Improvements okayed for bait stand

By LESLIE ABRAMS
Staff writer

FULTON — The council approved a motion to make improvements in the bait/concession stand at L.E. Casterline Fishing Pier during a special meeting Tuesday evening, April 19. Alderman Elgin Dietz made the motion to install the necessary items, such as sinks, restrooms and a septic tank, in order to comply with state health requirements.

The motion, which was seconded by Alderwoman Pat Loflin, came in response to a lack of interest on the part of prospective concessionnaires. When the stand was let for bids for a concessionnaire last month, no bids were received and the most common complaint was that there are not adequate water and septic facilities available at the stand.

The council had proposed adding restrooms, a septic tank, hot and cold running water, four sinks, cabinets and a window, all of which would then become part of the building, if approved.

The funds to pay for the improvements, which Fulton Mayor L. E. Casterline estimates will run approximately $7,000, would come from surplus monies. Town Secretary Lucille Hinson estimated that the town currently has approximately $29,000 in surplus funds.

Dietz told council members that the improvements should be made now, so the future concessionnaire — and the town — does not miss the tourist trade for the entire summer.

Audience member Jack Carter told the council that it is their responsibility to put in water and septic tank connections, but that the concessionnaire would be responsible for making all the other improvements. Alderwoman Lynelle Hunt agreed, saying this was a dangerous precedent to be setting.

The motion to make the improvements passed 3-2, with Hunt and Alderman Leslie Cole dissenting.

Also during the special meeting, the second reading of the town's two traffic-related ordinances was conducted. One of the ordinances is an agreement between the State Highway Department and Fulton for installation, maintenance and enforcement of a traffic signal at the intersection of Hwy. 35 and Cactus St. The ordinance also facilitates the future installation of traffic signals. The other ordinance lowers the speed limit on Hwy. 35 from the south town limits to one mile north of the north town limits.

After the special meeting, a workshop was held to discuss the proposed zoning ordinance. Before any discussion of the proposed ordinance, however, the council heard from Ken Pagans, an extension agent with the marine advisory service.

Pagans told the council of $3.25 million in available grant funds to be disbursed by the Texas Parks & Wildlife Department and what types of recreational projects were likely to meet with TP & WD approval.

Fulton is interested in applying for a grant to fix up the park area near Fulton Harbor. The town would like to put in a path for walking, jogging and bicycling down by the waterfront, improve the picnic areas and make other outdoor improvements.

Pagans told the council that he would help with the application, which should be made no later than the end of May. The project will be discussed further at another special meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday, April 26.

Zoning Committee Chairman Charles Belaire and committee members Elaine Faulkner and Jean Jenkins were on hand to discuss the proposed zoning ordinance with council and audience members. Articles 7 through 15 were discussed during the workshop, which leaves the portion concerning mobile homes and recreational vehicle parks still to be discussed in a future workshop.

The first point of controversy concerned height regulations, discussed in Article 7. The ordinance limits the height of buildings to 35 feet or two-and-a-half stories in the business district and in all three residential districts. Carter challenged this regulation, saying Oak Shore Towers, which received Fulton council approval, was well over 100 feet.

The question came down to whether or not high-rises are desirable in Fulton. Several audience members protested the height regulations, saying they would strangle growth in the Fulton area. "Are we trying to kill Fulton or trying to let it grow," asked Ottie Mundine.

New Rockport docks are ready

By TED NORMAN
Managing Editor

"They are ready to go and we are renting them now." Those were the words of a happy Aransas County Harbor Master Bernie DeForest as he spoke of the 32 new docks recently completed in Rockport Harbor.

DeForest said he has already rented 24 of the new docks and he said the waiting list at the Aransas County Navigation District office in Rockport isn't as long as it used to be.

The harbor master said the new docks will be occupied mainly by sailboats and small pleasure craft and a few small shrimp boats. "It will sure look beautiful out there with all those sailboats," said DeForest.

Construction of the new boat slips was approved for bids in an ACND meeting Jan. 4. Bids were opened and let at a Feb. 1 ACND meeting.

Completion of the project was delayed slightly because of a conflict with the electrical service to the docks.

Funds of $2,000 were approved for the electrical service by the ACND commissioners at their March 5 meeting but DeForest explained that some problems arose during the project.

He said he had asked for, and received, $2,000 to wire the dock for electrical service based on a similar job he did at the Fulton Harbor for about the same cost.

But after he began the electrical wiring job Gary Deason, an electrical contractor in Rockport, told DeForest the method he was using for the electrical system is unsafe. According to DeForest, a Rockport City electrical inspector later came to the harbor and agreed that the job was not being done according to code and that construction on the project had to stop.

> 'It will sure look beautiful out there with all those sailboats.'

DeForest says the project was later continued, following the electrical code and today the 32 new docks and complete and ready to be used with electrical service.

The harbor master says the electrical wiring job ended up costing about $7,500 for the 32 new slips.

The ACND has a proposal approved to rewire all of the docks at Rockport Harbor soon. DeForest, when asked what the delay was, said he didn't know. Asked how much that job will cost, DeForest said he didn't know but he knew it was going to be expensive.

DeForest said he thought there might be a problem in using the plans Deason submitted to the commissioners and that an electrical engineer might have to be called in before the Rockport rewire job can begin.

Asked why the Fulton Harbor electrical system is unsafe DeForest said, "I don't understand electricity but it's something about someone turning on the water and the electricity at the same time and being electrocuted.

DeForest said that he believes the Rockport Harbor rewire will be a good job when it is completed.

Park facilities survey sought

By PAT BLAIR
Staff writer

Rockport's board of parks and recreation has voted to seek the city council's approval for a site survey of park facilities in the city with an eye toward applying for grant funds to upgrade the parks and recreation system.

The vote was taken in Wednesday night's meeting of the park board following a presentation by Ken Pagans, Texas A&M Research and Extension Center parks and recreation specialist, who spoke of the current availability of grant funds and the need for the city to apply as soon as possible if officials want to try for any of that money.

Following the board's vote last month to pursue a survey of the recreational needs and desires of Rockport residents, Pagans and Richard Tillman, marine extension agent in Aransas County, brought sample surveys that have been conducted in other communities.

Pagans told park board members the community needs survey "is really a market analysis of what people need and want." If such a survey were to be conducted in Rockport, he added, it would be on a "random sample" basis. He estimated that in a community Rockport's size, 300 responses would be sufficient to guage the community's recreational needs.

Park board eyes grant funds

The needs survey, he added, could not be done in time for Rockport to apply for the currently-available grant monies. At last month's park board meeting, Pagans said approximately $3.3 million in grant funds are available in Texas "at this moment," but he estimated the money will only "be there" for eight to 12 weeks — not enough time for a community-wide study.

Park board members Wednesday voted to ask the council to retain an architect who will study the existing park facilities in Rockport and help in suggesting possible improvements to those facilities, with the possibility that the city would apply for grant funds.

Board member Bobby Jackson made the motion which was seconded by Kathryn Winkelman and approved unanimously by those present.

The grant fund the board is specifically viewing is through the land-water conservation fund which consists of money set aside from oil and gas leases. This is a matching fund grant with the city required to put up 50 percent of the funding, but Pagans said in-kind labor, donations and revenue sharing money can all be put up to meet the city's share of the costs. In theory, according to Pagans, the city could secure the grant without having to put up any tax or city revenue monies.

In response to concerns voiced by some board members on the advisability of seeking grant funds without a community needs survey, Pagans suggested that park board members could informally poll 10 people each "and tabulate the results of that." Pagans added this is not a substitute for a community-wide survey but would serve as a "stop-gap measure" to fill the immediate need.

Pagans urged the park board Wednesday to go to the city council as soon as possible if they were interested in pursuing the

Certificates of obligation to be sold

Sale of $600,000 in certificates of obligation to pay for Rockport's share of the costs of expanding the city's sanitary sewer plant will be approved in a meeting of the city council Monday night, April 25, at City Hall.

The certificate sale was authorized by the council on Feb. 14, shortly after city officials received word that Rockport had been awarded a $1.8 million federal grant for the project which involves enlargement of the existing sanitary sewer facilities from the present one million gallons per day to two million gallons.

In a related item, the council will consider a proposed ordinance increasing sanitary sewer rates. City Administrator Herman Johnson earlier this year told council members such an increase would be necessary to meet the city's obligations in retiring the certificates. City officials have said no tax money will be used to pay off the certificates of obligation.

The grant money is coming through a program sponsored by the Environmental Protection Agency, with the federal government paying 75 percent of the costs and the city 25 percent.

The project has gone to the city's engineers who have 180 days to draw up plans and specifications for the job. The plans must then be submitted to the EPA for approval before construction can begin.

The regular council meeting Monday will be preceded by the first public hearing on Morrison Development Company's request for annexation of approximately seven acres on the north side of Enterprise Blvd. The area is the site of Morrison's proposed Easy Acres Subdivision. The public hearing will begin at 7:15 p.m. at City Hall.

The council will consider instituting proceedings for annexation of just over three acres at the site of the Oak Villas Retirement Community adjoining Enterprise Clinic land on Enterprise Blvd. The remainder of the approximately 11-acre site is already inside city limits.

If the council authorizes institution of annexation proceedings, the ordinance will come before city officials for first reading on May 10. Under the new city charter now in effect, the ordinance will require two readings before it can be finally adopted.

Also scheduled for Monday's meeting is discussion of drainage problems in Rockport and the surrounding area and the setting of a date for a joint public hearing for rezoning of the proposed Easy Acres site to allow largescale residential development.

Bill Cory is scheduled to appear before the council with a request to operate a concession stand on Rockport Beach during the summer. The Aransas County Navigation District earlier approved Cory's request subject to his securing necessary permits.

Editorial & opinion

Evaluation difficult

It is extremely difficult, if not impossible, to accurately and fairly evaluate circumstances that influenced decisions of the president and/or Congress at the beginning of World War II.

But this has been done with rather harsh finality by the Commission on Wartime Relocation and internment of Civilians in its vast report that, among other things, deals with sending some 120,000 Japanese-Americans to relocation camps.

The federal panel said the relocation was a political decision not militarily justified and followed "a long and ugly history" of racism against Japanese-Americans on the West Coast.

Starting with President Franklin D. Roosevelt, the commission spread blame for the relocation widely and accused the president of failing to calm public hysteria after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

Ten weeks later, the report said, Roosevelt signed the order to round up the Japanese-Americans and intern them until the war ended.

The sneak attack on Pearl Harbor created conditions under which President Roosevelt felt compelled to act in the best interests of the nation. The internment was ordered to allay fears of widespread sabotage of the U.S. war effort.

The inconvenience of detention was, in our view, a minor concern at a time when the U.S. was reeling from a crippling attack by a foreign enemy and striving to regain its military equilibrium.

Americans, shocked by the perfidious infamy of the Japanese attack that could have resulted in the nation's ultimate defeat, had to be reassured their government was taking every counter action possible.

Now, after 40 years of hindsight, we are told that our government inflicted grievous injustice on Japanese-Americans virtually without regard for their demonstrated loyalty to the U.S.

"But, most important," the commission report said, "there was loss of liberty and the personal stigma of suspected disloyalty for thousands of people who knew themselves to be devoted to their country's cause and to its ideals but whose repeated protestations of loyalty were discounted — only to be demonstrated beyond any doubt by the record of Nisei (Japanese-American) soldiers, who returned from the battlefields of Europe as the most decorated and distinguished combat unit of World War II, and by the thousands of other Nisei who served against the enemy in the Pacific."

The report doesn't say how many Japanese were living on the West Coast in 1942 when Pearl Harbor was devastated.

The commission, created by Congress in 1980, heard more than 750 witnesses during 20 days of hearings. It is led by Joan Z. Bernstein, Washington lawyer. Among its members are former Supreme Court Justice Arthur Goldberg, former Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., former Civil Rights Commission Chairman Arthur S. Fleming and former Rep. Robert F. Drinan, D-Mass., a Jesuit priest.

Change needed

A lawyer working for the Small Business Administration in Denver is not happy about the job or the salary.

Maybe he should be. He's making $48,157 annually as a file clerk.

There are millions who would be glad to have this job at half what the lawyer is earning.

In November, his position was abolished, and he had to choose between unemployment or the file clerk job. Because of tenure and agency regulations, his pay remained the same.

He is aware of probable public reaction to his plight. With 12 million Americans trying to find work, "few people are going to think this is something to laugh about," he said.

During his eight years with SBA in Denver, the attorney has served as district counsel, acting director and most recently as deputy director.

But now, he complains, his job is filling files. That's it, except he answers a receptionist's phone when she's out.

Under a two-year grade and salary retention rule covering federal workers, the lawyer will continue to receive more than $40,000 a year until Nov. 17, 1984. At that time he must choose between resigning or accepting a salary that is 150 percent of the top figure usually paid for his filing work: $20,760 a year.

Even that is too much to pay a file clerk, he believes, and adds he has more than filing know-how to offer taxpayers, mainly his training as a lawyer.

Jewish and once active as a Democrat, the attorney contends his demotion resulted from political and religious discrimination. The SBA officials deny.

Their rejoinder was if taxpayers don't like what happened to the lawyer-file clerk, they should complain to Congress since congressmen are the ones who make the rules.

There's hardly any question but what the SBA rules should be changed to circumvent a similar happening.

Never mind the personal side

May I tell you the headline which has delighted me most in The Rockport Pilot in this still young year? It appeared last week in the announcement that Allied Live Oak Bank had donated $5,000 the county library. A drop in the bucket compared to what is needed, but every drop counts.

True, my sentiment may be influenced by the circumstance of my being a book lover. However, it is not a selfish one. Librarian Eunice Hamon might tell you that her records show that I probably check out no more than a couple dozen books a year because in recent years have found myself turning more and more to rereading the old books from my own library. Also, when I really like a book I can't resist the impulse to acquire it, even when I have already read it. I like books on the wall as some like painting, bric-a-brac, whatever.

But never mind the personal side. The Aransas County Library is one of the best patronized libraries I have ever encountered, a circumstance enhanced by a competent and friendly staff. I realize that a sizable portion of library patronage must come from winter visitors. Hooray, doesn't that make it a tourist attraction? Sure, there's an element extant that will say that is a good reason for shutting the library down. But such ignoramuses can be ignored; even though I am sometimes nettled by visitors poking along Fulton Beach Road, gawking, I still cry cheers. Tourists, and conservationists please note, are the cleanest industry a town can have.

The birth of our library is typical of many I have known. However growth of Aransas County Library is not typical, through no fault of its staff or anyone else particularly. It is untypical as is Rockport because growth has been and will continue to be faster than in most South Texas towns. An off the top of my head estimate then is that the physical plant could and should easily cover twice the present floor space, and anyone with the least bit of vision might add that four times that space will soon be needed, not to mention money for books — and salaries. I much doubt that there is another library in the state that handles as much traffic with only two paid employees. Praise ye the gods again and again for those ladies who volunteer as aides.

Perhaps we need something on the order of a Friends of the Library Association, with people contributing as we do to maintain public radio and television stations. What, another donation? Yet what better way? Just please, Mrs. Hamon, don't hint again as you did a couple of years ago that I donate my books. I've explained that. disgust me more than the anti-war, anti-nuclear protesters, first in this country, next in England and Germany. Of course I don't care much for them wherever they exist. Straightaway I have painted myself into a corner. I can't wait for the next war. I'm so tired of life I'm ready for a nuclear bomb to wipe out my family, children and grandchildren. Not to mention by friends and their progeny. But you know better, most of you.

It has often enough been observed that man, the planet's highest form of animal intellect, is the only animal which bands together to kill off his fellow man. Certainly dogs fight, but they don't band together, plan and contrive strategies to beat other bands. I suppose it is evidence of human intelligence that we schemed wars since the days of our earliest known history, and that goes back quite a few thousand years. To overcome this we have invented religions, formulated philosophies, all to no avail. Perhaps some one will suggest that the current breed of antis are the disciples of a new, still unnamed god or philosophy. Sorry, history has known them before.

On the other hand, and for the sake or argument, let us say that perhaps the world should give them a chance? A great idea were it not for the contradictory factors, first and foremost being that there is no chance that their ranks can or will dominate in every country in the world. The best and most simple of examples: Russia. I have no doubt that people of like mind exist there. But do they dare assert themselves, and if they should for how long would they last? No need for me to suggest the answer.

I particularly referred to Englishmen and Germans. Do the English not realize that had it not been for their country's lack of preparedness, yes, anti-war sentiment, World War II might never have been? Do they not recognize that men such as the 18-year-olds who fought the Battle of Britain, and so left no children, died, else otherwise there would be no free Britons today? And what German would deny that had his country prevailed in that war he would be a slave. And of course, if there are British or German Jews among the protesters — well none of them would ever have been born to protest.

Writing as I am, I feel that I am stating simplistics, and so I find it doubly disturbing to recognize that among the protesters are intelligent and educated people. People who yet nevertheless do not hesitate physical assault on property which is distasteful to them, nor do they refrain from physical violence when confronted by the police or other authority. Huh, what's war?

Protests not likely to effect arms race

While proponents of a freeze on nuclear weapons were winning in a Galveston referendum, tens of thousands of anti-nuclear protesters staged what their leaders called "die-ins" throughout Western Europe.

Demonstrators blocked U.S. military bases, handed tulips to riot police as a sign of peace and screamed anti-nuclear slogans. For the most part, marchers were "quiet and peaceful," with exception of an incident at a U.S. military base in the Bavarian town of Neu Ulm.

Police used tear gas and German shepherd dogs in a brief clash with about 250 youthful protesters who tried to block the base entrance. Riot police used wooden clubs to push back the youths.

Protesters were demonstrating against North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) plans to deploy 572 U.S.-made Pershing II and cruise nuclear missiles in Western Europe beginning later this year unless the Soviet Union agrees to dismantle hundreds of multiwarhead rockets in Eastern Europe.

In view of adverse reaction of Soviet representa- the Geneva nuclear weapons conference to the U.S. proposal for dismantling the rockets, it does not appear there will be any quick solution to the problem, if at all.

Far greater trust than has ever existed between the U.S. and the Soviet Union will have to come about before there can be any substantive moves toward weapons freezes, deployment or disarmament.

Although they may be an expression of sincere concern, public demonstrations alone are not going to have much effect on the pace of the arms race. It probably will continue unabated as long as the superpowers believe one will strike when it becomes apparent the other is weaker.

Consider the astronomical economic waste in making modern weapons that may be obsolete before or soon after they go into production. If these funds could be diverted to peaceful pursuits, many scourges of mankind might be banished from the earth.

Illustrating the meaning of the relatively new "die-in" protests, an estimated 4,000 participants in Glasgow, Scotland, converged in the city square and collapsed in feigned death to the wail of sirens and bagpipes, simulating effects of nuclear war.

In West Germany, about 75,000 protesters joined the demonstrations, blocking seven U.S. military bases while staging "die-ins" despite a cold rain.

In Bonn, 200 gathered outside a barbed-wire fence around the West German Defense Ministry, but made no effort to scale it. Earlier, in downtown Bonn, hundreds shouted slogans and waved placards that said in German, "Missiles kill, we want to live," and "Rockets are for war, not for us."

Conservative West German politicians charged that anti-nuclear demonstrations aid the Soviets, but organizers claimed the demonstrations in 90 West German towns and cities will boost opposition to NATO's missile plan. West Germany is scheduled to get the largest share of the missiles.

DWI task force

By Senator John Sharp

AUSTIN — Two years ago, Governor Clements formed the Governor's Task Force on Traffic Safety and appointed approximately 30 Texans to that task force. I was one of three legislators that he appointed to the task force, and we heard testimony and studied the problem for well over two years in an attempt to provide sensible and meaningful changes in the DWI laws to make sure that repeat offenders of these laws are removed from the streets and highways of Texas. As a result of our work on the Governor's Task Force, Colonel James Adams, the director of Texas Department of Public Safety and Chairman of the Governor's Task Force on Traffic Safety, asked me to introduce the task force recommendations.

I introduced that legislation as Senate Bill 88. Senator Bill Sarpalius of Hereford also introduced similar legislation. In order to avoid the confusion of having two virtually identical Senate Bills, Senator Sarpalius and I joined in co-authoring Senate Bill 1 which has now passed the Texas Senate and is pending in the Texas House of Representatives. Senate Bill 1 makes some very significant changes to DWI laws, the most important of which, in my opinion, is the elimination of deferred adjudication. Under current Texas law, someone could be convicted of DWI and receive deferred adjudication, meaning that a conviction may never show up on that person's record. We had testimony before the task force showing that some people have received as many as 27 DWI convictions, yet there was no record of their conviction. By eliminating deferred adjudication, we will be able to identify the habitual drunk driver and either get that person in an alcoholism treatment program or remove that person from the streets and highways by imprisonment.

Another important provision of the new DWI law which has passed the Senate, is that blood alcohol tests and breathalizers will now be able to be used as evidence in a Court of Law. Currently, if someone takes a breathalizer test or a blood alcohol test showing that they were drunk while driving, the results of that test may not be entered as evidence against that person at a trial. This new law says that the results of that breathalizer or blood alcohol test can be used as evidence in the trial. Also under the new law, if someone refuses to take a blood alcohol test or a breathalizer, his license will be automatically suspended for 90 days.

The new penalties spelled out in this law for the first offense DWI is a $100 - $2,000 fine and 72 hours to one year in jail. This is up to the discretion of the judge and the sentence can be probated. The second offense requires a fine from $300 - $2,000 with 72 hours to two years in jail. For subsequent offenses, the fine is from $500 - $2,000 and 30 days to two years in jail or up to five years in prison. If serious bodily injury occurs because of the drunk driver, $500 and six months in jail or prison will be added to the sentence. The judges will be allowed discretion between the minimum and maximum sentences and will be allowed to include a probated sentence. However, deferred adjudication will not be an option for the judge. In a second offense DWI, the person must serve not less than 72 hours in jail as a condition of probation and in subsequent offenses, as a condition of probation, they must serve not less than 30 days in jail.

Under current laws, the insurance premiums that everyone is charged are increased by accidents caused by the drunk driver because the insurance companies are unable to raise the insurance rate on those drivers who are convicted of DWI even though drivers who are convicted of speeding may have their insurance rates raised. The new law allows insurance companies to add a premium surcharge to the liability coverage for three years on those people who have been convicted of driving while intoxicated.

Letters

Now let's take a second look at Senator Bentsen's Washington report, which appeared in the April 9 Pilot.

He says that America must regain control of its destiny and "A good place to start is by getting a grip on the staggering federal deficit." No argument there. He then suggests that the administration must ". . . consider alternatives to its tax and defense policies" and "it presents us with a $200 billion deficit." The inference is that the president caused the deficit!

Perhaps he should have said, "The president tells us (Congress) that if we don't mend our ways, there will be a $200 billion and growing deficit." Congress passes the spending bills and Congress is the cause of the deficits! Let's look back just two years.

The outgoing administration set up a proposed budget for fiscal 1982. The new administration pared $44 billion off it before sending it to congress for consideration, then pressured the congress to approve a "budget resolution" with that much less growth in it. Fine! An overall budget resolution sounds great, but the appropriations are made one at a time and when the appropriations were added up, $33 billion had been put back into the federal expenditures. In other words, a budget resolution is window dressing to hide the political machinations of our poor parlor politicians in congress.

Congress is the culprit!

I wouldn't want anybody to know I raised that kid

Dear Editor:

I don't know how many laws have been passed since this country started over 200 years ago — I don't suppose anybody knows and I for one don't want to know.

I do know though that the number probably is uncountable, considering all the permits and licenses now required to stay within the law. It's probably only because some Congressman hasn't thought of it that there's no law requiring a license to trim your own toenails.

But what interests me this week is a law requiring children to help pay their elderly parents' doctor bills. Several states have passed such a law and Congress is considering making it nationwide.

The states and the Federal government are now paying about $14 billion a year for Medicaid patients, and it's being argued that prosperous children of destitute parents ought to be forced to chip in to ease the load on the rest of the taxpayers.

One state has proposed a sliding scale. If a child over 18 is making from $30,000 to $35,000 a year, he'd have to pay $3.25 a day for a parent in a nursing home. Those making from $50,000 to $55,000 would have to pay $7.50. The law could be waived in individual cases if it caused "severe hardship" for the child. That sentence needs an exclamation point after it.

I guess this is a good law but I'll tell you, if I was broke and sick and had a son making $50,000 a year, and it took a law to make him help me out, I wouldn't want that law enforced. I wouldn't want anybody to know I helped raise that kid.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

"Even if there were no Japanese car manufacturers, the domestic automobile industry would be in serious difficulties today."

Those are the words of John B. Schnapp, a Harbridge House vice president in charge of the Boston consulting firm's work in the automobile industry.

A pensive, thoughtful man, Schnapp doesn't envy anyone trying to restore the health of our auto industry. But he takes exception to the "fix" being promoted only a few miles away in Cambridge, the home district of Congressman Tip O'Neill.

The speaker of the House has championed a "local content" bill. Pushed by desperate autoworkers and domestic suppliers to the automobile industry, the bill would require at least 75 percent "local content" in all but minor automobile makes sold in America. The idea, of course, is to bring home some of the jobs that have been lost to Japanese auto imports over the last few years.

Unfortunately, the problem can't be solved so simply.

"I really believe," Schnapp said in a recent interview, "that a domestic content bill would levy a substantial tax on consumers and forestall the reshaping of our domestic automobile industry."

How big a tax?

Very.

Using changes in automobile pricing since the Japanese "voluntarily" agreed to limit their automotive exports, Schnapp points out that a minor decrease in their exports (only 7 percent compared to the 40 percent likely to be caused by a local content bill) has had a major effect on Japanese autos and their pricing.

Specifically, Schnapp cites three areas of change:

— HIGHER STICKER PRICES. In the one-year period following the "voluntary" agreement, sticker prices on a range of Japanese cars rose 5.8 percent, significantly more than the prices of the same cars rose in Japan.

— HIGHER PROFIT MARGINS FOR JAPANESE PRODUCERS. During the same period, the value of the dollar rose sharply against the yen. This means that Japanese manufacturers received more yen, and more profits, for their products. In areas where there is heavy competition, such as VCRs (video-cassett recorders), Schnapp points out, prices are lower than they were a year ago. Similarly, France used the decline of the franc against the dollar to lower the price of "Le Car."

— UPGRADING THE CARS EXPORTED. While nearly 70 percent of most Japanese exports once were in their lower-priced lines, the proportion of top-of-the-line cars has increased significantly and more of the cars come with high-profit-margin optional equipment.

While all this is reasonable behavior for the Japanese — if you can't sell an unlimited number of cars, you do what GM always tried to do: Sell "more car, per car" — it has a dreary effect on car prices. In effect, the voluntary agreement has raised a Japanese price umbrella over all car prices. Since the Japanese controlled the economy-car market, actions to limit their sales work to reduce price competition.

How much does it cost?

Schnapp estimates that the total effective price increase for Japanese cars under "voluntary" export limits totals $1,900 for each buyer of Japanese cars. He further estimates that the passage of a local content bill would raise the prices of Japanese cars by $3,200, leaving a massive amount of room under the Japanese price umbrella for Detroit to raise its prices.

Talk about sticker shock!

Even those increases might be tolerable if they did something to increase employment. Schnapp agrees that a local content bill would increase automotive employment (ignoring possible protectionist backlash at other industries) but points out that higher car prices would, in effect, cost consumers $100,000 for each job created.

This is almost twice the current $51,786 investment per employee in the motor vehicle industry! Since it typically requires about $60,000 in assets to create a new manufacturing job, it's clear that the political solution for Detroit's problems — protectionism — is the least efficient way to restore health to our economy.

Pray that the local content bill dies. And never comes back.

Cotton leads decline in Texas crops

COLLEGE STATION — Texas farmers got about $800 million less from crop sales last year compared to 1981, with cotton sales taking the sharpest nosedive — from $1.4 billion to $875 million.

Estimated crop sales totaled almost $3.8 billion in 1982 but were down due to poor prices caused by huge stockpiles of most farm commodities, together with sagging domestic demand and decreased exports, says Dr. Carl Anderson, economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. Also, weather losses were heavy in some areas, particularly in the South Plains where more than half the cotton acreage was lost to hail.

Despite these heavy losses, cotton (both lint and cottonseed) was still the leading cash crop last year, with the South Plains leading the state at more than $270 million in cash receipts.

Grain sorghum was the second leading cash crop with receipts of $619 million. The Panhandle was the leading area with a $165.5 million crop.

The Panhandle also led in cash receipts from wheat, ensilage and sugar beets. Wheat sales totaled $169 million; ensilage, $11.6 million; and sugar beets, $10.4 million for the district.

Wheat was the third leading cash crop in the state last year with receipts totalling more than $499 million. Cash receipts from corn came in at $310.2 million.

Along with its cotton crop, the South Plains was the leading producer of corn, soybeans and sunflowers. Cash receipts from corn surpassed $130.5 million, soybeans brought in $64.9 million, and sunflowers sales reached $24.4 million.

Total cash receipts from hay were the largest in North Central Texas, totaling $22 million. That region also led in cash receipts from plums and peaches at $515 and $3.5 million, respectively. Cloverseed sales in North Central Texas totaled $595,000 and led the state.

Alfalfa and guar crops brought top cash receipts in the Rolling Plains at $3.2 million and $24.9 million, respectively.

Far West Texas led in barley production with sales of $1.6 million.

Texas' pecan crop dropped sharply in 1982. The leading pecan region was Central Texas with cash receipts totaling $7.2 million. Central Texas also led in cash receipts from watermelons, $4.4 million; rye, $275,000; and oats, $5 million.

The Upper Coast area led in rice sales of $223 million and in nursery product sales of $87.5 million.

Cash receipts from melons, vegetables, grapefruit, oranges and sugarcane were largest in South Texas. Vegetable sales totaled $100.2 million; sugarcane, $14.5 million; grapefruit, $33 million; oranges, $15 million; and melons, $3.2 million.

Peanut sales were tops in Southwest Texas at $20.7 million. That area also led in receipts from cowpeas at $1.2 million.

Texas farmers should see some improvement in farm prices as huge stockpiles of farm commodities are reduced through the PIK (payment-in-kind) program, says Anderson. Increased domestic and export demand as a result of improving economic conditions in the U.S. and abroad should also strengthen farm prices.

Wagley is selected by realtors

Judges have selected Juanita Wagley of Sipe Real Estate Company as the winner of the Realtor Citizenship Award Competition said Meceal Casterline, president of the Rockport Area Board of Realtors.

Wagley accumulated 396 points from the panel of four judges who were Judy Guillet, Jackie Shaw, Virginia Chernosky and Erin Turner. She won out over other realtors of the Rockport area.

The board sponsored the competition locally as part of the National Association of REATLORS' Diamond Jubilee celebration in 1983.

The event was held in the Rockport area to recognize contributions by realtors to the betterment of their community, added Mecal Casterline. Wagley was nominated by both the AARP and the Women's Committee of the Aransas County Medical Services Inc.

Wagley was cited by area residents for such public service efforts as making avialable at a nominal cost the use of the Paws & Taws Building as a meeting place for the AARP and letting the Women's Committee of ACMSI use the Encina Plaza Building rent free for five years. She has been a member of the Citizens Advisory Committee and the Aransas County Conservation and Reclamation District. Wagley also served on the Planning and Zoning Committee for five years.

Juanita Wagley

Recently Wagley had donated the 9,000 sq. ft. Paws and Taws Building for a community building. It will be moved to a different site and serve the area's clubs and groups in the forth coming years.

Wagley will receive a certificate of recognition and automatically be entered into the state competition. The state winner will receive a special prize and become eligible for the national competition.

The National Realtor Citizenship Award winner will be announced in November at the National Association's 1983 Convention in Las Vegas. The winner will receive an all expenses-paid trip for two to Diamond Head in Honlulu, timed to coincide with the 1983 Realtor Convention in Honolulu.

Betty French: involved

By PAT BLAIR

If only one word could be used to describe Betty French, that word would have to be "involvement." The United Fund, the Republican Party, Key Allegro Women's Club, the Castaways — Betty believes in getting involved.

"The first meeting of the Republican organization in Aransas County was right here at this house," she said during a recent interview at the Key Allegro home she and husband Herb French have enjoyed for 18 years. She was "for years," assistant Republican chairman in the county.

Betty also was in on the organization of the Allegro Women's Club and was one of the two first deacons of First Presbyterian Church to which she and Herb still belong — and in which she's still active. "I've been an elder on the Session for the past two years — I'm going into my third, and last, year."

She's chairman of the church's Mission Service Committee with oversees the church's involvement in such organizations as the Boy Scouts, ABC Learning Center and the Council on Aging and she's a volunteer worker in the Castaways Thrift Shop, helping staff the downtown Rockport store on "Presbyterian Day" — Mondays.

She's a past president of the Allegro Women's Club, a member of the Key Allegro Garden Club, has been treasurer for the Aransas County unit of the American Cancer Society for 15 years and has served annually as the coordinator for the Cancer Crusade on Key Allegro.

She's a former board member and served as president two years ago of the Aransas County United Fund.

She's a member of the Rockport Art Association: "I'm not an artist, but I do belong."

She's a member of the Women's Committee of the Aransas County Medical Services Inc. "I was quite active at first, but not so much in the past two or three years," she adds.

Born near Bryan — she describes herself as "an Aggie through and through" — Betty lived in that town for many years and worked at Texas A&M University as a secretary for 12 years. During the war, she worked at an Air Force hospital in Bryan as the post surgeon's secretary.

In 1945, a friend who worked for the then-Nueces Transportation Company in Corpus Christi told her a job was available and asked if she was interested. Betty was, and moved to Corpus Christi where she became executive secretary for what was then a private company. She remained in that position almost 12 years, until the bus company was taken over by the City of Corpus Christi.

In the meantime, she'd married Herb French.

"He was the operating manager of the bus company when I went to work there," she said. "We were very good friends for some years, then we were thrown together at some social functions — we dated about two years, then we got married." The couple will celebrate their 34th anniversary in August.

They discovered Rockport during that time. "We came on vacations," Betty said, "and stayed in Palm Village. We walked this island (Key Allegro) when it was rattlesnakes and mesquite."

When they decided to retire from the bus company, Herb — a Corpus Christi native — wanted to settle some place on the water. At about the same time, development was getting started on Key Allegro. So he and Betty came, looked around — and bought.

"We were the tenth house on the Island," Betty says. "We've seen it grow — I can remember when we knew everybody on the Island.

"We've loved every minute of it," she adds. "It's a great place to retire. It's a beautiful bay — the sunsets are really something!"

The growth of the area has brought some minor disappointments to Betty: "We used to be able to see the leaning oaks where Harbor Oaks are now," she says a little regretfully. But she also sees a good side, with the arrival of new — "new blood" — people in the community.

Other than her civic and community involvements, Betty devotes a lot of hours to her plants. "My hobby, if I had one, would be my indoor plants," she said.

"In Corpus Christi, I had a nice yard — but I was younger then too. But here on the Island, you can't grow outside plants too well, so I do indoors."

She used to collect Toby mugs, she added: "I still do. I enjoy my home." Another of her pleasures is music — preferably light classic. "I keep that thing," with a gesture toward the stereo, "going constantly," she says.

But most of all, she enjoys doing. "We have an investment club — I was president of that last year," she said. Two years ago she served on First Presbyterian's personnel support committee.

"Right now," she said, "I'm not involved in too awful much — I want to get involved again.

"I'm not ready," she says, "to quit."

Victims now have bill of rights

One of the most disillusioning experiences that a private citizen can have is to sit for the first time in a courtroom during a criminal trial and learn that in instances the victim is treated as a criminal and the accused is treated with great respects for all of his or her rights.

An organizational meeting was held in Texas this month to establish in this state chapters of the National Organization of Victims' Assistance. Laws have already been passed in Wisconsin, Connecticut and California to provide victims' services statewide. Obviously, such a program costs money. The spending of money on new programs has to be avoided today. Yet we cannot continue to recognize problems and look for solutions.

The National Organization of Victims' Assistance, or NOVA, has drawn up a bill of rights for victims of crime. These rights relate to nearly all of the serious consequences of crime and protection of the victims. These rights include maximum possible protection from threats, harm and intimidation.

Another right is to be able to obtain information, about procedures and practices of the criminal justice system, the status and progress of the case, release of the defendant on bail, scheduling of hearings affecting probation or parole, scheduling of all hearings and procedures and the time when an offender who has served time is released from prison. It is remarkable how difficult it is for a victim of a crime to learn of these things in which there is such direct involvement.

Another right listed is that of discussing the case with the prosecutor and having it explained in non-technical language and discussing offers to plea bargain.

In human terms, rights are listed of being treated with dignity and receiving courteous assistance as they cooperate with the criminal justice system.

Most of those rights and others listed could be provided at minimum cost. There are others that would be expensive. That should not be a consideration if the person convicted of the crime can be required to pay those costs. It has to be a consideration if it is to be paid with tax dollars.

Injuries that result from assault, a fall in a purse snatching can disrupt a person's entire life. In the extreme, a person can be left paralyzed, dependent, or death can leave a family dependent. Crimes can leave the victim with medical bills to pay, with property lost or destroyed, with days away from work during recovery and while hearings and trials are scheduled, postponed and finally held. There may be transportation costs and other such expenses. The victim pays a share of the cost of moving the accused through the criminal justice system.

Almost anyone would agree that there are injustices in all this. What should be done about them is subject to debate. If you are interested in being a part of this movement toward assistance to victims, the state coordinator for NOVA is Suzanne McDaniel, the Victim/Witness Office, 201 Fannin, Room 200, Houston, Texas 77002, telephone (713) 221-6655. A Coastal Bend member is Dr. Phillip W. Rhoades at Corpus Christi State University, 991-6810, extension 237.

One way or another, cirminal justice should mean more to us than just providing justice for the criminal.

Permit requests

The LJB Enterprises of Star Route 1, Box 330, Rockport has applied for a permit to expand an existing turning basin and construct bulkeads, piers and walkways at a site in Aransas Bay, adjacent to Fulton Beach Road, approximately 5.5 miles north northeast of Rockport.

The channel will measure 75 x 640 feet and will be dredged to a depth of -5 MLT. The channel will lead into a 100 x 195-foot entrance area and a 700-foot long turning basin with a width varying between 100 and 240 feet and a depth of -5 feet MLT.

The turning basin will be lined with 2400 feet of concrete bulkheads.

Plans for the proposed work may be seen at the office of the District Engineer in the Essayons Building, 400 Barracuda, Galveston, or at Corpus Christi Area Office, in Corpus Christi.

A preliminary review of this application indicates that an Environmental IVPACT Statement is not required.

Pirates lose to Hornets

The score was 8-3 and the Pirates came out on the bottom after Tuesday night baseball here. The Flour Bluff Hornets went home with their fifteenth win of the season, leaving the Pirates with their second defeat in this half of District play.

The seven-inning game saw Rudy Zavala, Bobby Dingenary and Tim Redden scoring for the Pirates. Despite some good fielding, R-F lost it all in the seventh inning when the Bluff ran in six, two of them homers.

Redden had only six strikeouts to FB's Roger Durden's nine, but Redden exhibited more control — Durden walked eight Pirates and hit three. Redden walked only four.

The Hornets began their first inning with a single, then sacrificed that runner onto second for their first out. Redded walked the third Hornet batter, the fourth sacrificed. With runners on second and third, an error by Aaron Commander let the next batter gain two bases and bring two men home. Redden then bagged his first strike out for the night on the next Hornet, bringing the Pirates to bat.

Zavala led off with a walk and Dingenary followed suit. Zavala got two steals, to second on a wild pitch and to third on a wild throw from the catcher. Dingenary stole second, Commander got to base on balls, Redden was struck out, Russell Lee hit a single and Zavala came in home. Pat Nava got to first after being hit by Durden and Dingenary was the Pirates' second run, prior to a Hornet double play off Jay Roberts' hit to the shortstop. The Hornet stop tagged out Nava on second and threw to first, where Roberts was taken down for the third out.

The Pirates performed well in the top of the second, with Redden and first baseman Roberts working together to take the first Hornet at bat out on first. One Hornet got on base, but the third batter hit right into Jim Ponton at third and didn't make it to first. Redden struck out the fourth batter and it was the Pirates' turn again.

David Perkins led off and was struck out, followed by Jim Ponton's out on a hit to the pitcher. Zavala was hit by the pitcher and got to first, then Durden hit Dingenary, putting him on first and Zavala on second. Commander was struck out and the inning was over.

Commander caught the first Hornet batter's fly to center to open the third; Roberts tagged out the second batter unassisted and Pat Nava's catch took care of the fourth Hornet's high fly into left.

Redden struck out for the second time and Lee's low hit to third was thrown to first for the second out. Pat Nava had a nice hit into center and managed to steal second before Rene Cordova, subbing for Roberts, struck out.

Redden struck out the first Hornet to bat in the fourth, but the second batter managed a single. A sacrifice put the Hornets on second with two outs. The next man up hit into right field, where Dingenary made a beautiful catch and threw to home, taking down the Hornet runner from second and preventing another score.

Perkins was struck out for the second time at the bottom of the fourth. Ponton walked, then stole second during Zavala's at-bat. Zavala struck out, Dingenary walked and Commander's fly into right field was caught, ending the fourth.

Jay Roberts caught a fly off the first Hornet at bat in the next inning, Redden struck out the second and walked the third. Nava snagged the next hit and threw to first for the final out in the top of the fifth.

When the Pirates came to bat, Redden's line drive had him thrown out at first. Lee had a good hit into right, but Nava and Roberts were the second and third outs, Nava with a strike out and Roberts thrown out at first after a hit right into the third baseman.

Redden struck out the first Hornet batter in the sixth, the next was out on a steal to second and Redden took down the third.

Rodney Adkins, subbing for Perkins, led off for the Pirates and was out at first after a throw from the shortstop. Ponton walked, Zavala sacrificed him to second and Dingenary was hit by the pitcher for the second time and took first but was forced out at second after a drive by Commander.

The seventh was where the Pirates were left behind by the Hornets. Redden managed his last strike out, but the Hornets just ran rings around the Pirates.

Redden hit a single, leading off the Pirates, then stole second on a wild pitch. Lee struck out. Nava was out at first and another wild pitch was Redden's chance to steal home for the Pirates third run, right before Ponton's hit to second was caught for the final out of the game.

JV finishes season ranked fourth in district after tourney

The Rockport Fulton Junior Varsity baseball team ended their season last weekend with the Flour Bluff tournament, coming out ranked fourth in the tourney and in district standings.

The Pirates began the tournament on a sour note, losing to Flour Bluff in an error plagued game, 19-0 Friday night but the Pirates turned around and took Tuloso-Midway 11-1 the same night.

Saturday, the Pirates put away Calallen 6-4, but the tired team lost to Robstown 9-0 in three innings directly after the Calallen game.

Jesse Avila and Rudy Soliz were the only Pirates who managed to get on base in the Flour Bluff game. Avila was left on base at the end of the Pirate's turn at bat in the first and Soliz got to base on balls, then stole twice, but was left on third.

The Tuloso-Midway contest went four innings, with Mark Garcia striking out six of the T-M batters.

Scoring in the first inning were Cordova and Avila.

In the Calallen game Saturday, Soliz, Cordova, Olivares, Garcia and Nunez all handed in runs, with Olivarez getting two.

The Robstown game saw the first three men at bat scoring runs against R-F. Robstown picked up three more in the second and three in the third. The Pirates were worn out from their first game. Only two batters made it past first. Mark Dennis got third, after a steal to second and Robert Chavez made it to second, both in the bottom of a second inning. Garcia struck out twice and Cordova and Olivarez were both struck out in the first.

High Rollers still leading PM'ers

Last weekend's play saw the High Rollers retain their first place standings in the Saturday P.M.'ers league.

The High Rollers, Ron Yates and Andrew Clegg, have a 81-35 win loss record, with a .698 percentage.

A close second is held by the Unknowns, Abel Saenz and Jack Sheridan's team. The Unknowns are only one game behind the High Rollers, with a 80-36 win loss record and .689 percentage.

Third through tenth in the standings are the Fillies, the Strikers, Peanuts, Rebel's Sweet Revenge, the Kings, Valley D.G.'s, the Sheppards and the Rainbows.

The third place Fillies with a 70.5-45.5 record, are Josie Soliz, 8-years-old, Wendy Steele, nine and new member Tammy King, 11. The Fillies have had consistently good scored and are the team to watch as they are expected to keep moving up in the standings.

Other Saturday P.M.'ers team members are Eddie, Tracy and Nathan Sheppard on the Sheppards; Michele Rush and Julie Steel on the Strikers; Patricia Taylor, Mark Alexander and Ernest Keill on the Rebel's Sweet Revenge; Karin Chandler and Kathy Griffith on Peanuts; Wayne Kellum, Keith Kellum and David Haldeman on the Kings.

RFSA Pee Wees finish regular play

In Saturday soccer play, the Pee Wee division ended its regular season with all the teams closely matched for performance. The Intermediate division, with all teams very close in the rankings, played the next to last game of regular play, with the Cosmos and Strikers still locked in a first-place tie, though the Cosmos beat the Srikers 3-2.

In Pee Wee play, the Rowdies took Sting 2-0. Sting's defense is rapidly improving and held off the Rowdies until Randy Mennen scored well into the second half. Eric Schultz made the second goal.

Outstanding play by Randy Mennen and Rutilio Fuentes Jr. of the Rowdies was matched on Sting by Mandi Mills, Walllace Spurlock and Victor Flores.

The Aztecs and Chiefs played hard for a 1-1 tie. Defense was strong on both teams and both goalies had a hard workout. Pete Gomez of the Chiefs and Jeff Griffith of the Aztecs had nice saves.

Andy Youngblood scored first with only three minutes left in the first half. James Phillips score 20 minutes into the second tied the score.

Jeff Griffith, Gilbert Martinez Jr., David Carsted and Chuckie Nixon on the Aztecs were outstanding. Chiefs' top players for the day were Pete Guzman, Jason and James Phillips, Greg Bennet and Shane White.

In Intermediate play, the Hurricanes blew away the Tornados 3-1 with Miles Adkinson scoring in the first four minutes of play and Mario Hernandez scoring again three minutes later, both times with excellent support play from teammates.

The Tornados got tough with hard defensive work from Jerry Krogsgaard, R.M. Brand and goalkeeper Jason Carpenter. At the half the score was 2-0 with the Hurricanes on top.

Charlie Lozano scored six minutes into the second half. Excellent ball control by John Valez, James Griffith and Robert Robertson allowed Robertson to score well into the second half.

Hurricanes' goalkeeper Jonathan Sifuentes made several good saves, holding off strong Tornado attacks. Tornado Tracy Youngblood had a power shot on goal in the last few minutes of the game, but Josh Mennen's excellent save didn't let the goal through.

In the upset of the day, the Cosmos took the Strikers, with Eric Dewolf scoring only four minutes into the game. Brandi Brundrett made a perfect pass to Paul Wilson, who took advantage and scored. Good ball control by Bubba Kellough of the Cosmos and P.J. Levy of the Strikers was a highlight of the first half.

Benji Clark took a corner kick from the Strikers, sent the ball to Roland Rios, who scored, leaving the score Cosmos-2, Strikers-1 at the end of the half.

Wilson had the first score of the second half and Russell Crawford scored with about nine minutes left in the game.

The Barracudas and Kicks tied 1-1, with Chris Hoover making the Kicks' point in the first half after the ball was deflected into the goal by a Barracuda.

Scoring for the Barracudas, 14 minutes into the second half was Robert Solis.

Elias Anderson, Larry Krogsgaard, Robert Solis and B.J. Michel of the Barracudas were outstanding, as were Joe Zambrano, Jay Pearson and Bridget Brundrett on the Kicks.

Cancer Crusade at midpoint

"In these days of very tight money, it's important that the citizens of Aransas County know how the American Cancer Society spends every dollar it receives from them," said Roy Olbricht, chairman of the 1983 fundraising cancer crusade which began on April 1.

"Last year in Texas the ACS raised a total of $10 million, yet over $21 million was returned to Texas to fund programs of research, education, service and rehabilitation. Fundraising accounted for about 10 percent of each dollar, while management of the society's affairs took about 6 percent.

"During the cancer crusade our local crusaders will be distributing a new pamphlet, "Check Your Health", that describes several important aspects of cancer risks or warnings," Olbricht said.

The simple red, white and blue pamphlet has questions to be answered yes or no by both men and women. For example, it asks "Do you smoke cigarettes?"; "Have any of your close relatives had colon or rectum cancer?"; "Do you have vaginal bleeding between menstrual periods?"; "Was your first child born after you were 30 years old?".

"We want to put a pamphlet in every home in Aransas County. If we do a really good job, there's a potential for saving lives right here at home," said Olbricht.

QUOTE FOR THE WEEK

"To get the full value of joy, you must have someone to share it with."

Gardeners are in reality 'urban agriculturists'

COLLEGE STATION — It's time for gardeners to stop gardening and start "farming."

Dr. Sam Cotner, horticulturist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System, says gardeners are, in reality, "urban agriculturists" and therefore should relate to farming.

Conservative estimates indicate that about half the population of Texas is involved in growing fruits and vegetables at home. These urban agriculturists should look at their "backyard plot" as a small farm, says Cotner, even if it is just several hundred square feet in size or perhaps only a couple of tomato plants growing in a flower bed.

"Urban agriculutrists encounter exactly the same problems as do the farmers and ranchers who are feeding our nation," notes Cotner. "The same weather problems, hungry insects, devastating diseases and pesky weeds affect backyard vegetable gardens just as they do commercially grown crops."

These urban agriculturists make exactly the same important decisions as farmers regarding what varieties to plant, planting dates, what and how much fertilizer to apply, when to water and how to cope with numerous production problems.

"Though only about 3 percent of our nation's population is actually involved in production agriculture, it's vitally important that the millions who are growing fruits and vegetables at home relate their food producing efforts to agriculture," Cotner emphasizes. "When these 'gardeners' start considering themselves as 'urban agriculturists,' perhaps they will appreciate our farmers and ranchers more."

Home buyers should be cautious about loans

If you are in the market for a new home, be suspicious of offers for a quick-fix means of qualifying for a loan.

Numerous hazards and pitfalls await unwary buyers and sellers in today's real estate market. In most situations, buyers will pay a premium for below-market financing. The resultant rising or balloon payments may cause default and foreclosure on the loan.

Both buyers and sellers need to recognize and be prepared to cope with the hazards of their financing terms. Otherwise they are likely to lose their money, their property or both.

So-called creative financing does offer a variety of ways to avoid highcost financing offered by lenders. But new ideas rarely come without costs. Be as informed as you can about pros and cons of any financing techniques before entering an agreement.

John Bradshaw sees many roles for himself as member of clergy

By PAT BLAIR

"I see myself in this light: first a human being, second as a Christian and third as a clergy," Rev. John Bradshaw, pastor of Rockport's First Presbyterian Church, said during an interview in his office.

"That sums up the total of life and living for me. First, I've been created as a human being; second, as a Christian; and third, I've been commissioned to be a clergyman.

"I personally feel if any one of those aspects of myself is overemphasized or ignored, the other aspects suffer."

Rev. Bradshaw considers himself a "generalist" as a clergyman, the church equivalent of the medical field's general practioner.

"I am a pastor," he says, "relating to people through counseling, formally and informally — helping folks cope. And I am a preacher, interpreting scripture and administering the sacrament."

He also sees the clergyman as having a "prophetic role, to be aware of the world in which we live, to seek through this chruch to make a difference in the world.

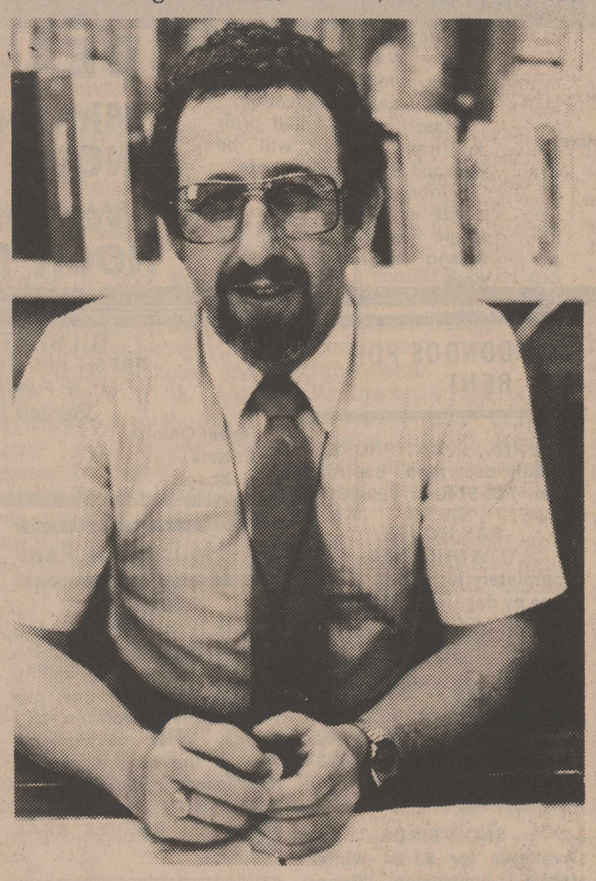
"I see myself as a facilitator," he continued, "helping the church be what the church is about.

"I see my function as more than just with this church. I see my role as a presbyter, working with Presbyterian churches beyond the local church — and working to involve the members of this church beyond the local church as well."

A native of Louisiana, Rev. Bradshaw and his family — wife Helen and daughters Mary Scott and Jane — came to Rockport in the summer of 1972. "My first Sunday here was in August," he recalled. Before that, following his ordination in 1959, he had served three pastorates in his home state.

Helen is also a native of Louisiana and the couple will observe their 19th anniversary in August. "I will never forget our first date," Rev. Bradshaw said. "It was the night Kennedy was assassinated . . ."

Rev. Bradshaw devotes "probably" 45 to 60 hours per week to work in his church, located at Live Oak and Laurel in Rockport. In addition, as part of his work beyond the church here, he serves as chairman of the pastoral care and development committee of the Presbyter in this region.



But he does find time for other pursuits: "We made some spare time," he said, referring to his whole family. "We try to do things with and for the family." His hobbies include sailing and 'cycling "and I get a lot of enjoyment from household-type improvements, working with my hands."

He and Helen working together enjoy refinishing furniture and have a lot of what he refers to as "early attic. We always have some project going," he added.

"And sometimes," he said, "I like to kind of sit and do nothing, let some kind of esthetic something work on me — a play, a concert . . ." He feels such times of quiet are equally important as time spent in activity.

Among the pleasures Rev. Bradshaw finds in his pastorate here are the members of his congregation, "the people with whom I work. I receive a lot of inspiration, motivation from these people.

"Their responsiveness is in itself energizing for me."

Intimations of immortality

To every created thing God has given a tongue that proclaims a resurrection. If the Father designs to touch with divine power the cold and pulseless heart of the buried acorn, and make it burst forth from its prison wall, will he leave neglected the soul of man, who is made in the image of his creator?

If he gives to the rosebush, whose withered blossoms float upon the breeze, the sweet assurance of another springtime, will he withhold the words of hope from the sons of men, when the frosts of winter come?

If matter, mute and inanimate, though changed by the force and nature into a multitude of forms, can never die, will the imperial spirit of man suffer annihilation after a brief sojourn, like a royal guest, in this tenement of clay?

Rather let us believe that he — who in his apparent prodigality wastes not the raindrop, the blade of grass, or the evening's sighing zephyr, but makes them all to carry out his eternal plan — has given immortality to the mortal!

— William Jennings Bryan

Fulton church groundbreaking set

FULTON — Ground will be broken for the new Fulton Community Church sanctuary at the church site, 3rd and Chaparral in Fulton, at 8:30 a.m. Saturday, April 23.

Richard Giller, pastor of the church, will preside at the ceremonies inaugurating construction of the new building which will be capable of seating approximately 300 people.

The Fulton church has been conducting a fund drive to raise $15,000 to help cover the costs of the building. Much of the materials, labor and other services going into the new sanctuary have been donated, Pastor Giller has said.

The decision to build a new church came during a Feb. 6 business meeting, based on growth of the church during recent years.

The church was organized in 1912 as the Fulton First Baptist Church. The first church building was constructed in 1943.

Basking in the spirit of the True Church

By Rev. John R. Bradshaw
Pastor First Presbyterian Church

The Shepherd's staff

It is a privilege to work with ministers and churches that are a part of the Aransas County Ministerial Association. Each congregation seems alive and well and each senses its own raison d'etre. Glimpses into the past reveal struggles and joys, prosperous years and lean, yet a continuing concern for people and an integrity in mission.

Cooperative efforts through ecumenical events and planned growth seem to reveal that we are moving toward our tomorrows confident that God is active and alive in the world.

Everyday and at every moment Jesus the Lord, through the power of his Spirit, is at work in the world: drawing people to Himself, calling us, transforming us, making Himself — even through us — present once again in the place we live.

And we find ourselves recording the brighter side of the Christian story: caring for the poor, sharing our wealth, supporting the oppressed, feeding the hungry and proclaiming release.

There was a time when everyone knew, or thought they knew, everyone else living in Rockport, their children and grandchildren: back when little girls chased little boys around wagons in the church yard and when families traipsed off into the brush to cut down those sweet bay for Christmas trees.

One quick glance around town and around our churches shows things have changed since those early days of childhood chase and sweet bay Christmas trees. More often than not you may hear someone say: "With so many new faces, I hardly know anyone any more."

Nevertheless, there is a revealing beauty in that statement: congregations in our area seem to be evangelistically effective churches. Congregations are drawing many, utilizing many and ministering to many diverse, talented, needy people, and that calls for and cultivates a healthy trust among us all.

In the words of our Presbyterian "Declaration of Faith," "We recognize the true church of Jesus Christ wherever the work of the Spirit is evident: in preaching and sacraments, in the new life and continuous growth of believers, in the sharing of spiritual gifts and material things, in mission and service to the world. The boundaries of the church are not clearly known to us, but God knows those who are his."

Church honors new members

Rockport's First United Methodist Church will honor new members with a covered dish luncheon Sunday, April 24.

The luncheon, in the church's fellowship hall, will begin at noon following the morning worship service.

A happy life is not built up of tours abroad and pleasant holidays, but of little clumps of violets noticed by the roadside, hidden away almost so that only those can see them who have God's peace and love in their hearts; in one long continuous chain of little joys, little whispers from the spiritual world, and little gleams of sunshine on our daily work.

— Edward Wilson

MOTHER'S HANDS

Dear gentle hands have stroked my hair
And cooled my brow,

Soft hands that pressed me close
And seemed to know somehow

Those fleeting moods and erring thoughts
That cloud my day,

Which quickly melt beneath their suffrage
And pass away.

No other balm for earthly pain
Is half so sure,

No sweet caress so filled with love
Nor half so pure,

No other soul so close akin that understands,

No touch that brings such perfect peace as Mother's hands.

For fun in the sun visit "Go Karts"

"Business has been good," says Jerry Gibbons, who opened Go Karts a little over a month ago. Jerry and his family have been in the amusement buisness for 12 years and Go Karts is the first business they've operated in Texas, although they have had three successful parks in Michigan.

Joining Jerry is his mother, Arden, his father, Charles, and his sister, Ann Marie. Jerry and Arden will be running Go Karts in Rockport after his father and sister return to Michigan for the summer to operate The Bear's Lair, another amusement park.

Go Karts is open seven days a week, 365 days a year. Current hours are from 10 a.m. until 10 p.m., but Jerry plans to extend them this summer.

He currently has 18 go karts: 10 assembled, four unassembled and four more on the way. In addition he has several three-wheeled vehicles which are operated on a dirt track.

Children must be 48 inches or taller to operate the go karts, but those who are too small may ride with an adult. Three-wheelers are limited to those 18 or older.

Go Karts has a concession stand on the premises. Jerry hopes to add bumper boats, a miniature golf course and a surf hill this summer.

In addition, the firm will sell three-wheelers, minibikes and go karts, as well as do maintenance and repairs. One of the main advantages of these vehicles is that they can be used in the sand.

..Go Karts is located off Hwy. 35 just south of Rockport. Group rates are available for those who make arrangements in advance. The phone number is 729-8259.

Back to the cane pole

Although most of the high technology anglers of today wouldn't be caught dead using a cane pole, many fish are caught with this simplest of fishing rigs, says Jim Davis, fisheries specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The cane pole is especially efficient for catching crappie, bluegill and redear sunfish during nesting activity. Using a cane pole, positioning a minnow, cricket or earthworm into small openings in brushy areas becomes easy with a little experience.

Flipping, a bass fishing technique using a long rod and fairly short line, copied a time tested cane pole fishing method.

Fishing with a cane pole is not as complicated as other methods. This characteristic surely accounts for its immense popularity, Davis says. There are, however, certain methods that can enhance fishing success with a cane pole.

The length of a cane pole should be two to three times as long as the angler's height. More length makes the pole too cumbersome and less length may not provide the desired reach.

Several types of line are available for cane pole fishing, with monafilament the most popular. When selecting a line, buy the smallest pound test that will hold the biggest fish you expect to catch, David advises. Also, the lighter the line used, the less likely the fish are to detect it and the more life-like the bait will appear.

The end of the line should be tied securely about two-thirds of the way up the pole, then additional knots tied at one foot intervals to the end of the pole. If a large fish is hooked, the terminal end of the pole may be broken but the additional knots may assist in landing an otherwise lost fish.

Perhaps the most important item for cane pole fishing is the hook. Although hooks come in a variety of shapes and sizes, a good rule of thumb is to match the hook size to the mouth size of the fish. Proper hook style selection can also account for more fish and prolong bait life.

Floats and sinkers are optional equipment utilized by cane pole enthusiasts. Floats assist in signalling a bite and also in suspending the bait at the desired fishing depth. Sinkers are used to carry the bait down and hold it in the fishing area.

Cane pole fishing is easy to learn and a good way to master the basics of a great pastime. Under many conditions, the cane pole can catch more fish than more sophisticated tackle. Don't look past this technique when fresh fish are needed for the table, Davis concludes.

Since you're getting down to basics, don't overlook natural baits. A walk down the aisle of any fishing tackle shop will make most novice anglers weak-kneed at the vast array of artifical lures and baits available. Most are designed after a natural food item of sportfish species. Some are even better at catching fishermen than fish.

Despite the choices of artificial lures and baits, many anglers still prefer live bait, according to Dr. Ken Johnson, fish disease specialist for the extension service. The choices are many, but among the front runners are worms, crickets, minnows and crawfish.

Most anglers find it more convenient to buy live bait rather than dig or seine for it. In fact, the culture of live bait for sportfishing is a multi-million dollar business annually in the United States. However, the catch-your-own-bait philosophy adds to the fun of the outing.

Criminal justice classes offered

The occurrence of violence and vandalism in schools will be a topic of study in the education and criminal justice institute at The University of Texas at San Antonio this summer.

The courses on criminal justice are part of the 1983 Summer Institute, which offers educators and other professionals an opportunity to earn graduate level credits in a short-term, intensive format at a time when they can return to campus.

Two courses will be offered in the criminal justice institute — Seminar in Social Foundations and Juvenile Justice and the Schools. Participants must enroll in both.

The interaction of the public school system and the juvenile justice system when violence or vandalism occurs in schools will be studied along with the nature and effects of delinquent behavior in schools. Field trips to a juvenile detention center and the Texas Youth Councils intake center will highlight this comprehensive analysis of the juvenile justice system.

The courses will meet July 6-22. Dr. Richard Diem, associate professor in the Division of Education at UTSA, will teach Seminar in Social Foundations. Dr. Richard Lawrence, assistant professor in the Division of Social and Policy Sciences, will teach Juvenile Justice and the Schools.

Non-degree seeking students may register for Summer institute credit only without presenting a college transcript. Persons who plan to take regular summer session courses in addition to Summer Institute courses and those who want to apply Summer Institute courses to a degree plan, certification or endorsement at UTSA must follow regular admission requirements.

May 2 is the deadline for all students to register or apply for courses. For admission or registration information, contact the UTSA Office of Admissions and Registrar, The University of Texas at San Antonio, Texas 78285 (512) 691-4532.

IMF quota increase urged

By Donald T. Regan
Secretary of the Treasury

Current strains on the world's financial system continue to be much in the news and Congress is now considering the Administration's request for an increase in the U.S. contribution to International Monetary Fund (IMF). While talk of the IMF may seem like a lot of abstract international gobbledygook, the Fund is doing a job that directly affects us here in the U.S.

What actually is the IMF? Maintaining a stable international financial system is directly related to a healthy U.S. economy and the IMF plays a central role in maintaining that system. As the central monetary institution for the world economy, the IMF serves two key functions: providing general guidance for the operation of the world monetary system and providing for temporary financing in support of member countries' efforts to deal with their balance of payments difficulties.

The IMF is essentially a revolving fund of currencies, provided by 146 members of the fund and available to every member for temporary balance of payments financing. Financing thus flows back and forth through the fund depending on balance of payments patterns and financing requirements at any given time. Many are surprised to learn that the United States is the second largest user of the entire membership. The U.S. drew upon IMF resources 18 times in the 1960s, six times in the 1970s, and most recently in 1978, for a total of about $6.5 billion.

One of the most important aspects of the IMF is that its financing is provided on a "conditional" basis. That is, the borrowing countries must agree to carry out an economic program that will correct their balance of payments problems, restore creditworthiness and enable them to repay the fund in a few years.

Why are so many less-developed nations in such debt? The problem originally stems from the rising inflationary pressures in the late 1960s, the twin oil shocks of the 1970s and consequent expansion of world payments imbalances and external financing requirements. Many countries tried to avoid adjusting to new economic realities.

Last year, however, financial markets began to recognize that the people's expectations about future inflation were also changing. Therefore, levels of debt which had previously been considered manageable are now viewed as high in real terms. And with weak world markets and weak exports, the situation of many of the major borrowing nations became even more serious.

How will an increase in our share of this fund help the U.S. economy? Our economy functions within an increasingly inter-dependent world economy. Exports of American goods and services, as a share of U.S. Gross National Product, doubled between 1970 and 1979, and account for about 12 percent GNP. At present, roughly 20 percent of all goods produced in the U.S. and 40 percent of our agricultural production go into export. Over 5 percent of our labor force is employed in export-related jobs.

This year if banks were to pull back sharply in the absence of any interest or action on the part of the major industrial countries, new lending could begin to dry up. And what would happen then? Trade would have to be reduced sharply to match the new lower level of external financing. For the U.S., growth would be about 1 percentage point less than we're expecting, and our trade deficit would grow very rapidly due to the loss of $12 billion or so in exports to the developing world. Lost jobs in vital export sectors would make our own recovery that much more difficult.

Furthermore, if the debtor nations cannot service their debts and interest payments to U.S. banks are more than 90 days late, the banks stop accruing them on their books. They suffer reduced profits and bear the costs of continued funding of the loan. Provisions may have to be made for loss, and as loans are actually written off, the capital of the bank is reduced.

If this were to happen, the banks would be forced to make fewer loans to all borrowers, domestic and foreign. And this is not just a "big bank/big city" problem. Banks in most states are involved. Auto loans in Cincinnati, housing loans in Dallas, capital expansion loans in California, all would be affected.

It is critically important, therefore, to our economic interests — to U.S. economic activity, jobs, production and investment — that these problems be dealt with in a constructive, orderly and swift manner. An increase in the U.S. IMF quota will help to build a firm foundation of sound economic policy and stable growth in the international financial system.

WHEREAS, the Texas Safety Association holds its annual meeting April 24 to 27 in Houston,

NOW, THEREFORE, I, C.H. Mills Jr., Mayor of the City of Rockport do hereby proclaim the week of April 24 to 30 as

Buying good shrimp is easy

Buying shrimp at the right price is easy — if you know what to look for.

There are three common market species — whites, browns and pinks, and since they all cost, look and taste about the same after cooking, there is little reason to select one species over the other.

More importantly, select the size and market from which will best suit the recipe you intend to use.

Shrimp sizes range anywhere from 10 tails per pound to as many as 60 or more tails per pound (shell on). The larger the count per pound, the smaller the shrimp tail and, so the more work involved in eating the shrimp since each one must be peeled.

For this reason, the smaller shrimp are cheaper.

Small shrimp (36 or more per pound) are excellent in gumbos, soups, and casseroles. Medium sizes (26 to 35 count per pound) work as well as large (16 to 20 count per pound) for frying or stuffing.

Fulton

Loflin said she is against high-rises on the bay side of Fulton Beach Road and Casterline said that the council can ultimately decide the height regulations.

A sentence in the introductory paragraph of Article 9, which outlines the power of the board of adjustment, was questioned and deleted. The sentence stated that decisions of the board were not appealable to the town council. Loflin said that according to the law it is appealable and the sentence was deleted with the agreement of Belaire.

A time limit in which appeals must be decided was also placed. The ordinance originally stated that the board of adjustment must decide appeals within a reasonable time. Carter questioned this, saying that unnecessary delays could be costly to a project under construction. The time limit for decisions was changed to say within 10 days if possible and in not more than 30 days.

The rest of the ordinance was discussed without questions or protest until the end of the meeting when Mundine and several others spoke out against the acceptance of a zoning ordinance for Fulton.

"I think it discriminates against me, small businesses and trailer parks and it was designed to do so," said Mundine. "I am capable of and will make a stand against it," he continued.

When asked by Casterline and Belaire to designate specific areas which he objected to, Mundine declined to do so.

Gary LaBerge, another audience member, told council members, "I don't think Fulton is ready for this type of zoning ordinance."

Zoning committee member Jenkins asked the council to "think hard and fast" about writing an ordinance to protect the trees along Hwy. 35. With all the new area development, Jenkins said, more and more trees are disappearing every day. The council agreed with Jenkins and promissed to look into the matter further.

Survey

grant funds and the community needs survey. "You need to be sure, if we are going to invest the time and effort (in the study and fund application), that you have the backing of the council," he emphasized. "Make sure they're going to bless whatever you're doing."

The park board in other action Wednesday accepted the resignation of Gordon Dancer who has moved out of the city and therefore is no longer eligible to serve on the board. Under the ordinance establishing the park board, only residents within the city limits of Rockport may serve on the board.

The board voted on a name to submit to the city council for Dancer's replacement.

Board Chairman George McCague polled remaining park board members Wednesday to determine if anyone does not wish to be reappointed when the city council reappoints city board and commission members as required by Rockport's new city charter.

All members of the board indicated they would be willing to serve if reappointed.

Under the charter provisions, Rockport's city council has 60 days to reappoint all boards and commissions in the city.

Council says reds overfished

PANAMA CITY, FLA. — The Gulf of Mexico Fishery Management Council has reached a conclusion supporting the view held by Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials that red drum (redfish) populations have been overfished in Texas waters during the past decade.

At a meeting held here April 6-7, the council heard that its Scientific and Statistical Committee supported the position of the TP&WD which advocates regulations to protect redfish from further declines.

"Much of the council's review was based on data collected by the Parks and Wildlife Department," said Gary Matlock, the department's assistant chief of coastal fisheries. "These are the same data which have received some criticism in the past."

Matlock added that Gulf Council scientists indicated that no other state has accumulated as much reliable data on the redfish fishery as has Texas. "The council's study and conclusions will be sent to the Gulf States Marine Fisheries Commission and each Gulf state for use in their management programs," Matlock said.

Measures already taken by the TP&WD to protect redfish include stringent bag and size limits, reductions in netting and a ban on sales of redfish taken from Texas waters.

Ask Kate

Shelley's commercial past

By Kate Woods

Is Shelley Long of "Cheers" the same person who appears in The Homemaker commercials? — M.F.

One and the same. Miss Long did quite a bit of local TV in Chicago, including that commercial, before going on to "Cheers." She is yet another graduate of Chicago's Second City troupe.

CORE QUESTION — Where was the town of Appleton in the series "Apple's Way" and who played the father? — J.S.B.

WHICH WARRIOR? — I recognized the actress who starred in "The Warriors," which was just on TV, but can't place her. Please help. Also, who played Ajax in the movie? — M.F.

You must not be a fan of "Too Close for Comfort." Deborah Van Valkenburgh, who plays Ted Knight's dark-haired daughter, Jackie, on the sitcom, made her big-screen debut in that controversial Walter Hill 1979 movie. As for the hot-headed gang member Ajax, he was played by James Remar. He has also appeared in two other Hill films. He was Belle Starr's Indian husband in "The Long Riders" and is one of the killers in "48 Hrs."

Shelley Long

FIERCE PIERCE — Pierce Brosnan reminds me of a young William Powell, the same great looks and charm. Where did they find him? I'm going there to look around. — A.F.

Your charmer was "found" in "The Manions of America," a 1980 miniseries a couple of years back in which he played an Irishman who emigrated to America after the famine. The producers of that show found him in London, where Brosnan had lived since the age of 11 when his family moved from Ireland. He'd been working on the British stage and TV when he was discovered.

Send your letters to Kate Woods, United Feature Syndicate, 200 Park Ave., Room 602, New York, N.Y. 10166.

The Wine Rack

By BIANCA St. JOHN

WINE TIPS

* A new book called Italian Wine by Victor Hazan (Alfred A. Knopf, $17.95) is a helpful resource for both the novice and cognoscenti of wines from Italy. The information is organized so that types of wine are discussed together which allows the reader to find new relationships between similar wines — Barolo and Spanna, for example. Tips on buying, tasting and appreciating Italian wines are included as well as advice on reading labels and maps of the regions.

* Three new wines from Redwood Valley, CA., show a lighter style that makes them perfect accompaniments to pleasant summer meals to come. Fetzer 1982 North Coast Chenin Blanc (about $6) is soft and rich with appley fruit flavors and a crisp finish and hints of lemon and spice in the aroma. Fetzer 1982 Mendocino Gamay Beaujolais (about $5) is in the nouveau Beaujolais style, with lots of young fruit flavors and soft, fresh, cherry aromas, a light-bodied wine meant to be chilled slightly before serving. Fetzer 1981 Lake County Zinfandel (about $5) has a balance of oak, grape tannins and acid which gives the wine a firm edge, a medium-bodied wine meant to be drunk now or within the year.

* Concannon Vineyards of California's Livermore Valley is celebrating their one hundredth year of wine-making this year and commemorative wines for their centennial are soon to be released, including a very special bottling of Petite Sirah. Concannon pioneered this varietal and is known as one of the best producers of Petite Sirah.

MEDICINE CHEST

Your Professional:
Troy True, Reg. Pharmacist

What other drugs beside human insulin are being developed by genetic engineering? — C.R.

Human growth hormone was synthesized two years ago. There is no reason to believe that we can't synthesize all the other human hormones. Other examples under development are human blood proteins, specific antibodies that may even replace antibiotics in time, viral antigens for use as vaccines in hepatitis, malaria and amoebic dysentery, anticancer agents and old and new classes of antibiotics. Just about any biologically important molecule can be produced by this method.

Is it true that cancer drugs are less effective on cancer cells if the cancer had been undetected for a long time? — M.C.

Anticancer drugs are most effective against cells that are multiplying rapidly. During the initial development of the tumor, cells multiply rapidly. This rate of cell growth slows down with the passage of time. That's why early detection is so important.

How long has wine been used as a medicine? — I.L.

Archaeologists excavated a clay tablet dating back to approximately 3000 B.C. The excavation site was the ancient Summerian city of Nippur, south of the supposed biblical Babylon. The tablet described drugs made from wine.

Fashionable Linda Dano has flair for design

By Connie Passalacqua

Joan Collins as Alexis Carrington Colby on "Dynasty" may well be the best-dressed actress on television, but she's got serious competition from "Another World's" Linda Dano, who plays flamboyant romance novelist Felicia Gallant.

Felicia's passion for outrageous outfits and high-fashion clothing reflects Miss Dano's longtime real-life interest. A year ago, she turned her fashion flair into a successful sideline business.

"I've always loved coordinating outfits and wardrobes for friends," she says. "A few years back while I was playing Gretel Cummings on 'One Life to Live,' I helped Robin (Strasser, who plays Dorian Callison) and Jacquie (Courtney, who plays Pat Ashley Lord) create their own personal wardrobes. I've always loved fashion and dabbled in it. So I decided to turn it into a business and it has just skyrocketed."

Miss Dano has created wardrobes for such personalities as tennis star Billie Jean King and daytime actresses Kathleen Noone (Ellen Dalton, "All My Children") and Mary Murray (Becky Abbott, "OLTL"). She also sells clothing to costume designers of five daytime dramas.

"I'm another store for them," she explains. "Since I'm in the soap business, I know all the characters they have to buy for and it helps. My calling card is that I'm very good at finding things no one else can — from designers no one has heard of yet, to samples, or custom-made items."

Miss Dano does not sell to "AW" costume designer Lewis Brown, but she does assist him in dressing Felicia. "She's the kind of woman who would never be seen in anything twice. Lewis designs a specific outfit and together we jazz it up with all kinds of jewelry and other accessories. Felicia is much more flamboyant than Linda Dano. I love to wear the latest styles — but Felicia is always three steps ahead of me!"

MONTY PYTHON'S THE MEANING OF LIFE, from Universal City Studios, Directed by Terry Jones, written by and starring Graham Chapman, John Cleese, Terry Gilliam, Eric Idle, Terry Jones, Michael Palin. Rated 'R' ★ ★ ★

By J.T. YURKO

That varied and motley group of lunatics known as "Monty Python" has been around since 1969 when their first TV show went on late-night BBC television. Their first film was entitled "And Now for Something Completely Different," and they have never deviated from that philosophy. Of course, there are those who think the entire group is a bunch of deviates.

There are no sacred cows to the Python clan. In fact, the more revered a given subject, the higher they will hold it up for ridicule. Their second feature film attacked nothing less then "The Holy Grail."

If that seemed like an irreverent thing to do, they took the whole idea further with "Life of Brian," although "Brian" is a pseudonym of a prominent figure in the Bible. How to top that? They come up with a movie which at last solves the great question of mankind, "Monty Python's The Meaning of Life."

Imagine, you can pay your $4.50, watch this movie, and in less than two hours you will know the meaning of life! Throw out your Artistotle, disregard your Kierkegaard, your Confucius is only confusion. Peace of mind can be yours at last!

The catch is that as the title says, this is Monty Python's meaning of life, and their meaning, like this film, may not be for everyone. "The Meaning..." is broken down into various segments, much like their old TV show. Ranging from birth to death, the Pythons spoof organized religion, sex education, war, middle age, kidney transplants, overeating, and even movie musicals.

As with all Python efforts the only thing you can expect is the unexpected. Humor in Pythonland is a free-for-all-anything-goes farce, and whether or not they cross the line into bad taste will rest with your own taste buds. Whatever the type of humor, there is plenty of it in this, perhaps the wildest, most outrageous Python effort yet.

HILL STREET BLUES

Dear Debbie

DEAR DEBBIE:

There is this fellow to whom I'm really attracted. This in itself is no small feat since I've never really liked any one man all that much, but I have encountered a problem. He insists that we celebrate our relationship by taking a chartered sailboat cruise. Debbie, I am the most seasick-prone person you will ever encounter! I don't want to jeopardize our relationship and all that it means to me. How can I get out of the cruise without letting on that I hate sailing, the ocean and that I will probably never change.

LANDLUBBER

DEAR LANDLUBBER:

If this fellow is "the one" then I don't think you should withhold anything about yourself. If you are intent on building your relationship with the hope of some sort of future, then you should tell him about your aversion to sailing and the sea. If you are both a capable and compatible couple, this should present no insurmountable obstacle. I'd even be willing to guess that your man will offer an alternate plan for your mutual pleasure.

* * *

DEAR DEBBIE:

I am worried about my husband. Lately he has begun suggesting that I dress up like a man before any lovemaking. I think he might be trying to tell me that he's gay. How can you tell if a man is homosexual? Is my man sick or am I too uptight?

CONCERNED

DEAR CONCERNED:

You cannot identify homosexuality by looking at someone. In fact, many sociologists argue that every person has homosexual tendencies, however slight. Your husband most likely was exploring some little fantasy. If your lovemaking is as enthusiastic as ever and you enjoy it as well as he, then he is not sick and you are not too uptight. If it satisfies you both, why upset a good thing? However, if you find that your husband's interest in you fades and he shows marked homosexual tendencies, you may have a reason to be concerned. Why not start off by asking him if he has ever had romantic feelings for men, thereby opening up the lines of communication on this subject. If you are uncomfortable dressing up like a man, tell him so. He ought to respect your feelings.

* * *

DEAR DEBBIE:

I made a bet with my girlfriend on the outcome of a college basketball game and I lost. I never thought she'd expect me to pay up! Well, the thing has mushroomed out of all proportion and now she's threatening to break off our dating because she says I'm a deadbeat. How can I get her to cool off and get over it? You must admit, extracting a bet payoff from a dear one has shades of a Shylock. What should I do?

BRAD

DEAR BRAD:

Pay up, welsher! If you made a bet be prepared to pay it off. I can tell that you are a man of high character so if she means that much to you and if you have any pretense of being a gentleman, fork it up.

Ex-model makes grade on 'A Team'

Melinda Culea

"She's very zealous and believes she can do anything," says Melinda Culea of her role on "The A Team," NBC's smash action-adventure series. The 27-year-old former New York model plays strong-willed journalist Amy A. Allen.

"I see Amy as very intelligent. Amy is trying to fit in because she wants to work with them, not be one of them.

"There are textures in the character that I can relate to. I felt Amy was my role when I walked in to audition for the part," she says.

Miss Culea spent much time unsuccessfully searching for the right TV vehicle before she signed on with "The A Team."

"I like it because I'm learning. Hopefully, TV will give me exposure."

She sees distinct differences between her former and present careers.

"Modeling is great for a lot of people who want to make a business of it, but I was raised never to worry about looks. It was very difficult for me to just pose. Those people behind the camera weren't interested in me. In TV it is different."

Miss Culea says she isn't fazed by working with big-name series star George Peppard.

"I don't overly fantasize about famous people. After working in New York, I don't become intimidated very easily. Besides, George is a very generous actor."
