Lewinsky testimony

WASHINGTON — Senators got their first chance to see Monica Lewinsky's videotaped testimony Tuesday and came away underwhelmed, seemingly dimming the chance that she will be called for questioning in person on the Senate floor. While the tapes were being played at four closed Capitol sites for senators and their aides — printed transcripts were available as well — House prosecutors were questioning presidential friend Vernon Jordan about his assistance for the onetime White House intern.

Abortion Web site

PORTLAND, Ore. — Abortion foes who created "wanted" posters and a Web site listing the names and addresses of "baby butchers" were ordered to pay $107 million in damages Tuesday by a federal jury that said the tactics amounted to threats. The plaintiffs, who included Planned Parenthood and several abortion doctors and clinics, sued under a 1994 federal law that prohibits inciting violence against abortion doctors or their patients. Unlike previous cases, this one did not involve any physical confrontations or explicit threats. Because of that, the anti-abortion activists contended the Internet site and the posters were protected by the First Amendment.

Interest rates

WASHINGTON — Federal Reserve officials like to say that interest-rate policy is aimed at Americans on Main Street, not at Wall Street's hard-charging traders. But with stock-market gains increasingly propelling everything from record home sales to car buying, many economists believe the Fed has little choice but to cater to the whims of a touchy, overvalued market.

Arco, Chevron announce merger

Brian Ademcik/Reporter-Telegram

Keith Weiser, left, of Arco Permian, and Bob Howard of Chevron have their photo taken after it was announced that plans are in the works for a merger that will result in the formation of a new oil and gas company to be headquartered in the Permian Basin.

■ Company officials expect consolidation to result in a job reduction of about 15 to 20 percent — half from Arco Permian and half from Chevron's Permian unit.

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

A new oil company was born in the Permian Basin Tuesday.

Arco Permian and Chevron jointly announced that they are moving to form a new oil and gas company to be headquartered in the Permian Basin.

When the agreement is finalized, Arco and Chevron will each own 50 percent of the new company, which is yet to be named.

"This will be about the most 50-50 deal you can find," said Keith Weiser, president of Arco Permian. Weiser said the two companies were matched so closely that it was easy to come to a 50-50 decision.

"We complement one another very well," said Bob Howard, manager of Chevron's Permian Basin Profit Center.

Howard said that both Arco and Chevron were looking for potential merger partners in the Permian Basin and both companies came up in the top three of each others' lists. "It was our decision that if you are going to join someone, join someone with demonstrated success. Arco Permian has been very successful in the Permian Basin."

The companies employ a total of 850 people and when combined, the consolidation is expected to result in a reduction of approximately 15 to 20 percent. About half of the cuts will come from Arco and half from Chevron, they said.

Decisions have not been made about where the new company will be housed or how management will be structured.

The final structure of management will be decided within the next few weeks when the new president and vice presidents are named.

A task force is working to determine the best location for the new company.

"Both buildings now occupied by Arco and Chevron are large enough to accommodate the new company," Weiser said.

While some jobs will be lost, representatives of the Chamber of Commerce said that it could have been much worse if Chevron had pulled out of Midland altogether to consolidate with another Chevron business unit in Houston.

The new Permian Basin company will be structured as an autonomous business unit that will decide its own fate. Weiser said much of the success of the partnership could be attributed to the fact that there were two corporate parents that were willing to set up an autonomous unit.

With combined production of more than 170,000 barrels of oil equivalent, 600 million barrels of reserves and 7,000 wells in 150 fields, the new company will be one of the largest producers in the Permian Basin.

"The new company will be a close match with Altura, in terms of production, and probably the second largest employer in Midland," Weiser said.

Midland loses 40 jobs out of 146 Texaco cuts

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

The battle against low oil prices claimed more casualties Tuesday, as Texaco announced the elimination of 146 jobs in the Permian Basin Business Unit. The downsizing was part of a previously announced plan to restructure Texaco's upstream business.

Texaco employs 650 throughout the Permian Basin in West Texas and New Mexico; there are 235 employees in Midland.

Of the 146 jobs eliminated, 102 were the result voluntary retirement, according to Judy Stiranka, public and government affairs coordinator for Texaco.

She said that of the 146 job losses, 40 were in Midland — 19 were through voluntary retirement and 21 were eliminated involuntarily.

"This was part of a restructuring plan announced by Texaco last November," Ms. Stiranka said. "At that time, Texaco announced that it would eliminate

Bush indicates he'll sign oil, gas tax relief bill after it passes Legislature

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Severance tax relief for Texas oil and gas producers could come in two weeks, said Texas Railroad Commissioner Charles Matthews, who was in Midland Tuesday to brief industry and media on the status of an emergency bill that would put a moratorium on state severance tax for oil and gas.

"The bill will go to the Senate today, then will be moved to the House. It could be passed out of the House within two weeks, and signed into law by Gov. George Bush."

The governor indicated Tuesday that he would sign the bill when it is passed out of the Legislature.

"The situation is desperate for many small independent producers and oil-field workers and for Texas families and communities who depend on oil production to survive," he said on a statement. "Our friends and fellow Texans are hurting and need our help."

'Our friends and fellow Texans are hurting and need our help.'
—Gov. Bush

Bush noted that while the only real solution to the problems in the energy sector were higher prices, the severance tax relief will help some small producers stay in business.

Matthews said the emergency bill will suspend the 4.5 percent severance on oil and the 7.5 percent tax on natural gas through July 31 and will provide $45 million in tax relief to producers. When the temporary bill runs out, Matthews said

Jurors find Henkel guilty on all counts

By Rick López
Staff Writer

The week-long trial of Billy Joe Henkel reached its first climax Tuesday as jurors rendered four guilty verdicts after almost seven hours of deliberation.

An anxious crowd packed the courtroom just after a court bailiff announced that jurors had "reached an agreement" at about 7 p.m. The atmosphere tensed with each minute that lapsed before the jurors came out from their chambers.

Fifteen minutes later, 238th District Judge John Hyde finally read the verdict to the defendant. Sighs and sobs were heard from the crowd.

"I think this has been an intense trial and difficult for everyone involved," Hyde said.

The defendant's wife, Tena Henkel, and their daughter, Cassie Henkel, cried and held each other immediately after Hyde's announcement. The daughter had been holding back tears since the jurors returned to their seats.

"It's not fair," Cassie Henkel said, as her father's supporters walked her and her mother outside of the courthouse and shielded their emotions from the trial's spectators.

Henkel, 45, was convicted of two counts each of intoxication manslaughter and intoxication assault stemming from a car accident on July 27, 1997, that killed Esteban Lara and Craig Noland, both 18.

Teen-agers Jeremy Cruz and Ky Lee Edwards suffered serious injuries in the wreck.

Rebels confirm they will attend peace talks

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia (AP) — Ethnic Albanian rebels reluctantly agreed Tuesday to take part in weekend peace talks aimed at ending the bloody 11-month conflict in Kosovo — a decision that focused international pressure on the hard-line Yugoslav government.

Rebel participation had been thrown into doubt after spokesman Adem Demaci recommended against sending delegates. However, the main Kosovo Liberation Army spokesman, Jakup Krasniqi, told reporters in central Kosovo that the KLA would name its delegates Wednesday.

"We have some objections to the proposed document, but we are certainly ready to go," Krasniqi said in comments welcomed by Clinton administration officials.

Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic has sent the matter over to the Serb Parliament, which meets Thursday, and resisted giving any signal on whether the Serbs will send delegates to the talks organized by the United States and five European countries. The government has been against any terms that would erode its control over Kosovo, a province in Serbia, the main republic in Yugoslavia.

The proposed U.S. peace plan at the talks in France would give Kosovo greater autonomy in the first three years.

Both sides face the threat of NATO strikes if they haven't started talks by Saturday in Rambouillet, France, and reached a deal by Feb. 19 to end the conflict over Kosovo Albanians' demand for independence.

More moderate Kosovo Albanian political leaders already have said they would attend, but the key negotiating parties to any settlement are President Slobodan Milosevic's government and the KLA, the warring parties in the conflict over ethnic Albanians' demand for independence.

Krasniqi said the KLA wants to send four delegates as part of the ethnic Albanian negotiating team, expected to number about 15.

The proposed U.S. peace plan at the talks in France would give Kosovo greater autonomy for the first three years. Political parties would decide what happens after that.

Krasniqi said KLA representatives will demand that Kosovo become an international protectorate for three years while negotiators work out a final status for Kosovo. They also want any decision on Kosovo's future to be put to a referendum by the "people of Kosovo."

Ethnic Albanians are by far the majority among the 2 million people of Kosovo, and most want independence.

While deferring the question of participation in the talks, the Yugoslav government appealed to the U.N. Security Council to convene an urgent meeting on Kosovo to prevent what it called the "open and clear threat of aggression" posed by NATO's threatened military strikes.

The NATO threat "directly undermines the sovereignty and territorial integrity of the FRY (Federal Republic of Yugoslavia) and flagrantly violates the principles enshrined in the U.N. Charter," Yugoslav Foreign Minister Zivadin Jovanovic said in a letter to the council.

Despite the anti-NATO maneuvers, Dusko Matkovic, a vice president of Milosevic's Socialist Party, suggested in remarks published Tuesday that the Serbs are likely to send their delegation to France.

He said NATO pressure "further strengthens Serbian and Yugoslav resolve to find a peaceful solution for Kosovo through negotiations."

The conflict between Kosovo separatists and Serb and Yugoslav forces has killed at least 2,000 people, most of them civilians, and made refugees out of hundreds of thousands.

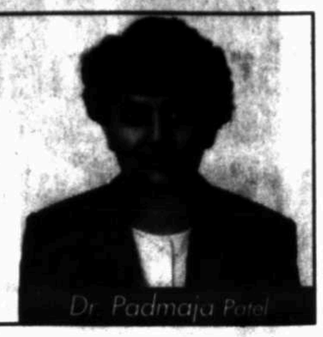

Hundreds of people have been killed in continuing violence since an October truce halted most combat, including 45 ethnic Albanians whose brutal slayings in Racak on Jan. 15 prompted renewed international calls for peace in Kosovo.

Survivors from Racak gathered Tuesday outside the morgue in Pristina on Tuesday to demand Serbs release the Racak bodies for burial. The Serbs refused, despite intervention by the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, and the villagers said they wouldn't leave until they had all the corpses.

Meanwhile, the ethnic Albanians' Kosovo Information Center reported Tuesday that two villages in Kosovo's Drenica region and another in the Podujevo region were shelled by heavy Serb artillery overnight. There were no reports of casualties.

Brazil names new Central Bank president to restore confidence

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Seeking to calm jittery financial markets, President Fernando Henrique Cardoso nominated an investment strategist Tuesday to run the nation's Central Bank.

In a surprise move, Cardoso removed Francisco Lopes after just three weeks and backed Arminio Fraga, a former associate of billionaire investor and currency speculator George Soros, to lead the Central Bank.

Lopes had allowed the national currency, the real, to float freely on international markets.

The appointment of Fraga, who has a doctorate in economics from Princeton University, must be approved by the Senate.

The real, which had tumbled sharply on Monday, strengthened against the dollar after the announcement. It closed at 1.74 to the dollar, compared with 1.95 on Monday.

The stock market, though, skidded, with the Bovespa index on Sao Paulo's stock market, the largest in Latin America, off nearly 3 percent.

The government has been struggling to halt the financial crisis that has gripped Brazil and threatens to buffet the economies of other countries in Latin America. Stanley Fischer, a senior official of the International Monetary Fund, was visiting Brazil to review the country's economic plight.

In announcing Fraga's appointment, the Finance Ministry emphasized there would be no change in its policy to float the real, which has depreciated 32 percent against the dollar since the policy was implemented.

Brazil, which has Latin America's largest economy, has been in talks with the IMF over the release of a $41.5 billion international aid package.

Many financial analysts welcomed the choice of Fraga.

"With the free-floating exchange rate, maintaining stability is in the hands of the Central Bank for the short-term. With the arrival of Fraga that road just got shorter," said Mauro Schneider, an economist with ING Barings.

Jose Luciano Dias, a Brasilia-based political analyst, agreed.

"Unlike Lopes, who was too much of a theorist and did not have the managerial capacity to stop speculators, Fraga is a veteran market insider who knows both sides of the coin," Dias added.

Fraga's appointment, he said, "was necessary for Brazil to regain its credibility and the confidence of the international financial community."

Opposition politicians, however, criticized Fraga's proximity to Soros. Currency speculators like the American billionaire have been blamed by some in the developing world for causing the global financial crisis that started in Asia in 1997 and has since spread to Russia and Brazil.

The Finance Ministry took pains to stress that Fraga, who worked as a managing director for the New York-based Soros Fund Management, is no longer associated with Soros, a sharp critic in recent days of Brazil's decision to maintain high interest rates.

Until Fraga is confirmed by the legislature, Demosthenes Madureira de Pinho of the Central Bank will serve as interim president. Pending confirmation, Fraga will serve as a special adviser to Finance Minister Pedro Malan.

Brazil, which has Latin America's largest economy, has been in talks with the IMF over the release of the second installment of a $41.5 billion international aid package.

In December, Brazil received $9 billion from the IMF and used it to bolster its sagging currency reserves, now at $36 billion — down from $74 billion last July. A second parcel might help restore the confidence of investors.

New food shortages feared after earthquake

ARMENIA, Colombia (AP) — Emergency food supplies are dangerously low for the more than 200,000 people left homeless by last week's earthquake in Colombia, authorities said Tuesday.

The officials said private donations were dropping off precipitously, and appealed for more aid to fill the gap between what Colombians need and what the government and international relief agencies have rushed in.

Aid officials were trying to avoid a repeat of the first few days after the Jan. 25 earthquake, when food shortages were widespread due to the magnitude of the devastation and bureaucratic delays. Frustration over those shortages fueled waves of looting.

"We have food for four or five more days," said Juan Manuel Urrutia, head of the Colombian Institute for Family Well-Being, a government agency. "We're working to avoid a food crisis."

The highest priority for aid are children, he said. About 25,000 children were receiving milk and basic foodstuffs in Quindio — the state most severely affected by the magnitude-6 earthquake.

The U.N. World Food Program was distributing about 25,000 food rations packets a day, he said. And a plane from Italy stocked with portable kitchen gear, generators and $200,000 worth of beans was expected at Armenia's airport on Tuesday.

Despite strong foreign donations, Urrutia said the cash-strapped Colombian government would have to begin purchasing food, in part to make up for a falloff in donations by private Colombians.

At the central donation center in Bogota, where as many as 6,000 people arrived daily to donate supplies during the first days after the quake, only 400 showed up Monday with boxes and shopping bags of food.

Earthquake survivors need to get enough calories not only to survive but to return to work or begin rebuilding their shattered homes.

It will cost as much as $950 million to rebuild and repair the estimated 35,000 homes rendered uninhabitable by the earthquake, two-thirds of them in Armenia, Colombia's planning director Jaime Ruiz said Tuesday.

More than 600 people were killed in the state capital, Armenia, a city of 300,000 residents that now is largely in ruins. Calarca, a town 15 minutes from Armenia, had at least 110 deaths in the earthquake and more than 200 people were killed elsewhere in the coffee-growing region.

TRIAL: Sentencing phase to begin today

(From 1A)

Prosecutors alleged that the driver, Jose DeLaO, then 16, got drunk at a beer party that college-bound Cassie Henkel threw at her parents' Greenwood residence. DeLaO was involved in the deadly wreck just minutes after leaving the Henkels' party for another celebration in Green Tree.

Before the jury began their deliberation, Henkel's attorneys asked them not to let their verdict become influenced by their own personal beliefs on underage drinking.

Bob Garcia, one of Henkel's attorneys, said his client allowed the teens to drink tequila shots and a keg of beer at his house because it didn't seem unusual to him.

"Billy grew up in a different time and is from what some of us call 'the old school,'" Garcia said. "He began working at 9, began raising a family at 18 ... He was an adult by that time. He's from a different time, that's why he tolerated that party on July 27."

Prosecutors needed to prove that Henkel had "intended to promote or assist the commission of an offense," before holding him accountable for the accident. The offense Henkel was accused of promoting was DeLaO's intoxication, prosecutors said.

But the only liquor DeLaO consumed came from a beer keg that another teen-age partygoer nagged his sister into buying, according to court testimony.

"It's a complicated legal theory. That's why you rarely see these kind of cases go to trial," Garcia told the jury. "There was no evidence that Billy Henkel acted with intent."

Woody Leverett, Henkel's other attorney, asked the seven-man, five-woman jury not to base their decision on moral disapproval or vicarious vengeance.

"I want you to render your verdict based on level of proof that you would need to have before taking a loved one off life support," he said.

He accused prosecutors Teresa Clingman and Ralph Petty of using doubtful tactics to whittle down the level of proof they needed to establish.

Leverett claimed that the prosecutors referred to the teen-age witnesses and drinkers as "kids" to add shock value to witnesses' testimony that teens at the party were drinking tequila shots and playing beer-drinking games.

"We're not talking about kids. Two of these people were adult men ready to go into the Army," Leverett said. "I will remind you that the legal drinking age just a few years ago was 18."

Leverett also claimed that the real causes of the wreck were bad road conditions at the crash site — the intersection of County Road 1150 and Farm-to-Market Road 307.

The main culprit, Leverett said, was a 5,600-pound concrete boulder that DeLaO crashed into after running a stop sign and into a piece of private property.

He said other bad conditions include a kink in the road just north of that intersection, an absence of traffic lights in that area and an obscured stop sign on CR 1150.

"These factors caused the death of a young man. He would have run up that road and no one would have been injured if it would have been straight like a ruler," Leverett said. "If that boulder wouldn't have been there, Joe (DeLaO) would have only scratched up his truck."

He also claimed that the state tried fooling the jury with "trick photography" by taking a picture of the road's kink from a short aerial view, instead of taking it from the direction that DeLaO was driving.

The state, he said, made the Henkels the victim of selective prosecution. For example, Terry Vigil, who bought the keg for her teen-age brother, Tanner Cross, was only charged with providing alcohol to a minor. Cross, now in the U.S. Army, was never charged for bringing the keg to the party.

This sort of prosecution empowers authorities to crack down on private celebrations, Leverett said.

Convicting Henkel would give "the DAs the green light to go after the guy who goes to a business meeting and buys a few drinks for his employees at a restaurant."

This could later apply to people who serve drinks at Christmas parties and bartenders, Leverett said.

"They're in the bucket, too. You're opening up a Pandora's Box, ladies and gentlemen," he said.

But that's not what message the jury would send out by convicting Henkel, Ms. Clingman said.

"The facts in this case are unique. These particular circumstances ... won't fit every situation that occurs — like Christmas parties," Ms. Clingman said.

What the trial boiled down to was whether Henkel exercised reasonable judgment by allowing DeLaO to drive from his party that night, she said.

"Have you heard any evidence to show that he (Henkel) was thinking reasonably?" Ms. Clingman told the jurors. "He gets home, takes a shower and joins the party without saying a word to his daughter, who he says was behind the whole thing.

"Drinking was the entire theme of the party. This wasn't something that was hidden. This was a beer bust; nothing but a drinking party ... and he said his daughter was in control of this."

She said the defense had their own kind of tricks to distract the jurors from Henkel's legal liability.

"They would like for you to think that none of this would have happened if that boulder wouldn't have leapt into the street and caused the accident to occur," Ms. Clingman said. "In the defense team's theory, everyone who went through that intersection should have a wreck. The only cause of this accident was Joe's intoxication."

She said the defense team also used crime scene photos to their own advantage. The defense team showed jurors all their own pictures that emphasized the road's kink — except for a photo that showed the sign's clarity and good condition.

Ms. Clingman asked jurors to bring justice to the victims' families and to DeLaO by making Henkel face his degree of involvement in the wreck.

"Joe has accepted his responsibility in this accident, now we have to make Billy Henkel accept his responsibility for this offense," Ms. Clingman said.

Mrs. Henkel, 44, was also indicted in connection with the wreck, but will be tried in March, officials have said. DeLaO has accepted a plea bargain for 120 days in jail and five years probation.

Jurors will meet back at the courthouse at 9 a.m. today for the sentencing phase.

Clinton administration, GOP differ on how to fix schools

WASHINGTON (AP) — With one-third of America's schools in urgent need of repair, the Clinton administration wants to raise nearly $25 billion for renovations through tax credits for bonds.

The Republicans who run Congress support the idea in general, but they say too much of President Clinton's plan targets inner-city schools. The GOP wants more of the money spent in growing suburbs and neglected rural areas.

There is little question about the need. The American Society of Civil Engineers last year gave public schools an F in a survey of the nation's greatest infrastructure problems. It was the only sector to get the lowest possible grade.

That report found a third of all elementary and secondary schools need some repair, with 14 million children attending class in substandard buildings. Almost half lacked the wiring to accommodate computer systems.

Some recent examples: A high school track team in suburban Burnside, Ill., held practices at a prison with better facilities. At some New York City schools, urinals were hidden behind plywood so bathrooms could become classrooms.

"Our school buildings are literally crumbling," said Luther W. Graef, president of the engineers' association.

The report estimated renovation and repair of America's schools would cost $112 billion, with another $60 billion needed to provide space for an expected 3 million new students over the next 10 years.

Rather than asking Congress for sharp increases in direct spending — something the GOP is reluctant to do — Clinton proposed Monday in his fiscal 2000 budget the creation of tax credits aimed at spurring investors to buy two types of bonds that would raise almost $25 billion over two years for school repair and modernization.

Total cost of the tax credits is pegged at $3.7 billion over five years.

Clinton told the National School Boards Association in a speech Monday that the credits would help provide money to fix up 5,000 schools.

"I don't know how many schools I've been in where there were as many kids back in the house trailers as there were in the regular classrooms," Clinton said. "I don't know how many I've been in where there were rooms closed off because the buildings were breaking down."

One type of bond would raise $22 billion over two years, with tax credits paying the interest.

Half of the money would be set aside for up to 125 school districts with the most low-income students. The other half would be divvied up among the states — again based on the number of low-income students statewide — for state officials to spend as they see fit.

Another $400 million would be set aside for certain needy Native American schools.

Education Department officials say the arrangement should blunt GOP criticism that the bond proceeds would benefit primarily big cities — often Democratic Party territory — instead of addressing growth in the suburbs where more Republicans live.

"This proposal would address both of those problems," said department spokeswoman Julie Green. "The way we're submitting the proposal, the bonding authority would be split half and half."

Republicans do not see it that way. Rep. Bill Archer, chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, is considering an alternative that would relax certain federal bond rules to make existing tax-exempt bonds for school construction more attractive to investors.

Archer, R-Texas, says his approach would spread the money more evenly.

"Kids in rural America and suburban America need new schools, too," Archer wrote to colleagues last year. "Indeed, suburban areas may need new schools the most since population growth in suburbs continues to explode."

The GOP also is questioning the second part of Clinton's proposal that would raise an estimated $2.4 billion over two years by expanding an existing program providing tax credits to bond investors for projects that include matching money from private business.

Such bonds, begun in 1997, have not proven popular on Wall Street, mainly because they are hamstrung by complex restrictions.

"There's only been a couple of deals," said John Vogt, vice president of the Bond Market Association. "Our priority is to emphasize the existing municipal bond market. We think that's an effective part of a school modernization program."

CUTS: Texaco to eliminate 146 jobs

(From 1A)

1,000 positions from its upstream business worldwide. This is the finalization of that announcement."

In other Texaco production areas, Ms. Stiranka said 72 jobs had been eliminated in Bakersfield, Calif., 287 in Louisiana and 125 in Denver.

News of the downsizing follows a Conoco announcement last week that it would eliminate approximately 165 jobs at its Mid-Continent Region headquarters in Midland. Like Texaco, Conoco previously had announced that it would reduce its global work force by approximately 10 percent, or 500 jobs. For Midland, however, the reduction amounted to 20 percent as the company slashed all but 65 of the 230 employees at the Midland office, and reduced the field force to 90.

Calling the downturn in oil and gas employment an "economic disaster," Texas Railroad Commissioner Charles Matthews said in an interview Tuesday that an estimated 25,000 oil industry jobs have been lost in Texas in the past six months.

JOIN: Company expected to be formed by mid-year

(From 1A)

In addition to the production and marketing of oil and gas and natural gas liquids, the company also intends to market CO_2 contributed by Chevron and Arco and delivered to the Permian Basin from Arco's Sheep Mountain pipeline. Weiser said this is nothing new; just a continuation of what they already do.

Corporate executives are confident the new company will be the right formula to maximize assets in the Permian Basin.

The formation of the new company in the mature Permian Basin would result in lower unit costs while creating new opportunity through the combination of staff and producing assets, said Michael Wiley, president and chief operating officer, in a statement.

The two companies share a commitment to core values such as teamwork, participative leadership, safe operations, environmental protection and community involvement, said Peter Robertson, president of Chevron USA Production Co.

The new company is expected to be formed by mid-year, following the preparation of legal documents, final agreements, government approval and transfer of assets.

BILL: Relief could come in two weeks

(From 1A)

the industry could then work for permanent relief.

"At that time it will be democracy in action. We will have to compete with everyone else looking for tax relief."

Asked if the governor would support permanent severance tax relief, Matthews said the governor usually defers to the Railroad Commission on matters of energy. He added that all efforts to move the bill so far were done under Bush's auspices. "The governor knows what we are doing."

He said he began working on the relief bill 90 days ago, trying to build a consensus in the industry and to be a catalyst for bringing political forces together.

"It is hard to build a consensus in the oil and gas industry because everyone has their own idea about how it should be done."

Matthews praised State Comptroller Carole Rylander for her cooperation with the bill. "She understands the issues."

He also gave credit to Reps. Tom Craddick, Judy Hawley, Rob Juenell, Ron Lewis and Buddy West for their help on the bill.

Matthews said the severance tax relief was legitimate because the state doesn't tax any other industry when it is losing money on its product.

Israeli politics turns into TV talk show shouting match

JERUSALEM (AP) — A televised interview with two of Israel's top candidates for prime minister descended into a catcalling shouting match after Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's loyalists turned on the opposition candidate.

Was it political hooliganism, as Labor leader Ehud Barak maintained Tuesday — or, as Netanyahu claimed, a nod to his leadership abilities?

The shenanigans Monday evening on the "Politika" talk show dominated headlines and morning-after talk Tuesday on Israeli radio stations. It also raised fears the political atmosphere in Israel is still rife with violence 3 1/2 years after the assassination of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin by an opponent of his land-for-peace policies.

"What happened there is not fitting for a democracy or for a broadcast authority," Barak told Israel Radio.

Yaakov Ahimeir, the veteran television reporter who moderated the show, said he could barely conduct his interview with Barak between the shouts and hisses of Netanyahu supporters in the crowd.

"Inside the television studio, there was an extreme sense of violence," he said.

According to "Politika" producers, the bulk of the boos came from an organized group of Netanyahu backers who heckled simultaneously, sometimes even spitting. Their noise drowned out Barak's attempts to respond.

Flustered, Ahimeir pleaded for quiet and respect for Barak.

In contrast, Netanyahu's reception had been warm. He left the studio amid boos prompted by Ahimeir's announcement that Barak was up next.

Netanyahu said he condemned political violence — but insisted Monday's outbursts were simply a demonstration of the people's support for him.

"These programs are easily controlled — you just need to learn how to handle them," Netanyahu told Israel Radio. "I think there are large sections of the population who feel that I don't get impartial treatment by the press."

Netanyahu accused Barak of "ruthless hysteria" and questioned the former military chief's ability to lead if he could not even control a television audience.

Labor backers in the audience said they heard cries of "Traitor!" and feared an outbreak of violence during the program.

After Rabin's assassination, Labor leaders accused Netanyahu of failing to contain the violent rhetoric of Likud followers, who compared Rabin to Hitler and called for his death.

Carmi Gillon, who headed Israel's Shin Bet internal security agency at the time of Rabin's assassination, said Tuesday he believed more political violence was possible.

"The danger lies not in those who do the shouting ... but in fringe elements who are influenced by them," he told Israel's army radio.

Netanyahu said Barak needs to display more "humor."

"If an audience shouts, perhaps its not good because you can't hear the person speak, but it's not violence," Netanyahu spokesman Aviv Bushinsky told Israel Radio.

Calev Ben-David, a TV columnist for The Jerusalem Post, said audiences need to be kept out of the studio. "It's like combining 'Meet the Press' with 'The Jerry Springer Show,'" he said.

Ahimeir said the audience spices up the show, but conceded his experience Monday night had him shaken.

"Maybe the country needs a national psychiatrist to analyze (its) soul," he said.

Two sides must talk to begin effort at peace

While attendance at talks aimed at reaching a peace settlement should not be misinterpreted as an indication that both sides in the war tearing Kosovo apart are ready to lay down their arms, it is a hopeful sign that a settlement to the conflict can now be reached.

A spokesman for rebel forces in Kosovo announced Tuesday that the ethnic Albanian rebels will attend the peace talks in France this week that are aimed at ending the 11-month conflict.

In the interest of stopping the bloodletting in Kosovo, the Serb parliament certainly should attend the talks.

Meanwhile, however, the hard-line Yugoslav government still has not confirmed whether it will send delegates to the talks. The Serb parliament is to decide that issue on Thursday.

In the interest of stopping the bloodletting in Kosovo, the Serb parliament certainly should attend the talks. Dusko Matkovic, a vice president of President Slobodan Milosevic suggested in remarks published Tuesday that NATO pressure further strengthens Serbian and Yugoslav resolve to find a peaceful solution to the conflict in Kosovo.

There certainly will be other issues to be resolved once the two sides meet in France, but getting the rebels and Serbs together to at least begin talking about peace would mark a major step forward in the conflict.

The Kosovo fighting has illustrated how weak the world powers truly are when it comes to halting a regional ethnic war such as this. Finally, the Kosovo fighting caused NATO to authorize Secretary-General Javier Solana to launch military action if the warring parties haven't begun talks within a week or reached an agreement by Feb. 19.

The time is at hand for the peace talks. Rebel forces are now committed to the negotiations in France. It is time for the Serbian parliament to also show good faith by attending the talks and working toward a peaceful solution for Kosovo.

Olympic movement needs new leader

The International Olympic Committee has taken some positive steps to limit the opportunity for corruption in selection of sites for Summer and Winter Games, but its leaders need to consider even more reforms before it can hope to restore public faith in the Olympic movement.

Responding to Salt Lake City's blatant payoffs in its successful bid to win the 2002 Winter Games, the IOC board moved last weekend to expel six of its 115 members for accepting cash or other gifts from Salt Lake officials. Three resigned and three others remain under investigation.

Whether this action will rid the committee of all its rotten apples is uncertain. ...

Currently, (IOC) members pick the president, who, in turn, appoints members to fill seats as they become vacant. ...

For all the criticism he has received, Samaranch has achieved considerable good during his 19-year tenure. He added the first women to the IOC and brought in more members from outside Europe, which had dominated the Olympic hierarchy. But Samaranch also tolerated an atmosphere in which cities like Salt Lake felt compelled to shower gifts on IOC members if they hoped to win the Games. ... But if the IOC really wants to put this scandal behind it, now is the time to thank Samaranch for his long service and choose a younger, reform-minded successor.

Knoxville is home to Corpse University

In the Tennessee woods, a tall fence topped with barbed wire and razor wire hides dozens of grisly scenes from public view.

Bodies lie in shallow graves, float in ponds, are crumpled in car trunks, sprawled out on pavement or stacked in coffins in the work shed. Federal Bureau of Investigation agents and various federal, state and local police departments have investigated the site, and know who is responsible for the carnage. But rather than make an arrest, they pay him for the privilege.

Anderson

This three-acre plot of land in Knoxville, Tenn. is not the crime scene for a multiple homicide, but it may be the strangest classroom project in the world.

Commonly referred to as the "Body Farm," it is the laboratory for the University of Tennessee's Anthropology Department. From it comes most of the available knowledge about decomposition rates in every imaginable burial site, as well as body identification methods.

The project is the vision of Dr. William M. Bass, but it's made possible by the dead — about 1,500 of them over the years.

Bass came to the University of Tennessee in 1971 to head the Anthropology Department. In his spare time, he also helped the Knoxville medical examiner's office.

In his years as a teacher, he had studied plenty of skeletal remains, but he wanted to learn more about a subject that forensics students never hear about in the classroom, yet are expected to analyze as professionals. "In my years as a professor or student, seldom did I study a maggot-covered body," Bass said. "(But) that's the kind of thing detectives come across all the time."

He got his chance in 1972. The medical examiner's office had an unidentified body and didn't know what to do with it. Bass asked if he could keep it. A university-owned sow farm, bought from an insane asylum, was made available.

Soon it was known all over the state that a Tennessee professor would take unidentified and unclaimed bodies. The corpses began piling up, Bass told our associate Kathryn Wallace, and the Body Farm was born.

Bass and his students began research projects on the corpses; putting them in all types of conditions and charting the rate of decomposition. If you've ever wondered how police can pinpoint time of death in a homicide or unattended death, or how skeletal remains are identified, you know something about the research conducted on the Body Farm.

"The first question asked at the scene of a crime," Bass says, "is not 'who is the victim?' but, 'how long has that body been there?' How can you answer that question without knowing what bodies look like as they decompose?"

At any given time, about 20 bodies are scattered on the premises, with students as well as federal law-enforcement types like the FBI or the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms carefully monitoring rates of decay.

Current projects include research on bodies left in cars. Two donated vehicles — an Oldsmobile from the school and a Chevy from the state — were stuffed in literally every compartment with corpses. An early research note: Airtight trunk space can preserve the dead for much longer.

Another project involves the rate of decay in bullet wounds. Bullets of varying size are inserted into bodies and then analyzed over the course of several months.

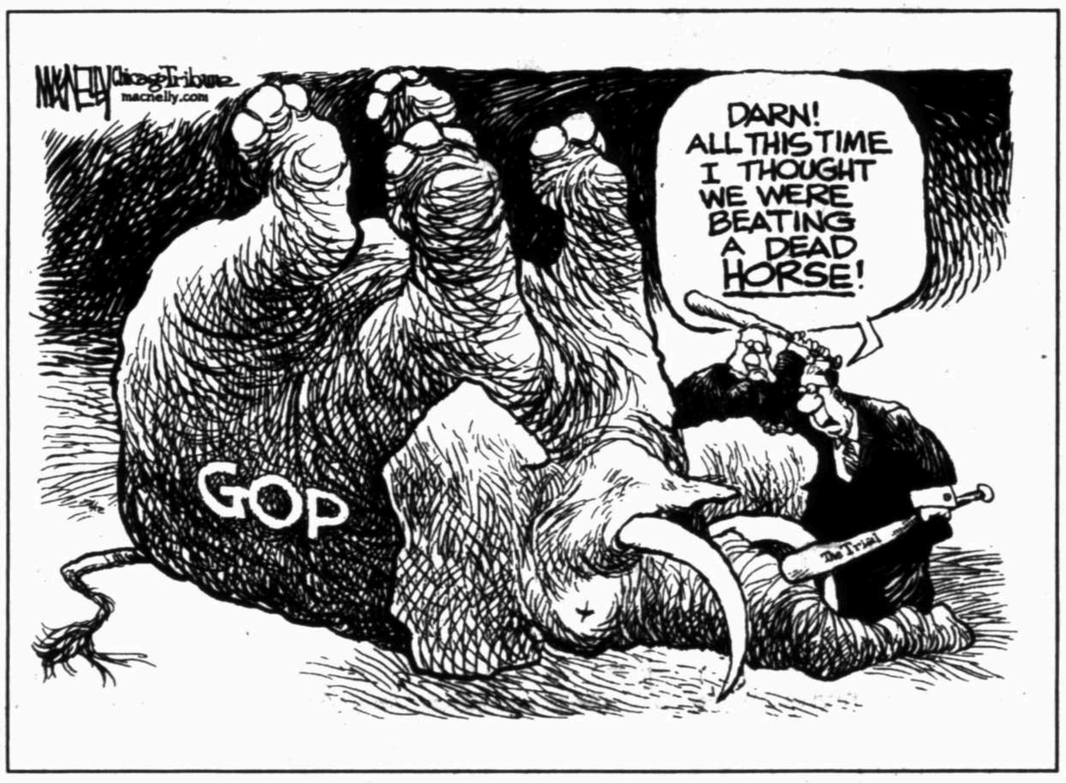

This research is shared with the world and is one reason, along with DNA, that police are becoming more accurate in murder cases.

None of the 1,500 bodies that have been through the Research Center are left to entirely decompose; in fact, no body stays on the farm longer than a year. Every quarter, UT students participate in a very different kind of "clean-up party." Students put on rubber gloves and canvas the area, accounting for every bone of every body. Then the bones are included in the Skeletal Data Base, the only one of its kind in the world. This data bank is why detectives can determine race and sex when only a skeletal fragment is discovered. The theory that our bones and skulls are getting longer? Born of Body Farm research.

All of this has made Bass quite famous. When Australian or British police are stumped about a homicide, they call Bass. When North Carolina engineers needed to know the minimum measurement of a human skull while constructing bars in jail cells, they contacted Bass.

In addition to his continued work at the farm, the 70-year-old Bass still assists in about 50 murder cases a year. And as the fame of the Body Farm spreads, helped by the recent novel of the same name by best seller Patricia Cornwell, Bass has had to hire additional help to field the calls.

High crimes and misdemeanors

The most misused words in the English language are "high crimes" and "misdemeanors." Everyone has his own interpretation as to what they mean.

Buchwald

Perhaps I can be of help. For teenagers a high crime could be lying to your parents about your report card. A misdemeanor could be taking your parents' car without their permission.

A misdemeanor for grown-ups could be telling your friends you can't come to their dinner because your mother is sick, when your mother is in the best of health.

A high crime would be telling an air terminal employee that no one helped you pack your bags.

There are so many high crimes and misdemeanors to be committed. One of the worst misdemeanors is telling your husband you don't remember what you charged at Saks Fifth Avenue.

A high crime that must be punished is informing your doctor that you have been walking two miles a day when, in fact, you haven't been walking at all.

A misdemeanor, which we all commit, is calling in sick when we desire to play golf or tennis or go to the hairdresser.

At the same time, a high crime would be going to your high school reunion and lying about how much money you make.

One serious misdemeanor that could be charged against you is giving fat-free ice cream to your children when you promised the real thing.

A high crime is to not call back your mother when you assured her you would.

A misdemeanor that is criminal is to admit to male friends that you committed adultery when you never did.

A high crime is to give the Bronx cheer into somebody else's voice mail.

Finally, it is a misdemeanor for politicians to drive the president of the United States from office.

It is a high crime to make the American people listen to them.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

If Russia fails, is nuclear program up for grabs?

DAVOS, Switzerland — With Russian inflation running at 100 percent a year, Prime Minister Yevgeny Primakov told a little joke about being forced to accept demands to be disclosed next week by the International Monetary Fund.

"A man is handed a letter from his wife," he said at the World Economic Forum. "He opens it and the page is blank. 'How can that be?' he is asked. 'It's all right,' he replies. 'We don't talk.'"

Safire

He had begged Al Gore to lean on the IMF for repayment delay and new loans, and was turned down for good reason: The former spymaster has no economic plan to deal with congenital corruption beyond "optimizing the prison population."

But if Russia goes under, 30,000 nuclear missiles and the scientists and engineers behind them go on sale. The nation is not "too big to fail" (its population is smaller than Indonesia's, and is slumping toward half that of the United States), but the fallout from its collapse could be dangerous.

The usual cast of pompous Russian reformers and Yeltsin bureaucrats who used to parade around this Alpine conclave is absent. Now, a skeleton crew of Primakov's bankers wring their hands about devaluation and default, in contrast to the single longtime voice of opposition with the plan and self-confidence to turn Russia around — Grigory Yavlinsky.

The economist and former pugilist, 47, is the last democratic reformer left standing. That's because he ignored Boris Yeltsin's seductive revolving door and instead built a grassroots party. In December's parliamentary elections, his Yabloko Party will grow; and running for president in 2000, Yavlinsky will at least be kingmaker.

Western Kremlinologists no longer hoot in derision when I say that; they saw Yabloko make possible Primakov's temporary ascension. Yavlinsky insists it was the only way to ensure free elections after Yeltsin, but power-hungry Primakov may have other ideas.

Yavlinsky preaches the need for "tough love" to top American officials, to get us to assume Russia's IMF repayments without new IMF cash infusions. To regain the confidence of investors, he seeks new ways to reinstill Russian self-confidence.

One way is to break the mold on missile defense. President Clinton, after six years of pooh-poohing a shield against rogue-state missiles, suddenly reversed field lest he be blamed for vulnerability to germ blackmail. But Russians do not want to change the old anti-ballistic missile treaty that kept each superpower defenseless against the other. When I asked Primakov about it, he stayed in the old communist rut: Touch ABM and START II won't be ratified.

Yavlinsky comes at it creatively: "America has a right to missile defense against terrorism, as does Europe, of which Russia is a part." He proposes a nonstrategic missile defense in cooperation with NATO, capable of shooting down fewer than 100 missiles, thereby providing an umbrella against terrorist attack without destabilizing the Russian-American standoff. That would finesse the impasse and ease ratification of START II's reductions.

Russian pride would thus be salved and money saved, but I see other motives: It would provide paying work for thousands of talented Russian technologists now looking hungrily toward Iran and Iraq, and would lessen the pressure for sales of missile and nuclear plants to states already taking advantage of Russian desperation.

Does Russia have anything to offer in missile defense? Using a handy-dandy cell phone, I called Andrei Piontkovsky in Moscow, director of the Academy of Science's strategic studies, to ask what Russia had on the shelf to shoot down missiles.

"The S-300," he replied promptly, as if I were a customer, "two years more advanced than your Patriots." That's dubious; he could not point to a single successful test of that missile against missiles. Besides, the S-300 is the weapon Russia peddled to Greek Cypriots until the Turks warned they would take out any such missiles that were delivered.

U.S. planes broaden assault by firing on Iraqi anti-ship missile launchers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Adding a new dimension to the U.S.-Iraq military confrontation, American warplanes on Tuesday attacked Iraqi anti-ship missile launchers newly deployed along the Persian Gulf. Pentagon officials said the Iraqi weapons had been moved to the area as a threat to ships in Kuwaiti coastal waters.

This was the first time during a recent escalation of tensions with Iraq that U.S. planes targeted Iraqi weapons designed to strike ships. The other, almost daily, U.S. attacks have been against anti-aircraft missile launchers and radars used to threaten U.S. and British planes patrolling Iraq's skies.

Also on Tuesday, a senior U.S. defense official said Iraq in recent days moved a substantial number of surface-to-air missile launchers out of the northern and southern "no-fly" zones to central Iraq. The move appeared to signal a newfound desire by Iraq to preserve its dwindling air defense forces, said the official, who discussed the matter on condition he not be further identified.

The U.S. strikes in southern Iraq were among a half-dozen incidents Tuesday that U.S. officials said showed President Saddam Hussein remains determined to provoke the United States. Saddam has been challenging U.S. and British enforcement of no-fly zones over southern and northern Iraq, and Pentagon officials said they viewed the activation of anti-ship missiles as another form of Iraqi provocation.

In northern Iraq, U.S. Air Force and Marine Corps aircraft fired on Iraqi anti-aircraft artillery emplacements and an air defense radar. The U.S. European Command, responsible for U.S. forces flying over northern Iraq, said the U.S. pilots responded in self-defense after encountering anti-aircraft artillery fire. There were five separate incidents in that area in the space of about one hour, the European Command reported. The U.S. planes returned safely to their base at Incirlik, Turkey.

No details were available on damage to the Iraqi air defense sites.

The incident in the south marked a departure from the pattern of almost daily U.S. air attacks on Iraqi air defense forces — mainly surface-to-air missile batteries, radars and communications links. This time, two Navy F/A-18s and two F-14s flying from the USS Carl Vinson in the Persian Gulf dropped precision-guided bombs on a battery of shore-to-ship missile launchers and an associated radar, officials said.

Defense Secretary William Cohen mentioned the latest incidents in testimony to the House Armed Services Committee.

"We continue to tell Saddam he is not going to move SAMs (surface-to-air missiles) in the north and not move them in the south and put our pilots at risk, and that every time that there is a (radar) illumination or threat to those pilots, they're going to pay a penalty for it. So we are in fact maintaining the no-fly zones," he said.

Jordan questioned; senators view Lewinsky testimony

WASHINGTON (AP) — House prosecutors questioned presidential friend Vernon Jordan on Tuesday and drew concessions they hope will bolster their case for live witnesses at the impeachment trial. Senators also viewed Monica Lewinsky's videotaped deposition and suggested they were underwhelmed.

Jordan, a Washington power broker, testified that President Clinton was directly behind his efforts to find Ms. Lewinsky a job. Jordan also altered his account of a breakfast meeting with the former intern that prosecutors have highlighted in their obstruction of justice inquiry.

The presidential confidant testified last spring he never had breakfast with Ms. Lewinsky, but the former intern testified she had such a breakfast on Dec. 31, 1997, at a Washington hotel. She said she remembered it in part because at that time Jordan suggested she should destroy drafts of her love letters to the president.

Last fall, Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr sent to Congress a receipt from the breakfast. Under questioning by House prosecutor Asa Hutchinson on Tuesday, according to several sources familiar with his testimony, Jordan said his recollection had been refreshed since his earlier grand jury appearance and he conceded the breakfast occurred.

But Jordan remained adamant he never instructed or suggested that Ms. Lewinsky destroy any love letters, the sources said, speaking on condition of anonymity. Ms. Lewinsky has stuck by her testimony that Jordan had told her to "go home and make sure they're not there." At the time, the letters were under subpoena.

The Jordan deposition at the Capitol was contentious at times, according to the sources, but White House lawyers asked only two questions at the end. They had asked none of Ms. Lewinsky a day earlier.

The same sources said Jordan made clear in his latest testimony that the president was behind his efforts to find a job in New York for Ms. Lewinsky and that he gave it attention because he did not want to disappoint Clinton.

When Jordan's name first surfaced in the Lewinsky controversy, he issued a statement in January 1998 saying he conducted the job search at the behest of Oval Office secretary Betty Currie.

In his first grand jury appearance, in March, Jordan stuck to his account about Mrs. Currie. But in later appearances, he conceded that "I do believe that" the president told Mrs. Currie to ask for the job help and that Clinton "knew that I had gotten her a job, he knew that I had gotten her a lawyer. ... He was interested in this matter. He is the source of it coming to my attention in the first place."

House prosecutors are hoping such evolutions or changes in testimony will bolster their case as they make one last-ditch effort to persuade senators to call witnesses for live testimony in the well of the Senate before the trial ends.

"It will be our intention to request live witnesses," said head prosecutor Henry Hyde, R-Ill., but none beyond the three who are providing depositions. White House aide Sidney Blumenthal will be questioned Wednesday.

Hyde said the Lewinsky and Jordan testimony had "strengthened some points" of the prosecution case.

Senators got their first chance Tuesday to see Ms. Lewinsky's videotaped testimony at four closed Capitol sites and came away suggesting there was little or nothing new, seemingly dimming the chance that she will be called to the Senate floor.

"Based on what my staff told me, there is nothing new. If there in fact is nothing new, I would not expect her to be called" to testify in person, said Robert Bennett, a Republican from Utah.

And Larry Craig of Idaho, a member of the Republican leadership, responded "probably not" when asked whether there was anything to be gained in calling Ms. Lewinsky to appear before the Senate after the trial resumes Thursday.

If the Senate's 45 Democrats oppose live testimony, as expected, only six Republicans would have to join them to move the trial toward beginning closing arguments as early as this weekend. The goal of both parties is to vote on the perjury and obstruction of justice charges by Feb. 12.

One Republican senator who viewed the Lewinsky videotape, Orrin Hatch of Utah, said he believed it would be helpful to have her testify in person.

"It's far better for the public to meet her and make up their own minds," Hatch said. "Personally, I found her to be young, vulnerable and credible. I think she'd make a very effective witness."

False numbers

ANDREWS — Andrews was one of 77 locations nationwide targeted by federal agencies for reportedly using false Social Security numbers to get business loans. Terry Kincaid with the Midland office of the FBI said their bust took place at Buildfast. "They opened the business about nine months ago. People who were trying to get business loans, who happened to have bad credit, would come to them," he said. "The couple were producing Social Security numbers for their customers so they could get loans. This is unlawful and is considered fraud." The FBI executed two search warrants and confiscated comp[illegible] and boxes of material from the couple's home and business, Kincaid said. Andrews was the only West Texas town involved in the raid, Kincaid said. No one has been arrested.

Bush to play host

AUSTIN — George W. Bush, Texas governor and potential presidential candidate, will play host next week to a couple more high-profile guests — the head of Britain's Conservative Party and the mayor of New York City. The Republican governor is scheduled to meet Feb. 12 with William Hague, the Tory leader, in Austin. Hague wants to talk about Bush's "compassionate conservatism" themes, said Karen Hughes, the governor's spokeswoman. Bush also will host New York City Mayor Rudolph Giuliani, Ms. Hughes said Tuesday. Giuliani is scheduled to be in Dallas on Feb. 11 for a fund-raising event, she said. He will travel to Austin that evening, spend the night at the Governor's Mansion and have breakfast with Bush.

Sewer treatment upgrade enters final stage

■ City officials expect construction on new treatment facility to be completed within a month.

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

After 2 1/2 years of construction, $12.4 million in improvements at the city's Water Pollution Control Plant are nearing completion.

In the early 1990s, the city crossed the 75 percent capacity level at the sewer treatment facility, at which point regulations called for the design phases to begin for an upgrade of the plant at FM 307 and Interstate 20, said Ken Jones, utilities director for the city.

When a facility reaches 90 percent of capacity, construction must be completed on the expansion, Jones said.

At Midland's plant, however, plans were already on the board to move the large settling tanks, called clarifiers, as the existing tanks were in the 100-year flood plane and were subject to overflow under an intense rain.

So construction was focused on the three new clarifiers and new pumping station, which became operational in October, said Rick Menchaca, deputy city manager.

The old concrete clarifier tanks are empty and their components are either being removed or covered with soil.

This immediately expanded the facility's capabilities, so the Midland plant never reached the 90 percent mark and will not be in a position to see 90 percent capacity until well into the next century, Jones said.

The old plant could process 15 million gallons of sewage a day, whereas the improved plant can handle 21 million gallons a day, Jones said.

This is enough capacity to serve a population of 130,000, which Midland will probably not see until the year 2030.

Because of lessons learned by others during Midland's history, the city had designers work additional expansion into the new plant.

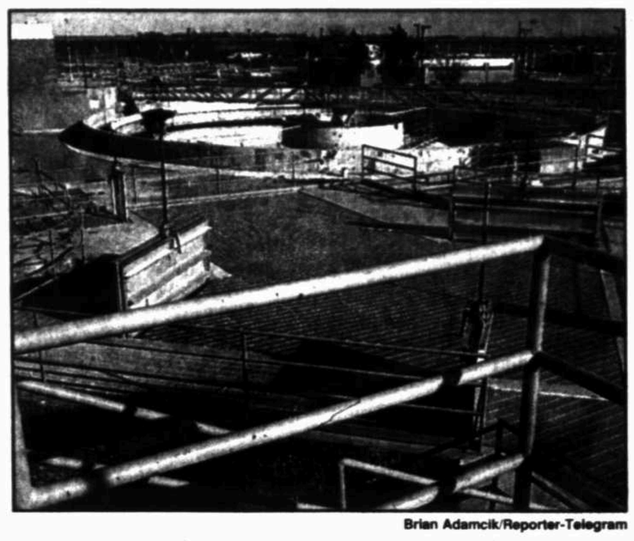

During the 1950s, the city expanded the wastewater treatment facility three times in an effort to keep up with growing sewage volumes.

"The city doubled in size between 1950 and 1960, Jones said.

In the new design, three clarifiers have been built, but space and connections were made for a fourth clarifier, which could expand capacity to 28 million gallons a day if needed in the future.

A number of improvements were made during the expansion project.

Tejano fans recall what they love about Intocable

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

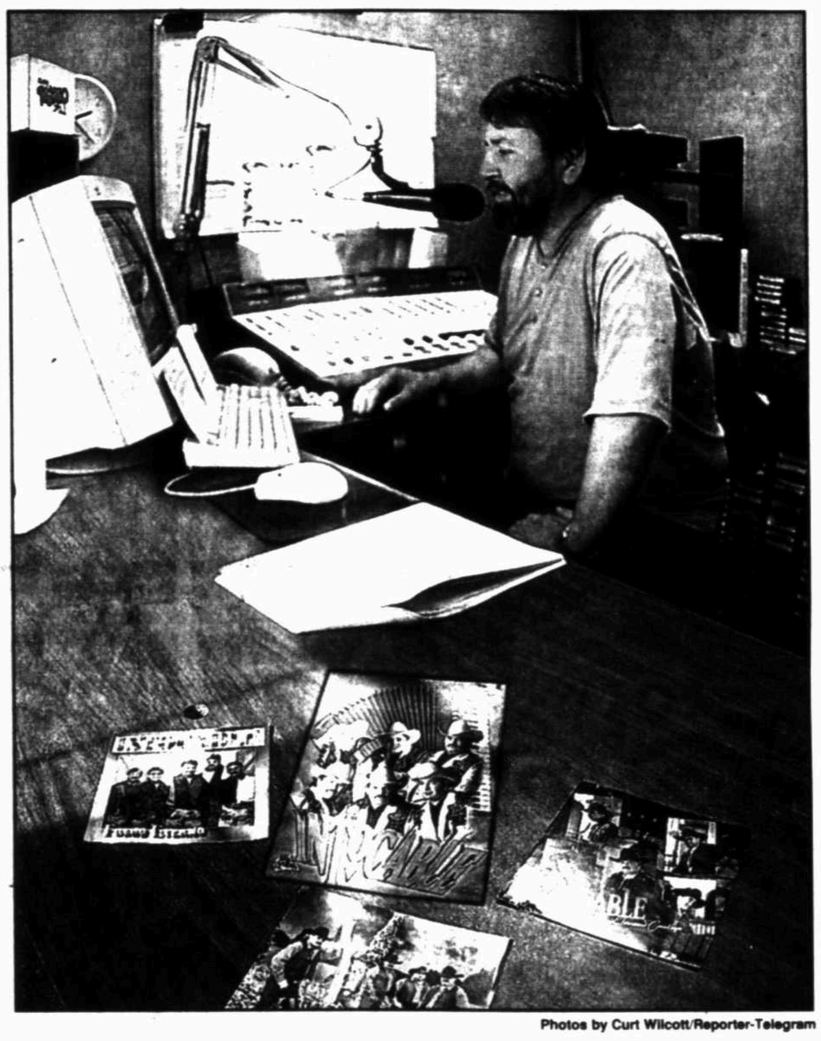

The Tejano-Norteno band, Intocable, "had a unique style all their own," said fan Lisa Pallanes, 31, of Midland.

The band — which lost two of its members and manager in an accident Sunday night — "kind of fused Norteno and Tejano together," she said.

Jose Angel "Pepe" Farias, 23, the band's master of ceremonies and percussionist, and Silvestre Rodriguez Jr., 28, singer and bass player, died after the group's sport utility vehicle had a tire blowout near Monterrey, Mexico. Jose Angel Gonzalez, the band's road manager, died in an ambulance en route to the hospital.

The injured were accordionist-vocalist Ricardo Munoz Solis, 23; drummer-singer Rene Martinez Santos, 26; guitarist Daniel Sanchez, 23, and Munoz Solis, 23, according to an Associated Press story.

Man holds up hair salon, takes money from register

By Richard Acosta

Customers and employees at the Supercuts at 2215 N. Midland Drive were visibly shaken Tuesday night after a man reportedly forced them into a bathroom before taking money from the store's cash register.

Witnesses told police that a man walked into the shop with his hand and arm covered, but they were unable to determine whether he had a weapon or not.

Witnesses said the man lined up all the people in the store and told them to go into the bathroom at the back of the store.

Witnesses said the man lined up all the people in the store and told them to go into the bathroom located in the rear of the store.

There were three Supercuts employees and five customers in the store at the time of the robbery, police said.

The man got away with an undetermined amount of money from the register and fled east on foot, heading toward Midland Drive, according to reports.

The man is described as Hispanic , 5 feet 11 inches tall. He was wearing a plaid shirt and had a maroon shirt covering his head and face, according to police reports.

One eyewitness told police he may have seen the man walking up Midland Drive toward the shopping center soon before the robbery occurred.

Police were called to the scene at approximately 8:30 p.m. Tuesday night. Midland police had a K-9 unit attempting to track the man.

Girl Scouts wrap up award application with handmade blankets for Red Cross

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

The warmth and comfort of handmade blankets could earn two Girl Scouts the association's Gold Award.

Needing a project to show leadership and community activities so they could apply for the Gold Award, Charu Gupta and Kathryn Chandler decided handmade blankets would be something the American Red Cross could use for disaster victims. The project was submitted to and approved by the Permian Basin Girl Scout Council.

Ms. Chandler said the two contacted the local Red Cross chapter, which warmly received the ideas and gave the two members of Troop 386 specifications to make the blankets, telling them the blankets had to be big enough for an adult to wrap up in after a house fire.

Local officials told them, however, that because of limited storage space, the blankets would probably be raffled off with proceeds benefiting local Red Cross efforts.

"We'd been working for the award for quite some time and needed different leadership and community activities to even apply," Ms. Gupta said, noting that a number of disasters last year, such as flooding in Texas, had increased awareness of the Red Cross.

The two have set a goal of making 20 to 30 blankets and have already made six.

"I went to a sleepover recently and six girls helped us make blankets," Ms. Chandler said, adding that another sleepover is planned for this weekend to make more

Big Spring Crime Stoppers tip leads to arrests in vandalism case

By T.E. Jenkins

BIG SPRING — Three adults and two juveniles were arrested Monday on charges of vandalism at the Big Spring Vietnam Memorial in November.

Mike Losoya Jr., 18, Ishmael Rivera, 17, and Norma Godina, 19, were arraigned early Tuesday morning. Bond of $15,000 was set for each.

Officials said damage at the memorial is estimated at $4,000.

Also arrested on charges of vandalism were a 16-year-old Hispanic male and a 15-year-old Hispanic female. The teens also were arraigned Tuesday morning and are being detained at the Howard County juvenile probation facilities.

The arrests were made possible through tips made to the Big Spring Area Crime Stoppers, Detective Dave Mohn said.

'Parents have to keep tabs on their children. Give them a curfew to be home by, and if they aren't there when they are supposed to be, find out why. ... We can avoid a lot of this type of crime just by keeping track of our kids, and keeping them off of the streets late at night.'

— Big Spring Detective Dave Mohn

"The entire case against these youngsters began with a tip to Crime Stoppers. We just kept receiving more and more information through those tips, and finally we were able to arrest the suspects," he said.

Mohn said that once the youths were in custody, "it didn't take them any time at all before they confessed. From there on, the case just broke right in front of us.

"If it hadn't been for Crime Stoppers, I don't think we would have ever caught these kids," Mohn said. "There weren't any witnesses to the actual crime, so the only people who knew who was responsible were the ones who committed the crime."

Mohn said that parents can keep their children out of similar situations by developing and enforcing curfews.

"The vandalism at the memorial took place between midnight and 1 a.m. As you know, Big Spring has a curfew of 11 p.m. on weeknights, and midnight on the weekends. If the parents of these children had enforced this law, two of those kids wouldn't have even been there," he said.

"Parents have to keep tabs on their children. Give them a curfew to be home by, and if they aren't there when they are supposed to be, find out why. If your child is supposed to be staying with a friend for the night, check up on them. We can avoid a lot of this type of crime just by keeping track of our kids, and keeping them off of the streets late at night."

SEWER: Improvements to sewer treatment plant near completion

From 1B

In the old plant, the incoming wastewater was strained across bars that were 1 inch apart, which let rags, plastic bags and other materials through.

"This would wind up in the pumps somewhere downstream," Jones said.

The new straining process removes everything larger than 30 microns in diameter, or about 1/32 of an inch.

All of this material is collected and transported by truck to the city landfill.

Keeping these nonwater-soluble items out of the waste saves on the pumps and keeps the digester tanks from filling with grit that cannot be easily pumped.

The digester tanks are new as well. These use bacteria to process the sludge left in the clarifiers once the effluent water has been pumped off the top, city officials said.

These anaerobic bacteria work best when the sludge is heated, and the new plant incorporates an ingenious method for providing this heat.

A plastic dome holds all of the methane gas that is produced naturally as bacteria act on the sludge, and this methane is burned to keep the digester tanks at a bacteria-friendly 96 degrees.

The wastewater settles for four hours in the clarifiers before being separated into effluent water and sludge. The sludge then spends days in the digester tanks before it is considered safe to move to the next step.

Regulations by the Texas Natural Resources Conservation Commission are strict regarding wastewater treatment, but the city of Midland has managed to bypass strict Environmental Protection Agency regulations regarding effluent discharge — by not discharging any water.

The city saves millions of dollars by not building expensive "tertiary treatment" facilities for effluent water, Menchaca and Jones said.

Instead of expensive chemical treatment facilities, the effluent water that is pumped from the top of the clarifier tanks is used to irrigate TNRCC-licensed effluent farmland.

West Texas' dry, sunny weather is the best climate for this kind of operation, and Midland has been making use of the effluent farm method since 1982.

On this farmland, the bacterially treated sludge is laid down and left to dry for at least eight hours.

Tractors with disk plows then move in and mix the sludge with the top few inches of soil, which mediates the odor and further dries the sludge so that it cannot serve as food for insect larvae.

The organic components, however, have turned thousands of acres of dry range land into lush farmland that is watered with the effluent runoff.

The city owns 2,900 acres near the Water Pollution Control Plant and an additional 6,000 acres in another farm 16 miles away in the Sprayberry area at the end of an effluent pipeline.

Once the sludge is laid down and worked with the soil, it is left fallow for 30 days.

Then the area is cultivated with one of three crops, which is done by contracted farmers. Effluent water is then used to irrigate these crops.

Crops are rotated between cotton, alfalfa and pasture grasses, with the last two crops being used for cattle forage.

No cattle are allowed to forage on land until 30 days have passed since the last application of effluent water — this allows the dryness and ultraviolet solar radiation to destroy potentially harmful microbes.

The only problem with this method is ensuring that no water runoff happens during certain phases of the waste material application.

The TNRCC requires monitoring well water to ensure that no human pathogens are introduced, but runoff water is not allowed to mix with any water that might find its way southeast to the Colorado River.

The city owns buffer zone land around much of this effluent farm area and will probably be looking to purchase more buffer land in the future, Menchaca said.

Construction on the new wastewater treatment plant will probably be completed within a month.

After finishing touches, "we'll probably have a rededication of the facility in the spring," Menchaca said.

Charges against monks shake monastery

BLANCO (AP) — In their flowing black robes and matching hats, the bearded monks of Christ of the Hills Monastery for years were merely a curiosity.

Saying little when they ventured into town to buy groceries or mail letters, the Russian Orthodox monks were a seemingly peaceful sort who lived on a nearby hilltop and welcomed outsiders who came to view a weeping icon of the Virgin Mary.

Lately, though, the monastery's quiet world of worship has been shaken and its relationship with Blanco townspeople strained by an alleged sex scandal involving two monks.

Samuel A. Greene Jr., 54, known as Father Benedict, and Jonathan Hitt, 37, known as Father Jeremiah, each have been charged with three counts of indecency with a child allegedly involving a male religious student who was under 17 at the time of the incidents in the summer of 1997.

INTOCABLE: Fans recall band's 'unique way of playing'

From 1B

The name of the band — based in the Rio Grande Valley community of Zapata — means "untouchable."

"They were very personable. They were not untouchable," said Ms. Pallanes, who has attended Intocable performances in Midland and South Texas. "They are excellent. They always have a lot of time for fans."

Ms. Pallanes' sister-in-law, Romelia Pallanes, 28, said the Spanish-singing band "broke the barrier. They played a mix of Tejano and Norteno. "They have their unique way of playing music."

Midlander Rudy Garcia, 38, characterized Intocable's music this way: "It's pretty good, my friend. Bueno. Si."

Intocable recorded such albums as "Llevame Contigo," "Otro Mundo" and "Fuego Eterno" since its beginning in 1994.

There's a fine line between (Tejano and Norteno)," observed Ricky Ramos, 24, the program director of Odessa's Tejano-music radio station, KMRK-FM. "If the band is from Texas, then it is Tejano no matter what the sound is. If it is from Mexico, then that's what we consider Norteno music."

Ramos said Intocable's music "was more of a Mexican-regional style, which a lot of people consider Norteno ... north of the Rio Grande Valley. That's where their music was based out of."

He said his Tejano-focused radio station does play Norteno music. "There has been such a craze (for Norteno music) after the death of Selena. Everybody went crazy over Norteno music.

"It's all basically the same," he said. "Tejano music and Spanish music in general is basically what country music is: It's kind of tear-in-my-beer style music. It's either about falling in love or losing a love."

In the Texas-Mexico region, the popularity of the late Selena and Intocable was similar," Ramos said. "The difference was Selena crossed over even into the English market. That's what made her probably bigger than Intocable."

Selena died in 1995 two weeks shy of her 24th birthday.

Norteno is an "upbeat style of music," Ramos said. "We here at KMRK don't like to slow it down too much. We do play our love ballads. We've got romantics out there as well. We keep it as upbeat as we possibly can. Intocable was one of those bands that helped out a lot."

To Romelia Pallanes, Selena was "the queen of Tejano music."

She said Intocable's music "makes me clean my house. It gets you in the grove ... to do my chores."

Lisa Pallanes said that members of Intocable "are very good people. They are young and talented. (Their music is) very good, upbeat. They sing about everyday life. It's like folklore.

"If you are from Texas, you are a Tejano," she said.

Official wants to ban sale of some self-help legal software

DALLAS (AP) — Do-it-yourself lawyering is under attack in Texas, where a federal judge says he will ban the sale of some self-help legal software in the state, claiming it amounts to the unauthorized practice of law.

While Texas has become the first state in the nation to move toward outlawing such "cyberlawyer" software, eight others have considered action against publishers of self-help legal manuals that provide help on wills, prenuptial agreements and other documents.

The Texas court battle, which is certain to be appealed, is an important case of competing interests that has nationwide implications for law practice and software authorship and could wind up before state legislatures and in the U.S. Supreme Court, lawyers said Tuesday.

The opinion that is sparking the debate came from U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders in Dallas who said he plans to bar Parsons Technology Inc. from distributing future copies of Quicken Family Lawyer and Quicken Family Lawyer '99 in Texas.

Sanders determined late last month that Quicken's law program goes beyond merely distributing blank legal forms and "falls within the range of conduct that Texas courts have determined to be the unauthorized practice of law."

He rejected the Iowa company's constitutional arguments of free expression.

"Texas is the only state that has taken a position that a book or a software program can constitute the practice of law," said Darrell E. Jordan, who represents Parsons.

He said the company will seek a rehearing once Sanders' memorandum opinion is final and will appeal his judgment to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals if necessary.

Judge bars protesting at Jasper courthouse

By Richard Stewart
Hearst News Service

JASPER — A judge has forbidden groups from demonstrating within two blocks of the courthouse where the first of three white men is on trial for the brutal dragging death of a black man.

State District Judge Joe Bob Golden issued the order Tuesday as lawyers continued individual questioning of jurors in the capital murder trial of John William "Bill" King, 24.

King and two other men are charged with dragging James Byrd Jr. for almost three miles along back country roads in the early morning hours of June 7.

Last summer several Ku Klux Klan and armed black militant groups demonstrated around the Jasper courthouse.

"Any display of firearms or other conduct that might be, in any manner, construed to intimidate, influence or otherwise disrupt or endanger the trial of this sensitive matter is strictly prohibited within a two-block radius of the Jasper County Courthouse," Golden wrote.

"In an effort to ordain civil obedience and respect for all parties involved in this matter, you are prohibited from displaying firearms, destructive devices or any other dangerous weapons, or any signs calculated to cause a breach of the peace or obstruction of justice," he wrote in an order called an "open letter to all groups and persons making public appearances during this trial."

Jasper County Sheriff Billy Rowles and Jasper Police Chief Stanley Christopher said officials haven't heard of any groups planning to come to Jasper during the trial. Testimony, which should last from one to two weeks, is expected to begin Feb. 16.

Security at the 110-year-old courthouse is the tightest in its history, with visitors having to go through metal detectors for the first time. That security is about to get even tighter.

Federal Bureau of Investigation technicians Tuesday began installing surveillance cameras inside and outside of the courthouse.

The Jasper Police Department is also issuing photographic identification cards for courthouse workers, members of the media and others visiting the trial.

Lawyers certified seven more potential jurors Tuesday, bringing the total to 34. In all, 20 white men, eight white women, three black men and three black women have been certified for possible service on the jury. Lawyers plan to certify about 50 jurors before picking the 12 who will be on the jury and two alternates.

One of the white men certified Tuesday told lawyers that last March he hired King to help him install a metal roof on a building. He said King worked for him about four hours.

BLANKETS: Scouts work toward Gold Award

blankets.

Depending on the number of people involved, it can take 90 minutes to two hours to make a blanket, which consists of two panels of 45-inch or 60-inch fabric sewn together, polyester batting, then two more panels of fabric sewn together placed on top, embroidery floss used every six inches to make the blanket quilt-like and binding sewn around the edges.

"Most people think the blankets are neat," Ms. Gupta said. "They're homemade, they're pretty, they're soft and they're warm."

To start the project, the two sent out letters seeking in-kind or monetary donations and community involvement, Ms. Gupta said. In response, they received about $800 in in-kind (materials) and monetary donations to kick off their project. Ms. Gupta said they are still accepting donations and assistance with the project.

They plan to continue making blankets for another month or two and hope another Girl Scout takes up the project or begins a similar community project.

Both girls agreed that the project has made them more aware of the needs of the community and the importance of helping out when possible. It has also inspired them to be leaders, someone younger girls can look up to.

Ms. Chandler said that the project has taught her that communication skills are very important. She said she has enjoyed working with different girls on the project.

"I've worked with younger girls in the past, I enjoy it and they always teach me new things each time," said the Trinity School senior.

She said she has been accepted at Texas Lutheran University and plans to major in pre-law or political science.

Ms. Gupta, a senior at Lee High, said that "Kathryn and I are academically involved and this has given both of us a different perspective on life."

She said scouting has inspired her to set higher goals for her life. She has applied to a number of universities, among them Rice, Stanford and the University of Texas. She is considering majoring in biology and English and philosophy.

"I'd like to be some kind of surgeon, but I also like English and communications a lot," Ms. Gupta said.

She joined Girl Scouts as a ninth-grader because a friend was in the troop. Fellow scouts, she said, have given her moral support. "I never was an outdoorsy person but the other girls are, so I've seen more of that aspect of life and enjoy it."

Ms. Chandler has been in Girl Scouts 12 years, joining in the first grade.

Like Ms. Gupta, she said Girl Scouts has given her a different perspective on life.

"Scouts has opened a lot of doors," she said. "It's given me the opportunity to take a lot of trips and to meet people I wouldn't have otherwise had. It's expanded my horizons."

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll have: 5-Dymanic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, Feb. 3, 1999:

Focus on relationships in general, both personal and professional. You will be unusually verbal and witty, drawing scores of people with your easy style of communication. However, you may prefer to remain a bit aloof, picking and choosing those you want to be close to. Develop greater financial security; work on a long-range plan to make this so. If you are single, you will want a romantic relationship. Finally, you're ready to shed your armor and reveal yourself. If attached, the two of you bond even closer as you make your spouse an even higher priority. VIRGO reads you clearly.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ Allow work to dominate. You might decide to take some time off and relax in the near future. Today, think through what changes you might like to implement. Making a dentist appointment could prove to be an excellent idea. Start on the path to better health. Tonight: Off to the gym.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ Allow more lightness and fun into your life. You could question another's decisions. However, staying clear and direct works well for you. Listen carefully to a child or loved one. This person might have an odd way of expressing himself, but he needs or wants more attention. Tonight: Make love happen.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ If you could make changes at home, what would they be? Pull back and think about what improvements might be needed. As much as a vacation is a good idea, stay focused on the quality of your domestic life. Tonight: Find a constructive outlet for your emotions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ Make an additional effort. You find that another is only too happy to share with you. A loving relationship grows stronger as you detach and understand your significant other. Make time to take the car in for a tuneup or oil change. Tonight: Breeze through a favorite spot or two!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Slow down. Take stock of financial progress; see if you are nearing your goals. Build security and add to your status. Meanwhile, dig into your day-to-day work. You can accomplish a lot in the present atmosphere. Allow a partner to contribute feedback. Tonight: Get into shopping.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★★ You are personality plus. Loosen up and relax. Where have you been holding back? Think through decisions and listen to your inner voice. Take a stand. You don't always have to be helpful to others. It is important to take care of you, too. Tonight: Chase a dream.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ You need some thinking time. Take a leisurely stroll at lunch, or catch up on correspondences. Consider a brand-new exercise program or a diet. You can't offer others much until you are together and feeling good. Tonight: Some hard-earned rest.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ Zero in on what you want. This is no time to be shy. You might need to make a request more than once, perhaps even on another day. You are planting seeds right now. Make time for meetings. Getting together with others proves unusually rewarding. Tonight: A midweek break.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ Take a "hands-on" approach to work. You can't depend on another to come through for you right now. Give some serious thought to changes you might want to act on in the near future. Make calls. Check in on an older relative. Tonight: In the limelight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ A philosophical mind-set is best. Convincing others that you're right might not happen. Make this a mental day; play with different ideas. Do research; seek expert information. Don't get frustrated if your inquiries don't receive an immediate response. Tonight: Listen to a favorite piece of music.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★★★ Close relating remains effective. Others hold the keys to the doors you want to unlock. Though you might not get the green light as much as you would like, it is forthcoming. Talk, logic and charm won't change another's mind. Tonight: Add more romance to your life.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Others are clearly the lead actors. Use your powers of observation. You learn a lot about where they are coming from. Stay aware of immediate priorities; make key calls. You could be overwhelmed. Tonight: Dote on a partner.

As the Kingston Trio asked in one of their folk songs, "When will they ever learn?" Club members persisted in doubling Trump Coup Tommy on nothing but a strong holding in the trump suit, despite Tommy's penchant for changing from a card pusher to a master of the pasteboards when faced with a poor trump split. This was just another example of Tommy's strange ability.

By any standards the auction was a model of efficiency. With only four losers and all points prime, an artificial game-forcing two-club opening by South could not be faulted. North showed a balanced eight points or more and, when North subsequently supported spades, Tommy bid what he expected (hoped might be a better word) he could make. West's double was tantamount to committing suicide.

When dummy came down, Tommy realized that, if he could limit his losses in spades to one trick, the slam was home. His technique was exemplary.

After winning the ace of hearts in hand, Tommy cashed the ace of spades, and the 4-0 split did not faze him one bit. Next came the ace and king of diamonds, followed by a diamond ruff. A club to the queen provided the entry for another diamond ruff. The ace and king of clubs were cleared, dummy discarding a heart, and the table was entered with the king of hearts. With declarer and West each down to nothing but three trumps, declarer led a heart from the table and ruffed with the queen. The best West could do was overruff and lead a trump into Tommy's combined J 9 tenace. One trump trick was all the defenders could collect.

Winkler gives thumbs up to stage version of 'Fonzie'

LONDON — Henry Winkler gave the thumbs up Tuesday to a stage version of his leather-clad king of '50s cool.

"Hey, he's sensational," Winkler said of South African actor Craig Urbani, who plays Arthur "The Fonz" Fonzarelli in a musical based on "Happy Days."

Winkler is a creative consultant to the show, which opens Wednesday. He wasn't interested in recreating the role himself.

"I can dance, but I can't sing," he said. "That would be killing, to hear me sing."

Songs like "Rock Around the Clock" and "See You Later Alligator" are woven into the "Happy Days" plot, along with the show's theme song.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — Goldie Hawn is getting a pudding pot to put next to her Oscar.

Hawn and Samuel L. Jackson on Monday were named recipients of Harvard's annual Hasty Pudding awards, given to performers who have made a "lasting and impressive contribution to the world of entertainment."

Hawn, who won a best supporting actress Oscar for "Cactus Flower," will lead a parade through the streets of Harvard Square on Feb. 11 with male Harvard students dressed in drag.

Jackson will receive his pudding pot Feb. 18 at the opening night performance of the troupe's annual theatrical production, which this year is titled "I Get No Kick From Campaign."

Samuel L. Jackson was named a recipient of Harvard's annual Hasty Pudding award.

BANGKOK, Thailand — Protesters heckled Thailand's forestry chief for allowing the shooting of a Leonardo DiCaprio movie on a protected beach.

Several activists showed up Monday at the headquarters of the forestry department and heckled Plodprasop Suraswadi as he was making a speech. Plodprasop told the hecklers they should leave the matter to the courts and stop "treating me like an animal," the Bangkok Post quoted him as saying.

Several of Plodprasop's employees tried to attack the activists but were restrained by some of their colleagues.

Environmentalists are suing Plodprasop, claiming the 20th Century Fox production is spoiling Phi Island's fragile ecosystem. The filmmakers deny it.

BERLIN — The 49th annual Berlin Film Festival opens next week and will showcase 41 movies, including Robert Altman's "Cookie's Fortune," David Cronenberg's "eXistenZ" and Alan Rudolph's "Breakfast of Champions."

All will compete for the highest honor, the Golden Bear. So will "Shakespeare in Love" and "The Thin Red Line."

For the first time in four years, the festival will open with a German film, "Aimee and Jaguar," a lesbian love story set during the early stages of the Holocaust.

The festival runs from Feb. 10 to 21.

LAS VEGAS — Siegfried and Roy, who were warned 28 years ago that a magic act would never work in Las Vegas, have marked their 4,000th performance at the Mirage.

The two have performed before 6 million people at the hotel-casino since they opened in 1990, according to spokesman Frank Lieberman. Their show has grossed $500 million, he said.

The illusionists, natives of Germany who met while working on a cruise ship, started performing in Las Vegas in 1971.

NEW YORK — Michelle Pfeiffer had trouble relating to the role of Beth Cappadora in "The Deep End of the Ocean," the story of a mother who loses her son in a crowded hotel lobby.

"At first I thought, 'Why is she such a ditz?'" the actress said.

Then something shocked Ms. Pfeiffer one day as she dropped off her kids, 5-year-old Claudia and 4-year-old John Henry, at school.

"I had to get something and turned and said to Claudia, 'Now watch your brother,' and it struck me," she said. "Those were Beth's words to her son. You think, 'I'll never let them out of my sight.'"

The movie, based on a novel by Jacquelyn Mitchard, opens March 12.

EAST GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. — Former President Ford's name will remain on the welcome signs of his hometown, after all.

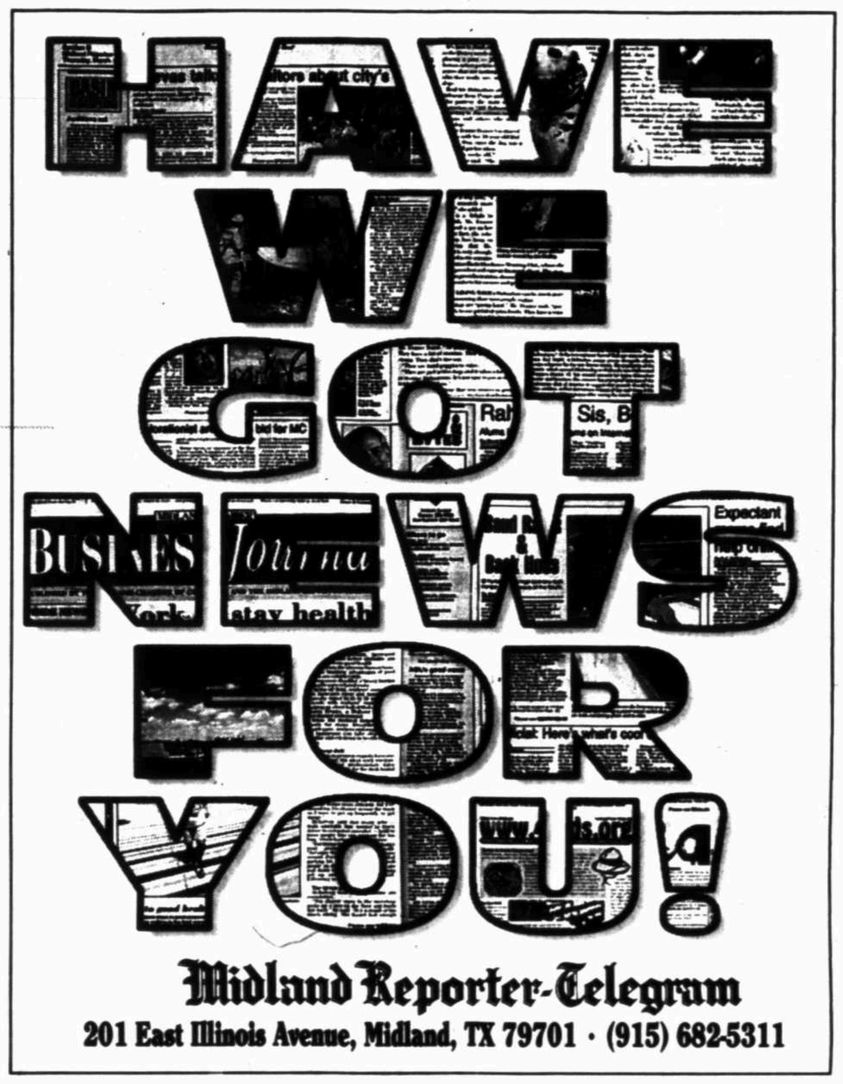

City officials announced a plan last month to replace aging signs with new ones that would not have had Ford's name on them.

But the city commission had no idea there would be so much opposition and reversed itself Monday.

"As thoughtful as this group has been, we all blew it on this one," Commissioner Donald Lawless said. "I'm glad we have this opportunity to put that welcome feature back on."

Ford lived in East Grand Rapids as a child and owned a home there until 1977. He represented the Grand Rapids area in Congress for 25 years.

Jury awards $107 million in damages over anti-abortion Web site, posters

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Abortion foes who created "wanted" posters and a Web site listing the names and addresses of "baby butchers" were ordered to pay $107 million in damages Tuesday by a federal jury that said the tactics amounted to threats.

The plaintiffs, who included Planned Parenthood and several abortion doctors and clinics, sued under a 1994 federal law that prohibits inciting violence against abortion doctors or their patients.

Unlike previous cases, this one did not involve any physical confrontations or explicit threats. Because of that, the anti-abortion activists contended the Internet site and the posters were protected by the First Amendment.

"The jury saw the posters for what they are — a hit list for terrorists," said Gloria Feldt, president of Planned Parenthood.

The jury took 4 1/2 days to reach its verdict, which consisted of $106.5 million in punitive damages and $500,000 in compensatory damages. As part of the tight security surrounding the case, the judge said the names of the eight jurors will never be made public.

The defendants, who included more than a dozen individuals and two anti-abortion organizations, said they will appeal. And they said the other side will be hard-pressed to collect because they have transferred their assets to make themselves "judgment-proof."

"This is a moral and constitutional outrage," said one of the defendants, Catherine Ramey. "There is no threat and they knew it. We use picket signs — they use the courts."

At issue was a Web site called "The Nuremberg Files" that lists hundreds of abortion doctors accused of committing "crimes against humanity" and invites readers to send in doctors' addresses, license plate numbers and the names of their children. When three doctors on the list were killed, their names were crossed off like items on a grocery list.

Similar Wild West-style posters were handed out at rallies and in abortion doctors' neighborhoods, offering a $5,000 reward for information about a "Deadly Dozen" doctors.

During the three-week trial, abortion doctors on the list testified that they lived in constant fear, used disguises, bodyguards and bulletproof vests, and instructed their children to crouch in the bathroom if they heard gunfire.

The defendants maintained they were simply political protesters collecting data on doctors in hopes of one day putting them on trial as Nazi war criminals were at Nuremberg. And they stressed that the materials contained no direct threats.

The defendents maintained they were simply political protesters collecting data on doctors in hopes of one day putting them on trial as Nazi war criminals were at Nuremburg.

Afterward, some of the activists emphasized the verdict would not alter their tactics.

The plaintiffs said their next step is to get an injunction shutting the Web site down.

Legal experts said the verdict is on shaky ground because U.S. District Judge Robert E. Jones used a lesser standard than the Supreme Court, which said threats must be likely to cause "imminent lawless action." Jones told the jury that the posters and Web site should be considered threats if they can be taken as such by a "reasonable person."

Herman Schwartz, a First Amendment expert at American University in Washington, said the verdict goes too far.

"We haven't really reached the stage in free speech that merely saying things without the likelihood that they'll be acted on soon amounts to a threat, a real threat," he said.

"The anti-abortion people have been saying these kinds of things for years. This talk that they're murderers, that they're mass murderers even, is protected speech. We're very solicitous of speech, even the speech we hate."

Bulldogs use free throws to slip by Coogs

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Thank goodness for charity.

In the District 4-5A basketball showdown Tuesday night at Chaparral Center between Midland High and Abilene Cooper, the Bulldogs looked like they were cross-eyed when shooting from the field, but they had 20-20 vision at the free throw line to vault once again into the state playoffs.

Ab. Cooper	54

MHS survived a game Cougar team 59-54, to insure a run at a second consecutive state championship by hitting 12 of 13 free throws in the fourth quarter and 18 of 23 for the game.

"Our fans keep saying they get bored with us winning by 20 points, so maybe they are happy with this one," said MHS coach Jack Stephenson after the game.

The victory gives MHS a perfect 9-0 district record with three left to play while Cooper fell off the pace at 7-2. MHS should now easily go on from here to a third consecutive district title.

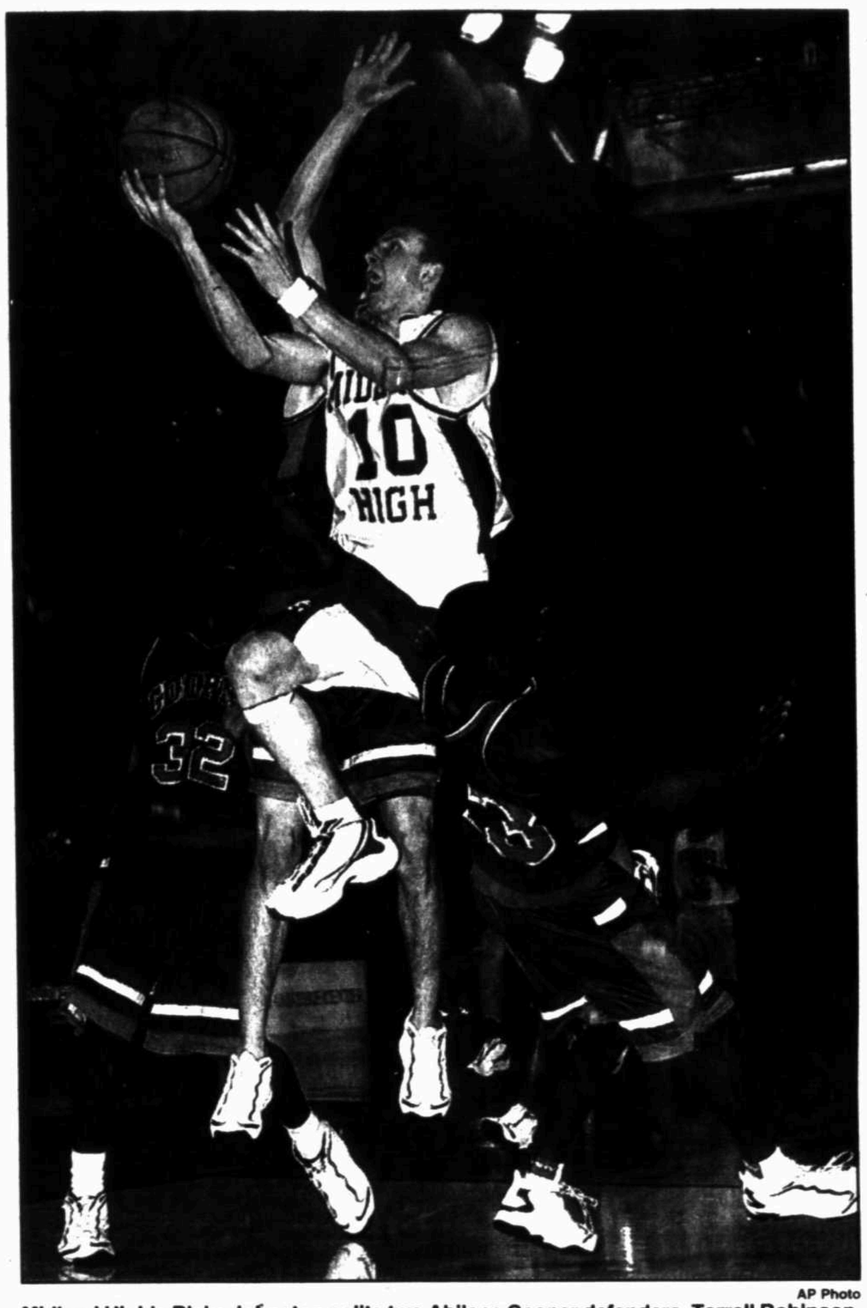

The Bulldogs also ran their on court district winning streak to 36 games.

"We at least kept the tradition and the winning streak going," said senior Brent Winter, who had seven points in the game.

Senior Jay Christian, who had 17 points to fall off his 30-point pace of the last two games, hit two free throws with 5: 49 left in the game to give MHS a 43-41 lead. Up to that point the game MHS had led nine times, Cooper four and there had been eight ties.

Then Jesse Nicholson hit what might have been the key bucket of the night, a corner trey, for a 46-41 lead with 4: 16 left and MHS buried free throws the rest of the way to stake claim to the win.

Girls destroy Cooper, claim outright title

Perhaps it wasn't by definition perfect, but Tuesday night will almost certainly go down that way for the Midland High girls basketball team.

With six seniors playing their final home game at Chaparral Center and a District 4-5A championship in their grasp if they won, the Lady Dawgs had the script for a great evening against Abilene Cooper, and it looked as if all the Lady Cougars could do was sit and watch.

In a game which typified their district season to date, the Lady Dawgs crushed Cooper 78-36 to improve their 4-5A mark to 10-0 and clinch the outright district crown. It was Midland High's first district title in three seasons and the fifth under coach Jim Raughton.

The game appeared to be the culmination of a wave which gained momentum during the season and came crashing down on the poor Lady Cougars. It was the biggest margin of victory in district play for the Lady Dawgs (23-3 overall) who didn't seem to face even the most meager threats after the opening minutes.

"I think the kids just came out and played hard," said Raughton, who was doused with cups of water by each of his 11 players after the game. "This is just what they've done all season. The seniors have shown strong leadership and that's how you get where you're going."

It wasn't just the six seniors who contributed, although their importance to what Midland High has accomplished this season can't be underestimated. Underclassmen also came in off the bench to contribute to the onslaught, dis-

Lady Chaps start softball era with rout

■ Midland College blows out Ranger in first official games, 19-1 and 12-2.

By H.A. Tuck
MRT Correspondent

Midland College's inaugural softball games at the Bill Williams Softball Complex were near perfection Tuesday evening as the Lady Chaparrals outscored Ranger Junior College 19-1 and 12-2, with both contests called after five innings.

The Chaps (2-0) showed a good combination of hitting, pitching, and defense to outclass Ranger (0-2) in the first games of the season for both teams.

In a brief ceremony prior to the opening, Mayor Pro Tem Dale Brown presented a Proclamation from the City Council recognizing the Chaps' new athletic program and urging citizens to turn out in support of the team, several hundred of whom did just that. Bill Williams threw out the ceremonial first pitch at the softball complex which bears his name. Williams had long advocated adding women's fast-pitch softball to MC's athletic programs and was delighted with their initial outing.

Ranger scored the first run of the game on a surprise bunt by lead-off batter Melissa Cantrell, who advanced on a wild pitch and scored on a double by Kim Filson. But that was

Longhorns, Aggies expect to clean up

■ Texas, Texas A&M help reverse flow of top recruits across state borders.

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — These are heady days for college football coaches in Texas.

Not only have they slowed a decadelong exodus of the state's top high school players, but they're also reeling in some of the best recruits from other states.

That combination should make Longhorns coach Mack Brown and Aggies coach R.C. Slocum two of the happiest men in the country Wednesday when freshmen-to-be make their college choices official.

Based on non-binding oral commitments, most national recruiting services rank the incoming classes for Texas and Texas A&M among the best in the country with the Longhorns topping the majority of lists.

National champion Tennessee, Miami and perennial powers Ohio State, Florida State and Notre Dame also are expected to do very well.

"Right now we have Texas No. 1 in the U.S. and Texas A&M No. 6," said Allen Wallace of Laguna Beach, Calif.-based SuperPrep magazine. "Mack Brown has clearly made a statement. He's awakening a sleeping giant. ...

"I think R.C. Slocum saw this as a serious challenge and he stepped

Midland High girls' soccer team repels challenge by Central, 3-1

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

The San Angelo Central girls will have to hold off their hopes of replacing Midland High in the District 4-5A hierarchy, because the Lady Bulldogs aren't ready to give up their spot.

The Midland High soccer team upstaged the upstarts from Central with a resounding 3-1 victory Tuesday at the Midland High Soccer Field.

Beating a Central club which had won nine straight coming in, was everything that Midland High (8-4) needed on this day. The Lady Bulldogs have been nothing short of exceptional since falling to Lee in the District opener. This win was their seventh straight district over Central.

"We are riding high again and the girls feel really good. They should. We played a good game today," said MHS coach Scott Hodkinson, whose team has won its last three games by a 16-1 margin.

The win moves MHS to 3-1 in district, a half-game behind 3-0 Lee. However, Central was the biggest obstacle for MHS to overcome before the Feb. 17 rematch with Lee at Midland High. Now only two speed bumps (Abilene High and Permian) are on MHS' district road.

"We wanted to make sure we stayed in on the run for the top of the district," said MHS forward Kim Elger, who opened the game with her sixth goal of the season. "We came out here trying to play our toughest game. We worked as hard as we could and got the job done."

They did so by playing quality soccer. All three MHS goals followed nice passing combinations. In the 23rd minute, Elger took a corner kick from D'Lynn Knous and fired a shot for the first goal of the game.

After Central tied the game three minutes later, MHS went ahead for good. Melinda Baca served up a nice pass for Ashlee Winkler to drill into the Central net for the go-ahead goal in the 32nd minute.

Baca was rewarded in the second half on the nicest passing combination of the game. Ali McCallum served the ball inside Central's penalty box to Jessica Rodriguez, who slid a pass for Baca to move with. Baca, the team's leading goal scorer with seven, raced across the box, before planting and rifling a shot into the upper left corner of the goal.

"We talked about the fact that we match up well against a team like Central because we are experienced and we know what to do with the ball," Hodkinson said. "I think that was obvious sometimes because of how controlled the ball and spread out the field. I was pleased with our patience. We didn't looked

Loss eliminates Lee girls from contention for 4-5A playoff spot

Staff Report

ABILENE — Frustrations continued for the Midland Lee basketball teams Tuesday night at Abilene High in a District 4-5A doubleheader, but while the boys have merely been resigned to playing out the string, the girls now know they'll be sitting home for the playoffs.

The Rebels played Abilene High tough before falling 72-64 to the contending Eagles. The Lady Rebels, in a game mirroring their up and down season, started slowly, had a big third quarter, but struggled in the fourth quarter to lose 43-37. That loss guaranteed that Abilene High (19-7 overall, 7-3 in district) will take the district's third playoff spot along with Midland High and Odessa High and that Lee's final regular season game against Abilene Cooper next Tuesday won't carry any meaning.

The boys game was tight throughout, with the two teams tied 30-30 at halftime, but Abilene High's Terrence Crisp hit a 3-pointer at the end of the third quarter to make the score 52-44 and the Rebels couldn't catch up.

While the game still went down as a loss, it was better effort for Lee than when the first time the two teams met. In January, the Eagles (18-10, 5-3) defeated Lee (9-18, 2-7) 71-54.

"I think we were prepared for them a little better and knew what to expect this time," said Lee coach Jon House. "I was pleased with our effort."

Orlando Castillo led the way with 16 points while fellow seniors Matt Winston and Jeramy Conaway had 12 and 11 points respectively. The best news, though, might have been the performances of two players recently on the junior varsity. Cory Simmons hit three 3-pointers in the fourth quarter while freshman Eric Winston had five rebounds.

"I'm going to try to play some of those young guys a little more," said House. "We've played a little bit better (in the second half of district). We're playing for a little bit of pride this time. This is an unusual position for us over the last six or seven years."

Marcus Eckert led Abilene High with 22 points while Crisp added 19.

Lee won the junior varsity game 71-45 to improve to 17-5 overall and 7-2 in district. Calvin Wright had 17 points for the Rebels and Wendell Smith added 11.

The Lady Rebels (13-12, 5-6) struggled early, falling behind 25-15 at halftime. However, they went on a 13-2 run in the third quarter to claim a one-point lead going into the fourth period before going dry offensively and scoring only nine points.

KeKe Strambler led Lee with 15 points. Dee Harris had 10 for Abilene High.

Lee won the JV game 54-53 in three overtimes. Michele Kennerly had 18 points while Kim Strambler had eight steals.

Look at '94 list proves being recruited is no guarantee of success

By Mark Wangrin
Austin American-Statesman

AUSTIN — There are signatures, some promises, grand expectations and a round of smiles all around.

There are no guarantees.

Signing day is a time when even the winners don't know if they've truly won, sometimes for half a decade or more.

Five years ago, the 1994 Fabulous 55 was filled with hopes and dreams, but reality proved to be harsh for some of the players. Ten of them never played a down for the school that signed them. One player, Damion Witherspoon of Red Oak (No. 49), never qualified academically and was shot and killed during a fight in Dallas in January, 1996.

Some chose different paths. One player, Mark Farris of Angleton (No. 40), opted to play pro baseball. Another player, Joseph McCray of Houston Forest Brook (No. 48), failed out of Texas Tech and is now performing with a rap group in his hometown.

Some of the top names never panned out. Of the top five, only Baylor tailback Jerod Douglas (Converse Judson, No. 3) earned any all-conference honors.

There were stars, but they were just as apt to come from near the bottom of the list (No. 37 Dat Nguyen of Rockport-Fulton; No. 52 Wane McGarity of San Antonio Clark) as the top (No. 8 Byron Hanspard of DeSoto).

Only three players — Hanspard; offensive guard Alan Faneca of Rosenberg Lamar (No. 31), who went to Louisiana State; and Nguyen — earned All-America honors. Only five others earned at least one first-team all-conference berth.

Two will still be playing this fall. Offensive lineman Jay Smith of Oklahoma, who has survived two Achilles' heel injuries, was granted a sixth year in 1999 to complete his eligibility. According to OU sports information director Mike Prusinski, Smith will have the dubious distinction of being the first Division I-A player to have toiled for four head coaches (Gary Gibbs in '94, Howard Schnellenberger in '95, John Blake from '96-98 and Bob Stoops in '99).

Fresh out of high school in '94, Angleton's Farris chose a pro baseball contract from the Pittsburgh Pirates — they offered him a reported $820,000 bonus — over a chance to quarterback the Aggies. After five years in the minor leagues, Farris — who said he was inspired by the success of another baseball bonus baby turned quarterback, Florida State's Chris Weinke — enrolled at A&M last month and will have four years of eligibility left with the Aggies.

GIRLS: Rogers pours in 20 point during blowout

(From 1C)

playing the type of balance which has been a trademark of the Lady Dawgs.

"All the girls knew how much it meant to all of us, not just to the seniors," said senior Heidi Lange, the team's leading scorer on the season who had 14 points against Cooper. "Everyone was just great tonight. No one let us down in this game."

Cooper (12-13, 4-6) had leads of 2-0 and 4-2 in the opening minutes, but after the score was tied 6-6, the Lady Dawgs scored the final 16 points of the first quarter and the Lady Cougars never had a chance after that.

Sophomore Edrea Rogers and Lange led the Midland High attack in the first quarter with eight and seven points respectively. In the second quarter, the Lady Dawgs went on a 15-0 run which was only broken on a jumper by Cooper's Amanda Partin which made it 44-14 at halftime.

Although she hasn't started a single district game this season, Rogers has become as dangerous an offensive weapon as anybody for the Lady Dawgs over the last few weeks. Rogers came off the bench for a game-high 20 points against Cooper.

"Coach (Raughton) and I discussed it and if it's working we're not going to change it," said Rogers, who also lettered last season as a freshman. "It's the seniors who give us our leadership but I know I can help out a lot when I go out on the court."

Rogers wasn't the only sophomore who came off the bench to contribute, as post Laura Koch had one of the best games of her varsity career with 12 points. Add to that the performance of seniors Michelle Acosta (the point guard who had nine points and forced a good number of Cooper's 34 turnovers), Nina McAlister (eight points and a game high 11 rebounds) and Clarissa Leonard (eight points off the bench) and Cooper never had a chance.

Contributions from all those players explain why the Lady Dawgs can hang up a district championship banner, and it's what Raughton expected when the season began.

"For us to be 10-0 I'm not surprised," said Raughton. "I knew coming in that these girls would get after it."

With the district title already in hand, there's still the matter of those two remaining district games, which if the Lady Dawgs win, would match the accomplishment of the 1995-96 MHS team.

"We want to be one of the ones to go 12-0," Lange said. "If you go 11-1 you're always going to remember that one, not the other 11."

BOYS: Nicholson comes through with huge shot

(From 1C)

"Jesse (Nicholson) had a really bad game going and I told him he owed us one," Stephenson said. "Then he hit that three and gave us a little distance. That was a big shot."

Nicholson said, "When I took that shot, I was thinking I had to make up for everything I had messed up on. I'm sure glad it went in."

Charles Tatum, who led MHS with 23 points, hit all eight of his free throws in the fourth period and Christian dropped five of six at the charity stripe. Christian, who had scored 67 points in his last two games and was coming off a 24 rebound effort, had a mere human performance with 17 points and 13 rebounds.

"I still felt like I had a good game," Christian said. "I drew a lot of double teams, but was able to find some others flashing open. I was ready for this game because Cooper is supposed to be our stepping stone as far as district is concerned and this was our second win over them."

MHS hit just 36 percent from the field in the first three quarters, but still came out a winner.

"These guys are fantastic," said MHS assistant coach Craig Raughton. "They find a way to win."

The Bulldogs held Cooper's Felton Freeman to just 12 points. He had only six the first time the two teams played.

However, Robbie Eales turned in a huge game with 23 points and 12 rebounds to keep the Cougars in the game.

"We had a chance, but just didn't get it done," said Cooper coach Dan Harris. "At least, we made them play the type of game we wanted. I would love to play them one more time here because that would mean we would be playing in the Region I finals and I could handle that. I think we showed we can play with them."

Senior guard Tatum isn't satisfied with the playoff berth.

"We still have three district games left and we aren't going to fall asleep because we're in the playoffs. We need to finish out strong. It's all business until the end of March."

In junior varsity action, MHS took a 54-49 win over Cooper. T. Jackson and Jimmy Smith each had 12 points while Thomas Carrington had 11 and Ray Johnson 10.

RECRUITING: UT is No. 1

it up. He appropriately reacted to a change in circumstances with his major rival and they shouldn't be underestimated."

Tom Lemming of Chicago-based Prep Football Report has the Longhorns first and the Aggies fifth or sixth.

"Those two schools dominated the conference," Lemming said. "There's not even a close third in the Big 12."

Bobby Burton of the National Recruiting Advisor said he ranks Texas first and A&M among the top five. Although his publication is based in Austin, this is the first time he's ever had the Longhorns among his top 10. He's also never placed two Texas schools so high.

The Longhorns and Aggies wowed everyone this year by soaking up most of the state's best players and using their remaining scholarships on elite guys from other states.

Texas has USA Today's offensive and defensive high school players of the year in quarterback Chris Simms of Ramapo (N.J.) High and linebacker Cory Redding of Galena Park North Shore, plus three stars from Colorado. Simms initially committed to Tennessee before switching shades of orange and picking Austin.

A&M is bringing in four of the state's most highly sought recruits in Bryan defensive lineman Ty Warren, Cypress Falls linebacker Jason Frederick, Brownwood quarterback Colby Freeman and defensive back Sam Davis. The Aggies also are adding three California gems and two from Louisiana.

"They cherrypicked some players from out of state who they really wanted and targeted. That's what pushes them into the nation's elite," Burton said, noting that in past years programs such as Michigan and Florida State have used Texas talent as the icing on their classes.

According to Wallace's count, four of the top eight Texas recruits will become Aggies and two will be Longhorns.

Of the consensus top 30 players, an overwhelming majority choosing are going to Texas colleges — quite a change from the years when more than half fled the state.

"Notre Dame, Tennessee and Kansas State are the only teams that came to Texas and went away with more than one very talented player," Burton said. "Usually Michigan, Florida State, Oklahoma and other schools do that, too."

Another big shift is an all-for-one attitude growing among state schools. The reduced infighting and increased goodwill between programs includes Brown and Slocum.

For example, Aggies recruit Freeman was congratulated on his choice of schools in a letter — from Brown.

"I think it's great because it was really frustrating to see teams out of state win big games with so many players from Texas," Freeman told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "What I wanted to do was try and be part of the start of building teams in Texas into national powers."

Texas and Texas A&M kick-started their recruiting efforts by each beating Nebraska. The Longhorns also were aided by Ricky Williams winning the Heisman Trophy, while the Aggies got a boost from beating Kansas State for the Big 12 title.

With the state's two heavyweights moving to the forefront nationally, other Texas schools were left to fight for their leftovers.

Texas Christian, which rebounded from a one-win season to Sun Bowl champions, probably had the next-best class but it's not considered among the top 25 nationally.

Baylor, slowed by a coaching change, has closed strong and may salvage a decent class. Texas Tech has done an even better job despite having fewer scholarships to give because of NCAA sanctions.

rushed or hurried. We looked calm and collected."

Central (9-3 overall) had some problems. The Lady Bobcats were called for nine offsides (eight of which were in the first half). The offsides really seemed to prevent the Lady Bobcats from getting any flow going.

"We feel like we are better than the way we played today," Central coach Jim Bragg said. "I don't think we were beat before we came over here, but we had won nine in a row, had defeated Wichita Falls Rider and Permian and were a little cocky. We needed our butts in place. The good thing is we get to play them again."

In JV Action: A goal by Erica Carrillo gave MHS a 1-0 win over Central. MHS is 4-0 overall and has not allowed a goal.

UCLA'S Davis issues apology, receives reprimand by Pac-10

LOS ANGELES (AP) — UCLA's Baron Davis avoided being suspended by the Pacific-10 Conference on Tuesday by issuing a public apology for comments he made about the officiating after his team's loss at Washington on Sunday.

Davis, a sophomore point guard, fouled out of the game with 4:34 remaining and 13th-ranked UCLA trailing the Huskies 77-70.

After being called for his fifth foul, Davis was called for a technical foul after throwing his mouthpiece, and said after the game he believed the Bruins "got cheated" by referee Terry Christman.

UCLA coach Steve Lavin excoriated Christman after the technical foul was called on Davis, and received two technicals and an ejection himself.

"I would like to apologize to basketball official Terry Christman and the Pacific-10 Conference for my comments following our game in Seattle on Sunday afternoon," Davis said in his statement, distributed to the media by the UCLA sports information office.

Payton needs liver transplant after contracting rare disease

By Rick Gano
AP Sports Writer

ROSEMONT, Ill. — Walter Payton, gaunt, tearful and barely resembling the dashing, durable Chicago Bears' Hall of Famer who rushed his way into the NFL record books, got to the point quickly on Tuesday:

He has a rare liver disease and needs a transplant to live.

"To the people that really care about me, just continue praying," said the 44-year-old Payton, who choked up when he embraced his 17-year-old son, Jarrett.

The disease, primary sclerosing cholangitis, afflicts just three in 100,000 people, said Payton's physician, Dr. Joseph Lagattuta. The cause of the disease, which blocks the bile ducts, is unknown, but isn't related to alcohol, steroids, hepatitis or immune deficiency, he said.

Patients in Payton's condition survive an average of two years unless they receive a liver transplant, Lagattuta said. Symptoms include fatigue and jaundice — yellowing of the pigment of the eyes and skin.

Asked if he was scared, the NFL's all-time rushing leader snapped: "Am I scared? Hell yeah, I'm scared. Wouldn't you be scared?"

"But it's not in my hands anymore," he added. "It's in God's hands."

In 13 years with the Bears, Payton's trademarks were his vaulting goal line leaps and a punishing running style. He stiff-armed and barreled past tacklers in the open field almost as often as he dodged them.

Rumors about Payton's health spread last week after he appeared at a news conference where his son announced he would play college football for Miami. Payton said those rumors prompted his disclosure.

"We wanted to get everything straight before things got bad," said Payton, who wore sunglasses and an NFL jacket and bluejeans that couldn't hide his thinness.

Payton is being evaluated for a transplant at the Mayo Clinic, where former Arkansas Gov. Jim Guy Tucker received a liver transplant in 1996 for the same disease. Tucker was on a waiting list for four months.

Lagattuta said 88 percent of people who receive a liver transplant are alive after a year, and the long-term survival rate is "very promising." He said most patients can return to an active life if they receive a transplant.

Patients in Payton's condition survive an average of two years without a transplant, the doctor said.

Doctors say he won't get preferential treatment because of his celebrity.

News of Payton's illness sobered those who knew him as a muscular, fearless player.

"We're all humans and regardless of how rich we are, how fortunate we are, whatever we maybe, things like this happen," said retired Bears fullback Roland Harper, who blocked for Payton.

Former Bears coach Mike Ditka called Payton "the greatest football player I've ever seen."

"Plus, he's one of the sweetest human beings I know," Ditka said from New Orleans. "And if that's not important, I don't know what is."

Bears owners Ed and Virginia McCaskey issued a brief statement saying they were "devastated to hear that Walter is sick."

"He's a very dear person to our family and the entire Bears organization. We'll do all we can to help Walter in his current battle."

Said NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue: "The love, support and prayers of the entire NFL are with him."

Lagattuta said the disease is difficult to diagnose and can go undetected for years. He initially thought it might be a gall bladder problem when Payton told him in October that he had felt ill for a few months. The liver problem was diagnosed within the last two weeks.

Lagattuta said Payton has significant bile-duct blockage. To aid his digestion and give him adequate nutrition, a plastic tube was surgically inserted between the vessel that carries bile from the liver to the intestines.

"It's amazing, I can eat anything I want, as much as I want, and I still can't gain any weight," Payton said.

In his final season with the Bears in 1987, the 5-11 Payton was listed at 202 pounds.

Asked how much he weighed now, Payton wouldn't say.

Instead, he replied: "You want to pick me up?"

It probably wouldn't be that hard.

A first-round draft pick from Jackson State in 1975, Payton carried the load for mediocre Bears teams early in his career before leading Chicago to its only Super Bowl appearance, after the 1985 season.

Selected to nine Pro Bowls and inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 1993, the player known as "Sweetness" holds NFL career records for yards gained, 16,726, and carries, 3,838.

He posted 77 100-yard games and 10 1,000-yard rushing seasons. His 275-yard rushing performance against Minnesota in 1977 still stands as the NFL record for most rushing yards in a game.

almost the end for the Rangers, who managed only one more hit for the five-inning contest.

Jennifer "J. R." Chavira, a left-handed pitcher from Riverside, Calif., shut down the Rangers the rest of the way. She struck out one in the first, three in the second, two in the third, one in the fourth, and one in the fifth, to notch the first victory.

When Midland came to bat in the first, the crowd began to squirm as the first two batters were easy outs. But then came an explosion as Francesca Salcido from Midland singled and Laura Martinez of Abilene blasted a homer over left center. Following a walk and a single, Jessica C

HOW TO READ THE MARKET IN REVIEW

Here are the 1,675 most active stocks on the New York Stock Exchange, 925 most active on the Nasdaq National Market and 405 most active on the American Stock Exchange. Stocks in bold are worth at least $5 and changed 5 percent or more in price. Underlining for 50 most active on NYSE and Nasdaq and 25 most active on Amex. Tables show name, price and net change, and one to two additional fields rotated through the week, as follows:

Name: Stocks appear alphabetically by the company's full name (not its abbreviation). Names consisting of initials appear at the beginning of each letter's list.
Last: Price stock was trading at when exchange closed for the day.
Chg: Loss or gain for the day. No change indicated by ...
PE: Price-earnings ratio. Derived by dividing closing price by company's earnings per share for the most recent four quarters.
PPE: Projected price-earnings ratio. Derived by dividing closing price by company's projected earnings per share for upcoming 12 months. PPE supplied by I/B/E/S, Institutional Brokers' Estimate System. Is a consensus forecast of all analysts following the company. Only companies with three or more analysts following them have a PPE.
How to use: In general, if PPE is lower than PE, analysts believe earnings will be going up. If PPE is higher, they expect earnings to fall. The numbers can be helpful in following stocks but as with all financial data are only one of many factors to judge a company by. Consult your financial advisor before making any investment decision.

Award winner

Hearst Newspapers has selected Brandi Alexander, a Reporter-Telegram classified consultant, a winner of the 1999 Hearst Newspaper Marketing Excellence Award.

"It's a very prestigious award," said Reporter-Telegram Publisher Charles Spence. He said only 12 are awarded by Hearst's community newspapers, including the Reporter-Telegram. Including Hearst's larger metropolitan newspapers, 18 Hearst associates receive the award.

Ms. Alexander will travel to New York City this spring to receive her 1999 Marketing Excellence Award crystal trophy at the Good Housekeeping Dining Room at Hearst Corp. headquarters. During her visit to New York City, she will also attend a performance of the Broadway musical "Footloose."

Dollar falls

NEW YORK — The dollar fell sharply against the yen Tuesday as Japanese interest rates rose and an influential government official made encouraging remarks about Japan's recovery efforts.

The dollar fell against the euro as U.S. stocks and bonds took a fall.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 112.05 Japanese yen, down from 115.08 late Monday. The euro was quoted at $1.1342, up from $1.1297.

Traders scooped up yen as yields on the most widely-watched bond in Japan, a 10-year Japanese government bond, rose to 2.300 percent, the highest level since July 1997. Although the yield on U.S. Treasury bonds also rose Tuesday, the difference between the two rates narrowed, giving investors an incentive to capture yen.

Stocks stumble

NEW YORK — Stocks prices declined Tuesday as investors, worried that higher interest rates will sack future corporate earnings, took profits for the second day in a row.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 71.58 to 9,274.12, extending Monday's 13-point loss. The Dow was down 147.53 points before recovering.

Broader stock indicators were lower as well, led by technology shares. The Nasdaq composite declined 46.67 to 2,463.42. The Standard & Poor's 500 lost 11.01 to 1,261.99.

Stock prices began falling early on Wall Street after Japan's interest rates rose to their highest levels since July 1997.

Oil prices fall

In recent weeks, the American Petroleum Institute and the U.S. Energy Department have reported bigger-than-expected declines in supplies of heating oil and unleaded gasoline as refinery runs slowed.

World producers have been using U.S. shores as a dumping ground for oil that few other nations are prepared to purchase amid global economic troubles. And while Venezuela, the largest exporter to the United States, has been hinting at additional output cuts from top producers, market participants say that country has yet to meet export cuts nearly a year after they were promised.

Investors have given back recent gains on that account, preferring to take a wait-and-see approach for crude values, keeping them close to 12-year lows despite smaller product inventories going into the higher-demand gasoline season.

Heating oil and unleaded gasoline futures edged higher as investors bet inventories will continue to tighten, while natural gas futures staged a technical recovery.

March crude fell 7 cents to $12.30 a barrel; March heating oil rose 0.34 cent to 37.61 cents a gallon; March unleaded gasoline rose 0.34 cent to 37.61 cents a gallon; March natural gas rose 7.4 cents to $1.818 for each 1,000 cubic feet.

Thin line between Wall Street, Main Street

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve officials like to say that interest-rate policy is aimed at Americans on Main Street, not at Wall Street's hard-charging traders.

But with stock-market gains increasingly propelling everything from record home sales to car buying, many economists believe the Fed has little choice but to cater to the whims of a touchy, overvalued market.

"It's obvious that stock prices are driving consumer spending to an extent I don't think we have seen before," said economist Norman Robertson of Smithfield Trust Co. in Pittsburgh. "And so the Fed is indeed over a barrel."

The relationship, said economist Robert Dederick of Northern Trust Co. in Chicago, is "sort of a mutual admiration society."

"The economy is doing well and therefore the stock market is doing well. The market is doing well and that helps the economy do well," he said.

The problem is that the same relationship can hold true in reverse. A drop in the market could quickly translate into trouble in the so-called real economy, where Americans earn their living and buy cars, homes, haircuts and cruises.

"At the moment, it's really the U.S. consumer that's the one point of strength in the global economy — and that spending is very dependent on high stock prices and easy credit," said economist William A. Brown of J.P. Morgan & Co.

"Were there to be a reverse in financial markets ... I think you'd be surprised at how quickly we could move from a world of surprising strength to a world of surprising weakness," he said.

Many economists believe just such a reverse is entirely possible as waning world demand increasingly crimps the profits of American companies.

Senate Finance Committee Chairman Sen. William Roth Jr., R-Del., right, and Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., left, escort Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin to a hearing of the committee on Capitol Hill Tuesday.

"Somehow, someday, the price of a share of stock has to be related to a company's earnings," said economist Carl R. Tannenbaum of LaSalle Banks in Chicago. "And corporate earnings are really very flat."

The Fed's monetary policy panel — the Federal Open Market Committee — began a two-day, closed-door meeting Tuesday. It is confronting evidence of rapid economic growth that, usually, would prompt the policy-makers to raise interest rates to cool demand and head off the possibility of increased inflation.

Most economists, however, believe the Fed will leave short-term rates unchanged. That's despite surprisingly boomy signs that include record new home sales — at annual rates of 1.02 million in November and 978,000 in December — and the fastest overall rate of economic growth in 2 1/2 years — 5.6 percent in the October-December quarter.

The reason: Fear that financial markets are vulnerable, that an interest-rate increase or a renewed outbreak of world financial turmoil could cause a repeat of last fall, when the Dow Jones average of industrial stocks plunged nearly 20 percent in the weeks after Russia's ruble was devalued.

The market swiftly recovered in October and November after the Fed cut the benchmark rate on overnight loans between banks three times, reducing it from 5.5 percent to 4.75 percent.

Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan told Congress last month that rescuing the market was not, and is not, the central bank's goal.

"Our objective is the maximum sustainable growth of the U.S. economy, not particular levels of asset prices," he said.

At the same time, Greenspan acknowledged that the stock market's impact on consumer spending has become "real and significant." A severe drop in stock prices "could lead to a considerable weakening of consumer demand," which accounts for two-thirds of the nation's economic activity, he said.

Looking on the bright side, economist Lynn Reaser of NationsBank Corp. in Jacksonville, Fla., said the increasing interdependence between stock prices and consumer spending gives the Fed the ability to stimulate or rein in demand much more swiftly.

"It actually increases the ability of policy to address any potential problems of overheating or contraction," she said.

But the link between Wall Street and Main Street presents the Fed with a challenge, too, said economist David Jones of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co in New York.

"How do you let a little bit of air out of a bubble without collapsing it?" Jones asks. "That's Greenspan's dilemma. This may be his ultimate test as Fed chairman."

Law enforcement cracks down on 'credit repair' scams

By Mark Helm
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Federal and state law enforcement officials announced on Tuesday a major crackdown on more than 40 companies in 20 states that prey on people with poor credit by promising to give them new credit identities.

Officials from the Federal Trade Commission and the National Association of Attorneys General told a news conference that law enforcement agencies on Tuesday filed 42 cases against defendants operating illegal scams in the growing "credit repair" business. One other case was filed in December.

"They prey on people who are plagued by poor credit, people who may be desperate to develop a clean credit history so they can get a loan, get a job or buy a car," said Jody Bernstein, director of the Federal Trade Commission's bureau of consumer protection.

Oklahoma Attorney General Drew Edmondson, chairman of the NAAG's consumer protection committee, said the 43 companies charged were "just the tip of the iceberg" since the number of credit scams has exploded over the Internet in the past year.

"The openness of the World Wide Web is perfect for them," he said, adding that officials believe thousands of people have been victims of this type of credit repair scam.

Bernstein said the companies seek out people who have recently filed for bankruptcy or have been denied loans or credit cards due to poor credit histories. Charging anywhere from $29.95 to $400, the companies promise to provide consumers with instructions on how to develop a new credit identity.

The instructions usually recommend that people apply to the Internal Revenue Service for an employer identification numbers, or EIN, which is required for anyone who has at least one employee, including a nanny or household help.

Once consumers obtain an EIN, the companies tell them to use that number instead of their Social Security numbers when they apply for credit, enabling them to start a fresh credit record. Some of the companies even advised their customers to get new driver's licenses with their EIN numbers.

Bernstein admitted the instructions often work, but she pointed out that there is a big catch: "It's illegal."

In fact, almost all advice from the credit repair companies is against the law.

Bernstein said it is a crime to misrepresent a Social Security number or to misuse an EIN. It is also illegal to make false statements on a loan or credit application and could become mail or wire fraud if the mail or phone are used during any part of the application process.

Edmondson said that none of the 43 cases announced Tuesday is against users of the credit repair scams.

"Almost all of the consumers involved in these scams are innocent victims or don't fully understand how illegal it is," he said.

The Treasury Department estimates that this type of scam costs American businesses $400 million annually in fraudulent loans and money lost to illegal credit cards.

Bernstein said consumers should avoid any company that promises to "fix" their credit histories for a fee since information on their credit background can be obtained for free. The information can be obtained on by calling credit report companies, such as Equifax or Trans Union Corporation, which will provide consumers with a free copy of their credit histories.

She added that legitimate companies can counsel consumers on how to correct errors in their history and can show them how to rebuild their credit.

However, Bernstein warned that consumers cannot simply erase poor history. "Rebuilding your credit just takes time and hard work," she said.

Of the 43 cases, the FTC filed 17 cases, state attorneys general filed 21 cases. The Treasury Department also has obtained criminal search warrants in five other cases.

The 21 state cases were filed in Arizona, California, Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Kentucky, Minnesota, Missouri, Nevada, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon and Pennsylvania.

The FTC filed cases in Colorado, Texas, Florida, Washington, Virginia, Maryland and New York.

Government says Microsoft's video evidence was false

Justice Department lawyer David Boise meets reporters outside federal court in Washington Tuesday, at the conclusion of the day's Microsoft trial.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government accused Microsoft on Tuesday of offering a false video as evidence during a court demonstration by the software company that purported to show severe problems resulting from the government's efforts to modify the company's Windows 98 software.

"I believe from what I've seen here is, they filmed the wrong system," said James Allchin, a senior vice president and Microsoft's top computer scientist. He later added: "I'm not sure they would do anything like that" to mislead the judge.

In one of the most dramatic moments of the antitrust trial against giant Microsoft Corp., Justice Department lawyer David Boies stopped a video demonstration in midframe to show a subtle inconsistency: the border showing the program's name was different in one part of the video than in another.

On the video, Microsoft's marketing director, Yusuf Mehdi, tests a version of Windows that the company said was modified by the government to disable its Internet functions.

The issue is important because the government, as part of its lawsuit, alleges that under federal "tying" laws, Microsoft's design forces consumers who use Windows also to use its browser, discouraging them from using popular rival software.

By showing that Microsoft's Internet software can be disabled, the government hopes to illustrate that the company could be ordered to remove the software from Windows without harming Windows. Microsoft refutes that.

"It's taking a very long time, however — unusually long — to access that Web site," Mehdi said on the video. "That's a result of the performance degradation that has occurred because of running the (government) program."

Boies charged — and Allchin agreed — that the subtle change in the border, called the title bar, indicated that Microsoft's test actually used a version of Windows unaffected by the government's modifications.

"This video you brought in here and showed for the court, that you checked it ... and that's just wrong, right?" Boies snapped.

"In this particular case, I do not think the (government) program had been run," Allchin conceded. But he insisted that performance problems exist: "I personally tested this, and I know the problem exists."

Hours later, Allchin testified that he had been mistaken, and that his tests were conducted properly on a modified copy of Windows. But Microsoft was unable to explain why the software title bars were different.

"How that name tag was removed, we're not specifically sure of right now," spokesman Tod Nielsen said.

Another Microsoft spokesman, Mark Murray, accused the government of "nit-picking on issues like video production rather than confronting the facts."

Boies said outside court there was no evidence the demonstration was deliberately altered, which he warned would be "obstruction of justice, an outrageous thing."

"I'm not going to stand here and say something nefarious went on," Boies said. "We don't know. ... Whether it was deliberate or a result of incompetence, the video was wrong."

An outside expert, computer scientist Edward Felten of Princeton University, previously testified for the government that he was able to disable Microsoft's Internet software included within Windows.

Allchin responded that government efforts slowed some functions and prevented other programs from running at all. He derided the Felten's attempts as a "Rube Goldberg mechanism" that made Windows "effectively useless in a commercial sense."

After Allchin's testimony earlier in the day, Microsoft's lawyers looked crestfallen. A spokesman rushed into the hallway with a cellular telephone.

Smiling broadly, government lawyers in the courtroom appeared jubilant as Boies pressed onward: "You do understand you came in here and swore this was accurate?"

"They probably filmed it, grabbed the wrong screen shot," Allchin answered. "What's on the screen is the truth. Obviously, there were mistakes done there."

Coconut pie wins cash award

Chef Maureen Pothier poses with a slice of the prize-winning Coconut-Rum-Banana Cream Pie with Citrus Meringue that she created for a restaurant.

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — When chef Maureen Pothier isn't teaching culinary arts at Johnson & Wales University, she works as a restaurant consultant.

And it was that job for a venerable Boston restaurant that led her to a $1,000 prize in a national recipe contest.

She was helping the restaurant, Anthony's Pier 4, develop a new menu. "I was asked to create a new dessert that could be served any time of the year at the restaurant," Ms. Pothier said.

"My husband, Paul, suggested a banana cream pie. I played around with various recipes and finally came up with a Coconut-Rum-Banana Cream Pie with a citrus meringue that looked like confetti."

That was a year ago. In the meantime, Pothier, who specialized in seafood, entered a shrimp dish in the Bacardi Recipe Classic, a contest for professional chefs.

"And since I already had this banana cream pie recipe perfected," she said, "I entered the dessert competition ....

"When I got the call telling me I was a finalist in the contest, I assumed it was because of my shrimp recipe. I was shocked to learn it was for my cream pie."

Pothier and nine other chefs from across the nation made it to the finals. They all had two hours to create their entries for the judges.

"I have been a judge in culinary competitions, but I had never entered a contest in my life," Pothier said. "What a difference it is to be sitting on the other side of the table."

When all the measuring and mixing, blending and baking was done, Ms. Pothier went home with $1,000 as runner-up.

COCONUT-RUM-BANANA CREAM PIE WITH CITRUS MERINGUE

Crust:
1-3/4 cups sifted flour
1 teaspoon salt
6 tablespoons cold butter, cut into pieces
1/4 cup cold vegetable shortening
Ice water, as needed
Pre-heat oven to 425

Place sifted flour, salt, butter and shortening into a food processor and pulse until a sandy texture forms. This does not take long; be careful not to over-mix. You should still have pea-sized pieces of butter in the dough.

Remove contents of processor onto a cool surface (a marble slab works best) and form a well in the center. Put 2 tablespoons of very cold water in the well and gently fluff the flour mixture with fingertips to incorporate the water. Work quickly so the butter doesn't get too warm. The dough should not need more than 3 tablespoons of water; if it is too wet, it will not be flaky. The dough should form a ball when a handful is gently pressed together.

Using only the heel of your hand, flatten the dough by pushing it away from you a bit at a time. You will see the butter flattening. Gently gather the dough together again and repeat the flattening process until you have a disk about 1 inch thick. Wrap it in plastic wrap and chill for at least 1 hour.

When ready to use, roll out the dough and line a 9-inch pie plate. Cover the dough with foil and pie weights (dried beans work fine) and pre-bake, about 12 minutes at 425. When set, remove foil and weights, lower oven to 350 degrees and brown lightly, about 8 minutes. Cool.

PASTRY CREAM

6 egg yolks
1/4 cup sugar
Pinch salt
1/4 cup sifted flour
2 cups scalded milk
1 package unflavored gelatin
1/4 cup rum
2/3 cup shredded sweetened coconut, plus 3 tablespoons
1/2 teaspoon vanilla

In a non-corrosive saucepan, combine the egg yolks, sugar, salt and flour; mix to incorporate. Slowly whisk in the scalded milk. Set over medium heat and whisk until mixture comés to a boil and thickens; use a rubber spatula periodically to clean the edges of the pan that you can't reach with the whisk. Allow the cream to boil for a minute or two, whisking constantly. Remove from heat.

Meanwhile, sprinkle the gelatin over the rum and allow to dissolve. Place over hot water to melt.

Add the melted gelatin-rum mixture, 2/3 cup coconut and vanilla to the pastry cream. Place plastic wrap directly on top of the cream to prevent a skin from forming. Cool.

BANANAS

1 tablespoon butter
2 teaspoons sugar
1 tablespoon rum
2 small bananas, sliced (about 10 ounces)

Melt butter in a sauté pan. Add the sugar and rum and stir until the mixture is lightly caramelized. Remove from heat. Toss the bananas in the caramelized sugar briefly and remove. Set the bananas aside to cool.

CITRUS MERINGUE

3/4 cup sugar
1/4 cup water
1/4 teaspoon lemon juice
6 egg whites
1 tablespoon water
3 tablespoons lemon juice
1 package unflavored gelatin
Pinch salt
1/4 cup sugar
1 teaspoon grated lemon zest
1 teaspoon grated lime zest
1 teaspoon grated orange zest

Combine 3/4 cup sugar, 1/4 cup water and 1/4 teaspoon lemon juice in a non-corrosive saucepan; set aside.

Place the egg whites (best at cool room temperature) in a clean, dry bowl of an electric mixer equipped with a whip; set aside.

In a small bowl, combine 1 tablespoon water with 3 tablespoons lemon juice; sprinkle the gelatin over the liquid and allow to dissolve. When dissolved, melt over hot water. Keep the mixture warm so it doesn't gel before needed.

Whip the egg whites in the mixer at medium-high speed. When they start to gain some volume, add pinch of salt and very slowly add the 1/4 cup sugar. Whip to firm peaks.

Cook the sugar syrup on medium-high heat to 250 degrees (a bit firmer than soft ball stage). Put mixer on low speed and slowly add the syrup to the egg white mixture, then whip until stiff peaks form again. Mix in the melted gelatin. Fold in grated citrus zests by hand.

To assemble pie: Place caramelized bananas in pie shell. Spread the pastry cream over the bananas. Spread the meringue over the pastry cream, piling it up to use all of it. Sprinkle the remaining 3 tablespoons coconut over the top. Bake at 400 degrees until meringue is browned.

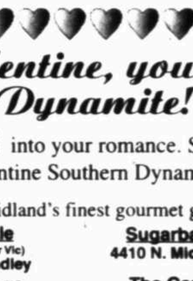

Chill completely (at least 6 hours) before serving. Use a hot, dry knife to cut it.

Makes 10 servings.

DEAR ABBY

Son accepts gay dad's gifts but not his lover

By Abigail Van Buren

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Eight years ago, I came out of the closet. I had been married for 18 years and had two children — a son, 15, and a daughter, 17. At the time, I decided that for 40 years I had lived my life for everyone else, and it was time to live my life for myself.

I have had a lover for seven years. We have a loving and compassionate relationship. At the time I "came out," my family disowned me, and we have not talked since. My son, on the other hand, kept in touch. He and his fiancee have visited my lover and me several times, and we have enjoyed a good relationship over the years. During that time, my lover and I have been very generous to my son with birthday and Christmas gifts, and even bought him a new car. When he and his fiancee visited us on several occasions, we all got along well. They met our gay friends and socialized with us.

Last week, my son called to say they were sending out wedding invitations. I am welcome, but my lover is not. I explained to him that we are just as much a couple as my brother and his wife, or my sister and her husband. He told me that he did not want his friends to know he had a gay father, and therefore, my lover would not be allowed to attend.

I told him that if my lover could not attend, then I would not attend. If he cannot accept us openly, and if he's ashamed of our relationship, then I really do not want any further contact with him.

We are very hurt. For the last eight years he appeared to accept our relationship, especially when it came to gifts and several free trips for him and his fiancee to visit us.

Abby, am I wrong? I'll be interested in your comments. — SAD IN PALM SPRINGS

DEAR SAD: You are NOT wrong. Being gay (or straight) is not a matter of choice. People who do not know this belong in the dark ages. I hate to see you break your last remaining tie with your family, but I respect your decision not to attend the wedding.

DEAR ABBY: I just moved to Los Angeles two months ago, but my boyfriend of five months will not be able to move from Houston to California for another four years.

So far, we call every other night, send e-mails, and we plan to visit each other as often as we can.

Do you think it is possible for us to maintain this long-distance relationship for four years? — LOST IN LOVE IN LOS ANGELES

DEAR LOST IN LOVE: I'm doubtful. It's easy to put your faith in the old quote, "Absence makes the heart grow fonder," but the reality is that when you find yourself alone on a Saturday night or at a party, another expression will come to mind: "Out of sight, out of mind."

There's more to pizza than pepperoni

By Louise Durman
Scripps Howard News Service

Pizza's about choices.

Toppings change to fit tastes - from meat to seafood to vegetarian. Different herbs offer taste challenges.

Cheese definitely varies. Some people like mozzarella; others prefer Parmesan. Cheddar, Monterey Jack, blue and feta cheeses are other considerations. Or try a combination to get even more flavors.

Crusts can be homemade, from scratch or from a packaged mix. But then, it's so easy to buy packaged pizza crusts that are ready to top and bake. Other "crusts" such as English muffins, tortillas, pita breads and thawed bread dough may be used.

Individual pizzas offer an option for different tastes. They can look like works of art.

English muffin pizza

4 English muffins, split
2 tablespoons, flavored oil, such as basil oil
1 package (9 to 12 ounces) Bratwurst or turkey or flavored chicken sausages or andouille sausage
4 ounces goat cheese, crumbled
2 minced red onions
1/2 cup shredded cheese
Chopped fresh basil, to taste
Roma tomato slice, halved

Preheat oven to 450 degrees. Brush split muffins with flavored oil. Top with slices of sausage and goat cheese. Sprinkle with onion and shredded cheese. Place on baking sheet and bake 6 to 8 minutes. Garnish with basil and tomato.

Sources: Adapted from Bays English Muffins recipe.

Roasted vegetable pizzas

2 Japanese eggplants or small eggplants, cut into 1/4-inch slices
2 yellow onions, cut in wedges
2 red bell peppers, diced
3 cups mushrooms, thickly sliced
4 teaspoons dried basil (8 teaspoons fresh)
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon coriander
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup roasted red peppers, chopped
1 cup chopped tomatoes
4 garlic cloves, crushed
6 whole wheat pitas

Preheat oven to 450 degrees.

Place eggplants, onion, bell peppers and mushrooms in a single layer in one or two large baking dishes. Toss with 3 teaspoons of the basil and the cinnamon, coriander and salt. Bake until eggplant is fork tender, about 30 minutes.

Reduce oven temperature to 350 degrees.

Combine the roasted red peppers with the tomatoes, garlic and remaining teaspoon of basil.

To assemble the pizzas, spread a layer of the pepper-tomato mixture on a pita. Top with a generous layer of the roasted vegetables. Place on a baking sheet. Repeat with the remaining pitas. Bake for 15 minutes.

Knoxville, Tenn., News-Sentinel journalist Sherri Gardner Howell makes individual pizzas for her family.

Sherri's gourmet pizzas

6-inch packaged premade Italian pizza crusts, one per person
Creamy Alfredo sauce, about 1/4 cup per pizza
Pieces of ham (or salad shrimp)
Canned button mushrooms (optional)
Shredded mozzarella (or pizza) cheese

Spread cheese over crust. Heat pieces of ham and mushrooms, if used, quickly in a microwave, then place the ham over the sauce. (Can substitute salad shrimp or use both shrimp and ham, also heating shrimp quickly in the microwave.)

Top with shredded mozzarella cheese and bake the pizza in a 450-degree oven about 10 minutes until the crust is lightly brown and cheese is melted.

'Lobster'iffic

Joffre DiSabatino, an aircraft mechanic at FedEx in Memphis, won first place in the Maine Lobster Promotion Council's recent cooking contest.Here is his recipe:

Lobster wraps in red pepper sauce

4 Maine lobster tails
1/2 cup melted butter
3 squares filo dough, 8 by 8 inches each
1 tablespoon garlic salt or to taste
2 tablespoons black pepper
4 skewers, metal or wood
Red pepper sauce, see recipe

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Remove lobster meat from tails in one piece and rinse in water. Slide onto skewers lengthwise. Brush each with butter and season with garlic salt and pepper.

Grill lobster tails over medium heat, turning often, for about 5 minutes or until meat turns opaque. Remove skewers.

Use two squares of filo for each tail, brushing each sheet with melted butter. Wrap burrito fashion and brush outside of wrap with butter.

Place on baking sheet and bake for 15 minutes or until filo is golden brown and crisp.

Red pepper sauce

2 tablespoons butter
2 red bell peppers
2 shallots, diced
4 cloves garlic, chopped
1 can (10 ounce) chicken broth
1 pint heavy cream
2 to 4 dashes hot sauce
2 tablespoons paprika, divided
1 tablespoon fresh basil, chopped
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cayenne pepper

In a pan, melt butter. Add 3/4 of the red peppers, shallots and garlic. Saute until half cooked and add the stock. Bring to a boil and reduce liquid by half. Remove and put in a blender. Puree until smooth. Strain sauce and return to heat. Add cream and simmer until reduced by half. Add basil, salt, 1 tablespoon paprika, cayenne and hot sauce. Simmer for about 2 minutes.

Cut each wrap diagonally and serve on a pool of sauce. Drizzle sauce over top as well. Garnish with the other chopped peppers and a sprinkle of paprika. Serves 4.

Russell earns another letter

KINGSVILLE — Dickie Russell earned his second letter at Texas A&M Kingsville, the school announced Monday.

Russell, a 1996 MHS graduate, is a red-shirt sophomore. This past season he made his impact for the Javalinas as the starting deep snapper and backup center. Texas A&M-Kingsville recorded a 11-3 mark last fall and reached the semifinals of the NCAA II national playoffs.

Lady Rebs beat Lake View

The Midland Lee junior varsity girls soccer team defeated San Angelo Lake View's varsity 4-3 Tuesday.

Courtney Heineman registered three goals, including the game-winner with six minutes remaining. Jamie Prementine added another goal and Kristen Kinzer had two assists.

Jade Cowdery had four saves in goal for Lee (2-1-1).

Midland Christian JV girls post win

The Midland Christian girls basketball team defeated McCamey 53-38 Tuesday night. Amy Lowery led the Lady Mustangs with 13 points while Kelly Philbeck added 11 and Debbie Laney and Kate Irons had nine rebounds apiece.

Midland Christian is now 9-16 on the season.

Padres trade 50-homer man Vaughn to Reds for Sanders

CINCINNATI (AP) — Figuring they couldn't afford Greg Vaughn beyond this season, the San Diego Padres made another stunning move Tuesday by trading him Tuesday for Reggie Sanders and a couple of Cincinnati Reds minor leaguers.

It was a shock to Vaughn, who set a Padres record with 50 homers last season and thought the franchise would retain the nucleus of its NL pennant winner once voters approved funding for a new stadium last November.

"We don't understand," Vaughn said during a conference call. "We felt that once we got the stadium, we were going to be able to stay together. And once we got the stadium, everybody's gone. We were misled a little bit."

The five-player deal gave the Padres an often-injured outfielder and another parallel with the Florida Marlins, who split up their World Series team shortly after their title in 1997. The Padres also gave up pinch-hit specialist Mark Sweeney and received middle infielder Damian Jackson, who has spent the last three seasons at Triple-A, and right-hander Josh Harris, who pitched at Class A last season.

Since San Diego got swept by the New York Yankees in the World Series, it has given up or lost Kevin Brown, Ken Caminiti, Steve Finley, Joey Hamilton and now Vaughn, who set a club record with 50 homers last season. Vaughn will make $5.75 million — $850,000 of it deferred — in the final year of his three-year contract.

The trade pushes Cincinnati's payroll over $30 million. Although Vaughn knew there was a chance he would be traded, he never considered the cost-conscious Reds a possibility.

"I heard this is an organization that uses both sides of the paper, that the last thing they wanted to do was spend money," Vaughn said. "It caught me in a big surprise. I didn't really know how to take it. Then I have some friends who said, 'Don't unpack,' you know what I mean?"

Sanders, 31, once was the brightest prospect in the Reds' farm system. He had a breakthrough season in 1995, hitting .306 with a career-high 28 homers and 99 RBIs as the Reds reached the playoffs.

He hit only .138 in the postseason, striking out 19 times in 29 at-bats, and the Reds were swept by Atlanta in the NL championship series. Cincinnati started cutting payroll after that season and has not been to the playoffs since.

Various injuries limited Sanders to 81 games in 1996 and 86 in 1997, prompting teammates and former manager Ray Knight to openly question his toughness. He played in 135 games last season, batting .268 with 14 homers and 59 RBIs between injuries to his back, left hand, hamstring and ribs. He struck out 137 times in 481 at-bats.

Jackson, 25, hit .261 for Triple-A Indianapolis last year, striking out 125 times in 517 at-bats. Harris, 21, was 10-12 in 27 starts for Class A Burlington.

Sweeney, 28, led the major leagues with 22 pinch hits in 1997 and is second in the NL with 34 pinch hits over the last two seasons.

MHS rally falls short at Central

Staff Report

SAN ANGELO — The Midland High boys soccer team came from behind two times but fell 3-2 in an extended shootout Tuesday at Old Bobcat Stadium.

Central's Dusty Brown converted on Central's sixth shootout attempt to seal the win for the undefeated Bobcats (9-0 overall and 3-0 in District 4-5A).

MHS, which was playing in its first game of a grueling three-game 4-5A stretch, falls to 6-4 and 2-2.

"Obviously, going 3-1 would have been better, but we will have to keep battling," MHS coach Tony Pierce said. "We have to work towards Saturday with Abilene High. That will be another pivotal game."

In this game, MHS trailed 1-0 before Greg Hunter evened the score at 1-1 seven minutes into the second half. Central added its second goal six minutes later on a penalty kick by Michael Ammons after a suspect call on the outside of the penalty area. MHS' Joe Entzminger closed out the scoring in the 69th minute of the game with an assist going to Marcus Jackson.

■ 4-5A Soccer

In the shootout, Johannes Schoen converted on MHS' second attempt, but the next four tries were either off the mark or stopped.

"It smarts a little bit coming up a little bit short," said Pierce of losing in a shootout. "They (Central) knew they were in a battle."

In JV Action: MHS and Central played to a 1-1 tie. No additional information was reported.

Lee boys down Lake View

SAN ANGELO — The Midland Lee boys soccer team, which gave up six goals in its last two games, did better Tuesday.

The Rebels allowed no shots in a 4-0 non-district win over San Angelo Lake View.

Justin Smith scored two goals and added an assist to lead the 4-3 Rebels, which return to district play Saturday versus Abilene Cooper. Danny George added a goal and an assist while Eric Mora also scored for the Rebels.

However, it was not only the 19 shots that Lee took, but the zero shots that the Rebs allowed, which was a good sign. Lee had allowed three goals in each of its last two games.

"It good effort preparation for (Saturday's) game with Cooper," Lee assistant coach Scott Hicks said. "We looked a lot better on defense, of course. The kids played hard."

Romney becomes front-runner to take over Salt Lake City committee

By Kristen Moulton
Associated Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY — Mitt Romney, a millionaire venture capitalist with Utah roots, is the front-runner to take over leadership of the besieged committee organizing the 2002 Winter Olympic Games.

Romney, who has dabbled in politics while helping to build Bain Capital Inc. in Boston, has been approached about the job, a source knowledgeable about the search for a new Salt Lake Organizing Committee chief executive officer said Tuesday.

While Gov. Mike Leavitt is not yet ready to say Romney is the person who will help steer the committee away from the scandal enveloping the Olympics, he and SLOC chairman Robert Garff are preparing to announce a reorganization of the committee.

Among the changes could be expanding the committee's board of trustees "to add more voices," as well as changes in the ethics policy, said Vicki Varela, Leavitt's spokeswoman.

The reorganization would include a new executive committee of the board that does not include longtime members Spence Eccles and Verl Topham, two prominent executives that were enlisted during Salt Lake's bidding for the games to watch over staffers now blamed for excesses, said another knowledgeable source.

The reorganization also likely will add a chief operating officer to SLOC's management ranks so the job of organizing the games can remain on track while the new chief executive works to restore faith in Salt Lake's ability to manage the games.

Roger Jackson, who held a similar job during Calgary's 1988 Winter Games and serves on the IOC Coordination Commission overseeing preparations for 2002, is considered the front-runner for that chief operating officer job.
