2 republics forge pact

Russia-Ukraine alliance snubs Gorbachev

■ Action could form basis of system of states in place of Soviet Union.

Associated Press

KIEV, U.S.S.R. — Russia and the Ukraine, the two main Soviet republics, said early today that they formed a temporary economic and military alliance and invited other "former subjects of the U.S.S.R." to join them.

The treaty mentioned no significant future role for the Kremlin or Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, whose authority has plummeted since he was briefly deposed by hard-liners last week.

The republics intend "to undertake joint actions with the goal of preventing the uncontrolled disintegration of the union state," the sides said in a joint communique released after talks that stretched from Wednesday to the early morning hours today.

However, the wording also indicated the agreement could form the basis of a new system of states in place of the old Soviet Union.

"As a result of liquidation of the state coup in the U.S.S.R., a new political situation has arisen, opening the possibility to accelerate democratic transformations and realize the sovereign rights of republics to the fullest extent," said the communique, which was read at a news conference.

"At the transitional period for supporting life-sustaining systems of the population and the functioning of the economy, it is expedient to form temporary interstate structures with the participation of interested states-subjects of the former U.S.S.R. irrespective of their current status on a representative parity basis," the document said.

The agreement joins the industrialized and agriculturaly rich Ukraine with the Russian Federation, which

N.Y. subway crash kills 5, police hold motorman

NEW YORK (AP) — A subway operator was charged with manslaughter after his speeding train derailed and crashed into a pillar early Wednesday, killing five passengers and injuring 133, authorities said.

It was the city's deadliest subway wreck in 63 years.

Police who charged motorman Robert Ray, 39, with five counts of second-degree manslaughter cited factors including the train's excessive speed and a blood-alcohol test.

Ray had disappeared for more than five hours after the crash until investigators found him near his home, Police Commissioner Lee Brown said. In a test taken more than 13 hours after the wreck, Ray's blood-alcohol test was more than twice the legal limit for driving a car, Brown said.

Investigators also found an empty crack cocaine vial in the motorman's compartment, but it wasn't clear if it belonged to Ray, and results of tests for illegal drugs weren't expected before Thursday.

"The passengers reported that the train was operated in an irregular manner and also at a very high rate of speed," Brown said at a news conference. "Passengers reported being thrown around during the time the train was in motion.

"Two transit employees also reported the train was operated at a high rate of speed and failed to stop properly at two stations," Brown added. He and transit officials couldn't say how fast the train was going.

Board OKs $20 million hospital expansion

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Midland's Memorial Hospital is to undergo a $20 million expansion to bolster its support services, including the emergency department, out-patient services, imaging center and the clinical laboratory.

■ Board approves budget/1B

"It's a major expansion, and it has to be done," Joseph I. "Joe" O'Neill III, chairman of Memorial Hospital and Medical Center's board of trustees, said Wednesday after the trustees had recommended approval of the Phase I expansion to the elected directors of the Midland County Hospital District.

The proposed expansion is in response to patient growth.

"It's just like adding to your house when you have more children," O'Neill said.

The directors approved the construction, which is to be funded through money borrowed against hospital revenue and will not be financed by tax money, O'Neill said.

The indebtedness incurred in the project will be paid out of hospital's excess revenues, said O'Neill, who said that "we (trustees and directors) won't have to go to the taxpayers" to raise the money.

The expansion, to be on the northwest side of the hospital, will result in switching the hospital's main entrance from the old north-side "ceremonial entrance" to the south side, said Dr. Harold Rubin, the hospital's executive vice president and chief operating officer.

Texas sues Feds for $1 billion in aid

■ Faulty census count misses some 600,000 residents, state officials say.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Texas sued the federal government Wednesday, demanding more than $1 billion in federal aid that state officials allege will be lost due to a faulty census count that missed some 600,000 Texans.

The lawsuit names as defendants President Bush, U.S. Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher, whose department managed the census, and other cabinet departments spending money on programs in Texas.

"This is not Washington's money or Secretary Mosbacher's money that will be withheld from Texas. This is our money," said Attorney General Dan Morales.

The lawsuit, which Morales said may be the first of its kind, was filed in U.S. District Court in Brownsville.

Morales said the state estimates that over the next 10 years, Texas will lose more than $1 billion in federal aid to schools, children, the poor, farmers and ranchers, the elderly and others. Many payments are made on a per capital basis and Texas will be shortchanged if the 1990 census isn't revised to record the true number of citizens, he said.

The money is being "collected by the IRS and deducted from the paychecks of working Texas families, many of whom were not even counted in the census," Morales said.

"Just as we paid for this fictional census, we will pay out of our own wallets for the programs that will not be extended to Texas because indifferent bureaucrats in Washington choose to pretend that almost a million Texans do not exist."

Witness: Cheerleader's mom asked about finding hitman

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman testified Wednesday that her husband and his brother schemed to set up Wanda Webb Holloway in a murder-for-hire plot designed to get Mrs. Holloway's daughter a spot on a high school cheerleading squad.

Defense witness Maria Harper said her husband, Terry, hoped to get back into his family's good graces by implicating Mrs. Holloway in the scheme.

The state's key witness against the Channelview homemaker, Terry Harper, is the brother of Mrs. Holloway's ex-husband, Tony Harper. Tony Harper lost custody of his two children when the couple divorced in 1980.

Mrs. Holloway is accused of asking Terry Harper to help her find a hitman to kill the mother of her daughter's cheerleading rival.

Prosecutors say Mrs. Holloway hoped Verna Heath's daughter, Amber, would be so upset about her mother's death she would drop out of the cheerleading competition. That would give Shanna Harper, Mrs. Holloway's daughter, a better shot at winning. The girls are now in ninth grade.

Mrs. Holloway is charged with solicitation of capital murder and kidnapping.

As the defense began its case Wednesday, Mrs. Harper told jurors she heard her husband tell Tony Harper in a telephone conversation that "he had finally gotten her (Mrs. Holloway) where he wanted her."

Mrs. Harper, who is estranged from her husband, said she married him twice in the past two years. She said she feared him because he has abused her mentally and physically. The two still were living together, however, at the beginning of the summer.

Terry Harper, who had been cut out of the family will, hoped to regain status with the family by helping his brother, who was the executor of the will, get custody of Shanna and her brother, Anthony Shane, Mrs. Harper said.

The brothers began talking about the FBI take Evans

BLACK CANYON CITY, Ariz. — A man who claims he killed 60 people nationwide was flown by the FBI to Arizona on Wednesday and led investigators on a search in the desert for three women's bodies. The FBI refused to disclose details of the search or the slayings Donald Leroy Evans claims he committed. Officials wouldn't allow reporters near the site of the digging, a spot dotted with cactus and sagebrush atop a ridge, off a rugged dirt road. The nearest building was a nursery about half a mile away.

Agents seize cash

HOUSTON — Some $1 million in cash, four luxury vehicles, cellular phones and weapons were seized and four men arrested at a palatial Fort Bend County home in what federal authorities said Wednesday was the breakup of a major drug money laundering operation. Four Mexican and Colombian nationals were held without bond after the raid Tuesday night at the home in Sugar Land. They were charged with conspiracy to distribute cocaine and money laundering.

Speeder's 'cents'

WACO — A San Antonio motorist who didn't think his speeding conviction made sense has sent 17,500 cents to McLennan County Justice of the Peace Alan Mayfield. Ken Mouille shipped two boxes of rolled pennies to pay the fine levied against him in May when a Waco jury determined he had been caught going 75 mph in a 65 mph zone on July 4, 1990. The jury fined him $175, $25 short of the maximum fine allowed. "This package contains cents, $175 to be exact, because the law that your courtroom puts out doesn't make sense," Mouille wrote Mayfield.

COUP AFTERMATH

Three Soviet republics hold 2,000 nuclear warheads

The rapid disintegration of the Soviet central government since the coup collapsed has raised questions about who controls the estimated 27,000 Soviet nuclear weapons. More than one-third of the missiles are targeted at the United States.

By Ed Offley
Hearst News Service

SEATTLE — More than 2,000 Soviet strategic nuclear warheads are based in three republics that are moving toward secession, U.S. experts say.

Although Soviet officials have taken steps in the past year to increase security around their 30,000 strategic and tactical nuclear weapons, some U.S. weapons experts have begun pondering the nightmare scenario in which breakaway republics try to keep the strategic nuclear weapons on their territory.

Eighty percent of the Soviet strategic arsenal is in the Russian republic, but about 2,000 warheads mounted on about 300 intercontinental ballistic missiles are in the republics of Byelorussia, the Ukraine and Kazakhstan, the experts said. Byelorussia and the Ukraine have already declared independence, and Kazakhstan's president, Nursultan Nazarbayev, said this week that there was no longer a need for even a federal defense ministry.

Initial signs of a struggle over nuclear weapons have emerged in the Russian Federation, where President Boris Yeltsin is reportedly seeking veto power over the use of the Soviet nuclear arsenal.

Chief Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said Tuesday the administration was confident the normal Soviet chain of command for nuclear forces was intact and there was no increased risk of a Soviet nuclear strike.

But Pentagon officials had no comment on the nuclear weapons custody issue.

"There hasn't been any formal assessment done of this (issue) by the Department of Defense," spokesman Lt. Cmdr. James Harner said.

Other observers said they believed the disintegration of the Soviet Union into smaller independent nations would create an opening for far more extensive reductions in the nuclear weapons on both sides. The strategic-arms treaty signed by President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev last month called for 35 percent reductions in both sides' strategic arsenals.

"If they (breakaway republics) get carried away by the euphoria of independence, they may well try to assert control of nuclear weapons on their soil," warned Bruce Blair, a senior fellow at the Brookings Institution in Washington, D.C., and an expert on nuclear weapons.

Emerging order could make Yugoslavia 'look like picnic'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The republics of the USSR may go their separate ways in the emerging new world order, but those who study these matters are convinced: It isn't going to be pretty.

There are deep doubts that eight, 10 or more independent countries, each with its own currency, its economy, its capital, its languages, its flag, its foreign policy — and with its own minorities yearning to be free — can exist as economically viable nations.

Far worse yet, what the world may see evolving are language, ethnic and border disputes turning into massacres and the upheaval of vast populations.

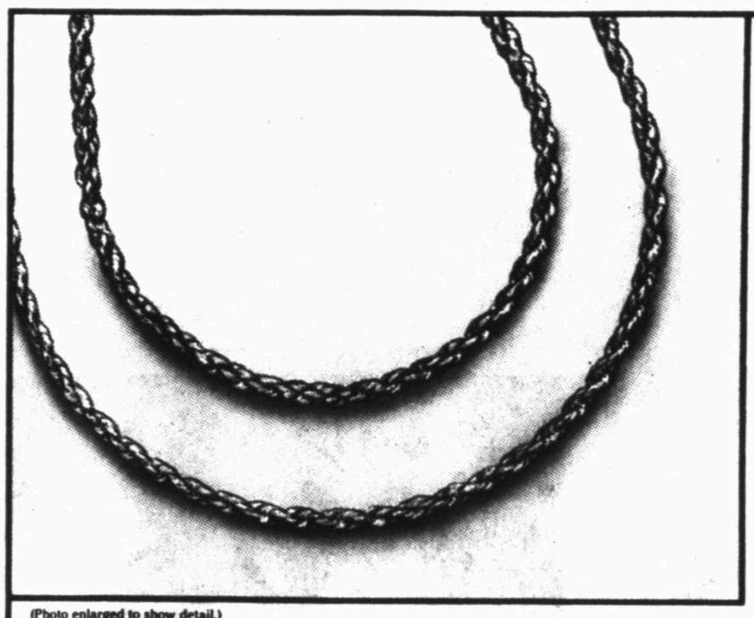

The role model may turn out to be the new order in Yugoslavia, where Croatians and Serbs are killing each other and what was once one country held together by the iron hand of communism is now uncommunist but splintering and bleeding.

"If this thing really starts going," says Jerry Hough, director of the East-West Trade Center at Duke University, "it's going to make Yugoslavia look like a picnic."

But Yugoslavia has 24 million people. The Soviet Union has 288 million.

"We're seeing at every level people who want self-determination and independence for themselves but they don't want to give self-determination and independence to smaller groups within their own borders," Raymond Garthoff, former U.S. ambassador to Bulgaria, said in an interview.

Even while Lithuania was seeking the world's sympathy it squelched its own Polish minority, points out Richard Hermann, political scientist at Ohio State University.

Leaders meet as Croatian fighting rages

■ Related analysis, more world news/5-6A

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Croats and Serbs battled for control of a strategic town in eastern Croatia on Wednesday, and Yugoslav leaders appealed for an end to the killing in the breakaway republic.

About 30 people died Wednesday around Vukovar, 90 miles northwest of Belgrade, the nation's capital, Belgrade television said. It said federal warplanes and artillery bombarded Croatian positions.

Vukovar, whose population of 80,000 is about equally divided among Croats and Serbs, is virtually encircled by Serbian rebels and federal troops. It would be the biggest Croatian town to fall.

More than 280 people have died in clashes since Croatia declared independence June 25, setting off a war with ethnic Serbs living in the republic, who have been joined recently by federal troops. A cease-fire reached Aug. 7 has disintegrated, but Croatia's president and the federal defense minister agreed Tuesday to work toward another.

The eight-member federal presidency met Wednesday in Belgrade and announced the appointment of a commission to conduct talks. A statement from the presidency said the leaders of Yugoslavia's six republics will meet Sept. 4 to discuss the country's future.

The presidency said it will "seriously study" a European Community proposal for a peace conference. The proposal, which would create a five-judge panel to oversee a settlement of the federation's future course, was drafted in Brussels on Tuesday.

Stipe Mesic, the Croatian head of the federal presidency, told Tanjug that his republic, Slovenia and Macedonia had accepted the EC initiative, while Bosnia, Serbia and its allies needed further consulations.

Leaders of Croatia's 600,000-strong Serb minority oppose Croatia's secession and demand self-determination for areas they inhabit if the republic leaves the federation. The ethnic Serbs have gained control about a fourth of Croatian territory.

Vukovar, on the Danube River border with Serbia, has been the scene of intense fighting since Saturday, said Radio Belgrade. Both sides traded accusations about who started the latest bloodshed.

Outgunned Croatian forces in Vukovar have been able to repel the Serbs and the Yugoslav army, which has bombarded the city with tanks and warplanes.

Croatian radio reported Friday that 42 federal army tanks were moving toward Vukovar from Tovarnik, along the Danube River that forms the border with Serbia.

Belgrade Radio also reported artillery duels between Serbs in Borovo Selo and Croats in Borovo Naselje, just north of Vukovar. Sporadic exchanges of fire also took place near Osijek, a Croatian stronghold in eastern Croatia.

A Croatian TV cameraman near Osijek was among those killed Wednesday.

On Tuesday, Croatian President Franjo Tudjman and the federal defense minister, Gen. Veljko Kadijevic, agreed it was "important to stop the clashes, establish a cease-fire and come to a political settlement of the Yugoslav crisis."

But Croatian Premier Franjo Greguric repeated Wednesday that Croatia will formally secede from Yugoslavia if "the aggression" against his republic does not stop by Saturday.

American witness testifies in 'last' war crime trial

STUTTGART, Germany (AP) — A California man testified Wednesday that former Nazi SS Lt. Josef Schwammberger killed a concentration camp inmate caught trying to steal bread for his child.

A second witness at Schwammberger's war crimes trial said the defendant told him he was sorry he hadn't killed more Jews during World War II.

Schwammberger has acknowledged being a Nazi camp commandant, but has denied killing anyone. He has been accused of killing 43 people personally and being responsible for the deaths of 3,374 others, mostly Jews.

His trial is expected to be Germany's last major Nazi prosecution.

Stopping several times to regain composure, Leon Gottdank, 69, of Los Angeles, described for the seven-judge panel his days at a Nazi forced labor camp in Poland.

He said Schwammberger shot and killed his best friend, Leo Pater, who had left his section of the camp to look for food. Gottdank said he spoke briefly with Pater after his capture by Jewish guards.

"He (Pater) told me he's got a child. He came to steal some bread," said Gottdank, who emigrated to the United States 41 years ago. "We lived from day to day. ... I used to steal also."

"He didn't have to shoot him," he said.

Gottdank said three hours after Pater was seized he heard shots nearby. He ran to the scene and saw the body of Pater, with two or three Jewish policemen and Schwammberger standing nearby. Schwammberger held something looking like a pistol, and the Jewish police had no pistols, he testified in Stuttgart Regional Court.

Gadhafi celebrates Great Man-Made River

BENGHAZI, Libya (AP) — Moammar Gadhafi realized a dream Wednesday with the launch of a vast irrigation pipeline to grow crops in the desert. But critics said the billion-dollar project may spell folly more than salvation for the country.

The Great Man-Made River is designed to bring water from beneath the Sahara to wheat and other farm fields along the coast. Gadhafi also clearly hopes to reap international prestige.

Arab and African heads of state, including President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt and King Hassan II of Morocco, joined PLO leader Yasser Arafat and hundreds of foreign diplomats and officials at the pipeline inauguration ceremonies on Wednesday.

Western European countries sent only diplomatic delegations from embassies in Tripoli.

At a ceremony Wednesday night featuring fireworks, pounding music and a laser light show, Gadhafi stood triumphantly on a platform as the first water from the river gushed below him and cascaded into a gigantic empty reservoir.

"The small, poor, backwards, illiterate people of Libya made the river without any loans or help from America with all its strength and wealth," Gadhafi boasted in a rambling, 45-minute, fiercely anti-American speech.

"After this achievement, the U.S. threats against Libya will double. They will make excuses but the real reason is to stop this achievement and keep the people of Libya oppressed. Wait and see."

While Gadhafi spoke, more than a thousand Libyans waded into the new reservoir, standing knee-deep in the surging new pride of their country and chanting praise to the leader who brought it about.

Even critics are awed by the engineering and technology required to bring 523 million gallons of water a day through about 1,250 miles of pipeline linking Benghazi and Sirte cities to 270 wells in east-central Libya.

But they regard the project as a boondoggle that makes little economic sense.

SOVIET: Alliance leaves Kremlin on sidelines

possesses most of the country's natural wealth. Together they comprise about 65 percent of the Soviet population.

The pact goes beyond a Russian-Ukrainian agreement signed last year by assuming the demise of the central government and claiming the right to decide what to do with its military and economic might.

The delegations were led by Russian Vice President Alexander Rutskoi and Ukrainian President Leonid Kravchuk. The Russian delegation flew to Kiev Wednesday afternoon following reports that Ukrainian officials were concerned by Russian officials' suggestions that they might seek to alter Russia's borders in a post-Communist era.

The talks also focused on the future of Soviet nuclear weapons. Russian Federation President Boris N. Yeltsin had offered to take into Russia all nuclear weapons now stationed in the Ukraine, which borders Russia on the west.

The statement today said Russia and the Ukraine had agreed "not to adopt unilateral decisions on military strategic issues."

Control over the Soviet Union's large nuclear arsenal has been a concern since the failed coup against Gorbachev last week and the intensified drive toward independence among many republics that followed.

An estimated three-quarters of Soviet intercontinental ballistic missiles are based in the Russian republic. The other ICBMs are in the Ukraine, Kazakhstan and Byelorussia.

Seven republics have declared themselves independent. The Ukraine made its declaration on Saturday, followed by its neighbors Byelorussia on Sunday and Moldavia on Tuesday. Russia has declared sovereignty but not outright independence from Kremlin rule.

The communique, released at a pre-dawn news conference at the Ukrainian parliament, noted that a delegation from the national Supreme Soviet legislature had taken part in the talks. But the statement referred repeatedly to the union in the past tense.

Rutskoi, speaking to reporters after the statement was read, said use of the term "former Union" was a landmark.

"This term is being used for the first time. It expresses today's reality," Rutskoi said.

The communique said Russia and the Ukraine promised to respect Soviet commitments in international relations, including arms control agreements "and responsibility for securing international peace and stability."

But the two republics appeared to claim the right to carry out diplomatic contacts with foreign countries themselves, circumventing the Kremlin. They concluded the document saying they would exchange ambassadors.

SUBWAY: Motorman charged with manslaughter

it crashed at Union Square-14th Street, a major transfer point, at 12:10 a.m., Transit Authority spokeswoman Caren Gardner said. The 10-car Lexington Avenue train crashed while crossing from express to local tracks, she said.

"I thought I was dead," said passenger Gilbert Asante, 24, a tourist from Ghana who escaped with a minor leg injury.

Some people were trapped in the wreckage for hours.

The first five cars derailed, and the lead car slammed into a steel pillar. The first and third cars were halved. Others were twisted or overturned.

The front half of the lead car remained on the local track. The back half was about 100 feet away, a floor-to-ceiling heap of coiled springs and metal scraps, tangled around support columns.

The National Transportation Safety Board sealed the accident site.

The train "was going so fast, the next thing you know it was 'boom,'" said passenger Albert Webb, who saw a baby hurled from its mother's arms.

The police department's chief of detectives, Joseph Borrelli, said an off-duty Transit Authority employee and an on-duty TA employee tried to get Ray to slow down.

The train earlier partially overshot two stations, authority President Alan Kiepper said. The conductor spoke to the motorman, who "assured him he was all right," Kiepper said. The motorman drives the train; the conductor opens and closes the doors from the middle of it.

Brown said the motorman had a blood-alcohol level of 0.21 percent in a test taken more than 13 hours after the wreck.

The motorman told police he drank three beers after the crash, Brown said. The commissioner said Ray would have had to drink more than three beers to get a 0.21 percent alcohol level. The New York state standard for vehicular drunken driving is 0.10 percent.

Borelli said excessive speed, the alcohol test, survivors' statements and investigators' observations at the crash site led police to charge Ray with second-degree manslaughter, defined as causing death by acting recklessly.

Passenger Clarence Thomas said the motorman appeared dazed after the crash and didn't answer passengers' questions about what happened.

After the crash, police asked Ray if he was injured. When they determined he wasn't, they left him to help injured passengers. Then Ray disappeared until he was found returning to his home in the Bronx more than five hours after the derailment, Brown said.

Some clouds, low 90s on tap

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high in the lower 90s and south winds at 10 to 20 mph, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be fair with a low in the mid-60s.

Friday is expected to be sunny with high in the mid-90s.

After an overnight low of 65, Wednesday's high was 92 compared with the record high for that date of 102 in 1964. The overnight low for today's date was 57 set in 1930.

NATION

Rain and thunderstorms were scattered over the Southeast and south-central part of the nation Wednesday, and a record heat wave continued over the north-central states.

By afternoon, showers and thunderstorms associated with an upper-level weather system were over the western and central Gulf Coast region and over eastern South Carolina, southeastern Georgia and the Florida Peninsula.

Showers and thunderstorms also were scattered from northwestern Texas to eastern Kansas, and over northeastern Arkansas, southeastern Missouri, western Tennessee and western Kentucky.

Heavier rainfall for the six hours up to 1 p.m. CDT included 2.1 inches at Biloxi, Miss.; and 2.08 inches at Emporia, Kan.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

TRIAL: Woman sought information on hitman scheme on New Year's Eve when Terry called Tony, Mrs. Harper said.

"He said she came to him and wanted someone scared," Mrs. Harper testified, recalling her husband's conversation about Mrs. Holloway's displeasure with the cheerleading rivalry.

Harper told his brother he suggested to Mrs. Holloway that someone "take the mother out. Then you wouldn't have to worry about the daughter."

Mrs. Harper testified her husband bragged to Tony Harper about what he could do to Mrs. Holloway.

Terry said that "Tony was finally going to get his kids . . . because they were going to burn her (Mrs. Holloway), that he was going to get her to say things with him wired (with a recording device)," Mrs. Harper said.

Earlier Wednesday, prosecutors asked Terry Harper if he had ever discussed with his brother what might happen to Mrs. Holloway.

"I said, 'I hope we burn the (expletive),'" Terry Harper testified.

In other testimony Wednesday, Patrick Gobert, 24, who described himself as a friend of the Holloway family, said Mrs. Holloway believed Mrs. Heath persuaded the mothers of the other cheerleaders to plot to have Shanna disqualified from the eighth-grade contest.

Shanna failed the tryouts when the two girls competed in the seventh grade for the Alice Johnson Junior High School team. The following year, she passed the tryout but was disqualified before the student election. School officials said she used unfair election techniques that included handing out to other students rulers with her name on them.

Gobert told jurors Mrs. Holloway had talked about killing Mrs. Heath after her daughter was disqualified. He said Mrs. Holloway discussed the incident for at least an hour with him the day of the disqualification. The subject came up at least twice more in face-to-face conversations and twice over the telephone, he said.

"I told her, 'Why don't you just have her killed?'" Gobert said, referring to Amber Heath. "She laughed at first and she just looked at me for a moment. . . . She didn't say anything."

"Didn't she say, 'You don't understand. I'm going to have the (expletive) killed,'" prosecutor Mike Anderson asked.

"Yes," Gobert replied.

The friend told Mrs. Holloway he had a telephone number for someone she could call to hire a hitman.

"I was not serious. I didn't really think she was serious," he said.

But two weeks later, Mrs. Holloway called him, Gobert said.

"She asked for the number. I told her she wasn't serious. I thought she was just joking," he said. "I shook it off. I just thought she was upset again," he said.

Defense lawyers opened their case by presenting a friend of Gobert who said he didn't believe Gobert was an honest person. Another said Gobert was malicious and wanted to get even with Mrs. Holloway because of an argument they had several months ago.

Terry Harper testified that Mrs. Holloway contacted him in the fall of 1990 and asked him to hire for her someone to "get rid of" either Mrs. Heath or Amber.

Harper contacted Harris County sheriff's detectives who had him wear a hidden tape recorder as they planned the murder.

In the final exchange, Mrs. Holloway said: "I don't care what you do with her (Mrs. Heath). . . . I want her gone."

"Now, Wanda. He (the hitman) said she won't be breathing much longer," Harper said.

"OK, go for it," Mrs. Holloway said.

Testimony began in the trial Monday. If convicted, Mrs. Holloway could receive up to life in prison.

LAWSUIT: State blames faulty federal census count

(From 1A)

The 1990 census estimated a Texas population of 16.9 million. State officials say it should be at least 17.5 million, adding that many of those missed were blacks and Hispanics living in urban areas and South Texas.

The U.S. Census Bureau has estimated that its 1990 count missed more than 5 million people nationwide, including more than half a million in Texas.

Texas officials say similar inaccuracies in the 1980 census count cost the state about $800 million in federal funds. Texas earlier joined New York in a lawsuit seeking to force an adjustment in census numbers.

"Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher of Texas last month refused to adjust the 1990 census figures. His decision flew in the face of his own admission that the count is riddled with errors," Morales said.

"We believe that our government is built upon the principle that every citizen counts, no matter the size of their bank account or the color of their skin, no matter where they live in the most rural stretches of our state or in Mr. Mosbacher's own hometown (of Houston)," Morales said.

The Texas lawsuit seeks three things:

- A court order that use of the 1990 census for federal funding unconstitutionally discriminates.
- Correction of the census or development of an alternate system for distributing federal money to states.
- Creation of an interest-bearing escrow account into which the federal government would deposit the disputed funds until resolution of the case.

"Texans have never been afraid to stand up for what's right. With this suit, we are fighting for that which rightfully belongs to Texas," Morales said.

Morales and his staff said they knew of no other state filing suit to obtain money lost due to an erroneous census. He said other states may follow, however.

"I'm not troubled by the fact that no other state has attempted to do this. I would not be surprised if other states in the days and weeks to come would not see the wisdom in this type of approach," he said.

Morales said Texas also may try using the federal Freedom of Information Act to obtain the complete census information that the Commerce Department has refused to release.

Ironically, the attorney general simultaneously is defending the state's use of the allegedly flawed census numbers in the Legislature's drawing of new election district lines for the state House, state Senate and Congress.

Minorities and Republicans are challenging the new districts, contending they are under represented.

Morales said Texas lawmakers had no choice but to use the faulty population data, since they had no alternative to the federal census.

Clarification

In an Associated Press story Tuesday, it was reported that a redistricting plan would divide Midland County three ways, with part of the county in U.S. Rep. Larry Combest's district, and the rest divided between U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, and U.S. Rep. Albert Bustamente, D-San Antonio.

The final version did split Midland three ways, but the county residents would be represented by Combest, Bustamente and Lamar Smith, R-San Antonio.

Currently, all of Midland County is represented by Smith.

EXPANSION: Directors approve construction

the hospital's north and east sides.

The expansion is the hospital's "tangible response to an increased need for patient services," Rubin said. "This is part of our strategic planning process."

Rubin, 48, will become the hospital interim president on Monday in wake of the resignation of Ray Branson, who is leaving Midland to become president of South Community Hospital in Oklahoma City.

Branson, who has been president and chief executive officer (CEO) of Memorial Hospital since 1980 when he succeeded Wayne Ulrich, announced his resignation on July 24.

Rubin, who holds a doctorate in pharmacy from the University of Michigan and who has been on the Midland hospital's administrative staff since 1985, is a candidate to succeed Branson, 48, as president in the post.

But he is not the only candidate.

Midland's Memorial Hospital, which was built in the late 1940s with funds raised by the Midland Memorial Foundation, opened in 1950 as a 75-bed hospital.

Since then, the community hospital has become a 272-bed regional hospital and medical center, commanding a budget of almost $140 million going into the 1992 fiscal year on Oct. 1. In addition to the hospital, the medical center includes the 49-bed Memorial West psychiatric-substance abuse facility.

The hospital's latest expansion was recommended by the Chicago-based Tribrook, a health-care consulting firm that specializes in design and development, Rubin said.

The $20-million Phase I of the expansion is scheduled to include the ground-floor-basement and four levels (stories), including a second-floor "spacer" to help align the new addition with the old.

In subsequent construction, five stories would be added to the Phase I construction to effect a nine-story edifice. Phase II would incorporate five 28-bed floors.

Under Phase I, the ground floor would incorporate the clinical laboratory; the first floor, the expanded Emergency Department (from eight beds or rooms to 19 beds), an out-patient services area, including testing and diagnostic services, and imaging services; second floor, the "spacer"; third floor, shell for a surgery suite and surgical-care unit to be outfitted in a subsequent construction phase; and fourth floor, the mechanical room.

Phase I construction would include renovating certain quarters in the existing hospital and would increase the hospital's beds by 20 to 292.

The Emergency Department, which would incorporate 28,000 square feet, is an urgently needed expansion, Rubin said.

"We've got eight rooms (beds) down there" in the existing Emergency Department, he said, "and we're seeing over 100 patients a day."

Despite the confinement, emergency-patient needs are taken care of "with much difficulty," Rubin said, and with the "great staff down there — great nurses and doctors that carry that facility."

Yugoslavian war rekindles grim memories

By Bernard D. Kaplan

■ News Analysis

PARIS — Yugoslavia's civil war has split Europe down the middle, awakening ghostly memories of both World Wars in which the Serbs and Croats, the two main antagonists in the current struggle, played provocative roles.

Germany, Austria and, to a large extent, Hungary and Czechoslovakia, the successor states to the old pre-1914 Austro-Hungarian empire of which Croatia was a part, strongly support the Croats' bid for independence. So does Italy. In World War II, Italian dictator Benito Mussolini helped to set up a puppet regime in Croatia.

But France and Britain, allies of Serbia during World War I and of Yugoslavia in the 1939-45 conflict, are cool toward the Croatian and Sloevenian separatists who are determined to break away from what they say is oppression by the Serbian majority.

Until the Soviet Union's own descent into turmoil after the abortive Aug. 19 coup, signs were growing that Moscow was moving toward more active support of the Serbs and the Serbian-controlled federal government, raising echoes of its role in the two world wars.

In 1914, Czarist Russia hastened to Serbia's side when it was invaded by Austro-Hungary in the wake of the assassination of the heir to the Austrian throne by Serbian nationalists.

The assassins were champions of a "Greater Serbia," which they sought to carve out of Austro-Hungarian territory that then included Croatia. As a result of Austro-Hungary's defeat and dismemberment in the war that followed, their dream became reality in the form of Serbian-dominated Yugoslavia.

Eighty-seven years later, claims that Belgrade still wants to impose Serbian control at Croatia's expense lie at the heart of the present struggle.

In World War II, the Soviets became heavily involved yet again in Yugoslav affairs, helping the communist guerrilla leader, Josip Broz Tito, win the gory civil war he waged against rival Croatian and Serbian factions that took many more lives — an estimated 1.5 million — than the concurrent struggle against the Nazi occupiers of the country.

Although he later broke with the Soviets, Tito became the unchallenged strongman of a unified Yugoslavia.

Virtually all observers agree there's no chance of the guns of August 1991 leading to a wider conflagration as did the guns of August 1914.

Then, rival European power blocs — the German and Austro-Hungarian empires on one side; France, Britain and Imperial Russia on the other — sought almost any excuse to put a match to the political firewood.

The end of the Cold War and the Soviet Union's disarray precludes anything similar from happening now.

But old reflexes — and memories — die hard.

The Yugoslavs have accused Germany and Austria of planning to turn independent Croatia and Slovenia into client states, thus reviving their old dream of Germanic hegemony in the Balkans.

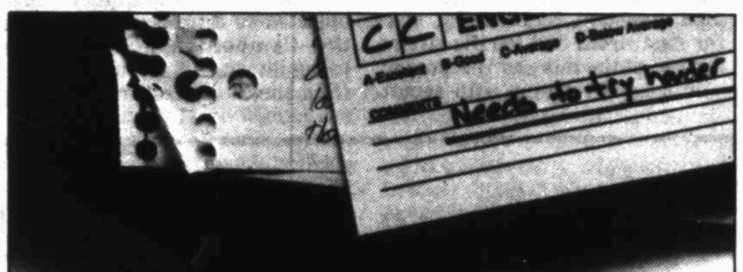

Belgrade officials have even accused Austria of nursing ambitions to recreate the Austro-Hungarian empire.

On Aug. 16, the German and Austria embassies in Lisbon and Ottawa received death-threat letters warning that diplomats of the two countries would become "legitimate targets" unless their governments stopped "interfering" in Yugoslavia's internal affairs by supporting Croatia and Slovenia.

The letters were signed "Crna Ruka," or Black Hand.

The Black Hand was the name of the Serbian terrorist group that killed Austrian Archduke Franz-Ferdinand in 1914.

WORLD in brief

■ 52 pilgrims die in Turkish crash

DOGUBEYAZIT, Turkey (AP) — A bus loaded with Lebanese passengers plunged into a ravine in this town near the Iranian border on Wednesday, killing 52 of the 53 people aboard, the provincial governor said. The survivor was injured.

The bus was traveling at high speed and failed to negotiate a sharp curve, the semi-official Anatolia news agency reported.

Gov. Mehmet Uzgun said 48 of those killed were Lebanese and the rest, including the driver, were Iranians.

Uzgun told The Associated Press the Iranian bus was one of three carrying a total of 133 Lebanese citizens that entered Turkey from Syria on Sunday on its way to an Iranian city, to visit a tomb of a Muslim religious leader.

In Beirut, the capital of Lebanon, news agencies were flooded with calls from the Shiite Muslim leadership seeking details and names of victims.

Most calls came from the press office of the Iranian-backed Hezbollah, or Party of God, organization and from powerful fundamentalist cleric Sheik Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah.

"We have many relatives, friends and acquaintances traveling on that bus. Please call us if you get any new reports," said a caller from the Hezbollah office.

■ Kuwaitis repel Iraq

UNITED NATIONS — Kuwait said Wednesday that it had thwarted an attempt by a group of heavily armed Iraqis to infiltrate the island of Bubiyan, capturing at least 47 of them and sinking several boats carrying others.

"It's not just a simple border violation," said the spokesman for the Kuwaiti mission to the United Nations, Masoud al-Fehaid. "The forces were quite large, and they had heavy arms with them. I would assume there were casualties on the Iraqi side since several boats were sunk."

Kuwaiti troops were searching for about 40 other Iraqis who were part of the group and believed to be hiding on the island, Kuwaiti officials said.

A spokeswoman for the State Department said Washington was aware of a Kuwaiti border incident involving armed Iraqis, but did not have full information and could not verify all the statements by Kuwait.

"We have initial reports that Iraqis traveling in small watercraft fired on a Kuwaiti helicopter that had observed them in the Bubiyan Island waters," said the spokeswoman, Phyllis Young. "We are now trying to gather more information on the nature and mission of what appears to be a cross-border violation."

A United Nations spokesman said he was awaiting a report by the organization's Iraq-Kuwait observer group.

Bubiyan, which is in the delta of the Shatt al Arab waterway, belongs to Kuwait but has in the past been claimed by Iraq. Fehaid said the island, which is linked to the Kuwait mainland by a bridge, is uninhabited but has Kuwaiti troops stationed there.

■ Candidate slams PAN

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Opposition gubernatorial candidate Vicente Fox on Friday accused the ruling party of stealing the Guanajuato election with "mafioso" tactics like selling protection or buying votes.

"It's a criminal organization, a mafia that must be banished from the country," Fox, candidate of the National Action Party, or PAN, told reporters.

He said the PAN is challenging the returns in 746 of Guanajuato state's more than 3,600 voting precincts but expects no "justice" from the election tribunal.

The state tribunal is controlled by the Institutional Revolutionary Party or PRI, which has run Mexico since 1929.

Cambodian peace talks bog down anew

PATTAYA, Thailand (NYT) — Peace talks aimed at ending the 12-year-old civil war in Cambodia bogged down here on Wednesday as the Cambodian government and rebel groups became deadlocked on issues ranging from how to hold free elections to deciding which soldiers must be disarmed.

The negotiations stalled a day after the government and rebel leaders reached what they described as a landmark agreement to reduce their military forces by 70 percent.

Prince Norodom Sihanouk, the nation's exiled head of state and the leader of a rebel group, insisted again Wednesday that peace was in sight, saying "the tragedy is over." But he added that a settlement would be delayed by the need for additional negotiations later this year.

"I see now I was wrong to be so optimistic" about reaching a comprehensive agreement, he said at a news conference on Wednesdasy, the third day of peace talks in this resort city 90 miles south of Bangkok.

Western and Asian diplomats said this round of talks would be viewed as a success because of the accord by the Cambodian government and the rebels on Tuesday to disband 70 percent of their forces and put the rest under United Nations supervision.

"Today's disagreements may set the peace process back by a few weeks, but we're still on track for a comprehensive peace," said a senior Western diplomat who was in Pattaya to observe the negotiations.

The three major rebel groups represented at the talks are the Khmer Rouge, responsible for the deaths of more than a million people during its reign of terror in Cambodia in the 1970s; the followers of Sihanouk, and the rightist Khmer People's National Liberation Front.

The talks are scheduled to continue on Thursday, with meetings between the Cambodian factions and representatives of the five permament members of the United Nations Security Council — the United States, the Soviet Union, China, Britain and France.

The Cambodian peace settlement is being worked out under a framework established by the five nations last year. The chief American negotiator, Richard H. Solomon, assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific affairs, arrived at the talks on Wednesday.

In a brief meeting with reporters, he said the agreements reached among the Cambodian factions indicated "movement in a positive direction."

Sihanouk has warned that the United States may try to scuttle agreements reached this week among the Cambodians because they differed from the exact terms of the Security Council framework.

Under the framework, United Nations officials would monitor a cease-fire and prepare the nation for free elections. Because the vast manpower and financing required of the United Nations to carry out the peace plan, the Security Council effectively has veto power over any agreement reached separately by the Cambodian factions.

One of the disagreements disclosed Wednesday stemmed from the disarmament pact between the Cambodian government and the rebels on Tuesday.

Sihanouk said the Khmer Rouge objected to a proposal to exclude the Cambodian government's paramilitary A-3 security police from the 70 percent reduction.

Rioting Cubans among last remnants of 11-year mess

ATLANTA (AP) — The Cubans holding 10 workers hostage at a federal prison in Alabama represent the last remnants of a lengthy mess: They are among the 125,000 Marielitos, who sought freedom in the United States 11 years ago.

To federal officials, they are criminals or mentally unstable people who, upon careful review, have been deemed unfit for the entry into American society ultimately enjoyed by most of those who came in the 1980 "Freedom Flotilla."

To their defenders, they are immigrants who have slipped through the cracks, legal non-persons who never had a day in court before a lawyer and a judge.

And from any vantage point, they are desperate.

"This is almost like an uprising among death-row inmates; what more can you do?" said Mary Finn, assistant professor of criminal justice and a specialist in prison issues at Georgia State University.

"They have nothing to lose, and that's the problem," she said. "That's the main distinction between this group and your normal, run-of-the-mill inmates reacting against the administration because of conditions or whatever."

After riots by Cubans being held in Atlanta and Oakdale, La., in 1987, the prison at Talladega, Ala., became the last stop for many of them before deportation to Cuba.

Of 121 Cubans in the maximum-security unit where the hostages were taken, 32 were scheduled to be deported last week when the riot broke out. Thirty or so others would have been sent back this week.

"I am sure the people are more desperate," said Roman Catholic Auxiliary Bishop Augustin Roman of Miami, who helped in negotiations that ended the 1987 uprisings. "It's been more years, that they are just waiting for their release."

"This is scary to me," said Sally Sandidge, a member of the Coalition to Support Cuban Detainees, an Atlanta group.

"I think a lot of them really feel that while they never felt like they wanted to hurt hostages, they want to fight for their own freedom," she said. "Some would die for their own freedom, and they see themselves doing that, and that scares me."

The 1980 boatlift from the Cuban port of Mariel to Florida brought 125,000 refugees, deemed "bums and scum" by Cuban leader Fidel Castro. They were detained initially, but the vast majority eventually were released to settle in the United States.

Somewhat fewer than 3,000 of the Cubans remain behind bars and have no legal status under U.S. law. They include:

—About 200 on a list of inmates to be deported, with consent of the Cuban government.

"If you're on that list, they can deport you. And they always get less of a shake than anybody else," said Sandidge.

—About 275 are serving prison sentences for crimes committed here — after which they still won't be released.

—And 2,400 remain held in indefinite detention under the authority of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, but are not under deportation orders, according to the coalition.

"Once people get to Talladega, everybody's at the same point in the process," said the coalition's Carla Dudeck. "They're sort of at the end of the line."

The 1987 riots prompted the INS and the Department of Justice to agree to new rounds of limited hearings for the jailed refugees. Some 3,800 went through the process, and many won eventual release.

But with only a few exceptions, those reviews have been completed. Those who didn't win almost certainly are stuck.

Aspin: Aid to Soviets should come from $1 billion weapons-program cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the House Armed Services Committee on Wednesday proposed trimming $1 billion from U.S. weapons programs to provide humanitarian aid to the Soviets.

"We do not want the first winter of freedom after 70 years of communism to be a disaster for the Soviet Union," said Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., referring to crop shortfalls and other economic disasters looming there.

And, more directly to American defense interests, the money would "promote stability and avert chaos" in a nation with 30,000 nuclear weapons, he said.

Aspin's proposal came as several other lawmakers, including House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., said the United States needed to re-evaluate its budget priorities because of recent events in the Soviet Union.

Aspin said the breakup of the Soviet system, the worst-case scenario being a civil war, could spread nuclear weapons among several governments and perhaps weaken security surrounding the warheads.

"There are additional possibilities of seizure of weapons by terrorists or sale of weapons on a nuclear black market," he said.

Aspin said he would make his proposal to the House and Senate conference committee considering the $292 billion Department of Defense budget. The cash would be put into a special fund administered by President Bush.

Setting aside $1 billion for aid would result in less money for other programs, but Aspin said he didn't have specific cutbacks in mind.

The budget agreement between Congress and Bush prohibits transfer of money between domestic programs, foreign aid and defense. Aspin said he would argue he wasn't violating that rule.

"This is defense by different means but defense nevertheless, so it should come out of the Pentagon budget," he said.

The budget pact might have to be changed later if the Soviet Union meets Western demands for further reforms and the United States enters a long-term economic aid program, he said.

Bob Hall, a Pentagon spokesman, said Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney would have no immediate comment on Aspin's proposal.

Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas urged caution before taking money out of military programs, and suggested cutting other foreign aid spending as an alternative.

Opposing Thomas ignores history

The attempt to seat a replacement on the U.S. Supreme Court for retiring Justice Thurgood Marshall is again revealing how this most important judicial position has become a plum over which various interest groups will perform contortions either to get their candidate on the bench or, as in the case of Judge Clarence Thomas, to keep someone deemed philosophically taboo from ever being seriously considered.

Thomas, of course, is President Bush's nominee for the seat on the bench held by Marshall, an arch-liberal. But his nomination is bogged down because special-interest groups have been trying to figure out how to oppose him. Thomas is a conservative who has the audacity to believe that minorities can still succeed in our society through individual effort rather than mandated solutions.

Furthermore, Thomas is a capable jurist. The American Bar Association (ABA) earlier this week rated Thomas "qualified" to serve on the high court — one of that organization's three rankings. The other two ABA rankings are "well qualified" and "not qualified, neither of which was justified in Thomas's case.

Normally the nominee, who is black, would be embraced by civil rights organizations. But in this instance the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights and other groups representing liberals and minorities have opposed Thomas's confirmation.

The latest addition to the Thomas opponents is the American Federation of Teachers (AFT), which is part of the AFL-CIO. Earlier this month, the AFT issued a statement in which it noted that the AFL-CIO and the AFT, as well as the NAACP, are opposing Thomas's confirmation because his record "shows he would not support the aspirations of working people, minorities and trade unionists."

The statement is a subterfuge. Clarence Thomas was born into poverty in the segregated South and through hard work and good fortune, was able to break free of that life and excel in his professional career. As a result he poses a threat to organizations such as the NAACP, AFL-CIO and the AFT who prefer racial quotas and other government-concocted "solutions" rather than real-life equality of opportunity.

Does the statement mean, for example, that the American Federation of Teachers, the AFL-CIO and the NAACP do not want a man on the court who will support the freedom to improve one's lot in life through hard work and individual effort, free of the constraints of an unwieldy bureaucracy?

The ability and freedom to pull oneself up "by your bootstraps" is a fundamental element of the spirit that made America great. Do these organizations really not believe in real American success stories any longer?

We still do; Thomas is living proof that it is a valid concept. We hope the U.S. Senate does and will confirm the nomination of Clarence Thomas to the Supreme Court.

LETTER
Neely's comments were not needed

I am writing in response to a letter you received recently. I can't imagine that the city of Midland was selected the most livable place in the United States with people like Charles Neely.

This particular person does not have any self-respect for human society.

How can a person or young child ever imagine eating manure? How can human beings ever imagine smelling manure off tires? Does Charles Neely actually eat and smell manure?

If Charles Neely had half the intelligence he thinks he has and half the reading skills, he probably would be able to read and understand the newspaper.

The City of Midland is building bigger access to the parking lots and a wider exit to Hogan Park — not a track.

Charles Neely's plan really stinks and I find it offensive and uncalled for.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Aug. 29, the 241st day of 1991. There are 124 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

Twenty-five years ago, on Aug. 29, 1966, the Beatles concluded their fourth American tour with what proved to be their last public concert, before 25,000 fans at Candlestick Park in San Francisco. Playing 11 selections in just over half an hour, the Fab Four began with "Rock and Roll Music" and ended with "Long Tall Sally."

On this date:

In 1533, the last Incan King of Peru, Atahualpa was murdered on the orders of Spanish conqueror Francisco Pizarro.

In 1809, American author Oliver Wendell Holmes was born in Cambridge, Mass.

In 1877, the second president of the Mormon Church, Brigham Young, died in Salt Lake City, Utah.

In 1896, the Chinese-American dish chop suey was invented in New York City by the chef to visiting Chinese Ambassador Li Hung-chang.

In 1944, 15,000 American troops marched down the Champs Elysees in Paris as the French capital continued to celebrate its liberation from the Nazis.

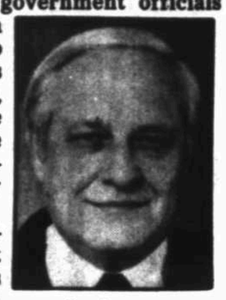

In 1957, Sen. Strom Thurmond, then a Democrat from South Carolina, ended a filibuster against a civil rights bill after talking for more than 24 hours.

In 1977, Lou Brock of the St. Louis Cardinals eclipsed the 49-year-old career stolen-bases record of Ty Cobb as he stole two bases during a game against the San Diego Padres, bringing his total to 893.

Whistle-blower faces harassment

WASHINGTON — One of the government's most secretive projects — high-tech hideouts where the president and other key government officials would work during a nuclear war — may also hide waste and gross mismanagement. But, as several people have found out, blowing the whistle on this top-secret project is risky business.

Anderson

The top-secret Continuity of Government project, or COG, was created by the Reagan White House staff, including Lt. Col. Oliver North and then-Vice President George Bush. It is run by the Federal Emergency Management Agency and consists of a $5 billion network of bunkers filled with high-tech communications equipment at secret locations around the country to ensure that the government would survive a nuclear war.

Fred Westerman was hired by the Army Corps of Engineers in 1986 to do security work for the COG project. He was a retired Army major and a counter-intelligence officer for 20 years, and apparently he did his job too well. According to sources and documents obtained by our associate Dean Boyd, Westerman found serious flaws hidden under the cover of "top secret," and they were flaws that the government didn't want to correct.

When Westerman reported faulty alarm systems at the bunkers, the government replaced them with ones that were worse. When Westerman complained to the Army about engine parts falling off of emergency vehicles, water seeping into high voltage lines and toxic chemicals leaking into the bunkers, the Army told him they didn't want to hear any more. Westerman had joined the ranks of persona non grata employees who have tried to expose waste and abuse in the COG program and who have had their careers destroyed as a result.

In November 1987, officials from the Army Corps of Engineers and FEMA paid Westerman a visit and ordered him to turn over his records to one of his competitors for an audit, or he would lose the contract. Westerman refused.

In December 1987 Westerman's contract was canceled. He submitted a bill for close-out costs but the government refused to pay. Fed up, Westerman filed two separate suits against the government.

Sources say that Westerman's efforts to get the FBI and the FEMA inspector general to look into the COG program went nowhere. So Westerman took his story to the House Armed Services Committee, which initiated an investigation and found serious problems with the program.

But the government wasn't finished with Westerman yet. After he cooperated with Congress, Westerman became the target of a fraud investigation and his claims for the money the government owes him were frozen. In August 1989, he was put under a gag order preventing him from discussing his case with anyone, including Congress. There are even some top-secret details that he isn't allowed to share with his lawyer.

The fraud investigation against him looks like a fishing expedition. After more than three years of investigation, the U.S. attorneys assigned to the case have yet to find enough evidence for an indictment.

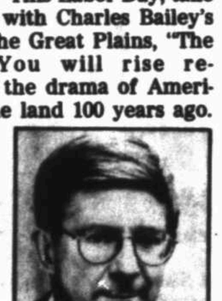

Meanwhile, Westerman has been frozen out of other government contracts, including the "Star Wars" program, and is hundreds of thousands of dollars in debt, working odd jobs to support his family and pay his legal bills.

GEORGE WILL
Bailey book great, plain storytelling

WASHINGTON — This Labor Day, take to a hammock with Charles Bailey's new novel of the Great Plains, "The Land Was Ours." You will rise refreshed from revisiting the drama of Americans who labored on the land 100 years ago.

Will

In America's tradition of regional fiction, Willa Cather's Nebraska novels have an enviable niche. Now Bailey enriches the genre with the story of 65 years of the life of Dan Woods, a South Dakota journalist.

Cather found 19th-century Nebraska hard and "bare as a piece of sheet iron." The prodigies of American agriculture have made the Plains so fertile we forget how recently they "seemed to overwhelm the little beginnings of human society that struggled in its somber wastes."

Woods' parents move to South Dakota, and to town, when overwhelmed by Nebraska's droughts, blizzards, hail and, finally, grasshoppers that came as a white cloud shimmering like snow in the sunlight, a moving carpet that in an hour stripped a farm, even chewing leather harnesses.

Bailey takes Woods from boyhood to death in 1938, through the nation's great conflict between country and city, when politics was a cockpit of controversy about America's changing character. Bailey weaves in historic figures and their words (William Jennings Bryan, Teddy Roosevelt, Mark Hanna, Sam Rayburn, journalist William Allen White and Mary Lease, the agrarian firebrand whose rally cry was, "You farmers need to raise less corn — and more hell!")

But Bailey is telling America's story from the bottom up, a story that turns on the agrarian revolt of the 1890s. Then the nation, so recently divided between North and South, suffered bitter strife between rural Americans wanting free trade and cheap money and the industrial interests wanting tariffs and "sound money."

The political passions of the 1990s seem synthetic and only shallowly felt when compared with those of the 1890s. At that time there was the compounded bitterness that politics acquires when material and moral anxieties coincide.

The West needed capital and railroads. The East controlled both. Declining farm prices meant that an increased number of bushels of wheat were required to repay loans to "soft-handed, smooth-talking" Easterners. And there was an aching sense of moral, as well as material, loss.

Farmers saw their economic, political and social standing decline. Their independence and self-sufficiency were, by other names, loneliness and vulnerability forced upon them by bad roads and bad communications and cycles of overproduction, declining prices, failure and foreclosure.

Historians have argued heatedly about whether consensus or conflict is the dominant feature of American history. Actually, there is remarkable consensus about the cultural values of capitalist individualism; there is constant conflict between economic interests.

Bailey shows how close we still are to the time when rural life had a crushing rawness. One day in May, 1934, a dust storm stretching from Texas to Canada and soaring 15,000 feet blew east. Dust settled on FDR's desk and on ships hundreds of miles out on the Atlantic. By December, two of every five South Dakotans were on relief — the nation's highest percentage. In July, 1935, the grasshoppers returned.

This Labor Day, Bailey's book, a loving hymn to those who surmounted such hardships, brings back to life an era when there were political passions commensurate with America's problems and purposes. We can not be reminded too often, or more pleasantly than Bailey does it, how much labor went into the making of the country in which this Monday we take our ease.

ART BUCHWALD
Coup-watching skill a matter of timing

The most important thing to know about a coup, such as the one they just tried to pull off in Moscow, is when is the correct moment to recognize the new leaders. Lapidus, a coup expert, told me, "You shouldn't do it too early and you shouldn't do it too late."

Buchwald

"That's easy to say," I said, "but how can you be sure of the right timing?"

"It's a question of knowing if the takeover will succeed or not. If you are fairly sure that the new rulers have events under control, then it's better to recognize them early. If you think that they will fail, hang on and don't take their calls."

"That's exactly what I did in the Soviet coup," I told him with satisfaction. "But I couldn't make head or tail of it because the new guys looked exactly like the old guys. Did you think that the hard-liners would fail?"

"I did," said Lapidus. "All you had to do was look at pictures of their wives. There wasn't one who could hold a candle to Raisa."

"That's one way to judge if a coup will work or not. But there must be more to coup-watching than that."

Lapidus confided, "There most certainly is. You have to ask: Who is behind it? I did that. When they appeared on television I said to myself, 'These guys look like Communists, and no Communists have a chance of surviving in the U.S.S.R. these days.' "

"Outstanding," I cried. "Most people are not that politically aware. What made me hold off sending a telegram was that the coup leaders were very physically unattractive compared with Gorbachev and Yeltsin. In order to rule a country these days people want their leaders to have charisma."

Lapidus smiled, "That's exactly what I told Secretary of State Baker the day the bad guys moved into the Kremlin."

"You talked to Baker!"

"Of course. He always calls me when there is a coup. He never thought there would be one in the Soviet Union — but what does the State Department know?"

"I'll bet the countries that immediately recognized the hard-liners are embarrassed over it now."

"They are. Gorbachev has received telegrams from all over the world, including Cuba, which say, 'Disregard previous congratulations to coup government — new set of congratulations to follow.' "

"How do you explain the fact that the hard-liners believed their power grab would succeed?"

"They were counting on the people wanting to return to the days of Lenin and Stalin. They also forgot to arrange free parking in the Kremlin square for their loyal tanks. So the tank commanders got mad and left."

"I can't believe that these men would risk their government pensions for a lousy three days in power."

"It is hard to fathom. Any two-bit dictatorship in South America could have done a better job."

"Do you see future coups happening in the Soviet Union?" I asked Lapidus.

"I don't think so," he said. "The men who tried this one will be sent away to places like Siberia and Outer Mongolia to break big rocks into little rocks and think about what they could have been if the coup had succeeded."

"That sounds like terribly harsh punishment. Will the guards give them anything to read?"

Trial begins for Keating, symbol of thrift debacle

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge dealt another potential setback to prosecutors Wednesday in the fraud trial of Charles Keating Jr., whose risky investments, lavish lifestyle and political access symbolized the savings and loan scandal.

Keating, 67, has been accused in various proceedings of looting his Lincoln Savings before it failed in April 1989, costing taxpayers a record $2.6 billion.

Keating is charged with 20 counts of deceiving Lincoln investors about the safety of junk bonds issued by another of his companies, American Continental Corp. The maximum sentence is 10 years in prison.

Superior Court Judge Lance A. Ito cleared the way for opening statements Wednesday after dealing with motions, including yet another ruling limiting the prosecution's case.

Ito ruled he probably will not allow former bank examiner Richard Newsom to testify to a statement Keating allegedly made on Nov. 7, 1988.

The remark was made at the beginning of a meeting with regulators, who were about to formally notify Keating that they believed soured Lincoln-funded hotel and housing development deals would cost tens of millions of dollars.

Newsom said Keating looked up and down a conference table surrounded with seven regulators and twice that many company officials, and said: 'Well, did you bring enough handcuffs for all of us?"

Ito said the remark could be prejudicial against Keating and that prosecutors failed to demonstrate it was made in a serious context, since it came before regulators made their concerns known.

It was the latest in many rulings against prosecutors since 11 months ago, when District Attorney Ira Reiner announced Keating's indictment.

Charles Keating

Reiner accused Keating of swindling thousands of investors out of $250 million in junk bonds that became worthless when his companies collapsed. But he said he'd prosecute just 20 bond sales to avoid jury confusion.

Since then, Ito has tossed out 26 counts.

Santa Fe residents unify against New Mexico's 'deadly dump' site

By Sam Roberts
N.Y. Times News Service

SANTA FE, N.M. — The Pueblo Indians called this city "the dancing ground of the sun." D. H. Lawrence memorialized the looming Sangre de Cristo Mountains.

And this summer, residents and visitors to Santa Fe, a city in which the night still can be pierced by howling coyotes, routinely have been treated to sound and light shows as thunderstorms flashed across northern New Mexico, extending the white-water rafting season on the Rio Grande.

For all the awesome power that nature routinely displays, though, many people in the nation's oldest state capital seem more concerned with the potential consequences of a force unleashed by humans at nearby Los Alamos National Laboratory, home of the atom bomb.

As early as next week, the U.S. Department of Energy is expected to certify that it is ready to begin testing the nation's first repository for military-related radioactive wastes from around the country. The $900 million underground dump in salt beds just east of Carlsbad is to store plutonium-contaminated tools, clothing and other debris.

Debris from Los Alamos eventually could pass through Santa Fe along a main thoroughfare, St. Francis Drive.

Federal officials maintain that any threat to Santa Fe residents would be further diminished if a bypass road contemplated by state and federal officials is finished before the department completes several years of test runs, shipping less dangerous wastes from Colorado and another national laboratory in Idaho over other routes.

But opponents from the Citizens Concerned for Nuclear Safety and other groups predict that the opening of the repository will be delayed indefinitely by legal hurdles and by congressional intervention.

For a century, the dancing light of the skies of northern New Mexico and the splendid isolation have lured artists. More recently, people have come to escape congestion and pollution elsewhere. They have no pride of ownership in the atomic bomb.

In contrast to the secrecy that surrounded the bomb project and partly as a consequence, the proposed nuclear repository has become a hot subject.

Opposition to the the repository, the Waste Isolation Pilot Project, or WIPP, is suggested by the sparse graffiti that mars Santa Fe's ubiquitous adobe. One message warns, "WIPP Is the Final Shaft."

But what is striking is the degree to which local businesses have been organized in opposition. Dozens of stores and restaurants display signs that identify them as "Another Business Against WIPP." A poster just inside Katharine Kagel's trendy Cafe Pasqual's proclaims: "New Mexico Refuses to Become the Nation's Deadly Dump."

Former ambassador ties Noriega to bigger bribes

MIAMI (AP) — Former Panamanian leader Manuel Noriega took $10 million in bribes to protect at least 15 tons of U.S.-bound cocaine shipments, according to a former Panamanian ambassador who pleaded guilty in the case Wednesday.

Ricardo Bilonick, 44, served as ambassador at large in Washington under Noriega's predecessor, Omar Torrijos, and had an interest in several Panamanian airlines.

But his most important role was serving as the representative of Colombia's Medellin cocaine cartel in Panama, Assistant U.S. Attorney Myles Malman told a federal judge.

"Bilonick has deep, historic ties to the Medellin cartel," the prosecutor said. "Bilonick would act as a conduit of cocaine flights from Colombia ... to the Republic of Panama."

Noriega faces racketeering and drug counts. He surrendered to U.S. forces following the December 1989 invasion of Panama.

Bilonick's testimony appears to substantially broaden the evidence against Noriega. At the time of the February 1988 indictment against Noriega, prosecutors said the bribes amounted to $4.6 million.

But Malman said Wednesday that Bilonick alone passed almost $10 million in bribes from the cartel to Noriega in exchange for protecting cargo flights to Miami carrying 15 tons to 20 tons of cocaine from 1982 to 1984. Noriega got $500,000 a flight, said the prosecutor.

That series of flights stopped in June 1984 after a ton of cocaine was found aboard one of Bilonick's INAIR planes landing in Miami, authorities said.

Bilonick also flew the cartel's drug profits from Florida back to Panama to be laundered and stashed in that nation's banks with the help of G-2, the Panamanian intelligence department, Malman said.

Bilonick's testimony supports evidence from the government's key witness, convicted drug pilot Floyd Carlton, and from Luis del Cid, a Noriega military aide who pleaded guilty and has said he delivered cash directly to his boss.

Panel: Tooth fillings pose no proven risk of poisoning

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — Dental patients are in little danger of being harmed by mercury escaping from a tooth filling substance that contains the poisonous metal, a federal panel of experts said Wednesday.

The panel formed to examine evidence of any risks or side effects from tooth filling material said that type of filling, called silver amalgam, does release mercury vapor into the mouth over many years. But it said the amount of mercury is so small that it poses no known danger.

"Very few patients are at risk of developing reactions from dental fillings," said Dr. William D. McHugh, chairman of the experts panel set up by the National Institutes of Health. "There is no substantial evidence that side effects (from the fillings) are significant."

McHugh, a University of Rochester professor, said that based on the committee's findings, "There's no reason for anyone to avoid the use of amalgam fillings if a dentist recommends it."

About 200 million tooth restorations are performed in the U.S. annually, many of them using the silver amalgam.

The NIH organized the panel after a controversy arose about the risk of mercury poisoning from the silver amalgam. Officials said there have been isolated reports of patients who seemed to have symptoms of mercury poisoning and a television program that explored this problem raised new concerns.

Additionally, some dentists have encouraged patients to have their silver amalgam fillings removed and replaced by other tooth restoration materials.

McHugh said at a news conference that there was no valid scientific evidence to suggest that removing silver amalgam fillings was a good idea.

"I would have no concern about using the material," he said. "In fact, I had two amalgam fillings just last week."

Silver amalgam is a combination of silver, tin, copper and other metals that are mixed with mercury to make a metal alloy that is used to fill cavities in teeth.

Swaggart's wife testifies

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Evangelist Jimmy Swaggart's wife said Wednesday that she told her best friend about the meeting that made Marvin Gorman quit his pulpit because her friend had a right to know.

The friend was Lynnette Goux, one of two women whom preacher Marvin Gorman admits embracing with more than pastoral fervor.

"I was very sympathetic to Lynnette because I felt like she had been greatly abused by Marvin Gorman," Frances Swaggart told jurors in Gorman's $90 million defamation suit against her husband. "I felt she needed to know there was another woman involved."

She said she also felt that Mrs. Goux would be upset if she found out about the meeting at the Swaggarts' home in Baton Rouge from anyone other than herself.

Gorman says his only extramarital encounters were a petting session with Mrs. Goux after she tracked him down at a motel and an incomplete act of sexual intercourse with a second woman, Lynda Savage. The women were the aggressors both times, he testified.

Gorman claims that Swaggart and other former and current ministers and officials in the Assemblies of God exaggerated his sexual misdeeds in a rumor campaign that spun his swelling ministry into bankruptcy.

Frances Swaggart's call to Mrs. Goux was part and proof of this, he claims.

Mrs. Swaggart said Mrs. Goux was her best friend, and had asked her in 1979 for advice about dealing with Gorman.

"Didn't you consider that to be gossip?" asked Gorman's attorney.

"No, I did not. She was asking me questions and asking my help and advice in some situations. She was talking about a situation involving another person with regard to her," Mrs. Swaggart said.

Ocean Drilling at Its Most Profound

This fall, scientists will drill further into the ocean floor than ever before, taking samples for the first time from the third layer of the earth's crust. They will work from a hole that was dug by five previous expeditions.

- The ship is held in place over the drilling site by powerful thrusters.
- Sound waves sent from a sonar beacon on the ocean floor to the ship's hydrophones locate the drilling site.
- A remote television camera aids in positioning the drill pipe into a metal cone at the top of the hole from which samples are being taken.

Scientists probe deep into Earth

ATLANTA (AP) — David Vanko will help make history this fall as scientists enter the deepest hole ever drilled into the ocean floor.

Vanko, a Georgia State University geologist, and 25 other scientists from around the world will drill into the third layer of the ocean's crust.

What they find may help explain the movement of the Earth's plates that cause rearrangement of the continents, earthquakes and volcanoes. It also may explain evolution of sea life, and climate changes, ocean current, sea levels and magnetic field.

"We're seeking to understand the energetics of the Earth's system, how it transfers heat, how plate tectonics operates, how the sea floor formed," Vanko said. "This is a fundamental test we're performing."

The two-month expedition is part of the Ocean Drilling Program, an internationally funded program in which scientists from 19 countries drill holes into the ocean floor around the world.

The program sails six expeditions a year at a cost of $36 million, $18 million of which comes from the U.S. National Science Foundation and the rest from other countries.

"Our mission is to learn how Earth has evolved through time," explained Philip D. Rabinowitz, geophysics professor at Texas A&M University and director of the program.

The deepest hole will be in the Pacific Ocean off the western coast of Panama. Five previous expeditions to the site have bored nearly a mile below the sea floor, but stopped in the second layer of the ocean crust.

In November, scientists will drill 1,650 feet more, entering the third layer, called gabbro. They will bring up samples of the crust and test them for age, mineral content and other characteristics.

Scientists will receive their own samples on which to conduct experiments. They'll meet later to compare their findings.

"As a petrologist — one who studies rocks — I'll be choosing samples to have cut into microscopic sections and study them under the microscope," Vanko said. "The worst-case scenario is that we'll be able to confirm what we think we already know."

The third layer is probably as deep as scientists will need to drill because it is believed to be the layer with the ocean crust's most activity, Vanko said.

He thinks his next expedition will be several hundred miles west of this hole, at a place called Hess Deep, a natural rift in the ocean floor. There he can compare core samples to see if they're uniform in different areas of the ocean.

"It's almost like if you were a doctor and wanted to look at skin. You could take a circular tube, punch it through somebody's skin and get a core or you could find a place where someone has surgically opened up the skin and sample the bottom layers directly," Vanko said.

"In this place, the ocean floor appears to be surgically opened, and it's likely we'll be able to drill into bottom layers without having to go through the upper crust."

Group wants perfumes banned

MILL VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — An environmental group is making a stink over what is says is an odoriferous situation at public meetings in Marin County.

Environmental Health Network is asking county officials to declare their meetings perfume- and fragrance-free, claiming the pungent odors make some people sick.

"Some people don't take it seriously and think we're kidding or being frivolous," said Susan Molloy of Marin City, who says she becomes acutely ill when near people wearing perfumes.

Merritt Robinson, chairman of the county Parks, Open Space and Cultural Commission, said Wednesday he doubts a ban would be legal. But he plans to put a note on meeting agendas asking those in attendance to limit their use of fragrances. He may even designate a "fragrance-free" seating area in the audience.

NASA sets Sept. 12 launch date

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA said Wednesday it will try to launch space shuttle Discovery on Sept. 12 with a multimillion-dollar satellite designed to study the upper atmosphere.

Mission managers set the launch date after a one-day flight readiness review at Kennedy Space Center.

Discovery is scheduled to lift off on NASA's 43rd shuttle flight at 5:57 p.m. CDT. The spaceship is to return to Kennedy, provided the weather is good, around 12:55 a.m. CDT on Sept. 18.

It would be the first shuttle landing in the dark at Kennedy, the prime touchdown spot since this summer. So far, eight shuttle flights have ended in Florida, the latest 2½ weeks ago.

Discovery's five astronauts plan to release the Upper Atmosphere Research Satellite midway in the flight. The satellite is to spend at least the next 1½ years measuring ozone in the stratosphere, atmospheric temperature and winds, and solar energy from an orbit 372 miles high.

Streets, housing get bulk of block grant

■ The city council distributes $831,100 in funds from 1991-92 Community Development Block Grant.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Housing and street repairs take top priority in an approved funding list for the city of Midland's 1991-92 Community Development Block Grant.

Street paving projects were allocated $259,397 of the $831,100 grant, while housing repair and rehabilitation programs will get $168,600. The money is earmarked for programs to serve Midland's low and moderate-income families, administered by the federal government's office of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

The Midland City Council's recent approval of the list allows Sylvester Cantu, program administrator, to formally apply for the federal grant.

Cantu said the money can be used in several ways.

An area of need has been designated in the city, forming a backwards "L" in south and east Midland. It extends from Big Spring Street east, north to Wadley Avenue, and from Illinois Street south and west to Midland Drive.

"For streets and parks, things like that, it's (used) in that area," Cantu said. "But if it's helping low income people, it can be anywhere in the city."

Street paving projects to be funded have not been designated, although they should be in the outlined area, Cantu said. Streets should be named later this year, he said.

Housing programs include loans for home rehabilitation projects and grants for emergency home repairs. Both are designated for low or moderate-income families.

Public service projects — including care for children, the elderly and the addicted — will receive a total of $129,918 of the city's grant.

Senior nutrition programs will receive $62,479. Two such programs to be funded are at the Southeast Midland Center and Casa de Amigos. A YMCA senior wellness program will get $24,939.

A drug abuse education program operating through Kerr Drug Abuse Center will get $15,000. The Goode Beginning Child Care Center will get $7,500.

Two cleanup programs, the community services deep cleaning project and city lot clearing and demolition, will get a total of $15,000 added to $2,000 in the lot clearing fund.

Midland Economic Development Company's revolving loan fund will get a $20,000 allocation to add to its $30,000 expected income. Those loans will be used to aid businesses in creating or retaining low and moderate income jobs.

A program that assists low-income residents in buying their own homes will get $50,000. Families get assistance with down payments and closing costs.

A new eastside community park, which will be designed for cruising as well as picnicking and youth baseball, received $100,000 for preliminary construction work. It is expected to take several years to entirely complete the park.

The city estimates it will cost $70,085 to administer the CDBG funds. Undesignated money — $38,000 — can supplement some programs as needed.

Cantu said funds are spent from city coffers and reimbursed by HUD.

Memorial Hospital's directors OK budget

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The $139.4-million budget of Midland's Memorial Hospital and Medical Center for the 1992 fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 was approved Wednesday by the Midland County Hospital District's directors in readying to adopt a new tax rate at 5:30 p.m. today to help fund the budget's indigent-care provisions.

The hospital's effective tax rate of 17.116 cents per $100 valuation on a $3.7-billion tax base is expected to be increased by 8 percent to 17.74 cents per $100 valuation, according to Chief Appraiser Ron Stegall of the Midland Central Appraisal District. The current tax rate is 16.62 cents.

In Wednesday's public hearing just prior to adoption of the budget and after hospital fiscal officer Jim Kendrick had presented a brief rundown of the budget, political activist Edna Walger, a vocal critic of hospital operations, declared: "I want more figures than are announced here. I have lots of questions."

She alluded to "profits of Clearview," in referring to the medical center's Memorial West facility for psychiatric and substance-abuse treatment.

"I wonder if there is not 'creative bookkeeping'" in the hospital's operations, she said. "You give me numbers that won't quit," she said in an apparent reference to a monthly multi-page review of hospital finances.

Kendrick, the hospital's senior vice president, challenged Mrs. Walger's view of the hospital's "creative accounting." Rather, the hospital follows accepted accounting principles in interpreting its finances, which are periodically audited by an outside firm independent of the hospital, he said.

Kendrick said that he would be glad to explain to Mrs. Walger how the hospital's accounting works.

Mrs. Walger, who is founder-president of Citizens Against Taxpayer Abuse (CATA) in Midland, has termed the hospital's excess revenue or profits as spectacular.

By her accounting, she figured that the hospital, in a recent nine-month period, earned $22-million in profits.

Dr. Stephen Wiesenfeld, president of the hospital's seven-member elected board, severely disagreed with Mrs. Walger's figures.

Rather, he said the hospital's profits on almost $140-million budget in 1992 are projected at almost 4 percent — 3.9 percent — or about $5.4 million.

"Those spectacular profits you referred to are hardly spectacular," Wiesenfeld said.

Inroads into the hospital's profitability are made through expenses, such as interest, bad debts, depreciations, and the federal Medicare program, which falls far short of reimbursing the hospital for its cost in caring for the older citizens, Wiesenfeld said.

Board member Jean Pittman suggested that Mrs. Walger might consider doing what she did — taking a Midland College course in interpreting financial statements.

In the hospital's 1992 budget, board member Tom Bruner noted that taxpayers will be paying about $6.5 million toward picking up the projected $8.6 million in health care for the poor — the indigent. The $2.1-million shortfall, which is paid out of the hospital's excess revenue or profits helps drop the hospital's 1992 projected profit to $5.4 million, Bruner said.

Of the hospital's $139.4-million budget, $89.4-million is operating expenses, which includes $35.3 million in salaries

Council: Historic district hits limits

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Some city council members say the Midland Historic District, twice expanded since its dedication, has gone about as far as it should go.

Since it was designated nine months ago, the district has been expanded by several blocks to the east and west. The original district was designed as a voluntary recognition for "old" Midland, without zoning requirements or limits on development.

Marked by bright blue signs and buttons in the center of each street, the district is bordered by Garfield on the west, and includes Missouri, Indiana, Brunson, Holloway and College to east to F Street. Missouri Avenue homes included extend to E Street.

A first request, filed in May by residents of the 2100 blocks of Holloway and College streets, was successful in including those blocks, which had been left out of the original plan. A few weeks ago, another request was filed, asking for inclusion of the 1100 block of Missouri. Its approval will take the district one block further to the east, to D Street and add two half blocks on College between H and F streets.

Midland man dies in crash

Staff Report

A Midland man driving a jeep was killed following a head-on accident with a truck about 10 miles north of Midland in Martin County about 5:15 a.m. Wednesday, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Mark Kramer, 22, 2006 W. Michigan Ave., was pronounced dead at the scene about 6:35 a.m. by Martin County Justice of the Peace Nolan Parker.

Kramer was traveling north on Highway 349 in a 1987 Jeep when he crashed head-on with a 1981 Kenworth tractor-trailer driven southbound by Luis Martinez of Odessa, the DPS report stated.

According to reports, Martinez was approaching a vehicle traveling in the opposite direction when Kramer attempted to pass the vehicle resulting in the collision. Kramer was wearing a seat belt.

The accident was investigated by Cpl. Wade Turner of Stanton.

City joins alcohol control lobby

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Attorney general opinions have said the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Code preempts the rights of cities for regulation of alcohol use.

The city of Midland has joined with Dallas and other Texas cities supporting the right to regulate alcohol consumption on its property — public streets, alleys, sidewalks and parks.

Dallas City Councilman Max Wells sought the city's support, and received it in the form of a resolution approved by the city council. Dallas has lobbyists in Austin to influence legislation about the rights of cities, and an aide to Wells said Midland's show of support will accompany others there.

Mayor Carroll Thomas said legislation would help strengthen the city's ordinances prohibiting alcohol consumption, especially in the parks.

"You know the problems Dallas has been having problems (with illegal alcohol consumption) in their downtown area," he said. "Certainly we don't have that to such an extent, but we have some of that. We're looking for support from that standpoint."

Although Midland, like many cities, has an ordinance prohibiting consumption of alcoholic beverages in public places, the validity of those rules has come into question.

"We've still got these (ordinances) on the books . . . although the (Texas) Attorney General opinion has been that they are invalid," said City Attorney David Reagan.

Attorney general opinions have said the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Code preempts the rights of cities for regulation of alcohol use. Only the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission has the authority to regulate possession and consumption of alcoholic beverages, the opinions say.

Reagan said the attorney general's opinion is not law, although it is frequently sought in legal questions.

In fact, he said, some other attorneys' interpretations of the rights of cities differ.

"Some say the code preempted (city rules on) consumption of alcohol in those areas, but not possession," Reagan said.

The city ordinances cover both. An ordinance says persons may not consume alcohol on public highways, roads, alleys and streets. Alcohol in a person's possession in those areas must be in its original, unopened container.

Likewise, alcohol consumption is allowed in only two of the city's parks, and the server must have a permit. Any beer consumed must be dispensed from a keg into paper cups. Still, police find violators.

"We have more problems in some parks than others," said Midland Police Lt. John Urby. "But it's there, especially on the weekends." Urby said downtown is not a problem area, but some westside parking lots and south Midland streetcorners are frequent illegal drinking sites.

Reagan said Midland's alcohol ordinances would likely stand up to legal challenge, but could be strengthened through legislation.

"We have gone ahead and supported legislation that would make the city's right clear cut," Reagan said.

Electrocution victim's wife files lawsuit

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A civil lawsuit claiming wrongful death and gross negligence was filed Wednesday against a Midland security systems company in connection with the electrocution of an employee installing a burglar alarm last year.

The wife of the man killed, Shelly Jacobs, filed to sue the security company, Aprotex Corporation, as well as Klein Tools Inc, an out-of-state business, in the 142nd District Court.

Basis for the lawsuit stems from the electrocution of Michael Jacobs, 25, on July 17, 1990, at a 1608 Stanolind Ave. residence.

Jacobs was in the attic of the home pulling a metal "fish" wire between studs to retrieve an alarm wire, police reported at the time of the incident. While pulling the wire through, it caught a "hot" wire — one carrying an electrical current — causing the electrocution, police said.

"We think there were some problems in the way Aprotex was training some of their people and the choice of materials (used in alarm installation)," said Abner Burnett, Ms. Jacobs' attorney.

Klein Tools Inc. manufactures the fish wire used by Jacobs, Burnett said.

Representatives of both defendants declined comment on Wednesday. An Aprotex spokesman said the company had not received notice of the lawsuit. Klein Tools Inc. refused to comment because of policy on pending litigation, a spokesman said.

The lawsuit claims Aprotex was negligent, at the time of the accident, in employee training, choice of tools, aspects of hiring practices, failure to inspect and eliminate work site dangers, and failure to coordinate between employees.

Aprotex was "guilty of wanton and reckless disregard for the safety" of workers doing such work as Jacobs at the time of the accident, the suit states.

The lawsuit further claims that Klein Tools Inc. was negligent in the design, manufacture and distribution of the fish wire used by Aprotex, and Jacobs at the time.

A fish wire is used to pull other wires through constricted spaces, such as between wall studs.

Negligence on behalf of Klein Tools Inc. was stated in the lawsuit as improper design, assembly and manufacture; improper selection of materials used; failure to properly inspect and test; and failure to warn of defective and unreasonable danger.

No specific sum of damages was stated in the lawsuit.

DISTRICT: Council considers setting limits

(From 1B)

"I think we need to establish some boundary and let that be it," said District 3 Councilman Buddy Sipes. "We don't need to keep changing it all the time."

Although he supported the recent expansion, that is as far as the district should go, Sipes said.

The most recent expansion request, although is passed 4-2, was not wholeheartedly supported by the council, which must approve all changes. Even some councilmen who were supportive of the proposal were skeptical of continued changes to the district.

"I think it's big enough," said District 1 Councilman James Devenport. "I think that expansion pretty well squared it off at the end and fit in well, but we've done enough changes."

At-large Councilman Faircloth, an opponent of the recent change, said the "historic" designation would lose its meaning if overused.

"We have a lot of old, historic homes," he said. "I would be in favor of recognizing residences individually rather than continue to name entire neighborhoods. I think there is a point the value is diminished."

Nancy McKinley, chairman of the Midland County Historical Commission, which originally campaigned for the district designation, said there are natural boundaries that will force limitation of the area's size.

"The size of the area has nothing to do with historical preservation really," McKinley said. "There naturally would be a limit. They start running into town, into the railroad tracks and the highway. But I don't know there should be any hard and fast rules."

Becky Hamm, city planner, said the two requests have gone to the council on recommendation of her department.

"The planning and zoning commission was brought in on the last request, because we wanted to get a little more input to develop a stable historic district," Hamm said.

She said the "firming up" of boundaries by the council and commission may not end requests for expansion, however.

"In the future, someone may come to us with good cause for expanding it again. . . . But I think it was the feeling of the council that the district's boundaries should be honored as firm," Hamm said.

Expanding the district only requires moving a few signs and adding some markers at a cost under $40, officials said.

The historic district is a source of pride, Ms. McKinley said. Her organization took an active role on behalf of the district during the recent bed and breakfast controversy.

Members and supporters of the commission spoke out against approval for bed and breakfasts to operate in the specially designated district. The entire proposal was defeated on second reading Tuesday.

"Midland as a whole is very proud to have such a nice, well-kept district," Ms. McKinley said. "The people in the district are rather unusual and proud of what they have in being part of it."

State sets hearing for Dallas YMCA

DALLAS (AP) — A Sept. 12 hearing has been scheduled for the East Dallas YMCA to respond to allegations that could cost the facility its day-care license, state officials say.

The hearing is the result of the confession of former East Dallas YMCA counselor David Wayne Jones, who has admitted to molesting at least 40 children at the center. He has pleaded guilty to 15 charges connected to the molestations.

The licensing division of the Texas Department of Human Services has served notice it is looking into "administrative problems" following Jones' conviction.

"It (revocation) is an uncommon practice," said Oliver Northwood, assistant regional area manager for the DHS.

"We try to work with people to meet the standards," Northwood said Tuesday. "We're not in the business to put people out of business.

Until the situation is resolved, the program will continue to care for more than 200 children enrolled, said Bill Botts, vice president of the YMCA of Metropolitan Dallas.

"We've never been through anything like this before, so we're trying to figure everything out," Botts said.

Jones, 20, the principal figure in the city's largest child molestation case, told police in June that he sexually abused at least 40 children who attended the East Dallas YMCA, police said. He was sentenced to three consecutive 15-year prison terms.

Jones has received 13 additional 15-year sentences as well as probation.

Earlier this month a grand jury declined to indict the executive director of the East Dallas branch of the YMCA on a charge of failure to report child abuse.

TV program uncovers missing girl in Mexico

EL PASO (AP) — A 5-year-old girl, missing a year and a half, was in the care of Mexican child welfare officials while a nationwide search for her was conducted.

The girl, Angelica Marinquez, and her mother from Juarez, Mexico, were reunited this week, the El Paso Herald-Post reported.

Her case was aired last March on the national television program "America's Most Wanted" and police and missing children's groups swamped El Paso and Ciudad Juarez, Mexico media with her photo.

Throughout that time, the girl was at a child welfare facility in Chihuahua City, Mexico, police said. A tip led detectives to the Department for Family Development in Chihuahua.

Police said the girl will remain at the DIF facility while she readjusts to her mother.

Angelica disappeared from a downtown El Paso Greyhound station Feb. 17, 1990. She and her two brothers were left in the care of their uncle, who is mentally retarded. When their mother returned, the girl was gone.

Police first believed the toddler had wandered away. They later feared she had been kidnapped or sold.

Police have since learned that Angelica was with a woman at the Juarez bus station. That woman, who was not identified, asked another woman to take the girl because she could support her, police Detective Jesus Terrones said. Police are unsure how the girl got from the El Paso bus station to the Juarez bus station.

The second woman took the child and reported the incident to security, but the guards told her they couldn't do anything, Terrones said.

The woman took Angelica with her to Chihuahua City and handed her over to DIF the next day.

"The important thing is that she was found alive," said Detective Joe Molinar, who also worked on the case. "I took a personal interest in it, because I also have a little girl."

Police received more than 100 leads when the child was first reported missing and dozens more when her case was aired on television. But none were helpful.

"Had the information gotten out south of the border right after it happened, it wouldn't have taken so long to find her," Terrones said.

Police were tipped to the girl's whereabouts by a woman who had been posting fliers in Chihuahua on another missing child.

Corpus Christi requests USS Lexington for tourists

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — City tourism officials were in Washington Wednesday to fight for the USS Lexington, a vintage aircraft carrier they believe would be an extraordinary tourist attraction.

Corpus Christi is one of four cities vying for the decommissioned carrier, which will either be scrapped later this year or turned into a floating museum.

Quincy, Mass., Pensacola, Fla., and Mobile, Ala., also want the World War II vessel.

The decision rests with Secretary of the Navy H. Lawrence Garrett, who was scheduled to review Corpus Christi's bid presentation on Wednesday.

The Corpus Christi City Council Tuesday contributed some ammo for the battle, voting to issue $3 million in certificates of obligation to be paid with hotel-motel taxes.

"We feel that it would be a major visitor's attraction and will bring additional people to town," said Robert Earley, president of the Convention and Visitors Bureau, which is leading the fight for the Lexington. "It will also be a reason for those people who are already coming to stay an extra day, to see it, to tour it."

The Corpus Christi City Council Tuesday contributed some ammo for the battle, voting to issue $3 million in certificates of obligation to be paid off with hotel-motel tax revenues.

The public funds would be added to $1.5 million in private donations raised to help lure the Lexington.

The effort is backed by Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, and Phil Gramm, R-Texas, along with Rep. Solomon Ortiz, D-Corpus Christi, who were expected to be present when the city made it pitch, Earley said.

But even with that kind of backing, the proposal hasn't been embraced by everyone. Some people just don't want the ship.

"This $3 million that these people want is just the beginning," said Lewis Lovelace of the Corpus Christi Taxpayers Association.

"There is no way this bucket of rust will pay its own way," he said. "Put this on the ballot and let the voters decide if they want this monstrosity."

DEATHS

Berneice Grimes

Services for Berniece Hill Grimes, 79, of Midland will be at 1 p.m. today at First Baptist Church Chapel with Dr. James Denison officiating. Interment will follow at Fairview Cemetery with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Pallbearers will be Owen E. Parrish, Rev. James M. Collie, G. Mike Hill, Howard H. Grimes and William M. Kerr, Sr.

Honorary pallbearers will be Sue Read, Linda Hamilton, Charlene Bell, Kenneth R. Nichols, George Taylor, James McCart and Dr. Gregory Bartha.

Mrs. Grimes died Tuesday at her residence following a lengthy illness.

She was born July 12, 1912, in Midland and was the eldest of three children born to Midland ranching pioneers, J.E. "Bob" Hill and Irene Florey Hill. She was reared and educated in Midland and following graduation from Midland High School she attended Baylor University.

Following college, she was employed briefly in Midland by her father. Later she traveled to Venezuela where she joined an aunt in teaching school for an American owned oil company in the camp facilities.

After a number of years in Venezuela and Peru, she returned to Midland.

She was preceded in death by her parents; a younger sister, Marie Hill Collie and an infant son.

Survivors include one son, Howard Hill "Chico" Grimes of Midland; one brother, J.E. Hill, Jr., of Midland; one niece and three nephews.

The family requests memorials be directed to the American Cancer Society, the Alzheimer's Foundation or a favorite charity.

Mark Kramer

Services for Mark Kramer of Midland are pending with F.T. Blount Funeral Home in Tampa, Fla. Local arrangements are being handled by Ellis Funeral Home.

He died early Wednesday morning in a car accident.

Walter Hunsinger

EASTLAND — Walter T. Hunsinger, 82, of Eastland and formerly of Midland, died Tuesday in an Eastland hospital.

Service arrangements were handled by Edwards Funeral Home.

Hunsinger was born Sept. 30, 1908, in Spartanburg, S.C. He married Ethel Elders on June 1, 1929. She preceded him in death in 1946.

Hunsinger served in the U.S. Marine Corps from June 1944 to December 1945. He married Margaret Scruggs and moved to Midland in 1955, where he worked as a service station attendant until his retirement.

In June of this year he moved to Moran, then later to a nursing home in Eastland.

Survivors include one daughter, Mrs. Warren C. (Helen) Fincher, of Moran; one brother, Woodrow Hunsinger of Richmond, Va.; two sisters, Mrs. Pauline Stepp of Gaffney, S.C., and Mrs. Mae Lambert of Duncan, S.C.; four grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

He was preceded in death by his wife, Margaret Hunsinger; one brother and five sisters.

Elbert Bateman

Services for Elbert Bateman of Midland have been set for 11 a.m. Friday at the Manor Park Saudree Family Chapel with Rev. Bob Porterfield, pastor of West Kentucky Baptist Church, officiating. Interment will follow at Reathaven Memorial Park with Ellis Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

He died Wednesday at a local hospital.

He was born Oct. 11, 1908, in Grandfalls. He lived in West Texas and New Mexico prior to moving to Lubbock, where he graduated from high school.

He met Alta Nowlin in Lubbock and they were married Oct. 6, 1930, in Rotan. He worked as an accountant for Shamrock Oil and Gas until 1958 when he joined the Federal Power Commission, now known as the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

The Batemans moved to Alexandria, Va., in 1963. He retired in 1983 and they moved to Midland in July of 1988.

He was a member of the Masonic Lodge in Amarillo and was a Knights Templer.

He was preceded in death by a grandson.

Survivors include his wife; one son, W.A. "Bill" Bateman of Midland; one daughter, Faye Phillips of Masdisonville, Ky.; one sister, Mrs. Melba Jean Walston of Barstow, Calif.; six grandchildren; seven great-grandchildren; two nieces and three nephews.

Man sought in robbery arrested

Staff Report

The fourth man wanted by Midland police in connection with the robbery of a jewelry store was apprehended Tuesday, police officials said.

Joe Anthony Hernandez, 20, of San Antonio remained jailed Tuesday night in lieu of a $50,000 bond, jail officials said.

Hernandez is the final suspect in the robbery of Sam L. Majors Jewelers, 18 Oak Ridge Square, on July 15, police said.

Police detectives believe Hernandez may have been a get-away driver in the holdup where one of the robbers was armed with an Uzi-style submachine gun.

Lawmen arrested Hernandez Tuesday afternoon in San Antonio and transferred him to Midland on Wednesday, officials said.

BUDGET: Profitability important for bonds and wages for the hospital's 1,300 full-time and part-time employees.

Following Wednesday's meeting, Wiesenfeld, a Midland physician, noted that it is necessary for the hospital to show a profit.

"It's crucial for our bond rating for us to be able to raise additional financing for whatever (capital and other) projects are deemed necessary," Wiesenfeld said.

Bond-rating agencies have strongly suggested that the hospital, through its tax rate, fully fund our indigent care with tax money.

Study: Texas ranks fifth in ban efforts

WASHINGTON — Texas school districts ranked fifth among the states in the number of complaints received from parents and the religious right seeking to ban entire programs, books, or films from classrooms, according to a study released Wednesday.

The report, issued by People For The American Way, a Washington-based liberal group, said parents and conservative religious organizations made 13 attempts at censorship in Texas and 251 elsewhere in the country in 1990.

California, with 36, had the highest number of complaints, followed by Oregon with 19, Michigan with 17, and Illinois with 15, the study said.

It accused the groups and the parents they backed in complaining about school materials of applying "ideological and religious litmus tests" to measure the quality of the materials.

"They hope to control not just what their children are taught, but what all children are taught, shaping the perceptions of an entire generation," the survey maintained. It said the 264 complaints represent the highest total reported in the nine years that the "People For" group has monitored such challenges.

The report said groups or individuals who raised complaints succeeded in either restricting or removing materials from schools in 78 of the 264 cases nationwide.

Robert Simonds of Costa Mesa, Calif., head of Citizens For Excellence in Education (CEE), a conservative religious group that has mounted court challenges nationwide to educational materials it objects to, denied that the group was involved in censorship.

"It's absolutely not censorship," he said. "It's common sense."

David Crane, vice president of People For The American Way, said that CEE and other conservative groups such as the Eagle Forum, headed by activist Phyllis Schlafly, and Concerned Women For America, a conservative group, prompted complaints in many states.

August Steinhilber, general counsel for the National School Boards Association, said the attacks are up because many are sponsored by "groups with a lot of money who are looking for a case they can take to the Supreme Court."

Of the 13 efforts in Texas, four targeted sex education programs.

Some parents in Katy and Humble, for instance, objected to seventh-grade health classes that taught safe sex practices and did not stress abstinence. In Haskell, some parents objected to a program aimed at preventing teen pregnancy because it called masturbation "normal."

And others in Aspermont did not want human development or prevention of sexually transmitted diseases discussed in health videos.

Materials in all four cases were pulled.

Other complaints included:

■ In Bracketville: A parent objected to the book "Halloween ABC" being available in the elementary school, claiming it was "Satanic." The book was moved to the "fifth and sixth-grade only" section of the library.

■ In Commerce: A parent opposed "Angel Face" by Norma Klein for containing allegedly pornographic material. The report said the person who complained also wanted all books having to do with romance removed from the high school library. The school board voted to continue using the book and did not remove any others.

■ In El Paso: A parent and a local pastor said that "A Wrinkle in Time" by Madeleine L'Engle would encourage "anti-Christian values" because one character doubts another, which might lead to "flickers of doubt toward the Lord," said the parent. The book remains part of the curriculum.

■ In Corpus Christi: A parent objected to the Franco Seffirelli version of "Romeo and Juliet" because it contains nudity. The district ordered that the scene be cut from the film.

Queer Nation calls tabloid boycott

HOUSTON (AP) — Businesses in a Houston neighborhood frequented by homosexuals are boycotting a classified advertising tabloid because it does not accept gay-oriented ads.

The boycott sponsored by Queer Nation resulted in 16 Montrose-area businesses, including two Appletree supermarkets, four Eckerd's Drugs and a Walgreens drugstore, pulling the Greensheet from their shelves.

The group will contact other Montrose businesses that distribute and advertise in the paper, said Tracy Brown of Queer Nation.

"Queer Nation has 150 members, and we are angry," said Brown. "Legally, the Greensheet has every legal right to discriminate. But we have buying power, and we will contact businesses with buying power. This is guerrilla warfare."

Ted Green, assistant to Greensheet publisher Helen Gordon, said gay and lesbian personal ads are not accepted because the Greensheet "is a family-owned and family-oriented paper."

There are no plans to change that policy, he said.

Greensheet is distributed free throughout the city.

Romanian athlete likes U.S. lifestyle

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — It is likely to be weeks or months before a defecting Romanian athlete learns whether he will receive political asylum in the United States, immigration officials said Wednesday.

Bogdan Vladu, 23, came to San Antonio to compete in the Modern Pentathlon World Championships, which ended Sunday. Tuesday he announced he is defecting and for now is staying with a Romanian-born woman who hosted his team during the five-day competition.

"Being here for the first time out of Romania, he saw this beautiful country of ours and said, 'This is where I want to live and become somebody,'" Martha Quaroni, the 57-year-old woman helping him, said Wednesday.

Vladu, known to friends as "Bobby," told reporters that living conditions in Romania are poor and that some Communist hardliners who led the Eastern European nation under dictator Nicolae Ceausescu have regained power.

"It is very simple," he told the San Antonio Light, as Ms. Quaroni interpreted. "The situation in Romania is as bad as it was before the Ceausescus were killed in December of 1989, when the so-called revolution started."

Richard M. Casillas, district director of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service in San Antonio, said the agency does not comment on specific asylum cases.

"We're supposed to keep that under wraps, lest we endanger their loved ones abroad or lest we endanger him," Casillas said. "It's lamentable that this came to (public) light."

AP Laserphoto

Bogdan Vladu, right, sits with Marth Quaroni at her home in San Anotnio.

Ms. Quaroni said Vladu has visited an attorney, whom she declined to name, and has been to the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service office to start the asylum process.

"Everything is absolutely legal," she said. "I wanted him to start on the right foot and honorably."

Vladu's application will go to the political asylum division of the INS office in Houston.

Margaret Ramos, asylum director in Houston, also declined to comment on Vladu's case, but said the several steps of the process could take more than two months to complete.

Political asylum is granted if a person fears persecution in his or her home country because of race, religion, nationality, political opinion or membership in a particular social group.

"There must be a reasonable possibility of his suffering persecution should he return to that country," Ms. Ramos said. "It's an individual, case-by-case basis."

Economic problems are not grounds for political asylum unless they are connected to one of the five reasons for persecution, she said, and no countries are considered more likely than others to persecute.

Vladu, who is trained as a mechanic, already is looking for work, Ms. Quaroni said. He said he eventually wants to find his own place to live and hopes to study chemistry at an American university.

"He just arrived here with a sports bag and that's all," Ms. Quaroni said. "He has $22 and that's all — not one more, not one less."

One day, Vladu said, he might try to make the U.S. pentathlon team.

Vladu finished 23rd out of 72 athletes in individual standings in the 28-nation international competition. The Romanian team finished seventh.

Although excited to be in the United States, Vladu said he also has worries, particularly about his parents in Romania.

"It is very sad to lose your country," Vladu said Tuesday night. "But at the same time, it is wonderful to live in a free country."

PUC member blasts closed session

AUSTIN (AP) — A Public Utility Commission member said a private commission meeting with lawyers concerning a court ruling in a rate case was illegal. But a colleague defended the meeting as "very proper."

Commissioner Jo Campbell said the three-member PUC should not review in an executive session an appeals court ruling involving El Paso Electric Co. because the specific case was not on Wednesday meeting's agenda.

The agenda had said that the commission would discuss litigation, according to PUC spokesman Guillermo Garcia.

The 3rd Court of Appeals has overturned a PUC decision allowing the company to charge customers certain costs related to its share of the Palo Verde nuclear power plant.

Experts have said the ruling could affect other major electric rate cases.

After the meeting, Ms. Campbell said that it also violated the law because commissioners gave direction to the attorney general's office on how to proceed in the case. Ms. Campbell said a vote should have been taken on that issue.

Commissioner Marta Greytok said the meeting was "very proper."

Mrs. Greytok said two assistant attorneys general briefed the commissioners on the case, and that she and PUC Chairman Paul Meek asked a questions and made comments.

Federal officials seize $1 million in cash

HOUSTON (AP) — Some $1 million in cash, four luxury vehicles, cellular phones and weapons were seized and four men arrested at a palatial Fort Bend County home in what federal authorities said Wednesday was the breakup of a major drug money laundering operation.

Four Mexican and Colombian nationals were held without bond after the raid Tuesday night at the home in Sugar Land. They were charged with conspiracy to distribute cocaine and money laundering.

"I don't think these folks were surprised," John Kellogg, assistant special agent in charge for the U.S. Customs Service, said. "These are professionals. They've been in business obviously for some time and they handle this kind of money all the time. Very stoic is how I would describe them. They don't get excited. This is the cost of doing business."

Among the weapons was a folding .223-caliber rifle, equipped with a scope, that agents said typically would be used in drug assassinations.

Also seized was a money counting machine used to handle the huge volume of cash and a computer that enabled the men to keep track of transactions, authorities said, as well as information about travel agendas to and from Colombia.

Authorities displayed the money, which was stacked about a foot high in a pile that virtually covered a large table.

"This is another in a continuing string of successes ... in the area of money laundering and drug smuggling," Steven Hooper, Customs Service special agent in charge, said.

No drugs were found at the Sugar Land home that was being rented for $2,400 a month or at two other homes raided in Houston and Spring.

"That is common to keep the drugs and cash separate," Hoover said. "A lot of times these organizations are set up like large corporations where one part of the organization will handle the transportation of the cocaine and the other will handle the financial aspects of the operation and apparently that's the case here."

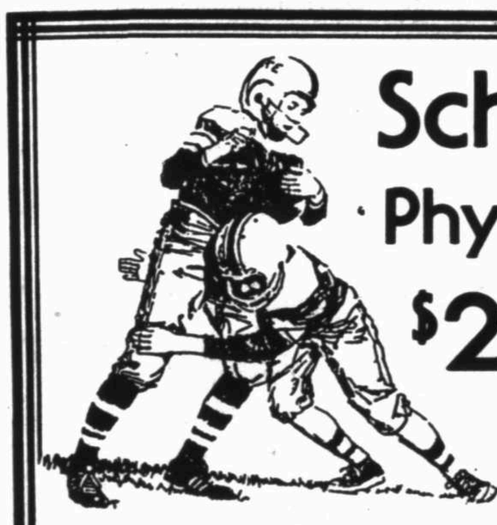

Among the equipment seized were top-of-the-line cellular telephones and a detector that would tell them if they were speaking to anyone wearing a hidden microphone. Among the three cars and a virtually new four-wheel-drive truck confiscated was a new BMW worth about $75,000, officials said.

"There's no question it's a major operation," Hoover said. "The records indicate a very major operation, bringing large quantities of drugs into the United States and laundering and taking money out of the country in large, large amounts.

"Any time you take $1 million away from somebody you've hurt them. This is money that would go back and buy additional smuggling equipment, aircraft, or would go back to buy additional cocaine in Colombia. That hurts them. Sometimes taking the money hurts them more than the cocaine."

The four men arrested were identified as Henry William Nunez, 30; Guadalupe Zambrano, 31; Jules Keith Moor, 28; and Alfredo Buitrago, 45.

Richards names prison veteran to parole board

AP Laserphoto

Gov. Ann Richards, right, named to Jack Kyle of Huntsville to the parole board Wednesday.

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Ann Richards Wednesday appointed Jack Kyle of Huntsville as chairman of the state parole board, charging him with cutting the early release of violent offenders.

Kyle, a 26-year veteran of the Texas Department of Corrections, was assistant director of the prison agency for 19 years before his retirement in 1984.

Richards said Kyle understood the corrections department thoroughly, yet comes to the parole board as an outsider.

"I'm expecting him to have a dramatic impact on the board of pardon and parole," Richards said.

"Texans are fed up and they are angry with the spectacle of violent criminals being released from prison after serving only a portion of their sentence. They don't understand why the state isn't doing a better job of insuring their safety, and frankly, the same question occurs to me," she said.

Kyle said he was not yet familiar with his job, and therefore hesitant to comment on his specific intentions.

"I'm going to do everything I can to put public safety first, and that's about as far as I'd prefer to go at this point," he said during a Capitol news conference.

James Granberry, the previous parole board chairman and an appointee of former Gov. Bill Clements, resigned May 7, saying he wanted to return to private life.

Members of the Pardons and Paroles Division of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice came under fire this spring from lawmakers for voting to parole several high-profile killers.

However, other legislators defended them, saying they simply followed laws passed by the Legislature to relieve prison overcrowding. The state prison system's population is capped by a federal court order as a result of an inmate's successful lawsuit.

Sen. Ted Lyon, who as chairman of the Senate Criminal Justice Committee helped lead the charge against the board, blamed members for poor judgment in voting to turn loose dangerous criminals.

Lyon said he had recommended Kyle to the governor.

"I just couldn't think of anybody that would be probably better, at least in Texas, for that job," said Lyon, D-Rockwall.

"I think he'll bring to the board of pardons and paroles an understanding of the problems that they face, and also an understanding of how the prison system works, which is sorely lacking over there," he said.

Lawmakers this year have approved a 25,300-bed prison construction package and a law that would give juries in capital murder cases the sentencing choice of death or 35 years in prison without the chance of parole.

They also authorized creation of a commission to study the state's sentencing and parole practices. The entire Texas penal code is due to be revised before it expires in 1994.

Richards said she had no qualms about appointing a prison official from the era that spawned the inmate lawsuit, which has led to years of federal oversight

Dallas schools issue pink slips to teachers

DALLAS (AP) — The first of up to 325 teachers here began receiving notices of layoffs Wednesday, leaving some classrooms without educators, the president of a teachers' union said.

As the second full week of fall classes began, 72 educators received notices to report to Dallas Independent School District personnel offices, where they were either dismissed or told they would take over the classes of a laid-off teacher.

"Schools are in a dither," said Maureen Peters, president of the Alliance of Dallas Educators. "At the high schools, they're not issuing textbooks because they have to redo the schedule of the whole school. Everything is starting over next Tuesday."

Budget cuts, resulting from the so-called "Robin Hood" school funding plan that shifts money from property-rich districts to poorer ones, are prompting layoffs of about 4 percent of the Dallas teacher workforce.

Ms. Peters said teachers' nervousness this week is compounded by the fact that the dismissals are accomplished by calling educators to the DISD personnel office where they are either issued pink slips or reassigned.

"We just know positions have been cut and these teachers have been told to report to personnel, but they do not know if they are being relieved or if they are bumping someone who has been relieved," she said.

Ms. Peters said about 100 layoffs were expected by late Wednesday, with the remainder to come over the next two days. The Texas Education Agency did not immediately return calls from The Associated Press on any other layoffs across the state.

Bob Baker, president of the Classroom Teachers of Dallas, said Collins had hinted as few as 225 teachers might be laid off.

Ruling: Atheists don't have to take oath

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Judges can't require atheist jurors to swear an oath or any other religion-based promise that might violate what they believe, a divided federal appeals court ruled Wednesday.

However, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court also said in a 2-1 ruling that, while a Texas judge erred, he cannot be sued by a woman who is both the grand-daughter and adopted daughter of noted American atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair.

Robin Murray O'Hair and others filed three lawsuits when Judge Guy Herman of Travis County, Texas, found O'Hair in contempt and jailed her for refusing to swear an oath or otherwise promise to tell the truth when she was called for jury duty in Austin.

O'Hair was released on bond after six hours of detention and Herman subsequently commuted her sentence to the time served.

In one of the lawsuits, a district court and an appeals court in Texas refused to throw out the contempt citation.

In another, a U.S. District Court and 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals refused to stop Texas from calling atheist jurors and then excluding them from jury duty for refusal to take a "God" oath or any similar promise.

In the third lawsuit, decided Wednesday by the 5th Circuit, O'Hair and an organization known as the Society of Separationists Inc. sought both damages from Herman and a class-action relief "on behalf of all individuals whose religious convictions precluded them from taking the juror oath."

O'Hair and the society appealed when U.S. District Judge Walter S. Smith dismissed the society as a plaintiff.

Self-named serial slayer joins Arizona body search

PHOENIX (AP) — Self-professed serial killer Donald Leroy Evans flew to Arizona Wednesday, claiming he could lead authorities to the bodies of three women he killed and left in the desert.

An FBI spokesman in Phoenix confirmed Evans was to arrive from Gulfport, Miss., but declined to say when he would arrive or provide specifics of the crimes. The spokesman, Jack Callahan, said he didn't know where the bodies were supposed to be in the state.

"All I know is he's coming in and they're looking for three bodies," Callahan said.

In another development, Evans' father said his son has increased the number of killings he claims to have committed since 1977 to 72 from 60.

Evans' father, Faye Lawrence "Larry" Evans, told the Biloxi Sun Herald his son had given him the higher number during a weekend visit at the Harrison County jail.

The latest trip was scheduled when Evans told investigators in Gulfport that he could lead them to the bodies of three women he killed in Arizona, a source in Mississippi told The Associated Press on condition of anonymity.

Evans was accompanied on the private flight to Arizona by FBI Special Agent George Holder, Gulfport Detective Whitney Carvin, Evans' federal court appointed attorney Fred Lusk, and a contingent of U.S. Marshals, the source said.

Callahan said he didn't believe local police agencies would get involved until the team found where in the state Evans was leading them. He didn't have records of crimes that might fit the sketchy description.

In another development, North Carolina authorities, investigating an unsolved 1983 slaying, will travel to Mississippi to interview Evans, officials said.

"We have a 1983 case that's unsolved in which a 15-year-old girl was found dead on the Rockingham County line," said Rockingham County Sheriff Bobby Vernon.

"Once we are able to get enough information from Mississippi authorities, we plan on coming down there."

Evans, 34, who's from Galveston, Texas, pleaded guilty to a federal kidnapping charge in connection with the Aug. 1 rape and strangulation death of a 10-year-old girl.

Scandals rock South Carolina

Lawmakers spent more than five months bickering over reform bills that cover lobbyist rules, campaign finance, public officials' conduct and conflicts of interest. But they adjourned June 6 without a deal.

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — It is summer in South Carolina. The palmetto trees are swaying. The tobacco and soybeans are growing. The politicians are sweating — and not because of the weather.

Nearly a tenth of the state's 170 legislators have admitted or been convicted of taking bribes. Top associates of the governor possessed cocaine and tampered with federal witnesses. A judge, once a legislator, was convicted in a vote-selling scheme. The state university's former president pleaded guilty to accepting money above his salary and no contest to tax evasion.

The state's top police officer says his department is investigating 44 corruption cases, a half-dozen in cooperation with the federal government.

"I'm embarrassed for the people of South Carolina," said Cliff Wilson, a dentist in Darlington.

In February, Wilson and about 60 other Darlington residents paid $450 for an advertisement in a local newspaper that read: "We, the people of South Carolina, DO CARE about ethics reform. We will be watching and waiting."

Lawmakers spent more than five months bickering over reform bills that cover lobbyist rules, campaign finance, public officials' conduct and conflicts of interest. But they adjourned June 6 without a deal.

Gov. Carroll Campbell admits his state's reputation has been sullied.

"People ask all the time ... 'What in the world is going on down there? ... Do you have a quorum left in your Legislature?' Kind of snide remarks," Campbell said. "I'm tired of answering questions about it everywhere you go."

Not all of the larger scandals involve elected officials — James B. Holderman, big-spending former president of the University of South Carolina, was placed on five years' probation after pleaded guilty to keeping for personal use a $25,000 gift to the school, and no contest to tax evasion.

But the centerpiece of South Carolina's disgrace is the state government, thanks to "Operation Lost Trust," an FBI sting investigation.

A former legislator-turned-lobbyist, Ron Cobb, was caught in a cocaine transaction and became an FBI informant. He offered bribes to lawmakers if they voted for a bill to allow voters to legalize betting on dog or horse races.

The meetings were videotaped, of course, and South Carolinians have been offered a chance to watch their legislature in action — taking hundreds and in some cases thousands of dollars in exchange for their support.

Twenty-seven people, including 17 current or former lawmakers, faced bribery or drug charges as a result. All but two either have pleaded guilty or been convicted. Former Rep. Jack Rogers, the second-ranking member in the House, pleaded guilty to racketeering.

The governor's office was not spared. Dick Greer, a long-time Campbell friend, political strategist and the state's chief economic recruiter, pleaded guilty to cocaine possession. David Hawkins, Campbell's former top legislative aide, pleaded guilty to obstruction of justice.

Is there something about South Carolina that breeds this kind of scandal? James C. Edwards, a Furman University philosophy professor who specializes in ethics says there is not "endemic corruption" in the state.

"South Carolina is not a scandal state," agrees the governor, pointing to similar bribery scandals in West Virginia and Arizona.

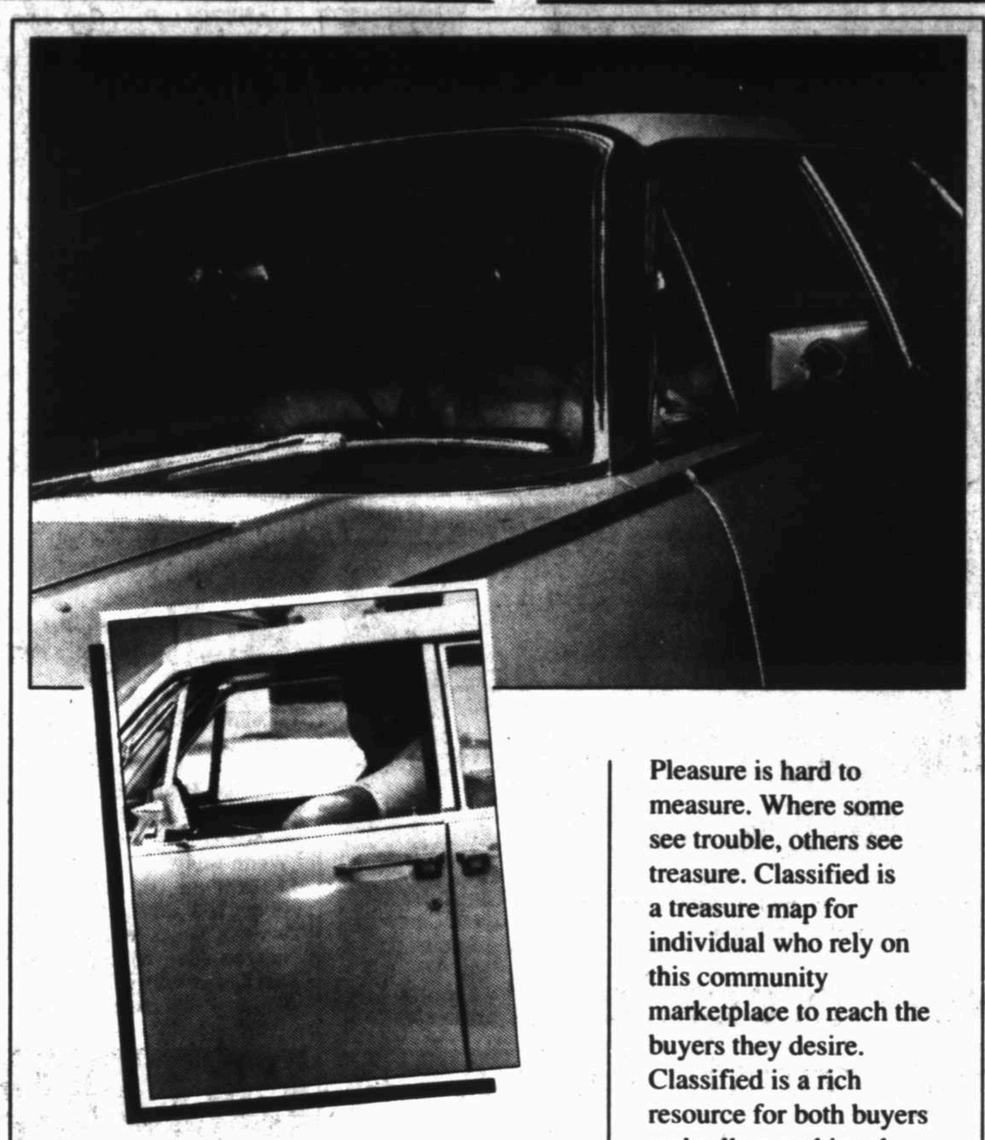

But the sting exposed the cozy ties between lobbyists and lawmakers, where some lawmakers sponged meals, trips, liquor and drugs off influence-peddlers.

Also spotlighted were abuses in campaign financing. State law allows unlimited contributions by any donor — individuals, businesses, unions — and politicians can use surplus funds for personal use.

"We probably have more abuse of office in this state than the average state," says John Crangle of Common Cause, a government watchdog group.

Ethics laws are lax, he said, and law enforcement agencies traditionally are unwilling to take on political heavyweights.

A researcher has developed a way that uses gold to detect fingerprints on plastic.

New process reveals fingerprints on plastic

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Drug-fighting forces may have struck gold with a process that uses the precious metal to lift fingerprints from credit cards, plastic bags and bullet cartridges.

The first arrest using the gold-silver binding technique came just four months after it was developed by George Saunders at New Mexico's Los Alamos National Laboratory.

Today, "basically the whole world" is using the method, which is based on a technique used by biologists to stain proteins, said Coy Burns, chief of the identification and research branch of the Secret Service's forensic division in Washington, D.C.

"It's one of the most productive processes that's been developed in recent times," he said.

The technique enables investigators to lift prints off items that in the past were difficult to deal with, such as the plastic that bricks of marijuana are wrapped in and the adhesive tape used to keep it sealed.

"It's going to make it easier not only to solve cases but to prosecute cases," Burns said.

People from several countries met recently in Detroit to discusses the process.

Saunders said he came up with the technique after talking to acquaintances in the Secret Service who said they were looking for new ideas in fingerprinting.

"I was surprised at how easy it was to do," Saunders said.

With the technique, fingerprints become visible when gold particles adhere to proteins in secretions left on an object that has been touched. The object is washed for about 30 minutes in colloidal gold, a buffer solution of citric acid that contains tiny particles of gold.

The object then is washed in distilled water to remove unbound gold particles, then bathed in a silver solution for five to 15 fifteen minutes. The silver enhances the image by filling in around the gold and highlighting the fingerprint.

"It's like developing a photograph," Saunders said.

Saunders' process is more sensitive on plastics and other surfaces than a process that uses only silver to cling to the fingerprint, Burns said.

Although the process works best on plastics, it can be used on counterfeit money and other paper, he said.

"That's one of the advantages, you can use it after you've used other techniques that didn't work," Saunders said.

It cannot be used on real cash because it contain so much protein-bearing flax and cotton, he said.

Under a technology transfer agreement, ODV Inc. of South Paris, Maine, was granted an exclusive license earlier this year to market the fingerprinting process. ODV also manufactures kits for on-the-spot narcotics identification and crime lab investigations.

Before the company began selling the process, it was made available to law enforcement agencies in many countries by the Secret Service on a trial basis, the lab said.

ODV has sold about 100 fingerprinting kits, at $35 each, to law enforcement agencies.

Dutchess arrives home after free ride

Dutchess, a raven black cat, must have used up some of her nine lives during the trip, part of which was aboard a semi-trailer truck.

Her joyous owner, Kathy Klefisch, embraced Dutchess, as she recalled their reunion after a five-week long separation that began outside a restaurant in Galveston in early June.

Ms. Klefisch, of Raymondville, adopted Dutchess when Ms. Klefisch's mother, Willacy County District Attorney Diana Cisneros, died on June 1.

One week after the family loss, Ms. Klefisch took Dutchess on a car trip to Galveston to get away for awhile and try to deal with her grief, she said.

All the way, Dutchess rode on the platform behind the back seat of Ms. Klefisch's Camaro.

Once in Galveston that night, Ms. Klefisch said she stopped at a restaurant to get coffee. She didn't expect any trouble, especially not from Dutchess.

But, she recalled, as she opened the door to exit the vehicle, the cat unexpectedly bolted out of the car and disappeared into the darkened street.

Frantic, Ms. Klefisch and someone she knew from the restaurant looked for Dutchess until they were told to stop the search before they were mistaken for thieves and shot in the darkness.

Ms. Klefisch resumed the search in the morning to no avail.

Four days later in Louisiana, a group of truckdrivers watched as an unfamiliar black cat jumped out from under the cabin of an 18-wheeler.

Apparently, Dutchess had hitched a ride with the passing truck in Galveston and hid unobtrusively under the cabin — on what truckers call the fifth wheel — until she decided to make a break for it in Slidell, a suburb east of New Orleans.

Four pursuing truckers reportedly caught Dutchess and turned her over to a sympathetic woman who had watched the incident on the parking lot of a Union 76 Truck Stop.

Fortunately for Dutchess, the feline had identification tags attached to her collar. The woman was able to contact Ms. Klefisch and inform her of the cat's whereabouts.

It was then the long struggle to return Dutchess to her home in Raymondville began.

As Ms. Klefisch and her brother, Kurt Klefisch, planned a trip to Slidell, she became ill and was hospitalized. The trip was put off indefinitely.

Back in Slidell, a death in the family of the woman who was caring for Dutchess forced her to turn the cat over to the local animal shelter.

Once at the shelter, Dutchess aroused the curiosity of animal control officer Wayne Gaines, Ms. Klefisch reported. Through Gaines, arrangements were made to seek transportation for Dutchess back to Texas.

However, bus stations and airports proved uncooperative.

As a last resort, Gaines placed a call to Vera and Dennis Sylder, a retired Slidell couple, members of the Fireside Sams.

The Fireside Sams, a recreational vehicle camping and traveling group, are known for performing good deeds around the community.

The Sylders proved to be big animal lovers who couldn't turn down the chance to help the dejected little cat. They volunteered to postpone their Australian vacation and to drive Dutchess to Raymondville.

"I'm just so impressed," said Ms. Klefisch. "What makes me feel good is that those people cared enough to return her to me."

Although she does not consider herself a religious person, Ms. Klefisch said she thinks Dutchess' return is a miracle.

"It's just a miracle that she wasn't killed," she said. "My mother just died. I didn't need to lose the cat, too."

The Sylder couple turned down the reward money Ms. Kelfisch offered them. So, now she's preparing a gift package to mail to the good Samaritans.

Waco artist finds joy in all that she does

WACO (AP) — People sometimes ask Waco resident Joan Chapman how she can manage to be so cheerful.

After all, she relies on a wheelchair for mobility. Surely that must be depressing, they say.

But these days, Ms. Chapman has a lot to smile about. She recently opened a jewelry store with her husband of six weeks, Howard Peckham. What's more, some of her jewelry creations have been exhibited in the heart of the capital's cultural district.

The nation's capital, that is.

Ms. Chapman's designs have been displayed this summer at the Very Special Arts Gallery in Washington, D.C. The show was called "The Texas Lonestar" exhibit.

"The honor was to be asked to show in Washington," Ms. Chapman said, describing it as a "rare" honor bestowed on but a few, fortunate artists. "They say I've sold some of my pieces."

The gallery was established by the Very Special Arts, an educational affiliate of the Kennedy Center, to showcase work by artists with physical or mental limitations. Ms. Chapman's work was on display alongside work by artists who are not handicapped.

Fish fights blood clots

By Jean Carper

Confused over sole? Chinook salmon? Or sablefish? To help deter blood clots that can lead to heart attacks, which is the best fish to eat?

The Dover sole is lean. The salm-on and sablefish are fatty.

Carper

The truth is, in new tests at Oregon State University, salmon and sablefish beat out Dover sole in promoting certain blood-clotting changes identified with a lower risk of heart disease. The probable reason: the oily salmon and sablefish are full of so-called omega-3 fatty acids shown in numerous studies to help ward off heart attacks.

Specifically, in the test, 23 healthy young men ate 7 ounces a day of either Dover sole, salmon or sablefish as part of a controlled diet for periods of 18 days at a time.

Their blood was regularly tested. When the men ate salmon, their bleeding time was most prolonged, indicating less proclivity to form dangerous blood clots. Salmon also most reduced production of a body chemical called thromboxane that encourages platelet clumping and, thus, clotting.

The sablefish also considerably decreased platelet clumping and thromboxane production. The sole caused no such favorable blood-clotting changes.

SMOKING, SPERM AND VITAMIN C

Heavy smokers who want to become fathers may find help in vitamin C, according to a new study at the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston.

It's well known that smokers have low blood levels of vitamin C and that a lack of vitamin C is linked to deficient sperm, says researcher Earl B. Dawson.

To see if high doses of vitamin C would improve sperm quality, Dr. Dawson and colleagues tested 75 men who smoked at least a pack of cigarettes a day. For one month, one group took a daily 200 milligrams of vitamin C, another took 1,000 mg, and a control group took a placebo (harmless pill).

Those taking 200 mg of vitamin C showed a 2 percent increase in sperm count, 13 percent increase in 24-hour sperm viability and a 13 percent decrease in clumping (agglutination) that impairs fertility.

The 1,000 mg of C produced even greater improvement: 34 percent increase in sperm count, 64 percent increase in 24-hour viability and a 67 percent decrease in agglutination.

Dr. Dawson says, improved sperm quality in previous tests has led to much greater chances of fatherhood.

Vitamins for Life?

Getting a lot of certain vitamins in your diet may help save you from heart disease, but piling on extra vitamin and mineral supplements may not extend your life. That's the news from two recent studies.

After studying 8,000 Scots, scientists at Aberdeen University concluded that men who ate foods with the most beta carotene and vitamins C and E were significantly protected from heart disease. Women were not, for unknown reasons. All three vitamins are antioxidants, believed to help protect arteries and the heart from damage.

To get beta carotene, eat deep orange and green leafy vegetables like carrots and spinach. Fruits and vegetables are rich in vitamin C, and vitamin E is concentrated in nuts, seeds and vegetables oils.

However, don't count on vitamin and mineral supplements to make you live longer, say researchers at the Centers for Disease Control. In a look at 11,000 adult Americans, they found that 22 percent took daily vitamin-mineral supplements and 10 percent took them more than once a week. But, everything being equal, the death rate for those who took supplements was identical to that of those who did not.

Smoking found harmful to children

N.Y. Times News Service

Two new studies add to the mounting evidence that smoking by parents is harmful to children's health and perhaps even dulls the intelligence.

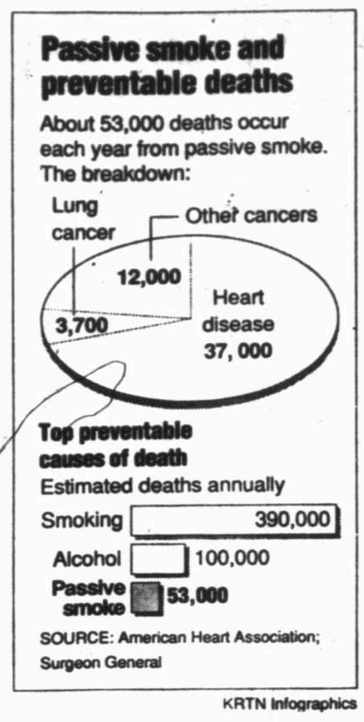

A government report found that children who live in households with smokers are almost twice as likely to be in fair or poor health than children never exposed to cigarette smoke.

But the authors said the results should be cautiously interpreted because other possible factors like poverty could not be ruled out.

The report, by the National Center for Health Statistics, found that 4.1 percent of children in households with current smokers were in fair to poor health as against 2.4 percent of children never exposed to tobacco smoke in the home.

About half of all children in the United States who are 5 years old or younger, or roughly 10 million children, have been exposed to cigarette smoke, said Abigail J. Moss, a health statistician at the center who wrote the report with Mary D. Overpeck.

The report was based on information provided by some 5,300 parents of children 5 years old or younger who took part in a random survey on health. The survey included questions about smoking and the health status of children in the household.

KRTN Infographics

Dr. Louis W. Sullivan, the secretary of health and human services, said, "I can't think of a more compelling reason for parents to quit smoking that insuring their children's chance for a healthy life."

The Tobacco institute, which represents the tobacco industry, dismissed the study. A spokesman for the Tobacco Inbstitute, Brent Dawson, said that the high risk of poor health "has to do with poverty and how people view things and not smoking, and it's misleading to say otherwise."

Children in families with lower incomes and less education were more likely to have been exposed to cigarette smoke and were more likely to have been reported to be in fair or poor health, the report said.

About two-thirds of young children in families with incomes of less than $10,000 were exposed to smoke, as against 36 percent of children whose family income was $40,000 or more.

The study also found that black children were more likely to have been exposed to environmental smoke than white children. Hispanic children were less likely to have been exposed to smoke than either blacks or whites.

Previous studies indicate that second-hand smoke increases a child's risk of respiratory disease.

"The pattern is there," Ms. Moss said, "but we cannot yet make a strong statement of causation."

In a separate study, scientists found that children of smokers scored lower on tests of reasoning ability and vocabulary than children of non-smokers.

Dr. Karl E. Bauman, Robert L. Flewelling and Dr. John LaPrelle at the University of North Carolina recently reviewed information from about 2,700 pregnant women and their children collected in the 1960s and 1970s by researchers at the University of California at Berkeley.

Bauman's group analyzed the scores on standardized tests given to children at ages 5, 10 and 15. The scientists found that children of non-smokers scored about 6 percent higher on tests of reasoning ability and vocabulary than did children of smokers.

Study: Doctors keep lung disease patients too long

CHICAGO (AP) — Doctors often keep patients with emphysema and other chronic lung diseases in the hospital longer than necessary, according to a study of two hospitals.

Researchers analyzed data on 83 patients age 45 and older who were admitted with asthma, emphysema and other lung problems to the two Rochester, N.Y., hospitals from November 1986 through late 1987.

The researchers concluded that the length of stay necessary for care averaged 6.9 days, while the actual mean length of stay was 8.7 days, according to their report in Journal of the American Medical Association.

"We shouldn't point the finger at doctors," said lead author Dr. Alvin I. Mushlin, associate professor of medicine at the University of Rochester School of Medicine, one of the two hospitals studied. "They don't know (how long to hospitalize patients) until we do these kinds of studies."

Researchers said it appeared doctors could have identified patients needing longer hospital stays by using information readily obtainable at the time of admission.

For example, longer stays were needed by patients with higher levels of certain chemical compounds detectable in lab tests, by those with less tolerance for physical activity, with more frequent previous attacks and with other major illnesses and infections, the authors said.

The authors also reported that the medically ideal length of stay for each patient tended to vary widely from the period deemed appropriate under the Medicare payment system, which covers patients age 65 and older.

Medicare classifies illnesses and assigns appropriate lengths of hospital stay by what it calls diagnosis-related groups, or DRGs. There are 286 DRGs, covering all ailments, including three categories of chronic lung disease.

The DRGs say patients hospitalized for chronic lung ailments should be ready for release in about 5½ days to about 7½ days, depending on the category, according to the study.

But DRGs are formulated on the statistical basis of what doctors have done in the past, rather on the basis of what makes clinical sense for heading off medical problems, the authors argued.

"How long we keep people in the hospital should be based on studies like this rather than relying on the DRG system," Mushlin said.

Dr. David W. Cugell, a professor of pulmonary diseases at Northwestern University Medical School, stopped short of challenging the results but said they fail to mention some important reasons for keeping chronically ill patients in the hospital longer than medically necessary.

A doctor may hesitate to discharge a 75-year-old patient with chronic emphysema "who's barely hanging on the edge of life when he's well, let alone when he's sick" before arrangements can be made to meet his basic needs at home — grocery shopping, transportation and the like, Cugell said.

Mushlin acknowledged his team found "prolonged stays were often for those reasons, which is understandable." But he said resources should be directed toward developing better home care rather than extending already costly hospital stays.

Mushlin noted that during the 1960s, standard care for heart-attack patients included a six-week hospitalization. Now it is seven to 10 days.

"Only when we studied it did it emerge that complications occurred much earlier (than six weeks after the heart attack), if they were going to occur," he said in a telephone interview Monday.

Rangers' stadium

ARLINGTON (AP) — There will be an old-time touch of Texas in the new Rangers ballpark, which is due for completion in 1994.

The red brick and pink granite will give the stadium a neoclassical look on the outside similar to the state Capitol Building. Lone stars, Texas longhorns and light-fixture baseballs will decorate entry ways.

The inside will include a symmetrical design with no columns, much like Arrowhead Stadium in Kansas City. The park will seat 52,000 and will include a picnic area in centerfield adorned with a giant "T" made of bluebonnets, the state flower.

The Rangers announced their architectural teams Wednesday, and George W. Bush, one of the owners, called it "a historic day. It will be one of if not the greatest ballpark ever built."

Rangers president Tom Schieffer said the owners "wanted a ballpark that looks like Texas."

So they chose the design of David M. Schwarz of Washington, sports architect Howard Needles Tammen & Bergendoff of Kansas City, and managing architect HKS Inc. of Dallas.

Cotton Bowl pay

DALLAS (AP) — Texas and Miami each received a record $3 million for playing in the Cotton Bowl on Jan. 1, officials said Wednesday.

The Longhorns, 1990 Southwest Conference football champions, and the host, will keep $946,501 under conference distribution formulas.

The other eight SWC schools will each receive $247,402. The Cotton Bowl is sponsored by Mobil. Miami defeated Texas 46-3.

Angels win pitching duel

■ First remains in the hands of the Midland Angels, as they close the regular-season home schedule with a 2-1 win.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

There's nothing like a pennant race in the last week of the season to get the adrenaline flowing.

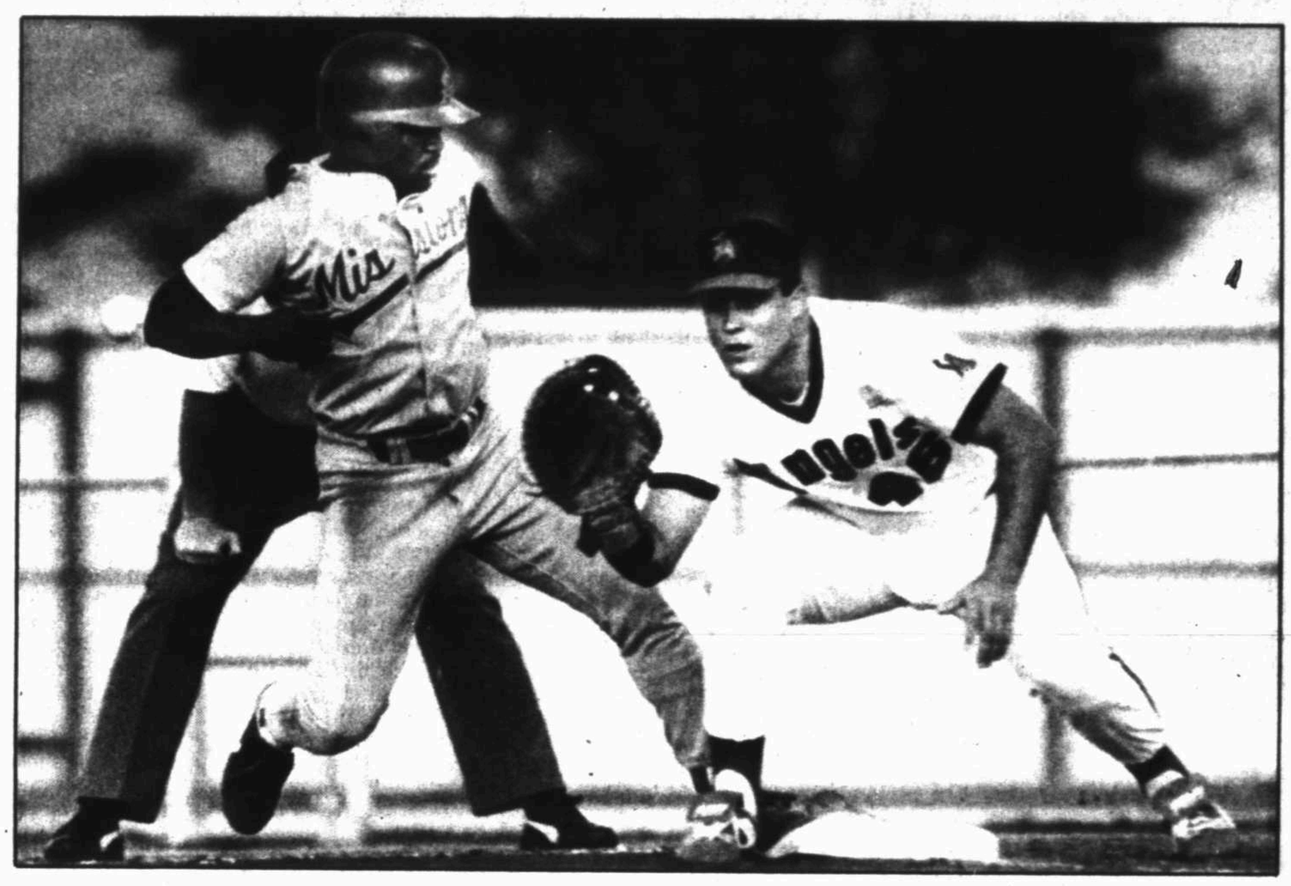

The Midland Angels used a desperate shot of adrenaline in the bottom of the eighth inning Wednesday night to score two runs after two outs to beat the San Antonio Missions 2-1 to retain their thin one-game lead in the Texas League West.

The Angels now have only five games left — on the road in Wichita — and now must become road warriors if they want to gain entry into the Texas League Championship Series. If the Angels win the second half title, they will travel to El Paso Tuesday for a best-of-three series with the Diablos to see who advances to the Championship Series, which will begin in the West's home park on Sept. 6.

With two outs and hitless since the second inning, Reggie Williams got a ground ball single to left in the eighth. Kevin Flora got a ground single up the middle and Mark Howie tied the score

Connors plays for joy of game

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Hours after Jimmy Connors electrified the U.S. Open with a nearly miraculous five-set victory over Patrick McEnroe, the 38-year-old returned to the back practice courts at the National Tennis Center.

Where else would he go?

"This is where the courts are," he said Wednesday after hitting for a half-hour with Todd Nelson. "It's good to come out and get a few hits, sweat a little bit.

"I've got to get around the surroundings and the environment. It's better than just laying around.I'm a little sore, but I don't feel too bad."

The same could not be said for Connors' longtime rival John McEnroe, whose brother he victimized with the comeback victory early Wednesday morning.

"He was very lucky to win," John McEnroe said. "Patrick completely outplayed him.

"He was moving beautifully. He kept his composure. Maybe he relaxed a little. Jimmy's not going to give up."

And that, Connors said, is the whole idea — never giving up.

"Winning and losing is irrelevant to what I do," Connors said. "I've done all my winning. I did it in my first three years. That took the pressure off."

Now Connors plays for the joy of it and the joy he gives to fans.

As Connors loosened up on Court 11, Boris Becker, Gabriela Sabatini and Vitas Gerulaitis came over to congratulate him.

"That is what you play for, the respect and admiration of your peers," Connors said. "The money is a side-effect after a while.

"I look to safisfy myself more than anything."

And the satisfaction came in large doses as he recovered from two sets down to defeat the younger McEnroe 4-6, 6-7 (4-7), 6-4, 6-2, 6-4.

As disappointed as John McEnroe was over his brother's loss, he saluted the accomplishment of Connors.

McEnroe looks to Olympics

■ After dispensing with Martin Laurendeau in the U.S. Open, John McEnroe announces his change of heart.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — John McEnroe wants to crown his career with Olympic gold — in tennis or basketball if Michael Jordan doesn't want to play.

McEnroe, looking ahead to retirement, said Wednesday he's changed his mind about professionals playing in the Olympics and would love to join the U.S. team at Barcelona next summer.

"It's going to be the last year, probably, that I am going to be playing a full schedule, and I'd like to be a part of the Olympics," McEnroe said after winning his second-round match in the U.S. Open, 6-3, 6-4, 6-2 against Martin Laurendeau.

"It is not going to feel as strange, now that professional basketball players are coming. I am definitely going to try to do my best to get in."

McEnroe would no doubt liven up the tennis scene at Barcelona. He's barely been tested in the Open so far, but he's already been slapped with verbal abuse and audible obscenity violations.

McEnroe feels that all the years he put

Penn St. rips Jackets

Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Tony Sacca set a school record with five touchdown passes as Penn State ended Georgia Tech's 16-game unbeaten streak, routing the Yellow Jackets 34-22 Wednesday night in the Kickoff Classic.

Sacca, who had 10 TD passes all last season, threw two each to Terry Smith and O.J. McDuffie and one to Richie Anderson before a record Kickoff Classic crowd of 77,409 at Giants Stadium.

After building a 13-3 halftime lead, the seventh-ranked Nittany Lions broke the game open when Sacca threw three TD passes during a 3-minute, 40-second span midway through the second half. All of the scores followed turnovers by No. 8 Georgia Tech, the only undefeated team in Division I-A last season.

Penn State then recovered a fumble by Georgia Tech quarterback Shawn Jones, setting up a score on a 53-yard screen pass from Sacca to Anderson that made it 34-3 with 14:17 left in the game.

Sacca, a senior who was criticized for erratic play during his first three years at Penn State, completed 13 of 24 passes for 206 yards. His five TD passes broke the school record of four held by three others.

Smith caught five passes for 51 yards, Anderson four for 93 and McDuffie four for 62.

Georgia Tech scored three touchdowns in the final 4:40, but it was much too little and much too late.

Penn State's Sam Gash (11) finishes a 14-yard run as Georgia Tech's Eric Bellamy stops him.

Jones scored on a 2-yard run and backup Jeff Howard threw TD passes of 41 yards to Jason McGill and 25 yards to Greg Lester, the latter after the Yellow Jackets recovered an onsides kick.

Jones, touted as a Heisman Trophy contender, lost three fumbles and was intercepted once. He completed 15 of 31 passes for 155 yards.

It was Georgia Tech's first defeat since losing to Duke 30-19 on Oct. 28, 1989.

UT offense ready to roll

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Texas offensive leaders Peter Gardere and Butch Hadnot look better than ever, coach David McWilliams said Wednesday, but the Longhorns' highly touted defense is showing signs in preseason of wear at linebacker.

Texas finished last season with a 10-2 record, and captured its first Southwest Conference football title since 1983.

Gardere at quarterback and Hadnot at running back are expected to play key roles again this year, along with a nationally ranked defense that returns eight starters.

Gardere

McWilliams, addressing the SWC media tour, said Gardere strengthened his knee over the summer after spraining it in spring training and also seems to have a stronger arm for throwing the football.

"He's really doing things well — checking off, seeing blitzes, throwing the hot route. He has had really a good fall," McWilliams said.

Gardere said, "I want to be a leader this year. I want to be the one that the team can turn to."

Glavine guides Braves

Associated Press

NL

ATLANTA — Tom Glavine pitched a four-hitter to become the major league's first 17-game winner and drove in the go-ahead run Wednesday night as the surging Braves defeated the Mets 3-1.

Glavine (17-8), pitching with a heavily-taped right ankle which he sprained in his last start, struck out four and walked one for his eighth complete game. He retired 16 of the last 17.

The Braves, who caught the Dodgers atop the NL West on Tuesday, have won six of eight and have a 31-16 record since the All-Star break, best in the league. Los Angeles played at home against Pittsburgh.

Glavine was touched for the Mets' only run in the third when Kevin Elster singled to extend his hitting streak to eight games and was sacrificed to second by Frank Viola. Chuck Carr then drove in Elster with a single.

The Braves went ahead in the fifth off Viola (12-12), who has lost four in a row and seven of his last eight decisions.

Phillies 11, Astros 10

PHILADELPHIA — Charlie Hayes, who hit a grand slam in the first inning, capped a three-run rally in the 10th as the Phillies outlasted the Astros for their 16th straight home victory.

The 16 straight wins at Veterans Stadium tied the team record set in 1977.

With the Astros ahead 10-8, Dickie Thon led off the Phillies' 10th with a double off reliever Al Osuna (7-4) and Wes Chamberlain followed with a single to put runners on first and third. John Kruk hit a sacrifice fly, and after Dale Murphy doubled, Darren Daulton tied the score with another sac fly. Hayes then greeted Dwayne Henry with his game-winning hit.

Ken Caminti had a career-high five RBIs for Houston.

Reds 11, Expos 3

CINCINNATI — Tom Browning prevailed in a rare matchup of perfect-game pitchers as the Reds rocked Dennis Martinez for five runs in three innings and routed the Expos.

The major leagues' first pairing of perfect-game pitchers in 25 years was no contest. Chris Sabo drove in three runs off Martinez to start the offensive surge and Mariano Duncan went 4-for-5 with a pair of two-run homers off the Expos' bullpen.

The last time two perfect pitchers met, the Dodgers' Sandy Koufax struck out 10 to beat the Phillies' Jim Bunning 4-3 on Oct. 2, 1966. Browning, who threw his perfect game against the Dodgers in 1988, had half as many strikeouts as he won Thursday night.

Browning (13-8) allowed five hits over seven innings, including solo homers by Tim Wallach and Ivan Calderon, to give the Reds their third straight win and their fifth in six games. Steve Foster finished for Cincinnati.

Martinez (12-9), whose perfect game July 28 in Los Angeles was the major leagues' most recent, put in his shortest start of the season. The right-hander gave up six hits and five runs in three innings, with Sabo doing most of the damage.

Padres 2, Cardinals 1

ST. LOUIS — Fred McGriff snapped a tie with a ninth-inning sacrifice fly and Bruce Hurst won his 15th game in his fourth try as the Padres ended the Cardinals' five-game winning streak.

The Cardinals had entered the night trailing first-place Pittsburgh by four games in the NL East.

It was the 34th road victory for the Padres, who entered the night tied for the most in the league with the Pirates. San Diego has won four of its last five games.

Pinch-hitter Oscar Azocar led off the ninth with an infield hit off Scott Terry (4-2) and went all the way to third when second baseman Jose Oquendo's throw from near second base bounced off his leg and rolled into shallow right field. With one out, Tony Gwynn drew an intentional walk before McGriff lofted a fly to medium center off Bob McClure that scored Azocar easily.

Hurst (15-6) pitched 8 1-3 innings, giving up a run on six hits and striking out seven.

Tood Zeile first in the bottom of the ninth on shortstop Tony Fernandez's high throw for an error. After Pedro Guerrero hit into a fielder's choice, Geronimo Pena pinch ran for Zeile. Felix Jose's single sent Pena to third and chased Hurst.

Jays lead by 2 games

Associated Press

AL

BALTIMORE — Tom Candiotti pitched one-hit ball for eight innings as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Baltimore Orioles 3-0 Wednesday night, opening a two-game lead in the AL East.

Candiotti gave up a single to Joe Orsulak and a walk to Glenn Davis in the first inning, then retired the next 22 batters before leaving in favor of Tom Henke, who recorded his 31st save with a perfect ninth.

Joe Carter drove in two runs for the Blue Jays, who completed a three-game sweep. The Blue Jays' fifth victory in six games put them two games ahead of second-place Detroit.

Mariners 7, Brewers 6

SEATTLE — Brian Holman pitched four-hit ball over seven innings and Seattle withstood a five-run ninth by Milwaukee.

Holman (11-13) struck out five and walked one as Seattle completed a three-game sweep of Milwaukee and beat the Brewers for the 10th straight time at the Kingdome.

Athletics 9, Red Sox 3

OAKLAND, Calif. — Outfielders Mike Greenwell and Ellis Burks let Brook Jacoby's two-out fly ball drop between them for a three-run double to cap a four-run rally in the fifth inning as the Athletics beat the Red Sox to end a five-game losing streak.

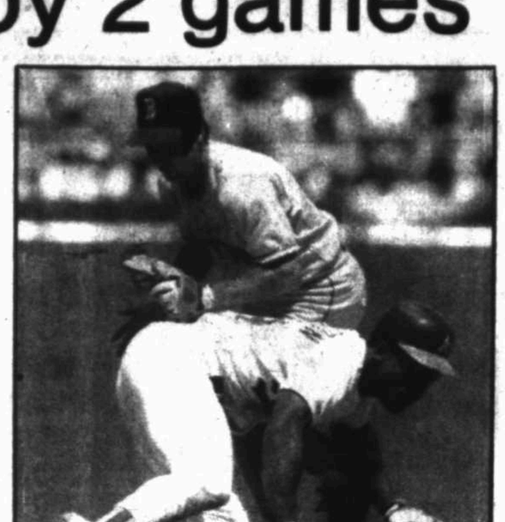

Dave Stewart (10-8) won for the first time in four starts with his eighth straight regular-season winning decision over Boston. Counting postseason play, Stewart has 11 straight victories over the Red Sox, who have never beaten him in Oakland (7-0). The Red Sox last beat Stewart on Aug. 19, 1988, in Boston.

Yankees 5, Rangers 1

NEW YORK — Rookie Bernie Williams drove in three runs and hit his first homer since July 15 to lead the New York Yankees to a victory over the Texas Rangers.

Williams singled in two runs in the second inning after apparently being called out on strikes, then hit his third homer of the season leading off the fifth as the Yankees snapped the Rangers' three-game winning streak.

Wade Taylor (7-7) allowed only three hits over the first five innings and held the Rangers scoreless until Gino Petralli opened the seventh with a homer.

AP Laserphoto

Angels 1, Tigers 0

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Jim Abbott pitched four-hit ball over 7 1-3 innings and Luis Polonia doubled in the only run as the Angels beat the Tigers.

The victory marked the first time in Abbott's three-year career that he has won five consecutive starts. Abbott (14-8) struck out six and walked one before Mark Eichhorn relieved in the eighth.

Royals 7, White Sox 6

KANSAS CITY — Warren Cromartie's two-out single in the bottom of the ninth scored Bill Pecota from second base and lifted Kansas City past Chicago for the White Sox's ninth straight loss.

Pecota beat out an infield single off losing pitcher Bobby Thigpen (7-4), then stole second with two out.

Twins 4, Indians 2

CLEVELAND — Brian Harper drove in two runs, including the go-ahead run in the seventh inning, and David West pitched six strong innings as the Minnesota Twins beat the error-prone Cleveland Indians.

ANGELS: Howie ties RBI mark

with another ground ball single to left, giving him 119 RBIs for the year and tying the Midland franchise Texas League RBI record held by Midland Cub Tom Lombarski since 1983.

Catcher Larry Gonzales tagged a deep liner to left to plate Flora with the winning run to make a hard luck loser out of Cook (1-3).

The three consecutive ground ball singles turned out to be the table setter for Gonzales.

"I guess we have to thank (Midland groundskeeper) Lee (Velarde) for keeping that grass low," Howie said. "It's a quick infield here and Reggie Williams is fast and was able to score.

"But who would have thought that we would get four straight hits against Cook the way he was pitching."

Gonzales said, "I got a slider and I thought the ball was out. I kind of stood and watched it a little, but we won't talk about that.

"This is really big for us because it shows we still have the ability to come from behind going into the big series with Wichita."

The rally made a winner out of Mike Butcher (8-6), who pitched 1⅔ innings of scoreless relief, but starter John Pawlowski deserved the same fate, pitching 7⅓ innings of six-hit ball. He gave up only one unearned run in the second inning when Adam Brown scored on a double by Mike White.

Still, the way Cook was throwing it looked as if Pawlowski was going to get a loss when he left in the eighth. Cook gave up three hits in the first two innings and then held Midland hitless until two outs in the eighth. He retired 14 Angels in a row at one point and had eight strikeouts.

It still can be debated whether it was Midland's pennant chase adrenaline surge or Cook tiring in the eighth that was the biggest factor in the game. But it is a fact that Cook faced one too many batters in the game.

"That was nothing," Gonzales said. "I said some things to myself after striking out and Cook thought I was talking to him."

On to Wichita.

Falcons trade for Tolliver

Associated Press

NFL Roundup

Quarterback Billy Joe Tolliver was traded from the Chargers to the Falcons and linebacker Seth Joyner and defensive end Clyde Simmons of the Eagles ended their holdouts as NFL teams continued Wednesday to prepare for this weekend's openers.

Joyner and Simmons, who had threatened like many other holdouts to sit out the season, signed three one-year contracts, although their status for Sunday's opener at Green Bay was left up in the air until coach Rich Kotite assessed their readiness to play.

Joyner led the Eagles with 132 tackles last year and had 7½ sacks. Simmons has had 23½ sacks the past two seasons and is third on Philadelphia's career sack list. Defensive tackle Jerome Brown and offensive tackle Matt Darwin remain holdouts.

Tolliver, the Chargers' starting quarterback most of the last two years, went to the Falcons, reportedly for a fourth-round draft choice. Tolliver had been beaten out for the job by second-year man John Friesz and apparently had lost favor with Chargers fans

But Friesz didn't exactly get a vote of confidence from general manager Bobby Beathard, who reportedly is interested in Stan Humphries, whom he drafted for the Redskins three years ago and who has fallen out of favor in Washington with coach Joe Gibbs.

"When we made this move it certainly didn't mean that John Friesz is the answer," Beathard said. "We think that John Friesz has potential. He's done some things that Dan and the coaches felt that he did deserve to be made the starter."

Tolliver, who was booed regularly last season when he was the NFL's 24th-rated quarterback, started 19 games in two NFL seasons, completing 305 of 595 pass attempts for 21 touchdowns with 24 interceptions.

"I didn't accomplish what I set out to do," said Tolliver, a second-round choice two years ago who will go to a team that has the established Chris Miller and rookie Brett Favre at quarterback.

"It's frustrating. But this is a new start and I'll take advantage of it. I guess that's the nature of the business."

The Browns placed safety Ricky Turner, their No. 1 draft choice and the second overall pick on injured reserve with a stress fracture in his upper left leg that will keep him out at least a month. He's the third starter in the Cleveland secondary to be lost.

"I don't think it's a jinx," coach Bill Belichick. "Injuries are part of football. You deal with them the best you can."

Most of the other moves were relatively minor.

The Giants, for example, signed Lorenzo Freeman, a 319-pound defensive lineman who spent most of the past five years with the Steelers.

OPEN: Forget only top seed to fall

in playing for the U.S. Davis Cup team should weigh in his favor for a spot on the Olympic squad, even if his ranking isn't as high as some other Americans.

McEnroe said he can't understand athletes who don't want to play in the Olympics.

"If Jordan doesn't want to play, I am available for the basketball, too," said McEnroe, who frequently attends NBA games.

Goran Ivanisevic, who beat fellow Croatian Goran Prpic 6-1, 6-3, 6-4, said he would never play for ethnically torn Yugoslavia in the Olympics or anywhere else.

He acknowledged, though, that "it could be a long time" before Croatia has its own Davis Cup team.

On a muggy, languid afternoon Wednesday after a brilliant night of shooting stars with Jimmy Connors coming back from two sets down to beat Patrick McEnroe, most of the seeds advanced without much difficulty.

Guy Forget, No. 7, was the exception, losing to Jan Siemerink 4-6, 6-3, 6-2, 7-6 (8-6).

No. 2 Stefan Edberg beat Jeff Tarango 6-3, 7-5, 6-0; Ivan Lendl, No. 5, beat Patrick Kuhnen 6-3, 6-2, 6-4; unseeded Michael Chang beat Todd Witsken 6-3, 6-0, 6-2, and No. 3 Michael Stich advanced via a walkover against a dehydrated and ill Jimmy Brown.

In women's matches, No. 2 Monica Seles overcame a brief lapse to beat Emanuela Zardo 6-0, 4-6, 6-0; No. 7 Jennifer Capriati beat Petra Ritter 6-3, 6-0, and No. 9 Jana Novotna beat Peanut Harper 6-2, 6-3.

Defending champion Gabriela Sabatini overcame a second-set lapse and advanced 6-3, 4-6, 5-1 when Barbara Paulus retired on match point with a foot injury. She turned her left ankle while executing a backhand shot, then limped to the umpire's chair and received ice during an injury timeout. She was unable to continue, however, and was taken from the court in a wheelchair.

CONNORS: Oldster loves to get dirty

(From 1C)

"He's like a living legend," McEnroe said. "I wish I had the love of the game that he's got.

"That's what keeps him going. Guys like that come along so seldomly. He's like Pete Rose in baseball or Kareem Abdul-Jabbar in basketball."

Connors liked that analogy.

"The dirtier I am, the better I love it. The more battle scars, the better it is," he said, eyeing skinned knuckles and knees.

As for the love of the game, he acknowledged that John McEnroe does not approach tennis the way he does.

"I wish he had that love, too, in a way," Connors said. "He has a different frame of mind.

"At times, he fights himself. He's got nothing to lose.

"He's got grand slams. Now, all he has to do is fire them up and do the best he can. If the pressure was to win, win, win, a lot of guys should have stopped playing a long time ago."

Connors said he wasn't playing poorly when he dropped the first two sets to Patrick McEnroe.

"I was losing and I didn't know why," he said. "But he let me back into the match. There's no doubt about it."

Once the fans recognized that Connors wasn't through, they rallied behind him. That stadium was only a third full as his comeback picked up speed.

"I saw them walking out," he said. "And I thought to myself, 'They're going to miss a lot of good tenns.'"

How does he do it?

"I explain it to guys this way — go out and give everything you've got. People know it and they love it. You can't fake it.

"Young guys don't know it and I don't tell them. The problem of youth is that it's wasted on the young."

"On the courts I never fool around," he said. "I enjoy myself. I laugh and smile and have a good time."

Correction

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — The Associated Press reported erroneously on Aug. 14 that Pete Rose called Howard Cosell "a liar." Rose did say that several statements about him in Cosell's book "What's Wrong With Sports" were false. But Cosell used the phrase "liar" in describing Rose in the book.

Bowden wants to win, not lose or Ty against BYU

■ Florida State tries to uphold its preseason No. 1 ranking and forget early-season disasters of years past, as the Seminoles take on Ty Detmer and Brigham Young.

Associated Press

The Seminoles are used to tough early schedules, but Bowden knows how devastating an season-opening rout can be. A 31-0 defeat by Miami knocked Florida State out of the No. 1 spot in the 1988 season and marred an 11-1 season.

So the importance of containing Heisman Trophy winner Ty Detmer and the Brigham Young passing attack isn't lost on Bowden or the Seminoles.

"We're treating it as a regular-season big game and a big game we have to have," Bowden said during a press conference at Disneyland, where he was accompanied by Goofy and Mickey Mouse.

"Both of us have to have it."

"We'll see right off the bat whether those preseason predictions are right or not. I think the fact that a lot of these boys were on our 1988 squad and saw us lose so bad to open the season should help."

At the least, they should remember Brigham Young's 28-21 ambush of Miami last year in the top-ranked Hurricanes' opener. Quarterback Casey Weldon said he learned the lesson of how quickly and easily a team can fall from No. 1.

Pigskin Classic

"It's different than in 1988," he said. "This team doesn't take the preseason ranking too seriously."

Facing Detmer, however, is serious business.

To counteract Detmer, who needs just 426 more yards to break the collegiate career passing mark, Florida State plans to use stunt defenses and pull a few surprises.

"We feel like if they do pretty much the same thing (as last year) we'll be pretty well prepared," linebacker Kirk Carruthers said. "We're going to have to contain him and take him out of the game as soon as possible. We've got to keep him under control and not let him have a career day."

Like last season, the No. 19 Cougars are underdogs looking to pick off No. 1, but this time they're without an experienced offensive line behind Detmer and have a new crop of receivers.

"We have so many young kids, some of them haven't been on a trip," coach LaVell Edwards said. "If we were going to Laramie it would seem like a bowl to them."

Edwards predicts good things, although perhaps not right away, from a line that returns only senior guard Bryan May from last year's team that was 10-3.

"This group is going to be good, maybe one of the best," he said. "Whether or not it comes together tomorrow night or not remains to be seen."

The depth and experience of the Seminoles, who return 17 starters from last year's squad that went 10-2, are intimidating, Edwards said.

'HORNS: Linebackers hurting

(From 1C)

Hadnot, who rushed for eight touchdowns and 541 yards as a freshman even though he started only six games, "has looked very good," showing a big improvement in his blocking, and "he's catching the ball well," McWilliams said.

"I look for him to have a great year."

"They've had a good fall," he said of the offense, which was balanced last year, running and passing for almost equal yardage.

The defense returns three all-SWC players in safety Lance Gunn and tackles James Patton and Tommy Jeter but injuries have cut into the linebacking corps.

Winfred Tubbs has what McWilliams called a "deadened nerve," after it was first thought that he had dislocated his shoulder.

The injury has left the 240-pound Tubbs so weak that he has been unable to lift a one-pound weight, McWilliams said.

Linebacker Doug Livingston also has a shoulder injury, and linebacker Kevin Walker will have to wear a knee brace knee all year, following surgery, McWilliams said.

He has made finding a punter, other than Gardere, a top priority, because he worries about an injury to his only experienced quarterback. "It's probably the only time I've wanted to see a guy get beat out," McWilliams said.

Texas opens its 99th football season Sept. 7 against Mississippi State at Starkville, Miss.

NCAA steps in to defend SWC basketball referees

DALLAS (AP) — Any violation involving improper influence of coaches over referees could cause the Southwest Conference to lose its automatic bid to the NCAA Basketball Tournament, investigators said.

A so-called "scratch list" will be discussed by the Division I Men's Basketball Committee within a few days, Hank Nichols, NCAA national supervisor of officials, told The Dallas Morning News in Wednesday's editions.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association defines scratch procedures as those that provide coaches "individually or collectively with direct or indirect authority to hire, retain, affect the assignments of or release of any official."

SWC officials Mike Tanco and Mike McCormack, both of Dallas, and Bobby Bonds of Benton, Ark., blamed a list by coaches for their dismissal following June's league meetings.

The three said they were among nine officials fired after SWC basketball coaches met with referees supervisor Paul Galvan, principal at Fort Worth Trimble Tech High School.

Galvan is a part-time employee of the SWC and the Southland Conference. SWC commissioner Fred Jacoby said the conference dismissed the officials because it was reducing its staff in the wake of Arkansas' decision to leave the conference.

He said the league had responded to the NCAA.

"We take evaluations from the coaches, the supervisor and myself at the end of each season," said Jacoby.

He also said some of the fired officials worked for other leagues, and therefore were not always available for the SWC Post-Season Classic.

But Tanco told The News that he had seen a "scratch list" and McCormack said the NCAA inquiry would ensure officials were not excluded from working certain games.

"They are going to check every official's schedule to make sure he has worked every school in that conference, but that's kind of after the fact," he said.

Loss of the NCAA automatic bid is the biggest penalty that could be assessed the SWC. But the league could also lose the $120,000 annual grant from the NCAA for its officials program.

New NHL franchise gets home approved

OTTAWA, Ontario (AP) — The Ottawa Senators finally found a home Wednesday. Now they have to find $22.5 million and a hockey team.

The Senators, an NHL expansion franchise scheduled to debut in 1992, got a major boost when the Ontario Municipal Board approved construction of an arena on farmland about 25 minutes from downtown Ottawa.

The approval comes with strings — the size of the Palladium must be reduced to 18,500 seats from a planned 22,500 and a proposed commercial development must be scaled back — but team officials celebrated anyway.

"What I really feel is tremendous relief," said Bruce Firestone, head of Terrace Investments, the development firm that was awarded the franchise last December.

"This was a major hurdle for us. There's no question in my mind that of all the steps we had to get over, this was probably the most important."

Construction of the Palladium will begin next spring or early summer. Until it's finished, the Senators will play their home games in the 10,000-seat Ottawa Civic Centre.

A new arena was one of the conditions that the NHL set for the franchise to meet by December. Approval required land rezoning.

Randy Sexton, the team's chief executive officer, said the club expects to name a general manager next week and hire a scouting staff shortly after.

The club still needs money, but Firestone said the team has hired a major Canadian investment house to try to raise about $18 million. Investors shied away from the club while approval of the arena was in doubt.

The Senators' last remaining major hurdle is payment of the final $22.5 million to the league. That payment is due Dec. 16 and Firestone said he's confident the team will make it.

NHL president John Ziegler said he was pleased with the board's ruling beause it allows the Senators to "move forward in securing a permanent franchise in the National Hockey League."

Oil dips

NEW YORK — Oil prices fell Wednesday on news that the nation's crude supply was sharply higher last week.

Light sweet crude oil for delivery in October settled at $21.74 per barrel, down 24 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange. Volume was light.

Traders said there was little news moving the market, except for an American Petroleum Institute report, released Tuesday evening, which said the U.S. stockpile of crude rose last week by 5 million barrels, to 348.6 million.

Among the refined petroleum products futures, home heating oil held its ground but unleaded gasoline took a hit, as the end of the peak driving season draws near and demand seems sluggish.

Unleaded gasoline for delivery in September settled at 65.34 cents a gallon, down 1.45 cents. Home heating oil for delivery in September settled at 62.24 cents a gallon, up .04 cent.

Natural gas prices were mixed on Wednesday, with contracts for delivery in October settling at $1.578 per 1,000 cubic feet, up .2 cent.

Dollar declines

NEW YORK — The dollar declined on world currency markets Wednesday following the release of a report that unexpectedly showed the economy had contracted in the second quarter.

Gold prices eased in domestic markets after settling mixed overseas. On the New York Commodity Exchange, gold bullion for current delivery settled at $353.90 a troy ounce, off 50 cents from Tuesday. Republic National Bank said gold slipped 10 cents an ounce to a late bid price of $354.25.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Tuesday's rates included: 1.7395 German marks, down from 1.7505; 1.5171 Swiss francs, down from 1.5235; 5.9025 French francs, down from 5.9435; 1,297.50 Italian lire, down from 1,306.00, and 1.1408 Canadian dollars, down from 1.1415.

Silver prices were narrowly mixed. On New York's Comex, silver bullion for current delivery settled at $3.922 a troy ounce, up from $3.910 on Tuesday.

Recycling ads

NEW YORK — The major manufacturers of juice packs agreed to back off claims their packages are easy to recycle, settling accusations by 10 states that the companies misled consumers.

Alaska, U.S. strike pact on spill award

■ Agreement to allow continued cooperation in prosecuting Exxon.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Alaska and the federal government reached a new agreement Wednesday on how to divide any damage award from the nation's largest oil spill.

The pact, which will allow continued cooperation in prosecuting Exxon for 1989's 11 million gallon oil spill in Prince William Sound, makes Alaska and the federal government co-trustees for any money recovered from the company.

Last spring, Exxon Corp. and Exxon Shipping Co. agreed to plead guilty to misdemeanor charges and pay a $1 billion civil and criminal settlement.

However, the judge in the case threw out the criminal plea bargain, saying the proposed $100 million fine let the company off too easily. The Alaska House then rejected the entire settlement, and Exxon later withdrew its guilty pleas.

The two sides were supposed to have been trying to negotiate a new settlement, but an official familiar with the case described it as basically a one-sided conversation.

"There's never been a negotiating session," said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "We're frustrated."

Wednesday's agreement, which was being submitted to U.S. District Court in Alaska for approval, settles a lawsuit between the federal and state governments over who would control the money they hope to win from Exxon. The new agreement is similar to one that expired when Exxon's plea bargain fell through.

"We are not going to let disagreements over who owns what stand in the way of reaching a settlement," Alaska Gov. Walter J. Hickel said in a news release Wednesday in Juneau. "The people of Alaska have waited two years for a resolution."

Alaska Attorney General Charles Cole said the agreement "formalizes the close working relationship between the federal and state governments that has developed over a common commitment to prosecute oil-spill claims."

The oil company faces criminal and civil action as a result of the spill, which occurred when the tanker Exxon Valdez ran aground.

The criminal portion of the case is scheduled to go to trial Oct. 7; no court date has been set for the civil case.

Exxon spokesman Les Rogers, reached by phone in Houston, said the company was not aware of the agreement.

Market rallies, sending stocks to record highs

■ Dow Jones average climbs 29.07 to 3,055.23 after weak economic reports drive credit rates lower.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The stock market's late-summer rally came back to life Wednesday, pushing prices to record levels with encouragement from falling interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had slipped 14.09 points over the week's first two sessions, climbed 29.07 to 3,055.23.

Big Board volume came to an estimated 169.62 million shares as of 4 p.m. EDT, against 143.92 million at the same point Tuesday.

The government sprang a surprise on investors when it reported that the gross national product declined at an annual rate of 0.1 percent, after adjustment for inflation, in the second quarter of the year.

Earlier, the Commerce Department had estimated that GNP grew at a 0.4 percent annual rate in the April-June period.

The revision raised the prospect that the recession, which dates back to mid-1990, lasted longer than had earlier been believed. But it also touched off a drop in credit-market interest rates.

Prices of long-term Treasury bonds rose about $7.50 for each $1,000 in face value, lowering their yields to the 8.05 percent-8.10 percent range.

Philip Morris rose ⅞ to 74⅛ in active trading. The company raised its dividend and named Michael Miles to succeed Hamish Maxwell as chief executive on Sept. 1, following a plan set forth several months ago.

Other gainers among the blue chips included Merck, up 2⅝ at 127⅞; Boeing, up 1⅛ at 50⅛; Coca-Cola, up 1¾ at 66⅜; Exxon, up ⅞ at 59½, and American Express, up ⅞ at 27¼.

In the auto sector, General Motors rose 1 to 38⅜; Ford Motor ⅜ to 31⅜, and Chrysler 1 to 12¾. On Tuesday Lee Iacocca, Chrysler's chairman, made a bullish forecast of 1992 sales prospects for cars and trucks.

Strong demand continued for Latin American issues, which have been favorites of late among international investors. Mexico Fund rose 1⅝ to 25½; Mexico Equity & Income Fund ⅞ to 14⅛; Telefonos de Mexico ⅝ to 37⅜; Chile Fund 1⅜ to 31¾, and Latin America Investment Fund 2¼ to 29.

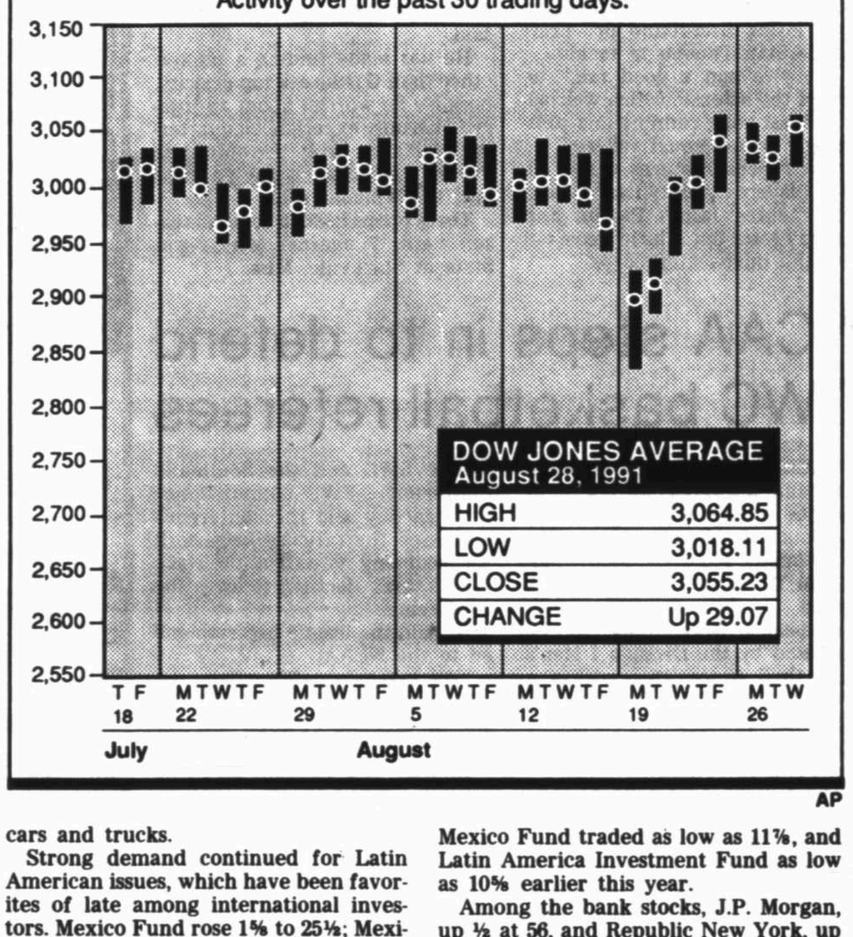

Shares of several closed-end funds investing in that part of the world have more than doubled in recent months. Mexico Fund traded as low as 11⅞, and Latin America Investment Fund as low as 10⅝ earlier this year.

Among the bank stocks, J.P. Morgan, up ½ at 56, and Republic New York, up 1½ at 70, both made the new-high list.

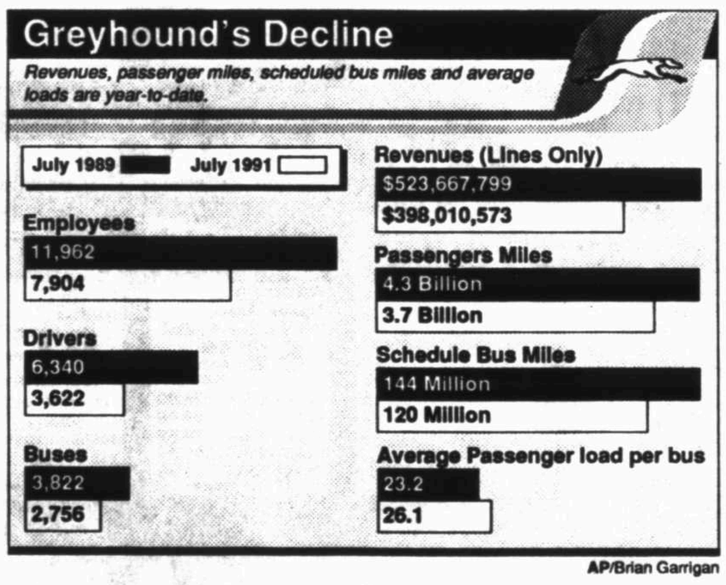

Bolar Pharmaceutical, the most actively traded American Stock Exchange issue, jumped 2¾ to 8¼. The company settled a legal dispute with Smithkline Beecham over the manufacture of a generic version of a Smithkline drug.

Judge hears final arguments in lengthy bus line restructuring

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Creditors of Greyhound Lines Inc. asked for confirmation of the company's bankruptcy plan Wednesday, eager to take control of the nation's only inter-city bus line at the risk of potentially huge future payments to its striking drivers.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Richard Schmidt heard two days of final testimony and arguments in the nearly 15-month-old, $600 million reorganization. He told attorneys he would rule in the next few days.

"I'm not certain thinking about the case is going to help me make a decision," Schmidt said. "We've been living with it for so long."

The ending centered on the issue that has been debated most in the case, which is how much liability the company can face if another judge rules it engaged in unfair labor practices.

Attorneys for the drivers' union and the National Labor Relations Board, which is pursuing the unfair labor complaint, argued Greyhound's bankruptcy plan limits that liability and, thus, the chance for the drivers to receive a payment.

Greyhound and creditors' attorneys said the plan does not need to address the potential claim, the full size of which is unknown and may not be resolved for years.

The plan has "nothing to do with how the company pays future damages," said Oscar Cantu, attorney for Dallas-based Greyhound.

Peter Shinevar, attorney for the Amalgamated Transit Union, said Greyhound wants to preserve the ability not to pay the full claim by not addressing it in the restructuring.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

'Joint ownership' can take various forms

By Bill Doyle

Q. I have a certificate for less than 100 shares of common stock in a retail store chain. This stock is in my name and I would like to put it in joint ownership with my wife, if that is possible.

Doyle

A. Yes. The full-blown term for joint ownership is "joint tenants with right of survivorship and not as tenants in common." However, it usually is shortened to "joint tenants" or abbreviated as "jt ten."

That form of joint ownership is explicit. If there are two joint owners — "tenants," as they are called — and one of them dies, the surviving joint owner becomes the sole owner.

However there can be three or more joint tenants, who need not be husband and wife. In that case, when one makes the final trip to that big stock exchange in the sky, his or her share of ownership is split equally among the surviving owners.

There is another form of joint ownership called "tenants by the entirety." That also carries with it right of survivorship and can be used only by husband and wife.

Still another form is "tenants in common," which can involve two or more people all of whom might own equal shares or different percentage shares. Tenants in common does not provide right of survivorship.

In all three of these forms of stock registration, the word "and" appears between the names of joint owners. That would be the end it, were it not for the fact that some companies and their transfer agents have taken to using the word "or" between the names.

The use of "or" creates co-ownership. That formerly was a no-no for stocks, but times do change — even though most transfer agents insist on using "and."

Q. When a husband and wife own stock jointly and one dies, can change of sole ownership to the survivor be accomplished by furnishing a copy of the deceased joint owner's death certificate directly to the company?

A. The death certificate should be presented to the transfer agent for the particular stock. Some companies act as their own transfer agents, but most retain outsiders — usually banks. The transfer agent's name, address and telephone number are listed in each company's annual report to stockholders.

After a joint owner dies, transfer of ownership to the surviving owner is accomplished by presenting his or her owner's death certificate to the transfer agent. In some states, an inheritance and/or estate tax waiver must also be provided.

Check that with the transfer agent. Then, send the certificate by registered mail, return receipt requested.

Q. Is it possible to change stock from joint ownership to single ownership while both owners are still living?

A. Certainly. In that case, both owners must sign the assignment form on the back of the certificate or a "stock power" form, which serves the same purpose.

Signatures on certificates and stock powers usually must be guaranteed by brokerage firms, commercial banks or trust companies. However, some transfer agents accept signature guarantees from savings banks, savings and loan associations and credit unions.

Q. Our broker wants $50 to guarantee our signatures on the certificate for stock we plan to give to our son. The broker says his firm will "handle all details," which obviously simply means sending in our certificate and receiving one registered in our son's name. Is this a legitimate fee?

A. Brokerages are allowed to levy any charges they like for "services" such as that. But you can do it yourself, as described above. If the broker insists on a fee, ask your bank to guarantee your signatures.

BCCI's former customers endure personal hardship

By Steve Lohr
N.Y. Times News Service

BRADFORD, England — The people accused of engineering the huge fraud that brought down the Bank of Credit and Commerce International reside in various states of luxury, ranging from a villa in Karachi, Pakistan, to a hotel suite in Abu Dhabi to a yacht in the south of France.

But the victims are in places like Bradford, an old industrial city in northern England where Mohammed Aslam Choudary sadly surveys his idle workshop.

It used to employ as many as 60 people stitching up bed sheets, pillowcases and quilts, more than 10,000 sets a week. Now the shop floor is deserted except for a few barren tables, unattended sewing machines and a dejected Choudary, one of BCCI's former customers.

"The innocent people — depositors and small businesses — did not have anything to do with the fraud, yet we are the ones getting hurt," said Choudary, 40, a Pakistani immigrant. "It does not seem fair."

His company, Greatmade Ltd., got its trade financing from BCCI to pay for the cloth it imported from Pakistan. It also had about $14,000 deposited at the local branch.

The bedding producer cannot obtain trade financing at another bank until British regulators sort through BCCI's customer accounts, a laborious process likely to take months and threaten the survival of Greatmade, which is losing orders and an estimated $20,000 a month.

The stories of BCCI's former customers differ in certain details, but the theme is remarkably similar: Unlike the United States, where a generous deposit-insurance program has socialized the financial burden, bank failures mean personal hardship in most other countries.

Britain's deposit insurance, for example, covers only 75 percent of the losses on an account, up to a maximum of just 15,000 pounds, or $25,500. In the United States, accounts up to $100,000 are insured, and sometimes even larger amounts are covered.

BCCI had more than 40,000 depositors in this country, and it is the Asian business community, whose members were among the bank's biggest depositors, that has felt most of the pain. C.B. Patel, the editor of Asian Business magazine, estimates that 20,000 Asian businesses may be in danger because of the seizure of BCCI in July.

Having come to Britain in the postwar years, Asians now run thousands of news agents, restaurants, small shops, and fabric and garment makers throughout the country.

Many of these entrepreneurs, mainly Indian and Pakistani immigrants, have been hurt directly because they had accounts at the bank. Yet even those businesses that did not bank at BCCI are often suffering because so many of their customers did.

Founded by a Pakistani entrepreneur, BCCI was the bank of choice for members of the Asian community, who were outsiders, often shunned by traditional British banks.

But at BCCI they found a welcome, people who looked like they did, spoke their language and understood their problems. To walk into a BCCI branch was to enter a comfortable world of shared cultural assumptions and business norms.

For lending when others would not, BCCI charged higher interest rates on commercial loans than did other banks. And in keeping with its aggressive approach to growth, BCCI offered higher interest rates on deposits. "But for most Asians, the real reason for going to BCI was the social links," Patel said.

Nowhere would that be more true than in Bradford, a city of roughly 460,000 people where the economy is in transition from the textile industry to services, tourism and high technology. Bradford has one of the highest concentrations of Asians of any city in Britain, with 45,000 Muslims, 9,000 Hindus and 9,000 Sikhs.

The Bradford telephone book, for instance, has 104 listings under the name Patel, 227 Singhs and 221 Alis. And those figures understate the presence of Asians, since many, seeking privacy and fearing racial taunts, have unlisted numbers.

Many of the Asian immigrants arrived in the late 1950s and early 1960s to work the night shifts in the textile mills on the new machinery that had been installed in a belated and eventually futile effort to respond to foreign competition. But the immigrants stayed after the mills closed, setting up small businesses while their children attended universities.

Publicly traded company would combine Opryland, TNN, TV stations

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Oklahoma billionaire Edward Gaylord is forming an umbrella entertainment company that would combine the Grand Ole Opry, The Nashville Network and other holdings, including two television stations in Texas, into a new publicly traded company.

Attorneys filed papers Tuesday seeking government permission to combine the holdings into a Nashville-based company called Gaylord Entertainment Co.

The company also would own Country Music Television, the General Jackson showboat and four independent television stations and cable TV stations in Southern California.

A spokesman said the television stations to be operated by Gaylord Entertainment are KTVT in Dallas-Fort Worth, KHTV in Houston, KSTW in Seattle-Tacoma, Wash., and WVTV in Milwaukee.

The stock offering does not involve Gaylord's Oklahoma Publishing Co., publisher of The Daily Oklahoman in Oklahoma City, said Sam Dodson, managing director of First Boston Corp. in Houston.

The Securities and Exchange Commission and the Internal Revenue Service must approve the deal, to be financed by an initial stock offering of 9 million shares of common stock to be traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

E.W. "Bud" Wendell, president and chief executive of Opryland USA, would become chairman of Gaylord Entertainment.

"This offering is being conducted to retire debt. It is a very positive step for our company. And something we are very excited about. It will not change what we do," Wendell said in a statement.

Opryland lawyer Frank Wentworth would not discuss the deal, but one source estimated the stock sale would generate $175 million to $200 million.

Wendell said 7.65 million shares will be offered through an underwriting syndicate managed by First Boston Corp., and 1.35 million will be offered internationally through Credit Suisse First Boston Ltd.

Analyst John Reidy of Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co. said all the entertainment operations generate large amounts of cash.

"We'd be very surprised if these enterprises were in need of capital in the traditional sense. There may be some corporate restructuring issues that we would have no real fix on. But as far as the business itself needing money, that would be unlikely," Reidy said.

Ten states crack down on juice-box recycling claims

NEW YORK (AP) — The major manufacturers of juice packs agreed Wednesday to back off claims their packages are easy to recycle, settling accusations by 10 states, including Texas, that the companies misled consumers with false ads.

Tetra Pak Inc., Combibloc Inc. and their ad agency Lintas Inc. admitted no wrongdoing. But they agreed to pay a total of $75,000 to the states and will permit state officials to screen future juice-box advertisements for questionable environmental claims.

The settlement was the latest in a string of similar pacts between state officials and large U.S. manufacturers over so-called "green marketing" claims.

The multi-layer juice boxes are at the center of a widening debate with environmentalists, who favor packages made of a single material because there are no dissimilar materials to be separated before recycling.

Maine has banned the boxes amid criticism that the most widely available recycling programs cannot accept the packages, which are layered with aluminum, plastic and paper.

Still, the airtight boxes remain popular among consumers because they can preserve liquids for relatively long periods of time, are small enough to fit in childrens' lunchboxes and come equipped with straws for easy consumption.

Wednesday's settlement was prompted by a series of ads the juice-box companies ran last fall in The New York Times, The Wall Street Journal and USA Today. "Drink boxes are as easy to recycle as this page," one ad headline read.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numberical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key(*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
- You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
- You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key(*). Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
- You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

Survey: Children know food groups

CHICAGO (AP) — Kids know their basic food groups, according to a food industry survey released Wednesday, but critics say absorbing such knowledge does not necessarily ensure good eating habits.

"It doesn't tell people what changes they need to make in their diets," said Jayne Hurley, a nutritionist with the Center for Science in the Public Interest, a Washington-based consumer health advocacy group.

Teaching children to eat a variety of foods is "a smokescreen to mask the tougher advice that we all need to cut down on fat, salt and sugar," Hurley said.

The telephone survey of 407 fourth- through eighth-graders found that 95 percent of the children were familiar with the five basic food groups and 80 percent could identify at least three.

The poll was sponsored by the International Food Information Council and the education branch of the American Dietetic Association and taken last month by Gallup Organization Inc. It had a margin of sampling error of plus or minus 4.9 percentage points.

A separate Associated Press poll released Tuesday indicated parents have not digested nutritionists' warnings that their children eat too much junk food.

Mary Abbott Hess, president of the Chicago-based American Dietetic Association, told reporters that the survey co-sponsored by her group indicates that "children are one of the better nutrition-educated segments of our society."

Hess' association has 63,000 members.

She said most dieticians recommend children eat "a good old balanced diet," consisting of six or more servings daily of breads, cereals and grains; three or more servings of vegetables; two or more servings of fruit; three to four servings of milk, yogurt and cheese; and two to three servings of meat and proteins.

Designers show new collections

By Suzy Patterson

There may no longer be a total Paris look, but the variety and creativity are exciting, as each designer does his own thing.

Some new trends did surface. In spite of the nearly nude looks at Versace and outrageous underwear-clad cuties at Chanel, hem lengths dropped mainly to just above the knee — a reasonable length these days.

Pants were revived by the couture. Yves Saint Laurent produced his usual great tailored trousers, from elegant daytime lines in soft flannels to exquisite evening silk brocades, wonderful at-home looks and some with an air of chinoiserie in bright Chinese red silk.

His whole show wowed the press: the newer, gentler puff skirts, his toned-down short dresses with a hint of the Sixties, the terrific long dress embroidered with bullfight motifs.

He was also applauded for his discreet use of exotic folklore in much easier-to-wear clothes that included some of his favorite trapeze coats, plus more fitted styles as well.

Most couturiers gave coats their best attention, including the sharply fitted and flared styles at Lanvin, often with futuristic collars pointed out. Swing coats and easy three-quarter coats also shared the limelight around town.

AP LaserPhoto

Christian Lacroix's short evening dress is smoky faille with knotted bows at the back.

Nothing new, but they often looked fine and wearable.

Lashings of fox, sable, chinchilla or mink turned up all over to keep the Rolls-Royce set warm — as linings, long or shortie coats, piping on hoods.

Emanuel Ungaro gave it all he had to celebrate the 25th year of his own couture house — and sometimes it was a bit too much. He piled suits, lovely cocktail or evening wear with so much folklore, such a garden of bright flowers including his famous huge fringed shawls, that the effect was overwhelming.

Other versions of bright folklore appeared at Feraud, and quieter gold-shot ethnic prints in several houses.

Many thought Karl Lagerfeld at Chanel went right over the top in his expressly bad-taste show, emphasizing little sleazy boudoir or bar-girls tied up in or pouring out of their yards and crazily draped acres of net, feathers, lace and tulle.

Disco dancers will appreciate the mirrored or matte sequined minis from various houses. Couture also brought back the lush ball gown in a big way.

Couture's winter daytime fabrics include the softest cashmere and tweeds, checks and plaids in broadcloth (the tartans look original at Saint Laurent), good boucle wools, jerseys, satin-wool and gabardine for daytime.

For evening velvet is all over the place, so are the lovely new lame-shot iridescent failles and taffeta. Also noteworthy are the chiffon, plenty of lace including the finest gold-lacquered Chantilly, rich satins, cloque and Fortuny-pleated silks, brocades with lame. "Goldfinger" infatuation carries on in all-over gold lace or sequin items.

Besides autumnal browns, livelier colors include fuchsia or electric pink, lots of poppy or flame red, sherbet orange, Pacific turquoise or teal blue, indigo or royal blue and emerald, lime or absinthe green.

Most shoes are high-heeled simple pumps, with a few bootees thrown in. Only Versace went out for the jeweled, decorated couture legging-boot to keep the girls warm in their suggestive microminis.

Had there been a Golden Thimble prize awarded for the best couture collection, many think Lacroix would have won for the third time. But as two sponsors have dropped out of paying for the awards party and no new ones could be found this season there is no Golden Thimble prize since it was started 15 years ago.

Name will always be engraved on — heart

By Erma Bombeck

In keeping with the present-day trend of cosmetics — if you can't lift it, tuck it, rearrange it or suck it out, you buy it — along comes Tattoos to Go.

Bombeck

These are temporary, waterproof transfers that can be applied in minutes, will last up to five days, and can be removed with alcohol, baby oil or Scotch tape.

Basically, the market is aimed at needle-wimps who can't make a permanent commitment to a single boy or girl or to a scorpion crawling up their arm.

I halfway understand the logic behind Princess Di and Michael Jackson having permanent eyeliner tattoed on their eyelids. The permanent PMS look is their personal signature. But a name or a symbol on your body is so — billboardish. I expect any day now to see Monica Seles, who has more patches on her tennis clothes than a quilt, appear on center court with a sign on her forehead, "This Space for Rent."

For years, I've equated a tattoo with someone in the Navy who goes to the Orient, has too much to drink and wakes up with a serpent and the name "Gloria" on his biceps. I also think of my Uncle Wesley. He wore tattoos to make an independent statement. (He had an eagle tattooed on his stomach that he could make "dance" when he was younger. As he grew older, the eagle took on the size of a 747 and just lay there.)

Wearers of tattoos always seemed rather tough to me. If they weren't, then how come they put names in places that have to be bared in order to be seen? Since the manufacturer sent me a couple of samples, I decided to try one on my upper arm near the shoulder.

My husband said, "What have you got on your arm?"

I said: "I have a tattoo. Do you have a problem with that? Winston Churchill's mother had a snake tattooed on her wrist. Does that make her a biker? And Melanie Griffith has a pear on her derriere! Live with that!"

"I just wondered ..."

"Get with it! This isn't your father's Oldsmobile. This is 1991, sweetie! I'm making a personal statement here. Don't you watch MTV?"

"I just wondered, who is 'Greg'?"

I knew I should have used the other transfer they sent me — the rose with the Cupid on the leaf.

Dear Abby

Counseling saves self-esteem, marriage

EDITOR'S NOTE: Abby is on a two-week vacation. Following is a selection of some of her favorite past letters.

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: May I second your excellent recommendation to "Nervous Wreck," whose bullheaded husband refused marriage counseling, was walking all over her, and was teaching her son to do the same?

Van Buren

We had a similar situation at our house. I finally sought counseling alone because my husband not only refused to go with me but also tried to talk me out of it.

Several sessions with a psychiatrist relieved my depression, and at the doctor's suggestion I signed up for a course in assertiveness at a nearby mental health clinic.

Well, Abby, our marriage is on an entirely different footing now. In counseling I was treated as a rational, sensitive person whose feelings are important, and I came to view myself that way.

Because I changed, my family's reactions toward me did, too. They found that I would firmly reject disrespectful attitudes and actions and that I demanded my rights in any situation.

My husband now seems like a different man, and we are both 100 percent happier. As for me, I'm ... NO LONGER A WRECK

DEAR NO LONGER: Thank you for supporting my constant recommendation to "get counseling." To some it may sound like a broken record; to others, a copout. Mental health clinics across the nation continue to provide lifesaving support for troubled people at a price everyone can afford to pay. If your marriage is in trouble and your mate refuses counseling — go alone!

DEAR ABBY: Some people seem to think that just because we have a large family, our yard is a public playground.

At this moment I have 16 kids playing ball in my back yard, and only seven of them are mine. My problem is that the kids aren't allowed to play in other yards because they ruin the grass and fall in the flowers. I really don't mind, but it wouldn't hurt some of the other parents to let the kids play in their yard once in a while.

At night, the kids ask me to turn on my yard lights so they can play after supper. The yelling and the screaming can be heard for blocks.

When, oh when, will I have peace and quiet again? — MOM WITH PUBLIC PLAYGROUND

DEAR MOM: Too soon. Count your blessings, Mom. You're lucky your children are occupied in a healthy, wholesome sport. You don't have to worry about where they are, what they're doing and with whom. Anybody can raise grass. It takes special people to raise children.

DEAR ABBY: While in church, I saw a woman put a $5 bill in the collection plate and take back $4. Is that considered proper etiquette? — CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS: Why not? God knows she put in $5.

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

THURSDAY, AUGUST 29, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Be wary of the promises others make now. Take a conservative approach and cover all your bases. Real estate deals prove lucrative in December. Purchasing a condominium or house will improve your lifestyle and add to your creature comforts. Travel will put you in touch with unusual people in early 1992. Explore new employment opportunities with an open mind. Romance puts thoughts of commitment into your head by next summer. An impossible dream could come true.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: superstar Michael Jackson, actor Elliott Gould, director William Friedkin, actress Isabel Sanford.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Unexpected financial developments could change your whole game plan. Be flexible. A spur-of-the-moment decision works out just fine. In romance, trust your instincts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Do not throw away the good solid principles of old for a dubious modern approach. Keep your temper under control even if someone deliberately defies you. Loved one holds the trump cards.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Express what you feel, even if the rest of the world is on a different course. Competing with a friend or relative causes stress. In romance, cast aside false pride and arrogance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): As long as you keep your ambition from running away from you, you will make nice financial gains. Romance boosts your spirits. A secret hope could be realized.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The wait for new trends to develop could seem interminable. Curb your impatience. Waiting until the right moment to present your ideas will pay off handsomely. Move ahead with flair.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Power will come through new social contacts. A financial windfall could provide a unique opportunity for career growth. Refuse to be locked into a long-term agreement.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A good day for tackling domestic chores or a pesky job others have shifted to your shoulders. You work well alone. Let partner take the lead in romance. New social activities are favored.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your earning power could get a nice boost now. A shopping trip goes well if you know exactly what you want. Go ahead and combine business with pleasure this evening. Host a small dinner.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your determination to succeed helps you through some difficult moments today. Good news arrives regarding your finances. Put the sparkle back in a romance by planning a special outing.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Home repairs, gardening or landscaping capture your attention. Watch a tendency to be overly sensitive to criticism. Loved ones are eager to help you in any way they can. Try a new hair style.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Stay calm. Your ability to handle pressure and confrontations will impress both higher-ups and potential adversaries. Although certain people find you intimidating, good friends know that you are really a pussycat!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Good luck comes to those who engage in sports or contests today. Travel is stimulating and can only improve family relationships. New business trends require a quick decision. Rely on your intuition.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are perhaps the thriftiest of the signs. Thanks to a regular savings program, they always seem able to buy anything they really want. Count on these Virgos to treat their things gently; their toys can often be passed on to a younger sibling. Good with their hands, these children show a special interest in art projects and model-building. Generous and loyal, these Virgos treat their close friends like family. They are capable of making great sacrifices for those they love.

A bad break can turn a seemingly cast-iron contract into an "iffy" business. You need to keep all your wits about you if you are to recover.

With 12 high-card points and a five-card suit, North felt three no trump would be an easy contract for partner to play. When dummy appeared, so did South.

Declarer won the opening heart lead in hand and, needing only four diamond tricks to land the game, made the standard safety play of leading to the ace of diamonds and returning the suit to the king. Unfortunately, West showed out on this trick, so declarer could scramble no more than eight tricks for down one.

In a vacuum, declarer's play of the diamond suit represented the best percentage chance for four tricks. However, possession of the eight of diamonds and the fact that West had followed with the nine to the first diamond trick afforded declarer the opportunity of guarding against either defender holding four diamonds.

Once East followed to the second diamond with the seven, declarer should simply have covered with the eight. If that loses to West, the suit is coming home. If West is out of diamonds, declarer's eight will win. After cashing the king, South simply crosses to dummy with a club and concedes a diamond trick to East. The ace of hearts is still on the table as an entry to the good diamond, and nine tricks are in the bank—one spade, two hearts, two clubs and four diamonds.

"This is the biggest thing to happen to Blondie since the birth of Cookie Bumstead back in '42," said cartoonist Dean Young.

Never mind the fact that working women are hardly big news. Things happen slowly in cartoon-land, which may explain why Blondie still has a knockout figure and no wrinkles and Cookie and her brother Alexander are still teen-agers.

Besides, Young says, Blondie isn't getting a job in order to keep up with the times. Instead, he's sending her off to work because he needed some new material.

"I am not a sociologist," he said. "I'm a cartoonist. I wanted to go into some new areas that I could get some more material out of and get some more gags. I just hope it comes out funny and that people enjoy it."

The story of Blondie's foray into the workaday world begins unfolding on Labor Day, just days before the strip begins its 61st year. It started in 1930 with Blondie Boopadoop, a flapper, hunting for a rich husband. She had her eye on bumbling Dagwood Bumstead, heir to the Bumstead Locomotive works.

HURON, S.D. — Country singer Garth Brooks, nominated for six Country Music Association awards this year, played to a record-breaking crowd at the South Dakota State Fair.

Brooks

Brooks, known for his twangy country voice and such hits as "I Got Friends In Low Places," performed Tuesday for 7,900 screaming fans.

Brooks also was the first performer at the South Dakota State Fair to sell out before the fair opened. Tickets to his concert were grabbed up three weeks after he was booked, said Carv Thompson, the fair's entertainment coordinator.

"Life is good," Brooks said when told of that distinction after his performance. "Things have been going really well for us."

He attributed his large crowds to drawing more than just country-music fans.

"The audience is a crossover," he said. "I see people coming over to country music. The people who come see us are very, very sincere."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Andy Williams says he still enjoys singing "Moon River" but remains puzzled by the lyrics.

"The lyrics are just abstract enough to make them interesting," Williams said Tuesday. "I mean what is 'Moon River'? It doesn't mean exactly what it says.

The lyrics include the lines: "Wider than a mile, I'll be crossing you in style, some day. You dream maker, you old heart breaker."

The tune was the theme song for Williams' network TV show from 1962 to 1971. He is in Nashville this week to celebrate the release of his album "Nashville," a collection of country music tunes.

"My music isn't traditional country, exactly," Williams said. "It's country, but there are all different kinds of country.

"I don't want to sound like anybody else — not like Garth (Brooks), or Randy Travis — but I do want to capitalize on these musicians and on this music down here, the songs.

"I'm not wearing cowboy boots and sparkly shirts and pretending that I'm that kind of country because I'm not."

• • •

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. — Actor Mitchell Laurance has appeared on several television shows and movies, but says he's always recognized as the man who becomes frustrated with poor telephone service in an AT&T commercial.

Laurance, who was in South Carolina for a date resulting from the March of Dimes Bid for Bachelors charity auction, said the commercial has run for more than a year.

"The most frequent question is what the guy on the beach says in the commercial," Laurance said. "He says: 'Noka Moka Beachside.'"

Laurance has appeared on episodes of "L.A. Law," "Night Court," "Not Necessarily the News," and "Cop Rock." He was featured in "Absolute Strangers," a CBS television movie broadcast last spring.

"It is amazing that I do TV movies about AIDS and abortion, and people recognize me from a commercial," said Laurance.

BALTIMORE — Novelist Tom Clancy is considering taking his military expertise onto the battlefield of professional football.

The author of "The Hunt for Red October" and "Patriot Games" is considering applying for ownership of a prospective NFL expansion team in Baltimore, his attorney said Tuesday.

"He is on the perimeter, looking into it," said attorney David Cohan.

Clancy, 44, is a Baltimore native and lives in Prince Frederick. His most recent novel, "The Sum of All Fears," is about nuclear terrorism and is currently No. 1 on The New York Times best-seller list.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS
SAVINGS ASSOCIATION
DALLAS, TEXAS

On July 26, 1991, Southwest Federal Savings Association, ("Association"), was closed by Order of the Director of the Office of Thrift Supervision ("OTS"). The Resolution Trust Corporation ("RTC") was appointed as sole Receiver for the Association. The Receiver took possession of the Association on July 26, 1991, and succeeded to all of the Associations rights, titles, powers and privileges. Pursuant to the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act of 1989 ("FIRREA"), the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation ("FDIC") is the exclusive manager for the Receiver of said Association.

Creditors of the Association are notified to present their Claims with supporting documentation, to the Receiver by October 30, 1991, which date is not less than 90 days after the initial publication of this Notice, or such claims may be disallowed by the Receiver.

Claims should be filed by presenting documentation to the Receiver at the following address:

SOUTHWEST FEDERAL
SAVINGS ASSOCIATION

The Director of the Office of Thrift Supervision of the Department of the Treasury of the United States ("OTS"), by order dated July 26, 1991, appointed the Resolution Trust Corporation ("RTC") as sole receiver ("Receiver") for Southwest Federal Savings Association, Dallas, Texas, ("Association"). The Receiver took possession of the Association on July 26, 1991, and succeeded to all of the Association's rights, titles, powers and privileges. Pursuant to the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 ("FIRREA"), the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation ("FDIC") is the exclusive manager for the Receiver of said Association.

The insured portions of the deposit accounts at the main office and forty-five (45) branches have been transferred from the Association to two agent banks: Kilgore Federal Savings and Loan Association ("Kilgore") and Guaranty Federal Savings Bank ("Guaranty").

The insured portion of all deposit accounts that were originally opened at the Association's offices known as:

will be paid out to depositors by mailing claim checks for the insured portion to their address of record.

Depositors with transferred accounts are further notified that the Receiver has the option to disaffirm, under the provisions of 12 U.S.C. 1821 (e) (1), all deposit contracts as of the date of this Notice. Withdrawals may be made by depositors, without payment of a contractual early withdrawal penalty, commencing the day after July 26, 1991.

If you have any questions about your account, please contact Customer Service Representatives at Kilgore or Guaranty, as your account may dictate. Questions regarding claim checks being mailed to depositors that are not received by Friday August 2, may be directed to the Claims Department at the Resolution Trust Corporation as Receiver for Southwest Federal Savings Association at (800) 233-3805.

If you have any questions relating to loans that are secured by deposit accounts not being transferred to one of the agent banks, as stated above, please call the Claims Department at the telephone number listed above.

NOTICE TO PUBLIC OF REQUEST FOR RELEASE OF FUNDS AUGUST 29, 1991

City of Midland
300 N. Loraine
P.O. Box 1152
Midland, Texas 79702

TO: All interested Agencies, Groups and Persons

On or about September 18, 1991, the City of Midland (CITY), Midland County, Texas will request the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) to release Federal funds under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (P.L. 93-383) for the following projects:

ENVIRONMENTAL ASSESSMENT
PROJECTS:

Revolving Loan Fund Program for businesses to create/retain jobs ($50,000 including $30,000 of program income).

CATEGORICALLY EXCLUDED
PROJECTS:

Housing Rehabilitation ($140,000); Goode Beginnings Day Care Center ($7,500); and Emergency Home Repair Program ($28,600).

EXEMPT PROJECTS:

Senior Nutrition Programs ($62,479); Senior Wellness Program ($24,939); Kerr Drug Abuse Center ($15,000); Deep Cleaning Program ($5,000); Homeownership Incentive Program ($50,000); Lot Clearing Program ($12,000); Eastside Community Park ($100,000); and CDBG Administration ($70,085).

FINDING OF NO SIGNIFICANT IMPACT

It has been determined that such a request of release of funds will not constitute an action significantly affecting the quality of the human environment and accordingly the CITY has decided not to prepare an Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (P.L. 91-190). The reason for such decision not to prepare such a Statement is based upon the fact that all environmental concerns could either be minimized or mitigated.

Environmental Review Records (ERR) of the projects have been made by the CITY. They document the environmental review of the projects and set forth the reasons why such a statement is not required. The ERR is on file at the Planning Division Office, City Hall, Room 220, 300 N. Loraine, and is available for public examination and copying upon request between the hours of 8:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m.

No further environmental review of the projects is proposed to be conducted prior to the request for release of Federal funds.

PUBLIC COMMENTS ON FINDING

All interested agencies, groups and persons disagreeing with this decision are invited to submit written comments for consideration to the CITY to the address as set forth above. Written comments should be received at the address specified on or before September 13, 1991. All comments received will be considered and the CITY will not request the release of funds or take administrative action on the project prior to the date specified in the preceding sentence.

The CITY will undertake the projects described above with Community Development Block Grant funds under Title I from its fiscal 1991 program under grant numbered B-91-MC-48-0023 from the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974. The CITY is certifying to HUD that the City and Mr. Carroll Thomas, in his official capacity as Mayor, consent to accept the jurisdiction of the Federal Courts if an action is brought to enforce responsibilities in relation to environmental reviews, decision-making and action; and that these responsibilities have been satisfied. The legal effect of the certification is that upon its approval the CITY may use the Block Grant funds and HUD will have satisfied its responsibilities under the National Environmental Policy Act. HUD will accept an objection to its approval only on one of the following bases: (a) that the certifications were not in fact executed by the certifying officer or other officer of CITY approved by HUD; or (b) that the environmental review record for this project indicates omission of a required decision, finding, or step applicable to the projects in the environmental review process. Objections must be prepared and submitted in accordance with the required procedure (24CFR Part 58) and should be addressed to HUD, P.O. Box 2905, Fort Worth, Texas 76113-2905.

Objections to the release of funds on bases other than those stated above will not be considered by HUD. No objections received after October 3, 1991, will be considered by HUD.
