Investigators locate cockpit

Discovery is TWA jet's 'nerve center,' NTSB official says

EAST MORICHES, N.Y. (AP) — A major section of the cockpit of TWA Flight 800 — the "nerve center" of the downed plane — was located Friday with a remote-controlled video camera.

Investigators said divers would be dispatched quickly to inspect the wreckage, which rests in about 120 feet of water and might hold clues to the cause of the second worst air disaster in U.S. history.

National Transportation Safety Board Vice Chairman Robert Francis said he hoped the damaged section — which includes the wraparound front windows and an abundance of electronics — could be lifted to the surface within 48 hours.

"It's obviously where one controls the aircraft," Francis said. "It's sort of the nerve center of the aircraft. ... The front section of the aircraft is a priority for us to see."

One theory being considered by investigators is that a bomb secreted in the front cargo area destroyed the plane, killing all 230 aboard.

Francis expressed the hope that the discovery of the cockpit would also lead to more of the 46 bodies still missing. No bodies were found Friday, he said, although two divers became sick and spent four hours in a decompression chamber.

The cockpit was located in a pile of wreckage that officials had said contained parts of the front of the plane, which fell to the sea first. It was found using cameras from the salvage ship USS Grapple, Francis said.

Meanwhile, twisted pieces of wreckage were brought ashore and loaded onto flatbed trucks, including a section of the red-and-white painted fuselage with a row of windows. Some pieces were mangled beyond recognition.

Investigators said they still don't have enough evidence to determine what brought down the jumbo jetliner 16 days ago, and one source close to the probe said a reward of $2 million or more might be offered if the disaster is linked to sabotage.

Investigators hope to recover enough plane parts in time to reconstruct what happened in the final minutes of the flight, which broke into pieces and exploded in a fireball 11 1/2 minutes after leaving Kennedy Airport.

While considering a bomb, investigators have not ruled out the possibility that the plane was hit by a missile or crippled by a mechanical failure.

No fishing

A photograph in Friday's edition of an 11-year-old girl with a fish caught at Wadley-Barron Park has led some Midlanders to believe fishing is permitted in the pond. City ordinance prohibits fishing at the park, city officials said. The city's parks department on Friday received more than 30 calls asking about fishing at the pond off A Street.

Economy slows

Unemployment is creeping higher, consumer spending has slipped and manufacturing may have stalled, the government reported Friday. Wall Street roared with approval. Investors read the reports as confirming earlier data suggesting the economy was slowing in healthy fashion and there would be no imminent interest rate increase to keep inflation in check./6A

Double drowning

Mother walks into river with 2 sons; older son escapes, police say

■ Woman was despondent over family's finances, her husband tells police.

By Associated Press

DETROIT — A 35-year-old woman who was said to be depressed about her family's financial troubles took her two young sons by the hands and walked with them into the Detroit River, drowning herself and one of the boys.

Bozena Piatyszek of Hamtramck reportedly was distraught over some kind of failed business deal when she strode into the water on a sunny summer day Thursday near Belle Isle, an island park in the river.

One of the boys, whom neighbors identified as Rudolph, broke away from his mother when the water was up to his chest and struggled back to shore.

He ran to the Belle Isle Harbormaster police station and told officers his mother was trying to pull him into the water, Officer Otis Milhouse said. The boy's age was not released.

Police in a boat pulled Rudolph's 5-year-old brother, Phillip, from the water, but he died a short time later on the grassy shore. The boys' mother also was pulled ashore but died at a hospital Friday morning.

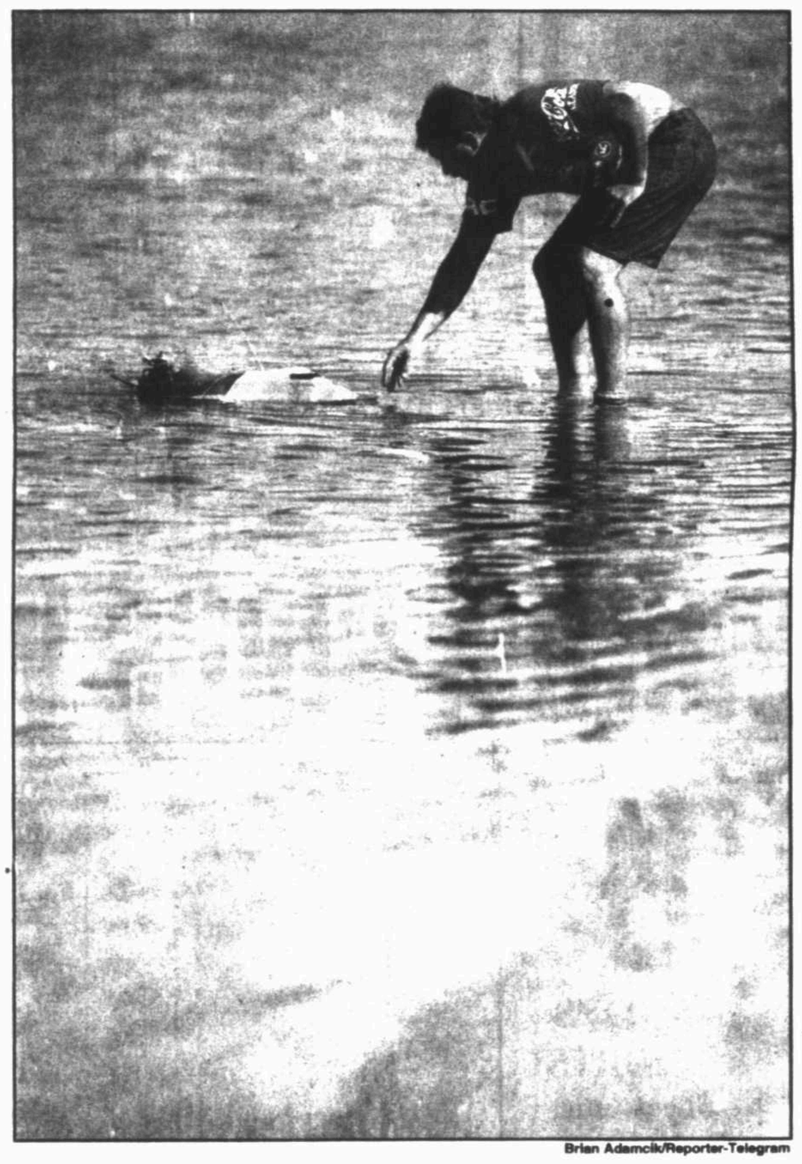

Desiray Booker, 38, of Detroit, a security guard at the Belle Isle Boat Club, near where the three went into the water, said she could barely watch as the bodies were pulled from the river.

"When I saw them get the child's body I just turned away," she said. "He was very, very blue."

Rudolph was not injured, but "he keeps asking, 'Why did Mommy do this?'" the Detroit Free Press quoted an unidentified Harbormaster police officer as saying.

The officer said that when the woman's husband came into the station to fill out a police report, he said they had been hav-

Congress OKs bill increasing minimum wage

■ Measure includes tax breaks for small businesses, adoptive parents and homemakers.

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With the fall campaign beckoning, Congress approved legislation Friday to raise the minimum wage, broaden access to health insurance and safeguard the nation's drinking water.

President Clinton is expected to sign all three once they reach his desk.

The subject of months of political combat, the minimum wage measure cleared the Senate on a vote of 76-22 after a similarly lopsided vote in the House.

It called for a 90-cent increase over 13 months in the current federal floor of $4.25, a hard-won triumph for Democrats, Clinton and their allies in organized labor. The measure also included tax breaks for small business, homemakers, adoptive parents and others — provisions that majority Republicans demanded for permitting the bill to pass.

The two parties battled for political bragging rights. Beyond that, House Speaker Newt Gingrich said there was an "underlying sense of both Democrats and Republicans wanting to be able to go home with things the American people want," an attitude he also said applied to Clinton.

The health-care measure gained final passage in the Senate on a vote of 98-0, and supporters hailed it as the most important reform in the industry in a decade.

It would curb the insurance industry's practice of denying coverage on the basis of pre-existing health problems to those who switch or lose their jobs. It also creates new tax breaks for long-term care, easing a source of concern for the elderly and their families.

Olympian whose face will grace Wheaties box remains a secret

By Christopher Sullivan
Associated Press Writer

■ Olympic coverage/1,4,5C; Police continue to hunt for evidence in bombing/6A

ATLANTA — It's the American way. First comes Olympic gold, then comes the golden crunchy goodness of Wheaties, and the winner's smile staring out across supermarket shelves and cereal bowls coast to coast.

One question remains: Who will it be?

A few hours after his second golden victory on the Olympic track, Michael Johnson said he had the answer: He's got The Box in the bag.

"That deal," he said, "is already done."

General Mills — which has trumpeted in a news release that it will make "Wheaties' Biggest Announcement Ever" on Sunday, says it alone will break the news, and maybe Johnson shouldn't be so sure of himself.

"Posturing," was how spokesman David Dix dismissed Johnson's claims.

"It has not been decided that it's Michael Johnson at this point," he said, adding that a story saying that he'd been chosen could result in "a potentially embarrassing moment" for the runner. Hmmm.

Dix said he's been told of claims by some others that they had it in the bag. Gymnast Kerri Strug's agent said Friday the whole seven-member U.S. gymnastics team would be on the box.

Does that turn off the Breakfast of Champions? Make Wheaties want to look elsewhere?

"I'm trying to think of a diplomatic way to answer that, because we're still negotiating," he said, adding that the cereal maker's marketing manager was "in seclusion" pondering the big decision. After all, the right face can uptick sales 10 to 20 percent.

A short list of Wheaties prospects includes Johnson and Strug, the odds-on

Parents Rest Easy with home day care

By Dawn Fallik
Associated Press Writer

OMAHA, Neb. — Bonnie Naylor had to get to work to close the end-of-the-month accounts at ConAgra Inc. Her husband had important meetings all day. It was the worst time for their 4-year-old to come down with the flu.

So Mrs. Naylor placed a call, and a baby sitter for little Nathan arrived promptly, lined up through her employer.

"He couldn't go to day care, he wasn't sick enough to go to the doctor and we needed to get to work," Mrs. Naylor, an account coordinator at ConAgra, recalled.

Mrs. Naylor turned to Rest Easy, an emergency child-care and elder-care program created and funded by five major Omaha employers — ConAgra, Union Pacific Railroad, Mutual of Omaha, Commercial Federal Bank and First Bank — for their 12,000 employees. As many as 2 percent of them are expected to use the service, which began this summer.

The program, one of several similar plans around the country, is operated by the Visiting Nurses Association and sends a trained sitter to the employee's home to take care of a sick child or elderly parent for up to 12 hours.

Paul Graven, vice president of human relations for ConAgra's frozen foods division, said the company expects to spend about $10,000 on the program. But he believes the costs will be

Yeltsin calls for new 'Idea for Russia,' to replace Communist slogans

■ The Russian president has asked intellectuals to create a new 'idea' for the nation that would correspond to the American Dream. The Rossiskaya Gazeta newspaper offered a prize of almost $2,000.

MOSCOW (AP) — Boris Yeltsin thinks Russia needs a new national vision. So he is asking his compatriots to come up with one.

Something, perhaps, to rival the American Dream. Something so inspiring it would erase all memories of "Glory to the Communist Party of the Soviet Union."

Yeltsin assigned his advisers and the country's intellectuals to the task, giving them about a year, and the government-run Rossiiskaya Gazeta newspaper this week began soliciting suggestions. It offered a prize of nearly $2,000 for the best "Idea for Russia."

No need for American-style brevity in this contest — letters and faxes are allowed to run as long as seven pages. In the land that gave the world Solzhenitsyn and Tolstoy, asking for 25 words or less seemed inappropriate.

The ideas are rolling in, but they don't exactly led themselves to the catchy slogan or soundbite. Many are rambling, personal meditations on themes such as individual and collective fate.

"If it all fits into the national idea, then I'm for it. But at this point it still seems premature. We talk too much."

— Lev Lushnikov of Magadan

One doctor thinks Russia's spirit can only be healed by the Russian Orthodox Church. An artist says Russians have to take personal responsibility for the country's future.

A geologist from the Far East says people mainly need money and food.

"If all that fits into the national idea, then I'm for it," wrote Lev Lushnikov of Magadan "But at this point it still seems premature. We talk too much."

Russia has always had national slogans, from the czars' "Orthodoxy, Autocracy, Nationhood" to the Soviets' "Dictatorship of the Proletariat."

But since the 1991 Soviet collapse, Russia's old red Communist banners have been replaced mainly with advertising, and many Russians of all political stripes feel the country is adrift.

Yeltsin, whose second-term inauguration is next week, announced shortly after his re-election July 3 that Russia lacks a unifying sense of national purpose and asked his advisers for a plan to develop one.

Yeltsin also wants to find a democratic theme to rival the clear ideology of nationalist and Communist hard-liners ahead of the next presidential elections four years away.

In the newspaper contest, respondents are asked to answer seven questions about Russia's direction. Alexander Batygin, the editor in charge of the project, says almost everyone supports stronger patriotism, and unity among Russians at home and abroad.

"They sound like citizens of a strong country — an empire, if you don't give that word a negative meaning — and they want a strong government," said Stas Stremidlovsky, the reporter answering the contest hotline.

But in a country where ideology has often been used to punish internal enemies and prop up authoritarian regimes, many people question the need for the contest.

"It can only lead to the growth of nationalist feelings," said Dmitry Likhachev, a prominent Russian historian. "Competitions are not a natural way to create national identity."

Palestinian gunfire kills one protester, wounds others

TULKAREM, West Bank (AP) — Yasser Arafat's security forces opened fire Friday on hundreds of Palestinians who stormed a jail to protest alleged mistreatment of inmates, killing one demonstrator and injuring more than a dozen.

Arafat's Palestinian Authority said several jailed Islamic militants escaped, and called on prisoners to turn themselves in.

Palestinian police clamped a curfew on Tulkarem, and called in reinforcements from neighboring cities to contain the rioting, one of the most serious challenges to Arafat's rule since the start of Palestinian autonomy two years ago.

The violence followed Thursday's protests against the Palestinian Authority in the neighboring town of Nablus — sparked by the death of a detainee whom Palestinian security forces had beaten into a coma.

Prison security chief Akram Abu Raja said police opened fire on about 400 protesters, many of them relatives of the inmates, who threw rocks at police outside the Tulkarem jail.

Police gunfire killed Ibrahim Hadaydeh, a protester and former inmate, witnesses said. Hadaydeh's body was placed on ice in the sweltering heat for a time, then taken away for burial.

The Palestinian Authority claimed that gunmen from the Islamic militant group Hamas mingled among the crowd and and opened fire during the storming of the compound. The Palestinian Authority said the gunmen fired the fatal shots.

Many of the inmates were Islamic militants rounded up during a spring crackdown after a series of suicide bombings in Israel. Several were on a hunger strike to press for their release.

One escapee who requested anonymity said guards at the prison left the inmates alone after rioting began, and prisoners were able to walk away.

Violent clashes between the security forces and residents over the past months have led to increased frustration among Palestinians over Arafat's management of Palestinian autonomy.

"Democracy is missing here completely, there is no freedom ... they rule us by force," said a 24-year-old Tulkarem man who identified himself only as Ahmed. Others warned that Islamic militant groups such as Hamas were likely to take over if the situation did not improve.

The Israeli army, which still controls access roads in and out of the city, sealed the area. The army said it deployed more troops outside Tulkarem, and allowed extra Palestinian troops into town at the request of the Palestinian Authority.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Ugandan mililtary imposes censorship

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — The military has imposed censorship on local and foreign reporters covering clashes between the army and rebels in northern Uganda.

"All manner of information about army equipment, installations or war materiel shall not be published without prior clearance from the Defense Ministry or military authorities," northern military commander Maj. Gen. Salim Saleh was quoted as saying in Friday's edition of the government New Vision newspaper.

Saleh accused journalists of inciting and misleading the public, which he said undermines the military's efforts, New Vision said. It did not elaborate.

Earlier this week the independent weekly Crusader reported that 40 soldiers had been killed by rebels from the Lord's Resistance Army.

The measure appeared aimed at controlling information about military casualties inflicted by the rebels.

In recent months, the insurgents have intensified attacks and last month raided stores and homes near army barracks in the district headquarters of Gulu, where there is a strong LRA presence.

Chinese sentence 7 to death

HONG KONG (AP) — Seven men were sentenced to death in China on Friday for trying to smuggle nearly 1,320 pounds of heroin in China's biggest drug case since the 1949 Communist takeover, a government official said.

Four of those sentenced to death were from Hong Kong, which borders the Chinese boomtown of Shenzhen where the case was tried, said the New Evening Post, a Hong Kong newspaper funded by China.

The Hong Kong defendants were identified as Wong Tin-sung, Yeung Hau-kei, Lee Kwok-chuan and Chau Hong-chai, according to the report, which noted they had the right to appeal.

Their relatives wept in court when the death sentences were announced.

A Shenzhen government official who refused to give his name confirmed that seven men were sentenced but said he did not know their nationalities.

Mexican military exercises prove fatal

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Rescuers searching Mexico's northern desert Thursday found the bodies of two soldiers who apparently died of heat exhaustion, bringing the death toll from desert military exercises to 13.

The Televisa network said one soldier was still missing after the exercises near the California border and is presumed dead.

Mexico's defense department said Wednesday that 39 troopers from the 18th Motorized Cavalry Regiment got lost during exercises near Laguna Salada, south of Mexicali.

A search party found 25 of the soldiers Wednesday. Two were hospitalized in Mexicali, and the defense department said the rest were in good health.

The army mounted a land and air search to find the missing. Temperatures in the Laguna Salada area on Wednesday hovered around 120 degrees.

An investigation was under way.

N. Ireland riots put police in critical cross-fire

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Patrick Gormley spoke through a haze of morphine about the moment that riot police shattered his shin with a plastic bullet.

"My leg just snapped in half, but I couldn't feel a thing. I just kept trying to get up and kept falling over," said Gormley, 28, recuperating at Royal Victoria Hospital in Catholic west Belfast.

The Royal Ulster Constabulary says its records show its forces fired 6,002 plastic bullets between 6 a.m. on July 7 and 6 a.m. on July 16, during the worst street violence in Northern Ireland since 1981.

About 660 bullets were fired during four days of riots by Protestants angry at police for blocking their march through a Catholic area. The rest were fired at Catholics, who rioted after police let the march take place.

Now accusations that the predominantly Protestant police cracked down harder on Catholics have revived one of the most divisive issues in Northern Ireland: whether the police are, or can ever be, impartial.

The 4-inch-long, hard plastic bullets that police fired to control the crowds figure prominently in the accusations. Catholics say the police sometimes fired the bullets indiscriminately and did not always aim low, as regulations require.

Police commanders say they videotaped their operations and expect to be vindicated when scores of Catholics and Protestants injured in the riots appear in court charged with attacking police. Police arrested 293 people and recorded 1,279 attacks on police in which 149 officers were injured. At least 192 civilians, the majority of them Catholic, were wounded.

Officers will face another dangerous balancing act next Saturday, when militant Catholics have vowed to block more Protestant marches unless police reroute them — the same kind of showdown that triggered July's riots.

Police say plastic bullets, which leave the barrel of a single-shot riot gun at 160 mph, are a more selective way to control rioters than tear gas and water cannon. Since they were introduced in 1975, plastic bullets have killed 13 Catholics and one Protestant. The last death was in 1989.

Police are forbidden from firing plastic bullets at the chest or head, at a range under 20 yards, and not unless the target is throwing or preparing to throw something. The only exception is when an officer's life is threatened.

Police Sgt. Gerald Smith, part of a 28-member "mobile support unit" — the front-line specialists in repelling rioters — said a plastic bullet is no worse than "a hard punch."

But Dr. Ron Thompson drew a different conclusion from treating several Catholic plastic-bullet victims at Altnagelvin Hospital in Londonderry, where the worst riots occurred.

"One man had a piece of his intestine ruptured from a direct hit in the abdomen. That's a tough organ. That's not something that would happen if you were punched in the gut," Thompson said.

Iraqi currency drops in value

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — The Iraqi dinar lost 20 percent of its value against the dollar Friday in reaction to more delays in the oil-for-food deal between Iraq and the United Nations.

The dinar's latest upset occurred on the sixth anniversary of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, which was marked in the official press with accusations of U.S. and Israeli conspiracies against Iraq, but no official celebrations.

Since U.N. sanctions took effect, the dinar's value against the dollar has been a good indicator of the mood of Iraqis, economically and politically.

Under the agreement, Iraq will be allowed to sell $2 billion of oil over six months to buy food and medicine.

Hurricane-caused surf drowns American; daughter missing

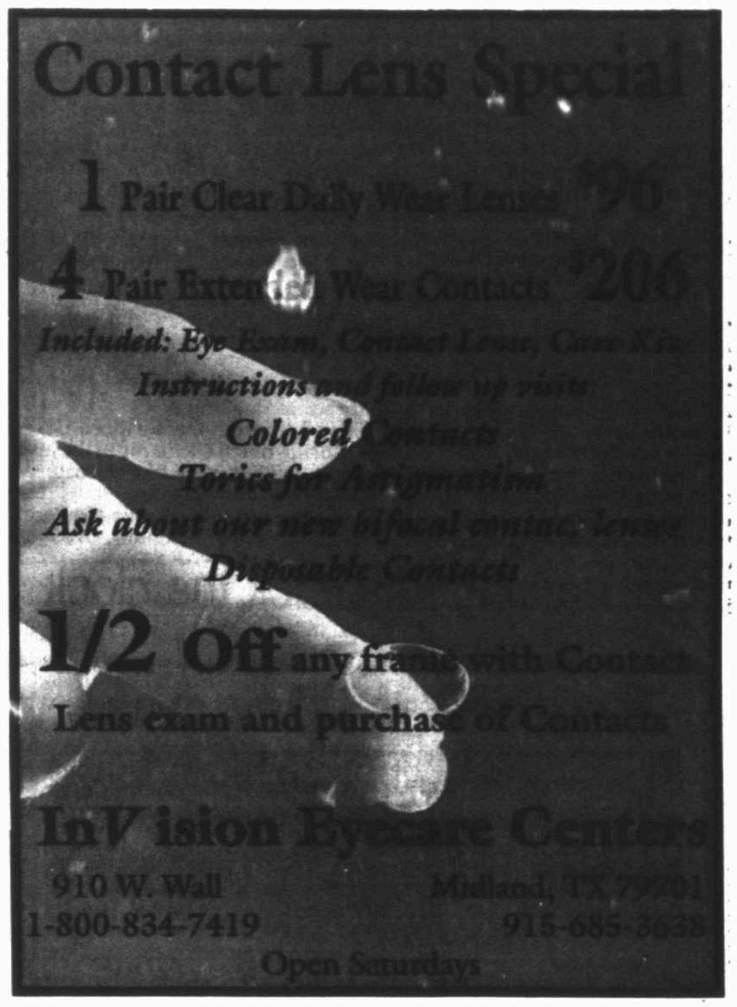

CABO SAN LUCAS, Mexico (AP) — A 12-foot wave stirred up by Hurricane Douglas swept an American man and his daughter off a Southern Baja beach, drowning the man. His daughter was missing and presumed dead.

The body of Timothy Moylan, 40, was recovered Thursday, but authorities were still searching today for his 10-year-old daughter, Jennifer.

The two, believed to be from Oklahoma, were swept out to sea Thursday during a walk on a Cabo San Lucas beach, police said.

Born as Caribbean Hurricane Cesar, the storm roared passed Colombia and over Central America last weekend, killing at least 70 people. Thursday's drowning was the only loss of life reported in Mexico from Douglas, whose winds topped 115 mph.

At 11 a.m. EDT, Douglas was centered about 335 miles west-southwest of the southern tip of the Baja California peninsula and moving away from land, the U.S. National Weather Service said.

Gas station turns back the clock

FARMERS BRANCH (AP) — Gas at 1960s prices brought 1990s traffic jams and long waits to a suburban Dallas service station Friday.

Rod Rabadi's Midway Exxon lowered gas prices for all grades to 31 cents a gallon as Nissan "turned back the clocks to the 1960s" to celebrate 31 years in business.

"We had a limit of $25 per vehicle," Rabadi said. Customers began lining up an hour before the cheap gas went on sale at 8 a.m., and traffic backed up for three miles on the nearby LBJ Freeway.

By Rabadi's estimate, about 750 people bought 9,700 gallons of gas during the five-hour promotion. Usually, the station sells about 8,000 gallons in a 24-hour period.

Nearly two dozen people from Nissan and Exxon pumped gas, washed windows and served cold drinks, while eight Dallas police officers helped keep the peace.

Most customers paid between $5 and $10 to fill 'er up.

BOX: General Mills won't disclose which Olympian will be on Wheaties favorites in an unscientific poll of folks strolling outside the Olympic venues. Also: Carl Lewis and Dan O'Brien from track, gymnast Shannon Miller, softball's Dot Richardson, swimmers Tom Dolan and Amy Van Dyken and diver Mary Ellen Clark.

The list does not include anyone from archery. (You read that here first.) "Conversations to date, nobody has mentioned archery," Dix confided.

This just in, too: if Van Dyken gets it, she will NOT be photographed swimming in a huge bowl of cereal, as a fan suggested to General Mills.

"That's not going to happen," said Dix.

So the Olympics' last great mystery remains. And the last-minute lobbying goes on.

Mary Lou Retton, a previous champion of the Olympic vault and the Wheaties box, has talked frankly about the boost the latter gave her career, Dix said. Today's athletes and fans have listened.

A groundswell for gymnast Kerri Strug began as soon as she flipped onto her sprained ankle and won the gold and America's heart — the latter being one criterion for a Wheaties cover candidate.

"We had 75 calls an hour over the last eight days, basically since the vault occurred," Dix said. "Overnight people said she should be on the Wheaties box."

Other votes came in for everyone from Muhammad Ali, the Olympic cauldron lighter, to "Amy (Van Dyken) in a pool of Wheaties."

So will it be Strug or Johnson? Pluck or power? Or will Wheaties make a gracious bow to longevity — and perhaps older cereal-eater demographics — and pick Carl Lewis or Dot Richardson? Or maybe someone unexpected?

Look for more than one Wheaties Olympian when the announcement is made.

But not an archer.

DAY: Companies supply baby sitters for sick children balanced by increased productivity.

"It's good from an employee relations standpoint ... and companies can benefit from an efficiency standpoint as well," he said. "This way employees are available during critical periods of time and they are not delayed as a result of day-care and elder-care issues."

It costs $10.50 to $14 an hour for an aide to come to an employee's home, and each company picks up a different share of the cost. ConAgra and Mutual, for example, reimburse employees for 75 percent of the cost.

Many day-care centers won't accept a child who is running a fever. That was Mrs. Naylor's problem. In some places around the country, there are emergency day-care centers where a working parent can bring a sick child.

"But dressing a sick child and taking them outside? Why make a bad situation worse?" said Susan Ogborn, manager of education initiatives for the Omaha Chamber of Commerce.

The Omaha program is for mildly ill children and adults with temperatures below 102 degrees. Each company puts a limit on the number of hours an employee can use the program — from 12 to 24 hours annually.

Health-care aides will arrive at an employee's home within two hours, including nights and weekends. The aides are not registered nurses but are trained in first aid and undergo a criminal background check.

Twenty companies in the Brookline, Mass., area sponsor a similar program, called Parents in a Pinch, and the city of Phoenix offers Arizona Child Care Resources.

"We've had the program since 1991, and I can't say enough good things about it," said Debbie Campbell, a research analyst for the city of Phoenix. She said the city's 11,600 employees pay $1 an hour to use the service.

Some worry that such programs could put pressure on parents to come to work when they truly are needed at home.

"In general, this really does help parents when their children are sick," said Abby Farber, a research associate at the Families and Work Institute in New York City. "But sometimes a parent needs to be with the child and there needs to be the flexibility in the workplace for them to be at home."

In Omaha, the participating companies stress that the service is intended only as a backup when children are mildly ill or other care plans fall through.

"This is not a day-care program," Ogborn said. "If your child or your parent is very sick, these companies do not want their employees at work, worrying."

Parents are expected to leave a detailed care plan and will be called immediately if the situation worsens, as it did in Nathan Naylor's case.

The boy's slight fever climbed to about 104 degrees during the day. The baby sitter, who was taking his temperature every half-hour, called Mrs. Naylor at work and gave the child a cool bath — exactly what Mrs. Naylor said she would have done herself.

She immediately returned home. She was extremely pleased with the baby sitter's six hours with Nathan.

"I am not an advocate of leaving your child with others if they're sick," Mrs. Naylor said. "But if life dictates that you have to be at work, certainly it's a viable option."

WAGE: Bill should receive Clinton's approval

(From 1A)

Flight 800, the House passed a GOP-drafted bill to expand airport security. But the measure was stripped of anti-terrorism provisions Clinton sought in the wake of the bombing at the Olympics and the Senate put off action on it until Congress returns from a month-long recess.

The minimum wage measure cleared the House earlier in the day on a vote of 354-72, with 70 Republicans and two Democrats in opposition. All 22 votes against the measure in the Senate were cast by Republicans.

Supporters said the minimum wage had fallen to a 40-year low in purchasing power, and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said the wage hike and health measure marked a "double-header win for working families."

The health-care measure included a provision setting up an experimental program for tax-deductible Medical Savings Accounts that Democrats long opposed. GOP presidential candidate Bob Dole of Kansas had championed that and the tax breaks for long-term care before he resigned his Senate seat.

Some lawmakers expressed regret that the measure did not mandate stronger insurance coverage for mental health. "This issue is not going to go away," vowed Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M.

Partisanship erupted briefly during debate on the health measure, when Domenici challenged Kennedy for saying it took the Republicans far too long to bring the measure to passage.

"I would remind you that you had the Senate and the House for two years with the president and you didn't get anything done on health care," Domenici said.

Kennedy snapped back that whatever Democrats may have done, Republicans had tried to "cut Medicare and cut Medicaid" to provide tax cuts for the wealthy.

Off the floors of the House and Senate, the two parties engaged in a fierce battle for political credit for the spate of legislation.

Noting the landmark welfare reform bill that cleared Congress on Thursday and the bills passed Friday, Gingrich said, "This is the most significant Congress in a generation."

The Republican speaker was biting about Clinton's decision to sign the welfare measure, telling reporters, the president was doing so "because he can't avoid it and get re-elected and that's the only reason."

The GOP-controlled Congress has gone "from gridlock to Olympic gold," exulted Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott of Mississippi.

Clinton and congressional Democrats countered that Republicans were trying to rewrite history.

"It's come like pulling teeth, right here before the election, and it's only come after the American people showed that they were bitterly opposed to the extremism that was the wont of the Congress," Clinton told reporters at the White House.

House Democratic Whip David Bonior of Michigan mocked House GOP leader Richard Armey, a Texan fond of quoting from country and western songs. Bonior said that after months of "extremism," the Republicans were finally practicing moderation, and added that reminded him of a song: "Walk out backwards slowly so I think you're walkin' in."

Whatever the political claims, a summer break beckoned for lawmakers, and the legislation was piling up.

The measure overhauling the laws governing drinking water breezed through the House and the Senate. It established a loan fund for local governments to upgrade their water facilities, and for the first time, would give consumers information about the contaminants present in their drinking water.

Republicans battled the minimum wage measure for months, and relented only when defections from their moderate rank-and-file made it clear the measure would pass. The final bill raises the hourly wage floor from $4.25 by 50 cents on Oct. 1 and another 40 cents on Sept. 1, 1997.

Under the tax measure that was attached, homemakers could contribute up to $2,000 tax-deferred to an Individual Retirement Account, the same as spouses who work outside the home. A separate provision is designed to encourage small businesses to offer employees a pension account.

NTSB: Divers to resume search for victims

(From 1A)

"What we are looking for ... is the way in which the aircraft came apart," Francis said.

"Metal can be bent in certain ways that tell you different kinds of things happened — whether it's engine failure or a fatigue failure or whatever it would happen to be," Francis said.

The 40-to-45-foot piece of fuselage, which Francis said had about 15 passenger windows on one side, was raised Thursday from an area of tangled wreckage where the bulk of the plane's body appears to have settled, about a mile and a half down the flight path from where the front of the plane fell.

Weather permitting, divers working 12-hour shifts and technicians using remote-controlled video cameras will search for victims around the clock.

"The weather is calmer. We're going to get right back in there. That's the plan for now," said Navy Lt. Maria Hernandez.

With the investigation dragging on, less than a dozen victims' family members remain at an airport hotel where up to 150 relatives had been staying after the crash. TWA spokesman John McDonald said he expected most would leave by the end of the weekend.

"They are recognizing their family lives and other pressures are starting to catch up with them," McDonald said.

Neighbors in the working-class section of Detroit where the Piatyszeks lived said the family mostly kept to themselves but the boys played with other children in the neighborhood.

"This really came to us as a shock," neighbor Muhammad Zaman said.

Russia's generals battle over secret millions in Western banks

N.Y. Times News Service

PARIS — Russia's senior generals are battling over millions of dollars stashed away in Western banks by top brass who sold off vast quantities of arms after the Soviet Union's collapse, analysts here say.

Last month's sweeping shakeup of the Russian high command had less to do with the army's ragged performance in the 19-month Chechnya war and the demoralized condition of the military forces than with allegations of massive corruption involving more than 20 high-ranking officers, according to Claude Christophe of France's National Research Council, a Paris think tank.

Gen. Pavel Grachev was finally toppled as defense minister because of charges that he was the protector of a clique of military leaders, including his own brother-in-law, who made millions from illicitly selling weapons during the past five years, Christophe said.

"It has been a showdown between the haves and the have-nots within the military: those who profited hugely from the theft of state property and those who didn't," he explained. "The struggle has had very little to do with strategy or politics."

Although pressure on Russian President Boris Yeltsin to get rid of Grachev had been building for some time, his downfall came only after a group of senior commanders joined National Security Chief Alexander Lebed, a former general, to insist on the dismissal of the defense minister and general staff officers accused of bilking the state, the analyst said.

Gen. Lev Rokhlin, chairman of the parliamentary defense committee and a Lebed backer, recently accused Grachev of "wallowing in corruption and surrounding himself with thieves and grafters."

A number of analysts say Yeltsin was reluctant to ditch Grachev, with whom he had strong personal ties, but had little choice.

Yeltsin hastily named Lebed to the government when, in the preliminary round of the presidential election, the ex-paratrooper unexpectedly garnered 15 percent of the vote, running on an anti-corruption and law-and-order platform.

Lebed has since become a key figure in the regime and is believed to harbor ambitions to succeed the ailing Yeltsin.

Grachev was replaced by Gen. Igor Rodionov, often described as a hardliner opposed to democratic reform. He promptly fired seven of his predecessor's senior subordinates.

Paris-based analyst Alexander Adler said Rodionov's real significance derives from the fact he is an outsider.

"He was a field commander who didn't profit from the looting of the Soviet military arsenal in the early 1990s," Adler said. "Neither did Lebed, who was busy fighting a civil war in (the Russian border state of) Moldova at the time."

Since Rodionov's arrival at the defense ministry, numerous allegations have surfaced suggesting that the command structure was even more corrupt than previously thought.

For example, Grachev's brother-in-law, Gen. Dmitri Kharchenko, has been accused of misappropriating at least $5 million from defense ministry funds and investing it in the Swiss stock market.

Rokhlin accused one of the army's most senior generals, Konstantin Kobets, of helping arrange a lucrative contract to build army housing — from funds supplied by the German government — for a company run by his son. Kobets denied the charge.

Rokhlin also charged that the former chief of armed forces finances, Gen. Vasili Vorobyov, skimmed $23 million from the sale of weaponry to Bulgaria and deposited the money in Germany.

"This is just the beginning," Christophe predicted. "As the struggle between the old guard and Lebed's supporters intensifies, many more accusations are sure to be leveled."

Christophe noted that in a recent account of the last years of the Soviet Union, British historian David Pryce-Jones estimated that as much as one third of the arms and equipment of the 500,000 Red Army troops stationed in eastern Europe was sold off by senior officers, who pocketed the profits.

"The extent of the theft of military property has been mind-boggling," Christophe concluded.

Italian government rearrests ex-Nazi after release from jail

ROME (AP) — While Germany sought his extradition, a former Nazi officer was locked up Friday in the same jail that once held dozens of civilians he helped massacre during World War II.

The Justice Ministry ordered Erich Priebke rearrested hours after a military court cleared him Thursday of the most serious charges in the 1944 massacre and ordered him freed. The ruling created an uproar in Italy's Jewish community and was widely condemned by political leaders.

Shouting protesters surrounded the 83-year-old former SS captain as he was led Friday from the courthouse to a police van and taken to Regina Coeli prison along the Tiber River — the same prison where scores of the massacre victims had been rounded up by the Nazis.

"This is democracy?" Priebke asked his lawyer, according to his attorney, Velio Di Rezze.

"It's an Italian injustice," Di Rezze said. "He was barely acquitted and he is immediately arrested."

Justice Minister Giovanni Maria Flick said Priebke would remain jailed while Germany's extradition request was examined. He can be held for up to four days while an Italian court examines Germany's arrest warrant, and then another 40 days if the court upholds it, said Justice Ministry spokesman Massimo Belli.

Priebke was charged with participating in the March 1944 massacre of 335 civilians at the Ardeatine Caves outside German-occupied Rome. The slayings were ordered in reprisal for a resistance bomb attack that killed 33 German soldiers.

About 150 of the victims were pulled from cells at the Regina Coeli prison, where they were imprisoned by the Nazis as suspected resistance fighters or sympathizers or because they were Jewish.

Priebke's lawyer, Di Rezze, said Friday his client had "hit bottom, morale-wise. He's destroyed. I've never seen him so low."

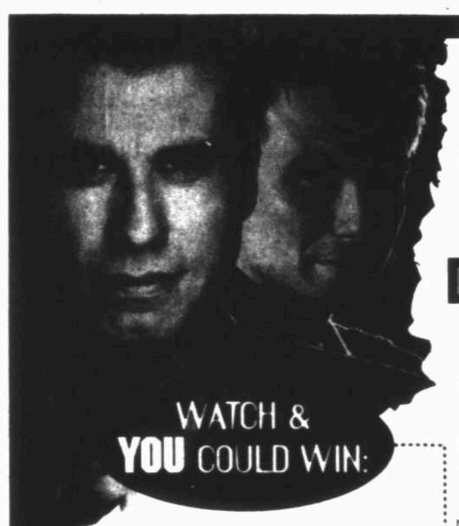

Although Priebke admitted to shooting two people and marking off others' names as they were led to their deaths, he insisted he was only following orders and would have been shot himself had he disobeyed. A three-judge military panel found Priebke guilty of participating in murder, but ordered him freed because the 30-year statute of limitations on that charge had expired.

Priebke could have faced a life sentence if convicted of the aggravating factors of cruelty and premeditation. But the court said these did not apply since Priebke was obeying a military order.

Scores of youths gathered outside the prison and blocked traffic along a main thoroughfare, shouting "Anti-fascist Rome doesn't forget!"

Despite Germany's desire to extradite Priebke, one problem remains. When Italy extradited him from Argentina, Rome promised he would not be handed over to another country. It was unclear whether Italy intended to honor that promise, but German Justice Ministry spokesman Bernard Boehm said Germany would ask Argentina to drop any opposition to Priebke's transfer.

Argentina, where Priebke lived openly for decades until his arrest in 1994, said it would bar his return.

Jobless rate inches higher; Wall St. welcomes slower economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment is creeping higher, consumer spending has slipped and manufacturing may have stalled, the government reported Friday. Wall Street roared with approval.

Investors, who had been on edge for weeks, read the reports as confirming earlier data suggesting the economy was slowing in healthy fashion and there would be no imminent interest rate increase to keep inflation in check.

Bond prices rose immediately after the Labor Department reported that the jobless rate had inched up to 5.4 percent from June's 5.3 percent and that job creation had slowed for a second straight month.

By midafternoon, the Dow Jones industrial average had risen 75.09 points to 5,669.84, padding a 160-point advance over the previous three sessions. Broader market measures were higher, too.

The employment report "shows strength but not too much strength. It shuts the door on any near-term tightening" through higher interest rates, said Robert G. Dederick, economic consultant for Northern Trust Co. in Chicago.

The Clinton administration also welcomed the figures.

"It's a report that provides assurances both to Main Street and to Wall Street," Labor Secretary Robert Reich said in an interview. "Job growth continues to be robust, but ... we see no sign of the labor market tightening enough to spur inflation."

Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan told Congress last month the central bank stood ready to boost interest rates absent any evidence the economy was slowing on its own.

The employment report was the latest of a rash of figures since then, including falling retail and home sales, suggesting economic growth was tapering off to a more sustainable pace.

It showed the jobless rate edging up from June, when it had dipped to the lowest level since a 5.2 percent rate in June 1990. It was the 22nd month in which the rate remained in the mid-5 percent range.

About 193,000 jobs were created in July, at least 10,000 of them attributed to the Olympics. Job growth had averaged 273,000 a month during the April-June quarter.

The report also eased concerns that wage pressures might boost consumer prices. The average hourly wage fell 2 cents to $11.80 after spiking up 8 cents a month earlier.

Labor costs can represent two-thirds of a product's price.

In a separate report, the Commerce Department said consumer spending dipped 0.2 percent in June, the first drop since January when blizzards kept many shoppers in their homes.

Consumer spending represents about two-thirds of the nation's economic activity and helped propel the economy at a torrid 4.2 percent annual rate between April and June.

The decline occurred despite a 0.9 percent jump in personal income, the largest in a year and a half. Many analysts believe it marks an end to a spending spree by consumers who now find themselves shouldering a pile of debt.

Still another Commerce report showed that orders to U.S. factories — a key gauge of the nation's manufacturing strength — fell in June after advancing for four straight months.

Orders of both durable and nondurable goods dropped 0.9 percent, to a seasonally adjusted $311.2 billion. It was the first drop since a 1.5 percent decline last February and suggested the rebound in manufacturing may have stalled.

Indeed, the employment report showed the industrial sector lost 20,000 jobs in June, boosting the total loss to 282,000 since its most recent peak in March 1995. And a survey of purchasing managers released earlier this week suggested manufacturing continued to slow in July.

Of the 193,000 new jobs in July, 89,000 were in retail trade, nearly half in restaurants and bars. It was the fourth straight month of very large gains there.

At least 10,000 of the new retail jobs were attributed to the Olympics. And the department said, "There may be additional Olympic-related jobs in the July data that are not as readily identified in the national estimates."

Construction employment increased by 25,000, bringing to 208,000 the number of new jobs since the first of the year.

But the previously robust service sector produced only 28,000 payroll additions, down from 90,000 a month earlier.

Dole fine-tunes tax cut, Democrats sending faxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bob Dole fine-tuned the huge tax cut that will crown his economic package Friday, as Democrats readied extensive counter assaults designed to portray him as a balanced-budget turncoat.

Ahead of Dole's scheduled unveiling of his plan on Monday in Chicago, the Clinton re-election campaign and the White House were marshalling quotes from old Dole speeches repudiating "supply side" tax cuts and suggesting Dole starts out at least $149 billion in the red.

Those close to Dole's difficult deliberations said Friday that the GOP presidential candidate was close to signing off on a $600 billion six-year tax cut.

Dole reportedly was still torn between an across-the-board tax cut and a repeal of the tax increases of 1990 and 1993, which would have the effect of dropping the top rate to 28 percent from the current 39.6 percent.

Work on the plan was expected to continue into the weekend.

Several GOP sources said Friday that Dole was considering a hybrid — a temporary across the-board tax cut of 10 percent, coupled to an eventual repeal of the 1990 and 1993 tax hikes once a "flatter, fairer, simpler" tax system was put in place.

In an NBC-Wall Street Journal poll June 20-25, 71 percent of registered voters said that if Dole proposes cutting federal income taxes 15 percent across the board they would view it as a gimmick that wouldn't make them more likely to vote for him. Just 19 percent of voters said such a cut would be a commitment they agree with, one that would make them more likely to vote for Dole.

Dole's plan also was expected to include targeted tax breaks for the middle class, most likely allowing workers to deduct their Social Security taxes from their gross income — a break worth up to roughly $350 a year for a family making about $40,000.

Campaign officials were silent on the progress of the plan, as Dole took the afternoon off to attend the Olympics in Atlanta.

But Democrats were making up for the GOP silence, keeping fax machines at news organizations around Washington humming.

They took issue with reports that up to 40 percent of his plan would be "paid for" by claiming additional revenues to the Treasury based on increased economic growth that a tax cut would stimulate.

Dole in the past has repudiated such a "supply side" theory, which holds that tax cuts can partially pay for themselves through a rising economic tide that raises all ships.

"We're prepared to contrast our approach to economics and tax cutting with what it looks like Bob Dole is planning to do," said Clinton-Gore campaign spokesman Joe Lockhart. "From all speculation, Bob Dole looks like he's about to propose tax cuts that he won't be able to pay for and which will balloon the deficit."

Among some of the old Dole quotes being circulated Friday by the Clinton campaign and the White House:

—"Our economy is the strongest it's been in 30 years," Dole, speaking to the New Hampshire legislature last Feb. 13.

— "I was never in that (supply side) camp ... I'm a traditional Republican who believes that you ought to restrain spending if you're going to cut taxes. I don't think you can just cut taxes alone and get gain without pain," Dole, appearing on "Larry King Live," Nov. 4, 1992.

The Clinton-Gore campaign asserted that, before he even proposes a tax cut, Dole starts out in a $149 billion "deficit hole" just based on the cost of promises he's made so far — and hasn't proposed ways to pay for.

The figures all are for six years, based on the GOP target of balancing the budget by the year 2002.

They include: A $500 per-person "Charity Tax Credit," $102 billion; school vouchers, $10 billion; restoring the home-office deduction, $1.1 billion; allowing self-employed individuals to fully deduct the cost of health insurance, $3 billion; a missile defense system, $14 billion; a "marriage penalty" relief, $6.9 billion; a cut in estate taxes, $11.9 billion.

"The basic fundamental problem they have is that Bob Dole's main mark on fiscal policy in this country has been repudiating supply-side economics," said Gene Sperling, a top White House economic adviser. "And now, he's stuck in the situation where every tax plan they're considering is based on ... exactly the kind of magic money he spent the last 15 years rightly criticizing."

The Dole campaign sent Sperling a package of Maalox, — and complained to the Federal Election Commission that White House aides like him were using taxpayer phone and fax lines "to do the campaign's bidding."

After prosecutors' loss, investigation of Clintons' business intensifies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Whitewater prosecutors struck at President Clinton's closest aide and missed. But away from this week's courtroom drama, they have been intensifying a part of their investigation that hits more directly at the president and first lady.

According to lawyers familiar with the probe, Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr's staff:

—Has designated one prosecutor in Little Rock, Robert Bittman, to work extensively just on issues surrounding Hillary Rodham Clinton, focusing on her Arkansas law firm work.

—Last month was re-examining why Mrs. Clinton in 1988 destroyed most of the records detailing her legal work for the failed savings and loan at the center of Whitewater and whether that complied with her Rose Law firm's document retention policy.

—Is investigating one witness' contention that the Clintons knew about a land deal involving their Whitewater business partner, James McDougal, that was financed by an illegal loan. The Clintons have both said under oath they did not know about the deal.

The lawyers spoke only on condition of anonymity. But prosecutors have publicly signaled their investigation is likely to stretch well beyond Election Day.

"There are a lot of things still on the plate," deputy prosecutor W. Hickman Ewing has said.

Added Starr recently: "When you have a conspiracy that is characterized by silence, the key is getting inside. You can't put an arbitrary limit on that."

The Clintons' Whitewater lawyer, David Kendall, said, "I have no idea what the investigation is looking at now. It has dragged on well into its third year, and we've fully cooperated at every step. They can look for as long as they want, but they won't find any misconduct."

The partial acquittal Thursday of Arkansas bankers Herby Branscum and Robert Hill — found innocent on four counts while jurors deadlocked on seven others — was Starr's first loss. But it came in a case that prosecutors stumbled across in 1994 while focused on other issues.

The allegations involved just several thousand dollars, minuscule compared with the millions in fraudulent S&L transactions at the heart of the trial last spring that ended with felony convictions of McDougal, his former wife and then-Arkansas Gov. Jim Guy Tucker.

The prosecutors brought the case against Branscum and Hill because they wanted their cooperation — they even tried unsuccessfully to plea bargain — on matters dealing with the Clintons and senior presidential aide Bruce Lindsey.

Lindsey was named an unindicted co-conspirator during the trial and underwent grueling prosecution questioning. But jurors failed to see any conspiracy.

With Thursday's partial acquittal, there's now little hope of cooperation. It's also a loss that likely will give prosecutors pause the next time they come across a tangential case, experts said.

Starr's investigation has been expanded by court order recently to include two Washington issues: the White House travel office firings and the FBI files search. In both cases, Mrs. Clinton's name has come up. In addition, prosecutors continue their probe of White House aides' handling of Vincent Foster's papers after his death.

In terms of the investigation, there is movement on three areas involving the first lady — Foster's papers, the travel office and the Rose Law Firm, said one lawyer close to the case.

There will be extensive grand jury work between now and Election Day, followed by decisions on what, if any, charges to seek, the lawyer said.

One major area of interest is tying together the billing records investigation with Mrs. Clinton's work for a land deal by McDougal's S&L called Castle Grande. Regulators have already concluded that was a sham transaction.

A former S&L executive, Don Denton, recently told authorities he had advised Mrs. Clinton in 1986 that he believed the transaction might be illegal but was summarily dismissed. The White House has accused Denton of making up the story.

But Mrs. Clinton got rid of the detailed records of that work just two years later when the S&L collapsed. The only remaining documents on the work, her billing records, were taken out of the Rose firm during the 1992 presidential campaign and brought to Washington, where they weren't turned over to prosecutors until this January.

The White House said they were lost but an aide found them in the Clintons' living quarters.

Sources said prosecutors theorize Foster, who died in July 1993, brought the records to Washington and that they were either in his office or in the White House residence.

Prosecutors have also developed a theory about the Whitewater land venture co-owned by the Clintons that prompted the investigation, according to lawyers close to the case.

The theory, the sources said, is that McDougal took out a $300,000 government-backed loan that has never been repaid to pay down the company's bank loans for buying the Whitewater property in northern Arkansas.

The plan was to replace the failed Whitewater venture with a sure-fire success land deal south of Little Rock, Ark., called Lorance Heights.

Mother turns in her 12-year-old son, accused of torture, rape and murder

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The crimes are awful: the gang rape of a 13-year-old girl and the slaying of a beloved 82-year-old neighborhood woman who walked into the middle of a fight.

The prime suspect is even more shocking: a boy just past his 12th birthday, whose alleged acts are so violent that his own mother turned him in after police identified him by name on live television.

"She did the right thing. It was not easy for her. She had the character and the courage to turn him in," police Capt. Tom Lorenzen said Friday.

The boy, Davon Murdock, is a shade under 5 feet tall, less than 100 pounds, slight of build, very young-looking.

"If you saw him walking down the street, or playing basketball on the playground, you'd never expect this guy to be involved in what we believe him to be involved in," Lorenzen said.

Davon was identified on live television after police obtained a court order granting permission to name the minor.

He is the main suspect in the gang rape of a 13-year-old girl and the shooting death of Viola McClain, who had lived in the Watts neighborhood since she was the boy's age and was known as "everybody's mama."

Two adults and four other juveniles also were arrested for investigation in the sexual assault. Police were looking for others.

The 12-year-old was a street kid who would be seen around 111th Street, which is lined with neat, small homes like McClain's. The street is adjacent to the Nickerson Gardens housing project, where the boy's mother lives.

On Monday, police said, the boy and several other boys and men abducted the 13-year-old girl and forced her into the abandoned house, a neighborhood eyesore that had been the subject of numerous complaints to the city.

Behind the boarded-up windows, the girl was raped and tortured for up to two hours, police said. In an apparent attempt to kill her, some of the gang attempted to set fire to the house. They dragged a mattress used in the attack outside and set fire to it.

That's when McClain's grandson, Dumar Stokes, 33, smelled smoke. As he looked outside, he saw two boys running from the fire and confronted them. When he asked the two about the fire they replied: "Because we can do whatever we want to," according to a police report.

The group exchanged more words and Davon told Stokes: "If you don't get out of the way, we'll smoke you," Erma Convey, the dead woman's daughter, told TV reporters.

Stokes went inside his grandmother's house to get his own gun, but before he got outside, his grandmother walked onto the porch. She was hit in the neck by a bullet and died in the emergency room.

On Tuesday, the rape victim went to the police station with her family. Police arrested six people. But by Thursday afternoon, the 12-year-old boy was still at large.

In a live news conference in front of the boarded-up house, Police Chief Willie Williams identified him by name, calling him "a dangerous and violent young man."

Shortly after that, Davon's mother — in obvious distress — brought him to the police station.

"Has to be devastating," the Police Department's Lorenzen said.

Small plane crashes in Grand Canyon

GRAND CANYON NATIONAL PARK, Ariz. (AP) — A small plane crashed and burned inside the Grand Canyon on Friday, killing at least one person.

The Federal Aviation Administration said one to four people were aboard the plane, a Mooney 20. The National Park Service said there were no survivors.

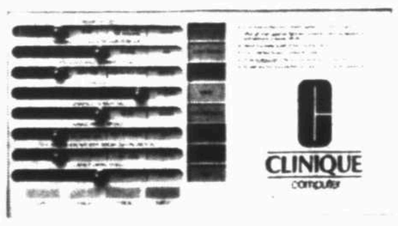

As many as 50 tourists saw the plane go down about 10:15 a.m. at the canyon's South Rim. Thunderstorms were reported in the area.

The plane was en route from Torrance, Calif., to Colby, Kan. It was at 21,000 feet when it lost radar contact, the FAA said. A helicopter was sent to the crash site but was recalled because of an approaching thunderstorm.

The crash happened in a part of the canyon where flights are restricted to emergency rescue or maintenance projects, said a Park Service spokeswoman. "It certainly was not in an area designated for air traffic," she said.

House of Representatives ejects pig

WASHINGTON — A debate over pork barrel politics rubbed some nerves in the House of Representatives on Friday and finally the pig was ejected.

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., brought a pink, stuffed toy pig to the House floor and sat it on a table to dramatize his opposition to $175 million that had been earmarked for several dozen projects — many sought by GOP freshmen — under a new drinking water protection bill.

After Dingell concluded his remarks, Rep. Charles Taylor, R-N.C., presiding over the House, asked that the pink porker be removed.

"I'd be happy to remove it if you tell me what is objectionable here," said Dingell. The House approved the legislation 392-30.

ValuJet may fly again in 3 weeks

ATLANTA — ValuJet Airlines could be flying again in three weeks unless a federal agency decides to hold hearings on a complaint by the flight attendants' union, the grounded carrier's president said.

President Lewis Jordan and other company officials urged the employees to sign petitions opposing the complaint.

"The time has come to fight for your jobs," said company lawyer Joe Manson.

But union officials said Jordan and Chairman Robert Priddy are the real roadblocks to the resumption of service.

"What he's not telling the employees is that if he was replaced, this could be done overnight," said Susan Clayton, president of the ValuJet chapter of the Association of Flight Attendants.

The Federal Aviation Administration grounded ValuJet on June 17, citing concerns about airplane maintenance following the crash of Flight 592 in the Florida Everglades on May 11. All 110 people on board were killed.

FAA spokeswoman Kathleen Bergen declined comment on when ValuJet might be recertified.

'Stocks and bombs' wins for 6-year-old

WASHINGTON — He didn't get it right, but Jeremy Herrmann won anyway because grownup judges were so enchanted by the 6-year-old's logic.

Herrmann collected a special $1,000 prize Friday from an essay contest sponsored by the Nasdaq stock market.

The subject: "What Stock Markets Mean to America."

The boy from Pepper Pike, Ohio, wrote: "I asked my Dad what a stock market is. He said I need to know about stocks and bombs.

"I know what a bomb is. I don't know what a stock is. But a stock market must be better than a bomb market."

The contest judges liked that so much they created a "Nasdaq Peace Prize," then brought in a bond trader and a police bomb technician to demonstrate which was which.

Wide-eyed and tongue-tied, Jeremy had little to say after posing for pictures with the adults and an oversized cardboard check. He doesn't know what he'll do with all that money, but he has made one decision: "I'm going to give half of it to my sister." Nine-year-old Jessica Herrmann said she didn't enter the contest because she was busy with her piano that day.

Their father, Mark, said Jeremy almost got a big brush with fame; someone from "Late Night with David Letterman" called to scope out Jeremy as a possible guest, but called back this week to say they'd decided bomb humor wasn't appropriate.

Altogether, 25 youngsters ages 5 to 18 won $1,000 prizes in the stock market's contest. Seven grand-prize winners also got trips to Washington to accept the prizes.

Lamm chooses Republican as running mate

■ For updates on the presidential campaign, call Cityline at 560-2400; enter category 6204

DENVER (AP) — Former California congressman Ed Zschau, a moderate Republican and high-tech entrepreneur, is Reform Party presidential candidate Richard Lamm's choice for a running mate.

In a telephone interview from his home here Friday, Lamm would not elaborate on the reasons behind his selection in advance of a formal announcement Monday.

Lamm is running for the Reform Party nomination against party founder and funder Ross Perot. Perot has not chosen a running mate, and Reform Party spokeswoman Sharon Holman said the Texas billionaire will "make that decision in his own time."

Zschau, 56, served in Congress as a Republican from 1983 to 1986, when he stepped down to run against then-Sen. Alan Cranston. A relative unknown throughout California, Zschau used television to increase his visibility and lost the election by less than 115,000 votes — out of 7.1 million votes cast.

The former computer disk entrepreneur and one-time IBM executive now teaches at Harvard Business School.

A social moderate and fiscal conservative, Zschau fits nicely with Lamm's message of fiscal responsibility and his practical approach to government, said Larry N. Gerston, a professor of political science at San Jose State.

Lamm will formally announce his selection at a news conference Monday, said Lamm press secretary Eric Anderson.

Zschau endorsed Lamm's bid for the Reform Party's nomination last month. At the time, he said he had no interest in joining Lamm on the ticket.

Zschau was traveling and could not be reached for comment Friday.

Born in Omaha, Neb., Zschau graduated from Princeton University with majors in mathematics, philosophy and physics. He earned a doctorate in business administration from Stanford University.

Zschau founded System Industries, a computer memory system manufacturer, in 1968 and ran IBM's sprawling disk-storage business for nearly two years before stepping down in July, 1995.

Zschau got interested in politics while lobbying Congress for pro-business tax reforms as head of the American Electronics Association, a Silicon Valley special-interest group. He was elected to Congress twice, before deciding to run against Cranston in 1986.

Zschau ran a heated campaign against Cranston, then 72 and one of the Senate's most liberal members. The race was the most expensive in the nation that year, with both sides spending about $11 million.

Despite wrestling with conservative Republicans who saw him as too liberal, Zschau got his message out and nearly unseated the three-term Democrat.

"He's regarded as very, very intelligent, regarded as someone who has been able to move through moderate circles of both parties," Gerston said. "So in that sense, if the Reform Party is attempting to leverage moderates, someone like Zschau is a good complement to someone like Lamm."

Manufacturers agree on labels to guarantee 'no sweatshops'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Along with the labels spelling out fiber content and care, clothes and shoes made by some of the best-known manufacturers will one day also carry notices that they were not produced in sweatshops.

President Clinton announced the labeling agreement with 10 manufacturers Friday in the Rose Garden. "No one should have to put their lives or health in jeopardy to put food on the table for their families," the president said.

Taking advantage of a popular election-year issue, the White House scheduled the Rose Garden event on the one-year anniversary of a Labor Department raid in El Monte, Calif., in which 72 garment workers were held as virtual slaves.

The two-part agreement includes a pledge to ensure that products "are manufactured under decent and humane working conditions," the president said. "Second, they will develop options to inform consumers that the products they buy are not produced under those exploitive conditions."

Participants in the meeting included executives of L.L. Bean, Liz Claiborne, Warnaco, Phillips-Van Heusen, Nike, Tweeds, Patagonia, Nicole Miller, Karen Kane, Lucky Brands and representatives of labor unions.

Texas-Mexico border ranchers fight to keep land safe from drug dealers

By Pauline Arrillaga
Associated Press

BROWNSVILLE — The hand-written sign nailed to a hackberry tree serves as a sardonic welcome to the Monsees Ranch: "Marijuana Blvd. Since 1940."

Julia Monsees posted it shortly after she and her husband purchased the 30-acre property along the Rio Grande in 1940, when a neighbor pointed out that what appeared to be an orange tree actually was marijuana.

"Then the crossings started," she recalls, and the Monsees' homestead soon became a highway for illegal immigrants and drug traffickers heading north from Mexico.

In the years since, Mrs. Monsees has been threatened with a knife and robbed. She has found drugs stashed around the property and seen female immigrants who had been raped. She's even found her own dog skinned and hanging from a tree limb.

"It's been mighty, mighty rough out here," said Mrs. Monsees, who at 84 still sleeps with a shotgun by her bed. "At first I wanted to get rid of the place. Then I started fighting it."

In the country's war on drugs, the Monsees Ranch has become a battlefield.

The family's story is similar to that of other ranchers along the Texas-Mexico border, where tales of drug lords terrorizing residents have taken center stage in recent discussions over narcotics traffic.

One Texas rancher, cloaked in a black hood and raincoat, told a U.S. Senate committee this week that ranchers intimidated by rising violence were selling land to American representatives of Mexican drug traffickers.

Despite the hype, agencies charged with battling drug traffickers disagree on just how widespread the problem is on border ranches.

Leonard Lindheim, special agent in charge of the U.S. Customs Service in San Antonio, said he believes ranchers are mistaking an increase in illegal immigration for heightened drug traffic.

"The type of complaints we're hearing are their fences are being cut, their cattle are being shot and butchered for food, their buildings are being broken into," he said.

'At first I wanted to get rid of the place. Then I started fighting it.'
— Julia Monsees, Border-lands rancher

"This is not drug trafficking; these are illegal immigrants. If I had one word to categorize the problem, it would be trespassing."

Lindheim said drug traffickers have used border ranches to transport their goods since the '70s, but he does not believe activity has increased.

Jim Collier, the agent in charge of the Drug Enforcement Administration's San Antonio division, disagrees.

"It is prevalent and has increased in the last eight months, probably because of the increase in the availability of drugs generally," he said.

Collier said several recent drug seizures, including an 8,000-pound marijuana seizure in the border town of Eagle Pass, can be traced to ranch crossings.

Smugglers opt to cross through private land because it's easily accessible, he said.

Border ranches are located far from immigration checkpoints, where smugglers are more likely to be detected. The ranches also have established trails that lead to hard-surface roads, where vehicles can pick up drug shipments and transport them to distribution points.

Such is the problem on the Monsees Ranch, which is located some 10 miles from an immigration checkpoint but less than a mile from the banks of the Rio Grande and the Mexican border.

For decades, the Monsees have watched illegal immigrants scamper through their palm trees and heard the sounds of automatic gunfire from shootouts between drug smugglers and Mexican authorities.

Mrs. Monsees' son, Rusty, patrols the property nearly every day. A former policeman, he and his family live in a house next door to the main house, where the family matriarch resides.

Rusty Monsees said he has been in shootouts with smugglers and often holds trespassers at gunpoint while waiting for Border Patrol agents to arrive.

His wife learned to fire a shotgun years ago and packs a pistol while on the property. Their children, 7-year-old Julie and 9-year-old Laura, have been taught to "go for the floor when there's bad guys out."

The Border Patrol frequents the property, Monsees said, apprehending at least 50 immigrants per day. In addition, Monsees said he consistently finds up to 30 pounds of drugs a day, from marijuana to cocaine and black tar heroin.

In the thick brush adjacent to the ranch, black plastic bags covered with duct tape — the kind used to carry bundles of drugs — have been discarded next to the road, a sign to Monsees that smugglers loaded a truck just feet from his property line.

Despite all that, the Monsees said they don't plan to give up and urged others to fight back, as well.

"It's a war, yeah, but it can be won," Rusty Monsees said. "People have got to get out there and do something about it."

Low-level aircraft training angers many West Texas area residents

ODESSA (AP) — Low planes have tempers high in seven West Texas counties that lie in the path of a proposed practice route for fighter jet sorties.

"It's harassment," said Bill Gearhart, a Jeff Davis County commissioner who lives near Valentine, about 80 miles southwest of Odessa.

The Air Force is seeking a route for fighter jets from Holloman Air Force Base in southwestern New Mexico. The rough figure-8 flight plan would send up to three fighters a day soaring as low as 100 feet over a 620-mile route stretching into the Big Bend region of southwestern Texas.

Some residents in the sparsely populated country already have reported close encounters with Holloman aircraft.

"Several times we got buzzed enough to knock our antenna flat against the roof of our vehicle," ambulance driver Charlie Bergman of Fort Davis said. "I almost lost control — not just once, but several times over the years."

Hudspeth, Culberson, Reeves, Pecos, Jeff Davis, Presidio and Brewster counties in Texas lie in the flyway, as well as Otero, Chaves and Eddy counties along New Mexico's southern edge.

A coalition of ranchers, county officials, environmentalists and others have railed against the proposal at eight public hearings held last month throughout the Trans-Pecos region.

The planes could begin flying in December if the Federal Aviation Administration approves the flyway.

"We make every effort to avoid flying over structures in that route," said Lt. Col. Dan Hargarton, assistant deputy commander for the 49th Fighter Wing. "We want to be good neighbors, but need military training in the event we have to go off and fight tomorrow."

The route would allow American and German pilots to fly jets 515 mph across the countryside. The Air Force estimates the noise level to fall somewhere between that of a buzz saw and a rock concert.

The planes would fly at 100 feet only about 10 percent of the time, said Dan King, chief of air space and ranges at Holloman.

King stressed that anyone spotting a fighter off course over prohibited structures can report the incident. Bergman countered that identifying the speeding planes is next to impossible.

Ford Motor Co. ordered to pay $10 Million for offensive conduct

DALLAS (AP) — Ford Motor Co. has been ordered to pay $10 million to the plaintiffs involved in a lawsuit against the automaker for what the judge called "wrongful and abusive conduct" during pretrial proceedings.

The family and survivors of Heather Cohen of Dallas, who died in a 1991 accident involving a Ford Probe, sued the Dearborn, Mich., company, alleging "catastrophic failure" of her car's brakes.

Ford then sued the parents, who were not involved in the accident, and Ms. Cohen's daughter "seeking to get money back from them for damages they would receive from the accident," explained Joel Fineberg, an attorney representing the plaintiffs.

During a two-day hearing that ended Monday, plaintiffs' attorneys complained that Ford had allowed its attorneys to obtain documents improperly during discovery. Ford obtained a State Farm insurance file on Ms. Cohen and a report prepared for the insurer by an engineering company that inspected the 1989 black Ford Probe after the accident.

The attorneys also argued the company improperly obtained a restraining order and violated other rules of discovery, among other complaints.

State District Judge Candace Tyson in Dallas agreed in a preliminary ruling, to be signed Monday, to the plaintiffs' claims. She called for $10 million in sanctions "to correct the harm and outrageous conduct committed by Ford Motor Company."

She also objected to the company's countersuit.

"In the Court's tenure on the Bench, the Court has never been so offended by the wrongful and abusive conduct of a party," the judge wrote.

Plaintiffs' attorney Frank Branson said they sought $2 million, but were pleased with the $10 million decision.

"There had been a pattern of abuse with Ford," Branson said. "We felt $2 million was not going to dent their pocketbook but was enough to punish the wrongful conduct and stop others from engaging in the same practice. The judge felt $10 million was more appropriate."

A spokesman for the automaker expressed surprise that the judge found the company obtained the documents through improper means.

"Those documents proved conclusively that there was no brake failure," said Ford spokesman Jon Harmon. "State Farm's report showing that the brakes were not defective was not a part of discovery. It was an important part of our investigation."

"This is another example of the judicial system gone awry," Harmon said. "Ford is sure that the appellate court will realize the absurdity of (the sanctions) and reverse it."

The order gives Ford 10 days to pay or be held in contempt.

Ms. Cohen was killed Nov. 30, 1991, when her car hit a stopped 18-wheel truck. Her sister, Andrea Archer, and Ms. Cohen's then 3-year-old daughter, Alyssa Tiner, suffered minor injuries.

The top of the Probe was "sheared off," according to the accident report. The group was on its way to Dallas after spending Thanksgiving weekend in Lubbock, attorneys said.

The family's wrongful-death lawsuit is set for trial Dec. 2 in Dallas.

Second chance pays off big for some

AUSTIN (AP) — In a promotion that seeks to get more Texans playing Lotto when the jackpot is at its $4 million base, Lottery officials announced 25 winners in their initial "second-chance" drawing.

Through the end of August, Texas Lotto players can enter the second-chance game if they purchase five chances on one ticket for a $4 million jackpot. The chances must be for Lotto drawings between July 14 and Aug. 29.

Winners of the weekly second-chance drawings win $16,000 each. That's the same amount a $4 million jackpot winner would get in monthly payments for 20 years.

Netscape software

SAN FRANCISCO — Netscape Communications Corp. said Monday that the government had granted the company permission to distribute within this country a version of its popular Navigator browser software containing substantially stronger encryption technology.

Coding software is used by Internet browser programs to provide secure channels to transmit information like credit-card and banking data.

Current U.S. rules limit software exports to products with mathematical encryption keys of up to 40 bits in length. Computer experts in the United States and Europe have shown that such key lengths are vulnerable to attack by networks of fast computers.

Under the agreement with the government, Netscape will, beginning Tuesday, place versions of its software with a 128-bit key on its site on the World Wide Web. U.S. citizens living in this country will be able to download the software to their computers.

Traveling the Net

http://www.tripprep.com

Before journeying abroad, it is a good idea to worry about your health, and health information is widely available on the World Wide Web. Shoreland, in Milwaukee, has provided data since 1986 for doctors and other professionals who advise travelers. Last month, it opened a free Web site accessible to the public.

The site provides information about 220 countries in four main categories: country profiles, including climate and topography; general travel health concerns; preventive medications and vaccines, and travel illness summaries. The pages move along briskly, partly because Shoreland has avoided the usual raft of graphic images.

According to Steven Denny, a vice president of Shoreland, its information is gathered from a variety of sources, including the United States Department of State, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the World Health Organization and a selection of medical literature.

Centers for Disease Control and Prevention
http://www.cdc.gov/

This site is not for the sensitive or the hypochondriacal. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, in Atlanta, is a subsidiary of the United States Department of Health and Human Services, and the information is reliable and detailed.

Calling up the CDC site brings a menu of 10 sections. Skipping quickly over the morbidity and mortality weekly report and other nontravel sections, I selected "travelers' health." Here was reference material on International Travel, Geographic Health Recommendations and Disease Outbreaks.

Geographic health recommendations brought up 16 regions; North America was not among them. So I went to Central Africa, for Chad. Although the countries are listed, you go to a general regional section, because, as the CDC points out, "diseases are not restricted to cleanly defined geographical areas, i.e. mosquitoes can fly over city or country borders."

SHOPPING FOR BOOKS: Adventurous Traveler Bookstore
http://www.AdventurousTraveler.com

Enough caution. Let's have an adventure. The Adventurous Travel Bookstore, in Williston, Vt., has been selling books through the Web since January 1995, an amazingly early date.

Three thousand books for hikers, kayakers and other hardy travelers are listed, as well as maps, CD-ROM's and screen savers. The site is easy to use, albeit slow. You can search for books a number of ways. I entered "Canada," and soon had a long list.

Virtual grocery stores experiment with Internet shopping

By Maria Halkias
Associated Press

DALLAS — Every other Friday, Gale Kemp leaves her Plano office, walks to her car, opens her trunk and is met by a van delivering two weeks' worth of groceries.

"I hate grocery shopping," said Mrs. Kemp, who works in J.C. Penney Co.'s information systems department.

She prefers ordering through cyberspace to pushing a grocery cart.

"By getting my groceries at work, when I get home I can stay there."

Mrs. Kemp gets the family's staples through Kroger's home-shopping service, which has been available in the Dallas-Fort Worth area via phone and fax for more than a year and went online in late June.

A co-worker down the hall also prefers the service.

"It's the ultimate lazy," says Teresa Johnson, a senior administrative secretary in Penney's data processing department. "I can do my shopping during lunch on the Internet while I'm eating my sandwich at my desk.

"It's one less thing I have to do after work."

Kroger is the first in Texas and one of dozens of supermarket chains nationwide offering groceries through the Internet. Customers select items from the supermarket's home page, a professional shopper uses the list to collect groceries at the store, and the order is then delivered.

Grocers don't expect home computer shopping to replace their stores. But in the high-volume, low-margin grocery business, where profits average about one percent of sales and market share is key to success, many chains believe they have to offer the service.

Less than one percent of groceries are bought from home today, although the supermarket industry estimates that from three percent to 15 percent of the annual $400 billion business will be conducted on the Internet by the end of the decade.

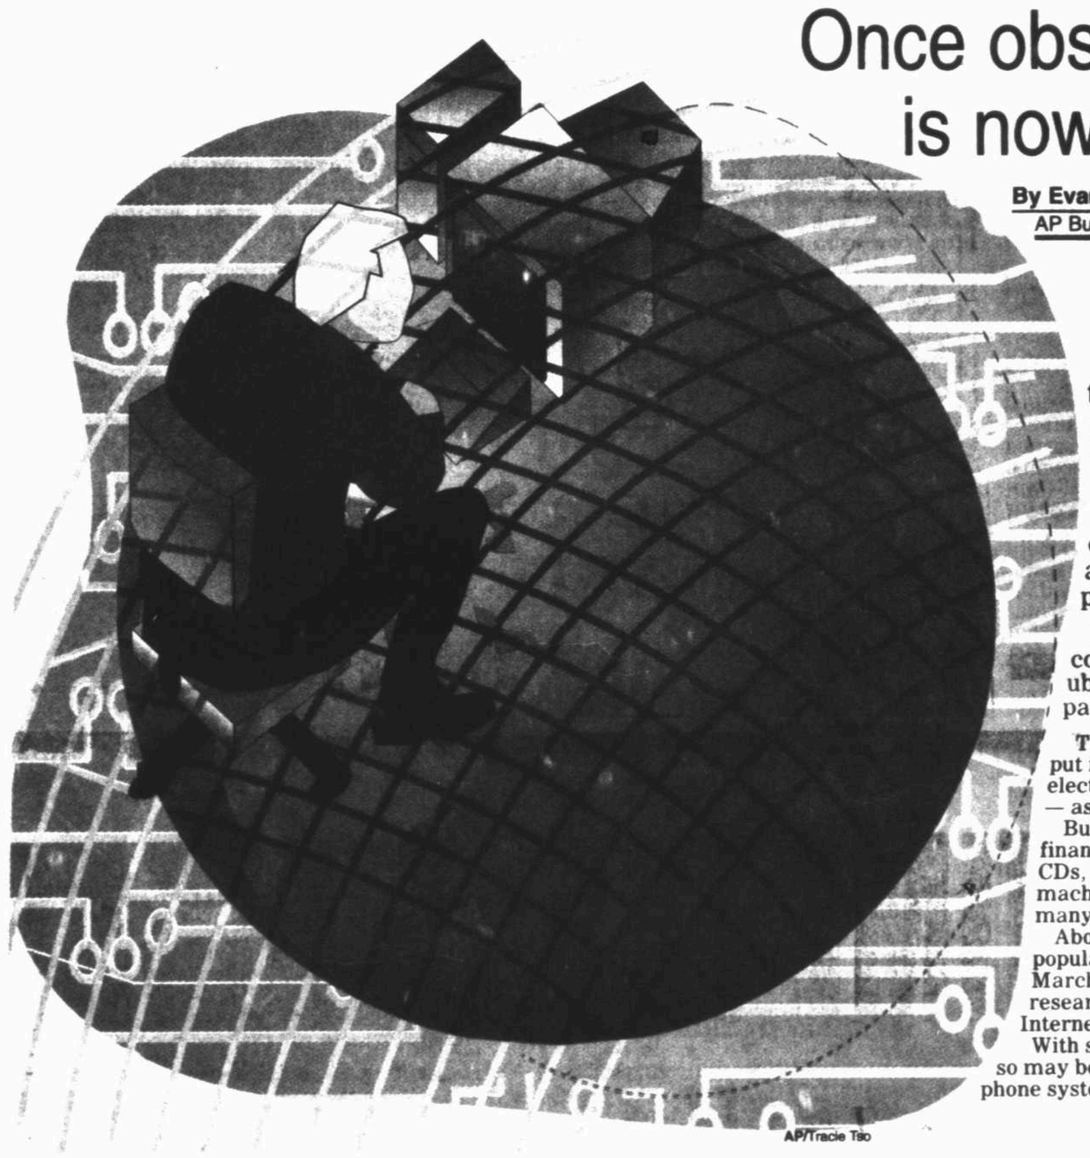

Several other chains in Texas soon will be competing online with Cincinnati-based Kroger.

Tom Thumb and Randalls have set up a home page with plans to add online shopping and delivery by the end of this year in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, Houston and Austin. San Antonio-based HEB Stores also has a Web site and is considering first offering the service through its specialty

Spinning the giant WEB

Once obscure, new medium is now part of our culture

AP/Tracie Tso

By Evan Ramstad
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Few people knew anything about the World Wide Web two years ago. Now it's the most important force in computing, poised to profoundly influence society for years to come.

It began in 1989 as a tool scientists used for collegial communication, then gained mass appeal in 1994 after a breakthrough made it simple to use.

In the United States and other computer-saturated countries, gangly "http://" Web addresses are now ubiquitous postscripts in advertising, news stories and packaging.

Thousands of companies, many quite small, have formed to put information on the Web, transforming it into an enormous electronic library where data on almost anything can be found — as long as you have a personal computer.

But a new stage in Web evolution is emerging. The first financial transactions are happening with people buying books, CDs, plane tickets and even stocks on the Web. Computer-like machines priced as low as $200 will come this fall, allowing many more people to connect.

About 24 million people in the United States, 12 percent of the population over age 16, accessed the Web at least once from March to May, says a survey by Intelliquest, an Austin, Texas, research firm. It found 35 million connected to the broader Internet or online services during that period.

With so much development momentum, the Web in a decade or so may be so common that people won't think about it. Like the phone system on which it relies, the Web will just be there.

The Rip-Off Game: There's a better way to play this

By Bill Husted
N.Y. Times News Service

ATLANTA — If you've ever browsed through a rack of paperback books, you know that what you see on the cover isn't of much use in deciding which book you'll enjoy reading.

The covers are designed to sell books. Even the little snippets of reviews are carefully selected to make the book look interesting and important. The review might have said, "This is a great book for morons." But the snippet just says, "This is a great book."

When you go to the software store to buy a computer game, you run into the same problem. The cover might show a photograph of realistic and horrifying green monsters. But when you get the game home, the monsters look more like algae-coated dust mops. But you're already stuck with a $50 game, that's no fun at all.

Still more guides for the perplexed

If you have anything resembling a life," Scott Spanbauer writes at the beginning of his discussion of Windows 95 memory managers, "you probably don't spend much time getting your system's memory and hard disk into top form." There follow 14 pages of questions and answers on Windows memory devices and tricks.

Earlier, speaking of hard disks, he says that large ones are now "so cheap that I highly recommend forgoing compression software altogether." There follows a disquisition on Drivespace, Windows 95's compression software, versus Stacker, a leading independent program.

book titled "The No B.S. Guide to Windows 95," but this one cannot. The blessedly slim $19 volume from No Starch Press of San Francisco, by a contributing editor of PC World magazine, is a no-nonsense (as the title suggests) guide for people who already know how to use a mouse and double-click on an icon.

"Windows 95 Is Driving Me Crazy" (Peachpit Press; $24.95) is almost twice as long as Spanbauer's book, but Kay Yarborough Nelson is experienced in making hard things easy to read about. Her title, and chapter headings

STORES: Momentum building for stores large and small to add service

(From 1B)

Central Market store in Austin.

"The momentum for this kind of service is building more and more as more families have home computers and look for more ways to save time," said Mark Prestidge, president of Tom Thumb Stores, the Dallas-based division of Randalls Food Markets Inc. in Houston. "We think a significant portion of the population will use it.

"If national chains like Kroger and Safeway are doing it, then local chains like Tom Thumb and Randalls have to get into it to compete."

While computer shopping for groceries is in its infancy, "Anyone who gets into it now will compete at the same level," Prestidge said. "Waiting two to three years from now will be hard to break into it."

Liz Minyard, co-chairwoman of Coppell-based Minyard Food Stores, said her company is still in the "information-gathering stage."

"I think the market is out there, but how large will it be? I don't know," she said. Based on what others are doing, "the technology looks like the easy part now, but getting the groceries to the home still has to be worked out."

Supermarkets aren't expanding into home shopping on their own. They are teaming up with providers of computer shopping technology and delivery services.

Tom Thumb and Randalls are working with Shopping Alternatives Inc. of Bethesda, Md., to set up and operate their upcoming computer-based program. Kara L. Kernan, vice president of marketing for Shopping Alternatives, said the company gets "dozens of calls a week" from supermarket chains interested in getting started.

The privately held company services 10 supermarket chains, including Byerly's in the Minneapolis and Chicago areas and Wal-Mart Supercenters in northern Arkansas. It operates Internet shopping services in 19 markets and by the end of the year will be in 24 metropolitan areas.

"But we could be in 60 cities by then if we wanted to. Finding supermarket chains isn't the issue," Ms. Kernan said. "The challenge is to make every order profitable and making everything work like it's supposed to."

No one is making money yet in the virtual grocery store business, says Debra J. Perosio of Cornell University's food marketing management program, which earlier this year completed a national study on home grocery shopping.

"Supermarkets don't view home shopping as a profit center, but rather as a customer service. Starting now is a way to learn and gain customer loyalty," said Ms. Perosio, who has a doctorate degree in food marketing.

Kristen Park, who also worked on the Cornell study, said the process will become more efficient when volume increases, "with orders being picked up from a warehouse instead of a store and trucks going out with 10 deliveries rather than two."

The study, based on responses from 24 supermarket chains nationwide offering home delivery, found that the average grocery tab per delivery is $77 and that the number of weekly orders increased 40 percent from 1993 to 1995.

"Despite all the hoopla, over three-fourths of all home delivery orders are currently placed on the telephone," Ms. Perosio said.

The chains predicted in the survey that they will average 1,128 home delivery orders a week each by next year, generating weekly sales of $147,810. That's up from 326 orders a week and $40,513 in weekly home delivery sales per chain in 1995.

Supermarkets say homebound consumers — the sick or elderly — have been the biggest users of the service, but the time-starved are making it grow.

GUIDE: Reference books for the confused

like "Surviving the Installation" and "It Is Not Logical, Captain," are a fair impression of her light-hearted approach, even with such sentences as "Choose 'Print devices and system summary' to get a list of IRQ's, DMA channels, I/O addresses and so forth." Thanks for the "and so forth."

If you do not know that an IRQ is an interrupt request, DMA is direct memory access and I/O is input/output, get the "Dictionary of PC Hardware and Data Communications Terms," by Mitchell Shnier (O'Reilly & Associates; $19.95), more than 500 pages of acronyms and other terms (the elementary I/O not among them). Shnier, a data communications specialist, writes: "Realizing that I was not remembering most of what I carefully read, I began by writing down expansions of acronyms. Then I started recording juicy factoids and descriptions. Then things sort of got out of control."

The Web is ideal for reference books, which go out of date quickly. Shnier and his publisher are trying an experiment by putting the whole book on line at http://www.ora.com/reference/dictionary/, where new acronyms can be added swiftly and inexpensively.

"The Windows 95 Bible," by Fred Davis (Peachpit Press; $29.95), is more than 600 pages that seem to exhaust the subject, but certainly do not. Both the basic and advanced stuff is here in what could be the only Windows 95 book you will ever need, although I more enjoyed reading — and could actually read all the way through — Spanbauer's and Ms. Nelson's offerings.

"High Noon on the Electronic Frontier: Conceptual Issues in Cyberspace," edited by Peter Ludlow (MIT Press; $50 cloth, $30 paperback), is a collection of 33 pieces and 4 appendixes, articles that have previously appeared in print or cyberprint and extracts from on-line discussions. Though the contents range widely, the general issues dealt with are property rights, privacy, freedom of speech and print, community and identity. Some entries ("Text-based Virtual Realities: Identity and the Cyborg Body") are written in somewhat academic language, others ("A Rape in Cyberspace; or How an Evil Clown, a Haitian Trickster Spirit, Two Wizards, and a Cast of Dozens Turned a Database into a Society") are definitely not.

GAME: Ways to find good computer games

to pick out good games that you'll enjoy. Nothing is foolproof — you'll still end up with a few really awful games.

First, spend some time finding a game reviewer whose taste matches your own. After all, this is really subjective stuff and, when it comes to games, it's mostly a matter of personal preference and taste. Go to the library and read back issues of computer and computer game magazines. Look up reviews for games you've already played. Try to find a reviewer with opinions that match your own.

Second, if you belong to an online service or have access to the Internet, find discussion groups for the sort of games you like. Again, you're looking for people who seem to have the same taste. When you do find someone like that, send them e-mail, or just watch for their postings, to find new games.

Here are a few starting places to find game discussions and reviews on the Internet's World Wide Web: Try Terry's Games Page (http://www.cs.runet.edu/~tmason/games.html) and Gamer's Home Page (http://www.pi.net/~odie/home.html). If you're familiar with the Net's newsgroups, you'll find so many areas for talking about games that I can't list them here. Just search the newsgroup list with the keyword "game."

Third, make friends with others who have your same taste in games. Not only can you exchange views on games, you can trade the games themselves. No, it isn't illegal. If you exchange the entire game and all the documents that came with it without keeping a copy for yourself, it's no different from trading a book.

Fourth, explore shareware games. Some of the best games I've ever played fall into this category. And since you can legally play the game to see if you like it before paying a fee at all, you won't have to spend a cent on games you don't like.

Some of the best games around are distributed in shareware. There's Doom, the Duke Nuken series of games, Descent and a long list of others. In all these cases, the shareware version isn't as complete as the commercial version. Think of it as an advertisement that's fun to play.

You'll be able to download copies of shareware games from any of the commercial online services, from pages on the Web and from amateur bulletin boards. You can use some of the Web pages listed earlier as starting points for finding these games on the Net. Also check a Web page called Shareware.com (http://www.shareware.com). It's one of the best places to start when you're looking for shareware games.

The best thing about shareware is that you don't have to worry whether the pictures and claims on the package are correct. There's no package. But there's also no risk.

WEB: Changing world culture

(From 1B)

The Web is nothing more than a universal agreement on a way that one computer can display data from a second and then jump to data from a third, fourth and so on without complex commands.

That notion of easily linking data, regardless of a computer's type or location, can change the way people create and organize information. It's leading some businesses and institutions to rethink how they function.

The Web cannot now be relied on to transfer the trillions of dollars that flow daily through banks, corporations and governments. But in time, some believe society's most complex structures, such as the stock trading and representative government, will be altered by the Web.

"There's no doubt the boulder is rolling. The world is changing before our eyes," said Andrew Klein, who founded Spring Street Brewing Co., the first company to sell its own stock on the Web, and Wit Capital Corp., which will help others do the same.

The first big changes have been in the technology industry. Firms that didn't have Web-related products a year ago, now do. Even computer games have been modified so a player can record a favorite move and place it on a Web site, where other fans can talk about it.

Media firms and other companies that produce information have found the Web is a way to reach customers. Dozens of new magazines and newsletters circulate only on the Web.

"I didn't even have Internet access at my old job," said Amy Goldwasser, managing editor since January at Charged, a Web-only magazine devoted to the action life depicted in hobbies like mountain biking and inline skating.

NEXT WAVE

The Web was born when Tim Berners-Lee, a programmer at the European Particle Physics Laboratory, conceived the technical standard that allows data to be linked. It began to take off in early 1994 after a program called Mosaic, created by University of Illinois students, gave the Web a graphical look and simpler commands.

Initially, information published on the Web had to be written with special programs to create the electronic links. Now, ordinary word processing, drawing and spreadsheet programs have been modified to create the links.

The next wave of innovation is centered on weaving animation, sound and video into Web documents. Sun Microsystems Inc. created a programming language called Java that has fostered these improvements.

A technique has been developed for sound, such as a radio broadcast or concert, to be heard via a Web page the moment it is happening. The quality is only fair but developers are making progress. Faster connections, such as cable TV lines, will help.

It has even become possible to deliver a video signal through the Web, though the picture is jerky. That also will improve with more development and faster connections. A few companies like VocalTec Inc. are adapting audio and video technology for conferencing online.

BIGGEST CHANGE

Such progress sounds nice though impractical right now for most people. But it is very important to companies with complex data systems.

More important, Web technical standards reduce the difference between computers. Information produced for a Web page can be used equally well on a IBM-compatible PC, Apple Macintosh or engineering workstation.

Most companies have a variety of computers. Before Web specifications became entrenched, it was inefficient to share information among them. The term "intranet" is used to describe corporate data systems that adopt Web technical standards, overcoming design barriers of divergent machines.

By sharing information regardless of the type or location of computer, organizations can change how they work. Federal Express Corp., for example, takes package orders and pickup requests over its Web site, saving money because customers make fewer calls to its 800-line.

Electronic Data Systems Corp., a huge computer services and consulting firm, helped a client design a way for employees to report expenses on an intranet.

"I think the recognition of potential is extremely broad" in large companies, said Butch Winters, president of EDS' internet and new media business. But he added, "Most organizations don't know how to develop meaningful criteria to measure the impact."

Lotus Development Corp. studies the changes in customers of its Notes product, which also transcends differences between computers, through a subsidiary called the Lotus Institute.

"Once you open up a shared or collaborative space, you provide context for discussion of issues that, previously, folks lower down in an organization weren't privy to," said Chris Newell, the institute's managing director.

Armed with more information, he said, employees gain confidence.

CULTURAL DIVIDE

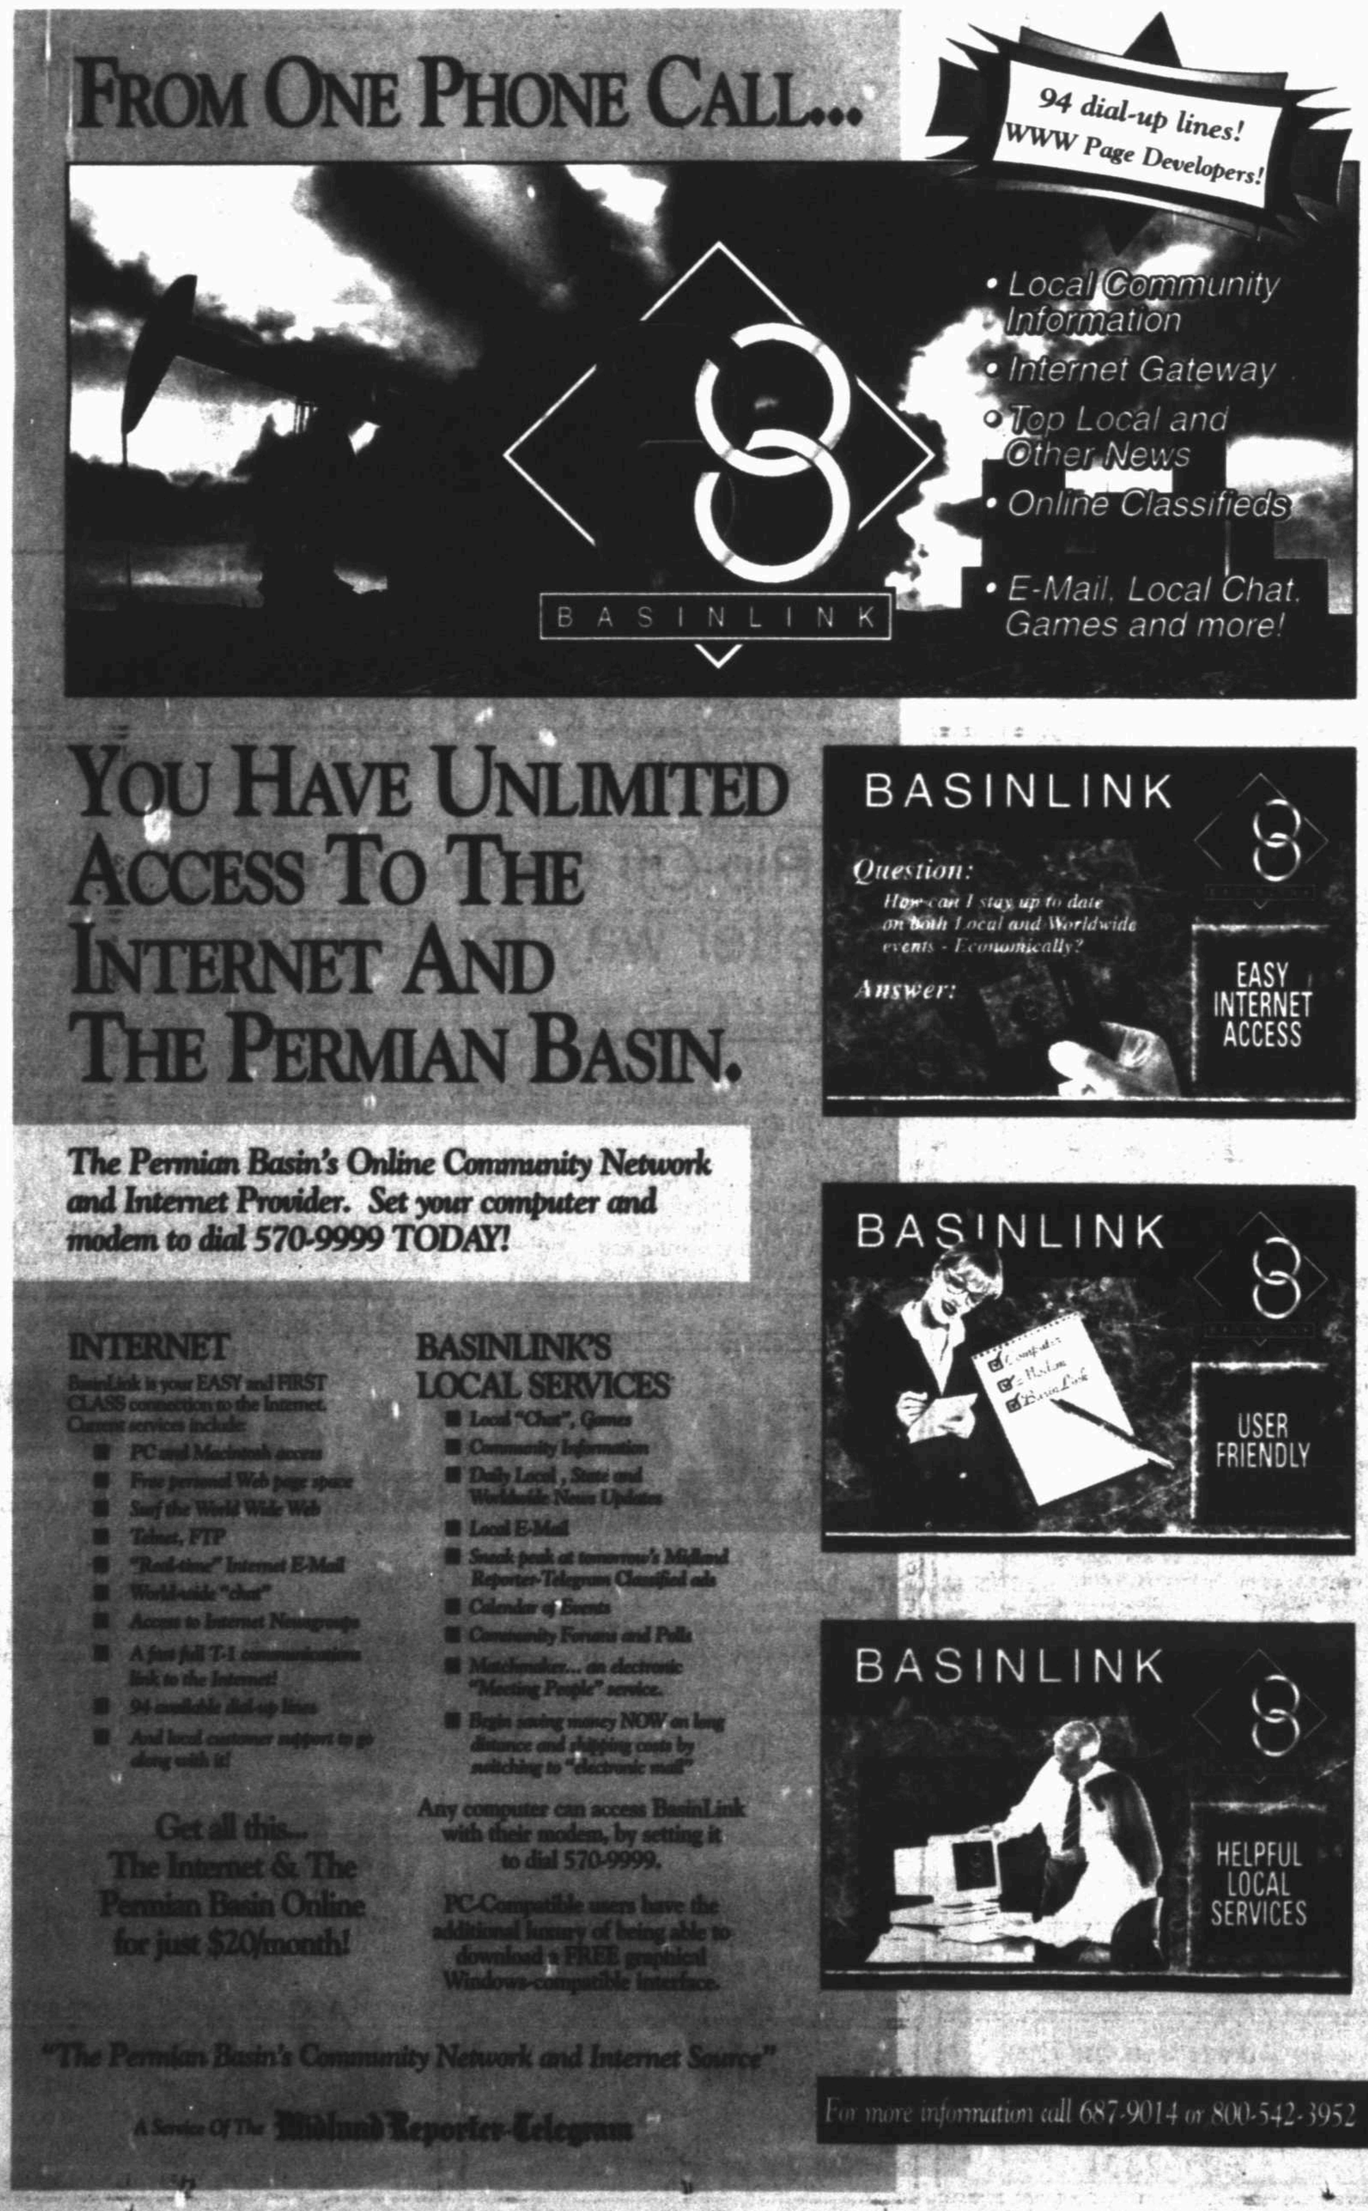

Even though the Web has become mass-marketed, it remains inaccessible to most people. Web use is shaped not just by the gap between technological "haves" and "have-nots," but the gulf between people and companies needing all the information they can get and those who do not.

Insurance Providers of Missouri Inc., a small high-risk auto insurer in Springfield, Mo., has an Internet connection but little practical use for it. Co-owner Lawrence Mammen has looked at how big insurers market themselves on the Web and decided doing the same thing wouldn't bring new business.

Only a few dozen of the 300 city workers in Loveland, Colo., with PCs on their desks use the Internet. "There's a lot more people on the verge of wanting access," said Tom Iwanski, microcomputer support specialist for the city government. But there are other priorities, such as a new document imaging system, to be attended first.

Cost is the big issue for many consumers who have heard about the Web. In September, Sony and Philips will sell a $200-$300 device that lets people interact with the Web using a TV. Other companies are racing to do the same.

For Sony executive Jim Bonan, the reason to make such a product lies with what he sees as the Web's paradox: "Never has something gotten so much attention while remaining a mystery to such a vast group of people."

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Angels workshop

The Rev. Patricia Ares, owner of Star counseling Center of Midland, Kermit and Arlington, will be the facilitator of "The Angels Among Us" workshop from 2 to 4 p.m. Aug. 18 at the Discovery of Life Church, 2311 Elizabeth.

Ares

Mrs. Ares has been a minister, counselor, teacher, artist and lecturer for 16 years. She received her master's degree in education from the University of Texas and is a licensed chemical dependency counselor and has taught counseling classes at Odessa College. She also has had one-woman art shows at OC, Midland College and the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

"Angels come in many forms — celestial beings, divine thoughts, theological beings, protectors, guardians and messengers," Mrs. Ares said. "Sometimes they spontaneously appear in our lives and sometimes we can invite them for help with challenges in our lives."

A suggested love offering for the workshop is $10.

Music Ministry

St. Luke's United Methodist Church, 3011 W. Kansas Ave., is in the process of registering for the church's Music Ministry.

Choral and handbell choirs are in place for children, youth and adults. The program is comprehensive, beginning with children who are 3 by Sept. 1, through high school seniors.

All choirs lead musically in worship on a regular schedule through the school year with the Chapel Choir (youth) singing each Sunday September through may in the 8:30 a.m. service and the Chancel Choir (adult) in the 10:50 a.m. service.

Throughout the year, each choir participates in major musical events in a Music Ministry concert series. Registration forms, schedules of rehearsals and musical events are available from the church office which is open Monday though Thursday from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Friday 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

For more information call the church office, 694-2571.

Divorce recovery

Sign-up is underway for "A Time for Healing," a divorce recovery ministry, at Crestview Baptist Church, 3300 Thomas Ave.

The study will begin Aug. 25 and is based around the workbook "A Time for Healing: Coming to Terms with Your Divorce" by Dr. Harold Ivan Smith. Smith is among the country's authorities on single adult issues and has been a guest speaker at Crestview on several occasions.

The course is 10 weeks long and built around daily reading assignments of 30 to 60 minutes and weekly learning/sharing sessions on Sundays from 4:15 to 5:45 p.m. Free child care is available during the Sunday meetings.

Some of the topics include: learning to view divorce as a process not an event, learning to relinquish unhealthy attachments to the past and learning to resist discount relationships.

Cost is $13 for the materials, and non-members of Crestview are welcome. For more information call 694-7701.

Inquirers Class

The Inquirers Class at First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave., begins Sunday.

The course is designed as an introduction to First Presbyterian. The programs and mission of First Presbyterian will be discussed as well as Presbyterian theology and polity.

Airlines propose increase in liability to crash victims

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Transportation Department is considering an industry proposal to increase airlines' liability for passengers killed or injured on international flights.

The 1929 Warsaw Convention limits liability to about $75,000 per passenger unless "willful misconduct" by the airline can be proven.

While victims of domestic air disasters or their survivors can win unlimited damages in court, the 1929 rules covers overseas flights such as that of TWA 800 which crashed off Long Island en route to Paris, possibly as a result of a terrorist's bomb.

The Air Transport Association submitted a proposal to the Transportation Department this week seeking an antitrust exemption for the airlines to agree to an increase liability limit effective Nov. 1. Flights to or from the United States would be covered.

Carol Hallett, ATA president, said the group was acting to "modernize an outdated system." The ATA and the International Air Transport Association have been trying to update liability rules worldwide, she said.

Transportation Secretary Federico Pena said his office will review the proposal "promptly, but carefully, to make sure they meet the desired objective of reforming a system that has taken far too long to fix."

Discussions on increasing the liability limit have been under way for 25 years, the department said.

"It's about time," said aviation consultant David Stempler. "These Warsaw Convention provisions have been around since the airlines were operating Ford Trimotors, and it's good, as we approach the 21st century, that the airlines get caught up to date."

Still, Stempler said he wants to study the fine print before making a final decision on the proposal.

Under the new proposal, airlines would assume liability for each passenger up to 100,000 special drawing rights of the International Monetary Fund. Currently, that amounts to about $146,000, the department said.

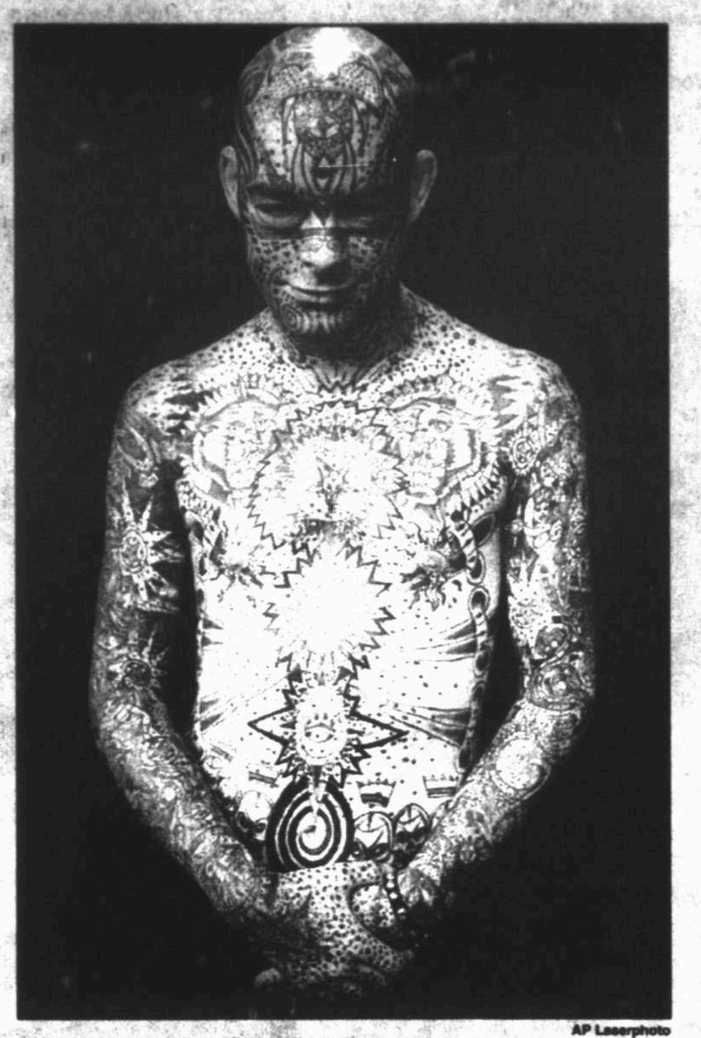

In addition, victims or their survivors would be allowed to recover additional damages by suing under laws of the victim's home country.

Airlines would be permitted to defend lawsuits by proving the crash did not result from the carrier's negligence. Carriers say this should not hamper claims of damages, noting that suits by American citizens could be filed in U.S. courts and "the need to prove negligence has not hampered recoveries in domestic air disasters."

An agreement permitting suits to be brought under laws of the individual's home country could simplify claims in international disasters, often now complicated by the laws of several nations.

And cases like the TWA disaster are further complicated if they occur in international waters. That means maritime law could prevail, which would limit damages to a victim's economic worth and require that trials be heard by a judge without a jury.

TATTOO MAN, whose body was his canvas, dies at 44

AP Laserphoto

Michael Wilson, the "Tattoo Man," whose own designs covered 90 percent of his body, was found dead in his apartment Wednesday. He performed at the Coney Island USA sideshow for the past 10 years.

NEW YORK (AP) — A sideshow performer who fascinated Coney Island audiences with his tattoo-covered body — and the occasional nail through his tongue — was found dead in his apartment.

Michael Wilson, known as the Tattoo Man, apparently had been dead for a couple of days when he was found Wednesday. An autopsy was inconclusive, but Wilson, 44, was a severe diabetic who needed daily insulin shots and had frequent seizures.

The circular swirls, starbursts, skulls and daggers that covered 90 percent of Wilson's body, including his face and hands, were of his own creation, Dick Zigun, his friend and sometime employer, said Friday.

"There were no stupid biker tattoos for Michael," Zigun said. "He never went into a tattoo artist's shop and said, 'Gimme that one.' He would create each design and say, 'This is what I want.'"

Zigun said it appeared Wilson had fallen — perhaps from a seizure — and never woke up: "He clearly had a bad injury on his head."

A friend who had a set of keys to Wilson's apartment found him.

Wilson — tall, bald and covered in blue, black red and green art — moved to New York from San Francisco in 1986 because he could not find a tattoo artist who would ink his face.

"Michael made a real commitment to this," Zigun said. "He couldn't go home at the end of the day and change his clothes and change the way he looked: that was his commitment, his artwork, his life."

He had worked on and off at the Coney Island USA sideshow for the past 10 years, Zigun said.

Dressed in a tuxedo, gloves and hood, Wilson would slowly strip down to his undershorts during sideshow performances, Zigun said. He also worked the sideshow's bed of nails, often encouraging members of the audience — the larger, the better — to stand on top of him.

One of Wilson's favorite acts was actually an illusion.

"He would hammer nails through his tongue," Zigun said, "but what the audience didn't know was that he already had his tongue pierced."

He also appeared recently in a few music videos and modeling layouts.

Wilson is survived by his mother and a brother, Zigun said. Formal services were not immediately set but Zigun said there would be a special tribute to Wilson at the annual Coney Island tattoo convention Aug. 15.

U.S., Japan reach accord on semiconductors

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration hailed its computer-chip agreement aimed at preserving U.S. gains in Japan on Friday — and the Japanese were elated as well since the pact sets no specific targets for their foreign purchases.

The agreement, reached by U.S. and Japanese negotiators in Vancouver, British Columbia, relies on detailed monitoring of Japan's semiconductor buying.

Private trade analysts described the pact as a "win-win" situation for the two sides.

"Clearly the Japanese have a won a victory for their principle of no numerical targets, and the U.S. has probably prevented itself from losing market share," said Stephen D. Cohen, an American University professor specializing in U.S.-Japanese relations.

The agreement on Japan's $45 billion semiconductor market was announced by Acting Trade Representative Charlene Barshefsky, who negotiated with her Japanese counterpart in Vancouver.

The negotiators weren't able to reach a deal on opening Japan's $382 billion insurance market, the world's second largest. U.S. officials said there had been progress in those talks, but also said there was no timetable for their renewal.

Reacting to word of the chip deal, President Clinton said, "Frankly, I'm delighted that we got a semiconductor agreement. I thought we could get an insurance agreement. I still think we can."

The chip agreement creates a new industry group, the Semiconductor Council, to compile information on market size, growth and market share. At first, the council will be composed of two trade associations, the U.S. Semiconductor Industry Association and the Electronic Industries Association of Japan. The data will be turned over to the respective governments every three months.

"This is significant because we recognize here that continued vigilance with respect to openness of semiconductor markets worldwide is absolutely critical," Barshefsky said.

Her counterpart, Japanese Trade Minister Shunpei Tsukahara, told reporters, "The contents are almost exactly the same as Japan's version of the plan."

Other elements include creation of a government group, the Global Government Forum, to analyze the trade data. Other countries can join the industry group but have to pledge to eliminate computer chip tariffs.

The chip dispute involves a 1991 agreement, bitterly resented by Japan, that established a 20 percent target for foreign market share of the huge Japanese semiconductor market. The Japanese said they would never be forced into another such arrangement and have argued that a current foreign market penetration of more than 30 percent shows the agreement is no longer needed.

"We recognize that a different kind of agreement would be necessary as we transition into a very new kind of semiconductor market," Barshefsky said. Negotiators said numerical targets weren't an issue in the talks due to gains in Japan's foreign purchases.

"We did feel strongly that we needed some type of agreement that would enable us to keep the pressure on for open markets," said Ira Shapiro, senior counsel for the U.S. trade representative.

An informal deadline on the agreement passed Wednesday.

World Bank to double outlay for poor nations

WASHINGTON (AP) — To cover a shortfall in money promised by the United States, the World Bank plans to double its contribution to the agency that grants loans to the poorest countries.

The decision coincided with the bank's announcement Friday of a 12 percent drop in profits for the 12 months ended June 30. It attributed the decline in net income from $1.354 billion to $1.187 billion to generally lower global interest rates cutting into bank's earnings.

Thursday's recommendation to increase to $600 million the World Bank contribution to the International Development Association came from representatives of the 180 member countries. They said American arrears forced the move.

Washington has fallen behind in recent years, and President Clinton's request for $995 million to pay off the arrears has failed to survive congressional scrutiny.

Money for the increased World Bank contribution would come from last year's earnings and $710 million remaining from earlier profits. A final decision on the increase proposal is due in October.

Thursday's meeting of the bank's board also voted to put aside $500 million to reduce the debt of some of the poorest countries. It said the money will be available when some more affluent governments join in a reduction plan.

Almost 80 countries will be eligible for loans from the IDA because their people's incomes average $865 or less a year.

The World Bank, whose major mission is to reduce poverty, makes an annual profit by lending to developing countries not poor enough to be eligible for the IDA loans. World Bank lending is on terms close to those of commercial banks.

STORM TRACKER FACTS

It is really heating up across the Permian Basin as temperatures soared to 102 degrees Friday afternoon. This weekend looks hot with temperatures into triple-digit territory both days. Be sure to limit your time outside because with temps in 100s it does not take long to get dehydrated. The current heat wave will ease up by the middle of next week... but no real rain is in the forecast for the next few days.

Gustafson cleared
AUSTIN — University of Texas baseball coach Cliff Gustafson didn't commit any crime when he set up an unauthorized bank account for his summer baseball camp, Travis County District Attorney Ronald Earle said Friday.

"There may have been violations of some university rules, but there has not been a violation of state criminal laws," the prosecutor said.

Gustafson, the winningest coach in NCAA Division I history, stepped down in July after questions were raised about the finances of his summer baseball camp.

Rodman signs
CHICAGO — Dennis Rodman, the NBA rebounding leader who threatened to retire his drag-and-dye-job act, decided Friday to return to the Chicago Bulls next season for a reported $9 million..

Rodman agreed to a one-year contract with the NBA champions, agent Dwight Manley said. Rodman joined Michael Jordan and coach Phil Jackson in returning to the Bulls.

Manley said the deal was worth significantly more than the $6 million the Bulls had offered and slightly less than the $10 million Rodman had said he would need to preclude retirement. Rodman, 35, averaged 14.9 boards last season an won his fifth straight rebounding title.

Joyner-Kersee wins long jump bronze on final attempt

By Paul Newberry
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — Neither age nor pain could stop Jackie Joyner-Kersee.

She sat on the track patting her thighs, a desperate attempt to defy time and the chronic ache in her right hamstring. Then she crouched in a sprinter's pose and unleashed her body toward the sand pit, her glorious Olympic career about to end with one final fling through the air.

When Joyner-Kersee landed Friday night, she crawled from the pit with a look of disgust. But soon, she was smiling and waving to the crowd.

The leap of 22 feet, 11 3/4 inches had given her the bronze medal — her sixth and final Olympic prize.

"Tonight," she said, "is very special. Of all the medals I've won, this one I really had to work for."

Joyner-Kersee was in sixth place heading into the last of her six jumps. To that point, her best leap was 22-6 1/4, far off her Olympic-record performance of 24-3 3/4 at the 1988 Seoul Games.

After each jump, she brushed off the sand and headed back to the bench, trying to figure out how to squeeze one more big leap out of her 34-year-old legs.

As she stared down the runway one last time, she said to herself, "Forget about the leg. This is it, Jackie. This is it. All week, you've trained for this. It's not like you want it to be, but this is your last shot. So get down that runway and attack the board, or don't jump at all."

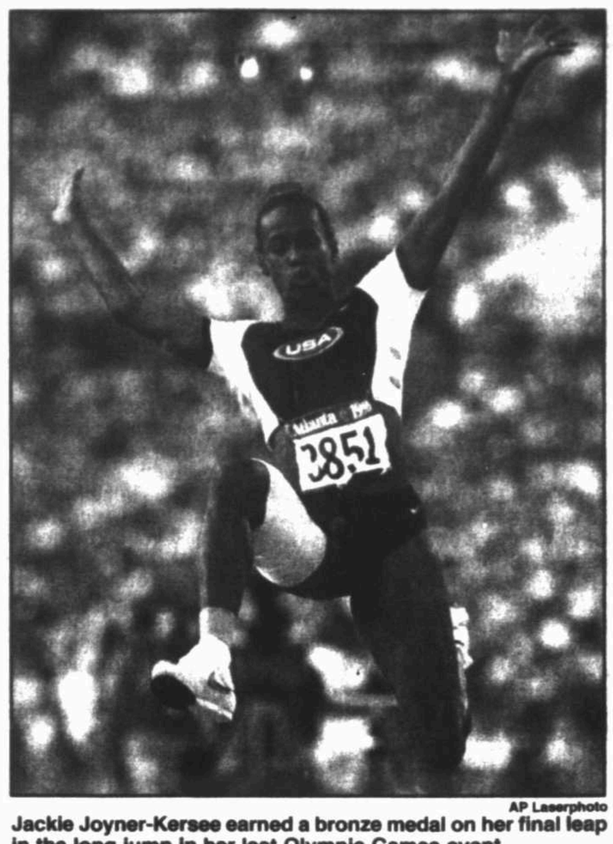

Even after her final attempt moved her into third place, Joyner-Kersee had to wait an agonizing 10 minutes to know if her jump would stand up.

Iva Prandzheva of Bulgaria fouled. Then Agata Karczmarek of Poland came up short. Finally, Niki Xanthou of Greece stepped to the line, the final person who could knock Joyner-Kersee off the victory stand.

Xanthou tried to exhort the American crowd to make some noise, but she found no takers. However, when her last jump came up a half-foot short of Joyner-Kersee's, the stands erupted

CITY MEN'S GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

Dub answers Hogan's call

■ Dub Huckabee shoots an opening-round 65 to take a one-shot lead in the men's city golf championship.

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

Men's City Championship

The lure of playing in the NationsBank Men's City Open was too strong for Dub Huckabee to ignore.

And now, in his first appearance among the best golfers in Midland, Huckabee made up for the many missed tournaments to take the lead with a 5-under-par 65 at Hogan Park.

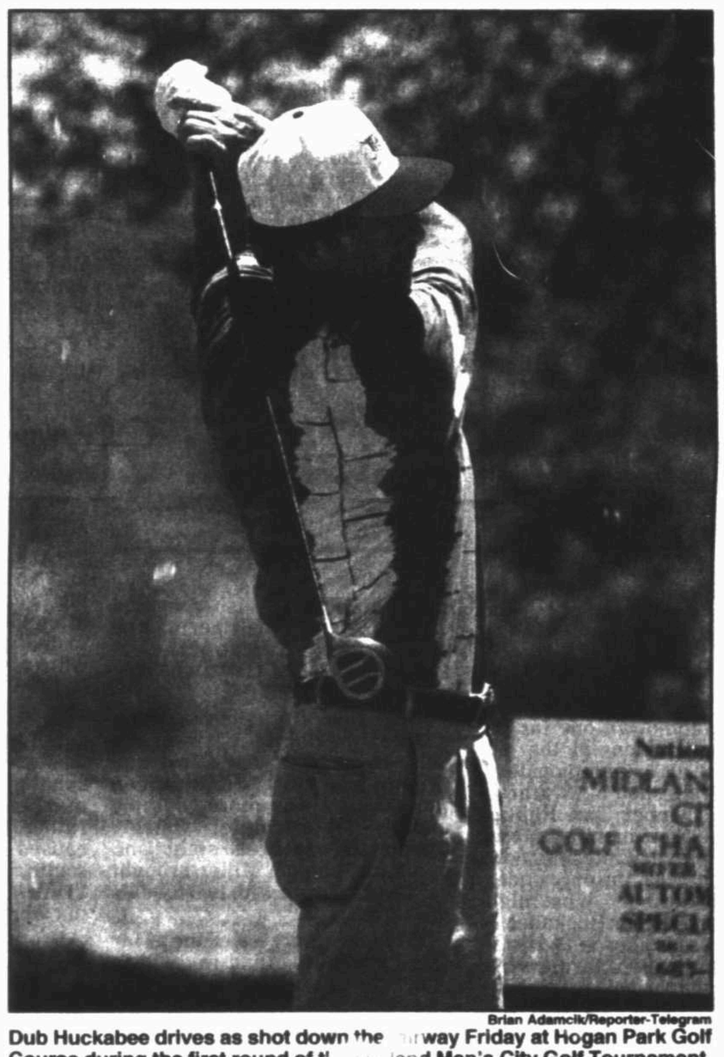

"I have been looking forward to playing in this tournament," said Huckabee, who explained conflicts and injuries have forced him to miss previous tournaments. "When looking at the list of golfers, it is easy to say this is the best in Midland. I'm tickled to death (to be in the lead)."

Huckabee leads Michael Guss by one stroke and Jason Hewitt by two and says that it is way to early to think that having a lead at this point is of too much significance, but he also realizes that having the lead does have some advantages.

Huckabee's debut in the city championship also marks his return to Hogan which he hasn't played competitively since junior golf in the late 1960s. At that time, the Monahans native, was battling the likes of PGA golfer and former Midland resident John Adams and three-time city champion and former Texas A&M golfer Steve Whiteside for supremacy of the Permian Basin golf scene. Huckabee doesn't talk much about who won what tournaments but talks about how much better he is because of the relationship.

"We had a lot of good matches and some good battles here (at Hogan). When you go up against those guys, you learn to compete," said Huckabee, who roomed with Adams for three years while playing golf at Arizona State University. "I'm one of his (Adams) biggest fans. He made a player out of me because of the competition. If you beat

Novacek not responding to treatment

■ Doctor says Novacek's back problems could be 'career threatening' as the tight end will miss more time this season.

By Chip Brown
Associated Press

AUSTIN — There's more injury trouble for the Dallas Cowboys.

Tight end Jay Novacek, Troy Aikman's favorite target in short-yardage situations, is not recovering from back problems as doctors had hoped, coach Barry Switzer said Friday.

"What I heard yesterday is that the doctors are disappointed that he hadn't responded well," said Switzer, adding that Novacek's role on the team this year is in question. "I am disappointed for Jay, first of all. His back just hasn't responded."

Cowboys head trainer Jim Maurer said Novacek, 33, suffers from a degenerative disk in his lower back that he had surgery on in 1988 while playing for the Phoenix Cardinals.

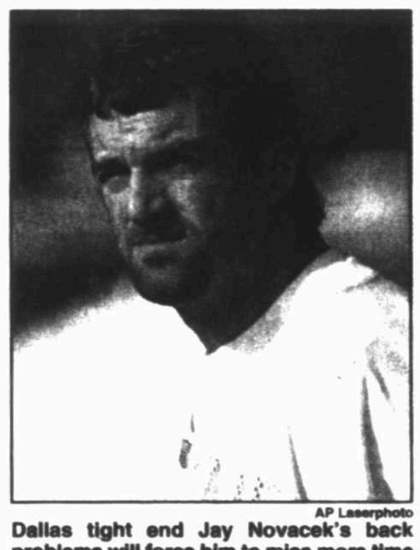

Novacek had two cortizone injections last week to reduce swelling in his lower back, but that didn't eliminate the pain, Maurer said.

"It's career-threatening," Maurer said. "Considering how long ago he had the surgery and how old Jay is, I don't know how much longer he can go anyway."

Novacek was not at practice Friday and couldn't be reached for comment, according to team officials.

Maurer said Novacek will continue rehabilitation, which includes swim-

Brickyard bracing for Earnhardt and Gordon

By Mike Harris
AP Motorsports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — It's a rivalry of men separated in age by 20 years, a half-dozen championships and completely different styles.

Still, there is little doubt Dale Earnhardt and Jeff Gordon eye each other with the respect and fatalism of Wild West gunslingers.

Earnhardt, 45, is a seven-time Winston Cup champion and the defender of the title in the Brickyard 400 at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Gordon, who will turn 25 on Sunday, is the defending series champion. He won the inaugural Indy stock car race in 1994. He will start the Brickyard from the pole Saturday for the second straight year.

There isn't much doubt that the third Indy race would be billed as another Earnhardt-Gordon matchup, but for the fact that Earnhardt is playing hurt. His driving ability is limited by the pain of a broken collar bone and sternum from a race crash last weekend.

But Gordon, who leads the series with six victories and five poles this year, isn't so sure that Earnhardt, known to his fans as The Intimidator, will let the pain stop him.

The plan announced by Earnhardt and car owner Richard Childress calls for the driver to start the 400-mile race in the team's Chevrolet, then give up the seat as soon as reasonably possible to relief driver Mike Skinner.

NASCAR rules give the points earned in a race to the driver who starts the car in the event, and Earnhardt needs the points in his chase of a record eighth series title.

He is third in the standings, trailing Gordon by 23 points and Terry Labonte by 14 going into the 19th of 31 races. That's why Gordon doesn't really believe Earnhardt will give up the wheel.

"I know Dale Earnhardt," Gordon said. "If he's got a good car and things are going well, there's no way you can drag him out of that race car, and that's something we all look up to.

"It definitely makes me want to be a tougher, more aggressive race car driver. There's a lot of things I've learned from Dale, and this will probably be another one of those things."

Earnhardt, a psyche-out expert who often refers to Gordon as "Wonder Boy,"

Former Dallas policeman Johnny Hernandez and his girlfriend Rachelle Marie Smith walk out of Dallas' Crowley Courts Building Friday after Hernandez entered a guilty plea on a count of soliciting the murder of Dallas Cowboys wide receiver Michael Irvin.

Hernandez gets six-year sentence

By Stefani G. Kopenec
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Another chapter in the sordid scandal surrounding Michael Irvin ended Friday with an ex-police officer's admission that he plotted to have the Dallas Cowboys star killed.

Johnnie Hernandez, 28, received a six-year prison term in exchange for his guilty plea. He later apologized and accepted responsibility for the actions that forced his resignation from "the job I always wanted, being a police officer."

But prosecutors portrayed him as a "dirty cop" who protected purported drug dealers and concocted the murder-for-hire plot so his activities wouldn't come to light during the football player's drug trial.

"That's the bottom line," said Assistant District Attorney Toby Shook. "Johnnie Hernandez is a dirty cop. He's a bad cop, and he's going to prison, where dirty cops deserve to go."

Hernandez, wearing a blue suit and a sullen, nervous expression, pleaded guilty before state District Judge Jack Hampton to a solicitation of capital murder charge and an unrelated bribery count.

He avoided going to trial Monday by striking a deal with prosecutors. Under terms of the plea agreement, Hampton sentenced Hernandez to two six-year prison terms, which will run concurrently, and two $1,000 fines.

He could have received up to 99 years. With good behavior, he could be paroled in approximately two years, officials said.

Hernandez, who has been free on bond, will report to the Dallas County jail Monday before his transfer to the state prison system.

In a statement read by defense attorney Frank Perez, Hernandez apologized to family members for soliciting a hit on Irvin, who cut

Webb extends du Maurier lead

Pro Golf Roundup

EDMONTON, Alberta — Karrie Webb of Australia shook off two early bogeys to shoot a 68 on Friday and expand her lead to four shots in the $1 million du Maurier Classic, the last of the season's major championships for women.

Webb, 21, completed two rounds at 133, 11 strokes under par for the 6,324-yard Edmonton Country Club course.

Meg Mallon shot a 65 Friday, matching Webb's opening-round score, and was at 137 after 36 holes. Dana Dormann, who is married to Mallon's caddy, John Dormann, was at 5-under 139 after a round of 70. Joining her were Nancy Lopez, who rallied after an early struggle to shoot 71, and Pat Hurst.

Annika Sorenstam of Sweden, the two-time U.S. Open champion, was at 5-under for the tournament and 4-under for the day after 17 holes when play was suspended for the day due to a thunderstorm.

"I struggled a little bit early. I didn't have a good rhythm and I misclubbed a couple times," said Webb, who bogeyed Nos. 6 and 7 after errant approach shots. She was past the green on No. 6 and in the sand at No. 7.

VFW Senior Championship

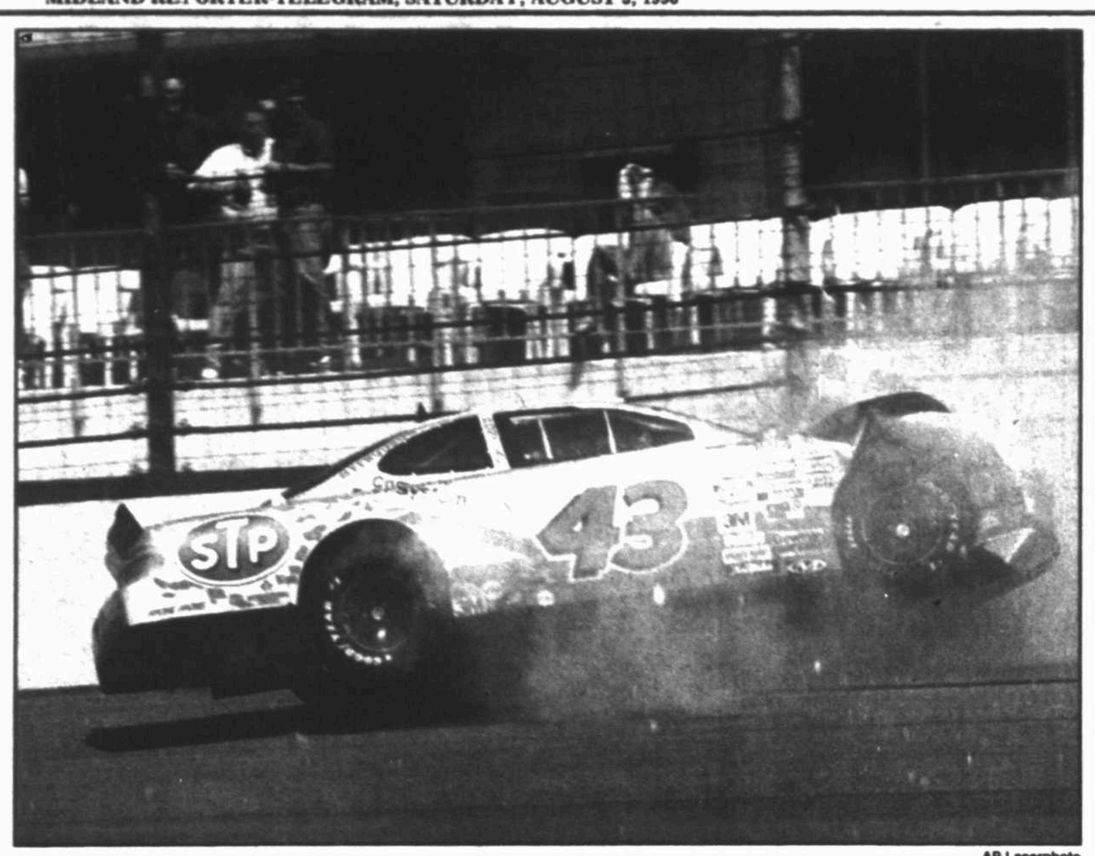

BELTON, Mo. — Dave Eichelberger saved par with a 20-foot chip on the final hole Friday for a 6-under-par 64 and a one-stroke lead after the first round of the VFW Seniors Championship.

Eichelberger, 59th on the money list with $127,361 in 23 starts, had six birdies and 12 pars on the Loch Lloyd course for his best round of the year.

"It's been a real struggle for me," said Eichelberger, 52, who won the 1994 Quicksilver Classic. "My best round before today was a 68 or 69. This was the best round I've had in quite some time."

Jim Colbert, the tournament winner in 1991 and 1994 and runner-up in 1992 and 1995, was a stroke back along with Frank Conner.

Heavy rains the previous 24 hours made the course play unusually long.

Burn's Kreis MLS player of month

Associated Press

DALLAS — Jason Kreis, Dallas Burn's starting midfielder, has been named Major League Soccer's Player of the Month for July.

The 23-year-old Kreis scored five goals to lead the team to a 5-2 record last month.

Dallas has won four straight games to pull within two points of Western Conference leader Los Angeles.

Kreis, a Burn fifth-round draft choice, is tied for seventh place in MLS scoring with 25 points (11 goals, 3 assists).

He closed out the month of July by scoring the first goal in Dallas' 2-1 win at Columbus, Ohio, last week.

Kreis has played in all 23 Burn games, starting 21. He's scored the game-winning goal in three of Dallas' victories.

Meanwhile, Burn officials announced that Thursday's game against the Los Angeles Galaxy has been changed to 7:30 p.m.

The game, to be televised by ESPN2 from the Cotton Bowl, will be Dallas' final regular season home game of the inaugural MLS season.

The later starting time could mean an extra 3,000 to 4,000 people in the stands, Burn president Billy Hicks said.

Liekoski Resigns as Crew coach

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Timo Liekoski resigned as coach of the Columbus Crew on Friday and was replaced by assistant Tom Fitzgerald for the remainder of the Major League Soccer season.

"We are an organization committed to excellence in all areas, and this commitment demands results on the field," general manager Jamey Rootes said.

"We simply need to make some very difficult changes at this point in the season to get us back on track."

Columbus is last in the 10-team league with a 6-16 record.

Fitzgerald coached the University of Tampa for eight years before joining the Crew in January. The Spartans won the 1994 NCAA Division II title.

him you had to play well."

On Huckabee's return to the city's only municipal course, the Green Tree member said he was very impressed with the quality of the course. That, he says, is big a reason for his six birdies on holes six through 15 and why a 1-over-par round became a 6-under finish.

"The course is in excellent shape," said Huckabee, whose only bogey came on a three-putt at the third hole. "The condition is superb and that is conducive to low scoring.

"I also didn't hit any errant shots. If you are putting for birdies a lot, you should make a good score."

Years later Huckabee, the winner of the 1973 Southwest Amateur Championship at Juarez Country Club and the Arizona State Amateur that same year, is still competing and winning. This year, he teamed with his father Ron to win the Midland Country Club Quarter Century Tournament and they were part of the four-man group which won the Ranchland Blowout. Doing well has had its benefits.

"Anytime you play well under pressure, it helps you," said Huckabee, who won the Andrews Invite in 1995. "There are few rounds of golf that I don't become a better golfer.

"Harvey Penick once said that 'Go get in competitions and it will tell you what you need to work on."

Another player that is making the most of a return appearance to Hogan is Guss. The former Stanford player had not played in the tournament since 1992 but the quality field and some pestering by his friends put him on this year's list.

"My buddies goaded me into it," said Guss, who caddied for Bruce Vaughn when Vaughn won the 1994 Nike Open. "This is a golfing community. I have played here before and my game is coming back. I am impressed with the talent this year."

Guss had birdies had four birdies and an eagle on 14 but bogeys on nine and 15 made a monster round into a second-best round. However, Guss said big rounds will be needed to win.

"It (the winning score) will be in the low numbers," Guss said. "It will take 10-under (par)."

The second round of the tournament's three rounds begins today at 7:30 a.m. with 17 guys within six strokes of Huckabee. In the final pairing will be Guss and Huckabee, who live down the street from each other. It should be interesting.

PAR SAVERS: The first round was an up-and-down one for the past four champions of the city tournament. 1995 champion Jeremiah Luttrell shot a 73 (three-over), 1994 winner Tim Phillips fired a 70, 1993 winner Jeff Moses had a 75. Steve Whiteside (1992 winner) shot a 69, the only under-par round of the four... What might have been the key for Huckabee on Day One was his play on 15. He left the par-4 15th with a birdie while Guss bogeyed the hole to fall back to 4-under... Hogan Head Pro Price Courter said he expects lower scores for golfers in the championship flight today. The Championship flight will be the first flight off, and because they will be shooting at freshly mowed greens, he expects even lower scores than Friday when 10 players shot under par...

RIVALRY: Generations clash at Brickyard

a nickname he knows the younger driver dislikes, insists he will get out of the car at the first caution flag or sometime early in the race.

"It's real emotional that you can't drive and go on and do what you need to do," he said.

After he won the Brickyard last year, ending an eight-race stretch without a win, Earnhardt was triumphant, calling it an answer to those who had been saying that maybe he was losing some of his edge to age and time.

"You're not going to beat us by talking about us," was Earnhardt's biting answer then. "This team isn't under any more pressure than it's ever been just because there's a Jeff Gordon or a Sterling Marlin ahead of us in the points. We're not dead, yet."

This time, he goes into the Brickyard not having won in 14 races. But with 11 top-five finishes, he retained the intensity that made him a strong favorite to win the title until the crash at Talladega.

"If we can just get through these next couple of races without losing too much in the points, we'll be OK," Earnhardt said. "I'm confident that Mike will do a good job for us, and I think I can heal up and be back to 100 percent pretty quick."

At least this year he won't have to contend with a 4 1/2-hour rain delay, like last year. The National Weather Service forecast for Saturday called for partly sunny skies and unseasonably cool highs in the mid 80s.

The biggest crowd in stock car racing — an estimated 310,000 — will be on hand for the race featuring the biggest purse in NASCAR, about $4.7 million.

Others trying to break the hold of Gordon and Earnhardt on the Brickyard will include Mark Martin, starting on the outside of row one, as well as other up-front starters Lake Speed and Ken Schrader.

Labonte, the 1984 series champion who is having one of his best seasons, will start ninth, three positions in front of Earnhardt.

Brickyard Notes

NASCAR's drivers agree that passing on the 2 1/2-mile Indianapolis Motor Speedway track is no easy task.

"You have to look at the points on the race track where you might be able to pass," said Dale Jarrett, currently fourth in the Winston Cup standings.

ONLY CRASHES: After two days with no real problems on the track, there were two hard crashes Friday at Indy.

Bobby Hillin Jr. sustained a bruised left foot and chest when he blew an engine and slid though his own oil, crashing in turn one during the morning practice.

The other accident came in the final practice before Saturday's race, with Bobby Hamilton slamming into the wall between turns three and four. Hamilton came away with a bruised right leg.

FASTEST ROOKIE: The American Dairy Association of Indiana awarded $5,000 to Johnny Benson Jr. as the fastest rookie qualifier for Saturday's race. Last year's NASCAR Busch Grand National champion was the 14th fastest qualifier overall on Thursday.

JACKIE: Six medals in Olympic competition with cheers.

Joyner-Kersee finished behind Chioma Ajunwa of Nigeria, who took the gold with a leap of 23-4 1/2, and Fiona May of Italy, who won silver at 23-0 1/2.

After four Olympics, Joyner-Kersee's medal total is remarkable: three golds, one silver and two bronzes. Only two American women have won more Olympic medals — swimmer Shirley Babashoff captured eight and gymnast Shannon Miller brought her total to seven with two medals in Atlanta.

"This one really tested me as far as determination and my will to win," she said. "I don't like pain, and I was in a lot of pain."

Joyner-Kersee's appearance in the long jump had been threatened by the sore hamstring, which knocked her out of the heptathlon last week. But the leg felt better after a few days and she managed to qualify for the long jump finals with only one leap Thursday morning.

Joyner-Kersee will be remembered as more than an athlete. She was a virtuoso, a Pavarotti in a sand pit. Her performances — marked by graceful elegance rather than brute strength — once caused her husband, coach and soulmate, Bob Kersee, to remark, "I feel like I should be wearing a tux when I watch them."

It was an appropriate analogy for someone who took her first name from another woman who was the epitome of style, Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis. Joyner-Kersee's grandmother picked out her name, explaining that "someday, this little girl is going to be the first lady of something."

Grandma, it turns out, was perfect on that prophecy.

Joyner-Kersee came to dominate the heptathlon, a seven-event competition that measures speed, strength and stamina. She not only holds the heptathlon world record of 7,291 points, she has the six highest scores of all time.

In recent years, though, age and aches began to take their toll on Super Woman.

At last year's world championships, Joyner-Kersee finished a dismal sixth in the long jump and dropped out of the heptathlon. The hamstring was bothering her at the U.S. trials in June, when she was beaten in the heptathlon by Kelly Blair — her first loss to an American in 13 years.

She would have retired after the world championships except that these Olympics were in her home country.

Joyner-Kersee will be remembered as the greatest female athlete of her generation. Maybe it would be more appropriate to call her one of the greatest athletes, period.

Centennial Games: Day 15

Capsules

By The Associated Press

ARCHERY

Justin Huish, who won an individual gold medal Thursday, helped the United States beat South Korea 251-249 and win its first team gold. On his last three arrows, Huish erased a three-point deficit.

South Korea won its third consecutive women's team gold, beating Germany. The U.S. team was eliminated in the first round by Kazakstan.

BASEBALL

The U.S. team won its first Olympic medal, beating Nicaragua 10-3 for the bronze. Travis Lee and Matt LeCroy homered in the first inning and Nicaragua didn't get any hits off U.S. starter Seth Greisinger after the first. Troy Glaus and Jason Williams also homered for the Americans.

BASKETBALL (MEN)

Toni Kukoc had 26 points, 10 rebounds and eight assists, leading Croatia to a 99-85 victory over China and seventh place. Argentina beat Puerto Rico 87-77 for ninth place, and Angola defeated South Korea 99-61 for 11th.

BASKETBALL (WOMEN)

The U.S. women (7-0) beat Australia 93-71 and reached the gold-medal game. The Americans, 59-0 including a pre-Olympic tour, will play Brazil for the title Sunday night. Lisa Leslie scored 22 points and grabbed 13 rebounds, Katrina McClain had 18 points and 15 rebounds and Sheryl Swoopes added 16 points.

Brazil (7-0) reached the title game with an 81-60 victory over Ukraine. Maria Paul Silva scored 24 points and Hortencia Marcari Oliva 20 for Brazil.

CANOE-KAYAK

The Americans sent five boats into the semifinals and all five failed to qualify for the finals. Not even John Mooney and Stein Jorgensen, world champions in the 200-meter kayak, could make the 500-meter final, finishing ninth overall. Italy sent five boats to the flatwater events and each will race in the finals.

DIVING

Germany's Jan Hempel qualified first in the 10-meter platform diving semis and broke up China's stranglehold on the leaderboard. David Pichler and Patrick Jeffrey were seventh and eighth, leaving the United States in danger of its first gold-medal shutout in the sport since 1912.

FIELD HOCKEY (MEN)

The Netherlands won the gold medal, beating Spain 3-1. A score on a penalty corner with 1:19 remaining gave Australia a 3-2 victory over Germany and the bronze.

RHYTHMIC GYMNASTICS

Spain won the gold medal in group competition with a total of 38.933 points. World champion Bulgaria took the silver and Russia the bronze.

SOCCER

Brazil restored some of its battered pride with a 5-0 victory over Portugal to win the bronze medal. Bebeto scored three goals.

SYNCHRONIZED SWIMMING

The United States extended its dominance, winning the gold medal with a near-flawless performance in the sport's first team competition at the games. The U.S. finished with a score of 99.720 points, including nine perfect 10s. Canada took the silver and Japan the bronze.

TEAM HANDBALL

Sweden reached the gold-medal match, beating Spain 25-20. Sweden will play for the title Sunday against either world champion France or Croatia.

Dave DeGraaf scored after a penalty as time expired in the second overtime, giving the U.S. men's team a 27-26 victory over Algeria for ninth place.

TENNIS

American Lindsay Davenport won the women's gold, beating Spain's Arantxa Sanchez Vicario 7-6 (8-6), 6-2. "It's definitely the most proud I've been in my life," Davenport said. "No matter what happens to me, I'll always be a gold medalist."

Jana Novotna of the Czech Republic won the bronze with a 7-6 (8-6), 6-4 triumph over American Mary Joe Fernandez.

Todd Woodbridge and Mark Woodforde of Australia won the gold medal in men's doubles, defeating Neil Broad and Tim Henman of Britain 6-4, 6-4, 6-2.

TRACK AND FIELD

Jackie-Joyner Kersee ended her Olympic career with a bronze medal in the long jump, leaping from sixth place on her final attempt of 22 feet, 11 3/4 inches. The winner was Chioma Ajunwa of Nigeria with a leap of 23-4 1/2.

With Carl Lewis watching, the U.S. 400-meter relay team blazed through the semifinals. Jon Drummond, Tim Harden, Tim Montgomery and Dennis Mitchell won their heat in 37.96 seconds, the fastest time in the world this year.

The U.S. 1,600-meter relay team, without injured Michael Johnson, advanced into the final. LaMont Smith, Jason Rouser, Derek Mills and Anthuan Maybank won their semifinal heat in 2:57.87.

Both U.S. women's relay teams also reached the finals. The 400-meter team, anchored by Gwen Torrence, had the opening round's fastest time of 42.49. The 1,600-meter squad had the best time of 3:22.71 in the first round.

Astrid Kumbernuss of Germany won the women's shot put with a toss of 67-5 1/2. Joseph Keter of Kenya took the 3,000 steeplechase in 8:07.12. Jean Galfione of France won the pole vault at 19-5. Robert Korzeniowski of Poland took the 50-kilometer walk in 3:43:30.

VOLLEYBALL

The Netherlands beat Russia 15-6, 15-6, 15-10 to advance to the men's gold-medal match. The Dutch will play either Italy or Yugoslavia on Sunday.

WRESTLING (FREESTYLE)

Tom Brands beat Jang Jae-sung of South Korea 7-0 at 136 1/2 pounds, becoming the third U.S. wrestler to win gold in these games.

"This is it. This is the pinnacle," Brands said.

Bruce Baumgartner settled for the bronze at 286 pounds — his record fourth Olympic wrestling medal. Baumgartner avenged his second-round loss to Andrei Shumilin by beating the Russian. The win came on a judges' decision assured only by Baumgartner's one-point takedown with 16 seconds remaining in the eight-minute match.

Seven-time world champion Valentin Jordanov beat Azerbaijan's Namik Abdullaev 4-3 in overtime at 114 1/2 pounds for the gold. World champion Rasul Khaden of Iran thwarted Russia's Makharbek Khadartsev chance for a third consecutive gold medal at 198 pounds.

U.S. women overpower Australia

■ Team faces Brazil Sunday for basketball gold.

ATLANTA (AP) — They've been on the road for nearly a year, taking on all teams, beating every one. One more win, just one more, and they'll finally have something to celebrate.

With a 93-71 victory over Australia on Friday night, the 12 women who gave up all those months to play for the U.S. team earned their shot at the gold medal. They'll play Brazil on Sunday night.

Down by eight points early, their biggest deficit of the Atlanta Games, the Americans (7-0) took control with a 27-4 run that showcased them at their running, scoring and rebounding best. It showed why this team is 59-0 since late October, when its pre-Olympic tour began.

"It's like I see the egg timer and there's just a little bit of sand left in it," U.S. coach Tara VanDerveer said. "We've got one more practice, one more game."

Lisa Leslie scored 22 points and grabbed 13 rebounds, Katrina McClain had 18 points and 15 rebounds, Sheryl Swoopes added 16 points and reserve guard Dawn Staley sparked the decisive run.

The Americans finished with a 48-25 rebounding advantage in completing a U.S. semifinal sweep of the Australians. The Dream Team won 101-73 Thursday and will play for the men's gold medal Saturday.

The victory by the women, who also beat Australia in pool play, came in a round that had dashed U.S. gold medal hopes in previous international competitions. American teams lost in the semifinals of the 1994 world championships, the 1992 Olympics and 1991 Pan-American Games, settling for bronze each time.

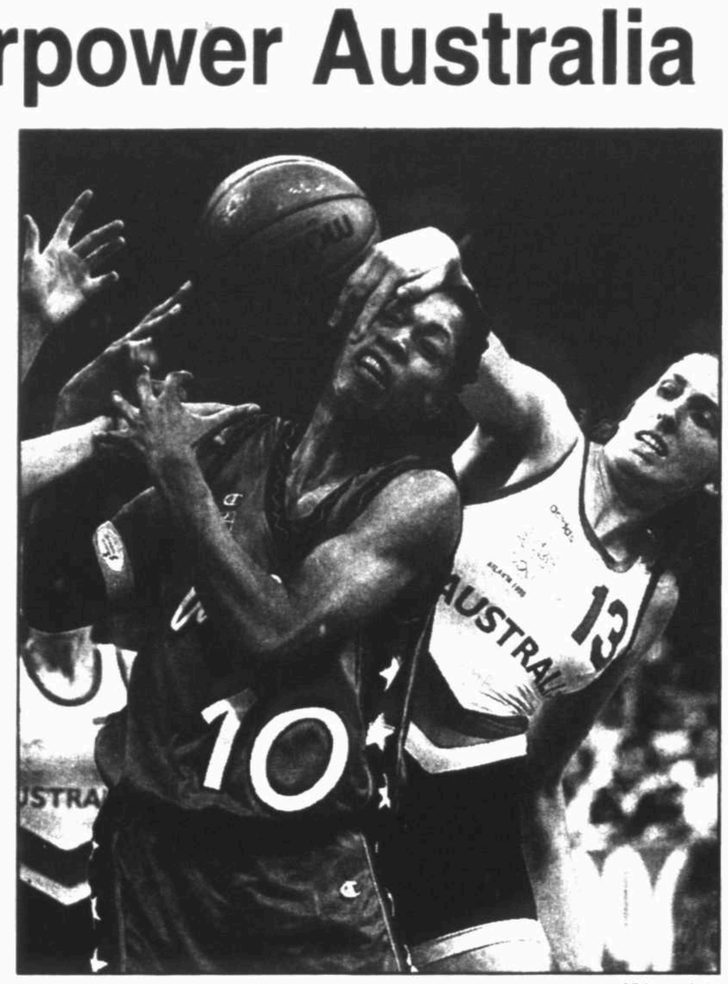

But after all these months playing and traveling together, this team was much better prepared than its predecessors — and it has shown in Atlanta. The Americans haven't had a game closer than 15 points and have won by an average of 29.

"It's kind of like we're relieved that we've made it this far and won," Leslie said. "You can't win the gold medal unless you're in the gold-medal round, and that was our focus against Australia. We want to leave as gold medalists."

To win the gold, the United States must avenge a loss to Brazil in the semifinals of the last world championships. Eight members of this Olympic team were on that U.S. squad.

"I haven't forgotten that game," Staley said. "Anytime you're left with a sour taste in your mouth, you want some kind of revenge. This is our chance to get it."

Brazil (7-0) reached the title game with an 81-60 victory over Ukraine, which will play Australia (4-3) Sunday for the bronze medal.

Dream Team not happy with NBC coverage

ATLANTA (AP) — On the eve of the gold medal men's basketball game, the Dream Team considered two adversaries: Yugoslavia and NBC.

NBC's skimpy coverage of the U.S. men's Olympic basketball games hasn't gone unnoticed among the players, who are hearing complaints from friends and family.

NBC has televised 100 minutes of men's basketball, network spokesman Ed Markey says, but more than one-third of that time was devoted to the first game against Argentina.

Since then, it's been seven minutes here, eight minutes there.

And basketball fans are complaining.

"My wife talked to me about it, as did some of my friends, and they're disappointed because they want to see more of the games," David Robinson said. "I think it's been a mistake. Part of the fun is seeing these great players on the court at the same time."

The United States plays Yugoslavia in the gold medal game Saturday night at 10 p.m., and NBC plans to show the entire game.

"The plan, however, is not cast in stone," Markey said.

If the full 40 minutes of action makes the cut, it will be a bonanza for anyone who has watched NBC's early-evening teasers and tuned in at 10 p.m. to see only pieces of the game.

Charles Barkley called NBC "hypocrites."

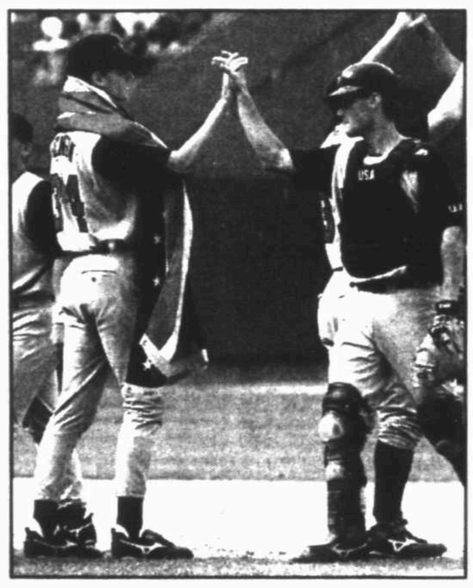

"They tell people we're going to be on, and that attracts viewers," he said. "Then they show very little of the game. That's disappointing. They're doing it to attract viewers into watching other sports.

"Don't hype the Dream Team, then criticize them and not show them just to attract ratings."

At the 2000 Olympics in Sydney, NBC plans to supplement its network coverage with additional programming on its two cable channels. So this may be the last time a Dream Team won't be seen.

According to coach Lenny Wilkens, NBC is a victim of its own low expectations. The network thought every game would be a 60-point blowout, and it hasn't adapted its coverage to reflect the improvement that the rest of the world has made.

"We didn't have these kind of challenges in 1992, and that's where TV coverage hasn't caught up," Wilkens said after practice Friday.

Baseball team consoles itself with bronze

ATLANTA (AP) — Not quite the best, it was still better than the outcome in Barcelona.

The U.S. baseball team wrapped itself in the American flag and consoled itself with a medal Friday, one day after losing out on its ultimate goal. A 10-3 victory over Nicaragua clinched the bronze — the first official medal for the United States in baseball — and provided a bittersweet moment.

"It lets us know we at least have something," center fielder Jacque Jones said. "We're happy with the bronze medal, but ..."

Jones didn't have to complete the sentence. The muted on-field celebration that followed the win perfectly summed up the moment.

Most of the 41,002 fans were still in the stands, standing and chanting "USA! USA!" when shortstop Augie Ojeda threw out Anibal Vega at first to end the game.

Ojeda clenched his fist and waved it briefly in celebration. Players walked out of the dugout with flags draped around their shoulders, then gathered for handshakes as the crowd cheered.

The cheers soon subsided and the celebration never got much more animated. There was no jumping, no whooping, no pileup. The bronze was more of a consolation than a reason to get carried away.

"It's something that's sweet for us after last night and the disappointment we had," second baseman Warren Morris said. "It's not as sweet as the gold, but right now it feels really great coming out of here with something."

That's better than the 1992 team did in Barcelona, where baseball was an official Olympic sport for the first time. That team lost the consolation game and finished fourth, heading home empty-handed.

An 11-2 loss to Japan in the semifinals Thursday night ended the Americans' hopes for a gold and made them regroup. They did not want to repeat Barcelona.

"We came out today at batting practice and didn't want to feel sorry for ourselves," Morris said. "We decided we'd worked too hard to come out of here with nothing."

Less than 24 hours after playing their worst game of the tournament, the United States (7-2) played up to form. The Americans hit four more homers — pushing their tournament total to 32 — and got a combined three-hitter from Seth Greisinger and Braden Looper.

Cuba beats upstart Japan 13-9, takes second baseball gold medal

ATLANTA (AP) — Omar Linares hit three homers, one to each field, as Cuba left no question it deserved what it got Friday night: another gold medal.

Linares hit the first, the biggest and the last of Cuba's eight homers for a 13-9 victory over Japan that earned a second consecutive Olympic championship and the undisputed title of world's best amateur baseball team.

Cuba (9-0) has not lost an important game since 1987 — a streak it puts at 143 games — and has won the two official Olympic tournaments in two different ways.

The victory in Barcelona was dominating; this one was dramatic.

With a pitching staff weakened by defections, the Cubans had to rely on their powerful offense to pull them through. It did every time, racking up an Olympic record 38 homers in nine games.

The Cubans had a couple of close calls in Atlanta, none more harrowing than a round-robin game against Japan. The Cubans got up 6-1 after two innings, then had to rally from behind in the 10th for an 8-7 win.

The gold medal game approximated the same script. Linares hit an upper-deck homer and Orestes Kindelan hit his tournament-record ninth as the Cubans got up 6-0 after two innings.

Japan pulled even with five runs in the fifth inning, highlighted by first baseman Nobuhiko Matsunaka's grand slam that was the pulsating moment of the night.

Gold goes to near perfect U.S. team

ATLANTA (AP) — The 10 members of the U.S. synchronized swim team plan to retire after the Olympics. They threw a pretty good farewell party Friday night.

The Americans fashioned a near-perfect performance depicting the parts of an orchestra to win the first team gold medal in synchro and maintain American dominance of the sport.

The United States finished with a score of 99.720 points for the two-day competition and Friday night received nine perfect 10s from the judges for their stirring five-minute routine. Only the judge from Switzerland did not give the American team a perfect score.

The scores from the final routine counted for 65 percent of the total.

Canada took the silver with a score of 98.367 and Japan the bronze with 97.753. Those three countries have won every medal awarded in synchronized swimming in the Olympics. Canada now has two golds and five silvers, while all seven of Japan's medals are bronze.

Asked if the high scores the Americans received were a reflection of the home pool advantage, Nathalie Schneyder of the U.S. team replied: "It was definitely a gold medal performance."

The Americans have dominated synchro since it became a part of the Olympic program in 1984. The United States was the last of the eight teams to perform.

Centennial Games: Day 15

Lewis still in running for relay

■ Sprinter's quandary may be final mystery of Games.

AP Laserphoto

Carl Lewis jokes with Mike Marsh Friday as the 4x100 relay team practices at Cheney Stadium.

ATLANTA (AP) — See Carl run.

We probably will.

The U.S. men's 400-meter relay team remained without Carl Lewis on Friday night, but the door was still open for him to close his Olympic career Saturday with a record 10th gold medal.

The roster for the finals, scheduled for 7:40 p.m., doesn't have to be submitted until an hour before the race. That could provide a perfect ending for Lewis, who has thrived in the spotlight his entire career.

"It's very, very possible" Lewis will run, said Tim Montgomery, who ran the second leg for the United States in the semifinals. "He was working out with us tonight."

Jeff Williams, the odd man out on the relay squad, did not run in the heats and almost certainly won't run in the finals. He said Lewis' entry was a foregone conclusion.

"Will the sun come up tomorrow?" he said when asked what the chances were Lewis would run.

But the relay team captain, Dennis Mitchell, said Lewis was only one possible choice. "There are three scenarios and Carl is part of one of them," he said.

Mitchell said Mike Marsh, who has yet to run in the relay, would be in the finals.

Leroy Burrell was scheduled to run the finals, but his status was unclear. Burrell, Lewis' close friend and longtime training partner, created the original opening for Lewis by withdrawing Thursday with a sore right Achilles tendon. But then men's track coach Erv Hunt and others said Friday he was feeling better and might run.

"The only thing that's changed today is we've actually told Carl personally that if Burrell could not go tomorrow, or one of the others for that matter, he's certainly one of the people we would strongly consider," Hunt said.

If Burrell, Jon Drummond, Marsh and Mitchell are all healthy, "those four will run," Hunt said.

Burrell was able to run some Friday, but Hunt decided to keep him out of the semifinals. Hunt said Lewis would work out with the team Saturday afternoon.

Hunt said he wasn't disturbed by the way the Lewis controversy had grown since his gold medal in the long jump.

"Personally I don't blame Carl for campaigning to get another medal," Hunt said. "Like I've always said, if there's a way to do it without messing something up, I will have no problem with it."

Drummond, who has been outspoken in his opposition to Lewis' addition, was mischievous about Saturday's possibilities.

"Who's going to run the anchor tomorrow? We've got a big surprise for you all. The only thing I can say is dreams come true," Drummond said.

The runners planned to meet with Hunt on Friday night to discuss the finals.

About an hour before the semifinals, Lewis was on the practice track outside Olympic Stadium, running half-speed sprints with Marsh, then faster 100-meter sprints by himself. He did no baton work, but shook each team member's hand before they left for Olympic Stadium.

Lewis won the long jump Monday and immediately began campaigning to get on the relay team. That would give him a chance to break the record of nine Olympic gold medals he shares with Finnish distance runner Paavo Nurmi, Soviet gymnast Larysa Latynina and American swimmer Mark Spitz.

Lewis has anchored six 400-meter relay teams to world records. Along with Marsh, Burrell and Mitchell, he set the world record of 37.40 seconds at the 1992 Barcelona Olympics. That mark was tied by Drummond, Andre Cason, Mitchell and Burrell at the 1993 world championships.

If Lewis joins the team, it is only logical that he run anchor, said Mitchell, who has handed the baton to anchorman Lewis on many relay teams.

"Carl hasn't worked one stick with us," Mitchell said. "It would be the most comfortable for the team for me to step down (to third) and work with Carl on the anchor leg and leave the team the way it's always been for the last couple of years.

"I'm not saying I'm happy about it. I've worked very hard for this anchor leg and I hate to see it go away on a whim like that. But I am team captain, and that requires an awful lot of responsibility, and my first responsibility is toward this team, not to myself."

Mitchell wasn't the only relay member angry at Lewis, who cramped up and finished last in the 100 at the U.S. trials, then refused an invitation to work with the relay team in July at a training camp in North Carolina.

"King Carl says he wants to run and he knew the rules beforehand," Tim Harden said. "It's not like he didn't know he had to come to camp and train. Everybody knew that. All the other guys showed up. You shouldn't have to break the rules for anybody."

Montgomery said Lewis' time had past.

"Carl Lewis is done," he said. "We're the future."

Injury forces Johnson out of 1,600 relay

ATLANTA (AP) — Michael Johnson is human after all.

The first man to win the Olympic 200 and 400 said Friday that he won't run in the 1,600-meter relay because of a hamstring injury.

Johnson said he felt tightness in the lower right hamstring at the end of Thursday's 200-meter finals, when he set a stunning world record of 19.32 seconds. He felt a twinge five meters from the tape.

"It's not a pull, there's no damage, just a little swelling," Johnson said.

The 200 final was Johnson's eighth race in seven days — all run in hot, steamy weather on the extremely hard Olympic Stadium track. Before taking a victory lap, he secured an ice bag to the back of his leg.

Even without Johnson, the U.S. 1,600-meter relay team has a strong chance to win the gold.

On Friday morning, Anthuan Maybank, Derek Mills, LaMont Smith and Jason Rouser won their heat in 3:00.56 — the fastest time of the first round and one of the world's fastest times this year.

"There are a lot of guys capable of running, and I don't want to hurt the chances for a gold medal," Johnson said. "There are a lot of others who are capable."

In the semifinals Friday night, Smith, Jason Rouser, Mills and Maybank went even faster, finishing in 2:57.87.

Johnson had planned to sit out the first rounds before anchoring the finals Saturday.

Butch Reynolds, who holds the 400-meter world record at 43.29, also is on the relay team, but he was felled during a 400 qualifying race with hamstring cramps. He says he will run in the finals.

Johnson has managed to live up to tremendous expectations during these games, setting an Olympic record of 44.49 while winning the 400, then obliterating his own 200 world record by the largest margin ever in that event.

Davenport beats Vicario for gold

STONE MOUNTAIN, Ga. (AP) — Jubilant in victory, Lindsay Davenport hurried across the court to celebrate with her family in section 114, where she was greeted with cheers and tears and hugs and even praise.

"They just said, 'Oh, we're so proud of you, and you're awesome' or whatever," Davenport said with a giggle. "They very rarely compliment me."

But an Olympic gold medalist deserves a pat on the back, and Davenport became one Friday. With help from a friendly net cord on the final point of the opening set, the second-generation Olympian beat Spaniard Arantxa Sanchez Vicario 7-6 (8-6), 6-2.

"This means everything to me," Davenport said. "No matter what happens in my life, I'll always be a gold medalist."

In the match for the bronze, Jana Novotna erased two set points in the first set and beat Mary Joe Fernandez 7-6 (8-6), 6-4.

Mark Woodforde and Todd Woodbridge of Australia won the gold in men's doubles, defeating England's Tim Henman and Neil Broad 6-4, 6-4, 6-2.

Top seed Andre Agassi, another second-generation Olympian, faces unseeded Spaniard Sergi Bruguera in a best-of-5 final Saturday. Defending champions Fernandez and Gigi Fernandez play Novotna and Helena Sukova of the Czech Republic in the final of women's doubles.

Davenport's victory, easily the biggest of her career, delighted a partisan crowd of 11,000 that included her father.

Bronze, green sum up U.S. boxers' experience

ATLANTA (AP) — As Olympic boxers approach the final fights for gold and silver medals, the greenness of Team U.S.A. is showing.

Beaten American semifinalists Terrance Cauthen, Rhoshii Wells and Nate Jones had a combined record of 8-6 in international competition before the Atlanta games.

Cauthen, of Philadelphia, settled for a bronze medal at 132 pounds after he was beaten 15-12 Thursday night by veteran Tontcho Tontchev. The Bulgarian was a 1992 Olympics quarterfinalist and a silver medalist at this year's European championships.

Wells, of Riverdale, Ga., fell 17-8 in a 165-pound semifinal to Ariel Hernandez of Cuba, a 1992 Olympic, 1993 world and 1995 Pan American Games champion.

Jones, of Chicago, couldn't handle the size and power of Canada's David Defiagbon and lost 16-10 at 201 pounds. Defiagbon's international experience since 1992 is unchronicled, but he sure has grown. At Barcelona, Defiagbon boxed for Nigeria and lost to 156-pound American Raul Marquez in a first-round bout.

Cauthen and Wells each won three bouts and Jones won two, and the trio has nothing to apologize for. It would not be unfair, however, to note that they drew favorably in the early rounds.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

SATURDAY, AUGUST 3, 1996

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A change of employment is a distinct possibility. Relocating to another state could sound quite attractive if your income will go much farther. Friends at a distance open the door to adventure and profit! Discuss your long-term needs with professionals before making any new investments. The financial outlook brightens early in '97. You are able to make good on a pledge. Your romantic partner persuades you to give more thought to expanding your family.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: singer Tony Bennett, fashion designer Anne Klein, lifestyle adviser Martha Stewart, movie star Dolores Del Rio.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An emotional scene leaves you drained. Excessive spending will mire you in debt. When it comes to household items, learn to "make do or do without."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Get your chores out of the way during the morning. Temptations surround you; give gossips a wide berth. A member of the opposite sex may seek you out.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Spending quiet time with a lover or good friend turns your thoughts towards the unknown. Family discussions lead to a revelation concerning your childhood.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A romance or purchase wins widespread applause. Although relatives offer financial support, there could be strings attached. Get everything in writing.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A good weekend to make sweeping improvements at home. If family members offer to clean or paint, welcome their assistance. Backyard parties are a fun way to entertain neighbors and friends.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A personal search for information could one day lead to your writing a book. Send out clever, handmade invitations to a birthday or anniversary party.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Upcoming events could be costly. Set money aside. A casual comment leads to an amazing insight. Your love is all the encouragement a family member needs to try harder.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be more attentive to your loved ones. Your intuition is more powerful than you realize. A family plan will work out great! Long-awaited news arrives.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Family members can help you develop a fabulous vacation plan. The social scene looks heavenly, especially if you are a guest. Allow for traffic delays this evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An excellent day to ask for a favor. Protect secrets by choosing your confidants from within the family circle. Comparison shopping could save you a bundle. Attending a concert proves both relaxing and inspiring.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your gentle wit and elegant attire command attention. Getting others to agree on what to do tonight could be difficult. Compromise. A lost object resurfaces under odd circumstances. Be honest if you have romantic doubts.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Put your best ideas on display. Even if someone makes an attractive offer right away, wait for additional bids. Love enters your life, thanks to a lucky coincidence. Take a chance on lasting happiness!

Newt Gingrich's science-fiction book may be sold for future toilet paper

WASHINGTON — Apparently not enough Americans think Newt Gingrich's science fiction novel belongs in their private libraries. Which could make it a popular attraction for a smaller room of the house.

Despite, or maybe because of, its steamy sex scenes, some 97,000 unsold copies of "1945" are piling up in a warehouse in Bristol, Pa., The Washington Post reported Friday.

"I'm trying to figure out what to do with them," said publisher Jim Baen. "No reasonable offer refused."

Baen said if copies are not bought by someone — at a steep discount — the hardcover books may be converted to pulp and used for purposes quite apart from publishing.

Toilet paper is a distinct possibility, Baen said.

For every 100 copies that were distributed, Baen said, 81 were returned unsold.

MARIETTA, Ga. — One is filled with gamblers. The other has strippers. One's in New Jersey. The other's in Georgia. One is a huge casino and hotel. The other's a 30,000-square-foot building.

Nevertheless, Donald Trump doesn't want anyone to think the Club Taj Mahal is in any way associated with his Trump Taj Majal, and he's suing the strip joint over use of the name.

Trump, who sued club owner Mukesh Shretta last month, fears the Club Taj Mahal name will "dilute and sully" his casino-hotel's identity, said his attorney, W. Mack Webner of Washington.

Shretta's lawyer, O. Jackson Cook, said Trump's suit is "filled with irony. Who slandered who?"

"Our establishment is for the enjoyment of the young female form. Mr. Trump's is engaged in gambling," Cook said. "I'm not sure which is the bigger vice, but I know there is a distinct difference."

No word from the Shah Jahan, the Indian emperor who built the original Taj Mahal as a mausoleum for his wife in the 17th century.

MONROE, La. — Anne Rice can write about witches and vampires all she wants. But throwing a public party in honor of her latest book was too much for some neighbors.

"We won't let witchcraft and Satan into our community," said Everett Aaron, who was among the 20 or so fundamentalist church members who demonstrated outside the party at Books-A-Million.

"Servant of the Bones," the latest from the author of "Interview with the Vampire," tells about a Hebrew spirit named Azriel and his centuries-long existence.

"The staff is all dressed up in black. That's just one sign of the darkness they are promoting. We came out to show these folks the light," Aaron said.

Angie Summers, who planned Wednesday's party — which Rice didn't attend — said it "was an opportunity to get the community involved in something different. There was no alcohol or anything bad ... just cake, costumes and door prizes."

———

LOS ANGELES — Keanu Reeves didn't know "Chain Reaction" was going to be an action film when he signed on to star in it, but he's not complaining.

Reeves, who backed out of a sequel to the hit "Speed," said he likes action films if the scripts are right.

Reeves says action movies without drama are just too crass.

"My whole thing is, am I here for the action sequence or is the action sequence here for me?" Reeves said in a recent interview.

"I believe that all action should be born out of drama. Of course, I like the spectacle as well, but I'm finding some of the spectacle being created devoid of any kind of realism. It's just so crass," he said.

In "Chain Reaction," which opened Friday, Reeves plays a machinist who is framed and on the run after an explosion destroys a research lab where scientists have learned to extract hydrogen from water.

———

NEW YORK — Leona Helmsley's pilot could be following his boss to the big house.

John Legg of Rehoboth Beach, Del., was indicted on charges he stole nearly $900,000 from the hotel queen by submitting phony invoices from a nonexistent company.

Legg, 42, Helmsley's pilot at Georgetown Aircraft Services — which she owns — allegedly submitted the fake invoices for plane parts between 1991 and 1995.

The pilot surrendered to authorities Thursday. If convicted, he faces up to 15 years in prison on the felony grand larceny charge and a maximum four years for falsifying business records.

Helmsley served 1 1/2 years in prison on tax evasion charges and was released in 1993.

McNair back home for exhibition

By Jhenna Halvatgis
Associated Press Writer

JACKSON, Miss. — Many of the fans in Mississippi's Veterans Memorial Stadium Saturday will be watching only one player when the Houston Oilers face the New York Jets in their exhibition opener.

Oilers quarterback Steve McNair, the third overall pick in the 1995 NFL draft, will be returning to his home state for the first time as a professional and is hoping to pick up where he left off.

The last time McNair played in Mississippi was Nov. 19, 1994, in his last regular season game at Alcorn State University.

In the same stadium, he threw for 533 yards and five touchdowns in a 52-34 victory over arch-rival Jackson State.

"It's been two years since I played in Memorial Stadium, so I'm looking forward to it," McNair said. "It's going to be good to be back home ... I'll be able to show people how well I can play on the NFL level."

McNair estimates he bought about 100 tickets for friends and family to travel the 45 miles from his hometown of Mount Olive. Oilers coach Jeff Fisher hopes the rooting section won't distract the young quarterback.

"He'll have his family and friends there," Fisher said. "It's a difficult situation for any player going back home."

It might be the last time Mississippians get a chance to see McNair at home.

The event needs to sell a lot more tickets if Jackson is to hold an exhibition again. About 15,000 of 60,000 seats remain.

A crowd of about 52,000 attended an exhibition last year between the Jets and the Philadelphia Eagles. It was the first NFL game played in Mississippi since 1970.

Those in attendance will also get to see the professional debut of rookie running back Eddie George.

The 1995 Heisman Trophy winner from Ohio State has played well in camp, and he stood out in a controlled scrimmage last week against the Dallas Cowboys. George carried 10 times for 75 yards, scoring Houston's only touchdown with a four-yard run.

He missed two days of training this week while tending to an undisclosed family matter and returned Wednesday a bit rusty. He fumbled three times in his first practice, but improved throughout the week.

Fisher said he'll alternate George and Rodney Thomas through the first half and maybe into the third quarter.

The exhibition will be Neil O'Donnell's first chance to show the Jets he's worth all the money they used to lure him away from the AFC champion Pittsburgh Steelers.

After leading the Steelers to the league title, the free-agent quarterback signed a five-year, $25 million deal to play for the league's worst team. New York was 3-13 last season.

New York also have a history with Jackson as well. Once again the Jets' travels will take them to this Southern city that favors catfish over lox.

The Jets played here during the last exhibition season and, after the most intense off season in their history, will open their 1996 preseason here Saturday night.

All those workouts have been geared toward bringing a winner to Giants Stadium. But as the "home" team against the Houston Oilers on Saturday night, the Jets hope to bit by bit unveil a high-powered offense that could transform the club.

Fans of the Jets want to know: Can Neil O'Donnell and the revamped offense produce touchdowns? And can the veteran defense halt the run?

O'Donnell has been impatient for this moment, even though he will only see action for one quarter and does not have the team's No. 1 draft pick, Keyshawn Johnson, to play catch with.

But O'Donnell will direct a corps of receivers who have captured the imagination of teammates with their sure hands and circus catches. The theatrics, though, have come only in practice sessions.

Even with the players he has, from Jeff Graham to Webster Slaughter catching, to Adrian Murrell running, it will be difficult to assess the offense because the bookend tackles are injured and unavailable. It was the acquisition of Jumbo Elliott and David Williams that led to O'Donnell signing and helped bring the other high-powered free agents. Without these two starting tackles, pass-protection and run-blocking could suffer.

The defense, which some observers are expecting big things from this season because it produced such fine yardage statistics last season in the final seven games, will now take its reputation onto the field.

Can the defense stop the run? It was 25th in the league last season. The Jets' run-defense question is what keeps Jim Vechiarella, the defensive coordinator, from smiling all the time.

Say this for the Jets, who have played preseason games from Memphis to Montreal to Mississippi: They get around. Then again, they will go almost anywhere.

NOVACEK: Injury list mounts for Cowboys ming and other non-contact exercise.

"Ideally, I'd like to say he's going to improve over the next four weeks and be able to participate, but those type of things, with any injury, not just backs, have yet to be seen," Maurer said.

Novacek, who had his second-highest single-season total for receptions (62) and a career-best 705 receiving yards with five touchdowns last year, has had chronic lower-back problems throughout his 11-year career, but the injury flared up during the off-season.

As a result, the team has been bringing along second-year tight end Eric Bjornson with hope of limiting Novacek to about 30 plays a game this season. But Switzer said even that might be in question.

"We wanted him to play about 30 snaps and Bjornson the others, but I'm worried about us even getting that many out of Jay," Switzer said. "It's a huge question mark. It's all speculation as to what he can play right now."

Switzer said having to limit Novacek's plays or losing him altogether would be devastating.

"He's such a big, clutch player," Switzer said. "If people play double coverage on our wideouts, he is the instrumental one in the third-down passing game.

"On third-and-short, Novacek is the conversion guy a large percentage of the time."

Dallas scouting director Larry Lacewell said Bjornson, who has gained Aikman's confidence and is a big target at 6-4 and 236 pounds, will need to step up.

"If this had happened two years ago, we wouldn't have had anybody here to replace Jay," Lacewell said. "We rolled the dice for three or four years and didn't have anybody who even resembled that kind of tight end.

"We made a conscious effort two years ago to resolve that when we drafted Bjornson. I think it's his time to step up. He's got outstanding speed and is a former quarterback.

"He's almost in the same mold as Jay Novacek, but the biggest problem is that he's not Jay Novacek and isn't as good as Jay. But if he has to, I think he can do a good job," Lacewell said.

Key Cowboys currently out of training camp due to injury, rehab or personal reasons include: center Ray Donaldson (ankle); offensive tackle Erik Williams (toe); receiver Michael Irvin (NFL suspension); defensive ends Charles Haley (back), Tony Tolbert (both knees) and Shante Carver (personal); cornerback Kevin Smith (Achilles); linebacker Fred Strickland (calf); and safety Brock Marion (groin).

Fourteen other Cowboys are also on the injured list, although most of those are out on a day-to-day basis.

Maurer said he expected Tolbert, Haley, Donaldson, Williams and Kevin Smith to begin limited contact in practice next Wednesday. The Cowboys face Kansas City in Monterrey, Mexico, in a preseason game Monday night.

Saints rally for victory over Lions

Associated Press

PONTIAC, Mich. — New Orleans scored two touchdowns in the final 1:54 and the Saints hung on for a 23-22 preseason victory over Detroit as the Lions' attempt at a 2-point PAT failed on the last play of the game Friday night.

Tom Hodson, one of four Saints quarterbacks who saw action, engineered the New Orleans rally.

Scott Mitchell, who played only through the first possession of the second quarter, completed just 4 of 11 passes for 93 yards. But one was a 15-yard scoring strike to Johnnie Morton for a touchdown and a 10-0 lead on Detroit's second possession.

Giants 24, Jaguars 17

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Once Tommy Maddux finally got a grip on the snap, the New York Giants were able to put together a touchdown drive.

Keith Elias scored on a 3-yard run with 27 seconds left, leading the Giants to a 24-17 victory over the Jacksonville Jaguars in the exhibition opener for both teams Friday night.

Redskins 17, Bills 7

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Heath Shuler certainly made believers out of the Buffalo Bills. Now, he needs to prove to his own team that he should be the starting quarterback.

Shuler, in a three-year battle for the starting job with Gus Frerotte, completed 12 of 15 passes for 127 yards in an impressive first half as Washington beat Buffalo.

PLEA: Hernandez to assist federal agents short his trial in mid-July by pleading no contest to felony cocaine possession.

Hernandez claims his desires were fueled by alleged threats Irvin made against his girlfriend, Rachelle Smith, a friend of two topless dancers found with Irvin in a motel room during a March 4 drug bust. She told the judge in Irvin's trial that the receiver had provided drugs for several sex parties. Ms. Smith also testified that Irvin threatened to harm her and Hernandez if she cooperated with prosecutors.
