Lyntegar Plans Show, Program At Annual Meet

Something new will be seen for the first time in this area when the members and friends of the Lyntegar Electric Cooperative and the Poka-Lambro Rural Telephone Cooperative gather for their annual membership meeting on Tuesday, August 12. The combined Annual Meeting and Electric Fair will be presented by the Cooperatives on that date at the City Park in Tahoka, complete with circus atmosphere, prizes, a continuous program of entertainment and a big exposition of electrical home and farm equipment.

Under three big tents, the regular business meetings this year will be combined with displays and demonstrations of the latest electrical equipment, plus a troupe of professional entertainers headed by Bozo the Great, famous circus clown.

One of the headline attractions of the show will be the amateur talent contest, which is sponsored on a statewide basis by a major appliance company. The contest is open to all in this area, and the winner here will receive a radio and will automatically enter competition for a valuable state winner prize to be awarded in the summer.

The Electric Fair portion of the show is brand new this year and is co-sponsored by the Lyntegar Electric Cooperative and the Texas Power Reserve, state association of electric cooperatives. Tahoka is one of seventeen locations in Texas which will have the Fair this year.

The appliance exhibits and a continuous program of entertainment will fill the morning, with registration beginning at 9:30 a. m. Free barbecue will be served during the noon hour.

After lunch will come the regular business session of the Cooperatives, with the reports on operations during the past year and the election of directors.

Spray Equipment Bought By City

The City of Tahoka on Monday put its big new jeep-mounted fogging machine into operation spraying to kill flies and mosquitoes, and by Tuesday night the town had been covered.

Herman Heck, sanitary councilman, and Pat Hines, city superintendent, told The News they have hopes of spraying the entire town once every week or two during the rest of the summer.

The new fogging equipment was bought at a cost of $1,250.00, and is the same type being used in Lubbock and other cities of the area.

Cost of each spraying operation is about $50.00, Mr. Hines states. Covering Tahoka requires 4 gallons of chlordane, 100 gallons of diesel oil, and 16 gallons of gasoline.

It is hoped that the City can now control the fly and mosquito menace to the health of Tahoka people in a better manner.

Mr. Hines warns that children should not follow the spray machine either on foot or on bicycles. The insect poison is not harmful to humans, but if the practice of children following the machine in the fog is continued some child may be run over by some motorist who drives into the fog.

Haralson Calls Football Meet

Head Coach Bill Haralson is asking all Tahoka High School boys who expect to report for the 1952 Bulldog football team to meet with him in the gymnasium on Monday night, August 11, at 8:00 p. m.

Coach Haralson and the newly elected assistant coach, Bill Sharpley of Texas Tech and Corsicana, will attend the Coaches' School of the Texas High School Coaches Association in Fort Worth August 4-8.

Workouts will not start until the opening day of school, September 1, but the meeting August 11 is for the purpose of making plans for the coming training season.

Most of the starters were lost from the District 6-AA district championship team of 1951, but Coach Haralson expects to have a willing though inexperienced bunch on hand for this fall's team. Large Crowd At Election Party

Last Saturday's Democratic Primary election machinery was possibly the most efficiently operated of any here in many, many years.

Complete returns from all county voting precincts had been reported at 10:35 p. m., the earliest in many years.

County Chairman Bill Strange, Jr., says the feat was performed through the fine cooperation and the efficient work of the election officials in each precinct. The largest box in the county, North Tahoka, had been counted and reported at 8:30 p. m.

As has been the custom for many years, L. C. Haney furnished the bulletin board, on which was posted the returns as fast as they were received, and a large crowd was present for the election party.

Mr. Strange asks The News to thank all the helpers, election officials, Mr. Haney, and W. B. Slaton of the First National Bank—the latter for furnishing the space and adding machines in the bank for assimilating the figures.

ODDS AND ENDS

(BY E. I. THE ELDER)

Last week, folks, I attended the Democratic National Convention in Chicago, practically the whole week through. And I attended it without even leaving my home. Yes, and I am sure that I heard more of the preceedings and knew more about what was going on than did most of the delegates on the floor of the convention hall, or amphitheater. I say that for the reason that not only could I hear the bedlam of noise and confusion that was going on almost continually on the floor of the convention, but I had the privilege of hearing frequent reports and announcements by the radio news hounds and commentators from their private and practically noiseless quarters up on the second floor. Hundreds of thousands of people, possibly millions of them, all over the United States and some in foreign countries, had television sets in their homes by means of which they could see many of the activities of delegates and others on the floor of the convention and on the speaker's platform.

I did not have a television set but I did sit by my radio most of the time when the convention was in session. And thus, through means of millions of radios and hundreds of thousands of television sets, the masses of the people throughout the United States were able to follow the proceedings of the convention much more thoroughly and more understandingly than the people right there on the convention floor.

We have seen no recent figures as to the number of telephones, radios, or television sets in the United States as compared with the number in other countries, but we have an idea that these almost equal in number those of all the rest of the countries of the world put together. These agencies of communication together with the numberless newspapers and magazines that are published weekly and the countless picture shows that are operating every day and night have made it possible for our people to be the best informed and most democratic people on the face of the earth. And that is one of the reasons why the United States has become the leader among all the nations of the world. And that is the reason why we can have the greatest political conventions in the world here in our country without any rioting or bloodshed. Both the Democratic National Convention held last week and the Republican National Convention held two weeks earlier were great examples of democracy in action, and we can be just as sure as the sunrise that whichever party is successful next November the other will yield to it the reins of government for the next four years.

* * * * *

It was not our privilege to hear so much of the proceedings of the Republican convention but we did hear portions of quite a number of its sessions. We wish to state that in spite of the rantings of a few damagogues in both parties, and in spite of the tendency on the part of the leaders to exaggerate the good record and the high purposes of their own party and to intemperately magnify and criticize the faults and failures of the opposing party, yet it is my conviction that each party has in it today more men of ability, integrity, and high purpose than in almost any other period of our history By what I saw and heard from them and about them I was made to feel a new pride in our country and a new sense of security as to its future.

I should like to say, too, that my opinion as to some of the great leaders in both parties have undergone a change by reason of my "attendance" upon these two great conventions. I want to give a few shining examples. One of these was Vice President Albin W. Barkeley. To be frank, I had never had a very high opinion of Mr. Barkeley. I had regarded him as something of a swashbuckler a sort of glamour man, who liked to go all the gaits and then pose in the limelight as a great statesman and a very important personage, But I saw him tried at this convention. A group of New Yorker labor leaders, led by Averell Harriman's supporters, came to Vice President Barkeley, who was one of the leading candidates at that time for the Presidential nomination, and told him that their organization could not support him, giving as their reason that he was too old. Feeling that he could not win with the labor leaders against him, Barkeley announced his withdrawal from the race. When John L. Lewis of the Automobile Workers Union heard about it, he denounced those labor leaders but it was impossible then to get Barkeley back into the running. But without notes Barkeley came before the convention and made one of the greatest extemporaneous speeches I ever heard. It was a dramatic situation, and Barkeley fully measured up to the occasion. I think that the speech which he made was the most dramatic and electrifying speech that has been made in any political convention since Bryan made his "Cross Of Gold" speech in the Democratic convention held in Chicago in 1896.

* * * * *

If Paul Douglas' voice had not become husky in the delivery of his speech on Korea, that speech would have been one of the most convincing and effective made during the convention. It was a true and powerful statement of facts regarding the war in Korea, and he tore the veil of misinformation and false charges from the faces of hypocritical politicians who were and have been representing that war as an unnecessary war brought on by the mistakes of the Democrats. His speech was a powerful arraignment of certain Republican leaders. But on Friday night Douglas almost spoiled the good reputation by the part he played in the Kefauver stunt.

Adlai Stevenson, governor of Illinois, welcomed the delegates to Chicago on the first day of the convention, in a speech that won my heart. I do not know yet what religious denomination he belongs to, but he evidenced a degree of humbleness and humility and devotion to the teachings of the Bible that have been altogether too rare among political leaders in recent years. And then at a late hour on Friday night, after he had been nominated on the third ballot, which later was made unanimous, he again spoke, declaring that he had not sought and did not want the nomination, because he shrank from the heavy responsibilities and paraphrased the prayer of Jesus in Gethsemane when he lifted his soul to God and said: "O my Father, if it be possible let this cup pass from me; nevertheless, not as I will but as thou wilt.' And then, as a closing promise, he declared it to be his purpose to "do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with my God."

It has been charged that Stevenson had himself been tied up with some of the big gambling interests in Chicago. I think that those who make these charges must have Stevenson mixed up with some other individual. If it is true, then I must say that during this convention and immediately preceding it, Stevenson was play the the part of the most despicable hypocrite that ever became the nominee of any great party for the Presidency in this country. Furthermore, his well authenticated record as governor of Illinois writes him down as a great reform governor—a governor who had the honesty, the courage, and the patriotism to fight grafters and corrupt interests in putting over his program of service to the people of his state. He cleaned up the State Commerce Commission, which was in politics and was said to be reeking in graft. He put it on a non-political basis. The state public school system had become very inefficient—starved out. He increased state school funds from 30,000,000 to $60,000,000 over the protests of powerful financial interests. He inaugurated a great road-building campaign by insisting on a raise in the gasoline tax and in the license fees on commercial trucks. The highways of Illinois had become about the worst in the country, it was claimed, and by his fight against powerful interests he succeeded in providing funds sufficient to make the Illinois roads among the best in the country. A part of this time he had a Democratic legislature to help but also a part of the time a majority of the legislature was Republican. He seemed to get the support of a majority of both parties.

About the biggest spider in Stevenson's coffee, as we see it, is the fact that he was hand-picked for the Presidency by Harry Truman.

I wish that Harry Truman had stayed out of it. I think just as good results could have been obtained if he stayed out of it. One of the greatest loads that Stevenson is going to have to carry in this campaign is Harry Truman. He is likely to prove a millstone around the nominee's neck.

* * * * *

Truman also hand-picked the Vice-Presidential nominee. On the surface that was the work of Stevenson, but everybody knows that Stevenson announced his choice after a long conference with Harry Truman. Earlier in the night, soon after Stevenson had won the nomination, he came to the amphitheater to accept it, but he was accompanied by Truman. The President took great pains at that time to impress upon the convention the fact that Stevenson was his own begotten political son, and he made a fighting speech for the nominee. He indulged in the use of many cute and cutting phrases slashing right and left at the Republican party and its nominees, and almost every sentence brought applause from the delegates. But I think that many of them did not really relish the part which Truman was taking in the proceedings. In fact some of them were boiling hot Word was sent later in the night that Senator Sparkman of Alabama was Stevenson's choice for second place on the ticket and the convention met the next morning and nominated him by acclamation.

President Truman and his rubber-stamp followers evidently thought that they were accomplishing a great feat by putting this Southerner on the ticket with Stevenson. But Southerners generally gave this nomination faint praise and we doubt if it brings much weight to the ticket. Asked his opinion, Governor Shivers of Texas reminded his inquisitor of the fact that Sparkman had fought Texas on the "tidelands" issue, on his advocacy of federal funds for state schools, and on so-called fair deal proposals. He let it be known that Texas could not be enthusiastic for Sparkman. If those northern politicians expect

New Workers Are Eligible For S. S.

Many newly covered workers who were brought under social security on January 1, 1951, are now eligible for benefits for the first time, provided their earnings have been properly reported. Included in the newly covered groups are regularly employed domestic and farm workers, certain State and local government employees, employees of certain non-profit organizations, and most self-employed individuals.

Workers who are already age 65 or over, and those who will reach age 65 before July 1, 1954, need only six quarters of coverage in order to qualify for old-age and survivors benefits in the event of retirement from employment or self-employment.

If you are 65 years of age or nearing that age, and plan to retire soon, consult your social security field office for official information about your benefit rights. Or ask for a copy of Booklet No. 35, "Your New Social Security," which is available at any social security office. This booklet explains your rights to old-age benefit payments.

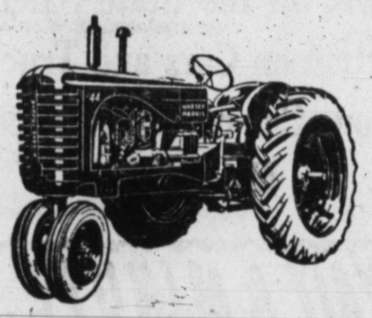

Mr. Gerald L. Schantz from the Lubbock Social Security Office will be in Tahoka on August 6 at 9:00 a. m. He will be at the Post Office at that time to assist persons who wish to file claims for benefits or who wish other information about Social Security.

DUNAGAN WRITES THE LYNN COUNTY NEWS:

Three weeks ago I placed an ad in the classified column of your paper that I would trade two years of courteous, impartial service for 800 votes. The voters said "No." 773 votes were enough, which I gladly and proudly accepted. I would be ungrateful, indeed, if I did not thank the voters from the depths of my heart for the trade they gave me.

Please let me further state that I love Lynn County and its people because they have been good to me and mine. Just before Christmas, 1929, I underwent a major operation. I was very low at Christmas, my wife was with me. We had 2 little girls and a little boy at home, some grocery merchants and our beloved Mrs. Gaignat sent lots of candy, fruits, nuts and toys out to those little ones Christmas Eve. We had some 3 or 4 bales of cotton in the field, and our farm neighbors gathered that cotton with out cost. Now, look what you did for me in Saturday's election.

In closing let me say that I shall endeavor, by the help of the good Lord, to live in and out of office in such a manner that you will never have cause to regret what you have done for me and mine.

Thanks a million.

Soil Service To Be Streamlined

A streamlining of field operations to attain greater efficiency in helping farmers was announced today by Paul H. Walser, State Conservationist of the Soil Conservation Service for Texas.

Under the realignment, now being put into effect throughout the state, the position of "district conservationist" is eliminated and a new position of "area conservationist' is set up.

"In spite of the 57 district conservationists that we have had in the state, we will have 25 area conservationists," Walser explained, pointing out that the term "district conservationist" was often associated by the public with soil conservation districts which are independent sub-divisions of state government.

MRS. JASPER IS STILL DRIVING HER TRACTOR

W. S. Jasper of New Home was in Wednesday to settle up for his News subscription, and stated that they have moved to their place two miles north of New Home. They formerly lived west of New Home, but they have contracted to sell that place.

He states that Mrs. Jasper is still driving her tractor when necessary. She is probably the oldest woman in the country who operates a tractor and enjoys doing so.

The Jaspers have three irrigation wells, and he reports that crops are certainly fine this year.

Mr. and Mrs. George Nixon spent last wek end in Sweetwater visiting friends. He says that one can not appreciate the fine crops of this area until he sees the desolation below the caprock. From Big Spring to Sweetwater, there are absolutely no crops and all vegetation apparently is dead or dying. At Sweetwater, residents are not permitted to water lawns at all, although they may use water on their trees on Sunday afternoons.

Something new has hit the county that may prove a boon to farmers—the mechanical bug catcher.

Rollin McCord has been demonstrating such a machine the past several days, and a News writer saw it in operation Wednesday in a field west of Tahoka. The machine definitely catches the insects from the cotton. After one round through the field, a large number of bollworms and fleahoppers and a few leafworms were found in the sack.

Some believe that the new machine will take the place of poisoning, and that it will do the job in a more economical manner.

A blast of air from a high pressure fan, driven by the tractor belt pulley, is directed through the cotton, taking the bugs with it up a chute into the bag. The blast is sufficient to dislodge any and all kinds of bugs from the cotton, so it makes no difference what kind of bugs, worms, millers, moths, and aphids, or what have you, they all go with the wind into the bag.

McCord believes that the machine catches 75 percent of the bugs on the cotton. After catching the bugs in the four bags of the machine, ladybugs may be allowed to fly away and then gasoline may be sprinkled over the residue to kill the harmful insects.

Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Kent of Madisonville were here from Friday until Tuesday visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Dunagan.

They also attended Sacred Harp singings at Athens and Canton while away. The weather was extremely hot, although some showers fell over the areas they visited.

A Word To The Voters:

I sincerely appreciate the vote and help given me in the first primary in my race for Sheriff of Lynn county.

Now that I am in the run-off primary, I wish to ask your careful consideration of my candidacy. I want and need your help and vote, and I assure you I will make you an honest and conscientious public official, and to give the job everything I've got, if elected.

I shall continue to conduct a clean and honorable campaign. I hope to see everyone personally, if possible, before the election. In the meantime, I invite an investigation om my character, honesty, integrity, and other qualifications.

B. M. (Ben) JAMES
Candidate For—
Sheriff of Lynn County

TO THE VOTERS OF — PRECINCT FOUR:

To everyone that voted for me I want to say thank you. To the one who gave their untiring support I am grateful and to all the people thanks for being so nice to me during the campaign. I enjoyed making new acquaintances and the nice visits in your homes. I will do my very best to merit the confidence you have shown me.

And, Dick, thank you for a clean campaign. While I am proud of having the confidence of the majority of the voters, somehow, somewhere inside me, I take no glory in having defeated you.

So, to all, my sincere thanks.

Odds & Ends

the nomination of Sparkman to go very far in healing the wounds they have inflicted on the South during and just preceding this convention, we are afraid that they may be sorely disappointed in November.

* * * * *

The convention had hardlly gotten under way until Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., of New York campaign manager for Averell Harriman of that state as a candidate for President, was on the floor of the convention urging the inclusion of an FEPC plank in the platform with teeth in it regardless of the wishes of the South, insisting on a loyalty pledge as a prerequisite to a seat in the convention, and insisting that states that had not taken the loyalty pledge, such as South Carolina, Virginia, and Louisiana should be denied a seat in the convention. And, on the first vote, a resolution to exclude the state of Virginia from participation in the convention because of the refusal of the delegates from that state to sign any such pledge, was adopted. Then wiser hands of the North evidently saw how foolish it was for upstarts like young F. D. R., Jr., and that radical labor leader Averell Harriman to succeed in reading out of the party such rock-ribbed Democratic states as Virginia, South Carolina and probably others, when every vote that could be obtained would likely be needed in November to win over Eisenhower and the Republicans. So, Illinois, first I believe, and then other Northern states decided to back-track on that proposition and so on the next day voted overwhelmingly for the seating of these Southern delegates. Thereby F. D. R., Jr., Averell Harriman, and practically the whole New York delegation had been dealt an ignominious defeat and given a significant rebuke, but not until their stinging shafts had already sunk deep into the hearts of many an old Southern Democrat. That cooked Harriman's goose so far as his ambitions to become the Democratic nominee were concerned.

* * * * *

Then F. D. R., Jr., and his gang adopted another scheme. We don't know who instigated it, whether it was F. D. R., Jr., Harriman et al. of New York, or Kefauver and his followers from Tennessee, California, and other states, but the first thing we knew was that a coalition had been attempted by the Harriman and Kefauver forces to stop Stevenson. California was the hot-bed of Kefauver sentiment in the West and Northwest and another one of the Roosevelt boys, James, was their leader.

And here, we want to stop to say that Kefauver's tactics won him no friends in the convention. Probably it was in order to gain time so as to enable him to organize more thoroughly his forces to crystalize sentiment in his favor, but the frequency with which his supporters demanded a roll call of the delegates as the vote of the states was being taken finally became very exasperating to those who wished to get on with the work of the convention. This was the more especially provoking since practically every roll call thus demanded had tallied in almost every instance with the report originally given by the chairman of the delegation. Another thing that must have disgusted many of the listeners throughout the United States was the fact that practically every Kefauver man announcing his vote on these roll calls insisted on making a speech for his candidate before announcing his vote. Most of them were very blatant and self-righteous announcements. I got disgusted, folks, I got disgusted.

Another thing that showed ill-breeding, it seemed to me, was the fact that three times during the convention Kefauver attempted to crash the convention while it was engaged in its regular order of business, and seriously interrupted the proceedings and killed time. In other words he was conducting his own personal campaign right on the floor of the convention to the detriment of the work of the convention and utterly disregardful of the rights of other candidates. All that ballyhoo won him nothing.

* * * * *

His crowning offense came just as the third ballot was getting well under way, when, in company with Senator Paul Douglas of Illinois, he came pompously marching down the central aisle to the speakers stand, to the wonder and consternation of most of the delegates and to all who had not been made wise as to his intentions. His scheme was to announce his withdrawal from the Presidential race in favor of Douglas and then Dauglas immediately was to withdraw in favor of Stevenson, and thus Kefauver would reap the honor of having effected Stevenson's nomination, expecting as a result of this coup to be made the nominee for the Vice Presidenty. But shrewd old Sam Rayburn, who was presiding, must have suspected the scheme, for he met the couple at the top of the steps leading up to the platform, listened for scarcely a momonet, then brusquely informed them, it was later reported, that no person had ever heretofore interrupted a roll call to make any kind of an announcement and that he was not going to permit anything of the kind in this convention and curtly invited them to have seats back on the rear edge of the platform. And there they sat until that roll call was completed, and Stevenson lacked only three votes of having the required number to nominate. States then began to change their votes to Stevenson, and soon he had a vast majority of them. Stevenson was the nominee, and Kefauver sat on the platform red-faced, with no more chance to win the second place on the ticket than a treed coon in a brushy hollow in Tennessee.

* * * * *

This has run into so many words already that I was about to forget to mention Senator Russell. Well, he conducted himself as a dignified gentleman through out the proceedings and apparently made many friends throughout the nation in addition to his Southern friends. And he received far more ballots on all roll calls than I thought that he possibly could get. A strong man is Senator Russell of Georgia.

* * * * *

Able and patriotic governors, senators, congressmen, and private citizens from many states attended this convention, as many of the same kind also attended the recent Republican convention, and we must say that Illinois had her share. One of the very finest speeches that was made during the Republican convention was that made by Senator Dirksen of Illinois. With men of the ability of Dirksen and Paul Douglas, one a Republican and the other a Democrat, in the United States Senate, we would say that Illinois is certainly well represented in that body.

Now, will Stevenson become President? Only time can tell.

Excess Fat Is Health Threat

AUSTIN, —Are you packing too much fatty beef for the size of your frame? If so you're probably one of the 100,000 or so Texans contributing to what State Health Officer Geo. W. Cox calls a "significant public health problem."

The number of obese (dangerously overweight) people in the state is growing, the doctor says, and they're laying themselves wide open to trouble.

For instance, if you are carrying too much fatty tissue you're twice as apt to get diabetes, and three times as likely to have heart trouble. Furthermore, if you get arthritis it will hurt you a good deal more because of your obese condition.

Many other conditions are made worse by a person's being too fat.

"Obesity is just as serious a form of malnutrition as starvation in the long run," the health officer will tell you. Ask why some people get fat while some don't and he'll tell you the plain and simple reason is that usually the fat ones eat more than their systems need or want.

"Obesity is exactly the opposite of starvation. Overweight people eat too much. Emaciated people don't eat enough. Both types are malnunourished."

But why do they eat too much?

There may be many causes. The glands may not be working just right. They may be having emotional trouble.

"Dietary habits perhaps established in childhood. Part of the reason might be that an overly full stomach gives them a sense of emotional relief. They might be trying to satisfy an emotional hunger as well as a physical one."

The best way to fight obesity is to cut down the caloric intake, he says. But to do this you've got to have a real desire to have normal weight.

"This means," he explains, "the underlying emotional factors which created the obesity must be corrected by a greater urge, such as avoiding an early death."

When you get this desire you'll be willing to have your doctor prescribe a reducing— diet and medicine if necessary and you will follow his advice.

"If you don't," Dr. Cox cautioned, "you'll probably find an early grave."

Fat people should get a good physical examination by their doctor before they start on a rigid reducing diet.

W. R. Ledbetter is reported to have shown some improvement at Tahoka Hospital, where he is a medical patient.

Stormy Kay Arrington, 4 daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Arrington, underwent minor surgery in Tahoka Hospital this week.

To The Voters of Lynn County:

Thank you for the support and the wonderful cooperation you have given me during my tenure of office. It is my desire to serve you to the best of my ability in the future, as I have tried to do in the past.

"NISBET"

Bug Catcher

"It Puts Them in the Bag"

The Nisbet Bug Catcher is an air blast machine, mounted on the front of the tractor and used with the cultivator. A blast of air from a high pressure fan, driven by the tractor belt pulley, is directed through the cotton, taking the bugs with it up a chute into the bag. The blast is sufficient to dislodge any and all kinds of bugs from the cotton, so it makes no difference what kind of bugs, worms, millers, moths, aphids, or what have you, they all go with the wind into the bag. The infested squares with the boll weevil egg or grub are also taken and put in the bag with the other pests. The principle of the bug catcher makes it indiscriminate in taking the bugs. The farmer need have no concern even after the catch as to what kind he had in the field; he may simply destroy them and produce cotton.

Nisbet Bug Catchers are available in one, two, and four-row sizes, and fitted for all makes and models of row-crop tractors, to operate with the cultivator.

Cooper Is Manager Of Grain Elevator

Andrew Cooper of Brownfield was here Monday, and announced that he would soon take over the management of the Goodpasture Grain Company elevator in Tahoka.

This is the elevator built and operated until last year by Farmers Co-op Association, which last year sold it to Grady Goodpasture Brownfield elevator operator, and A. N. Norman. Mr. Norman has sold his interest in the Tahoka elevator to Goodpasture.

Cooper said the elevator would be ready to accept grain at the opening of the harvest season. He said this elevator will be prepared to accept slightly green grain, as the Goodpasture firm has a dryer at Brownfield where such grain may be processed.

Andrew Cooper was reared in Tahoka, the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Cooper. He bought a farm about a mile southeast of Brownfield 10 or 12 years ago, and for the past six years he has been living on this farm. Incidentally, Andrew says he now has an irrigation well on the place.
