Northwest Texas And Oklahoma Districts Receive Drouth Breaking Rains

Southwestern Oklahoma Gets First Moisture Since January

SHOWERS ON DENVER

Haskell Is Most Southern Point to Report Rain During Sunday

The cloudy weather of the last several days fulfilled its promise Sunday night in substantial downpours to the northwest, west, and southwest of Wichita Falls, definitely ending a three months drouth and saving thousands of dollars for wheat growers and cattlemen.

The rains to the west extended from Mangum and Hollis, in Oklahoma, through Childress, Crowell and Paducah, as far south as Haskell. Along the Fort Worth and Denver, heavy showers were reported between Memphis and Vernon, with clouds moving south and and west.

Rain in Knox County

Scattered rains, heavy enough to materially relieve drouth conditions fell at Knox City, Bomarton and Benjamin, with a light shower at Seymour.

Sultry cloudy weather, extending to Wichita Falls and toward the east indicated the territory touched by the saving rains might be expanded before Monday.

The heaviest fall was reported at Hollis, Okla., where it reached the proportions of a cloudburst, breaking a drouth that has lasted since the winter snows.

First Good Showers

The rain Sunday brought this section of West Texas its first adequate and general downpour of the spring, ending a stubborn drouth that threatened grain crops and range lands and delayed planting. Light showers to the north late last week hardly more than sprinkled the top soils, leaving the heavier downpours Sunday to definitely break the dry weather and assure the saving of wide grain acreage.

Guards Desert Ohio Penitentiary As Convicts Renew Wild Disorder

COLUMBUS, Ohio, April 28. (US)—Warden Thomas of the state penitentiary early this morning issued the following statement:

"The mutiny will be put down and every necessary measure will be used."

COLUMBUS, Ohio, April 28. (Monday)—(US)—Rioting convicts were in complete control of the Ohio state penitentiary early this morning.

The rioting started at 9 o'clock last night. A short time later all guards were driven from the prison buildings and yards.

Machine guns manned by national guardsmen were trained on the walls from all angles in event the men inside make an attempt to escape.

Streets for blocks around the institution are an armed camp. Pedestrians have been warned away and motorists ordered to detour.

Shouts from within have been ringing out throughout the night, curses and cries of defiance.

The rioters, seemingly determined upon a general prison delivery, are being led by about 50 of the boldest and most daring convicts within the walls. Prominent among the ringleaders are 14 members of the group known in the institution as "Company K"—all men who have previously escaped or attempted to get away.

These prisoners are usually incarcrated in a special section of the prison, known as the "white house." They are the most desperate of them all—murderers, bank robbers, highwaymen—men who on the outside have never hesitated to shoot to kill.

Surrounding the prison are about 1,000 of the Ohio guardsmen and these are augmented by some 400 prison guards. Sheriff Harry Paul and a number of deputies also are on the scene.

Word of wild disorder inside the walls, where the four thousand odd convicts have had free reign since the fire disaster that cost 322 lives last Monday, was brought to Warden Thomas, Chief Deputy Woodard and Col. Robert Haubrich of the national guard, by the prison keepers who fled when the trouble started.

LINDY REACHES FLIGHT'S GOAL

Landing at Christobol Completes Air Line

CRISTOBOL, Canal Zone, April 27. (US)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh landed here, completing the southernmost hop of his mail route trail blazing flight, at 4:04 p. m.

He and his two aides made the trip from Puerto Cabezas, Nicaragua, in three hours and 49 minutes. They plan to take off on the return flight Thursday morning.

Radio messages sent from the plane by D. E. Denicke, wireless operator, who with Basil Rowe, co-pilot, accompanied the colonel on the flight, kept this city informed of the Sikorsky amphibian's progress almost from the time that the plane took off from Puerto Cabezas at 12:12 p. m.

Calculations Right

At 2:20 p. m. Lindbergh radioed that he expected to reach Cristobal at 4:15. So exact were his calculations that there was but a scant 11 minutes difference between the predicted time and that of his actual landing.

The flight from Havana to Puerto Cabezas this morning was timed almost to the minute, although the plane has been on an average of an hour ahead of the pre-arranged schedule.

Relay Mail

The 211 pounds of mail carried from Havana to Cristobal will be relayed by other pilots to Buenos Aires, via the west coast of South America.

Upon landing the "flying colonel" said that the ship had been in frequent radio contact with steamers and shore stations. Weather conditions on the entire hop from Havana had been excellent, he added.

40-MINUTE STOP AT PORTO CABEZAS

PORTO CABEZAS, Nicaragua, April 27. (US)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and his two flying companions took off from here at 12:12 p. m. today on the third leg of their flight inaugurating the pan-American Airways new South and Central American airmail route.

Their destination was Cristobal, in the Canal zone, the southernmost point of their round-trip flight. The take off was timed a scant 40 minutes after the colonel's Sikoroski amphibian had landed here, completing the long trans-water hop from Havana, Cuba. The trip was made in six hours.

HAVANA, April 27. (US)—Leaving behind his evening clothes and carrying the rest of his wardrobe wrapped in newspapers, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh took off from Camp Columbia at 5:34 a. m. today, bound for Porto Cabezas and Cristobal.

Before taking off under fine weather conditions, the colonel and his aids declared they expected to reach Cristobal early this evening after a brief stop at Porto Cabezas for refueling.

Jury Convicts Pastor for Shooting Pair Over Letter Written to Woman

OTTAWA, Ill., April 27. (UP)—The Rev. James A. Wilson, who shot his sexton and the latter's wife over a love letter he had written to a widow in his congregation, was found guilty of attempted murder late today by a jury in circuit court.

The verdict against the pastor of the Mendota Methodist church carries with it a sentence of from 1 to 14 years in the penitentiary.

The jurors were given the case last night after the Reverend Wilson had confessed he shot Amos Elliott, the sexton, and Mrs. Elliott last January, when they refused to give him a letter he had written to Mrs. Emma Wagner, member of his flock.

The jurors, haggard and unkept after a night and day of argument gave the verdict to Judge Edgar Eldredeg in circuit court. The Reverend Wilson cringed when the foreman announced the decision. The minister is 60 years old, partly bald and wears silver rimmed spectacles. He removed the latter to dry his eyes after the verdict was read. His wife, loyal throughout the trial, was not there to comfort him.

About 20 members of his church were in court. They had expressed themselves previously as confident their minister would be acquitted.

KNOB KNOCKERS GET $200 HERE

Safe at Motor Concern Is Rifled

Thieves broke into the building occupied by the Dixon Motor company, Sixth street and Lamar avenue, sometime Saturday night and knocked the knob off the safe in the office, escaping with more than $200 in cash, according to police reports.

The safe had been opened and emptied of its contents, the thieves taking only cash and leaving papers and other articles, officers said. A portion of the money stolen was taken from a desk in an office adjoining that in which the safe was located.

The thieves gained entrance to the building by means of a skylight in the roof, officers said. From the roof they dropped onto the second floor and then found easy access to the lower floor and the offices. The knob on the safe had been only partially removed, the robbers having bent it away from the safe mechanism which then allowed opening of the door. The desk in the adjoining office was easily opened, police said. Investigations had led to no arrests at a late hour Sunday night.

Population of towns and cities in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Arkansas show increases due largely to industrial expansion in those states, authorities on the question say.

While the centers of population grew rapidly from 1920 to 1930, the rural sections either lost population or barely held their own.

Cameras To Seek Shots Of Eclipse

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27. (AP)—Promised favorable weather, astronomers along a thousand-mile line were cheered today at the prospect of success of one of the most comprehensive studies of a solar eclipse ever undertaken.

In a special forecast, Observer E. H. Bowie, predicted generally fair weather throughout the interior of California and well into Nevada—covering virtually the entire territory through which the outstanding astronomical expeditions will be based for the zero hour—11 a. m., to 12 noon tomorrow.

There will be patches of clouds, but the San Francisco weather man believes skies generally will be blue.

Along the coast it will be overcast but airplanes should find advantageous positions for shooting the shadow on its 1,200-mile an hour trip across the land, by flying inland short distances.

The biggest expedition in the field will be that of Lick observatory (Mt. Hamilton) of the University of California, with a dozen to 20 men under the direction of Dr. J. H. Moore, astronomer, at Camptonville, Calif. In that vicinity will be a party from University of Nevada, one from John Hopkins of Baltimore and a third from Pomona college at Claremont, Calif.

About a hundred miles farther to the northeast a large party from Mt. Wilson observatory will be based near Honey Lake and the Allegheny expedition from Pittsburgh, Pa., will operate in the path of the shadow deep into Nevada territory.

Every phase of the solar phenomena will be recorded by the most modern instruments for the satisfaction of scientific curiosity.

DALLAS, April 27. (AP)—Attempted holdup tonight of the Varsity theater, a picture house near the campus of Southern Methodist university, resulted in the probable fatal shooting of the bandit, a young man, arrest of a girl, and the wounding of Ralph Porter Jr., theater employe.

Joe Threadgill Jr., of Taylor, Texas, a bystander, was struck by a stray bullet and wounded, though not seriously.

Name of the bandit was not learned immediately, although he appeared under 30 years old and was red-haired.

Porter was shot as he leaped on the bandit who had followed Paul Scott, manager, into the theater office. Scott said that apparently the bandit's own gun sent the bullet into his neck which was expected to cause his death. No gun was kept at the theater, Scott said.

The young woman was arrested as the wounded bandit attempted to escape. She was held by police for questioning.

Mothers See Two Small Passengers Burned as Ship Hits Tree

Sunday airplane crashes took an unusually heavy toll, claiming the lives of two famous American airmen, a passenger, two 13-year-old school children and seven spectators at a stunt program.

Twenty persons were injured at Fayetteville, Tenn., when an exhibition plane crashed into a crowd. It was in this crash that seven persons were killed.

The third fatality resulted Sunday from the crash of a plane near Alvord, Texas, Saturday night. C. F. Williams of Tonkawa, Okla., died of injuries received at the same time "Jim" Kelly, former endurance record co-holder, and G. W. Mennis, Fort Worth, were killed.

Only the pilot was saved when a "taxi" plane carrying two children fell to the earth at Portsmouth, N. H. While the pilot, injured, crawled away from the wreckage, flames swept over the ship and burned the children to death.

Herbert J. Fahy, who had a solo endurance record to his credit as well as other outstanding flying achievements, succumbed Sunday to injuries received in a crash in Michigan on Friday.

broken right shoulder, sprained right ankle, and cuts on the head at a local hospital.

Department of Commerce Inspector Dulane and William G. Fuller, manager of the Municipal airport, motored to the scene of the crash where they inspected the burned wreckage.

Fuller expressed the opinion that the motor of the plane had gone dead and Kelly was attempting a dead-stick landing. The tops of tall trees were broken off by the plane before it buried its propeller and motor in the ground between the trunks of two trees.

Fort Worth will pay homage to one of its heroes Monday when Jim Kelly, former co-holder of the world's endurance flight record who was killed Saturday night in an airplane crash, is buried.

With Reg Robbins, Kelly, a former West Texas cowboy, flew to a non-stop refueling flight record of 172 hours and four minutes over Meacham field here last May. Their record later was broke in St. Louis.

Thousands of persons who were thrilled by Kelly's and Robbins' spectacular flight and many of his flying comrades will attend the funeral. A group of airplanes will hover over the scene of the burial ceremonies and drop flowers on the grave.

Mennis will be buried Tuesday.

TWO CHILDREN CRASH VICTIMS

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., April 27. (UP)—Within sight of their mothers, who accompanied them to the Municipal airport here to witness their first airplane ride, two 13-year-old children were burned to death late today when the plane in which they were flying crashed.

The victims were: Geneva Brockett of Suffield, Conn., and Bruce Heffler of Greenland, N. H.

Leon Robinson, of Exeter, pilot of the "taxi" plane, was seriously burned about the head and body. Physicians, however, believed he would recover.

The mothers of the two children, who accompanied them to the flying field, were horror stricken when they saw the plane fall and burst into flames.

The plane, a double cockpit biplane, had gained an altitude of approximately 250 feet when its motor faltered. Robinson strived to bring the ship to a safe landing and struck the top of a tall pine tree and the plane crashed to the ground.

A gasoline explosion occurred as the plane hit the earth and it burst into flames, trapping the three occupants.

The pilot was able to free himself from the wreckage and crawled beyond reach of the blazing plane.

The children, however, were trapped in the front cockpit. They were burned to death.

HERBERT J. FAHY DIES OF INJURIES

GRAYLING, Mich., April 27. (AP)—Herbert J. Fahy, noted aviator, died in a hospital here today of injuries suffered in an airplane accident near Roscommon, Mich., Friday.

Fahy, who was 33 years old, did not regain consciousness after he was taken from an overturned airplane on the estate of Cliff Durant.

His wife, Mrs. Claire Fahy, also a noted pilot, was with him in the plane at the time of the accident, but escaped injury because she was in a separate cabin. Mrs. Fahy is one of the ranking women pilots of the country, having done most of her flying on the West coast.

Fahy was employed as test pilot and salesman for a Detroit airplane concern and had gone to Roscommon to sell a plane to Durant. The plane turned over as he was attempting to take off from a field on the Durant estate. The craft was believed to have struck a stump.

Formerly an army flier, Fahy set a solo endurance record of 36 hours, 56 minutes and 36 seconds in May, 1929. Last July he attempted to set a new record for a round trip transcontinental flight with one stop, but was forced down in Kansas on the east bound trip. He was injured in a crash at Burbank, Calif., last September.

Lubbock Brick Mason Says He Feels Better Than the Past 20 Years Since Taking Argotane

"Yes, sir, I would go before a notary any time and testify to the wonderful benefits I have received from Argotane," said James E. Riddle, of 1620 Fifteenth street, Lubbock, Texas. Mr. Riddle is one of the best known stone cutters and brick masons in this section.

"My health has been badly broken up for the past 20 years. I was in a general run-down condition and suffered from some ailments or other all the time. I had headaches continually, my stomach was out of order and I was nervous, weak and dizzy. Sometimes I was bothered with indigestion so bad that I could hardly stand it. Gas formed on my stomach and pained me so bad that I felt that I would die.

"I reckon I took 50 different kinds of medicine trying to get relief but nothing did me any good and no one can realize what terrible feelings I had unless they had the same troubles I had. I read an advertisement for Argotane and a friend of mine advised me to try it and I am certainly very grateful for the results I have for the past 20 years and am enjoying about as much good health as anybody. My suffering is gone, my appetite is splendid, and my stomach trouble seems to be a thing of the past. Before taking Argotane I wasn't able to work but two or three days a week but now I work every day and feel fine."

Genuine Argotane may be bought in Wichita Falls at the Allison Drug Store, 716 Indiana Ave.—Adv.

Both Poverty and Wealth Test Human Soul, Martin Tells Class

"Wealth is only one of the tests of the human soul. Poverty is another," Judge P. A. Martin told a large gathering at the meeting of the Men's Bible class of the Floral Heights Methodist church Sunday morning.

The subject of Judge Martin's talk was "Money, the Acid Test." In it he gave his interpretation of Jesus' conversation with the rich young ruler in which Christ told the young man to dispose of his wealth and distribute it among the poor if he expected to enter the kingdom of God. His talk in part follows:

"I think there has been quite a lot of loose thinking, writing and preaching about this lesson of Jesus and His conversation with the rich young ruler. The text has been used as a warning against the accumulation of wealth and a proof that the possession of wealth is in itself sinful and many have gone so far as to say and believe that the saying of Jesus that 'it is easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God' is to be taken literally and that therefore only the poor can ever entertain a hope of salvation. It shall be my effort today to point out what I think is the real meaning of the lesson.

"The incident is related in each of the three synoptic gospels, with but slight variations. In each of them, it portrays a rich young ruler, (the ruler of a Jewish synagogue), who is vitally interested in the new religion of Jesus and comes to Him as an honest inquirer after the truth. Mark says Jesus looking upon him, loved him. He asks the great question, 'Master, what shall I do that I may have eternal life?' The Master answers simply 'keep the commandments' and details them in answer to another question. The young ruler replies 'all these things have I kept from my youth up. What lack I yet?'

Acid Test

"And then Jesus applies to him the acid test; perhaps the only test to meet his individual case; he 'had great possessions;' to do the particular work Jesus wanted him to do he must surrender these possessions just like Peter had left his fishing nets on the shore of Galilee, just like Matthew had left the receipt of custom, just like Paul, later on, left a seat in the Jewish Sanhedrim, just like St. Francis of Assisi gave up his fortune to follow the Christ and just like thousands of consecrated ministers of the gospel in later years have given up lives of ease and luxury to answer the sacred call. 'Go sell what thou hast and give to the poor and thou shalt have treasures in heaven and come and follow me.' This was the acid test. He simply could not stand the test. So he 'went away sorrowing' the record says, for he had great possessions.

"And right there history drops the rich young ruler out of sight forever. He shines on just one page and in just a few lines on that page and is lost forever; no man even knows his name. He has had his opportunity to walk with Jesus up to Jerusalem and enter the Holy city among His followers; to see the great wonders of the last week; to hear what was said at the last supper; to bear witness to the cross and the resurrection; to witness the coming of the Pentecost. But he turned it all down for his wealth and went away sorrowing because he well knew that the sad words 'it might have been' would follow him to the end of his life.

"What might have been? Why he might have been the author of a fifth gospel or a preacher like Peter or Paul and have churches and schools named for him to this good day and be numbered among the saints of God, instead of a horrible example of a lost opportunity and a lost identity.

"Jesus gave the rich young ruler the same invitation he gave to each of his apostles when He called them and from my study of the lesson, I see no earthly reason to doubt that He meant just what he said when He invited him to come. From the fact that He loved him when He looked upon him, I believe Jesus wanted him as one of the sacred company and was disappointed when he went away.

"And then turning again to his disciples Jesus commented upon the acid test of riches showing them by exaggerated illustration how easily great riches may stand in the way of a man in his effort to enter the kingdom and do the right thing. Of course we all know a camel never did and never will pass through the eye of a needle. The utter impossibility of the thing proves that it is but an illustration and is not to be literally construed. I have heard some pseudo explainers of the Bible say that He referred to a certain gate to the city called the needle's eye, so narrow that only a small camel could pass through but I take no stock in such apologies. I rest upon the assumption that it was nothing but the illustration of a great truth by exaggerated simple, quite often to be found in the sacred writings. Father Abraham himself was the richest man of his time; Job was credited with enormous wealth, so was King David and Soloman and Joseph and many other of the patriarchs; and surely they were not condemned on that account.

"The disciples themselves were amazed at His words and asked 'who then can be saved?' And the question gave Jesus the opportunity to expound to them the great truth that 'with men it is impossible; but with God all things are possible.' No man can lift himself into heaven by his clean life or his good works alone any more than he can lift himself to the summit of Pike's Peak by pulling on his own bootstraps; nothing but the grace of God can accomplish the work of the kingdom in the heart of man. His disciples had just witnessed the utter failure of a man who had kept all the commandments from his youth up; they had seen him weighed in the balances and found wanting; they had seen his egotism go down and his head hung low in sorrow because he could not stand the acid test.

Wealth Not Always Test

"And now let me say that I believe there are hundreds of wealthy men in the world who are using their wealth for the betterment of the world and to whom wealth itself is not the acid test of their faith at all. Many of them are pure in heart, humble in spirit and upright in conduct and such men are a great blessing to the world for they are able to do great things for the advancement of the kingdom, with their wealth. On the other hand there are many who use their wealth in ostentatious display, in dissipation and riotous living and whose life and example make for harm rather than good.

"But, after all, wealth is only one of the tests of the human soul; poverty is another. Many a man has lost his integrity in the face of poverty. Envy, jealousy, covetousness and ambition are outstanding tests of the integrity of man, to say nothing of the baser passions for the gratification of which men sell their immortal souls. It ill becomes those of us who have gone down under the temptation of a fleeting passion or pleasure to criticise too severely the rich young ruler who could not give up his great possessions for the sake of Jesus.

"He sold his birthright for great wealth. He got a better price than the man does who sells out for the gratification of a base passion or an inordinate appetite or to satisfy a small ambition.

"So let us all remember when we ask ourselves the all-important question 'what shall I do to inherit eternal life?' There is somewhere, some thing, possibly not wealth, possibly not bad habits, base passions or unholy desires and ambitions but something nevertheless that is the acid test. Something to give up; some cross to bear if we would hope to wear a crown. Deep down in our hearts we know what it is. And we alone can determine the vital question. The imperial will of man can alone control his destiny and reason is the chief counsellor sitting at the right hand of the throne."

TAX PAYMENTS IN TEXAS DROP

Individual Incomes Shown As Declining

Special to The Record News

WASHINGTON, April 27.—Texas paid nearly a million dollars less to the federal government during the first nine months of the present fiscal year than it did during the corresponding period in 1928, according to figures announced today by the treasury department. Most of this loss was sustained in taxes derived from individual incomes which dropped from $13,070,984 to $12,206,311. During the same period taxes from corporations increased from $15,496,374 to $15,838,692. Miscellaneous taxes were reduced from $1,486,477 to $1,117,685.

The loss sustained was almost equally divided between the first and second districts with headquarters at Austin and Dallas respectively. Collections from the first district during the nine months of this year were $16,118,294 as against $16,524,565 during the same period last year. For the second district collections this year were $13,044,405 compared with $13,529,270 last year.

The corporations in the first district paid $9,059,647 in taxes during the first nine months of the fiscal year 1930 and $8,987,028 during the same period in 1929. The individual taxpayers of that district during the same periods paid $6,425,823 and $6,736,008 respectively. The miscellaneous taxes for that district dropped from $801,528 to $596,823.

In the second district corporations paid $6,743,045 this year and $6,509,346 last year. The individual taxpayers paid $5,780,488 this year and $6,334,975 last year while miscellaneous taxes from this district were $520,872 compared with $684,948 last year.

Italians Launch Five Warships

By PRINCE PIGNATELLI

ROME, April 27. (US)—Two cruisers, two light cruisers and one submarine were today officially added to the Italian navy.

All five units were recently launched at separate shipyards. The cruisers are the Zara and Fiume, named for towns recovered from Austria-Hungary after the world war; the light cruisers are the Giovanni Delle Dande Nere and the Alberto Da Giussano, christened in honor of popular Italian heroes of the 14th and 15th centuries, and the submarine is the Delfino (Dolphin).

Nation Stirred

All Italy is taking an amazing interest in its growing navy and the launching of the five ships was attended by a great deal of public excitement.

The cruisers Fiume and Zara are almost identical. They have a displacement of 10,000 tons, a length of 599 and ½ feet, a 67 foot beam, and a 22 foot draught. They are armed with eight 8-inch guns, 16 3.9-inch guns, eight torpedo tubes, and are capable of 32 knots an hour.

The Italian engineers who designed them believe that they have solved the difficult problem of concentrating in a limited tonnage the greatest possible offensive and defensive power.

The Alberto Da Giussano and the Giovanni Delle Dande Nere, each of 5,250 tons displacement are capable of 37 knots. Under the captain's bridge is a hangar for two hydroplanes and a catapult for launching them. Their principal armament is eight 6-inch guns.

They were not at home when their father wreaked wholesale vengeance.

BANISH MUSIC?

"PLEASE don't," plead millions of theatregoers.

"Better not," warn wise showmen.

"Sure we will," declare industrialists who control canned music in the theatres. "The public can learn to like records as well as orchestras. Anyway, that's what they're going to get."

And so the issue is defined: Shall talking pictures be used as an excuse for reducing the theatre to a dehumanized museum (without reduction in admission charge). Or, shall the atmosphere of the theatre be retained and the cause of culture served through a victory for music?

Managers of high-class theatres recognize that real music is essential, and so they continue to provide it.

Others must be shown.

The Music Defense League, organized to voice the public's desire for real music, is approaching 2,500,000 membership. Each vote counts more today than ever before.

LOBBY QUIZ TO AIR DRY GROUP

Prohibition Organizations to Face Investigation

WASHINGTON, April 27. (US)—After the senate lobby committee this week completes its investigation of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, it will turn the spotlight of publicity on operations of the anti-saloon league and other dry organizations.

The last witnesses for the association will be Capt. William H. Stayton, chairman of the board, and Walter K. Hooke, who lobbied for the association at the Illinois and New York capitals.

Representative George Holden Tinkham, Republican, of Masschusetts, today sent a letter to Senator Caraway, Democrat, of Arkansas, chairman of the committee, asking that a thorough probe be made of the receipts and expenditures of the anti-saloon league.

Renewing his charges that the league had violated the federal corrupt practice act in failing to file complete reports with the clerk of the house, Tinkham claimed the league had "covered up" huge expenditures.

Replying to a denial by F. Scott McBride, general superintendent, that the league had contributed to the campaign to elect former Representative Andrew J. Volstead to congress, Tinkham quoted Volstead as saying on April 16, last, that the league had sent speakers into his district.

Mothers And Daughters Have Brilliant Banquet

One of the prettiest affairs given in Girl Reserve circles of the city was the annual Mother and Daughter banquet given at the Y. W. C. A. Saturday night by grade and Junior high Girl Reserve clubs. The theme of world fellowship was carried out both in decorations and in the program. A vividly beautiful effect was made possible by the costumes and the table decorations emphasizing the program, each club choosing and representing a country.

Alamo, representing Japan, had as her representative in costume, Ruth Mays. Ruby Lewis represented the United States for Austin's table. Mary Cline O'Reilly was a pretty Hawaiian girl from the Ben Franklin school. Carrigan chose as her representative, Elizabeth Fisher, who carried out the Turkish costume. Elizabeth Wilson was a little French maid from Barwise. San Jacinto's Norwegian table was bright with Crystal Mankins in native costume. Mary Huey was a little Dutch girl, representing Travis. Helloise Doss was in Spanish costume to represent Reagan Junior high and Fannin was typified in her chosen country. Place cards at each table were hand-painted and the centerpieces of the tables typified the country represented.

Miss Lavaughana Roberts, president of the Fannin club of Girl Reserves and president of the inter-club council, presided as toastmistress and Helen Blakely gave the invocation. A toast to mothers was given by Helen McCormick and Mrs. P. L. Fisher responded with one to daughters. Mary Evelyn Lewis toasted the Girl Reserves around the world and Bertie Lou Nichols the advisors. A vocal number was given by Miss Margaret Bone, accompanied by Miss Lenora Walker and directly after the banquet, the pageant of world fellowship was presented.

Melba Miller represented the spirit of Girl Reserves and each representative of a different nation came to the spirit to light her candle and spread the spirit of the order throughout the world. The beautiful program closed with the mother and daughter ceremonial, inspirational in itself.

More than 200 guests were present on the occasion which was one of the most successful of annual celebrations. Special guests were Mesdames Walter Cline and Walter Campbell, members of the Girl Reserve committee; Mesdames T. A. Hicks and Guy Raley, members of the Y. W. C. A. board; J. T. Harrell, representative of the school board, and Mrs. Harrell and Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Cantwell.

Honor guests were Mrs. Harry ten Brink as a native of Holland; Mrs. Yvonne Hedben as a native of France, and Miss Gertrude Class as a native of Poland.

Among the principals present were Miss Kate Burgess, Miss Bess Stewart, Mrs. Frances Bone and Messrs. J. E. Park and J. T. Rundell. Teachers and advisors present were Mrs. H. E. Lewis, Misses Blanche Dean, Zoe Liles, Lallah Norman, Nell Billingsley, Lela Tomlinson, Adeana Kouri, Margaret Lewis, Fay Ratcliff, Joyce Samuels, Ethel Morgan, Fannie Vaughn, Ellen Hooker; Mesdames J. W. Kinsey, Patricia Swartwood, J. C. McCormick, Girl Reserves and their mothers and Miss Erma Schnelle, Girl Reserve secretary completed the number of those present at the interesting program and banquet.

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

The opening of the fishing season has brought to our memory the fisherman's paradise that we know best. Cut off from the Mississippi only by the broad high levee, there lies in Mississippi some 60 miles south of Memphis, Tenn., a lake in the shape of a new moon and bearing the name, "Moon lake."

◇ ◇ ◇

One may fish there all the year round, for it is running water. The water that supposedly seep in from the Mississippi, drain into Yazoo pass—in high water on the Mississippi, they are almost like a mill race.

◇ ◇ ◇

Three clubhouses have been built on the banks of the lake—one modern in all appointments. Dark-skinned caretakers wait to furnish boats and cook wonderful fish suppers for hungry anglers.

◇ ◇ ◇

There are striped bass and white and goggle-eyed perch and trout, and cat, if one is unlucky enough to hook one—for the catcher of a catfish has at times been paddled. And in the towns nearby, traps are set and children paid to pile up roaches to fish for bream.

◇ ◇ ◇

In the early morning, fishermen go over into the shallow waters of the willows and while darkies move them swiftly and silently in their boats, troll for the trout they see leaping from the water all around them.

◇ ◇ ◇

Ever specie of fish living in the Mississippi river, is in Moon lake. We have seen gar more than five feet long and it looks as if some day gar would destroy all other fish.

◇ ◇ ◇

We stood one cold morning on a floating dock anchored in the center of the lake, which is one mile wide at its widest and about 15 miles long. We were there to watch the catch of a man who had a contract to take gar and cat from the lake. He sold the roe from the catfish to a company who made domestic caviar, as good we thought, as Russian.

◇ ◇ ◇

On that cold morning, we watched the great deep net being spread by gasoline launch and then being drawn in by a gasoline engine on the dock. The hundreds of pounds of gasping catfish and long, slender billed gar, with vicious teeth, drove us from the dock to the safety of our boat.

◇ ◇ ◇

Moon lake empties into Yazoo pass; Yazoo pass into the Coldwater and the Coldwater into the Yazoo river, which in turn goes into the Mississippi down near Vicksburg.

◇ ◇ ◇

During Civil war days, when Moon lake was the bed of the Mississippi, Grant's boats tried to slip through Yazoo pass and then by way of the Coldwater and Yazoo, to besiege Vicksburg another way. One may see the hulls of the boats sunk by Confederates in the river near Greenwood, Miss.

◇ ◇ ◇

"Yazoo," in the Indian language, means "death." The Indians who lived in the hills above the delta used to come down into the swamps to hunt. On every trip some met accidental death, or dragged back to their high homes with a slow fever that eventually brought death. That part of the state of Mississippi that is now one of the garden spots of the earth was "death" then.

◇ ◇ ◇

And through the Yazo and the Coldwater and Yazoo pass there come the gar—"death" to the fish in Moon lake until some day, there will be nothing but the great ugly things in the lovely lake.

VALUE OF JELLIES AND JAMS OFTEN OVERLOOKED

They Make Balanced Meals More Appealing to the Appetite

The continuous appearance of fresh fruit in the markets during the summer season gives every housewife the opportunity to put up those which appeal to her family at a most reasonable cost. However, if it is not convenient to do preserving at home, there is always a delicious variety offered in grocery stores everywhere.

Jellies, jams and canned fruits, whether put up at home or purchased, should be included in the diet. Their flavor appeals to the appetite and their fruit content is healthful.

Aside from eating jelly or jam with bread or toast, they are a delicious accompaniment for roast meats. And a spoonful used to top rice or bread puddings makes these nourishing desserts more taste-appealing. Of course, canned fruits by themselves, are a most appropriate dessert for young and old.

As sugar plays an important part in preserving, so can it be equally essential in the preparation of every-day meals. Sugar when used to season canned or fresh vegetables improves their flavor, thereby making them more enjoyable to the taste. Doctors and dietitians approve this use of sugar as r flavor. Most foods are more delicious and nourishing with sugar The Sugar Institute.

Local Artist's Annual Exhibit Opens Tuesday

An exhibit of the work of local artists hanging on the walls of the forum foyer, dining room and auditorium, will be formally opened Tuesday afternoon from 2:30 to 5 o'clock, when members of the New Century club will act with members of the art department as hostesses. According to art critics, real improvement is shown over the work of artists who exhibited last year.

There are already hanging, exhibits by Misses Gladys Milligan, Ethel Chamberlin, Dorothy Campbell, Edna Prechel, Ina Pendergrass; Mesdames Luther Hoffman, Paul Harrell, Dorothy Barr, M. E. Moore, Paul Seeds, and Mary Frances Shultz; while Mrs. Alice Welty Ward and Mrs. Mary Lou Thomas Sanford will have outstanding exhibits by the day of the opening. Emil Herman, Voyle Armstrong and Robert Shultz represent the local male artists whose work is already hung.

Miss Milligan has two industrial paintings, one of the Panhandle refinery and one of the Wichita Falls skyline, which show an unknown beauty to the eye that is not able to catch the lights in nature. Her portrait of Mrs. Ola G. Hamlin is beautiful in its simplicity, lovely in soft tones and wonderfully executed and Miss Milligan's pencil portraits are particularly attractive.

Miss Dorothy Campbell has already sold and had removed one of her bluebonnet pictures recently done at Austin. She has several of these studies in oil and some particularly pretty ones in pastel. But Miss Campbell's genius lies in her portrait work. Two in charcoal and two in oil show her innate talent for getting a likeness.

Mrs. Paul Harrell has several studies but the most striking is a lovely charcoal portrait on the west dining room wall. It is remarkably vivid and artistic.

Mrs. Dorothy Barr shows a gift for getting likeness in an oil portrait and one of the outstanding pieces of portrait work is Miss Ethel Chamberlin's study of a negro girl. The skin tones and color harmonies in it are wonderful. Miss Chamberlin's still lifes are lovely and her bluebonnet pictures are beautiful in natural colors.

Mrs. Luther Hoffman has some remarkable lovely still lifes; one of wistaria has a grouping very rarely found and the textiles in it are exquisite. Another of snapdragons is as full of artistic value. Mrs. Hoffman's bluebonnet pictures are full of the vivid blue of the Texas flower with graceful, misty green mesquite leading the eye away to the magnificent distances and Texas skies she has beautifully portrayed.

One little painting of Mrs. Hoffman's is particularly attractive—an autumnal wood scene done in Week's park that hangs in the foyer. Some critic has said that Mrs. Hoffman should put mesquite in each landscape she paints.

A very attractive piece is Miss Edna Prechel's design that won first prize last winter in the annual Beaux Arts costume contest. it is a renaissance period costume, exquisite in color and detail.

Miss Ina Pendergrass has a study of aspens in pencil that will make many pause before their tall slim beauty and a corridor in Peabody college, Nashville, shows graceful arches and distances that prove this artists love of beauty. Mrs. Mary Frances Schutz shows a nice color in the distant mountains in her painting and she will have on exhibit of modern printed textiles and batiques and of hand-tooled and decorated leather pieces that have sold well in New York.

Mrs. Alice Welty Ward will also have an exhibit of block tinted textiles in modern designs that will prove extremely interesting and the exhibit that has been shipped by Mrs. Mary Lou Thomas Sanford is sure to be original and full of interesting talent for Mrs. Sanford is one of the artists whose exhibits are welcome in Taos, N. M.

Mrs. M. E. Moore has several landscapes, two of them bluebonnet scenes that are of particular interest when one hears that she has painted them without ever seeing bluebonnets, and a landscape by Mrs. Paul Steed, "Moonlight on the Nueces," catches the eye with the vivid stream of moonlight.

Robert Schultz shows interesting and unusual work in his pencil sketches and one colored sketch looks like a peep into fairyland.

Three studies by Voyle Armstrong show a most interesting technique. He has a flair for snow scenes; his bridge picture is unusually picturesque but the particularly noticeable feature in the three studies is the manner in which he has caught the sunlight on the bank of his river picture.

Emil Herman always does outstanding work, but in the pictures he has hung in this exhibit, three will probably attract more attention than the others; the spring colors in his spring scene and the lovely shadows in the water. In the water scene, the glow of the light on the water and in the bucking broncho painting, he has really put on canvas the dusty atmosphere made by the broncho's movements.

The beauty of the exhibit is the improvement shown year by year by amateurs and the opportunity to see new work of professionals. The art department of the forum has stimulated talent by their annual local artist's exhibit.

Forum Luncheon Tuesday Honors Mrs. Harrison

An "appreciation" luncheon will be the feature of Tuesday's social program when Woman's Forum club members and members of the First Baptist church are paying particular honor to Mrs. Hubert Harrison in a luncheon at the Forum clubhouse at 12 o'clock.

Mrs. Harrison, who will leave directly after the close of school for Longview, where Mr. Harrison is connected with the East Texas Chamber of Commerce, has been a member of the board of directors of the forum since its organization. She has served both the executive board and the board of directors as secretary, has been a valuable member of the Coterie club and one of the faithful members of her church.

Any friends of Mrs. Harrison's will be welcomed at this luncheon. Attendance is not restricted to club members; the affair is given as a token of the appreciation felt for Mrs. Harrison and the esteem in which she is held in Wichita Falls.

Reservations may be made until late Monday evening with Mrs. G. D. Anderson, 5140, or Mrs. Ruth Kirksey, 7230.

Lovely Choruses Will Add to Concert Work

When the Woman's Choral club members give their final concert of the year Monday night at 8:15 at the Woman's Forum clubhouse, the program of the finest examples of choral arrangements will be well worth hearing. Soloists who will assist, will add to the evening's pleasure, including Mrs. Pearl Calhoun Davis and Stanley Raub.

The final group of choruses include "The Morning Wind," by Gena Branscombe; "Lullaby," from Godard's opera, "Jocelyn," and Charles Wakefield Cadman's "I Hear a Thrush at Eve." All three of these are admirably contrasted in musical setting as forecfully as the titles and text suggest. While all three of them were originally written for vocal solo, Mrs. Wayne J. Holmes, the director, has given such an understanding reading of them that they are appealingly beautiful in their choral setting.

District Epworth Hi League Conference Elects Officers

Approximately 75 young people attended the district conference of the Epworth Hi leagues of the Wichita Falls district which met at the First Methodist church, Wichita Falls, April 26-27, under the supervision of the district secretary, Mrs. R. W. H. McCulloch.

On Saturday evening after roll call and a few announcements, E. F. Bohmfalk, educational director of First church, Wichita Falls, led the leaguers in songs and games. He was assisted by Mrs. M. P. Albritton on the piano. Among the special entertainments were songs by Bob McDonald and foolishness by Fritz McDonald. Misses Marie Albritton and Mary Stevenson and Mrs. John McIntyre had charge of refreshments for the evening.

The meeting opened Sunday with singing led by James Williams, Miss Marie Albritton at the piano. Rev. Paul Martin led in prayer and Rev. Daniel Baron, junior pastor of First church, gave an inspiring devotional. His subject was "Christ the Hero." After a song, Maurice Monroe, president of the conference, convened the house into a business meeting when minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

The following officers were elected for the new year: President, Miss Catherine Zachary of Grant street, Wichita Falls; vice president, Cleburne Maier of Iowa Park; secretary, Miss Jannie Du Bose of Adams street, Wichita Falls; treasurer, Bob McDonald, of First church, Wichita Falls.

Mrs. J. E. Keller of Iowa Park gave an interesting talk on the standard of excellence, illustrating with charts.

Iowa Park Hi leagues won the silver loving cup for having the best percentage on the standard of excellence. This league also won the banner given on the basis of attendance to the district conference.

Among the announcements made was one concerning the Annual Epworth league assembly at Sherman, Texas, June 2-7. Rev. Paul Martin announced that Rev. B. Frank Pin, Epworth Hi-Central office representative would conduct a class for High league counselors and urged each counselor to take advantage of the opportunity.

Observing promotion day and the election of chapter officers were discussed. The committee on resolutions expressed their appreciation to the Epworth Hi league of the First church, led by Miss Marie Albritton, for the splendid entertainment given the conference. This committee was composed of W. B. Burney, chairman; Alice Fay McKenney and Reverend Martin.

Iowa Park invited the conference to meet with them in July. The meeting adjourned after repeating the league benediction.

Answers to Questions

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

This is a special department devoted to the handling of inquiries. You have at your disposal an extensive organization in Washington to serve you in any capacity that relates to information. Write your question, your name, and your address clearly, and enclose two cents in coin or stamps for reply. Send to the Record News Information Bureau, Frederic J. Haskin, Director, Washington, D. C.

Q.—Is it considered ill-bred to complain to an usher when people persist in talking while attending a talking picture?—J. C.

A.—The people who are talking are the ones who are ill-bred. The managers of many motion picture houses request the disturbers to be quiet or leave.

Q.—Which one of the Gilbert and Sullivan operettas contains a song whose tune is the same as the well known Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here?—S. S. T.

A.—The Pirates of Penzance. The song is sung by the pirate chorus in the last act and is called Come, Friends, Who Plow the Sea. It is based on an old English air.

Q.—Which of the gospels in the New Testament are known as synoptic?—A. A. C.

A.—The synoptic gospels are Matthew, Mark and Luke, and are so named on account of their many agreements in subject, order and language. These three gospels consist largely of facts and chronology. The gospel of John differs from them in being given up to narrative and records of the discourse of Christ.

Q.—What vitamin is found in yeast?—I. G.

A.—Yeast is an excellent source of vitamin B. Vitamin B is also contained in yeast.

Q.—Where is the forestry exhibit truck which was in Florida during the winter?—S. A. W.

A.—The American Forestry association says that it is now on a 4,000-mile tour which will take it from Florida to Minnesota going by way of Memphis, Little Rock, St. Louis, Indianapolis and Chicago, after which it will be seen in the East. Equipped with all the newest devices for sight and sound effects, its purpose is to instruct people concerning proper care and use of forest land. It lays great stress on prevention of forest fires.

Q.—What is the name of the mountain in Chile which resembles Japan's Fujiyama?—C. F.

A.—Mount Osorno is often called Chile's Fujiyama.

Q.—Was ambrosia a food or a drink?—F. S. O.

A.—Ambrosia is the term used in mythology to describe the substance which, with nectar, formed the food and drink of the gods, and which made immortal those who partook of it. Usually, both in Homer and later writers, ambrosia is the food and nectar the drink, but some, as Sappho, used ambrosia as the name of the drink and nectar as the food.

Q.—In the Bible is there any poetry which has rhyme or meter?—L. B. T.

A.—Murray's Illustrated Bible dictionary says: "If rhyme and meter be considered essential, poetry would have to be denied to the Bible altogether. For of rhyme, there is absolutely none; and as meter depends upon pronunciation and accent, it has generally been regarded as hopeless to restore these essential elements so long have they been lost in the transmission of the language through consonants alone."

Q.—What is a madrigal?—P. J. R.

A.—It is a short lyric poem generally on an amatory subject. Those of Tasso represent the finest specimens of Italian poetry.

Q.—Where is the windiest place in the world?—B. W.

A.—It is said to be Commonwealth bay, on the coast of Antarctica, south of Australia. According to the previously unpublished records made by Sir Douglas Mawsons' expedition a decade ago, the average wind velocity over a period of 22 months was 44 miles per hour, and wind speeds of from 90 to 100 miles per hour were not uncommon.

Decency and Dividends

EVERY once in a while some earnest seeker after truth makes the surprising discovery that it really pays to treat workingmen like decent human beings, finding to his amazement that the employer who gives his workers more than they expect is bound to profit by his generosity.

Of course, we all ought to know this, and be sure of it, without being told. But we have a fondness for cynicism, and we don't assimilate truths like this unless they are drummed into us.

An English merchant sailor named Lennox Kerr recently spent a year and a half wandering about the United States. When he got through he wrote a book, "Back Door Guest," just published, telling of his experiences. He found many things in this country to surprise and interest him; but nothing hit him quite such a wallop as the contrast between sailors on the Great Lakes' steamers and sailors on the ocean.

Kerr, a veteran salt water sailor, made several trips on a lakes ship and thought he had tumbled into sailors' heaven.

He found the lakes shippers treating sailors as if they were decent, self-respecting human beings. Crews' quarters were clean, comfortable and commodious, as compared with the dark, dirty, smelly forecastles of salt water ships. The food was beyond praise, as compared with the starvation menus of most ocean steamers. Ships' officers treated their men with consideration, instead of wrapping themselves in the dignity of the sea's traditional caste system.

In short, he found that whereas the ocean sailor ordinarily is given bad accommodations, bad food, callous treatment and ill-usgae in all its forms, the lake sailor is treated with kindness, consideration and respect.

Then he sums up the results.

First of all, it pays dividends. The lakes shippers have an eight-months season and face heavy railroad competition—and profit as heavily as salt water shippers if not more.

In the second place, they get more work out of their men. The lakes sailor works longer hours and does a better job while he is at it than his salty brother. He is infinitely more sober and quiet. He saves his money, is utterly dependable and—in Kerr's words—"is the ideal worker, physically, morally and in intelligence."

In short, the Great Lakes way seems to this sailor to be not only kinder and more humane than the salt water way, but also much more intelligent.

We ought to know all of this without being told, of course. But we don't. It actually surprises us to learn that even sailors—traditionally a graceless class—will respond to decent treatment. Which, of course, only indicates that we are still a trifle blind.

Where the Fault Lies

IT IS hard to imagine anything more horrible than the Ohio penitentiary fire.

The thought of those 300-odd convicts, locked in their steel cages and screaming out helplessly as death came upon them in the smoke, is going to be a hard thing to forget. One's faith in the ultimate goodness of the world does not easily survive a jar like that.

Perhaps, though, it will be a good thing if we can't forget this fire too easily.

There is no way of undoing the tragedy. But it is possible for us to see to it that it is never repeated.

Ohio's prison, as a matter of fact, was just waiting for something like this to happen. The stage was all set for it—had been set for it for years. The investigation now under way may disclose that this or that man, group of men or circumstance or group of circumstances was directly at fault; but we do not need an investigation to see that the fundamental trouble was the penal system itself.

The prison at Columbus was very old. It was frightfully overcrowded. It was manned by a staff of sadly underpaid guards. Year by year its population increased, year by year its facilities grew more and more inadequate; but the politicians at Columbus, year by year, postponed the expenditure of money that would have made a modern, decent penitentiary out of it.

So, sooner or later, something like this fire was bound to happen.

The tragedy, when it came, was unspeakably awful. But there is no use in pretending that it was merely the work of a sardonic, inscrutable fate. It was the work of human shortcomings and indifference. It happened because Ohio was willing to house its convicts in a relic of the dark ages.

If this were Ohio's affair alone it would not be so bad. But is it? Are there, in all the union, half a dozen states which do not have penitentiaries equally out-of-date, equally overcrowded, equally understaffed? Could not the same thing happen tomorrow in almost any other penitentiary one could name?

There is the rub. Not only Ohio needs to spend several million dollars on a new prison system. Most of the other states need to do the same thing. Texas faces the same question.

Dr. Little's Criticisms

THE cause of higher education in America is a popular one. Consequently, there is bound to be a good deal of interest in remarks recently made by Dr. Clarence Cook Little, former president of the University of Mishigan; and undoubtedly they will provoke some very heated retorts.

Dr. Little believes that "meddling women" constitute a very detrimental factor in most colleges and universities. He says of them:

"They are the militant feminists—the older women executives, faculty members, faculty wives and local club women. They thrive on a diet of emotional pap. They tend to breed and to foster a sex antagonism based on unwise and unreal values.

"They demand, among other things, that there be an equal number of men and women on college faculties, regardless of the competitive processes through which candidates are selected. They are too highly emotional in their approach to all problems."

We are just waiting, now, for the lightning to begin striking about Dr. Little's scholarly head.

CARESSE ⚜ A Complete Novel By RUTH TAYLOR

For a long while they toasted muffins and talked of little things.

SYNOPSIS

Caresse O'Neill, daughter of the owner of Shady Lawn Inn in the village of Riverton, is jilted by her sweetheart, Ted Branard, son of the town's wealthy banker, on the day of the wedding. Caresse insists on continuing the party which had been arranged in her honor, and telephones Billy, a New York friend, to come down and bring two other friends as escorts for Miriam Nowell and Bess Parker, her best friends. They later go to a nearby roadhouse.

A few weeks later Caresse and friends are riding on a lonely road when the car gives out of gas near the old Morton place, which they believe abandoned. They go to the house, find a lighted lamp and a grand piano, and start dancing. Suddenly the door opens and the owner, Lee Deering, enters, to confront them.

CHAPTER III

It was a silly thing to say. The words had no more than left Caresse's lips before she realized it.

There she stood, she, who by all rights should be making some sort of attempt at explanation of her presence, or an apology. Instead she had asked the owner of the house in which she was trespassing who he was, and haughtily declared she did not know him.

Lee Deering smiled slowly, as if he could read what was going on in her mind.

"So you don't know me," he repeated. "Well, that's easily rectified. In fact, I should say it was being now. I had not expected callers so late, Miss—Miss—" He paused, interrogatively.

"I'm Caresses O'Neill, if that's what you want to know," defied the girl, and felt her face flush under his gaze.

Strange how the man affected her. And his voice, too—a low vibrant voice, neither high-pitched nor raucous as were the voices of the boys she knew. His voice made her whole body thrill to its cadences.

Deering bowed again.

"Won't you sit down, Miss O'Neill," he asked.

Caresse had unconsciously risen from the piano bench as she waited for what he might do, or say.

"Your friends seem to have been in a hurry," he went on, and smiled.

Caresse looked about her and caught her breath sharply as she saw that neither Miriam, Jack nor Bert Carrington were in sight. Where had they gone? What a mean thing to do—to leave her to face the music for what they had done. They were all to blame!

"Oh!" she said, and instead of taking the chair which Lee Deering strode across the room and pushed forward, invitingly, she looked about quickly. She, too, wanted to escape. "I—I must go," she said, weakly. "I—the others will—"

"In a moment, Miss O'Neill. They will wait. But what I want to know will not wait. I think I am entitled to some little explanation for this—er—you might say, rather unconventional call. Naturally, I should prefer to question the young men, but as they are not available, I shall have ask you—er—"

"We didn't mean any harm," began Caresse, on the defensive. "We were looking for gas. We saw the door open—there was nobody here. I didn't know anybody lived here but bats and owls, and—"

"Do the bats and owls of your acquaintance light floor lamps?" And do they affect grand pianos?"

He was laughing at her. Caresse knew it, but she could not resent it. His tone was too polite, his manner too perfect.

He was in the right, too. That was maddening, and put the girl more on the defensive. Of course he had the right to ask who and why anybody should be making free with his house and property in his absence. That he did have the right made her obstinately determined to defend herself and her position.

She should apologize. She knew that. But she would not! Every minute that passed while she realized that odd sensation that the man's mere presence had on her made her the more determined to exercise her feminine prerogative and refuse to do the right or obvious thing.

He could just wonder, that was what he could do! She was going! Right now! He could think what he pleased!

But she did not go. She stood there, watching Lee Deering as he put a fresh log on the fire before he turned to her. What a graceful, slender figure he had. She wasn't sure, though, that she quite liked his hair so long. She could not help but wonder about him—who he was—how he had come there so quietly that no one in Riverton, so far as she had heard, knew he was there.

Her curiosity got the better of her original determination.

Deering turned toward her with his ingratiating smile. He again indicated the deep chair. He pushed it closer to the freshly leaping blaze.

"Please sit down," he asked again. "You'll find it more comfortable here by the fire. Chilly, these nights."

Only a minute did Caresses hesitate. She did not hesitate that minute because it even remotely occurred to her there might be anything improper in her being in this strange man's house late at night. There was something about Lee Deering that made such a thought impossible.

He was, she concluded, as she continued to watch him, what her mother would have called "comforting." Unquestionably he was a gentleman. He was more. Caresse would have liked to have had time to analyze him. There was something of the poet, the artist, in his demeanor. She would have liked to question him. She was curious to know how he had come to be living on the lonely hill.

It was not time for her to do any querying, however. That was for the man to do.

She laughed a little self-consciously, as she settled back in the big, deep chair, and felt the warmth of the fire on her face.

"You are nice to your uninvited guests," she remarked.

She felt his eyes on her as he took his seat on the settee beside the fire. Her glance could not help but note that those eyes were admiring.

"Uninvited, perhaps, because I had no opportunity to invite them. You, at least, have not run away at my unwelcome approach, I thought"—he picked up a poker and stirred the fire so that the sparks flew up the chimney, and a blue-red blaze flared up—"that perhaps you might tell me how you and your friends came to—er—. Is it your habit to drop in so on people in this locality? I'm new here, you know, I might as well to be prepared—"

Caresse felt a little uncomfortable, but she did not give up her defiant attitude. She scarcely knew, herself, why she had accepted the invitation to sit down while she explained. It may have been the man himself. She had to confess he intrigued her, to say the least. She must know something more about him.

"Strange," she told herself. "And I thought no man on earth could interest me. Curiosity that killed the cat, I suppose."

Deering smiled whimsically.

"Don't you imagine," he asked, "that you would feel just a little at sea if some one walked into your house unannounced and you suddenly discovered him in your living room, playing your piano?"

"Oh, I don't know," said Caresse. "I'm used to it."

The man looked his surprise.

"Used to it?" he repeatedly, blankly.

But Caresse nodded.

"Yes. My home is in the inn down in the village."

"I see. Then perhaps that explains—"

"It can't explain our rudeness in coming into your house as we did," burst out Caresse, vehemently. "Oh, I didn't even mean to say I was sorry, but you must know I am. It—it was unforgivable. It—

"Well, it just happened, you know. We ran out of gas, and then Miriam—she's my friend, the other girl—saw a light up here, and we came reconnoitering. I was sure no one lived here, and you can imagine the surprise! Then you came—and—oh, I don't know what to say! Playing your wonderful piano, and—and everything—"

"Why say it?" he smiled. "I'm glad you like my piano," he said again. "I like your playing. Full of—er—verve—"

"All of that." Caresse wrinkled her nose humorously.

"A different kind of music from mine," said the man.

"You play?" began Caresse, then a new thought. "Of course! I should have known it. No one would have such a piano out here in the wilds simply for the amusement of his friends."

She smiled at the last, and saw that Deering grinned, too, as he reached for his pipe.

"You don't mind?" he asked, as he held it up. "I like this, in the country. You'll find cigarets at your hand there, if you care for one."

He watched her to see what she would do, but she shook her head.

"No, thanks."

"Sorry I can't offer you a drink," he suggested.

"I'm not," said Caresse, decidedly. "I hate it."

Deering nodded. He was glad to hear her say that. He saw in Caresse the epitome of all he believed should be girlish and innocent. It would have been too bad for her to have spoiled it. She seemed to him the kind of girl he had quite ceased to believe any longer existed.

He had no doubt she would have taken a cigaret if she had cared for it. Undoubtedly she did take them when she wished. All girls did. The drink was another matter. He sighed with relief as he heard Caresse say she was glad there was none, or perhaps glad he did not offer it.

"I'm afraid I was dreadfully rude," demurred Caresse. "But you came in so suddenly, and I didn't know you."

"My misfortune," smiled Deering. "I hope I will not be quite so lonely, though, now that you do know me."

"Perhaps some time you'll play for me," suggested Caresse. "Then I'll know I'm forgiven. I love music."

"You might be disappointed."

"I'm sure I wouldn't be. I have an idea—Tell me, are you a concert pianist? You seem so—so—well, different. Like I've thought all real musicians must be, and—"

Deering shook his head.

"No, sorry to say. Wish I could play like that. Perhaps then, I could show some others, who are professional players, how they ought to interpret certain things. My own, for example."

"Oh!" exclaimed Caresse, her eyes wide. "Then you—you are—"

"A composer of sorts," nodded Deering. "It's one of the reasons—the chief one, I might say, for me being out here alone. I'm working on a symphony, and this place seemed ideal. The country is inspiring, you know. And quiet. Except when an occasional motorist—"

He stopped and smiled insinuatingly. Caresse had the grace to blush.

"I'm so sorry," she murmured, and half rose. "Oh, I must go now," she said. "I hope I—we're forgiven, Mr. Deering. The others will wonder—they're waiting—"

"Do them good," announced her impromptu host. "Let them wait. It's just occurred to me you must think I'm rather a poor host. I haven't even offered you coffee, and I'm great at making coffee. Wish I could say as much about the rest of the cuisine. Oh, you mustn't refuse,"—as Caresse rose and looked undecidedly toward the door. "I can't let you go out in this chill, after the fire, without a cup of coffee. I'll have it in a jiffy. You'll wait?"

Caresse nodded that she would, but she wondered at herself and her acquiescence. She could not imagine why she was staying on with this stranger, but she liked him. Besides, it would be a good lesson to Miriam and the others. They had run away and left her, and now they could just wait.

Deering was not gone long. Caresse, waiting, hurriedly took stock of her surroundings. She had time to note the room and to decide it quite fitted the man as she made him out. Artistic and aesthetic. Nothing effeminate, but the room seemed just to fit him.

She admired the odd looking rug on the floor, the rug Jack had so unceremoniously kicked aside that he and Miriam might dance. The piano was the chief article of furniture in the place, as befitted the room of a man who made his life-work through use of a piano's services. There were deep easy chairs, a table with books piled high, and music scores.

Kernels in the Neck

Most people have noticed little lumps which appear at the side of the neck when one has an acute cold. Those with chronic catarrh often find that a few of these lumps persist over a long period of time.

These kernels are really enlargements of lymph nodes which are little reservoirs in the great lymphatic circulation. The contents of the lymphatic vessels are much more than that of the blood vessels; in fact, this watery-like circulation in the body is equal to one-fourth of the body's weight. The little lymph nodes are situated in every part of the body, but there are large groups in certain places, such as the neck, under the arms, and in the groins.

The lymph nodes in children seem to be fully as large as with adults, and can be more easily felt, due to the immature development of the tissues around the lymphatics.

With acute tonsilitis or a bad nose or throat cold the lymph glands enlarge a great deal, but usually return to normal size after the acute disorder has disappeared.

A chronic enlargement of the the lymph nodes is called tubercular adenitis, although only in rare cases are the tubercular germs found in the enlarged glands. Tubercular adenitis is seen particularly among the poor, and those who live among unsanitary conditions. In the United States it is most common in the negro race.

In nearly every disease it is possible to find some micro-organism which is commonly associated with that particular disorder. With tubercular adenitis and with similar disorders a great deal of research has been done in an effort to find the germ or bacterial cause. Much good time and energy have been lost in such research, for it is easily apparent that an enlargement of the lymphatic glands only shows that the body, through the lymphatic circulation, is attempting to carry away waste products and toxins from certain sections.

In a case of enlargements of the lymph nodes in the neck, the source of such toxic waste will be found in the nose, throat, ears, teeth, or some of the adjacent organs or structures. There may be a type of invading micro-organism found in the tonsils or elsewhere in the neighborhood, but such invasion is only possible because of constitutional derangements due to faulty habits of living.

The removal of the enlarged glands by surgery has accomplished little good, as the other glands which are left are compelled to do more work and consequently enlarge even more than the ones which were removed.

The sensible treatment for all enlarged lymph glands in any part of the body is to entirely stop the food intake so that the white blood cells and the lymphatic fluids can carry off the accumulated wastes while not being burdened with the assimilation of food and its distribution to the cells.

I recently examined a young man who had just completed a two weeks' fruit fast. His neck glands are now practically normal, where before they were so enlarged as to make his neck protrude to a thickness of more than two inches on one side. This young man is about 25 years of age. Young children get even more rapid results, and it is usually only necessary for them to take a fruit fast for four or five days, when the lymph nodes are emptied enough to be sure that a cure will be effected if a rational diet is followed afterwards.

Hot applications over the glands will help some in increasing circulation of fluids.

If your child has swollen glands, try the fast and heat applications first before you resort to surgery.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Eyes Swell

Question—R. A. asks: "What causes the eyes to swell when one is sleeping? What can be done to prevent this?"

Answer—It would be difficult to determine the exact cause of the eyes swelling while sleeping without first examining the patient. This may be an indication of some local irritation or it may be caused by some form of kidney trouble. A careful examination would be advisable.

Milk and Fruit

Question—A. C. M. writes: "I would like to know if one pint of milk and about a pound of acid fruit is too much for one meal, also do you think this would be a good cleansing diet to live on for several weeks?"

Answer—The amount of acid fruit and milk which you ask about would not be too much for a meal, but is not quite as cleansing a diet as if fruit alone were used.

Lettuce and Ulcers

Question—E. O. W. writes: "A physician has told a friend who was recently operated on for ulcer of the stomach that he must not eat crisp lettuce, as it contains oxide of zinc used by the growers to give it that crispness that appeals to all lettuce eaters. Is there any truth in this statement?"

Answer—There is no danger in using lettuce or other fresh vegetables if they are first thoroughly washed. However, for stomach ulcers I would advise the milk diet until the ulcers and inflammation have completely cleared up.

The Rambler's Corner

By FRED D. THOMPSON

Mr. T. T. Meade, of Megargel, Texas, in a communication addressed to this newspaper, has a few words to say about the baseball-radio situation. His letter follows:

"Gentlemen—The baseball magnates are unintentionally throwing a great damper on the game, by not allowing the games to go out over the air. Take Megargel for instance, last year there were always from three to four radios in public buildings giving out the games and a crowd were listening to all of them. Baseball was a common subject, and on the minds of the people, with the result every one as they got the chance went to Wichita Falls to see the Spudders play. What a change there is now from then. No one seems interested and some of the most dyed in the wool cranks of last year, don't even want to talk baseball.

"Advertising is the life of any business, and radio advertising is the greatest of any kind, for it reaches practically everybody, and educates peoples even sometimes unconsciously against their own will.

"Here in this town a mere example of all of them, the merchants, the children, bless their hearts, are sadly disappointed and disgusted at the short sighted policy of not radioing the games. You might say the children don't amount to anything, but the interest taken by children is wonderful. They listen all they can, know the players, talk about the home runs, and beg papa to take them to the game tomorrow or Sunday. Where there is no advertising, no radio of games, baseball gets out of the mind of every one and the game suffers a loss of attendance, loss of friendship, loss of education to bring up the growing kids to be baseball enthusiasts.

"Several have asked me to write to the Wichita Falls papers and KGKO and doggone our buttons, these are our sentiments.

"Very truly yours, T. T. Meade."

The excellent mound work of Alphonse Thomas and McKain gave Chicago the game. They struck out eight batters, and allowed only five hits. Thomas, who started, retired in the seventh inning after injuring his arm. Score:

SOX BEAT YANKEES

NEW YORK, April 27. (AP)—Nineteen hits together with home runs by Earl Webb and Russell Scarritt helped the Red Sox defeat the Yankees today in the final game of the series, 8 to 7. Babe Ruth's second homer of the season with two on in the ninth failed to tie the score. A quartet of Yankee pitchers were hit hard by the Sox, while the Yankees could do little with the offerings of Jack Russell in the pinches, till the eighth and ninth.

VINCENT STARS IN PINCHES

Bud Stapleton, Former Spud, Gets Two Doubles

By FRED D. THOMPSON

After the Spudders had scored in the first and made a grand sortie in quest of victory under the leadership of Hal Wiltse, the veteran southpaw, the league-leading Beaumont Exporters Sunday afternoon came from behind in outbursts of hitting in the fourth and sixth that not only drove Wiltse from the mound but assured the Shippers of victory. The Spudders managed to crowd in another tally in the seventh, but the Exporters did the same thing in the eighth to run the final score up to 6 to 2. It was Wiltse's second defeat of the season.

Vincent Handles Pinches

Fred Vincent and Lester White finished for the Spudders in noble fashion. Vincent came to the mound in the seventh with Mullen on second and Shiver on first and none out. He got himself into a hot corner by committing an error which sent Wade to first, filling the bases. His throw to third caught Mullen out, Easterling popped to Euller, and then Holley strolled, filling the bases again. Then Vincent put all he had on it and got out of the second pinch by striking Schuble out. White allowed only three hits in his two innings, but they were good for a run.

Beaumont's slugging was featured by a home run by Easterling in the sixth that found Wade on the paths. The defensive was on its toes, with Easterling patrolling the left garden in high class form, while Schuble handled everything that came his way at shortstop.

Wiltse led off with his shoutout tactics and didn't allow a hit for three inings. The game wore on, however, and things were different. In all, the Shippers collected 11 hits, six of them off Wiltse. The Spudders were allowed 10 by Denny Burns, but they were kept well scattered by the adept pace-changer who appeared at his best throughout the turmoil.

Levey Makes Tally

Levey started the works for the Spudders with a nice single just behind third. He went to second on Storti's sacrifice, pitcher to first. Fitzgerald flied out to left, but Kloza got a hit past second, scoring Levey. Burns hit a hard one between first and second which landed on Kloza's left foot, and the inning was over.

With two men out in the third, Fitzgerald bounced a sensational triple to right, but was stranded when Kloza grounded out, Schuble to Stapleton.

Bettencourt scored the second Spudder tally in the seventh. He doubled to left and scored on Euller's single past second. Crouch flied out to right. Orr, batting for Vincent, struck out. Levey singled to left, advancing Euller to third, but both were stranded when the catcher handled Storti's foul.

Stapleton Cheered

Bud Stapleton, the Spudders' premier first sacker last year, was given a round of applause when he first came to bat, and thus cheered he returned in the fourth to lead off with a blistering double to left that started the downfall of his former mates. He took third on Mullen's sacrifice to center. Shiver strolled. Wade clouted to Euller at third, who attempted to throw Stapleton out at the home plate. The former Spud was safe, however, and Shippers chalked up their first tally. Shiver went to second on the play. Easterling grounded to Euller who threw wild to second trying to trap Wade. Shiver scored. Bettencourt recovered Euller's wild throw in time to peg Wade out at third. Holley singled to left, advancing Easterling to third. Holley stole second. Schuble flied to Bettencourt, and the inning closed.

Wiltse was better in the fifth, but the cannonading started in the sixth. Wade singled past short. Easterling then came through with a homer over the right field boards, scoring Wade ahead of himself. Holley struck out. Schuble ankled to first. Steinecke hit one to the box, and Schuble was safe at second on Wiltse's bad throw to Storti. J. Burns singled to center, scoring Schuble and advancing Steinecke to second. Stapleton hit into a double play, Storti to Levey to I. Burns.

Hits Second Double

Stapleton's second double of the day was instrumental in the Shippers' final tally in the eighth. The wallop came after Steinecke and J. Burns had been retired. Bud scored on Mullen's single past short. Shiver struck out, and the scoring was over.

The two teams meet in the second game of the series this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

What's On The Air Today?

Particular interest will be shown Monday night by radio listeners to a program from New York through station WFAA, Dallas, at 7:30 o'clock, when 30-minutes of Rimsky-Krosakov music will be given by Mme. Maria Kurenko and a supporting orchestra. Rimsky-Korsakov, one of Russia's "Big Five" composers, contributed the sensational opera "Sadko" which closed its first American season at the Metropolitan just a few nights ago, and two of Mme's Kurenko's songs Monday night will be from that opera. Another of her numbers will be the world-favorite, "Song of India." The famous soprano was brought from Moscow with the opera "Sadko" for its New York performances.

Those who await the clear air of midnight for better reception will be rewarded at 11:30 p. m. by an unusually promising program by the Cino singers. A varied concert, which includes Dudley Buck's "On the Sea" and "Even Song" (Grimm-Hartzell) by a quartet, will close with Burleigh's "Promised Land" and "Old Black Joe."

BARRON TALKS ON RICH MEN

How Capitalist Can Enter Heaven Told

An interpretation of the statement of Jesus that "it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God" was given Sunday by John Daniel Barron in a talk on "The Christian and His Material Wealth" delivered to the 137 present at the meeting of the Kay Bible class.

"I do not mean to argue for poverty," Mr. Barron said in concluding his talk: "Poverty is as dangerous as riches. There is a middle ground at which man will find the maximum of happiness and usefulness. The mere fact that a man possesses material wealth does not mean he can never expect to enter the kingdom of God." Mr. Barron's talk follows:

"An earnest, rich young man wanted to know of Jesus what good thing to do to have eternal life. He was told to keep the commandments, to which he replied that he had done that from his youth. Then he asked, 'what lack I yet?' Jesus told him if he would be perfect to sell all his possessions and give to the poor; and follow Him. And the rich young man was not willing to close the deal, the price was too great he thought; so he passed up the kingdom and kept his possessions. Jesus' comment on the incident was to the effect that a rich man shall hardly enter the kingdom of heaven; that it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God.

Material Wealth

"This incident and Jesus' comment on it raise for us the whole question of a Christian's relation to material wealth. If we are to take Jesus seriously we ought to understand what He thought about material wealth, and then make our thinking on the subject conform to His. We cannot understand His position by confining our inquiry to one incident, or one sentence from His lips. We shall have to take many expressions of His mind on this subject before we can hardly know what He thought about it. In seeking to know His mind on the subject we have to guard ourselves against two extreme conclusions. One is that Jesus was an impractical fanatic on the subject, and therefore not to be taken seriously. The other extreme is to conclude that Jesus sanctions our mad passion and insane scramble for material possessions. Some where between these two extremes lies the mind of Jesus. It is both practical and necessary for the living of His life in the fullest sense. So let us attempt to discover it.

"Does the incident and Jesus' comment on it in our lesson today force us to conclude that if a man is to follow Christ he must dispose of all his material possessions and give to the poor? If so then, we are forced to join with the school of Mencken which holds that Jesus was an impractical dreamer; that His demands are unreasonable and undesirable, and not to be applied. If such course were followed literally in time all the material wealth of the world would be in the hands of evil men to be used on the side of unrighteousness. We would not have means wherewith to propagate the good news. In such a world as this a certain amount of material wealth is necessary to the success of Christ's will for men.

"But did not Jesus say 'go sell that thou hast, and give to the poor?' Did He not make that one condition of discipleship? In this particular case He did, but we have abundant evidence that He made no such demand upon all who followed Him. This is the only recorded instance of such a demand. It seems clear, then, that the nature of this particular case made necessary this particular demand to dispose of all material wealth. We do not know exactly why this was made of this young man, but we have reason to believe it was because his 'great possessions' had in reality become his great God. His material possessions so dominated his life that Jesus saw the impossibility of the principles and ideals of the kingdom taking root in such soil. The only way out was to remove the conditions which erected a barrier to the full flow of eternal life—hence, 'sell that thout hast.' It was a desperate case that needed desperate action. Jesus never hesitated to use high explosives when He encountered hard rock.

"We have ample reason to believe that if his possessions had not dominated his life to the exclusion of the gospel way, Jesus would not have demanded that he give them away. A lawyer asked Jesus this identical question and He demanded no more of him than the keeping of the commandmants. You will recall the Zaccheaus was a rich man, but Jesus did not require him to dispose of his wealth. Jesus met different cases differently. The needs of the rich young man and the lawyer were not identical, and Jesus did not make of them the same demands. He did not try to put square pegs in round holes and round pegs in square holes. He made things fit. We have been slow to learn that. For hundreds of years the Protestant church has been trying to frock the children in Nicodemus' clothes, and both comedy and tragedy have followed the effort. Pink clothes and baby powder for hard hearted sinners have become the order of the day! Jesus' rule was to render unto brother Nicodemus what brother Nicodemus needed, and unto children what children needed. He was psychologist enough to know that the needs of Nicodemus and the child were not the same. When He came to this rich young man He saw his greatest need was to get rid of his possessions, for they were destroying him: closing the kingdom of God to him. That may be the need of some of you: if so, I think Jesus would say: 'Give them up!' The conclusion is: Material possessions need not, but can, close the kingdom of God to one, according to the teachings of Jesus.

Danger to Spiritual Life

"If it is clear that Jesus did not teach that material wealth is necessarily evil and must be renounced as a condition to Christian living, it is equally clear that he did teach that material wealth is frightened with danger to the spiritual life. He gave much attention to this subject, and we find his conclusion summarized in the statements that a rich man shall hardly enter the kingdom of heaven, and that it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God. This strong figure of speech is used to emphasize the extreme difficulty with which a man with great material possessions lives the humble, unselfish, sacrificial life which admits one to the kingdom. Jesus knew that a man's material wealth and his spiritual life were closely related and that His wealth was a determining influence in the quality of his character. He saw that it often led to spiritual death.

"The first danger of riches is that they tend to become the most important and most valuable thing in a man's life. They tend to distort a man's sense of value. They tend to shift material values to the center of ones fucus. Human personality and spiritual values become secondary, material values primary. Then human lives are sacrificed for material profit. Children's lives are minted into gold coins for the coffers of man. Then we can sacrifice millions of men for the protection of material values. This emphasis of value has led to wars and promises to lead to more. Billions of American dollars are being invested in foreign lands. In the future they will come in conflict with the nations where they are invested and this materialistic attitude will lead our government to make possible the murder of our sons for their protection. They will tell us it is a war for God and humanity, for the rights of man, or some other lie, and we shall preach sermons in its defense, and play the pagan in general. But in reality it will be a war to protect some greedy men's wealth which has distorted their sense of values to the extent that a billion dollars is worth more than a million lives. His great possessions were supreme in this young man's life, as they tend to become in every man's life, and that is why Jesus says they are dangerous.

"Then material wealth has the tendency to make a man feel self-sufficient, independent of God and man. God becomes a negligible factor instead of a sustaining father, and the God-material is enthroned. The rich fool is a case in point. His god lived in his barn. He relied on his barns. They had life for him. He needed nothing else. Jesus condemned him for his poverty, for he owned nothing eternal. All he had would be lost at death. Here is danger! Gathering unto self only those values which are passing, coming to eternity with nothing but 'great possessions.' Jesus thought riches were dangerous because they tend to eliminate God from one's life.

"Then, too, material possessions tend to set one off from the sufferings and needs of the great masses of men. They tend to make one cold and unsympathetic toward the cries of needy men. The riches and luxury of Dives made his eyes blind and his ears deaf to the sight and cries of poor Lazarus. The same thing has happened to us and for the same reason. Our appeals for the support of Christian missions are falling on an increasing number of deaf ears. Our luxury and wealth has separated us from suffering humanity. At it was because of this destructive tendency of riches that Jesus considered them dangerous to the spiritual life.

"Jesus considered material possessions to be dangerous because of their tendency to create in man those attitudes and motives and consequent conduct the possession of which make it as impossible for him to have the ideals, motives, attitudes, and life of Christ as it is for a camel to go through the eye of a needle. It tends to set in operation in man that which automatically excludes him from the fullest participation in the life of the kingdom.

"If a man could be the master of his material possessions and use them for spiritual ends, as many do, then they would be a blessing. But Jesus seems to think that the tendency is for the possessions to become the master of man. When they do they become his enemy. The danger is that they will curse and blight more often than they will bless.

Poverty Equally Bad

"I do not think, therefore, that we ought to make ourselves miserable because we have sought great possessions and maybe failed. For he who plucks wealth plucks not happiness and perfect peace. There is something worth more than material wealth. There are greater values than monetary. If your prayer for great wealth had been answered you might have lost that in your life which is worth more than all the wealth you would have gained.

"I do not mean to argue for poverty. Poverty is as dangerous as riches. The old man of wisdom prayed a great prayer when he said: 'Give me neither poverty nor riches . . . lest I be full, and deny thee, and say, Who is the Lord? or least I be poor, and steal, and take the name of my God in vain.' There is a middle ground at which man will find the maximum of happiness and usefulness.

"Perhaps some of you have read the story of the man who made himself an iron man to do his work. After years of labor he perfected him. And then the iron man turned on his creator and killed him. In this we have a parable of man and his material possessions. As long as we stay in control of the iron man we may use him to bless the world. If we lose control of him he will destroy us, and be a menace to the world. Jesus would not forbid us forming him but He gives us great warnings against losing control of him."

Boy, 9, Sent to State School for Year's Term

The youngest boy ever sent from here to the state training school at Gatesville was sentenced to a year's term in the school Saturday by Judge W. W. Cook of the 78th district court after a hearing on a charge of petty shop-lifting against the youngster. The boy was nine years old and had been in trouble several times before, according to James A. McDonald, county juvenile officer.

His mother was forced to work and was unable to look after the boy, Mr. McDonald said. She had left him in care of the day nursery for a time but his incorrigibility caused a subsequent refusal to take him any longer.

THEATER GROUP WINS HONORS

Wichitans Tie for Second in State Contest

Third place in play competition and a first place in individual performance were brought back from the state Little Theater tournament at Fort Worth by the Wichita Falls Little Theater, whose cast for "The Enemy" and F. C. McClung, director, returned Sunday after presenting their play Friday night.

Tied with the Oak Cliff (Dallas) Little Theater for second place in the number of points given by five judges, the Wichita Falls group yielded second place to their competitors in compliance with tournament rules which stipulated that in case of a tie, the contestant whose members had written its own play should be favored. Members of the Oak Cliff organization wrote the three-act play, "Jute," which was given Saturday night as the closing performance of the contest. First place was accorded to Waco's entry, "Sun-Up," by Lulu Vollmer, the play which is to be given by the local Little Theater on May 5, 6, 7 and 8.

James Campbell, carrying the role of "Karl" in "The Enemy," was awarded first prize among male actors for excellent diction. This award carried a cash prize of $25, while the third-place award in play competition drew a prize of $100 cash. Miss Thelma Watson Cramer of the Oak Cliff cast of "Jute" carried away the best diction prize for women, while the prizes for best acting went to Harold Stafford and Mrs. John Tolly of Waco.

The six plays given in the tournament were presented before crowds which taxed the Fort Worth Little Theater, it was said.

It was not stated whether another official would conduct the hearing or whether it would be postponed, Mr. Marrs stated.

Mr. Neff, formerly governor of Texas, had been invited to address the Kiwanis club at its regular weekly meeting Monday.
