Methodist Church Has Fine Building

The new Methodist church now in construction is the finest building of Methodist churches between Amarillo and El Paso, Texas.

The work of pouring the concrete for the foundation of the new Methodist church was completed on Monday of this week.

1,000,000 pounds of concrete went into the foundation, all reinforced with steel, which gives it strength and durability.

When it is taken into consideration that this foundation will support a structure weighing 2,000,000 pounds, it will be seen that the foundation is of utmost importance.

H. E. Taylor has been selected by the building committe as building foreman, and Rev. T. B. Sowell will be general supervisor.

This edifice will be larger and more complete than the handsome Methodist church at Roswell, and when completed will give Portales a building that the entire town may well be proud.

Sam M. Seay Tenders Resignation As Secretary Of C. C.

Sam M. Seay has tendered his resignation as secretary of the Portales Chamber of Commerce.

However the board of directors have not accepted the same at at this time, having put off action on this until Tuesday of next week, when it is hoped that some means may be worked out to keep Mr. Seay on as the efficient secretary of the organization.

Mr. Seay has made a real secretary, and his work has been recognized over a wide scope of territory, and several cities may times the population of Portales, have been seeking his services in this capacity.

For the good of Portales and the Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Seay should be retained, if arrangements can be made to meet the competition of other cities.

It was largely through his efficient work that the Eastern New Mexico Normal school appropriation has been secured. He has given to this work. His expenses in this liberally of his time and money and other lines of work for the community, has exceeded his expense account, and has been met from his private fund.

The Chamber of Commerce is now doing a wonderful work and to go on must have an efficient secretary. More members are needed and more financial support is necessary to carry this work on. Every property owner in Portales has received benefits from the work of the organization, and should contribute their part towards its support.

Mr. Sledge is one of the outstanding business men of the state, and with him at the head of this board, it is safe to say that the Eastern New Mexico Normal School will get value for very dollar expended on its buildings.

Don't Forget The Gas Franchise Election Friday

The election for the gas franchise will be held at the sheriffs office on Friday of this week and every voter in Portales should express themselves on this issue.

The coming to Portales of natural gas means much to the prosperity and development of the town. It will mean a saving in the cost of fuel, and also aid in the developing of the shallow water belt.

This is something that the people of Portales have been longing for for a number of years, and the granting of this franchise will be the means of realizing this great need.

Be sure and go to the polls and vote for the franchise on Friday of this week.

Crowd Attend Baccalaureate Services

The benediction was pronounced by John V. Miller, in the place of Rev. Claud A. Lorts, who was unable to be present.

The sermon by Rev. Sowell is given in full in this issue.

This Is Bargain Week In Portales

With two big sales in progress, and the other stores following with attractive bargains, Portales should be crowded with buyers for the next two weeks.

The stores all have large stocks of seasonable merchandise, and are offering bargains never heard of in Portales before.

There is no excuse for going out of Portales for any article of merchandise, and the public are beginning to realize this fact.

The success of the Portales merchants, means better markets for the farm produce of Roosevelt county, and every family in the county should take advantage of the riot of bargains now being offered by the Portales merchants.

New Laundry For Portales

Wat Stewart and Malcolm Hall have ordered a complete set of machinery for a modern steam laundry for Portales.

The building has not been selected at this time, and it may mean the building of a structure to house this industry.

For the past year or so the need of a modern steam laundry has been deeply felt in Portales and now that these enterprising citizens have come to the front to supply the need, Portales should give them united support.

This laundry will provide employment for a number of people, and increase the pay roll of the town.

Portales has grown in the past five years until, the need of a laundry has been discussed, and several have contemplated the establishment of one her.

Many important matters were disposed of, including the Government grading of broomcorn that has been established by the Portales Chamber of Commerce for the coming marketing season. In the opinion of many leading broomcorn growers. The Government grading of broomcorn will assist in a complete change of marketing methods in time, whereby Association members will be enabled to secure better market outlets for their product.

This Issue Edited By Journalism Class

This issue of the Portales Valley News is published by the Journalism class of the Portales High School, under the supervision of the instructor in Journalism, P. M. Bailey, and this class is responsible for the entire contents of this issue with the exception of a few front page news stories.

The editor of the News, after the strenuous efforts expanded in publishing the large Industrial Issue last week, was pretty well fagged out and welcomed this chance to take a few hours of needed rest.

"Lest We Forget"

The observance of a national "Poppy Day" was first suggested by Miss Moina Michael of the Y. M. C. A.; through whose efforts it was brought before many organizations and who also wrote one of the answers to "We Shall Not Sleep."

And so, "Lest We Forget," the poppy, symbolical of America's hero dead, was adopted as the memorial flower of the American Legion in 1920. And, in its organizing convention in 1921, the Auxiliary also adopted it and pledged its profits 100 per cent to welfare relief for service men and women and their families.

Once each year, usually the Saturday preceding Memorial Day, the American public is afforded the opportunity of purchasing the poppy, thus helping those for whom the war is not yet over and also of wearing it in memory of all those who died in service.

Through the American Legion and Auxiliary it has been so arranged that these poppies are now being made by the disabled men in hospitals throughout our country, thus rendering double service. To fully appreciate the great good being accomplished through the Poppy program, one must go into hospitals and see the men at work. In one hospital will be found three men making one poppy, one a blind man who can do only so much, the second a man with hand so crippled he could carry the work just so far, and so he turns the poppy over to the third man to finish. And thus they pass the long hours of hospital life, and the mental diversion proves as great a blessing as the financial return for their work, which gives them moral courage and enables them to send something to their families. So the poppy, which has been so close to the men in hospitals and has helped them to forget, comes to us with its message "Lest We Forget."

Then, the profits from the poppy sale are spent 100 per cent for the welfare work among veterans, some of whom are not in hospitals but unable to work, and their families. The American Legion Auxiliary has spent this year, for work in our own community and county almost as much as was made on last poppy day. Let us not look on this work as charity, for these boys belong to us, and by this means we are only paying our debt to them and helping them to regain their health.

Saturday, May 25, will be observed as Poppy Day and Portales and Roosevelt county should answer this call as nobly as they did our country's call to arms. Let us say on Memorial Day—

"We have kept faith, ye Flanders dead,
Sleep well beneath these poppies red,
That mark your place.
The torch your dying hands did throw,
We've held it high before the foe,
And answered bitter blow for blow,
In Flanders Fields.

"And where your heroes, blood was spilled
The guns are now forever stiled,
And silent grown.
There is no cry of tortured pain,
There is no moaning of the slain,
And blood will never flow again,
In Flanders Field."

Clovis Motor Co Hold Big Car Sale

Elsewhere in this issue will be found the big ad of the Clovis Motor company, announcing a big sale of used cars.

This is an unusual sale and will interest the buying public.

At a weekly luncheon of the Portales Chamber of Commerce on Tuesday, an interesting fact was brought out by Coe Howard in a talk to the directors.

Mr. Howard made a survey of the business property of Portales, and showed that the Chamber of Commerce was supported by less than 40 per cent of the property owners.

The work of the Chamber of Commerce has been of great benefit to every property owner in Portales, and yet the organization does not receive the support from over 60 per cent of those who are receiving a direct benefit.

Through the work of this organization business property in Portales has become valuable, the owners of the business property in many instances have raised the rent on their property, yet pay not one thin dime for the support of the organization which is putting Portales on the map.

In the near future a drive will be made to get these property owners on the membership roll.

The tenants in this property all pay to the organization, yet their landlords, are asleep to their future and opportunities of Portales.

A town cannot build and survive under these conditions, and the time is at hand when everyone will be compelled to put their shoulder to the wheel, dig down in their pockets and bear their proportionate share of the burden on building the town.

A list of these property owners would make interesting reading.

Baptist Building Well Under Way

Reports from the building committee of the Baptist church of Portales is that their building program which was recently launched is well advanced, and before many months pass, another modern brick church for Portales will be under construction.

Nothing helps a town more than first class church buildings, and now the public has awakened to the importance of this move, Portales will soon have modern church buildings for every congregation.

Gas Franchise Carries In Clovis

In the gas franchise election at Clovis on Wednesday, the vote was 272 for the franchise and three against.

From indications when the election comes up in Portales on Friday, the opposing vote will be about the same as at Clovis.

The majority of Portales people are for progress, and will so declare themselves at the polls.

J. C. Compton Improving Residence

Judge and Mrs. J. C. Compton are remodeling their home on Nevada street, by the addition of a sun porch in the front and having the whole house repapered and painted. When completed it will be one of the nicest of Portales homes.

Harry Cissel Suffering With Sore Hand

Harry Cissel is suffering with a sore hand as a result of an injury from the spur from a rooster. Harry works for the Robertson Produce company and in handling of the poultry received the injury in the palm of the left hand. It was feared at first that blood poison had started but it is now thought to be under control.

Homeless Hector Gets Located

The past week has been a happy one for a dog of doubtful breed.

When the dog pound was about to make a home for the said dog in dogland, a group of boys and young men, together with John McDonald, took up a collection between themselves and bought the unhappy dog a collar and dog license, thus saving his life.

Homeless Hector, Nero is his name, has been eating stew and choice cuts of steak. His full name is Nero of Main Street, and is identified by a sign that he proudly bears.

New trucks will be bought next year to transport students to Portales schools. None of the old ones will be used.

Commendable.

First a much smaller percent of the truck pupils will be tardy. Trucks that are worn out can never make the schedule time. New trucks will not have to be drug into town for repairs.

Of course these trucks are expensive but in the final count, it costs about as much for upkeep of old trucks as the new ones cost.

New trucks will give much better service than the old ones give. The truck drivers will not have to worry from the time he leaves home until he gets to the school house about whether he is going to make it or not.

What Others Say About Us

BOOSTING PORTALES

The Portales Valley News is just off the press with a 56 page industrial edition, which looks very creditable for that growing city.

Such an edition cannot help but prove well its worth while as an advertisement for the city. It sets forth in pictures and well written articles the development and future development and future prospects of the city and its region.

Of course, the Carlsbad Cavern comes in for its share of the publicity, with several fine photographs of the cavern interior scattered through the edition.

One outstanding feature is a 12 page section devoted to the Joyce-Pruit company. A picture of the proposed building for the Eastern New Mexico Normal which is to be erected at Portales is also contained in the issue.

The cities of Eastern New Mexico are thriving as never before, and a half dozen of them have, in the past few years brown from country towns into real little cities—growth lies right before them.

With all the freshness and vigor of pioneers, they are stepping out into a future which is leaded with fine possibilities.—Carlsbad Current Argus.

A FINE EDITION

The Portales Valley News this week issued a fifty-six page industrial edition, one of the finest special numbers ever gotten out by a New Mexico weekly newspaper. The edition is filled with pictures and stories exploiting the resources of Roosevelt County, in which Portales is located and of that progressive town in the eastern end of the state, J. G. Greaves the editor, did a fine piece of work on the edition.—Albuquerque Journal.

Portales Valley News Publishes 56 Page Paper

Size of the city considered, the 56-page Industrial Edition of the Portales Valley News, published this week, stands out as the greatest newspaper ever published in New Mexico. Editor J. G. Greaves and his efficient force printed a newspaper of which they may be proud.

From a typographical standpoint the paper is excellent; from the advertising patronage standpoint it is amazing that a city of 3000 population should show such a wonderful co-operation in broadcasting the merits of the city and county. Every business firm and professional man in the city is represented in the pages, and these advertisements, together with the complete write-ups and the illustrations, will be of unestimable value to Portales and Roosevelt county.

Mention of the paper would not be sufficient without particular attention being given to the four-page advertisement carried by the Famous Store, owned by Dave Isenberg, brother of Sam Isenberg of Everybody's Store, Clovis. Then there is the Joyce-Pruit Co., with a whole page and nine other large ads.

Medical Sermonettes

By W. E. LEONARD, M. D.

(©, 1927, by Western Newspaper Union.)

"The belly is the commanding part of the body." So spake old Homer one thousand years before the Christian era. It would not do to so generalize in such plain-spoken language nowadays. Yet there are still those to whom this would apply, judging from their conduct at mealtimes. The person who habitually overeats shortens his life and places his very existence in constant jeopardy. Eating to live and living to eat are two opposite propositions. The former consists in rationally approaching the table with the idea of "coaling up" with only sufficient to keep the machinery in proper condition, with allowance for unusual demands; while the latter is an extremely irrational and dangerous method of overburdening and overcharging a very delicate mechanism, with no provision for any other energy than that of the vulgar task of digestion. The glutton makes a packhorse of his anatomy, probably hopelessly stretches and dilates his stomach and lays the foundation for almost any serious ailment of his stomach, liver and kidneys. The real pleasure of tasting food by thoroughly chewing is lost and he seeks only the too-familiar sense of repletion. Long life and usefulness are not to be gained by such overindulgence.

FARMERS LOST $794,376

Because prices received per unit for the produce marketed by the farmers of Roosevelt and Curry counties did not advance in the ten years between 1918 and 1928 in proportion to the prices paid by consumers for this produce, every farmer in these two counties was poorer last year by $324.50. There are 1,279 farms or ranches in Roosevelt county, and 1,169 in Curry county, according to the federal farm census of 1925 and figuring the total loss in farm income it climbs to the considerable sum of $794,376, or sufficient to capitalize several strong banks.

What become of this fortune and what is being done by organized farmers to check further leaks are subjcts which farmers are being asked to consider by L. E. Freudenthal of Las Cruces and other leaders in the Farm Bureau movement. M. S. Winder of Chicago, executive secretary of the American Farm Bureau Federation, has sent Mr. Freudenthal a thoughtful explanation of this tremendous loss.

"In 1917 when agriculture was enjoying prosperity," says Mr. Winder," the consumer was paying $1.65 for a unit of farm produce. Out of this amount the farmer was getting $1, while the remaining 65 cents was paid for distribution costs. In the ten years since then the cost of the same unit of farm produce to the consumer has advanced to $1.72.

"If the farmer was receiving the same proportionate amount as in 1917 his income from this unit of farm produce would be $1.04. Unfortunately, however, the farmer is receiving only 73 cents per unit, not $1.04. The distribution cost, which in 1917 was only 65 cents, is now 99 cents. Thus it is plainly seen that the farmer is losing 31 cents on the average for every unit of produce marketed from his farm.

According to the latest statistics, an average of $1800 is annually received by each farmer for the things he has for sale, and dividing the consumer's unit cost of $1.72 into this, it is revealed that the farmer sells annually 1,047 units of produce. On this the loss of 31 cents per unit totals $324.50. If the income is larger the loss is proportionally greater.

The problem, then, adds Mr. Walker, "is to recover as much as possible of the lost 31 cents per unit and it is to the accomplishment of this task that the American Farm Bureau Federation, the largest organization of farmers in the history of the world, has set itself.

"No doubt part of the 31 cents has gone to pay increased transportation charges. More of it is used up in inefficient marketing, in speculation and in wasteful practices, which we are not able to combat because agriculture is not organized to bargain effectively for the disposal of its products. Lack of favorable legislation and unfair tariff rulings account for some of the 31 cents, while another actor contributing to the loss is lack of adequate information with which we might protect our interests.

"I think that you will agree with me that in disposing of our products we must invariably pay the transportation charges. To help ourselves, however, organized farmers persuaded Congress to pass the Hoch-Smith resolution which aims to bring about adjustment in freight rates that would be to the advantage of agriculture.

"This year the Transportation Department of the American Farm Bureau Federation has been exerting its influence to have the lengthy hearings on problems arising under this Hoch-Smith resolution brought to a conclusion so that the freight reductions Congress intended the farmer to enjoy, can be made possible. Every dollar we have in transportation costs is going to help recover some of that lost 31 cents. When you join your local Farm Bureau you help to back that task of reducing freight rates on farm produce."

Efficient marketing machinery, as provided through co-operative marketing associations, Mr. Winder says, are doing much to eliminate the expense of inefficient and archaic marketing methods, but o further strengthen this new agricultural resource, he says, a national agricultural policy is needed.

"Tariff control," he continues, "a settlement of the Muscle Shoals problem, making cheap fertilizer available, pest control, and other remedies for our distress, if obtainable, will all assist in bringing back some part of the lost 31 cents. Our crying need, however, is a bargaining power, which will enable us to determine the price we shall receive for what we sell. This can only become possible through national legislation which recognizes the right of the farmer to the same protection that other groups, like the bankers, the railroads, or labor, enjoy under the Federal statutes.

"If every farmer could realize the importance of membership and the influence membership in this organization can exert on our elaborate program of service to the farms of America, you would not rest until you have lined up behind your local Farm Bureau leaders."

There are only two ways the parents have of knowing what their child is doing in school work. One is by the reports given each six weeks, the other by visiting the school.

Parents it is your duty to visit the school and see what kind of work your child is doing. This will encourage the child to do better work. If he thinks his parents are not interested in the work he is doing and the effort he is putting forth to prepare his lessons he will become disinterested.

If a pupil does not make as good a grade as he is capable of making, then something should be done. It is the fault of one of the three, pupil, teacher or parent. These faults can oftentimes be remedied by an occassional visit by the parents to the school.

Then, parents visit the school, see what your child is doing. Encourage him to do better next time and He as well as the teacher will appreciate it.

Did You Ever Stop To Think? By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Oklahoma.

R. C. Dillon, Governor of New Mexico cays:

That a certain wise man centuries ago is said to have remarked that "Without vision the people perish." In the West we would like to name water a twin sister to vision, for without water we would have to give up the ghost and the vision could flit away with it.

The question of the proper distribution, use and conservation of water is, in my opinion, the most vital question confronting the Western states today and a just settlement of this subject will have its beneficial effect on the entire nation.

New Junior High Building

A new Junior High building which Portales has need for some time, is now being built on Chestnut street the same street the high school building is on. The reason for placing the building in this place is because on the other street, Ohio street, the back would be to the public and the side would be to the high school building and also the school owned the land.

The new building will cost around $30,000 when completed. The contract was let to Ison and Simmons for $26,000. This money was raised by the board by selling school land, so therefore the building will not put a greater tax on the town people.

The building will be made of brick and is 56 feet wide and 119 feet long. In the basement is two rooms as in the high school building, a fuel room and a boiler room. The building when completed will have 13 rooms, a study hall, principals office, a book room, teachers office and eight class rooms. There will be six teachers allowed.

The construction of the building was started about November 1, 1928. At the present the basement has been completed, which took up a great amount of the time in building, the foundation laid and the brick has been started.

W. H. Jasper of the Claudell community was in Monday. Mr. Jasper says that a number of citizens from this section of the county had planned to come in and clean up on the editor for the R. O. Dent yarn, and discovering that it was only a rat, saved the editor from a whipping.

J. F. Wilson of Cross roads was in town Monday and renewed his subscription to the News for another year. Mr. Wilson says that the oil information which has run in the News, alone is worth the subscription price. Mr. Wilson reports good rains in his section and that good crops are now assured. The Crossroads community, while in Lea county is in the Portales trade territory, and year many bales of cotton this section comes to Portales ginning and market.

The Wayward Rooster

By HELEN GRAY

"I WISH," said Lotta coolly, "that you would kindly return my white rooster."

An indignant face, very red, topped with a battered straw hat, came up on the other side of the high hedge. "What white rooster?" he inquired.

Lotta waved a sunburned hand toward the next-door chicken house. "He's standing on the roof now—there, he has crowed!" as a thin reedy squawk split the Sabbath stillness.

"Ah—true enough, the beast doesn't belong here at all—how did it get inside?"

"I don't know," said Lotta patiently. "When he does come back I'll lock him up."

"That's fine," returned Dick Paine, cheerfully grinning at her; "he's a fearful pest, you know."

"He's a dear," retorted Lotta, who had petted Nicodemus, the white cockerel, from the very day its heartless mother had repudiated it.

"Too dear to me!" gritted Mr. Paine. "He's scratched up all our flower beds—after we sold our own chickens so as to have some flowers—" He had lifted the protesting Nicodemus from the empty chicken house and handed the bird across the hedge to Lotta.

"You are growing very crabbed and nagging, Dicky. You are going to be a most disagreeable old man."

Dick glowered at his late fiancee. "Possibly I may not live to be an old man," he said stiffly.

Lotta smiled. "I will come and plan posies on your grassy mound, Mr. Paine."

"That will be a privilege reserved for my widow," he tossed over his shoulder as he stalked away across the lawn.

His widow!

Lotta had not thought of that possibility. To leave a widow Dicky must first marry—and for him to marry and bring a wife home to the darling house next door where they had planned to live—it was an intolerable thought! Nicodemus, the miserable white cockerel, had been the cause of the trouble. He, the wanderfoot of the chicken tribe, would never stay inside the chicken runs. Whenever he chose he sailed triumphantly over the ten-foot fence and dodged under the hedge into Dick's yard. He always went there as soon as Dicky had planted any choice flowers.

Lotta thought of all these things and gave the white cockerel a vicious little shake. How under the sun did the cockerel manage to fly so high? He must have had an eagle for an ancestor, she thought dolefully, or else he had a motor inside of him like an airplane. She opened the door of the chicken run, found an empty coop and locked Nicodemus in durance vile.

"There," she sighed. "You have made trouble enough in the last four weeks."

"You mad at Nicodemus?" asked her little brother, Tom.

"He is so wild, Tommy," evaded Lotta.

"Give him to me," begged Tom.

"He would be as much of a pest as ever, but you can have him, only don't let him fly over into Mr. Paine's garden."

"Mr. Paine? You mean Dicky?" Tom was round eyed.

"Of course," said Lotta shortly, as she went into the house and Tom saw she had been crying.

"It's that old Nicodemus bird," said the little boy. "He's made a lot of trouble and he oughter be sackerficed—like those people cook told me about. I think I'll talk to cook some more about it."

Cook, who had watched the love idyl of Lotta Ames and Dick Paine, only to see it shattered by a quarrel which began over Nicodemus, the bad white cockerel, listened gravely to Tommy's story. "I'll help you out, Master Tommy," she said, "only you must do exactly as I say. Tomorow's your birthday, you know."

"And I'm to have a party!"

"And you're to ask Mr. Paine at the very last minute so he can't refuse."

"I'll cry if he refuses—he likes me," said Tommy. "He wouldn't disappoint a little boy he liked!"

And he didn't, but Tommy had really to shed tears on his seventh birthday to drag Dick Paine from his white-flanneled repose in a hammock to play with small lads and lassies at a birthday party.

It was a nice party and Lotta's mother seemed glad to see Dick once more. "It was nice of you to come over today," she said.

"I didn't want to butt in at this time, only Tommy begged me," he explained.

Lotta was there, rosy and smiling, but she avoided Dick. At supper Tommy leaned across to Dick and whispered: "Do you like the salad?"

"Great!" responded Dick.

"It's Nicodemus—I mean he's in it, too, with other chickens!"

Dick stared. "Why—he—Lotta—"

"She don't care. She gave him to me, and cook and I planned to sackerfice him because he is bad and makes so much trouble, but it's funny, he's bad to have around, but good to eat." And Tommy returned to his birthday supper.

Every one laughed, and Dick jumped up. "Where's Lotta?" he asked, his face very red.

"You'll find her outside somewhere, Dick. Tell her to come back when Tommy cuts the cake." And Mrs. Ames smiled contentedly, for she knew that the reign of Nicodemus the Bad was ended and that a dove of peace would take his place.

How Times Had Changed

By LEWIS BARRY

"THAT'S my ultimatum, Jerry,' said Jerry's father slowly "I'm tired of your devil-may-care ways and the wild crowd of young people you travel with. Cut it out, my son, find a girl like your mother, marry her and settle down. Or else get out and shift for yourself!"

Young Jerry Cowles slumped into his chair, looked moodily up at his father towering over him. "Harsh words, dad!" he said soberly.

"That may be," growled his parent, "but I mean them, nevertheless. "You've been no good to me or to yourself since you got out of college. Tearing around in that car of yours, smashing speed limits, dancing all night—Lord, Jerry, when I was your age—" he paused in exasperation as a mental picture passed before his eyes of himself at twenty-three, an industrious husband and father.

"I know, dad, but the times—"

"The times be hanged!" ejaculated the older man. "They are overworked nowadays as an excuse for any tomfoolery. What you need is a wife and a home to give you a sense of responsibility. Only, mind you, I have no use for the sort of girl you seem to fancy. Surely, somewhere, there's a girl who isn't all speed fiend, jazz—"

Jerry winced. Was his father visualizing Becky Lenox, to whom at least some of those terms applied? Becky Lenox, with whom he was frightfully in love?

"Tell you what I'll do, Jerry. Marry the sort of girl I would welcome as my daughter-in-law and I'll furnish your home for a wedding present, settle on you now what would likely come to you upon my death and take you into the business as junior partner."

Jerry rose impulsively. "I—I—thanks, dad," he said.

But as he turned away to dress for the Lenox dance at the Lawn club his heart was heavy within him.

It was during the intermission on the cool, darkened veranda that Jerry poured out his woes to the sparkling, daringly dressed piece of femininity that was Becky. And he used his predicament as an excuse for letting Becky know he loved her.

"You see, dear," he wound up earnestly, "I wouldn't speak before because I had nothing to offer you. And now I'm afraid just because you're so gloriously up-to-date and—oh, snappy and full of pep that dad won't see you're the real thing and the only thing for me! You ought to have been born dowdy and homely and with spectacles or—why, Becky, what's up?"

For Becky had jumped up and was pirouetting wildly about. "An idea, old top!" she cried. And Jerry wondered if his mother had ever called his father that. "Introduce Bess to your father, but marry me!"

For Becky had a twin, identical in looks but the very opposite in tastes and characteristics. Given over to philology, philosophy and philanthropy, she had lately taken to wearing huge tortoise shell spectacles which lent her an air of as great a seriousness as one would wish.

Now because Jerry was desperately in love and so temporarily blinded to all else, he fell right in with Becky's scheme; nor did he worry about the intended deception of his father. Once married to Becky his father would surely capitulate to her charms and forgive the trick played upon him.

"If father approves of your sister, we'll elope. How about it, dear?" And Becky whispered "Yes," as would have most any girl held close in the arms of a nice youth like Jerry!

With characteristic energy Jerry put in motion at once the wheels of his plan. Told his father he was engaged to one of the Lenox twins and invited him out to supper with them to meet her, sure he'd be surprised at the sort of girl she was.

Bess, under heaven knows what inducements from Becky, had agreed to help matters along, and did her best to be entertaining. Ably she denounced the evils of modern existence, punctuating her remarks with pertinent allusions to ancient civilizations, theories of Kant, and slum conditions abroad. Jerry's father sat as one absorbed.

It was late that evening when Jerry, figuratively mopping his brow, deposited his companion at the door of the Lenox home.

But as he turned away, the door opened softly behind him.

The next moment Becky herself was in his arms. "Oh, Jerry," she moaned, "I've spent the most awful day. I've had nothing to do but think how we weren't being fair to your father, and he is just right about not wanting you to marry a flyaway creature like me, and I'm sick of this jazzy life anyway. I'm going to settle down, and—oh, you didn't turn around and fall in love with Bess?"

"Why, my little sweetheart!" Jerry drew her close. "Your sister is a fine girl and all that, but as for loving her instead of you! As for father—we'll tell him all about it and take the consequences!"

But when Jerry reached home he got the surprise of his life.

"Jerry, my boy," said his father, "I take back all I said about the crowd you travel with. Good Lord! Schopenhauser—law of Malthus—Aztec verbs. Thunderation, boy, how will you stand it? Couldn't you have picked out a happy medium?"

And Jerry, laughing, settled down to explain that he had.

Italians In America Are Changing Music

Even Jazz Yields to Mellowing Influence

New York City. — American music critics and American musicians who have visited Italy in the last year or two, invariably declare on returning, that all Italy is influenced by our jazz music, that you hear jazz everywhere over there.

Ted Bartell, well-known musical director, says, however, that the shoe is partly on the other foot.

"It is true," says he, "that you hear jazz in Italy, but on the whole we Americans have been far more fundamentally influenced by Italian music, than Italian music has been influenced by us. Even in that so entirely American music, jazz, the Italian influence is very obvious.

"All of the melodic quality that has crept into jazz, that today has eliminated so much of the cat-call and brassy sound of the original jazz, is due to the Italian influence.

"'My Castle In Spain Is A Shack In The Lane' definitely shows Italian influence both melodically and lyrically. It carries the 'dolce far niente' spirit of Italy with it."

Bartell declares that jazz has become Italianized because there are so many Italians in this country, most of them musical and thousands highly talented, and all insisting on interpreting jazz in their native mellow rhythms.

Medical Sermonette

By W. E. LEONARD, M. D.

(©, 1927, by Western Newspaper Union.)

"Diseases are a tax on ill pleasures." This proverbial condemnation of high living needs only repetition to bring it home to the sinner. Everyone knows it is true but seldom thinks of it in time to avoid the results.

The pleasures of taste, of gaming, of indulgences of any kind to an extreme, are as sure to bring their full reward, being quite "as sure as death and taxes." Both principal and interest are always demanded sooner or later, and the final payment is often painful and without any days of grace or respite on the part of grim nature. A certain religious cult enjoins upon its followers the habit of "shutting out the world" for a few moments at any time when the impressions of the senses rush in too tumultuously and threaten to crowd out all good things. The habit is an excellent one for anyone to cultivate, especially if it involves a periodic "taking of stock," as to where our habits of living and our daily actions may be leading us. Only by keeping tab can we anticipate suffering and disaster.

REVIEW OF CHAPEL PROGRAMS

The student council took charge of the chapel program the last semester giving each club and organization a chance to take a part in the programs. The best program going to Clovis, as Portales had promised to exchange a program with them.

The first to have their program was the public speaking class when they put on the play "Grandma Pulls the String." The one playing the biggest part in this play was the grandmother played by Myrna Campbell, according to the comments from the student body when the play was finished.

The second program was sponsored by the Latin Club, this program was a one act play with several scenes. There wasn't anyone who could understand this play except the Latin students as it was said in Latin.

The third program was a style show by the home ec club, this program was almost if not a cantata. Aletha Nidever and Hazel Burleson had the "fat parts" in this as they were the ladies looking for a dress, also, Eula Williams, the clerk, must be mentioned.

The library staff was the fourth to put on a program when they presented "Little Brother Sherlock" featuring Ruby Swaner and Melvin Shumpert as the main players.

The Wonder Hat, by the pep girls was the next play the main part being played by Willie Oldham, also Eulah Elliott and Myrna Campbell had big parts.

Dr. Cureall by the pep boys, it was well worth the time spent in seeing this play or at least it was worth a good laugh to see Melvin Shumphert, James Compton, and Emmett White dressed like women. All the characters in this play had big parts. Melvin Shumphert and Jones Smith having the biggest parts.

The next chapel was a change from the plays to a talk by Arthur Jones president of the First National Bank of this city. Mr. Jones talked on what a wonderful thing Friendship is, and how any one can get a better position if they have friends and personality. "One can be taught the art of spelling, reading and writing, but one cannot be taught the art of friendship," Mr. Jones said.

Next the agriculture club presented a one act play with three scenes the title being "Gimmie them Peanuts." James Smith was the negro and played the part well.

Rev. Gunstream spoke in chapel the next assembly day he spoke on the necessity of living a Christian life.

Rev. Lorts of the Christian church was the next speaker. Rev. Lorts spoke on a subject that has been mentioned in class work and also out of class work, a subject that has impressed the minds of the tudent body a it is brought up in the class work of the numerous different classes. This subject was "Challenge" the challenge of life that every one has.

The play "Grandma Pulls the String" was the one selected by the judges to be carried to Clovis.

Tom Grimmett of the Dora community was in town Tuesday and renewed his subscription for another year. Mr. Grimmett has all the grain grown on his farm for the past year and is expecting a big crop this year. He has also a good acreage planted to cotton.

Carl Case and family will leave the latter part of the week for Elkland, Mo., their old home to visit for about four weeks. Needless to say Carl will talk Portales and the Portales Valley to his Missouri friends.

PENTECOST SUNDAY

Some months ago the Christian brotherhood made plans for a world wide observance of Pentecost, the birthday of the Church, and Sunday May 19th, fifty days after Easter was the nineteen hundredth anniversary of that memorable day.

Churches every where were urged to make this an "every member present' day.

Owing to the fact that May 19th was also the day chosen by the graduating class of P. H. S. for their Baccalaureate sermon the local Church postponed the observance of this great day until next Lords day May 26th.

There will be an especially prepared sermon and some special musical numbers.

Every member is urgently requested to be present at the Lords house and around His table.

Baccalaureate Sermon

Portales High School, May 19, 1929

"EQUIPMENT"

We are drawing near the end of another year—some of you will soon be going out to face responsibilities-more serious than those connected with attending High School.

The showing you make will depend on what you take with you. I want to speak to you this morning on "Equipment."

Howard Bennett of the Hill School in his little book says that Equipment is divided into three parts. It is made up of "Stamina, scholarship and sympathy. Here are the same three factors listed in a letter written Nineteen Hundred years ago by an old man to a young man. For God hath not given us the spirit of fear but of power and of love and of a sound mind.

It all comes to the same thing. Stamina is power, scholarship develops a sound mind and sympathy springs from love—love for God as the sum of all that is good, and love for men not because they deserve it always but because they need it. Let m speak to you about these three prime factors in one's equipment for life.

First, Stamina! It is a thing every healthy man craves. It is a thing which every woman, Healthy, or unhealthy, adores. It has a physical basis, yet it is something more than mere bulk. You can not always measure it off in feet and inches, neither can you weigh it on scales. Forceful personality, often comes done up in small packages.

Lord Roberts of England was only five feet three and he did not make much of a showing on the scales, but he was a man of power. When he entered the room, every one there was conscious at once that somebody had come.

When you bump into a man of power, physically, intellectually or morally, you know at once that you are up against something. Here is STAMINA," you say to your self.

Now that sense of power can be cultivated and developed like any other living thing. It grows when conditions are right. It may add cubits to it's stature in the course of four years like a tree planted by the river of water. Theodore Roosevelt became one of the most forceful men of his day and generation, yet he was a puny child in his early life he was never quite up to the mark physically. He became a man of power, by making a business of it as soon as he was old enough to think. He may have had unusual capacity for growth, I think that he had, but his stamina, physical and intellectual, political and moral, came by his insistent use of right means. He did not try to live by bread and games alone, he lived by all the great words which proceed out of the mind of God, food, clothing, shelter, exercise, naturally also faith, hope love, courage, aspiration, high resolve. By these men live and grow in power.

The man of stamina as a rule forms the habit of concentration early in life. He does not scatter his energies all over the lot. He focuses his efforts, in such a way that where he is, he is all there. When he puts his foot down, or his mind you feel the man's whole weight. When he walks down the street, he is alert and alive from his hat clear down to the sidewalk. When he reads a book his mind is intent upon taking all that the book has for him. When he is present at a service of worship, his facilities are steadily claiming, from it all the meaning and help to be had.

It is easier naturally to lounge and dwadle through all these exercises, but no one ever things of looking for stamina in a lounger.

There never was a weak life which could not be strengthened indefinitely by this habit of concentration. Find me a man who says, "This one thing I do" and the chances are nine to one that he is doing it right up to the handle, and gaining added efficiency for doing the thing well. Find a man who says, "One thing I know" and the chances are that when he talks about that one thing, he will speak as having authority. Find a man who says, "One thing have I desired of the Lord, that I will seek after," and you may be sure that presently he will be bringing it in. Let any man form the habit of living in that direct and definite manner, with a clear cut purpose dominating his actions and he will be storing up in his own personality, that sense of power which we call stamina.

I am urging the importance of all this because in the last analysis achievement is largely a question of stamina. Can John Doe stand up to his job as a lawyer or doctor, as an engineer or journalist, as a preacher or teacher, as long as any other man on the street and then a bit longer for the extra effort needed to give him a certain distinction? The Duke of Wellington who won the day at Waterloo, used to say that British soldiers, were no braver than French soldiers, but were brave five minutes longer, and that meant victory. Five minutes longer, how often that tells the story.

It is a quality that can not be purchased at the drug store for so much a bottle. It can not be obtained in any correspondence school in this, or any other country. It is not a windfall that some lucky man picks up in the street.

Stamina comes only as men live clean lives, eat good food, enough but not too much of it, drink that which slakes thirst rather than create thirst, breathe their full share of the out door air of which there is enough for everybody, sleep a sufficient number of hours, some of them before midnight, and exercise their abilities in some useful employ. That is the route by which stamina arrives. It comes by magic but by right method. And it is a part of every man's job to gain his full share of it because it lies at the basis of so much that is best.

In the second place, the sound mind, which is one of the marks of scholarship. The sound mind rings true every time, it is not cracked. It does not go to pieces in the face of difficulty, it holds together and overcomes obstacles. It knows always what it is talking about and does not pour out a stream of idle words. It has keen sense of fact and real capacity for drawing conclusions form those facts that will be found valid. What a splendid asset for any life. Well might the apostle of old regard "the sound mind" as one of the gifts of the good God.

It is a much better asset in every way than the thing which some people call "genius."

A bad case of genius in early life is almost as fatal as small pox. There is such a thing. There are men, a few of them in every generation who have exceptional ability. They are four leaf clovers. But the cows are fed and the field kept green by the presence in abundance of the three leaf clover. The main part of the world's work is being done these days by men of average build who have been well trained. Even the men of unmistakable genius usually attribute their success to intelligent and persistent effort.. Agassiz used to say to the students at Harvard, I seem to have formed the habit of observing more closely perhaps than did some of my associates.

Knowledge is power, not in the sense of having a lot of undigested information stored up in one's head, like all those facts in the Britannica. Knowledge is power only when it becomes the natural furnishing of a sound mind bent upon useful achievement.

Knowledge is power, not in the sense of having a lot of undigested information stored up in one's head, like all those facts in the Britannica. Knowledge is power only when it becomes the natural furnishing of a sound mind bent upon useful achievement.

Here is the test! Can a man think clearly and when he thinks produce something with the look and taste of his own mind upon it? Can he see five things at once, sharpely distinguishing each one from the others and then organize them into their proper relations?

Can he speak by tongue or by pen and actually say something? The sound mind means always insight, discrimination, productiveness.

Now that fine quality like all others can be cultivated and develop its stature in less than a year. Let every one of you form the habit of its stature in les than a year. Let every one of you form the habit of seeing straight, of stating accurately what he sees, not some loose approximation of it and of forming judgments in a way that is not silly nor far fetched but just and reasonable. Let him do that and keep on doing it day in and day out, week in and week out, just as he keeps on going to bed at night and getting up the next morning, and he will be headed for a sound mind as surely as the needle points to the pole.

Then only the Master shall praise us, and only the Master shall blame:

And no one shall work for money, and no one shall work for fame; But each for the joy of the wrk, and each in his separate star, Shall draw the Things as he sees It for the God of Things as They Are.

It takes brains in these days to be good in the sense of being good for something. It is not enough to be kind hearted and to mean well. The ignorant and untrained man, even where he is earnest and honest, may be a positive menace to society. He may be like that hero of Galsworthy who was riding madly ahead on a dark night with his face toward the tail of his galloping horse. He is almost sure to ride somebody down before morning and to bring himself up in the ditch.

Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, in the desires that you cherish, and with all thy mind, in the thoughts that you think.

Jesus made that duty of thinking straight a part of the first and great commandment. You are here to learn the joy of intellectual fellowship with your Maker by thinking his thoughts after Him and by keeping step with him in His wise purposes for the race. In this intricate social order of ours the sound mind is imperative, if you are to gain the best that life has for you, if you are to make your just contribution to the common welfare and if you are to stand right with Him in the day of Judgments.

In the third place, sympathy, the power to feel for others. Wherever men live with the Lord through worship and obedience, the Lord gives them the spirit of love, and love is the essence of character. Love works no ill to his neighbor, therefore love is the fulfilling of the law. He that loves has passed from death unto life. He is born of God. He that dwells in love as the abiding principle of his life, dwells in God and God in him, for God is love.

This prevailing mood in any man's heart determines the reaction he gets from the social order that unfolds him. With the same measure he meets it out, it will be measured back to him again.

In a western city a physician once told me this story of two lives which had come under his own eye. Two men lived on the same street; they were engaged in the same line of business; they were about the same age. Heredity and environment, so far as one could see, had dealt them hands of about equal value. The result of the game turned upon the way each man played his hand. One of the men was sour, unbelieving, cynical. He was always on the off side, always looking for knots in the log, always knocking something. When someone said to him, "good morning," he would reply, "what is it good for." Unless the weather was perfect and everything had been going his way, he felt that it was not good for much.

The other man faced the world with a smile which did not come off in the wash even when the water was hard. When any one said "good morning", to him, he would often reply, "It is good enough for anybody. Only a straw but it showed which way the wind blew."

And it came to pass this physcian said, that the first man died at the age of fifty from a complication of diseases, chronic dyspepsia, pernicious, anaemia and several other complaints whose names I can not remember nor pronounce.

The other man lived to be eighty six, active, radiant, useful to the last. He fell asleep with a smile on his face, which had not faded out when his friends came to lay flowers on his casket. There was a reason. You can die without sympathy any time, here and now if you like. No man can live without sympathy; and sympathy means love for God and love for one's fellows.

This fine quality also, like any other living thing, can be cultivated and developed.

No man ever has character of the finer sort thrust upon him.

No man ever achieves character at a bound. It comes first the blade, then the ear, then way late in the fall, the full, ripe corn. Where a man maintains the sense of fellowship and cooperation with those unseen spiritual varities which are eternal, his character develops steadily into the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ.

I live, the apostle cried in one of his highest moods, I live, yet not I, as a separate detached bit of the common humanity, Christ liveth in me.

Christ the hope of glory; Christ the strength of every man's inner life; Christ who is able to make us last like him. For me to live, the apostle said, is Christ. I venerate the man whose heart is warm, whose hands are clean, whoe teaching and whose life coincident, exhibit lucid proof that he is honest in the sacred cause.

Here as verywhere the man of method has the wind and the tide with him. Some light hearted, light headed people seem to think when we enter the realm of spiritual values we enter a region of magic and hocus pocus. They know that in Mathematics two and two make four every time, but they think that in morals two and two make five or with a little judicious coaxing and a few fervent jestures two and two make fifty.

They have an idea that a young fellow may ignore moral values for years, wallowing in the mire of evil indulgence, and then by some sudden spasm of feeling become instantly as fine and as true as if he had never spent those years in the far country. I have no idea where they got the notion. It is not here in the Bible, this book is filled with sound sense. I have traveled from the east coast to the west coast and from the west coast to the east and I have never found a place where men did not reap as they had sowed. I have rubbed against all sorts and conditions of men and they all said that the debits and credits for high living and for wrong living are as definite and as exact as the trial balance of a good bank. The law of compensation does not fail to stop.

The impulses that we cherish soon become habits; and habits soon harden into character; and character detrmines destiny. Two and two make four all the way up and all the way down. As a man thinketh in his heart, so he becomes, not in an hour nor in a week, but ere long. And the only heart that is safe here or hereafter is the heart possessed with the love for God and the love for one's fellow beings.

Howard Bemen was right, equipment for the serious minded business of living means stamina, scholarship, sympathy. It means power, love and a sound mind. These qualities are not electives they are required. And any man who lacks these requisites will be weighed in the balance and found wanting.

He is not all there, and the world will not be long in telling him so.

Why not do something definite and practical about it here and now? To many good impressions are wasted because they do not find expression in concrete form. The good impressions come to the proper fruitage only as it utters itself in some wholesome actin.

When you go back to your room, or to your home sit down and write out a promisory note. Date it May 1929. The very dating of it will make you think 1929, and it is just that long since One was born in Bethlehem of Judea, whose mighty aid we need

Let the note read like this: Six months after date I promise to pay to myself a sounder and a more reliable physique, a better trained and a better stored mind, a kindlier and a more sympathetic heart, than I now possess, Sign it, seal it and deliver it to your self, as an obligation that you have assumed

Then having given your note, make that obligation as good as a Liberty bond. Set your self to the task of meeting it when it falls due. You can if you will. By right thinking and right action, by cherishing the spirit of good will toward others and the spirit of obedient trust toward God, you can go straight along making deposits in the bank of your inner life which will enable you at the end of the six months to pay that debt in full.

When the time comes you will stand up before the glass and before your Maker, offering yourself and offering Him, a sounder body, a clearer mind and a kinder heart. For God hath not given us the spirit of fear, but of power, and of love and of a sound mind, by these men enter into life to go no more out.

Library Staff Makes Progress

When the high school was built in 1923 and the library was installed a staff was selected one of which served each period to check books in and out to the student body. Things went on without change until 1927 when W. E. Dupuy became sponsor of the staff and installed the Dewey decimal system of library book classification.

The staff selected for the school year of 1927-28 aided materially in the numbering and classification of the books.

Then in 1928, the reading room was abolished and the individual record system of student classification was inaugurated. The call slip system was also introduced.

The Toronto method of bookbinding was adopted by the staff and Woody Johnston was selected to bind the books. Many volumes have been rebound and back copies of magazines are now being bound and filed for reference.

The staff for the coming year consists of Ruby Swaner, Mildred Disney, Hannah Garrard, Della Jergins, Colquitt Stevens, Dorothy Forbes, Woody Johnston, Ruby Cooley, Wylma Olhausen, Melvin Schumpert, Kenneth Jones, Nellie Rouse, Menlo Autry, Charley Rogers, Gladys Nutt, and James Compton.

Although the staff is not a social club and has meetings merely to discuss their problems, they have found time during the year to put on a one act play.

Grade School Gives 3 Operettas

In one of the most colorful school events of the year which approximately 200 grade pupils took part the final grade program was held at th high school auditorium Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

The program was to have been given Friday evening of last week but due to rain it had been postponed until Thursday night.

Three operettas were given, the first one "Adventure in Flower Land" was presented by the pupils of Unit 1. The characters in the operetta were symbolic of Mother Nature, Flowers, Grasses, Fairy, Hereld, Bumble Bee, Raindrops Sunbeam, and City Children. The parts were performed in an excellent manner and showed the pupils had been trained consistently by the teachers.

Unit 2. put on the Operetta "In a Florist Window' and the characters were a chorus of Florists, Two little Green Bugs and Chorus, Chorus of Bees, chorus of Roses, chorus of Daffodils, Mustard Flower, chorus of Columbines, chorus of Pansies, and chorus of Violets. This operetta was performed very adequately and does credit to a school much larger.

"Midsummer Eve" was the title of the operetta put on by pupils of the main building at the grade school. The characters, as printed on the program were: Dorothy by Doris Lee, Queen Mab by Rhita Joe DeGuire, Herald Memory Turner, Pages by James Albert May, and Marcelle McClish, Arbutus by Blanche Lyons, Innocence by Martha Jane Donaldson, Spirit of the Dawn by Virginia Forbes, Flowers, Will-o-lisps, and Little Green Elves.

Numbers between acts were furnished by Miss Davis and her Rythm band and grade school chorus. The Rythm band "played" two pieces and were unusually entertaining. The chorus sang five songs: "Song for Spring," "The Homesick Lowlanders,' 'The Swing' "The Shells," and "The Little Philosopher."

The auditorium was packed to capacity and many could not get in sight of the performance. The program was pronounced by those who saw it to be one of the best that has ever ben given here.

A. L. Hartzell of Sperry Iowa is in town this week, looking after extensive improvements on his property near Portales. The large brick barn is being erected on his place. Mr. Hartzell says that Portales and Roosevelt county have a wonderful future and that developments have been coming good within the last year or so.

Mr. and Mrs. Ess Taylor and Mrs. Taylor's mother Mrs. Strange of Elida were in Portales Monday.

County Extension Notes

It was hoped that we could print the names of the prize winners in the apron contest but they have not yet been sent in from the College. Next week surely!

Nothing like going away from home occasionally to get a bit of inspiration and to see how other people do things.

The three days millinery school at Las Vegas was one of the finest pieces of extension work it has ever been the privilege of the agent to see. Local dealers came into town and worked hard from 9 A. M. until 5 P. M., for three whole days. They will now go back into their communities where they will pass the work on that they learned . This is true Extension Work. San Miguel County has many Spanish and a number had to be helped thru an interpreter.

One of the ideas the agent has brought back from Las Vegas is a cement hat mold worked out by Mrs. Jones, the County Agent and one of her local readers. It and the cloth covered sawdust block may be seen at the office.

Mrs. Saunders will act as secretary and Mrs. Thompson as assitant secretary in the Arch Club to, take the place of Mrs. Poe who has resigned that she may devote all her time and energy to the Girl's Club work.

Plans have been completed for the enrollment at Farm Women's Camp. The camp for the counties in the south-western part of the state will be held at Ruidoso, June 24-28. The cost at camp will be $5.00 for maintenance. Arrangements will be made for transportation to cost less than $5.00 per person. That will mean five days of recreation, inspiration and education for the small sum of $10.00 or less. Any one interested, please get in touch with this office by June 1st.

At the last meeting of the Arch Club Mrs. Pate was hostess. The women spent the day working for her. As a result fourteen garments and household articles were made and completed. At the next meeting the ladies are going to work for Miss Wetzel the County Extension Agent (note: a suit case is already full of work to be done.

4-H Club Notes

Motto—"To make the Best Better."

Mrs. M. M. Manus will act as leader for Girls' Club work in Kentucky Valley.

The girls are working hard at their club work. A meeting was held by the Kentucky Valley girls at the school house, one by the Busy Bees (Hiway) at the home of the president, Ocie Beeman; one by the D. S. C. girls (Dora) at Lois Brown's home and one by the Arch girls at the school house. All of these are sewing clubs. It is a bit early for the canning to begin altho a number have done their meat canning.

In order that the advanced 4-H Club girls may get more aid from the agent in their work, each Saturday afternoon will be given over to girls doing third, fourth and fifth year Clothing and Home Furnishing work. They will meet in the Court House from One-thirty until four-thirty. It is necessary to attend all afternoon but will be an opportunity to get help as needed.

The East Valley View Club met May 8, with 11 members and 5 visitors present. We are always glad to have visitors. In the forenoon a meeting was called to discuss ways and means of sending one of our members to the Farm Womens Camp. It was voted for the club to pay her expenses at camp, the member paying her own trans portation.

Lunch was served to about 30 hungry hunters." The next meeting will be May 22nd on the cutting of the dress by the guide pattern.

Ithaca, N. Y.
May 8, 1929.

Dear Friends:

Miss Wetzel has asked me to write you thru the column in the paper. I am glad of the opportunity and wish I had time to write each of you personally.

I think of you often and am glad to hear any news of your work.. Mrs. Catt has just sent me a huge sack of speckled beans so I am expecting to live well.

I am enjoying my work and feel that I have learned much. You probably know I do no work with girls. There are three workers in the county, one who devotes all his time to work with the boys and girls.

The Women's clubs, 26 in all, are organized in a county home bureau with a membership of 600. I have an advisory board consisting of ten women, one from each township in the county. We are in the center of the county which is 20 miles square and has good roads, but very hilly. I enjoy the advantages of a very efficient full time secretary more than anything else.

We are just finishing up our year's work. This consisted of a project on the planning and serving of community dinners and one on curtaining which I have taught. The clothing specialist has taught a project on economics of clothing and my assistant taught a project on the uses of whole wheat flour. The last of this month we will have a meeting to plan the program for next year.

There are about 50 home demonstration agents in the state. They are all such nice girls and have been so frendly. We have an organization of our own which is unofficially known as the "Doughbusters."

Miss Martha Van Rensselear who directs the work is also director of the college of Home Economics at Cornell. She is a wonderful woman and has been selected as one of the 5 outstanding women in the world.

The scenery here is beautiful. Ithaca is on the south end of Cayuga Lake, which is about 40 miles long, and the Cornell Campus overlooks the lake. The spring blossoms are lovely and things are nice and green. The farmers are complaining of too much rain.

I miss you very much and will be pleased to hear from you. I am glad you are carrying on your club work so well under Miss Wetzel's direction.

Your friend,
Sara Kerr.

325 Pleasant Street,
Ithaca, N. York.

An all day meeting of the Rogers Club was held at the home of Mrs. Lem Miller on the 16th. At that time Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Virginia Anderson, Mrs. Wilhite and Mrs. Vincent cut and fitted their cambric patterns. In the afternoon the workers were rewarded with a big freezer of ice cream. At the next meeting which will be at the home of Mrs. Ross, the ladies will bring material to cut and make a house dress.

The Portales Home makers Club meeting was held at the Court House on Wednesday, and was on the making of the guide pattern. Mrs. Privett made her pattern in the morning and her dress was partially made in the afternoon.

An all day meeting was held at Portales Springs at the home of Mrs. Clyde Miller. It was the regular foods meeting. The agent gave a demonstration on the cooking of vegetables, the vegetables being served at the noon meal. In the afternoon the women worked on string quilt blocks for the hostess.

The agent has a few pamplets on Cake making at High altitudes for distribution. The amount of sugar in a recipe varies in relation to the altitude. A cake calling for 1 cup of sugar at 3000 feet altitude requires 1 cup minus 1 tablespoon at 5000 feet and 1 cup minus three tablespoons at 7500 feet.

4-H Club Notes

Two cooking clubs have been started in the county, one of eight members at Roebuck under the leadership of Mrs. R. M. Harding and one of eight members in Portales with Miss Ruth Wheeler as leader.

Miss Cornelia Hunter will act as leader for a group of nine girls in Portales who have formed a 4-H Sewing Club. The girls will meet to choose officers and to begin work this week.

Four of the Dora girls came to the Court house Saturday afternoon. The long table in the courthouse is a pretty good place to cut that dress.

RED CROSS CHAPTERS STRENGTHEN LINES OF DISASTER RELIEF

Launch National Campaign to Perfect Preparedness Plans in Every Community.

A nation-wide campaign to strengthen plans for preparedness against disaster and for emergency relief has been launched by the American Red Cross through its Chapters. The program is intended to perfect disaster preparedness committees in the ten thousand communities reached by Red Cross Chapters and their branches.

When carried out, through committees of men and women in the communities, it will insure that should a disaster come, an organization for emergency relief, including every modern method science has perfected—such as the radio, the airplane, the motor car and watercraft—can be mobilized to bring assistance, with the promptitude applied by the Red Cross in recent major disasters, such as the West Indies hurricane and the Mississippi Valley flood.

These enlarged and strengthened plans for disaster relief are set forth in the revised Red Cross manual, "When Disaster Strikes," which has been placed in the hands of every Red Cross chairman throughout the nation. The plan to encourage adoption of these added disaster preparedness methods was begun at this time because Red Cross records—covering 48 years of disaster relief—show that the period of the greatest number of disasters, large and small, ranges from the early Spring through the early Fall.

The Record of 48 Years

An historical summary of Red Cross disaster relief, since 1882, shows that the society was active in giving relief in 938 domestic disasters and its expenditures in those relief operations were $49,594,000. The three groups of calamities appearing most frequently were: cyclones, tornadoes, hurricanes and other storms, 231; fires, 131; floods, 126.

During this period, the Red Cross also has given assistance to distressed peoples of other countries in 153 disasters. Total expenditures for relief at home and throughout the world, in 48 years, amount to $77,354,000.

In four recent major disasters Red Cross expenditures for relief totaled $29,188,903. Only in the event of large disasters such as the Florida hurricane of 1926, the Mississippi Valley and New England floods of 1927, and the West Indies hurricane of 1928, does the Red Cross seek contributions from the general public for relief work; and frequently these are not ample, as in the four disasters listed, the Red Cross donated $1,338,201 from its own treasury. In small disasters, the cost of relief is met largely from Red Cross resources.

No Community Immune

No community is immune to great disasters of one type or another, the manual shows. One preparedness measure that can be adopted is a survey of the surrounding country, with the assistance of engineers and other experts, to determine the type of disaster to which the section is subject.

Extension of existing disaster organizations in communities, and organization of men and women, trained in public health and community service, will result in the saving of lives and the prevention of extensive suffering, through privation, epidemic and other misfortune, should emergency arise. These organization plans, outlined in the manual, are similar to those now existing in most Red Cross Chapters, only strengthened in some

Co-ordination of all of the societies, organized groups and institutions in the locality is urged, so that all effort for emergency relief will be directed without conflict. Trained in advance, these committees can swing into action, and provide an orderly and systematic relief organization, functioning efficiently from the beginning.

When a hurricane blows out of the sea, a cyclone rushes across prosperous communities, or a conflagration destroys a great area—these are occasions upon which the Red Cross Chapters and branches should be prepared with trained personnel and proper supplies to respond. Every resource of the national organization also is at their command.

LATIN CLUB

In the early fall of 1928, all Latin students who cared to have a Latin Club were asked to meet and take the necessary steps toward forming such a club. The name of the organization became "Senatus Romanus," meaning the Roman Senate. Vincent Cox was elected the first consul, and was re-elected at the beginning of the second term.

The motto chosen was, in English, "We can because we think;" for the Senatus Romanus intended from the first to be an active organization. The colors are blue and silver.

The activities of the club for the year include two chapel programs, a Roman wedding and a play given in Latin, a booth at the school carnival, and last, the most important of all, sponsoring the Latin Tournament held here April 13th. About 35 people were present at this, the first Latin Tournament to be held in New Mexico. The Senatus Romanus felt honored indeed, when one of its members received first place in the contest for the second year pupils.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Catt enjoyed a visit last week, Thursday, from some old neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Stewart and daughter Dorothy Bell, of Texas. Mrs. Stewarts brother Rolly McClung and wife of Melrose.

Lawrence Moore came in Saturday night from Sudan, Texas and will spend the summer here with his people the D. O. Moore family.

PROJECTS

There were 41 boys enrolled in Animal Husbandry and Farm Crops at the beginning of school, but there are only 35 boys in the two classes now.

The boys are required to carry on some sort of project during the year to receive credits. In the projects now being carried on there are: 60 acres of maize, 5 acres of kaffir, two acres of peanuts, two acres of potatoes, two acres of tomatoes, 14 hogs, 18 dairy cows, 8 rabbits and 400 chickens.

The largest amount made on a project last year was $98.88 made by Charley Jergins and the least amount was 3 cents made by Earl Stratton on 50 chickens.

Last year there were 38 pupils in the two classes and 34 of them turned in project books.

Advantages Of A Poultry Show

A poultry show similar to the last one held here recently would cause the best breeds of chickens to be introduced, it would advertise what the poultryman has to sll, encourage people of county and community to raise better poultry, and would cause more people to become interested in poultry.

The annual poultry shows will be the foundatin and building of a great industry for this part of the county. In this way the poultryman will gradually build up their flocks until, there will be no "scrub poultry" left in the county. These poultry shows would therefore make the farmer think more about the future industry of our county.

The Boys Pep Club

This year the Pep Club has a membership of 25 sponsored by Mr. Stinnett. The aim of this club for the last few years has been "To Create More Pep in the school."

The Boys Pep Club with the Girls Pep Club has given two banquets to the football boys and one banquet to the basketball boys and girls, besides taking up tickets at games and putting on stunts in assembly as well as on the basketball courts and football field.

The uniforms consist of white pants, Red Sweaters with the emblem "Peppers" on the front of it, and red and white caps.

The Public Speaking Club

The Public Speaking club was organized for the development of self-reliance, poise, and resourcefullness, in expressing ideas before an audience. This is the first year to have a public speaking club in P. H. S.

A one act play "Say It with Taffey" was the first play given by the public speaking club. This play was given at the high school carnival. The net proceeds from this play was eleven dollars.

"Squaring it with the Bass," a one act comedy was given in a chapel program.

In the Club contests for the clubs of the school the public speaking club gave a one act comedy "Grandma Pulls a String."

At each meeting of the club a program of some nature was given, giving very member an opportunity to express himself or herself before an audience.

Some of the more important programs given were: a dialogue "cowology," a debate "Resolved that girls are more extravagent than boys," and a parliamentary mixup. This was to acquaint the club with parliamentary rules that all clubs should follow.

Home Ec. Club Reviews Year

The Home Economics club was organized Sept. 19, 1928. It was decided that all girls who had at least one-half unit in home economics would be admitted as active members, and those who were just beginning home economics would be associate members until the second semester.

The object of this organization is to develop initiative, educational and social training and to be of service to the school and to the community.

The Portales high school Home Economics club is affiliated with the state and is therefore now a member of the American Home Economics Association.

Mrs. F. D. Golden is an honorary member of the club.

A reception was given to the associate members by the active members during one of their regular meetings at the beginning of the school year. The first project however of the club was to plan, prepare and serve a banquet to the entire faculty, their wives and husbands, and the school board members and their wives.

The different classes taking home economics this year decided that in choosing uniform that color would add much to their appearance, so the uniforms are of different styles and colors. When the uniforms were completed, the girls gave a style show in assembly.

At the annual school carnival the club had a Japanese tea room. The home economics dining room was decorated in Japanese fashion, with Japaneses girls as waitresses. The club cleared about $10 with the tea room and candy booth.

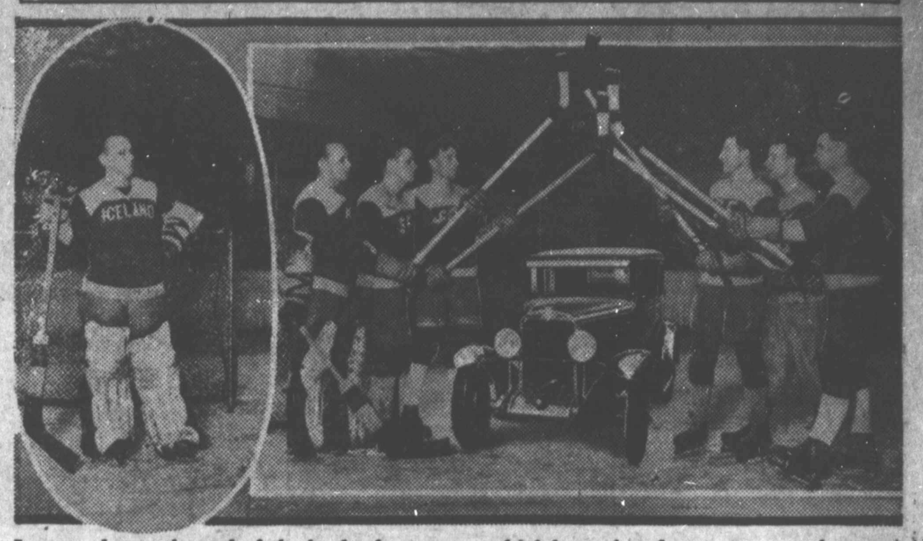

In order to further the Christmas spirit, the club decided to prepare Christmas boxes and to deliver them on Christmas Eve to the aged, shut-ins, and invalids. To finance this work the girls sold candy at noon for two days. This netted the club $13.

The active members of the club had a flapper and Jelly-bean party at the home of Dr. and Mrs. N. F. Wollard, with Miss Hankins as hostess. The two main features of the evening were: A buffet luncheon, and a line party to the theater.

In the evening of January 23, the installation service, in which associate members were installed as new members, was held; after which a banquet was given in the home economics room. The active enrollment of the club was thus increased to 47.

During the school assembly contests, the home economics club gave a style review, the dresses which the girls wore loaned by some of the town merchants. Nellie Rouse gave a history of the club.

Hockey Season Closes

Last week saw the end of the ice hockey season, which has enjoyed a great run on the coast this past winter. Here are some of the players of the San Francisco team holding their clubs over the diminutive Chevrolet Convertible Coupe.

CALLS SCOT ENGLISHMAN AND THE FIGHT WAS ON

Vanquished Taken to Hospital Where Broken Nose and Other Things Were Cared For.

Winnipeg.—Once there were two Scotsmen sitting in a restaurant. One of them was from Renfrew, the other from some place else, probably Aberdeen. To the other, the Renfrew Scot said kindly: "Where are ye frae, laddie?"

"Ah'm frae Scotland," was the reply.

"Dinna tell me that," said the Renfrew man. "Ye're nothin' but a puir Englishman."

And that was how the fight started. The Renfrew man, victor in the conflict, was folding his tents, preparing to flit when the police arrived on the scene. "Come back here!" shouted the policeman. "Come and catch me," was the reply.

The policeman lost considerable breath before he gave up the chase. He returned to the scene of the fight and had the victim transferred to the hospital, where a broken nose and other little things were attended to. In the restaurant where the discussion preceding the battle had taken place he found the Renfrew man's overcoat. Knowing his Scotch, the wily policeman took the coat to the station and awaited developments.

Sure enough, in due time, Sam Leitch, formerly of Renfrewshire, put in an appearance.

"I'm looking for ma coat," he told an attendant. "And we're looking for you," was the reply.

Charles Rhind, the injured and insulted party, gave evidence in early court concerning the fracas. Leitch apologized profusely. "If I'd known he was a Scot," he told the magistrate penitently, "I would a' bit off ma tongue afore I'd a' called him an Englishman." He was fined $10 for being disorderly on the street.

Several pie and cookie sales have been held, also a plate lunch was served at the County Teachers' association. Pop corn, candy, sandwiches, and ice cream cones were sold at the Class "B' tournament. The proceeds of these sales were used to finance the Mother-Daughter banquet.

Three delegates, and 24 other members of the club attended the district home economics meeting which was held at Clovis March 16.

SHOP WORK

There are about 20 boys in the Farm Crops class. The first shop work carried on was woodwork. The shop was established the first of the year at the truck sheds. The first projects carried out were: About six boys made hat trees, one boy made a cedar chest, and four boys made tables. They put up some basketball goals for the Junior High and then took them down for the tennis courts, made a frame hot bed, made some four horse eveners and studied some of the most common joints that are used in woodwork. The Blind Mortice and Tenon joints were studied first, these joints being used mostly on the hat trees. The miter joint was not used as much as the other joints, although it was used some. The shop work lasted through the second period.

At the beginning of the second semester, the class took up leather work. The leather was ordered by the instructor, Mr. Harrell, but the class was delayed because the leather was so long coming. Some of the aricles made in leather work were: Two riding bridles, three pairs of bridle reins, one pair of lines, six belts and one halter. They also repaired some harness, oiled two saddles and studied about repairing other parts of harness. The leather work lasted about two months.

Blacksmithing was next studied. The class began by sharpening plow points. Then they made some latches for barn or garage doors and some straps for the four horse eveners. Along with blacksmithing they also studied welding and soldering, by soldering three radiators.

Concrete work was next studied, besides learning the correct mixtures to be used, the class made a concrete roller to roll down the tennis courts, which were under construction at that time.

The class made several field trips, one being to the Judevine Creamery where they learned how to test milk and cream and to make moisture tests in butter. The trip to the Hatchery was next, where they learned the correct temperature for keeping eggs during the hatching period and how the chicks are cared for after they are hatched. The class went to some of the boys homes and prune some grape vines, attended the John-Deere Tractor school, visited the poultry show and the last field trip was to the cheese factory, where they learned the difference between yellow and white cheese and saw some cheese in the making.

Sunday Miss Nelleta Cooper and Ralph Lloyd joined eight of their friends at Clovis and taking their picnic lunch drove to the brakes north of Clovis. Then to Tucumcari and San Jon enjoying a wonderful picnic.

Bob Grissom and Bill Walker of Elida were business visitors in Portales Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Arley Snow and daughter Bonita of Elida were shopping in Portales and Clovis Tuesday.

The following young folks spent the day Sunday at Stephenson's ranch some 20 miles of Portales, Clint Fairly, Lee Carter, Leon Jones, J. R. Shock, Eula South, Tinamae Locker, Grace Smith, Hazel Todd and Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Johnston.

Every Publisher Should become A Member of N. E. A.

Every publisher in New Mexico should become a member of the National Editorial Association.

Besides the many advantages of membership, the members can save more than the annual dues on one order of engravings from the association.

In the past ten days the Portales Valley News ordered about 20 cuts made by this department, and the photos were mailed by air mail Friday, and Saturday the 3rd and 4th. The cuts were back in this office on the following Saturday and Sunday, and were as good, cuts as we have ever had made.

The annual meeting of the association will be held in Cheyenne, in July. The editor of the News expects to attend this convention again this year and again invite the association to hold its annual meeting in New Mexico.

A good membership from the publishers of the state will aid in securing. this convention.

Send in your check for $3.00 membership to your state vice president at once.

J. G. Graves, State Vice President, for New Mexico, Portales, N. Mexico.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Finley and baby of Pleasant Valley were shopping in Portales Monday.

Mrs. Water and Miss Nell Zeigler of Elida were visitors in Portales Monday.

STOCK JUDGING

The first stock judging contest was held at Portales. There were three teams entered here. Melrose won first, Portales second, and Floyd third. The Portales team lost by a total number of 87 points. Melrose therefore won the free trip to Las Cruces given by the State to the winning team. The Portales boys were not to be thrown out of the judging so easy so they paid part of their expenses and the school paid $50. The Portales team was composed of James Smith, Earl Stratton, Clay Rickard and James Burkett went as alternate. Earl Stratton was high man from Portales, and fourth highest man in the State. The Portales team won second from the state, Las Cruces winning first, having 21 more points than Portales.

The team would probably have won first but the instructor Mr. Harrell was sick, and R. A. Young went as a substitute. Clay Rickard was also sick while judging.

The Portales team entered livestock, poultry, and meat cut judging.

The benefits received from this trip were: The boys will know the good and bad points of the stock, the incentive to introduce better stock at home, the ability to speak before the public, besides seeing much of the country they had not seen before the visited the Peyton Packing House at Las Cruces.

Air Mail Flier Claims Champion Sweet Tooth

Pilot Robert P. Hopkins, of National Air Transport, finishes off a candy bar just before he takes off from Chicago for Cleveland.

CHICAGO—Where will you find the biggest candy eaters? The answer, according to the National Confectioners' Association, is—In the air.

Professional aviators, as a class, probably eat more sweets than any other workers. The three hundred pilots employed in scheduled air transport corporations in the United States consume, it is estimated, at least five times as much candy as the same number of average individuals who stick to the ground.

The candy eating championship is claimed by Pilot Robert P. Hopkins who flies the mail and express planes of National Air Transport on the Chicago-Cleveland division of the Transcontinental Airway. Pilot Hopkins is acknowledged to have the champion sweet tooth of the N.A.T.'s staff of thirty-five pilots.

"I always take candy with me when flying from Chicago to Cleveland, or back again, on a regular mail run," said Pilot Hopkins. "Most N.A.T. pilots do the same.

"When the weather is good and the pilot hasn't much to do except keep on the course, it helps to pass time to have some small candy to nibble. Or if one is hungry, a husky candy bar tastes mighty good and tides a chap over until he lands."

WHY DO THEY CALL THEM BUDDIES

Why do they call them buddies?
What other name as sweet?
Has ever been war hallowed
By rain and snow and sleet?
What other name than Buddies
Would men like our men bear
When all hell belched it baptisms
And death was everywhere?

Why do they call them buddies?
Though not of common kin,
Old glory called them brothers
When freedom said, "Go in"
They swept the mighty legions
To man, land, sky, and sea
God, devil-dog and doughboy—
A fighting trinity!

Why do they call them buddies?
Because they stand today
Still buddies to the buddy
Left shattered by the fray.
Though peace may grow unmindful
Of war's unsettled debt,
The buddy to a buddy
Stands fast—and can't forget!

Thats why they call them buddies
The shrapnels chriek is gone
The buddies carry on.
And so, tonight, heart-happy
I breathe this fervent prayer,
God make the way all roses
For buddy legionnaire!

GLEE CLUB

At the opening of the school in September a girls and boys glee club was organized under the leadership of Miss Hassie Davis. Glee Club work counts a fourth of a credit. The girls class is divided into two sections, one class meets the 8th period on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays; the other after school on Tuesdays and Fridays. The boys Glee Club meets at 8 o'clock in the morning on Tuesdays and Fridays.

Some of the programs that they have put on are: "A Christmas Cantata entitled, The Adoration," by George B. Nevin, was given on December 16, 1928. In January a group of the girls sang at the Chamber of Commerce Banquet, at the Methodist Church one morning and at the Baptist prayer meeting one night.

Both boys and girls are now working on a operetta entitled, "The Toreadors," by Meyers and Carrington, which they will give before school closes. They intend singing at the Christian Church soon, and will give a chapel program before long.

The girls are now making White dresses and will carry out the school colors of red and white, by wearing red belts and red ties.

TRUCKS

There are fourteen school trucks used to transport students to Portales New Mexico schools. Two trucks were added to the number that was driven last year. All trucks put on next year will be new ones.

The trucks are driven by the following persons, with the number of miles each truck travels, twice each day:

Reed Hill, 21 miles; B. F. Miller, 14 miles; Joe Miller, 10 miles; Cloy Rickard, 15 miles; Wallace Crume, 11 miles; Nadine Morris, 14 miles; Charlie Rogers 15 miles; William Heckman, 9 and three-fourths miles Carl Miller, 10 miles; Melvin Anderson, 11 miles; Narl Davidson, 6 1-2 miles; James Smith 18 1-2 miles; L. B. Hite, 8 miles; Oliver Fenton, 7 miles;

All of the trucks are Fords except the Chevrolet driven by Reed Hill, which is an individual truck. The others are owned and operated by the Board of Portales schools.

There are 33 pupils on the truck driven by Carl Miller and 33 on the one driven by William Heckman. All the others carry from 15 to 30 on each truck.

No serious accidents have resulted yet, and very few minor accidents.

There is only one truck run by a girl, that is Nadine Morris.

FACULTY PICNIC

The entire school faculty had a picnic Wednesday at 4 p. m. at the "H-Ranch."

Mrs. Daniels said the faculty wished to have a final get together meeting before school was closed.

Games were played, races were run, and then a bonfire was built and a picnic supper was eaten.

P. M. Bailey left for Canyon Friday afternoon to help judge in the debate contest to be held there Friday night, Saturday and Saturday night.

Duncan Simmons, Emmett White, Mrs. Bailey and Mr. and Mrs. Floyd D. Golden will also go to Canyon Friday afternoon.

Duncan Simmons and Emmett White, debators from Portales high school who will represent this school at Albuquerque, are going to hear the debate given at Canyon, and see how the debators there treat the subject.

Mrs. B. E. Brumley and her sister in law Miss Virgil Brumley of Hereford, Texas were over night guests Monday of Dr and Mrs. E. T. Hensley and had their tonsils removed Tuesday.

ASSEMBLY

In assembly Tuesday morning the students who went to Albuquerque told of their trip.

The first speaker was Mr. Bailey who gave a summary of the contests entered by Portales High.

Melvin Schumpert was the second speaker. He told about visiting the Zoo. He said they had some of the largest Animals in the U. S. The most important thing he said was when the boys walked by the monkey cage, one of them stuck out its hand to shake hands with Gordon King Greaves.

Wylma Olhousen was the third speaker. She told of the banquet given in honor of the commercial students.

Next speaker was Philip Smith who told about their good treatment at Sigma Ki He said they treated him like the boys had been there about a year.

Trueman Green who told about the eats also told about the visit to the Kimo theatre. It seems the thing which impressed Trueman's mind most was the fact that the walls of the lobby of the theatre was made up of mirrors.

The sixth speaker was Duncan Simmons who said that he thought Portales really did bring home "some bacon' because they had the memory of the trip. He told of the trip from Albuquerque to Las Vegas and for some reason or other he quit there and left the rest for some one else to finish.

Emmett White the next speaker told of the trip from Las Vegas to Portales. From the way he talked they must have had one wet time.

To climax it all Gordon King Greaves told of the trip to Las Vegas. He said Duncan Simmons was missing most of the time they were there.

Nellie Rouse Jackson the declaimer and Leon Slaten the track man were absent. Reason unknown.

Lillian Marr was elected President of the Home Economics Club for next year, Monday during the home economics meeting.

Several of the girls made talks on this years club work.

Mr. Golden also made a talk to the girls.

The Club song was then sung and the Club was adjourned to meet again next fall.
