Shultz seeks assurance of no more deals

New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State George P. Shultz has asked President Reagan for a firm commitment not to provide more military equipment to Iran and to agree that future diplomatic contacts with Tehran have State Department participation, administration officials said Tuesday.

There were conflicting accounts of whether Shultz had presented his requests as conditions for his staying in the administration.

Some officials said they were told that Shultz had told Reagan that unless those requests were honored, there might not be any sense in his serving much longer. But a senior White House official said Reagan had indicated to him that Shultz had not threatened to to quit.

According to some officials, Shultz made the requests last Saturday at Camp David, Md. Shultz said on Sunday that he had "talked" with Reagan about resigning, but he would not disclose his exact comments.

On Monday, Reagan and the White House spokesman, Larry Speakes, both said there were no plans for future military shipments to Iran. This was viewed by Shultz's aides as a positive response by the White House to the secretary's request on arms shipments and a sign of Reagan's desire that Shultz remain in office.

Nothing has been said, however, of the second request, that the State Department be included in future discussions on Iran.

But a White House official said there was "no urgency," adding, "the whole thing is on hold anyway" because of the publicity of the last two weeks about the secret contacts.

Shultz's future came up again at briefings for reporters at the White House and the State Department.

Speakes said Tuesday that Reagan did not want Shultz to resign. And the State Department spokesman, Charles E. Redman, refused to go beyond what Shultz said on Sunday on the CBS News program "Face the Nation" when he raised the possibility of resigning.

It was not clear whether Reagan would actually cancel all or part of the directive that he signed last Jan. 17 authorizing the National Security Council staff to take the lead in establishing secret contacts with Iran.

The directive said the purpose of the secret opening was to see if Iran's behavior could be moderated and the release of American hostages in Lebanon obtained. To those ends, it authorized the shipment of limited amounts of defensive weapons and spare parts to Iran, despite the public embargo on such equipment.

Laser device used safely in heart surgery

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Editor

DALLAS — The first human trials of laser-powered devices to burn through clogs in arteries supplying the heart show they could be cheaper than bypass surgery and more effective than balloon treatments, researchers say.

Clogged coronary arteries were opened at least partially in six of the first seven Americans to undergo the procedure that could help prevent heart attacks, said Dr. Timothy Sanborn of Boston University Medical Center.

Sanborn, describing his findings Tuesday at the annual meeting of the American Heart Association, said laser thermal angioplasty could become widespread within two years if the successes continue.

"The results look promising," he said, noting that there have so far been no important complications.

In the procedure, an optical fiber tipped with a metal cap is inserted into a blood vessel near the skin and threaded through vessels until it reaches obstructive deposits in arteries that supply blood to the heart muscle.

Humes will fill MC board post

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Parker Humes, former president of the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees, has been appointed trustee of Midland Junior College District, replacing William "Hoyle" McCright, who resigned last month following his conviction on federal embezzlement charges.

Humes

MC trustees unanimously elected Humes Tuesday during a regular monthly meeting.

At the same time, trustees chose to re-organize the board, electing Gloria Hinojosa to succeed McCright as president. Ralph Way was elected vice president and John Cooper will serve as secretary.

Immediately following Humes' appointment, Search Committee Chairman Way said Humes would be a "great asset to the board and to Midland College" because of his dedication to education in Midland over the years.

The 51-year-old Humes is president of the Midland Broadcasting Co., owner and operator of KCRS and KWMJ radio stations.

A native West Texan and graduate of Lamesa High School, Humes has resided in Midland for 26 years, serving on the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees for six years and three years as its president.

He is chairman of the Midland Alliance, past president of the Texas Broadcast Education Foundation, member of the Baylor University Development Council and a PTA life member.

Filipino gunmen kill Enrile friend

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A band of gunmen dressed as women today ambushed the car of a right-wing businessman who was Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile's friend, killing him and two other people.

David Puzon, 65, was slain six days after the killing of Rolando Olalia, a leftist whose death supporters blamed on "fascist elements" allied with Enrile. The defense minister has denied involvement.

No arrests have been made in either attack.

President Corazon Aquino, in a television interview today, said she was unsure who was behind the recent violence, which has helped fuel rumors of a coup. "There are many who could have done it, but it is directed against me."

The armed forces command blamed the Communist New People's Army for the Puzon slayings, calling them "examples of (rebel) atrocities against non-combatants and other persons in authority."

The allegation was made as government negotiators reported that Mrs. Aquino told them to reach a cease-fire this month with the Communist rebels, who have fought the government for 17 years. Enrile frequently has criticized the talks.

An ounce of prevention can save $200 billion

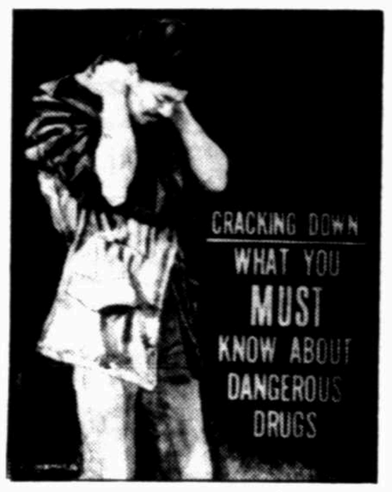

By JOHN A. BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

If it seems we move from one drug epidemic to another, we do.

Without dismay or despair, the people who battle drugs can't see a drug-free Utopia anytime in the future. Even those who try to stifle the influx of drugs to this country admit their efforts can only reduce, not end the supply.

Various estimates put the cost to the nation, to the user and society, at upwards of $200 billion — perhaps as much as $230 billion annually.

Drug enforcement officials uncover millions of dollars worth of cocaine, hashish, marijuana, amphetamines, narcotics, synthetic opiates, stimulants, sedatives, and tranquilizers, to little avail. Shortages raise the price of drugs on the street, users get more desperate and the epidemic rolls on.

Scientist says Titanic should be explored, not plundered

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The Titanic is a "pyramid of the deep" and should be left to rest 12,500 feet beneath the North Atlantic, the discoverer of the luxury liner told a Midland audience Tuesday evening.

"I made a promise to myself that I would not disturb the Titanic," said Dr. Robert Ballard, chief scientist of the Titanic expedition. He addressed about 525 audience members at Midland Community Theatre.

Films taken of the ship by remote robot upon its discovery and again this summer are as close as Ballard wants anyone to get to the Titanic's remains.

"The Titanic is a pyramid of the deep, where as many as 1,500 people lost their lives. I'm not going to be the one to rob it," he said.

Ballard and 30 other American and French crew members found the sunken luxury liner on Sept. 1, 1985. It had been missing for 73 years.

Instead of looking for an 800-foot radar blimp of a ship lying horizontally or a 90-foot blimp of a ship lying vertically, Ballard said the crew believed they had a better chance stumbling across a one-mile long trail of debris.

They were right.

The search plan paid off on the 56th day of the 60-day journey when the crew found the first piece of debris — the ship's boiler.

Ballard led a second expedition this summer, using "Jason" — a remote robot — to uncover the mystery of how the so-called "unsinkable" ship sank on April 14, 1912, after it struck an iceberg about 1,600 miles northeast of New York City. About 1,500 of the ship's 2,200 passengers died.

The journey was an attempt to get a closer view of the ship by sending the mini robot scanner into its interior, down what used to be its grand staircase.

Film of the ship revealed no gash or hole in the body of the luxury liner, but rather a buckling of the steel near the ship's bow.

During his talk, Ballard also showed film of the debris photographed by "Jason." The pictures revealed the ship sitting upright, its steel twisted and melted from years of exposure to the ocean's currents.

Locating the Titanic was exciting, said Ballard, but of equal significance is the new era of exploration which the discovery signals.

Ground broken for city's new postal station

Post office to be near ClayDesta Plaza

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

Plans for a new post office in Midland that received a stamp of approval nearly two years ago were realized this morning at a groundbreaking ceremony in northeast Midland.

A new 28,000 square foot post office, four times larger than the biggest of the other 11 postal units in Midland, will be built on the northwest corner of Airpark Drive and Smith Road, a U.S. Post Office official said.

Bob Williams, Midland's Postmaster General, said the new station is being built at a cost of $2.5 million.

The new post office — ClayDesta Station — will serve those whose zip code ends in 05, Williams said.

"They've been operating out of a temporary annex at the Northland Shopping Center on "A" at Scharbauer Road. But we've had only carriers working out of the station and no window service," Williams added.

He said no new jobs will be created, however, and that those employed at the temporary annex will simply be transferred to the new ClayDesta Station.

The four-and-one-half acre site the new station will sit on was purchased from Clayton Williams, Williams said.

"We picked that location because of convenience and the price was right."

IRAN

On Monday, Speakes said that the directive of Jan. 17 had not been canceled but that no arms would be sent until there were "more positive developments" in Iran's policies. Whether this would satisfy Shultz was uncertain.

Shultz's opposition to the sale of more arms to Iran was made public Sunday during the television interview, in which he said that although he was against such sales, he could not say if that was present administration policy.

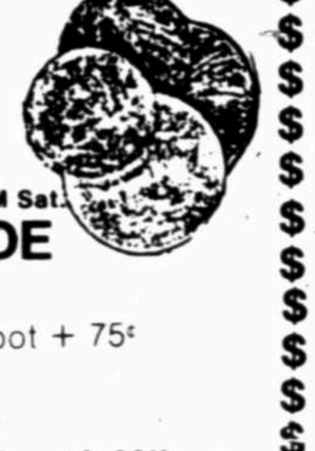

On Monday night, during a question-and-answer session in Chicago after delivering a speech, Shultz spoke out again on that theme. He said he believed the public discussion had "reinforced" the previous policy of not dealing for hostages.

Shultz's concern about the involvement of the State Department in future contacts with Iran stemmed from his reported unhappiness with the way he was deprived of information about the secret contacts, including the mission by Robert C. McFarlane, the former national security adviser.

McFarlane was accompanied by Lt. Col. Oliver L. North of the National Security Council staff.

State Treasury takes controversial loans

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — In a move Treasurer Ann Richards says will save Texas $12 million over the next nine months, the state Treasury has borrowed $600 million in controversial short-term loans.

The loans, known as cash management notes or revenue anticipation notes, were sold at a special Treasury auction Tuesday where 19 bidders offered 91 bids totalling almost $8 billion. The state will pay an effective interest rate of 2.08 percent.

A $600 million line of credit to the state from Irving Trust of New York helped the state achieve that low interest rate, Ms. Richards said. That line of credit cost the state about $315,000.

Authorized for sale two weeks ago against the advice of Comptroller Bob Bullock and over the objections of Gov.-elect Bill Clements, the notes will allow the Treasury to remain solvent through the difficult months of December and January. Particularly heavy expenditures early in the fiscal year exceed tax collections, forcing the Treasury to "borrow" money from special funds at about 6 percent interest to pay bills out of the general revenue fund.

"We've always borrowed, we've just borrowed expensively," Ms. Richards said. "This is borrowing and borrowing cheaply."

Ms. Richards dismissed arguments, such as Clements', that the cash management notes run counter to Texas' constitutional prohibition against deficit financing. She said she asked the Legislature for authority to issue the notes "to better manage the cash of the state of Texas" and avoid expensive borrowing from other funds.

Bullock's most recent estimates maintain that the state will have a $973 million deficit by the end of the year. Ms. Richards said that deficit will not affect her repaying cash management notes.

Despite warnings to the contrary from Bullock, Ms. Richards pointed out that the sale of the notes did not affect Texas' long-range bond rating. She warned, however, that Wall Street rating houses are continuing to take a hard look at the state's finances and may reduce the bond rating in the future.

Estimates put the cost of drug use — for the nation, the user and society — at $200 to $230 billion annually.

DRUGS

Not that enforcement should not proceed apace. But the Coast Guard, the Drug Enforcement Agency, the FBI, the state police, the sheriff, the local police, all the king's horses and all the king's men cannot close off the supply.

Drug treatment centers, worried parents, doctors, school counselors can intervene in young lives gone abaft and astray, and try to bring them back to course again. They succeed often enough, but at great price to individuals and society.

All freely agree that the only weapon society has to really root out the problem is prevention. And the strong edge of prevention is education, continuous, redundant education.

Dr. Barry Brown of the National Institute on Drug Abuse says there is a prevailing theory on drug abuse: "We have had numerous epidemics, a waxing and waning in the abuse of this drug or that. Individuals become aware and restrict their behavior. Then an ignorance of it grows until it blossoms again as an epidemic."

Lessons are soon forgotten. Every newborn means they have to be taught again. Says Dr. Brown:

"There have been some dramatic changes. There's a kind of conservatism in terms of personal behavior. There have been changes in regards to what is tolerated and what is not tolerated, especially in regard to adolescent function. In general, it is good for the kids who need and want structure."

The marijuana epidemic evoked, finally, a movement in the country which continued to proliferate. It might be called Parents, Inc.

From Florida to California, from Nebraska to Georgia, from suburban New York City to rural Indiana, from Texas to Washington, D.C., parents have mobilized in their communities to put the brakes on drug use. Activist parents? The idea would have evoked smiles a decade ago. But, look:

In Naples, Fla., two parents discovered their two children were deeply involved in drugs, and struggled for years to change things. "Naples Informed Parents" — NIP — became the fulcrum to move the state.

In rural Indiana, what began as one couple's battle against drugs, was picked up by a newspaper editor and other community leaders. In another Indiana town, a concerned law enforcement officer picked up the cudgel. The state superintendent of schools, Harold Negley, calling for more antidrug education, found it appropriate to echo Walt Whitman, "I would rather be taxed for the education of a boy than the ignorance of the man. I will be taxed for one or the other."

In Omaha, parents went door to door to light a fire under the community. They modeled their movement after Atlanta's "Parents' Resource Institute for Drug Education" program (PRIDE) and set up a speakers' bureau, a parents' hotline "and effective methods for overcoming the strong resistance of young people who believed that they had a 'right' to use drugs."

Parents from black neighborhoods in Washington, D.C., fought to get a ban on the sale of drug paraphernalia and won. That came in an area where drugs are rampant and PCP claims the minds of young people everyday. Businesses pitched in. With the help of the PTA, the parents organized volunteer parent patrols for schoolyards and playgrounds. Parents offered to chaperone youth centers. With the aid of a parochial school, they asked for and got more visible police patrols with nuns and parents acting as spotters. More and more parents began walking their children to and from school.

It works so well, one organizer said, there is a traffic jam of parents coming to pick up their kids.

He said future explorers may use the new technology tested in the Titanic project to study the vast geologic landscapes resting beneath the seas. Such studies may yield new clues about the origin and formation of the earth.

Ballard said he hopes men will learn to appreciate the history of the Titanic and not plunder it.

His legacy to the expedition is a plaque which rests on the ship's bridge.

"It's sort of a memorial to that period of arrogance," he told the audience.

Ballard said he plans to mount further expeditions, including a search of the Mediterranean for a Roman fleet of 600 ships lost thousands of years ago.

LASER

Light from an argon laser is fed into the optical fiber to heat the metal cap to 750 degrees so it can burn through the fibrous, waxy deposits.

These deposits, produced by hardening of the arteries, or atherosclerosis, are a leading cause of the more than 500,000 heart attack deaths in the United States annually.

Sanborn said that two research groups in England also have just begun using similar devices to burn away coronary artery blockages.

Sanborn, Dr. Gregory Abela of the University of Florida Health Science Center in Gainesville and other researchers at perhaps a dozen centers in the United States and Europe have used the devices to destroy obstructions in other arteries that are easier to treat.

Abela's device differs slightly from Sanborn's in that it allows a tiny beam of laser light to escape from the metal cap, so that the laser light itself can contribute to the destruction of the deposit.

Until about a decade ago, atherosclerosis in the coronary arteries was treated almost exclusively with coronary bypass surgery, in which the clogged artery is cut out and replaced with a piece of blood vessel taken from the leg or elsewhere.

In 1983, 191,000 bypass operations were performed in the United States, according to the heart association.

A decade ago, however, researchers began experimenting with using inflatable balloons, which are threaded into narrowed arteries and inflated to expand the opening in the artery. Fifty-thousand of those so-called angioplasties were performed last year.

The laser angioplasty technique offers yet another alternative that may overcome the principal limitation of the balloon technique, namely that some 20 percent of the patients receiving it will develop new blockages in the same place within months of the procedure.

Whether the same problem will occur with laser thermal angioplasty is not yet known. But in tests with 124 patients who had deposits treated in arteries other than the coronary arteries, the treated blood vessels have remained open for a median of 11 months, Sanborn said.

Eighty percent of those patients have been successfully treated, he said, a rate comparable to that of conventional angioplasty using balloons.

Dr. Jeffrey Isner of Tufts-New England Medical Center in Boston said he has developed a device that uses pure laser light, rather than a laser-heated metal cap, to destroy arterial deposits.

The advantage of that technique, Isner said, is that it leaves the lining of the artery clean and undamaged, unlike the laser thermal devices, which leave burned and charred remains.

The danger of these laser devices is that they could burn through the wall of an artery and allow bleeding, Isner said. But so far that has not been an important problem.

"The preliminary evidence has indicated that the device can be used safely in the human situation," said Isner.

MANILA

Police said Puzon's car was attacked at about 7:30 a.m. in San Jose del Monte, about 10 miles north of Manila, as he traveled to a family-owned lumber yard. His driver, Romeo Reyes, and a factory manager, Manuel Viloria, also were killed and his daughter-in-law, Eva Puzon, was wounded.

Lt. Col. Leandro Mendoza, provincial chief of police, said about six to 10 gunmen dressed as women leaped from a jeepney — a small bus — and sprayed automatic fire at the car.

"All of a sudden people with guns were shooting at us," Eva Puzon told a television interviewer from her hospital bed. "As for me, I pretended to be dead. That's why they did not shoot at me any more."

Mendoza said Puzon's slaying might have been connected to his businesses. "And then we cannot discount the possibility that these are the workings of some dissident groups, particularly the New People's Army."

Mrs. Aquino, at a Cabinet meeting today, ordered her negotiators to produce a cease-fire this month with the Communist rebels, said Ramon Mitra, one of the negotiators.

"The president has given us new instructions just now and she has directed us to produce a cease-fire this month," he said, adding that he was seeking to contact negotiators with the National Democratic Front, which broke off talks after Olalia's slaying.

Mitra told reporters Tuesday he did not expect peace talks to resume this year.

About 12 hours after the Puzon slaying, a bomb exploded at the Shoemart Department Store in Manila. Hospital sources said 35 people were injured.

A grenade was hurled inside a movie house about two blocks from the department store, but did not explode.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility in either incident.

More than 1,000 people shouting for Enrile's resignation rallied today in front of the Defense Ministry in the latest of several leftist protests since Olalia's killing.

Olalia, 52, was president of the Peoples Party, and the May 1st Movement, a labor federation. Conservatives say the two are Communists fronts although both groups deny the charge.

A former labor minister under former President Ferdinand E. Marcos, Blas F. Ople, issued a statement saying the spate of killings show "the rule of law has broke down" and called on the Cabinet to resign.

Cottage industry may be forced to move

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Three women whose cottage industry grew into a multimillion-dollar business say a union may force them to move jobs to Mexico with allegations that their use of home workers violates anti-sweatshop rules.

Bordeaux Inc., founded by Jean Negley, Bertha Turner and Julie Lisle in Clarinda six years ago, has blossomed from a tiny cottage industry into a major wholesaler of jogging suits, with sales of $3.5 million expected this year.

The two former teachers and a decorator said they formed the business because they were "bored" with their jobs and needed "dough," hence the name "Bordeaux."

The backbone of the company is the piecework by 100 to 150 women, many of them wives of farmers, who work at their own sewing machines attaching appliques to jogging suits that sell in exclusive boutiques for about $70.

The women receive $2.45 per item, with fast workers earning up to $9 an hour, some employees said in letters written to the U.S. Department of Labor in support of the company.

The New York-based International Ladies Garment Workers Union says Bordeaux is violating a 43-year-old anti-sweatshop rule prohibiting the manufacture of some women's clothing in the home, and has threatened to sue if the federal government does not take action.

"It just doesn't seem fair that you can make men's clothing at home and not women's clothing," Mrs. Negley said, adding that the company did not know about the rule banning some homework before the union complaint.

"Make a shirt buttoned one way it's legal and the other way it isn't," she said. "It's so ridiculous."

Bordeaux, which says its local payroll is about $1 million a year, has threatened to export its jobs to Mexico if the union wins the battle.

"It's the last thing we want to do," Mrs. Negley said in a telephone interview last week, adding that the company has set up a factory at Clarinda in southwest Iowa but that most workers prefer to sew at home.

"We haven't been able to save the family farm, but we've put food on the table," she said.

Susan Cowell, spokeswoman for the 250,000-member union, said in a telephone interview that Bordeaux's piecework exploits workers.

"The employer doesn't have to pay overhead. There are no paid vacations, no benefits," Cowell said. "Women work long hours and in the end they may earn less than the $3.35 an hour minimum wage."

Labor regulation was designed to protect workers, even from each other, she said. "If one worker says, 'I want to work for $1 an hour,' it hurts other workers. What the Bordeaux situation means to us is the fear and desperation for work."

Jim Valin, assistant administrator of the Labor Department's Wage and Hour Division, said the case had drawn large numbers of letters from both sides.

While the department will not tolerate workers earning less than the minimum wage, officials believe employment would increase if the homework rule were relaxed, Valin said.

Minister's flock includes garbage collectors across Florida

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The Rev. Jack Vander Laan isn't offended when he's referred to as the "garbage chaplain." The title has stuck over the years because he's the only pastor whose "flock" includes garbagemen scattered around the state.

"I don't know of any other garbage company in the country that has a full-time chaplain," said the 52-year-old Protestant minister in his Fort Lauderdale office at Waste Management Inc. of Florida.

Vander Laan is chaplain-pastoral counselor for the statewide garbage disposal company. His primary function, he says, is helping employees with personal and family problems, the most common being alcohol and drug abuse.

On the average, he spends three days a week visiting garbage companies from Pensacola to Key West to counsel 1,800 employees — garbage handlers to company executives. On occasion, "Reverend Jack" officiates at wedding and funeral services.

He often goes to landfill sites or tracks down a garbage truck to talk to a troubled employee.

When a Florida subsidiary of the parent Waste Management Inc., an international waste collection concern, holds an employee meeting, Vander Laan is usually there. Using a series of video tape and slide presentations, he lectures about drug and alcohol abuse.

On such occasions, troubled employees seek his advice and help. He generally steers them to appropriate community agencies where they can find specialized assistance.

To make himself available whenever there is an emergency, he gives employees telephone numbers where he can be reached day or night.

Vander Laan says he doesn't push religion on employees with problems unless they seek it.

Most of the problems employees share with him are not job related, he said. They are of a more personal nature, involving marriage and family difficulties.

A Jenison, Mich., native, Vander Laan is a graduate of Calvin College and Seminary in Grand Rapids, Mich. He was ordained in 1958 and served as pastor in Christian Reformed churches in Leighton, Iowa; Grand Rapids and Denver, before transferring to the Fort Lauderdale parish in 1976.

In 1978, Vander Laan joined the garbage company on a part-time basis. In January 1981, it became a full-time job, ending his 22-year career as a church pastor.

"I enjoy the one-to-one emphasis," said Vander Laan, whose wife of 30 years, Millie, recently joined the company as a secretary.

News conference expected to focus on Iran deals

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, struggling to get off the defensive and quell reports of dissension within his administration, faces questions at a news conference about sending arms to Iran, a nation he accuses of fostering terrorism.

The president meets the White House press corps tonight for the first time in three months, and questions are certain to focus on recent turns in the Reagan administration's foreign policy.

Attention was expected to turn to matters such as Reagan's denial that he had swapped arms for hostages with Iran, as well as the confusing results of his Iceland summit with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

On the domestic front, Reagan most probably will be asked about his failed campaign to hold onto a Republican Senate and whether he plans to take a confrontational or cooperative style with the new Democratic Congress during his final two years in office.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters Tuesday that Reagan and his staff prepare so extensively for the quizzing that "we can guess 99 out of 100 questions that you guys pose and we can tell 'em nine times out of 10 who's going to ask them."

Reagan's news conference comes a week after he attempted to curb media speculation about the deal with Iran in a nationally televised speech. Reagan said he wanted to give the facts to the American people because he had been forced by media reports to make public the secret relationship with Iran.

Fourteen percent of 1,464 adults polled nationwide by the Los Angeles Times last weekend said they found Reagan's statement essentially true.

The president said he had approved a secret effort to establish contacts with moderate elements in the Iranian government and admitted that some U.S. arms had been shipped to Iran as a result. He denied that the arms were traded for the release of three Americans held hostage in Lebanon.

The arms shipments to Iran were part of a seven-year pattern of CIA operations to gain favor with the Tehran government while at the same time trying to destabilize it, according to unnamed sources cited by The Washington Post today.

Reagan also is expected to be queried on the apparent split within his administration over the Iranian connection and his reasons for not informing congressional leaders and the Joint Chiefs of Staff about the operation.

Secretary of State George Shultz has clearly distanced himself from the administration's decision and has refused to make clear whether his aversion to the plan might prompt him to leave the administration. Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger also is reported to be uncomfortable with the administration's actions.

The New York Times reported today that Shultz asked Reagan to promise he would send no more military aid or make diplomatic contacts with Iran without State Department involvement.

The Los Angeles Times, quoting anonymous sources, reported today that Shultz has decided against resigning because he believes he succeeded in reversing the administration's position on supplying arms to Iran.

The White House and State Department denied a National Public Radio report Tuesday saying Shultz offered his resignation to the president, who asked him to stay on the job for at least two months.

Other topics are expected to be:

— Chances for a possible arms agreement with the Soviet Union and a summit in the United States in light of some of the sour exchanges between the two countries over what exactly was offered and negotiated at the Reykjavik summit.

— Reagan's occasional assertion that he offered to eliminate all offensive nuclear weapons, a statement that is at odds with the administration's repeated contention that the president proposed to eliminate only long-range ballistic missiles, not other weapons such as bombers and nuclear-tipped cruise missiles.

— Reports of an administration-directed "disinformation" campaign intended to destabilize the regime of Libya's Moammar Gadhafi by planting in the American press wrong information about U.S. plans to attack his country.

— The U.S. role in the supply of arms to the Contra rebels fighting the Marxist-led government of Nicaragua and whether private citizens such as Eugene Hasenfus — captured by Nicaragua after his plane was shot down ferrying military suppplies — secretly worked for the U.S. government. Hasenfus, who has been sentenced to 30 years in prison by the Nicaraguans, said he thought he was employed by the CIA; the administration denied it.

— The release of U.S. newsman Nicholas Daniloff by Moscow following a tense U.S.-Soviet bout of expulsions involving charges of espionage, and Reagan's assertion that Daniloff's freedom was not won by a "trade" for an accused Soviet spy, who was released at the same time.

Military doesn't back missile proposal

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON — The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff is prepared to testify before Congress that the military has not endorsed President Reagan's idea of eliminating nuclear ballistic missiles within 10 years, officials say.

Adm. William J. Crowe, in testimony expected next week, will strongly back the goal of seeking an arms accord with the Soviet Union that would one day eliminate all long-range ballistic missiles. But Crowe will stress that accomplishing such a step in 10 years is "overly ambitious" and potentially destabilizing, the officials said.

Crowe will also acknowledge, if asked, that the Pentagon brass was kept in the dark about President Reagan's decision to ship military supplies to Iran as part of a bid to improve relations with that country.

Crowe is scheduled to appear before the House Armed Services Committee next Tuesday — his first appearance on Capitol Hill since Reagan's summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev ended without agreement on a new arms control framework.

The sources declined to spell out what Crowe would say in his prepared testimony. But one official said the admiral would "eagerly" respond to congressional queries because he "believes the Congress should understand there are real concerns (on arms control) to be addressed from a military standpoint."

White House and Pentagon sources have acknowledged over the past month that Reagan's proposal for a 10-year phaseout of all ballistic missiles was advanced at the summit without prior consultation with his top military advisers.

It was only after the summit ended that the joint chiefs prepared a "preliminary analysis" of the proposal and offered their observations to the president, the sources said.

Crowe has since ordered a much more extensive review of the idea and that is now in progress.

Workers to have first encounter with new income tax forms

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 100 million workers are about to have their first encounter with the new overhaul of the federal income tax.

Within the next several days, employers across the nation will begin receiving supplies of a revised Form W-4 that every worker is required to file to adjust the amount of taxes that will be withheld from paychecks once the new law takes effect Jan. 1.

The sooner the form is filed, the better for most workers, says the Internal Revenue Service. Under the law, employees have until Oct. 1 to complete the form, but a person who waits that long could face a penalty for having too little withheld earlier in the year.

Whatever simplification is expected from the new tax law, it is not evident in the new W-4 forms. The old form and its instruction covered two pages; the new version, unveiled by the IRS at a news conference Tuesday, covers four pages and includes a 22-column table of figures.

It could have been made simpler, said IRS Commissioner Lawrence B. Gibbs. But in 1988, when workers begin filing tax returns under the new law for the first time, "many taxpayers would learn they owed thousands more in taxes and, in some cases, penalties as well," he said.

"Going from two pages to four means a more complicated-looking form and the greater likelihood of some public confusion but doing so also means people's withholding will be reasonably close to the actual amount of tax owed," Gibbs said.

The W-4 form has been revised to reflect that the new tax law raises personal exemptions and standard deductions but reduces some itemized deductions and repeals others. The aim is to permit workers to bring their withholding reasonably close to their actual tax liability.

About three-quarters of the 102 million tax returns filed this year claimed refunds, meaning those taxpayers had too much withheld from their paychecks. Refunds averaged $982. Many people deliberately have taxes over-withheld because they like to get a one-time refund, but Gibbs said those who want to balance withholding and liability will find it easier under the revised form.

To fill out the form, workers will have to estimate what adjustments (such as Individual Retirement Account contributions), itemized deductions and tax credits they will have under the new law for 1987.

Over half of all workers — chiefly those who do not itemize deductions and do not have a working spouse — will be able to adjust withholding on the new form without making any calculations at all, said Arthur Altman, the IRS official in charge of forms.

A worker may claim one withholding allowance each for self, spouse and dependents. A special allowance will be permitted a single person with only one job; a married person who has only one job and a non-earning spouse, or a married person whose second-job earnings or spouse's earnings total $2,500 or less.

In 1987, one allowance will be worth $1,900, the value of the personal exemption under the new law. That means that for each allowance claimed, $36.54 of a worker's weekly wages will be exempt from withholding.

The new form gets more complicated for those with a working spouse, more than one job or a significant amount of non-wage income. And it will be more complicated still for those who itemize deductions, claim a tax credit, take the special new deduction for being 65 or blind, or those with such deductible IRAs, business expenses, moving expenses or other adjustments.

Workers who want to be absolutely sure that enough money is withheld through the year — including those who count on getting a refund as a way to force savings — may avoid most of the trouble and simply file a W-4 claiming zero allowances.

Bombing tied with divorce proceeding

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A bombing that wounded two women apparently stemmed from a divorce proceeding involving one of the victims, said authorities, who arrested a suspect accused of delivering the device in a bouquet.

The man, who delivered the flowers to a federal government office Monday while wearing a white tuxedo and white derby, makeup and a false beard and moustache, was to be arraigned today in U.S. District Court.

Shaun Jerome Small, 27, was arrested Tuesday and held in lieu of $100,000 bond, said FBI agent Raymond Mislock.

Mislock said Small would be formally charged at his arraignment with bombing a federal building where injury could result, possession of an unregistered explosive device, and crime on a government reservation — attempted murder.

Authorities said the bombing at a General Services Administration office apparently was related to the divorce of Small's close friend and employer, Peter Pilaski, and his wife, Melanie Pilaski.

"I think it's a family relationship that needs to be unraveled," said city Police Chief Frank Jordan. "I don't think there's any kind of organized terrorist activities or anything of that nature."

Mislock said authorities wanted Pilaski for questioning, but no warrant had been issued. Small was arrested as he left a house he and Pilaski owned in Clearlake Park, about 75 miles northeast of San Francisco, said Capt. Glen Perkins of the Lake County sheriff's department.

Mrs. Pilaski, 41, and a co-worker also injured by the bomb, Pamela Castro, 42, were listed in good condition Tuesday evening at a San Francisco hospital.

Mrs. Pilaski's father, Willard Swanstrom, said Small and his son-in-law had been friends since they met in New Orleans about nine years ago, and had worked at various apartment complexes and motels Pilaski had managed.

Men part of world's main cocaine cartel

MIAMI (AP) — A Sandinista official and eight other men indicted on murder and racketeering charges were part of the world's No. 1 cocaine cartel, a ring that had private armies and drug labs in Nicaragua, authorities say.

The nine members of the "Medellin Cartel" named in a 50-page federal indictment disclosed Tuesday include a former Colombian senator who authorities say once tried to bar U.S. agents from his country and a fugitive drug lord.

The cartel has brought 58 tons of cocaine into the United States, the largest amount ever mentioned in a federal indictment, U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration spokesman Billy Yout said Tuesday.

It "not only mentions the largest cocaine seizure ever in the world, but the No. 1 traffickers in the world as we know them," Yout said.

The indictment was returned Aug. 25, but was kept secret to give Colombian officials time to arrest the nine, he said. All remain at large.

Catching them "depends greatly upon the cooperation of our neighbors in South and Central America," said Dick Gregorie, chief narcotics prosecutor for the U.S. Attorney's Office in south Florida.

The cartel members are charged with racketeering, drug offenses and two murders, the machine-gun slaying of federal informant Adler "Barry" Seal in Baton Rouge, La., and a Dec. 25, 1978, murder in Dade County.

The cartel is named for Medellin, the Colombian mountain city from where it operates, but prosecutors say Miami is its North American headquarters.

"Miami is...where most of the business returns to, whether it be the narcotics itself or the money," Gregorie said.

Testifying before the President's Commission on Organized Crime in 1984, DEA agent Herb Williams characterized the cartel as a collection of criminal billionaires with private armies and a predilection for machine-gun assassins who ride motorcycles. "A human life means absolutely nothing to these ruthless killers," Williams said.

One of those indicted is Jorge Ochoa-Vasquez of Colombia. The United States had sought his extradition from Spain on drug charges, but he was extradited to his native country where officials said he bribed a prison guard and escaped.

Seal had been expected to testify against Ochoa.

Also indicted was Federico Vaughan, an assistant to Tomas Borge, Nicaragua's minister of the interior, authorities said. Vaughan used his official position to help the cartel set up cocaine conversion laboratories and distribution facilities in Nicaragua, according to the indictment.

The operations in Nicaragua began after a 1984 Colombian crackdown ordered following the assassination of Justice Minister Rodrigo Lara-Bonilla. Vaughan also was indicted in 1984 on drug trafficking charges.

The DEA has said it has no information linking other members of Nicaragua's leftist government to Vaughan's smuggling operation.

Carlos Lehder, a former Colombian senator accused of using a Bahamian island for a drug way station and who once introduced a bill to ban U.S. DEA agents, also was named in the indictment.

Others indicted were Ochoa's brothers, Fabio and Juan David, and Pablo Escobar-Gaviria, Gonzalo Rodriguez-Gacha, Rafael Cardona-Salazar and an unidentified "John Doe."

The Ochoas, Lehder and Escobar are believed to be in Colombia, said Executive Assistant U.S. Attorney Ana Barnett. The whereabouts of the others are unknown.

NASA officials now preparing for simulated launch pad emergency

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA said a practice space shuttle countdown was successful despite a technical glitch that stopped it 25 seconds short, and officials were preparing today for a simulated launch pad emergency.

Rescue workers will help "injured" astronauts escape from the shuttle Atlantis in the drill Thursday, which will complete weeks of launch pad tests for the ship.

Tuesday's practice countdown was halted 25 seconds before simulated engine firing because of problems with computer software. The test marked the first time astronauts boarded a shuttle since the Challenger exploded Jan. 28, killing its crew of seven.

Other problems cropped up that might have stopped a real countdown, but NASA spokesman Jim Ball said officials considered the test successful because it accomplished its main goal: Keeping launch teams proficient during the long flightless period following the Challenger accident.

It was primarily a test of the launch crews here and at mission control in Houston, and not of Atlantis, Ball said.

The space agency turned its attention today to the emergency escape practice. Launch-pad briefings were scheduled for seven rookie astronauts and others who will take part.

After the astronauts board Atlantis on Thursday morning, a simulated emergency will be declared and the flight and ground crews will be directed to evacuate. Fire and rescue personnel stationed a mile away will rush to the pad to assist.

Some of the astronauts and pad personnel will be handed cards tagging them as "injured," and will be treated by medical personnel.

A statement from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said the drill will "help point out areas where the procedures or equipment can be improved, and it will provide an opportunity for all organizations that would participate in a real emergency to practice together."

The veteran five-man astronaut crew that took part in Tuesday's countdown was the same one that flew the last successful shuttle mission, on Columbia, which ended 10 days before the Challenger disaster.

Robert Gibson, the crew commander, termed the countdown a good test and said, "it was a morale booster, even though it was a simulation, and a real morale booster for the launch team. The fact that we had problems made it more relistic."

Gibson said it was "difficult to look at the launch pad and the orbiter without flashbacks (to the Challenger accident). I don't think we'll ever get over it. But I decided a long time ago I'm going to fly again."

He volunteered his crew to take the first trip when flights resume. Other members are pilot Charles Bolden and mission specialists George Nelson, Steven Hawley and Franklin Chang-Diaz.

Tuesday's exercise was to have ended with a mock engine ignition, followed by an engine failure and shutdown to give the flight crew and launch teams experience handling an emergency.

But the software problem cropped up at the nine-minute mark and resulted in a countdown hold that lasted for 29 minutes before it was resumed. Engineers did not completely understand the problem and were concerned it might cause additional troubles in the final seconds, when the countdown is under computer control. So they stopped the clock before the computer took over.

Other problems developed with a helium pressure regulator, a ground computer, a battery and a navigation system.

Ball said it was a good practice for the launch teams because they had opportunities to troubleshoot a variety of problems.

He said most of the problems were associated with procedures developed to get around the fact that Atlantis is minus many components — including the three main engines. The software that halted the count, for example, was written to account for the missing engines and would not have been used during an actual countdown, he said.

The Atlantis will be returned to a hangar on Saturday.

The three remaining shuttles have been grounded, and will be for at least 15 months while engineers redesign the faulty booster rocket joint that caused the Challenger accident.

'It's up to parents' to ensure toy safety

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consider whether those darling toys beckoning from the store window are safe and sturdy before buying them as Christmas gifts, federal safety experts are urging.

"Nothing should spoil one of the real highlights of this time of year — the sight and sound of children happily playing with their new toys," Consumer Product Safety Commission Chairman Terrence M. Scanlon said Tuesday, at the agency's annual Christmas toy safety news conference.

Most parents are pretty careful of what they buy, but still there is a need for annual reminders, added Barbara Bush, wife of Vice President George Bush.

"In spite of all that's been done through the years to make toys safer, the final responsibility always rests with parents," she said.

"It's up to us to shop wisely and to evaluate the safety of the toys we're buying our children and grandchildren before we bring them home," said Mrs. Bush.

Scanlon stressed choosing the proper toy for children of various ages, and announced that the Safety Commission has issued two new pamphlets to help parents do this.

Entitled "Which Toy for Which Child: A Consumer's Guide for Selecting Suitable Toys," the booklets come in versions for ages birth through 5 and for ages 6 through 12. They can be obtained, at no charge, by calling the commission at 800-638-2772, or writing the Office of the Secretary, Consumer Product Safety Commission, Washington, D.C., 20207.

Scanlon noted that if this year is equivalent to last, Americans will spend more than $7 billion on toys between Halloween and Christmas.

That amounts to more than half of all toy sales during the year, making it an especially important time to concentrate on buying safe items, said Scanlon.

Some 123,000 children were treated in hospital emergency rooms for toy-related injuries last year, Scanlon said. Most of the injuries were minor cuts and bruises, but 22 accidents were fatal, including incidents of children choking on small toys or parts, strangling on crib toys and being run over by vehicles while riding tricycles and other toys.

To help parents and other adults buying toys, the Safety Commission provided a variety of safety suggestions. These include:

— Check for sturdy toy construction, and when buying soft toys make sure the eyes, nose and other attached parts are secure.

— When buying for infants and toddlers, avoid items with small parts they may put in their mouth or long strings which could get twisted around the child's neck.

— Arrows or darts used by children should have soft cork tips, rubber suction cups or other protective devices. Make sure these tips are securely attached.

— Electric toys with heating elements should be given only to children over age 8, and then only with adult supervision.

Report: CIA conducted Iranian operations for seven years

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA has conducted operations in Iran for seven years designed to thaw relations with Tehran and simultaneously help its internal opponents, a published report says.

The Reagan administration's once-secret program of contacts and arms shipments to Iran was just a part of that effort, which started during the Carter administration, The Washington Post reported in today's editions.

At the same time, Pentagon and administration officials told The Associated Press that the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff is prepared to tell Congress that the Pentagon knew nothing of President Reagan's decision to ship military supplies to Iran to improve relations with that country.

The Post report, citing intelligence and other sources it did not identify, said the CIA provided the government of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini with a list of between 100 and 200 names of people said to be Soviet collaborators and intelligence agents. About 200 suspects were executed, dealing a major blow to Soviet operations and influence in Iran, the report said.

Under President Carter, while 52 Americans were being held captive in Tehran, the CIA began several operations against Khomeini, designed to gather information and inflict "punishment" on the Iranian government, the article said.

Since then, the CIA has supported opponents of the Khomeini regime, the report said.

These efforts have included sending nearly $6 million in aid to the Front for the Liberation of Iran, the Paris-based main group of Iranian exiles opposed to Khomeini; providing equipment and money for the Front's anti-Khomeini radio station in Egypt, which broadcasts into Iran; and supplying a transmitter so Reza Pahlavi, son of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, could beam an 11-minute broadcast into Iran two months ago.

The Post, quoting administration sources, also reported that among the supplies Reagan sent Iran in recent months were parts for Hawk anti-aircraft missiles and for TOW antitank missiles.

Adm. William J. Crowe, chairman of the joint chiefs, has been called to testify next Tuesday before the House Armed Services Committee. The officials, who asked not to be named, said neither Crowe nor the other members of the joint chiefs had been informed about the secret Iranian arms shipments.

"The chairman had no knowledge," said one. "There's nothing he can add to that."

Publicly, spokesmen for Crowe and the Pentagon declined to discuss what the admiral will say.

Robert Sims, the Pentagon's chief spokesman, told reporters on Tuesday that Crowe "will certainly say what he wants to without any constraints from the department."

Sims refused to discuss Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger's knowledge of, or opposition to, the Iranian arms shipment program, which was run by officials of the White House's National Security Council. Sims said Weinberger had no intention of commenting publicly "on matters discussed at the White House."

Secretary of State George Shultz has made no secret of the fact that he opposed providing military hardware to Iran.

The New York Times reported in today's editions that Shultz has asked Reagan for a firm commitment not to provide more military equipment to Iran and to agree that future diplomatic contacts with Tehran have State Department participation.

The newspaper quoted unidentified officials as saying that Shultz had told Reagan that unless those requests were honored, it would make no sense for him to keep serving in the administration.

State Department and White House spokesman also denied a National Public Radio report Tuesday that Shultz had offered his resignation to Reagan.

Despite the fact that the disagreement of Shultz with the administration became public, Reagan is not annoyed with the secretary and wants him to stay on, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said.

He said also that the president wants his national security adviser, John Poindexter, to stay on the job. Poindexter has been widely reported to have coordinated the secret diplomatic contacts with Iran, which have been criticized sharply on Capitol Hill and elsewhere.

Referring to a report suggesting that there would be a Cabinet reshuffling, Speakes said, "I haven't heard anybody give him (Reagan) that advice and I haven't given it to him."

Asked directly whether Shultz would remain in the Cabinet, Speakes said, "As far as I'm concerned, as far as the president's concerned."

Speakes reiterated that the White House will make information about U.S.-Iran contacts "available in detail to the Congress, in formal briefings and in testimony this week. We're not holding anything back."

Military health plan part of system overhaul

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon will experiment for a year with a private health plan for one-third of the military beneficiaries as it seeks to overhaul the system for 5.1 million dependents and retirees.

The Defense Department will solicit bids for four demonstration projects in six states and one major metropolitan area for the experiment, according to a notice provided Congress.

The demonstration projects, which the Defense Department believes will silence congressional concerns about the change, will affect an estimated 1.7 million military retirees and dependents starting in early 1988.

The Pentagon's plan is outlined in a 15-page "Report To Congress," sent to Capitol Hill under a cover letter dated Nov. 17. A copy of the document was obtained Tuesday by The Associated Press.

Under the plan, bids will be solicited in January and then four contracts awarded to health-care providers who will dispense care to retirees and dependents in the test areas for a set annual fee.

Those contractors will put themselves "at risk," meaning they will lose money if unable to provide the necessary care at the agreed price.

The four contracts together are expected to total more than $600 million.

One contract will be awarded for each of three pairs of states: California and Hawaii, North and South Carolina, and Georgia and Florida. The New Orleans metropolitan area will have its own contract.

Assuming the one-year demonstration programs work as expected, the revisions would be extended nationwide to encompass all 5.1 million eligible retirees and dependents.

The Pentagon informed Congress it believes its plan "provides a true test of the reform initiative, enhances marketwide competition, (and) facilitates nationwide implementation..."

The effort is aimed at replacing the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services. That is the insurance plan that covers dependents and retirees when they turn to the civilian sector for care because space is not available in military hospitals.

Roughly 75 percent of the care provided retirees and dependents is dispensed at military facilities. The remaining 25 percent is provided by the civilian sector, amounting to almost 6 million claims a year.

Under the current program, dependents and retirees who use private physicians or civilian hospitals must pay $50 or $100 annual deductibles plus either 20 percent or 25 percent of their medical bill. The remainder is paid by the program, which is financed by taxpayers.

The Defense Department wants to scrap the current program because it reimburses physicians and hospitals on a "billed-charges basis," meaning a physician is under no obligation to hold his fees to any maximum limit. That differs from the Medicare system, for example, which has switched to a system of pre-set payments to hospitals depending on the patient's diagnosis.

According to the Pentagon, the cost of operating the current program has skyrocketed in recent years, with the system costing an estimated $1.8 billion in fiscal 1986.

The Pentagon wants to get out of the health insurance business and rely instead on regional contractors. The contractor could be an insurance company, health maintenance organization or for-profit or nonprofit hospital chain but would have to agree to live by its contract bid for providing care.

The contractor would thus have an incentive to hold down health care costs, because his success would directly affect his profits.

To make the new system work, retirees and dependents will be asked to use only the hospitals and doctors that the contractor lines up. In return for voluntarily enrolling, the beneficiary would not have to pay the deductible and other fees required under the current program.

The new system would not force a dependent or retiree to enroll, nor would it change the right of dependents and retirees to use military hospitals on a "space-available" basis. But if an individual didn't enroll and could not gain admittance to a military hospital, he would have to continue shouldering part of his own medical bill.

The demonstration program outlined in the new Pentagon report mirrors a proposal first unveiled last June — except that it has been scaled back at Congress' insistence. Instead of scrapping the entire Civilian Health and Medical Program system by the fall of 1987, as the Pentagon proposed, Congress ordered a test program covering no more than one-third of all eligible beneficiaries.

Captured spirit

Midland lost an outstanding civic leader recently with the departure of Tom Wageman, president of RepublicBank First National Midland, who resigned to become chairman and chief executive officer of Sunbelt Savings Association in Dallas.

And his contributions to Midland were made more impressive by the fact that he had been a Tall City resident for only a little more than three years, coming here from Chicago in July of 1983. It is not often that a newcomer chalks up a history of community service to equal Wageman's during so brief a time.

Hired by the former First National Bank of Midland to help solve financial problems of that longtime and highly respected institution, Tom Wageman both understood and quickly became a participant in what can be called "the spirit of Midland."

He was involved in the work of 27 local organizations at the time of his resignation including the Chamber of Commerce, Industrial Foundation, Buffalo Trail Council, High Sky Children's Foundation, and Hospice, to mention only a few. But one of the most important was his work as this year's campaign chairman of Midland United Way, a responsibility which caused him to stay here longer than he otherwise would have.

At this year's campaign finale, he was credited with being a driving force behind the 1986 drive and it is not likely anyone would doubt that the tribute was well deserved. This year's campaign, despite local economic conditions, was a big success, topping the amount announced at a finale celebration last year. And while Wageman would be the first to give credit to all who contributed or played a role in the drive, no matter how small, he was responsible for much of the enthusiasm and planning that led to success.

There is no doubt that he shouldered more than his share of civic responsibility while making his home in Midland and we join others in wishing him well as he assumes his new tasks in Dallas.

Another View:

Reagan's initiative

President Reagan offered compelling reasons in a nationwide television address on Nov. 13 why sending "small amounts" of weapons to Iran was in the national interest. His explanation doubtless will not still some congressional criticism of his 18-month secret diplomatic initiative, but it is indeed important that it be given every opportunity to succeed.

In recent days published reports proclaimed that the United States has violated its arms embargo against Iran by shipping military equipment as ransom for half a dozen U.S. hostages held by Moslem extremists. Mr. Reagan was concerned that confirming details of the renewal of relations with faction-ridden Iran would jeopardize the safety of the remaining six Americans, but wisely concluded that the overall issue of U.S. credibility dictated disclosure of the facts.

He said the defensive weapons that could "easily fit into a single cargo plane" were sent for these reasons:

— As a signal to Iran of U.S. earnestness in wanting to renew a relationship that ended with the overthrow of the U.S.-backed shah of Iran in 1979.

— To bring an honorable end to the bloody six-year Iran-Iraq war, which is a constant threat to overall Middle East peace.

— To prevent the Soviet Union from dominating Iran, which dominates a region containing 55 percent of the world's proven oil reserves.

"Geography explains why the Soviet Union has sent an army into Afghanistan to dominate that country and, if they could, Iran and Pakistan," Mr. Reagan said.

— To encourage Iran to eliminate state-sponsored terrorism, and as a token of its faith to use its influence on the Islamic Jihad in Lebanon to release the U.S. hostages it has taken. But Mr. Reagan insisted, "We did not — repeat, did not — trade weapons or anything else for hostages. Nor will we. ... We have not, nor will we, capitulate to terrorists."

Mr. Reagan clearly has not wanted to discuss the arms shipments or his attempt to establish relations with moderate factions in Iran because of hopes they will come to power when the ailing Ayatollah Khomeini, 86, dies. Officials say Mr. Reagan did not break the U.S. arms embargo to Iran because he secretly lifted the embargo, a distinction that will no doubt draw criticism.

Mr. Reagan's policy clearly has risks, such as that represented by the abduction of three American hostages since his secret diplomacy began. But he compares the venture to that of President Nixon in 1979 when he sent Henry Kissinger on a secret mission to China that resulted in renewed relations with that Asian giant. That was in the national interest, just as Mr. Reagan's initiative with Iran is.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 19, the 323rd day of 1986. There are 42 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 19, 1863, President Abraham Lincoln delivered his Gettysburg Address as he dedicated a national cemetery at the site of the Civil War battlefield in Pennsylvania.

"We here highly resolve," said Lincoln, "that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the Earth."

On this date:

In 1794, the United States and Britain signed the Jay Treaty, which resolved some of the issues left over from the Revolutionary War.

In 1831, James Garfield, 20th president of the United States, was born in Orange, Ohio.

In 1917, Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi was born.

In 1919, the U.S. Senate rejected the Treaty of Versailles by a 55-39 vote.

In 1942, during World War II, Russian forces launched their winter offensive against the Germans along the Don front.

In 1969, the Ford Motor Co. announced it was halting production of the Edsel.

In 1969, Apollo XII astronauts Charles Conrad and Alan Bean made man's second landing on the moon.

In 1977, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat arrived in Israel on a mission of peace.

In 1978, first word began to reach the outside world of the Jonestown mass murder-suicide in Guyana, in which more than 900 members of the Peoples Temple died.

In 1984, nearly 500 people died in a firestorm set off by a series of explosions at a petroleum storage plant on the edge of Mexico City.

Ten years ago: A federal judge in San Francisco released newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst on $1.5 million bail while she appealed her bank robbery conviction.

Five years ago: The United States issued a low-key response to the Soviet Union's dismissal of President Reagan's latest arms control offer, saying Soviet media had been hasty in their criticism.

One year ago: President Reagan and Soviet leader Gorbachev met for the first time at their summit in Geneva. The two leaders met twice that day for a total of more than four hours in what was described as a "good atmosphere."

Today's birthdays: Actor Alan Young is 67. Baseball hall-of-famer Roy Campanella is 65. Former United Nations Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick is 60. Talk show host Larry King is 53. Talk show host Dick Cavett is 50. Broadcasting and sports executive Ted Turner is 48. NBC journalist Garrick Utley is 47. Actor Dan Haggerty is 45.

JACK ANDERSON

Mercenaries thought CIA backed them

WASHINGTON — How did eight American soldiers of fortune think they and 100 native guerrillas could land on the coast of Ghana in rubber boats and overthrow Jerry Rawlings, president of the West African nation of some 13 million?

Jack Anderson

Easy: They were convinced they had the official if secret backing of the CIA and the National Security Council. To their dismay, they learned otherwise after Brazilian authorities seized their Argentine-registered freighter on its way to Africa loaded with weapons last March.

As we've reported, the eight mercenaries, all Vietnam veterans, are now languishing in a Rio de Janeiro jail. They have, as the phrase goes, been hung out to dry by the shadowy individuals who suckered them into the cockamamie plot. The CIA has denied any involvement, and the man they claim recruited them says he did no such thing.

The bizarre story might strike some as funny, but it's no laughing matter to the eight Americans. Although the Brazilian charges against them were overturned by an appellate court, they remain in their vermin-infested cells awaiting a decision on their possible extradition to Argentina on charges of trafficking in contraband.

Details of the Rambo team's recruitment are provided in a diary written by one of the eight, Steve Hedrick. Our reporters Corky Johnson and Robert Young have seen the diary and letters the prisoners sent to family members in this country.

Hedrick, a weapons expert in Vietnam, wrote that he was signed up by one Ted Bishop. At the first "team meeting" in Argentina, Hedrick wrote, Bishop told the group: "You are being hired to overthrow the communist-backed government of Ghana. It's a joint effort between the U.S., Argentina and another unnamed country. This mission is sanctioned from the highest office in the country."

According to Hedrick, Bishop also told them: "I work directly for the NSC. I have walk-in access." He told them, Hedrick wrote, that he had worked for the CIA-run airline, Air America, in Southeast Asia during the Vietnam War.

The Americans were to train a force of 100 Ghanaian rebels, apparently on board the freighter after picking them up off the Ivory Coast, which adjoins Ghana on the west coast of Africa. The invasion would be launched in rubber boats from the ship. Part of the Americans' mission was to rescue two CIA agents from a Ghanaian prison.

The leader of the amphibious operation was to be Godfrey Osei, a former Ghanaian official. According to our sources, he told the Americans that he had raised $500,000 for the invasion, with the help of a supposed Israeli agent named Solomon and what Osei called the "Chinese Mafia" in New York City.

As luck would have it, neither Osei nor Bishop were aboard the arms-laden Argentine freighter Norbistor when Brazilian police seized it. Bishop told us he has never worked for any government agency. He acknowledged that he had helped arrange the arms deal for Osei, but denied having recruited the mercenaries for either the CIA or the NSC.

Compounding the Americans' unfortunate situation, they told their families, the U.S. Embassy in Brazil has done nothing to help them get better treatment from their jailers. The embassy denied the prisoners' charges.

POPULAR DIGEST: Relatively speaking, our intelligence sources say, the irascible Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini of Iran is a popular, charismatic leader. The catch, of course, is the phrase "relatively speaking." The intelligence experts are comparing Khomeini with his rival dictators in the Middle East, which may be like comparing rotten apples and rotten oranges. At any rate, the analysts think Khomeini clearly has a stronger hold on the affections of his people than do the rulers of Syria, Iraq and Libya — or even Saudi Arabia and Jordan. He might do well in a free election, they say.

INTERAGENCY VENDETTA?: The Justice Department has quietly put out the word that it is investigating a former House staffer, Ted Mehl. As an investigator for a subcommittee chaired by Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., Mehl successfully fought the administration to get patrol aircraft for the Customs Service to use in the war against drug smugglers. Now Mehl has transferred to the agency to help it manage the aircraft. Justice Department officials say they're concerned about a possible conflict of interest, but our sources believe the department is just taking revenge on Mehl for his success in enhancing the Customs Service's drug role.

MINI-EDITORIAL: Those who ignore history aren't always doomed to repeat it; some of them become TV anchormen. One distinguished network news host mused the other night on the coincidence that the late, unlamented Soviet apparatchik Vyacheslav Molotov had died just one day after the anniversary of "the Bolshevik revolution, which overthrew the czar." The facts, of course, are that the Bolshevik "revolution" was actually a coup d'etat, and that the czar was overthrown eight months earlier in the authentic, truly popular Russian revolution of 1917. That "bourgeois" revolution, of course, is never celebrated in the Soviet Union.

TOM WICKER

Individual responsibility kept senator serving

NEW YORK — One recent afternoon, not long after most members of the 99th Congress had departed to campaign or to rest, Sen. Charles McC. Mathias, Republican of Maryland, was in his office pondering such details as sans-serif type and boldface caps for a redesigned Congressional Record.

Tom Wicker

Changes in that venerable publication could cause an uproar on tradition-conscious Capitol Hill. But Mac Mathias, as chairman of the Senate's housekeeping Rules Committee, could pick and choose without concern. After 26 years in Congress, eight in the House and the last 18 in the Senate, he had decided to go home — in his case, just to the Washington suburbs.

Any senator's departure might ordinarily be less earthshaking than a revamped Congressional Record; but the Mathias retirement opened his seat to the Democrats in a year when the Republicans needed to hold every one they could. Barbara Mikulski, a Baltimore Democrat, won it by a smashing 61 percent — which only emphasizes how remarkable it was that Mac Mathias could win three Senate terms in one of the most Democratic states in the nation.

He did it not only by being reasonably liberal — Ronald Reagan, before he began to need Senate votes, accused him of not being a true Republican — but because he was fair, flexible, concerned, able to rise above partisanship but not above responsibility. His reward from his party was to be euchred out of the chairmanship of the judiciary committee when seniority should have brought it to him in 1981, instead, conservatives persuaded ancient Strom Thurmond of South Carolina to jump from the armed services committee to block him.

But Mac Mathias is not a bitter man. He chooses to remember happier events — improving, for instance, the pension of a Confederate veteran's widow who for years had never received the cost-of-living increases she was due — and larger satisfactions, like the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal National Historical Park that runs through Maryland. In the House in 1961, Mac Mathias introduced the legislation establishing the park; then he saw action completed in the Senate in 1969.

"When I put that bill in," he recalled, "old Clarence Brown (an Ohio congressman) said 'Whoever heard of a national park 20 miles wide?' I told him 'Yes, but it's 180 miles long.' Now I like to drive along the canal and see the people out there enjoying themselves."

It's not well enough remembered that when President Kennedy — who was elected the year Mac Mathias went to the House — failed to submit a promised civil rights bill during his first Congress, three Republicans introduced one in January 1963, before Kennedy sent up what became the Civil Rights Act of 1964. They were John Lindsay of New York, William McCullough of Ohio and Mac Mathias.

"Ours wasn't as extensive as the final bill," Mathias conceded, "but it was the clear forerunner and had a lot to do with Republican support in the House."

After 18 years, he still admires the Senate as an institution in which only "collective strength" — often bipartisan — makes positive action possible; but one, too, in which only one member, if he or she "has the desire to do it, can really slow down a freight train" — for example, proposals that may threaten civil liberties or constitutional rights but have the backing of a majority motivated by momentary passions.

But he sees the Senate functioning poorly in recent years, owing to complex new problems (energy, the environment, foreign trade), the substitution of "a single omnibus bill no one understands" for the traditional authorization-appropriations procedure, a "less felicitous atmosphere" among more ideological senators, and contentious issues, such as acid rain and abortion.

Which senators, among all those he served with, had he most respected? Without hesitation, he named "Fulbright, Javits, John Sherman Cooper, Cliff Case, Phil Hart, Mike Mansfield, George Aiken."

Why? "Individual responsibility. Each one of those people would take an issue on his own responsibility. They wouldn't have to have the cover of some ideology. They'd simply come to the conclusion that this was the right thing for the country."

Such "individual responsibility," in his own career, surely is another reason Democratic Maryland kept Republican Mac Mathias in the Senate as long as he'd stay.

ART BUCHWALD

Is real need quality time or quality listening?

You hear a lot about quality time. Quality time is the time that parents are supposed to devote to their children when they don't have a lot of real time to give them.

Art Buchwald

For example, Dad comes home from work late and has to go to a dinner party. The time he spends with the kids after he showers and gets dressed and before he leaves for the party is called quality time. And because of its intensity, it is considered the finest time of all.

"It isn't how many hours you share with the children," Milton Dunlap, who is a quality time salesman, told me, "but what you do with the time that counts. The 15 minutes I devote to the kids each day means more to me than the three or four hours I spend watching football on television."

"And the kids feel it," I said.

"Last week I had to go to Detroit. I insisted the entire family ride to the airport with me so we could put in some quality time together. We got more than we asked for."

"How come?"

"My plane was an hour late. I used my time to find out where they were going, and they used theirs to find out where I was coming from."

Dunlap continued, "The trip to the airport gave me a wonderful idea. It occurred to me kids should give as much quality time to their parents as the parents give to them."

"That's ridiculous," I said. "Where would kids find any time for their parents? Have you ever seen a teenager's calendar?"

"It won't be easy, but even young people can make time if they really want to. The trouble with our offspring is they think just because they are in the same room playing a Madonna record that they have spent time with us. This isn't true. Parents secretly want their kids to listen to them and share their pain. That is why quality time has so much meaning."

"What is the best way of giving quality time?"

"Kids should drop whatever they are doing and pay attention to parents who are trying to get their attention. Teenagers are so wrapped up in themselves that they tend to forget the needs of grown-ups. Just because fathers and mothers say very little does not mean they aren't dying to communicate with their children."

"What makes parents hurt the most?"

"How would you like to spend $40,000 to send your daughter to college and find the only time you hear her voice is on her answering machine?"

"Are you trying to tell me that listening to an answering machine is not considered quality time?"

"Not really. But that doesn't mean parents are unwilling to settle for it."

I asked Dunlap, "How much quality time do you think a child owes his parents?"

"Five minutes would be sufficient," he said.

"You're crazy. Where could a kid find five minutes to spend with his parents?"

"Many children could do it when they're choking down their breakfast."

"If I could get five minutes with my kids I'd be sitting on the top of the world," I said.

"You have to make children realize how important quality time is. If kids produce a generation of surly and unruly senior citizens they will have no one to blame but themselves."

NATION IN BRIEF

Swedes get list of residents suspected in Nazi crimes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Swedish government received a list of a dozen people living in that country who are suspected of committing Nazi war crimes against Jews in Latvia and Estonia in 1941.

"We trust that your government will fully investigate these individuals and the overall question of how many Nazi war criminals may have made their way to Sweden after World War II," Rabbi Abraham Cooper and Rabbi Marvin Hier said in a letter to Swedish Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson.

The letter and the list, compiled by the Nazi-hunting Simon Wiesenthal Center of Los Angeles, were delivered to the Swedish Embassy on Tuesday.

"We're dealing with people who were hands-on killers," Hier told a news conference, saying most of the suspects were members of Latvian and Estonian police units that collaborated with the Germans.

Hier said he and Cooper were told that the Swedish government was "anxiously awaiting" receipt of the war-crimes information.

Journalist eyed as terrorist

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Colombian government said no evidence has shown journalist Patricia Lara is a terrorist or Cuban agent, while the editor of her newspaper said she had "her heart in Cuba and her money in New York."

The statements Tuesday from Colombian Foreign Minister Julio Londono and El Tiempo Editor Enrique Santos came in the wake of an accusation by a top State Department official that Ms. Lara was a leading member of the terrorist group M-19.

Elliott Abrams, undersecretary of state for inter-American affairs, made the accusation in an interview aired Sunday night on CBS-TV's "60 Minutes" but offered no evidence beyond saying his statements were backed up by 10 years' worth of intelligence information.

"Lara told me that she has her heart in Cuba and her money in New York," said Santos, who denied that she was a Cuban agent.

Marchers support bishop

WASHINGTON (AP) — Peace marchers who walked across America for nuclear disarmament gave petitions bearing 1,000 names to the pope's U.S. representative, supporting a Roman Catholic bishop disciplined by the Vatican.

"As the Great Peace March completes its transcontinental pilgrimage in Washington, we would like to express our appreciation and solidarity to Archbishop Raymond Hunthausen of Seattle," said the statement delivered Tuesday to the residence of Archbishop Pio Laghi, Pope John Paul II's delegate to the United States.

There was no immediate reaction from Laghi, who was not home at the time.

Hunthausen complained to fellow bishops at their annual meeting last week that he had been unfairly stripped of some of his authority as an archbishop after a Vatican investigation conducted behind "a shroud of secrecy."

He is a strong critic of the nuclear arms race and has refused to pay taxes on half his income in recent years to protest U.S. military spending.

FAA still 'deserves' award

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire says the Federal Aviation Administration still deserves his "Fleece of the Month" award for a loan program, despite the fact that a vote he cast eight years ago helped the program continue.

Last week Proxmire cited the FAA for wasting government money, citing the loan guarantee program that helped small airlines finance aircraft purchases but also made the FAA liable for any defaults.

FAA Administrator Donald Engen, after a little research, shot back a letter to Proxmire this week saying he was returning the award and suggested that it best find a resting place in the senator's office.

Even so, Proxmire insisted in a telephone interview from Milwaukee, the FAA still has some explaining to do about its track record in selecting the airlines for the loan guarantees.

County forecasts

Midland, Ector, Glasscock, Upton, Reagan, Crane, Gaines, Andrews, Dawson, Borden, Martin and Howard counties: Tonight decreasing clouds and windy with a low in the upper 40s. Southwest wind 10 to 15 mph shifting to the north 20 to 30 mph and gusty late. A lake wind advisory will be required. Thursday fair and windy with patchy blowing dust high in the middle 60s.

Windy, dusty day expected

From Staff and Wire Reports

Permian Basin-area residents can expect a windy night and a windy, dusty Thursday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Southwesterly winds at 10-15 mph will shift to the north at 20-30 mph and gusting late tonight. Thursday, winds out of the north at 15-25 mph and gusting may be expected, but will shift to the northeast at 10-15 mph during the afternoon.

A low in the upper 40s is predicted for tonight, along with decreasing cloudiness. Fair skies, a high in the middle 60s, and patchy, blowing dust are in the NWS forecast for Thursday.

Tuesday's high of 65 was 19 degrees below the record high set for that date in 1981. Today's low of 44 was 24 degrees above the record low set for this date in 1980.

STATE

Light northerly winds behind a cold front were turning back out of the south of the Panhandle today.

But western parts of the state received some rain early Wednesday because of a system over New Mexico.

In South Texas, rain is expected in most areas except the deep South. Temperatures should become cooler as winds pick up Thursday. Highs should be in the 70s and 80s. Lows should be in the low 50s and 60s.

West Texas should be fair and cooler tonight and Thursday. Lows should be in the upper 30s in the Panhandle, the uper 40s in the Permian Basin and the lower 50s in the Concho Valley. Highs should be in the 50s and 60s and in the 70s in the Big Bend valleys.

NATION

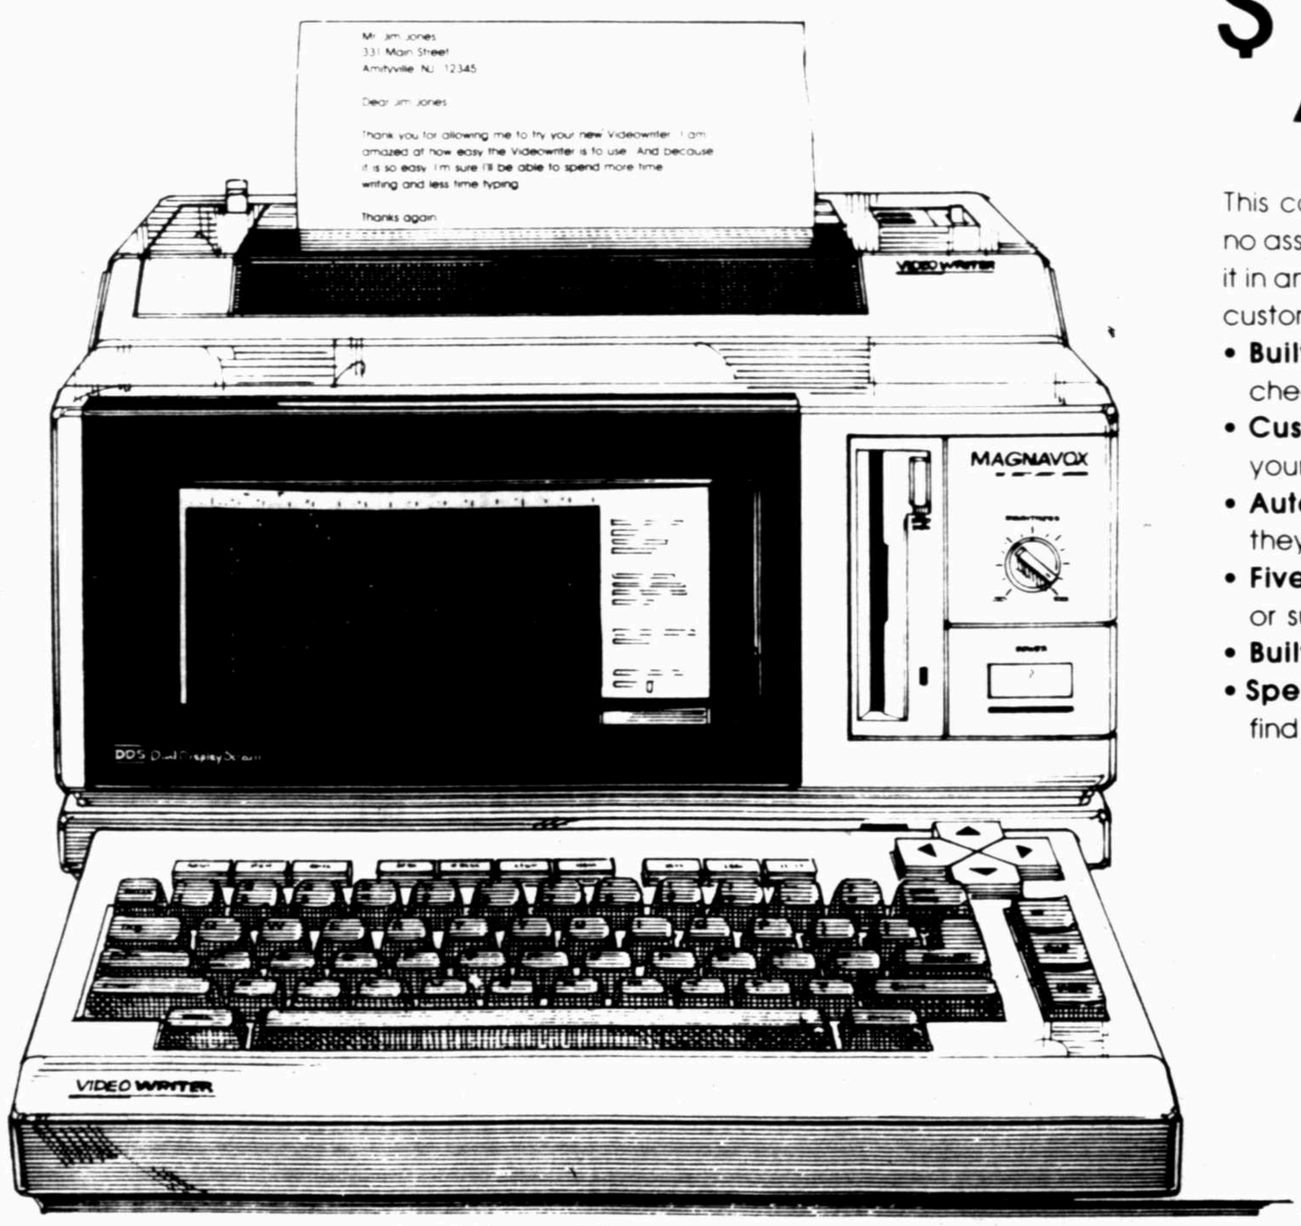

A storm sent snow across the Northeast today and temperatures fell to record lows in Michigan, while strong winds lashed sections of the West and much of the South was balmy.

Parts of north-central Pennsylvania had up to a foot of snow, along with strong winds; and Binghamton, N.Y., and Wilmington, Vt., had a 6-inch snowfall by early today. Travelers' advisories were widespread in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Vermont, Massachusetts and Connecticut.

Snow fell across much of Pennsylvania, New York and New England; and rain spread along the mid-Atlantic coast and through coastal Massachusetts.

Freezing rain was mixed with snow in northwestern North Dakota and northeastern Montana. Snow also was falling in Colorado over the northern and central mountains.

Co-op tunes up cotton gin for '86 season

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The slim-pickings in the West Texas cotton fields probably are in dead heat with the poor boys in the oil patch.

Cotton is not faring too well in the fields or at the gin.

On Tuesday, the gin hands at the Midland Farmers Co-op cotton gin fired up their machinery, as Gin Superintendent Charlie Wright listened and watched for kinks and gremlins to work out of the equipment.

The gin turned out a mere five bales of early-harvest cotton late in the season.

"Most of it is all right," Hoot Leonard, co-op manager, said of the equipment. "We have minor bugs. We're working on them."

The "firing up" on Tuesday mainly was to get the gin "tuned up" for steady running after Midland County farmers start infusing the gin with modules and trailer-loads of raw cotton.

Leonard said that Cap Rock Electric Co-operative, which supplies power to the gin, allowed the gin a two-hour tune-up on Tuesday without asking for the $3,000 "demand charge" when the surge of electricity hits the gin early in the ginning season. Cap Rock buys its power from Texas Electric Power Co.

"They (Cap Rock) forgave us that (the demand charge). We'll have to pay for the power we used," Leonard said of the tune-up period. "It's really considerate for them to let us check our machinery out."

The power use and demand fee will run about $10,500 a month during the two-month ginning season.

The gin's first bale of cotton was produced by Midland County farmer Al Spinks.

After the gin gets cranked up for the 1986 ginning season in about two weeks, the gin initially will be running about 12 hours a day, said Wright, and possibly will be running 24 hours a day, as the cotton supply builds up. "We'll put on a night shift and run 24 hours a day."

"We're going to start up the gin when they (farmers) bring enough cotton in to keep us busy," Wright said. In about two weeks, the cotton may be mature and dry enough for proper ginning. "It's hard to tell," due to the weather and cotton conditions, Wright said.

The ginning season is getting off to a late start simply because cotton was planted late as a result of late rains. But since late May, when the showers and rains started, the farm lands have been virtually soaked. Cotton was late maturing, is spotted, full of "trash" and will be graded lower and, consequently, will bring in lower-than-top-market prices.

"That's low middling spot," Leonard said of a sample of cotton that came out of his fields. It wasn't quite ready for ginning but was ginned anyway.

"It's discolored. It's got trash in it. And it's got (yellow) spots in it."

Much of the short-staple Upland cotton produced in Midland County is woven into denim for the making of blue jeans.

"We'll have to do something else with that — make shotgun wadding," Leonard said of his spotted cotton sample.

Leonard estimated that in 1986 the gin will be processing about 7,000 bales — a dramatic drop from 1985's 11,960 bales. "By this day last year, we had ginned 3,271 bales," he said.

While Midland County is just getting primed for its ginning season, gins at Midkiff and St. Lawrence southeast of Midland have been in operation since October.

"They had an earlier crop than we did — planted earlier," Leonard said. "They've got a good crop — both of them."

But north and east of here, cotton is not faring so well.

"Dawson, Howard and Martin counties are all shredding up a storm," he said.

"They're estimating it to be three or four pounds per acre," Leonard lamented.

"We've got some cotton that's going to be shredded (in Midland County)," Leonard said. "I've got some that's not worth shredding."

Kent Porter/Reporter-Telegram

Hoot Leonard looks over the five bales of Midland County cotton which was ginned Tuesday in a "tune-up" run of the Midland Farmers Co-op cotton gin. The unusually late ginning, caused by a late planting and rainy weather, is to get under way here in about two weeks. Leonard is co-op manager.

Witness identifies defendant as assailant

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

Testimony continued today in the trial of a Midland man accused of the sexual assault of an 11-year-old girl last May, as the key prosecution witness became the second in as many days to identify the defendant.

Josie Briones testified she was in her kitchen when her cousin's daughters, who testified Tuesday, came in "scared and screaming."

She said after they told her what happened she ran to a nearby alley and found the victim crying. She said she chased a black man who she saw run from the alley.

Ms. Briones testified she chased the man in a pickup truck across the railroad tracks along U.S. 80.

She identified the man as the defendant.

Blaisdell Young, 24, is on trial for the May 23 rape of the girl in an alley near Terrell and Mineola streets in southeast Midland. Young was convicted of rape of a child in 1979 and served time in state prison.

The state's witnesses Tuesday included two sisters, ages 6 and 7, who told the jury a black man attacked the girl in an alley.

The sisters, who 142nd State District Judge Pat Baskin certified as competent to testify, told the six-man, six-woman jury they were with the victim returning from a nearby convenience store when a black man, wearing a ladies' stocking over his head, grabbed the 11-year-old.

The older sister told prosecutor Ralph Petty the man had a screwdriver in his hand and threatened to kill her if she made any noise; she said the man "got on top of her" and took off her clothes.

Raul Ortiz, who testified he was near the alley at the time of the attack, told the jury he heard the three girls scream, and saw a man, who he identified as the defendant, with his arm around the victim.

"I told him to put her down, and then I started walking toward him," Ortiz said. "He pushed her down and started running."

But under cross-examination from defense counsel Chris McCormack, Ortiz contradicted earlier tesimony, and said the man he saw had no stocking on his head, was never on top of the girl. He also said when the man started running, the girl's clothes were torn, but not removed.

Montford says Texas 'one of three front runners' for SSC

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — State Sen. John Montford said Tuesday reports indicate Texas is "one of three front runners" for location of the proposed massive superconducting super collider project.

Addressing a luncheon gathering of representatives from several West Texas cities sponsored by the Greater Odessa Chamber of Commerce at the Odessa Country Club, the Lubbock senator recognized Johnnie Lou Avery of Big Spring and Charles Perry of Odessa, who are members of the Texas National Research Commission. The commission will be responsible for the effort to obtain the SSC project for Texas. Perry has just been appointed to the commission by Gov. Mark White and Ms. Avery has been involved with the project since 1983.

Observing that Texas is going to "have to play catch up with the other 49 states," Montford said he believes it important the commission first do two things. "Get busy in a hurry and get a liaison going with Governor-elect (Bill) Clements to insure that we retain representation from West Texas on the committee and move forward as quickly as possible," he said.

"I suppose the number one priority that we should all recognize," Montford said, "is to try to get the project in Texas" and then work to locate the SSC in West Texas.

Odessa chamber President Bill Griffin introduced Ms. Avery who briefly explained that a recent SSC site selection meeting in Columbus, Ohio, saw 18 states make presentations. The governor of Ohio, she said, opened the meeting, stating that Ohio was dedicated to obtaining the SSC project for that state. Ohio, she said, has already spent $5 million in its effort to obtain location of the SSC and the governor said that state is prepared to spend another $65 million.

Department of Energy Secretary John Herrington is scheduled to recommend the project to President Reagan within the next few months, she said, and then it will go to Congress. The first job we must do, Ms. Avery said, is get the project approved and then work to get it earmarked for Texas.

Perry said efforts to obtain such projects for Texas are not new. Referring to Adolph Janko, West Texas Chamber of Commerce representative, he recalled that they had been involved in an effort 25 years ago to locate a national research laboratory here that finally went to Illinois. So, he said, we have some experience in efforts of this nature.

Ralph McLaughlin, chairman of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce SSC committee, said when the committee was formed about a year ago, "we were so far behind you couldn't even see the smoke of the others."

However, he said, in the last year the group has made "tremendous strides." The group is made up of representatives from San Angelo, Big Spring, Midland and Odessa. The chambers of commerces in the four cities so far have contributed about $108,500 to the effort to obtain the facility for West Texas.

"The fact that we were able to work together is one of the relieving things about all of this," McLaughlin said. "If we don't get the SSC, I'd have to say the effort has been worth it in getting the four communities to join together in an effort of this magnitude," he said.

The proposed site identified in West Texas for location of the SSC facility is near Garden City. The project, as presently conceived, would feature an underground tunnel contained in a 100-mile-long ring that would straddle the intersection of four counties, Midland, Glasscock, Upton and Reagan.

Preliminary estimates set the cost at about $6 billion, but studies produced by the WTCC SSC committee indicate the project can be done of the Garden City site for about $2.3 billion because of lower land and construction costs, as well ideal topographical and geological features.

Agencies asked to develop low-income housing program

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

The Midland Housing Finance Corporation is again taking a serious look at housing for the city's low-income population.

The corporation has asked four local social service organizations to develop a low-income housing program for the city.

"It's just a new twist. An attempt to utilize our funds for what they were intended and that's to help the underprivileged," said Doug Henson, one director at the housing finance corporation.

Finance corporation treasurer-secretary Fred Kester said, "In the past we told them, 'You come up with a program you think will help...and then we will sit down and decide whether or not we can become involved in that program.' "

The Eastside Economic Development Task Force, Casa De Amigos, Midland Housing Authority and the Human Relations Council are surveying more than 500 eastside Midlanders through churches and community centers to determine local housing needs.

"We're just at the survey stage and we're trying to find out what the need is," said Nancy Vickrey, executive director of the eastside task force.

Another director with the finance corporation, Steve Davidson, said, "We have sensed the lack of affordable and decent housing is a problem in our community, and we have decided to get community services input in that area."

"It's just a new twist. An attempt to utilize our funds for what they were intended and that's to help the underprivileged."
— Doug Henson, Midland Housing Finance Corporation

The survey asks people if they are renting, the size of their family, if they would like to own a home and what kind of down payment they can afford.

"The survey will give us an assessment of what people are looking for," Ms. Vickrey said.

Some of the options being discussed include setting up a lease-purchase program that would allow renters to eventually buy homes.

Others want to use the many vacant houses scattered throughout Midland.

The survey should be completed within the next two weeks, Ms. Vickrey said.

Casa De Amigos Director Lael Cordova-Pitts said although more housing is available during the economic downturn, people are still struggling to pay rent.

"I think people are struggling with meeting expenses for rent on a month-to-month basis. We're looking at helping people change over from rental to ownership," she said.

The housing corporation has about $470,000 left from $935,868 collected from eight apartment developers in the early '80s.

The apartment developers paid the corporation 1.5 percent of the tax-free bond money they received to build apartments.

About $448,800 was used to buy the land for the Langtry retirement complex and about $2,700 bought 17 lots in the Washington Park area for a low-income homeowners' program.

After more than a year in operation, only three of these lots have been developed and occupied.

Qualifying low-income applicants for home loans proved to be very difficult, Davidson said.

Smokers have annual chance to kick habit

From Staff Reports

American Cancer Society officials are hoping chain-smokers will disappear in a puff of smoke Thursday while observing the 10th annual Great American Smokeout.

According to American Cancer Society statistics, 1985 set a record in terms of Smokeout participants. An official said 23 million of America's estimated 54 million smokers participated in the event last year by quitting or cutting down on their tobacco intake.

Tips on how to quit smoking for the day focus on getting cigarettes and cigarette paraphernalia out of sight (preferably by destruction) and the smoker finding new things to do with his hands instead of smoking.

The American Cancer Society suggests eating three small meals to maintain constant blood sugar levels, thus helping to prevent urges to smoke. It also recommends avoiding sugar-laden foods and spicy items that can trigger a desire for cigarettes.

One can cleanse his body of nicotine by drinking lots of liquids that don't contain caffeine or alcohol, as those two substances also increase the urge to smoke.

When one feels he is about to break down, the American Cancer Society said to think of a negative image associated with smoking — burning a hole in a favorite outfit or being breathless after trying to run 15 feet. In addition, one can exercise to relieve tension which can often lead to smoking.

Southwestern Bell commercial being filmed in Midland

From Staff Reports

Movie cameras and a California film crew are in Midland this week.

No, they're not filming the next Oscar-winning epic, but they are shooting segments for a Southwestern Bell commercial to be shown in a five-state area.

Along with Texas, scenery from Arkansas, Kansas, Mississippi and Oklahoma will also be shot for a series of four 30-second and 60-second commercials, said Leigh Stites, district staff manager for Southwestern Bell's advertising promotions in St. Louis.

Typical West Texas scenes will be shot including oil pumps and sunsets.

A crew from Harmony Pictures out of Burbank, Calif., is in Midland this week and will travel to the Fort Davis area for scenery shots, Ms. Stites said.

Midland was chosen as a site for part of the commercial because the city has scenery representative of most of West Texas, Ms. Stites said.

"Midland and the whole West Texas area represent huge portions we serve," she said.

No actors will be hired, but Southwestern Bell employees will be used in the scenes requiring people, Ms. Stites said.

Bekah Dannelley of The Producers, who is working with the film crew, said several scenes will be shot in Midland including telephone lines leading to a house, telephone lines being put up and cable being laid.

Ms. Dannelley said it is rare for a large corporation to film commercials in Midland.

"We do get them, but not that often," she said.

Benefit planned to raise funds for skydiver's widow

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A benefit to raise funds for the widow of veteran skydiver Vernon Eugene "Gene" Walden will be held beginning 5 p.m. Thursday in the Dos Amigos Restaurant at 47th Street and Golder Avenue in Odessa.

The benefit, to last until after midnight, is being sponsored by WesTex Sky Sports of Stanton and Dos Amigos.

Odessa skydiver Chuck Fant said Walden's widow Monica, who now lives in Odessa but is formerly from Midland, is in "real bad financial straits" and that her husband was without insurance coverage at the time of the fatal jump.

Admission to the benefit is by donation — $5 or more per person. Companies and individuals have donated funds to pay for the "free" beer, food, and band entertainment to be provided during the benefit, Fant said. Those interested in further information may telephone Fant at 366-8462 or Dos Amigos at 368-7556.

Walden, 38, of Odessa died Nov. 1 after his main and reserve parachutes failed to fully deploy when he and two other skydivers made exhibition jumps from 2,700 feet over Sherwood Park in celebrating Odessa Fall Festival.

Walden was into his 1,859th skydive when he died.

"He was one of the most experienced (skydivers) in Texas," Fant said and had been parachuting for 13 years.

Walden, who had a "pro rating," was a safety and training adviser with the United States Parachute Association. The association and the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) are the governing authorities of skydiving, Fant said.

Fire district proposal may create legal problems

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A joint meeting of Ector County Commissioners and Odessa City Council members Tuesday may eliminate the need for an election concerning establishment of county fire districts.

Commissioners Court members had tentatively set Jan. 17 as the date for county residents to vote on the question of creating several fire districts to provide emergency fire and medical services after a contract with the city expires Oct. 1, 1987.

The proposal to establish fire districts in Ector County creates several legal problems, according to Odessa City Manager John Harrison, because at least one major area included in the fire district area is within the 3½ mile boundary of the city's extra territorial jurisdiction area. The area within the city's ETJ involves much of West Odessa west of Loop 338.

Harrison said inclusion of any area within the city's ETJ in a fire district with taxing authority would create problems in the future when, and if, the city decides to annex such an area. It would mean residents of an annexed area would not only have to pay city taxes, but continue to pay taxes for fire and emergency medical services as well, and this would raise questions about double taxation, he said.

County Judge Jan Fisher said the proposal to create fire districts to provide fire protection for unincorporated areas of the county arose when county officials thought the city did not wish to continue providing fire and emergency medical services because increasing costs exceeded what the county was willing, or able, to pay.

The judge pointed out Tuesday that when the first contract was initiated in 1983 the cost was about $330,000. The cost has continued to escalate, she said, until this year it is $525,000, with the city estimating actual cost of providing service to the county at about $1.5 million.

The increased cost of providing fire and emergency medical services for county residents came at a time when commissioners were faced with decreasing tax revenues because of the economic downturn.

Mayor Don Carter, at the request of Ms. Fisher, called for an informal poll of council members to determine if they believed the city should continue to provide contractual emergency services to the county. Council members, not without some reservations, indicated they generally favored continuing to provide such services if an equitable agreement can be worked out.

Council member Melissa Hirsch, the lone dissenter in the straw poll, said, "I don't think we have the luxury of subsidizing county fire protection."

According to Ms. Hirsch, city tax revenue "pays for 40 percent of county emergency coverage."

Councilman Barney Barnett observed that county residents do, in fact, contribute to city revenues through the sales taxes they pay on purchases made within the city limits.

Harrison said city personnel had made a cursory study of the fire district proposal and it appears, he said, that by the time certain large landowners and ranches were exempted from fire districts the three cent tax rate could only generate about $65,000 in revenues, which would hardly be enough to maintain volunteer fire departments and establish ambulance services, much less expand such services as required.

Precinct 2 Commissioner Bryan Henderson said the county needs to determine what level of service should be provided county residents. He said people who choose to live outside the city limits should not expect to receive the same level of service they would receive living within the city limits.

After the unofficial poll of council members, Ms. Fisher said it appeared commissioners needed to return to the negotiating table to see what kind of agreement can be worked out with the city.

The judge named Henderson and Precinct 1 Commissioner Bill Tolbert to serve on a joint committee with Council members Barnett and Ms. Hirsch, who were appointed by Carter. The committee will monitor city costs involved in providing emergency services to the county and try to develop an equitable contractual arrangement between the city and county for continuation of such services.

George Patton family chosen Family of the Year

From Staff Reports

The George Patton family was selected as the 1986 Family of the Year. The Midland Family of the Year program was held Tuesday in conjunction with National Family Week.

A spokeswoman said the Patton family was selected because they exemplify family solidarity, high moral standards, strong religious convictions and community involvement.

Mayor Carroll Thomas presented an award to the Patton family in a program honoring them. A reception in their honor followed the presentation and program.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints inrtoduced the Family of the Year program six years ago, in an effort to strengthen families in Midland, and has sponsored it annually since then.

Although only one family is selected each year, many outstanding families are nominated and honored each year, the spokeswoman said. The 1986 Family of the Year finalists which were also honored Tuesday night as exceptional examples of family unity and solidarity were: Guinn Ferguson; Charles Holt; Jim Law; Terry Leflar; Frank Morgan; Henty Musselman; Colquitt Nash; George Patterson; Robert Savage; Bill Sewell and Bob Watkins families.

Previous recipients of the Midland Family of the Year Award were: (1981) the Melvin Dunns; (1982) the Doc Dodsons; (1983) the Lynn Hunts; (1984) the Pat Baskins and (1985) the Homer Jacksons.

Art collector to do appraisals

From Staff Reports

The Museum of the Southwest will sponsor "Discovery Day" with Harold Samuels on Thursday. He will be available for consultation and appraisal services, 10 a.m. until noon and 2-5 p.m., and will lecture at a brown bag lunch beginning at noon.

Samuels is a Pulitzer Prize nominee, art dealer, lecturer and antiquarian bookman. His discussions will be on Western art, art investment and the Langdon Kihn exhibition, which will be on display at the museum.

The Kihn exhibition is drawn from Samuels' private collection and is a representation of Indian life and culture during the early part of the century.

Samuels and his wife, Peggy, own the largest private collection of Frederic Remington materials in the world, according to a spokesman of the museum. They authenticate Remington art and were nominated for the Pulitzer Prize for "Frederic Remington: A Biography."

The Samuelses are co-authors of "Illustrated Biographical Encyclopedia of Artists of the American West" and of "Contemporary Western Artists." They have also published a book on art investment entitled "Everyone's Guide to Buying Art."

For more information on the Kihn exhibit or on Samuels' lectures, call Dianna Koeninger at 683-2882.

Donations to help rebuild hospital

AUSTIN (AP) — Texans' donations for Mexican earthquake relief, which already have paid to rebuild a Mexico City school, also will fund rehabilitation of two buildings at the Juarez Hospital complex and construction of a major urban health center.

Officials of Texas Response, the task force created by Gov. Mark White after the devastating September 1985 earthquake hit Mexico City, said $670,000 in donations collected in Texas will cover the cost of rehabilitating and constructing the health facilities in Mexico City.

So far, $201,000 has been spent to rebuild a three-building school for 900 children.

The school, named for the father of former Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo, was completed for half the $400,000 budgeted, said Jorge Garces, of the Texas Good Neighbor Commission.

Elderly couple takes 'easy riding'

Hobby extends to Christian Motorcycle Association

STEPHENVILLE (AP) — Generally speaking, when one thinks of a motorcyle rider, the notorious Hell's Angels may suddenly pop into mind, or perhaps the image of Peter Fonda as he appeared in "Easy Rider."

That's why it may shock some people who pull up beside a Honda 1200 and get a glimpse of the glistening white heads of Don and Bobbye Bullington, who are far removed from the typical "bike rider" scene.

While the Bullingtons may be dressed in typical motorcycle attire, including denim vests, boots and blue jeans, their lives differ considerably from the biker images that most often come to mind.

Residents of Stephenville since last August, the Bullingtons say they find great pleasure and excitement in climbing onto the seat of their oversized Honda and taking off on one of their many trips. But they say they find even greater pleasure in their membership in the Christian Motorcycle Association.

"We have a lot of fun in CMA," said Bullington, 64, who is a retired owner of a computer sales company. "We also find great fellowship and many rewards in our association with other CMA members," he said.

He said the association based in Hatfield, Ark., has an international membership of at least 23,000. The Bullingtons joined in 1981 and started the first chapter of CMA in Granbury.

Bullington explained that the purpose of CMA is to share the gospel of Jesus Christ with motorcyclists throughout the United States and other countries, and often holds rallies for that purpose.

"We aren't always well received by some of the motorcyclists but we go anyway because we feel we have a mission there," said Mrs. Bullington.

The Bullingtons say they became interested in riding motorcycles together in 1972.

"At that time, we were both involved in flying. We traveled everywhere by plane," said Bullington, who was a Navy pilot during World War II and later a commercial crop dusting pilot. "However, in 1972, aviation fuel became very expensive. Some of the members in our flying club began to turn to motorcycle riding as a means of traveling because it was cheaper."

The motorcycle hobby was actually his wife's idea, he said, and the first trip, an excursion with three other couples to Colorado, was quite an adventure.

"We didn't even get thirty miles before we thought we were going to die. We were already so sore from being out of shape and all, and the bad part was that we had four thousand miles to go!" Mrs. Bullington said.

Don and Bobbye Bullington of Stephenville are hesding on another of their many trips astride their motorcycle. The couple camps out with the pop-up tent trailer.

But the Bullingtons did not give up easily. They succeeded in conditioning themselves to their new mode of transportation and have been riding together ever since, most often camping out as they go.

Bullington was no motorcycle novice when the couple made it a joint hobby. He bought his first bike at the age of 15.

"I was working at a service station in Hoquiam, Wash., back in 1936," Bullington said, "when a man came in selling some stock and he also wanted to sell his motorcycle. Well, I bought the stock and the motorcycle for $100. The funny thing is that I'd never even been on a motorcycle before and I worried myself sick the rest of the day about how I was going to get the thing home."

He gained enough expertise to become the Oregon State Champion for track racing for two consecutive years in 1947-48. "But by 1950, I had matured a lot and gave up riding for the next 30 years."

The longest trip the Bullingtons have taken on the motorcycle was 6,220 miles within a 3½-week period, but one of their best stories comes from a trip much closer to home.

"We were in a big hurry to go camping at a new place we'd heard of near Marble Falls, Texas," Bullington recalled. "We were slightly breaking the speed limit to get there when all of the sudden I saw a highway patrolman sitting down at the bottom of a hill. I knew I was caught so I went ahead and pulled over and as the officer came up to us, we both took off our helmets. He took one look at our crops of snow-white hair and said, 'Oh, no. I feel like I'm arresting my grandparents!' "

Two Midlanders remained jailed on drug charges

From Staff Reports

Two Midland men remain in Midland County Jail on charges of possession of methamphetamine following their arrest Monday, according to reports.

Paul Eric Buckalew, 21, and Billy Morris Jacobs, Jr., 26, are being held in lieu of $50,000 bond each on the charges. The men were arrested late Monday at a residence in the 4600 block of Princeton by sheriff's investigators.

Police are also investigating several burglaries that occurred, including one that netted burglars items valued at more than $1,000.

According to reports, a videocassette recorder valued at $600, a man's wedding ring valued at $400, necklace and earrings valued at $350, silver dollars valued at $100, and $60 cash were stolen from a residence in the 4500 block of Meredith Place. Police said the items were stolen Tuesday between 8:30 a.m. and 11:30 a.m.

A videocassette recorder valued at $500, gold bracelets valued at $200, and cash and change valued at $30 were stolen from a residence in the 5100 block of A Street, police said. According to reports, the burglary occurred Tuesday between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m.

Ervin will perform on the Live Oak Stage.

Psychologist to present seminar, address banquet

From Staff Reports

Glenn

The Palmer Drug Abuse Program of Midland will host one of America's outstanding solution and goal-oriented prevention professionals, Dr. H. Stephen Glenn.

Glenn is an internationally acclaimed family psychologist who speaks to over 200,000 persons each year. He is a consultant on training, education, alcoholism and drug abuse to agencies throughout the United States, and has served as Director of the National Drug Abuse Center for Training and Resource Development in Washington D.C.

Glenn was also Director of Clinical Services for American Health Services and has served on many national task forces and advisory committees on juvenile justice; elementary and secondary education and drug abuse and alcoholism. He is formerly a member of the Board of Directors of the National Congress of Parent Teachers Association (PTA).

On Saturday from 1 to 4 p.m., Glenn will present "The Significant Seven" at Midland Community Theatre, which highlights the seven skills which enable young people to become capable people. There is a request for a $10 donation to help with expenses for the seminar.

Saturday night, Glenn will be the after-dinner speaker at the Seventh Annual Celebration Banquet, PDAP holds each year at the Green Tree Country Club. He will speak on the topic "Involved." Reservations are required and there is a $20 per person donation for dinner tickets.

For more information about the seminar or the PDAP banquet, please call the PDAP offices at 685-3645.

HOUSING

The tenants living in the homes now are on a lease-purchase plan, he said.

While the board has asked the agencies to develop a program, the corporation is not guaranteeing it will fund the program.

"We have not made any commitment on how this should be used. We have asked for a program and a method of administration," Kester said.

Davidson said, "We don't feel like we ought to go out wholesale and just do something for the sake of doing it. We're trying to come up with the best possible avenue to address this problem of getting people into affordable housing."

Walden was a jumpmaster and instructor in skydiving.

"He was Mr. Safety," Fant said. "You'd never think anything would happen to him. A lot of skydivers take risks; he didn't. He went strictly by the book."

Fant said that skydiving is an "exceptionally safe sport" in comparison to certain other sports, such as motorcycle racing, water skiing and scuba diving. Out of the several million parachute jumps in 1985, only 24 resulted in fatalities, he said.

Walden's death was "just a freak accident," Fant said. "You know something like that could happen but you just don't think it would be you or someone you know."

The FAA, which is investigating the death, said Walden's right hand and arm got entangled in the cords of the failed main parachute after Walden tried to pull the pilot 'chute out in order to deploy the malfunctioning parachute. By the time he had pulled the rip cord on his reserve parachute, he apparently was too close to the ground for the parachute to open.

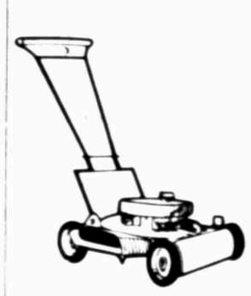

Witnesses reported seeing the parachutes streaming in apparent entanglement.

About 13 seconds passed from the time Walden exited the aircraft at 2,700 feet and until he impacted the ground, the FAA estimated. A person unaided by a parachute falls at about 120 mph.

The Gene Walden Memorial Fund has been set up at ClayDesta National Bank in Midland.

Baptist Foundation evicts club from Dallas building

DALLAS (AP) — The Baptist Foundation of Texas found itself the unlikely landlord of a nightclub frequented by skinhead punks as well as loafered preppies, but promptly corrected the situation by serving club owners eviction papers.

After a series of finanical deals the foundation ended up the landlord of Club Clearview, a nightspot in Dallas' Deep Ellum district.

Foundation president Lynn Craft said the group's investment policies prohibit involvement with a business that serves alcohol.

"We're not interested in having a club as a tenant," Craft said. "That is why we're evicting them. If you'll look at the area around there and talk to the tenants in the other buildings in that area, they want the guy out."

Clearview co-owner Jeff Swaney, 27, said he was disappointed that the club, which opened in November 1985, would be forced out of its location.

"You can't lose something like this," he said. "Club Clearview is like an institution. But those (Baptist Foundation) people don't care."

Swaney said the foundation's decision was "unchristian."

The building that houses the nightclub was donated to the foundation, court records indicate. The foundation sold the club to developer Lou Reese who rented the space to Club Clearview in November 1985.

When Reese defaulted on his $3.6 million loan the building ended up back in the hands of the foundation, records show.

Judge dismisses discrimination case

STATE

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge has dismissed a lawsuit brought by a former U.S. Agriculture Department who claimed he was transferred here from Texas because he blew the whistle on his boss for sexual harassment.

U.S. District Court Judge John H. Pratt on Tuesday ruled that James P. Jones was transferred because of poor work as high-ranking official in the Texas division of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, not in retaliation for his whistleblowing.

Jones, 63, filed his discrimination suit in 1984 alleging his move out of College Station that year came because he accused his boss, Charles W. Mayfield, of sexually harassing several women in Texas ASCS offices.

Mayfield was suspended for 30 days by the U.S. Department of Agriculture after a department investigation validated Jones' accusations and found that Mayfield had sought sex in return for promotions on several occasions.

Jones' attorney, Andrew Lipps, said Pratt's decision was disappointing and that he would decide on whether to appeal after a thorough study of the ruling.

"In light of the very important issues under the civil rights laws we will be seriously considering an appeal," Lipps said.

"The findings of sexual harassment against Mayfield...would never have come to light had it not been for the actions of J.P. Jones.

"Mayfield should take no pleasure in a decision by the court that reaffirms the Department of Agriculture decision concerning his own sexual misconduct," Lipps said.

Sworn statements by employees were taken describing how Mayfield allowed a woman to drive a government car home and that he carried alcoholic beverages in a government vehicle.

But Pratt said evidence introduced by Justice Department attorneys had convinced him Jones' transfer was made because of a poor work record and not in retaliation for blowing the whistle on his boss.

"The record clearly shows that Jones had a history of performance inadequacies over a long period...that he frequently challenged major decisions of his superiors and was insubordinate...that he was disruptive and disloyal and preoccupied with seeking Mayfield's removal and that there was an irreconcilable personality clash between the two men."

"The facts do not support Jones' claim of retaliation," Pratt wrote in his decision. "The decision to transfer Jones was made by Washington officials confronted with an impossible situation...which was adversely affecting the office's efficiency."

Jones, a Republican, first crossed swords with Mayfield in 1981 after the Reagan administration named Mayfield to replace Jones as executive director of the ASCS Texas office, which oversees federal farm programs. Mayfield had previously worked under Jones in the office.

Jones soon complained that he was being eased out of decision-making in the office, then in 1984 asked the USDA inspector general to probe into allegations that his boss was sexually harassing female employees.

Shortly after Mayfield was found guilty of harassment, Jones was ordered to report for work at a new post in Washington. Jones filed charges of discrimination and he and Lipps filed suit against the department seeking his reinstatement in College Station.

Group says businessman's murder may be example of 'gay bashing'

KYLE (AP) — The slaying of an Austin businessman, whose body was found in a burning auto, may be an extreme example of "gay bashing," says a national homosexual rights group.

But a police investigator says that motive is only one possibility in last week's murder of Edward Schiffers, 39.

Schiffers was found dead in the front seat of his burning car at an Interstate 35 rest stop in Kyle. His hands were tied behind his back with baling wire, he was partially clothed and had been struck in the head, police said.

A preliminary autopsy indicated that the cause of death was smoke inhalation.

Jeff Gutierrez, a spokesman for the Gay and Lesbian Service Center of Los Angeles, said the rest stop where Schiffers was killed may have drawn people intent on attacking homosexuals because it was "a notorious meeting place for gays."

Both Schiffers' business partner and a former roommate told the Austin American-Statesman that their friend was homosexual but not the sort of person who would frequent such a hangout. They said he may have been attacked while stopping to use the rest room, the newspaper reported Tuesday.

Gutierrez said he heard about the slaying from a friend of Schiffers while helping to establish an information clearinghouse to keep track of and publicize assaults against homosexuals.

The issue of "gay bashing" has received increased news media attention in recent weeks. Attacks on homosexuals have "been going on for centuries," Gutierrez said, but they have intensified this year because of public fears about the spread of the AIDS virus.

Gutierrez said his information on the slaying is limited to the reputation of the rest area and the fact that Schiffers was a homosexual.

Police have reported neither suspects nor witnesses in the case. Firefighters found Schiffers' body about 4 a.m. Wednesday when they were called to the blaze by a passing motorist.

Hays County Sheriff Alfard Hohman and state trooper Jeff Sones, who patrols the interstate through Kyle, said they had heard rumors that the rest stop was a hangout for homosexual men.

Hohman said he had heard similar rumors about other rest areas, but both men said they knew of no previous violent incidents there involving homosexuals.

Kyle Police Chief Bill Jones, who is investigating the murder, agreed.

"It's got a reputation for that. So do other places. It's also got a reputation for people stopping there to use the restroom," Jones said.

Jones said he is considering all possibilities in the case, including the possibility that Schiffers was attacked because he was a homosexual.

"This is a brutal murder, done by somebody I would love to see put away. But I'm the investigator. I don't want the media to investigate the case in the headlines," he said.

'No-droppers' oppose exporting water

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — Lawyers in three-piece suits and cowboy boots battled each other in the latest round of a six-year-old fight between El Paso, Texas, and New Mexico for one of the oldest issues of the American West — water rights.

El Paso, just 40 miles south of here, wants to drill 21 wells in the New Mexico side of the Hueco Basin, an underground body of water on both sides of the Texas-New Mexico border. It also is petitioning for another 266 wells in the Lower Rio Grande Basin, between El Paso and Las Cruces.

"Not one drop" of New Mexico water for El Paso has been the battle cry of those opposing the request, who have been nicknamed "no-droppers" because of their stance.

"I suggest they start implementing more stringent measures to safeguard their water sources for a long time," said Diane "Punkie" Garretson, Dona Ana County commissioner-elect.

At a hearing that began Tuesday before New Mexico State Engineer Steve Reynolds, attorney Peter Schenkken, representing El Paso, was surrounded by about a dozen lawyers for the "no-droppers."

"What they (El Paso) really are getting is our future economic growth. They're just calling it water."
New Mexico rancher Gerry Strauss

Reynolds accepted hydrologist Lee Wilson as an expert witness for El Paso subject to cross examination by opposing lawyers, who spent a good part of the morning objecting to the state engineer's decision.

Wilson testified his experience includes studies on ground water use and conservation for several New Mexico municipalities and El Paso. Throughout his testimony, Wilson referred to a two-inch-thick report he prepared for El Paso to support the city's petitions.

El Paso's current population of about 500,000 is projected to grow at a rate of about 3 percent annually, he said. The city needs to find alternative water supplies and allow the Texas side of the Hueco Basin, from where it has been getting most of its water, time to replenish itself.

Widespread snickering from a crowd of about 50 people drowned out part of Schenkken's question to Wilson on whether El Paso would be willing to share with New Mexicans water it expects to draw from the requested wells.

In apparent anticipation of criticism from the protestors, Wilson said El Paso "has the best municipal water conservation program that I know of...in the United States."

"I've seen water running down the streets" of El Paso for 25 years, said Gerry Strauss, 43, a rancher who also wants to drill water wells for his 160,000 acres of New Mexico land near Las Cruces. "What they (El Paso) really are getting is our future economic growth. They're just calling it water."

The "no-droppers" include Las Cruces, the surrounding county of Dona Ana, neighboring Otero and Lincoln counties, the Elephant Butte Irrigation District, the state Land Office and several individuals.

El Paso has spent about $3 million since September 1980, when the water wars began with the city's suit challenging New Mexico's ban on exporting groundwater. The controversy has gone to federal court twice. Reynolds said his decision could be appealed in court, in which case the water wars could drag on for years.

"The West is arid and the one thing that'll determine the future of the West is water," Mrs. Garretson said during a break in the hearing, scheduled to reconvene today. "One foot in the door and it's all over. That's why I think we in New Mexico have to go to the mat on this."

Agency improves service awards

AUSTIN (AP) — The state Highway Department is spending $118,000 on gold pens, belt buckles, plaques and other mementos to recognize employee service.

Leslie Clark, personnel director for the department, said authority for the new gift program was approved by the 1985 Legislature, which raised the allowance for service awards from $25 to $75 for each award.

"In my opinion, it's very motivaional," Clark said.

Under the new program, employees with 15 years of service are given the choice of a bronze belt buckle, a bronze key chain, a 14-karat gold-filled pen or a 14-karat gold necklace.

A construction worker works on the support beams for the roof of the new Fort Concho Elementary School in San Angelo Tuesday. Upon the school's completion, it will be the only school in the United States on the site of a National Historic Landmark. Fort Concho was in operation during the Indian wars from 1867-1889 and is the best-preserved fort of its type in the nation.

Grandy jury will handle stabbing case

EDINBURG (AP) — An Hidalgo County prosecutor says the screwdriver slaying of an 81-year-old San Carlos woman is one of the most gruesome cases she's handled.

A state district court judge has ruled that the case against a 16-year-old boy charged in connection with the woman's brutal stabbing and beating death be sent to a grand jury.

Yolanda Jurado, an assistant district attorney in Hidalgo County, said Laura Bell Matheny was found Sept. 23 with screwdrivers protruding from her body.

"It's so horrible," Jurado said. "She had at least 10 other stab wounds" in addition to the beating and sexual assault the victim suffered before dying.

A screwdriver was driven into one of the victim's eyes and went "all the way through the brain," Jurado said. A second screwdriver was found pushed into her lower body, the prosecutor said.

Domingo Hirlas Jr. was 15 years old at the time the Rio Grande Valley woman's body was found in the kitchen of her two-story house east of Edinburg.

District Judge Raul Longoria certified Hirlas as an adult during a hearing Nov. 3. At a hearing last week, District Judge Arturo Guerra found probable cause to send the case to a grand jury.

Hirlas, of San Carlos, is being held in the county jail on two complaints of murder and two complaints of capital murder that allege Ms. Matheny was killed in the course of a burglary and sexual assault, Jurado said.

Within two weeks the case is expected to go to a grand jury, which will decide whether Hirlas will be indicted and on what charges, Jurado said.

If convicted, Hirlas faces an automatic life sentence but under Texas law could not receive the death penalty because of his age, the prosecutor said.

Farm Credit Banks, 'sound,' reports show

AUSTIN (AP) — The Farm Credit Banks of Texas say that despite continued stress in the national agricultural economy, third quarter reports show the banks "financially sound."

James A. Rogers, chief executive officer, Tuesday said gains from local operations totaled $6.2 million for the nine months ending Sept. 30, excluding financial help to other farm credit districts. That compared to $24.6 million for the same period last year.

A&M research center expected to attract corporations

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — A $4.5 million research center at Texas A&M University is expected to attract private corporations that coincide with the school's research interests, officials say.

The 434-acre, multimillion-dollar Texas A&M Research Park will be dedicated Friday, university officials announced Tuesday.

The two-story office building and single-story laboratory and repository facility was built by the university to house more than 150 staff members and scientists working for the world's largest scientific ocean drilling program.

The Ocean Drilling Program, a $30 million-a-year project supported by the U.S. National Science Foundation, Canada, West Germany, France and Japan is the first tenant in the university's new research park.

In addition to possible association with the university's 2,700-member faculty and 6,000 graduate students, firms locating in the park would have access to installations such as Texas A&M's nuclear reactor and cyclotron, an apparatus for giving high energy to particles.

A&M officials also said the research park can help create new businessnes and more jobs in Texas.

Controller error blamed for two jets' near miss

GRAPEVINE (AP) — Controller error was cited as the cause for a near miss between two passenger jets, and the responsible controller will go through re-training and re-certification, officials said.

Premature climb instructions brought the two American Airlines jets within a half-mile of each other horizontally and between zero and 100 feet vertically at 11,000 feet, Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Mitch Barker said Tuesday.

"This determination was made based on interviews with the air crews, plotting of flight paths and correlating times," Barker said.

Barker would not identify the controller in the incident that occurred Saturday about 15 miles southwest of Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

Demonstrators from Neuvo Laredo, Mexico, protesting high utility rates, blockaded International Bridge No. 1 for four hours Tuesday. Their intention is to make the United States aware of their plight.

Party criticizes arms deal

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Democratic Party has joined the critics of President Reagan's recent arms deal with Iran.

State Democratic Chairman Bob Slagle said Tuesday that the party "agrees with most Americans that you do not conduct arms deals that amount to blackmail with a country that calls us 'the great satan' and militantly supports terrorism."

In the wake of White House admissions that arms were shipped to Iran shortly before some American hostages were released by terrorists in Lebanon, the State Democratic Executive Committee has passed a resolution calling on the Reagan administration to end what it called "embarrasing duplicity" in its policies.

Protesters block bridge

NUEVO LAREDO, Mexico (AP) — Demonstrators protesting higher utility rates in Mexico blocked the international bridge between the border cities of Laredo and Nuevo Laredo, halting traffic for four hours Tuesday, authorities said.

A group of about 100 demonstrators, calling itself the Committee for the Defense of Workers, blockaded one of two bridges that connect the two cities.

Laredo police, monitoring the protest from the U.S. side, said traffic was rerouted to the other bridge after protestors began tying up traffic at noon.

Jose Bruno Perez, a spokesman for the protesters, said the demonstrators were defending workers who have had to live with inflation and escalating gas and electric bills.

The demonstrators said they would not leave until federal officials talked to them about the higher utility rates.

The protest ended after Luis Balmore, director of the federal highway police, talked to the group and said they could be jailed if they did not leave.

Pope preaches respect for differing beliefs

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Pope John Paul II today urged the estimated 50,000 people attending an outdoor Mass to brush aside "fear and distrust" between the less than 300,000 Christians and almost 100 million Moslems in desperately poor Bangladesh.

"Everyone, especially the young, must learn always to respect one another's religious beliefs and respect freedom of religion which is the right of every human being," he said in a homily at the Ershad Army stadium where he also ordained 18 Bengali priests.

The Mass was held just hours after the 66-year-old pontiff arrived for a one-day stop in Bangladesh — the first leg of a six-nation Asian and Pacific tour. He also planned to visit an independence war memorial and meet other religious leaders and Catholic bishops before leaving Thursday for Singapore.

Bangladesh, a tiny overcrowded nation of 103 million people, is more than 86 percent Moslem, 12 percent Hindu. Christians number only 280,000, including 180,000 Catholics in this moderate Islamic country.

This, the pontiff's 32nd foreign trip, is his longest-ever pilgrimage to spread his message of brotherly love, social justice and unity among religions.

"There are many things that Christians and Moslems have in common as human beings and as believers," he told the predominantly Christian crowd, which included a small number of Moslems.

"Sometimes, Christians and Moslems fear and distrust one another as the result of past misunderstanding and conflict," he said. "This also is true in Bangladesh."

Standing in front of the outline of a huge lotus and a red sun, the pontiff told the crowd that showing "your Moslem brethren and others that your Christian faith, far from weakening your pride in your homeland and your love for her, helps you to prize and respect the culture and heritage of Bangladesh."

John Paul, who became pontiff in 1978, was invited to Bangladesh by President Hussain Muhammad Ershad, who met him at the airport. About 200 to 300 school children were also there to greet the pope with flowers and garlands, but there were no welcoming crowds on the streets in this city of 5 million.

The pontiff kissed the ground when he left the plane. He received a 21-gun military salute and then reviewed an honor guard.

"May the almighty and merciful God bless Bangladesh," John Paul said in a brief arrival statement in a airport VIP lounge. He said ancient Bengali culture reflects contacts with many religions, traditions, races and languages.

"I come as a witness to the Christian faith and guarantor of unity among my Catholic brothers and sisters," he said.

The visit marked the first to Bangladesh by a pontiff since 1970 when Pope Paul VI stopped over briefly to pray for an estimated 1 million people who perished in a cyclone.

Pope minimizes differences with U.S. Catholics

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Pope John Paul II, brushing off talk of divisions, sought to minimize differences between the Vatican and the Roman Catholic Church in the United States.

"Sometimes, one creates divisions, divisions which don't exist are created," he told reporters Tuesday aboard his flight from Rome to Bangladesh, the first stop of a six-nation Asian and Pacific tour — his 32nd foreign trip since being elected pope in 1978.

In other remarks, the pope said it was his "duty" to visit Lithuania, the Roman Catholic stronghold in the Soviet Union, but appeared to set conditions for a possible Soviet visit.

At an annual meeting of bishops last week in Washington, James W. Malone, the outgoing president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, warned of "dangerous disaffection" between some American Roman Catholics and the Vatican.

He indicated he would agree to a meeting with U.S. bishops in Rome to discuss his trip to the United States, scheduled for September.

Asked whether he would welcome such a meeting, John Paul said, "I suppose it is a normal proceeding among U.S. bishops."

No special meeting was held before his visit to the United States in 1979.

The pope declined to say whether he agreed with Bishop Malone's assessment about tensions in the U.S. church.

He said the reported divisions came about "by talking and by writing." He did not elaborate.

The 66-year-old Polish-born pontiff was asked whether there were any plans for a visit to the Soviet Union.

Syria faces isolation over links with terrorists

By ED BLANCHE

An Analysis

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Syria, already out of step with its Arab neighbors, faces growing isolation by the West if more links to terrorism are exposed in trials in Europe.

Diplomatic and economic sanctions already imposed on Syria for its alleged support for international terrorists, although largely symbolic, have stung President Hafez Assad and his self-styled role as leader of the "Arab nation."

But they do not appear to have undercut his position among the majority of Syria's 10 million people, although the pro-Western middle class has been shaken by the sanctions they fear will isolate Syria.

"Assad, above all, wants to be respected and it appears he feels snubbed. But he knows that in the Middle East peace process he is too pivotal to be abandoned," said a Western diplomat, speaking on condition he not be identifed.

"The actions by Western countries have, if anything, strengthened Assad's position internally," he said.

But, if as seems likely, the forthcoming trials in Europe provide further evidence of the involvement of Syrian agencies, particularly the all-powerful Air Force Intelligence service, Western diplomats believe there would be "dark clouds ahead."

"If these people are found guilty and the Syrian connection is proved, it would be very difficult for the governments concerned to ignore that and that would obviously have a negative effect on relations," another Western diplomat commented, also on condition of anonymity.

The trial of two Palestinians, Ahmad Hasi and Farouk Salameh, accused of a West Berlin bombing March 29 opened Monday and investigators have said the men were supplied with the explosives by the Syrian Embassy in East Berlin.

Hasi has been identified as the brother of Nezar Hindawi, a Palestinian jailed for 45 years in London last month for trying to bomb an El Al Israeli airliner. The British charged he was aided by Syrian intelligence.

Another Palestinian, Nasser Hassan el Ali, is awaiting trial in Madrid, Spain, for the attempted bombing of an Israeli airliner June 26. Spanish authorities said he carried a Syrian passport and claimed he belonged to Fatah-Uprising, a Damascus-based Palestinian faction.

Another Palestinian, identified as a cousin of Hindawi's, is being held in Genoa, Italy, on terrorist-related charges and judicial officials said there are indications he was linked to the Syrians.

Syria, Moscow's main Arab ally, has long been used to being held at arm's length by the West.

Syria's support for Persian Iran against Arab Iraq in the 6-year-old Gulf war has angered many Arab countries who fear the spread of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's puritanical brand of Islamic fundamentalism.

The Syrians have helped secure the release of American and French hostages held by pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem extremists in Lebanon to help counter suspicions and stifle retaliatory action.

But disclosures that the United States has been dealing directly with Iran, believed to have the main influence with the kidnap gangs in Lebanon, has undercut Assad's leverage with the West.

With few friends outside of Iran and Libya, Assad now appears to be facing problems with his main benefactor, the Soviet Union.

Syria, reliant on the Soviets for weapons, owes Moscow an estimated $10 billion with little prospect of repayment.

"Obviously the money spent on arms would be better spent getting the economy back in shape," said a Syrian official, commenting on condition he not be identified further. "But the military has a lot of power and Assad would be in danger if he tried to curb military spending and lost the support of his generals."

A Lebanese Army armored personnel carrier lingers outside Lebanon's Central Bank Wednesday shortly after a rocket-propelled grenade was fired into the building in west Beirut.

Lebanon's Central Bank suffers grenade attack

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A rocket-propelled grenade was fired at Lebanon's Central Bank in Moslem west Beirut today, police reported. The attack came a day after the Lebanese pound plunged to a record low against foreign currencies.

State-run Beirut television said an anonymous telephone caller claimed the attack on behalf of a new underground group calling itself The Black Panthers-The People's Poor.

The group, which announced its formation Monday in a statement to news offices in Beirut, vowed to strike at "monopolies and foreign currency speculators" responsible for the persisting decline of the Lebanese pound.

The grenade crashed into the sixth floor of the eight-story Central Bank building across the street from Prime Minister Rashid Karami's office in the commercial district of Hamra and slightly injured an employee, police said.

Army guards at the bank and at Karami's office fired machinegun volleys into the air to divert traffic off the crowded Hamra street while officials took stock of the damage at the bank, police said.

Panic hit Beirut's money markets Tuesday when the Lebanese pound plunged to a record low against foreign currencies. Private dealers sold dollars at the unprecedented rate of 73 Lebanese pounds apiece.

The pound closed Monday at a rate of 63 to the dollar.

The collapse of the currency, once one of the strongest in the Middle East, has accelerated since 1984 as Lebanon continues to disintegrate along religious and political lines.

During the 1975-76 civil war the rate was about 3 pounds to the dollar, and during the 1982 Israeli invasion it rarely exceeded 5 to the dollar.

Soviets present during torture, rights group says

LONDON (AP) — Soviet advisers to Afghan's secret police often direct the interrogation of prisoners under torture, Amnesty International said today in a a report quoting Afghan citizens identified as victims.

The 51-page report, issued by the London-based human rights organization, covers the period since the Soviet Union sent troops to Afghanistan in December 1979. Titled "Afghanistan: Torture of Political Prisoners," it says torture is widespread and systematic.

"The KHAD (Afghan secret police) is reported to have Soviet advisers at its main offices, and many of the testimonies available to Amnesty International refer to the presence of Soviet personnel when prisoners are being interrogated under torture," the report, based on statements by ex-prisoners, said.

"In many of these cases, prisoners state that Soviet personnel are present during torture and participate in or direct interrogation while the physical application of torture is left to Afghans."

Amnesty International, winner of the 1977 Nobel Peace prize, has made political prisoners around the world its special concern.

Thatcher's rebuff of Argentine offer gets mixed reviews

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's rejection of Argentina's offer to end hostilities between the two nations if Britain lifts a "military protection zone" around the Falklands Islands won a mixed reception from British newspapers today.

The London Times, which takes an independent political line, said Mrs. Thatcher was in "danger of treading with such caution" that there would be no progress.

The Daily Mail and the Daily Express, supporters of her Conservative government, welcomed Tuesday's decision to rebuff the Argentine offer.

In announcing the rejection, the Foreign Office reiterated that Britain wants to normalize relations with Argentina as long as it does not relate to sovereignty of the South Atlantic island chain over which the two nations fought a 74-day war in 1982.

Mrs. Thatcher, without referring directly to President Raul Alfonsin's offer Monday, told the House of Commons that Britain stood by its policy that the wishes of the 1,800 staunchly pro-British islanders were "paramount."

Diplomatic relations between the two countries, cut immediately after the 1982 Argentine invasion, remain severed.

Mrs. Thatcher has repeatedly refused Argentine demands to discuss sovereignty of the islands and Argentina has refused to give a formal guarantee that it regards hostilities to be ended.

Argentina called Monday for "an open dialogue" with Britain as a preliminary step toward negotiations on Falklands sovereignty. The Argentine government said it would declare a formal end to hostilities with Britain if it drops its 150-mile "military protection zone" around the Falklands.

Foreign Office Undersecretary of State Tim Eggar said Tuesday that Britain would be willing to consider any serious offer from Argentina to normalize relations.

Speaking in a radio interview with the British Broadcasting Corp., Eggar called the Argentine offer "an exercise in megaphone diplomacy."

Germany urged to cut ties if terrorists linked to Syria

BERLIN (AP) — A leading member of West Germany's parliament today urged the government to sever diplomatic ties with Damascus if a West Berlin court concludes Syria aided two Palestinians on trial for a West Berlin bombing.

"If the judgment against the two Jordanian terrorists demonstrates there was cooperation and complicity on the part of the Syrian Embassy in East Berlin, the federal government couldn't do anything else," Hans Stercken, chairman of parliament's foreign affairs committee, said in a West German radio interview.

On trial are Farouk Salameh, 39, and Ahmed Nawaf Hasi, 35, Palestinians with Jordanian passports. They are charged with attempted murder, conspiracy to carry out a bombing and violating weapons laws in the March 29 attack on the German-Arab Friendship Society. Nine people were injured.

According to pretrial testimony read to the court Tuesday, explosives used in the bombing came from Syria's embassy in East Berlin and Damascus had a part in planning the attack. Syria has denied involvement in terrorism.

The trial was adjourned until Thursday, and court officials said a verdict is expected Monday.

Today is a holiday in West Germany, and the government press office had no comment on Stercken's remarks.

West Germany has said the Berlin trial will determine whether it replaces its ambassador in Damascus, who is scheduled to leave by Jan. 1 at the end of his tour. There has been no mention by the federal government of severing diplomatic relations.

Western governments are monitoring the trial for signs of official Syrian complicity in international terrorism.

Nezar Hindawi, Hasi's 32-year-old brother, was convicted last month of trying to smuggle a bomb onto an Israeli jetliner last April at Heathrow airport in London. Evidence of Syrian involvement caused Britain to break diplomatic relations with the government of President Hafez Assad.

The United States and the European Common Market countries imposed sanctions.

Presiding Judge Hans-Joachim Heinze read the pretrial testimony into the record Tuesday after the defendants refused to answer questions about the testimony they gave police after their arrests last spring.

Hasi, in a pretrial statement to police, said he obtained the explosives from a man identified in later testimony as a ranking Syrian intelligence officer.

He said he picked the charges up in the kitchen of the Syrian Embassy in East Berlin, the Communist-ruled zone of this divided city, after presenting himself with a pre-arranged cover name, "Fahdi."

In the statement, Hasi said he left the embassy with the intelligence officer in an embassy car.

Salameh, also in a pretrial statement, said that part of the plans for the attack apparently were plotted in Syria by the intelligence officer, identified as Haitam Saed, and Hindawi.

WORLD in brief

Nation accused of hoax

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The South Korean press today accused North Korea of trying to discredit and destabilize the south with a hoax that North Korean President Kim Il Sung had died.

Questions about Kim were raised Monday when the South Korean Defense Ministry said North Korean propaganda loudspeakers along the demilitarized zone between North and South Korea announced Kim had been shot to death.

The Defense Ministry later said North Korean loudspeakers were blaring that North Korea's defense minister, O Jin U, had seized power.

North Korea ignored the reports, and on Tuesday distributed television film of Kim greeting Mongolian Premier Jambyn Batmunkh at North Korea's Pyongyang Airport.

A senior South Korean government official, speaking to reporters on condition of anonymity, said the Seoul government had not fabricated its reports.

Mexico gets installment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The World Bank is making a $300 million first installment on a package of emergency loans to Mexico that could eventually total $12 billion.

The release of the money could serve to prod commercial banks, which have been slow in coming forth with new loans, into providing their $6 billion share of the package.

The multi-national organization announced release of the money on Tuesday, saying it was "available immediately for withdrawal by the Mexican government."

Bank President Barber Conable said the money was being released because the part of the package to be financed by commercial banks appeared to be taking shape.

The loan was approved by the bank last July. However, the money had been held up pending final agreement on the full package, designed to help Mexico meet payments on its $98 billion foreign debt.

The $300 million is part of a $500 million World Bank loan designed to support trade liberalization measures in Mexico.

Plant photos worry Israel

JERUSALEM (LAT) — Israeli authorities say that they are worried that inside photographs of their nuclear facility, given to a London newspaper by Israeli technician Mordechai Vanunu, may also have gone to the Soviet Union.

Vanunu, a disillusioned Israeli who left the country for Australia this year, was mysteriously brought back to Israel from England last month after London's Sunday Times published photographs and details of the Dimona nuclear facility.

The newspaper said that Vanunu's information proved for the first time that Israel was making nuclear bombs at Dimona, where Vanunu had worked as a technician.

Last year, before leaving Israel, Vanunu asked to join the Israeli Communist Party, said by government officials to be a hardline organization allied with Moscow.

A party official said Tuesday that Vanunu had left the country before his application was acted upon.

Gold rebound slight

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell against most major currencies in early trading today. Gold prices moved up in what one dealer described as a knee-jerk reaction to sharp falls earlier in the week.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $392.30 a troy ounce, compared with late Tuesday's $391, but fell back later. At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $391.50.

In Zurich, the bid price was $391.75, up from $390.50 late Tuesday.

One London dealer said the market experienced "a little bit of reaction on the upside" after its sharp fall below $400 an ounce in Europe on Monday, following a price tumble Friday in New York.

"It's a typical knee-jerk reaction," he said.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose against the Japanese yen for the third straight day to close at 162.80 yen, compared with Tuesday's 162.65. Later, in London, the dollar was quoted at 163 yen.

—1.6750 Swiss francs, down from 1.6760

—6.5875 French francs, down from 6.5975

—2.2725 Dutch guilders, down from 2.2760

—1,393.25 Italian lire, down from 1,395.75

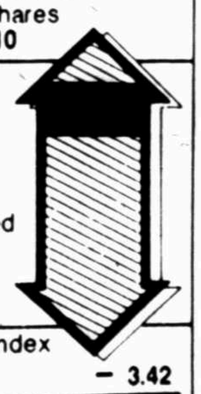

—1.3830 Canadian dollars, unchanged.

However, in London, the dollar rose against the British pound, which cost $1.4190, cheaper than $1.4245 late Tuesday.

West German markets were closed for a national holiday. In London, the dollar was quoted at 2.0130 West German marks, down from 2.0160 late Tuesday.

Car sales help GNP show 2.9 percent increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's economy, propelled in part by booming car sales, expanded at a moderate 2.9 percent annual rate this summer after the spring's near-standstill performance, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said the rise in the gross national product was also the result of a hefty defense spending increase and a slightly improved trade performance.

The 2.9 percent growth marked an upward revision from the original estimate one month ago that the economy had expanded at a 2.4 percent rate in July-September period.

The faster growth was accompanied by higher inflation. An inflation index tied to the GNP rose at an annual rate of 2.4 percent in the third quarter, up substantially from a 1.7 percent annual rate in the April-June quarter. The government blamed the inflation rise on higher food prices.

The report provided no details, however, on food price activity.

Even with the upward revision in growth, the economy was still expanding at a rate far below Reagan administration expectations.

The administration had been hoping for growth in the final six months of the year to exceed an annual rate of 4 percent.

Most analysts are predicting growth in the final three months of the year will average 3 percent to 3.5 percent, reflecting increased spending by consumers and businesses rushing to take advantage of expiring tax benefits.

The pace of current activity is far above the barely perceptible growth rate of 0.6 percent turned in during the spring.

That weak performance had led to fears that the current economic recovery, now four years old, was in danger of tumbling into a recession.

Most economists, however, now feel that an improving trade deficit will keep the economy expanding and allow the country to avoid a recession next year.

In other economic news today, the government said:

—Housing construction in October edged down 0.2 percent, the fifth decline in the last six months. The drop put construction of new homes and apartments at an annual rate of 1.65 million units last month, the slowest pace since February 1985.

—After-tax corporate profits rose 4.3 percent in the third quarter, the biggest increase since a 4.5 percent advance in the final three months of 1985.

The 2.9 percent GNP growth from July through September was the strongest performance since a 3.8 percent growth rate turned in during 1986's first quarter.

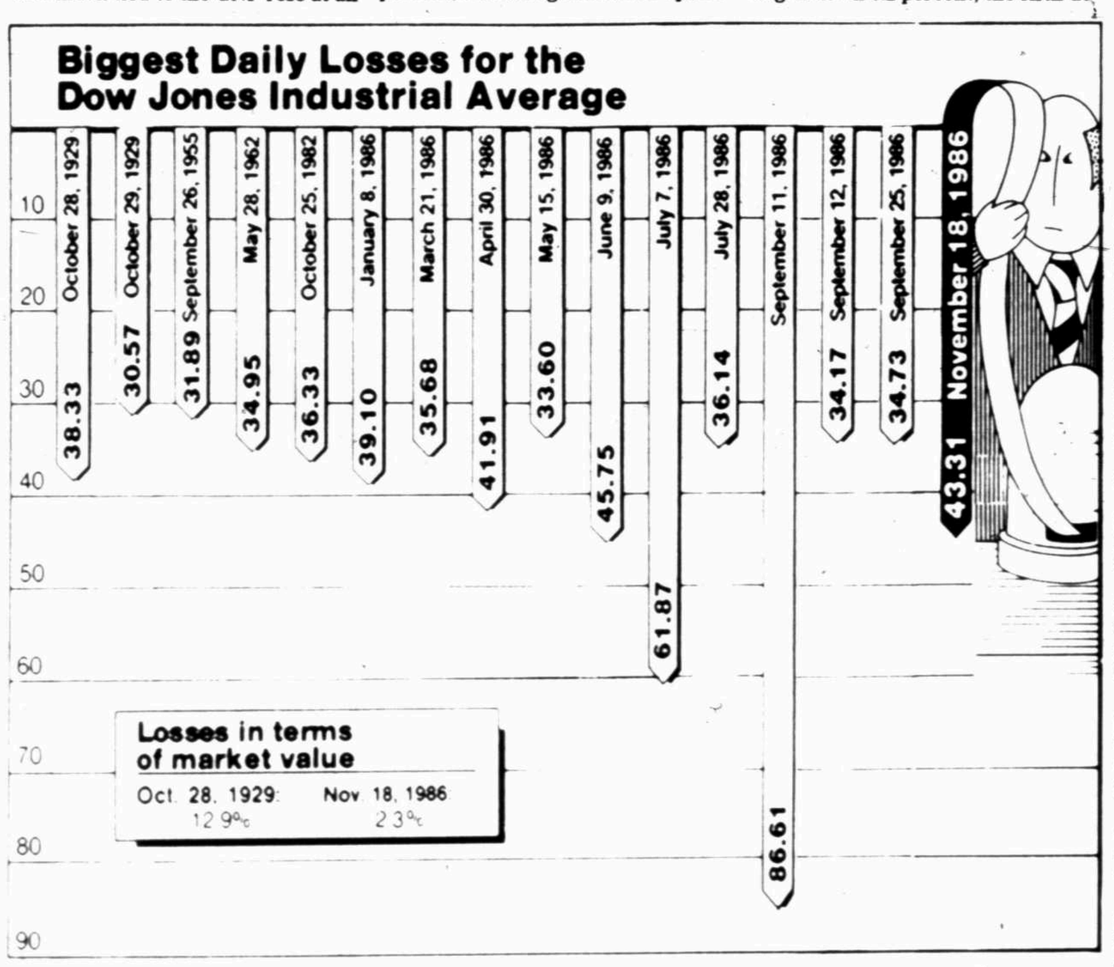

The July-September strength came primarily from a big upturn in final sales, growing by 5.2 percent compared to a rise of 3.4 percent in the second quarter.

Half of this $46.8 billion increase came from the sale of new cars, which surged during the period as consumers rushed to take advantage of cut-rate financing incentives offered to reduce the backlog of unsold 1986 models.

Much of the revision from the earlier estimate of third quarter growth came from a sharply higher estimate of defense spending.

The Commerce Department boosted its estimate of military spending by $9 billion over what it had first estimated. Analysts said the increase came from higher-than-expected military purchases before the beginning of the new fiscal year Oct. 1.

Fear over how far the insider trading scandal will reach rocked Wall Street Tuesday, causing the stock market to plunge 43.31 points, the fourth largest loss in its history.

Boesky case causes Dow to plunge

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The repercussions of the insider trading scandal rocked Wall Street Tuesday. The stock market and parts of the bond market suffered heavy losses in response to the fear that has gripped the securities business over how high and how far the scandal will reach.

The closely watched Dow Jones industrial average fell a steep 43.31 points. Trading was extremely active as concern grew that further evidence of illegal insider trading would undermine market integrity.

There was an even sharper selloff of stocks involved in, or previously rumored to be involved in, corporate takeover battles.

"If there were a Dow Jones for arbitragers," the professional stock traders who invest largely in takeover stocks, "it was down 200 points or more today," one Wall Street executive said.

In addition, the market in low-quality, high-yielding bonds, "junk bonds"in Wall street parlance, was hit extremely hard Tuesday.

"Junk bonds" are frequently used to finance takeovers, and the biggest securities firm in this business is Drexel Burnham Lambert. Drexel had worked extensively with Ivan F. Boesky, the professional stock trader who paid a $50 million fine and $50 million in returned profits from illegal trading as a result of Securities and Exchange Commission charges.

There were these other developments Tuesday:

Gardski's pulls plug on Midland store

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

More than two years of nurturing wasn't enough to keep the economically staggering Gardski's Restaurant at the Courtyard at Midland Park afloat.

Friday marked the day Gardski's Loft Inc. pulled the plug on their Midland restaurant. "We hated to close the Midland location, but we haven't been able to get the support needed for it to make economic sense to keep it open," said Robert Skibell, president of the Lubbock-based company.

The company will continue to operate six other restaurants and two nightclubs, including Midland's Garfield's, throughout the region.

Skibell attributed the closure only partially to the most recent oil industry downturn, saying that the facility hadn't met expectations prior to the first of the year.

"From the time we — and many other restaurateurs — made the determination that Midland was an attractive and 'under-restauranted' market in 1982 and '83, more than 25 eateries opened within 12 months," Skibell noted. Combined with the initial slowdown in the oil, the fierce competition proved too stiff for Gardski's to carve a unique niche in the market and make the kind of positive contribution needed by its parent firm.

"We finally had to say enough, that the market will not improve quickly or dramatically enough to justify keeping the store open," Skibell said.

However, he didn't rule out reopening the location if the local economy improves. "We've been pleased with the Courtyard, a good location in a very nice center," he noted.

Operations of Garfield's nightclub at the Agora III complex are not affected by the Gardski's closing. "Garfield's is doing very well," Skibell said.

Oil analysts unsure OPEC can raise prices

LONDON (UPI) — Oil analysts Tuesday were sharply divided on the prospects and timing of OPEC achieving its target of $18-a-barrel oil at the December ministerial meeting.

John Toaster at the brokerage of Hoare Govett said the new Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Hisham Nazer and his colleagues were prepared to tighten the screws on supplies to drive up the price.

"The $18 to $20 price is just the start," Toaster said.

"The second stage of their plan is to push the oil price substantially higher by the middle of the year," he said.

He said he believed the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will be ready to manipulate the market and restrain supply until it gets there.

Philip Morgan of Warburg Securities, on the other hand, thinks an $18-a-barrel price will be possible only "some way into 1987 — mid-year being the best chance."

He said OPEC ministers have a lot of ground to cover at their next full meeting, which begins Dec. 11 in Geneva.

Morgan pointed out that OPEC's pricing committee Friday recommended that the cartel end all discounts and netback deals linking the price of crude to the value of petroleum products refined from each barrel — moves that take time.

"A $18-a-barrel price by Jan. 1 looks impossible," he said.

"The price of December Brent North Sea crude was little changed at aroundf $15.20 a barrel, with little or no premium for January delivery," Morgan said.

"When there's not a premium, it's a bearish move and suggests the oil price might fall from this level," said Morgan.

Mehdi Varzi of brokers Kleinwort Grievesons looked further ahead.

"The course of oil prices in 1987 depends on whether or not Saudi Arabia and Iran come to some sort of agreement," he said. "If they don't, there could be an all-out price collapse," he said.

The Saudis, with the world's largest oil reserves, favor moderate prices to prolong demand for their petroleum and to keep competition at bay from alternative fuels. The Iranians want sharply higher oil prices.

"The atmosphere at OPEC has improved since Sheikh (Zaki Ahmed) Yamani left (as Saudi oil minister), but it's too early to say yet whether or not they can actually reach agreement," he said.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Norway, France working toward gas accord

BONN (NYT) — Norway appeared headed toward compromise with France in a dispute over Norwegian plans to sell natural gas to Western Europe.

The plan to develop the huge North Sea gas fields would make Norway the main supplier of natural gas for Western Europe into the next century and would sharply reduce the region's reliance on the Soviet Union.

The accord has been snagged by a French demand for a guaranteed share of development work and increased Norwegian imports of French products.

In June, the French gas distribution company Gaz de France joined gas companies from West Germany, Belgium and the Netherlands in telling Norway they were prepared to take delivery of 686 billion cubic feet of natural gas annually over a 27-year period.

Administration still opposes trade barriers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration will continue to fight congressional efforts to erect trade barriers, but the battle next year is likely to be even more intense, Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III says.

In a speech Tuesday to the Asia Society of Washington, Baker said it was an "unfortunate irony" that the increased pressure for protectionist legislation was coming as the U.S. trade deficit finally appears to be leveling off.

Texas Air asks judge to ignore union offer

MIAMI (AP) — Texas Air Corp. and Eastern Airlines have urged a federal judge to ignore efforts by a group of employees to block their proposed merger.

In a 90-page document received by the U.S. District Court on Tuesday the airlines said that Eastern faced financial insolvency should the $670 million deal fall through.

If that happened, the ramifications would affect the flying public and the stock market, the companies said.

Squibb sheds cosmetics to focus on health

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Squibb Corp. says it will sell its fragrance and cosmetics subsidiary, Charles of the Ritz Group Ltd., to Yves Saint Laurent S.A. of Paris for $631 million.

Squibb said it was selling the unit in order to concentrate on health care.

Charles of the Ritz owns Yves Saint Laurent cosmetics and perfumes, so the purchase will reunite that label with the other labels of Yves Saint Laurent, a leading French fashion house.

Midland store gets new name, new look

By MELLA McEWEN

Midland's TG&Y variety store located at 36 Village Circle is in the process of becoming McCrorys, a result of the parent company being acquired by another firm.

The store is in the process of remodeling and adding some new product lines, according to assistant manager Louis Garza. As a result, the store is no longer carrying fabrics, automotive or sporting goods, concentrating instead on its hard and soft lines. "We're trying to bring the five and dime back to life for the middle and lower income customer," Garza noted.

A second restaurant has opened in downtown Midland.

LA VILLITA has opened at 215 W. Wall Street and features both an upstairs and downstairs bar and live music, according to Felix Quiroz, who owns the restaurant with his wife Maria.

The restaurant is open for breakfast from 7 to 10 a.m., for lunch from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and dinner from 5 to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday, and is open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Happy hour is from 4 to 7 p.m. weekdays, Quiroz said.

Among the dishes featured are fajitas, cabrito and steaks. The Madrid trio, a mariachi band, plays at La Villita on Friday nights.

Musicden, located in North Park shopping center between Tony's Deli and Sally's Beauty Supply, has new ownership and a new name: REEL MUSIC.

The store is owned by William H. Adamson Jr. and is managed by his daughter. The new management plans to expand into the compact disk market by expanding the new CD section and is now buying used CDs. The store, at the same time, will be cutting back its LP selection. "Our goal is to have the largest CD selection in the Permian Basin," said one employee.

•••

KEN'S RENT-IT-CENTER, 2900 W. Wall, has been purchased by Michael Hughes. The center was purchased from Ken Richards, the founder of the store.

A graduate of Midland High School, Hughes graduated from the University of Wisconsin School of Banking and was employed by Texas American Bank of Midland from 1964 to 1986.

To celebrate five years of business and a new location in Midland Plaza, THE SURE THING will present watercolorist Dorothy Baird on Thursday evening from 5 to 7 p.m.

Baird's work is currently appearing at The Sure Thing, an interior decorating studio. A native of British Columbia, Baird has been a Texas resident for 40 years and has recently been a student of Dr. Charles A. Steward and Warren Taylor of Midland College.

Mella McEwen is a business-oil writer for the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

WTGS sponsors Tahitian cruise

The West Texas Geological Society is sponsoring a Tahiti Geological Cruise on March 25-April 4, 1987. The trip will leave Midland on March 25, flying to Tahiti, where three days will be spent in Papeete before boarding the cruise ship S.S. Liberte' on March 28. Other islands having a port call are Bora Bora, Huahine, Raiatea/Tahaa and Mourea.

A guidebook on the geology of the islands will be prepared by field trip leader Dr. Peter Davies of the Bureau of Mineral Resources, Canberra, Australia.

The lush, beautiful French Polynesian Islands are unparalleled in scenic quality. Modern reefs, abounding with the exotic undersea world, fringe the islands. Snorkeling field excursions to get a close view of the reefs are scheduled for two of the islands, preceded by geologic lectures on board ship.

Eligibility for participation on this trip has been expanded to include all geologists, geophysicists, landmen and petroleum engineers, their spouses and guests. Oil industry personnel who register for the trip and are not WTGS members may be eligible to join the society.

Basic cost for the seven day cruise, which includes all meals aboard ship and round trip air fare, ranges from $2,250 to $2,550 per person, depending on cabin class selected.

For more information, call the WTGS office at 683-1573. Space is limited and reservations must be made no later than Nov. 25, 1986.

Wickes unable to raise financing for Lear deal

New York Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — In a sudden reversal, the Wickes Companies said Tuesday night that it had failed to raise bank financing for its $1.7 billion acquisition of Lear Siegler Inc., indicating that the deal may collapse.

Wickes said it "is not optimistic" that it would eventually succeed in raising the money.

Wickes, a retailing and manufacturing conglomerate, said it notified Lear Siegler of its difficulty in a letter delivered to the automotive and aerospace company Tuesday.

While Wickes offered little explanation, sources close to the deal maintained that the financing problems had little to do with Wall Street's insider trading scandal that has chilled takeover speculation. But because of the scandal, these sources said, the stock market has declined sharply this week, and one source said Wickes's banks were "nervous about financing transactions that have a lot of leverage." The banks are understood to be insisting on exceptionally tough terms.

Wickes's stock, which was unchanged Monday, fell 50 cents Tuesday, to close at $4 on the American Stock Exchange. That reduced the value of the company by almost $120 million. Wickes, which came out of bankruptcy proceedings less than two years ago, recently announced another big acquisition, and it faced the prospect of carrying $4 billion of debt.

Lear Siegler stock, meanwhile, fell 50 cents on Monday and $1.625 Tuesday, to $89.875, which is well below the $93-a-share offer.

Some analysts attributed Wickes's problem to its close association with Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., the investment banking firm that has been subpoenaed in the Ivan F. Boesky scandal, and which has worked closely with Wickes on a number of occasions.

"I'm not surprised," said Frank P. Rolfes, an analyst with Dain Bosworth Inc., said of Wickes's financing difficulties. "They're obviously caught up in this Drexel problem, and they've been financing through Drexel from early on."

Wickes said that the situation does not jeopardize its planned $1.16 billion acquisition of the Collins & Aikman Corporation, a manufacturer of commercial and automotive textiles. That deal, announced Nov. 8, will be financed mainly by funds raised in a $1.4 billion debenture offering through Drexel earlier this year.

Drexel represented Wickes in the Collins & Aikman deal and has worked closely with Sanford C. Sigoloff, Wickes's chairman, on other deals.

Rolfes said the potential loss of Lear Siegler may not be detrimental to Wickes in the long run. "A lot of people felt that the Lear Siegler deal was too aggressive and opportunistic," he said. "They've still got the Collins & Aikman deal, which is more in line with their other businesses."

If both deals were consummated, Wickes would spend nearly $3 billion. The fast-growing conglomerate, based near Lear Siegler's headquarters in Santa Monica, Calif., had embarked on an ambitious expansion program earlier this year that included unsuccessful attempts to acquire the National Gypsum Co. for $1.23 billion and the Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. for $2.1 billion. Wickes has about $425 million in tax-loss carry-forwards that could be used to shelter the earnings of operations that it acquired.

The proposed Lear Siegler acquisition, which was announced Nov. 11, called for Wickes to pay $93 a share for each of Lear Siegler's 17.9 million common shares outstanding and $232.50 for each of its 177,000 preferred shares in a tender offer. The transaction is subject to several conditions, including Wickes's ability to arrange financing that is satisfactory to the company.

BOESKY

—Drexel and a number of its top officials have received subpoenas from both the SEC and the United States attorney's office, which is conducting a criminal investigation. The commission has received what is known as a formal order of investigation to investigate Drexel, the firm said.

—A Wall Street executive said he had learned that that Boyd L. Jefferies, the chairman of a West Coast securities brokerage that frequently executes stock trades for corporate raiders, would be interviewed by the federal authorities later this week. That suggested that the investigation is already advanced. Jefferies was said by his firm Tuesday to be en route to New York and unavailable for comment.

—Sources with knowledge of the continuing investigation said several senior Wall Street figures might be the target of charges relating to Boesky soon. This was another indication that Boesky had cooperated extensively with the authorities for several months before the announcement of his settlement of SEC charges last Friday. The United States attorney's office in Manhattan has also said Boesky has agreed to plead guilty to one criminal charge, which could result in a five-year prison sentence.

—The rumor mill on corporate takeovers, which had been in high gear until Friday, has dried up. But rumors have been flying around wildly about what people or firms have become targets in the government inquiry and what securities firms have suffered losses on the plunging takeover stocks. For instance, Merrill Lynch & Co. was rumored Tuesday to have suffered steep losses from its trading in takeover stocks, causing the resignation of one of its executives. A company spokesman flatly denied that there had been any resignations and said that, though there might have been some losses, they were not major.

—An examination of investment documents of Ivan F. Boesky & Co., Boesky's stock investing vehicle, showed that many of the largest investors were close to Drexel, which has become a central focus of the investigation. Drexel itself had invested about $3.2 million with Boesky's firm, the documents show.

The growing signs that the inquiry was advanced proved the most unsettling influence on Wall Street Tuesday.

Much of that concern was created by the reports that Boesky had agreed several months ago to cooperate with the federal authorities by allowing his business conversations to be electronically tape-recorded, without the knowledge of the other parties. None of the federal agencies would confirm that recordings were made. But sources with knowledge of the investigation had said that Boesky had been "wired" for a period of several weeks.

Boesky is known to have had direct access to some of the most influential figures on Wall Street, and there was widespread concern over whom these recorded conversations might have incriminated.

The concern was heightened by the fact that Boesky's settlement was lenient compared with those of the five people implicated previously, including Dennis B. Levine, indicating that Boesky was able to negotiate better terms because of who he implicated.

Boesky will have to pay the $100 million, but that reportedly will still leave him with a fortune of millions of dollars. The other investment bankers implicated suffered much more substantial financial penalties relative to their wealth. They were generally allowed to keep their homes, cars, and about $60,000 in cash. Court-appointed receivers were also put in charge of marshaling their assets, but that was not done in Boesky's case.

Boesky will face only one criminal count, while the others have faced from two to four counts, even though Boesky's reported illegal profits of more than $50 million were many times larger than those disclosed for others involved so far.

Sources with knowledge of the investigation said also that Boesky had arranged his plea much earlier than Friday, when it was announced to the public, and that its terms are final, even though they have not been disclosed.

GNP

The country's trade deficit grew during the third quarter, putting the imbalance between imports and exports at an annual deficit level of $163.6 billion. But the deterioration was much less than in the second quarter, so the deficit subtracted less from GNP growth.

Analysts believe there will be even more improvement in coming months and this is the reason for much of the optimism about further GNP growth next year.

Business capital investment continued to shrink during the third quarter, edging down 0.1 percent, the third consecutive quarterly decline.

Home construction, one of the brightest segments of the economy, increased by 9.7 percent in the third quarter following a 14.5 percent rise in the second quarter.

The various changes left the GNP at $3.69 trillion in the third quarter. Before taking out the effects of inflation, the GNP expanded 6.4 percent to an annual level of $4.24 billion.

The GNP inflation index, which measures an unchanging market-basket of goods, showed a pick up to a 2.4 percent annual rate after being held back by plunging oil prices in the April-June quarter. This index rose 3.7 percent for all of 1985 after a 4 percent increase in 1984.

The Reagan administration had been predicting growth of 3.2 percent this year, but that would require a torrid 5.6 percent pace in the current quarter, far above what private economists believe is possible.

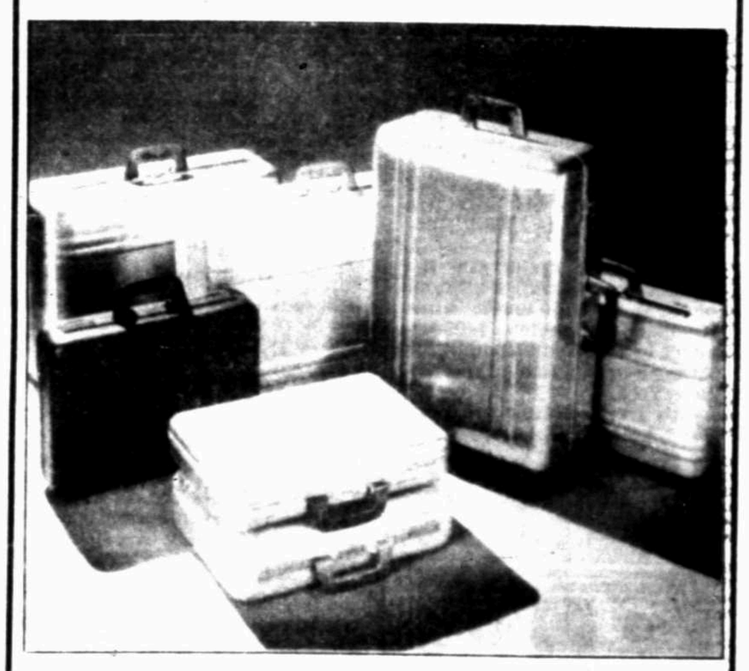

For next year, the administration has been predicting GNP growth of 4.2 percent, but a top official said last week this forecast will be scaled back.

Chief presidential economist Beryl Sprinkel told reporters on Friday that he now sees economic growth averaging 3.5 percent to 4 percent next year, although he said the administration's formal projection would not be made for another month.

Even this scaled-down forecast would be more than 1 percentage point higher than those of many private economists, who are calling for GNP growth of around 2.6 percent next year.

Some analysts are also expressing fears that the economy could tumble into a recession in the first half of 1987 as the new tax law dampens spending by consumers and businesses.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

When told assets worthless, it's natural to want proof

By BILL DOYLE

Q. After closing my account at a major brokerage firm, I asked for a stock certificate I had given the broker several years ago. The broker said, since the stock is in the brokerage firm's name "and is now worthless, there is no way we can submit the certificate to be transferred to your name."

He added, if I request the firm to take the stock off its books, "our New York office will send you a letter for your records, declaring the stock worthless."

Other than taking the brokerage firm's word for it, how can I determine if the stock has any value? Since companies are sold, merged and otherwise reorganized, is there any source that can tell me what happened to the company whose stock I own?

A. You can try R.M. Smythe & Co., 24 Broadway, New York, N.Y., 10004. That firm, the best source I know for tracing old securities, charges $20 for each U.S. company and $25 for each foreign company.

Doyle

However, the brokerage firm you named in your letter is one of the biggest in the business and, no doubt, traced that stock before giving you the bad news that it's worthless.

Ask the broker with whom you have been in contact to provide details of how that stock lost all its value. Even though you no longer do business there, the brokerage firm should furnish that information. After all, when you're told something you own is worthless, it's only natural for you to want proof.

The letter the brokerage is willing to provide can be helpful to you. It will attest that the stock is worthless. As a result, you'll be able to take a capital loss equal to the price you paid for the stock on your income tax return.

On Schedule D of your Form 1040, where capital gains and capital losses are reported, worthless stock can be listed as having a "zero" value as of Dec. 31 of the year in which it lost all value.

The kicker is that you are supposed to report that loss on the return you file for that particular year. If that happened before 1986, you can file an amended return — Form 1040X — back for seven years.

Q. On Feb. 24, 1969, I paid $100 for 1,000 shares of stock. I lost track of this stock and, over the years, have attempted to trace it by writing to the bank that formerly was its transfer agent and to various brokers.

In 1982, I finally received a written reply from a brokerage firm. It stated the stock is offered at one-tenth of a cent and has "no bid at present." What is the significance of "no bid?"

A. It means that no one is willing to buy shares of that stock — at any price. That makes your stock worthless.

You can take a $100 capital loss by filing an amended income tax return for 1982, the year in which the brokerage letter shows it had no value and the year in which you'll assume it lost all value.

A word of caution. If the IRS questions your amended return, you'll have to come up with proof that the stock actually became worthless in 1982 — not some other year.

Q. I have owned 176 shares of stock in a company for which I worked back in 1937. The company's assets were sold to a larger company that year. A copy of the certificate, registered in my name is enclosed. I took the certificate to my brokerage firm and asked them to research it to see if it might still have some value.

After five months, my broker showed me a letter from a large New York City bank. It states: "The above captioned certificate account does not appear on our record or the prior agents' records as an outstanding shareholder. We are therefore retaining this certificate for outright cancellation."

Does the bank have the right to do that?

A. That's most unlikely. In your shoes, I would demand that certificate be returned, without any cancellation, and then have good research done. If there was an exchange of stock when the company you worked for was sold, you might be sitting on a gold mine. At worst, you'll have a worthless certificate as a souvenir.

Dad takes tardy son's punishment

WINDERMERE, Fla. (AP) — Thomas and Debra Flynn admitted they were responsible when their 7-year-old son was tardy, so dad decided the only fair thing to do was to take his son's punishment.

Flynn, 37, reported to the principal's office after school one day last week and spent 30 minutes in detention. He said he got 15 minutes off for good behavior.

Both parents said it was a perfect opportunity to teach their son, Sean, that everyone must be responsible for their own actions.

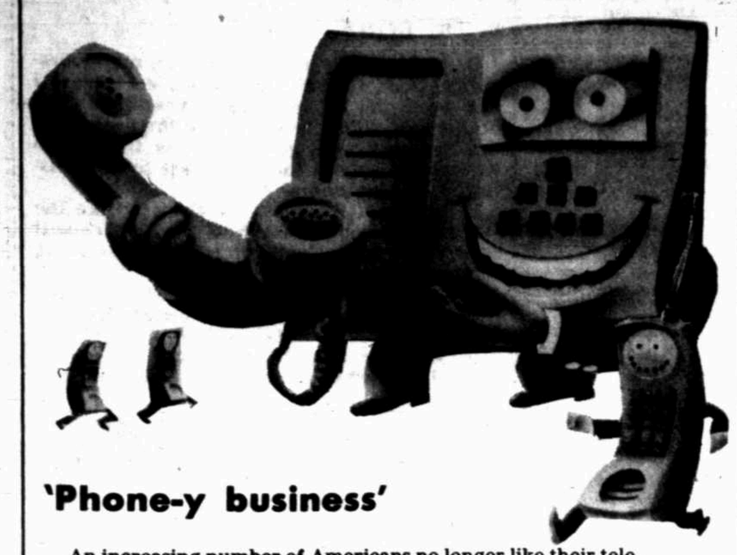

The Flynns at first tried to talk Principal Dorothy Lynch of Windermere Elementary School out of making the second-grader serve detention, saying it wasn't his fault he was late.

New In Business

'Phone-y business'

An increasing number of Americans no longer like their telephones. They want something fancier — something that fits the decor of their home or office and allows them to take one call, even as they are in the middle of another, or allows them to hook up with mom in Denver and grandma in Boston, and carry on a three-way family reunion of sorts.

A recent survey of American households reflects a major move away from the traditional square desk and wall-mounted models. The survey indicates that 47.7 percent of the population have moved away from the standard telephone. Additionally, 58.7 percent are now purchasing their own phones, rather than leasing. The survey also showed a marked increase in the availability of telephones. It is no longer necessary to go to a telephone specialty store — most major department stores and many discount variety stores now carry them.

NDCF says production cut threat to military security

WASHINGTON (AP) — Weak prices for oil and the resulting decline in domestic production could jeopardize U.S. national security in the event of a military mobilization, according to a report given to a cabinet-level group.

However, administration officials have been skeptical when the argument of national security has been raised, saying it masks a plea for economic relief from a financially ailing industry.

The National Defense Council Foundation, a conservative study group, has submitted a paper making the mobilization argument for review by the cabinet group headed by Deputy Energy Secretary William F. Martin.

The foundation's energy expert, Milt Copolous, attacks the conclusions of a Pentagon study in March that the United States could get enough non-Middle East oil to handle the 30 percent increase in demand that mobilization would bring even with heavy curtailment of civilian use.

That study assumes U.S. production in the lower 48 states would remain at the current 8.8 million barrels a day, Alaskan production could increase by 0.5 million barrels, the Strategic Petroleum Reserve could supply 2.7 million for six months and imports could rise to almost 10 million from the current 7 million.

The flaw, according to Copulous, is that U.S. production is likely to decline soon to 6 million barrels a day. Low prices are leading companies to cut exploration and abandon marginal wells.

The cabinet review, announced at a September campaign speech by President Reagan, is being bombarded by requests from parts of the oil industry for help.

Martin, a former National Security Council aide, did not respond to a request for an interview. But he said in September, "I can tell you of countless numbers of times when people who couldn't make it in the marketplace invoked the national security argument. So I'm a real careful watchdog on that."

Another participant in the review called the Copulous paper "very significant" in educating members of the group but "I don't know that it's bought by everybody." The participant, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the panel was still identifying issues and did not expect to report until January, about a month late.

The Independent Petroleum Association of America, after much wrangling among members, came out recently for a tariff on imported oil, as did American Petroleum Institute Chairman George Keller. The Petroleum Marketers Assocation of America opposed it, saying government authority to set a minimum price also can be used to set a maximum price.

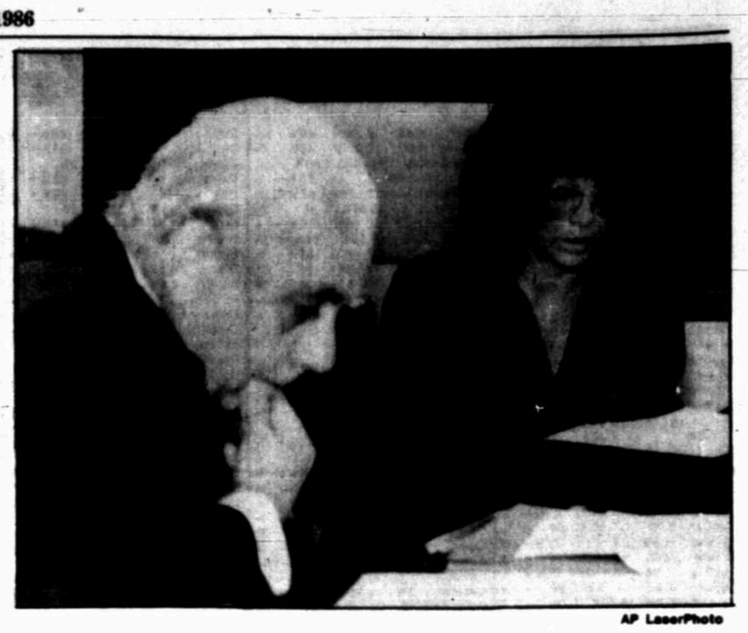

Henry Lee, head of the Energy and Environment Program at Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government, has been an opponent of oil tariffs, but said last week he may be changing his mind on grounds that an import fee may put downward pressure on oil prices in the long run.

He scoffed at the estimate that full mobilization would require almost 22 million barrels a day of oil: "What are they going to do, drown people in it?"

Doug Bohi, an analyst with Resources for the Future, a Washington think tank, said a stiff import tax would hold down U.S. demand, and reduced U.S. demand would hold the world price below what it would otherwise be.

"Vulernability comes through demand. ... flexibility on the consumption side is the important thing," Bohi said.

Lee said U.S. fields are so worked-out that high prices will not bring much new oil to market, and imports are bound to increase through the 1990s.

Texas assistant attorney general Judy Doran and state Finance Commission examiner Allo Crow hear testimony on regulating the mortgage industry.

Battle rages over regulation in mortgage banking industry

AUSTIN (AP) — New regulations are needed to protect home buyers from unscrupulous mortgage companies, several witnesses told a hearing of the Finance Commission.

"Our office has had approximately 235 mortgage lock-in complaints since July of this year," Assistant Attorney General Judy Doran told Allo Crow, who acted as a hearing examiner for the Finance Commission.

She said there had been a total of 450 complaints from consumers against Texas mortgage companies in 1986.

"About 90 to 95 percent of the mortgage companies are good people, but the rest are not acting in the public interest," said Roy Harvey, an Austin mortgage banker. "We need more regulation."

Larry Temple, Austin attorney representing the Texas Mortgage Bankers Association, said the industry was already "highly regulated" by private investors, federal agencies and a "myriad" of state agencies. He said no additional regulation or licensing was advisable or justified.

Crow said testimony given at the hour-and-a-half hearing would be given to the 12-member commission, which would study it and make recommendations to the 1987 Legislature.

The commission was directed to make the study of possible regulation of mortgage companies in a legislative resolution passed during the recent special session, sponsored by Sen. Carl Parker and Rep. Frank Collazo, both Democrats of Port Arthur.

Kodak plans South African pullout, halt of shipments

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Eastman Kodak announced that it will withdraw from South Africa and halt shipments of its products to the country.

The announcement followed the recent pullouts from South Africa by General Motors, IBM and several other U.S. corporations.

Colby Chandler, chairman and chief executive officer of the photographic equipment manufacturer, said in a statement from the company's Rochester, N.Y. headquarters that economic factors played a major role in the decision to leave South Africa.

"Our South African business has been affected negatively by weakness in the South African economy," he said. "We also have no doubt that the system of apartheid has played a major role in the economy's underperformance."

Kodak did not specify when the pullout would occur, but said shipment of its cameras, film and other products to South Africa will end by April 30, 1987.

Kodak's South African operations are based in Cape Town and consist of sales, not manufacturing.

As of 1984, Kodak had 567 employees in South Africa, including 207 whites, 165 blacks and the rest either Asian or mixed-race. More recent employment figures were not immediately available.

The statement said Kodak employees in South Africa would receive "a generous separation package" and would be offered re-employment counseling.

Chandler said in the statement, "We had hoped that the pace of change to dismantle apartheid would permit us to forecast a time when we would not have to operate a business under an apartheid system. We have reluctantly concluded that our hopes were not justified and that we must now make the business decision to withdraw."

Apartheid is South Africa's system of forced racial segregation, under which the 24 million blacks are denied a voice in national affairs and the 5 million whites control the government and economy.

Kodak's announcement that it would halt sales of its products in South Africa went a step further than General Motors, IBM and other major U.S. companies which, despite pulling out, have arranged for their products to be sold by local owners who have purchased their holdings.

More than 60 American companies have pulled out of South Africa in the past two years because of economic problems and anti-apartheid pressure in the United States.

About 240 U.S. companies remain. Total American investment in South African totals about $1.3 billion, roughly half of what it was five years ago.

America's Holiday Heritage

Much of our American holiday food heritage was brought to us from the country hearths of England and Europe. Recipes, passed by travelers from country inns to village homes and the kitchens of lavish estates, journeyed to America. An inheritance of American cooking is reflected in the rewarding menu that follows.

Roasted Capon With Apple-Raisin Sausage Stuffing
Browned Buttermilk Gravy
Poached Golden Apples With Citrus
Winter Vegetables With Ranch Dressing and Walnuts
Spotted Dog With Rum Raisin Cranberry Sauce

Smaller families are the norm today. And with both adults in many families now working outside the home, time and ease of preparation are critical. That's why cooks are using convenience products whenever it is possible to do so without sacrificing traditional flavors. And technology, in the form of new and time-saving equipment, is heaven sent.

A capon, 7 to 8 pounds, which will serve six to eight, seems ideally suited for today's smaller families. Order one early from your grocer or specialty poultry market; if you can't get one, a large roasting chicken or small turkey will do as well. Whichever bird you use, it will roast to a perfect savory golden brown when you brush the surface with a browning and seasoning sauce.

The stuffing combines bread seasoned with mild Italian sausage and spinach, accented with raisins and the slight sweetness of Golden Delicious apples, the versatile cooking and eating apple. Small whole Goldens are also used for the poached apple garnish because they hold their shape when cooked and maintain color when peeled.

Tying the elements of the entree together is a well-seasoned gravy, recalling the early American tradition of smoothing the flavors with the tang of buttermilk. You can guarantee flavor and color with Kitchen Bouquet* browning and seasoning sauce and gravy aid.

Share the buttermilk used for the gravy with the topping for the vegetables. You'll enjoy the delightful herb flavors in Ranch* Buttermilk Recipe Original salad dressing made with buttermilk, topped with bread crumbs and crushed walnuts. It's creamy, smooth and easy to prepare.

Serving perfect vegetables is a snap when you select winter varieties such as broccoli, carrots and squash and cook them in a microwave oven. It takes but minutes, and you can cook and serve them in the same dish when you use microwave cookware. Freezer- and dishwasher-safe, the newest cookware can be used in microwave ovens as well as convection and conventional ovens up to 400° F.

This holiday feast is appropriately crowned with a grand finale that recalls the warmest of English country inn traditions, Spotted Dog with Rum Raisin Cranberry Sauce. The rich, steamed pudding featuring moist and delicious raisins was a welcome treat for weary holiday-travelers. The raisin-studded pudding was once likened to a Dalmatian and has been known ever since as a "spotted dog" pudding.

Roasted Capon With Apple-Raisin Sausage Stuffing

1/4 pound bulk Italian sausage
1 cup diced onion
6 cups bread stuffing mix
1 cup cored and diced Golden Delicious apple
1 package (9 oz.) frozen spinach, thawed and thoroughly drained
1/3 cup raisins
1 cup chicken broth
1 capon (7 to 8 lb.), thawed
1 teaspoon Kitchen Bouquet browning and seasoning sauce
1/2 cup butter or margarine, softened

Brown sausage and onion; drain. Mix together stuffing, apple, spinach, raisins and sausage mixture. Stir in chicken broth. Refrigerate to cool completely. Remove giblets, neck and any loose fat from bird cavity; rinse and pat dry. Stuff body and neck cavities lightly with apple stuffing mixture. Close openings with skewers and lace with string to secure the legs, tail and wings. Work Kitchen Bouquet into softened butter and rub mixture all over capon. Place capon on V-shaped rack in roasting pan. Roast in 325° F. oven; baste every 15 minutes with remaining butter mixture. Cook about 3 hours (25 minutes per pound) or until meat thermometer reads 170° F. or until juices run clear. Transfer capon to warm serving platter. Cover lightly and let rest about 10 minutes before carving. Makes 6 servings.

Winter Vegetables With Ranch Dressing And Walnuts

(Microwave Method*)

2 pounds prepared vegetables (see note)
1-1/2 cups prepared Ranch Buttermilk Recipe Original salad dressing
1 tablespoon flour
1/3 cup each coarsely chopped walnuts and buttered bread crumbs

Arrange vegetables in microwave-safe dish; cover with plastic wrap and vent. Cook at HIGH (100%) 6 minutes; drain. Combine salad dressing and flour; pour over vegetables. Combine walnuts and bread crumbs; mix well. Sprinkle over vegetables. Cover, vent and cook on HIGH 5 minutes. Let stand 2 minutes before serving. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

To prepare conventionally, steam prepared vegetables until tender and proceed with recipe directions for sauce. Bake in 400° F. oven for 15 minutes.

Note: Cauliflower, zucchini, broccoli, leeks and/or cherry tomatoes can be used.

*Recipe developed for 600 to 700 watt microwave ovens.

Browned Buttermilk Gravy

3 cups chicken broth, divided (see note)
1/2 cup flour
2 tablespoons fat drippings
3/4 cup buttermilk
1 teaspoon Kitchen Bouquet browning and seasoning sauce
1 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper

Blend 1 cup cold broth with flour until smooth. Heat remaining broth and drippings in large saucepan. Stir flour mixture into hot broth. Cook and stir over medium heat until mixture boils. Reduce heat. Stir in remaining ingredients; cook 2 to 3 minutes more. Serve hot. Makes about 4 cups.

Note: Chicken broth—use canned broth or combine chicken giblets and neck; 1 teaspoon each thyme and chopped parsley; 1 carrot and 1 celery rib, chopped; 1/2 onion, quartered; and 1/2 teaspoon Kitchen Bouquet browning and seasoning sauce. Cover with water; simmer about 2 hours. Strain. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

Poached Golden Apples With Citrus

1 cup orange juice
1/2 cup cream sherry
1 stick cinnamon
6 small Golden Delicious apples, pared
Shredded orange peel

Combine orange juice, sherry and cinnamon in large saucepan; bring to boil. Reduce heat; add apples and simmer, covered, 40 to 45 minutes or until tender. Baste and turn frequently. Remove from poaching liquid; garnish with orange peel. Makes 6 servings.

Spotted Dog With Rum Raisin Cranberry Sauce

2-1/4 cups flour
2 cups fresh white bread crumbs
2 cups raisins
1-1/4 cups sugar
1 tablespoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
5 eggs
Grated peel of 2 lemons
1/2 cup melted shortening
1/4 cup milk
Rum Raisin Cranberry Sauce (recipe follows)

In bowl combine flour, crumbs, raisins, sugar, baking powder and salt. In another bowl beat eggs and lemon peel until fluffy. Mix eggs, shortening and milk into flour mixture to blend thoroughly. Turn into 2 to 2-1/2 2-quart pudding mold or heatproof bowl coated with vegetable cooking spray. Cover with lid or aluminum foil. Place on rack in large pot. Pour in boiling water to come two-thirds of the way up side of mold. Cover and simmer 2 hours, 15 minutes. Meanwhile, prepare Rum Raisin Cranberry Sauce. Unmold hot pudding onto serving plate. Serve with sauce. Makes 12 servings.

Rum Raisin Cranberry Sauce: In saucepan combine 1-3/4 cups cranberry juice cocktail, 3/4 cup golden raisins and 1/2 cup packed light brown sugar. Bring to boil; add 1-cup fresh or frozen cranberries. Simmer until berries begin to pop. Mix 1/3 cup golden rum with 2 tablespoons cornstarch. Stir into saucepan. Cook and stir just until thickened. Serve warm. Makes about 3 cups.

Note: Pudding may be made ahead and frozen up to 2 months. Thaw; steam in mold, covered, about 45 minutes.

Flounder by any name an excellent main course

By PAUL BENSEN
Copley News Service

The flounder has many names. Depending on where you grew up, you may know it as plaice, dab, sand dab, windowpane, lemon sole, Atlantic halibut, fluke or brill. It's an excellent main course choice for the after-work cook, because the quick and delicious ways to prepare flounder outnumber even its many aliases.

Any of three families of flatfish, which belong to the order Pleuronectiformes, may properly be called flounder. Their habitat is the Atlantic coastal waters from Cape Cod to Florida.

Flounder and sole can be used interchangeably in recipes. The meat of flounder or flatfish is white, firm and mild-flavored.

Adult flatfish have both eyes on one side of their head. As the young fish develop, the bones of the skull twist, moving the eyes to one side, which becomes the back of the mature fish. The back develops much heavier pigmentation than the "blind" side, which generally remains almost white. Some flatfish can change color to blend in with their surroundings.

To skin a flounder or other flatfish, lay it on a cutting board, dark side up. Using a sharp knife, cut across the skin where the tail joins the body. Starting at the place where you made the cut, use the knife point to loosen a flap of skin from the meat.

Take the flap of skin in one hand and hold down the tail with the other, using a kitchen towel to prevent slipping. Pull the skin toward, then over, the head. Turn the fish over and, holding the head firmly, pull the skin back toward the tail.

Flatfish are easy to fillet, because of their well-defined bone structure, but the technique is a bit different from that for other types of fish. Each flatfish will give you four fillets.

CNS Graphic

Lay the fish on a cutting board with the eyes facing up and the tail toward you. Using a sharp knife, cut down to the backbone along the center of the fish, moving from head to tail. Cut at a shallow angle between the head end of one fillet and the ribs. When the head end of the fillet is free, lift it clear of the ribs and continue cutting toward the tail. The knife should be guided by the fish's bone structure. Cut the fillet off at the tail end and remove fins and ragged edges. Repeat the process for each of the other three fillets.

GRATIN OF FLOUNDER WITH MUSHROOMS

2 pounds flounder fillets
1 pound mushrooms, finely chopped
1 medium onion, finely chopped
¼ cup fresh minced parsley
⅓ cup dry white wine
2 cups fresh bread crumbs
1 stick (¼ pound) butter
Salt and pepper to taste

Total preparation/cooking time — 20 minutes. Butter gratin dish with 1 tablespoon of butter. Melt remaining butter in small saucepan and set aside.

Salt and pepper flounder fillets. Mix mushrooms, onion and parsley together and spread half the mixture in bottom of buttered dish. Lay fish fillets over it, followed by remainder of mushroom mixture. Sprinkle wine evenly over the fish to moisten it.

Toss bread crumbs with the melted butter and spread mixture over fish. Bake in a 450 degrees for 10 to 15 minutes, until crumbs are golden brown and crisp.

Serves 4.

POACHED FLOUNDER IN HERBS AND BUTTER SAUCE

8 flounder fillets, 4 to 6 ounces each
6 tablespoons butter, plus some for the pan
⅓ cup chopped fresh parsley
1 teaspoon dried thyme
⅓ cup dry white wine
⅓ cup bottled clam juice
Salt and pepper to taste

Total preparation/cooking time — 25 to 30 minutes. Generously butter heavy saute pan. Lay fillets out on work surface and, on each one, place ½ tablespoon butter. Mix chopped parsley with thyme and divide among the fillets, leaving about 1 tablespoon of herbs left over.

Fold each fillet end-to-end over butter and herbs, and place fillets side by side in the saute pan. Pour over them the wine, clam juice and enough water to barely cover. Cover the fillets with waxed paper and place the lid on the pan.

Bring the liquid to simmer and cook the fish about 5 minutes for each ½-inch of thickness, until firm and flaky. Remove fillets to platter and keep warm.

Transfer poaching liquid to a heavy saucepan and reduce over high heat until syrupy (⅓ cup or less should remain). Whisk in remaining 2 tablespoons butter and pour sauce over the fillets. Garnish with remaining herbs.

Serves 4.

FLOUNDER WITH LEEK AND CRABMEAT SAUCE

4 large flounder fillets, 6 to 8 ounces each
2 cups thinly sliced leeks (white part only)
1 stick butter (¼ pound)
½ pound crabmeat, picked over
2 tablespoons fresh dill (or 2 teaspoons dried)
1 cup heavy cream
⅔ cup dry white wine
1 tablespoon lemon juice, or to taste
Salt and white pepper to taste
Flour for dredging

Total preparation/cooking time: 25 minutes. In heavy skillet, melt ½ tick butter over moderate heat and in it cook the leeks, stirring, for 5 minutes or until soft. Add crabmeat and dill, and cook for 1 minute more.

Stir in cream, wine, lemon juice and salt and pepper and simmer 10 minutes, until thickened somewhat. Transfer sauce to top of double boiler and keep warm over simmering water.

Lightly dredge the fillets with flour. In a large skillet, melt remaining ½ stick of butter and saute the fillets over moderately high heat for 2 to 3 minutes on each side, or until golden brown. With slotted spatula, transfer the fillets to a warm platter and spoon sauce over them.

Swordfish for the quick cook

By PAUL BENSEN
Copley News Service

Swordfish is an excellent choice for any of the dry-heat cooking techniques — broiling, baking or grilling. All of these cooking methods are tailor-made for the after work chef, since they are relatively fast and simple.

Since swordfish is a bit oilier than many fish species, and its fat is distributed evenly throughout the meat, these cooking methods get rid of any excess fat and leave the meat tender and moist.

Swordfish are found in both Atlantic and Pacific waters, though they are becoming very rare off the southern U.S. Pacific coast. Black tip and mako shark steaks are misleadingly sold as "swordfish" in some West Coast markets — and many consumers don't know the difference.

Shark steaks, incidentally, may be substituted for swordfish in either of today's recipes. Many people are reluctant to cook shark, perhaps expecting it to taste strong or "gamy." These fears are unfounded. Shark is firm-textured, lean and mild-flavored. It's a best buy, too - one of the lowest-priced fish in the display case.

Named for their distinctive, sharp bill, swordfish grow to over six feet in length. The meat is rich-tasting and firm in texture. The most common market form is steaks, which are cross-section cuts of the body. Swordfish fillets are also available in many stores.

In addition to the dry-heat cooking methods mentioned above, swordfish is also delicious braised — if you prepare it carefully and choose the right accompaniments. Swordfish that is to be braised should be blanched for a couple of minutes in boiling water, to remove excess fat. Tomatoes, onions and scallions are good braising companions for swordfish, and some lemon slices and dry white wine are also good additions.

I particularly like swordfish cooked on a charcoal fire. The charcoal taste brings out the flavor of the meat, and swordfish is firm and dense enough that it won't come apart on the grill.

The flavor of the anchovy paste is very subtle. Not long ago, I served this dish to several friends, and one of my guests asked about the sauce's ingredients. Her comment was, "Oh, I hate anchovies - but I love this sauce!" Pesto Sauce needs fresh basil — the dried herb doesn't have the same flavor. Some food specialty stores and supermarkets now sell basil and other herbs in frozen form. In most cases, the frozen leaves are very nearly as good as the fresh herb.

As a general rule, allow 8 to 10 ounces of swordfish per serving.

ANCHOVY CAPER SAUCE FOR SWORDFISH

1 stick unsalted butter (¼ pound)
1 tablespoon anchovy paste (available in tubes in most supermarkets)
2 tablespoons capers
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
1 tablespoon chopped parsley

Melt butter in small saucepan ver medium heat. Add all remaining ingredients, except parsley and allow to bubble gently for 5 minutes, so that the flavors blend. Just before serving, stir in parsley. Serve over grilled or broiled swordfish.

Makes enough sauce for 4 servings.

Oyster recipe wins grand prize

MIAMI (UPI) — The oysters of Willapa Bay in Washington helped James Stiles walk off with the nationwide grand prize in the 1986 Courvoisier Culinary Classic.

Stiles' recipe, which calls for a unique appetizer treatment of unshelled oysters cooked on a bed of fresh herbs and gruyere cheese, was selected from more than 5,000 entries submitted by amateur cooks.

The grand prize, awarded to the Seattle cook by a panel sponsored by the Culinary Institute of America, consisted of a one-week trip for two to Paris and $5,000 in cash.

As announced in Miami, along with other honors for dishes using tuna steaks, pumpkin, and apple petals, here is the winning recipe.

WILLAPA BAY OYSTER FONDUE COURVOISIER

¼ cup fresh lovage leaves (or additional herbs listed below)
½ cup fresh Italian parsley leaves
¼ cup fresh oregano leaves
¼ cup chives, ¼-inch in length
¼ cup scallions, greens only, diced
10 Tbsp unsalted butter
¼ cup fine cognac
Peel of 1 lemon
¼ cup canned green peppercorns
12 fresh oysters in their shells (see Note below)
¼ cup grated gruyere cheese

NOTE: If fresh oysters are not available in their shells, prepare the recipe in porceline dishes or ramekins.

Finely chop the herbs and saute them in 2 tablespoons of butter until they are wilted. Set aside.

In a medium saucepan, combine the cognac with the lemon peel and gently simmer until it is reduced to about 3 tablespoons. Remove the lemon peel and discard it. Add 8 tablespoons of butter and 12 teaspoons of green peppercorns. Simmer to combine the flavors and set aside.

Preheat the oven to 400 degrees.

If the oysters are in their shells, shuck them. Fix the deeper of the two halves of the shells in a baking pan. To keep the oysters from sliding, use either rock salt or crinkled foil as a base.

Put about 2 teaspoons of the herb mixture on each shell, or spread it over the bottom of each ramekin. Sprinkle with grated cheese, about 1 teaspoon per shell.

Place the oysters on the cheese-herb beds and glaze each with the cognac-green peppercorn mixture. Bake until plump, 6 to 8 minutes.

PESTO SAUCE FOR SWORDFISH

2 cloves garlic, minced
½ cup finely chopped fresh basil (tightly packed) cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup olive oil
cup pine nuts (pignola)

In food processor or with mortar and pestle, thoroughly mix garlic, basil, cheese and salt together. Beat oil in in a stream until evenly mixed in. Stir in pine nuts. Serve over grilled or broiled swordfish.

Makes enough sauce for 4 servings.

Calorie counters enjoy desserts made with cake flour, without guilt

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

A calorie counter can enjoy a slice of cake without guilt when it's made with one of these new recipes that contain 30 to 40 percent fewer calories than standard cakes. Cake flour is the ingredient that makes the calorie cut possible. Made from soft wheat and ground much finer than all-purpose flour, cake flour needs less sugar and fat to turn out a flavorful cake that's light and fine-textured.

For an accurate measurement, be sure to sift the cake flour before measuring. Superfine sugar, called for in this recipe, is granulated sugar with very small crystals that mix in and dissolve quickly.

For a recipe for Old-Fashioned Marble Cake and other calorie-trimmed cake and frosting recipes, send $1 for the Swans Down Breakthrough Baking booklet, P.O. Box 60296, New Orleans, LA 70160.

LEMON-ANGEL ROLL

4 egg whites
1 teaspoon lemon juice
Dash salt
½ cup superfine sugar
½ cup sifted cake flour
1 teaspoon lemon extract
Powdered sugar
Lemon filling

Spray a 13x9x1-inch baking pan with non-stick spray coating. Line with waxed paper and lightly coat again with non-stick spray.

In a large mixer bowl beat egg whites with lemon juice and salt until foamy. Beat in sugar, 2 tablespoons at a time, until soft peaks form (tips turn over). Sift flour over egg white mixture, folding in about ¼ of it at a time until well mixed. Fold in lemon extract. Spread batter into prepared pan. Smooth evenly to corners and edges. Bake in a 300 degree oven for 20 minutes or just until cake springs back when lightly touched in center. Meanwhile, lightly sift powdered sugar onto a doubled strip of paper towels. Remove cake from oven and immediately invert onto sugar-coated paper towels. Peel off waxed paper. Roll warm cake, starting from a narrow end; cool.

Unroll cake and spread with Lemon Filling to within 1 inch of edges. Reroll. Carefully transfer to serving plate. Dust with powdered sugar. Makes 8 servings.

LEMON FILLING: In a 2-quart saucepan combine ⅓ cup sugar and ¼ cup sifted cake flour. Stir in ⅓ cup water, ¼ cup lemon juice and 1 teaspoon finely shredded lemon peel. Cook, stirring constantly, over medium-high heat until mixture thickens and bubbles. Stir a little of the hot mixture into 1 beaten egg yolk; return all mixture to saucepan. Cook 1 minute longer. Remove from heat and stir in 1 tablespoon margarine. To speed cooling, place pan, covered, into a sink of cold water. Stir occasionally.

WHAT'S COOKING

Family's time spent at school

EDITORS NOTE: Families who have been named Family of the Year are being featured in "What's Cooking." This is the fifth of a six part series ending next week with this year's Family of the Year, the George Patton family, annouced Tuesday evening.

By ELIZABETH EDWIN
Lifestyle Editor

John Faught/Reporter-Telegram

The Jackson family consists of (front) Kyle, Melissa, Misty, Kevin, (back) Kim, Kristi, Heidi, Regina and Homer Jackson.

The Homer Jackson family, selected the 1985 Family of the Year, has seven children living in their home and one away at college, but unless you know which ones belong to the Jackson's, you may have a hard time.

"We usually have at least five to six extra kids here," Regina Jackson. "Sometimes it's like Grand Central Station," — that's when they are at home.

The majority of the family's time revolves around Midland Christian School activities. Jackson is the vice principal and athletic director there as well as coaching or serving as an assistant coach for all the boys' school sports activities.

Mrs. Jackson, a former teacher of MCS, is a sixth grade teacher for emotionally disturbed children at DeZavala Elementary. She also is studying for her masters degree in professionally licensed counseling at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

All of the Jackson children living at home attend MCS and are involved in a variety of activities.

Kristi, 16, was selected homecoming queen this year and Kim, 15, was the ninth grade princess. Both girls also play basketball and are cheerleaders. Heidi, 17, and Kevin, 13, also play basketball, and in addition Kevin plays junior high football. Kyle, 10, plays football for the Midland City team and plans to play basketball for MCS. Misty, 8, and Melissa, 7, are the youngest and are big family boosters.

"We attend everything. We live at that school," Mrs. Jackson said, "but when they (the children) are that involved, that's one way to be with them. Our lives are around the kids."

David, the Jackson's oldest son, is a sophomore at Abilene Christian College, his parent's alma mater.

When not involved in school activities, the Jackson's enjoy camping and Bastrap is one of their favorite spots. The family travels in a camper and pickup, and use a tent for extra space. They are members of North A and Tennessee Church of Christ and enjoy visiting family.

Somewhere between the busy schedules, Mrs. Jackson finds time to cook and the family finds time to eat.

"If they don't like what I fix, that's tough," Mrs. Jackson quipped, adding "No, really they are very easy to please."

The family tries to eat together as often as possible, but when they have conflicting schedules, Mrs. Jackson also prepares some items ahead of time that the children can easily fix themselves.

The recipes the Jackson selected to share represent some of the family favorites. The recipe for Beef Stroganoff is one of the kids favorites, while Jackson prefers the Pralines and Cream Ice Cream — being an ice cream lover. Mrs. Jackson enjoys the Rice-Broccoli Casserole because she can make a lot at one time and freeze it for later. As for the Banana Pudding and Good Cookies, which got their name because the children always said they were "good cookies," are recipes of Mrs. Jackson's mother.

BEEF STROGANOFF
2-3 pounds hamburger meat
1 chopped onion
garlic salt
1 can mushroom soup
1 can chicken soup
1 can celery soup (optional)
1 package noodles or rice

Brown hamburger meat and onion. Season to taste. Drain fat. Add soups and simmer. Prepare rice or noodles according to package directions. When ready to serve, spoon meat mixture of rice or noodles.
Serves 6-8.

RICE-BROCCOLI CASSEROLE
½ cup onions, chopped
½ cup celery, chopped (optional)
1 cup rice
1 package chopped broccoli
1 can cream mushroom soup
1 can cream chicken soup
1 small jar cheese whiz

Saute onions and celery. Cook rice and broccoli separately. Mix vegetables, add soup and cheese whiz. Place rice in casserole as lining for dish. Pour in vegetable mixture. This dish will freeze well.

MOTHER'S BANANA PUDDING
¾ cup sugar
3-4 tablespoons flour
½ cup carnation milk
1½ cups milk
1 egg
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon vanilla

Stir sugar and flour together. Add milk and cook over medium heat. Beat egg and stir some of the hot mixture into it. Add to remaining mixture and cook until desired thickness. Remove from heat and add butter and vanilla. Stir. Layer with vanilla wafers and sliced bananas.

PRALINES AND CREAM ICE CREAM
2-2½ cups chopped pecans
2 tablespoons oleo
6 eggs
1 can Eagle Brand milk
1 tablespoon vanilla
1 pint whipping cream
2 cups sugar (divided)
1 cup evaporated milk
2 cup whole milk

Saute pecans in butter, stirring constantly, about 5 minutes or until toasted. Cool. Beat eggs until frothy. Add Eagle Brand milk, vanilla, whipping cream and whole milk. Mix well. Combine 1 cup sugar and 1 cup evaporated milk and cook over low heat, stirring constantly until it bubbles.

Remove from heat. Put remaining 1 cup sugar in heavy sauce pan or iron skillet and melt to a smooth liquid. Stir this into milk mixture and break apart pecan lumps. Stir into egg mixture. Pour into 1 gallon freezer and finish filling can with milk. Freeze and let ripen at 1 hour.

GOOD COOKIES
1 cup shortening
½ cup sugar
1½ cup brown sugar
2 egg yolks
1 tablespoon water
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 cups flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon soda
1 cup semi-sweet chocolate pieces
2 egg whites
1 cup chopped pecans

Cream shortening, gradually adding ½ cup each of granulated and brown sugar. Continue beating until light and fluffy. Add egg yolks, water and vanilla flavoring. Beat thoroughly. Add flour, salt and soda. Spread batter evenly in a greased 9x13 pan. Sprinkle with semi-sweet chocolate pieces. Press into batter.

Beat egg whites until stiff. Add remaining 1 cup of brown sugar gradually. Beat until stiff peaks are formed. Spread meringue evenly over batter. Sprinkle 1 cup chopped pecans over meringue. Bake at 375 degrees for 20 minutes. Let stand until cool. Cut into squares.

Pasta considered new health food

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Welcome pasta to the list of foods recommended by nutrition experts. They say we should eat more complex carbohydrates — the kind found in pasta, as well as in rice and whole-grain breads and cereals. These foods supply energy, B vitamins and minerals. Serve pasta as a main dish or side dish, or make it the starter for a meatless entree.

VEGETABLE-SAUCE PASTA
10-ounce package frozen cauliflower
10-ounce package frozen cut broccoli
1½ cups thinly sliced carrots
3 cups sliced fresh mushrooms
1 small onion, chopped
1 clove garlic, minced
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
2 cups milk
½ teaspoon instant chicken bouillon granules
⅛ cup sliced pitted ripe olives
1 cup ricotta cheese
¾ cup dairy sour cream
⅛ cup grated Parmesan cheese
12 ounces linguine, cooked

Cook cauliflower, broccoli and carrots, covered, in boiling salted water 5 minutes; drain. Cut up large pieces of cauliflower. Set vegetables aside.

Cook mushrooms, onion and garlic in butter for 5 minutes. Stir in flour. Add milk and bouillon granules. Cook and stir until bubbly; cook and stir 1 minute more. Stir in vegetables and olives. Combine ricotta, sour cream and half the Parmesan. Gradually stir 1 cup of the vegetable mixture into sour cream; return all to pan. Heat through; do not boil. Toss hot pasta with vegetable sauce. Sprinkle with remaining Parmesan. Makes 6 servings.

Expensive self-basted birds are real turkeys

By MERLE ELLIS

Judging from the wide variety of turkeys and turkey prices in the meat markets of America at this time of year, it would be easy to conclude that the uneaten cousins of that all-American bird our pilgrim forefathers put on the first Thanksgiving table had bred themselves into types as different from each other as the various breeds of dogs

Nothing could be further from the truth. The only major difference between one turkey and another in the meatcases of this country these days is the name on the package and, of course, the price.

More than 80 percent of all the turkeys in this country – over 50 percent of the turkeys in the world – come from one line of breeding stock – that produced by Nicholas Turkey Breeding Farms, Inc., World Headquarters, just a little to the left of the wine country in Sonoma, California.

In 1939, George and "Johnnie" Nicholas started a turkey breeding farm just east of Sonoma in "The Valley of the Moon." Their first breeding stock sales were local, then statewide, then nationwide and now international. This year over 330 million Nicholas turkeys will be grown throughout the world - 200 million of those here in the United States - and they will all be sold with somebody else's name on them. Here's how it all works.

Domestic turkeys, you see, cannot mate. They have been bred too big to accomplish that pleasurable task naturally. All turkeys today are a result of artificial insemination. Nicholas has over 25 strains in the gene pool and is constantly crossing lines to improve the strain they sell to producers.

The "male line" is a strain that was developed to produce large carcass size. Turkeys from this line weigh in at between 30 and 50 pounds at maturity, but they have low egg production. The "female line" is a smaller bird, about 20 pounds at maturity, but the females of this line lay a lot of eggs.

Turkey producers all over the country who are customers of Nicholas receive both strains of eggs. In 28 days, the eggs hatch. The producer can then select the best males from the "male line" to cross with the best females from the "female line" to produce broad-breasted white turkeys that will reach a market weight of 14 to 20 pounds in 16 to 18 weeks. Those are the ones that you find in the meatcases of America - at least 80 percent of them.

The difference between one turkey and another these days has much more to do with packaging, price and perception than it has to do with any real difference in the birds.

Fresh turkeys are always more expensive than frozen. But are they any better? I think not. Turkeys are raised and processed throughout the year all year long. I would rather have a turkey that was processed and frozen at peak condition than a turkey that was processed to be sold "fresh" for the holidays and then kept on ice for a week or longer. Which is really fresher?

Some turkeys are "self-basted," and, of course, they cost a little more. No thanks! I'd rather baste it myself. Those "self-basted" birds are injected with a solution of broth – mostly water – mixed with seasonings and sodium phosphates. The phosphates act to hold the basting solution (water) in the bird while it cooks. At approximately 155 to 160 degrees, phosphates lose their ability to retain moisture and release the "basting solution," giving you what appears to be a nice, moist, juicy turkey. All it really is is wet!

The most recent "something special" that we are being given the opportunity to buy, costing a handsome premium of course, is "natural!" Now you don't have to eat those artificial, man-made, unnatural birds that have plagued the populous since the pilgrims stopped making progress. NO! Now you can get turkeys that are "naturally grown and processed," without the need for "hormones or growth stimulants."

That sounds wonderful and worth a lot but basically and honestly (a word that somehow doesn't fit too well with modern meat marketing techniques), it's a lot of "bull." Hormones and growth stimulants have been banned from use in poultry production for over 20 years!

The bottom line to all of this is this: when you're buying your holiday turkey, be price conscious, make a bargain buy if you can. It's apt to be as good as the "best."

Tis the season for cranberries

Copley News Service

September through December is peak season for fresh cranberries. In canned form, they're available all year round, but it's really only during the holidays — Thanksgiving through Christmas — that most of us ever think of these ruby red morsels.

Cranberry sauce is, of course, the traditional condiment to serve with the Thanksgiving turkey, and if you've got some leftovers, here's a tasty idea: spread two slices of sourdough or whole wheat bread with thin layers of cream cheese. Add a layer of cranberry sauce to one, and a few slices of turkey to the other. Put them together, and you've got a great Thanksgiving leftover sandwich.

Unlike other berries, cranberries cannot be eaten raw. Hard and bitter, they must be cooked and sweetened with sugar or honey before they can be eaten.

Fresh berries freeze well, so if you find them in good supply and at a reasonable price, by all means stock up. Simply wrap unopened packages in an extra layer of plastic wrap and freeze. They'll stay in good form up to one year.

CITRUS-SPIKED CRANBERRY SAUCE

1 pound fresh or frozen, thawed cranberries
1 to 1½ cups sugar
1 cup orange juice
1 tablespoon grated orange rind
Pinch salt

Pick over fresh cranberries, discarding stems. Rinse and drain well.

Combine all ingredients in 2-quart glass casserole dish. Cover and microwave on high 10 to 15 minutes, stirring every 5 minutes, until cranberries pop. Let stand, covered, 5 minutes. Stir.

Serve warm or chilled. Makes 3 to 4 cups.

CRANBERRY-ORANGE NELLIE

1 (16-ounce) can cranberry sauce
½ cup sugar
1 large orange
¾ cup uncooked rolled oats
One-third cup flour
One-third cup brown sugar, packed
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ cup butter or margarine, softened
1½ cups whipping cream
2 tablespoons powdered sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
Dash ground nutmeg

Combine cranberry sauce and sugar in 6-cup microwave-safe souffle dish. Grate rind of orange and add to cranberry mixture. Squeeze juice from orange and stir in, blending well. Set aside.

In small mixing bowl combine rolled oats, flour, brown sugar and cinnamon. Toss with fork. Cut in butter, mixing until crumbly. Sprinkle oatmeal mixture evenly over cranberry mixture.

Microwave, uncovered, 8 to 10 minutes on high, until juices bubble at edge of dish. Let stand, uncovered, until lukewarm.

Meanwhile, whip together the cream, powdered sugar, and vanilla until soft peaks form. Top each serving with a dollop of whipped cream, and sprinkle with a pinch of ground nutmeg.

Serves 6 to 8.

DEAR ABBY

Try one day without cigarettes

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR READERS: Tomorrow will mark the 10th Annual Great American Smokeout, an upbeat, good-humored, one-day campaign to encourage smokers to quit smoking for 24 hours — just to prove they can do it.

The idea was conceived by the American Cancer Society, which insists that anyone who can live without a cigarette for 24 hours can quit forever. So, if you're hooked on cigarettes (or cigars) and you really want to quit, why not start tomorrow — just for 24 hours?

The following information may motivate you: According to John F. Banzhaf III, executive director of ASH (Action on Smoking and Health) in Washington, D.C., lung cancer is the single largest contributor to the total cancer death rate. It accounts for 25 percent of all cancer deaths in the United States. It is estimated that 85 percent of all lung cancer cases are due to cigarette smoking. As a smoker, you are 10 times more likely to die of lung cancer than a nonsmoker.

This year there will be 100,000 lung cancer cases among men and 49,000 among women. Of these, 89,000 men and 41,000 women will die of the disease. The number of women who will die of lung cancer is increasing at an alarming rate. Breast cancer used to be the biggest killer for women — now it's lung cancer!

A word about smoking-related diseases — emphysema, chronic bronchitis and heart disease. This year an estimated 350,000 will die from one of these. This total exceeds the number of U.S. deaths in World War II; it is eight times as many people who die in automobile accidents.

A congressional study has just reported that health costs from the adverse effects of smoking have reached a new high of $100 billion a year in increased medical bills and lost productivity. The loss in death and disability cannot be measured. (And how does one measure the amount of heartache, remorse and guilt suffered as a result of a preventable, self-induced tragedy?)

What about "secondhand" smoke? Is it actually damaging to non-smokers to be in the presence of those who are smoking? Yes! Furthermore, studies reveal that the children of smokers are more prone to lung problems and allergies than children of non-smokers.

For years I have begged my young readers, "If you smoke, quit now. If you don't smoke, don't start!" Yet an estimated 3,000 to 5,000 kids light up for the first time every day. Why? Peer pressure, no doubt.

"How about the rights of smokers?" you ask. Of course they are entitled to smoke if they wish. But they will have to find a place where they can smoke to their hearts' content without offending those who can't tolerate it.

"Quitting cold turkey" is the hardest way to quit, but my readers have told me it's the most effective, and in the long run, the easiest way. Cutting down is less traumatic, but the temptation to smoke is often too powerful to resist while smoking just one, two or three cigarettes a day.

Those who are heavily addicted may require professional help to break the habit.

So, if you're hooked on cigarettes, or have been telling yourself, "One of these days I'm going to quit," why not start tomorrow — just for 24 hours?

It won't be easy, but I can promise you, it will be the best Thanksgiving present you can give yourself — and those who love you.

The American Cancer Society has put together a wonderful booklet, "How to Stay Quit Through the Holidays." It's free. Pick one up at your local American Cancer Society office, or write for one, and please include a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope. The address is in your telephone book.

P.S. A favor, please? If you quit tomorrow even for 24 hours, I want to hear from you. Then write again and let me know how long you were able to stay clean. Good luck. Keep me posted. I care.

(For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Smoked turkeys emerge Super Birds

By WANDA A. ADAMS

Hearst News and Feature Service

For most people, turkey is turkey – unless it's smoked turkey. Expose the mild-mannered meat of the once-a-year bird to a few hours of wet smoke and it emerges as Super Bird.

And commercially smoked turkey offers one significant advantage to the harried holiday cook: It's already cooked. If yours is an informal household, you need not even reheat it. You needn't even carve it. Just put it on a platter with a knife next to it. Afterward, you can still use the bones for soup.

There are drawbacks, of course. Buying a smoked turkey, or having one smoked for you, is more costly than simply roasting the bird. The average price among smokers is $2.75 a pound, compared with less than $1.50 a pound for whole, uncooked turkeys. Smoked turkey breast runs as high as $4 a pound.

And the purists in the family may object on general principle, wondering if you can really stuff a smoked bird (yes!) or put gravy on it (why not?).

If a turkey is properly smoked, it shouldn't fight too hard with the rest of Thanksgiving's predestined menu. The flavor of the meat should be touched with the fragrance of leaves burning in the distance on a fall day, not bludgeoned with chemicals that shriek "Fire!"

Cyril Miller, who owns and operates Seattle Super Smoke, is a friendly, voluble man who loves to show people through his tiny plant. He has very definite views on the proper procedure for smoking a turkey – or any other meat, for that matter.

The meat must first be cured, marinated in a sweet-salty brine. Most professional smokers, Miller included, say the brine is the secret of their success, and refuse to reveal their recipe.

After brining, the meat must be placed in the smoker raw. The smoke must be real smoke, from slow-burning wood or wood chips, wet and dense. And there must never be any artificial means used to hurry the process, not precooking and especially not Liquid Smoke. Roasting the meat slowly allows the smoke to deeply permeate the meat; excess fat and moisture burn away as the flavor seeps in.

The heart of Seattle Super Smoke is a commercial smoker about the size of a walk-in restaurant refrigerator. The temperature inside remains at 175 degrees for the first few hours of the process, then is raised to 200 degrees to finish the cooking. The machine shuts itself off when the meat inside has reached the desired temperature.

With turkeys, that's 160 degrees or about 10-12 hours of constant, smoky warmth. In the process, the bird shrinks to two-thirds its raw size.

Native sweet potatoes add festive flavor

Hearst Feature Service

The native American sweet potato helped the first colonists survive the hard early years — and today it just naturally seems part of festive holiday meals.

Although stored for year-round availability, the sweet potato is at its best and most plentiful now, according to the November issue of Country Living, after the September harvest has been cured and shipped to market.

Columbus and his sailors ate sweet potatoes in the West Indies. De Soto found them growing in Indian plantations in Louisiana in 1540 and Spanish and Portuguese explorers are credited with carrying the vegetable to India, China, Malaya and the Philippines.

When the colonists arrived in this country, they found American Indians growing sweet potatoes in what is now Georgia. Indian farmers taught the new settlers how to grow and use sweet potatoes and corn and there are records of colonists cultivating sweet potatoes in Virginia in 1648.

During the years between 1836 and 1936, Georgia was the leading producer of sweet potatoes. Today, North Carolina leads in sweet-potato production. Louisiana is famous for its Mameya variety, originally smuggled into this country from Puerto Rico. Its name means yellow yam.

Two important types of sweet potatoes grow in the United States. One is soft, moist and sweet when cooked; the other has dry, mealy flesh. Sometimes the moister, bright-orange variety is called a yam and the dryer, lighter-colored one a sweet potato. Both types are sweet potatoes — the true yam belongs to another genus.

When buying sweet potatoes, select well-shaped vegetables with blemish-free skin. Avoid those with signs of decay. Thick, medium-sized potatoes tapering at both ends will cook most evenly.

Sweet potatoes should be kept in a cool, dry, well-ventilated place. Do not store them in the refrigerator. Prolonged exposure to temperatures below 50 degrees will cause decay or hard, pithy streaks.

Most people are familiar with candied or baked sweet potatoes, but the versatile vegetable also is tasty when boiled, browned, fried, whipped and as an ingredient in biscuits, bread, muffins, croquettes, pies and cookies.

China attracting increasing numbers of tourists

PEKING (AP) — China is on another "long march" and is attracting a growing number of tourists, reports Travel Agent magazine.

Last year the capital city received about 930,000 overseas visitors, contrasted with just a few thousand who entered China when it was opened again 12 years ago. Two million foreign visitors are expected to visit the city annually by 1990, and 4.3 million by the end of the century.

By 1990, 40,000 hotel rooms will be available in the capital for tourists, 23,000 more than were available last year, according to the publication. In addition, about 4,900 apartments and 4,200 offices will be available.

To ensure that services for tourists will be up to western standards, the number of Peking Tourism College students will increase to 1,200 by 1990, three times the current enrollment.

For real mozzarella, look to the water buffalo

PAESTUM, Italy (UPI) — Mozzarella maker Angelo Salati sounded like a Neapolitan crooner, but actually he was just calling one of his water buffalo.

"Dussecuso," he warbled across the stone-walled barnyard where about 20 placid beasts passed the time.

A slightly skittish creature, a buttercup yellow name tag in her right ear identifying her as Dussecuso (Nervous One), looked up. Salati beamed.

"See, they're not dumb, like cows," he said. "Pass by them one or two times and they'll know you. Call her by name and she comes."

Like his father and grandfather, Salati has a passion for raising water buffalo and for turning their scant milk into "mozzarella di bufala," one of Italy's best known and most often counterfeited cheeses.

The difference between the typical mozzarella found in the United States and the real "mozzarella di bufala" found in Italy is like the difference between a golf ball and a marshmallow. About the only things they have in common is that both are white and rounded.

American-made mozzarella wouldn't know a water buffalo from a bison. It tends to be dry, tough and chewy, best suited to being grated into large flakes for melting.

Italian buffalo milk mozzarella is soft and spongy, juicy as an overripe peach. When fresh it is eaten as is, with perhaps a sprinkling of salt, or served "alla caprese" (Capri style) in slices with cut-up tomatoes, fresh basil and olive oil. It rarely lasts long enough to go stale, the only time an Italian cook might think about grating it for a topping.

Salati's 200 water buffalo make him one of the larger raisers in Campagnia, the region around Naples where most of Italy's "mozzarella di bufala" is made.

Salati and 19 other buffalo raisers run a cooperative cheese factory in nearby Battipaglia that turns out 3,300 pounds of mozzarella each day. The hospital-green-tiled factory is a curious mix of old and new, with huge shining stainless steel vats among old wooden tubs.

About a dozen cheesemakers — in white caps, white T-shirts, white pants, white aprons and brown rubber boots — slosh across the red brick floor as they turn the milk into mozzarella or ricotta, Italy's soft, creamy version of cottage cheese.

It's a wet job and a never-ending one: the buffalo keep the milk coming seven days a week. The crew arrives shortly after dawn to weigh and analyze the arriving milk, pour it into stainless steel vats, heat it to about 95 degrees and add the rennet that begins the curdling process.

After several hours the curds are separated from the whey, chopped into chunks with a small metal sickle, then grated by machine into smaller bits which are kneaded by hand.

"A man's fingers tell when it's ready," said overseer Pasquale Paraggio, who was born in the Bronx but moved to Italy as a baby. "If it remains too long or too little, it breaks up and gets a bitter taste."

Cheese ball processed in blender

Associated Press

Put your blender or food processor to work for this recipe.

CHUTNEY CHEESE BALL

8 ounces sharp cheddar cheese
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
⅓ cup milk
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
Dash bottled hot pepper sauce
⅓ cup finely chopped chutney
⅓ finely chopped pecans or peanuts
Assorted crackers

Cut cheese into small cubes; allow cheese and butter to come to room temperature. Put ⅓ of the cheese in blender container or food processor bowl; cover and blend until chopped. Remove and set aside. Repeat twice more with remaining cheese. Return all cheese to blender; add milk, butter, Worcestershire and hot pepper sauce. Cover and blend with several on-off turns until smooth. Turn cheese mixture into a mixing bowl. Stir in chutney. Cover; chill for several hours. Shape cheese mixture into a ball; roll in chopped nuts. Chill well. Serve with assorted crackers. Makes 50 (1-tablespoon) servings.

Say 'cheese' but check for rennet

By DIANE SAVAGE
Copley News Service

Cheese plays an important role in the vegetarian diet because of its high protein content, and because of the almost endless number of ways it can be used. It's a complete protein, containing all the essential amino acids necessary to maintain life and support growth and tissue repair. And cheese is high in calcium, phosphorus and vitamins.

This dairy product is one of the oldest foods known to man, and since it was first produced, rennet has been a necessary ingredient in the cheese-making process.

But rennet (found in most commercially available cheeses) is not acceptable to the majority of vegetarians. This substance is obtained from the stomachs of unweaned calves, and contains the enzyme rennin. It is this enzyme which causes curds to separate from whey, so that the curds may be processed into cheese.

If you're wondering whether the calf has to be killed to obtain the rennet the answer, sadly, is yes.

Luckily, modern science has discovered enzymes from plant sources that perform the same function as rennet. Cheeses labeled "rennetless" or "no animal coagulant" have been made with these plant substitutes, as are most cheeses labeled "kosher."

When you add cheese to a meal, you add a complete protein, plus a number of important minerals and vitamins. Just remember to check the label when shopping, and when you say "cheese" say "rennetless cheese."

BAKED CHEESE PUDDING

1 cup cornmeal
1 cup cold milk
2 cups milk, heated to boiling
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon dry mustard
1 cup (¼ pound) shredded cheddar cheese
3 eggs, separated

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Mix cornmeal and cold milk together in medium-size saucepan. Gradually stir in hot milk.

Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, three to five minutes, until thickened. Remove from heat. Add salt, mustard and cheese. Stir until cheese is melted (if necessary, return to low heat).

Beat egg yolks. Gradually stir cornmeal mixture into egg yolks (stir in small amount at first, to avoid cooking the yolks). Cool slightly. While cooling, beat egg whites just until stiff peaks form. Do not overbeat. Fold gently into cornmeal mixture.

Pour into lightly buttered 2-quart casserole and bake in preheated oven 40 to 45 minutes, until puffed and lightly browned. Turn off heat and leave pudding in oven for 10 minutes before serving.

Serves 4.

APPLE-CHEESE ENERGY COOKIES

⅔ cup butter or margarine, softened
½ cup brown sugar, lightly packed
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon baking powder
1½ cups rolled oats
1 cup coarsely shredded mild cheddar cheese
¾ cup raisins
1 cup coarsely chopped apple

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. In large bowl combine flour, butter, sugar, eggs, vanilla, cinnamon and baking powder. Stir to mix well. Add remaining ingredients.

Shape dough into walnut-size balls and bake on ungreased cookie sheets in preheated oven about 15 minutes, or until cookies are golden brown.

CHEESY WHEAT GERM SNACKS

½ cup unsifted, unbleached white flour
¼ teaspoon salt
¾ cup grated sharp cheddar cheese
¼ cup butter or margarine, at room temperature
1 tablespoon water
¼ to ½ cup poppy or sesame seeds

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Combine wheat germ, flour and salt in small bowl. Sir well to blend.

In large mixing bowl beat cheese and butter together until well blended. Stir in water. Add dry ingredients, mixing well.

Divide dough in half, shaping each half into a ball. Flatten each ball and roll out on lightly floured board to about ⅛-inch thickness. Cut into desired shapes with floured 1¾-inch cookie cutter.

Place on ungreased cookie sheets and sprinkle with sesame or poppy seeds. Bake in preheated oven eight to 10 minutes, until lightly browned. Let cool on wire racks before storing in container with loose-fitting cover. Makes about 4½ dozen.

Vegetable shortenings not always better

By JANE E. BRODY
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — The package of Sunshine Peanut Butter Wafers proudly declares that it is "baked with 100 percent vegetable shortening." To a health-conscious consumer, that sounds tempting, until one reads the fine print of the ingredients list. There "vegetable shortening" means "one or more of the following partially hydrogenated oils: soybean, cottonseed, palm, peanut, palm kernel and coconut oil." All are vegetable shortenings, but three of the possibilities — palm, palm kernel and coconut oil — are far more saturated and more damaging to blood vessels than any animal fat known, including lard and beef fat. To add insult to injury, hydrogenating a vegetable oil makes it more saturated than it was to begin with.

Shoppers today are hard put to find processed foods that do not contain one or more of these cholesterol-raising fats. And many are bamboozled by advertising claims about pure vegetable oils, which they've come to believe are more healthful than animal fats.

The Food and Drug Administration allows the "one or more" listing of fats on food packages so that manufacturers can switch the fat used without printing new labels when prices fluctuate. Unfortunately for the health of those eating packaged foods, artery-damaging palm, coconut and palm kernel oils are usually cheaper than the artery-protecting polyunsaturates. With the aid of American dollars and technology, palm and coconut trees are being grown in profusion in tropical countries where labor costs are low. Manufacturers also favor coconut and palm because of their innocuous taste, creamy texture and long shelf life.

One or more of these tropical oils can be found in Shake 'n Bake, Pepperidge Farm Croutons, Post Fruit & Fibre and Horizon Trail Mix cereals, Cap 'n Crunch cereal, Seasoned RyKrisp, Wise Potato Chips, Yogurt Peanut Clusters, Cremora Non-Dairy Creamer and Cool Whip. These fats are also possible ingredients in Nabisco Graham Crackers and Triscuit Wafers, Ore-Ida Tater Tots and Crispers (crinkle-cut fries), Van de Kamp's Breaded Fish Fillets and Wise Puffed Cheese Doodles. For products that simply say "vegetable fat" or "vegetable oil" — such as Campbell's Cream of Chicken Soup and Swanson Fried Chicken — let the buyer beware: The unspecified fat could be coconut or palm.

When a customer complains about the presence of such oils in a product that claims to contain no cholesterol, the company's reply is likely to be misleading. Although these vegetable fats are cholesterol-free (cholesterol is found only in animals), the company often fails to acknowledge that consuming them can seriously raise a person's blood cholesterol level.

Furthermore, even when only healthful fats are used, nutritional balance can easily be distorted by the large amount in many processed foods. You would hardly expect an ordinary breakfast cereal to be fatty, but Quaker Honey Graham Oh's, before milk is added, offers 4 grams of fat (36 fat calories), mainly as coconut oil, in a 130-calorie serving. And Quaker 100% Natural Cereal, a granola made with both coconut oil and dried coconut, has 6 grams of fat (54 fat calories) in a 140-calorie serving of only one-quarter cup of cereal.

To determine the caloric contribution fat makes in a food, multiply the number of grams of fat in a serving by 9 (calories per gram of fat), then divide by the number of calories in the serving and multiply the result by 100 to obtain a percentage. For example, in the case of Quaker 100% Natural Cereal, 6 times 9 equals 54, divided by 140 calories equals 0.39, and multiplied by 100 yields 39 percent of calories from fat — even if skim milk is used.

Knowing the caloric contribution from fat is important, especially now that fat-rich diets are believed to increase the risk of developing cancer as well as heart disease. The American Heart Association recently lowered the amount of fat it recommends to less than 30 percent of daily calories from 30 to 35 percent, and a growing number of health experts say 20 percent or less is ideal.

Check labels carefully before you buy. More than half the packaged foods on supermarket shelves today have nutrition information on the label (and all have ingredients lists).

In choosing one product over another, it is not enough to rely on a food's reputation. For example, you might expect blueberry muffins to be far more healthful than brownies, but there are 5 grams of fat and 180 calories in each muffin made from Duncan Hines Blueberry Muffin Mix, whereas Pillsbury Fudge Brownie Mix produces brownies with 6 grams of fat and 150 calories. Health-conscious cake eaters should either make their own, using a small amount of a polyunsaturated oil such as corn, soybean, safflower or sunflower, or choose an angel cake mix, with 0 grams of fat and no egg yolks added by the baker.

Here are some guidelines on choosing more healthful alternatives from various categories of food.

BREADS, CRACKERS and COOKIES. Ordinarily, bread is a very low-fat food, so the type of fat used is not significant. Breads high in saturated fats include the currently popular croissant (as many as 65 percent calories from highly saturated fat), crescent rolls and biscuits. Breads free of fat include pita, French and Italian breads (but not lard bread), English muffins and corn tortillas.

In the cracker department, most — even those sold in health-food stores — are high in fat: Ritz, 48 percent fat, Wheatsworth, 42 percent and Triscuits, 32 percent, according to the Center for Science in the Public Interest, the consumer organization in Washington. A grocery guide prepared by the American Heart Association lists these as fat-free: Finn Crisp, flatbread, hardtack, matzo, Swedish crispbread and Wasa Brod. Low-fat crackers include Armenian cracker bread, bread sticks (plain), rusks, RyKrisp (unseasoned), Zwieback, oyster crackers, saltines and soda crackers and pretzels.

Cookie-lovers might consider such low-fat treats as graham crackers (without chocolate covering), animal crackers, fig bars, ginger snaps and molasses cookies.

DAIRY FOODS and SUBSTITUTES: Whole milk may contain less than 4 percent fat by weight, but since most of its weight is in noncaloric water, 48 percent of the calories come from saturated butterfat. Skim milk is only 5 percent fat calories. Low-fat alternatives include 1 percent milk and buttermilk. Similarly, choose low-fat or skim-milk yogurt, dry curd or 1 percent fat cottage cheese, farmer cheese or pot cheese. The only low-fat hard cheeses are Norwegian gammelost, German hand cheese, Swiss Sap Sago and Swiss St. Otho. A number of fat-reduced American cheeses (called "light," diet or low-fat) are available, as are full-fat cheeses in which saturated butterfat has been replaced by polyunsaturated oils.

Tortillas important ingredient for Tex-Mex cooking

By NANCY BYAL
Associated Press

Tuck a package of tortillas into your grocery cart and you've got the most important ingredient for a terrific Tex-Mex supper dish. Depending on how you roll and cook it, a tortilla can become a tostada, an enchilada, a chimichanga or one of these easy cheese-and chili-filled fold-overs.

You can make this casserole with either flour or corn tortillas. Flour tortillas are slightly easier to fold, but both types fold without cracking if you warm them first. To warm them in the microwave oven, place 4 to 6 tortillas between paper towels and heat on 100 percent power (high) for 40 to 60 seconds or until softened.

FOLD-OVER TORTILLA BAKE

½ pound ground beef
½ cup chopped onion
1 14½-ounce can stewed tomatoes
½ cup enchilada sauce
1 teaspoon ground cumin
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
6 6-inch tortillas
1 3-ounce package cream cheese, softened
1 4-ounce can diced green chili peppers, drained
½ cup shredded Monterey Jack cheese (2 ounces)

In a skillet cook ground beef and onion until meat is brown; drain off fat. Stir in tomatoes, enchilada sauce, cumin, salt and pepper. Bring to boiling; reduce heat. Cover and simmer 5 minutes. Pour half of the meat sauce into a 12 by 7½ by 2-inch baking dish. Wrap the stack of tortillas in foil; warm in a 350-degree oven for 8 to 10 minutes. Spread warm tortillas with cream cheese; top with chili peppers. Fold tortillas in half; arrange over meat sauce in dish. Pour remaining sauce down center. Cover and bake in 350 degree oven for 15 minutes. Uncover; sprinkle cheese over top. Return to oven; bake 5 minutes more or until cheese melts. Makes 3 servings.

Consumers demand leaner meats

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Copley News Service

What's happening to meat these days? Plenty. The meat industry is taking to heart the consumer demand for leaner (and therefore healthier) products.

Meats, in general, have fallen into "ill repute" over the last few years, spurred by repeated public warnings by health professionals worried about fat, cholesterol, hormones and antibiotics in the meat supply. Beef sales have slipped considerably as better-informed consumers switched to fish and chicken to improve and safeguard their health. This is no idle fad, but a significant part of the now burgeoning "wellness movement" across the country.

Admittedly slow to change, members of the meat industry are taking action with new and innovative techniques they say will provide us with leaner and more acceptable products. Cattlemen are turning to special diets and exotic breeding with European stock to streamline their herds.

In the coming months, consumers can look for meat packages with labels that include fat content and nutrition information. Catering to health-conscious consumers, the new labels may say "light" or "natural." What do these labels mean?

If fat in the meat has been reduced by 25 percent, it can qualify for a light label.

Natural doesn't mean anything except that nothing was added after butchering.

Naturally, all this is going to result in higher meat prices, as much as 25 percent to 50 percent. In some cases, supermarkets are also getting into the act, and some have begun selling beef that has only one-quarter inch of fat on it, instead of the traditional half-inch or more.

In addition, many are providing Nutri-Fact stickers, sponsored jointly by the American Meat Institute, the National Live Stock and Meat Board and the Food Marketing Institute. Nutri-Facts graphically show the most recent nutrition data on beef, pork and lamb in a cut-by-cut basis at the meat counter.

Informed consumers can make better choices. Those on specific diets will find important nutritional information that helps clarify their special needs. For example, a 3-ounce serving of a trimmed, broiled pork chop has 196 calories, 8.9 gram of fat and 83 mg. of cholesterol, plus iron, zinc, thiamin, niacin and vitamin B 12. Special stickers may also identify certain cuts of meat as having less than 200 calories per 3-ounce cooked serving, including such pleasant surprises as loin lamb chops, beef top round and pork tenderloin.

Included are cooking tips and a wide range of tantalizing recipes that are low in fat, sodium and cholesterol and have only 200 to 225 calories. Many consumers will find considerable help with such easy information.

For information on Boody's home-study weight loss program send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Eat Yourself Slim, Box 1038, Rancho Mirage, CA 92270.

Martina Navratilova

Are those footsteps?

NEW YORK — After dominating women's tennis over the past five years, Martina Navratilova says the other players have narrowed the gap. "I've shown that you can become better."

At one time overweight and erratic, Navratilova began a program of diet and exercises and others have followed her example.

"The players are better than they were three or four years ago. They hit harder, they are faster, they are better athletes, they are in better shape. They used to be just serve-and-volleyers or just baseline players. The trend of the future is the all-around player."

Long game

WASHINGTON — Start with 50 incomplete passes. Add some questionably timed commercial breaks, a 10-minute injury delay and a bevy of yellow flags. And you have the longest game in Monday NFL history.

It took 3 hours and 48 minutes for Washington to beat San Francisco 14-6 and the final gun did not sound until three minutes before 1 a.m. EST.

The third quarter went beyond midnight and the first half ended just before 11 p.m., allowing much of the nation to switch to the late news, then switch off the TV set and fall asleep.

"At this rate, we'll be on prime time in the Philippines," ABC announcer Al Michaels remarked at one point.

Said Art Modell, owner of the Cleveland Browns, whose wife is a former actress: "If she had a series that ran that long she'd still be on television."

Circle the wagons

IRVING — Dallas coach Tom Landry feels his offense will need a 49ers-like explosion to beat the Redskins this weekend.

Landry said Dallas will need big plays on offense to overcome the Redskins on their home turf in Sunday's showdown. "That's what beats them. Big plays."

Problem is, the Redskins defense is making life tough for a lot of offenses, he said, using the San Francisco game as an example.

"Washington seems to have returned their healthy people," he said. "Everybody seems to be back now. They're a very tough, competitive team. With a defense that stays on the field out there and gives up 500 yards and you only score six points against them, they must have something going for them."

Eason honored

NEW YORK — New England Quarterback Tony Eason and Cincinnati cornerback Louis Breeden were named the AFC Offensive and Defensive Players of the Week, respectively.

'Dogs dodge bullet

Cubs last gasp bid fails

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

There isn't much doubt Midland High dodged a Brownfield Cubs bullet Tuesday night at Chap Center. The Bulldogs know it, Coach Jack Stephenson knows it and it's a good bet the fans know it since Brownfield got off four shots in the final seconds but failed to put one in, giving the Bulldogs a 58-57 win.

The Bulldogs can chalk this one up to defense, forcing 33 Cub turnovers while losing the ball only 18 times themselves. It was needed to counter a disappointing offense. The 'Dogs shot only 39 percent from the field (25-of-64) and 42 percent from the line (8-of-19).

"The good 'ole press (not the media kind)," was Stephenson's opinion of the reason for victory, causing the plus-15 turnover ratio. "But, we were hurt when Varrick McDonald fouled out. He did a super job on defense."

McDonald was also the only Bulldog in double figures, scoring 10 points.

The Bulldog defense did play a strong game, running up and down the court and allowing the Cubs to take only 38 shots from the field. However, when they shot it was usually high percentage, hitting 20-of-38 (53 percent).

Van Andrews was 10-of-13 inside a five-foot range to lead all scorers with 23 points. Lance Auburg, a 5-foot-8 guard with good moves to the bucket, added 17.

Cantrell and Andrews were also strong on the boards, grabbing nine rebounds each. The Bulldogs were led by Michael Ball with six and Craig Crawford and McDonald with five each.

What offensive mistakes the Bulldogs made can probably be attributed to first game jitters. At least Stephenson thinks so.

"We'll get better every ball game," said the Bulldog coach. "We made some mistakes tonight that we won't make against Seminole (Friday at Seminole). We'll get better with every ball game.

"One of the reasons we had trouble was they were collapsing inside," continued Stephenson. "Our shooters aren't used to shooting from outside like Anthony Deande (part of Midland High's bombs away duo with Matt Sears last season). It's game pressure. They're still a little leery of taking shots and, instead, pass the ball off."

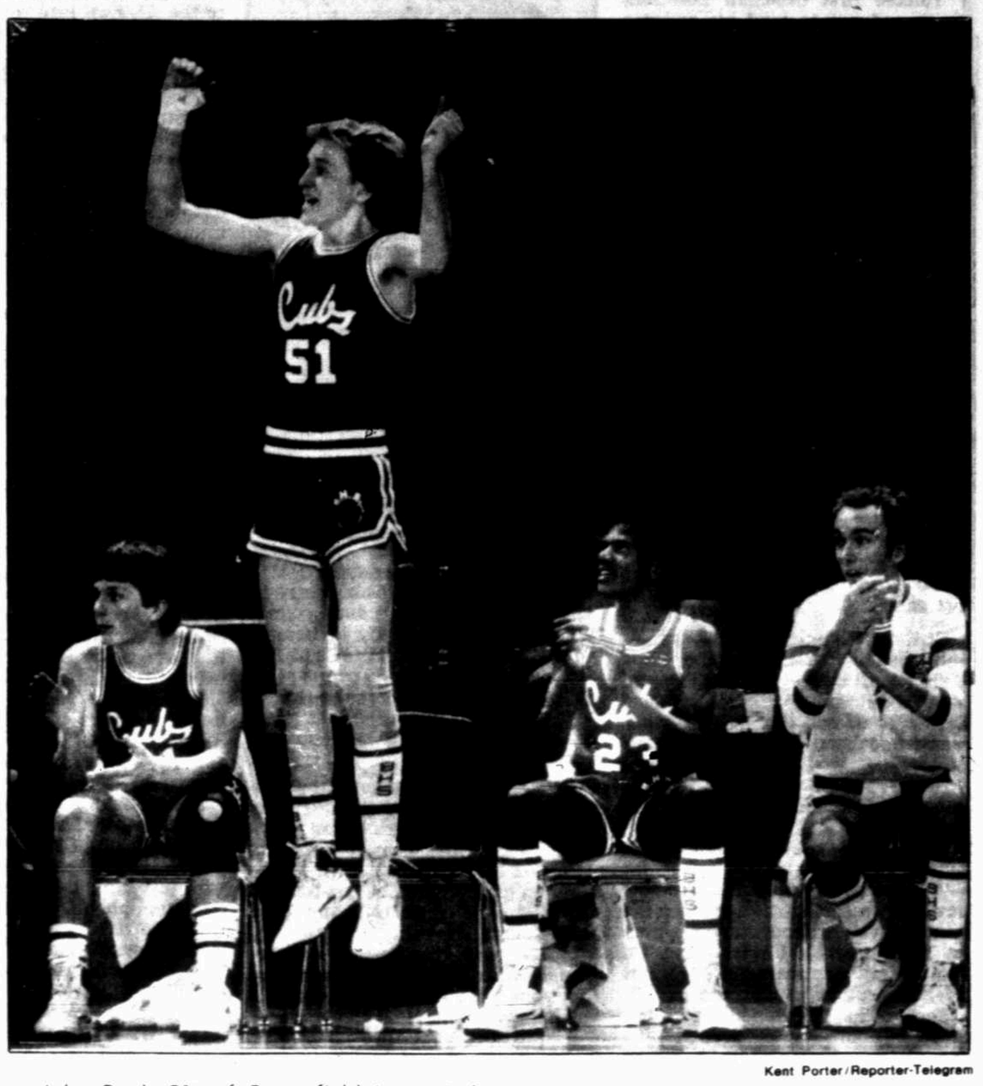

NEITHER team was able to build up much of a margin and when one did it didn't last very long. The biggest spread came with 3:22 left in the second quarter when Auburg hit a pair of close-in shots for a 31-22 lead. The Bulldogs pulled to 31-29 at the half.

The real drama came in the final two minutes of play. The Cubs took a 57-56 lead with 1:52 left in the game on a pair of free throws by Jay Cantrell only to see it switch back to MHS on Ball's five-foot jumper, his second straight bucket and third of the quarter.

Moving the ball down court for a possible go-ahead shot, Auburg was called for traveling. Forty seconds later, without a shot being taken, Crawford was hit with the same whistle.

The Cubs passed the ball around for 30 seconds to run the clock down to 0:13. A timeout was called to set up the final play, a successful one except for an uncooperative ball.

MHS Girls post victory over Lamesa

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The Midland High girls won the distinction of being the first Tall City varsity high school team to take a basketball victory Tuesday night in a 54-39 win over Class 4A Lamesa at the MHS gym.

MHS was not the only Tall City team to win a game Tuesday as the high school season began on four local fronts, but by virtue of playing in an early 6 p.m. contest with the Tornadoes, became the first team to win.

Things went just about as expected for the Bulldogs, which is good news. Returning starters Amy Cumings and Brenda Rodriquez lit the scoreboard with Cumings scoring 20 points, despite hitting only two-of-seven shots from the free throw line, and Rodriquez connected for 21 points to lead all scorers.

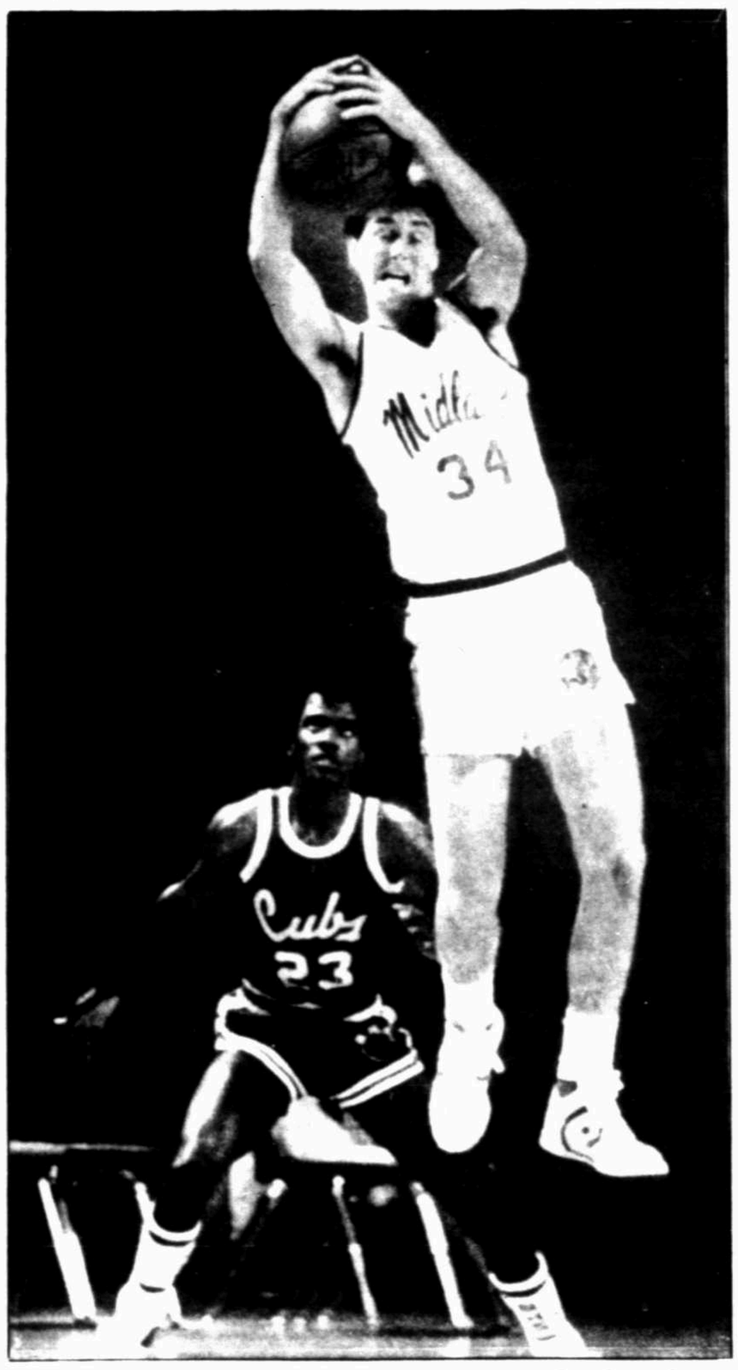

Sebrenia Finch, another returning starter, had an off night shooting with seven points, hitting only three of 11 shots from the field, but had a sterling performance passing underneath to an eager Cumings.

Rodriquez hit only nine of 23 shots, but showed the outside touch again, bombing away from the corner. An 0-for-6 streak in the second period kept her from having a really big night.

Cumings, the leading scorer for MHS last year, has been with the team for only a week since the conclusion of the bi-district volleyball playoffs. She was All-District in volleyball and appears headed for a like honor in basketball if Tuesday is any indication of things to come.

While the Bulldogs had the usual first game turnovers and some cold streaks, they didn't let up on defense, holding Lamesa to a meager two points in the third quarter when the Purple Pack broke away from the Tors.

Midland's Joe Wayland steals pass intended for Brownfield's Paul Evans

Lee girls impressive in win over Stanton

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

It was just the kind of opener a District 4-5A contender would hope for.

Forget that it came at the expense of Class 2A Stanton, the Midland Lee Lady Rebels were impressive in their 62-34 debut win Tuesday at the Lee Gym.

Lee showed ability, speed, depth and intensity in the opener as the Lady Rebels began the road to a defense of their 4-5A title.

Three Rebels reached double figures in coach Shirley Stephenson's revolving door substituition policy against the Buffaloes. Roz Eaden led the senior-dominated Rebels with 16 points but Piette Mayfield came off the bench with firepower to add 15. Lavette Wallace also added 11 points and a game-high eight rebounds.

"I thought it was fine — for the opener," Stephenson reviewed. "We were a little rusty in spots, in the third quarter especially. But overall I'm pleased, we're where we should be."

Lee never had much trouble with the Lady Buffaloes, taking the lead shortly after the opening tip and just stretching it out until the end. Lee scored on the fast break, they scored from a set offense, they scored off steals and on rebounds.

And except for a brief spurt to open the third period when Stanton scored two quick baskets and had a chance to pull within eight with another, the Rebels were never challenged.

IN ALL, it was a long opening night for Stanton coach Stuart Beckwith.

"Lee is going to be a very good team, they've got a lot of quickness," said Beckwith. "If you can get them into a half-court game, you can stay within 20.

"I was pretty worried about this game when we scheduled it last year. But these girls have a lot of character. I think they'll learn a lot from it."

District 4-5A, strange and getting stranger

"It's been a strange year for District 4-5A football."

"Well, how strange was it, Johnny?"

It was so strange that:

— Odessa Permian missed the playoff for the first time since 1979.

— Abilene High was a fumble away from getting into the playoffs.

— Midland Lee gave up an outright district title in its only regular season loss to Abilene High on the last week of district play.

— San Angelo finally beat the Permian jinx and vaulted into the playoffs.

— Lee defeated both Permian and San Angelo on back-to-back weekends, a period of time that is unmatched in 4-5A history for excitement.

— Midland High finished the season with a 1-5 record after a 3-0 start.

— Lee drew the distinction of being the only 4-5A team to lose to a 3-5A team in bi-district play.

— San Angelo is still in the playoffs after bombing No. 3 ranked Amarillo Palo Duro 21-0.

— Lee, owning the top offense in 4-5A, finished the season without scoring in its last 10 quarters of play, matching Houdini's last performance.

— And Big Spring, 4-5A's whipping boy of the past, skips the league for Class 4A and ends up in the playoffs for the first time in "about 25 decades," according to Steer coach Quinn Eudy, who more than anyone else deserves this treat.

YES, IT'S been strange, but at least, it's been consistent. This past weekend proved that.

Lee coach Earl Miller called a spade a spade after his Rebels fell 14-0 to Amarillo High, a team that had three losses and a tie on its record. "We just quit. Our kids were ready to turn in their gear," was the way Miller put it.

Usually, coaches take a playoff loss as a time to reflect on what a good season the team had. After all, the team wouldn't be in the playoffs if it didn't have a good season. However, 4-5A teams have grown to think beyond bi-district play and a loss here is considered "an embarrassing disappointment."

AND SAN Angelo has survived it all — thus far. And will survive another week if they remember to wake up for a weird morning game against El Paso Bel Air in the Sun Bowl Saturday.

But even a dominating performance by the Bobcats against Palo Duro, did little to endear this San Angelo team to the press. The Bobkitties are slipping weekly in the "good guy" image.

San Angelo's Jimmie Keeling, the dean of 4-5A coaches, is continuing his war with the press. It's a war he might win, but his kids are going to lose in the long run.

Keeling's "no press talks to my players" rule has been inconsistent this year. After a game with Midland High, Keeling refused both the San Angelo Standard Times and the Reporter-Telegram a request to interview players after the game.

He allowed interviews following the San Angelo-Lee and San Angelo-Permian games as long as a coach was present to hear the comments. And then Saturday night, Keeling found a new way to stick a burr under the press box types. He loaded his players on the bus outside Jones Stadium and took them somewhere else to dress after the game.

IT WASN'T totally successful because Saturday night's Bobcat hero Sergio Alcala, who had over 100 yards rushing and scored two touchdowns after coming off the bench to replace injured starter Bronza Moore, was caught for comments as he headed for the bus.

Alcala was charming and thrilled to death when he learned he had over 100 yards rushing. Keeling had tried to rob him of his moment of glory. And there isn't a Bobcat fan alive that wouldn't want to know Alcala's story.

Still, getting comments from Alcala by hook or crook reduced a tough job to a covert action. At first, it all seemed rather neat that the job had been done despite the obstacles and that the Reporter-Telegram had quotes from a key player that no other paper had. But in the end, visions remained of Alcala running windsprints this week for talking to a member of forked-tongue press.

THIS HAS nothing to do with the kids who make up the Bobcat team. They are like the kids that suit up at Midland High, Lee and Permian — except with muzzles over the mouth.

At least when Lee lost, it was in an open book locker-room. The Rebels didn't hide their frustrations. One wonders what kind of loser San Angelo will be? Or, maybe, the Bobkitties have already answered that question.

Mattingly unhappy, but Clemens named AL MVP

From Wire Reports

Yankee first baseman Don Mattingly refused to lend his endorsement, but for better or worse, Roger Clemens, who won 24 games in his first full season with the Boston Red Sox became the the first starting pitcher in 15 years to win the American League's Most Valuable Player Award.

The 24-year-old right-hander captured 19 of 28 first place votes for 339 points in easily outdistancing Mattingly and teammate Jim Rice in the balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

"I thought I did have a pretty good chance even though I was a starting pitcher," said Clemens at his home in Katy. He conceded, though, that the news still was a bit of a shock.

"I was going to come home tonight and see on TV if I finished second or third, but Debbie (his wife) wanted me to stay around the house."

"I know he is valuable," Mattingly said of Clemens. "But it's hard for me to conceive that a guy who is in 33 or 34 games can be as valuable ... as an everyday guy who out there 162 games."

CLEMENS pitched in 34 games and was 24-4 for the Red Sox.

"If I had a vote, I think I would have voted for (Jim) Rice or (Joe) Carter or (Jesse) Barfield if their teams had been winners," Clemens said.

He learned of the award by telephone, and immediately called his wife, who was at an obstetrician's office. She is expecting the couple's first child in five days.

"I hope by winning this award I have put an exclamation mark in the minds of voters about starting pitchers winning it. If I was voting, I'd vote for my teammate Jim Rice. But I felt one of us should win it."

The media descended upon the Clemens home for the second time in a week — he won the Cy Young award last Wednesday — and the scene was chaotic with utility crews working on the new home and a cleaning service using vaccuums in the background.

The awards, he said, would be displayed in the family room, where he already has his high school, college and pro uniforms ready to hang.

Roger Clemens
...AL's MVP

Mattingly, the 1985 MVP, had five first place votes and 258 points as he failed in a bid to become the first to win the award in consecutive years since the Yankees' Roger Maris in 1960-61.

COMING BACK from right shoulder surgery that cut short his rookie season in 1985, Clemens began a fabulous season by winning his first game 7-2 in Chicago on April 11. He went on to pitch the Red Sox to their first pennant since 1975 and only their fourth since in 68 years.

He became the Boston stopper. The Red Sox did not lose more than four games in a row all season. Clemens followed 14 losses with a victory.

His other accomplishments included:

—Setting a major league record by striking out 20 batters in a game against the Seattle Mariners in Fenway Park on April 29.

—Going 14-0 at the start of the season.

—Winning the only games as Boston went 3-10 on the road, but clung to the AL East lead immediately after the All-Star Game in mid-July.

—With a 24-4 record, leading the majors in victories and topping the AL with a 2.48 earned run average.

—Struck out 238 batters in the season, second only to Seattle's Mark Langston with 245.

—Became only the third AL pitcher to win the Cy Young Award unanimously, joining Detroit's Denny McLain, 1968, and New York's Ron Guidry, 1978.

To win the award, Clemens, a No. 1 draft pick signed a couple of weeks after he pitched Texas to the College World Series championship in 1983, overcame criticism that the MVP award should go to an everyday player rather than a pitcher.

VIDA BLUE of the Oakland A's in 1971 was the last starting pitcher to win both the MVP and the Cy Young the same year.

Since the start of the MVP award in 1931, only six other pitchers have won both honors the same season — Don Newcombe of the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1956, Sandy Koufax of the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1963, Bob Gibson of the St. Louis Cardinals and McLain of the Tigers, both in 1968, Rollie Fingers of the Milwaukee Brewers in 1981 and Willie Hernandez of the Tigers in 1984. Fingers and Hernandez were relievers.

After pitching the Red Sox to the pennant with at least four days' rest between starts, Clemens tired in the postseason. He pitched three times with just three days' rest in the seven-game playoff with California, with a 1-1 record, including a victory in the seventh game.

He had no decision in two starts in the World Series, won by the New York Mets in seven games. However, in his first start, the Red Sox won Game 2. And he allowed only four hits and one earned run in seven innings before retiring with Boston ahead 3-2 and just six outs away from winning the series in Game 6. The Mets came back to win that game 6-5 in 10 innings.

Tip for skiers, get ready

Hey! It is almost time to go skiing? Mountains! Ruidoso! White powdery snow! Bodger ski pants! I can hardly wait! In about six weeks it's gonna' be swish and swash time, for sure.

A simple pre-skiing training program will go a long way toward making the entire skiing season happy and injury free. The objective is to get back in shape before we hit the slopes. Exercise will tone the muscles, strengthen ligaments and tendons, and get the lungs working again.

In the physical act of snow skiing, equipment (skis, bindings and boots) and proper technique dictate posture. In this posture, the back, hips, knees and ankles are maintained in a flexed position. This puts considerable strain upon the trunk (stomach and back) and leg muscles.

THE TORSIONAL requirement of turning on skis stresses the ligaments of the knee and ankle as well as those joints themselves. In developing a pre-skiing exercise program, muscle strength and endurance as well as ligament strength and flexibility need to be considered. Finally, exercise endurance (aerobic strength) should be increased.

Each athletic endeavor has sport-specific strength and endurance requirements. A properly designed pre-skiing musculoskeletal program encourages spinal, quadriceps (thigh) and ankle flexion strengthening and endurance. This may be accomplished in the gym utilizing machines or free weights. Specific exercises would include knee extensions, leg press, hamstring curls and toe raises.

In conjunction with the weight program, aerobic strengthening would be accomplished by jogging, bicycling or work on the treadmill. Probably the safest and best method to start a free weight-aerobic program would be to engage a Personal Fitness Consultant. They maximize physical gains and with their knowledge, prevent injury. There are such consultants at each of the fine health clubs in Midland.

ANOTHER interesting concept would be to combine the musculoskeletal and aerobic phases of conditioning. This could be done utilizing a very unique exercise machine called a "stairmaster" (available at the Fitness Connection or the Midlander). This is a motorized escalator-type machine which requires the exerciser to climb flights of stairs at varying speeds.

The "stairmaster" produces definite musculoskeletal and aerobic strength gains. Utilizing the same concept, running the bleachers at the stadium could be very useful. However, care needs to be taken to avoid lower extremity injury (sprained ankles and/or shin splints).

Now you are probably thinking "all I want to do is go skiing (again thinking of mountains, powdery snow and Bodger S-T-R-E-T-C-H ski pants) and this guy wants me to work out in a gym for SIX weeks? What's the DEAL?"

The deal is the severity of the average skiing injury. Broken legs, torn up knees, wrecked thumbs, fractured ankles, pretibial contusions — the list goes on and on.

Believe it or not, the more "in shape" a skier is in, the less chance he or she has of being injured. The purpose is to have fun and adventure, not reconstructive surgery.

(Jerry Cochran is president of the Midland Orthopedic Center and specializes in sports medicine and athletic surgery.)

The Cubs worked the ball inside to Andrews, who missed two shots. Earl Swoops also missed one and so did Cantrell. However, it's not known if the final two would have counted because time had elapsed on the clock but the buzzer didn't sound.

"It didn't go off," said a puzzled Stephenson, who was too busy watching to hear a horn.

"No it didn't," replied player Jim Pannell, who added "I don't think their last two shots should have counted."

"That would have been a heck of a way to lose a ball game," said Stephenson.

In junior varsity action, Brownfield jumped out to an early lead and was never headed, posting a 53-43 victory. Zayne McPherson and Jimmy Hope led the Cubs with 14 and 13 points while Greg Lewis and Bart Saddler scored 12 and 10 for MHS.

The Bulldogs travel to Seminole Friday for 6 and 8 p.m. junior varsity and varsity encounters.

Bellard interested in UH

HOUSTON (AP) — Former Texas A&M and Mississippi State head coach Emory Bellard says he is interested in the head coaching job at the University of Houston.

Bellard, who led the Aggies to a 48-27 and a share of the 1975 SWC title, has been out of coaching the past year but says he'll return next season.

"I'm going to get back in it next fall at the college level," said Bellard, who has lived in north Houston the past year. "I'm going to play it very deliberate. I want a spot where I'd have a 50-50 shot of making a good showing."

Bellard, 59, coached for six seasons at A&M and seven years at Mississippi State. If selected, he would replace Houston Coach Bill Yeoman, who is stepping down after 25 years at the school at the end of this season.

Bellard called the Houston job "interesting."

"Houston has a chance to recruit very well because of its location, and that's a big part of it. I haven't heard anything from anyone over there but I understand my name has been mentioned around."

Chaps make 'first' trip to Hutchinson

From Staff Reports

It's only November, but the Midland College basketball team is making what it hopes is the first of two trips this season to Hutchinson, Kansas.

This weekend's visit is for the Blue Dragon Classic, hosted by Hutchinson Community College. But MC coach Jerry Stone and his players would like another visit in March. That's when the National Junior College Athletic Association's tournament is held at the same site.

THE CHAPS play host Hutchinson Thursday at 8:30 p.m. in the first round of the six-team event. Carl Albert Junior College of Poteau, Okla., plays Shelby State Community College of Memphis, Tenn., in the 6:30 p.m. game.

Friday's match-ups pit Midland against Carl Albert at 6:30 and Shelby State against Hutchinson at 8:30. Midland and Shelby State play at 6:30 Saturday, followed by Carl Albert and Hutchinson at 8:30.

HUTCHINSON was a winner in its only game this season, while the Chaps are 3-0 after their successful Chaparral Classic tournament victory. A game last week against Cisco Junior College was cancelled when Cisco was halted by bad road conditions and couldn't reschedule.

"We really wanted to play and needed to play last week," Stone lamented. "By the time we play Thursday, we'll have been 12 days without a game and that's too long at this stage of the season."

Another six-team field is in store Thanksgiving weekend when the Chaps play in the annual Odessa College Invitational. Midland is matched against the Angelo State junior varsity in the first round, while Odessa plays TSTI of Waco in the other game. Western Texas drew a bye and plays the OC-TSTI winner, while Midland would play South Plains if it defeats Angelo State's JV. That would be the second MC-SPC meeting in three weeks and conference action means two more meetings between them.

SOPHOMORES Mookie Blaylock, Lincoln Minor and Todd Duncan, along with freshman Alex Stanwood, all are scoring in double figures after three games. Blaylock is averaging 22.3, Minor 20.7, Stanwood 17.7 and Duncan 13.7.

Freshman Billy Ray Smith is averaging 9.3 rebounds and 9.7 points, freshman Herman "Skeeter" Henry is averaging 8 points and 6 rebounds, while sophomore Bruce Nix is averaging 6.7 point and 3.7 rebounds.

Blaylock is taking up where he left off last year, leading the team with 12 steals and 16 assists. He also has a team high 4 blocked shots. Minor and Duncan have nine assists each.

The three sophomore guards also have all 18 of the team's three-point shots, nine by Duncan, seven by Blaylock, and two by Minor. Stanwood has a dandy 67.7 field goal percentage, while Duncan has 60 percent, Minor 59.6, and Blaylock 56.3.

The team is shooting a nifty 57.4 percent from the field. That helps account for the 106.3 points per game average, some 35 points better per game than their opponents.

"Going to Hutch will be a different environment," Stone said. "We won't have the home court or home crowd advantage, which will give me some idea how our ten freshmen will perform in conference play in some pretty hostile situations."

Coronado edges Rebels

From Staff Reports

LUBBOCK — The Midland Lee Rebels made a valiant effort to rally in their season opener Tuesday night, but could never overcome Lubbock Coronado's lead. The Rebels went down to defeat, 60-57 here in pre-district basketball action.

The Mustangs, on the strength of Jonny Grusing's 31-point effort, jumped out to a 10-6 first quarter lead and punched the margin up to 30-21 at the half.

Lee fought back in the third quarter to pull within four, 43-39 but could only get back one point in the final frame to suffer defeat.

Along with Grusing, the Mustangs got double figure scoring from Greg Parr with 13. For Lee, Mark Van Cott and Bruce Marczynski led the way with 14 and 10 points respectively.

With the victory, Coronado is 1-0 while Lee falls to 0-1. Friday, the Rebels will try to notch their first win of the season at Plainview with 6:15 and 8 p.m. junior varsity and varsity games.

JEANE DIXON'S your horoscope

© 1986, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

By Jeane Dixon
Thursday, November 20, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: An opponent could become an ally. A previously rejected idea receives new attention. Rich rewards are possible. Stay both mentally and physically alert and there will be no stopping you. A mistake can be corrected before it comes back to haunt you. You are about to enter a high-energy period. Previously closed doors open to you. Let romance simmer a while.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Comedienne Kaye Ballard, Delaware's Sen. Joseph Biden, TV host Richard Dawson, "Dick Tracy" creator Chester Gould, golf's Don January, Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy, fashion designer Emilio Pucci, comedian Dick Smothers, actress Veronica Hamel, Bo Derek, Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Today should be the beginning of a highly productive period for you. Substantial financial gains are likely. Mutual understanding leads to an exciting, new business or romantic alliance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A short business trip will boost profits. A loan is likely to be repaid in full. A friend comes around to your point of view.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You will have more time for pet projects if you learn how to delegate responsibility. Bow to a loved one's whim even if you will be inconvenienced.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Mate or partner extends a helping hand. Set aside extra cash for emergencies. You need to pay more attention to family issues.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A younger person gives you new insights about an old problem. You are surprised by your reaction. A meeting of the minds could lead to a new romantic relationship.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Curb a tendency to go overboard when shopping. Creative and artistic projects are a potential source of income. Part-time employment could be the best answer to a temporary cash shortage.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A lively friend offers some valuable suggestions regarding your domestic arrangements. Working behind the scenes could prove counterproductive now. Romance is in the spotlight this evening. Protect your reputation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A belligerent or defensive attitude is liable to offend others. Keep to yourself and hide any anxiety you may feel. A late afternoon letter or message relieves your fears.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Do not resent your obligations to family or community. Romance prospers. A visitor from afar adds excitement and enjoyment to your day.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your marital partner could become your business partner. This work situation will undoubtedly require some adjustments on the home front. A mature attitude will benefit you both.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Secret support boosts your confidence. You feel ready for almost anything! Do not rush into signing contracts. You need to conduct a thorough investigation first.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): An early-morning conflict centers around business responsibilities, domestic duties. Accepting two invitations for the same time could lead to embarrassment. Romance looks especially rewarding for singles.

For the first time in the 24-year history of the World Bridge Olympiad, the event was dominated by one country. In the 7th Olympiad recently concluded in Miami Beach, the U.S. captured all four major titles!

A Californian couple, Jon and Pamela Wittes, won the Mixed Pairs; the Rosenblum Teams event was taken by a squad led by Steven Robinson of Arlington, Va.; the Open Pairs title went to Jeff Meckstroth of Columbus, Ohio, and Eric Rodwell of Lafayette, Ind.; and the Women's Pairs was captured by two New Yorkers, Jacqui Mitchell and Amalya Kearse.

For Judge Kearse, this is her first world bridge title. It is all the more remarkable because a career in law has limited the time she has available for bridge. She is the first woman and only the second black to sit on the Federal Appeals Court in Manhattan.

On this deal from the women's event, shaky defense enabled Ms. Kearse to bring home a two-spade contract that garnered 109 of the 110 matchpoints available for the board. West's failure to open the bidding is somewhat surprising and led directly to the catastrophe, for without a trump lead East-West can make at lease nine tricks at a club contract.

West led the ace of clubs and continued the suit. Had East won the trick as cheaply as possible and simply continued with her top club, the defenders would surely have come to six tricks. But East shifted to a diamond at trick three. Her partner won the ace and duly gave her a diamond ruff. Now East reverted to clubs, but it was too late.

Declarer had only one play. She ruffed with the jack and, when that held, continued with the ace of trumps and another. East was thrown in and was forced to make a fatal return. Since a club would yield a ruff-sluff, East returned a heart. Declarer inserted the nine and the contract was home.

Man who paved the way for modern Texas highway system dies at age 84

Greer

AUSTIN (AP) — Dewitt C. Greer, who helped transform Texas highways from muddy two-lane roads to the nation's largest paved roadway system, died Monday. He was 84.

Greer began his career with the highway department as an assistant resident engineer in 1927. In 1929, he was named district engineer in Tyler and seven years later was named chief engineer of construction and design in Austin.

In 1940, Greer was named state highway engineer, a position that entrusted him with development of the state highway system. He retired from that position in 1967 and two years later was appointed to the Texas Highway Commission, on which he served until 1980.

Duffy

BOULDER, Mont. (AP) — The parents of "Dallas" star Patrick Duffy were killed at a bar they owned in this western Montana town, and two men were arrested after a high-speed chase, police reported today.

Boulder police dispatcher Mike Lavigne identified the victims as Terence and Marie Duffy, the parents of the actor who plays Bobby Ewing on the popular CBS TV series.

He said they were apparently killed Tuesday night, and their bodies were found early today. No motive was known, he said.

Two Helena men, Sean A. Wentz and Kenneth A. Miller, both 19, are in custody on suspicion of deliberate homicide with bond set at $250,000 each, Lavigne said. There were being held in Helena, about 30 miles north of Boulder.

Police would not say how the two died, but Roger Andersen, chief jailer at Lewis and Clark County Jail, said papers supplied by police indicated the weapon used in the double homicide was a shotgun.

There was no immediate word on Duffy's whereabouts today. Duffy has an unlisted number in Los Angeles.

"He was very close to his parents," said Barbara Brogliatti, senior vice president of corporate communications for Lorimar, the Los Angeles-based production company that makes "Dallas." She said she didn't know where Duffy was.

The Duffys were believed to be in their mid-60s, said Jefferson County Undersheriff Dave Anderson. Authorities were withholding details of the incident, which Anderson said took place at about 9:45 p.m. Tuesday.

"I can't comment," was Anderson's reply to several questions about the circumstances of the slayings, including how the Duffys died.

"At this time we're still in the process of obtaining search warrants for vehicles and searching for evidence," Anderson told The Associated Press.

Al Brockway, deputy chief of police in Helena, said that when police approached the suspects, "they did take off at a high rate of speed in two vehicles. They were apprehended by police officers and deputy sheriffs and at that time it was confirmed that there had been a double homicide in Jefferson County."

Brockway said police were acting on information from Jefferson County that suspects were wanted for questioning. The suspects were not armed when the were arrested, but their cars have not been searched.

According to the official CBS biography of Duffy, he was born in Townsend, Mont., which is about 20 miles east of Boulder. The family moved to Everett, Wash., when he was 12.

Boulder is a town of about 1,400 halfway between Helena and Butte in west-central Montana.

Duffy, 37, lives in Los Angeles with his wife, Carlyn, and their two sons, ages 10 and 6.

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Chimpanzee expert Jane Goodall and the head of a Tucson-based foundation are planning a multimillion-dollar international behavioral-sciences research complex.

William M. Clements, president and chief executive officer of Golden Eagle Distributors Inc., said the first phase of the complex could cost up to $50 million.

Ms. Goodall said the center would be named for Clements and that the bulk of the funding would come from the William M. Clements Foundation.

Ms. Goodall, 52, has been studying chimpanzees for 26 years. Her study of Tanzanian chimpanzees is partially funded by the foundation.

HONOLULU (AP) — Bob Hope, who at 84 still is a globe-trotting comedian, traded lines with his wife when reporters asked him about retiring.

Hope and his wife, Delores, arrived at Honolulu International Airport on Tuesday on the last stop of a trip that included filming a television special in Tahiti and appearing at a cancer benefit golf tournament in Tokyo. He planned to perform at a hospital benefit in Honolulu.

"Mr. Hope, do you work for money or just for people," a reporter asked at an airport news conference.

"He better do it for money if he's going to support me," Mrs. Hope said.

LONDON (AP) — Albert Finney was chosen best actor at the London Standard Drama Awards for his performance as the mysterious visitor in Lyle Kessler's "Orphans," which originated at Chicago's Steppenwolf Theater Co.

In other awards Tuesday, Christopher Hampton's "Les Liaisons Dangereuses" was chosen best play and Andrew Lloyd Webber's "The Phantom of the Opera" was named best musical. Both shows are expected to be seen on Broadway in 1987.

Julia McKenzie was chosen as best actress for her role as a housewife staving off madness in Alan Ayckbourn's "Woman in Mind."

The Standard awards are named for The London Standard newspaper. Winners are selected by a panel of London theater critics and insiders.

Dan Marino completed a career-high 39 passes in 54 attempts and threw for four touchdowns in Miami's 34-24 victory over Buffalo.

Ernest Givens caught eight passes for 156 yards in Houston's 21-10 loss to Pittsburgh.

Charlie Joiner, the all-time leader in receptions and receiving yards, had three catches for 55 yards against Dallas, surpassing 12,000 yards for his career. He has caught passes for 12,051 yards.

Speaking

"(This game) set pro football back 200 years." — Philadelphia Coach Buddy Ryan after Detroit's 13-11 victory over the Eagles. Detroit won despite only 186 yards of total offense — 40 rushing and 146 passing. Seventy-two yards came on one play, a pass from Joe Ferguson to Jeff Chadwick.

Winning and Losing

New Orleans has won five of its last six games. St. Louis has lost 19 of its last 23. The Los Angeles Raiders have won seven of their last eight. Philadelphia has lost five of its last six. Houston has lost nine of its last 10. Seattle's four-game losing streak is its longest since 1981.

1, 2,3 Kick

Chicago did not get a first down in the first 24 minutes against Atlanta and fell behind 10-0, partly because the Falcons were on offense for 24 of the game's first 27 plays.

But in the second half, the Bears held Atlanta without a first down for the first 23:09 and rallied for a 13-10 victory.

Cliche of the Week

"A win is a win." — Green Bay linebacker Brian Noble after the Packers defeated Tampa Bay 31-7.

Sweet Dreams

Detroit kicking specialist Eddie Murray had trouble sleeping Saturday night. He tossed and turned and then he finally feel asleep and had a dream.

On Sunday, he kicked a 41-yard field goal with 12 seconds remaining to give the Lions a 13-11 victory over Philadelphia. After the kick, he explained the dream.

"This may sound corny," he said, "but I had sort of a very restless sleep last night and I dreamed I won the game. It was a dream come true."

Dickerson Watch

Eric Dickerson gained 102 yards on 24 carries against New England and fell behind his pace when he set the single-season record of 2,105 yards in 1984.

He has 1,300 yards through 11 games, compared to 1,320 after 11 games two years ago.

Numerology

Steve Pelleur was sacked a record-tying 12 times in Dallas' 24-21 victory over San Diego. The record was set when St. Louis tackled the Colts' Bert Jones 12 times on Oct. 26, 1980, and was tied when Dallas sacked Houston's Warren Moon 12 times on Spet. 29, 1985.

Chicago's Mike Tomczak was one for eight for six yards in the first half in the Bears' 13-10 victory over Atlanta.

Pittsburgh has won eight of its last nine games against Houston.

Complaint

The wife of wide receiver Willie Gault says Chicago Bears quarterback Jim McMahon doesn't hit her husband with the bomb often enough, so she's hitting McMahon with some nationally published flak. In an article on Gault in this week's edition of Sports Illustrated, his wife, Dainnese, is quoted as criticizing McMahon for his alleged slights toward her husband on and off the playing field.

Ask the man who should know

Once over lightly...

West Virginia's Don Nehlen must have an opinion. What does he think? No. 1 ranked Miami buried his Mountaineers 58-14 and Penn State wasn't nearly as impressive in a 19-0 win over WVU.

Miami would win the national championship bowl match up, right, Don?

"Miami beats you with big plays," differs Nehlen, "but Penn State just beats you in every phase of the game."

It's little wonder that State leaves an impression on West Virginia. The Lions are 29-1-1 against the coal miners from Morgantown...

One reason the Independence Bowl has been interested in Texas Tech, since way back when the team was an uninspiring 2-3 is they have the ingredient bowl officials find difficult to resist...fan support.

Except for 1985, Tech has been among the top four in SWC attendance over the last 10 years and there haven't been too many memorable seasons during that stretch....

Quickie quiz...I dare you, trace the Colts trek in the NFL since the inception of the franchise to the present...'tis not as easy as you think....

Can you believe that Ray Overton? He got into the 5A playoffs by the skin of his teeth. Three teams had to come up empty handed on the last day of the season for his Irving MacArthur team to make it and they did.

Then, Friday night, he knocked of John Reddell's Trinity team in bi-district...

Overton got into the playoffs the same way last year and then upset Midland Lee. Maybe if the Rebels had known he was going to pull off another such unlikely stunt, it might have given them the revenge motivation they obviously needed against Amarillo Friday night...

And that 14-11 victory over Trinity, typical. MacArthur drove 70 yards, converting twice on fourth downs, with quarterback Toby Richardson going in from the three with all of two seconds left on the clock. Hey, no sweat guys...And Overton is the guy I once accused of getting his offense by staying up late and studying renruns of the Pitt-Fordham series back of the 1930s...You know, when they played three straight 0-0 ties...

One theory on Lee's loss in bi-district is Odessa Permian's bigger-than-life reputation. Mojo's stature is such in Texas football circles that a win over the Panthers sometimes seems like a season's goal achieved. With season ending losses to Abilene and Amarillo, a league that in recent years has been almost as much of a sure thing as El Paso, the suggestion might not be that far-fetched...

Quickie Quiz answer: Of course the Colts went to Indianapolis after many distinguished years in Baltimore and one undistinguished year in Dallas. However, the franchise came to life as the Boston Yankees and moved to New York as the Bulldogs before going to Dallas....

University heads seek to ban freshmen athletes

Associated Press

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Leaders from six major universities submitted a resolution to the NCAA Tuesday proposing that freshmen be declared ineligible for varsity competition in football and men's basketball.

Authors of the resolution were Christopher C. Fordham, chancellor of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill; Edward T. Foote II, president of the University of Miami; Kenneth Keller, president of the University of Minnesota; Bruce R. Poulton, chancellor of North Carolina State University; John Slaughter, chancellor of the University of Maryland; and Charles E. Young, chancellor of the University of California at Los Angeles.

Fordham said he and Poulton wanted to get the issue of freshman eligibility before the NCAA membership. The resolution asks the NCAA, which holds its next convention in January, to approve in principle the ineligibility of freshmen for varsity football and men's basketball in Division I and I-A schools.

"We believe that all freshmen should be given an opportunity to make the transition from high school to college or university without the extreme distractions of time, energy and attention required by varsity intercollegiate athletics in football and men's basketball," Fordham said.

"We further believe that students should have the entire freshman year to make the academic transition from high school to college and to earn the opportunity to represent the institution in intercollegiate athletics."

"It was our feeling that the presidents and chancellors should take the opportunity to reaffirm the primacy of the academic experience for all students, and the elimination of freshmen eligibility from varsity competition is an excellent way to do it," he added. "This is an academic matter, and our students should come first."

MHS

"I thought we did a good job for the first game," noted MHS coach Jane Young. "I thought we missed some easy layups and missed a lot of free throws (6-of-17). We also need to work harder on rebounding because I feel we have enough size to do better.

"I do think we showed we aren't a one-man team, and at this stage, you just work on getting better every time out."

Lamesa coach Bob Burchard was playing with a combined junior varsity and varsity squad since he has eight players making a trip to the state volleyball tournament in Austin. In that group there are three of his starters.

"We're not using that as an excuse for the loss," said Burchard. "In fact, I was thrilled to be able to play a good team like Midland High now. This gives the girls we have a chance to play."

Kim Hogg led the Tors with 16 points while cousin Cindy Hogg pumped in 13.

MHS held a solid, but thin, 26-20 halftime lead, but the Tors lost wind in the third quarter when the Bulldogs outscored Lamesa by a 12-2 margin to put the game in the win column.

"We wanted to work on our man-to-man defense in the third quarter because these girls haven't worked much with that," said Burchard. "Obviously, that was a mistake. Other than that, I thought we played pretty well."

Lamesa hit only one of 13 shots in the third period while MHS connected on 6-of-13.

Midland High now takes its winning act to the Del Rio tournament Friday and Saturday while Lamesa will enter the Denver City tournament. Lamesa will get its volleyball players out next week.

In junior varsity action, Midland High defeated the Midland Lee sophomores by a 74-21 margin as Loni Szuba led the way with 14 points. Three Lee players had five points.

LEE

Beckwith and the Lady Buffs can only be thankful that it can only get easier. Stanton opens its home season Friday night against Class A Klondike.

But for Lee, there was nothing but smiles.

Stephenson returns four players from last season's district champs, and all can be considered starters as Stephenson platooned two separate teams of five. All are seniors, and all have seen at least limited varsity time since their sophomore seasons.

Most importantly, all are good athletes.

"We've got four kids that have all played a long time together, they know what to expect out there," Stephenson said. "But we've got a lot of depth. We've got both an inside and an outside game and they all play good defense — good hands and quick feet."

EADEN'S 16 points led the Rebels, and she was impressive in scoring them. The 5-6 shooting guard was six-of-eight from the floor and three-of-four from the line in a controlled performance, unlike some games in years past.

"She is more disciplined, of course that comes with maturity and with experience," Stephenson said. "She can do a lot of things."

All the Rebels seem to be able to do a lot of things, and that surely must be encouraging this early in the season.

Where the Rebels are now, 1-0 and ready to learn more about themselves at the Del Rio tournament this weekend, and where they would like to be at the end of February, on their way to the playoffs, are miles apart. But Stephenson has assembled perhaps her strongest team ever.

The Lady Rebs JV team also opened with a victory, 46-36, over Stanton's junior varsity.

Bona Fide general contract bidders may secure copies of the proposed Contract Documents from the Architect on the following basis:

1. Complete sets (including the Project Manual and prints of the Drawings) will be supplied to bidders upon payment of a $50.00 deposit for each set. The deposit is completely refundable if the sets are returned to the Architect complete, in reusable condition and within 10 days after the bid opening. Costs for replacing damaged or missing blueline prints or pages in the project manual (specifications) will be deducted from the deposit amount prior to refund.

2. No partial sets will be issued.

3. Plans and Project Manuals are available on November 12, 1986 at the Architects' office after 2:00pm. Costs of postage or shipping (if required) will be borne by the bidder requesting the bid documents.

Bid Bond in the amount of 5% of the bid and made payable to Midland County must accompany each bid (on AIA Document A310 "Bid Bond") according to the instructions to Bidders.

Midland County Commissioners' Court reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to waive any technicalities and informalities.

This invitation is issued at the request of Midland County Commissioner's Court.
