Tax hike sees lone opponent

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN
Staff Writer

Midland City Councilman J.D. Faircloth lived up to a campaign promise he made to voters months ago.

Faircloth cast the lone vote Tuesday in opposing a 5.35 percent tax hike, but not without some reservations.

"I don't want to be portrayed as the only one ... everyone here was concerned about those rates, but I campaigned on the idea not to raise taxes."

Faircloth said he supported 95 percent of what council had allocated in its $62 million budget.

What he opposed was plain and simple.

- a 2 percent pay hike for employees.
- merit raises granted to certain city employees.
- buy-backs of vacation time, primarily from police and fire.

"I felt we could have easily saved $800,000 to $900,000 on those cuts alone," said the councilman.

Despite the opposition, council voted 6-1 in favor of the tax increase that will push property rates from 50.65 cents to 58 cents per $100 valuation.

Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas said the increase while unfortunate, was necessitated by a number of factors, including the state of the local economy which continues to play havoc with property values.

Still, noted Thomas, the city continues to operate $3 million below its budget of four years ago and with 10 percent less staff over the same period.

Thomas sided with the concerns of a number of residents who expressed their displeasure over the increase, but added: "We're taxpayers like you. All of us have suffered salary reductions and jobs changes...we tried to do the best with a difficult situation."

MISD tables decision on prayer issue

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

Midland Independent School District administrators and board members have two weeks to weigh the legal and social implications of allowing student prayer groups to meet on campus.

After listening to three hours of emotional public testimony, MISD trustees voted Tuesday to table action on two high school Christian groups' requests for on-campus assembly.

Board members, addressing about 400 people gathered in the Midland High School auditorium, said they must consider past and present prayer-in-school court cases before rendering a decision at a Sept. 26 meeting.

Student members of Midland and Lee high school religious groups gave the board their own interpretations of court judgments involving the gray breadth between church and state.

Armed with legal documents, Jennifer Sue Lane, 17, an LHS senior, challenged the board to ask itself why religious groups do not deserve the equal access to school facilities that other organizations procure.

Jennifer is co-leader of "Power Connection," a group of LHS students asking for Bible study time on their campus.

"I believe this kind of thing would have a positive impact on the high school campus," she said.

MHS senior Shawn Jantzen, 17, representing the "7:14" prayer group, said the lack of Christian influence in schools has been responsible for an increase in alcoholism, drug abuse and other youth problems.

Voters to make pay-raise decision

By CHRIS VAN WAGENEN

Police and firemen want it.

But Midland City Council's not giving it.

Forget the bickering going on here, this is one issue that's going to be settled at the polls.

Mark the calendar for Nov. 7.

That's when voters will decide once and for all whether Midland's safety forces deserve a 10 percent pay hike, in addition to the 2 percent already granted them on Tuesday.

"I regret it's come to this point," said City Manager Fred Poe, who compared the latest effort to outright collective bargaining.

That comment left a sour tast in the mouth of Dallas attorney David Twedell, who is representing both police and firemen.

"They resent being called a union, they're a professional organization ... we didn't suggest or request negotiations with the ctiy, but both of these groups are willing to listen and compromise," he said.

Twedell claimed that all Midland's safety forces are interested in are the personal needs of their families — needs they say are not being met by the city's pay scale.

Midland's safety forces have not had a raise in four years.

On that count both sides agree.

What they don't agree on is the amount.

On Tuesday, the council passed, as part of its overall budget, an across the board 2 percent increase.

But saftey force members view that amount as a mere pittance, when taking into account inflation, which Twedell claims has eaten more than 17 percent of their annual income.

However, among five other West Texas cities, Poe claims Midland falls second only to Lubbock in pay, noting police and fire employees here take home more than their counterparts in Abilene, Amarillo, Odessa and San Angelo.

"We feel these figures are fairly accurate," Poe told council during an extended afternoon session. "I've never felt our employees are overpaid...I think we've treated them very fairly, especially when you look at the economy over the last four years."

MC trustees opposed to public referendum

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland College trustees Tuesday blasted former Midland Mayor Ernest Angelo's plan to put the issue of raising the junior college to four-year and graduate-level status as part of the University of Texas System on the Nov. 7 ballot.

Calling the proposal "the wealthy man's plan," MC Board Chairman Ralph Way said a non-binding referendum to gauge the public's attitude on bring MC into the UT System is "unjustifiable."

"There's not anyway that this board can justify giving Midland College away," Way said in reaction to the Angelo referendum that was born out of the controversial idea to expand the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Meeting Tuesday afternoon, trustees cited legal questions following the former mayor's "drop-in-visit" to the Midland County Commissioners' Court on Monday. They also criticized Angelo for failing to inform trustees of his wish to place the referendum on the Nov. 7 ballot until after Monday's meeting.

"It's obvious that this is a political move," trustee Bill Kleine said in going along with other board members who oppose a referendum.

Other trustees opposing a referendum were Parker Humes, Steve Kiser, John Cooper, Ken Peeler and Gloria Hinojosa.

The former mayor's tentative proposal states: "The University of Texas System would be given title to the campus and facilities of Midland College and would make the campus a full-time part of a four-year and graduate-level university at Midland-Odessa.

"The University of Texas System would assume all outstanding debt and on-going operating costs and would, with local input, offer a full program of Vocation-Technical courses on the Midland Campus."

Commissioners set a special session for 9 a.m. Monday to consider the proposal.

MC trustees have opposed taking the decision to create a four-year university out of the proper channels.

The decision should be made by the University of Texas Regents and the Higher Education Coordinating Board, "not politicians," MC President Jess Parrish has said.

In the event that those boards determine a four-year university is in the best interest of the area, Midland College would prefer to see a UTPB center on or adjacent to MC.

In considering the concept of turning MC over to the UT System, Humes expressed concern of MC faculty and staff members of possibly "losing jobs."

Moreover, trustees worry that the college's role of providing the community with a trained workforce will be lost and that Midlanders would lose out on valuable scholarships as well as a successful athletic program, Humes said.

Democrat Geren takes Wright seat

FORT WORTH (AP) — Democrat Pete Geren barely defeated a Republican for the seat held 34 years by another Democrat — Rep. Jim Wright. Then he acknowledged he faced a big job in Washington.

"No one fills the shoes of the speaker of the House," Geren said. "It's going to be a long road back to restoring the clout and the influence that Fort Worth and Tarrant County have grown used to having."

Geren received 40,210 votes, or 51 percent, to 38,590 ballots, or 49 percent, for television commentator Dr. Bob Lanier in Tuesday's special election runoff to replace Wright, who resigned during an ethics investigation.

The 37-year-old winner, a former aide to Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, will serve the remainder of Wright's term, which ends next year.

Bentsen leads push for tax-deductible IRA status

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON — After months of criticizing President Bush's proposed capital gains tax cut as a giveaway to the rich, Democratic leaders are offering an alternative for "average folks" — a return to tax-deductible Individual Retirement Accounts.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said allowing all workers to have IRAs would be a better way to encourage saving than the proposed capital gains cut. House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., and Senate Majority Leader George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, said they agree.

"The Senate and the American people now have a clear choice between competing plans to advance our economy," Mitchell said Tuesday.

"Cutting capital gains (taxes) is an investment incentive for a few, but the problem is broader than that," Bentsen said Tuesday in announcing his proposal. "With the IRA, we'd have the participation of a broad spectrum of middle America."

All workers were allowed fully deductible IRAs before passage of the 1986 tax overhaul. That law made them available only to workers not covered by a company pension, and to covered workers with incomes under $25,000 and couples under $40,000. Partial deductions are allowed couples with incomes under $50,000 and single people under $35,000.

Under Bentsen's proposal, a person could contribute up to $2,000 a year to an IRA and avoid current taxation on half the sum. The contribution and the interest earned would not be taxed until the money was withdrawn for retirement, tuition or making the down payment on a first home.

"This IRA affects average folks," Bentsen said. "It helps address three of the primary concerns of middle-income Americans, lower-income Americans: buying that first home, financing a college education or providing for one's retirement."

Bentsen outlined his proposal as the House Ways and Means Committee struggled to solve the capital gains issue, which has stalemated the panel for several weeks. The committee's 13 Republicans and six Democrats — a bare majority of the 37-member panel — favor a capital gains cut, which Bush has endorsed.

First lady to attend MISD ceremony

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

A lightning bolt of excitement raced through Midland schools this morning with the announcement that first lady Barbara Bush will be here to visit the school named after her husband.

Bush Elementary School, 5001 Preston Drive, will roll out the figurative red carpet for Mrs. Bush at 4 p.m. Monday in a ceremony honoring the school's opening this school year.

Specifics on the event have yet to be ironed out, Midland Independent School District spokesman Ted Miller said.

"It's still real up in the air," Miller said. "This got dropped in our laps today."

Miller said representatives for Mrs. Bush will arrive later this week to outline the specifics of her visit.

Bush Principal Toby Ward, who was in a meeting this morning when word came of the visit, said she could not wait to get back and tell her pupils.

"We're ready to show our new building off," Ms. Ward said. "We're ready to show what an honor it is for her to come and represent George Bush."

School board member Ken Morrison said Mrs. Bush's visit will mean a lot to MISD and education in general.

"I think it shows that the Bushes are dedicated to education," Morrison said. "It also shows their fondness for Midland and that they have good memories here."

The Bushes lived here when they first moved to Texas in the late 1940s.

Mrs. Bush's trip is part of a tentative statewide tour next week which includes stops in San Antonio and possibly another Texas city, her press secretaries announced.

She is scheduled to spend her time in San Antonio campaigning for literacy programs and touring the restored Majestic Theatre, the secretaries said.

Cool conditions could continue

From Staff and Wire Reports

The year's first blast of cool, autumn air should be around until the weekend, according to forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

The air mass trailing the cold front which passed through west Texas Tuesday is "a little earlier and a little colder" than typical early September cold high pressure areas, NWS forecaster Todd Shea said this morning.

Today's high temperature was expected to be nearly 20 degrees below the average Sept. 13 high of 87.

The low of 52 this morning was three degrees higher than the record low of 49 set on this date in 1959. The cold air associated with this system caused scattered record low across the Central Plains overnight, Shea said.

Record lows are not expected to be threatened tonight, when a low in the lower 50s is forecast.

Warmer air is expected to push in from the southwest by this weekend, creating a gradual warming trend, with temperatures returning to seasonal norms of the upper 80s by Sunday.

Thursday's forecast high is in the mid-70s.

A lot of moisture is associated with the front as well. A flash flood watch continues in effect for the Midland area tonight with an 80 percent chance of rain and thunderstorms, some possibly heavy.

Cloudy skies will persist Thursday, with a continued 50 percent chance of thunderstorms.

Tuesday's high of 89 was 12 degrees lower than the record high temperature of 101 set for that date in 1930.

STATE

A cold front produced heavy rain showers and thunderstorms in parts of North and West Texas today, prompting forecasters to issue flood advisories for the area.

The National Weather Service posted a flash flood watch over northern and western regions through tonight. Storms were located along the front that stretched along a line from Wichita Falls to Midland.

Meanwhile, skies were partly cloudy throughout South Texas.

Winds were northerly at 15 to 25 mph in the immediate vicinity of the front and the thunderstorm activity and southerly and southeasterly elsewhere in the state at 10 to 15 mph.

Low temperatures were in the 70s and low 80s in southern sections, 70s for North Texas and 60s in the east, with readings in the 40s and 50s in the Panhandle and extreme northern regions. Extremes were 40 degrees at Dalhart and 81 degrees at Laredo.

The weather service predicted much cooler temperatures in the north, and continued warm readings in the south with widely scattered showers and thunderstorms. Highs should be in the 50s in the Panhandle, with the 60s and 70 in North Texas and 80s and 90s across South Texas and the far west.

Cooler temperatures and showers were expected to spread southward tonight with 40s in the Panhandle to the 50s and 60s central and 70s in the south.

It should be cloudy and cool to cold with showers and thunderstorms widespread Thursday. Highs were expected in the 50s in the north to the 80s in southern sections, except near 90 in the lower Rio Grande Valley.

NATION

Showers and thunderstorms drenched parts of the south-central United States today as central Oklahoma got more than 5 inches of rain, and precipitation continued from the southern Plains into western Missouri.

Flash flood watches were in effect for parts of Texas as well as Oklahoma.

Late evening thunderstorms in Oklahoma produced high winds in the Okemah area, damaging several homes and knocking down trees and power lines.

Thunderstorms also struck southern Arizona, producing golf ball-size hail and 61 mph gusts at Sierra Vista.

Showers and thunderstorms also developed from western North Carolina to Delaware early this morning.

Rain fell in the middle Mississippi Valley, and along the southern Atlantic and Gulf coasts.

Fair skies prevailed across the rest of the nation.

In eastern Colorado a snow advisory was posted for the northern foothills, the Palmer Divide, and the northern and central mountains where 4 to 7 inches were expected.

A freeze advisory was in effect this morning for northeastern Colorado, and central Wyoming, and a frost advisory for northeastern Minnesota.

Today's forecast called for showers and thunderstorms scattered from Florida and the Gulf Coast region, the Tennessee and lower Mississippi Valley to the southern Plains, as well as the central and southern Appalachians; rain widespread from the central Rockies across the central Plains and the middle Mississippi Valley into the upper Great Lakes.

Aid sought for widows of Mexican pilots

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Albert Bustamante is asking Congress to help the widows of two Mexican pilots killed in World War II while flying for U.S. forces, including one who died trying to skirt a South Pacific typhoon.

A hearing was scheduled today before the House Judiciary subcommittee on administrative law and governmental relations on the bill, which would provide veterans survivors benefits to the two women, who live in Texas and Oklahoma.

Without the legislation, the women would be ineligible for such benefits because their husbands were not officially members of the U.S. Armed Forces. The men were part of a special unit, however, which operated as part of U.S. forces in the South Pacific, Bustamante said.

"With this bill, the American government and the American people can show their gratitude and appreciation for the great sacrifices made by these heroic Mexican soldiers and their American families in World War II," said Bustamante, a San Antonio Democrat.

Bustamante said the bill is intended to benefit only Oralia Espinosa of San Antonio and Triny Nell Espinosa of Norman, Okla. Their husbands, who were not related, were members of the 201st Squadron of the Mexican Air Force. The squadron, a volunteer outfit, was formed in World War II to give Mexicans the opportunity to serve in the air war against Germany, Japan and Italy.

Oralia Espinosa's husband, Capt. Hector Espinosa, flew 13 missions before being killed July 16, 1945, when his plane ran out of fuel while trying to skirt a typhoon, Bustamante's office said.

At the time, Mrs. Espinosa had one child and was expecting another. In the years after her husband's death, she raised her two children alone, working as a sales clerk.

After experiencing heart and ulcer problems, she was forced to retire and began receiving Social Security disability payments.

Triny Nell Espinosa's husband, Capt. Jose Espinosa, was killed June 6, 1945, while flying a test plane that had just undergone repairs. Bustamante's office said she never remarried, has arthritis, and may have to stop working because of health reasons.

PRAYER

"We want to bring down the negative peer pressure that students face every day," Shawn said. "Now is the time for a new generation.

"It is a time to make up for what has become of our community. Prayer and Jesus is the only thing that's going to make a difference."

Symbolizing a biblical reference to 2 Chronicles 7:14, between 40 and 50 members of the group have been meeting at Hill Park at 7:14 a.m. before school. LHS students and MHS teachers have attended the prayer meetings.

Jennifer and Shawn said they will consider combining forces to work with school officials and research the issue.

Some of the more than 50 people who addressed trustees included MISD teachers and prominent community and governmental representatives.

The Rev. Jim Denison of Midland First Baptist Church said the students have made an impressive stand for their beliefs, representing community convictions.

"I believe you have a legal concern, but you also have a representation concern," Denison said.

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said he understood the dilemma trustees must confront in the face of legal losses prayer-in-school supporters have sustained as high as in the U.S. Supreme Court.

But Painter said the moral "pendulum is swinging back" almost 30 years after organized prayer sessions in schools became unlawful.

"As a Christian the decision you have in front of you tonight is not hard at all," Painter said. "We're not talking about prayers in schools in this issue. We're talking about prayer on school property."

However, other speakers at the meeting said allowing on-campus religious activities would undermine democracy's intent.

Janis Keasler, who is studying to become a Christian minister, said the board would open a "Pandora's box" if it let students meet to pray on campus.

The ruling could also give potentially undesirable groups, such as "neo-Nazis," the right to assemble for their own forms of worship, said Ms. Keasler, who has three school-age children.

"I think the schools need to teach academics and the churches need to teach religion," she said. Ms. Keasler's statements brought boos from some audience members.

LHS teacher Sam Manning, who has two children in MISD schools, rebuked the booers, saying they displayed behavior unbecoming of Christians.

Manning said the students have more in mind than simply having a place to pray and seek fellowship with their Christian friends.

"Clearly these people have said they are going to promote religion in the public schools," Manning said. "I think we should keep church and state separate."

Ken Carpenter, a businessman and former teacher, pleaded with students to continue their fight for Christianity but abandon their efforts to force it into schools.

"I think religion is so important that we must do everything possible to protect that freedom," Carpenter said. "The best way we can protect that freedom is to maintain separation of church and state."

Some students who addressed the board told stories of how their acceptance of Christ and friendships with the student religious groups have helped them beat drug and alcohol problems.

Other speakers talked of how their teen suicides may have been prevented if Jesus was in their corners.

However, school board members thought the students went too far when they said trustees would defy Christianity by not allowing the groups to assemble on campus.

"I think I've been personally attacked here tonight," trustee Ken Morrison said after the speakers list had been exhausted. "I'll be a Christian until the day I die and after that.

"The issue is whether this is a legal act or not. I'm going to obey the law."

Board President James Fuller said the trustees would be "less than Christian" if they went against the oath they took to follow the law.

Fuller said he was concerned with some of the students' treatment of non-supporters of prayers in schools.

"It comes off as being hypocritical," Fuller said. However, he encouraged the students to uphold their religious beliefs and praised them for using proper school district channels.

"I appreciate the lessons the young people have learned relative to addressing issues in the most positive way possible," Fuller said.

Trustee Ken Marks commended the students, saying they have shown a "demonstration of a lot of courage."

"I support you wholeheartedly in what you are trying to do," Marks said. "I think you can make a difference in your schools, no matter what the decision may be."

MC

If Angelo's proposal gets on the ballot, MC trustees say they plan to conduct an educational campaign on the benefits of MC carrying out its roles and purposes as a community college, according to Way.

But he added, "We want to keep this positive."

Parrish reiterated the point that a referendum on the issue "does not lend itself to an easy yes-or-no answer."

He said it's not that he doesn't trust the people and their wishes; he doesn't trust the issue.

Trustees also spent part of the afternoon awarding bids for the expansion of the MC Student Center and the installation of a wooden floor for Chaparral Center.

Receiving the contract for the Student Center expansion was Dave Leonard Construction's $1.8 million bid. The general contractor is headquartered in Midland.

The Chaparral Center bid went to Robbins Inc. at a cost of $65,900.

RAISES

Both Police Chief Richard Czech and Fire Chief James Roberts also said they were behind a pay increase for their men. However, both went on record as saying neither could support a referendum.

Twedell said he found a number of holes in Poe's presentation, as did Leonard Hendon, president of Midland's Fraternal Order of Police.

"We question some of Mr. Poe's figures," said Hendon, adding both police and fire employees planned to present their own set of numbers at a later date.

"All of law enforcement is underpaid," said Hendon, "This is a public safety issue ... if you want to keep qualified officers, you have to maintain a top pay scale or at least be close to it."

Poe said that on an average, Midland police officers net $2,365 a month, compared to $1,638 in Odessa, $1,587 in San Angelo, $1,926 in Abilene, $1,979 in Amarillo and $2,502 in Lubbock.

Monthly figures for firefighters in West Texas were a little more in line. Poe said on an average, employees there received $1,908; Odessa, $1,653; San Angelo, $1,656; Abilene, $1,690; Amarillo, $1,861 and Lubbock, $1,917.

Poe claimed that if the referendum is supported only 15 rookie employees will benefit from the 10 percent pay hike.

But Hendon disputed that fact as well, noting that as officers move up in grade, they automatically become eligible for the 10 percent hike. "That's just Mr. Poe's interpetation," he said.

TAXES

Council's decision to grant the 2 percent hike will cost the city about $365,000, while the vacation buyback — which allows employees to trade in time for money — will run beween $150,000 to $225,000.

Midland's latest hike pushed the city's ranking from 20th to 12th among Texas' 31 most populous cities. The city with the largest tax rate was Fort Worth, while Richardson ranked last.

City officials claim that Midland's tax base dropped $2 million in 1989 and $1 billion since 1983.

Tuesday's increase came on the heels of another tax matter — this one involving sales.

City officials agreed to look into the possibility of snapping up a half-cent sales tax that could be used either for economic development, street and bridge repairs, or both.

"There's a lot of good we can do just with streets, but I don't know if the citizens are willing to pay another half-cent sales tax," said Faircloth, during a morning briefing session.

Currently, the state receives six cents, the county one half cent and the city one cent of the sales tax, leaving it one-half cent under law.

However, there is some indication that Midland County Hospital District may also be eligible to take advantage of the tax.

Either way, it will be up to voters to decide whether or not they are willing to pay more for goods, rather than support bond-indebtedness programs that are retired over a period of years.

Midland City Council Bill Williams said he could support sending the issue to voters sometime in 1990, given the fact that the city is more or less out of remaining bond funds for street repairs.

Currently, the sales tax generates an estimated $8 million a year for the city. An extra half-cent would add about $4 million more.

City officials are uncertain whether it's necessary to attempt the full-half cent or try to convince voters to support a quarter-cent hike.

"One agency or another is going to go for it," said Mayor Thomas. "I think we need to take a close look at it."

IRA

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., the committee chairman, has blocked a vote on the cut. Although he opposes a capital gains reduction, he is trying to develop a compromise that could win back one of the six dissident Democrats.

The Joint Committee on Taxation estimates that as much as 80 percent of the benefits of the capital gains cut would go to those with incomes above $100,000 a year.

Nevertheless, Bush contends, the cut is necessary to encourage saving and job-creating investments.

Economists disagree on that argument, just as they disagree on whether IRAs encourage saving or simply reward those who transfer money from a taxable savings account into an IRA.

Bentsen noted a recent study commissioned by Merrill Lynch Consumer Markets found that 80 percent of IRA contributions were new saving.

GEREN

Lanier, who received endorsements from President Bush and former Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry, told supporters not to throw away campaign signs because he'll probably challenge Geren in 1990 for the seat.

"We don't feel like we really lost that much," said the 44-year-old political newcomer. "I mean, we did better than anybody's done in this county for this particular party."

Lanier led Geren and six other candidates in a special election Aug. 12, but didn't gain a majority, making the runoff necessary. He is featured as medical commentator on "60-Second Housecall," a television spot syndicated to local news broadcasts in more than 40 television markets.

Republicans had hoped to break the Democrats' grip on the district, but Geren raised almost twice as much money as Lanier and had previous experience: a 1986 loss to Republican Joe Barton for a different congressional district.

Voters showed little interest in the campaign. About 27 percent of the 287,000 registered voters turned out.

Wright resigned in June amid allegations he repeatedly violated congressional ethics rules involving speaking fees and business deals.

During the campaign to succeed Wright, Geren and Lanier emphasized their endorsements and differing backgrounds.

Geren, endorsed by Wright and Bentsen, cited his experience as a legislative aide.

Lanier said he was in better touch with his constituents' concerns than his opponent.

Hungary to keep open borders to the West

■ Related story, Page 7A

BERLIN (AP) — Hungary said today it will break its Warsaw Pact commitment and keep open its borders to the West, and an East German newspaper said it is time to consider why the country's young, skilled citizens are fleeing.

In Austria, the Interior Ministry said 12,158 East Germans had passed through that country en route to West Germany in the two days that refugees have been taking advantage of Hungary's newly opened border.

In Budapest, a government official said today that Hungary has no intention of reversing its dramatic new pathway to the West and that it reflects the increasingly liberal Communist nation's new role in the world.

"The Hungarian government's policy of opening the country's borders will continue," said Ferenc Somogyi, the No. 2 official in the Foreign Ministry.

He said that as long as a third country is willing to accept refugees from other East bloc countries, Hungary will allow them to leave.

But he said that the current, orchestrated migration was a "unique step" that applied only to East German citizens. "The East Germans were not treated as refugees and they did not request asylum as refugees," Somogyi said.

East Germans are automatically considered citizens of West Germany and therefore technically do not qualify as refugees.

Somogyi said the country's open-border policy was consistent with Hungary's status as a signatory of the U.N. Convention on Refugees, the only East bloc country to have signed it.

He indicated that such agreements with the West take precedence over Warsaw Pact commitments Hungary, by allowing citizens of a Warsaw Pact ally to flee across its borders, violated a 1969 pact with the rest of the Soviet bloc.

"There are agreements with other Warsaw Treaty countries similar to the one Hungary just suspended with East Germany, and these agreements are no longer in line with Hungary's newly assumed international responsibilities, such as our having signed the Geneva Convention," Somogyi said.

"We are working to bring these various agreements into harmony with (our) new foreign policy," he added.

In East Berlin, the Communist Party youth daily Junge Welt said that East German citizens no longer can avoid the discussion about why a "minority" has fled the country of 16.6 million people.

"How do we make this country indisputably the focal point for dedication and happiness for every individual? How do we make it a homeland for even more people in which one accepts burdens and from which one is not lured away just by shop windows full of bananas or glossy travel guides?" Junge Welt asked.

The newspaper often contains important articles and commentaries reflecting official views.

The new arrivals have said they were dissatisfied with the economic situation in their country, and the political oppression at home. Many of the arrivals are young, skilled craftsmen. They also said East Germany has failed to adopt political and economic reforms being tried in other Communist nations.

The main East German party daily, Neues Deutschland, today continued its criticism of West Germany, which it contends has "lured the refugees West."

It also criticized Hungary for allowing their "unsanctioned departure."

The refugees have traveled by car, train and bus through Austria to their new homeland since midnight Sunday, when Hungary opened its border completely.

West German border officials said the number of refugees could top 15,000.

The exodus comes at a time of dramatic change in the East bloc. Poland has installed the bloc's first government led by non-Communists, and Hungary's leaders are promising free elections.

West Germany and Hungary have worked together to coordinate free passage for the East Germans and that has added to the strain in relations between those countries and East Berlin.

Gunmen attack Medellin judge's home

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Gunmen attacked a judge's home in the cocaine center of Medellin, but police guards drove them off, authorities said today. Troops found caches of grenades and assault rifles near Bogota.

One policeman was wounded in the assault Tuesday night on the house of the federal Judge Laurentino Gallego Gil, a Medellin police spokesman. The source, who asked not to be named for security reasons, said in a telephone interview that two police guards repulsed the attack.

The assault followed the deployment of more than 500 soldiers and police Tuesday in Antioquia state, of which Medellin is the capital. They will bolster the more than 4,000 security force members already in the northwest region, where drug gangs stage daily bombings, shootings and arson attacks.

Hundreds of mourners Tuesday attended the funeral of former Medellin Mayor Pablo Pelaez Gonzalez, who tried to rid the city of drug traffickers. Pelaez was assassinated on his way to work Monday.

In an army raid Tuesday just north of Bogota, authorities found seven Israeli Galil automatic rifles, nine U.S. R-15 semi-utomatic rifles, two Chinese automatic rifles, one Belgian assault rifle and a British machine gun, said Col. Eduardo Arevalo, the Defense Ministry spokesman.

Visitors pray today at the Bogota, Colombia, grave of presidential candidate Luis Carlos Galan, whose Aug. 18 assassination spurred the current crackdown on the Medellin drug cartel.

The reliable and well-informed Bogota newspaper El Espectador, bombed earlier in the month by drug terrorists, said the arms belonged to Gonzalo Rodriguez Gacha, the reputed No. 2 man in the Medellin cocaine cartel. Arevalo would not confirm that.

The newspaper, which printed a picture of the captured rifles, said the weapons cache also contained grenades, pistols, ammunition and scanner radios for monitoring police and army frequencies. Arevalo would not confirm that.

The reinforcements to the Medellin region were believed to be part of measures adopted by government to combat the traffickers. The government declared an unprecedented crackdown on the traffickers after the Aug. 18 assassination of a leading presidential candidate, Sen. Luis Carlos Galan.

Gen. Oscar Botero, the minister of defense, said in announcing the dispatch of reinforcements to the Medellin area that the government will sign emergency decrees that will allow sending army advisers to cities overrun by drug lords.

Medellin, the country's second-largest city with 2 million people, is already under a nighttime curfew. Hooded gangs on motorcycles have been throwing firebombs at government vehicles in the city and bombings and bomb threats are almost daily occurrences.

President Virgilio Barco has ordered raids on hundreds of estates and ranches said to belong to drug dealers and confiscated their airplanes, helicopters, limousines, satellite dishes, cattle and exotic pet birds.

Hundreds of purported traffickers were rounded up, but the top leaders of the drug cartels escaped and remain at large.

The cartels supply 80 percent of the cocaine sold in the United States.

US to propose funds for 40,000 Soviet refugees next year

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration told Congress today it wants to accept 50,000 Soviet refugees and an additional 6,500 from Eastern Europe in the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1.

Overall, 125,000 refugees would be admitted, an increase of almost 8 percent over current quotas, said Jewel S. Lafontant, the U.S. coordinator for refugee affairs.

The 50,000 Soviet refugees, at least half of whom are expected to be Jews, would be a fraction of the 250,000 Soviet citizens the State Department estimated last week would apply for entry in fiscal 1990.

Lafontant, testifying before the House Judiciary subcommittee on immigration, said 40,000 of the 50,000 Soviet refugees would be assisted by the U.S. government in paying their transportation and settlement costs. The 10,000 others would depend on private organizations, friends and relatives.

Beyond the refugee program, other would-be immigrants can apply for admission under a separate so-called parole program which carries no financial assistance.

The current combined quota for refugees from the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe is 50,000. The new plan would allocate all 50,000 slots to the Soviet Union to deal with an unprecedented outflow under President Mikhail Gorbachev, and set up a separate category of 6,500 for Eastern Europe, mostly from Poland and Hungary.

Other projected quotas include 25,000 for East Asia, 26,500 for Vietnam, 3,500 for Latin America and the Caribbean and 3,000 for Africa.

In fiscal 1988, as emigration from the Soviet Union began to climb, the combined quota for the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe was 15,000.

An estimated 40,000 Jews are expected to leave the Soviet Union this year. Currently there is, in addition, a backlog of an estimated 30,000 to 40,000 Jews who have not left the Soviet Union or are in Vienna and Rome, seeking entry to the United States.

Most Soviet Jews who obtain exit permits say they want to live in Israel, but all but a fraction then apply for admission here once they have left their country.

According to Jewish sources, who demanded anonymity, the Bush administration will drastically revise its processing procedures. Refugees who applied before Oct. 1, the beginning of the 1990 fiscal year, will be processed in Rome and Vienna.

But in the future, applications will be handled by a beefed-up U.S. embassy staff and also by a new office to be set up outside Washington, sources said.

The U.S. official, who also asked not to be named, said that a cutoff date was likely, though it might be set for a few months later.

While the Soviets seeking admission remain in their country, their applications would be considered both in Moscow and in the Washington area office.

Israel has expressed concern that Jewish refugees from the Soviet Union were increasingly choosing to settle in the United States once out of their homeland, depriving Israel of desirable immigrants.

It was not clear whether the change in procedure would increase the flow of refugees to Israel.

The rising exodus from the Soviet Union, which results from U.S. pressure as well as reforms undertaken by Gorbachev, poses administrative and financial problems for the Bush administration.

Compromise on drug bill sought as Bush addresses nation's youth

NATION

"I'll let you in on a secret: We all can succeed. If you don't use drugs, you can be anything you want to be. ... So don't blow it."
— President George Bush in televised address

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House is asking Senate Democrats to compromise on anti-drug legislation, while President Bush warns young people not to "blow it" by getting involved in drugs.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, and his GOP counterpart, Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, held talks on the Democratic proposal Tuesday. Further meetings among lawmakers from both parties were planned today.

Dole and other top GOP senators also met with top White House officials, emerging to say Republicans want to make a deal with the Democrats.

"The administration ... is prepared at any time to sit down ... and see if there is some way to bring it together," Dole said.

The closed-door sessions were held after Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Robert Byrd, D-W.Va. — with Mitchell's support — proposed a $3.9 billion anti-drug program as an amendment to the $11.9 billion transportation spending bill for next year. Fiscal 1990 begins Oct. 1.

Meanwhile, Bush went on television Tuesday to ask schoolchildren across the country to help any friends who use drugs. Rejecting drugs "won't make you a nerd," Bush said, adding, "I'm asking you to find someone who needs you. And offer to help."

He said, "I'll let you in on a secret: We all can succeed. If you don't use drugs, you can be anything you want to be. ... So don't blow it."

Also, a pair of Senate appropriations subcommittees adopted their own anti-drug proposals.

Byrd said his plan would add $3.9 billion to the $6.2 billion Congress otherwise planned to spend on anti-drug efforts next year. The $10.1 billion total would be $2.2 billion more than what Bush has sought.

But the White House announced that top administration officials would urge Bush to veto it.

"It throws money at the problem rather than providing a plan," said a statement by the White House Office of Management and Budget.

Byrd told reporters he was "puzzled" by the White House statement and referred to the president's televised speech last week in which he revealed his own drug proposals.

"Mr. Bush went on TV the other night and stated in eloquent fashion ... that the drug war was right here on our streets," Byrd told reporters. "I believed what he said. This is my way of trying to develop something that's comprehensive."

Byrd's plan would include $1.1 billion for drug and alcohol treatment and $1 billion for new prisons, and would divide its resources 53 to 47 percent between law enforcement and treatment programs. It would be financed by a 0.575 percent cut in defense and domestic spending, except for Social Security and other benefit programs.

Republicans, however, argued that Byrd's plan would provide more money than can efficiently be spent, provides too little for enforcement efforts, and would slash an intolerable $1.8 billion out of defense.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the administration supports a bipartisan measure approved Tuesday by the Senate commerce, justice and state subcommittee.

That provision would slice 0.225 from the rest of the budget, raising $1.8 billion for law enforcement. It would remove $675 million from the Pentagon.

Septemberfest gives city art connection

A Midland event that has been growing by leaps and bounds over its 16-year history reached another milestone of sorts this past weekend when a crowd conservatively estimated at 18,000 people came to the grounds of the Museum of the Southwest.

Septemberfest officials say the crowd at this year's festival was the largest in the past seven years and that as a result, Septemberfest will give at least $50,000 to the Museum of the Southwest.

"Considering that these aren't boom times, we're really excited about this year's event," said Kathryn Hardwick, who along with Jamie Clifton co-chaired this year's event.

Septemberfest has long been a showcase for artists from this region, but, according to Mrs. Hardwick, more emphasis is being given on the work of local artists when at all possible. The work of six local artists was displayed in this year's art show, she noted.

One new feature at this year's event was performances by musical groups. The three featured this year were Mike Pritchard and the Lightning Horns, Dennis Axberg and Blue Thunder, and Joseph and Teresa. All the musicians were either Midlanders or former Midlanders, said Mrs. Hardwick, and they were a popular addition to Septemberfest.

Another extremely popular event this year was a performance by a bike riding demonstration team from Dallas.

Although attendance at Septemberfest had lagged in some years following the oil price decline, Mrs. Hardwick said the outstanding attendance at this year's event illustrates that Septemberfest is a popular event with Midlanders that will continue to grow in coming years.

"It'll be nothing but bigger and better," she said.

For the Midland art community — and all those who simply enjoy looking at fine artwork — that's great news! Septemberfest is putting Midland in touch with the arts.

Fencing in the Fed

The chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, Lee Hamilton, wants to tighten regulation of the Federal Reserve system. The legislation he has co-sponsored sounds innocent enough. It would strip away some of the secrecy the Fed now enjoys and make it more accountable to elected politicians.

But lurking behind Rep. Hamilton's bill is a troubling dilemma. An institution as powerful as the nation's central bank ought to be politically accountable. But if White House or Congress truly determined monetary policy, the economy would almost surely suffer.

The Hamilton bill strikes a careful balance between accountability and autonomy. If Congress ventures much beyond his modest provisions, it will risk serious economic damage.

The Fed controls what is arguably the most powerful economic lever in the world: the U.S. money supply. Not Congress, not the White House, not any foreign government exerts more short-term control over prices, output and jobs. The trick to setting correct monetary policy is to recognize the profound difference between the Fed's short-term impact and its long-term impotence.

In the short term, the Fed can drive down interest rates and thereby increase total spending, output and jobs (a "loose" money policy). But in the long run, such a policy drives up inflation, interest rates go back up and the employment and output gains evaporate. A Fed that sacrifices long-term price stability to dabble in short-term expediency creates havoc. The congressional economic perspective can be frighteningly short-term. It tolerates immense budget deficits even though they threaten economic health. Congress routinely engages in budget trickery that lowers one year's deficit by worsening the deficit every year thereafter. The prospect of Congress forcing the Fed to drive down short-term interest rates to meet Gramm-Rudman budget targets is numbing. Fed autonomy is essential.

Hamilton's bill would place the secretary of the Treasury on the Fed's primary policy-making body, allow a new president to appoint his own chairman and require publication of the Fed's budget. This amount of accountability is appropriate. Hamilton would also permit the Government Accounting Office to audit Fed procedures more closely. The precise purpose of this provision is murky and needs to be clarified.

The most controversial portion of the bill would require that the Fed disclose changes in monetary policy immediately rather than wait its cutomary six weeks. Most monetary experts agree with Alan Blinder of Princeton and William Poole of Brown University that Fed policy will work better with immediate disclosure. What is certain is that immediate disclosure will subject the Fed to more intense debate, which might weaken its economic resolve.

Hamilton's attempt to integrate monetary policy better into the political process is constructive and measured. If Congress does not reach beyond the current proposals, economic policy can be democratized in a manner that does no harm.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Sept. 13, the 256th day of 1989. There are 109 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Sept. 13, 1788, the Constitutional Convention authorized the first national election and declared New York City the temporary national capital.

On this date:

In 1759, during the final French and Indian War, the British defeated the French on the Plains of Abraham overlooking Quebec City.

In 1803, Commodore John Barry, considered by many the father of the American navy, died in Philadelphia.

In 1851, American medical pioneer Walter Reed was born in Gloucester County, Va.

In 1857, Milton S. Hershey, founder of the candy empire that bears his name, was born in Dauphin County, Pa.

In 1922, the highest temperature in the shade on the earth's surface was recorded in El Azizia, Libya, which reached 136.4 degrees fahrenheit.

In 1943, Chiang Kai-shek became president of China.

In 1948, Republican Margaret Chase Smith of Maine was elected to the Senate, becoming the first woman to serve in both houses of Congress.

In 1949, the Ladies Professional Golf Association of America was formed in New York City, with Patty Berg as its first president.

In 1971, a four-day inmates' rebellion at Attica Prison in New York ended as police stormed the facility. The siege and final assault claimed the lives of 32 prisoners and 11 prison workers.

In 1977, Leopold Stokowski, one of the best-known symphonic conductors of all time, died in Hampshire, England, at the age of 95.

In 1981, William Loeb, the conservative publisher of the Manchester Union Leader of New Hampshire, died in Burlington, Mass., at age 75.

In 1982, 50 people were killed when a Spantax Airlines DC-10 on a charter flight to New York crashed on takeoff from Malaga, Spain.

U.S.S.R. becoming ecological 'disaster'

ON THE VOLGA RIVER, U.S.S.R. — Freighters plying this river spew a rainbow of chemicals into the water. Rusting pipes on the shoreline dump raw human sewage into the roiling concoction. Legend once had it that a dip in the "Mother Volga" could add 10 years to one's life. But anyone unwise enough to make that dip today will emerge covered with oil and gasoline. And thousands of caviar-bearing sturgeon go belly-up in the Volga every year.

Jack Anderson

What happened to the river whose name means "holy"? The same thing that happened to the city water supply in Leningrad and the air in the Urals — seven decades of Communist Party rule, where industrialization was sacrosanct and the environment was expendable.

That callous disregard for Mother Nature has cost the Soviets their clean water and air, and maybe their lives. The Soviet Union has more doctors per capita than any other nation, but statistics show an alarming decrease in the general health of the people.

The average Soviet man can expect to live 60 years. That's six years less than the life expectancy of the '60s. A startling one-third of the men will get cancer, according to secret Soviet estimates.

Soviet babies are paying the highest price. Infant mortality in the Soviet Union is three times worse than in the United States. The Soviet Union is the only industrialized nation whose infant death rate is showing a steady increase.

One of the Soviet leaders raising hell behind the scenes is biologist and ecologist Alexei Yablokov. He reckons that one-fifth of the Soviet people live in ecological "disaster" zones, while another 35 to 40 percent live in ecologically "unfavorable" areas.

The horror stories are reported in the Soviet press or passed by word of mouth:

■ Children in Smolensk began losing their eyesight, and their hands shook uncontrollably before officials cracked down on a factory that was dumping mercury into the Dnieper River.

■ Ash blown from steel mills in the Urals killed birds, but no one reacted until the faces of children were burned by the fallout.

■ Shoddy construction of an earthen dam for a fertilizer plant in the Ukraine caused a break in the dam that flooded 300 miles of the Dniestr River with concentrated salts.

■ Leningrad's water is undrinkable for visitors and unhealthy for residents because nearby Lake Ladoga was polluted by dumping from a cellulose works.

■ The Aral Sea, once the world's fourth largest lake, has shrunk by two thirds in the last decade. Farmers have pulled so much irrigation water from it that by the year 2010 it will be a desert if nothing is done.

■ Lake Baikal holds an incredible 20 percent of the Earth's fresh water supply, yet for decades pulp and paper factories spewed their untreated waste into it.

The Chernobyl nuclear plant disaster may have slapped Soviets to their senses. Environmental groups are springing up. They form political committees and field candidates. Greenpeace will soon open a Moscow office. Mikhail Gorbachev has formed an "Environmental Committee" to survey the problem.

But perestroika may have come too late to save much of what the Soviets have carelessly destroyed. The Communist Party, in a relatively short span of time, created an industrialized nation with a military superpower status to stand up to any and all enemies from without. Now the country may be destroyed from within by disease because it fouled its own nest.

DENG'S NOSE OUT OF JOINT — It is apparent from intelligence assessments that Chinese leader Deng Xiao-Ping was affronted by the student uprising this summer. Respect for elders and authority is ingrained in the Chinese culture. As a matter of honor, Deng would not have let the upstart students dictate to him, even if, as a matter of politics, he agreed with their cause.

Opposition needed to put brake on president

WASHINGTON — Political oppositions are in business to oppose; the television medium feels a need to provide "balance;" commentators in print satisfy their following by the wit and acerbity of their denunciation; and plenty of people resent anything that comes from a central authority.

William Safire

Add a sprinkling of voices who take principled umbrage at a given position or undertaking and you have the Oppostablishment — the legion of superskeptics and naysayers that instantly derides whatever comes out of anybody's White House.

Let me not knock contrarianism, whose flag I so often fly. It provides a counterweight to Ceasarism and is needed in the braking of the president.

But in the reaction to George Bush's program to reduce the narcotics traffic, I detect a lockstep kneejerk — the telltale sign of the Oppostablishment on automatic pilot, mindlessly assuming that criticism is always constructive.

We see in its order of battle the root-casuists, wrapping defeatism in soft-core sophistry: nothing can be done, they insist, until society is transformed, until nobody is poor. Only then will people in the inner cities stop seeking escape through drugs. This theory overlooks the prevalence of drug abuse by the rich.

Then we have the "not enough" crowd, objecting to the mere 15 percent increase of money to be spent combating the drug traffickers next year. Sen. Joseph Biden, speaking officially for the Democrats, donned wolf's clothing to out-toughtalk the president. He used all the incendiary words of a right-wing kook — "narco-terrorist" is especially in fashion — but couldn't quite get the law 'n' order melody.

Listen to members of the more of the same brigade growl "nothing new." (Gun control is their magic bullet.) An assault on the casual user is surely a departure in the shrinking of demand, and use of the armed forces in interdiction will have its impact on supply. Civil liberty does not suffer when our armed forces are used to make certain private planes and boats enter the U.S. through monitored corridors and designated airfields and harbors.

Don't overlook the advocates of modesty in marketing. They are offended by "War On" as a combining form, preferring to rally the nation in dulcet tones. "No More Slogans" is their catchy slogan.

The more thoughtful troops of the Oppostablishment differ with the administration on spending priorities, and argue for more to be spent on addict treatment and less on interdiction or prison construction. They could be right; they could also be wrong. We elected Bush to make these decisions, and if a mid-course correction is needed, he can adjust accordingly in future years.

The paranoid paratroops of this army are the conspiracy theorists: this war on drugs is all a secret imperialist conspiracy to get us involved in a land war in South America. This year, a couple hundred Yankee advisers to help the 80,000 Colombian troops; tomorrow, the great gringo invasion. To Vietnoids, every intervention overseas (except, of course, to overthrow South Africa) is another quagmire.

Sometimes fairness asks too much. When the cause reflects public sentiment — and most of us agree that more must be done to reduce both supply of, and demand for, drugs — the loyal opposition is not obliged to knock it down, and the media has no responsibility to strain to provide balance.

In Bush's initiative, campaign strategy or (sh!) "war," the power of exhortation has a public value. The president is in the bully pulpit; because he is, the subject of drug abuse has been Topic A for two months, which is long for our national attention span; this spreading awareness and disapproval, bordering on alarm, may well have an effect deep in the popular culture.

When his warnings on public exposure of cocaine users inhibits many of their parties, that will help cut demand at no cost; as the relentless publicity in mass media about dope being for dopes gets through to the inner cities, at least some peer pressure will build in the right direction. Don't minimize the power of mobilized public opinion.

The Oppostablishment would do well to focus on where the added anti-drug money will come from. California's Pete Wilson put in an amendment that the Senate just passed: eliminate the franked junk-mailings by members of Congress and direct the saved $45 million to the drug war.

A drop in the bucket, say the not-enoughers. Rather than curse the darkness, Congress should light a candle: $45 million would rehabilitate more than a few addicts.

Politicians turning flag burning into hot issue

Congress has been hard at work trying to come up with a constitutional amendment that makes it illegal to burn the American flag. It is a hot topic for legislation because it could be the only issue in the upcoming elections. This is particularly true since there has been no movement in Congress on any other issues.

Art Buchwald

Campaign managers are now hard at work thinking of ways to make their candidate's opponents look like flag abusers. The obvious television commercial is a burning flag in the street with a voice-over saying, "Walt Wallemeer couldn't care less that someone set fire to your flag. It's no surprise since flag burning is something he has practiced since he got into politics."

Make no mistake about it. The campaign is going to get dirty and Old Glory is going to be the issue.

There is one problem with all this. There has been no reported flag-burning incident in the United States for two years.

When Jackal, who is running Cumbersome's campaign, went to the TV station to buy a piece of flag-burning film for his commercial, he was informed no new footage existed.

Rothermere, the head of the station, told him, "Nobody seems to be burning flags these days. They are shooting people, sticking them up, throwing rocks at each other, and setting fire to cars — but not to the flag. Our field producers have assured demonstrators that if they burn the flag we'll guarantee that their demonstration will get on the evening news, but we have yet to find anyone who will go to the trouble."

Jackal said, "I can't believe it. How can we pass a constitutional amendment against desecrating the flag when no one will do it?"

"You have a problem," the station manager admitted. "We have some footage of flag burning from the anti-Viet Nam War demonstrations. But the color is faded and it looks dated."

Jackal agreed. "That wouldn't work because we want to show that flag burning is a clear and present danger."

"We have shots of people into dope and arson and white-collar crime coming out of our ears. We even have groups hanging the vice president in effigy. We have pictures of street gangs shooting automatic submachine guns, but for some reason we have no flag abusers on tape. This is a real surprise because you hear nothing but speeches from politicians on flag burning."

Jackal said, "We had the same problem during the Communist witch hunts. Everyone was against Communists but we didn't have any. Do you know what we did? We invented them. We had the entire country believing there was a Communist in every garage. We can do the same with the flag burners. If there aren't any, we'll invent them."

"Does this mean you will have phony flag torchers in your commercials?"

"If that is the only way to get a constitutional amendment, then it must be done. Maybe they aren't burning the American flag today, but tomorrow they will, and then we'll have the law on the books to protect us."

"But if you burn the flag to make your commercial, won't you be desecrating it?"

"I'd only be doing it to make a patriotic point."

"Which is?"

"My country — right or wrong."

Texts skim major figures, ignore faith

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commonly used high school textbooks neglect the impact of religion on American history and give little insight into the thinking of such major figures as Abraham Lincoln, a teachers' union says today.

Three of the five textbooks analyzed "fail to provide a well-rounded evaluation of George Washington," said the American Federation of Teachers' study titled "Democracy's Half-Told Story: What American History Textbooks Should Add."

The longest sketch of Lincoln in any of the books is a six-paragraph account in "A History of the United States" by Daniel J. Boorstin and Brooks M. Kelley. Even it "does not reach to Lincoln's beliefs or depth of character," the union said.

The author of the study, Paul Gagnon, professor of history at the University of Massachusetts, argued that the books "omit or dumb-down the Old World background" of the American experience "as though it were of little importance."

"The plain fact is that American history is not intelligible, and we are not intelligible to ourselves, without a firm grasp of the life and ideas of the ancient world, of Judaism and Christianity, of Islam and Christendom in the Middle Ages," Gagnon wrote.

Because the books fail to discuss adequately the religious ideas of the Puritans, he said, "Students are left with the impression that toleration is the only 'religious' idea worth remembering.

"Modern readers, always ready to mistake their own indifference to religion for the virtue of toleration, could profit from a wider perspective," he said.

Gagnon argued that not only Washington but Adams, Jefferson, Madison, Hamilton and Franklin "all fail to earn adequate descriptions of their ideas, intellect, character or work" in the five books.

In addition to the Boorstin and Kelley book, published in 1986 by Ginn and Company, the books reviewed were:

- "History of a Free People," by Henry W. Bragdon and Samuel P. McCutchen, Macmillan, 1981.
- "The United States: A History of the Republic," by James West Davidson and Mark H. Lytle, Prentice-Hall, 1988.
- "People and Our Country," by Normak K. Risjord and Terry L. Haywoode, Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 1982.
- "Triumph of the American Nation," by Lewis Paul Todd and Merle Curti, Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, 1986.

House passes bill on flag-burning

WASHINGTON (AP) — House approval of a bill outlawing flag-burning weakens the push for a similar constitutional amendment, Democrats contend, but President Bush and others vow to fight for their politically more strident approach.

"I think there are probably enough members now that will vote against a constitutional amendment that they won't be able to get the two-thirds required by the Constitution to pass one," said Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., after Tuesday's 380-38 House vote for the statute.

Rep. Steny Hoyer, D-Md., chairman of the House Democratic Caucus, said a constitutional amendment is not necessary to many citizens and lawmakers who want to protect the flag.

"If a statute will do it, fine," he said.

However, Bush and Republican leaders on Capitol Hill contend that a law cannot overcome the Supreme Court's 5-4 ruling in June that burning the flag is a form of free speech protected by the Constitution.

Many Democrats say a constitutional amendment would tinker dangerously with the Bill of Rights.

Judiciary Committee Chairman Jack Brooks, D-Texas, predicted the new version would be approved by the court because it would outlaw the act of flag-mutilation and not the intent of the offender.

Republicans, however, say courts would quickly strike it down again.

"We believe that this bill is insufficient to provide the protections that we seek, and therefore continue to press for a constitutional amendment," said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

"This bill is flatly unconstitutional," said Rep. James Sensenbrenner, R-Wis. "So all passing this bill has done is delay a vote on a constitutional amendment to protect the flag from burning," he said, acknowledging he was disappointed that only 21 Republicans joined him in voting against it.

Rep. Chuck Douglas, R-N.H., complained that the Democratic bill was a sham. "This is the flag-burner protection act of 1989," he said.

The bill sets penalties of up to a year in jail plus a fine for anyone who knowingly mutilates, defaces, burns, or tramples upon a U.S. flag. It makes an exception for orderly disposal of worn-out flags, which is usually carried out by veterans groups by burning.

The legislation, sent to the Senate, also sets a procedure for expedited court review of its constitutionality the next time a federal flag-burning case comes along.

But the Capitol Hill showdown on the constitutional amendment probably will come before the statute, if enacted, is ever tested.

To help gain Republican votes for the statute, House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., promised supporters of the constitutional amendment the House will vote on the proposed amendment after the Senate acts in October.

Foley denied that scheduling a vote on the amendment — a vote which it appeared earlier he intended to block — was an acknowledgement that the Democratic strategy was losing.

"It might be taken exactly the opposite way," he said, as "confidence (in) a vote to reject a constitutional amendment."

Koch loses, Young wins in primary voting

Associated Press

New York Democrats chose calm, deliberate David Dinkins over brash Mayor Edward I. Koch, bringing the nation's largest city closer to electing its first black mayor.

Detroit Mayor Coleman Young, one of the first blacks to lead a major U.S. city, savored a big primary victory over a dozen challengers, and a Californian foiled Republican designs on the House seat vacated by Democratic Whip Tony Coelho.

Tuesday's primary election signaled the end of an era in New York, although Koch reminded supporters that it wasn't quite up.

"You'll have me from now to December 31st," he said in a concession speech. "I do not intend to keep my mouth shut."

Dinkins, the Manhattan borough president, will face former federal prosecutor Rudolph Giuliani in the Nov. 7 election. Giuliani powdered cosmetics heir Ronald Lauder in an unusually bitter GOP primary that saw Lauder spend an estimated $12 million on negative advertising.

Dinkins won the Democratic nomination by cornering near-unanimous support from blacks and getting greater-than-expected backing from whites.

His theme of uniting the city took on unexpected urgency in recent weeks after a white mob in Brooklyn attacked and killed a young black man. Koch angered many blacks with his response to the killing.

In a victory speech, Dinkins urged supporters not to savor Koch's loss. "We're all together now," he said. "Remember me? I'm the guy who brings people together."

With all the votes counted, Dinkins had 537,313, or 51 percent, to Koch's 445,816, or 42 percent. Two lesser-known candidates, former transit chief Richard Ravitch and city Comptroller Harrison Goldin, split the rest.

NATION IN BRIEF

Gabor's entourage getting smaller

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Zsa Zsa Gabor glided into court Tuesday wearing a leopard-patterned dress, her eighth husband at her side, for a second day of jury selection in her trial for alleging slapping a cop.

"I feel wonderful, dahlink," she told reporters covering her misdemeanor criminal trial.

Gabor

But the audience was far smaller than on opening day.

Miss Gabor, who appeared in "Moulin Rouge" and "Picture Mommy Dead," drew a crowd of only about 20 when she arrived.

She was mobbed by about 100 reporters at the courthouse Monday when jury selection began. Only six reporters were allowed inside, leaving the rest to chase interviews with fans and bystanders.

Miss Gabor's leopard-patterned dress was another Donna Karan creation, as was Monday's black outfit.

"Leopard is coming back in," she said.

She was accompanied Monday by her hairdresser, daughter and eighth husband, Prince Frederick von Anhalt, Germany's Duke of Saxony. The duke returned Tuesday, but the hairdresser did not.

Defense attorney William Graysen ended his screening of potential jurors after a day and a half, asking them if they believe older people should be treated differently than younger people when arrested and whether insubordination or profanity should be considered.

Graysen said he expected to finish his case early next week. "Oh my goodness, I can't make the Pat Sajak show now," Miss Gabor blurted.

PTL testimony continues

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A disabled coal miner's wife testified that PTL officials gave her the runaround when she tried to use her $1,000 "lifetime partnership" at a ministry resort.

"I expected this to get a vacation every year ... for the rest of our lives. That was what was sold to us," said Sarah Combs, who has 13 children and whose family lives on $400 a month.

Also Tuesday, two former advisers to Jim Bakker testified they warned the PTL founder he was risking legal troubles by taking too much money from the ministry.

High salaries taken by Bakker and his relatives threatened PTL's tax-exempt status, a former attorney and former accountant for the ministry testified in Bakker's fraud trial.

Former PTL attorney John Yorke said he sent a memo to his law firm boss, former Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox, citing concerns about 1983 wages earned by Bakker and his wife, Tammy Faye.

"Together, Jim and Tammy have a monthly income of more than $30,000," he wrote. "Jim has already received one bonus this year totaling $390,000. He could possibly earn more than $1 million this year."

Guy Forcucci, a certified public accountant who worked for PTL in the early 1980s and prepared Bakker's individual income tax returns, testified he had warned Bakker as early as 1982 about Bakker's high salary.

And Thomas Trask, treasurer of the Assemblies of God of Springfield, Mo., testified that Bakker had nearly $794,000 in the denomination's retirement account on May 6, 1987.

Bakker is accused of improperly diverting more than $3.7 million for his personal benefit from PTL, which kept its tax-exempt status as a religious organization until April 1988, almost a year after Bakker resigned as chairman.

Frank vows to cooperate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Barney Frank says he's eager to refute "inaccurate charges" about his relationship with a male prostitute and will fully cooperate with an ethics committee investigation into his conduct.

The Committee on Standards of Official Conduct — the ethics committee — voted Tuesday to begin a preliminary investigation into the Massachusetts Democrat's activities with prostitute Steve Gobie.

Frank, an acknowledged homosexual, has said he originally hired Gobie for sex and then employed him — using personal funds — as a personal aid from July 1985 through August 1987.

Frank called the ethics panel "the best possible forum" to resolve conflicting accounts he and Gobie have given on some details of their relationship.

Ruling bans county's intervention in suit

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A U.S. appellate court in New Orleans Tuesday upheld U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton's decision preventing Midland County from joining a lawsuit that challenges the method of electing state district judges.

In dismissing the case in a nine-page ruling, a three-member panel of the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals concluded that "intervention was properly denied."

The case involving 16 Texas counties is scheduled to go to trial Monday in U.S. District Court in Midland.

The lawsuit, filed in July 1988 on behalf of certain black and Mexican-Americans in Texas, alleges that the at-large method of electing state district judges dilutes minority voting strength.

As a county targeted in the suit, Midland filed a motion to intervene for itself and on behalf of its district judges in their official capacity. However, the federal court denied both intervention of right and permissive intervention.

"I'm disappointed that the citizens of the county who will be directly affected by this decision are not even allowed to have their day in court," said Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman in reaction to the ruling.

Citing that district courts are given broad discretion in granting motions to intervene, U.S. Circuit Judge Thomas Reavley wrote in the court opinion that the appellate court "cannot disturb" the federal court's denial of the motion for permissive intervention absent a showing of an abuse of discretion.

Midland County argued that it has an interest in the case because the outcome may effect other suits challenging county elections.

But the appellate judges concluded that an intervenor must demonstrate a "direct, substantial and legally protectable" interest in the property or transaction that is the subject of the litigation.

Writing on behalf of the 5th Circuit, Reavley said the threat of litigation is too tenuous to support intervention.

"We do not believe that Midland's concerns about increased costs, voter confusion, venue problems, or the possible abolition of specialty courts amount to a 'legally cognizable interest' justifying intervention," he said.

The appellate court also concluded that the federal district court "did not abuse its discretion" in finding Midland's interests adequately represented in the lawsuit.

"The district court adopted a causation test, which we find useful here," said Reavley. "Under that test, a 'real party in interest' may be ascertained by determining whether that party caused the injury and, if so, whether it has the power to comply with a remedial order of the court."

Reavley said Midland is without authority to protect its citizens in this manner.

"If the present district lines are found to violate the Voter Rights Act and/or the United States Constitution, Texas' constitution and statutory provisions protecting district lines will be nullified under the Supremacy Clause.

"Moreover, there is no violation found, the provisions will stand regardless of the representation Midland offers. A 'legally cognizable interest' cannot be crafted out of Midland's purported interest in representing its county citizens," he said.

MISD has record enrollment; District expects more students

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

With two weeks to go before an expected peak enrollment, Midland Independent School District on Tuesday saw the most students in its history.

The 20,186 enrollment record edged the previous record, set Sept. 30, 1988, by 20 students.

"We expect that to increase through the middle of October," said Larry Lusby, director of MISD computer services. "We're well below what our estimated peak would be, but we're still enrolling students."

However, Lusby said the district overestimated this year's student numbers when calculating state funding into the 1989-90 school year budget. That means MISD must have outstanding student attendance in October.

The state uses October average daily attendance figures to determine the next year's funding.

Lusby said the district could fall between 200 and 300 students short of the projections. MISD had attained 97 percent of projections by Tuesday, when 66 students enrolled, Lusby said.

MISD spokesman Ted Miller said careful planning last year prevented overcrowding at the elementary level, where a bulk of the enrollment increases has occurred.

"This year's record attendance is evidence of the need for the bond election that was passed last year and the facilities that we built," Miller said.

MISD built Bush Elementary School and 11 elementary campus additions to insure a 22-to-1 pupil-teacher ratio in grades one through four. The ratio is a state mandate.

Bush on Tuesday had an enrollment of 290. Lee High School had 1,857 students, while Midland High School had 1,586.

Projected enrollments for LHS and MHS were 1,853 and 1,558, respectively.

Dettman: Policy of arresting trespassers may be changed

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A Midland police policy of jailing students who gather after dark near a string of damage-scarred businesses on Midkiff Road may be relaxed, according to County Attorney Mark Dettman.

At least 15 high school students have been arrested and charged with criminal trespass since August 1, according to police records. All of the arrests have occurred near the 7-Eleven, Whataburger, Kittiwake Furniture, and the Taco Villa in the 3200 block of North Midkiff Road, near the intersection of Midkiff Road and Wadley Avenue, police records show.

Since August 1, police have been called at least 30 times to clear the parking lots at the businesses, most frequently the Whataburger and 7-Eleven, Cpl. Jim White said. Police also have answered nine additional trespassing calls, and four disturbance calls in the area, including at least two reported fights.

"Right now we have a two-step policy," Dettman said, noting that police warn persons to leave the lots, record their names and report them to police dispatchers. If police find students loitering near the businesses who have been warned, they are jailed, Dettman said.

"Merchants put the no trespassing signs up, and the police used to arrest them right off the bat," Dettman said. "Then we came up with the warning. I can't say it (policy) is a bit much since they have been warned. But we might try a three-step process."

Under a different system, police would issue a warning to first-time suspected trespassers. At the time of the second offense, police would issue a citation, like a traffic ticket, charging a student with attempted criminal trespass. On the third offense, criminal trespass charges would be filed and the student jailed.

Teachers' group to appeal career ladder decision to Supreme Court

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

The Association of Texas Professional Educators will appeal their case to the Texas Supreme Court in an effort to have a career ladder law declared unconstitutional, an ATPE spokesman said today.

Judge Scott McCown of the 345th District Court of Travis County would not grant a temporary injunction Friday to prevent implementation of House Bill 2566.

The bill set up stricter level three appraisal criteria, stipends for current-year evaluations and increased local career ladder spending, among other changes.

Doug Rogers, executive ATPE director, said he was not disappointed by McCown's decision.

"We anticipated it," Rogers said. "This is a constitutional question. We anticipated that a lower court would not overturn it."

Rogers said ATPE will appeal the case on the grounds that the version signed by Gov. Bill Clements is not the one passed by the 71st Texas Legislature.

However, Kay Walling, Texas State Teachers Association Region 18 representative, said the bill helps teachers, with the exception of stricter level three requirements.

"Those are great things for teachers," Ms. Walling said. "It's ridiculous to ask that those things be declared unconstitutional."

Ms. Walling on Monday praised the State Board of Education's ruling that level three teachers will not have to face the stricter current-year evaluations in 1989-90.

The board on first reading Saturday approved not making the instructors requalify for this year's career ladder payments. Their placement still will be based on 1988-89 appraisal scores.

Ms. Walling called the ruling a victory for teachers statewide. Midland Independent School District has 131 level three teachers.

Starting in the 1990-91 school year, career ladder placement will be based on current-year evaluations. Appraisal scores are based on teacher experience and classroom expertise, with level three being the highest attainable rung.

HB 2566 also forced school districts to raise their career ladder expenditures from $70 per average daily attendance to $90. The requirement will cost MISD an extra $449,000 this year.

Conference set in conjunction with Hispanic Heritage Month

In conjunction with National Hispanic Heritage Month, Mayor Carroll Thomas has declared this week Hispanic Week in Midland.

As part of the month's activities, the Women's Department of the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce has scheduled its second annual Women's Conference for Friday and Saturday.

The conference begins with a reception Friday evening at the Holiday Inn Country Villa.

Saturday, the conference will feature a series of seminars ranging from balancing career and family to an update on women's rights. Seminar presenters include Sara Selber of Selko & Associates, El Paso attorney Yvonne Guaderanma, Albuquerque psychologist Dr. Lucia Hall, and Lydia Evaro-Torres of Odessa College.

Keynote speaker at the conference luncheon will be Lena Guerrero, state representative from Austin.

The conference concludes with a dance celebrating "16 de Septiembre."

In other events at Tuesday's monthly meeting of the chamber, Charlene Romero Wurtz was re-elected president during yearly elections. She became president in May after John Castro was elected to the City Council.

Other officers include Joe Sena, first vice president; Lydia Evarro-Torres, second vice president; Linda Diaz, secretary; Ray Chapa, treasurer; and Peggy Calderon, parliamentarian.

New board members elected Tuesday are Al Villanueva, Doiminick Sylvester, Jesse Silva, Nancy Vickrey and Karl Reagan.

The new leaders will be installed October 13 at the chamber's installation banquet and fifth anniversary celebration to be held at the Holiday Inn Country Villa.

Zionist addresses new Hadassah chapter

By ANNTOINETTE MOORE

ODESSA — "Away with the propaganda of the word, I prefer the practicality of the deed."

Tirschwell

This was the motto of Henrietta Szold, a rabbi's daughter who in 1912 founded Hadassah, currently the largest Jewish women's group in the world, according to one of these women, Barbara Tirschwell of New City, N.Y. She spoke to the area's new Hadassah chapter at Temple Beth-El, 1501 N. Grandview on Tuesday.

A member of the national board of Hadassah, The Women's Zionist Organization of America Inc., Ms. Tirschwell also co-chaired its 75th national convention held in Atlanta last July.

She told the 10 women and one man present about Ms. Szold's original dream: to bring decent health care to what was then Palestine, ruled by Turkey, and what is now the state of Israel.

Ms. Szold was a Zionist — she believed that Jews needed a homeland of their own in Palestine. On a trip there she was appalled by the lack of public health care and the large numbers of blind children and adults.

So she acted. She came back to the United States and founded Hadassah, beginning with a small women's study group. Their first meeting was on the Jewish holiday of Purim in 1912, so they named themselves after the heroine of that holiday, Queen Ester — "Hadassah" in Hebrew — who saved her people when they were in exile in Persia.

"It wasn't enough to say 'next year in Jerusalem' as we do in many of our prayers," said Ms. Tirschwell, "but rather there was practical work to be done among the Jewish population" that had always been living in Israel.

Husband, wife charged with bank fraud

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A Lubbock couple, accused of engineering a "check-kite" scheme by using worthless checks at Odessa and Lubbock savings associations where they worked before their marriage, have been charged by federal complaint with bank fraud and aiding bank fraud.

The couple, David Hester Barksdale Jr. and Joyce Lynn Gilmore Barksdale, both 37, have waived indictment and are to plead guilty to the charges under plea-bargain agreements.

The cases were investigated by the FBI.

Barksdale, former vice president and comptroller of Vista Savings Association, now Bluebonnet Savings Bank, in Odessa, was charged with "acting in concert" with Ms. Barksdale in carrying out a "check-kite" scheme in 1985 and 1986 to defraud Vista and Stockton Savings Association in Lubbock.

HADASSAH

Ms. Szold "believed that she was giving practical expression to Jews' eternal love and belief in a Jewish homeland and the unity of Jewish people, wherever they may be," Ms. Tirschwell continued.

Hadassah's first emphasis was health services. It began by sending two public health nurses to Palestine. Next, it established a series of well-baby clinics — many of which grew into the country's first hospitals.

Hadassah promoted relatively simple procedures — such as the pasteurization of milk — which affected infant mortality. According to Ms. Tirschwell, in 1929 there were 149 deaths per 1,000 live births; by 1947 this had been reduced to just 24 per 1,000 births.

"We have easily saved, just by that one measure, easily over 200,000 lives," she claimed. And combined with other health measures, one life has been saved for each one of Hadassah's current 385,000 members.

"You know the saying in Jewish law, that 'to save one life it is as though one has saved the whole universe,'" she said.

"The saving of a life through health — or the saving of a mind through education — or the saving of a spirit through education and youth work — this is central to our being as an organization."

Hadassah's mission fits in well with the tenor of the times, Ms. Tirschwell continued.

"President Bush in his acceptance speech, when he talked about the thousand points of light, cited Hadassah as one the laudable examples of volunteerism on the American scene.

"I feel strongly that we are coming out of the period of the 'me generation' and that the volunteer spirit is re-emerging in the United States. Increasing numbers of young women in Hadassah are finding an outlet for their need to share themselves with those less fortunate and to be enriched and experience personal growth."

Only 6 percent of every dollar raised goes to administrative costs because of dedicated Hadassah women, said the professional volunteer.

"There is no other organization that is able to operate with such an unbelievably low overhead."

One "Christian Zionist" who attended the meeting, Midlander Judy Stone, enthusiastically backed Hadassah's mission.

Ms. Stone and her husband, Jack, major local organizers of "A Night to Honor Israel" in 1987 and 1988, have visited Israel three times since 1980. Half of the free-will offering from these events was donated to Hadassah Hospital.

"I do it — support Israel — on the basis of my faith in God," said Mrs. Stone, a brand-new Hadassah member. "I believe, based on biblical grounds, that Israel is important, the Jewish people are important.

"Christians owe a great debt to Israel, because all of our prophets came from there, our Scripture came from there. And our Messiah."

"We have very definite Jewish roots and we're involved in helping Christians understand their Jewish roots," she continued.

Of course, most of the area Hadassah members are Jewish. The organization began in January of this year and is still attracting new members, said President Lynn Fishman.

"There were several women who discussed the need for a Zionist voice in the Permian Basin. There is a strong feeling for Israel."

Hadassah provides a "small group in a large community with a commonality and a common focus," she continued.

"We want to support Israel through Hadassah Hospital and to educate our members and members of the community about Israel and what Hadassah does."

During the depths of the Holocaust, when Hitler was slaughtering Jews by the millions in Europe, Hadassah also helped found the first medical school in what was to become Israel, Ms. Tirshwell said. Because many Jewish medical students were fleeing Europe, the school began by offering the third and fourth years of school, so that these students could finish their education.

Hadassah Hospital, in Jerusalem, is one of the group's better known projects. It provides a high level of health care to residents of the entire Middle East, including Arabs from nations which are technically still at war with the state of Israel.

Then there is the two-track school of public health, with one set of courses taught in Hebrew for the local population and the second taught in English for students from other — primarily Third World — nations. Pupils come from Arab nations, South America and the Far East.

Since all students learn enough Hebrew to do their practical training, "you may go into Swaziland and find a doctor, a sanitation worker and a nurse who speak to one another in Hebrew, because they'd like to keep up their language skills," Ms. Tirschwell said.

"It makes what we think is a tremendous contribution, because Israel started out as a Third World nation and had the skills to bring itself up by the bootstraps and so has the technical know-how to speak to other Third World nations."

But health was just the first of Hadassah's five major emphases. The others are:

- Youth Aliyah, which began as a movement to rescue Jewish children from Nazi-controlled Europe and still provides a refuge for children who come from nations where Jews are threatened;
- Young Judaeans, a Zionist youth group in the United States that gives young Jews an opportunity to visit Israel;
- Jewish National Fund, which reclaims and beautifies land in Israel by planting trees; and
- Hadassah Israel Educational Services, which includes the first community college in Israel, established to train Arabs as well as Jews in para-professional skills such as printing, dental technology, medical technology, medical photography, video technology and computer technology.

Youth Aliyah and the Jewish National Fund are separate organizations from Hadassah, Ms. Tirsch stressed, although Hadassah is the single largest contributor to both of these groups.

From the beginning, Hadassah's services have been available to all those in need, not just Jews.

"We wouldn't open our doors to everyone who comes if we didn't feel that there is a humanitarian ethic that supersedes cultural differences and that can ultimately help to bring about peace," she said.

For example, Hadassah sponsors a call-in radio health program in Arabic. Recently, Arab doctors from the Occupied Territories have been coming to Hadassah Hospital to retrain and update their skills.

"You know, when you're sick, do you care who's treating you if they can make you well?" she asked.

"There are things that are not publicized but there are very positive programs that exist" in Israel between Arabs and Jews, Ms. Tirshwell claimed.

The banquet will be held in conjuction with the quarterly meeting of the Texas Association of Mexican-American Chambers of Commerce, being hosted by the Midland Chamber on October 14.

The meeting will bring not only officers of the association's 23 member chambers, but chamber members interested in participating in a leadership training session held at the same time.

Roger Robles, chairman of the Eastside Economic Development Task Force, reported that the group has asked the City Council to approve hiring Selko & Associates, a consulting firm, to study the feasability of raising funds for a shopping center at the corner of Lamesa Road and Highway 80.

MHCC Executive Director Elvia Hernandez reported that the chamber was unsuccessful in its bid to become a Department of Defense procurement center, but would try again.

She also reported that she and Mrs. Wurtz attended the U.S. Hispanic Chamber of Commerce convention in New Orleans with hopes of bringing a regional USHCC meeting to Midland in the near future. She said the decision on where regional meetings will be held is due in November.

School district to appeal end to drug tests

WINNIE (AP) — The East Chambers Consolidated Independent School District is appealing a federal judge's ruling calling for an end to mandatory drug tests for students in extracurricular activities.

Members of the East Chambers school board unanimously voted Monday to appeal U.S. District Judge Hugh Gibson's decision that the district's mandatory drug testing plan is unconstitutional. The district is appealing its case to the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals.

Board member David Murrell said Tuesday that the plan, which requires mandatory testing of all students who want to participate in extracurricular activities, is voluntary because nobody forces the students to participate in the activities.

"It's a free choice," Murrell said. "If you don't want to be drug tested, you don't have to participate.

"I don't see how a judge can rule that a public institution cannot voluntarily test students. The government has drug testing in the voluntary armed services and in the civil service," Murrell said. "It's just part of the system. How is that any different from schools?"

TRESPASS

According to law, criminal trespass is a class A misdemeanor committed when a person steps on private property without permission. In addition, the violator must know entry is forbidden or fail to leave when ordered to do so.

Dettman defended the get-tough policy, and said it began following Valentine's Day, 1982, in a fast food restaurant parking lot on Midkiff Road.

"Some kids were hanging around there, and got into a taunting match, and we ended up with one dead and one severely cut up," Dettman said. "That kind've precipitated the whole thing. By and large they are not causing any damage, and all kids have to have a place to meet, but it is private property."

One student who was arrested recently criticized the policy.

The honors student at Lee High, whose parents asked he not be identified, said he was not trespassing when he was arrested near the 7-Eleven.

"It used to be Taco Villa," he said of the gathering area near 7-Eleven and Whataburger. "It is a place where everybody goes to see other people. Then when we couldn't go to the Taco Villa anymore, we went to the parking lot. We just want a place where we can go and see people, and talk. Every place we go we get run off.

"If people are bringing beer, you can bust them. But I wasn't doing that."

The student was startled when he was handcuffed and taken to jail.

"I felt like a criminal, but I didn't consider what I did criminal trespass," he said. "I had to go to a cell. I passed by one cell and it was full. I was kind've hoping the next one would be empty, and it was."

White said business owners have complained about damage in the area, which has included trashed lots and broken windows.

"What we would like to have is the business, yes," said Chuck Tarter, manager of the Taco Villa. "But we aren't here for them to destroy property, bust windows out and rip the commodes off the wall. We have nothing against the kids if they want to come over here and behave themselves."

The student said he understood the business owner's complaints.

"I can understand that," the student said. "I would probably feel the same way if I was a businessman. But we give them a lot of business. If they are going to keep this up, they are not going to have any business."

The student's mother said the family has hired an attorney and will fight the charge.

"This young man has a criminal record now," she said. "I don't know what Midland wants their young people to do. They claim to care about their young people. They need to be informed, and they need to have a place to go.

"This has been very distressing. This could ruin his senior year."

But Dettman said the cases are not being vigorously prosecuted.

"Quite a few of them we haven't filed or we have referred them back and filed a lesser offense," he said. "We're not trying to treat them as hardened criminals."

But police spokesman White said officers have to respond to the wishes of business owners. The most recent damage came at Mid-Tex Carpets, the site of the old Gibson's Department store. After police were called to clear the lot of students, a beer bottle was thrown through a plate glass window, which was repaired at a cost of $400, White said.

"I am very sure that if you have 50 kids on a parking lot, 45 of them are just socializing and not bothering anything," he said. "But the other five are not."

BANK

Ms. Barksdale, then known as Joyce Lynn Gilmore, was new-accounts representative for Stockton Savings Association in Lubbock.

The scheme was executed by "the writing of multiple checks" in amounts of approximately $1,000 "against each account and the depositing of those checks into the opposite account while insufficient funds for payment were on deposit in either account," according to an account of the scheme recounted by Assistant U.S. Attorney Jim Blankinship of Austin.

"It was part of the scheme to take advantage of the time that elapsed between the deposit of checks into the account at one bank and their collection from the other institutions," Blankinship's account said.

Further, the scheme was "to cause Vista and Stockton to provide interest-free loans" of approximately $11,000 to Barksdale through "the kiting of worthless checks" between Vista and Stockton, according to the account, which Barksdale verified as factual.

Barksdale is charged with three counts of fraud, which include setting up the check-kite scheme and making false entries in reports. Each count carries a maximum five-year sentence and a maximum of $250,000 in fines.

Barksdale, whose duties included the making of investments for Vista, was charged with operating a "hedging" plan with $20,000 in Government National Mortgage Association (GNMA) securities.

"Vista was to hold the GNMAs until they appreciated in price at which time they were to be sold for a gain," Blankinship's account said.

But Barksdale launched a "hedging experiment," which involved the purchase of futures, options and forwards to "neutralize fluctuations in the value of the GNMAs," the account added.

As a result, Vista suffered "substantial losses," according to the account, which is in court records.

Further, Barksdale was accused of hiding the "true amount" of the hedging losses. In doing so, he understated Vista's losses as $1.6 million on July 31, 1986, and almost $1.8 million on Aug. 29, 1986, records state.

Ms. Barksdale is charged with participating in the bank-fraud scheme. Aiding in the scheme carries a maximum prison sentence of five year and up to $250,000 in fines.

The Barksdale cases are to be transferred to Lubbock from Midland for the couple's convenience.

Long-haired boys' father files discrimination suit

HOUSTON (AP) — The father of two longhaired boys alleges in a lawsuit that his sons are being discriminated by a school district because of its hair-length requirements for male students.

The suit filed Tuesday by Dub Wilkinson seeks an injunction to block the Spring Branch Independent School District and top district officials from enforcing the rule and award unspecified damages to Wilkinson for frivolous prosecution against him.

Wilkinson's sons, Brian 17, and Travis, 15, have been barred from school since November 1988 for refusing to cut their hair, which falls below their shoulders. School rules allow no hair past shoulder-length.

Their father was fined $25 under a state law which requires school attendance and a hearing to challenge that fine was set for Tuesday before Harris County Criminal Court Judge J.R. Musslewhite. The hearing, however, was delayed for two weeks in light of the new suit.

"It's my understanding that the law and these kinds of claims were addressed in the early and mid-1970s and that the policies were upheld by the appeals courts and the claims challenging them were rejected," said Jeff Davis, an attorney for the school district.

"I feel all citizen rights are important and that I in some way can make my contribution to see that all people are protected by the Constitution," said Wilkinson, who also claims his sons' civil rights have been violated.

School officials have said in the past it was important for students to learn to live by standards, and the local school board recently voted to uphold the hair rule.

"I refuse to be a blunt instrument for the schools to use to beat my sons over the head, so they use the state prosecuting system to be the blunt instrument because we will not comply with their wishes," Wilkinson said. "Once this is resolved, the books will be there, the teachers will be there, everything will be in place. If they want to avail themselves to the system, it will be there.

The Wilkinsons' attorney, Darrell K. McAlexander, said both sides were studying the case to determine the best way to resolve the matter.

"This is a sexually discriminatory policy in violation of the Texas Constitution and U.S. Constitution," he said. "The problem with the policy is they are making a policy that is gender exclusive — they're making it against little boys but not against little girls.

"There is no way that can be maintained other than as a cultural bias, a sexual bias. They are denying these young men an education unless they comply with a gender exclusive rule."

"It's just our right to have hair that long," Travis Wilkinson, who would be in the 10th grade, said Tuesday.

He and his brother have been studying at home, reading books and taking practice quizzes.

"We're getting a good education," Brian Wilkinson, an 11th-grader, said. "This is real-life stuff here. This is something you can't get sitting in a class at school."

McAlexander said besides the $25 fine, Wilkinson could face up to a $100-per-day fine for each day his younger child remains home.

McAlexander, who also works as a musician and has hair that falls well below his shoulders, said he has experienced little discrimination because of his long locks.

"The most I've seen is a raised eyebrow," he said. "I stand out like a sore thumb, no question about that.

"Hair has nothing to do with anything. When you come down to the choice that I think you have a right to make in this country, it is amazing how we try to break the back of that free exercise of choice," the attorney said.

VFW ceremony will recognize POWs, MIAs

From Staff Reports

The Veterans of Foreign Wars, Tall City Post No. 7208 and its ladies' auxiliary will sponsor a ceremony Friday recognizing the nation's Vietnam-era prisoners of war and those listed as missing in action (POW/MIAs).

The flag-raising ceremony at 6 p.m. marks national POW/MIA Recognition Day, an annual Sept. 15 observance. It will be followed by the launching of red, white and blue balloons, a barbecue and covered dish dinner.

The ceremony at 1306 E. Taylor St. is open to the public.

Conch shells line shores of Haiti

Sailors on the Caribbean say the beautiful island of Haiti is now much easier to spot from the water than it was in days of old, because Haiti's shoreline is ringed with millions of empty white conch shells.

The conch, or lambi shellfish, that usually inhabit those shells are dying.

Scientists say native Haitians now catch and consume conch faster than the species can multiply. But it doesn't take an expert to know that — the entire top layer of conch shells surrounding Haiti is made up of infant-size shells.

Salvadoran rebels continue harassment of government troops

By PHIL BRONSTEIN
Hearst News Service

NORTHERN CHALATENANGO PROVINCE, El Salvador — Illuminated by the fires they have set to deprive their enemies of brush cover, the elite battalion soldiers — 400 of them in war paint and full battle gear — camp uneasily for the night in the basin of the long valley.

All around the soldiers, the guerrillas watch, make notes and move around.

After midnight, small units of rebels launch assaults they call hostigamientos — harassments — with homemade weapons and sophisticated grenade launchers.

In response, night-flying government planes parachute brilliant and eerily captivating Bengal lights on the hills that slowly illuminate the terrain. The valley is filled for hours with deafening echoes of artillery fire, the original blast repeating its sound in a broad circle.

The guerrillas retreat after each attack, and the soldiers participating in one of the largest government operations in a year do not venture beyond their camps as they shoot out into the blackness.

The next morning, the helicopter gunships, rocket planes and bombers come to retrieve the wounded and wreak their revenge. The guerrillas are hiding in the trees. Occasionally they fire with their recently acquired AK-47 automatic weapons and Russian-made Dragonov anti-aircraft rifles.

After a week, when the main government operation is over, there are the usual conflicting casualty reports and claims of success from each side.

"If they sneeze, we know it," says Douglas Santa Maria, a high-level commander of the FPL, the second-largest of five guerrilla groups that make up the umbrella rebel Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front (FMLN).

"We shadow them, follow them, hit them. This is how we maintain control."

However, Col. Julio Grijalva, head of the government Atlacatl Battalion, insists, "We cleaned the area and disrupted the terrorists' (FMLN) activities."

But on a recent visit to Northern Chalatenango province during the assault, neither the rebels nor the military appear to have fundamentally altered the battlefield stalemate that has existed between the two forces for several years.

Afterward, the guerrillas resume their normal movements and flow back into nearby towns to buy supplies and mingle with civilian residents while maintaining their mobile camps. The soldiers returned to their barracks or to other parts of the country.

Despite some $3.5 billion in largely war-related U.S. aid, the military has shown little ability to break the rebel hold, both on the population and the territory itself.

And the FMLN, after 10 years of civil war, still does not have the capacity for full frontal or sustained assaults and can only hope to hurry the soldiers through their mission with their attacks, keeping close watch, and ducking aerial bombardment.

Even as the government and the FMLN make final arrangements for their first peace talks since the rightist ARENA party won the presidency last March, the dynamic of the military side of the war in the countryside goes on unaltered, except for the mounting list of casualties on both sides.

It is precisely this inability of one force to inflict mortal damage on the other that has helped push ARENA and the FMLN to the bargaining table.

"They realize by now that there just can't be a military victory," says one veteran Western diplomat. "And, even as they each admit the war has become primarily political in nature, both sides have their political problems as well."

While still strong among its rural bases, the FMLN has suffered some setbacks in the city, where its main political push has centered. These setbacks have resulted from internal disputes, some unpopular assassinations and a measured dose of strategic captures by the government of key leaders of leftist popular organizations.

A few months ago, the rebels spoke of an insurrection as imminent. Now, "with the economy getting worse and a repressive ARENA government, the factors for an insurrection are there but there is still not enough general discontent," says one FMLN source in San Salvador.

"The people have accustomed themselves to these hardships and have not responded to our actions. We haven't sufficiently awakened them yet."

ARENA, meanwhile, has been avoiding the massive crackdowns and bloodshed that its opponents had been predicting and that its dark history in the early 1980s seemed to portend.

But its free-market economic policies have meant significant price increases in basic food and other necessities, further antagonizing the estimated 70 percent of the population below the poverty line.

Hunt continues for cause of infection

Judge may order Harris inmates released

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge may decide today whether he will order Harris County Jail officials to release up to 500 misdemeanor offenders from the overcrowded facility as medical personnel continue to investigate a bacterial infection outbreak that has killed two inmates.

Attorney James Oitzinger, who represents inmates in an ongoing lawsuit, filed a motion Monday with U.S. District Judge James DeAnda seeking emergency relief from overcrowded conditions that may contribute to the illness, nicknamed the "jail disease."

DeAnda, citing the seriousness of the situation, said he planned to issue a decision quickly on the request — maybe as early as this afternoon. The hearing is scheduled to resume this morning.

Oitzinger's motion also seeks to isolate those at risk of contracting the bacterial infection.

Mark Canfield, chief of epidemiology with the Harris County Health Department, said during a Tuesday news conference that medical personnel are still trying to identify the source of the outbreak.

"We can expect to be working on it throughout the week. We have a lot of variables involved," he said.

Late last week, the bacterial infection killed inmates Ricky LaBreck, 30, and Rene Antonio Fuentes, 21. Both had had their spleens removed leaving them more susceptible to the infection, doctors said.

Eighteen inmates, including the two who died, have been treated at Ben Taub Hospital, and cultures have indicated the presence of the pneumococcus bacteria in five of them, Canfield said. One hospitalized inmate also is without a spleen, he said.

The others have various flu-like symptoms that may be possible early signs of the infection, said Nora Shire, spokeswoman for Ben Taub. They also may be sick with the flu or some other type of mild infection.

Between 20 and 30 prisoners were being evaluated at the jail infirmary with similar flu-like symptoms, Canfield said.

"We're taking blood to test for various types of viruses for weakening the immune symptoms," he said. Canfield said there is little data on a vaccine for pneumococcal disease, but officials are looking into the availability and use of the vaccine.

Harris County Sheriff Johnny Klevenhagen testified during Tuesday's hearing that medical experts from the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta and those from the county, city and jail do not blame crowded conditions at the jail for the deaths of LaBreck and Fuentes.

Testimony centered on the medical care given to five jail inmates who died earlier this year. Their cases were unrelated to the current illnesses, but were discussed as part of the ongoing lawsuit filed by the inmates.

Klevenhagen opposes the early releases of the misdemeanor offenders, insisting the recent illnesses have "not been caused by overcrowding in the jail." The jail, designed to house 4,200 inmates, now has about 8,300 inmates.

Klevenhagen said medical staff members at the jail are continuing to screen about 3,200 inmates who have indicated they may be at risk of contracting the infection.

Inmates at greater risk include those with no spleens, those suffering from sickle cell, cancer, chronic kidney failure, HIV infection, cirrhosis and those who have undergone an organ transplant, Canfield said.

Two doctors from the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta toured the jail Monday with other health officials, but they have not commented on their findings.

Although no specific measures were ordered by health authorities, jail officials voluntarily canceled religious services, recreational activities and classes Monday.

Canfield said many healthy people carry the bacteria without ill effects.

STATE IN BRIEF

Rice professor named Professor of the Year

HOUSTON (AP) — A Rice University English professor has been named 1989 Professor of the Year by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education.

J. Dennis Huston, 49, was selected from more than 500 nominees in the United States and Canada, university officials said Tuesday. He will be awarded a $5,000 cash prize sponsored by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching at an Oct. 10 ceremony at Rice.

Huston, who has taught at Rice since 1969, conducts courses in Shakespeare, detective fiction, major British writers, public speaking and introduction to humanities. He has won every teaching honor at Rice.

"Dennis never lectures," said Rice University President George Rupp. "He uses his magnetic personality to provoke discussion, posing the challenging questions and listening with critical sympathy to the answers. In his hands, literacy texts offer not only aesthetic satisfaction but a way to probe the complexity of character and explore the human condition."

Huston earned his bachelor's degree from Wesleyan University and his master's and doctoral degrees from Yale University. He taught English for several years at Yale before becoming an associate professor and eventually a full professor at Rice.

"Dennis Huston is the kind of teacher we all hoped we could be," said Albert Van Helden, chairman of Rice's history department. "He is utterly devoted to the students and to his craft, he works extremely hard, and he has a classroom presence that is unequalled at Rice."

CASE has conducted the competition since 1981 to recognize undergraduate faculty members for their contributions to the lives and careers of students. There have been eight other national Professors of the Year and 160 finalists honored.

Bomb threat found on jet

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Passengers aboard an American Airlines jet evacuated via emergency chutes Tuesday after flight attendants found a note of a bomb threat in a restroom, an airlines spokesman said.

The Boeing 727 jet carrying 96 passengers and seven crew members was en route from the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport to Greensboro when the note was found about 100 miles outside of Greensboro, airlines spokesman Don Bedwell said.

Bedwell said flight attendants found a note that said there could be an explosion aboard the jet, but Flight 652 made its scheduled landing about 4:30 p.m. EDT.

"The decision was made to taxi the plane to a remote part of the airport and deploy the slides," Bedwell said.

He could not confirm reports of anyone injured on the emergency chutes, but said he would not be surprised if there were some scrapes and bruises.

"Nothing has been found that would suggest the need for such a thing — it was just a precautionary measure," he said.

Bedwell said local police were searching the plane Tuesday evening.

Tourism inquiries up

AUSTIN (AP) — The state filled 880,634 requests for travel information in the fiscal year that ended Aug. 31, a 112 percent increase over the previous year, the Texas Department of Commerce reported Tuesday.

The increase was fueled by a national multi-media marketing campaign, the department said. The inquiries were received by the tourism division of the Commerce Department and by the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

The Texas visitor industry generated $17.6 billion in travel expenditures in 1987, the department said.

In fiscal year 1989, the tourism division had a budget of $13.3 million, and nearly $7 million was devoted to advertising.

In this fiscal year, which began Sept. 1, the tourism division will spend an estimated $8.26 million marketing Texas as a travel destination, the department said.

The tourism division's budget is funded with the state tax paid by occupants of hotel and motel rooms. Of the 6 percent tax collected, one-half of 1 percent is dedicated to tourism marketing.

Abilene lawyer keeps post

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements' office has announced the reappointment of John McKissack of Forney, Sam Chase of Abilene and Robert Aguirre of San Antonio to the Crime Stoppers Advisory Council for two-year terms.

McKissack, 58, is retired as executive vice president of Coca Cola Bottling Co. of North Texas. Chase, 42, is a lawyer, and Aguirre, 39, is a special projects manager and consultant.

Other appointments announced Tuesday included:

Celia Salomons of San Antonio to the Council on Child Abuse and Neglect Prevention, replacing Martha Ortega of El Paso, whose term expired.

'Ike' statue planned for Red Square

DENISON (AP) — A statue of Dwight David Eisenhower and his father has been commissioned and will be erected in Red Square in Moscow next summer, his wartime personal secretary told a Texas newspaper.

John Reagan "Tex" McCrary told the Denison Herald that the statue of the former American president will be unveiled in the Soviet capital on June 6, 1990. It will be one of many events held worldwide to make the 100th anniversary of the World War II general's birth in Denison.

"The present plan is to unveil the statue in Moscow on June 6, 1990, rather than on Ike's 100th birthday of Oct. 14, 1990," McCrary told the Herald. "That was D-Day (in 1944), and I feel that more people will recall Eisenhower on the more important date than on his birthday."

McCrary, chairman of the board of Texcomm, said he cannot explain yet why Eisenhower's father is to be included in the statue and he is not able to release any other details.

McCrary said he already has met with officials from the United States and the Soviet Union to arrange placing the statue in Red Square.

"I feel strongly that this gesture can be a major step in softening the U.S.-Russian relationships," McCrary said. "When the Russian people see a statue of an American general and his father in Red Square in Moscow, it should go a long way to open new doors between the two countries."

If contributions can be found, plans call for three copies of the Soviet original to be made. One will be placed in Denison.

McCrary told the Texas newspaper about the plans for the statue during a reunion of World War II correspondents last week in New York.

Eisenhower, who died in 1961, became president eight years after he led combined European forces to victory in World War II. In 1955, he proposed that the United States and Russia allow air inspection of each other's bases, but the proposal was rejected.

Secretary's body exhumed after 5 years to determine how she died

GRAND PRAIRIE (AP) — Five years after her sudden death, the body of a wax museum owner's secretary was exhumed by authorities in an attempt to determine whether she was poisoned.

The body of Lori Ann Williams will be reburied today. She had been a secretary to Patricia "Patsy" Wright, co-owner of the Wax Museum of the Southwest, who died from strychnine poisoning in her Arlington home in October 1987.

A year later, the museum near Interstate 30 between Dallas and Fort Worth was destroyed in a blaze that was ruled accidental. Police have not determined whether Ms. Wright was murdered or committed suicide. Ms. Williams' family began to suspect the 23-year-old woman's death, following an appendectomy, might have resulted from foul play.

William Dear, a DeSoto private investigator, organized the exhumation.

"Lori Williams died under very strange circumstances," Dear said Tuesday shortly before the exhumation Tuesday at Southland Memorial Park in Grand Prairie.

"If, in fact, Lori Williams was poisoned ... then we'll be able to put something together."

Toxicology tests were scheduled on about a dozen tissue samples taken from the body in an autopsy performed Tuesday afternoon by Dr. Jeffrey Barnard of the Dallas County medical examiner's office, said Dear.

Ms. Williams' brother, Billy Phillips, 37, of Fort Worth, said years of doubt and uncertainty about her death soon may be laid to rest. Phillips attended the exhumation with his brother, Crockett Phillips, 33, of Grand Prairie.

"Lori died, and if you can't tell me why she died, then who's hiding something?" said Billy Phillips. "She didn't drink, she didn't smoke, she didn't do drugs and, come to think of it, I'd never known Lori to be sick a day in her life.

" 'Knowing' is the key word. Just tell the family something — that's all we want."

But Crockett Phillips said he doesn't believe his sister was murdered.

If Ms. Williams was murdered, "then it will certainly tie some things together. But if the toxicology tests don't turn up anything, then obviously we won't have a case," Grand Prairie homicide detective Harroll Rhoads said.

"I'm still in the wait-and-see mode," said Arlington police Sgt. Gus Gustafson, who led the investigation into Ms. Wright's death. He and several other Arlington officers were at the grave site Tuesday.

"We hope it will answer all the questions that have been asked," said Gustafson. "If they find something, it will mean sitting down and starting at square one with" the Grand Prairie detectives.

Neither Dear nor police detectives would name suspects or say how the two deaths might be connected.

Dr. Reg McDaniel, chief pathologist at Dallas-Fort Worth Medical Center in Grand Prairie, said he had wanted the body exhumed for three years. Ms. Williams died in September 1984 at Dallas-Fort Worth Medical Center, where she was taken after complaining of severe abdominal pain.

While surgery indicated that her appendix was healthy, Ms. Williams developed adult respiratory distress syndrome after the operation. She died 11 days later, apparently after contracting pneumonia, he said.

"In a way, now that we're here, I almost hope I'm wrong," said McDaniel after the exhumation.

46 communities vying for new state prison

AUSTIN (AP) — The "prison derby" has opened and some 46 communities are trying to position themselves to win a new state prison, and the economic boost in jobs and payroll that goes with it.

On Tuesday, prison officials were met at the door of the Senate chamber by Di Matthews of Beeville, who was dressed in a bumblebee costume, wearing a button that said "Bee for the TDC."

More than 100 people were on hand and they sat in the Senate gallery and cheered after the new Texas Board of Criminal Justice acknowledged their presence.

They came from Dilley, Hondo, Childress, Stamford, Pampa, Beeville, Woodville, Dalhart, Brownwood, Snyder, Karnes City, Abilene; Milam, Eastland, Freestone, and Hudspeth counties; and the Trans-Pecos region.

The representatives said a new prison will help the local economies.

Ernestine Beicker, of Karnes City, said the town, trying to recover from job losses in uranium mining and oil, wants a 2,250-bed maximum security prison.

"There is very little opposition," said Ms. Beicker, publisher of two weeklies in Karnes County.

Lloyd Fortenberry, a real estate developer from Woodville in Tyler County, said a new prison would "generate a lot of income..." He said the town is suffering from a timber industry slump.

Texas Department of Corrections director James Lynaugh said about 46 communities are interested in having a new state prison facility.

Pizza considered 'the great American pie'

By CHARLES BRITTON
Copley News Service

Having been raised among the relations on my Italian mother's side of the family, I grew up thinking that pizza was — you should excuse the expression — cosa nostra, our thing.

We ate it. Other Italians ate it. The Americani, as my grandmother called outsiders in general, subsisted on concoctions made with mayonnaise and didn't understand about real food.

I will never forget my shock when, paging through what I remember as Look magazine sometime in the late '40s, I came across a feature article on pizza. The Americani have found out! I thought. It was no longer our special secret.

No one could have known at the time, certainly not a 10-year-old magazine reader, that pizza was going to take over the country. The article was among the first signs of the Italianization of the American kitchen.

Pizza by now has become probably the nation's most popular dish. Consider these recent items of information:

Pizza gained 77 percent in frequency of consumption between 1978 and 1988, according to MRCA Information Services. That's an astonishing growth, considering that Americans were not exactly unfamiliar with the dish before then. In the same time period, America's former favorite, the hamburger, fell by 11 percent.

The National Restaurant Association says that pizza accounts for 36 percent of all take-out orders, and it dominates home delivery. "Sending out for a pizza" has become a distinguishing trait of American life.

Parents of school-age children will not be surprised at the result of a survey by Kid City and 3-2-1 Contact, magazines published by the Children's Television Workshop, producers of "Sesame Street." Youngsters 6 to 14 years of age picked pizza as their favorite food.

Our fondness for pizza has helped to lead a transformation of American cooking. Until the middle years of the century, our cuisine was notorious for its blandness. Garlic and herbs rarely made it onto our tables, and most cooks seemed to regard these aromatics as sinister and foreign.

After World War II, Americans embraced Italian cooking with an ardor that has yet to cool: Pasta proliferated, lasagna reigned on buffet tables beyond number, and pizza rose to the top of the charts. Garlic and herbs weren't so bad in these dishes, the Americani figured, so cooks began to make freer use of them, until today they have become mainstream staples.

Pizza was known in the United States before the war, but it was strictly limited to ethnic neighborhoods, primarily in the Northeast. The earliest reference to the dish, found by the word mavens of the Oxford English Dictionary, comes as late as 1934, in "Recipes of All Nations" by the Countess Morphy, published in the United States and in Britain.

The first recipe for pizza as we know it that I have been able to find appears in "Herbs for the Kitchen" by Irma Goodrich Mazza, published in 1939, when there seems to have been an early glimmering of interest in a more flavorful cooking. The New York Times Magazine offered "Hot, Hearty Pizzas" in 1947. The guides to periodical literature did not index Look, so I have been unable to check whether my memory of that shocking article is accurate.

Among mainstream "homemaking" publications, Good Housekeeping was in the forefront of the pizza movement. The 1949 edition of its cookbook has, as far as I can tell, the earliest of the recipes in widespread circulation.

By the '50s, recipes for what people often called "pizza pie" appeared in every general cookbook. Variations proliferated, until today whole cookbooks are devoted to the subject. Regional versions popped up, notably Chicago-style, made in a deep pan and crammed full of a thick layer of garnish.

The next great turning point in America's passion for pizza occurred in 1982, when Austrian-born Wolfgang Puck opened Spago in West Hollywood. He had been chef at the old Ma Maison in Los Angeles, the epicenter of power lunches in the early '80s, but with Spago he originally intended something more informal, a kind of neighborhood bistro, albeit in a trendy and upscale neighborhood. And he wanted to bake pizzas.

"My own taste for pizza was developed in France, at a restaurant in Salon-de-Provence called Chez Gu," he wrote in "The Wolfgang Puck Cookbook" (1986).

"I was working at L'Oustau de Baumaniere with my friend Guy Leroy at the time. On our days off together we would celebrate with a light, informal dinner at Chez Gu, and it always included one of their pizzas.

"It was here, as we sat relaxing and talking, that our visions of starting a restaurant in America came to include a pizzeria. ... Imagine our disappointment when we moved to Los Angeles and found that such an idea was unheard of in the states."

Puck would change that. He started turning out pizzas with remarkable combinations of recherche ingredients, like caviar and goat cheese. In a rush, fashionable restaurants followed suit. Soon the wilder the combination, the better. I am prepared to swear that at California Pizza Kitchen — a chain started by Spago alumni — I saw a cook pile a baked pizza layer with chicken salad.

Instead of sending out for a pizza, let's make our own.

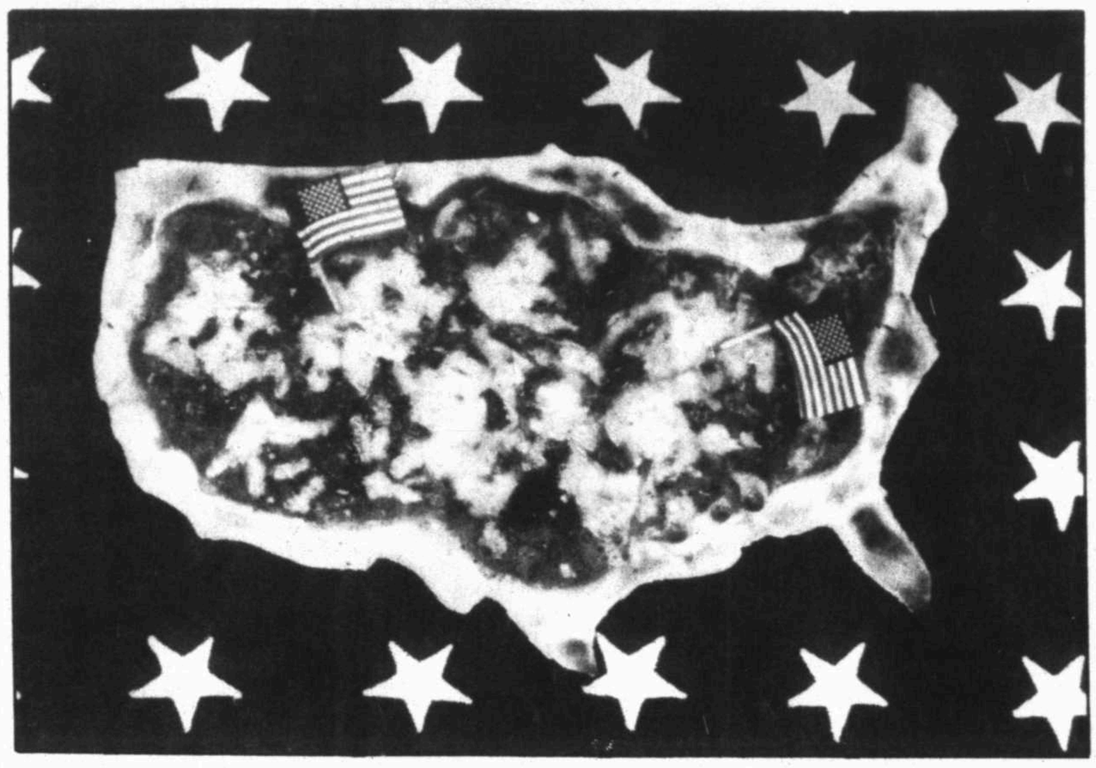
PIZZA DOUGH

2¾ cups bread flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon active dry yeast
1 teaspoon sugar
About ¾ cup warm water
1 tablespoon olive oil

Place flour and salt in a bowl. In small bowl, combine yeast, sugar and ¼ cup water; let stand until frothy. Add yeast liquid to flour with remaining water and oil. Mix to make a soft dough.

You may have to add a bit more flour or water, depending on consistency. Knead on floured surface 10 minutes, until smooth. Place in greased bowl, cover with plastic wrap, and let stand in warm place for about an hour, until doubled in bulk.

To make dough in a food processor, place flour and salt in beaker with steel knife. Pulse briefly to blend. Allow yeast to become foamy as above, then add to flour with motor running. Add olive oil and enough additional water so that dough forms a ball. Allow machine to knead dough for about a minute, until it becomes smooth and shiny. Place in a bowl to rise as above.



CNS Photo

Once a culinary delight found only in Italian neighborhoods, pizza by now has probably become the nation's most popular dish.

BLACK FOREST HAM AND GOAT CHEESE PIZZA

1 recipe Pizza Dough, divided into 4 equal pieces
About 2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
1 teaspoon dried red chili flakes
1 cup grated Italian fontina cheese
2 cups grated or sliced mozzarella cheese
2 baby Japanese eggplants, sliced lengthwise into ¼-inch slices and grilled or sauteed in olive oil
1 cup cubed goat cheese
4 ounces Black Forest ham, cut into julienne strips
1 bunch fresh basil, chopped, with a sprig reserved for garnish

Preheat oven with a pizza stone inside to 500 degrees for 30 minutes.

Divide dough into quarters and roll or stretch a quarter into a 7- or 8-inch circle.

One at a time, place pizza on wooden peel, dusted lightly with flour or semolina.

For each pizza, brush dough with olive oil and sprinkle with dried chili flakes to taste. Arrange a quarter of the fontina and mozzarella cheeses on dough. Then add a quarter of the eggplant, goat cheese and ham. Sprinkle some chopped basil on top. Assemble the 3 remaining pizzas the same way.

Slide pizza onto stone and bake 10 to 12 minutes, or until cheese is bubbling lively.

Remove pizza from oven and transfer it to a warm plate. Garnish with basil sprig. Serve immediately, cut into wedges.

When Puck expanded into frozen pizzas for the supermarket trade, he ran into trouble with the U.S. Department of Agriculture. One of his pizzas had no cheese — and no cheese, no pizza, the feds said.

But authentic pizza by no means must contain cheese. The Romans eat Pizza Bianca — white pizza, sprinkled only with oil and salt, a dish that goes back to ancient days. In other parts of Italy, such plain pizzas are known as Schiaciata or Focaccia.

PIZZA BIANCA ALLA ROMANA

PIZZA DOUGH
About ¼ cup olive oil
8 cloves garlic, very thinly sliced (or more)
1 tablespoon fresh rosemary (or more — other herbs may be used)
Salt

Traditionally, this pizza is shaped into long, freestanding strips. It is easier to fit into a greased 11x14-inch jelly roll pan by rolling and stretching. Allow dough to rise a second time in the pan until doubled, about 1 hour.

Meanwhile, preheat oven to 500 degrees. Brush some oil on dough, and sprinkle with garlic, herbs and salt. Bake until edges are crisp and top is brown, about 20 minutes.

GRILLED PIZZA RUSTICA

½ Pizza Dough recipe or 1 pound loaf of frozen bread dough, thawed
SAUCE:
3 cloves garlic, minced
1 tablespoon each chopped fresh oregano and basil, or 1 teaspoon of each dried
3 tablespoons olive oil
¼ cup chopped plum tomatoes
⅓ cup grated dry Monterey Jack cheese
2 egg yolks
Salt, pepper
GARNISH:
2 cups sauteed vegetables (sliced mushrooms, chopped eggplant, peppers, onions, you name it)
1 cup shredded smoked turkey
1 cup (4 ounces) shredded mozzarella cheese
1 cup shredded fontina cheese

Divide dough in half. Flatten into 2 rounds about ½-inch thick. Saute garlic and herbs in oil until tender. Stir in remaining sauce ingredients.

Brush 1 side of dough rounds with olive oil; place on barbecue grill, oiled side down, over low to medium coals. Allow to brown, 5 to 10 minutes. Turn over. Spread with sauce and garnish. Grill covered, 10 to 12 minutes, until cheese melts and pizzas are cooked through. Move pizzas to cooler place on grill if browning too fast.

Hot potatoes get 'zapped'

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

If you're like everyone else, one of the first things you tried in your new microwave oven was a baked potato. What would normally take an hour microwaves in only five minutes or so — and this is magic to new microwavers. But much as everyone likes them baked, there are lots of other ways to enjoy microwaved potatoes.

You won't, of course, get crispy french fries from your microwave, but it's great for preparing potato salad, mashed potatoes or cubed potatoes to add to soups and casseroles.

Frozen hash browns are convenient to keep on hand, and they cook quickly in the microwave.

Tiny canned potatoes are equally easy to store, and can provide a side dish in minutes when time is short. Just heat in a microwave-safe casserole until piping hot, then drain and toss with butter and parsley. Season with salt and pepper to taste and you're ready to serve.

It's best to store whole potatoes in a dark, dry, well-ventilated place at about 45 degrees Fahrenheit, where they will remain fresh for several weeks. If you refrigerate potatoes they may develop a sweet taste, as the cold converts some of the starch into sugar.

Before cooking, scrub gently with a vegetable brush and rinse well. One medium potato will yield approximately 1 cup chopped.

Besides being versatile and tasty, potatoes are a great source of nutrients and fiber. We all know that oranges are high in vitamin C, but so are potatoes — one medium potato providing 50 percent of the Recommended Daily Allowance (RDA) for the vitamin.

The richest concentration of nutrients lies just under the skin, so be careful not to peel away this layer — or don't peel at all. Never soak cut potatoes in cold water for any length of time, since this causes vitamin loss.

The Potato Board has published a pamphlet of microwave recipes and potato tips available free to all potato-lovers. For your copy, send a stamped, self-addressed business-size envelope to: "Fast Lane Recipes," The Potato Board, 1385 So. Colorado Blvd., Denver, CO 80222.

(Recipes in this column are tested in 625- to 700-watt microwave ovens.)

MICRO-AGE MASHED POTATOES

2 pounds potatoes
¼ cup water
⅔ cup milk or half-and-half
¼ cup butter or margarine
Salt and pepper to taste
Paprika

Oven setting: HIGH (100 percent power).

Scrub potatoes and quarter. Arrange in 2-quart microwave-safe casserole and add water. Microwave, covered, 10 to 14 minutes, or until potatoes are tender, stirring twice during cooking time. Let stand, covered, 5 minutes. Drain well and peel, if desired. Mash potatoes or force through a ricer, then cover and set aside.

Combine milk and butter in 1-cup glass measure and microwave 2 to 2½ minutes, or until heated through (do not boil). Gradually add to potatoes, beating constantly. Season with salt and pepper to taste and sprinkle with paprika.

BACO-CHEESE HASH BROWNS

1 (12-ounce) package frozen hash browns
4 slices bacon
½ cup chopped onion
½ medium bell pepper, diced
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ cup shredded cheddar cheese
Paprika

Oven setting: DEFROST (30 percent power); HIGH (100 percent power).

Place unopened package of potatoes on oven floor and microwave on DEFROST setting 5 minutes, rotating twice; set aside.

Arrange bacon slices in flat 1½-quart microwave-safe casserole. Cover with paper towel and microwave at HIGH setting 3 to 4½ minutes, or until crisp. Remove bacon and set on paper towel to drain.

Spoon off all but about 1 tablespoon of fat from casserole. Add onion and bell pepper. Spread thawed potatoes in even layer over vegetables. Cover and microwave 4 minutes; stir. Microwave, covered, 3 to 4 minutes longer, or until potatoes are heated through. Sprinkle with pepper, then crumble bacon over potatoes; toss. Top with shredded cheese and sprinkle with paprika. Cover and let stand 3 minutes before serving.

GERMAN POTATO SALAD

4 medium potatoes
4 slices bacon, diced
½ cup chopped onion
¼ cup each cider vinegar and water
2 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon each salt and dry mustard
¼ teaspoon ground white pepper
⅛ teaspoon allspice

Oven setting: HIGH (100 percent power).

Scrub potatoes and pierce each with fork in several places. Arrange spoke-fashion on paper towel, as far apart as possible. Microwave 10 to 14 minutes, or until potatoes feel soft when pressed, rotating and turning halfway through cooking time. Let stand 3 minutes, then halve lengthwise and cut into even slices. Cover and set aside.

Place bacon and onion in 4-cup glass measure. Cover with paper towel and microwave 4 to 5 minutes, or until bacon is cooked, stirring every 2 minutes. Add vinegar, water, sugar, flour, salt, mustard, pepper and allspice. Stir to blend and microwave 1 minute. Combine bacon mixture with sliced potatoes in serving bowl and toss gently. Serve immediately.

Microwave is quick, convenient for baking, boiling potatoes

NEW YORK (AP) — A potato is a nutrient-dense food. One medium potato provides 50 percent of the daily RDA for vitamin C, 15 percent for vitamin B6 and 8 percent for iron, thiamin and folacin.

One medium potato (6 to 8 ounces) contains only 110 calories.

Potatoes are an excellent source of complex carbohydrates. Nearly 100 percent of a potato's calories come from complex carbohydrate and protein. Potatoes also contain plenty of dietary fiber, especially if eaten with the skin.

According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the average American consumes 120 pounds of potatoes annually.

"Americans ate more potatoes than any other vegetable last year — more than twice as much by weight than the No.2 vegetable, tomatoes. This made potatoes the second greatest source of vitamin C in the American diet, after oranges," the January 1989 issue of the "University of California, Berkeley Wellness Letter" reported.

A baked potato can be cooked in the microwave in 3 to 5 minutes; 7 to 10 minutes for boiled potatoes. Just follow these tips from The Potato Board, which is based in Denver.

BAKED POTATOES

Scrub a 6- to 8-ounce potato; pierce with fork. Place in microwave on rack or paper towel. Cook on high (100 percent power) 4 to 6 minutes, turning once. After removing from oven, let stand 2 minutes. Baking time can vary depending on size, shape and variety of potato.

To test for doneness, hold the potato with a cloth or paper towel and firmly press. The potato should give only slightly under your fingers right under the surface; the center will still feel firm.

Cooking Tips:

■ Be sure to pierce the potato skin once on top and bottom before cooking to release steam that may build up later.

■ When a potato bursts or explodes, it is often not because of overcooking, but because of heat and steam buildup under a skin when no holes were pierced.

■ Cook potatoes on a paper towel to absorb any excess moisture.

■ Cook all potatoes on high (100 percent power).

■ Potatoes will continue cooking during standing time, but they should not be covered. Use a terry-cloth towel to hold in the heat but keep them from becoming soggy.

BOILED POTATOES

For sliced boiled potatoes: Scrub a 6-ounce potato. Slice ⅛-inch thick. Place in microwave dish. Add 1 tablespoon water; cover with plastic wrap. Cook on high (100 percent power) 4 to 5 minutes. Let stand 3 minutes.

For cubed boiled potatoes: Scrub a 6-ounce potato. Cut into 1-inch cubes. Place in microwave dish; cover with plastic wrap. Cook on high 5 to 7 minutes. Let stand 3 minutes.

To test for doneness, potatoes should be easily pierced with a fork but still remain slightly firm.

Cookbook combines good food, health

By CAROL CUTLER
Copley News Service

The crash diet used to have a calendar pattern. Prime times were right after the holidays, following vacation or before swimsuit season. In the 1980s we began to change our ways — and our shapes — and now light eating is an everyday thing.

Hostesses no longer feel they have to stuff guests to prove they are receiving a first-class meal. Caring now means helping anyone around your table follow a sensible diet that does not deliver unhealthy blows to the body.

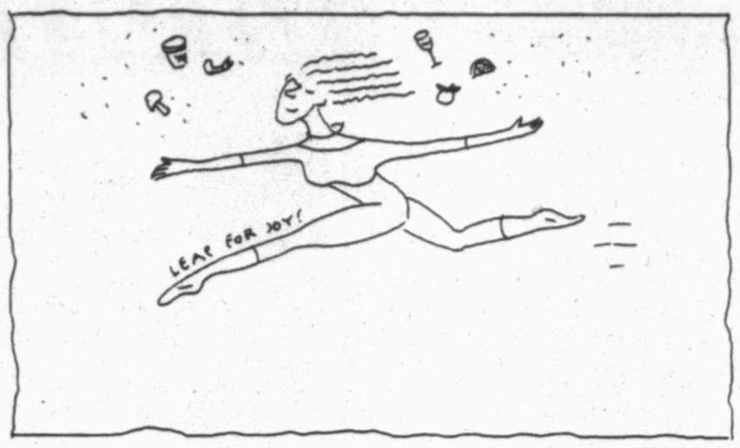
Fortunately, a lot of experts have come along to help us eat prudently and deliciously. Diet cookbooks abound, and most of them prove unsuccessful because they give you just that — diets. It has been resoundingly demonstrated that while diets might work for a short time, in the long run, they prove boring. So off we go on another binge.

Then along comes Ellen Brown's "Gourmet Gazelle Cookbook" (Bantam). The subtitle sums it all up, "Delicious Eating for a Lifetime of Good Health." In other words, when it tastes good, who cares if it's also good for you.

Brown confesses, "This book is the result of one woman's lifelong battle with her hips."

OK, so she had a problem. Don't we all? But the difference is that Brown did something about it.

She is president of New York's Gourmet Gazelle, which was the country's first carryout featuring nutritionally controlled foods. Praise for the carryout came from such lofty voices as Vogue, WCBS, WQXR, The New York Times and Chicago Tribune, among others.



CNS Graphic

The 180 recipes in "Gourmet Gazelle" were developed for the shop's demanding clientele on Manhattan's fancy Upper East Side. This is a crowd that is serious about both dining well and keeping slim. Those same aims will soon be addressed for everyone in products to be picked up from the grocers' shelves.

"Gourmet Gazelle' offers more than just fewer calories. Brown's philosophy is total good health, not just weight control. So recipes also have reduced cholesterol and sodium. A nutrition box for each serving accompanies every recipe.

Brown's book is not meant to be just a collection of recipes, but a primer in changing the way we cook. So in addition to the tempting recipes, there are chapters on how to stock your pantry with all the essentials for this modern cooking style, how to convert your favorite sinfully rich recipes into healthy ones, even tips on freezing everything from Champagne Orange Sorbet to wine! Really — leftover wine — and it works.

So, friends are coming for dinner. Shh, don't tell them. How "diet" does this menu sound? Wild Mushroom Soup, Coq au Vin, New Potatoes with Rosemary, Lemon Cheese Mousse.

Noted wine writer David Vaughan also offers suggestions for what to pour. His notes apply to more than just "Gourmet Gazelle" recipes.

For example, these are his sage words of what to serve with the soup: "The spicy flavor of a Gewurztraminer from Alsace will blend well with Asian flavors in this dish. For a different sensation, try some dry sherry."

For Coq au Vin, Vaughan says, "A rich French Burgundy is the classic companion to coq au vin, and it will suit nicely. You could also serve a red Rhone, such as Hermitage or Cote Rotie, or a California merlot."

To prove how much the book can be enjoyed even when not entertaining, sample these snappy muffins. They would make a delicious addition to a brown-bag school or office lunch.

APRICOT GINGER MUFFINS

Vegetable oil for muffin tins
1½ cups whole-wheat flour
½ cup unbleached white flour
1 tablespoon baking powder
⅓ cup sugar
1 cup low-fat buttermilk
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
½ cup grated peeled apple
2 eggs
1 teaspoon finely chopped crystallized ginger
2 tablespoons finely chopped dried apricots

Yields 12 muffins. Calories per muffin: 130, 46 milligrams cholesterol, 2 grams fat, 140 milligrams sodium.

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. If you're not using non-stick pans lightly oil and flour 12 muffin tins.

In one mixing bowl, combine flours, baking powder and sugar. In another bowl, whisk together buttermilk, oil, apple and eggs.

Stir liquids into dry ingredients, beating mixture with wooden spoon to combine. Beat until combined but not overly smooth. Stir in ginger and apricots; distribute evenly.

Divide among muffin tins and bake 15 to 18 minutes or until browned. Place pan on rack to cool 5 minutes, then remove muffins.

The herb flavor isn't strong enough

Your salad is pallid.

Here's how to get full herb strength:

1. Herbs release their oils immediately during cooking. The flavoring is instant.
2. Cold preparations need more time. Mix herbs with cold foods... dips, cheeses, salad dressings or main course salads.
3. Let stand for several hours, or overnight, if appropriate. Herb flavors will slowly, and deliciously, permeate the food.

Recipe adjustment makes low-fat, low-guilt rigatoni

By MARIAN BURROS
New York Times News Service

In 1977, an event called Food Day was celebrated at the White House with a vegetarian meal. It gave some Americans the idea that a meatless meal was not just for vegetarians.

But the beef industry was so angry that it sent a telegram to President Jimmy Carter demanding that meat be included. It wasn't, and the industry never forgave him.

Recently, after an out-of-town trip — where if the food wasn't served on croissants for breakfast, lunch and dinner, it was made with mayonnaise — I wanted to cook something that would be satisfying and really low in fat. I also wanted to be able to buy the ingredients at my local supermarket, not known for its extensive array of anything, particularly on Sundays.

With a little adjustment, one of those old meatless recipes for rigatoni and broccoli fit the prescription. I added a ficelle of crusty French bread and some lemon sorbet, and the supper menu was complete.

Should you feel especially industrious, a simple plum compote would turn an already fine meal into a more festive one. And there is enough for leftovers during the week.

RIGATONI WITH BROCCOLI

4 quarts water
1 pound rigatoni
½ pound mushrooms, sliced
2 to 4 tablespoons olive oil
2 pounds broccoli
2 cups canned tomatoes in tomato pur'ee
2 tablespoons chopped fresh oregano
2 tablespoons chopped fresh basil
Freshly ground black pepper to taste
1 cup low-fat ricotta
1 cup nonfat or low-fat yogurt
¼ cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese

Bring water to boil in covered pot for rigatoni. When water boils, stir in rigatoni and cook according to package directions until tender but still firm, al dente. Drain.

Saute mushrooms in hot olive oil, using 2 tablespoons in nonstick skillet and 3 to 4 tablespoons in conventional pan until mushrooms begin to brown, about 5 minutes.

Cut off the tough stem ends of the broccoli and cut the remaining stems into ¼-inch-thick slices. Cut florets into bite-size pieces and add all broccoli pieces to mushrooms. Crush tomatoes with hand and add to skillet with oregano, basil and pepper. Cook about 5 minutes longer, until broccoli is tender but still firm.

In food processor or blender, mix ricotta and yogurt until smooth. When sauce is cooked, turn off heat and stir in yogurt mixture. Do not heat. Spoon over rigatoni and serve with Parmesan cheese.

Vegetable duos prove tastier

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Because two are often tastier than one, I'm always looking for new vegetable duos. This is one my family particularly likes. I cook the bacon in the microwave. A single slice, placed on a plate lined with a paper towel, cooks on 100 percent power in 1 to 1½ minutes.

MICROWAVE CAULIFLOWER AND TOMATOES

2 cups cauliflower flowerets
2 green onions, sliced
2 tablespoons water
1 medium tomato, seeded and chopped
1 slice bacon, cooked, drained and crumbled
½ teaspoon dried basil, crushed
⅛ teaspoon salt

In a 1-quart microwave-safe casserole combine cauliflower, onions and water. Cook, covered, on 100 percent power (high) for 5 to 7 minutes or until cauliflower is crisp-tender. Drain well.

Meanwhile, in a mixing bowl stir together tomato, bacon, basil and salt. Toss tomato mixture with cauliflower mixture. Makes 4 servings.

DEAR ABBY

Troubled woman wants help with her addiction

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: If you're an alcoholic, you can get help at Alcoholics Anonymous. If you're a drug addict, you can get help from any number of drug rehabilitation facilities. But if you're a kleptomaniac — and not rich — you are doomed.

Psychiatrists charge outrageous fees to help kleptomaniacs, even though kleptomania is a "sickness," the same as drinking, smoking and drug addiction.

I know that taking things without paying for them is stealing, yet I take small items I have no use for — I just can't seem to help myself. (It's just as hard to take things back, which I have tried to do several times.)

I am a churchgoing, middle-aged woman, and that's all I can tell you about myself. Please answer me in the paper. Maybe others with this problem will write in and tell you how they were cured. — KLEPTOMANIAC

DEAR KLEPTOMANIAC: There IS help for you. Find "Mental Health" under "County" in your telephone book, and call. You will be told what kind of help is available near you.

You will be charged according to what you can afford to pay. There is no quick "cure," but a therapist may be able to tell you why you take things, and once you understand the reason for your behavior, you will be well on your way to overcoming it. I admire you. The person who knows he or she has a problem and seeks a solution is halfway cured.

DEAR ABBY: We have a problem that requires a quick solution. A wedding is coming up in our family soon, and there is a certain relative who takes her 6-year-old daughter everywhere. Wendy (not her real name) has attended every wedding, shower, anniversary party, etc. in the family. Wendy is very cute and loves to show off. Her mother encourages her, so consequently Wendy is always the center of attention.

Since Wendy's mother never tells her to sit down and be quiet, other family members eventually do when they have had it up to here. Also, when pictures are taken at these family celebrations, Wendy runs to be in every picture, while her mother just sits there beaming.

Should we politely ask Wendy's mother to please leave Wendy at home with a sitter? This has been going on for years, and we are ... SICK OF IT

DEAR SICK: Since you have tolerated Wendy's annoying behavior "for years," it's a little late to suggest that now she be left at home with a sitter.

You would be doing both Wendy and her mother a favor if you explained to this myopic mom that by encouraging Wendy to be the "center of attention," she will soon believe that she is the center of the universe. And self-centered children are usually unpopular with their peers and barely tolerated by adults.

DEAR ABBY: I am a kindergarten teacher and would like to offer a little advice to parents.

Several of my little ones are bedwetters, and the odor can get very strong at times. I suppose some parents do not notice it because they've grown accustomed to it, but I wish you'd remind parents to give their children a bath every morning before they're sent off to school. (Even a sponge bath would help the bedwetters.)

I hope to see this letter in the paper. Thank you. — KINDERGARTEN TEACHER

DEAR TEACHER: Shame on those insensitive parents who would send a child to school smelling bad. (Can you imagine the humiliation those odoriferous children must endure from their peers?)

Here's your letter, teacher. I hope the parents who need reminding get wind of it.

(Problems? Write to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.)

Supermarket quick starters make homemade meals in minutes possible

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Fresh homemade meals ready in under 30 minutes. Sound like an impossible dream? Your supermarket can help make it a reality.

At the meat counter look for: meat cubes, skewered and marinated for kabobs; thinly sliced meat for stir-fry; boned and marinated chicken breasts; stuffed chicken breasts; frozen fish fillets in sauce.

In the produce department: cut-up vegetables; ready-cut stir-fry mixtures; shredded vegetables for coleslaw; melon wedges; squash in serving-size pieces.

This recipe takes advantage of two supermarket quick starters: marinated chicken breasts and sliced fresh mushrooms.

CHICKEN IN MUSHROOM CREAM SAUCE

2 8- or 12-ounce packages lemon- and pepper- marinated chicken breasts (4 breast halves)
¼ cup margarine or butter
2 cups packaged sliced fresh mushrooms
2 teaspoons fresh or frozen snipped chives
½ cup whipping cream

In large skillet cook chicken breasts in hot margarine or butter over medium heat for 8 to 10 minutes or until chicken is tender enough to be easily pierced with fork and no pink remains, turning occasionally so chicken browns evenly.

Transfer chicken to serving platter, reserving drippings in skillet. Cover chicken and keep warm.

Add mushrooms and chives to reserved drippings. Cook and stir for 1 to 2 minutes or until mushrooms are tender. Stir in whipping cream; boil gently for 3 minutes or until sauce is slightly thickened, scraping up browned bits on bottom of skillet. To serve, spoon sauce over chicken. Makes 4 servings.

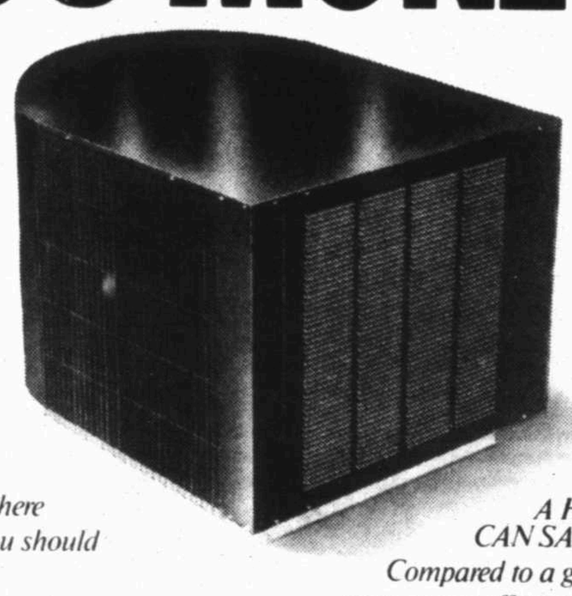
WHAT SITS OUT BACK, RUNS SUMMER AND WINTER, AND SAVES YOU MONEY?



A heat pump. And there are three good reasons you should get one.

A HEAT PUMP COOLS, HEATS AND SAVES.

Replace your old air conditioner with a new electric heat pump. It's a high efficiency air conditioner in summer. While, in the winter, it's the most energy efficient heating system you can own. On even the coldest days, a heat pump system operates efficiently and will provide all the warmth you need.

A HEAT PUMP CAN SAVE $130 A YEAR.

*Compared to a gas furnace, a heat pump is more energy efficient. And TU Electric's low rates make heating and cooling your home with a heat pump an even better value. Tests have shown you can save $130 or more a year by installing a heat pump.

GET MORE INFORMATION.

You can find out more about the amazing heat pump, including details on rebates, from your local heat pump dealer.

Council tabs Vincent; owners may vote today

By MURRAY CHASS
c.1989 N.Y. Times News Service

MILWAUKEE — Baseball's executive council voted Tuesday to recommend to the owners that Francis T. (Fay) Vincent Jr. serve as commissioner for the four and a half years of the unexpired term of the late A. Bartlett Giamatti.

The council did not disclose its decision publicly, but a source with direct knowledge of the action confirmed the move after all signs had pointed to it.

Vincent, who has been acting commissioner since Sept. 2, the day after Giamatti died of a heart attack, must be approved by at least three-fourths of the 26 club owners, but approval by at least 20 owners is a foregone conclusion.

Initially, the owners had been expected to vote on Thursday, but tonight there was a good chance they would act on Wednesday instead.

The 51-year-old Vincent, a lawyer with vast business experience on a high-ranking executive level, would serve as commissioner until April 1, 1994.

Giamatti had been elected a year ago to serve a five-year term beginning last April 1. He died exactly five months after succeeding Peter Ueberroth.

Vincent will be the eighth commissioner of baseball, but the fourth in the last five years.

The members of the 10-man executive council, for the most part, declined comment on any aspect of their meeting. But Bill Giles of the Philadelphia Phillies, when pressed about action on a new commissioner, said, "Most of the things you read today are probably going to happen."

The prevailing belief going into the meeting was that the council would recommend Vincent as commissioner, either on a pro-tem basis for three years or to fill Giamatti's unexpired term.

Emerging from the council meeting a little more than two hours after it began, Bobby Brown, president of the American League, accompanied by Bill White, the National League president, read a brief statement:

"The executive council will make a recommendation to the leagues tomorrow, but in deference to the rights of all the owners, we'll not make any announcement until that time."

Neither Brown nor White made further comment and neither accepted any questions before they returned to the meeting, which ended about an hour later.

One member of the council, just before going to the meeting, said that "a couple dissidents" did not favor a long term for Vincent. But, he added, "I don't think there'll be any problem."

As he left the hotel for a dinner with the owners, Vincent said he knew what recommendation the council would make to the other owners on Wednesday, but he would not discuss it.

It was believed that discussion of the commissioner's job took up no more than half of the meeting before Brown's announcement.

Bulldog spikers nip Rebs

By BILL PRICE
Sports Writer

No matter what the sport or team records are, whenever Midland High and Midland Lee get together a knock-down-drag-out is on the agenda.

Such was the case as Lee traveled to the unfriendly confines of Bulldog Gymnasium Tuesday night, when MHS took the District 4-5A volleyball opener for both teams, 15-1, 15-17, 15-2.

The win sent the Lady Bulldogs to 5-5 for the season and 1-0 in 4-5A while the Lady Rebels fell to 2-9 and 0-1 on the year.

"It's always interesting when you play the cross-town rival, regardless of the standings," said Sonja Pittman, MHS head coach. "But our offense attacked and we had some good defensive plays."

Indeed, in the first game MHS could do no wrong, especially with 5-5 senior Anita Montez serving. With Montez sending the ball from the baseline and recording four aces, the Lady Bulldogs scored 11 of their game-one points to take the momentum entering the second round.

But Lee battled back to a 5-0 edge in game two. MHS methodically worked its way back into the contest, however, forcing the first of five ties at 10-all. Lee answered with the service and emotional play of junior Gina Natividad, who set up the final two points of the game on poor returns by the Lady 'Dogs.

The Lady Bulldogs recovered in the third game as whatever ills befell MHS in game two faded. After the Lady Rebs scored the first point of the game to make the score 3-1, they were outscored 12-1 as the question of who was in control was answered.

"Lee played well in the second game. But it seems in every match we've played this year we have had a time when we just seem to leave the gym, and that happened tonight," Pittman said. "But we came back in the third and played our game. We slowed the pace down to our speed.

Ex-Rebel standout looks toward letter

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

LUBBOCK — This could be the year for former Midland Lee quarterback Tuey Rankin.

Rankin

The 1986 LHS grad won't be in line for all-star honors at Texas Tech. He may not even start a game.

But Rankin is in line to earn his first football letter after seeing limited or no action during his first three seasons as a Red Raider. The 190-pound junior caught one pass for three yards as a backup wingback last season after not playing a down in 1987 and being redshirted in 1986.

In the Raiders' season opener Saturday against Arizona, Rankin saw his first action when the outcome of the game was in doubt, seeing action each time Tech kicked off as a member of the kickoff coverage team. He is also listed as the top backup to starting strong safety David McFarland, but saw no action from scrimmage Saturday.

Playing as a wedge-buster third from the sideline, Rankin saw contact only once and was not a factor in the play.

"It feels good finally getting a chance to play," Rankin said. Not only has he been stuck behind some top-drawer athletes on the depth chart, but he has suffered from numerous injuries during his stint at Tech.

Please see RANKIN, Page 3C

Ex-Bulldog, Tech star earn weekly honors

LUBBOCK (AP) — James Gray is one of the most laid-back guys around — except when he enters a football stadium.

"When I'm on the field, I'm different," the Texas Tech running back said Tuesday, leaning back in a chair and smiling serenely. "I'm a lot more aggressive."

Gray was aggressive enough in Saturday's 24-14 victory over 20th-ranked Arizona to rush for 234 yards and two touchdowns. For his efforts, he was named the AP's Southwest Conference offensive player of the week.

Midland High grad Darrell Davis is the AP's Southwest Conference defensive player of the week for his 11 tackles — including three sacks for 22 yards in losses — from his right end position in Texas Christian's 14-10 loss to Missouri.

Gray's performance Saturday at Jones Stadium in Lubbock was the best of his college career. His ability to spot holes in the line and shift direction to accelerate through them frustrated the Arizona defense.

After the game, Gray credited the offensive line for his performance and warned that the Red Raiders have to beware having a letdown this Saturday against New Mexico. Though relaxed, he barely cracked a smile.

Coach Spike Dykes seems amused and relieved with Gray: amused because the running back gives other players the credit, and relieved that he's a team player. Like Gray, Dykes credits the offensive line and halfback Louis Sheffield for creating Gray's running lanes. But that's only half the equation.

"He's the guy who did the running," Dykes said Monday.

Oddly enough, Tech was the only Southwest Conference school to recruit Gray at Fort Worth Trimble Tech. UT-Arlington also visited.

Unlike Gray, TCU's Davis was widely recruited at Midland. Defensive coordinator Marc Dove said Davis, at 6-3 and 258 pounds, could become one of the best defensive ends in the conference.

"I think he's very capable of maintaining this kind of performance and even improving it," Dove said of the intimidating game Davis played against Missouri. "He's very mobile, very physical."

Walker likely to play greater role

Pro Football

IRVING (AP) — Run, Herschel, run.

That's likely to be the Dallas Cowboys' game plan going into Sunday's NFL game against the Atlanta Falcons after Herschel Walker complained of being ignored in Jimmy Johnson's offense.

New owner Jerry Jones admitted, "it does look like we need to get Herschel in the game plan."

Johnson said Walker will be going back to Georgia as the Cowboys' workhorse after only carrying the ball eight times for 10 yards in Sunday's 28-0 loss to New Orleans.

Dallas rushed for an all-time club low of 20 yards.

Walker was a Heisman Trophy winner at Georgia in 1982 and will be making his first appearance before his home fans.

"I'll have a lot of family and friends in the stands," Walker said. "I want the ball."

Johnson said Walker has been somewhat misunderstood.

"The media has made more out of it than what Herschel has made of it," Johnson said. "Herschel's not that concerned. We want him to have the football. We need to have him more involved in the offense. But the media has talked to him enough about it already."

Walker, who was the National Conference's leading rusher in 1988 with more than 1,500 yards, said the current Cowboys offense is not designed for running backs.

"It's an offense for quarterbacks and wide receivers," he said. "Ten tries, that's not stopping our running game."

Johnson said the Cowboys had the ball so little against the Saints that there was not time enough to establish the running game. He said when they did get have the ball, they were already playing catch-up.

"Getting Herschel the ball will a priority but just because he rushed for 1,500 yards last year doesn't automatically ensure you will win," Johnson said. "There were only three victories last year. What we are talking about it is doing what we have to do to win."

"That's what I'm going to tell (offensive coordinator) David Shula. 'Let's put the ball into the end zone.' That's the No. 1 priority. It doesn't make me happy to rush for 200 yards and lose. What makes me happy is to win."

Johnson held a combination print and electronic media press conference in place of former coach Tom Landry's usual press luncheon. New owner Jerry Jones had lunch with the media.

"I don't eat lunch," Johnson said. "And if we don't start playing better, I won't eat anything."

Jones said adversity will bring out the best in Johnson.

"I would love to have an experienced and talented football team. But if the football team had that I probably wouldn't be here," — Dallas Cowboys head coach Jimmy Johnson.

On This Date...

1883 — Hugh Daily, a one-armed pitcher for Cleveland, pitched a no-hit game over Philadelphia 1-0.

1925 — Brooklyn's Dazzy Vance pitched a no-hitter against the Philadelphia Phillies in the first game of a doubleheader to give the Dodgers a 10-1 triumph.

1932 — The New York Yankees clinched the American League pennant as Joe McCarthy became the first manager to win flags in both leagues.

District 4-5A: How low can it go?

We're talking sad here, folks.

Not only did District 4-5A open with a pathetic 1-6 football mark Friday night, but local teams were outscored by a 68-6 (Killeen 35-0 over Midland Lee and Lubbock Monterey 33-6 over Midland High) margin. Not in the history of mankind have we witnessed a start like this.

Williamson

In fact, we can push this a little further. Both Greenwood (17-0 to Denver City) and Midland Christian (50-0 to Christoval) were also shutout victims, making Opponents 135, Midland County 6. And you can travel only 20 miles away to the next closest team and another shutout (20-0 to Seagraves) suffered by Stanton.

We're not talking about offensive powers here. In fact, a first down looks good at this point in time.

It's also interesting to note that Odessa High got drilled by Amarillo Palo Duro, 31-7, yet the Bronchos scored more points than all the Midland County teams put together.

District 4-5A, as we now know it, has never had an opening night to compare with this. It's a black eye that will take more than a 10-pound steak to cure.

It must be noted that 4-5A played against four teams who were in the state playoffs last year. But when you have league pride that is the state trademark of 4-5A, that shouldn't translate into 1-6.

It's left a lot of us West Texas football junkies wondering what is ahead, including John Wilkins, Odessa athletic director.

"I've never seen anything like this," said Wilkins. "This district has gone against playoff teams before in pre-season and it's never made that much of a difference. I'm shocked just like everyone else."

New Midland athletic director Jack Tayrien took a soft approach after viewing Lee's debacle against Killeen.

"This game isn't indicative of how good or bad Lee is," said Tayrien. "Killeen is a very good team and you're going to hear a lot more from the Kangaroos before this season is over."

Monterey isn't expected to be a District 3-5A playoff team, but we hope they are. What is 4-5A in for if Monterey isn't good enough to make the playoffs when bi-district rolls around? Can we count that high?

So, that's the bad news. And don't kid yourself, this is bad news. Still, there is always a silver lining around every dark cloud if you look hard enough for it.

The positive fact is that District 4-5A's two playoff berths are decided only among league teams. That means the pathetic goes against the pathetic. In other words, we might have a very exciting run for second place.

The joke running around town this week was Odessa Permian wins first place with a perfect 6-0 record. Six teams tie for second place with 0-1-5 marks.

"We're not good enough to beat each other," said one wag.

Another told me, "If you lose to a team other than Permian, you make the Bottom 10 Poll."

Never has talk like this graced District 4-5A lips. It's nothing a few victories wouldn't cure in a hurry, but few of us will forget the opening night disaster of 1989 — the day football died in West Texas.

Rose reputation no matter; former roommate convicted

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Rose's reputation as a hometown hero didn't help his former housemate, Thomas Gioiosa.

A federal jury convicted Gioiosa on drug and tax-evasion charges Tuesday, including a charge that he conspired to hide Rose's racetrack earnings from the Internal Revenue Service. Gioiosa, 31, of New Bedford, Mass., could be sentenced to up to 28 years in jail and fined $1.5 million.

A 12-member jury in U.S. District Court heard Rose's name mentioned frequently during the 13-day trial. The former Cincinnati Reds manager is still highly regarded in his hometown, even though he's been banned from baseball for illegal gambling.

Gioiosa told the jury about his close relationship with Rose from 1979 to 1984, when they were housemates. But foreman Scott Case said the jury wasn't swayed by Rose's fame in its deliberations.

"It didn't play any part in it," he said.

King continues to master struggling Orioles

Associated Press

Chicken a la King will never replace crab cakes as a Baltimore specialty even though Eric King is making a specialty of beating the Baltimore Orioles.

The Chicago White Sox dined on Oriole a la King Tuesday night as King beat Baltimore for the third time this season and Ivan Calderon, Carlton Fisk and Scott Fletcher homered in an 11-1 laugher.

The Orioles, however, weren't doing any laughing since the setback prevented them from gaining ground in the American League East. They remained two games behind Toronto, which lost to Minnesota 8-2.

"I don't know what it is. It just happened to be them," said King, 8-9, who yielded only three hits in seven innings. "I know I'm comfortable out there pitching against them. I take them like they're any other team. Just because they're having a good season doesn't have any effect on me."

The Orioles didn't understand it, either.

"When he's bad he beats us. When he's good he beats us," batting coach Tommy McCraw said. "There's always one guy who wears you out. I'm sure there's nothing you can put your finger on. I'm sure if Nolan (Ryan) knew, he'd change."

It was King's fourth start against Baltimore. He has held the Orioles to five runs in 27 1-3 innings. Ironically, the Orioles are 3-0 against Ryan this season and have beaten him nine straight times.

While King was raising his career record against Baltimore to 6-1, the White Sox had seven runs, 10 hits and 15 baserunners in chasing three Baltimore pitchers, including No. 1 draft choice Ben McDonald, by the end of the fourth inning.

McDonald gave up Calderon's three-run homer that gave Chicago a 7-0 lead in the fourth inning, Fisk hit a two-run homer in the sixth off Curt Schilling and Fletcher, who had gone 1,075 at-bats since Sept. 5, 1987, without a homer, connected in the eighth off Mickey Weston.

Baltimore starter Pete Harnisch lasted two innings, giving up four runs and five hits. He walked three, giving him 14 walks over 11 1-3 innings in his last three starts.

American League

"The key is we're not doing the things we need to do to catch Toronto," Baltimore manager Frank Robinson said. "We have to put four or five wins together and we're playing clubs we should be capable of doing that against, and we're not doing it."

Twins 8, Blue Jays 2

Kent Hrbek had a grand slam and a career-high five RBIs and David West won for the third time in four starts since arriving in the Frank Viola trade. West yielded six hits and struck out a career-high seven in seven innings.

Toronto's Todd Stottlemyre had a five-game winning streak snapped. He gave up nine hits in 6 1-3 innings and hurt his cause with poor fielding. Stottlemyre's second throwing error on Greg Gagne's bunt single touched off Minnesota's five-run seventh inning that broke open a 3-2 game.

Wally Backman sacrificed Gagne to third and Al Newman walked. Duane Ward relieved and, after Newman took second on a short wild pitch, Gagne was safe at the plate on Randy Bush's grounder. Ward hit Kirby Puckett with a pitch to load the bases and Hrbek hit his 22nd home run of the year and sixth career grand slam.

Brewers 7, Athletics 6

Greg Vaughn's three-run homer capped a five-run fourth-inning rally and Dan Plesac tied a club record with his 97th career save as Milwaukee came back from a 5-0 deficit for its sixth straight victory.

The victory pulled third-place Milwaukee within 6½ games of Toronto in the AL East. Oakland's lead over Kansas City in the West dropped to three games.

The A's took a 5-0 off Chris Bosio in the second inning, which included RBI singles by Dave Henderson and Mike Gallego and sacrifice flies by Rickey Henderson and Jose Canseco. Canseco also homered in the eighth.

Bob Welch blanked the Brewers until the fourth when Greg Brock doubled home the first run, B.J. Surhoff hit a sacrifice fly and Vaughn hit his third home run, tying the game 5-5.

Loser Matt Young walked Paul Molitor to start the Brewers' fifth, Robin Yount singled and Brock's single put Milwaukee ahead 6-5. Todd Burns gave up an RBI single to Vaughn that drove in what proved to be the winning run.

Don August allowed one run in five innings of relief before Plesac came on for his 30th save of the season and tied Rollie Fingers' club record for career saves.

Royals 6, Rangers 5

Pinch hitter Pat Tabler greeted Texas reliever Kenny Rogers with a two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth inning, nullifying 13 strikeouts by Nolan Ryan. Frank White doubled leading off the ninth. Rogers relieved Ryan and yielded Tabler's second home run of the season.

Rick Luecken, the fourth Kansas City pitcher, was the winner despite yielding a run in the top of the ninth on a two-out walk to Jack Daugherty and Fred Manrique's RBI double.

It was Ryan's fifth straight double-figure strikeout effort, 17th of the season and 198th of his career. He increased his major league-leading strikeout total to 277, his highest since 1977 and the most ever after 29 starts for the 42-year-old right-hander.

Texas took a 4-3 lead by scoring all its runs in the fifth inning. Singles by Ruben Sierra, Julio Franco and Rick Leach loaded the bases and Terry Leach relieved Mark Gubicza, who was experiencing tightness in his left pectoral muscle.

Pinch hitter Thad Bosley singled one run home and Daugherty entered the game as a pinch hitter and doubled two more across. Manrique's single put the Rangers in front but the Royals tied it 4-4 in the seventh on an RBI single by George Brett, who went 4-for-4.

Indians 1, Tigers 0

Jerry Browne singled home the game's only run in the eighth inning and Bud Black piched a five-hitter as Cleveland beat the Detroit Tigers 1-0 in John Hart's debut as the Indians' interim manager. Black walked two and struck out four in his second straight shutout and third of the season.

Loser Frank Tanana pitched a six-hitter but Joel Skinner led off the Cleveland eighth with a single and pinch runner Tommy Hinzo was sacrificed to second by Felix Fermin. Browne then singled to right-center, scoring Hinzo. Mariners 5, Red Sox 3

Greg Briley hit a two-run homer and Jay Buhner had a two-run double as Seattle handed Boston its seventh consecutive loss.

After Mike Greenwell doubled a run home in the top of the first, Seattle scored three times in the bottom of the inning. Henry Cotto doubled and scored on a single by Alvin Davis. One out later, Ken Griffey Jr. doubled and he and Davis scored on Buhner's double. The Mariners made it 5-1 in the second when Omar Vizquel walked and Briley followed with a home run, his 13th, off Eric Hetzel, who lasted only 1 1-3 innings.

Winner Scott Bankhead yielded two runs and six hits in 5 2-3 innings and Mike Schooler came on in the eighth for his 28th save.

Angels 7, Yankees 6

Wally Joyner's RBI single with two out in the ninth lifted California within four games of first place in the AL West. Claudell Washington doubled with one out off Chuck Cary. After Devon White flied out, Chili Davis was intentionally walked but Joyner singled to score Washington.

New York tied the game against Angels relief ace Bryan Harvey in the top of the ninth on Luis Polonia's two-run single. Don Mattingly went 4-for-4 and drove in the Yankees' first four runs with two singles and his 20th homer. He has 100 RBIs for the season.

New York's Walt Terrell held California hitless until the fourth when the Angels tied it on White's triple, Davis' RBI grounder and Joyner's 15th homer.

Mattingly's homer gave the Yankees a 4-2 lead in the top of the fifth but California took a 6-4 lead with four runs in the bottom of the fifth.

Kent Anderson walked and scored on consecutive singles by Washington and White. Davis singled to score Washington and Cary relieved but uncorked a wild pitch as White was stealing third base, enabling White to score and Davis to take third. Johnny Ray's sacrifice fly scored Davis.

Cubs widen NL East lead

Associated Press

The best race in the National League East right now is for second place. The Cubbies are waving goodbye.

Mike Bielecki pitched a two-hitter — allowing no hits over the final seven innings — and the Chicago Cubs beat Montreal 2-0 Tuesday night to take a 4½-game lead over St. Louis.

The third-place New York Mets are 5½ out and the Expos trail by six.

"It looks like there's a race for second place right now," Cardinals manager Whitey Herzog said. "We need about six shutouts in a row and have to hope we can win them."

The way the Cubs are playing, that probably wouldn't be good enough.

The Cubs, who most observers thought would fade in June, have won four straight and five of six heading down the stretch.

Bielecki gave up a leadoff single to Tim Raines in the first inning and a single to Tim Wallach with one out in the second.

"I've never pitched a better game but it could have gone either way," said Bielecki, whose previous best effort was a three-hit, 4-0 shutout against Los Angeles on July 19.

Mike Bielecki pitched a helluva game, the best I've ever seen him pitch," Montreal manager Buck Rodgers said. "We didn't have a shot at him. Bryn Smith pitched a winning type of game but it wasn't good enough against a guy like Bielecki."

Bielecki, 16-6, and Smith, 10-9, were locked in a scoreless duel when Vance Law opened the fifth with a single and moved to third on Shawon Dunston's double.

Smith retired Rick Wrona on an infield pop and struck out Bielecki. Jerome Walton then swung at a 1-0 pitch that eluded catcher Nelson Santovenia and Law scored an unearned run on the passed ball.

Ryne Sandberg led off the eighth inning against reliever John Candelaria with his 30th homer to give the Cubs a 2-0 lead. Sandberg became the first second baseman to hit 30 home runs in one season since California's Bobby Grich did it in 1979.

"To me it looked like a grand slam, a nine-run inning," Cubs manager Don Zimmer said.

"This doesn't leave us in very good shape," Rodgers said. "Not when you lose the first two of a very crucial series."

Pirates 5, Cardinals 2

Bob Walk allowed five hits in 8 2-3 innings for his fourth victory over St. Louis this season and Pittsburgh continued its role of spoiler by beating the Cardinals at Busch Stadium.

AP Laserphoto

Houston Astros manager Art Howe can't bear to watch another loss.

The Pirates, who have won four straight, took two of three in New York over the weekend to shatter the Mets' hopes and are doing the same to the Cardinals.

Walk, 13-10, gave up a single to Milt Thompson with two outs in the ninth and Bill Landrum relieved. Pedro Guerrero then hit his 15th homer.

Joe Magrane, 18-8, lost for the first time since July 25.

Phillies 2, Mets 1

Dickie Thon homered with one out in the ninth inning to lift Philadelphia past New York at Veterans Stadium.

Reliever Don Aase, 1-5, retired pinch-hitter Len Dykstra on a popup to start the ninth, before Thon hit a 2-2 pitch over the left-field wall for his 13th home run — tops among NL shortstops.

Roger McDowell, 4-6, pitched two scoreless innings for the victory. Since being acquired from the Mets on June 18, McDowell has not allowed a run at home and two of his wins are against New York.

Braves 6, Giants 5

Dale Murphy hit a three-run homer off Steve Bedrosian to cap a five-run Atlanta rally in the eighth inning and lift the Braves over San Francisco at Candlestick Park.

Combined with San Diego's victory over Houston, the loss reduced the Giants' lead over the second-place Padres to five games in the NL West.

Murphy hit Bedrosian's second pitch over the right-field fence for his 19th homer after Kelly Downs faltered in relief of Rick Reuschel. It was Murphy's 54th career homer against the Giants and the first run allowed by Bedrosian, 3-7, in 14 appearances at Candlestick since he was acquired from Philadelphia on June 18.

Jay Aldrich, 1-0, pitched three innings for the victory.

Padres 9, Astros 0

Bruce Hurst pitched a two-hitter for his ninth complete game and Roberto Alomar drove in four runs, leading surging San Diego past Houston at Jack Murphy Stadium. The Padres have won 18 of their last 22 games.

The Padres swept the two-game series from the Astros to take over second place in the NL West.

Jim Clancy, 7-12, entered the game 4-0 with a 1.74 ERA against the Padres this season. This time, he allowed five runs and six hits in four innings.

Dodgers 5, Reds 4

Pinch-hitter Mike Marshall's basesloaded, two-run double with none out in the ninth inning off Rob Dibble, 8-5, rallied Los Angeles over Cincinnati at Dodger Stadium

Jay Howell, 5-3, who allowed two runs in the eighth, pitched two innings for the victory.

Indian scout takes over reins

CLEVELAND (AP) — In any other year, the Cleveland Indians' late-season collapse wouldn't have mattered much.

Edwards

This year, it knocked them out of the race in the weak American League East and cost Manager Doc Edwards his job.

Edwards was fired on Tuesday and replaced for the rest of the season by special assignment scout John Hart.

Team president Hank Peters said Cleveland's inability to contend after getting within 1½ games of first place in early August forced him to fire Edwards.

"I think they (Indians' players) had reached the point where they were satisfied with the type of baseball they were playing, and I wasn't," Peters said. "The thing that changed the perspective this year was the nature of the race in the East. We looked at the standings in August and said, 'My gosh, anybody can win this.' "

The Indians were 54-54 on Aug. 4. But in Edwards' final 35 games, they went 11-24, falling to a season-low 14½ games off the pace at 65-78.

"It was pretty hard to make this decision. No one has shown more loyalty or dedication or worked harder at his job than Doc," Peters said.

Hart, 41, was formerly a coach and minor-league manager in the Baltimore organization, where Peters was general manager. Hart was the Orioles' third-base coach last year before Peters hired him as a Cleveland scout in November.

A leading candidate to be Edwards' permanent replacement is Mike Hargrove, a former Cleveland player who managed the Indians' Class AAA Colorado Springs affiliate this year. Hargrove and Hart will be among those considered for the job, Peters said.

Others outside the organization, including former major-league managers John McNamara and Lou Piniella, will also be considered.

Edwards was heading for his home in Great Valley, N.Y., and did not want to discuss his situation immediately, Indians spokesman Bob DiBiasio said. Edwards was offered a chance to stay in the organization.

"He was a players' manager," said outfielder Cory Snyder, whose .222 average contributed to the Indians' problems. "He didn't have a lot of rules. He kind of put the lineup up and let us play.

"We've been going the wrong way the last five or six weeks. Sometimes you have to get on the players. He never got mad at us or yelled at us."

Hitting coach Charlie Manuel said Edwards' attempt to be fair to all his players may have been his undoing.

"Sometimes, I don't think our players knew how good he was to them, how fair he was to them," Manuel said. "That might have been one of his weaknesses. Doc is like a brother to me. He treated me outstanding."

Joe Carter, the Indians' home run and RBI leader, said the players must take the blame for the poor season.

"The manager can't play for you. I don't know if a new manager is the answer," Carter said.

Peters said he decided to make the change now because the Indians will be having organizational planning meetings later this month.

"I didn't feel it would be quite right to have Doc Edwards play a role in that because I had decided he wouldn't be back next year," Peters said.

Edwards was nearing the end of his second one-year contract with the Indians. He replaced Pat Corrales as manager on July 16, 1987, and compiled a record of 173-207.

The Indians had lost eight of their last 10 games going into Tuesday night's game against Detroit, which Cleveland won 1-0 behind Bud Black's five-hitter. The Indians are last in the American League in runs scored.

Swimmer attempts comeback

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mark Spitz will try to recapture one-seventh of his Olympic glory 20 years later.

Spitz, who won an all-time record seven gold medals in the 1972 Olympics at Munich, will try to qualify for the 1992 Games at Barcelona in the 100-meter butterfly, according to a published report.

Spitz won the gold medal in the 100-meter butterfly in the 1972 Olympics in 54.27 seconds, a time which would have been eighth-best in the 1988 Games.

A story in Tuesday's editions of USA Today quoted the 39-year-old Spitz, considered the greatest swimmer in Olympic history, as saying he is training for the U.S. Olympic Trials, which will be held in 2½ years.

"I don't really call this a comeback because I left this sport at the top," Spitz told USA Today. "I want to swim the next three years like there's no tomorrow and, to me, that would be the accomplishment."

A source told The Associated Press that Spitz is, indeed, attempting a comeback and believes he can do it.

It was also learned that a lengthy article on Spitz' comeback attempt, written by Bud Greenspan, will appear in Sunday's Parade Magazine.

Spitz, who will be 42 when the next Olympics are held, has turned down all interview requests, including major television shows.

Spitz not only won seven golds 17 years ago, he set seven world records. But he will focus on just the one event, the 100-meter butterfly, at the present time.

U.S. Swimming Inc. officials confirmed that Spitz was reinstated as an eligible competitor by FINA, the governing body for world aquatic sports.

To compete in the U.S. Trials, Spitz has to attain the Trials qualifying time, which is still undetermined, in a regional meet. Then, he would have to finish first or second in the Trials to qualify for the 1992 Games.

In 1967, Spitz broke three United States and five world records, won five gold medals in the Pan American Games at Winnipeg, Manitoba, and was named Swimmer of the Year by Swimming World magazine.

Holtz addresses crowd noise

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — The topic of crowd noise doesn't belong only on the NFL's agenda.

Ask Lou Holtz about noisy crowds and stand back. The Notre Dame football coach will supply an earful of comments.

Crowd noise is a bugaboo for Notre Dame, especially when the Irish play Michigan. Top-ranked Notre Dame, 1-0, meets the No. 2 Wolverines on Saturday to open Michigan's season, and 105,000 screaming fans will be packed into Michigan Stadium.

The din they create washes out even the strongest-voiced quarterback. Maybe Holtz figures grousing about it makes less sense than trying to shout down the ocean.

"There are a lot of things you can't say," Holtz said Tuesday, but that didn't stop him from saying them.

"We went up there two years ago in front of 105,000 people," he said, recalling Notre Dame's 1987 victory at Michigan. "We were down deep in their territory, and the crowd was screaming and we couldn't hear. So they penalized us for delay of game.

"They came down here last year, and we got charged with a timeout because they can't hear their cadence," Holtz said. "Now, I didn't realize our 60,000 people made that much noise, compared to 105,000. So don't ask me about crowd noise. I can never quite figure that situation out.

"It seems like nobody has problems at Michigan," Holtz added, tongue wedged in cheek. "But Bo has problems at Iowa, he has problems at Ohio State, he has problems at Notre Dame. But nobody else has problems.

"That's all in the judgment of an official," Holtz said. "It doesn't have a thing to do with coaching."

Speaking during the Big 10 coaches' press conference, Schembechler said he might miss Saturday's game if the condition of his 87-year-old mother worsens. Schembechler skipped practice on Monday to travel to Barberton, Ohio, to be with her.

The war of noise between Michigan and Notre Dame once was a more evenly matched contest. Knute Rockne had seen to that.

Royal praises McWilliams effort

AUSTIN (AP) — The football coach with the worst career record at Texas, David McWilliams, is rebuilding Longhorn football the way it should be done, "steadily and solidly," says the former coach with the best record at Texas, Darrell Royal.

Royal, 65, quit in 1976 after fashioning a 20-year record of 167-45-5, the best mark in college football over that period.

McWilliams, a team captain under Royal when Texas won its first national football championship in 1963, is 11-13 in just over two seasons.

The only other Longhorn football coach with a losing career record was Jack Chevigny, 13-14-2 in 1934-36.

"I kind of feel sorry for David, because the program was more run down than anyone realized. I don't think anybody could have taken the athletes that we had on campus and won with them," Royal said in an article in Stampede, a university publication.

McWilliams, a former Texas assistant, was hired from Texas Tech to replace Fred Akers, who was cut loose after his 1986 team finished 5-6. By most accounts, recruiting had slipped during Akers' last few seasons at Texas.

Royal said McWilliams "is taking his lumps now," but redshirting certain players "will make a tremendous difference three years from now."

Darthard out

FORT WORTH (AP) — Texas Christian running back Tony Darthard, who leads the Horn Frogs' offensive attack, will be out for three to four weeks with an injured right knee. team doctors announced Tuesday.

An arthroscopic examination discovered bone chips Tuesday, the school announced.

Fort Hancock remains on top

LUBBOCK (AP) — Defending state six-man football champion Fort Hancock opened the season with a 53-0 walloping of Sierra Blanca and easily held onto the top spot in the six-man football poll, conducted by the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal.

The Mustangs captured five of the six possible first-place votes in balloting by a panel of West Texas sports writers.

Christoval earned the other first-place vote and finished second in the voting. May and Jayton remained third and fourth, respectively.

Strawn, which bopped Woodson 50-13, leapfrogged past Zephyr into fifth place.

Rule, Aquilla, Lazbuddie and Loraine rounded out the poll

Here is this week's ranking, with first place votes in parentheses, record and total points (tabulated on a 10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 basis):

1. Fort Hancock (5) 1-0 59
2. Christoval (1) 1-0 52
3. May 1-0 49
4. Jayton 1-0 39
5. Strawn 1-0 34
6. Zephyr 1-0 32
7. Rule 1-0 20
8. Aquilla 0-0 17
9. Lazbuddie 2-0 12
10. Loraine 1-0 11

Other teams receiving votes: Cherokee 3, Panther Creek 1, Trent 1.

Watson prepares for Ryder trip

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — After winning the 1977 British Open, Tom Watson flew home for a mandatory appearance at Pleasant Valley Country Club.

Now, 12 years later, the biggest money winner in PGA history is back, voluntarily while packed for another transAtlantic trip for next week's Ryder Cup matches against Great Britain.

"I'm here for two reasons," Watson said Tuesday after his arrival for the Bank of Boston Classic, which begins Thursday. "I decided I want to play before the Ryder Cup. I also haven't played here since 1977 and that's been too long. It's good to be back."

Watson, who turned 40 on Sept. 4, had only one complaint as he prepared to hit the putting green.

"My putter was stolen from the country club in Kansas City last Thursday. It's the one I've used for 11 years, since the week before Johnny Mahaffey beat me in a playoff for the PGA championship in 1978."

Jackson working non-stop

By CLIFTON BROWN
1989 N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — From the day Stu Jackson became the Knick coach in July, his thoughts have been directed toward next season.

Jackson went to Jamaica, where he visited Patrick Ewing, the Knick center. He spoke face to face with almost every member of last season's team. He spent 12 days at the Los Angeles Summer League, working with his assistants, Paul Silas and Ernie Grunfeld.

And he spent hours watching basketball videotapes at his home or at his office at SUNY-Purchase.

When the season begins, he will be competing against 26 other coaches with one common goal — winning — and he is determined to succeed.

"I pride myself on how hard I work," said Jackson, who at 33 is the league's youngest coach. "The support I've received since taking this job has been tremendous, and I've really appreciated it.

"But I know some people out there will be skeptical. I guess that's only natural, and I'm not concerned about that. The only thing that will stop the skepticism is to win and to improve this team.

"If people see this team improving, I think any talk about me as the coach will take a back seat. I will only become an issue if we aren't successful. Then people will say, 'See, I told you he's too young.' "

After spending the last two seasons as an assistant to Rick Pitino, Jackson knows the Knick personnel, and their personalities, as well as anyone.

Lawmakers want colleges to disclose graduation rate

By MIKE CHRISTENSEN
Cox News Service

WASHINGTON — Convinced the National Collegiate Athletic Association is dragging its feet on requiring member schools to inform prospective scholarship athletes about their graduation chances, several senators and congressmen want the federal government to step in and require disclosure.

"Now that legislation is pending, the NCAA is talking about releasing graduation-rate data. Talk, but no action," Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., said Tuesday at a Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee hearing on a bill introduced by Bradley and Committee Chairman Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

NCAA executive director Dick Schultz pleaded for time and promised the senators that if the association doesn't pass its own disclosure rule this winter, he would personally lobby for their legislation.

Bradley, a former Princeton and New York Knicks basketball star, was unmoved. "The proposal," he said, "is too little too late."

The lawmakers believe the NCAA has had enough time to deal with reports that some colleges and universities have signed scholarship athletes, drained their talents on field or court and then, in Bradley's words, "discarded them."

The committee released a General Accounting Office study of NCAA data showing that less than five percent of the scholarship basketball players at 30 major colleges and universities actually graduated within five years of their enrollment. At 35 of the 97 schools with Division I-A basketball teams, the graduation rate for basketball players was less than 20 percent.

The football picture was somewhat brighter, according to the GOA report. Only 14 of the 103 schools in Division I-A had less than a 20 percent graduation rate for scholarship football players.

Schultz said that while the GAO study "gets attention and publicity," the data for basketball players was distorted because of the small number of scholarships involved. In some cases, he said, a school's data was based on only one player.

"It's easy to sensationalize and take things out of context," he said.

Though the NCAA has not taken an official position on the Senate legislation, Schultz made clear the unofficial stand: "I think everybody views it as a first step in federal intervention in higher education."

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, said the NCAA and its member schools had promised to make changes after a similar series of hearings five years ago, but took no action. Some schools, he concluded, "are only interested in what the youth can do for the school athletically."

The Senate bill and a House measure introduced by Rep. Tom McMillen, D-Md., a former Atlanta Hawks star, would require colleges and universities receiving any federal aid to report their graduation rates for athletes to potential recruits and to the Department of Education, which would publish the data by sport, sex and race.

"Too many athletes leave college without an education," Kennedy said. "For these students, many of whom are disadvantaged, the promise of intercollegiate sports is a hoax. They give their talent to their team but get nothing in return."

Former National Basketball Association star Oscar Robertson told the committee that college coaches, "are accountable for the money the schools produce, but not accountable for those who produce the money."

He said many talented athletes who don't graduate end up with jobs "that are almost an embarrassment," busing tables in a restaurant or dealing cards in a casino.

However, the pressure on college coaches to produce winning teams, no matter the cost, is "tremendous," Villanova University basketball coach Roland Massimino testified. He said he uses a strict system of study halls, progress reports and even summer school to ensure that all of his players graduate.

"Unfortunately," Massimino said, "there are some coaches who are evaluated by their administration, alumni and the community solely on games won."

Bob Hurley, basketball coach at St. Anthony's High School in industrial Jersey City, N.J., figures that after 17 state championships, he knows his way around college recruiting, how to "sort out the recruiting stories from the recruiting facts."

Many college coaches, Mr. Hurley testified, are "tremendously evasive" about their academic programs. "You ask about graduation rates," he said, "and they'll blame the previous coach."

During a break in the hearings, Hurley said he was sure that veteran high school coaches could guide their players through recruiting.

Sax finds niche with stormy Yanks

By MATT McHALE
1989 Los Angeles Daily News

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Jay Johnstone was standing in the New York Yankees' clubhouse last weekend, wearing a Hawaiian shirt in a crowd of Armani suits and talking about his apartment on Manhattan's Upper East side.

Johnstone, the former Los Angeles Dodger funnyman and now Yankees broadcaster, said adjusting to this new culture is not so tough and pointed toward the locker of second baseman Steve Sax.

"If there was ever a guy you couldn't see out of a Dodger uniform, it was Saxy," Johnstone said. "The beach, the sun, that was him. The only thing is, no one expected this would be the best thing that ever happened to him.

"Someday when he looks back at this place he can say 'This is where I became a man.' The Dodgers never let him be that. He was always the little kid. He has grown up here."

Sax walked into the clubhouse and coaxed Yankees catcher Bob Geren into a five-minute Rodney Dangerfield monologue. Then Sax takes off on the X-rated ramblings of his own hero, comedian Andrew Dice Clay.

If not for the pinstripes and occasional walk through by first baseman Don Mattingly, there is the same grade-school hi-jinks Sax personified in seven years with the Dodgers.

But a closer look shows that Johnstone is right. Even in the Yankees' dismal 1989 season, which continues tonight in the opener of a two-game series with the Angels, Sax has been the club's best player.

He is batting .321, leads the American League in base hits with 188 and has already passed last year's career high of 57 RBI. He has committed just nine errors and for those who remember 1987 when it seemed like Sax couldn't turn a double play, the Yankees lead the league.

But it's more than that. In the swirling madness of lawsuits, fired managers and general chaos that surrounds the Yankees and their owner George Steinbrenner, Sax has emerged as a leader. It isn't something he was seeking, and he admits he has a 7 p.m. flight back to his home in Sacramento the day the season ends. But it happened.

"The people who thought I was nothing more than a joker didn't know me," Sax said. "That is 1-1,000th of my personality. I'm not a guy who called attention to himself, except for some of the clubhouse stuff. I think I'm better known for my effort on the field. I'm not always satisfied with the results, but I am always happy with the effort because I know it's 100 percent."

That's part of the reason he couldn't believe that the Dodgers didn't match the Yankees' three-year, $4.1 million offer last winter. Thirty-four days after helping the Dodgers to a World Series championship, he was house-hunting in New Jersey.

When told last week about the details of catcher Mike Scioscia's new three-year, $5.6 million contract, Sax appeared genuinely happy, saying, "He deserves everything he gets."

But when informed that the contract was based in part on the absence of quality catchers, Sax said quietly, "They didn't have a second baseman, either."

"Jay's right," Sax said later. "During the negotiations it was like, 'This is what we're going to give you, and we don't want to hear anything. We're going to make you the highest paid second baseman. Take it, or we don't want to talk to you.' Stuff like that. Forget that, I was out of there.

"They didn't know me at all. They see a little bit of me having fun, but if they think I'm a little kid, that I don't know business, I have news for them."

But quickly, Sax shifted away from the criticism. He said Pedro Guerrero had the right to rip his former club when they traded him, but didn't know much about Guerrero's comments aimed at manager Tom Lasorda or general manager Fred Claire.

"If that's the way he feels, that's the way he feels," Sax said. "Everybody has their own opinion. I can't say he's wrong. I can't judge him. I don't have any bitter feelings. That's just the way it happened. I'm glad it happened because it gave me a chance to open my eyes. I'm glad I came here."

Ten months after joining the Yankees, Sax says the New York microcosm does not affect him. He has been to Manhattan just once and says the commute from his rented house in Franklin Lakes, N.J., is much easier than the one in Los Angeles was for his wife, Debbie, and their two small children.

"I have a lot more privacy here," he said. "I saw a fox out there and squirrels in our yard. We live in an area where there are three houses on five acres. It's a neat setting and no one knows we live out there. It's great. I drive 25 minutes to work, I drive 25 minutes back. It's not like 55 minutes to an hour from Manhattan Beach, Calif. to Dodger Stadium."

Sax says the hardest part during the past year was leaving long-time friends like Lasorda and Mike Marshall, who he broke in with in 1978 at Lethbridge, Alberta.

Sax says he rarely follows the Dodgers in the box scores, but knows that Marshall's season once again has been marred by injuries.

He has his own concerns with his new club. Sax opened the season batting behind Rickey Henderson, an adjustment from his usual leadoff spot. At first, there were some awkward moments, with Sax fouling off pitches when Henderson had a base stolen.

But the two became a solid team at the top of the Yankees lineup, and Sax said the experience made him better. Henderson was traded to Oakland in early July.

"Batting second did me good because I had to learn to be really selective," Sax said. "I would have to take a pitch with one strike and it made me realize again that I could hit with two strikes. As time went on I became more selective. That was good for me."

He says he has never been bothered by the clubhouse controversy that follows the Yankees almost daily. Sax's unwillingness to comment on the firing of manager Dallas Green and the resignation of general manager Syd Thrift gave the impression that he was a bad quote.

He didn't care.

"I don't get involved in it at all," he said. "If there is something going on, Donnie (Mattingly) will lay it straight. I just tell them I don't have any comment. It makes my job easier not to get involved. It's not my business what this guy is saying or that guy is saying. Just play ball, that's all I'm doing.

"Now, if I was playing every other day and batting eighth, I'd say it would make a difference. But I like (new manager) Bucky Dent. I liked Dallas."

In his mind, the most important thing is winning and playing well. Sax said this season is painfully similar to 1986 when he battled Tim Raines and Tony Gwynn for the NL batting title despite the Dodgers' poor record.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1989

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Encourage others to join your business pursuits in December and you could reap a bonanza. Your ambitious nature will impress an influential person who relies on your fine reputation and sound judgment. Money should not be the deciding factor when choosing between two job offers. Keep your New Year's resolution to maintain good health through diet and exercise. A business or romantic partner is always there for you. Repay this person's loving support with considerate behavior.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Joe Penny, infielder Tim Wallach, actor Nicol Williamson, feminist Kate Millett, "Lone Ranger" Clayton Moore.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A fine offer is part of the picture. Your eye for value is a tremendous business asset. The quality of your work remains high even with your busy schedule. Relax at home tonight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You feel very close to your family now. Your soothing influence will calm troubled waters. Check bank statements carefully as computers can register mistakes. Make a reunion successful.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Learning something first-hand is the best way to acquire new skills. A spiritual awakening will revolutionize your life. Put your emotions in proper perspective. Forget old grievances.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A straightforward attitude makes you a winner. You can charm a friend by helping out. Travel inspires you to do something wonderful. Help those who are eager to learn. Buy necessities only.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Know your own mind before attempting to advise others. Overdue checks come your way. You could be asked to explain a mistake that is erroneously attributed to you. Remain calm and good-humored.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A search for something at a distance requires persistence. Teamwork holds special appeal when an attractive member of the opposite sex is involved. Proceed with cautious optimism.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your expertise can be used to great advantage in community work. Remain in the public eye; you are very much in demand. Be certain you understand an older person's feelings before making changes.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You are developing new talents and being well paid for that expertise. You sense your partner's secrets. Be patient until this person is ready to reveal the inner heart. Renew a friendship.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Show more caution when it comes to borrowing or lending money. Be alert to double meanings when dealing with competitors. The news from loved ones living overseas is reassuring.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Schedules are subject to change today. Your willingness to accommodate others endears you to them. Contact people who can help you get ahead. A long-distance romance works surprisingly well.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Behind your every effort is one objective: to improve the lot of others. You reach a new milestone where your career is concerned. Share the spotlight with those closest to your heart.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Use diplomacy if family members or work associates are obstinate. Teamwork helps to swell profits. Being honest with a close friend pays big dividends. Better communication will improve romance.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
3 NT	Pass	5 NT	Pass
6 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♡

Don't let a simple contract trip you up just because it looks as if it's unbeatable. One little quirk of distribution could jeopardize the result unless you take adequate precautions.

There are still many who are comfortable with an opening bid of three no trump to show a balanced hand of 25-27 points. With 10 points and a five-card suit, North invited a grand slam with his jump to five no trump. However, South settled for a small slam since he held the minimum of 25.

Declarer won the opening heart lead and counted 11 fast tricks—four spades, three hearts, one diamond and three clubs. Since the club suit rated to produce one or two extra tricks, depending on the break, declarer wasted no time.

After clearing the ace and jack of spades from hand, declarer crossed to dummy with the ace of clubs to cash two more spades, on which he discarded diamonds. But when he tried to run clubs, he found he had to surrender a trick to East. That worthy also held a long spade, which was duly cashed for down one.

While declarer was unlucky to find both a 5-2 spade break and the defender with the established spade also holding the long clubs, his main problem was that he tried to run before he was ready to walk. Consider the difference if, after clearing the two high spades from hand, declarer were to lead a club to the ten.

East would win, but she could not harm declarer. South would win any return, cross to the ace of clubs, discard two diamonds on the high spades, and return to hand with a red winner to cash out his clubs and land his small slam.

Reagan reads get-well cards as he recovers from surgery

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Former President Reagan went through get-well cards and messages from Hollywood friends such as Bob Hope, Claudette Colbert and Jimmy Stewart as he continued his recovery from skull surgery.

In addition, Maureen Reagan paid her father a surprise visit, joining Reagan and his wife, Nancy, at lunch Tuesday, said family spokesman Mark Weinberg.

Reagan

Reagan, 78, underwent surgery Friday at St. Marys Hospital to drain fluid that built up on his brain after he was thrown from a horse on July 4. His recovery is progressing as expected, Weinberg said.

"We're still hopeful, if the present rate of progress continues, he will be able to return to California by the end of the week," Weinberg said. "There are no plans at this point for any additional surgery."

LONDON (AP) — The Duchess of York and Prince Andrew are expecting a baby that would be their second child and the sixth grandchild of Queen Elizabeth II.

Duchess of York

"I just want a happy, healthy baby and a friend for Beatrice. It will be nice for Beatrice to have someone to play with," said the former Sarah Ferguson, who is due in March and whose first baby was born 13 months ago.

The red-haired duchess known as "Fergie," who will be 30 on Oct. 15, spoke at a literary luncheon Tuesday hours after the formal announcement by Buckingham Palace. Her husband, also 29, was on duty as a Royal Navy lieutenant at Portland in southwest England.

"Andrew is flying a helicopter somewhere today, but he is naturally delighted," the duchess said. "We are absolutely ecstatic."

Television personality David Frost announced the pregnancy to the 300 guests at the luncheon honoring the duchess as the author of two children's books about a helicopter named Budgie.

If the baby is a boy, the British order of succession will put him ahead of his sister as the fifth in line to the throne, after Prince Charles, his two sons and Prince Andrew.

STOCKTON, Calif. (AP) — Jazz pianist Dave Brubeck will "Take Five" tonight to become the first person inducted into the University of Pacific's new Pantheon of the Arts.

Actor Burgess Meredith, a longtime friend of Brubeck's, will be master of ceremonies for the induction at the independent, 5,800-student university.

Brubeck will show his appreciation by presenting a concert Friday evening with the Stockton Symphony in this city 75 miles east of San Francisco. Proceeds will go toward a Conservatory of Music-Stockton Symphony string scholarship.

Brubeck attended then-College of the Pacific with plans to become a veterinarian. But legend has it that a science professor so often found Brubeck rewriting melodies that wafted through the windows from the music conservatory that he suggested his young charge "just go over there."

Brubeck did, graduating in 1942 as a music major and going on to pioneer a style called progressive jazz with compositions such as "Take Five."

RYE, N.Y. (AP) — Comic strip creators Mort Walker, Will Eisner and the late Dik Browne have been voted into the Hall of Fame of the Museum of Cartoon Art.

Walker

Walker, whose strip "Beetle Bailey" is about Army life, founded the museum in 1974.

Eisner, who drew and wrote "The Spirit" for 10 years, has become one of the leading artists in graphic novels, the museum said.

Browne, who invented "Hagar the Horrible" about a good-natured Viking chief and the family that puts up with him, was known by his professional peers as the "cartoonists' cartoonist," the museum said. He died in June.

The induction ceremony, scheduled for Sept. 22, will bring to 27 the number of cartoonists elected during the past 14 years, the museum said Tuesday.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Most 59-year-old women would be content to have their doctor tell them they look good. But not Mitzi Gaynor.

Gaynor

"What do you mean good? Whatever happened to sensational? What's the matter, you never heard the word magnificent before?"

The exuberant entertainer was pronounced looking good by a doctor who examined her before she left on a lengthy tour as star of the Cole Porter musical "Anything Goes."

She disagreed with the diagnosis after she peeked over his shoulder and saw his report, she said in a recent interview.

Miss Gaynor has appeared in 17 movies, including the film versions of "Anything Goes" and "South Pacific." But she says her real breakthrough in the entertainment business occurred in the 1960s when she became one of the first women to do a one-person show in Las Vegas.

TORONTO (AP) — Actor Donald Sutherland, who plays a South African teacher in the film "A Dry White Season," said a movie with a powerful anti-apartheid message may inflame enough people to take action.

"South Africa is a country that does not care what people in the rest of the world think," Sutherland said Monday at the Toronto Festival of Festivals.

"A Dry White Season," which was favorably received by audiences and critics in its world premiere at the festival, shows how a once-passive Sutherland responds to a series of revolting events.

Also in the film are Marlon Brando, who plays a human rights attorney, and South African actor Zakes Mokae.

The movie has graphic scenes of police violence and torture in South Africa. Its producers say it was difficult to get the film made because some studios shy away from making films with political messages.

"I believe that films can have an effect on social change," said director Euzhan Palcy. "Any little thing can help." Palcy adapted the film from a novel by South African author Andre Brink.

MGM is slated to release "A Dry White Season" in select markets Sept. 20.

Treasury encourages personal savings

Brady urges companies to make long-term investments

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration is gearing up for a major campaign to encourage Americans to save more money and urge U.S. companies to make long-term investments rather than chasing fast-buck takeover deals.

"We've been willing to mortgage our future, to sacrifice quality and to cut corners in the pursuit of the immediate payoff," Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady said Tuesday night. The United States needs to make fundamental changes in its economic affairs or risk losing out to international competitors, he warned.

Brady indicated the administration is considering ways to expand tax incentives to encourage individual savings, proposals to eliminate the double-taxation of stock dividends and initiatives that would encourage corporate managers to focus more on long-term performance.

"Our approach to the challenges of the 1990s and beyond should be to maintain our competitiveness where it's strong and to rebuild it where it has faltered," Brady said in a speech billed as the opening salvo in the administration's new campaign.

Brady said other nations are challenging America's economic leadership because the country has grown complacent with too many corporate executives chasing quick profits rather than investing for long-term performance.

"It worries me when I see many of the best minds in America concentrating on financial engineering rather than laying plans for sound corporate strategies for the future," Brady told members of the American Business Conference, who were invited to dinner at the Treasury Department.

Brady's comments received a generally warm response from the executives.

American Stock Exchange Chairman Arthur Levitt Jr. told Brady that many of his suggestions were similar to proposals by the Business Conference, which earlier this year called for a major government effort to boost the nation's savings rate to lower the cost of capital for U.S. businesses.

Brady, however, conceded that the administration hasn't found an answer to the key problem raised by the proposals — how should they be funded.

Suggestions to expand tax-deferred savings plans such as Individual Retirement Accounts could cost $15 billion over five years, while any proposal to eliminate the double taxation of corporate dividends might cost as much as $40 billion annually.

The 1986 tax law sharply curbed IRA tax benefits for workers who make more than $40,000 a year and are covered by a company retirement plan.

Brady said the administration is currently wrestling with the cost question. He said final decisions probably will not come until President Bush presents his next budget to Congress in January.

"What we have done is commit ourselves to the kind of program that I have outlined," he said. "We are going to make it work."

Part of the administration's competitiveness program includes the president's push to lower the capital gains tax rate.

On Tuesday, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas and the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, proposed offering deductible IRAs to all taxpayers as a substitute for reducing the tax on capital gains.

Brady said expanding IRAs is being reviewed by the administration, but he said the president remains committed to getting a cut in the capital gains rate.

Brady said the administration's proposals were aimed at lowering the cost of businesses to raise needed capital to make long-term investment.

"If we provided for more of our domestic investment needs with our savings, we'd have to import less capital from abroad, thus improving our trade balance," Brady said.

Brady said the administration will be looking at a number of options "that give people the incentive to save, instead of to consume."

Neiman catalog offers wild west for Christmas

DALLAS (AP) — Neiman Marcus, seller of sumptuous fantasies for 81 years, is inviting its well-heeled clientele to put on a pair of spurs and recapture the wild west.

The Dallas-based retailer Tuesday began delivery of its Christmas catalog, the annual wishbook of the wealthy that is filled this year with gifts, tack to teepee salt and pepper shakers, for aspiring cowboys and cowgirls.

For one lucky cowpoke with $108,000, Neiman Marcus will sell a hand-tooled saddle by Edward H. Bohlin Company lavishly furnished with sterling silver and 18-karat gold.

A cowboy ain't a cowboy without a horse, so for $4,000 and up Neiman Marcus is offering a selection of champion bloodline painted horses from the Real Ranch in Kerrville, Texas. Buyers can choose from 1989 weanlings and up — from black to bay.

Those wishing to relive the great cattle drives of the wild west can reserve a pony to chase herd a weekend at the Y.O. Ranch, also near Kerrville. There is room for 150 people to attend the ranch's 110th anniversary in April 1990.

"I do not recommend this for pussyfooters," said Jan Roberts, a Neiman Marcus spokeswoman.

TI unveils pocket-sized computer

SUNNYVALE, Calif. (AP) — A group of former Texas Instruments Inc. executives have unveiled a one-pound personal computer that fits in a jacket pocket.

The Poqet PC can run for 100 hours on two penlight batteries, officials of Poqet Computer Corp. of Sunnyvale, Calif. said Tuesday in launching the product.

The Silicon Valley start-up company termed the product the "first truly portable personal computer."

"It's clearly going to define what we mean by pocket PC from here on," said Tim Bajarin, industry analyst with Creative Strategies Research International in San Jose, Calif.

"I consider it a rather historic event."

A keyboard incorporates keys large enough for a touch-typer to use at roughly two-thirds of normal speed, or fast enough to type short stories or documents, officials said.

"The Poqet PC will open the market for portables, allowing people who are unhappy with the current generation of heavy and inconvenient machines to access a truly portable, full-function computer" that runs industry-standard software, Dr. Stav Prodromou, the company's president and chief executive officer, said.

Slump squelches orders for 1990 cars

DETROIT (AP) — Houston auto dealer Alan Helfman says he will scale back his orders for 1990 model cars and trucks even though he has just five 1989 models left on his lot. He isn't alone.

Dealers across the country say they plan to trim their orders for the next model year's vehicles, due out next month, because of pressure from their own inventories, sagging sales and an uncertain economic outlook.

"I think we will be a little more conservative this year," Helfman, general manager of River Oaks Chrysler-Plymouth, said Tuesday. "When you look at everything, you've got to really forecast and you've got to be conservative."

After a few strong sales periods recently, car and light truck sales through the end of last month were running 3.7 percent behind last year's pace. Although that's better than at the end of March, when sales were down 8.9 percent, industry observers expect the market to contract in the early 1990s.

Sales figures for the first 10 days of September are due today from the major domestic automakers.

"There's a trend to get to a lower inventory," said Jake Kelderman, executive director of industry affairs for the National Automobile Dealers Association in McLean, Va.

He estimated that dealers would aim for a 45- to 60-day supply of cars on their lots in the coming year. A 60-day supply used to be the norm, he said.

Each of the automakers has predicted 1989 model-year sales to be well below the previous year's 15.8 million.

The 1990 model year could be worse yet, although earlier forecasts of an economic recession have brightened. Interest rates, which determine how much dealers pay to buy cars on credit from the manufacturers, have been relatively steady recently.

"Manufacturers are cutting and slicing and dicing. They're expecting very, very hard times," Helfman said. "It scares me that if that's going to be the case, you've got some blood ready to be spilled."

Helfman said he planned to order to maintain a 45-day supply in the new model year, down slightly from previous years. He says he will rely more on swapping cars with other dealers as orders come in.

Recipe ripoff nets P&G $125 million

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Three major cookie manufacturers have been ordered to pay Procter & Gamble Co. $125 million to settle a 5-year-old patent infringement case in Delaware's U.S. District Court.

Chief U.S. District Judge Joseph J. Longobardi signed a consent judgment Tuesday, saying Keebler Co. of Elmhurst, Ill., Nabisco Brands Inc. of East Hanover, N.J., and Frito-Lay Inc. of Dallas, Texas, infringed on Procter & Gamble's patent for homestyle cookies marketed under the Duncan Hines label.

The case was scheduled to go to trial in October, but an agreement among the companies was reached late Monday night that says Procter & Gamble's patents are valid and enforceable, according to Donald P. Tassone, spokesman for the Cincinnati-based company.

The settlement is believed to be one of the larger patent infringement awards on record.

Keebler is to pay $52.9 million for the Soft Batch cookie it introduced in 1984; Nabisco will pay $52.9 million for its Almost Home Brand; and Frito-Lay will pay $19.1 million for its Grandmas Rich and Chewy product.

Midlander opens software store

By MELLA McEWEN

A new software store, ACE SOFTWARE, has opened in the former Lee Optical location at the corner of Andrews Highway and Texas.

Owned by Midland native Derek Lane, who is now a computer programmer in Dallas, it is run by his parents Royce and Nelda and other family members.

Lane explains that the store sells books on software as well as a large selection of software programs, both game and business applications. And, he says, all items are discounted 5 to 45 percent. If a program isn't in stock, he says, they will order it.

One of the programs Ace carries is Dock-easy, an accounting application sold by Insilco, which is a unit of Wagner and Brown of Midland.

Hours are from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Just opened for business is TRAFFIC GRAPHICS, a yard sign business.

It was started by Midlander Donna Cox and her long-time friend Shelly Schroder.

The two are creating signs for all ocasions, from births to get well to birthdays, anniversarys, congratulations to "Will You Marry Me" signs.

Cox says she got the idea for the business after the birth of her third child, when a yard sign was put at her house. "I thought it was a great business for a Mom," she explains.

She charges $10 for the first day and $3 a day after that; she will deliver and pick up the signs.

Traffic Graphics can be reached by calling 697-7566.

PERMIAN DISTRIBUTING INC. has begun offering Keystone and Keystone Light, the two newest brands by Coors Brewing Co. to the Permian Basin.

Both Keystone and Keystone Light are cold-filtered beers packaged in cans. Coors says a specially-lined can gives the beer the taste of bottled beer.

Keystone is packaged in 12- and 16-ounce six-pack cans; 12-ounce 12-pack cans and 12-ounce 24-pack cans. It will be carried in all states but Indiana.

Oil prices turn higher

From Staff and Wire Reports

Oil prices turned higher today, recouping Monday's loss.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, October contracts for West Texas Intermediate were up 18 cents to $19.88 at midmorning. The contract lost 6 cents to $19.70 Tuesday.

The session was marked by lackluster trading Tuesday, reflecting continued concerns about overproduction among some OPEC member nations.

Among refined petroleum products traded on the exchange, wholesale unleaded gasoline for October delivery lost 0.18 cent at 56.89 cents a gallon, after falling 0.02 cent Monday.

October heating oil, which slipped 0.73 cent the previous session, ended down 0.64 cent at 55.37 cents a gallon.

James Steel, an energy analyst at Refco Inc. in New York, attributed Tuesday's market downturn to internal market influences and continued concerned that several members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries were exceeding cartel quotas.

For instance, he quoted reports that Iran and Iraq were pumping higher levels of crude oil after recently upgrading production equipment.

However, Steel said, strong domestic demand was keeping crude prices from falling even further than they have in recent days.

Technical factors send dollar lower

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell against major currencies in light European trading early today ahead of the release of economic figures due later in the week. Gold prices rose.

Dealers said the dollar was driven lower by technical factors in the absence of news, then stabilized in late-morning trading.

U.S. retail trade figures for August were due to be released Thursday. Trade figures for July were due Friday, as well as producer prices and industrial production for August.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell to a closing 146.70 Japanese yen from 146.73 yen at Tuesday's close. Later, in London, it edged back up to 146.75 yen.

In London, the British pound rose to $1.5526 from $1.5470 late Tuesday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $358.90 a troy ounce, up from $358.75 bid late Tuesday. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $358.80.

In Zurich, the bid price was $358.90, up from $358.55 bid late Tuesday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold closed at a bid $359.93, unchanged from Tuesday's closing bid price.

Silver edged up in London to a bid price of $5.09 a troy ounce from $5.08 bid late Tuesday.

Stocks eke out 2.8 point gain

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market managed its second gain in the past six sessions on Tuesday as trading picked up slightly from Monday's snail-like pace.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 2.85 to 2,707.26 after losing 5.13 points in the previous session.

With no major influences on the market, stock prices fluctuated in a narrow range except for an early surge that briefly carried the Dow Jones industrials up about 14 points.

Stock prices had fallen in four of the five sessions preceding Tuesday's rise amid continuing concern about the outlook for interest rates and the economy.

Advancing issues outnumbered declining ones by nearly 4 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 824 up, 632 down and 535 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 142.14 million shares, up from 126.02 million in the previous session, which had been the slowest day since July 3.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Regulators seek $847 million from MCorp

DALLAS (AP) — A suit claims MCorp owes federal regulators $847 million from transactions between the company and its 20 bank subsidiaries, which later were seized by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

The claims filed in Houston bankruptcy court Monday allege MCorp "enriched" itself at the expense of the failed banks.

MCorp officials would not comment on the FDIC claims. In a prepared statement, company spokesman Joseph Stroop said, "Based on a preliminary assessment, the company believes the claims filed by the FDIC far exceed amounts which can be justified or substantiated."

The FDIC declared 20 of MCorp's 25 banks insolvent earlier this year and sold them to Banc One Corp. of Columbus, Ohio, at an estimated cost of $2 billion. The former MCorp banks now operate as Bank One Texas.

Court reverses Occidental award to Coastal

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — Occidental Petroleum Corp. said Tuesday that an appeals court had reversed a decision that required the company to pay more than $412 million to Coastal Corp., a Houston-based gas and oil company.

Occidental said the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed a 1986 District Court ruling under which an Occidental subsidiary, Natural Gas Pipeline Company of America, was found to have breached a contract for the purchase of gas from a Coastal subsidiary, Colorado Interstate Gas Co.

Natural Gas Pipeline was also found to have attempted to monopolize the market for the long-distance transportation of natural gas produced in Wyoming.

The court let stand a tort ruling under which Occidental was found liable for about $8 million, the company said.

FDIC more than ready to deal on repos

Property inventory may be $500 billion

HOUSTON (AP) — If you're looking for an unfinished luxury home with no utilities but such extras as graffiti declaring "Led Zeppelin Rules," Frank Norris has just the place for you.

Norris and an army of bureaucrats like him are ready to deal. They work for the Resolution Trust Corp., an agency created Aug. 9 when President Bush signed legislation bailing out the savings and loan industry.

Norris, 55, manages Commonwealth Savings Association, a Houston thrift institution with $1.6 billion in assets and $600 million in red ink.

Along with others working for the RTC, he's trying to sell thousands of repossessed properties the government is inheriting from as many as 600 failed thrift institutions.

The properties range from run-of-the-mill to the exotic; from apartment buildings, shopping centers and office towers to a windmill farm, a buffalo sperm bank and the entire town of Lehigh Acres, Fla., population 25,000.

No one knows for certain how much it's all worth. The government's own estimate — $300 billion to $500 billion — leaves a wide margin for error.

But even at the low end of the range, the RTC, when running at full capacity, will in effect be the largest financial institution in the country, twice as large as Citicorp, the nation's biggest bank.

Already, lawyers, accountants and real estat specialists are swarming, hoping to secure contracts as consultants helping regulators manage and sell the property. Speculators are circling, hoping to buy cheap.

A handful of newsletters devoted to the covering the agency have sprung up. One, the Resolution Trust Reporter, advertised for subscribers at $398 a year by asking "Who's Goig to Cash in When the Resolution Trust Corp. Opens Its Doors? HOW ABOUT YOU?"

Consumer watchdogs warn the task is so mammoth and so difficult that scandal is inevitable, scandal dwarfing the troubles now plaguing the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Whether or not these dire predictions prove true largely depends on Norris and other federal agents managing 260 of the most deeply insolvent S&Ls already under government control in 33 states.

Theya re the antithesis of the high-fliers who drove the S&Ls into the red by making fraudulent loans and spending depositors' funds on lavish parties and corporate jets.

On the job, they may sit in paneled executive suites and oversee hundreds of employees. But on their own time, they drive rented cars, live out of suitcases and eat in cafeterias for lunch.

How well they perform likely will be the critical factor in deciding whether the government successfully completes the S&L bailout without turning to the taxpayer for more money.

If the RTC sells the property it is inheriting too fast or too cheaply, it could ruin real estate values across the oil-producing regions of the Southwest, further narrowing the taxpayers' chances of recovering part of their contributions to the bailout, estimated at $1,000 each.

If it keeps the property too long, maintenance and other costs could quickly pile up, offsetting any gain realized by holding out for a higher price.

The problem is that much of it is virtually unsellable at any price. Nevertheless, Norris has banished the word "problem" from his vocabulary, substituting "opportunity."

"We have plenty of opportunities. Absolutely!" he says with the kind of overly cheerful tone used only by a dentist or a man who dismantles banks for a living.

Commonwealth's contribution to the real estate mess is about $670 million in repossessed property. While Norris has none of the out-of-the ordinary repossessions that grab headlines, what he does have amply illustrates the "opportunities" ahead for the RTC. Here's a sampling:

■ Two single-family homes in a prosperous Northwestern Houston neighborhood. Tract mansions, they were built on speculation and repossessed, still unfinished, after the developer couldn't make the payments on a $794,00 loan.

In one, swarms of mosquitos swarm through broken windows and buzz over the glass-strewn floors of what would have been an elegant living room with a stone fireplace and cathedral ceiling. In the other, an empty beer can, candle drippings and graffiti — "led Zeppeli Rules" — show that local youths have made a hangout of what would have been a luxury kitchen encircled by maple-stained cabinets. At most, the homes are now worth $100,000 each.

■ A shopping strip not far from Houston's posh Galleria mall. Cars cluster in one end of the parking lot around an eight-theater cinema. At the otehr end, diners stroll from a cafeteria. Between the two stand empty stores, a long expanse of concrete and blank glass. The strip is possibly worth les than half of Commonwealth's $15 million loan.

■ A vacant lot, just off Houston's busy Southwest Freeway. A developer borrowed $14 million, hoping to build an office tower on the spot, but the deal fel through.

All three properties are far from ready for sale. The would-be luxury homes, for instance, have deteriorated so sharply that it could cost more to make them habitable and attractive than it would to buy similar homes in good shape.

The shopping center encroaches on an adjoining property, and the government would have to pay lawyers to clear up the title problem before sale.

Multiply Commonwealth's problems 30-fold to get an idea of the magnitude of the S&L mess in Houston. Multiply Commonwealth's problems 700-fold to get an appreciation of the problem nationally.

The size of the job is daunting. The last government foray into S&L property management — the Federal Asset Disposition Association — was much smaller but degenerated into a mess of allegations of mismanagement and self-dealing. In three years, FADA sold only $1 billion of its $5 billion in assets. It is being dismantled and what it couldn't sell is going to the RTC.

Texas Air facing critical meeting

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Air Corp., the nation's largest airline company, is at a critical point in its history as Chairman Frank Lorenzo faces shareholders here today at a long-delayed annual meeting.

Eastern Airlines, one of its two main subsidiaries, is in its seventh month of a bitter strike and tortuous bankruptcy proceeding. The Miami-based carrier recently disclosed to creditors that it will have about $370 million less in cash by year's end than first projected, having abandoned a plan to sell its Latin American routes.

As a result, Texas Air may underwrite some of Eastern's operations — a prospect unlikely to cheer Texas Air shareholders. A hearing is scheduled for today in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in New York on a proposal for Texas Air to pay part of a $100 million Eastern pension payment due Friday.

While Eastern has been buffeted since early March by the strike by Machinists union members, pilots and flight attendants, its sister carrier, Continental Airlines, appeared to enjoy stability and even turned a modest profit. But in a surprise move, Lorenzo announced Aug. 24 that he was considering selling all or part of the Houston-based carrier.

The "noise" at strike-torn Eastern was hurting non-union Continental's business, Lorenzo recently explained.

"We have to be responsible to our shareholders," he said. "We have an obligation to look for alternatives."

Texas Air, which Lorenzo aggressively built from a small intrastate carrier into an airline empire, could be shaken to its foundations. If Continental were sold, many observers believe the wily airline chief would move to liquidate troubled Eastern and get out of the business altogether.

"The question is whether he has had enough, whether he's having serious misgivings about staying in the industry, period," said Louis Marckesano, an airline analyst with Janney Montgomery Scott Inc., a Philadelphia brokerage. "This may be some sort of a swan song."

It may be an opportune moment for such a departure. The airline industry has been gripped by a takeover frenzy in recent months, catapulting stocks of major carriers to high altitudes.

A group led by California investor Alfred Checchi recently acquired Northwest Airlines parent NWA Inc. for $4 billion, while United Airlines parent UAL Corp. is being ardently pursued by investor Marvin Davis and a pilot-management group allied with British Airways PLC.

The wave has swept up Texas Air stock, too, despite the strife at Eastern. The company's shares have soared from about $9 or $10 at the beginning of the year to near $20 currently. They rose 37.5 cents Tuesday to close at $19.62½ on the American Stock Exchange.

In the second quarter, Texas Air posted a $109.3 million net loss, as Eastern's $129.3 million loss outweighed a $32.1 million profit at Continental. The $109.3 million loss compares with a $255.9 million loss for the same quarter last year.

Texas Air's revenue dropped to $1.4 billion from $2.1 billion in the quarter, reflecting the sharp reduction in Eastern's operations during the May-July period.

There was a slim ray of hope this week for a possible resolution of the Eastern debacle as a federal mediator met in Washington on Monday with company officials and with leaders of the pilots union Tuesday.

U.S. bowing out of supersonic consortium

By SUSAN SMITH
Hearst News Service

SEATTLE – Major American airplane makers have declined to join the Japanese and Europeans in a consortium to develop the next-generation supersonic airplane.

The Battelle Institute, organizer of the consortium, says the Americans' refusal may thwart development of a plane to succeed the Concorde.

"The U.S. manufacturers – Boeing and McDonnell Douglas and Pratt & Whitney and General Electric – came to the conclusion that there didn't seem to be a driving need for an independent organizing body for putting together a consortium," said Mike Henderson, Boeing's manager of high speed civil transport (HSCT).

"We decided that if the supersonic airplane was to be built, the American manufacturers could build it, and if there was a good reason to have a consortium, we could put it together ourselves," he said.

While some have interpreted the move as an attempt by domestic manufacturers to protect their proprietary technology, Henderson said Boeing was motivated more by a lack of firm plans for the next-generation jet.

"Battelle did a very nice job organizing some symposiums, but as far as going the next step – Battelle being the organizer of a consortium – there didn't seem to be a necessity for that, especially since we are as unsure about the airplane as we are," Henderson said.

Plans for the consortium have been brewing for the past three years at Battelle's Center for High Speed Commercial Flight in Columbus, Ohio.

Director James Loomis said he had letters of intent from five European and four Japanese companies to participate, but their cooperation was contingent upon an American airframe and engine manufacturer joining in.

"General Electric was prepared to do so, and they helped in promoting the program in the U.S. among airframe manufacturers, but their efforts were not successful," Loomis said. "Without them, the idea of international cooperation is kind of a hollow point."

Loomis declined to name any of the companies involved, but two European concerns often mentioned in connection with the HSCT are British Aerospace and Aerospatiale in France. The Japanese also have committed billions to develop such a plane.

Battelle, which calls itself the world's largest private research and development company, has spent about $770,000 so far on the project, and will now "pull back out of a heavy investment mode," Loomis said.

The high-speed transport, which would travel at between two and three times the speed of sound, could cost more than $17.5 billion to develop and would sell for $250 million to $400 million apiece. The companies were looking at six or eight years to get the consortium in place.

COOKIE—

Once the lawsuit was filed, the formulas for the three products were changed, ending the patent infringement.

After Procter & Gamble test-marketed its soft cookie in January 1983, the three competitors pirated the formula and beat Procter & Gamble to the market.

The company filed the patent infringement suit against the three in 1984. The competitors countered that the patent was not valid.

"It was very frustrating to see our competitors, who were already in the cookie business, beating us to market in most of the country with the very product we had developed and patented," said John E. Pepper, president of Procter & Gamble.

The cookie brand never reached its projected market share, Tassone said.

"The settlement will help, but it will not make up for what we lost," he said.

Nabisco said it was "delighted the protracted legal battle was settled and that the settlement will not hurt parent RJR Nabisco's earnings.

John F. Manfredi, senior vice president of Nabisco Brands, said Nabisco had "clearly won the cookie war in the marketplace, and was the "category winner."

Frito-Lay said the settlement will be paid by insurance and will have no effect on the earnings of its parent company, PepsiCo Inc.

Stuart L. Greenblatt, spokesman for Keebler, said homestyle cookies have not been the market blockbuster that was originally anticipated.

NEIMAN—

To give prospective ropers across the country an equal shot at the event, Neiman Marcus has set 11 a.m. CDT Oct. 18 as the time it will begin taking reservations. The weekend costs $627 for a double occupancy room.

"Texas is really in right now," Ms. Roberts said. "From the president to Lonesome Dove, Texas and the west are in vogue. And because Neiman Marcus is from Texas, we thought we should get back to our roots and pay tribute to our heritage."

The catalog includes more whimsical gifts with a western flavor including teepee salt and pepper shakers and a replica of the badge deputized lawmen once fashioned.

In recent years, Neiman Marcus has a spangled cat, his-and-her mummy cases and giant hot air balloons.

The catalog always contains several pages of furs and a coat of Russian lynx bellies selling for $150,000 ranks among the finest the store has ever offered, Ms. Roberts said.

For fisherman who can't wait to see what they are reeling in, an 8-foot glass-bottom boat is available for $1800.

The catalog does not leave out the pet or pet lover. In a section titled "From Santa Paws," the catalog features townhouses for tomcats and beds for bulldogs along with a cat collar lined with fish-shaped pearls.

The 130-page catalog does not simply cater to those just under royalty either, Ms. Roberts said.

"This year we have six pages dedicated to gifts for $26 or less," she said.

South Africa allows huge, peaceful, protest march

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — More than 20,000 people joined Archbishop Desmond Tutu and Cape Town's white mayor today in a march protesting police brutality after the government ordered police to allow the demonstration.

It was one of the largest anti-government marches ever in South Africa, and the only one in recent years to receive official authorization.

"We have scored a great victory for justice and peace," Tutu told a crowd of white, black and mixed-race protesters who packed City Hall after the march.

He said acting President F.W. de Klerk should have been present "to see what this country is going to become ... a technicolor country."

After singing "We Shall Overcome," jubilant marchers set off in rows of six from St. George's Anglican Cathedral along a major downtown street behind Tutu, Mayor Gordon Oliver and the Rev. Allan Boesak, president of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches.

Youths chanted freedom songs and waved banners that said, "Peace In Our City!" and "Stop Killing Our People!"

The parade ended at City Hall, where about 1,800 people managed to fit inside and about 20,000 others stood outside in a parking lot.

Police let the march proceed unhindered, a sharp contrast to protest marches two weeks ago in Cape Town that were broken up by riot squads using whips, batons and a water cannon that sprayed purple-dyed water.

Tutu and other activists have denounced the use of force against peaceful protesters. They also have blamed police for the deaths of at least 23 people in Cape Town's black and mixed-race townships during violent protest of the Sept. 6 parliamentary elections, which excluded blacks.

Police defended their actions and said only about 15 people died, most in clashes not involving policemen.

Protest demonstrations normally are outlawed in South Africa, and the Cape Town police commander, Maj. Gen. Phillipus Fourie, had vowed last week that he would stop the march. However, Cape Town's white mayor said today he had appealed to the national government and received permission for the march.

The decision to grant approval was announced by de Klerk, who said he received assurances the protest would be peaceful.

De Klerk said he hoped to convince black leaders that he was sincere in wanting to negotiate a new constitution in which the disenfranchised black majority would gain political rights.

The far-right Conservative Party, the largest white opposition group in Parliament, said today that approval of the march was "capitulation" to radicals.

Oliver and Tutu received standing ovations inside City Hall, and youths lauded the mayor in a chant usually used to honor leaders of the outlawed African National Congress guerrilla movement.

"Today, we all have the freedom of the city," Oliver said.

De Klerk's National Party narrowly won the election after offering to negotiate a new constitution that would give limited political rights to South Africa's 28 million black majority, which cannot vote under the nation's apartheid laws. The nation's 5 million whites also control the economy and maintain separate districts, schools and health services.

As the marchers assembled, a new session of Parliament began at the parliamentary complex near St. George's. On Thursday, the electoral college is expected to elect de Klerk to a five-year term.

In the parliamentary elections, the Nationalists suffered their worst showing since coming to power on an apartheid platform in 1948 but held onto their majority in the Parliament.

De Klerk said police were forced to into confrontations on election night because militants violently prevented people from voting. He said any police officer found to have used excessive force would face "remedial steps."

Although Tutu and activists say at least 23 people were killed, police say 15 people died, 10 of them in fighting among black factions.

The government announced Tuesday that Maj. Gen. Jaap Joubert, a senior police investigator, had been appointed to lead an investigation of the allegations of police brutality.

Lt. Gregory Rockman, a mixed-race police officer who has created a furor by accusing riot squad members of brutality, said he was not satisfied and proposed that a judge be appointed to oversee a public inquiry.

A huge crowd gathers in downtown Cape Town, South Africa, today outside St. Georges Cathedral before marching to City Hall. The marchers, ranging from schoolchildren to businessmen, were expressing their outrage at the repressive measures of the South African government and their support of peaceful change.

Australian town hopping mad over toad invasion

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Toads that grow to the size of dinner plates are invading Brisbane, Australia's third-largest city, and local authorities are planning an elaborate program to get rid of them.

"For toads in Brisbane, this summer is shaping up as a nightmarish scene from the Texas Chainsaw Massacre," the Sydney Morning Herald said Tuesday, the day the eradication project was announced.

Plans include ringing the city's suburbs with recordings of the rattling call the male toad uses to attract females. When the unsuspecting females arrive, trappers will shove them into plastic bags and freeze them, said Greg Stegman, a city councilman in charge of the eradication plan.

Residents who find toads around their homes are being advised to sprinkle detergent on them because it "does the job quickly," Stegman said.

White SWAPO official's death linked to white supremacists

WINDHOEK, Namibia (AP) — A gunman killed a leader of the guerrilla movement for Namibian independence, and a Namibian newspaper today said callers claiming to represent a white supremacist group took responsibility.

Anton Lubowski was shot in the head Tuesday night in front of his home by an assailant who drove away in a red sedan, said police Lt. Kierie du Rand.

He said authorities had begun a manhunt. Police today offered a "substantial" reward but did not specify an amount.

Lubowski, 37, was the only white top official for the South-West Africa People's Organization. The nationalist group has waged a bush war since 1966 against South African rule of the territory.

The group's president, Sam Nujoma, is to end 30 years in exile Thursday and the group's election director, Hage Geingob, said today neither the slaying or new threats against Nujoma would change his plans to return to Namibia.

South Africa, which has ruled Namibia for 74 years, has agreed to grant independence in the territory under United Nations supervision. Elections are set for early November and independence is expected early next year.

Gwen Lister, editor of the pro-guerrilla newspaper The Namibian, said she received two phone calls from men who said they belonged to the White Wolves and claimed that the organization killed Lubowski.

In South Africa, men identifying themselves as Whites Wolves have carried out several attacks on blacks and anti-apartheid activists.

Geingob described Lubowski as a "brave young man, violently cut down at a time when we are talking about democratic elections."

"The murder of Mr. Lubowski strikes a blow against not just one political party, but against the process of peaceful reconciliation," said the U.S. Liaison Office in Windhoek.

The British Embassy in South Africa said Lubowski "would have had an important role to play in an independent Namibia."

Israelis consider plan

JERUSALEM (AP) — The nation's four top leaders today discussed an Egyptian plan calling on Israel to trade occupied lands for peace.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's senior aide, however, dismissed the plan and suggestions for Israeli-Palestinian peace talks in Cairo.

Also today, a car belonging to U.S. Deputy Counselor David Winn was set ablaze in front of his house in annexed east Jerusalem. Police said the car was severely damaged, and blamed Palestinian "nationalists."

In the occupied Gaza Strip, masked Arabs stabbed to death a Palestinian suspected of collaborating with Israel officials, Palestinian reports said.

Vietnam releases remains

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam has turned over the remains of three more Americans killed in the Vietnam War, the official Vietnam News Agency reported Tuesday.

The report said the remains were handed over Monday in Hanoi to a representative of the U.S. Joint Casualty Resolution Center.

Since 1974, Vietnam has turned over the remains of 394 Americans, the agency said.

As of late last month, the U.S. government has said there are 2,340 servicemen still listed as missing from the war in Indochina.

Guatemalan kidnapped

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — A human rights organization said Tuesday that another student has been kidnapped, the 10th such disappearance in nearly two months.

The Mutual Support Group, comprising relatives of missing people, said in a statement that Eduardo Antonio Lopez Palencia, 24, a student of chemistry and pharmacology from San Carlos University, was kidnapped Sunday.

Palencia's girlfriend contacted them to report the abduction, the statement said.

TO ALL INTERESTED PERSONS AND PARTIES

You are hereby notified of the opportunity for written public comment concerning the Construction Permit Application No. 19556 by Midland Memorial Hospital to construct a Special Waste Incinerator in Midland, Midland County, Texas. The proposed location is 2200 West Illinois Avenue. This facility proposes to emit the following air contaminants: Nitrogen Oxides, Carbon Monoxide, Hydrogen Chloride, and Particulate Matter including Lead. Before a permit can be issued for this facility, all emission sources must demonstrate compliance with all Rules and Regulations of the Texas Air Control Board and all applicable Federal Regulations. This includes the application of "best available control technology" to each emission source and compliance with all ambient air quality standards.

A copy of all materials submitted by the applicant is available for public inspection at the Texas Air Control Board Regional Office at 1901 East 37th Street, Suite 101, Odessa, Texas 79762, telephone 915-367-3871, and at the Texas Air Control Board, 6330 Highway 290 East, Austin, Texas 78723. All interested parties may inspect these materials and submit written comments to the Executive Director of the Texas Air Control Board. Any person who may be affected by emissions of air contaminants from the proposed facility may request a contested case hearing from the Board on the construction permit application pursuant to Section 3.271(c) of the Texas Clean Air Act. All comments and hearing requests must be received in writing by October 14, 1989. All written comments submitted to the Executive Director shall be considered in determining whether to issue or not to issue the permit. All comments will be made available for public inspection at the Texas Air Control Board office in Austin.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN To the public and all interested persons that under the authority of Title 3, Oil and Gas, Subtitles A, B, and C, Texas Natural Resources Code, and Chapters 26, 27, and 29 of the Texas Water Code, the Railroad Commission of Texas will hold a hearing on SEPTEMBER 28, 1989, at 9:00 a.m. at William B. Travis State Office Building, 1701 N. Congress Avenue, Austin, Texas. The hearing will be conducted in conformity with the Administrative Procedure and Texas Register Act, TEX. REV. CIV. STAT. ANN. art. 6552-13a (Vernon Supp. 1988). For room assignment, on the date of the hearing please check the bulletin board located in the 1st Floor lobby. Persons planning to attend this hearing are urged to contact the applicant (see service list) immediately prior to the hearing date to be sure that the hearing will proceed on the scheduled date.

This hearing will be held to consider the application of BP Exploration, Inc. for approval of the Unitization and Secondary Recovery Program for the Southwest River Unit, Katz, Katz (5100) and Katz (Day) Fields, Stonewall County, Texas.

Applicant has in excess of 65% of the royalty interests and 85% of the working interests approving the Unitization.

A copy of unit agreement is on file with the Docket Services Section, Legal Division of the Railroad Commission of Texas.

If a continuation is necessary, this hearing will proceed at the William B. Travis State Office Building, 1701 N. Congress Avenue, Austin, Texas, and, to the extend possible, on subsequent working days. The room number and exact time of the continuation will be announced on the record in this proceeding and recorded with Docket Services, Legal Division, Railroad Commission of Texas.

PURSUANT TO SAID HEARING, the Commission will enter such rules, regulations, and orders as in its judgment the evidence presented may justify.

Any request for postponement of this hearing must be received no later than four (4) working days prior to the scheduled date shown above. Copies of such request must be forwarded to all parties shown on the service list.

TO APPEAR in support of or in opposition to this proceeding, a party other than the applicant must file with Docket Services, Legal Division, at least five (5) days in advance of the hearing date, a notice of intent to appear.

A list of the names and addresses of those persons receiving notice of this hearing is contained in the Commission's file on this proceeding and is available for inspection at the Railroad Commission's offices in the William B. Travis State Office Building, 1701 North Congress Avenue, Austin, Texas 78701.

ALL EXHIBITS FILED AS A PART OF THE RECORD IN THIS CAUSE MUST BE SUBMITTED IN DUPLICATE. DATA IN COMMISSION RECORDS MAY BE INCORPORATED BY REFERENCE, BUT THE REFERENCE MUST BE SPECIFIC, AND IF IT INCLUDES EXHIBITS FILED IN PRIOR PROCEEDINGS BEFORE THE COMMISSION, A COPY OF SUCH EXHIBIT PROPERLY IDENTIFIED SHALL BE SUBMITTED FOR THIS RECORD.

The latest J.D. Power and Associates Initial Quality Survey* states something Buick LeSabre owners can be proud to know and something all new-car buyers should know. The fact that Buick LeSabre is the most trouble free full-size car sold in America. Import or domestic.

The Initial Quality Survey, which measures things gone wrong with new vehicles during the first 90 days of ownership, marks an improvement in Buick quality for the third year in a row. And today, the Buick nameplate ranks as the most trouble free American brand. Higher than Lincoln. Higher than other prestige cars costing thousands more.

To our way of thinking, it all means that if you're looking for quality, you should just look down the Great American Road for the Buick tri-shield. The new symbol for quality. The sign of your Buick dealer.

*J.D. Power & Associates 1989 Initial Quality Survey covering November and December, 1988. Based upon owner-related problems during the first 90 days of ownership.
