KINSLOWS SELL THEIR HERD OF HEREFORDS

W. A. Kinslow and son last week sold their entire herd of Registered Herefords to W. A. SoRelle banker and stockman of Clarendon.

This is one of the oldest and best herds of the Panhandle, having been established more than ten years ago by W. A. and Charles W. Kinslow. This fine herd consisted of 135 head that had been purchased in Kansas, Missouri, and out of some of the best herds in Texas.

Other business interests have caused the dispersing of the herd.

HEDLEY HARDWARE.

J. B. King, in a letter to W. H. Huffman of this city, sends a clipping telling of the earthquake shocks at Huntington Beach, Calif., a few nights ago. It occurred at near midnight, and was a hair-raising event. A "pajama parade" of citizens, who were aroused from their slumbers in an ungentle manner, was one of the features. We don't care so much for Southern California since reading this account. Mr. King has our thanks for subscription renewal.

J. H. Taft of Lockner, accompanied by his father and brother and Mr. Baker, were here last Friday on a prospecting trip. S. P. Pool was showing them around.

DONLEY TO EXHIBIT AT TRI-STATE FAIR

Through the efforts of Miss Williams, Donley County Home Demonstrator and Grady Harris, County Farm Demonstrator, community fairs are being organized to enable them to best select products and other things that will be in order at the Panhandle Tri State Exposition held in Amarillo the latter part of September.

This shows that Donley County is out for first prize and will serve notice to the other counties in this part of the State to get busy since Donley County was always a consistent place winner at the Dallas Fair when exhibits were sent there. Competition promises to be greater since mostly only Panhandle counties will exhibit, and it will be harder for the judges to decide on the better class of products.

The management of the Tri State exposition has pointed with special emphasis to that part of the catalog of the fair that is devoted to the county exhibits. The first fifteen of the counties will be given prizes. First prize being $250.00 and the lowest prize being $50.00. It is also pointed out that the advertising value to be derived from the exhibit being at the fair will be worth far more than any money prize could hope to be. In addition to this is also pointed out that this is a district fair and not a fair for Amarillo alone, the district being composed of the entire Panhandle.

PETOSKEY POTATO IS FAVORED BY GROWERS

Demand for Certified Seed Is Increasing Rapidly.

Michigan farm bureau potato growers are making that state a center for better seed stock. The demand for certified seed is increasing rapidly both in the state and elsewhere. Already the Michigan state farm bureau seed department has handled 50,000 bushels of high-quality seed potatoes.

While the Michigan state farm bureau seed department handles several varieties of seed potatoes, the demand for certified Petoskey seed has far outstripped that for seed of any other variety of potatoes. It indicates a tendency on the part of Michigan potato growers to standardize on the Petoskey variety for their main crop.

This farm bureau potato sales service is a real service to growers. The bureau found good markets for the seed and got the growers good prices. It has also assured the growers good marketing outlets next year, as 1923 growers will know where to come for 1924 stock. Michigan farmers are planting four and a half times as many farm bureau handled certified seed potatoes as last year.

While a large number of small shipments are made from the seed department direct to the individual potato grower, it is noteworthy that the bulk of the business is carried on through the local co-operative associations. This indicates that the managers of the local co-ops are alive to the value of certified seed and that the local association is proving an efficient medium for the distribution of improved seed to the individual farm bureau member.

The farm bureau oat and barley seed pools, which handled over 12,500 bushels of these leading spring grains, have just been closed and are a case in point. The oats and barley handled through the pools were certified stock of high-yielding varieties which have been developed by skillful plant breeders at the Michigan and Wisconsin Agricultural colleges and have successfully met the test of time on Michigan farms.

There is no question but what these varieties produce far more than the average strains of oats and barley. Growers of certified Wolverine oats secured about 44 per cent higher yield than the average for all oats grown in the state.

Certified Worthy oats proved good yielders on the heavier soils where their stiff straw avoided lodging. On the heavier land of the Fairgrove vicinity, and other similar soils, 16 growers with 200 acres produced an average of 64.5 bushels per acre. This is almost double the average oat yield for Michigan.

Eighty-four bushels per acre were produced by J. T. Davis of Fairgrove, on 14 acres. "A ten-bushel increase over the acre yield of my other oats," is the 1922 report of Davis Brothers, John A. Gordon, and other Fairgrove farmers, referring to their Worthy oat crop. Wolverine and Worthy oats were the two oat varieties handled through the farm bureau pool in 1923.

The farm bureau oat pool handled 4,404 bushels of certified Wolverine oats and 5,200 bushels of Worthy oats while the barley pool disposed of 2,838 bushels of certified Wisconsin pedigree barley.

The service rendered by the bureau's pools were twofold, helping both the grower and the purchaser. Through the pool the bureau's advertising, cleaning, shipping and sales organization were placed at the disposal of the grower of certified oat and barley seed at the nominal charge. This relieved the grower of a considerable detail work and the man who wanted either a small quantity or a carload of seed of certified and guaranteed quality was enabled to secure it promptly without paying excessive middleman charges.

MRS. LINDQUIST TELLS WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did for Her

Kansas City, Mo.—"I was left in a very serious condition after childbirth and no one thought I could ever be any better. Then came the 'Change of Life' and I was not prepared for what I had to suffer. I had to go to bed at times to be perfectly quiet as I could not even stoop down to pick anything from the floor. I did not suffer any pain, but I was decidedly nervous and could not sleep. For nearly two years I was this way, and the doctor was frank enough to tell me that he could do no more for me. Shortly after this I happened to see in a newspaper an advertisement of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. In a few days the medicine was in the house and I had begun its use and I took it regularly until I was well. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to others when I have the opportunity."—Mrs. MAY LINDQUIST, 2314 Independence Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did for Her

Kansas City, Mo. — "I was left in a very serious condition after childbirth and no one thought I could ever be any better. Then came the 'Change of Life' and I was not prepared for what I had to suffer. I had to go to bed at times as I could not even stoop down to pick anything from the floor. I did not suffer any pain, but I was decidedly nervous and could not sleep. For nearly two years I was this way, and the doctor was frank enough to tell me that he could do no more for me. Shortly after this I happened to see in a newspaper an advertisement of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. In a few days the medicine was in the house and I had begun its use and I took it regularly until I was well. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to others when I have the opportunity." — Mrs. MAY LINDQUIST, 2314 Independence Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

DAIRY POINTS

Requirements Outlined for Good Dairy Ration

The requirements of a good dairy ration are: 1. It must be balanced. 2. It should be palatable. 3. It must be laxative. 4. It should be sufficiently bulky. 5. It should contain a variety of feeds. 6. It must be adapted for milk production. 7. It should be of lowest possible cost.

In order to feed cows economically it is essential that the roughage be produced on the farm. Home grown feeds cost less than if purchased. Many farms can also produce some grain feeds.

A good cow will require the following feed for a year:

Roughage—4 tons silage, 1½ tons legume hay—alfalfa, cowpeas or peanut; 1 ton sudan sorghum or fair, fed green when pastures are dry or an extra ton of silage provided for the dry season; 1 acre wheat, oats or rye, for winter pasture.

Grain Ration—700 pounds corn, kafir or barley chop; 400 pounds cottonseed meal or peanut meal; 200 pounds wheat bran. (Some good oats can be substituted if desired, or the amount of bran increased, depending upon the roughage available.)

Heavy milk producers may need some grain even when on a good grass pasture. A Jersey cow giving the following amounts of milk per day can profitably be fed grain as indicated: 20 pounds milk, 3 pounds grain; 30 pounds milk, 5½ pounds grain; 40 pounds milk, 8 pounds grain. Holstein cows: 25 pounds milk, 3 pounds grain; 35 pounds milk, 5½ pounds grain; 45 pounds milk, 8 pounds grain.

A balanced ration for dairy cows may be calculated by consulting a table of digestible nutrients usually found in books on feeding and considering the feeds available and obtainable.

Here are a few helps in making a dairy ration, suggested by Professor Baer:

1. After balancing the grain mixture for the average cow in the herd, mix enough for a week's supply.
2. Have at least two laxative feeds in the ration (alfalfa hay and bran are laxative feeds).
3. One-third of the grain by weight should be of bulky character.
4. Add one pound of salt to each 100 pounds of grain.
5. Adjust the amount of grain for each cow to the amount of milk.
6. Silage may be fed at the rate of 2½ to 3½ pounds per 100 pounds live weight of cow.
7. Feed one pound good dry roughage for 100 pounds live weight of cow.

Cheese Lags in Bigger

Use of Dairy Products

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

While the consumption of dairy products in the United States is increasing, there is still room for dairy interests to expand through creating an increase in the consumption of cheese, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Although the American people are large eaters of butter compared with European peoples, they consume relatively small amounts of cheese. The consumption of cheese is approximately 3.8 pounds per person, while in some European countries the consumption is four or five times this amount. Cheese of the American Cheddar type is chiefly manufactured in this country, but there is a demand for cheese of foreign varieties, especially by persons who have come from foreign countries. Before the war more than 60,000,000 pounds of cheese, or approximately one-fifth as much as was produced of all varieties in this country, was imported annually.

Increasing the consumption of cheese offers large opportunities for the development of the dairy industry. If the people of this country would consume as much cheese per capita as the Dane, the Englishman, the Highlander, the German, or the Frenchman, or half as much as the Swiss, it would create a market for 9,000,000,000 pounds of milk more than is required at the present time.

DAIRY NOTES

Kindness is an important factor in profitable dairying.

Stirring milk and cream aside is reducing garlic and onion flavor.

Cottonseed meal is not considered a good feed for young calves.

Wild onions, garlic and ragweeds are not eaten by cows when there is plenty of other feed.

Too much working is a common fault in farm-made butter. This makes the butter sticky and salty body and a dull, greasy appearance.

A rich cream is the best cream. It will not sour as quickly as a thin cream. You will not have to handle such a large volume of material.

A cow pays well for good care. She gives her best when needs for plenty of water, air and feed are met, and her bodily comfort is considered.

FARM LIVE STOCK

Tankage Very Good for Pigs on Alfalfa Pasture

Is a protein supplement necessary for hogs which are fattened on alfalfa pasture? Light is shed on this question by an experiment conducted last summer at the Kansas experiment station. In this test two lots of pigs were fattened on alfalfa pasture. One received corn alone, while the other was given corn and a quarter of a pound of tankage per head daily. In both cases the grain was hand-fed twice a day on a concrete feeding floor. Both lots of pigs were fed for 120 days and received the same treatment.

The pigs fed corn alone gained but three-quarters of a pound per head daily, while those which had the tankage put on gains at the rate of a pound and a quarter per head daily. The pigs which did not have tankage required 445 pounds of corn to make 100 pounds of gain. In contrast, those fed on corn and tankage took but 335 pounds of corn and 20 pounds of tankage for 100 pounds of gain. In other words, 20 pounds of tankage saved 110 pounds of corn. When the trial was made corn was worth about $1 per hundred pounds and tankage about $4. The saving effected by the tankage, on the basis of these prices, was 23 cents on each 100 pounds of pork. Since corn is now higher in price and tankage about the same as when this experiment was made, the saving due to the tankage would be somewhat greater at the present time.

It was noted by those who conducted the trial that the pigs which had nothing but corn on the alfalfa pasture uprooted the alfalfa to a considerable extent. This was not true in the lot which had tankage. This damage to the pasture necessitated considerable expense in reseeded.

The Kansas test indicates that the feeding of a small amount of tankage to pigs fattened on a legume pasture, such as alfalfa or clover, is well worth while. It is also advisable from the standpoint of protecting the pasture.

Good Fattening Ration
for Market Cockerels

Dry mash is as important in the laying hen's diet in summer as in winter. Many persons feel that the hens will pick their rations, but this often causes a serious dropping off in production.

To get the highest production, a dry mash ought to be in the feeders at all times. A mash composed of 200 pounds of ground oats, 100 pounds of bran, 100 pounds of ground corn and .75 pounds of tankage makes an excellent summer feed for laying hens. By using this ground mash the hen does not have to use her energy as much in digesting and can keep up her laying.

Also, hens that are deprived of a good ration during the summer often go into a slack period preparatory to an early molt and do not lay. Experiments have shown that molting hens are low producers and often good hens are discarded when they would be all right if properly fed.

Hens that are slow producers when properly fed can soon be culled out properly.—J. L. Gordon, Iowa State college.

Cattle and Sheep Often
Contract Shipping Fever

Cattle and sheep, while passing through the large stockyards, often contract a disease known as hemorrhagic septicaemia or shipping fever. The losses occur most commonly in the fall as cold weather advances and heaviest losses usually occur among stocker and feeding cattle, although milking cows and sheep may be affected. The disease is a poisoning of the blood and often runs a short course and quickly proves fatal.

The losses from this disease are very heavy and the United States bureau of animal industry is trying to prevent it from spreading. A bulletin has been published which tells how to treat this disease and may be obtained free of charge by writing the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

A small fat sheep brings a better price than a large poor sheep.

A scrub bull isn't worthless. He will make a fair grade of bologna.

Many lambs can be saved by giving the flock extra care and attention at lambing time.

Proper feeding just before and immediately after the sow farrows and close attention to all details at this time, are important factors in determining the percentage of pigs raised from the total number farrowed.

The disposition of the sow, her feed and care while pregnant and even before breeding all have much to do with the number of pigs she will raise.

Breeds of Swine, farmers' bulletin 1263, may be had by writing the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Care must always be taken that the pregnant ewes are not chased by dogs or jammed through narrow gates or doors, as any rough treatment will cause a large per cent of loss of lambs.

THE COUNTENANCE

SOME countenances are like sealed packages, impenetrable to the sharpest eye; others resemble an open volume whose every line can be read in a passing glance, provided, of course, that the reader has intuition and can glimpse the soul on the threshold and interpret its signals.

A blush often speaks more eloquently than carefully chosen words; a tear tells the tale of sorrow that tongue fails utterly to name; a pallor communicates in a language of its own, fully read and comprehended at a glance.

Each one of these changes in the countenance speaks directly from the heart, voices the heart's emotions, its faith or doubt, its gladness or grief, its hope or despair.

Look on the sunny countenance of the child and see beaming there the joy it brought only a year or so ago from the heavens; gaze upon the face of the old man, seamed with the passage of years, and behold the far-away look in his eyes trying to ken the unfathomable mystery of the future hidden off there in the dark which he cannot penetrate.

One is bubbling with joyous anticipation, the other is dreading, he knows not what.

The child laughs, dances and sings; the man sighs and groans, eager to leave his tenement of clay, yet afraid to go. Life in one is just beginning; in the other it is merging with the shadows.

All these feelings are legible in the countenance of humans everywhere; all are written in the same language which requires no interpreter to divulge its meaning, save the close observing eye.

To explain these impressions in words would require hours, yet the trained eye can read them in a moment and get from them their true significance without making an error or missing an accent.

A voice may change with inflection and give words a new meaning, but a message once written on the countenance becomes deeper and stronger with the advancing years.

The kindly eye grows kinder, the vile eye more leering and bestial, good and evil qualities recognized in an instant.

The face is a tablet upon which Time writes unerringly of the soul as it journeys through this world in quest of some undefined pleasure which it seems never to find.

Broken Dreams

By GRACE E. HALL

THERE'S a little trunk in the attic, And its key is red with rust, There are cobwebs all around it, And the top is gray with dust; The spiders weave o'er the handles, And swing from the strap of brown, And no one's there who seems to care When the lid was fastened down.

But, oh, there was ne'er a treasure More precious than that inside; A wardrobe of tiny measure For the little boy who died; The dreams of a life are folded In the raiment he did not use, And the mother's tears flow through the years

For the baby she had to lose. She fashioned each dainty garment With love that was strong and deep; In the gown she had sensed the future

Of seeing her darling sleep; Had glimpsed him in every wee thing, And held him against her breast, The soft pink form so sweet and warm,

That lovingly she caressed. But he was a fragile blossom That needed the higher air, One almost fancied a halo Lay soft on his silky hair;

He could not wait for the dresses—God called, and he had to heed, And the trunk shall hold, like bits of gold,

The garments he did not need. (© by Dodd, Mead & Company.)

KEELER, AT 80, GOES TO WORK

After fourteen years of enforced idleness because of ill health, J. H. Keeler, widely-known Maryland citizen, has gained forty pounds at the age of eighty years and gone back to work every day. Mr. Keeler, who resides at 3706 Thirty-Second St., Mt. Ranier, Md., gives entire credit for his extraordinary rehabilitation to Tanlac.

"My stomach was in such terrible condition I could hardly digest a thing," says Mr. Keeler. "It would swell to nearly twice its normal size and I would have frightful pains through my stomach and back. I felt so weak, dizzy and miserable work was out of the question. In fact, my friends gave me up on three or four occasions.

"Five months ago I began taking Tanlac and improved from the very first bottle. I now eat anything on the table, have gained forty pounds, and am back at work every day. Actually, I feel like a boy again. It would be ungrateful of me not to praise Tanlac."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

Tanlac Vegetable Pills are Nature's own remedy for constipation. For sale everywhere.—Advertisement.

Bedbug and Mosquito.

In the matter of birth and breeding the bedbug is distinctly superior to the mosquito, which frequently springs from the most malodorous and disgusting surroundings," says Samuel Hopkins Adams, in Hygeia. Yet the mosquito is just as poisonous and far more dangerous. Socially considered the bedbug is an outcast; some day "when civilization is a little more advanced" possibly the "National Association of Artificial Peanut-Shell Manufacturers" will refuse to accept the invitation of the "guilt-stricken chamber of commerce of Booster City" because "several of our members having occasion to visit your locality in the past year have been bitten by mosquitoes."

CITY PLANNING NOT COSTLY

Mistaken Idea That Leads Many Communities to Forego Undoubted Advantages It Conveys.

We may as well face facts like these: The American city is a destroyer of human beings. It is wasteful. Its ugliness is unspeakable. It is dirty and noisy. Its death rate is higher than that of the country districts.

Twenty years ago a writer of such words might have been reviled for lack of patriotism, for treachery to his home land, writes Harold Cary in Collier's Weekly. But not today—too many Americans know the truth. City governments know it. Forty out of forty-three American cities of more than 150,000 population are now actively engaged in planning fundamental improvements. There is a real revolt in progress against the characteristics of modern cities.

Most people have an idea that city planning is a way of making a town over so as to spend a great deal of the taxpayers' money to produce what some people like—the "city beautiful." It is nothing of the kind. City planning is concerned at bottom with the reduction of the traffic problem; lowering the cost of doing business; making parks, playgrounds, theaters, auditoriums and public buildings easy to use; utilizing water fronts, bridges and transportation facilities to the best advantage. If the town is beautified during the process, why, fine! Of course it follows to a great extent that a new beauty will arise when order is made out of chaos.

TAKING CARE OF TOMORROW

Error Too Often Made Is That Consideration Is Accorded Only for Today's Needs.

The cause of much of the confusion and trouble in this world is the proneness of folks to consider only the needs of the present. Today looms up so much larger than tomorrow that men will only take care of that which is immediately demanded.

The individual who best serves his community and society in general is not he who waits until a real problem is at hand, then tackles it without gloves. It is the one who has foresight and diplomacy enough to prevent the coming of a problem. One of the most grievous wastes of society is allowing an unnecessary evil to creep in. It is needless waste because it takes man-power and time and work to remove that evil.

Well enough, if one goes at the thing with vim and determination. But a much less severe drain upon society would ensue if the problem, the evil, the nuisance did not exist, because each one carries its kind with it and makes other grave eruptions in society.

Social economy is to be striven for. Saving of man-power, mental power, soul-power, and all other possible resources is highly imperative. These are the forces that should be used on the necessary things of life. They are dissipation, extravagance, waste if utilized on society's unnecessary burdens. Vigilance is needed to prevent such waste.—Grit.

John Ruskin.

"I would have our ordinary dwelling houses built to last, and built to be lovely; as rich and full of pleasantness as may be, within and without, with such difference as might do to express each man's character and occupation—and partly his history. When we build, let us think that we build forever. Let it not be for the present life nor for present use alone—let us think, as we lay stone upon stone, that a time is to come when these will be held sacred because our hands have touched them, and men will say as they look upon the labor and substance of them:

"See! This our Fathers did for us."

Show Character of Owners.

On an extended drive through the country it is possible to form an estimate of many property owners by observing their attitude toward shade trees. A man who permits a row of magnificent maples to shade the road on one side and his fertile farming on the other may be safely set down as possessing considerable esthetic sensibility. It may also be surmised that he is respectful of the comfort of others. When we find a row of pitiful stumps where last year we admired the graceful curves and welcomed the gracious umbrage of ancient elms, we may with assurance assume that the axman was one whose interest in life is confined to its practical aspects.—Exchange.

Home and Country Inseparable.

"I know of no matter so intimately connected with the life of our people to which we can give greater devotion and service for fundamental improvement than the upbuilding not only of individual home ownership but in the actual improvement of our homes. Not only is there the primary consideration of advanced material comfort, but the soundness of our social system and stability of our country are greatly enhanced by the development of love for a home and the creation of a home that can be loved.—President Harding.

DELIGHTS IN SIMPLE THINGS; HINTS ON SUMMER FOOTWEAR

THE mode demands simplicity for the costume of the mature woman, and the difference between her clothes and the clothes of the sub-deb daughter is chiefly a matter of the degree of simplicity affected by each. A safe generalization is, the more youthful the wearer the more simple the costume.

This is not only good taste but good sense as well, as nothing blights the real charm of youth so much as "over-ornamentation" in the matter of dress. The charm of the costume illustrated below lies in the fact the designer they have in recent years and never have they had such a wide choice in colors, in leathers and in special designs for specific purposes as they have at the present time.

In the realm of sports, golf is responsible for the smart and practical oxfords pictured above. These are made of tan calfskin and are provided with rubber heels and soft rubber cleats on the soles to give a sure-footed stance under all conditions. Another golfing novelty is the crepe rubber sole lately imported from England. This is a has utilized severely straight lines to attain a graceful and becoming effect. The blouse is of the slipover type with a short kimono sleeve. The cord at the neck and waistline is of the same material as the blouse. It is used at each side to hold the fullness over the hips. The only ornamentation is subtle embroidery in the same color as the material.

The skirt is of sport silk like the blouse. It is made with wide box plaits alternating with two narrow plaits. Following the latest dictates of fashion it is somewhat shorter than the skirts decreed for the more mature very thick sole of a rubber composition something like art gum, and it is claimed that it is both lighter and softer than the usual rubber sole used on sports shoes.

Shoes for street and dress wear have blossomed forth in bewildering range of styles and colors during the spring months. The vogue for brilliant red, blue and green sandals with hat and stockings to match made an early appearance and at present shows no sign of becoming passé. For party wear there are brocaded satin slippers combining silver with white, or gold with black, in attractive new woman, though longer than the fashion of last year.

Smart and Practical Oxfords

The dress as shown is all white, but it would be equally effective in sand, beige, oyster gray or any soft tone. It is considered extremely smart to have stockings in exactly the same color as the costume.

The hat shown is of beautiful leg-horn straw in its natural color, trimmed with a wide band and bow of brown moire ribbon.

If succeeding generations read the "footprints in the sands of time" as marked by the shoes of women of today they will behold a record of surpassing excellence as far as charming and appropriate footwear is concerned. Never in the history of the race have women given so much attention to shoes as a part of their costumes as lasts. Very exclusive shops are showing a slipper of tooled and colored leather that closely follows the coloring and ornamentation of the palsey shawl.

A great deal of attention is being given to shoes combining two different leathers or leather with fabric in contrasting color. The most popular combination is black and white for sports wear. Red and black, gray and black, or sand with brown are interesting developments of the later styles. Even the all-white shoe shows this influence in white kid combined with suede.

"A GIRL!"

SYNOPSIS.—Realizing that she has a possible chance of being saved, as the Lusitania is sinking, a stranger gives a young American girl a package which he asks her to deliver to the American ambassador in England. She is saved. In London, former Lieut. "Tommy" Beresford and Miss Prudence Cowley — "Tuppence" — discharged army nurse, form an organization, "The Young Adventurers, Ltd." They are both broke and consequently ready for unorthodox methods. They write out an advertisement. Tuppence makes a business appointment with a man, Edward Whittington, who offers her easy employment, but on giving her name as "Jane Finn," which she had heard on the street, Whittington disappears. Next day the pair visits an advertisement signed "Jane Finn" the two receive notes from "Mr. Carter" and "Julius P. Hershelmer." Carter, a high government official, speaks of a mysterious "Mr. Brown" as head of the Bolsheviks in England, and engages the pair to find Jane Finn, whom he is seeking for important reasons of state. Next day the pair visits Hershelmer, American millionaire. He is looking for his cousin, Jane Finn, who had disappeared after landing from the Lusitania's boats, and employs them to search for her. They discover a Mrs. Vandemeyer is a Lusitania survivor. Tuppence recognizes Whittington in a caller on Mrs. Vandemeyer. Tommy trails him. Whittington leaves for France. Hershelmer follows him. Tommy trails Boris. Whittington's companion, to a house in Soho. He overhears details of a Bolshevik and labor plot to overturn the government.

CHAPTER IV—Continued.

After listening intently for a minute or two, he put his head round the curtain. The passage was deserted. Tommy bent down and removed his shoes, then, leaving them behind the curtain, he walked gingerly out on his stockinged feet, and kneeling down by the closed door, he laid his ear cautiously to the crack. To his intense annoyance he could distinguish little more; just a chance word here and there if a voice was raised, which merely served to whet his curiosity still further.

He eyed the handle of the door tentatively. Could he turn it by degrees so gently and imperceptibly that those in the room would notice nothing? He decided that with great care it could be done. Very slowly, a fraction of an inch at a time, he moved it round, holding his breath in his excessive care. A little more—a little more—at last—it would never be finished? Ah! at last it would turn no farther.

He stayed so for a minute or two, then drew a deep breath, and pressed it ever so slightly inward. The door did not budge. Tommy was annoyed. If he had to use too much force, it would almost certainly crack. He waited until the voices rose a little, then he tried again. Still nothing happened. He increased the pressure. Had the beastly thing stuck? Finally, in desperation, he pushed with all his might. But the door remained firm, and at last the truth dawned upon him. It was locked or bolted on the inside.

For a moment or two Tommy's indignation got the better of him.

"Well, I'm d—d!" he said. "What a dirty trick!"

As his indignation cooled, he prepared to face the situation. Clearly the first thing to be done was to restore the handle to its original position. If he let it go suddenly, the men inside would be almost certain to notice it, so, with the same infinite pains, he reversed his former tactics. All went well, and with a sigh of relief the young man rose to his feet. There was a certain bulldog tenacity about Tommy that made him slow to admit defeat. Checkmated for the moment, he was far from abandoning the conflict. He still intended to hear what was going on in the locked room. As one plan had failed, he must hunt about for another.

He looked round him. A little farther along the passage on the left was a second door. He slipped silently along to it. He listened for a moment or two, then tried the handle. It yielded, and he slipped inside.

The room, which was unattended, was furnished as a bedroom. Like everything else in the house, the furniture was falling to pieces, and the dirt was, if anything, more abundant.

But what interested Tommy was the thing he had hoped to find, a communicating door between the two rooms, upon the left by the window. Carefully closing the door into the passage behind him, he stepped across to the other and examined it closely. The bolt was shot across it. It was very rusty, and had clearly not been used for some time. By gently wriggling it to and fro, Tommy managed to draw it back without making too much noise. Then he repeated his former maneuvers with the handle—this time with complete success. The door swung open—a crack, a mere fraction, but enough for Tommy to hear what went on. There was a velvet portiere on the inside of this door which prevented him from seeing, but he was able to recognize the voices with a reasonable amount of accuracy. The Sinn Feiner was speaking. His rich Irish voice was unmistakable:

"That's all very well. But more money is essential. No money—no results!"

Another voice, which Tommy rather thought was that of Boris replied:

"Will you guarantee that there are results?"

"In a month from now—sooner or later as you wish—I will guarantee you such a reign of terror in Ireland as shall shake the British empire to its foundations."

There was a pause, and then came the soft, sibilant accents of Number One:

"Good! You shall have the money. Boris, you will see to that."

Boris asked a question:

"Via the Irish Americans, and Mr. Potter, as usual?"

"I guess that'll be all right!" said a new voice, with a transatlantic intonation, "though I'd like to point out, here and now, that things are getting a mite difficult. There's not the sympathy there was, and a growing disposition to let the Irish settle their own affairs without interference from America."

Tommy felt that Boris had shrugged his shoulders as he answered: "Does that matter, since the money only nominally comes from the States?"

"The chief difficulty is the landing of the ammunition," said the Sinn Feiner. "The money is conveyed in easily enough—thanks to our colleague here."

"That is settled, then," said the sibilant tones. "Now, in the matter of the loan to an English newspaper, you have arranged the details satisfactorily, Boris?"

"I think so."

"That is good. An official denial from Moscow will be forthcoming if necessary."

There was a pause, and then the clear voice of the German broke the silence:

"I am directed by—Mr. Brown, to place the summaries of the reports from the different unions before you. That of the miners is most satisfactory. We must hold back the railways. There may be trouble with the A. S. E."

For a long time there was a silence, broken only by the rustle of papers and an occasional word of explanation from the German. Then Tommy heard the light tap-tap of fingers, drumming on the table.

"And—the date, my friend?" said Number One.

"The Russian seemed to consider. 'That is rather soon.'"

"I know. But it was settled by the principal Labor leaders, and we cannot seem to interfere too much. They must believe it to be entirely their own show."

The Russian laughed softly, as though amused.

"Yes, yes," he said. "That is true. They must have no inkling that we are using them for our own ends. They are honest men—and that is their value to us. It is curious—but you cannot make a revolution without honest men. The instinct of the populace is infallible." He paused, and then repeated, as though the phrase pleased him: "Every revolution has had its honest men. They are soon disposed of afterward."

There was a sinister note in his voice.

The German resumed: "Claynes must go. He is too far-seeing. Number Fourteen will see to that."

There was a hoarse murmur.

"That's all right, guv'nor." And then after a moment or two: "Suppose I'm nabbed?"

"You will have the best legal talent to defend you," replied the German quietly. "But in any case you will wear gloves fitted with the fingerprints of a notorious housebreaker. You have little to fear."

"Oh, I ain't afraid, guv'nor. All for the good of the cause. The streets is going to run with blood, so they say." He spoke with a grim relish. "Dreams of it, sometimes, I does. And diamonds and pearls rolling about in the gutter for anyone to pick up!"

Tommy heard a chair shifted. Then Number One spoke: "Then all is arranged. We are assured of success?"

"I—think so." But the German spoke with less than his usual confidence.

Number One's voice held suddenly a dangerous quality:

"What has gone wrong?"

"Nothing; but—"

"But what?"

"The Labor leaders. Without them, as you say, we can do nothing. If they do not declare a general strike on the 29th—"

"Why should they not?"

"As you've said, they're honest. And in spite of everything we've done to discredit the government in their eyes, I'm not sure that they haven't got a sneaking faith and belief in it."

"But—"

"I know. They abuse it unconsciously. But, on the whole, public opinion swings to the side of the government. They will not go against it."

Again the Russian's fingers drummed on the table.

"To the point, my friend. I was given to understand that there was a certain document in existence which assured success."

"That is so. If that document were placed before the leaders, the result would be immediate. They would publish it broadcast throughout England, and declare for the revolution without a moment's hesitation. The government would be broken finally and completely."

"Then what more do you want?"

"The document itself," said the German bluntly.

"Ah! It is not in your possession? But you know where it is?"

"No."

"Does anyone know where it is?"

"One person—perhaps. And we are not sure of that even."

"Who is that person?"

"A girl."

Tommy held his breath.

"A girl?" The Russian's voice rose contemptuously. "And you have not made her speak? In Russia we have ways of making a girl talk."

"This case is different," said the German sullenly.

"How—different?" He paused a moment, then went on: "Where is the girl now?"

"The girl?"

"Yes."

"She is—"

But Tommy heard no more. A

But Tommy Heard No More. A Crashing Blow Descended on His Head and All Was Darkness.

crashing blow descended on his head, and all was darkness.

CHAPTER V

Tuppence Enters Domestic Service.

When Tommy set forth on the trail of the two men, it took all Tuppence's self-command to refrain from accompanying him. However, she contained herself as best she might, consoled by the reflection that her reasoning had been justified by events. The two men had undoubtedly come from the second floor flat, and that slender thread of the name "Rita" had set the Young Adventurers once more upon the track of the abductors of Jane Finn.

The question was what to do next? She retraced her steps to the entrance hall of the mansions. It was now tenanted by a small lift-boy, who was polishing brass fittings, and whistling the latest air with a good deal of vigor and a reasonable amount of accuracy.

He glanced round at Tuppence's entry. There was a certain amount of the gamine element in the girl; at all events, she invariably got on well with small boys.

"Well, William," she remarked cheerfully, in the best approved hospital-early-morning style, "getting a good shine up?"

The boy grinned responsively.

"Albert be it," he corrected.

"Albert be it," said Tuppence. She glanced mysteriously round the hall. The effect was purposely a broad one in case Albert should miss it. She leaned toward the boy and dropped her voice: "I want a word with you, Albert."

Albert ceased operations on the fittings and opened his mouth slightly:

"Look! Do you know what this is?" With a dramatic gesture she flung back the left side of her coat and exposed a small enamel badge. It was extremely unlikely that Albert would have any knowledge of it—indeed, it would have been fatal for Tuppence's plans, since the badge in question was the device of a local corps originated by the archdeacon in the early days of the war. Its presence in Tuppence's coat was due to the fact that she had used it for pinning in some flowers a day or two before. But Tuppence had sharp eyes, and had noted the corner of a three-penny detective novel protruding from Albert's pocket, and the immediate enlargement of his eyes told her that her tactics were good, and that the fish would rise to the bait.

"American detective force!" she blushed.

Albert fell for it.

"Lord!" he murmured ecstatically.

Tuppence nodded at him with the air of one who has established a thorough understanding.

"Know who I'm after?" she inquired genially.

Albert, still round-eyed, demanded breathlessly: "One of the flats?"

Tuppence nodded and jerked a thumb up the stairs.

"No. 20. Calls herself Vandemeyer, Vandemeyer! Ha! ha!"

Albert's hand stole to his pocket.

"A crook?" he queried eagerly.

"A crook! I should say so. Ready Rita, they call her in the States."

"Ready Rita," repeated Albert deliberately. "Oh, ain't it just like the pictures! Annie always said as how she was a bad lot."

"Who's Annie?" inquired Tuppence idly.

"Ouse parlormaid. She's leaving today. Many's the time Annie's said to me: 'Mark my words, Albert, I wouldn't wonder if the police was to come after her one of these days.' Just like that. But she's a stunner to look at, ain't she?"

"She's some peach," allowed Tuppence carelessly. "Finds it useful in her layout, you bet. Has she been wearing any of the emeralds, by the way?"

"Emeralds? Them's the green stones, ain't they?"

Tuppence nodded.

"That's what we're after her for. You know old man Tyndale, the oil king?"

"It seems sort of familiar to me."

"The sparklers belonged to him. Finest collection of emeralds in the world. Worth a million dollars!"

"Lumme!" came ecstatically from Albert. "It sounds more like the pictures every minute."

Tuppence smiled, gratified at the success of her efforts.

"We haven't exactly proved it yet. But we're after her. And—she produced a long-drawn-out wink—"I guess she won't get away with the goods this time."

Albert uttered another ejaculation indicative of delight.

"Mind you, sonny, not a word of this," said Tuppence suddenly. "I guess I oughtn't to have put you wise, but in the States we know a real smart lad when we see one. What's this about the girl you say is leaving?"

"Annie? Regular turn-up, they 'ad.' An idea was dawning in Tuppence's brain. She thought a minute or two, then tapped Albert on the shoulder.

"See here, son, my brain's got busy. How would it be if you mentioned that you'd got a young cousin, or a friend of yours had, that might suit the place. You get me?"

"I'm there," said Albert instantly. "You leave it to me, miss, and I'll fix the whole thing up in two ticks."

"Some lad!" commented Tuppence, with a nod of approval. "You let me know, and if it's O. K. I'll be round tomorrow at eleven o'clock."

"Where am I to let you know to?"

"Ritz," replied Tuppence laconically. "Name of Cowley."

Albert eyed her enviously.

"It must be a good job, this tee business."

"It sure is," drawled Tuppence, "especially when old man Tyndale backs the bill. But don't fret, son. If this goes well, you shall come in on the ground floor."

With which promise she took leave of her new ally, and walked briskly away from South Audley mansions, well pleased with her morning's work.

She went straight back to the Ritz and wrote a few brief words to Mr. Carter. Having dispatched this, and Tommy not having yet returned—which did not surprise her—she started off on a shopping expedition. Starting with a cheap clothing store, and passing through one or two second-hand establishments, she had finished the day at a well-known hairdresser's.

Now, in the seclusion of her bedroom, she unwrapped that final purchase. Five minutes later she smiled contentedly at her reflection in the glass. With an actress' pencil she had slightly altered the line of her eyebrows, and that, taken in conjunction with the new luxuriant growth of fair hair above, so changed her appearance that she felt confident that even if she came face to face with Whittington he would not recognize her. From hospital experience she knew only too well that a nurse out of uniform is frequently unrecognized by her patients.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

OLD FAT HIPPO

"I am a fat old creature and I don't mind," said the Hippopotamus in the zoo.

A sparrow had had a bath in the Hippo's pool and now was sitting on a bar of the hippo's indoor zoo room.

"I'm interesting for I belong to an old, old family. They can't think back to a time when there weren't some of our family about."

"At least none of them can I know, and I've heard them even say that their grandmothers and great-grandmothers can't remember the time when there weren't some of us to be seen somewhere—either in Africa or in a zoo."

"For the members of our family lived a very, very long time ago. Our name of Hippopotamus comes from two words—two Greek words, I'm told. I don't speak Greek myself. Never did and never shall. At least, I don't ever expect to learn the language."

"Fancy seeing Old Fat Hippo with a Greek dictionary before him! In the first place I'm too lazy to study it. In the second place, it would all be so foolish."

"Hippopotamus talk is the same everywhere. We don't change our speech from African to American for example. In that way animals are far more sensible than people, I think. In

"Ouse parlormaid. She's leaving today. Many's the time Annie's said to me: 'Mark my words, Albert, I wouldn't wonder if the police was to come after her one of these days.' Just like that. But she's a stunner to look at, ain't she?"

"She's some peach," allowed Tuppence carelessly. "Finds it useful in her layout, you bet. Has she been wearing any of the emeralds, by the way?"

"Emeralds? Them's the green stones, ain't they?"

Tuppence nodded.

"That's what we're after her for. You know old man Tyndale, the oil king?"

"It seems sort of familiar to me."

"The sparklers belonged to him. Finest collection of emeralds in the world. Worth a million dollars!"

"Lumme!" came ecstatically from Albert. "It sounds more like the pictures every minute."

Tuppence smiled, gratified at the success of her efforts.

"We haven't exactly proved it yet. But we're after her. And—she produced a long-drawn-out wink—"I guess she won't get away with the goods this time."

Albert uttered another ejaculation indicative of delight.

"Mind you, sonny, not a word of this," said Tuppence suddenly. "I guess I oughtn't to have put you wise, but in the States we know a real smart lad when we see one. What's this about the girl you say is leaving?"

"Annie? Regular turn-up, they 'ad.' An idea was dawning in Tuppence's brain. She thought a minute or two, then tapped Albert on the shoulder.

"See here, son, my brain's got busy. How would it be if you mentioned that you'd got a young cousin, or a friend of yours had, that might suit the place. You get me?"

"I'm there," said Albert instantly. "You leave it to me, miss, and I'll fix the whole thing up in two ticks."

"Some lad!" commented Tuppence, with a nod of approval. "You let me know, and if it's O. K. I'll be round tomorrow at eleven o'clock."

"Where am I to let you know to?"

"Ritz," replied Tuppence laconically. "Name of Cowley."

Albert eyed her enviously.

"It must be a good job, this tee business."

"It sure is," drawled Tuppence, "especially when old man Tyndale backs the bill. But don't fret, son. If this goes well, you shall come in on the ground floor."

With which promise she took leave of her new ally, and walked briskly away from South Audley mansions, well pleased with her morning's work.

She went straight back to the Ritz and wrote a few brief words to Mr. Carter. Having dispatched this, and Tommy not having yet returned—which did not surprise her—she started off on a shopping expedition. Starting with a cheap clothing store, and passing through one or two second-hand establishments, she had finished the day at a well-known hairdresser's.

WHY TAKE LAXATIVES?

Discovery by Science Has Replaced Them.

Pills and salts give temporary relief from constipation only at the expense of permanent injury, says an eminent medical authority.

Science has found a newer, better way—a means as simple as Nature itself.

It perfect health a natural lubricant keeps the food waste soft and moving. But when constipation exists this natural lubricant is not sufficient. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication.
