merrifield singled McLemore to third, but then a double steal backfired and McLemore was trapped off third for the third out.

In the fifth, Phil Stephenson led off and was hit by a pitch. Montgomery singled, but Jim Adamczak relieved surprise starter Dave Wyatt and escaped the inning unscathed.

Minor issues cleared; baseball talks to get serious?

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — With Commissioner Peter Ueberroth vowing he will not allow a strike, the two sides in baseball's labor negotiations settled more than 20 minor issues Friday in an attempt to clear the way for the major matters.

Lee MacPhail, president of the owners' Player Relations Committee, said the two sides had agreed "or come very close to agreeing" on about 22 non-economic issues and had about 20 more items to go before they could turn their attention to issues like pensions, salary arbitration and free agents.

Meanwhile, Ueberroth said in an interview with KNX Radio of Los Angeles: "I just really can't allow there to be a strike that shuts down America's national pastime. It's been shut down too many times in the past. It's just not the right thing."

Ueberroth's comments to the CBS affiliate were made Thursday night and aired Friday.

THE BASEBALL players' union has set an Aug. 6 strike deadline. In 1981, the players went on strike for seven weeks.

"The major issues are still before us," MacPhail said after the two-hour meeting at union headquarters in New York. "First, we have to tackle these other things, try to put them aside, so we can concentrate on the major issues.

"We're trying to use all the imagination we have. We hope they are too," MacPhail said.

Don Fehr, acting executive director of the Major League Players Association, said both sides withdrew some issues and made compromises in order to come to agreement on many of the so-called minor issues. These issues have included things like waiver procedures, player allowances, scheduling and licensing.

"We do regard this as an attempt to be constructive," said Fehr, who only one day earlier said he suspected management of trying to provoke a breakdown in negotiations. "On these issues that we discussed today, we have advanced the ball.

"Perhaps we are finally getting to the stage where we can put these differences behind us and concentrate on other matters."

THE UNION'S primary objective in these labor negotiations is to increase the owners' contribution to the players' benefits plan by some $45 million annually, from $15.5 million in 1984 to $60 million. To fund this increase, the union wants one-third of the owners' $1.1 billion, six-year network television contract. The union also would like to alter or abolish the free-agent reentry draft to allow for freer movement of players.

On the management side, owners would like to substantially alter salary arbitration in their favor. On Thursday, management proposed revisions in arbitration that would have limited the size of salary awards and restricted the types of players that could go to an arbitrator. The union rejected the proposal.

"We're still not back into the major issues," Fehr said. "The fact is, we've been looking for specific, concrete proposals on pensions since September, and we still don't have it."

MacPhail reiterated that management was working on a pension proposal.

"WE WOULD make a proposal now if we had one to make," MacPhail said. "We are trying to find a way to close the ground between us, to find some way to search for common ground. We are working on something, and we are sure they are too."

Fehr said management had promised a pension proposal.

"They have said they may have some new approaches," Fehr said. "I hope they do. It's obvious we need a different approach."

50,000 greet athletes on hot Louisiana night

By RAY FORMANEK Jr.
Associated Press Writer

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — About 50,000 people turned out on a sticky, hot Louisiana night Friday to see fireworks, paratroopers and 3,300 athletes kick off the sixth National Sports Festival.

"It's guaranteed to be a record turnout for an opening ceremony," said Mart Martin, media representative for the United States Olympic Committee. It's been real exciting. We're really pleased with the way that everything has gone."

Organizers predicted that as many as 65,000 would pour into the 73,000-seat stadium. The turnout easily easily topped the prior record crowd of 45,000 in 1983 at Colorado Springs, Colo.

Governor Edwin Edwards welcomed the athletes and fans to Louisiana, saying, "We are proud to have you in our midst."

Disabled athletes in wheelchairs led each of the teams representing the North, South, East and West regions of the country into the stadium. This is the first year that disabled competitors will participate in the festival.

OLYMPIC GOLD medal winner Edwin Moses carried the American flag as part of the procession. Moses is not scheduled to compete here.

The entrance of the green-clad South team brought a standing ovation from the crowd. The ovation grew as the Louisiana contingent brought the procession of athletes to a close. Jubilant competitors lined up in the middle of the stadium, jumping and waving to the crowd.

Tommy Colandro and Melanie Hebert, both of Baton Rouge, carried the festival torch into the stadium. Colandro was a member of the 1984 Olympic weightlifting team, and Hebert, a blind swimmer, is competing in the disabled events.

Greg Louganis and Valerie-Brisco Hooks, gold medal winners at the Los Angeles Games, carried the festival torch to the top of a 60-foot pyramid. A dark green beam of light from a laser shot across the darkened stadium, igniting a huge butane cauldron, the official NSF flame, which towered nearly 200 feet above the stands.

Temperatures hovering near 90 and high humidity failed to keep Bayou Country natives and visitors from partying before and after the festivities.

"IT'S JUST too hot. It's sweltering," said Tommy Wallace of Baton Rouge, as he sat in a folding lawn chair in the stadium's parking lot and offered a reporter a beer. "But it's fun."

Officials reported few instances of injuries, but organizers requested Boy Scout ushers to quit handing out Mardi Gras-type medallions after several people were hurt when the crowd began tossing them.

Some 4,000 dancers, band members and flag bearers joined the athletes on the field during the extravagnza.

The theme of the spectacular was a salute to "The Music of Louisiana" and the throng swayed to rock, jazz and gospel performers during the three-hour show, headlined by Cajun fiddler Doug Kershaw, Louisiana natives John Fred and his Playboy Band and former Gov. Jimmie Davis performing his country-western hit "You Are My Sunshine."

New Orleans singer Fats Domino, orginally slated to a duet with Kershaw, was ill and failed to show, but the crowd didn't seem to care when Kershaw substituted his rendition of "Louisiana Man."

Next, eight members of the U.S. Army's Golden Knights parachute team jumped from a C-130 Hercules aircraft. The parachutists landed in the middle of an outline of the state of Louisiana formed by marching band members. The crowd cheered and clapped as the black-and-gold clad chutists tried to hit a large orange X located at midfield.

AFTER THE cauldron lighting, composer Bill Conti, an LSU graduate, directed the Baton Rouge Symphony Orchestra in the NSF theme he composed as well as a medley of his other hits, including the themes from the movie "Rocky" and television's "Dynasty."

The extravanganza was televised by ESPN, the cable television sports network.

Past and potential Olympians will compete in 31 events from the Summer Olympic Games, three from the Winter Games and a series of contests for the handicapped before the games end on Aug. 4.

Brock, Wilhelm lead Hall of Fame inductees

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — Relief pitcher Hoyt Wilhelm, considered the greatest knuckleballer of all time, and Lou Brock and Enos Slaughter, whose careers were built on sprints around the bases, will be inducted Sunday into baseball's Hall of Fame.

Also being inducted is the late Arky Vaughan of the Pittsburgh Pirates and Brooklyn Dodgers whose career batting average of .318 was second only to Honus Wagner's .329 among Hall of Fame shortstops.

Wilhelm and Brock were chosen for induction by the Baseball Writers Association of America, Vaughan and Slaughter by the Hall of Fame Veterans Committee.

They enter the shrine as the sport faces the prospect of its second midseason strike in five years. The deadline is Aug. 6 and little progress between the owners and players has been reported in the daily contract talks.

"It's a shame all of baseball can't be here this weekend," Bill Guilfoile, the associate director of the Hall of Fame, said. "If they could witness the ceremony, feel the crowds and see what the Hall means to the people who are in it, there would never be another baseball strike."

IN 21 seasons with nine teams, Wilhelm appeared in a record 1,073 games, winning 143 (123 in relief) and saving 227 before retiring at the age of 49. As a 29-year-old rookie with the New York Giants in 1952, he hit a home-run in his first at-bat in the majors. It was the only home run he hit.

It takes a back seat in his memories to his best game on the mound, a no-hitter against the New York Yankees in 1958 when he was a starting pitcher for the Baltimore Orioles. "The no-hitter was the single biggest game of my career," he has said. "I don't remember any tough plays, but nobody pitches a no-hitter without being a little lucky."

Brock, the key player in one of the most one-sided trades in baseball history, owns the record for career stolen bases at 938. He retired in 1979, five seasons after he had set what was then the single-season record of 118 stolen bases, surpassed in 1982 by the Yankees' Rickey Henderson's 130 when he was with Oakland.

In 1964, his fourth seasons in the majors, Brock was dealt to the St. Louis Cardinals by the Chicago Cubs in exchange for pitcher Ernie Broglio. After 2½ losing seasons with the Cubs, Broglio was out of baseball. Brock, in 19 years in the majors, had a career batting average of .293.

Slaughter retired in 1959, a career .300 hitter over 19 seasons. His best-known exploit came in the seventh game of the 1946 World Series against the Boston Red Sox when his eighth-inning single and subsequent dash from first to home on Harry Walker's double to left-center field gave the Cardinals the winning run.

IN REALITY, Slaughter ran everywhere — to first base on a walk, to the outfield, to the dugout. When he played in Cincinnati against the Reds, he became the role model for a kid growing up in Crosley Field — Pete Rose.

After he retired, Slaughter waited the customary five years to become eligible for the Hall of Fame, then waited in vain for 15 years while the writers bypassed him.

"For a couple of years, I waited around by the phone for the call," he said. "But then I said, 'To hell with it; when they want me, they can come and find me.' " This year the veterans committee found him. "Deep in my heart, I was bitter," he said of his repeated rejection, "but all that has been forgotten now."

Landry gives 'other' backs closer look

Dorsett's absence creates gap

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — While Dallas Cowboys running back Tony Dorsett tried to straighten some of his business affairs with the Internal Revenue Service in Dallas on Friday, Coach Tom Landry took a long look at other tailbacks in training camp.

Dorsett was given a 48-hour extension of the veterans' reporting deadline on Thursday to he could meet with financial advisors.

"This will give us a chance to look at some of our other tailbacks," said Landry. "James Jones has been looking pretty good and we'll see if he can do the job. Norm Granger also will get a look."

Landry said he won't move starting fullback Timmy Newsome to tailback at this time. And Newsome says he doesn't want to be moved.

"I'm happy where I am right now. Remember last year when Randy White missed camp and Don Smerek played tackle? When Randy came back, Don had to move back to end and wasn't a starter," he said. "I don't want to be put in that situation."

A "THIRD party" representing Dorsett called at the 7:30 p.m. Thursday reporting deadline to ask Landry and club President Tex Schramm for a 48-hour delay.

Schramm said Dorsett and his advisors are hopeful of working out an agreement with the IRS to repay some of the mounting debts.

"Coach Landry granted the extension," said Schramm. "We are disappointed he (Dorsett) is not here but we are more disappointed about the position Tony has arrived at. It's sad that a player of his ability and personality finds himself in this role".

"It's a sad situation," said Schramm. "I just wish Tony had come to us earlier with his problems. However, he is still under contract and needs to abide by terms of the contract."

Dorsett is in the fourth year of a seven-year deal that brings him some $400,000 a year.

"The boat Tony finds himself in was caused by poor planning and advice," said Schramm. "We are looking for a structure where he can play the next three years and have something left. We want him to come out of football in a healthy financial situation.

"He is a fine young man with a lot of problems. We have a lot of empathy for him."

DORSETT AT one time had a 15-year deferred contract at $100,000 but decided he wanted the money up front. Investments turned sour and trouble with the IRS has drained away much of the money.

"We want Tony to get what's best for Tony," Newsome said. "We can all be behind him in this case but it's always a distraction when someone like him isn't in training camp."

Dorsett was hit in Dallas with a $400,000 back tax notice by the IRS which encumbered two of his houses.

He has not received a paycheck since last October when the IRS began to take his paychecks.

Landry said "The Cowboys are the best friend (of Dorsett) if he doesn't know it. He may recognize it along the way."

Schramm said he believed Dorsett "was on the right track now."

Houston's Mike Rozier swings around end in practice drills Friday at Angelo State in San Angelo. The Oilers have run into a roadblock in negotiations with top pick Ray Childress of Texas A & M.

Baker reaches pact; Childress talks stalled

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Houston Oilers starting defensive end Jesse Baker and his agent reached verbal agreement on a series of contracts with the Oilers Friday, club officials said.

Oilers General Manager Ladd Herzeg said Baker and agent Frank Buck would be in Houston Saturday to review the contract's terms.

Baker led all Oilers down linemen last season with 102 tackles and had a team-high 11 sacks. Baker has led the team in sacks in each of his six previous seasons.

Herzeg also said he had been waiting since Monday for comment from Howard Slusher, agent for starting running back Larry Moriarty, on the team's latest offer.

Moriarty, who led the Oilers in rushing last season, has not reported to Oilers training camp during the dispute.

While the Oilers appeared ready to greet one defensive lineman, another — second-round draft pick Richard Byrd — was returning to Houston for further tests on his sprained knee, Oilers head coach Hugh Campbell said.

Defensive end Ray Childress, the team's No. 1 draft choice, and starting defensive end Jesse Baker have not reported to training camp because of contract disagreements.

Meanwhile, third round draft pick Mike Kelley, an offensive lineman from Notre Dame, reported to camp after signing his contract on Thursday.

Kelley, who played three offensive line positions for the Fighting Irish, will play center in early workouts but could later be tested at other positions on the injury-riddled Oiler line.

Salem was examined Friday by Dr. J. Richard Steadman at South Lake Tahoe, Calif.

Oiler's Floyd has speed, but does he have future?

By MICHAEL LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Stanley Floyd, best known as a world class sprinter, has taken a lot of gambles but no second guesses with his brief athletic career.

After becoming a two-time NCAA 100-meter sprint champion at Auburn and the University of Houston, Floyd left track for various athletic endeavors.

He went to an instructional league camp with the Milwaukee Brewers where he hoped to become a designated base runner. He tried to make it into pro football with the Atlanta Falcons.

Floyd even raced a horse on a segment of a television program called "That's Incredible." Incredibly, he said he was clocked at 3.91 seconds over the first 40 yards.

Now Floyd is attempting to earn a spot on the Houston Oilers' roster at age 24.

Had Floyd remained with track throughout, he likely could be among the nation's track stars that are earning huge salaries under liberalized amateur rules.

BUT HE'S not looking back.

"I could have made it big (in track) or been no better off than I am now," Floyd said. "I don't think I lost out on anything because in track and field the desire just wasn't there anymore.

"There was something else that I wanted to do and that was football. I really want to make it as a football player and possibly use track as a second sport."

Although Floyd can outrun a racehorse for 40 yards, he'll have to also catch a football to make it with the Oilers.

Floyd, 5-9, 165, is competing with a group of similarly gifted receivers. He's the fastest, but must improve in other areas to make the team.

Lee's Thurman an All-Star

DALLAS (AP) — Former Midland Lee running back Tyrone Thurman was one of several replacements named Friday to participate for the North All-Stars in next week's Texas High School Coaches Association football All-Star game, a spokesman said.

Thurman, a 5-6, 140 back for the Rebels the past three seasons, will report to Texas Tech on a football scholarship this fall. Thurman is replacing Falanca Newton of Fort Worth Wyatt who fell ill, said Maury Salinger, association spokesman.

In other late replacements for the football all-star game and the basketball all-star game to be played the same week, Collin Wade, 6-foot-5, of Henderson will replace Wesley Lowe of West Mesquite, who is out with an injury, and Floyd Macon, 6-4 of Dallas W.W. Samuell will replace Tim Howard of Fort Worth Dunbar, who had a schedule conflict, said Salinger.

The basketball game is scheduled for Wednesday night at Moody Coliseum, with the football matchup Thursday night at Texas Stadium.

Unhappy Banks reports to Browns

KIRTLAND, Ohio (AP) — Chip Banks, the disgruntled Cleveland Browns linebacker, showed up for training camp on Friday, but more than three hours after the deadline for appearing, a team spokesman said.

Banks reported to the Browns' office at Lakeland Community College, picked up his practice schedule and keys and joined his fellow 32 veterans. Banks would be unavailable for comment until later in the day, the team said.

Team officials were also unavailable to discuss what type of punishment Banks faces as a result.

Banks has been at odds with the team since the unsuccessful effort by management to trade him to the Buffalo Bills this spring.

"Appropriate action will be taken," head coach Marty Schottenheimer said earlier about Banks, 25, the Browns' first-round choice in the 1982 draft. The contract between the league and players allows for up to a $1,000 fine for each day of missed practice.

Schottenheimer had also said about the possibility of further discipline: "I don't think I can put that in black and white right now. It might depend on my mood that day."

IN APRIL, the Browns traded Banks, a 1985 third-round draft choice and the first and sixth-round choices of the 1986 draft to the Buffalo Bills for the first choice in last month's special supplemental draft.

Cleveland used that choice to get Miami of Florida quarterback Bernie Kosar. Banks, however, failed to report to Buffalo for a physical examination preceding the National Football League's regular collegiate draft on April 30.

When Banks also said he didn't want to play for Buffalo, the Bills took the Browns' first-round choice in the 1985 draft instead of Banks.

Even though Banks remained a Brown, he reportedly demanded a trade or a renogiation of his contract, which runs through 1986.

Cleveland owner Art Modell refused to renegotiate the contract, which reportedly pays him $500,000 a season.

Banks had not been heard from since meeting with Modell and Schottenheimer in May.

Rookie running back Greg Allen, the Browns' second-round draft choice from Florida State, participated in his first workouts Friday.

Allen missed the first week of camp when his contract negotiations stalled. He signed on Wednesday.

"THE ONLY fear I have is that maybe I've gotten behind in learning the plays and learning the system," Allen said.

Allen had arthroscopic surgery on his left knee midway through the 1984 collegiate campaign. He said Friday, though: "The knee feels pretty good. It's not back to the strength that it was, but it's at playing strength. It's about 95 percent right."

Allen and most of the Browns veterans will not play in the Browns' controlled scrimmage against the Buffalo Bills Saturday at Edinboro State in Pennsylvania.

Donley retires; 14 more axed

DALLAS (AP) — Former Cowboys receiver Doug Donley has decided to retire from professional football and go into private business because he's tired of putting up with all the pain.

Donley, waived by the Cowboys after last season because of shoulder problems, had failed a physical in Cleveland.

He was offered a contract with the Houston Oilers with a $35,000 signing bonus and a $125,000 first-year salary, but turned it down. He said later that more advance money might have convinced him to play.

"I've decided to hang them up," Donley said Thursday. "I did a lot of thinking and decided this is what I should do. I think I could have played, but I don't know if that was best."

Donley, 26, said he decided his shoulder and hamstring problems could lead to another season of sleepless nights.

HE SAID he plans to pursue business interests and might also enter broadcasting.

He said he is prepared to file a grievance to collect $62,500 — half of what his 1985 salary would have been — in injury protection benefits. The benefits are given to a player who suffers an injury in the last game of the previous season or flunks his pre-season physical because of an injury suffered in the previous season.

Poke Notes

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys of the National Football League cut 14 free agents on Friday, including four wide receivers.

Those cut included wide receivers Kevin Bowman and Keith McDoland, both of San Jose State, John Johnson, Arizona, and Deverick Lampley, Millikin-Illinois.

Others trimmed from the roster were cornerback Reg Banks, Elizabeth City, quarterback Bob Hewko, Florida, linebackers Bernard Jones, Western Carolina, and Mike Thompson, North Texas State, tackles Mike Kraetschi, Minnesota-Morris, and Allen Moore, Michigan State, safeties David Norwood, Kirk Perry, Louisville, fullback Ted Marcus, Carson-Newman, tight end Ed Ruggeroli, Utah State.

O.J., Namath will run from induction to TV booth

By CHUCK MELVIN
AP Sports Writer

CANTON, Ohio — O.J. Simpson and Joe Namath may have to leave the Pro Football Hall of Fame ceremonies a little early next Saturday. They have to go to work.

They'll pick up their induction plaques, say a few words, then dash up to the ABC-TV broadcast booth to announce the Hall of Fame game.

"I think we're going to just go up in the booth and the game will really be a time of reflection for Joe and myself," Simpson said. "It'll be an emotional time. I've given a lot of thought to what I'm going to say, but I think I'm going to have to rely on the emotion of the moment."

Joining Simpson and Namath as 1985 Hall inductees are quarterback Roger Staubach, center Frank Gatski and Pete Rozelle, NFL commissioner since 1960.

The induction ceremony will be followed by the annual AFC-NFC game, this year between the Houston Oilers and the New York Giants. The game, which kicks off the 1985 NFL exhibition season, begins at 2:30 p.m. EDT.

THIS YEAR'S class includes some of the sport's most recognizable faces, prompting Rozelle to quip: "My only regret about being named to the Pro Football Hall of Fame this year is that I wish I could have been included in a more illustrious group."

The 38-year-old Simpson, who has appeared in movies and commercials since leaving football in 1979, attributes his success to the same things that made him a record-setting running back for the Buffalo Bills and San Francisco 49ers.

"The first thing is to be prepared, to be totally inquisitive," he said during a telephone interview. "When I was playing, I knew our offense and I knew what everybody's job was. Plus, I understood the defenses I was playing against. I knew a little bit about everybody on the other team.

"Joe Namath was known for the same thing. If you ever watched Joe or me before a game, you'd see us talking to the other team. Those things help you in the long run."

Simpson, along with newly hired Namath and another Hall member, Frank Gifford, make up ABC's Monday Night Football team. Simpson says he still gets the same butterflies before a TV game that he did when he was playing.

"THE WORST part about this is, you don't get hit. When you get hit in a game, it knocks that right out of you," he says.

"The Juice" rushed for 11,236 yards, second only to Jim Brown's 12,312 when he retired. In 1973, Simpson became the first player to surpass 2,000 yards rusing in a single season when he compiled 2,003. That record was broken last season by Eric Dickerson of the Los Angeles Rams who gained 2,105.

Simpson said he was proud to be part of this Hall class because each player, in his own way, made a different contribution to football.

"Joe said, 'Don't expect any more from us than we are.' Joe was out front with people," Simpson said. "And Roger probably epitomized what we were expected to be as football heroes. Gatski was long before my time, but it was people like him who built pro football."

Namath, 42, played for the New York Jets from 1965-76 and for the Los Angeles Rams in 1977. He is best remembered for predicting victory in Super Bowl III when the Jets defeated the Baltimore Colts 16-7. In 1967, he became the first passer to go over 4,000 yards in one season with 4,007 in 14 games.

The Hall of Fame game will be Namath's first stint in the broadcast booth for ABC, which hired him earlier this month to replace Don Meredith.

Staubach, 43, who led the Dallas Cowboys to two Super Bowls during his 11-year career, is successful selling real estate and doing commercials.

BUT HE said making the transition wasn't always easy.

"I had withdrawal pains on Sunday afternoons for a while," he said.

He also got skeptical responses from some businessmen.

"Some people may feel I'm not qualified. Some feel I shouldn't be in their arena," Staubach said.

Staubach's life has been a series of transitions. He played football at Navy, winning the Heisman Trophy in 1963. Then he served in the Navy for four years before joining the Cowboys at age 27 in 1969.

Gatski, 63, now teaches in his native West Virginia. He played with the Cleveland Browns from 1946-1956 and then completed his career with the Detroit Lions in 1957.

It was a time when football produced no great riches for players. His annual salary never surpassed $10,000, and no television job was awaiting him after he finished his 12-year career in 1957.

"We made a living and we had a lot of fun," he said, adding that he has no hard feelings about the big money available to players today.

"I think it's beautiful," he said. "I don't begrudge them a thing."

Raiders' Davis acts like a coach

By MIKE WALDNER
Copley News Service

OXNARD, Calif. — Al Davis is pacing up and down the football field.

These are just the Los Angeles Raider rookies, assorted free agents trying out for the team, plus a collection of veterans who relish the opportunity to get started early.

The first practice game is not until Aug. 10. The first league game is not until Sept. 8. The first game of the playoff season is not until Dec. 28.

Yet there is Davis, the managing general partner of the Raiders, wound as tight as ever during this afternoon workout.

The practice facility here includes two football fields a half dozen or so yards apart. Davis paces up and down in the area in the middle as units work on each field. He is totally involved without actually coaching the football team.

Not that he could not coach the Raiders. He did. He took a scrubby group that had been 1-13 and produced 10-4, 5-7-2 and 8-5-1 records in 1963-64-65.

But now he is an owner. And most owners are interested in summer vacations in London, the stock market and entertaining the high and the mighty.

Davis is interested, and totally involved, in his football team.

DURING practice, he stands, he watches, he paces, he watches, he yells, he paces, he is quiet, he is not quiet and he paces some more.

There is a continual string of "atta boys" from Davis the cheerleader.

There also are specific comments from the old coach.

Trey Junkin was a linebacker/special teams player for Buffalo and Washington in 1984. He also was released by Buffalo and Washington in 1984.

During a tryout at the team headquarters in El Segundo, Junkin mentioned he was a tight end in high school and as a college freshman. This prompted the Raiders to take a look at him on offense.

Junkin runs a pattern in a non-contact exercise, the ball is thrown, he turns and catches it against his chest.

"Hands, hands," Davis yells from the sideline. "Catch the ball with your hands."

Junkin runs the same pattern again. This time he reaches out and catches the football in his hands and brings it in.

"That's the way to do it," Davis yells.

"That's the way to do it."

ROOKIE linebacker Jamie Kimmel signs in, arrives during the afternoon practice, pulls on a uniform and quickly finds himself on the field running backward on pass defense in a non-contact drill.

"Does he belong out there?" Davis yells to nobody and to everybody.

They quickly check and tell him the medical staff has cleared Kimmel.

Davis is more subdued for much of the four hours his team spends in Thousand Oaks the next day with the Dallas Cowboys. The two teams run various drills against one another. They run their pass offenses against their pass defenses. They work on goal-line offenses/defenses. Then they hold a full-scale scrimmage.

Davis spends much of the scrimmage in the end zone, arms folded, studying players from a distance. Occasionally, he talks to Al LoCasale, his longtime executive assistant. But most of the time he stands by himself, arms folded, attention riveted on the play.

One of the gripes often heard from a suspect who is cut from the NFL is that the team "did not even know me."

No player can say this when he has been let go by the Raiders. Davis knows them all. By name. By first name. By their home town.

Every day it seems as if Davis has a few words for each of the 60-some players in camp.

Picture a politician working a room. That's Davis working the field before and after practice talking with his players. He is as into this as anyone can be.

DO YOU know Joe McCall?

He's a running back out of Pitt. Gained 115 yards against Ohio State in the Fiesta Bowl. The Raiders drafted him in the third round a year ago. He was on the active list for the first five games. They handed him the football once — it was a three-yard gain — against Houston. He was on the injured reserve list for the final 11 games.

Davis greets McCall after practice, "Glad to have you here, Joe."

A little thing?

Little things are big things to Al Davis. He's concerned about the building at the end of the field where the players' shower and gear is stored. It breaks the fence. At Santa Rosa, where they held their pre-season camp for years, the building was inside the fence.

AP Laserphoto

Al Davis
...Raider worrier

The arrangement in here makes it harder for youngsters who hang around to get a peek at the players in uniform. Davis is concerned.

This field is only temporary. A new one will be constructed next year. Davis will see to it that the building on the permanent field is inside the fence for the benefit of the youngsters.

A light is needed at the field for better security. Davis points this out.

OTHER teams live in college dorm rooms during preseason camp. Davis lodges his team in a hotel because he wants larger beds for his players, he wants them to have telephones and he wants them to be able to have room service.

Beyond the colors of the uniforms, most owners leave the details to others. Not this owner.

The man is intriguing. He also is different. Some will say he is strange.

There is a booth reserved for him in the coffee shop. A telephone has been put in for his use. Nobody, absolutely nobody, other than Davis will use this booth during the six weeks the Raiders are here.

The hotel put in a small patio outside his suite. A 6-foot fence surrounds it to ensure his privacy for the six weeks he is in Oxnard.

After practice, Davis works on weights. Then he goes out on the field and runs sprints. None of that nice and easy jogging for 55-year-old Al Davis. He goes out on his football field and runs a half dozen or so 100-yard sprints.

He spends his summer evenings studying football films.

They threw the mold away when they made this man.

About those options

Midland and Midland Lee option holders have until Aug.9 to renew their seats for the coming football season and at the same time those not holding options are eligible to pick up tickets from the available list, those tickets not under option.

With Odessa Permian coming to Midland for games against both the Rebels and Bulldogs and San Angelo opening the District 4-5A season here against Lee...well, that means about everything in sight, save the student section, will be gobbled up before the season.

As a result, Gil Bartosh, athletic director for Midland Schools, undoubtedly will eliminate a lot of the usual ticket problems before the first kick off. If all the tickets are gone, it's not easy to have problems.

Bartosh predictably will be hailed for his foresightedness in letting fans buy season tickets from the available list, but for some of us, Gil is simply a spoil spoort.

THE most exciting day of the season last year was when Lee and Permian played during the regular season. Not the game...the ticket riots before the game.

You remember the long predawn lines at the Memorial Stadium when the advance ticket sale began and what happened when the windows opened and those patient souls discovered that not many tickets were left after the Booster Club meeting the night before.

FOR years that's the way ticket sales had been handled. On Tuesday night, tickets for out-of-town games were made available at the Booster Club and then, Wednesday, they were placed on sale at the ticket office.

There had been some long lines and short tempers over having to get up before sunrise to stand in line, but there were always tickets when you got to the window.

Only last year, Permian-Lee, with both highly-ranked in the state, assumed Texas-Oklahoma stature. People were trading Dallas Cowboy tickets for Lee-Permian tickets and throwing in cash bonuses to sweeten the pot.

The Stadium athletic offices were under seige. You couldn't get a phone call through and for those who did, Bartosh tried to explain, but no one would listen. It was the Merchant of Venice all over again.

All this to sit in a combination electrical storm, hurricane, tornado to watch a game.

STEPS were taken to remedy the situation and make sure everybody got a fair shot at the tickets. However, for some of us there was always the prospect that something might go wrong and the angry "mobs," that's what they looked like from the ticket windows, would rise again in righteous indignation.

Since the teams were playing in 12,000-seat Memorial Stadium instead of 22,000-seat Ratliff, for some of us the excitement was already beginning to mount.

One writer was looking forward to finally getting in his licks for the removal of the end zone stands during the stadium face-lifting in the spring of 1984. They were old and splintery and had seen their best days as the stands at Lackey Field in the 1940s before Memorial Stadium was opened in 1948, but they were tradition.

People spend a year's savings going to Europe and admiring such tradition-reeking relics and here we go and just do away with them without a second thought.

But that was before Gil came up with "available" list. Now, if someone doesn't have a ticket for the Permian game, they has only themselves to blame. Now the actual game will have to provide all the excitement...unless the weatherman displays some perverse ingenuity again.

Gamblers' sale nips waiver deadline

NEW YORK (AP) — The Houston Gamblers of the United States Football League were sold Friday to a five-man group headed by New York real estate developer Steve Ross, just beating a deadline that would have turned Jim Kelly and his teammates into free agents,

"The deal is done," USFL Commissioner Harry Usher said upon returning to his office from a meeting with the principals. "The lawyers are finalizing the language in the contract. ... We are delighted to welcome Stephen Ross and his partners to the USFL."

Ross, 45, heads a group identified in a release issued under his name as Peter Friedman, David Solomon, Fred DeMattis and Warren Schwerin, also real estate developers.

No details of the sale were available.

Ross could keep the team in Houston, where it was ninth in attendance in the 14-team league with an average crowd of 19,120; he could move it to New York or elsewhere, or he could merge the franchise with the Generals.

He said the options were being considered and that "it would be very difficult to achieve" a merger. Donald Trump, owner of the Generals, called the prospect of a merger "intriguing."

JERRY ARGOVITZ, formerly a player agent, was a one-third owner of the Gamblers, an expansion franchise in 1984, the USFL's second season. Jay Roulier and Alvin Lubetkin were the other one-third owners and Lubetkin had opposed the sale.

The league provided $1.5 million to keep the team in business in 1985, when the Gamblers posted a 10-8 record, then lost 22-20 to Birmingham in first round of the playoffs.

When the players failed to receive their last paychecks, an arbitrator ruled that they would be waived at 5 p.m. Friday if they were not paid. "Mr. Ross will pay the salaries before the deadline," Argovitz told the New York Daily News.

When the USFL's third and final spring-summer season ended a month ago, four teams had failed to meet at least one of their payrolls — Tampa Bay, Houston, Portland and San Antonio.

EARLIER THIS week, the 46 players on the San Antonio Gunslingers' roster were placed on waivers an hour before their deadline. Portland and Tampa Bay have been given longer to meet their payrolls.

Great Britain welcomes opening of non-political, off-beat Games

LONDON (AP) — The World Games, the biggest sports festival held in Britain since the 1948 summer Olympic Games, officially opened Friday with a 40-minute, low-key ceremony that deliberately avoided any displays of politics or nationalism.

In sharp contrast to the Olympics, there was no traditional show of color and elaborate pageantry and no nation-by-nation parade of contestants, who number some 1,400 from 48 countries.

Instead, the athletes sat in the stands at the half-filled Wembley conference center as the President of the games, Dr. Un Yong Kim of South Korea, opened the proceedings with a brief speech.

"It is a proud moment to savor the realization of a dream — an international event for the many sports that cannot currently take part in the Olympic games," said Kim who is also vice-chairman of the 1986 Seoul Olympic committee.

IN KEEPING with the organizers' efforts to make the games non-political, no national flags were on view. In their place, the modern auditorium was draped with circular banners bearing the names of each of the 23 non-Olympic sports.

In the background hung a huge flag proclaiming the theme of the games, which will also be inscribed on the gold, silver and bronze medals awarded during the 10-day festival.

"Sport is a Universal Language. The World is one Family. All Mankind are Brothers and Sisters," it said.

The patron and Honorary Chairman of the World Games, Ryoichi Sasakawa, then took the stage. His address, delivered in Japanese and translated into English, spoke of the relationship between sports and world peace.

"Sports have always been an important area in my efforts to inspire world peace," said the black-robed, 86-year-old Sasakawa. "I hope the World Games will help contribute happiness, health and peace to as many as possible."

After a short film introduction, a drum roll heralded the start of the games and the athletes were presented by their individual sport.

Waterskiers dragged out their boards and tenpin bowlers cradled huge balls under their arms as they took their places at the indoor arena.

THE GAMES, which run through Aug. 4 and are spread over eight different venues in London, also include trampolining, softball, tug-of-war, life saving, karate and racquetball.

Sullivan front-runner in Michigan 500

BROOKLYN, Mich. (AP) — Danny Sullivan led the way Friday in practice for the postponed Michigan 500 Indy-car race.

The winner of the Indianapolis 500 in May drove his March racer to an unofficial fast lap of 211.846 mph around the 2-mile, high-banked oval at Michigan International Speedway during two hours of practice.

The race, which was scheduled to be run last Sunday, was postponed until this Sunday after officials decided not to take a chance on the safety of newly developed radial tires.

The tires came into question on Saturday in practice when two drivers, Roberto Guerrero and Bobby Rahal, spun within 30 minutes of each other after problems with their right-front tires.

Five-run explosion sparks 9-8 Rangers' win

Associated Press

ARLINGTON — Wayne Tolleson's RBI single capped a five-run rally in the eighth inning Friday that lifted the Texas Rangers over the New York Yankees 9-8.

The Rangers loaded the bases in the eighth as Oddibe McDowell walked and Toby Harrah and Pete O'Brien singled, chasing Ron Guidry, who has won 12 straight decisions.

Reliever Dave Righetti, 7-7, threw a wild pitch on his first delivery, allowing McDowell to score, and Harrah came home on Gary Ward's sacrifice fly. Cliff Johnson delivered a run-scoring single and pinch-runner Curtis Wilkerson went all the way to third on another wild pitch.

Bill Stein's pinch-single drove in Wilkerson, George Wright walked and Tolleson followed with his single that drove in pinch-runner Duane Walker.

Dickie Noles, 4-6, got the victory. Dave Schmidt pitched the final inning to nab his third save.

Don Mattingly's 12th homer in the eighth had given the Yankees an 8-3 lead.

New York Yankees' third baseman Andre Robertson bobbles a grounder hit by Texas' George Wright Friday in American League action in Arlington.

AL Roundup

New York did most of its damage by batting around in a four-run fifth inning. Rickey Henderson led off with a double and later scored on a wild pitch. Ken Griffey, Randolph and Ron Hassey added RBI singles.

Don Baylor opened the New York soring in the fourth with a double that scored Dave Winfield, who had walked. Randolph singled to left, scoring Baylor, and Andre Robertson added an RBI single.

Harrah hit a two-run homer in the fifth. The Rangers also got RBI singles in the first from Ward and from Tolleson in the second.

Blue Jays 8, Angels 3

TORONTO — Willie Upshaw hit a two-run homer in the fourth inning and pinch-hitter Jeff Burroughs blooped a two-run triple in the seventh as Toronto won its sixth straight game with a victory over California.

The Blue Jays held a 4-3 lead in the seventh when Damaso Garcia drew a walk from reliever Pat Clements and Lloyd Moseby beat out a bunt single. Moseby appeared to pull a hamstring on his hit and was replaced by pinch-runner Lou Thornton after pinch-hitter Garth Iorg had advanced the runners with a sacrifice against Stewart Cliburn.

Red Sox 6, Mariners 3

BOSTON — Marty Barrett hit a wind-blown, three-run homer and Mike Easler also homered as Boston charged to its sixth consecutive victory with a win over over Seattle.

Boston's Wade Boggs struck out twice, walked and flied deep to left, ending his 28-game hitting streak, the longest in the major leagues since 1980.

Al Nipper, 7-6, pitched 7 2-3 innings for the victory. He left after Al Cowens' two-run single, and Bob Stanley got the final four outs for his 10th save.

Twins 6, Tigers 5

MINNEAPOLIS — Kirby Puckett and Tim Teufel drove in two runs apiece and Detroit had the apparent tying run nullified in the eighth inning because of a controversial time out call as Minnesota held off the Tigers.

The Tigers trailed 6-3 entering the eighth, but RBI singles by Barbaro Garbey and Darrell Evans pulled Detroit within a run. Then, with runners on first and third and two outs, catcher Mark Salas tried to pick off Evans at first.

Evans dove safely back to the base and landed on top of first baseman Kent Hrbek as Garbey broke home and crossed the plate. But first base umpire Ken Kaiser returned Garbey to third, saying he had called time out when he thought Hrbek was hurt on the play.

Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson announced he was playing the game under protest, claiming Garbey had started for the plate before Kaiser called time. Bergman struck out to end the inning.

White Sox 9, Orioles 8

CHICAGO — Carlton Fisk hit a two-run triple in the bottom of the ninth inning, rallying Chicago over Baltimore.

Harold Baines started the rally with a one-out double off reliever Sammy Stewart and Greg Walker greeted Don Aase, 5-5, with a single, sending Baines to third.

Fisk then lined a 2-2 pitch over center fielder Fred Lynn's head for his game-winning triple.

Juan Agosto, 2-1, the third Chicago pitcher, pitched five scoreless innings of relief, allowing only one hit.

The White Sox trailed 7-2 after the Orioles scored four runs in the third inning. Eddie Murray led off the uprising with his 17th homer, and Lynn and Mike Young followed with singles, chasing starter Bill Long, 0-1. Floyd Rayford singled home both runners and Alan Wiggins' single drove home Rayford.

A's 7, Brewers 3

MILWAUKEE — Tommy John, in his debut with Oakland, pitched six strong innings for the victory and Dwayne Murphy and Mike Davis homered to lead the A's past Milwaukee.

John, 3-4, released by the California Angels in June, gave up one run on four hits. The only run he allowed came in the second inning on an RBI grounder by Mark Brouhard. John walked none and struck out two.

Keith Atherton worked the last three innings for his third save.

The A's scored three runs in the third to take a 3-1 lead against Ray Burris, 5-8. Rob Picciolo led off with a double and scored on a one-out single by Murphy, who had three hits. Dave Kingman added an RBI single and Dusty Baker hit a sacrifice fly later in the inning.

Davis' 18th homer in the sixth and Murphy's homer in the seventh made it 5-1.

Milwaukee added a run in the seventh on Robin Yount's RBI groundout, and Paul Molitor doubled home a run in the ninth. Molitor finished with three hits.

The A's scored twice in the eighth on consecutive doubles by Baker and Davis and a sacrifice fly by Donnie Hill.

Royals 7, Indians 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Steve Balboni, Darryl Motley, Frank White and Hal McRae hammered home runs to carry Kansas City victory over Cleveland.

McRae also doubled and singled as the Royals, built more for speed than muscle, rang up their fourth straight victory with an uncharacteristic display of power.

Danny Jackson raised his mark to 9-6, giving up one run on seven hits over seven innings.

Ramon Romero, making his first start since being called up from the minors on July 4, lost his first major-league decision. Romero got into immediate trouble when he hit Lonnie Smith with a pitch in the first. Smith stole second, went to third on a fly ball and scored on McRae's single.

The Indians, solidly in last place in the American League East, tied it in the second when Chris Bando singled home Tony Bernazard, who had walked and moved up on Joe Carter's single.

Smith led off the third with a single, again stole second, took third on a grounder and scored on Romero's wild pitch. A moment later, White hit his 15th home run and third in two games to put Kansas City on top 3-1.

Motley hit his 10th home run leading off the sixth, bringing on reliever Jeff Barkley, whose second pitch was blasted by Balboni over the left-field fence. Balboni's 17th home run and second in two games gave the Royals a 5-1 lead.

Small takes JuCo offer

From Staff Reports

Former Midland Lee baseball standout Mike Small has accepted a baseball scholarship to attend Pratt Junior College in Pratt, Kan., next season.

Small, who pitched and played in the outfield for Lee coach Ernie Johnson, will play for coach B.D. Parker at Pratt JC. He is expected to continue pitching and play the outfield.

Small bats left and throws right and hit .339 with 10 RBI for the Rebel team that finished second in District 4-5A to Abilene Cooper, and bowed out of the bi-district playoffs to Lubbock Monterey. Small also compiled a 6-2 record with a 2.97 earned run average on the mound.

Dodger long balls swamp Cubs; Astros rained out

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Mike Marshall hit a grand-slam homer and Pedro Guerrero and Greg Brock also homered to lead the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 10-0 rout of the Chicago Cubs behind the seven-hit pitching of Jerry Reuss.

Guerrero, who also doubled and walked twice, extended his string for reaching base to 14 straight, a Dodger club record. The major league record is 16, set by Ted Williams in 1957.

Ruess, 8-6, walked two and struck out none in pitching his second shutout of the season and his third complete game. The Los Angeles left hander twice left runners at third base and retired the Cubs in order only in the third inning.

Guerrero slugged a two-run homer in the third inning, his 23rd of the season. Brock, who was also on base four times with a homer and three walkks, hit a three-run homer in the fifth, his 16th round-tripper and fourth three-run homer of the year.

Marshall added his third career grand slam in the sixth, his 11th of the year.

The victory was the fourth straight for Los Angeles and its 13th triumph in the last 16 outings.

Dick Ruthven, 4-7, was the loser, his 15th in defeat 20 career decisions against Los Angeles.

The 3-4-5 hitters in the Dodger lineup — Ken Landreaux, Guerrero and Brock — reached base 12 out of 13 appearances.

Catcher Mike Scioscia, who had four hits, knocked in the Dodgers' 10th run with a single in the eighth. Landreaux had three of the 15 hits Los Angeles collected off four Chicago pitchers.

NL Roundup

Reds 7, Expos 6

MONTREAL — Nick Esasky led off the 11th inning with a home run to lift Cincinnati to a victory over Montreal.

Esasky drilled the first pitch from Jeff Reardon, 2-4, over the left field wall for his eighth homer of the season.

Bob Buchanan, 1-0, the fourth Cincinnati pitcher, worked the final two innnings to earn the victory.

The Expos trailed 6-1 going into the eighth inning, but they scored five runs to tie the game.

Tim Wallach capped the rally with a run-scoring single after Terry Francona stroked a two-run, pinch-hit double off Ted Power and Hubie Brooks hit a two-run single off reliever John Franco.

Ron Oester had five hits and drove in two runs and Dave Parker added a pair of RBI with two singles for the Reds, who had 15 hits and also benefitted from four Montreal errors.

Oester came close to another RBI, but his second-inning drive to the right-center field wall was ruled as an error by center fielder Herm Winningham.

Tony Perez, who walked, scored on the play as Winningham and right fielder Andre Dawson failed to make the catch.

Cincinnati's second run came in the third inning on a double by Gary Redus and Parker's RBI single.

Oester's double off Randy St. Claire in the sixth scored Perez with the third Cincinnati run and Oester scored later in the inning when Dave Concepcion drew a bases-loaded walk.

Montreal made it 4-1 in the sixth on Vance Law's RBI single, but Oester singled in a run in the seventh and Parker had another in the eighth.

Braves 6, Phillies 4

PHILADELPHIA — Hot-hitting Bob Horner belted a two-run homer and added two RBI singles to lead Atlanta over Philadelphia, the Braves' 10th straight victory over the Phillies this season.

In Horner's last 11 games, he has 22 hits in 44 at bats, including six homers and 19 RBI.

Rick Mahler, 15-8, got the victory despite allowing 10 hits and four runs in seven innings. Bruce Sutter pitched the final 1 2-3 innings for his 17th save.

Sal Butera of Montreal puts the tag on Gary Redus of the Reds in National League action

New son is all would-be Mariner slugger has going for him

SEATTLE (AP) — Veteran slugger Ken Phelps of the Seattle Mariners keeps a picture of his new baby boy, his first child, hanging proudly over his locker in the Kingdome.

The photo of little Nathan, a 7½-pounder who was born on June 27, is more than just an ego boost for Phelps. It's been good for his mental health, he points out.

"I think it helps you get your priorities in order," he said philosophically. "You know you can get real selfish when you're playing baseball."

Phelps will turn 31 on Aug. 6. If he's going to make it big in the major leagues, time is running out.

He belted 24 home runs in just 290 at-bats last season.

He figured to be an important part of the Mariners' season. But in a cruel twist of fate this year, he has barely played.

"It hasn't been real easy," he said. "I wish I was playing more but, unforuntately, I'm not. So I've tried to maintain somewhat of a positive attitude, work hard and just hang in there. But it's been frustrating."

THERE ARE those who feel Manager Chuck Cottier should find some way to get the 6-foot-1, 204-pounder — a well-muscled, left-handed hitter — in the lineup, particularly against right-handed pitchers.

But Cottier has left Gorman Thomas in the lineup at designated hitter and Alvin Davis at first base, positions that Phelps played last season.

Phelps realizes there's not a lot he can do about his situation. All he can do is sit and wait. And not complain too loudly.

"I've told the front office about how I feel," he said. "They've told me to be patient. They've told me to give it my best shot when I get an opportunity to play."

When Phelps has had the opportunity to play, there's been even more frustration. At mid-week, he was hitting .186 with seven home runs in 86 at-bats.

As a pinch hitter, he was a dismal 1-for-14, including 0-for-9 with men in scoring position.

Phelps, a Seattle native who now makes his off-season home in Tempe, Ariz., is in his 10th professional baseball season. The Mariners are his third major league organization — he also has been with Kansas City and Montreal. The Royals traded him to the Expos, who in turn sold him to the Mariners in March of 1983.

BEFORE THE season, he signed a one-year contract with the Mariners for a base salary of $180,000. There also was $55,000 in bonuses, which he won't collect.

"I'm not worried about the money right now," he insisted. "What I'm worried about is being given the 500 to 600 at-bats in a season. That's really what I'd love to do. I'd love to have a full season and see what I could compile in the way of statistics."

His minor league record indicates those statistics would be enormous — if he had the same success in the big leagues.

In 1982, when he was the Triple A American Association's MVP in Wichita, he belted 46 homers and drove in 141 runs.

How many home runs could Phelps hit in the big leagues if he was given a chance to play full time?

"I don't know," he replied with a frown. "How can I answer that? I've never been given a chance to have 600 at-bats. But I know I'd hit a lot of home runs. I always have and I don't know why I should stop now."

Phelps' name has been mentioned constantly this season in possible trades involving the Mariners.

"I don't know if a trade is still possible," he said. "It seems to me that when you hear about rumors they never come to be. But when you don't hear about something, that's when you get traded.

"Anything could possibly happen. I look at that as a positive thing because somebody wants you and you might get an opportunity to play and that's all anyone could ever want."

Cards edge Padres

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Ozzie Smith singled in Jack Clark with two outs in the 12th inning to help Joaquin Andjuar to his 17th victory, a 2-1 triumph over the San Diego Padres Friday night.

The victory was the sixth in a row for the streaking Cardinals while it was the sixth consecutive loss for the Padres. First-place St. Louis now leads New York by four games in the East Division, while San Diego has fallen 4½ games off the pace of Los Angeles in the West.

Clark led off the 12th inning with a single off reliever Tim Stoddard, 1-5, was sacrificed to second by Tito Landrum and advanced to third on a groundout before Smith came through with his second game-winning hit of the year.

Andujar, 17-4, pitched 11 innings, gave up seven hits, walked six and struck out one, with Ken Dayley working the final inning for his seventh save.

Vince Coleman led off the game with a bunt single to third off Padres starter Dave Dravecky, who did not allow a ball to be hit out of the infield until Tom Herr's single in the seventh. In the first, Coleman stole his 69th base, was sacrificed to third and scored on Clark's groundout to give St. Louis a 1-0 lead.

The Padres tied the game in the fifth when Garry Templeton led off with a doublem, was sacrificed to third by Dravecky and scored on Tim Flannery's sacrifice fly.

Dravecky worked nine innings, allowing only four hits, walking three and striking out six.

Eugene Lockhart...decides against holdout.

Too unbelievable for movie plot

Kittle's story too strange to be true

BY MALCOLM MORAN
New York Times News Service

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Sunlight was sinking behind the first-base stands at War Memorial Stadium, low enough at the start of the game between the Omaha Royals and the Buffalo Bisons that the batter stood in shadows while the pitcher stood in the light. Dave Cone, a hard-throwing right-hander for the Royals, threw an inside fastball to Ron Kittle of the Bisons, a pitch Kittle never saw. He just leaned back, and the ball buzzed under his elbow.

"I thought, 'That's all I need. Get hit in the head,' " Kittle said.

He hoped to return to the Chicago White Sox Thursday, less than a week after he was sent here for the rehabilitation of shoulder miseries that have existed since April. Kittle's sense of perspective tells him that he will start a new part of the season, that a batting average of .195, based on just 149 times at bat, can rise dramatically with a few swings.

But his memory provides the reminder that a fastball in the head is about the only circumstance he has not discovered during this dismal year.

HIS story had once been an unacceptable movie plot, because there was too little for anyone to believe. Spinal-fusion surgery had ended his baseball career. He returned to Gary, Ind., to become an iron and steel worker until the White Sox rediscovered him, gave him a tryout, and watched him become the American League rookie of the year in 1983. He hit 67 home runs in his first two full major league seasons to match Frank Robinson for the sixth-highest total for the first two years.

This season, at the age of 27, Kittle has had to confront the expectation to play when his body says it cannot. He ran into the left-field wall at Comiskey Park chasing a fly ball April 20, and several times since he has wondered how much damage was being done. He has known the confusion of being able to hit home runs in batting practice, and soon after being unable to comb his hair.

"I was getting depressed," he said. "I didn't want to go to the ball yard. I couldn't carry a gallon of milk from the grocery store."

The report from the White Sox continues to be that Kittle suffers from a sore shoulder. He feels the golf ball-size lump that sat on his right shoulder blade not long ago provided evidence of something more severe. "If that's an inflamed shoulder," he said, "I'd hate to see a broken shoulder."

AND THEN came the news, last month, when the team was in Seattle. The first child for Ron and Laurie Kittle, a girl, had died at birth. That night, he flew home. "It was the most depressing thing I ever did in my life," he said. "It was a hard experience to explain. I love kids. I'd trade every penny I've made for a baby."

Suddenly a painful shoulder and the opinions of management did not seem very important anymore.

Roland Hemond, the general manager, said Kittle had not been accused of being unwilling to play. "I don't know if they were questioning me or not," Kittle said. "I didn't care anymore. I have a lot of talent. I can hit a ball as hard or harder than anyone in baseball."

There was the day he was needed to play left field, and told Tony LaRussa, the manager, he could not. "I said, 'I can't throw,' " Kittle said. "I just told him plain as that."

The response, he said, was that he could make shorter throws to a cutoff man.

"If I get the ball hit to me," he said, "I'm going to try to throw somebody out, and it's going to hurt. He's not inside my body. He didn't have the pain. Being a professional athlete, you're going to have aches and pains. But it was just getting to the point where I wasn't concentrating on baseball. Believe me, I think I know better.

"Why should I go out at 50 percent, and have somebody steal bases on me, and have them say, 'Kittle can't throw'? There were probably 50 percent of the fans could throw the ball farther than I could. That's when I said I've got to worry about nobody else but me."

He was placed on the disabled list and sent here, a trip that seems almost like a vacation. Kittle said he had had more fun this week than he had all season. He was batting .438 for the Bisons going into the game Wednesday night, but that was not important. He said his shoulder felt as good as it had since April.

KITTLE teased small children until they ran in fright, turned around, and came back giggling for more. He kibitzed as he collected baseballs during batting practice and tossed them in the direction of the shopping basket near the mound. He lingered in the clubhouse with teammates from past minor league teams who have been less fortunate.

He remembered how Jose Castro of the Bisons had once been the victim of his success. Kittle hit 50 home runs at Edmonton in 1982. Castro batted behind Kittle, often when home runs had left pitchers in a less than pleasant frame of mind. "His whole body was black and blue," Kittle said.

Soon he will be home again, close to his one-acre pond stocked with fish in his backyard, ready to start his season again. "I'm kind of nervous to go back up there," he said. "Not really nervous. Excited."

He has always remembered that the White Sox gave him that chance, took him out of the mills, made him a hometown hero, and paid him more money than he ever dreamed he'd make. Now he will always remember that there are more important things.

Lockhart to play now, worry about pay later

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Eugene Lockhart has decided to play now and worry about the pay later.

The Dallas Cowboys' starting linebacker had threatened to hold out, but changed his mind and arrived at training camp Thursday.

Lockhart wanted some $40,000 more than the $110,000 the Cowboys were offering him in a 3-year package that would sharly escalate next year.

Lockhart will go ahead and play for $79,000 and gamble he has a great season so he can bargain from a stronger position in his option year next season.

He who took over the starting middle linebacker job last year after Bob Breunig was injured.

"Negotiations are at a standstill, but I came anyway because I didn't want to be a distraction," Lockhart said.

He would have been fined $1,000 per day if he had not reported by Thursday.

Lockhart said he was unhappy with his contract, but added "I'm obligated to be here. I'm still under contract even though it's the low end of the totem pole."

He did consider holding out, he said.

"I thought about it, but I'm just not that kind of person," he said. "I wanted to be here with the rest of the guys. I didn't want to be a problem. Here I am, live and in color."

Lockhart got some advice from Coach Tom Landry that helped him with his decision.

"Coach (Tom) Landry said if I establish myself this year, then the money will be there next year," Lockhart said. "I respect the Cowboys' organization and I believe things can be worked out."

Lockhart added, "I'd be lying if I said the contract situation wasn't bothering me, but I'll try to forget about it and play football."

Lockhart is a second-year veteran from the University of Houston.

Floyd survives 5-hour rain, unknowns to keep lead

PGA

CROMWELL, Conn. (AP) — Altogether, Steve Pate, David Lundstrom and Jodie Mudd haven't earned as much money on the PGA tour as Ray Floyd has on some of his more glorious days.

But, nonetheless, the unknown threesome was hounding the 23-year veteran for the lead Friday when play was suspended midway through the second round of the $600,000 Greater Hartford Open.

Pate was closest to Floyd who shot a 68 after an opening-round 64 to move to 10 under par. He shot a 65 to close to within a stroke.

But it was Lundstrom, a struggling 38-year-old, who played the best golf of anybody when play resumed after a five-hour, 10-minute rain delay at the par-71, 6,800-yard Tournament Players Club of Connecticut course.

A hole-in-one on the par-3, 172-yard 16th hole helped him tie the course-record 63 set by Peter Jacobsen in 1984, the first year the tournament was played at the remodeled TPC course.

LUNDSTROM, WHOSE previous best finish was a tie for 17th place at the Doral-Eastern Open, birdied the first three holes and later added four more birdies to his hole-in-one eagle and one bogey. Entering 1985, his career earnings were $4,472 in three previous seasons on the tour.

The round left him tied with Mudd, another PGA journeyman, for third place, three strokes behind Floyd.

"It's just one of those things — I just putted well," said Lundstrom, a Galesburg, Ill., native now living in Houston. "All the frustrating days you have playing golf, this was the reward. I just hope I can keep it up."

A fierce morning rain storm with gusting winds stalled play from 8:30 a.m. EDT until 1:40 p.m. After play resumed, just half the field was able to complete the second round.

ONLY THE completion of the second round was rescheduled for today. After the midway cut, the remaining players will play 36 holes on Sunday.

Floyd said he was exhausted and annoyed at the manner in which the delay was handled. He said sitting out for that long a period hurt his concentration.

"I've been out here for 23 years and I've never seen anything like it," said Floyd, twice the GHO's runner-up and the leading money winner in this year's field.

"It was difficult and it was trying to do what we did today without getting any information about what was going on," he said.

Floyd had just teed off at 8:30 when play was halted, and he didn't finish his round until 6 p.m.

"I'm pleased to get in with the score I did, and I'm pleased to get in before dark," he said.

"It was difficult and it was trying to do what we did without getting any information about what was going on."

PATE SHOT eight birdies, including a 40-foot chip-in on the 343-yard seventh hole, and two bogies to move into contention.

"We did get here five hours too early," Pate said. "I was a little annoyed at having to go back out there but I'm glad I did."

Mudd said he didn't do anything different than usual in shooting eight birdies and two bogies.

"I just line the putts up and they started going in," he said. "Whether or not it will hold up, I have no idea. Maybe I'll start hitting it better and the putts will still keep going in."

Among the contenders who didn't finish before it got too dark to play were Greg Norman at 5-under for the tournament through five holes and Victor Regalado at 6-under through eight holes.

Connors, Mayer advance in KIVA

BEAVER CREEK, Colo. (AP) — Jimmy Connors easily advanced to the second round of the $100,000 Kiva Tennis Classic Friday by defeating doubles ace Peter Fleming, 6-1, 6-2.

Third-seeded Kevin Curren was upset by Gene Mayer, 7-6, 11-9, 6-3. That eliminated a possible rematch of the Curren-Connors finale in the 1985 Wimbledon Championships, which Curren won.

In other matches of the first day of play, top-seeded Mats Wilander beat a feisty first set by Tom Gullikson.

Becker can't boom, boom, goes baseline

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Wimbledon champion Boris Becker of West Germany, finding his serve wasn't working, became an effective baseline player to top No. 5 seed Miloslav Mecir of Czechoslovakia in straight sets Friday, reaching the men's semifinal of the $575,000 U.S. Open Clay Court Championship.

Becker, seeded third, extended his match winning streak to 16 with a 6-2, 7-5 verdict. He'll meet the winner of a night match between top-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia and No. 8 Martin Jaite of Argentina on Saturday.

Earlier, second-seeded Zina Garrison and No. 4 Andrea Temesvari of Hungary scored straight set victories to move into Saturday's women's title match. The winner in the rematch of the 1983 title match will earn $34,000.

Becker, who lost to Mecir earlier this year, took a 2-1 edge with the first break of the match. He then held serve with four consecutive points and later saved two break points to take a 4-2 advantage.

THE 17-year-old Becker, who lacked some of the aggressive style that made him the youngest men's Wimbledon champ in history, scored another break to go up 5-2 and served out to win the opening set.

"I thought I could play on the baseline. The last few weeks I've been playing serve and volley. It was a new game for me today," Becker said. "It adds a lot to the confidence to beat a player like Mecir on clay, especially since I lost to him."

In the second set each player held serve until Becker scored his third break of the day to take a 5-4 edge. Mecir then broke back to even the match and Becker answered the challenge with another break before winning the match with only his third service winner.

"Today I played a little too careful because I had respect for his passing shots," Becker said. "I don't think it was a good match. We made too many mistakes, both of us."

Temesvari, who won the title in 1983, ended the run of unseeded Kate Gompert, 6-3, 6-4. Garrison avenged an earlier loss to Argentine teen-ager Gabriella Sabatini, 6-4, 6-2.

GOMPERT SCORED the upset of the tournament Thursday in eliminating top-seeded Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria.

In men's play defending champion Andres Gomez, the No. 2 seed, and No. 4 Yannick Noah reached the semifinals.

Noah started the day by advancing past Diego Perez of Uruguay, 6-1, 6-3, in a match that was resumed in the second set after being halted by a thunderstorm Thursday night.

After a break, Noah returned to Stadium Court and eliminated No. 12 Hans Schwaier of West Germany, 6-3, 6-1.

Gomez had a short day, capitalizing on 27 unforced errors to defeat Jaro Navratil of Czechoslovakia 6-2, 6-3.

Geddes' course record 64 enough for three-way tie with Rinker, Little

LPGA

MONTREAL (AP) — Jane Geddes shot a 64, the best round of her professional career, and set a course record to grab a share of first place after two rounds at the $390,000 du Maurier Classic Ladies' Professional Golf Association tournament Friday.

Geddes's score — eight under par on the 6,033-yard Beaconsfield Golf Club course — broke the mark set by Ellsworth Vines in the 1946 Canadian Open.

"I played pretty much a flawless round today," said Geddes, a third-year pro from Summerville, S.C. "I played pretty much as well as I could play."

The round left her in a three-way tie for the lead with Laurie Rinker and Sally Little at 137, seven under par through 36 holes.

Rinker and Little both shot 69s.

Chris Johnson, who had shared the first-round lead with Rinker, Little and Alice Miller, was among five golfers at five-under par 139 in second place after firing a 70.

VAL SKINNER, who tied the course record with a 65, Alexandra Reinhardt, who shot a 67, Mary Beth Zimmerman and Marci Bozarth were also bracketted at 139.

Geddes's record round included seven birdies and an eagle and just one bogey. She said the record she broke wasn't the one she was aiming for.

"The round I was thinking about was the tour record of 62 (set by Mickey Wright in 1964)," said Geddes. "I was seven-under after 12 holes and that was the round I was looking at because I knew there were still a lot of birdie holes to come."

Geddes, Rinker and Little all finished their rounds before a rain storm washed the course. Play continued through the downpour, which abated after a little more than an hour.

Miller, who started the day four under par, slipped to a one-over-par 73 and was four shots back at 141.

Geddes, who finished in a second-place tie at the Boston Five Classic last week, said her good play had carried over to this week.

She said playing with Rinker didn't hurt, either.

"Laurie and I played together and we've both made a lot of birdies," she said. "When you're playing with someone who's making a lot of birdies, it makes you want to make birdies also."

LITTLE, A 14-year tour veteran, wasn't overly excited about her good start at Beaconsfield.

Czyz decisions Sutherland in 10 rounds

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Challenger Bobby Czyz took command early in the bout to score a unanimous 10-round decision over defending United States Boxing Association super middleweight champion Murray Sutherland in a title fight here Friday night.

Czyz knocked Sutherland to the ropes in the fourth and sixth rounds, but could not knock down the former champion.

Two judges scored it 9-1 for Czyz, while a third favored the Wanaque resident, 7-2-1.

Sutherland of Bay City, Mich. fell to 48-12-1 with 39 knockouts. Czyz improved to 28-1-0.

Czyz dominated the bout and forced Sutherland to back off in the later rounds.

Midland MUGS teams go to semifinals

From Staff Reports

BIG SPRING — In the United Girls Softball Association National Tournament going on this weekend in B at Anderson Fields, Tall City teams advanced to the semifinal round in two divisions.

The Midland Blue team in Division III advanced to the semifinal round with a 13-1 win over Abilene South. They will resume play today with an 8 a.m. game against the winner of the late game between Andrews and Odessa. The Division III girls are 13-15 years old.

The winner of that game moves into the 2 p.m. finals with the winner of the Abilene North and Abilene South game at 10:30 a.m.

In other action Friday, Midland Blue's Division I (7-9 years old) team also advanced to the semifinals with a 21-9 win over Mt. Pleasant. Midland Blue will face undefeated Odessa in a 10:30 a.m. game to face the winner of the Mt. Vernon-Abilene contest in the championship at 2 p.m.

Optimist Kuhn hopes pessimism unfounded this time

BY HAL BOCK
Associated Press

Four years ago, Bowie Kuhn was on the inside and optimistic that a baseball strike could be avoided.

Today, Bowie Kuhn is on the outside and pessimistic.

He was wrong before and he hopes he's wrong again.

"If I had to guess, I'd lean in the direction of a strike," Kuhn said from his law office, a short city block away from the baseball headquarters he once ruled.

Kuhn worries that, this time, the sport may not recover as readily as it did in 1981.

"If there is a long strike with heavy losses, watch out. It's got to affect the game financially.

"The issues are very tough, the players wanting $60 million for their pensions and the clubs wanting to put the brakes on the escalation of salaries. I see difficulties resolving the issues. I think they can be solved. If they asked me how, I'd have some views. If you asked me how, I'd duck."

WITH less than two weeks to go in the 1981 negotiations, Kuhn was more hopeful of the parties reaching a settlement than he is at the same stage this time around.

"I really felt there was flexibility then," he said. "I knew there was in the owners' position and I was getting vibes that there was some play in the players' position. Ultimately, there was. Unfortunately, it didn't surface until 50 days had gone by. By then, I was able to pull the owners closer and closer."

Kuhn often has been criticized for non-involvement in the last strike, during which he seemed to have adopted a hands-off position while leaving the owners' Player Relations Committee out front.

"I didn't have any problem having input into the PRC in 1981," he said. "They knew everything I had to say. I was effective in getting them to move in certain directions.

"My only regret is that I probably didn't P.R. it very well. I remember (Texas owner) Eddie Chiles telling me I ought to be out on the sidewalk, that the public ought to know what I was doing. I'm not certain you get things done going public. It would have been in my own interest. I didn't do that. I was wrong. I probably should have."

In retrospect, Kuhn said, his greatest mistake was made in 1980, when management and the union reached a contract agreement that did not include a provision for free-agent compensation. That single remaining issue eventually triggered the strike.

"The only thing I'd have done differently was a year before. We should not have signed anything until we had a complete agreement. It was a well-intentioned mistake in which both sides joined.

"I thought they could thrash it out. (Union chief) Marvin Miller was giving clear signals that something could be done on the compensation issue. Then he took the position that he would give nothing. That brought the strike on."

THE strike, he said, was one of the factors that cost him his job.

"I worried that we would not be able to come back from that strike," Kuhn said. "But we had our best September ever after the strike. The 1982 advance was gangbusters. We set attendance records in spring training. It was a miracle. It took a while to convince me, but it happened. The fans welcomed us back."

Can that happen again?

Kuhn frowned.

"I think," he said, "two bites of that apple may be one too many."

Bess Williamson rinses out some bait at her bait stand in Surfside, Texas. Ms. Williamson, who is blind, bought the bait stand instead of taking a vacation to Europe and has found it to be a challenge.

Blind woman loves her Surfside business

SURFSIDE, Texas (AP) — It's morning at Bess Williamson's Jetty Bait Stand and the water out front is blue-green and calm. A young, brawny fisherman listens to 58-year-old Ms. Williamson describe the stringers of flounder being caught off the jetties. He seems surprised since he hasn't caught any, and wants to know where the hot spot is.

"You know where that first crack in the jetties is?" she asks.

He nods. Both are educated in the intricacies of fishing tactics, the bits of information that change the granite walkway into a fisherman's map.

They discuss the one-that-got-away, how it bent the rod double and broke the line after a struggle. It was a real fighter, he recalls. Then the phone rings.

"Bess, it's for you," one of her employees yells.

She heads for the phone, navigating past tables and up a 2-inch step near the door. But she knocks into a chair someone left in the way.

Ms. Williamson can't see.

"My vision is like looking through a wall of gray," she said.

She lost her sight in one eye in 1976, the other in 1981. She wears tinted glasses to filter out glare that she does not perceive but still gives her a headache. Doctors say her light blue eyes will eventually turn white.

She had plans to go to Europe this summer and visit England, Ireland, Germany, and France.

But she bought the bait stand instead.

"I had to have something to do. I was just vegetating," she said.

She has spent the last two months selling live shrimp, beer, and hamburgers to fishermen, tourists, and her friends. It's a 24-hour job, she said, and a far cry from the four-month vacation she planned.

"I love every minute of it."

Besides, she's already seen all those places. She said when she learned that she was going to lose her sight, she began traveling.

And she still does. Last year she took a trip and took pictures and tape recorded "what they told me I saw," she said.

She spent three months in New Zealand and even considered moving there permanently.

"But it just wasn't home," she said. "Once you get the sand in your toes, you're stuck. So don't go barefoot around here."

Ms. Williamson does not consider herself handicapped. She marvels at the way her other senses have taken over to substitute for sight. "It's a gift from God," she said.

"I see with my ears, fingers, feet and heart."

Thousands of people wander through her business in the course of a weekend, but she recognizes a voice by the third time she hears it.

And she remembers names. While introductions pass unregistered through the brains of most people, she hears a name and snatches it up. She calls new acquaintances by name and when they respond, she knows she has a listener and they know they're being spoken to.

"And if they're not here, I'll just talk to them anyway," she said.

The first thing she does when she gets to work in the morning is ask how the water looks, who's catching what. She said fishermen and surfers from all over the state call her every day to check on conditions.

But most things she figures out on her own. Time of day is the angle of the sun on her face. The racket of sea gulls means fish are feeding, and when the sky is cloudy, mockingbirds don't sing.

With help from a woman from the Lighthouse for the Blind, she learned to get around with a sounding cane. Part of her final test was going to include walking on the jetties, but Ms. Williamson had done that so many times she thought it would be too easy.

So they went to a strange town where she had to walk several blocks on her own to a store to buy some potato chips and then back to the car. She said she ran into a tree first thing, got frustrated and started to cry.

A man asked if he could help her and she told him, "No sir. I've got to make this on my own." She said it felt like it took forever to make the trip.

Austin nears consumption level

AUSTIN (AP) — City officials kept a close eye on water use Friday as Austin drew near the consumption level that could trigger mandatory watering restrictions.

On Thursday, the hottest day of the summer with a high of 97 degrees, 151,089,000 gallons of water were used. After three days of usage of at least 150 million gallons, the city manager can impose water use restrictions.

The restrictions also can be ordered if water use tops 157 million gallons for one day.

A voluntary conservation program, which asks residents to water lawns only once every five days, has been in effect all summer. Last year, mandatory restrictions were in effect in July and August.

"I know people think their lawns are dead. They really won't lose their lawn, it might just not be as green as they like," said Faith George, the city's water conservation manager.

If the mandatory restrictions are ordered, lawn watering would be allowed once every five days, according to address. Violations can be punished by fines of $200.

A fly got caught in some cobwebs. The harder the fly fought to break free, the more resistance it got from the cobwebs. The small strands were woven to trap the victim. Finally, exhausted an unable to resist, it was caught and became the next meal for a spider.

Along The Trail

Novices tend to follow the path, especially when it is straight and narrow. But even with experienced riders there can be unexpected turns, and it's possible to get lost.

In life there are very few straight paths. It is extremely easy to come upon an unexpected turn, and to encounter doubt, confusion, even despair.

Horseback riding is not compulsory. But you do have a life — and you have to live it. The way is up to you. If we get lost, we can give up, but with the help of the Church, you will find a trustworthy guide which will renew your faith and clear the way to the path of eternal fulfillment.

Sunday Mark 6:7-11
Monday Luke 10:38-42
Tuesday Isaiah 55:6-9
Wednesday Amos 7:12-15
Thursday Deuteronomy 30:11-14
Friday I Samuel 9:9-13
Saturday I Samuel 10:5-8

Former runaway to speak at Bellview BaptistChurch

Iris Urrey Blue will be guest speaker Sunday at Bellview Baptist Church.

Ms. Blue left a Christian home in her early teens as a runaway. She became involved in drugs, prostitution and theft, and served seven years in the Goree Women's Prison. While working in nightclubs along the Houston waterfront, she became a Christian. She and her husband now serve as Southern Baptist Mission Corps Volunteers.

Ms. Blue will speak at the 10:50 a.m. and 6 p.m. services.

Bellview Baptist is located at 1710 N. Big Spring St. The Rev. G.A. Magee, pastor, invites the public. A nursery will be provided.

Sam Goodman to minister

Sam Goodman of the Happy Goodmans will be ministering at the Sunday morning service of First Assembly of God Church, 100 W. Wadley, at the 10:30 a.m. service.

The public is invited.

Students gather in capital

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of high school students, with advance estimates of up to 40,000 of them, are meeting in the nation's capital this weekend to tone up their spiritual energies for expanding faith in Christ.

Delegates to "Youth Congress '85" were registered from about every state and several foreign countries, with sessions July 26-30 at the Washington Convention Center.

It aims to train, motivate and equip high school students "to have a significant influence in their schools and communities through a positive Christ-centered lifestyle," says Dick Wynn, co-chairman of the event.

It is co-sponsored by Student Venture, the high school arm of Campus Crusade for Christ, which functions on college campuses, and by the Campus Life wing of Youth for Christ, working among high schoolers.

The congress concludes with a "celebration rally" next Tuesday on the Washington Mall, featuring numerous Christian performing artists, including singer Debby Boone.

Rabbi denounces decision

NEW YORK (AP) — The head of Reform Judaism says the demands of Israel's chief rabbis that recently-arrived Ethiopian Jews undergo a religious conversion rite if they wish to marry is "demeaning and degrading."

"Such a demand is offensive and humiliating to a Jewish community that has guarded its Jewish identity for some 2,000 years in the face of persecution, poverty and isolation," says Rabbi Alexander M. Schindler, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations.

South Africa 'tinderbox'

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — A South African woman says black people there are at a point where they have nothing to lose in their struggle against apartheid and are "willing to lay down their lives."

Edwina DeGrant, now a teacher in neighboring Zimbabwe, told a United Methodist missionary conference that "for decades there have been warnings that South Africa is a tinderbox waiting to explode — that time has come."

She said "South Africa is in a state of war" and only a total withdrawal of economic support of the South African government by other nations or a bloodly revolution can end apartheid.

Women's report released

WASHINGTON (AP) - A confidential report to the Vatican by the World Union of Catholic Women's Organizations says many women leave the church because it is insensitive to their desire to "participate fully."

The 1982 report, obtained and recently made public by National Catholic News Service, criticizes the scarcity of women in decision-making positions, refusal to permit girls to serve at the altar and to admit women as deacons.

The international women's body said it is "deeply concered with the fact that the church is losing a considerable number of women and will continue to do so unless more sensitivity is shown towards women's concerns and aspirations to participate fully in the life and mission of the church."

Man claims Christian 'CURE' for inmates

RELIGION

AUSTIN — Bill Robinson has on the drawing board a private Christian-oriented prison which he says would be cheaper to build and operate than units mananged by the Texas Department of Corrections. But his idea drew criticism at the annual convention of a statewide prison reform group.

Robinson, who is promoting such a private prison in Gregg County in East Texas through a non-profit group called Corrections Concepts, debated the issue at the 11th annual Citizens United for Rehabilitation of Errants convention, along with an advocate of private prisons for profit and an opponent of private inmate facilities.

"To simply build the prison at a lower cost is not an innovative answer," said Fernando Tafoya, of San Francisco, who is with National Moratorium on Prison Construction. He said private prisons — whether run for profit or not — tend to skimp in such important areas as employee training and job benefits.

Former Texas Secretary of State John Fainter, an Austin attorney representing a group seeking to build prisons for profit, said his group "does not have the answer to the problems we have in our penal system today," but added money saved in constructing private prisons can be devoted to other resources aimed at helping inmates.

"It doesn't have to be put into bricks and mortar," said Fainter. "Sure, we're trying to make money out of it. Profit is not a dirty word."

"As Christians, we have a built-in care factor," said Robinson, who served seven years in prisons outside of Texas for writing hot checks. "Our God and our Bible tell us to care for the sick." That practice should be carried over to the prison system, he said, adding his philosophy is to "administer for the prisoner as if you were imprisoned with him."

But Tafoya, who called the concept of prisons for profit most controversial, compared building private prisons to "putting old wine in new bottles."

Tafoya said private prisons often save money because "they don't have to provide the same kinds of (employee) pensions and employee benefits," and have fewer recreational facilities for inmates. "A lot of times they can cut job training as well," he said.

"It's true the business sector is much more innovative (than government), but in terms of criminal justice, businesses are involved in duplicating the same thing," Tafoya said. "It's the same thing being developed again, but at a cheaper price — business is not challenging its potential."

Robinson predicted private prisons will become more commonplace just as private hospitals have in the last half century. "About 50 years ago, the ratio of public to private hospitals was 12-to-1," he said. "Today,' it's 55-to-1 the other way."

Christian and non-profit organizations were responsible for starting private hospitals and were able to pay for about 70 percent of the non-paying patient population, said Robinson, who blamed profit-oriented hospitals for "eroding the foundation of non-profit entities."

In terms of prisons, Robinson said the Kilgore-based Corrections Concepts can operate a facility for less tha $28 a day per inmate. "The national average is $43 and under TDC's new budget it's almost $39," he added.

"If there is Biblical authority for Baylor University and Baylor Hospital, why not Baylor Prison?" Robinson asked jokingly.

Catholic bishops take hard line agains Masons

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

In a shift from past conciliatory gestures, a committee of U.S. Roman Catholic bishops has taken a hardened line against Freemasonry, calling it "incompatible with Christian faith and practice."

Similar admonitions have come lately from the Vatican. Some European Protestants also sounded warnings.

The British Methodist Conference this month censured the fraternal order as a threat to Christianity, and the issue is simmering among British Anglicans and Baptists and Lutherans of Norway and Sweden.

The surge of church objections to Masonic membership, a target of Vatican condemnations over the centuries, contrasted with the earlier friendly U.S. Catholic overtures toward Masonry.

Some bishops, in the decade through 1981, appeared as honored guests at Masonic functions, deploring past antagonisms, and official Catholic statements indicated Catholics could be Masons if their lodges weren't anti-church.

Also, Catholicism's new code of canon law, issued in 1983, ommitted a provision of the old 1917 code excommunicating Catholics who join Masonic orders.

However, a recent confidential report by the U.S. bishops' pastoral committee, headed by Cardinal Bernard Law of Boston, said Masonic principles "embody a naturalistic religion" contrary to Christianity.

"Those who knowingly embrace such principles are committing serious sin," says the report, sent to U.S. bishops in April.

However, it said because of past confusion about the matter, there are "serious problems" for Catholics who joined Masonic lodges in good faith, and the situation should be approached with "great tact."

Masonic officials called the condemnation groundless.

"We don't understand it," said Stanley F. Maxwell of Lexington, Mass., commander of the Supreme Council of the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite of Free-Masonry. "Catholics and Masons have got along for centuries."

He said Masonic lodges include many Catholics as well as Protestants, and some lodges have black and Jewish members "if they pass the ballot" of approval. He said Masonic and Catholic organizations still hold joint social affairs.

"Nothing has changed," he added. Concerning the charge that Masonry is incompatible with Christianity, he said, "I disagree totally. Members don't come in for religion. They can continue in their own religion."

Masonry simply requires "belief in a God," he said. Asked if various believers, such as Hindus, were qualified, he said, "That's OK, too. There's no restriction."

He said there are about 3 million Masons in the United States. Other estimates put the U.S. total at 4 million, and about 6 million worldwide. Besides ceremonial and social functions, Masons carry on extensive philanthropic and community service projects.

The U.S. Catholic committee said that "even though there is no longer an excommunication attached to joining organizations that plot against the faith, it would still be wrong to join such an organization.

"And even though Masonic organizations may not in particular cases plot against the faith, it would still be wrong to join them because their basic principles are irreconcilable with those of the Catholic faith."

A background study by a Catholic expert on Masonry, historian William Whalen of Purdue University, was included with the report and says the church's chief reason for opposing Masonry is its "religious naturalism."

"Perhaps a religious naturalism is better than no religiou belief at all," he writes, "but for the professing Christian it represents a retreat from the gospel.

Along The Trail

Novices tend to follow the path, especially when it is straight and narrow. But even with experienced riders there can be unexpected turns, and it's possible to get lost.

In life there are very few straight paths. It is extremely easy to come upon an unexpected turn, and to encounter doubt, confusion, even despair.

Horseback riding is not compulsory. But you do have a life — and you have to live it. The way is up to you. If we get lost, we can give up, but with the help of the Church, you will find a trustworthy guide which will renew your faith and clear the way to the path of eternal fulfillment.

Sunday Mark 6:7-11 · Monday Luke 10:38-42 · Tuesday Isaiah 55:6-9
Wednesday Amos 7:12-15 · Thursday Deuteronomy 30:11-14 · Friday I Samuel 9:9-13
Saturday I Samuel 10:5-8

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Former runaway to speak at Bellview BaptistChurch

Iris Urrey Blue will be guest speaker Sunday at Bellview Baptist Church.

Ms. Blue left a Christian home in her early teens as a runaway. She became involved in drugs, prostitution and theft, and served seven years in the Goree Women's Prison. While working in nightclubs along the Houston waterfront, she became a Christian. She and her husband now serve as Southern Baptist Mission Corps Volunteers.

Ms. Blue will speak at the 10:50 a.m. and 6 p.m. services.

Bellview Baptist is located at 1710 N. Big Spring St. The Rev. G.A. Magee, pastor, invites the public. A nursery will be provided.

Sam Goodman to minister

Sam Goodman of the Happy Goodmans will be ministering at the Sunday morning service of First Assembly of God Church, 100 W. Wadley, at the 10:30 a.m. service.

The public is invited.

Students gather in capital

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of high school students, with advance estimates of up to 40,000 of them, are meeting in the nation's capital this weekend to tone up their spiritual energies for expanding faith in Christ.

Delegates to "Youth Congress '85" were registered from about every state and several foreign countries, with sessions July 26-30 at the Washington Convention Center.

It aims to train, motivate and equip high school students "to have a significant influence in their schools and communities through a positive Christ-centered lifestyle," says Dick Wynn, co-chairman of the event.

It is co-sponsored by Student Venture, the high school arm of Campus Crusade for Christ, which functions on college campuses, and by the Campus Life wing of Youth for Christ, working among high schoolers.

The congress concludes with a "celebration rally" next Tuesday on the Washington Mall, featuring numerous Christian performing artists, including singer Debby Boone.

Rabbi denounces decision

NEW YORK (AP) — The head of Reform Judaism says the demands of Israel's chief rabbis that recently-arrived Ethiopian Jews undergo a religious conversion rite if they wish to marry is "demeaning and degrading."

"Such a demand is offensive and humiliating to a Jewish community that has guarded its Jewish identity for some 2,000 years in the face of persecution, poverty and isolation," says Rabbi Alexander M. Schindler, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations.

South Africa 'tinderbox'

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — A South African woman says black people there are at a point where they have nothing to lose in their struggle against apartheid and are "willing to lay down their lives."

Edwina DeGrant, now a teacher in neighboring Zimbabwe, told a United Methodist missionary conference that "for decades there have been warnings that South Africa is a tinderbox waiting to explode — that time has come."

She said "South Africa is in a state of war" and only a total withdrawal of economic support of the South African government by other nations or a bloodly revolution can end apartheid.

Women's report released

WASHINGTON (AP) - A confidential report to the Vatican by the World Union of Catholic Women's Organizations says many women leave the church because it is insensitive to their desire to "participate fully."

The 1982 report, obtained and recently made public by National Catholic News Service, criticizes the scarcity of women in decision-making positions, refusal to permit girls to serve at the altar and to admit women as deacons.

The international women's body said it is "deeply concered with the fact that the church is losing a considerable number of women and will continue to do so unless more sensitivity is shown towards women's concerns and aspirations to participate fully in the life and mission of the church."

Man claims Christian 'CURE' for inmates

AUSTIN — Bill Robinson has on the drawing board a private Christian-oriented prison which he says would be cheaper to build and operate than units mananged by the Texas Department of Corrections. But his idea drew criticism at the annual convention of a statewide prison reform group.

Robinson, who is promoting such a private prison in Gregg County in East Texas through a non-profit group called Corrections Concepts, debated the issue at the 11th annual Citizens United for Rehabilitation of Errants convention, along with an advocate of private prisons for profit and an opponent of private inmate facilities.

"To simply build the prison at a lower cost is not an innovative answer," said Fernando Tafoya, of San Francisco, who is with National Moratorium on Prison Construction. He said private prisons — whether run for profit or not — tend to skimp in such important areas as employee training and job benefits.

Former Texas Secretary of State John Fainter, an Austin attorney representing a group seeking to build prisons for profit, said his group "does not have the answer to the problems we have in our penal system today," but added money saved in constructing private prisons can be devoted to other resources aimed at helping inmates.

"It doesn't have to be put into bricks and mortar," said Fainter. "Sure, we're trying to make money out of it. Profit is not a dirty word."

"As Christians, we have a built-in care factor," said Robinson, who served seven years in prisons outside of Texas for writing hot checks. "Our God and our Bible tell us to care for the sick." That practice should be carried over to the prison system, he said, adding his philosophy is to "administer for the prisoner as if you were imprisoned with him."

But Tafoya, who called the concept of prisons for profit most controversial, compared building private prisons to "putting old wine in new bottles."

Tafoya said private prisons often save money because "they don't have to provide the same kinds of (employee) pensions and employee benefits," and have fewer recreational facilities for inmates. "A lot of times they can cut job training as well," he said.

"It's true the business sector is much more innovative (than government), but in terms of criminal justice, businesses are involved in duplicating the same thing," Tafoya said. "It's the same thing being developed again, but at a cheaper price — business is not challenging its potential."

Robinson predicted private prisons will become more commonplace just as private hospitals have in the last half century. "About 50 years ago, the ratio of public to private hospitals was 12-to-1," he said. "Today,' it's 55-to-1 the other way."

Christian and non-profit organizations were responsible for starting private hospitals and were able to pay for about 70 percent of the non-paying patient population, said Robinson, who blamed profit-oriented hospitals for "eroding the foundation of non-profit entities."

In terms of prisons, Robinson said the Kilgore-based Corrections Concepts can operate a facility for less tha $28 a day per inmate. "The national average is $43 and under TDC's new budget it's almost $39," he added.

"If there is Biblical authority for Baylor University and Baylor Hospital, why not Baylor Prison?" Robinson asked jokingly.

Catholic bishops take hard line agains Masons

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

In a shift from past conciliatory gestures, a committee of U.S. Roman Catholic bishops has taken a hardened line against Freemasonry, calling it "incompatible with Christian faith and practice."

Similar admonitions have come lately from the Vatican. Some European Protestants also sounded warnings.

The British Methodist Conference this month censured the fraternal order as a threat to Christianity, and the issue is simmering among British Anglicans and Baptists and Lutherans of Norway and Sweden.

The surge of church objections to Masonic membership, a target of Vatican condemnations over the centuries, contrasted with the earlier friendly U.S. Catholic overtures toward Masonry.

Some bishops, in the decade through 1981, appeared as honored guests at Masonic functions, deploring past antagonisms, and official Catholic statements indicated Catholics could be Masons if their lodges weren't anti-church.

Also, Catholicism's new code of canon law, issued in 1983, ommitted a provision of the old 1917 code excommunicating Catholics who join Masonic orders.

However, a recent confidential report by the U.S. bishops' pastoral committee, headed by Cardinal Bernard Law of Boston, said Masonic principles "embody a naturalistic religion" contrary to Christianity.

"Those who knowingly embrace such principles are committing serious sin," says the report, sent to U.S. bishops in April.

However, it said because of past confusion about the matter, there are "serious problems" for Catholics who joined Masonic lodges in good faith, and the situation should be approached with "great tact."

Masonic officials called the condemnation groundless.

"We don't understand it," said Stanley F. Maxwell of Lexington, Mass., commander of the Supreme Council of the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite of Free-Masonry. "Catholics and Masons have got along for centuries."

He said Masonic lodges include many Catholics as well as Protestants, and some lodges have black and Jewish members "if they pass the ballot" of approval. He said Masonic and Catholic organizations still hold joint social affairs.

"Nothing has changed," he added. Concerning the charge that Masonry is incompatible with Christianity, he said, "I disagree totally. Members don't come in for religion. They can continue in their own religion."

Masonry simply requires "belief in a God," he said. Asked if various believers, such as Hindus, were qualified, he said, "That's OK, too. There's no restriction."

He said there are about 3 million Masons in the United States. Other estimates put the U.S. total at 4 million, and about 6 million worldwide. Besides ceremonial and social functions, Masons carry on extensive philanthropic and community service projects.

The U.S. Catholic committee said that "even though there is no longer an excommunication attached to joining organizations that plot against the faith, it would still be wrong to join such an organization.

"And even though Masonic organizations may not in particular cases plot against the faith, it would still be wrong to join them because their basic principles are irreconcilable with those of the Catholic faith."

A background study by a Catholic expert on Masonry, historian William Whalen of Purdue University, was included with the report and says the church's chief reason for opposing Masonry is its "religious naturalism."

"Perhaps a religious naturalism is better than no religiou belief at all," he writes, "but for the professing Christian it represents a retreat from the gospel.

Solo sailor crosses ocean in 21 days

By LEW SCARR
Copley News Service

It sounds so easy.

"The wind was blowing well and the boat ran well and I just pointed it here and the wind blew me along."

James K. La Fleur was talking from the Grand Hotel, County Cork, Ireland, where he had wakened after four hours' sleep, the finish of 21 days sailing alone on his 51-foot ketch, Seaflower, 3,000 miles across an often-foggy North Atlantic from Boothbay Harbor, Maine.

La Fleur, 55, is president and chief executive officer of GTI Corp., an electronics company headquartered in San Diego, and his Seaflower was loaded with electronic equipment.

"Besides," he said, "sailboats are not all that complicated."

Still, sailing a boat, normally manned by a crew of six, alone, so far across the unpredictable North Atlantic there had to be some difficult moments. And there were.

La Fleur sailed from Maine on July 3, planning to arrive in the city of Cork — on a voyage called Shamrock Sail that commemorated the city's 800th anniversary — in 30 days. He arrived nine days early.

Over the phone line, across the miles, his voice was strong and confident. The successful captain of a major company had done something he was very proud of that had nothing at all to do with board rooms and mergers.

The approach to the coast of Ireland was totally fogged in and he had spent the last three days on deck without any sleep.

"The Atlantic is always a potential threat," La Fleur said, "and you have to be concerned that the weather might get to you. But as it turned out, the weather worked perfectly, the wind blew from the west as it is supposed to and the boat ran well.

"I didn't hurt myself and I am healthy and the sum of it is, it was a grand experience."

He said the "hero of the story" was an on-board transceiver, a position-tracking system developed by NASA and the French government, called Argos, that sent Seaflower's position periodically via satellite to the international telex network.

"So the people on shore knew where I was every day, and the office did there in San Diego, and so did my wife (Helene) and that was comforting."

Not so comforting was the failure of his automatic steering device and then the failure of its backup 10 days out.

"So I devised (with help of a book) a system of cords and lines to make the boat steer itself and it worked beautifully."

La Fleur sounded pleased. "I had to improvise on the spot, you see."

He had to improvise, too, after his carefully planned sleeping routine did not work.

"Ideally," he said, "at 8 in the evening I would lie down and set the alarm one hour ahead, and then every hour I would get up and look around to see if the coast was clear and see if there were any ships in sight and then go back to sleep every hour during darkness.

"It sounds logical, and I did it for about three days, but I found I just plain wasn't getting enough sleep, so I extended it to every two hours and that worked pretty well."

He spent daylight hours doing routine maintenance, checking his gear, performing navigational chores and fixing his meals. And ah, his meals.

"My wife packed enough oranges so I had fresh-squeezed orange juice every morning and hot oatmeal. The lady at the motel in Maine had baked me enough bread for the first 12 days.

"For lunch I had a lot of salmon salad, nice fresh salads every day. For dinner I had 'hot cans' developed in England. You punch a hole in them and in about 10 minutes they heat themselves — beef casserole, turkey, curry, Irish stew."

The key to La Fleur's emotional and psychological strength, which sustained him throughout the voyage, seemed taken from some Conrad novel where the Englishman dresses for dinner every night in the jungle to preserve his dignity.

"Psychologically," he said, "it was absolutely essential that every day I and the boat started in the same good condition we were the day before. I tried to discipline myself that every morning I cleaned myself up, shaved every day with hot water, put on clean clothes and set the table for three formal meals every day.

"Otherwise, you can get discouraged. It is important to pump yourself up every day to know you can do it one more day, otherwise if you decide just to hold your breath and let it run downhill you are going to get into trouble."

La Fleur said he was never bored, "but I was scared a little from time to time. It was the prospect of the weather getting worse, or colliding with a ship in the fog.

"The biggest scare I had turned out not to be real. I was listening to the British Open (golf tournament from Sandwich, England) and it had to be called for about 45 minutes Saturday (July 20) because of thunderstorms.

"It was the throwaway line by the announcer that got me. He said, 'Boy, if they think the weather is bad today, wait until the hurricane hits here tomorrow.'

La Fleur had insisted before he began that the voyage was not "a daredevil stunt" but "simply a sporting challenge."

He met that challenge early Thursday, with thousands lining the Cork County shoreline to greet his arrival. Many of them had entered the contest sponsored by a local insurance company and the daily newspaper, guessing what time he would cross the finish line.

Surfers sail Atlantic

FALMOUTH, England (AP) — Two Frenchmen have arrived at this southwest English port aboard a specially built two-man windsurfer, claiming to be the first people to windsurf across the Atlantic Ocean.

Windsurfers are powered only by sail and human muscle-power.

Frederick Beauchene, 31, from La Baule in northwest France, and Thierry Caroni, 29, from the west coast port of La Rochelle, said they were tired but happy after their journey aboard the 22-foot fiberglass craft.

They arrived at Falmouth 11 days overdue after a 41-day trip of about 3,000 miles from New York.

The Frenchmen said they capsized Monday and spent two hours in the water. They righted the windsurfer but lost the last of their food and other important equipment.

They were met on arrival at Falmouth by representatives of a British watchmaking firm that sponsored the crossing. A spokeswoman for the firm, Johanna Jacobius, said the two Frenchmen took turns sailing the windsurfer, which is 6-feet-6-inches wide, and has two masts and a small cabin.

"We understand one particularly hairy moment occurred when one of them fell off the board while the other was fast asleep on the bunk in the tiny cabin. We don't know the full details of what happened, though. They were just too tired to go into much detail," she said.

She said the Frenchmen made the trip without any accompanying boat and until they were spotted off Britain no one knew if they were still alive.

Clements to again seek GOP nomination for governorship

By JULIA MARTINEZ
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Former Gov. Bill Clements, the state's first Republican governor since Reconstruction, said Friday he will seek his party's gubernatorial nomination in 1986.

Clements, 68, a wealthy Dallas businessman, made the announcement at a news conference here Friday afternoon.

"The reason that I called this press conference is because Rita and I, after considerable discussion, reached the conclusion that we...will be your candidate for the governor's race next year, and starting right now," he said.

In 1978, Clements upset former Attorney General John Hill to become Texas' first GOP governor since Reconstruction, but was himself upset in 1982 by the present governor, Democrat Mark White.

Clements criticized White for increasing taxes, problems in state expenditures, water woes and troubles in the state prison system.

"It's his record," Clements said, referring to White. "The people of Texas now have a direct comparision of good management and efficiency in state government versus bad management and a state in disarray."

Bill Clements

Earlier in the year, Clements was seeking Republicans to mount a serious challenge to White's expected bid for reelection. But recently, he had let it be known he would consider another race himself.

Two other potential contenders for the Republican nomination — former U.S. Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock and U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler of Hunt — have said they will announce their candidacies within the next two months.

Clements said he realized Thursday while campaigning in Northeast Texas for the GOP's 1st Congressional District candidate, Edd Hargett, that there is shift toward the Republican Party underway in Texas.

Clements said he realizes he will be an underdog but "it doesn't bother me, I've been there before."

He declined to discuss specific issues with reporters, but did say he thought competition among GOP contenders would be good for the party.

He said he informed Hance and Loeffler of his decision Friday, but he refused to discuss their reaction.

Clements has said he was encouraged to run by scores of letters and telephone calls and because of independent polls and polls for other candidates.

According to Clements, public opinion surveys show that White is vulnerable. Clements has also said that the surveys show he has a large base of support.

"And if that support is really there, I have a responsibility that goes with it," Clements said earlier this week.

Other Republicans won't change plans

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Former GOP Gov. Bill Clements' decision to run again won't change the plans of two other Republicans who have been raising money for the race, the two said Friday.

"For me, it's another day on the campaign trail," said U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler, who was mingling Friday night at a reception with GOP county chairmen meeting here this weekend.

Former U.S. Rep. Kent Hance, who also was at the reception, said, "I think the good thing about this is that this may well prove to be the first time that the most exciting primary in the governor's race is the Republican primary."

Clements, the first Republican governor since Reconstruction, said he wants another shot at Democrat Mark White. In 1982, White ousted Clements after a single term.

White, who was traveling outside Texas on Friday, issued a one-sentence statement about Clements' decision.

"I just hope he's going to run on his record," White said.

U.S. blasts handling of Mexican murders

AUSTIN (AP) — U.S. government officials, frustrated by the many unsolved killings of Americans in Mexico, have issued a report criticizing the way Mexican authorities have handled the cases, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said.

According to the report, Mexican authorities have solved only three of 53 slayings of U.S. residents reported in Mexico over the past 2½ years.

The report, outlining concern about the apparent "inability or unwillingness" by Mexican officials to investigate and prosecute violent crime against tourists, was given last month to Mexican officials by U.S. Ambassador John Gavin, the Austin American-Statesman reported.

Officials at the Mexican ministries of tourism and justice declined to comment on the report, saying it was under review.

However, spokesmen for both agencies said more citizens of Mexico are slain in U.S. metropolitan areas each year than the 1983-84 total of U.S. residents slain in Mexico.

U.S. and Mexican officials estimate that 12 million U.S. residents have traveled in Mexico over the last 2½ years without encountering problems. An additional 417,000 U.S. citizens, mostly retirees, live in Mexico and authorities said these residents are seldom crime victims.

Embassy press officer Vince Hovenac said the document raises concern over the perception that the slaying investigation "will not be thorough if the Mexican authority does not attach much importance to the case."

Mexican federal police, better trained and better equipped to do scientific analysis of crime evidence, "won't become involved unless it is clear that some of their own laws were violated — like, for example, if the American homicide victim was involved in a drug transaction," Hovenac said.

He said the embassy would welcome more federal intervention in crime related to tourists. He said Gavin has praised the creation of a unit within the federal attorney general's office in Mexico to follow up on crimes committed against tourists.

But some federal authorities "seem to take much more of an interest in prosecuting when Mexican law has been graphically broken than when a tourist has been assaulted," Hovenac said.

Another embassy official said Gavin told Mexican officials that "we don't think their investigations are adequate, that at times we have found the Mexican authorities to be lacking in responsiveness, and that gives the perception that they are not doing anything" on some cases.

Exceptions include the highly publicized kidnapping and slaying this year of Enrique Camarena, an agent of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration.

The other two cases involved the deaths in Guadalajara of John Walker, a Minnesota resident, and Alberto Radelat, a Fort Worth resident.

The two were apparently mistaken for U.S. drug agency informants, Mexican authorities said. The deaths reportedly were ordered by Rafael Caro Quintero, a leading drug smuggler who planned the slaying of Camarena, authorities said.

GOP 'blue collar' team bests Democrats

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — Rep. Silvio O. Conte, the cigar-chomping manager who guided House Republicans to a 9-3 baseball rout of House Democrats, says the GOP now dominates the annual game with "blue collar guys who like hot dogs and beer."

Democrats lost for the 17th time in 24 years Tuesday night in a contest played before a crowd of several hundred congressional staffers and former baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Conte, of Massachusetts, kept the Democrats off balance with his insults and Colorado Rep. Dan Schaefer dazzled them with his pitching. Rep. Mel Levine of California pitched for the losing Democrats.

Conte, who has enlivened somber congressional conference committees by donning outrageous masks, said after the game that he knew why the Republicans of 1985 can win on the baseball diamond — while still mired in a 30-year drought as the minority party in the House.

"We haven't elected a bunch of intellectuals," he said, savoring the victory cigar that was more chewed than smoked. "Now, we're a bunch of blue collar guys who like hot dogs and beer. We have unity, discipline and are a bunch of regular guys.

"The American public is seeing the Republicans are not a bunch of stiff-shirts. And the Democrats are falling over themselves. They do it on the floor every day," Conte said.

The losing manager, Rep. Bill Chappell Jr. of Florida, commented, "The other team outplayed us tonight," and added, "I never had said the Republicans were a bunch of stiff-shirts. That's for them to decide.

"One thing is, the Democrats have more people who will come out and play. Because we try to play everybody, we lose capability. But that's the Democratic Party, trying to give everybody a part."

Before Republicans turned the game into a rout, the losers showed they were hungry for a victory. Rep. Larry Smith, D-Fla., a player who took a turn as commentator, told one colleague over the public address system that if he didn't come through, he would be re-assigned to the "air conditioning and ventilation" subcommittee of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

By the final inning, Republican fans in the bleachers were serenading Democrats with "Na na na na...goodbye."

Democrats had practiced hard to break the Republican jinx, holding sessions at 7 a.m. daily the past few weeks at a Washington recreation center near the Capitol.

On Monday, they staged a final practice at the former minor league ballpark where the game was played, but the session was cut short when the lawmakers were bounced by Little Leaguers who had scheduled a doubleheader.

The Democrats took a 2-0 lead in the top of the first inning, and trailed only 5-3 when Republicans came to bat in the bottom of the sixth of the seven-inning game.

But the GOP scored four sixth-inning runs to turn the game into a rout.

Radiation exposure may have caused pilot's death

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A pilot who died of leukemia after flying his jet near the mushroom cloud of a nuclear explosion may have received more than 100,000 times the amount of radiation the government estimated, a scientist says.

Dr. Edward A. Martll, a radiochemist at the National Center for Atmosperic Research, was hired to study the Veteran's Administration's ruling in the case of Tennessee Air National Guard Lt. Vernon C. Keel.

Keel, who died in 1978 of leukemia at the age of 41, was one of several pilots who flew near mushroom clouds following two test explosions in the Nevada desert in August 1957.

His widow, Glenda Sue Keel, now of Gainesville, Ga., alleged that her husband's disease was caused by the flights. But the VA denied benefits to the family.

Martell said the flights were ordered despite a 1948 report by Dr. Herbert Scoville, former chief scientist of the Armed Forces Special Weapons Project, that pointed out the dangers of close proximity to nuclear clouds.

"This is a very questionable operation: How they could fly under a test cloud and ignore what they had learned in earlier studies?" Martell said in a telephone interview from his Boulder, Colo. home.

The Veterans Administration said Keel would have been exposed to about 1 millirem of radiation during the flights, said Albert Bates, Mrs. Keel's attorney.

But Martel said his study showed that pilots on such reconnaissance missions received at least 10,000 times, and possibly 100,000 times, the amount of exposure cited by the government.

He also said Scoville's 1948 study of unmanned B-17s carrying film badges to measure radiation levels inside the mushroom clouds showed that levels of exposure amounted to about "400 rem or more," a potentially lethal dosage.

A regular chest X-ray exposes a patient to about 30 millirems of radiaton.

Study shows students' spatial skills declining

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — A nationwide study shows a decline over the last two decades in the ability of high school students to visualize three-dimensional objects, a skill required by architects, doctors and engineers, a researcher said.

A shift away from courses that stress spatial relationships such as geometry, trigonometry and mechanical drawing may have led to the lower scores, said Thomas Hilton, senior researcher at the Educational Testing Service.

The results may indicate that potential engineers and architects are not as well qualified as those who emerged from school two decades ago, Hilton said in an interview.

The study found that the roughly 25,000 high school seniors tested in 1980 for their ability to visualize three-dimensional objects performed at the same level of freshmen tested in 1960, Hilton said.

The "visualization in three dimensions test" depicts a flattened geometric form, such as a pyramid, and asks the student to pick which of five objects could be made by folding or twisting the flattened piece.

"If you're good in this you're good at engineering, architecture and medicine," Hilton said. "Doctors are believed to require good spatial abilities."

The average score for the public, parochial and private school seniors taking the test in 1960 was 9.1 correct answers out of a possible 16. The average score in 1980 slid to 7.7 correct responses, equal to the average score of the freshmen who took the test 20 years ago, Hilton said. Only seniors took the test in 1980.

Hilton said his study was the first comparison between the two tests, which were identical but given to students 20 years apart.

"I think it means there has not been enough emphasis in elementary and secondary school on school subjects that lead to competence in spatial relations," he said. "I'd say it's quite bad because spatial ablility is believed to be critical to good performance in engineering and physical science."

Researchers are unsure whether spatial skills can be acquired or are part of a person's innate intelligence, Hilton said.

The comparison of the results from the two tests also showed that the difference between the performance of female and male students had narrowed. In 1960, boys had an average score of 9.7, compared with 8.5 for girls. In 1980, the average score for boys was 8.1, compared with 7.3 for girls.

Country singer Jeannie C. Riley hopes an album "on hold" will open doors for her, putting her on the top of the charts.

Jeannie C. Riley hopes for another hit song

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Jeannie C. Riley, an unknown singer until she recorded "Harper Valley PTA" in 1968, had a hard act to follow.

Ms. Riley is again fighting obscurity — she hasn't had a song hit the top charts in more than eight years.

"I wonder why anything hasn't jelled. I've been ready to record for the last six or seven years," Ms. Riley, 39, said on a recent trip here to visit her in-laws, Mr. and Mrs. H.E. Riley.

The friendly, hazel-eyed woman still makes music for a living. She travels with her husband, Mickey, and her daughter and son-in-law, Kim and John Coyle. Kim Coyle sings back-up for her mother; Coyle handles the sound.

The family, based in Franklin, Tenn., near Nashville, travels to concerts, fairs, amusement parks, rodeos and conventions. They are on the road about six months each year, Ms. Riley said.

The country singer also has high hopes for an album titled "Total Woman," produced two years ago. It is owned by a producer and is not currently on the market, according to Ms. Riley.

"It was a wonderful album. I just hope it's not too late to be a door opener," she said.

One of the songs, "Limosine Lovers," tells a gutsy tale about "Limosine Lovers in a pickup truck making million-dollar memories while we're stuck in this rut." Another song, "West Texas Wind," evokes an urban cowboy feeling, she said.

The small woman with a big voice was awarded a gold record and the Grammy as best female country vocalist of 1968. "Harper Valley," a song about small-town hypocrisy, sold more than 4 million copies in the United States alone.

Until the mid-1970s, 10 of her songs made the top five songs in country music, and 15 of her songs made the top 10.

Ms. Riley blames a former producer for her lack of quality work after such a meteoric beginning. She says half a dozen songs written for her later became hits — sung by someone else.

She says, for example, "Son of a Preacher Man," a hit by Dusty Springfield, was first offered to the producer for her. Two others, "One's on the Way" sung by Loretta Lynn and "New York Secretary's Life" by Billie Jo Spears were also rejected by her former producer, Ms. Riley said.

In 1971, Ms. Riley and the producer parted company, but other producers and songs did not produce the giant result of "Harper Valley."

"Five or six years ago, every time I put out a new supply of cotton balls in a bathroom jar, I'd say, 'Before I run out, I'll have another hit,'" Ms. Riley said wistfully.

She is upbeat about her life and times. Part poet, part philosopher, part musician, her songs evoke what she calls "country nostalgia." She said her audiences like a song she has written called "Vic's Salve and Alabam." The song tells about the fun she had with her grandfather who arrived to visit during her childhood in Anson, Texas. He smelled of Vic's Salve, she said.

"I like stone country music, the whining, twin fiddle, steel guitar twangy music. I don't have a sophisticated taste in music," Ms. Riley said.

The songwriting has ended — temporarily. "I get mad at myself. But psychologically, I'm thinking 'why bother to write more, I have plenty of good songs.'"

Ms. Riley said she once wrote about 200 songs in a four-year period. "Some are really good. Some are better than the songs I recorded before."

What is it like to go from nowhere to instant fame? "The only thing that kept me from total shock was faith — the faith that something was going to happen. I felt something was coming. I used to feel excitement when someone knocked on the door, that knock might bring the break I needed."

We Know Video. We Take a Stand.
We Recommend Beta. We Can Explain Why.

Most stores that sell video, tell you to buy VHS, because that's more popular. Most restaurants sell Coke, because that's more popular. But Pepsi isn't going out of business, and the choice between Pepsi or Coke is a matter of taste.

The choice between Beta and VHS is a choice between quality and quantity. Just because something is more popular doesn't make it best.

Beta VCRs have a sharper picture. The reason is simple, the Beta head drum is 21% larger than VHS. A larger head drum means a faster writing speed, and that means a better picture.

Beta VCRs have a better loading system. There are less severe angles and turns for the tape to follow. This means less tape stress.

And this means Beta VCRs are easier to use. Once the tape is loaded you can instantly go from any mode to any mode, rewind to play, forward Betascan to reverse, etc.

VHS VCRs, because of their more stressful tape path, load and unload the tape between modes. Each time you push play, each time you stop the tape, each time you rewind or wind a VHS takes time to load or unload. Even picture scanning, in the reverse mode, stops momentarily as servos are checked.

Plus Beta machines are smaller. Beta machines are less expensive. And Beta blank tapes are economical in different lengths.

It is true, more rental places have VHS tapes, but plenty support Beta really well. Every movie available in VHS is also available in Beta and when it comes to Hi-Fi stereo movies, there are over 2,000 in Beta Hi-Fi and only about 150 in VHS Hi-Fi.

Do you go along with the crowd, or do you know Beta?

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Sunday, July 28, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Capitalize on recent gains at work. You shine in areas where you have not felt confident in the past. Go into negotiations fully prepared and you will emerge with the financial backing you want. It may be time to take a closer look at romance. If you and partner really have totally different goals, it might be better to part. Give children more supervision and encouragement. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Peter Duchin, Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, San Diego Padres slugger Carmelo Martinez, actresses Georgia Engel, Linda Kelsey and Sally Struthers, Sen. Bill Bradley (D-N.J.), baseball's Freddie Fitzsimmons, singer Rudy Vallee, author Beatrix Potter.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A computer provides answers that please the whole family. Get to know romantic partner better before making any long-term plans. Minor differences could become more important later on.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A trip could open new doors for someone looking for work. A phone call clears up a confusing situation. A church or synagogue could provide valuable assistance. Repay a favor.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A religious service inspires you to help siblings resolve their differences. A romance appears to be blossoming into true love. Trust your heart. Only you know what you really want from life.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Mate may not share your sense of adventure. Maybe the two of you should do different things today. You feel more ambitious than in the past. Plot the course you want to follow.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Stop changing your mind all the time. Settle on a certain course of action and follow through. Knowing your own heart makes romance much happier. Make a firm commitment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Find a way to meet a wider variety of people. Your life becomes more interesting when you enlarge your social circle. A pet could prove as demanding as a child. Be patient.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Joint finances need to be reviewed and discussed. Deal directly with other family members. A rift could arise if an intermediary passes on a garbled message. Devote more time to romance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Rest up today and you will be ready to tackle almost any challenge during the week ahead. A quiet, romantic interlude boosts your spirits. You are walking on air.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Get better organized at home and there will be more time for recreation. There will also be fewer complaints from a certain family member. Make home repairs as soon as possible.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Research could clear up that mystery you have been trying to unravel. Dig deep. Go first class when you travel. The influential people you meet can help your career.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Plan your day so that you can accommodate family members as well as have a good time. A phone call gives you the opportunity to meet someone special. Dress fashionably.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Trust your instincts and you'll have no trouble getting your own way. Be direct in voicing your approval or disapproval of a child's actions. Widen your mental horizons.

Dallas stop possible for Springsteen

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Negotiations are underway for a Dallas stop on rock star Bruce Springsteen's latest tour, but no date has been set, a promoter said.

Louis Messina, president of Pace Concerts, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram in a story published Friday that if Springsteen plays in the Dallas area, the concert will be held in the Cotton Bowl.

"There is no date yet. I should know. I'm negotiating the deal right now," Messina said. "If he does play here, it won't be in Texas Stadium. It will be in the Cotton Bowl."

He added, "All I can tell you is that I'm trying desperately to get Bruce to play Texas."

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Actress Debra Winger said Friday that dating Gov. Bob Kerrey makes her life "a little more difficult" because she doesn't "know all the rules."

Winger, ticketed this week for speeding in the governor's Lincoln Continental and driving without a valid license, talked about the tickets and her relationship with the first-term Democrat in a half-hour interview on a Lincoln radio station.

"I've never been in love with a governor before, so I don't know all the rules," Winger said. "I'm still kind of learning the territory.

"But my judgment is that this is where he lives and the people don't like it when he leaves, and so I'm here. That makes my life a little more difficult."

Winger, 30, is an occasional visitor at the governor's mansion and often appears with Kerrey, but has rarely made public comments about their relationship.

Sadat

RADFORD, Va. (AP) — Jihan Sadat, widow of former Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, will join the faculty of Radford University to teach once a week this fall, school officials say.

Mrs. Sadat, whose husband was assassinated in October 1981, will teach 90 students in an honors course titled "Women in the Third World."

"She made a choice to be an active leader in a country where it was not traditional for women to do this," Radford President Donald N. Dedmon said. "Then, having lost her husband, she continues to speak to the world on women's rights, while continuing her studies and being a mother. This is no small bill. This is a courageous woman."

Mrs. Sadat recently taught at American University in Washington, D.C., and at the University of South Carolina, where she is pursuing a doctorate in English literature.

Shorter

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Olympic marathon winner Frank Shorter says he may do some running of a different sort — campaigning for political office.

"Having had to survive in the Olympic political system may not be like serving in Congress, but it has relevance. I'm not a neophyte when it comes to political dealings," Shorter said Thursday.

The Colorado resident became the third American to win the gold medal in the marathon at the 1972 Olympics in Munich. He won a silver medal in the same event at Montreal in 1976.

Shorter, a Democrat and a lawyer, may have an open political path if his congressman, Rep. Tim Wirth, D-Colo., runs for U.S. Senate.

Politics "is competitive and that's my nature," said Shorter, 37, who owns sportswear shops in Denver and Boulder and manages a line of clothing he founded and later sold to Levi Strauss.

"I won't do it unless I have a realistic chance to succeed," said. "You don't just talk your way through the marathon and I feel the same way about this."

BOSTON (AP) — The world's top 300 Scrabble players know their p's and q's — and they know those letters are worth three and 10 points respectively.

The word mavens are arriving in Boston for the four-day North American Open Scrabble Championship that begins Sunday.

Scrabble, an adult board game created more than 50 years ago, requires a good vocabulary, spelling ability, some tactical skills and a fair amount of luck. Players use wooden tiles imprinted with letters carrying assigned score values to form a crossword puzzle out of words.

"Scrabble is a game you either really love or you don't. There's no in between," said finalist JoAnn Weisner, 42, of Brockton. "I like it because of the diversity. It's always new; it's never the same game."

PARIS (AP) — The condition of movie and television star Rock Hudson, suffering from AIDS and hospitalized with liver problems, "remained stable" on Friday, the American Hospital announced.

The hospital would not amplify on its six-word communique nor indicate how it related to Thursday's statement by Hudson's local spokeswoman, Yanou Collart. That statement said he had been "very ill" when admitted last Sunday but was "improving daily."

Miss Collart's office said Friday it had only the hospital's statement to relay. Its only other information was that movie star Elizabeth Taylor was to telephone him Friday evening. President Reagan telephoned Hudson earlier this week and Miss Collart's office said the actor had received hundreds of letters and telegrams.

There was no comment on Miss Collart's statement Thursday that doctors wanted to carry out a liver biopsy on Hudson, 59, but were waiting until he was strong enough.

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Actor Al Pacino and a 40-member film crew have arrived in Norway to start shooting Sunday the final scenes of the movie "Revolution 1776" in breathtaking Norwegian nature.

The team will spend one week in scenic Geiranger and will later move on to the Lofoten archipelago.

Other actors in the adventurous love story set during the American Revolution and scheduled for release in December include Donald Sutherland and Natassja Kinski.

SALZBURG, Austria (AP) — Riccardo Muti, Zubin Mehta, Andre Previn, and Lorin Maazel will be featured conductors of the Vienna Philharmonic during the Salzburg Festival, which began Friday with a greeting from Austria's president.

This summer's festival includes eight operas, four plays, one ballet and 15 orchestral concerts in addition to dozens of recitals and performances of sacred music, for a total of 140 events.

Maestro Herbert von Karajan was to direct Bizet's "Carmen" in the opening night performance, with the title role filled by Greek mezzo-soprano Agnes Baltsa, who has scored successes in Vienna, Milan, Athens, Zurich and Houston.

STATE IN BRIEF

Rape confession denied

FORT WORTH (AP) — An Arlington man on trial in the rape of his 2-year-old daughter says he was exhausted after three days of interrogations when police convinced him to sign a statement admitting the crime.

Bennie H. Boyd told a jury this week that "there's no possible way" he would have sexually assaulted his little daughter.

Boyd's daughter, Una Yvette Boyd, died of multiple injuries Oct. 31, 1984, two days after she was allegedly raped by her father.

Boyd admitted the crime in a signed statement the day she died, saying he "started having sex with Yvette. I didn't mean to hurt her and I can't tell you why I did this.

"I was really mixed up about all this and I started hitting her when she started to whine about me leaving," the confession said.

The child was admitted to Parkland Memorial Hospital October 29 with severe sores, numerous open cuts and bruises and severe liver lacerations, hospital officials said.

Berlanga won't seek post

AUSTIN (AP) — House Speaker Pro Tem Hugo Berlanga said Friday he will not run for the Texas Railroad Commission next year, partly because he doesn't think a Hispanic can win a statewide election.

"I still think we may be just a little bit too early to spring a candidacy for one of the top positions at this stage," said Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi.

Texas now has one Hispanic in statewide office, Supreme Court Justice Raul Gonzalez of Corpus Christi. Gonzalez was appointed by Gov. Mark White and faces the voters next year.

"I don't think there's any question" that Hispanic candidates other than Gonzalez would have difficulty, he said. "I think we have to re-evaluate. More important to me than electing a Hispanic is re-electing the entire Democratic ticket that is currently holding statewide office."

Berlanga made his comments after a Capitol news conference at which Ruben Bonilla of Corpus Christi announced his candidacy for chairman of the 12,000-member Mexican-American Democrats.

Kirk: No GOP clone

AUSTIN (AP) — While Democrats must evolve into a "modern, moderate, Main Street" party to win the South and West, they won't become GOP clones, the Democratic national chairman said Friday.

"The last thing the country needs is two Republican parties," said Paul Kirk, head of the Democratic National Committee.

Noting that Democratic candidates have lost four of the last five presidential elections, Kirk said the party must de-emphasize the role special interest groups have played.

"To demand 100 percent of a particular agenda and lose in an election doesn't do anybody any good. To succeed, we have to talk to the concerns that are common to all Americans," he said.

But if the party heeds those concerns — jobs, a healthy economy, education, a strong national defense — then voters will respond favorably, he said.

Strake blasts White

AUSTIN (AP) - Gov. Mark White, is using "political blackmail" by getting utility corporations and automobile manufacturers to help finance his re-election campaign, according to State Republican Chairman George Strake.

But the Democratic governor's response was: "Oh George, you know that isn't true and so do the people of Texas."

White will seek a second term in 1986.

Strake told a Capitol news conference that letters White sent to utility customers along with utility refund checks were "clearly a political effort to associate himself with the refunds."

He also said automobile companies spending $500,000 for TV ads starring White as supporting seat belts were politically inspired.

Counterfeit funds found

DAINGERFIELD (AP) — Counterfeit money from the same source as almost $600,000 used as collateral for loans at the National Bank of Daingerfield has also been found in Houston and in Indiana, a Secret Service agent says.

Larry Neal, resident agent for the U.S. Secret Service in Tyler, said Thursday his investigation into the counterfeit money had lead to what is believed to be an out-of-state source, which he refused to reveal.

Neal did say he could confirm Secret Service agents had seized $580,000 in counterfeit money — in $20s and $100s — from the National Bank of Daingerfield.

Small amounts of money from the same source as that seized in Daingerfield has also been passed in Houston and state of Indiana, but Neal said the Daingerfield seizure is the first he knows of.

White to be on 'Dallas'

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White will make a one-time cameo appearance on the CBS-TV show "Dallas" to mark the prime-time soap opera's 200th episode, his office announced Friday.

White will portray the governor of Texas.

The scene will be taped Monday at a horse stable near the Southfork Ranch near Dallas.

"It's a crowd scene at a rodeo and the governor of Texas is recognized," said Janis Monger, spokeswoman for White. "The camera cuts to the governor and he waves to the crowd. There's no speaking."

The idea was hatched by the popular show's producers.

"They approached the governor. They wanted something special" for the 200th show, said Ms. Monger.

Dallas woman freed

DALLAS (AP) — The wife of a Dallas bank president was released unharmed Friday after her husband paid kidnappers a ransom and ended her five-hour captivity, authorities said.

Julie Sanders, wife of Bent Tree National Bank president Michael Sanders, was taken from their residence in the fashionable Bent Tree addition in Dallas about 8 a.m. Friday, officials said.

Dallas police and FBI investigators were looking for two white males who were heavily masked and armed when they kidnapped the victim, Dallas FBI spokesman Woody Specht said.

An undisclosed ransom amount was paid for Mrs. Sanders' release before law enforcement officials were contacted about noon, Specht said.

Prison guards charged

ROSHARON (AP) — Two Texas Department of Corrections guards have been charged with selling marijuana to an inmate, authorities said.

Edward G. DeLeon, 23, and Fidel Estrada, 21, both guards at the Ramsey I Unit in Brazoria County, were charged Thursday and remain in the Brazoria County Jail in lieu of a $25,000 bond each, jail officials said.

DeLeon, who has been with TDC for a year, is accused of smuggling a quarter pound of marijuana into the prison Wednesday, sheriff's investigators said.

Custody battle ends when man allowed to keep Satan

HOUSTON (AP) — When their 10-year marriage ended, Eva and Martin Pinnas had no trouble deciding that each would take a Mercedes, a house and part of the family business.

But the couple needed a judge to decide who got custody of Satan, the family's 8-year-old Doberman.

"There is no argument over money or property. The only issue between us is this little fellow here," said Pinnas, pointing at the large black dog.

After hearing evidence Friday that Satan has lost weight and is less spirited since the couple's separation, State District Judge Dean Huckabee awarded Pinnas temporary custody of the pet.

"The breeder testified that the dog would be harmed if he was bounced back and forth like a ping-pong ball," said Pinnas' attorney, Earle S. Lilly.

Mrs. Pinnas would not comment on the decision.

When Mrs. Pinnas filed for divorce in February, the couple agreed to share visitation rights for Satan. Pinnas kept the pet during the day, while Mrs. Pinnas watched him in the evenings and on weekends.

But the agreement expired and the couple went to court decide the matter, Pinnas said.

Pinnas said he and Satan have been "inseparable" since Valentine's Day 1977, when he received the dog as a present from his wife.

Developers ordered to provide tapes

DALLAS (AP) — Two Dallas County real estate developers accused in a $15 million lawsuit of conspiring to defraud investors in a condominium project secretly videotaped conversations with people involved in the deals.

A federal district judge was asked this week to order their attorney, Billy Ravkind of Dallas, who said he advised his clients to make the recordings, to provide the tapes to other attorneys in the case.

Danny Faulkner and James L. Toler are accused in the civil lawsuit of conspiring to defraud investors in the condominiums along Interstate 30 in eastern Dallas County. Spencer H. Blain Jr. is also named in the lawsuit.

Ravkind said that Blain — the former head of the now-defunct Empire Savings & Loan Association of Mesquite — along with Faulker and Toler were aware of the video and audio taping but that others involved in conversations with the three men were not aware.

"He (Ravkind) tells me he's got hundreds of tapes of conversations of individuals involved in this investigation," said Dallas attorney Mark S. Werbner, who requested the tapes in a motion filed Tuesday. "We think we have a right to see those tapes."

Ravkind would not identify the individuals recorded on the tapes except for one of Werbner's clients, former real estate broker John Zervas, who purchased 15 acres of land near Lake Ray Hubbard from Faulkner and Toler in 1982.

Zervas filed the civil lawsuit in February 1984 accusing the three men as well as others of conspiracy and racketeering in the promotion of the I-30 condominium developments. Trial of the lawsuit is set for Oct. 4 before U.S. District Judge Joe Fish.

Ravkind said the taping began on his advice after a published report in 1983 that Empire Savings and five other Texas savings associations had relied on questionable real estate transactions and loan documents to provide at least $500 million in loans for the condominium developments.

"The main importance of the tapes is that they were made after the allegations of conspiracy were made, and unless they (the tapes) were staged, they show there was no conspiracy," Ravkind said.

Ravkind said criminal investigators have known of the tapes since last year.

Texas resident acquitted of wife's shooting death

LIBERTY, Mo. (AP) — A 40-year-old Texas man has been acquitted of first-degree murder in the shooting death of his wife last year.

After deliberating eight hours Wednesday evening and Thursday, a Clay County Circuit Court jury Thursday acquitted Harold Lesher of Austin, Texas, in the shooting of his wife, former Lexington, Mo., resident Vickie Lesher.

Lesher had been accused of killing his wife in a Lexington hotel room in December 1984 and then throwing her body off a Missouri River bridge between Lafayette and Ray counties.

The body was found the next day after it had gotten caught on a beam below the bridge deck.

Lesher had faced a life sentence without the possibilty of parole for 50 years. The case was heard by a jury of eight women and four men on a change of venue from Lafayette County.

Kevin Locke, a Jackson County assistant public defender representing Lesher, did not question that his client tried to cover up the shooting, although he argued that the shooting was an accident. He said Mrs. Lesher had been drinking and was depressed when Lesher tried to take a gun she was pointing at her head.

Lafayette County prosecutor Weldon Perry Jr. argued that Lesher killed his wife because of marital and financial stress.

Guatemalan family can stay for sick boy's treatment

ALLEN (AP) — An immigration official says he would be "amenable" to letting a Guatemalan family stay in the U.S. beyond their Aug. 25 deportation date because one of the children needs medical treatment in this country.

Ron Chandler, district director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Dallas, made the statement Thursday after a local attorney asked Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, for help.

A federal immigration judge ruled in April that Victor and Amalia Ortiz and their family had four months to voluntarily leave the country or face deportation.

The ruling came as a blow to the couple, whose 11-year-old son, Victor Jr., was under treatment here for severe cerebral palsy. The treatment began in 1980 after physicians in Guatemala said they were unable to properly treat the boy.

Ron Chandler, district director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Dallas said the spirit of the immigration judge's ruling was apparently misunderstood.

He said the federal government would not deport the family as long as the child needs medical care. He said the family only has to request an extension of their visa before the Aug. 25 expiration date.

Chandler also said he has the authority to approve an extension of the family's visa and that he would be "amenable" to granting it.

"We won't take any chances on this boy's health," Chandler said. "We're just not in that kind of business."

But Allen attorney Don Crowder said it was the work of Bentsen's office that tipped the scales in the Ortizes' favor.

An aide to Bentsen said she was told July 11 by immigration officials that they would "entertain a request for an extension" for the Ortizes.

Crowder said that if he does not receive an official ruling on the extension from the government soon he would request an indefinite stay for the family.

"There's no time in the foreseeable future that Guatemala will have the necessary medical facilities to sustain his life," Crowder said. "The bottom line is that if he goes to Guatemala he dies."

CBS broadcast group head shows signs of mellowness

ENTERTAINMENT

By DAVID CROOK
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Time was when Gene F. Jankowski personified the image of the tight-lipped, severely pinstriped, impeccably unwrinkled New York CBS Inc. executive. They did not break the mold when they made Jankowski, he was the mold.

The president of the huge CBS-Broadcast Group — that is TV, radio, news and just about everything else that most people know as CBS — is still tailored within an inch of his life. But during an interview the other day here in the appropriately understated private dining room of Television City, there were hints of creeping mellowness in the 51-year-old son of a Buffalo, N.Y., truck driver.

Jankowski is not as uptight as he used be. When Jankowski took the top job at the broadcast group, CBS was an unaccustomed No. 2 in the ratings to ABC and network television seemed destined to die at the hands of cable TV and home video. Eight years later, as CBS appears close to triumphing over Ted Turner's attempt to buy out the media conglomerate, Jankowski seems finally to have grown comfortable as well as confident entertaining and informing more Americans than anyone else.

"This has been one of the most exciting periods in the history of television. So much has happened," Jankowski said. "But, today, the business is more difficult and more complex than five years ago or 10 years ago."

OK, BUT WHAT was the biggest headache over the years?

"Cable was an obvious one," Jankowski said. "People were saying that the networks were dinosaurs and were going to disappear...We never believed that. Inside CBS, we were always positive. Our frustration was not getting people on the outside to listen to us."

They are listening now. With pay-TV mired, with networks as the principal source of programs videotaped by owners of videocassette recorders and with broadcasting stock prices pushing the outside of Wall Street's envelope, network TV looks healthier and more robust than it has in years.

"Every generation has its own issues," Jankowski said. "There's been no time in our history when there was smooth sailing."

Significantly, during Jankowski's tenure at the top of CBS' broadcasting operations, all of the networks have gone through a profound leadership transition, passing from the times when they were still largely run by the men who founded them to an age of corporate managers.

After an especially turbulent decade, the executive turnstiles finally have stopped spinning at NBC, and parent company RCA Corp. ABC founder Leonard H. Goldenson, 79, is preparing to hand over the reins to Capital Cities Communications, and CBS patriarch William S. Paley, 83, has stepped aside as the great helmsman of Black Rock (CBS corporate headquarters in New York).

That transition has pushed men like Jankowski — 24 years with the corporation — out of the executive shadows into policy-making positions.

CBS HAS NEVER actually replaced former President Frank Stanton, who for nearly 40 years played lord high chancellor in Paley's imperial court. Stanton's former title has been subsumed by CBS Inc. Chairman and President Thomas H. Wyman, but his role as chief spokesman for all of broadcasting has never been filled.

Consummate CBSer Jankowski would never admit to such lofty ambitions, but he clearly is thinking more these days about the bigger issues of television and communications and less about the daily fluctuations of the Nielsen ratings.

"The future is in our hands," he said. "There are people here who've been here and understand the value of the past. The tradition of CBS, to us, is one of our assets. It becomes more valuable to us as things become more competitive...

"You know, people say that your batting average goes up when you put on the pinstripes of the New York Yankees. That's the way it is here."

Tradition, image and quiet resolve have long been important at CBS, far more than at either of the other networks. Paley sowed the style and Stanton cultivated it, both insisting that CBS be the Tiffany's of television even as it stooped, at times, as low as any lowest common denominator of TV.

MUCH OF THE tradition was tied up in the news division, which has long had, at once, a more distant and more intimate relationship with corporate management than the news departments of the other two networks. Paley and Stanton took great personal interest in CBS News, and Stanton once successfully defied a congressional subpoena when a House subcommittee investigated a network documentary and threatened him with contempt of Congress. In a floor vote, the full House backed Stanton.

Jankowski seems every bit as devoted to the integrity of CBS as a medium of news and information as either Paley or Stanton. In 1978, Jankowski broke one of the cardinal rules of network management. He appeared on the air to apologize to the public for false representations that CBS Sports had made regarding the payments to participants in alleged "winner-take-all" tennis matches.

Showtime, HBO offer spaceship mystery, obsession

By JOHN J. O'CONNOR
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The only new television movies in town this week are on pay-cable, and both are having their premieres Sunday at 8 p.m. Showtime has "Murder in Space," a spaceship mystery with a gimmick, and Home Box Office is offering "Blackout," a thriller starring Richard Widmark as a former policeman with an obsession. Neither effort is remotely memorable, but the obsession easily wins out over the gimmick.

"Murder in Space" is billed as a Steven Hilliard Stern film, backed up with the heavy artillery of Richard Levinson and William Link as executive producers. The flat, rather tacky production suggests that Mr. Levinson and Mr. Link, the creators of "Columbo," didn't spend much time on the set. The plot features the spaceship Conestoga, which seems to have been built circa Buck Rogers, returning with its international crew from a five-month mission to Mars. Down on planet Earth, United States Mission Control and the Central Intelligence Agency are coping with their two long-time enemies — the Russians and the American media.

Matters are more than tense enough when the news arrives that the Russian woman aboard the spacecraft, the wife of a top Soviet official, has been murdered. Worse, it seems that she was two months pregnant. The scandal could provoke an international incident. Then, other members of the crew begin turning up dead. Who is doing it? Needless to say, everyone concerned gets an opportunity to look guilty. And the contrived complications even include a homosexual romance between two crew members. Enter the gimmick.

The movie is being shown without its final half-hour. Showtime subscribers are invited to write down their own solutions and enter a contest offering some $60,000 in cash and prizes. The conclusion of the movie, we are assured, has yet to be filmed and the script, written by Wesley Ferguson and seen only by a handful of people, remains in a secured vault. Cast and crew will then be reassembled to film the finale, which will be shown on Sept. 14.

HBO's "Blackout" — directed by Douglas Hickox, with Roger Gimbel and Freyda Rothstein serving as executive producers — is constructed on a tricky premise: Seven years ago, someone killed the mother and three children of the Vinson family. Nobody knows who, perhaps not even the murderer.

"Blackout" manages to build up a steady steam of scary suspense. The top-flight cast, which also includes Michael Beck, gets maximum mileage out of the offbeat pursuit.

POSTAL EXAM

The MIDLAND Post Office will be accepting applications from the general public for the Rural Carrier Exam. The starting salary varies depending on the size of the route carried, and can go as high as $26,000 a year plus excellent benefits. When position become available the individuals with the highest scores are hired. You should not miss your chance to fill one of these highly desirable and competitive positions.

STUDY GUIDE by POSTAL EXAM PREPARATION CENTER

The study guide by P.E.P.C. was researched and written by the foremost authority in America on how to gain employment with the Postal Service. The author, Mr. McNally has the following qualifications:

1) Former postal employee
3) Currently a Ph.D candidate in education.
2) Average 96% on two of the strictly scored Rural Carrier Exams.

Mr. McNally, who averaged 100% on 7 out of 7 of the various Postal Exams stated, "The Rural Carrier Exam is by far the most difficult of the 5 exams commonly offered to the general public. For this reason, proper preparation is essential to obtaining one's maximum score."

PROPER PREPARATION PREVENTS POOR PERFORMANCE

The Rural-Carrier guide includes 3 complete tests, tips to make you "testwise," words from actual exams and more...

You may purchase the Rural Carrier study guide for $14.00 or a complete home study workshop recorded by Mr. McNally on the cassette tape plus the Rural Carrier study guide for $39.00 (includes first class postage and handling). Send check or money order to Postal Exam Study Aids, P.O. Box 835, Long Beach, MS 39560.

Visa and MasterCard orders will be shipped the same day
