Storms bring rain to region

The weekend provided 48 hours of active weather conditions for Tampa, including a funnel cloud spotted five to seven miles west of the city and 82 of an inch of rain reported.

The funnel cloud reported by the National Weather Service did not touch down in the Tampa area and no damage was reported. More rain is expected today and tonight as the cool north front continues to lie across the southeastern area of the Panhandle.

In Tampa rainfall early Sunday morning, from thunderstorms which provided plenty of lightning and thunder, amounted to .47 inch while the remaining .35 inch came from storms, accompanied by strong winds, which moved through the area after 11 p.m. Sunday.

The golf ball size hail reported in Wheeler was actually only pea size and very spotty, according to Wheeler County Sheriff Doyle Ramsey.

"There has been no damage reported and we had 1 1/2 inches of rain," Ramsey said.

"There were areas in Shamrock that received .04 of an inch and there were areas that only received .01 of an inch of the rain. So it was really very spotty," Ramsey said.

Miami Feed and Grain reported .65 of an inch of rain on one side of Miami and .25 of an inch on the other side of the city.

"One southern area of the county reported 1.80 inches," Miami Feed and Grain officials said.

Roberts County Sheriffs Department officials said "We got some wind in town and higher velocities in the county, but there was no hail reported."

"The lightning knocked out the sheriff's base station radios but that was the only 'damage' we know of," officials said.

Information from Mobeetie Postal officials indicated that the rain amounts reached 1.08 inches there.

"There were no winds to speak of and no hail, just a lot of hard rain," officials said.

"Some local wheat fields were washed out and with the rain last week about eight inches has fallen on various areas around Mobeetie," they noted.

Setting tomorrow's interest rates

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Going, going, gone!

The investments of millions of Americans are linked to regular auctions in Washington, D.C. — auctions at which the government sells billions of dollars in short-term Treasury bills to the highest bidders.

The interest rate on six-month certificates of deposit issued by banks and thrift institutions, for example, is based on the interest rate set at the auction for six-month Treasury Bills.

The interest on the "All Savers Certificates," available starting Oct. 1, will be equal to 70 percent of the rate on one-year Treasury bills.

Even the interest on money-market funds is tied to the Treasury bills, since many of the funds invest heavily in government securities.

Treasury bills have terms of three months, six months or one year. You buy them at a discount and get the face value of the bill at maturity. The less you pay, the more interest you earn.

Three-month and six-month bills are auctioned every Monday. One-year Treasury bills are auctioned every fourth Thursday. An arm of the Treasury Department known as the financing group decides on the value of the Treasury bills which will be sold at each auction.

An investor can buy Treasury bills through a commercial bank, a securities dealer, a broker or through the nearest Federal Reserve Bank or branch. The minimum denomination is $10,000, with additional investments in increments of $5,000.

To buy a Treasury bill, you must make a bid, known as a "tender." You can submit either a competitive bid or a non-competitive bid.

If you chose a competitive bid, you must state the price you are bidding per $100 of the bill's value. The bid must be expressed in decimal terms and must be carried to three places.

You might, for example, offer $96.255 for a three-month Treasury bill. That means you are willing to pay $9,625.50 for a $10,000 Treasury bill.

Non-competitive bidders are guaranteed a Treasury bill. Only the top competitive bidders, however, will actually get to purchase the investments they seek. Competitive bids generally are made by large, institutional investors who keep a close watch on interest rates in general and have a pretty good idea of how much to offer to gain the maximum possible return without pricing themselves out of the market.

Bids for each auction are forwarded to the Bureau of Public Debt at the Treasury Department by the Federal Reserve Banks and their branches from all over the country.

The bureau's analysts determine the total of non-competitive bids and subtract that amount from the total value of the Treasury bills being offered. The remainder of the Treasury bills available are sold to the highest bidders.

Soldiers in Polish mines to boost production

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Ten thousand soldiers and recruits have reported for work in Poland's coal mines to help boost sagging coal production, the official news agency said today.

The PAP report followed dire government forecasts of widespread plant closings and possible economic collapse if coal production is not increased by 4 million tons this year.

The agency said Poland needs a minimum of 168 million tons to meet domestic needs and provide coal for export. Coal is the major fuel source here and Poland's most important earner of hard currency.

Polish officials decided Aug. 31 to send several thousand draftees into the mines for a year of work. PAP said some 2,500 soldiers and 7,500 recruits have reported to the mines so far.

In an apparent effort to put new pressure on the independent labor federation Solidarity, PAP quoted a government anti-crisis staff Sunday as saying failure to boost production was due mainly to shorter working hours.

Polish workers won a five-day week during widespread labor unrest last year and the issue of ending the six-day week nearly sparked a national strike.

It was the latest in a series of protests over control of publications and mass media. Solidarity has vowed to break the Communist state's monopoly on control of press, radio and television and gain access to the mass media.

Congress may make additional defense cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite President Reagan's request that the defense budget no longer be treated like a "poor relative," there are indications that Congress may want to cut defense spending by more than double the $13 billion, three-year package proposed by the administration.

"I feel that the overall cuts in defense should be more in the neighborhood of $30 billion," said Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee.

Senate Democratic Whip Alan Cranston of California said Sunday that the president's proposals for defense spending earlier this year "were excessive and therefore I don't think that the rather modest reductions now proposed are going to be very significant."

Reagan decided Saturday to reduce the defense budget by $2 billion next year, $5 billion in 1983 and $6 billion in 1984.

The size of the Pentagon spending reduction was the key element on which hinged other cuts Reagan will propose as he tries to keep the 1982 budget deficit close to his target of $42.5 billion and keep alive chances of a balanced budget by 1984.

Meeting today with a group of conservative congressional Democrats, Reagan said further budget cuts can be achieved "without any damage to any of government's vital services."

Posing for photographs with the group, known as the "Boll Weevils," Reagan said, "We have to cut a little more generally to achieve our goal."

He said decisions remain to be made on cuts in spending plans for fiscal 1983 and 1984.

But he told the group, whose votes helped Reagan win House approval for his budget- and tax-cut programs, that the reductions decided upon so far have not been "a large amount in decline at all," he said.

"It can be done without any damage to any of government's vital services," he said.

After returning to the White House on Sunday from Camp David, Md., Reagan said that domestic spending in fiscal year 1982 would be cut "something like" $9 billion to $14 billion.

Asked whether he let the Defense Department off the hook, Reagan replied, "No, not really."

The $2 ($2 billion cut from the 1982 proposal), I think, is all that could be asked when you stop to think that domestically, we're cutting a budget that has been overgrown — just extravagant spending — over the years while over those same years defense has been the poor relative in the act," Reagan said.

"We have not been keeping pace as we should," he said.

Budget director David A. Stockman reportedly sought defense cuts of $30 billion over the three years, while Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger held out for no cuts. Under Reagan's new plan, defense spending over the three years would be $639.3 billion.

"There was complete agreement between the three of us that these outlays could be reduced by this amount without setting us back militarily," Reagan said.

However, Domenici said the Pentagon still has not made its case for large increases, adding that the even proposed reductions would make it difficult to reach Reagan's goal of a balanced budget in 1984.

"I believe the cuts will make it very difficult to get where we have to go," Domenici said. "And I further believe that a majority of my committee and a majority of the Congress are looking for larger cuts than that."

Domenici was interviewed on CBS' "Face the Nation." Cranston made his comments on ABC's "Issues and Answers."

Reagan is tentatively scheduled to meet with his Cabinet on Tuesday or Wednesday to discuss his decisions for additional cuts in domestic programs.

The Congressional Budget Office has said additional savings of $35 billion for 1983 and $50 billion for 1984 will be necessary to achieve a balanced budget by 1984.

Congressional leaders have said it would be next to impossible to enact further domestic spending cuts without large reductions — about $30 billion over three years — in projected defense spending.

House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois said last week that a reduction in defense was needed to sell an overall package of cuts.

"Defense simply could not be sacrosanct," Michel said he told the president during a White House meeting.

One aide, who asked not to be identified, said Michel and Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. urged Reagan at that meeting to recommend a "visible cut" in defense, perhaps postponing work on a weapons system.

The reductions announced by Reagan do not appear large enough for that.

Haig says U.S. has evidence of Russians use of chemicals

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The U.S. government has evidence for the first time that lethal chemical weapons have been used in Southeast Asia, says Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr.

Haig in a televised speech in West Berlin Sunday said there have been "continuing reports" that such weapons have been used by the Soviets and their allies in Laos, Cambodia and Afghanistan.

"We now have physical evidence from Southeast Asia which has been analyzed and found to contain abnormally high levels of three potent mycotoxins — poisonous substances not indigenous to the region which are highly toxic to man and animals," he continued.

He said the use of these toxins, which are chemicals produced through biological means, is prohibited by the 1925 Geneva Protocol and that their manufacture is forbidden by the 1975 Biological Weapons Convention.

Although Haig did not say specifically that the Soviet Union was responsible, the Soviet news agency Tass accused him of "unfounded and false assertions...to divert the attention of the world public from the real threat, which is brought by the U.S. militarist policy as well as the preparation, started by Washington, for a chemical war."

Other U.S. officials who didn't want to be identified said one of the chemicals is trichothecene toxin, known as T-2, which they said occurs naturally in grain molds common in the Soviet Union.

Time magazine recently reported that people in Afghanistan, Laos and Cambodia have reported a "yellow rain" that caused a burning sensation, convulsions and massive internal bleeding resulting in death. The U.S. government is understood to believe that T-2 may account for this, and Time said evidence of T-2 has been found in soil samples from Cambodia that have been analyzed in the United States.

Haig said more detailed information on the alleged use of chemical weapons in Southeast Asia would be released in Washington today.

Hurricane may strengthen

MIAMI (AP) — Hurricane Harvey took a leisurely northwest course over the open Atlantic today, and forecasters said its 85 mph winds could strengthen by tonight.

The hurricane, spinning along at about 12 mph, posed no immediate threat to land, according to forecasters at the National Hurricane Center here.

"It's so far away that we can't give any prediction on the amount of threat it poses to the (U.S.) mainland or to Bermuda," said forecaster Gil Clark. "It's headed in that direction but it will be several days before we know how much of a threat it is."

At 6 a.m. EDT, Harvey was centered near latitude 25.5 north, longitude 63.0 west, or about 485 miles south-southeast of Bermuda and 500 miles north-northeast of San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Forecaster Miles Lawrence noted that Harvey could follow the pattern of other tropical storms that have developed in recent weeks by curving away from the U.S. mainland, but he added it was "a little too early to know that for sure."

Egypt, U.S. to hold joint military exercises

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egypt and the United States will stage joint military exercises next month for the third time in 15 months, Egypt's defense minister was quoted as saying today.

Mayo, a weekly newspaper published by the ruling National Democratic Party, quoted Gen. Mohamed Abdel Halim Ghazala as saying details of the maneuvers had not been worked out yet.

The two nations held joint desert maneuvers between July and October, 1980, and again last November.

Egypt, meanwhile, sent Taher Shash, deputy director of Egypt's Foreign Ministry, to Tel Aviv on Sunday for normalization talks with Israel as outlined at last month's summit meeting between President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

However, the Israeli negotiator's trip to Cairo was postponed indefinitely because Egyptian officials want an explanation for a controversial statement he reportedly made, the semi-official Cairo daily al-Ahram reported Sunday.

The Israeli representative, military Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Raphael Eytan, reportedly said peace between his country and Egypt would collapse if Sadat were overthrown. An Israeli military spokesman said Eytan was misquoted by the Israeli press, and that plans for his trip to Cairo had not been finalized.

Officials in Jerusalem said they did not know of any request from Cairo concerning Eytan's comments a week ago.

Sadat and Begin agreed to revive the stalled normalization talks during their summit meeting despite strong differences on the issue of Palestinian autonomy.

Egypt's deputy prime minister said today that he "getting more confident that all the countries who are devoted to peace agree and support our endeavors to achieve the rights for the Palestinians and to establish a Palestinian entity on the West Bank (of the Jordan River) and Gaza."

Kamal Hassan Aly made the remarks to reporters in Peking during a tour of Asian countries.

In Syria, U.S.-Israeli joint military maneuvers announced last week by Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. drew the ire of the official media.

Weather

The forecast calls for partly cloudy conditions with a 30 percent chance of thunder showers today and a 20 percent chance tonight. The high for today will be in the mid 80s with overnight lows in the upper 50s.

Will nation's new economic program misfire?

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) - The question before the public is whether the new economic program that's supposed to thrust America into a new era has within it some inherent contradictions that might make it misfire.

Nobody has offered incontestable evidence of this because, alas, all theories of economics past or present can be and are debated. In fact, economics may have contributed more to debate than to understanding.

Seldom has the debate heated up so quickly as it has in the past month or so, a period in which the president rested on his laurels after an impressive public relations and marketing campaign for his program.

The second thoughts suddenly grew like weeds in an untended garden, and now they mar the public's image of the program. The critics now say the program isn't as unified, as neatly tied together, as was supposed. "Reagan is beating the horse and pulling the reins at the same time," announced Richard

Day, a University of Southern California economist. High interest and continued inflation are partly the fault of the president, said Day last Friday, when the debate reached a peak.

What Day means is that the president is seeking to stimulate growth and productivity through tax cuts, but that he hasn't yet compensated for the expected lower revenues through comparable spending cuts.

In some respects, critics are saying, the president seeks both a conservative and a liberal economic stance.

career and I finally decided that I had to make a decision one way or the other by... because at the same time I was working for their coin dealer and I really liked it," he said in an interview. "I finally made a decision to quit the academic world, and I went on to found my own coin company."

McNall concentrated on antique coins, partly because that was what he liked and partly because he thought they would make good investments.

New Fort Worth bishop calls disarmament a 'moral problem'

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - The new bishop of the Fort Worth Roman Catholic Diocese says nuclear disarmament is a "major moral problem," not merely a political issue.

The Most Rev. Joseph Patrick Delaney, 47, was ordained before an audience of 7,000 people Sunday in a special Mass and ceremony at the Tarrant County Convention Center.

"Many see disarmament as a political issue, but I see it as a serious moral problem," Delaney said at a press conference that preceded the ordination ceremony.

The former chancellor of the Brownsville Roman Catholic Diocese was among several Catholic bishops who last week endorsed the stand of Amarillo Bishop Leroy T. Matthieson, who urged workers at the Pantex nuclear weapons plant near Amarillo to consider quitting their jobs.

Matthieson's statement came after President Reagan authorized the deployment of the neutron bomb. The Pantex plant will serve as a key assembly point for the new weapon, federal Defense Department officials have said.

Delaney told reporters that religious leaders must speak out on moral issues, but he said he wouldn't get involved in partisan politics.

Disarmament, he said, is not a political issue.

Delaney's ordination ceremony was sung and spoken in English and in Spanish and was accompanied by contemporary guitar music and 9th century Gregorian chants.

The climax of the ceremony came as Archbishop Patrick Flores of San Antonio, the ordaining bishop, solemnly laid his hands on the head of the kneeling Delaney.

Bishop John J. Cassata, the first bishop of the Fort Worth Diocese, who announced his retirement last year, then laid his hands on the head of the new bishop. Twenty other Texas bishops joined in the "laying on of hands" rite descended from the early church as a symbol of the outpouring of the Holy Spirit.

O'Connor disarmed opposition

WASHINGTON (AP) - From her first moment in the congressional spotlight to her final day of testimony, Sandra Day O'Connor quickly disarmed her conservative opposition and set the stage for this week's Senate vote on her Supreme Court nomination.

As a result, Mrs. O'Connor, chosen by President Reagan to become the first woman on the high court, is likely to be confirmed with barely a ripple of opposition.

Admittedly, a strong feeling in Congress that it is time to end 191 years of all-male domination of the high court is giving Mrs. O'Connor's nomination an added boost.

Support for the nomination also has crossed party lines.

"I have finally found an issue on which I can agree with Sen. (Barry) Goldwater," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., a member of the Judiciary Committee. Goldwater, R-Ariz., is an avid supporter of Mrs. O'Connor, an Arizona appeals court judge.

A vote is scheduled Tuesday in the Senate Judiciary Committee with confirmation in the full Senate likely the next day.

Congress also was expected this week to receive President Reagan's latest rounds of budget cuts, including a proposal to cut $13 billion from the defense budget.

The Senate planned to vote on a new attempt to break a liberal-led filibuster against a ban on school busing, while the House was scheduled to consider legislation that would increase military pay scales.

The strongest challenges to Mrs. O'Connor's nomination came almost exclusively from the increasingly-powerful organizations - including the fundamentalist Moral Majority - that favor reversal of the 1973 Supreme Court decision that legalized abortions.

And it was their supporters on the committee who tried hardest to break Mrs. O'Connor's sustained, if polite, refusal to indicate how she might rule on any issue to come before court, especially abortion.

"Our questioning must be tough and direct," said Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, as the hearings began Wednesday.

Such organizations as the Right-to-Life Committee say legalized abortion signals the breakdown of family life in America.

So, even before answering questions, Mrs. O'Connor, an Arizona appeals court judge, proudly introduced her own "close" family: John, her husband of 29 years, and three sons - two in law school and the third in business.

Iran identifies president's assassin, sets third presidential election date

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Iran's revolutionary regime scheduled its third presidential election in 2 1/2 years for Oct. 2, and said the secretary of the national Security Council assassinated the last president and prime minister.

Tehran Radio, in announcing the election date Sunday, did not name any candidates. A three-day registration period ends today, and the Interior Ministry said the Council of Guardians would select presidential candidates who are devout Moslems loyal to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Islamic republic.

The ruling Islamic Republic Party is expected to decide who will be president and perhaps allow one or two paper candidates to enter the race as window dressing to give the appearance of a contest. But the IRP's choice is considered certain of election.

President Mohammad Ali Rajai and Prime Minister Mohammad Bahaonar were killed by a fire bomb at the prime minister's office on Aug. 30, 38 days after Rajai was elected by a landslide to replace ex-President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr.

Tehran Radio said Sunday the bomb was set off by Masoud Keshmiri, the secretary of the Security Council, and he, too, was killed. It said the "hypocrite" infiltrated the ruling circle and "had knowledge of practically everything."

"Hypocrite" is the term often used by Iranian leaders for members of the leftist Mujahadeen Khalq, the Islamic-Marxist guerrilla group fighting Khomeini's fundamentalist regime.

The government radio also reported attacks on Mujahadeen hideouts in Kazerun, Ramsar and Kermanshah and said three "pro-American hypocrites" were killed and 14 were captured.

Since Bani-Sadr was forced out of office by the clergy-led Islamic Republican Party in June, more than 200 officials of the party and government have been assassinated.

Time magazine reported Sunday it had learned from sources within Khomeini's regime of an unannounced execution Sept. 4 in which about 150 prisoners were taken from Tehran's Evin Prison and put to death.

Fast thinking prevents abduction of man

After a double armed robbery at an East Brown Street convenience store here early today, the hijacker and would-be abductor was locked out of a car by a fast-thinking Oklahoma man and forced to flee on foot.

Pampa police today are looking for a short man, believed to be 19 to 23 years old, with brown hair, and wearing a brown shirt and blue jeans. The robbery suspect was about five feet, seven inches tall and needed a shave, police said.

The robberies at the Allsup's Store, 201 E. Brown, were reported to police at 2:30 a.m. today.

The man entered the store, showed a butcher knife to the clerk on duty and said, "Give me all the money in the cash register and hurry," police said. The suspect apparently thought the clerk was too slow getting the money, so he reached across the counter and grabbed a small amount of cash, stuffing it into his pocket.

Police said the suspect then told the clerk to get a package of cigarettes for him. The man cut the telephone cord. He tied the clerk with the cord, leaving the bound store employee lying behind the counter.

The suspect left the store, and then returned, police said.

At this time, William T. Parks, 63, of Reydon, Okla., entered the store. The suspect took Parks' money, about $150, from him while holding the knife on him, police said. Parks was forced to his vehicle parked outside the store.

Police said the suspect attempted to have Parks drive him from the scene. Parks was told to enter the driver's side, and while the suspect was walking around the car to the other door, Parks quickly locked the doors.

The suspect was last seen running from the store.

Autopsies ordered in deaths

BORGER, Texas (AP) - Autopsies have been ordered on the bodies of two men who authorities believe may have died after they swallowed a poisonous substance, police said.

There were no signs of injury on either of the men, who were found in a local residence about 5 p.m. Saturday, Borger police Lt. Charlie Keys said.

Police identified the two men as Richard Joe "Ricky" Bowman and Ricky Lynn Bowling, both lifelong Borger residents.

Keys said investigators hoped autopsy results, expected to be released today, would shed more light on the baffling case.

"I don't know of any criminal charges as yet that'll come out of it," he added.

Keys said "a man called" to summon police, who found one of the men dead when they arrived at the house. The other died at the hospital.

Neither one of the men lived in the house, Keys said.

Search for 2 abducted children and Arabian focuses on Texas

AURORA, Colo. (AP) — Authorities in Texas have been notified to be on the lookout for an Arabian geologist believed to have abducted his two children from his estranged American wife here.

The search was focused on Corpus Christi, Texas, after an attorney for the mother received an anonymous tip that the children's father, Mustafa Ukayli, 38, was intending to travel to Corpus Christi.

"We feel they flew out of Stapleton Airport" in Denver and are still in the country, said Sgt. Bill Herman of the Aurora Police Department. "Then again, he could be in Saudi Arabia by now. But it's the only lead we have and we're working on it very hard."

Herman said the State Department has told him it will enter the case if information shows the children have been taken out of the country.

Ben Aisenberg, attorney for the children's 29-year-old mother, who is now using the assumed name of Kristine A. Uhlman, said Sunday night that attempts were being made to get the FBI involved in the case "but we're running into a lot of red tape and we're afraid time is short. He (Ukayli) has certainly had time to get out of the country. If that happens, it's a different ball game, and Mrs. Uhlman will probably never see her kids again."

Mrs. Uhlman said she fled Kuwait with her children on June 23 with the help of the State Department. She said she obtained sole custody of her children last month.

The boy and girl — Hani, 2, and Maisoon, 4 — were abducted Friday night from in front of their mother's apartment in this Denver suburb. Witnesses said the children were kicking and screaming as a man who fit the description of their father and three other men hustled them into a van.

The van was found abandoned three blocks away, and a rental car was returned to the rental agency at the airport about 15 minutes later by a man matching Ukayli's description, police said.

Jeffrey L. Hill, an attorney for the father, telephoned Aurora police about 15 minutes after the children were taken on instructions from his client. "I advised the police that what had happened was that the natural father had taken his children back," said Hill.

Hill said he did not know where Ukayli had gone with the children.

A warrant was issued for Ukayli, who is a geophysics professor at the University of Petroleum and Minerals in Saudi Arabia that has a branch office in Houston, Texas.

Aisenberg said he was contacted by an anonymous caller Sunday morning who said Ukayli had hired a private investigator to stake out the Uhlman home for a week prior to the children's abduction.

Unique taxis show tourists Texas

DALLAS (AP) — Tenderfoot travelers visiting the Lone Star State can tour Dallas in true Texas tradition thanks to a novel taxi service that caters to would-be cowboys who "like their beer cold and their tops down."

"What we've done is come up with a concept to entertain out-of-towners coming to Dallas expecting to see what they think of as Texas," says Dewitt Ray III, one of three partners who own a trio of white El Dorado Cadillacs complete with Longhorn hood ornaments, Texas flags and cowboy chauffeurs.

"People who come to Dallas are often disappointed. They just see another city, not the true Texas things that Dallas has to offer," he said. "We want people to get a true taste of Texas."

The three convertible limousines, adorned with a set of horns stretching the width of the car, have gained some notoriety since the three men opened for business last May, Ray said.

"We did the Cattle Barons' Ball held at Southfork and picked up the entire crew of the television series 'Dallas,'" Ray said. "Larry Hagman (who plays the villainous J.R. Ewing) loved it. He called us about a month ago and asked for two cars to be brought out and used in the last filming they did here."

But for $50 an hour, the limo service offers more than just a dressed up Cadillac.

"We offer entertainment in transit. The chauffeurs are dressed in boots, jeans, a white cowboy shirt and hat," Ray said. "There's yellow roses for the ladies — you know, like the 'Yellow Rose of Texas' — and there's cigars for the men and Lone Star Longnecks (beer) for everybody."

Ray and partners Kirk Dooley and Tom Stephenson came up with the idea last October.

"Kirk came to me and said, 'We have people coming in from out of town all the time. Why don't we find a way to make them feel like they're in Texas?' So we came up with the idea of the taxi service," Ray said.

"We thought of having a convertible with horns and when anybody thinks of Texas they think of those big, white Texas Cadillac Eldorados."

Ray says the customers love being in the limelight as they tour downtown Dallas in the attention-grabbing taxis.

"It's like a parade. Instant recognition. People on the street come up and ask about the car and about the people in the back. Our customers just eat it up."

State court districts need to be reorganized, task to be difficult

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Now that legislative and congressional districts have been redrawn to fit Texas' fast growing and shifting population, some feel it is time to think about state court boundaries.

However, there is great reluctance to take on the task.

Judges do not like to be moved or disturbed. More than a third of all House and Senate members are lawyers, and lawyers don't like to make judges unhappy.

"Since 1876 there has never been a redistricting of our judicial districts," Chief Justice Joe Greenhill of the Texas Supreme Court told the 1981 Legislature in his state-of-the-judiciary speech. "You have put on a patch here and there, but the dockets of our trial judges are greatly disproportionate."

Greenhill went on to say that "whether it is desirable to redistrict or to simply continue to add new trial judges is a matter for you to decide."

Greenhill also suggested the Legislature might want to name an interim committee to study the redistricting problem and report back to the 1983 Legislature.

By legislative action, it was apparent the House and Senate preferred creating new judgeships instead of redistricting.

One bill passed early in the session added 18 new district courts, mostly the ones Gov. Bill Clements vetoed after the 1979 Legislature because he could not appoint all the new judges.

Then, near the June 1 end of the regular session, the Legislature passed another "omnibus" courts bill that created an additional 19 district courts.

Clements got to appoint all the 37 new judges.

The Legislature made no move toward an interim committee on judicial redistricting.

However, according to Rep. Buck Florence, D-Hughes Springs, chairman of the House Committee on Judicial Affairs, there will be a special study on judicial district changes with a report to the new Legislature in January 1983.

"There will be a special committee from the House Judicial Affairs committee to make an extensive study of the work loads of trial judges in Texas," Florence said. "We will say where they are needed and where they are not needed."

Florence said the House committee would attempt to do by administrative measures what also could be done by changing district boundaries. Presiding judges of the nine administrative judicial districts have the power to assign active or retired district judges within that district. The state chief justice may assign judges from one part of the state to another, depending on need.

"We've got to see that judges are placed where they can do the most good," Florence said.

Face surgery changes girl's life

DALLAS (AP) — It was a Cinderella story with the characters slightly changed. The fairy godmother was missing, but a surgeon's skill worked just as much magic for Gay Lynn Latham and her severely deformed face.

The 19-year-old Stephenville woman was born with Crouzon's syndrome, a birth defect in which the skull and middle face don't develop properly. Her eyes, too large for the bony sockets, bulged beyond the lids. Her chin protruded and her teeth were so poorly aligned that even chewing food was a problem.

Her lids would slip behind her eyes, and her mother had to help pull them back out.

"The boys called me 'bug eyes.' I don't know how many times I went home crying," she said.

"I couldn't understand it. I was afraid of strangers. They would stare. I tried to avoid large crowds so I wouldn't have to face the stares."

When she was 13, an internationally known French surgeon selected her for a new radical plastic surgery procedure at Children's Medical Center in Dallas. The surgery sculpted a new life for her as well as a new face.

"The surgery changed my entire life. I wouldn't be where I am today without the surgery. Now I am just as good-looking as the majority of people... I am just normal," Gay said.

She is married, has a job and plans a career in nursing — all achievements she says would have been impossible without the surgery.

In March 1974, she was among 20 children brought to Dallas for examination by a team of doctors led by French surgeon Dr. Paul Tessier, who pioneered the technique. She was one of nine children chosen as teaching cases.

In the past, such children would undergo dozens of operations with little change. Tessier, however, devised a technique in which an incision is made from one ear over the top of the head to the other ear, separating the facial skin from the skull and pulling it down past the nose.

He cuts the bony structure across the forehead and down the temples, then pulls the structure forward and braces it into a normal position with bone grafts. The bony orbits of the eyes are enlarged. Facial skin then is pulled up and stitched into place behind the hairline.

The operation involves some risk, but few have died from the procedure.

"We knew it was an intense and serious surgery," said Gerry Beaver, Gay's mother. "But we felt at that particular time in her life, she needed it. She was 13. It was an important period for a young girl to look her best."

Her head, except for her mouth, was wrapped in bandages for three weeks. She couldn't talk for a week because of a tube placed in her throat to help her breathe.

"When they removed the bandages, it was indescribable. There was such a difference. We were overwhelmed," Mrs. Beaver said.

Several days passed before Gay could bring herself to look in the mirror — and it was several months before she really believed she looked better.

But five months later, she returned to school and "felt normal for the first time," Gay recalled.

Fishermen seek lifting of redfish catching ban

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — After two weeks without catching a redfish, commercial fishermen want a federal judge to let them resume harvesting the popular species.

A group of fishermen and seafood dealers planned to ask U.S. District Judge James DeAnda today to throw out a state law that put redfish and speckled trout off the commercial fisherman's hook for two years beginning Sept. 1.

DeAnda refused to keep the law from going into effect on the scheduled date and instead scheduled today's hearing.

The Texas Legislature passed the controversial redfish law after sports fishermen and state wildlife officials said the species was being overharvested by commercial fishermen.

The law bans commercial catches of redfish and speckled trout for two years. After that time, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department will survey the fish populations and recommend whether to continue the ban.

Commercial fishermen claim they are being discriminated against because sportsmen may continue hooking the popular fish.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coving Commandment.

Reagan's reasons for confrontation

That encounter between two U.S. Navy F-14s and a pair of Libyan fighters over the Gulf of Sidra was a one-sided affair, but it served as a pointed reminder that showing the flag in troubled corners of the world does entail some risk.

Had the attacking Libyan pilots been flying any of the MIG-23s or Mirage IIIs in their air force inventory rather than the less capable SU-22s, the results of the dogfight might have been far different.

Still risks must always be weighed against potential gains. And President Reagan had two good reasons to challenge Libyan dictator Moammar Khadafy's bogus claim to absolute sovereignty over Mediterranean waters extending 200 miles from Libya's coast.

First, Reagan wanted to serve notice that the United States, a nation separated from its allies and vital resources by vast oceans, would insist on its rights of free passage in waters regarded as international by everyone but Col. Khadafy.

Second, the president sought to restrain Khadafy's reckless international conduct, including financial support for terrorists and insurgents in a score of countries by demonstrating that the United States wouldn't permit itself or its allies to be bullied by adventurers in the pay of the Soviet Union.

These points have now been made in the one way that people like Khadafy best understand. Thus, it might be said that American interests are less threatened today than they were a few weeks ago.

Israel, Egypt, the Sudan, Tunisia and Morocco — all friends of the United States and all prominent on Khadafy's hit list — have been given reason for renewed confidence in the credibility of American protection.

More important, Khadafy's sponsors in Moscow now have one more reason to regard Reagan as an adversary not to be taken lightly. That fact most assuredly makes the world a less dangerous place.

There is, of course, nothing new about deploying military forces in support of political objectives during peacetime. It's been a staple of international diplomacy for centuries, not least because it's a proven way of defending national interest without actually going to war.

Since 1945, U.S. Air, ground or naval units have been placed on alert or dispatched to crisis areas (excluding Korean and Vietnam) on more than 200 occasions.

The definitive 1978 study by the liberal Brookings Institution, which might be expected to oppose such "gunboat diplomacy," concluded that most of these alerts and deployments succeeded at least temporarily in securing American objectives. And only a handful involved any shooting.

Reagan chose wisely and well in selecting the time, place and means for a confrontation with Khadafy. And, if history is any guide, what happened over the Gulf of Sidra should lessen rather than increase the likelihood of a more serious confrontation in the future.

Berlin Wall remains monument to failure

The world recently marked the 20th anniversary of the most infamous wall in world history. It was on Aug. 13, 1961, that the East German military threw up a barbed wire barrier between the Soviet occupation zone of Berlin and the zones occupied by the United States, Britain and France. Later that barrier was expanded to a 100-mile wall of concrete topped with wire and guarded by tank traps, watchtowers and automatic machine guns.

Prior to the Berlin barrier, walls had been used to keep enemies out of cities. The greatest wall of all, in China, was built for defense purposes. The Berlin Wall was built to keep people in.

In the year before the wall was erected, 150,000 East Germans had fled westward, and Berlin was the easiest escape route. Escapes were averaging 1,800 a day when the barrier was erected. Many of these were skilled technicians and skilled workers, the people who keep an economy going. East Germany simply could not stand the losses.

As a tool for keeping East Germans prisoners of an authoritarian regime, the wall worked. More than 70 East Germans died attempting to escape across the wall and West Germans still mark the sites of these deaths with flowers.

But the brutal effectiveness of the border guards discouraged large-scale defections.

In the years immediately after the wall was built, Western political leaders used Berlin as a showcase. West Berlin had been completely rebuilt, its people were busy and the economy was booming. In the Soviet sector, visible from the West, the ravages of war were still evident. Shattered buildings were standing unoccupied. Rubble littered the streets. Traffic was practically nonexistent.

The view from the West, including the wall itself, made an effective argument for the benefits of a free economy and a free life over the Communist-controlled society on the other side.

The fact that the wall still is standing after 20 years is mute testimony to the failure of the Communist doctrine which still governs East Berlin. Obviously, if physical restraint still is required to keep East Germans home, those differences in lifestyles which were so obvious 20 years ago must still exist.

After 20 years the Berlin Wall might best be described as an ugly monument to the failure of a Communist regime.

BY ROBERT WAGMAN
ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (NEA) — Normally the nation's governors devote themselves at their annual summerfests to a little politicking, a few statements that they hope will be picked up by the media back home and a lot of socializing.

But business was much on the minds of those who attended this year's meeting of the National Governors' Association. Most came to this new gambling center with one overriding concern: money.

The administration's tax and budget cuts will cost the states dearly. Most of the governors face the problem of how to make due with a lot less.

First there is the "new federalism" that will transfer to the states — in the form of block grants — the administrative and financial responsibility for dozens of programs that have been administered and financed by Washington. The block grants will amount to only about 70 percent of the current funding for these programs.

Finally there is the federal tax cut

States scramble for funds that the governors estimate will lower state revenues by more than $2 billion in the next year alone.

Most of the states link their taxes in one way or another to those collected by the federal government. Fewer tax dollars going to Washington will mean fewer tax dollars going to many state capitals.

Businesses and individuals in some states compute their state income tax by taking a percentage of their federal income tax. The state of New York, for example, will lose at least $100 million next year and more in the two succeeding years because of this form of linkage.

All of this has led to near panic among most governors and to much debate about the options open to them.

The option of increasing state and local taxes — perhaps the ultimate heresy in the current political climate received little attention in public but quite a bit in private. One who was not afraid to describe tax increases as "inevitable" was John Y. Brown, the Democratic governor of Kentucky.

"These guys (the other governors) are afraid of the issue," he said. "But it won't go away. The federal government is giving us these responsibilities but is not picking up the cost. In Kentucky, our state revenue might eventually drop 30 percent. We have made deep budget cuts already, about 16 percent, and it will be very difficult to cut more."

"The only answer is that over the next few years there will have to be an upward adjustment of state and local tax bases to make up for some of the revenue cuts."

Others did not see things this way. Christopher "Kit" Bond, the Republican governor of Missouri, expressed the view shared by many of his colleagues that the states would simply have to make due with less.

"Our voters have spoken," said Bond. "Last year they rejected higher taxes in several local elections and voted a state tax lid. We are going to have to wait and see exactly what our income level is going to be and what our responsibility is going to be. Then we are going to have to start to cut. Some of the cuts will hurt; some will undoubtedly out-rage some interest groups."

In public many of the governors agreed with Bond that states would have to take the political heat for cutting the programs being given to them with the block grants. But in private they sounded more like Brown in predicting that states would be forced to raise taxes.

This problem appears to be leading to a major fight over taxing sources among federal, state and local governments. Georgia Gov. George Busbee, the outgoing chairman of the association, warned that "the federal government, if it is going to try to pass to us the responsibilities for programs it now funds, will have to find us additional tax sources."

But local governments, just as hard pressed for revenues, think the states are already hogging too much of the state local pie.

Indianapolis Mayor William Hudnut, a Republican who chairs the National League of Cities, was a not-so-impartial observer at the governors' meeting. "State legislatures are more and more limiting taxing sources available to cities and local governments," he complained. "Unless this stops and we are given the ability to find new sources of revenue, we are going to be in grave trouble."

So, the scramble for funds is on. And some of that money you will get from the Reagan tax cut may well have to go back to your local government.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Monday, Sept. 14, the 257th day of 1981. There are 108 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Sept. 14, 1613, Turkey invaded Hungary.

On this date:

In 1812, Napoleon Bonaparte entered Moscow, and Russians set fires throughout the city.

In 1829, the Russo-Turkish war ended with the Treaty of Adrianople.

In 1847, United States forces under Gen. Winfield Scott occupied Mexico City.

In 1962, the Soviet government it would accept, with reservations, a U.S. declaration that no American military intervention in Cuba was planned.

Ten years ago: U.N. Secretary General U Thant accepted Communist China's declaration that it would refuse membership in the world body as long as the Chinese nationalists remained.

Five years ago: With the U.S. ready to cast a veto, the United Nations Security Council postponed consideration of Vietnam's bid for U.N. membership.

One year ago: Turkey's new military leaders said they had arrested 182 terrorists in an eastern province as door-to-door searches continued.

Today's birthdays: former Democratic Sen. Dick Clark of Iowa is 52 years old. Australian actress Zoe Caldwell is 48.

Our man in Managua

By DON GRAFF

Learning to live with a revolution is not easy, as Lawrence Pezzullo was U.S. ambassador to Nicaragua, having served in that Central American hotspot for two turbulent years. He arrived as despot Anastasio Somoza was clearing out, the American connection that had long sustained his family in power severed. He leaves as Somoza's successors, the revolutionary Sandinista government, and Washington are just beginning to talk seriously about a new relationship between the two countries.

In the interim, it has been rough going for Pezzullo and Nicaragua.

The Sandinista revolution, after the brief period of post-victory euphoria, has found the problems it inherited — compounded by some of its own creation — even more challenging than foreseen. The war had devastated a country already impoverished from a half century of looting by the Somozas. As a final legacy, the last of the line left it burdened with a $1.6 billion foreign debt, most of which had gone into his own bank accounts.

The war had been won by an alliance of leftist Sandinistas and idle-class moderates that did not love servile victory. Shut out of political control and relegated to a subsidiary economic role, private interests have assumed an opposition position. They want a share of power and elections.

There are also external complications. It has not helped understanding between Managua and Washington that the latter views Nicaraguan developments not solely on their own merits but in the context of the civil war in neighboring El Salvador in which the United States is directly involved.

Washington's concern is twofold — the contagious political effect of the Nicaraguan revolution in El Salvador and elsewhere throughout the unstable region and, in material terms, the funneling of arms to the Salvadoran rebels. For the Sandinistas, it is a dilemma. Their natural sympathies are with Salvadoran and other rebels. But they are in no position to carry to an extreme defiance of the outside power that is the only realistic source of aid on the scale they require.

Then there is the matter of the Sandinistas' open Cuban connection, their acceptance of Soviet arms and a buildup of their forces that Washington complains threatens neighbors. Managua has its counter complaints, against veterans of Somoza's national guard who stage hit-and-run attacks from across the Honduran border and the military training of right-wing Nicaraguan exiles in Florida.

Under the circumstances, the temperature of Nicaraguan-American relations dropped from cool to frigid. Pezzullo's relations, however, remained warm with both Nicaraguan factions. Avoiding taking sides and serving as a sometimes mediator, he earned the respect of both, no small accomplishment for the representative of the American presence that most Nicaraguans blame for their country's plight.

But more surprisingly, also with Washington. A Carter administration appointee, he had been expected to be one of the first of its Latin American envoys to be instructed to pack up. Instead, he was kept on an indication of his apolitical success in both representing the United States in Managua and explaining Nicaragua to Washington.

He leaves now of his own accord, to write a book on the problems of dealing with revolutionary governments, and as things are looking up ever so slightly. The Sandinistas and private interests have been engaged in discussions if not to resolve differences, at least to learn to live together. Elections are promised for 1985, with campaigning to begin the previous year.

And the State Department has begun direct talks with the revolutionaries in Managua. Learning to live with each other under circumstances so radically changed by the Nicaraguan revolution won't be easy, but it's at least a start.

His basic view of a revolutionary movement, Pezzullo has said, is that it is advisable to accept it and move with it. Its development can be more productively influenced that way than by hostility.

If that message registers in Washington, history may record his two years in Managua as a watershed in U.S.-Latin American relations.

Worst of the four letter words

Words heretofore considered vile and filthy are now gratuitously added to movies for the admitted purpose of getting a PG rating.

The naughtiness implied by the PG rating is a proved attractant for a certain class of theater-goers.

But in the news business we deal daily — necessarily — with one of the worst of the four-letter words.

It's a word most men never entirely understand.

Few women fully comprehend its meaning.

Some do.

The word is "rape."

Rape.

Criminologists used to consider forcible rape a sex-related offense.

Now they're convinced it's a "hate-related crime," having little to do with carnal gratification.

Women and girls who dress like the revealing pictures in "ladies' magazines" turn heads, invite comment:

"She's asking for it..."

But the rapist is more likely to select the aging charwoman than the juvenile beauty.

None of us likes to be violated — whether it is by the burglar in our house, the fender-bender who leaves no note...

Or the rapist.

Maybe little Sheryl Brown's rape was not all that different.

Police say the Dallas girl was raped by a 36-year-old man, "no question about it"; she pointed out the man...

But nobody will be tried because there is nobody left to testify.

Sheryl, despondent, blaming herself for someone else's guilt, wrote a note to her mother...

Then killed herself for a shame that was not hers.

Maybe it was ours.

Our nation's population increases less than one percent per year. Rape is increasing 15 percent this year.

If the increase is a mystery to socialists, it is no mystery to historians.

Since the ancients, the plunders of empires have robbed and raped.

Women were a part of the spoils of conquest.

Today's society teaches the have-nots to expect a share of what the haves have.

And for the unenlightened, it is but as short step from expecting what you need to taking what you want.

'Hill Street Blues' big Emmy winner

LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC, languishing in the ratings cellar, won the most awards at the Emmy presentations thanks to its critically acclaimed but struggling police drama "Hill Street Blues," which grabbed a record eight Emmys.

The ABC comedy series "Taxi" was runnerup, picking up six of the golden statuettes Sunday night at the 33rd Television Academy Awards.

The controversial CBS movie "Playing for Time" about life in a Nazi concentration camp received four Emmys, including best actress in a special to Vanessa Redgrave, whose casting as a camp inmate stirred up protest because of her anti-Israeli views.

"Hill Street Blues," which made its debut in January, won as best drama series, and Daniel J. Travanti picked up an award for best actor in a drama series. Barbara Babcock for best lead actress and Michael Conrad for best supporting actor. Its writers, director, sound editor and cinematographer also were honored.

The big Emmy haul could attract new viewers to "Hill Street Blues." The eight awards bested the record for a regular series held by "The Julie Andrews Hour," which won seven in 1972-73.

Producers Michael Kozoll and Steven Bochco, who won an Emmy for writing the first episode of "Hill Street Blues," thanked "the most fabulous bosses we've ever had" for supporting the show. Bochco added, "Thank you, Fred Silverman, wherever you are." Silverman was head of NBC when the show premiered, and was succeeded by Grant Tinker, who guided the show when he was president of MTM Enterprises.

"Taxi," a show about New York cabbies, was named best comedy. Judd Hirsch was named best lead actor in a comedy and Danny DeVito, the dyspeptic dispatcher, was named best supporting actor. It also won for writing, directing and film editing.

"Playing for Time" also was named best drama special, and Emmys also went to Jane Alexander for best supporting actress in a special and to Arthur Miller for his screenplay.

Anthony Hopkins won as best actor in a limited series or special for his portrayal of Adolf Hitler in "The Bunker," a CBS special.

NBC won a total of 20 Emmys. CBS, which broadcast the three-hour ceremony, received 18. ABC got 12. PBS got eight and one Emmy went to a syndicated series, "The Muppet Show," for writing.

Isabel Sanford was named best lead actress in a comedy series for CBS' "The Jeffersons." Her first award in the show's eight years. She rushed in from backstage where she was munching a snack to accept her award, saying, "At last!" Still chewing, she said, "I have a piece of cheese in my mouth. I wasn't expecting this. I've been waiting so long all my humility is gone."

The Emmy for the outstanding variety, music or comedy program went to

"Lily: Sold Out," a CBS musical comedy starring Lily Tomlin. It was Miss Tomlin's fifth Emmy.

Eileen Brennan was named best supporting actress for her role in the CBS comedy "Private Benjamin" as the strict captain she created in the movie.

The program's hosts were Shirley MacLaine and Edward Asner, the star of "Lou Grant," who was a leader of last year's Emmy boycott by striking actors.

The Emmy telecast, which ran the same length as last year's star-less show, featured a rousing opening number taped on the sets of 16 different series, and stars of various daytime serials sang an "Ode to the Soaps."

NBC's "Shogun," a mini-series about an English sailor who becomes a samurai warrior in medieval Japan, was named best limited series. But despite its overwhelming ratings, it won only two other Emmys.

Miss America: her reign is plainly her mainstay

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The woman who whooped out a long and loud Arkansas Razorback cheer after she was crowned the new Miss America says she is just a "very down-to-earth" person.

People often have a "pre-conceived notion of what a Miss Arkansas or a Miss America is like. They're surprised to find out I'm a real person," 20-year-old Elizabeth Ward said Sunday.

Minutes after she won the title, Miss Ward vented her joy backstage by shouting: "Woowoo-pig-sooie!"

"I hope I can always do that," she confessed later.

She said her hometown of Russellville, Ark., a community of 13,000 where poultry is the main industry, was staging celebrations in her honor.

But she became quite sophisticated in her refusal to talk about her personal life or stir up controversy.

Gracefully dodging questions on her opinions or habits, she said: "I don't want to say anything controversial that might embarrass someone. I'm not saying I have any opinions that are controversial."

She did say, however, that she supported President Reagan's economic policies and thought the nomination of Sandra Day O'Connor to the U.S. Supreme Court was "great."

She also said she doesn't think the Equal Rights Amendment is needed. "I support equal rights. But I believe the Constitution protects my rights and I don't believe ratification is necessary."

When asked whether she called her boyfriend after she was crowned, she hesitated, smiled and then said: "That's kind of personal. I'm Miss America, and that's what I'm going to do this year."

Miss Ward said she couldn't remember the last time she was angry and said what upsets most her is seeing people being taken advantage of.

Her mother, Patricia Hampe, put it this way: "She's sweet. She's honest. You've got the most interesting, beautiful and talented Miss America you'll ever come across."

Miss Ward said her one-year reign as the "representative of the young women of America" would help her plans to become a corporate lawyer. The $20,000 scholarship she won will fund her studies at Arkansas Tech, where she is a junior in accounting.

She is guaranteed at least $50,000 in bookings as the 55th Miss America. Her predecessor, Susan Powell, 22, of Elk City, Okla., earned about $83,000 in appearance fees last year.

After appearing at the dedication of a shopping center in Atlantic City, Miss Ward headed for her first visit to New York City for an appearance on the "Today" show.

Men arrested in double shooting

GAINESVILLE, Texas (AP) — Three Dallas men were being held without bond at the Cooke County jail Sunday night after murder charges were filed against them in the robbery and shootings of two men at a roadside park near here.

Authorities said the men, all in their 20s, were arrested at the Dallas residence they share.

Thomas Pat Green, 36, of Jacksonville, Fla., remained in critical condition Sunday in a Fort Worth hospital, said Cooke County Sheriff Dan Tiller. Alexander Bugg, also of Florida, died in a hail of shotgun fire at a park about a mile south of the Oklahoma state line early Saturday.

Tiller said Green crawled about 150 yards to a service road to summon help after he had been shot three times with a shotgun and four times with a .45 caliber pistol.

The sheriff said Green and Bugg may have been shot by three men who Bugg reportedly had agreed to pay to help him get his children away from his estranged wife. The sheriff refused to say where the wife and children live.

Dear Abby

Sex doesn't prove love exists between couples

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: About 15 years ago, you wrote a column telling girls how to answer boys who asked them to prove their love by committing fornication, which is a sin. Many teen-age girls cut that column out and carried it in their purses. Today's sex education makes it seem OK for teen-age girls to have sex as long as they "love" the boy. I wish you would reprint that column. It is badly needed now. WASHINGTON, N.J.

DEAR N.J.: Here it is:

Girls need to "prove their love" through illicit sex relations like a moose needs a hat rack. Why not prove your love by sticking your head in the oven and turning on the gas? Or playing leapfrog out in the traffic? It's about as safe.

Clear the cobwebs out of your head: Any fellow who asks you to "prove your love" is trying to take you for the biggest, most gullible fool who ever walked. That proving bit is one of the oldest and rottenest lines ever invented!

Does he love you? It doesn't sound like it. Someone who loves you wants whatever is best for you. But now figure it out. He wants you to:

- Commit an immoral act.
- Surrender your virtue.
- Throw away your self-respect.
- Risk the loss of your precious reputation.
- And risk getting into trouble.

Does that sound as though he wants what's best for you? This is the laugh of the century. He wants what's best for him... he wants a thrill he can brag about at your expense.

Love? Who's kidding whom! A boy who loves a girl would sooner cut off his right arm than hurt her. If you want my opinion, this self-serving so-and-so has already proved that he doesn't love you.

The predictable aftermath of "proofs" of this kind always finds Don Juan tiring of his sport. That's when he drops you, picks up his line and goes casting elsewhere for bigger, and equally silly, fish.

DEAR ABBY: I'm in my last month of pregnancy and my husband and I still can't resolve a serious disagreement. Jeffrey says if it's a girl I can name her anything I want, but if it's a boy, he wants to name him "Jeffrey Jr." Abby, I am very much against that. If we have a son, I want him to have his own name and his own identity.

I don't like nicknames, and I don't want our son going through life being called "Little Jeff" or, worse yet, "Junior."

I favor "Michael" for a boy's name. Jeffrey likes "Michael," but he insists that the only name he wants for our son is "Jeffrey." I suggested we forget both "Jeffrey" and "Michael" and select another name as a compromise. Jeffrey refuses to budge.

What do you think? I need some support.

PRAYING FOR A GIRL

DEAR PRAYING: Would your husband consider "Jeffrey" for the boy's middle name? If not, hang in there. Wanting your son to have his own name and his own identity is both valid and sensible. If you absolutely cannot agree, a compromise is the only fair solution.

Do you have questions about sex, love, drugs and the pain of growing up? Get Abby's new booklet: "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know." Send $2 and a long, stamped (35 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.

Hughes Bldg.

Current research indicates that you, as a parent, may have the greatest influence over whether or not your child becomes obese. We learn the what, where, when, and why's of eating as children, and carry these habits into adulthood.

Parents can help their children develop good eating habits by using nutritionally sound judgment. What your children should eat depends upon their size and how quickly they put on weight.

Control between-meal snacks by providing milk, juices, fresh fruits and raw vegetables instead of sweets. You decide "what"—let them decide how much! Make meals a special time where the whole family can sit down, relax and share the day's events. Eat only at the table, not in front of the television. Make eating fun and easy with nutritious finger foods, (an assortment of crisp vegetables and a tofu dip). Diet Center feels that it is very important to show your children, through your own behavior, the importance of nutritious and good eating habits.

Astro-Graph by bernice bede osol

September 15, 1981

In the year following your birthday your creative and artistic touch will be more predominant than usual, and all that you put your hand to will show the effects of your special talents.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Matters relating to your material picture are the hot spots today and need to be handled with asbestos gloves. Be wary in all your financial dealings. Romance, travel, luck, resources, possible pitfalls and career for the coming months are all discussed in your Astro-Graph which begins with your birthday. Mail $1 for each Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Concentrate on a sense of fairness and you should be able to overcome a tendency today toward being overly insistent that everyone do things your way.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You could be forced to give a little more attention today to tasks which you may consider unpleasant. It might help to keep in mind the rewards.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Pressure from your peer group could make you feel uncomfortable in a social situation today. Treat all equally. Don't take sides under any condition.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If there is a little problem in your home today, try to be forgiving to those who created it. Otherwise, the chill could linger for a few days.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Don't take it personally if you get outvoted every time you make a suggestion today. It's not that your ideas are bad, it's just that others might have limited vision.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Sometimes we create severe problems for ourselves when we ignore reality and spend beyond our means. This could happen to you today if you give in to your wants.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A philosophical outlook will prove extremely helpful when coping with delays or obstacles which could have you stymied today.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you persevere in a project which you've just discovered is not going in the direction it should, others who can help will follow your lead.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In a social situation today, if you're exposed to a clique whose members behave as if they are better than everyone else, don't stoop to their level in retribution.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't hedge one bit on your highest ideals today when confronted with more opposition than you expected. Right eventually does prevail.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You are blessed with friends who know how to soothe your nervous system when you have a frustrating day. You might want to plan to get together with them this evening.

Falcons 31, Packers 12

"We've had come from behind victories before, but I can't remember anything like this," Atlanta's Fulton Kuykendall said after the Falcons had rallied from a 17-0 deficit with 31 points in the fourth quarter.

Kuykendall, a linebacker, got the touchdown that broke a 17-17 tie, racing 20 yards with an intercepted pass with 7:53 remaining. Linebacker Joel Williams sealed the victory, dashing 57 yards for a TD with a fumble recovery with 1:34 left.

Oilers 9, Browns 3

Cleveland held three-time NFL rushing champion Earl Campbell to 42 yards, but Toni Fritsch's field goals of 27, 36 and 42 yards lifted Houston over the winless Browns.

While Fritsch was 3-for-3 on field goal attempts, Cleveland's Dave Jacobs missed three of four tries. Jacobs, who beat out veteran Don Cockroft for the Browns' placekicking job, had two of his kicks blocked by Elvin Bethea.

Bills 35, Colts 3

Joe Ferguson connected on 16 of 28 passes for 261 yards and four TDs while Buffalo's smothering defense, best in the NFL last season, limited the Colts to 147 yards.

Among Ferguson's scoring strikes were a 54-yarder to Jerry Butler and a 33-yarder to Joe Cribbs.

Cowboys 30, Cardinals 17

Ron Springs scored three times on short runs for Dallas. Rafael Septien kicked three field goals and Tony Dorsett carried 16 times for 129 yards.

The Cowboys, 2-0, have won 11 consecutive regular-season games at home and have beaten the Cards seven straight times.

Eagles 13, Patriots 3

Kicker Tony Franklin and fullback Perry Harrington, who had been under criticism from Philadelphia Coach Dick Vermeil, led the Eagles, 2-0, over winless New England.

Franklin, who had drawn Vermeil's wrath because of his attitude and lifestyle, kicked field goals of 46 and 22 yards. Harrington, criticized by the coach for poor blocking and inconsistent pass receiving, ran 6 yards for the Eagles' only TD.

Seahawks 13, Broncos 10

Seattle's first victory at home since 1979 triggered a celebration by the Kingdome crowd of 58,513. The fans reacted as if the Seahawks had won the Super Bowl.

"You don't think I'm happy?" Seattle Coach Jack Patera asked rhetorically after the Seahawks had ended an overall losing streak of 10 games.

Efren Herrera's 22-yard field goal in the third quarter was the margin of victory.

Bengals 31, Jets 30

Ken Anderson's 3-yard scoring pass to Archie Griffin and Mike St. Claire's 12-yard touchdown run with a recovered fumble within a 31-second span late in the fourth period lifted Cincinnati over the Jets.

The Jets' Richard Todd, who threw three scoring passes — two to Jerome Barkum — lost the critical fumble at the end after being hit by Ross Browner.

49ers 28, Bears 17

Chicago's Walter Payton rushed for 97 yards against San Francisco, putting him only 33 yards behind former Green Bay star Jim Taylor, the fourth leading rusher in NFL history. But Payton also lost two critical fumbles, one at the 49ers' 2-yard line.

The 49ers took advantage of Payton's misfortunes and rode Joe Montana's three TD passes to victory.

Chiefs 19, Bucs 10

Kansas City's Nick Lowery fought a bad cold all week, but he appeared healthy against Tampa Bay, kicking field goals of 20, 20, 41 and 42 yards. The Chiefs, 2-0, are off to their best start since their Super Bowl championship season of 1969.

Although Lowery appeared to kick his field goals with ease, he said it wasn't easy.

Giants 17, Redskins 7

Fumble recoveries by linebacker Frank Marion and defensive end George Martin paved the way for New York's victory over winless Washington. Marion's recovery, at the Redskins' 43 set up Billy Taylor's 5-yard TD run and Martin raced 8 yards for a score with his recovery.

WHEN THE TEAM'S AWAY, THE WATER WILL SPRAY. City employees Mike Goad (left) and C.F. Upton set up the sprinkler system at the Harvester football practice field while the Pampa Harvesters were playing away from home. The pair may have thought it was a wasted effort after the weekend rainfall.

Raiders, Vikings meet tonight

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — The defending Super Bowl champion Oakland Raiders have won 12 straight games on Monday nights dating back to 1974, but the Raiders hope to establish a simple one-game winning streak tonight at the expense of the Minnesota Vikings.

Oakland lost to Denver 9-7 last week, a loss which stunned the Raiders and brought this philosophical statement from defensive end John Matuszak.

"Nobody can afford to be 0-and-anything," the Tooz predicted.

That's especially true in Oakland's division, the AFC West, where San Diego has given every indication that it is a team to be reckoned with. The Chargers dismantled Cleveland 44-14 a week ago and yesterday vaulted over Detroit 28-23.

If the Raiders were to fall to 0-2, catching the high-powered Chargers would be a formidable task indeed.

"I have to admit I wish we were playing someone else at this point," conceded Bud Grant, Minnesota's coach. "They're a basic team, but they're also a big play team. A lot of their passing is big play passing."

The Raiders passing game totaled just 84 yards against the Broncos last week and was further hurt with the loss of wide receiver Bob

Chandler, who is out with a ruptured spleen.

Quarterback Jim Plunkett, who went from a benchwarmer to a Super Bowl hero last year, leads the Oakland offense.

Plunkett completed 14 of 24 passes for 125 yards against Denver last week, but was sacked four times for 41 yards.

Oakland Coach Tom Flores was asked if the Raiders would pick on the Vikings' young cornerbacks, Willie Teal and John Swain, who are both first-year players.

SECOND INTERCEPTION. Dallas Cowboy safety Charlie Waters (41) steps in for an interception during fourth-quarter action against the St. Louis Cardinals Sunday in Texas Stadium. Waters outpositioned Cardinal tight end Greg La Fleur and got his second interception of the game. Helping out Waters on the play is Cowboy linebacker D.D. Lewis (50). The Cowboys broke to an early lead and

Cowboys coast to 30-17 victory over Cardinals

By DENNEH. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
IRVING, Texas (AP)—The Dallas Cowboys survived 98-degree heat, rookie quarterback Neil Lomax and running back Ottis Anderson, in that order, Sunday to remain unbeaten in the National Football League.

With temperatures reaching 120 degrees on the floor of Texas Stadium, the Cowboys exploded for 27 points in the first half then coasted to a 30-17 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Fullback Ron Springs scored three touchdowns on short runs and Rafael Septien kicked three field goals in Dallas' seventh consecutive victory over the Cardinals in the National Conference East.

Dallas quarterback Danny White said "It was really hot out there and it took its toll on the field. The Cardinals didn't fold like I thought they would. Usually when you get ahead of a team and it's hot they will slack off, but the Cardinals just kept coming."

Lomax, making his starting debut because Jim Hart had a bruised knee, threw a 62-yard touchdown pass to running back Willard Harrell and gave the Cowboys fits despite two interceptions.

"Lomax was not intimidated," said Dallas strong safety Charlie Waters. "Once he came up to the line of scrimmage and actually winked at me. I kind of got off on that. It meant to me that he was a competitor."

Dallas "held" Anderson to 80 yards on 16 carries—a good day for most running backs but not for Anderson against the Cowboys. He had averaged 122 yards in four previous outings against them.

Running back Tony Dorsett rushed for 129 yards on 16 carries and White passed for 240 yards on 21 of 29.

Lomax was 14 of 41 for 295 yards.

St. Louis Coach Jim Hanifen said of Lomax, "I'm very high on the young man...he got himself out of trouble at times and he showed a lot of poise out there."

St. Louis is now 0-2 while the Cowboys climbed to 2-0.

The Cowboys play at New England Monday night week and Waters said he would be delighted "to see any night game after today."

Dallas Coach Tom Landry said of his sweat-soaked coat: "I'm throwing it in the wastepaper basket...I've used it up."

Landry praised Lomax, saying "He looked good...his receivers just couldn't hold onto the ball. All I know is that we will have to play better against New England."

St. Louis rolled up 262 yards passing and 142 yards rushing against the Dallas Domsday Defense while the Cowboys were retaliating with 181 yards overland and 210 yards through the air.

Wide receiver Pat Tilley was highly critical of his team's performance after the game.

"Right now we stink...we are 0-2 and we stink...that's all you can say," Tilley said. "We really stunk up Busch Stadium last week against Miami and we didn't do well today. Right now we are not playing well as a team."

NL roundup

Dawson swings hot bat for Expos

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer
Andre Dawson is swinging a hot bat — and it couldn't have come at a better time for the Montreal Expos.

"I believe that I have to swing the bat good for us to stay in contention," Dawson said after his four hits helped the Expos beat the Chicago Cubs 10-6 Sunday.

The victory sent Montreal home for a big five-game series with the St. Louis Cardinals starting Tuesday night. The Expos stayed 2½ games behind St. Louis in the National League East after the Cardinals beat the New York Mets 4-2 Sunday.

Dawson's four hits, which included two doubles and accounted for three RBI, boosted his batting average to .323.

In other NL action, the Los Angeles Dodgers defeated the Cincinnati Reds 4-2, the Pittsburgh Pirates stopped the Philadelphia Phillies 3-2, the San Diego Padres turned back the Atlanta Braves 6-4 in 10 innings and the Houston Astros whipped the San Francisco Giants 3-0.

Cardinals 4, Mets 2
Relief pitcher Jesse Orosco balked Tito Landrum home from third base in the sixth inning to snap a 2-2 tie and help St. Louis beat New York.

The balk by Orosco came with Gene Tenace at home plate. The New York right-hander was attempting to pick Ken Oberkell off first base after he had singled. The Cardinals added an insurance run in the eighth on an RBI single by Tommy Herr.

New York tied it in the fifth against Joaquin Andujar, 5-4, on Mike Howard's two-run single.

In the Cardinals' sixth, Dane Iorg led off with St. Louis' sixth walk. Iorg was replaced by Landrum on first before Oberkell singled off Terry Leach, 1-1.

Dodgers 4, Reds 2
Bob Castillo drove in one run with an infield hit and pitched strong middle-inning relief, pacing Los Angeles over Cincinnati. Castillo, 2-4, took over in the fifth for Dodgers starter Bob Welch, who struggled throughout. Castillo needed late relief help himself, and Dave Stewart finally shut the door on the Reds in the eighth to gain his fifth save.

Frank Pastore, 3-7, was the loser.

Pirates 3, Phillies 2
Pinch-hitter Jason Thompson rapped a two-run single in the eighth inning off reliever Ron Reed to lift Pittsburgh over Philadelphia.

Phillies starter Mark Davis had checked Pittsburgh on six hits and led 2-1 going into the eighth before the Pirates rallied against Reed. Kent Tekulve pitched the ninth for his third save.

Davis fell behind 1-0 in the fifth on an RBI single by Omar Moreno. The Phillies scored twice in the sixth off Odell Jones, 4-2, on an RBI double by Gary Matthews and run-scoring base hit by Keith Moreland.

Padres 6, Braves 4
Juan Bonilla lined a run-scoring single and Luis Salazar tripled for two more runs in the top of the 10th inning to lead San Diego over Atlanta.

Bonilla's single off loser Rick Camp, 9-3, broke a 3-3 tie and Salazar followed with his triple off reliever Al Hrabosky to score the clinching runs. John Lucas, 6-7, was the winner with relief help in the bottom of the 10th, when the Braves scored on a double-play grounder by Biff Pocoroba.

The Braves tied the game at 3-3 in the ninth on an RBI double by Jerry Royster.

Astros 3, Giants 0
Bob Knepper and Frank LaCorte combined on a nine-hitter, and Craig Reynolds smashed three hits as Houston blanked San Francisco.

Knepper, 8-3, gave up six hits, struck out six and walked three in seven innings before LaCorte came in to earn his fifth save.

The Astros scored a run in the first when Phil Garner came home on a wild pitch by loser Doyle Alexander, 8-7. The Astros added a run in the seventh on a single by Reynolds and Danny Heep's pinch-hit double. Reynolds delivered an RBI single for the Astros in the eighth.

McEnroe whips Borg for Open crown

NEW YORK (AP)—No offense, Bjorn. John McEnroe seemed to be saying.

But all summer long, the 22-year-old New Yorker has been spoiling things for Bjorn Borg. And Sunday he leveled the crowning blow by beating Borg 4-6, 6-2, 6-4, 6-3 in the final of the U.S. Open tennis championships.

It's not that McEnroe has ceased to appreciate Borg's artistry or his position in the game. It's just that he knows he is on a level with one of the best men ever to play tennis.

Tracy Austin had the opposite view after she defeated Martina Navratilova 1-6, 7-6, 7-6 Saturday in the women's final. Austin was only 16 when she won in 1979, and she thinks now she was too young to appreciate it. This one meant more to her, she said.

Two months ago at Wimbledon McEnroe put a period to Borg's string of five Wimbledon victories. And he assumed the No. 1 position in the computer rankings.

Su.das, McEnroe refused to shake the wealth. He built momentum in the third set and steamed past Borg in the next.

Now McEnroe has an enviable victory string of his own. He won the Open for the third time in a row, the first such streak since Bill Tilden won his sixth American championship in 1925.

He had to get by such unknowns as Juan Nunez of Chile and Ramesh Krishnan of India in four sets, and a resurging Vitas Gerulaitis in a five-set semifinal. Borg had to beat tough Roscoe Tanner in four sets in the quarterfinals and beat Jimmy Connors in the semifinals.

Borg, who has tried 10 times, making it to the final four times, has never won the Open.

"I'd like to join in commiserating with Bjorn because he's a great champion," McEnroe said to the crowd as he accepted the winner's trophy and check for $66,000. "I think he's going to win this damn tournament someday, but hopefully not when I'm here."

Borg wasn't around to hear the consoling words. He made a hasty retreat to the dressing room. There he quickly showered and was rushed by plainclothes policemen down a grimy back stairway, past garbage from concession stands and into a waiting car.

The reason for the quick getaway was a telephoned death threat against Borg, delivered to the main switchboard at the National Tennis Center. Borg left with his coach, Lennart Bergelin. Borg's wife, Mariana, who had watched the match from courtside, did not leave with him.

It was the second day in a row he had been threatened.

It was not dazzling tennis and certainly it was not of the caliber of their Wimbledon final, which McEnroe won 4-6, 7-6, 7-6, 6-4.

With all respect, McEnroe said, this wasn't as tough as last year's final, in which he beat Borg 7-6, 6-1, 6-7, 5-7, 6-4.

For two weeks here this year, Borg had talked of how the elusive Open was now his big goal.

"He's put so much pressure on himself to win this that if he doesn't, he's had a bad year," McEnroe said. "I don't think he should have done that."

SWC roundup

By DENNEH. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

The Southwest Conference upped its non-conference record to 6-3 Saturday but the game it lost will forever be branded on the mind of Texas Tech Coach Jerry Moore.

The Red Raiders were slaughtered 45-27 by Colorado in his debut and Moore said the experience was "Like being shot."

Moore admitted quite candidly after the game in Boulder that "This wasn't anything like what we expected...we didn't play the way I thought we would play...and Colorado's not a bad football team."

Tech gave up 205 rushing yards and 359 passing yards to the heretofore toothless Buffaloes who had won only five of their last 23 games.

Elsewhere around the SWC things went pretty much as expected as the No. 8 ranked Texas Longhorns rolled over Rice 31-3. Southern Methodist blasted North Texas State 34-7 and Baylor flogged Bowling Green 38-0 with Arkansas coming from behind to beat Tulsa 14-10.

"Rice is a formidable football team and they fight," said Texas Coach Fred Akers. "We just had too much for them. I am pleased with the conference win over a team that we respect."

Boosters change meeting date

The Pampa Harvester Booster Club will meet at 7 p.m. Tuesday instead of Monday in the fieldhouse film room, club president Randy Harris announced today.

In games this week, Northwestern is at Arkansas, Baylor is at Louisiana Tech, Houston is at Miami, Rice is at Missouri, Texas hosts North Texas State, Texas A&M is at Boston College, Texas-Arlington is at Texas Christian, New Mexico is at Texas Tech, and Grambling is at SMU.

The Texas rout of Rice started on a 65-yard pass-and-run touchdown play from quarterback Rick McIvor to Donnie Little, who was the starting quarterback last year before he lost his job.

The pass came on 3rd and 34.

"I was glad to see Donnie get the touchdown," said McIvor. "I want him to do well. He works so hard."

McIvor completed another touchdown pass of five yards to tight end Lawrence Sampleton.
