WEATHER SUMMARY

Beautiful weather to continue

From Staff and Wire Reports

Beautiful weather will continue into the weekend, forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport say.

Today will be sunny with a high in the mid 90s. Winds should be from the south at 10-15 mph.

Tonight will be clear with a low in the upper 50s. Sunday's weather should continue to be sunny with highs once again in the mid 90s.

The record high for Friday was set four years ago when it reached 101, while the record low for today was set in 1935 when it dipped to 51.

STATE

Residents along the Upper Coast from Port Arthur eastward were under a hurricane watch Friday night as Florence and its 80 mile per hour winds continued to move across the Gulf and toward Louisiana.

But most of Texas basked under fair skies on Friday, enjoying a day on which no triple-digit temperatures were reported to the National Weather Service.

The high was 97 reported at Junction in the southern Hill Country, while the cool spot was at Galveston, where it only reached 83.

Most of the state received light winds, from 5 miles per hour to 15 miles per hour, but gusts were as much as 25 miles per hour along the coastal sections of the state.

Fair to partly cloudy skies are expected over most of the state on Saturday, with low temperatures mainly in the 60s, except for the mountains of the Trans-Pecos, portions of the Hill Country, and the Panhandle, where 50s are expected.

NATION

Hurricane warnings went up Friday from Cameron, La., to Pensacola, Fla., as Tropical Storm Florence developed into a hurricane and churned its way northward toward the central Gulf Coast.

There were also tropical storm warnings for winds greater than 50 mph from Pensacola to Apalachicola, Fla.

Rain from Florence was spreading across southeast Louisiana and along the Alabama coast.

Thunderstorms along a stationary front along the coast of the Carolinas and Georgia dumped heavy amounts of rain. Local street flooding was reported in various areas of the South Carolina coast and at Charleston, S.C.

Today's forecast called for showers and thunderstorms from Virginia and the southern Atlantic Coast states across Florida and Alabama into Louisiana. Thunderstorms were expected over southeast Louisiana and southern Mississippi from Florence. Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms were expected in the northern Rocky Mountain states.

Japan has record number of centenarians

TOKYO (AP) — A record 2,668 people in Japan will be aged 100 or older by the end of the month, the government said Friday.

Last year, Japan had 2,271 centenarians, the Health and Welfare Ministry said.

Women, including Japan's oldest citizen, 112-year-old Mitsu Fujisawa, accounted for 2,106 of those 100 or older this year, the ministry said in a report.

The nation's oldest man, Eiju Tsuru, 109, was one of only two men in the report's list of the 20 oldest citizens. Tsuru was listed as the sixth oldest Japanese.

The report is released each year before Respect for the Aged Day, a national holiday celebrated on Sept. 15. On that day, those 100 or older will receive a certificate and silver cup bearing the name of the prime minister.

Ex-students indicted for phone code abuse

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Three more former Odessa College students who allegedly misused long-distance telephone services have been indicted in federal court in Midland for abusing ClayDesta Communications telephone codes.

To date, 24 former OC students have been indicted for similar abuses, which amount to more than $35,000 in intrastate and interstate calls. Twenty-one former OC students, including athletes, were indicted on April 14.

Most have been placed on probation and contracted to make restitution in a pre-trial diversion program, according to Assistant United States Attorney Thomas Beery of Midland. Without that agreement, each defendant — if convicted — could have been imprisoned for 10 years and fined up to $250,000.

Restitution under the pre-trial diversion program is ranging from $600 to $2,200, Beery said.

"When you've got kids, college kids, like these who have not been in trouble before, you can throw the book at them and go to trial," Beery said, "or you can offer them the pre-trial diversion program."

Under the program, the indictment is dismissed providing the defendant fulfills prescribed conditions, such as making restitution, staying out of trouble, agreeing to testify against others who abused the telephone services, and reporting to United States Probation officers for a one-year period, Beery said.

However, should the defendant not honor the contractual agreement, "I can bring back the dismissed indictment," he said, and additionally, can add on a conspiracy charge.

"Most of them are doing pretty good," Beery said. "They are making their restitution payments and reporting to their probation officers."

The pre-trial diversion program includes a contract — an agreement — involving Beery as federal prosecutor, the defendant, and the defendant's attorney.

"Nobody has turned me down yet," he said.

So far, 17 or 18 of the former OC students have contracted with Beery to make restitution and to abide by other agreements. He expects the others to follow suit.

"I'm pretty confident all will take the offer," Beery said.

That same offer will be extended to the three who were indicted this week: Angie Yvette Jackson, 19, of Detroit, Mich.; Timothy Lamont Thomas, 21, of Chickasha, Okla.; and Anthony Quinn Pullard, 22, of DeQuincy, La.

The United States Attorney's investigation into the telephone fraud is endorsed by ClayDesta Communications, which is based in Midland.

The "indictments are part of the U.S. Attorney's on-going investigation into toll fraud committed against ClayDesta Communications," said Randy Kidwell, president of ClayDesta Communications.

"We maintain a position of prosecution against all individuals who commit fraud against ClayDesta and support this investigation by the U.S. Attorney Office," he said.

Kidwell also said that ClayDesta "certainly" supports the pre-trial diversion program and its enforcement provisions.

All told, ClayDesta has lost more than $200,000 in long-distance services from late 1986 through early 1987, Kidwell said earlier.

And throughout the United States in 1986, telephone-service theft amounted to more than $500 million.

ClayDesta had turned over its evidence to the U.S. Secret Service. "And they came up with the cases," Kidwell said.

"We decided to take a stand and try to stop it," he said. The toll fraud, he said, had "no connection" with the college, although the illegal calls apparently were made from the Odessa campus.

Ex-banker enters plea of not guilty

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Michael Courtney "Mike" Sherrod, a former Midland banker who faces up to 20 years imprisonment and $1 million in fines if he is convicted on four counts of bank fraud, on Friday pleaded "not guilty" to the charges in his initial appearance before U.S. Magistrate Robert Sykes of Midland.

Sykes released Sherrod, who now lives and works in Colorado Springs, Colo., on a personal recognizance bond. His trial date, though not set, could be docketed for mid-October in U.S. District Court Chief Judge Lucius D. Bunton's court in Midland, according to Assistant U.S. Attorney Thomas Beery of Midland.

Sherrod was indicted for misapplication of bank funds, committing perjury, making false entries in bank records, and accepting a gratuity by a bank officer.

Sherrod is charged with accepting a $16,750 gratuity for making a $225,000 loan in January 1985 when he was a vice president and loan officer for the now-defunct Western Bank of Midland; for misapplying the $16,750 from a $225,000 loan which he had executed for a bank customer to purchase the Twin Oaks Grocery Store in Midland; for making false entries in bank books, reports and statements and altering the financial statement of a bank customer; and for making false testimony to a federal grand jury in June 1988 concerning his alleged acceptance of the $16,750 gratuity or "finder's fee" connected with the $225,000 loan.

Sherrod's defense attorney is Hal Brockert of Midland.

Sherrod, former Midland community leader, became the 11th banker or ex-banker to be indicted by a Midland federal grand jury since the FBI in 1985 heightened its probe into white-collar crimes in West Texas.

Prior to his tenure at Western Bank, Sherrod was an officer for the First National Bank of Midland, which collapsed in 1983. Briefly, he worked for Security National Bank, which went under in early in 1987.

Western Bank failed in 1986. Should he be convicted on the four counts in the indictment, Sherrod could be sentenced up to 20 years in prison and fined $1 million. Each offense represented in the indictment carries a five-year-penalty and a $250,000 fine, according to Beery.

VOTE

Rains said the presence of George Bush and Lloyd Bentsen in the election has prompted an "all-time high" interest in the campaign, which could well spill over into the vote count. "I'll be disappointed if we don't see it."

Even ignoring the presidential implications, Rains said those interested in education, criminal justice, the environment, court system and other issues can't afford not to register.

As to his own aspirations for the governor's seat in 1990, Rains replied: "I have more on my plate right now than I can say grace for."

In order to be eligible to vote in the November general election, persons must be registered by midnight, Oct. 9.

OIL

The factors include the slow world economy; competition from gas, coal, nuclear and other energy sources; increased oil production in Brazil, Oman, Egypt and other non-OPEC countries; the continuing trend toward energy conservation and discord within OPEC.

Maxwell said oil prices probably would continue to fall until OPEC members agree to firm production limits.

"If they are fearful enough and they decide to cut back production, I can see us muddling through with prices at $14 to $15 a barrel while we work off inventories," he said.

"The disaster theory is that we go down to $9 or $10 a barrel, which would force OPEC's hand and they would order production cuts. That would bring us up to $15 or $16 a barrel by mid-winter."

West Texas Intermediate settled 30 cents to 51 cents lower with the contract for delivery in October at $14.18 a barrel; heating oil was .88 cent to 1.10 cents lower with October at 40.97 cents a gallon; unleaded gasoline was .93 cent to 1.07 cents lower with October at 42.06 cents a gallon.

The inflation-sensitive precious metals market fell sharply in reaction to the oil market's plunge after rallying earlier in the day in response to the government's report of a 0.6 percent rise in wholesale prices last month.

The rally ended when traders decided the rise in wholesale prices was not as inflationary as it looked at first blush, said Jim Steel, metals analyst with Refco Inc. in New York.

Stolen box of checks lands man in jail

HOUSTON (AP) — Richard Stasiowski is free of a two-year nightmare that began when a box of checks was stolen from him.

After 10 trips to court, 19 days in jail, loss of his $30,000-a-year job and his girlfriend, he was exonerated Thursday.

In September 1986, a thief wrote thousands of dollars in bad checks at supermarkets and convenience stores. Stasiowski's lawyer believes a box of 250 checks was stolen almost immediately after they arrived at the victim's address.

Stasiowski, a 29-year-old apartment maintenance supervisor, decided to open a new bank account at Benjamin Franklin Savings when he changed jobs and addresses. He made a $1,100 deposit and ordered checks printed with his name, new address and driver's license number.

"All of a sudden I was receiving 10 or 15 insufficient-funds notices a day in my mailbox," Stasiowski said.

Bank officials didn't believe his story. When a policeman stopped him for a traffic violation in January and learned arrest warrants had been issued, Stasiowski was put in jail for 19 days.

During that time, his apartment was burglarized and $1,000 worth of electronics gear was stolen. He was fired from his job. His girlfriend, who works for a bank, decided to end their relationship.

Finally, on Thursday, visiting state District Judge E.W. Patterson dismissed theft-by-check charges at the urging of prosecutor Joan Huffman.

"According to the handwriting experts, he didn't write the checks," Ms. Huffman said.

Ms. Huffman said Stasiowski's problems might have ended sooner had he gone to his bank and executed a forgery affidavit, swearing he had never received the checks mailed to him.

FIRES

Federal officials are calling this the worst fire season in 30 years. Last year to the same date, 49,492 fires were reported that charred 1,272,412 acres, according to the Boise Interagency Fire Center, which coordinates the fighting of forest fires in the West.

The fire center has said more than 25,000 firefighters were at work, but spokesman Arnold Hartigan said Friday that number could easily stretch to 30,000 with military and support personnel.

Secretary of Agriculture Richard Lyng, Interior Secretary Donald Hodel and Undersecretary of Defense William Howard Taft IV were to arrive in Yellowstone today to inspect conditions.

Lyng, Hodel and Taft are to visit Old Faithful geyser where a firestorm Wednesday destroyed 17 buildings, and fly over the towns of Cooke City and Silver Gate, Mont., at the northeast corner of the park.

Residents of Cooke City and Silver Gate, who were among 150 people evacuated Tuesday, were told to leave again Thursday night because of the danger of the approaching 81,400-acre Storm Creek fire.

"We're back into another critical situation," fire information officer Bob McHugh said Friday.

The drain of battling the fire began to take its toll on firefighters, said Nick Tafuya, another information officer. "A lot of crews are quitting because they're tired, fat

Bush reiterates stand on abortion

PEKIN, Ill. (AP) — Republican George Bush said Friday his opposition to abortion should not be "a litmus test that everybody has to agree with."

Bush reiterated that he opposes abortion except in cases of rape, incest or when the life of the mother is endangered. He said many of his key supporters disagree with him on the subject while there are "a lot that agree with me."

Commenting on numerous subjects at the beginning of a campaign swing through Illinois and Pennsylvania, Bush also:

Said the government should re-examine its policy of letting wilderness fires burn.

Tried to distance himself from a man fired from a campaign advisory committee after complaints about anti-Semitism.

Ridiculed Democratic rival Michael Dukakis' recent statements on the Strategic Defense Initiative, accusing him of contradictions and confusion.

With more than 1 million acres charred at Yellowstone National Park, Bush said, "I think we ought to take another look at the policy. Nobody can argue this is the best way to do it."

He commented briefly on the anti-Semitism issue one day after his campaign fired a member of a Bush committee after disclosure that the man had defended Ohio autoworker John Demjanjuk, who was convicted in Israel as a Nazi war criminal.

"He wasn't on my staff," Bush said of Jerome Brentar, co-chairman of the Bush '88 Coalition of American Nationalities. "It was an advisory committee. The list came over from the Republican National Committee."

Bush said, "I just don't want people associated with me who have a record of bigotry of any kind, racial bigotry, religious bigotry, whatever it is."

"I don't know this person, but if that's the record, why we're better not to have any question raised of that nature and have the person do something else."

Bush made his comments in an interview in Rockford, Ill., before flying to Pekin, near Peoria, where he attended a courthouse rally and was applauded by a large crowd.

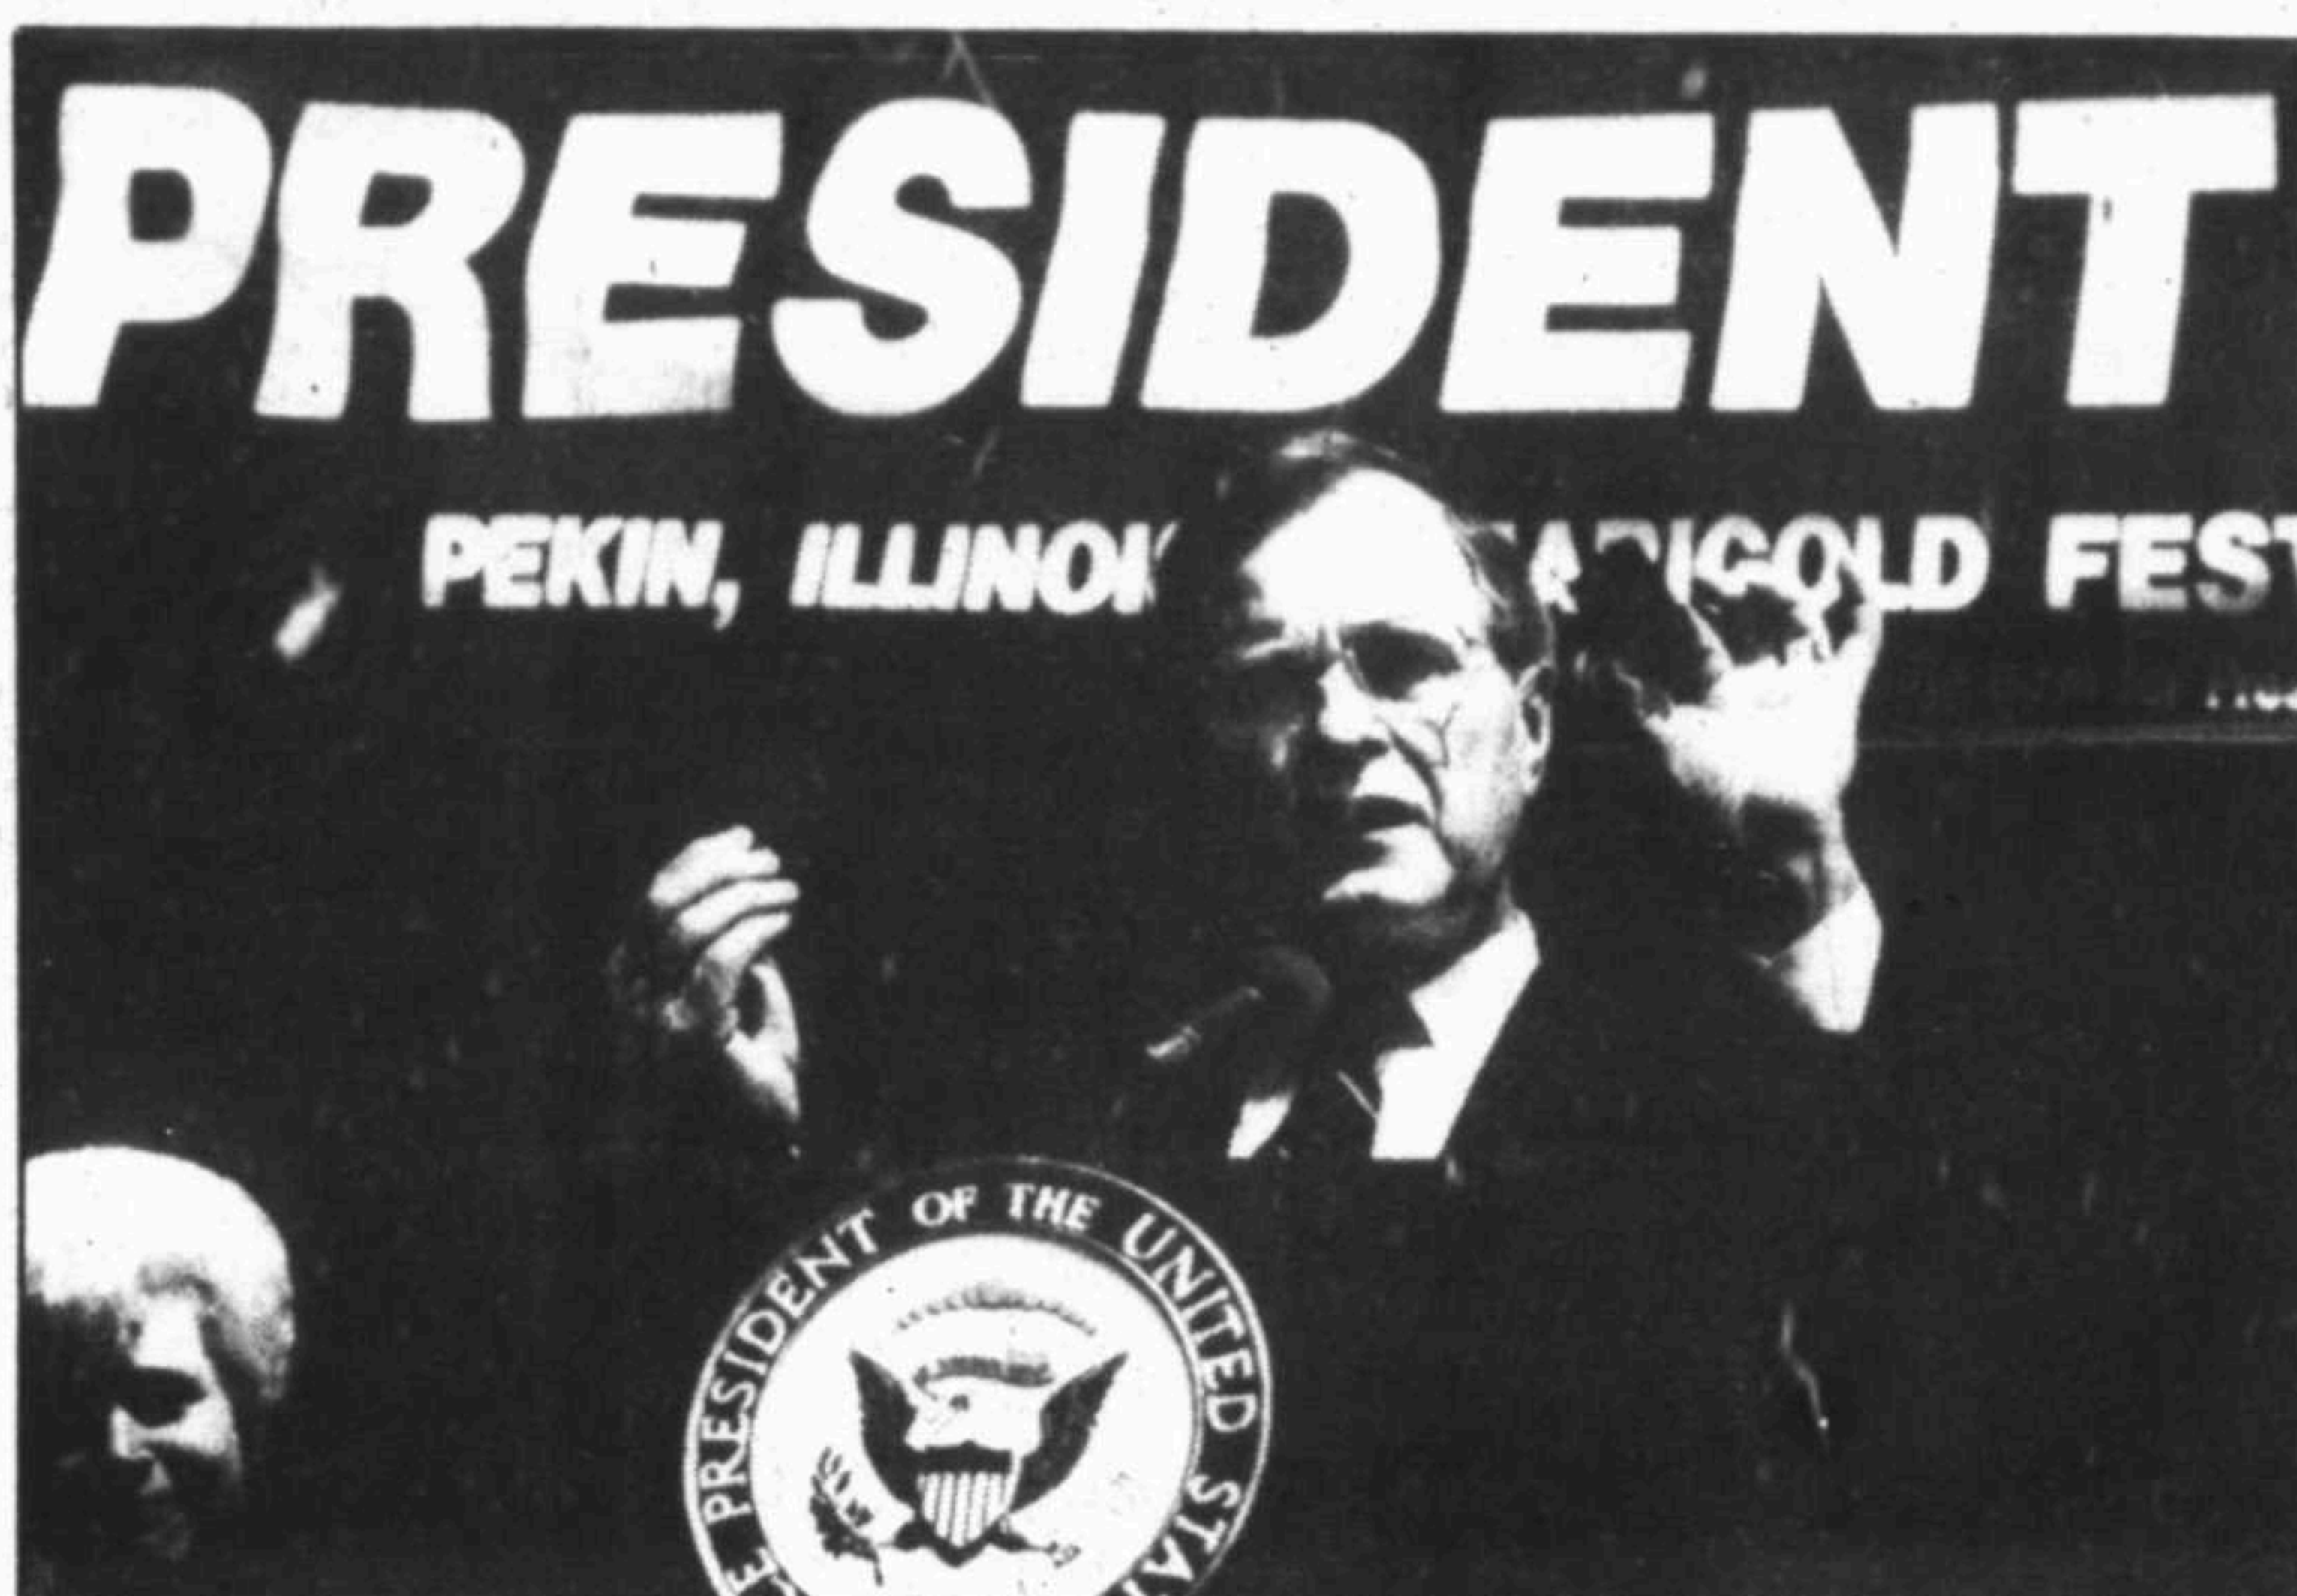

Later in the day, he planned another courthouse rally in York, Pa.

At one point, after he spelled out his position on abortion, a reporter noted that Rep. Lynn Martin, R-Ill., the co-chairman of his campaign who joined him in Rockford, is pro-choice on the subject.

"I have a lot of key supporters who agree with Lynn and a lot that agree with me," Bush said. Saying he was proud to have her in a leadership role, Bush said, "Who's going to have a litmus test that everybody has to agree with everybody on every single issue?"

When it was noted that the GOP platform takes a hardline stand against abortion, Bush said, "The platform states the position of the platform but nobody in our party takes a litmus test that says that everybody has to agree on every issue. I expect the Democrats could say the same thing."

On other points: — Bush refused to comment on a report that his running mate, Dan Quayle, a wealthy Indiana senator, got into Indiana University Law School on an affirmative action program for the poor and minorities. "I never comment on rumors and thank God I didn't when they were all flying around back there (at the Republican convention) about my running mate and everyone now sees that they were grossly unfair. So I don't."

— He said he has not decided how much the minimum wage should be increased. Bush, who has long opposed any increase, is expected to announce a change in position soon. "Well, I'm talking to some of our experts and I'm going to do what's fair. I'll tell you one thing, though, I will insist that there be a minimum wage differential." He did not elaborate.

In a speech in Rockford, Bush accused Dukakis of changing his position on the Star Wars missile-defense program.

Dukakis said Thursday he would consider deploying Star Wars if research showed that it worked and was essential to the national interest. A day earlier, Dukakis, a frequent critic of the program, had called it a "fantasy in the sky."

Bush, who supports the program, said, "Calling it a fantasy one day, something he won't rule out the next... suggests a confusion in my view on the basic facts. Confusion in terms of what he really believes and where he would take this country."

Bush spoke before the Illinois Federation of Republican Women in Rockford before flying to Peoria for the rally at the Tazewell County Courthouse in Pekin and then on to Pennsylvania.

Illinois and Pennsylvania are key states in the presidential race, commanding a total of 49 electoral votes. The race is close in both states, with Dukakis believed to have an edge in Pennsylvania.

Bush's campaign had considered a stop at Peoria's Caterpillar plant, but after the hostile reaction he got from a union audience in Portland, Ore., earlier in the week, decided on going to Pekin.

Addressing the GOP women's group, Bush hinted at a new proposal that could help close the "gender gap" in support among women for his campaign.

Departing from his text, Bush said, "Look, we also need to assure that women don't have to worry about getting their jobs back after having a child, or caring for a child during a serious illness." He did not spell out what he had in mind.

Texas pilot, mechanic restore World War II trainer plane

QUANAH, Texas (AP) — The engine sputters, coughs and smokes when its propeller is primed. Then the aged machine begins to make a rapid chugging noise.

"It sounds like it is missing, but that is the way it always sounds," mechanic Dan Hawkins says as another aircraft takes off from the runway of Quanah Municipal Airport.

The aircraft is a 1941 Ryan PT-22 that Len Miller and Hawkins restored from a fuselage and spare parts. The Ryan was one of the primary aircraft used during World War II to train young war-bound pilots. Miller, airport manager in Quanah, hauled the aircraft from Frederick, Okla., after the Mid American Air Museum moved to Liberal, Kan. He helped restore it to take to air shows because he said he is "into preserving machines of the past."

"I picked it up in Frederick and brought it over in a trailer. It had been once stored in Michigan and the wings were taken off," Miller said.

Adding to the fuselage and wooden propeller were spare parts from another wrecked Ryan. They improvised to restore the open cockpit seats and windshield frames, using saddle leather for the lining around the seats.

Miller said there are about 600 Ryan aircraft remaining, and a California group has about 30. The aircraft have a 30-foot, 1-inch wing span and tandem seating. The planes were manufactured in Tulare, Calif., and were mostly used between 1941 and 1945 by the Army.

"I instructed Army primary training in 1941 as a civilian flight instructor in a Ryan PT-22," Miller said.

He said he was inducted into the Army as a training pilot and trained in the United States during the war years.

"In the later part of 1942 we were getting a lot of cadets and using up a lot of them, too," he said.

Originally from Indiana, Miller wound up in Odell, Texas, before moving to Quanah, and he jumped at the chance to restore the Ryan aircraft that was made by the same manufacturer that made the "Spirit of St. Louis" that Charles Lindbergh flew on the first solo flight across the Atlantic.

Hawkins and Miller repainted the wings a bright yellow and repainted the original decal of a white star on a blue background with a red dot in the center.

"We had to fabricate a lot ourselves," Miller said.

A ride in the aircraft is a bumpy one because it tilts to one side when making turns. The passenger's head hangs out over the ground — nothing between his eyes and the ground below but air.

Miller said the Ryan is in mint condition now.

"The plane is in as good a shape as the time it first flew," Miller said. He said he is trying to interest more people in restoring and flying vintage aircraft or joining an aircraft club he is trying to form in Quanah.

It is nostalgic for Miller who first flew a Ryan as a young man.

"I want to keep this alive for younger people to see what happened way back yon," Miller said.

Hawkins, who makes his living inspecting aircraft, worked diligently on the Ryan restoration. "It is really satisfying to put something like this back in the air," he said.

The aircraft runs on regular gasoline and flies at a speed of about 100 mph, or 90 knots.

Hawkins said he gets the same pleasure putting an old aircraft together as he would rebuilding an old car. "But airplanes don't age like a car because it is inspected by a mechanic every year and completely worked over," he said.

Running with a sound that Miller said reminds him of the old gasoline-powered Maytag washing machines, the aircraft is hard to handle and the pilot must avoid flying into dust devils when it comes in for a landing because it can flip over, Miller said. His eyes gleam while flying the Ryan and flying is obviously something that runs deep in his blood.

"There is so much that people will never know about what used to be commonplace," Miller said, explaining one of the reasons for restoring the Ryan.

The rubber squeaks when two of its tires hit the pavement of the runway and a smaller rear wheel makes contact to bring the aircraft to a smooth landing.

"These planes are a little harder to handle than today's and every year a few are torn up," Miller said. The five-cylinder engine coughs and chokes again when the engine is killed, much like an old lawn mower.

Dukakis delivers welcome message in East Texas

COMMERCE (AP) — Some people in Hunt County never forgave Harry S. Truman for not getting off the train 40 years ago.

But Democratic nominee Michael Dukakis made up for that slight, and much more, when he brought his presidential campaign to East Texas on Friday.

Dukakis stood on the campus of East Texas State University, and proudly recounted the story of famed Texas politician Sam Rayburn, who graduated from the school.

It was a story most everyone in this Democratic stronghold already knew. The shadow of Rayburn, who served nearly a half century in Congress and served as speaker of the House longer than anyone else, still lies across the area, years after his death, residents say.

"Sam Rayburn, like my dad, cared about the real people," said Dukakis, whose jacket was off and sleeves were rolled up in deference to the searing Texas heat. Dukakis emphasized that he plans to work for the real people, the hard-working, common men and women of America, just as Rayburn had worked with other Democratic leaders to pull the country out of the Great Depression.

He also said, "Many of our wisest and most eloquent voices have come from the state of Texas."

In an area hit hard by the falling fortunes of oil and gas firms, the tribute to Rayburn and promise of help was a welcome message.

Vickie Casper, 33, of Greenville, said the 23-minute speech won Dukakis her vote.

Casper said she had merely brought her two young children to hear Dukakis because she wanted them to say someday they saw a presidential candidate.

"It looks like I'm a Democrat now," Casper said. "My husband is a small contractor. He's certainly one of the real people."

Wilma Brice, the mother-in-law of U.S. Rep. Jim Chapman, said Dukakis' speech had hit home and was in the spirit of Rayburn.

"That's what they wanted to hear," she said.

Wyn Nell Ford said she and many others were staunch Democrats because of "Mr. Sam," whose funeral she attended in 1961, and now they are turning their faith toward Dukakis.

"I'm losing my faith in the majority," Mrs. Ford said. "I thought they had more sense, then they elected Reagan twice."

Dukakis was greeted by several hundred people and a lazily circling hawk at Greenville's Majors Field shortly after his plane landed at 11:54 a.m. He stepped off the plane to accept a Greenville Cotton Jubilee T-shirt and never noticed a bit of irony in the distance.

Air Force Two, the plane on which opponent Republican Vice President George Bush, often flies, was being serviced at nearby E-Systems.

"We wanted to wheel that out so he could see what he'd get to fly in if he wins," quipped Gerard Brackeen of Greenville.

The mayor of Greenville, Bill Morgan, said there has been no bigger occasion in the town's history since Truman rolled through town in 1948 to campaign for a second term.

"I was 12 and everybody in the whole town came out," Morgan recalled. "But he never got off the train. He was in a hurry."

Lou Luckhardt, the Hunt County Democratic chairman, said the Dukakis appearance was a coup and is bound to help the fortunes of many local candidates.

"One of his strengths is the fact Dukakis is willing to listen to this area of the country," Luckhardt said. "Even before he became a candidate, he said that we need some help for this part of the country."

Dukakis started his Texas visit off on an interesting note — literally — when he stepped out of his car as he passed the Greenville High School band and borrowed a trumpet from a 17-year-old senior.

His rendition of "Happy Days Are

AP Laserphoto

Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis borrowed a trumpet from a high school band member for a rendition of "Happy Days Are Here Again" during a campaign stop in Greenville.

Here Again" especially delighted the fourth-graders from Bowie Elementary School from Greenville, who were waving hand-colored American flags.

Morgan said the only way Greenville will ever have a bigger occasion is if the high school football team were to go unbeaten.

"But we've already lost a game this year, so I guess this is it," he said.

Soviet scientist says space probe in 'deep sleep'

MOSCOW (AP) — A multimillion-dollar space probe designed to unlock the secrets of Mars fell into a "deep lethargic sleep" and is worthless because of a ground controller's error, a scientist said Friday.

It was the second Soviet space mishap revealed this week.

"Only a miracle can save it now," Roald Z. Sagdeyev, head of the Soviet Space Research Institute, said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Ground-control operators are unable to communicate with the Phobos 1 probe, now millions of miles from Earth.

This week, a Soyuz TM-5 capsule carrying two cosmonauts came close to being marooned in space because of equipment problems and mistakes by the ship's commander delayed its return to Earth.

Sagdeyev said scientists would now have to rely on a sister ship, Phobos 2, that is also racing toward the Red Planet. Phobos 1 was launched July 7 and Phobos 2 five days later in missions that cost $480 million.

The probes were scheduled to go into orbit around Mars and in January drop behind Phobos, the larger of the planet's two moons, to study the Martian surface, atmosphere and magnetic field.

Phobos 1 was to drop a lander that would stay in one place on the surface of the moon for a year. Phobos 2 was to deploy a lander that would hop around on the moon in 20-yard leaps, gathering and analyzing soil samples.

Phobos 1 is still moving in space, but it may not be on its planned trajectory because the orientation and guidance systems aren't functioning. It was not immediately known how the original plan would be modified now that one of the probes is useless.

Sagdeyev said a ground control operator at the Soviet Mission Control Center near Moscow sent an incorrect command to Phobos 1 during the night of Aug. 29-30 and that a computer failed to detect the error and flash the signal, "bad command." He did not say whether the faulty computer was on the ground or on board the spacecraft.

"The command signified the slow suicide of the machinery, Phobos 1," said Sagdeyev. "It lost orientation, and the solar panels stopped looking at the sun. In two to three days a cooling-down of the craft occurred."

"The machinery has simply frozen. It fell into a deep, lethargic sleep," the scientist said.

The mistake was only discovered three days later. Sagdeyev said investigators also determined that no second operator was on duty to check the work of the controller who made the mistake, violating the control center's rules. He did not say if either controller was punished.

Sagdeyev, the most prominent Soviet space scientist and a major supporter of the exploration of Mars, said ground controllers were still sending signals to Phobos 1 to restore orientation, but were having no luck. He suggested they now turn their attention to Phobos 2 and "do everything to prevent a repetition of the mistake with the second machine."

The space research chief spoke to a reporter during a reception at the U.S. ambassador's residence in honor of Andrei D. Sakharov, the Soviet physicist and human rights activist who is the 1975 Nobel Peace Prize laureate.

On Tuesday, Soviet cosmonaut Vladimir Lyakhov and his Afghan crewmate, Ahmad Abdul Mohmand, had to postpone landing of their Soyuz TM-5 capsule because a sensor used to orient the craft and a computer malfunctioned.

In addition to the equipment problems, Lyakhov said later he acted improperly during one landing attempt and made the problems worse. The two, who were running low on air and food, returned to Earth safely Wednesday.

NASA, the American National

Aeronautics and Space Administration, was to have helped the Soviets track Phobos 1 next month, but NASA official Raymond J. Amorose said Thursday the Soviets reported they lost contact with the craft.

NASA was also supposed to have worked with Phobos 1 in a joint U.S.-Soviet study of the sun.

The Tass news agency indicated that scientists were in normal contact with Phobos 2 and said it was 11.8 million miles from Earth.

After a 111 million-mile trip, both craft were to have fallen into orbit behind Phobos for a three-month remote study meant to help unlock mysteries of Mars, which some scientists believe may once have hosted life. In April, the craft were to drop out of their orbit and swoop to within 30 yards of the moon's surface, where they were to release two small landers.

It is the most ambitious of about 18 Soviet and U.S. unmanned missions to study Mars, which, next to Venus, is believed to be most like Earth.

Sakharov sees reversal in Gorbachev's reforms

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet dissident Andrei D. Sakharov said Friday he sees indications the Communist Party leadership is backing away from some elements of Kremlin chief Mikhail S. Gorbachev's reform program.

Sakharov said that Gorbachev, while continuing to push even more for radical reforms, also has been "backtracking" in some areas.

The 67-year-old physicist spoke with reporters after U.S. Ambassador Jack Matlock presented him a certificate making him an honorary member of the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters. Sakharov was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1975.

He said Gorbachev's program of perestroika, or restructuring, is an "historical inevitability" but a movement against the program surfaced this spring.

"In May, perestroika reached a very different period which could be called a reversal," Sakharov said.

He did not say what event in May led him to that conclusion but spoke of several later events. He said the change "showed at the 19th (Communist) Party conference (in June) in anti-perestroika forces."

Commenting on Gorbachev's campaign for glasnost, or greater openness in selected subjects, Sakharov said "anti-glasnost forces clearly had the advantage" at the conference of 5,000 delegates held in Moscow June 28-July 1.

Some delegates accused the official media of slandering people and minimizing Soviet achievements.

In August the government announced limits on the number of subscriptions the public would be allowed for certain publications, most of which are involved in Gorbachev's drive to re-evaluate history in a more truthful manner and report current problems.

Because of the subscription limits "glasnost will be limited to a small circle of people and this will harm the whole process," Sakharov said.

Soviet officials have said the restrictions were needed because there isn't enough paper for the newspapers and magazines to satisfy demand. Sakharov said however that the reason is that anti-perestroika forces want to silence the publications.

He said opponents of perestroika are behind the Kremlin's continued defense of the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia in August 1968 that crushed a liberal communist government. Sakharov said justifications for the invasion as reported in the Soviet press on the 20th anniversary were the same as those given under the late Leonid I. Brezhnev.

Czechoslovakia's "Prague Spring" reforms that led to the invasion are similar to programs being pushed now in the Soviet republic of Estonia, according to Sakharov.

Estonians formed a group called the People's Front in April to demand more political and economic autonomy for the Baltic republic.

Sakharov was asked if Yegor K. Ligachev, a member of the ruling Politburo was behind the opposition to perestroika. He said Ligachev's speeches show he is "a reactionary, dangerous force, but by far not the only one."

Creation of apartheid produces badly needed black doctors

By GREG MYRE

GA-RANKUWA, South Africa (AP) — A creation of apartheid politics, South Africa's black medical school is producing 70 badly needed doctors a year, and even those who oppose it concede it is advancing black medicine in the country.

South Africa has 26 million blacks but only about 800 black doctors, as opposed to more than 21,000 white doctors among its 5 million whites.

When the Medical University of Southern Africa was established 11 years ago in the homeland of Bophuthatswana, however, many activists rejected the school as an inferior institution built to keep medical training segregated.

However, modern facilities and a qualified staff have helped the university graduate 273 doctors who work in some of the country's best hospitals as well as remote rural areas where health workers are in severely short supply.

"The students reject the idea of segregated education, but we accept that we are getting good training," said a 26-year-old student asking to be identified only as Gwen.

The school's new buildings and landscaped grounds sit behind a barbed-wire fence 20 miles outside

Pretoria, the capital. The pristine campus appears out of place in dusty, run-down Ga-Rankuwa, a sprawling collection of dirt roads and squatter shacks.

Many of the prospective doctors come from similarly impoverished communities. Some students arriving for the six-year program live with electricity for the first time, and most have little or no experience in laboratories.

"When students come here, they face tremendous adjustments," said the vice principal, Len Karlsson, who is white, as are all the top administrators. "The pace and the intensity of the program is unlike anything they've experienced previously."

He said black public high schools do not adequately prepare students for the rigors of medical school, and therefore the university often selects older students with some practical medical experience.

About half the students are at least 25 years old and most have worked in the health care field before enrolling, said Karlsson.

The university offers remedial courses in most basic subjects, but the failure rate remains high. About 40 percent of the 120 first-year students fail, although they are given the chance to repeat.

The university is expanding its entering class annually and is one of the largest medical schools in Africa with about 1,500 students including its dentistry, veterinary, nursing and post-graduate programs.

The school, referred to by the acronym MEDUNSA, produces half of South Africa's 140 new black physicians each year. The rest come from schools that are predominantly white, such as the University of the Witwatersrand in Johannesburg.

"MEDUNSA is producing some outstanding doctors," said Dr. Nthato Motlana, a prominent anti-apartheid activist who runs a clinic in Soweto, the black township outside Johannesburg.

Motlana and other activists initially opposed MEDUNSA, calling it a "racist plan to build black medical school out in the bush."

Motlana still opposes segregated schools, but says MEDUNSA has served to increase the meager supply of black doctors.

Health services remain segregated, and the shortage of doctors and facilities is acute in most black areas.

Johannesburg's main white hospitals are about 50 percent empty, while an average of more than 200 patients sleep on the floor each night at Soweto's 2,700-bed Baragwanath Hospital, the only full-service health facility for the township's 2.5 million residents.

Despite the overcrowding at black hospitals in urban areas, the quality of care is much higher than in rural areas where the doctors are far too few and the facilities often inadequate or non-existent, Motlana said.

MEDUNSA encourages graduates who want to work in rural areas, but most students are from the cities and see no incentive to relocate, school officials and students said.

To combat the dearth of rural doctors, black homeland governments provide scholarships for MEDUNSA students, who then are required to return to work in the territories for several years after graduation.

"Until it becomes attractive for doctors to practice in rural areas, most blacks will have trouble getting adequate health care," said Motlana. "MEDUNSA has helped the situation, but it is not enough by itself."

The university is financially supported by the South African government, but students are required to pay tuition, which is the equivalent of about $2,500 a year.

Virtually every student receives some form of financial aid, however.

School officials say U.S. companies were generous with scholarship money, but many of them have pulled out of South Africa because of its apartheid policies and no longer donate funds.

School officials didn't have exact figures on the reduction in American assistance, but said its amounts to thousands of dollars annually. Some U.S.-based firms still operating in South Africa

Pope will visit mountain where French missionary aided blacks

By LAURINDA KEYS

THABA BOSIU, Lesotho (AP) — On his visit to this kingdom surrounded by South Africa, Pope John Paul II will come here to a sacred mountain where a French missionary helped native people threatened by white men more than 100 years ago.

Later on during his stop in Lesotho on his five-nation tour of southern Africa which begins today and continues until Sept. 19, the pontiff will beatify the Roman Catholic missionary, the Rev. Joseph Gerard.

At Thaba Bosiu Wednesday, the pontiff will meet King Moshoeshoe II on the same spot where King Moshoeshoe I in 1862 first welcomed Christian missionaries to his land, torn by internal violence and threatened by the surrounding white Boers, the settlers of what today is South Africa.

Gerard was one of the missionaries, who traveled through the mountains on horseback wrapped in wool blankets as the Basotho (the people of Lesotho) still do.

Gerard climbed the rocky, natural fortress of Thaba Bosiu — "The Mountain of the Night" in the local language — several times during the 1865-68 conflict with the white Boers, sneaking past them to bring food and encouragement to the thousands of Basotho crowded onto the top of the 600-foot-high plateau.

The missionaries persuaded Moshoeshoe I to seek protection from Britain's Queen Victoria. As a result, Basutoland, as the area was called, became a British protectorate and was saved from annexation into what was later to become South Africa.

Basutoland became independent Lesotho in 1966. The 12,134-square-mile kingdom — about half the size of West Virginia — has almost no industry, only one-third of its land is arable, and it relies heavily on the earnings of 140,000 Basotho men who work in South Africa, which is not on the pope's itinerary.

The pope will beatify Gerard during a Mass at a racetrack near here Thursday before departing next day for Swaziland.

The pontiff will not go to the summit of Thaba Bosiu, the royal burial ground, where residents say a large dune of fine, red sand at the summit contains the spirit of the first king, and like him, never leaves the mountaintop. When the dune approaches the edge, upward drafts of wind blow it back.

King Moshoeshoe I discovered the mountain refuge in 1824 and gathered feuding, destitute, and some cannibalistic tribes together to found the Basotho nation. He welcomed the missionaries, and spent his last years trying to choose whether to become a Catholic or a Protestant. When he died without making a decision, Gerard wrote, "I have never felt such great sorrow in my life."

The present king is Catholic, as are 70,000 other Basotho. Ninety percent of the population of 1,443,853 are Christian; the rest are animists.

Gerard died in 1914, after working for 52 years among the Basotho, establishing schools, a hospital and a church, supervising the printing of books in the Sesotho language and converting Basotho to Catholicism.

His mission at Roma is now run by a French Canadian, the Rev. Gilles Jalbert, who gave up horseback riding a few years ago. He supervised construction of a chapel over Gerard's grave, chopped down trees and prepared rest quarters for the pope's entourage. He hopes electricity will reach Roma by the time the pope does, so the Mass at the nearby sports ground can be amplified.

The pope will visit Gerard's grave, from which local people have been taking dirt for decades to sprinkle on their crops, homes and children to bring good fortune.

Gerard is being beatified, the first step toward sainthood, because of the healing of a 6-year-old blind girl in 1928, 14 years after his death. Doctors couldn't cure Florina Phakela, so a priest at the Roma mission had a bag of soil from Gerard's grave tied around her neck and told her mother to pray for nine days.

The girl, who died in 1982, told Vatican investigators she was visited in the night by a priest who told her she was cured. When she woke in the morning, her sight restored, she went to the mission to thank the priest, but couldn't find him.

She identified a picture of Gerard as the one who had visited her.

Nepal struggles to keep identity despite swelling flood of tourists

By SANJOY HAZARIKA

New York Times News Service

KATMANDU, Nepal — For years, this Himalayan kingdom, renowned for its tough Gurkha soldiers, its Hindu traditions, its spectacular views of the world's highest mountain range and as a trekker's paradise, has lived uneasily with an growing flood of foreign tourists.

The tourists have brought some prosperity, and problems.

At the luxurious Soaltee Oberoi Hotel in Katmandu, the only casino between the Middle East and Southeast Asia draws hundreds of foreign visitors every night.

A new international airport is being built and new hotels are rising to cater to the boom in tourism, which brought in about $55 million in foreign exchange last year and which is the country's biggest industry. In 1987 this nation of 17.5 million, one of the poorest places on earth, drew more than 250,000 tourists.

The spurt in tourism — it has grown nearly 50 percent in the last two years — has had obvious benefits, creating thousands of new jobs in hotels and restaurants and with tour and trekking agencies and reaching out through foreign trekkers to many village homes across Nepal that take in visitors and serve as Spartan travelers' lodges.

But there are side effects. For one thing, prices on the trekking trails are soaring.

"An egg on the trail approaching Mount Everest now costs 7 rupees, or 35 cents, said Wendy Brewer Fleming, an American who edits Nepal Traveler, an English-language travel magazine here.

There was a time in the 1960s and '70s when the flower children flocked to the Katmandu Valley and hashish and marijuana were available on almost every street. There are only a handful of hippies these days and the Nepali government has deliberately followed a policy of discouraging the impecunious traveler.

And in an effort to resist what is described as "bad influences" from the West, the government has undertaken a major anti-narcotics campaign and sought to strengthen the traditions of this country. Strict laws passed last year increased the maximum penalties for drug use and trafficking from one year to 20 years and a fine of two million rupees (about $100,000).

Officials say the scale of the problem declined sharply in the last year, especially after a top Nepali police officer and a senior army official were arrested for their role in drug trafficking.

At least 500 others, mostly Indians, were also arrested, although only about 52 remain in police custody.

But officials acknowledge the big operators elude detection because they are based in India and other countries.

The resilience of the Hindu faith and of the Nepalis has also played a part in resisting outside cultural influences, although young people wear the latest Western fashions and watch the latest video movies.

This attitude is reflected in a sign outside the Pashupati Temple, four miles east of Katmandu: "Entry only to Hindus."

DOD: Base may strain city, school budgets

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Naval Station Ingleside, to open in October 1991, will bring thousands of new jobs to the Coastal Bend area, while straining the budgets of nearby cities and school districts, according to a new U.S. Department of Defense study.

Analysts said cities and schools will have to serve more people, but the homeport will bring almost no increases in their tax bases. Joe Cartwright, a Defense Department economist, said in explaining the report released Thursday night.

Construction began earlier this year for Naval Station Ingleside just north of Corpus Christi, which will be the homeport for five Navy vessels.

Tax bases are expected to remain nearly stagnant because enough housing already is available to accommodate the 10,817 people expected to move to the area by 1992, Cartwright said Thursday night at a meeting of the Homeport Steering Council at Corpus Christi City Hall.

Yet cities will need to add to their police and fire departments and other public agencies to serve the increased population, the government economist said.

The best news, he said, is that the homeport will provide 8,574 government and private-sector jobs and annual salaries totaling $170 million by 1992.

On the base, civilians will fill 1,315 of the jobs, while military personnel will account for 4,665 positions, according to the study. The other projected 2,594 jobs would be in support businesses.

The $100,000 Fiscal Impact Analysis, which took a year to complete, is designed to help city governments and school districts develop long-range plans to accommodate growth expected from the project, Cartwright said.

Although the job and population boom will be welcome in the Coastal Bend, most cities and school districts will need to adjust their budgets to remain in good financial shape, Cartwright said.

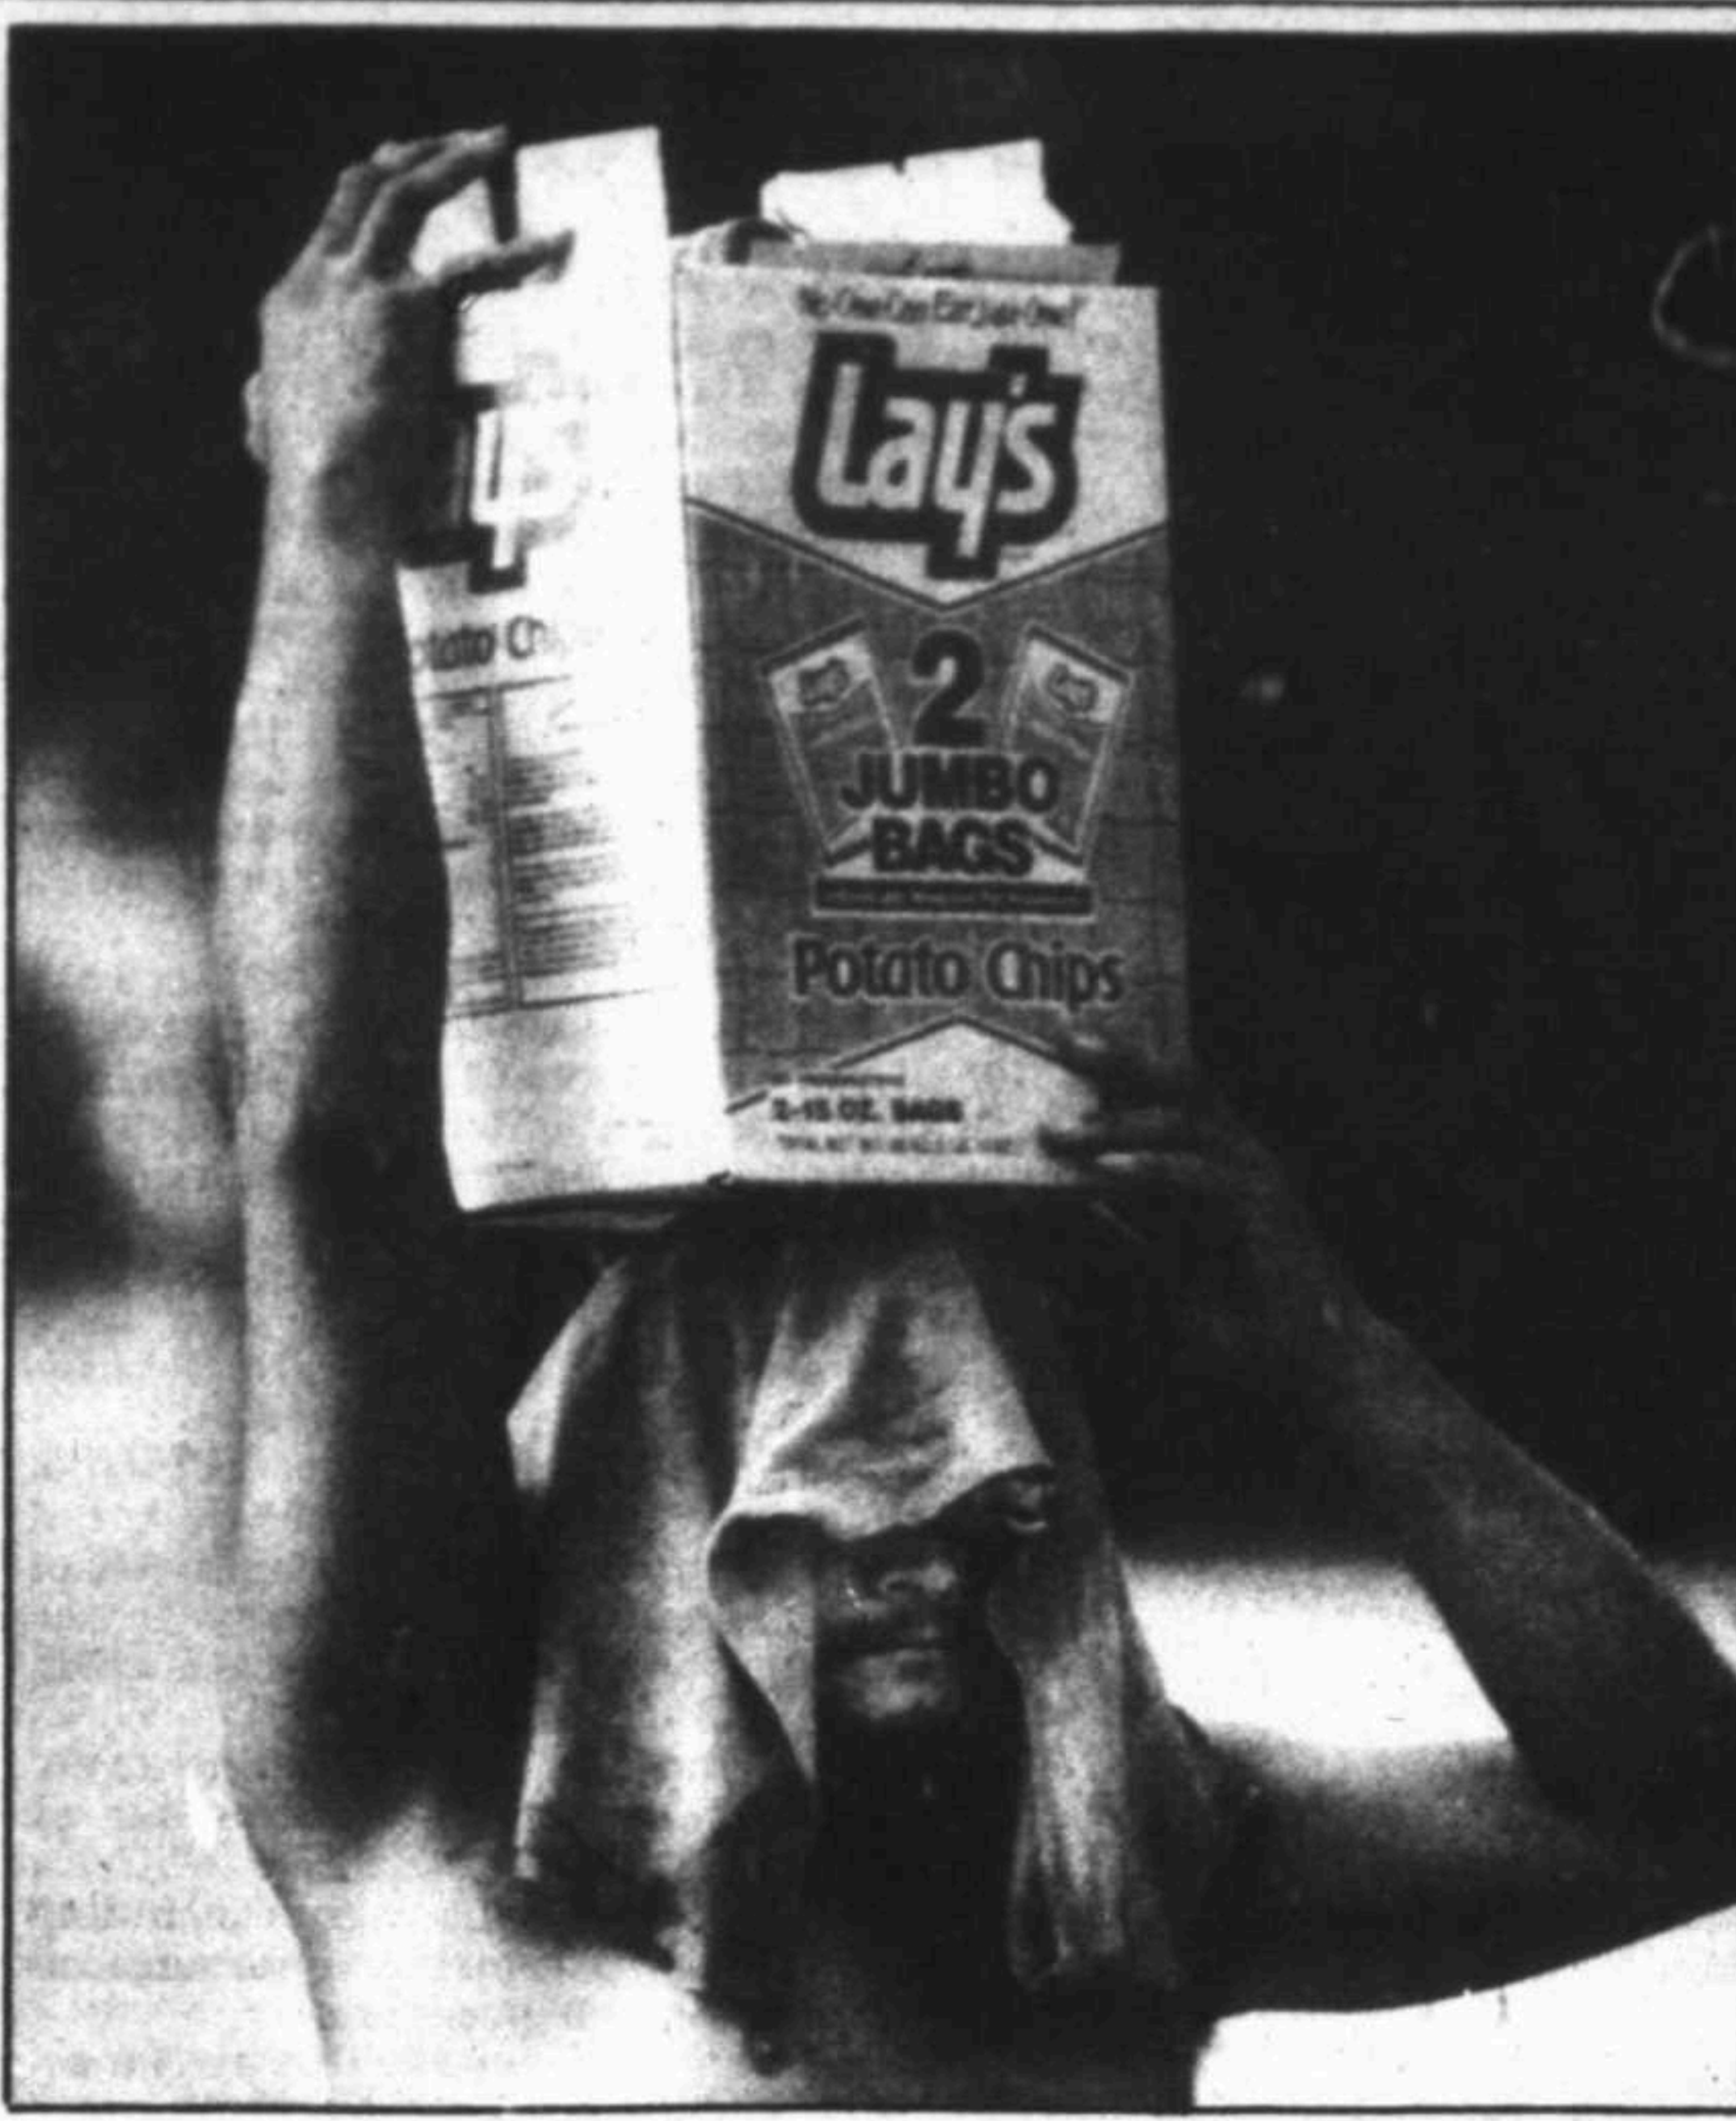

"A lot of the problems in local governments are there right now," he said. "And, probably, corrective action needs to be taken whether the Navy comes or not."

According to the report: Aransas Pass is expected to gain 1,363 people; Rockport 1,314; Ingleside 904; Portland 757; Port Aransas 382; Gregory 368; Sinton 139; Taft 125; and other areas 194. An additional 2,291 are expected to live on the base.

In Gregory, for example, the study says the base will bring in $38,000 in revenue for the city, but will add $66,000 in operating expenses, resulting in a deficit of $28,000. The homeport is expected to boost the Aransas Pass Independent School District's cash flow by $81,000 in 1992, but will result in a $280,000 loss that year for the Ingleside Independent School District.

Corpus Christi was not included in the study, because the projected 2,199 population boost is expected to affect the city of 280,000 by less than 1 percent, the economist said.

"Compared to what I have seen in other studies, this one is not grim at all," Cartwright said. "What I see in this study is manageable. All the budget problems can be handled, but something has to be done now."

Town celebrates over being chosen for prison

THREE RIVERS (AP) — Residents of this economically depressed town celebrated in the streets after learning that the Federal Prison Bureau had decided to build a $45 million prison here.

Mayor Louise Shumate said U.S. Rep. Kika de la Garza's office notified her of the decision 2:10 p.m. and the news took no time to spread through the town of 2,100 residents.

City Secretary Rosie Forehand said by 3 p.m. the streets were filled with motorists blasting their car horns with joy over the prospect of gaining 250 jobs and an $8 million annual payroll.

"I'm excited," Forehand told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times. "You kind of dream of these things, and then when something like this comes about it's wonderful."

Officials began competing for the prison in 1986. Ms. Forehand said red, white and blue streamers were hung in the town square over a sign that reads "Live Oak County welcomes federal prison."

Mayor Shumate said the Three Rivers economy has been devastated by the slump in the oil and gas industry and the drop in uranium mining.

"I think most of Three Rivers is jumping up and down," the mayor said after news of the prison arrived Thursday.

She said her phone had not stopped ringing since word about de la Garza's announcement hit the streets.

Three Rivers is in Live Oak County roughly half way between Corpus Christi and San Antonio.

The prison bureau plans to build the 800-cell correctional facility seven miles west of Three Rivers by July 1990, said a spokeswoman for Helmut, Obata and Kassabaum Inc., the Dallas firm hired to design the facility.

It will be built on a 302-acre tract less than a mile south of Choke Canyon Reservoir on Texas Highway 72. The prison will have a 550-bed medium-security center and an adjoining 250-bed minimum-security camp.

"It will pump untold millions of dollars over the next several years in to the local economy," said de la Garza, a Democrat from Mission.

Sites in or near Taft, Calif.; Peoria, Ill.; and Manchester, Ky., had been competing for the prison, the congressman said.

Mayor Shumate said a pre-site bid conference for the first phase of construction is set for 1:30 p.m. Sept. 29 at the Three Rivers City Hall.

De la Garza said the prison bureau has promised to maintain a natural buffer zone around the facility to preserve the wildlife habitat of the area.

Hatch: Cavazos has 'gilt-edged' credentials

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lauro F. Cavazos appeared headed Friday to an easy confirmation as the next education secretary, with the Democratic chairman of the Senate committee pledging his support and Republicans describing him as a hands-on educator with "gilt-edged" credentials.

"It seems like you're the type of person who can come in here and heal any wounds that might exist, and build that consensus," said Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, during the confirmation hearing before the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee.

President Reagan last month nominated Cavazos, the president of Texas Tech University, to replace of ten-confrontational Education Secretary William J. Bennett. Confirmation of Cavazos, a registered Democrat, would make him the first Hispanic to serve in a president's Cabinet.

Committee Chairman Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., attacked the administration for cutting education programs, but he said he was impressed and reassured by Cavazos' testimony that he would fight for increased spending and for making the Education Department a vigorous advocate of education for all.

"Your responses have been enormously helpful and I look forward to supporting you now," Kennedy said.

"I'm going to do everything we can to assure an early confirmation."

Cavazos, 61, told Kennedy that federal financial aid had been vital to Texas Tech and disagreed with some of Bennett's positions, including the secretary's claim that bilingual education had been a failure.

Bennett declared in 1985 that there was no evidence that the Bilingual Education Act had helped children, but Cavazos said: "I believe there has been a tremendous amount of success across a long period of time."

Cavazos, the son of a foreman on the huge King Ranch in South Texas, was praised at the hearing as a hands-on educator and a consistent friend of education.

Hatch told the committee that Cavazos had "gilt-edged credentials" and Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., said he was "eminently qualified" and had been a "consistent friend of education."

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, called Cavazos "living proof the American dream is alive and well in Texas and throughout the nation."

Cavazos was the first Hispanic to serve as president of Texas Tech. He also serves as the president of its medical school, but is not a medical doctor.

Hightower says farmers not to blame for prices

AUSTIN (AP) — Farmers don't deserve the blame for increases in food prices, said Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower, who Friday released results of a summer-long price survey.

The Texas Department of Agriculture, in visiting 39 grocery stores across the state every two weeks all summer, said it found that prices on 26 of 36 food items checked had gone up.

"The farmer should not get the blame for this, because the farm share of food items like bread, cereals and grain has increased only slightly, and the farm share of beef and pork products has significantly declined," Hightower said.

Price increases for grain-based food products were not attributable to the drought and not related to crop price changes, Hightower said. He said consumers got no benefit from falling beef and pork prices at the farm level, and some of the more processed poultry products showed price increases larger than the farm cost would justify.

Meat processors have said it takes time for price changes to show up at the retail level.

Among the findings of the survey were that the cost of a pound of wieners increased from $2.25 to $2.42 from June 24 to August 19 for a particular brand, while the farm price dropped 2 cents.

It found the price of a pound of boneless chicken breasts increased from $3.37 to $3.56, while the farm price increased 6 cents. During the same time period, the survey found the price for an 18-ounce box of corn flakes increased from $1.76 to $1.81 for one name brand, but the farm price fell 1 cent.

Pampa firm to build rigs for Soviets

DALLAS (AP) — A $36.6 million contract for 10 workover rigs for the Soviet Union has been awarded to IRI International Corp., a Pampa, Texas, joint venture of Dresser Industries Inc. and Ingersoll-Rand Co.

The contract, the first rig order awarded to a U.S. company by the Soviet Union in recent years, is one of the largest orders since oil prices started falling in 1982. The Soviet Union is the largest oil- and gas-producing nation in the world.

IRI International will build 10 self-propelled 15,000-foot workover rigs especially designed and manufactured to handle drilling and workover of oil and gas wells in extreme cold.

With the design, workers also will be able to detect and remove hydrogen sulfide and carbon dioxide gases from well sites.

The rigs, to be manufactured in Pampa and tested and inspected in Houston, are expected to be delivered in 1989 to the Tenghuiz and Karachagan fields. The company also will provide technical training for crews.

Negotiations leading up to the awarding of the contract were supported by Dresser's long-standing relationships with Soviet officials, said Charles M. White, IRI International vice president.

White said the last sizable rig contract awarded to the company was from China. "That was four or five years ago," he said.

Government bans sale of snake, dog meat during Summer Games

By BARRY RENFREW

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Seoul gourmets continue to enjoy dog stew and Korean Olympic stars have been consuming barrels of snake soup despite government attempts to ban the traditional delicacies during the Summer Games.

The government has outlawed sales in Seoul of dog meat, snake, blood worm soup and other exotic dishes to avoid offending foreigners during the Olympics, which begin Sept. 17. Officials said visitors might be disgusted by the unusual culinary offerings and Koreans would be called barbaric.

But the ban has had little or no effect on Seoul restaurants or the eating habits of their customers. Dog meat is still a lunchtime favorite in many backstreet eateries. "Even the government officials eat it. They just tell us not to let foreigners see," said one restaurant owner who spoke on condition of anonymity.

"The number of customers for dog has not dwindled. Not at all," he said with a big smile.

Korean athletes training for the Olympics have been eating dog, snakes and deer antlers to help build up their strength and stamina. Boxers, wrestlers and others believe eating dog and snake will give them the endurance and strength of the animals.

Seoul newspapers reported the Korea Amateur Hockey Association provided the country's women's Olympic team with $28,000 worth of snake soup. Association officials declined to comment.

Star player Kim Kye-sook was quoted by The Korea Herald as saying, "I was so surprised when the association officials brought the snake soup to us. But after taking the soup, I felt much stronger."

Olympic soccer star Choi Soon-ho was quoted as saying he ate 500 snakes as part of his summer training.

The Korean Amateur Wrestling Federation provided funds to the Olympic wrestling team to buy snake soup and "kaesaju," a mixture of dog meat and herbs that builds strength, newspapers reported.

Officials say a ban was imposed on dog meat in Seoul about five years ago because the government feared dog restaurants would offend Westerners and create an image of Koreans eating lovable pets.

Sales continued, and restaurant owners say city officials recently repeated warnings not to serve dog during the Olympics. But they said officials told them restrictions would be eased after the Games.

A senior official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the ban backfired by focusing attention on the dog meat issue. He said it also stirred protests from many Koreans about ridiculing national tradition.

"The French eat snails and horses and everyone says they are great eaters. Why shouldn't we eat dog meat?" he said.

Koreans say dogs used for eating are specially raised just like cattle. They bridle at suggestions that pets are eaten and say they love and care for dogs as much as anyone.

A restaurant owner, who takes pride in his own special recipe for dog stew, said the food was a traditional part of Korean cooking and a part of the nation's culture. The meat is seasoned with garlic and other spices and usually served as stew.

"How can our indigenous habits be cast away in a day," the man said. "I'm sure this will not perish forever by any means."

Seoul municipal officials conceded the ban was very difficult to impose and it has had little impact. Dog meat restaurants are still legal in the rest of the country.

Restaurant owners caught selling dog meat three times in a year have their licenses confiscated, officials said. No statistics were available on the number of cases prosecuted by the city.

"You tell us where they are selling dog food and we will send an inspector," said a Health Department official.

Raw sewage pouring into Bangladesh's rivers

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Patients with flood-related diseases clog the hospitals of Dhaka, and millions of gallons of raw sewage is being poured into stagnant waters where children swim and people wade.

Water levels in major rivers continued falling Friday but remained far above flood stage, thwarting relief efforts. The floods have covered three-quarters of Bangladesh, and up to one-fourth of its 110 million people are homeless.

Helicopters can land only in dry areas, and even short distances are difficult by boat.

Dhaka newspapers reported 101 more deaths in 24 hours and put the total at 1,402. The government count remained at 609 and is considered far too low.

The International Red Cross on Friday said by its count the flooding claimed 637 lives.

The secretary-general of the Bangladesh Red Crescent, Ali Quoreshi, said the health situation is "not yet alarming." Diarrhea cases have increased but this was not unexpected, the League of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies quoted him as saying by telephone from Dhaka.

The government health center said 135,537 diarrhea cases have been reported nationwide, including at least 8,254 among Dhaka's 6 million people.

Official statistics put the death toll from diarrhea at 93 across the country, but reports of illness and death come only from areas that can communicate with the capital.

Health officials estimated 40 million gallons of raw sewage a day was being dumped into stagnating flood waters where children swim for fun and adults wade to food markets and relief centers.

Doctors at the International Center for Diarrheal Disease Control said the number of patients admitted has more than doubled since Dhaka was flooded two weeks ago.

They said 376 patients, most of them babies and small children, were admitted to the hospital in the previous 24 hours compared with an average 155 a day during all of August. Floods began in June with the monsoon season, abated, then became devastating late last month.

Cots with green plastic sheets filled the wards and halls of the center, which is financed by foreign donors.

Rajia Begum sat cross-legged on a cot tending her 9-day-old son, not yet named. The whites of her eyes were yellow with jaundice, which Dr. M.D. Abdus Salam said probably was caused by hepatitis.

She brought her wan infant to the hospital three days ago, after neighbors with a boat rescued them from her flooded home.

Abdus Salam, chief physician at the hospital, said the baby's chances of survival were good because he received medical attention in time.

The diarrhea center pioneered the manufacture of a simple saline rehydration solution in Bangladesh, and in normal times supplies it to other hospitals. Abdus Salam said Friday, however, that the lab now works around the clock just to supply the center's own needs.

Iranian protester pours gasoline over his head

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — An Iranian poured gasoline over his head and critically burned himself Friday as hundreds of other Iranians rallied a few blocks away to denounce the execution of dissidents in their homeland.

Mehrdad Imen, 32, burned himself outside the United Nations building at 42nd Street and First Avenue in New York at about noon as his compatriots held a protest in a park across from the U.N., police said.

It was not immediately clear if Imen's actions were related to the protest taking place at Dag Hammarskjold Plaza at 47th Street.

Imen was listed in critical condition at the burn center at New York University Hospital with burns over 100 percent of his body, hospital officials said.

The demonstration was assembled by the People's Mujahadeen, a group of Iranian exiles dedicated to overthrowing the government of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

The People's Mujahadeen says nearly 1,210 Iranian dissidents have been executed in Iran since mid-summer, when Tehran suddenly accepted a U.N. Security Council call for a cease-fire in is nearly 8-year-old war against Iraq.

A statement from the group said Tehran is trying to break the political opposition because Iran's acceptance of the cease-fire, which began Aug. 20, shows that the religious rulers of Iran were pursuing a lost cause in the war.

Amnesty International, the London-based human rights organization, on Sept. 2 appealed to its members to pressure Tehran to halt the recent series of executions.

Amnesty International said most victims of the campaign were members of the People's Mujahadeen, but about 20 supporters of other Iranian opposition groups were also reported to have been executed.

The respected human rights organization did not estimate how many people had been executed, but said a ban on family visits to political prisoners in Evin Prison in Tehran "fueled speculation that hundreds of political prisoners have been executed."

Amnesty also noted that Iranian official news media said 15 People's Mujahadeen members were executed Aug. 5.

Small, garage rock bands keep dreams of stardom alive

By LOUISE GREGG

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — In a small rented building with sound-proofed walls, the heavy metal rock band Ariocho practices every night.

"This is where it all begins," said Lance Warner, lead guitarist, as he talked confidently of the band's future success.

In an even smaller sound-proofed building behind a Wichita Falls business, another heavy metal band, Obscene Jester, holds forth each night. Lead guitarist Dee Kinnett said, "We want to accomplish something and I think we have a good shot."

Since the mid-1960s when the Beatles and Rolling Stones invaded our culture, rock 'n' roll garage bands have sprung up across America like so many musical dandelions. They all have dreamed of making the big time.

The Mammals, for example, dominated the Wichita Falls rock scene in the late '60s. Members included Larry Lebow, vocalist; Gary Gregg, rhythm guitar; Conner McCaslin, bass; and David Holcomb, lead guitar. Jim Easterling played drums.

Lebow and Gregg now are Wichita Falls businessmen and Holcomb is orchestra director at Wichita Falls High School. "We were a hard-driving rock 'n' roll party band. We played for fraternity bashes in the college era," said Gregg, "and fronted for big-name bands. We were on the verge of the big time when the band broke up. We had an offer to tour nationally when everyone went separate ways after graduation."

Pure rock 'n' roll often uses keyboards, whereas heavy metal depends on a combination of drums, bass and guitar. And unlike rock bands of the late '60s, who imitated the sounds of such performers as the Beatles, Bo Diddley, Chuck Berry, Bobby Vee and Elvis Presley, Ariocho and Obscene Jester concentrate on original music.

"We play all original material, all our own stuff," said Brian Speer, vocalist for Ariocho. Other members of Ariocho, all in their 20s, include Ray Hamel, drummer; Ross Luttrell, bass; and Lee Alderson and Warner, lead guitar.

Each night, Ariocho's high voltage sounds are contained within the cramped spaces of its small building. The frantic and fast beat of drums, the metallic brush of cymbals, the solid, vibrating sounds of guitars and sometimes feedback from an amp plus the lyrics of Speer make up the band's performance.

"Ariocho is a character in a series of fantasy books," said Hamel. "Our music is based on these science fiction novels."

"We are planning to enter the music business on a higher level than by going through the clubs," said Warner. "Our plans are to go into a recording studio and make records that will be played nationwide. We plan to skip the little clubs and go into the bigger clubs. We want to open for large, well-known bands."

Obscene Jester musicians include, besides Kinnett, Ramiro Noriega, lead guitar; Steve Norman, bass; David Norman, drummer; and Sam Stovall, vocalist. Kinnett and Noriega are 17, David Norman, 20, and Steve Norman and Stovall, 23.

"We want people to know who we are," said Kinnett, "to buy our records. We want to be able to put out albums. We want to get a demo out. That's why we're putting our money away."

"We're aggressive rock, a good party rock 'n' roll band. We're not into glam or trash. We're kind of in between," he said.

The show they put on features the fret board wizardry of Kinnett, the laid-back style of vocalist Stovall, the pulsating thunder of the drummer and the cohesive style of Noriega and Norman.

Ariocho musicians dress in ragged jeans or red pants, cut-off T-shirts, high-top tennis shoes or boots. The bean-pole thin Speer wears all black: pants, shirt and hat over his thick, straggly blond hair. He may not be Ozzy Osborne, but he clutches the mike and writhes and wriggles in the spotlight with the same visible energy that characterizes heavy metal's most famous performer.

Obscene Jester's originals deal with biblical prophecies. "We're against drugs," said Kinnett. "Heavy drugs are out." That element is vanishing from rock bands entirely, said the musicians.

Vacant lot in Bay City man's home

BAY CITY, Texas (AP) — Benito Gonzales' home is carpeted with dirt, his closet is nothing more than a rope strung from two branches of a tree, and his bed is an old car — his only shelter from the unpredictable cries of Mother Nature.

Gonzales, 62, moved to a vacant lot on Avenue K in Bay City almost two years ago. His brother, Victor Gonzales, owns the property that Benito now calls home.

In broken English, Gonzales explains that he is trying to teach himself to read "the language" he was never taught in the little Spanish-speaking school he attended.

Gonzales sits in his shaded chair housed underneath two trees and puts on his glasses to proudly demonstrate his new skill.

"The small pig likes to eat," he reads.

"See, he's hungry," Gonzales says laughing and pointing to the picture of a pig in the book.

He said he found the book — which is not only teaching him to read but is helping him speak better English — in the garbage.

Gonzales said he is also trying to read the paper but "it is hard."

He has a large, plastic bucket of water he uses when washing his hands and an old, green wine bottle holds his clean drinking water.

"It's nice out here," Gonzales says, while washing his hands in the bucket of water. "It's a good place to live."

He says he has good neighbors, although Gonzales doesn't really know them. "I don't know what they think about me."

Neighbor Albert Alameda says he does not know Gonzales but he likes having him for a neighbor.

"He's a pretty good neighbor," Alameda says. "He minds his own business, stays to himself."

Gonzales says he is content with his way of life.

"I like living anywhere," he says. "This is a good place because we eat, first place and we working, second place."

"I like any place. A big town, a small town," Gonzales says.

He says he has never been married and does not think he will ever meet the right woman.

"Nobody lives with me," Gonzales says. "Just me and my dogs."

He says his two dogs — Blackie and Coyote — are his best friends.

"When I got nothing to do I taught them to shake hands and bring me something," Gonzales says, walking over to Coyote with a ball. "He likes to play ball all the time."

He says he receives no government aid.

Gonzales says he walks around the town and collects aluminum cans for money.

"Everyday I collect cans," he says. "I can do easy work. We have to eat."

Gonzales says he suffers from a hernia so he cannot do very strenuous work. However he says he is willing to work odd jobs to make money and eventually hopes to have enough money for an operation.

He says he never goes hungry and most often eats cheese and bread.

"I got two of these for $1," Gonzales boasts, holding a loaf of bread.

He says he feeds his dogs scraps he finds in the trash.

Presently, Gonzales is on parole for shooting a man 26 years ago who he says was trying to steal his money.

"He tried to (rob) me," Gonzales says. "I had $500 in my pocket and I told him he not my wife."

Anita Garza, Gonzales' niece, lives in a small house on the back of the property. He says he does not live there because the home is too small, but he shares the bathroom. Ms. Garza says her father, Gonzales' brother, is building a house on the property that will include a bed for her uncle.

Gonzales has a weathered map with circles around some of the places he has lived in Texas — Robstown, Corpus Christi, Hebbronville, San Diego and Realitos where he was born.

Gonzales stresses that he is happy with his life.

"It's a free country for everybody," Gonzales says, smiling.

Birthday spent up in air

PITTSFIELD, Maine (AP) — Ruth Schoonover's birthday had its ups and downs.

The parachutist from Orono celebrated her 30th on Monday with 30 jumps from a plane.

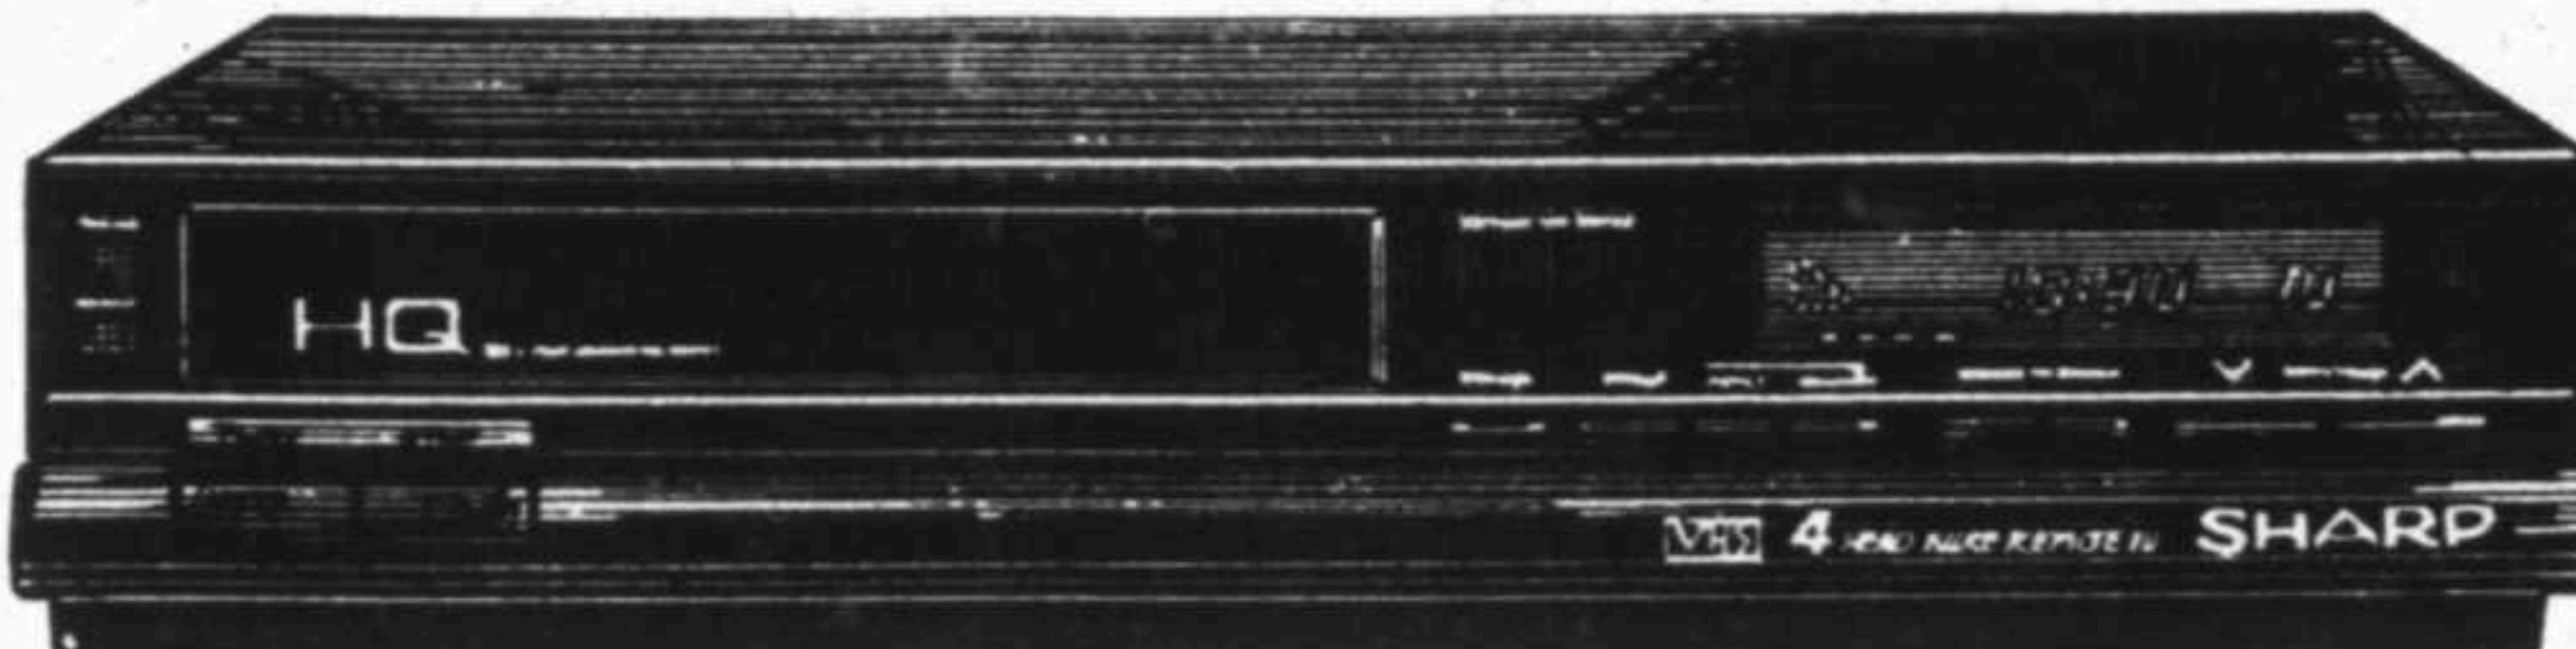

Alternately jumping, re-rigging, and taking off to jump again, Schoonover spent the afternoon and early evening performing the feat at the Pittsfield airport.

At one point in the day she reached a turnaround rate of eight jumps an hour, dropping about 3,000 feet at a time.

Rebels crack win column

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

Ferris Strambler ran for three touchdowns and amassed 180 yards rushing as the Midland Lee Rebels defeated the Del Rio Rams 28-6 Friday night at Memorial Stadium.

The victory was especially sweet for the Rebels after last week's season-opening loss to Killeen.

Friday night's game was altogether different from the killer in Killeen, though, as the Rebels offense dominated the first half of play.

Whether head coach Earl Miller will admit it or not, the game was essentially over after Lee's first play from scrimmage when Strambler ran 75 yards for the Rebels' first score. Following Arthur Donnelly's point after, one of four on the night, the Rebels took a quick 7-0 lead.

Sixteen seconds off the scoreboard and the Rebels were in command. Just like that.

If that weren't enough, on Lee's second possession, Strambler ran for a 29 yard touchdown with 9:22 remaining in the first quarter.

Look at it this way: Strambler had run for 104 yards on two carries when the game was merely 2 1/2 minutes old.

"That was a great way to start the game," Miller said. "The kid is just a good athlete. Course he had a lot of guys blocking for him, but he can make things happen."

Strambler — who had just seven carries on the night — ambled around left end each and every time he put his hands on the ball. The junior running back had only three runs that were under seven yards. His remaining four jaunts totalled 167 yards.

On the night, he averaged 25.7 yards per carry, despite the three short runs of six, four and three yards. Take away those three carries and Strambler's average was a phenomenal 41.7 yards.

Like most running backs, though, Strambler gave credit to his blockers.

"The linemen were just opening up holes," he said. "(David) Whiteside, our fullback, was blocking and I just hit (the holes). When you're doing the right things, things just happen. The line, though, did it all."

Strambler capped off his evening with a 21 yard touchdown run with 5:15 remaining in the second quarter and Lee had taken a commanding 21-0 lead at the half.

The Rebels connected for their final score with 9:24 left in the game when senior running back David Whiteside jumped in from one yard out, capping a nine yard play which began at midfield.

Del Rio's only score came in the third quarter and highlighted a clock-eating, 85 yard drive. On the Rams' 15th play of the drive, sophomore Ronald Blanks drove in from the one. Ram quarterback Randy Womack's attempted run for a two-point conversion failed and the Del Rio point total would stand at six at game's end.

Womack was the high point of the game for Del Rio, despite completing only 9-of-19 (47-percent). The senior quarterback showed an aggressive style from beginning to end, hanging tough late in the fourth quarter when he was repeatedly battered by Lee defenders on the Rams' final, unsuccessful drive.

Blaine McNally proved a defensive powderkeg for the Rebels, recovering a fumble, preventing Womack from executing the two-point conversion and adding another 10-yard quarterback sack for the home team.

"I just read my keys and did what the coaches told me to do," McNally said. "Everything just fell into place for us."

"We worked really hard during the week, we knew what Del Rio was going to do and we just adjusted to it."

McNally consistently pressured Womack throughout the game, a strategy Miller said was planned from the outset.

Although Womack was under heavy strain from the Lee defense, a large majority of his passes failed to find receivers by wide yardage margins.

As the game wound down, Rebel senior fullback James Brown, a transfer student from Odessa Permian appeared to get things rolling again for Lee. In the last two minutes, Brown ran for 40 yards on five carries. Brown finished the game with 55 yards on nine runs.

Whiteside added 32 yards on seven carries and senior fullback Jason Fletcher finished with seven carries and 49 yards.

"They still look a little ragged," Miller said of his squad. "We make too many mental mistakes. We're not a very good football team. We've got to go to work and just get better each week. We're still far from being able to play in this district."

Estacado defeats Big Spring

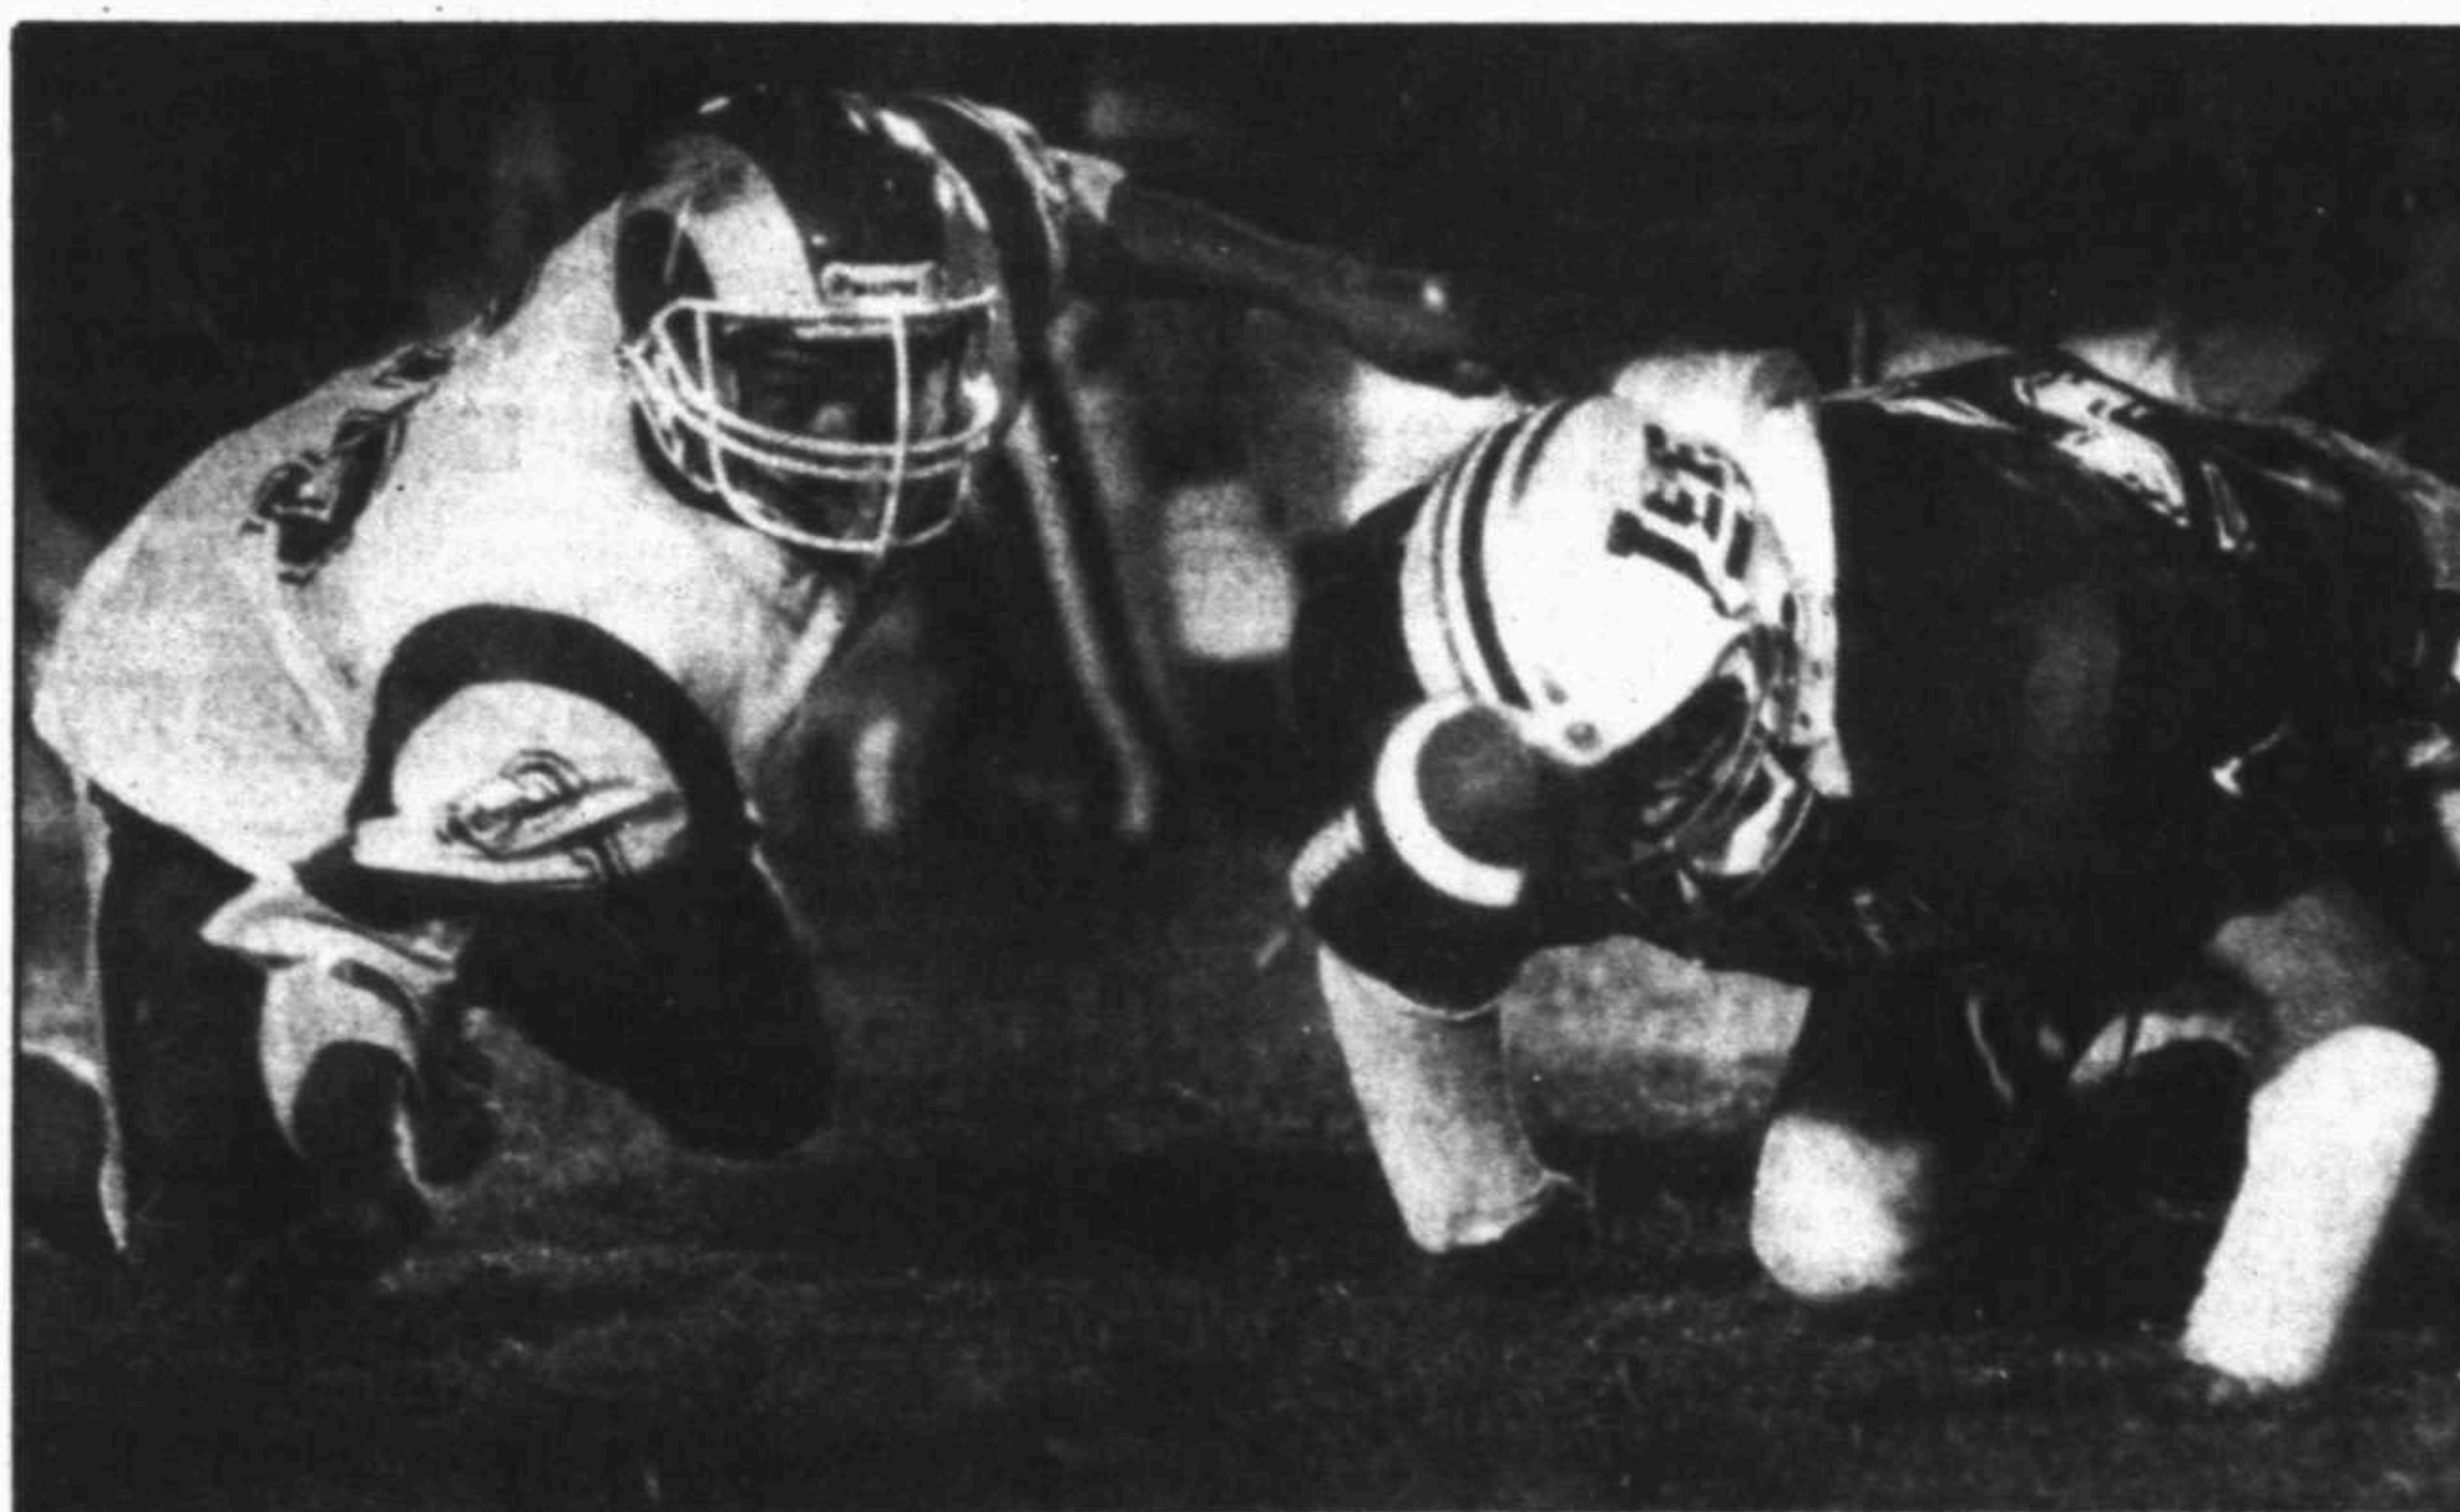

By JOHN FREY
MRT Correspondent

BIG SPRING — The Lubbock Estacado Matadors used a "team" running attack to ground the Big Spring Steers Friday night by a score of 30-18.

Prior to the game it appeared that the main task on hand was to stop the state's leading runner in 4A, Derrick Shed, Steer's coach David Thompson knew better than that. The Steer's did a good job on Shed, holding him over 100 yards under his average, the rest of the Matadors did the damage as they rolled up 382 yards on the ground as a team.

Despite the large number given up by his defense, coach Thompson was not disappointed in his team's effort. "Estacado has so much talent they are just waiting to explode on every play. We knew coming in that they could run the ball and we had to worry about more than just Shed. But our defense played hard and that is all we can ask."

The Steers got on the scoreboard first after recovering a Matador fumble on their own 28 yard line. On a fourth down play, quarterback Rance Thompson threw 15 yards to

Bulldogs smother Mustangs

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

ANDREWS — Air Dog added an infantry attack to its highly mobile offense here at Mustang Bowl Friday night as Midland High blitzed past the Class 4A Andrews Mustangs by a 35-0 margin.

The victory vaulted the Bulldogs to a perfect 2-0 mark in two games and its once suspect defense now has back-to-back shutouts.

Andrews, now 1-1 on the year, clawed and scratched at the unleashed Bulldog, but this out-manned horse couldn't keep the Bulldogs from striking long distance.

In fact, MHS exploded with four big plays in the game and one efficient 80-yard drive to light the scoreboard like a pinball machine. Andrews' stiff defense was tight most of the night, but always seemed to let the high flying Bulldogs growl in the end.

The four big plays? Dwane Roberts' 47-yard run in the first quarter to set up a one-yard TD plunge by quarterback Russell Page. Will Sowders' 46-yard run to set up another one-yard Page score in the second period. A 90-yard kickoff return by Shaun Savas to open the third quarter, a play that really broke the collective back of the Mustangs. A 62-yard pass from Page to Savas for another score. And the drive? Nine plays and 80 yards with Roberts getting the final 11 through a what looked like a black hole in space.

When all was said and done, Roberts had his first 100-yard night of the season with 112 yards rushing and he also caught four passes for an additional 47 yards and another for a two-point conversion.

"Now we have the running game going with the passing attack and everything is coming together for us," said Roberts. "Our offensive line deserves all the credit. On my touchdown run, you could have driven a truck through it."

Savas, who caught six passes in the opener last week against Monterey, only caught one pass this week, but his efforts still provided big second half plays. His kickoff return of 90 yards was "untouched. I just saw the hole the line gave me and took off."

NCAA sacks Aggies with 25 rules violations

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Texas A&M University's football team was barred from bowl games after this season and placed on two years' probation Friday after the NCAA found the school violated at least 25 rules.

The penalties, outlined in a 12-page single-space order from the National Collegiate Athletic Association, also cut the number of scholarships the school may offer incoming players next year, cut the number of visits recruits may make to the school's campus and trimmed the number of coaches who are allowed to make recruiting visits.

"There's been a lot of stress with this team over the last five or six years and now we'll take the hand that's been dealt us and go from there," athletic director and football coach Jackie Sherrill said.

"It's not an honor to be here. But you've got to deal with it. I never told you that we were pure. In college football or basketball, it's difficult to sit there and say nothing has ever happened or will happen. But it's our responsibility to make sure it doesn't happen."

The NCAA report was critical of Sherrill's lack of control over assistant coaches, athletes and "representatives of its athletic interests," meaning the school's alumni and boosters.

"The university's assistant football coaches, student athletes and representatives of its athletics' interests engaged in a variety of activities that demonstrated that these individuals had little knowledge of or regard for NCAA standards," the NCAA report said.

According to the NCAA, football prospects or their relatives were offered improper inducements or were told in such a way to imply they would receive improper induc-ments or benefits if the prospect attended Texas A&M.

"These violations for the most part appear not to have been discovered by the director of athletics, who also is the head football coach," the NCAA said without referring to Sherrill by name. "Although this individual had formally established some educational and monitoring systems, these systems did not, in fact, function in a manner that gave the institution appropriate control of its intercollegiate football program."

University President William H. Mobley said it was unlikely the school would appeal the decision.

Although he backed Sherrill, Mobley said the school's vice president for finance and administration now would have the primary responsibility for compliance auditing of the athletic program. He also said a new post of intercollegiate athletic director had been created and the new position would report to the vice president for finance and administration.

Under the order, Texas A&M will be allowed to offer 20 new scholarships for next year — a decrease of five; have 75 on-campus recruiting visits this academic year — down by 10; and only eight football coaches will be allowed to recruit off campus — down by two. The order did not include a ban on television appearances by Texas A&M.

Texas A&M originally was accused by the NCAA of 31 rules infractions and seven procedural violations. After the NCAA withdrew several allegations, A&M admitted guilt to four charges and had been awaiting word from the collegiate governing body on possible penalties.

No academic violations were cited, but among the charges was an allegation that a coach lied to NCAA investigators.

Mobley said disciplinary action had been initiated against athletic department staff found in violation of NCAA rules. No names, however, were mentioned in the NCAA order and Mobley would not identify those involved.

He did say Sherrill was not a part of the problem at Texas A&M.

Mobley said he would not name the two assistant coaches accused of infractions because school's attorneys told him the coaches still could appeal the NCAA penalties. But he said the coaches would receive no merit pay and their contracts would be reviewed at the end of the year.

Asked if the two would be retained, Mobley responded, "These are severe penalties against the institution and the individuals. If I were in their shoes, I would be uncomfortable."

In Dallas, Southwest Conference commissioner Fred Jacoby said the second-place team will represent the league in the Cotton Bowl this year if the Aggies win the conference.

The Aggies join a list of five other Southwest Conference schools the NCAA has investigated in recent years.

Other SWC schools slapped with NCAA-imposed penalties include SMU, which paid the steepest price when its 1987 season was ordered scrapped because of recruiting and payoff infractions.

Others still on probation or recently completing probation included Texas Christian, Texas and Texas Tech.

At the University of Houston, officials have until Oct. 17 to respond to a July 12 letter in which the NCAA formally notified school officials of its investigation into allegations of recruiting violations and that coaches frequently gave football players cash.

From Staff Reports

WICHITA FALLS — Tailback David Brainard scored from one-yard out with 11 seconds left in the game and Michael Emmons threw to Rob Leathers for a two-point conversion to pull the San Angelo Central Bobcats into a 21-all tie with Wichita Falls here Friday.

Leathers scored the Bobcats' first touchdown with an eight-yard run midway through the second quarter. Gabriel Camacho added a one-yard run with 2:09 left in the half, but the PAT pass failed.

Wichita Falls got a pair of touchdowns on short runs by state-ranked pole vaulter Jayson Lavender, while Gould added the other Coyote touchdown on a four-yard run with 3:20 left in the game.

And on the pass reception. "It was a play we worked on this week and all I had to do was run under the ball. Page had it right there for me."

Leading only 15-0 at the half, MHS coach Doug McCutchen felt Savas' punt return was the big play of the game.

"That really turned the momentum our way and I don't know when the last time we had a kickoff return go our way. At least, I can't remember it," said McCutchen.

And that "Dog defense didn't allow Andrews inside the 20-yard line all night with defensive end Ronnie Forest, defensive back David Worley, lineman Jeff Rashall, linebacker Brandon Govan and linebacker Jesse Perez forming a wall that the Mustang Wishbone couldn't penetrate, gaining only 178 yards of total offense.

"We started the year confident that our defense could do the job," said Forest. "The shutout last week pumped us up and this one pumps us up even more. We're looking for another one next week. If we keep going like this, we might be unbeatable."

McCutchen felt that, "We were a little more confused this week than last week, but the Andrews defense was giving us some problems by moving their free safety to the strong side. That created some problems for us because they hadn't shown that before. Still, we were able to come up with some big plays and I was proud of that."

Andrews' leading rusher was the feisty Michael Hernandez with 43 yards and had some defensive steals yards defensive end Ronnie Forest and linebacker Teddy Jennings.

They put a lot of pressure on the Bulldogs all night, but the big play offense was the difference.

"I felt like we had a good defense," noted Andrews coach W.T. Stapler.

"I didn't think they could run inside on us, but they did. We just don't match up with the kind of skill people they have."

Is MHS better than a year ago when Stapler's Mustangs lost to the Bulldogs? Stapler insists so.

"They scored 26 points on us last year with eight turnovers. We have one tonight and they score 35. And whether it looked like it or not, we're a better team than we were a year ago. Midland High has too many weapons and they are very talented."

MHS will have a home date Friday against Lubbock Coronado in an effort to end non-district play at 3-0. Andrews will regroup against Class 3A Lamesa, but Stapler says, "We're a really banged up football team right now and really need an open date."

The Bulldogs don't want any kind of open date with things clicking like they have been the last two weeks. Air Dog now has an infantry.

tight end Joe Downey for the first of his three touchdowns passed. The kick failed leaving the score at 6-0.

After a short kickoff that was recovered at the 43 yard line the Matadors took to the ground. With Shed doing most of the work they drove 57 yards on 12 running plays with quarterback Reginald Essix going in from two yards out. Cory Flores kick gave Estacado the lead 7-6.

Big Spring had a chance to take the lead before halftime but a Matador interception in the end zone halted the drive. The Matadors then took advantage of the turnover as they drove to the four yard line and with 27 seconds left in the half settled for a Flores 20 yard field goal to put the halftime score at 10-6.

Neither team could score in the third quarter but only 44 seconds into the fourth the Matadors stretched their lead as Robert Johnson, who was in for Shed, ran in from 24 yards out. The Matadors lead was now up to 10 at 16-6.

With 8:17 left in the game the Steers took over on their own 35 yard line and wasted no time getting into the end zone. On their very first play Thompson threw 65 yards to John Wofford to pull Big Spring within four at 16-12. After the kickoff and two plays the Matadors turned the ball over on a fumble but the Steers could not capitalize as they returned the favor fumbling the ball back.

Reagan Owls scuttle Rangers, 14-6

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

GREENWOOD — The Reagan County Owls used a balanced attack and a ballhawking defense to stymie the Greenwood Rangers 14-6 in non-district football action here Friday.

The Owls, 2-0, erased a scoreless tie with a nine-play, 79-yard drive in the second quarter and put the game away with a 12-play, 60-yard movement in the fourth quarter. Greenwood threatened late, scoring one touchdown and recovering a fumble deep in Owl territory, but the Rangers couldn't capitalize enough to avert their second loss of the season.

Nevertheless, Greenwood coach Bob Purser noted marked improvement in his Rangers.

"We played really hard on the defensive front," Purser said. "We just didn't quite play well enough to win."

Reagan County mentor Ronnie Reeger likewise saw marked improvement in the Rangers, a 50-12 victim of the Owls last year.

"They're a lot stronger than they have been in the past," Reeger said. "Our kids deserved to win, but we're a long way from where we need to be."

Greenwood got off on the right foot on their first defensive series, stopping the Owls for a total of one yard on their first three plays from scrimmage, primarily on the efforts of safety Randy Donnell, who closed several holes in the early minutes.

Donnell later completed six-of-14 passes for 89 yards, including a five-yard strike to Randy Marquez for the Rangers' only touchdown.

Reagan County put together a 75-yard drive later in the first quarter, but the Owls were stopped when Greenwood's Dave Dixon recovered a Roland Saldibar fumble on the Ranger 13-yard-line just seconds into the second quarter.

The Rangers would have no such luck later in the period. Reagan County quarterback Rodolfo Guerrero went into the air for 80 of his 124 passing yards, including a short pass to split end Alfonso Valadez that the latter turned into a 53-yard play. Valadez finished the game with five catches for 108 yards, as well as punting five times for a 40-yard average.

Sophomore halfback Willie Black capped the drive with a one-yard run with 4:39 left in the half.

Guerrero credited his line with giving him plenty of time to find his receivers.

"We kind of figured the deep routes would be open," Guerrero said. "But I had several people open on the short routes, instead."

"It was a just a matter of picking the right one."

Greenwood stopped the Owl passing game cold in the second half, however, as Guerrero was zero-for-five after the halftime break. But that's when the Owls finally got their running game going after rushing for only 61 yards in the first half.

Neither team threatened in the third period, but Reagan County got a break late in the period when Saldibar covered a Donnell fumble at the Ranger 40-yard line with about two minutes left in the quarter.

Helped by a personal foul penalty on Greenwood that negated a four-yard loss by Saldibar, the Owls kept the ball on the ground for all 14 plays on the second drive, finally scoring on a one-yard plunge by Saldibar with 9:48 left in the game. Saldibar added his second extra point of the night to complete Owl scoring.

Greenwood wasn't done, however. Marquez got the Rangers going with a 27-yard return of the ensuing kickoff, and Donnell hit Sean Holcomb and Tom Marvin for passes of 33 and 19 yards, respectively, to put the Rangers inside the Owl 10.

After a couple of busted plays, Donnell then hit a wide-open Marquez in the left side of the end zone for the Rangers' only point with eight minutes left. The extra-point pass failed, however.

The Rangers appeared to have another shot when Jimmy O'Brian recovered another Saldibar fumble at the Owl 31 with 7:20 left in the game, but Ranger fullback Jimmy Cox fumbled on the next play and Russell Adams got it back for the Owls.

The game was marred by 14 fumbles, many on muffed kicks. Each team lost only three muffs, however. Reagan County has an open date next week, while Greenwood travels to Stanton.

Aggies set signs on SWC

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — The Texas Aggies will strive to win their fourth consecutive Southwest Conference title although it will be an unofficial one, quarterback Bucky Richardson said Friday.

The Aggies were placed on two-years' probation for recruiting violations Friday and will be unable to participate in a post-season bowl following this season.

"There's nothing we can do about the probation so why should we sit around and grieve about it," Richardson said.

The Aggies, 0-2 this season, won't lose any incentive by the ruling, Richardson said.

"I think this who decision will actually boost us up," Richardson said. "Sure it was a little disheartening but we can still win 10 games and that's what we're going to try to do."

Linebacker Adam Lob said the Aggies would bounce back.

"The initial blow was hard but winning the conference title is the main thing," Bob said. "Even though we won't be the acknowledged champions, that's what we're striving for."

If the Aggies should win their fourth straight conference title, the second place team would represent the Southwest Conference in the Cotton Bowl on New Year's Day.

"We've got to perform at a certain level to be at peace with ourselves," linebacker Basil Jackson said. "We believe we're good enough to win it and we're going to play to that level."

Bosox widen AL lead

BOSTON (AP) — Mike Greenwell hit a two-run triple in the first inning and Wade Boggs had his 55th multi-hit game with a homer and a double as the Boston Red Sox beat the Cleveland Indians 7-4 Friday to take a 2½-game lead over Detroit in the American League East.

Dwight Evans also homered, his 15th, as the Red Sox won for the fourth time in their last five games and improved their home record to 46-23, best in the majors.

Staked to a six-run lead, Mike Boddicker, 11-15 overall and 5-3 since being acquired from Baltimore, got the victory.

Boggs, aiming for his fifth batting title, also drew his 104th and 105th walks in addition to his 186th and 187th hits of the season. He needs just 13 more hits with 22 games left to become the first player in this century to reach 200 hits in six consecutive seasons.

Boggs began the first with a walk off Rich Eitz, 8-5, and one out later, Dwight Evans singled. Greenwell then lined a triple to the 420-foot mark in center for his 108th and 109th runs batted in. When shortstop Jay Bell's relay throw to third went into the Cleveland dugout, Greenwell scored for a 3-0 lead.

Boggs led off the third with a line drive into the left-field screen for his fifth homer, his first since July 17. The Red Sox made it 6-0 in the fourth, chasing Yett. Jody Reed grounded a double inside the third base bag and scored on a single by Rich Gedman. Boggs doubled off the scoreboard in left and right-hander Mike Walker made his major league debut, replacing Yett.

Walker walked Barrett on four pitches, then walked Evans on a 3-2 count, forcing home Gedman. Walker checked the Red Sox through the sixth, then gave way to Don Gordon, who was greeted in the seventh by Evans' homer high into the screen in left.

Boddicker allowed eight hits but only one run before giving way to Dennis Lamp after Andy Allanson and Bell started the seventh with singles.

Lamp gave up an RBI single to Julio Franco to center and, after retiring Terry Francona on a bunt, surrendered a two-run single to Joe Carter and was replaced by Bob Stanley.

Stanley ended the rally, but then was replaced by Lee Smith after Brook Jacoby led off the eighth with a single. Smith finished for his 24th save.

Yankees 3, Tigers 2

NEW YORK — Claudell Washington led off the ninth inning with a home run, just New York's second hit of the game to drop the second-place Tigers 2½ games behind Boston with the Tigers' 15th loss in their last 18 games.

Washington hit his eighth home run on a 3-1 pitch from Walt Terrell, 7-13. The Yankees, held to Rickey Henderson's triple in the sixth inning, won for only the fifth time in 15 games and remained 4½ behind the Red Sox.

Dale Mohoric, 3-7, shut out Detroit on one hit for 2-3 innings for the victory.

Terrell held the Yankees hitless until the sixth when Henderson got his one-out triple on a drive that barely eluded right fielder Dwayne Murphy. Henderson then scored the tying run when he jarred the ball loose from catcher Matt Nokes after Washington's grounder to shortstop Alan Trammell.

Blue Jays 8, Orioles 1

BALTIMORE — George Bell drove in four runs and Jim Clancy, 9-13, allowed seven hits in eight innings as the Blue Jays won their seventh victory in eight games. In his last seven games, Bell has three four-RBI games.

Twins 1, White Sox 0

The crew of the Stars and Stripes celebrates America's Cup victory after beating New Zealand challenger at San Diego.

U.S. sweeps America's

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Dennis Conner won his third America's Cup on Friday in a breeze, completing a 2-0 whitewash of New Zealand. But the angry series is headed for a final decision in a courtroom.

Sailing at times faster than the wind, Conner drove his 60-foot catamaran across the finish line miles ahead of his huge Kiwi rival.

The race was a repeat of the first match Wednesday, with the 132-foot New Zealand monohull hopelessly out of it after the first few minutes.

New Zealand's owner, Michael Fay, who sued twice to become challenger in a race the Americans did not want, said before Friday's race he would go back to court regardless of the outcome. He claims America's Cup rules outlaw a match between a catamaran and a monohull.

New York State Supreme Court Judge Carmen Ciparik, trustee of the deed of gift of the Cup, ruled in Fay's favor when he sued for the right to race for the Cup. But she ruled against him when he sued to block the San Diego Yacht Club from racing a cat against his boat, saying the Cup should be decided first on the water.

Conner won the start by a whopping 29 seconds and lengthened his lead as a light westerly picked up as the race progressed.

After the wind piped up to 15 knots to make the last two legs reaches, Stars & Stripes was flying at an estimated 18 knots with her solid sail, basically an airplane wing set on end.

Conner drove his catamaran over the finish line to a horn-blowing salute from some 1,000 spectator yachts. New Zealand, with Fay aboard as part of the deck ballast gang, finished an anticlimactic 21 minutes, 10 seconds in Conner's wake.

Conner easily took a 1-0 lead in the best-of-three match Wednesday. The man who won the Cup in 1980 and again in 1987 after losing it in 1983, the first American to do so in the Cup's long history, was a no-bets choice barring a breakdown aboard his intricate speedster.

The weather over the 39-mile triangular course out on the Pacific Ocean was far calmer than events ashore. During a stormy news conference after the first race, Kiwi tactician Peter Lester accused Conner of "making a mockery" of the race by not sailing Stars & Stripes at top speed.

Conner replied angrily: "I guess when he's won four America's Cups he can tell me how to do it."

While not saying as much in so many words, the Kiwis apparently think Conner is sailing just slow enough to avoid proving Fay's protests that the cat-monohull encounter is a mismatch illegal under the ancient Cup rules.

Last week, Mike Ditka accused the Chicago media of being "negative" for their criticism of the team he was taking into the season.

Now, like any good member of the coaching fraternity, he's being negative himself.

"You can't judge on one game," Ditka says of the Bears' 34-7 opening-game victory over Miami in which they controlled the ball more than 75 percent of the time and rushed for 262 yards.

OK, let's try for two. Chicago goes into the Hoosierdome to take on the Colts, whose run defense is better than Miami's but still allowed Houston 178 rushing yards. They also run the ball better, as long as Eric Dickerson hangs on to it.

Nonetheless, the Bears are favored by two points, one of two road favorites this week, which shows that the oddsmakers still respect them, even if the Chicago media don't.

Assuming that each team runs well and giving the Colts the home field advantage, consider these two factors: Chicago passes better and forces turnovers.

Sports in Brief

Gallagher sets pace

FRANKLIN, Wis. (AP) — Jim Gallagher, who had to win a playoff in the qualifying round to enter the tournament, shot a second straight 67 Friday to tie Canadian Dave Barr for the lead after two rounds of the $700,000 Greater Milwaukee Open.

Gallagher and Barr, who shot a 68, were tied at 10-under-par 134 after two trips around the 7,030-yard Tuckaway CC course.

Barr and Corey Pavin shared the lead going into Friday's round, but Pavin slipped to an even-par 72 and dropped four shots back.

After four years on the PGA Tour, Gallagher lost his Tour card following a poor showing in 1987. He's been limited to a handful of tournaments this year and had to win a playoff in Monday's qualifying round to make it to the GMO.

Gallagher, who started his round on the back nine, made his move after sinking a 25-foot putt for a birdie on the 415-yard No. 1. He birdied three of the final eight holes.

Donnie Hammond, who had a 69, Chip Beck, who shot a 67, Mike Sullivan, who had a 68, and Mike Bender, who had a 69, were next at 137.

2 share LPGA lead

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Colleen Walker and Susan Sanders shot 4-under-par 68's Friday to take a one-shot lead over Cathy Johnston in the opening round of the $250,000 Cellular One-Ping Golf Championship.

Walker's 68 marked her 27th sub-

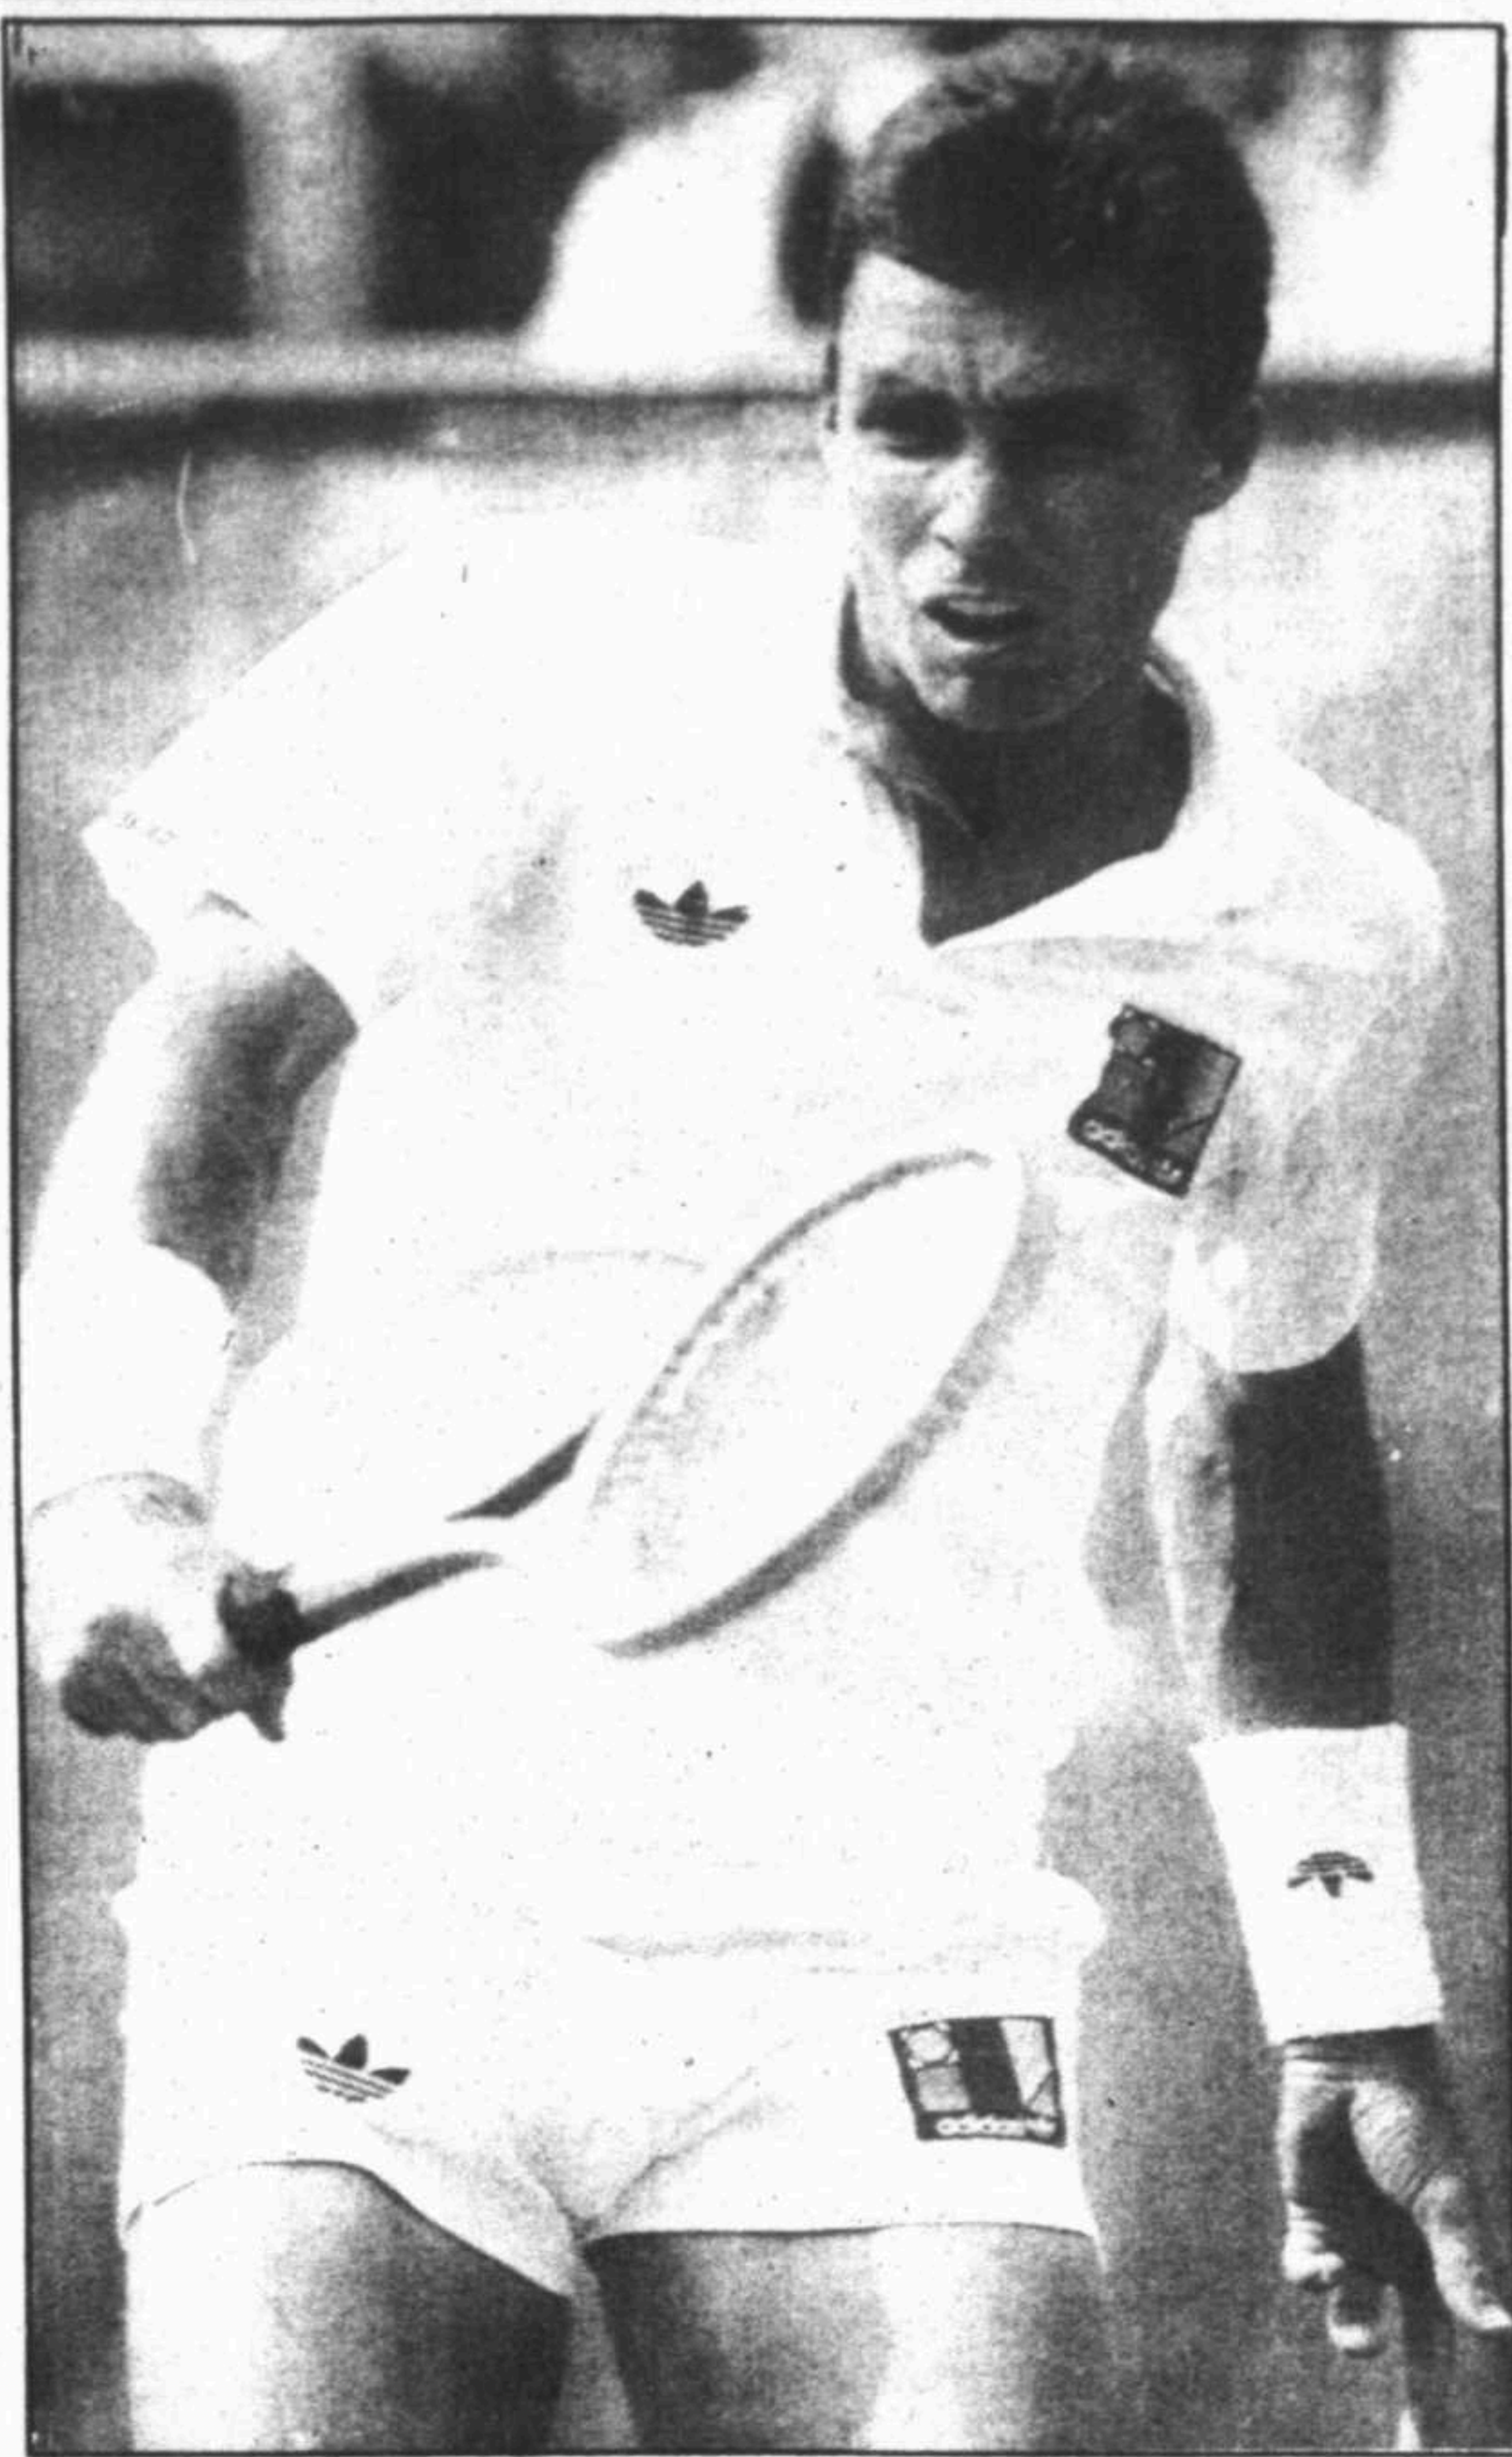

70 round of the year, tying a LPGA record.

Muffin Spencer-Devlin led a group of five golfers at 2-under-par 70. Spencer-Devlin shared the lead with Walker briefly after shooting a 3-under-par 33 on her first nine and dropping a 10-foot putt on her 10th hole for birdie.

Melissa Whitmire, Jody Rosenthal, Penny Hammel and Stephanie Farwig were tied with Spencer-Devlin at 2-under.

Cards get 'sellout'

PHOENIX (AP) — A Phoenix television station and Mesa radio station bought the remaining 3,106 tickets Friday to ensure a sellout and avoid a local television blackout of the Phoenix Cardinals-Dallas Cowboys NFL game Monday night.

Ivan Lendl...faces rising young star in Agassi.

Graf faces Sabatini in Open final

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Evert pulled out of her U.S. Open semifinal against Steffi Graf Friday because of a stomach virus, moving Graf to within one victory of the Grand Slam.

"My body feels like it's been through a war," Evert said in a statement released by the Women's International Tennis Association.

"Every muscle and joint aches. Physically, I couldn't go out and play. I don't have any energy."

Graf, who is trying to become the first Grand Slam winner in 18 years, will play her doubles partner, Gabriela Sabatini, in Saturday's women's final.

Sabatini, the fifth seed, beat No. 11 Zina Garrison 6-4, 7-5 in the semifinals Friday.

But the match was overshadowed by the withdrawals of Evert and Rick Leach, who was forced to pull out of the men's doubles final because of a similar virus. Leach and Jim Pugh had to default their match against Sergio Casal and Emilio Sanchez of Spain.

Graf, who had beaten Evert six straight times, said she was disappointed by the walkover.

Tournament physician Gary Wadler said Evert withdrew "with

Agassi eyes 4th straight

NEW YORK (AP) — Ivan Lendl hasn't lost at the U.S. Open in 26 matches. Andre Agassi hasn't lost anywhere in 23.

Today, something will give — either Lendl's run for a fourth consecutive Open crown or Agassi's charge for a fourth straight tournament title this summer.

Lendl, the top seed, and Agassi, rated fourth, will meet in the semifinals. Mats Wilander, the No. 2 seed who is seeking his third Grand Slam crown this year, plays unseeded Darren Cahill of Australia in the other match. The winners meet Sunday.

Agassi comes off an emotional whipping of Jimmy Connors in what many have called the passing of the torch in American men's tennis. The 18-year-old Agassi lost his only official match with Lendl in 1987 at Stratton Mountain, Vt. They also split a pair of exhibitions this year.

"I think that we both learned more about each other's games, but you can never really count on exhibitions much," Agassi said. "We played in L.A. and he beat me 6-4, 6-2. Then we played in Reno and I beat him 7-6, 6-3."

Agassi is making his second Grand Slam semifinal appearance this year. He lost to Wilander at the French.

Wilander won the Australian and French Opens.

"I have the confidence to win here," said Wilander, who lost to Lendl in last year's U.S. Open final. "Last year, I was hitting the ball better but I was not sure I could win. This time, in my mind I feel I'm a better player."

Wadler said Leach had a 103-degree fever, while Evert had a temperature of 101. The doctor said both players were also suffering from vomiting and diarrhea.

The WITA statement said Evert, the third seed, became sick Wednesday night and has not been out of her hotel room since.

It was the first time that a man or woman had withdrawn from a singles semifinal or final at the U.S. championships since the abolition of the challenge round, which allowed defending champions to automatically advance to the final.

The last men's challenge round was played in 1911, while the final women's challenge round was played in 1918.

Evert's withdrawal also meant that for the first time since 1974 the women's final would include neither her nor Martina Navratilova.

Sabatini, the only player to beat Graf this year, is the only challenger left who can stop the 19-year-old West German from becoming the first player since Margaret Court in 1970 to sweep the four major championships in the same year.

Sabatini lost her first 11 matches against Graf, but this year she has won two of their three meetings.

Oilers' Childress has simple outlook

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers defensive end Ray Childress has a simple outlook on life in the National Football League.

"You play this game day to day, and you never know when your day will come for an injury or an award," Childress said.

This week was Childress' turn for an award.

He was named the AFC Defensive Player of the Week for his performance in last week's 17-14 victory over Indianapolis.

Now he'll try to lead the Oilers defense once again 3 p.m. Sunday in their home opener in the Astrodome against the Los Angeles Raiders.

Childress had six tackles against the Colts and 2½ sacks and he had crucial back to back plays in the fourth quarter, tackling Eric Dickerson for a 3-yard loss and sacking quarterback Gary Hogeboom for a 9-yard loss.

"I just wanted to get started on the right foot in the regular season," Childress said. "Indianapolis ran it up on us last season. We really wanted to do something about that."

Childress had only six sacks in 17 games last season but he thinks the Oiler defensive line is playing well despite the lack of sacks.

The Oilers had six sacks against the Colts. Houston hadn't recorded six sacks in a game since they had six against Buffalo in 1986.

"The problem is so many people don't know that much about football and what makes a great defensive lineman," Childress said. "They just look at the sacks and that justifies to them whether they are good or not."

The Oilers haven't beaten the Raiders since 1981 and have a string of three straight losses.

The Oilers likely will have to lean heavily on their defense with starting quarterback Warren Moon sidelined with a shoulder injury.

The defense held off Indianapolis last week and forced a fumble in overtime that set up the winning field goal.

"Our defense has played real well and primarily, that's because of two things," Childress said. "We've got a lot of great athletes on defense and secondly, we have played the same scheme for five years."

Moon suffered a broken scapula in his right shoulder in the third quarter against the Colts.

UCLA tackles Husker hex; Irish meet Wolverines in top matchups

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer

There have been a number of sure things in college football recently — Miami will beat Oklahoma, Oklahoma will beat Nebraska... and Nebraska will beat UCLA.

Fifth-ranked UCLA gets another chance to do something about that Saturday when the Bruins meet second-ranked Nebraska in the Rose Bowl (8 p.m., ABC-TV).

The day's only other pairing of Top Twenty teams finds ninth-ranked Michigan at No. 13 Notre Dame (8 p.m., CBS-TV).

Nebraska, which trailed the series 3-0 after UCLA ended its 32-game unbeaten streak in the 1972 opener, has had the Bruins' number since Tom Osborne became head coach in 1973.

Osborne's first game was a 40-13 victory over UCLA. Nebraska also won 42-10 in 1983, 42-3 in '84 (Osborne's 100th victory) and 42-33 last year, a game that was 42-17 with four minutes to play.

"WE'VE GOT to get those guys off that number (42)," UCLA's Terry Donahue says. "If we're ever going to get to a point where we're going to compete for a national championship, we've got to line up and beat Nebraska.

College Football

"The scores have been so lopsided. In the 13 years I've been a head coach, there were only about four games where we were not competitive physically. Two of those games were against Nebraska in 1983 and 1984. I thought last year, though, we played much more competitively."

Top-rated Miami is idle this week, while third-ranked Clemson entertains Furman, No. 4

Oklahoma opens at North Carolina, sixth-ranked Southern California visits Stanford, No. 7 Auburn plays host to Kentucky, eighth-ranked Georgia is at home against Texas Christian and 10th-ranked Florida State, No. 1 a week ago, tries to rebound from its 31-0 embarrassment at the hands of Miami by hosting Southern Mississippi under the lights.

In the AP Second Ten, Fullerton State is at No. 12 West Virginia, No. 14 Alabama at Temple under the lights, Rutgers at No. 15 Michigan State, Western Carolina at No. 16 South Carolina at night, No. 17 Iowa at Kansas State, No. 18 Penn State at Virginia for a night game, and No. 20 Washington at Purdue.

LSU, the No. 11 team, is idle, while No. 19 Texas lost to Brigham Young 47-6 Thursday.

UCLA-Nebraska has been billed as a battle between quarterbacks Troy Aikman of the Bruins and Steve Taylor of the Cornhuskers, who threw a school-record five touchdown passes in last year's game. But don't overlook the coaches. Osborne needs a win to reach 150 for his career and Donahue is one short of 100.

"I want to get my 100th win as soon as possible, and it would be nice to get it against Nebraska," Donahue says.

FOR THE fourth year in a row, the two winningest programs in the history of major college football will open against each other. Michigan has won the most games — 684 — and the Wolverines' .741 winning percentage is second to the .754 of Notre Dame, which is second in victories with 659.

Frogs 15-point 'dog at Georgia

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

The Southwest Conference tries to repair some image damage in non-conference football games on Saturday.

Texas' 47-6 loss to Brigham Young on Thursday night gave the league a black eye because the Longhorns were rated one of the best teams in the league this year.

Texas Christian, considered the sleeper team of the 1988 Southwest Conference football race, picked a toughie.

The Horned Frogs open against No. 8 rated Georgia on noon Saturday and the oddsmakers have rated coach Jim Wacker's crew as 15-point underdogs.

Unbeaten Baylor comes off a 27-3 victory over Nevada-Las Vegas to travel to Kansas to meet the Jayhawks of the Big Eight Conference. The Bears were 17-point favorites.

In other games on Saturday, Arizona was an eight point favorite at home against Texas Tech; Arkansas was a 19-point pick over Tulsa in Fayetteville; Indiana was a 14-point choice over Rice in Houston; and Houston was a 14-point pick over Louisiana Tech in a game at Ruston, La.

Georgia coach Vince Dooley said the Horned Frogs have him worried. The Bulldogs crushed Tennessee Baylor's James Francis, left, and Eldwin Raphael, right, were AP SWC defensive and offensive players of the week for efforts against UNLV last week.

28-17 on Saturday and Wacker called him with congratulations, saying he was rooting for Georgia.

"I can assure you that coach Wacker was not pulling for us because of any great friendship," Dooley said. "He wanted us to win so we would come in fat and happy; he didn't want us lean and hungry. TCU is as capable of being a top 10 team as 30 other teams in the nation yet nobody expects it of them."

Wacker said "It's scary to open the season this way. We are smart enough to know that not too many teams have ever escaped from between the hedges with much to brag about."

The Baylor-Kansas game will be regionally televised at 12:10 p.m. on the Raycom Network.

Senior center Bobby Sign is expected to return to the lineup for the Bears, who allowed UNLV only two first downs last week.

Arkansas beat Tulsa 30-15 last year and Ken Hatfield has a record of 4-0 against the Hurricane as coach of the Razorbacks.

Senior David Dacus will start at quarterback for the Houston Cougars in their season opener. Louisiana Tech lost 21-14 to Mississippi State last week.

Texas Tech will be trying to rebound from a 29-24 upset loss to North Texas last week. Arizona took out Oregon State 24-13 in the Sun Devils' opener.

Tech leads the series 25-3-2. "It will be hot there and what makes it hot is the kind of team they have," said Tech coach Spike Dykes. "They're darn good."

Cowboys no longer shy of wideout talent

IRVING (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys have discovered some youthful "catchers" who just might take the heat off the team's running attack.

Michael Irvin, 22, Kelvin Edwards, 24, Kelvin Martin, 23, and Ray Alexander, 26, give them as dangerous a quartet of wideouts as can be found in the NFL.

"The receivers are playing much better than I thought they would play," said Coach Tom Landry after an opening 24-21 loss to the Pittsburgh Steelers.

A year ago the Cowboys' starting wide receivers were Gordon Banks and Mike Renfro. Banks was waived and Renfro is on the injured reserve list.

The foursome of Irvin, Edwards, Alexander and Martin combined for 12 catches, 210 yards, and 2 touchdowns against the Steelers.

The average was 17.5 yards per reception.

"The way they caught the ball and moved after they caught it was real encouraging," Landry said.

Edwards, who has three years of experience, had five receptions for 93 yards before suffering a knee injury.

Irvin, the Cowboys' No. 1 draft pick from Miami, caught three passes for 73 yards, including a 35-yard touchdown catch and run.

Alexander, who has two years of experience, had three catches for 36 yards, including a touchdown reception.

Martin, a fourth round draft pick in 1987, snared one pass for eight yards.

"It's good that our wide receivers are making some big plays," Landry said. "You have to gain a reputation in this league before you draw double coverage. And if they draw a lot of attention then it will take some pressure off (running back) Herschel Walker."

Irvin had a mediocre preseason but shined on Sunday with the chips down.

"It's a learning process, that's for sure," Irvin said.

On his touchdown catch, he outfoxed two defenders to make the reception then used his speed to make it to the end zone for the touchdown.

"The first one (touchdown) in the NFL, now that was a charge," he said.

Landry said "for a rookie that was really something. If you've ever been a rookie in the NFL then you know what I'm talking about. You are

Stephen and Melanie Soulen pose at their First United Methodist Church in Meridian, Texas. Ordained United Methodist ministers, the Soulens share the responsibilities of church and home.

Couple takes sharing Scriptures to heart

MERIDIAN, Texas (AP) — Melanie and Stephen Soulen take Genesis 2:24 to heart. "Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh."

They even share one job. The Soulens both are ordained United Methodist ministers serving the First United Methodist churches in Meridian and Morgan. The two churches make up a single pastoral charge and have provided them an opportunity to share in visitation responsibilities, preaching — and raising their two young sons.

Stephen, a slim man with boy-next-door good looks, admitted to balking sometimes at housework. "I grew up in a very traditional family, and even though I've always wanted to share work, and that was easy, I find it more difficult to share in the household work," he said, with a grin.

"He's very good with the boys," said Melanie, a pretty, dark-haired woman with a thoughtful manner of speaking.

"I hate to cook," said Stephen. "In fact, my last sermon was on how much I hate to cook." Well, only part of the sermon was about aversion to cooking, he said. The sermon discussed how people taking Holy Communion often do not appreciate the price Jesus paid for that rite. He compared it with how people often do not appreciate the effort that goes into cooking a tasty meal.

For the Soulens, sharing the housework may cause tussles, but sharing the ministry does not. They've been doing it since before they were married.

They met at the Candler School of Theology at Emory University in Atlanta. Stephen grew up in Georgetown and graduated from Baylor University. He served as youth director in Hubbard and at First United Methodist Church in Woodway before entering the school during Melanie's senior year.

Melanie, an Alabama native who finished college and seminary in six years, said jokingly, "I never thought I'd marry a Texan."

She and Stephen served as associate pastors to a small Georgia church and married in 1984. They moved to Shady Dell, Ga., population 250. "Most of them were probably dogs they counted running around," said Stephen. He served as student pastor to six small Methodist churches while Melanie served as youth minister to a church in Madison, Ga. After moving to Texas and serving a large church in Temple as associates, the couple arrived in Meridian in June.

Sharing their workdays is a pleasure, they said. In Temple, "because we had to separate job areas, we didn't share as much. We were just there together," said Stephen. "Bouncing ideas off each other, that's where we find our motivation. That's where we're creative."

The job suits them because it leaves them a lot of time for family life, said Melanie.

"I guess we model as a good marriage," said said.

Mission to open doors Sunday

"A New Beginning in God's Family" is the theme as Holy Cross Lutheran Mission officially opens its doors at 11 a.m. Sunday at 5200 W. Illinois Ave.

HCLM is a new church in the Midland community. Affiliated with the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, the mission is one of the mission projects of the Texas district LC-MS office in Austin. The Rev. Fred Boden of Austin is director of missions for Texas.

The Rev. John Rickert, has been assigned to HCLM by the district office. He is employed as a counselor and case worker for MHMR in Midland. He and his wife, Kitty, have two children.

"How To Help Your Child To Say No To Sexual Pressure," an eight week video taped series, designed by author and lecturer, Josh McDowell, is being presented by the Children's Educational Ministry of Golf Course Road Church of Christ on Wednesdays.

"This course is designed to equip parents to impart a Christian understanding of sexuality to their children," says a release from the church.

"Sexuality is viewed as a gift of God to be used in the development of our personality as God shapes us into adults capable of mature and loving relationships including the commitment of marriage. Parents will learn how to help young people reject premature sex involvement as a counterfeit of the relationship God intends within marriage."

The series will be shown in the church's fellowship hall, with entrance on the north side of the building at 7 p.m.

For more information contact James Bearden, minister of Child Education, 684-8836. Classes for children of all ages will run concurrently.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Take the initiative in career matters. Ambition and success go together. You feel you have something to prove. Look for an opportunity to show what you can do. A new relationship could be on its way to becoming a full partnership. Things that are exotic capture your attention. Agriculture will prove to be a growth industry for many of you. Contacts and experience overseas could earn you big money.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may feel that a partner or family member is being argumentative and obstinate. They expect you to blow up; you will not! Ask for time to think things over.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You could be faced with a difficult choice. It is time you found out where your affections really lie. Travel provides the change of environment you need now. Pack a bag!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The wide open spaces attract you like a magnet. If you can manage it, take a day trip. Since financial security is important to you, spend only what you can afford.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Today's events make you realize how much more you want to accomplish. A battered relationship can still be saved with candor and affection. You could find a great party to attend tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Money may be changing hands without your knowing about it. Check the situation out or you will have nobody but yourself to blame for any losses. Those in love plan for the future.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A dramatic family development should fill your heart with joy. Your doubts can be washed away by a single phone call or visit. You will find good buys at a swap meet.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Take steps to foster greater harmony within the family circle. Lectures will not persuade youngster. What is needed now is freedom tied to certain responsibilities. Provide attractive incentives for mature behavior.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The prime rate determines what you can do about a real estate maneuver. Keep your options open as long as possible. A book offers valuable answers. Find time to read it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not get so absorbed in your friends' affairs that you neglect your own relationships. A cooperative financial arrangement is the best way to handle a family problem. Ask for a sibling's help.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do not fight it if you are in an affectionate mood. Travel brings good luck and new friends. Make that major purchase, but be sure you get it at a fair price.

Cash to play Davy Crockett

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With a coonskin hat, country music star Johnny Cash will play frontiersman Davy Crockett in a new multipart adventure tale for NBC's "The Magical World of Disney."

Cash plays Crockett at the age of 50 in the opening two-hour episode. He will recall his earlier exploits, with Tim Dunigan playing the younger Crockett.

Dunigan was selected from among 1,000 actors for the role created by Fess Parker in ABC's "Disneyland" in 1954-55.

The highly popular Davy Crockett series on "Disneyland" was television's first miniseries. Coonskin hats and Davy Crockett T-shirts were a rage with children, as was the song refrain "Daaaavvy, Daaaavvy Crockett, king of the wild frontier!"

The role of the older Crockett was offered to Parker, who now owns a hotel in Santa Barbara, but he declined. The new Crockett series will probably debut in November.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The next time songwriter Harlan Howard strums his guitar he'll have country music singer Buck Owens to thank.

Owens gave one of his trademark red, white and blue guitars to Howard as a birthday present Thursday.

Howard wrote the hit "I've Got a Tiger by the Tail," which Owens recorded 20 years ago.

"We strolled the streets of every town in California trying to get songs cut," Howard recalled about his friendship with Owens years ago.

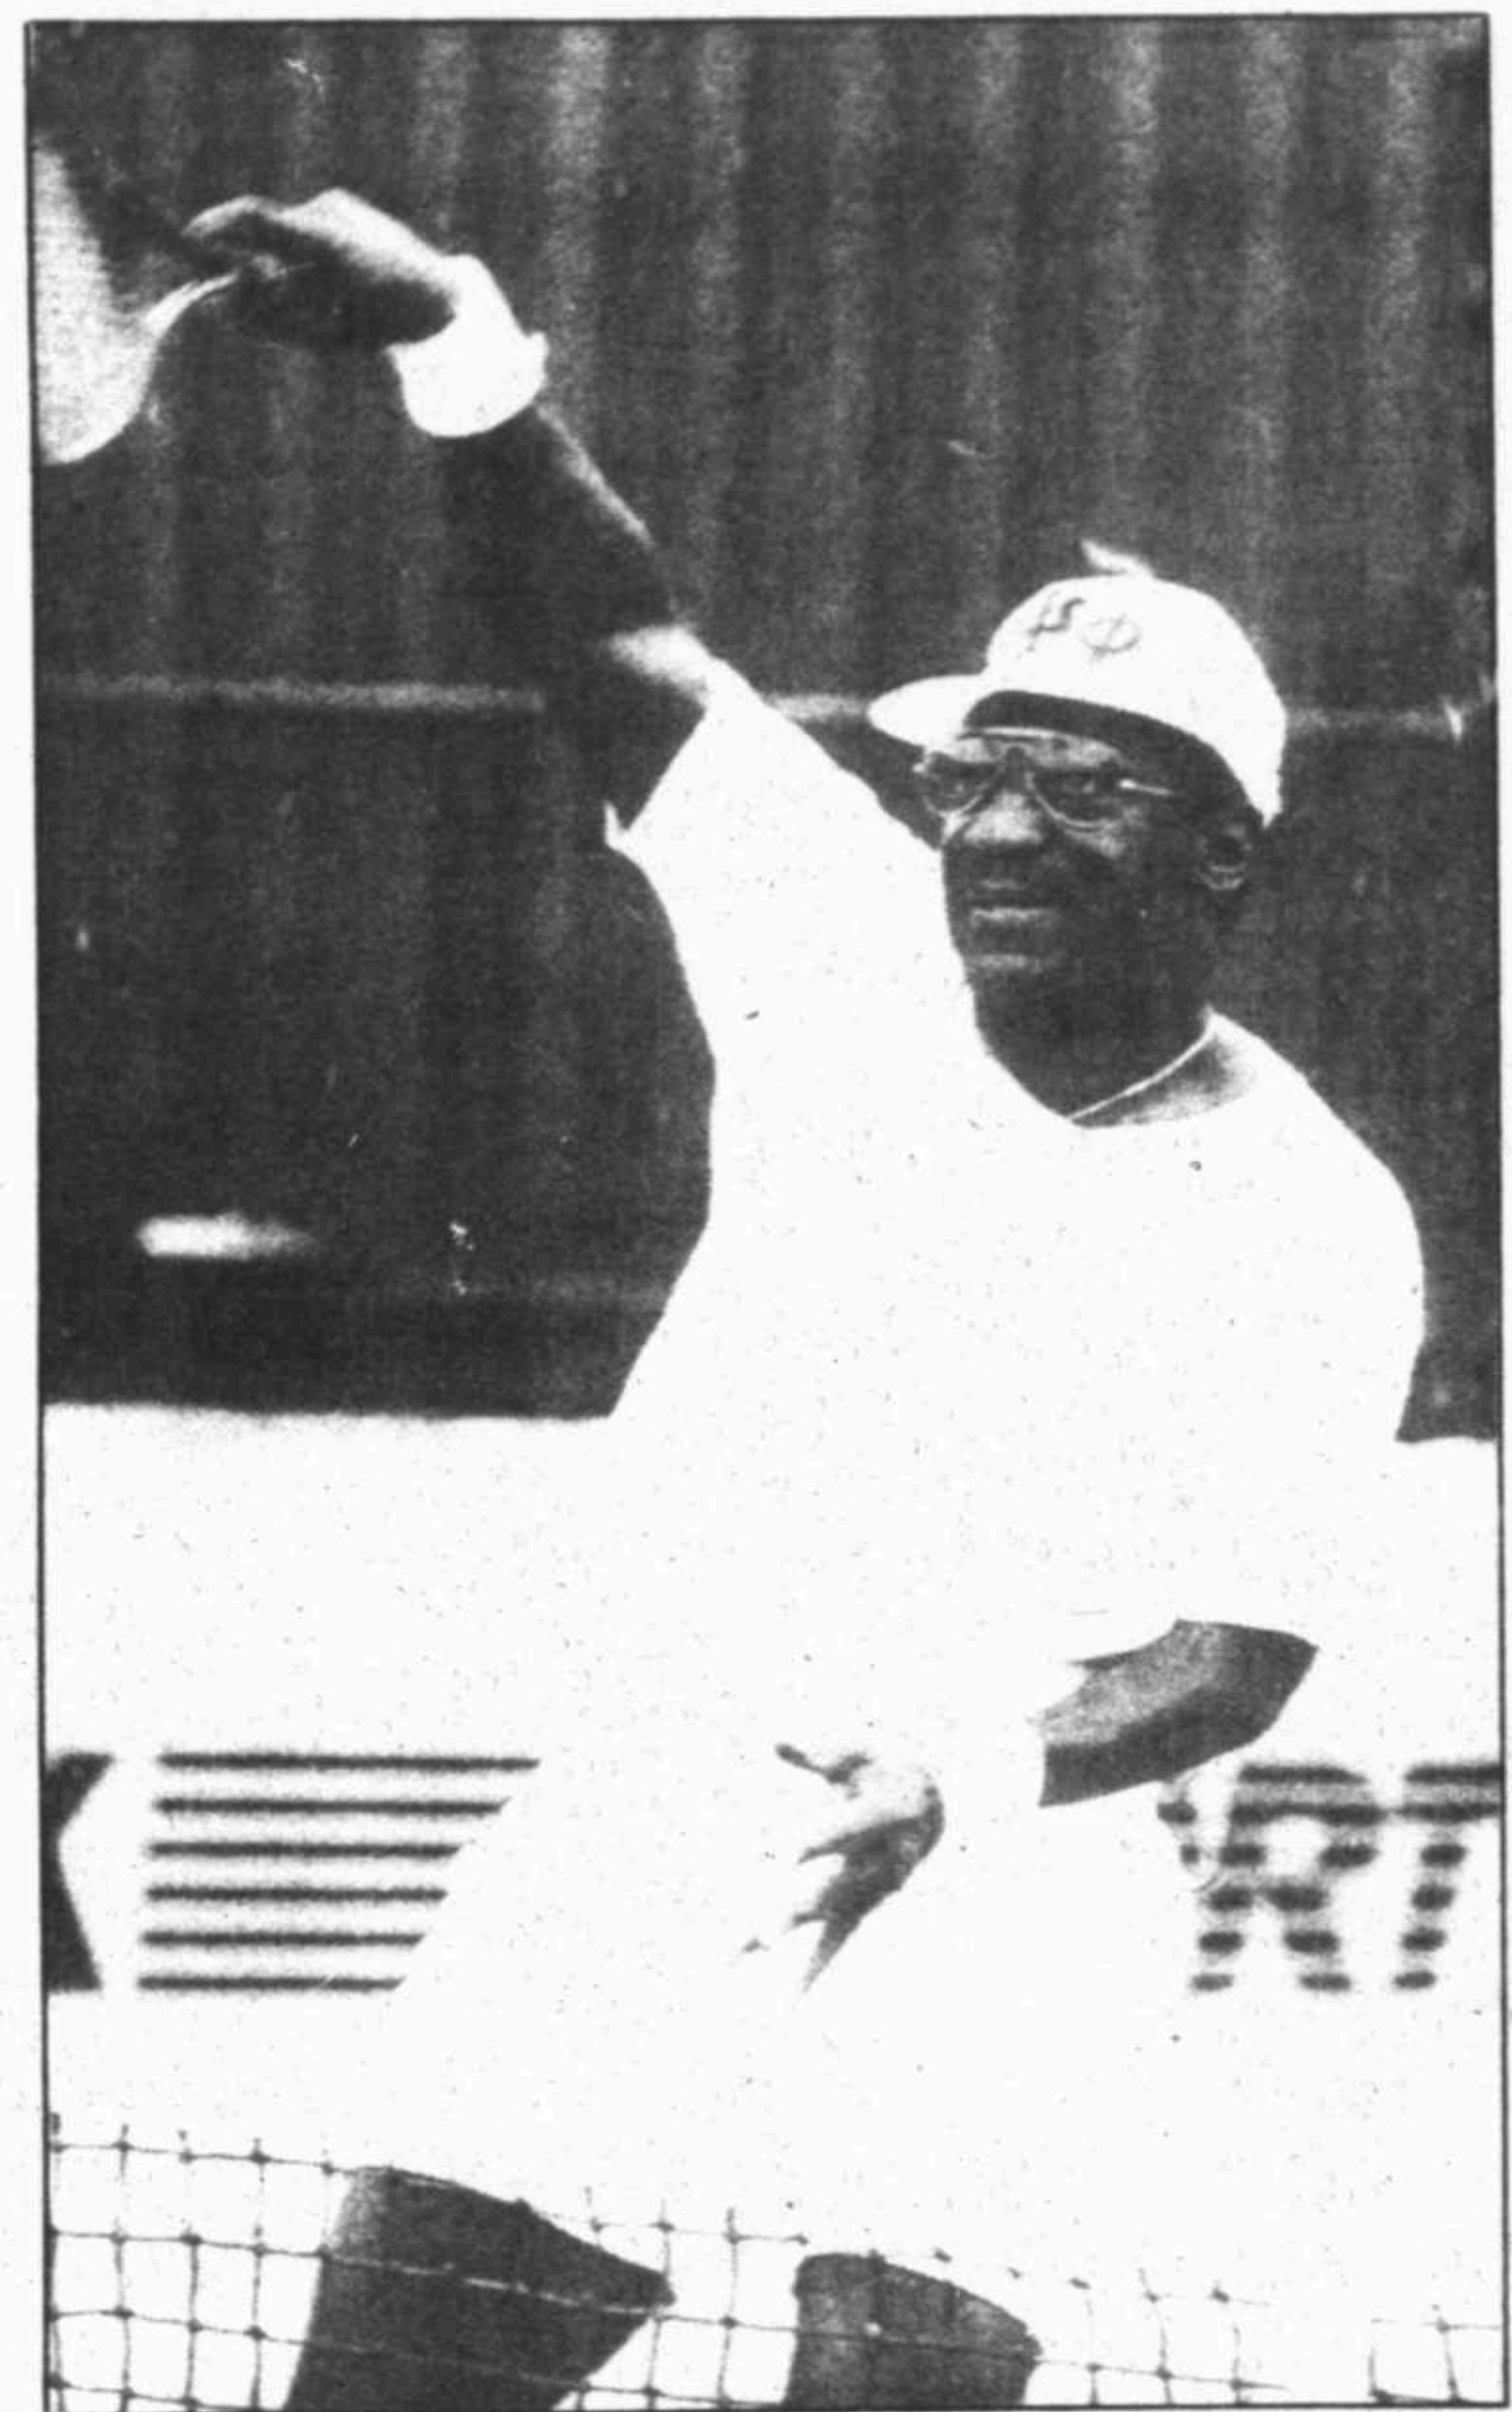

The presentation was made at the fifth annual Harlan Howard Birthday Bash and Guitar Pullin' at a parking lot on Music Row. More than 1,500 people attended, listening as songwriters sang the songs they have written.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Grand Ole Opry singer-songwriter-humorist Johnny Russell says if he's elected president he'd hold yard sales on the White House lawn and have a First Lady of the Month club.

Russell, who wrote the hit song "Act Naturally," is forming a political party, which will have its first convention of sorts this month at a nightclub.

He is offering himself as a presidential candidate on the US Party ticket. Its members will gather Sept. 20 at the Nashville Palace nightclub.

"I'm gonna take the Pentagon and turn it into condominiums," he said. "What's stolen in the Pentagon, people can put it in their apartments. Maybe they won't steal as much if they just take things they can use."

Bill Cosby hits an overhand smash at the net in a doubles match at the National Tennis Center Friday. He played before watching the women's semi-finals of the U.S. Open in Flushing Meadow, N.Y.

Actually, the gathering is for a good cause. It will cost $10 to attend and proceeds will help defray medical expenses for ailing country music veteran Rose Maddox.

FARMINGTON, N.M. (AP) — One-time world champion fiddle player Terry Morris has died at the home of former New Mexico Gov. Tom Bolack near Farmington, San Juan County officials say.

Morris, 32, a member of the Bar-D Wranglers Band, died shortly before 11 p.m. Wednesday.

day, investigators said Thursday. Initial reports indicated Morris collapsed in a swimming pool at Bolack's home and may have drowned. Autopsy results were incomplete Thursday.

Morris first won the title of Texas State Fiddling Champion in 1974 and held it through 1978. He won the world championship in 1975 and the Grand Masters title in 1976.

The fiddler performed often at the Grand Ole Opry in Nashville and was featured on several record albums.

The Odessa convention is one of 27 being conducted across the state by the Sunday School Division of the Baptist General Convention of Texas to help strengthen Sunday School work in local churches.

"The Year of the Sunday School" is the theme of the convention which will interpret goals for a special year of emphasis on the basics which make Sunday School a strong outreach and evangelistic arm of the church.

Areas focused on as part of the emphasis include increasing enrollment, starting or strengthening weekly workers' meetings, conducting Sunday School preparation week, training workers in evangelism, leading people to receive Sunday School leadership diplomas, emphasizing outreach activities, creating new units, conducting Vacation Bible School, starting a new Sunday School and beginning or conducting outreach Bible studies.

Featured speaker for the Odessa convention is the Rev. Bailey Stone, pastor of First Baptist Church, Odessa.

Age group, general officers and a variety of special-interest conferences will be offered during the convention. The Odessa convention features conferences for persons who attend hispanic congregations.

Schedule for the convention is 2 to 4:45 p.m. and 6:45 to 9:15 p.m. No registration fee is taken and pre-registration is not necessary.

For more information about the convention, write the Baptist General Convention of Texas, Sunday School Division, 511 N. Akard, Dallas, Texas 75201-3355, or call 1-214-720-0550.

Church celebrates 75th

BIG LAKE — First United Methodist Church, Big Lake, celebrates its 75th birthday with a "Homecoming" this Sunday.

Three former pastors from the 1950s, 1960s and 1970s will preach. The Rev. Roy Shilling Sr., 1952-55, will preach at 10:50 a.m., the Rev. Joe Scott, 1978-82, will preach at 2:30 p.m. and the Rev. Joseph M. Ray, 1965-68, will preach at the 7 p.m. community service. Ray is Superintendent of the Corpus Christi District, Southwest Texas Conference.

Dinner will be served at noon. During an afternoon social, an old-fashioned Sing-Song will be held and historical reminiscences will be presented. In addition, a new church history book will be distributed.

Other congregations will join the United Methodists in their birthday party at a community worship service at 7 p.m.

The Kansas City, Missouri and Orient Railroad, which opened in 1912 in south Reagan County, was the impetus for the formation of the Methodist Church. A townsite was formed that year and a post office established. In 1913, the church and a bank were established.

The Rev. J.H. Estes was the first pastor, who served until 1915. That year, a small frame building was built, with Baptists and Methodists holding services commencing in 1916 on alternate Sundays. A Union Sunday School was started under the leadership of Mrs. N.W. Hickman, later to become a benefactor of medical care in Reagan County.

The congregation has been served by 32 pastors and the current pastor is the Rev. Paul F. Perry.

The first building served the growing congregation until 1949, when its lumber was used in construction of the present sanctuary, which opened in 1951. The congregation at 290 members, is in the top 20 percent of churches in the San Angelo District.

Church to honor minister

On "Homecoming Sunday," to be this Sunday, the Unitarian Universalist Church of Midland will host a number of activities honoring its outgoing minister, the Rev. Tim Jensen, who has accepted a new position as extension minister to the newly-formed U.U. Community Church of Beaverton, Oregon.

The activities will begin with a coffee and muffin brunch at 10 a.m. in the fellowship hall, to be immediately followed at 11 a.m. by regular worship services, where Jensen will deliver his farewell sermon, and will culminate with a celebratory barbecue and "roast" beginning at 5:30 p.m., also at the church.

During his three-and-a-half year ministry in Midland, Jensen, and his wife, Margaret Weddell, a claims adjuster for the Midland Allstate office, were both active in many denominational and community activities, including the Midland Association of Churches, the Educational Committee of Planned Parenthood of Texas, the Midland Memorial Hospital Emergency Room Chaplains' Corps and the Southwest District Board of the Unitarian Universalist Association.

In addition, Ms. Weddell organized and chaired the first annual Southwest Unitarian Universalist Women's Conference, held in February of 1987 at the U.U. Church of Midland.

Members and friends of the Unitarian Universalist Church of Midland, as well as colleagues and professional acquaintances of Jensen, are invited to participate in the festivities, to bid him "farewell" and "Godspeed" as he follows his call.

"They decided it is time to stop being negative — to take positive action — to stand up and be counted."

Petra to appear at Chap Center

Petra, a Christian rock band, will be appearing at the Chaparral Center on Monday, Sept. 19 as part of their "This Means War Tour."

"Petra is encouraging youth to take a stand against the problems, such as drugs and suicide, that are destroying America's youth," says a release from Street Level Ministries, sponsor of the concert. "Their concerts are a celebration — youths are encouraged to live good, wholesome lives and to put God first."

Petra has appeared in the past at the June Jam with Alabama and The Beach Boys.

Petra's lead singer is John Schlitt who was lead singer for the rock group "Head East" from 1973 to 1980.

"Schlitt left the group with a terrible drug addiction and contemplated suicide," the release says. "He had a life changing experience when he asked Jesus Christ into his life."

Schlitt joined Petra in 1986 for their "Back to the Street" album.

Geoff Moore will be appearing with Petra. Moore is an artist on Sparrow Records and recently recorded Larry Norman's classic song, "Why Should The Devil Have All The Good Music."

Aspin: Ship's captain made right decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy captain who ordered the destruction of an unidentified plane that turned out to be an Iranian commercial jetliner "made the right decision, based on what he knew at the time," Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., said Friday.

"I believe he did the right thing, given what he knew," said Aspin, chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, after hearing Navy investigators detail the series of stress-caused human errors which led to the July 3 incident.

All 290 people aboard Iran Air Flight 655 were killed when the plane was shot down over the Strait of Hormuz by two missiles fired by the USS Vincennes. The cruiser thought it was shooting at an Iranian F-14 possibly headed for an attack on the ship.

Aspin's conclusion echoed statements made by other legislators during two days of hearings on the investigation led by Rear Adm. William M. Fogarty.

Fogarty's report was made public three weeks ago, and he provided few new details in his testimony to congressional committees.

But the decision by the Vincennes' skipper, Capt. Will C. Rogers, to fire two Standard missiles at the approaching Iranian warplane was not criticized.

That reaction was in sharp contrast to criticism of officers aboard the USS Stark, a Navy frigate hit by an Iraqi missile in May 1987, killing 37 American naval personnel.

"In the one case, the Stark, you criticize the officers for not protecting their ship, for not protecting their men. I don't see how you can turn around and then criticize the Vincennes' captain for acting to protect his ship," Aspin said. "I think you have to give the captain latitude."

Fogarty's investigation found that the sophisticated Aegis tracking equipment aboard the Vincennes worked well, but concluded that the data was misread by crew members who were taking the four-year-old ship into combat for the first time.

"I think a kind of 'group-think' takes over in this kind of situation and leads to this kind of happening," Aspin said.

As one example, he said the Aegis equipment showed the Iranian A-300 Airbus was climbing from the time it left Bandar Abbas, but that observers in the Vincennes' combat center misinterpreted the data and believed the plane was descending directly toward the cruiser.

"You had one person make a mistake and then he's talking about in the combat center and no one's going to walk over to his console and read and tell everyone he's wrong," Aspin said.

The Fogarty report detailed a number of human mistakes. In one instance, it said, an operator failed on five attempts to get the computers to select a weapon to shoot at the plane. The sixth succeeded.

Fogarty and other Navy officials said the service plans to try to improve training so that it will be as realistic as possible, but they admitted there is a psychological and emotional component to combat which cannot be simulated.

Aspin agreed. He said the committee will hold hearings later this year to consider "this entire question of stress and combat," with testimony from psychologists.

Quayles worth $1.4 million, documents show

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican vice presidential nominee Dan Quayle and his wife Marilyn own assets worth $1.4 million, according to a set of financial documents made public Friday.

The couple's worth, after allowing for a mortgage and other debts, are listed as totaling nearly $1.2 million. Accountants also deducted $330,000 in estimated income taxes the Quayles theoretically would owe if they sold the assets. This yields a net worth of $859,700.

The couple's largest asset is a $750,000 house in McLean, Va., a fashionable Washington suburb. They also own $500,000 in common stock in Central Newspapers Inc., a family-owned newspaper group.

Quayle, a senator from Indiana, also will receive future income from the Pulliam Family Trust, a multi-million-dollar trust that holds majority stock in Central Newspapers.

The senator has no ownership interest in the trust and would not begin receiving income from it until after the deaths of his step-grandmother and his mother, according to the documents.

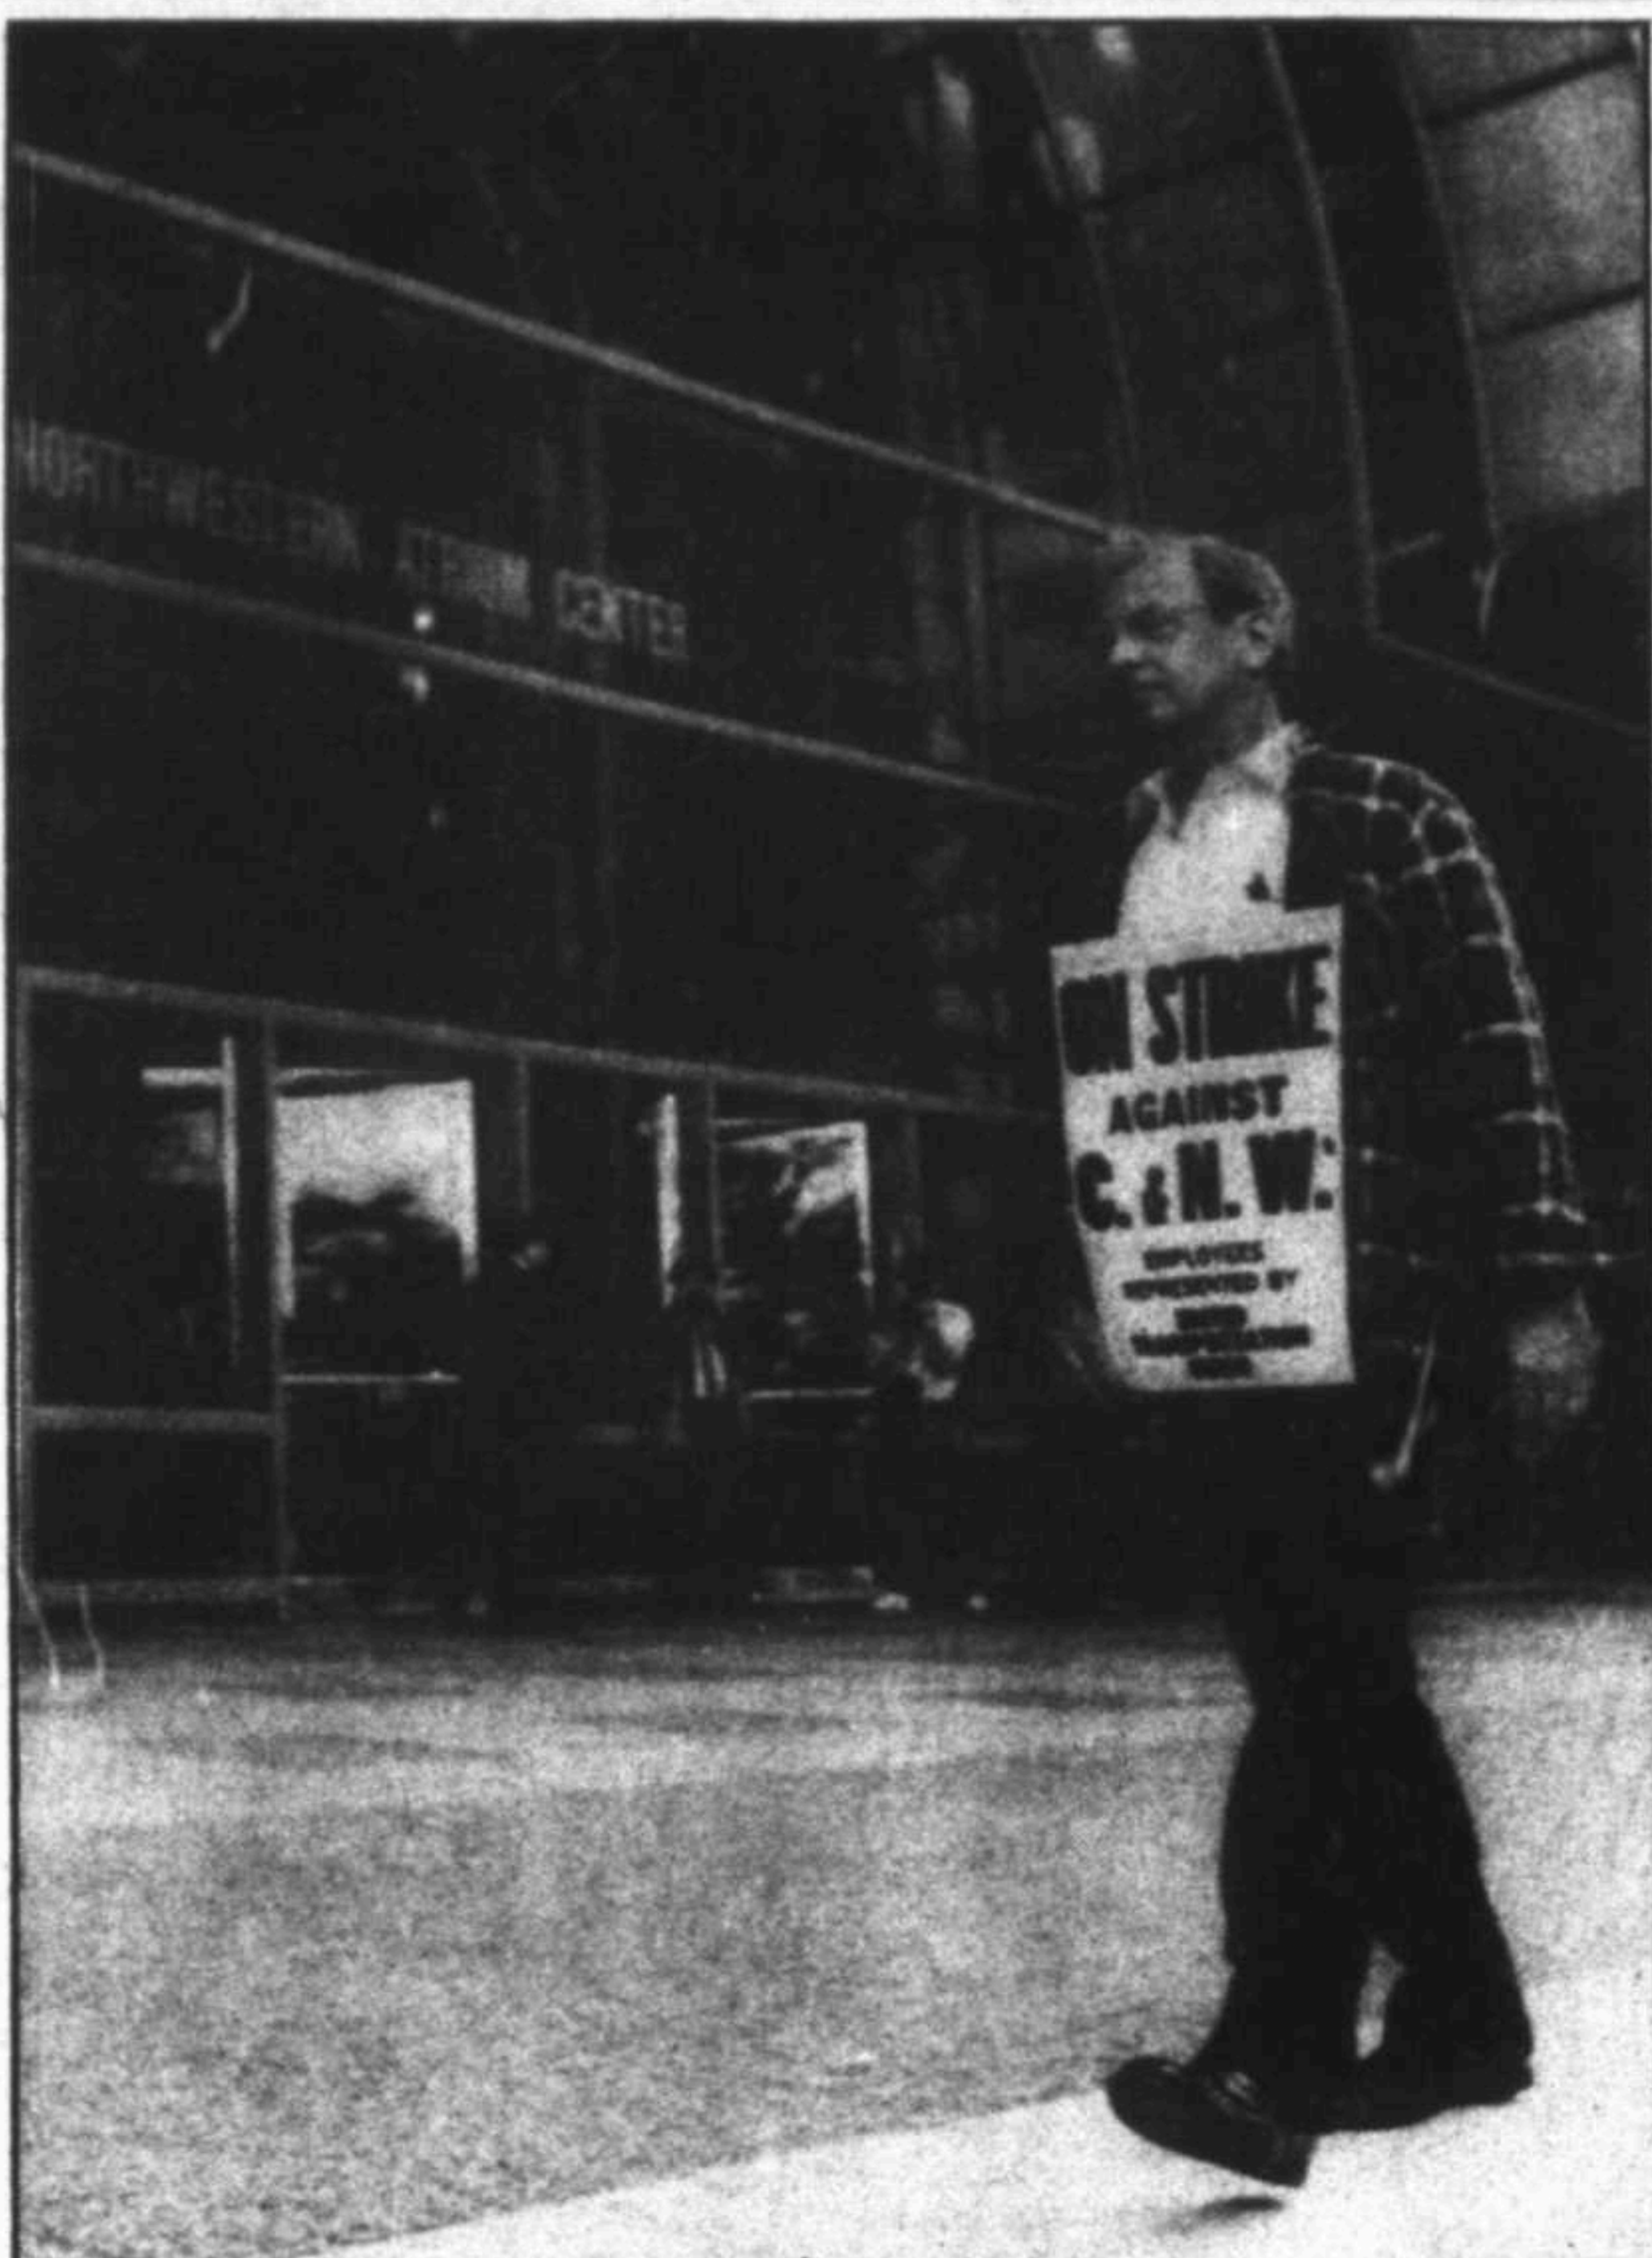

Quayle also released his income tax returns for the past 10 years and a financial disclosure statement required of federal candidates by federal law.

The disclosure form shows that in the first seven months of 1988, Quayle collected $50,600 in speaking and writing fees in addition to his Senate salary, which now is $89,500 a year.

The honoraria were paid by a wide variety of interest groups, particularly those involved in food marketing and health care. Quayle is a member of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, which handles health issues.

By law, Quayle can keep only $35,800 of his honoraria, or 40 percent of his Senate salary. The rest must be given to charity.

The tax returns show that in 1987, the Quayles had total income of $147,303. That amount included $54,074 in honoraria, of which $14,262 was given to charity. The Quayles listed an additional $174 in charitable cash contributions.

Yonkers councilmen negotiate with NAACP over desegregation

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — With contempt fines at $1 million a day and massive layoffs a day away, four Yonkers councilmen negotiated Friday with the NAACP over court-ordered housing desegregation amid diminishing public support.

A vote on the plan was delayed by the negotiations.

"We're only closer to the degree that there's communication going on, and that's certainly a lot better than what was going on a week ago, a month ago, a year ago," said councilman Nicholas Longo. "They're not hostile conversations."

According to Longo, the talks were between representatives of the councilmen and representatives of the NAACP, a party to the original lawsuit that led to the desegregation order. Earlier, councilman Peter Chema had told reporters: "Lots of things are under discussion."

The two men, along with councilmen Henry Spallone and Edward Fagan Jr., have refused to accept a federally ordered housing plan.

The entire council and Mayor Nicholas Wascosko gathered Friday afternoon and voted to transfer $819,200 to pay Thursday's fine. Another vote on the desegregation plan was due later Friday.

As the councilmen entered City Hall, some of the crowd outside — angered by the report of negotiations — shouted, "Sellout! Sellout!" But another section applauded the vote to pay the fine.

"While I appreciate the sentiment of the cheers, there is nothing to cheer about," the mayor said. "We've just authorized to pay fines in excess of $800,000...I sincerely hope this is the last time we have to make such a transfer."

The fine payment came as support for opposition to U.S. District Judge Leonard Sand's plan was starting to wane.

"We've done all we can. We went to the Supreme Court and didn't get anywhere," said Henry Knetter, 65, a northeast Yonkers resident. "There's no garbage pickup. There might not be any police protection. It may be time to wise up."

Knetter spoke for an increasing number of residents whose opposition to low-income housing has softened as the realities of Sand's fines began hitting home.

Phone lines at City Hall were jammed this week with callers urging one councilman to change his vote, Wascosko said. Uncollected garbage sits outside many homes; children going to school have no crossing guards; the three town libraries close Saturday.

But at a contentious meeting Thursday, Fagan and other councilmen criticized Sand, saying "I hope there's a God up there that will strike him down."

The fines, which began at $100 per day, doubling daily until hitting a $1 million cap on Friday, forced the state Emergency Financial Control Board to impose a "Doomsday Plan" aimed at providing public safety services while delaying bankruptcy.

Phase One starts Saturday, with 447 of the city's 1,834 employees receiving layoff notices as part of a $20 million savings package. The Parks and Recreation Department will

New York City railway strike ends shortly after it began

Associated Press

A surprise rail strike in New York City's northern suburbs forced 95,000 commuters to find another way to get to work Friday, while railroad workers in suburban Chicago held off a strike until after morning rush hour but threatened to disrupt the trip home for 40,000 people.

The New York area employees returned to work under court order hours after the strike began, and officials predicted a near-normal evening rush hour. Legislation to force the Chicago workers to do the same thing passed in Congress on Friday afternoon, but some workers vowed to stay off the job anyway.

The strike by 780 track workers in New York's Metro-North Commuter Railroad was prompted by the suspension of 37 employees Tuesday for refusing to work overtime, the Teamsters said. The union contends that forcing tired workers to continue on the job could be dangerous.

Other unions quickly honored the Teamsters' picket lines, shutting down the line and catching morning commuters in Connecticut and New York northern suburbs without warning.

"The train problem today is a surprise to me," said Jim Grant at the South Norwalk, Conn., train station. "I wasn't even listening to radio or TV." He said he would drive to a town that has bus service to New York.

In Chicago, 2,600 United Transportation Union workers struck the Chicago & North Western railway at 9 a.m. CDT when the railroad's parent company began posting layoff notices eliminating 1,150 brakemen's jobs.

The strike could have begun just after midnight, when a federally mandated cooling-off period expired. But the company and union had agreed to hold off the actions until after the heaviest part of the morning rush hour.

The delay assured some 41,000 commuters in the north, northwest and western suburbs a ride to work, but many commuters sought alternate methods of getting to work and ridership was down about 40 percent.

"This is terrible. I think it very unfair and just plain stupid," said Marge Miller of Chicago. "You just can't believe something like this can happen."

A bill imposing a compromise settlement in the dispute was approved by the Senate on Thursday. The bill, which would trim the number of brakemen's jobs by 669, then passed the House on Friday afternoon and was sent to President Reagan for his expected approval.

Commuters faced an uncertain ride home nonetheless because some union workers said members would refuse to return to work.

"Most of our people were docked pay" during a brief strike on Aug. 4, the day the cooling-off period was imposed, said David Wells, a brakeman. "We informed our commuters that we didn't anticipate there would be an evening rush hour."

Donald Markgraf, the union's general chairman, said he hadn't heard of rumors that workers would be unavailable, adding that the union would honor the new law if it was passed.

In New York, the strike was halted after U.S. District Judge Inzer Wyatt ordered the Teamsters back to work.

"We are going back because we felt we got the point across," said John Mahoney, secretary-treasurer of Teamsters Local 808. "We had the attention. There's a lot of people involved, a lot of politicians involved now...The commuters are screaming."

The judge set a hearing Monday afternoon on whether to issue a permanent injunction and whether to award damages. The railroad, contending the strike was illegal, sought $1 million in damages and also vowed disciplinary action against the strikers.

The House vote imposing the settlement in Chicago almost did not take place Friday.

Under House rules, members must unanimously agree before a bill can be brought to the floor without a waiting period. One Chicago congressman with close ties to labor briefly blocked that quick action, raising fears that the Chicago-area strike could have dragged on until at least Wednesday. But he later withdrew his objection.

Congress and the president have authority under the Railway Labor Act to settle railroad disputes that threaten national commerce.

The dispute stems from the railroad's effort to reduce the size of freight crews by eliminating two brakemen per train, saying those jobs are obsolete. The union contends that to eliminate those workers would compromise safety.

Nose to the woodwork

By KIMBERLY M. SHEARIN

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — A 5-year-old California native is the best termite detector on the job and one of the best all-around workers at a city pest extermination company, his boss says.

Every morning, Darryll dons a red collar imprinted with the words "termite dog," while his handler pulls on a white lab coat. Then man and beagle head for a house, factory or other building to let Darryll have a sniff at the woodwork-crawling critters.

Darryll got local attention in a rap-music commercial a few months ago that featured puppets praising the dog's skills. And his portrait graces the company's Yellow Pages advertisement.

Darryll is leased from TADD Services of Belmont, Calif., for $30,000 for two years, said Dave Pontes, general manager of New England Pest Control. TADD stands for Termite Ant Detection Dog.

TADD Services begins training puppies at 8 weeks old and sends them to their first jobs when they are eight to 10 months old.

TADD Services has 60-70 termite-sniffing dogs in the United States, but "our dog Darryll is the only dog in New England," Pontes said.

So far, Darryll, who has been with New England Pest Control nearly 4½ years, has never failed to detect a termite in a wood boring inspection, Pontes said.

"When a human does an inspection, they're only guaranteed by what they can see," Pontes said, and company officials are quick to explain that to their customers.

But with Darryll, "We guarantee the house from the basement right through the ceiling," Pontes said. "He finds termites with a sense of smell and hearing. I would say in the four years we have had him, he's done 3,500 inspections."

Darryll's expertise does not come cheap. The company charges a minimum of $125 per building. Customers pay a starting price of $70 per building for human inspectors, Pontes said.

New England Pest Control has a $1 million errors-and-omissions insurance policy for Darryll, as well as a $25,000 life insurance policy, Pontes said.

When Darryll is 8, Pontes said, he will be sent back to California, deprogrammed, then returned to Rhode Island and given to handler Clarence Cornell as a pet.

Darryll currently stays with Cornell at his Coventry home, along with Cornell's two Shetland ponies, three cats and another dog, Pontes said.

Above, Darryll the beagle rides to work in the company car along with his handler Clarence Cornell. Left, after work Darryll gives his owner a lick for a job well done.

Firefighters from three area cities battle a four-alarm blaze at the Southwest Historical Wax Museum, in Grand Prairie, one of the nation's largest collections of wax figures. A fire inspector said exploding figures hampered firefighting efforts.

Re-creations of Texas history destroyed in wax museum inferno

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (AP) — Fire roared through a museum housing one of the nation's largest collections of wax figures Friday, destroying many detailed re-creations of moments from Texas history.

Almost 300 meticulously sculpted wax figures at the Southwestern Historical Wax Museum — ranging from Elvis Presley to John and Jacqueline Kennedy to Robert Redford and Paul Newman — helped bring about their own destruction, a Grand Prairie fire investigator said.

"One of the things that has made this fire so difficult to fight was the fact these figures are just like a candle," said Lt. Doug Conner. "They generate tremendous heat. It appears it's totally destroyed."

"This was a major attraction in the community," said Grand Prairie Mayor Jerry Debo. "It continued to be a major draw when other attractions failed."

More than 100 firefighters brought the blaze under control nearly three hours after the fire was first reported at the 25-year-old museum about 4:15 p.m., officials said.

One firefighter, whose identity was not immediately available, suffered minor injuries when a high-pressure fire hose broke, Conner said. The injured firefighter was treated and released from DFW Medical Center.

Firefighters from six other departments helped battle the suburb's biggest fire in several years. The museum is located along Interstate 30.

Sonny Marston, operations manager for the Plaza Theater of Wax in San Antonio, which is owned by the Grand Prairie museum, said the company still has about 250 wax figures at its location across from the Alamo, Marston said.

"We don't know much about the loss yet," Marston said of the fire. "But it's a temporary setback."

Among the museum's popular exhibits was a depiction of Jesus and the 12 disciples at the "Last Supper."

Other popular attractions included the swearing-in of Lyndon Johnson following Kennedy's assassination, figures of movie actresses born in Texas, and bank robbers Bonnie and Clyde, who grew up just a few miles away.

"Many of those were truly a piece of history," Debo said.

The museum also attracted large crowds to its annual Halloween horror presentation, he said.

Many of the wax figures were surrounded by expensive antique props.

"I used to like to go there to see their antique gun collections," Conner said.

Frances Oyler of Dallas, who had loaned a horsedrawn popcorn wagon built in 1913 to the museum, said her loss was upsetting although she was informed the museum is insured.

"My husband spent a lot of time restoring this," Mrs. Oyler said. "It can't be replaced."

NTSB says groups overprotective of pilot

DALLAS (AP) — The Air Line Pilots Association and Delta Air Lines have been overprotective of the crew of Delta Flight 1141, said National Transportation Safety Board officials who want to interview the pilot soon.

Investigators are trying to determine why the Boeing 727 crashed and burned Aug. 31 at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, killing 13. Ninety-five people survived the accident. Investigators have not yet spoken with Capt. Larry Davis, the pilot.

Davis is recuperating from facial and back injuries at Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas, where he is in fair condition, hospital officials said.

Since the crash he has spoken with visitors from his hometown of Greenville, including members of his church.

"It seems like everybody's been able to talk to him except us," the Dallas Morning News on Friday quoted an anonymous safety board official as saying.

The Wall Street Journal reported Thursday that several government officials were frustrated that investigators were kept away from co-pilot Carey Kirkland and flight engineer Steven Judd for several days while officials from both Delta and ALPA were with the two crew members since the day of the accident.

Delta officials said they were not trying to prevent the NTSB from interviewing the crew, and they confronted the federal officials about the matter in a conference call Thursday.

"High-ranking officials at the NTSB said they are aware of no complaints or problems with Delta's co-operation, but they're going to the field people (investigators) and see if there is a problem," Delta spokesman Bill Berry said.

Air Line Pilots Association spokesman John Mazor said the union and the flight crew have nothing to hide and that investigators may interview Davis as soon as doctors give approval.

"We've learned a lot of hard lessons in accident investigation, and one of them is that immediately after an accident is the worst time to talk to a crew," Mazor said. "They're in pain, they're racked with guilt. You have people who are in no condition to give a factual and accurate statement."

Lee Dickinson Jr., the NTSB member coordinating the Delta investigation, said he was satisfied that investigators will be allowed to question Davis in due time.

Friends who have visited Davis at Parkland said he discussed with them his recollection of the events in the cockpit before takeoff and of the crash itself.

"It just wouldn't fly," Davis reportedly told Raiford Stainback of Greenville a week ago during a hospital visit.

Davis said the cockpit checks had been completed, the wing flaps were set in the correct position and the plane was ready for takeoff the day of the crash, Stainback told the Dallas Times Herald.

"He said everything checked to be OK, the wing flaps and so forth," Stainback said. "He was concerned, you know, that everything was done that could be done."

In a conversation with another friend who visited him a week ago, Davis said the plane could not continue its ascent once it left the ground because there was not enough power.

County receives $1.6 million grant for Schlemeyer Field improvements

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Ector County Airport officials were notified Friday that the Department of Transportation has awarded the county a grant of slightly more than $1.6 million for improvements at Schlemeyer Field.

The grant represented the full amount that had been sought, according to Airport Director Lynn McLaughlin.

The $1,607,130 in federal funds will mean airport improvements estimated at nearly $1.8 million will be done at the county-owned airport. Ector County will contribute slightly more than $170,000 for the project.

Don Bonify, Ector County engineer, said that how fast work can progress at the airport will depend on how the county has to contribute its 10 percent share of the total project cost.

The improvements, which include resurfacing runways and parking apron, extending taxiways and enlarging the parking apron, drainage improvements and fencing, were planned as a three-phase project to be carried out over a three-year period so that it would cost the county only $55,000 to $60,000 a year, Bonify said.

He plans to meet with County Auditor Bill Hicks Monday to determine how the work can be scheduled.

The county engineer said commissioner court members awarded project engineering contracts about three months ago to the Odessa firm of Landgraf, Crutcher & Associates and the Dallas firm of Willis & Associates.

Sisters get unwanted publicity after deaths

LLANO (AP) — Recent revelations of a criminal investigation into the deaths of two elderly sisters has caused a stir in this small Hill Country community and made the sisters something they avoided all their lives — the talk of the town.

Cordelia and Catherine Norton, who died within two days of each other last February, never sought to call attention to themselves, friends said.

"They were very private people," said Lucille Patton, deputy county clerk and a friend of the sisters since childhood. "And now to see their names splashed all over the front page..."

Authorities say Tim Scoggin, 33, had known the sisters for more than 10 years and frequently helped them run errands and took them on trips to the hospital.

The Austin American-Statesman

reported Friday that Scoggin, who now lives in San Angelo, is being investigated by law enforcement officials following the sisters' deaths and the poisoning death of Ogle Nobles, an elderly San Angelo man.

Scoggin, a former Llano resident, was charged this week with felony theft after allegedly passing a check for $30,000 on Catherine Norton's account, which authorities believe was forged, said Llano County District Attorney Sam Oatman. Oatman said the check was dated Feb. 19, the day after Catherine Norton died at age 75.

Scoggin, who also was a friend of Nobles and his wife, Leita, was charged last month in Tom Green County with allegedly forging checks from Nobles and his wife for more than $48,000. The charges state that nine checks were forged between May 12 and July 28, the American-Statesman reported.

Nobles died of arsenic poisoning March 27 and arsenic poisoning has left his wife paralyzed in her arms and legs, according to a Bexar County medical examiner's report and two search-warrant affidavits.

The American-Statesman reported that the affidavits state that Cordelia Norton, 83, died Feb. 20 after suffering from vomiting, diarrhea, anemia and weakness — symptoms of arsenic poisoning.

Catherine Norton died Feb. 18 of an apparent heart attack. She died at home while Scoggin was present, the affidavits said.

No autopsy was performed on either sister, and both bodies were cremated.

Oatman said a Tom Green County grand jury is scheduled to meet in early October to consider the felony theft charges as well as the evidence in the poisonings.

Scoggin's lawyer, Steve Lupton, said Scoggin maintains that he is innocent of the charges against him as well as other incidents being investigated.

Oatman said Scoggin hasn't been questioned or charged in connection with any of the deaths.

Lupton said he has filed a motion for habeas corpus, saying the $500,000 bail for Scoggin in Llano County is too high. He also has filed a motion for an examining trial to make the district attorney's office demonstrate it has sufficient evidence to charge Scoggin with felony theft.

Ann Lottie Wyckoff of Tow, who described herself as "probably the best friend they had," said Cordelia and Catherine Norton were generous people who did not want any publicity for what they did.

The time machine

Are viewers using the Time Machine to zap your advertising?

Not if it's in newspapers. Newspaper readers regard ads as news about the marketplace — what's for sale, where, and for how much. 60% of readers "look forward" to the advertising in their newspapers — more than say that about advertising in TV, magazines, radio and mail combined.*

Newspaper readers look forward to ads... they don't fast forward past them.
