THE PAMPA NEWS

PAMPA, TEXAS

February 27, 1995

50c DAILY/SUNDAY $1

Good Evening!

AREA

PAMPA — The Pampa High School Senior Class of 1995 has begun its fund-raising efforts for its All-Night Party.

Senior class students and parents will be seeking donations from local businesses and professionals to help fund the drug-free, alcohol-free celebration of their graduation.

In addition, parents are asked to make a $10 donation toward the party.

Donations may be made PHS Class '95 Party Fund and mailed to Judy Sutton, 2601 Duncan, Pampa, TX 79065.

GROOM — A Massachusetts man died about dawn today in truck rollover west of Groom on Interstate 40.

Barry Foster, 39, Brighton, Mass., was pronounced dead at 7:27 a.m. at Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo, after the 1994 GMC truck tractor in which he was riding went off the interstate between two overpasses, landed on its right side on FM 295 and burst into flames.

Driving the truck was another Massachusetts man, Alfred Smalley Jr., 32, of East Bridgewater. He is listed in stable condition at Northwest suffering from smoke inhalation.

Neither man was wearing a seatbelt, say Department of Public Safety officials.

According to Trooper L.B. Snider, the truck tractor was pulling a 1995 Great Dane trailer westbound when the rig left the roadway for the center median, traveling about 400 feet. The truck went between the two overpasses and landed on the farm-to-market road. The burned truck is a total loss, Snider said.

Trooper Gary Davis of Groom is investigating the accident.

One ticket bought in Central Texas correctly matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The jackpot is worth $11 million.

The numbers drawn Saturday night from a field of 50 were: 19, 22, 27, 36, 44 and 49.

In addition to the jackpot winner, there were 175 tickets sold with five of the six numbers, with each ticket worth $1,466.

Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Wednesday night's game will be $4 million.

NATION

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — About 3,000 striking steelworkers at Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Corp. are scheduled to vote on a tentative agreement to end a week-long walkout.

Representatives from Kaiser and the United Steelworkers of America reached a new 47-month contract proposal in weekend talks in Salt Lake City. The previous contract expired Oct. 31.

Rank-and-file members will cast ballots Tuesday at the five Kaiser plants hit by the strike and could return to work as soon as late Tuesday or early Wednesday, said Fred Gariepy, a union spokesman in Spokane.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chelsea Clinton turned 15 today, but she asked her parents to save the birthday bash for another day.

"After the press of her school activities clears, we'll probably have a little party for her," President Clinton told reporters. "But she didn't want one tonight."

The teenager began her birthday in school.

"You know, it's a school day," Clinton said. "You don't get your birthday off."

Texas bases among those on Pentagon's closure list

By JOHN DIAMOND
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Military bases in Texas, Mississippi, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania are among those on a draft Pentagon closure list awaiting approval today by Defense Secretary William Perry.

Although the official list remained tightly held by the Pentagon, word of its contents began filtering out over the weekend to state and local officials, prompting promises to fight the recommendations before the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission.

Texas appears to be one of the hardest-hit states in this round.

On the closure list are the Red River Army Depot at Texarkana, with about 3,500 jobs; Reese Air Force Base near Lubbock, with 1,700 jobs; and Brooks Air Force Base in San Antonio, with more than 4,500 jobs. The Pentagon is also proposing to relocate the Navy's air station at Corpus Christi to Pensacola, Fla., at a cost of about 700 jobs.

In Alabama, where Fort McLellan is making its third appearance on the closure list, officials greeted the news with a shrug.

"We've convinced them twice. I'm confident we will do it again," said state Sen. Doug Ghee, D-Anniston. Some 8,000 military and civilian jobs are at stake.

The history of the three previous base closure rounds going back to 1988 indicates, however, that the best way to keep a base open is to keep it off the Pentagon's recommended closure list.

"I'd much rather us being off the list trying to stay off than us being on the list struggling to get off," said Rep. Jim Kolbe, R-Ariz., after learning that Davis-Monthan Air Force Base in Tucson was spared.

The base closure commission must review the list and make its recommendations to President Clinton by July 1. The president and then Congress must either accept or reject the list in its entirety.

"We have only reduced infrastructure by little more than 15 percent while overall force structure has been reduced by 40 percent," said Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Pentagon officials insist that the base closure recommendations are made entirely based on merit using an elaborate formula that takes in military need, duplication of facilities, proximity to other bases, and economic impact.

Nevertheless, a draft list of recommendations awaiting Perry's approval bore some telltale signs of politics.

Alabama, after all, is the home state of Sen. Richard Shelby, who switched to the Republican Party after the fall elections.

Conspicuously missing from the closure list are Fort Riley, Kan., and Ellsworth Air Force Base near Rapid City, S.D. Fort Riley, a concern of Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., survived despite previously announced Army plans to shift units elsewhere. And Ellsworth was on a draft proposal for reduction but not outright closure, a victory for Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D.

Pam Story, Mrs. Pampa

Woman enjoys chance to represent Pampa in Mrs. Texas competition

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
News Editor

It was a fast and furious but fulfilling time for a Pampa woman who said entering a beauty pageant was the culmination of a dream.

Pam Story was among the top 10 in the Mrs. Texas International Pageant held last weekend in San Antonio.

"It was hard, grueling and exciting. It was three days of hard work," Story said.

The 45 contestants competed in aerobic wear and evening gown categories before five judges, plus completing a personal interview with them. The top 10 finalists completed an onstage interview plus aerobic wear and evening gown competition.

"It was a dream to be in a pageant," said 34-year-old Story.

While Story says she is disappointed she did not win, she is excited Pampa sponsored a top 10 finalist. She hopes other women will be encouraged by her example to fulfill a dream.

"It's like you have a family, a career and you can still do this. You can still fulfill dreams if you want to," the Childress native said.

Story admits to being nervous, shaky and eating only one meal a day while competing in her first pageant. Emotions still run high.

"Every day I talk about it ... You don't realize how bad you want something until it's gone, but you've felt honored to have done what you've done," she said.

Story was accompanied to the Alamo city by her family and a cheering section of friends.

"(My sons) were proud to see their mom on stage. They would holler out 'We love you, Mom.' But my whole cheering section did. They had banners, posters and whistles. The feeling I felt when they opened up that curtain was unbelievable. It made my throat quiver, my eyes water and my heart ache for the love that they had there," she said.

Her onstage question was, "With your husband being your second relationship, what would be your third?"

"With God being my first relationship, my husband second, my family and friends are third because without them, we would not be here today," Story said she answered.

During the day of rehearsals and two days of competition, Story said she made three new friends, one with whom she has planned a summer vacation to Lake Texoma.

Mrs. Bexar County, a previous pageant contestant, took top honors and Story said she was a good choice.

"It was her destiny. I think. Everything fell for her. It was her destiny," she said.

Getting older is not a curse for her. "(Life) is definitely getting better. It's definitely getting faster. You are trying to live your life for you and your husband and then trying to take care of your kids and their activities. I think it's because we as well as our kids are getting older. As general rule, we all live a faster paced life," she said.

Story has worked as a self-employed cosmetologist in Pampa eight years, putting in 50-plus hour weeks, often in just four days.

"I love doing hair. I know when I started that was gonna be the career for me. I enjoy it, so that doesn't make the ride so hard," she said. "My mother always said she knew that would be my career. I could never work for anybody. I could work for myself."

Story works out every day; however, she does not encourage people to follow her daily diet, which includes lots of junk food and only an occasional vitamin. Story makes it a rule to drink a liter of water before starting on her first Coca-Cola of the day.

"I would suggest no one follow my diet. It's not good for you," she said.

Family and friends made competition possible. One friend shopped, another helped with the paperwork, another was nanny for the pageant weekend.

"If I had not had the support of family and friends, I probably would not have done it ... I've experienced the facts of friendship, loyalty. Maybe I should say true friendship and loyalty. I never thought I'd have people call and say 'What can I do to help you?'"

And apparently Story's friends and family are proud of her. She was accompanied by her husband, Greg Story; sons Nicholas and Shane; her twin sister and nieces, plus Beta Sigma Phi sorority sisters. She was sponsored by Billie's Boutique, Hair Expressions, Greater Pampa Area Chamber of Commerce Tourism Committee, Radcliff Electric, Cindy Holt, Clifton Supply, West Texas Ford, Dos Caballeros, Bartlett Lumber, Top O' Texas Quick Lube, Creative Graphics and Block Hedz Gym.

"Greg says I'm his Mrs. Texas," she said.

Deputies arrest three on drug charges

By CHERYL BERZANSKIS
News Editor

Two drug arrests and one house burglary, which led to a third drug arrest, brought to four the number of narcotics-related busts Gray County deputies have made within a week.

Arrested about 3:33 p.m. Saturday were Lynn and Bessie Holtman, who each stand charged with possession of a controlled substance.

Confiscated were 1.6 grams of cocaine, 0.3 grams of methamphetamine and unknown amount of marijuana believed to be enough to roll about five joints, said Deputy Gigi Dodson. The husband and wife pair were arrested at their home on Gray Road 9, east of Pampa. Dodson said the arrest was based on confidential information.

Bond on Mr. Holtman, 42, was set at $7,500 and Mrs. Holtman's bond is $4,000. They remain in Gray County jail.

Their home was burglarized Saturday night, according to incident reports. According to Dodson, deputies were able to get a line on suspected burglars and at 10:15 p.m. Sunday arrested Tex Jay Thurman, who was charged with burglary of the Holtmans' house and possession of a controlled substance after officers picked him up at his Gillespie Street home.

Deputies report he had one to four grams of suspected methamphetamine.

Arrested at the same time was Jackie Weatherwax, 34, who was charged with burglary of the Holtmans' house also. Items taken from Holtmans' house were recovered, Dodson said.

Thurman's bond totals $20,000. Weatherwax's bond is $10,000. They continue to be held in Gray County jail. Deputies were assisted by a Pampa Police Department officer.

A Lefors man, Danny Ray White, 34, was charged in federal court with possession of methamphetamine with intent to distribute on Friday after deputies and postal authorities arrested him Thursday in the Lefors Post Office parking lot. He was nabbed after he picked up a package suspected of containing the drug sent through the mail.

Commission proposal calls for Chiapas peace talks

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A legislative commission on the Chiapas uprising has drafted a proposal calling for peace talks within a month that would protect rebel participants from arrest.

Other details of the document, to be presented today to the four political parties in Congress, were not disclosed.

Press reports said the proposal creates negotiation zones, presumably in Chiapas, but gave no specifics.

Congress was expected to begin considering the proposal by Friday.

Federal deputy Rodolfo Elizondo, the spokesman for the commission, told reporters Sunday night that the proposal had been approved by a wide range of agencies.

Religious sect suspected of animal sacrifice

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Authorities are finding more and more decapitated animals in the Corpus Christi area surf, leading to speculation that a religious sect that engages in ritual animal sacrifices is enjoying new growth.

Animal sacrifice is a hallmark of Santeria, an African-inspired Caribbean religion that is being spreading through the country.

The U.S. Supreme Court has upheld Santerians' right to practice animal sacrifice as a part of religious worship.

"There's nothing against the law about this," said Lt. Tim Wilson of the Corpus Christi Police Department.

Although only a few Santeria followers are believed to live in Corpus Christi, an offshoot Mexican-American group is growing in Texas and California, said Leonardo Carrillo, a professor of Hispanic studies at Texas A&M University-Corpus Christi.

The Corpus Christi beach rituals have the markings of such an offshoot, said law enforcement officials and Ernesto Pichardo, a Santeria priest and president of a Miami church.

Pichardo said Santerians usually perform their rituals in secret, away from a populated beach such as the one they have been choosing in Corpus.

That doesn't mean people have to like it.

Last weekend, police found several beheaded chickens and ducks that appeared to have been part of a ritualistic ceremony, said Jeff Beynon, director of Corpus Christi Animal Control.

Last October, as Danny Graham watched the beach from his bay view apartment, he said he saw a woman knee-deep in the bay, chanting and tossing things into the water.

Three men and a child watched her from the shore as she dumped dump several beheaded birds, handfuls of beans, corn and five watermelons, then four more bags appearing to hold birds, Graham said.

When Graham, who now lives in Houston, approached the group, they fled, he said. Graham said he found an 8-foot-long silk cloth and a goose, rooster and two chicken carcasses that washed up on the beach.

"I think it's a shame," said Terry Smith, a 37-year-old architectural designer and beachfront condominium owner. "I don't like it happening in my back yard. I don't want it anywhere."

However, the Supreme Court ruled in June 1993 that a ban on animal sacrifices in Hialeah, Fla., was clearly directed at members of the Santeria faith, making it a violation of the First Amendment right to freedom of religion.

The rituals usually involve dancing and drumming, along with the sacrificing of the animals as part of a ceremonial feeding for divine spirits known as orishas.

The animal and food rituals conducted at Corpus Christi Bay appeared to honor Yemanja, the orisha deity of the sea.

"She is the goddess of the ocean; therefore, you leave the offerings at the ocean," said Cynthia Burgin, an investigator with the Bexar County sheriff's department in San Antonio.

"It's not a malevolent type of situation - (it's) nothing you should be afraid of."

U.S., China expected to continue trade wars

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and China have once again narrowly averted an all-out trade war, but the fight over copyright piracy is likely to serve as only a warmup for even more bruising battles later this year.

The Chinese are anxious to become members of the World Trade Organization, the umbrella agency formed this year to govern international trade.

But the Clinton administration is blocking China's membership until it accedes to American demands that it lower barriers to the sale of U.S. manufactured goods, farm products and services such as insurance.

While the U.S. breakthrough in copyrights and piracy over the weekend ultimately could mean $1 billion in increased sales for American movie, record and computer software companies, the U.S. trade gap with China soared by 30 percent to $29.5 billion last year, second only to its deficit with Japan.

It is that sharp deterioration that is driving U.S. negotiators to push harder for more market-opening deals.

Understandably, neither side wanted to dwell on unresolved issues Sunday, preferring to emphasize the achievement of finally reaching an agreement designed to get China to put more teeth into its enforcement of copyright, patent and trademark protections after 20 months of often acrimonious negotiations.

Because of the deal, U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor said the United States was withdrawing trade sanctions that would have imposed punitive, 100 percent tariffs on $1.08 billion of Chinese products. Scheduled to take effect Sunday, they were the largest potential trade sanctions in U.S. history.

China agreed as part of the deal to begin a six-month special enforcement period during which it pledged to raid businesses engaged in piracy and destroy pirated goods such as compact discs, laser discs and CD-ROMs.

In a statement, President Clinton hailed what he called a strong agreement that should "eliminate practices that have cost Americans over $1 billion a year in high-value exports. It will mean thousands of jobs for Americans in key industries."

But Greg Mastel, a trade specialist at the Economic Strategy Institute in Washington, said it was now critical that U.S. negotiators push forward to lower trade barriers in other areas.

"There are a whole series of market access issues that are just as important as intellectual property rights," he said. "If intellectual property was worth $1 billion, market access in other areas could easily be worth more than $10 billion."

The administration bluntly told China last year that it must satisfy U.S. concerns in these other areas if it expects the United States to drop its objections to China's WTO membership. That stance enjoys strong support in Congress.

In a letter to Clinton, Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., a key Senate trade expert, urged the administration to remain firm in its insistence that China lower barriers to American beef and wheat sales as well as improving access for manufacturing and service industries.

White House wants banks to merge

NEW YORK (AP) — The Clinton Administration wants Congress to revamp the American banking system, allowing banks, securities firms and insurance companies to become one-stop financial services companies, The New York Times reported today.

In a speech prepared for delivery in New York today and in congressional testimony scheduled for Wednesday, Treasury Secretary Robert E. Rubin will urge Congress to repeal of the Depression-era Glass-Steagall Act, unidentifying federal officials told the Times.

Glass-Steagall forces financial concerns to choose between owning commercial banks and owning securities companies such as brokerage firms and investments banks. Since many House and Senate Republicans want to allow mergers of commercial banks and investment banks, members of Congress told the Times the odds were high that some sort of legislation to do so would pass during this session.

Rubin will also call for broad changes in the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, which effectively bars most financial concerns from owning both commercial banks and insurance companies, the Times reported.

The White House plan would pave the way for consolidation in the American financial system. Supporters say it would drive down fees for everything from checking accounts to stock trading. Opponents say the giant companies that may result are unlikely to be sensitive to the needs of individuals and small businesses, making it harder for them to borrow.

During the Depression, Congress banned commercial banks from investment banking because of the widespread perception that stock market speculation led to the collapse of many banks. Many economists now say they failed because they lacked adequate reserves and because many people failed to repay loans.

Lefors School Honor Rolls

Lefors I.S.D. has announced its Junior High/High School Honor Roll for the fourth six-weeks grading period of the 1995-94 school year.

A Honor Roll

Seventh grade - Jeremy Pierce and Candid Ray.

Eighth grade - Shelly Murray and Linda Schwab.

Ninth grade - Nikki Bockmon, Angie Davenport, Matt Green, Misty McMullen and Tracy Tucker.

Tenth grade - Tenille Franks.

Eleventh grade - Bryan Bockmon, Shelly Davenport and Tommy Green.

Twelfth grade - Michelle Helfer and Shawna Lock.

A-B Honor Roll

Seventh grade - Michael Brown, Shanna Elkins, Melody Seely, Jessica Smith, Michael Steele, Amanda Summers and Cindy Valasquez.

Eighth grade - Dana Crutcher, Heather Howard, Len Lock, Gwen Nolte and Penny Summers.

Ninth grade - Melissa Glass, Katisha Jackson, Laura Velasquez and Brett Ward.

The Glenn Miller Orchestra, formed by Glenn Miller, left, in the 1930s, will be appearing in the next Pampa Community Concert season. The famed orchestra is now led by Larry O'Brien, right.

Pampa Community Concert Association announces '94-'95 season artist picks

Combinations of piano duets, Chinese acrobats and magicians, and big band sound will spice the 1995-96 programs of the Pampa Community Concert Association.

Attendance is by membership in the association, and by reciprocal agreements with concert associations in Borger, Plainview, Hereford and Dumas. For membership information, call 806-665-0343.

The Imperial Chinese Acrobats and Magicians, a part of Chinese tradition that dates back to Ying Cheng, the first emperor, in 221 B.C., was featured in the Ringling Brothers - Barnum and Baily Circus tour in 1992-93. Acts include "rolling while balancing candelabras," "swinging water meteors" and the comic antics of acrobats in the "Chinese lion dance."

Yao Jin Fen and Qin Ming Kiao, two of China's foremost magicians and members of the acrobatic troupe, received awards of merit in 1985 from the U.S. based Academy of Magical Arts.

The London Piano Duo, David Nettle and Richard Markham, are Britain's foremost piano team. They participate regularly in major events such as BBC's Royal Albert Hall Proms and Bath, Harrogate, Berlin and Schweswig-Holstein Festivals. They present classical and lighter music that ranges from Rossini to the Carrioca.

The Glenn Miller Orchestra is the only one that plays authentic and original Miller arrangements. The group includes the leader, Larry O'Brien, five saxophone players, four trumpeters, four trombonists, three rhythm musicians and two vocalists.

The band, popular in the late Thirties and Forties, joined the U.S. Air Force and played in the service in World War II. This concert is sponsored jointly with the Borger Community Concert Association.

The London Piano Duo, Britain's foremost piano duo, features David Nettle and Richard Markham, regular participants in major international musical events.

The programs will be presented at 7:30 in M. K. Brown Memorial Auditorium and Civic Center, on dates to be announced later.

Caller ID has become a blessing for some

HOUSTON (AP) — Caller ID — the service Southwestern Bell markets as "an electronic peephole" — has turned out to be a blessing for some.

"It's been a big help for women who are being stalked and harassed. Most of the people I know who have it put it in for a good reason," said Mitzi Vorachek, director of community education for the Houston Area Women's Center.

Nine months after Southwestern Bell began offering Caller ID in Houston, the service has become one of its fastest-selling. Nearly 159,000 of Bell's 1.7 million Houston-area phone lines have Caller ID capability.

The service was added in Dallas on Feb. 1.

The service — which allows customers to see who's calling before they pick up the phone — is a handy tool to deter harassing callers or avoid phone solicitors.

Whenever someone calls, it immediately flashes the caller's telephone number — and name, if available.

And devices can be purchased that will preserve a record of the most recent callers, even if the phone rang just once and the caller then hung up. So for some, Caller ID can serve even better than an answering machine in keeping track of who has called.

Heidi Collier signed up for Caller ID after receiving a suspicious number of hang-up calls and wrong numbers last summer.

She discovered the calls were coming from the same phone number. "I called them once. I said, 'Did someone from this number just call me?' They just denied it. But the calls stopped after that."

But concerns about privacy prompted Bell to provide a variety of countermeasures to Caller ID.

For example, Bell customers can have their phones set up so that their numbers and names never are displayed for those who have Caller ID. Another service, though, rejects all anonymous calls.

"I've got Caller ID and anonymous call rejection, and my sister, who's a lawyer, has anonymous calling on her phone at home," said Steve Vargas, a computer systems analyst. "Sometimes she forgets and tries to call me from home, and she can't get through. She has to page me or call me on her cellular phone."

His sister wouldn't have to dial from a different phone if she knew about yet another service — only recently made available — that gives someone with anonymous calling the option of identifying herself to someone who blocks anonymous calls.

The list of options was mandated by law to relieve opponents who feared invasions of privacy.

"Now we feel we have the ultimate flexibility and choice. We have a pretty good balance," said Walter Washington, head of the Office of Public Utility Counsel, which represents consumers before the state's Public Utility Commission.

Southwestern Bell says its goal is to give customers more information about who's calling.

"In the early days of the telephone, an operator announced who was calling before you actually started talking," said Lisa Wilder, Bell's product manager for the service in Houston. "We're using technology to get back to something that we had before."

Gray County SWCD still taking tree orders

The Gray County Soil and Water Conservation District is still accepting orders for tree seedlings. These seedlings are offered at a nominal cost with the aim of the program being to protect cropland, feldlots and buildings, and to control erosion and enhance wildlife.

Several species are available. Potted conifers offered include Austrian Pine, Ponderosa Pine, Eastern Red Cedar, Rocky Mountain Juniper, White Pine, Colorado Blue Spruce and Scotch Pine.

Several species of bareroot hardwoods are also available including Catalpa, Green Ash, American Plum, Russian Olive, Shumard Oak, Nanking Cherry, Sand Cherry, Honeylocust, Aromatic Sumac, Desert Willow, Golden Willow, Cotoneaster, Cottonwood, Caragana, Ash, Hackberry, Lacebark Elm, Lilac, Siberian Elm, Native Plum, Honeysuckle and Lombardy Poplar.

Wildlife Packets are also available. The packets include 25 seedlings each of four different species, and are designed to enhance quail and pheasant, turkey, deer, and squirrel populations.

The trees will arrive at the District Office at the end of March. District representatives suggest that tree orders be placed early as many species sell out very quickly.

The deadline for ordering the trees is March 13. Anyone interested may obtain an order form at the Gray County SWCD Office located in the Gray County Courthouse Annex on East Frederic (Highway 60), or by calling the District Office at 665-1751.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Capital-gains tax, isn't it a crime?

You can understand the temptation - at least for people wedded to the idea of high taxes regardless of consequences - to make a class warfare issue of Republican determination to reduce the rate of taxation on capital gains. It is possible - if not defensible - to characterize a capital-gains tax reduction as a tax break for "the rich." What is alarming, however, is that discussion of cutting the tax rate so often centers on estimates of its impact that fly in the face of all experience.

Part of the GOP Contract with America is a proposal to cut - from 28 percent to 14 percent - the tax on gains from selling real estate, securities, and other assets, indexing the tax for inflation, and letting people deduct losses on the sale of a home.

The congressional Joint Committee on Taxation has estimated that the proposal would cost the federal government $54 billion in lost revenue through 1995 and $170 billion through 2005. And Jane Gravelle, a senior specialist at the Congressional Research Service, has said that her studies show that losses from reducing capital-gains tax rates could be twice what the congressional committee has estimated.

This has various Honorables and the administration wondering how that money can be replaced, posturing about how irresponsible it would be to reduce revenue while promising to balance the budget.

Lay aside the question of whose money it is in the first place. Those estimates of revenue losses flatly contradict every experience the United States has had with changing capital-gains tax rates.

A "static" analysis of capital-gains tax rates assumes that if rates are reduced, people will take exactly the same amount of capital gains as before the rates changed, and government revenue will decline. A "dynamic" analysis assumes that people will notice changes in tax rates, adjust their behavior accordingly, and - insofar as they are able - take the capital gains on assets they have held for a while in the hope that tax rates will go down.

Thus the competing theories. What has actually happened when capital-gains tax rates have been changed?

In 1978 and again in 1981, capital-gains tax rates were reduced. Then in 1986, as part of the massive tax "reform" of that year, capital-gains tax rates were increased.

After the reductions, federal revenue from the capital-gains taxes increased every year, by an average of 12 percent per year. After capital-gains tax rates were increased in 1986, federal revenues from the tax declined, about 8 percent per year. Some authorities believe that if the rates hadn't been raised in 1986, the federal government would have collected $75 billion more from 1987 to 1993 than it pulled in.

The reason is not hard to deduce. If people know they'll suffer a big tax bite if they sell an asset, if they have a choice in the matter, and especially if they think the rate will go down sometime in the foreseeable future, they'll hang on to the asset. Fiscal policy analyst Stephen Moore of the Cato Institute thinks there could be as much as $7 trillion - that's with a "t" - in unrealized capital gains out there in the economy, waiting for tax rates to go down.

Whether high or low tax rates on capital gains are a good idea for policy reasons might be debated. But there should be no debate over the fact that reducing the capital-gains tax rate from its current level will increase federal revenues.

By the way, don't the Republicans control the Joint Committee on Taxation now? Why is it still promulgating such absurdities?

Thought for today

"A word has power in and of itself. It comes from nothing into sound and meaning; it gives origin to all things. By means of the word can a man deal with the world on equal terms. And the word is sacred."

Will Christian Coalition divide GOP?

A learned friend (a Democrat) confides to me his conviction that Bill Clinton has had it.

"I've never in my lifetime seen a president who has allowed himself to be so weak. I may be one of the last holdouts to give up on this very bright, face-to-face appealing, informed president we've elected. And I've clutched at hope for him longer than most."

But, my friend goes on, "despite the Democratic rout and the present, virtual unelectability of Clinton, the Republicans could blow it. You, of course, know there's a civil war between the social conservatives and the economic conservatives, which was put on hold with the Contract With America, but that is now beginning to erupt. Above all, keep up a smile, even a kindly demeanor on the face of the right. Not Gramm, nor Gingrich, nor even a mellowing Dole is personally appealing enough to the folks out there."

On the last point we're going to have to wait and see. If Phil Gramm is too tough minded and tough faced to appeal to "the folks out there," then we'll know this, won't we, after the primaries? Yes, you can win primaries with small ideological turnouts and then lose big in the national election: Such happened in 1972 (George McGovern), 1984 (Walter Mondale) and 1988 (Michael Dukakis). But incessant polling makes this less likely. The candidate who seems too weak to win nationally will suffer in primaries that this year won't be separating lions from kitty cats.

The issues aren't of the kind that mobilize the kamikazes. An exception is abortion. One stage removed is "family values." One second stage invokes the general idea of an attempt to revivify the Christian culture. But that isn't a national issue.

The "civil war" between "economic" and "social" conservatives is certainly undeclared, and we are far removed from Fort Sumter. An attempt has been made by a sometime conservative to provoke hostilities. Michael Lind is a talented young writer whose general 'distress' over Pat Robertson's Christian Coalition has caused him to do everything to repudiate his own past except change his name.

Lind had a big piece in The New York Review of Books a few weeks ago in which he devoted enormous acreage to documenting that Pat Robertson has some real cuckoo ideas. And it is manifest that is so, given that Lind quotes whole paragraphs from two of Robertson's books, which seem to say - no, they don't seem to say, they SAY - that the West is the victim of a satanic conspiracy initiated in Germany at about the time we fought our revolution.

The objective of the so called Illuminati has been to gain economic power. The principal agents of this conspiracy have been bankers who (as it happens) are almost all Jewish.

And even the Cold War was an illusion, a great show orchestrated by the Illuminati designed to create the $4 trillion debt that such as S.G. Warburg hold over us, which makes us wonder why poor Warburg went broke yesterday in London.

I rather like Pat Robertson and will send him a copy of this column, inviting him to be reborn historically. But what is going on is an attempt to persuade conservatives that the Christian Coalition is an indigestible political alliance.

It is interesting in this connection to recall an essay by Midge Decter published in Commentary last September. It is called, "The ADL [the Anti-Defamation League] vs. the 'Religious Right.'"

The ADL, every season or two, becomes an engine of the political left. In order to justify this, it helps to spot anti-Semitism on the right. The attempt to do so in 1994 produced a 193 page study titled, "The Religious Right: The Assault on Tolerance & Pluralism in America." It is interesting that this long tract made no mention of the passages in Robertson's books that could have been adduced as anti-Semitic in historical orientation.

Decter, who has never lost a race to find anti-Semitism when she thinks it is there, concludes that the ADL has "become guilty of the one bigotry against conservative Christians." What this would appear to tell us is that the Illuminati part of Robertson's thought is so irrelevant to his public purpose as to be ignored even by professionals engaged in doing maximum damage to the Christian Coalition.

The insistence that the social and the economic conservatives can't make common cause is not proved - perhaps because it is not correct, it is true that there are different priorities, but this is almost always true, even as Southern agrarians and Midwest unionists had different priorities under Franklin Roosevelt.

What matters is to resist accepting the proposition that a great centrifugal explosion is in the works within the GOP. To think that is to make way for it.

In 1801, the District of Columbia was placed under the jurisdiction of Congress.

In 1807, poet Henry Wadsworth Longfellow was born in Portland, Maine.

In 1861, in Warsaw, Russian troops fired on a crowd protesting Russian rule over Poland; five marchers were killed.

In 1890, boxers Danny Needham and Patsy Kerrigan fought 100 rounds in San Francisco before the match was declared a draw, after more than 6 1/2 hours.

In 1922, the U.S. Supreme Court unanimously upheld the 19th Amendment to the Constitution that guaranteed the right of women to vote.

Love thy nation in the third degree

Love is a living thing. It grows or it dies. In the beginning is romance. Boy and girl, man and woman. The breathless ecstasy of infatuation. The honeymoon. The excitement of exploration and discovery.

Then, as with all growing things, one day, the bloom wilts. The seeds have fallen from the pod to propagate anew. And, in the less-than-thrilling middle years, there is a time when married folks just sort of tolerate each other.

Finally, much later than most realize, love sets in. Real, whole, complete love - love in the third degree.

Unfortunately, in that sometimes-uncomfortable in-between time - uncomfortable mostly because it is his own waning virility that a man despises, and for a woman, her wrinkles - some fly the coop, jump the fence and seek to recycle their lives and rediscover romance.

But, by starting over, they are delaying the ultimate fulfillment, for full grown love requires many seasons.

Thus, in human relations, love evolves. It is somewhat the same with the love of a man for his home.

To a boy, his home town is filled with excitement and discovery. To the young man, far horizons beckon. But the old man, if he is still seeking far horizons, is a piteous person - he is unproted, chasing every place and loving no place.

On the other hand, some of the happiest people I have ever known either returned to their home towns or tolerated their home towns through the long, dull years when restlessness might have lured them elsewhere. Finally, they developed fierce pride in their communities - a determined, protective, permanent love in the third degree.

Perhaps with nations, too, this evolution can neither be hurried nor denied. The revolution's fever and fire once spent, the nation becomes first complacent - then crotchety and self-critical.

In our United States, with the honeymoon behind us and love in the third degree yet unrealized, we are inclined to carp and criticize, condemn and blame the government, and even flirt with other kinds.

I hope we don't jump the fence, seeking greener pastures in our middle years. For this, with nations as with men, is merely to start over again.

The collective 'tantrum' of American voters

Ever since the smashing Republican victory in last November's congressional elections, it has been agreed among political commentators that the voters were badly upset. ABC's Peter Jennings accused them of having a collective "tantrum."

It was soon apparent, though, that if the voters had a tantrum, it was a highly selective one. Not a single Republican incumbent, running for re-election, as governor, senator or congressman, was defeated; all of the losses among incumbents were on the Democratic side.

This selectivity plainly contradicted Tip O'Neill's famous dictum that "All politics is local." If that were true, then the losses would have been distributed more evenly between the parties, in response to varying local circumstances.

Even more puzzling was the apparent contradiction of the slogan emblazoned on the wall of Mr. Clinton's 1992 campaign headquarters by his canny manager, James Carville: "It's the economy, stupid!" In 1992, the economy was indeed the Democrats' best issue, and Carville was absolutely right to insist on its high priority. He certainly didn't want to discuss foreign policy (President Bush's strong point), let alone get into a debate over character.

But Carville's shrewd insight has, in the past three years, been elevated into a permanent rule of politics, supposedly applicable in all cases, everywhere. Yet last November, when the economy was markedly more robust than it had been two years earlier and President Clinton might ordinarily have been expected to reap the benefit, the voters turned on the Democratic Party like a Rottweiler killing a rabbit. What on earth got into them?

London's Economist is a highly respected magazine, and it observes the American scene with shrewd and basically friendly eyes. Its passion is free market economics; for the rest its views are, in American terms, roughly centrist. In its Jan. 28 issue, it studies and tries to make sense of the current attitude of the American electorate.

For more than two pages it seeks an explanation in terms of economics. Unemployment is down; consumer confidence, is up; job tenure is steady. Why, then, is Mr. Clinton so unpopular, and why did his party take such a drubbing?

Do these signs of economic health impact the voters unevenly, or perhaps not at all? Or is there something the matter with the statistics themselves? On and on the editors go, considering and rejecting every conceivable explanation.

And then, in its last three sentences, the article stumbles onto the truth:

"If economic worry weighs less heavily [on voters] than many have assumed, then Mr. Clinton's attempts to pander to the middle class with tax cuts, or to the working poor by raising the minimum wage, may be futile. The greater unease may be over social and moral issues rather than the economy. In which case, Republicans may well have a better handle on the state of the union than Mr. Clinton does."

In other words, it's social and moral issues, stupid: Things like the family, and illegitimacy, and drugs, and abortion, and the sexual revolution, and personal responsibility.

We are, in fact, witnessing an immense change in the central preoccupation of the American electorate. There will still be times when the state of the economy, or even some foreign threat, temporarily concerns the voters more. But the American people know now where the real trouble with their country lies, and they are bracing themselves to tackle it.

The Republicans do indeed have a "better handle" on this whole subject than the Democrats, and therefore a priceless opportunity to put themselves at the head of the next dominant impulse in American politics. But most of them, like most politicians everywhere, would rather hang back, hoping to avoid a messy confrontation.

They are wrong. Once again, fortune will favor the brave.

Tuesday declared American Heart Association Day in Texas

AUSTIN — In honor of the American Heart Association's many volunteers and contributors, and because of the public services provided by this organization, Gov. George W. Bush has declared Feb. 28, as American Heart Association Day in Texas.

In the proclamation, Gov. Bush notes, "Heart disease is the number one killer and stroke is the number one cause of disability in Texas. The mission of the American Heart Association (AHA) is to reduce disability and death from cardiovascular diseases and stroke. The AHA funded $6.5 million in meritorious cardiovascular research projects in Texas during 1994, and the interactive educational programs of the AHA reached more than six million Texans during 1994 with critical health messages."

He further stated that "approximately 360,000 people in Texas were trained through the AHA's cardiopulmonary resuscitation training programs and advanced cardiac life support training programs in 1994," and that "more than 220,000 Texans volunteer their time each year to support the research, education programs, and advocacy efforts of the AHA." The percentage of total deaths in Texas due to cardiovascular disease has declined from 46 percent in 1982 to 41 percent in 1992.

This gubernatorial proclamation coincides with the American Heart Association's Legislative Day at the Capitol in Austin, which is also being held on Tuesday.

Volunteers from across the state will meet with their legislators on this day to express support for the AHA's legislative agenda, which includes reducing minors' access to tobacco products; restricting public smoking; promoting health, nutrition and physical education; and promoting cardiopulmonary resuscitation training courses for students.

Skelton recognized at TCASE "Regular Educator of the Year"

Schulenburg Elementary School principal Martha Skelton was recognized as the "Regular Educator of the Year" by the Texas Council of Administrators for Special Education.

Martha Skelton

The award was presented to Skelton at the Mid-Winter Conference of TCASE in Austin in January.

Skelton was recognized for her contributions to the equitable education of students with disabilities.

Nominations were solicited from TCASE members throughout the state.

Marilyn Clore, director of special education for Schulenburg ISD, nominated Skelton.

Skelton's nomination was selected in Region 13, the area to which Schulenburg belongs.

Region 13 forwarded the nomination for Skelton to the state level of TCASE and she was selected over entries from all classifications throughout the state of Texas.

In addition to the plaque presented to Skelton, her name will be entered into the TCASE registration of award winners.

Skelton noted in her acceptance speech the contributions of SISD administration, past and present, as well as the training she received in a previous school district. Skelton also gave credit for her success to her staff.

"I could not have done this without the support of my staff," Skelton said.

Skelton, a 1971 graduate of McLean High School, holds a bachelor's degree in elementary education from West Texas State University, now West Texas A & M University in Canyon, and a master's degree in school administration from Lamar University in Beaumont. Skelton is in her third year as being principal at Schulenburg Elementary School. Prior to working in Schulenburg, Skelton had been a counselor at Lumberton Independent School District. She is the daughter of Georgie Beasley of Pampa and the late Guy Beasley. Martha has two sons, Guy Wesley Skelton who is stationed with the United States Navy in Charleston, N.C., and James Zachary Skelton of the home.

Search for longevity stalled at 120-year mark

By DR. MICHAEL FREDMAN

NEW YORK (AP) — From Harvard comes a report that one of the hottest areas of research right now is aging — and how to put a stop to it.

A few scientists hope to eventually figure out how people can live well beyond the 120-year mark that is today's maximum life expectancy.

Some researchers speculate that a select group of genes may extend life; others are looking for therapies to halt the processes that damage cells and lead to the body's deterioration and eventual death.

And still other scientists say the answer to longevity is far more mundane: a healthy diet, regular exercise and positive social interaction. There is clear evidence that staying active, both mentally and physically — along with eating a nutritious diet — strengthens the brain, muscles, heart and immune system.

In an earlier column, I reported that research scientists have been able to quadruple the life span of the lowly rat by improving its environment and diet, give it proper exercise and provide it with plenty of social contact and an active sex life.

Even scientists who are intent on slowing the biochemical advance of aging acknowledge that no pill will even substitute for the benefits of good nutrition and exercise.

So even if research scientists are able to identify longevity-related genes, it will not significantly help people who don't take good care of themselves in the first place.

Physicians generally agree that the greatest risk factor in surgery among elderly people is the presence of a coexisting disease, a disease unrelated to the condition requiring surgery.

For this reason, there are distinct advantages in proceeding with surgery when it can be performed on an elective basis, especially if a delay might mean emergency surgery at a later time or elective surgery at a time when you may be less healthy.

Many people prefer to have surgery in or near their hometowns, where family and friends are available for support. But proceed carefully and be selective. Look first for quality, both in people and facilities. If you must travel to find it, the end result might be worth the inconvenience.

Increasingly, surgery is being successfully performed on older Americans, and any delay in needed surgery can be hazardous to the patient.

By all means, seek the recommendation of your personal physician before proceeding with any surgery. One question you might ask your own doctor: "If you were personally faced with this decision, what would you do?"

Know your microclimate as well

By GEORGE BRIA

POUND RIDGE, N.Y. (AP) — Frost, like life, may seem unfair. The first nip of autumn wipes out most of your annuals while your neighbor's garden gets to live another day.

You could call it just luck, but the science of microclimates provides a natural explanation. One tomato — or bean or zinnia — dies, while another lives longer because of slightly different climate conditions.

What's true in the neighborhood is true on the continent and on the globe, for landscapes amount to mosaics of many microclimates. To help gardeners, zone maps give a rough idea of where to grow, or not to try to grow, certain plants, particularly perennials which must survive a year's extremes of cold or heat. Scientists are constantly working to refine these charts.

Of course, for something as small as a garden, you must make your own map or keep notes on your observations. That sunny, south-facing wall, for example, is a kinder shelter for some plants than the wind-swept spot a few yards away. Or your neighbor's higher elevation enables his or her garden to escape frosts that, lower down, settle on your plants.

Even on a single homestead, contrasts are dramatic. As "Taylor's — Master Guide to Gardening," a new encyclopedia, puts it, "Where the sunlight is strong, plentiful and unobstructed by trees and structures, exposure can affect microclimates to such an extent that the south side of the house can resemble Arizona while the north is like Quebec."

With variations like those, a gardener learns to adapt to his own environment. He may succeed in growing things where zone maps or generalized manuals say he shouldn't. A pyracantha bush I've nurtured for 10 years against a protected, sunny side of my house survived cold spells that likely would have killed it on more exposed parts of the property.

Nevertheless, zone maps do serve a purpose, especially when you're new to the game. They tell you the magnolia you fell in love with on a Virginia campus won't make it in New England, but there are varieties that will.

A heat zone map is now on the planning board to complement the Agriculture Department's 11-zone chart, used in plant catalogs, that lists minimum average temperatures.

Another one, published by Rutgers University, divides the United States and Canada into 26 zones and shows rainfall, maximum and minimum temperatures and frost dates. Still another, being prepared at Cornell University for the U.S. Forestry Service, gets more comprehensive and detailed.

The American Horticultural Society, based in Alexandria, Va., has begun raising funds to create a map that would tell a gardener what plants do or don't resist heat stress.

In a telephone interview, H. Marc Cathey, the society's president, mentioned Alberta spruce and rhododendrons as examples of plants that "can take mild winters, but not stressful summers."

Cathey said the map would be pegged to the number of days in a given zone that are above and below 86 degrees Fahrenheit, or 30 Celsius.

"Gardeners can do something about moisture, shade, drainage and such things, but they can do nothing about temperature," he said.

The Rutgers map was developed by a meteorologist, Mark D. Shulman, now retired, and a then-graduate student, Arthur T. DeGaetano, now at Cornell's Northeast Regional Climate Center in Ithaca, N.Y.

In a telephone interview, DeGaetano said a home gardener can look at the Rutgers map to get a broader estimate of growing conditions than furnished by the cold-only criteria of the USDA map.

"On the USDA map, for example, New Jersey and Oklahoma are classified in the same zone, but on our map, they're not — obviously because of moisture and things like that," he said.

"All of southern West Virginia is one USDA zone, but on our map, moisture and mountains make a difference," he added.

DeGaetano said the new map he is working on for the Forestry Service will upgrade the Rutgers map considerably.

He said it would show "such things as the modified climates around the Great Lakes" and growing conditions in large urban centers, like the New York metropolitan area.

DeGaetano acknowledges "a limiting factor" in getting nurseries to list both the USDA and the Rutgers zones.

But he suggested that a home gardener scouting for a plant in a catalog governed by the USDA map could refine his search by consulting a Rutgers map.

The 24-by-29-inch, color-coded map is obtainable for $7, including shipping, from Cook College, Martin Hall, Room 101, New Brunswick, N.J. 09903.

Check the gas meter

Here's something really breathtaking: a breath tester that measures the amount of gas cows burp up!

Cows are the world's biggest belchers — they burp about once every 40 seconds. That also makes them big producers of methane gas. (Methane helps cause global warming by trapping heat in the atmosphere.) Problem is, climate researchers have had a hard time figuring out exactly how much methane cows belch.

But now they can, thanks to Patrick Zimmerman's invention. It's a container that hangs around the cow's neck. The device lets researchers "cow-culate" how much gas is released in the atmosphere. Burp!

Adults recall nightmare of their orphanage days

DEAR READERS: When I asked readers to share their experiences in orphanages, mail poured in from the United States and Canada. I then devoted an entire column to the responses from orphanage alumni whose experiences were mostly positive. In the interest of accuracy, I offer some typical letters from those whose experiences were negative and brutal:

Abigail Van Buren

SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

I will never forget the shame and humiliation I suffered. Sign me...
GEORGE

DEAR ABBY: In 1925, my sister and I were taken to an orphanage because our parents had separated, and neither one could give us a decent home.

I remember daily lineups when couples came in looking for a child to adopt. I don't know whether they had to prove they were qualified to raise children. I was picked, and sent to another building for two weeks of observation. My little sister, who was 4 or 5, found out where I was, and she used to stand under my window so we could talk to each other.

Our mother returned to Dad in order to forestall the adoption, but their marriage was miserable. Then I learned Mom was stricken with cancer, and she died at the age of 33.

My memories of that orphanage are vivid: We girls wore ugly uniforms, black stockings and high-top shoes with laces. We were not permitted to speak to each other at the table during mealtime.

I remember crying when I sat on Santa's knee one Christmas at a department store.

In retrospect, there was no overt cruelty at the orphanage, but it left a scar on my heart.

A.H., PORTLAND, ORE.

DEAR ABBY: I was sent to an orphanage when I was 8. It was awful. I was beaten and locked in dark closets. Once I was so frightened I wet my pants, so I had to sit with my underpants over my face to smell the urine.

Another time I was thrown out onto a fire escape and nearly fell 40 feet to the ground. One time I fell and got a large bump on my forehead. One of the nuns took the metal cross she wore around her neck and pressed it so hard against the bump to reduce the swelling, it left a permanent mark on my forehead.

I have heard there were orphanages where children were shown affection and even given music lessons. This wasn't one of them.

DONNA D., PICKERING, ONTARIO, CANADA

DEAR ABBY: I was the seventh of nine children. Our father died when our mother was expecting her ninth child, so all of us kids were sent to St. Vincent's Orphanage in Philadelphia. It was a harsh experience that left emotional scars that never healed.

Mickey Rooney (in defense of Newt Gingrich) said, "Boys Town in Nebraska wasn't too bad."

Well, he got paid to be an orphan — none of us real orphans did. I hope they never build any more orphanages!

RUTH L., WEST CHESTER, PA.

DEAR ABBY: I was born in 1923 of Russian-German parents. I was placed in a Denver orphanage with three of my sisters when I was 7 or 8 years old. I remember using a dirty word (which I didn't even know was dirty), and I was whipped and made to chew a whole bar of Lifebuoy soap.

Horoscope

Tuesday, Feb. 28, 1995

In the year ahead, your attitude and outlook might change significantly. Views or concepts that have impeded your progress will be weeded out and renounced.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You may make some progress with an important self-interest today, but probably not as much as you'd expected. Be grateful for gains, even small ones. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2.50 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You will come across information today that could damage someone's reputation. Do not be the one to pull the cork out of the bottle.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You won't have much luck today trying to remold friends into your image. Your critiques and suggestions will be resented and ignored.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) The people who usually back you up might oppose you today. Instead of overreacting, try to view your recent actions from their perspective.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Take the time to carefully read the directions for handling any new material or unfamiliar product you work with today.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You might be a bit too possessive of the people you love today. The tighter you try to bind them to you, the harder they'll strain to break free.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Try not to begin a project today if you're not motivated enough to see it through to conclusion. Any small amount of enthusiasm could wane, if tested.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) An associate might do something today that warrants criticism, but resist making any comments. Faultfinding will create more problems than it solves.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Protect your prized possessions today. Anything left lying about unattended will be in jeopardy, especially if suspicious-looking strangers are in the vicinity.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Instead of reopening old wounds today, let bygones be bygones. Focusing on unresolved differences could make things worse than they were before.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Make it a point not to speak about others today if your thoughts or comments are negative. The words you utter at this time might come back to haunt you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Feel free to reject the request for a favor by a friend who is always asking you to do more than he/she is ever willing to do in return.

PAMPA — Perryton slipped by Pampa, 5-4, in baseball action Saturday at Harvester Stadium.

Trailing 5-2, the Harvesters rallied in the bottom of the seventh as two runners crossed the plate with one out. That was all the runs Pampa could muster.

"We hit the ball well in spots," said Pampa coach Dennis Doughty. "We need to hit better in situations where they'll drive in runs."

Hank Gindorf hit a home run for the Harvesters and teammate Todd Finney doubled off the fence. Joel Ferland and Danny Frye also hit the ball well.

Rene Armendariz turned in an outstanding job of relief pitching, Doughty said.

Pampa, now 1-1 on the season, hosts Sanford-Fritch at 4:30 p.m. Tuesday. The Harvesters opened the season with a 10-0 win over Palo Duro on Tuesday.

Pampa's first District 1-4A game is scheduled for March 21 against Canyon on the home field.

HOCKEY

DALLAS (AP) — The Chicago Blackhawks used a little luck, a lot of defense and another stellar performance from goalie Ed Belfour to continue their run of road success with a 2-1 victory over the faltering Dallas Stars.

Chicago took advantage of a fortunate bounce that resulted in a first-period goal from defenseman Eric Weinrich to snap a 1-1 tie in their 2-1 victory over the Dallas Stars Sunday night.

It was their sixth victory in their last seven road games.

The atmosphere on the ice was intense, said Belfour, who came up with 23 saves to improve to 9-5-0.

"It felt a lot like a playoff game out there tonight," Belfour said. "It's the kind of game that will help you in the playoffs. We're playing real hard on the road, and that's a great confidence builder."

Weinrich's 40-foot slap shot went in off Dallas goalie Darcy Wakaluk's stick with 1:03 left in the first period, Weinrich's second goal of the year, to put the Blackhawks in front for good.

"The puck seemed like it bounced three or four times before it went in," said Weinrich. "The biggest thing for us is we're playing Blackhawks hockey on the defensive end. We haven't been scoring a lot of goals. We've been fighting for those 2-1, 3-2 wins."

The Stars thought they'd drawn even at 2-2 with 6:13 to go in the second period on rookie Todd Harvey's rebound. But referee Lance Roberts washed out the goal, ruling that Dallas' Dean Evason was in the crease and got tangled up with Belfour.

Evason agreed he was in the crease, but said he was shoved there by Chicago defenseman Chris Chelios.

"At the time it didn't feel like much, but when I saw the replay, he clearly pushed me," Evason said.

The Stars fell to 1-8-2 in their last 11 games and are winless in their last six at home (0-5-1). Chicago is unbeaten at Dallas' Reunion Arena (3-0-1) over the last two seasons.

"It was a 2-1 game, and rightfully so," Blackhawks coach Darryl Sutter said. "In a short season, you can't take a night off. We lost our first two and we were determined not to let that happen again."

The Blackhawks certainly know how to protect a lead, improving to 9-0-0 when they take the advantage into the third period. Chicago won for the fourth time in its last five games as the Hawks opened a four-game road trip.

All the scoring occurred in the first period. Evason's third goal of the season gave Dallas a 1-0 lead, but Chicago evened matters at 1-1 3:23 later when Jeff Shantz's pass from the right faceoff circle set up Sergei Krivokrasov, whose wrist shot from the slot beat Wakaluk for Krivokrasov's fourth goal of the year.

Stars coach Bob Gainey continues to try and solve his team's recent ineptitude. He liked his team's physical play, but not the numbers on the scoreboard.

"We had more body checks tonight than we've had in two weeks," Gainey said. "We could have been bowled over and left for dead on the ice, but we didn't. But Chicago's playing well because they play that style. You don't see any cracks in their defense."

PRO BASKETBALL

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Watching Dennis Rodman crash the backboards was enough to leave Golden State forward Victor Alexander raving for several minutes after the game.

"Rodman's probably the best rebounder to ever play the game," Alexander said after San Antonio's 129-99 victory Sunday night over the Warriors. "I'm pretty young, but I don't think there are a lot of people who would argue about that. He was just having fun tonight."

Rodman's rebounding keyed a third-quarter rally that helped stake the Spurs to their biggest victory this season. Eight Spurs scored in double figures, including Rodman with 13 points.

The NBA's leading rebounder set a franchise record for rebounds in a quarter with 15 in the third period. The raspberry-and-blue-haired power forward outrebounded Golden State as a team 15-4 as the Warriors did not collect their first carom for more than eight minutes in the quarter.

"I wanted to be like Michael Jordan. I want to be just like Mike," Rodman said. "I wanted to get completely off in the third quarter. Records are made to be broken by guys who want to go out and break them."

Rodman came within two of the NBA quarter rebounding record of 18, set by San Francisco's Nate Thurmond against Baltimore on Feb. 28, 1965.

San Antonio coach Bob Hill was impressed by Rodman's performance, which included 22 rebounds in 26 minutes.

Cowboys' Williams is on the mend

IRVING (AP) — Dallas Cowboys offensive tackle Erik Williams is on the mend, working harder than ever in his fight back from a serious knee injury in hopes of once again opening holes for Emmitt Smith.

Williams' 1994 season ended Oct. 24 when he slammed his car into a freeway guardrail and tore up his right knee.

Soon after the accident the knee was surgically repaired.

This month, he was under the knife again to have excess scar tissue removed. That's not necessarily a bad thing; Michael Irvin did it too when he hurt his knee in 1990.

The whole ordeal has changed Williams. He says there's a reason why he escaped a more serious injury or even death and he vows to be a better person because of it.

"I'm very blessed right now," he said. "I think the reason I'm here is because God is not through with me. He has things in store for me."

Williams works out four days a week to regain strength in his legs. The workouts also have allowed him to cut his weight from 335 pounds to 300 and it's helped him develop a work ethic in the weight room he's never had.

"I never lifted on my lower body in college (at Central State)," Williams said. "I was no workaholic. ... Now, I'll have to develop a work ethic that will stick with me the rest of my career."

He's also learned valuable life lessons.

"I've slowed down," said Williams, whose accident occurred while driving home from a club where he admittedly had been drinking. "Some of the things I used to do, I don't do anymore. I'd rather not say what."

Williams received two years' probation for pleading no contest to a misdemeanor drunken driving charge. In exchange, prosecutors dropped a subpoena for blood alcohol tests from that night.

All Williams remembers from that night was being on his car phone, looking down ... then hitting the guardrail.

"Then I'm in the ambulance and Michael was over me. I remember him slapping me in the face. 'Big E, wake up, wake up.' I was totally out of it," Williams said.

The Cowboys hope Williams will be back for the season opener and they're optimistic he can return to his status as the game's best young right tackle.

"I haven't changed our goals; it's to get him ready for the regular season," trainer Kevin O'Neill said. "Whether we can do that, I don't know. He's got other things than just the PCL (posterior cruciate ligament) to deal with. It's definitely going to be a tough rehab."

Pampa meets Burkburnett in regional semifinal action

PAMPA — The Pampa-Burkburnett regional semifinal game will be played at 7:30 Tuesday night in Frenship High School.

Pampa, which beat El Paso Parkland, 67-59, in last weekend's area contest, goes into Tuesday night's showdown with a 26-7 record. Burkburnett, 24-9, defeated Cleburne, 63-60, in the other area tilt.

Pampa and Burkburnett are no strangers to each other. The Harvesters edged Burkburnett in triple overtime, 98-86, to win the Fantasy of Lights Tournament in Wichita Falls in November. The score was tied 14 times before the Harvesters scored seven points in a row in the third and final overtime. The two teams have also met before in previous seasons during tournaments and playoffs.

Burkburnett has a height advantage on Pampa, but the Harvesters will have an edge in quickness.

Chris Nobles, and Josh Kollman have been the Bulldogs' key players this season. Both are averaging 13.5 points per game. Kollman is one of the tallest of the Bulldogs at 6-3.

Pampa, ranked tenth in the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches final regular-season poll, went on a 16-3 scoring run in the fourth quarter to turn back Parkland in the area round at Seminole. That scoring spree snapped a 45-45 tie in the fourth quarter.

Junior guard Rayford Young led the Harvesters in scoring, hitting his scoring average right on the nail with 22 points. Young tallied 11 of Pampa's 16 points during the fourth-quarter scoring run. Sophomore forward J.J. Mathis followed with 13 points in Pampa's scoring attack while senior guard Duane Nickelberry added 11. Nickelberry hit three 3-point goals while Young had two and Jason Weatherbee one.

"Both bunches were playing hard. It was a hard-fought, hard-nosed game," said Harvesters' coach Robert Hale. "I was very pleased with the outcome and very pleased with our effort."

The Pampa Optimist Club will honor the Harvester basketball team during their weekly meeting tonight.

Starting at 7 p.m., a pep rally is scheduled at the Optimist Gym and the public is invited to attend. The pep rally tips off the start of the Optimist Boys Basketball B Team Tournament. The B team tournament features the Knicks vs. Blazers immediately following the pep rally. Tournament play continues through Friday. During the regular season, the Hornets took first place with a record of 8-1.

The A team tournament is tentatively scheduled to begin Saturday, March 4 when the Heat and Spurs match up at 9 a.m.

Georgetown continues late-season charge

By The Associated Press

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

Call off the search. Cancel the APB. Othella Harrington has been found.

Georgetown's junior center broke out of a season-long funk Sunday with 27 points as the Hoyas kept up their late-season charge and continued Syracuse's late-season collapse with an 81-78 victory.

"I don't think they forgot about me," the 6-foot-9 Harrington said of his teammates and 10.6 scoring average. "The other guys did a great job getting me the ball, and I was on top of my game today."

Harrington was 10-for-15 from the field and 7-of-10 from the foul line, and it was his 12 points over an eight-minute span bridging the halves that rallied Georgetown from a 40-26 deficit to a 51-50 lead with 14:06 to play. He had only two points in the Orangemen's victory at Georgetown last month.

"Harrington was the difference," Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim said. "He has not really had big games this year and they haven't gotten him the ball. Today they got him the ball. We really made an effort to get back in a zone and dou ble-team him as much as we could. He just had the answers."

The loss was the fifth in seven games for Syracuse (18-7, 11-5 Big East), which fell from 17th to 22nd in the new rankings. Boeheim said the difference lately has usually been down low.

"We have been hurt inside the last four, five games," he said. "But he (Harrington) probably hurt us as much as any individual."

Allen Iverson added with 21 points for Georgetown, which was coming off a 77-52 rout of Villanova and has won three straight after losing three in a row. The Hoyas (17-7, 10-6) moved within a game of third-place Syracuse in the conference standings and moved back into the rankings at No. 21.

"We did a pretty good job of getting the ball inside to Othella inside their zone. He did a good job of scoring inside," Georgetown coach John Thompson said. "I have confidence in him. I just think he has to fight through this thing, so I felt good for him today."

In other games involving ranked teams Sunday it was: new No. 1 UCLA 100, Duke 77; No. 9 Wake Forest 66, No. 13 Virginia 63; and No. 17 Purdue 66, Wisconsin 56.

Harrington, who did score 21 points twice this season, was the Big East rookie of the year two years ago and was a second-team All-Big East pick last season. He has seen his scoring average decline from 16.8 to 14.7 to this year's 10.8.

"He's a big bruiser," Syracuse center J.B. Reafsnnyder said. "He was working hard down low and forcing us to stay behind him. When he got the ball, he was going to the basket, either making the basket or getting fouled."

A driving layup by Jerome Williams gave the Hoyas a 78-73 lead with one minute to play. Lawrence Moten, who led the Orangemen with 19 points, made a 3-pointer with 33 seconds left to make it 78-76. After Boubacar Aw made one of two free throws for Georgetown, Todd Burgan tipped in a missed shot with 16 seconds left to make it a one-point game. John Jacques made two free throws and then Don Reid blocked Michael Lloyd's 3-point attempt with 4.6 seconds remaining and Burgan missed a long 3-pointer as time expired.

"It was a competitive game. Both teams had and lost big leads. We just made too many mistakes at the end," Moten said.

The Hoyas haven't been making many mistakes as the postseason approaches.

"It means a great deal," Harrington said of the victory. "Syracuse is a ranked team, but we're a good team, too. This helps us out in our bid to go to the NCAA tournament."

No. 1 UCLA 100, Duke 77

The Bruins (21-2) won for the fifth time in 11 days and became the season's sixth No. 1 team with their ninth straight victory. Ed O'Bannon had a career-high 37 points, including 11 in a 15-6 run that gave UCLA a 76-63 lead with 5:48 to play. The Bruins broke the game open with a highlight-reel dunking exhibition over the final minutes. Cherokee Parks had 21 points to lead visiting Duke (12-15), which had won three straight over UCLA and dropped to 3-8 against ranked teams this season.

No. 9 Wake Forest 66, No. 13 Virginia 63

The Demon Deacons (19-5, 10-4 ACC) became a factor in the conference race with the home victory that brought them within one game of leaders Maryland and North Carolina and within one-half game of third-place Virginia (19-7, 11-4). Tim Duncan had 20 points and 15 rebounds for Wake Forest, while Randolph Childress had 19 points. Harold Deane led the Cavaliers with 20 points, but his chance to tie, a 3-pointer between two defenders with three seconds left, missed.

No. 17 Purdue 66, Wisconsin 56

The Boilermakers (20-6, 11-3 Big Ten) kept alive their chance to defend the conference title behind 13 points each from freshman center Brad Miller and senior guard Matt Waddell. Purdue is one-half game behind Michigan State in the standings and would tie because of winning their only meeting this season. The visiting Badgers (12-11, 6-8) were led by sophomore center Rashard Griffith, who had a career-high 29 points and also grabbed 16 rebounds.

Canadian hosts playoff clash

CANADIAN — Fort Elliott meets White Deer at 7 Tuesday night in a Region 1-1A boys area game in the Wildcats fieldhouse.

Both teams have 24-7 records. The Bucks are led by forward Duane Coffey (16 points per game) and swing Willie Herring (16 points).

Forward Justin Wesbrooks (22 points a game) and guard Jake Swigart (13 points) pace the Cougars in scoring.

Fort Elliott coach Curtis Smith is hoping his team continues its balanced scoring attack, like in the Cougars' 60-56 win over Wheeler in the bi-district game.

"Balanced scoring is something we haven't had," Smith said. "Justin has pretty much been carrying the scoring load for us."

Against Wheeler, Jake Swigart scored 15 points in leading three Cougars in double figures. Wesbrooks had 12 points and David Helton 11.

Smith was also pleased with the play of reserve Johnny Brannen.

"He surprised me. Johnny's only played basketball for two years, but he came in scored 8 points for us."

Herring tossed in 27 points, including the game-winning bucket, as White Deer edged Hartley, 63-61, in bi-district play. Coffey and Justin Brown had 12 and 11 points respectively for the Bucks.

Mavs' Jackson may miss rest of season

FORT WORTH (AP) — Dallas Mavericks guard Jim Jackson says he expects his ankle injury to keep him out of the rest of this season, ending his consecutive start streak and cutting short his breakout year.

Jackson, the league's highest-scoring guard and fifth-best overall at 26 points per game, severely sprained and partially dislocated his left ankle in Friday night's loss to New Jersey.

"I'm looking at it like I'll be out the rest of the way," Jackson said Saturday from his hotel room in Indianapolis, where the Mavericks were to play the Pacers Sunday night.

"With a bright future ahead for myself and our team next year and beyond, there's no reason to rush back this season and possibly get hurt even worse."

This is the first serious injury of Jackson's career. Since signing late in the 1992-93 season, he's started all 161 games, a franchise record.

"I've never missed a game because of injury at any level," said Jackson, who did sit out most of two games in the 1991 Pan American Games with a stress fracture in the same foot.

"But this was one of those of freak things that I guess happens to everybody some time in their career. This may be a blessing in disguise in that I get to sit back and reflect on what I accomplished this season and what I need to work on."

Now there's the question of when Jackson will return.

"It's too early to tell or pinpoint a time frame," said Mavericks trainer Doug Atkinson said. "At the very minimum he'll miss four weeks, and there's the real possibility he could miss six or seven weeks. With only eight weeks left, that would be like being out the rest of the season."

UCLA days are long gone

By JIM LITKE
AP Sports Writer

It hardly seems coincidental any more that the Final Four takes place around April Fools' Day. It has become an annual, if somewhat cruel, reminder for a handful of big-name coaches whose teams aren't there that the joke once again is on them.

It used to be that if a coach ran a clean program, won 20 games most seasons and a conference title every couple of seasons, he had security and the only time he met the rest of the athletic department was at the team banquet.

Now, almost everyone meddles in some part of his job and almost everything else — reputation, compensation, aggravation and most important, recruiting — rides like a doubled-down bet on the NCAA tournament every year.

Conferences dissolve overnight and athletic directors, unable to turn down television money, will schedule any team any time. The NCAA has gradually reduced the number of scholarships allowed each team from 15 to 13, scattering the talent. At the same time, the most talented of those kids demand more playing time, listen less and leave schools earlier and earlier, anyway.

Though they have less control, more than ever before, college basketball has become the coach's game. In the era of parity, they are the only constant. And their success in the NCAA tournament has become the only measure that matters any more.

"There are different No. 1s from one week to the next," said

Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson. "We're not dealing with the UCLA days. The best team I've seen over the last decade was UNLV in 1991. And they still didn't win a national championship."

"Parity," he added, "is here."

Richardson should know. His team, the defending national champion, set the tone for this confounding, jumbled, bewildering, puzzling fluster of a mess by losing their first game — by 24 points. When UCLA takes over the top spot today, it will mark the sixth different No. 1-ranked team this season, and the fifth time that's happened in as many weeks.

"What you're seeing," Kentucky coach Rick Pitino said, "is going to make for a great March Madness."

If the tournament is going to be as wide-open as it seems this season, it could also mean an end to April sadness for Bruin coach Jim Harrick or any of a select few of his long-suffering colleagues: coaches who have succeeded by every measure but one — a Final Four appearance. If they could stick around playing until at least April 1, they might get the last laugh.

Harrick hardly needs reminding that his current team, led by the brothers O'Bannon, might be his best shot to get there. Or that UCLA's last Final Four appearance was 1979. Or that late last January, the Bruins were ranked No. 1 before their tournament swoon before less-than-mighty Tulsa.

But Harrick is not the only coach with an impressive team, an immediate past he'd like to forget and a future that can't be secured too soon.

Maryland coach Gary Williams is beginning to look less and less like the boy wonder he was regarded early in his career. And he has to be wondering, more and more, how much longer sophomore Joe Smith, his best chance at the Final Four, will resist the lure of an NBA check.

Then, for sheer heartbreak, there's Jim Calhoun at Connecticut. Two years ago, the Huskies got beat out of a Final Four trip by Dookie Christian Laettner's last-gasp heroics. Last year, Donyell Marshall, all season long one of the most reliable players in the game, booted some free throws in overtime against Florida.

For sheer anguish, there's Purdue's Gene Keady. As nicely as his team is rounding into shape, he has to be wondering how good the Boilermakers might be if Glenn "Big Dog" Robinson had stuck around for his degree instead of a $70 million payday.

And for those who need someone to second-guess, there's John Calipari at UMass. He might have the best forward tandem in the nation in Marcus Camby and Lou Roe and he might have scotched all their chances to make the Final Four by suspending point guard Mike Williams for the rest of the season.

When Calipari first took the action, plenty of people laughed it off, doubting he'd stick by his guns. He did, proving that even at this time of year, there are some things you don't joke about.

McClellan reported in critical condition after fight

By ROBERT MILLWARD
AP Sports Writer

LONDON (AP) — Gerald McClellan was supposed to win quickly and add another title to his impressive collection. Instead, he wound up the loser and fighting for his life.

The 27-year-old American, on life support in critical but stable condition today at Royal London Hospital after surgery early Sunday to remove a blood clot from his brain, will never fight again.

John Sutcliffe, the neurosurgeon who performed the operation, said today "his chance of survival improves with every hour that passes."

"We think he will now survive," Sutcliffe said. "Hopefully we will get him through it — and at the end of the day get him through it in good condition."

The boxer's mother, Stacey McClellan, his girlfriend Angela Brown, his aunt Linda Shorter and sister Stacey Caen arrived in London late Sunday night from the United States to be at his bedside.

"We are all so scared for Gerald," Caen said. "He must not die. He's too young."

"There are people all over the world praying for this courageous fighter," said Michael Marley, acting as a family spokesman. "We've all got our fingers crossed."

McClellan collapsed in the ring seconds after he was knocked out in the 10th round by World Boxing Council super-middleweight champion Nigel Benn, who said today that he might retire if McClellan does not make a full recovery.

"If Gerald doesn't pull through, then I think that will be it," Benn said.

It was a tragic end to a brutal fight and immediately led to a call in Britain to ban the sport.

The British Medical Association and the British Safety Council, which have been spearheading an anti-boxing campaign for years, said the tragedy was another grim example of the sport's dangers.

"How many more cases do we need of boxers playing roulette with their brains before the government and (Boxing) Board of Control take seriously what we say about the cumulative danger that boxing does?" said medical association spokesman Jeffrey Cundy.

McClellan, who had won each of his last three WBC middleweight title fights in one round, almost did it again, knocking Benn through the ropes 35 seconds into the bout.

But Benn just wouldn't stay down, and with a sellout crowd of 12,500 roaring its approval, the British fighter turned it around and floored McClellan twice in the 10th to defend his title for the seventh time.

"It turned out to be not just a boxing match but a war," said Benn's trainer, Peter De Freitas.

Following the second knockdown, McClellan, blinking in discomfort and clearly dazed, appeared to wait until the referee had finished the count. Then he got up and walked back to his corner.

McClellan went back down on one knee.

Looking dazed and blinking repeatedly, McClellan waited as French referee Alfred Azaro counted him out.

Then McClellan stood up and walked back to his corner, where he sat on the floor with his head against the post. Within seconds, he slumped unconscious to the floor.

"It's fairly evident from the time he first went down on his knee and took the standing count of eight that something significant was going wrong inside his head," Sutcliffe said.

He said the fact that medics were at ringside to administer oxygen so quickly was crucial. If they hadn't, McClellan probably would have died.

"The main problem with injuries like this is that the brain doesn't get enough oxygen quickly," Sutcliffe said. "He was adequately resuscitated at ringside."

McClellan was conscious when he left the ring, and when he arrived at the hospital he spoke with Sutcliffe.

"He told me he had a headache, that his headache was all over the head, but that he was fine and I didn't need to worry," Sutcliffe said.

When McClellan was undergoing a brain scan, he slipped into a coma, Sutcliffe said.

Cambridge hygienist marches in death penalty protest in father's memory

BOSTON (AP) — Sam Sheppard, a Cambridge hygienist who has tried for most of his life to remain anonymous, hopes that walking from Massachusetts to New Orleans will raise opposition to the death penalty. Sheppard didn't have a choice when his private life first became public. He was 7 years old when his father was accused of his mother's murder in a case that became the basis for The Fugitive on TV. Sheppard's mother was killed July 4, 1954. She was pregnant. Five months later, a Cleveland jury convicted Dr. Sam Sheppard of murder, after a sensational trial covered by big-name writers and reporters. Sheppard's father spent 12 years in prison before being acquitted with the help of attorney F. Lee Bailey, who made his own reputation by pioneering the notion that wild pretrial publicity could poison chances for a fair trial. Although his father wasn't sentenced to die, Sheppard says, the case illustrates the folly of capital punishment: His father could have been wrongly put to death.

"The victims' families are cheated with the death penalty," Sheppard said before starting his 160-day walk in Plymouth, Mass., today. "It is touted as a big panacea for violence and it is a lie." Sheppard's father was convicted of killing his pregnant wife despite his claims that a bushy-haired man at the scene knocked him unconscious. And despite his eventual acquittal, he never regained the respect of his community or his license to practice medicine. His son said he died in 1970 a broken man.
