

Law Enforcement Dispute Continues

The dispute over the hiring of Tommy Eddins by Red River sheriff M. E. McGuire and the supplementing of his salary by the Bogata City Council continued this week when the deputy paid a 9:30 p.m. visit to the residence of Dr. and Mrs. Jack Troutt of Bogata on Thursday, September 18.

Mrs. Troutt said that she was not alarmed when the doorbell rang at that time of the evening as the doctor is often called upon when patients have problems after office hours, but Jury Trial In Bogata?

Mount Pleasant attorney Bird Old said Monday that he was "turning over in his mind the possibility of asking for a jury trial in Fate Smith's court in Bogata."

Old represents Mr. and Mrs. Ray Williams and their son, Terry, who was issued a citation for making a U-turn at the north end of the business district on Main Street in Bogata. Smith is the justice of the peace in precinct one in Red River County, where Bogata is located. Old said that one citation against young Williams had already been dismissed.

The citations against Williams were among a number that were issued in Bogata on the night of August 30, when a large number of juveniles and young adults gathered in downtown Bogata because they felt the citations were unjust. It was also the night of the encounter between Bogata News publisher Robert W. Wright and Tommy Eddins, who was riding in the car with Red River sheriff M. E. McGuire, but was not deputized. An assault complaint was signed before justice Smith by Wright as a result of the encounter, and as of September 15, Smith "couldn't remember" if he had issued a warrant for Eddins' arrest or not. Smith was in New Mexico this week and unavailable for comment.

Eddins was deputized September 4, 1975.

that she became alarmed when she recognized the man standing on her doorstep as Eddins, accompanied by a young man who Eddins had brought along to "prove that the kids aren't afraid of me." Dr. Troutt was not at home, but a daughter, Janet, overheard the conversation. Mrs. Troutt did not allow Eddins or the young man inside the house.

Eddins questioned Mrs. Troutt about the motives behind the letter to the Editor that she and her husband had written to The Bogata News, published that day, and suggested that the Troutts and Bogata News publisher Robert W. Wright had conspired in the writing of the letter.

"I told him that we hardly knew the Wrights, that we are only acquaintances, and that they had nothing to do with the writing of the letter," Mrs. Troutt said.

Eddins asked Mrs. Troutt the names of the young people who were afraid to come to Bogata at night and she refused him the information. The conversation continued for several minutes, with Eddins repeatedly saying, according to Mrs. Troutt, "Well, if it's true that the kids are afraid to come to town, then I'll just resign." "I told him I didn't care what he did," Mrs. Troutt said, "and reminded him that the letter we wrote did not mention his name, but expressed concern about all law enforcement in Red River County."

The conversation terminated when Mrs. Troutt was called to the telephone and Eddins left, saying that he would talk to the sheriff about it.

"He did not threaten me," Mrs. Troutt said, "but I was very upset, because of questions about our son Leslie's death."

"There's no reason why people in Bogata can't have differences in opinion without everyone choosing sides and shooting it out," Mrs. Troutt said when she related the story to The Bogata News. "It's ridiculous to be so uncivilized as to think that just because people disagree about one thing that they can't still have a friendship based on the things that they do agree about," she added.

OLD TIME MUSIC — Mrs. Tommy Barton of Bogata provided musical entertainment at a barbecue at the Pine Branch Community Center Monday night. She has been playing the piano more than 50 years, and plays by ear. "I took five lessons," Mrs. Barton said, "and never did learn to read music."

TOYOTA TOTALED — This late model Toyota was totaled and the driver, Mrs. Ed Smith of Bogata seriously injured when the car left Highway 37 just north of the Cunningham road and struck a tree. Mrs. Smith was reported by relatives as being still unconscious in a Dallas hospital early this week. (Staff Photo).

Death Cause Of Parisian Still Pending

A determination as to "cause and manner of death" in the case of Alejandro DeLeon of Paris, whose decomposed body was found September 3 on a ranch in Red River County, is still pending, according to the Red River County Sheriff's office and Don Kirby, field Forensic Sciences in Dallas.

The badly decomposed body of DeLeon was found on Riverwood Farms property north of Detroit by Calvin Carney, a Riverwood ranch hand. Carney reportedly was feeding cattle and was attracted to the body by the odor.

Initial identification of the body was made by DeLeon's wife from articles including boots, keys and a wedding band found on the body.

DeLeon was employed as a ranch hand on the Good Hope Ranch north of Detroit.

DeLeon, 31, according to Sheriff's reports, lived at 437 E. Price in Paris.

"It could be one to three weeks before cause and manner of death determination would be made," Kirby said.

Morgan To Attend Convention

AUSTIN — Superintendent Talmadge Morgan will attend the Fifteenth Joint Annual Convention of the Texas Association of School Boards and the Texas Association of School Administrators which is slated for the San Antonio Convention Center, September 27-29, 1975.

Over 3,500 Texas school officials will attend the three day convention. The program is designed to provide information for and inspiration to local school leadership and to advance the philosophy that teamwork is essential to ensure a quality educational system in Texas, says the official convention invitation.

The state convention presents a comprehensive program for education professionals. Included on the program are general sessions with featured speakers, demonstrations of promising practices, topic discussions, public relations mini-clinics, annual membership meetings, and commercial exhibits. An exhibit of outstanding school architecture will also be presented to convention participants.

Those who disagree are disillusioned by the charade of hostile mavericks duly elected to office. Again guilty of decedonal default they are waiting for a cooling off attitude to set in. But they are only crippling themselves.

There are more than enough qualified people in Bogata and Red River County to "check and balance" this madness. Examine both sides of the coin and then together take the initiative to restore harmony. But it won't be easy in an atmosphere permeated by apathy and hostility. Perhaps, the final word is become informed and involved - that is the American Way.

McGuire Requests Department Probe

Editor's Note: This story is reprinted in its entirety and taken from the Sunday, September 21, 1975 issue of The Paris News.

CLARKSVILLE — Red River County Sheriff M. E. (Mac) McGuire Saturday issued a statement saying that he has asked Texas Rangers to conduct an investigation of the activities of his department.

The statement was issued by McGuire through his wife Saturday. Mrs. McGuire is a correspondent for The Paris News.

The Sheriff's statement also said he plans to call for a special Grand Jury investigation into the accusations that have been made against him and against his department by "the editor of the Bogata paper."

The charges referred to were made by Bob Wright, publisher of weekly newspapers in Bogata, Deport and Talco. They stemmed from an incident in which Wright claims he was assaulted.

Wright also claims two shotgun blasts were fired at his Toyota station wagon late one night shortly after the assault incident. And he alleges he and his wife have been continually harassed by a Red River County deputy.

Of the shotgun incident, Sheriff McGuire's Saturday statement to The Paris News said the incident was never reported to his department. The call that was received, the statement says, came through the Clarksville Police Department dispatcher and requested Red River County authorities to be on the lookout for a dark green pick-up. According to the statement, the first time Sheriff McGuire's department became aware that the vehicle involved was said to be a dark sedan came with the issuance of the story in the

Since that time, the Sheriff's statement says, investigations made and people that have been interviewed have left "serious doubts that the editor was even shot at."

Mrs. McGuire, in relating the statement to the News, asked that this be verified through Texas Ranger Frank Kemp or Lamar County Sheriff Louie Noles. A News reporter Saturday afternoon was unable to contact either man.

In his statement, McGuire says he is at a loss for a "plausible explanation for the untrue accusations."

McGuire, in his statement, says, "Nobody believes in freedom of the press more than I do, but I also like to see the truth in the press."

He continues, saying he was elected to enforce the law in Red River County, and "I intend to do so."

The Sheriff says he does not "intend to be intimidated by the editor to enforce the law in certain places at certain times and against certain people."

The Sheriff continues that he intends for himself and his deputies to "get out and patrol and work. Not to sit under street lights to have an alibi every time somebody wants to accuse them of something."

The Red River County officer concludes his statement by saying that his department has "received many calls and visits from people in Bogata approving of the Sheriff's actions there." He says he believes the "majority of the people there want to have a nice, clean, decent town without the streets littered with beer cans and without cars burning rubber all hours of the night."

AN EDITORIAL

By Robert W. Wright

Without getting into the messy business of name calling and distortion, I think the readers of our newspapers are entitled to read the story that runs alongside this editorial, and consider it in the context of timing.

The facts are that The Texas Rangers and other officers at levels above the county have been investigating the assault charges filed by Robert W. Wright in justice Fate Smith's court on August 31 since the shotgun shooting of September 6. That investigation started on September 7, 1975. It is interesting that the sheriff waited two weeks to ask for a probe of charges that had already been started anyway, with or without his request, and that he asked for that probe on the day before the Red River grand jury convened on September 22, 1975 in Clarksville. The grand jury has the power to investigate anything it pleases in Red River County, and can do it in secret.

It should be obvious to anyone who has looked at my Toyota station wagon that there is little proof that I was fired upon. There has been no action taken on the assault charge, as best as we can determine, and we have photographs and witnesses to prove harassment, not just of myself and my wife, but of anyone who seems to agree with us.

The Paris News never published a follow up story from Texas Ranger Frank Kemp or Lamar County sheriff Louie Knowles, from whom McGuire asked verification.

The Red River County sheriff's department is dispatched through the Clarksville police department at night, and we are not responsible for confusion in the sheriff's department about cars and pickups.

There are still many black marks made from tires burning rubber nightly on Main Street in Bogata, and we expect that Red River County will never be able to stop young people from burning off or drinking beer unless we are all willing to give up every freedom we have. There are many more problems we can solve that are of greater

Tridens Prairie Is A Living Museum

The Tridens Prairie Grassland Museum, property of the Nature Conservancy will receive special recognition in the fall of 1975.

The vegetative composition of Tridens Prairie, a 97 acre tract of land near Brookston, Lamar County, Texas, which is a part of the Zachariah Westfall Survey No. 1000, has been studied by research and plant ecology scientists for the past 25 years. The native grassland area was purchased by the Texas Chapter of the Nature Conservancy in April of 1972 to be preserved as a replica of the type of natural vegetation that originally covered all of the Texas Blacklands. Tridens Prairie contains additional plants normally associated only with woodland flora found in savanna sites east of the true Blackland prairie. This mixture of perennial, prairie and woodland grasses have adapted, and are recognized by scientists as a rare and, as yet unique, tall grass combination not yet found elsewhere in Texas. Since the long spike tridens, which are normally associated with the woodland flora, is one of the dominant species in the mixture and not found on blackland soils normally recognized as true prairie rangeland sites, the living museum has been aptly named the Tridens Prairie.

In the fall of 1975, the Lamar County Historical Survey Committee in cooperation with the Texas Survey Committee, and the local management committee for the Nature Conservancy will erect a permanent historical marker at the site. Dr. William de Hayden Jr., chairman of the Lamar County Historical Survey Society says this will be the first native, living museum recognized by his committee in this area.

Referring to the evolution of the area, plant ecologist Brown Collins, of Houston, relates the following: "The last ice sheet retreated from the northern fringe of the area now recognized as the North American mid-continental grasslands about 10,000 years ago. This ice retreat was followed by a warming trend which lasted from about 8000 B.

C. to the beginning of the Christian Era. During this period, the deciduous forests retreated eastward and grasslands occupied the vacated area. Some members of the forest flora, especially grasses, withstood the climatic change. These species survived, reproduced and integrated with the grassland flora. It is quite possible that dominants found on Tridens Prairie today evolved from forests understory components during or shortly after the Hypsithermal, warm up, period."

The Tridens Prairie land has never been plowed, and it is the intent of the Nature Conservancy that it will be preserved "forever" as it is today in order that generations to come will be able to view the tall grassland replica with the same composition and appearance as first viewed by European man shortly after the discovery of America.

Winter Pastures Provide Feed

Winter pastures can be the least expensive source of providing feed for your cattle, says Charles VanDeaver, District Conservationist, Soil Conservation Service in Clarksville.

When planning for winter pasture production each landowner should consider: the types of soil on his farm, grasses and legumes that are adapted to these soils, fertilizer needs, total forage needs for his livestock, the type of management he can provide, and cost compared to feeds purchased at the feed store.

Most farms in the East Texas area have several soil types and each soil has its own potential for production of grasses and legumes. Rye, wheat, oats and ryegrass are adapted to most upland soils. Fescue is adapted to most bottomland soils that are not too wet and it can also be grown on some of the upland soils.

"Legumes grown on pastureland was very popular a few years ago. There has been a steady decline in legume growth the last few years due mainly to cattle prices, fertilizer cost and management practices," said VanDeaver. "Now with the high cost of fertilizer and low cattle prices the need to produce good quality forage is more important," he continued.

Legumes add greatly to the forage quality and increase livestock gains. There is also another factor to consider and that is the amount of nitrogen the legumes store on their root system. This nitrogen can be used by the warm season plants, as bermudagrass, for growth and will save on nitrogen costs. White clover is the top producer of nitrogen with arrowleaf clover and crimson clover producing lesser amounts and winter peas at the bottom of the list. The amount of nitrogen produced is in direct proportion to the top growth at time of seeding. A large plant has a large root system and the ability to produce more nitrogen. Legume seed must be inoculated with the right kind and amount of bacteria to produce desired results.

Adequate amounts of lime and fertilizer are essential to good winter pasture production. The best fertilizer application is what is recommended by a test of soils where plants are to be grown. Warm season grasses should be grazed close or mowed close before seedbed preparation is started for winter pasture.

"Winter pastures to be seeded in the district can be planted from September 15th to November 30th," says VanDeaver. "For best production, plantings should be made as soon after September 15th as moisture and planting conditions will allow," he continued.

For further information on winter pasture plantings on your farm, check with your Soil Conservation Service personnel.

Too Many Calves Depresses Market

By Paul D. Payne

Cattlemen across the nation are suffering from poor market prices brought on mainly by excessive numbers of calves. And they can remedy the situation only by culling their cow herds and reducing the number of replacement heifers.

The Extension Service is cooperating with the American National Cattlemen's Association in urging producers to reduce the size of the cow herd and thus bring about a more favorable beef supply-demand situation for all concerned.

Due to the overload of beef cows, late summer and fall culling will be doubly important this year. First of all, culling will take the pressure off fall pastures and reduce herd maintenance costs during the coming winter months. Secondly, supplies of other meats, particularly pork and poultry, are down at this time, so there is a ready outlet for the increased beef supply that would result from heavy cow culling.

Cow slaughter is currently heavy and was 47 percent more during the first half of 1975 than the same period a year ago. If this pace continues through the remainder of this year, the nation's cow herd on January 1, 1976 may be down by almost one million head from January 1, 1975. Heifer retentions for cow herd replacements are also down about 7 percent from a year earlier. Locally, up to a third of the marketed cattle have been cows and bulls. Over 4000 head were sold at local commission barns last week. If cow slaughter continues at a heavy rate for the rest of the year and into 1976 and if heifer holding is not excessive, the total cow herd may get back in line with population and income growth by 1977, according to Dr. Ed Uvacek, Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The adjustment in cattle numbers must come about if prices to cattlemen are to improve. This adjustment can be orderly if cattlemen make the decision to act now. On the other hand, the current disastrous situation can be extended over a prolonged period of time if cattlemen take a "wait and see" attitude.

In addition to a more stable beef supply and price situation, reducing beef cow herds will also help producers improve herd quality by eliminating poor producers, reduce feed and other costs by eliminating "boarder" cows, and increase the flexibility of their operations.

A cow-calf operator could cull more cows and retain some calves. Then, during the next year, he would have the flexibility of putting the heifers back into his breeding herd if conditions warrant. Some consideration also might be given to backgrounding the yearlings for an additional period if costs are not excessive.

The American National Cattlemen's Association advises cattlemen to give close consideration to culling their cow herds. Beef cattle and livestock marketing specialists with the Extension Service can provide additional information possible changes in herd management to help remedy the current crisis cattlemen are facing.

FERTILIZING COOL SEASON GRASSES

Fertilizer is essential for cool season grasses to provide sufficient growth for fall and winter grazing, contends Paul Payne, County Agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

September plantings of ryegrass or small grains on clean seedbeds should receive 60 to 80 pounds of nitrogen per acre at seeding along with any phosphorus and potassium that may be needed according to a soil test. Payne suggests top-dressing an additional 60 to 80 pounds of nitrogen per acre in January and again in March or April for continued high production.

If early planted ryegrass or small grains are to be over-seeded in a warm season perennial grass such as bermudagrass, less nitrogen should be applied at planting time — 40 pounds should be sufficient. Heavy nitrogen applications at seeding will stimulate bermudagrass growth and this create too much competition for the new seeding.

Once the cool season grass is well established, an additional 80 pounds of nitrogen per acre can be top-dressed four to six weeks later.

Whether planting cool season grasses or legumes this fall, give close attention to a sound fertilization program that will realize the highest potential to the particular crop, emphasizes Payne. A proper starting point is a soil test.

SCS's Education Program Is Extensive

Soil Conservation Service employees are increasingly called upon to serve environmental education as school site planners and conservationists, and as resource people — furnishers of information about soil and water resources.

This is the gist of an editorial by SCS Administrator R. M. Davis which appeared in the agency's August issue of Soil Conservation, the official organ of the agency.

"SCS's nationwide conservation education program is leading the way in helping schools plan and use outdoor classrooms," Davis said. "Now, outdoor learning areas, providing such features as animal and plant identification, nature trails, and soil and aquatic studies, are established in almost every soil and water conservation district in the United States. Many are designed with SCS and district help."

"The typical citizen today is confronted with a bewildering lineup of controversies over the environment. He receives conflicting information on practically every resource issue, being assured one minute that all is well and the next told that doom is imminent. On the basis of all the divergent reports the citizen must make informed decisions about the future of our resources."

"We are learning that helping teachers gain an understanding of conservation is an efficient way of reaching a large audience of future leaders and decisionmakers," Davis said.

Facts relating to the environment and gained from years of actual conservation practice are also passed on by SCS district conservationists to women's clubs, service clubs, and scouts.

"Providing this kind of assistance is where districts and SCS can be an increasing service to all Americans. We cannot afford to shrink from our responsibilities in environmental education. There's too much at stake," Davis concluded.

Typing Refresher Course Available

A Typing Refresher Course will be taught through Paris Junior College's Continuing Education Division beginning Wednesday, October 8, in Room 125 of the Applied Sciences Center. Classes will be from 5:30 to 7:00 p.m. for ten weeks, and the fee is $25.

Mrs. Bill (Jane) Glover, business instructor at PJC, will teach the course for those needing to refresh their typing skills. Those enrolling should have a basic knowledge of the typewriter keyboard. Mrs. Glover said, but individualized instruction will be given in the areas needed by the student. Audio-visual teaching aids will be used in the course, taught in PJC's modern typing laboratory.

Reservations for the course should be made by calling or writing the PJC Continuing Education office, 785-7661, extension 145.

Yoga Course Planned At PJC

A course in Hatha (physical) Yoga will be held at Paris Junior College on Thursday nights from October 9 through December 11 in Room 129 of the Administration Building. Classes will be open to men and women of all ages from 7:00 to 8:00 p.m. Fee for the 20 hours of instruction is $15.

Instructor for the course will be Nadine L. Parkhill of Hugo, Oklahoma, who has studied Yoga under Paul Coates, a noted teacher in Shreveport, Louisiana. Participants will need to bring a thin rubber foam mat or quilt and wear comfortable loose clothing or leotards.

Interest in Yoga is at an all-time high among Americans as more and more come to realize the benefits to be gained from its regular practice," Mrs. Parkhill said. Yoga is concerned with the health and beauty of the organism as a unified whole. Yoga exercises are performed in a series of graceful, rhythmic slow-motion movements with brief "holding" periods. Poise and balance are emphasized at all times, and attention is fixed unwaveringly on the movements being executed, the instructor explained. Weight control, slimming, firming, relief of tension and stiffness, improvement in general health, emergency of hidden beauty, emotional stability and a positive mental outlook are some of the claimed outcomes of those who are faithful in their practice of Hatha Yoga, said Mrs. Parkhill. Many of the exercises in Hatha Yoga are practiced for the express purpose of promoting the health, strength and flexibility of the entire spine. An ancient Yoga adage proclaims, "You are as young as your spine is flexible." Other Yogic exercises (really movements) are to make all the joints and muscles flexible, healthy and strong. "The way in which we breathe directly affects our physical and mental well-being and may determine the length and quality of our lives," Mrs. Parkhill noted; "therefore, much emphasis is given to the teaching of breathing. The student is taught to use his lungs in their entirety and to learn to breathe in a slow and rhythmic fashion." Reservations should be made by calling PJC, 785-7661, extension 145.

By Raymond McCaig
Will clovers fit my pasture program? This question is asked more often by landowners in the Red River County Soil and Water Conservation District according to Charles VanDeaver District Conservationist with the Soil Conservation Service.

Growing a combination of clovers and grass requires more management than the growing of either plant by itself. However, several advantages can be had by the combination.

Clovers in combination with grasses increases the protein content of the forage. In addition to the forage produced, a Without advertising, you can wave goodbye to the comic strips, the sports page, and the front page of your newspaper.

And maybe your own job.

Think about it. Advertising pays for the features and the news that your newspaper brings to you so economically. Companies that want to tell you about their products, their sales, and their unique services pay for the space to advertise and that pays for most of the newspaper.

If these companies were suddenly deprived of their right to advertise — to communicate with their customers — you can be sure sales would drop. If sales drop, production slows and ultimately people lose jobs. And if certain Texas companies could possibly be ordered not to advertise, who would be next? Maybe your company?

The next time you think about advertising, think about free speech and the right of one person to communicate with another. It's all the same thing.

Write Governor Dolph Briscoe, State Capitol, Austin, Texas 78711 and your legislators to tell them how you feel. Then sit back and enjoy your newspaper.

Advertising is everybody's business.
