Texas woman dies after fiery delivery

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — A woman lived less than 12 hours after she gave birth by emergency Caesarian section after being burned in an apartment fire that killed her 4-year-old son.

The woman's husband threw their 1-year-old daughter to safety and escaped with minor burns Monday morning while trying to get back into the apartment to help his pregnant wife and son, authorities said.

Brenda Smith, 24, died at 9:11 p.m. Monday at the Parkland Burn Unit in Dallas, hospital officials said. She had suffered third-degree burns over 90 percent of her body, officials said.

Anita Landrum, Mrs. Smith's mother, said the family had lived in the apartment for three months, but planned to move Feb. 1 to an apartment in Fort Worth. Her daughter was eight months pregnant, she said.

The Caesarian section was performed at Arlington Memorial Hospital at 10:06 a.m. Monday, nine minutes after she arrived at the hospital and about 30 minutes after she and her son were pulled from the burning apartment, officials said.

The baby, named Tanya Renee, was in serious to critical condition at John Peter Smith Hospital in Fort Worth. Bryan Smith was pronounced dead at Arlington Community Hospital.

Family members were asleep when fire broke out about 9:30 a.m. in their two-bedroom apartment, authorities said.

Fire officials said they had not determined what caused the fire. Damage was estimated at $100,000 to the structure and $10,000 to the contents. The Smith's first-level apartment at the Meadowbrook Apartments was gutted and two other units received minor smoke and water damage.

Vernon E. Smith, 40, broke out a back window and threw his daughter, Darla, to safety while Mrs. Smith went to search for Bryan, who was sleeping in the other bedroom, said Pat Leaks, a neighbor.

Flames forced him back when Smith tried to re-enter the burning apartment to search for his wife and son, said Arlington Fire Department spokesman David McMullan.

"The mother attempted to grab her son, but the fire and smoke was so intense she couldn't make it back out. The father was burned when he tried to go back in," McMullan said.

Leaks said Smith's wife "was at the front door trying to get out, and he (Smith) told her to come to the back," Leaks said.

Smith wanted his wife to go to the window where he was able to throw his daughter clear of the fire, Leaks said.

Firefighters found the woman and her son lying on the floor of bedroom a few feet from a window. One firefigher suffered minor burns and cuts on his face and arms trying to rescue the mother and another was taken to the hospital for X-rays of a possible back injury.

Mrs. Smith was a telephone room manager for a storm window company. Her husband of six years is an unemployed teacher.

Shultz's first port of call El Salvador

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz today headed for El Salvador, where he is expected to again tell leaders that American military support could be jeopardized if rightist death squad activities are not curbed.

El Salvador is Shultz's first stop of a tour that also includes Venezuela, Brazil, Grenada and Barbados.

All are in varying stages of democratic development but none is in more precarious condition than El Salvador, where officials acknowledge there is little prospect that presidential elections set for March 25 will end four years of civil war. Leftist insurgent groups are boycotting the elections.

Shultz's visit to El Salvador comes at a time when the administration is gearing up for a request to Congress for some $300 million in additional assistance, about equally divided between economic and military aid.

Shultz was to have visited El Salvador last October but postponed the trip because of the bombing of the U.S. Marine headquarters in Beirut. After a stay of about nine hours in El Salvador, Shultz will fly to Venezuela to attend the inauguration of President-elect Jaime Lusinchi on Thursday.

A senior administration official who briefed reporters before the trip said Shultz will clarify once again the administration's view that El Salvador must do more to eliminate rightist death squads.

That same message has been stated publicly over the past two months by U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering and Vice President George Bush.

Shiites ceasing 'accidental' fire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Shiite Moslem militia leaders today ordered their fighters to observe a cease-fire and described as "accidental" the series of battles Monday that killed one U.S. Marine and three Lebanese civilians.

Three other Marines were wounded in the day-long clashes, andspokesmen for the Shiite militia group Amal and at south Beirut hospitals said the Marines' fire killed a 9-year-old girl and two other civilians, and wounded 22 people.

An Amal spokesman said militiamen in Shiite neighborhoods near the Marine base at Beirut's airport were told to "strictly adhere to the ceasefire and refrain from any form of attacks on the Marines."

"Yesterday's collision was accidental, not the result of a particular animosity by either side," said the spokesman at Amal headquarters. "Our men said the Marines fired first and they (the Marines) said they fired because hey were shelled."

"Things have been straightened out mainly through direct communication between the Amal command and the Marine command," said the spokesman, who asked to remain anonymous. The cease-fire took effect Monday night.

Lebanon's state radio said U.S. jets from warships offshore staged reconnaissance runs at dawn today over the city and the surrounding hills, drawing no ground fire.

The Marine who died Monday was the 259th member of the peacekeeping force killed in combat in Lebanon since the Marines were deployed in Beirut in September 1982. His name has been withheld until his family is notified. A Marine guard died in a bombing of the U.S. Embassy last April.

Testimony begins in civil trial on 1978 Lozano death

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A former Ector County constable testified in the Larry Lozano civil trial Monday in federal court that ex-jailer Jackie Perkins was "violent" and a former sheriff had offered him a bribe to leave town.

Jackie Perkins, 32, who denied he is violent, and Randy Tenney, a deputy sheriff when Lozano, 27, died in the Odessa jail on Jan. 22, 1978, are being sued for damages by Lozano's widow, Rufina, and her two sons, Randy Rene, 8, and Lawrence Derek, 12.

Lozano, who allegedly went berserk in the jail and repeatedly rammed his head and body into the steel door and glass porthole of the padded isolation cell, died after eight officers tried to subdue him. None of the officers was indicted by state or federal grand juries. But in a civil rights trial in 1981, the jury had ruled that Perkins and Tenney had "used excessive force" in restraining Lozano but had acted in good faith. A federal appellate court ordered a new trial after it found that the good-faith finding was "in irreconcilable conflict" with the earlier findings of "excessive force."

PATHOLOGICAL reports indicated Lozano had suffered 115 wounds in his 12-day stay in the jail. Lozano had been deemed "emotionally disturbed" and had been treated for a nervous breakdown in August 1977 at a state hospital in Austin. One pathologist said he died of suffocation. Another testified Lozano died of "trauma — injury to the neck."

Former Sheriff Elton Faught, Ector County commissioners and other officials, and those deputies — except for Perkins and Tinney — who tried to subdue a "berserk" Lozano have been removed from the federal suit.

Former constable Leonard Garcia, who is serving a 99-year sentence for a murder last year, accused Faught of offering him the bribe following a news conference in which the sheriff reported Lozano had committed suicide. Later, with the introduction of pathological findings, the sheriff changed his opinion.

Garcia said the sheriff showed him a money-packed envelope; there were no witnesses to the would-be transaction, he said.

" 'I've got 10 grand for you if you would leave the town until this blows over,' " Garcia testified the sheriff told him.

He said he declined the offer.

"I should have arrested him for bribing me," Garcia said. "But I didn't."

Earlier in the trial, Garcia said he was "young and stupid" in 1978 and didn't know the law well enough to make a proper arrest.

Earlier in the trial, the sheriff said he had not tried to bribe anyone.

Science hard at work on genetics

EDITOR'S NOTE: In laboratories across the United States and elsewhere, researchers are gradually bringing humanity's most feared diseases under control. In Part Seven of a 10-part series, AP science writer Paul Raeburn deals with the steady — and sometimes remarkable — progress that has been made.

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Writer

Through the ages, genetic disorders and birth defects have been cloaked in mystery. Doctors tried, when they could, to treat them.

Sadly, many children died. And there was no explanation, no way to tell parents why their children had been born with disease or deformity.

Then, suddenly, the advent of genetic engineering 10 years ago gave scientists a powerful new tool to search for the origin of — and possible solutions for — genetic diseases.

QUIET VICTORIES:
Genetic disorders

It has been a busy and fruitful decade. In many cases, doctors can now predict with great accuracy whether parents are carriers of genetic diseases that might be passed on to their offspring.

Researchers are taking the first tentative steps toward the cure of genetic disease, replacing defective genes with normal ones, or stimulating the body to somehow compensate for genetic defects.

Already, dramatic surgery inside the womb has been used to correct some birth defects before birth. Using ultrasound pictures of the developing fetus to guide them, surgeons have inserted delicate instruments into the uterus to relieve fluid buildup and thus prevent damage to sensitive organs.

While the application of the surgery is necessarily limited, it is a striking example of how drastically medical treatment of birth defects has changed.

In the area of prenatal diagnosis, researchers are on the verge of a major advance that could radically alter the chances of preventing and treating birth defects and genetic diseases.

A new technique known as chorion biopsy will make it possible to diagnose genetic disorders as early as the eighth week of a woman's pregnancy. Now such diagnosis cannot be made until the 20th week.

The currently used technique for prenatal diagnosis is amniocentesis, the withdrawal of a small amount of the fluid surrounding the fetus.

Crusading musician follows girlfriend to life on streets

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Musician Robin Reid lives in an elegant Beverly Hills condominium, but he says he spends much of his spare time on Hollywood streets, trying to convince prostitutes to give up their trade.

"Sex has nothing to do with what I do," said Reid, 31. "I don't feel any more sexual attraction for the hookers than a gynecologist might. I'm just a friend, and they're poor sick people."

Reid says he started his crusade two years ago after his girlfriend returned to the streets — and prostitution.

"We were together five years," Reid told the Los Angeles Times recently. "...We loved each other very much. But then I discovered she'd been a street girl before. She'd been around the block. And she wanted to go back to the street again."

Reid said he tried to talk her out of it, but she refused.

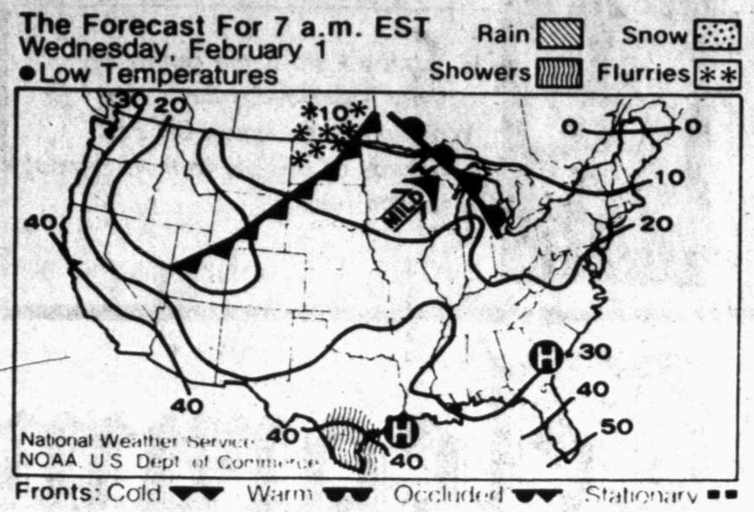

"The last thing she said to me was, 'Go help someone who needs helping. I don't want you. I don't need you.' "

Reid took the advice, embarking on a lonely quest to convince prostitutes to go straight. He says he offers to buy them coffee, take them to hear music and — in the words of one of his songs — to "get back to the sunlit world."

One recent night, Reid says he spotted a pimp slapping a prostitute on a dark side street off Sunset Boulevard. He halted his yellow Volvo, grabbed the woman from her enraged tormentor and drove her to safety.

Showers for South Texas and snow flurries in parts of North Dakota dot a predominately mild forecast, according to the National Weather Service.

Warming trend could continue

A slight warming trend is expected to continue in the Permian Basin, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Tonight and Wednesday fair skies are predicted with lows in the upper 20s and highs in the low 60s. Southwest winds will increase from 5 to 10 mph to 10 to 20 mph.

Monday's high reached 51 degrees, 29 below the record warm in Midland for that date. It was 80 degrees in 1971. The overnight low of 30 was 20 degrees above the record low of 10 set in 1951.

Reagan peddling budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is kicking off his sales campaign for an approximately $925 billion, red-ink budget for the 1985 fiscal year with a White House meeting of Republican legislators.

The budget for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1 will not be submitted to Congress officially until Wednesday, but the president summoned GOP members of the House and Senate today for a discussion of the spending plan which is expected to project a deficit of $180 billion.

While details of the budget have not been revealed publicly by the administration, its outlines have leaked out steadily for the past several weeks, including:

—A request for about $305 billion in military spending authority, about an 18 percent increase from the current authority.

—Startup money for an $8 billion manned space station.

—Net domestic spending cuts of $4 billion to $5 billion.

—Tax increases, through the closing of various loopholes, of about $8 billion.

—More money for the Environmental Protection Agency.

—About a 6 percent increase, about $200 million, in the Justice Department's budget, primarily to strengthen crime fighting activities.

Meanwhile, Reagan's call for bipartisan talks on trimming $100 billion from federal budget deficits remains on hold while congressional Democrats await the details of the budget and any new ideas Reagan has to offer for cutting the record deficits — which are projected to remain at about $200 billion a year without action.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., remained skeptical of Reagan's invitation for talks, which have yet to materialize since last Wednesday when Reagan issued his election-year offer for a bipartisan congressional delegation to discuss deficit reduction measures with White House officials.

No meetings are expected until after the president sends his fiscal 1985 budget to Congress on Wednesday.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Monday that the administration was "prepared to sit down and negotiate" and he insisted the president's offer was "no ploy."

O'Neill, however, said, "He's (Reagan) playing the game of...pass the buck to the group you invite down (to the White House) so it's cleared from your desk."

Asked if he thinks the talks are a "phony trick," O'Neill nodded affirmatively and replied, "My opinion."

O'Neill said Democrats will not be drawing up any plans of their own before they hear specifics.

'Mr. Budget' prods politicians for entries in numbers game

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — At this time of the year in Washington, Pete Modlin is king of the numbers.

He's a bureaucrat who pushes and prods politicians, insisting that they make up their minds, settle their differences, and figure out how much money they want from Congress in the next fiscal year.

He doesn't care what the numbers are, he just needs numbers.

His job is to take federal agency funding requests and do the technical work necessary to fashion the president's new budget, a $900-billion-plus spending proposal.

The 62-year-old Modlin is assistant director for budget review of the federal Office of Management and Budget, a job that pays $67,800 a year. Informally, he's known as Mr. Budget, but his boss, OMB director David Stockman, is the name most associated with the budget.

Modlin says his job — generally 12 hours a day, Monday through Friday, and a few more hours on weekends — is being "production manager" for the budget process.

He makes no policy decisions on whether more money or less should go to the Pentagon or to the food stamp program. Those questions are left to the president and his political appointees.

"The budget is the single, most comprehensive decision-forcing event in the federal government. Nothing else is like it," he says.

He said the budget has taken on more importance in the Reagan administration "because it has been used to change the trend of government, and it is a device for doing that. If one changes the resources going into activities, one can change their trend."

Modlin, who's been the assistant director since 1981, joined the government in 1951 after college — he's got degrees in accounting and economics — and has spent all but a few years, when he worked for the president's Council of Economic Advisers, at the budget office. He's only the fifth person to hold the top numbers job since 1939.

"Pete's role is absolutely indispensable," says budget office spokesman Edwin L. Dale Jr. "Pete is the man in charge of the numbers."

The results of Modlin's work will show up most noticeably on Wednesday when President Reagan submits to Congress his budget outline for the 1985 fiscal year, which starts on Oct. 1.

Five thick documents come out at about the same time to detail, explain and analyze the president's decisions.

AP Laserphoto

Taking federal agency funding requests and fashioning them into a presidential budget is the job of "Mr. Budget," Pete Modlin.

The work on the 1985 documents started early in 1983 when the budget-makers sat down and made tentative plans.

In the summer, the president set out rough spending ceilings for each department and agency as guidance on what he wanted to see when they sent in their money requests in September.

Few agency wish-lists remained within those ranges so the budget-makers spent part of the fall trying to fit the numbers within the president's guidelines.

Out of that work came Stockman's recommendations for each agency's budget in 1985.

Many of the agencies didn't like what they saw so they appealed the decisions. In this administration, there are three levels of appeal — to the budget office, to Stockman and key presidential aides Edwin Meese and James Baker, and finally to the president himself.

Most of the 1985 budget decisions were made by Christmas but some key ones — like whether a tax package would be included to help pare the deficits — were put off until the last few weeks.

Those decisions can be delayed only so long because the administration is required to get the budget to Congress 15 days after it reconvenes.

Modlin finds it difficult sometimes to get officials "to take it seriously when one says we've got to have that decision today."

"Getting the data base settled ... really is the important thing," he says, referring to the base from which the final tally for spending requests is built. "Until we get that settled, we think we know how things are coming out, but we are always surprised."

It's a never-ending fight.

"Before the ink is dried on these (budget) documents, something will have changed," he says.

There can be last-minute changes. Once, he recalls, President Lyndon Johnson wanted a late alteration. It meant someone had to go through the already printed documents, slice out pages and paste in new ones.

Modlin's work doesn't end once the documents are sent to Congress.

The budget office tracks the spending plan as it goes through congressional committees, analyzing actions taken there and responding to requests for more information.

On occasion, Modlin has gone up to Capitol Hill to try to clear up confusion about budget figures.

He doesn't, though, offer advice on how much Congress should spend on various programs. That's up to the 535 senators and representatives.

"It is extremely difficult to reconcile all these competing claims," he says. "Each (member of Congress) can tell you how to solve this problem. The trouble is it takes a consensus of both houses."

Doesn't he find that frustrating? "I worry about things I can control," he replies.

Rural couple released on bond

From Staff Reports

Two persons have been released from custody after posting $10,000 bond each on felony drug charges stemming from a raid on their rural Midland home Friday.

Released from the county jail were 45-year-old Claude Franklyn Whitaker and 26-year-old Judy Ann Scott, who live in a mobile home near S. Midkiff Rd. and County Road 118.

They were arrested after deputies from the sheriff's department and the constables office executed a search warrant at the residence about 4:30 p.m., Friday.

Confiscated were 7 lbs. of marijuana, "other suspected controlled substances" and allegedly stolen property — which may lead to the solution of some burglary cases being handled by the Midland Police Department.

Some of the information contained in the search warrant was obtained through the Crime Stoppers Program, according to sheriff's department investigators.

Civil trial begins in 1978 Lozano death

"I never offered money to anybody for anything...(or) to be quiet about nothing," Faught said.

GARCIA HAD described the ex-jailer as "violent" when Perkins had worked for a detective agency for which Garcia said he was an acting supervisor earlier in the 1970s.

"Yes, sir," Garcia said, "I had to call him off, to slow him down, to keep that temper, and tell him we were there for security and nothing else. He was easy to blow up."

Garcia testified he had seen Lozano's nude body and "blood all over the place" in the "green room" — a maximum security isolation cell — on the night of Jan. 22, 1978. He said that there was no glass on the floor that the thick glass of the cell's porthole was "just cracked."

"I shook my head at Yankee (a deputy sheriff)," Garcia testified, "and said 'Why?' 'Who?' "

Perkins later testified that Lozano had fragments of glass in his pants pockets and was wielding broken glass as if it were a knife when he and the others entered the cell to subdue the enraged Lozano.

Garcia said he was shocked at the scene. "What I saw up here was no Sunday picnic."

ABOUT A WEEK later, Garcia said Perkins "needed to talk to somebody" and "broke down and told me they (the deputies) just got carried away with it...(that) Mr. Lozano was asking to go to the hospital, that he was hurt."

Garcia said Perkins told him he had slapped Lozano "three or four times" and that Lozano had "fought back."

"He (Perkins) said the sheriff had kicked him (Lozano) in the face" after Lozano had been subdued and after Lozano had been handcuffed and placed in leg irons.

Lozano had twitched, Garcia told the jurors, and the sheriff said, " 'This son of a bitch Mexican hasn't had enough.' "

Garcia said Perkins told him that District Attorney John Green and Faught called a meeting of deputies shortly after Lozano's death so that "everybody (would) get their story straight." Garcia said Perkins told him Green and Fault assured the deputies that "everything was going to be taken care of; nobody was going to jail."

Perkins denied confiding with or even talking to Garcia about the Lozano incident.

The sheriff said he had not touched Lozano. "I never did kick him; I didn't touch him." Though then handcuffed, Lozano was not in leg irons, the sheriff said. The sheriff's department didn't have any. "It was all they could do was hold him on the floor."

PERKINS SAID Garcia's accusations were "totally false."

"I'm not violent; I've not hit anyone without reason.... I never told Mr. Garcia anything." He said Garcia and he were not friends; Garcia said otherwise.

After Lozano had created a disturbance in another cell, he was sedated and placed in the "green room," Perkins said.

"I guess he went berserk," said Perkins, who now is in the patrol division of the Ector County Sheriff's Department. "I tried to calm him down." He said Lozano "totally destroyed the cell."

Moments later, he and seven other officers entered the cell to subdue "a violent man."

"My main concern was to get the man some medical attention, to get him subdued, and to get him under control," Perkins said. He said Lozano had been butting his bloodied head against the glass porthole and banging the cell with a heavy brass ring from the cell's toilet hole.

"We didn't want to leave the man in there; he was trying to harm himself," Perkins said.

Once in the cell, Tinney grabbed Lozano in a headlock, Perkins said, "and all of us went down to the floor." Perkins said he used "the necessary force" against Lozano to keep him from cutting Tinney's throat with the glass.

TEXAS DEPARTMENT of Corrections inmate William "Woody" Pharis, 36, another witness called by the Lozano family's Houston attorneys, was in the Ector County Jail on the night of Lozano's death. "I heard a lot of thumping noises" in Lozano's cell for about 15 or 20 minutes, Pharis said. He said he could hear nothing intelligible. "Just grunts." Pharis is serving a life sentence as a habitual criminal; he was a burglar.

Marvin Ray James, a 30-year TDC inmate who also is serving a life sentence as a habitual criminal, said he heard "thumping noises" in Lozano's cell on the night of his death.

"He was trying to get the deputy (Perkins) on the shift that night to take him to the hospital."

James, who said he had spent three months in the Ector County Jail, said Perkins told Lozano there "wasn't nobody to take him, and he (Perkins) was there by himself." James said he and Perkins grew up together in Odessa.

Later that night, James said he heard other noises.

"Man, there was a bunch of hollering and screaming...like he (Lozano) was being beat on...hard thumps, real loud. He was screaming. Then, everything was dead quiet. I couldn't hear nothing."

Musician's crusade aimed at 'rescuing' prostitutes

"I wouldn't do what he does without a gun," an unidentified police officer friend told the newspaper.

Street people call Reid the Music Man because he holds a college degree in music and earns a living writing music and leading a band. Because he's on the road much of the time, he lives with his parents in their condo.

Reid figures he's tried to help roughly two dozen women in the past two years, and says he's helped five of them leave prostitution.

A prostitute named Rita says she was one of his success stories. Reid met her on a Hollywood street.

"We talked a bit," she told the Times. "He asked me whether I liked what I was doing. He told me I oughta leave. I shined him on at first. He wasn't the first guy who wanted to take me home and have me all for himself."

Rita said that when she saw Reid again some weeks later, he told her she was too bright, young and pretty to be on the street. He asked where she'd rather be and she answered, "Anywhere but here."

She says she tried suicide twice, the second time with pills. But as she was about to pass out, she called Reid.

"He was there in 10 minutes," Rita recalled. "He took me to the hospital. Without him I'd be dead. After that, he helped get me back with my family. Everything isn't perfect, but I think it's working.

"...I won't forget Robin, not ever," she said. "He was there when no one else was."

Tiffany, now a housewife in Portland, Maine, told the newspaper she was working the streets independently and was "strung out" on drugs when Reid tried to convince her to quit prostitution.

At first, "I wouldn't hear it," she said. But later, she called Reid for help when a pimp locked her up in a motel and threatened to kill her if she wouldn't work for him.

"He (Reid) literally kicked in the motel door, grabbed me and shoved me out," Tiffany remembers. "The pimp was reaching for his gun when we split. I've got a husband now and two kids. I keep wondering, if it hadn't been for Robin, where would I be now?"

Reid recalls his failures too, like a prostitute nicknamed Wichita who refused to be helped. The police found her dead with her throat cut. Reid identified her at the morgue.

"Sometimes you can help and sometimes you can't," Reid told the newspaper. "Everyone is looking to escape something, both the girls and the tricks, and the street is a place to hide in a lot of different ways. You ask a girl when she's going to quit and she says, 'Hey, pretty soon, man, I'm just a trick away.'"

'Competetive spirit' ends in alcohol poisoning

ROWLEY, Mass. (AP) — A teenager who died after guzzling five beers and a quart of whiskey as fellow partygoers shouted "Go, go, go" was unconscious for an hour before anyone noticed he had turned blue, authorities said.

Jack A. Kelly, 19, a self-employed clam digger from Newbury, was pronounced dead of heart failure and acute alcohol poisoning at Anna Jaques Hospital in Newburyport, police Chief Kevin Barry said Monday.

"Jack, when we had him, was a competitor — and I mean a real competitor. Whether that had anything to do with it, other kids egging him on, I don't know," said Hal Ryder, assistant principal at Triton High School, which Kelly had attended.

Witnesses at the party Saturday night said Kelly "guzzled down that quart in between 10 and 15 minutes," Barry said. "Some of the people were telling him, 'Go, go, go,' or something to that effect."

"It was a party that got out of control," Officer John Geibel said.

Kelly drank five bottles or cans of beer before downing the whiskey and apparently passing out, Barry said. Some of the partygoers tried unsuccessfully to revive him, then left him on a couch, where he lay unconscious for more than an hour before help was summoned, he said.

Police were called at 11:08 p.m. and arrived three minutes later, Barry said. Kelly was taken to the hospital in an ambulance while officers administered cardio-pulmonary resuscitation.

Science hard at work on genetics

The fluid carries microscopic fragments of fetal skin and other fetal cells that contain the fetus' genes. The cells must be grown in the laboratory for several weeks until enough genetic material is available to look for defects.

With the new technique, a tiny bit of the chorion, the precursor of the placenta, is snipped off, and the genetic analysis is done immediately. Abnormalities can be found within hours.

The advantage of the early diagnosis, which is only experimental and not likely to be widely available for some time, is that it gives a woman and her spouse more time to decide whether to abort a child carrying a genetic defect.

It also, in some cases, might make it possible for doctors to intervene and prevent damage. That will become increasingly true as research advances. Abortion will become less of a factor in the control of genetic disease.

(According to one study, prenatal diagnosis is sometimes responsible for reducing the abortion rate. Couples at the risk of producing children with defects often choose abortion in the absence of prenatal diagnosis, when they don't know whether or not the child is affected. The ability to diagnose some of those children as normal makes abortion no longer necessary.)

Genetic engineering makes it possible for researchers to examine individual bits of genetic material for the variations and abnormalities that produce genetic diseases and birth defects.

Once the precise genetic abnormalities reponsible for a specific disease are found, diagnosis of the disorder becomes simple and routine.

Judge will decide if Geter should be retried

AP Laserphoto

Lenell Geter, left, and defense attorney Edwin Sigell returned to State District Judge John Ovard's courtroom, saying he is confident that he will be exonerated of the armed robbery charge.

DALLAS (AP) — A state judge will hear evidence in the Lenell Geter case in February and decide if the black engineer accused of armed robbery should stand trial a second time.

Geter, 26, who spent about 14 months in prison, returned to court Monday with a broad smile and no hard feelings and asked state Judge John Ovard to dismiss his case.

He was accompanied by NAACP executive director Benjamin Hooks.

Ovard set a Feb. 13 date for a hearing on the defense motion, and said he would listen to evidence at that time.

Geter, who plans to return to work at E-Systems in Greenville, had his 1982 conviction and life sentence thrown out after news reports about the case, including a segment on the CBS news show "60 Minutes," raised doubts about his guilt. He is scheduled to go on trial a second time on the charge on April 9.

He claims he is the victim of racism and incompetent police work. His attorneys claim police circulated his picture only because he is black.

"I'm anxious to get married and get on with my life in a relaxed way," Geter said before the hearing, his first trip back to court since his Dec. 15 release.

"I'm confident because I know I am innocent and I just want to get this over with."

NAACP attorney George Hairston, who joined Geter's defense after his conviction, said he hoped to prove that Geter was improperly identified by witnesses to a $615 robbery of a fried chicken restaurant.

Ovard also ruled at the pretrial hearing that he would grant an order requested by prosecutors to prevent CBS News from destroying any videotapes relating to the case, including "60 Minutes" tapes not aired.

Prosecutor Gerald Banks said he wanted to look at CBS' outtakes to see if "there is something contrary that they did not put on TV."

Attorneys for CBS did not attend the hearing. A network spokesman has said the news organization routinely opposes such orders.

The judge also granted a defense request requiring prosecutors to produce any evidence, particularly discrepancies from police lineups, that would be favorable to Geter.

Thirteen motions were filed by the defense, most of them routine, Hairston said.

Hooks, who sat at Geter's defense counsel's table during the hearing, said he was been "intrigued" by the case, which he said was based on "the flimsiest set of evidence I've ever seen."

"I'm a little bit concerned about this case and what impact it might have nationwide on what we're trying to do," Hooks said. "Our people are very disturbed about the climate we are going into."

He said the 1985 convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is scheduled to be held in Dallas.

"I came to see what the (racial) climate in this town is like," Hooks said.

About a week after "60 Minutes" broadcast a lengthy segment on the case, Dallas County District Attorney Henry Wade agreed to a new trial in any event, and offered to drop all charges against Geter if he passed polygraph test. Geter was freed on $10,000 bond.

Geter later declined to take the lie detector test when his attorneys and prosecutors disagreed on who should conduct the examination.

Five eyewitnesses identified the South Carolina native as the man who robbed a Balch Springs fast food restaurant on Aug. 23, 1982.

Attorneys for Geter said last week they would ask Ovard to order eyewitnesses to see a new lineup, including Geter and Jerry Jerome Stepney, a convicted armed robber who some police officers have said resembles Geter physically and was accused of crimes similar to the Balch Springs robbery.

Hairston would say only that defense attorneys had decided not to request the lineup.

Banks said Stepney was offered immunity from prosecution if he confessed to the Geter holdup.

"We told him we only wanted to prosecute the right person and said we would not prosecute him, since he was already serving time, if he admitted doing it. He said it wasn't him, and he would tell us if it was," the assistant district attorney said.

Infant's seizure caused by drug, doctor says

GEORGETOWN (AP) — Dr. Kathleen Holland says she had no reason to believe Chelsea McClellan was killed by anything other than the seizure nurse Genene Jones reported the girl had in the pediatrician's office.

But on Monday, at the nurse's murder trial, her former boss said she later found out otherwise. The 15-month-old girl might have had a seizure-like attack, but it was caused by the injection of a powerful drug, Hs. Holland testified.

"In retrospect, the movements I saw are consistent with the administration of succinylcholine," she told jurors.

Ms. Jones, 33, is charged with killing Chelsea on Sept. 17, 1982, by injecting succinylcholine at Ms. Holland's Kerrville office. The doctor had ordered two routine immunizations for the girl. Prosecutors say Ms. Jones instead injected the muscle relaxant.

"In retrospect, the movements I saw are consistent with the administration of succinylcholine."

— Dr. Kathleen Holland

Ms. Holland, who has been sued for $7 million by Chelsea's family, spent all of Monday on the witness stand facing cross-examination by defense lawyer Burt Carnes. The lawyers completed their questioning of her late Monday. Prosecutors expect to wrap up their case this week.

Throughout the trial, the defense has tried to show that Chelsea could have died of natural causes. Ms. Holland acknowledged that the girl faced a series of health problems in her short life. Chelsea was born two months early and weighed just over two pounds. She suffered from a membrane disease known as "Respiratory Distress Syndrome," common in premature infants.

Chelsea survived a bout with pneumonia. Her family's medical history included a death attributed to Sudden Infant Death Syndrome. The initial autopsy report on Chelsea listed SIDS as the cause of her death.

The girl twice suffered seizure-like attacks in Ms. Holland's office. Both times she was with Ms. Jones. On Aug. 24, 1982 — the second day Ms. Holland's office was opened — Ms. Jones called for the doctor and said the girl had gone limp while playing on the office floor.

Ten days in a Kerrville hospital showed no serious problems.

On Sept. 17, 1982, Chelsea had a similar attack after getting two shots from the nurse. She died later that day while being taken to a San Antonio hospital.

Carnes got Ms. Holland to acknowledge that there had been reports that Chelsea showed signs of minor seizures. But Ms. Holland said most of the symptoms were "very common" and did not prove anything.

For example, Chelsea's parents reported occassional "staring spells." The doctor said those spells "can occur as absolutely normal findings in perfectly normal children."

Asked why she assumed Chelsea had seizures in her office, Ms. Holland said, "When a nurse makes a clinical assessment...there's no reason for me to think it was not a seizure."

Her assumption changed when Ms. Jones could not explain two holes in the top of a vial of succinylcholine. The doctor testified that Ms. Jones suggested throwing the bottle away.

Wright critical of 'substance over image'

Jim Wright

AUSTIN (AP) — U.S. House Majority Leader Jim Wright says President Reagan is the best in the world at getting his points across on television, but political campaigns should be more than "just a Hollywood production."

Wright, D-Texas, said Monday that Reagan is to television what the late Franklin D. Roosevelt was to radio — "the best in the business."

Wright had criticized in a speech the "nauseating emphasis" on image at the expense of "substance" and was asked by a reporter, "How would you apply your image over substance in terms of President Reagan?"

"I think Mr. Reagan is a consummate actor," Wright replied. "He reads a script beautifully and well. He contrives with these two teleprompters in the House chamber and elsewhere — which are invisible to the audience to a large extent and very invisible to those watching on television — to appear to be speaking as those words and thoughts had just that moment sprung full blown from his fertile brain.

"He's good at it. Ronald Reagan is to the teleprompter and television what Franklin D. Roosevelt was to radio. He is the best in the business. He's awfully good at it.

"Now, those who write his scripts ought to be embarrassed sometimes. I don't think the president is aware that occasionally there appear in his scripts untruths. Just factually inaccurate. I want to excuse the president for that, because I don't want to believe and do not believe and refuse to believe that the president is aware of the factual inaccuracies in those scripts.

"But whoever writes that script ought to hang his head in shame. He ought to be expelled from the speechwriter's union."

Wright, a member of Congress since 1954 and majority leader since December 1976, was the main speaker for a political campaign seminar sponsored by the University of Texas College of Communication.

He told the seminar for campaign managers and prospective candidates that every elected public official has three basic responsibilities — accessibility, leadership and integrity.

In discussing integrity, Wright said, "The danger of modern political practice is, in my opinion, this nauseating emphasis on image at the almost total expense of substance.

"For God's sake, in our honing and polishing, let us not create an image of something that doesn't exist, let us not create the imagery that belies the truth," Wright said. "Let us not sacrifice nor permit a candidate to sacrifice his or her own true self for the sake of looking like something else. Let's not make it all just a Hollywood production."

THE BETTER HALF

"Uncle Stanley, if Teddy and I ever split up, will he have to pay me alimony?"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, February 1, 1984

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Operetta king Victor Herbert, famous leading man Clark Gable and movie director John Ford were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: actor Sherman Hemsley ("The Jeffersons"), singer Don Everly, Princess Stephanie of Monaco and chanteuse Hildegarde. A hobby could bring you extra funds if you decide to market your product. Seize an unusual business opportunity. Checks will arrive on a more regular basis for free-lance writers. Romance influences where you work and live. Do not underestimate the benefits and pleasures of travel. Apply for a scholarship without further delay. An older person will not always be around to help.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Many good things are about to happen! You gain an advantage by stating your views fully. Welcome a change at work. Company profits will rise, making it easier to get a raise.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your integrity sometimes costs you money or advancement, but you would have trouble sleeping if you betrayed your principles. Mate loves you the way you are. Count your blessings!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A romantic interlude makes you question some of your choices. New deals can be lucrative. Make sure everyone lives up to the terms of an agreement. Taking mate on a trip rekindles romance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A reversal will eventually work to your advantage. Postpone taking a vacation trip until April or December. Assuming new responsibilities will improve your chances for getting a raise.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): It is crucial that everyone get together to sign a legal document. Otherwise, you can expect misunderstandings and backbiting. When parents are reasonable, children respond in a positive manner.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Marketing and sales people enter a very rewarding period. Take a leaf out of an associate's book and ease your climb to the top. Success makes work more fun.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You change your mind very quickly now, confusing your friends and allies. Fate has some wonderful plans for you where romance is concerned. Focus on your top priorities.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Try your hand at writing or painting. You receive good news regarding a college application. Share it with a concerned parent. Baby-sitting is an excellent way for a teen-ager to earn extra money.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be patient with romantic partner. A computer could snarl up a phone or electric bill. An influential new friend is your strongest ally. Do not ask too many favors.

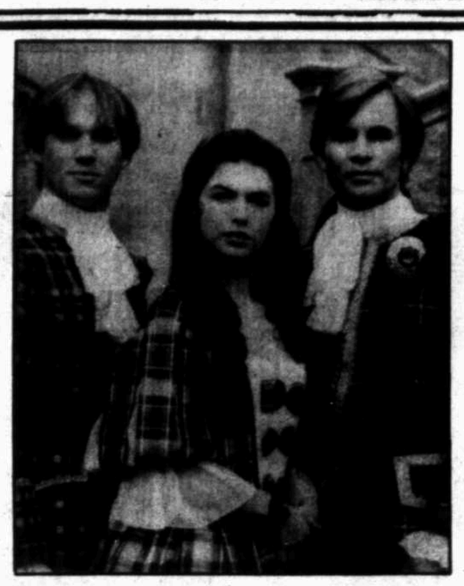

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Complete pending projects before starting new ones. The winds of change are blowing. A friend may act strangely. Be careful about partnerships. Mate may not understand your needs. Speak up.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A check arrives in the nick of time. Your money grows in investments. Pay attention to a dream. It could be a portent of things to come. Build savings.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your restlessness could irritate others. Letters and phone calls prove less effective than a face-to-face meeting. An older person plays a major role in a personal decision.

CBS airs Stevenson adventure

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Master of Ballantrae," tonight on CBS, is a lusty, visually appealing adaptation of Robert Louis Stevenson's classic novel of sibling rivalry run amok.

Producers of the three-hour, made-for-TV movie rewrote Stevenson to give the story a happy, albeit slightly ominous, ending. Otherwise, they did all their work in England, Scotland and Wales, and the effect is an air of period authenticity sullied only by Richard Thomas' dismal effort to sound like a Scotsman.

The movie, another impressive "Hallmark Hall of Fame" production, is set in 1745.

Thomas, a silly sight in pigtail and tricorn hat, plays Henry Durie, who becomes master of Ballantrae by default when his elder brother, James (Michael York), leaves home to join Bonnie Prince Charles' fight to reclaim Scotland for his father, the deposed King James II, and is killed in the battle of Culloden.

Or so it appears.

James, of course, survives his seemingly mortal wounds and lives to hound and haunt his hapless brother for years.

After Culloden, he escapes from England with his Irish companion, Burke (Timothy Dalton), on a pirate ship, and eventually they conspire to subvert and then kill Captain Edward Teach, the infamous Blackbeard. They cart off Teach's treasure, and bury the loot in America.

Ultimately, James decides to return to Scotland and recover what he considers his own. "He shall pay for this," James vows to Burke. "He sits in my place. He courts my intended. He claims my name."

It's not really Henry's fault, but he's such a bloodless hero that it's difficult to feel for his plight, even when Alison Graeme (Finola Hughes), James' "intended," tells him:

"If you want me now, Henry, you can have me. I'll offer you no love, but you deserve better than you've had."

Not much of a commitment, but Henry is willing to marry the dark beauty ... and take her fortune.

York is terrific as the villainous James, especially alongside Thomas' sappy Henry. And, of course, Gielgud is impeccable as Lord Durrisdeer.

The supporting cast is superb, notably Ian Richardson as Mackeller, who is hired by Henry to oversee the family estate, Brian Blessed as the wacky, marvelously evil pirate, Teach, and Nickolas Grace as James' "Indian gentleman" companion, Secundra Dass.

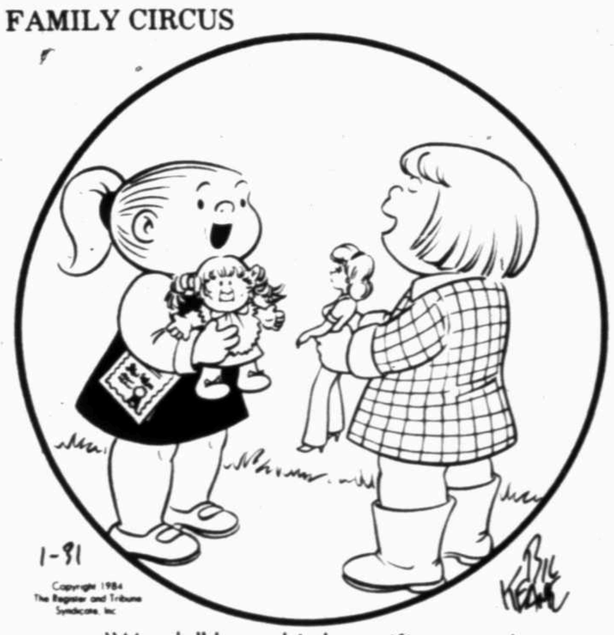

Stevenson undoubtedly did not intend his novel to be read at a single sitting, and compressing a sweeping and melodramatic tale told on three continents into one evening is risky business.

Just one week from his 81st birthday Oswald Jacoby, with some help from Edgar Kaplan, Norman Kay, Bill Root and Richard Pavlicek, won the Reisinger Board-a-Match team event at the Fall North American Championships in Miami. The latter four were the defenders in the event.

There has never been a more popular win. Jacoby, who is fighting cancer, becomes the oldest player ever to win a major U.S. championship, and he has earned a spot in the Trials to select the team for the 1985 world team championships. We hope that he wins that one, too.

Fine play by Ozzie won a full board for his team on this deal from the final. He stretched a little for his free bid of two spades, but caught his partner, Edgar Kaplan, with a good hand. Note that Kaplan put no strain on his partner. He raised to four spades—had he bid only three, Jacoby surely would not have bid again.

Against four spades West led a low diamond. Declarer won in dummy and led a heart to the king and ace. West now decided to be brilliant and underled his ace of clubs. Declarer pounced with dummy's king and cashed the queen-jack of hearts, discarding his remaining club.

Declarer now crossruffed the next four tricks, two clubs in hand and two diamonds on the board. He then led dummy's remaining heart and, when East followed, declarer ruffed with the nine. West overruffed and perforce returned a trump. Dummy's ten held, and declarer scored the last two tricks by ruffing a heart with the trump king and a diamond with the ace, as West underruffed helplessly.

Jacoby made an overtrick. In the other room, declarer failed in four spades, even though a double by West should have helped him place the trumps.

Political statement

With the brief announcement Sunday that he will seek a second term as president, Ronald Reagan has given to the 1984 campaign a vitality it was sorely lacking.

We assumed Reagan would be seeking a second term, just as did millions of other Americans. Still, there was a degree of doubt, fueled by reports that First Lady Nancy Reagan's concerns or his age might dissuade him. His announcement dispelled those beliefs and verified that not only will he be running but will be running hard.

Reagan also has asked George Bush, a former Midlander, to again be his running-mate. During Reagan's first term, Bush was a strong complement to the president's administration and obviously will be this time.

The Reagan announcement was important to the Republican Party, of course. But it was far more important to the Democratic Party. Until the announcement was made, the Democratic contenders have been largely sparring in their own ring — throwing jabs at each other and "shadow-boxing" the president.

Now the "fight" takes on a more personal dimension because Reagan has given Democrats the opportunity to stop picking fights with each other, for the most part, and to concentrate on the president and his record.

That could be to the advantage of Democrats and then again it might not. With no overwhelming issues in sight, the Democratic hopefuls are going to have to concentrate on some of the old standbys Reagan has already been concentrating on like deficits, government waste and fraud, and taxes.

In some respects, Reagan has set a tough standard for the Democrats to meet. Inflation has been reduced to just a little over 3 percent and the growth of government spending has been cut significantly. As Reagan noted in his State of the Union address last week, militarily the nation is much stronger than it was three years ago and American credibility seems to be restored. Of course, that doesn't mean more improvement can't be made. It simply sets a high standard and that's a good place for American standards to be.

We're anxious to see a lot more of the Democratic alternatives to these perennial headscratchers and a little less of the drab showmanship we've been subjected to so far.

Another View:

Reagan runs again

We will not comment yet on the president's announcement of his campaign plans — at least not directly. The days and weeks ahead, which will certainly come to seem like decades if not in fact eons before Election Day 1984 arrives, will provide plenty of time and chances to do that.

Instead, in the wake of Reagan's announcement of his candidacy, and before you drown in self-confident commentary about the meaning of it all, we would like to remind you of how uncooperative American political reality can be when it comes to corroborating the wisdom of the sages — ourselves, unfortunately, included.

Now be honest. Four years ago would you have believed that Ronald Reagan would be announcing his decision Sunday night to run for a second term? Or that the current odds would be heavily in favor of his reelection?

Say, aren't you the one who didn't think a fellow 69 years old would ever be nominated by one of the major political parties? Or are you the one who thought that anyone so ideological as he though able to be nominated could not possibly attract the mainstream votes required to win an election?

We thought we heard you say something about his "scaring" the voters, especially if Jimmy Carter proved able to lure this unsuspecting patsy into a debate in which he (Carter) would, naturally, clean up.

Actually, you probably weren't saying too many of these things exactly four years ago, since you didn't really think Ronald Reagan was any longer in the ball game. You were getting yourself psyched up for the presidency of George Bush.

You remember George Bush. He's the one who won the Iowa caucus in 1980, right around this time of year.

We took a humbling, not to say humiliating, stroll down memory lane the other day, reading the clippings of the period, and we are here to tell you how very odd it is that a man who was pretty much finished back then should be announcing his intention Sunday night to run for a second term.

"In that branch of American showbiz called presidential politics, last week's hot property was George Herbert Walker Bush ..." one period piece begins. "Once again, the American political process had pushed forward an unknown figure, a masked rider whose silver bullets gleamed, but whose personal qualities, political beliefs and record were hardly known. Perhaps this is America's new quadrennial miracle."

The "miracle" analogy was to Jimmy Carter and his surprising capture of the nomination and the office four years earlier. There was a lot of this in the commentary of the period, and also a lot of expectation that Iowa was the start of something big.

From the point of view of Ronald Reagan, the newly announced candidate for a second term, we would say the recollection of the craziness of the conventional wisdom of that time has better and worse implications.

It demonstrates that Reagan is a man habitually misjudged and underestimated by both his political competition and those whose business it is to observe him.

But in this time of near consensus that Reagan is a shoo-in over any of his prospective opponents, the recollection that the conventional wisdom can be totally off-base is probably not so reassuring.

ART BUCHWALD

In politics wrong move can be fatal!

American politics is now in the hands of a lot of tough people.

Art Buchwald

I didn't realize how tough until I walked into Arnie Bridle's office. Arnie runs the "Political Action Committee for A Strong, Healthy and Prosperous United States," a multimillion-dollar front supported by certain special interest groups.

Arnie was seated behind his desk smoking a big cigar. Two hoods were sitting over on the couch. He told me to sit down.

"What can I do for you?"

"I hear you have a contract out on Congressman Finger."

"Who told you that?" he wanted to know.

"It's in all the papers. You're out to get him because he voted against lowering the minimum wage to $1 an hour."

"We warned Finger if he voted against the bill his political life wasn't worth a nickel. Going to the newspapers won't save him."

The phone rang and Arnie picked it up. "Yeh? ... I don't believe it. He said that at a political rally? ... The guy is committing suicide ... I'll get back to you." Arnie hung up and said to one of the hoods on the couch, "Senator Plankton just came out for hazardous waste control."

"What do you want us to do, boss?" one of the hoods asked.

Arnie took $400,000 out of his drawer. "Go into his state and bury him. Rough him up on TV, buy up every billboard in the state, hire as many demonstrators as you need, flood the radio talk shows with calls. We've got to make a lesson of Plankton and put the fear of God into everyone running for office this year."

"The guy is as good as dead," the hood said, putting the money into a valise.

"I don't want any fingerprints leading back to here," Arnie warned.

"You can count on us, boss."

The two hoods left the office.

"How many political contracts have you put out on politicians this year?" I asked Arnie.

"Enough to see that the wrong guys don't get back into office."

"You're in a cold-blooded business," I said.

"Everyone we have a contract out on knew what he would be facing if he doublecrossed us."

Another hood came into the office. "Arnie, we just got a tip the 'Anti-Lifers PAC' has just put out a contract on Congressman Dreadnought in Arizona."

"So they want to go to mattresses, do they? How much have we put into Dreadnought's campaign?" Arnie asked.

"Two hundred thousand."

"Tell Sammy we're sending in another two hundred thou, and if he needs more to call. We can't lose Dreadnought in the next Congress. Who are they going to try to knock him off with?"

"Some woman schoolteacher from Tucson."

"Hit her," Arnie said.

"You mean you have a hit list for women politicians too?" I asked.

"There is no gender gap when it comes to political executions," Arnie said. "Look, this is a tough business. For every contract we've put out on a politician this year, there is a PAC that's put out a contract on one of ours. When it comes to the American political process it's kill or be killed."

"And money is the ammunition?"

"That's the name of the game. The first thing you do when you put out a hit on a politician is break his legs financially. If he still won't listen to reason then you let him dig his own grave."

"There's got to be a better way of electing our officials than putting out hit lists on their opponents," I protested.

"No one's come up with one in '84," Arnie said.

The same hood came back into the office. "Senator Partridge's campaign manager is outside. He wants to know what he can do to lift the contract on his man."

"Tell him it's too late. The moment Partridge voted for mandatory seat belts he was a dead man."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Police preparing for terrorists

WASHINGTON — A number of intelligence reports warn that 1984 could be the year of the terrorists. Thousands of relentless assassins — professional terrorists trained and indoctrinated behind the Iron Curtain, fierce fanatics sworn to die for Ayatollah Khomeini, right-wing killers belonging to death squads — will be stirring up bedlam around the world.

Jack Anderson

The United States won't be spared, intelligence sources say. The 1984 election and the Los Angeles Olympic Games, it is feared, will draw terrorists to this country. Presidential candidates and Olympic stars could be in danger.

But there is some good news: U.S. lawmen will be ready and waiting. I asked my associate Tony Capaccio to check into the preparations. He found that the Secret Service and local law enforcement authorities are prepared for the worst.

Tomorrow, the Secret Service will officially start protecting all the presidential candidates. Because of threats against the Rev. Jesse Jackson, he has been receiving protection since November. One of the supervisors assigned to his campaign is the man who set up the command center at George Washington University Hospital when President Reagan was shot in 1981.

The Secret Service will provide far more than a "human shield" formation to accompany each candidate. Hotels will be swept electronically; security arrangements at local hospitals will be checked; motorcade routes, including the quickest way to hospitals, will be scouted in advance; the whereabouts of potentially dangerous individuals will be sought.

Planning for the February and March primaries actually began back in August 1982, with the formation of a permanent Candidate-Nominee Protective Division. The cost: The Secret Service has asked Congress for $27 million.

Security experts give some of the reasons they believe the candidates will be safe:

— The long, unofficial campaigning has given state and local police substantial time to refine their security techniques. One 20-year veteran of the political wars, now working for one of the Democratic candidates, expressed amazement at the improved quality of local protection. "I find it all the way down to the sheriff's department," he said.

— Since the 1980 campaign, some 8,950 state and local police officers have taken one-week courses to familiarize themselves with the Secret Service's protective methods.

— The Secret Service learned a lesson from the near-assassination of President Reagan in March 1981. According to Dr. Richard W. Kobetz, a top security expert, the lesson was: "Never take anything for granted. Expect the unexpected. Nothing is routine."

— Since last April, the FBI has notified the Secret Service whenever an individual who is considered a potential threat to the president or a candidate is picked up. Most of these persons are in prisons or mental institutions, but there are about 125 at liberty. Their names have been put in the National Crime Information Center computer; if one of these people is arrested on any charge, the Secret Service will be notified of his whereabouts. Within two hours of its activation, the computer system flagged one of the names.

— Recommendations by the House assassinations committee have been enacted into law by Congress. One important change expanded the use of "zones of protection" to include political candidates. Entire hotel floors, for example, can be closed off and intruders can be arrested, even though there may be no obvious physical threat to a protectee. Previously, the use of "zones of protection" had been limited to presidents, vice presidents and their families.

BUSINESS BRIEFS: Paul Thayer, the former deputy defense secretary, is working on his defense against charges of "insider trading." Meanwhile, his old company, the LTV Corp., is taking no chances on the reception facility it is planning to set up for delegates to the Republican convention in Dallas this summer. The company queried the Federal Election Commission to make sure its hospitality suite and a cocktail party for the delegates wouldn't be classified as campaign contributions. The FEC told LTV not to worry. The freeload would not "express advocacy of the election or defeat of a candidate for federal office." Let the good times roll.

— General Motors, evidently stung by bad publicity over Federal Trade Commission charges that it sold cars it knew had defective transmissions, camshafts and diesel fuel-injection pumps, is carefully monitoring the information released by the FTC under the Freedom of Information Act. It has asked for copies of FTC documents that were given to Rep. Al Swift, D-Wash.; Diane Halferty, director of Consumers Against GM, and a private citizen from Ann Arbor, Mich.

DIPLOMATIC DIGEST: Professional foreign service officers are concerned at the "ethnic envoys" President Reagan has appointed — political supporters who are named ambassadors to the countries of their birth. Two examples: Austrian-born Helene Von Damm, ambassador in Vienna, and Nicolas Salgo, Hungarian-born real estate magnate who is the new ambassador in Budapest. The State Department for years has been careful not to appoint foreign-born diplomats to their native lands, for fear of emotional conflicts-of-interest.

CHARLEY REESE

Bureaucrats aren't needed

The trouble with doling out $8 billion to Central American, as the Kissinger Commission recommends, is that the people who will be dong the doling don't know doodley squat about free enterprise. More than likely they will use it to finance socialistic schemes. In the end, we'll be $8 billion deeper in the hole and the people of Central America won't be any better off.

Charley Reese

Rep. Jack Kemp has pointed out that often U.S. aid dollars finance collectivist projects. That's one of the reasons some of the countries who have received our aid have lousy economies. It may strike you as strange that the world's greatest capitalistic society often exports socialism with its aid, but it's not so strange when you think it through.

America is a capitalistic society, but most of the bureaucracy and most of the liberals in America are anything but capitalistic. Their idea of a free market economy is to ask for bids on a government project.

Look at El Salvador, for example. Back in the dark days of the dim Carter Administration, El Salvador came under attack by Marxist guerrillas. The Carter solution was to impose socialism on El Salvador under the guise of land reform. That was a really smart, typically liberal solution. A Marxist in the bush with a gun threatens to confiscate the land and ruin the economy, so you confiscate the land and ruin the economy first. That'll fix him.

The land reform we forced on El Salvador would be illegal in the United States. If the government started confiscating big farms in the Midwest with the idea of cutting them up into small tracts and distributing them to farm workers, we'd have a revolution.

Well, Salvadorean land owners are not unlike American landowners. Many of those people and their ancestors had endured incredible hardship creating those estates. They weren't going to give them up without a fight. So pretty soon you had two revolutions — one a Marxist revolution and the other fueled by landowners. That's why El Salvador is not the safest place in the world. You can get shot at from more than one direction down there.

Between land reform and guerrilla warfare, the Salvadorean economy which wasn't that great to begin with is now on the critical list. Most of the farms created by land reform are bankrupt or near bankruptcy. The principles of agriculture are the same in Spanish as they are in English.

Small plot farming is uneconomical. The revenue cannot justify the cost of mechanization and nonmechanized agriculture is not very productive. Worse, there is not enough land in El Salvador under the best of circumstances to support its population as farmers. The nation must industrialize. But to industrialize it must import machinery and technology. But to import it must export and its major exports are coffee and cotton. So when the Carterites ruined El Salvador's commerical agriculture, they really gave the little country a kick in the groin.

But the socialist bias of our international bureaucrats and liberal experts does more then ruin economies. It usually puts us against the foreign capitalists who admire the United States and want to imitate our system and puts us on the side of leftists who generally hate our guts anyway.

I had a great belly laugh after the last election in El Salvador — an election we insisted they have. The American liberals favorite Salvadorean politician is Mr. Duarte, a socialist, who leads the socialist Christian Democrats: Unfortunately for the State Department, Mr. Duarte is more popular in Washington than he is in El Salvador. The people there gave 60 percent of their vote to a coalition of rightwing parties. It is difficult to determine who was more outraged by the election — the Marxist guerrillas or the American liberals.

The Kissinger Commission is right that we have to stop the Communists from taking over Central America. My point is that we will have a better chance of succedding if we side with people who believe in free enterprise rather than with socialists.

I have no ideological bias against socialism. It just doesn't work. American liberals cannot seem to comprehend a very obvious fact. You can't re-distribute a pie that you haven't baked. And captialism can bake more pies in a day then socialism can in a year.

The people of El Salvador don't need land reform. They need industrialization. They don't need advisors from the AFL-CIO. At this stage, they need entrepreneurs and venture captialists. And they certainly don't need American bureaucrats and academics who could foul up a two-car funeral.

President Ronald Reagan talks with Vice President George Bush in the Blue Room at the White House Sunday evening before making an announcement that he will seek a second term as president. Reagan, 72, confirmed that Bush will again be his running mate in a campaign already well underway.

When did Reagan make his decision to run for re-election?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Only the president knew for sure.

Well, he did tell the vice president a few days ago. And his wife, Nancy, knew, although she says there was no "magic moment" when he told her he had made up his mind.

His own closest aides and most trusted friends were never told straight out, although they'd been saying for months they had no doubt about what he would do.

President Reagan's decision to seek a second term was at once the best kept and the least surprising secret in this town that loves secrets but keeps few of them.

Shirley Green, press secretary to Vice President George Bush, said Bush told her Monday morning — a few hours after Reagan's announcement to a national television audience — that he had known "a few days ago" what the president would say.

IT WOULD SEEM ONLY fitting that Bush be told, inasmuch as the president's decision would affect the vice president's career as much as Reagan's own. But it wasn't clear what Reagan said or when.

It appeared, however, that Reagan revealed his decision to Bush when they met in the Oval Office on Thursday. The two men meet for lunch once a week to chat with no one else around.

Neither has ever revealed what was discussed at a Thursday lunch, and aides know better than to ask. But on Saturday, Bush did not deny he knew what the president would announce, saying only he was sure he'd be comfortable with the decision.

Chief of Staff James A. Baker III said through an aide he wasn't told in advance, although he and virtually everyone else in the White House assumed Reagan was running, and the president gave them no signal to the contrary.

Several people said there were sure they would have been told immediately if the president decided against one last campaign.

EDWARD J. ROLLINS, Reagan's former political adviser who now heads the re-election effort, said Reagan "was 90 percent of the way toward the decision" when Rollins left the White House staff last October.

"What may have given the president pause is that no one lives forever," Rollins said. "His lifestyle is very confined by being president."

But Reagan himself indicated as long ago as last July that he had grown used to "living over the store" and found his job exhilarating.

There had been suggestions the president, who will be 73 on Feb. 6, might like to retire to his California ranch while he could still enjoy it, but Reagan seemed to veto that idea.

"I think I'd get bored," he said.

Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., who is counted among the president's best friends, said he was sure Reagan would run in November 1982, when the president asked him to assume the general chairmanship of the Republican National Committee.

Laxalt, who served as Reagan's campaign chairman in 1980, said "the president wouldn't have asked me to assume that role" if he weren't going to run.

Nancy Reagan: You can't live with fear

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite concerns about her husband's safety, Nancy Reagan says she's happy President Reagan is seeking a second term because, "You have to come to the decision that you can't live with fear."

Speaking to reporters after she made a quick tour of Reagan's campaign headquarters Monday, the first lady also speculated that the race would be "tough, real tough."

But Mrs. Reagan said the president was "the best man for the job and ... he'll have a chance to continue what he started."

On the other hand, she acknowledged there was a negative side to the decision. "The cons are the same old cons — you know, loss of privacy, restrictions," she said.

However, Mrs. Reagan said that to her knowledge, the president was not urged to retire at the end of his current term by any of his family members. She said she could not pinpoint exactly when he decided to run again.

"I think people have the feeling there was some magic moment that it was decided," said the first lady. "That really was not so. It was something we discussed over a period of time."

Did Reagan ever express a feeling that he may not run again? "Gosh, I never remember him saying, 'No, I'm not going to do it.'"

Did Reagan ever announce that he'd made a decision? "That's not the way we do it," she replied. "It came about after a series of talks. There wasn't just one moment where we said, 'okay.'"

As for her concerns about the campaign, Mrs. Reagan said, "Oh, I think it's going to be hard."

The first lady held a brief news conference after her tour of the campaign headquarters in an office building at the foot of Capitol Hill. Accompanied by campaign director Edward J. Rollins, and press secretary Jim Lake, Mrs. Reagan walked from office to office, shaking hands.

Before entering the building, the president's wife stopped to purchase two campaign buttons from a street vendor outside. She quickly affixed both of them, one bearing a picture of the president, the other with the name of the committee, to her red suit.

The first lady acknowledged that she, too, heard rumors several months ago that her health was not up to par.

Gifts from Arabs plague Jackson

Jesse Jackson

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson is being dogged by questions about finances and again the questions center on substantial Arab contributions to groups connected with the Democratic presidential hopeful.

Jackson's personal attorney, John Bustamante, revealed Monday that PUSH for Excellence Inc., received a $100,000 contribution from the Arab League, a group of Arab governments, in 1981 or 1982.

Bustamante said another PUSH organization, the PUSH Foundation, also received a $100,000 gift from the Arab League.

"It was a perfectly legitimate, legal gift," Bustamante told a news conference.

When he decided to run for the presidency, Jackson took a leave of absence from his position as president of Operation PUSH, a black self-help organization he founded.

Bustamante said the two gifts both came from Clovis Maksoud, the Arab League's permanent observer at the United Nations.

Several Jewish leaders said the contributions raise once again the concerns about Jackson's ties to Arab countries.

"The disclosure that PUSH and the PUSH foundation have received $200,000 reinforces our sense of anxiety over Mr. Jackson's independence and fairness on Middle East issues," said Rabbi Alexander Schindler, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations.

"The expectation — one would assume when one invests $200,000 — would be that the public expressions would be rewarding," said Nathan Perlmutter, director of the Anti-Defamation League in New York. Jackson has been critical of Israel and said the United States needs a more even-handed Middle East policy.

"It is naive at best to suggest that it was an innocent gift," Julius Berman in a statement. Berman is chairman of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations. "A man is known by the company he keeps. And a candidate is known by those who are numbered among his major supporters."

Bustamante rejected such criticism, saying it "perpetuates ethnic defamation."

And he attacked The New York Times and other media organizations for singling out the contributions from the Arab League, an official group of Arab governments as unfair, un-American and defamatory. The Times reported the contribution to the PUSH Foundation on Sunday.

"It is part of an organized attempt to make Arab gifts seem different and unacceptable compared with other gifts," he said. "The foundation has received many unrestricted gifts from Arabs, Jews, blacks and others. The New York Times sought to malign the foundation and defame some its donors."

Bustamante said the second Arab League contribution turned up when Jackson asked him to review the records of several of the PUSH groups.

"I don't think he knew about it," Bustamante said when asked about Jackson's knowledge of the gift to PUSH-Excel.

Bustamante insisted that Jackson has no legal connection with the PUSH Foundation, although Jackson encouraged him to set it up and much of the foundation money has gone to PUSH groups in the form of grants.

The attorney, who is general counsel of the foundation and Operation PUSH, denied any of the money from any of the PUSH groups has gone to Jackson's presidential campaign.

PUSH-Excel was founded by Jackson in 1977 to run programs aimed at improving the educational experience in many schools, particularly inner-city public schools.

McGovern reluctant to campaign, at first

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eleanor McGovern, who was reluctant to campaign for her husband when he entered the 1984 Democratic presidential race, says now: "I need to be involved."

"I found it difficult not to be involved," Mrs. McGovern said in a telephone interview Monday. "I'd get very distressed and worried. I've been in politics too long not to be involved."

The wife of former South Dakota Sen. George S. McGovern said she felt bad that so many people focused on her initial decision not to campaign and questioned her husband about it.

"I would like to have spared George the difficulty of my not campaigning," she said. "But I've established a place for myself in the scheme of things. I've found I need to be involved."

Mrs. McGovern said she doesn't know if she can help her husband's longshot chance for the nomination but found she was uncomfortable remaining on the sidelines.

"Even though I'm not sure my being involved will help — it's like dropping a pebble in the ocean — it does help me," she said.

Mrs. McGovern said she made her first appearances in the 1984 campaign last Friday and Saturday in New Hampshire and Massachusetts — the sites of the first presidential primaries — and that she expects to campaign soon in Iowa where the first caucuses will be held.

"I was a little nervous," she said. "Your gifts of articulation are diminished if you don't use them regularly."

Mrs. McGovern said many people told her they agree with her husband's stand on the issues but that they want to support a candidate with more chance of winning.

"They say they're for him but want to roll with someone higher in the polls, that they don't want to waste their vote" she said. "I tell them you don't just vote for the person but for ideas. You take a stand, that doing anything other than that is wasting a vote."

Mrs. McGovern said the most frequent question she was asked in radio call-in shows was why she had decided at first not to campaign for her husband.

"I said that at the time, I didn't really want to campaign, that there were other things I was involved in," she recounted. "I was taking a position of independence. But no pressure has been put on me to campaign. I made the decision myself."

At 61, Mrs. McGovern is no stranger to politics. She campaigned at her husband's side and alone for 25 years that spanned two presidential bids and four Senate races.

After the 1972 presidential campaign, in which her husband lost in a landslide to Richard M. Nixon, Mrs. McGovern wrote a book entitled: "Uphill: A Personal Experience."

She said she likes to speak about issues affecting war and peace, and finds that voters feel more hopeless about their ability to control their future than they did in 1972.

"That's the big difference," she said. "People are turning away because they feel they can't do anything about it, that maybe nobody can."

McGovern entered the race late and shows no signs, so far, of gaining ground on front-runner Walter F. Mondale.

Lottery to spur voters

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — A branch of the NAACP is holding a lottery to spur voter turnout in the special election to fill the seat formerly held by a recalled state senator.

People who live and vote in Pontiac in Tuesday's election will automatically be entered in a cash lottery sponsored by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, an NAACP spokesman said. The state lottery commission granted the organization the lottery license.

The election is to choose a successor to state Sen. Philip Mastin, recalled in a campaign by an anti-tax group that objected to his vote in favor of raising taxes.

"We're trying to get people to the polls," said Jimmie Randolph, president of the NAACP's Oakland branch. "Those things we have tried (in the past) have not worked.

"We went door-to-door, we ran buses, we used speakers..." said Randolph. "And they have just not produced people."

A list of voters provided by the city clerk's office will be used in a random drawing on Feb. 14 for one $500 cash prize, 10 prizes of $100 and 15 prizes of $50, said Randolph.

Former Sen. Benigno Aquino's widow, Corazon, addresses hundreds of anti-government protesters in a church plaza in Meycauayan, Philippines, Monday.

Marchers enter Manila, stage massive anti-Marcos protest

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A tiny march halted by a police blockade for three days on the edge of Manila entered the capital today and swelled into a massive protest by tens of thousands of people against President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

The march, finally allowed by the army to proceed, mushroomed into the biggest anti-Marcos display since the funeral last August of assassinated opposition leader Benigno Aquino.

As night fell, protest leaders said they would break up the main march short of their destination — the airport where Aquino died. They had agreed with police not to continue the parade after dark.

A radio station estimated the marchers and the cheering crowd along the route at more than 500,000. More than a million people gathered for Aquino's funeral, which was followed by two days of rioting that killed 11 people.

Residents today threw confetti, carried signs, honked horns and exploded firecrackers in a 12-hour march across the city.

"Don't be afraid. Marcos is a thief," groups of youths chanted in Tagalog. Some carried signs reading: "Dismantle the U.S.-Marcos dictatorship."

At the presidential palace, Marcos announced he had suspended until June 1 his personal power to issue arrest orders for rebellion or insurrection, a key demand by opponents for their participation in the May national assembly election.Some of the marchers carried signs advocating an election boycott.

The marchers grew from a band of 300 en route from Aquino's home province of Tarlac to a crowd of more than 25,000 marching towards the airport tarmac.

The huge throng slowed the marchers' progress and left them several miles from the airport where Aquino's brother, Agapito, had planned to read a pledge to continue fighting for "truth, justice, freedom and democracy no matter what."

About 400 soldiers with riot gear guarded Manila International Airport through most of the day.

In the Makati business district, where the main band of marchers ended their trek, thousands of people waited hours for the marchers. Yellow balloons printed with "Country, Awake!" were distributed and banners hung from high-rise windows welcoming the marchers.

"I want to thank the military for overwhelmingly magnifying our fight for freedom," said marcher Maur Lichauco, Aquino's sister.

Meanwhile, the Marcos-appointed board probing the assassination continued its investigation in a building a block away from the marchers' route.

Board chairwoman Corazon Agrava said the panel is negotiating with a U.S. company to adminsiter lie detector tests to some witnesses.

The witnesses "say some things which seem to be improbable, yet you don't know whether they're withholding the truth or not," she told reporters during a recess.

Marcos has denied his government was involved in the assassination of Aquino, his chief rival, who was returning from three years voluntary exile in the United States on Aug. 21 when he was shot as he got off the airplane.

Indian opposition calls strike in port of Bombay

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Violence is flaring in at least seven Indian states over government policy toward farmers, political disputes and alleged rapes by policemen.

Opposition parties called a general strike today in the Arabian Sea port of Bombay, and thousands of police and paramilitary personnel patrolled its streets. State Chief Secretary R.D. Pradhan said the government "will deal sternly with mischief-makers."

Scattered arson and railway blockades were reported, and authorities said police wielding bamboo staves dispersed at least 12 groups of stone-hurling demonstrators in the city of more than 8 million people, India's second largest city.

Most city buses and taxis stayed off the roads, and state buses left their depots with police escort. Many businesses shut down, but hospitals and other essential services were exempted from the strike call, and flights at Bombay airport were reported normal.

The 24-hour shutdown was in support of farmers demanding more money for the government takeover of their land in Raigad district, 50 miles southeast of Bombay.

Two peasants were reported killed and several wounded there Monday when police fired to disperse farmers attacking the district government office. The farmers were led by Subodh Savji, a senior member of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's governing Congress party, the United News of India said.

Five farmers were killed and nearly 100 wounded earlier this month in clashes with police in Raigad.

The Maharashtra state government recently took over 2,804 acres of farmland with police help for a port project. The government has offered to pay for the land, but the farmers want 50 percent more than the offer.

In Karnataka state in the south, 1,000 agitating farmers were arrested Monday, bringing the total over five days to 27,000, United News of India reported. Several schools have been turned into makeshift jails to hold the detainees.

The farmers have blockaded railroads and highways since Thursday to demand that peasants tilling government-owned farms up to five acres be given title to land.

In the northwestern state of Rajasthan, mobs protesting two separate police rape incidents disrupted rail and road traffic and attacked government offices, UNI said.

Police fired to scatter rock-hurling protestors who torched a railway cabin and attempted to set fire to a railroad station in Alwar, 60 miles southwest of here, Rajasthan authorities said. Five people were reported wounded.

Crowds also burned three government buses and a police station. Several government offices, police posts and businesses were damaged and rail tracks sabotaged, UNI added.

Violence also flared Monday during a day-long general strike in Alwar called to protest the alleged rape of a 25-year-old woman by police and the subsequent death of three demonstrators by police gunfire last week. Police also fired on crowds protesting another rape in Harsauli.

U.S. seeks African support for proposed cease-fire

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — America's chief African envoy, Chester Crocker, began two days of talks with Tanzanian leaders today, apparently seeking support for a proposed cease-fire in the 17-year bush war in South-West Africa.

As the talks opened, there were optimistic news reports from South Africa that the white-minority government there was ready to withdraw its troops from southern Angola, a key to restoring peace in the long-troubled region.

Crocker met with Tanzania's foreign minister, Salim Ahmed Salim, and was scheduled to fly to Dodoma on Wednesday to meet President Julius Nyerere before continuing on to Mozambique.

Tanzania is an influential backer of the South-West Africa People's Organization, whose guerrillas have been fighting to oust South Africa from the territory, also known as Namibia.

According to South African press reports, Crocker won South African acceptance of a trial cease-fire after conveying a message from the Angolan government.

South-West Africa is wedged between Angola on the north and South Africa to the south, and is administered by the latter under an old League of Nations mandate long revoked by the United Nations. The U.N. now considers South Africa's presence there illegal.

SWAPO guerrillas launch their attacks into Namibia from Angolan territory, and South Africa has responded by occupying portions of southern Angola to block the rebels' infiltration routes.

The Rand Daily Mail reported that South Africa was ready to implement its earlier offer to "disengage" its forces from southern Angola.

U.S., Honduran troops finishing war games

SAN ESTEBAN, Honduras (AP) — U.S. Marines and Honduran troops staged war games today in a rugged section of eastern Honduras as they began the final week of the Big Pine II joint maneuvers.

The 300 Marines and 5,000 Honduran soldiers moved Monday into Olancho province 185 miles northeast of Tegucigalpa, the Honduran capital, then advanced into a wooded area of the province, armed forces chief of staff Gen. Gustavo Alvarez Martinez said.

Five battalions backed by U.S. and Honduran air support, along with 600 Honduran and 40 U.S. airborne troops, are participating in the exercises in Olancho, he said. The area is less than 125 miles from Nicaragua, where the leftist government has denounced the exercises as a provocation.

In the other major operation of Big Pine II, 5,000 U.S. and 6,000 Honduran troops conducted six days of maneuvers in the Atlantic coast area in November.

The six-month-old Big Pine II ends Feb. 8. It will be followed by similar maneuvers, to be called Granadera I after a Central American anthem, beginning in June, the general said.

He said Salvadoran and Guatemalan troops may participate in the June exercises.

Leftist rebels in El Salavdor dynamited four power poles, blacking out the northern province of Chalatenango for the fourth time this year, a power company official said.

The early morning attack left about 225,000 people without electricity, running water, sewage and other services that rely on power.

Most Polish shoppers react calmly to food price hikes

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — A brief and bloodless demonstration in the city of Wroclaw greeted nationwide food price increases averaging 10 percent, but shoppers elsewhere in Poland reacted calmly, official sources say.

Several hundred people broke away from a crowd of people leaving a Roman Catholic Mass in Wroclaw Monday evening and chanted, "Down with the rises!" They dispersed peacefully several minutes later when confronted by police in the southeastern city, the sources said.

A spokesman for the Wroclaw regional government, reached by telephone from Warsaw, acknowledged there had been an "attempted" demonstration but said it was unsuccessful.

"The scenario flashed in the pan. Those who were looking for sensations are disappointed," said the spokesman, who would not give his name.

There have been widespread strikes and rioting accompanying price increases in the past, but no other disturbances were reported Monday.

Nations pool Vietnam MIA data

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Vietnam's ambassador to the United Nation says Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia have agreed to pool any knowledge they have about American servicemen missing in action in the Vietnam war.

Ambassador Hoang Bich Son said Monday the three Indochinese countries would work with American non-governmental organizations in the search for the missing or their remains.

The agreement, drafted by the three countries' foreign ministers last weekend in Laos, says in part, "Out of humanitarian concern and regard for the American people, each country of Indochina will endeavor to communicate to the other two any eventual information on the American missing during the war in Laos, Vietnam and Kampuchea (Cambodia).

The U.S. government has said some 2,400 American servicemen are still missing from the Vietnamese war that spilled over into Laos and Cambodia.

Chinese crack down on violaters

PEKING (AP) — China's Communist government is warning the offspring of party officials that they must obey the law and not abuse their status.

The warning was contained in a letter written by Chen Yun, a senior member of the party Politburo and chairman of the party discipline inspection commission. It was published Monday on the front page of several major newspapers.

There was no official explanation for the letter. But there have been several reports in recent months of children in Communist Party families who commit crimes with impunity, thinking their status protects them.

Children of several officials have been disciplined recently for offenses ranging from theft and pornography to violent crimes such as rape.The government acknowledged that Zhu Guohua, grandson of the late armed forces Marshal Chu Teh, was executed last year for raping more than 30 girls.

Pirates kill Vietnamese refugees

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) - Pirates operating in Southeast Asian waters have killed at least 104 Vietnamese refugees during the past three months, according to the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees.

D. Bayandor, the commissioner's regional representative, said Monday the figure does not include those victims on boats which may have been sunk by the pirates and on empty boats which are washed ashore without any survivors or bodies.

Rebs shock Bobcats

Lee girls hand San Angelo first loss

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

Shirley Stephenson knew that her Midland Lee Rebels were a much better team than the score indicated after dropping a 67-49 decison to San Angelo in January.

"Sometimes teams have nights when they're in the right place at the right time," said Stephenson. "When we played them down there they were sky-high."

It took some time, but the Lady Rebs got their revenge Monday. Felicia Farias ripped the Bobcats for 28 points, continuing a torrid scoring pace. In Farias' last five outings, the senior has scored at a 24.8 clip.

"She's a good player," said Stephenson, "But she isn't going to score unless they put it in her hands."

Which isn't always true, because sometimes Farias scores simply because she got the ball herself. And sometimes, the referees gave it to Farias at the foul line, where she was a perfect 12-of-12.

But against the Bobcats, enduring their first District 4-5A loss of the year, Farias had plenty of help, even though she was all alone in the scoring column.

Tunya Mayberry, who has been slowed lately after taking off at midseason, grabbed a team-high eight rebounds. There weren't a lot to be had. Angelo, now 16-7 overall and 10-1 in district, shot over 54 percent on 18-33 shooting. Lee, conversely, had a poor shooting night (38.1 percent) but had 22 more shots than Angelo.

"They were really ready. I didn't realize how ready they were until midway through the first quarter," said Stephenson. "I looked up and we were doing things that we've wanted to do all along but haven't done."

What the Rebs did was almost unhaltingly dismantle a good, previously unbeaten team. "San Angelo has a good team," Stephenson said. "But I'm sure they had something to prove."

Brother, San Angelo believes. Farias was unstoppable, but the Bobcats continued to put her on the foul line in the fourth quarter. By that time, all hope for a fight was gone. Lee had declawed the 'Cats, and yet Farias went to the stripe time after time. Stephenson saw enough after Farias hit her tenth straight in the final quarter.

Lee, winning their 20th game of the year against six defeats, is now 9-2 in the district. The win nudges Lee closer to the Bobcats, who are still leading at 10-1.

The Rebs got off to a fast start, with Farias scoring eight in the quarter. The Rebels pressured Angelo into ten first period turnovers, and Lee converted layup upon layup.

The Rebs exploded offensivley, but everything they did was keyed off of defensive pressure and controlling the tempo. When Jeanne McFadden raced downcourt and pinned Angelo's Ulinda Young from behind. The block only helped fire up a team not known for emotional intensity. Intense is a word Stephenson never uses, but was a word she could not help use Monday.

She had no choice. Farias as usual was Farias. She pressured, rebounded (seven), and provided the impetus for Lee's easy win. Farias' scoring doesn't always prevent Lee from losing, but it doesn't hurt. Angelo could do nothing to stop her, try though they did.

Farias' trips to the charity stripe are evidence enough. Lee totaled 26 freebies, but that's because the Bobcats scratched out 27 fouls. Three players, Monica Bradley, Bambi Lopez and Bonnie Smith fouled out. Ulinda Young and Shawn Sweeten had four each.

Bradley scored 14 and Smith 11. Anita Allgood only fouled three times and scored 12 for Central, but most of Angelo's points came against the second string. The fourth quarter was a foul fest and completely wild. Angelo was hedl to eight points in the first and third quarters, but rolled for 21 points. Lee had 23.

Five games are left in the district schedule, and Lee's win makes the Bobcats a little closer to the pack and probably a little less secure.

Lee faces Abilene High on the road Thursday night. The Rebs blew the Eagles out 61-42 in a Chap Center battle this year, and AHS has improved negligibly. And with Lee's quick entry back into the hunt for number one, the Eagles should have some bad dreams tonight.

Maryland coach suspends two cagers

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Two University of Maryland basketball players charged with possession of marijuana have been suspended by basketball coach Lefty Driesell.

Driesell announced the indefinite suspension of starter Adrian Branch and substitute player Steve Rivers in a prepared statement Monday, after learning of their weekend arrest.

Dick Dull, the university's athletic director, said both he and John Slaughter, the chancellor of the university campus here, concurred with Driesell's decision.

Chaparrals nip OC

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

It wasn't overtime this time, but it still wasn't any easier. Midland College pulled into a tie for second place in the Western Junior College Conference basketball race by defeating Odessa College, 72-69, at Langford Chaparral Center Monday night.

It was closer than the final score indicates. MC's final two points with two seconds left came on a couple of technical free throws when OC scored to close the gap to 69-70 and then called a time out it didn't have left.

In the finals of the Midland College Invitational back in November, the Chaps beat the Hawks, 96-93, in overtime. This one, however, counted and the win, giving MC a 16-6 record, also tied MC with OC at 6-3, two games behind Howard College.

FOR MUCH OF the night, it was a long uphill climb for MC. Five-10 Lavell Wilson almost bombed Midland out of the game in the first half, hitting seven straight outside shots on the move as OC built up an 11-point, 35-24, lead at one stage. Midland rallied when Brian Essary hit all seven of his first half points in the final two minutes to trail 35-32 at intermission.

After MC went ahead 38-37 2:09 into the second half on a couple of Jackie Phinnessee baskets and a Zeak Williams steal and solo, the Chaps' offense went stagnant. MC wasn't moving the ball and couldn't hit from outside, missing six straight, four by Essary. OC took advantage of the doldrums to go in front 48-40 with 12 minutes left in the game.

Then, Essary hit from the corner. Chuckie Graves came off the bench to hit from both corners, Phinnessee got two on a fast break and goal tending call and Essary hit two 15 footers and snuck inside for another as MC took a 56-52 lead with 6:20 left.

THE CHAPS hung on from there, always coming up with the timely basket or free throw when the Wranglers inched to within a point or two. In the first seven minutes of the half, OC made hay inside by outhustling the Chaps off the boards. From 13 minutes until two minutes remained, the Wranglers didn't score from underneath. And Wilson, the scourge of the first half, was held to one basket and only three shots the second half.

"It was one of the sweetest victories I've ever had," beamed Coach Jerry Stone after the game. Only he knew the shape the Chaps were in. Zeak Williams had only one practice since recovering off a week-long seige of tonsilities and Jerald Wrightsil was out with it.

Six-five Jackie Phinnessee, who had 13 points, five-of-six from the field in the last half, was asked how he felt after the game, "Terrible," he wheezed. "I've got the flu...from your friend," pointing at Chuckie Graves, who pointed at Zeak.

TEVIIN BINNS used his 6-9 height edge to score all 12 of his points in the first half, mostly on lob in passes as MC built up an early 19-15 lead. But then the Wranglers collapsed their defense and about that time Wilson drew the hot hand and OC ran off a 20-5 streak to take a 35-24 lead.

Asked if he got discouraged after missing his first four shots in the second half, Essary said, "No, I didn't, but the rest of the team did. They were yelling, at me every time I missed."

When he hit his groove, Essary helped turned the game around and wound up with a 21 point night. "He was open," said Stone, "I felt he'd begin hitting sooner or later,"

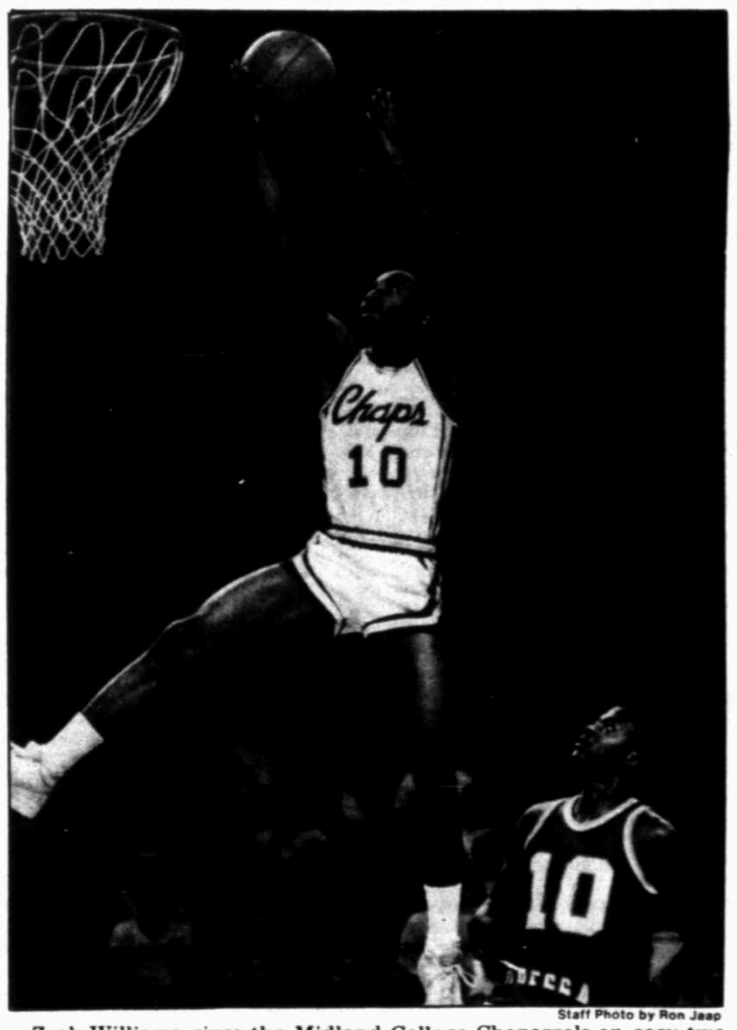

The Chaps got another key effort from Kurt Martin, who also broke into double figures with 10 points.

The Chaps hit 15 of 24 second half field shots, and Essary, Graves and Martin were a combined 0-for-7 before anyone of them started hitting. More importantly, the Chaps were 10 of 11 from the line in the second half while OC was 8-for-15.

Wilson led OC with 17 points while Tommie Bolden had 14 and Dwayne Chisum 15 before fouling out with more than six minutes to play.

In other WJCC action, South Plains beat Amarillo, 77-55, and Howard downed Clarendon, 77-65.

Odessa College—Lavell Wilson 8-12 1-2 2 17; Tommie Bolden 6-11 2-4 2 14; Patrick Fairs 0-2 0-0 1 0; Bruce Nedd 3-6 2-2 0 8; Dewayne Chism 6-17 3-4 5 15; Luther Barker 2-4 0-0 3 4; Mike Benoit 3-4 2-5 1 8; Frank Phipps 1-2 1-2 4 3; Reginald Hodge 0-1 0-0 0 0. Totals 29-59 11-19 18 69.
Midland College—Zeak Williams 2-5 2-2 1 6; Tevin Binns 5-8 2-4 3 12; Jackie Phinnessee 6-8 1-2 4 13; Brian Essary 7-15 7-7 1 21; Vernon Coleman 0-2 0-0 2 0; Vert Cooper 0-2 0-0 1 0; Lawrence Chumbley 1-1 0-0 2 2; Kurt Martin 4-8 2-2 0 10; Chuckie Graves 3-5 0-1 0 6. Totals 29-55 14-18 15 72.
Halftime: OC 35, MC 32.

Bulldogs stay in race

BIG SPRING — The Midland High girls basketball team stayed in the thick of the District 4-5A race here Monday night with a 54-41 victory over the Big Spring Steers.

The win gives MHS an 8-3 loop record in 4-5A and a 17-8 mark on the year. MHS, however, is still one game behind Midland Lee in the battle for the second playoff spot after Lee handed San Angelo its first district loss of the season Monday. That could turn out to be bad news for the Bulldogs, who must have another Lee loss during the next three games to hope for a playoff berth. MHS has no more shots at the Rebels in this campaign.

Deidra Knapp, who is coming on strong for the Bulldogs as the season winds down, scored 16 points for her fourth straight game in double figures. Denise Lanz had 12 points and O.J. Johnson had 11.

Trel Clemmons led Big Spring with 15 points and Debra Rubio had 12. The high scoring Big Spring duo of Paula Spears and Monette Wise was held to a combined 11 points.

The Bulldogs got off to a slow start, trailing the Steers by an 10-8 margin after the first period, but held a 25-24 lead at the half. MHS put the game away in the third period with a 16-7 advantage.

Midland High (54): Pam McDonald, 0-0-0-0; Charolette Hines, 4-0-1-8; O.J. Johnson, 5-1-1-11; Denise Lanz, 5-2-1-12; Deidra Knapp, 7-2-0-16; Terez Robinson, 3-1-3-7; Jackie Jones, 0-0-0-0; Tammy Smith, 0-0-0-0. Totals: 24-6-6—54.

MHS' low point turns magic

Midland High was a pitiful sight at the Odessa Permian Fieldhouse Friday night. Shots turned into bricks. Turnovers came at the pace of a whirling Las Vegas slot machine. And charity tosses should have been donated to Permian.

As you would expect from that kind of play, MHS trailed the Panthers. Well, trailed is a mild word in this one. With the first trip down court in the third quarter, Permian led by 21 points. It seemed to be pack the bags Dogs and go home time.

IT WAS really bad. Words can't describe it. The rout was on, wasn't it?

MHS trailed by 19 at the half. It could have been worse folks because Permian didn't play all that well in the first quarter either. But in one stretch of the second quarter, Permian reeled off 17 unanswered points. Midland High couldn't have scored with a ladder.

The Bulldogs' Fred Franklin didn't help. He got some chances at the free throw line and tried to throw them out of the gym. This was the same guy who started district play by hitting only two of 17 free throws in the first four games and the one who missed a couple of crucial late game free throws in a two-point loss to Abilene High only a week earlier. He was frustrated to say the least. His coach Jack Stephenson was frustrated too.

STEPHENSON pulled Franklin after missing a free throw. Franklin threw himself into a bench chair and simply said, "Damn." It just came out.

Stephenson said, "Fred, that won't help anything."

Franklin asked, "Well, what will then."

Stephenson replied, "I don't know. Maybe you ought to try shooting underhanded."

That may have been the low ebb of the MHS season: They had lost two games in a row and another loss could have put them on the endangered species list.

Somehow. Someway. MHS pulled it out of the fire. Twenty-one points down and the Bulldogs came back to win. They erased a 13-point Permian lead in the last 5:59 of play. Guess who hit the free throws that ultimately gave MHS the victory?

Franklin, of course. He hit eight of nine free throws in the fourth quarter and two of those gave MHS the lead late in the game.

"I didn't know whether to shoot underhanded or not," said Franklin. "At the time, anything sounded good. But in the second half everytime I went to the line, Chris Herbert kept saying to me, 'Con-Cen-Trate, Fred.'"

Suddenly, bricks turned to cord rippers. Free throws were automatic. Turnovers declined from 22 to five. Permian's back door was burned.

"I don't know how you explain a victory like that," said Stephenson. "I never thought we could pull that one out against a good team like Permian. But it happened and these kids showed me something and showed themselves something. This may be the thing to turn it all around for us.

"FRANKLIN'S FREE throw shooting was really something. Nobody works harder on it than he does. In the first half, he was frustrated. I was frustrated. The team was frustrated. I don't know what I did to his head with the underhanded shot thing, but the results are there to see.

"I've never seen anything like this game in my entire coaching career," said Stephenson.

This corner still can't figure out how the Bulldogs eventually erased 21 points. But the 65-62 score was proof enough. Figures don't lie — do they? Free throws don't lie either — do they, Fred?

Eyes turn to Abilene as 4-5A mad scramble unfolds

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

With the District 4-5A basketball race facing a mad scramble to the finish line over the span of the next six games, eyes turn to league leading Abilene High tonight when the Eagles host second place Odessa Permian.

If Abilene High (7-1) wins tonight, the Eagles would have a two-game lead on the field with only five left to play, leaving Permian and Midland High tied for second place and the remaining playoff berth. On the other hand, if Permian (6-2) wins and Midland High (5-3) wins at Chaparral Center against Big Spring, the Bulldogs would still be out of first place by a game, but it might be easier to win an overall title.

HOW WOULD MHS coach Jack Stephenson like to see the AHS-Permian game come out?

"That's a tough question. I really don't know," said Stephenson. "I've talked this over with a lot of people and we can't really figure out which would be best for us.

"If Abilene High wins they would have some momentum over the rest of the field, but they have some tough games left. I don't think they will go undefeated the rest of the way and even if they win Tuesday they have to play us, Lee, Cooper and Odessa High. I really think Odessa High will be a big factor in the second half because they are playing well but are out of the district race. They will be loose everytime they play.

"If Permian wins we would still be a game behind in the standings, but I think we might have a better shot at coming back and winning the title. I think both Permian and Abilene High have some hard times ahead of them. It's going to be interesting."

MHS JUMPED back into the thick of the 4-5A race by defeating Permian Friday on foreign hardwood. Not only did they win, but they raced from 21 points back to take the win.

"I've never seen anything like that game since I've been coaching. Never!," said Stephenson. "That win really has put our team in a good frame of mind, but I think that game will serve as a great teaching tool for our kids later in life. It's something you can always recall and use."

Of course, Stephenson and crew must take care of the Steers tonight. Big Spring is 0-8 in league play and the Bulldogs are expected to take this one. Stephenson, however, isn't taking this one for granted.

"Big Spring is getting better. Abilene High led them by only two points at the half and they led San Angelo at the half. We have to take care of our own business or the game against Abilene High and Permian won't mean much either way to us."

MEANWHILE, Midland Lee, which fell to OHS Friday, is still in the race with a 4-4 mark, but travel to San Angelo tonight in a chance to break the three-team logjam for fourth place.

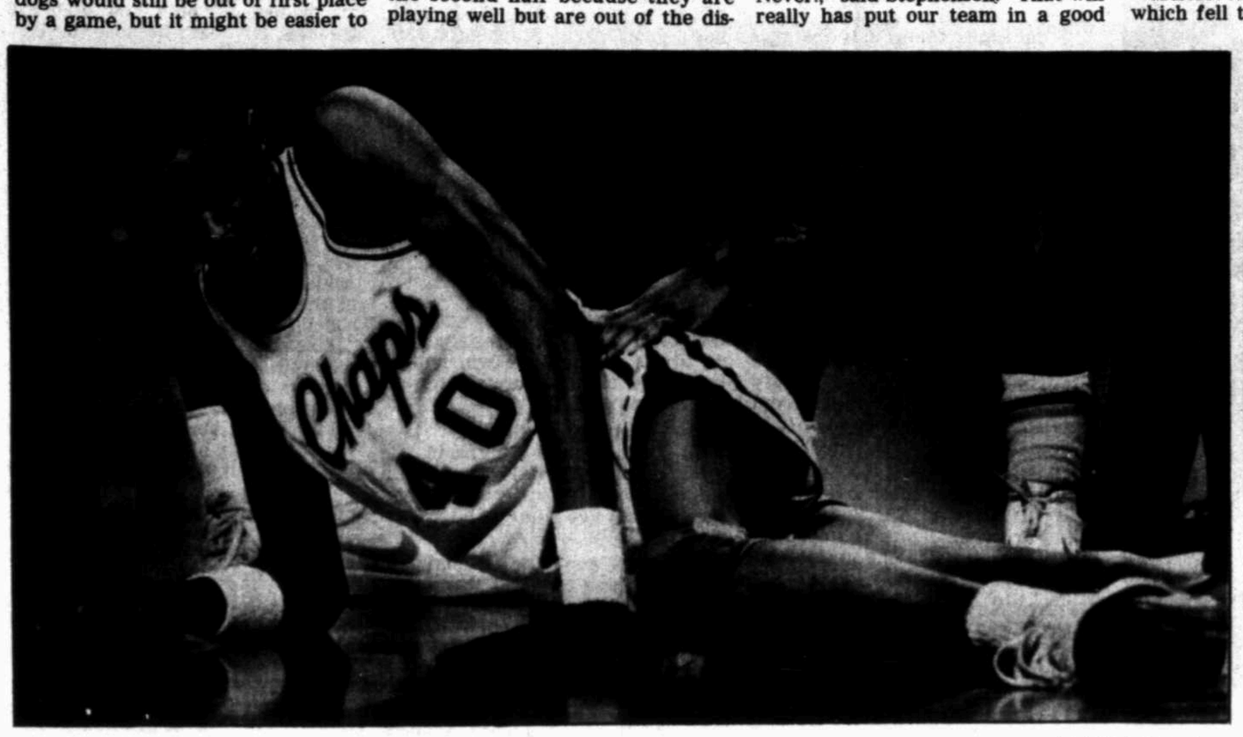

Lee's stock could have been much higher with a win over OHS. The Rebs would have been in the same position as MHS. Now the Rebs have to fight for survival.

Odessa High's Joe Terry continues to lead the District 4-5A scoring parade. His 25-point outing against Lee Friday gave him 145 points in eight district games for an 18.1 average. Midland High's Chris Rooker moved into second place in league scoring with a 19-point effort against Permian and a 17 point district average, which is 2.7 points below his season average.

Midland High's Kenneth Johnson is in fourth place behind Cooper's Bob Estes and Lee's Alvin Henry moved to seventh place with a big 26-point effort against OHS. Midland High's Darrell Davis ranks ninth and Lee's Derek Westbrook is tied for 14th place with San Angelo's Brian Ross. That should be a scoring battle to watch tonight in San Angelo.

Hobbs ranked No. 1 power

By The Associated Press

A band of Eagles — in the form of basketball teams from Hobbs and Albuquerque Eldorado — head this week's Associated Press rankings in Class AAAA New Mexico high school basketball.

Hobbs, the leader throughout the season, opened up some breathing room over Eldorado in this week's voting by sportscasters and sports writers around New Mexico.

HOBBS RECEIVED 13 of the 18 first place votes cast and polled a total of 175 points. The southeast New Mexico power is now 14-2 for the season.

Eldorado captured the Albuquerque Public Schools Tournament last week to run its record to 13-1. The Albuquerque brand of Eagles received the five first place votes that did not go to Hobbs and finished with 167 total points in this week's rankings.

Sandia, 12-2, moved up to the No. 3 spot this week, followed by Clovis, 14-3, and Los Alamos, 11-3, which jumped two places to No. 5 after winning the Capital City Tournament last week.

The rest of the top 10 in AAAA includes No. 6 Albuquerque High, 10-4; No. 7 Farmington, 11-7; No. 8 Del Norte, 9-5; No. 9 Mayfield 10-7 and No. 10 Alamogordo, 8-7.

For the second straight week, Albuquerque Academy and Goddard finished in a tie for the top spot in AAA.

ACADEMY, 13-1, received eight first place votes while Goddard, 14-1, received 10 first place votes. Lovington, ranked eighth this week with an 8-6 record, picked up one first place vote.

Tucumcari, 9-3, moved up one spot to No. 3 with St. Pius, 10-4 and Grants, 12-2, rounding out the top five in AAA.

Gretzky to play in star game

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Wayne Gretzky does not plan on letting his sore shoulder keep him out of tonight's National Hockey League All-Star Game.

"I'll be a bit more careful than usual," Gretzky said Monday.

The Edmonton Oilers' scoring wizard said his injured right shoulder has left him at "half-strength," but he added he would sit out of the game at the Brendan Byrne Arena only if the pain worsened during a practice session this morning with his Campbell Conference teammates.

Meanwhile, injuries have sidelined goaltender Al Jensen of the Washington Capitals and five high-scoring forwards — Mike Bossy and Bryan Trottier, mainstays of the four-time NHL champion New York Islanders; Jari Kurri of the Edmonton Oilers, Tony Tanti of the Vancouver Canucks and Marcel Dionne of the Los Angeles Kings.

Gretzky, far out in front as the NHL's scoring leader with 61 goals and 92 assists for 153 points, injured his shoulder Jan. 21 when he was knocked into the boards by Dave Taylor of the Kings.

NHL All-Stars

"It's funny how people get injured," Gretzky said. "I wasn't hit hard. It was the way my shoulder hit the boards. I've been hit a lot harder."

Gretzky stopped short of blaming his shoulder for the end of his 51-game scoring streak, halted Saturday night by the Kings.

"It's a funny injury," Gretzky said. "I can shoot the puck, but I can't extend my right arm. Guys play with worse injuries than mine."

He also said he would like to begin a new point-scoring streak, but noted "you need so many things to go your way — good breaks and good bounces."

Gretzky, playing in his fifth All-Star Game at the age of 23, triggered the Campbell Conference to a 9-3 victory in last year's All-Star Game by scoring four times in the third period.

"That was something we all dream of doing," he said. "To do it again would be great, but I wouldn't count on it."

But Boston's Pete Peeters, goalie for the Wales Conference, said: "On any given night, he can do it. He can control the game. He always does."

"Every time he steps on the ice, he's capable of exploding," said Denis Potvin of the Islanders, captain of the Wales Conference. "We'd like to keep (the Campbell Conference) under 10 goals. Then we'll have a chance. It'll be totally offensive."

Bossy and Trottier, third and sixth among NHL scoring leaders and key figures in the Islanders' bid to capture their fifth straight Stanley Cup, both have knee injuries and are joined on the Wales Conference casualty list by Jensen.

The other injured players are from the Campbell. Kurri, the NHL's second-leading scorer behind teammate Gretzky, has a groin injury; Dionne has an ankle injury and Tanti cut his thumb in an accident last week at his home.

Despite the absence of those high-scoring players, Campbell Conference Coach Glenn Sather of the Oilers said he expected a high-scoring game.

"I don't expect a 1-0 or 2-0 game. The skills of players here are too great," Sather said.

Sarajevo ready for Olympics

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — Less than one week before the Winter Olympics start, the host city is ready for the world.

The years of physical preparations have paid off. Now the Games are in the hands of the citizens and they seem anxious to please this invasion force of foreign journalists and athletes.

There was the case of two Olympic visitors who, on their first night in town, set out shopping for a deck of playing cards. Their taxi driver took them all over the city. After an hour or so, when he became convinced that the search would be fruitless, the driver solved the dilemma by simply taking the customers to his home and turning over two of his own, rather worn but still usable, decks.

There was no charge for the cards, but the cabbie's tip was substantial.

Americans can afford to be generous. The local currency is the dinar and each dollar produces about 127 of them. So a steak dinner costing 800 dinars is really less than $7, a culinary bargain.

A typical restaurant meal seems to go on and on with course after course delivered to the table. The food is well done and heavily spiced. You wash it all down with sljivovica. This plum brandy, pronounced sleevo-veetsa, is a clear, rather innocent looking liquid which is anything but innocent. Even if you miss the pronounciation, the waiter will know what you want. And he will smile when you order it.

At one restaurant, strolling musicians played folk tunes but included a slice of Americana with a Yugoslavian rendition of "Oh, Susanna."

There is an old world charm about the city. The narrow, cobblestone streets and cramped shops are a culture shock for Americans accustomed to wide highways and sprawling shopping malls.

Sarajevo also is secure. The city is swarming with police and soldiers, and they are not here to direct traffic.

Every key intersection even remotely involved with the Games is guarded, and passport checks, especially after midnight, are routine.

The security force carries machine guns and a no-nonsense air. If you look even mildly suspicious, they blow a shrill whistle. The whistle means stop and when you hear it, you don't ask questions. You stop.

Sometimes, they don't bother blowing the whistle. That's worse.

One adventurous group of reporters set out on a little walk their first night in town and decided, like your average Americans, to take a shortcut.

It was a mistake.

They never realized they were on the border of the building housing Olympic officials, an ultra-sensitive area. Then, one of them felt the business end of the machine gun in his back.

His explanation, complete with frantic waving of press credentials, was fast and, fortunately, accepted. The group moved on, taking the long way around, and giving wide berth to the machine guns.

The rail link from Belgrade to Sarajevo is the Bosna Express and modern trains make the daily runs of 230 miles or so. People stop along the way to watch the trains bearing the Olympic Logo pass by. The cars are in marked contrast to the regular drab green commuter ones that run here and look like something straight out of a 1940 Peter Lorre movie.

The trip is mostly over flat lands and you could just as easily be riding through the midwestern United States.

It seems to snow in sections here with long stretches of snow-covered roads abruptly changing to grass-covered countryside with no trace of winter.

Stadium closed for track work

Ed Nixon, Midland's assistant athletic director, announced today that Memorial Stadium will be closed to the public through Monday.

Work crews are putting the finishing touches on Memorial Stadium's new artificial track and no one will be allowed to use the track during this time.

"The new surface has to have time to cure and we are asking that the public not use the track through Monday, Feb. 6," said Nixon. "We are asking that the public cooperate with us during this time. If anyone gets on the track at this time, there will be no way to get the footprints out."

The Memorial Stadium track is used daily by recreational runners. The Memorial Stadium gates will be locked through Monday.

Work on the new seven-lane, all-weather track has been going on since November. The new latex surface is the final step in completing the track.

Turnbull closer to decorating

HOUSTON (AP) — Wendy Turnbull has bought a new home in Florida and likes to spend her spare time on the women's pro tennis tour reading up on ideas for decorating.

A check for $30,000 would help her decorative touch and Turnbull moved a step closer to that prize Monday night with a 6-2, 6-2 victory over Great Britain's Amanda Brown in a first round match of the $150,000 Virginia Slims Tournament of Houston.

Turnbull, 31, who also maintains a home in Sandgate, Australia, took care of house cleaning quickly against Brown, needing only one hour to move into the second round despite an inconsistent serve.

"I am famous for three-set matches but I'm happy with a two-setter for the first round," Turnbull said. "I'd never played her before and I have trouble with people I've never played."

Turnbull struggled with her serve but made up for it with the quickness that earned her the nickname of "Rabbit."

"It's definitely a challenge to get to those drop shots," she said, "and I'm still getting to them."

Turnbull made a low percentage of her first serves although she was broken only once in the match — in the sixth game of the first set. In that game, Turnbull served an ace and double faulted on successive points.

Tar Heels beat three in Top 20

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — North Carolina, which overcame three Top 20 teams last week and remained unbeaten, kept its huge lead atop the Associated Press weekly college basketball poll in rankings released today.

But for the first time in three weeks, North Carolina's support as the No. 1 team was not unanimous. A panel of 62 sports writers and broadcasters rewarded Coach Dean Smith's squad, 17-0, with 61 first place votes, while the other first-place vote went to No. 2 DePaul.

North Carolina received 1,239 points in the voting and DePaul collected 1,171. The balloting system awards 20 points for each first place vote, 19 for second, etc.

North Carolina — which downed No. 15 Wake Forest 100-63, No. 18 Georgia Tech 73-61 and No. 14 Louisiana State 90-79 — must face the next month without freshman guard Kenny Smith, who suffered a broken wrist in Sunday's game against LSU.

DePaul, 16-0, defeated Princeton 50-39 and routed UCLA 84-68, handing the Bruins only their 18th loss in 297 games at Pauley Pavilion.

While Kentucky and Georgetown remained at Nos. 3 and 4, respectively, four teams did some climbing in the Top Ten.

Thanks to Notre Dame's upset of previously fifth-ranked Maryland, Nevada-Las Vegas, Houston, Texas-El Paso and Illinois all moved up a notch to Nos. 5, 6, 7, and 8, respectively.

A newcomer in this week's Top Ten is Memphis State, which defeated No. 12 Oklahoma last Saturday 69-65. The Tigers are now No. 9, coming up from 13, while Maryland slipped to No. 10.

There were three teams to this week's poll. Purdue, tied with Illinois for the Big Ten lead, re-entered the rankings at No. 16 while Georgia Tech and Auburn appear for the first time this season at Nos. 18 and 19, respectively.

The three casualties: former No. 16 Arkansas, which was surprised by Rice and Villanova, Georgia and Virginia, previously Nos. 18 and 19.

Also in the Second Ten, Tulsa, 17-1, climbed a notch to No. 11. And one week after entering the poll at No. 20, Syracuse showed the biggest jump by soaring to No. 13. The Orangemen defeated Big East rivals Pitt and St. John's last week, though they lost to Georgetown 80-67 Monday night after the votes had been tallied.

Louisiana State, 12-5, plunged four places to No. 14.

Wake Forest and Louisville are the 15th and 17th ranked clubs, as UCLA fell to No. 20.

Georgetown ringer tosses in 22

By The Associated Press

Michael Jackson couldn't make it, so understudy Reggie Williams took over and made beautiful music for the Georgetown five.

"I didn't realize he (Jackson) wasn't going to play until he went onto the floor to warm up," said Georgetown Coach John Thompson. "At that point, I put Reggie in the starting lineup. He did an excellent job. He does a lot of things now by mistake, so when he learns how to play he's going to be dangerous."

All Williams did Monday night was pump in 22 points to lead fourth-ranked Georgetown to an 80-67 victory over No. 13 Syracuse before a crowd of 30,758 in the losers' Carrier Dome.

Elsewhere, third-ranked Kentucky pulled away in the second half and whipped Tennessee 93-74, ninth-ranked Memphis State got 29 points and a last-second block from Keith Lee to hold off Virginia Tech 63-62, No. 17 Louisville downed Southern Mississippi 63-56 and No. 18 Georgia Tech "celebrated" a rare appearance in the Associated Press Top Twenty by losing to Duke 69-68 when David Henderson hit the second of two free throws after time ran out.

Top Ten

Although Jackson's injured ankle was too sore for him to play, Williams' performance was a case of deja vu. Last year, Jackson, then a freshman guard, scored what was then a Carrier Dome record 31 points to help Georgetown beat Syracuse.

Williams had plenty of help. Sophomore David Wingate added 18 points and 7-foot center Patrick Ewing, held scoreless in the first half, scored four baskets in the second half and keyed a tough zone defense that slowed down the high-scoring Orangemen.

It was the first Big East Conference setback for Syracuse, 14-4 over-all and 8-1 — eight consecutive victories was a Big East record — in league play. Georgetown is 18-2, 7-1. Rafael Addison led Syracuse with 18 points.

Georgetown trailed 37-34 at halftime, but Ewing put the Hoyas in the lead for good 52-51 on a layup with 8:38 remaining. In the next 39 seconds, Bill Martin sank a basket and Williams made two free throws for a 56-51 lead.

"They (Syracuse) were playing a zone and collapsing on him (Ewing)," Thompson said. "The important thing was for the other players to capitalize. Patrick becomes a playmaker by accident when he's double- and triple-teamed; he doesn't have to touch the ball."

Kenny Walker scored 18 of his 21 points in the second half as Kentucky turned back Tennessee and improved its record to 16-2 and 7-2 in the Southeastern Conference. Walker brought the Rupp Arena crowd to its feet with a backward stuff to give Kentucky a 77-62 lead with 5:02 left.

The Wildcats, who led by 14 points in the first half and by 10 at the intermission, let Tennessee score seven straight points to pull within 54-53 with 11:21 remaining. But Kentucky outscored the Vols 23-9 in the next six minutes, with Walker scoring 10 points on two dunks and a pair of three-point plays.

"It's been that way all year. I don't know what it is," Walker said of his second-half performance. "I had two fouls and sat out a lot of the first half. So I came out after hal

Hodel says oil stockpiles will not be used if imports are disrupted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Energy Secretary Donald Hodel, believing U.S. oil imports may be disrupted this year, says the Reagan administration will not use the nation's emergency oil stockpile to temper the rising prices that could result.

"We cannot stem the tide of world oil prices in the case of a drastic supply shortage," Hodel said. "The most counter-productive thing the United States could do is to artificially sell oil to the American people at a price that doesn't represent the world oil price."

Instead, Hodel told the Senate Energy Committee on Monday, the administration would rely on the private market to distribute oil from the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, including using price to discourage consumption, without attempting to implement allocation and price control schemes.

"I think we're in a position to respond in a rational, responsible way, without the government stepping in and telling people what they can buy, where they cay buy it and what price they have to pay," he said.

The Strategic Petroleum Reserve, the nation's emergency stockpile, now holds more than 380 million barrels of oil, the equivalent of about 90 days of oil imports.

Hodel said oil from the petroleum reserve would be moved into the supply system as rapidly as possible after a major disruption, sold through competitive bidding that would put its price at a level comparable with world market prices.

But Sen. James A. McClure, R-Idaho, the committee's chairman and a strong supporter of standby allocation measures, said Hodel was kidding himself if he believed Congress would let such a plan go forward.

"Congress acts according to its own determination of what is responsible," McClure told Hodel. "... Congress is not going to sit on its hands while people are getting cold."

Without a set policy, McClure warned, distribution plans would be drafted in a panic, possibly making the situation worse.

Hodel said he believes there could be a disruption in U.S. oil imports sometime this year, particularly because of the uncertainty of what will happen in the war between Iran and Iraq. But he added that a disruption could be minor and offset by unused oil production capacity elsewhere in the world.

"If I had to bet, I would bet there would be some kind of disruption of supply or perceived disruption of supply sometime in the course of the year," Hodel told the committee in response to a question.

He said the "perceived disruption" could be as simple as a rumor that influenced the volatile world oil market. Real disruptions "could be anything from a one-day blockage of a single port, the sinking of a single tanker, to several days interruption," he said.

But Hodel also noted that world oil consumption has dropped, leaving many producing nations with more oil than they can sell.

"You could have a significant amount of production capacity in the (Persian) Gulf wiped out and, because of the surplus production capacity in the rest of the world ... you would still have excess production capacity," he said.

"As long as the interruption is below (the excess production), the impacts are not drastic and you can't be sure the price will rise in any significant fashion," the energy secretary said.

However, at another point in his testimony, Hodel noted that "a modest interruption can have a dramatic effect" because of the way the market reacts.

The Iran-Iraq conflict has become a war of attrition, with Iran holding one advantage in its ability to finance its war effort with oil exports shipped through the Persian Gulf. Iran has cut off Iraqi access to the gulf.

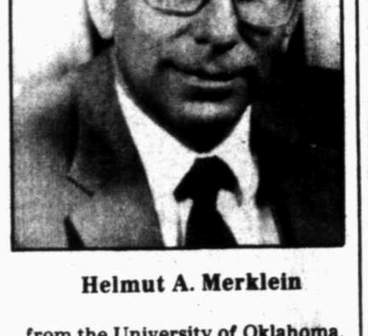

Under increasing economic pressure because of its loss of oil revenues, Iraq is threatening Iran's oil terminal at Kharg. Iran in turn has threatened to close down the gulf entirely if its exports are blocked.

Since one-third of all the oil sold on the world market today comes from the Persian Gulf and is shipped through the 30-mile-wide Strait of Hormuz, the Iran-Iraq conflict threatens much of the world's oil supply.

Despite the uncertainty, Hodel said the United States is in a relatively good position to weather a supply disruption.

Aside from the increased stockpiles, U.S. reliance on oil from member countries of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has dropped to 12 percent of U.S. demand, compared to 34 percent in 1977. Overall consumption last year dropped to an estimated 15.1 million barrels a day, the lowest figure since 1970, although Hodel said economic recovery could cause some increase in consumption.

DOE official to speak

Helmut A. Merklein

Helmut A. Merklein, assistant secretary for international affairs, U.S. Department of Energy, will be guest speaker for the All Convention Luncheon Monday, Feb. 6, 1984, at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

The luncheon is sponsored by the division of professional affairs of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists and is a part of the program during the Southwest Section of AAPG convention to be held in Midland, Feb. 5-7.

He is the principal international policy advisor to Secretary of Energy Donald P. Hodel and spokesman for the secretary on matters of international importance. Before joining the DOE Merklein worked nine years in oil and gas industry. For the last 14 years he has been in the field of academics with professorships at the Universite de Nice, France, University of Dallas and Texas A&M University. Merklein has petroleum engineering degrees from the University of Oklahoma, University of Dallas and Texas A&M University.

Merklein's topic of discussion will be world energy.

Economic indicators up again last month

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's main gauge of future economic strength rose 0.6 percent in December, the 15th increase in the last 16 months, the Commerce Department said today.

The forecasting gauge, the Index of Leading Economic Indicators, is a compilation of a dozen forward-pointing statistics including figures on employment, inflation, stock market prices and orders for goods that will be produced in the future.

The increase in December reversed a dip of 0.2 percent in November, which had been the first drop in the index after 14 straight advances during which the index posted strong month-to-month jumps as the nation pulled out of the 1981-82 recession.

However, the decline for November was revised to a slight 0.2 percent drop rather than the preliminary estimate last month of a 0.4 percent decrease.

The 0.6 percent increase for December appeared to bolster the Reagan administration's predictions that the economic recovery will continue through 1984.

Today's report said that four of the 11 available indicators rose in December, with the biggest contribution coming from a change in business and consumer borrowing.

Other indicators showing improvement over November were weekly claims for state unemployment insurance, the rate of deliveries of goods to businesses and the amount of the money supply.

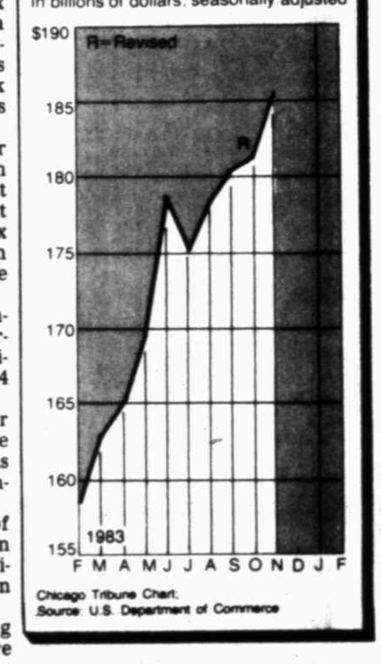

Six of the available 11 indicators decreased although the rate of decline was not enough to offset the showing of the indicators which advanced.

Those declining were the average workweek, new orders by manufacturers for consumer goods and materials, formation of new businesses, contracts and orders for plant and equipment, building permits and stockmarket prices. The biggest decline came from new business formation.

The index began to rise in September 1982, two months before the trough of the recession. There were large average gains of 5.9 percent and 4.7 percent in the first and second quarters of last year, foretelling the robust growth of spring and summer.

The accompanying Index of Concident Indicators, designed to measure current conditions rather than forecast those of the future, rose 0.6 percent in December.

Pennzoil attorney says Texaco, Getty merger could diminish competition

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The proposed Texaco-Getty merger is prohibited by a series of federal court rulings and is being attempted only because of "relaxed standards" by enforcement agencies, an attorney for Pennzoil said Monday in a court challenge to the deal.

Houston attorney John Jeffers Jr. said the proposed combination of Texaco and Getty would have the effect of encouraging other similar mergers and diminishing competition in the oil and gas industry.

Attorneys for Texaco and Getty countered that the planned merger would not adversely affect competition in the oil and gas industry and that delaying it could harm shareholders of the firms.

The arguments were made in the first day of a hearing before U.S. District Judge James Ellison in which attorneys for Pennzoil are seeking an injunction against the merger.

GETTY EMBRACED a Texaco takeover offer Jan. 7, spurning Pennzoil's offer three days earlier to purchase 43 percent of the Los Angeles-based company for $2.6 billion.

The proposed Texaco-Getty merger, a record $10.1 billion deal, would be the largest in U.S. corporate history. Texaco is the nation's third-largest oil company while Getty ranks No. 14 and Pennzoil is No. 32.

"Cities Service, Conoco, Marathon are already gone," Jeffers told Ellison in opening statements, likening the firms taken over by larger companies to dominoes in a row.

"What makes these parties (Texaco and Getty) suddenly in 1984 think that they can do it?" Jeffers asked. "They think federal enforcement agencies will permit them to do it. They may be right.

"THESE PARTIES — despite all the law — think they can effectuate this merger ... the largest in corporate history," he said.

But Jeffers said a string of U.S. Supreme Court opinions has indicated such mergers are "clearly and plainly" prohibited by antitrust law.

Stephen M. Axinn, representing Texaco, said the merger between the two companies would still leave Texaco with a share of the market comparable to that it held in the mid-1970s.

Axinn said that fact "puts the lie to the argument that has been made here that there is some threat to the American economy" posed by the merger.

HE SAID THE merger makes sense because Texaco has excess refining capacity and Getty has available excess crude oil.

Getty's stock sold for $80 a share before Christmas and now is worth $128 a share under the latest Texaco offer. Unless the merger is approved, shareholders stand to lose $3.8 billion, attorneys said.

Meanwhile, Texaco officials announced late Sunday they have reached an agreement with Power Test Corp. of Plainview, N.Y., to sell 600 company-owned Getty service stations in 11 northeastern and middle Atlantic seaboard states.

Texaco and Getty have a marketing overlap in 21 states. Getty has about 4,490 stations in 29 states. Texaco has 3,000 company-owned stations and about 16,000 independently owned stations bearing the Texaco name.

POWER TEST HAS 450 company-owned stations in four states. The company, which had estimated revenues of $195.6 million in 1983, offered $90 milion for the 600 Getty stations.

Pennzoil attorneys also have filed a lawsuit in Wilmington, Del., seeking a court order giving Pennzoil the right to buy 43 percent of Getty stock at $115 a share. A ruling in that case is pending.

In pre-hearing documents, Pennzoil contends the union of Getty and Texaco would give Texaco less incentive to explore for oil, would set off a rash of acquisitions that would reduce offshore drilling and would result in an increase in the retail price of gasoline.

Pennzoil's lawsuit calls Texaco's offer a "ruthless and predatory use of sheer financial power."

GETTY OFFICIALS released a statement Friday rebutting the Pennzoil charges that the proposed takeover violates the spirit of antitrust laws.

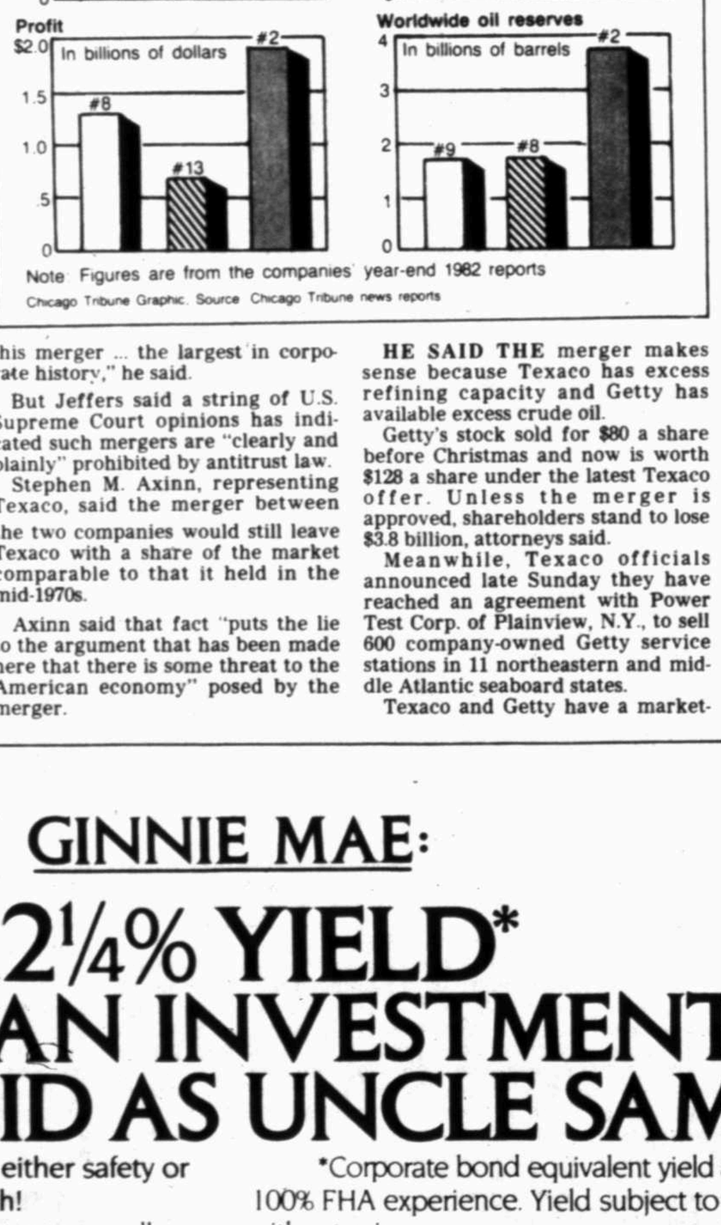

"Texaco together with Getty would represent only about six percent of domestic crude oil production and about seven percent of the nation's gasoline sales," the Getty statement said. "Market concentration, already low compared with most industries, would not be significantly increased.

"Critics of this and other mergers have argued that the purchase of existing oil reserves does nothing to increase energy supplies," Getty said in the statement. "This line of argument, though, does not ring true. Mergers of this sort, in fact, foster the efficient discovery and development of reserves and benefit energy users in several ways."

T-bill yeilds decline slightly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Following a one-week gain, yields on short-term Treasury securities dipped slightly in the latest auctions, government officials said.

The government announced Monday that it sold $12.8 billion in new T-bills — half in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 8.87 percent, down from 8.92 percent, and half in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 8.97 percent, down from 9.01 percent.

Monday's yields were the lowest since the Jan. 16 level of 8.82 percent for three-month bills.

U.S. manufacturing falling behind foreign competition

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. manufacturing, a main force behind the nation's rise to world power, is falling behind foreign competition and putting future American leadership in question, according to a study commissioned by nine of the nation's manufacturing giants.

The study's recommendations: Shape international policy to help U.S. industry as well as meet political goals, tailor tax laws to encourage more investment at home, reduce interest rates and bring down the overvalued dollar by cutting the federal deficit and somehow find a way to slow a 30-year stream of recessions.

National policies have fallen short in all of these areas, contributing to an industrial decline relative to Japan and other nations, said the study released today by Data Resources Inc., a Lexington, Mass., economic forecasting firm headed by Otto Eckstein, who was a White House economic adviser in the Johnson administration.

Sponsors of the study, which was aimed at finding "the scope and the causes of decline in competitiveness of U.S. manufacturing industries," were American Telephone & Telegraph Co., Bethlehem Steel Corp., Burlington Industries Inc., Deere & Co., E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., Eastman Kodak Co., Ford Motor Co., Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. and Texaco Inc.

UNTIL SUCH economic and financial policies and conditions are dealt with, attempts to solve the problems of specific industries "have little prospect of success," the report said.

"No degree of cleverness on the part of management, no new-found cooperation between employers and workers, no industrial policies by the federal government can overcome the handicaps of an overvalued dollar and a domestic economy disrupted by credit crunches and recession every three or four years," it said.

It also asked, "Can the United States continue to play the role of guardian of the Western world, with its heavy political, economic and military burdens, with a weakening manufacturing economy?"

The report did not criticize any particular presidential administration and said some of the problems — such as a relatively high dollar value that favors foreign exporters — go back to the end of World War II.

THE REPORT said America's traditional role in the world economy had become "much diminished" by the early 1980s, with manufacturing's share of U.S. employment dropping rapidly while the share was dipping by lesser amounts in Europe and holding steady in Japan.

From the early 1970s to the early 1980s, it said, output of American steel products fell 16 percent and production of motor vehicles, appliances, TV and radio and nonferrous metals barely rose.

The reasons given included:

—Much smaller investment in manufacturing than in Japan, primarily because of the relatively high cost of raising money in the United States — a problem it said could be alleviated by tax changes and lower interest rates.

—Seven recessions since 1950, causing uncertainties that led businesses to insist "on quick payoffs and excessively cautious expansion plans."

—EMPHASIS IN high-technology investment on military and space programs "at the expense of other industries that also have important scientific and engineering tasks."

—A postwar policy in which "we deliberately encouraged recovery and growth of other countries, closing our eyes to the protectionist elements in the goals" of those nations.

—The value of the dollar, which has remained high partly because high U.S. interest rates lure foreign money.

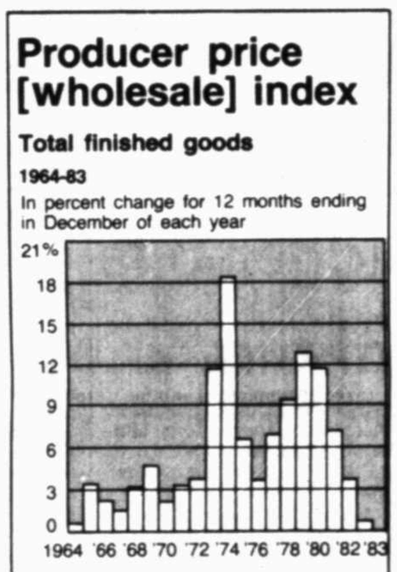

The report said, "A century-long industrial development process raised U.S. living standards manyfold, made U.S. gross national product nearly 40 percent of world output and provided the nation with the means to become the political leader and military protector of the Western world, while concurrently meeting the social needs of its population."

Report says worker efficiency improved sharply last year

By The Associated Press

Worker efficiency improved last year more sharply than in any year since 1976, while labor costs rose by the smallest amount in 18 years, the government reported.

The gain in productivity and the drop in labor costs are key reasons that corporate profits are on the rise.

Among companies reporting fourth-quarter results Monday, Phillips Petroleum Co. posted a 59 percent increase, Amerada Hess Corp. reported a 31 percent gain, Boeing Co. was up 8 percent, Dow Jones & Co. Inc. rose 37 percent, Time Inc. was up 27 percent and United Technologies Corp. rose 22 percent.

The Labor Department said its measure of U.S. worker productivity rose 3.1 percent last year, the biggest yearly improvement since a 3.2 percent gain in 1976. Unit labor costs, which account for about two-thirds of the value of a company's output, rose only 2.4 percent last year, the smallest increase since 1965.

IN THE FINAL three months of last year, productivity increased at a 1 percent annual rate.

Last year's improvement reflected a 4.4 percent rise in production and a 1.2 percent increase in hours worked. When farming was included, overall U.S. private business productivity rose 2.6 percent last year, compared to a 0.1 percent decline in 1982.

Productivity typically improves after a recession because businesses step up production in reaction to improved sales prospects, while they delay any large-scale hiring.

In other economic developments Monday:

—THE LABOR Department said women who held full-time jobs last year received two-thirds the average weekly earnings of their male counterparts. It said the average weekly earnings reported by men totaled $393, compared with $260 for women.

Dollar, gold edge up

LONDON (AP) — The dollar edged up against key currencies in early quiet trading today as hesitant market operators waited for signals about how U.S. interest rates will move. Gold prices inched up.

The dollar, which fell in Europe Monday, made widespread gains in the United States later. But the rally faltered when Europe's foreign exchanges opened.

Attention focussed on the upcoming report on leading U.S. indicators which could underline evidence of a slowdown in America's economic recovery.

Some European dealers speculated that the sharp $2.7 billion drop in the U.S. money supply and pessimism about the sluggish recovery rate will trigger a cut in U.S. interest rates.

High interest rates, coupled with a low U.S. inflation level, have made the dollar attractive to investors. Lower interest rates would depress the U.S. currency.

In Tokyo, where the business day ends as Europe's begins, the dollar closed at 234.74 yen, marginally up from Monday's late 234.50 yen.

In London, sterling was virtually unchanged. It cost $1.4060 to buy one British pound against $1.4063 late Monday.

Tourette affects whole family

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Just before the 11th birthday of Mary and James Aldridge's daughter, the child began experiencing severe eyelid and head twitchings.

"It just started all of a sudden," Mrs. Aldridge said.

"It was a Saturday morning that we first saw it," her husband remembered. "And that next Monday, her teacher called us and asked what was going on. There just wasn't any rhyme or reason."

The child's tics, which were becoming more severe, were accompanied by constant throat clearings. The Aldridges sought medical advice.

Their Midland physician diagnosed her as "neurotic."

He wasn't alone.

When Gilles de la Tourette first described the syndrome in the 19th century, he thought it was "a problem of the mind rather than a problem of the brain," according to Dr. Allan Naarden of the Texas Neurological Institute in Dallas.

An estimated 100,000 Americans suffer from Tourette's syndrome, or T.S. It usually strikes between the ages of 2 and 16, with victims experiencing migratory involuntary movements and noises.

"It is an illness which neither maims nor kills — but it makes people miserable," Naarden said during a local appearance sponsored by the West Texas Tourette Association last week.

Although more extreme cases include symptoms such as barking, echolalia (constant repeating of something said to the victim) and coprolalia (constant cursing), the symptons usually begin with eye ticks. All seem to appear in cycles, with the symptoms increasing for several months and then going into remission. Treatment is often difficult to access because of the remissions.

"If you happen to see a patient going into remission and you treat him, you're a hero," Naarden said. "If you treat them when their symptoms are worsening, you're a goat."

Other symptons include mouthing or other facial tics, spitting and involuntary movement of arms or legs. Involuntary noises may include constant throat clearing, snorting, repetition of words and severe swearing.

Ex-officer loses bid for reinstatement

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

A city appeals board has rejected fired police officer Lonnie Payne's bid for job reinstatement.

The three-member panel heard more than two hours of testimony Monday and spent 10 minutes in finding that Payne, 32, used excessive force in the Feb. 8 arrest of a shoplifting suspect at the M System Food Store on Scharbauer Drive.

Payne, a canine officer for the police department at the time, was off duty and working as a security guard for the store when he arrested 20-year-old George Benavides for allegedly stealing $32 worth of meat.

Payne was indicted in mid-February on felony state civil rights charges, and a $1.2 million dollar damage suit was filed against him and M System the same month.

The suit was dropped, however, when Benavides disappeared after posting $52,000 bond in an unrelated drug case stemming from his arrest on possession of heroin charges in mid-September. The criminal charges against Payne are expected to be dismissed shortly.

In arguing for Payne's reinstatement Monday, police association attorney Bruce A. Pauley of Austin tried to cast doubt on Benavides' credibility in the brutality case by noting that he had "vanished" and that the criminal case against Payne is to be dropped because Benavides "skipped bond on pending drug charges."

In statements to authorities at the time of the shoplifting incident, Benavides admitted trying to flee the store but said he was handcuffed, beaten and kicked by Payne in a back room after an earlier struggle near the front door.

According to medical reports, Benavides' injuries included cuts, bruises and a hairline fracture of a neck vertabra. But First Assistant City Attorney David Reagan, who argued against reinstatement, told the appeals panel:

"In my mind, the seriousness of Mr. Payne's conduct warrants upholding his termination. It's far out of line for a handcuffed prisoner to be taken from public view and kicked and struck as much as he was kicked and struck."

A witness to the alleged beating, assistant store manager Brett Edwards, told the board there were "trickles and pools" of blood in the back room and that he heard Payne tell the handcuffed Benavides: "I'll teach you to mess with me, you dumb son-of-a-bitch."

Edwards admitted lying in initial statements to police department investigators because, "I liked Lonnie and he said if Ed Nicks (Payne's supervisor in the canine division) found out what happened in the back room, Nicks would fire him."

Edwards told the appeals board he helped Payne concoct a story that Benavides hurt himself by falling against a piece of machinery in the back room.

Edwards said he later decided to "tell the truth" after seeing pictures of Benavides and being told by Texas Rangers and sheriff's department investigators that Benavides couldn't have been hurt that badly by falling into a machine.

Edwards also said he was told he could be charged with perjury if he maintained the story at a grand jury hearing.

In announcing the appeals panel verdict, City Councilman Tom Sloan said:

"It is the unanimous conclusion of this board to uphold the decision to relieve Mr. Payne of his duties with the police department" because "he did in fact violate the use-of-force policy as a police officer."

Alluding to the difficult nature of police work, Sloan added: "I regret very much that this case came up."

Payne — who did not testify on the advice of counsel — said afterwards that he was "not satisfied with the decision. Those three board members have no experience in police work and don't know what it's like to fight a heroin addict."

Payne, a 13-year veteran of police work, also said he would await the official dismissal of the criminal charges against him before deciding if he'll take further action to clear his name.

His attorney noted, however, that there is "no provision in the law to appeal the board's decision."

The other members of the panel were City Councilman Steve Davidson and ad hoc member Steve Holt, who is employed by First City National Bank.

Two pilots sentenced for smuggling marijuana

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton on Monday sentenced two pilots to prison for smuggling Mexican marijuana into Midland, sentenced another smuggler and accepted the guilty plea of a former Midland oil company executive.

The pilots, Jerry Brian Macoy, 43, of Walnut Creek, Calif., and George B. Bivens, 36, of Mount Vernon, Wash., each were sentenced to five years in prison and ordered to be placed on special parole for 10 years after they had pleaded guilty to flying in 900 pounds of marijuana to Midland last Nov. 8.

They were arrested moments after their twin-engine turbo-prop Beechcraft King Air 200 had touched down at Midland Air Park. The aircraft, detected as it broke over the Texas-Mexico border near Lardeo, had been trailed by a U.S. Customs Air Branch aircraft.

Macoy admitted the "lure of high money" had pulled him into the marijuana smuggling racket. "I used poor judgment," he said. Macoy, who owned Western Jet, an aircraft management and charter company in California, in 1974 was convicted of smuggling marijuana by aircraft.

His attorney, John Hyde, told the judge he was impressed by Macoy's "straightforwardness and candor." He said Macoy "has a number of useful skills," in apparent reference to his piloting and managerial capabilities. "He's not a violent man."

Bruce Stephen Weech, training officer for the Mount Vernon, Wash., fire department, said his friend Bivens was warm-hearted and helpful, and, as a helicopter pilot in the Vietnam War, "served his country quite well. He was decorated (for bravery) many times."

"I think his motivation here (in smuggling) was money also," said Weech.

Bivens' attorney, Dominick J. Franco of California, said his client "is really a nice, decent guy. This is actually the second client I've had in my life I've really liked." Franco cited Bivens' military record, his citations for bravery and the adverse effects the war played on him.

"I'm not suggesting that George get a medal for smuggling," Franco said. Marijuana is "the least dangerous of all" controlled substances, the crime of smuggling was one of nonviolence and, unlike Bivens, "a professional smuggler could have made that bail," Franco said. Bail for Macoy and Bivens had been lowered from $1 million to $500,000 each, but neither defendant made bail.

Four Ector County workers lose jobs because of budget cuts

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Four people will lose their jobs because of budget cutbacks approved Monday by Ector County Commissioners in response to the Jan. 21 tax rollback.

Commissioners identified $934,000 in cuts during a special meeting Thursday, including $153,000 from the road and bridge department and $40,000 from the county library.

Managers from these departments brought back their recommendations Monday afternoon on cuts set by commissioners, all but concluding tax-cut sessions necessary to bring the 1984 budget within the bounds set by the rollback.

Bud Bush, road and bridge superintendent, defended recommendations which commissioners altered before approval. Pointing out that state law requires maintenance of the county's roads, highways and bridges, Bush fielded criticism of proposals that may leave road crews with little work.

Commissioner Bryan Henderson wondered how Bush could lose $90,000 from his road materials budget and find work for his road crews. Other cuts were $10,000 in sign materials and supply, a $13,991 vacant sign installer position, $13,571 heavy-equipment operator and one of two mechanics.

When the county dropped 46 positions in November, a mechanic was transferred to the vehicle maintenance department. But the opening filled by the parks mechanic developed from transfer of another mechanic.

The transfer was not approved by commissioners, leaving the vehicle maintenance department with two mechanics to fill one position.

"I'd hate to see us lose any because they're too hard to get back," said Bush of employee losses. By cutting back on road maintenance, he said the county would lose money in the long run.

"If we let 'em go now, in the future bringing them back up to shape will cost us three or four times as much," he said, adding that the county was legally responsible for road maintenance.

Henderson, who along with Commissioner Julian Pressly and County Judge Jan Fisher made up Monday's court, noted that sign maintenance was necessary for safety.

"I don't know if I look at the maintenance of our county roads and their improvements in that same light," said Henderson. The road and bridge budget totaled $1.4 million.

Ms. Fisher supported the cuts, but emphasized the county must maintain "minimum service levels."

"The others we don't even have to have a minimum, but this one we do," she said.

County Librarian Ted Campbell presented cuts to his department which dropped two employees — including a division head — and funding for maintenance and operation. Three positions, one presently vacant, were dropped in retrieving $40,000 allocated to the library for 1984.

When asked if the library could operate with the cuts, Campbell "Yes we will. Not desirably, but we will."

He also asked that employees receive letters from the county explaining their termination was due to the budget rollback and that they remain eligible when jobs opened up.

But Ms. Fisher stressed that $2.8 million dropped from the 1984 budget would not be added back during next year's budget session. "Go down with not only what you can live with this year, but next year too," she said.

A minimum of $2,000 remains to be dropped from the children services budget before $934,000 in rollback-inspired cuts are official. These are in addition to $1.86 million cut from the budget in November to replenish cash reserves and keep the county from deficit spending.

Odessa officers being investigated

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Odessa Police Chief Alan Stewart confirmed Monday that three sergeants had been put on administrative leave last week, based on an internal complaint lodged against the officers.

Stewart would not release the names of the three sergeants, pending an investigation of the charges by the department.

Administrative leave, not a formal disciplinary action, continues payment of wages during the investigation. Suspension is a formal disiplinary action which includes withholding the officers' pay.

Stewart did say that the alleged violations were not connected to an ongoing investigation of Officer K.L. Pigg, who was terminated last week after admitting to stabbing himself while on duty.

Officers arrived at the scene Jan. 22 following reports by Pigg that he was pursuing suspects behind West Gate Plaza. They found the officer partially in his patrol car, with a stab wound in the lower stomach. Originally recorded as attempted capital murder, questions raised by the back-up officers led to invesigation of Pigg.

He has since admitted to faking the incident. The police have declined any further comment concerning the investigation or Pigg's possible motives for stabbing himself.

John...looking for a home

Foster parents sought for Odessa boy

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

John wants to come back home.

Originally from Odessa, the 8-year-old has been living with a foster parent in a small town outside of San Antonio. Because of limited resources in that area, however, John's foster mom was having to travel 60 miles a day, transporting him for speech, occupational and physical therapy.

John needs love, attention and encouragement, according to Jeannie Hunt, Texas Department of Human Resources Foster Home Recruiter in Midland.

Called a special needs foster child, John has been diagnosed as having a speech impediment, being below his age group's level of motor development and hyperactive.

"It needs to be a parent in the home because he requires lots of supervision," Ms. Hunt said. "He gets real excited about talking and he'll talk too fast. The foster parent needs to be very patient, to say, 'Slow down, repeat that, you can talk.'

"He doesn't have any problems with his brain," Ms. Hunt said. "He's intelligent and healthy, although he does need to eat foods without additives for his hyperactiveness."

As a foster child, John is not up for adoption, meaning his mother still has legal rights while the Department of Human Resources has custody.

"He needs a pretty structured environment," said Jean Chapman, of the Ector County Children Services in Odessa. "He needs a parent that has a lot of energy and time to devote to him."

"We're looking for someone who has the ability to have a routine for him because he needs that consistency," Ms. Hunt agreed.

Placing John in the Midland-Odessa area would be ideal because of access to the many rehabilitation resources available. If someone in a smaller, outlying town wishes to bring John into his or her home, DHR workers think it's great, as long as that school district has a special education program in which he can enroll.

Pendleton was born Feb. 5, 1922, in Cisco. He worked for Exxon Oil Production and lived in Andrews for 13 years. He was a member of Calvary Baptist Church, Andrews Masonic Lodge and Shriners El Maida Temple of El Paso. He was a Navy veteran of World War II.

Survivors include his wife, Julia Pendleton; a son, Richard Pendleton; two daughters, Kay Weschke, all of Andrews, and Joy Pendleton of Austin; his mother, Helen Pendleton of Garland; two sisters, LaRue Jones of Tyler and Joan Poarch of Garland; a brother, David Pendleton of Garland; and one granddaughter.

Tourette syndrome affects whole family

In very rare cases, compulsive self-mutilation has been reported.

Victims usually are able to suppress symptoms to some degree, which can be confusing and frustrating to parents, family and friends, Naarden said.

"It's not unusual when mom brings little Johnny or little Jill to the doctor and nothing happens," the medical advisor to the Dallas/Fort Worth T.S. Association said. "The initial response is they are doing it on purpose."

When a child won't, but really cannot, stop the movements or sounds, parents often punish them for disobeying orders. However, once the child is diagnosed as having T.S., "there is incredible guilt."

"This is not an illness of a child," Naarden said. "It is an illness that affects the family, the whole family."

He stressed the importance of disciplining the child correctly.

One of his patients in Fort Worth had gone to visit grandparents in California. While dining at a lovely Los Angeles restaurant, the child accidentally placed mustard on his baked potato, thinking it was butter. When he threw the potato on the floor, his grandparents were confused as to what action to take.

"The grandparents didn't know whether it was T.S. or a temper tantrum," Naarden said. "I know. It was bad behavior and he should have had his bottom spanked.

"Watch for guilt feelings that end up with you being over-permissive," he warned parents and teachers of T.S. victims. "Consistency is what counts — not only for normal kids but for T.S. kids, too.

"It's a family problem. The way you treat T.S. kids will also affect the normal kids. You have to have your own rules of behavior, and you also have to educate other children — much like you have to let other kids in the classroom know (the child suffers from T.S.)."

Because some of the obsessive or compulsive behavior can harm the child — such as causing herniated discs from violent tics in the head, Naarden does recommend medication. But only if the symptoms are severe.

One patient, of whom he showed slides, had an excessive need to rub his tongue against his gum. At the age of 31, after doing it for 20 years, the man had no teeth and lesions on his tongue and gums. He cannot be fitted for dentures because of the damage.

With more public awareness of the disease, victims are coming out of the closet for correct diagnoses, Naarden said. While he treats about 200 patients in the Dallas area, with a population of 2.5 million people, some 50 to 60 cases have been reported in the Midland-Odessa area.

"But let me assure you, many aren't diagosed because of fear and ignorance," he said.

Although one theory indicates T.S. is linked chemically to the brain, Naarden said research is just beginning.

Because brain scans of T.S. victims do not indicate anatomical deformities, some feel T.S. may be caused by an "exquisitive sensitivity" to normal amounts of dopamine, a chemical in the brain.

Haloperidol, a drug with the trademark Haldol, is one of the more common treatments in the United States. But because of its often severe side effects, Naarden will not recommend it unless the patient's symptoms are dangerous.

If a parent merely wishes to put the child on the medication to avoid embarrassment, he refuses to prescribe it, he said.

"I look at it to see if the child is OK with his peers and if it's just the parents that are embarrassed about his appearance or language. My answer to that is to treat the parents and leave the child alone."

The only time Naarden said he gave a child a prescription for Haldol at the request of his parents was when a family was preparing for a cross-country trip by car.

"This child made the most outlandish noises. It didn't bother him but it did the parents. I felt it was worth it to save his life while driving 2,000 miles."

A 30 to 40 percent incident rate of side effects has been reported by patients on Haldol, which is prescribed in an attempt to block dopamine from functioning, Naarden said. While "most are bearable and acceptable, there is a large number for whom it is not acceptable."

For the Aldridges' daughter, the drug was worth the side effects.

"She had to be medicated because the jerking was so severe it was hurting her neck," Mrs. Aldridge said. Because she experienced gastrointestinal side effects, the child visits Naarden once every three months.

"That's largely for monitoring the side effects," Aldridge said. "From time to time, they have to make adjustments."

"Her stomach would swell up and become pretty painful," her mother said. "She could go to school and by noon, she couldn't fit in the clothes she'd worn."

For the past six months, their daughter's condition has stabilized — the longest period yet.

"We've been fortunate," Aldridge said. "She's had the severe throat clearing but none of the barking."

"Or the obscene noises," her mother added.

Once, riding home from school on the bus, the child began having involuntary head jerkings. Another child on the bus stared at her in disgust.

According to her mother, "She said she just told him, 'I have T.S. and I can't help it. If you don't like it, then look the other way.'

"In her own way, she handles things extremely well."

Two pilots sentenced for smuggling marijuana

Afterward, Bunton told Bivens that thousands of Vietnam War era veterans had returned from the war and didn't get into crime. The judge told Macoy "You can make an honest living. This get-rich-quick (scheme) doesn't work too well."

ANOTHER DEFENDANT, William Anthony "Tony" Dugan, who is to serve five-year concurrent sentences for escape from jail in June 1981 and for conspiracy to import 1,270 pounds of marijuana from Mexico to Texas in January 1981, told Bunton that no one forced him into the marijuana scheme.

"No, sir," he said. "I suppose the devil made me do it."

Dugan, 39, and a pilot flew the marijuana into the Abilene area from Mexico.

"The devil again made you do it?" Bunton asked.

"That's right," he replied. "The devil again."

Dugan said some people do appreciate his person and character. Earlier, he had told the judge that his errant behavior cropped up in his mid-30s when he "got bored with my life and was looking for some excitement." He said he had escaped from the Midland City Jail because he didn't want to return to prison and to "fighting and chopping cotton."

"I don't think that it matters to you," Dugan said of his reformed character.

"Yes, it does," Bunton said.

DUGAN ESCAPED from jail on June 10, 1981, after he had been dispatched from the Texas Department of Corrections, where he was an inmate, to Midland for trial on the federal marijuana charge.

"I've never been on welfare, always worked, went to church, got married, had children and lived a normal life like anyone here," Dugan told the judge. "I don't feel like I'm a career criminal."

After the sentencing, Dugan told the judge, "I appreciate your leniency. "I think it could be a lot worse. I'm going to try to straighten this mess out just as soon as I can."

Rodger Lynn Edge, 37, former vice president for production for PED Oil Corp. in Midland, pleaded guilty to selling a company pumping unit for $28,000 in June 1980. He admitted to having the unit hauled from Texas to Michigan for the sale. "I was supposed to have split $22,000," he told the judge. Edge, who could be placed in federal prison for up to 10 years and fined $10,000, is to be sentenced at 12:15 p.m. Feb. 27 in federal court here. In addition, he is under state indictment for theft of $240,000 in PED funds and for $40,000 in theft of services.

ANOTHER MIDLANDER, 31-year-old roughneck Charles Ralph Cobb, pleaded guilty to being a felon in possession of a .22-caliber firearm in March 1981 and to failure to appear in court last August. He is to be sentenced at noon Feb. 27.

Cobb, a former convict, told the judge he was unaware it was illegal for him to carry a handgun.

"You thought it was all right?" Bunton asked.

"Yes, sir."

"You subsequently found out it wasn't?"

"Yes, sir."

Cobb, who promised the judge he wouldn't abscond again, is being held under federal custody in the Midland City Jail. He told the judge he had suffered from "severe depression."

Banks announces council candidacy

From Staff Reports

Wilson H. Banks

Former Director of Aviation Wilson H. Banks announced his candidacy for Place 5 on the Midland City Council during a news conference at City Hall this morning.

Citing his experience in dealing with the city council while serving as aviation director for 13½ years, Banks said he had the opportunity to observe the operations of the city government in all aspects.

"To be specific, during my time as aviation director I attended almost every council meeting and was able to learn the needs and requirements of the other departments in the city and the effort made by the council, city manager and staff to resolve day to day problems and formulate long range plans," Banks said.

"I also had the opportunity to work directly with the other city departments on almost a daily basis and this gave me an insight into their operations and the daily challenges they must face."

If elected, Banks said he intends to "foster the growth, orderly development and diversification of industry for the city; work for all the citizens of the city regardless of race, creed, color, national origin, religion or sex (and) be fair and impartial at all times and have an open mind on all subjects brought before the council for consideration and action."

Groups want to care for horses

From Staff and Wire Reports

WACO — Two national humane organizations have asked a federal judge in Midland to let them take over care of thousands of horses in Central Texas that are sick or dying after a plan to sell them for slaughter fell through.

Russ Gaspar, a Washington attorney representing the American Horse Protection Association, said his group and the Fund for Animals filed a lawsuit in federal court Monday and expected to go today before Judge Lucius Bunton to ask for a temporary restraining order.

Gaspar said the suit seeks to have the groups declared guardians of the horses, survivors of a scattered herd of 14,000 purchased by Falls County ranchers on the promise they could sell the horses at a profit after pasturing them.

Officials said last week that more than 1,000 of the horses have died. Gaspar said it is not known how many more have died because representatives of humane organizations have not been allowed to examine the animals.

Police seek man who staged robbery to cover up theft

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Police are searching for the manager of an Odessa pizza parlor who, after reporting being robbed Jan. 21 outside the restaurant, has been charged with staging the robbery to cover up his theft.

Gregory Dean Simmons, manager of Pinnochio's Pizza at 4555 E. University when he was allegedly robbed after the restaurant had closed in the early-morning hours of Jan. 21, has apparently fled Odessa after being charged with stealing $2,000 and $105 in credit-card receipts. Det. L.C. Holley's investigation of the robbery determined it had not occurred and that Simmons had reported the robbery to hide his theft. Simmons told investigators that he had not seen the apparently fictional robber, who allegedly approached him in the parking lot, stuck some object in his back and escaped on foot.

Simmons, originally reported as the robbery victim, becomes the suspect. Rick Allan Hall, area supervisor for the pizza-parlor chain, becomes the victim in what is now listed as a felony theft.

Police have not apprehended Simmons, but reportedly have information on his location. While Simmons could also be charged with filing a false report, Lt. Rusty Baker explained that since this was a "lesser included offense," it would not be charged to protect prosecution of the felony theft.

In other reports, an Odessa woman reported the theft of her $2,000 fur coat late Monday night or early Tuesday morning from a local lounge's coat rack.

Sharron Sue Clayton, Odessa, reported to police that her Norwegian blue fox, dress-length coat was taken from the coat rack in the rear of the Brewery Lounge at 1401 E. 7th Street in Odessa.

Foster parents sought for Odessa youth

State standards require a 40-square-foot bedroom for the child and not more than six children in the home. Also, the home must meet fire and health safety standards.

A medical and clothing allowance of $8 per day is available from the state.

"We're looking for a long-term commitment, but I can't say if that means for the next 5, 10 or 2 years," Ms. Chapman said.

One final requirment:

"He's extremely affectionate," Ms. Hunt said, "and he loves hugs."

Enrollment at UTPB expected to increase

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Student enrollment at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin is expected to increase in 1985 to 2,055, compared to a preliminary 1983 enrollment figure of 1,975.

According to a forecast prepared by the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System, enrollment in 1990 will be 2,062 and enrollment in 1995 will be 2,079 at the university.

There were 1,825 students at UTPB in 1982, according to the report.

The annual average growth rate statewide of approximately 1 percent is considerably lower than the 6 percent growth rate during the 1970s and early 1980s, the report stated. Yet the steady gain for most Texas colleges and universities places them in a more favorable situation than institutions nationwide, the report continued, since other schools are expected to maintain relatively level enrollments throughout the 1980s.

Man reports attempted robbery

From Staff Reports

In an attempted robbery complaint filed with city police Monday night, Lynn Durham of 165 Saddle Club Dr. said two men armed with a pistol appproached him in the 2300 block of N. Big Spring St. shortly before 9 p.m. and demanded his money.

The ski-masked, would-be bandits fled empty-handed, however, after Durham told them he wasn't going to part with his money. An investigation is continuing.

Benefit luncheon attracts fashion fans

Pink tissue paper, lavendar hat boxes and the forested background at Clay-Desta's atrium gave an airy spring atmosphere for Midland Junior Women's Association's annual benefit luncheon Monday.

The luncheon featured designer Betty Hanson's 1984 spring releases.

"It was a huge success," said Jacque Allen of the Association, adding this year's benefit was the largest "by about 50 people."

An estimated 460 people attended the $40-per-person "Hats Off to Fashion" benefit.

Among the crowd watching the show from above was Claydesta founder, Clayton Williams, showing around his "buddy, Jimmy Michener," better-known as renowned author James Michener.

Caterer Karen Hilliard, of Odessa, provided a creative touch for the luncheon with lavendar and pink floral hat boxes and pastel "market bags" filled with turkey sandwiches, (on homemade bread, with butter and homemade mayonnaise,) pasta salads, (with snow peas, broccoli, celery, carrots, and cartwheel noodles such as Rotelle, spinach, tomato and egg noodle,) homemade desserts and almond champagne.

Hall Hanson
Vice President
Betty Hanson and Company, Inc.

The association, primarily comprised of professional women, began plans for this year's event last June. Next year's plans begin "tomorrow," said Ms. Allen.

The Betty Hanson collection was highlighted in neutral colors and pastels, in silks, cotton, linens and cotton and silk blends, according to Hall Hanson, son of the late Betty Hanson, and vice president of the company.

He describes the Hanson line as "a designer-label sportswear house," featuring dressy pieces which aren't dresses, and dresses which aren't dressy," — but most hemlines were shown in longer than usual lengths.

"Any of the straight-line skirts are available in two lengths, and so are all the pants we sell."

The exclusive spring collection comes with a high-dollar price tag, he admits, adding, "they are pieces to update last year's collection," and Hanson's styles do not radically differ from year to year.

Styles were presented in conjunction with Julian Gold of Midland, modeled by local and San Antonio models.

Since 1977, the Junior Woman's Association has donated more than $25,000 to theclub's Midland Memorial Hospital Pediatric Equipment Fund. Proceeds from this year's gala will benefit the fund and Big Brother, Big Sisters of Midland.

Rich-girl looks created with good basics

Copley News Service

A famous gentleman once said, "A woman can never be too rich or too beautiful."

An example of these qualities can be found in the character of Jennifer Hart on ABC's hit show, "Hart to Hart." Brought to life each week by actress Stefanie Powers, Jennifer has come to epitomize wealth and glamour as well as bringing the "rich girl" fantasy alive in all of us who admire her.

"Jennifer has an unlimited clothes budget in the story line," confesses Stefanie, "but the reality of the actual money we have to spend on each outfit is quite different. We have found that by sticking to simple garments with good, clean lines in classic colors and fabrics we can use accessories to achieve a great variety of looks."

To begin a rich-girl wardrobe together Stefanie suggests making a few important purchases that constitute the basics, like a good wool coat and perhaps a tailored suit.

Wool care: Tips to make it easy

Copley News Service

If a care label on a wool garment says machine washable, is it? Decidedly so, says Jan Cooper, manager of consumer education for Maytag. She's talking about more than sweaters. A growing number of woolen fabrics can also now be laundered at home, providing a great savings to consumers.

It's somewhat ironic that washing and drying are integral to the manufacture of wool. The initial scouring process reduces the weight of raw wool from 30 to 70 percent. In the final process, as the fabric comes from the loom, it is again washed and dried to shrink the woven material and give it a smooth appearance.

The problem is how to avoid further shrinkage, since agitation in the presence of moisture and heat can cause the fabric to become smaller and thicker.

Home economists at the Pendleton Woolen Mills, have been able to remove "Dry Clean Only" labels from many of their 100 percent wool menswear shirts. As the result of new finishing processes and advances in the manufacture of laundry appliances, more wool garments can today be successfully laundered in an automatic washer.

Pop star may file suit over filming accident

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pop star Michael Jackson may file suit for damages because of injuries he suffered when fireworks set his hair on fire during filming of a commercial, his lawyer says.

The 25-year-old singer is recovering quickly and won't have to cancel any scheduled appearances because of the accident, said Larry Larson, a secretary for Jackson's tour manager. A tour reuniting the singer and his brothers is still scheduled for May, he said.

Jackson hopes to attend a New York party being given Feb. 7 by Epic Records to honor the Guinness Book of World Records' inclusion of his "Thriller" album as the most successful in recording history by a single performer, attorney John Branca said Monday.

Branca said Jackson is considering suing whoever was at fault for the mishap that burned his head Friday during filming of a commercial for Pepsi-Cola.

"I think it's an outrage that this thing has occurred at all," Branca said. A decision on legal strategies will be made after a review of the film and five camera-angle reference videotapes is completed today, he said.

Branca said "no final decision" has been made on whether to make film of the accident public. He had earlier indicated it would be.

Jackson was hurt during filming of the last scene of the Pepsi commercial, which was to be broadcast during the Grammy Awards on Feb. 28. A review of videotapes indicated that a mistimed firework sprayed Jackson with sparks and set his pomaded hair aflame, said Jackson's physician, Dr. Steven Hoefflin.

Branca said Jackson wanted to thank his friends and fans "for the love, flowers, telegrams and support they have been sending him.... He especially wants to thank his dear friends Jane Fonda, Brooke Shields, Diana Ross, Yul Brynner, Liza Minnelli, John Travolta, Quincy Jones and Paul McCartney."

Hasty Pudding names honorees

Connery

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Joan Rivers and Sean Connery are traveling to Harvard at the invitation of a group of young admirers — the Hasty Pudding Theatricals.

The undergraduate musical comedy troupe Monday announced that its annual award will be shared by the 53-year-old Connery, famed for his suave movie portrayal of James Bond, and Miss Rivers, 46, the comic known for her catty barbs at such celebrities as Elizabeth Taylor.

Connery will pick up his award Feb. 22 and Miss Rivers will receive hers Feb. 15, according to Hasty Pudding, which describes itself as the oldest dramatic organization in the nation.

Past winners include Steven Spielberg, Robert Redford, Alan Alda, Johnny Carson, Julie Andrews, Meryl Streep, Elizabeth Taylor and Katharine Hepburn.

Each year Hasty Pudding puts on a satirical musical comedy in which all roles are played by men. This year's presentation, the 136th, is billed as "Jungle Belles — An Amazon Extravaganza."

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — The Rev. Billy Graham, hospitalized for treatment of high fever and acute sinus and ear infections, has canceled all engagements for the next two weeks on the advice of doctors, an aide says.

The 65-year-old evangelist's condition was described Monday as "satisfactory and improving."

Graham, who recently completed a three-week visit to England to prepare for a British crusade this spring, checked into Rochester Methodist Hospital on Sunday, officials said. The hospital is affiliated with the Mayo Clinic.

The aide, T.W. Wilson, said Graham and his wife, Ruth, have been forced to turn down an invitation from President Reagan and first lady Nancy Reagan for an overnight stay at the White House this week.

Graham will be hospitalized until about the end of the week, doctors said.

BOSTON (AP) — Barring further arrests, the cocaine possession charge against actress Jodie Foster will be automatically dismissed a year from now, officials said.

The 21-year-old Yale University student, whose movies include "Taxi Driver," was accompanied by her mother and lawyers when she went before Judge Joseph Ferrino in East Boston District Court on Monday.

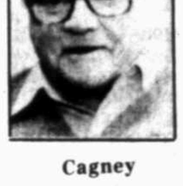

The judge assessed Miss Foster $500 for court costs and continued the case until Jan. 25, 1985, without a finding.

The actress was arrested Dec. 19 after she was stopped by U.S. Customs officials at London International Airport.

"She admitted only to sufficient facts, the judge didn't find her guilty," said an assistant to Clerk Nora Benencuore.

Dave Rodman, a spokesman for the Suffolk County District Attorney's office, said Miss Foster was in court about an hour.

Cagney

STANFORDVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — James Cagney, who recently filmed a movie about a family reunion, is mourning the death of his adopted son, James Jr., his secretary says.

The younger Cagney died Friday of a heart attack in Washington, D.C., the secretary, Marge Zimmermann, said Monday from Cagney's farm in rural Dutchess County.

The son, about 42, last lived in Virginia, she said. He was a "Jack of all trades, master of none," Mrs. Zimmermann added.

"There was an estrangement," she said. "He was given too much. He was given the...property in Martha's Vineyard, and that was the last we heard from him. That was two years ago."

She described the actor as very upset over the death.

Cagney, 84, has just completed a CBS television film called "Terrible Joe Moran," about the reunion of an aged ex-heavyweight champ with his long-lost granddaughter.

Cagney also has an adopted daughter, Casey Thomas, who lives in California.

POSITIVE THINKING

Creative job buildup gets results

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

Strange how some people are always downgrading their job or their business. No wonder they get no fun out of it. But anyone can get out of downbeat thinking by employing the principle of creative job buildup. For example, I received a telephone call from a jeweler in a southern state who obviously was discouraged. He said that while at times he had "got the hang of positive thinking" still he could not "stick with it" and was telephoning to ask how could one think positively in such a dull job as trying to sell jewelry, a business bequeathed him by his father.

I expressed astonishment that he could possibly appraise the jewelry business as a dull job, pointing out the romance interest in diamonds and other gems. Indeed, I argued that any commodity for the welfare of people, even bread and sugar and vegetables, could not be construed as dull, for they are of the essence of life. And jewelry, relating as it does to the expression of "thoughts too deep for words," should be perpetually exciting. "Put romance into the job," I urged.

"But," he complained, "economic conditions in our area are not good and people just are not going to buy luxury items under these circumstances."

I questioned writing off his merchandise as a luxury item to be sold only in affluent times. "Beauty," I countered, "is a necessity of the spirit, especially when it speaks the word of romance and affection, and that is even more important when times are hard."

I asked him to read me samples of his local advertising. One ad read, "Buy jewelry at X's, Oldest Quality Merchants in the County." And another: "Finest Jewelry at X's, Founded 1893." "Well," I said, "I am no expert in advertising copywriting, but I think you are only stating the obvious — that you have been in business a long while and are dealers in quality merchandise. That is true, of course, but hardly likely to motivate the buyer. The potential customer must be reached emotionally."

"O.K.," he responded, "what would you suggest?"

Hardly taking his request seriously, I said, "Well, how about this? 'Put a sparkle on her finger like the sparkle in her eye.' That one is for the young and in love. Another might be, 'A wedding ring from X's will be just as beautiful when there are silver threads among the gold.' And how about this for the aged woman on an anniversary: 'Add the beauty of her toilworn hands to the loveliness of a ring from X's famous jewelry shop.'"

"Boy," he said, "come down here and I will give you a job. You almost make me weep."

"I do not want to bring you to tears but to get some excitement into you about the fabulous opportunity you have of putting lights in people's eyes and smiles on their faces by your articles of beauty. Every morning, say aloud, 'How exciting to be a dealer in jewelry! Today I'm going to bring that extra touch of joy to young and old.' Practice enthusiasm and excitement, and inspiration will come flooding into your mind."

It is a fact that you and I can think, talk and act ourselves into dullness or excitement. We tend to become precisely what we think, whether gloominess or enthusiasm. And since the latter is so much more to be desired, it is only smart to keep it going by daily practice of the excitement principle.

Planning deductions

This is the fourth in a series of "tax tips" articles provided by the Permian Basin Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants.

Q. I understand the medical deductions changed in 1983.

A. Yes. Beginning in January 1983, the medical deduction was reduced. In 1983, your medical expenses will have to exceed five percent of your adjusted gross income.

So, if your adjusted gross income is $30,000, you will be able to deduct only those expenses in excess of $1,500. You may want to change your medical insurance coverage so that you will be left with fewer out-of-pocket expenses.

Some current deductible expenses should be lumped into your total medical deduction for 1983. Your total insurance premium is one of these items. In addition, the separate deduction for half of the health insurance premiums up to $150 has been eliminated. The full amount of the premiums are subject to the 5 percent limit.

These and other tax questions will be answered during the Taxpayers Education Program at 9 a.m. Feb. 11, in the Midland College Allison Fine Arts Building. Members of the Permian Basin Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants will help individuals who plan to complete their own tax return for 1983. Program content will concentrate on questions relating to the 1040 and 1040A tax returns.

To register for the course, send $1 with your name and address to the Permian Basin Taxpayer Education Program, c/o Donald S. Johnson & Co. Inc., Midland, Texas 79701. Pre-registration is encouraged but walk-in registration will be accepted.

Sand tested for cleanliness

A simple test will tell you whether sand is clean enough to be used in a concrete mix. Half-fill a jar with water. Add sand till the moisture is at the three-quarter mark. Cover the jar and shake well. Let stand for a couple of hours. Should a lot of silt, say a quarter of an inch, be on top of the sand at that time, you should not use the sand in a concrete mix.

Pure water economical, delicious with Home Spa

With a Home Spa water purifier in your home, you no longer have to pay inflated prices for drinking and cooking water, or water for your house plants, pets and goldfish.

The Home Spa water purifier with the activated carbon (charcoal) filter solves the bad water problem for Midland and Odessa families, as well as for families nationwide.

The Home Spa removes chlorine, ammonia, sulphates, rust, algae, iron, turbidity, taste/odor and reduces hardness. You get nature's delicious water with impurities removed for less than two cents a gallon. This water is much more healthful than distilled water with a few minerals added.

The following are quotations from leading magazines on the subject of water and activated carbon:

READER'S DIGEST: "At present, the most promising technique for dealing with chlorine and organic chemicals is the remarkable purifier – Activated Carbon."

AMERICAN HOME: "An activated carbon filter eliminates toxic organic pollutants and is excellent for eliminating non-toxic objectional elements, such as chlorine, hydrogen sulphide, taste/odor and turbidity. No home should be iithout one."

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL: "Home Water Purifier Business Booming."

GOOD HOUSEKEEPING: "Many states recommend that water be filtered through activated carbon. Yet not a single health department is requiring or even urging that this improved form of filtration be installed."

The Home Spa unit is portable, made of durable polyethylene and will last for many years without showing wear. The charcoal filters are interchangeable. Each filter will purify from 400 to 500 gallons of water depending on the pollutants in a given area.

A charcoal system was used at Three Mile Islandto greatly reduce radiation releases in the water from the reactor's damaged cooling system.

ACME MARKETING, 3103 E. 31st Street in Odessa is the National Distributor for the Home Spa and complete satisfaction is guaranteed or purchasers can return the Spa for a full refund. No questions asked.

The complete unit with an extra filter is only $29.95. Extra filters are $8.95 each or 3 for $21.95; 6 for $39.95. The shelf life of Spa filters is forever so purchasers can stock up on them before the prices skyrocket. They need to be changed about every 6 months to a year depending on the amount of water used.

Acme Marketing also has Aloe Vera Juice, Dr. Willard Water and DMSO- all at wholesale prices. Call Tony at Acme Marketing, 367-6977, or stop in and see him at 3103 E. 31st ST. for further information andfree local delivery. Out-o-ftown orders can be mailed for a handling and mailing charge of $2 per unit on any of the above products.

P.S. All persons who call Tony before Febuary 10th can have the Spa delivered, try it for ten days and if they are not 100% satisfied, there is no obligation to buy.

Tony Rogers, Acme Marketing, phone 367-6977, 3103 E. 31st, Odessa, will show you how simple it is to transform city tap water into delightful spring quality water, without electricity or plumbing, for about 2¢ a gallon. Tony also has ALOE VERA JUICE, DMSO, and Dr. WILLARD WATER at wholesale prices.

After J.J. Dove Jr., broke his foot when he was a letter carrier, he was transferred to a job in the mail forwarding department where he can raise his foot, which must be elevated much of the time. Dove is one of about 962 postal workers nationwide who have returned to work under a rehabilitation program.

Postal Service helping disabled

LOS ANGELES — Dorothy Williams' four years on retirement disability read like a copy of TV Guide.

"Soap operas," said Williams, who was a letter carrier before she fractured her ankle delivering mail. " 'The Young and the Restless,' 'As the World Turns,' 'General Hospital.' From that, I would go to 'The Edge of Night' at 3.

"After 3, I would get nothing till the news came on. Channel 7 at 4," she said. "I guess I just sat home, nervous, eating, getting fat."

Williams suffered more than just a run-of-the-mill broken bone when she twisted her ankle in 1978. After surgery to fuse the injured ankle, she was in a cast for six months, and the ankle hurts to this day.

But, while there was no way Williams could resume her old career as a letter carrier in Los Angeles, there also was no way she could live comfortably with her $580 monthly compensation checks and her relatively empty days.

"I just wanted to work," Williams said. "I would rather work than just sit at home, just be sitting. And I was figuring, how was I gonna live on $580 a month?

"NOW, I BELIEVE in prayer, and I prayed, and the post office called me back." Williams now works full time as a mail-distribution clerk in a downtown Los Angeles Post Office; her job pays about $23,000 a year, and it puts no strain on her injured ankle.

Williams was not the only postal worker on disability called back to work by the U.S. Postal Service; the former carrier is one of about 962 nationwide — to return to work under a growing rehabilitation program.

The program is a joint effort of the Postal Service and the Department of Labor to "re-employ occupationally disabled persons within their medical capabilities," Jeanne O'Neill, Postal Service media-relations officer, said.

"This is a national effort, and the whole purpose of it is to restore people to a meaningful way of living," O'Neill said.

Actually, a dual gain is reaped when a former employee on disabilityreturns to work. The initial reward is in terms of human benefit. When a person returns to work after sitting home for years — like Williams — there is what O'Neill called a "psychological advantage."

"BY RETURNING people to work, you take them from feeling that they're not worth anything to helping them resume their places as productive members of society," she said.

The additional gain is a financial one. Some 9,000 postal workers across the country are on long-term disability, and the Postal Service spends $185.3 million annually in compensation payments and administrative costs, not to mention the $26 million paid annually

While the Postal Service administration is enthusiastic about the dual benefits of the rehabilitation program, the reactions of the program participants range from Williams' ecstatic, "Oh, I'm happy, very glad to be back" to Betty Butler's dire, "It (coming back to work) was just like a shock."

Butler has been out on disability for nine years, after she injured her back while lifting a sack of mail and eventually had to have surgery to fuse her fourth and fifth vertebrae.

Butler was a mail clerk before her injury, and, although she was able to return to her same job, she medically is able to work only three hours a day.

BUT EVEN those three hours are causing problems for her. Butler said that her return to work has hurt her financially, that her back has not improved and that she is having severe adjustment and alienation problems.

"Some (of the other workers) make little remarks about the group of us," she said. "And I don't really talk to anyone. But I really had no choice. It was either come to work, or lose your disability.

"In a way, it (the program) might be good therapy in the end, but I can't foresee that now," she said.

Butler's hostilities are not uncommon, according to Bernice Brunswick, injury compensation supervisor for the Los Angeles Post Office, where Butler works.

Because the program is so new and the most senior rehabilitated worker has only been back about seven months, "many of them are still in the stage where they haven't adapted," Brunswick said.

The rehabilitation program does not just thrust its participants back into the workplace without support. Part of Brunswick's job is to counsel and look out for the newly returned workers. The program is structured to ease those workers into employment again.

FIRST, AFTER the Department of Labor targets disability recipients as potential program participants, it contacts a private firm, like Rehabilitation Associates Inc., which requests medical information from the participants' doctors.

The doctors' reports note the injured workers's range of motion, allowed activities, whether they may return to work and, if so, for how long.

If injured workers may return to work, the rehabilitation firm will contact them, explain the program and explain their rights and responsibilities. The firm then contacts the Postal Service, which makes a job offer.

The firm and the potential workers discuss the offer, and, if the workers decide to go back to the post office, a counselor from the firm will be present during the workers' first day back. The counselor will also make follow-up calls.

According to Tim Sells, managing counselor at Rehabilitation Associates Inc., "most (workers contacted) are anxious and concerned about the benefits of going back."

"SOME ARE angry. They feel they have been retired for say, 10 years, and they don't want to go back to the post office," Sells said.

But, if they decide not to go back, they must accept a decrease or removal of their disability payments.

J.J. Dove Jr. was injured while delivering mail, and, as Sells noted, had mixed reactions to coming back.

When Dove was first contacted, he was a bit apprehensive about returning to work because he was not sure of what the Postal Service "had in mind."

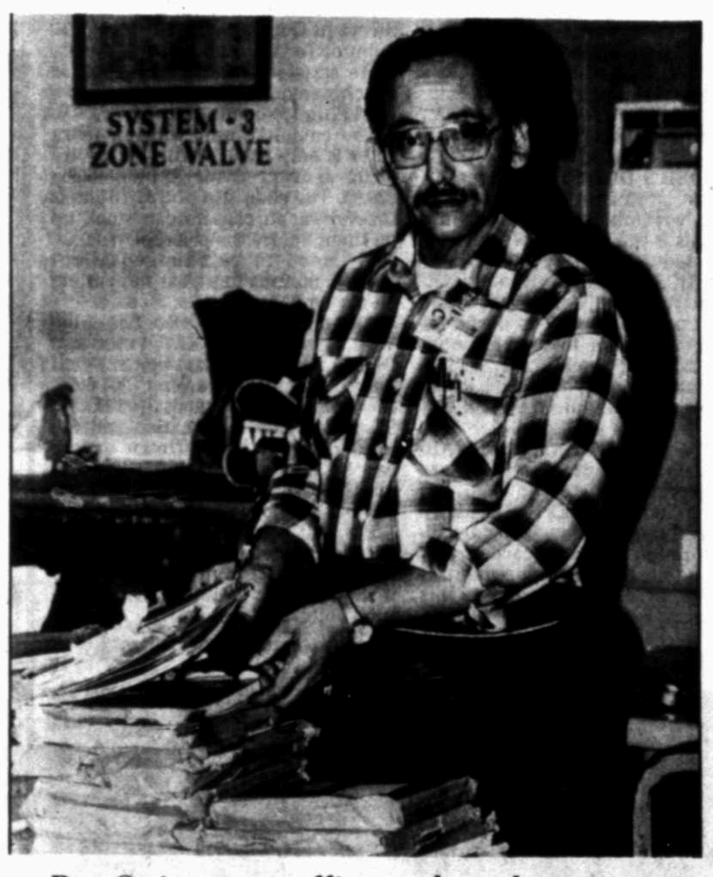

One of the most dramatic returns was that of Ray Ortiz, who injured his back while lifting a heavy sack of mail. While his injury was a rather commonplace one for a postal worker, his date of injury was not.

ALTHOUGH HE originally hurt his back in 1963, Ortiz continued working until the pain drove him to have a spinal operation — in 1969. Ortiz was out on disability for 12 1-2 years by the time the Postal Service contacted him.

And he came back to work. Why?

"At first, not working was a trip," Ortiz said. "Get paid, watch TV, go to your friends' house. But then it got boring.

"It's not right for a man my age (48. He was 36 when he originally left work) to be out. I figured, 'What the hell am I doing, doing nothing?'

Ray Ortiz, a post office worker who was out on disability for 12½ years after injuring his back, says he should have come back "a long time ago." He is a participant in a new rehabilitation program that allows disabled workers to return to the job.

Bernice Brunswick is the injury-compensation supervisor at the Los Angeles post office. Part of her job is to counsel and look out for the newly returned workers.

BRIGHTON COURT

3321 Neely at Tarleton
689-0781

...your setting for stylish urban living in Midland. Nestled in a garden of lushly landscaped walkways and winding cobblestone streets to capture the quaint ambiance of elegant townhome living. Large 2 and 3 bedrooms with vaulted ceilings, fireplaces, microwave, self-cleaning oven, large 2-car garage, plus our lovely pool and cabana-...make Brighton Court much more than just apartment living, come see for yourself.

the Enclave

Godfrey St., at Boyd Ave.
689-8215

The French term "enclave" refers to a small cultured group living as an entity within a larger community. The Enclave is nestled in a choice location at Godfrey and Boyd, convenient to shopping, theaters, restaurants, etc...All units are 2-bedroom, 2-bath, with 2 car garage, fireplace, private courtyards, ceiling fans, self-cleaning ovens, microwave, and vaulted ceilings.

Regency Square

1907 Tarleton at Shell Ave.
689-8115

Townhome living as personal as your signature, located in an established residential neighborhood and designed for your individual needs. 1, 2 & 3 bedroom designs with a private courtyard and 1-car garage and covered carport, plus pool and cabana for residents and guest, washer/dryer connections, fireplace, all electric kitchens with self-cleaning ovens and some units with wet bar and breakfast area.

SINCLAIR PLACE

On Sinclair, just West of Midland Dr.
689-9826

Located in an established upscale neighborhood, Sinclair Place is beautifully landscaped with tree-lined streets that wind through charming clusters of rustic-style brick and wood townhomes. Amenities include washer and dryer in every unit, plus refrigerator in the fully equipped kitchen, covered porch or patio, fireplace, one and two story with 1 or 2 bedrooms, 2 car garage and swimming pool with club house.

Delmar Villas

509 Delmar St., N. of Illinois Ave.
689-9800

Like a charming country village, Delmar villas are built in clusters of four to eight-unit buildings that are quaintly arranged along private landscaped drives. Quality amenities like brick hearth fireplaces, balconies, garage or carport, and fully equipped kitchens, including your own washer and dryer, serve the standard of living you have come to expect. The lovely pool and cabana complete the formula for year-round luxury living at Delmar Villas.
