Two deaths attributed to Hurricane Bonnie

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — Bonnie, the season's first hurricane, battered the Gulf Coast today with rain and winds up to 85 mph, killing at least two people, knocking out power and flooding low-lying areas before losing its punch over land.

Bonnie was downgraded to a tropical storm at midmorning, after thousands of beachfront residents along the Gulf Coast boarded up their homes and fled inland.

The storm, packing heavy rains and spawning at least three tornadoes, hit land about 4:45 a.m. south of Port Arthur and east of High Island, the National Weather Service said. It was the first June hurricane to strike Texas since 1957.

"The whole city is out of power," said Port Arthur Police Sgt. Robert Williamson. But he said he was not aware of any serious damage caused by the hurricane.

Laura Wagner, a dispatcher for the Jefferson County sheriff's department in nearby Beaumont, said she also had not received many reports of damage, though roads were covered with water throughout the area.

"It's raining right now and the winds are blowing. But I've seen it worse during regular thunderstorms," Ms. Wagner said.

One man was killed when his pickup truck was caught in a squall about 8:30 a.m. and went out of control on an Interstate 10 overpass near Vidor, said assistant police chief Sam Kittrell. A passenger received minor injuries, Kittrell said.

A partially paralyzed woman, Myrtle Williams, 55, died this morning in Port Arthur after being trapped inside a burning home by flames fueled by gusts from the hurricane, said Jefferson County Peace Justice Barbara Dorman. The cause of the fire was under investigation, Ms. Dorman said.

Four people were taken to Winnie Medical Center, southeast of Beaumont, after high winds flipped over a pickup truck on a remote section of Texas Highway 124, said paramedic Robbie Isaacks. The driver of the truck had been trying to avoid downed power lines, he said.

A 20-year-old woman was being examined for possible shoulder and back injuries, but the other three suffered only minor injuries, Isaacks said.

The hurricane warnings posted for a 270-mile coastal strip from Morgan City, La., to Freeport were discontinued at 9 a.m., when Bonnie was downgraded to a tropical storm.

Bonnie's highest winds were 85 mph, with gale-force winds of 39-54 mph extending outward 75 miles from the center, which spanned 25 miles. Forecasters said tidal surges of 5-7 feet were possible in the hurricane warning area.

Neil Frank, director of the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables, Fla., said, "This wasn't a severe hurricane, it wasn't a major hurricane, but it was a full-blown hurricane when it moved across the coastline this morning."

Two tornadoes touched down in Beaumont about 7:50 a.m. — one downtown — but caused only light damage, including knocking down the radio tower at the local Department of Public Safety office, said trooper Melvin Hughes.

House approves $100 million Contra aid plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a decisive, hard-fought foreign policy victory for President Reagan, the House is sending a $100 million aid plan for Nicaragua's Contra rebels to a Senate that once before approved the idea.

The 221-209 roll call vote Wednesday night removed the House as a major obstacle to Reagan's months-long drive to secure approval of an aid package that gives the Contras $70 million in weapons and $30 million in logistical support over an eight-month span.

A jubilant Reagan, arriving in California to begin a vacation at his mountaintop ranch near Santa Barbara, said in a statement: "The cause is freedom. The cause is just. The cause will triumph."

"Once again, members of both parties stand united in resisting totalitarian expansionism and promoting the cause of democracy," the president said.

Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega, in a nationally televised address, said the vote "is a ratification of the warlike policy of the U.S. government that brings it to the brink of direct intervention by its troops in Nicaragua."

Ortega accused President Reagan of "acting worse than Hitler with his terrorist and fascist policy against Nicaragua," which he said would bring Nicaragua "more economic and material difficulties and more death, (but) it does not terrify nor intimidate us."

In Washington, Nicaraguan Ambassador Carlos Tunnermann said, "The contras can win their battles in Washington but they are being defeated by the people in Nicaragua."

Fifty-one Democrats joined 170 Republicans to provide the winning margin and reverse the House's decision in March, when it voted 222-210 to reject an earlier version of the aid plan.

The Contra aid was made part of a $8.1 billion military construction bill and sent to the Senate. That Republican-controlled chamber voted 53-47 this spring for the earlier Contra aid plan.

Under the blueprint approved by the House, the U.S. government would be permitted for the first time to openly give military assistance to the rebels.

The Central Intelligence Agency ran the program when the aid was provided secretly from 1981 to 1984. The new legislation does not bar the spy agency from resuming that role.

The administration's only setback during the 12-hour debate was the narrow, 215-212 approval of an amendment by Rep. Robert J. Mrazek, D-N.Y., that would bar any U.S. personnel — civilian or military — from providing aid or training to the Contras in areas within 20 miles of the Nicaraguan border.

That vote appeared to indicate that many members of the House still harbor strong fears that American troops may one day become involved in combat in Central America.

Reagan lobbied until the last minute to win the votes he needed to reverse the earlier defeat, and House Republican leaders said much of the credit for the victory belongs to the president.

But they also said a bipartisan compromise hammered out by House members and approved by the White House also deserves much credit because it presented wavering members with something new as a justification for switching votes.

As crafted by a team led by Reps. Ike Skelton, D-Mo., and Mickey Edwards, R-Ky., the aid package was expanded to include $300 million in economic assistance to four Central American democracies: Guatemala, Honduras, Panama and El Salvador.

Expert advocates new bilingual program

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

America is on the track to fighting illiteracy with gains in reading improvement among students, says a San Antonio bilingual education specialist. And one of the groups making the most dramatic gains are Hispanic students, with much of the credit going to teachers and better instructional materials.

With the Hispanic population booming nationwide, R.C. Rodriguez of Ginn and Company educational publishers, says the need to further develop bilingual education programs that relate to a Hispanic child's cultural experience is increasingly becoming more important.

"Nothing is learned in isolation," Rodriguez says. "If you think back to anything you've learned and how you learned it, you will quickly see that you learned it in relation to something you already knew.

"For instance, both a pair of scissors and a saw cut, but one cuts paper, the other wood," he said. "As a child gains experience, he or she will see that some words share the same features to varying degrees and intensity...walking and jogging are both forms of exercise, but jogging is more strenuous."

Relating what a child already knows to something new is how children build vocabularies, learn to comprehend and learn to read. And the process of learning to read only happens once, be it in Spanish or English, he noted.

"Once children learn the language arts skills — vocabulary building, comprehension, decoding — they learn to read. The key is teaching them in relationship to past experience and prior knowledge," says Rodriguez. "Teaching these skills to Hispanic students in their native language accelerates the transition to English reading."

Rodriguez says a key vocabulary instructional tool is the three-step approach that applies to a child learning to read in any language:

— Relating words to what children already know;

— Relating words to a topic; and — Relating words to each other and comparing similarities and differences.

Another key instructional method is teaching children how to comprehend what they read by regarding text as a "blueprint" for meaning — a set of clues they can use to build a model of what the text means.

U-Haul: More trucks leaving than entering DALLAS (AP) — More U-Haul trucks and trailers are leaving Texas than are coming in.

That bit of information comes from U-Haul company officials who say it's a sign of the state's economy — people leaving Texas for jobs elsewhere.

Bob Barr, head of truck and trailer operations for U-Haul, said the demand for Texas rentals began rising in January when oil prices dropped.

In recent months, he said, Texas has edged past the farm states in terms of emigration. Lots of Texas oil workers idled by the slump are moving to Florida, Arizona and Southern California, he said.

Many Texans surveyed by U-Haul said they were leaving for states that are not dependent on oil, Barr said.

It used to be the opposite during the oil boom days. Texas cities, especially Dallas and Houston, experienced a glut of trucks and trailers, Barr said.

The emigration is most noticeable in West Texas, the U-Haul spokesmen say.

In Midland, U-Haul has organized two trips to Dallas to return some of the trailers and trucks to the area.

Midland U-Haul manager Billy Sturgeon said he rented 25 trucks for one-way trips out of the city in one week while only five trucks arrived from other parts of the country.

Now, the Dallas-Fort Worth metroplex and San Antonio are the only two healthy areas in Texas in truck rentals. "All the others are experiencing a tremendous outward migration," Barr said.

A popular location for migrating oil workers is Florida, which is now becoming overcrowded with trucks, officials said. Two weeks ago, U-Haul spent $114,000 flying people to Orlando and paying them to drive about 450 trucks and 1,100 trailers back to Houston and New Orleans.

Fort Stockton native thinks Midland should have sister city in Germany

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Another sister city relationship may be in store for Midland if a Fort Stockton native who now lives in Germany has his way.

John Howard, a 44-year-old native of Fort Stockton and producer for a Munich television station, would like to set up Midland and San Angelo with their own sister cities in Bavaria, Germany, he said.

Fort Stockton began its sister city program Jan. 1 with Wasserburg, Germany, a town of 10,380 in Bavaria. On August 1, Fort Stockton is sending the winner of its Water Carnival beauty pageant along with another youngster and two Iraan students to the German town. Howard says he is looking for larger cities in Bavaria that might want to make cultural and trade exchanges with Midland and San Angleo.

The two West Texas cities would benefit from a sister city relationship because Germany has the most dominant economy in Europe and produces more tourist dollars per capita than any other European country, Howard said.

"If these politicians out here are serious about attracting foreign investment, this is the way to do it. A cheap way," he said.

Midland has just formalized a sister-city relationship with the Chinese oil producing city of Dongying. A group of 29 Permian Basin residents will return from a 16-day trip on June 29. Dongying is Midland's only sister city.

City councilor Robert Rendall says he will arrange a meeting between Howard and Steve Hardin, Midland Chamber of Commerce's economic development vice president, when Hardin returns from China.

Bell rate hike won't affect local customers

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Public Utility Commission Wednesday formally approved a $35.4 million increase in rates for Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., less than 13 percent of what the company had asked for.

Wednesday's ruling ends one of the longest and most costly telephone cases in Texas history, at times prompting strong disagreement among commissioners Dennis Thomas, Jo Campbell and PUC chairwoman Peggy Rosson.

The increase in Bell rates will not affect the monthly charge of $8.80 most Midland households now pay for basic phone service. If the commission had granted the company's original March 1985 request of $277 million, those basic monthly rates would have increased to $10.80.

The commission also approved a $29.7-million reduction in revenues from access charges long-distance companies, such as AT&T, SPRINT and MCI, pay to use Bell's local system.

A tornado blew off the roof of a mobile home about 7:30 a.m. in Winnie, 20 miles southwest of Beaumont, but no one was injured, said Mary Batiste, a dispatcher with the Chambers County sheriff's department.

Evacuees carrying blankets and clothing moved into two shelters set up by the Red Cross in Port Arthur, and many slept or monitored Bonnie's progress with radios.

Rudolph Foreman, who rode out the storm with more than 200 other people at one of the shelters, said he had to dodge flying debris on the trip downtown this morning.

"My lights went out. I was afraid it was going to get worse and we wouldn't be able to get out," he said.

About 15 "diehard" residents were stranded by high waters in Sabine Pass, on the Texas-Louisiana border, after ignoring advice to evacuate, Williamson said.

David Kava, in charge of the weather service office in Port Arthur, said: "We're experiencing wind gusts to 63 miles an hour and some pretty good rain. We have widespread power outages...Actual telephone poles have been blown down, and of course, we've got all kinds of trees down here."

Streets near Galveston's beaches were flooded Wednesday, and residents in areas not protected by the island's seawall were advised to seek high ground. By late Wednesday, about 12,000 people had fled — 5,000 in Galveston and 7,000 in Cameron Parish, La., officials said. About 8,000 oil workers also were ferried to land from offshore drilling rigs.

Motorists formed long lines at gas stations and grocery stores, and most beachfront businesses boarded up and closed early.

Highways leaving the coastal area were jammed into the night with cars and vans loaded with household possessions.

Officials said evacuations proceeded smoothly from Galveston, Texas City, La Marque and from Chambers County, areas hit hard by Hurricane Alicia, which killed 22 people in southeast Texas in August 1983.

"I don't know of anybody who plans to ride this one out," said Duran Fooks, a Galveston county sheriff's deputy.

"I've never seen people leave so quickly," said Ann Diener, who was packing to leave her Galveston beachfront home. She said her home was flattened by Alicia, and she rebuilt. If this house goes down, said Mrs. Diener, "I'm not sure I want to try again."

Richard Polly, who lives in Pirate's Beach on the west end of Galveston island, boarded up his home Wednesday. Within view of his house were skeletal remains of homes destroyed by Alicia.

"I think it's dumb to stay if it gets that close. I'm going. Several of my neighbors stayed during Alicia, but they're all going this time," he said.

By darkness, many of the beachfront communities lining the island were deserted. Evacuation was not ordered for the densely populated center of Galveston, which is protected by the seawall.

While thousands evacuated, some surfers toook advantage of the hurricane-churned waves in the Gulf of Mexico. "I'm gonna be back tomorrow," said Mark Nix of Houston.

At least four surfers were rescued, said Diane Praker of the Galveston Beach Patrol.

About 8,000 oil workers abandoned their offshore rigs on Tuesday and Wednesday, although some skeleton crews remained aboard, officials said.

"You can ride them out, but we'd rather not have to," said Al Spindler, spokesman for Offshore Drilling and Exploration Co.

In Louisiana, about 7,000 people in lower Cameron Parish headed for higher ground late Wednesday.

All residents were ordered out by nightfall and the coastal highway, State 82, was closed, said Hayes Picou Jr., civil defense director in the parish.

Media helps hurricance forecasting

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — Hurricane forecasting hasn't changed much over the years, but the flurry of activity inside the National Hurricane Center here in recent years contrasts to the quiet controlled nerve center of the past.

The ability of television stations to broadcast live from the center has put it in the national spotlight every time a hurricane threatens, said director Neil Frank.

And that coverage is now a vital part of hurricane preparation.

Wednesday was no different as Bonnie, the first hurricane of the Atlantic season, continued its course toward the Texas-Louisiana coast.

"It's just chaos in here today," said Vivian Jorge, a budget analyst for the U.S Department of Commerce, as she made TV interview appointments for Frank.

"ABC and Peter Jennings want to speak with him. NBC has called, but they're still not sure (about a live broadcast), Houston is scheduled for 6:04 (p.m.), Baton Rouge is at 6:15, then it's Houston again at 5 and 5:05, Raleigh (North Carolina) is at 11," she said as she glanced down her list of live televison interviews already scheduled.

Granting live interviews to broadcast reporters and interpreting a hurricane's impact for local stations is part of a new philosophy Frank said he has adopted.

The television and radio interviews are the best way to educate those endangered by the hurricane.

"I can go out on talks all year and reach maybe 2,000 people," Frank said.

One-on-one television and radio interviews are short, give pertinent information and help people respond to the situation facing them, he said.

As Frank spoke, another in a stream of television crews was setting up to broadcast an interview of him surrounded by the semi-circle of computer monitors showing satellite and radar images of the storm, its course and wind velocity, temperatures, humidity and pressure inside the storm.

Despite technological advances, hurricane forecasting has not changed much in the last 10 years, Frank said.

But the National Hurricane Center is trying to better hurricane preparation by getting the word out faster through the media.

Previously, local government was responsible for getting out the warning and telling people how to prepare for the storm's impact.

"Roles have shifted." he said. Now the center tries to use the media to get the word out, Frank said.

BELL

Although basic service remains the same, Bell customers will soon begin paying for some services that used to come free. In that sense, consumer lawyers say, new revenues for Bell will actually amount to about $75 million.

The bulk of those revenues will come from newly established charges for local operator assistance. Bell customers will begin paying $1.35 each time they have an operator verify the status of a phone line and $2.20 for interupting a busy signal.

Bell spokesman Larry Schnieders said the company is not pleased with Wednesday's decision.

"It's disappointing to us that the case ended the way it did," Schnieders said. "It was the lowest amount the company has received in Texas history."

Schnieders said Bell will be "looking at everything from light bulbs to labor" to offset the effects of Wednesday's decision. "Jobs will certainly be one area we'll be looking at," he added.

Consumer lawyers also did not like the PUC ruling, but for different reasons.

Geoffrey Gay, an attorney who represents residential and small commercial ratepayers at the commission, said the order "was not a reasonable reflection of the evidence, and it is burdensome to Bell's ratepayers."

Gay, who originally recommended a $158-million reduction in Bell's rates, said the commission's ruling "sets some very dangerous precendents" for future rate cases.

Specifically, Gay criticized the commission for allowing Bell to include in its rates about $40 million for research and development. "Bell is using rates in this state to subsidize unregulated activities," Gay said.

Gay said the order also allows Bell to charge ratepayers for bonuses the company awards to its top-level management "for achieving the norm."

"This is just a gluttonous and greedy company that should have never filed a rate case in the first place," Gay said, adding that the PUC ruling "gave Bell an out from the embarrassment they deserve."

Ms. Rosson, who last week said her fellow commissioners had committed "an unconscionable act" when they voted to grant Bell a 14.2 percent rate of return on shareholders' investments. That move increased Bell's revenues in the case by about $27 million. Ms. Rosson had recommended a 13.8 percent return.

Wednesday, Ms. Rosson said she still disagreed with the amount of revenue Bell would receive but concurred with the way increases will be distributed. She said she had not calculated how the lower rate of return and other recommendations would have affected the overall numbers.

"I have an idea that in all probability, had all of my recommendations been adopted, it may have resulted in a decrease," she said.

In a related matter, Assistant Attorney General Scott McCollough said Wednesday's ruling did not resolve confusion resulting from an action state legislators took last year. During the 69th legislative session, lawmakers eliminated a gross receipts tax Bell and other telephone companies previously charged to ratepayers for services such as touch-tone dialing and custom calling.

Beginning Oct. 5, 1985, telephone companies begain paying a 4-cent sales tax instead. McCollough contends that Bell has continued to collect the gross receipts tax, even though it no longer pays the tax to the state. Over the past nine months, he said, state agencies served by Bell have paid $10 million more than they should have.

"That means that rates for those services should have been reduced by 2.3 percent...to carry out the stated intent of the Legislature," McCollough said Wednesday. "It means that the state is getting stuck by another state agency."

But PUC staff attorney Ed Pope said the commission took care of that problem in the order it issued Wednesday by reducing Bell's revenues in other areas. The PUC also cut back on revenues for local exchange companies to offset the gross receipts tax collection, Pope said.

"In my opinion, it was resolved, because we made an adjustment," both on the amount of revenues Bell will receive and on how ratepayers will pay for those revenues, he said.

Dallas Times Herald sold to Singleton company

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Times Mirror Co. today announced it has agreed in principle to sell the Dallas Times Herald to a company headed by William Dean Singleton for $110 million in cash and notes.

Singleton owns two companies that publish newspapers in six states, according to today's release from the Los Angeles company, whose flagship is the Los Angeles Times.

"Times Mirror is very proud of the achievements of the Dallas Times Herald, but we believe that its sale at this time is consistent with our corporate strategy and is in the best interest of the long-term future of the Times Herald," said Robert F. Erburu, chairman, president and chief executive officer of Times Mirror.

The purchase price is subject to negotiation of a definitive agreement and government approval, according to Times Mirror.

Times Mirror bought the newspaper and KDFW-TV; the local CBS-TV affiliate, in a 1970 transaction.

"This is a dream come true for me," Singleton said. "We will work hard to expand the tradition of the Dallas Times Herald as Texas' most honored newspaper."

He said Arthur E. Wible Jr., publisher of the Dallas Times Herald, will stay on in that position.

"Art has assembled one of the strongest management teams in the country," he said. "He and I believe we can build on the foundation that is in place, and we think the Dallas Times Herald, as a locally owned newspaper, can see its best growth in the years ahead."

Singleton's companies own 21 daily and 15 weekly newspapers in Texas, California, New Jersey, Washington, Ohio and Michigan. He is partners with New Jersey newspaper publisher Richard B. Scudder and Ohio publisher John Buzzetta in the company that is buying the Dallas paper.

CONTRA

This permitted Reagan supporters to contend that military aid to the Contras was only one element of an overall regional policy.

In its new form, Contra aid would be provided in installments of $40 million, $20 million and $40 million, with the first to be made available on enactment of the bill and the last on Feb. 15, 1987.

Military training would be emphasized in the initial phases of the program and only "light" personal weapons would be made available. So-called heavy weapons would be made available only with the last aid installment.

The legislation did not define "heavy" weapons, but these apparently include anti-tank and anti-aircraft weaponry.

Congress could vote to block the release of the final $40 million but because of the two-third majorities needed to override a presidential veto, such action probably would be little more than symbolic.

In other votes, the House rejected, 245-183, a proposal by Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., that would have eliminated all Contra aid money from the bill. Hamilton's proposal would have only provided $32 million to resettle Contras who stop fighting Nicaragua.

Also defeated, 225-198, was an amendment by Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md., that would have delayed delivery of all the aid to the Contras until Reagan accounted for all of the $27 million in non-lethal aid provided to the Contras last year.

Those who opposed all further aid contended that much of the money provided earlier had ended up in the pockets of the Honduran military and in bank accounts in the Bahamas and the Cayman Islands.

The day-long debate repeated the themes both sides have sounded for months.

Summing up for the opposition, Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., said that by approving military aid, the United States would be "embarking on what would be a virtually unprecedented action — the United States would be undertaking...a proxy war (against) a government with which we technically are at peace and technically have diplomatic relations."

But many supporters of the aid said it was urgent that it be approved now.

READING

A strategic device teachers use to "map out a blueprint" is asking questions before and after the reading exercise. This allows students to rely on their prior knowledge to predict and evaluate story events. Students compose meanings as they read, allowing them to rely on their past experiences.

These methods whether in Spanish or English, help to determine if children are ready to read and to enable them to actually learn to read and comprehend, Rodriquez says.

"Hispanic students learn these skills in their native language, using their own past experiences to learn vocabulary and comprehension. They can then use those skills in English reading programs," he added.

Rodriguez says a successful reading program is not translation of an English program, but rather the use of literature and exercises that respect Spanish students' culture — things they can relate to.

Workbooks, textbooks and teacher manuals written in both Spanish and English also help to facilitate instruction for teachers and give students the opportunity to practice skills, he says. "This helps make the transition from Spanish reading to English reading an easy process for the students.

"Children learn to read only once. They become readers by learning in relationship to their own experiences and prior knowledge. What matters is they learn to read in relationship to their own lives."

GERMANY

Bavarians, like Texans, hate Prussians, which is Germany's version of Yankees, Howard said. Bavaria had a similar client relationship with Prussia that Texas had with eastern states early in the century, Howard said. Both regions sold raw products that were bought and refined in the east, he said.

Bavarians, like Texas, are a distinct cultural group within Germany, Howard said.

They have their own distinct oompah music, their own style of dressing with Ladershoen or leather knickers and they love to drink beer, he said.

While a sister city relationship has not yet been formalized, Midland high school students with two years of German may be able to attend one year in Wasserburg, Howard said. Six Wasserburg students will spend the upcoming school year in Fort Stockton. To complete the exchange six Permian Basin students will attend one year of school in Wasserburg. Fort Stockton's school system does not provide German language courses, says Kerry Davis, a Midland High German teacher who is conducting the search for students. To participate students may call Davis at 686-7305.

Hog farmer turns to raising rare waterfowl, selling wildlife art

HERMAN, Minn. (AP) — Gordon Ekberg used to be content raising a few hogs and growing corn, soybeans and wheat on his 400-acre family farm five miles east of Herman. He dabbled in raising waterfowl as a hobby.

That hobby altered Ekberg's future as a farmer.

Ekberg has taken 77 acres of Lawndale Farms and restored it to tall grasses and wetlands. "We restored ponds and marshes that had been drained for 50 to 70 years," he said.

All of the remaining land on the farm has been rented out and will be sold.

Ekberg the farmer has become Ekberg the rare waterfowl, wildlife gallery and frame shop manager.

Ekberg estimated that 500 to 600 waterfowl wintered on the farm. Arctic varieties strutted across snow and ice in outdoor pens, while geese crowded the barn and ducks splashed in a shed's indoor ponds.

"We have water pumped to them all the time," Ekberg said. "The electric company loves us."

Ekberg has 37 species of wild ducks, 14 species of wild geese and two species of swan — trumpeter and whistling.

At one time, Ekberg and former state Sen. Wayne Olhoft were in partnership raising domestic geese, but Ekberg, 56, says his interest in waterfowl goes back much farther — to when he was 4 and cared for mallards on his parents' farm.

Now a person would be hard-pressed to find something as common as a mallard on Ekberg's farm. He has made three trips to the arctic to get ducks, geese and fertile eggs, using government permits.

Among his collection are European widgeon and American eider ducks and Siberian redbreasted and Ross geese. Ekberg feeds the seabirds dogfood for animal protein.

He said his most expensive variety is trumpeter swans, which are valued at $2,000 a pair, and his rarest variety is probably beikel teals from Asia.

Knowing what to feed what birds, how to breed waterfowl and how to protect his flocks from predators has been a struggle for Ekberg.

"I'm not an educated man. I never went to high school," he said. "I've learned from trial and error and from other people's research."

The Delta Waterfowl Research Station in Canada spent 50 years developing a method to raise captive canvasbacks. Ekberg said he was the first to put it into practice in the United States.

Canvasback hens are extremely aggressive, Ekberg said. If breeding conditions aren't right, they will kill the males. He said canvasbacks need a pond with 18 inches of water surrounded by reeds and cattails. They need to be able to hear other canvasbacks nearby.

The canvasback eggs can become damaged by water, so Ekberg removes the eggs and places them under a bantam hen for hatching.

About four years ago, Ekberg's interest in wildlife took a new twist. He visited a wildlife gallery in Rochester and became interested in marketing wildlife prints, so he started his own gallery.

Last fall, he transformed an old granary into a new gallery, small restaurant and giftshop.

The gallery looks out across ponds that will be filled with waterfowl in the summer.

Ekberg estimates 3,000 people visited Lawndale Farms last year for guided tours of the ponds and to enjoy the park and wildlife gallery. The visitors have included wildlife artists doing research, he said.

Ekberg, his wife, Gay, and their five children all have contact with the visitors, who he hopes will gain a greater appreciation of wildlife and the importance of preserving the environment through their time at Lawndale Farms.

"We know it has made a big difference in many of the people who have come through here," Ekberg said. "Their reaction is, 'We had no idea we were destroying the habitat of such beautiful creatures.'"

Trolley passengers can take trip into nostalgia

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Nearly a hundred years after the city installed its original trolleys, they are making a big comeback here and their popularity has triggered an expansion of service and schedules, reports the Metropolitan Economic Development Council of Richmond.

Richmond was the site of the first successful commercially operated electric street railway in the country in 1888, notes A.J. Christopher Wood, executive director of MEDC.

"The new trolleys are just like the old ones: mahogany trim, real leather grab straps and seats, and an observation deck," Wood said. "They move from stop to stop with the 'ciang-ciang-ciang' of a bell that makes the trip into nostalgia complete. The only difference is that they ride on rubber tires instead of on tracks of iron."

The trolleys run at seven-minute intervals, he says, and the fare is 25 cents — a bit more than that for their 19th-century counterparts, but still less than half the fare for a city bus.

Ten 21-seat trolleys, each costing $42,000, were put into service a year ago by the Greater Richmond Transit Co. The move was made in response to a local effort to recapture part of Richmond's heritage and as a pleasant way to get around to shopping, hotel, convention, restaurant and business sites that are popping up as part of a $1 billion downtown renaissance.

The trolleys also have become popular for weddings, tours and special events, Wood says.

The vehicles' windows are removed for the spring, summer and fall, just the way they were a hundred years ago, so that passengers can look out or stand on the observation platform and take in the passing sights. The system's 2,163-seat-per-day capacity is regularly pushed to its limit during these times of the year, Wood says.

Heaviest passenger volume so far, he reports, was the day after Thanksgiving, the beginning of the downtown Christmas shopping season, when it was standing room only and 5,518 passengers rode the trolleys within a four-hour period.

"As a result of the trolleys' popularity, Saturday service was added this spring to the former Monday through Friday schedule," Wood said.

There are two trolley routes, the "Dotted Line" and the "Solid Line." Both operate between historic Main Street Station (refurbished into a shopping mall) and the new Sixth Street Festival Marketplace and Convention Center area, but they travel through different parts of the downtown financial, retail, hotel and historic sections.

Crime victims get together for support

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — A gunman killed her brother and she was twice a crime victim herself, but Robin Shevlin blames the criminal justice system for ruining her life.

Her brother's killer received a suspended jail term for carrying a gun without a permit, and the people who mugged her and broke into her home never were caught.

"I can deal with what happened," Mrs. Shevlin said about the killing of her brother. "I can't deal with what the system did. The system destroyed my life. Once I get over what the system did to me I'll be OK."

According to victim advocates and officials in Connecticut's judicial system, Mrs. Shevlin is one of many crime victims who feel cheated by the courts and who cry for a greater voice in punishing criminals.

In the years following her brother's death, Mrs. Shevlin sought counseling, became depressed and lost her job. But what five years of therapy failed to achieve has been wrought in three weeks, Mrs. Shevlin said, by attending meetings of a victims' support group spawned by the very judicial system she had grown to despise.

Victims Understanding Victims, as the group is known, began in January. Modeled after Alcoholics Anonymous and other self-help organizations, it holds meetings every other Sunday at a senior citizens' center in Stratford. There, victims gather to share stories and feelings with those who have had similar experiences. They often cry, hug and most leave "emotionally drained," Mrs. Shevlin said.

"This group has put my life back together. I'm not as hateful," said Mrs. Shevlin. Her relationship with her 11-year-old son has improved since she joined the group. Soon she will begin a new job and she is applying to become a police officer.

While not funded by or affiliated with the state's criminal justice system, it was created within it.

It began with Ed Classy, a probation officer whose job for 15 years included interviewing victims for pre-sentencing reports used by judges in deciding penalties for convicted criminals.

"After 15 years," he said, "it got to the point where I was just eaten away. All at once, there was a large amount of victims who had some serious emotional situations. I was talking to five or 10 people a week who had had tragedies. These people had no resources."

Classy approached Roseanne Aylesworth, a coordinator in Bridgeport for the State Office of Adult Probation, who in January assembled a group of volunteers — most of them crime victims themselves — to bring other victims together for support.

As many as 25 people have attended the sessions.

"These people aren't sitting in there with minor cases," Ms. Aylesworth said. "Their kids have been murdered."

Anger at the legal system is what brings many to Victims Understanding Victims, but the group isn't designed to encourage criticism or invite changing the system. Rather, Ms. Aylesworth said, its goal is to help people deal with emotions and problems — confusion, anger, stress, isolation.

Already, some members of the group are accompanying others on trips to court and some have even made dinner dates, Ms. Aylesworth said.

"It's a sad way to do it, but they're making new friends," she said.

Since its founding, support for Victims Understanding Victims has snowballed. Not only is there evidence that similar groups are about to form in other towns, but a number of state judges back the program.

"Victims often are overlooked by the system," said Aaron Ment, the state's chief court administrator. "For many years, they didn't have a spokesman. Every other actor in the system had someone who would look after their interests."

Ment said the importance of groups such as Victims Understanding Victims is that they give victims the chance to learn how to better use the criminal justice system, change the system and lend support to each other.

Chinese storyteller continues ancient tradition at teahouse

CHONGQING, China (AP) — Xiao Zhengyuan tells stories.

He carries on a tradition that goes back centuries in China, as he stands before groups in teahouses rolling out tales of ancient knights, emperors and villains.

One recent evening at the Rejuvenation Teahouse here, elderly men in blue Mao caps, clutching knobby canes and puffing on curled pipes, leaned forward to catch every word as Xiao's voice rose and fell with the tempo of a story.

The scene is repeated nightly, seven days a week, at the teahouse.

During the day, the 40-year-old Xiao is an ordinary worker but at night he becomes a character out of China's past.

He slips on a wide-sleeved, brown gown with a high Mandarin collar, the dress of Chinese intellectuals in pre-Communist days, and takes his place behind a cloth-draped table. With sweeping hand gestures, he builds a fantasy that holds his audience of about 90 men almost motionless for two hours.

Xiao said his pay depends on the attendance, but he normally earns about 7 yuan ($2) a night, about twice the daily wage for an average urban worker.

But he said money was not his only motivation.

"I love telling stories," he said. "At first, I tried hard to learn from the storytellers of the older generation, and then later I developed my own style through intensive study.

"I have a repertoire of stories that could last me a month."

"All of the stories are excerpts from ancient historical fictions," Xiao added. "They are the same as those of ancient times. Some I learned by heart as a child by listening to storytellers and some I read in books."

Most of the stories are about knights who were loyal to an emperor or who befriended the poor and innocent and killed sinister officials, he said. Some expose the dark side of the imperial court and ancient ruling class.

When he began telling stories in the late 1970s, Xiao was one of 700 to 800 folk artists in Chongqing, which was the Nationalist Chinese capital during World War II.

Congress' long-term commitment to Nicaragua extends far in furture

WASHINGTON (AP) — By openly approving military aid for the Contra guerrillas in Nicaragua, Congress is making a down-payment on a long-term commitment to the success of the insurgency that could extend far beyond the end of the Reagan administration.

It takes one more big chunk out of the post-Vietnam American reluctance to become involved in foreign conflicts.

After considerable anguish, the House came to the same conclusion Wednesday night that the Senate and White House reached earlier: that the United States cannot live in peace with a Marxist-led government in Managua. The House vote was 221-209 in favor of military aid.

The House ignored the latest public opinion polls showing the American people still opposing military aid to the Contras by a margin of more than 2-to-1. It also ignored cautions that the American action flouts international law.

Never before in recent history has the United States openly armed rebels waging war against a nation with which it is technically at peace and has diplomatic relations.

The World Court in The Hague is expected to rule Friday that American support for the Contras violates the charters of the United Nations and the Organization of American States, both of which the United States helped create. But the administration said in advance it wouldn't be bound by the ruling.

The House legislation still has to be reconciled with a Senate version before it becomes law. But that is viewed as largely a formality, since both versions include $70 million in military aid and $30 million in other assistance.

In addition, the House approved $300 million in new economic aid for four other Central American countries.

The end price of the American commitment to the Contras could be very high. The administration has not laid out publicly a strategy for victory, and Congress has voted the money without being certain there is one.

The administration's goal, as spelled out by President Reagan on Tuesday, is to use the Contras to force the Sandinistas to accept "real democracy" for Nicaragua. But as no one expects the Sandinistas voluntarily to transform their authoritarian government into a democracy, a fight to the finish is likely, with heavy casualties on both sides.

An aid opponent, Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., the Democratic House whip, said the nation has embarked on a "proxy war ... to undertake to overthrow that government." He said he has "the dread belief" American troops eventually will join the fight.

One unknown factor that could be crucial to the outcome is whether the Soviet Union and Cuba will increase their military commitment to the Sandinistas to offset U.S. support for the Contras, igniting a steady escalation of the conflict. This kind of escalation has occurred in past conflicts.

At a minimum, the commitment to the Contras will mean more money for arms and equipment in future years, as not even the most enthusiastic supporter expects an easy victory. The five-year-old insurgency has had scant success against the Sandinista army so far despite more than $100 million in past American aid.

But a majority in the Congress has accepted the administration's assurances.

Seattle temporarily bans majority of over-the-counter pain-relief capsules

SEATTLE (AP) — Authorities could confiscate over-the-counter medications in capsules found on store shelves in King County today, and the sale of most such drugs were banned statewide to counter cyanide tampering that has killed two people.

The 90-day statewide ban on sales of nonfused capsules, approved Wednesday by the Washington Pharmacy Board, formally takes effect after paperwork is completed, probably by Friday, said Chuck Kleeberg, chief of environmental sciences for the Seattle-King County Health Department.

Meantime, the state agency banned the sale of two-part, nonfused capsules in the county and directed health department officials to check stores and confiscate the medications if necessary.

About 95 percent of all over-the-counter medication in capsule form is available in other forms, and the rest would be available as prescription medication, which is not affected by the ban, officials said.

In Washington, D.C., Food and Drug Administration Commissioner Dr. Frank Young said he knew of no other states banning over-the-counter capsules.

The ban was prompted by the discovery of cyanide Tuesday in a bottle of Anacin-3 capsules during a random check.

Since then, the FDA checked 121,000 capsules collected in south King County, where cyanide-laced Extra-Strength Excedrin killed two people earlier this month, but no further contamination was found.

Tuesday's discovery in a North Auburn store was the fifth bottle of pain medication found to contain cyanide. Cyanide-laced Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules were blamed last week in the deaths of Sue Snow, 40, and Bruce Nickell, 52, both of Auburn.

Don Williams, executive director of the Pharmacy Board, said the Anacin-3 may have been found in one of the same stores where tainted Excedrin was bought. "Since that information was not publicly released, this leads me to believe this was not a copycat," he said.

Panel approves program to remove school asbestos

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House version of a bill requiring a stepped-up program to remove deadly asbestos in public schools was approved by a House panel and now goes to the full Energy and Commerce committee.

The measure approved Wednesday is similar to one approved without dissent last week by a Senate Environment subcommittee. The Reagan administration is opposing the legislation.

Both bills would require the Environmental Protection Agency to issue rules to require local officials to inspect for crumbling asbestos, which lawmakers say could be present in as many as 30,000 schools.

Local officials would be required to safely remove asbestos where it is found to be a health hazard and to use only contractors who have been trained under a program the bill would require the EPA to establish.

The legislation is a response to the EPA's much-criticized asbestos-in-schools program. Critics say the program not only is ineffective but may have increased dangers to humans by improper asbestos removal that has released cancer-causing fibers into the air.

'Education' vaccine for AIDS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Education is "the only vaccine" available now to fight the spread of AIDS, and schools can play a major role in that battle, a private education publishing group says.

Roberta Weiner, executive editor of the Education Research Group, recommended that schools concentrate on educating their students about the deadly disease rather than trying to fire or expel teachers or students who carry the virus.

"Schools are in the best position to present information that may prevent unsafe sexual behavior among adolescents," she said at a news conference Wednesday. Education, she added, "is the only vaccine we have against the spread of AIDS right now."

School officials, Ms. Weiner said, should convince their communities "to get over their obsession with the idea that a 9-year-old with AIDS is going to spit on their child and spread AIDS."

She said school officials have focused their attention on the younger children who are getting AIDS at birth or through contaminated blood products. "Those children aren't going to spread the disease to anyone," she said.

Instead, she said, schools "should be focusing on teen-agers, 41 percent of whom are sexually active, and teach them how to keep from getting AIDS."

The Education Research Group is a division of Capitol Publications, a company that is based in Arlington, Va., and publishes newsletters and reports on education and other subjects.

Muslim leader sues U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Black Muslim leader Louis Farrakhan has filed suit in federal court challenging the U.S. government's ban on travel to Libya.

Farrakhan and his church, the Nation of Islam, also challenged restrictions on Americans doing business with the African country, which President Reagan has accused of harboring terrorist groups.

The Chicago minister said the travel restrictions "are calculated to have a chilling effect on his constitutionally protected right to freedom of religion, free speech and travel by threatening incarceration for his travel to and presence in Libya and thus separating and isolating him from his brethern in faith."

His complaint, filed Wednesday, referred to Treasury Department regulations imposing economic sanctions against Libya and State Department rules restricting travel by U.S. citizens to Libya.

Justice Department spokesman Tom Stewart declined comment. "We haven't had an opportunity to examine the complaint," he said.

Polygraph tests up for ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is expected to take up a bill that would ban the use of polygraph testing on most non-government workers.

The bill, approved Wednesday by the Labor and Human Resources Committee, would make it illegal for employers to require their workers or job applicants to submit to lie-detector tests.

The only exemptions would be for employees of federal, state and local governments and those working for defense contractors having access to classified information.

It is estimated that more than a million polygraph tests are administered to employees in the private sector annually. Currently, only 32 states regulate use of polygraphs or polygraph examiners.

The House already has passed a similar bill that grants more exemptions than the current Senate version.

Waldheim denied pension

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has approved a resolution that former U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim be denied his annual pension of $81,000 because of disclosures about his service as a Nazi intelligence officer during World War II.

Israel: U.S. attacks deter terrorism

WORLD

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

JERUSALEM — Israeli experts have concluded that the U.S. air strike against Libya 10 weeks ago have deterred international terrorism.

Despite fears that the April 15 raids on the Libyan cities of Tripoli and Benghazi would inspire more terrorist attacks, possibly directed against the United States itself, there has been a marked drop in the frequency and severity of such actions, the Israelis say.

"It's a clear trend — no mistake about it," said Ariel Merari, head of a terrorism study project at Tel Aviv University's Jaffee Center for Strategic Studies.

Merari said in an interview that after an initial "spasmodic wave" of mostly minor incidents carried out by Libyan-supported groups as far away as Mexico, "there has been a real drop of significant terrorist actions against American interests."

"There is a decline, and one can conclude that it had to do with Libya," said Yehosephat Harkabi, former chief of Israeli military intelligence and a former adviser to the prime minister on terrorism matters. "Those who were guardians of terrorism, the sponsors, are more careful."

In addition to statistical evidence, the Israelis noted, it is clear that the American attack galvanized anti-terrorist sentiment in a number of countries. Among other things, they said, this has resulted in more effective security measures and what a military source here termed a "greatly raised level of intelligence cooperation."

Although Israelis are willing to pronounce the U.S. strike a success, American officials have been more circumspect. They have commented extensively on military aspects of the attack but have said little in public about its effectiveness in deterring terrorism — in part, apparently, for fear that any such comment might be seen as a challenge to potential attackers.

A Pentagon official, speaking on condition that he remain unidentified, agreed that the terrorist record since the air attack "looks good," but he added that "as soon as someone brags about it, it will be over."

In a speech to the U.S. Conference of Mayors last week in San Juan, Puerto Rico, Robert B. Oakley, ambassador at large for counterterrorism, said there had been "a marked reduction" in terrorism attributed to the Libyan regime of Moammar Gadhafi, "apparently due to internal Libyan disarray, the compromise of Libya's external terror network and the tighter controls placed upon Libyan activities all around the world."

Israeli officials, who have long advocated a tougher world response to terrorism, are less reserved. "Anyone with two eyes can see that there is a major drop in activities," a Foreign Ministry spokesman said. "Our policy all along is that the only way to fight terrorism is by hitting it in its headquarters."

According to worldwide figures compiled by the Jaffee Center, there have been 155 international terrorist incidents so far in 1986, compared with 209 in the first half of 1985 — a rate of about six a week this year against eight a week last year.

These figures show that the pace for all such incidents picked up slightly, to 6.7 a week since the mid-April raid. But the incidence of Palestinian terrorism, which Merari called "the more lethal type of terrorist activity" and the type most dependent on state sponsorship by countries such as Libya and Syria, has declined sharply.

Last year, according to Anat Kurz, a Jaffee researcher, there were 73 international terrorist incidents carried out by Palestinians. So far this year, there have been 17, all but four of which took place before the American attack.

The incidents since the bombing of Libya include the abortive attempt on April 17 to smuggle a bomb aboard an El Al plane bound for Tel Aviv. El Al security guards found 30 pounds of explosives hidden in the carry-on baggage of a woman passenger just before the flight was to depart from London.

Two of the recent incidents were aimed at Arab targets: the assassination of a Palestinian activist in Athens and a hand-grenade attack on a Saudi Arabian airline office.

Women in politics

When women run for high public office in the future it never will be as newsworthy as the election of Margaret Chase Smith to the Senate in 1948, or the recent selection of Geraldine Ferraro as a vice-presidential candidate. The Republican from Maine and the Democrat from New York broke ground that has changed the course of political history.

Former President Richard Nixon surely had these and other events in mind when he suggested recently that the time may have come for a woman to be nominated by the Republican Party on a national ticket. Nixon's observation must have prompted many conversations in political circles concerning what women have the experience and talent for a national nomination. The good news is that the GOP has a number of possibilities.

One name on a number of lips is that of Jeane Kirkpatrick who distinguished herself as the nation's ambassador to the United Nations. She is highly articulate, and an academician of strong leadership qualities. Elizabeth Hanford Dole, wife of Senator Robert Dole of Kansas, is frequently mentioned. She is an effective Secretary of Transportation.

Another possibility is Senator Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas. The daughter of Alf Landon is highly regarded for her independence and intelligence. Also in the wings is Anne Armstrong of Texas. She has represented the United States with distinction as Ambassador to the Court of St. James.

There are others and more will emerge. But these names are sufficient to remind the nation that the Republican Party has an imposing array of talent among women as well as men.

That's a good sign for the future of the Republican Party and for the face of politics in coming years.

Another View:
Apartheid is not new

WASHINGTON — Of South Africa it can be said that there are no surprises, only inevitabilities.

For decades, nothing new has emerged about the deadly issue dividing that beautiful but troubled land into armed racial camps inexorably bent on each other's destruction. It springs from the ancient notion of master-slave relationships that has always produced violent conflict and revolution.

There is nothing new either about the way the world increasingly has reacted to the looming tragedy at the tip of the African continent. For decades, the South African government's unyielding policy of apartheid, or separation of the races, has been bitterly denounced worldwide. And for just as long, the government's pig-headed reaction has always been the same: to become more stubbornly repressive in rejecting anything that might ease the conflict. No matter how many tentative moves it has made toward reform, its basic policy has always been to maintain at all costs absolute control by the minority white population.

But it is news when the president of the United States, even if motivated by the best of intentions, seems to misunderstand that nation's history or misreads it in deciding how the United States should respond to this latest and gravest crisis.

Ronald Reagan has opposed economic sanctions against South Africa, saying these would hurt the besieged black majority that the United States seeks to support. By this reasoning, such sanctions could harden the government's attitude and lead to harsher measures against blacks. This analysis completely ignores the way that the South African government has behaved repeatedly in each of its racial crises since World War II — violently, viciously, repressively.

This pattern was established long before the uprising of blacks in Soweto 10 years ago this week.

In the early 1950s, for example, a series of fatal riots led native blacks to organize a campaign of passive resistance. The reaction of the regime headed by Prime Minister Daniel F. Malan was a massive and oppressive clampdown. Stern new laws and regulations expanded color bars on the statute books. "Pass laws" were enacted to control blacks' movements even more rigidly. Complete freedom of movement was denied them; the government dictated where blacks must live, where they might go, how and why they might travel and how long they might be out at night without special permission.

The government defended these totalitarian steps. In the words of Malan's secretary of native affairs, they were deemed necessary to eliminate "stresses and strains which would inevitably lead to conflict unless very careful control were exercised."

That control meant abrogation of basic democratic rights for everyone. White opponents of the regime were suppressed as well as blacks and "coloreds," those of mixed blood. The government took upon itself the power of entry into private residences at any time of the day or night without a warrant. Parents were denied the right to decide the type of school their children would attend. A series of new laws delegated judicial powers to ministers and bureaucrats to ensure even tighter control.

Now, more than 30 years later, the reaction of President P.W. Botha's government to blacks' newest drive for equality has been depressingly and predictably the same.

The world watches another massive government clampdown. Once again, a virtual state of martial law exists. Once again, citizens' rights have been suspended. Once again, the knock sounds on the door in the middle of the night, and dissenters and suspected "subversives" are led away by authorities. Censorship of the media is virtually total. And, once again, these police-state trappings are justified by the reasoning of decades past.

When the Malan government imposed its policies of the iron fist, it pronounced them necessary in the name of security and control. When the Botha regime imposed similiar acts, it employed the same sort of rhetoric to justify them: The stability of the state must be preserved. Stripped of niceties, that means, of course, that control by whites must be maintained.

Given such a history, the question about U.S.-imposed economic sanctions is not that they might hurt blacks. The question is how a great power claiming world moral leadership can continue to do business with a government that deserves condemnation and should be made to pay a price for actions outside the pale of acceptable human behavior.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1900, a commission that included Dr. Walter Reed began the fight against the deadly disease yellow fever.

In 1917, the first troops of the American Expeditionary Force arrived in France during World War I.

In 1948, in response to the Soviet blockade of Berlin, the United States announced it would increase its daily cargo flights to the isolated German city.

In 1959, President Dwight D. Eisenhower joined Britain's Queen Elizabeth II in ceremonies officially opening the St. Lawrence Seaway.

In 1963, President John F. Kennedy closed out a visit to West Germany with a stopover in West Berlin, where he made the declaration, "Ich bin ein Berliner," or "I am a Berliner."

Sloppy physicals being given to pilots

WASHINGTON — The Federal Aviation Administration is scrambling to clean up a frightening problem: Auditors found that many doctors were giving sloppy or incomplete physical exams to pilots, especially those who fly small planes.

Jack Anderson

The Hercules in charge of this stable-cleaning operation is Federal Air Surgeon Frank Austin, a medical doctor and former Navy test pilot who flew in Vietnam and assisted in Mercury space flights. Since the auditors reported their findings last July, about 100 out of 900 examining physicians have been stripped of their authority to give FAA certification to pilots.

In addition, the backlog of faulty physicals awaiting investigation and correction has dropped from 100 in 1984 to fewer than 50 currently. "I feel pretty happy about it," Austin told our associate Stewart Harris.

The Transportation Department auditors' unpublished report is enough to whiten the knuckles of the most devil-may-care air traveler. Though Austin assured us that 99 percent of the errors turned up by the auditors were clerical goofs, some were not. As a result, dangerously unhealthy pilots were certified fit to fly.

For example, on March 21, 1984, an FAA-certified military doctor in Pensacola, Fla., declared a retired naval commander healthy enough to pilot a small plane, even though he suffered from atrial flutters and cardiac arrhythmia — both heart conditions that can ground a pilot — as well as gallstones, kidney stones and a hernia.

Officials in charge of monitoring the physical exam records didn't get the pilot's file until 42 days later, when it arrived at the Civil Aeromedical Institute in Oklahoma City, Okla. By the time they got more test data on the ex-commander, it was too late: 60 days had passed, and under the law the medical certification was considered "affirmed" by the FAA.

Despite urgent pleas from the Aeromedical Institute, the pilot did not relinquish his medical certification.

Another case: On Nov. 1, 1983, an FAA-certified doctor in Lagos, Nigeria, approved a pilot to fly commercial aircraft for another year. When the examination record arrived at the Aeromedical Institute three months later, officials were appalled to see that the medical exam was blank except for some eye tests. The medical examiner in Nigeria never replied to inquiries from the institute, which eventually dropped its attempt to get a complete physical examination on the record.

Based on a random sampling of the 56,500 fliers who passed FAA-certified annual physicals in 1983, the auditors indicated that roughly 5 percent should have been grounded or at least restricted for health reasons. Almost half the mistakes or omissions by the examining physicians involved significant areas such as vision, blood pressure and pulse, urinalysis and medical history.

The auditors found that generally the most errors were committed by physicians who gave the fewest medical exams. For example, at McGuire Air Force Base, N.J., the doctor with the lowest error rate (29.5 percent) gave 465 exams in 1983. A second doctor made errors on 65 percent of his 26 exams, and a third made mistakes on both the exams he gave.

Overall, the auditors estimated, 39 percent of all the exams given to fliers in 1983 contained errors of some kind.

Austin said he has established new performance standards for FAA-certified physicians: Doctors with error rates above 10 percent are put on probation. He pointed out that only a handful of air crashes are caused by pilots' health problems.

Over the past three years, an FAA official said, an average of 11 air accidents a year have been caused by pilots' poor health.

Footnote: Most commercial airlines have tougher health standards for pilots than the FAA requires.

WATCH ON WASTE: Moviemakers get incredible bargains when they rent public land from the Interior Department as the picturesque scenery for their productions. For example, Lucasfilm Ltd. used the El Centro (Calif.) Resource Area for 243 days to film "Return of the Jedi." The movie grossed $168 million; Lucasfilm paid the government just $30 a day for the landscape. The grand total came to $8,620. Congressional auditors found that movie companies pay between $30 and $200 a day to use four Southern California resource areas.

YANKEE GO HOME?: Here's a switch on Europeans' resentment of American tourists' reluctance to visit this year because of terrorism: American art students doing the traditional post-graduate European tour say their European colleagues are noticeably chillier, afraid they may get hit with ricochets in a terrorist attack on the American artists. Like tourists, many American artists, collectors and buyers have decided this is a good year to explore the artistic heritage and possibilities of the United States. The result — if the scare lasts — will be more American themes and styles and less European influences on the work of younger artists.

MINI-EDITORIAL President Reagan has suggested, a little wistfully, that the 22nd Amendment, limiting a president to two terms, was a mistake because it made even a landslide winner like himself a lame duck the day after his re-election. We agree. What Reagan didn't point out, of course, was the irony that the two-term amendment was ramrodded through spitefully by a Republican-controlled Congress in 1947 to prevent another Franklin Roosevelt. This shortsighted enshrinement of FDR backfired when Republican Dwight Eisenhower was cut off from what could have been life tenure — and now Ronald Reagan as well.

GEORGE F. WILL

Greatest moves are those made for the fun

WASHINGTON — For the ninth time this semester, the high-school senior from a Chicago suburb has faked an illness (licking his palms to make them clammy is his preferred "non-specific symptom") to fool his dotty parents into letting him "ditch" school. Now, speaking directly to the camera, he says: "If I go for 10, I'm probably going to have to barf up a lung."

George F. Will

Ninety minutes later, the discerning movie- (note well: I do not say "film-" or "cinema-") goer leaves the theater saying: "At last, that is settled. Arguments can rage about whether the second greatest movie is this or that exploration of Scandinavian angst or this or that study of men in black turtleneck pullovers who suffer urban dread in Paris or Milan with women who drink bitter coffee and wear their hair in buns and ceramic earrings they crafted in their backyard kilns. But for those of us who seriously doubt that movies are often serious, it is clear that the greatest movie of all time is showing now at fine theaters everywhere.

It is "Ferris Bueller's Day Off." By "greatest movie" I mean the moviest movie, the one most true to the general spirit of movies, the spirit of effortless escapism.

Remember Steve McQueen in "The Great Escape," busting out of a German POW camp? Ferris "borrows" a friend's father's Ferrari and escapes for a day, from something worse: high school. As should happen in a teen-ager liberationist movie, Ferris reduces a ferret-faced school administrator to rubble, bamboozles his soggy-headed parents and lives out every teen-ager's fantasy of subverting authority at every turn. Ferris is, as the saying goes, "into" fun. The movie will elicit cliches — what America's premier essayist, Joseph Epstein, calls "ephemeral verities." The cliches will be to the effect that Ferris is a symptom.

Need you ask of what? Of the self-absorption of youth corrupted by the complacency of the Reagan years. Such zeitgeist-mongering is punctured by Epstein's question: When, other than periods of war or economic calamity, have people not been self-absorbed?

"Ferris Bueller" is — let us blurt out the worst — not serious. But, then, few movies are, and fewer should be. Here is an oddity of our age. Many people would rather undergo torture or (what is much the same thing) have a Judith Kranz novel read aloud to them than have it said that they willingly read third-rate novels, yet those people go to movies that are the moral equivalents of Kranz novels, and will read ponderous reviews of those movies. Epstein, who believes that much movie reviewing amounts to distinguishing between the fourth-rate and the third-rate, says that reading Pauline Kael, "page after page, on, say, the movie 'Popeye' becomes a spectacle akin to listening to someone play 'Mares Eat Oats and Does Eat Oats" on a Stradivarius."

Oh, carry me back to olden days, when almost all movies were like "Ferris Bueller" — no nonsense about seriousness. In the early 1950s, the 11-year-old intelligentsia in Champaign, Ill., plunked down ten cents for a double feature plus a "festival" of five cartoons, and for another five cents they could pig out on Jujyfruits. (Today's younger generation, like every younger generation, is dismaying, but has minted a magnificent verb: "pig out.") Alas, in the 1950s, movies became "films" and seriousness settled like soot over everything.

"Universities," Epstein recalls, "had film societies, and every major city had at least one little art house, where a pallid young woman smoking a Russian cigarette looked up contemptuously from her Baudelaire long enough to sell you a ticket for a Peruvian film that opened on a scene of peasant boys slaughtering a vicuna." The fruits of such seriousness were, and are, enough to make you sympathize with the movie-goer who left a theater exclaiming, "I don't ever want to see a movie I haven't already seen before."

Make an exception for the sage of Ferris Bueller, whose credo, like that of every red-blooded teen-ager, is "You can't go too far." But be braced for this fact: Teen-agers go too far with bad language.

It is, perhaps, best to shrug and say, as a critic did, that vulgarity is the garlic in the salad of life. Besides, before you wince and writhe and fear for the Republic because of the coarseness of the children, remember the kind of vulgarity you hear on news broadcasts, from journalists who ask questions such as (Epstein's examples), "What did you think when you first heard your husband had been killed?" or "What went on in your mind when you learned that you had cancer, now for the third time?" or "Tell me, Holy Father, have you never regretted not having children of your own?"

Ferris and his friends have their faults, including a weakness for bad words, but at least they do not talk like that.

ART BUCHWALD

No sexual harassment at work, but home?

The Supreme Court ruled last week that you could sue for sexual harassment in the office. It was a sweeping decision for the Supremes and I thought it would take care of sexual harassment once and for all.

Art Buchwald

Larry the lawyer thinks the decision was wanting. "They didn't say anything about sexual harassment in the home."

"There is a lot more than in the office," Larry said. "A recent survey showed that there was five times as much harassment where people dwell than where they work."

"How can you sexually harass someone in your own home?"

Larry said, "I represented a man last week in a very interesting case. One day he was bushed and tired and sank into a chair. Then his wife started to sexually harass him."

"How?"

"Well, first she undid his tie, and then started to rip off his shirt. My client begged her to desist. So she got mean and told him that if he wasn't willing to be a good sport he wouldn't get any dinner."

"That's a big club to hold over a guy's head."

"While the wife was trying to take of the husband's shoes, he pushed her away and told her that whatever she thought, she had the wrong idea."

"Then what did she do?"

"She refused to cook him dinner. It was too much for the husband. Having used this threat so often, he decided to sue the wife for sexual harassment in the home."

"How did it go?" I asked him.

"It was a pretty interesting trial. The wife claimed that the husband encouraged her to make passes — and on occasion even played Mantovani music in the bedroom. She testified that over the years, he had harassed her as much as she had harassed him. As a matter of fact, on the very night when the crime took place, she said her husband had pinched her, which was their sign to each other."

"That's a tough defense," I said. "What did you do?"

"I had no choice but to hold up the ripped shirt. It was the key evidence that my client did not cooperate willingly in the sexual harassment. I then called a string of witnesses to testify that the husband was too weak and bushed to start anything. Then I called my client to the stand. He said that he never knew when he came home whether he would be harassed or not. He told of many instances when his wife ruffled his hair and tugged on his waist, and put her hands over his eyes so he couldn't see who it was."

"Was the husband emotional?" I asked.

"Yes. His chin quivered all the time he gave testimony. I finally asked him the crushing question. Why, if he thought he was being harassed, did he keep returning home? To which he replied that he didn't know where else to go for dinner."

"That must have won everyone over."

"The jury ruled against my client and in favor of the wife."

"How could they do that?" I said. "Your case was airtight."

Larry the lawyer said, "The jury told me later that I had failed to prove intent. The wife could have been sexually harassing my client or she could just have been, by taking his tie off and ripping his shirt, preparing him for a great meal."

"Surely you're going to appeal?"

"To the highest court in the land. Only a conservative court will appreciate the significance of a ripped shirt."

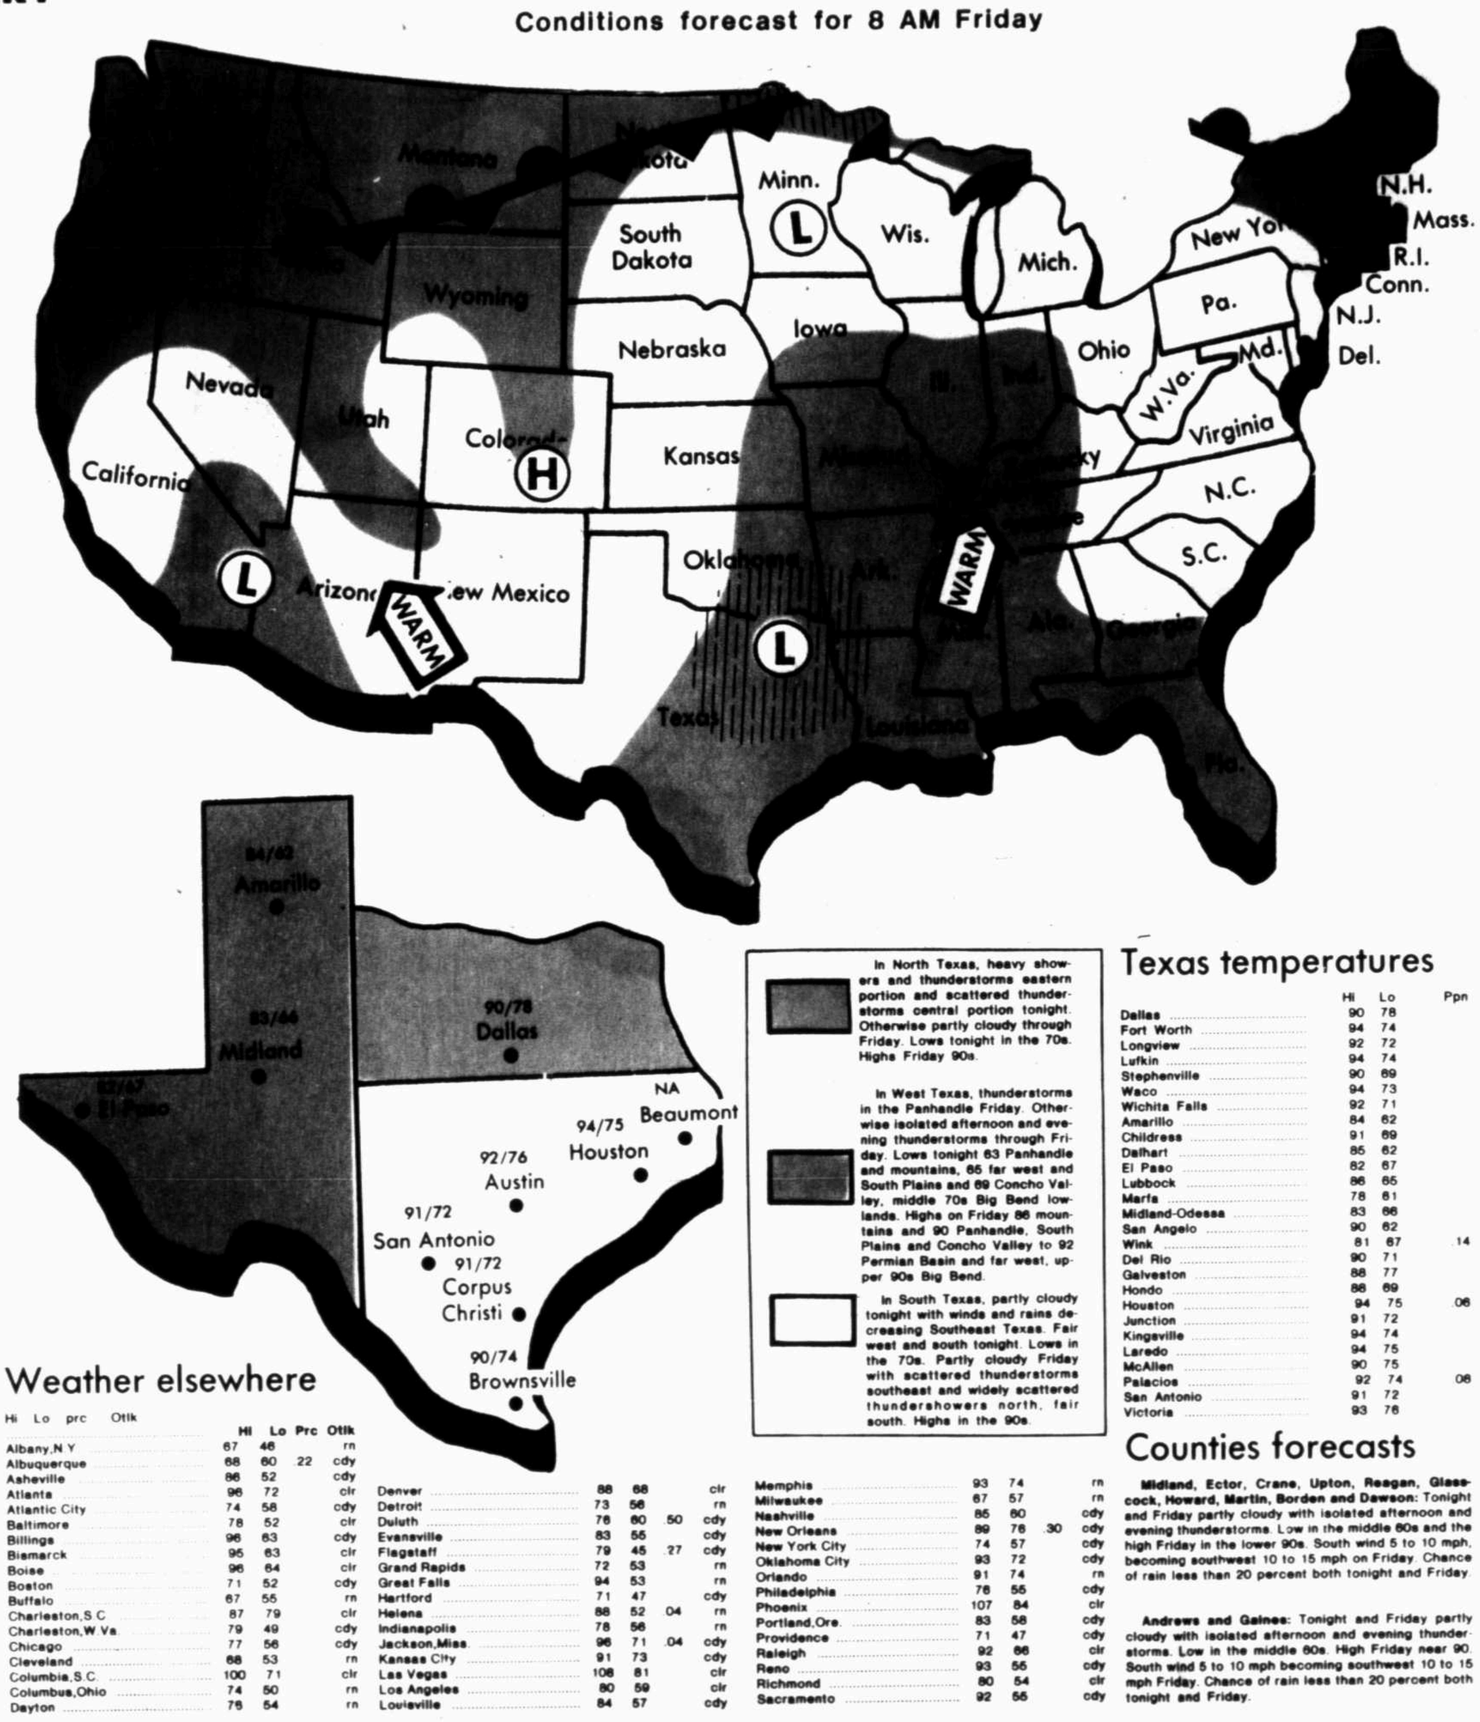
TORNADO or THUNDERSTORM

WATCH
(Conditions are right for a tornado or severe thunderstorm to form)

WARNING
(A tornado or severe thunderstorm already is in existence.)

Conditions forecast for 8 AM Friday



In North Texas, heavy showers and thunderstorms eastern portion and scattered thunderstorms central portion tonight. Otherwise partly cloudy through Friday. Lows tonight in the 70s. Highs Friday 90s.

In West Texas, thunderstorms in the Panhandle Friday. Otherwise isolated afternoon and evening thunderstorms through Friday. Lows tonight 63 Panhandle and mountains, 65 far west and South Plains and 69 Concho Valley, middle 70s Big Bend lowlands. Highs on Friday 86 mountains and 90 Panhandle, South Plains and Concho Valley to 92 Permian Basin and far west, upper 90s Big Bend.

In South Texas, partly cloudy tonight with winds and rains decreasing Southeast Texas. Fair west and south tonight. Lows in the 70s. Partly cloudy Friday with scattered thunderstorms southeast and widely scattered thundershowers north, fair south. Highs in the 90s.

Warmer weather in area forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Warmer termperatures and partly cloudy skies are the main ingredients of the weather forecast for tonight through Monday. Isolated afternoon and evening thunderstorms may occur, but the chance of rain is less than 20 percent.

Tonight the low is expected to be in the middle 60s with southerly winds at five to 10 mph. Winds will shift to the southwest at 10-15 mph on Friday with a high in the lower 90s.

Normal temperatures for the upcoming weekend are being forecast by the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. The overnight lows should range from the upper 60s to lower 70s, with daytime highs reaching into the low to middle 90s.

Wednesday's high of 83 was 22 degrees below the record high set in 1953. The record low of 59 set for this date was only seven degrees cooler than this morning's low.

STATE

A tornado watch was issued for today for a vast area of Southeast Texas because of the turbulent weather associated with Hurricane Bonnie. And a flash flood watch was in effect for Southeast Texas northward through southeast sections of North Texas.

The tornado watch covered an area along and 70 statute miles on either side of a line from 70 miles northwest of Galveston to 40 miles northeast of Lafayette, La.

Elsewhere, a flash flood watch was in effect for Southwest Texas west of the Pecos River.

Scattered showers were reported from the Lower Pecos Valley to Eagle Pass and over the western High Plains. Elsewhere, skies were generally clear.

Forecasts called for numerous showers and and thunderstorms with heavy rains possible over Southeast Texas.

NATION

Showers and thunderstorms were scattered across Arizona, New Mexico and southwest Texas.

Flash flood watches were in effect in sections of southern New Mexico and southwest Texas, and a flood warning was in effect for the Pecos River Basin of southeast New Mexico.

Thunderstorms also ranged from central North Dakota into southern Indiana and northern Wyoming; across northeast Wisconsin; and across southern Georgia and southern South Carolina.

Angels' new cast learns roles well

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

You wouldn't know the Texas League's Midland Angels by the lineup card they are using these days since triple-A Edmonton has gutted the roster with an all out raid, but the "new cast of characters" are doing just fine despite some major obstacles.

Wednesday night the Angels belted Beaumont, 5-2, to open a six-game series with the Gators at Angel Stadium and the outcome is surprising if you consider what the Midland team had to put up with to get the win. Consider the following:

—An afternoon rain left Angel Stadium looking like a replica of the Okefenokee Swamp and the game didn't get started until 8:48 p.m. while crews tried remove standing water. The field was made playable by hard work, but the game itself should have been a Gator paradise. If you stood in one place too long, you lost your ankles.

—The long awaited Pat Keedy finally arrived in Midland from Edmonton to take over third base and he showed a mixed bag of results with a two-run single in the fourth inning for the game winning hit, but also struckout twice, including once in the eighth with the bases loaded.

—Second baseman Pete Coachman and right fielder Dante Bichette got a second game with Midland under the belt. Coachman tripled to open a four-run fourth, but Bichette is now zero-for-seven at the plate in two games.

—Pitcher Mike Cook, confessing he warmed up too early while the field was being made playable, got off to a rugged start, falling behind 2-0 before turning in a nifty five-hit effort in 8⅔ innings of work.

THERE WERE times when this game looked like a Slow-Pitch game between the Budweiser Clydesdales.

Outfielders looked like they were running in quick sand and the ball would hit and stick in the water thick grass.

But the Angels survived it all and Midland manager Joe Madden was pleased with what he saw.

"This is our new cast of characters and I think we are going to be OK when we get some batting practice," said Maddon. "Keedy came through with a big hit in his first game after a real ordeal of getting here. Coachman is taking to the leadoff position and I'm not worried about Bichette because none of these kids have had any batting practice in days. It seems we are always working on the field with all this rain we've had."

It has been a trying week for Keedy and he was glad to be playing baseball again.

"It was a good start considering what I've been through recently," said Keedy. "I hadn't played in eight days. We, my wife and 10-month old baby, had a wreck in Montana while driving down here and we had a bent rear axle that had to be ordered. We drove 28 straight hours to get here and finally made it late Tuesday night."

KEEDY RAPPED into a double play in the second, but singled in two runs in the fourth to give Midland a 4-2 lead. He struckout his last two times at bat. Keedy was hitting only .203 at Edmonton and averaging nearly a strikeout per inning. However, he is taking the demotion in stride.

"This is a good bunch of guys and I'm here to work and help them win some games, and hopefully, put some stats up for myself," he said.

The Angels got five of their eight hits in the four-run fourth as Kevin King and Raul Tovar added run scoring singles to Keedy's effort.

Midland got its final run in the sixth when King reached on an error by Beaumont outfielder Randy Byers and scored on a double by James Randall.

Cook, now 4-6, got off to a rough start as Byers opened the game with a triple and scored on a single by Bill Wrona. Cook escaped further damage with a double play behind him. Cook hit Eric Varoz in the fourth and gave up his only other run when Bob Grandstaff followed with a double. Grandstaff was playing his first game for Beaumont.

COOK SAILED into the ninth after that, but gave way to DeWayne Buice, who picked up his ninth save. Cook walked two batters in the ninth.

"I wanted the complete game, but Joe (Maddon) gives me a limit on pitches and when you start walking people, you use up that limit in a hurry. When you walk two runners in the ninth, you can expect to be pulled," said Cook.

Midland scored four of its runs off Gator starter Mike Mills, 2-6. Beaumont relievers Todd Simmons and Rusty Ford came in to shutdown Midland, allowing only one unearned run the rest of the way, but Cook had settled into winning form by then.

"That's another reason I feel this team will hit," said Maddon. "Beaumont has two of the best relievers in the Texas League and they used both of them against us. That Simmons is really impressive. He has a future ahead of him. I told him after the game that it would be just fine with me if he took the next five days off."

The two teams play the next five days and it will be interesting to see how Midland's "new cast of characters" fit into their new surroundings. The Angels are now 4-2 and share the second half Western Division lead with the San Antonio Dodgers, whose game with El Paso was rained out Wednesday.

ANGEL NOTES: For the second week in a row, a Midland Angel has been named the Texas League's Batter of the Week. Raul Tovar, raised his team leading average 12 points last week to .317, fourth best in the circuit...James Randall earned the honor the week before...

Field cut to four in Little League

From Staff Reports

The field was reduced to four after action Wednesday night in the Joe Mowles Memorial American Little League tournament, with just two unbeaten teams left.

In the winners bracket, the North Central Cubs beat the Mid-City Angels 8-0 behind the two-hit pitching of Brian Rounding to advance to a winners bracket game tonight with the Western Blue Braves. Rounding was also 3-for-3 with two singles and a home run against the Angels.

Also for the Cubs, Jimmy Stanton ripped a double, and Jeff Hobbs added two singles. Mano Fuentes and Sean Eschberger each had a hit for the Angels as Michael Jones took the loss.

In the loser's bracket, the Eastern Optimists defeated the Tower Cubs, 8-2, to stave off elimination. Smiley Carrasco pitched a one-hitter and cracked a double for Eastern as Nino Almager and Jeremy Burton knocked homers. Damian Lopez got Tower's only hit as Jeffrey Castillo was tagged with the loss.

Today's action will have two unbeatens squaring off at 6 p.m. and the North Central Diamonds west of Midland Lee. North Central's Cubs and Western's Blue Braves will meet for the right to advance into Saturday's championship.

The other game tonight is the Mid-City Angels versus Eastern Optimists in the loser's bracket at Field No. 2.

Greenwood's Rangers following a new leader

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

After a brief absence, Maurice Hodges is ready to return to his West Texas roots as head football coach of the Greenwood Rangers.

After spending just three months at Howard Payne as a line coach under newly appointed head coach Jerry Millsapps, Hodges accepted the post at Greenwood Monday night.

Hodges will take over the Ranger football program from Joe Longley, who resigned in May to return to Sul Ross to earn his masters degree in athletic administration.

Hodges was appointed to the post at Monday night's meeting of the Greenwood Independent School Board meeting.

After being out of coaching for three years, the return to high school coaching is one he's more than happy to make.

"The reason I'm here is I wanted to be back in West Texas. It's my home," Hodges said. "I'm pleased to be at Greenwood, it is an excellent opportunity and an outstanding school system. I chose this because I really love working with high school athletes."

HODGES HAS spent most of his life coaching football in West Texas. Twenty-two years to be precise, many as a head coach. His last coaching job before signing up with Millsapps at Howard Payne, was as the head coach of Class 4A Dumas. Prior to that he spent nine years guiding the Snyder program, and nine years learning the ropes at Monahans.

He is a graduate of Monahans High and Eastern New Mexico State and earned his masters degree at Sul Ross University.

Longley, who resigned in May after five years on the job, brought the Rangers from obscurity since taking the post in 1981. He led the Rangers to a 6-4 overall mark, and a 2-3 record in District 8-2A in 1985. After guiding the Rangers to their first ever playoff appearance in Class A in 1983, Greenwood made the jump to 2A with a 2-2-1, 7-2-1 record in 1984.

But in 1986, the Rangers will be entering their first season in Class 3A, and they'll do it under new direction. Greenwood will enter District 4-3A that includes Crane, Kermit, Fabens, Clint and Alpine.

Greenwood is just three years removed from playing Class A but the increasing enrollment in the past few years has skyrocketed Greenwood upward in classification. It's a jump that Hodges is looking forward to making.

"I REALLY don't know what we have as far as talent. I've only met a few of them," Hodges said. "Right now in the middle of summer, it's hard to get them all rounded up. It's a situation where we'll have a lot to get accomplished once we start two-a-days August 11."

Hodges said he would retain the staff that remains from the Longley era, but would probably add two or three coaches before the season gets underway.

Mauch's Angels singing right tune, too

Associated Press

The California Angels are finding a little bit of heaven against the Texas Rangers this season.

Kirk McCaskill, who had a two-hitter in his previous outing against Texas, pitched a one-hitter Wednesday night as the Angels beat Texas 7-1, breaking a first-place tie with the Rangers. The victory gave California a 6-0 record against their American League Western Division rivals this season.

"They've scored nine runs in six games against us," Angels Manager Gene Mauch. "They just happened to run into the most consistent pitching we've had this season."

The only hit off McCaskill, 8-4, was a third-inning homer by Texas third baseman Steve Buechele. McCaskill allowed two walks — both of them to Buechele —and struck out 10.

"It didn't feel like a one-hitter," said McCaskill, who added that he pitched a better game in the 2-1 two-hitter against the Rangers on June 17. "You might say I came within 450 feet of a no-hitter."

AL Roundup

Red Sox 5, Yankees 4

Boston scored five runs in the first inning and made them stand up, salvaging the final game of the three-game series against New York, the Red Sox' closest rival in the AL East.

Al Nipper, 4-4, pitching his first game since undergoing surgery May 18 after suffering a severe gash behind his right knee, survived a shaky start and checked the Yankees on eight hits for seven innings before giving way to Joe Sambito.

Tigers 11, Orioles 2

The Tigers hit four homers, two of them by Kirk Gibson, in the first four innings as they stopped Baltimore right-hander Mike Boddicker's seven-game winning streak.

Gibson, who had five RBI, hit a two-run homer in Detroit's three-run first inning and got another two-run homer in the third. Darrell Evans had a solo shot in the third and John Grubb added another homer leading off Detroit's four-run fourth, which made it 10-2.

Royals 5, A's 4

Kansas City, which got out of a jam in strange fashion in the top of the ninth, beat Oakland in the bottom on the inning on Jorge Orta's RBI single.

With two outs and A's runners on second and third in the ninth, Jose Canseco walked off Steve Farr, 5-1. But pinch-runner Ricky Peters, who said later he thought the bases were already loaded, started walking home and was tagged out, ending the inning.

In the bottom of the ninth, Rudy Law hit a one-out single, went to second on an error by Oakland shortstop Alfredo Griffin and scored on Orta's game-winner off Bill Mooneyham, 1-2.

White Sox 4, Twins 3

Bobby Bonilla scored from first base on a two-out double by Greg Walker in the sixth inning, breaking a 3-3 tie and lifting Chicago over Minnesota.

White Sox starter Tom Seaver left in the top of the sixth after giving up an RBI triple to Randy Bush, making the score 3-2. The Twins, whose first run scored on Gary Gaetti's homer, tied it 3-3 on Kent Hrbek's groundout after Seaver left the game.

Mariners 6, Indians 1

Seattle left-hander Mark Langston overpowered Cleveland, striking out 15 and allowing only three hits.

Langston, 8-5, who recorded his fourth straight victory, set a team record for strikeouts, passing the previous club mark of 13 by Gaylord Perry in 1982.

Blue Jays 5, Brewers 1

Jessie Barfield and Rance Mulliniks broke open a close game with homer, while Toronto pitching held Milwaukee to six hits.

Jim Clancy, 7-5, allowed five hits over six innings, and gave up the only Brewers' run on Ben Ogilvie's infield single in the top of the sixth, which made the score 2-1. Dennis Lamp allowed one hit over the last three innings for his first save.

A pair of Midland teams strode into Odessa last weekend for the Permian Basin Soccer Association youth tournament and came away with age group titles.

The Midland Bandits in the under 12 division escaped with a narrow win over another Tall City team for the championship.

The Bandits defeated the Midland Green Genes by a single goal after the game was tied 3-3 at the end of regulation. Both teams had scored 40 goals in their three games before reaching the final, so goalies Matt Lawrence, Bandits, and Mano Fuentes, Green Genes, played suberbly in net.

Lendl not slipping on slick grass

By LARRY SIDDONS

Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — From time to time, Ivan Lendl will argue with a line judge or even get testy with an opponent. But watch out when he gets mad at himself.

On a beautiful summer afternoon, the sky robin's-egg blue above the emerald green of Wimbledon's grass, Lendl was breezing along at far from full speed against Marcel Freeman, an American ranked 81st in the world.

Lendl had the first two sets in hand. He had just broken Freeman's serve for a 2-1 lead in the third set. His second victory in less than 24 hours and a berth in the third round of the men's singles were within reach.

And then something snapped.

Freeman sent a forehand passing shot down the line. Lendl, the top seed from Czechoslovakia, leaned toward the ball, then pulled back. The shot stayed in and Freeman was back on serve and tied 2-2.

Lendl stared at the spot where the ball landed, raised his racket over his head and brought it rapidly toward the turf, stopping just above the ground.

It was Freeman who felt the impact.

Suddenly playing with fire, Lendl broke Freeman in the fifth and seventh games to complete a 6-3, 6-2, 6-2 victory.

"You've got to be ready mentally for it. After two sets, it's not over," Lendl said. "You've got to be able to concentrate a little longer and try to keep it that way, even when you're winning 6-3, 6-2.

"That's what happened to me today, on the break. I won the first two sets and had a break, and I let him come back because I played a couple of loose points."

Lendl almost sounded as if he were one of the six seeded players to be upset Wednesday, rather than a straight-set winner.

Lendl has never won a major grass court tournament, but said he feels more comfortable at Wimbledon this year.

FALLING OUT on the tournaments' third day were eighth-seeded Anders Jarryd of Sweden, 14th-seeded Martin Jaite of Argentina and 16th-seeded Johan Kriek of the United States among the men, and sixth-seeded Kathy Rinaldi, 12th-seeded Stephanie Rehe and 13th-seeded Barbara Potter of the United States among the women.

Jarryd was so angered by his 3-6, 6-4, 7-6, 6-2 loss to South Africa's Eddie Edwards that he threw his racket, striking a teen-age spectator. Officials fined the Swede $1,000 for the outburst.

He was the third of last year's men's semifinalists to be eliminated in the first three days this year. Earlier victims were Americans Jimmy Connors and Kevin Curren.

Seeds advancing included men's No. 6 Joakim Nystrom and No. 13 Mikael Pernfors, both of Sweden, and No. 10 Tim Mayotte and No. 12 Brad Gilbert, both of the United States; and women's No. 4 Claudia Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany, No. 8 Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria, No. 9 Zina Garrison of the United States, No. 10 Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina, No. 11 Carling Bassett of Canada and No. 15 Catarina Lindqvist of Sweden.

Today's schedule was full of highly seeded players, including defending champion Boris Becker of West Germany against Tom Gullikson of the United States, and the women's second seed, Chris Evert Lloyd vs. Pam Casale of the United States.

Pernfors, a two-time U.S. college champion at the University of Georgia, lost to Lendl in the clay-court finals of the French Open three weeks ago and was playing a rare match on grass.

Still, he had little trouble in beating American Mike DePalmer 2-6, 6-4, 6-4, 7-5 in a match rained out on Monday, suspended by darkness Tuesday and hurriedly inserted on the Centre Court schedule Wednesday.

"Playing on grass for me was a lot of fun," he said. "People told me what grass would be like but I didn't have that many problems. I've played on fast courts in the United States."

Lendl took Pernfors in straight sets in the French final and, for the second half of the third set against Freeman, he looked just as powerful as in that championship match.

Coming to the net at every opportunity, booming aces and service winners, Lendl broke Freeman at love for a 3-2 edge, held at love for 4-2 with a put-away volley, broke again for 5-2 after giving up just one point in the game and sewed it up on his second match point.

On his serve, Lendl rushed the net. Freeman made a good return over the middle, but the Czechoslovak was there and blasted a forehand volley that skidded under the American's racket.

"I only slipped a couple times today," he said. "It would be better if I didn't slip even once. But I guess it's better to slip twice during the match than to fall on your face once, as I did a couple years ago."

KOHDE-KILSCH was awful in her first set against Etsuko Inoue of Japan, winning just 17 points. A dramatic reversal in the second set sent her easily into the second round 0-6, 6-1, 6-2.

Just the opposite was true for Kriek.

A surprise semifinalist at the French Open, the South Africa-born American was bombing John Sadri of the United States on the fast grass that Kriek loves, winning the first four games and holding serve for the first set. But Sadri came back strong, broke Kriek's service in the eighth game of the second set and went on to win 2-6, 6-3, 7-6, 6-3.

COM faces tough task

From Staff Reports

The three day West Texas Invitational swim meet with one of its toughest fields in years will begin Friday at 6 p.m. at the Doug Russell Pool.

Fifteen teams from all over the state and some from Oklahoma are scheduled to swim this weekend in the meet hosted by the City of Midland swim team.

Leading the COM swimmers is 15-year-old Michaela Hasek, the top seed in four events in the senior division, the 400 freestyle, 200 backstroke, 200 IM and 100 back. Andrew Jordan is seeded No. 1 in two events in the 15-18 year division, the 50 freestyle and the 100 breaststroke.

Twelve-year-old Matthew Houston is the top seed in six events — 50 breaststroke, 50 free, 100 butterfly, 100 freestyle, 50 butterfly and 200 freestyle. In the eight and under division, Craig Kieffer is seeded No. 1 in the 50 breaststroke, 100 freestyle, 50 back, 50 butterfly,

Other top seeds are Jane Marker 200 and 100 breaststroke, 15-18; Alan Reed, 1,500 freestyle, 15-18; Sam Perry, 200 back, 15-18; Stacy Fennel, 100 and 200 free, 10 and under; John Waller, 100 back, 11-12;

Carlton let go, Thomas, too

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — If Steve Carlton is to win the 319th game of his career, he'll have to do it for a team other than the Philadelphia Phillies, likewise for former American League home run champion Gorman Thomas with the Seattle Mariners.

On Wednesday, after 22 seasons — 14 with the Phillies — and four Cy Young awards, the 41-year-old lefthander was given his unconditional release. He is 10th on the all time win list with 318, sixth in NL history.

Thomas, the highest paid player in the history of the Mariners, was released by the AL club in the latest sweep of a youth movement by new manager Dick Williams.

Phillies President Bill Giles, nearly in tears on several occasions while making the announcement, said he had tried to talk Carlton into retiring. When Carlton insisted he could still win, Giles reluctantly sent him packing.

"He still thinks he can pitch and win. ... But I was convinced that it was not in the best interest of the Phillies for him to continue pitching for us," Giles said.

Carlton was not at the news conference, maintaining the stony silence with the media imposed some eight years ago because of alleged references to his personal life by writers.

BUT IN a tape played to fans at Veterans Stadium prior to the Phillies' game against the Chicago Cubs Wednesday night, Carlton said he felt he still can pitch.

"It's unfortunate it came down to these circumstances to where it was a difficult decision for Bill Giles to make. I still have goals to accomplish and still can pitch effectively," he said.

In his last 1 ⅓ innings, Carlton has allowed 31 hits, 23 earned runs, walked 15 and struck out 14 with a 13.53 ERA. For the season, Carlton is 4-8 with a 6.18 ERA and has issued 45 walks in 83 innings.

THOMAS, 35, was hitting .192 with 10 home runs and 26 RBI this season. Thomas hit .215 with 32 homers and 87 RBI for the Mariners last season and was voted as the Sporting News Comeback Player of the Year.

Thomas has 262 major league career homers. He led the AL in home runs with 45 in 1979 and tied for the AL home run title with Reggie Jackson with 39 in 1982.

Houston reliever Aurelio Lopez hangs his head after allowing the game winning hit by Dave Parker to score a celebrating Tracy Jones.

Parker deals Astros out, 4-3

Associated Press

NL Roundup

HOUSTON — Dave Parker came to bat against the Houston Astros in the 10th inning with a chance to hit the game-winner. He says it's his favorite situation.

And Parker took advantage of the situation with a two-out single that gave the Cincinnati Reds a 4-3 victory Wednesday night over the Houston Astros.

It came against 10-game winner Bob Knepper and with first place in the National League West on the line.

"I felt like I pitched as well tonight as I have all year," said Knepper who failed for the third straight time to win his 11th game of the season. "It is disgusting to play this bad. Our defense has been sloppy and we haven't gotten the key hits when we needed them."

Parker was an unlikely hero after entering the game batting .213 against the Astros this season but the lack of a knock-out punch by the Astros gave Parker, who is a .304 lifetime hitter, an opportunity.

"I'm a competitive guy," Parker said. "I was hitting about .214 against them. I guess they thought they had my number. I like to be up on a game winning situation."

Tracy Jones slammed a one-out single to left field in the 10th inning, advanced to second on an infield out and scored on Parker's shot to right field.

The Astros' loss overshadowed another fine performance at the plate by first baseman Glenn Davis who was 3-for-4 with two singles and a double.

Mets 5, Expos 2

Kevin Mitchell and Len Dykstra doubled home runs in a four-run fourth inning as the Mets salvaged the finale of a three-game series and moved nine games ahead of Montreal in the NL East. Winning pitcher Sid Fernandez, 9-2, scattered six hits over six innings and also singled home the go-ahead run in the fourth. George Foster added New York's fifth run with his 12th homer of the season.

Cards 2, Pirates 1, 10

Vince Coleman's speed helped St. Louis defeat Pittsburgh in 10 innings for its sixth consecutive victory.

Coleman opened the Cardinals' 10th with a single off reliever Pat Clements and took second on a wild pitch before Tito Landrum walked. Tom Herr singled to right and Coleman, who had stopped at third, sped home when Joe Orsulak's throw struck Herr on the leg near first base.

Braves 3, Dodgers 2

Rick Honeycutt, who has the lowest ERA in the majors, allowed an unearned run in seven innings but it was enough to make him the loser. Atlanta took a 1-0 lead with two out in the sixth when Dale Murphy tripled and scored when third baseman Enos Cabell misplayed Horner's sharp grounder. It was the Dodgers' 87th error of the season, most in the majors.

Honeycutt, who has surrendered just four runs in his last 42 innings, lowered his major league-leading ERA to 1.93.

Padres 3, Giants 1

Dave Dravecky's two-run single in the fourth inning helped him snap a personal four-game losing streak. Dravecky, Lance McCullers, Craig Lefferts and Rich Gossage blanked the Giants until Rob Thompson homered in the ninth inning.

Cubs 10, Phillies 7

Rookie Dave Martinez's two-run double tied the score in the sixth inning and two batters later Shawon Dunston put Chicago ahead with another two-run double.

The Cubs withstood Philadelphia homers by Mike Schmidt, John Russell, Ron Roenicke and Ronn Reynolds.

Cosell 'tells it like it is' on USFL witness stand

NEW YORK (AP) — With a "I'm telling it like it is" performance worthy of his most newsworthy moments on the air, Howard Cosell has wound up the USFL's case in its $1.69 billion antitrust suit against the NFL.

After 20 days of testimony from 22 witnesses over seven weeks, the fledgling league on Wednesday rested its case with the jury of five women and one man. The NFL case now begins with Chet Simmons, the former USFL commissioner as the first witness.

But for spectacle, Simmons will have to go far to top Cosell, who

Cooper golfer inks with MC

From Staff Reports

Arnie Burttschell of Abilene Cooper's top-flight golf team has signed an agreement to play for Midland College.

Burtschell played on Cooper's 1984 Class 5-A State Championship and the 1985 Cooper team which took third in the state. Burttschell moved in his senior year and did not play competitive golf. As a freshman, he was a member of the Class 3A Comanche High School team that finished second in the state tournament.

"We think Arnie is one of the top prospects this year," said MC golf coach Delnor Poss. "He's an all-around athlete who is used to being a winner and we think his attitude and experience will make him a great collegiate player."

Burttschell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Burtchell, now of Stephenville.

COSELL

spent 3½ hours on the witness stand Wednesday with a performance peppered with references to subjects ranging from the Iran hostage crisis to the old "Kukla, Fran and Ollie" puppet show. It was an appearance that had the packed courtroom in a continuous uproar.

During his direct testimony, Cosell contradicted several points made earlier by ABC witnesses, including a statement by Arledge, the head of ABC News and Sports, who testified that Rozelle had never expressed his displeasure over the contract the network gave the USFL for its start.

And while he said he was disinterested, Cosell said at one point, "I'm here to help these people," referring to the USFL. He also said under cross-examination that Donald Trump, the owner of the New Jersey Generals, had offered him a chance to buy into the USFL team.

But that was overshadowed by the spectacle of Cosell himself and of his sparring with NFL attorney Frank Rothman, who once represented him. When he finished, U.S. District Judge Peter K. Leisure remarked to him: "Thank you very much, Mr. Cosell, we enjoyed having you with us."

Throughout his time on the stand, the first 39 minutes of which Cosell spent talking about himself, the spectators were treated to a show that was as much "Cosell on Cosell" — the title of one of his books — as it was an antitrust trial. The words, the phrases, the intonation, were all right from the television set and his amplified words could be heard well down the hallways outside the courtroom.

At various times, he referred to the Iran hostage crisis, his books, President Reagan, Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, Johnny Carson, Walter Cronkite, Coca-Cola, Dr Pepper, singer Michael Jackson's cross-country tour, fight promoter Don King, "Kukla, Fran and Ollie" and the time early in his career when he "was going locker room to locker room with a 40-pound tape recorder on my back."

The crux of his testimony concerned dicussions with Arledge and Arledge's deputy, Jim Spence. The television issue is critical to the trial. The USFL alleges that the NFL pressured the three major networks into denying it a contract for its switch to the fall and is asking that the established league be thrown off at least one of the networks.

Cosell described a 1984 meeting with Arledge, the head of ABC news and sports, at "a very long luncheon" at which Arledge described Rozelle's feelings about the USFL.

"Roone said to me," Cosell testified, "you know, you've got to understand. Pete is all over me on the grounds that I'm sustaining the USFL with the spring contract.' When he told me that I was shocked."

Under cross-examination, Rothman got Cosell to acknowledge that, with or without pressure, the USFL had received a contract from ABC.

World Cup finalists set

MEXICO CITY (AP) — West Germany and Argentina both registered 2-0 victories to qualify for Sunday's World Cup final.

West Germany, using a rugged defense, got goals from Andreas Brehem in the ninth minute and Rudi Voeller to frustrate the fluid French attack. West Germans advanced to its second straight world soccer championship game and a record fifth overall. Argentina, the champion eight years ago, relied on two goals from Diego Maradona to eliminate surprising Belgium.

Dollar up

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar fell in Japan but posted modest gains in European trading early today. Gold prices drifted lower on thinly traded European bullion markets.

Currency traders described the market as trendless, noting a continued reluctance by investors to commit themselves heavily.

Despite the dollar's improvement in Europe, market sentiment for the currency remains bearish, one trader said.

Selected midmorning dollar rates compared with levels in Europe late Wednesday:

—2.2235 West German marks, up from 2.2115

—1.8225 Swiss francs, up from 1.8135

—7.0885 French francs, up from 7.0550

—2.5040 Dutch guilders, up from 2.4895

—1,524.50 Italian lire, up from 1,516.75

—1.3895 Canadian dollars, up from 1.38525

The British pound eased to $1.5110 from $1.5195.

In Tokyo, the dollar fell for a third consecutive session, closing at 166.10 Japanese yen, down from 166.45 yen. Later, in London, the U.S. currency was quoted at 166.20 yen.

London's five biggest bullion houses fixed a recommended gold price at midmorning of $343.80 a troy ounce, down from $344.25 late Wednesday.

In Zurich, the metal was bid at $343.75, down from $344.00.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold closed at a bid of $343.71, up from $342.75.

Silver was quoted in London at a bid of $5.06 an ounce, down 5 cents from late Wednesday.

Saudi oil minister: OPEC will reach agreement

BRIONI, Yugoslavia (UPI) — Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani predicted OPEC would reach agreement on a new oil production policy to bolster prices Wednesday as the beleaguered cartel ended its first day of talks on the resort island of Brioni.

But sources said OPEC mavericks Iran, Libya and Algeria still were far from compromising with the other members on a Saudi-backed strategy to trim production and gradually lift oil prices to the high teens later this year. The group of three radicals wants prices restored to the $28-a-barrel level that prevailed in December.

Oil prices have tumbled by more than 50 percent to the $13 range since December, when the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, led by the Saudis, began flooding the already glutted market in a bid to recapture its "fair share" from outside producers.

"We are discussing a very serious decision that, in my opinion, will ultimately result in an agreement," Yamani said as he left an evening session in the Hotel Neptun that lasted 1 ½ hours.

Asked whether the oil ministers had made any progress toward setting a new production ceiling or assigning individual output quotas at the closed-door meeting, Yamani said: "You want an agreement in one day? We must enjoy this beautiful island."

Iranian Oil Minister Gholamreza Aghazadeh said the split between the radical camp and the 10 other OPEC nations still was "too wide" and warned Iran would insist the global oil glut be removed from the market.

An OPEC report estimated world oil supplies now exceed demand by more than 2 million barrels per day as the cartel continues to turn up the taps, currently pumping crude at a 2 ½-year high of 19 million barrels per day.

Analysts have estimated OPEC's share of the market has increased to about 38 percent from 30 percent in December because the price slide forced non-OPEC countries to begin shutting down high-cost wells.

Aghazadeh said Saudi Arabia, which engineered the price collapse, "today is not in a position to solve these problems. Before they were playing with European countries. Now they are no longer in control."

Saudi Arabia, OPEC's largest producer, precipitated the oil price drop in a bid to force non-member countries — particularly Britain and Norway — to curb their output as well as to impose discipline within the cartel.

TAE to skip next interest payments

From Staff Reports

Texas American Energy Corp. and its subsidiary company, Texas American Oil Corp., have completed the restructuring of their bank debt, according to William F. Judd, president.

Judd said he will, also, recommend to its board of directors that TAO not make its next semi-annual interest payment due August 15, on its $25,000,000 principal amount 12 percent subordinated debentures due in 1999, which like the other indebtedness of Texas American Oil is not guaranteed by Texas American Energy.

Management of TAE expects to make the next quarterly dividend payment on its preferred stock and presently anticipates being able to continue to do so. TAO has retained E.F. Hutton & Co., Inc. as its exclusive financial advisor with respect to a possible exchange offer for TAO's subordinated debentures.

In April, the lending banks reduced the borrowing base under TAO's revolving line of credit to $12.8 million through October 1, 1986. As part of the overall restructuring, the lending banks have loaned $8.5 million to TAE under a term note. The proceeds from the term note borrowing have been transferred to TAO in order that it may reduce the outstanding balance on TAO's revolving line of credit to $12.8 million. Approximately $6.5 million of TAE's advance represents repayment to TAO of an intercompany loan and approximately $2.0 million represents a loan by TAE to its subsidiary.

Judd said the term loan to TAE is secured by a first line on the oil and gas properties of TAO and is subordinated to its existing $6 million unsecured term note. The loan provides for quarterly interest payments at the lead lending bank's prime rate. TAE will receive a second lien on the oil and gas properties of TAO to secure its $2.0 million loan to the subsidiary, and TAO will guarantee the term loan of $8.5 million of TAE referred to above. Beginning March 31, 1987, quarterly principal payments of $425,000 are required on this term loan, with the balance of $7,225,000 due on November 30, 1987, at which date the lending banks have an annual option to renew and extend the final maturity of the note.

Although TAO has suspended drilling activity, made significant spending reductions and implemented other cost-cutting measures during 1986, as a result of continuing depressed oil prices, TAO's management will recommend that the next interest payment with respect to its publicly held 12 percent subordinated debentures not be made.

In making the announcements, Judd stated: "I want to emphasize that these difficulties in the oil and gas operations of TAO do not impact the operations or financial condition of our public utility division in Western Kentucky, and that TAE's management presently anticipates that profits form this division will enable TAE to continue payments of dividends on its preferred stock."

Amoco helps smooth the bumpy unemployment road

ODESSA - The transition from employed to unemployed and back to employed is sometimes a bumpy road for workers, but Amoco Oil Corp. is moving to make it a bit smoother in the Permian Basin.

On May 1, Amoco sent letters to some 10,000 employees informing them that economic conditions required a workforce reduction of about 15 percent. On June 16, some 40 employees in the Odessa, Andrews and Hobbs, N.M. districts took early retirement or were involuntarily terminated.

June 19, last Thursday, Amoco opened an outplacement resource center that occupies the better part of two floors on the First State Bank Building, 1130 E. 8th St. in Odessa.

As part of the severance package provided former employees, Amoco hired, what Greg Clock, Amoco senior staff public affairs advisor, said he believes is the largest outplacement firm in the country to help former employees find new jobs.

Catherine Cogburn, based in the Houston office of Morin Drake Beam Morin, said a lot of companies, especially the Fortune 500 companies such as Amoco, are utilizing the services of firms specializing in outplacement of former employees. "It comes out of a corporate concern for people that had to be let go because economic conditions in the country have forced them into workforce reductions," she said.

Interfirst expects second quarter loss of $260 million

DALLAS (AP) — InterFirst Corp. said it expects to lose at least $260 million in the second quarter and will stop paying dividends for the foreseeable future.

InterFirst Chairman Robert H. Stewart III said the projected loss stems from a plan to increase reserves for loan losses, which it blamed on low oil and gas prices, a weak real estate market and the depressed economy of Texas and the Southwest.

The company earlier had slashed its quarterly dividend to 2.5 cents per share.

The projected loss for the quarter ending June 30 will range from $260 million, or $3.88 a share, to $285 million, or $4.25 per share, the company said in a written statement Wednesday.

The expected second-quarter loss compares with a profit of $16.1 million, or 24 cents per share, for the similar period a year ago.

The state's third largest bank holding company, projected its loss for the first six months would range from $258 million, or $3.84 per share, to $283 million, or $4.22 per share.

Of oil and beer shortages and wise ideas

One of the resolutions on the table when the Interstate Oil Compact Commission (IOCC) convenes in Anchorage this weekend is a call to Congress to develop a comprehensive national energy policy.

Such a policy is needed to provide a "secure and substantial energy independence in the U.S., sufficient to support a prolonged national emergency," says the group sponsoring the resolution before the organization composed of the governors and appointed representatives of oil and gas producing states.

The energy industry's ability to respond to a national emergency has been severely compromised by the collapse in oil prices. In response to the price fall, the IOCC resolution proposes repeal of the Windfall Profit Tax and the Fuel Use Act, wellhead deregulation of natural gas prices and adoption of a national stripper well provision to prevent premature abandonment of marginal wells and their substantial reserves.

IOCC executive director W.T. (Tim) Dowd has been in the vanguard of energy experts warning national leaders of the perils of allowing more than 700 million barrels of oil reserves to be abandoned if oil prices remain in the $15 per barrel range.

THE SOARING POPULARITY of Mexico's Corona beer may leave West Texans wanting to beat the scorching summer heat without a clear, cold longneck to grab.

For more than a year, Corona has been the Texas market leader in imported beer after it pulled ahead of Heineken in April 1985, state figures show. Corona sold 10,510 barrels of beer in Texas during April, compared with 2,565 barrels for Dutch-produced Heineken, according to Texas Alcohol & Beverage Commission figures.

But supplies of Corona may be 15 percent short of demand through the summer, says Jay Alvis, vice president of Julius Schepps Co., the sole Corona distributor in Dallas.

Alvis attributes Corona's popularity to the fact that it tastes more like American beer than most imports, while its clear bottle and embossed label make it look exotic.

Corona's popularity has outgrown the Mexico City Cerveceria Modelo brewery's capacity to produce. The company sold 450,000 cases of Corona in 1982, the first year it was available in the U.S., but consumption exploded to 5.2 million cases in 1985.

There has been no serious shortage of Corona so far because distributors had a 30-day supply through the lower-consumption winter months, according to Alfonso Guerrero, director of sales for Gambrinus Importing of San Antonio.

However, with the advent of the summertime prime beer-swilling season, distributors are being forced to tap back-inventory to keep pace with demand.

Distributors say they will be as fair as possible with retail and institutional customers during the shortage, but the tight supply will probably mean merchants getting fewer cases than they want.

In addition to tight product supplies, the company ordered glass and bottle caps for a projected sales level of 8 million cases this year. But, demand is likely to be 11 million cases or more.

An American company caught in a similar bind could order bottle glass from other suppliers, but Guerrero says there are no alternate glass plants to buy from in Mexico.

AND, A NOTE from the 'Why Didn't I Think of That?' Department: a report from Kansas City of an enterprising bartender and an ingenious money-making/public service plan.

Rob Lubert, 33, has been tending bar for about two years — and like other bar and restaurant servers, is required by the Internal Revenue Service to keep records of his tips. He says that has been easier said than done — at least until he developed the TipMinder.

Lubert says that the booklet provided by the IRS for servers' record-keeping does not have spaces for all the information the agency wants. Neither does the Garfield calendar he had been using.

An industry magazine article about the IRS cracking down on income undeclared by servers triggered Lubert into developing a record-keeping calendar.

The TipMinder is a 54-week diary with guidelines on IRS record requirements plus weekly charts for recording daily cash and charge sales, cash and charge tips, tip-outs and notes. A special feature is the "8 percent" column, the minimum tip total the IRS requires a restaurant to declare per server.

If the server is audited, the IRS will attempt to reconstruct sales using this 8 percent figure, which may or may not be fair, he says.

"The IRS says it gives the server the benefit of the doubt. Hardy har har har. I wanted the opportunity to give the server a fair shake," he says.

The cost is $7.95 each plus $1.50 for shipping and handling.

As a former bartender and waiter, I can't believe all the time I spent keeping records on a free pocket calendar from my bank.

Somehow, it was never a problem to keep my small income figures inside the squares. I guess that's because I never figured out a clever format for keeping records and boosting my income all at once.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Discovery reported in Tom Green

From Staff Reports

CARAWAY OPERATING CO., San Angelo, completed a Strawn discovery and a 1,500 ft. southern extension to the Smith & Caraway field of Tom Green County with completion of the No. 2 WCSL, second producer in the field.

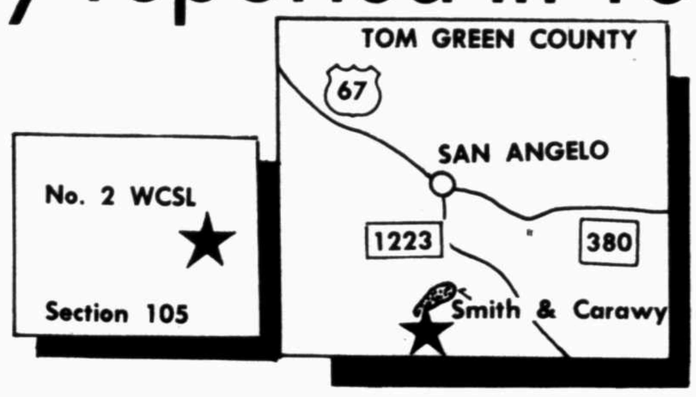
On potential test, the well flowed 138 barrels of 42 gravity crude and 18 barrels of water on a 14/64 inch choke from perforations 5,036 to 5,046 ft. The interval was acidized with 350 gallons of acid.

Permitted as a 6,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 5,065 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 5,055 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 1,891 ft., include the Coleman Junction at 2,218 ft., Palo Pinto at 4,540, Harkey at 4,710, and the Strawn at 4,998 ft.

Location is 2,867 ft. from north and east lines of Section 105, Washington County School Land survey, five miles south of San Angelo.

Caraway completed the field opener, the No. 1 WCSL, to flow 132.6 barrels of 42 gravity crude and 12 barrels of water on a 14/64 inch choke from perforations 5,034 to 5,040 ft.



Reeves gas discovery tested for 745 Mcfd

A Midland firm has completed a Delaware discovery in the San Martine field of Reeves County.

BETTIS, BOYLE & STOVALL, Midland, tested the No. 1 S. Parker Estate-Caledon for a calculated absolute open flow of 745 Mcfd. Production is from perforations 3,364 to 3,465 ft., which had been acidized with 1,500 gallons of 7.5 percent acid and fractured with 415,000 gallons of gel and 36 sacks 20/40 sand.

Scheduled as a 4,999 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to a total depth of 4,725 ft. and plugged back to 4,164 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 4,239 ft.

The well topped the Delaware at 3,344 ft. on ground elevation of 3,138 ft. Pay was topped at 3,344 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from south and east lines of Manuel Torrez survey, 9 miles west of Toyah.

Bettis, Boyle & Stovall have a second 4,999 ft. wildcat, the No. 2 S. Parker Estate-Caldeon, staked east of this completion.

Wagner & Brown test 50 barrel producer

The Conger (Penn) field of Sterling County gained another Cisco producer as WAGNER & BROWN, Midland, completed the No. 938 Glass "T".

On potential test, the well flowed 50 barrels of 44.3 gravity crude, 131 Mcfd and 19.5 barrels of water on an 18/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 580 psi. Production is from perforations 7,799 to 8,197 ft., which had been treated with 96,000 gallons of gel and 97,000 lbs. 20/40 sand. Gas-oil ratio is 2,620:1.

Drilled to 8,400 ft., the well was plugged back to 8,297 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 3,226 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,606 ft., include the Bottom Cretaceous at 350 ft., Yates at 1,300, Seven Rivers at 1,410, Queen at 1,799, Cisco at 7,750, Canyon at 7,978, and the Shale at 8,205 ft. Pay was topped at 7,799 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from south and 660 ft. from east lines of Section 38, Block 32, T-5-S, T&P survey, 20 miles southwest of Sterling City.

Spraberry Trend gains two new producers

JOHN L. COX, Midland, reports completing two new producers in the Spraberry Trend area of Midland County.

Cox tested the No. 4 Donovan "B" to pump 30 barrels of 38 gravity crude, 28 Mcfd and 42 barrels of water from perforations 7,418 to 9,061 ft.

A second Spraberry producer, the No. 2 Donovan "C" was potentialed to pump 39 barrels of 38 gravity crude, 46 Mcfd and 36 barrels of water from perforations 7,444 to 9,098 ft.

Pogo tests Louisiana gas find

HOUSTON (SWN) Pogo Producing Co. announced a successful test of its natural gas discovery in the N.W. Lake Arthur Field, Jefferson Davis Parish, Louisiana. Pogo reported that its Fanny Edith Winn No. 1, flowed at a rate of 5.055 million cubic feet of gas per day (MMcfgd) through a 10/64-inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 9,918 psi from the Miogyp Sand at a depth of approximately 17,000 feet. The calculated absolute open flow potential on the well is 45 MMcfgd.

Pogo as operator, owns a 32.75 percent working interest in the well and in the surrounding 2200 acres of oil and gas leases. Other principal interest owners include: Patrick L. McConathy; Federated Natural Resources Corp.; Eagle Oil and Gas Co.; McFarland Energy, Inc.; Paul F. O'Brien, Jr.; and Adams Resources Exploration Corp.

■ 1. RUNNELS COUNTY WILDCAT SCHEDULED. E.L.A., Inc., Abilene, will drill the No. 5-B Lehman "E", to test as a 2,500 ft. wildcat in Runnels County.

Location is 1,457 ft. from south and 9,024 ft. from west lines of Elisha Mather survey No. 535, and five miles southeast of Winters.

Mitchell cuts budget further

THE WOODLANDS (SWN) — Mitchell Energy & Development Corp. will cut an additional 10 percent from its already-trimmed capital budget, Chairman George P. Mitchell said.

With the reduction, the company's capital budget is now $144 million, down from the $160 million announced in March 1986 and the $212.5 million actually spent in the fiscal year ended Jan. 31.

Mitchell said the budget reduction is "just one small indicator among many that the United States under its present course is heading toward ever increasing dependence on imported oil."

At the same time, he predicted that "after two more difficult years, there will be some blue among the clouds that hang over the oil industry and the Houston area economy."

He said that by the winter of 1988-89:

■ Natural gas demand and prices will begin to revive, in advance of a recovery in the crude oil market. "We may see weather-induced deliverability problems before the winter of 1988, and by that time the 'bubble' of surplus gas will have burst," he said.

■ A turnaround in the Houston economy will be under way, buoyed by the strengthening of gas and oil and early benefits of the community's economic development efforts.

"Until the tide turns, however, times will remain tough," he commented.

The company's largest capital budget cutback, $12 million, will be in the Exploration and Production Division, which now is allocated $77 million, compared with last year's spending of $130 million. The greatest reduction is in drilling outlays.

Mitchell cited the company's recent withdrawal of about 35 million cubic feet of natural gas per day, gross, from the spot market and its present reduced drilling activity, which has averaged about two rigs operating, as further indications of belt tightening. Along with capital expenditures, expenses are being cut whenever possible, he added.

"The nation's long-term economic and military security are being sacrificed to the short-term benefit of cheap imports," Mitchell told shareholders.

"The Saudi strategy of driving out marginal producers and regaining control of world oil production and prices is working–because, sadly, it's expedient for Americans to let that happen.

MidCon files for open access

LOMBARD, Ill. (SWN) — Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of America, MidCon Corp.'s largest interstate pipeline subsidiary, filed a plan to become an open access carrier. A similar plan was filed May 30 by United Gas Pipe Line Co., MidCon's Houston-based interstate subsidiary.

In a filing with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC), Natural outlined a program to provide gas sales and transportation services to customers on both firm and interruptible bases and to provide an interruptible storage and supply balancing service to transportation customers. Natural also asked FERC to allow it to implement certain of the new services on a temporary basis pending final approval of the plan.

Natural's open access plan is designed to enable it to provide a full range of sales and transportation services to customers in an increasingly competitive gas marketplace. Its "blanket" provisions expedite the delivery of services by eliminating the need for Commission approval of each individual transaction once general approval is granted.

Natural said it had consulted with its existing customers in designing the plan, which would allow current sales customers to elect the amount of gas they will buy from the pipeline each year until 1990. Under the plan, these customers could within specified limits, reduce their sales contracts or convert a portion of their sales volumes to firm transportation service over an initial four-year period beginning December 1, 1986, and ending November 30, 1990.

After the sales and transportation requirements of current customers are satisfied and any gas released under existing gas purchase contracts between Natural and its producers is accommodated, Natural's remaining pipeline capacity would be made available for transportation services on a first come, first served basis.

The filing also includes creation of a two-part program intended to recover Natural's costs in maintaining an adequate gas supply for its sales customers' current and future needs through contracts with producers.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Sun discovery produces 8 Mmcfd in Louisiana

DALLAS (SWN) — Sun Exploration & Production Co. announced a Cotton Valley gas discovery well in North Louisiana producing more than eight million cubic feet per day (MMcfd).

The No. 1 KMI Continental Royalty, located in section 33-T17N-R3W of Jackson Parish, La., was completed flowing 8.6 MMcfd and 22 barrels of water per day through a 14/64-inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 8,210 pounds per square inch. The well has a calculated absolute open-flow potential of 40.9 MMcf/D. Production has been established through perforations from 11,154 to 11,208 feet in the Lower Davis Sand.

Triton reports completion of Australian well

DALLAS (SWN) — Triton Energy Corp. announces that its 47 percent owned Australian affiliate, Crusader Limited, has successfully completed an oil appraisal well in the Surat/Bowen Basin located in Queensland.

The Louise No. 2 flowed oil and gas to the surface at a stabilized rate of 770 barrels of oil per day and 0.2 million cubic feet of gas per day from the Triassic Showgrounds Sandstone Formation. The well was tested over the interval 6,609 to 6,649 feet through a 1/4-inch choke.

Louise No. 2 is being funded by B.A. Petroleum Explorers Trust and Minora Resources, as the third well in a six well program to earn their interest in the Rocky Creek East Block and PL 18.

Also, the company's board of directors declared a regular $0.50 dividend on its $2.00 convertible exchangeable preferred stock. The dividend is payable on Aug. 15, to shareholders of record Aug. 1. The board of directors also declared a three percent stock dividend on its common stock. The stock dividend is payable on August 5, to shareholders of record on July 15.

SEC approves offering of Coastal securities

HOUSTON (SWN) The Coastal Corp. announced that the Securities and Exchange Commission registration statement covering the offering of $900 million principal amount of the company's debt securities has become effective and public offering of the securities by the underwriter, Drexel Burnham Lambert Incorporated, has commenced.

The offering consists of $500 million of 11.25 percent senior notes due June 15, 1996, and $400 million of 11.75 percent senior debentures due June 15, 2006. The securities are being offered by the underwriter at 100 percent plus accrued interest from June 15, 1986.

DALLAS (SWN) Sabine Corp. announced realignment of key officer positions.

Andrew J. Shoup Jr., and Harold D. Carter, both formerly an executive vice president, have been promoted to chairman of the board and chief executive officer and president and chief executive officer, respectively.

At the same time, the company accepted the resignation of William R. Goff as a director, chairman of the board, president and chief executive officer. Goff has agreed to continue to serve the company in a consulting capacity.

Shoup and Carter, both long time employees of the company, have served in various capacities and have been directors since 1978.

Partnerships, trusts make cash distributions

DALLAS (SWN) — Natural Resource Management Corp., general partner of NRM Energy Co., L.P., declared the fifth consecutive quarterly cash distribution on the Common Depositary Units of NRM Energy and the fourth consecutive quarterly distribution on the Partnership's Senior Cumulative Convertible Preferred Depositary Units. The Depositary Units represent limited partner interests in NRM Energy Company, L.P.

The distributions are payable on Aug. 15, to unitholders of record on June 30, at the rate of $0.20 per Common Unit and $0.65 per Preferred Unit, unchanged from the previous quarter.

Texas American Bank/ Fort Worth, as Trustee of the San Juan Basin Royalty Trust, declared a cash distribution to the holders of its units of beneficial interest of $.029129 per unit, payable July 15, to unit holders of record on June 30.

InterFirst Bank Fort Worth, as Trustee of the Permian Basin Royalty Trust, declared a cash distribution to the holders of its units of beneficial interest of $.034153 per unit, payable July 15, to unit holders of record on June 30.

Saxon Oil Development Partners, L.P. announced a quarterly distribution of $.10 per Depositary Unit payable on Aug. 15, to unitholders of record on June 30.

Valero withdraws public offering registration

SAN ANTONIO (SWN) — Valero Energy Corp. announced that it is withdrawing the registration statement filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission for the secondary public offering of 500,000 shares of the company's common stock by TAG Group USA, Inc., (TAG). Valero said that TAG asked for withdrawal of the offering because of the depressed price of the common stock.

Valero had also filed a registration statement for 2 million shares of convertible exchangeable serial preference stock, Series B, and is proceeding with that offering.

Retailer launches hostile bid for rival firm

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

In a decidedly unfriendly turn of events, May Department Stores said Wednesday that it will launch a hostile $60-per-share cash tender offer for Associated Dry Goods.

The St. Louis retailer said it is making the tender offer as a way of keeping its options open in case Associated rejects a friendly, $66-per-share stock swap offer made by May.

May Department Stores said it will begin its tender offer Thursday for 51 percent, or about 21 million, of Associated's outstanding common shares. May would complete the merger by offering May common stock or other securities worth $60 per share for the remaining Associated stock, making the total offer worth about $2.4 billion.

The proposed merger would create a company that would vie with Federated Department Stores for the title of the nation's largest department store retailer.

May disclosed its first bid on Sunday, offering to buy Associated for stock worth $66 per common share. The company also offered to pay $211.20 for each share of Associated's convertible preferred stock.

Associated, owner of Robinson's and Lord & Taylor, hasn't responded to the original $2.7-billion offer other than to ask for more time to consider it. And, on Wednesday, Associated officials had no comment on May's latest announcement.

David C. Farrell

Associated stock rose Wednesday on the New York Stock Exchange by 50 cents to close at $65.75 a share. May closed at $82 a share, down 37 1-2 cents.

May Department Stores' latest offer came in a letter from May Chairman David C. Farrell. He told Associated Chairman Joseph H. Johnson he is "pleased" that the Associated board is considering the earlier offer.

"While your considerations continue, given the market dynamics that exist, we have determined that it is necessary for us to take further actions with respect to our possible acquisition of Associated Dry Goods," Farrell said.

"I would like to emphasize that we are making this cash offer for the purpose of preserving our options, and that we would very much prefer to consummate the June 20 merger proposal which you are currently considering."

Farrell also gave Associated a deadline — the date that May would start buying stock under the tender offer announced Wednesday. If Associated doesn't accept the earlier offer by then, May will attempt to complete the lower, two-part hostile offer, Farrell said.

A May Department Stores spokesman declined to reveal the deadline date, saying it will be included in the tender offer documents, which weren't available Wednesday.

Analysts had speculated that Associated would be sold at a slightly higher price, either to May or to another suitor.

"I think it's a good strategic move on their (May's) part," said Sarah A. Stack, an analyst with Bateman Eichler, Hill Richards in Los Angeles. "It does create some flexibility for May."

In addition, the move might keep a third party from entering the fray with a later tender offer, she said.

Farrell said the cash tender offer will be subject to various conditions, which he didn't list. He also said May reserves the right to modify or withdraw its original stock offer.

The difference in price between the two proposals "reflects our strong preference" for a merger involving an exchange of stock, Farrell said. For accounting purposes, a friendly stock exchange merger would be treated as a "pooling of interests" and would be tax-free to the corporation and shareholders. Under the pooling-of-interests method of accounting, the balance sheets of the merging companies are simply added together.

A cash and stock merger would be treated as an investment by the purchasing company. In that case, the assets of the acquired company are added to the acquiring company's assets at their book value. The transaction would then be taxable as capital gains to the sellers.

"We hope that the shareholders of Associated Dry Goods will be allowed the opportunity to gain the additional value contained in our merger proposal and to that end we await your board's response and remain willing to meet with you at any time to discuss our merger proposal," Farrell said.

AMOCO

The outplacement center in the First State Bank Building contains about 25 offices available for the use of former employees. There is also a word processing system, copy machine and a secretary to help former employees in their efforts to find news jobs or even start new businesses. Clock said former employees are also allowed unlimited use of telephones to contact potential employers and postage to mail out resumes.

One of the the 30 to 40 former Amoco employees taking advantage of the outplacement center services is 28-year-old Jim Kiolbassa, a petroleum engineer who had been with Amoco five years.

Wednesday, Kiolbassa was in the center revising his resume that had been fed into the word processing system by Kathi Martin, the secretary in the center.

Kiolbassa, who was laid off June 16, said he doesn't know if he'll be able to stay in the Odessa area or not. He said he got married only six weeks ago, after talking his wife into quitting her job in Houston and moving to Odessa.

David Files, 36, who had spent 14 years with Amoco was a senior staff drilling engineer before being laid off. Files has a degree in petroleum engineering and is "looking at the possibility" of having to sell his "dream home" and leave Odessa, a prospect that doesn't particularly thrill him, his wife and two children.

Explaining how the program works, Ms. Cogburn said, "We have everyone go through a workshop, two or three days in length, where they are able to spend time with each other and with the consultant, assessing their strengths, their abilities and skills, and just as importantly, they are able to look at what they want to do next, what they love to do most." The question she tries to get them to answer, she said, is "what do I love to do and how can I get someone to pay me to do it."

Relating her experience with one former Amoco employee, she said he had always had an interest in cooking and now plans to open a restaurant.

Ms. Cogburn indicated she expects the outplacement center to remain open for several months.

OPEC

At the opening session of the summer summit in the morning, the ministers unanimously elected Nigerian Oil Minister Rilwanu Lukman as president to replace Arturo Hernandez Grisanti, the Venezuelan oil minister.

OPEC sources said most oil ministers viewed Hernandez Grisanti as a stumbling block to ironing out differences in the cartel because he lacked skill as a mediator.

In his last speech as president, Hernandez Grisanti overlooked the divisions within the cartel and instead warned independent producers that they had to "make sacrifices" and cooperate with OPEC to avoid a "price disaster."

Emerging from the evening session, he told reporters the ministers could "reach a common ground for possible decisions" on Thursday.

Hernandez Grisanti singled out Britain — the key independent producer that has steadfastly refused to cooperate with OPEC in a global effort to stabilize oil prices.

He said producers inside and outside OPEC must reach an accord to restrict production "in face of a possible price disaster."

Warring OPEC members Iraq and Iran were forced to sit next to one another around a 40-foot conference table in the crowded meeting room, with the delegations from each country uncomfortably rubbing shoulders.

LOSS

Hard-hit by the oil price slide, InterFirst earnings fell in the first quarter to $2.1 million from $15.1 million a year earlier. The company said then it would ask its board of directors to cut the quarterly dividend from 15 cents to 2.5 cents per share.

InterFirst said it expected its loan loss reserve to range from $510 million to $535 million. That compares with a reserve of $278 million for the similar period a year ago.

The reserve for loan losses in the first quarter was $265 million.

The company said the aggregate of the provisions for loan losses and the decline in value of repossessed loan-related assets to range from $340 million to $365 million for the second quarter.

Stewart said that despite the second-quarter loss, total capital, which includes primary capital and long-term debt, is expected to be about $1.8 billion or 9.6 percent of expected total assets.

"These capital positions remain a source of strength and stability to InterFirst, its depositors and shareholders," he said.

Stewart also said a material amount of the expected increase in the provision for loan losses was tied to an $80 million line of credit to Dallas businessman Edwin L. Cox Jr.

Cox was a director of InterFirst but resigned on June 13, the bank company said.

InterFirst said it was negotiating a restructuring plan with Cox, which would improve InterFirst's collateral position.

Cox issued a statement saying the $80 million was a personal line of credit and does not affect his business holdings. Cox has several agribusinesses, including the recently acquired Swift Independent Packing Co. of Chicago.

He said he has submitted additional collateral requested by the bank and is "confident that the restructured credit will not only repay the bank on a timely basis" but allow his personal investments to grow.

Little hope held for agreement to limit drilling off California coast

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — California congressmen said Tuesday that they have lost hope of reaching an agreement with Interior Department officials to limit future oil drilling off the state's coast but scheduled a final negotiating session to discuss strategies for presenting their differences to Congress.

"We are extremely far apart with regard to a substantive proposal," Rep. Mel Levine, D-Calif., said as he emerged from two hours of talks. "I do not believe an agreement can be reached."

Members said that they would hold one more meeting with Interior Department officials in hopes of achieving a so-called "process" compromise. These discussions may include an attempt to persuade the department to stop preparations for two offshore lease sales in 1988 — one off Mendocino and Humboldt Counties in the north, the other off Southern California — in return for agreeing not to seek a another drilling moratorium or for proposing only a limited ban.

Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., who has participated in the talks, said a "process" compromise might include a hiatus in which both sides would agree "to ice" their maneuvering while the Interior Department studied new options.

Interior officials and congressmen have failed in more than a dozen negotiating sessions to resolve the critical dispute over location and scope of future drilling — an issue that bears strong political, as well as environmental, overtones.

The anti-drilling forces believe that Republicans facing election in November will fear political fallout from the Reagan administration's offshore plans. "This could be a very crucial issue in those coastal communities," Rep. Leon E. Panetta, D-Calif., said.

Sen. James A. McClure, R-Idaho, said that both sides "agree we're not going to come to an agreement" on the specifics of future drilling. McClure, chairman of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, was one of 18 members of Congress who have tried to negotiate a drilling agreement with the Interior Department since February.

California congressmen have planned to ask the House Appropriations subcommittee on the interior later this month for a yearlong drilling ban. The full committee is to take up the issue later in the summer.

The Californians have offered to permit drilling in 173 nine-square-mile tracts, situated 15 to 28 miles off shore. Federal waters begin three miles from shore.

The Interior Department complained that the Californians' proposal would have tapped little more than 5 percent of the state's offshore oil. Interior officials proposed opening 670 tracts six miles from shore.

The recent round of negotiations began after a preliminary offshore compromise collapsed last summer and the Californians subsequently lost by one vote an attempt to win renewal of a drilling moratorium.

The earlier agreement, negotiated last spring by Interior Secretary Donald P. Hodel and California congressmen, called for leasing 150 new offshore tracts. The pact collapsed after Hodel withdrew his support, saying he had discovered that the tracts contained little oil.

Dillards grabs Hemphill-Wells local stores

LUBBOCK (UPI) — Dillard Department Stores Inc. has purchased Hemphill-Wells department stores in Lubbock and San Angelo and the remaining store in Lubbock probably will be closed, Hemphill-Wells owner Dan Griffis said.

Griffis said Wednesday that the 63-year-old company sold stores in malls in Lubbock and San Angelo to the Little Rock, Ark., company for about $10 million. A third store in downtown Lubbock probably will be closed, he said.

Dillard president Bill Dillard said the acquisition will allow the company to expand operations in Lubbock and establish its first store in San Angelo beginning July 13.

The Hemphill-Wells store in Lubbock's South Plains Mall will become the second Dillard's store in the mall, Dillard said. The two stores will be separate and have different product lines, but both will operate under the Dillards name by Jan. 1.

Dillard said that plans are to keep most of the employees at the former Hemphill Wells store.

Hemphill-Wells at one time operated three stores in Lubbock, two in San Angelo, one in Big Spring and another in Lufkin, but in recent years several of the stores were closed or sold off.

Chevron forecast predicts OPEC will control world oil market by year 2000

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Oil's share of energy use will decline in the United States through the year 2000, while coal consumption will rise to its highest since the late 1950s, Chevron Corp. analysts predicted Wednesday.

"Forecasting oil consumption and prices has been a hazardous occupation over the past 15 years because of dramatic changes in the industry," the company said in its newly released report, "World Energy Outlook."

A growing economy will cause U.S. energy consumption to increase about 1 percent a year until the year 2000, said the report, prepared by Chevron's economics department. But oil consumption is expected to increase at an average annual rate of only one-half percent during the same period, because other fuels will play an increasingly important role in domestic energy use.

By the turn of the century, coal will account for 27 percent of total energy supply, a level not seen since 1957, the report said.

Transportation, petrochemicals and other special uses will account for over 76 percent of total consumption by the turn of the century, the report predicted. Sources other than oil, including coal, gas, hydro and nuclear power, will provide 65 percent of the heat and 96 percent of the electricity required by the nation's growing populaton and economy.

Because the world's economy is extremely sensitive to disruptions in oil markets, "changes in global politics and government polices that are impossible to predict in scope or magnitude will continue to affect the international oil industry," the report said.

However, the report predicted that by the year 2000, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) crude production will supply 56 percent of total world demand.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Retirement stocks sold are taxed, less in '86

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I am a retired female, 64, and have $88,000 in certificates of deposit, $9,000 in a money market deposit account and various amounts of six stocks currently worth approximately $185,000. My small home is fully paid. My Social Security benefits are $5,532 annually.

I purchased all the stocks many years ago at much lower prices. I feel my stocks are high-risk investments for this stage of my life. Should I sell them? If so, how can that be accomplished, without paying a large tax?

Doyle

A. The decision on whether or not to sell has to be yours alone. If you're uncomfortable holding them and no longer want to have the risk that goes with stock ownership, the natural thing would be to sell and sock the money away in CDs or short-term U.S. Treasury securities.

However, my advice would be to keep the couple of top-quality stocks listed in your letter and unload the others. That way, you'll reduce your risk while holding on to the better stocks for potential future growth in value.

Assuming you are an honest person, there's no way you can avoid paying tax on the profit from the sale of stocks. Because you have owned the stocks for more than six months, your profit will be a long-term capital gain.

If you sell during 1986, 40 percent of that profit will be taxable. If that puts you into the top 50 percent federal income tax bracket, you'll have to hand 20 percent of your profit to the Internal Revenue Service. Or, you might be subject to the alternative minimum tax, which also works out to 20 percent.

Under the Senate Finance Committee's version of the tax reform bill now before Congress, the total amount of capital gains will become taxable next year and the top tax bracket will be 27 percent.

If the sale of those stocks would result in a huge profit, you'll probably come out ahead as far as taxes are concerned by selling this year.

Q. When I received a lump-sum distribution from a pension plan in January 1986, I choose not to put that money into a rollover individual retirement account. Instead, I planned to use the special 10-year averaging to reduce the income tax on the distribution.

The proposed tax reform bill would do away with that type of averaging, as well as averaging for people whose income in one year is sharply higher than their average income over the previous three year.

If that bill becomes law, will I lose the opportunity to use 10-year averaging?

A. Almost certainly, no. The tax reform bill's ban on both types of income averaging would take effect for the 1987 tax year. It should not be retroactive.

Note that I hedged the answer. There could be some changes in the proposed tax bill before it is signed into law. Nevertheless, it has to counted most unlikely income averaging will be killed for 1986.

• • •

Q. Two friends have told me that the accountants who prepare their income tax returns list deductions of $3,000 on the returns each year for gifts. My friends do not know how or why this is done. They just go along with the deductions. In fact, one friend's accountant had him file amended returns back for three years to claim those $3,000 deductions.

I have been been giving at least $3,000 per year to my children and naturally want to take advantage of all legitimate deductions. Can I deduct those gifts on my income tax return?

A. Absolutely, NO! Gifts to children or any other individuals cannot be taken as tax deductions. Only gifts to charities, religious organizations and such can be deducted — as contributions.

If your friends have not been making those large contributions listed on their tax returns, they'll be in big trouble if their returns are audited.

Man advertises for wife, ends search with marriage

GARDEN CITY, Kan. (AP) — Robert Todd, who advertised for a wife on a sign placed in the back of his red pickup truck, has finally tied the knot after a three-month search for a bride.

On a dare from a friend, the 56-year-old southwest Kansas man placed a sign in his truck that read: "Wife Wanted Desperately. I will Negotiate. Pudgy one preferred. Over 25."

In a civil ceremony Saturday, Elizabeth Ward, 44, married Todd. Hundreds of letters from women poured in but Todd said he picked his new wife because she was the only woman who walked up to his apartment and talked to him.

Lack of alternate energy research concerns energy experts

NEW YORK (AP) — On a 100-acre farm outside Naples, Fla., J.C. Caruthers and some friends are working on a Rube Goldberg-like plan to make white yams into lighter fluid for backyard grills.

The farm's cattle produce manure. The manure gives off methane gas, which fires a boiler. The boiler runs a still, which makes alcohol from the yams. And the gunk left in the still feeds the cattle, which produce more manure. And so on.

The part-time entrepreneurs have not actually sold any yam-based lighter fluid yet, but Caruthers says their Energy Research Institute will be well-placed for the inevitable rise in the price of oil — and oil-based lighter fluid.

"The public is very lethargic. Next time we're hit, it's going to be hard," he said.

The Energy Research Institute, founded by Caruthers in 1980, is a non-profit organization of individuals and companies with an interest in alternative energy sources. Its specialty is making alcohol for fuel.

Visionaries such as Caruthers, who makes his living as an architect, are scarce these days. The halving of world oil prices since November has boosted the American economy but weakened the nation's resolve to develop alternative sources of energy.

The drop-off in research and development concerns energy experts, especially since it comes at a time of a rising appetite for energy, a sharp cutback in exploration for oil and natural gas and the plugging of low-volume wells whose output has become uneconomical.

"I THINK WE'RE designing our next energy crisis," said Charles Hook, editor of the Review of New Energy Technology in Littleton, Colo.

Fred Ohr, an energy analyst for Alliance Capital Management Corp. in New York, said, "I hate to join the industry alarmists, but the fact of the matter is that ... our energy self-sufficiency is going to decline."

Elihu Bergman, executive director of Americans for Energy Independence, argues that the government should prop up development of alternative energy sources more.

"We're really not dealing in breakfast cereals and laundry detergent. This is an issue of economic security, an issue of national security," Bergman said.

But Ohr argues that government subsidies tend to create white elephants, pointing to the remnants of President Jimmy Carter's grand plans for oil shale and coal gasification. Carter's Synthetic Fuels Corp. officially died April 18, killed by cheap oil and technological glitches.

Most of the big spenders in energy research and development have reduced or flattened their budgets in recent years.

The petroleum industry's R&D budget, including projects unrelated to energy, has leveled off since the early 1980s at $2 billion or so a year, according to McGraw-Hill Inc.'s annual survey.

The federal Energy Department proposes to cut its spending on non-military energy research next fiscal year by about $340 million to slightly less than $1.5 billion, according to the department's budget office. The Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction act and weapons research spending have taken a toll.

RUNNING AGAINST THE trend, the nation's electric utilities, which benefit from cheaper fuel, boosted their research budget about 10 percent this year. The dollar amount spending, however, is far less than the oil companies'; the industry-financed Electric Power Research Institute in Palo Alto, Calif., is spending about $200 million in 1986 for research on energy generation, fuel sources and environmental controls.

Meanwhile, the focus of research is changing. Less money is going into renewable energy sources such as sun, wind and yams, which have never provided more than a fraction of 1 percent of the nation's energy needs. More money is going into traditional fuels such as coal, which produces 57 percent of the nation's electricity.

Favorite research projects these days range from a steam boiler that runs on a mixture of water and ammonia to a furnace that burns a coal-limestone blend roiled by giant jets of air. The latest experimental plants burn far more cleanly and cheaply than their predecessors.

Coal's contribution to U.S. electricity needs could rise to 70 percent by the end of the century, so building better coal plants could mean big savings in the nation's bill for energy and environmental cleanup.

Combustion of high-sulfur coal in older plants has been blamed by many scientists as a major factor in acid rain, which damages the environment.

IN THE HIGH desert of Daggett, Calif., an experimental coal plant producing electricity for Southern California Edison Co. is burning cheap and dirty high-sulfur coal and still producing far less pollution than ordinary coal plants.

The plant converts pulverized coal into a gas, a process that throws off heat to power a steam turbine. The coal gas is cleansed of 97 percent of its sulfur and then burned to power a second turbine.

In another plant design, fluidized-bed combustion, coal is mixed with limestone and burned while suspended off the floor on jets of air. The churning helps the limestone absorb sulfur from the coal, reducing pollution.

After more than 20 years of study and setbacks, the first large-scale commercial use of the process for coal should begin this year at Northern States Power Co.'s Black Dog plant near Minneapolis.

Oil remains the nation's No. 1 source of energy, even though it produces just 6 percent of the electricity, according to the federal Energy Information Center. More than half of oil goes into transportation fuels, so the biggest savings in oil are coming from less thirsty engines in cars, trucks, trains and planes.

The accident at the Soviet nuclear plant near Chernobyl deepened the gloom over nuclear energy, but even there research is continuing. The nuclear industry is looking at radical new designs for the 21st century while pinning its hopes for the remainder of this century on designing smaller, simpler plants with interchangeable parts.

Epilepsy eats away at sense of self-esteem

EDITOR'S NOTE: The subject of this story, who lives in Odessa, is currently awaiting the result of a request for Social Security benefits and asked to remain in anonymous in order to ensure a fair consideration of her case. In this article she will be referred to as Martha.

By JANE DEES
Staff Writer

ODESSA — She lifted herself off the bathroom floor and gazed into the mirror. The bridge of her nose was bruised greenish-black, her knees felt like "mush" and blood streamed down her chin. A huge knot on the side of her forehead grew larger each minute. Although Martha had no memory of the event, she knew instantly what had caused the injuries.

In the form of a seizure, her severe case of epilepsy had, for the third time that week, made its awesome presence known.

Epilepsy is not mental retardation. It is not a brain disorder, but rather a symptom of a brain disorder. It is not demonic possession nor is it contagious.

It does, however, eat away at one's self-esteem. It can scare away potential employers. And, It can cost upward of $500 a month in medical supervision and treatment.

Sadly, it can also mean sitting at home for days afraid of going out into the world and being made to feel like a "freak."

On a good day, one in which she hasn't had a seizure in 48 hours or so, Martha awakens at 3 a.m. She drags herself to the couch in the living room of the small Odessa home she shares with a roommate. There, she resigns herself to another day of taking her medication, eating Tylenol to make the headaches go away and watching music videos on television.

First diagnosed at the age of five, the 29-year-old-woman's case is compounded by the fact she has very little, if any, money to subsidize her ailment.

Employment is a major problem for epileptics. It isn't because they are not good workers, she said. Physically and mentally they can be just as capable as the non-epileptic.

HOWEVER, employers concerned with accident rates, absenteeism and increased worker's compensation costs may shy away from hiring an epileptic.

"I see their side," Martha said. "They can't deal with the thought of me having a seizure in front of a customer or my being absent the day after one," she said. It's gotten to the point, she added, that she is tired of trying to look for a job that she knows won't last very long.

"You don't tell them you're an epileptic to get hired," she said. "Then the minute you do have a seizure, they flip out and don't want anything to do with you ever again."

She states that some, but not all, of the doctors she's seen have not been as helpful as she expected, though, to a degree, she can understand why.

"I've been to five doctors recently concerning a fall down a flight of stairs last February. As soon as they found I didn't have money, they prescribed pain pills and sent me home, asking me once again how I was going to pay the bill. I understand why they are worried and that doctors can't live on credit, but what about me?"

There is no state or federal agency designated to help people with epilepsy. It is not covered by insurance policies because it is considered a "pre-acquired" condition, she said.

Social Security and Medicaid benefits are available, but financial assistance often comes only after a long trek through red tape and almost total exhaustion of personal assets, she said.

She has not been able to afford a complete "epileptic checkup" in 14 years. A checkup of this nature, according to Joanne Mundy, outreach case worker at the West Texas Epilepsy Association, would cost around $1,000; cash up front being the norm with not many exceptions accepted.

AN APPROXIMATE breakdown includes: $500 for a CAT scan (a computerized axial tomography which highlights the brain mass); $150 for a radiologist to read it; $45 for a complete blood count to determine the epileptic medicine levels in the blood; $135 for an EEG (electroencephalogram which charts the electric impulses made by the brain cells); $100 for the radiologist to read that and an additional $45 an hour for the doctor's presence.

The West Texas Epilepsy Association, headquartered here in Midland, provides a one-time monetary payment of $125 to epileptics who are unemployed or underemployed.

Persons in the process of applying for financial services from other agencies will receive interim payments as well, paid to the service provider and not to the client. This will probably not cover the bill, officials agree, considering monthly medication costs alone run her $70 a month.

Martha admits she sometimes asks God, "Why me?" She says she feels there are people in the world who have problems much more severe than she, and that God has reasons for everything that happens. "But if I had a wish, it would be for God to stop my seizures.

"I get depressed a lot of the time. It happens especially after I've had a seizure. I feel guilty for burdening my roommate, my mom, my brothers and my sister. They all loan me money and help me out emotionally and I'm thankful for that, but I still have a very hard time accepting it. After years and years of getting mad, I still sit on the couch sometimes and cry and try to convince myself that I don't have epilepsy anymore. I try to talk myself out of it and make it go away..."

THIS IS A major problem considering events comparable to her "drug store experience" two weeks ago. As she approached the pharmacy counter at the local Odessa drugstore she frequents for her medicine, she had a seizure. Upon awakening, the girl, in pain and disoriented, asked if there was a quiet room in the store where she could rest for awhile. After a 40-minute nap, she made her way out of the store.

Seconds later, she found a policeman staring her in the face and asking if he could search her pockets. It seems someone in the store suspected her of faking the traumatic seizure in order to coverup a sly shoplifting scheme.

Martha's case is extreme. There are records of epileptics not having seizures for sixteen years at a time.

But for Martha, life consists of regulations and deprivations. Happiness comes from the music she loves to listen to and from time spent playing with her niece and nephew or with her dog, Chewy.

She admits that she tried on several occasions to end it all, and adds she wonders if there's an epileptic with a case such as hers who hasn't. For her, a hardheaded attitude has somehow prevailed, illustrated by her summation of an average seizure.

"When I fall and hit the ground during a seizure, the floor cracks."

Epilepsy disorder of nervous system

From Staff Reports

Following are facts and figures about epilepsy as compiled by the Epilepsy Foundation of America in Landover, Md.

1. Epilepsy is a disorder of the central nervous system. Brain cells (neurons) create abnormal electrical discharges that cause seizures (temporary loss of control over certain body functions).

2. Epilepsy affects more than two million Americans and can affect anyone. Eighty percent of people with epilepsy have their symptoms totally or partially controlled through continuing treatment. The disease does not affect a person's general health.

3. Scientists know how seizures occur, but they don't know why. They do know epilepsy can be related to:
— Damage to the central nervous system before, during or just after birth;
— Defects in the brain present at birth;
— Head injuries that occur at any age;
— Poisons including lead and alcohol;
— Diseases such as measles or encephalitis;
— Disorders of the circulatory system;
— Tumors found in the brain;
— Poor nutrition or disturbances in the metabolism;
— Some cases occur where no causes can be found.

4. Anyone can develop seizures at any time, but most often they first appear early in life. Males are slightly more likely to have epilepsy, perhaps because they're more likely to have head injuries in sports and at work. Heredity is usually not a factor, but some kinds of brain wave patterns associated with seizures do run in families.

5. Seizures are classified in five categories:
— Symptomatic can be traced to a specific cause (such as a tumor or injury);
— Idiopathic can't be traced to any precise underlying cause;
— Partial affects only part of the brain;
— Generalized affects consciousness and may affect total muscle control;
— Unilateral affects only one side of the body;

6. When someone with epilepsy has a convulsive seizure:
— Don't try to restrain the person; ease them to the floor;
— Remove hazards that can cause injury if the person falls or knocks against them;
— Don't move the person unless the area is clearly dangerous. Loosen tight clothing and remove glasses;
— Protect airways by turning the person on his or her side so any fluid in the mouth can drain safely. Never try to force open the mouth;
— Unless the person seems to have one seizure after another, without regaining consciousness or the seizure lasts longer than 10 minutes, don't call a doctor or ambulance;
— When the seizure ends, let the person rest or sleep if he or she wishes. Tell the person he or she had a seizure and be calm and reassuring because the person may feel embarrassed or disoriented after an attack.

7. Epilepsy isn't curable, but most cases can be partly or completely controlled by:
— Anticonvulsant drugs;
— Diet;
— Surgery (used in selected cases when the seizures are caused in a single small part of the brain that can be removed safely);

8. Living with epilepsy will be easier for people when everyone comes to understand that all persons have the same needs, abilities and goals. People with epilepsy are really no different from anyone else.

Fireworks for Fourth

As the Fourth of July approaches, fireworks stands have opened near Midland. Rich Dolan shows some of his products to Benny Maldonado, eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Diego Maldonado. The stand is located on South Rankin Highway. City officials warn potential celebrants that is against local ordinances to set off fireworks within the city limits.

Milk industry promotes milk products during dairy month

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

June is dairy month, which means the milk industry is intent on raising people's consciousness of milk and other dairy products.

The industry also hopes to increase dairy-food sales for the public's health and its profits. It cites the "product safety program" of the milk industry, points out that dairy products "are not 'high' in cholesterol," and focuses on the nutritional qualities of milk, cheeses, yogurt, ice cream and other dairy products.

Midland dairyman Roy Neely noted that today the value of milk and milk products is "getting bigger play in medical circles as a source of calcium" and in the prevention of osteoporosis — weakening of bones in adults.

"Milk is a great source of protein — a super source of protein," Neely said. "It's really a super diet food, because of high protein.

Milk, he said, is "easily digestible. It's a great all-around beverage. If one is not looking to be slender, whole milk is good; it's great. Ice cream has that wonderful flavor of cream."

Neely, who operates Midland County's only dairy, the Roy Roy Dairy, said that "milk is nature's most perfect food."

"WHAT IS THE purpose of milk other than nutrition?" Neely asked. He cited milk as the sole source of food for young mammals, including human babies.

"You can't make the same argument for caffeine drinks, teas, soft drinks. Orange juice is great," he said, but is not the whole food which milk is.

"Milk is the food — the nutritional source of food of the newborn, who learn to eat meat if they are carnivores and to eat leaves (and grasses) if they are vegetarians."

Miriam Curry, nutrition consultant for the Associated Milk Producers Inc. in Midland, said that the "main reason" people should include milk in their diets is for the benefits of calcium, protein and riboflavin — a growth-promoting B vitamin.

"Milk has a quality of protein comparable to that found in meat," she said. "And if you're worried about the fat-content of milk, there are countless varieties of low-fat milk products, such as yogurt, low-fat cheeses and cottage cheese, low-fat and skim milks. There is even a low-fat chocolate-flavored milk."

"The need for calcium exists 'til the day you die," Ms. Curry said. "It is necessary for replacing bones cells and regulating muscle contractions, and the No. 1 muscle we are concerned about is the heart. Milk is the best source of calcium that is available."

Woman in critical condition after shooting incident

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A 21-year-old Midland woman listed in critical condition early Thursday was apparently the victim of an assault in what was first termed a suicide attempt. The woman was shot late Wednesday following an argument and was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital, police said. Reports said the woman was shot in the right temple after a disagreement with a man in the 4400 block of Tanforan.

The man, who is listed as a suspect in the case, told police the woman shot herself in the head after the two fought; she had apparently packed several suitcases and called a taxicab when the incident happened, officers said.

Also around 10:30 p.m. Wednesday, shots were reportedly fired at Midland County Sheriff deputies near the intersection of Michigan and Lee streets, after authorities were reportedly attempting to locate several burglary suspects. A man was arrested for aggravated assault on a peace officer, and is in custody at the Midland County Jail. Formal charges against the man are expected to be filed later today.

A robbery and attempted robbery were reported to police late Wednesday. Carlota Mata, an employee at Gonzales Grocery, 1102 Walnut Ln., told police a man entered the store shortly before 8:30 p.m., and said he was carrying a pistol. According to police, the man took $40 cash, then left. The suspect is described as a black male, 25 years old, between five and five feet inches tall. He was wearing a pink short-sleeved shirt, blue jeans and a black hat.

Forty dollars in cash was reported stolen from the Stop'N'Go convenience store at 2110 W. Front St. about 11:45 p.m. Wednesday. An employee said the man, who according to reports was not armed, fled north on foot. He was described as a black male, about 26 years old, tall, weighing about 185 pounds. He was last seen wearing a yellow T-shirt and blue jeans.

In other reports, police have a suspect in the burglary of Timmy's Market, 1411 N. LaMesa Rd, which occurred sometime between 11 p.m. Wednesday and 1 a.m. this morning. Fifty cartons of cigarettes valued at $500, five six-packs of beer valued at $20, and various items valued at $50 were taken.

Robert L. Gary of 1822 E. Magnolia told police a 12 gauge, single-barrel shotgun valued at $200 was taken from his residence sometime between 8:30 and 10:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Calling me 'hoss' sets imagination galloping

They call me hoss, which absolutely delights me. It's exhilarating. It zooms my mind's-eye to lofty heights and, with great relief, lifts me out of reality.

For an instance, all is beyond well and good. The ethereal life in which the images of hoss sends me is dazzling. In a sense, it reminds me of the modern adage, "If you can't dazzle them with brilliance, baffle them with bull."

Ah, the imagination is a wondrous thing. It allows for vicarious living and can be exciting.

But, as I'm beginning to discover, it's not the whole world. Living in the real world is not totally intolerable as long as I can reasonably match my honesty with reality — the real me with the real world. Discovering both, I'm convinced, is a life-long and elusive task. It's somewhat like hoping for progress while striving for perfection.

Now, reality for me is not as undesirable as it once was. For quite a few years, it was an almost unbearable bore. I found more escapes than a reasonable person ought to. I found adventure in sauntering through saloon thresholds and philosophizing on bar stools 'til stagnation set in. I found excitement behind closed doors in just pondering what I was going to do — someday. That's called procrastination. I'd escape through reading and still do, but more and more, I seek discovery of bits and bits of reality. I fancied flying high while sitting quite still.

Romance. How, I dreamt of romance — the classic romance of "forever in love." Getting involved in romance is far more rewarding than just dreaming despite the unavoidable risks involved.

Actually, I guess I have been living on the fringes of reality all of my life. I didn't always like it; I still don't. It's so close to reality. But today, I am not avoiding reality even though I really don't savor pain. But it seems that the pangs of pain always are there if we grow mentally, emotionally, spiritually, and physically.

But we need not suffer. There's work and pain in studying, in performing jobs, in building relationships, in dissolving what once was, and in rebuilding. There also is joy and rewards.

I suppose I simply wasn't always aware of the reality which I now know.

My old reality was akin to the "Let's Pretend" game, which was but a fleeting fancy. "Pretend enough, and fantasy will turn into reality," I suppose I thought. No more. Take action.

Though somewhat feebly, today I am putting aside pretense and, alternatingly, am flinging headlong and with caution into reality. It's called living, not bellying up, not giving up, steaming along with purpose, and taking action in all areas of my life. If I fall, I get up. "Never give up," as Winston Churchill said. It's called making the best of any situation, including dreaded predicaments and favorable circumstances. If there are problems, there are solutions.

It's called enjoying life and showing concern for others and keeping regrets to a minimum by consciously trying to do what is right, which, with God's help, I might do every now and then.

So, they call me hoss.

The "they" is the newspaper's esteemed and personable West Virginian, the 6-foot-3 Chief Photographer Ron Jaap, and his staff of hawkeyed photographers. They flatter me. I haven't figured out if hoss is for what I do, what I project, or what I wish for. But I'm content with the impression that I'm a romantic who savors adventure and who adores the company of charming ladies and genteel gentlemen. I am blessed. I do love a good woman.

And despite my occasional disgruntlement, I do enjoy my work: intermingling with the good people of this Earth and writing — trying out my penchant for putting words on paper, trying to make sense out the language, and seeing what happens. That is adventuresome. And, as if a real hoss, I am enjoying expanding into life's reality treasures in my mind and by doing — from flying high at day to running at dusk to pondering by night.

Never give up, hoss. Never.

'Anti-French feeling' hurts exchange program

By KEN HERMAN

AUSTIN (AP) — French students might not get to spend the summer in Texas because some Texans are upset that U.S. planes were not allowed to fly over France en route to the Libyan bombing mission, exchange program officials say.

"There's a lot of anti-French feeling," said Carol Ann Carl of Austin, Texas coordinator for Nacel Cultural Exchanges.

The program is 50 homes short of the 250 needed in Texas. Coordinators in other states also report unprecedented problems in finding American families to host the French students.

Last year, Nacel found summer homes in the United States for 5,607 French students in 45 states. The nonprofit corporation also found summer homes in France for 1,450 American students.

Frenchman Pascal Le Vigoureux, Nacel's director, said he expected negative reaction to his government's decision to ban the bombers from French air space.

"When I first heard what happened with Libya, my first reaction as a Frenchman was, I was appalled. I knew how badly this decision would hurt our image in the United States. I felt sorry and I felt very guilty. What I thought would happen to the program did happen, and it happened in Texas," he said in a telephone interview during his recent visit to Nacel's U.S. office in Minnesota.

"I understand the Texas reaction extremely well, but I have worked for so many years to develop ties between France and the U.S. that I cannot accept this," said Le Vigoureux, a former English teacher in France.

Ms. Carl said she gets second-hand information about the anti-French sentiment. Families that have hosted French students in the past hear it when they ask friends to be hosts this year, she said.

"They are told, 'How can you be involved after what the French did to us,'" Ms. Carl said.

She said part of the problem is the state's economic slump.

But Le Vigoureux said, "It doesn't seem to me the economic crisis has anything to do with it. It is a reaction to the French attitude regarding the Libyan problem."

JoLane Luetchens, Nacel's coordinator in Lincoln, Neb., said she faces similar problems.

"Yes, it's been slower this year than usual. It doesn't tend to be told directly, and I don't know what the influence might be. But I know people have very strong feelings about that," she said of the French decision in the Libyan incident.

"My initial concern was what it meant to world peace. Then I realized the effects to the program," she said.

Nacel is about 50 homes short of the 335 it needs in Kansas and Nebraska, according to Ms. Luetchens.

Judy Morgan, Nacel's Tulsa coordinator, said the program is going well in Oklahoma this year, so well that, "I am trying to find some homes in Oklahoma for some of the kids scheduled to go to Texas."

Le Vigoureux said Texas is among the favorite states for the French teens. It took only two weeks in January for all 250 Texas slots to be filled.

"They know about 'Dallas,' the TV show and they know about Paris, Texas. It is something very striking to them. The Texan is known all over the world as such a personality. Our teens want to go there to discover that culture. They think they will meet cowboys," he said.

"When we have to tell them they might not be able to go, it will be terrible. The kids will cry," he said.

DAIRY

In addition, Ms. Curry noted that "Milk is safe. In the technological processes through which milk must go between the cow and the consumers, there is no fault there."

"CONSUMERS HAVE a right to be concerned about food safety," said the AMPI.

"Because milk is both perishable and essential to a healthy diet, it is tested more than other food," says the AMPI.

In the olden days, the Romans brought winter ice down from the Alps, stored it in caves, and used the ice to keep food from spoiling. In the Middle Ages, many smoking, salting, drying and preserving techniques were refined The fruitcake, studded with dried fruits and steeped in rum or brandy to retard mold, is an example of preservation.

Today, refrigeration and processing techniques have simplified food safety.

"Government inspections and strict standards within the food industry make a decisive difference, too. Americans now enjoy the safest, most wholesome and abundant food supply in the world," noted the AMPI. "The dairy industry is the most regulated of all food industries."

Government inspectors closely monitor the dairy operation "down on the farm" and follow through in the milk-processing plants.

"No other food is more closely scrutinized or more carefully monitored than milk and milk products," said the AMPI.

The milk industry emphasizes the benefits of calcium in milk.

"Unfortunately, there remains a lingering concern that in consuming more dairy foods to obtain calcium, we may also be consuming excessive fat and cholesterol."

HOWEVER, AMPI maintains that "dairy foods are not 'high' in cholesterol. Only 16 percent of cholesterol in the American diet comes from dairy foods, said AMPI.

One serving of eight ounces of milk or yogurt, one ounce of cheese or one-half cup of regular ice cream has less cholesterol than a three-ounce serving of chicken — a food often recommended for low-cholesterol diets.

"As a matter of fact," said AMPI, "the human body manufactures two-thirds of its own cholesterol. Only one-third comes from the food we eat."

In addition, dairy foods provide only 11 percent of America's dietary fat, while the food category known as "others," which includes cake, cookies and chips, supplies almost a third. One glass of whole milk or one ounce of cheese has less fat than one tablespoon of mayonnaise, 15 potato chips or one doughnut.

"The really good news is that...dairy foods supply 74 percent of the calcium, 37 percent of the riboflavin, 21 percent of the protein, 20 percent of the magnesium and several other vitamins and minerals, but only 10 percent of the calories available in our food supply," according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, said the AMPI.

The "best advice" is to eat "a moderate, well-balanced diet comprised of a variety of different foods," said AMPI.

"Nutritionists recommend choosing foods from the Four Food Groups each day — two to four servings from the milk group, depending upon one's age; two servings from the meat group, four servings of vegetables and fruit, and four servings of bread and cereals."

Chicago 'bag man' gives collection to Smithsonian

CHICAGO (AP) — Most people take shopping bags for granted, but a Chicago man believes they're art — and so does the Smithsonian Institution.

Stephen Wagner is donating his collection of more than 2,000 paper bags — all but a few favorites — to the Smithsonian's Cooper-Hewitt Museum of Design in New York.

The bags feature reproductions of works by Andy Warhol, Henri Toulouse-Lautrec, Walt Disney and others.

"Most people think of shopping bags as something stores just print up. But the shopping bag has gone beyond that," he said.

"We feel that shopping bags are one of the most au courant — or, I should say, up-to-date — ways for a museum to keep up with trends in graphic design," said Elaine Evans Dee, curator of drawings and prints at Cooper-Hewitt.

Wagner, 31, said he began noticing interesting graphic designs on shopping bags around 1978. Then he found himself keeping the most exciting ones.

"I became aware that I was holding on to more and more of them," said Wagner, who has a degree in art from the University of Texas where he concentrated on graphic communication.

"It will probably take at least a dozen boxes" to ship the collection to Cooper-Hewitt, said Wagner, a retailer and free-lance artist. The bags now are piled up at his home and in storage space provided by a friend.

Wagner's collection includes bags from the 1984 Republican and Democratic national conventions, and from the Summer Olympics in Los Angeles.

But some of the best ones are produced for Christmas, he said.

Items valued at $400 were reported stolen from a vehicle late Wednesday. Cynthia Ann Stuart of #5 Chatham Ct. in Midland told police a Seiko watch valued at $250, $80 cash, two billfolds valued at $50, a purse valued at $20, and eight credit cards were stolen about 9:20 p.m. from a vehicle parked at 2500 Haynes.

The Midland County Sheriff's Office Thursday also reported a theft and a burglary which occurred Wednesday. Oscar Flores, of County Road 116 at County Road 1207, reported items valued at $4,500 were stolen from the bed of his 1984 Ford pickup truck early Wednesday. Flores told authorities a tool box and various tools were apparently stolen sometime between 1 a.m. and 6 a.m. Wednesday.

Items valued at $280 were reported stolen from a Midland business early Wednesday. According to reports, a 20-gauge shotgun valued at $250 and $30 in coins from a soft drink machine were taken from the K-Span Corp., 1806 Cloverdale. Entry was apparently gained by breaking the glass of the front door.

State traffic safety plan submitted

AUSTIN (AP) — The larger portion of a $16 million traffic safety plan submitted to the U.S. Department of Transportation would increase enforcement of DWI laws and the 55-mph speed limit, the state highway department said Wednesday.

If the plan, submitted Wednesday by the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation, is approved in Washington the federal government will furnish almost $13 million, while local communities will furnish $1.2 million and the state $1.9 million.

Under the plan, 37 percent of the funds, including $788,999 from local communities.

Folk festival will include artist's 'Animal Crackers'

From Staff Reports

The Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce's Folk Festival is slated for 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Saturday at the Midland County Exhibit Building.

Local artist Charlotte Seay will be among those exhibiting artwork.

Included in her exhibit will be her new series of "Animal Crackers," a collection of miniature animal watercolors. Each painting depicts a different animal whimsically portrayed in vibrant colors.

"My interest and curiosity in animals and their personalities was piqued when I did extensive research for two oil-painted, three-dimensional wall hangings. These paintings depicted animals of the Amazon region of Brazil, titled 'Amazonia,' and animals of the National Wildlife Refuge in Tanzania, titled 'Serengeti,'" said Mrs. Seay in a press release.

"I developed a deep and abiding appreciation for the wildlife of our world and really became aware of how closely associated with the animal kingdom we humans are. We keep chipping away at their natural habitats and with each encroachment, we chip away more each day at their quality of life for us all on this earth. A life without God's creatures would be lifeless," she said.

Mrs. Seay has exhibited at the Allison Fine Arts Gallary at Midland College, Odessa College, Midland Arts Association Spring Shows, Celebration of the Arts and at the Hummingbird Gallery in Marble Falls.

Mrs. Seay currently serves as vice president and program chairman for the Midland Arts Association.

Motion denied in murder case against Odessa man

RAPID CITY, S.D. (AP) — Circuit Judge Roland Grosshans Wednesday denied a defense motion to suppress evidence in the murder and attempted murder case against Jimmy D. Weatherford, 27, of Odessa, Texas.

Grosshans also took under advisement a defense motion that Weatherford's arrest in Keystone by a Rapid City police officer early March 23 was illegal.

The judge will take more testimony Aug. 7 on a defense motion to suppress statements made by Weatherford after his arrest. The defense said the statements were obtained by deception.

Weatherford has pleaded innocent and innocent by reason of mental illness to first-degree murder and two counts of attempted murder in the March 22 shooting death of Angela Koricanek, 27, also of Odessa, and the wounding of two Rapid City residents, Talia Ann Haefs, 23, and David Engebrecht, 25.

The suppression motion denied Wednesday had challenged the Rapid City police department's use of a single photo to identify Weatherford as the man spotted in a local bar just hours before the shootings, according to Dennis Groff, Pennington County state's attorney. He said the judge decided that it was a proper way to identify the defendant and that people in the bar distinctly remembered Weatherford and Ms. Koricanek.

John Wenande, a police officer, testified he used a single photograph on orders of a supervisor. Otherwise, he said he would have used several photos for a line-up.

Groff said the defense filed 13 motions. Several routine motions were allowed Wednesday and others await the judge's rulings.

Weatherford is challenging his arrest by a Rapid City police officer in Keystone, outside the department's jurisdiction. But the prosecution feels the officer could make the arrest because he was part of a tactical team that was in fresh pursuit of Weatherford, Groff said.

Several people who had seen Weatherford at a bar east of Rapid City on March 22 testified Wednesday during the motions hearing.

Weatherford is scheduled for trial Sept. 2.

'Repo man' linked to five sexual assaults

AUSTIN (AP) — Austin police say a man who poses as an employee of a car repossession firm is responsible for five reported sexual assaults and attempted assaults during the past two months.

Police said the man, described as a serial type assailant, was nearly captured last week by a private security guard, but escaped just moments before officers could arrest him.

"We're about to pull our hair out," said Lt. Robert Jasek of the sex crimes detail. "We're asking for the public's help."

Surfers hitting waves; Island residents leave

GALVESTON (AP) — Surfers were hitting the waves but most of the residents in this island community were boarding up their homes and heading for higher ground as Hurricane Bonnie neared the Texas coast.

"We do it everytime. It's not as good (the waves) as in the past but we're going to stay here until dark and come back in the morning if we can," said 17-year-old Mark Nix of Houston, who along with his friend, Alex Cummings, 17, of Houston, enjoyed the high tides Wednesday.

The tides along the island were coming in by late afternoon and some roads were already covered with water so the few people on the beach were packing their gear and leaving.

Bonnie, the season's first hurricane, was expected to strike land sometime Thursday, and few people were taking the storm lightly.

Ann Diner, of Dallas, said her beach house on Jamaica Beach was leveled during Hurricane Alicia in 1983. Parts of her home also tore up her neighbors' homes.

"I lost my home in Alicia and I'm a little paranoid about staying this time," she said. "We rebuilt it because we love it here. But I don't think I love it enough to rebuild it again."

Ms. Diner said she and her neighbors had learned a lesson after Alicia and everyone was leaving.

Batteries and flashlights were in demand at local stores along with gasoline and drinking water. Officials advised residents on the west end of the island not protected by the city's sea wall to evacuate.

The hurricane's center hit south of Port Arthur 4:45 a.m. this morning, according to the National Weather Service in Galveston.

"I think it's dumb to stay if it gets that close. I'm going," said Richard Polly, a resident of Pirate's Beach on the west end of Galveston. "Several of my neighbors stayed during (Hurricane) Alicia, but they're all going this time."

Polly said three homes near his were destroyed when Alicia struck. Thirteen people in Southeast Texas were killed when that hurricane hit.

Hurricane warnings were in effect Wednesday for a 270-mile strip of coast from west of Morgan City, La., to Freeport, the weather service said. Elsewhere, gale warnings of 80 mph and a hurricane watch were posted from the mouth of the Mississippi River to Port O'Connor.

Galveston Deputy Sheriff Duran Folks, who patrols the west side of the island, said he and his wife patroled the area until midnight during Alicia. As they were leaving, their 1980 Cadillac was hit by tide and washed off the road before landing in a ditch. The couple got out of their car and started to walk to higher ground when another tide hit them. They survived by tying themselves to a sign using his gun belt.

"You can definitely say that we're not going to stay this time," Folks said.

Audrey last June hurricane to strike Texas coast

Associated Press

A June hurricane is unusual for Texas — but not unheard of. Bonnie's assault on the upper Texas coast came 19 years after Hurricane Audrey killed 10 people and caused $8 million damage as it came ashore at Sabine Pass.

Three years earlier, in 1954, Hurricane Alice caused severe flooding in the Rio Grande Valley after hitting the Mexican coast below Matamoros.

No hurricane has hit Texas earlier than June or later than October, records show, and August and September are the most active months for such activity.

It was in September of 1900 that the great Galveston Hurricane killed between 6,000 and 8,000 people in what is called the worst natural disaster in U.S. history. Fifteen years later, in August, another storm scored a direct hit on the island city, killing 275.

A century ago, in August 1886, the thriving port city of Indianola was wiped from the face of the Earth by the second hurricane to hit it within 11 years.

Here is a list of major hurricanes that have affected the Texas gulf coast:

Aug. 28, 1983; Hurricane Barry; south of Brownsville; center moved inland over northern Mexico.

Aug. 18, 1983; Hurricane Alicia; Galveston-Houston; 22 dead, $1.2 billion damage.

Aug. 9, 1980; Hurricane Allen; lower coast; extreme intensity; 2 dead, $55 million damage; winds 185 mph.

Sept. 3-12, 1971; Hurricane Fern; Middle Coast; 2 dead, $30.2 million damage.

Aug. 3, 1970; Hurricane Celia; Corpus Christi; extreme intensity; 11 dead, $50 million damage; wind gusts to 160 mph.

Sept. 18-23, 1967; Hurricane Beulah; Brownsville; extreme intensity; 13 dead, $150 million damage.

Sept. 16-20, 1963; Hurricane Cindy; Port Arthur; no deaths; $11.6 million damage; 24 inches of rain in Jefferson, Orange and Newton counties.

Sept. 11-13, 1961; Hurricane Carla; Port O'Connor; extreme intensity; 34 dead. $300 million damage; wind gusts estimated at 175 mph, storm tide 18.5 feet at Port Lavaca.

July 22-27, 1959; Hurricane Debra; Galveston, $6 million damage.

June 27, 1957; Hurricane Audrey; Sabine Pass; 10 dead, $8 million damage.

June 26-28, 1954; Hurricane Alice; Rio Grande Valley; storm struck Mexico but heavy rainfall in Southwest Texas caused severe flooding on middle Rio Grande.

Oct. 3-4, 1949; Freeport-Houston; 2 dead, $6.5 million damage; wind gusts estimated at 135 mph, storm tide of 11.5 feet at Freeport.

Aug. 25-29, 1945; Port O'Connor; extreme intensity; 3 dead, $20.1 million damage; wind gusts estimated at 135 mph, storm tide of 15 feet at Port Lavaca.

July 27, 1943; Galveston; 19 dead, $16.6 million damage.

Aug. 29-31, 1942; Matagorda Bay; 8 dead; $26.5 million damage; winds 115 mph, storm tide 14.7 feet at Matagorda.

Sept. 23, 1941; Texas City; 4 dead, $6.5 million damage.

July 25, 1934; Seadrift; 19 dead, $4.5 million damage.

Sept. 4-5, 1933; Brownsville; 40 dead, $16.9 million damage.

Sept. 14, 1919; south of Corpus Christi; extreme intensity; 284 dead, $20.3 million damage; winds 110 mph, storm tide 16 feet. Aug. 13-14, 1932; Velasco (Freeport); 40 dead; $7.5 million damage.

Aug. 18-19, 1916; Corpus Christi; extreme intensity; 20 dead, damage $1.6 million.

Aug. 16-19, 1915; Galveston; extreme intensity; 275 dead; 100 missing; damage over $56 million. Most losses ($50 million) to crops. Heavy rainfall, with maximum of 19.83 inches at San Augustine; storm tide 16.1 feet.

July 21-22, 1909; Velasco (Freeport); 41 dead, damage at least $2 million.

Sept. 8-10, 1900; Galveston; extreme intensity; 6,000-8,000 dead; damage $30 million - $40 million. Storm surge 15-20 feet, winds estimated at 120 mph.

Aug. 19-21, 1886; Indianola; extreme intensity, deaths and damage unknown. City destroyed and never rebuilt.

Oct. 12-13, 1880; Brownsville nearly destroyed with many lives lost.

Aug. 12-14, 1880; center struck Matamoros, Mex., but damage along lower Texas coast. Deaths and damage unknown.

Sept. 15-18, 1875; indianola; extreme intensity; 176 dead, three-fourths of town swept away by flooding from the bay.

Oct. 3, 1867; south of Galveston, but severe damage all along coast. Towns of Bagdad and Clarksville destroyed. Unknown number of deaths, damage estimated at $1 million.

Sept. 19, 1854; Matagorda; deaths and damage unknown, but all buildings in town were destroyed and many ships in harbor were sunk.

Aug. 6, 1844; mouth of Rio Grande; 70 dead; unknown damage.

CAN YOU IDENTIFY CLASSIC T.V. THEME SONGS?

GAME RULES:

The Midland Reporter-Telegram, A.M. 1510 KMND. Memory Music T.V. Game is based on skill in identifying (6) T.V. show theme songs each week. There will be 12 weekly games beginning Monday, April 7th and ending Friday, June 27th. There will be weekly 1st, 2nd, and 3rd place winners.

Two excerpts from each of the (6) T.V. show theme songs will be broadcast over A.M. 1510 KMND each week. Excerpts will be broadcast at least six, times daily between 6:00 AM and 6:00 PM Monday through Friday. Each show's two excerpts will be broadcast at least twice during the week, with both excerpts from each theme (12 total) being broadcast at least once by 6:00 PM Thursday of each week.

Excerpts will be numbered one through six. The answer (the title of the show) must be printed or typed on the correspondingly numbered line on the official Midland Reporter-Telegram A.M. 1510 KMND. Memory Music TV Game Entry Form. Each week's official entry form will be published Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday in the Midland Reporter-Telegram. Hand drawn facsimilies of the entire entry form will be acceptable, BUT MACHINE DUPLICATED COPIES ARE PROHIBITED.

CONTESTANTS MAY ENTER ONLY ONCE PER WEEK. The weekly game number must be marked on the lower left of the envelope on the address side. Envelopes must be postmarked by midnight Friday of each week. NO POSTAGE MACHINE CANCELLED ENVELOPES WILL BE ACCEPTED. ONLY ENVELOPES BEARING THE CORRECT POSTAGE AND CANCELLED BY THE U.S. POSTAL SERVICE OR ENTRIES HAND DELIVERED TO THE CONTEST ADDRESS BY 6:00 AM SATURDAY WILL BE ACCEPTED.

The weekly first prize will be awarded to the entrant with the most or all (6) TV shows correctly identified. In the case that more than one entrant has all the shows correctly identified a drawing will be held. 2nd and 3rd will be awarded to the two entrants with the most correct answers respectively. Again in the case more than one entrant having identified all (6) TV shows, a drawing will be held to determine 2nd and 3rd place winners.

The correct answer and the theme song itself along with the two excerpts will be played back twice on A.M. 1510 KMND Saturday morning between 6:00 A.M. and noon. Answers will also be published in Sunday's Midland Reporter Telegram. Weekly winners will be announced each Wednesday afternoon by A.M. 1510 KMND and in the Midland Reporter-Telegram

It is not necessary to purchase the Midland Reporter-Telegram to play the game. Copies of the MRT are available for free examination at the Midland Reporter-Telegram, 201 East Illinois and the Midland County Public Library.

All winners must sign a release form acknowledging that both the Midland Reporter-Telegram and A.M. 1510 KMND shall have the right to publish, publicize and broadcast his/her name, picture, voice and the fact that he/she won a prize. If the winner is a minor, a parent or guardian must sign a minor's release form prior to the prize being awarded. Winners are responsible for all taxes incurred on prizes.

Judge's decisions will be final in any interpretation of the rules of this game. Employees of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Bakcor Broadcasting, Inc. and members of their immediate families are ineligible. The Grand Prize, a cruise on The Mississippi or Delta Queen Steamboat is worth up to $4,000. Does not include bar tab, shore tours or gift shop purchases. It may be used at your convenience based on a 30 day space available basis. It includes round trip airfare to New Orleans. Cruise must be taken by April 1, 1987. Grand prize may not be exchanged.

The winner of the cruise will be determined by a drawing at the end of all 12 weekly games. All weekly 1st, 2nd, and 3rd prize winners will be entered in the drawing.

Now your child can master algebra. With help from Sylvan Learning Center.

When problems with algebra threaten to hold your child back, you need to find a solution. Fast Because the longer you wait, the further behind your child will fall.

Sylvan Learning Center can help. We'll teach your child to conquer the basics of algebra—and give him or her a better start toward a successful future.

The first step: An appraisal of your child's current abilities. We begin by pinpointing your child's strengths and weaknesses in numeration, fractions, multiplication, time and measurement. We test for auditory discrimination and vision as well.

Then, based on the test results, we tailor an algebra program to meet your child's needs.

The duration of the program varies. Your child may need to review and reinforce basic math skills before proceeding to the algebra phase.

A proven effective program. The algebra program consists of pre-identified skills arranged in sequential order, on computer disks specially designed by Sylvan.

Your child's lessons begin at the level we know he or she can handle. And they progress at a pace that will be challenging, but not overwhelming.

The program is directed by a fully certified teacher along with specially trained instructors. There are never any more than three students per teacher, so your child is guaranteed personal attention whenever answers, support, praise or encouragement is needed.

You'll be kept informed. Your child will be rewarded. You and your child's regular classroom teacher will be kept regularly informed of your child's progress in algebra.

When a lesson is done right or a tough problem is finally overcome, your child's achievement will be rewarded with a token, good toward gifts from the Sylvan Store. Students can redeem the tokens right away, or save for things they want.

You'll see the difference! The results of Sylvan instruction show up not just on the report card, but also in a reward proudly displayed, an exciting recounting of the day's lesson... and a whole new self-confidence and desire to learn that you may never have seen—or thought possible—before.

The Sylvan program is individualized. Your child can start any time. If you want to see your child do better, the time is now.

Three indicted under Open Meeting law

MARBLE FALLS, Texas (AP) — A Burnet County grand jury has indicted the mayor and three aldermen on charges of violating the Texas Open Meeting law.

Named in the indictment were Mayor Kenneth McKinney and Aldermen Eugene Yett, Robert Stover Sr. and Tony Hogue, said a spokeswoman with the Burnet County Sheriff's Department.

The grand jury recommended bond be set at $1,000 apiece. Violation of the Open Meeting law is a misdemeanor.

"I have not been officially notified, so I have to remain mute," McKinney said Wednesday. "I do not feel I violated the law."

The state Open Meeting law requires governmental bodies to post advance notices of meetings even when officials plan to gather behind closed doors.

The Tuesday indictments stem from an incident last week in which McKinney and Hogue asked City Administrator Jack Chaney to resign. An area newspaper, The Highlander, filed suit, alleging the city officials violated the Open Meetings law.

After the suit was filed, the council voted 3-2 to reject Chaney's resignation.

McKinney said the move for Chaney's resignation followed a series of phone calls the preceding night.

"I had three councilmen call me and they each said they wanted a meeting" to discuss Chaney's performance, McKinney said.

"I asked each one of them if they minded if I approached him (Chaney) and ask for his resignation," he said, adding that all three aldermen agreed he should talk to Chaney.

McKinney said the next day he and Hogue asked the city administrator for his resignation. The three men agreed at that time that a cash settlement of $4,200 would be given to Chaney after he resigned.

With a resignation letter drawn up, but not signed, the remaining two members of city council — Daryl Janicek and Bob Fallis — were told of a special meeting to accept the resignation.

TDC said to be using guards in clerical jobs

HOUSTON (AP) — The Texas Department of Corrections is putting people in jobs that are not required and paying prison guards for clerical duties, an attorney testified in a hearing on whether the state has reneged on prison reforms.

In federal court Wednesday, Candice Wright, a TDC compliance monitor, said she has repeatedly recommended that guards be added but has been told that staff and funding were too tight.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice is holding the hearing, expected to last throughout the week, on a move by inmates to have the Texas prison system, the nation's second largest, held in contempt and fined for violating the reforms Justice ordered.

Inmates' attorneys say TDC has failed, among other things, to hire enough staff to provide adequate protection and to provide decent housing or proper medical and psychiatric care.

"The court order doesn't say a correctional officer is needed (for the clerical work), does it?" asked Williams Bennett Turner, who represents the inmates.

"No," Ms. Wright replied.

"That was a decision by TDC?"

"Yes."

Ms. Wright said that about 400 guards are needed inside inmate dormitories and another 600 to monitor cell blocks to fulfill the 1981 court staffing order.

But, Ms. Wright added, "A significant number of correctional officers are performing clerical functions."

Ms. Wright outlined the many areas in which she said TDC has fulfilled Justice's sweeping orders for prison reform.

Turner partly blames the lack of guards in inmate living quarters for a rash of violence in TDC that erupted last year..

TDC officials said they have quelled the violence through more stringent security measures.

Justice ruled in 1981 that conditions within the TDC violated the U.S. Constitution's protection against cruel and unusual punishment.

Prison officials in May 1985 signed an agreement that was to end courtroom battles in the lawsuit, filed in 1972 by inmate David Ruiz.

Health service 'plays up' mosquito's threat

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — The so-called Asian tiger mosquito that received considerable publicity recently may not be the threat it appeared to be, according to a Texas A&M entomologist.

Reports of the potential devastation of the Oriental import are mostly hype, Dr. J.K. Olson said.

"The U.S. Public Health Service is trying to get money," Olson said Wednesday. "I don't want to play this down, but I'm very disgusted with the way they've played this sucker up."

The mosquito, officially Aedes albopictus, apparently entered the United States last August at the port of Houston, in a shipment of tires sent from Asia for recapping. Recent indications are that it also may have entered at other points about the same time, Olson said.

It has been found this year in the Houston-Beaumont and Dallas areas, in eight Louisiana parishes, around Jackson, Miss., and in Memphis, Tenn.

The U.S. Center for Disease Control is working this summer with state health departments to find out just how far the pest has spread. According to the man in charge of the effort, there is great urgency to the work.

"We could wind up being blamed for establishment of this mosquito in South American countries," said Bruce Francy, head of the CDC's Division of Vector-Borne Viral Diseases in Fort Collins, Colo.

A carrier of four strains of tropical illness known collectively as dengue fever, the Asian tiger mosquito easily can survive cold winters, Francy said. In Asia, it is found as far north as Beijing, China, which has severe winters.

Olson, however, said entomologists were talking to reporters about the mosquito six months ago when it was known simply as Aedes albopictus. But about a week ago, press accounts began calling albopictus the "Asian tiger mosquito" and referring to it as "an aggressive, disease-carrying" insect.

Albopictus is indeed more aggressive than the Aedes aegypti, which for centuries has pestered people in Texas, Olson said.

U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz addresses the meeting of the six-nation ASEAN and the European Common Market at a Manila, Philippines, hotel Thursday and urged them to buy more goods from the United States.

Shultz warns major U.S. trading partners against restrictions

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz warned major U.S. trading partners today that restrictions on American imports will hamper President Reagan's fight to roll back protectionist legislation in Congress.

"It is essential for us to be able to say that other countries who are our trading partners open their markets to us just as we open our markets to them," Shultz told officials representing 22 nations.

"If we can't say that, we are undermined in our discussions with our Congress," the secretary said.

Shultz made the remarks at the opening of two days of talks with representatives from Canada, New Zealand, Australia, Japan, six Southeast Asian nations and the 12-nation European Common Market.

All of those countries have had trade disputes with the United States in recent years, and all have expressed concern that the growing sentiment in Congress against imports will lead to measures that hurt their economies.

Congressional concern has been heightened by a record U.S. trade deficit of more than $140 billion last year.

Reagan has vowed to veto a House bill aimed at cutting the deficit by raising import barriers, and is lobbying with the Senate to reject, or at least water down, the legislation.

The bill calls for restrictions on countries with huge trade surpluses with the United States.

Shultz' remarks, in a public session of the conference, amounted to a plea that other nations avoid giving Congress ammunition in its battle for restrictions.

"We all need to see what can be done country-by-country and collectively to lick this problem of protectionism," Shultz said.

On his five-country trip to Asia, Shultz has been hearing complaints that the proposed U.S. legislation could especially hurt the economies of the six countries of ASEAN — the Association of Southeast Asian Nations — which are Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore, Brunei, the Philippines and Indonesia.

Shultz suggested, however, that their complaints should be directed at other targets than the United States.

He said the six countries' receipts from U.S. trade will jump from the $14 billion earned in 1983 to $16 billion this year.

Over the same period, he said, their exports to other countries of the world fell by $3.3 billion.

"I think that tells you where your problem is and where it isn't," Shultz told the ASEAN representatives.

He said a pattern of protection followed by retaliation will lead to a "compartmentalized world economically and, therefore, a world that is changed strategically — and much more dangerous."

"As we advocate freedom, how do we do that if we draw back from freedom in the economic sphere," he said.

Canadian Foreign Minister Joe Clark said "all of us must take account of the powerful protectionist pressures growing in the United States."

But in a comment clearly generated by a dispute over U.S. restrictions on imports of some Canadian building materials, Clark added: "Canada is subject to similar pressures."

On other issues, Shultz:

■ Urged countries to join in efforts to help the struggling Philippine economy. "We have a saying in our country: Put your money where your mouth is," he said.

■ Asked for support in the United Nations for a U.S. initiative to end its trusteeship of a group of Pacific islands. Under the plan, the United States could build military facilities on Palau, and the Soviet Union is fighting the proposal at the U.N.

■ Reiterated concern along with the other representatives over the continuing Vietnamese occupation of Cambodia.

Philippine Communist leader to visit U.S.

Sison

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Philippine Communist Party founder Jose Maria Sison is lecturing to Rotary clubs and church lunches these days, and looks forward to his first U.S. visit and a Beverly Hills vacation.

But Sison, newly freed from a long imprisonment, remains a dedicated revolutionary.

He predicts the Communist guerrilla war here may soon spread to the cities, and says the fighting will end only if the Communists are taken into a coalition government.

"The semi-feudal, semi-colonial system in the Philippines is dying," he maintained in a recent interview.

Four months after his release, the 47-year-old former Communist Party chairman has become a political enigma in the Philippines.

His continuing influence within the party — and its influence over him — is unclear.

He says an implied condition for his freedom was that he engage only in "legal work" — non-Communist activity. He is helping organize a new "People's Party" and insists he has no contact with the Communists.

But he talks openly of Communist strategy, and some Filipinos suggest the new party will be merely a legal front for the outlawed Communists and Sison an above-ground link in the underground network.

Sison sounds ambivalent, too, on President Corazon Aquino, who freed him and 500 other political prisoners in early March, just days after she took over from deposed President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

The ex-Communist chief says he hopes Mrs. Aquino will produce promised reforms. On the other hand, he dismisses her government as consisting of military and upper-class Filipinos "arrogantly" masquerading as the middle class.

"Mrs. Aquino is not a Blessed Virgin Mary immune from any criticism and accountability," he says.

In the two-hour interview, Sison laughed easily and talked incessantly, playing with the English language in a way befitting a onetime scholar of William Faulkner and an internationally recognized poet who has long admired the verse of Chinese Communist Party founder Mao Tse-Tung.

But the relaxed ex-professor, whose boyish face sports a modest mustache and thick eyeglasses, took on a stern tone when he shifted into the us-versus-them rhetoric of revolution.

Like many Marxist revolutionaries, Sison comes from the privileged classes himself, born to a landlord father in northern Luzon, the Philippines' main island.

He studied English literature at the University of the Philippines in Manila and "read all the available Marxist books in the library...It became a powerful motivating force impelling me to act."

In 1959, he formed a leftist student association, and three years later, while teaching at the university, joined the Moscow-oriented Communist Party.

In 1968 he and his followers broke away from the old-line party to establish a new Maoist-oriented Communist Party of the Philippines and, a few months later, the guerrilla New People's Army (NPA). The old party largely disintegrated.

For nine years, the young Communist chairman clandestinely crisscrossed this island nation, building up insurgent strength in a hit-and-run conflict with the U.S.-backed Marcos government.

The NPA today has at least 16,500 fighters, and the party — under a new chairman, Rodolfo Salas — claims more than 10,000 members. But they have achieved no more than a stalemate with the Philippine military.

Sison, who met with a reporter in a open-air university lounge, was asked what mistakes he made in waging revolutionary war.

He refused to discuss the party's "inner workings," but added with a laugh, "I would admit the mistake of being arrested."

The party chief was captured Nov. 10, 1977, as he slept in a house in northern Luzon. He spent the next 8½ years at the maximum-security Military Security Unit compound in Manila — the first 18 months, he says, shackled to a cot, sometimes tortured, often deprived of light.

In prison, he managed to smuggle out poems. Some appear in a new volume, "Prison and Beyond," for which he will be awarded a Southeast Asian literary prize in Thailand this October.

Later, he is scheduled to deliver 10 lectures in the United States, although he is prepared for a fight with the U.S. State Department over obtaining a visa.

Sison, who holds a visiting fellowship at the University of the Philippines' Asian Center, also plans to visit his widowed mother and physician brother at their home in Los Angeles' opulent Beverly Hills.

"I look forward to establishing relations with the American people," Sison said.

The Philippine Communists contend they now receive no international Communist help, but Sison said, "There are already preparations for expanding the international horizons of the party because the United States might turn the Philippines into another Vietnam."

Iran frees French hostage held since April '85

PARIS (AP) — An Air France employee held in Iran for more than a year on charges that he turned his home into a center of corruption has been freed, the French airline said today.

Jean-Yves Albertini, director in Tehran for France's state-run airline, was arrested on April 18, 1985, allegedly during a party at his home attended by some 50 Iranians.

Charged with "inciting Moslems to debauchery" and "forbidden sexual practices," he was sentenced July 9, 1985, to a year in prison.

The French government has been working for the release of Albertini, and in November the French Foreign Ministry indicated that he might benefit from a pardon.

Albertini's case was mentioned to Iranian authorities during a December visit to Tehran by a four-member French parliamentary delegation.

Albertini had been based in Iran for 2½ years when he was arrested.

Air France officials gave no details of when Albertini might return to France, and there was no immediate announcement from Iran's fundamentalist Moslem authorities.

The announcement of Albertini's release came as an Iranian delegation was in Paris for continued negotiations over a $1 billion loan to France whose reimbursement has been among the conditions posed by Tehran for improved relations.

Iran has also demanded that France renounce future arms contracts with Iraq, Tehran's enemy in a 5½-year-old war, and extradite certain Iranian opposition leaders based in Paris.

France has expressed the hope that improved relations with Iran, which have been cool since the 1979 Iranian revolution, will lead Iranian authorities to use their influence to help obtain the release of French hostages in Lebanon.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Government wants alleged coverup of deaths probed

JERUSALEM (AP) — Members of Prime Minister Shimon Peres' government today called for an inquiry into an alleged secret service coverup of the deaths of two captured Palestinian hijackers, despite presidential grants of immunity in the case.

The ministers met into the early morning hours to discuss President Chaim Herzog's decision to grant immunity from prosecution to Shin Bet chief Avraham Shalom, who resigned as head of the secret service Wednesday, and three unidentified agents.

Two hijackers and an Israeli passenger were killed when the bus was retaken in the April 13, 1984 incident. A military inquiry determined in June 1984 that the two surviving hijackers had been beaten to death.

Israeli newspapers have said there were indications Shalom had ordered the hijacker captives killed, and that then-Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir knew of the order.

Shamir, now foreign minister, told a Jewish Agency assembly today that he had no fear of an investigation.

But he said he still would oppose such a probe because it would "expose and disclose" the workings of Shin Bet, which could "completely destroy the most efficient tool we have in the war against terrorism."

Labor leaders released

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government released at least a dozen labor leaders detained without charge under the 2-week-old nationwide state of emergency, union spokesmen said today.

The government gave no reason for releasing the union leaders, including the head of one of the country's largest trade federations.

However, dozens more labor leaders were among an estimated 1,800 emergency detainees still held, according to unofficial reports.

The releases followed warnings from union leaders in hiding and from strike-hit business executives that industrial relations were being gravely undermined by the state crackdown.

On Wednesday, congress general secretary Jay Naidoo, who is in hiding to avoid detention, said in a clandestine interview with the AP that black union leaders planned to surface for the first time since the emergency with a public meeting next Tuesday.

Arms negotiators on recess

GENEVA (AP) — U.S. and Soviet arms negotiations held a plenary session today, then broke for a summer recess following a seven-week round of talks that brought signs of superpower movement on strategic and space weapons.

The final session of the fifth round of weapons talks, a meeting of all three principal negotiators for each side and their aides, lasted 1½ hours.

There was no immediate statement from either side.

The Soviets made two initiatives during this round of talks, including a draft treaty on medium-range nuclear missiles and a proposal dealing with long-range and space weapons.

The proposals reportedly include raising the limit on nuclear "charges," a term for a wide variety of weapons, to 8,000 from 6,000, while cutting the limit on warheads on long-range ballistic missiles from 6,100 to 4,800.

Kidnapped professor freed

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A kidnapped university professor was freed after his wife paid a $5,000 cash ransom, but police staked-out the "drop" site and arrested two of the four abductors, the newspaper El Universal reported Wednesday.

The newspaper said the exchange took place Tuesday, in the residential district of Santa Monica.

According to the report, which quoted various police sources, two gunmen intercepted Eliseo Morales, an assistant professor of literature, in his car May 30 and kidnapped him. The next day, the abductors telephone his wife Josefina asking for a $150,000 ransom in cash.

When they telephoned her several days after that, Mrs. Morales told the kidnappers she was only able to get $5,000, which they accepted. She also advised the police, which staked out the place where the exchange took place.

Friday, June 27, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Real estate management could affect your finances in a positive way. You gain valuable support after October. Put your best foot forward with romantic partner and a wedding is possible. Give a business partner the benefit of the doubt. Your confidence in a special arrangement grows.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: author-educator Helen Keller, scientist-Smithsonian founder James Smithson, Bob "Captain Kangaroo" Keeshan, actor-author Gary Crosby, the Detroit Tigers' Nelson Simmons, the Boston Red Sox' Jackie Gutierrez.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get a second opinion before signing papers or granting someone permission to do something unusual. Working all the time could make you a dull companion. Put more fun into your life.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Making a small concession now will help you to win a major battle later on. Romance becomes less rocky. You enjoy new peace of mind. Share your happiness with those who love you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The longer you wait to speak out, the fewer your chances for achieving a victory. Others turn to you in times of crisis. Be prepared. Take up a sport that tones your body.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A night on the town may be just what you need. Be sure to take care of essential work tasks before turning your attention to weekend pleasures. Discuss plans with partner.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Handling an authority figure with kid gloves will put you in line for a promotion or raise. Your popularity is at an all-time high. Trust your hunches. Your psychic abilities grow stronger.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Follow your intuition. A date with the person of your dreams is possible. Analyze a personal problem and deal with it promptly. Procrastination will only make an uncomfortable situation worse. Be decisive.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A personal problem will be solved this weekend. Improving your physical appearance could be the first step toward getting a promotion or better job. Self-improvement activities enjoy highly favorable influences.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): All systems are "go" now. Put your best foot forward! Bide your time where romance is concerned; the tide will soon shift in your favor. Travel and athletic pursuits boost your spirits.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Focus on one project at a time. Better organization will lead to greater productivity, higher profits. Romance is a source of excitement. Do not confide secrets you should keep to yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Do not give up! Perseverance will help you overcome almost any obstacle. Friends may be better companions than your relatives today. An in-depth search pays off; you find out valuable information.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be independent today and you will end the work week on a positive note. Be tactful when discussing a delicate matter with family members. Domestic obligations deserve top priority. Postpone travel.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): If a budget seems unrealistic, revise it. A romantic relationship intensifies. Someone asks questions that should be answered immediately. Know your own heart. Do not try to defend something you dislike.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ◇

To succeed at bridge, you need to learn to plan the play of the hand in a logical manner. Put yourself in the South seat and see how you would tackle a four-spade contract after the lead of the ten of diamonds.

The bidding has been routine. North made a forcing raise of your one-spade opening and, with a dead minimum, you could do nothing other than raise to game.

The diamond opening lead has solved your problem in that suit. East produces the king, you win and, since your contract is unbreakable if trumps split evenly, you cash the ace-king of spades. Unfortunately, West shows out on the second round. You have two potential heart losers and a possible club loser; you might avoid at least one of these either if East has the queen of clubs or West has the ace or jack of hearts.

With all those finesses staring you in the face, did you spot that the winning line is to avoid any finesse? You simply bang down the ace-king of clubs and, if the queen does not drop, cash the high diamond and then continue with the jack of clubs and claim your contract regardless of who wins the trick.

If East has the queen, he is end played and must either give you a ruff-sluff or else lead a heart and thereby limit your losers in that suit to one. So let's suppose that West wins and shifts to a heart. You call for a high honor from dummy and East must duck to avoid the end play. So now your throw him in with his master trump, and this time he is truly thrown in. No matter what he returns, you have held your heart losers to one.

Stroke, cancer strike actress of NBC's 'Night Court' series

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Florence Halop, the impish bailiff on television's "Night Court," was hospitalized in serious but stable condition, partly paralyzed by a stroke and suffering from cancer.

Miss Halop, 63, was undergoing radiation treatments for an undisclosed type of cancer, said Ron Wise, spokesman for Cedars-Sinai Medical Center.

The right side of her body was partly paralyzed by the stroke.

Miss Halop joined the NBC series this season as bailiff Florence Kleiner, replacing Selma Diamond, who played court matron Selma Hacker and died of cancer in May 1985.

Miss Halop was hospitalized last week after suffering a stroke, and the cancer was discovered then, said Maggie Begley, spokeswoman for Warner Bros., which produces the series.

"She didn't know before that," Ms. Begley said.

Executive producer Reinhold Weege did not know how Miss Halop's illness might affect production of next year's shows, scheduled to start July 21, according to Ms. Begley.

Miss Halop most recently appeared as the irritable patient, Mrs. Hufnagle, in the "St. Elsewhere" series.

MACON, Ga. (AP) — Gregg Allman and the other surviving members of the Allman Brothers Band plan to reunite for a July 12 performance, their first concert reunion in four years.

"I hope there can be a 1980s Allman Brothers Band without losing what the whole idea is about, which is just playing good music," drummer Jai Johnny "Jaimoe" Johnson said Tuesday.

Johnson and keyboard player Chuck Leavell, who joined the band following the death of guitarist Duane Allman in 1971, said the group will play at the Volunteer Jam concert in Nashville, Tenn.

"I said yes and everybody else has agreed," Leavell said.

Joe Sullivan, a spokesman for the concert, would not confirm the band will perform, but said "there's always a surprise list of guests."

The Macon-based rock group was popular during the 1970s and broke up in 1982 with three of its six original members.

DULUTH, Minn. (AP) — The City Council has given tentative approval to name a street along the Lake Superior waterfront after native son Bob Dylan.

The proposal to change Harbor Drive to Bob Dylan Drive was approved Monday on a 6-3 vote. Another vote will be taken after the city attorney draws up an ordinance.

"As we all know, Bob Dylan has become an international star," said Councilor Neill Atkins, who co-sponsored the proposal. "He's also been quite a contributor to worthwhile causes, and he's done quite a bit for the needy and for the hungry in this country.

"I guess we think this would be a nice gesture, to honor Duluth's most famous native son."

Dylan, who will be in Minneapolis on Thursday night for the first concert in his home state in eight years, was born Robert Allen Zimmerman on May 24, 1941, in Duluth. He lived in the northeastern Minnesota city for six years until his family moved to the mining town of Hibbing, about 70 miles away.

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Prince Andrew and his bride-to-be, Sarah Ferguson, ate strawberries and ice cream at a garden party and opened a hospital wing during a surprise visit to Northern Ireland.

Wednesday's visit to the strife-torn province was the first for Miss Ferguson, who marries Queen Elizabeth II's second son in Westminster Abbey on July 23.

Hundreds of well-wishers quickly gathered to cheer the couple.

"Everybody looks so happy here," she told patients at Belfast's City Hospital. "What a lovely place."

Tomlin

PADUCAH, Ky. (AP) — Comedian Lily Tomlin and her brother plan to open a tea room, gift shop and galleria in downtown Paducah.

"Lily Tomlin's on Broadway" will open in September and will feature mannequins of some of Miss Tomlin's characters, such as Ernestine the operator and little girl Edith Ann.

"We have worked together so long, in and out of show business, that we thought we would do this together," Miss Tomlin said of her brother Richard.

Their mother, Lillie Mae Tomlin, is a western Kentucky native who returned after the death of her husband in 1970.

Richard Tomlin and a business partner will operate the business, but he said his sister "is going to make every effort to be here for the grand opening and at different times throughout the year."

Administration says raids left Gadhafi 'fighting for survival'

By MICHAEL PUTZEL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Officials in the Reagan administration say that in the weeks since the U.S. reprisal raids against Libya, Col. Moammar Gadhafi has been disoriented and unable to secure control of his government and people. They say he's had to sidetrack planning for terrorist acts.

That report comes from U.S. analysts, speaking on condition they not be identified and pleased, of course, to leave the impression that the April 15 bombing raid has hurt the Libyan strongman politically and left him psychologicially crippled.

Reports along those lines keep appearing, attributed to unidentified U.S. officials. The Washington Post said on its front page that Gadhafi was not the same man he had been before the raid, and the New York Post put it simpler in a headline: "Gadhafi Goes Daffy." The newspaper said Gadhafi had turned into a transvestite.

Administration figures here aren't going that far, but they portray Gadhafi as a man exhibiting manic-depressive characteristics — and given to smoking hashish and maybe opium, drugs often used by Bedouins.

"He's fighting for his survival internally, and he doesn't have a whole lot of time for thinking about terrorist operations abroad," says one administration official, who has access to intelligence reports.

Reporters who saw Gadhafi recently described him as apparently badly shaken. More than 30 Western journalists were invited to Tripoli to cover what was billed as a major speech at a rally observing the anniversary of the departure in 1970 of American servicemen from an air base in Libya.

Gadhafi didn't make the promised personal appearance, instead showing up on television for a rambling, one hour and 50 minute speech.

Broadcast over loudspeakers, it generated little enthusiasm. Fewer than 2,000 people gathered, according to reports from the scene, and those that came seemed bored.

The official here who gave the American assessment of events there said "as far as we can tell, nobody's really in charge of anything at the moment."

The source being quoted and another insisted, as Reagan has, that it was just coincidence that Gadhafi was in the Tripoli headquarters barracks the night U.S. planes struck. But, one of the officials said the Libyan leader "is convinced that someone informed and told us this is where he was going to be."

"That is why he is not making any public appearances," the analyst said. "Obviously, he's scared."

"This is a man who built his prestige on his ability to get out the Libyan masses and use his charisma to bring 50,000 or 100,000 people into the street and whip them into a frenzy," the source said.

Gadhafi succeeded, apparently with the support of Syrian mercenaries, in putting down at least two rebellions within the army in the immediate aftermath of the U.S. bombing, according to the U.S. source.

The administration analyst termed the situation in Libya "tumultuous," saying the economy has been disrupted, food supplies are scarce in many areas and "It's hard to get consumer goods in general."

The United States, meanwhile, has quietly turned its attention to what one official called "economic strangulation" of the Gadhafi regime.

Several European countries, including Italy — Libya's largest trading partner — have adopted what the official called "undeclared sanctions," encouraging foreign workers to leave Libya, refusing to sell goods to the regime and, when possible, halting purchases of Libyan oil.

Study says out-of-wedlock births one in three

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly one-third of young women who have babies are unmarried, according to the Census Bureau, and experts say the rate is increasing as unwed mothers give more consideration to finances and high divorce rates before saying "I do."

Out-of-wedlock births account for one-in-five white babies and almost three-fourths of births to black women ages 18 to 24, according to a new Census study released Wednesday.

There were about 625,000 births to unmarried women in the United States in the year ended in June 1985, the bureau reported.

"Approximately two-thirds of the out-of-wedlock births in 1985 were to women 18 to 24 years old, constituting 31 percent of all births to women this age," the report said.

For black women ages 18 to 24, the share of births to unmarried women was 74.5 percent, the report said, while for white women it was 20.2 percent.

The stigma of having a child out-of-wedlock has lessened considerably in recent years, so that women give more serious thought to whether they want to get married after becoming pregnant, explained Margaret C. Simms of the Urban Institute, a private organization that studies social policy questions.

Economics is an important factor in these decisions, and many young women also consider the example of others whose marriages don't last, she said in a telephone interview.

The girl may look at the father and decide that he's not a good bet for marriage, added Martha R. Burt, also an Urban Institute researcher.

"For teens, it is actually detrimental in the long run to get married. Married teens are more likely to drop out of school, it decreases the ability of both boys and girls to support themselves. Also, they are likely to have more children more quickly. The upshot is that marriage is not the solution, given the other problems of poverty and low skills," she explained.

"Teens deal with marriage with a great deal more realism than with whether they are going to get pregnant. They're very realistic about marriage, they are very unrealistic about sex. That's a very serious problem for them," Ms. Burt added in a telephone interview.

The rate of births to unmarried women has been rising in recent years, from 14 percent nationally in 1980 to 17.9 percent for all women age 18 to 44 in the current study, despite the increased availability of birth control products and abortion. In that larger age group, the rate was 11.7 percent for whites and 54.8 percent for blacks.

Out-of-wedlock births were most common in the 18-to-24 age group, according to the new study, while they accounted for only 7.7 percent of births to women ages 30 to 44. In that older group, the rate was 33.9 percent for blacks and 4.2 percent among whites.

The bureau studied births in the 12 months ending in June 1985. It also found that 48 percent of new mothers had returned to the labor force within a year, up from 38 percent in 1980 and 31 percent in 1976. College graduates were twice as likely to have gone back to work as women who had not completed high school.

Attitudes toward sex and marriage have changed among both blacks and whites in recent years, but the change is more visible among blacks, reports the book Choice & Circumstance, a study of adolescent sexuality and fertility published by the Urban Institute.

Antibiotic prevents newborn infections

BOSTON (AP) — Dangerous strep infections, which cause illness in about 7,200 newborns each year, can be sharply reduced if a small proportion of pregnant women take antibiotics during delivery, a new study concludes.

Infections with group B streptococcal bacteria can cause brain damage and death if babies catch them from their mothers during birth. The study published today in the New England Journal of Medicine suggests that at least half of the illnesses can be prevented with limited use of antibiotics.

An estimated 10 percent to 30 percent of all pregnant women harbor the germ in their genital tracts. But the researchers contend that infected women need to take the antiobiotic only if they have premature or lengthy labor.

"If it became a common obstetrical practice to do this, we believe this would have a substantial impact on the incidence of this disease in the United States," said Dr. Kenneth M. Boyer, who directed the study.

The researchers recommend that all pregnant women be checked for the bacteria. They estimated that about 5 percent of the 3 million Americans who give birth each year would need to take the common drug, called ampicillin.

Senate bill provides increased security against terrorism

By JAMES ROWLEY

WASHINGTON (AP) — A program to tighten security at U.S. embassies against terrorism and thwart electronic surveillance of diplomatic messages would get $1.1 billion in the next 15 months under a bill passed by the Senate.

The bill, approved on a voice vote Wednesday after seven hours of debate, includes $34.5 million to protect from surveillance the electric typewriters, word processors and other electronic equipment used by embassies to process and transmit sensitive diplomatic communiques.

The Senate approved an amendment, sponsored by Sen. Dave Durenberger, R-Minn., chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, and Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., to raise from $12.5 million to $34.5 million the amount earmarked to protect embassy communications.

"State-sponsored terrorists can and do subject our facilities to intensive surveillance. If we fail to protect the information about our security practices we make it that much easier for terrorists to attack," said Leahy, vice chairman of the intelligence panel.

The money also will enable the State Department to "put Americans in charge of computers in U.S. embassies rather than leaving reams of sensitive information in the hands of foreign (employees who are) ... often hostile intelligence agents," Leahy said.

The bill incorporates recommendations made by an advisory panel on embassy security appointed by Secretary of State George P. Shultz in the wake of the 1983 bombing attacks on the U.S. Embassy and the U.S. Marine compound in Beirut, Lebanon.

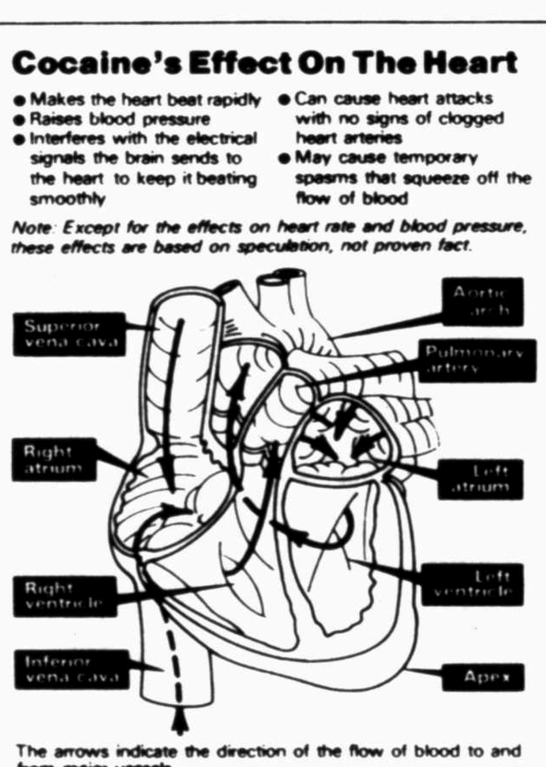
Car bombs driven by suicide terrorists blew up the embassy and later destroyed the Marine headquarters at the Beirut International Airport.

The security recommendations were made by the panel headed by retired Adm. Bobby Ray Inman, former director of the National Security Agency.

Cocaine's Effect On The Heart

- Makes the heart beat rapidly
- Raises blood pressure
- Interferes with the electrical signals the brain sends to the heart to keep it beating smoothly
- Can cause heart attacks with no signs of clogged heart arteries
- May cause temporary spasms that squeeze off the flow of blood

Note: Except for the effects on heart rate and blood pressure, these effects are based on speculation, not proven fact.



The arrows indicate the direction of the flow of blood to and from major vessels.

Cocaine fast becoming instant killer among users

BOSTON (AP) — Cocaine ruins lives slowly, but as recent research and the death of basketball star Len Bias dramatically show, the white powder also can strike people dead with lightening speed.

Experts have watched cocaine's growing popularity with alarm. Up to 30 percent of users, according to one estimate, get hooked by the drug's power to instill euphoria and false confidence.

"When an individual uses cocaine, he is playing Russian roulette," said Dr. Lester Grinspoon of Harvard Medical School. "He may be able to use it casually and then walk away from it. But there are some people who cannot walk away. It becomes a dominant feature in their lives. They become obsessed. They devote all their energy to it. They neglect their families, their careers, everything."

However, the death of Bias underscores a more dramatic hazard. A medical examiner found that the University of Maryland basketball star died of cocaine intoxication that disrupted the electrical stimulation of the heart.

Experts are unsure how often this happens, but it certainly is not the only case. Recently, Dr. Jeffrey Isner of Tufts Medical School in Boston presented research on seven young people who were hospitalized or died suddenly because of heart disorders immediately after using cocaine.

"I really don't think it's rare," he said, "but I can't prove that."

Two effects of cocaine are certain — it makes the heart beat rapidly and raises blood pressure. These effects alone could explain how cocaine kills people whose hearts already are weakened by disease.

"It's like taking a person who has pre-existing heart disease and asking him to run a marathon," said Isner, a cardiologist. It demands more work than the heart can perform.

Isner said cocaine also increases the body's adrenaline supply, and this might overstress the heart's electrical system, causing it to beat wildly or stop.

Spinal fluid test may be diagnosis for Alzheimer's

NEW YORK (AP) — Studies of an experimental spinal fluid test designed to help doctors diagnose Alzheimer's disease could begin at several centers in the United States in a few months, a biotechnology company executive says.

The research would have to be approved by the federal Food and Drug Administration, said Dr. John Bennett, chief executive officer of Senetek PLC, which is based in the United Kingdom.

Senetek is collaborating on the test with the Institute for Basic Research in Developmental Disabilities in New York City.

"We have enough pilot data which is encouraging enough to see if the test would prove itself in clinical trials," said Dr. Henry Wisniewski, director of the institute.

The test, which reveals how much of a particular protein is present in a patient's spinal fluid, is designed to help doctors distinguish Alzheimer's disease from other conditions that produce the same symptoms, he said Wednesday.

Other scientists said more research is needed to tell whether Wisniewski's test will be helpful. "It's truly impossible to know whether this is going to work or not, whether it will be useful or not," said Peter Davies, associate professor of pathology and neuroscience at New York's Albert Einstein College of Medicine.

But development of a routine test to confirm an Alzheimer's diagnosis during the patient's lifetime is "very urgently needed," he said.

The problem is that Alzheimer's, for which no cure or treatment is known, can be confused with other disorders that can be treated, such as vitamin deficiency, experts say. Davies said the rate of mistaken Alzheimer's diagnoses runs around 10 percent to 30 percent, depending on where the diagnosing is done.

Alzheimer's disease is a progressive brain disorder that afflicts an estimated 2.5 million American adults. Victims suffer such symptoms as gradual memory loss, impairment in judgment, disorientation and change in personality. Eventually they become incapable of caring for themselves.

Reader questions relationship of cashews, poison ivy

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. I read an article about cashews that said they are seeds of the poison ivy plant. Please explain. Mafalda Donato, Waterbury, Conn.

A. Cashews do not come from poison ivy plants. The plant is only botanically related to poison ivy, much the same way tomatoes are botanically related to belladonna and the deadly nightshade plant.

Cashews grow on trees and develop in a strange way, which is on the outside tip of the cashew apple, which is also edible. The shell of the cashew nut, which is carefully removed by heating in order not to contaminate the nut, contains an irritating oil that is extracted from the shell and used in paints, varnishes and rocket lubricants.

Q. Is it true that wine should not be served in a lead crystal glass or punch bowl because the acidity of the wine somehow causes the lead from the crystal to be released by the wine? Miriam Kolkey, Daytona Beach, Fla.

A. "Corning Glass," advises Gilbert Stoewsand, professor of toxicology at Cornell University, "has done quite a bit of work on the possibility of acidic solutions releasing lead from their Steuben crystal glass. With solutions more acidic than wine, they found only tiny traces released and therefore toxicologically insignificant.

"More concern was given," say Stoewsand, "to the use of vinegar in salad dressings when salads were kept in these bowls for a number of days."

Stoewsand also expressed concern about lead, and probably cadmium, being released from Mexican clay-type decanters and pitchers with wines or other acidic foods. An entire family was lead-poisoned over a long period of time until it was discovered that they were drinking their morning orange juice from a clay pitcher made in Mexico.

"It may interest you to know," adds Stoewsand, that only about 8 percent of lead is absorbed in adults, as compared to about 40 percent in children, when this metal is taken as inadvertent contaminants of foods and beverages."

Q. I drank coffee for a good many years, but two years ago discovered I'm allergic to caffeine. I'm also allergic to the decaffeinated coffees. Are there any kinds of coffee that are 100 percent caffeine-free? I've tried several substitutes purchased at health-food stores, but they are pretty bad. Virginia Zinser, Portland, Ore.

A. Coffee beans contain about 1 to 2 percent caffeine, depending on the variety of the bean. When coffee is decaffeinated, not all of the caffeine is removed. When a label says the coffee is 97 percent caffeine-free, that means 97 percent of the 1 to 2 percent that exists in the coffee beans. The amount of caffeine remaining in decaffeinated coffee is quite insignificant unless, of course, one is allergic to caffeine.

Betty Chateauvert, consumer representative with General Foods, makers of Maxwell House coffee, states, "To date it is technically impossible to remove 100 percent of the caffeine and still retain the desired flavor and aroma. Attempting to remove more caffeine becomes increasingly costly and problematic."

To Chateauvert's knowledge, there are no plans to produce a 100 percent caffeine-free product.

Q. You have discussed monosodium glutamate (MSG) in your column, but never how it's actually made and what it comes from. Please explain. N.R. Happy, Dearborn, Mich.

A. Richard Cristol, executive director of the Glutamate Association, tells us tha MSG is made from molasses which is derived from sugar beets or sugar cane. Bacteria, oxygen, vitamins and minerals are added to molasses. As the bacteria grows, the broth is further evaporated and refined.

Hydrochloric acid (an acid also found in your stomach) is then added, which crystallizes the broth. What you have then is crude glutamic acid, an amino acid commonly found in most foods. These crystals are further processed and converted to MSG through the use of sodium hydroxide. Color is removed with activated carbon. It's ultimately dried, screened, packed and shipped.

It's a complicated process and is not made anywhere in the United States. All MSG is imported.

Reader response: In response to a previous column in which a reader expressed exasperation because of a flea problem in her home, we received the following suggestions:

Beatrice Mungo, Rosenhoyn, N.J.: "Use camphor, which you can get in little cakes. Take a hammer and an old rag and beat it down. Put it all over, everywhere. My mother is Indian and this is the old way. It works. You'll see them jumping up to leave!"

Johnnie Mae Proctor, Uvalde, Texas: This reader reports that when she was on vacation fleas somehow got into her home, so many that the person who came to check the house during her absence noticed them all over his pantlegs when he got to his car. In an 1,800-square-foot home she used two D-Con Flea Kill home foggers with Precor, an insect growth regulator. Not only was this treatment completely effective for the flea problem, but she also found dead ants and crickets.

Flora Cline, Clovis, Calif.: "Spray the inside of your tank-type vacuum cleaner, the disposable bag or filters with a flea and trick spray. Don't use a powder — it will get into the air you breathe. The vacuumed up eggs, when they hatch in a few days, should die from the spray."

CONSUMING INTERESTS

Consumer items often off-the-wall

By LINDA ANDERSON

Those of us who are in the news business (as Lois Lane would say) come across some strange things on a daily basis. Surprisingly — or not so surprising to anyone who spends much time in a consumer mode — a number of these off-the-wall items are consumer-oriented.

For instance:

■ Recent information from Le Menu, a product of the Campbell Soup Company, claims that the company's frozen dinners, "delicious, restaurant-quality ... premium frozen dinners," deserve to be paired with "fine wine." Interested customers can order a leaflet titled "Living in Style," which "offers ideas for matching food with wine and hints on how to make any evening special," the company said.

Some of the pairings suggested in the leaflet are: chicken parmigiana dinner with Chianti; beef sirloin tips dinner with burgundy (of course! Red wine with meat...); chicken a la king dinner with Johannisberg Riesling; pepper steak with zinfandel; flounder fillet dinner with fume blanc or sauvignon blanc (white wine, as they say, with fish...); and ham steak dinner with pinot noir blanc.

Just one hitch was discovered in all this valuable information — although the company announced the availability of this amazing new leaflet, they neglected to give the address where to order it. If anyone is interested, try writing to Le Menu Dinners, Communications Center, Campbell Soup Company, Camden, N.J. 08101. And let me know what happens.

■ A colorful wall poster containing everything you ever wanted to know about tropical fruits is available from J.R. Brooks & Son Inc., grower, packer and shipper.

The poster has tropical fruit nutrition information, tropical fruit descriptions and tropical fruit availability chart. Some of the fruits listed are so strange-looking as to be foreign to many shoppers — ever heard of an atemoya (defined as a hybrid of the cherimoya and the annona, neither of which is familiar to me)? How about a caniste, a jaboticaba, a monstera or a sapote? Doesn't matter — they all look delicious.

For more information write to the company at P.O. Drawer 9, Homestead, Fla. 33090, or call 1-800-327-4833.

■ Because its new film, "Ruthless People," will be released this week, Touchstone films is conducting a search for real ruthless people, nominated by anyone who cares to participate. The winners of this search will receive "The Big Screw" award, which the company describes as "a gold trophy in the shape of an over-sized screw."

According to Robert Levin, senior vice president of marketing for the film company, "We're looking for ruthless people from history, from fiction and from ordinary walks of life in addition to people who are already famous for their ruthlessness..."

Isn't that a cheerful contest? Some of the more obvious entrants could be J.R. Ewing, Alexis Morrell-Carrington-Colby-Dexter, Ebenezer Scrooge, Benedict Arnold and a Gary, Ind., businessman who foreclosed on the mortgages of two members of his own family.

Contact Ruthless People, c/o Touchstone Films, 500 South Buena Vista Street, Burbank, Calif. 91521. Better hurry, though — the film opens Friday.

Handle leftovers as 'planned-overs'

By MARIAN FARR

Most of us refrigerate leftover food for one of two reasons: either we want to postpone washing the dish it's in or we feel guilty about throwing away perfectly good food. When food sits in the refrigerator too long, though, we often wind up throwing it away anyway — and the dish still has to be washed.

A better system for handling leftovers is to think of them as "planned-overs." Here are some suggestions for planning to make good use of leftover food before it goes to waste:

■ Know the appropriate amount of food to buy for your household. If you buy an extra amount of a certain food because it's on sale, prepare two batches of the same dish and freeze one. Label and date the frozen dish. Then keep a running list or card file of frozen items so you can remember to include them in future menu plans.

■ Decide immediately after a meal whether you can incorporate any leftover food into the current week's menus or if you should freeze it for future use. Family members may be more accepting of leftovers if they aren't faced with the food in the same form for several days in a row.

■ If you have small amounts of several food items, make your own individual frozen dinners using foods that complement each other. These can be most helpful for those days when family members eat at different times due to conflicting schedules.

■ If you choose not to freeze leftovers, be sure to cover or wrap them properly and refrigerate immediately. Know how long you can safely refrigerate different food items and make definite attempts to use the food while it's still fresh.

■ Use your imagination to come up with different ways of incorporating the food into your week's meals. The idea behind "planned overs" is to think about leftovers in a new way — no longer as food waiting to be thrown away, but as complete or partial meals waiting to come to your rescue.

No-money-down fortune can be costly

By JOHN K. SCHMIDT

It may have irresistible appeal for some adventurers, but for most people, no-money-down ownership is often an unattainable and costly dream. The money they spend on how-to seminars, books and tapes will constitute their only big real estate investment.

Why? There are many reasons. Investors who do find and buy no-money-down properties run the risk of getting trapped in a negative cash-flow situation caused by lower inflation and generally poor market conditions.

Finding such properties is no picnic, and some experts argue that you should not get involved in real estate if you cannot afford a small down payment. Even if you find such a property, arranging the deal can be very difficult.

Do the promoters of some of these types of real estate seminars make money from the seminars? In a major market area, it is not unheard of that 500 or more people will pay a minimum of $50 each to attend a seminar. In order to learn more on how to make one's fortune in the no-money-down real estate business, the seminar participant must purchase a full cassette and handbook course from the meeting promoters, at a cost of $750 each.

If 100 of the 500 in attendance purchase the courses, the promoters have grossed, from attendance and course fees, at least $100,000 from one night's work.

It is possible to make money with no-money-down real estate transactions, but you can get rich a lot quicker promising to teach others the secrets on how to do it.

What about the "free" seminars we see advertised from time to time? That is just the bait, folks. The real secrets will be revealed at another seminar for a price.

Bureau offers check list for selecting new luggage to fit needs

By DELORES CARSON
Hearst News Service

Tickets have been purchased. All the reservations have been made. You have decided your travel needs and you're ready to pack. But for many people, luggage offers more in nostalgia than practicality.

Luggage should protect, transport and help keep your clothes organized while traveling. It should offer mental security when the job is well done. After all, your luggage holds all your possesions for the duration of your trip.

If you've decided it's time to invest in new luggage, The Luggage and Leather Goods Information Bureau offers a check list of what to look for:

■ COVERINGS: Is the covering material tightly woven so it is smooth enough to prevent snagging? Are light colored fabrics treated with water- or stain-repellent coatings?

■ CONSTRUCTION: Are cases reinforced on narrow sides and at corners? (Sometimes these reinforcements are on the exterior and can be easily seen.) Do hard-sided cases close tightly, with no gaps? Do they stay aligned, not wiggle when moved? Do lids of hard-and soft-sided cases stay open so you can pack and unpack easily?

■ STITCHING: Is the stitching even? Is there double-stitching at stress points such as corners?

■ HARDWARE: What is the hardware made of? Is it durable? Is there double-stitching at stress points such as corners?

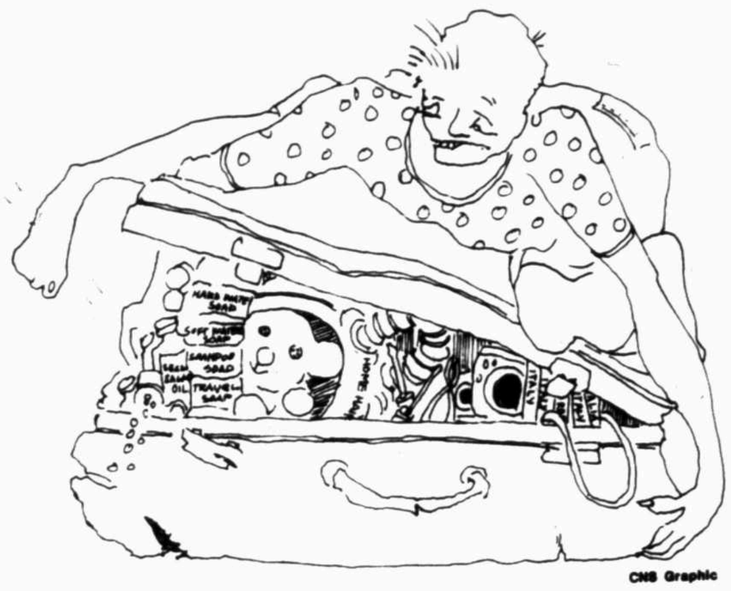
■ ZIPPERS: Do zippers go around corners easily? Are they big enough to help pull a stuffed case closed? Do they stay closed when a case is full?

■ WHEELS: Does the wheel system allow for making easy turns? Are wheels solidly affixed? (Wiggle them to check.

■ INTERIORS: If a case is unlined, are the seams smooth to avoid snagging clothing? Are there tie-tapes to hold clothing in place?

■ POCKETS: Do pockets have wide enough openings and gussets for easy access?

■ GARMENT BAGS: Is there a bar supporting the top of the bag? Is it strong? (To find out, flex it and see if it returns to its original shape.) Is there a double track to stagger hangers and maximize use of space? Is there a center bar in the middle of the case to anchor the handle and keep the case from sagging when folded? Is there a pocket or snap to hold the hanging hook so it won't snag or drag?



CNS Graphic

■ HANDLES, SHOULDER STRAPS and PULL-STRAPS: Are the handles comfortable? Are they only anchored with prongs, or do they have double screws or rivets to hold them securely? Are shoulder straps adjustable? Do they have pads to keep them from sliding off your shoulder? Are they detachable? Are pull-straps long enough or adjustable for your height so you can pull your bag comfortably while walking erect?

Other quality indicators:

■ The hardware should be brass so that it doesn't peel or turn color.

■ The most practical leathers have been saturated with dye from side to side. If this type of leather is scratched, it won't leave lighter marks, and the scratch can be buffed away.

■ Satchels are gaining in popularity, either as carry-on or check-through luggage. Some have a small hasp built on to allow for a padlock.

What do I need in luggage? There is a plethora of choices and a travel personality to go with each choice.

■ Pullman suitcases range in size from 24"-36". They can be hard- or soft-sided. The 36" size is for the jack-in-the-box traveler. This is the person that crams every thing he owns in one case. Once it is opened, everything pops out and never fits back in again.

■ Carryons are 22" and smaller. They are constructed in the same manner as pullmans, and are designed for short trips. They tend to be the business person's choice.

■ The newest item for the overnight or weekend business trip is a saddle bag by Porsche. It is a small fold-over bag, with a hole in the top that fits over a matching briefcase.

■ Totes and satchels are casual all-purpose bags. Usually smaller than carryons, they come in varied sizes from handbags to 22". Totes are especially helpful to the vaudeville-style traveler. Closely related to the jack-in-the-box, these travelers also take everything. They just divide the possessions into several carriers.

■ Garment bags and carriers are hanging bags that come in different lengths; 40" for suits, 54" for dresses and 60" for evening attire. They fold in half and are constructed of soft material stretched on a frame. These are great for those that travel on the get-what-you-need-as-you-go plan, because the best ones are expandable.

■ Trunks, made of metal, hardboard or wood, usually with removable trays, are best for the kid going to camp or the world traveler who actually needs everything he owns.

The most adventuresome traveler will stick with one bag from the attic and just throw in whatever happens to be clean.

Goals, routines may cure summer boredom

By LAURIE ANDERSON
Hearst News Service

With the proper attitude and planning, summer vacations that involve children can turn from maddening to memorable, according to Linda Albert, co-author of "Coping with Kids and Vacation."

In their book, Albert and Elaine Fantle Shimberg — writers who have eight children between them — offer suggestions on how to make the summer months sunnier for parents and children.

"Vacation is a special time, which offers kids and parents a lot of opportunities," says Albert. "But to pull it off right, it takes thought and organization."

Albert, a psychologist and former teacher, writes a syndicated newspaper column "Coping with Kids" and has written several books dealing with that topic. The mother of three grown children, she now teaches graduate courses and parenting workshops at the Family Education Center of Florida.

"I know what conflicts vacations can bring," she says. "I was a single working parent with three kids. It wasn't easy to fill a summer, but we worked it out and built many wonderful memories."

Kids usually start off the vacation elated because they think they can sleep late and eat and play when they want, says Albert.

"But by July 15 kids end up driving their parents crazy because they then start complaining that there is nothing to do. They're bored."

BY DEVELOPING a detailed plan, parents can avoid this scenario.

"Vacations are times of reduced stress when kids can concentrate on creativity and physical fitness," Albert says. "They can sharpen their social skills through interacting with new friends at camp or enlarge their sense of self through profitable jobs or volunteer efforts."

Before school lets out, parents must have heart-to-heart talks with children about what routines and goals they will strive for during the summer, she says. Throughout the planning stages and the vacation, parents must remember that they do not have to exemplify a cruise director by organizing every moment of the children's time with fun-filled activities. However, parents should encourage their children to focus on educational goals.

"Learning goes on at times other than 9 to 3 during the school year. Maybe the child can decide to finish a series of books, sew a first dress or learn some new sport that summer. Kids should find something tangible that they can take away from the summer."

Many communities, aware of the problems of working parents, offer day-camp programs during normal school hours that teach children arts and crafts, swimming or sports. Camps away from home teach children how to be independent as well as how to ride horseback, play ball or sail. There are residential camps that specialize in one area, such as soccer, basketball or biology, which may hone in on a child's particular interest.

CHILDREN LEFT at home alone or with a sitter should map out how they can use their free time to develop life skills, Albert says. Her children used to create "neighborhood extravaganzas" by gathering their friends and writing, producing and acting out a circus-type show.

"It was a lot of fun," Albert says. "We still remember some of the funnier lines in the skits."

Older children can take on volunteer projects, such as working in a nursing home, to extend their life experiences. A paying job is a good way for teenagers to learn responsibility, she adds.

Parents must be ready to help them meet the hobby, sports or job demands.

"If a child has playoff games schedules for several weeks, parents should not plan to take the family out of town during this time. They must be ready to let the child carry through with his or her summer project."

Single parents should work out arrangements with other single parents to provide supervision and entertainment for children. For example, one parent could give the youngsters dance lesson one day. Another parent could take them to a movie another day.

While households may loosen daily routines during the vacation, chores should not be forgotten.

"No school often means no responsibilities. Parents must make them keep up with their chores. Perhaps beds can be made by noon, instead of 8 a.m., but nobody is going to enjoy the summer if routines are not established."

Parents should become more flexible in the warmer months. Instead of having conventional meals around the dinner table, parents should surprise children by having picnics on the patio, Albert says.

"Or one night you could rent a telescope and look at the stars."

WHEN THE family sits down to plan a get-away vacation, this "flexible but firm" approach to summer should continue. Parents should encourage input from kids on where the family should vacation. Although parents ultimately make this decision, a family meeting should be held to record suggestions made by everyone.

"Let the kids be as crazy as they can," she says. "Their ideas, regardless of how far-out, might show a pattern and lead you into a more practical suggestion."

Parents and children don't have to vacation together, Albert points out. Many children travel cross-country on their own to visit relatives. Albert suggests picking a direct route for them to travel. Check with the travel agent about where planes, trains or buses stop along the way. Make sure the child knows which stop is his and how to ask for help from transporation authorities.

Parents who are greatly in need of a rest or a chance to light up their romance should leave the kids home, Albert says.

"Most parents with kids feel guilty if they do this, but they must be ready to. A happy, refreshed parent is an effective parent. Vacations are not a luxury, they are a necessity."

Forethought key to pain-free packing

By ANNE-MARIE SHIRO
New York Times-
Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — The best part of traveling is usually seeing new places or revisiting favorite spots. The worst part of traveling has got to be packing. Even the thought of filling an empty suitcase can keep some people from making an unnecessary trip. But with a bit of forethought and organization, packing can be a simple enough task. Ask anyone who travels a lot, whether on business or pleasure, and tidbits of advice will come pouring forth.

Patricia Beard, editor of Showcase, a trade publication of the Luggage and Leather Goods Manufacturers of America, loves to share her vast travel experience. For starters, she says, decide exactly what you'll need for where you are going. What is the weather likely to be? How formal is the place? If you have any doubts, ask someone who has been there or call the hotel and ask.

"If you're going to a resort," Beard says, "ask if jackets and ties are required for dinner. If you're sports-oriented, ask if you can rent equipment — golf clubs or snorkeling gear or whatever. Do they supply terry cloth robes? Hair dryers? Then you'll know what things you don't need to take with you."

There are two ways to be sure you won't forget anything: Either make a list and check things off as you pack them or lay out everything you think you'll need and edit down to essentials. Beard hangs everything on a folding garment rack.

Like many frequent travelers, she is a firm believer in coordinating the colors of the clothing she takes. If you use one color, such as black, beige or white, as a basis for jackets, pants, skirts and shoes, any other colors can be used for shirts, sweaters and scarves or ties. Another good tip: eliminate anything you would wear only once and anything that requires special accessories.

"I also leave my under-seat carry-on bag out for a week before I leave," Beard said, "so if I think of something, I can just drop it in. I toss in my passport and tickets, maps, guidebooks, camera, so all those things aren't left to the last minute."

That under-seat bag should also hold prescription medicines, toiletries and cosmetic kits for cleaning up and touching up en route; valuables such as jewelry, money and travelers checks in the event checked luggage is lost; and, for travel abroad, a little of the local money.

Some people tuck in an extra shirt or shoes to change into before landing. This is a good idea on a long trip or one to a different climate.

When it comes to packing clothes, there are techniques for fitting a lot in and for preventing wrinkles.

If you are using a hanging garment bag, layer several jackets or dresses on one hanger and cover with a plastic bag from the dry cleaner. If you're packing a pullman suitcase, heavy items such as handbags and shoes should go in first. Shoes can be positioned in corners and stuffed with small items such as stockings and belts. If you are packing a wide-brimmed sun hat, place it upside down and fill the crown with soft things such as scarves. Tuck other soft items under the brim. Thus the hat is protected and it doesn't take up any space.

There seem to be two theories about packing jackets to prevent creases. One theory, which Beard subscribes to, involves turning the jacket inside out and laying it longwise in the suitcase rather than folding it over at the waist. The other theory is attested to by Ernest Graf, a furrier who travels frequently.

He recommends buttoning the jacket and placing it lapel side down on a flat surface. "Then," he says, "take your folded trousers and place them across the bottom of the jacket. Fold the arms of the jacket over the pants and then fold the jacket in half at the waist. It then goes compactly into the suitcase, taking up very little space, and the layering of fabric keeps it from creasing."

Many experienced travelers have indeed found that if several items of clothing are folded together, they are less likely to crease than if each is folded individually. Beard uses this method for packing skirts: "Lay one across the bag with the top hanging over one side. Place another skirt over this with its top hanging over the other side. Then fold them back over each other."

Packing a suitcase as fully as possible also helps to prevent wrinkles because the clothes don't move around.

Finally, label luggage inside and out.

Tips given to protect valuables while traveling

NEW YORK (UPI) — Watching the ferris wheel at an amusement park, you are drenched with soda by a clumsy patron, who apologizes and helps you clean up. What you don't realize is that his partner is cleaning up too — by stealing your wallet.

This is just one of numerous scams designed to separate travelers from their belongings by distracting them, according to American Express, Inc. The company offers these tips to avoid thievery on the road.

■ Never pack valuables in your luggage.

■ Before leaving, remove from your purse and wallet all credit cards, personal checks and valuables that you will not need.

■ Always lock your bags and tag them on the inside and outside.

■ Don't take any more bags than you can comfortably handle — a thief might walk off with those you put down.

■ Take with you written procedures for reporting loss of charge cards, passport or travelers checks. Keep them separate from those documents.

Advice to keep children happy on road

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI) — Every year, millions of Americans load their children and luggage into the family car and head out on vacation — only to find that the kids' antics turn them into nervous wrecks.

"It's in the nature of kids in confined spaces to become restless," says Gary Lawson, a professor of psychology at United States International University in San Diego, Calif. He offers these tips for ensuring a sane family car trip:

■ Have the children help plan the trip. "Giving kids a choice makes them feel part of the operation and it smooths the way for them," says Lawson.

■ Involve the children in games. Have the younger ones read road signs. Older kids can identify types of cars or states' license plates.

■ Take frequent stops.

■ Try traveling at night. "Kids can't bother you when they're sleeping," he says.

Hotels occupancy declined slightly

NEW YORK (AP) — Hotel occupancy rates in 1985 declined slightly from nearly 66 percent to 64.5 percent, and another slight decline is expected this year.

This is the conclusion of Laventhol & Horwath's 1986 outlook for the lodging industry, which says the major reason for the decline in occupancy is due to the continuing increase of available rooms.

Guidelines offer sensible answers to packing dilemmas

By DELORES CARSON
Hearst News Service

Part of the fun of travel — but more often the pain — is deciding what to wear and what to take. Inevitably, when you arrive, whatever you need is still at home.

Bring up the subject of travel wardrobes, and there is an expert for every need. Designers tout their fashions as easy-to-travel in. Books are written and lists are offered to ease you through the dilemma. But the question remains, "What am I going to wear?"

What do women buy for travel? The sales coordinator at a major department store lists some of the favorite choices.

"Sonia Rykiel does a knit tube dress every year. I have sent scores of women to Europe in this dress. They can tuck their legs up in it for a long trip, and sleep. The fabric springs back into shape and they arrive without a wrinkle," he says.

Another example is a hand-painted, abstract print jumpsuit. It is all cotton but wrinkle-proof. Other choices include a knit sundress with matching jacket, which he describes as a practical choice: On the plane, the jacket is useful; when you arrive, you have a nifty little sundress for sightseeing.

For more sophisticated travel, a Donna Karan trouser suit in taupe is good-looking and practical. It will mix and match with other pieces and takes up little space in a suitcase.

Guidelines to help in choosing what to take would include: Fabrics that are wrinkle-proof and pack well. This would include jerseys, knits and cotton blends. And don't forget cool, comfortable linen; it's supposed to have an air of dishevelment.

In order to keep travel possessions to a minimum:

■ Plan three tops (blouse or sweater) for every bottom (skirt or pants) you plan to take. The tops can work with more than one bottom, so this does not mean if you take two skirts and a pair of slacks you will need nine tops.

■ Choose one color to coordinate with all of your choices. It can be a basic color or a bright, but keep in the mind the purpose of your trip — too many brights won't look serious on a business trip.

■ Take several choices of accessories such as belts, scarfs and jewelry. These items can change a skirt and blouse to an outfit. They can also change the mood of a plain dress.

■ Pack a long skirt to go with a blouse or sweater. It can suffice for an unexpected formal occasion.

The most practical piece of summer clothing is a beige or white linen jacket. It should be unlined and unconstructed — a wrap jacket for instance. It can make any outfit look more serious and coordinates with most casual attire.

No matter what the purpose of a trip, the trappings you take along should be designed to help — not hinder.

Terrorism slows Israel tourism

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) - A record number of people visited Israel in 1985, but fear of Mideast terrorism apparently kept some vacationers away in the latter half of the year, a tourism ministry spokesman said.

Israel experienced a 15 percent increase in tourism with 1,264,400 people traveling here in 1985 compared with 1,094,800 in 1984, the previous record year, said Michael Gidron, director of information for the Tourism Ministry.

However, most of the increase came in the first part of 1985, when tourism jumped an average of 25 percent. After the TWA hijacking in June and the Achille Lauro takeover in October, tourism slowed to a 7 percent increase, Gidron told The Associated Press.

Gidron said he saw the overall increase in tourism as victory of the ministry's marketing efforts, but he said convincing travelers that Israel is a safe place to visit is sometimes difficult.

To combat tourists' fears, the Tourism Ministry is inviting 1,000 foreign travel agents, politicians and journalists to visit Israel in 1986, and has set aside about $100,000 to pay for their trips, Gidron said.

One of the largest increases of travelers came from the United States. Last year, 450,000 Americans journeyed to Israel, compared with 404,000 in 1984.

Crime takes no vacation

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — On the average, a house is broken into in the United States every 11 seconds, with the highest incidence occurring in the summer when people are away on vacation, says Ira Lipman, an expert in the security field.

Lipman, president of Guardsmark Inc., one of the country's largest security services firms, offers these tips on maintaining security while at home as well as reducing the chance of a break-in while residents are away:

■ Use a deadbolt lock on the garage door, and keep it locked at all times — whether you are home or not and whether the car is inside or not. Locking up will appear "normal," not an advertisement of your departure.

■ Don't post your name on the mailbox if your phone number is listed in the directory. A burglar could call from a nearby phone booth and if no one answers, it's likely your house will be broken into soon after.

■ Place strong padlocks, top-quality hasps and hinges on outdoor structures such as tool sheds, storm cellars or greenhouses.

■ Don't let the shrubs around the house grow high enough to conceal an intruder. Another safety precaution is to flatten large shipping cartons and boxes before putting them out with the trash.

■ Carelessly leaving bicycles and other expensive toys lying around the yard is an open invitation to thieves.

■ Don't display valuables in open windows or where they can be seen easily from the street.

■ Ask a friend to stop by and pick up mail and deliveries and generally make sure everything looks OK while you are away. If you can't find someone to do this, have the post office hold mail, and cancel deliveries until your return.

■ A house that's dark from sundown to sunup looks unoccupied. Connect timers to some of your lights. And turn down the volume control on house telephones so passersby won't hear the continued ringing of an unanswered phone.

■ An L-shaped metal strip attached to a door frame can make it virtually impossible to open an inward-swinging door with a crowbar. Of all doors, the most hazardous to security are sliding-glass patio doors. One safeguard is to attach locks with vertical bolts that fit into holes in floor and ceiling — or cut a broom handle to fit into the tracks on which the doors slide.

Camp teaches financial games

New York Times News Service

PALM BEACH, Fla. — When Chris Brett heads for summer camp this July, he won't be needing bug spray or even a baseball bat.

Instead, the 14-year-old Palm Beach boy will stock his satchel with copies of the Wall Street Journal for a week at "Money Management Camp for Kids," conducted in the posh surroundings of Palm Beach's famed Italian renaissance hotel, The Breakers.

At a cost of $250 to parents, Brett and other young finance fiends between 10 and 15 years old will learn the fine art of making money multiply in sessions that include "Understanding the Stock Market," "Bonds and Mutual Funds" and "Personal Financial Planning."

On the last day of camp, instructed by brokers from Shearson Lehman Bros. Inc., the youngsters get a $100 credit line to purchase the stocks of their choice, says Al Fasulo, the firm's executive vice president.

Last summer, young Brett attended the first money-management camp with about a dozen other youths at The Breakers.

"It was a funny sight to walk into this imposing lobby and seeing these kids, their feet not even touching the floor, reading the Wall Street Journal," says Breakers' spokeswoman Barbara Smart.

Vacationing parents reap dividends because, says Smart, "kids don't bug mom and dad."

Edna Higgs of Fort Pierce treated her 11-year-old granddaughter, Emily, to the camp, and the child still reads financial pages, she says.

After considering their stock options, the kids can pursue less mind-taxing activities: ballroom dancing, beachcombing, golf, tennis and hot-dog roasts.

Probably the only thing they don't teach the campers is how to spend money as fast as you make it, which Tom Brett says his son has effectively mastered with the $25-a-week allowance he earns.

Says the elder Brett in defense of his whiz-kid: "Palm Beach is not cheap, and $25 doesn't go too far down here."

Cancellation penalties eased to encourage plans to travel abroad

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Responding to American fears about traveling abroad after recent incidents of terrorism, some airlines, cruise lines and tour operators are eliminating or reducing penalties for canceling trips.

The travel industry hopes this relaxation of rules will encourage hesitant travelers to make reservations by reassuring them that if new attacks occur — or their fears simply grow — changing plans and destinations suddenly will not cost them money.

About 1.8 million Americans changed reservations for trips overseas earlier this year following attacks by terrorists at the Rome and Vienna airports last December. Nearly 80 percent of them either canceled their travel plans entirely or decided to vacation in the United States, according to a survey by the nonprofit U.S. Travel Data Center in Washington.

That survey ended in early February, and since then more terrorist incidents have occurred: A bomb exploded April 2 on a TWA jet en route from Cairo to Athens, a West Berlin discotheque was bombed April 5 (which led to U.S. air strikes on Libya and further threats against Americans), and a plot to blow up an El Al jetliner ready for takeoff from London April 17 was discovered and averted.

Only a few weeks ago travel agents were attributing an increased interest in trips to Eastern Europe to their clients' belief that those countries may be safer destinations because they are less likely to be the scene of terrorism attacks. Ironically, after the explosion April 25 of a Soviet nuclear reactor near Kiev, fears of possible radiation-induced illness caused many Americans to cancel plans to tour Russia, Poland and other nearby countries. The uneasy Middle East is another area that has lost bookings.

UNTIL THE recent rash of violent incidents overseas, airlines, tour operators and cruise lines have been relatively strict in enforcing penalties for cancellations of trips and changes in itineraries, but now they are being forced by circumstances to ease up.

"The only hope for ... summer travel to Europe this year is for the airlines to eliminate advance purchase requirements so that clients can go there on an impulse," said Phil Davidoff, president and general manager of Belair Travel in Bowie, Md. Regulations covering the sale of APEX (advance purchase excursion) tickets generally stipulate that they must be purchased at least 21 days before departure, but penalties vary according to the airline and destination: A passenger who cancels a flight may pay as little as $25, or in some cases a percentage of the fare. Scheduled airlines sometimes have been lenient about making full APEX refunds if a passenger can document a genuine personal emergency.

Charter flights have their own rules, and a passenger who misses a flight for any reason may lose the full cost of the ticket (although insurance protection is available).

PACKAGE BROCHURES indicate a variety of possible penalties on the land portion of tours, aside from those on the air fare: A handling fee is normally levied in the event of cancellation by the client (written notice may be required) up to a specified number of days before scheduled departure; a percentage of the total land cost also may be charged for a cancellation closer to departure, and the entire price could be forfeited unless the funds are refunded to the tour operator by firms — such as hotels and sightseeing companies — supplying the overseas services.

The penalty for cancellation on most cruise lines normally ranges from $50 up to the full fare — depending on the number of days left before embarkation.

Some tour packagers and cruise lines sell their own forms of protection against cancellation for any reason. Other travel insurance options covering sudden illness and other causes of cancellation are available from a number of companies, although until recently the threat of terrorism has not been included in those policies as specific grounds for a refund.

BUT NOW at least one insurance firm, Access America, has added a provision to its comprehensive travel protection program that permits buyers to cancel or interrupt international trips if terrorist activity occurs in a city within 30 days of their scheduled arrival date. The insurance reimburses travelers for prepaid hotel and transportation costs according to the level of coverage selected. The company, which added the provision last month, says it uses a liberal definition of "terrorism," but if necessary "will defer to the State Department for ultimate determination of whether or not an act was perpetrated by terrorists." Access America, a subsidiary of Blue Cross and Blue Shield, sells the policy through travel agents.

MAJOR AIRLINES that recently indicated they have eliminated or reduced penalties include:

■ KLM Royal Dutch Airlines. All cancellation and rerouting penalties have been waived until further notice.

■ Iberia. Cancellation fees are waived for flights to Rome, Athens, Tel Aviv and Cairo.

■ Aer Lingus. The Irish carrier will waive cancellation penalties "if it can be established that the cancellation is due to a fear of terrorism."

■ El Al. Penalties for rebooking an APEX fare are not being collected, but the airline charges a $100 fee if an APEX fare is canceled less than 14 days before departure without the trip being rebooked.

■ SAS. Penalties for the cancellation of APEX tickets are retained. The regular $100 penalty for changing an APEX ticket has been waived when changing to an SAS flight to another destination.

Americans' fears due to recent terrorism abroad have caused the travel industry to eliminate or reduce penalties for cancelled trips in hopes of encouraging travel to such places as Paris, Pisa (top inset), and Athens (bottom inset).

CRUISE LINES that are permitting nervous passengers to change their minds about sailing without forfeiture of payments, or which are selling their own cancellation protection, include:

■ Sun Lines. This line applies the full value of any canceled cruise aboard its two vessels in the Mediterranean to a future cruise embarking within one year.

■ Holland America Line. A cancellation fee waiver has been sold for a few years. To avoid charges, prospective cruise passengers pay $49 per person and are required to notify the company in writing of their decision not to sail no later than 24 hours prior to departure of the ship — or plane, in the case of a fly-cruise package.

■ Royal Viking. Last November the line instituted a fee waiver program charging $50 per person to eliminate all penalties usually assessed, provided that a passenger notifies the company of cancellation by phone or in writing no later than 24 hours before scheduled departure.

TOUR WHOLESALERS who operate nationally with a high volume of business, and those that have a well-established relationship with reputable overseas hotels, can be more relaxed about cancellations, according to travel agent Davidoff, because the deposits required of them are probably not high and do not have to be forwarded far in advance.

Smaller wholesalers might have to pay a high percentage of the package price as a deposit for accommodations booked months before scheduled departures. Or they may be required to forward deposits to the suppliers far in advance to guarantee that the blocked hotel space will be held for future guests, or to negotiate lower rates. And so they often must send off a major portion of advance payments received from clients. If these operators are not still holding the funds when a client cancels after the cutoff date, and no replacement client can be found to go on the tour, the entire land cost of the package may be forfeited.

Under ideal conditions, both the packager and the hotel will try to be flexible because they are looking forward to future business from the customer. "They shouldn't forget about tomorrow," said Davidoff.

AMONG TOUR operators making it easier for travelers to cancel:

■ American Express. Cancellation fees are waived on the land portion of all packages to Europe, the Middle East, Africa and Russia for "tour clients who have concerns" about traveling abroad at this time. The firm is encouraging customers to consider other destinations, but will refund all costs exclusive of APEX penalties.

■ Globus-Gateway-Cosmos. Customers who have purchased a European tour are being allowed to change without penalty to another area of Europe; or, if they wish to switch to another continent, they may choose a comparable package to the Orient, the South Pacific or even North America.

■ Trafalgar Tours. With packages scheduled for both Western and Eastern Europe, the firm last November began offering a $15 cancellation protection plan to permit travelers to drop out for any reason. A spokesman said the plan is not a consequence of terrorism but was devised as a consumer incentive and is being purchased by most of its clients. It covers only land arrangements.

■ Caravan Tours. The company has maintained a full refund policy for 30 years as a goodwill gesture. It allows its clients to cancel, up to the day of departure — for any reason — any of its packages to Europe, Africa, the Soviet Union or the Orient. The entire land cost is refunded through the travel agent, who must still charge any penalty due the airline.

■ Maupintour. A cancellation plan for $30 per person is being offered for the fourth year as a basic service to consumers by this packager of upscale tours around the world. "We've found that most people are considerate and inform us of cancellations as early as possible," said the wholesaler.

■ General Tours, one of the largest U.S. wholesalers of packages to the Soviet Union, which had decided not to offer its programs to Israel and Egypt this year, reported losing many bookings to Eastern Europe immediately following the nuclear accident. Another American tour wholesaler, the Russian Travel Bureau, was also hit by cancellations along with other New York operators, though it had substituted Tbilisi in place of Kiev on tours to Moscow and Leningrad. Both firms say the number of cancellations has now dropped.

■ Intourist, the Soviet government travel agency, agreed to forego cancellation fees — as did some airlines that fly to Russia — for a brief period, but regular penalties are again in effect.

THE STATE Department, while not advising against travel to the Soviet Union or Eastern Europe, issued a travel advisory notifying Americans to avoid visiting Kiev and adjacent areas. (It also had advised women of childbearing age and children not to go to Poland, but later withdrew that warning.) Public Health Service has suggested that visitors to Poland take certain precautions — such as avoiding fresh milk and cheeses, drinking only bottled water, and washing fresh vegetables and fruit with bottled water.

It is always advisable when booking air travel or tours, whether directly with an airline or through a tour operator or travel agent, to ask what cancellation penalties — and insurance possibilities — are currently in effect and what is the time limit or cut-off date. All procedures, especially those instituted recently in response to concerns about terrorism, may be changed without notice.

DEAR ABBY

Mother disposable

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am the father of a son, age 32, who has found a novel way to become a father without any of the headaches of being a husband. "Doug" bought himself a disposable mother!

He put up a notice at a local college for a "surrogate mother" to bear his child for $10,000. He interviewed three women, selected his "mate," and had his lawyer draw up a contract. The girl agreed to carry the baby, deliver it, and then hand it over to him with no claim on it whatsoever. I was surprised to learn there were so many desperate college girls who would do this sort of thing for a price.

Doug's mother and I know him well, and we both agree that he would make a rotten father. (He's as selfish as they come.) I'd like to have a grandchild, but I think every child deserves a mother. Besides, this sounds like a crazy idea — like "buying" a woman during slavery days. Women are more than just breeding machines. I think this world is going nuts and I am glad I lived in saner times. — HOLDING MY NOSE

DEAR HOLDING: Although Doug's motives may be pure, the realities of single parenthood could be a bigger headache than the marriage he seeks to avoid. If he had asked me (which he didn't), I would have advised him to borrow a baby for a week or two and find out if fatherhood is for him.

DEAR ABBY: Last year when several brothers and sisters were visiting our parents, I made a slip of the tongue and called my brother's third wife by his second wife's name. (She is well hated by the family.) I apologized immediately, but apparently my apology was not accepted.

My brother was not present to hear this, but he was told about it, and took it as evidence that I had probably been visiting with his second wife, which is not true. I haven't seen her since the divorce and have no desire to.

Since this slip of the tongue occurred, my brother and his wife have been very cool to me. I apologized once for what was a slip of the tongue, but I need to know how I can get them to believe me. — NO NAME OR TOWN

DEAR NO NAME: Please don't waste any more time and energy fretting about what could be in the minds of other people. If on your next meeting they are still "cool," ask them if something is bothering them. The burden of proof is on the accuser.

DEAR ABBY: Re "Forgotten Parents" who loaned their son $10,000 and never heard from him again: I myself had to borrow a similar amount from a family member and I've been unable to repay any of it. It's been over five years and I, too, have broken off almost all contact with the person who lent it to me. Why? I feel so guilty about not being able to repay any of it that I can't look him in the eye — so I avoid him.

Conversely, years ago, I loaned yet another family member a large sum of money. He was never in a position to repay me, and the same thing happened. (He avoided me.) However, I forgave him the debt entirely and told him that he didn't owe me a cent. After that, our relationship was fully restored and now we are close friends.

Can people put a monetary value on the friendship of family members? Sign me ... THE VICTIM OF THE PROBLEM I SOLVED

DEAR VICTIM: Should they? No. Can they? Many do.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the 13-year-old kid who complained about her elders always telling her how hard they had it when they were kids struck a nostalgic note from my childhood. My grandfather loved to tell about his long treks to school when he was a boy. He'd say the snow was up to his waist (it got higher every year). As I got older, I got wiser, and finally reminded him that back in those days he was three feet shorter.

After that, I became his ex-favorite, and even though we remained buddies till he passed away, I wish I hadn't spoiled one of his favorite stories. — LIONEL IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

Defendant says rancher's wife threatened him

KERRVILLE (AP) — The wife of a Hill Country ranch owner put a shotgun to the head of a worker and threatened to kill him, a defendant in an organized crime trial has testified.

Carlton Robert Caldwell, 21, said he was trying to kill a deer that had suffered a broken neck when Joyce Ellebracht "came after me with a 30-30 shotgun and said she would kill me."

Caldwell said he was using an axe handle to beat the deer and "put it out of its misery," but Mrs. Ellebracht's father-in-law Walter Wesley Ellebracht Sr. did not want him to do so.

Caldwell said he stopped hitting the animal after Mrs. Ellebracht threatened him. The senior Ellebracht slit the deer's throat so it could be slaughtered for venison.

Mrs. Ellebracht's husband, Walter Wesley Ellebracht Jr., 33, "said it was a wise thing that I backed off for his wife would've blown my head off for she had done it before."

Caldwell and both the senior and junior Ellebracht are on trial for conspiracy to commit aggravated kidnapping and murder.

They are accused in the March 1984 torture slaying of Anthony Bates, a one-eyed drifter from Huntsville, Ala.

The state claims hitchhikers like Bates were lured to the Ellebracht ranch with the promise of work, then forced to stay.

Bates allegedly was tortured to death with a cattle prod because he refused to work. The state alleges his body was drenched in gasoline and burned.

STATE in brief

Statute requires reporting of abortions, Mattox rules

AUSTIN (AP) — State law requires all medical facilities where abortions are performed to report statistical information annually to the state, Attorney General Jim Mattox says.

In a legal opinion made public Wednesday, Mattox said the reporting requirement extends to hospitals and physicians' offices, as well as facilities licensed under the Texas Abortion Facility Reporting and Licensing Act.

That act, passed by the Legislature in 1985, requires an annual report to the State Department of Health on each abortion performed.

The reports include such information as a patient's age, race, marital status, and state and county of residence; the type of abortion procedure used; the date it was performed; the approximate age of the aborted fetus; and the number of previous abortions the patient has undergone.

The information is to be kept confidential by the state and released only for statistical purposes so that no person, patient or facility can be identified.

FarmAid II will be insured

AUSTIN (AP) — FarmAid II, the concert being held to help raise money for American farmers, apparently will be able to obtain liability insurance, organizers say.

FarmAid spokeswoman Margaret Wade said Wednesday that although a final decision hasn't been made on which company to purchase coverage from, insurance is available for the daylong July 4 concert.

Singer Willie Nelson, organizer of the FarmAid effort, earlier said inability to obtain liability coverage had forced the concert to move from its original site, Memorial Stadium at the University of Texas.

He said insurance companies were demanding $200,000 for that policy, then refused to write it when Farm Aid agreed to pay the price.

But FarmAid officials said Wednesday that offers have been made to write a policy to cover the concert at its new site, Southpark Meadows, a 60-acre outdoor facility south of Austin.

Rio Grande 'dangerous'

EL PASO (AP) — Water being released from Caballo and Elephant Butte reservoirs is creating hazardous conditions downstream for individuals who try to wade or swim across the Rio Grande, officials said.

The release of the water in recent weeks has raised the level of the river by as much as three feet and has significantly increased the current flow, according to the Bureau of Reclamation.

"People should stay out of the river," said David Overvold, chief of the bureau's water and land division. "Unlike other years, it is dangerous. You can't walk across."

Overvold said the Rio Grande currently has a depth of about seven feet in many areas of southern New Mexico and El Paso.

Four people, including two children, drowned in the river last weekend.

Film information wrong

DALLAS (AP) — In a story in today's Spotlight on the filming of a CBS movie about Lenell Geter, the Texas man who served 15 months in prison for armed robbery before being exonerated, The Associated Press erroneously reported that actress Debbi Morgan had won a daytime Emmy.

Ms. Morgan was nominated for a daytime Emmy this year, but the awards will not be announced until July 17.

GOP's Strake forecasts lively convention

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Republican Party Chairman George Strake is urging the conservative wing to work within the framework of the party at this weekend's state GOP convention, which could produce some early fireworks.

In forecasting a lively session between moderates and conservatives for control over delegate selection, Strake said Wednesday: "I think we'll have some rocky days but we'll emerge as a united party."

He said he is urging conservatives to put their demands in an acceptable form.

"I put out a welcome mat to them and the only thing I ask is that they work within the party and don't be confrontational," he said.

He said the battle will be waged over the election of the two top officials, chairman and vice chairman, as well as 62 delegates. Various groups are seeking to elect supporters to party positions.

Strake said he expects to win reelection, but not without a fight. He said the theme of the convention will be to reaffirm support for former Gov. Bill Clements' bid to win back his job.

"I think Bill Clements is a brand new campaigner. I think he's a party man," Strake said.

Clements, the state's first Republican governor since Reconstruction, lost his bid for a second term to White in 1982.

"I want to come out of here committed to reaffirming our joint desire to beat Mark White," Strake said. "I think the theme this year is going to be for our candidates to work more in harmony than we did in 1982 but more like we did in 1984."

The convention's main events are set for Friday and Saturday.

"We've got a lot of new people coming to this convention and a lot of them are here for the first time. It's similar to the Dallas Cowboys playing some rookies, you don't yet how they're going to perform because you haven't seen them in the past," he said.

Big-name speakers at the gathering include Vice President George Bush, U.S. Rep. Jack Kemp of New York and Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole. All three have expressed an interest in the 1988 presidential nomination, but Strake said he does not expect any conflict among them at the convention.

"The more the merrier as far as I'm concerned. It just shows a stable of pretty qualified candidates," he said.

GOP likes to forget opposition's name

AUSTIN (AP) — Among the many things that Robert Slagle does not like about Republicans is that they like to change the name of his party.

Slagle is chairman of the Texas Democratic Party. It irks him that many Republicans refer to it as the Texas Democrat Party, leaving out the "ic."

"They always do that and occasionally I dig one of them in the ribs real hard about it," Slagle said. "Our legal name always has been the 'Democratic Party.'"

Slagle recently dug state Rep. Chip Staniswalis, R-Amarillo, who referred to the Democrat Party during a discussion with Slagle at a recent House hearing.

In addition to correcting recalcitrant Republicans, Slagle offers his version of why the GOPers have trouble saying "Democratic." It all began 20 years ago at a New York advertising agency, he said.

"The Madison Avenue boys told Eisenhower and the Republican National Committee that Democratic Party had too favorable a connotation, and that they should always refer to us as the Democrat Party," Slagle said in a telephone interview from his Sherman office.

It's neither correct nor fair, he added.

"We don't try to change their name," Slagle said.

Texas Republican Party Chairman George Strake denies that Republicans are drilled in saying Democrat Party, rather than Democratic Party.

He chuckled when told that it irked Slagle.

"Now that I've found it it really irritates him, I might start using it more," Strake said.

Democrat Party is more accurate, according to Strake, who could not resist the opportunity for a political dig.

"Democratic stands for a way of government they've lost touch with. They are Democrats, but I think they have gotten away from being democratic," he said.

"In all official publications we will try to refer to them as the Democratic Party. In non-official uses, we will use Democrat Party," Strake said in a telephone interview from his Houston office.
