Western Swing Festival opens here Wednesday

Music fans arriving steadily at coliseum

"Deep within my heart, lies a melody..."

Sounds of western swing were filtering through the Scurry County Coliseum RV grounds Monday night as folks from all over began rolling into town for the Legends of Western Swing Festival.

Lawn chairs of all sizes and styles are beginning to cover the main floor at the coliseum. Traditionally, festival-goers bring their lawn chairs and mark off their area with tape. They'll keep those spots through Saturday at midnight.

Most of them are from Texas, of course, but the four-day festival draws country music lovers from across the country. Recreactional vehicles parked on the coliseum grounds boast license plates from Arkansas, Colorado, South Carolina, California, Louisiana, Oklahoma and New Mexico.

Chamber of commerce personnel and volunteers were working non-stop this morning checking in pre-registered fans, who have been arriving since last weekend. The coliseum's 198 RV spaces are all reserved, as are most motel rooms in a 45-mile radius of Snyder.

Wednesday at noon, KBEC celebrity Mike O'Daniel will give a big hello from on stage, and Ted Scanlon & The Desperados will start the music.

The festival will run from noon until midnight each day through Friday, and from 10 a.m. until midnight on Saturday.

Highlighting Wednesday's entertainment will be Leon Rausch and Jody Nix.

Thursday will be Ted Scanlon and Dave Alexander Day, while Friday is Johnny Bush Day.

On Saturday, the legendary Ray Price will be featured.

Local bands performing include Texas Sand at 8 p.m. Wednesday and J.D. Barham and Cowjazz at 1:30 p.m. and 8:05 p.m. Thursday. Area favorite Jody Nix will perform at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday.

There will be booths to purchase all types of western swing paraphernalia. Concessions will also be available.

Admission to the coliseum for all-day tickets Wednesday through Friday is $20. Saturday admission prices are $25 for all day, or $15 until the dinner break and $15 after the dinner break.

Local tickets, for Snyder residents only, will be available at the coliseum door nightly after 8 o'clock Wednesday through Friday for $10. Tickets for the Saturday evening Ray Price show are $15.

For tickets, or additional information, contact the chamber of commerce at 573-3558.

C/C approves concert funds

Chamber of commerce directors on Monday considered hotel/motel tax funding requests and discussed four major upcoming events for Snyder — the Legends of Western Swing Festival, the July 4th celebration, Hearts on Fire Ministries and the Scurry County Rodeo.

Following minutes and the approval of the financial statement, the board granted $500 to Hearts On Fire Ministries to help cover costs of the youth rally, coming to Scurry County Coliseum on July 11-12. Joe Herring, spokesman for the organization, said many out-of-town people are expected to attend.

The board, however, turned down a funding request from the Noon Kiwanis Club for expenses for its Scholarship Golf Tournament on Aug. 16. The request was denied because the event is a fund-raiser for the club, and is not expected to bring many visitors to the community.

This week is the week for the Western Swing Festival. RVs and other vehicles began arriving several days ago at the coliseum to attend the event, which begins Wednesday and continues through Saturday.

Also discussed was the July 4th Celebration. Vendors are to set up in the park on July 2 and booth space is to be reserved at the chamber office.

The celebration will begin July 3 with volleyball, horseshoe and washer tournaments. Booths will open at the armory and barn.

Independence Day will start with the annual prayer breakfast at the pavilion, providing a sponsor is located. The breakfast preceeds the annual parade through Towle Park at 10 a.m.

Chamber executive director Donna Fowler announced that the Scurry County Rodeo is set for July 17-19 at the rodeo grounds west of Snyder.

Larry's Trucks & Stuff, Whit Parks Auto Sales, Halliburton Energy Service and the Ritz Diner were announced as new members.

Blood drive is underway

A blood drive, sponsored by Scurry County Advisory Council for the Texas Blood Institute and Cogdell Memorial Hospital Auxiliary, is being held today in the First Baptist Church Family Life Center.

The drive will run until 7 this evening.

Donors are reminded that they are required to show identification before donating blood. Acceptable identification can be a driver's license, birth certificate or Social Security card.

Today's drive is the first of three here this week. Wednesday, a drive will be held from noon until 5 p.m. for Cogdell Memorial Hospital employees and family members at CMH. On Thursday, a drive will be held from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. at the Daniel Unit for Price Daniel employees.

Each person who registers to give blood will receive a free insulated "Kool Kup" in addition to free coupons from local merchants.

Hospital lease issue crops up at first networking breakfast

While it probably was not intended to be the main topic of discussion at this morning's first "network breakfast," the possible lease of Cogdell Memorial Hospital ended up dominating the discussion.

Some 20 people, representing various businesses and government entities, met this morning for the first of what will be quarterly meetings to discuss matters affecting Snyder and Scurry County.

John DeLille, Development Corporation of Snyder executive director, chaired the meeting and described the breakfasts as a means to get to know other businesses and organizations a little bit better.

"This way, we can help each other," said DeLille.

DeLille asked those in attendance if they would like to discuss any particular matter and Cogdell Hospital chief executive officer Jeff Reecer, said he had "just one little issue."

The issue was, of course, the possible lease of the hospital which will be decided in a referendum election on Aug. 9. The matter has vocal supporters on both sides.

Reecer said he would be amiss if he didn't mention the election and urged everyone to educate themselves on the facts.

"Give me a call, ask the hospital board members about the facts," said Reecer. "You can't believe everything you read in the ads."

Reecer went on to say that the hospital is in its best financial position in many years.

County Judge Ricky Fritz agreed somewhat with Reecer's statement, but said the hospital's reserves are not what the firm hired to conduct the annual outside audit would like for them to be.

"He (Larry Anderson of Mason Warner & Co.) suggested they should be six or seven times what they are," said Fritz.

"But let me praise Jeff and St. Mary Hospital. I believe they saved our hospital eight years ago."

Fritz said that negotiating with Community Health Systems on the possible lease of the hospital was not because of anything Reecer or St. Mary had done wrong.

"It's just the nature of the beast in Washington with the changes in Medicare, Medicaid and the loss of disproportionate share money," said Fritz.

"Just as I think St. Mary was good for us then, I think Community Health will be good for us now," the judge said. "Times have changed."

Mayor David Holt said he hopes that a large number of citizens turn out for the election in August.

"I hope we don't have just 200 or 300 people voting," said Holt.

DeLille summed up the discussion on the possible lease of the hospital by saying everyone should make an effort to be as informed as possible.

The next networking breakfast will be held in September. No exact date has been scheduled.

THE SDN COLUMN

The feller on Deep Creek says, "There must be a lot of good in some folks, because it rarely comes out."

Just when we think we've heard of every lame-brain excuse to file a lawsuit, then another one comes along.

Noticed where a guy is suing everybody but the milk cow for not warning him that too much milk could cause hardening of the arteries.

The guy, in the court petition, says nothing on the carton warned him that milk could be addictive. Now that his health has gone bad, the industry needs to pay up.

If we can just find a lawyer willing to go after the tater chip makers...

Here's another possible event for July 4th...

At Oregon State University, some 1,500 couples were expected for Kiss Off '97. If everybody had shown up, it would have put the lip-lock contest into the Guinness Book of Records.

The old record was 1,420 couples smooching at one time. At Oregon State, only 160 couples showed up. The poor showing (number of entrants, not form) was blamed on a steady rain — not bad breath.

One couple that entered was from the class of 1976. The husband said he had always wanted to get into the Guinness Record Book, but at his age, kissing was less strenuous than mountain climbing.

On second thought, kissing in the park on July 4th is probably a bad idea. It's gonna be too hot. How about a homemade ice cream eating contest?

And on the international birth control scene, South Africa's largest game reserve is seeking the answer to preventing elephants from becoming pregnant.

The experiment at Kruger, home to about 9,000 pachyderm, was part of a two-pronged effort to control size of the herds.

One answer was to use estrogen patches (large, economy size), but the experiment had the reverse result as 10 female elephants stayed in constant turmoil.

We said it was a two-prone experiment, but everybody's afraid to ask about the other phase of the project.

Clinton considering apology to slaves' descendants

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton opposes the idea of compensating black Americans for slavery, saying "we're so many generations removed" that doing so simply may not be possible.

But in a radio interview aired Monday, Clinton said he would consider extending an apology to blacks for their ancestors' suffering.

"I think it has to be dealt with," he told the American Urban Radio Network. "There's still some unfinished business out there among black and white Americans."

Pitching his plan to explore racial relations at two fund-raisers Monday night, Clinton said the United States may become a nation without a racial majority in 30 years and will feel more keenly the need to succeed as the only multiracial, integrated society.

"We can't hold America together ... unless we can deal with this," he told a group of Jewish party supporters at a dinner Monday. "We need to start now before we have to figure out what we're going to do when things start to fray."

The idea of an apology sprang from legislation introduced in Congress by a white Ohio lawmaker last week, just as Clinton was preparing to unveil his national initiative on race in a speech in San Diego. Clinton said that he wasn't aware of the proposal.

Last month, Clinton apologized on behalf of the nation to the black men who were unwitting experiment subjects in the government's Tuskegee Syphilis Study, and in January he awarded the Medal of Honor to seven black World War II soldiers for valor in combat.

But Clinton said he disagrees with the idea of paying reparations to the descendants of slaves, something many black activists have said is needed to begin rectifying more than 200 years of inequality that blacks have experienced.

Roswell braces for tourist invasion in July

ROSWELL, N.M. (AP) — "I'll tell you one thing. They didn't have big eyes or long, stringy fingers," 80-year-old Frank Kaufmann says of the aliens. "No ma'am! These were trim, good-looking people."

In 1947, Kaufmann and a handful of other men stationed at the Roswell Army Air Field stumbled onto what they say was wreckage of a spaceship northwest of town.

This year, the 50th anniversary of the story, Roswell is cashing in.

"Something happened here and it's probably the most credible UFO event in the world," said Mayor Tom Jennings. "We've taken that and developed it into a whole new industry — tourism."

Roswell, which sits on the plains east of the Sierra Blanca mountain range in southeastern New Mexico, expects its 48,000 population to double as UFO believers, researchers and the curious flock to town for a July 1-6 golden anniversary of the alleged crash.

Although the Army air field is long gone, replaced with an industrial park and municipal airport, what allegedly happened here lives on.

Kaufmann, a retired government intelligence agent, said he watched soldiers put five dead aliens into body bags and haul a damaged spaceship onto a flatbed truck to the post.

Glenn Dennis, a mortician at a Roswell funeral home, said he got a call from the Army post to send out several small, medically sealed caskets.

Army Lt. Walter Haut, then the post's public information officer, issued a press release that a "flying disc" had been recovered. The wreckage was then taken to Fort Worth Army Air Field.

The next day a new statement went out saying it was only a weather balloon.

"I guess they changed their mind," said Haut, 75.

Others didn't. The story spawned numerous books and is considered by UFO buffs to be the biggest cover-up in U.S. history. It was mentioned in the movie blockbuster "Independence Day," which featured a super-secret government lab where scientists had studied alien cadavers for decades.

In real life, people usually drove right through Roswell, a center of the state's oil and gas industry surrounded by dry grass, high plains hills and cattle ranches.

The antiquated courthouse on Main Street, the tree-lined neighborhoods, the quiet parks — all made Roswell a nice place to live, but a dull one to visit.

While no aliens have been spotted lately, strange phenomena have occurred.

The historic Plains movie theater at First and Main streets is now a UFO museum — one of two in town — with a big flying saucer on the roof.

The snow cone stand is selling "Alien Juice." A country-western band of alien figures cut out of plywood — "The Pleiadians" — is jamming in the storefront window of Gingsberg Music Co.

Michelle Watts, owner of the Quilt Talk fabric store, is doling out her newly designed fabric with aliens and spaceships.

"This boon could go on indefinitely. People just can't get enough of it," said Randhi Hesse as he rang up sales of alien T-shirts and mock spaceship crashes at the Star Child gift shop.

Anniversary contributions dried up for a bit when members of the Heaven's Gate cult killed themselves in March, claiming they were headed for a UFO.

"That's all but forgotten now," said Stan Crosby, the anniversary organizer. "We're booming."

Planned events include daily tours to the alleged crash sites, a Crash and Burn Extravaganza derby on Main Street, and UFO lectures.

Aliens are hot. "The X-Files" television show, in which FBI agents track the paranormal and extraterrestrial, is part of America's pop culture. "Star Trek" seems indefatigable, "Independence Day" made megabucks, and wasn't that Michael Jordan shooting hoops with aliens in the "Space Jam" movie?

"We don't get a lot of kooks," said Deon Crosby, director of the International UFO Museum & Research Center museum and Crosby's wife.

"OK, there's this old man who comes in and he claims to be an alien," she said, "but we see a lot of learned people, professors, doctors, professionals interested in researching this phenomena."

Brad, Gwyneth agree to split up

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Brad Pitt and Gwyneth Paltrow have broken off their engagement and ended a 2½-year relationship, Pitt's publicist said.

No reason for the breakup was given in the brief statement released Monday night by Cindy Guagenti.

"Brad Pitt and Gwyneth Paltrow have mutually agreed to end their two-and-a-half-year relationship," the statement said.

There was no word on how the split would affect plans for the couple to team up for the comedy "Duets." The movie was to be directed by Paltrow's father, Bruce Paltrow, and was scheduled to begin filming the fall.

Police stymied by back yard cremation of infant daughter

PALM BAY, Fla. (AP) — All police know about Alexus Aitcheson is what her parents told them — she was born last fall, she choked to death on milk a month later and her body was cremated in her uncle's back yard.

Now authorities, with no remains to analyze, are trying to decide whether to pursue charges against the parents, Robert and Rachael Aitcheson. The couple is believed to be in a religious group that considers the Bible the only law and doctors practitioners of the occult.

"I've contacted other law enforcement agencies, bigger law enforcement agencies. They have not had this type of situation," Detective Jeff Kraynik said in Monday editions of Florida Today.

Alexus was born at home last Sept. 13. There was no doctor or midwife, and the birth was never recorded with the county. Families have up to a year to report home births.

A month later, the infant choked to death on regurgitated milk, the couple told police, who learned of the death after the couple distributed fliers with Alexus' picture and the news of her death to friends.

"We will always remember our little girl whom warmed our hearts just by her sweet pretty smile," the flier said. "God bless our sweet child. We will always love her."

The parents said they tried to resuscitate the baby for seven hours and called members of their religious group over to pray. They told police they didn't call 911 because they believed God would save their daughter if she was to be saved.

The couple also told police the baby was cremated in the back yard of Mrs. Aitcheson's brother's home because they didn't want an autopsy. A police dog, however, couldn't find the site of the cremation. The only evidence of a possible cremation came from a neighbor's report of heavy black smoke coming from a burn pit on the property.

Police began investigating after a co-worker of Mrs. Aitcheson gave them one of the fliers. State law requires unattended deaths to be reported immediately.

No bad trump break

By Phillip Alder

One of my favorite lines — stolen, I believe, from Eddie Kantar — is that if you need some help from the defenders, it is advantageous to be playing against your relatives. They will ride to your rescue. However, if P.G. Wodehouse is right, perhaps you should pick someone other than an aunt. As Plum wrote, "Many a fellow who looks like the dominant male and has himself photographed smoking a pipe, curls up like carbon paper when confronted by an aunt."

Freddie North, an English expert, has written many bridge stories featuring Aunt Agatha. Here is a deal from "Bridge with Aunt Agatha" (which is subtitled "Technique Without Tears"). Look just at the North hand. Your partner opens one no-trump, showing 16-18 points. What is your bidding plan?

North — the player, not the author — opted to use Stayman and raise spades immediately to a small slam.

North — the author, not the player — led the heart ace. Then he sat back and waited for his trump trick: one down.

"Devilishly unlucky," complained South.

"Daft bidding, I call it," interjected Aunt Agatha, who was East. "When you have the values to bid six no-trump directly, why go looking for a four-leaf clover?"

Although one example doesn't prove much, when you have two balanced hands opposite each other and full-weight high-card values for either game or slam, it is often better to play in no-trump. There, you cannot walk into a foul trump break. In this deal, South has 12 easy tricks in no-trump: three spades, one heart, four diamonds and four clubs.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am an orthopedic R.N. Depending on the season and the sport, I receive a lot of phone calls from parents. They usually consist of a dad asking if his little "Johnny" can get his cast off because "Johnny has to pitch in the big game tonight, and the team won't make it without him." Or, it might be a mom calling because "Suzie" has an audition for the ballet and she is in line to dance the lead. "She must have her cast off."

These parents need to get a clue that Johnny and Suzie aren't going to be able to pitch, dance, kick, hoist, twist, bend, etc. with a great deal of agility if they have been in a cast for six to eight weeks.

I have to fight the urge to say, "Mr. Smith, if you want to be the star pitcher so bad, do it yourself; don't do it vicariously through your son."

Abby, we aren't talking professional sports or even college-level sports here. We aren't even talking about those people with a scholarship riding on their participation. No, we're dealing with parents of Little Leaguers and amateur dance troupes.

A normal childhood means recovering from these fractures without pressure from Mom and Dad to perform. Since I can't say this to the parents coming into the clinic, I thought I'd say it this way.

AN ORTHOPEDIC NURSE,
PORTLAND, ORE.

DEAR NURSE: You have spoken plainly, and I pray the parents who need to hear the message heed it. Parents must keep in perspective that the health of the child is more important than the temporary glory of a childhood event. Failure to do so can result in physical damage that can last a lifetime.

DEAR ABBY: I am the proud mother of a wonderful, "very cool," 15-year-old son. We learned recently that the parents of my son's best friend will no longer allow the boys to be together because they learned that we are a single-parent family. They have told their son that it is a bad thing and that my son will end up in trouble because of our circumstances. "Statistics prove it."

May I share my Mother's Day with you?

My day began the night before, with a simple-yet-special dinner cooked by my son, who paid for and brought the food home from the store on his bike. Mother's Day morning began with tiptoes to allow Mom to sleep a little longer while my son cooked a breakfast of eggs, warm pastries and hot coffee. Along with a sweet present, he also gave me the gift of a hard day's work to help me with projects I had wanted to tackle. The day ended happily with an evening together at home, with kisses and, "I love you, Mom" before bed.

I know there are reports of problem kids from single-parent families — but, Abby, I know of many less-than-perfect children who come from two-parent families, particularly the older brother from the family mentioned above. We all know two-parent families where all members are miserable — an intact marriage does not guarantee happiness. A happy family is just that ... happy. No matter what the size.

There are many wonderful children from single-parent families. Children should be judged by who they are, not by some ignorant generalization. I say "Bravo!" to all kids who make their parents proud — especially mine.

A HAPPIER FAMILY THAN MANY, DEL MAR, CALIF.

DEAR HAPPIER: It's unfortunate that your son was made a victim of discrimination for something over which he had no control. He appears to be both thoughtful and generous, qualities that most people value in a friend.

Having two parents can be advantageous, but it is no guarantee of success or excellence. One committed parent can be better than two who are so involved in their own problems they cannot concentrate on the kids.

Habitat volunteer

PIKEVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Newt Gingrich, handy with a gavel on the floor of the House of Representatives, proved he's no slouch with a hammer.

The Georgia Republican lent political and human muscle on Monday to Jimmy Carter's annual Habitat for Humanity project. And he even had words of praise for the former president and his wife, Rosalynn.

"I must confess that the first time I saw President and Mrs. Carter working on a Habitat house, I thought, 'Oh that's that kind of do-goodism that must make them feel good but doesn't accomplish much,'" he said.

But the House Speaker said he became a believer after a visit to a house project in his home district.

"As I saw the commitment to growing a family as well as building the home, I thought it was really to me a transformational moment."

Habitat, the Jimmy Carter Work Project, and the Federation of Appalachian Housing Enterprises are leading 3,000 volunteers in the construction of 150 homes this week.

Marriage fails

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The curtain is falling on the four-year marriage of Geena Davis and Renny Harlin.

"They officially separated," Susan Geller, publicist for the actress, said Monday. The couple broke up in April, she said.

YOU are in a courtroom, accused of a capital offense. The evidence is in. You know in your mind you are guilty. Your heart aches, your body trembles, your eyes weep as you hear the sentence of death. But as you are being led away to your execution, someone steps forward and says, "I will bear his penalty, I will pay his debt. I will die in his place."
This is the story of atonement. Christ bore our sins in His body on the cross. He became sin for us so that we might be free from the burden, guilt, bondage, fear, power, and consequences of sin. We, the guilty, like Barabbas, go free; and Jesus, the innocent, goes to the cross in our place. When we are baptized into Christ for forgiveness of sins, we are raised to a new life. Our sins are washed away from God's record by the blood of Jesus. That's the good news of Christ, the gospel, which we want to share (2 Corinthians 5:17).

Chicago celebrates title and puzzles over future

CHICAGO (AP) — As promised, Dennis Rodman didn't curse. Phil Jackson spoke in less time than it takes the 24-second clock to expire. Michael Jordan dedicated the Bulls' fifth title in seven years to the city's "working people."

Team owner Jerry Reinsdorf didn't speak. He wasn't even introduced to the tens of thousands of fans who crammed into Grant Park for Monday's 38-minute, relatively low-key, ho-hum-it's-another-championship celebration.

There were no clues about what will happen in the coming weeks, when the futures of Jordan, Rodman and Jackson will be decided by Reinsdorf, who has talked about making major changes to an aging team.

Jordan, 34, has said he will retire if Jackson leaves. Rodman, 36, might not be re-signed. Jackson wants assurances the nucleus will be back. He also wants the going rate for top coaches, double this season's $2.7 million.

Jackson spoke for all of 22 seconds and thanked the fans and players for "another great year."

Rodman cursed during last year's ceremony but promised to "keep it clean" this time.

"A lot of people have criticized me for a lot of things I've done and a lot of things I've said. And the NBA has done a lot of things to try to keep me down," he said.

"But you know what? There's just so much you can do to kick a man down. Hell with the NBA, I'll be back, baby!"

Rodman was fined $50,000 during the finals for making disparaging remarks about Mormons — "I apologize for that," he said — and was suspended three times this season. While his dyed hair, tattoos, body piercings and cross-dressing continue to amuse some fans, others have grown tired of his foul mouth and unreliability.

Steve Kerr, whose 17-foot jumper with five seconds left Friday night clinched the title, spoke the longest and got the best laughs with his account of "what actually happened" on the play.

"Phil told Michael, 'I want you to take the last shot.' And Michael said, 'I don't feel real comfortable in these situations, so maybe we ought to go in another direction,'" Kerr said as Jordan laughed hysterically.

"And then Scottie came in and said, 'Michael said in his commercial that he's been asked to do this 26 times and failed ... so why don't we go to Steve?' So I thought to myself, 'Well, I guess I've got to bail Michael out again. But I've been carrying him all year, so what's one more time?'

"Anyway, the shot went in. That's my story, and I'm sticking to it."

"This championship goes to all the working people here in the city of Chicago who go out every single day and bust their butts to make a living," said Jordan, who made $30.14 million this season.

"We come in two hours out of a day to give you a break and have something ... to be proud about when you go to another city.

Juniors will compete at SCC

Snyder Country Club will play host tomorrow to the North Texas Professional Golf Association Junior Tour. The tournament will begin at 9 a.m. with a shotgun start.

More than 60 young golfers are expected for the event. Competitors will range from 7 to 18 years in age. Rick Mammolite, head pro at SCC, said that many of the youngsters play almost all of the NTPGA junior tournaments.

"A lot of the kids are from out of town," Mammolite said. "Many of them play two, three or even more tournaments each week during the summer."

The junior tournaments are becoming more competitive according to Mammolite. The junior golfers will not only be competing for medals, but also for tour points.

Each golfer accumulates points for the tournaments in which he or she plays. At the end of the tour, the players with the most points earn a chance to compete in the championship tournament.

The NTPGA is a division of the national Professional Golf Association. The North Texas region is divided into three sections, one of which includes Snyder.

Among all of the divisions of the national PGA, the North Texas region draws more junior golfers than any other. Inside the North Texas region, the section which includes Snyder has more juniors than the other two sections.

This means that the portion of the United States which includes Snyder experiences more junior golfers in more tournaments than any other part of the country.

Sports Whirl

By Eric Drennan
SDN Sports Editor

I will be the first person to admit that I wasn't real crazy about the idea of interleague baseball games. After all, baseball was the only sport in which its' two teams playing for the championship hadn't already met.

In football and basketball you can tell how the two teams might match up by looking back over the last five years and comparing their records against each other. And so as I watch a part of baseball's tradition get thrown out of the window, I have come to this one conclusion. A person can change his/her mind.

It seems as if maybe I was the only person who did not care for interleague play because the crowds at the games were gigantic. Even such exciting series as White Sox vs. Reds and Blue Jays vs. Phillies drew some fairly decent crowds. And I guess anything that brings people back to the ballparks has got to be good. So I have changed my mind about interleague play, with one exception.

If major league baseball wants the fans to see how baseball is played in the other league, then why not have the designated hitter in the NL parks and not have it in the AL parks during interleague games? Wouldn't this make more sense? If the fans are to truly see how the other league plays, they need to play by the other league's rules.

I believe the designated hitter should be done away with anyway. When Abner Doubleday invented this sport he called it baseball because the game is centered around things that the players do with the ball itself. There are three things that Doubleday intended for a player to do with the ball - to throw it, to catch it and to hit it. By invoking the DH we have essentially cut out one-third of the game. We are saying everybody must catch the ball, but if you are really good at throwing it then you don't have to hit it.

So I say keep interleague play but do away with the designated hitter. But then again, it's just my opinion. I could be wrong.

Natural gas rig explodes

BUTTE LA ROSE, La. (AP) — An explosion ripped through a natural gas rig, killing at least two workers and injuring two others. A search for two missing workers was hampered today by a raging fire shooting flames 200 feet up, the Coast Guard said.

There were 22 people aboard the rig when the accident occurred about 10:30 p.m. Monday, said Coast Guard Lt. Com. Bill Brewer. The cause of the explosion was not known.

The rig, Mallard Number 52, is located in Little Bayou Pigeon in St. Martin Parish 30 miles northwest of Morgan City.

Of the eighteen workers who were evacuated, two were taken to a Lafayette hospital for treatment of moderate injuries, said state police Trooper Stacy Barrett. The injured were transported by boat to a landing at Butte La Rose, the Coast Guard said.

Nichols' attorneys blame Timothy McVeigh

DENVER (AP) — Attorneys for Terry Nichols concede that he was in Oklahoma City three days before the federal building bombing and that key bomb evidence was found at his home. But they blame Timothy McVeigh.

Nichols helped McVeigh for months but didn't know the bombing was being planned, defense attorneys Michael Tigar and Ronald Woods told CBS News on Monday. They said Nichols wasn't duped — only used by McVeigh.

"The evidence is going to be that Timothy McVeigh, on the road to 9:02 in the morning on the 19th, used a number of people," Tigar said on the broadcast.

The attorneys, for the first time, went public with their strategy for defending Nichols against murder and conspiracy charges in the bombing that killed 168 people at the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building.

The 41-year-old former Army buddy of McVeigh is expected to be tried later this year, although no date has been set. McVeigh was convicted June 2 of murder and conspiracy and sentenced to death Friday.

Nichols' attorneys said they will actually embrace some of the government's evidence against Nichols, claiming it will help clear their client.

For example, they acknowledge Nichols' truck was seen in downtown Oklahoma City three days before the bombing on April 19, 1995.

Prosecutors said Nichols was there to pick up McVeigh after he dropped off his getaway car. But Nichols' attorneys claim he was there to pick up McVeigh, who had called to say his car had broken down.

As for evidence found in Nichols' home in Herington, Kan. — including a detonator cord, ammonium nitrate fertilizer and a receipt for fertilizer with McVeigh's fingerprint — they said McVeigh left them there.

Nichols was at home when the bomb went off, his attorneys said. He went to police after he heard his name on the news, speaking to the FBI without a lawyer for 9½ hours.

Prosecutors said the statement was tantamount to a confession, but Nichols' attorneys said it was far from incriminating and they planned to use it to secure an acquittal for their client.

"Dozens and dozens of questions were asked and he answered them in a way that should have convinced those agents," Tigar told CBS.

Woods said, "If they don't use that ... interview in their trial, we are certainly going to use it word for word."

Tigar also portrayed star prosecution witness Michael Fortier, who testified under a plea bargain that Nichols was one of the architects of the bombing, as a "methamphetamine user to the extent that would fry the brain of a normal human being."

Less than a week into McVeigh's trial, Tigar used similar descriptions for Fortier's wife, Lori, who also testified against McVeigh. After last week's sentencing, jurors said they relied on the Fortiers' testimony only to fill in gaps other evidence didn't cover.

Asked if he can save Nichols' life, Tigar said: "I think so. I hope so. The first step, of course, is to show all of the many, many reasonable doubts that are out there."

The attorneys were also seeking to seal details of McVeigh's trial, including the cost of his defense. McVeigh's attorneys have declined to discuss the cost, but estimates have been as high as $10 million.

In a motion made public Monday, Nichols' attorney Reid Neureiter said such details could generate public criticism and prejudice potential jurors, giving prosecutors an unfair advantage.

"Indeed, criticism of the cost of (McVeigh's) defense has already come from high public officials, including members of Congress," he argued.

Oprah remarks upset Texas cattlemen

AMARILLO (AP) — Texas cattlemen have a serious beef with Oprah Winfrey.

During an "Oprah Winfrey Show" broadcast last year, an expert said that feeding ground-up animal parts to cattle could spread mad cow disease to humans in the United States. To applause from the studio audience, Ms. Winfrey exclaimed: "It has just stopped me from eating another burger!"

Within weeks, cattle prices plunged.

Amarillo cattle feeder Paul Engler and a dozen cattlemen are now suing under a 1995 Texas law that protects agricultural products from slander.

"I couldn't help but be infuriated," said Engler, who flipped on the program while visiting Chicago, Ms. Winfrey's home base. "I sat there and couldn't hardly believe what I was seeing."

Engler's year-old federal lawsuit appears to be the biggest test yet of so-called "veggie libel" laws, which sprouted after a "60 Minutes" report in 1989 on the apple growth regulator Alar sent prices plummeting. Since then, 13 states have passed laws against falsely disparaging products.

Ms. Winfrey's show came at a time when drought, high feed prices and oversupply were crippling cattlemen. While her recommendations have made best sellers out of books, Engler said that same power cuts both ways.

Mad cow disease, or bovine spongiform encephalopathy, has not been reported in the United States. It is a brain-destroying disease that has ravaged cattle in Britain since the late 1980s, where it is believed to have been spread by cattle feed containing ground-up sheep parts.

Panic erupted last year because of fears that infected beef may have caused a version of a fatal human brain illness. But no definitive links have been found.

During the "Oprah" show, U.S. Humane Society official Howard Lyman told the audience that 100,000 cows in this country drop dead annually for no known reason, and are ground up and fed to other cows, Engler's lawsuit said.

"If only one of them has 'mad cow disease,' that has the potential to infect thousands," said Lyman, an anti-meat activist, according to the lawsuit. He followed other guests who played down the worries.

Cattle prices dropped 10 percent by the end of the month following the show, from 62 cents per pound to 55 cents. They rose later.

Engler said he lost $6.7 million. The cattlemen sued Lyman, Ms. Winfrey, her Harpo Productions Inc. and distributor King World Productions.

Ms. Winfrey defended the show shortly after its airing but has since refused to discuss it.

"I asked questions that I think that the American people deserve to have answered in light of what is happening in Britain. We gave them (cattlemen) a chance to respond," she said in a statement at the time.

Lyman's attorney, Barry Peterson, said: "We don't believe Mr. Lyman nor Ms. Winfrey ever said U.S. beef was infected. ... He only said that practices within the industry were potentially threatening."

Earlier this month, the Food and Drug Administration ordered an end to feeding cattle meat and bone meal from other cattle.

Seattle attorney Bruce Johnson, who successfully defended CBS in an Alar-related lawsuit, calls "veggie libel" laws a "Pandora's box for every interest group that wants protection."

"Political correctness takes many guises," said Johnson, who wrote a 1995 article blasting such laws. "This happens to be agribusiness' take on political correctness."

Appeals courts traditionally have upheld states' rights to limit business-related speech, usually through truth-in-advertising laws, First Amendment specialist Tom Baker said.

"I guess it would be important to note from the Oprah side that this isn't commercial speech, it's speech about a public health issue," said Baker, a Texas Tech University law professor.

Surgery is the best advice

DEAR DR. GOTT: My wife has spinal stenosis, which causes constant pain and numbness in her left leg. Her doctors have urged surgery, but I wonder about less drastic treatments, such as physical therapy, acupuncture and chiropractic.

DEAR READER: Spinal stenosis means that some hard tissue — such as a bony prominence or a herniated disc — is pressing on your wife's spinal column, causing nerve damage and symptoms.

While the "less drastic" treatments you mention may be appropriate for other causes of back pain (such as muscle spasm), surgery is the preferred therapy for stenosis because it removes the offending tissue and allows the nerves to return to normal.

Therefore, although your wife's doctors are the best judges of what would be appropriate for her, I've found that surgery for spinal stenosis is almost always curative — and ordinarily safe. I'd opt for that over other methods.

To give you more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "An Informed Approach to Surgery." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2017, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a runner with painful lower legs. A colleague suggested the possibility of stress fractures. What are these?

DEAR READER: Even in robust young athletes, repetitive trauma to weight-bearing bones can cause tiny fractures to appear. Much like the crazing that affects fine porcelain, these cracks are common in runners, cause pain at the sites of injury and usually are invisible on standard X-rays.

You should be examined by an orthopedic surgeon, who will probably X-ray your lower legs anyway because stress fractures — especially if they are old — may be evident. However, I suspect that you will need an MRI or a bone scan for diagnosis.

In most cases, orthopedists do not use casts to treat stress fractures; a simple prohibition against running for four to six weeks is enough to allow complete healing. Nonetheless, it's important to know whether you have stress fractures, because in the presence of such fractures, continued running is not only painful but could lead to further, more serious disruption of the leg bones.

Regrettably, stress fractures in runners come with the territory: They're merely a complication of this activity. However, to help you avoid future problems of this sort, I suggest the following: Make sure that your running shoes have an absorbent heel. If not, purchase an appropriate cushioned insole.

Further, don't run for long distances on hard surfaces. If possible, exercise on grassy or soft terrain (such as tracks) and avoid working out on pavement.

Lawyers bickering over O.J. property

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Everyone knows the survivors of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman want to collect the $33.5 million judgment from O.J. Simpson. Who knew it would turn into a competition?

At a hearing where Simpson lost a bid to keep thousands of dollars worth of property from creditors, a Goldman attorney accused lawyers for Simpson and the Brown family of conspiring to gain an unfair advantage.

The judge even responded to lengthy bickering at Monday's hearing by noting an "unseemly competition" between the parties.

"I'm troubled by that," Superior Court Judge Irving Shimer said.

Simpson was acquitted of criminal charges in the June 1994 slayings of his ex-wife and Goldman. Shimer will decide what property Simpson can exempt from the judgment won by Ms. Simpson's estate and Goldman's family in their wrongful death case.

The judge denied exemptions for $170,000 worth of items, including a $15,000 life-size bronze sculpture of Simpson and a $5,700 painting. The biggest debate centered on Simpson's 51 golf clubs; Shimer turned down a request to let Simpson pick out a set to keep.

Goldman family attorney Daniel Petrocelli fumed outside court, accusing the Brown and Simpson lawyers of collaborating against his client.

Ira Friedman, representing Ms. Simpson's father, Louis Brown, executor of her estate, shrugged and said: "So? You can prefer one creditor over another."

And Simpson's attorney said the law allows Simpson to prefer the Browns.

"We're concerned for the needs of the children. We would like them to grow up with some of these items," lawyer Ronald Slates said outside court. Simpson gained custody of the two children he had with Ms. Simpson after a court battle with the Browns.

Slates said the Browns "have been much more cooperative" and "much more humane," while the Goldmans have tried to take "his last morsel."

State senators threaten to block authorization

WASHINGTON (AP) — The increasingly acrimonious congressional battle over the privatization of Air Force depots has spilled out in the Senate, threatening a delay in approval of next year's defense spending bill.

Texas Republican Sens. Phil Gramm and Kay Bailey Hutchison are using their senatorial privilege to delay Senate consideration of the defense authorization bill.

"That is intended to bring the opponents of privatization to the table," Gramm press secretary Larry Neal said Monday.

The senators slapped what is known as a "hold" on the defense authorization after the Senate Armed Services Committee completed its work on the bill late last week.

By Monday evening, neither side had blinked.

And Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., has indicated he intends to bring the defense authorization to the Senate floor on Wednesday.

The Texans are upset over a provision inserted in the bill by Sen. James Inhofe, R-Okla., which effectively would force the Air Force to abandon its plan to shield thousands of jobs at Kelly Air Force Base in San Antonio and McClellan AFB in Sacramento, Calif., by turning the depots' work over to the private sector.

An independent base closure commission recommended in 1995 that the two depots be closed and their work divided among surviving depots in Georgia, Oklahoma and California.

2 arrested, runaway located

Two people were arrested Monday and a 15-year-old boy reported as a runaway was located.

Officers arrested at 23-year-old male at Municipal Court to lay out a fine for disorderly conduct.

A 20-year-old male was arrested at the sheriff's office on an outstanding warrant for disorderly conduct.

Officers were notified at 8:07 a.m. that a 15-year-old male had run away from home and an offense report for a runaway was submitted. The boy was located at the American Motor Inn shortly thereafter, and taken to the police department where he was later released to juvenile authorities.

A report of a gas drive-off was made at 9:19 a.m. from Town and Country in reference to a person not paying for $36 worth of gas. An offense report for Class C theft was submitted but the person was located and said he had forgotten to pay for the gas.

A report of a possible prowler was made at 3:15 p.m. from a residence on FM 1606.

An offense report for assault/family violence was submitted at 4:51 p.m.

City officers investigated a one-vehicle accident at 6:20 p.m. Saturday in the 1600 block of U.S. Highway 84. Involved was a 1995 Dodge pickup driven by Curtis Blakeway, of Bellingham, Wash., which was towing a trailer. The driver lost control of the vehicle and jack-knifed, causing the pickup to hit a sign owned by the Texas Department of Transportation.
