Europe Thrilled By Wilkins' Flight Across North Pole

TRIP MAY BE EXTENDED TO PARIS, FRANCE

Ice Locked Coast Is Deciding Factor In Plans

NARROW ESCAPE

Noted Explorers High In Praise For Americans

NEW YORK, April 22. (AP)—The New York Times in a copyrighted article tomorrow will carry a dispatch of 2200 words received from Captain George H. Wilkins, Arctic flyer, describing his flight across the North Pole.

Great Peril

The dispatch will say that the flight ended under conditions of the greatest peril, and contains a promise of further details as quickly as wireless facilities permit.

The take-off from Point Barrow, the article will say, was made the help of a large band of volunteer snow shovelers from among the Eskimos, thrice failed before the heavily loaded plane could be raised into the air, the metal skiis with which it was equipped breaking each time.

Finally on Sunday, April 15, a start was made in good weather with excellent visibility for 500 miles, which then changed to cloud banks of even grayness. No sign of an island was seen where Peary, Stefansson and MacMillan had thought there might be land, but it was too dangerous to descend and take soundings.

Greenland Sighted

Nine hundred miles out from Spitzbergen stormy winds were encountered but they were in the pilots' favor. A single mountain peak was sighted in Greenland in the far distance and Wilkins descended to a lower altitude.

COPENHAGEN, April 22. (UP) Captain George H. Wilkins and Carl B. Eielson, after flying across the top of the world from Point Barrow, Alaska, to Spitzbergen, may continue on to Paris in their airplane, dispatches from Green Harbor said today.

FROM RASMUSSEN

LONDON, April 22. (AP)—As a result of the Wilkins flight the North Pole no longer is a mystery in the opinion of Knud a Rasmussen, Danish explorer, says a special dispatch to the Daily Mail from Copenhagen. He is quoted as saying that the feat was all the greater because the Americans chose a route contrary to that recommended by experts.

The main question as to the resumption of the flight, it was said was whether the plane would be able to get into the air until early next month when the coast usually is free of ice.

Flight Honored.

Green Harbor's population of 400, augmented by that of the nearby Norwegian coal mining colony at Long Year City, flew flags today in honor of the flight.

Reports said today that radio operator Ihlen, at Green Harbor, greeted the flyers as the sole official representative. Their airplane is reported to be in good order. It is said that if they continue to Paris they will halt at Oslo and Copenhagen.

Tremendous enthusiasm has been aroused throughout Scandinavia by the polar flight. Fridjof Nansen, at Oslo, one of the most famous explorers, said today:

"It was a flight that required real heroism."

Roald Amundsen said:

"It was a splendid exploit—not only a sporting feat but a flight with a plane. General information Wilkins and Eielson obtained will be of great interest to geographical science, even though there could have been no exact observations. I believe the flight to have been the most remarkable in aviation history. Unlike transatlantic flyers, Wilkins and Eielson could not count on assistance of any kind. They are heroes."

Narrow Escape.

The narrowness of the escape of the flyers from death was obvious. Dead Man's Island, 25 miles north of Green Harbor, where they landed after the 20½ hour flight, is uninhabited. There was an excellent chance that they might have starved to death instead of remaining on the island only five days before they continued on to Green Harbor and comparative comfort.

Eielson today cabled his father in the United States:

"Am all right. Soon returning to United States."

Five Bandits Take $8000 From Market

ST. LOUIS, April 22. (AP) — Five armed and unmasked men held up the Reimy Arcade in University City a suburb, early today, and escaped with between $8,000 and $10,000.

The money, representing Saturday's receipts, was taken from Cashier Herbert Burkhardt, in the presence of about 150 customers and 40 clerks.

DETEST JAZZ

Lepers Hate Modern Mode of "Music," Is Claim

CHICAGO, April 22. (US)—Jazz music is not alone distasteful to the great musicians, but to the lepers of Culion Island as well.

This was the statement here today of Mrs. Dorothy Paul Wade, wife of the famous leperologist of the island, where there are 6000 unfortunates.

"They detest jazz, and they love classical music," she said. "They are rabid movie fans, but do not like the sentimental pictures. All they care for is Chaplin and others along that order."

SPEED HONORS BROUGHT BACK

American Driver Makes 213.9 M. P. H.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., April 22. (AP)—Ray Keech, driving a monster speed car built for J. M. White, Philadelphia sportsman, today set a new world's record for automobiles when he averaged 207.55260 miles per hour in two runs over the official beach course.

Sending the 36-cylindered triplex special against the wind in the official test at an average of 201.56774 miles per hour, he covered the first mile in 17.86 seconds. Coming back down the beach with the wind at his back, Keech flashed over the mile in 16.83 seconds, making 213.90374 miles per hour.

His average for the runs was 17.345 seconds.

After bringing his car to a stop, Keech alighted amid the roar of the crowds.

"Boy howdy," he said as he got out of the machine with a big grin on his face, "I've never done so much running in all my life."

Spectators rushed to the American pilot who brought the record back to the United States and hoisted him to their shoulders to bear him to the grandstand in triumph.

"I'm mighty glad to bring the record back to this country," Keech said, while White jubilantly seconded his driver's words.

Keech's average speed was less than a mile better than that of the former titleholder, Captain Malcolm Campbell, British driver who in February sent his Napier special over the sands of the beach here to average 206.956 miles per hour.

HOOVER'S FATE IN HANDS OF OHIO VOTERS

Buckeye State Pivot In Elections Of Tuesday

AL DEMO CHOICE

Smith Conceded Donkey Party Nomination In Mid-West

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, April 22. (UP)—Ohio voters, with their presidential primary Tuesday, hold the fate of Secretary of Commerce Hoover's candidacy in their hands to a considerable degree.

To a lesser degree the Tuesday primary in Massachusetts will be significant although President Coolidge has someyhat cleared the situation with his letter to the state Republican chairman requesting that the campaign to write his name in the preference ballot be dropped. Hoover is expected to get a majority of that delegation.

Pennsylvania holds its presidential primary on the same day but the Republican leaders are certain of a slate which will be largely submissive to the direction of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon. He has not indicated his intentions although some of his friends have said there is much Hoover sentiment in the state. Most observers feel that Mellon will wait and if Hoover seems likely to be nominated, throw Pennsylvania to him, and if not, then support the most promising alternate.

Smith Conceded

Democrats hold their primaries in the same states Tuesday, but as it is generally conceded that Al Smith will be nominated, their contests have become more perfunctory. In Ohio a delegation pledged to former Senator Pomerence will be chosen but with the understanding that it will go to Smith if needed. Massachusetts is expected to go solidly pro-Smith. In Pennsylvania anti-Smith drys led by Vance McCormick, Harrisburg publisher, are putting up a fight which will cut into the Smith strength materially. Smith's managers expect 60 out of the 76 delegates.

As most unentangled politicians view the Republican situation, Hoover has reached a fork in the roads, one leading toward the nomination over a fairly smooth route, and the other a rought descent.

The campaign against Hoover in Ohio has, according to dispatches from the scene of carnage, been one of the most bloody presidential politics has seen in many days. Every weakness of Hoover, real and alleged, has been emphasized. Hoover on the other hand has had no single opponent to shoot at since Senator Willis died.

Indiana Primaries

Just around the corner are the Indiana primaries, May 8, but it is so generally expected that Senator Watson, the favorite son, will carry the state that this will have been discounted in advance if it happens.

One reason that Ohio is so important to Hoover is that much of his delegate strength is uninstructed. He has 105 delegates instructed and 84 uninstructed. Many of these uninstructed delegates are apt to desert if a more promising band wagon comes along. Lowden has 126 instructed delegates and only 45 uninstructed, indicating that his block of delegates thus far chosen are more solidly tied to him. It is necessary for the Hoover campaign to keep up its morale to avoid the danger of shrinkage in delegates.

Underlying the actual delegate situation is the attitude of party leaders like Hilles in New York, who have tremendous power in convention negotiations. They want first of all a candidate who can win. Al Smith makes that a paramount consideration. It practically eliminates unknowns and untried candidates. A striking demonstration of vote-getting power in Ohio would make Hoover a hard man for even his most bitter enemies to ignore in the convention. A weak showing would give them a powerful weapon.

Council To Confer With Austin Manager Today

Adam R. Johnson, Son of Noted Confederate Chief, May Receive Wichita Falls Offer

Adam R. Johnson of Austin, who has made a notable record as city manager of the capital city during the last three years, will confer with the city council of Wichita Falls Monday on problems in connection with the institution of the manager government here, it was learned Sunday.

While dispatches to the Record News quoted Mr. Johnson as saying that he had not been offered the post here, and was not an applicant, it is known that a number of city commissioners feel that he should receive careful consideration because of the record Mr. Johnson has made at Austin. Geo. Fairtrace, city manager of Highland Park, suburb of Dallas, is also known to be receiving careful attention from councilmen, and will also appear before commissioners today.

Mr. Johnson was quoted in news Dispatches from Austin as saying his trip here was merely for the purpose of a conference, with the possibility that his experience in Austin may aid city officials in their work here.

JOHNSON FAMILY NOTED IN CENTRAL TEXAS.

AUSTIN, Tex., April 22—If Wichita Falls should secure Adam R. Johnson as its first city manager it will bring to its service a man who has not only made an outstanding record as a municipal executive, but one who comes from one of the most picturesque and noted families of Texas and the South.

Mr. Johnson left here today for Wichita Falls for a conference with city officials, but will spend only a short time in the northwest Texas town, it is understood.

Founded Marble Falls

Adam R. Johnson is the son of General Adam R. Johnson, famous Confederate leader and noted figure in the upbuilding of central Texas in the days after the close of the conflict between the states. General Johnson, his eyesight destroyed in one of the battles of the Civil war, came to Texas blind and almost penniless in the days when this state still constituted the raw frontier, and bands of savage Indians roamed over most of Central Texas. After being guided over a good part of this section of the state, General Johnson selected a picturesque site for a home on the banks of the Colorado river, near a natural falls, and founded the town of Marble Falls. Trials of this former Confederate leader in his fight to build a town and a competence for himself and family make up one of the most thrilling pages of Texas history.

One incident, still recounted by old settlers of Marble Falls, serves as an illustration of the courage of the early settlers in the section when bands of Indians had murdered a half dozen families.

Blind Man's Bluff

Gen. Johnson, blind and dependent upon others for guidance knew his life and that of his family depended upon his keeping the Indians in ignorance of his loss of sight. He therefore made the practice of always carrying his rifle, a superb bluff that probably saved his life many times. His acute sense of hearing enable him to always face any person who attempted to approach him, with the result that instead of becoming known to the Indians as sightless, none of the savages ever dared attack the man who always faced them with a ready rifle.

In the years that followed the settlement of Central, Texas, Gen. Johnson became one of the early advocates of the development of water power in this section, and of cotton mills. Just a short time prior to his death several years ago, he was present at the opening of work on the Marble Falls textile mill, site of which was located on the natural falls he had selected for a townsite a half century ago.

In Spanish War

Mr. Johnson, present city manager of Austin, engaged in the mercantile business several years before coming to Austin. He, like his father, served in the army, the younger Johnson giving his services in the war between the United States and Spain. He later became a member of the state board of control, where he received much experience in the purchase of materials which was later to aid him in his work as city manager here. Several years ago Mr. Johnson purchased the Congress avenue mercantile business of T. H. Williams, and opened one of the leading department stores here. He later sold his business back to Mr. Williams at a figure which is said to have

STORM VICTIMS GIVEN RELIEF

Tenant Farmers Left In Destitute Condition

TEXARKANA, Ark., April 22. (AP) Under clearing skies, Red Cross workers went about relief work in the tornado stricken areas of northeast Texas and southwest Arkansas Sunday, penetrating into the more remote sections to care for the injured.

With exceptions of three or four, all of the 24 persons seriously injured were on the road to recovery today and physicians reported that all of the victims would survive.

Three Mile Path

Plantation owners and towns from Atlanta, Texas, 14 miles northeast, were checking damage Sunday caused by the tornado which swept a 3-mile path through this area between 2 a. m. and 4 a. m., Saturday. Estimates placed on the damage ranged around $125,000 with a section in Bowie county about 8 miles northeast of Texarkana, the hardest hit. In this area alone, more than 100 farm and tenant houses were demolished.

The Texarkana Red Cross chapter is handling all relief work. Three truck loads of clothing and bedding were distributed in the worst affected section Sunday. Fifty tents, 200 blankets and food supplies will be distributed. An urgent appeal for clothing and bedding has been made.

Many Destitute

Doctors working with the Red Cross dressed minor injuries of numerous persons Sunday, but none was found to be seriously injured. Mrs. W. L. Johnson, of Ogden, Ark., the most severely injured, will recover, physicians said. She sustained a crushed chest when a large tree crashed through the roof of her home after being severed by the terrific gale.

Most of the injured are negro farm tenants. Most of them are destitute since their entire belongings were swept away when their homes were destroyed.

OIL PROBERS UNDAUNTED BY JURY VERDICT

Investigations To Go Steadily Ahead In Senate

WILL QUIZ STEWART

Standard Oil Official To Be Asked About Profits

WASHINGTON, April 22. (AP)—The senate will go steadily forward this week with its investigation of the "Oil Scandals" despite the speedy acquital of Harry F. Sinclair in the Teapot Dome trial.

A new chapter in the oil investigations is expected to be started tomorrow when the committee on audit and control will report favorably on Senator Norris' resolution authorizing a sweeping inquiry into the leasing of the Salt creek oil field, adjacent to teapot dome in Wyoming.

Stewart Quizzed.

Meanwhile the senate public lands committee will meet Tuesday to ask Col. Robert W. Stewart, chairman of the Standard Oil Co., of Indiana, what he knows about the $3,080,000 profits of the Continental Trading Company.

The Norris resoluton proposing the Salt creek inquiry is expected to pass the senate without serious opposition, thus paving the way for another intensive oil probe which may last all summer while congress is out of session.

Because of its "political" significance, the Salt creek investigation is expected to win the united support of old guard republicans who have been considerably nettled with the manner in which that party has been besmirched by developments in the oil situation to date.

The Salt creek leases, they point out, were made during the Wilson administration while the democrats were in full sway and to some extent at least formed a precedent for Secretary of Interior Fall's subsequent leasing of Teapot Dome to Sinclair.

Demos Involved.

Proof of fraud in the salt creek leases, they feel, would prevent the democrats from making use of the "oil scandals" issue in the coming presidential campaign and help to shift some of the onus from the republican party.

The expected appearance of Col. Stewart, against whom contempt proceedings are now pending because of his previous refusal to testify, has awakened considerable interest because of rumors that he may "tell all he knows" about the transactions of the mysterious Continental Trading Company. A bank deposit slip found recently in a Chicago bank disclosed that Col. Stewart had deposited coupons of liberty bonds of the same issue as the Continental bonds. The committee is anxious to know if these bonds formed part of the profits of the trading company.

BREMEN RELIEF NEARS GOAL

Ford Plane Lands at Seven Islands

MURRAY BAY, Que., April 22. (UP)—Bernt Balchen's giant Ford relief airplane landed at Seven Islands today on her way to take supplies to the transatlantic monoplane Bremen, and was expected to complete her flight to Greenly Island Monday.

The Ford plane took off from St. Lake Agnes just after 6 a. m. today and apparently made the flight to Seven Islands, 425 miles from its goal, without incident.

Latest reports indicate that, given the best possible conditions, the Ford plane and the Bremen may leave Greenly Island Tuesday, arrive Tuesday at Lake St. Agnes, near Murray Bay, and take off Wednesday for a triumphal flight to Mitchel Field, N. Y.

The take-off for Greenly Island is scheduled for 5 a. m. Monday. By starting so early, the flyers probably can reach the Bremen by 11 a. m. or shortly thereafter.

In the Ford relief plane with Balchen were Maj. James Fitzmaurice, Irish companion of Hermann Kiehl and Baron Gunther Von Huenefeld in their flight from Dublin: "Ernie" Koeppen, Junkers Airplane company mechanic, and a newspaper reporter, Charles Murphy, of the New York World, who also was said to be an official representative of the City of New York to greet the transatlantic flyers.

"Give me just a little time with the Bremen and I'll have her ready to fly to New York," Koeppen said as he climbed into the Ford today.

Fraulein Junkers, daughter of the Bremen's designer, was at Lake St. Agnes when the plane took off. She, with almost unfeminine renunciation of a share in the more spectacular angle of the Bremen epic, has remained in the background here, taking entire charge of the organization of the relief expedition but keeping out of the spotlight.

YOUNG WOMAN AND HER PAL HELD IN JAIL

Youthful Spouse of Justice Of Peace Confesses Her Part

JILTS HER HUSBAND

Girl Leaves in Gift Car Quickly After Marriage

SALEM, Ill., April 22. (UP)—The 18-year-old wife of a justice of the peace and a salesman for an insurance company have confessed they participated in the $3,200 daylight robbery of the Vernon, Ill., Farmers' and Merchants' bank, Sheriff Harvey D. May of Marion county, announced today.

With the arrest of Mrs. Bernice Hitchings, wife of Thomas J. Hitchings, justice of the peace of Belleville, Ill., and Newman A. Cox, salesman of the Western and Southern Insurance company, Sheriff May said, more than $1000 of the bank loot has been recovered. Both are in jail here.

Leaves Husband

Three days after Mrs. Hitchings was married in June last year, she left her husband and went to Detroit, Mich., in an automobile which he gave her as a wedding present. She was brought back to Illinois on a warrant charging removal of a mortgaged automobile. It was stolen from her in Detroit, she said.

Through the confessions of Mrs. Hitchings and Cox, May said a woman cousin of the girl and another man were implicated in the Vernon robbery which was committed on April 5 of this year. Search is in progress for the two accomplices, whereabouts of whom is unknown.

Although Mrs. Hitchings had been living with her husband in recent weeks he has made no effort to communicate with her since her arrest, May said. "He has thrown her over," the sheriff said. Before marriage she was his stenographer.

At the time of the robbery, Mrs. Hitchings said, she and her cousin sat in the rumble seat of the car Hitchings had given her as a wedding present, keeping watch while Cox and the unidentified companion—believed the brains of the robbery—held up the bank.

A New Yorker On Wichita Papers—.

Wichita Falls, Texas,
April 21st,

Editor, The Wichita Falls Record News:

I am a visitor in your city for a few weeks and read both of the city papers each day. Let me say that in all my travels throughout the United States I have never found a city of this size with newspapers which I consider as good as the two which this city has.

I especially enjoy your "Pot Shots at Politics" by Hugh Nugent Fitzgerald. He has a very keen insight into the operations of the political machine. I congratulate you upon the publication of his works.

I also notice that you have added, to your editorial page in the last few days a daily poem by a staff writer. These verses are interesting and the one who writes them is undoubtedly talented.

Again, I extend my congratulations and best wishes to your paper and the Daily Times. They are both of the first degree in newspaper work.

Very truly yours,
A. B. OSTERMANN,
New York City.

Woman Drains Bottle of Poison After Hearing Police Want Her

Asking permission to go upstair from city officers who had just read a warrant for her arrest, a Wichita Falls woman slipped out of sight of the officers and drained an ounce bottle of iodine in an attempted suicide about 9 o'clock Sunday night.

The woman was rushed to the Hargrave-Walker hospital where physicians and attendants refused to divulge any information as to her condition. "We don't know how she is," attaches of the hospital replied to all questions.

The warrant charged disturbing the peace and the use of abusive language over a telephone. The woman is said to have called up the mother of a girl formerly working in her home, with whom the woman had quarreled.

When W. P. Belcher and Ellis Summers, city police officers, had read the warrant to the woman she said:

"All right, I'll go with you, but let me go upstairs and get my shoes."

When the woman did not return officers investigated and found her gasping with an empty bottle, which had contained iodine, in her hands.

CATS INJURED AS SPUDS WIN

Young, Bischoff Escape Serious Hurts

By LARRY DAILEY
Record News Sports Editor

A winning ball club will make its "breaks." The Spudders won a game here yesterday thanks to the smile of fortune. But they won because they were able to take advantage of their luck, and because they prevented the enemy from capitalizing on the "breaks."

Joe Kiefer and Marty Griffin engaged in a superb pitchers' battle. Despite intense cold the right-handers turned in one of the best chucked performances that has been seen at the orchard here since lots of water has flowed under the bridge. The Spudders won, 1 to 0, by turning a break in their favor, in the first of the series with the Panthers.

The tally was scored in the fourth inning through a combination of several "breaks." Lamb, first up, was given a life on Young's boot. Jenkins forced Lamb at second. Young to Harrington. Swenson walked. Holland dropped Stanton's liner and although he threw out Swenson at second Jenkins ambled to third. Cobb lifted an infield fly.

Cats Hurt as Spuds Win.

Young and Bishoff went charging after the ball and collided. The ball dropped safely and Jenkins scored with the run that was to win. Cobb was credited with a two-base hit.

That hit of Joe's not only cost the Cats the ball game, but deprived them of the services of Young for a few days and possibly Bischoff for a day or two. Young was carried off the field and rushed to the Clinic hospital. An X-ray revealed that the shortstop suffered no broken bones, we are pleased to write, but he sustained a badly bruised jaw and knee. Bischoff was shaken up but also damaged only temporarily.

There was little to choose in the hurling of Kiefer and Griffin. Only two hits were made off Marty to four off Joe Griffin, however he issued five bases on balls while Kiefer did not pass a batsman.

Fitzgerald's double in the eighth was the only real solid smash made off Griffin, while two infield knocks by the foe were scratches.

Panthers Are Tamed.

Kiefer turned back the Cats in order for five innings. Harrington made the first hit in the sixth, a single to left but was promptly retired on a double play started by Turgeon and completed by Benton and Stanton. Eddie Moore reached first on Fitzgerald's error in the seventh and stole second but he languished at the midway station while his next three comrades were unable to hit the ball out of the infield.

The Cats threatened in the eighth. Holland led off with a two-base drive to left. Stanton came in fast for Bonowitz' bunt and threw out the greatly surprised Holland at third. It was a brilliant play by young George, executed with daring, which fast mental and physical work made possible. This play so riled Skipper Jake Atz of the Cats that he was banished from the field by Umps Barr for protesting the decision.

Cats Halted in Ninth.

The Cow Town athletes again got men on base in the ninth, to no avail. Moore was safe on an infield hit with one out. Gottleber flied to Jenkins. LaFayette bounced a harsh grounder off Kiefer's glove and Turgeon threw wild to first. Moore raced home but as he was entitled to only two bases was sent back to third, to the accompaniment of more protests by the Cats. Turgeon tossed out Richardson to send 2000 loyal, shiff shivering fans and fanettes home happy. There was a delegation of Fort Worth fans,—who shivered. But they probably did not go home so happy.

Our champions had men on bases in various innings but Griffin bore down when endangered and with the exception of the first and fourth innings not a Spudder reached third base.

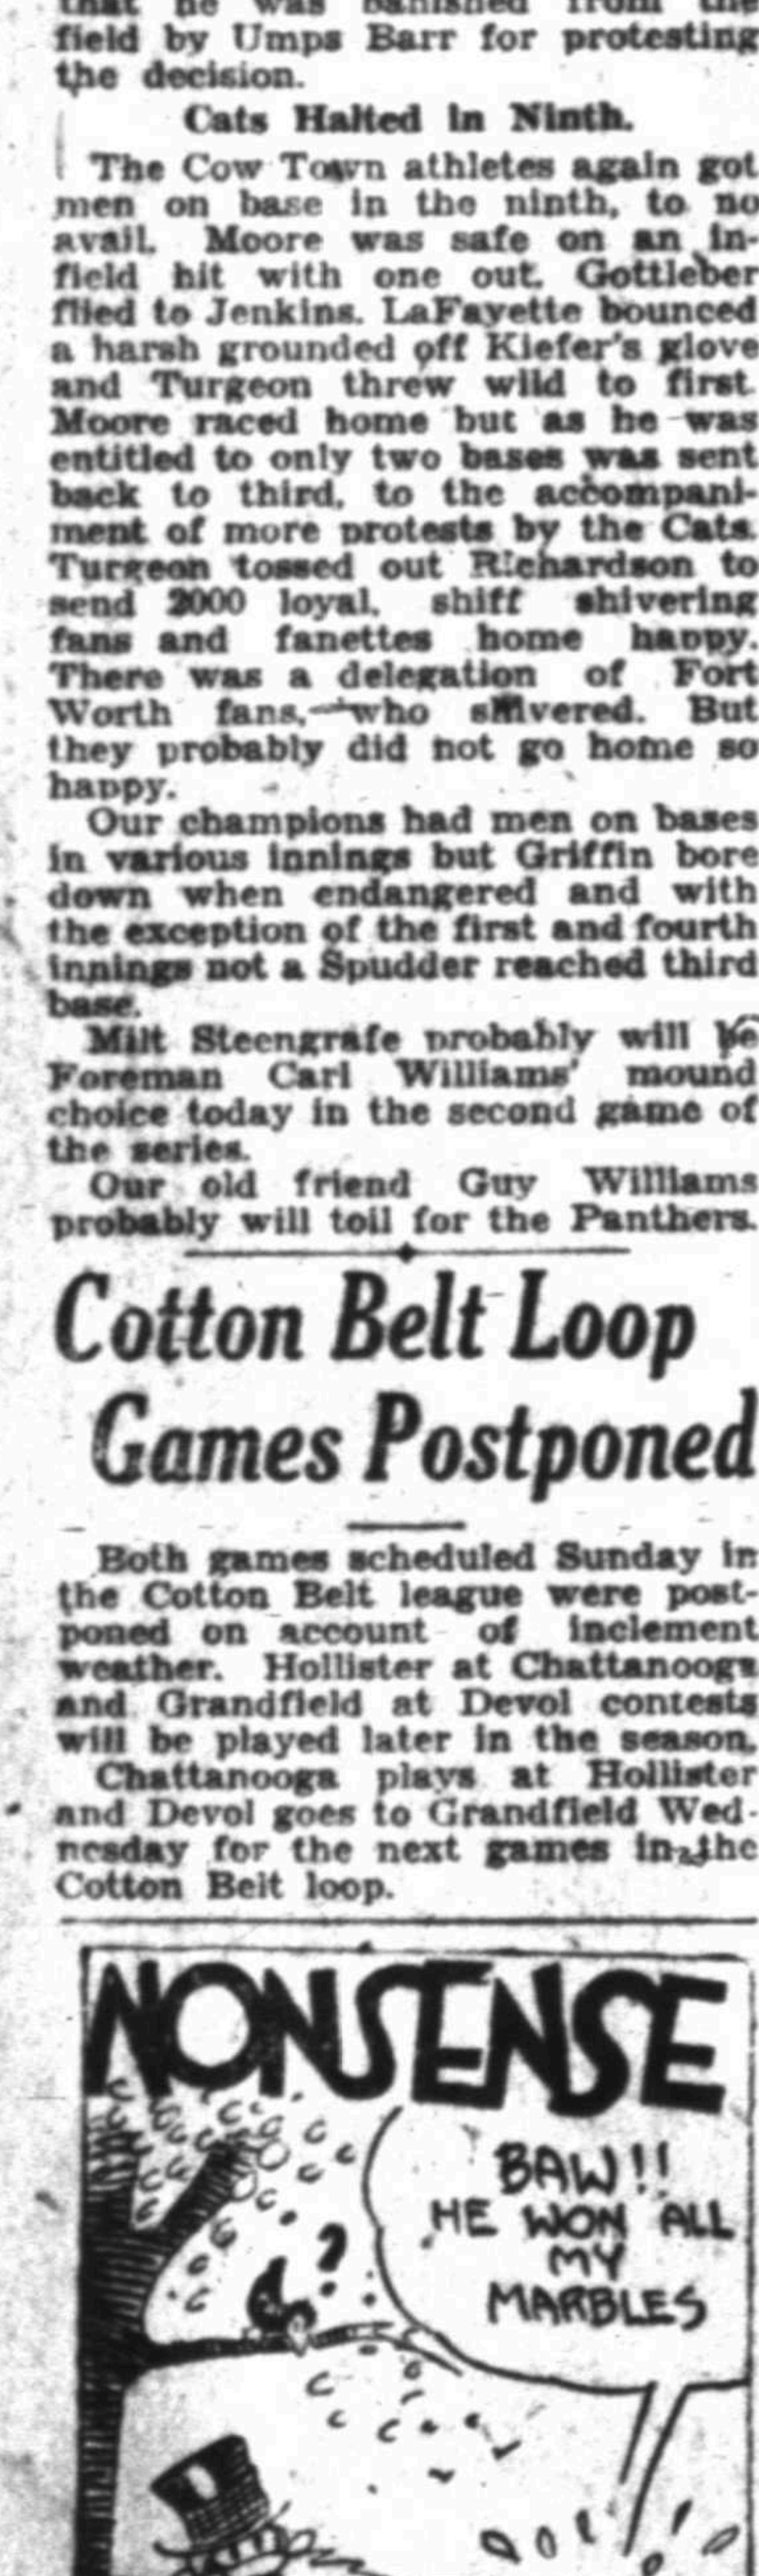

Milt Steengrafe probably will be Foreman Carl Williams' mound choice today in the second game of the series.

Our old friend Guy Williams probably will toil for the Panthers.

Cotton Belt Loop Games Postponed

Both games scheduled Sunday in the Cotton Belt league were postponed on account of inclement weather. Hollister at Chattanooga and Grandfield at Devol contests will be played later in the season.

Chattanooga plays at Hollister and Devol goes to Grandfield Wednesday for the next games in the Cotton Belt loop.

Grows Better

Although still on the sunny side of 30, Howard Fitzgerald is a veteran ball player. But he grows better with years, does this Spudder, and he is considered one of the leading all-around outfielders in the Texas league.

CUBS RALLY TO BEAT BEARS

WACO, Texas, April 22. (AP)—The Cubs looked like the Waco team of 1927 today when they entered the fifth inning lagging behind 7 to 2, and proceeded to stage a six-run rally, which gave the Cubs a lead they kept the balance of the way, winning the game 12 to 9.

Grimes of the visitors hit two homers, driving in six runs, while Wolgamot of Waco drove in five runs.

Caldwell was chased in the third, but Pollan pitched fair ball thereafter, while Messenger, who relieved Robertson, was hit hard by the Cubs. A wind favored the hitters and there were six home runs, Shires' homer in the third being one of the longest seen at Katy park in years. Score:

Moore to Battle Today at Boston

Dempse Competes in Final Olympic Trials

Dempse Moore today engages in the battl eof his career. Or, at least, the Wichita Falls collegian starts the battles of his career. Dempse is to compete this afternoon at Boston in the first match of the finals of boxing, as a representative of the western division of the A. A. U. to determine the makeup of the United States Olympic team.

Moore won the western light heavy title last month at St. Louis, thus earning the right to compete in the finals today and tomorrow at Boston.

He joined the western team at St. Louis a few days ago and arrived at Boston late last night. Several days training in the Mound City has placed the local lad in the proverbial "pink of condition" and he is expected to be a foremost contender.

If he wins at Boston Moore will be a member of the United States team in the Olympic games this summer at Amsterdam.

Crack U. S. Pros Seek British Golf

Hagen, Barnes and Armour Quest For Title

NEW YORK, April 22. (AP)—The British open golf championship trophy, which has been won by a player from the United States in six of the last seven years, is in danger of again crossing the Atlantic ocean from east to west. The trophy at the moment is in the club house of the Royal and Ancient Golf club at St. Andrews where Bobby Jones left it last year when he won it for the second time in two years.

In the six American victories two native-born Americans and two adopted sons have won for the United States. Jones and Walter Hagen won it twice for the glory of the home breds while Jim Barnes and Jock Hutchinson, British born, were the others.

Bobby Jones will not seek to make it three in a row but some of his hard hitting professional friends will try their best to take up where he left off.

Hagen would like to be "the champion," as the British call the winner of their open, again. "The Haig," is on his way to shoot for the little money but much advertising for the sixth time.

Barnes Dangerous

Barnes, who won in 1925, is about to enter his seventh British open competition. "Long Jim" is not the menace he was but is capable of playing inspired golf. The question is whether he can connect enough of his sensational rounds to make them effective.

Tommy Armour, who did his last playing on an ambitious scale in Great Britain as an amateur, returns to the classic with the prestige won in the United States open. The champion will play in the blue ribbon British event for the first time.

WHITE SOX WHALE TIGERS

CONFERENCE ON CITY MANAGER

Austin Official to Meet Council

set a high record in mercantile transactions, when Mr. Williams desired to return to his old business.

Pulled City Out of Debt

Shortly after the sale of his store, Mr. Johnson was named city manager of Austin. At that time Austin city manager forces had just ended a long fight to oust the commission form of government. On taking office Mr. Johnson found the city thousands of dollars in debt, and that four-fifths of the funds for the operation of the city for the last six months of the year had been expended in the first six months. Despite this handicap, Austin closed the year with balances in most funds.

Since that time the tax rate here has been cut, the water, light and power rates cut, and the city has collected several thousand dollars a year in interest from banks on the cash balances which the city of Austin has been able to maintain. Austin during the last two years has also enjoyed its greatest building era, with many street and municipal office buildings, business buildings, hotels and similar enterprises.

Even though the population of this growing Hall county town is still at a modest figure this mayor business has its trials for just when the city's dad is about to meet with an important committee, someone wants a sack of sugar or five gallons of gas and the meeting is off.

FORT WORTH, Texas, April 22. (AP)—Howard county, with deep lime producers of large calibre already outlining another West Texas over production area, will be the next to receive attention of the Texas railroad commission in the exercise of its oil conservation powers.

This was indicated at the meeting in Fort Worth Saturday at which operators and members of the railroad commission organized the machinery for dealing with the Winkler over production.

Railroad Commissioner C. V. Terrell, who presided at the meeting here, announced that a meeting of Howard county producers with the railroad commission would be held in Fort Worth April 28 for the purpose of considering pro-rating regulations for Howard county.

This committee has been empowered to employ an umpire and such other assistance as it sees fit. The umpire will be named a deputy supervisor by the railroad commission and will be the commission's representative in enforcing prorating regulations which the commission is expected to promulgate late Monday.

Now in Full Swing and Ready for Another Big Week

MOTORISTS BY THE SCORE took off their old tires last week and are riding now on safe, new Generals.

THEY SOLD US THEIR OLD TIRES at flattering prices. We took in undersized tires from brand new cars — partly worn tires from others — some aged "blowout prospects" from some more.

LOW LEVEL PRICES on new tires—full allowances for worn tires. A tire buyers' event auguring easy sailing for the motorists and hard going for the makeshift bargain tire boys.

STOP FOR THREE MINUTES at our store and learn how little it costs to equip with Generals and know the trouble-freedom and extra mileage that other people enjoy.

INCREASES in the use of General tires exceeded that of any other tire in the world last year. Annual statements of General and the country's other great rubber factories showed this.

Aside from the top quality reputation, a big factor in General's achievement in leading the field last year was the low price of rubber which made it ridiculously foolish to look for cheap tires the way prices for good tires were —and are today.

Thousands of motorists who have always wanted Generals but believed they could not afford the slightly higher first cost, are taking advantage of present low rubber prices and this special Trade-in opportunity and buying Generals for less than they had paid for other tires, good and bad.

Trade in Every Make, Every Size--Old or New

With Our Full Value Allowance and Today's Low Rubber Prices, What's the Use of Worrying Along With the Ordinary Tire

The General Tire goes two, three and four seasons —more uninterrupted miles, two to one, than any other tire — This is because it is built from the ground up of pure new rubber and first grade fabric. A tire large and strong enough to do the job.

There are tires as bulky as General—made partly of reclaimed rubber, lubbery, loosely put together tires of inferior quality, but they are not the tires that give you the second ten thousand uninterrupted miles.

The experienced motorist knows the General is the correctly built, properly proportioned tire that makes driving safer—traveling more comfortable —that saves clothes, nerves and patience because it doesn't give out with a pinch against the curb or a bump in a bad hole—that doesn't merely protect against accidents or abuse but furnishes unlimited protection—the kind that can be had only when built into the tire itself.

This is the kind of tire you need this year, above all years—with faster speeding cars, shorter stops and more of them, and hurried get-away, you need the big, safe Dual Tread, proper size General—always the preferred tire of the big car owners who want everything the best that money can buy.

This is the tire you need today even on the lighter cars — and can buy — for your car — at less than your usual price for tires by taking advantage of this Trade-in Sale.

CYCLONE BACKS BOSS LOVE

Cyclone (James H.) Davis of Hopkins county is on the road again. Cyclone was one of the organizers of the Populist party. He fought Democratic nominees all along the line.

Beginning with Culberson on down to the time that Campbell became governor, Cyclone did all in his power to drive the Democratic party from power.

Campbell came in and Cyclone was induced to return to the Wigwam. Cyclone is opposed to the nomination of Smith or Reed or Ritchie. He is 75 and he has been making speeches on one side or another for more than 50 years.

In his earlier days he was known as Methodist Jim Davis. He campaigned 42 of the 48 states for populism and later for prohibition.

In his earlier years he was a Populist Republican nominee for congressman in the first district. The Democratic nominee was the late David B. Culberson, a confederate soldier and one of the great constitutional lawyers of America.

In his after years Davis was a Democratic congressman at large from Texas. He made a harmony speech which infuriated the confederate veterans of Texas and their friends and sympathizers. He apologized for Jefferson Davis and the achievements of Jefferson Davis. He was not returned to congress. He was defeated for reelection.

A very remarkable man is Cyclone. A follower of Boss Love, that is his most recent declaration. "Walsh is a bone dry, personally and politically. He is a Catholic and I am an intense Protestant. I am a klansman to the manner born, a lecturer in that order. But I consider Tom Walsh one of the best, greatest and brainest statesman in the Democratic party. Nominate him and, although I am 75 years old, I am ready to round out my political life in a campaign for his election."

WHERE THEY STAND

Iowa is the native state of Judge Cato Sells. Iowa Democrats have declared for the New York governor for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Missouri is the native state of Senator James A. Reed. Missouri Democrats have declared for Senator Reed for president and instructed their delegates to vote for Reed just as long as his name is before the convention.

Those who attended the San Francisco and later the Madison Square garden convention are reminded that Missouri, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and South Dakota form a block of agricultural states that are of the McAdoo column.

They are reminded that Illinois, another great agricultural as well as manufacturing state, will not be found in the McAdoo column.

They are reminded that Ohio is not in the McAdoo column and that Col. Tom Taggart and the Hoosier Democrats will rend a delegation to Houston pledged to the support of Evans Woolley as the favorite son of the "Hell on the Wabash Commonwealth." Hundreds of new faces will appear in the Houston picture. Many of the old guard of yester years from the 48 states are dead; many have fallen by the political wayside; many of them have ceased to be winners in the preliminary contest.

Most of them have a slogan. "Turn the Republican rascals out and restore to power the party of Thomas Jefferson."

THE ROAD-HOG

No, there is not a greater pest
In all this world today
Than the man who thinks he owns the road
And simply won't give way—
A way to pass him, durn him;
(I wish he'd bust his car!)
He makes more profane Christians
Than all the reasons there are!

If I were a powerful fairy king
On a diamond-studded throne,
With every wish an order
To have ways of my own.
The first thing I would wish for,
And would wish it well:—
"Just gather up the road-hogs,
And send them all to H——!"

One-Minute Sermon

And he went forward a little and fell on the ground, and prayed that, if it were possible, the hour might pass from him.
And he said, Abba, Father, all things are possible unto thee; take away this cup from me: nevertheless not what I will, but what thou wilt.—St. Mark, xiv, 35-36.

Here's Your Hat

NORTHWEST Texans are hoping that spring's lap will speedily become less comfortable. Winter seems to them altogether too content to linger therein.

Evidence that the frigid guest should now be the parting one is seen on every hand. Grass is green, flowers and orchards have been blooming for some time and the inspiring crack of the Texas leaguer is heard throughout the land.

Every inch a lady, spring is restrained by innate politeness from handing Jack Frost his sombrero, although she well knows that the country is too small for both of them.

She surrounds the unwelcome tarrier with delicate hints that his presence is greatly desired elsewhere, but his travel instinct remains dormant. Shade trees are leaving, but winter fails to consider their action worthy of his emulation.

Several times of late particularly a certain weekend near the close of March, and Tuesday and Wednesday of last week—spring dared to hope, and pardonably so, when the thermometers in Wichita Falls registered 64 to 66 above the freezing point, that winter had checked out.

She soon discovered her error, however. Last week, bewiched by the soothing rays of the sun, she forgot her former disillusionments and whispered that she surely had the field to herself.

The low-pitched tones of her voice were inaudible to watchful winter. Thereupon the old rascal launched an offensive barrage that showed long ere the dawn's early light Sunday that he was still here.

Public sentiment is believed to be unanimously in favor of Winter's going hence with celerity.

'They Have Youth—Have They Opportunity?'

AND now the woman's bureau of the department of labor has sent out a poster called The Daughters of America. This is the question the poster asks. "They have youth—have they opportunity?" This follows the announcement that nearly 2,000,000 girls under 20 years of age are working for a living in the United States.

It would have been more accurate to say that 2,000,000 girls under 20 in the United States are wage workers. There are millions of girls on the farms of the United States who are working for a living but they are not wage workers.

There are millions of wives and mothers in the United States who work for a living but they are not wage workers. They are given a place to sleep, food to eat and clothes to wear. Have they opportunity?

Voice of Michigan

FOR president Col. Charles A. Lindbergh got a vote in the Michigan primary. Why rave about it? Will Rogers, Col. Rogers, received the vote of an Arizona delegate while the Madison Square Garden convention was on. This placed him in the running and made him a presidential possibility. It has been churning his political ambition ever since. Great oaks from little acrons grow.

Hoover Spurned by Corn Belters

HERBERT HOOVER is not popular with the corn belters. These growers of the cob grain held an important session in the city of Des Moines. Those present represented the farm organization with more than a million members throughout the central west.

They adopted a resolution condemning Hoover for his alleged price fixing activities during the World war, and threatening "to consign him to private life for all time to come should he be nominated for the presidency."

Now the question is, will they vote as they talk, should Hoover be nominated? If they do, the donkey will have some strange faces on his reservation in the month of November after the votes have been counted.

Sustained by the Governor

COLONEL ESTES has been sustained by Governor Moody. Away down here in Texas all fighting men are expected to stand together. It is the unwritten law.

Radicals in Japan

WE are accustomed to think of Japan as one country where radical agitators do not prosper. The Japanese are always pictured as faithful, adoring subjects of the Mikado, united in favor of the existing order.

It is rather surprising, therefore, to read the Japanese government's disclosures regarding the recent election. Radical candidates polled a number of votes; several even were elected to parliament. The government charges that their campaigns were financed by Moscow, and is making wholesale arrests.

It is evident that Tokio is somewhat alarmed. "The present attempt to undermine the foundation of the empire from within," said one official, "is more serious than the threat of armed force from without."

You may pretty safely assume, though, that this danger will be put down quickly. The Japanese are efficient and well able to cope with radical disturbers.

THE VOTER'S OBLIGATION AFTER THE PRIMARY

It is to be inferred from a recent editorial in the Emporia Gazette that many voters have been participating in Republican primaries and then voting the Democratic ticket in the general election. So a law has been passed in Kansas that gives legal recognition to the claim that one who joins in making decisions is obligated to support all decisions honestly arrived at. Probably it will never be possible to enforce such a rule. Perhaps it should not be enforced, but there can be no dispute on the proposition that when a voter enters a party primary he assumes an obligation to abide by the results. The obligation exists whether it is printed on the ballot or not.

ANOTHER PROBLEM FOR CONSERVATIONISTS

A headline states that milady's skirts will be dropped below the knees—glory be! But will they? No indication of such in these parts yet. Think of the enormous amount of energy now wasted in the futile attempt of the women to pull their skirts down that will be released for other endeavor when style again dictates sensible dress lengths.

Health and Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK McCOY

Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

Questions in regard to health and diet will be answered by Dr. McCoy, who can be addressed in care of this paper.

YOUTHFUL GLANDS

The theory that physical and mental powers can be increased by the use of glandular extracts is not a new one, but was first proposed in 1889 when Brown-Sequard, at that time 72 years old, announced before an assemblage of French scientists that he had, by means of injections into himself of testicular extracts, observed an astonishing revivification of his physical and mental powers. Prior to these treatments he had been exceedingly feeble and able to work for only brief periods of time in his laboratory, becoming quite exhausted by supper time, unable to work at night, and then tortured by insomnia.

An amazing transformation was brought about within a month after beginning the treatment. He purports to have regained a vigor of body and an elasticity of mind which had characterized him 20 years earlier. His experiences led many other investigators and scientists to try out these glandular experiments.

There can be no question but that some remarkable improvements have been obtained by this method of treatment, but from thousands of carefully selected cases which have been studied, the percentage of results has been found to be very small, the good results at best, lasting only two or three years with apparent bad effects at the end of that time.

The one single important fact brought out by these investigations is that a person in good health has a healthy condition of all his glandular functions, which includes the glands of the generative organs. All of these glands function better under emotional excitement and, of course, certain ones function more vigorously under the stimulation of emotions which are connected with that emotion called love.

The man or woman who is so debilitated that he or she cannot fall in love is indeed very old, no matter how many years one has lived. If this love instinct seems lost, with the male, the love of combat, conquest, and ambition is lost, he will be constantly depressed and his gait will be heavy and clumsy, he likewise often becomes fat and lazy. With the female, the symptoms are feelings of anxiety and apprehension, fainting spells, hot and cold sensations, and hot flushes. Fat piles up at an alarmingly rapid rate, especially around the hips and buttocks.

Some day we may learn enough about the administration of glandular extracts to be able to overcome all of these symptoms of mature old age, but at the present time the only hope for a real rejuvenation lies in that which can be secured by building better health. This can be accomplished by living on a carefully studied diet, taking vigorous physical culture exercises, and adopting youthful attitudes of mind.

Physical exercise is probably the best solution of the problem, and the one most likely to bring about a permanent cure.

This craze for rejuvenation has been helpful inasmuch as it has encouraged people to study better health rules. Men are now playing golf several days a week, and women are also taking up golf and horseback riding, in a frantic endeavor to get back their good looks, and to regain some of that pep and vitality which was theirs when younger.

This interest in athletics is going to be of immeasurable benefit within the next few years to come, and we probably will have to thank the gland therapist for calling our attention to the need for rejuvenation.

Questions and Answers

Question — R. H. writes: "I read your article recommending fasting for absorbing a clot of blood from the brain. I know a person who had a stroke from a clot of blood on the brain 13 years ago that paralyzed her right side somewhat. She hasn't spoken a word since. She moves her lips and muscles, but cannot form words. Do you think fasting would cure a case of such long standing? She is about 45, weighs 150, and is the picture of health."

Answer—I am sure your friend would be helped by fasting, but it would take a fast of two or three weeks to accomplish good results. The best plan would be to have her go to some doctor in the city who understands the fasting cure, who would encourage her and watch her case during the fast.

Question—Mrs. G. K. writes: "Generally speaking, what are the starches?"

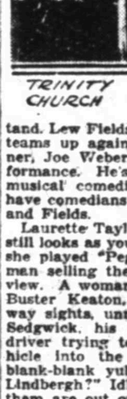

Answer—The grains, and those vegetables classed as tubers and which grow under the ground.

Question—O. M. M. asks—"Will you kindly state some of the symptoms of a cancer of the stomach? Is there any pain or bloating?"

Answer—Sometimes there is a certain amount of pain and some bloating, but in most cases the nerves of sensation seem to be cut off by the growth, and the rule is that very little pain is felt. There is usually considerable bloating, especially through the intestines. You may be needlessly worrying over the symptoms of gastritis or stomach ulcer. Do not guess about it, and do not try to diagnose your own case.

The Day Book of a New Yorker

By BURTON RASCOE

NEW YORK, April 22. — Seen and heard at Times Square, the crossroads of the world:

Fred Fisher, the Jewish boy who wrote "Japansy," —also "Ireland Must Be Heaven Because My Mother Came From There." A Philadelphia taxicab, probably carrying a "big spender" who thought it'd be fun to run up a $100 charge. "Bleeve me, I told her something, I did! I said, 'You aint anybody who can talk about anybody! I know you!'" An old negro, bent and shuffling, buying the Atlanta Constitution at the out-of-town newsstand. Lew Fields, who now and then teams up again with his old partner, Joe Weber, for a benefit performance. He's now a producer of musical comedies, none of which have comedians as funny as Weber and Fields.

Laurette Taylor, the actress, who still looks as young as she did when she played "Peg o' My Heart." A man selling the Birth Control Review. A woman without stockings. Buster Keaton, seeing the Broadway sights, unrecognized, with Ed Sedgwick, his director. One taxi-driver trying to jam a rival's vehicle into the curb. "Who'n the blank-blank yuh think yuh are—Lindbergh?" Idle actors. A lot of them are out of jobs because they refused to go on the road after the conclusion of Broadway runs of shows. What've they got against Lexington, Ky., and Dubuque, Ia., and Augusta, Me.?

The Earle of Amherst, who is plain Jeffrey Holmesdale to fellow newspaper reporters. "Harry, you better not let your wife see us." A woman smoking a cigaret on the street still attracts attention in New York. A man in riding trunks on a bicycle, oblivious of passing stares. Busy New Yorkers in a little throng, gazing at a hawker doing tricks with a dangling paper toy.

The story is being told that Thomas Edison was standing outside his laboratory after the evening dismissal whistle blew. He noticed one of his employes leaving with a loaded brief case. The inventor made inquiries and found the employe was in the habit of taking work home. He was fired.

"If you can't do your work in eight hours a day, then the job is too big for you," Edison is quoted as saying.

A beggar arrested in Times Square on the charge of vagrancy was found to have $25,000 in his clothes when he was searched at police headquarters. New York visitors who wouldn't think of giving to panhandlers back home are carelessly generous when holidaying in the big city.

"I just need a dollar more to get back home," is a favorite plea of a panhandler when he approaches a person he is certain is a newcomer to the big city.

"Canary" Murder Case

by S. S. VAN DINE AUTHOR of THE BENSON MURDER CASE

© Charles Scribner's Sons

"Now Jessup," continued Markham, "there are things connected with last night's tragedy that you can tell."

CHARACTERS

PHILO VANCE
JOHN F.-X. MARKHAM, District Attorney of New York County.
MARGARET ODELL (The "CANARY")
CHARLES CLEAVER, a man-about-town
KENNETH SPOTSWOODE, a manufacturer
LOUIS MANNIX, an importer
DR. AMBROISE LINDQUIST, a fashionable neurologist
TONY SKEEL, a professional burglar
WILLIAM ELMER JESSUP, telephone operator
HARRY SPIVLEY, telephone operator
ERNEST HEATH, Sergeant of the Homicide Bureau

THE STORY THUS FAR

The key to the closet door was always kept on the outside, Margaret Odell's maid told police the morning her mistress' strangled body was found in the apartment. But this day the key was on the inside. The "Canary" had gone out early in the evening with a man. The next morning when the maid came to work Margaret Odell was dead. A baffling mystery, Vance declares, a devilish one—"And, Markham, those finger-prints you found have nothing whatever to do with the murder."

CHAPTER VIII

Heath shot Vance a curious look. Then, after a moment's frowning contemplation of the knob, he waved his hand to the detective who had brought the maid in.

"Take her back to the reception room, Snitkin, and get a detailed description from her of all the Odell jewelry . . . And keep her outside: I'll want her again."

When Snitkin and the maid had gone out, Vance lay back lazily on the davenport, where he had sat during the interview, and sent a spiral of cigaret smoke toward the ceiling.

"Rather illuminatin', what?" he remarked. "The dusky demoiselle got us considerably forrader. Now we know that the closest key is on the wrong side of the door, and that our lady of joy went to the theater with one of her favorite lovers, who presumably brought her home shortly before she took her departure from this wicked world."

"You think that's helpful, do you?" Heath's tone was contemptuously triumphant. "Wait till you hear the crazy story the telephone operator's got to tell."

"All right, Sergeant," put in Markham, impatiently. "Suppose we get on with the ordeal."

"I'm going to suggest, Mr. Markham, that we question the janitor first. And I'll show you why." Heath went to the entrance door of the apartment, and opened it. "Look here for just a minute, sir."

He stepped out into the main hall, and pointed down the little passageway on the left. It was about ten feet in length, and ran between the Odell apartment and the blank rear wall of the reception room. At the end of it was a solid oak door which gave on the court at the side of the house.

"That door," explained Heath, "is the only side or rear entrance to this building; and when that door is bolted nobody can get into the house except by the front entrance. You can't even get into the building through the other apartments, for every window on this floor is barred. I checked up on that point as soon as I got here."

He led the way back into the living-room.

"Now, after I'd looked over the situation this morning," he went on, "I figured that our man had entered through that side door at the end of the passageway and had slipped into this apartment without the night operator seeing him. So I tried the side door to see if it was open. But it was bolted on the inside—not locked, mind you, but bolted.

"And it wasn't a slip-bolt, either, that could have been jimmied or worked open from the outside, but a tough old-fashioned turn-bolt of solid brass . . . And now I want you to hear what the janitor's got to say about it."

Markham nodded acquiescence, and Heath called an order to one of the officers in the hall. A moment later a stolid, middle-aged man, with sullen features and high cheek-bones, stood before us. His jaw was clamped tight, and he shifted his eyes from one to the other of us suspiciously.

Heath straightaway assumed the role of inquisitor.

"What time do you leave here at night?" He had, for some reason, assumed a belligerent manner.

"Six o'clock—sometimes earlier, sometimes later." The man spoke in a surly monotone. He was obviously resentful at this unexpected intrusion upon his orderly routine.

"And what time do you get here in the morning?"

"Eight o'clock, regular."

"What time did you go home last night?"

"About six—maybe quarter past."

Heath paused and finally lighted the cigar on which he had been chewing at intervals during the past hour.

"Now, tell me about that side door," he went on, with undiminished aggressiveness. "You told me you lock it every night before you leave—is that right?"

"Ja—that's right." The man nodded his head affirmatively several times. "Only I don't lock it—I bolt it."

"All right, you bolt it, then." As Heath talked his cigar bobbed up and down between his lips, smoke and words came simultaneously from his mouth. "And last night you bolted it as usual about six o'clock?"

"Maybe a quarter past," the janitor amended, with Germanic precision.

"You're sure you bolted it last night?" The question was almost ferocious.

"Ja, ja. Sure, I am. I do it every night. I never miss."

The man's earnestness left no doubt that the door in question had indeed been bolted on the inside at about six o'clock of the previous evening. Heath, however, belabored the point for several minutes, only to be reassured doggedly that the door had been bolted. At last the janitor was dismissed.

"Really, y' know, Sergeant," remarked Vance with an amused smile, "that honest Rhinelander bolted the door."

"Sure, he did," sputtered Heath; "and I found it still bolted this morning at quarter of eight. That's just what messes things up so nice and pretty. If that door was bolted from six o'clock last evening until eight o'clock this morning, I'd appreciate having some one drive up in a hearse and tell me how the Canary's little playmate got in here last night. And I'd also like to know how he got out."

"Why not through the main entrance?" asked Markham. "It seems the only logical way left, according to your own findings."

"That's how I had it figured out, sir," returned Heath. "But wait till you hear what the phone operator has to say."

"And the phone operator's post," mused Vance, "is in the main hall half-way between the front door and this apartment. Therefore, the gentleman who caused all the disturbance hereabouts last night would have had to pass within a few feet of the operator both on arriving and departing—eh, what?"

"That's it!" snapped Heath. "And, according to the operator, no such person came or went."

"Get the fellow in here, and let me question him," he ordered. Heath obeyed with a kind of malicious alacrity.

(Tuesday, September 11, 11 a. m.)

Jessup made a good impression from the moment he entered the room. He was a serious, determined-looking man in his early thirties, rugged and well built; and there was a squareness to his shoulders that carried a suggestion of military training. He walked with a decided limp—his right foot dragged perceptibly—and I noted that his left arm had been stiffened into a permanent arc, as if by an unreduced fracture of the elbow.

He was quiet and reserved, and his eyes were steady and intelligent. Markham at once motioned him to a wicker chair beside the closet door, but he declined it, and stood before the district attorney in a soldierly attitude of respectful attention. Markham opened the interrogation with several personal questions. It transpired that Jessup had been a sergeant in the world war, had twice been seriously wounded, and had been invalided home shortly before the armistice. He had held his present post of telephone operator for over a year.

"Now, Jessup," continued Markham, "there are things connected with last night's tragedy that you can tell us."

"Yes, sir." There was no doubt that this ex-soldier would tell us accurately anything he knew, and also that, if he had any doubt as to the correctness of his information, he would frankly say so. He possessed all the qualities of a careful and well-trained witness.

"First of all, what time did you come on duty last night?"

"At ten o'clock, sir." There was no qualification to this blunt statement; one felt that Jessup would arrive punctually at whatever hour he was due. "It was my short shift. The day man and myself alternate in long and short shifts."

"And did you see Miss Odell come in last night after the theater?"

"Yes, sir. Every one who comes in has to pass the switchboard."

"What time did she arrive?"

"It couldn't have been more than a few minutes after eleven."

"Was she alone?"

"No, sir. There was a gentleman with her."

"Do you know who he was?"

"I don't know his name, sir. But I have seen him several times before when he has called on Miss Odell."

"You could describe him, I suppose."

"Yes, sir. He's tall and clean-shaven except for a very short gray mustache, and is about forty-five, I should say. He looks—if you understand me, sir—like a man of wealth and position."

Markham nodded. "And now tell me; did he accompany Miss Odell into her apartment, or did he go immediately away?"

Favorite Jokes of Famous People

As Told by Them to
FRANK ERNEST NICHOLSON

FONTAINE FOX

Fontaine Fox is, as every one knows, the celebrated cartoonist who drives the Toonerville Trolley from Broadway to Main street the world over. Mr. Fox's characters, Tomboy Taylor, the Powerful Katinka, Mr. Bang, Mickey McGuire and the Skipper, furnish humor for more than two hundred and fifty newspapers.

Drawing, he says, is a soothing occupation. That just goes to prove that he's never been to a dentist.

During the war, Mr. Fox was appointed to the division of pictorial publicity, and from the war he got his favorite joke.

This is it:

"It was the first cold morning of the fall—so cold that the officers and men found their overcoats comfortable. The recruit, who had never seen an officer's overcoat, passed the colonel and failed to salute him.

"'Hey, there,' said the colonel, 'why didn't you salute me?'

"'I only salute officers,' replied the rookie.

"'What do you think I am?' roared the colonel.

"'You might be a field clerk, for all I know,' said the recruit.

"'What! Field clerk?' thundered the officer. 'Look,' he said, raising his arm and pointing to the braided sleeve, 'see that?'

"'Field clerks wear braid,' argued the rookie.

"'They do not!' stormed the colonel.

"'Well,' said the recruit, 'if you're an officer, show me your badge.'

"'Xb!MXZI*!*!!! Lhow you my badge—what do you think I am, a village constable?'

"'No, sir,' replied the rookie, as he saluted and came to attention. 'I know you're an officer NOW. You cuss like one.'"

C-C Agricultural Committee Buys Fine Jerseys For Distribution Here

By FRED L. HASKETT

SHERMAN, Texas, April 22.—The agricultural committee of the Wichita Falls Chamber of Commerce was represented here Thursday at the 21st semi-annual sale of Jersey cattle by the Grayson County Livestock association. The committee was composed of J. T. Harrell, chairman, J. M. Baber and George D. Keith. N. H. Martin was also a member of the party.

While no cattle were purchased at the sale yet 36 head of registered and high grade cows and heifers were purchased at private sale. A registered bull was bought by Mr. Baber.

The e fine cows and heifers were purchased to be distributed among the farmers of the Wichita valley. The committee is highly pleased with the animals and it is believed other carload shipments will be made within a short time.

The cattle will arrive in Wichita Falls early Sunday morning. It is planned to unload them at Call Field. They will be offered to farmers at private sale. Several of the cows will freshen within the next few weeks.

The agricultural committee of the chamber of commerce is anxious to serve the farmers of the valley and it is expected this entire lot of fine Jerseys will be disposed of within a few days.

Eight Special Trains Planned For Huge Throckmorton Celebration

THROCKMORTON, Texas, April 22. (AP)—Chief Baldwin Parker, chief of the Momanches, and about a score of his braves will be the guests of this city on May 4, when the first train over the Cisco and Northwestern extension is run into this city. Chief Parker was asked to participate in the festivities of the occasion because his ancestors used to roam over this section long before the white man thought of settling here.

Chief Parker and his braves will help entertain the 10,000 visitors Throckmorton is expecting that day. That evening the Indians will give their war dance. In another part of the city and at the same time, the white people will be enjoying themselves with another dance.

Eight special trains are expected to arrive in Throckmorton as near 10 o'clock as possible. These trains will meet at Breckenridge early on the morning of May 10, and follow one another as close as safety will permit into Throckmorton. They are scheduled to leave Breckenridge at 9 o'clock and consume an hour in making the run into this place. The special loaded with Breckenridge enthusiasts will be the official Cisco and Northeastern train and lead the string of specials from Breckenridge. Behind it will be specials from Dallas, Wichita Falls, Abilene, Cisco, Ranger and Albany.

At noon the visitors will partake of a barbecue served by the citizens. Twenty-three two-year-old Herefords are being fattened for this occasion. The afternoon will be devoted almost exclusively to oratory. The principal address will be delivered by Barry Miller, lieutenant governor. Other state notables, several of them aspirants for public office at the November election, will be heard. They will be Alvin Owsley of Dallas, O. B. Colquitt of Dallas, Mrs. Minnie Fisher Cunningham of New Waverly, Congressman Tom Connally of Waco, Louis J. Wardlaw of Fort Worth and W. E. Hawkins of Breckenridge. Other prominent men and women have been asked to attend the celebration to speak but A. E. Owens, chairman of the arrangements committee, said Saturday he had received acceptances from only those mentioned above.

Federal Inspector Finds Aviation Booming in Southwestern States

SAN ANTONIO, April 22. (AP)—Commercial aviation is booming all over the southwest and up-to-date dependable private planes are replacing the war time junk which once cluttered up flying fields, according to Parker D. Cramer, inspector for the department of commerce for Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma.

Cramer says that air-fields all over the southwest have developed as has Winburn field here.

"When I made my first trip to San Antonio less than a year ago I licensed two "Jennies" and one new production job. There were a dozen old planes and a few shacks on the field. Now the old planes and the shacks are gone, having been replaced by new planes and steel hangars. Approximately 50 San Antonio pilots are applicants for licenses and 15 new planes have been licensed recently, with more coming in as fast as the factories can produce them. Between 100 and 150 planes have been licensed in the state.

Mr. Cramer's work has become so heavy that the department has appointed E. W. Day to assist him in this district.

Old LeFors Courthouse To Be Sold at Auction

PAMPA, Texas, April 22. (AP)—After having served the county for the last 26 years, the old Gray county courthouse at LeFors will be sold at public auction on May 14.

This action was necessitated when it was voted at a recent election to move the county seat from LeFors, an inland town where it had been since 1902, to Pampa. After the sale of the building, the land will revert to J. M. Shaw, who donated it.

Wartime Commander Of "90th" To Be Speaker

SAN ANTONIO, April 22. (UP)—Major General Henry T. Allen, Washington, who commanded the 90th division during the World war, will attend the national convention of the American Legion here in October. Allen has notified Mayor C. M. Chambers who extended the invitation, that he is delighted to attend the convention.

General Allen will be the chief speaker at the reunion of the division he commanded, which was made up of Texas and Oklahoma men. It will be one of the events in connection with the convention.

Ramblin',
with
Marie Theresa

TRINITY, a suburb of Houston, boasts a prodigy—but it seems that the locality has not yet definitely decided upon the question as to whether the child is a prodigy or not. So Marie Theresa is calling in a little aid. Here are the boy's credentials: He is three years old, has known the alphabet for more than a year; he can spell dozens of words, and can pronounce more than a hundred words when spelled to him, and recites long poems. In addition, he can answer correctly the following questions: Who was the first president? Who is president of the United States? Where does he live and what is his salary? Who discovered America and when? Who first sailed across the Atlantic? How many pounds make a bushel? Who are the three Hebrew children in the fiery furnace? Who sang for King Saul? Who is the governor of Texas, where does he live and wnat is his salary?

The method of determining the boy's claim to genius, is this: See how many of these questions you can answer, then draw your conclusion.

The child is Morrison Hooks, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Hooks of Trinity.

THE new spring styles seen on the streets Sunday were a bit unusual for this time of the year. Fur-trimmed heavy dark coats and hats conspiciously like those worn in the winter, were the order of the day. Men who have not yet bought their straw hats and their spring suits are smiling again despite the blow dealt golf games and fishing trips, by the sudden return of wintry breezes.

A RECENT trip to the downtown shops left a lasting impression on my mind. The day of a regulation outfit or makeup for women is past.

Not long ago, a set standard of styles was accepted by women and everything but homemade products were designed as "store bought" and worn with a feeling that all was well as long as that particular style or number was manufactured by a good house.

The trend has changed considerably and is undergoing still more marked alterations. Now the hat is made on the head of the wearer, or at least is fitted and shaped to suit the purchaser and not the entire run of prospectives.

The smartest shops are those that maintain, along with the newest New York and Parisian styles, a competent alteration department and an expert modiste who will not only fashion clothes for the individual, but prepare a wardrobe for the season, the year or for a specific purpose, with an expert eye kept on the appropriate thing for the particular individual.

AND even in the department of lingerie, the fitter is a necessity. The time when milady walked into a store, asked for a certain size in a certain undergarment, and walked out prepared to do her own alteration if it didn't fit, or wear it anyway because it wasn't visible, has given way to the competent saleswomen who sizes up her prospective purchaser with a professional once-over, and brings in a number of light feathery bits of lingerie, and . . . there you are, no bulging or misfitting foundation for the dainty dresses of the day.

The same thing is true in makeup. Once we bought rouge and powder . . . rouge was red, powder was white or flesh and if you were a blonde you bought the white while brunettes of all varying tints, cast their lot on flesh. All women who bought the product wore the same rouge, and used it with the same finesse exercised in the purchase.

But now . . . the saleswoman at the toilet counter is often the most expert of the lot, or at least she should be. The ever increasing number of colors, tints and blends of rouge, powder, creams, and heavens only knows how many other beauty aids, are given the acid test by expert application with both eyes fixed on the reaction on the prospective wearer.

In short, the day of standardized beauty for American feminity is passing, and soon the French idea of beauty plus will be the order of the day instead of the practice of a chosen and moneyed few. And the department houses and manufacturers will make it possible, too, by selling the article, and giving expert knowledge for small consideration.

This is not an advertisement of the local houses. It is a plea that the women of the city avail themselves of the beauty and style aids the various houses are featuring.

Erma Kathryn is scheduled for a grand opera career or the concert stage, but her family has not yet made up its mind as to which. The little lady has memorized a great number of nursery rhymes and not a few songs. She is only two-and-one-half years old.

Her awakening thought each morning is "May I play outdoors today?" and when the answer is, "No it is too cold," her procedure is to spend the greater part of the morning acting like a human barometer to see if perchance the weather will change and a warmer breeze blow up.

Erma Kathryn is quite artistic as to dress, in fact, she insists upon certain requirements in dress, and it's too bad when they are not forthcoming. But they usually are. Saturday she brightened the streets of the city with a clever pink spring outfit and many smiles as she went her way.

She is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. O. Johnson, 2700 Tenth street, and boasts of a big brother, Joyce.

D. A. R. MEET SOCIETY EVENT

Members "Wealthiest In U. S.," Says Writer

By GEORGIANA WASHINGTON
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—The Daughters of the American Revolution, 4000 or more strong, had this old town by the car last week.

They were everywhere in the city during their six-day convention, thronging hotel lobbies, spilling over into the parks, and overrunning almost every place—magnificently dressed women from the four quarters of the country, all decorated with pins and badges.

Many Functions.

And how they were entertained! The parties began last week with the vanguard of the delegates and continued every day and night this week. Mrs. A. J. Brosseau, the wealthy and very handsome president-general—which is to say, the big boss—was either the guest of honor of the hostess at most of the parties. She was the "inspiration" anyway.

The dinner given by the National Officers' club and the breakfast to Mrs. Brosseau at which Mrs. Delos Blodgett was hostess were de luxe affairs, if ever that term could be applied to a social function. The guests in each case were hand-picked, only the very cream of the D. A. R.'s receiving invitations.

Mrs. Herbert Hoover, wife of the commerce secretary, was completely democratic in issuing invitations to her tea for the ladies, asking them, one and all. Mrs. Hoover has a charming home with a duck of an old garden, into which the guests wandered at will.

Leads All.

It was noised about, as such a thing would be, that this party was "a very good compaign stunt." Secretary Hoover's hat being in the presidential ring. But some folks replied that Mrs. Hoover ought to be a D. A. R., if she isn't, being quite, quite eligible. Her sister, it seems, is an active member.

Mrs. Brosseau's reception for the delegates, given in the magnificent headquarters building of the organization, was a gala affair with expensive evening gowns and gleaming jewels.

Just a view of that assembly would have convinced any doubting Thomas of the fact that the D. A. R. is the wealthiest organization of women in the entire nation.

Jim and John, masters of ceremony at the Woman's Forum, as they looked when corralled to have their "pitchers" made.

Train Caller Is Cook, and Janitor "Master of Ceremonies" at Forum

Jim and John Lend Art, Color and Comedy to Business Of Serving 1200 Club Women.

BY MARIE THERESA
The Record News Staff

To those men who have difficulty getting along with one woman or who complain at the high cost of feeding 'em, had better take heed at the ease with which the two men of the accompanying picture manage to keep smiling when they both get along and feed 1200 of the perverse sex.

The two men come in contact with 1200 women, not all of them at one time, of course, but they must get along with them all at some time.

By Way of Explanation.

They are Jim and John, the cook and the "master of ceremonies" respectively, at the Womans Forum. The term cook is explicit enough, but there are not many persons who understand the second appellation, therefore the explanation. A master of ceremonies as the two men see it, is that person who looks after the general cleaning up of the Womans Forum and who take a hand in helping to wait tables when there are guests present. The word "janitor" is probably a little clearer but not nearly so meaningful to John, and since he's the man who does the work, why not let him name his own production?

Camera Shy.

About the only thing the two negroes have in common is their reluctance to have their pictures made. John was extracted from his cigar and skull cap with a great deal of difficulty and only after much persuasion, while both men expressed a fear that they might get in jail some place at some time, and the picture might be used against them.

Neither one has ever had his "pitcher took" before, and Jim, the cook, wanted it made in the kitchen as he was carving his third piece of veal in effort to get the pieces into the small refrigerator. The effort brought forth a "I ain't got no place to put things at?", but being a diplomat he found a means of getting the pieces into an incredibly small space.

Jim has spent most of his working days calling trains, and to prove that his assertion is authentic, he took time out from his culinary duties to launch forth into a musical drawn out jargon of train lines.

He has worked on a Pullman as chief cook and has in short, worked at his habitual (he calls it a habit, anyway) trade in all states in the union for the last 30 years. He is a native Texan, however, and returns to the state at frequent intervals, one of which brought him his present "position."

Just now Jim is worrying because the dimensions of the house to be built for him over the garage-to-be at the Womans Forum will in all probability be too small for him and Mrs. Jim, especially when Mrs. Jim goes on a "tear." Jim predicts that there won't be enough room for him to "run at."

LINDA -:- A Love Mystery of Collegiate Life

By Virginia Swain.

"Tom!" cried Linda, and instantly recovered sufficiently to run down four flights of stairs and fling herself upon him.

The impact almost knocked him over, with his foot on the prostrate body of Doyle Hoskins. But he steadied himself and held her manfully, saying nothing at all for a moment.

"Tom," she cried, "I was so scared—Icame to find out what was queer about the house, and Doyle followed me—I saw a car behind my taxi—and he chased me and kissed me—and"——

"Oh, he did, did he?" said Tom, kicking Doyle's inert ribs. "I wish I'd thrown him over the bannister instead of dragging him all the way down, thump-thump."

"You dragged him?" said Linda. "How did you get here?"

"Well, I saw that Hindu riding the professor's bike, Mary Elizabeth in town today, and I knew the papers thought that whoever had the bicycle was the guy that bumped off old Doc Prine. So I just hoofed it out here in the track of the bike. When I got inside, Gopal had disapeared. So I sat down under the back stairs to wait.

"The next I knew there was a racket on the stairs and somebody screamed and I rushed out to see what was hapening. There was Hoskins, draped over the top balcony rail, swearing and hiccoughing like a drunken sailor. I ran up the stairs and he hit at me. I dodged and he fell over on his face and we started to roll. Well I helped him roll the rest of the way, and he passed out at the bottom." He broke off suddenly and looked shrewdly at her. "I still don't see why you'd take a chance on coming to a place like this alone, with night coming on. Couldn't you have called me up and asked me to come with you?"

She faltered under his eyes. "But, you see, I wanted—to find out how Pete Damoras died—clear myself in everybody's eyes—by my own efforts. I didn't want to ask you—anything."

Dr. Prine stopped on the third step from the bottom and looked at them. "You women," he said to Linda, "are never satisfied. Didn't I fix that all up when I got the county attorney to set you free?"

"You what!" Tom and Linda spoke in unison.

"Went to the county attorney and showed him he'd make an ass of himself if he brought Linda to trial. You see, I knew she didn't kill Damoras—that nobody killed Damoras."

"How did you know?" gasped Linda.

"Because he died of alcoholic poisoning. I'd bought his body from the morgue for my experiments. Hadn't had any new material since that pauper died in county hospital last year. The minute I got a good look at Damoras in the morgue I knew he would not do for preserving purposes. He was completely pickled already, inside and out—the clearest case of hooch poisoning I'd ever seen. The cut on his head was only a surface wound.

"So I went to Oscar Johnson, swore him to secrecy, and told him so. He was glad enough to shut up—to save his own face and the coroner's. But I lost a specimen—and they're hard to get in this little stick-in-the-mud community, where there isn't a murder in five years."

He strode away toward the door. "Well, I'll be damned!" said Tom.

"Me, too," said Linda.

She thrust her hands in the pockets of her fur coat and leaned against the wall. There was something in one of the pockets that cracked. It proved to be the telegram that the clerk had handed her just before she left the Tavern.

Under the light of matches that Tom struck they read it together. It was from Simon Whitlock:

"Yes comma my edar Linda comma I know I'm the richest stop But I think I'd rather buy you a new college stop It'll be cheaper in the long run."

"Well," said Tom, "I let one man save you from the murder charge and another rescue from Doyle this afternoon, while I slept under the backstairs and dreamed of you. And now a third guy wants to buy you a college. A hell of a hero I am!"

Linda ducked her head against his shirt front. "I always heard," she said, very law, "that heroes made—poor family men."

When the professor came back a minute later, he squinted at Tom's middle shirt button. It was twisted in a snarl of golden hair.

"Humph!" he said, and stalked over to where Dhan Gopal was bending over Doyle, feeling his pulse.

"Alive?" he asked.

The Hindu nodded sadly.

"He'd have made a beautiful mummy,' said Dr. Prine, shaking his head.

French Court Has Successful Way To Handle Mother-in-Law Problem

Quite Sensibly the French Court Seeks the Solution of the Mother-in-Law Problem by Obliging the Husband to Provide a Separate home for His Bride, Thus Eliminating the Greatest Cause of Friction.

The mother-in-law menace has been minimized for the French bride by a decision of the Tribunal of the Seine, which holds that every wife is entitled to a separate domicile with her husband, apart from his parents, and if he doesn't give it to her she can demand a divorce with alimony.

In handing down the decision the court said: "The essence of marriage at all times is that the husband quit his father and mother to unite with his wife, and his failure to do so constitutes a grave failure in performing his obligations under the civil code."

The French have been called the most logical people in the world, and they prove this by the sweet reasonableness with which they settle this problem, which has drenched the world with tears, and caused more heartburnings and bitterness and strife and misery than all other griefs combined.

They solve the mother-in-law question by not letting it arise. They eliminate friction by preventing two antagonistic bodies from coming into close conflict. They keep mothers-in-law and daughters-in-law friends by keeping them more or less strangers. They prevent family fights by keeping two belligerents, each with a chip on her shoulder, apart.

How simple the plan! How effective! For it is so easy to get along peaceably with those whom we see only occasionally and whose personal peculiarities appear to us only as amusing eccentricities, because we are only brought in contact with them now and then. And it is so difficult to get along amiably with those with whom we live, day in and day out, and whose annoying little ways and offensive habits get upon our nerves and rub them raw.

Almost any mother-in-law would like her daughter-in-law if she saw her only once a month. It is having her right in the house with her all the time, where she can see daughter-in-law's little shortcomings, and keep tab on how much she spends, and how often she plays bridge, and where their difference in tastes and opinions clash over everything from politics to pie that makes mother feel that poor John made a great mistake in marrying, and got taken in by a designing hussy.

Almost any daughter-in-law can surge over with loving, dutiful thoughts of her mother-in-law who is a thousand miles away. It is only when she has to live with mother-in-law and have mother-in-law tell her just where she gets on, and where she gets off, and spy on everything she does, and interfere with all of her plans and arrangements, that makes her entertain poisonous sentiments toward her husband's mother and wish that she had married a man who was a foundling who had been left on a doorstep.

Why any man who has intelligence enough to be let out without a keeper, or who has the remotest regard for the happiness of his mother, or the woman he marries, or for his own peace and well being, ever takes his bride home to live with his people, passes comprehension. He must be an incurable optimist. Certainly his act is the final triumph of hope over experience, for not once in a hundred times does it result in anything but misery for all concerned.

Nor need one wonder at this. Nor is it any reflection upon the two women that they cannot dwell together in unity and harmony. You are asking the impossible when you expect two women who love the same man, and each of whom has a potent claim upon him, not to feel jealous of each other, and for two women who belong to different generations, and who have different tastes and ideals and standards, not to antagonize each other.

A sense of justice is not a feminine trait of character, and there are few mothers who are big enough and generous enough to endure with equanimity seeing their sons love their wives better than they do them, and put their wives before them. Nor do they want their sons to treat their wives as they want their daughters husbands to treat them. They feel that Mary's husband should indulge her in every luxury and give her servants to wait on her, but that John's wife should scrimp and save and make her own clothes and do her own housework.

Nor are there many young wives who do not resent their husbands' devotion to their mothers, and who do not feel aggrieved when their husbands turn, as they have done all of their lives, to their mothers for sympathy and guidance.

So these two, both of whom the man loves, fight over him like dogs over a bone, and the only way in which he can protect himself, and save them, is by keeping them apart so that they cannot see his attentions to each other, and their jealousy dies down from lack of material to feed the flame.

Also, there is the matter of the home in which the woman must reign supreme to be content. No woman is ever happy living in another woman's home. No two women can keep house together without its precipitating civil warfare. No woman can watch another woman run a house without sticking her finger in the pie.

No woman endures with meekness criticsm of her housekeeping. She might suffer aspersions on her character, but not on her coffee, or the size of her butcher bills. Why it should mean so much to a woman to have just the particular kind of bedroom paper she wants, or to wash her dishes through one water or two, or to use doilies or tablecloths, according to her fancy, nobody knows. It just merely does.

To have her own home in which she can have everything exactly the way she wants it, and to do just as she pleases, and in which she is the most exalted and supreme potentate, is the dream of every woman's life.

She has thought about it from the time she was a little girl in pinafores and played keeping house with doll furniture. It is what she married to get, and if she is deprived of it by having to go and live with her mother-in-law, marriage is a failure to her, and life is cinders, ashes and dust.

So the French court is quite right when it says that every wife has the right to her own home apart from her in-laws, and if a man cannot, or will not, leave his mother to set up his own home when he marries, he had better stay single.

MODISH MITZI By Jay V. Jay

Part of the fun of staying with Mitzi, thinks Marie, is that she gets a chance to wear her pretty dresses so often. This one is of taffeta with a skirt made of ruffles, all of it a pale pink that can hardly be told from white. Aunt Sophia wears an evening gown of white moire—because moire is so smart this season—and especially likes the neckline and tabs in front. Not much of Mizi's frock is visible but the most important part is—the extremely large flat flowers in two shades of orange yellow that cover the front of the bodice. It's rather odd, though, Marie considers, that the Goofer should prefer to talk to Dad when Mitzi is here.

Have they quarreled, Marie wonders? If so, they must be hiding breaking hearts, both of them. There's nothing more interesting to Marie than a breaking heart, unless it's breaking two hearts. Mitzi seems almost cold when Marie says what a romantic person the Goofer is. In fact she even changes the subject and says what a pretty nightgown Marie has—and so she has. A crepe de chine one with a little round collar and tiny sleeves scalloped on the edges. Mitzi's step-in is of pale orchid georgette trimmed lavishly with both lace and embroidery. It dips down in the back because it's a special evening combination. Marie wonders when she can have one like it.

AY PLEADS ON LD RELIGION

Teacher Says America Faces Crisis

Stating that America faces a great crisis, that great aggregations of wealth are destroying the middle classes, that we have as much law as we want, and that we are not guarding our liberties, Judge John C. Kay, teacher of the Kay Bible class,. exhorted his listeners to turn to the old time religion. The address was delivered at the Sunday morning meeting of the class in the Olympic theater.

John C. Kay

"St. Paul stood before the Roman authorities," Judge Kay said. "When they were about to punish him, he said, "I am a Roman citizen," and even to this day we hear a man say he is hundred percent American without stopping to think what that means. A fellow told that to the sultan of Turkey and the sultan said 'yes, every saloon and every gambling house in Constantinople is run by an Englishman or by one of your people.'

Filipino Example.

"About 28 years ago we had a great political campaign in this country concerning the Filipinos, and the great question was whether they were capable of self-government. We asked the Filipino if he was. Let's think about that mighty question. It's a good deal easier to round up the other fellow and discuss his business and his affairs than our own. I have a notion the Filipino was not capable of self-government, but he is not the man that I am talking about this morning. We are going to discuss another great race.

Our people used to take more interest and more pride in citizenship, I think, than they do now, in voting especially. They came more near to getting the whole population out to vote than they do now, and felt like their government was nearer to them than it is now—in their local, their state and their national government. We've become so strong in this country that we think the government can run itself and that it is an automatic machine. We leave it, as we must leave it under our system, to the majority to determine everything as they think, and we say that we are a free people. No man was ever free politically in America except for one instant. He is free when he stands there over that little black box with his ballot in his hand. When he drops it into the box, he has delegated his political authority to somebody else. In that sense, he is no longer free.

Big Strong Law Needed.

"We are not crying for freedom; we are not crying much for good government. Somebody is going to say, 'What is the teacher's story this morning got to do with the Bible? I am in that chapter of the Old Testament that says 'Every man did that which was right in his own eye.' Now, let us take an example of our own way of doing things. What we want is a big, strong law. We want it blazoned in the text of our law books that this, that and the other is our policy, and leave it in the book. Let me discuss prohibition for a minute. I think I have not discussed it yet. Prohibition has been an economic success—in some degree a moral success—but I am going to tell you something about it that a great many of you are not going to like. You've got it in the constitution, in the state constitution, in the statutes in Texas and in the United States, and I want to proclaim to you this morning from the house tops that every community in this land has got as much prohibition as it wants.

"The fellow who used to write western stories, his name is Lewis, told about some new community in Arizona where they were going to hold court. But they couldn't hold court. He said that they were not ready to have court yet. They broke out and didn't have court. The district Judge and district attorney went away. It just was not right for that particular civilization. Some of us might as well not hold it. You say it is the judge, it is the district attorney or the jury or somebody when the court fails. But when the court fails, it is the failure of all men in that community, because it is not the failure of the court. It is the failure of the law, itself.

Not One But All Laws.

"What did I mean when I said every community has got all the prohibition it wants? I didn't mean to single out prohibition, but any law. What I meant was that if the citizenship cared about it, if they were anxious about it, they could do better with it. Now, when I came to Texas, which was not long ago and when I was compartively young, (some of these older men will bear me witness in it,) there was no way on earth for a guilty man to get out of a horse-stealing case. If he stole a horse he was headed as straight for the penitentiary as he could be. But there were a thousand reasons why he couldn't possibly be guilty of stealing cows. They brought the cow law along just a little too early for the community. I asked an old fellow who had been there from the beginning about that and he said, 'Well, let somebody take your horse away from you and leave you out on the desert 50 or 60 miles from any house, and you'll know why you don't want anybody to steal your horse.' 'Yes,' I said, 'but how about cows?' He said, 'You know we've got to have horses to handle the cows.'

"Ah, my friends, this is your government and these are your courts and these are your laws to use as you will. Every man doing right in his own eyes. It seems to me that a people strong, wealthy, prosperous, become careless about the great things of their government and the great things of life. Now, I am saying these things to you men for another reason. I am trying to talk to you this morning about the very fabric of your country, for I believe, men, that the people of America face today the gravest crisis in all their history. I have never been a clamity howler. I am a conservative of the conservative and I have been a sort of high-priest of 'Let well enough alone.' That is what is happening to us today. We are not guarding our liberties. We are not watching our president. We are not caring about the law, and the result is what? The great aggregations of wealth are destroying the middle classes and driving the middle classes from their proud positions. The farmer today is half peon. The handwriting is already on the wall for the small merchant. While we are busy here and there with our little selfish schemes, our liberties are in danger. Lord Baron thought that a man had to be put in jail to appreciate life, he thought you had to take his liberty away from him before he knew what it was—when he wrote 'Eternal spirit of the chainless mind, liberty, brightest in dungeons thou art.'

Greatest Crisis Faced

"I have said to you that I think America faces today, if we go on like we have, if we disregard the law as we have disregarded it, if we let somebody else do the voting as we have been doing it, the greatest crisis that she has ever faced. I want you to think about these things. They have not been said here in the spirit of politics or anything of that sort. What is the remedy for all of these things? Is it in my speaking here? No. Is it in the argument of the statesman from the platform? No. I want you to go home and remember that there is no constitution, that there is no bill of rights, that there is no law except that constitution and that law that is written in the hearts of the people. The law is just a book. You can throw the book out of the window, as many a man does do. There is but one remedy and that remedy must begin with you and in your home and mind. The remedy is for people to turn back to that great thing that they have neglected, the law which I have not spoken about yet.

"We have neglected the law. We have neglected the constitution. We have neglected politics. We have neglected to vote, but these are just fruits that grow on a tree that has sprung up in our garden, and the very thing that our people want to do, and the thing that they must do or perish, is to turn their faces toward religion. No people were ever great or successful in the long run who turned away from God. It might be that in this age, this generation, my view is old-fashioned and out of date, but I am saying to you this morning with all the strength I have, that unless we turn to religion, turn to the old Book in the cause of righteousness, we will lose our liberty, lose our constitution and lose all that we hold dear politically and perhaps socially.

"I once thought about going out and talking to the people of Texas about their politics. I talked to the president of the C. I. A. about it down at Denton. I told him I doubted that it would do any good and he said 'No, it wouldn't.' What else did that man say to me? He said 'you couldn't get a beggar's dozen to hear you unless you were running for office.' That's what that man said, and it may be true. That's the reason that our politics is on such a low basis. Why in lots of communities they tell me they are not for anybody. They just make up their minds who they don't want to have. The old-time people were worse than we are in many respects, and yet they did give attention to religion and to their laws and their constitutions. Now, I am not disposed to be fussy at anybody this morning for I think most men are doing the best they can. It gives me great pleasure to say that most of the people with whom I come in contact are beating along the best way they can, but they and myself as well are like that fellow who was sent to watch a prisoner in the Bible and the prisoner got away. When they asked him about it, he said 'While I was busy here and there, he was gone.'"

The Germans, who seem to be sending to this country their directors and stars after it is apparent the film industry in Europe is not a howling success or able to compete with America, is trying another change which may seem ludicrous to the American film fan.

Many folks have seen or heard of "Anybody Here Seen Kelly." In Germany the title is changed to "Hat Jemand Den Klinen Kohn Gesehen?" All of which indicates that "little Kohn" is taken to be the English equivalent of the English Kelly. Which leads to the question, will they or wont they be up against it when they try to find a name for the present "The Cohens and the Kelleys in Paris"?

KAYGRAMS

Our people used to take a whole lot more interest and pride in citizenship than they do now, especially in voting.

We've become so strong in this country that we think the government can run itself and is an automatic machine.

What we want is a big, strong law.

I want to proclaim to you this morning from the house tops that every community in this land has got as much prohibition as it wants.

The great aggregations of wealth are destroying the middle classes and driving the middle classes from their proud positions. The farmer of today is half peon.

PACKARD RAPS BLIND JUSTICE

Courts and Lawyers Get Blame For Unrest

"Crooked politicians 'can steal this country blind,' go scot free and enjoy the respect and confidence of decent people, while a man was sent to the penitentiary for stealing bread a few days ago to satisfy the knawing hunger of his starving children," said Dr. Paul Henry Packard in his sermon Sunday night at the Highland Heights Christion church, on "The Cause of America's Unrest."

"You let this nation have a little more of the kind of justice we read about in this morning's peper and tides of terror will be turned loose on this entire nation. The inefficiency of our courts is the greatest incentive to crime we have today, and their handling of cases is certainly a suggestion to the young men who want to steal, to do so on a big scale to assure acquittal.

"Another cause of our unrest," Dr. Packard said, "is the criminal lawyer. I do not mean the lawyer who specializes in criminal law, but rather the lawyer who is a worse criminal than the criminal whose henchmen he is. I a mnot denouncing them as murderers or claim they practice hijacking with gun or bludgeon, but I do claim that by the reprehensible tactics, too many lawyers are creating an atmosphere in which the crime of our day is thriving. When a lawyer says that for $100 he will guarantee the bootlegger his case will never come up for trial, he becomes one of the most sinister figures in modern society, the exponent of a vicious civic life and a 'legalized menace to which society is unworthily bound.' It is no credit to any lawyer whenever a crime is committed on a large scale to become the certified legal but immoral sanctuary in which the criminal takes refuge.

"Another cause for our unrest is the political grafter. He is the octopus of politics, a half revealed and half concealed monster creeping through our corporate slime, grabbing everything as he goes and deceiving the people. He makes "serfs" of his party followers by shackling the free use of the mind in political matters and endeavors to force a so-called party pledge on an unsuspecting public which means "supporting the party candidate" regardless of who he is, what he stands for or whether he stands for anything at all."

BROWN HEADS COURT DOCKET

Jail-Breaker to Trial On Robbery Charge

Henry "Boone" Brown, one of eight men to escape from the county jail here several weeks ago, will go on trial Monday morning at 9 o'clock in 20th district court, charged with robbery by assault and violence and robbery with firearms, E. F. Fruechte, assistant district attorney, announced Sunday.

Brown is the second of the four recaptured jailbreakers to face charges of robbery in connection with the break from the county jail. Claude Reeves, tried in 30th district court last week, was found not guilty. Should a charge of not guilty be returned Monday against Brown, it is likely that similar charges filed against the remaining two men involved in the jailbreak will be dropped.

In addition to the trial of Brown, 17 other cases are set for call in the 30th district court Monday.

Among these are Nick Schenck, charged with the manufacture, possession of equipment for manufacture and possession of whiskey for sale.

Eula Mae Harrison, negro woman, charged with theft over $50, in connection with the loss of diamonds, later recovered, belonging to C. E. McCutcheon several weeks ago, also will face trial Monday, Mr. Fruechte said.

Standardization of Electricity

LONDONERS have sixty different electric light and power plants to deal with and thirty-nine different kinds of power. They have a wide—or wild—assortment of voltages and frequencies. Light globes and appliances require different types of plugs. Confusion results, and industry is held back.

America is twenty-five years or more ahead of Europe in prosperity and living conditions largely because of the standardization of electricity. Cross-country lines supply the small town with electric service equal to that of the large town—and vastly superior to that of foggy London.

Texas has electric service equal to the best available anywhere in the world—in no small part due to the development program of this company which has built miles of transmission lines to meet requirements of the present and immediate future.

Loving Cup Contest Ends May 14; Last Issue May 21

All Clippings Must Be Received in Office by 6 P. M. May 16

It is time to put on that last drive and make your final attempts to win that silver loving cup. The Junior Record News is giving to the boy or girl in Wichita Falls school who has the most signed items printed by the end of the school year.

School will be out May 25 in most of the city schools. Saint Mary's will be finally closed May 30.

Last Issue May 21.

Taking this into consideration, The Junior Record News has decided to print its last issue of this school season on Monday morning, May 21. Billy Brown at Saint Mary's was quite anxious about it a week or so ago, so this will answer his question.

Now about that loving cup and how it will be awarded. Here is information on it.

In accordance with the rules printed in the early issues of The Junior Record News, the cup will be given to the boy or girl who has the most items printed within these few rules. Each item, in order to count, must have the printed signature of the writer along with it. Only those that are clipped and all together will count. So, if you haven't clipped your items, do so now, and get them all together so that they will be easy for you to handle when it is time to hand them in.

Contest Closes May 14.

Then, the boy or girl who has the most stories or items of any kind, will win the cup for himself and in that way bring honor to his school.

The issue of The Junior Record News dated May 14 is the last issue that counts for the cup. As soon as you get your copy of that issue, clip your stories and bring them all right down to the office of the paper in a sealed envelope so they can't get lost. Count them, and have the number of your clippings written on the envelope.

Clippings in May 16.

These must all be in the office by 6 o'clock Wednesday evening, May 16. Those received later than that date will not count, so don't be late.

The winner will be announced in the issue of May 21, the last issue of the school year.

All items printed since The Junior Record News was first started will count in this contest if you send them in. If you have been lagging, now is the time to speed up and make that last hard effort to do your best work.

Many times, little stories have not been printed because there were other stories on the same subject, or because the work was not as good as it should have been. The Junior Record News wants to print all of your news, but it wants you to do good work. For this reason, only those showing the hardest work have been printed in order to encourage the workers. It is not always the best work that wins but the work which shows the boys and girls are trying.

NEW FLAG IS UP AT BOWIE

Mothers' Club Surprises School

A big, new, wooly flag now floats proudly over the Bowie school.

For several weeks the boys and girls have worried and worked with their old flag. It has been mended and fixed and repaired so much that no one knew what to do with it.

Then the mothers of Bowie pupils got busy.

Bowie was as proud of its flag as any other thing in the world. The mothers couldn't stand to have the boys and girls feel badly over the flag, so very quietly they raised a fund and bought a new one.

Last week Mrs. Ware, the principal, could hardly keep the secret. She wanted so badly to tell everyone about the flag, but it was supposed to remain a secret until it was raised.

Frank Creighton, Boy Scout executive, sent a color guard of scouts to the school for the celebration Friday. William Mowrey and Winifred Wells were on the job, for they form the Bowie color guard in charge of the flag.

Many visitors were present Friday at the flag raising, including as many of the mothers as could get there. Others invited included Mrs. T. B. Smith, Miss Ross Harkin and Miss Mary Sutherland of the Red Cross.

Bowie says the flag will float every good day now until school is out for the summer vacation.

Corner For Poets

MOUNT VERNON BELLS.

Where Potomac's stream is flowing,
Virginia's border through
Where the white sailed skies are going,
Sailing on the ocean blue;
Hushed the sound of mirth and singing—
Silent, everywhere—
While the solemn bells are rining
By the tomb of Washington.
Tolling and kneeling
(CHORUS)
With a sad, sweet sound;
O'er the waves the tones are swelling
By Mount Vernons sacred ground

Long ago the warrior slumbered—
Our country's father slept;
Long amongs the angels numbered
They the hero soul have kept:
But the children's children love
And his name revere;
So, where willows wave about him,
Sweetly, still his kneel you hear,
(CHORUS)
Tolling and knelling
O'er the waves the tones are swelling
By Mount Vernon's sacred ground.

Sail, oh ships across the billows,
And bear the story far,
How he sleeps beneath the willows—
Toll, while sweet adieus are swelling.
Till you come again,
He within the hearts is dwelling
Of his loving country men.
(CHORUS)
Tolling and kneeling
With a sad, sweet sound:
O'er the waves the tones are swelling
By Mount Vernon's sacred ground.
From magazine, Elmer Lee Fondren, H. 6, Sam Houston.

THE SUNSET.

How beautiful in the sunset
In the western sky roving
With the little stripes of violet
In the yellow is woven.

How beautiful are the tints of evening
When the birds have gone to the nest,
When the pretty clouds are leaving
And the children have gone to rest.

Oh who is there in the whole wide world
That does not love the sunset
To it a man, a boy or a girl
That does not love the stripes of violet
Margaret Manz, H. 6, Carrigan school.

MISSED

I
Dear little school mates,
A vacant chair sits at the table,
Which I am so sorry
I surely cannot relable.

II
But take this word,
When you have a mother,
Be very kind and gentle,
For you'll never have another.

III
See? If your mother should die
and leave you,
It would be too late to worry,
But take this word to remember
She is gone, and you'll be weary.

Comes once again in warm Springtime.

DAY

Oh, the morn is fair and beautiful
And the dew is on the ground,

Sing a song of English,
Dont's and doesn't's, too,
Be careful how you use them,
And what you make them do.

I
I'm as happy as can be,
I work just like a little bee,
How they work,
And they just can't shirk.

II
Bee's are very useful things,
But oh! how they sting,
When we visit in a field.
And how we can hear them shrill.

III
But now we have to leave the field,
And we can't hear them shrill,
We're home again,
And oh! how tired we are,
By Elsie Herring, high fifth, room 25, Crockett school.

Original Tales

CHERRY TREE CHOPPER.

George Washington was a little boy who chopped down the cherry tree. His father said "George who cut down the tree?" He said: "Father I did it with my little hatchet."

He also was a good general in the war. He was never shot but two of their horses were shot from under him.

He was a surveyor when he was 14. He could throw a stone across the Rappahannock river.

While he was reading one day undre a tree, watching a bunch of boys wrestle, the champion came up to George and said "do you want to How beautiful is the sunset

George said "yes," and he threw the champion. — Odell Morris, H. 6, Huey school.

I'M A WILD DUCK

I am a wild duck. I fly from place to place. I eat worms, wheat, grass, frogs and bugs.

Usually I live in a lake or a pond. I have a green head and am white and gray. I stay in the southern countries where it is warm.

In the winter time I live mostly on insects.

The boys and girls always try to catch or kill me, and then they use me for food.

The most pleasant hours of my life are spent on a lake or a pond on rainy days in swimming about in the water.—Horace Cobb, Alamo, low third.

The Troubled Hen

The most uneasy hen I have ever seen was a large, gray, motherly looking bird that I saw one day last April.

She had a brood of a dozen little ones, four chicks and eight active ducklings.

There was a good sized pond near the barn. She and her little brood of young ones went down by the pond to get them some worms.

But the first thing she knew her eight queer looking babies were running straight to the pond. Of course, she only thought they were running to get a drink, so she was a little ways back picking up bits of seeds and things.

All at once she heard a splash in the water.

She looked up and saw her eight queer looking babies in the water.

The old mother hen clucked to the top of her voice and ran straight to the pond.

Of course she would not go into the water but the only thing she did was to run around the pond, calling her babies, but they would not pay any attention to her.

At last the eight queer babies came out with their feathers all wet. They came close to their mother to get warm.

But the mother hen would have nothing to do with them.

She turned and walked away as if nothing had ever happened.—Kathlyn Blanchard, high fifth, Huey.

EASTER STORY

Louise Conn Tells of First Easter

On the first day of the week after Christ was crucified, Mary and two other women went to his tomb. They took spices to annoint His body. On the way they were wondering who would roll away the stone from before the tomb.

When they arrived they saw an angel, and he said to them "Do you seek Christ? He is not here, but He is risen. Go tell His disciples He has gone before them into Galilee as He said."

When the women told them He had risen they did not believe it.
