TECAT decision due by March 3

From AP Wire Reports

A district judge in Austin is expected to rule by March 3 regarding a hearing held Friday to halt the implementation of the Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers (TECAT) test.

Attorneys on both sides of the issue argued before Judge Harley Clark in 250th District court. Clark told a courtroom crowded with teachers that he would make a decision on the case by March 3.

Robert Chanin, representing the Texas State Teachers Association, said the Legislature acted unconstitutionally when it passed teacher testing in 1984 as part of the education reform package.

He said lifetime certificates given teachers cannot be revoked by the state.

On March 10, public school teachers and administrators are scheduled to take the TECAT test.

TECAT 'fact, fiction' told

By DONNY BROWN
SDN Managing Editor

The TECAT test, fact and fiction, was addressed Friday by the educator in charge of "teacher assessment" for the Texas Education Agency (TEA), Dr. Nolan Wood.

Contacted by the SDN at his Austin office, Wood stressed he feels the exam is incorrectly described as a "competency" test.

"Its goal is to screen out teachers who cannot read or write, pure and simple," Wood said.

He added this measure is "something more than literacy," noting it will test reading skills "a teacher must have for the classroom."

Wood addressed also "misinformation we've heard about the test."

This included a story that teachers would be required to sign a document waiving their right to sue the state or the school district and agreeing to "willingly turn in their (teacher) certificate if they don't pass."

Wood said the only "signing" teachers will be asked to complete will be to list their last name only and social security number for identification.

He was asked also if there are current plans for a "TECAT II" — a second test which teachers would be required to pass.

To this, he said there are "no plans underway" by TEA for such a test.

In explanation, he noted that part of the mandates of House Bill 72 did call for both a test on reading and writing skills and the individual teacher's "subject matter areas" and administrator's "assignments."

"TEA has requested that this type of evaluation be left to the appraisal process completed by the individual districts," Wood said.

"The legislature did not provide funds to implement a second test and we have no plans to start one unless the legislature tells us to," adding, "It's still on the books, though."

Wood was asked also if some teachers eliminated by the TECAT test might be replaced next year by individuals who neither had college degrees nor had passed the TECAT test — a so called "emergency teaching permit."

To this, he admitted the

Q. — Will the West German teachers expected to be brought to Texas next year have to pass the TECAT test?

A. — No. However, officials with the Texas Education Agency said these teachers will be required to pass the "exit for certification" test which is a new requirement for college education majors. This test was characterized as "much harder" than the TECAT test.

Expansion slated for BBB services

Better Business Bureau personnel based in Abilene have announced membership drive plans in Snyder and Scurry County in addition to making access to their services easier here for both consumers and business members.

The BBB, a non-profit entity which serves as an arbitrator for consumer complaints, has served Scurry and 12 other counties in the past. Access to the Abilene office, however, required a long distance telephone call.

The bureau has now added an 800 toll free number for consumer and business inquiries. The number is (800) 592-4619.

Using the premise of "self-regulation" for business, the BBB investigates deceptive trade practice complaints. In addition, it serves as a "third party mediator" for consumer-business disagreements.

Businesses are encouraged to join to show their support of the self-regulation concept. These fees are based upon the number of employees and begin with an annual fee of $125 for some 10 staffers.

In addition to its investigation of consumer complaints, the BBB also issues periodic news releases concerning deceptive trade practices noted for the particular area.

The Abilene office has been in operation for some 17 years. Its chief executive officer is Joe E. Felton.

In connection with the local drive effort, Felton has scheduled a noon luncheon Thursday for representatives of local financial institutions, auto dealers, retail merchants, city and chamber officials.

Counties served through the Abilene BBB office include Brown, Callahan, Coleman, Eastland, Fisher, Jones, Mitchell, Nolan, Runnels, Shackelford, Stephens and Taylor.

MacLeod attorney seeking new trial

The Lubbock-based attorney for Arthur Lee MacLeod — found guilty Jan. 22 of the murder of his wife, former Snyder resident Evelyne Feather MacLeod — has filed a motion seeking a new trial for his client.

Carlton McLarty, appointed to handle MacLeod's appeal, now claims that evidence was withheld which might have aided his client's defense.

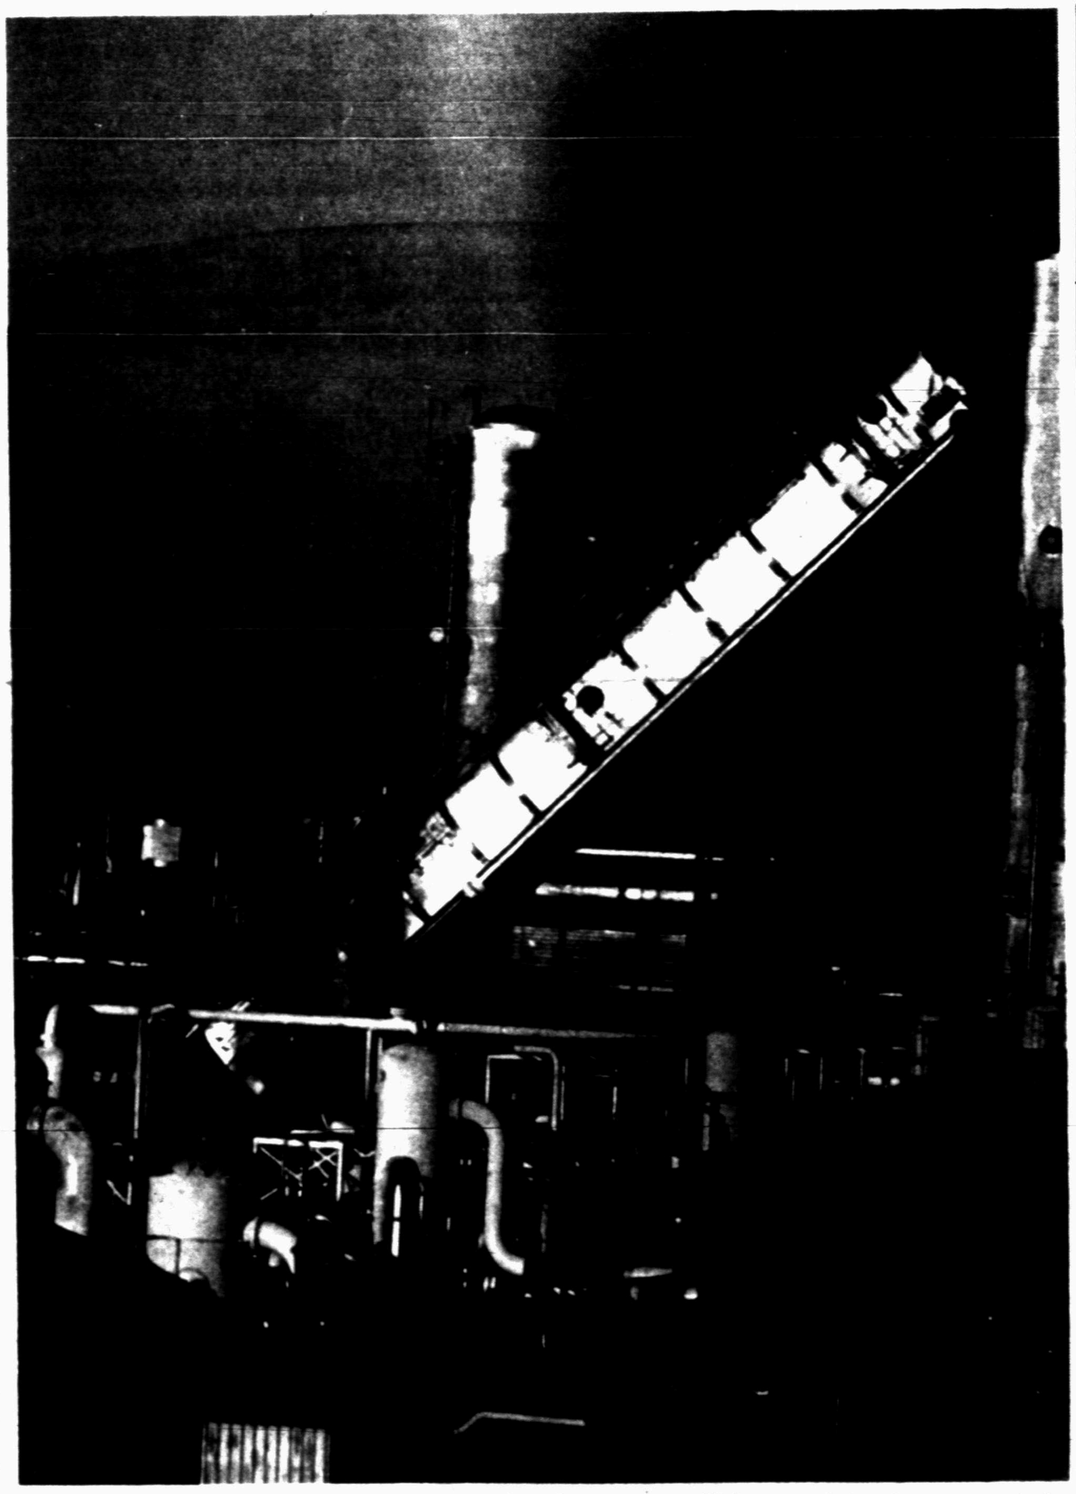
An Odessa jury found MacLeod guilty of murder and sentenced him to a 50-year term. The suspect was arrested May 21 after the body of his wife was discovered in far northern Scurry County.

In the motion filed Friday in Lubbock, McLarty claims District Attorney Jim Bob Darnell failed in his duty to divulge evidence which "tended to show MacLeod's innocence."

McLarty was referring to a jail medical record showing that the suspect was examined for a broken toe while in custody at Lubbock County Jail.

MacLeod had testified during his trial that his wife had "stomped" on his foot and swung a glass hand mirror at him during an argument which he said led up to the killing.

The prosecution noted to jurors at the time that there had been no evidence presented to prove the fight between the couple had occurred.



NEW COLUMN IN PLACE — Work crews at the SACROC C02 removal facility at the Sun gas plant west of Snyder began the task of moving one of two new columns into place at the facility just after 8 a.m. Saturday. Half of the ongoing major renovation project will be complete when this unit is brought into operation. Replacement of a second similar unit will complete the project. (SDN Staff Photo)

College sets homecoming

Western Texas College will hold its fourth Homecoming the weekend of April 18-20 with most of the activities planned that Saturday, April 19.

In charge of planning for the event is Mickey Baird, student activities director at WTC.

"We want to organize a local group of WTC exes who would like to work with homecoming and with other events throughout the year as well," she said.

"I would like anyone interested in working with this group to call my office. We'll set a date for a planning meeting within the next two weeks."

The activities office is updating its ex-student files and would like information about current mailing addresses or telephone numbers of former students.

These can also be called to the office at 573-8511, ext. 276, or mailed to Baird in care of WTC.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "When it comes to curing failure, we're our own doctor."

Nationwide headlines reporting oil prices below $15 per barrel has caused near panic in oil producing areas.

Although we have reason to be concerned, it's far too early to plan a funeral for the oil and gas industry or for Snyder. The patient may be ill, but we want at least a second opinion before we declare the situation to be incurable.

First, those reported oil prices are for spot, cash prices sold on the futures market. Locally, the per barrel figure is still in excess of $20 per barrel.

Certainly the futures market will have a downward magnetic pull on long-term prices, and we can expect downward trends. Most of the experts we read say the short-term future is in the hands of the Saudis who now control both oil and money.

Still there are some encouraging signs:

1. John Daniel, the superintendent for SACROC, reported a couple of weeks ago that the local field will be a viable part of the Scurry County economy for years to come.

2. When the current enhanced recovery program is completed–40 percent of the oil will still be underground–calling for improved lifting technology.

3. We've been hearing gloom and doom stories about the oilfield since 1951. Although we've had our peaks and valleys, the petroleum industry is alive and breathing on its on. We've all been through this before.

4. In 1976, the price of oil sold by SACROC was less than $6 a barrel. Although we admit higher operating costs today, prices are still four times greater than a decade ago.

We think citizens should be concerned, but not alarmed. It's been our observation that civic accomplishments and progress–especially in Scurry County–have occurred under the clouds of impending economic crisis.

Snyder has the resources necessary to deal with adversity, and turn the proverbial lemon into lemonade. Last Tuesday's townhall meeting was a step in the right direction.

We salute the community leaders who stand ready not only to talk about solutions, but who are willing to make things happen.

Whatever the ailment happens to be in Snyder, it's treatable because folks here have the number one ingredient to get well–a positive attitude.

Bugs 'Story' due matinee

A special matinee performance of the Western Texas College production of "The Backyard Story" is scheduled Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

The musical children's theatre production will be offered in the Fine Arts Theatre on the WTC campus.

The show opened Friday with other performances set Saturday and Monday at 8 p.m.

Tickets are priced at $3 for adults and $2 for children and reservations may be made by calling the box office at 573-8511, ext. 234.

The stars of the show are "bugs" and the production — which includes musical numbers with piano accompaniment — is told from their "personal" viewpoints. These include a variety of nationalities and accents.

The play was originally produced and written by Charles Pascoe, professor of creative dramatics at Southwest Texas State University.

Rocket booster flame may be mishap cause

WASHINGTON (AP) — Space agency data indicates that the doomed shuttle Challenger may have been struck by its own partially detached rocket booster and subjected to a 5,600-degree flame in the two seconds before it exploded, according to a newly published account of the accident.

In its edition scheduled for publication Monday, Aviation Week and Space Technology reports that information fed to earth during the shuttle's flight indicates the right-hand rocket booster showed bright spots of fire about seven seconds before the explosion.

It was not clear from the description whether the seven astronauts aboard could have seen the fire, or had any other warning of the explosion.

The magazine distributed its account Friday as a presidential commission probing the disaster moved into permanent quarters and began sifting through documents it has requested from space agency and industry officials involved in the decision to launch Challenger on Jan. 28.

Members of the commission visited several space agency installations around the country.

The commission itself came in for criticism by some Senate Democrats, who complained that the panel is being too secretive about the information it receives. But a Democratic call for separate Senate investigative hearings was quickly rejected by Republicans, who have a majority in the Senate.

Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., said Senate hearings would be a prescription for a "race rather than a sober investigation of the facts," and Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., called for an end to "NASA bashing."

The commission, headed by former Secretary of State William P. Rogers, is scheduled to resume public hearings Tuesday.

Investigators believe that the shuttle's difficulties began when a puff of smoke appeared at the joint in a solid rocket booster seam less than half a second into the flight. Morton Thiokol, the firm that makes the boosters, initially recommended against the launch, fearing that cold prelaunch temperatures might render rubber safety seals less able to contain hot exhaust gases.

Convicted Chinese spy has committed suicide

WASHINGTON (AP) — Larry Wu-tai Chin, alone in his jail cell, ended his life after placing a plastic bag over his head, two weeks after becoming the first American ever convicted of spying for China.

After breakfast Friday, personnel at the Prince William-Manassas Regional Adult Detention Center in Virginia found Chin unconscious in his cell bunk with the bag over his head, the U.S. Marshals Service said in a statement.

County jail guards and medical personnel who came later were unable to revive him and he was pronounced dead at 9:35 a.m. EST.

An autopsy was planned for today. The marshals service declined in a statement to specify that Chin had died of suffocation.

Found in Chin's cell was a letter to his wife, Cathy, written in Chinese, according to sources familiar with the case quoted in today's editions of the Washington Post. Federal authorities intend to have the note translated this weekend, the paper said.

The newspaper, citing sources, also reported that Chin, a diabetic, told another prisoner last week that if he was given a life sentence, he would induce a coma by swallowing sugar. He was placed under close watch until a doctor and nurse who examined him said he was not suicidal, the paper reported.

The Post also reported that the sources said the plastic bag over Chin's head was tied with a shoelace.

Federal marshals and Prince William County authorities are investigating the death, an inquiry that Roger Ray, U.S. marshal for eastern Virginia, said should be completed over the weekend.

Ray said it is up to local jail officials to determine what items prisoners may have in their possession.

A secretary in the office of Stephan Kaftan, superintendent of the Prince William-Manassas Regional Adult Detention Center, said county officials would not be available to explain prison procedures. Kaftan earlier in the day referred all questions on the case to the marshals service.

Chin, a 63-year-old retired CIA translator who was facing a term of up to life imprisonment for espionage, had parlayed his former $30,000 annual salary and whatever outside money he received into real estate holdings valued at more than $700,000.

U.S. Attorney Joseph Aronica said during the trial that Chin received $10,000 a year from the Chinese government plus other amounts, ranging up to $150,000, after his 1981 retirement from the CIA.

Prosecutors said Chin's spying career spanned 30 years and introduced documents portraying the Peking-born Chin as a heavy gambler — in contrast to the quiet, scholarly image he presented in court.

Kaplan Center...

SAT network aids students

LUBBOCK–Thanks to a new network of community directors, the nation's largest SAT preparation program is now available to high school students anywhere in the country. Gail Thompson, administrator of the Stanley H. Kaplan Educational Center in Lubbock, recently announced the launching of a delivery system to reach youngsters who do not live within commuting distance of any of the 125 Kaplan locations throughout the U. S.

"We're proud to be part of this expansion, Thompson said. "Because of networking we're able to help more Texas students prepare for their college entrance exams than ever before." Combining video and live instruction, the new networking course will utilize the same teaching techniques and test-based materials used at the permanent branches.

The heart of the Kaplan SAT networking program is a continually growing staff of individual community directors. Thoroughly trained in Kaplan test strategies, these men and women are teachers, guidance personnel, or other professionals who live and work in the neighborhoods where they hold Kaplan SAT classes. The Kaplan course provides them with a rewarding supplementary income, and at the same time it gives their students a professional "test edge."

"For years, Thompson said, "we've had students commuting incredible distances because of our reputation. But now, when I receive SAT inquiries from youngsters in remote locations, I can usually arrange network classes right in their communities. Such students, she said, will not have to travel much further than their phones to receive all the SAT "extras" available to enrollees at the regular branch: free computerized test analysis, homestudy packs, TEST-N-TAPE, cassette reviews, and an optional college selection seminar, Pathway to College.

Students or parents who would like to bring the Kaplan SAT networking program to their communities, or professionals interested in acting as community directors, are invited to contact the Lubbock center at 763-0005. Located at 2421 Third Place, the center is open days, evenings and weekends

Storm cleanup is underway

by The Associated Press

Westerners cleaned up today from a 1½-week barrage of storms that left 6,000 homes and nearly half of California's wine-rich Napa Valley under water, caused at least $300 million damage and forced the evacuation of 38,000 people.

President Reagan on Friday declared a major disaster in nine northern California counties, making residents eligible for federal assistance as they dig out and hose off after floods and mudslides touched off by the Pacific storms that swept over the area beginning Feb. 11, killing 17 people.

Meanwhile, snow spread Friday from the Midwest to the Northeast, closing major highways and causing a jetliner to skid off a runway in Pennsylvania. One weather-related death was reported in Michigan.

In California, where Gov. George Deukmejian estimated the damage at $300 million, more than 7,500 homes and businesses were damaged or destroyed, Debra Sonniksen of the state Office of Emergency Services said Friday.

The figures do not include damage from the Yuba River, which burst through a levee Thursday night, driving a muddy torrent through the towns of Olivehurst and Linda and forcing 26,000 residents to flee.

Twelve thousand of the 30,000 acres in the state's famed Napa Valley wine-growing region were damaged, with losses exceeding $16 million, officials said.

Up to 6,000 homes were under water Friday in the Sacramento Valley after the Yuba River levee and one in Thornton ruptured. By late Friday, the Yuba River inundation area decreased from 28 square miles to 16, said Yuba County Undersheriff Dennis Moore.

Up to a third of the Linda and Olivehurst evacuees should be able to return today, but it could take two weeks before all can do so, Moore said.

Although the volume of water released into reservoirs was declining, "the entire (Sacramento) delta is in serious jeopardy," said state flood control spokesman Bill Helms. Alan Jones said it would take four to five days for the huge volume of runoff to pass.

In northwestern Nevada, crews were making progress repairing a natural gas line ruptured by the surging Truckee River.

Report: retarded patients should be in community

AUSTIN (AP) — State mental health officials said they plan to move 100 mentally retarded people from Texas institutions each year and place them in community homes to comply with a federal lawsuit.

The Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation filed the plan Friday with U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders of Dallas. The plan has no provisions for closing state institutions.

But a proposal filed with the court by David Ferleger, attorney for the plaintiffs in the suit, did suggest closing a state school in Austin, Denton or Fort Worth.

Ferleger said the Austin school is the likely candidate because it is older and is located on valuable property north of the University of Texas campus.

Texas officials operate 13 state schools. Only the schools in Austin, Denton and Fort Worth were named in a 1974 class-action suit, which alleged poor conditions in state schools.

"We are not looking at closing a school," said Toni Hunter, an assistant attorney general who is representing the department in the lawsuit. "There are other schools in the state that are older and might be more appropriate to close than Austin State School."

Business laments frivolous lawsuits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's civil justice system is run by "a pack of pickpockets" — plaintiffs and lawyers whose expensive damage suits jeopardize business, governments and non-profit groups, a Senate committee was told Friday.

Witnesses at a Judiciary Committee hearing described day care centers in financial trouble, businesses nearly wiped out, and local governments that settled frivolous suits, and therefore paid damages, rather than face the wrath of jurors.

Witnesses said skyrocketing personal injury suits have left actual and potential defendants with spiraling insurance rates or elimination of coverage because damage awards have caused insurers huge losses.

Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., who presided over the hearing, has introduced two bills designed to remedy the problem.

One would require attorneys to certify that clients were told of alternatives to court action, including a form of out-of-court arbitration.

The second measure would limit pain and suffering awards to $100,000 and create penalties for lawyers who initiate civil actions without a reasonable belief the case can be won.

McConnell said, "We all pay more for goods and services ... as a result of these outrageous awards." Other witnesses described these examples of suits that caused the crisis:

—The Corning Glass Co. paid $804,892 to a man who was injured by a shard of glass when a dish broke. The plaintiff won on grounds that the company failed to tell the consumer the dishes might fall and shatter if stacked five deep, with their lids inverted.

—A gymnast in California was awarded $14.7 million after suffering a neck injury in a gymnastics accident. He collected from the company that made the mat on grounds the firm failed to tell the victim of potential danger.

—The New York City transit authority settled for $650,000 in a suit filed by an injured man who jumped in front of a subway train, in a failed apparent suicide attempt. The plaintiff contended the train should have stopped.

"The scales are tilted grotesquely in favor of plaintiffs and attorneys whose principal motivation is ... exploitation of others," said former Pennsylvania Rep. James Coyne, president of the American Tort Reform Association.

Candidate Clint Eastwood is facing up to the voters

CARMEL, Calif. (AP) — Clint Eastwood may be more at ease shooting it out in front of movie cameras than dueling with words, but in his real-life role as candidate for mayor he squared off against his opponents in their first electoral debate.

The cast for the debate Friday night before members of the Carmel Republican Women's Club included Eastwood, tight-lipped hero of spaghetti westerns and "Dirty Harry" movies, Mayor Charlotte Townsend, and businessman Paul Laub, all registered Republicans.

Eastwood, 54, swapped a Hollywood lifestyle for Carmel 25 years ago. He operates a popular downtown restaurant called the Hog's Breath Inn in this resort 120 miles south of San Francisco.

The actor, who said before the debate that he had never made a campaign speech, admitted he's a political novice and said he has taken a year off from acting to immerse himself in community affairs, studying politics rather than scripts.

He pledged to cut down on his acting career if elected May 8 to govern the 5,000-resident city and head the four-member council. There is no pay.

The debate, held at the Crossroads Community Room, drew an audience of about 200.

Much of it focused on problems posed by the hordes of tourists who descend on the scenic seaside community, many of them drawn by the presence of such stars as Eastwood.

Mrs. Townsend, 61, a two-term incumbent, said 79 percent of residents who answered a city survey said they were concerned about increases in tourist traffic.

"If you want more tourism ... more intrusion of the business community ... more traffic and erosion of community character, you should vote for any of my opponents here," she said.

Laub, 41, said the city's "business is tourism. Tourists are a God-given bounty. We make then happy and we let them make us happy."

For his part, Eastwood said he would like to see council members become "personally involved with individuals in town to resolve development problems rather than remaining on a pedestal ... dictating to somebody."

Last year, the actor sued the city after the council rejected his development plans for a commercial building next to his restaurant. The suit was settled out of court when the city accepted a compromise plan for a smaller building.

"I'm a resident-oriented person," he said, referring to development problems in the city.

Cuts will delay research plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Important research into the causes of Alzheimer's disease will be delayed or sharply curtailed because of mandatory government spending cuts that take effect March 1, federal health officials say.

The 4.3 percent across-the-board spending cuts ordered by the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law "give us no leeway; we will be delaying the progress of research in several settings," Dr. T. Franklin Williams, director of the National Institute of Aging, said Friday.

There are cases "where we will not be able to carry on work in this important area," Williams told a hearing of the Senate Special Committee on Aging.

The institute's $10.4 million budget for Alzheimer's research at 10 centers around the country will shrink by $500,000 on March 1, he said.

Scientists use the money to help finance projects to determine the cause of the deadly ailment that afflicts 2.5 million Americans, slowly destroying the victims' memories.

The cuts mean that Dr. James Gusella of Harvard Medical School must postpone the start of his government-sponsored research into possible genetic causes of the disease, Williams said.

Having found the genetic cause of Huntington's disease — which causes a deterioration of speech and mental capacity — Gusella "is one of the world's best people to do the project," Dr. Zaven Khachaturian, head of the institute's physiology of aging branch, said in a telephone interview.

At least a dozen important Alzheimer's research projects financed by the government won't begin.

Former student is assaulted

AUSTIN (AP) — A former black student leader at the University of Texas said the latest in a series of assaults on him is part of a scheme by racists to intimidate blacks and prevent them from expressing their views on campus.

FBI agents were investigating an attack of Randy Bowman by two white men wearing Ronald Reagan masks and carrying a pistol who allegedly tried to throw him from a window.

Bowman and others claimed the attack was designed to prevent the Black Student Alliance from speaking out on issues such as UT investments in companies operating in South Africa and recruitment and retention of minorities at the university.

William Cunningham, UT president, said he sought help from the FBI on Friday after a request by Bowman, who told authorities that the two had entered his eighth-floor dormitory room and tried to throw him from a window.

"Everybody wants to get to the bottom of this," said Cunningham.

An FBI spokesman in Austin said the agency will be able to take part in the investigation because of a possible violation of Bowman's civil rights. The spokesman said the FBI will work with the UT Police Department in the investigation.

UT police Lt. Ronald Thomas said Friday that no witnesses to the attack this week had been found and that the police had no suspects.

"There really isn't much to go on at this point," he said.

City settles single member lawsuit

FLOYDADA, Texas (AP) — Attorneys have settled a federal lawsuit challenging Floydada's at-large election system but April's city council race will be postponed until the U.S. Justice Department can approve the agreement.

An attorney for the Southwest Voter Registration and Education Project in San Antonio said Floydada, in Floyd County, is evidently the second smallest city in the state to change to single-member districts from an at-large system.

SVREP provided research resources for plaintiffs in the 1984 lawsuit. The most current estimate places Floydada's population at just over 4,000.

Officials said Taft, with a population just over 3,500, is the smallest Texas city to go through the switch from at-large voting to single-member districts.

The arrangement city attorneys and Mexican-American plaintiffs reached in the class-action suit allows for four council members elected from single-member districts and two council members and the mayor elected at large to two-year terms.

The order was signed Tuesday by U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward of Lubbock.

"We've got to be happy with it. It was an order from the court. People are just glad it's over with. The longer it takes, the more expensive it is," Mayor Parnell Powell told the Plainview Daily Herald.

The recent flurry of law suits in the state are a result of a 1982 amendment in the Voting Rights Act, which eliminated the need for plaintiffs to establish an intent to discriminate. Plaintiffs now must show only that discrimination is the effect of an at-large system.

Officials said at-large elections in the south and southwest grew out of a reform movement in the early 1930s.

Commission says NASA didn't exert any pressure

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (AP) — Members of the presidential commission investigating the shuttle Challenger disaster say there is no indication NASA pressured Morton Thiokol officials to agree to a launch despite their concerns over cold weather.

"We looked into that quite deeply," commission member David Acheson, a Washington attorney, said after a nine-hour session Friday at the Utah facility where the firm manufactures rocket boosters for the shuttles. "You have to look very, very hard and want to find it. And I don't mean that you find it when you look."

When asked if he and fellow commission members, aerospace consultant Robert Rummel and Eugene Covert, a professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, found no indication of coercion on the part of NASA, Acheson answered: "That's a fair statement."

The commission's visit to the Morton Thiokol plant, which continues today, came as a company official revealed that an "ice team" inspecting Challenger before last month's disastrous launch made a temperature reading of minus 8 degrees on a strut that held the space shuttle's suspect right rocket booster in place.

The official, who talked on condition of anonymity, said the company would never have given NASA a go-ahead to launch had it known about the temperature reading — but the data was not passed along to the firm.

Commission members met with several of Thiokol's engineers to go over their conversations with NASA about their hesitations to give a go-ahead for the Jan. 28 launch because of the cold weather.

"We pried into it quite a lot to make sure we understood what happened," Acheson said. "So far it looks like a professional engineering disagreement."

Among the engineers interviewed was Allan McDonald, director of the firm's shuttle solid rocket program, who refused to agree to the launch.

McDonald's superiors overruled him after discussions with NASA, and gave their go-ahead for a launch.

Acheson said the commission members were told of conversations that "confirmed thorough discussion and some argument over the data."

Acheson said MacDonald's boss, Joe Kilminister, Thiokol's vice president for the space booster program, was not available Friday, but would be among 10 to 12 Thiokol engineers involved in the decision-making process who have been called to appear before the commission on Tuesday and Wednesday in Washington.

Engineers here have said the low temperatures recorded by the ice team could have caused the booster rocket's O-ring seals to freeze and lose flexibility.

Happy 50th Doyle Scott

ESA rocket sends two satellites into earth orbit

KOUROU, French Guiana (AP) — The European Space Agency, vying with NASA for a share of the lucrative satellite-launching market, sent two satellites into orbit atop an Ariane rocket in a mission it hailed as a "complete success."

Ariane, a three-stage unmanned booster, lifted off from the Kourou Space Center late Friday. The launch, the 16th for an Ariane, came after 18 months of delay and at a time of new uncertainty in the satellite business following the U.S. space shuttle disaster last month.

Fifteen minutes after liftoff from this launch site in northeastern South America, Ariane successfully placed a Swedish scientific probe and a sophisticated French observation satellite in orbit, the European Space Agency said.

However, it was not known immediately if the satellites, which were linked together, had uncoupled and were functioning. The Swedish probe is designed to study the Earth's magnetic field and the aurora borealis, or Northern Lights.

But more importantly, the French satellite, Spot 1, will compete directly with the American Landsat series of satellites.

Landsat satellites have been used by the United States since 1972 to provide information on Earth resources. But the system lost money and the U.S. government sold it to a private company, Earth Observation Satellite Co., in September.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration has suspended the current series of shuttle flights pending the outcome of an investigation into the Jan. 28 explosion of Challenger, in which seven U.S. astronauts were killed. Among other uses, the shuttle was employed to orbit commercial satellites.

With the U.S. program on hold, Ariane would appear well placed to strengthen its grasp on the satellite market, which most experts believe will be a multi-billion dollar business well into the next century.

But the European program, created by a 10-nation consortium, has been plagued by its own problems.

Ariane had succeeded in 11 of 14 launches, including the first nine launches in its commercial series. However, as French President Francois Mitterrand watched from the command bunker in Kourou, the 15th Ariane shot veered off course last Sept. 13.

Jealousy feelings theorized

LIVINGSTON, Texas (AP) — A former junior high school principal charged in the slaying of a football coach at the institution became jealous over plans to marry a girlfriend, prosecutors allege.

A Polk County jury Tuesday will begin deliberations in the Hurley Fontenot murder trial, ending six weeks of mystery, suspense and controversy about coach Billy Mac Fleming's slaying.

District Attorney Peter Speers rested the prosecution's case against the former Woodson Junior High School principal Friday. Testimony showed blood in Fontenot's pickup truck could belong to Fleming and that Fontenot once boasted of "always" carrying a .22-caliber revolver.

Fontenot, 48, of Raywood is charged with shooting the 36-year-old Fleming of Hull twice in the back of the head and dumping Fleming's body in southeast Polk County.

Prosecutors allege Fontenot became jealous and killed Fleming because he planned to marry Fontenot's former girlfriend, Laura Nugent, a teacher's aide.

Fontenot testified he went to a Houston airport to meet his daughter who never arrived and later drove to Delta Downs horse race track at the time of Fleming's murder.

Earlier testimony showed investigators found human blood on Fontenot's pickup truck and a school district camper Fontenot borrowed on April, the day before Fleming disappeared from the junior high school.

Commander of NAS among pilots in unauthorized event

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — The former commander of the Corpus Christi Naval Air Station was piloting one of three helicopters in unauthorized maneuvers that left three men dead, the Corpus Christi Caller-Times reported.

Capt. E. Earle Rogers II was relieved of his command and disciplined for his participation in the maneuvers before the October crash that also injured three others, the newspaper reported Friday.

A Navy source who supplied the information called the discipline "administrative" but declined to elaborate, the Caller-Times said.

Results of a Navy investigation released Thursday blamed the crash of a UH-1 helicopter on pilot error, adding that the UH-1 and a TH-57 helicopter were also engaged in unauthorized maneuvers at the time of the accident.

Rogers was piloting a third helicopter that had engaged in evasive maneuvers with the TH-57 just before the accident, said the Navy source, who the paper identified only as on the staff of Rear Adm. John S. Disher, chief of Naval Air Training.

An investigation found that Rogers' actions contributed to the relaxation of flight safety discipline, he said. The newspaper has filed a Freedom of Information Act request to obtain further details of the Navy investigation.

Temporarily relieved of his NAS command last December, Rogers will be permanently reassigned outside the South Texas area sometime in May, the source told the newspaper.

Rogers, a former combat helicopter pilot, was not listed in the Corpus Christi telephone directory, and an NAS officer refused to give out his home number.

The newspaper's source provided the following scenario:

Two UH-1 Navy helicopters, one piloted by Rogers, left the NAS to perform a search-and-rescue training mission Oct. 30 at a training area on Mustang Island. During that mission, the TH-57 arrived.

Rogers engaged the aircraft in less-violent, but unauthorized, maneuvers. After he left Mustang Island and returned to the NAS, the TH-57 and the remaining UH-1 engaged in a defensive tail-chase maneuver. It was during one of those evasive maneuvers that the aircraft crashed.

Killed were Lt. Cmdr. David Lee Wright, 44, of Wichita Falls; Lt. Sam Michael Savas III, 27, of Miami; and aviation machinist's mate 2nd Class David Kent Felton, 32, of Corpus Christi.

The source said the maneuvers were unauthorized because all missions must be approved and pre-briefed on the ground.

No armadillo race for Charles

By DOUG CRICHTON
Associated Press Writer

He may not have gotten to see Southfork Ranch, armadillo races or washing machine-throwing contests, but Prince Charles got a Texas-sized dose of the Lone Star State during his five-day, four-city tour.

The heir to the British throne flew out of San Antonio Friday with floppy cowboy hats, teeny Dallas Cowboys T-shirts, a 1½-foot gavel and a stuffed Longhorn steer in tow.

He also carried memories of the world's largest cake — which he sliced with a three-foot sword — a lavish award ceremony for Dallas billionaire H. Ross Perot and high-tech tours he hopes will translate into increased Anglo-American trade.

Touring Texas without Princess Diana, the prince at first intended to come only to Dallas to present Perot the prestigious Winston Churchill Award. But intrigued by the hoopla over the state's 150th anniversary of its independence from Mexico, he decided to pack three other cities into his crowded agenda.

"I have been to a large number of luncheons and made too many speeches, but sadly I haven't made it to Southfork Ranch," Charles said Friday. Southfork Ranch, north of Dallas, is the homestead of the conniving Ewing family on the television show "Dallas."

The prince added that "I am very sad not to see armadillo racing and washing machine-throwing contests."

But Charles, who was greeted by mobs of people all along his route, didn't miss out on other bits of Texana in his travels from Dallas to Houston, Austin and San Antonio.

After arriving in Dallas Monday, a worker at one of the plants he toured gave him a yellow rose — as in "The Yellow Rose of Texas" — to pin on his lapel.

Mayor A. Starke Taylor Jr. later gave him a key to the city and two tiny Dallas Cowboys T-shirts for his sons. Then there were the cowboy-hatted, mini-skirted Kilgore Junior College Rangerettes, who greeted him with deep bows and royally flushed cheeks at city hall.

After the Perot banquet Tuesday night, it was on to Houston Wednesday for a visit to Shell Oil Co.'s Deer Park refinery and the San Jacinto Monument, a duplicate of the Washington Monument that marks Texas' victory over Mexican forces in 1836.

The prince, 37, jetted off to Austin Thursday, where in a ceremony on the Capitol steps — which bear the workmanship of Scottish stonemasons — he presented Gov. Mark White a picture of the old Texas Legation on St. James Street in London.

In return, he got a 1½-foot wooden gavel, which he jokingly said could be put to good use "for maintaining discipline in the home."

Also that day, Mayor Frank Cooksey greeted him with a cowboy hat so big it fell to his ears and a University of Texas student proffered a stuffed Longhorn steer toy.

Then there was that birthday cake — 45 tons of confection that measured 110 by 80 feet — which Prince Charles sliced into Thursday night with Lady Bird Johnson and other dignitaries looking on.

"Other people want to see Bruce Springsteen or Michael Jackson. I don't bother. For the prince, I bother," said Killeen secretary Cyntia Bernal, who waited for six hours to see the prince in Austin. "I think he's wonderful."

Friday, the prince flew on to San Antonio, where he visited a minority-owned business, a day care center in a housing project and two homes in an urban renewal area.

Detective assigned to find son's killer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Detective Gary Grant, who has been assigned full-time to solve the 2-year-old slaying of his son, says he's not a one-man vigilante squad and is careful not to do anything that might get the case thrown out of court.

"For the first two years, I didn't get involved," Grant said Friday. "I didn't think I would be able to handle it at that time. I didn't think I would be objective.

"After sitting around for two years and nothing happening, I decided then maybe it was time to do something. I'm sitting there, nothing's happening, and meanwhile my son's in his grave."

Gary Grant Jr., 7, was found bludgeoned to death on Jan. 14, 1984, his body wrapped in a rug and left in a vacant lot. A 1½-foot-long pipe believed to have been used in the slaying was found nearby.

Last month, Atlantic City Police Chief Joseph Pasquale reassigned the victim's father, a 12-year police veteran, to the case despite the opposition of county prosecutors. Grant normally works the midnight-to-8 a.m. shift.

"I have to know. I have to know what happened," said Grant, who also has two daughters, ages 12 and 14.

But Atlantic County Prosecutor Jeffrey Blitz is critical of Pasquale's decision and said the county's own probe is continuing.

"In my judgment, it is inappropriate for the father of the victim to be a member of the investigation team," Blitz told The Press of Atlantic City.

Grant's son was last seen alive two days before the body was found. The second-grade student at Our Lady Star of the Sea School told his mother he had an "appointment," authorities said.

A 12-year-old playmate was charged with juvenile delinquency after confessing during an all-night interrogation, but prosecutors dropped the charges after courts ruled the confession was inadmissable.

Grant said he won't question the youngster because it would be improper for him to talk to anyone who might be considered a suspect. If he did, a defense attorney might be able to use that fact to have a case dismissed, said Grant.

"I don't think he did it, but I'm almost sure he was there," Grant said of the boy, now 14. "How long can he keep that in?"

The detective said he believes an adult was involved in his son's slaying because of Gary Jr.'s statement that he had an "appointment."

Grant said he has interviewed about 40 people, all of whom have come to him voluntarily after seeing reward posters he plastered around the city or hearing about his investigation.

Changes may be needed

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A judicial expert said that the state may have to limit campaign contributions to Texas judges and be willing to pay some election expenses if conflicts of interest are to be avoided.

A professor who studied judicial politics made the comment Friday at a day-long symposium on the election and tenure of judges, hosted by the Texas Bar Foundation.

"If a restructuring of campaign funding is in order, it will have to be coupled with a state funding plan," said Dr. Anthony Champagne, a University of Texas at Dallas sociology professor who recently completed a study on the election of Texas judges. "Democracy doesn't come cheap."

Champagne said average contributions to Texas Supreme Court candidates totaled $340,000 between 1982 and 1984. And the largest contributions have come from South Texas oilman Clinton Manges, who has made a number of contributions in excess of $100,000, Champagne said.

He said Manges made a $200,000 contribution to one unsuccessful candidate.

Zimmerman leads Turquoise by two

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) - Mary Beth Zimmerman finds herself leading an LPGA event for the first time, and says the heady feeling can be addictive.

"It's a great feeling," she said after carding a 3-under-par 69 Friday for a two-stroke lead after the second round of the $250,000 LPGA Standard Register-Samaritan Turquoise Classic.

"This is what I work for. That's why I play," said the 25-year-old native of Hillsboro, Ill. "I'll tell you what; it makes it all worthwhile."

Zimmerman shook off the effects of a stomach virus to play even-par 26 on the front nine and birdied holes 10, 13 and 15 on the par-72, 6,210-yard Arizona Biltmore Adobe Course.

Amy Alcott fired a 70 and was tied for second at 139 with Pat Meyers.

Patty Sheehan, the season's leading money-winner, remained in contention with a 70 Friday and was tied with Sherri Turner, Jane Crafter and Rosie Jones with 140 totals. Crafter shot 71, while Turner and Jones both posted 72s.

Juli Inkster, the first-round leader, fell to a 2-over 74 and was four shots off the pace at 131. Defending champion Betsy King moved into contention with a 69 Friday and was five shots off at 142.

Zimmerman said she woke up late Thursday night not feeling well late, and a nagging stomach pain persisted throughout Friday's round.

However, after she chipped in

Track rule finally changed; Nehemiah, Gault amateurs

MADRID, Spain (AP) - Renaldo Nehemiah and Willie Gault, who lost their amateur track status when they signed professional football contracts, are now free to resume their careers as world-class hurdlers.

The International Amateur Athletics Federation's ruling body on Friday lifted its ban on both National Football League players.

The 22-member council, concluding its meeting, voted unanimously to amend IAAF rules so the two Americans could be reinstated and be allowed to compete in all track events, including the Olympics.

"Nehemiah and Gault will be eligible for the 1987 World Championships - indoors at Indianapolis in March and outdoors in Rome in August," a highly placed IAAF source said.

Gault, a member of the Chicago Bears, will be 27 by the time the ban would be lifted, and Nehemiah, of the San Francisco 49ers, will be 28. Neither has competed in track since 1983.

Nehemiah holds the world record in the men's 110-meter hurdles at 12.93 seconds - the only man in the world to have broken 13 seconds at the distance.

Gault is ninth on the all-time list for the event with 13.26. He was a gold medalist at the 1983 World Championships in Helsinki, Finland, with the American 400-meter relay team.

Attempts to reach both Gault and Nehemiah for comment Friday night were unsuccessful.

At the same time, the federation's executive council banned four track and field athletes, including Americans Augie Wolf, a shot putter, and Duncan Attwood, a javelin thrower, for violating IAAF doping regulations.

"Nehemiah and Gault will not be back this year, but this is a good change," said Ollan Cassell, executive director of The Athletics Congress, which controls track and field competition in the United States. "They will obviously have to qualify for the American team in 1987, and this will depend on their football season. If Gault goes to the Super Bowl, as he has done this year, he could be in trouble. But it is up to them now."

Only Gault and Nehemiah were actually banned, but the action also took away the track and field hopes of sprinter Ron Brown and shot putter Michael Carter. Brown is a wide receiver with the Los Angeles Rams and Carter a nose guard with the 49ers.

IAAF rules say that any athlete who is a professional in another sport is no longer eligible to compete in track and field meets. The council recommended that the IAAF Congress during its August meeting in Stuttgart, West Germany, modify the rules to drop the restriction.

"This is a formality after today's unanimous vote," the IAAF source said. "The congress will approve and the two Americans will be reinstated in time for next winter's indoor season. Nobody will confirm this officially today, for fear of offending congress members, but there is no doubt of it."

Brown told the Associated Press by telephone:

"I'd definitely give it (the 1988 Olympics) a shot. I'm looking forward to getting back on the track and training and competing at that level again."

Bubka outsoars Olson, sets new indoor pole vault mark

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) - Sergei Bubka, the outspoken Soviet pole vaulter, backed up his words Friday night when he soared to an indoor world best of 19-5¾ and victory in the Los Angeles Times-GTE meet, bettering the mark of rival Billy Olson.

Olson set the previous indoor best of 19-5½ two weeks ago in East Rutherford, N.J.

Olson, who has raised the world indoor best four times already this winter, finished second to Bubka in the meet at the Forum, with a vault of 18-10¼.

The American vaulter missed twice at 19-5¾, then, after Bubka cleared the height, had the bar raised to 19-7½. But Olson missed badly at that height on his final attempt.

Bubka, who had questioned Olson's skills at a press conference earlier in the week, had cleared 19-2¼ on his first attempt at that height. He missed just once Friday night, on his initial attempt at 19-5¾.

After Bubka cleared 19-5¾, meet officials huddled near the pit area for about 10 minutes. The subject of their talk was not known.

Olson struggled early in the competition, failing to clear 18-4½ on his first two attempts. But he made it on his third, then cleared 18-10¼ on his second attempt.

Dave Kenworthy was third in the pole vault at 18-4½, edging Bubka's older brother, Vasily, on fewer misses.

Marcus O'Sullivan of Ireland won the men's mile, another featured event, with a time of 3:57.21. Countryman Ray Flynn was second in 3:57.91, and Steve Scott third in 3:59.

Earlier in the meet at the Forum, Diane Dixon ran the women's fastest 500 yards ever indoors.

Dixon was timed in one minute, 2.29 seconds, bettering the previous world indoor best of 1:02.3 (hand-timed), set by Valerie Brisco-Hooks a year ago.

Walton-Floyd was second in 1:03.34. in the close finish with Dixon.

Marlene Harmon was third in 1:06.99.

Jeannette Bolden equaled the world indoor best in the 60-yard dash with a clocking of 6.54 seconds. Evelyn Ashford, not entered in the meet, had run an identical time four years ago.

O'Grady still keeping silent but Trixler has plenty to say

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Leader Mac O'Grady kept his usual silence following the second round of the Los Angeles Open, but Dennis Trixler, pleased to be just a stroke behind, had plenty to say.

"I must have had 400,000 phone calls last night," Trixler, who shared the first-round lead with Jay Delsing, said after Friday's second round.

"I've never been in the position (leading a tournament) before," he said. "It was like it was my birthday."

O'Grady, who has been feuding with PGA Commissioner Deane Beman for two years and usually refuses to talk to reporters, refused again Friday after his second consecutive 68 at Riviera Country Club gave him a one-shot lead midway through the tournament.

O'Grady refuses to come into the press tent interview area because, he says, he wants to embarrass Beman.

O'Grady told a throng of reporters who trailed him from the 18th tee and into the locker room: "I've got nothing to say. You guys have a great dinner tonight. See y'all later."

O'Grady knocked in a hole-in-one with a 6-iron on the sixth hole to take the lead. He stands at 6-under-par 136 through 36 holes.

Trixler carded a second-round 71 to go with an opening 66. He bogeyed the final hole of the second round to slip out of a tie for the lead.

Mark Lye shot himself into contention with a second-round 66 that put him within two strokes of the lead.

O'Grady, who has yet to win a tournament in his four years on the PGA tour but finished 20th in earnings with $224,000 in 1985, began the round two strokes back of Trixler and Delsing.

The O'Grady-Beman dispute began after the commissioner fined him for allegedly making rude remarks to a woman on the course during a tournament in New Orleans in 1984. O'Grady refused to pay, and Beman later collected a $500 fine from a purse paid to O'Grady.

The feud has, however, been essentially one-sided, with Beman saying tour policy was followed in the matter of the fine.

Delsing had a second-round 74 that left him four shots behind the leader.

Jim Colbert shot 66 to put him at 139 with Lennie Clements, who had a 70.

Defending champion Lanny Wadkins, who carded a 71 the first day, shot a second-round 70 that left him five shots off the pace.

Hal Sutton, the tour's leading money-winner in 1985, was unable to recover from an opening 79. He missed the cut - which came at 147 - with a second-round 70 for a 149 total.

The winner of the $450,000 Los Angeles Open, which runs through Sunday, will collect $81,000.

Men could clinch tourney berth...

Bulldogs challenge Western

Western Texas College's Westerners will be looking to wrap up a berth to the Region V Tournament when they entertain Clarendon College at 8 Saturday evening in Scurry County Coliseum.

The action is the second game of a double header which begins at 6 with a women's matchup.

At 9-4, Coach Phil Spradling's Westerners need only to win one of their final three games to secure a spot in the post-season tournament. A finish of one win and two losses would leave Western at 10-6. Since Odessa and New Mexico already have six losses apiece and meet in the season's finale next Thursday, the loser would be eliminated.

Only the top four teams in the conference qualify for the regional tournament.

Midland, 14-0, has already qualified. South Plains, at 10-3, can qualify by defeating Odessa in a makeup game Saturday night in Levelland.

Western is currently in third place in the conference, behind South Plains. The Westerners could finish in second place with wins over Clarendon this weekend and Midland and South Plains next week.

They would also have a strong shot at second place should Odessa defeat South Plains Saturday.

Clarendon is 5-8 in conference play and still mathematically in the post-season hunt. To get in, however, the Bulldogs would have to defeat Western, Odessa and Midland and rely on New Mexico to lose one of its three remaining games. In addition, Odessa would also have to lose to either South Plains or New Mexico.

Western Texas' women, who have already clinched a berth in the upcoming tourney, can claim an uncontested second place finish in the conference with a victory Saturday.

The Dusters are 8-2 in the conference and hold a two-game lead over third-place South Plains. A win Saturday would keep the Dusters two games ahead of SPC in the standings with only one game left to play.

Clarendon women are 3-7 and tied, in terms of losses, with 4-7 Howard and 3-7 for New Mexico Junior College, for fourth place in the conference. The Lady Bulldogs need a win Saturday to keep playoff hopes alive.

Coach Kelly Chadwick's Dusters are 22-7 in the conference. The WTC men, directed by Phil Spradling, are 18-8.

CLARENDON WOMEN

Clarendon women are 11-11 for the 1986-87 season under first-year coach Dexter Irvin. The Bulldogs feature a talented team that has been beset with injury problems. Top players include transfer point guard Aretha Brown, who averages 21.6 points a ball game.

WTC Coach Kelly Chadwick calls Brown "as good a point guard as there is in the conference."

Other top players include Victoria Peacock, a 5-11 sophomore who averages 13.2 points and 7.4 rebounds; Angela Tate, who averages 12.8 points and 5.9 rebounds; Sheilah Adams, 12 points and 6.6 rebounds; and Tia Stewart, 8.9 points and 8.3 rebounds.

CLARENDON MEN

Clarendon men are under the direction of Coach Joe Mondragon, who served as women's coach at Clarendon for the past several years.

The Bulldogs are staffed with one of the top scorers in the conference, 6-5 sophomore Virgil Reagins. He averages 23.1 points and 8.2 rebounds an outing.

Vincent Mason, a 6-2 sophomore guard, puts in 11.9 points while Tim Moore averages 8.7 and pulls down 6.5 rebounds.

Tiger basketball...

Scott happy with improvement; looking forward to next campaign

Though obviously disappointed his Tigers didn't reach the playoffs, Snyder High School coach Larry Scott said he was pleased with the success of the team and is looking forward to the 1986-87 basketball season.

"I was pleased with our success. I thought we were playing our best ball towards the end of the season. I'm disappointed we didn't get into the playoffs. It was especially disappointing considering that the Andrews game had to end on a official's decision," he said, referring to the game in which the Mustangs were allowed to shoot a pair of free throws after the final buzzer. It was the game that knocked Snyder out of any chance at the playoffs.

"I thought we had a lot of improvement during the season. Those last several games our inside and outside game were really complimenting each other," he said.

Seniors Jacky Anderson and Bobby Scott led the Tigers in scoring throughout the season with averages of 14.5 and 12.6 respectively. Chris Garrett, a 6-4 junior, averaged 9.2 points and paced the rebound game with 10.5 boards an outing.

Trey Tippens, a 6-4 sophomore, averaged 10.2 points while shooting a team-high .526 from the field. He also averaged 7.8 rebounds a game.

"We have three starter's spots to fill for next year," said Coach Scott, referring to Anderson, Bobby Scott and point-guard Mike McWilliams. "Those are big shoes to fill. Each one of our seniors meant a lot to our team this year no matter how much they played."

The coach is optimistic concerning the future.

"I think we have a chance to have a good team next year. We'll be young and pretty inexperienced at the guard-foward positions but we should be strong at the post. Dennis (Martinez) and Reynaldo (Gomez) did get to see some playing time at guard and that will help," the coach said.

Snyder junior varsity won all but two of its games with District 2-4A opponents and Scott is looking for help there, also.

"Our strength at the junior varsity was definitely our post area too, so we're really looking forward to that being a strong area next season. We'll even have more depth that we did this year and this year we had Don Osborn and William Foree who could help. Jacky was capable of moving inside, too," he said. "Tom Marvin and Daniel Chasteen should give us depth. They aren't as skilled as our posts coming back but they improved a great deal this past season."

Scott also said there were "four or five" players from the junior varsity who he hoped could fit into the guard spot along with Martinez and Gomez.

"One thing that impressed me about our junior varsity is that those kids played smart. They always seemed to be in the right place at the right time. That's a big plus because it's something that's hard to coach," Scott said.

Borger edges Ponies, 69-65

LUBBOCK – Charles Walker's layup with 10 seconds left helped propell Borger past Andrews in a Class 4A bi-district boy's playoff game here Friday night, 69-65.

Andrews, runnerup in District 2-4A, concludes its season with a 28-3 record. The Mustangs were ranked 10th in the state.

Walker's two-pointer broke a 65-65 tie as time was running out in the game. Teammate Don Coffer gave the game a four-point finish when he swished a pair of free throws with one second to play.

Win win sends Borger, 25-3 and the District 1-4A champion, against 4-4A runnerup Everman.

No site or time has been determined for that contest.

Sampson ignites Rockets to victory over Mavericks

by The Associated Press

Ralph Sampson appears to be getting the hang of playing center again.

The 7-foot-4 Sampson, playing the low post because of a knee injury to Akeem Olajuwon a week ago, scored a season-high 38 points and played all 48 minutes Friday night as he led the Houston Rockets to a 111-104 NBA victory over the Dallas Mavericks.

"The main thing has been getting used to the post position again," said Sampson, who also had 15 rebounds. "Down low I can really control the offense."

In other National Basketball Association games, it was New Jersey 121, Los Angeles Lakers 106; New York 117, Seattle 104; Philadelphia 97, Washington 87; Atlanta 106, Indiana 98; Chicago 108, Portland 96; Sacramento 118, Phoenix 110; and Golden State 125, Los Angeles Clippers 123.

Sampson's 22 points staked the Rockets to a 57-51 halftime advantage. Lewis Lloyd scored 12 of his 18 points in the third quarter as Houston extended the margin to 91-80.

After Dallas got within 95-88 with 9:27 left, Sampson had two baskets to help the Rockets rebuild their advantage to 101-89, and the Mavericks never drew closer than eight points again.

Mark Aguirre led Dallas with 28 points, while Donaldson had 18 rebounds for the Mavericks.

76ers 97, Bullets 87

Despite scoring 56 points fewer than Wednesday night, Philadelphia defeated Washington with 26 points and 21 rebounds from Charles Barkley and 22 points and 21 rebounds from Moses Malone.

The 76ers outscored the Bullets 23-8 in the last 10:18 of the third quarter to take a 69-61 lead going into the fourth period. Washington got no closer than seven points in the last 12 minutes.

from 30 feet for a birdie-3 on the 10th hole to move to 5-under, she said she started to fell better.

"Chipping in like that can cure anything," Zimmerman said.

Zimmerman, who is seeking her first career tour victory, had three par-saving putts on the front nine and added birdies on holes 13 and 15 with putts of 15 and 25 feet.

Meyers went 5-under in dramatic fashion when she skipped a 7-iron shot on the 17th hole through some water and then proceeded to sink a curling 50-foot putt.

Alcott, who turns 30 today, reeled off three straight birdies en route to carding her 70 after overcoming the emotional shock of her pet dog dying. Her 6-year-old Scottish terrier, MacTabish, was killed Monday when it was struck by a car outside her Santa Monica, Calif., home.

"I was emotionally upset and I didn't want to play, but some friends talked me into it," Alcott said. "He was killed while chasing a rabbit that lives in the neighborhood."

Only 76 golfers survived the 36-hole cut at 148. Among the casualties were Kathy Whitworth at 149 and Alice Miller, the tour's leading money winner last year, who had 150.

Foreign drug production is exceeding demand in U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is winning greater support for its worldwide war on drugs, but producers in Mexico and elsewhere are still turning out more than enough cocaine, marijuana and heroin to meet the demands of American buyers, the State Department said Friday.

Mexico was the top source of marijuana and heroin brought to the United States last year, despite that country's efforts to attack the trade, according to the department's annual international drug control report.

Production in Mexico, which for several years had been effectively attacked by airborne agents, was "the principal disappointment in a year in which other programs, despite greater burdens, met or even exceeded our expectations," the report said.

Such perennial leading producers as Panama, Belize, Jamaica, Thailand and Burma improved their anti-drug programs, the report said.

Best of all, Colombia, "once viewed as one of the most difficult countries in narcotics control," destroyed 85 percent of the marijuana cultivated in the north coast, the growers' favorite grounds, the report said.

Altogether, 14 important drug-producing countries are now actively destroying drug crops, compared with two nations four years ago, the report said.

"The fact remains that worldwide production of illicit opium, coca leaf and cannabis (marijuana) in 1985 was still many times the amount currently consumed by drug abusers" in the United States and elsewhere, the report said.

"The worldwide supply of heroin, cocaine, marijuana and other drugs is so great and trafficking channels to the United States so diverse that interdiction and crop eradication, when achieved in only one or two producing areas, have caused only temporary declines in availability," it said.

According to previous reports by the Drug Enforcement Administration and other agencies, annual U.S. consumption of heroin is 6 tons, which requires 60 tons of opium. The State Department study said the worldwide production of opium in 1985 was about 1,500 tons.

Mexico is announcing fresh debt talks

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Miguel de la Madrid said Mexico will open talks next week with international bankers to ask them to share in the sacrifices the nation is making to pay its $96.4 billion foreign debt.

De la Madrid, in a nationally televised speech Friday night, said the government cannot impose still more austerity measures to make up for all the revenues lost because of falling oil prices.

"No one is obliged to do the impossible," he said.

The president, who had been meeting for two weeks with his Cabinet to work out a fresh strategy to deal with the price cuts, made no mention of calling a halt to interest and principal payments on the debt.

"We don't want confrontation but realistic and honorable cooperation. We want to continue being serious and respected members of the international community, but this attitude gives us the right to objective and fair treatment," he said.

"The net effect of the loss of petroleum revenues cannot be made up solely with a greater external indebtedness by flows of new credit. It would bring us to an interminable vicious cycle," the president said.

Adjusting to the oil price reductions, he said, "also requires sacrifice on the part of the international creditors."

Therefore, he said finance officials will present "a new in-depth proposal on servicing the debt in relation with the country's capacity for payment."

Mexico earns about 70 percent of its foreign revenues from sales of its oil to overseas clients. With the fall in prices, de la Madrid said the nation will lose some $6 billion, about half of what it had expected to receive this year. Oil exports brought in $13.3 billion in 1985.

It is due to pay approximately $10 billion in interest payments on the debt in 1986.

De la Madrid said his administration will try to trim more from the federal budget to help reduce the enormous deficit as well as open up the tightly controlled economy to more foreign investment.

He reiterated the nation still planned to join the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. Membership in the international trade arrangement will require Mexico to reduce some of the barriers that restrict sales of foreign goods here.

Mexico will maintain, he said, a "flexible" policy with regard to the peso currency which, at its government-set rate, is devalued gradually each day.

He also said the government will put in place a series of measures to try to boost tourism, which is the No. 2 source of foreign revenues. It brought in about $1.8 billion last year, down from the approximately $2 billion of 1984.

Private analysts and bankers have said the price decline is potentially more serious for Mexico's economy than it was in August 1982 when the government declared it could no longer meet payments on its foreign debt.

It has maintained an austerity program for three years and some analysts and bankers worry how much longer it can impose such limitations on its large, impoverished population.

Before the fall in oil prices, Mexican finance officials had been expected to seek $4.8 billion in new money this year. But earlier this month, according to banking industry sources, they told bankers in New York they might need as much as $9 billion to help with their financial troubles. The sources spoke on condition of anonymity.

Weather in February was unusually warm

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Before a cool front swept across Texas at week's end, February was keeping pace with an unusually warm January and its record-breaking temperatures.

Record highs were set Thursday in Houston and College Station, and a total of 15 reporting stations logged temperatures in the 90s, Texas A&M University officials said.

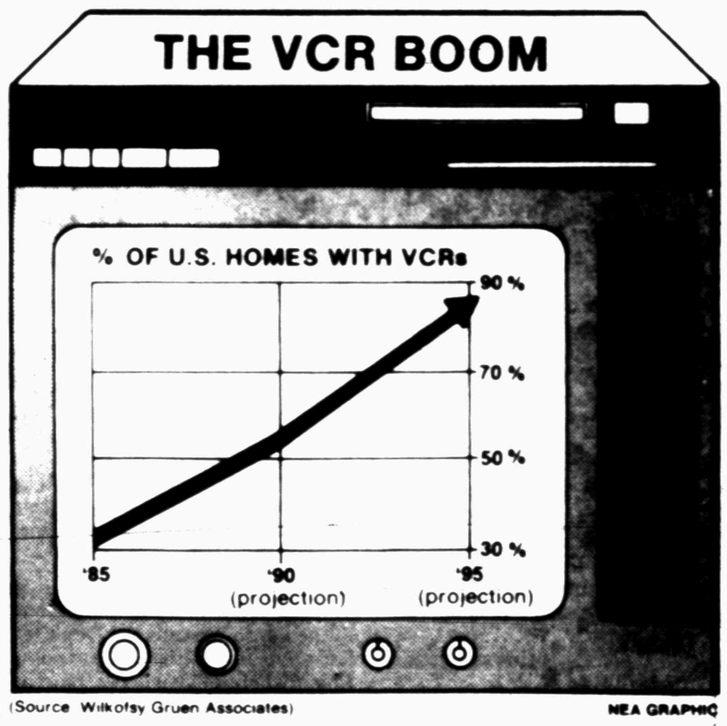
Laredo, meanwhile, became the first U.S. city to hit the 100-degree mark for three consecutive days during the month of February, the National Weather Service says.

Chris Sohl in the weather service office at Fort Worth said the achievement on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday was unprecedented in weather service record books.

The streak ended Friday, when a cool front dropped readings into the 50s.

Warmer February weather over much of Texas had continued since Valentine's Day, with lows generally in 40s and 50s and highs in the 60- to 80-degree range.

Unseasonably warm weather in late January and February had been interrupted only once by a cold front the first week of February.



How hot is the VCR craze? It's estimated that by 1995 about 85 percent of U.S. households with TVs will also own videocassette recorders — up from about 33 percent last year. Get the picture?

Seige of Alamo anniversary set

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — It was not as if the defenders of the Alamo had no warning of the doom that awaited them that February day in 1836.

When Mexican Gen. Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna arrived in San Antonio Feb. 23, bent on crushing a rising rebellion among Texans, he hoisted a blood-red flag.

Such a banner was a traditional Mexican symbol of no mercy and no surrender.

The defiant Texans inside, led by Col. William Barret Travis and Col. James Bowie, responded with a volley of cannon fire.

Thus, the stage was set for a 13-day siege of the Alamo, ending in the deaths of all 188 defenders.

The battle also served to set the stage for Texas' military victory at San Jacinto, where the battle cry was "Remember the Alamo."

The historic battle, a cornerstone of Texas history, will be relived and commemmorated during two weeks of celebrations, ceremonies and parades.

Activities begin Sunday and come to a climax March 6 with a live reading at dawn of a historical account of the fall of the Alamo that occurred 150 years ago on that day.

Another highlight of the celebration will be March 7 in Bracketville, Texas, where the famed movie "The Alamo" was filmed. A re-enactment of the battle will be staged there.

Among the stories to be remembered countless times in the coming weeks will be the legend of Travis rallying his troops.

Travis is said to have unsheathed his sword and drawn a line on the ground before his battle-weary men.

Travis told his warriors the Alamo was a deathtrap and there was no hope of victory. He challenged those prepared to die to cross the line to join him.

Every man, save one, crossed the line. Bowie, who was ill with typhoid-pneumonia, asked that his cot be carried over.

The next day, Santa Anna, who had gathered 4,000 troops, began an early morning attack that ended with the deaths of all the Texas warriors.

Santa Anna, who lost 600 men in the siege, ordered the bodies of the Texans burned.

A brochure on the Alamo, prepared by the Daughters of the Republic of Texas, says Santa Anna minimized his losses by saying, "It was but a small affair."

The same brochure, however, says Col. Juan Almonte of the Mexican army declared, "Another such victory and we are ruined."

4 face charges

Police logged four misdemeanor arrests Friday evening.

Individuals were jailed for charges of driving with a suspended license, driving while intoxicated, public intoxication and being a minor in possession of alcohol.

In 1958, Gamal Abdel Nasser became the first president of the United Arab Republic.

French President Charles de Gaulle called in 1962 for the independence of Algeria on the basis of friendly cooperation with France.

The second accident was reported at 5:06 p.m. in the 2800 Block of Ave. T.

Ferraro's son arrested on drug charge

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — The investigation that brought the arrest of John Zaccaro Jr. on a charge of cocaine possession lasted more than a month and could still bring more arrests, police say.

The 22-year-old son of former vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro was arrested late Thursday night by Middlebury and state police and arraigned Friday in Vermont District Court in Middlebury.

Zaccaro, a senior at Middlebury College, pleaded innocent to possession of a regulated drug with intent to sell. Judge Frank Mahady ordered him released on his own recognizance.

Middlebury police officer Michael Bolduc said information leading to Zaccaro's arrest "filtered in over the last month or two." He said "there could very well be more" arrests. "There's a lot of follow-up to do."

He said much of that follow-up would center around a list found in Zaccaro's car of people police believe were involved in drug transactions with Zaccaro.

Bolduc said he was at the scene of Zaccaro's arrest and that Zaccaro "seemed stunned ... but he was pretty good about it."

Bolduc said he had discussed the case with John Zaccaro Sr., and that the suspect's father "seemed pretty upset, but he didn't really say much." He said Zaccaro had expressed a desire to come to his son's arraignment Friday, but was unable to leave New York because of bad weather.

Daniel Boone and 27 others were captured by Indians in 1778 at Blue Lick, Ky.

possibility exists.

"Such situations have been present for years," he added, noting this primarily occurs in specialized teaching areas such as vocational skills.

"If a district cannot find someone who has a teaching certificate to teach a particular class, the district can declare a hardship case and receive an emergency permit."

He noted, however, "This is the way it's always been."

Regarding the replacement of teachers, Wood also commented on reports circulated statewide last week that West German teachers would be brought over to replace Texas teachers failing the TECAT.

He said these stories "confused" the number of teachers expected to leave the profession — projected at 15,000 — with the number of West German teachers expected.

"People got the impression that 15,000 West Germans would be coming. In fact, probably no more than 15 or 20 statewide will come on an exchange agreement with American teachers," Wood said.

He noted TEA is now planning to send each district a last minute reminder describing the process to be implemented with the testing March 10.

The test here will be given at the cafeteria area at Snyder High School. Three test times have been set, 7:30 a.m., noon and 4:30 p.m.

Teachers may take as long as they want to complete the test. Wood said field testing of the exam indicated an average time of 2 to 2½ hours to complete it. "Almost all of those taking it finished in 3½ hours," he said, stressing, "there is no time limit, however."

Teachers and administrators will be grouped in sections of from 80 to 100. Overseeing these groups will be one test administrator and two clerical aides.

The test itself will consist of 85 multiple choice questions and a word composition exam.

The multiple choice test will be given first. It will include 55 questions related to reading and 30 questions related to writing.

The exam will not test such areas as math ability.

Those tested will then be asked to write an approximate 150 word composition. They will be given two topics to choose from.

For the composition portion only, dictionaries will be provided by the test administrators. Wood said each group of 80 to 100 will have some 25 dictionaries made available for their use.

Teachers will be asked to bring two No. 2 pencils to take the test. They will be asked to bring no other materials such as dictionaries or a thesaurus.

In all, teachers will have five opportunities to pass the test. In addition to the March 10 exam, it will be offered again this year in June.

Next year, it will be offered three times, in October, February and June.

Teachers who fail the test both in March and in June this year could still teach next year if they apply through their local superintendent for an extension.

Such an "emergency need" extension would have to be ultimately granted by the TEA commissioner based upon the recommendation of the local superintendent.

If a teacher or administrator fails the test, Wood said TEA will notify only the individual, not the district.

As for the future of TECAT, Wood noted, "we'll have some people fail and we'll have legal challenges of this. We're expecting both," he said.

Current dividend yields were computed as follows: based on the maximum offering price (OP) on 1-14-86 High Yield: Annualizing 11.85 dividend of $0.185 ($0.169 from earned income and $.016 from undistributed income used to supplement and or stabilize the monthly dividend) and dividing by OP of $16.86. U.S. Govt: Annualizing the most recently declared dividend of $0.13 and dividing by the OP of $15.16. The Trust has a kitty of undistributed income used to supplement and or stabilize the monthly dividend. (High Yield and U.S. Govt use equalization, a commonly accepted accounting principle which may result in a return of capital for federal income tax purposes.)

Tax-Exempt: Annualizing dividends for the last 30 days and dividing by the average OP of $24.97 for the same period. Current yield of 8.2% equals a taxable yield of 16.4% for investors in the 50% tax bracket.

Annualized rates of total return for the five years (Life of Fund for U.S. Govt) ending 12-31-85 reflect the maximum initial sales charge, reinvestment of all distributions at net asset value and any change in net asset value during that period. For investments at reduced sales charge, total return would have been greater. Results update those found in each fund's Statement of Additional Information and can't be guaranteed as yield and share price will fluctuate.

Thanks

WE WISH to take this opportunity to thank each and every one for the prayers, the beautiful floral offerings, the abundance of food and every kindness shown in the passing of our loved one. May God's richest blessings be yours.

The Family of Elsie Stahl

Thank You

WE WISH to thank all our many friends for the kind and loving ways you helped us through our time of sorrow. The beautiful flowers, the food brought in, the visits, the cards and the many prayers offered in our behalf. Your kindness has helped to make this time so much more bearable. A special thank you goes out to Dr. Thompson and Dr. Pierce, the nurses in I.C.U. and all the staff members of the hospital who were so sweet and kind and helped us more than they will ever know. God bless each of you.

Thousands homeless after levee crumbles

MARYSVILLE, Calif. (AP) — Floodwaters from a ruptured levee spread across two submerged towns on Friday, leaving 28 square miles under water and driving as many as 26,000 people from their homes, authorities said.

Trucks hauled rock 30 miles from a quarry in a frantic effort to fill in the 150-foot-wide gap in the Yuba River levee, which began to crumble Thursday at dusk after more than a week of fierce rains. And boats and helicopters searched the area for people stranded in the water.

There was no way to tell how long the 24,000 to 26,000 residents of Linda and Olivehurst would be kept from their swamped homes, but it would be "at least another day, very likely more," said Yuba County Undersheriff Dennis Moore.

"I didn't get anything out except my pictures of the family," said Joyce Pirtle of Olivehurst, who was among the many refugees at Beale Air Force Base. "After Tuesday, they said everything was fine and we shouldn't worry anymore."

The refugees will not be allowed to return home until water supplies were certified free of contamination, Moore said.

One victim of the flooding was the Peach Tree Mall, a shopping center of 35 stores in Linda near the site of the break, which began as a 40-foot gap Thursday night about 130 miles northeast of San Francisco.

"Part of it is a two-story building, and all you can see of it is the K-Mart sign on the roof," said Moore.

A series of Pacific storms which began Feb. 12 killed at least 17 people, flooded thousands of acres and homes and set off hundreds of avalanches and mudslides in the West. An estimated 20 percent of Napa County's vineyards were damaged.

The storms drove the Yuba River to a depth of 76.5 feet on Tuesday, well above flood stage, although it had dropped significantly when the levee broke.

"In the summertime, it's just a trickle," said Capt. Joseph Saxon, a spokesman at Beale. "You can walk across it."

"This is my third flood — one in Arkansas, the big flood (in Yuba City) in 1955 and now this," said Connie Dickens, 67, of Olivehurst. "This is the third time I've had to start over. I'm going to get some place in the hills. I've lost everything."

Twenty-five boats and eight helicopters searched for victims Friday. There was no estimate of the number of people rescued, but California Highway Patrol spokesman Bob Wells said he saw dozens plucked from cars stalled on Highway 70 in the flooded area.

State flood control spokesman Bill Helms said the break in the levee came as a surprise, since the water level in the Yuba and nearby Feather rivers had been dropping and the levees appeared solid.

After the break, evacuation warnings were broadcast in English, Spanish and Punjabi — the latter for a large colony of farmers from India. Traffic backed up three miles from Beale, one of a dozen evacuation shelters.

There were few injuries reported. Three people were hospitalized for exposure, and Carol Wilson, 23, of Linda, gave birth to a son shortly after she reached the Beale refugee center.

One major problem, said Moore, is what to do with the water after repairs to the levee are completed. Temporary repairs will take a day or two, with permanent repairs expected to be complete in five days.

"There's no place to drain it," he said. "You build a levee to keep water out. When it gets inside the system (through a break), the levees keep it in."

"It's just been disaster, worry, nervousness, no sleeping, stomach in knots," said Kathy Guynes, who left her home in Olivehurst for a shelter in Sutter. "You never think that something like this will happen to you. You see it on TV and you see it on the news, but you just don't ever think it will happen. Not to you."

Minister breaks with chief

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and deputy armed forces chief Fidel Ramos broke publicly Saturday with President Ferdinand Marcos, and called on the armed forces and Cabinet ministers to join them.

"We have friendly forces in the army, navy, air force and marines," Ramos told a joint news conference at Defense Ministry headquarters in a suburban military camp.

Enrile, who has been in Marcos' government for 20 years, said generals loyal to Marcos had intended to arrest all leaders of the opposition and members of a military reform movement.

"I imagine orders like this would come from the highest authority," Enrile said.

Heavily armed soldiers guarded Defense Ministry headquarters as Ramos and Enrile spoke, and a helicopter ferried in 10 sacks of weapons.

There was no immediate reaction from Marcos' presidential palace. Government television made no immediate mention of the announcement from Ramos and Enrile, and no military activity was reported in Manila.

There was no immediate comment from the U.S. government, but U.S. Rep. Stephen Solarz, a New York Democrat critical of Marcos, said in an interview broadcast on CBS radio, "This could be the beginning of the end of the Marcos regime."

Enrile said at a news conference that Marcos' ruling party had cheated in the Feb. 7 special election, in which the National Assembly declared Marcos the winner over opposition candidate Corazon Aquino.

Jockeying has been recently reported in the Philippine military, and linked in press accounts to the departure of Gen. Fabian Ver, a staunch Marcos ally. Marcos announced Ver's resignation last Sunday and said Ramos would become acting chief of staff, but then said Ver's appeal to the commander-in-chief (Marcos) to allow us to peacefully negotiate and talk to him."

He said he was working towards having a dialogue with Marcos, but Enrile said they didn't know where the president was. A palace spokesman said earlier that Marcos was in his Malacalang Palace and resting.

Welcome

Scurry County Folks...

By Vicki Brown

February marks Black History Month with groups across the country honoring the past with speeches, dinners, dances and a host of other programs.

For one 71-year-old Snyder resident, the observance was celebrated quietly amid pictures of family and friends.

Robert Smith lives simply, enjoying television and long chats with neighbors around his apartment on Avenue R.

Born in Jackson, Miss., Smith was reared in both Mississippi and East Texas. "My folks were primarily farmers so I knew what it was like to work hard while I was growing up," he said.

He headed west while working as a maintenance man with the federal government. "The government transferred me around a lot," he added. "I was sent all over. I worked in Abilene and even out to San Diego."

When Smith arrived here in 1937, not many blacks lived in the area. "It was kind of lonesome in the late '30's," he shrugged. "I guess in some ways I was kind of glad to be transferred out again."

But Smith chose to return to Snyder in 1949 after leaving his government position. "I was glad more blacks had moved in by 1949 and the early '50's. It was a lot more comfortable for me."

After first working for the local telephone company, he went into business for himself as a builder and contractor.

In 1949, he said, Snyder's black citizens were treated much the same way blacks were treated across the country. "We had separate schools, of course, and you didn't go in any white cafes. You couldn't hardly go in any drugstores unless you pulled your hat off," he remarked.

Smith believes that the rise in the status of blacks here came as a result of a change in attitude among white residents. "I think mostly whites made their own changes. Blacks here tried to have several meetings (to make changes themselves).

When they finally had one at the Lincoln School (for blacks), they didn't really want to integrate."

But he was quick to add, "We've done pretty good over the years though. We are in a lot better shape than years ago. We can vote and blacks can get involved in politics if they want to."

His eyes lit up, "I've even got a cousin, A.J. Nettles, who is a city councilman in a town near Memphis (Tenn.)."

Although content himself, he added, "Some people aren't going to be satisfied no matter what they get. But then, I guess that's true in any group."

Valentine nuptials join Miller, Valentine

MRS. MICHAEL ROSS VALENTINE

Tammy Jo Miller and Michael Ross Valentine were united in marriage Feb. 14 in the First Baptist Church in Snyder with Rev. Ray Cunningham of Lubbock officiating the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Miller of Fluvanna. Groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Bill Valentine of Snyder and Mr. and Mrs. Larry Tomlin of Bedford.

A Valentine theme graced the centered the altar, decorated with two large red hearts, rippled in satin ribbon. Other candelabra of heart shape, spirals, candletrees and seven branches were decorated with white hearts, red ribbon ruffling, fern, mini carnations and baby's breath.

Two large arrangements of white stock, white gladioli and red anthuriums accented each side of the altar. Brass hurricane pew markers were decorated with small hearts and fresh flowers.

Lighting the candles before the ceremony were Neil Rutherford and Mark Ingelbrigtsen.

Providing the pre-nuptial music were Denise Smith of Lubbock, harpist, and Gary White of Tahoka, pianist. Selections included Vic Valentine, brother of the groom, singing "You Mean More To Me," and duets by Vic Valentine and Bennie Everett, "Dreams of You" and "Nobody Loves Me Like You Do." "Dreams of You" was written and composed by Vic Valentine, for the couple. Harpist played "The Lord's Prayer" after the couple lighted the unity candle.

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore an original gown by Phyliss for Bianchi. It was of white bridal satin and imported lace with a fitted bodice, elongated of imported re-embroidered Alencon lace, enhanced with tiny seed pearls and pailletts. A Vermicellie beaded lace necklace rested on the sweetheart open neckline. The gown had Victorian sleeves of Austrian net and satin, appliqued with lace. Her bouffant skirt with matching lace on the hemline, fell into a chapel length train.

A wreath of matching lace, silk roses and baby's breath held her long veil of imported English illusion. Rosettes of seed pearls dotted the length of the veil. The bride carried a long cascade bouquet of white orchids, stephonotis, mini carnations, baby's breath and springeria fern.

Keeping with tradition, the brides gown served as something new. Something old and borrowed from her grandmother, Mrs. Dewey Everett, was three gold pens linked by a chain. They are 83 years old and worn by the bride's mother in her wedding. Her blue garter served as something blue. It was a gift from Kim Wills and was offered to the bridal attendants for their weddings. Also for something old, the bride carried hankercheifs belonging to Olive Smith, Mrs. Bill King and the late Mrs. R. Clyde Miller, grandmothers of both the bride and groom. Pennies were worn in the bride's shoe, minted in the years of the bride and groom births.

Serving as the maid of honor was Becky Miller, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids serving were Kim Wills of Fluvanna, Kelly Williams and Roxie Wolf of Gail and Sandra Campos of Dallas.

Bridal attendants wore long dresses by Phyliss for Bianchi, of white taffeta with a draped bodice and one draped shoulder caught with a white taffeta rosette. The skirts were full with the waistline defined with wide red taffeta sashes bowed in back.

They all carried cascading bouquets of red anthuriums, mini carnations, baby's breath and springeria fern accented with red satin streamers.

Serving as best man was Vic Valentine, brother of the groom. Groomsmen were Weldon Hurt of Snyder, Ronnie Dahl of Lewisville, Todd Whatley of Comanche and Marc Valentine of Bedford. Ushers serving were Jack Fallin of Denton, Neil Rutherford and Mark Ingebrigtsen of Lubbock, and Brandon King of Lewisville.

The men wore white tuxedos with red satin cumberbuns and bow ties. Boutonnieres were red carnation and baby's breath.

Flower girls were Autumn Smith of Snyder and Kevyn Wilson of Carrolton. They wore long, full-skirted, white organza dresses. A ruffle formed a rounded yoke on bodice with puff sleeves. The skirts had a drape effect around the bottom tier with tiny red roses accenting each drape. They carried white baskets filled with tiny red rose buds, white net and satin ribbon streamers. Their headpieces were halos of soft white silk petals and delicate touches of red flowers with satin streamers.

Donnie Valentine of Lubbock served as ring bearer. He was dressed in fashion with the groom's attendants. The pillow was edged in white lace, dotted with seed pearls and paillettes. The couple's names and wedding date was hand embroidered in red and a large "V" in cross stitch, centered on the pillow. It was made by Anna Mae Perry.

Distributing wedding programs to the guests were Clay Miller of Fluvanna and Wes Everett of Snyder. They were attired like the groom's attendants.

Registering guests were Rachel Everett of Snyder and Lisa Smith of Gail. The bride's book was a gift from Ritch Miller of Palma De Mallorca, Spain, uncle of the bride.

Mother of the bride wore a long red satin jacket dress. The jacket was beaded in crystal bugle beads and had a full skirt accented with cumberbun waistline. The groom's mother wore a long red chiffon dress with full skirt and sheer long sleeves. The waist was accented with a soft chiffon tie. Both mothers lit the single candles to the unity candle prior to the ceremony. Their corsages were white orchids.

The bride presented roses to her mother and the groom's mother.

The reception was held at Willow Park Inn with the atrium decorated in a red and white Valentine theme. Large hearts donned the upper flower boxes and stairways. A lighted red heart float centered the swimming pool, decorated with votive candles, greenery, red anthuriums, red carnations, white starburst mums and baby's breath. Other floating candles dotted the pool area.

Denise Smith, harpist, played selections from the staircase beneath the lighted willow tree.

The bride's table was covered with a white taffeta cloth made by the bride's mother. A four branch candelabra arranged with red anthuriums, carnations, white roses, white starburst mums, baby's breath and mixed greenery, highlighted the table along with the silver punch bowl and bridal cake.

Rising above a flowing fountain with cupid columns, the three tiered wedding cake was surrounded by five heart shaped satellite cakes on fillagree stands connected by lacy bridges and stairways. The cake was decorated in the Australian method of rolled fondant icing, dainty string work and candy lace arches accented by the minature bouquets of white tulle, dainty red silk flowers, tiny candy white roses with red satin ribbon. Topping the cake was a porcelin bride and groom standing in a heart shaped archway surrounded by lacy white and red silk flowers. Cupids on the stairways and between the cake columns, carried out the Valentine theme.

Serving at the bride's table were Susie Bartalacci and Heather Tully of Lubbock.

The groom's table was covered with a red cloth with all brass appointments. The centerpiece was a brass boot filled with greenery and brass candle holders. The two tiered chocolate cake was accented by a circlet of deep chocolate rosses, draped in a heart shape over the corner of the cake. The top tier proclaimed a heart of white chocolate surrounded by chocolate roses and centered was the initial "V". Serving at the groom's table were Sabra Holland of Houston and Teresa Colbert of Lubbock.

The cakes were created by Beth Hicks of Snyder with the church and reception flowers and decor, created by Jo Ann and Speedy Prince of Snyder. Bridal consultant was Frances Lane of Haskell.

The couple was honored with a rehearsal dinner, hosted by the groom's parents, held at Snyder Country Club on Feb. 13. On Jan. 11, the couple was honored with a bridal shower at the Borden School with 28 hostesses. A bridesmaid luncheon was held Feb. 14 at the Dodson House with several hostesses. Held in Lubbock by the bridal attendants, a bridal party was given on Feb. 7. The groom was honored with a party by his attendants Feb. 13 and luncheon Feb. 14.

Members of the houseparty were Jacqueline Wills, Netta Jarrett, Pat Murphy, Anna Mae Perry, Gloria Griffin, Marge Toombs, Paula Lewis, Jane Ridenour, Jean Everett, Lou Everett, Billie Everett, Ann Everett, Mary Miller, Jenny Miller and Blanche Hamilton.

Graduating from Borden High School, the bride attended Texas Tech University and graduated from Western Texas College. She will be attending Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene.

The groom is a graduate of Lewisville High School and Western Texas College. He attended Texas Tech University and is employed by AAA Exterminating Company in Abilene.

The couple will honeymoon in Hawaii before making their home in Abilene.

Students sell

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (AP) — Faced with a shrinking pool of college-bound youths, institutions of higher education are using sophisticated marketing techniques to lure top students.

"We no longer sit back and take applications that come to us," said a recruiter from Wesleyan College here. "Now, we go out and talk about the kind of education our school offers and why it's preferable to other selective schools."

To sell their school, college recruiters go to college fairs and alumni receptions, send out mass mailings and video slide shows to high schools, arrange daily campus tours, and hold science symposiums on campus.

A great earthquake shook Quebec and New England in 1663.

Computer scents

The French are trying a new use for the computer, programming it to choose your perfect fragrance. Designed by Hyperlog of France, the special computer takes the answers given to a series of questions and produces a personality profile.

It then matches you with two to four perfume suggestions. This leaves the final choice up to you — the French believe in a personal touch, computer or not. The idea is to get a better basis for your choice.

Doctors dislike such exercises as jogging because the bouncing movements can injure joints. Nor do they approve of "weekend" exercise.

Ridgway's Paratroopers by Clay Blair. Gripping battlefield narrative is the heart of this book. Salerno, Naples, Anzio, Normandy, the Battle of the Bulge and the crossing of the Rhine were the historic operations in which Ridgeway's Paratroopers would win glory.

This is the personal story of Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, one of America's ablest World War II corps commanders. It is also the first complete and unvarnished history of America's paratroopers and the important part they played in World War II.

Vows united Tate, Wolf

Teresa Lynn Tate became the bride of Randell Eugene Wolf in the 37th Street Church of Christ on Dec. 27. with Rev. Don Campbell officiating the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. John D. Tate of Snyder and Mr. and Mrs. Don Wolf of Rangely, Colo., formerly of Snyder.

Vows were exchanged before an altar trimmed with an arch. A tree stood with nine candles on each side of the arch. David Tate, brother of the bride, and Andy Elkins lighted the candles while the theme from "Ice Castles" was sung.

MR. AND MRS. RANDELL EUGENE WOLF

Given in marriage by her brother, Jerry Tate of Houston, the bride wore a full length gown of white satin with a center inset of pleated Marquisette. The empire bodice had embroidery mingled with pearls around a scalloped neckline. The full length sleeves of Marquisette had lace flowers and pearls scattered down the sleeves. The full length veil had lace flowers and pearls scattered down the front and attached to a lace trimmed cap.

The bride carried a bouquet of white silk carnations and burgundy silk roses. The bouquet was accented with burgundy and grey bows and streamers with love knots. The bouquet was made by Christina Rameriez.

Keeping with tradition as something borrowed, the bride borrowed her wedding dress from Deneice Cordwell. Her pearl necklace and earrings were something new, a gift from Randy and Patti Tate, her brother and sister-in-law. A handkerchief belonging to her grandmother, Pinkie Tate, served as something old. The bride chose the blue garter as something blue. Pennies were worn in the bride's shoe, minted in the years of the couple's births.

Serving as matron of honor was Kathie Holdren of Abilene, sister of the bride. Judy Leatherwood, cousin of the bride, served as bridesmaid.

Bridal attendants wore floor length dresses made of burgundy satin with three pleats in the front and long sleeves. The yoke had burgundy lace overlay. The dresses were made by the mother of the bride.

The bridesmaids carried white lace fans trimmed with burgundy silk roses and grey ribbons.

Serving as flower girls were nieces of the bride, Monica and Amy Holdren of Abilene. The dresses were similiar to the bridal attendants. The girls wore burgundy wreaths with grey streamers. They carried white wicker baskets trimmed with grey ribbons and filled with burgundy petals. The baskets were made by Christine Rameriez.

The groom wore a full tail white tuxedo with a boutonniere of burgundy and white baby roses.

Tracy Holladay of Kermit, served as best man. Groomsman was Jay Holladay of Lubbock, the groom's brother. Ushers serving were Mike Wolf, brother of the groom, Andy Elkins and David Tate.

The men wore grey full tail tuxedos with boutonnieres of a burgundy rose, made by Christina Rameriez.

Mother of the bride wore a street length pink dress. The groom's mother wore a green street length dress. Corsages were burgundy baby roses with a white carnation in the center. The corsages were made by Christina Rameriez.

As the mothers were being seated, "We've Only Just Begun" was sung.

The reception was held in the family center at the church. Registering guests was Jamie Horbin. The table was trimmed with a white cloth with the throw-away bouquet centering the table. The wedding book, burgundy pen and flower girl's baskets accented the table decorations.

The bride's table was covered with a white tablecloth. The centerpiece was a large brandy snifter with a wreath of flowers and grey candle in the center. The three-tiered cake was trimmed with burgundy flowers. The cake was made by Doris Henderson.

Accenting the table were grey napkins and champagne glasses with the couple's names and wedding date engraved. Mints, nuts, coffee and punch were served by Connie Henderson and Brandi Thompson.

Out of town guests were from Abilene, Houston, Lubbock, San Angelo, Midland, Austin, San Antonio, Big Spring, Kermit and Rangely, Colo.

A rehearsal dinner was hosted by the groom's parents at the Snyder Country Club on Dec. 26.

Graduating from Snyder High School, the bride attended Western Texas College and Angelo State University. She will attend Northwestern Colorado Community College.

Graduating from Snyder High School, the groom is employed by a subsidiary of Shell.

The couple honeymooned in Vail, Colo. before making their home in Rangely, Colo.

A number of farmers in Scurry County may be eligible to praticipate in the Conservation Reserve Program of the recently passed farm bill. Meetings will be held Feb. 25 in Lubbock and Feb. 26 in Abilene to help explain the program to area farmers.

The program is to take erodible cropland out of production and plant it to permanent cover, such as trees and grasses, points out Marvin Ensor, county agent with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

The Extension Service working with the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) and Soil Conservation Service (SCS), is conducting five regional meetings across the state in late February to help farmers better understand opportunities in this program.

The meeting Feb. 25 in Lubbock will be from 9 a.m. until noon at the Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center north of the Lubbock airport. The center is on FM 1294, just east of I-27 at the Shallowater exit. The Abilene meeting Feb. 26 will be from 9 a.m. until noon in the jury assembly room in the new courthouse.

Farmers whose land qualifies for the program (as determined by land classifications by the SCS) will be eligible for annual rental payments over the 10-year life of the contract and cost-sharing on cover establishment practices.

According to SCS records, some 11.5 million acres of Texas cropland will qualify for the Conservation Reserve Program. However, only abut 825,000 acres of that will be included in the program this year.

Farmers can check with their local ASCS or SCS office to determine if any of their crop acreage is eligible for the program. A 10-day sign-up period will be held March 3-14 at county ASCS offices.

Once a farmer determines that his cropland is eligible for the program, he must submit a bid for the annual rent payment on the designated acres, Ensor explained. Bids will be reviewed by county and state ASCS personnel, and farmers will then be notified as to whether or not they have been accepted. Annual payments will be limited to $50,000 per producer.

More details about this program also are available at the local SCS or ASCS office, Ensor said.

A strong demand for farm exports helped Latin America record a 3.3 percent growth in agricultural production in 1984, according to the Inter-American Development Bank. This was the highest growth achieved since 1981 when the region's farm output increased 4.9 percent.

Tackling a blocking problem

By James Jacoby

Defender East immediately realized that giving declarer a spade trick would present him with the ninth trick for his no-trump game. So East won the spade king and switched to the seven of clubs, leading that card rather than the two because he did not want to suggest that he held a club honor. He also wanted to be able to lead the nine later. Declarer played low and West made the natural play of the eight. Dummy's ace won and five diamond tricks quickly followed. East discarded his three spades and West discarded two small hearts. Declarer also shed two little hearts and then led a spade. East won the ace and now continued with the nine of clubs. South played low and West had to win the 10. He could cash the king of clubs, but declarer would still retain the queen. What went wrong?

West must stay alert in order to make the right play. If the club seven is the highest club held by East, it does no harm for West to play the club 10 first, and it may help. West should recognize that his partner can hold the club nine, and should therefore unblock his club 10. It's easy to see what will then happen. After taking the second spade, East does play the club nine. Declarer will play low as before. Because West has retained the club eight, he can play it under the nine, and East's last club will be played through declarer's queen, setting the contract.

Q. — You once told about cleaning a varnished piece of furniture with some chemical you said would not harm the varnish finish. Was it lacquer thinner?

A. — No. Lacquer thinner will often harm an old varnish finish. The product mentioned was denatured alcohol.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, bleach, remover, stain, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Editorials-Columns-Cartoons-Look Back-Letters

Every good newspaper needs a motto for the mast.

The "mast," of course, is that element of the front page which announces to the world the paper's name, an endless list of "Advocates," "Banners," "Bugles," "Bulletins," "Chronicles," "Gazettes," "Heralds," "Inquirers," "Journals," "Leaders," "Records," "Telegrams," "Telegraphs," "Times" and "Posts" plus a whole rack of plain old "Newses."

The mast is invaluable, because it not only tells you the day, date, year, volume and number, it also throws in the price of product — in our case 25 cents daily and 30 cents on Sunday.

The best masts have mottos.

The most famous probably belongs to the New York Times, "All the news that's fit to print."

Rolling Stone Magazine coyly referred to this with their own, "All the news that fits."

We worked for a weekly paper once where we joked that the motto should be "All the news that's fitting." The reference was lost to most of the editorial staff, however, and our stab at humor pretty much went over like your standard lead balloon.

In our area, the award for best motto probably goes to the Abilene Reporter-News, to wit, "'Without or with offense to friends or foes we sketch your world exactly as it goes.' — Byron."

Says it all, doesn't it? The lonely yet noble vigil of the newspaper, chronicling daily facts in a world where neither pals nor enemies are given special favors.

It has the extra hook of noting "or with offense," a cute reference to the independent streak which newspapers are famous for.

The smaller dailies normally lean toward slogans which smack of boosterism. These fall into two basic categories, the "leading the way" theme or the "a great place to live" package.

To use two apocryphal examples, the "'Lower San Dusky Democrat,' leading the way for growth in the Upper Middle Fork Belted Region" or the "'Blah County Leader-Press,' a great place to live and the home of Fred (Bad Dog) Ott."

The Snyder Daily News has no motto on the mast — a situation which likely deserves a remedy.

Something like, "To boldly go where no (newspaper) has gone before," to borrow from the opening of the old "Star Trek" series.

We're also partial to the poem "Invictus," which talks about hard times "black as the pit from pole to pole" to end with the rhyme "I thank whatever gods may be for my unconquerable soul."

After a second look, however, these seem a little too heavy on the chest thumping for a small daily newspaper.

Our other ideas to date have been:

—Foolish —"Black and white and read all over."

—Foolproof — "Reporting the news fairly and accurately."

—Foolhardy — "The pen is mightier than the sword. Wanna tangle?"

In the end, we should probably just tell the truth.

"Sixty percent news, 40 percent ads and cheap at twice the price."

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

"When I look at the letter that you wrote to me
It's you that I'm thinking of
As I read the lines that to me were so sweet
I remember our faded love."

There's something about a country dance that brings out the best in West Texas. All you need is a barn, a band and word-of-mouth to make a successful evening.

Time was when a country dance was the only entertainment isolated country folk ever had. Maybe that's the reason the country dance is still cherished as a family time, a friendly time.

Babies miraculously snooze away the night on little pallets, in spite of the noise. Youngsters run in packs and everybody takes turns keeping an eye on the pack for everybody else.

Grandmas take their grandsons out for their first spin around the floor. Shy pre-teens take that first terrifying dance together, trying painfully hard not to step on each other's toes.

Fathers take their teenage daughters out for a whirl. Young lovers move dreamily past, locked in a world of their own. A young married man waltzes past, his pretty wife on one arm, his toddler son on the other.

Very Marrieds move as one to the music, comfortable with each other's rhythm. Old-timers tear past, cutting a swath through the crowd with a lively jitterbug.

"As I think of the past and all the pleasure
we had
As I watch the mating of the dove
And it was in the springtime that we said good-bye
I remember our faded love."

Folks gather around sideline tables piled high with food, to visit and gossip and share tall tales.

..."She'll do anything you ask her to, whether it be cuttin' a calf out of a herd, ropin', or workin' cattle all day long. Then she'll stand purty in a show ring..."

"...He has a habit of offering hot toddies to his guests in cold weather. I stopped off for a visit one day, and I'm halfway home before I realized I was going the wrong way..."

"...I told my wife, 'You know how it is when it comes to getting rid of the cows; one mistake and they're out.' She said, 'Oh yeah? And what do you do with the bulls?'..."

"...I was training a mare for his daughter. I told him, 'She's hard-headed and full of foolishness.' He said, 'The horse, or my daughter?'..."

"I miss you darlin' more and more every day
As heaven would miss the stars above
With every heartbeat I still think of you
And remember our faded love."

Each cowboy has his own way of dancing with a gal, and it's as distinctive as a thumbprint. Sometimes it comes as a surprise. The young man with the pretty wife may hold a girl so loosely and shyly that she may as well be dancing alone.

But the old-timer who never comes to town may cut breathless didoes through the crowd, with a touch as confident and joyous as a bronc rider with a gold buckle.

Some say the country dance is on its way out, that satellite dishes and home computers have taken its place. When I think of the warmth and the laughter and the music still echoing in my head. I hope not

"With every heartbeat I still think of you
And remember our faded love,
And remember our faded love."

Letters to the Editor

To the editor,

On Feb. 21 I will be mailing a letter to President Reagan asking him to support an import tax bill on foreign crude oil. If you have not mailed a letter to Washington, please call 573-5165, to sign mine. If a lot of people should call I will need some volunteers to help get the signatures. Everyone seems to like the idea but you must take action. One elderly lady who signed the letter very sweetly asked 'Who are you?' I explained that I was a royalty owner and owner of a business in Snyder and both were being hurt by falling oil prices. It did my heart good to see someone her age know everything about the problem. Many of our younger people don't know that much about it. But the oil problem is going to hurt everyone so please let us hear from you.

To the editor,

I read the paper Feb. 18 where plans were before the city council to study further the $450,000 project to build a hiker and biker trail from 24th St. to 37th. I understand that both our sub-fire stations are closed, the one on Ave. E and the one on El Paso, because there is no money to hire more personnel. We have two good sub-fire stations and equipment tied up and doing no one any good. The City of Hermleigh has five fire plugs but only one works. Before the county and city spends this money for a hiker-biker trail, looks like we could put some people to work and use the things we have like our fire equipment that would be a big help to our city.

Thank you,

Bergen, Norway offers view of history

BERGEN, Norway (AP) — Most visitors to Bergen, the fjord capital of Norway, will arrive by train from Oslo or by plane from other points.

But those who manage to arrive by boat, on the ferry from Newcastle in England, for instance, will be doing what the Vikings did, and the merchants of the Hanseatic League who followed them. Bergen has for centuries been what it is now, a bustling place. Some of the merchants' houses still stand on the waterfront, or Bryggen.

Bergen is nestled at the foot of mountains and clambers up their sides. Tourists riding the funicular for the view mingle with commuters from homes on the slopes.

Many of the hotels of Bergen are right on the waterfront, within walking distance of most of the things a visitor wants to see and do, and of trains, boats and buses. The public market is here, famed for its fresh fish and bright with flowers, vegetables and fruit. It offers a variety of knicknacks and some interesting jewelry.

Also on the waterfront is a castle which includes King Haakon's Hall, dating from the 13th century, and the Rosenkrantz Tower, originally erected about 1270 as a small, fortified residence for King Magnus the Lawmender. It was remodeled in the 16th century as the "modern" castle of Erik Rosenkrantz, a governor, and is considered one of the most imposing Renaissance buildings in Norway.

During World War II, a German ship with 200 tons of dynamite exploded in the harbor area, severely damaging the tower. But it has been restored, and the interiors returned to their 16th-century "modernity."

Hard by the castle is the Bryggens Museum containing artifacts found when extensive excavation was done right on the spot. It shows what medieval life was like in Bergen and western Norway.

Not far from the waterfront is a park with wide green lawns, a lake with an impressive fountain, and museums, a concert hall and other institutions around it.

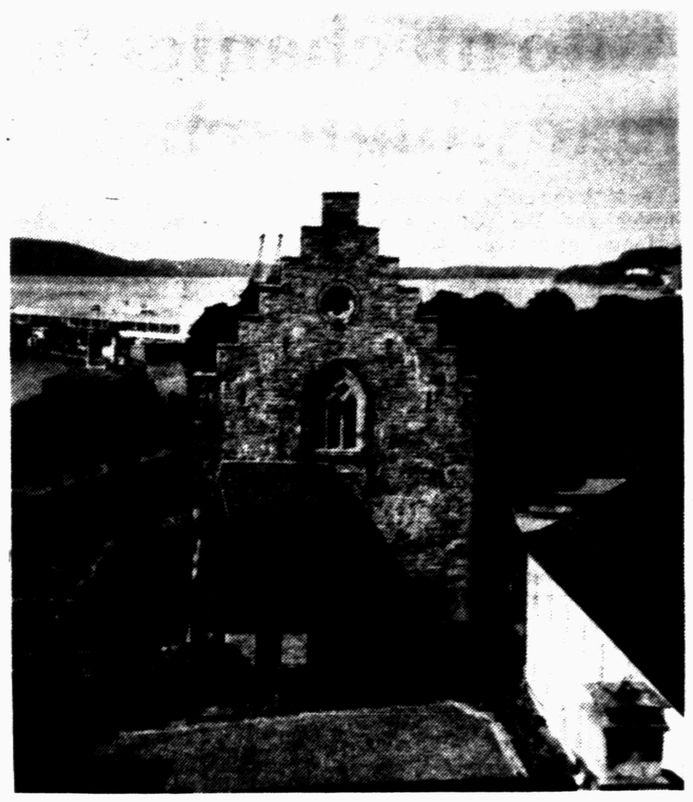
Bergen is the starting point for excursions lasting hours to days — to the fjords, composer Edvard Grieg's home, or the island of Lysoen, where the 19th-century violin virtuoso Ole Bull lived.

It's also the starting point for the one-day "Norway in a Nutshell" do-it-yourself trip on public transportation. A train crosses farmlands and climbs into the mountains to Myrdal, where the traveler changes trains for a trip that is a railroad buff's delight — on the Flam Line.

In the short distance of 12.4 miles, the Flam Line train descends 2,845 feet, in and out of 20 tunnels, from Myrdal to Flam on the Aurland fjord, an arm of the famed Sognefjord. At one point, it pauses to allow passengers to go out on a platform to get a closeup look at Kjosfossen, one of western Norway's most famous waterfalls.

At Flam, it's time to take the ferry on its rounds among some of the villages on the fjord. If the day is one of showers and sun, so much the better, because of the cloud effects, the shadows on the mountains — and the rainbows.

At Gudvangen, the traveler disembarks for the bus to Voss, and then boards the train back to Bergen.



ON THE WATERFRONT–Bergen, a bustling port now as in medieval times, is known as the fjord capital of Norway. This 13th-century King Haakon's Hall is part of the Bergen castle that also includes the Rosenkrantz Tower. (AP Photo)

Closet Dropout Feels Certain That Diploma Will Open Doors

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1986 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am a high school dropout who has been married to a very prominent businessman for four years. I'll never know how I got so lucky.

I want to finish high school and take some kind of job training courses. I enrolled in some night classes once, but I never went because I'm too embarrassed to let our friends know that I never finished high school. It might even be damaging to my husband's career if it became known. My verbal skills are fine, but I am not really educated.

When friends ask me why I don't have some kind of job, I don't know what to say. Without a high school diploma, I can't get the kind of job that would be expected of me in our circle of friends. There must be other people who are in the same position. What should I do?

CLOSET DROPOUT

DEAR DROPOUT: First, get over the idea that it's a disgrace to be a dropout. It's not. Circumstances have prevented many from graduating from high school with their peers. Fortunately, you can pick up where you dropped out without embarrassment. There are adult education classes (nights or days) at your local college. You could even hire a tutor to teach you at home. You're smart enough to know you need more education. Now be brave enough to get it. And good luck.

DEAR ABBY: I realize that women don't like being looked at solely as sex objects, but do women know that men don't like being looked at solely in terms of how much money they have?

I am unemployed and have very little money, and I am tired of being turned down by greedy women. I am 34 years old, fairly good looking and I am still valuable, even if I am broke.

WILLIAM IN BUTLER, PA.

DEAR WILLIAM: Obviously your self-esteem is intact. My hat is off to you. However, all men do not look at women solely as sex objects; neither do all women evaluate men on the basis of their pocketbooks. Please don't tar all women with the same brush.

DEAR ABBY: Can a person who is 5 feet 10 weighing 370 pounds fit into an airplane seat going overseas? Thank you.

BIG IN FLAGSTAFF

DEAR BIG: In some airplanes, a coach seat may not accommodate you, but if you go first class, you should have no problem. It's not your height and weight, it's your girth that could ground you.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I want a divorce and see no reason why we should hire a lawyer. There are no children involved, and we have no property or money to fight over. So what do we need a lawyer for? Or can't we get a divorce without one?

ENOUGH IS ENOUGH IN MARYLAND

DEAR ENOUGH: You can obtain a divorce without a lawyer. This is called a court appearance "pro se" (or "for self"). You will need a copy of a divorce complaint form. Most stationery stores carry them. If you cannot find one, you may be able to get one from the court files by paying for photostating it.

My sources cite an old legal maxim: "A lawyer who represents himself has a fool for a client." This may apply equally to non-lawyers.

I am not recommending a do-it-yourself divorce; I'm simply letting you know that you have the option. Me? I would hire a lawyer and pay him—or her—for what he or she knows. Would I lie to you on George Washington's birthday?

O'Neill to receive H. Truman award

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — U.S. House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, already in line for one award named for President Harry S. Truman, has been picked for another.

Officials here in Truman's hometown have announced that the Massachusetts Democrat will get the Harry S. Truman Award for Public Service on May 9.

O'Neill, 73, who is not seeking re-election after serving in the House since 1952, was named earlier to receive the Harry S. Truman Good Neighbor Award at a luncheon on May 8, Truman's birthday.

Pianist pleases audience still

NEW YORK (AP) — Fifty years to the day after his American debut, pianist Rudolf Serkin showed he still has the style to please an audience at age 82.

Accompanied by the New York Philharmonic Orchestra conducted by Zubin Mehta, Serkin earned a standing ovation after performing Beethoven's "Concerto No. 4 for Piano and Orchestra" before an excited crowd at Avery Fisher Hall on Thursday night.

The Czechoslovakia-born Serkin played the same piece Feb. 20, 1936, when he made his American debut at Carnegie Hall accompanied by the New York Philharmonic conducted by Arturo Toscanini.

Thursday's golden jubilee program was a pension fund benefit for the orchestra and began with Bartok's "Concerto for Orchestra." A program insert contained a copy of the program of 50 years ago.

Backstage after the concert, Columbia Records named Serkin artist laureate.

town than Snyder. When I looked at faces, most of the people had a smile for me. This town will always remain special to me because of the warmth shown.

This weekend I attended a bridal shower and had the pleasure of meeting your women's news reporter, Marla Chisum. I deal with reporters daily and I've never met anyone like her. Everyone was late and she exercised great patience. While waiting she visited with each lady there. When she left she said something to each lady she had met. She made each one feel special. She was the topic of the conversation with her friendliness. This is a very rare personality and I might add, dynamic.

In my business people are quick to criticize or complain so I make a point to let employers know (whether in a newspaper or a grocery store) when I think the employee is doing a good job.

Because of the friendliness I received in Snyder, I get the pleasure of writing several of these letters.

You should be very proud of Marla and your town.

Thank you,

Mary Lanbosa

Dry, heated air in a home or workplace will parch your nose, throat and lungs. Children then are susceptible to croup, nosebleed, middle-ear infection; sinusitis, bronchitis, and asthma in adults. Adding water to the air with a humidifier will correct the problem—30% to 40% humidity is advised.

Auto mechanics benefits many high school students

Through the cooperation of the Snyder and Ira public school systems and the vocational education department of Western Texas College, several students in Snyder and Ira high schools are receiving training in the WTC Automotive Mechanics program under the guidance of Lonnie Buck.

The students register for the AM program in their junior or senior years in high school and receive credits toward graduation. They receive training in all phases of auto repair including electrical systems, electronic ignition and computer diagnosis, automatic transmission repair, brake and steering repair, tune-up and engine overhaul.

Buck, who joined the WTC faculty last fall, is well pleased with the way the program is operating.

"I am impressed by the students I have in the automotive program," he said. "They have exceeded the goals I have set for the high school program at the beginning of the year. I feel they are now working on a college level. I am also very impressed by the amount of cooperation and effort shown by the school districts, the college and the community in vocational training. Parents here show more interest in encouraging their children in making solid plans for the future than in any place I have ever taught."

Some of the students taking the automotive course are making definite plans for the future. Juniors Bill Bell and Brad Gambrell are planning to return to WTC after high school graduation to complete the two-year college program in automotive mechanics and business administration so they can open their own automotive rebuilding shop.

Trish Cooper and Scott Stone are involved in the organization of the tool and parts room. Trish is looking toward employment in the sales and service areas of the automotive field and Scott will be involved in warehousing and merchandising. Both Trish and Scott are using parts and merchandise catalogs donated by local businesses to simulate acutal working conditions.

Buck has a long-time interest in mechanics. He started working as a mechanic for his grandfather at his business, Jess Young's Garage, in San Angelo as a boy. He was no more than five when he was allowed to clean tools and put up parts, and at eight he began to learn the work of a mechanic.

After completing high school in San Angelo, Buck attended San Angelo Junior College (a junior college which is now Angelo State University), Angelo State University, and East Texas State University. He also studied in extension courses from Howard College in Big Spring, Texas A&M University and the University of Texas.

Buck's father had bought Young's Garage from his grandfather and Buck himself later became the owner of the business. He expanded it by adding a parts department.

Along with his interest in mechanics, Buck had a long-time interest in teaching, probably because his mother was a teacher. He hired high school students through the San Angelo school system's work-study program and worked with them in an on-the-job training arrangement. He also worked with veterans developing new skills through a government re-training program. He gave up private business to teach auto mechanics in the San Angelo Angelo school system for about 10 years before making the move to WTC last fall.

"I feel that automotive mechanics students at WTC are provided with an excellent opportunity to train for the future," Buck said. "We look forward to working with some of our high school students as college students in the coming years. I think they will continue to surprise me with their rapid advancement."

Automotive mechanics students who complete the required two-year curriculum earn the Associate in Applied Science degree at Western Texas College.

A safe way to clear a driveway or sidewalk of snow is a work-relax routine. Shovel for only two to three minutes, then pause to enjoy the wintery scene until your pulse and respiration have returned to almost normal. It may take a little longer to finish the chore, but it will be safer and more enjoyable in the long run.

Candy worms are becoming popular

By JOHN WEISS
Rochester Post-Bulletin

WINONA, Minn. (AP) — Gummy Bears by the millions, tens of millions. Squirms by the bag and vat.

Stacks, racks and packs of chewy tart-tasting candies that are so popular nationwide they are crowding the Schuler Chocolates Inc. building in Winona.

Demand for the candies is so great, in fact, and facilities so short that the company is seeking to boost Gummy Bears and Squirm production with a $1.5 million expansion that will add about 45 jobs, said President William Schuler.

The expansion won't add new space to the factory, but will put more equipment in existing space, Schuler said. If done, it will triple production, which is now around a billion Gummy Bears and a quarter billion Squirms a year. Schuler is the first U.S. company to make the candies.

Schuler Chocolates now is owned by Brock Candy Co. of Chattanooga, Tenn.

The story of how the Gummy Bears — so popular in Europe for so long — came to be made in Winona actually starts in 1980 when Schuler's son, Kurt, now 17, made a comment.

As William Schuler tells the story, his son came home from junior high one day and said his German club was selling the Bears, then produced in Europe, to raise money. "Those Gummy Bears are great, you should make them," he told his father.

Schuler knows a good idea when he hears it. His market research continued when he asked two clerks at a Twin Cities candy counter what candy sold very well, but which surprised them in sales. "They looked at each other and they both said at the same time 'Gummy Bears,' " Schuler said.

The company did more indepth investigation and verified the demand.

But there was one problem. Though the little candy bears and worm-like Squirms seem easy to make, it is actually very difficult to get the right tartness and texture, Schuler said.

So Schuler Chocolates worked for about a year to get the candy right and continues to work on improvements, Schuler said.

Some of the testing involved his son's friends and students at colleges his older children were attending. Schuler would send them batches of different attempts and his children would give them to friends for an opinion, he said. The Brock Co. also employed professional tasters for added insurance.

"For some reason or other it, (the candy) never caught on in this country," he said. But now, Gummy Bears and Squirms are big sellers and supply can't keep up with demand.

Once the market was explored initially, the success didn't surprise Schuler. "I think they are a great piece of candy," he said. "They have a good texture, they are fun to eat."

They come in eight fruit flavors, and Schuler says because of the way they are made, "they can tolerate more intense flavors."

Schuler Chocolates was founded in 1906 in Winona by Schuler's father, Charles C. Schuler, and his grandfather, Charles P. Schuler. It was sold to Brock more than a decade ago, and the company now has annual sales of about $10 million.

'Cupid' likes to arrange romances

EDITOR'S NOTE — Milton Fisher is a cupid from Connecticut with an astonishing record for arranging romances that wind up at the altar. When that happens, he says, "it's like winning the lottery, the Kentucky Derby and an Oscar all wrapped up in one prize."

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In the tough and competitive world of New York City, Milton Fisher is an attorney, president of a small investment banking firm, author of two books, teacher of a course on creativity, a man who successfully analyzes mergers and acquisitions.

He's also an incurable romantic, a Manhattan matchmaker, a commuter train cupid. And his arrows are usually true to the mark.

Fisher, who simply thinks married is better than single, takes responsibility for 27 marriages, not one of which has ended in divorce.

It's not a business, it's a labor of love. Fisher, who commutes to Manhattan from Connecticut, doesn't ask people upon first meeting what they do for a living. Or, inanely, what Zodiac sign they are. Instead, he asks them if they're single. And if they are, Fisher will do his darndest to remedy that.

"I work on the premise that every unmarried woman is a sleeping princess waiting for Prince Charming to waken her to life, and that every bachelor is a lonely soul desperately looking for Miss Right," says Fisher. "I've yet to meet a man looking for Ms. Right."

One of the first questions he asks an unmarried acquaintance is whether brains or good looks are most important.

"Ninety percent say both, but that's a cop-out," he replies.

Fisher recently arranged a date for a couple who both had been widowed. They were both lovely 70-year-olds.

"He complained that everything would be fine if she would just wear a little makeup and maybe dress up a little bit more," recalls Fisher, who also acts as coach once the introduction is accomplished. "I mentioned this to her and she took great umbrage and that was the end of it."

Fisher loves singles who will agree to a blind date.

"You have to think of it as a high adventure filled with excitement," he says. "It calls for a certain intrepidness, a certain zest for life." But for those "who would no more go out on a blind date than use someone else's toothbrush" he falls back on other strategies.

Once he arranged for two people to be judges together at a Beaux Arts Ball. They miraculously discovered each other. But Fisher fooled no one. He got a New Year's card from the man with a single word: "Thanks."

Fisher listens patiently to the prospective blind date's list of specifications ... tall, sexy, cultured, wholesome like my mom and dad, elegant, good-looking, etc. He then promptly ignores all that and proceeds on his own intuitive way.

One of his books was called "Intuition: How to Use It for Success and Happiness." It was translated into four languages. Except for the chapter on sex, which was translated into eight tongues. His other book was "How to Make Big Money in the Over-the-Counter Market."

Fisher recommends matchmaking as a hobby. "When it works, it's like winning the lottery, the Kentucky Derby and an Oscar all wrapped up in one prize."

Poetically, Fisher himself got caught by a matchmaker who may not have his track record, but she matched the matchmaker.

Fisher was happily married for over 20 years when his wife died. He spent two years as a single man, dated 30 to 40 women, but had not met Miss Right.

Transplant field now faces many problems

EDITOR'S NOTE — Dr. Thomas E. Starzl, a pioneer in transplanting human organs, says the 1980s will be remembered in medical history "as the time when transplantation and all the dreams that people had about it will really come to fruition." But there are also some problems not related to surgery that have to be dealt with.

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Doctors have been transplanting human organs for two decades or so, but the practice has accelerated spectacularly in the mid-1980s, thanks largely to the introduction of a drug that stops rejection of organs.

Concomitant with that growth, however, problems have arisen that have more to do with human priorities than with medical techniques.

First, there has been a proliferation of transplant centers since the federal Food and Drug Administration approved for general use the potent immune-suppressant drug cyclosporine in late 1983.

With that came more transplants and a growing competition for available organs, livers, kidneys, hearts, pancreases.

That gave rise to reports of questionable practices:

—The favoring of those who could pay more being shoved ahead of others on the priority list.

—The export of American organs to other countries while the waiting lists in the United States remained long.

—Illegal traffic in organs gathered overseas from poor people willing to sacrifice one of their two kidneys for money.

How rampant those practices are remains to be proved. But clearly in the eyes of some who have shepherded the transplant program from its pioneering days, there are dangers ahead that need to be dealt with.

One of those pioneers is Dr. Thomas E. Starzl who came from the University of Colorado to start a transplant program at the University of Pittsburgh five years ago.

From 1981 through 1985, Starzl and other surgeons at the University of Pittsburgh transplanted 634 livers, 768 kidneys, 198 hearts, 32 heart-lungs, 16 pancreases and three single lungs. Thirty-two times they transplanted a heart and lungs simultaneously, three times a heart and liver.

In 1985 alone, 250 liver, 176 kidney, 82 heart, 13 heart-lungs, seven pancreas, two single lung and one heart-liver transplants were performed.

Starzl became one of two U.S. surgeons authorized to use cyclosporine in 1979. He perfected the technique of using the experimental drug and brought that expertise and that authorization with him when he came to Pittsburgh from Denver.

"Pittsburgh became the only place that had carte blanche for cyclosporine for any organ," Starzl said. But with the general release of the Swiss drug, things have changed.

In 1985, 35 other medical centers transplanted livers, 70 centers were transplanting hearts, 180 transplanting kidneys and 20 using pancreases. Most of these began after the drug became generally available in 1983.

"It's an amazing proliferation of a new field," Starzl explained during a recent interview. "My feeling has been that the '80s will be remembered in medical history as the time when transplantation and all the dreams that people had about it will really come to fruition.

"Look at what's happened. My God, here in one place, this place (in 1985) we did 250 liver transplants. That's almost inconceivable. It took 10 years for the world to do that many liver transplants before. The numbers are staggering."

Brian Broznick, organ procurement coordinator for the Pittsburgh Transplant Foundation, says it seems new transplant centers are opening every day, "even in places you wouldn't believe."

"What's happening is we're having centers perform transplants in very few numbers with very little experience in the field," said Dr. Oscar Salvatierra Jr., president of the United Network for Organ Sharing. "We may end up in a free-for-all, scrambling for a short supply of organs."

The nonprofit network links 180 transplant centers and laboratories which match tissue for transplantation.

"The number of organs is the same as it was five or six years ago," said Dr. David Winter of Sandoz Pharmaceuticals Corp., the Swiss manufacturer of cyclosporine.

Twenty to 30 heart transplant centers easily could fill the nation's needs, Salvatierra said. That's about one-third the existing number.

In Pittsburgh, surgeons have won hospital approval for precedent-setting, multi-organ transplants. They're also studying ways to prolong the preservation of donor organs.

Surgeons at other established transplant centers are seeking an alternative to cyclosporine, which patients must take every day all their lives. The drug costs about $6,000 a year and has numerous side effects, including excessive hair growth, facial puffiness and trembling.

Patients should be able to tell where they're likely to get the best possible results, Salvatierra said. "With the proliferation of transplant centers, the patient doesn't know that now. It's just another hospital. It's like going in for an appendectomy or a gall bladder operation."

'Miracle' diet isn't healthy

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I was given a diet by my local hospital. It guarantees a loss of 10 pounds a week and seems to consist mostly of saltine crackers, hot dogs, peanut butter and ice cream. The description says it has been proven safe. Could you comment on this diet?

DEAR READER — I have several objections to the diet in question. It is a 1,000-calorie, high-fat diet. That in itself may be harmful, in view of recent attention focused on the dangers of dietary cholesterol and other fats.

Proponents of the diet claim sustained weight losses of 10 pounds a week. In my opinion, a patient who loses 10 pounds a week is going to lose substantial amound of protein, too, which is unhealthy.

Finally, this diet is not suitable for the long-term treatment of obesity because it will result in malnutrition.

I think it makes more sense for weight-conscious people to follow a nutritious diet that will enable them to lose pounds (average: two pounds per week) and eventually maintain an appropriate body weight. In my view, the best diet for this purpose is low in fat and simple carbohydrates (sugars) and high in protein, vegetables and fruits.

To give you more information, I'm sending you a free copy of my newsletter, WEIGHT CONTROL THROUGH CALORIE CONTROL. Other readers who would like a copy should send 75 cents plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2597, Cincinnati, OH 45201. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have a very personal problem. My penis, when erect, is only 2 inches long. I've tried all kinds of mail order devices but to no avail. I'm 24, and this is a great embarrassment. I have a 2-year-old son and don't want him to go through what I have. My wife is always saying I am unable to satisfy her. Do you have any suggestions?

DEAR READER — Yours is not only a personal problem, it is an unusual one as well. Although the chances are good that your son will not inherit your difficulty, this reassurance may do little to alleviate your psychological pain. I think you should see a urologist in a teaching center. In conjunction with other specialists, the doctor may be able to offer you surgical options that can enlarge your penis.

I hope your wife is more understanding than she appears to be. It seems to me that she is reinforcing your feelings of embarrassment. You have the gift of each other and a healthy child; that is a great deal to be thankful for. I hope she can learn to accentuate the positive.

Send your questions to Dr. Gott in care of this newspaper at P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101. Due to volume of mail, individual questions cannot be answered. Questions of general interest will be answered in future columns.

'New medicine' is bad news

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

Here is a true story. It happened to me and, to one degree or another, it will happen to every practicing doctor in this country. Unfortunately, that means it may happen sooner or later to every American adult 65 years or older.

My patient is an 80-year-old man who is active, vibrant, single and quite able to fend for himself — except when he has an attack of bronchial asthma. This past New Year's Day, he called me because he hadn't slept the night before due to difficulty breathing. His self-administered medicine had been ineffective. I met him in the emergency room of the local hospital; I suspected he needed a form of treatment that was available only at the hospital: a machine-powered aerosol to open his breathing passages.

My suspicions were correct. On examination, he had moderately severe airway restriction. This was helped by the machine treatment. After he began breathing more comfortably, I offered him the option of remaining in the hospital. I feared that once he returned home, he would experience another attack of breathing spasm. He said he preferred to wait, so we compromised. I increased his asthma medicine, and he promised to call me later in the day if he experienced breathing problems.

Later that day, he did call back. He was quite breathless and was certain he would not make it through the night without help. We agreed on hospitalization. That evening he was admitted and had a couple of machine treatments. I altered the dose and schedule of his pills. He was able to sleep.

In the morning, he was more comfortable, but still showed signs of breathing difficulty. He clearly needed another 24 hours of observation and treatment.

In the past, the major part of my job would have been completed.

My further responsibilites would have consisted of stabilizing the patient and making sure that discharge planning included a few days of visiting-nurse supervision, followed by an office call to establish appropriate outpatient medication schedules.

However, this is not the past. In 1986, I am required to notify a government agency, known as a peer review organization (PRO), that my Medicare patient required urgent admission. I had to obtain a certification number, a type of bureaucratic permission, before the admission would be approved and the hospital paid. This was my first direct contact with a PRO representative. The telephone conversation went something like this:

"Hello, this is Dr. Gott. I admitted a patient yesterday and would like a certification number, please."

"Yes. How do you spell it?"

"What?"

"Your name."

"Oh. G-O-T-T."

"What's the patient's name?"

I gave it.

"Medicare number?"

I gave it.

"Date of birth?"

I gave it.

"Diagnosis?"

"Acute bronchial asthma."

"Why does he have to be in the hospital?"

"Because he can't breathe. He needed treatment."

"Did you do blood gases?"

"Not reported yet."

"Is he getting intravenous therapy?"

"No. So far he hasn't needed it."

"Well, what are you doing?"

"Giving oral bronchodilators, aerosolized treatment by nebulizer and cortisone."

"He can do that as an outpatient. I don't see that he needs hospitalization."

"He can't function at home. He's 80 and lives alone. He requires inhalation therapy."

"I still don't think he needs to be in the hospital."

"Well, I'm sorry you feel that way. We tried outpatient therapy and it didn't hold him at home. Are you going to refuse him?"

"I guess not ... I don't know ... all right, here is your number."

"Thank you. Goodbye."

I didn't feel comfortable about that transaction. I wasn't prepared for it. But I will be the next time. I'll learn to play the game, to use knee-jerk-reflex words that will trigger approval. I won this round. Will I win the next? I was left with the disquieting realization that this new money-oriented system called admission certification is not in the patient's best interest. Yes, hospital costs have escalated, however, is the patient well-served by having a hospitalization accepted or rejected by a faceless voice?

Pretty soon, this certification system may be universal. Physicians may have to develop the skills of trial attorneys. As well as relying on your doctor's medical judgment, you'll have to be darned sure he or she has another talent: the ability to convince a faraway administrator that you do, indeed, need hospital care. Welcome to medical practice, 1986.

Send your questions to Dr. Gott in care of this newspaper at P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101. Due to volume of mail, individual questions cannot be answered. Questions of general interest will be answered in future columns.

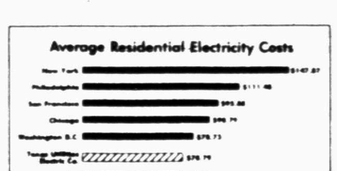
HARD WORK HELPS KEEP THE COST OF ELECTRICITY DOWN.



Our commitment to controlling the cost of electricity is paying off. We haven't said much lately about all the things we're doing to keep the cost of electricity as low as possible. That isn't because we haven't been working hard. We have been, and it's that hard work that gets the job done.

You pay less for the electricity you use than many people in the United States, which is an important factor contributing to the economic growth of the area.

We've accomplished this with strict cost-control management; with low-cost strategies for meeting future needs; by making maximum use of lower-cost Texas lignite coal for generating fuel; and by taking advantage of current market conditions to lower the cost of natural gas fuel.

Meeting the electrical requirements of one of the fastest-growing areas in the nation, while holding down the cost of electricity to attract new industry and jobs to our area, requires planning, commitment and plain old Texas hard work. That's how we're doing the job.

Fox hunting said tradition to some

EDITOR'S NOTE — In the Laurel Mountains of western Pennsylvania, fox hunting, or riding to the hounds, is a tradition whose 200-year-old English roots are carefully preserved. "There's a sense of ceremony in this, and we don't have much ceremony left in this country," explains one fox hunt fan.

By Tara Bradley
Associated Press Writer

LIGONIER, Pa. (AP) — Guided by a bugler and spurred on by cries of tallyho, about 40 fox hunters clad in blazers and felt caps gallop furiously over a ridge behind a pack of howling hounds.

The spooked fox manages to escape, its scent mingling with a herd of dairy cows and several curious deer, but no one seems particularly discouraged.

"The sport is in the chase, not the kill," explains Tom Slater, master of the Rolling Rock Westmoreland Hunt Club. "And we had a good run. The hounds hunted especially well."

Here in the Laurel Mountains of western Pennsylvania, riding to the hounds is the grand obsession of doctors, lawyers, veterinarians, homemakers, business executives and high school students alike.

Hunt club members ride and ride and ride — on Wednesdays, Saturdays and holidays — from August till March. Only the severest of snow or rainstorms will halt an outing.

"On the day of a hunt, the world stops," says Carlene Gnazzo, 32, of Gibsonia, whose husband, Joseph, a steel company president, rides with the club at least twice a week. "You couldn't even die the day of a hunt because no one would come and see you."

"These people are crazy," says Jackie Harris, 39, of Pittsburgh, a self-proclaimed "hunt groupie" or "hilltopper" who drives with friends from hilltop to hilltop to catch a glimpse of the chase.

"You have to be to get up at the crack of dawn, saddle up a horse and chase a pack of dogs — I mean hounds."

Hounds are never called dogs, just as a geologist never calls a rock a stone or a sailor never calls a ship a boat. It's part of the rigid etiquette of a pastime steeped in tradition.

Fox hunting began here when Richard King Mellon, the noted industrialist-banker from Pittsburgh, founded the Rolling Rock Hunt Club in 1921 at the family estate in Ligonier.

In 1972, the Westmoreland Hunt Club, based in nearby Greensburg, joined with Rolling Rock when much of the club's hunt country was shrunk by encroaching housing.

Hunting grounds consist of about 20 square miles of rolling mountains dotted with hardwood forests, crystal streams and tidy estates. Most property owners in the area allow hunting. Some even lower fences so the horses can easily jump them.

"A fox's paradise, all these old hills," says Lovell Stickley, the club's retired huntsman, as he watches the hunt from a nearby hilltop.
