Federal Communications Commission regulations forbid local broadcasters to reject commercials from candidates for federal office, including the U.S. Senate. Republican anti-abortion Senate candidate Stephen Hopkins of Burnet has been airing graphic commercials, depicting what Hopkins says are aborted fetuses from abortion clinic trash bins. All three local television network affiliates advise viewers of the graphic nature of the 30-second spots beforte the commercials air. How do you feel about the situation? Should station managers have the right to reject political advertisements on the basis of their content? Or should the FCC's protection of free speech continue to extend to all federal political adverstising? Call the Reporter-Telegram's CITYLINE Community Pulse at 560-2400, category 7655, to cast your vote. Callers also are invited to share their comments about the ads and the FCC rules. Calls will be accepted until 5 p.m. Tuesday, with the results to be published Wednesday.

Hillary's dad

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — President Clinton returned to his home state for the first time as president Sunday to visit his father-in-law, who was hospitalized after suffering a stroke. Hugh Rodham, 81, was in serious but stable condition at St. Vincent Infirmary Medical Center. First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton rushed here Friday, shortly after her father was hospitalized. Chelsea, 13, accompanied her mother./3A

Gasoline prices

LOS ANGELES — Gasoline prices rose less than a cent at the nation's service stations over the past two weeks, reflecting a slight increase in crude oil prices, an industry analyst said Sunday. Although the average price rose 0.79 of a cent to 114.40 cents, that rise likely will be short-lived because crude prices have stabilized, said Trilby Lundberg. Here are average prices at self-serve pumps, including taxes: regular unleaded 108.26 cents; mid-grade unleaded 118.72 cents; premium unleaded 126.35 cents; and regular leaded 110.38 cents. Full-serve pump prices were: regular unleaded 136.34 cents; mid-grade unleaded 143.47 cents; premium unleaded 151.94 cents; and regular leaded 143.94 cents.

Demonstrators, including one man carring a sign that reads "Let's restore the Soviet Union," chanted anti-Yeltsin slogans in front of the Russian Parliament building in Moscow Sunday.

Court to review emergency rule called by Yeltsin

■ If declaration is found to be unconstitutional, parliament may move to impeach president.

Associated Press

MOSCOW — A parade of hard-line lawmakers bitterly denounced President Boris Yeltsin during an urgent legislative session Sunday, accusing him of trying to seize power by proclaiming emergency rule.

The Supreme Soviet voted 125-16 to ask the Constitutional Court to review Yeltsin's declaration of Saturday. If the court found he violated the Constitution, he could be impeached by the full parliament, the Congress of People's Deputies, which might be convened as early as Wednesday.

Meanwhile, thousands of protesters gathered to jeer or cheer the president.

Outside the parliament building, known as the "White House," thousands of placard-waving people took to the streets. A heavy police contingent, with more than 100 jeeps and bus loads of militiamen in reserve, kept the two groups apart.

No violence was reported and the crowds dispersed Sunday night.

The vote by the Supreme Soviet, which is dominated by Communists elected before the Soviet Union broke up, followed a blistering denunciation of Yeltsin by his chief political rival, parliament speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov.

"It's an attempt to establish arbitary rule, an attempt to usurp power veiled by rhetoric about fighting the Communist hydra," Khasbulatov said. "Playing the Communist card is a straight path toward breaking up society and civil war."

Hard-liner Viktor Aksyuchits, leader of the nationalist Christian Democratic Union, unsuccessfully argued for the Supreme Soviet to immediately suspend Yeltsin's powers, "declare his decrees of yesterday void and convene the

U.S. lawmakers voice support for Yeltsin

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional leaders voiced cautious support Sunday for Boris Yeltsin, echoing administration arguments that he remains, for now, the best hope for reform in Russia.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., urged President Clinton to show U.S. backing for the embattled Russian president by moving their early April summit from Vancouver, Canada, to Moscow.

"I think President Clinton has a real opportunity here to go down in history as someone who may have saved democracy in that part of the world," Dole said on CNN's "Newsmaker Sunday."

Dole also questioned whether Yeltsin would be able to get back safely to Russia if he goes to Canada.

"You know, I'm not certain what might happen if Yeltsin left the country at this point," he said.

The White House had no further comment Sunday on Yeltsin's decision to declare emergency rule until April 25, when he said the government would conduct a national vote of confidence in the president. The move defied his critics in the conservative parliament, which promptly began proceedings that could lead to his impeachment.

U.N. Ambassador Madeleine K. Albright, speaking on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley" on Sunday, repeated the administration position that Yeltsin's action was "the appropriate thing to do as you're evolving a democratic institution."

Albright said Yeltsin deserved U.S. support because "he is the only one in 1,000 years of Russian history that has been elected by all the Russian people."

At least seven more cult members leave compound

WACO (AP) — At least seven more Branch Davidian cult members left the group's armed compound Sunday, a quickening tempo the FBI said is a positive sign.

Later Sunday, the FBI resumed playing tapes of past negotiations on loudspeakers surrounding the compound. The tactic had been abandoned Saturday in deference to the cult's Sabbath. Also, for the first time, a searchlight raked the compound and surrounding sky.

The FBI said the increased departures continues to raise hope.

"The quicker it picks up, the better the situation is, and we're getting more and more out," said FBI agent Richard Swensen as word spread that two more women left the compound about 11 a.m. Sunday.

Rita Riddle, 35, and Gladys Ottman, 67, were whisked away in a red car to McLennan County Jail. One of the women acknowledged a row of news reporters with a slight smile as the car sped by. They refused to comment to reporters upon arrival at the jail.

Britain's prime minister tries to build nation's confidence

By Maureen Johnson

Associated Press writer

LONDON — It's been a tough time for Britons, and they know it.

Polls depict a nation ashamed of itself: teeming with would-be emigrants, the monarchy and Church of England derided or divided, its international status shriveled, its children delinquent or worse.

There are signs of a shift in the mood — or at least a questioning of whether life is quite that bad. Two weeks of mild, sunny weather and an eruption of daffodils across the land cannot have hurt.

Prime Minister John Major, his Conservative government sinking in popularity and his appeals for optimism often ignored, says the nation is gripped by a weakening disease — "talking Britain down."

"We should not allow the British instinct for self-deprecation to undermine our confidence," he told London's Royal Society of Arts this month. "Our success depends at least in part on building up our confidence."

Oxford University historian Jonathan Clark recalled that, even in the great Victorian days of empire, Britons fretted.

"The English have long been convinced that their country was

WEATHER WATCH

Skies to clear by Tuesday

Staff report

A 50-50 chance of rain this morning is expected to give way to clear skies by Tuesday, according to forecasters with the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Under mostly cloudy skies this morning, there is a 50 percent chance of showers and thundstorms. The skies are expected to become partly cloudy by afternoon, with a high reaching the mid-60s. Winds should be from the northeast at 10-20 mph, NWS said.

A 20 percent chance of showers under partly cloudy skies is forecast for tonight, with a low expected in the low 40s.

Tuesday should be mostly sunny, with a high between 70 and 75.

After an overnight low of 45, Sunday's high was 57, 30 degrees short of the record for the date set in 1934. The record low for today's date was set in 1989, when the mercury dipped to 22.

STATE

Texas most mostly cloudy and mild on Sunday with showers in West Texas stretching from the Panhandle to the Big Bend.

The skies over North Texas were cloudy as the circulation from a low pressure system along the Rockies combined with a high pressure system over Mississippi to pump ample supplies of Gulf moisture into the area.

Temperatures were generally warmer than Saturday with North and Central Texas reporting 50s and 60s. The Panhandle and South Texas had readings in the 70s to 80s.

West Texas was expected to have a chance of showers or thunderstorms across the region Monday with a continued chance of mainly evening showers from the South Plains to the Edwards Plateau Monday night. Mostly clear elsewhere. Lows from the mid 30s in the Oklahoma Panhandle to the mid 50s in the Big Bend. Highs Monday were to be from the mid 50s in the Panhandle to the lower 90s along the Big Bend. Lows Monday night in the 30s and 40s, except mid 50s along the Rio Grande.

The forecast for South Texas was for cloudy skies today with showers and thunderstorms. Highs were to be in the 70s and 80s with lows in the 50s and 60s.

NATION

Up to a foot of snow spread across the northern Plains and Upper Midwest on Sunday, the first full day of spring, and heavy rain fell in Florida.

A low pressure system centered over Nebraska during the afternoon was responsible for the snow. The system was expected to move eastward during the night, and a snow advisory was in effect today for northwestern and north-central Illinois.

Heavy snow fell across parts of South Dakota late Saturday and into Sunday. Up to 12 inches was reported at Newell, in the western part of the state, with more than 6 inches at nearby Bell Fourche, the National Weather Service reported. Seven inches fell at Sioux Falls, in the southeast, and Huron got 4 inches.

In northwestern Iowa, 6 inches of snow fell at Sheldon and Rock Valley, with 5 inches at Spencer. Elsewhere in the state, 3 inches was measured at Mason City, Webster City and Grundee Center.

Snowfall amounts in southwestern Minnesota included 5 inches at Luverne, 3 inches at Worthington and 1 inch at Marshall.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

RULE: Lawmakers denounce Yeltsin

(From 1A)

Congress to confirm these decisions."

The chairman of the Constitutional Court, Valery Zorkin, said Saturday that Yeltsin's declaration of emergency rule appeared to violate the constitution.

The Supreme Soviet's resolution also asked Russia's chief prosecutor to consider whether any of Yeltsin's advisers bore criminal responsibility for the declaration.

That amounted to a threat to put the president's top aides — though not Yeltsin himself — on trial.

The mood inside the legislature was generally calm and businesslike.

Security Minister Viktor Barannikov made an impassioned appeal to lawmakers not to drag his ministry into the fray, and drew applause when he said his troops will abide by the constitution.

Yeltsin won backing from Georgian leader Eduard Shevardnadze, despite recent fighting between Russian and Georgian troops in the separatist region of Abkhazia. Shevardnadze, a former Soviet foreign minister, told reporters in Georgia that the atmosphere in Moscow "smells of civil war."

Gorbachev told the Interfax news agency that the declaration of emergency rule was "a serious political error that shows the narrowness of his political base."

Gorbachev said Yeltsin appeared to be under the sway of advisers ready to "set the house on fire in order to fry themselves an egg."

But Western leaders suggested Yeltsin held the moral high ground as Russia's first democratically elected leader.

"Our feeling is that President Yeltsin at present is the only leading figure that can put this process through," said Hans van den Broek, the European Community's foreign affairs commissioner.

Defense Minister Pavel Grachev called for a compromise in the fight over dividing up governmental powers and promised the army would stay out of the dispute. But he warned that "tempers are running high" in some units, especially in the Moscow Military District.

"Any attempt to split the army forces could lead to bloodshed," Grachev said at the emergency session of the legislature, which is dominated by Communists elected before the Soviet Union collapsed.

The crowds outside parliament waved banners and placards and listened to the legislature's debate over loudspeakers.

About 5,000 anti-Yeltsin protesters waved Soviet flags and sang revolutionary songs outside the White House — where Yeltsin had stood on a tank in August 1991 to rally democratic forces against a failed coup by hard-liners.

No tanks were sighted Sunday, but the pro-Communist protesters called Yeltsin's declaration a "putsch." Holding portraits of Soviet founder Vladimir Lenin, they chanted "Motherland or Death!" and carried signs saying "Down With Yeltsin's Dictatorship!" and "Throw the Drunken Pig Out of the Kremlin!"

A roughly equal number of Yeltsin supporters gathered in front of Moscow City Hall, then marched to the White House.

"Yeltsin is the only option we have to solve today's problems. Maybe in the future there will be someone else, but now Yeltsin is the only choice," said one marcher, Maya Linisheva, a costume designer.

Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin, whose appointment was forced on Yeltsin by the parliament in December, gave Yeltsin only a half-hearted defense, saying the president "had a right to appeal to the people" in a planned April 25 referendum on whether president or parliament should hold supreme power.

If the Congress impeaches Yeltsin, the result may be only a stalemate. The president's chief legal adviser, Sergei Shakhrai, has said Yeltsin would refuse to step down.

Yeltsin went on nationwide television Saturday night to tell his people that the parliament was seeking to return the old Communist "nomenklatura" to power.

U.S.: Clinton's stance is 'about right,' Nunn says

(From 1A)

the Senate Armed Services Committee, said Clinton's stance toward Yeltsin was "about right."

"We certainly support him as the president and as the only nationally elected leader," he said.

But Nunn, speaking on NBC's "Meet the Press," said the United States should be talking to other "key players" in Russia.

"It's not Yeltsin exclusively," he said.

House Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., speaking on the same program, agreed that while it is in the U.S.' national interest to support Yeltsin now, "there are many other democrats in Russia, and we must be prepared to support them."

The lawmakers also agreed that the Russian military, which has largely stayed out of the political crisis so far, must be watched closely.

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., noted that there is an element of the army that opposes the START II nuclear disarmament treaty. Nunn warned of a worst-case scenario where the military and the regions split apart.

"If that happens, what's going on in Yugoslavia now might look calm," he said.

One of the architects of the START II treaty, former Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger, said on CBS's "Face the Nation" that it was "unlikely that the military will fragment or will come out against Yeltsin unless there begins to be real civil disorder."

Eagleburger said it was "absolutely essential that we go ahead with a summit now. As far as the West is concerned, we've got to show to the Russian people — and the psychology is important — that Yeltsin has support."

BRITAIN: Polls show people's dissatisfaction

(From 1A)

in decline," Clark wrote in The Times of London. "Nostalgia was always England's reigning mood."

But the pound is getting stronger, unemployment — a high 10.5 percent — edged down in February for the first time in three years, and there's a cautious hint that the longest postwar recession may be ending.

However, each new thing that goes wrong inspires an orgy of self-doubt.

Last month, the charging of two 10-year-old boys in the northwest city of Liverpool with the murder of a toddler started a national furor about rising juvenile crime, poverty, wickedness, and crumbling family life.

It was, said the normally restrained British Broadcasting Corp., "one of those defining moments when a nation looks at itself and doesn't like what it sees."

Then the London Stock Exchange, synonymous with pinstripe suits, status and continuity, abandoned a $65 million attempt to computerize stock trades. The project didn't work.

All this on top of a year of royal scandals and failed marriages that raised questions about the future of the monarchy.

In the established Church of England, a decision in November to allow women priests has caused deep rifts.

According to a Gallup poll published in the pro-Conservative Daily Telegraph last month, 49 percent of Britons would emigrate if they could — higher than during the postwar austerity of 1948.

Jason Bailey, a carpenter filling out an emigration application form at the Australian Embassy, said he did not see things getting any better.

"I had a job until six months ago," said Bailey, 22, from Essex county northwest of London. "Since then, nothing. I'm depressed and want to go where I think I'll have a better future."

Essex is a heartland of blue-collar workers who prospered in the 1980s under Margaret Thatcher's administrations and whose votes were crucial to keeping the Conservatives in power.

"Major has screwed up, but what would the others do?" Bailey, who voted Conservative, said with a shrug.

Of the 1,030 adults interviewed for the Gallup poll in February, 39 percent could not think of an answer when asked to describe what made them most proud of their country.

Majorities said they regarded Britain as unsafe, badly governed and with little international prestige. The military still enjoyed overwhelming trust, but only 26 percent said they were proud of the monarchy.

Other polls indicate that many feel the Major administration, presiding over the 15th straight year of Conservative Party government, looks tired, its touch unsure.

Major is bogged down in a wearisome battle with Conservative Party rebels opposed to a treaty on closer union of the European Community.

CLINTON: Arkansas gets attention, respect

(From 1A)

Arkansas is finally shedding its reputation as Dogpatch of the Delta.

"There's a whole different image of Arkansas now," crows Ms. Robinson, who runs the kitchen at Doe's Eat Place. "We're not barefoot and pregnant all the time, running in the woods. We have some intelligent people here just like everywhere else."

"Arkansas has been put down for years," she added. "But we are coming back now."

Yes, indeed. Arkansas is seizing the day — and the dollar — now that Clinton has gone to Washington.

Tourism is up. Business, too. Doe's, a favorite haunt for journalists and pols where Clinton chowed down greasy cheeseburgers, boasts a 30 percent increase in sales.

"We got a million dollars worth of coverage during the campaign, the election and inaugural. It was like a giant advertising campaign — free," boasted George Eldridge, one of Doe's owners, who posed with Ms. Robinson in the chic spread on the inaugural in Vanity Fair's March issue.

A local publisher is reaping the windfall, too: Its all-time best seller is a cookbook written by the woman who whipped up meals in the governor's mansion for Clinton.

"He did in 15 months what we've been trying to do for 20 years — bring attention to the state," said Joe Rice, Arkansas' tourism director. "He's not the icing on the cake. He's pretty much the cake."

Rice's office has been flooded with calls from journalists from China, Hungary, Italy, Germany, Japan and England. He projects state tourism will grow 10 percent this year — a $300 million increase in travel spending over 1992.

"Arkansas is 'in,'" confided Skip Rutherford, a longtime Clinton friend. "People are pulling out their Arkansas roots, their Arkansas connections. Someone wrote a letter looking for a job saying 'My grandmother had a friend from Arkansas. Does that help?'"

Already, Arkansas has been rewarded for being an FOB — Friend of Bill.

Clinton's December economic summit here pumped about $2 million into the economy, said Barry Travis, director of Little Rock's Convention and Visitors Bureau.

Travis said the money is secondary to the positive publicity generated for a city still trying to distance itself from a symbol of shame — the 1957 crisis in which then-Gov. Orval Faubus ordered the National Guard to prevent nine blacks from integrating Central High School. Faubus' interference prompted the nation's first use of federal troops for school desegregation.

Clinton isn't the first native, though, to make it big.

Some of America's richest and famous are from Arkansas: the late Sam Walton, the unassuming drug store owner who created Wal-Mart, poultry king Don Tyson, former Sen. J. William Fulbright and the late Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

But it took Clinton and his "A" team — his Arkansas confidants in top-level jobs, including White House Chief of Staff Mack McLarty — to carve out a new profile of Arkansas, Rutherford said.

Now, the state that former President Bush derided as the "lowest of the low" has that one commodity Rodney Dangerfield craves — respect.

"In phone calls, when you say the words Little Rock, you can sense you're getting attention that we have never gotten before," Travis said.

Rice noticed the change starting last summer.

Federal officials became more deferential, and journalists were more likely to return phone calls. "I guess it's sort of like you've won the lottery," he said. "All of a sudden your life changes."

Others, though, caution against great expectations.

"I don't think one man's election as president makes much difference in a state's fortune or its psyche," said John Brummett, political editor of the Arkansas Times, on assignment in Washington.

Paul Greenberg, editorial page editor at the Arkansas Democrat-Gazette, says even though Arkansas' self-esteem has improved, "the inferiority complex is still there."

"For one to have status, one often has to have machines, money, be in Vanity Fair or Vogue," he said. "We weren't for a long time. Now we are, we think better of ourselves for the wrong reason. Power, fashion and everything that fades."

Yet even a Republican, state Sen. Travis Miles, appreciates the spotlight.

"Our image has improved in this short time, it will continue to and deservedly so," he said. "We're not a bunch of hillbillies down here. We're just glad some of the rest of the country is beginning to realize that."

RECORD: Weather hurt cattle industry in Kansas

(From 1A)

New Mexico and western Oklahoma as well as Texas, was more specific: A record 64,883 cattle sold in the TCFA area last Monday.

"We just have the cattle available," said Jim Gill, market director for the Amarillo-based organization. "The cattle in Kansas have really been hurt by the weather. Their trade hasn't completely quit up there, but a lot of cattle sold north of Amarillo are going to Kansas and supplementing the cattle kill."

"The story is the weather," said Joe Kropf, commodities analyst for Bill Helming Consulting Services in Shawnee, Kan.

"We just had storm after storm that started early," Kropf said. "It was either a blizzard or blowing and drifting or an ice storm."

Persistent cold, slush and mud forced cattle to eat just to maintain body temperature, Gill said. Weights are down about an average 30 pounds from last year, he said.

But prices are up.

In Texas, which sells 4-4.5 million fed cattle a year, cash cattle prices hit a record $83 per hundred pounds last Monday, Gill said. Texas' previous record $82.50 was set in April 1991 and matched last month.

Cattle futures rose sharply Thursday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange as cash cattle prices reached a record high of $84 in Nebraska.

"I don't anticipate the prices to stay this high forever, but I think the demand is high enough we can maintain this price level for awhile," Gill said.

Analysts in January predicted cattle prices were poised for a plunge after a Department of Agriculture report showed the number of animals in feedyards at a 14-year high.

Gill said he doesn't foresee the possibility of a crash, partly because export markets to Japan and South Korea remain strong. Instead, prices probably will gradually fall with warmer, drier weather, he said.

So what do higher market prices mean for consumers?

"You're going to see fairly high retail steak prices on into the spring," Kropf said. "Seasonally, this is the time when the wholesale price and retail price trend higher anyway. This year it will go up a little more."

CULT: Woman hospitalized for heart condition

(From 1A)

About 2:30 p.m., James Lawten, 70; Sheila Martin, 46; and Ofelia Santoyo, 62, left the compound, said FBI special agent Sharon Smith. As with previous releases, they were escorted by federal agents and a state trooper's car and also were taken to the jail.

Earlier, about 12:30 a.m., Victorine Hollingsworth, 59, and Annetta Richards, 64, left the compound, Swensen said. Ms. Hollingsworth was taken to Hillcrest Baptist Medical Center for an examination because of an existing heart condition, Swensen said.

"I think they (cult members) were anxious for her to get some treatment, and she was anxious to get some treatment," Swensen said.

Dr. Michael Attas, a cardiologist, said Ms. Hollingsworth was in stable condition getting treated for a heart condition she has had 30 years and for high blood pressure.

Attas would not say whether her condition was connected to the 22-day-old standoff. He said she arrived at the hospital with her heart medicine.

Ms. Hollingsworth told authorities she is from Great Britain, Ms. Richards and Ms. Ottman said they are from Canada, and Ms. Riddle said she is a U.S. citizen. Nationalities were not available for Ms. Martin, Ms. Santoyo and Lawten.

About midday a school bus was seen moving into the compound area, and a short time later a bus left the area with one passenger it it. Federal authorities could not immediately say whether that was yet another cult member leaving the compound.

Branch Davidian leader David Koresh and his followers have been holed up inside the Mount Carmel compound since a Feb. 28 shootout between cult members and agents with the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Swensen said the FBI is convinced the armed standoff will end peacefully, and he noted there has been no violence since the gun battles of the first day.

"There hasn't been one shot fired. There hasn't been one person injured. There hasn't been one person killed," Swensen said.

On Friday night, Brad Branch, 34, and Kevin Whitecliff, 31, left the compound as negotiators carried on a lengthy conversation with Koresh.

3 women allege sexual relations with archbishop

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Three women alleged in on-camera interviews with CBS-TV's "60 Minutes" that Archbishop Robert Sanchez molested them while they were teen-agers active in the Roman Catholic Church.

Other Catholics interviewed on the program alleged the archbishop did nothing to stop pedophile priests being treated at the Servants of the Paraclete center, a Jemez Springs retreat for troubled clergy, from molesting the state's children.

The interviews with newsman Mike Wallace were broadcast Sunday, two days after Sanchez submitted his resignation to Pope Paul II and about two weeks after the archbishop publicly apologized for any pain, harm and disappointment caused by the allegations. Sanchez hasn't confirmed or denied the accusations and has been in seclusion.

"Part of the way that he seduced me was through using spiritual language," said Judy Maloof, an associate professor of Spanish and Portuguese at Ohio State University in Columbus.

"At the time I was a very devout Catholic," said Maloof, who grew up here and is a member of a prominent Albuquerque family. "I think he exploited my spirituality by comparing me at times with powerful religious icons like the Virgin of Guadalupe."

Maloof said she was 19 when her relationship began with the archbishop.

Two other women, Cathy Mendoza and Patty Madrid, said they were 18 and the archbishop was 40 when he fondled them. The broadcast did not make clear where the women lived, but The Albuquerque Tribune reported Saturday that Mendoza is from Phoenix and Madrid lives in the Santa Fe area.

Mendoza and Madrid recounted a private camping trip they took with Sanchez. They said the archbishop placed his sleeping bag between the two teen-agers.

"I thought it was strange," Mendoza said. "I didn't say anything, but I thought, well here's this very important person who I thought was next to God. He must know what he's doing.

"During the middle of the night he ... put his hand in my sleeping bag and, and fondled my breasts," Mendoza said.

Mendoza said she didn't stop the archbishop because she was "really scared."

Madrid alleged that during the same camping trip Sanchez kissed her.

Both women contend that for years afterward the archbishop kissed, fondled and caressed them, Wallace said.

"Once when the archbishop was caressing you, he said to you, 'If only your father knew what he was missing,'" Wallace said to Madrid.

She responded in part: "...he presented himself to me as a father figure."

"60 Minutes" also alleged that a woman, whom it did not identify, claims Sanchez raped her in 1973.

The program contended the archbishop paid the woman $25,000 two years ago when she confronted him about the alleged assault. The money was for therapy and to buy her silence, the show said.

Marlene Debray-Nowak said on the program that she complained to Sanchez three times that her 10- and 12-year-old sons were being fondled by the Rev. Arthur Perrault.

Five people contend in a state district court lawsuit they were sexually abused by Perrault during the 1970s. An earlier lawsuit contends he sexually abused a brother and sister, now in their 30s, when they were teen-agers.

Perrault, 54, resigned as pastor of St. Bernadette Church in Albuquerque in October. The Archdiocese of Santa Fe says he is on sabbatical leave.

Perrault was treated for pedophilia in the late 1960s at the Paraclete center.

More than a dozen lawsuits allege priests treated at the center sexually abused young people, mostly altar boys, while on parish duty. The archdiocese has been accused of unleashing known pedophile priests on New Mexico's Catholic community.

Debray-Nowak told "60 Minutes" that she didn't find out about Perrault's alleged molestations of her sons until one of them told her at age 29.

"They protected the priest because he was a priest. ... The nuns taught us in catechism that we mustn't say anything bad about the priests — we'd go to hell," she said.

Debray-Nowak said she holds Sanchez responsible.

"The buck stops at his desk. ... And his job is to protect the children," she said.

Tim Martinez alleged on the show that he was 14 years old when the Rev. Jason Sigler seduced him into having oral sex.

Seventeen people have claimed in six lawsuits that they were molested by Sigler, 54. A lawyer for many of the plaintiffs alleges Sigler was sent to the Paraclete center for treatment three times between 1976 and the time he left the priesthood in the early 1980s.

Sigler worked at St. Therese Little Flower Church in Albuquerque from June 1979 to April 1980.

Kirsch has admitted having sexual relations with a 19-year-old girl but said it didn't violate his vows of celibacy because it was "passionless sex."

Family illness draws Clintons to Arkansas

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — President Clinton returned to his home state for the first time as president Sunday to visit his father-in-law, who was hospitalized after suffering a stroke.

Hugh Rodham, 81, was in serious but stable condition at St. Vincent Infirmary Medical Center.

First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton rushed here Friday, shortly after her father was hospitalized. The couple's daughter, Chelsea, 13, came to Little Rock with her mother.

The sudden illness threw the Clintons' schedules into question. It was unclear when the president would return to Washington. He had a light schedule Monday, with routine meetings at the White House and a meeting with black leaders in the afternoon or evening.

Mrs. Clinton, who heads a presidential health advisory task force, canceled plans to go to Michigan where she was to tour a neonatal intensive care unit at a Detroit hospital Monday and attend a health care forum in Dearborn.

Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala and Tipper Gore, wife of Vice President Al Gore, planned to conduct the forum without Mrs. Clinton.

Clinton's first trip back home was somber, lacking the media horde and enthusiastic crowds that welcomed him at the Little Rock airport repeatedly as a candidate and as president-elect.

Instead, he stepped off Air Force One onto a foggy tarmac, his head bowed. The president left immediately for his in-laws' home, where he joined his wife and daughter for two hours before going to the hospital shortly after noon.

Dr. Susan Santa Cruz, the Clinton's family doctor, said the severity of Rodham's stroke was not known.

Saying the family wanted to keep details of the illness private, Santa Cruz noted that Rodham's condition is serious, but not critical.

Doctors believe the stroke was caused by a blood clot in the brain. Santa Cruz declined to say whether Rodham is conscious.

New study shows Hitler had inflamed arteries

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Adolf Hitler likely suffered from a malady that inflames arteries and reduces blood flow to the head, heart and liver, but that and other ailments can't be blamed for his crimes, says a new study.

However, they might have aggravated his longstanding belief that he wouldn't live long and needed to accomplish his goals quickly, Dr. Fritz C. Redlich, the study's author, said Sunday.

Scholars knew Hitler had liver, heart and stomach troubles, took numerous drugs, and displayed shaking characteristic of Parkinson's disease, a degenerative nerve disorder.

But symptoms cited in his doctor's records indicate Hitler also had giant cell arteritis, an artery inflammation disease, said the study published in Monday's issue of the journal Archives of Internal Medicine.

"It was simply overlooked" by other researchers and unrecognized by Hitler's doctor, said Redlich, professor emeritus of psychiatry at the University of California, Los Angeles, and former dean of Yale University School of Medicine.

Hitler's symptoms included malaise, headaches, impaired vision, fever, weight loss, oversensitivity to sunlight and tenderness and an enlarged artery over one temple — all consistent with arteritis in the scalp, Redlich said.

Inflamed arteries elsewhere in the body also might explain Hitler's heart disease, abdominal pain and liver troubles, he said.

"It's plausible — a reasonable hypothesis," said Dr. Gene Hunder, rheumatology chairman at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn.

Giant cell arteritis is named for enlarged cells in inflamed artery walls. It afflicts one in 500 people over age 50, and gradually goes away by itself, Hunder said.

Redlich, 82, has spent eight years compiling Hitler's health history for future publication by Oxford University Press. He interviewed people who knew Hitler and read thousands of documents at the National Archives, including the 1941-45 letters and diary of Hitler's wartime physician, Dr. Theodor Morell.

Hitler refused to let doctors X-ray his chest or abdomen.

He also wouldn't let doctors examine his genitals. Perhaps it was because he was born with one testicle, as stated by a Soviet autopsy; that autopsy was questioned by a recent French study. But Redlich said Hitler asked his doctor questions that suggest he had some other genital deformity.

Weather may threaten Columbia's countdown

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — After enduring a month of launch delays, NASA had just the weather to worry Sunday about as the countdown for shuttle Columbia's German research flight wound down.

Air Force meteorologists predicted a 70 percent chance of acceptable weather for the 8:51 a.m. CST Monday liftoff. Low clouds, high crosswinds and rain were the concerns.

Thunderstorms raked the Kennedy Space Center on Sunday, briefly knocking out power in one building. The space agency was ready for a Sunday liftoff, but had to step aside for a military rocket launch attempt.

Late February and mid-March launch dates were scrapped to replace engine pumps and hoses in NASA's oldest shuttle.

"It's always tough to get Columbia off the ground, it seems, but when it goes it flies well," said launch director Bob Sieck.

This will be Columbia's 14th flight in 12 years.

The nine-day mission — a follow-up to Germany's first Spacelab flight on Challenger in 1985 — originally was scheduled for 1988. But all shuttle missions were put on hold after the 1986 Challenger disaster.

The scientific portion of the mission will be handled by a German control center near Munich.

Thursday March 25, 1993 7:30 P.M.

Women's and Children's Hospital Auditorium

Myron T. Hawryluk, M.D.
Obstetrics/Gynecology

Women of the "Baby Boom" generation are noticing changes to their bodies, their emotions and their lifestyles as they become 40 years old.

Unlike your mother, your generation of women have different stresses, and new social demands on their lives.

Dr. Hawryluk, will discuss the changes in the reproductive system, the hormone imbalances, the mood swings and the risks to your health as you begin the years that lead to menopause.

An informal discussion will follow a slide presentation.

Asian security requires effort

North Korea's defiance of the world over nuclear inspections should remind Americans that peace in Asia can't be taken for granted. But while the reckless antics of Pyongyang's time-warp dictatorship are familiar to Washington, newer challenges have crept up on policy makers almost unnoticed. America's Cold War era security treaties are inadequate to meet the challenges ahead.

China has doubled its military spending since 1988, using the money to build its first seagoing navy since the Ming Dynasty half a millennium ago. Last week it threatened to attack if Taiwan moves toward independence. Japan has stretched the limits of its constitutional ban on overseas military deployment. And smaller powers like Indonesia and Malaysia have embarked on arms-buying sprees.

Meanwhile, ideological changes have scrambled Asia's political geography and created new diplomatic alignments — as demonstrated by Russia's strong stand against North Korea last week.

Washington's system of bilateral mutual security treaties with Japan, South Korea and the Philippines were formulated with a monolithic communist enemy in mind. Future conflicts are more likely to be nationalistic, potentially pitting one U.S. ally against another. America still needs to play a central role in keeping the Asian peace. But to do so it will need new arrangements, leading toward a collective security system open to all countries prepared to play by its rules.

Unlike the Cold War treaties, collective security aims at maximum inclusion. All participating states agree to basic rules like respecting each other's borders, abiding by arms control agreements and avoiding suspicious troop movements. Participants also agree to cooperate in enforcing these rules against any transgressor.

Asian collective security was anathema to the cautious Bush administration. But the Clinton hands have proved more receptive. They have already endorsed the regional security discussions held under the auspices of Asean, the six-member Association of Southeast Asian Nations.

Japan, South Korea, Australia, New Zealand and the U.S. are formal Asean "dialogue partners." But that still leaves East Asian military powers like Russia, China, Vietnam and Taiwan excluded.

China's flouting of proliferation rules and Taiwan's peculiar diplomatic status might argue for proceeding without them, at least initially. But Russia surely belongs in any post-Cold War Asian security system, as its role in the Korean crisis demonstrates. And now that it is cooperating with its neighbors over Cambodia, so might Vietnam.

Asean deserves credit for starting this needed discussion. And the Clinton administration deserves strong encouragement in taking on a more active, constructive role. The peace of Asia may well hinge on how quickly Washington updates its policies and expands its alliances.

Customs has one more blast before cuts

WASHINGTON — President Clinton's February pledge to cut 100,000 civil-service jobs, reduce administrative overhead by 14 percent and eliminate widespread government perks prompted most federal agencies to begin belt-tightening. For senior officials at the U.S. Customs Service, it prompted one last hurrah.

Anderson

The Customs Service last week shuttled more than 80 of its senior officers from around the country and the world to an enforcement conference at a $50 million resort outside Palm Springs, Calif. Numerous customs sources estimate that the total cost for food, travel, accommodation and salaries at the conference ran more than $100,000. Although customs spokesman Bill Anthony was unable to provide an exact budget figure for the five-day desert jaunt, he called such estimates "an exaggeration."

Taxpayers shelled out thousands just to fly the Washington contingent to Palm Springs round trip. Even more was spent on round-trip air fare for customs attaches, who came to the conference from some 15 different countries, including Thailand, Japan, Italy and Austria. About 45 special agents-in-charge and Aviation branch officials were also flown in from major U.S. cities on the government dollar.

Anthony says the purpose of the conference was to discuss more than a dozen important topics, including budget issues, communications security and sexual harassment. Asked by our associate Dean Boyd why a conference in Palm Springs was needed to address these issues, Anthony explained that "a lot of this stuff you just can't do over the phone."

Judging by their surroundings, some customs officials might have found it hard to concentrate on their work. The Palm Springs area — home of golf courses, swimming pools and Sonny Bono — is so exclusive that a city ordinance bans the use of the word "motel" on public signs. Ordinance or not, nobody would confuse customs' conference site at Hotel Indian Wells with a roadside inn.

The hotel sits on the 11th fairway of the host golf course for the Bob Hope Chrysler Classic and offers its guests guaranteed tee times on the 36-hole course. Customs officials were especially lucky last week, when Lee Trevino, Tom Weiskopf and Chi Chi Rodriguez came to town to kick off the PGA Senior Tour at a nearby country club.

For those quiet evenings inside, customs officials stayed in suites that were originally built at a cost of $160,000 each. Rooms are equipped with marble baths, mini-bars and private balconies with views of the Santa Rosa mountains, golf course or pool areas. Yet, they pale in comparison to the multi-level, four-bedroom, five-bath presidential suite, which rents out for $6,000 per night and comes with a gold-plated private elevator and emerald suede chairs. Aside from full concierge service, valet parking and dry cleaning, the hotel can provide guests with Cadillac stretch limos.

Anthony says the Customs Service chose Hotel Indian Wells because it was seized by customs agents last August after an investigation into its high-rolling Japanese owner. This, he says, enabled the government to negotiate the standard government rate of $75 per night. Asked why the meeting was not held in Washington, which could have saved at least thousands of dollars in air fares, he said,

In a break from tradition, customs officials at least refrained from using "reimbursable conference fees" at the gathering.

CHARLEY REESE

Agency personifies stupidity in Waco, Texas

Congress should seize the opportunity of the Waco Fiasco to dismantle the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms (BATF). Among American law enforcement agencies it has the worst and most deserved reputation.

Reese

The first blunder the BATF bigwigs made in Waco was to stage a forced entry just to serve a warrant based on nothing more than an alleged violation of a gun control law.

True, Congress has said that possession of an unlicensed automatic weapon is a violation of the law. Congress did not, however, say that such possession was a capital offense or a transgression worth getting four good government agents killed and 16 others wounded.

That's all BATF had. Never mind all the allegations of child abuse or polygamy. That's none of BATF's business even if it is true. Nor is it against the law to have kooky religious beliefs or to own a collection of legal firearms. No evidence has been presented that prior to the raid any member of the Davidians in Waco had committed any crimes other than, as an informant alleged, to have violated gun control laws.

One unarmed man should have knocked on the door and tried to negotiate an entry and search. Many an old time law enforcement officer, void of a college education, but with advanced "degrees" in common sense and courage have talked desperadoes into surrendering their weapons. At any rate, it should have been tried.

If a peaceful approach didn't work, then they could have nabbed the Davidian leader when he went jogging or to town on errands, as townspeople say he had done often. As a last resort, the place could have been surrounded and negotiations begun. There simply was no justification for a military-style assault just to serve a warrant on a possession violation. There were no hostages involved, no terrorists holed up. There was nothing but some religious folks with rather strange beliefs minding their own business.

Unfortunately, BATF has a reputation for treating all violations of gun control laws as if they were violent crimes. They have smashed up people's houses, ruined their businesses, even shot innocent people. The present leadership also stands accused by its own employees of racism and sexism.

The second inexcusably stupid blunder in Waco was in the execution of the search warrant. First of all, a simple glance at the Davidian compound — multiple, connected buildings, multiple stories, multiple rooms — would have told even a second lieutenant fresh out of ROTC that nobody could storm that complex and achieve enough surprise to avoid a gunfight.

The families of the agents who died trying to do an impossible task ought to sue the U.S. Treasury Department for gross negligence and misfeasance on the part of the supervisors who planned and ordered the raid. It was a such a stupid blunder I can only think they, the supervisors, must have been watching too many Chuck Norris movies. To put agents on roofs in full view of an unsecured gun tower is stupid. To attempt such a forced entry in daylight is stupid. To proceed with the raid after the news media showed up — a clear indication knowledge of the raid was widespread — was stupid. To send agents in, knowing they would have to hesitate in defensive fire to avoid hitting women and children, was stupid.

In short, there are no mitigating circumstances that can excuse the BATF bigwigs who committed this costly blunder.

Congress should not let the deaths of these young public servants go unanswered. Bad judgment with such fatal consequences should not be whitewashed.

Charley Reese's column is distributed by King Features Syndicate.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, March 22, the 81st day of 1993. There are 284 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On March 22, 1765, Britain enacted the Stamp Act to raise money from the American colonies. (The Act set off such a strong protest that it was repealed the following year.)

On this date:

In 1638, religious dissident Anne Hutchinson was expelled from the Massachusetts Bay Colony.

In 1794, Congress passed a law prohibiting American vessels from supplying slaves to other countries.

In 1820, U.S. naval hero Stephen Decatur was killed in a duel with Commodore James Barron near Washington D.C.

In 1882, Congress outlawed polygamy.

In 1894, hockey's first Stanley Cup game was played. Montreal, the home team, defeated Ottawa, 3-1.

In 1929, a U.S. Coast Guard vessel sank a Canadian-registered schooner, the "I'm Alone," in the Gulf of Mexico. (The schooner was suspected of carrying bootleg liquor.)

In 1933, during Prohibition, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed a measure to make wine and beer containing up to 3.2 percent alcohol legal.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Bee board thanks sponsors

On behalf of the board of directors of Midland Need to Read, I would like to thank the Reporter-Telegram for sponsoring our fundraiser, "Bee for Literacy," a corporate spelling bee.

Once again the "bee" was a success, thanks to the corporations that participated: Arco, Team Bank, Chevron, Exxon, Parker & Parsley, Texaco, Penny-Quick Printing, ClayDesta Corporation, OXY USA Inc., Marathon, and Midland College were represented by three member teams. The winner this year was OXY USA Inc. that sent their winning team to Austin, March 13, to spell in the state corporate spelling bee. Bill Dingus, our master of ceremonies, and Denise Walters, the pronouncer, volunteered their time to make our event enjoyable. The audience appreciated the addition of fun they both interjected.

Pages & Prints Bookstore, Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale, Midland Community Theatre, Merle Norman Cosmetics, Treasures of the Earth, Midland Angels, The Total Table, Head West, Folger Galleries, Skibells, Midland Opera Theater, and London House, who donated audience participation prizes, also contributed to the success of our event. Their generosity is appreciated. Several students and tutors were involved in organizing the event. Special thanks to those who helped, especially Fay Helms, Mattie Cole, Virginia Harrison, Vera Duffy, Jan Florer, and Bea Matchus.

The board of directors value the support that the Reporter-Telegram has given to Midland Need to Read and to the cause of literacy. The publicity and coverage of our event has increased interest in our organization. More volunteer tutors and students have been recruited. Thank you for your continued support and interest.

Reader urges more tourism

It has come to the attention of some of us in the travel-related industries in Midland that the City of Midland has at its disposal in excess of $400,000 of unappropriated funds derived over the years from the motel/hotel occupancy tax. These funds are to be used according to the law for the purpose of generating tourism for Midland and vicinity as seen fit by the city council.

Before we get all excited and either foam at the mouth in anticipation of spending these monies or wonder why our city fathers have not seen fit to promote Midland by having already spent these funds, I think a period of soul searching is needed.

The funds in all likelihood have not been spent because no one has stepped forward with a truly focused vision of how to promote tourism in the area. I doubt if any single person or single group has that vision. I recommend that a commission or group be formed to spearhead a comprehensive plan for promoting tourism in Midland. That group could be formed by members of the various chambers of commerce, not just one, the Conventions & Visitors Bureau, representatives from the various museums, hotels, restaurants, shopping malls, travel agencies, etc. Anyone that has a vested interest in seeing tourism increase should be willing to serve, make a contribution and their advice and counsel needs to be actively sought.

Opportunities may be passing us by more rapidly than we think. The old arguments, the old biases, the old distrusts, the old grudges are not helping to get the job done. The bickering and competition for limited funds need to stop. As manager of a local motor inn I get bonused on results and production, without which I shouldn't expect to get salaried much less bonused. When we talk about tourism we need a plan that will give us results. Talk is talk — nothing more.

Government lacks control

In the article in the Reporter-Telegram I noticed that the Midland police would be stopping drivers for seatbelt law violations. Granted seatbelts save lives, but this ground has been covered beforehand and it would seem that public service announcements by the media would be an effective means to increase the public awareness, if needed.

I think this is a prime example of two things that are out of control in our government: (1) I find it hard to believe that seat belt violations are anywhere near the top of the list of items that our local police need be concerned with and (2) the $15,000 dollars that would be furnished by our federal government to help with this effort. I cannot help but wonder how many layers of government we go through to get our $15,000 back and what the actual cost of it is.

Just possibly, if we would take the lead and, God forbid, send this money back, it might start a trend toward a more sensible and efficient government.

Projections: French voters oust Socialists

PARIS (AP) — Voters fed up with political scandal and high unemployment ousted the Socialists from their control of parliament Sunday and cast their lot with the conservatives.

Socialist Party leader Laurent Fabius conceded defeat minutes after the polls closed, saying voters had delivered their verdict and that France faced the most right-wing government in its history.

"The punishment has fallen. It reflects the wear-and-tear of time, of unemployment, of disappointment," Fabius said. "This punishment has been harsh."

Fabius urged supporters to vote for any left-wing candidates in runoff elections next Sunday to block a huge right-wing takeover of parliament.

The likely conservative majority means President Francois Mitterrand, a Socialist, will govern the final two years of his second seven-year term with a hostile premier and Cabinet.

The president must choose the prime minister from the National Assembly majority, and the premier then picks the Cabinet.

Television networks predicted after the polls closed that the right-wing alliance of the Rally for the Republic and the Union for French Democracy won about 40 percent of the vote. The Socialists got only 19 percent.

The results were confirmed by early offical counts, heralding a massive right-wing takeover of parliament.

After next Sunday's runoffs, the rightist alliance could take from 474 to 484 seats in the 577-member National Assembly, the television network TF-1 projected.

The Socialists would be reduced to a token opposition, dropping from the 273 they now hold to 57 to 67 seats, the network projected.

"The Socialist Party's mistake is that they promised us the moon in 1981 and haven't delivered," said William Vanseveren, 18, who nevertheless voted Socialist at a polling station in Conflans-Sainte-Honorine outside Paris.

After the voting was over, Paris Mayor Jacques Chirac, leader of the Rally for the Republic, beamed but warned supporters against over-confidence.

His party was projected to win up to 90 seats outright Sunday and be the senior coalition member.

The much-talked about ecologist alliance, which has bled off Socialist support, won only 8.5 percent of the vote, the same as the Communist Party, according to the projections.

The extreme-right National Front, which favors expelling Arab immigrants from France, captured 12.5 percent, about the same as in recent elections, the projections showed.

U.N. tries for more aid missions; fighting continues

TUZLA, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — The commander of U.N. forces in Bosnia said Sunday he had won agreement to let Serbs leave this government-held town, a Serb precondition for evacuating more Muslims from desperate Srebrenica.

The commander, French Gen. Philippe Morillon, has been holed up for more than a week in Srebrenica in a show of support for the tens of thousands of refugees stranded there under Serb shelling.

On Friday, U.N. trucks brought the first overland shipment of aid to the town in more than three months. The same trucks evacuated almost 700 Muslim refugees to Tuzla on Saturday.

Morillon left Srebrenica on Sunday to negotiate with Bosnian Serb military leaders and then traveled on to Tuzla, a government-held town 45 miles northwest of Srebrenica.

U.N. officials were scrambling Sunday to bring another food convoy and a French field hospital past Serb lines into Srebrenica.

Morillon, who has said the Serbs must allow unconditional access to Srebrenica, rejected any notion that he had struck a deal to allow more evacuations in exchange for permission for several hundred Serbs to leave Tuzla.

"It is not a question of a bargain. I refuse the idea of reciprocity," Morillon told reporters. Instead, he said the agreement represented the start of "the progressive restoration for the freedom of movement of everybody in the country.

"Families ... must have the possibility to be reunited," the general said. "It will help me with ... continuation of the peace process."

Local officials have been reluctant to meet Serb demands to let them go, fearing it would amount to an endorsement of "ethnic cleansing," the killing or driving out of ethnic groups to make regions ethnically homogeneous.

3 children uncover fossil egg on beach

PERTH, Australia (AP) — Three children have dug up a massive fossil egg on a beach that a scientist said could have belonged to the giant elephant bird of Madagascar.

The youngsters found the egg — which measures 31 inches in circumference —while walking in sandhills about a half-mile from the beach at Cervantes, 150 miles of Perth.

Dr. Ken McNamara, senior curator of paleontology at the Western Australian Museum, described the find as "extremely important."

He said Sunday he hoped the egg would be donated to the museum by a person currently negotiating to buy it from the father of one of the children. It is not known when the children found the egg.

"We could then examine it scientifically to see if it is from an Aepyornis — known as the giant elephant bird — or a giant relative of the emu, which roamed Australia 15,000 years ago," he said.

McNamara said the 8-foot-tall Aepyornis became extinct at least 2,000 years ago and it is possible the Cervantes egg washed down a river and floated across the Indian Ocean to Western Australia.

Strong quake rattles Tibet

BEIJING (AP) — A strong earthquake has hit Tibet, but it was not immediately known if it caused damage or injuries, an official report said Sunday.

The official Xinhua News Agency said the quake hit the remote, moutainous region Saturday night and measured 6.6 on the Richter scale. An earthquake measuring 6 on the scale can cause severe damage.

The report said the epicenter was in the northwestern part of Lhaze county, about 200 miles southwest of Lhasa, the Tibetan capital.

The brief, three-sentence report said no other details were available.

IRA claims responsibility for bombing

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — The Irish Republican Army on Sunday claimed responsibility for two bombs that exploded in a northwest England town, killing a 4-year-old boy and injuring at least 56 people.

The IRA said in a statement distributed to Dublin news media that it gave advance warning that the bombs would explode Saturday in Warrington, 200 miles northwest of London.

But police said a man with an Irish accent phoned a crisis line about 30 minutes before the blasts, saying bombs had been planted in Liverpool, 15 miles from Warrington.

Police have speculated that Saturday's bomb attack was in retaliation for the arrests.

DEAR ABBY

Dad's choice of discipline is nobody's business but his

DEAR ABBY: You have had several letters about what to say when you see a parent disciplining a young child in public. I'll tell you what to say: Nothing!

Van Buren

Last week, on a crowded cruise ship, my 8-year-old son began acting up in public. He'd been cranky all day because he wasn't getting his way, and he'd already been given plenty of warnings. At one point, he deliberately walked away from the family. I followed him, gave him a quick swat on the butt and told him to stay with us!

I was immediately confronted by a furious woman who screamed at me, "That's no way to treat a child!" I was so startled at the intrusion, I had all I could do to keep from telling her to mind her own business.

That woman had interrupted a private family matter. Should I have thanked her for her concern and explained that the boy was taking medication for a hyperactive disorder — that he had been abandoned by his birth mother, been physically abused in two foster homes and ultimately labeled "hard to place" — a euphemism for "unadoptable"? Should I have explained that he was classified as severely emotionally disturbed?

Abby, while preparing to adopt this child, I spent months doing research, seeking advice and support about the best ways to meet his special needs, so he could have the best chance of becoming a fully independent adult. It isn't easy. He throws tantrums, gets frustrated, argumentative and stubborn, but there are times when he's bright, charming, affectionate and playful. We've had some terrific times together, and I can't imagine life without him. I love this boy.

Yes, it's disheartening to see a parent yelling at a child in public, but the last thing that parent needs is to have his or her parental authority questioned by another adult. Please sign me ... A LUCKY FATHER

DEAR LUCKY FATHER: Your son is as lucky (perhaps luckier) than you. Thank you for a wonderful letter. And lest it be said that Abby condones "child abuse" — one swat on the behind does not constitute child abuse.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a well-established plastic surgeon with an excellent reputation and a fine practice.

The problem: Whenever we are out socially — usually at someone's home, but it has also occurred in restaurants — one of the women will get him in a corner and ask, "Doctor, what do you think I need? And approximately how much will it cost?"

My husband is not about to give his professional opinion or quote prices under these circumstances, so he politely suggests that the person inquiring call his office and make an appointment.

Everybody reads Dear Abby, so kindly print this letter. Perhaps it will send a signal to those persons who seek a professional opinion without going to the doctor's office. — THE DOCTOR'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Here's your letter. (Do I hear thousands of readers tearing this out of their newspapers? Or is it just my imagination?)

Advice for everyone — teens to seniors — is in "The Anger in All of Us and How to Deal With It." To order, send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Anger Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Planetarium director promises moon, stars

By Carol Smaglinski
Associated Press Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY — When stars blink overhead in the Kirkpatrick planetarium, all one needs is a soft breeze and the sound of the surf.

In fact, planetarium director Wayne Wyrick says Omniplex staff members often take breaks under the stars to recharge from the pressures of life.

Wyrick shares the most ancient of sciences with thousands of people each year at the nonprofit planetarium housed at Omniplex. The Oklahoma City museum is extremely popular with teachers and students.

Early on, Wyrick knew that astronomy would be his vocation. A letter, saved by his mother, hangs on a wall in his home, written by 5-year-old Wyrick to Santa Claus asking for a telescope.

After his graduation in 1975 with a degree in astronomy from Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio, the Oklahoma native began work a year later at Kirkpatrick in the exhibits department.

Wyrick was perfect for the position, and in 1979 began as planetarium technician. By 1984, he was director, and he now heads a staff of four.

"It's probably the best job in the entire state of Oklahoma," said the 40-year-old scientist. "Who do you know that's not interested in what's up in the sky? Look, who else do you know that can promise you the sun, the moon and the stars?"

Doing what he loves best, he explained that human survival depends upon weather patterns that, in turn, depend upon the stars.

"All calendars are based upon astronomical events," he said. "If you don't know your calendar, you can't plan for bad or cold weather. So, I think astronomy is critical to the existence of humans in some sense."

He is also the one people call, without fear of ridicule, when they think they've spotted a UFO.

"I have looked for years and I have never seen one," he said. If extraterrestrials visited earth, he said, "I'd be the first to go in their spaceship. If they are out there."

Tale: Phantom bewitches university

By Phillip L. Hamilton
Associated Press Writer

PLAINVIEW — Listen closely.

Perhaps you too can hear her.

It's said that on a clear night the spirit of a young Wayland Baptist University student can be heard on the third floor of Gates Hall performing a classical score over and over again — tortured by small errors only the trained musical ear can detect. The girl, some say, is doomed to perform the score until she can do so to perfection and gain the release of her tortured soul.

She's the ghost of Gates Hall.

Is she real or just a tale handed down over the years?

Whether or not she's real, rumors of her years of haunting reign over the third floor of Gates Hall are alive and well at the university, where her story has been handed down from class to class through the years.

And there has been renewed interest in the ghost on campus after story published last week in the Trailblazer, Wayland's student newspaper.

"She's supposed to be a female ghost," said Wayland historian Dr. Estelle Owens. "She's supposed to have been a music major who came to her juries and failed. She then flung herself off the balcony. Or maybe it was the roof. You hear the story both ways."

Ms. Owens, who has taught at Wayland since 1974, said the story goes that the girl is confined to the third floor of Gates Hall, where the music department was located until 1973. There, she must practice her music until it's perfect and she can be released from the failure that brought about her untimely death.

"It's always that she's a music major, but there's debate over whether she played piano, was majoring in voice, or was a flutist," the historian said.

"There are people who swear to you they've heard footsteps, stomping sounds and doors slamming," Ms. Owens said.

"I can neither confirm nor deny the presence of a ghost in Gates Hall," university spokesman Bobby Hall said with a chuckle. "But I have heard all kinds of stories."

"Some say the founder of the university comes back to check on us," Hall said.

But the university spokesman said that tale isn't as popular as some of the others.

"The one I like is that a male student was murdered on the third floor," Hall said. "He's supposed to still roam around up there."

But Hall is quick to add, "There is no evidence that there was ever a murder or a suicide on the third floor."

"No one has ever seen it," said alumni director Joe Provence, who was a student in the 1960s and returned to work for the university in 1967.

Tales of the ghost date back at least a half century. Provence said he's heard alumni back on campus for 50th reunions talk about the haunting spirit.

When the class of 1941 got together a couple of years ago, some class members got to talking about the night they placed a cow in the president's office. Provence said they swore they were chased off by the ghost of Gates Hall.

"This can be the spookiest place in the world when you're in here alone at night," said Dr. Charles Bassett, vice president for denominational relations. "You can hear doors slamming in the building and it creaks and groans."

Bassett has been working in Gates Hall since 1960, but he's never seen the ghost.

"I've seen a lot of things in this building, but never a ghost," he said.

Tales of the ghost flourished in the late 1960s and early 1970s, when assistant professor Mark Pair often practiced piano late at night in his third-floor studio.

"I've often wondered if there could be a ghost," Pair said.

He recalled one particular incident that occurred in 1967, during his first year of teaching at Wayland.

"I was single then and stayed up there in my studio until 1 or 2 in the morning," he said. "One night I heard a lady singing and there was no one in the building. It was real loud."

Pair said he was told of a female voice student who had been killed in an automobile accident and supposedly was sometimes heard singing in Gates Hall.

"It petrified me later when I thought about it."

Pair openly questioned whether the voice he heard was a ghost because "It was very real."

"I started talking about it," he said. "Some people thought I was weird and crazy."

A Trailblazer reporter thought it was a good story and wrote about Pair's experience. Pair kept a copy of the story. The publicity resulted in students trying to play tricks on him when he was in the building late at night.

But Pair said there was a big difference between the pranks students played and some of the ghostly things that happened up on the third floor. From 1966 until the music department moved in 1973, Pair said there was plenty to make him suspicious.

Pre-retirement time for saving

By Deborah M. Rankin
N.Y. Times News Service

They took early retirement last year and now split their time between their comfortable home on the southwest Florida coast and cruising on their spacious boat. He is 60, she is 55. Did they do it through inherited wealth? A megabucks career in investment banking? A lottery ticket?

None of the above. The experience of this couple, who agreed to discuss their finances if their names were not published, is simply an object lesson in the rewards of a disciplined savings program. He had a second career after the military in state government and she had her own practice as a clinical social worker in the Washington area.

At the peak of their careers, their total income was about $110,000 (including his military pension) and they managed to save at least 30 percent a year of that. His three children were almost grown when they married 21 years ago. By restraining their spending and squirreling away every penny they could for the last seven years, the couple amassed an investment portfolio that now exceeds $800,000, including about $100,000 in proceeds from the sale of their former home.

It's not that they were phenomenal stock pickers who found a few lucky investments, but rather that they followed the time-honored rule of saving religiously and spreading their money among many different types of investments, said their financial planner, Norma M. Severns of Armstrong, Welch & MacIntyre in Washington.

"Their portfolio grew by a bit over 10 percent on average, which was good but not astounding," she said. "Even though the numbers in their portfolio look surprising, they are really not huge and reflect our clients' ability to stick with a conservative, middle-of-the-road asset allocation program."

The retirees are unusual in their ability — contrary to that of most Americans — to control their spending. "Our country's modest savings rate, which was about 4.5 percent of take-home pay in the fourth quarter of 1992, is a permanent fixture on the landscape," said Irwin Kellner, chief economist of the Chemical Bank. "We are a buy-now, pay-later society."

Although the nation's savings rate has bounced around over the last three decades, reaching a high of more than 10 percent in 1974 and then plummeting to about 2.25 percent in 1987, it is currently close to the historical norm. "While 4.5 percent is low compared to countries such as Germany, where thrift is a national virtue, and Japan, where tax policy encourages savings, it is not low in reference to our own history," Kellner said.

But for most individuals, it is almost certainly too low for the future. People who expect to retire in the next decade or beyond will probably have to rely much more on their own savings than did their parents, because of the likelihood that Social Security and other government benefit programs will not be as generous.

Indeed, Merrill Lynch recently released a study showing that the oldest baby boomers — those born between 1946 and 1956 — will need to triple their savings rate in order to maintain their standard of living after they turn 65. These aging boomers will need to save as much as 19 percent of their after-tax income in order to retire in style, according to the study.

Such thrift does seem daunting, but the Florida couple took advantage of every opportunity to salt away money for the future.

"We never really lived at as high a level as we could afford," the husband recalled. "Our last three cars each had more than 150,000 miles on them. We didn't get the most expensive house we could afford and didn't buy a lot of furniture. Our boat was the focus of our recreational activities, and it cost a fair amount to maintain, so we didn't go to the theater or out to eat a lot."

Though it may seem impossible for other families to save as much as these retirees, particularly families

AN EXEMPTION'S VALUE

Tax savings per exemption for a typical couple whose 1992 taxable income is...

$20,000	$345
$50,000	$644
$90,000	$713
$200,000*	$185

*Based on adjusted gross income of $250,000; exemption phased out over $157,900.

Exemptions pay off

WASHINGTON — You may have become a parent last New Year's Eve, but as far as the Internal Revenue Service is concerned you supported that new baby through all of 1992.

So, you may claim a personal exemption for the child for the full year — assuming all other requirements of the law are met. For the average U.S. family, that would translate to a tax saving of $345.

In general, each dependent claimed reduces the amount of 1992 income subject to tax by $2,300. The most obvious dependent is your child under the age of 19 who relies on you for more than half his or her support. Then come the complexities.

A dependent must meet five tests:

— RELATIONSHIP. He or she must have lived with you throughout 1992 except for being temporarily absent due to school, military service, vacation or illness, OR must be a relative. That can be a child, grandchild, stepchild, parent, grandparent, brother, sister, aunt, uncle, nephew, niece or in-law. An unmarried mate counts unless having a live-in lover violates your state law.

— INCOME. In general terms, a dependent must have had 1992 gross income under $2,300. That does not include tax-exempt income, such as welfare benefits and the nontaxable part of Social Security. There is no income limit if the dependent is your child and:

Was under 19 at the end of 1992, or

Was a full-time student and under 24 at yearend. Full-time means a full class load for at least five months of the year. A government-supervised on-farm training course also counts.

— CITIZENSHIP. The dependent must be a U.S. citizen or resident alien or a resident of Mexico or Canada.

— NO JOINT RETURN. You generally may not claim an exemption for any person who files a joint return with someone else.

— SUPPORT. You must have provided more than half the dependent's financial support last year. This includes food, shelter, clothing, transportation, medical expenses, education, child-care services, recreation and spending money. Insurance premiums, scholarships or Social Security or income taxes that you paid for the person do not count as support.

Drug makers vow to curb price hikes

N.Y. Times News Service

Eager to soften the punch of price regulation, drug makers have staged a preemptive strike: the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association has told President Clinton that the industry will voluntarily limit price increases to the cost of living.

That offer is not likely to satisfy industry critics because it would not prevent manufacturers from introducing new drugs at prices of their choosing. Nor would the proposal touch problems outlined last month by the Congressional Office of Technology Assessment: high marketing expenditures discrimination against domestic consumers and the proliferation of drugs that add nothing to the therapeutic arsenal. But it could save face for Clinton, who may think twice before plunging into this regulatory quagmire.

Prescription drugs absorb just a nickel of the American health care dollar, a smaller fraction than in any other advanced country save Britain. Moreover, pharmaceuticals are often part of the solution rather than the problem: Modern ulcer drugs, for example, are substitutes for surgery 20 times as expensive.

But there are a few clouds raining on this technological Eden. Drug makers spend one-fifth of their revenue on marketing — a mighty $10 billion. And they charge less per dose in countries where governments negotiate drug purchases. Then, too, the Office of Technology Assessment frets that manufacturers invest excessively in drugs that duplicate competitors': between 1975 and 1989, 58 percent of new drugs fell in the "me too" category.

That said, it is hard to find an economist who believes regulators would know how to keep the innovative muscle and get rid of the fat. The best hope, suggested Joseph Newhouse of Harvard, is that health care reforms will give consumers the collective muscle and expertise to bargain for the best prices — and maybe even push drug makers toward the most productive research.

Soaring Drug Prices

Inflation of prescription drug prices at both the wholesale and retail levels has far outrun general inflation since 1988. Here are figures for five top-selling prescription drugs, plus several broader indexes.

Few advisers can qualify as unbiased

By Susan Antilla
N.Y. Times News Service

All the important things seemed to check out when Tom and Midge Bailey picked someone to oversee their retirement nest egg in 1984. There was the assuring pedigree of "certified financial planner" in the adviser's background, the soothing Securities & Exchange Commission registration, the professional sounding "Personal Financial Planning Inc." on the letterhead. This was no commission-hungry broker, the Baileys thought. This was someone who would have their best interests at heart.

But by the time the Baileys filed an arbitration claim against their investment adviser six years later, their nest egg of $240,000 in cash and stock had dwindled to nearly nothing in the limited partnerships the adviser had bought for them.

In a bizarrely comic moment during the arbitration — which the Baileys won, getting a $262,828 award — the adviser made a last-ditch effort to justify what he'd done. It was perfectly appropriate to put the Baileys into oil and gas limited partnerships, the adviser said, because they were sophisticated in the

Investors considering walk on the short side

By Chet Currier
Associated Press writer

■ On the money

NEW YORK — The boom in mutual funds has been going on so long, it may be a good time for investors to go short.

Or so some contrary-minded people have been thinking lately as they watched fund assets soar to record levels while stock market indexes and bond prices climbed to new highs.

No bargains left to buy? Then, according to traditional Wall Street theory, perhaps it's time to seek ways to profit from a change of direction in the markets, assuming that the bears will have their day some time in the not-too-remote future.

There are ways to stake your money on a market decline, notably through what is known as short-selling of stocks or even mutual fund shares.

But proceed with great care, say financial advisers — the whole business can be very chancy for a small or inexperienced investor.

The basic principle of shorting reverses the order of steps in a typical investment. You sell first, using shares borrowed from a broker for that purpose, and buy back later, at a lower price if things work out as planned.

"Of course, if the stock goes up after you have sold it short, you will lose money when you have to buy the stock at a higher price," points out George Putnam III in his Turnaround Letter investment advisory.

Short-selling is a time-honored practice in the stock and commodity markets. It has been much rarer with mutual funds, whose shares aren't bought and sold in the open market the way those other securities are.

But a couple of specialized firms now offer that service to fund investors. Jack White & Co., a San Diego-based discount brokerage firm, began accepting short-sale orders for a couple of doz-

Correcting credit errors

Q. How can an error in a credit bureau report be corrected?

Fernando Orejuela, Elmhurst, Queens

A. By law, credit bureaus are required to verify any information in a credit report that is disputed by a consumer. "Write to the credit bureau which sent the report, note the error and be as specific as possible," said D. Barry Connelly, executive vice president of Associated Credit Bureaus. "If the item concerns the person's charge account information, the bureau will contact the credit grantor."

Credit grantors, not credit bureaus, are responsible for verifying whether the information in a file is in error or not. If it is in error, the data have to be corrected, although this may take time, and you will be sent a new report with the changes. If the dispute cannot be resolved, you can write a statement of up to 100 words explaining your position, which must be included in your credit report.

Home sale loss

Q. I intend to sell my five-year-old house at less than I paid for it in the soft market. Can I use this loss of money as a deduction on my income taxes?

Ronni Witkin-Schwartz, Hopewell Junction, N.Y.

A. Losses on the sale of a personal residence are not deductible. On the other hand, if you move out and convert the home to permanent rental use, you can claim a loss if the value has declined below its basis as a rental property.

This basis is either your adjusted cost or the fair market value — whichever is less — on the date of conversion. However, you must show that the basis at this time is greater than the sales price. And your deduction will not reflect any loss that occurred before the conversion.

When a primary residence is sold at a gain, however, and a new house is acquired within two years before or after that sale, under certain circumstances you can avoid paying an immediate tax. "If the cost of the new house is greater than the sales price of the former house, you can elect to defer the time to pay the tax until you sell the new house," said Peter A. Weitsen, a New Jersey certified public accountant.

Real estate payouts

Q. Are dividends and distributions from real estate investment trusts considered to be passive income and passive capital gains?

E.T. Phillips, the Bronx

A. REIT's distribute two types of dividends to their shareholders: ordinary dividends, which represent earned interest and rents, and capital gain dividends, which represent capital gains from the sale of properties. "Neither type of dividend is considered to be passive income for purposes of the passive loss rules," said Mark Decker, president of the National Association of Real Estate Investment Trusts.

Under these rules, non-passive income includes service income, income from businesses in which the taxpayer materially participates and portfolio income. REIT dividends, both ordinary and capital gain, are considered portfolio income and therefore are treated as non-passive income. A capital gain realized on the sale of REIT shares is also non-passive income.

One piece of advice is to have a dream and make it as specific as possible. "My husband wanted to stop working at age 55 and spend his retirement boating for as long as I can recall," the wife said. Regardless of whether your goal is to come up with a down payment for your first house, or college tuition for your first child, try to attach dates and dollar amounts to those targets so you know exactly what you're aiming at.

Another rule is to pay yourself first. Use whatever means possible to remove a set amount of money from your bank account each month before you have a chance to spend it.

Many companies have payroll deduction plans that withhold as little as $25 from your salary each month and invest it in Series EE savings bonds. Many mutual fund families sponsor programs that automatically transfer a set amount —usually at least $25 a month — from your bank account to one of their funds. The idea is to view personal savings obligations just like any other monthly bill.

Make use of employer-sponsored retirement savings programs like 401(k) plans. This involves deferring a portion of your pretax salary and contributing it to stock, bond or money market funds in the plan.

Not only do these contributions lower your current taxable income, but the earnings on those contributions accumulate tax-free until they are withdrawn, typically at retirement. Some companies will match contributions up to a certain level.

"Most people will discharge their obligations religiously," said Michael Stolper, president of a San Diego investment management firm that evaluates money managers for wealthy individuals. "The trick is to never, ever just have that money just sitting in the bank," where it's available for non-essential purposes.

PLANNERS: Care needed in selection

minutiae of the energy business. The evidence: Bailey had spent much of his life working as a tanker-truck driver for Amoco.

The Baileys told their chilling story this month to a subcommittee of the House Committee on Energy and Commerce, where politicians were gathered to figure out what can be done to better protect investors against some of the unscrupulous operators who call themselves "financial planners" and "investment advisers." People like the Baileys seek the advice of such professionals because they think they are knowledgeable and have their clients' interests at heart — unlike stockbrokers who are motivated by commissions.

In fact, though, the 18,600 people registered with the SEC as investment advisers don't have to pass tests, as brokers do, and they often operate with their own conflicts of interest over commissions.

Investment advisers frequently wear their SEC affiliation like a badge, but in fact have infrequent contact with the SEC. The agency's staff of 46 examiners gets a chance to inspect investment advisers once every 25 to 30 years, Sen. Christopher J. Dodd said in testimony before Congress in February. While assets under management by investment advisers soared 1,100 percent between 1981 and 1991, and the number of advisers grew from 5,100 to 18,000, the inspection staff to police them rose from 36 to 46. Sixty percent of the advisers in business for more than a year in Chicago, Denver, Los Angeles and New York have never been inspected at all.

Financial advisers give the impression that they dispense unbiased advice, but rarely live up to the "unbiased" label. The best bet for investors is to find a "fee only" planner who gets paid to give advice but doesn't earn commissions to sell products. But good luck finding one. Only 10 percent of the planners who responded to a survey by the Institute of Certified Financial Planners, a trade group, said they were fee-only planners. When the International Association for Financial Planning, another trade group, polled its members late last year, 8.2 percent of the full-time members said they were fee only.

Politicians tried and failed to pass new laws governing investment advisers last year. At the heart of the failure: the bill drafted by the House of Representatives was too aggressive for the tastes of the Senate, which supported a stripped-down bill.

Both the Senate and the House want to increase the size of the SEC staff. They have suggested raising the current one-time fee of $150 to an annual charge of $300 to $7,000, based upon the size of assets under management. The added revenues would be used to augment the examining staff. An aide to Sen. Dodd said that the increases would allow the SEC to better enforce rules already in place.

Investors can find out if an investment adviser pitching them for business has had the sort of problems Fedor uncovered. Call the North American Securities Administrators Association at (202) 737-0900 for the telephone number of your state securities regulators. Your state regulators can tell you whether the adviser's Central Registration Depository record shows any arbitration proceedings, lawsuits or disciplinary actions by securities regulators.

Rates in black bands are national averages. Small savers yields, reported by 100 Highest Yields, are based upon account-opening minimums; jumbo rates are based upon $100,000 deposit and are not compounded. Effective yield is for first year. Figures in parentheses rate financial strength, on a scale of zero to three with three the strongest, as determined by Veribanc Inc. based on reports filed with regulators. A u indicates no rating, usually due to insufficient information. Rates as of Wednesday.

SHORT: Active investors seek short selling

en funds in 1990.

On average, the firm has about $25 million worth of fund shares available for shorting on any given day, according to spokesman Barry Boyte. "It's been pretty active," Boyte says.

Fidelity Investments, the nation's largest fund management firm, accepts short-sale orders for 10 of its Select single-industry funds, which are designed for more active traders than the typical diversified fund.

Paula Slotkin, a spokeswoman at Fidelity's Boston headquarters, said the firm, which had offered the service for a couple of years in the late 1980s and then discontinued it, reinstated it in 1992 because "Select investors were asking for it."

Whatever type of security you sell short, Putnam says, "one of the most important things to keep in mind is that your losses are potentially unlimited.

"When you buy a stock, the worst that can happen is that it will go to zero and you lose the amount you paid for it. However, when you are short a stock, there is at least theoretically no limit on how high it can go — and how much money you will have to spend to close out the short position."

Other ways to try to profit from market declines exist in the options and futures markets. One standard alternative to shorting is buying put options, which give their owners the right to sell a given stock at a stated price within a set period of time.

But these vehicles also have their special risks and costs, and require considerable expertise.

Above all, investment analysts say, success in shorting or similar strategies demands an ability to time the markets that many investors may not possess. That applies in particular to any investment linked to stocks, where the long-term trend has emphatically favored those who bet with the market, not against it.

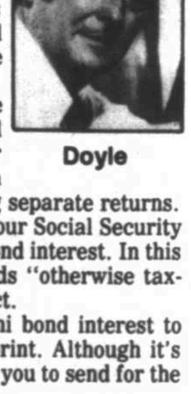
INVESTORS' GUIDE
Municipal bond funds not always tax-free

By Bill Doyle

Q: I am very confused. Municipal bond mutual funds advertise they are tax-free. But an article on retirement I read states, "You owe tax when your adjusted gross income (AGI) plus your tax-exempt interest and half your Social Security benefits exceed $32,000 for joint filers."

Where is the "tax-free"?

A: It disappears in the situation you mention.



Doyle

Interest from municipal bonds — those issued by states and their political subdivisions — normally is not subject to federal income tax nor to state or local income tax if the bonds were issued within the same state.

However, federal income tax takes a bite when the total of AGI, half of Social Security benefits and all otherwise tax-free muni bond interest tops $32,000 for a married couple filing a joint return, $25,000 for a single person and zero for most married people filing separate returns.

Technically, that results in a tax on up to half of your Social Security benefits. But it is also a backdoor tax on municipal bond interest. In this column, I have always been careful to use the words "otherwise tax-free" muni bond interest when writing on the subject.

Municipal bond mutual funds, which pass on muni bond interest to fund shareholders, explain that in prospectus fine print. Although it's not spelled out in fund advertisements, the ads do tell you to send for the prospectus.

Q: My wife and I have tax-free municipal bonds. One pays 7 percent, one 6.9 percent, the others about 6.4 percent. We also have certificates of deposit paying 4 percent. We are in the 15 percent federal income tax bracket.

You always say that people in the 15 percent bracket are better off not investing in tax-free bonds. My arithmetic proves you are wrong. Please explain.

A: Have you purchased a newly issued, high-quality municipal bond lately? If you have, it's a cinch either the bond bears an interest rate below the percentages you mention or you paid more than face value, resulting in a lower yield.

Of course, you can get higher yields on low-quality muni bonds — "junk" bonds. But then you run the risk of default on interest payments and repayment of principal when the bonds mature.

As I put this through the word processor, muni bonds rated AAA, AA and A are yielding less than CDs with similar lengths of time to maturity. Keep in mind that a short-term investment will have lower interest than a long-term investment. So, a six-month CD usually pays less than a 20- or 30-year bond.

There's a simple reason why you will do better with a CD than a muni bond of similar quality and equal maturity. The CD pays higher interest. Even after paying 15 percent income tax on that interest, you have more keeping money than you would get from the tax-free muni bond interest.

Q: In 1983, on my accountant's advice, I purchased some municipal bonds at a price well below their face value. The bonds were called for early redemption last year.

At the time of my purchase, I was told they were tax-free bonds. Now I learn that the difference between the price at which I bought the bonds and the higher redemption price I received is taxable as a capital gain.

I never received a confirmation slip for the purchase. My accountant is no longer around. The broker from whom the bonds were purchased is out of business. How can I learn the price of the bonds back in 1983?

A: Without a confirmation slip, there is no way of learning the exact price you paid. And there is no central marketplace for munis, where prices are recorded. Try coming up with an estimate.

Contact Standard & Poor's Corp., 25 Broadway, New York, NY 10004, and ask what prices were quoted for that particular bond in S&P's "Blue List" on the date you bought it.

Texas family makes doing windows an art

By Pamela Hazelton
Associated Press writer

REDWATER — Paula Braswell does windows.

If she didn't, she would be out of business and her home would be just like any other.

Mrs. Braswell and her husband, Larry, design and build custom windows and glass panels for a living. She has a habit of taking her work home with her.

Visitors to the Braswell home are greeted by original glass creations spotlighted by the sun.

A fire nearly two years ago prompted Mrs. Braswell to make her Redwater home a glass showplace.

Instead of hiring someone to do necessary remodeling, the Braswells decided to take their time and create a unique atmosphere.

Now, in place of living room windows, eight scenic panels collectively make a 30-foot-high glass wall inlaid with antique bottles and various types of glass.

AP Laserphoto

Paula Braswell

Mainly made from the bottoms of Coca-Cola bottles, the pieces are patterned to create a flourishing tree and its surroundings.

Brown bottles make up the tree's bark, while greens, blues and reds sketch out the leaves and blooms.

Candle holders are used as star burst flowers.

Mrs. Braswell has given each family member his or her own beveled peephole, which varies according to height.

Clear glass is angled at the top of the panels and two vent doors line the floor.

During the day the grass and sky shine clearly and the panels create a warm glow throughout the room.

It took the Braswells about eight months to complete the project, which began by collecting bottles from roadsides and later excavating closed landfills.

Mrs. Braswell said the wall contains a bottle from almost every state, including Hawaii. Several bottles have "Texarkana" stamped on the bottom.

To make the panels, the bottle bottoms are cut an inch thick. The design is then placed inside a 1-inch thick board and black roofing granules, much like sand, are laid 1 1/2 inch thick.

Next, a 1 1/2-inch thick layer of epoxy is poured and allowed to set until it presents a shiny glaze. Another layer of roofing granules is then sprinkled.

A quarter-inch thick sheet of protective glass was placed on the side facing out to prevent breaks and make for easier cleaning.

Mrs. Braswell began teaching herself the trade of glass work about 14 years ago. She started with how-to books from the library, experimented and later picked up techniques by watching others work.

"Glass people are real secretive," she said. Much of what she learned was by trial and error.

Her interest in glass artistry developed from working with plain leaded glass to faceted glass (inch thick glass like that found in antique bottles).

Etching is another of Mrs. Braswell's trademarks.

Visitors climbing the front porch steps are enticed by a glass door with both clear and red panels. Squirrels etched into red glass scurry down the door.

Once inside, hallway shelves display hundreds of antique poison and perfume bottles, along with several other rare, miscellaneous antiques.

It takes about three hours to dust the bottles, so a future project for the artist is to create just the right sheet of glass to set them behind.

Pigeon blood red glass, more than 150 years old, is used as a bathroom window.

A bedroom window contains pastel panels in a modern design.

Both hanging and table lamps made from patterned glass are placed throughout the home.

The back door is clear glass and is etched with birds.

Future plans include creating a rounded shower panel from strips of fine glass for the family bathroom.

While the glass worker enjoys creating her own designs, she also prefers to study antiques.

"They're made better and they've got personalities," she said.

Mrs. Braswell tends to find uses for almost any type of glass, old and new.

Many times, she will find valuable antiques, with some part cracked or broken, but she still finds a use for them, Mrs. Braswell said.

As she designs and builds windows for churches, members will bring bottles and other glass items for her to add to the collection.

Mrs. Braswell has also done glass work for the chapel in the Federal Correctional Institution in Texarkana.

She has trouble with keeping up with orders for Coke bottle wind chimes and her Coke bottle lamps are popular.

Mrs. Braswell also makes knick-knack cases from the soft drink bottles. Bottles are cut in half, outlined with solder and a hinge is attached. A half nickel acts as a clasp.

DEATHS

Jerry Early

Graveside services for Jerry Early are set for 10:30 a.m. today at Resthaven Memorial Park with the Rev. Bob Porterfield officiating. Ellis Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

Early died Saturday at a local hospital.

He was born June 23, 1938, in Midland. He was a veteran of the U.S. Navy.

Survivors include his wife, Joyce Early of Midland; a son, James H. Early of Midland, his father, Eldress Early of Big Spring; a step-brother, Ricky Early of Midland; and two sisters, Wanda Hooper of Big Spring and Lanetta Small of Amarillo.

Peggy Adam

Services for Peggy Lougene Adam of Dallas, formerly of Midland, are scheduled for 3 p.m. today at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel with the Rev. Jim Bergin of First Baptist Church officiating. Burial is to follow in Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Adam died Saturday at a Dallas hospital.

She was born Sept. 24, 1930, in San Angelo, where she was reared. Her family moved to Coahoma, where she attended school. Before she moved to Midland in 1979, Mrs. Adam lived in San Angelo and Chicago. She moved to Dallas in 1991.

She was a member of Fannin Terrace Baptist Church in Midland and Gaston Oaks Baptist Church in Dallas.

Survivors include her husband, Cal Adams of Dallas; two daughters, Marilyn Elam of Midland and Linda Sieloff of Wheaton, Ill.; four brothers, Hollis Lee Gill Jr. of Grandbury, Jay Gill of Houston, Bill Gill of San Angelo and Steve Gill of Oklahoma City; five sisters, Julia Ann Wilmot of El Paso, Laura Don Jennings, Rose Nell Hatlem, and Rita Wells, all of San Angelo, and Glenda Sue Clary of Keller; eight grandchildren and numerous nieces and nephews.

Fred Standifer

LUBBOCK — Services for Fred Standifer Sr., 66, of Lubbock, father of Gayland Standifer of Midland, are to be at 10 a.m. Tuesday at Bellaire Baptist Church with the Rev. Charles Luke officiating, and the Rev. Scot Edmondson assisting. Burial is to follow in Resthaven Memorial Park in Lubbock under the direction of Resthaven Funeral Home.

Standifer died Saturday at a Lubbock hospital.

He was born in Floydada. He moved to Lubbock from Kress in 1978. He was a farmer and a U.S. Army veteran. He belonged to the Baptist church.

He married Thelma Rigg on April 23, 1948, in Littlefield.

He was preceded in death by a son, James, on June 12, 1977.

Survivors include his wife of Lubbock; another son, Fred. J. Standifer Jr. of Levelland; three daughters, Nikie Caldwell of Carrolton, Donna Sedgwick of Eagle Lake and Gayle Selman of Plainview; three brothers, Landon Standifer of Lake Havasu, Ariz., Royce G. Standifer of Fresno, Calif., and Harvey Bishop of Littlefield; three sisters, Ted Martin of Tuscon, Ariz., Oleta Morton of Modesto, Calif., and Vera Thompson of Levelland; 11 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

■ Fatality

ODESSA — An Odessa teen-ager died Saturday when her pick-up slammed into a concrete pillar at West Loop 338 and Farm-to-Market Road 2020 in West Odessa.

Michelle Lynn Lane, 17, of Odessa was eastbound on FM 2020 at 8:40 p.m. Saturday, when she lost control of her 1991 Ford Ranger pickup after passing two other eastbound vehicles, according to Department of Public Safety reports. The pickup went into a broadside skid and struck the concrete support on the passenger side.

Miss Lane was declared dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Dennis Bright and her body was taken to Odessa Medical Center for an autopsy. The investigation into the cause of the accident continues, DPS said.

■ Robbery

Police are seeking a suspect in an aggravated robbery that occured just before 3 a.m. Sunday in Midland.

The suspect, described as a black man in his 40s, 6-feet, 3-inches tall and weighing 200 pounds and wearing a trenchcoat, walked into the Friends' convenience store at 610 Andrews Highway at 2:49 a.m., police reports said.

The man displayed a handgun, took assorted alcoholic beverages and an undetermined amount of cash and left without injuring the store's clerk. The suspect left the scene in a black pickup truck, police said.

TV movie on Waco crisis ends where siege begins

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The television movie about the religious cult under siege in Texas probably will skirt the problem of the still-unresolved real-life ending by concluding the day the standoff started, the production company owner says.

The movie version of the saga of David Koresh and the Branch Davidians will be part of Patchett-Kaufman Entertainment's series for NBC on "the tragic deaths of law-enforcement persons," said Ken Kaufman, owner of the Los Angeles-based company.

The "In the Line of Duty" series format stresses "what led up this situation," Kaufman said.

So most of the movie will deal with Koresh's life before February and "our movie most likely will end at sunset Feb. 28," the day four federal agents and a reported 10 cult members died in the failed raid that started the seige, he said.

The movie company is building a mock-up of the Branch Davidian compound outside Waco, at a boys ranch near Mounds. Other Oklahoma locations will be used to depict the early days of Koresh, the movie makers said.

Director Dick Lowry, who has directed four of the five movies in the "In the Line of Duty" series, grew up in Oklahoma City.

Lowry realized watching news coverage from Waco that the landscape "looked a lot like Oklahoma," he said.

The State in brief

■ Officer remains in critical condition

HOUSTON — A police officer shot twice in the head while working a desk job for a sick colleague remained in critical condition Sunday, authorities said.

Dan Vaughan, 36, a 10-year veteran with the Houston Police Department, was shot in the forehead and jaw with a .380-caliber pistol Saturday by a man who opened fire at the South Central Police Substation.

The man walked into the substation, calmly asked to see a supervisor and then shot Vaughan with a gun he had pulled from a backpack. He fled the station, but was arrested a few minutes later.

Gilbert Earl Smith, 22, was charged Sunday with three counts of attempted capital murder of a police officer and ordered held on $750,000 bond, police said.

Vaughan underwent surgery Saturday at Ben Taub Hospital, where he remained in critical condition Sunday. The shooting occurred shortly before noon.

■ Garwood, supporter of Contras, dead at 89

AUSTIN — Ellen Clayton Garwood, who donated $2.5 million to conservative groups backing Nicaraguan Contras and later testified in behalf of former White House aide Oliver North, has died. She was 89.

Mrs. Garwood died Saturday, apparently of natural causes, while doing her daily swim in a pool at her apartment complex, authorities said.

Her donations to the Nicaraguan Contras, which made up the bulk of $3 million raised by the National Endowment for the Preservation of Liberty, earned her personal thanks from President Reagan.

Mrs. Garwood was the daughter of State Department official Will Clayton, who in 1947 worked on the Marshall Plan that helped save Greece and Turkey from communism after World War II.

During North's trial in 1989, Mrs. Garwood testified that her father's work was an inspiration to her aiding the Contras.

Mrs. Garwood testified that North described "desperate" Contra needs to her, but she asserted firmly that he never directly asked for or received money from her while he was a White House aide.

She is survived by her son and three sisters, Julia Baker of Baltimore, Susan McAshan of Houston and Burdine Johnson of Tennessee.

Services were scheduled for 3 p.m. Tuesday at St. Matthew's Episcopal Church in Austin.

■ 3 win Lotto jackpot in Saturday's drawing

AUSTIN — Three tickets were purchased bearing the winning numbers in the latest Lotto Texas drawing, the state comptroller's office said Sunday.

The winning tickets were sold in El Paso County, Central Texas and South Texas, and the winners will split an estimated jackpot of $3 million.

No other details on the top winners were released.

The numbers drawn Saturday night were: 4-7-17-20-21-42.

There were 251 tickets sold that match five of six numbers, for a prize of $676 each. Seventy eight dollars will be given for each of the 7,813 tickets sold that matched four numbers, and $3 for the 142,932 tickets matching three numbers.

Perot returns to prime time television

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ross Perot returned to prime-time TV Sunday, urging Americans to vote for deficit reduction and government reform — and to join the expanding rolls of his national political organization.

Billionaire Perot distributed more than 30 million ballots in advance of the 30-minute "national referendum" he paid to air on NBC. Leaders of his United We Stand America group organized events nationwide to help fill the mails with a positive response.

Given those efforts, the survey's unscientific nature and the tone of Perot's questions, no one should be surprised if the public gives Perot's agenda a resounding, "Yes!"

Even as they criticized the format, the political parties and analysts were watching closely, still fascinated by the man who sent the 1992 race into so many confounding turns.

"The Perot people are still holding as a group," said President Clinton's pollster, Stanley Greenberg, although he said a majority support Clinton's economic program.

Worried that Perot might attack Clinton's initiative, the Democratic National Committee sent a memo to leading Democrats last week urging them to respond quickly to any criticisms.

But, as has been his trademark since the election, Perot aimed most of his barbs at Congress.

"Watch Congress: they talk about savings but what they want to do is spend," Perot said in a transcript of the program released by his office. "They treat money like it falls out of the sky. But it comes from hard-working people."

With his trademark charts and folksy twang, Perot promoted the staples of his agenda: campaign finance and lobbying reform; a balanced budget amendment; and cuts in staffs, salaries and perks in Congress and at the White House.

Perot's format was denounced by polling experts who said the questions were leading and the results guaranteed to be unreliable.

For example, Perot asked, "Should laws be passed to eliminate all possibilities of special interests giving huge sums of money to candidates?"

Reams of polling data suggest the public would answer "Yes" to that and most of the questions posed by Perot in the first of what he promises will be a series similar programs.

Since winning an historic 19 percent of the vote last year, Perot has promised to build an unrivaled grassroots political organization to pressure Washington and the states to enact fiscal and political reforms.

He has traveled the country and aired television ads soliciting members for a $15 annual fee. Looking for more recruits, Perot's people will tabulate the ballots by congressional district and add the names to a mailing list that already rivals those of the major political parties.

Perot was so concerned reaction to the program be favorable that he taped two versions and aired the one given the best review at a Texas screening. He spent more than $700,000 of his own money for the network time and ballot distribution, aides said.

The broadcast comes at a time when Perot is enjoying high favorability ratings with the public. For example, 59 percent of those surveyed last week in a Time magazine-CNN poll viewed Perot favorably and 56 percent thought forming United We Stand America was a good idea. Although Perot says he would "rather have major surgery without anesthesia" than run for office again, 65 percent of the 800 adults polled said they expected another Perot candidacy.

Program sentences truants to nursing home duty

HOUSTON (AP) — A new program that offers truant public school students the option of working at local nursing homes has proved successful for both the youths and elderly residents, officials say.

The program was the brainchild of Harris County nursing home coordinator Barbara Cowart. In January she approached Peace Justice Molly Maness of Pasadena, who hears truancy cases.

"What was missing in this program was some young faces," Cowart said. "These kids have so much energy. I thought, what if you could put that energy into positive action."

Maness agreed, and schoolchildren caught violating school attendance laws now are offered the option of after-school-hours community service instead of fines charged to their parents.

"It's the most bizarre thing," Maness said about the notion of closing such a wide generation gap in the name of alternative sentencing.

But she added that it works for everyone involved.

"They love it," she said.

Thirteen-year-old Josephine knows why. The one-time truant, whose real name was withheld because she is a minor, said it's more than a matter of good deeds and new friendships.

Truants and nursing home residents have more in common than some people think, she said after completing 14 hours worth of nursing home duty.

"I'm a good listener, and that's what these people need is a listener and a person who will talk to them," Josephine said.

She said her peers also need someone to talk to.

"They need to say, like, 'Can we sit down and discuss all this?'" she said.

Some nursing homes in Pasadena, Deer Park and La Porte are participating in the program, which started Jan. 19. Since then, 18 truants have signed up.

They do chores ranging from reading to residents and helping with clerical work to playing games and visiting with residents.

Waltrip wins

COLLEGE STATION — Darrell Waltrip used superior fuel consumption to his advantage, winning by a full lap Sunday in the ARCA-NASCAR Winston West Shootout at Texas World Speedway.

Ken Schrader was second, one lap plus 1.5 seconds behind, followed by Tim Steele, Herschel McGriff and Dale Earnhardt.

Waltrip was the only driver still to pit when Eddie Bierschwale spun out on the 78th lap of the 500-kilometer event, bringing out a caution flag and putting the entire field 2 miles down. The three-time Winston Cup champion stopped with the rest of the field under caution, then coasted the rest of the way.

Waltrip, who averaged 135.505 mph, was turning laps as high as 188 despite his comfortable lead over fellow Winston Cup drivers Schrader and Earnhardt.

The Winston Cup trio, making a rare appearance on the ARCA and Winston West circuit, had charged from the back of the 43-car lineup.

JUCO champs

HUTCHINSON, Kan. — Encouragement from friends and fans, along with regrets at quitting school, are what got Paul O'Liney back to Pensacola, Fla.

Now, the 6-foot-2 guard is in the national junior college basketball spotlight.

O'Liney scored 11 consecutive points for his team late in the second half and Pensacola became the first school from Florida to win the National Junior College Athletic Association tournament, defeating Butler County, Kan., 79-74, Saturday night.

It was the second straight year Butler County finished second, losing to Three Rivers, Mo., 78-77, last March.

In consolation games, Vincennes, Ind., defeated Indian Hills, Iowa, for third place, 109-94; Mississippi Gulf Coast edged Rose State, Okla., 81-80 in overtime for fifth place, and the College of Southern Idaho beat Odessa, Texas, 86-84, for seventh place.

O'Liney was the tournament's most valuable player, finishing with game highs of 22 points and 10 rebounds. He was the No. 2 scorer in the tournament with 88 points. Shelly Clark of Indian Hills led with 96 points.

Michigan alive with OT victory

Associated Press

Michigan took its time, and almost too much of it.

But the Wolverines beat the shot clock and the game buzzer with Jimmy King's rebound basket for an 86-84 overtime victory Sunday over UCLA in the NCAA West Regional.

Michigan, the top seed, had overcome a 19-point deficit and nearly lost at the end of regulation before controlling the ball for one last overtime shot against the Bruins.

Taking time off the clock, Michigan's shot was an off-balance attempt by Jalen Rose with barely 1 second left on the shot clock and about 4 seconds left in overtime. It missed badly but King was there for the rebound.

Harrick defends harangue

Associated Press

TUCSON, Ariz. — UCLA coach Jim Harrick stormed around the empty arena for an hour after the final buzzer capped the chaos, unconvinced that Michigan beat his team in one of the most disputed endings in NCAA history.

Finally, he admitted he was wrong about a key call that gave Michigan an 86-84 overtime victory Sunday in their NCAA West Regional second-round game.

But he still didn't accept defeat, and perhaps he never will.

"I've got to know, I've got to know," Harrick cried plaintively as he paced in the UCLA locker room and the hallways and back onto the court, searching for a television to watch the replays.

"I've got to live with this the rest of my life. I've got my life on these games. I want to do what's right for the young people. If that shot didn't beat the clock it's a crying shame to lose this way."

Mansell wins in Indy debut

Associated Press

SURFERS PARADISE, Australia — Nigel Mansell reinforced his reputation as one of motorsport's most sensational drivers on Sunday, winning the Australian Indy car race in his series debut.

It wasn't what the 39-year-old Formula One champion would consider an artistic success as he battled eventual second-place finisher Emerson Fittipaldi of Brazil.

Teo Fabi drove the entry from Hall/VDS Racing, based in Midland, to a ninth-place finish.

Mansell was black-flagged on the 15th lap for passing on a caution flag, and several laps later pitted needlessly when he thought he had a tire puncture.

"There was a yellow flag there?" asked Mansell. "I didn't know it. This is embarrassing. I've got my rookie stripes on, and we know why now."

The black flag resulted in a "stop-and-go" penalty in the pits, which he used to change tires and take on more fuel. But that early stop forced him to make an extra pit stop for fuel late in the race.

He took on barely enough to finish. His Newman-Haas racing team Lola began to sputter on the last lap and he ran out of fuel only seconds into his victory lap.

Mansell also clipped the wall once and squealed rubber out of the pits with cold tires, forgetting that the Indy car circuit does not allow tires to be pre-warmed as they are in Formula One.

"We have not had a trouble-free run, but it's been a long time since I

Fabi still seeks right mix

Staff report

SURFERS PARADISE, Australia — As Nigel Mansell was crossing the finish line to win his first-ever Indy car race here Sunday, a disappointed Teo Fabi was finishing ninth in the Gold Coast Indy Car Grand Prix.

Fabi ran as high as sixth place for most of the race but finished one lap behind Mansell. He lost three positions during his second and final pit stop of the 65-lap race, run on a 2.8-mile street course through this beach resort town.

Fabi complained that the Pennzoil Special, out of the Hall/VDS Racing shops in Midland, seemed to be down on power and losing strength as the race went along. Handling was good, he said, except for a slight "push", or understeer.

Next weekend at an open test session at Phoenix International Raceway, Fabi will get a chance to work on the car setup in preparation for the Phoenix 200, the next event on the IndyCar schedule.

on Sunday in the NCAA Midwest Regional.

The Ladyjacks advanced to the final 16 for the second straight year and will be at home for the next round Thursday. The Midwest Regional semifinals and finals will all be played in Nacogdoches.

Deneen Parker scored 17 of her 32 points in the first 10 minutes for Stephen F. Austin. She made 6 of 7 shots, including two 3-pointers, as the Ladyjacks built a 31-27 lead. Her 32 points was her best effort at home and three shy of her career best against Southern Mississippi on Feb. 22.

Shandy Bryan led the Lady Tigers (19-1) with 16 points.

Hobbled Sampras romps to title

■ Shin splints can't stop Pete Sampras from winning the Lipton Championships.

Associated Press

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. — Pete Sampras limped off the court when he should have been strutting.

The second-ranked American overcame shin splints and overpowered MaliVai Washington 6-3, 6-2 in Sunday's final at the Lipton Championships.

With his left foot hurting, Sampras smacked aces and winners so he wouldn't have to run. He moved gingerly between points, then won them simply by hitting the ball harder than Washington.

"To play with pain is not any fun," Sampras said. "Fortunately, I was able to play through it, and I played OK."

No, better than OK. He dealt out six aces and 11 service winners, many on important points. He totaled 34 winners to nine for Washington.

Most significant, Sampras dominated the pivotal points. He was 3 for 3 on break point against Washington, and 8 for 8 when Washington had a break opportunity.

"He did what he had to do," Washington said. "He's No. 2 in the world for a reason."

The thunder in Sampras' forehand might have had something to do with the throb in his foot.

"Sometimes you might suck it up and say, 'I have to win this point so I don't have to play another point and can change sides and rest,'" he said. "I didn't want to get into a lot of long rallies."

Now, he'll rest for two weeks and hope to do better. He'll also undergo a bone scan to make sure there's no stress fracture.

Ewing out-duels Robinson

Associated Press

■ NBA Roundup

NEW YORK — Patrick Ewing outscored David Robinson 30-10 and the New York Knicks extended their winning streaks to nine games overall and 13 at home with a 115-96 rout of San Antonio Sunday.

Ewing dominated the battle of U.S. Olympic team centers from the beginning, combining with John Starks to bury the Spurs in the first quarter.

The Knicks, who improved their record at Madison Square Garden to 30-4, made 68 percent of their shots and opened a 39-19 lead with 23 seconds left in the opening period.

Starks scored 16 of his 25 points on 6-for-8 shooting, including three 3-pointers, in the first quarter, while Ewing scored 14 points on 7-for-9 shooting. Doc Rivers had eight assists in the period.

Sonics 100, Rockets 89

HOUSTON — Gary Payton scored 27 points and Seattle held off a late Houston charge for a victory that extended the SuperSonics' winning streak to six in a row over the Rockets.

It was Houston's second straight loss after Portland snapped its 15-game winning streak Friday night. Seattle has won 16 of its last 19 games.

Hakeem Olajuwon led the Rockets with 32 points and 14 rebounds. Ricky Pierce added 24 points for the Sonics.

Nets 106, Mavericks 84

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Drazen Petrovic scored 21 points and Derrick Coleman added 15 points and 15 rebounds as the New Jersey Nets bombarded Dallas, ending the Mavericks' season-high two-game winning streak.

The win was the third in row and eighth in nine games for the Nets, and also extended New Jersey's home winning streak to five games.

Dallas, which defeated Orlando and Philadelphia last week, is now 1-30 on the road. The lone win was at Philadelphia Friday night.

The Mavericks, led by Sean Rooks with 17 points, played like a team that had won six games all season. They shot 26.1 percent from the field in the opening half (12 of 46) and scored just 30 points, New Jersey's best defensive effort of the season.

Hornets 99, Timberwolves 95

MINNEAPOLIS — Alonzo Mourning had 24 points and 14 rebounds and the Charlotte Hornets won for the first time in franchise history at Minnesota.

Tyrone Bogues scored five points in the final 1:07 to help secure the Hornets' victory. Larry Johnson had 20 points and 13 rebounds and Dell Curry scored 21 points for Charlotte, now 1-4 on the road against the Timberwolves.

Christian Laettner had 27 points, 18 rebounds and seven assists for Minnesota, but scored just two fourth-quarter points. Micheal Williams scored 23 points and 22 for the Wolves.

Pistons 106, Lakers 101

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Joe Dumars scored 11 of his 17 points in the fourth quarter and the Detroit Pistons held off the Los Angeles Lakers.

Reserve guards Gerald Glass and Danny Young added 16 and 15 points, respectively, for Detroit as the Pistons avenged a recent home-court loss to the Lakers.

Glass hit a pair of baseline jumpers and Young connected on a 3-point shot during a critical 7-2 Pistons spurt midway through the fourth quarter to give Detroit a 94-85 lead with 5:05 remaining, the largest lead by either team in the second half. Los Angeles twice closed within three points during the final 1:20 on 3-point shots by Sedale Threatt and A.C. Green, but Dumars sank six consecutive free throws in the final 70 seconds to ice the victory.

Celtics 106, Blazers 104

PORTLAND, Ore. — Reggie Lewis' season-high 37 points led Boston, but it took Sherman Douglas' driving layup in the final seconds to give the Celtics a win over the Portland Trail Blazers.

The victory completed a West Coast sweep of four games for the Celtics, who now have won five straight road games and six of their last seven.

Douglas' drive to the basket and layup with 9.2 seconds left gave Boston a 106-104 lead after Terry Porter's layup at the other end was blocked by Robert Parish.

Pacers 109, Suns 108

PHOENIX — Reggie Miller scored 26 points, including Indiana's last nine of the game, as the Pacers defeated Phoenix to snap their nine-game road losing streak.

Phoenix, 28-4 at home, has lost only to Eastern Conference foes Chicago, Cleveland, New Jersey and Indiana in the new America West Arena. The Suns are 2-2 in their last four games, suffering their worst beating of the season in a 124-93 defeat at the hands of the New Jersey Nets on March 13.

The Pacers trailed 67-53 at the half before storming back to take an 84-83 lead into the fourth quarter. Detlef Schrempf had 10 of his 20 points in the third quarter and assisted on the last two baskets.

Clifford Rozier (44) of Louisville snares a rebound away from Fred Burley of Oklahoma State. The Cardinals eliminated OSU with a 78-63 decision.

NCAA: GW lowest remaining seed

(From 1C)

UCLA argued that Rose's shot never hit the rim before the shot clock expired, making King's rebound illegal.

After a long debate, the officials confirmed the basket and gave UCLA 1.5 seconds for a last-gasp attempt. Ed O'Bannon's shot missed, allowing Michigan to escape into the regional semifinals.

Next for the Wolverines is George Washington, which scored the game's first 10 points and advanced to the final 16 for the first time in school history, defeating Southern 90-80. The victory left the 12th-seeded Colonials the lowest seed left in the tournament.

"We knew inside we were an NCAA tournament team, and that we could make some noise," said Sonni Holland, who led GW with 19 points. "We play in a very good league (Atlantic 10) and that helps us a lot."

"My smile on the outside is probably one-tenth the one that I have inside," GW coach Mike Jarvis said.

On Saturday, Vanderbilt and Temple advanced to the other West semifinal at Seattle Friday. The Commodores took out Illinois 85-68 and the Owls finished off Santa Clara 68-57.

MIDWEST REGIONAL

Indiana 73, Xavier, Ohio 70

Top-seeded Indiana scored 12 of its last 16 points from the foul line after blowing leads of 13 points in the first half and 9 in second.

"They count, don't they?" coach Bob Knight said of the free throws. "That's part of it. It's points. ... If you add them both up and you've got more than the other guy has, you win."

Four of the foul shots were scored by Calbert Chaney, who had 23 points as Indiana (30-3) reached 30 victories for the fourth time.

The last time Knight's team won 30 was 1987, when it also won the national championship. The school record is 32 by the 1975-76 team, which went undefeated and won the NCAA title.

Louisville, 78, Oklahoma State 63

After sitting through a 21-minute power failure in the first half and falling 10 points behind in the second half, Louisville rallied past Oklahoma State.

James Brewer, who suffered a concussion two days ago in the first round, scored 26 points as the Cardinals wore down the Cowboys, making 13 of their final 16 shots after missing their first eight shots of the second half.

Louisville next plays Indiana in the regional semifinals at St. Louis on Thursday. "The best part," coach Denny Crum said, "is we're moving on to the final 16 and get to play a team that's ranked No. 1 in the nation. There's no pressure on us, because we're not supposed to win. The pressure's on them, so we'll be relaxed."

Thursday's other Midwest pairing set Saturday sends Kansas against California. The Jayhawks, seeded No. 2 in the region, eliminated Brigham Young 90-76, and Cal ended defending champion Duke's hopes for a third straight title, 82-77.

EAST REGIONAL

Cincinnati 92, New Mexico State 55

Cincinnati, a Final Four team last year, made 10 of 15 shots — 4 of 7 from 3-point range — in the first 8:36 to bury New Mexico State. LaZelle Durden nailed three of the 3-pointers. The Aggies managed 2 for 10 and turned the ball over nine times as the Bearcats went on a 14-0 run and led 27-4.

By halftime, Cincinnati's lead was 50-18. What did New Mexico State coach Neil McCarthy say in the locker room?

"I told them if they could get a 32-point lead on us we could turn it around and go up 33 on them," McCarthy said. "I don't know if anybody believed me, but I figured it was a good line."

Sub Tarrance Gibson finished with a career-high 25 points, while Erik Martin added 21, including 17 in the first half.

Virginia 71, Massachusetts 56

Virginia's stifling man-to-man defense built a 17-point lead and then the Cavaliers held off a UMass rally that cut the lead to 46-43. A 9-0 Virginia run touched off by Jason Williford's three-point play put the Cavaliers back in charge.

"When they started to make their run, everyone buckled down," said Corey Alexander, who led Virginia with 17 points. "We went to simple plays and returned to playing hard defense."

Virginina plays Cincinnati in Friday's East regional semifinals at East Rutherford, N.J. The other East matchup on Friday pits No. 1 seed North Carolina against Arkansas. The Tar Heels battered Rhode Island 112-67 on Saturday and Arkansas ended St. John's season, 80-74.

SOUTHEAST REGIONAL

Wake Forest 84, Iowa 78

Rodney Rogers scored 33 points, including 12 of the final 19 for the Demon Deacons.

After Rogers tied it 75-75 with 2:34 left, Randolph Childress hit a 3-pointer at 1:45 that gave Wake Forest the lead for good. Childress finished with 25 points.

Wake Forest coach Dave Odom said Rodgers came through at the right time. "The really great players sense when the game is on the line, and they understand what they can do to affect the game," he said.

Acie Earl led Iowa with 16 but was held scoreless over the final 7½ minutes. Wade Lookingbill, who had 15 for the Hawkeyes, did not score over the last 11½ minutes.

Kentucky 83, Utah 62

Jamal Mashburn and top-seeded Kentucky blitzed Utah in the early going, racing to a 27-8 lead on the way to an easy victory.

Four of Kentucky's first seven baskets were 3-pointers, including two by Mashburn, who scored 16 of his 19 points in the first half.

Utah got no closer than 17 in the second half.

Longhorns down Coogs 8-5

Associated Press

■ SWC Baseball

AUSTIN — Stephen Larkin had three singles and scored twice and Jeff Conway knocked in two with a double in the pivotal fourth inning as No. 1 Texas beat Houston 8-5 Saturday.

The Longhorns (26-5, 2-1 Southwest Conference) won the rubber game of the series behind the superb relief effort of Ryan Kjos, who earned his first save of the season via five innings of shutout, two-hit pitching.

Kjos' showing made a winner out of Greg Hillman (1-0), who relieved starter J.D. Smart and pitched only one-third of the inning.

Houston (20-11, 1-5) was led by Shane Buteaux's three hits and J.J. Matzke's two RBIs.

Matzke gave the Cougars a 3-2 lead with a two-RBI double in the top of the third and David Galvin added to the lead with a solo home run in the fourth to push the lead to 4-2.

Texas responded with three runs of its own in the fourth off Houston starter and loser Jeff Wright (3-2).

TCU 3, Texas A&M 2

FORT WORTH — Kelly Johns struck out a career-best 13 batters in nine innings as Texas Christian beat Texas A&M to salvage the third game of a Southwest Conference series.

The Aggies led 2-0 after 1½ innings on RBI singles by Brian Thomas and Scott Smith.

TCU scored single runs in the second and sixth to tie the game.

Arizona St. 15, Rice 10

TEMPE — Arizona State scored seven runs in the second inning, including three on Bill Dunn's bases loaded double with two outs, and went on to beat Rice in non-conference play.

The Sun Devils got two more runs in the fifth on Todd Cady's sixth home run of the year to go up 9-1.

WOMEN: Auburn downs Louisville

(From 1C)

66-61 and North Carolina edged Alabama 74-73 in overtime in the Mideast, and Southern Cal beat Nebraska 78-60 in the West.

East

Ohio St. 91, Rutgers 60

Averrill Roberts led five double-figure scorers with 19 as Ohio State beat Rutgers. The Buckeyes advanced to Richmond, Va., on Thursday to play Western Kentucky.

Katie Smith had 17 points, Stacie Howard 14, Nikki Keyton 12 and Audrey Burcy 11 for the Buckeyes (25-3). The Lady Knights (22-9) were led by Janell Williams' 16 points.

Ohio State went on an early 16-0 run and led 48-29 lead at the half. The Buckeyes had their largest lead, 83-42, with 7:20 left.

Virginia 69, Florida 55

Virginia opened with a 13-2 surge and rolled past Florida behind Dena Evans' 24 points. Virginia (25-5) will face Georgetown in Thursday's semifinals in Richmond. Florida (19-10) never got closer than six points after Virginia's early tear.

Bridget Pettis scored 25 points for Florida, which was outrebounded 51-35.

Mideast

Auburn 66, Louisville 61

Auburn used a second-half surge sparked by Lauretta Freeman to beat Louisville. The third-seeded Lady Tigers (25-3) will play No. 2 Iowa in Iowa City on Thursday.

Auburn trailed 40-39 with 16:27 remaining. But the Lady Tigers went on a 16-2 run that included five points from Freeman, who finished with 22 points and 12 rebounds.

Auburn led 55-42 when Louisville (19-12) began its own 15-4 run to pull within two points with 2:54 remaining. But Auburn's Samantha Williams hit a three-pointer and Danielette Coleman made a layup to put the game out of reach.

"We were very, very impressed with our ability to disrupt their offense and become a very good rebounding team," Auburn coach Joe Ciampi said.

North Carolina 74, Alabama 73 OT

Stephanie Lawrence hit a 3-point jumper with five seconds left in overtime, lifting North Carolina over Alabama.

It was Lawrence's only field goal all day, but it was good enough to send North Carolina (23-6) into the semifinals, where the Tar Heels will face Tennessee. North Carolina earned its third trip to the regional semifinals in seven NCAA tournaments.

Yolanda Watkins' three-point play with 29.2 seconds left gave Alabama (22-9) a 73-71 edge. North Carolina worked 10 seconds off the clock before taking a timeout to set up Lawrence's winning goal.

"It was just instinct, habit, going through the motion," Lawrence said. "I didn't really even think about it. I just shot it. I knew it was going in."

West

Southern Cal 78, Nebraska 60

Jualeah Woods scored 16 points and grabbed a career-high 12 rebounds to lead 15th-ranked Southern Cal past No. 22 Nebraska.

Lisa Leslie had 15 points and nine rebounds and Nicky McCrimmon had 15 points and eight assists for Southern Cal, which broke the game open with 20 straight points to take a 57-41 lead with nine minutes left.

The Trojans (22-6), seeded third in the West, will meet fifth-ranked Texas Tech (27-3), the second seed, on Thursday night in the regional semifinals at Missoula, Mont.

Karen Jennings led Nebraska (23-8) with 16 points and 13 rebounds, but made only seven of her 20 field goal attempts and two of six free throws.

HARRICK: Coach acknowledges ruling

(From 1C)

This is what all the fuss was about:

There were 9.6 seconds on the game clock and 7 seconds on the shot clock when Michigan inbounded the ball after a timeout at 84-84. As time ran down, Jalen Rose drove from the left side of the basket and threw up a shot from about 10 feet. The ball caromed off the backboard, grazed the rim and was tapped back in by Jimmy King.

Harrick initially screamed that Rose's miss did not hit the rim and a shot clock violation should have been called. He also believed that the shot clock rule was changed several years ago so that the ball had to hit the rim, not just leave the shooter's hand, before the 45-second shot clock expired.

He later acknowledged that he misunderstood the shot clock rule, and television replays showed that Rose's shot did indeed hit the rim.

Harrick said he begged the officials to look at the TV replay of Rose's bank shot in the final seconds, only to be told that NCAA rules prohibited that.

"The official can do anything he wants," Harrick said. "If I was an official, I wouldn't want that on my shoulders the rest of my life. ... If it's wrong, it's a sad, sad situation."

The clock showed 00:00, but the referees restored 1.5 seconds, giving UCLA a last-gasp chance that faded when Ed O'Bannon missed a desperation shot from about 25 feet.

Harrick's disbelief lingered, even after the disputed play was replayed over and over following the game.

"Right now I'm not certain," Harrick said, regretting that the uncertainty will forever define this game.

RACE: Big crowd turns out for opener enjoyed myself more," Mansell said. His time of 1 hour, 52 minutes and 2.886 seconds was a race record for the three-year-old event.

Mansell's presence also helped bring out the spectators — 81,000 turned out Sunday and more than 200,000 over four days, both event records.

It marked only the second time in the history of Indy car racing that a "rookie" has won his debut race. The only other driver to achieve the feat was Graham Hill — whom Mansell had once described as his idol — in the 1966 Indianapolis 500.

Mansell and Fittipaldi, last year's Australian champion, exchanged the lead six times throughout the 65-lap, 181.675-mile race. Mansell had won the pole position with a lap-record time on Friday.

Fittipaldi was 5.113 seconds behind in his Penske Racing Team Chevy while Robby Gordon, in his A.J. Foyt Enterprises Lola, was third.

Mansell teammate Mario Andretti, starting his 30th year in auto racing, finished fourth, while Arie Luyendyk of the Netherlands was fifth. Luyendyk was also lucky with his fuel, gliding across the finish line after running out on the final lap.

Mansell, who announced his intention to switch to Indy car racing last September, had set a single-lap record on Friday that stood up through Saturday's qualifying. His speed of 102.095 mph broke the previous single-lap record of 101.900 set by Al Unser Jr., last year.

He was the sixth driver in the 81-year history of Indy car racing to win the pole in his first event, and the first since 1956 when Jud Larson achieved the feat in the Hoosier 100-mile race in Indianapolis. None of those previous five pole-sitters ever won the race, but Mansell managed to break that jinx on Sunday.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

MONDAY, MARCH 22, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A legal settlement could be made in your favor. Take care of deserving friends, but keep an eye out for your own financial interests as well. Include older offspring in major family decisions. They will be much more cooperative if they know their vote counts! Travel, if that is the only way you can get the rest you need. Your work associates must learn to take on more responsibility.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: composers Stephen Sondheim and Andrew Lloyd Webber, singer George Benson, sportscaster Bob Costas.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Avoid renewing old arguments with family members. There are occasions when one should forget as well as forgive. Use your organizational talents to get a fundraising drive on track.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Rewards obtained through gainful employment are a sure thing. Those expected from games of chance seldom materialize. Tackling your job with zeal will earn your co-workers' respect.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Concentrate on an important work project during the early morning. Later on, interruptions will be irritating but unavoidable. Sidestep any involvement in your co-workers' private affairs.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Do not harbor any illusions regarding outdated economic practices. What was profitable yesterday could be impractical today. A romantic interest should not be taken lightly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The creative streak you now have going will benefit you even more if you adopt an associate's ideas. Take regular rest breaks.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A long-cherished wish could come true if you really push for it now. Utilize your network of contacts near and far — reach for the stars! A platonic relationship gradually turns romantic.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Set your personal affairs aside today, even if certain things are really bugging you. Focus on the job — that is where satisfaction and financial success lie. A romance begins to heat up.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Opening new channels of communication at work puts you on the right track with your colleagues. If you can settle a problem quietly and privately, more power to you!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Make "business as usual" your motto today. Remove yourself from a potential clash between co-workers. Otherwise, neither you nor your associates will feel at ease.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A domestic or career snag could hinder progress this morning. Avoid being part of the problem. Limit the hand-wringing and search for practical solutions. Spend some quality time on your own.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Plotting the future gets you back on course. A business or legal pact is strengthened. Overseas players may assist. Keep sight of your long-term goals.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You and a co-worker discover that you have more in common than you realized. Higher-ups will make an important concession. Even a token gift would mean a lot to a loved one.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Void ♡KQ85 ◇AK76 ♣QJ854
What is your opening bid?
A.—A one-club opening bid works fine if partner responds in one of the red suits. The problem arises when partner's response is one spade or one no trump. Following the Principle of Preparedness, we would opt for an opening bid of one diamond, allowing us to rebid two clubs if partner does not raise or bid hearts.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ984 ♡96 ◇AK8 ♣K105
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one heart. What action do you take?
A.—You have a good hand, but don't get carried away. Unless partner can act freely, you are going nowhere. A one-spade overcall is all your hand warrants for the moment.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠653 ♡Q8732 ◇1092 ♣A4
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Dbl	?

What do you bid now?
A.—It's simply a matter of how many hearts to bid. Had the hand not been balanced we would have favored four hearts. Our length in hearts detracts from partner's defensive capability, so we feel partner might expect more defense if we simply raise to two hearts. That swings the decision to a preemptive jump to three hearts, which is just about right.

Q.4—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J4 ♡Q8532 ◇KJ64 ♣Q4
Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?
A.—If you play transfer bids, bid two diamonds and then continue with two no trump over partner's forced heart rebid. If you don't, you can show invitational values by first responding two clubs, Stayman. If partner rebids two diamonds, show your hearts; if partner bids hearts, raise to three hearts; and if partner has a spade suit, rebid two no trump.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A ♡AK853 ◇Void ♣AQ98762
As South, what is your opening bid?
A.—If you play that all two-bids are natural and forcing, by all means open two clubs. If, however, your two-club openings are game-forcing and artificial and you choose that bid, a three-diamond response from partner or preemptive tactics by the opponents, among other things that might happen, could result in your losing the heart suit. Our choice would be one club.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠7 ♡KQ83 ◇97653 ♣985
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What action do you take?
A.—If we could be sure that, over a one-no-trump response, partner would bid a new suit that would be our choice. Unfortunately, we have found that partner usually worsens the predicament by rebidding two spades or raising no trump. Our choice would be to pass. We don't mind if the opponents get into the act because our values are better suited to defense than offense.

Palace offers settlement to duchess, paper reports

LONDON — Buckingham Palace has offered the Duchess of York a final divorce settlement of $750,000 and a trust fund for her daughters, a newspaper reported Sunday.

The Mail on Sunday said friends of the former Sarah Ferguson said she had hoped for $6 million and other financial support.

Buckingham Palace had no immediate comment on the report that the settlement has been finalized. Fergie and Prince Andrew formally separated last year.

The newspaper said the package offers the duchess a lump-sum "payoff" and a trust worth $2.1 million for the couple's two daughters and $900,000 earmarked for the purchase of a home.

The newspaper didn't identify its sources.

NORTH PLATTE, Neb — G.W. Bailey, who played the cigar-chomping Sgt. Luther Rizzo on the television series "M*A*S*H," is getting an award for promoting positive family values.

Bailey, who also portrayed the fanatical drill instructor Capt. Harris in the "Police Academy" movies, will receive the 1993 Nebraskaland Days Buffalo Bill award on June 18.

"It's exciting to have G.W. Bailey coming to North Platte," said Jeff O'Connor, president of Nebraskaland Days. "He fits our role of good family entertainment, which is what our celebration is all about."

Barry Corbin, who plays a former astronaut on the television series "Northern Exposure," was last year's recipient.

RUNGSTED, Denmark — Meryl Streep received a prize that honors Karen Blixen, the Danish writer she portrayed in "Out of Africa."

Streep

"I have walked in her path, but I will never walk in her shoes," Streep said Saturday during a ceremony at Blixen's former home.

The sale of Blixen's books took off after the release of the movie, which won the 1985 Academy Award for best picture and earned Streep a nomination but not an Oscar.

Royalties from the movie enabled the Rungstedlund Foundation to turn Blixen's white-brick house into a museum. It was the first time Streep visited the home, about 19 miles north of Copenhagen.

Blixen, who died in Rungsted in 1962 at age 77, published in North America under the pen name Isak Dinesen.

CINCINNATI — Jimmy Buffett is sending some Cincinnati youngsters down to the Florida Keys.

Through a contest for the city's ninth-graders, Buffett will award 10 $2,000 scholarships to Seacamp in Big Pine Key. He'll also pick up expenses and round-trip air fare.

Winners will spend Aug. 3-20 studying marine science at the non-profit camp.

"We're so excited we can't stand it," said Linda Basler, school-community coordinator for Cincinnati public schools. "This is very special for our district. We just don't get these kinds of scholarship offers."

Buffett performed five sold-out shows in Cincinnati last year.

"Cincinnati has been good to me," he said in September.

DUBLIN, Ireland — Paul Newman's Hole in the Wall Gang charity is getting a whole new bunch of walls.

The actor said Saturday that he is turning an Irish castle into a summer camp for sick children.

Newman said he will lease Barretstown Castle, 25 miles southwest of Dublin, from the government for a token payment of about $1.45 a year.

He plans to spend $5.8 million converting the castle and its 500 acres of parkland into a vacation retreat for sick children from Ireland, Britain and continental Europe.

"Barretstown Castle is going to go wherever our imaginations lead us and wherever the children lead us," Newman said. "It is going to be an exciting trip."

Newman said he expects the camp to open next summer with about 800 children. The Hole in the Wall Gang charity runs a U.S. camp in Connecticut.

JACKSON, Miss. — John Grisham was signing his new best-seller, "The Client," at a rate of 500 copies per hour.

It was assembly line autographing at its best.

A Lemuria Book Store employee handed him books from the left, and a sales representative from his publisher, Doubleday, swept up the signed copies from the right.

Grisham's right arm rested on a reference book to help ease the strain from seven hours of writing.

"The signatures are bad," Grisham said. "I'm sorry about that."

But Grisham said Friday he will be writing some more soon. His next book is due out a year from now.

He said it will be about a a law student who stumbles across a multimillion-dollar fraud case.

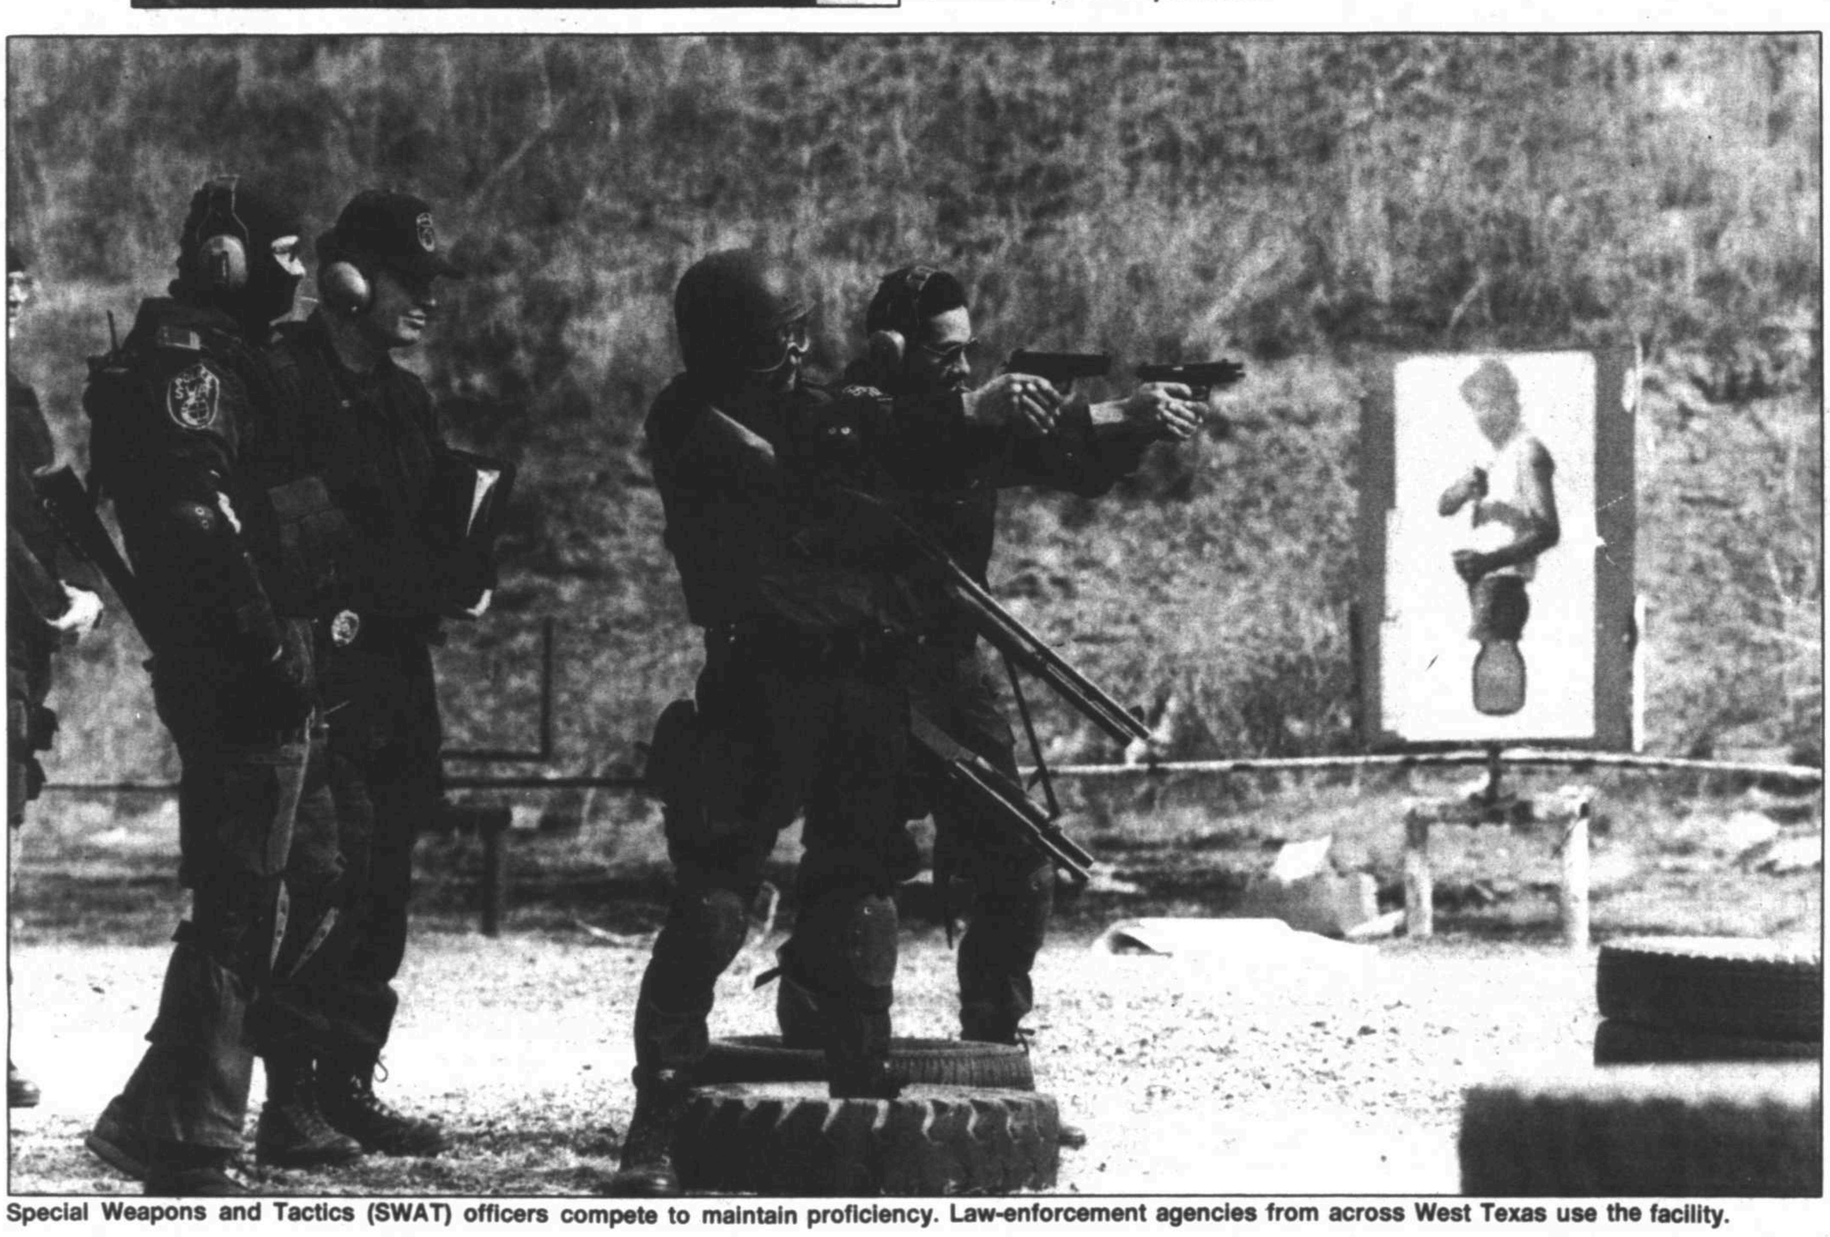
Midland Police Officer Jim Sevey examines a clip for defects at the MPD firing range for Officer Don Williams. As rangemaster, Sevey is in charge of maintenance of the facility and acts as resident gunsmith for the department.



Special Weapons and Tactics (SWAT) officers compete to maintain proficiency. Law-enforcement agencies from across West Texas use the facility.

HOME ON THE (FIRING) RANGE

On a piece of land where lions and tigers and bears used to roam, a group of seven Midland Police Department SWAT team members honed their firing skills while their supervising lieutenant looked on.

"You have to beat 19, man," one officer called to an officer, who was stepping up to take his shot at a paper target 50 yards away. "You gotta beat 19 to beat me."

The good-natured jabs and wisecracks continued as each member ran a timed course, designed to test their weapons handling. After the course, officers were paired up and tested against each other in firing pistols at stationary targets.

The testing of weapons skills, especially under timed conditions, is not new to this group. In fact, the outdoor firing range, once home to the Midland Zoo, is very familiar to the SWAT team.

However, there is a part of their yearly, eight-hour training session that is new to the officers - the building that sits across from the firing range.

Built with approximately $100,000 in drug seizure money, the building replaces an old two-room caretakers house that served as storage space and Range Master Jim Sevey's office.

"We had no space," Sevey said, pointing at the worn house. "The house had less than 1,000 square feet in it. No classroom space, no ammo storage. We had classroom instruction outside. And, if it rained, we had to rent space downtown."

Since the range serves as an instructional and practice facility for Midland's 155 officers, four firearms academies, plus local, state and federal law enforcement agencies, having to get space 20 minutes away from the firing range just was not feasible.

The new building, on the other hand, has 6,000 square feet divided into nine rooms and two restrooms. Included in the building is a storage area, which holds ear protection and extra equipment, an office, an unfinished gun workshop, a cleaning room that doubles as a classroom and a 30 x 60 square foot unfinished classroom.

"This building is about 95 percent complete," Sevey said, gesturing at the classroom. "We have to get the funds to finish this room, which will have a movable partition to separate into two rooms if we need it."

The building also has an ammunition room off of Sevey's office that stores all ammunition for the Midland Police Department. The room is fire-walled and has its own alarm system.

A new feature to the range is the Fire Arms Training System (F.A.T.S.) room. The system, F.A.T.S. II, is a simulator that projects different scenarios onto a screen. Officers must react to the situation, firing blanks if necessary at the screen. Everything is recorded, including reaction time, what the officer said and where the bullets would have hit. The officer is even videotaped and watched from a small room adjacent to the system's room where Sevey watchs a computer that controls the system.

"The system is as close to real life as you can get," he said. "I mean, targets outside are stationary and no one steps in front of you. With the F.A.T.S. system, people could walk in front of the officer's line of fire, a sudden sound could get the officers attention. We even have a way to tape our own officers and staff and use them in the scenarios. That really throws them sometimes."

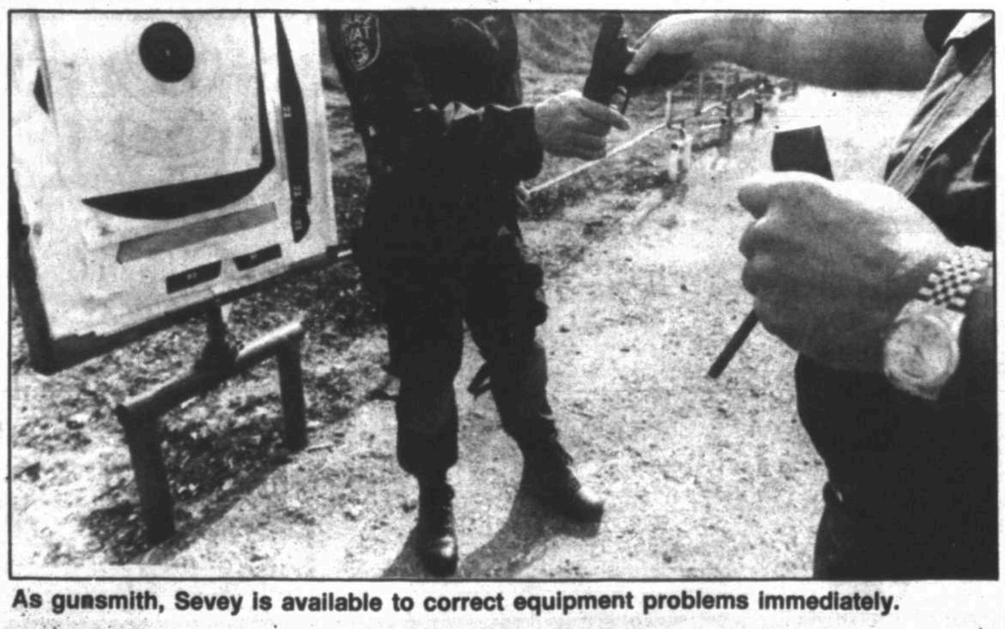
Plans for the new facility were in the making about two years ago, Sevey said, with construction starting last fall. The building was finished about four weeks ago.

"We serve 17 counties, everyone from our own officers to the Permian Basin Law Enforcement Academy, the Citizens' Police Academy," he said. "And, the FBI, federal, state and county officials. We needed something like this to give officers up-to-date training."

STORY BY KATHERINE POTEET

PHOTOS BY JOE D. WILLIAMS

The Firearms Training System uses a lifesize television to simulate real-life situations. An officer's performance is monitored and played back for review from a nearby booth.



As gunsmith, Sevey is available to correct equipment problems immediately.

TO ALL INTERESTED PERSONS AND PARTIES:

You are hereby notified that LEE-CO COATING has applied for Texas Air Control Board (TACB) Permit No. 21351. This permit, if approved, will authorize operation of a METALLIZING FACILITY in MIDLAND, MIDLAND COUNTY, Texas. The location of the existing facility is 2406 West County Road 140. This facility will emit the following air contaminants: nickle, chromium, iron, and other elements in stainless steel and monel.
A copy of all materials in the public file is available for inspection and reproduction at the TACB Odessa Regional Office at 1901 East 37th Street, Suite 101, Odessa, Texas 79762, telephone (915) 367-3871, and at the TACB Central Office, 12124 Park 35 Circle, Austin, Texas 78753, telephone (512) 908-1000. Inquiries about the permit application should be directed to the TACB Permits Program in Austin or the TACB Odessa Regional Office.
You may submit written comments concerning the permit application to the TACB Executive Director in Austin. All written comments received within 30 days after the second publication of this notice shall be considered by the Executive Director in determining whether to issue of not issue the permit.
All written comments will be made available for public inspection at the TACB Central Office in Austin. This notice is to be published on March 22, 93 and March 23, 1993.
Any person who may be affected by emissions of air contaminants from the proposed facility may request the Board to hold an informal public meeting and/or contested case hearing on teh permit application pursuant to Section 382.056 (d) of the Texas Health and Safety Code. The Board is not required to hold a contested case hearing if the basis of a request is determined to be unreasonable. All requests for a contested case hearing must be received in writing within the 30-day comment period regardless of whether an informal public meeting has been held or scheduled on this matter.
Before a permit can be issued for this facility, the applicant must demonstrate that all emission sources are in compliance with all TACB Rules and Regulations and all applicable Federal Regulations. This includes the application of "Best available control technology" to each new or modified emission source and compliance with all ambient air quality standards.

WHAT?!? NEWSPAPER ROUTES?

That's right...one of the best part-time income supplements around. Doesn't conflict with your "day job." Doesn't require day care. And it's dependable income.

Fact: 95% of our Distributors NOW are ADULTS supplementing their income with Route Distributorships!

Fact: Our Distributors make from $400 to $800 monthly AFTER expenses. Some earn even MORE!

The catch? You've got to be able to handle early mornings and weekends! And when you take a few days off, you'll need to find a substitute for yourself.

So...are you serious about MOONLIGHTING or what? If you are, and you have dependable transportation and can put up a $100 deposit...

CALL 688-2700 and start making that extra car payment today!
