

Montford Toughens Policies

A stern new policy on prosecuting aggravated robberies and the filing of charges in two previously unsolved murder cases were announced today by Criminal District Attorney John T. Montford.

The chief law enforcement officer of Lubbock County announced that there will be no plea bargaining or negotiating lesser charges in return for guilty pleas in aggravated robbery cases.

Montford said his office will ask "upwards of 30 years" for first offenders and the maximum sentence, 99 years or life, against robbers with previous felony convictions.

Noting that there have been about two dozen aggravated robberies since the first of the year, he announced the creation of a special robberies prosecuting unit headed by Assistant Criminal District Attorney Mark McBride.

"I want to make sure there won't be any questions about how we stand," Montford said.

Aggravated robbery is a first-degree felony defined by the use of a deadly weapon or the infliction of bodily injury in the course of robbery.

Montford said policies are also being developed for prosecuting burglaries of homes and buildings and for aggravated rape cases.

At a morning news conference, he announced that murder charges filed last weekend may clear a two-year-old city murder and a 10-month-old county homicide and lower to nine the number of unsolved murders facing law enforcement officers here.

Gary Lynn Vester of 4801 Quirt Ave. remained in Lubbock County Jail today after being denied bond on the charge of capital murder in connection with the April 1, 1978, shooting death of Robert Rios Rivera.

Vester also was charged with the aggravated rape of Rivera's 22-year-old female companion in that same incident. Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy set a $100,000 bond on the rape charge.

Vester was arrested Thursday by sheriff's deputies and booked into the county jail on suspicion of public intoxication.

Early Saturday, however, deputies and investigators from Criminal District Attorney John Montford's office were able to gather enough evidence against Vester in connection with last year's murder to warrant the filing of charges.

The rape victim told deputies she and 29-year-old Rivera were "parking" just east of the city in a field off 19th Street when two black men overpowered the couple about midnight.

Rivera was shot twice in the mouth with a .38-caliber revolver and the woman was raped. After debating whether also to kill the woman, the two men let her go and then drove off in Rivera's 1974 Dodge sedan.

The woman ran east from the scene across the freshly plowed field to a residence where she called for help.

Rivera's car was found later that day approximately two miles southeast of where the murder had occurred and was impounded by deputies for further processing.

Deputies said that in addition to stealing Rivera's vehicle, the suspects also

New Clashes Jolt Tehran

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Anti-government Moslem rioters set fire to a nightclub, a brewery and restaurants and attacked brothels in Tehran today as this troubled nation awaited word of the imminent return of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, hero of the anti-shah rebellion.

Heavy shooting by army units was reported from several parts of the city. There were no overall casualty reports, but one ambulance driver said he alone had carried out three dead from the area of rioting, and one hospital reported receiving three wounded.

American military officials here reported that a U.S. Air Force major was shot and wounded by an unknown assailant Sunday night. Rioters today badly beat a police general.

The official Pars news agency reported peaceful demonstrations in other cities, including Hamadan, Kerman and Qom, where 300,000 people marched in support of the speedy return of Khomeini from almost 15 years' exile.

In France, an aide to Khomeini said the Moslem leader's return to Iran from exile would be delayed at least another 24 hours, until Tuesday night, because of the continued shutdown of Tehran's airport.

Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar early today scrapped his plan to fly to France to meet with Khomeini at the Moslem clergyman's exile headquarters outside Paris. Bakhtiar rejected the "unacceptable" condition that he resign before

Girl Sniper Kills Two At School

A-J News Services
SAN DIEGO — A 16-year-old girl opened fire with a .22-caliber rifle on a crowded elementary school today, killing the principal and a custodian and wounding eight students and a policeman, police said.

When the shooting started, children ran quickly out of the school for cover, and nearby homes were quickly evacuated.

Police said the young sniper, firing from a house across the street from Cleveland Elementary School, had access to up to 600 rounds of ammunition. Police prepared to negotiate with the girl but described her as "extremely distraught."

The motive for the attacks was not immediately clear, police said.

Fred Jeffries, a spokesman for the San Diego Unified School District, said head custodian Michael Suchar and principal Burton Ragg died of gunshot wounds.

Seven of the wounded, four children and three adults, were taken to Alvarado Community Hospital, where one person was pronounced dead.

The wounded children taken there included three girls and a boy, ranging in age from 10 to 14. Their conditions were described as from fair to serious. A 30-year-old male was reported in critical condition.

Another three wounded children were taken to Grossmont Hospital where they were reported in good condition. One suffered a wound to the hand, another to the buttocks and the third to the side.

A man identified as the girl's father was reported to be on the scene attempting to talk her out as a police SWAT team prepared to rush the modest yellow frame house in the city's northeast section.

Assistant Chief of Police Robert Burdick said, "We believe a 16-year-old girl student" was responsible for the shooting. He said she was armed with .22-caliber automatic rifle.

A neighbor, Gregory Pitman, 28, said, "I was standing just on the other side of the house when all of a sudden five shots rang out ... My boy is right in that first room in that school." His son, Greg Jr., is 5.

The incident began at 8:40 a.m. and the last shots heard were fired about 8:55 a.m. However the girl, identified only as Brenda by police, remained in the house more than an hour later. She was described as a "pretty good shot" by officers on the scene.

Officers believe the girl carried the gun onto the campus and opened fire, wounding all of the injured within a matter of minutes before fleeing to the home near the campus.

Police spokesman Bill Robinson said "she is willing to talk to a degree. She is under a lot of pressure. There is no more danger at the school."

Heavily armed police set up a barricade around the house, keeping bystanders and reporters at least one block away. Police Chief William Kolender and City Manager Ray Blair were at the scene.

A police officer, one of the first to arrive at the scene, was among the injured, suffering a wound to the neck.

The school has an enrollment of 319 students.

WYOMING LEADS FIGHT States Battling 55 MPH Limit

By United Press International

Several Western states, where a motorist can drive miles and miles without seeing a town, let alone reaching a destination, are renewing a 5-year war with the federal government over the 55 mph speed limit — and the Department of Transportation may be fueling that rebellion.

Led by Wyoming, 11 states have or soon will have bills in the hopper to either boost the legal speed to 65 or severely hamstring efforts to enforce the 55 mph limit.

One bill already has passed the Wyoming Senate and awaits action by the House. In that state, Gov. Ed Herschler had refused to take a position on the issue — but then received a threatening telegram Saturday from DOT Secretary Brock Adams.

"Secretary Adams sent me a telegram that threatened, in no uncertain terms, a cutoff of highway funds if the 65 mph limit is passed," Herschler said. "We have been threatened that if we don't take steps to correct this, we'll be relieved by 5 percent of our highway funds in 1980, and by 10 percent in 1981."

"I think they're using a heavy hand. I don't like it. Does the federal government own the highways? If so, we'll ask them to come out and maintain them and enforce the laws, with federal marshals if necessary."

Other Western states watched as Wyoming argued the issue, but now have joined in.

"If five or six states have guts enough to tell the federal government to go fly a kite, I don't expect them to take away their highway funds," said Al Henry, the chairman of the Washington state Senate Transportation Committee, in introducing a similar proposal.

In Colorado, freshman Rep. Bob Stephenson introduced a bill to reset the speed limit at 65, saying he was "tired of being blackmailed by the federal government with our own money."

"First, we pay federal tax on the gasoline, then they give it back to us in the form of highway aid, but only if we agree to go by their speed limit," he said. "People are driving 65 mph, so we might as well make it legal."

Under current statutes in Oklahoma, where about $80 million in federal funds is at stake, the speed limit goes up if 29 other states increase theirs. But state Rep. Jim Townsend said he was preparing an amendment to that law to remove all references to the 29 other states, thus automatically moving up the limit.

Elsewhere, a Texas lawmaker said if his colleagues would vote the way they drive, his bill upping the limit to 70 would pass. An Oregon state senator said he would introduce a bill removing the 55 mph limit because it results in an uneconomic use of freeways designed for higher speeds.

Ice Slows Travelers In Texas

A-J News Services

A wintry storm that earlier battered northern New Mexico with up to a foot of snow invaded Texas early today, spreading freezing precipitation and causing hazardous driving conditions from the Panhandle to as far south as Austin.

Rapidly icing streets and roads resulted in a rash of traffic accidents in Lubbock and the area by mid-morning and prompted issuance of a travelers advisory for today.

"At least 50" accidents occurred in the city of Lubbock between 7 a.m. and 9 a.m. today from the slick conditions, a Lubbock Police Department spokesman said, and outside the city in Lubbock County, four accidents were reported between midnight and 9 a.m.

"It started about 6:30 a.m. when we began to get the freezing drizzle," said Texas Department of Public Safety spokesman Gary Gilbert in Lubbock this morning.

The eastward-moving low pressure system is expected to sweep past Lubbock by sundown, according to a National Weather Service spokesman, bringing clearing skies. Meanwhile, the probability of more precipitation this afternoon was placed at 40 percent.

While the storm maintains its grip on the South Plains, Lubbock was forecast to receive intermittent freezing drizzle or light snow today along with an afternoon temperature high in the low 30s.

Under clearing skies tonight, the temperature will drop to the upper teens, and Tuesday the mercury will reach only the mid 30s under partly cloudy skies, the NWS said.

A travelers advisory was also issued today for the Panhandle, where intermittent snowfall in the pre-dawn hours today changed to freezing drizzle about daybreak.

Meanwhile, sleet was being reported as far south as Austin and College Station, and in South Texas, where above-freezing temperatures prevailed, rain or drizzle was falling.

Forecasts for the state today show generally cloudy skies and precipitation in some form. Snow and sleet are expected in northern sections while light rain is predicted in South Texas.

As the storm passes, most sectors of the state are forecast to enjoy an end to precipitation and decreasing cloudiness tonight, the NWS said.

GREETING FOR GUEST — President Carter welcomes Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping at the White House today to launch the Peking official's visit to the United States.

Protests Mar Official Welcome For Teng

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter welcomed Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping to the White House today with the promise of "a common journey" as they began talks on bolstering the new relationship between the United States and China.

"On behalf of the people of my country, I welcome you, Mr. Vice Premier," Carter said under windy, overcast skies during the ceremony on the White House South Lawn, which was twice disrupted by anti-Teng demonstrators.

"Today we take another step in the historic normalization of relations. We share in the hope which springs from reconciliation and the anticipation of a common journey," the president said. Teng, reading his speech in Chinese, responded that "We share the sense of being on an historic mission. Sino-U.S. relations are at a new beginning and the world is at a new turning point."

Teng warned that "the factors making for war are visibly growing" in the world. He and Carter both expressed hope that normal relations between their two countries would help preserve world peace.

The ceremonies were disrupted twice, first by a woman protester who began screaming at Teng, "Teng Hsiao-ping, you are a murderer!" She was dragged away by police.

Moments later, a man standing among the reporters, 15 feet in front of the president and Teng, shouted "Traitor!" "Down with Teng Hsiao-ping!" and "You cannot make this a garden party!"

Three security agents arrested him and pulled him away from the press stand.

The two were identified as Keith Kozimoto, 28, of New York City and Sonia J. Ransom, 26, of Seattle. The Revolutionary Communist Party, a Maoist group which opposes Teng's outreach to the West, later claimed responsibility for the incident.

An offshoot of the group, the Committee for a Fitting Welcome, has claimed responsibility for an incident at the Chinese Liaison Office last week. The building was splashed with paint and windows were shattered.

The Secret Service said the two gained entrance to the White House grounds with official media credentials. A Secret Service spokesman said an investigation was underway to determine how they obtained the credentials.

After the welcoming ceremony, the two leaders went to Carter's White House office to begin six hours of talks in three scheduled sessions. Administration officials said they expected Carter and Teng to exchange views on a broad range of subjects, from Korea and Indochina to U.S. arms control negotiations with the Soviet Union.

Before Teng leaves Washington on Thursday, he and Carter are expected to sign an umbrella pact allowing a variety of exchanges between the two countries, including news bureaus in each other's capitals.

Carter and Teng also are expected to discuss prospects for a new trade agreement giving China most-favored-nation tariff treatment and access to credits from the Export-Import Bank.

Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, met Teng and his wife, Cho Lin, at the White House South Portico to a fanfare of Army trumpets.

Teng responded to the crowd's applause. See CHINESE LEADER Page 14

Stevenson Eyes Third Party

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III says he's uncertain how to go about it, but he is considering running for president as a third-party candidate because President Carter is "embarrassingly weak."

"Maybe you just go out and run and see what happens," the Illinois Democrat and son of the 1952 and 1956 Democratic presidential candidate said in a copyright interview in Sunday's editions of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The 48-year-old Stevenson was quoted by the newspaper as declaring that Carter, "like his immediate predecessors, is surrounded by amateurs and preoccupied with the methods instead of the ends of government."

"His cabinet is strong, but the president is embarrassingly weak and surrounded in the White House by bush-leaguers," Stevenson said.

Sakharov Discouraged

MOSCOW (AP) — Physicist Andrei D. Sakharov, who won the 1975 Nobel Peace Prize, says he is very tired and discouraged about his human rights campaign against the Kremlin and the jailing of many dissidents.

"This is the kind of life that wears you out, and you cannot take it for very long. All I get is moral satisfaction that, if not me, then who?" Sakharov said in a recent interview with The Associated Press.

"Really, one realistically cannot achieve anything," Sakharov, the "father of the Soviet H-bomb," added. "Protecting people who are in jail is practically impossible. We have very few cases where there is a happy ending. And very many cases with bad ones."

Identity Crisis

SANDPOINT, Idaho (AP) — You might wonder why one of the most contented kittens in this cat's litter never purred.

The Lighter Side Of Today's News

Ten months ago, Sapphire, a Siamese cat, gave birth to a litter of seven kittens. Two days later, one of the kittens died and Sapphire was heartbroken, says her owner, Carol Cox.

The next day, a neighbor asked Miss Cox to care for a newborn squirrel. The squirrel, eyes still unopened, had been found covered with ticks and fleas.

The squirrel, dubbed Samantha, survived under the care of Miss Cox, a 21-year-old employee of the Idaho Fish and Game Department, who turned her over to Sapphire when her job interfered with the squirrel's feeding schedule.

Miss Cox says Sapphire was overjoyed at the idea of having her litter enlarged to seven again and after thoroughly cleaning her adopted suckling, tucked her under her chin and went to sleep.

It took about 12 hours before the squirrel could be coaxed into trying Sapphire's milk. But she finally did, and, "From that day forward, the squirrel was a kitten," said Miss Cox.

Samantha, who learned to play with the other kittens, is grown now and on her own, and Sapphire apparently could care less. The 7-year-old Siamese has her hands full. Last week, she gave birth to another litter. This time, all survived.

Carter Expected To Act Quickly On Patty Hearst's Release

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter soon will receive a formal recommendation to release Patricia Hearst, and the White House telegrams and mail on the subject are running 90 percent in favor of freeing the heiress.

Administration sources said Sunday a Justice Department recommendation that Miss Hearst's 7-year bank robbery sentence be commuted has been delivered to White House counsel Robert Lipschutz.

They said it will be submitted to Carter "very shortly" and probably will be acted on within days.

Carter has commuted only four sentences since he took office, but presidents traditionally follow the recommendation of the Justice Department.

In the past few months, a group called the Committee for the Release of Patty Hearst, with 82 chapters across the nation, has been campaigning hard for her release.

More than 50 congressmen, other public figures including conservative Ronald Reagan, and dozens of newspaper editorials have supported her bid for freedom.

White House sources called the mail "overwhelmingly in favor" of a commutation, with no indication a campaign had been waged in her favor.

The recommendation from Deputy Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti, who reviews most pardon matters for the Justice Department, came after about four months of study.

It was delivered to the White House in time for the 24-year-old Miss Hearst to be released before her planned Valentine's Day wedding to Bernard Shaw, a former bodyguard. But Miss Hearst has said the wedding would take place whether she was in or out of prison.

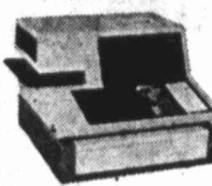

Miss Hearst, currently at the Federal Correctional Institution in Pleasanton, Calif., has served 22 months of her sentence.

She was kidnaped Feb. 5, 1974, by the radical Symbionese Liberation Army. That led in the following months to her avowed conversion to the SLA and her participation in robbing a branch of the Hibernia Bank in San Francisco.

She became a fugitive, missed a shoot-out in Los Angeles that killed several other SLA members, made the FBI's "Most Wanted" list and was finally arrested in September 1975 in San Francisco.

Under normal procedure, Miss Hearst would not be eligible for parole until July 11. Her attorney, George Martinez, petitioned for executive clemency last September, arguing her conviction was a "miscarriage of justice" because she was forced to join the SLA under duress.

She also appealed to the Supreme Court, but was unsuccessful.

Solon Set To Fight Antitrust Proposals

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Agriculture Committee chairman, Rep. Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., said today he is prepared to fight proposals curtailing the antitrust law exemptions given farm marketing cooperatives.

The proposals were sent to President Carter and Attorney General Griffin Bell last week by the National Commission for the Review of Antitrust Laws and Procedures.

Farm groups have complained to members of Congress about the commission since it was formed with staff advisers drawn heavily from the Justice Department.

Farmer-owned co-ops — promoted, monitored and regulated by the Agriculture Department — have been exempt for decades from merger and price-setting restrictions that apply to private corporations.

In the last five years, a number of consumer advocates and research groups have called for ending the exemptions, especially for dairy cooperatives, asserting that the arrangements increase retail food prices.

But Kenneth D. Naden, president of the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives, said last week that, if adopted, the recommendations would lead to "a crippling of the family farm system and an ultimate jump in food prices."

Naden said the report amounts to "lawyers trying to tell farmers how to market their products. ... It was loaded against agriculture from the start."

The commission proposed that the agriculture secretary's authority over co-ops' activities be shifted to the Justice Department or the Federal Trade Commission.

In a statement, Foley said he strongly opposes that, "but a careful review by Congress might show some merit in giving that authority to a USDA unit which is not part of the ... agency assigned to promote development of co-ops."

Foley said any legislation Carter might submit, based on the recommendations, probably would be handled by the urban-oriented Judiciary Committee. He has been trying to assure that parts involving co-ops are sent to his panel.

Nonetheless, he said, he might hold hearings "to help educate Congress, consumers and farmers about the impact of some of the suggestions ... (that) could lead to weakening cooperatives and hamstringing their efforts to compete with the corporate giants of the food industry."

For example, he said, the four largest dairy co-ops handle about one-third the milk volume handled by the four largest non-cooperative dairy firms. Overall, co-ops market less than 30 percent of U.S. farm products, he said.

Foley did not note that co-ops, sometimes a single one, dominate the marketing of certain fruits.

He said that present law already forbids co-ops from using unfair or monopolistic practices to "unduly enhance prices" and that should be enforced.

But, he said, "I believe that co-ops still serve the public interest by providing some balance for the economic power of other corporations. ... I have serious questions about the need for actions which could block efforts to make cooperatives more efficient."

Doctor Takes New Approach To Curb Smoking

By AL ROSSITER JR.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A behavioral scientist reports success in psychologically "inoculating" youngsters against the peer pressures that often influence that first smoke which might lead to a lifetime habit.

Dr. Alfred L. McAlister of Harvard University's School of Public Health says the unique approach works on the idea that it should be a lot easier to help people avoid smoking in the first place than to try to change habits already established.

"A great deal of information about the risks of heavy smoking has been disseminated in the past 15 years, but the fact that one in five young people continue to adopt the habit clearly indicates that a more sophisticated approach to the problem is needed," he said.

McAlister told a recent American Heart Association meeting at Hilton Head, S. C., that over half of all young people who smoke today adopted the habit before or during their ninth grade in school.

"The major factor that students themselves report as influencing their decisions to experiment with tobacco is peer pressure, and direct influence from a 'favorite' peer appears to be the most potent of those pressures," McAlister said.

He said youngsters often consider smoking a sign of independence from adult authority, and a sign of maturity. He said a child who refuses an offer of a cigarette may be called a "chicken."

"The young person who accepts an offer of a cigarette gains not only greater acceptance of smoking peers but also the appearance of being more 'tough,' 'cool,' mature and adventurous than his or her non-smoking peers."

So McAlister and two colleagues at Stanford University developed the psychological approach to counter those peer pressures. He likened it to the concept of inoculation in preventive medicine, with the "germs" of smoking being the social pressures.

He said the "infection" of smoking can be prevented if the subject is exposed to a weak dose of those "germs" to facilitate the development of "antibodies" which McAlister defined in this case as skills for resisting the pressures of smoking.

"The applicability of the concept of inoculation is obvious," he said. "If youngsters are likely to be called 'chicken' for refusing offers of cigarettes, they can be forewarned of pressures of that sort and provided assertiveness training which will enable them to counter those pressures.

"They can be trained to reply, 'If I smoke to prove that I'm not a chicken, all I'm really be showing is that I'm afraid not to do what you want me to do."

McAlister said this approach is being tried in sixth and seventh grade classrooms at four schools in the San Jose, Calif., area and six in the Boston area.

The effectiveness of the program was assessed at two schools near San Jose during the 1977-78 school year. One school received the experimental program and the other did not. Surveys supplemented by random samplings of exhaled breath showed that only 5.6 percent of seventh graders in the school given the program smoked, compared to 9.9 percent of youngsters of the same age in the other school.

Not only had fewer children started smoking in the school with the intervention program, but McAlister said the entire social atmosphere regarding smoking had changed.

"The students report that 'hardly anybody smokes now' and that 'it's not cool to smoke anymore.'"

Quality Vital Factor In Solar Home

By ANDY LANG

Associated Press Writer

A vital factor in the performance of a solar system in a house is the quality of the workmanship and materials.

While this might be said about home construction in general, it is even more pertinent in solar residential building because of the lack of experience and knowledge among some contractors and the use of materials that haven't proved themselves over long periods of time.

A residential solar program report was published last year by the U.S. Department of Energy. It is called "Building the Solar Home" and was prepared by an engineering firm called Dubin-Bloome Associates based on its own research and not necessarily reflecting the policy or view of the government departments.

What was especially interesting about the report is that, while it was aimed primarily at builders and developers, it dealt with some aspects of residential solar energy mentioned in numerous letters to this column over the past few months. The following quotes were contained in various sections of the report, which emphasizes some "Early Lessons Learned" during the first three years of the HUD Residential Solar Heating and Cooling Demonstration Program.

"To prevent pressure buildup and to permit condensation to escape, some solar collectors require venting devices, such as weep holes at the top and bottom."

"Raising collectors off the roof is preferable to mounting them directly on the roofing surface and reduces the potential of moisture retention, dry rot and even carpenter ants."

"The ideal placement of the storage system is in the center of the dwelling. However, when the main concern of the solar system is cooling, the storage component — which is a heating element — should not be located inside the dwelling."

"Check local public-health regulations to determine whether used transfer fluids can be drained to public sanitary or storm sewer systems. In some areas it may be necessary to contract for system draining and disposal."

"Poor workmanship is the most serious installation problem."

"Don't try to save money by using the cheapest pumps available."

"It is necessary to examine how solar components will affect other building materials."

"Check on the availability of replacement parts."

And, in conclusion:

"Building the solar home: Some Early Lessons Learned has shown that problems can and do arise at any stage of solar energy use (design, installation, construction and operation). This can be attributed in part to the lack of experience of those involved in solar applications and to the experimental nature of the technology."

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Ban Rolls On Over U.S.

ACHIEVEMENT of a verifiable arms control agreement instantaneously has become more difficult because the Carter administration has philosophically committed the U.S. to arms control to a greater extent than ever before.

President Carter's advocacy of a Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty has evoked dissent with the administration, largely from the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Energy Department and the Defense Nuclear Agency, as well as between the administration and Congress, including members of the House Armed Services Committee.

The controversy centers not on the concept of a test ban treaty per se but rather on the type of treaty envisioned.

AS SUMMED up by U.S. Rep. Robin Beard, R-Tenn., who opposes the administration on this issue, the arguments center "on whether a future CTBT agreement should consist of a zero-yield test ban (as advocated by the White House) or permit some form of low level nuclear threshold testing."

A zero-yield treaty versus one that permits low-level testing is a critical issue, as Beard says, because "the present state of the art does not permit adequate verification of nuclear testing below certain levels."

Nuclear testing, even low-yield testing and peaceful nuclear explosions, provide certain benefits—maintenance of confidence in nuclear stockpiles, information necessary to the development of future nuclear weapons design and modernization, and preservation of scientific and technological capability in nuclear weapons.

OPPONENTS of Mr. Carter's zero-yield stance feel this approach would permit the USSR to circumvent compliance to the agreement, thereby placing the U.S. at a technological disadvantage and possibly jeopardizing American security interests.

Mr. Carter has insisted upon "adequately verified" agreements in order to prevent covert testing. In practice, however, it would be impossible to achieve a totally reliable covenant just between the superpowers. And the problems would multiply with the accession of new parties to the agreement.

Furthermore, it would be easier for the USSR with its closed society to conduct such tests clandestinely. On the other hand, the U.S. could be expected to conform to such a treaty once ratified.

There is little, if any, evidence that the SALT I agreements, or other arms control accords, have even marginally restrained the momentum. And the greater the retrenchment of U.S. power, the greater the incentives to other states to go nuclear. The experience of SALT I is far from reassuring.

'That's Strange—I Don't Feel A Thing'

James J. Kilpatrick:

No Treaty Like Broken Treaty

WASHINGTON—The dust has begun to settle from Carter's bombshell announcement on "normalization" of relations with Red China, but a number of questions remain hanging in the air.

These are questions of honor, and of secondary impact, and of law. Let me take them one at a time.

What Carter is proposing, for all practical purposes, is quite simply the abandonment of a small ally.

For almost a quarter-century, from the time President Eisenhower negotiated a treaty of mutual defense in December 1954, Taiwan has benefited from our protection and our trade.

Carter's fulsome assurances that the "well-being of the people of Taiwan" will be preserved cannot disguise the shameful, disgraceful fact: He is dumping Taiwan.

THE OFFICIAL joint communique makes this point absolutely clear. Notice the careful language. The United States recognizes the People's Republic as the sole legal government of China.

"Within this context"—that is the key phrase—"Within this context, the people of the United States will maintain cultural, commercial and other unofficial relations with the people of Taiwan."

When the sellout is complete, Taiwan will be nothing more than a province of the People's Republic, subject to the authority of Peking in all matters having to do with trade, tariffs, ports of entry, and so on.

In terms of international law, as the sole de jure government of all China, Peking will control trade and travel as it pleases. Within this context, the people of Taiwan and the people of the United States will have nothing to say about it.

CARTER'S ACT of betrayal is certain to have a secondary impact upon every other friend or ally, the few that remain, in the family of nations.

The Israelis would be out of their minds not to wonder at the value now to be placed upon alliance with the United States.

Fourteen nations are bound to us through the North Atlantic Treaty, including such small nations as Norway, Iceland, Luxembourg, Belgium and Denmark. Are they resting easily tonight?

Our treaty of 1954 with Taiwan was a formal treaty, ratified by the Senate according to Article II of the Constitution.

Here we recognized that an attack upon Taiwan would be treated as an attack upon the United States, and we promised that we would act "to meet the common danger."

IN ARTICLE X, we pledged that the treaty would remain in force indefinitely, though either party could terminate it after one year's notice.

Are we to understand that what it took two-thirds of the Senate to do, Carter may now undo

My Neighbor Twice Removed suggests it was a Freudian admission that the old foundations are crumbling.

No, Virginia, it wasn't City Hall.

If Solomon is the wisest man who ever lived, how come he and the White House are in such a squabble over how long he'll stay as head of the scandal-ridden General Services Administration?

LUBBOCK SCHOOL trustees, refusing to bow their heads, took a firm stand in the middle of the fence on the prayer-in-school issue.

Tom Griffith, representing the American Civil Liberties Union, was reduced to sputtering that it is "ridiculous" for the trustees to stand on the constitution.

Local schools adhere "to the principle of freedom of religion as expressed in the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of the State of Texas," the school board solemnly intoned.

A Supreme Being—Court, that is—ultimately may be called on to "interpret" what is meant by adhering to the constitution.

WASHINGTON—California Gov. Jerry Brown says that if Congress doesn't pass a constitutional amendment requiring the federal government to balance its budget, then the states should call a constitutional convention and do it themselves.

President Carter, on the other hand, thinks this is a lousy idea, observing:

"Many legal scholars and others believe that such a convention would be completely uncontrollable, that the Constitution could be amended en masse, with multitudes of amendments originating therefrom."

"It would be a radical departure from the policy of amendment of our Constitution that we've experienced for the last 200 years."

WELL, CARTER is correct that Brown's idea is radical in the sense that the U.S. Constitution has never been amended in the way in which the California governor is suggesting.

But there are also legal scholars who believe that a state-called constitutional convention can be restricted, and former Sen. Sam Ervin is one of these individuals.

Writing in the March 1968 Michigan Law Review, addressing himself to the runaway state convention possibility, Ervin declared:

"I will concede that such an interpretation can be wrenched from Article Five—but only through a mechanical and literal reading of the words of the article, totally removed from the context of their promulgation and history."

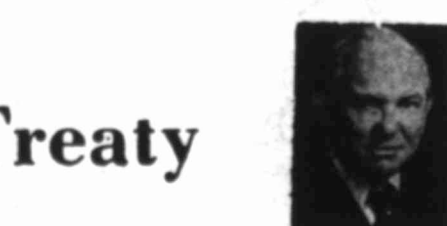

"MY READING of the debates on Article Five at the Philadelphia Convention and the other historical materials bearing on the intended function of the amendment process leads me to the opposite conclusion."

"As I understand the debates, the Founders were concerned, first, that they not place the new government in the same straitjacket that inhibited the Confederation, unable to change fundamental law without the consent of every state."

Ervin says that there is "strong evidence" that in allowing two methods of constitutional amendment, the Founders were concerned with the power to make specific amendments not the need for a general revision of the Constitution.

He points out that there is certainly "no indication" that the national legislature was intended to promote individual amendments while the states were to be concerned with more extensive revisions.

The former Democratic senator from North Carolina contends that the provision in Article Five for two exceptions to the amendment Power "underlines the notion that the Convention anticipated specific amendment or amendments rather than general revision. For it is doubtful that these exceptions could have been expected to control a later general revision."

by a stroke of his pen? The proposition reduces the Senate to a nullity. It revives the image of an imperial President.

The first recorded cases of outright abrogation of a treaty by the United States occurred in 1798, involving a treaty with France. But it was Congress that did the abrogating.

In 1846, we wanted out of a treaty with Britain involving joint occupation of the Oregon Territory. It was Congress, by joint resolution, that authorized the President to terminate the agreement.

THE AUTHORITATIVE annotated edition of the Constitution, last published by the Library of Congress in 1973, says that "the vast weight both of legislative practice and of executive opinion supports the proposition that the power of terminating outright international compacts to which the United States is party belongs, as a prerogative of sovereignty, to Congress alone."

None of these points is likely to matter greatly in the rage for "normalization" that has infected most of the Congress. Except for a few lonely voices—chiefly Barry Goldwater's—the reaction was muted.

By a stroke of clever timing, at the peak of the Christmas season, Carter has presented Congress and the country with something very close to a fait accompli. And an ugly thing it is.

stitution Allows It policy. Presumably, he meant Dan Devine, the coach at Notre Dame.

Still to be resolved is whether a school's loud speaker can be used for a moment of silent meditation. If it can be used to broadcast silent prayer, can it be used to broadcast silent non-prayer for non-praying students?

The school board may have won the first round but don't expect the ACLU to treat this decision reverently. There's bound to be some student out there willing to file suit on grounds that silence caused irreparable harm to his psyche.

Danged if I don't believe he thinks guests in this country should behave themselves.

Whatever its merits, it comes as no surprise that a simple request for an enlarged attendance zone for Lubbock High School results, instead, in a program that will—in the words of Supt. Ed Irons—"cost quite a bit of money."

Sylvia Porter:

Federal Kiss-And-Tell Hurts Your Reputation

SHOULD THE U.S. government be allowed to sell information it has compiled about you—information you are required to disclose?

Should it be profiting from this sale of private acts about you without your receiving a share, let alone without your permission or even your knowledge?

No matter what your answer—this is happening.

A little known agency of the Department of Commerce, the National Technical Information Service, markets your name and address if you use a citizen band (CB) radio or operate a boat or plane equipped with a radio.

It sells your name and your lawyer's name, but not your addresses, if you have a civil tax case pending with the Internal Revenue Service.

CITIZEN BAND radio users and marine as well as aviator radio operators must obtain licenses from the Federal Communications Commission (FCC). It compiles lists of licensees which it makes publicly available and passes along to the National Technical Information Service.

NTIS transfers the name to computer tape or microfiche and then sells them at prices from $17 to $420 or more.

The names and addresses of close to 15 million of you are contained in the FCC's CB operator lists!

The FCC lists are bought from the NTIS for a wide range of commercial and scientific reasons: market research, compilation of mailing lists, studies of the amount of radiation emitted by CBs and a variety of similar activities.

ORIGINALLY, NTIS was a responsibility of the Office of Technical Services, which was set up to gather data captured from the Japanese and Germans during World War II.

The agency later evolved into a federal information clearinghouse to collect scientific and technical information and to distribute this information to the public.

Its goal remains largely the same today—although it gathers information from many more sources, including cooperating foreign government agencies, and it is self-supporting.

To continue to remain solvent, NTIS actively markets its data by direct mail, advertising through exhibits at trade shows, seminars, and the like.

IN 1978, NTIS did $22 million of business, with most of its revenue coming from the sale of the 70,000 technical reports it receives each year and from bibliographic services related to its data collection.

But some of its earnings—about $80,000 in 1978—come from the sale of names of private citizens (say, you) who are required or who for some other persuasive reason register with various federal agencies, such as the FCC.

"Such directory-type information as the list of CB licensees is made available to us by the originating agencies," explains NTIS deputy director, Peter Urbach.

"It's up to the agency, not to us, to balance privacy with freedom of information claims."

One citizen and privacy expert, Robert Ellis Smith, violently objects to the federal government's selling of individual names and address es.

After noticing an NTIS advertisement for the list of CB users at a computer show, he told my associate, Brooke Shearer, that he wrote a letter of protest to the FCC.

In his letter, he argued that the agency was violating the Privacy Act—which prohibits the government from selling names and addresses without approval.

It is now seven months since Smith wrote to the FCC—but the agency still has not replied to his letter of protest.

When Shearer queried the general counsel's office of the FCC, she was told that "the matter is under study."

Hardly a satisfactory explanation a full seven months after a protest has been filed by an acknowledged authority in the field, and author of a monthly newsletter, "Privacy Journal."

BE WARNED, therefore: if you are among the 15 million who are CB users or other FCC license holders, your names and addresses are up for sale.

And no matter even if you are individually far removed from this specific area of controversy, be aware: at least 50 organizations, including private, semi-public and public groups maintain private information about you; if your privacy is to be invaded it will happen to you bit by bit, not all in one great swallow; if 1984's "Big Brother" is to grow bigger and bigger in the U.S. it will be because you are not sufficiently on guard.

Zournas died Friday morning in an explosion and fire at 704 E. Broadway.

The Lefkassion, Greece, native joined the resistance against the Germans during World War II while still in high school. He later served in the Greek armed forces and worked as a salesman in Athens after his discharge.

He moved to Lubbock in 1955 and worked with an uncle at the Tech Cafe. He became a naturalized citizen in 1960 and moved to California in 1961 from San Antonio. While in California he married Tassia Kontopoulou Feb. 11, 1962.

Zournas moved back to Lubbock in 1966 and established two Andrew's Drive-Ins. He was a member of the Greek Orthodox Church and was active in the Lubbock Greek community.

Survivors include his wife; a daughter, Mary of the home; a brother, Father Theodoros Zournas of Greece; and two sisters, Sophia Efthasiou and Pagona Barkoula, both of Greece.

The family suggests memorials to St. Anna's Philotachos Society.

Three Injured In Plane Crash

AMARILLO (AP) — A single-engine airplane crashed early today northwest of this Panhandle city, injuring the three Wichita Falls men aboard, the Department of Public Safety said.

The pilot, Roger Moore, 37, was listed in critical condition in a Amarillo hospital. Carl Hickey, 56, and Gene Fulmer, 29, were in undetermined condition, the hospital said. Fulmer suffered a fractured spine, the hospital said.

The DPS said the Beech Bonanza, owned by McAlister Trucking Co. of Wichita Falls, was on a flight to Denver when it ran into icing conditions over the Panhandle and crashed about 7 a.m.

The plane went down about 10 miles northwest of the city in rugged country. There was no co-pilot and Fulmer told troopers he was just along for the ride.

Autopsies Show Men Died From Burns

Autopsy results received today showed that burns caused the death of two Lubbock men whose bodies were found in the wreckage of a convenience store early Friday.

The victims were Andrew Zournas, 52, of 3011 42nd St., and Mark Corley, 27, of 2126 52nd St.

Their bodies were pulled from the wreckage of the Serv-U-Food Market, 704 E. Broadway, which was leveled by an explosion and fire about 1 a.m. Friday.

Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy pronounced the men dead at the scene.

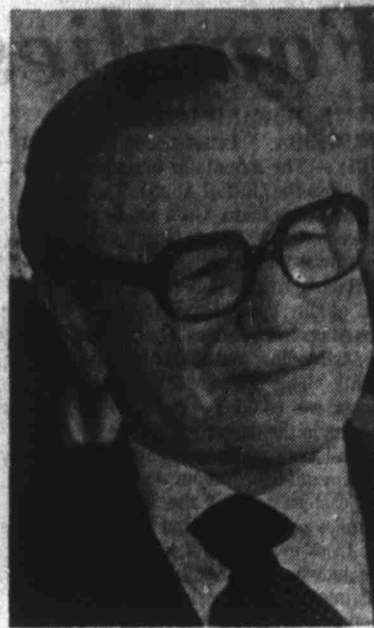

Fire Marshal Robert Stokes said this morning the fire was still under investigation.

Marshall's Motion Denied By Judge

A motion by James G. Marshall for a new trial in his efforts to block the issuance of city general obligation bonds was denied today in 137th District Court.

Judge Robert C. Wright made the ruling after hearing Marshall in the 8:30 a.m. proceeding.

NELSON A. ROCKEFELLER

Rockefeller's Family Holds Private Rites

TARRYTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — The ashes of Nelson A. Rockefeller were buried today in a family cemetery here, after a eulogy by his 15-year-old son.

Absent from the graveside rites was any of the public clamor which punctuated his life.

"Dad, we know how much you love us and we want you to know how much we love you and how much we will miss you," said Nelson Jr., one of two sons by Rockefeller's second marriage.

"Your spirit will live on with us forever. We'll try to live up to the example you've set as a father, as a husband, as a brother, as a statesman and as a friend."

"Dad, we're not saying goodbye, but until we meet again."

After the eulogy, Laurence Rockefeller, one of two surviving brothers, told his nephew: "Nelson, you've spoken for all of us."

The former vice president and four-time New York governor, who died of a heart attack Friday night, was cremated Sunday at the Ferncliff Crematory near the family's 250-acre Pocantico Hills estate.

A public service, at which national and international leaders are expected to pay tribute to the best known of the five Rockefeller brothers, will be held Friday at Riverside Church, a huge edifice built largely with Rockefeller money.

Among family members who gathered at Pocantico Hills Sunday to console Rockefeller's widow, Margaretta "Happy" Rockefeller, and their children were the two remaining sons of John D. Rockefeller Jr. — David, chairman of the Chase Manhattan Bank, and Laurence, conservationist and financier.

A fourth brother, John D. Rockefeller III, died in an auto accident last July, and a fifth, Winthrop, former governor of Arkansas, died of cancer in 1973. The only sister, Abby Rockefeller Mauze, died of cancer several years ago.

Meanwhile, Rockefeller family spokesmen sought to clarify the circumstances, time and location of Rockefeller's death.

Hugh Morrow, a longtime Rockefeller press aide, originally said the former governor died in his Rockefeller Center offices, but later said he, Morrow, had misunderstood the information first given to him.

He said Saturday that Rockefeller suffered the attack while working on an art book in his private offices at 13 W. 54th St.

Morrow had said only a security guard and a chauffeur were with Rockefeller when he collapsed.

Local Man Dies After Stabbing

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A 19-year-old Lubbock man died in surgery early this morning, about three hours after being stabbed repeatedly at a club on South U.S. Highway 87.

Joe Luis Garcia of 1014 E. 28th St. was pronounced dead at 2:11 a.m. during surgery at Methodist Hospital. Justice of the Peace Charles Smith has ruled the death a homicide, the county's second of the year.

A 23-year-old man has been charged with murder in the case but remained at large at noon today.

The dead man's girlfriend told sheriff's deputies it was her ex-boyfriend and his girlfriend's father who jumped Garcia about 11 p.m. Sunday.

Doctors said Garcia was stabbed six times, suffering wounds in the chest, abdomen and back.

The victim's 26-year-old girlfriend said she and Garcia had gone to the club, located about 3 1/2 miles south of the city, to dance.

She said she and Garcia were dancing when her ex-boyfriend began bumping into them on the dance floor. Deputies were told the couple sat down and the ex-boyfriend began calling Garcia a "chicken," and yelling "come on."

Garcia reportedly started for the suspect's table when he was grabbed from behind by a man, thought to be the father of the suspect's present girlfriend.

The woman said the man, with whom she had lived for five years before breaking up two years ago, came up to Garcia and pulled out an "object" from his belt holster. Garcia was stabbed while being held by the older man, witnesses said.

The woman and the victim's brother picked up Garcia and carried him outside the club. When deputies arrived, the victim was lying in front of the nightclub, a trail of blood leading from the building to Garcia.

After the assault, the two suspects fled the club in a car, witnesses said. Warrants for the arrests of the two men, who remained at large at noon today, were filed at 4 a.m. by Smith.

The killing was the second homicide handled by the sheriff's department this year. On Jan. 10, Noble C. Pineda, 72, of 2709 38th St. was found dead next to his car south of the city. An 18-year-old man was arrested the next day at his home in connection with the murder of the retired school teacher.

Services for Garcia were pending this morning with Henderson Funeral Directors.

Garcia had lived in Lubbock most of his life and was a member of the Mission, Pentecostal Church.

Survivors include his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eljio Garcia of 1014 E. 28th St.; six brothers, Eljio Jr., of Corpus Christi, David of Levelland, and Ray, James, Tommy and Fernando, all of Lubbock; and five sisters, Victoria Colton of Corpus Christi, Mary Jimenez of Phoenix, Ariz., Frances Garcia of Lubbock, Marie Garcia of Lubbock, and Annie Rios of Odesa.

Tisons Enter Guilty Pleas

FLORENCE, Ariz. (UPI) — Brothers Ricky and Raymond Tison have pleaded guilty to one count of first-degree murder in the slaying of a Yuma, Ariz., Marine sergeant last summer. The state agreed not to seek the death penalty.

The plea agreement calls for dismissal of three other murder counts, as well as kidnapping and robbery charges. The agreement also calls for them to testify against convicted murderer Randy Greenawalt at his trial for the slayings of Marine Sgt. John Lyons and Lyons' wife, son and niece.

In exchange, the state said Friday it will not seek the death penalty for the Tison brothers.

Yuma County Superior Court Judge Douglas Keddie must approve the agreement. If he rejects it, the pleas may be withdrawn. The two are scheduled for sentencing by Keddie Feb. 2.

In a surprise move, the Tison brothers entered their pleas before Pinal County Superior Court Judge E.D. McBryde.

Ricky, 20, and Raymond, 19, appeared in the courtroom in jail denim. McBryde read the plea agreement and asked if they understood each part. They answered quietly. Raymond at one time asked a question about the first-degree murder charge.

McBryde then read the charge and asked them how they pleaded. Each said, "Guilty."

The charge specified "felony murder," meaning the Tison brothers did not actually kill Lyons, but were present and in the act of committing another felony at the time.

Prize-Winning Economist Says Feds Should Review Rules

By JOHN BRONSON
PITTSBURGH (AP) — Nobel Prize-winning economist Herbert A. Simon says it's time for the federal government to take a hard look at the way its rules are affecting the nation's economy.

"I would be worried if the number of lawyers in our society and particularly the number of lawyers in government increased very much more," the 62-year-old Carnegie-Mellon University professor said in an interview.

"Government is like a blunt instrument for accomplishing our social goals and when you try to do delicate surgery, some things don't come out so well," he said.

"When you consider the impact of government on society, I am less inclined to worry about levels of government expenditures... than I do about our skills in carrying out regulatory activities."

Simon said prices of oil and gas must be deregulated quickly to stimulate exploration and production, even though that will surely mean higher prices for consumers.

"I think we've been kidding ourselves in thinking that we will continue to have energy at price levels we had in the past. Here's an area where the market mechanism should do the job of determining what prices should be," he said.

"It will certainly produce windfalls, but some of them can be recaptured through taxes. In a complex society, you can't get so excited worrying about who gets what that nobody ends up getting anything," said Simon, who won the Nobel Prize for his theories on how corporations reach decisions.

He also said he favors continued development of nuclear energy to help solve the energy crisis as well as more emphasis on solar energy research and ways to use America's huge coal reserves.

Simon declined to comment specifically on President Carter's proposed $532 billion budget, which includes a $29 billion deficit described as "lean" by the administration and attacked by critics as inflationary.

But he offered this observation: "I wouldn't want to say categorically that government should or shouldn't have deficits. One has to worry about total debt service and in relation to the total gross national product, a debt of $29 billion isn't really going to upset that," he said.

In the long run, Simon is optimistic that Americans will continue to improve their standard of living.

"The basic process that determines what we have to live on is production, subject to steady improvement at a modest rate, and I see no reason why that won't continue."

"We will have to bear some higher costs because we now are no longer willing to tolerate things that were done to the environment in the past," he said.

USDA Again Trying To Ban 'Junk Food'

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
The Department of Agriculture is trying again to restrict the sale of certain foods in the nation's schools, and this time the government is asking the public for help before, not after, drafting a proposed regulation.

The first of three scheduled hearings on the subject of so-called "junk food" will take place Tuesday in Nashville, Tenn. Further hearings are set for Feb. 6 in Detroit and Feb. 13 in Seattle.

Last April, the USDA proposed banning the sale of candy, soda, frozen desserts and chewing gum in schools until after the final meal of the day. The proposal drew more than 2,100 comments.

Most of the comments were favorable, but, said Assistant Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman, they raised "significant issues which deserve additional public scrutiny." The department withdrew its proposal and announced it was starting all over again.

The hearings involve food sold in the 90 percent of America's schools which participate in the National School Lunch Program.

In order to receive federal funds, the schools must provide so-called Type A meals, which include specified minimum quantities of food components: meat and meat alternates, vegetables and fruits, bread and bread alternates and fluid milk.

Schools may sell other items — officially known as "competitive foods." The revenue from the sale of these foods often is used for sports equipment, scholarships or extracurricular activities.

In 1977, Congress gave the secretary of agriculture the authority to regulate the sale of competitive foods and the department started working on a proposed regulation.

A number of those commenting on the original USDA plan expressed concern about the loss of money that would result from banning sales of some items. Candy manufacturers questioned the nutritional criteria used by the department in drafting its regulation.

In a recent interview, Helen Smith of the Chicago-based National Confectioners' Association of the United States, said that candy made with things like chocolate, nuts, milk and eggs is "really nutritious even though it isn't sold on that basis."

She also took issue with those who claim that students fill up on snacks from vending machines instead of eating regular lunches. Miss Smith said a study of high schools in a 10-state area showed that vending machine purchases average 3.5 per capita per month. The survey "would seem to indicate," she said, "that if they're not eating their school lunches, it's not because they're buying candy."

Department officials at the upcoming hearings are looking for answers to a variety of questions. Among them:

—Should a restriction apply only to meal periods?

—Should a competitive foods rule also apply to foods served as part of the school lunch? If, for example, candy and cake are banned as competitive foods, would that automatically mean they could not be served as lunch deserts?

In its initial proposal, the department zeroed in on four categories of food, which, said the USDA, are relatively high in sugar content, are usually considered snack foods and are generally identified as not making a positive composition to children's diets. In trying to draft a new rule, officials are considering other types of standards to determine which foods should be restricted.

Among the alternatives:

—A food composition standard based on the levels of ingredients such as sugar, salt, fat, etc. The USDA would set maximum acceptable component levels.

—A nutrient standard based on vitamins, mineral and protein content.

Hijacker Relates Plan To Make World Aware Of 'New Concept'

NEW YORK (AP) — Irene McKinney talked about a plan to make the world aware of her "new concept" in religion in a 747 jetliner, friends and acquaintances in California say.

A four-page tract she reportedly wrote in 1970 predicted "earth-consuming fires ... due to the extensive networks of oil, gas and electric lines" being disrupted by earthquakes after the explosion of the sun, said Frank Godfrey, a Cypress, Calif., real estate agent who rented Mrs. McKinney a two-bedroom townhouse.

"She had this idea of a heaven on earth and the sun exploding and she had all this technological stuff which she seemed to understand just perfectly," Godfrey said Sunday.

Mrs. McKinney, a 49-year-old California divorcee, was to be arraigned today in federal court in Brooklyn.

She was accused of commandeering a United Airlines flight en route from Los Angeles to New York on Saturday and threatening to blow it up unless television star Lindsay Wagner or actors Charlton Heston or Jack Lemmon read her message over network television. No message was ever found at the Los Angeles airport, where she claimed to have left one. But during a 6½-hour siege at John F. Kennedy International Airport that ended with her capture early Sunday, Mrs. McKinney gave FBI agents a 25-page statement with religious overtones. They described it as "quite incoherent."

A co-worker at Thermo Products Corp., in Orange, Calif., said that since the Peoples Temple mass suicide in Guyana, Mrs. McKinney had cried often at work and expressed fears that she would be killed.

"She was nervous when she talked to you," a co-worker, who asked not to be identified, said. "She never finished her sentences."

Mrs. McKinney earlier had told FBI agents that she was an unemployed writer.

Study Criticizes Debit Insurance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some people who pay for years on life insurance policies marketed to the poor may never get back in benefits what they pay in as premiums, a new federal report says.

The policies, called debit insurance, are sold by door-to-door salesmen in poor neighborhoods. The Federal Trade Commission, in releasing its staff report Sunday, called such policies a long-criticized but still-growing business. An estimated 102 million debit policies were in force in 1976.

Salesmen for the policies, which the report said have high premiums but low benefits, collect a small premium every month — sometimes every week.

The report said customers who pay premiums steadily for many years may "pay in on their policies more than they can ever get back in benefits."

Payments for most "regular" life insurance policies, which are usually larger than debit policies, are mailed directly to the company.

The money available to pay out debit insurance benefits is drained by the high administrative costs of marketing the policies, including the heavy expenses of maintaining the door-to-door sales force, the report said.

"The agent is not likely to inform consumers about lower-cost alternatives. Nor is he likely to emphasize the higher cost of his products and services," said the report, written by FTC staff member Elizabeth Laporte.

Many buyers do not compute the long-run cost of benefits because the weekly or monthly payments, which can be only a few dollars, seem small, the report said.

Debit policies are divided into two types: "industrial" insurance, for which premiums are collected weekly, and "monthly debit ordinary," usually larger policies for which premiums are paid monthly.

The American Council of Life Insurance said in a statement, "No one denies that you get less for your insurance dollar by buying industrial life. People in that income bracket get less for their dollar in every category. Their real problem is how to get out of all this. Industrial life does furnish a financial product to people who in all likelihood would not buy it otherwise."

Miss Fonda Named Best Actress

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Jane Fonda, whose career suffered because of her protests against the Vietnam War, was twice honored for a film about that conflict at the Golden Globe awards ceremonies this weekend.

The Hollywood Foreign Press association named Miss Fonda best dramatic actress of 1978 for her portrayal of a young military wife in "Coming Home." Along with John Travolta, she was also chosen World Film Favorite.

"I guess I'm back," Miss Fonda told a star-studded audience at the Beverly Hilton Saturday night. "So is Nixon. Only I'm getting paid and he isn't."

Jon Voight, who played the disillusioned and crippled Vietnam veteran who becomes Fonda's lover in "Coming Home," won the best dramatic film actor award.

But "Midnight Express," a film about a young American's brutal treatment in a Turkish prison, garnered the most awards. A surprise winner in the best dramatic film category, the movie also earned a best screenplay citation for Oliver Stone, best original score for Giorgio Moroder and acting awards for three relative unknowns.

Brad Davis, who played the imprisoned dope trafficker, was honored for best film acting debut, as was Irene Miracle. John Hurt was chosen best supporting actor.

Michael Cimino was named best director for "The Deer Hunter." Warren Beatty claimed two awards in the musical or comedy categories — best actor and best film — for "Heaven Can Wait."

Companies selling such insurance, the report said, appear to make high profits on the policies because of customer ignorance about what they are buying and because of some questionable sales practices.

The report alleged that marketing abuses include selling more policies to a buyer than are needed. It said 30 life and health policies cost one elderly Tennessee woman $88.85 of her monthly Supplemental Security Income of $177.40.

Another practice, the report said, involves convincing clients to buy new policies while letting old ones lapse, giving the salesman a new commission.

The policies have a high "lapse rate" (the number of customers who stop making payments), it said, noting that this results in many policyholders receiving no cash benefits.

Early in the century, debit insurance was criticized by Louis Brandeis, later a noted Supreme Court justice, who attacked it for alleged high cost and low return.

Last November, Consumer Reports magazine published an article on the subject entitled, "Insurance that Preys on the Poor."

In the age of the photocopying machine, the Austin commercial artist hand-lettered names of the licensees on their professional certificates.

The 32-year-old woman specializes in calligraphy, the art of hand lettering, and has added the personal touch to numerous state certificates since 1970.

"It's really more economical than type-set printing," she said during an interview in her northwest Austin home. "It's more flexible to have someone letter it."

She also has done work for the University of Texas and former President Lyndon Johnson.

The California native learned calligraphy at Hollywood's Immaculate Heart High School. The art teacher, Sister Corta, has since established her own reputation for commercial illustration.

"The only art course I've ever had was in the ninth grade, mixed media," Mrs. Lowenthal said. "After it, I still couldn't draw or paint, but I could letter."

After obtaining a bachelor's degree in English from Pomona College, she spent a summer on a Colorado ranch.

"Then I read an article in Time magazine that said Austin had the lowest cost-of-living and the university had a graduate school," she said.

Moving to Austin proved a good decision, she said, but graduate school was terrible.

She quit the University of Texas and started working at a downtown art supply store. When business was slow, she doodled stylized lettering on a note pad. Customers soon noticed.

"I made up a portfolio and went to state offices, advertising agencies, department stores, university offices," the artist said "and then just waited for business."

A friend told her the Texas Supreme Court was redesigning lawyer certificates, and that's where her state business began.

She met President Johnson while working at the art supply shop, which was near the Johnson family's television station.

Mrs. Lowenthal saw him standing outside the store, gathered her nerve and rushed outside to introduce herself and give him a business card.

"A week later I got a call from his secretary," she remembered. "It was right after Eisenhower died and he wanted several copies of a memorial statement hand-lettered."

LBJ again called her to execute several hundred name badges for dignitaries when his presidential library opened in Austin on May 22, 1971.

"I had to go down to the federal building and sit in the same room with the Secret Service watching. I guess so I wouldn't add any names," she said.

The night before the opening, she got a phone call.

"Somehow they had lost all the cards," Mrs. Lowenthal said. "So the Secret Service brought extra cards to her house and she signed the lettering."

She works out a studio-print shop in her basement, an arrangement that lets her keep an eye on 8-month-old daughter Sarah.

The studio includes an offset press, copier machine and work desk. For many commercial jobs, she hand-letters the design and then prints large quantities on the press.

For certificates, she charges the state $1 per name, plus 20 cents for dates and other entries on the standard form. The arrangement is informal and not in a written contract.

Mrs. Lowenthal has no ambition to broaden her work.

"I'm not by nature aggressive. It used to be a crisis in my life to sell Girl Scout cookies," she said. "I have no wish to become a great enterprise. I'm really content. Calligraphers are not the most ambitious people in the world."

Recruiter Has Jobs For Arabs

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — Wanted: highly trained Arab scientists to return home and share their expertise in a petroleum-rich economy.

That's the message of Herbert Halbrecht, who owns a recruiting firm based in Connecticut.

The offer may suggest high salaries and lavish living, but it isn't as easy as it may sound to find the right person for the job.

And the fact that Halbrecht is a Jew makes his job even more interesting.

Halbrecht, who has been working with the Kuwait government, believes he may be the only private recruiting firm placing highly trained Arabs in the Middle East.

During the past year, he has placed eight Arabs with the Kuwait Institute for Scientific Research.

One was an Ohio State agriculture professor who specializes in computer simulation. Another was a transportation specialist for the city of Chicago and now directs programming at the institute.

But they have been the exception of those he has negotiated with in this country.

"The only thing that brings them back is incentive and nationalism," he said.

The typical foreign-educated Arab finds it difficult to match his talents with job openings in his developing native country. As a result, he becomes established, often with a wife and family, in the United States.

Kuwait salaries ranging from about $35,000 to $50,000 a year for those with doctorate degrees aren't likely to lure too many away from higher-paying U.S. jobs. But the added benefits of free housing and medical benefits as well as the desire to help their homeland sometimes tips the balance, he said in an interview.

"The salary isn't really that good, but they're offering them a chance to go back to their roots," he said.

The jobs range from directing research in chemical engineering to development of ways to farm the arid wastes of the small Mideast country.

When word spread, largely by word of mouth, about Kuwait's search for technical expertise, Halbrecht's offices in Stamford, New York, Washington and Chicago began receiving from two to five letters each day from Arabs seeking more information, he said. Halbrecht has aunts and uncles in Israel, and said that much of the same kind of scientific work is going on there.

Assuming that a peace agreement is ultimately reached between Israel and its Arab neighbors, the common scientific pursuits could be a primary bridge between the two peoples, he said.

"It won't happen overnight," he added. "The hatred and distrust is 30 to 40 years in the making."

But Halbrecht said the ease with which he has been able to work with Arab scientists and Kuwaitis seeking their services is in indication of how easily Arabs and Jews can work together.

Halbrecht expects Egypt and China to be in the market soon for U.S.-trained technologists.

"If in some way I could help create some of those bridges," he mused, "it would fulfil one of my dreams."

Academy Announces Prize For Fiction

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters has announced establishment of the "Sue Kaufman Prize for First Fiction."

Starting in 1980, the prize is to be awarded annually to "provide encouragement to new writers, to bring them serious notice by distinguished judges and to memorialize an American writer who was devoted to her craft and to her colleagues in it."

The award carries a stipend of $1,000. Sue Kaufman, who died in 1977, wrote five published novels, including "Diary of a Mad Housewife."

English Take Action To Curb Rustling

LONDON (AP) — Many English farmers lost animals in 1978, and the farming industry is taking action to curb rustling.

Rewards as high as $20,000 are being offered for information leading to the conviction of rustlers.

Figures compiled by the National Farmers' Union show losses last year amounted to several hundred thousand dollars.

Solons Slow Down Speedy Trial Law

AUSTIN (UPI) — The Senate voted unanimously today to slow down the Speedy Trial Act of 1977, which allows accused speeders to go scot free if traffic courts do not process their tickets within 30 days.

Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, won quick approval for his bill to allow local authorities 60 days in which to try cases of motorists charged with speeding and other misdemeanor violations punishable by fines.

Farabee said the 1977 law setting time limits for handling court cases caused headaches in his area.

"Thirty days was too short a time fuse and allowed a lot of people to avoid trial," he said. "In Wichita County there are 1,200 moving traffic violations and another 400 misdemeanor offenses each month. This simple (bill) allows 60 days instead of 30 days for the state to prepare its case."

The bill — which now goes to the House — leaves unchanged controversial provisions of the 1977 law that forced judges to free some accused murderers because prosecutors waited too long to try their cases.

In other action, the Senate also approved and sent to the House a bill to make a $161,806 emergency appropriation to the state Board of Professional Engineers to pay for new furnishings for the agency's new offices.

Lawmakers also are expected to vote this week on emergency appropriations for a deepwater port for oil tankers, cost of the state's regulatory functions in implementing new federal laws for natural gas pricing, and continuing litigation about the estate of Howard Hughes and legal challenges to the Texas prison system.

Sen. A.R. Schwartz, D-Galveston, said he will seek Senate approval Tuesday of a $2.5 million emergency appropriation to pay administrative and "start-up" expenses of the Texas Deepwater Port Authority.

Speaker Bill Cayton said he hopes representatives can act on the support funds later in the week along with a $582,682 appropriation to the Texas Railroad Commission and a $907,000 addition to the attorney general's budget.

The three-man Railroad Commission requested additional money to expand its staff to handle regulatory functions assigned to Texas under the Natural Gas Policy Act passed by Congress last year.

Implementing the federal act, which directs the Railroad Commission to assign pricing categories to Texas' natural gas wells, is expected to cost the state more than $5 million over the next five years.

Attorney General Mark White says he needs additional funds for his office primarily to pay costs of continuing litigation over taxes on the Howard Hughes estate and challenges to the legality of the Texas prison system.

The Senate approved the extra money for the Railroad Commission and attorney general's office last week.

Representatives, slowed in the opening days of the session by an election contest and reorganization of House committees, will hold their first full week of committee hearings this week.

Chinese Leader Hears Protests

plause by applauding himself. Then he followed Carter down a short receiving line that included Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, Vice President Walter F. Mondale, and national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski.

The president and the vice premier and their wives mounted an outside platform. They stood at attention as the band played the two countries' national anthems and cannons fired a 19-gun salute, the tribute accorded to a head of government.

Carter himself indicated the vagueness attached to Teng's status. He is nominally the third man in the Chinese hierarchy, but he apparently commands a majority of the politbureau in support of his policies.

Carter began by calling Teng "Mr. Prime Minister," then corrected himself to say "Mr. Vice Premier."

"For too long, our two peoples have been cut off from one another," Carter told Teng. "Now we share the prospect of a fresh flow of commerce, ideas and people."

Teng replied that his people would "be exploring with you government leaders and friends in all walks of life ways to develop our contacts and cooperation in the political, economic, scientific-technological and cultural fields."

"Normalization opens up broad vistas for developing these contacts," Teng said. "We have every reason to expect fruitful results."

When the two leaders finished speaking, they walked up an outside staircase to a balcony on the south facade of the White House, where they waved for several minutes. Teng and Carter shook hands. Then they went inside.

The ceremony was witnessed by about 1,000 reporters and guests inside the White House grounds and untold millions on television around the world.

In front of Teng were arrayed honor guards representing the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps. To the sides were the invited spectators, waving small Chinese and American flags.

Several hundred yards to the south, outside the wrought iron fence, some demonstrators were standing, their banners barely readable to anyone without field glasses. Most were in Chinese. One, in English, said "Taiwan for the Taiwanese."

DA Reveals New Policy

took money during the incident, making the homicide a capital murder under Texas law.

Officials said Sunday that "various items from the scene" also have been recovered.

An investigator added that an "additional suspect involved in the alleged offense is still at large" but that authorities are "unable to specify a suspect at this time."

During the course of the investigation, in which Texas Rangers also assisted, deputies took aerial photographs of the rural murder site, a popular "lovers' lane" area. Officials also employed hypnosis in the hopes that the rape victim would be able to provide them with additional details of the slaying.

Also Saturday, Jesus "Jesse" Enrique, 30, of 2911 Cornell St. was charged with the Jan. 30, 1977, murder of Tom Silva Schuman.

LeCroy set a $20,000 bond on Enrique, who, accompanied by his attorneys, surrendered himself to officials about noon Saturday. He was released from county jail later that day on the "temporary" bond.

Police said an argument involving at least three men had ensued at the 3203 E. Broadway murder scene early Jan. 30 before Schuman was shot. But officials were unsure whether the 45-year-old city employee had been involved in the dispute.

Two of the men left the residence, returning moments later to beckon Schuman to the door. He then was shot three times.

Various investigators credited Detective Capt. Wayne Love for his "instrumental" role in getting the two-year-old city murder re-opened and solved.

They also had high praise for all area law officers who have been working with the Criminal District Attorney's office and investigators.

Earlier this month, an investigation into the eight-month-old murder of Carlos G. Herrera, 60, of New Deal ended when a Lubbock man was charged with capital murder and three other persons were named in aggravated robbery charges in connection with the May 13, 1978, robbery and stabbing.

As Teng and Carter met, the Washington Star and Time magazine published an interview with the vice premier in which he called on the United States and Japan to join China in an alliance "to place curbs on the (Soviet) polar bear."

Teng was interviewed in Peking on the eve of his U.S. visit by Hedley Donovan, editor in chief of Time Inc., which owns the Star. He told Donovan the Soviet Union is "a hotbed of war" and said the United States is in "strategic retreat."

"If we really want to be able to place curbs on the polar bear," Teng said, "the only thing is for us to unite."

The vice premier sided with those who oppose a new strategic arms limitation treaty between the United States and the Soviet Union. He told Donovan he approves "very much" a letter sent to Carter recently by 170 retired U.S. admirals and generals who warned about consequences of a new SALT agreement.

"The nuclear arsenal of the Soviet Union and the constant development of their strategic weapons mean that we can say that the Soviet Union is already on a par with the U.S.," Teng said. Referring to the Soviet strategic force, he declared: "In the near future, (it) may surpass the United States."

Throughout the White House arrival ceremony for Teng, about 400 Chinese and native Taiwanese demonstrators chanted slogans from in front of the White House along Pennsylvania Avenue and on the Ellipse, the circular park facing the White House South Lawn where the ceremony was held.

Nixon Sets Private Session With Teng

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Richard Nixon, at the request of visiting Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping and other Chinese leaders, is in Washington for a three-day stay and will attend the White House state dinner tonight.

Nixon arrived Sunday night by commercial flight and was whisked away by limousine to an unpublishable destination in the Washington area, where he will stay during Teng's visit. He will have a private visit with Teng Wednesday.

Although he has made a number of public appearances since his television interviews with David Frost more than a year ago, Nixon has been in what amounted to a virtual self-imposed exile at his home in San Clemente, Calif., since resigning the presidency Aug. 9, 1974, under the threat of impeachment in the Watergate scandal.

The Chinese vice premier and other Chinese leaders expressed their desire to meet with Nixon during their eight-day stay in the United States, and President Carter invited him to the black tie state dinner honoring Teng tonight.

Carter said a Nixon achievement "was to open up an avenue of communications and consultation and negotiation with the Chinese which resulted ultimately in normal relationships."

His invitation to the former president was criticized on the ground it appeared a vindication, but Carter told a news conference: "I have no apology to make. I think it was a proper thing to do and I am very pleased President Nixon has accepted our invitation."

During the first two or three years of seclusion at his seaside home, Nixon himself had surgery for phlebitis and his wife Pat suffered a stroke which caused a partial paralysis.

But there also have been happy times — the arrival of his first grandchild, a girl born to his daughter and son-in-law, Julie and David Eisenhower, a year ago, and word that daughter and son-in-law, Tricia and Edward Cox, are expecting their first child shortly.

Nixon has become more visible in the past year. He published his memoirs, toured France and Britain, and made several speaking appearances in this country. He has said he does not intend to make another bid for public office, but he does intend to speak out on foreign affairs.

The White House said earlier this week it does not expect Carter will meet privately with Nixon to discuss international relations.

But Nixon has been getting regular intelligence briefings and up-to-date reports on the Teng visit.

Mrs. Nixon did not accompany her husband to Washington. She has not made any major official appearances since her stroke in July 1977. She also has turned down all invitations to return to Washington.

Moslem Rioters Sweep Through Tehran Again

fore meeting with the exiled Khomeini.

But Bakhtiar said Iran's airports, closed last week to prevent Khomeini's return from exile, would reopen shortly, and Khomeini could return "if security measures are taken."

Khomeini said, however, he would return at his own risk as soon as the airports are open. Informed sources in France said officials of Air France, which will fly Khomeini to Tehran aboard a chartered jetliner, were awaiting formal word from Iranian authorities on the airport reopening.

Bakhtiar told a news conference "doors will stay open" for negotiations with the 78-year-old Khomeini, who wants to abolish the monarchy and Bakhtiar's shah-appointed government and establish a religiously oriented republic.

Tehran and other cities have been wracked for days with violent protests by anti-government Iranians demanding that Khomeini be allowed to return.

Police sources said rioters today set fire to the Shokoufenou nightclub, the capital's largest, burned the Shams brewery in south Tehran and set five beer trucks ablaze. They also set fire to restaurants serving alcoholic drinks.

Rioters stormed into south Tehran's "red-light" district and attacked liquor stores and what they identified as houses of prostitution.

"On this street are houses where women sell themselves," one demonstrator cried. Reporters saw rioters throw furniture, including large refrigerators, out of the windows of some of the buildings. The sound of gunfire, apparently from riot troops nearby, sounded in the background. Cars burned in the streets.

Many anti-government dissidents are Moslem fundamentalists opposed to the growing use of alcoholic beverages and the introduction of other Western customs here.

At 24th of Esfand Square near Tehran University, where more than 30 persons were killed Sunday in a battle between troops and rioters, large groups of demonstrators gathered today, put up barricades and set fires.

Rioters seized a police lieutenant general from the back seat of his car, stripped him, dragged him three blocks and beat him severely. He later was reported hospitalized in a coma and suffering from stab wounds.

Demonstrators said his attackers blamed the police officer for some of the shooting Sunday in Esfand Square.

The wounded American officer was identified as Air Force Maj. Larry R. Davis, assigned to the U.S. Military Advisory Group in Iran. A military spokesman said Davis is from Missouri, but his hometown was unavailable.

The spokesman said Davis was shot with a small-caliber weapon late Sunday as he was returning to his quarters from a friend's home. He was hit in the arm and suffered a flesh wound in the neck and was hospitalized in satisfactory condition.

Informed sources said Davis fired back at his assailant and that may have saved his life.

The military spokesman said the shooting seemed not to be premeditated but an indiscriminate act of anti-Western violence.

Bakhtiar had said Saturday he would fly to Paris to try to make peace with the Shiite Moslem patriarch, who from exile led the year-long civil rebellion that forced Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi to leave the country two weeks would receive Bakhtiar, while another said he would have to resign first. Later, Khomeini told reporters: "If Bakhtiar is on the side of the angels, let him resign and come and see me as a free man, like everybody else."

Khomeini, whose title of ayatollah is equivalent to that of bishop or archbishop, again attacked Bakhtiar as a "puppet and agent of the shah," and repeated his claim that Bakhtiar's government is "illegal" because it was appointed by the "illegal" shah.

Wages, Prices Face New Curb

WASHINGTON (AP) — It may be necessary to further tighten the Carter administration's wage and price guidelines in 1980 to reduce inflation to the 6.5 percent level, the chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers said today.

"No decision has been made... my judgment is that it probably will be necessary in 1980," Charles L. Schultz told the congressional Joint Economic Committee.

A further tightening of the wage and price guidelines announced by President Carter last October would probably mean a lowering of the current limit for wage increases of about 7 percent down to 6 or 6.5 percent, although Schultz did not suggest any proposed new levels.

He said tightening of the guidelines also "depends on what is achieved in 1979."

The administration hopes to reduce inflation below a 7 percent rate by the end of the year using a combination of spending restraint, high interest rates and its guidelines program.

Schultz told the committee he thinks inflation can be brought under control without a recession, although he acknowledged there is "some danger."

"Progress can be made toward reducing inflation in 1979 without putting the economy through the wringer of recession. It can be done, and it must be done, to lay the foundation for a strong economy," he said.

Schultz went before the panel to explain and answer questions about the administration's proposed 1980 budget and the new economic policies outlined by the president last week.

He said the nation's unemployment rate, currently at 5.9 percent, has reached the point where efforts to make an additional significant decrease would raise "an increasing risk of inflation."

The administration is forecasting a rise in unemployment to 6.2 percent both this year and in 1980, but Schultz indicated these levels must be tolerated as part of the struggle against inflation.

At the same time, he said the administration would continue to focus on specific programs to deal with unemployment problems among disadvantaged persons.

A continuing worsening of inflation, which was 9 percent last year, would increase the risk of recession and ultimately lead to a worse condition of unemployment than what the administration is projecting.

"The most important contribution to maintaining a satisfactory (economic) growth rate this year is the prospect that the rate of inflation will moderate," Schultz said.

Cambodians Still Resist

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The Vietnamese army still has the upper hand in Cambodia, six weeks after it invaded the country to install a pro-Hanoi government, but it is in trouble, say Western and Thai military analysts in Bangkok.

Although the analysts consider claims of military success by the forces of ousted Premier Pol Pot to be exaggerated, they say fighting continues at a number of points, and the 100,000-man invasion force seems to have lost the momentum that took it 300 miles across the country to the Thai border in a few weeks.

Cambodian troops who remained loyal to Pol Pot and his Khmer Rouge government blew up the bridges on the major highways out of Phnom Penh as they retreated, the sources explain, and the Vietnamese are having trouble moving their artillery and other heavy equipment. Ambushes also are a problem.

Pol Pot's fugitive radio station, which broadcasts from southern China, claimed today that his forces "liberated" nearly all of southeastern Cambodia and advanced to within 11 miles of Phnom Penh from the south.

"The Vietnamese invaders in Phnom Penh are losing morale and their fighting spirit," said the broadcast.

White House Book Causes Ethics Furor

SHEILA RABB WEIDENFELD

By ANN BLACKMAN
WASHINGTON (AP) — Sheila Rabb Weidenfeld can't understand what the flap over the book is all about.

Betty Ford called it a "betrayal."

Ron Nessen, former White House press secretary, called it "tasteless and trashy."

First lady Rosalynn Carter called it "unacceptable" for White House staffers to write about the private lives of first families.

Mrs. Weidenfeld did just that. And she finds herself the center of a storm over ethics.

As press secretary to former first lady Betty Ford, Mrs. Weidenfeld kept a diary about her experiences in the White House. Her subsequent, recently published book, "The First Lady's Lady," offers a glimpse of power struggles within the White House.

It also reveals details of the Ford family's private life. And these tidbits have kept tongues wagging for months.

"This accusation that I've written a kiss-and-tell book bewilders me," she said as she curled up on the chocolate-colored corduroy sofa in her Georgetown living room. "Anecdotes taken in context show how life works. Taken out of context, it's gossip because they show no insight."

"I didn't understand it. I still don't understand it. Why has there been such commotion?"

The commotion — in columns, editorials, television news shows and cocktail party conversations — focuses on whether she betrayed confidences of the Ford family when she wrote that:

—Daughter Susan was dating a married man while she was living in the White House and that her mother knew it.

—Mrs. Weidenfeld learned that the Ford's son Jack planned to smoke marijuana and advised him to "get stoned" before he went to a rock concert rather than during the concert itself where he might be seen.

—Son Steve sneaked a date out of the Queen's Bedroom one morning as an ABC crew waited in the hall to begin a televised tour of the White House.

Q. Did you betray any confidences?
A. "No, not at all. It's a very complimentary book because it's a warm and loving look at the family."

As Mrs. Weidenfeld tells it, she has written a book about what happens to ordinary folks when they get in positions of power. "It helps you understand all administrations," she said. "And administrations aren't that different. There's a White House mentality. It's about how people grow and change... how they have to grow up on stage which is a very tough thing to do."

Asked why she chose to describe a tipsy Steve Ford taking a girl he met that night "on a weaving tour of the White House" before he and the young woman spent the rest of the night together in the Queen's Bedroom, Mrs. Weidenfeld said, "Now that's a telling story."

"We had lost the election. People in the White House were throwing caution to the wind. It was his home. Most people don't have a camera crew outside their bedroom door. What man at 21 wouldn't do the same thing?"

Mrs. Weidenfeld says the public has conflicting feelings about children who grow up in the White House. "They want them to be regular kids, but they don't want them to be. I portrayed them as real."

By all reports, Mrs. Ford hasn't exactly warmed to the portrayal.

"She called after the stories came out," Mrs. Weidenfeld said. "She hadn't read the book yet, but she wasn't very happy. I guess you could say our relationship is somewhat strained."

Publicly, Mrs. Ford has said the book "hurt the children terribly. They had a lot of confidence in Sheila. They thought of her as a friend... They really felt they had confided in her, and it was a betrayal on her part."

Mrs. Weidenfeld, a former TV producer, bristles at suggestions that she takes credit in the book for "producing" Mrs. Ford's candid personality.

"Mrs. Ford was candid and frank before she came to the White House," Mrs. Weidenfeld said. "I just provided the atmosphere to bring out her real personality. You want the way they really are to come across to the public."

"The White House puts people in an unnatural situation. Who else is followed by several hundred reporters wherever they go? I was trying to make her more relaxed. It wasn't like some Madison Avenue people selling cereal."

The bitter feuds and turf battles Mrs. Weidenfeld described between those who work in the White House West Wing which houses the president's staff, and those in the East Wing who work for the first lady, exist in all administrations, she said:

"There's a boy's side and a girl's side. It's the way the West Wing perceives the East Wing — that women should be seen and not heard. They provided no support. And it's hard to get the job done without that support. It's hard to be supportive if what's going on in the West Wing is you don't know."

Mrs. Weidenfeld says she has no regrets about her book.

"I'm not sorry," she said. "It doesn't hurt them at all. The book isn't unfair. The stories about it are. I think it's the most flattering picture that will ever be done of the Ford family because that's the way they are."

Actor Brings Money To Small Utah Town

ST. GEORGE, Utah (AP) — Three years ago, Robert Redford was burned in effigy in nearby Kanab. Now he's an honorary member of the Elks Club.

The handsome movie star, who lives near Orem, Utah, at his Sundance ski resort, incensed local folks when he spoke out against a proposed power project in nearby Kane County.

"For me it's the beginning of the end," Redford said on CBS' "60 Minutes" program. "I guess I just care too much... I just can't stand to see something I think is so valuable not preserved."

The $3.5 billion, coal-fired Kaiparowits project was intended to produce electricity for Arizona and California utilities, but environmentalists succeeded in blocking it.

Many blamed Redford and some said he had political aspirations. In April 1976, a dummy of the fair-haired actor — wearing a sign that said "I'm a Star, I've Made My Money" — was hanged and burned.

One man said citizens had decided to "put a torch to skunkman Redford, a self-proclaimed voice of the hypocritical obstructionists." They roasted hot dogs over the coals.

Now Redford, who starred with Paul Newman in "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid" and "The Sting", is making his first movie in two years. And the film is being shot in St. George.

"The Electric Horseman" is the story of an aging rodeo cowboy who's exploited by a conglomerate to promote breakfast cereal.

Location scenes were to be filmed in New Mexico, but Redford convinced his co-producers to bring the company of about 100 — including Jane Fonda, Valerie Perrine and country music singer Willie Nelson — to Utah.

"Robert Redford has certainly been a friend of St. George," said Art Anderson, executive director of the Chamber of Commerce in this vacation community of 7,000 in southwest Utah.

Film production manager Ron Schwary estimates the company will spend $10,000 to $12,000 each day during the 45-plus days it's on location. The cast and crew needed 96 rooms and meals, laundry, gasoline and drinks at the Elks Club. They're all honorary members.

"I got involved, and now it's time to go back to what it is that I do," said Redford.

Meanwhile, there are still hard feelings.

"If he can do us some good, we would welcome him for that," said former Kane County engineer John Nelson. "But I wouldn't welcome him as a hero or give him the key to the city."

"I think he did us irreparable damage. But I would welcome him to make amends for some of the damage he did."

Truck Overtakes, Spills Drums Of Nuclear Waste

MONTEAGLE, Tenn. (AP) — Forty-six drums of radioactive nuclear waste spilled and broke open on Interstate 24 Sunday night when a truck overturned on Monteagle Mountain, civil defense officials said.

State troopers immediately closed the eastbound section of the interstate from Monteagle to South Pittsburg, a distance of about 30 miles. Traffic was detoured around the area.

No evacuation was ordered because the nearest population center is 30 miles away, said Danny Newton, assistant operations officer with the state Civil Defense Department in Nashville.

A mobile command post was set up near the accident site, about 70 miles southeast of Nashville, and a crew at the scene was measuring radiation levels, authorities said.

"We don't know, yet, just how bad it is," Newton said. "We're awaiting the arrival of a radiologist on the scene. It's not good; but it's not lethal. We do know it will take a lot of effort to clean it up."

Highway Patrol Sgt. Lloyd Baker in Chattanooga said the driver reported he was hauling 40,000 pounds of nuclear waste, identified as cobalt 60 and cesium 137, when the truck overturned about 8:15 p.m. EST.

An Erlanger Hospital spokesman, Fred Gault, identified the driver as Russell Binns, 22, of Conyers, Ga. Gault said Binns was not seriously injured and was not contaminated by the radiation.

Luke 9:25-34, The Living Bible

25 And what profit is there in gaining the whole world when it means forfeiting one's self?

26 When I, the Man of Glory, come in My glory and in the glory of the Father and the holy angels — I will be ashamed then of all who are ashamed of Me and My words now.

27 But this is the simple truth — some of these men standing here right now will not die until they have seen the Kingdom of God!"

28 Eight days later He took Peter, James and John with Him into the hills to pray.

29 And as He was praying, His face began to shine, and His clothes became dazzling white and blazed with light.

30 Then two men appeared and began talking with Him — Moses and Elijah!

31 They were splendid in appearance, glorious to see; and they were speaking of His death at Jerusalem, to be carried out in accordance with God's plan.

32 Peter and the others had been very drowsy and had fallen asleep. Now they woke up and saw Jesus covered with brightness and glory, and the two men standing with Him.

33 As Moses and Elijah were starting to leave, Peter, all confused and not even knowing what he was saying, blurted out, "Master, this is wonderful! We'll put up three shelters — one for You and one for Moses and one for Elijah!"

34 But even as he was saying this, a bright cloud formed above them; and terror gripped them as it covered them.

PLO Plans Retaliation For Killing Of Leader

By GEORGE A. KRIMSKY
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Palestine Liberation Organization enters its 15th year stronger than it has ever been and with its leaders convinced they must act tougher.

A hardline position adopted at the PLO's just-concluded meeting in Damascus, encouraged by a step-up in Israeli retaliation strikes, all but foreclosed any attempt to reach a political solution with Israel. The military option is being stressed now.

PLO leaders are making no secret they plan a major revenge operation for the assassination in Beirut Monday of Yasser

Utility Service Hits Rate Misconception

NEW YORK (AP) — It's a misconception to think that utilities automatically give a customer the most preferential rate available, according to a utility-rate consulting firm.

The selection of rates is the customer's responsibility, says the National Utility Service.

Another common misconception, it says, is that state public service commissions establish utility rates and compel companies to see that each customer gets the lowest rate.

State commissions are primarily concerned with the utility's total annual revenue, according to the consultant.

A law was passed in 1908 making it illegal for a woman to smoke in public in New York City.

Arafat's security chief, Ali Hassan Salameh, reputed mastermind of the 1972 Munich Olympics massacre of 11 Israeli sportsmen.

They first blamed "Israeli agents," but later said the killer was carrying a British passport in a new Israeli campaign to hit directly at PLO leaders, a policy shelved more than four years ago after a gun-and-bomb terror war between Palestinian and Israeli agents throughout the Middle East and Europe.

"The coming days will show that we have prepared to retaliate for such criminal operations," Arafat's political adviser, Hani el Hassan, told reporters in Damascus Tuesday. He did not elaborate.

Fresh artillery and rocket exchanges across the Lebanese-Israeli border in recent weeks, and a series of punishing raids from both sides, have fueled the mutual hatred.

While most informed observers are convinced the guerrillas will never be able to wrest a homeland from Israel by force, even with the help of Arab armies, the PLO leadership sees strategic benefits in the military option.

Raiders and bomb attacks, in their view: — Persuade Israel and the world that the PLO is a force to be reckoned with in any Mideast settlement such as the Egyptian-Israeli peace plan.

— Show the Israelis that they are always vulnerable as long as Palestinian rights are being denied.

— Heighten morale within the guerrilla movement itself, especially among the younger radicals.

A formidable aspect of the Palestinian movement is that it thrives on violent conflict with its enemy. The guerrillas gained new recruits and fresh arms after the Israeli invasion of southern Lebanon last March, and the losses were considered worth it. "Martyrs serve the cause," is a favorite PLO slogan.

The lot of two generations of Palestinians, who have increased in Lebanon alone from 400,000 to 600,000 within the past eight years, has not been significantly improved in festering refugee camps. Their impoverished condition, and the mutual agreement between the PLO and Arab regimes that Palestinians should not seek a better life outside the lost homeland, keeps the guerrilla fires burning.

In angry response to the Camp David accords, the Arab governments allocated a record $250 million a year for the PLO to continue its struggle. The sum is believed to be about twice as much as the PLO has had before.

A main purpose of the week-long session in Damascus was to solidify guerrilla ranks for the coming confrontation and determine how the money should best be invested.

The hoped-for unity was not fully achieved, with the hardline rejectionists staying outside the ruling PLO circle, but all of them agreed that the military conflict with Israel has to be intensified if a homeland is to be regained.

GETTING READY — Farmer Jerry Swetnam of Lorenzo works on the engine of his tractor Sunday morning as the tractorcade of farmers pause in Charlotte, N.C. on their way to Washington, D.C. Nine caravans are headed to the capital. The farmers are unhappy with congressional actions on farm issues. (AP Laserphoto)

Farmers Keep Moving

WYTHEVILLE, Va. (AP) — A farmers' tractorcade of more than 900 people and almost 400 tractors rolled out of this far southwest Virginia town this morning and resumed its trip toward Washington.

Under overcast skies and in temperatures in the mid-20s, the tractors began moving on schedule at 8:10 a.m. without incident. State Police headquarters here said.

"They're making pretty good time — but man, it's cold out there," a State Police spokesman said.

This tractorcade, one of nine heading for Washington to put in a bid with Congress for larger benefits for farmers, started Jan. 15 in Amarillo, Texas.

Today's leg of the trip was to be a relatively short one up Interstate 81, for the tractorcade was to stop overnight in Roanoke, about 100 miles away.

Tuesday it is to move on to Augusta County before making the final push for Washington.

It's the second trip in two years sponsored by the American Agricultural Movement, which hopes to have a caravan up to 16 miles long when all are joined together.

This particular group picked up participants from adjoining states as it made its way through Arkansas and Tennessee before arriving here Saturday for a week-end that included snow.

"We probably started with a selfish motive, to save our farms. But now we've developed into a group of people dedicated to saving our nation's economy as well as its farms," said AAM President Gerald McCathern.

The group is upset over farm prices and the low parity prices they are receiving for their goods. Parity is the relationship of the cost of farm products to other products on the market.

"In 1948, corn brought $2.29 a bushel. Today it is bringing only $2.25. Also in 1948, wheat was bringing 21 cents more a bushel and milo was up $1.13 cents from what I can get for it today," McCathern said.

"At the same time, my fuel prices have risen from 12 cents a gallon to almost 60 cents. Not only has the cost of gasoline and other fuels risen, but farm machinery, fertilizers, seed and personal items have skyrocketed," he added.

McCathern said as many as four times more protesters are flying to Washington to meet the group when their machines arrive sometime Friday.

The group hopes to persuade government officials to implement the full provisions of the 1977 farm bill passed by Congress, especially raising the loan rate for agricultural commodities to levels equal to 90 percent parity, said Russell Rowland of Poplar Bluff, Mo.

Inflation on agricultural land allowing members to borrow more on that "is the only thing that kept us going" without a return to the 90 percent parity that characterized U.S. agricultural policy from 1942 to 1952, Rowland said.

At least $5,000 damage was caused to just the trees in city parks, Walter Heard, superintendent of parks at the Parks and Recreation Department, estimates.

But the major problem in maintaining parks in 1978 was the dry hot summer. Heard said. "We only had one to 1.5 inches of rain during a four-month period."

The department "increased watering slightly and tried to water at the most appropriate times for the least moisture loss," Heard said.

Weather Damage Costs Run High

By RAYNIE HARDESTY
Avantache-Journal Staff

Last year's weather conditions were some of the worst experienced recently by South Plains residents, and area officials now predict that damage from the weather to area crops, roads and recreational areas will cost taxpayers millions of dollars.

Scorching summer temperatures and drought conditions, followed by heavy rains and temperatures which plummeted to new lows during the winter, means tax money will be needed this year to repair ruined road surfaces, provide relief for wiped-out farmers and repair or replace damaged vegetation in area parks.

Damage to road surfaces was the worst highway officials have seen in years because of temperatures which fluctuated from, for example, two degrees below zero on Feb. 18 to 73 degrees on Feb. 28.

"This is as severe a winter as we've had concerning freeze damage to highways, that I know of," said James King, district administrative engineer with the Texas Highway Department.

The widely varying temperatures caused "deeper and more severe damage to road surfaces" than usual, King said. "We're applying through the Austin (highway department) office for additional freeze-damage funds."

King reported that $11 million will be needed to put highways in Lubbock's 17-county district back into "desired condition," and that will require both rebuilding and resurfacing.

Repairs needed to put Loop 280 into good condition will cost more than $3 million alone, according to the engineer.

To simply patch potholes and do some leveling, however, would drop the cost to less than $2 million in the district, King said.

The department poured 400 tons of salt on Lubbock area highways and used 33,850 overtime hours for workers to treat highways for safer travel during December's storm, according to department figures.

Some $638,000 already has been spent in Lubbock County alone "to fill up potholes," King said.

The same storm in February which caused officials to call off school on Feb. 13 and prevented scheduled speakers from arriving for Science Fiction Week Mass Communications Week at Texas Tech, also killed trees and turf in Lubbock's 58 parks.

But the parks department still may have to remove some trees this year, and fertilize earlier with a treatment that will include a pre-emergence herbicide to prevent increased weeds resulting from the damaged turf.

Although the 23-day growing season of 1978 was 31 days longer than usual, the National Weather Service reports that "1978 was a dismal year for South Plains' agriculture, particularly for dry land farmers."

Less than three inches of rain fell during the months of June, July and August in 1978 and the Small Business Administration Disaster Relief office in Lubbock has approved 4,411 of 4,511 applications for drought relief on the South Plains, according to Bob Green, assistant branch manager.

Green also reports that applications for hail, rain and flood relief have been submitted from seven South Plains counties and that nine counties have submitted applications for relief of unusual conditions.

The low suffered by South Plains farmers in 1978 could be "classified as a heavy loss, but the region has suffered heavier losses," according to Don Ethridge, agricultural economics professor at Texas Tech University.

"If we just look at one crop and if we compare 1978 with 1977," Ethridge said, "1978 cotton production in this area of the state is going to come to about 1.8 million bales and in 1977 the same area produced 3 million bales. So, if you simply compare the two years, then you've got 1.2 million bales of cotton less than the previous year."

The Slim Gourmet

The nice thing about Chinese New Year is that it gives you a second chance to make good on those resolutions you made a month ago ... but never quite carried out. Better late than never! Especially if you resolved to make 1979 your year to slim down.

What better way than with Chinese food, Slim Gourmet-style! And since today begins "The Year of the Sheep" why not make tonight's low-calorie dinner a "stir-fry" skillet dish based on lamb?

These easy skillet recipes follow the Chinese principle of quick cooking, but without the fat or oil normally used in traditional stir-fry techniques. A tablespoon of fat or oil adds 110 to 125 calories.

If you can't find lamb steaks in your supermarket, these dishes would be equally delicious and low-calorie made with lean pork, cut from the leg (fresh hamsteak) or lean beef top-round steak.

LAMB AND CABBAGE, ORIENTAL-STYLE

1 lb. lamb, lean, cut from leg (lean pork or beef may be substituted)
1/4 cup soy sauce
2 tbsps. dry sherry, or other white wine

1 small head of cabbage (about 1 lb.)
1 1/2 cups tomato juice
2 tbsps. catsup
1 cup water, divided
1 tsp. cornstarch
Trim fat and bone from lamb. Cut the meat into thin strips, about 2 inches long. Combine the meat in a bowl with soy sauce and wine. Cover and refrigerate all day.

At dinner time, drain the meat and reserve the marinade. Quarter the cabbage and remove the core. Slice cabbage into thick shreds, about a half-inch wide. Then, slice shreds in the opposite direction, so the cabbage is in 2-inch strips.

Spray a large non-stick skillet or electric fry pan with cooking spray for no-fat frying. Sauté the lamb strips over high heat with no fat added, until lightly browned. When brown, add the cabbage, tomato juice, catsup, reserved marinade and a half-cup of water. Cover and cook 4 to 5 minutes, until lamb is cooked through and cabbage is tender-crispy. Stir cornstarch and reserved half-cup of water together until blended, then stir into the skillet. Cook and stir over moderate heat until sauce simmers and thickens. Serve immediately. Makes four servings, about 215 calories each with lamb (220 calories each with beef; 240 calories each with pork).

HOT 'N' SPICY LAMB 'N' PEPPERS, Szechuan-Style

1 lb. lamb, lean, cut from the leg (lean pork or beef may be substituted)
3 tbsps. soy sauce
1/4 cup dry sherry (or other wine) optional: 1 clove garlic, minced
1/4 cup pineapple juice, unseasoned
2 bell peppers (preferably 1 green, 1 red)
4 small onions, or 1 large Spanish onion
1 to 2 tbsps. liquid hot pepper sauce (or more, to taste)
1/4 cup cold water, divided
1 tsp. cornstarch
Trim fat and bone from lamb and cut the meat into 1-inch cubes. Combine with soy sauce, sherry, garlic and pineapple juice in a non-metallic bowl. Cover and refrigerate all day or overnight. At dinner time, seed peppers and cut into 1-inch squares. Peel onions and cut in half. Cut each half into quarters, then separate. (Or, peel and slice 1 large onion into chunks.)

Drain lamb and reserve marinade. Spray a large non-stick skillet or electric frying pan with cooking spray for no-fat frying. Sauté lamb cubes with no fat added until lightly browned. When brown, drain fat, if any, add reserved marinade, tomato juice, hot pepper sauce and a quarter-cup of cold water. Stir in peppers and onions.

Cover and simmer 4 to 5 minutes, until lamb is cooked through and vegetables are tender-crisp. Combine cornstarch with remaining water and stir into pan. Cook and stir until sauce is thick. Makes four servings, about 220 calories each with lamb (225 calories each with beef; 255 calories each with pork).

GOREN ON BRIDGE

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠Q8 ♥AK762 ♦952 ♣AJ7

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♥ Pass
3 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—If your nostrils are attuned, you will smell the fragrance of a slam. Besides a good five-card suit and an outside ace, you have the queen in partner's suit—a card that could be very important. A cue-bid of four clubs will express your intentions without by-passing the "safe" game contract.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AJ52 ♥J7 ♦AQ72 ♣94

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
Pass Pass 1 ♠ Pass
2 ♥ Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—Since partner is a passed hand, abandon all thoughts of game. Your object now is to play in the best part score possible, and you have just found that spot. Partner's response guarantees a five-card suit which, opposite your holding, makes two hearts a playable contract. Any attempt you might make to improve the contract could lead to disaster.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠KJ1087 ♥A6 ♦973 ♣842

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♥ 2 ♣ ?

What action do you take?

A.—If you had one more heart, you could afford to respond two hearts, but as it is, there is nothing you can do with any safety. A bid of two spades is forcing and is likely to propel your side to an uncomfortable level. You must pass and hope that partner can reopen the bidding.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠AK954 ♥AKQJ7 ♦8 ♣73

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ 2 ♣ Dbl. Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—Partner's double is for penalties, but it is not an absolute command. At this vulnerability, the 300 or so points we might receive will not be adequate compensation for a missed vulnerable game, or even slam. We would overrule partner and jump to three hearts to show our strong, distributional hand.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AKQ104 ♥93 ♦AJ8742

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
2 ♠ Pass 3 ♣ 3 ♥ ?

What action do you take?

A.—This is a very difficult problem. Without East's interference, we would have completed the description of our distribution by rebidding three spades. Now that action is fraught with danger because of the potential misfit. The more prudent course is to pass the decision around to partner, and hope that he comes up with the winning solution.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AK532 ♥K10 ♦J83 ♣AQ7

Partner opens the bidding with five diamonds. What action do you take?

A.—For his preemptive opening bid at the five-level, partner should have at least a solid eight-card suit. Thus, you have excellent prospects for a small slam, providing the opponents are unable to collect two fast heart tricks. To guard against this, bid six no-trump—if the opponents elect to lead hearts, it will be up to your king, not through it.

Q.7—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠KJ1085 ♥A982 ♦K983

Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one club. What action do you take?

A.—Offensively, your hand is quite powerful—it could easily produce a game in any one of three suits opposite a very minimal holding in partner's hand. To advise partner that you have support for any suit he can introduce, make a takeout double. If you bid one spade, you risk losing a fit in one of the red suits.

Q.8—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠KJ52 ♥AJ1076 ♦A ♣A8

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 NT Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Since you hold three aces and a king, your hand is actually worth more than its 17 high-card points. In addition, you have exceptional distributional values. Once partner has shown enough values to respond—6 points at least—we would insist on game, and would make our intentions known to partner by jumping to three hearts.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

On top of my typewriter this morning, I found a note from my husband that read, "Walrunch Hnchinty. Sol. Quea?????Jne 17."

"What's this mean?" I asked. "Can't you read my handwriting?" he snapped. "It says National Handwriting Week, Column idea? I thought maybe there was something in the fact that one day is being set aside to improve the writing habits of Americans and you could do a column on it."

"I write humor."

"What's that supposed to mean?" "It means if you had penned the Declaration of Independence, the United States today would stand for 'lfn, liverte, and the prsut of hapines.'"

"That's a fine way for someone to talk who makes her sevens look like ones."

"Says who?"

"Says the wrong number I got the other night from a phone message you left me."

"You try writing a phone message on a piece of waxed paper with a steak knife."

"I still think you could make a funny column about how you flunked ovals in the first grade and went on to give birth to children whose 8's look like 3's and who forget to close their G's."

"Don't forget they were sure by a man who loops his O's and who once wrote a check to the paper boy for $8.00!"

"At least I didn't write a note to the school when one of the kids was sick and have the nurse call to see what it was we had under control...his 'diarrhea' or his 'drain.'"

"You know, it might be nice to have just one day when everyone took the time to write legibly...dotting their I's and crossing their T's. I bet millions of dollars are spent each year on people making mistakes and not saying what they really mean. I'm sorry I snapped at you. I'm going to file this idea until next June 14 and maybe get the country to observe a day when we could all read what one another is writing."

"What June 14?" asked my husband. "National Handwriting Day was Jan. 23. See? That's an A which you mistook for a U and the 4 is a 3 and is nowhere near what you thought it was and who would listen to a woman who can't even read English anyway?"

BRUNCH SCRAMBLE

4 eggs, lightly beaten
2 tbsp. water
1/4 cup chopped avocado
1/4 cup chopped canned green chiles
Salt and pepper
Butter
4 slices raisin bread, toasted and buttered
2 tomatoes, thinly sliced
4 wedges avocado
4 slices bacon, cooked
Blend first 4 ingredients, adding salt and pepper to taste. In small skillet, scramble egg mixture in heated butter until set. Arrange 4 slices raisin bread toast on four plates. Cover with tomato slices. Spoon scrambled eggs on top, dividing equally. Top with avocado wedges and bacon. Serve hot. Makes 4 servings.

PRETTY PEASANT LOOK — This open mesh mohair sweater in winter white with a drawstring neck and bottom offers a pretty peasant look. Combined with copper French flared cut pants, this outfit will brighten any winter day.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Over the years you have advised wives not to phone their husbands at work unless it's absolutely necessary. I disagree.

Nothing brightens a father's day like hearing, "Hi, Dada," from his 2-year-old son whom he hasn't seen for two days because he's had to work overtime.

As for management complaining because it wastes company time, management would be wise to encourage 10-minute "sunshine" calls. It does wonders for their employees' morale.

However, there should be a few rules: Emphasize that your call is not an emergency so your husband isn't interrupted in the middle of something important, if he doesn't work near a phone, put a quarter in his lunchbox so he can call you.

Also, never tell him what the kids did wrong or anything that might upset him. Keep it light and cheery. He'll love it. My husband does.

Bette M.

Dear Bette: Your husband may love your "sunshine calls," but I'll bet his boss doesn't. In business, time is money. Say your husband makes $6 an hour and you babble away with him for 10 minutes a day, that's $1 out of the boss's pocket. If he has 1,000 employees, each making $6 an hour, and each taking 10 minutes a day to discuss domestic trivia, it costs the boss $1,000 a day!

If you MUST chat daily, let hubby call you on his lunch hour. A guy who's on the phone is not on the job — unless he's a bookie.

DEAR ABBY: I am an 11-year-old girl whose parents are divorced. I live with my mother. Mom has her boyfriend living with her and everybody knows they aren't married.

My problem is this. I have a best friend I'll call Debbie. Debbie's parents will let her come to my house and stay all day, but they won't let her sleep overnight. What's the difference?

Puzzled In Las Cruces

Dear Puzzled: Debbie's parents probably fear that if they allow her to spend the night in a home where an unmarried couple are sleeping together, Debbie might think they approve of it — which they do not.

DEAR ABBY: I have a gripe I would like to air. Just before Christmas, I received a Christmas card with my newspaper, "Merry Christmas from Johnny Jones, your newspaper carrier."

I also got a Christmas card, "From Elmer Smith, your postman." And another one, "From George Brown, your garbage collector."

Abby, I never see any of these people during the year, but there were times when I would have liked to see them to ask why my newspaper was late again, or why I find so many letters in my box that aren't addressed to me. Or why my garbage cans are never put back where they belong!

I don't mind tipping for extra service, but it bugs me to get a "bill" for mediocre service that I've already paid too much for.

Steamed In Palo Alto

Dear Steamed: Those aren't greetings, they're warnings.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. Please enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Actress Claims Woman May Fill Future Vacancy On U.S. Supreme Court Bench

By REBECCA MOREHOUSE

Women's News Service
NEW YORK — If there should be a Supreme Court vacancy, will President Carter name a woman to fill it?

Jane Alexander thinks yes. She plays the court's first woman justice in "First Monday in October," a new drama by Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee.

"The president would have the wrath of a lot of women on his neck if he didn't," said the actress who played Eleanor Roosevelt on TV. "There should be a woman on the Supreme Court. I think Carter will appoint a woman if there's a vacancy while he's in office."

Henry Fonda plays opposite her in "First Monday in October," at the Majestic Theater. The play opened last winter at the Kennedy Center in Washington.

"It was a huge success, Washington loves plays about itself," she said. "Chief Justice Burger and Justice Powell saw it, then most of the other justices filtered in. I said to Burger, 'The next appointee must be a woman,' and he said, 'First, there has to be a vacancy.' The justices liked the show."

"Justice William Douglas, who no longer sits on the court, gave a reception for Hank and me in the Supreme Court. It was very impressive, everybody came. Eric Sevareid said, 'This has never happened, a party for actors in the Supreme Court.'"

"I went several times to see the court in action. And I kept reading the Constitution, that's what the justices do."

Drama critics are the Supreme Court of Broadway, and "First Monday" got a reversal from most of them. Lackluster and plodding, it is an idea whose time, in the playwrights' minds, has not come. Miss Alexander plays a conservative, Fonda a liberal; they clash but no sparks fly.

Her appearance is much changed by the short, slightly waved, ash-blond wig she wears over her straight, long brown hair. "I thought it was right for the part."

She's from California, she plays tennis, and she'd want short hair.

"I think the first woman appointed to the court will be a liberal. There's a number of qualified women. The justices I spoke to said they favor a woman on the court, they're very gracious men."

"I'm an ardent feminist but I'm not a political animal. I did go to the women's conference in Houston, and I am interested in the passage of the Equal Rights Amendment."

She is married to Edwin Sherin, who directed "First Monday." They met in Washington at the Arena Stage, where she acted for three years. She has a son, Jason, from her first marriage, and three step-sons, "who live with their mother and visit us on weekends."

Her first Broadway success was achieved in "The Great White Hope," which originated at the Arena Stage. She received a Tony Award for her performance, and an Oscar nomination in the screen version.

"I suppose I've had the most national recognition from the Eleanor Roosevelt role — in 'Eleanor and Franklin' and 'The White House Years.' So many people saw the films on TV and loved them."

EXPERTISE, VERSATILITY IN HAIR, BEAUTY CARE — Shown at the popular Elisabeth's Swedish Hair Design, 4630 50th St., is (seated) owner Elisabeth Pyron and staffmembers Gay Sperry and (standing) Tina Ramirez, Anita Shearer, Theresa Cox and Angel Smallwood. It is a "hand picked" staff at this better salon now introducing innovations in latest hair fashions.

Elisabeth's Introduces Retro Spring-Summer Hair Fashions

Exciting new hair fashions are here for spring-summer '79, at Elisabeth's Swedish Hair Design, 4630 50th St., Suite 106, phone 792-4688.

This has been assured in large by the recent return of owner Elisabeth Pyron and staffmember Anita Shearer from Las Vegas where they reviewed Retro Hair, the fabulous new hair fashion collection, at the National eBeauty Show.

Retro Hair was designed by the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association (NHCA) in response to the contemporary woman's renewed interest in looking glamorous and feminine. The soft curls, gentle waves and elegant shapes of Retro Hair echo the styles and glamorous fashions of Hollywood's golden era.

The new hair fashions can be styled for any length of hair but is particularly adaptable to the shorter lengths. The rich luster of well-conditioned, precision cut Retro Hair shows off the shortest styles to the best advantage.

Extremely versatile, Retro Hair displays fashion's current emphasis on broad distinctions between day, weekend and after-dark fashion appearances, offering today's woman dramatically different looks for every side of her life.

In addition to reviewing the latest hair fashions, the local group was on hand for a national fashion presentation which featured Retro Hair coordinated with spring-summer designer fashions and original Edith Head motion picture costumes.

Really, Elisabeth's is outstanding, and the new Retro Hair capabilities do not detract from this reputation! (It is a pretty salon, too!)

Opened over two years ago by Elisabeth Pyron, a Jessie Lee graduate who later served as stylist at the Jessie Lee Salon, the shop has met with remarkable and growing acceptance.

A qualified and handpicked group comprises the staff.

A new Dermodyn facial machine is now part of the shop's facilities, and this steam machine gives a deep cleaning facial. Staffmember Angel Smallwood is specialist with this equipment, and she also offers manicures.

Others at Elisabeth's, all tremendously well qualified, include Tina Ramirez, Theresa Cox (offering manicures, too) Gay Sperry, Anita Shearer and Elisabeth.

Elisabeth's is open Mondays through Saturdays.

Superior nail extensions, day or after-dark make-up, and a complete line of make-up are among the many services here.

Both men and women customers are welcomed . . . so.

"For a really exhilarating experience, for modern hair care by skilled, proven staffmembers, for all the best in beauty services and the enjoyment of a pretty salon, acquaintance with Elisabeth's Swedish Hair Design at earliest convenience is recommended."

Davis R.V. Service Center Readies February Sale, Mall Show, New Items

"Get ready for Spring!" David R.V. Service Center makes it easy in several significant ways, including:

(1) See the big display arranged by Davis this week at South Plains Mall, with Avion, Wilderness and Golden Falcon units from the firm displayed. (See four Avion trailers, a 17-ft. tandem-axle Wilderness trailer and a Golden Falcon fifth wheel unit among the exhibits arranged by Davis in the R.V. extravaganza at the mall.

Clearance Sale

(2) Commencing Feb. 1 (Thursday) Davis R.V. Service Center, at 220 Paris Ave., near downtown Lubbock, kicks off its Storewide Inventory Clearance that is an annual event traditionally seen by appreciative customers as a real money saver. During this Clearance, all accessories in the big store are marked at a whopping 20 per cent off!

New Products

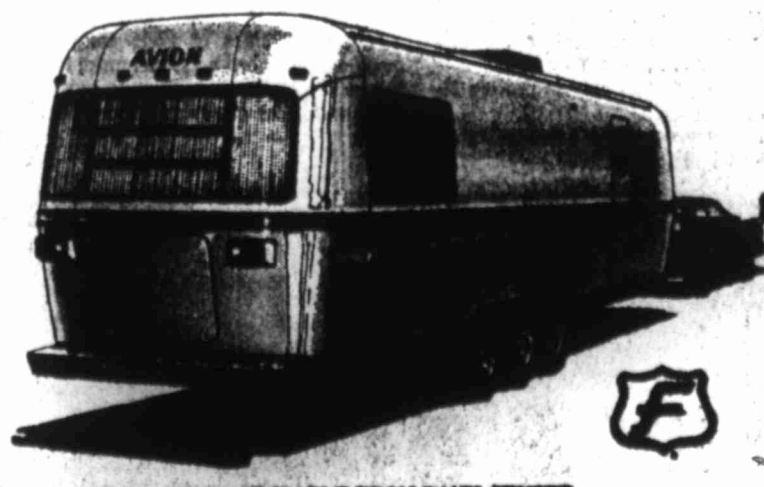

(3) Davis keeps up with needs and trends in the R.V. field, and stocks accordingly. Example of this is stocking of running boards for vans and pick-ups, even for sliding-door vans.

And now is a great time to ready one's present R.V. unit for spring and summer trouble-free enjoyment, too. Let the Davis brand of service be of special benefit in this situation. "Davis knows how."

hicles) is understandable, too. It is a travel trailer for all seasons, with built-in quality and convenience. Produced for families, it features plenty of comfort plus cargo and storage for all of one's vacation belongings, and at a modest price.

Golden Falcon trailers have met wide acclaim, and Davis is proud to present models of these, too. Built and backed by Skyline, Golden Falcon models have "what you want and need." See them and compare.

Check Davis now for accessories, storage, service and new units. Any make of R.V. unit is serviced.

Dubose Provides Full-Service Garage, Machine Shop In City

"Satisfaction" is the big word and very real situation at Dubose Automotive & Machine Shop, 1520 19th St., phone 765-8429.
Offering a full-service garage and machine shop at one convenient location, Dubose emphasizes that "our goal is to satisfy every customer, providing quality parts and service at least expense. We do what is needed, no more. If we find your auto needs additional repairs, we contact you before doing more than you expected."

Isn't this the type shop one can appreciate?
Major and minor tune-ups are a specialty and are guaranteed for 6,000 miles or six months with limited warranty.

(Now would be an excellent time to see Dubose for tune-up to ready the auto for post-winter enjoyment as well as present efficiency of its operation.)

Local Operation
Mr. and Mrs. Dubose (Doug and Nancy) opened the machine shop in January of 1977, assuming ownership of the garage soon afterward. Both are lifelong Lubbock and immediate area residents, and Doug has literally been in the mechanical field all his life. They are the kind of folks on whom one can depend, folks to enjoy knowing and patronizing.

Capable staff members are in the machine shop and garage. Not only does Dubose do work for the individual, but also for other garages and dealerships.

The automotive machine shop can handle any machine work for auto, truck and irrigation engines.

Capabilities Emphasize
This shop specializes in steel sleeved Vega short blocks, being among the first to offer this rebuilding service.

Dubose also has the ability to bore small cylinders with its new equipment, enabling boring of lawn mower cylinders, motorcycles, etc.

Other services include valve grinding, valve guide knurling and valve seat and guides replacement, resurfacing of heads and engine blocks, engine block boring, piston pin fitting, rod resizing, vat cleaning, brake drum grinding, disc rotor grinding, crankshaft exchange, Vega short blocks and valve work, kwik-way bead blasting, and more.

Won't you visit us at first opportunity? Remember, we guarantee your satisfaction at Dubose Automotive & Machine Shop, 1520 19th St.

Sue Flanagan is administrator; Jimmie Kelley, LVN, is director of nursing; and Janet Hutton is program director.

Designed To Serve
Qualifying for old age assistance and welfare as an intermediate care facility, Type 3, Quaker Villa provides 96 beds, and the exceptional care is correctly hinted by the large staff of some 60 employees, and the spacious facilities.

Six LVN's are on duty to provide 24-hour-a-day care.

All residents must have doctors' referral, and all medications are by doctors' orders.

No extended contract period is involved, and residence can be for any length of time, in no instance necessarily permanent.

Planned activities are very much a part of the program, including games, entertainment and numerous craft pursuits. Parties are arranged at frequent intervals, and community involvement is encouraged.

Sister Facility
Attention also is directed to the University Villa care facility, also under the same ownership, but located at 2400 Quaker Ave.

Physical facilities at each, and the qualified, interested personnel make residence at either a very pleasant experience, more than a few "who know" will attest.

Business & Industrial Review

Coppercreek MINE

A NAME TO BE REMEMBERED — WHEN FINE FOOD IS THE CONSIDERATION

Coppercreek Mine In Monterey Excels In Steaks, Wide Menu

"Have you enjoyed the finest char-broiled steaks in the Southwest?"

"Or, we could say, have you dined at the Coppercreek Mine?"

Located at 50th Street and Flint Avenue (Monterey Center), Coppercreek Mine is locally owned and operated, and though affording a wide and choice menu, it takes special pride in its steak offering.

Winter hours presently are observed: 11 a.m. until 2 p.m., and from 5 until 10 p.m., Mondays through Fridays, with Saturday hours 5-10, closed Sunday.

Whether selection there is a prime rib, top sirloin, filet, pepper steak, T-bone or other steak order, Mexican food, deep fried shrimp, chicken bits, fried catfish, burgers and sandwiches or choice of beverages, Coppercreek Mine serves to invite return visits, time and again!

Luncheon Specials

Luncheon specials are afforded Mondays through Fridays, 11 until 2, with a dinner steak (6 oz. club) at a modest $3.25; chicken fried steak at $2.50, chicken bits at $2.50, steak fingers, $2.50, cheese enchiladas, also $2.50, and beef enchiladas at $2.75.

'Folks You Know'

Curtis Campbell and Ken Garner are partners and active operators of Coppercreek Mine.

It is pointed out that Frank Lee is on hand as charbroiler. Frank is well known as a steak specialist over the years in Lubbock; he was the original cook at the Hickory Inn, later serving at the Gridiron, then coming to Coppercreek Mine upon the present owner's purchase of this Monterey Center eating establishment last July 1.

Fully Staffed

Also on hand in the spacious facility are four waitresses, two cooks, two bartenders and two cocktail waitresses.

Banquet facilities are provided, with one room accommodating 90, another for 30. A "Mother Lode" lounge is provided, as is a really great salad bar.

Partner Curtis Campbell is a former Lubbock and area coach, having taught at Evans Junior High School in Lubbock and at Olton, Levelland and Roosevelt. A graduate of WTSC (Canyon), and of Texas Tech, Curtis is a nine-year Lubbock resident. Partner Ken Garner is a Lubbock resident of over 20 years, and marks years of service here in the real estate and insurance fields.

Both Ken and Curtis, widely known in the area, are anxious to renew acquaintance, make new friends and to serve you at Coppercreek Mine, a really distinctive establishment, phone 799-4379, in Monterey Center, whether for a lunch, evening out with family and friends, or for banquet service. Reservations are enabled.

"We want to prove that we have the finest charcoal broiled steaks in the entire Southwest . . . may we have the opportunity?"

Lee's Custom Jewelers Tells Appropriate Valentine Gifts

"For your Valentine . . . why consider less than a gift of jewelry?"

"And where better could one select a cherished remembrance than at Lee's Custom Jewelers, 2115 50th St.!"

Something for all ages is evident in the selective and attractive displays . . . from quality diamond jewelry to watches and bands.

Whatever the choice, one may be sure that "quality" has been the foremost consideration of Lee's, passing on this quality at sensible prices.

Lee's Custom Jewelers, in Oakwood Center, has a very good selection of mountings, with equally impressive choice in diamonds and colored stones.

Gift certificates are available at all times.

A very good selection of Longines, Wittnauer, Seiko and Technos fine watches is stocked.

Custom-made jewelry is one of the shop's specialties, and there still is time to have custom jewelry orders completed by Valentines Day, but only if one hurries!

Repairs

Watch repair receives expert attention at Lee's Custom Jewelers, with qualified watchmakers including owner Lee Tyler Jr. on the job. All repair work is done right in the store, with none "sent out," thus assuring both personal and expert attention.

Master Charge and Visa purchase are welcomed.

Lee Tyler Jr., a Lubbock resident over a decade, purchased the firm about eight years ago, and he and his wife, Willene, had a staff dedicated to quality merchandise and finest service.

"For jewelry items sure to please, and for watch service and repair (of all major brands), one can turn with confidence to Lee's Custom Jewelers, phone 744-4814, in Oakwood Center, Lubbock."

5-Point Beauty Salon Posts February Specials, Tells Senior Citizen Days

ASSURE FINEST BEAUTY CARE — Pictured at the 5-Point Beauty Salon is owner Faye Butler (center, standing) with staffers Frances Sylvester, Judy McKnight, and (seated) Kim Jones and Loveta Pritchard.

February specials have been posted throughout February by the entire staff at 5-Point Beauty Salon, 5103 34th St.!

During this period, regular $25 Uniperm are offered at a lesser $20 including shampoo and set.

Also, with each shampoo, set and haircut, a free conditioner will be given.

It is pointed out that on every Monday and Tuesday, senior citizens are given special consideration, with a regular $7 shampoo and set priced at $5 on these days every week for senior citizens.

For expert service and for appealing prices including the just-announced February specials, acquaintance with the 5-Point Beauty Salon, 5103 34th St., is invited and recommended.

Established for 18 years, the shop in southwest Lubbock has gained an enviable following during these years. Two of the operators, Loveta Pritchard and Frances Sylvester, have been there for more than a dozen of these years.

Faye Butler, a 12-year Lubbock resident, has been owner since April, and customer comments have been most favorable. The spacious shop has been newly decorated as one of the customer considerations.

Jessie Lee Graduates

All operators at the 5-Point Beauty Salon are Jessie Lee graduates. These include Frances Sylvester, Judy McKnight, Kim Jones and Loveta Pritchard.

All beauty services are afforded, including haircuts for both men and women.

Uniperm are one of the specialties, and Redken products are used within the shop and also made available at retail.

The salon is open Mondays through Saturdays and early and late appointments can be arranged.

EXPERIENCE

- COUNTS
- Mazda has produced piston engines for 48 years.
 - Mazda produces more cars per year than AMC, Honda, Volvo and British England combined.
 - Mazda produced 804,000 cars in 1978. More than Honda has produced since their existence.
 - Mazda has the #1 rated EPA pickup in the U.S.
 - Mazda RX-7 is one of the 10 best cars in the world (Road and Track).
 - Mazda pioneered the rotary engine, and Detroit engineers predicted it is one of three engines that can meet all 1983 standards, the other two are Sterling Steam & Turbine.
 - Mazda sales increased 42% in Dec. 1978 outselling Fiesta by 2181 units.
 - Mazda has 14 assembly plants, 4 distributors and over 600 dealers to serve you.

The Mazda GLC is the finest quality most dependable economy car I have ever seen

Young Man Questioned In Rape Of Area Teen

Police questioned a 20-year-old Lubbock man in connection with the alleged rape of a young Petersburg woman Saturday night. However, no arrests had been made by late this morning.

The 17-year-old victim told police that she had just finished her shift at Texas Instruments and was waiting for her ride when a man drove up and offered her a ride home about 7 p.m.

When she declined the man's offer, the suspect told her to "get in the car or I'll knock you out." The victim said the man grabbed her, forced her into the car and drove to the Estacado High School parking lot, where he ripped off her clothes and raped her.

After the attack, the woman fled the vehicle, reports indicate. She was treated and released at Health Sciences Center Hospital.

In a reported Sunday night robbery, a 20-year-old man told police two bandits knocked him to the ground in front of a club in the 500-block of North University Avenue and made off with his wallet, containing $18 cash and credit cards and his checkbook.

Jimmy S. Stockton of Estelline said he was in the club's parking lot about 9 p.m. when two tall black men confronted him. He said one of the suspects threw him to the ground and then took his wallet and checkbook.

The suspect's companion then reportedly pulled the victim's pants down and dragged him between two parked cars. The men fled in a large, gold car.

Mary Wyckoff Moody, 25, of 3317 31st St. told police she was at a Main Street bar about midnight Sunday when a man came up to her, poured beer on her head and then struck her in the face with an empty beer can.

Police were looking for a 25-year-old man in connection with the assault. The woman was not seriously injured, reports show.

Four Mexican-American men were arrested about 5 a.m. today after police stopped them on Parkway Drive and questioned them about a motorcycle in their car trunk.

The men, all in their early 20s, said they did not know who owned the motorcycle or where it came from. They were booked on suspicion of theft after one of the suspects reportedly admitted, after further questioning, to taking the scooter from a residence in the 1600-block of Avenue R.

Richard Frederick Haug of 1922 28th St. said he was gone from home about a week, and when he returned at 9:45 p.m.

Sunday, he found $10,864 in household goods taken in a break-in at his residence.

A burglar's loot was cut drastically when his victim came home unannounced about 8 p.m. Sunday.

Carl H. Willingham of 2406 28th St. said he returned home to find his house lights on, the glass front door broken and the front gate open. The arrival apparently prompted the burglar to jump over the back fence with about $400 worth of Willingham's property.

However, police found $1,100 in sterling silver, jewelry and a French clock, dumped in the back yard near the fence.

Charlotte Rainey of 5527-B 34th St. said she was visiting at a nursing home in the 2400-block Quaker Avenue about 6:45 p.m. Sunday when someone stole her purse, containing $70 cash, a wedding ring and other jewelry, totaling about $1,100.

She said she had placed her purse on a chair near the front door, and when she returned about 45 minutes later, the purse was gone.

Phillip P. Morrow, 27, of 3708 Elgin Ave. told police that someone removed $4,235 worth of goods, including a stereo system, guitar and coin collection, from his residence sometime between 4:30 p.m. and 8:10 p.m. Saturday.

Mike Tunstall, 20, of 1914 18th St. lost $4,055 worth of property to thieves sometime between 3:30 a.m. and 2 p.m. Sunday. The stolen goods included a disco system, wallet, clothing and typewriter.

Cullen Lee Taylor of 1707 E. Second Place complained that someone made off with his $1,000 color TV from his home sometime between 1:30 p.m. and 7:50 p.m. Saturday.

Building contractor Clifford Davis said $1,621 worth of power tools were taken from a building under construction in the 6500-block of Slide Road sometime between 7:30 p.m. Saturday and 8:15 a.m. Sunday.

In a reported theft of a motor vehicle, Ed Calvin Wharton Jr. told police that someone drove off in his 1975 Ford Granada early Sunday, while it was parked in a parking lot in the 2200-block of Avenue X.

A New Deal man said he was walking near the intersection of Parkway Drive and Quirt Avenue early Sunday when someone hit him on the back of his head and took his money.

Manuel Perez, 20, told police he lost $30 in the incident.

Leo Hatfield, owner of an apartment complex at 2001 Ninth St., said break-in artists removed $700 worth of equipment from his office sometime late Saturday or early Sunday.

Burglars took a tape player and radio, valued at $550, from Marcus Blann's home at 2510 60th St. sometime between 6:15 p.m. and 7:15 p.m. Saturday.

Car Owners Refuse GAY License Plates

DAVENPORT, Iowa (AP) — A county treasurer from Iowa who said license plates with the letters GAY on them might be popular in California is not popular in California himself. "You have an irresponsible mouth," said one of many letters he received from the Golden State.

Earlier this month, about 1,000 of Iowa's new license plates were issued with the three-letter prefix GAY. More than 130 vehicle owners refused them, apparently because the word "gay" is sometimes used to mean "homosexual." Scott County Treasurer William Cusack said then, "Out in California, I'm sure there is a waiting line for GAY plates. But not in Iowa."

110,000 Persons Visit Museum

More than 110,000 persons were visitors to the Museum of Texas Tech University in 1978.

Museum officials said that 110,577 visited the Museum and 43,556 visited the Ranching Heritage Center, a 12-acre outdoor exhibit depicting the history of ranching in the American West.

The Museum and the Ranching Heritage Center both are open year round, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 1 to 5 p.m. on Sunday.

Guides are in the Ranching Heritage Center houses on Sunday afternoons.

The Moody Planetarium, also a part of the Museum, presents public programs at 3 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays.

There is a nominal charge for touring the Ranching Heritage Center and attending planetarium shows.

California Chemist To Speak At Meet

The South Plains Section of the American Chemical Society will meet at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in Room 5 of the Chemistry Building at Texas Tech University.

Dr. Donald T. Sawyer of the department of chemistry at the University of California—Riverside will speak on "The Chemistry of Biological Manganese."

Dinner will be at 6 p.m. at La Crepe Suette Restaurant, 2420 Broadway. Phone reservations for the dinner can be made by calling Judy Leuty at 809-742-2081.

SOARING HILL — Tech's Ben Hill goes back door for a layup against Baylor. He and the rest of his Red Raider teammates will be struggling to stay in the Southwest Conference race tonight when they host TCU. (Staff Photo by Milton Adams)

Tech Trying To Stay Alive

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
Question: What's it called when a swarming Texas Tech defense forces the University of Arkansas to turn the ball over six times during the final 10 minutes of play?

Answer: Pressed ham.
Although the full-court press worked almost to perfection against the Hogs Saturday night in Fayetteville, that doesn't necessarily mean coach Gerald Myers will be calling on it tonight when the Raiders host the TCU Horned Frogs in a SWC basketball contest.

"Just because it worked against Arkansas doesn't mean it's going to do the same against TCU," said Myers. "You really never know how a team is going to react under pressure. It certainly surprised me the way Arkansas turned it over the way they did."

The 7:30 p.m. contest in the Lubbock Coliseum begins the second half of conference play for the Raiders. Henceforth, it's all downhill.

Despite a late rally which saw the Raiders reel off 11 unanswered points and cut a 12-point UA advantage to only one with 3:36 left in the game, Tech wound up losing the matchup 63-57 due to some pressure free throw shooting by the Hogs.

At the same time down in Fort Worth, the Hogs were doing their damndest to upset Baylor, failing in their attempt, though, 77-69.

The loss dropped TCU to last in the conference, all by its lonesome, with an 0-7 mark (5-12 overall). Tech enters the contest with a 4-4 SWC record, sitting all alone in fifth place. The Raiders are 13-4 for the year.

Despite the loss, Myers feels the club is still in good shape as far as the race to the SWC tournament goes.

"We still have an opportunity to do well in the league," said Myers, adding that the Raiders will try desperately to finish in a position to gain a homecourt advantage when the tourney does roll around in March.

TCU coach Tim Somerville probably has other things on his mind than the tourney — namely his starters.

Against Baylor, Somerville suspended starters Steve Scales and Jeff Vincent and reserve Kenny Haynes for the evening because of breaking Friday night's curfew. And right now, the TCU boys are unsure if the pair will make the trip to Lubbock tonight.

Scales, a 6-6 senior from Chicago is the Frogs' second-leading scorer in SWC play with an 8.4 per game average, while Vincent, a 6-3 junior from Atlanta is hitting a 5.8 clip in conference.

With the duo out, Jon Mansbury and Ed Wineinger stepped in and fired away scoring 17 and 22 points respectively. Wineinger, averaging only 2.4 points in SWC play, hit 11-of-15 shots from the field from the 20-to-25 foot range.

The Raiders no doubt remember Mansbury since he had 24 points in the earlier outing in a game Tech won 99-66.

Along with Wineinger and Mansbury also drawing starting nods are Scott Blackwell (6-1), Larry Prevett (6-9) and Jim Hund (6-6). Blackwell and Hund are the guards, Prevett the center and Wineinger and Mansbury the forwards.

Ty Thompson, who hit 10 points in the first half against Baylor, was lost for an indefinite time after suffering an ankle injury Saturday night.

Although TCU has had its problems, Myers and the Raiders aren't taking them lightly.

"Any team in the league can beat you," said Myers. "Just look at what Rice did to us. TCU is capable of doing the same thing, too."

Myers is expected to start Joe Hunter at center, Ralph Brewster and Ben Hill at the forwards, and guards Cholt Hinton and Kent Williams.

Brewster was the leading scorer against Arkansas with 13 points. Hill followed with 11 points, earning all five of his attempts from the floor and his only free throw.

In other SWC contests tonight, Texas A&M travels to Baylor, Houston is at Texas and SMU entertains Rice.

Chaps Hope To Rebound

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
Fresh from snatching defeat from the jaws of victory, the Lubbock Christian College basketball team takes on Jarvis Christian tonight and Tuesday night in a pair of home games.

"I've seen some games lost weird, but it's been a while," coach Larry Hays said of the 75-74 cliffhanger the Chaps gave to McMurry Saturday night.

Twice they seemed to have the game won, a two-point lead with only three seconds left in regulation and a one-point lead with six seconds left in overtime.

But mistakes at key times and the cool hand of McMurry guard Donnie Ray Cruse left Lubbock Christian with its 12th loss of the year against six wins.

Hays said he did see some things that encouraged him in the loss.

"There were some things I liked. Our guard play is still improving. We've got four guards doing a job now. There were some good things but when you lose it's hard to see them sometimes."

According to Hays, LCC is going to need all the guard play it can get over the next two days. Jarvis Christian, a team the Chaps whipped 97-86 just before Christmas break, is small but quick.

The Bulldogs' tallest players are 6-4, and they start a 6-3 post man and a 6-2 forward. But evidently they get the job done. Curtis Harris, the post, scored 16 points against LCC in the last meeting and Harrell Freeman, the forward, scored 18.

Leading all Jarvis scorers was Donnie Alexander, a 6-1 guard, he popped in 22 points.

"Their strength is at one of the guards," Hays said. "That guy (Alexander) is one of the best we've seen all year as far as one-on-one goes. He's not as good as somebody like Cruse for fundamentals but he goes a little wild sometimes and that hurts."

Hays said the Bulldogs did a lot of things the Chaps hate to see, things that a quick team does naturally.

"They'll press us, they'll do a lot of the things that give us problems. Then they'll drop back in a zone and make us shoot over them."

"Our guards are going to have to have good teams, not only offensively but defensively on their guards too."

That puts the pressure on starting guards Bruce Carver and Les Lierman. Carver's the one that missed the key free shots against McMurry.

"But I'll tell you one thing," Hays said. "If we were in the same situation again, I'd just as soon have him up there. He's going to come through more often than not."

Carver, Lierman and Bill McGee are all capable outside shooters. The other guard, Marshall Smith, is more of a traditional point man, bringing the ball up court and penetrating the key.

In the last meeting between LCC and Jarvis, Carver and quick forward Brian Fortner were the leading scorers with 23 points apiece. Fortner was also the leading rebounder with 15.

Fortner was also the leading scorer and boarder Saturday night, the only time that's happened since the Jarvis Christian game. He scored 19 and pulled down 9.

The team's leading scorers and rebounders over the season are still Keith Gardner and Kevin Wharton. Gardner still leads both categories with 28 points and 11.9 boards. Wharton's averaging 13.1 points and 11.1 rebounds.

Both suffered through tight games Saturday night against the taller Indians. Gardner got 17 points but only eight rebounds while Wharton was held to six points and seven boards before fouling out with seven minutes showing.

Closing The Books

SUPER BOWL XIII is just another page in NFL history now and the trophy will remain forever in Pittsburgh, unless Steeler owner Art Rooney loses it in a poker game at one of those league spring meetings at Honolulu or Acapulco. The Pittsburghers scored more points than Dallas, so they get the loot.

Before closing the books on the 1978 season, however, there are a couple of things that need to be set straight. There has been some criticism of the Cowboys because of their howls over a controversial penalty in the fourth quarter of the Super Slugfest. A few folks accuse the 'Pokes of always blaming the zebras for their defeats.

Not so, as the record clearly shows. Dallas lost four games during the regular 78 season, with nary a complaint about the officiating.

But the Dallas organization, from President Tex Schramm down to the youngest rookie, hollered robber over that crucial flag in SB XIII. They had plenty of support from those in the press box and on the playing field, too. Some of the top sportswriters in the country called it grand larceny and the key play of the game.

One famous Chicago columnist wrote that it was "an awesomely lousy call that destroyed the Cowboys."

So this whole thing isn't something that Dallas dreamed up as an alibi. It is there on film for all to see.

THE COWBOYS PLAYED for years in championship games with no hassles about the officiating, which some choose to forget. They lost to Green Bay in the 1966 NFL title game when tackle Jim Boeke moved before the snap and cost the Cowboys an almost certain touchdown that would have tied the game. Boeke got the boos, not the zebra who threw the flag.

In the "Ice Bowl" game at Green Bay in 1967, the Cowboys said it was unfair for any team to have to play in 13 below zero weather. Commissioner Pete Rozelle agreed and said he would postpone any future title game where conditions were that severe.

Dallas lost two very frustrating playoff games to Cleveland in 1968 and '69, but there was no blast at the officiating. Fans merely grumbled about the 'Pokes weird streak of bad luck in the big games and wondered if they ever would get to the promised land.

It wasn't until the Cowboys reached Super Bowl V following the 1970 season that the Dallasites began to have real trouble with the zebras. It was in that classic, fans may recall, where a striped shirt named Jack Fette awarded a Dallas fumble to Baltimore while three layers of bodies still were on top of the ball. It cost the Cowboys a touchdown that would have clinched a victory.

Ernie Stautner, the tough ex-Steeler defensive tackle who has been in the NFL for 29 years as player and coach, still says that was the worst call he ever has seen. And Ernie isn't the complaining kind.

THE COWBOYS HAD angry words for the Steelers and the zebras after Super

NHL STARS PROBABLE
UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — The National Hockey League's top scoring Trotter line and seven players from the Stanley Cup champion Montreal Canadiens probably will form the nucleus of Team NHL against the Soviet national squad for the Challenge Cup. In the next-to-last step of a lengthy all-star selection process that included fan balloting, General Manager Bill Torrey of Team NHL announced a 32-man lineup heavily sprinkled with stars who have experience playing against the Soviets. The three-game series between Team NHL and the Soviet Union opens in Madison Square Garden.

Four Make Football Hall

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Johnny Unitas, Dick Butkus, Ron Mix and Yale Lary form the 1979 class joining the Pro Football Hall of Fame. It was announced today.

Unitas, the jets-to-riches quarterback of the Baltimore Colts, and Butkus, the Chicago Bears' linebacking great, enter the hall in the first year after their five seasons of retirement.

Mix, a perennial All-American Football League offensive tackle with the San Diego Chargers, retired in 1971 after one year with the Oakland Raiders. Lary was a league-leading punter, star defensive back and punt return specialist for the Detroit Lions before retiring in 1963.

The four were chosen by the 29-member board of selectors. They will be formally enshrined Saturday, July 28, in Canton in ceremonies before an exhibition between the Dallas Cowboys and Oakland Raiders.

Their selection brings to 102 the number enshrined in the Hall of Fame. Unitas, cut by the Pittsburgh Steelers in 1955, jumped from a $6 a game semi-pro quarterback to regular status with the Colts the next season. He would go on to lead Baltimore to National Football League titles in 1956 and 1959.

The 6-foot-1, 195-pound University of Louisville graduate showcased his talents in the 1958 championship game. He completed 26 of 40 passes for 361 yards, guided the Colts to a game-tying touchdown at the end of regulation and took them on an 80-yard march to beat the New York Giants 23-17 in overtime.

His 18-year career accomplishments are staggering: 2,830 completions in 5,186 passes for 40,239 yards — almost 24 miles — and 290 touchdowns. When he retired, no other passer had even remotely approached those massive totals.

One of his NFL records probably never will be broken. Unitas threw at least one touchdown pass in 47 straight games, a streak that started in 1956 and ended in 1960. He played his last year with the Chargers before quitting.

Butkus, who played at 6-3 and 245 pounds, was notorious for his vicious hitting as a middle linebacker in nine injury-shortened seasons. He becomes the 17th Bears' player to join the shrine.

The University of Illinois All-American won all-NFL acclaim eight times and played in eight Pro Bowls. A severe knee injury in his final season in 1973 shortened Butkus' career.

Unlike most defensive stars, the Chicago native shows up in several statistical categories. He had 22 interceptions and 25 fumble recoveries, the latter still ranking as the league's second best all-time total. He had more than 1,000 tackles and 500 assists.

The 6-4, 250-pound Mix, an All-American at Southern California, joins San Diego teammate Lance Alworth as the only AFL player to achieve immortality. Mix was considered the best offensive tackle in the old league from 1960 through 1968.

Mix was both a first-round NFL draft selection of the Colts and Boston in the AFL. Boston swapped his negotiation rights to the Chargers and he opted to play in his native California.

He was an all-AFL choice his first nine seasons, eight as a tackle and once as a guard. He played in seven AFL All-Star Games.

One San Diego coach described Mix as "a pro's pro, a disciplined technician, a perfectionist." The key man in the Chargers' line was assessed just two holding penalties in his first nine pro seasons.

Lary, twice All-Southwest Conference at Texas A&M, joined the Lions as a third-round draft choice in 1952, just as Detroit was emerging as an NFL power.

The 5-11, 189-pound Lary, with a 44.25-yard average, ranks less than 1 yard behind Sammy Baugh, the NFL's all-time punting leader. The versatile Lion led the league punters three times, topped by a 48.9 yard mark in 1963.

Lary, a key man in the Lions' famed defensive backfields, amassed 90 interceptions, returning them for 787 yards and two touchdowns in his 11 pro seasons. He also returned three punts for touchdowns in his first five NFL campaigns.

The Fort Worth native was all-NFL three times and played in nine Pro Bowls.

Young's Trainer Criticizes Ocasio

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Jimmy Young's trainer says heavyweight Osvaldo "Jaws" Ocasio of Puerto Rico is "a dirty fighter, one who resorts to the use of head butts."

Slim Perkins made the charge after the 30-year-old Young of Philadelphia lost a 10-round fight by a unanimous decision to the 21-year-old Puerto Rican at Roberto Clemente Coliseum in San Juan Saturday night.

With the win, Ocasio, earned the right to challenge Larry Holmes, the World Boxing Council's heavyweight champion, on March 23 in Las Vegas, New Orleans, or San Juan. The loss almost certainly cost Young another title shot.

"Ocasio is a dirty fighter," Perkins said. "He uses anything to win."

Perkins said butts opened up two cuts on Young's face, one in the sixth round and the other in the ninth. One was a cut inside Young's left eye and the other was an inch-long gash extending from the right eyebrow toward the forehead.

Ralph Hernandez, Ocasio's trainer, hotly denied the charges. Hernandez said Young "had his back to his corner" when the alleged butts occurred. "I don't know how they saw it," Hernandez said.

Dr. Hernan Mendez, a doctor for the Puerto Rico Boxing Commission, said 11 stitches were needed to close both cuts.

Hernandez said Ocasio opened the first cut with a left jab and the second one with an upper cut.

Asked his opinion, Doctor Mendez said the longer cut could have been produced by a head butt. The other one, however, was not. "A punch caused that one," he said.

Perkins said he planned to file a complaint with the WBC and the Puerto Rico Boxing Commission about the butts. He said he had warned about Ocasio's tactics before the fight.

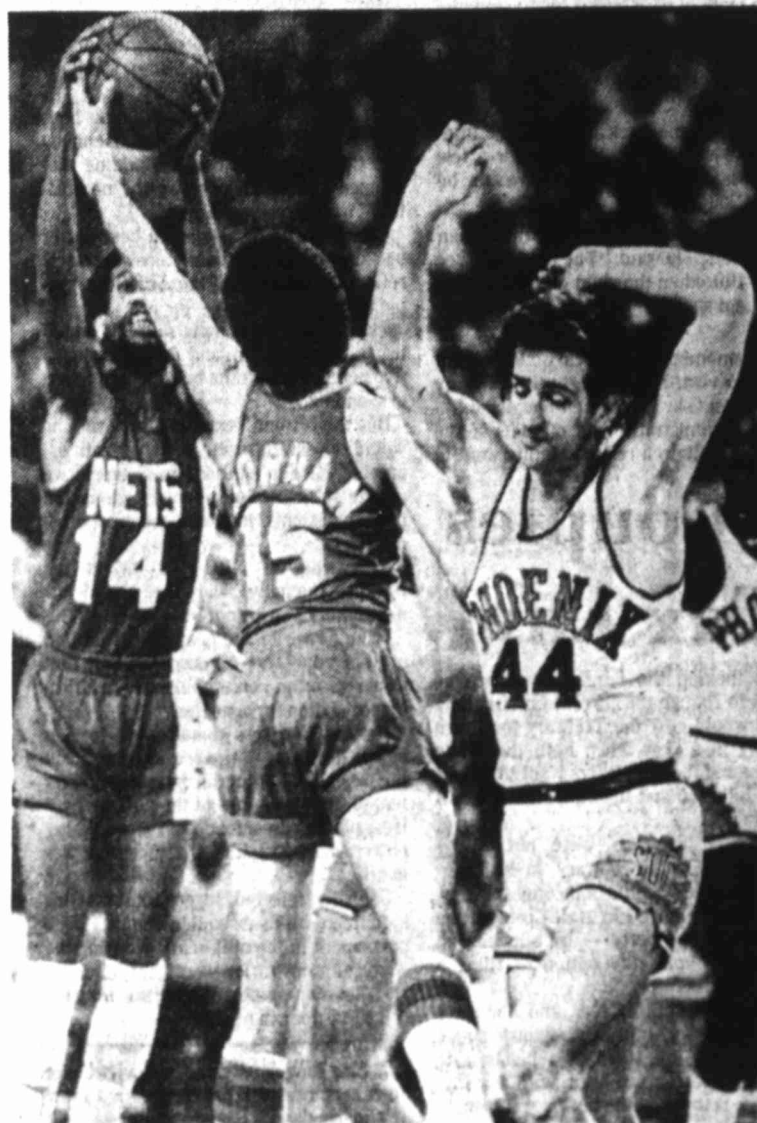

"All I wanted was a nice clean fight," he said, adding that his fighter "refused to fight dirty."

Perkins declined to come out and say he would ask the WBC and the Puerto Rican Commission to call for a rematch or void the fight. "We'll have to talk about that first," Perkins said.

Young also faced another decision. Will he continue fighting? The fighter wasn't there to answer for himself, and his manager said: "We'll have to talk about that, too."

His fighter, once the top contender for the heavyweight title, was virtually eliminated by losing to Ocasio, not once but twice. The loss dropped his record to 22-8-2.

The first loss to Ocasio, in Las Vegas last June, was seen by many as a fluke, but this one was not. Young was ready for this one, and Ocasio scored his 13th victory without a defeat.

Boxer Advises 'Duck'

SEATTLE (AP) — Ibar Arrington, who is quitting prizefighting at age 26 because of brain damage, says if he had it to do over, he would "duck more."

"I wouldn't take those punches unnecessarily like I did," said the 6-foot-1, 195-pound heavyweight, whose crowd-pleasing style often included poking his chin at opponents and letting them pummel it.

"Them punches never would affect me as far as hurting me, so I wouldn't try to avoid them. I'd let them land four or five. I didn't think they were hurting me but, over time, they took their toll. It was my hallmarks, but I'd duck more," he said Sunday in a telephone interview.

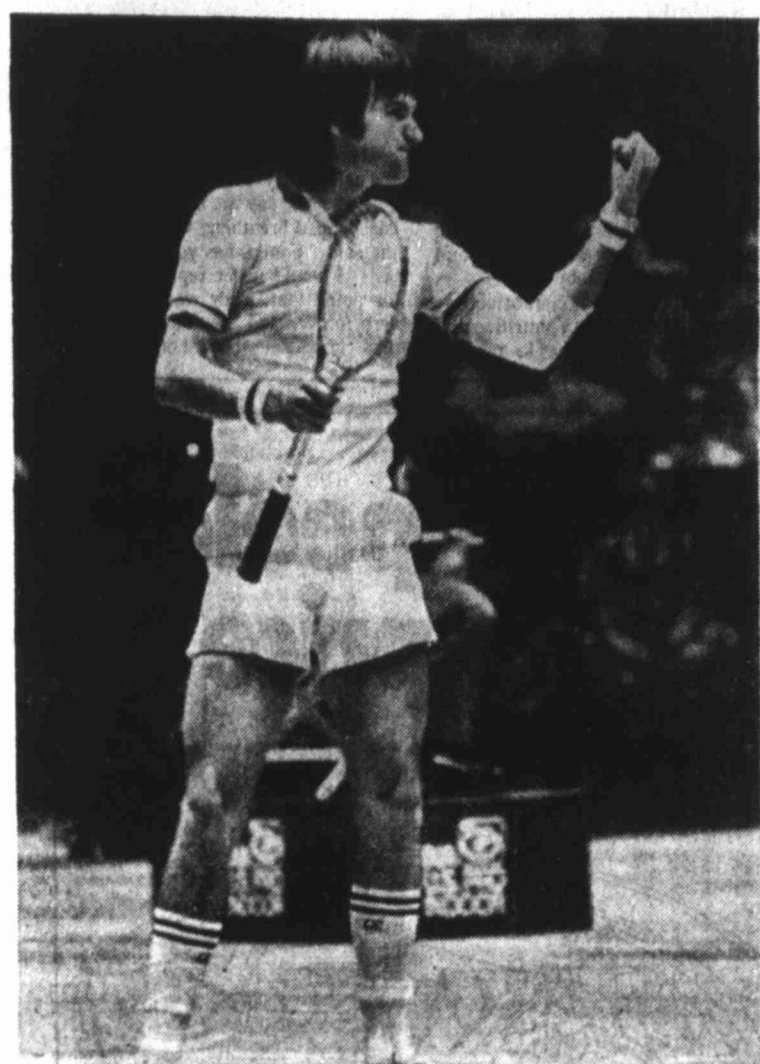

My vision is blurred and I have numbness on my right side. Over a period of time, my reactions have been getting slower and stuff," said Arrington, who lives in Everett, Wash., with his wife, Cindy, and children, 5-year-old Laura and 9-month-old Michael.

He said he underwent three days of hospital tests and his doctor told him last week he has a bruise on the left side of his brain.

Arrington fought as an amateur on and off for four years, beginning in the seventh grade, and as a professional for another four years. He retires with 27 victories, seven losses and a draw. He has never been knocked out.

The symptoms surfaced several months ago, and Arrington said he told his trainer, Joe Toro, he was quitting just before his fight with Gerrie Coetzee, the South African heavyweight champion, six weeks ago. Arrington lost a decision to Coetzee.

"I told him it's definitely my last fight. My whole right side was going numb."

Grand Prix Pact May Bar Stars

LONDON (AP) — Suppose they held Wimbledon, the French Open and the U.S. Open tennis tournaments and Bjorn Borg, Jimmy Connors, John McEnroe, Guillermo Vilas and Vitas Gerulaitis weren't there?

Such a possibility arose Sunday when David Gray, secretary of the International Tennis Federation, said the five top stars might be barred from those prestigious tournaments because of a contract dispute.

The dispute involves the Grand Prix circuit. Gray said the five have refused to sign for Grand Prix events this year because of a clause in their contracts that says the Men's International Professional Council can direct them to play in six events, including three which carry low prize money.

Gray said if the stars did not sign, they would be unable to play in any of the approximate 100 Grand Prix events, including Wimbledon, the French Open and the U.S. Open. The players have been given until March 5 to sign.

Connors was extremely upset following the announcement. He said the threat of being barred from major tournaments, such as the French Open, did not bother him, but not being allowed to participate in the U.S. Open did.

"Wimbledon would go on rain or snow or if cows were digging up the course," Connors said after trouncing fellow American Arthur Ashe in straight sets in the final of the U.S. Pro Indoor Championships at Philadelphia. "That's great, but people in New York (site of the U.S. Open) won't like it if the top players aren't there."

"They want to see the best... they would not allow it."

"And will the USTA (U.S. Tennis Association) stand for that? There's got to be a compromise... and will TV stand for it?"

The five players also are contesting the number of rich exhibition matches in which they are being allowed to play. Under the rules, they can play exhibitions during 17 free weeks in the year, plus three other weeks which may clash with Grand Prix tournaments. But some players, especially Borg, winner of the men's singles title at Wimbledon each of the past three years, wants the figure extended.

Connors also had some harsh words about that matter.

"Who are they (the Grand Prix) to say what I can or can't do?" he asked. "I'm selfish since I don't play as much as the others. I need the maximum rest. I play three weeks in a row and I'm mentally and physically tired. If I'm forced to play four weeks, then I'm not prepared physically and mentally."

"We should be able to play the game — no minimum tournaments... time off is important to me. I didn't play over Christmas. Suppose one of the designated tournaments at that time is in Australia and I don't want to go?"

The player's revolt is being handled by McEnroe's father, a New York lawyer.

The 22-nation federation also discussed the possibility of reintroducing the Challenge Round in the Davis Cup. The system, whereby the defending champion plays only in the final round against the winner of the preliminaries, was abolished in 1972.

Home Cares For Dying Babies

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — St. Margaret's Home and Hospital for Babies is a bright, airy place. But most of its patients will never go home, never go to school, never play ball.

More than half of the infants who arrive at St. Margaret's, one of only a few such nursing homes in the United States, are terminally ill. Most live less than a month.

"Most of our discharges last year were because of death," said Diane Haines, director of nursing.

"About two-thirds of the babies have severe birth defects and genetic-related disorders," explained administrator Clinton Lewis. "Most of the others are here because of accidents, either at birth or when they are young."

Some children are hydrocephalic; their heads swollen into grotesque shapes. Despite the deformities, there is always affection. The babies need it. The staff provides it.

"There always seems to be someone who takes to a particular child," Lewis said. "It doesn't matter what the child looks like; there always seems to be somebody with a special feeling."

The staff of 65 is aided by 30 students from the training school for child care technicians that St. Margaret's runs, and at times all the workers feel the emotional drain of their work.

"We have the back porch. Sometimes you just have to go out there for a few minutes. Sometimes you have to be alone," said Lewis.

"We had one child here for more than three years," he said. "The parents never came. But when the child died the father came and spent all day here. He was very upset."

"I remember him saying, 'We didn't come to visit, but she was with us every day. I can't say they weren't involved.'"

The administrator said officials of the Episcopal Church-related facility want to convert a room into a chapel or a meditation area.

"Not just for the parents, but also for the staff," he said.

The 58-bed facility began as a foundling home in 1883 and has cared for children ever since. Its present facility was built in 1973. The annual budget is about $800,000.

"More and more of our cases are terminally ill babies," said Lewis. "The average length of stay has fallen to less than a month."

Lewis said there are two principal reasons why there are more terminally ill babies: infants who previously would have died very quickly survive medical crises longer today due to improved hospital care, and doctors are prolonging lives with extraordinary measures be-

Connally Eyes Kennedy As Demo Hopeful

NEW YORK (AP) — John Connally, Republican presidential hopeful, says he expects Sen. Edward Kennedy to vie for the presidency, and if he does, Connally says he can beat him.

"If I ever saw a man positioning himself to run for president, Sen. Kennedy is," Connally said Sunday, adding that Kennedy could "take away the nomination" from President Carter.

Connally said he also could beat Carter because "I think I would more accurately reflect the attitude of the American people today."

That attitude, Connally said, is one of fiscal conservatism and he proposed a five percent across the board cut in federal spending.

But the former Texas governor said he would not call himself a "conservative," arguing, "I don't think I'm conservative on the subject of personal freedom and personal rights, human freedom and human rights."

Appearing on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press," Connally said the presidency needs more power, not less.

"The power of the president is limited in this country," he said, adding that Congress often acts impulsively in drafting legislation for agencies.

He said Congress should leave foreign affairs decisions to the president and said the so-called "imperial presidency" refers to the "trappings of the presidency." He said the presidency has been losing power since Franklin D. Roosevelt was in office.

Connally rejected suggestions that his indictment and subsequent acquittal as a participant in the milk scandal during the Nixon administration would hurt him.

cause they fear malpractice suits.

Another reason that they are brought to St. Margaret's is that hospitals, geared to making people well, are expensive. Care at St. Margaret's costs $45 a day — and it's geared to the dying baby's needs.

"We make the babies as comfortable as possible and sustain them nutritionally, but we will not intervene to prevent death when it's inevitable. At least, that's the policy," said Mrs. Haines.

"But when you are on duty and a baby has stopped breathing, what do you do?" she said. "Sometimes you have to intervene. I would never reprimand a nurse for doing that. They won't be working here forever and they have to live with their consciences the rest of their lives."

Most Working Married Couples Penalized By Current Tax Law

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It is just about this time of year that some couples, both of whom work, have visions of "tax deficit" stamped in red across their marriage licenses.

For it is a fact that under current tax law, most married couples bringing home two salaries pay what's coming to be known as a "marriage penalty."

They get hit with higher taxes than they would pay if they were living together without the state of matrimony.

Believe many say it is unfair, there is no relief in sight. Neither the White House nor Congress has any plan at the moment to change the law.

Analysis of how the penalty works, House Ways and Means Committee tax experts say, is family with two earners earning $20,000 would be taxed as a single earning $20,000, paying a joint tax of $7,000 instead of the $6,400 two singles in the same bracket would pay, filing separately.

At the $40,000 level, the marriage penalty is $1,000. At the $60,000 level, it is $2,000. At the $80,000 level, it is $3,000. At the $100,000 level, it is $4,000. TODAY'S STOCK PRICES

Prices Fall Slightly On Wall Street

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices declined slightly today, backing off from their highest level since last fall.

The Dow Jones average of 30 big-name industrial stocks dropped 4.33 to 855.42 by noon.

Losers led a slight edge on gainers in the broad daily New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market had risen steadily in recent days amid hopes that interest rates had reached or passed their high point. But a number of analysts have questioned whether that speculation might not be premature.

Today several New York banks cut their broker loan rates from 11 1/2 to 11 percent. Investors still seemed skeptical, however, that that indicated the start of a lasting downturn.

The dollar, meanwhile, continued its recent rally in foreign exchange, posting gains against leading European currencies and the Japanese yen.

American Express and McGraw-Hill were both delayed in opening. American Express proposed to raise its offer for McGraw-Hill's stock from $34 to $40 a share.

Resorts International class A stock dropped 1 1/2 to 32 1/2 on the American Stock Exchange. The company said the Securities and Exchange Commission was investigating the adequacy of its disclosures over the past nine years.

The NYSE's composite index slipped .15 to 56.84. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .38 at 161.97.

Volume on the Big Board came to 11.08 million shares in the first two hours, down from 16.03 million in the comparable period Friday.

Iranian Oil Disruption Affects U.S. Consumers

By United Press International
The disruption of oil imports from Iran is beginning to have a direct effect on the American consumer, industry spokesmen say.

Industry officials say the internal turmoil that has virtually shut down Iran's oilfields in recent months contributed to a drop in total U.S. crude oil inventories below 300 million barrels in the week ending Jan. 19 — the lowest point since April 1977.

One major company has announced plans to ration deliveries of all kinds of gasoline, two others already had been allocating unleaded brands and still another company said it may have to impose a 10 percent cutback in supplies to retailers in February.

The latest figures for gasoline and heating oil inventories, however, are at levels the industry considers acceptable.

Still, Texaco Inc. asked for and received permission Thursday from the Energy Department to cut gasoline allocations to retailers throughout the country, going back to February 1978 levels at least partly because of the disruption of imports from Iran.

"Texaco is currently supplying its customers on a normal basis, but prudence dictates that Texaco take action to bring demand for its gasoline in balance with its anticipated supplies," a company spokesman said.

He called the interruption in deliveries from Iran "a factor" in the Texaco decision.

The United States had been importing about 900,000 barrels of crude daily from Iran — about 10 percent of America's imports and roughly 5 percent of its petroleum needs.

But that total has been reduced drastically. Iran's production has been so damaged by oilfield and refinery strikes that Iran has been importing refined products from the United States.

Iran's oil is important to the U.S. oil industry because much of it is of a lighter grade that is more easily converted to unleaded gasoline and which is not in abundant supply in the best of times.

Shell and Standard Oil of Indiana, which distributes under the name Amoco, introduced allocation of supplies of unleaded gasolines in December, but did not blame the Iranian situation.

Shell plans to drop rationing next month. Amoco will decide early next week if it should continue its allocation program.

Other oil companies generally have been cautious in their public statements on the situation in Iran. One official said the companies did not want to start speculating on future allocations for fear there would be a run on gas stations and hoarding that could create a phony shortage.

Gulf Oil Corp. President James E. Lee said in St. Louis on Thursday that his firm expects it will be awhile before Iran reopens oil spigots to foreign nations. Iran had been Gulf's second largest foreign supplier of crude, producing 300,000 barrels of oil a day in 1977.

"We're in for a fairly long period of unsettled conditions in Iran," Lee said.

Standard Oil of Ohio warned there was a possibility of spot shortages and intermittent gasoline allocations by individual oil companies.

Charles H. King Mosier, Sohio senior vice president, said his company could be forced into a temporary cutback in gasoline supplies as early as Feb. 1.

Oral Pledge Question Of Marvin Suit

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Life styles have changed. Lee Marvin isn't Errol Flynn, although he may sound like an echo of that 1940s Hollywood star.

Flynn seduced girls and tried to prove he didn't. Marvin and Michele Triola Marvin agree candidly they had a six-year affair, but the question is whether there was a quid pro quo agreed on financially.

On the fifth floor corridor of the Los Angeles County Courthouse, women come up to Michele and tell her: "Honey, we're rooting for you. You deserve all you can get. You are doing it for all of us."

Men approaching Marvin are not that outspoken. The star of "Cat Ballou" is not the sort to encourage personal familiarity. But he jokes and signs autographs and says he thinks he has the best "script" in the case.

Miss Marvin's $1 million breach of contract suit was in recess today. The trial resumes tomorrow with the Oscar-winning actor on the stand for a third day after Michele's six-day recital.

The trial is referred to as a landmark case — likely to set a precedent. Actually, the precedent was set when the California Supreme Court reversed two lower courts and said a partner in an unmarried relationship had the right to sue for division of community property.

The question is whether Marvin made an oral promise to share all his worldly goods with the former singer-dancer in return for her companionship from 1964 to 1970.

Superior Court Judge Arthur K. Marshall has been presented with two very different "scripts."

Miss Marvin testified for six days and painted this picture:

—She was 31, a professional dancer and supper club singer, when she met Marvin.

Nurse Recalls Battle Against Disease

BROOK, Ind. (AP) — Velma Lyons arrived in Newton County in 1919 in a Model-T Ford with a red cross painted on the side. Wearing a sailor hat and a blue nurse's cape, she started her campaign against disease.

And it wasn't easy. "When one (child) got something, it wasn't long until everyone had it," recalled Mrs. Lyons, who was the county's first public health nurse. She is now 85, and living in a retirement complex.

Head lice, ring worm and tonsillitis also were problems. And one source of ills in the schools was the communal water bucket.

First thing each morning, the teacher would send the oldest boy to the nearest farm for a bucket of water, and it sat there all day and everyone drank from it.

She once closed a school when all 20 children caught scarlet fever.

"Oh, were the parents mad when I sent them home," she said. "They kicked up such a fuss. I got the Brook doctor to go around with me and explain how serious the after-effects of scarlet fever could be unless the children were kept quiet."

Mrs. Lyons also initiated one of the state's first hot lunch programs because, she said, she "found about half the students were underweight."

Each school would have a social affair to raise money for a stove and a boiler. Children would bring their food in jars that could be heated in the boiler, she said.

"Do you know, my grandson never had a childhood disease. I don't think the younger people realize that it's our older people who are responsible for these fine, modern schools. We've come a long way."

Velma Lyons was born on a farm seven miles outside of this northwestern Indiana town, and graduated from a nursing school in Chicago in 1915. She started work for the Chicago Visiting Nurses Association.

Kids Like To Play 'Penny In Hand'

By SHARIS LEWIS

Little kids love to play this game at parties. Big kids like to play it at picnics and at the beach. And if you are one of the many kids who give parties for little neighbors, this "Penny in Your Hand" game is worth a lot more than that!

Here's how it's played: The person who is "it" turns his back on the rest of the players, who stand in a line. A penny is passed back and forth, up and down the line as "it" recites this poem:

Put a penny in my hand,
I don't mind it.
Put a penny in your hand,
And I'll find it!
And "it" can say the poem as fast or as slow as he wishes, in order to "catch" the players.
As soon as the poem is finished,

"it" whips around and tries to guess who is holding the penny. If the guess is right, the player holding the penny becomes "it." If the guess is wrong, "it" is still "it," and the game goes on.

TODAY'S BRAIN TWISTER: Here's a Brain Twister sent in by Carrie Waldron, age 7, of Fairview, Ore. Using the numbers 0 to 9 once, each, can you position them so that when added together they equal 99,999? (Look for the answer in tomorrow's Kids-Only Club column.)

Katharine Hepburn Sparkles In Movie

By JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI) — Katharine Hepburn has now made her own role created on the stage by Ethel Barrymore and on the screen by Bette Davis.

That's the part of the strong-willed bluestocking spinster in "The Corn Is Green," which CBS presents Jan. 29, 8-10 p.m., Central time.

Miss Hepburn has a romp through lush Welsh scenery as she founds an unorthodox school for miners and polishes a dirty, rough lad named Morgan Evans into an Oxford scholar.

The surprise in the beautifully acted drama comes from an unknown, Ian Saynor, as Evans. Saynor's performance would come as no shock in his native Wales, where he has toured in the Emllyn Williams play, but the 26-year-old actor was thrilled to be working in the television drama.

Not only did he have the awesome Miss Hepburn as his co-star, but the director was George Cukor, one of the greats of the golden age of Hollywood. The Cukor-Hepburn team produced 10 films, starting with "Bill of Divorcement" in 1932 and including "Philadelphia Story," "Holiday" and "Keeper of the Flame." "When you think you're working with two people like that — very famous people, with incredible reputations, people who are legends, it can be nervous making," Saynor said in an interview.

"At first you might think because of their greater age, maybe they are settled in their ways — but the two of them are so flexible, and especially Mr. Cukor has this great elasticity of mind."

"And they were so enthusiastic — they had so much energy. I was the one that got tired."

Saynor's slight build wasn't the burly diamond in the rough that Cukor and Hepburn had in mind for the Welsh miner. What do real Welsh miners look like? "Like me," Saynor said with a grin. He gained 25 pounds for the film — although on the screen he certainly doesn't look it — to appear hefty.

"Miss Hepburn bought me some weights to build me up — I asked her to sign them. She was very determined that I put on more bulk."

In another category completely is the CBS drama "And Your Name Is Jonah," to be aired Jan. 28, 8-10 p.m., Central time, and starring Sally Struthers (with hair toned down from the blond brassiness of "All in the Family") and James Woods, who played the artist son in "Holocaust."

The real star is Jeffrey Bravin, a 9-year-old deaf child who plays Jonah, deaf from birth and institutionalized for three years after being misdiagnosed as retarded.

TCU Station Plays Big Band Sounds

PORT WORTH (UPI) — It's a different kind of sound coming out over Texas Christian University's KTUC-FM radio station every weekend. It's something of an earlier day disco, but instead of the snake and the listener are doing the big apple and the listenerbug.

Dr. Jerry Stubblefield, a dentist, and Bill Roe, regional merchandising manager for a refrigerator manufacturer, spin the platters for a radio audience that besieges the station's single telephone line with requests.

And what they want to hear is what Stubblefield and Roe play: the Big Band sounds of Glenn Miller and Tommy Dorsey that dominated American music in the 30s and 40s.

Most of the songs come from the record collections of the two volunteer disc jockeys and from the collections of listeners, but they have had to dig to turn up such requests as "Huckleberry Duck" and "720 in the Books."

The story begins when Miss Struthers and her husband, Woods, bring Jonah home. They must come to terms with the reality of his deafness — no matter what he learns (at this point he does not understand even the concept of words) he will never be "normal," he will always be deaf.

Although the script lacks plausibility in detail, the performances and the plight of the child makes this a moving, three-hanky drama.

Invention Protects Cable TV Systems

BALDWINVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — Build a cold-proof filter trap and the cable television industry will beat a path to your door.

That is the story of Allan Devendorf and the firm he started four years ago, Eagle Comtronics Inc.

Four years ago Devendorf was an engineer for Magnavox Corp. Now he is president of Eagle Comtronics Inc., a company that is expected to hit the $10 million mark in sales in 1979, its fourth year in business.

The company manufactures electronic traps that block the signals carrying movies over the cable television systems. Customers with a little electronics know-how have been tapping in on unprotected systems, enabling them to receive the first-run movies without paying for them.

They also created the demand that has allowed Devendorf's company to exist in the first place.

"It's theft of service. And it is a major problem in the industry," says Devendorf.

The theft of service in the surging cable television industry has created a specialized electronics industry, and a lucrative business for Devendorf and the two other engineers who left Magnavox to form Eagle Comtronics.

Their company has outgrown two plants and is moving to larger quarters for the third time in four years. Devendorf says he could immediately put another 120 people to work, if he had some place to put them.

With the production lines working around the clock, the company's 180 workers cannot keep up with the demand for their products, even though they turn out up to 10,000 of the devices daily.

"Our backlog is fantastic. The whole industry is backed up. The whole industry is just booming," said Devendorf.

Devendorf says Eagle Comtronics should double its work force this year.

After leaving Magnavox, a rival in the cable television security industry, Devendorf and his partners devised a special filter rugged enough to be used outdoors, and out of reach. Most of the other companies in the business produce security filters that are installed near the television set where, Devendorf insists, they are more vulnerable to tampering.

Coming up with a way to protect their electronic filters from the cold was the big problem in making the product usable outdoors, according to Devendorf. But the filter the three engineers developed has been cold-proof enough to be used in Alaska, they say.

Already competing with Vitek, of Mid-dlesex, N.J., at the top of the specialized industry containing eight to 10 other companies, Devendorf says he and his partners also plan to open a research division and come out with new products in the near future.

"We didn't think it was growing this big, but we did anticipate growth. We intend to build this into a large corporation," he said.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Knowing who to deal with will be half your battle tomorrow. If you think you're being handed a line, don't hesitate to change directions.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Think twice. Reconsider what your major goals will be tomorrow. What appears to be top priority at first may not be all that important.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Any confusion resulting from the early day's problems can be quickly overcome tomorrow by relying on what your instincts will be trying to tell you to do.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Although you may at first feel the world is against you tomorrow, you'll soon change your mind when a friend does something nice for you quite unexpectedly.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't expect any pats on the back for giving a lick and a promise to things you will do tomorrow. In fact, half-way measures could get you into big trouble.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) A co-worker's feelings could be hurt through a misunderstanding of facts you could present tomorrow. Make sure you communicate accurately.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Again tomorrow you had better have your wits about you in commercial dealings. One whose standards aren't too high could try to snow you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Out of the goodness of your heart you may agree to something tomorrow that you shouldn't have. Some fast thinking could get you out of it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Things may go wrong at work tomorrow, but when a little windfall comes your way you'll forget all about the earlier troubles.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It's quite possible you may feel used by one you consider to be an old and trusted friend. Get all the facts before passing judgment. You'll find you were wrong.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't ignore what your nobler instincts will be telling you to do tomorrow. Keep your standards high and no one can harm you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Pessimistic friends could put a damper on your day tomorrow if you let them. It would be best to seek out your more positive pals. Shun negative thought.

The Almanac TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International
Today is Monday, Jan. 29, the 29th day of 1979 with 336 to follow.
The moon is moving from its new phase toward its first quarter.
The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Saturn.
The evening star is Jupiter.
Those born on this date are under the sign of Aquarius.
English-American freedom crusader Thomas Paine was born Jan. 29, 1737.
On this day in history:
In 1801, Kansas became the 34th state in the Union.
In 1900, eight baseball teams were organized as the American League. They were Buffalo, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Milwaukee and Minneapolis.

In 1936, Ty Cobb, Walter Johnson, Christy Mathewson, Babe Ruth and Honus Wagner became the first five men elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame.
In 1977, heavy job layoffs threatened New York and New Jersey and other areas because of an unprecedented cold wave.
A thought for the day:
Early American freedom fighter Thomas Paine said, "A bad cause will ever be supported by bad means and bad men."

DR. LAMB

Trying To Get Pregnant

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB — I am trying to become pregnant and there seems to be a problem. My husband and I are both 31. We have one daughter 7 years old and I lost a baby at birth five years ago, so I know I can get pregnant. We've been trying for over three years and I am going through many days of depression and having arguments with my husband over whose fault it is.

He did go to a urologist three years ago and his examination showed he had a sperm count of 44 million, which I understand is OK but is one-third of the normal.

He refuses to be re-examined, saying it is embarrassing and there isn't any need for it. That's why we are arguing. I feel he is not doing everything he should.

I have RH negative blood and had a Cesarean section with my last pregnancy. Does this have any bearing on a conception? When does the doctor prescribe fertility pills to women? Is this to regulate their menstrual cycles or does it help them to get pregnant?

I feel I've given nature every chance to take its course and I want a family before I get much older and it's too late.

DEAR READER — Science is making very rapid strides but it still takes two to produce a baby, even if it's a test-tube baby. That means that when a couple has a problem in fertility, both partners need to be examined.

A lot can happen in three years, and since it's during this period of time that you have been trying to get pregnant, there would be nothing wrong with your husband having another examination.

It would be good if the two of you could go to a fertility clinic. That way, more information could be obtained on you.

Daily temperature curves might point out whether you are ovulating regularly or not. If you are not, then your doctor might wish to prescribe a fertility pill. They are not used to regulate menstrual cycles but rather to stimulate the ovaries to release ova.

When the stimulation has been too successful and released a lot of ova isn't any reason why it shouldn't be done.

A number of causes can contribute to infertility in both the male and the female. It is true that in some instances a woman may develop an immune or sort of allergic reaction to the husband's sperm cells. When this proves to be the case, then methods can be devised to minimize the reaction and help promote the probability of pregnancy.

It won't help to fight with your husband and it is really not a question of whose fault it is. The important point is what will work best for the two of you to enable you to have another pregnancy if that is what you want.

The Health Letter number 5-12, Menopause, includes some basic information on the normal cycle and female hormones, so I am sending it to you. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

1980 Automobile Rolls Off GM Assembly Line

DETROIT (AP) — The first car of the 1980s has rolled off a General Motors Corp. assembly line — a front-wheel-drive Chevrolet compact dubbed the Citation.

The car is one of four new compacts slated for introduction in April. Designated 1980 models, the cars represent Round Three of GM's downsizing program to meet escalating fuel economy standards. GM President Elliott M. Estes calls it "the most expensive new car development program in General Motors history." The price tag came to $2.5 billion, the automaker says.

The first Citation, replacement for the Nova, was put together before dawn without any hoopla Tuesday by workers at GM's sprawling Willow Run assembly plant near Detroit.

Willow Run is the first of three plants to be retooled for production of the so-called "X-body" cars. The others are in Tarrytown, N.Y., and a new assembly plant in Oklahoma City.

In addition to the Citation, the compact line includes the Pontiac Phoenix, Oldsmobile Omega and Buick Skylark.

The cars are 20 inches shorter and 800 pounds lighter than the models they replace.

GM has led the industry in slashing the size of its cars.

In addition to boosting GM's corporate fuel economy for 1980, the company is banking on the models to provide stiff competition for imported cars in the same market.

8% annual rate

Gibraltar's new 8% certificate pays the maximum interest allowed on insured accounts. An 8-year certificate, with a $1,000 minimum, yields a big 8.33% annually. All this, plus the peace of mind of knowing your savings are with the largest in Texas.

THE NEW MONEY MARKET CERTIFICATE

- It pays you 1/4 of 1% more than the present rate on equivalent six month Treasury Bills.
- Minimum deposit is $10,000.
- Term is 36 weeks.
- Interest is compounded daily.
- Funds are insured to $40,000 by the F.S.I.C.
- Federal regulations require a substantial penalty for early withdrawals from certificate accounts.
