Methodist Meeting

Rev. J. P. Callaway wishes to announce that he will begin a protracted meeting at the Methodist church in this city, on Sunday December the 29th. Bro. Callaway will preach Sunday morning and night and each night through the week, closing the meeting Sunday night the 5th of January. Every one is invited to attend this series of meetings and help in the work for the Master.

Dr. I. E. Smith, Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat Specialist, of Big Springs, will be in Tahoka Friday, Dec. 20th. 14-15

How does eight sheets for 25 cents and towels one cent each strike you? Get Sweetwater Laundry quantity prices from Russell Ramsey, agent. Work guaranteed. 15-tf

J. E. Ketner, the Main street merchant, returned on the evening train Friday of last week from Waco, Texas, where he had been to attend the death bed of his father. Mr. Ketner arrived in Waco on Sunday the eighth, and was present when his father died.

We want your hides and furs of all kinds at the Cash Meat Market. 14-tf

Mrs. S. F. Moore who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. W. D. Nevels, of North Tahoka, for some time, took the train at Slaton Sunday on her return to her home in Adamsville, Texas.

D. T. Rogers came in on last Friday's afternoon train from a ten days visit to Waco, Texas. He said that they had two light rains in that part of the country lately and he did not get to see the sun for more than an hour or two the entire time he was away.

Henry Dryer and family, of Wilson, came down Saturday in their car to do some Christmas shopping.

Miss Christine Swan entertained her friends last Saturday night with a Dutch Party in honor of her sixteenth birthday. The invitations were written in verse in Dutch dialect, the answer being written in the same form. The evening was spent in guessing games and contests, among which were, a description contest, outline contest, and a magazine romance. At a late hour refreshment, consisting of chicken sandwiches, pickles, nut cake and whipped-cream and chocolate were served, after which the guests departed for their homes, vowing they had never had a better timer.

Selling Brooms

R. C. Chambers, of the Tahoka Broom Factory, of this city, returned from a selling trip Monday. He says that he had extra good success considering the time of the year, when folks are more interested in buying jewelry than they are in buying brooms. However, after the holidays he expects to do a big trade selling brooms to everybody to sweep away all the broken New Year's resolutions that will be cluttering up so many homes in a month or so.

For Windmill work call Frank King. Phone No. 3. All work guaranteed. 13-19pd

Maize Fed Hog

Wednesday morning Dr. S. H. Windham, of the west part of Tahoka, called The News man out to see what he called a "dry maize fed hog." Sixteen months ago the doctor got a pig from the Nevels Ranch, in the north part of Lynn county, and put it the pen at his residence, where the pig has lived and fattened on dry maize and kitchen slop. Wednesday morning Dr. Windham and Burt King killed the hog and it tipped the scales at 548 pounds.

Come to Tahoka where everybody can raise their own meat; where many families do so, and cheaply to.

J. A. Bureson, of Crawford, Texas, came in the latter part of last week to visit his sister, Mrs. J. H. Edwards, of North Tahoka.

J. T. Curb, of the Lynn community was a Tahoka visitor Thursday.

At the meeting of the Tahoka Methodist board of stewards last week three new stewards were elected to serve with A. B. Ellis, namely: C. W. Slover, J. N. Jones and McMill Clayton. This gives Bro. Callaway an excellent board and we look forward confidently to a successful year in Tahoka.

A. D. Shook came in Saturday from Post in his auto. He has been down in Southern Texas for the last several weeks. Mr. Shook told us he would leave for his home in Pasadena, California, some time the middle or last of this week to spend the holidays.

A. S. Coughran came home from Mineral Wells, Texas, where he has been for some time for his health. Mr. Coughran is very feeble and had to be carried from the depot to the bus and from the bus to the house. We understand he is suffering from creeping paralysis.

Box Supper Off

The ladies of the W. H. M. S. have decided to call off the box supper that was to have been held tonight, as so many of the ladies are busy getting ready for Christmas; cooking pies, cakes and all kinds of goodies, and getting ready to go visiting or to receive visitors during the holidays. So young man, if you want to pay for your supper tonight you will have to go to one of the hotels or eat at home for you can't eat out of a box this time, 'caus you see there 'aint' going to be no boxes.

$100 In Turkeys

J. W. Black, whose home is 23 miles west of Tahoka and two miles north of the Tahoka-Brownfield public road, but who has been living in Tahoka for several weeks, made a trip to his home place Wednesday.

Mr. Black has sold quite a number of turkeys since he has been living in Tahoka, some of them netting him $1.50. He raised about 70 head of turkeys this year and they will bring him in over $100.00.

Remember, that H. C. Crie & Co., have the regulation, printed examination paper, on hand at all times in five and ten cent tablets. Call at The News office, north of the livery stable and get one when you need it. 11-tf

G. W. Pilley, of the Wilson community, was in town Wednesday making some Christmas purchases. Mr. Pilley tells us that Wilson will have its first Christmas tree the night of the 24th. It will be in the new store building which is fully completed but has not had the stock of moved into it as yet.

E. E. McMannis, of the New Home community was a Tahoka visitor Wednesday.

T. G. Marks, of the Pride community, visited Tahoka Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Nevels, of North Tahoka, left for the J. R. Nevels ranch Saturday where they will remain for some time while Mr. Nevels' father and brother are traveling for their health. Grandpa and Luther left on the train at Slaton Sunday for Mineral Wells, Texas, where they will stop a while and then go on down to the coast.

A Catholic school will be opened in Big Springs, Texas, on January the 2nd, with three Sisters of Mercy from Stanton, Texas, in charge of the school.

Two Close Calls

Lamp flares up setting ceiling paper on fire; next morning a lamp explodes.

The home of Ed. Baldrige, of near O'Donnell, was the scene of considerable excitement last Saturday night and Sunday morning.

Saturday night when the hired man went into his room to go to bed he found that the lamp which he had left burning all right some time before, had flared up and the flames were spreading out on the ceiling and the ceiling paper was already aflame. They had quite a scare and considerable trouble putting out the fire before it did serious damage.

Sunday morning Mrs. Baldrige reached for a large glass bowl lamp setting on the corner of the table, intending to pick it up and blow out the light, when just as she took hold of the standard the lamp exploded breaking the chimney, breaking the standard off below the bowl and throwing oil over Mrs. Baldrige's dress and table. Mr. Baldrige came to the rescue and kicked the blazing lamp bowl out of the door. Fortunately the flames never caught the oil that had saturated the front of Mrs. Baldrige's dress and scattered all over that part of the room.

No damage to amount to anything was done except to the family's nerves. Mrs. Baldrige says that "Two such experiences in so short a time have got us kinder hoodooed."

Dr. Bachelor, of Post, will be in Tahoka Dec. 28th, will remain one week. $6.00 for gold crown, worth $8.00 to $10.00. $1.00 for filling. Other work in proportion. All work guaranteed. 15-16

F. E. Bedwine, county tax assessor, returned Wednesday of this week from a trip to San Antonio, Austin, Waco and Comanche. Mr. Redwine stopped off a couple of days in DeLeon to visit his grandmother. He says the weather was rainy or cloudy all the time he was away.

NOTICE.—No hunting allowed with guns or dogs in the Brownfield ranch. 11-ft

FANELLA'S CHRISTMAS SUPPER

SUSAN GLENN

Copyright.
The flurry of Christmas snow was not beautiful as she hurried through deepening twilight. Though possessing a certain distinctive air, her coat was pitifully thin and inadequate. Though neatly blackened, her shoes leaked and she wore no rubbers. It is small wonder that the storm seemed merciless and cold. But when she turned in at the big stone gateway, her shoulders straightened proudly. "The old Fenway place," she murmured, glancing about the gloomy, unkept grounds, "and I am the last of the Fenways."

"If you were not it would go hard with them," interjected that other half of Miss Fenway's nature that was always ridiculing her Fenway pride. "Unless," with malicious emphasis, "they chanced to be also impervious to cold and hunger!" Miss Fanella's lips trembled as she unlocked the great front door—upon no condition did she ever leave or enter the house by any of its other numerous entrances.

She lighted the small oil lamps that stood on the marble top of the hall buffet, placed her coat and hat on the carved rack, and peered closely into the great mirror.

"Tomorrow is Christmas, and your birthday," she whispered accusingly. "and—no one has remembered it! Not one of your old friends! You are alone."

"Of course, I am alone," spoke the Fenway pride complacently. "Who is there in Whalen that I care for? All the old families with whom we associated are gone. It is my misfortune that I am left alone in the old house."

"Why need you be alone? There are people all about you, common people to be sure, but kindly and good. And there is—Nelson Travers!"

"A common farmer!" Miss Fanella could almost believe she heard a real voice in the old hall with all the Fenway pride and scorn in it, a voice alarmingly like her stately mother's.

"It has been settled these fifteen years," she said, picking up the little lamp wearily. "Why must it be gone over again every Christmas?"

Through the great cold rooms the light moved dimly, until she entered what had been the butler's pantry in the old regime. Here a small stove diffused a half-hearted sort of warmth, and a little table and a leather chair were drawn close.

"Here dwelleth the last of the Fenways," she said derisively. "Yet too aristocratic to associate with ordinary mortals!" From her worn leather bag she drew a letter she had found awaiting her at the postoffice. There were few persons using such stationery who still remembered to write to her.

"Dear Miss Fenway!" she read, "are you still alone at the old place? If so, why can you not come with me to Japan this winter, and help me with the children? There will be no one in our party but ourselves. Please let me know by the first of January."

There followed a page of details. The letter was signed by an old school friend now the wife of a successful financier.

Miss Fanella's hand trembled, her face was drawn and white.

"A nurse maid," she moaned at last bitterly, "a common nurse maid! She put it kindly, and it is kind of her to think of me in my destitution, but that is what it means. Yet, isn't it better than cold and loneliness and starvation? I'm tired of being different from other people. I'll try being as common as the commonest for a while."

Suddenly the great bell pealed through the resounding old rooms. She lifted the little lamp in wonderment and threaded her way again through the icy gloom. No tradespeople called at the house, and certainly not at the big front door! And generations of superiority had taught the neighbors the futility of calling at the Fenway portals.

Nelson Travers stood in the porch, the big white flakes heaped upon his broad shoulders.

"Good evening, Fanella," he said as if he had parted with her but yesterday. "Tomorrow is your birthday, I believe, and Christmas, too. Will you come for a ride with me?"

Miss Fanella gasped, as well she might. This, after fifteen years of silence! Had it taken him so long to recover from the repulse of old Madam Fenway?

"I—what will the neighbors think?" she gasped.

"You are thirty-six tomorrow, are you not, Fanella? Isn't that old enough to act as you please regardless of the neighbors?"

"I suppose it is, Nelson," she admitted with a smile. "But where?"

"Will you trust me this once, Fanella? I promise to bring you back whenever you wish."

Miss Fanella looked into the white night. Was she dreaming, or could this unlikely thing really have happened in the deadening monotony of her life? What difference did it make, anyway. Henceforth she would be only a nursemaid. She looked back into Nelson Travers' honest eyes pleading with her to trust him. About her the stately old furniture upon which her pride had fed so many years, pleaded in vain.

"Yes," she said, "I'll come. I do not know how far I shall go, though."

The man stepped into the old hall and held her coat. His lips closed over his displeasure when he felt the weight of it.

She did not remember the worn gloves on the hall table, and only thought about locking the door when she saw Travers slip the key into his deep pocket.

Wrapped in robes, she seemed unconscious of the storm, realizing only the pleasant sensation of companionship and warmth.

She was not even surprised when he drew up before a low, ample house and lifted her carefully to the door-stone.

"I'll be in in a minute," he told her. "Take off your wraps and get warm."

Miss Fanella, her heart beating high at her own audacity, opened the broad door.

The wide, low rooms within opened pleasantly together, lighted by candles on the mantels, and by softly shaded lamps.

"How pleasant," said Miss Fanella aloud, going to the open fire, and thinking of her little stove in the butler's pantry.

"I have dreamed of you sitting here," said Travers quietly, coming to her. "And now I am going to ask you to eat supper with me—a Christmas supper, you know."

"I shall be most delighted," answered Miss Fanella with a smile. The Fenway pride was mute for once. It was a quiet supper. Fanella poured the tea, conscious that her companion's eyes were following her, and she enjoyed herself with a fierce, defiant sort of enjoyment.

"Fanella," said the man, leading her back to the fire, "I will bless you forever for coming with me. I wanted you to see my home, to understand just how simple and unpretentious it is. I know I am only a 'common farmer,' but I've always loved you, Fanella. I cannot endure it to see you live as you do, alone in that great house. Won't you let me take care of you, dear? I know I am not good enough for you. I realize what it must seem like to you here, but—"

"It is comfortable and—beautiful, Nelson." Her voice broke over the words. "But I do not deserve it. I was not fair and honest with you—for I cared, always. I let my pride and my family interfere!"

"Oh," she cried, shaken by sudden, fierce sobs, "why did you never come back? They always do in stories—I could not believe it was all over when

HAVE NO NEED OF THOUGHT

All That Troubles Eskimo Is That They Shall Be Sure of Getting Enough to Eat.

Where the physical struggle for life is at its keenest, as it is among the Eskimos, the years glide by free from the more subtle care and worries of the civilized man. The Eskimo does not count the days and keeps no record of time. All his thoughts are centered on hunting.

Once I asked an Eskimo who seemed to be plunged in reflection, "What are you thinking about?"

He laughed at my question, and said, "Oh, it is only you white men

Eating becomes the great thing with the Eskimos. I once excused myself, when paying a visit, with the plea that I had already eaten and had had enough. I was laughed at, and the answer I received was:

"There thou talkest like a dog! Dogs can be stuffed till they are satisfied and can eat no more; but people—people can always eat!"—Knud Rasmussen, in The People of the Polar North.

ANCIENT CRIME UNPAID FOR

Murder 700 Years Ago Still Causes Annual Tribute to Be Paid by the Community.

Seven hundred years ago some shepherds of the Valley of Roncal, in Navarre, were murdered by shepherds of the Valley of Bareton, in Bearn, the crime taking place on the high pasture lands of Arles, in the Pyrenees.

It would have been difficult to bring the murderers individually to justice, and the Spaniards were preparing to make war upon the valley from which the French murderers had come, when the French village proposed that peace be maintained at the price of a yearly

WOMAN'S ADVANTAGE IN LIFE

British Physicians of Prominence Give Some Figures That Explain Disparity Between the Sexes.

Though doctors have long realized that, thanks to a better knowledge of sanitation and personal hygiene, people are living longer than formerly, the much greater relative longevity of women as shown in the recently published British national debt office's report on the mortality of government life annuitants has come as a general surprise.

In a summary of these figures it was shown that the expectation of life of a woman of fifty is now more than ing competition which is part of nearly every man's life. "A woman may have hard work to do," he explained, "but except for the few who work in offices or who follow professions, they work in their own homes, and at a pace they set for themselves. The home is also, as a rule, vastly more airy, sunny and generally more wholesome than is her husband's shop or office."

He Wouldn't Tell.

The eminent Doctor Llorente, physician to the royal family of Spain, told a reporter in New York recently that he thinks the American woman is spoiled.

AVOID SPREADERS OF GLOOM

Chronic Grumblers and Avowed Discontented Persons Are Never the Best of Companions in Life.

The chronic grumbler is not a good companion nor in any way an admirable person. We fly from her as from a contagious disease. Nothing so certainly affects one's spirits as being in the constant company of a person who has a grievance.

The cherishing of discontent with our circumstances, business, dress, or any other thing in life soon robs us of beauty and marks the countenance with the lines of worry and ill temper that tell their own unhappy story.

who go in so much for thinking! Up here we only think of our flesh-pits, and whether we have enough for the long dark of the winter. If we have meat enough, then there is no need to think. I have meat and to spare!"

I saw that I had insulted him by crediting him with thought.

On another occasion I asked an unusually intelligent Eskimo, Panigpak, who had taken part in Peary's last North Polar expedition:

"Tell me, what did you suppose was the object of all your exertions? What did you think when you saw the land disappear behind you and you found yourself out on the drifting ice-floes?"

"Think?" said Panigpak, astonished. "I did not need to think. Peary did that!"

at home and throughout the world. Some of the statistics relating to the proportions of the sexes in different parts are interesting.

The total population of the world is estimated to be 1,700,000,000, and the proportion is said to be 1,000 men and 990 women.

The proportion varies considerably according to the region. In Europe there are, for each 1,000 men, 1,027 women; in Africa, 1,045; in America, 964; in Asia, 961; in Australia, 937. The maximum feminine population is in Uganda, where there are 1,467 women to each 1,000 men, and the minimum in the gold countries of Alaska and in Malaysia, where there are found only 391 and 539 women, respectively to each 1,000 men.—Harpers' Weekly.

tax or tribute, to endure for all time, and this proposition was accepted without demur.

The payment of this blood tax—originally three white mares, but later three cows of a particular breed and color—has been made ever since, the custom—it is nothing more—having survived even the great wars in which both France and Spain have engaged, and the storm of the French revolution.

Yearly the representative men of the two valleys meet on the frontier, at a certain stone, remote from any town, and go through the ceremony of presenting and receiving the cattle.

The order of procedure, which is elaborate and impressive, is fixed by a document bearing the date 1375, though the tax was paid a hundred years prior to that time.

a year greater than it was in 1875, while that of a man of the same age is only three months greater.

Discussing the reasons of our increasing longevity and in particular woman's stronger hold on life, physicians at St. Bartholomew's hospital advanced widely different theories. "The essential cause of death," one stated, "is a wearing out from overwork of our brain cells. Women may be just as brainy as men, but they do not work their brain cells as vigorously or as continuously as do their male relatives. If they did these would not be so great a disparity in the length of life of the two sexes."

Another consultant puts down woman's greater expectation of life to the more sheltered existence she leads, and the lack of the physically depress-

"In my own country," said Doctor Llorente, "a woman is content to be queen of her household, but here woman wants to be both king and queen."

The doctor, smiling, continued: "I was surprised to hear that in some cases the American husband has, actually, to conceal the condition of his finances from his wife in order to curb her extravagances. Thus the rich young wife's complaint to her doctor, a friend of mine in New York, would be impossible in Spain, where married people are happy companions."

"It is so ridiculous," pointed my friend's young patient, "to call the man at the bank a 'teller.' Why, he won't tell you anything. I asked one the other day how much money my husband had on deposit and he just laughed at me!"

Why anybody who is young should indulge in grumbling as a pastime is one of the puzzles that never is solved, yet such people there are, and we meet them to our sorrow almost every day.

If they happen to be passengers on a railway train they pile their bags and bundles on an extra seat for which they have not paid, are conveniently blind to the weariness of other passengers who are standing, and assume the aspect of martyrs when the conductor courteously but peremptorily informs them that they must make room.

They object to having the windows open, although the air may be loaded with impurities from the congestion of the crowd; they scold and fret at the throng or the conductor and rail at Providence in general because everything in life is not arranged with a view to their comfort.
