'Champion of peace' buried near Kremlin

Chernenko hails his predecessor

MOSCOW (AP) — Hailed as "an ardent champion of peace" and saluted by volleys of gunfire and shrieking factory whistles, Yuri V. Andropov was buried today in Red Square at the foot of the Kremlin wall among other heroes of the Soviet Union.

His successor as Communist Party leader, Konstantin U. Chernenko, called Andropov "an ardent champion of peace" as the open, red-draped coffin stood before the mausoleum of V.I. Lenin, founder of the Soviet state.

Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, also speaking from atop the mausoleum, said the Soviet Union had sought to strengthen peace and attacked "those who are pursuing policies of militarism." Defense Minister Dmitri F. Ustinov, in his remarks, praised Andropov for building up the armed strength of the Warsaw Pact.

The speeches by the three leaders stressed the twin themes of Soviet desire for peace and determination to maintain the armed might of the Soviet Union. Chernenko reiterated that the Soviet Union was ready for talks, "but we will not be scared by threats."

The weather was clear, bright and cold and the mourners' breath steamed in the 19-degree air. Chernenko and Ustinov rubbed their noses with handkerchiefs during the eulogies, and Chernenko coughed several times.

After the speeches, the coffin was then carried by soldiers and Politburo members around the mausoleum to the grave. Andropov, who died Thursday, served as Soviet leader for only 15 months.

Two men escorted Andropov's sobbing widow to the graveside, while his son and daughter stood nearby, appearing stricken with grief.

With tens of thousands of Soviet soldiers and civilians, and hundreds of diplomats and world leaders looking on, the coffin was lowered into the grave. The Kremlin bells rang and the sound of gunfire rumbled across Moscow.

Andropov's grave was between those of Mikhail I. Kalinin, the second president of the Soviet Union, and Felix E. Dzerzhinsky, founder of the Soviet secret police organization that Andropov headed for 15 years.

The official press said the salutes would be echoed in dozens of cities across the country, while every factory, ship and train whistle blew in memory of the late president.

Factories and offices stopped work for five minutes of silence in his memory.

Vice President George Bush, representing President Reagan as head of the American delegation, arranged to meet with Chernenko after the funeral, a U.S. Embassy official said. Bush, on arrival, had urged the Soviets to explore "important opportunities" for peace.

Bush to meet Soviet leader

MOSCOW (AP) — Vice President George Bush and new Soviet leader Konstantin U. Chernenko agreed to meet today after the funeral of Yuri V. Andropov in Red Square, a spokesman for the U.S. Embassy said.

Bush, accompanied by Senate Majority leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., arrived in Moscow on Monday and urged the Soviet Union to explore "important opportunities" for peace.

The vice president said he asked for a meeting with Chernenko after speaking with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in London en route to the Soviet capital. Mrs. Thatcher and prime ministers Pierre Mauroy of France and Pierre Elliott Trudeau of Canada also are scheduled to meet with Chernenko.

Bush said the change in the Soviet leadership could be viewed as a turning point for U.S.-Soviet relations. He added: "We do see the present situation as a chance to move forward."

Bush, who met Andropov here in November 1982 after the funeral of President Leonid I. Brezhnev, was scheduled to return to the United States after meeting Chernenko.

The Communist Party Central Committee named Chernenko on Monday as general secretary, the nation's most powerful position. He has not yet been given the additional title of president.

Bush met Monday night with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl at the West German Embassy here.

One source, who declined to be identified, said Kohl stressed that Bonn would like to see a Soviet-American summit meeting so the leaders of the two superpowers would get to know each other and their positions better "as soon as possible."

Bush, in remarks at Moscow's Sheremetyevo airport Monday, said, "We believe there are important opportunities ahead to help bring peace to regions torn by conflict, to achieve substantial reductions in nuclear weapons and to increase contact and cooperation between our peoples,".

The Soviet ambassador to Washington, Anatoly Dobrynin, and U.S. Ambassador to Moscow Arthur Hartman met Bush and Baker at the airport. The two stepped from the U.S. Air Force plane bareheaded, and Dobrynin advised them to get traditional Russian fur "shapkas" to protect them from the freezing temperatures of Moscow's winter.

The delegation was driven in an eight-car motorcade to the House of Unions, where Andropov's body was lying in state. Bush stood with bowed head for about 20 seconds at the foot of Andropov's flower-decked coffin and then walked a few steps to pay his condolences to Andropov's grieving family.

Lease-purchase plan for new county jail discussed

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland County commissioners may be backing into a new county jail instead of flinging headlong into one.

Bill Buttry, a Midland businessman who specializes in leasing, on Monday proposed that a group of Midland investors build a jail to the commissioners' specifications and then lease the facility to the county under a lease-purchase plan.

At the end of the 15-, 20- or 23-year lease period, the county would own the jail.

"There are a lot of legal opinions we need," said Buttry, who has been in the leasing business for 26 years. "I think it'll wash." He said the project would use the county-hired architect, the general contractor and the county's bidding procedures.

The legal aspects of Buttry's proposal are not resolved.

"I'll just have to look into the legality and practicality of it," said Mark H. Dettman, the commissioners' legal adviser.

IN RECENT YEARS, the commissioners have studied various approaches to expanding the jail or building new one.

At the proposal of Sheriff Dallas Smith, the commissioners in 1982 decided to build a stockade to relieve the overcrowded conditions in the jail, which is on the fifth floor of the Midland County Courthouse. That proposal, which drew protests from the citizenry who said they didn't want a stockade in their neighbors, finally dried up.

Later, in the spring of 1983, the commissioners drafted a $11.69 million bond issue to finance the renovation of the 1929-30-built courthouse and to building of an adjoining jail. That issue failed by a ratio to 4 to 1 in the April 23 special election.

Other than Buttry's proposal, the commissioners are considering building a $6 million jail on a 6.95-acre tract near the Midland County Exhibit Building. That facility would have space for 300 inmates. The commissioners had considered taking the certificates-of-obligation route to raise funding. By that means, the commissioners could bypass the voters unless the electorate petitioned for an election on the issue. However, had they opted for the general obligation bond route, the commissioners would have to present the matter to a vote of the people in order to raise taxes to finance the jail.

THE PRESENT JAIL, which was built onto the old courthouse in a renovation in the early 1970s, legally holds 85 prisoners. However, the jail has held as many at 120 prisoners during the boom of the early 1980s. Prior to the renovation, the jail occupied the the courthouse's fourth floor, which was converted to district courtrooms and to the District Attorney's Office.

Under Buttry's option, the jail financing would be through funding by Midland people. He did not disclose names of the investors, but he did say the group, Municipal Lease Inc., already has its own attorney, an ex-banker and a certified public accountant.

With those in-house specialists, Buttry said the group could avoid costly attorney and bond counsel fees. Fees for an attorney are about 5 percent of the project cost, and fees for bond counsel range between 2 and 3 percent. Last September and October, the commissioners agreed to pay architect Walter Pate of Pate-McLaughlin a 7 percent fee on the $6.3 million jail proposal. That proposal has been dormant in the past few months.

"I feel comfortable that the funds are available," Buttry said of his proposal.

WERE THE commissioners to take him up on his proposal, the lease-purchase payments on a $6 million jail would be $725,000 per year on a 20-year plan and $693,000 over 23 years. Payments on a $5 million jail would be $653,000 over 15 years, he said.

Students spread Valentine spirit at nursing home

Eleven-year-olds Andrea Hillis, left, and Jennifer McCormick were among the Crockett Elementary School students who brought some Valentine's Day love to Terrace West Nursing Center. Being presented with cards and a rose are Joe and Molly Hill.

"You're going to have me crying pretty soon," said the 81-year-old woman as a sixth-grader from Crockett Elementary School read her the Valentine's Day card he had composed for her.

The woman, whose name was Bessie, is a patient at Terrace West Nursing Center on North Midland Drive. She had never seen the boy before. He had never seen her, either.

They met as a result of a class project put together by teacher Ronda LaFon, with each child having been assigned a patient.

"The kids did the whole thing themselves," she said. "They decorated the cards and made up their own poetry."

One girl, 12-year-old Patty Tomlinson, brought her patient a little plate of cookies in addition to the card.

"Do you think you're going to have a nice Valenitne's Day?" she asked the elderly woman, who nodded her head. They then talked about Patty's school activities.

Another patient received a rose with her card.

"It's fun to meet people," said 11-year-old Kim Monteleone. Added 12-year-old Teresa Reeves: "It's different. These people are older."

Asked by one child if she gets a lot of visitors, one woman answered: "Oh yes. They're in and out all the time."

The woman was particularly talkative and friendly and her room soon overflowed with kids, one of whom offered to sing Jingle Bells for her.

"I never dreamed this was coming," the woman said. "It's the happiest surprise."

Asked how he felt about the project, 11-year-old James Archer smiled and said: "The people are real enjoyable to be with. I also enjoyed it because it was a real task to make up the poems."

His patient's name was Alma, and his poem went like this:

Alma, Alma, you are so nice. Alma, Alma, you make me look twice. Let Cupid come and have so much fun, while you and me will have some tea. 'Cause you are my friend, my friend to the end.

One woman, who received her card in the dining room while she was eating lunch, seemed untouched by all the fuss. After her youthful suitor had read the card to her, she simply pointed to the kitchen and said:

"That's very nice, honey. Now would you go up there and get me another glass of tea?"

Lebanese jets join Mideast action

■ Related stories — Pages 8A, 7C

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A U.S. Navy warship shelled Syrian artillery positions in central Lebanon today as the Lebanese army and U.S. Marines came under attack. Lebanese jets also went into action, for the first time since September, against Druse militiamen.

U.S. Air Force Capt. Jack Giese said the guided missile destroyer USS Claude V. Ricketts fired 11 rounds from its five-inch guns after the Lebanese command requested fire on Syrian positions before daybreak.

The Marine base at Beirut airport came under mortar fire from the southeast at 6:45 a.m., and the Marines shot back with mortars, said Giese, a Corps spokesman.

Giese made no mention of Marine casualties in the mortar attack, nor in a volley of rockets that struck the base hours earlier.

"I don't know how many (rockets) or where they came from," he said.

He provided no details about the Syrian targets hit by the Ricketts in the third U.S. naval bombardment in Lebanon since President Reagan announced his decision a week ago to redeploy the Marines to warships offshore.

Lebanese air force jets bombed Druse positions in the mountains southeast of Beirut after the insurgents attacked army positions. The clashes ended a two-day lull in fighting around the capital between the army and Moslem militiamen.

A military communique said army positions southeast of Beirut had come under attack by the Syrian-backed Druse militiamen, and the air force jets retaliated with several bombing runs.

Ground-to-air missiles were fired as a pair of Lebanese Hawker-Hunter jets flew sorties in the Chouf mountains about 11 miles from downtown Beirut. There was no immediate word on the extent of damage from the attacks.

It was the first time the Lebanese air force went to action since last September's civil war in the central mountains, when it lost two of its five British-made Hawker-Hunters, a virtually obsolete aircraft.

The army communiques and statements from Druse leader Walid Jumblatt's Progressive Socialist Party indicated a major Druse offensive was under way to overrun the village of Kabr Chmoun.

The village controls the main intersection linking the southeastern Chouf mountains with the Aley ridge that overlooks the U.S. Marine base.

Communiques from both sides said the fighting spread to Abey, 1.2 miles south of Kabr Chmoun, where an army garrison has been holding out since September.

"Army positions in Abey and Kabr Chmoun are under repeated attacks. Our troops are standing fast against these attacks. Army artillery and air force are providing support," said a communique from the Lebanese command.

"Our fighters are advancing steadily along the Abey and Kabr Chmoun axis and several army officers and soldiers have been captured," said a Druse communique broadcast over Jumblatt's Voice of the Mountains radio station.

Christian-controlled radio stations later said army counterattacks dislodged Druse fighters from two key positions in the Choufs.

A Druse communique said militiamen captured the village of Ein Kssour and the surrounding hills from the army at midmorning.It said the "Druse offensive" was aimed at liberating the corridor between Abey and Kabr Chmoun villages.

"This mission is expected to be accomplished tomorrow (Wednesday)," it said.

Druse forces drove rightist Christian militiamen of the Phalange Party from most of the Aley and Chouf mountains in a three-week offensive in September. The fighting broke out after the Israeli army withdrew from central to southern Lebanon.

But the Lebanese army intervened then to stop the Druse from taking the Abey-Kabr Chmoun intersection as well as the mountaintop town of Souk el-Gharb, nine miles southeast of Beirut.

Control of both areas is essential for the army to shield President Amin Gemayel's government palace in suburban Baabda and the coastal highway linking Beirut with southern Lebanon.

Despite the new fighting outside Beirut, the capital remained calm. The lull enabled dozens of trucks to carry food and fuel to the trapped residents of west Beirut and today the International Red Cross flew in 22 tons of emergency goods and medical supplies aboard a chartered airliner that landed at the international airport at midday.

In Washington, officials said the Reagan administration had set in motion plans to withdraw the Marines from Lebanon before mid-March.

"The White House has made a decision to get the Marines out of Beirut and on the amphibious ships offshore within 30 days from last Saturday," said an administration official who asked to remain anonymous.

Other administration officials said several hundred U.S. military personnel would remain on shore to guard the American Embassy in Beirut, train Lebanese soldiers, teach counter-terrorist tactics and perform other tasks.

Chernenko takes 'hopeful' stance

By JOHN P. WALLACH
Foreign Affairs Editor, The Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — Soviet analysts here today said that while generally hardline, there is reason to believe Konstantin Chernenko's first speech as Communist Party leader may set the stage for resumed nuclear talks, limited cooperation in Lebanon and a summit meeting in June or July with President Reagan.

The key sentence that officials here regarded as hopeful was this: "We are for a peaceful settlement of all disputable, international problems through serious, equal and constructive talks." Chernenko, in accepting the Communist Party's post as general secretary, singled out two key areas.

— On nuclear arms talks, the 72-year-old colleague and protege of former President Leonid Brezhnev said that while Moscow will continue to oppose "the adventurist actions of imperialism's aggressive forces," the Soviet Union was not seeking "military superiority."

"We are open to peaceful, mutually beneficial cooperation with the states in all continents," Chernenko said. Because the pledge was contained in the section involving the nuclear threat, analysts here believe it is a hint Moscow will return by mid-March to the stalled Geneva negotiations.

— On the Middle East, there was no explicit mention of either Lebanon or the Palestinian issue. But Chernenko went out of his way to underscore the particular importance of the United Nations in "preserving and strengthening peace." That could be significant, the State Department experts said.

They explained that there have been a number of recent hints Moscow now may be willing to facilitate the withdrawal of the multinational peacekeeping force in Lebanon by allowing a United Nations force to take its place. Moscow had threatened to veto a U.N. force when Reagan proposed it last Fall.

The fact that Chernenko mentioned the need to fully use "all the existing levers, including certainly, the United Nations organization," is believed the first sign that Moscow may be ready to give new instructions to its U.N. envoys to support a Security Council mandate for a U.N. force for Lebanon.

Ironically it is the Reagan administration which now seems to have cooled its enthusiasm for a U.N. force. State Department spokesman John Hughes said Monday that the United States would not take the lead in seeking Security Council approval for expanding the mandate of the 7,000 U.N. troops in Lebanon.

Reagan seems to have decided that if the mandate is repudiated that permitted 7,500 British, Italian, French and American forces to be deployed in Lebanon, the United States will have a harder time justifying the presence of the Sixth Fleet and its armada off the Lebanese coast.

— On a summit, Chernenko said nothing. But the Reagan administration continued to posture itself for almost any overture Moscow may make in coming weeks to a Reagan-Chernenko session. About the only thing ruled out seems to be a purely "get-acquainted" meeting.

"If they got together and chatted and parted and blasted each other with rhetoric, that would be a negative," Hughes said. "There would have to be some preparation, a fair degree of knowing what you're going to talk about and some idea of where you're going to come out."

"But that," the spokesman said, "doesn't mean you have to sign a treaty." He explained that the summit, which Vice President George Bush will formally propose to Chernenko on Tuesday, should be "reasonably carefully prepared" and should result in "something of substance that is reasonably worthwhile."

Lease-purchase proposal made for new county jail

Beyond that, a $1 million expansion would cost an additional $150,000 a year, he said, and a $1.5 millin expansion would cost an additional $220,000 a year.

If the commissioners were to buy his proposal, Buttry said his group would propose leasing the jail-site acreage for a $1 a year.

Commissioner C. Wallace "Wally" Craig asked Buttry a hypothetical question: If a "rich uncle" were to leave the county $2 or $3 million for expansion of a county-leased jail, could that expansion be done?

"I would love for you to improve my property," Buttry said.

Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis, who noted that Buttry's proposal "is not particularly new or novel," said, "I like the idea of the home-town (financing) angle." Buttry said a jail in Colorado and a civic center in California have been have been built by private funds and then leased to governments.

"I'VE DONE quite a bit of research on it," Buttry said.

Commissioner Durward Wright said Buttry's proposal would give the county "more flexibility" for future jail expansion. In addition, the measure would avert the possibility of a rollback election were the county to finance the jail and then increase taxes more than 8 percent.

Under his plan, there would be "some savings" to the taxpayers, Buttry said. The cost "dollarwise" would be "roughly the same" as the county's proposal.

"The money would stay here in Midland," he said. "Every dime of it."

Buttry said his group is making the proposal to the county out of "civic duty" and the need for a new and larger jail. "We're going to make one-half to three-quarters percent (profit), he said. Buttry said the group would make money in its leasing program by financing more and more buildings and then leasing them.

Buttry said he was "going to move ahead" with others leasing projects with or without the county's participation in the jail proposal.

Rural Midlander killed when three-wheeled vehicle overturns

In a delayed report from the sheriff's department, a rural Midland man died when a three-wheeled vehicle overturned in a field southeast of town early Sunday night.

Gary Brown, 40, of Rt. 1, Midland, was pronounced dead at 8 p.m. Sunday by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine.

According to sheriff's department investigators, Brown — who was not wearing headgear — suffered massive head and neck injuries when the three-wheeler he was driving overturned on his property about 6:15 p.m.

The field is located a quarter-mile east of County Road 1120 South on CR-110 East. Services are pending at the Ellis Funeral Home.

Texas zoo's love stories don't all end happily

By SYDNEY RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

BROWNSVILLE, Texas — Snakes don't believe in long engagements. Cranes feel dancing is a good way to meet girls.

And even the best made matches sometimes end in tragedy at the Gladys Porter Zoo.

When Pat Burchfield, the zoo's chief herpetologist and reptile matchmaker, brought back two very rare Moojen's vipers from Brazil several years ago, it was with romance in mind.

"They were tiny babies that we intended to breed. We had to hand-feed them for a while and watch over them carefully," Burchfield said.

Finally the day came for the salmon pink, elaborately marked vipers to meet.

"Well we put them together, they took one look at each other, lunged, bit each other on the heads and promptly died. Both of them. It was one of the most tragic love stories at the zoo, practically Shakepearean in nature," Burchfield said, grinning.

A similar event ended more happily last year when Burchfield and his assistants were able to extract a female King Cobra from the mouth of her loved one whose interest turned out to be more culinary than amorous.

"You have to make sure King Cobras are real well-fed before you put them together," Burchfield said. "If we can get them fed in time, Valentine's Day seems like a good time to put them together again."

Unlike reptiles (and some homo sapiens), many species of birds find fulfillment in long-term relationships. Swans, geese, birds of prey and cranes tend to pair for life, said David Thompson, deputy director at the zoo.

"Mallards on the other hand will breed with almost anything that even looks like a duck. It doesn't have to be the right species, it doesn't even have to be the right sex," he said.

Birds which mate for life work hard to keep their romance alive. Sometimes their exuberant courting backfires, Thompson said.

This female King Cobra was pulled from her mate's mouth last year when his interest turned out to be more culinary than amorous. Officials at Brownsville's Gladys Porter Zoo hope the pair will mate today.

Jurors in nurse's murder trial must weigh conflicting testimony

GEORGETOWN, Texas (AP) — Jurors in the Genene Jones murder trial now must weigh conflicting testimony from experts brought in to study the death of a 15-month-old girl.

Defense lawyer Jim Brookshire used his two experts on Monday to chip away at the prosecutions's story of an aggressive nurse who allegedly used a powerful drug to kill Chelsea McClellan in September 1982.

Poison expert Joseph Balkon on Monday challenged the prosecution witness who said his tests found traces of succinylcholine in the girl's body.

"We'd have to say 'no cigar' on the basis of confirmation" of the drug in the girl's tissues, Balkon said.

And Dr. William Goldie, a Houston pediatric neurologist, said the medical records he studied showed a natural death, not a murder by drugs.

"The story as I see it is not at all compatible with death caused by injection of succinylcholine," Goldie testified.

Ms. Jones reprtedly wants to testify, but her attorneys are not sure it's a good idea.

Geter's lawyers doubt pretrial maneuvers will be successful

DALLAS (AP) — Defense lawyers arguing that armed robbery charges against black engineer Lenell Geter resulted only from racism and police overzealousness say they hold little hope that their pretrial maneuvering will be successful.

Geter's attorneys have asked State District Judge John Ovard to dismiss the controversial charge "in the interest of justice" — a novel legal ploy that is appropriate because of the unusual circumstances of the case, they say.

"It would be a remarkable piece of lawyering if we do (win dismissal)," said defense attorney George Hairston, who joined the case on behalf of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

A pre-trial hearing in the case continued today.

Geter, 26, spent nearly 16 months in prison after being convicted of the robbery and sentenced to life in prison. After news reports raised doubts about his guilt, he was released in December and granted a new trial.

A prosecutor raised the ire of Geter's attorneys when he disclosed Monday during the first day of the hearing that Geter owned a small, chrome pistol used in a South Carolina murder about eight years ago.

Assistant District Attorney Norman Kinne admitted he could neither link Geter to the murder nor the gun to the Aug. 23, 1982 robbery of a Balch Springs chicken restaurant. A large, black revolver was used in that robbery, witnesses said.

state

Geter's pistol "has no connection to this case. It's obviously just a cheap shot," said defense attorney Lee Bowers. "They inferred he had some connection to a murder, and they know he didn't."

Five eyewitnesses picked Geter out of photographic lineups after the Balch Springs robbery. But his colleagues at a Greenville defense contractor, E-Systems Inc., say he was at work that day.

Hairston has been probing police procedures and retracing the route of a Polaroid picture of Geter through several suburban police departments in an attempt to prove that his client became a suspect only from convenience.

"It will be apparant, when we get through, that the police investigation proceeded on no credible evidence," Hairston said.

Don Kuhn, at the time of the robbery a Balch Springs police sergeant, testified Monday that Garland police gave him two pictures of Geter one day after the $615 Balch Springs robbery.

The pre-trial hearing is expected to end Wednesday after about 20 witnesses are called by the defense. The trial is scheduled for April 9.

Kinne said police solved the murder case in South Carolina in which the chrome, .22-caliber pistol was used. He said the gun was last traced to the police property room in Estill, S.C., where Geter's brother-in-law was chief of police.

"It was just a gun given to me by my brother-in-law to travel to Texas," Geter said outside the courtroom Monday.

Kinne mentioned the gun during a discussion of what evidence seized during a search of Geter's apartment should be made available to defense attorneys. Prosecutor Karen Beverly said everything taken had been returned to Geter, and then Kinne interjected, "Except for the gun found in his residence that was used in a murder from South Carolina."

Hairston immediately objected to the remark as inflammatory and presented only for the benefit of the media.

Kinne said he hopes to introduce the gun because, "I don't want them (jurors) sitting over there thinking he's a nice guy who doesn't know anything about firearms. That's not true."

Authorities find boy lost in Palo Duro Canyon

CANYON (AP) — An 8-year-old boy who became lost in rugged Palo Duro Canyon was in good health today after authorities found him some 24 hours following his disappearance.

Christopher Brock Voyles of Amarillo was found shortly before 4 p.m. Monday about a mile north of the state park, after a crew in a Texas Department of Public Safety helicopter spotted him.

The boy was apparently unhurt except for a scratch on one arm, officials said. He was taken to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo by family members for an examination.

As many as three helicopters had conducted air searches Sunday night and Monday after Christopher vanished.

Authorities said the Christopher disappeared after he and his brother went exploring while his mother and a friend worked on a flat tire on their pickup.

Christopher said he slept under a tree in the northern part of the park Sunday night. The temperature had dropped to about 21 degrees during the night, officials said.

Fireman suspended for tossing book

ABILENE (AP) — The city's Civil Service Commission heard more than an hour of testimony Monday and unanimously upheld the 33-hour suspension given a firefighter for throwing a hardback copy of a book at a table where other firemen were playing dominoes.

Frederick Bradford said fellow firemen were making too much noise and became louder after he asked them to "keep the noise down." He admitted that after throwing the book, he went to the table and scattered the dominoes with his hand.

The book that was thrown was Alexander Solzhenitsyn's "The Gulag Archipelago," which the Abilene Public Library says is more than 500 pages long and weighs about two pounds.

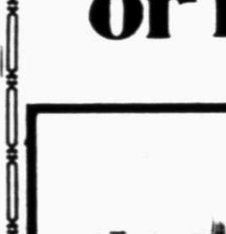

Bradford said the suspension by Fire Chief Richard Knopf cost him $140 pay.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Early feminist Susan B. Anthony, jeweler Charles Tiffany and the great actor John Barrymore were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: actress Jane Seymour, comedian Harvey Korman, Chicago Cubs clean-up hitter Ron ("the Penguin") Cey and actress Claire Bloom. Events move quickly in the months ahead. Count on an investment to pay big dividends. New employment opportunities arise. Be selective. A student decides to change his or her major. Your determination to succeed in business could get in the way of romance. Spend more time with loved ones.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You have a lot going for you today. Sentiment plays a role in a financial decision. Be careful not to shortchange your own family. Sell unwanted furniture and personal items.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Stop worrying about things which are beyond your control. Influential people are working behind the scenes on your behalf. You need to have more faith.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Those who travel for business today should achieve their objectives. Be innovative in money matters and considerate in love. Wind up one round of negotiations before staring another.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Give someone a day or two to think over an offer. Promises made in haste may not be kept. Be sure you are paid an adequate sum for your work.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be on the lookout for a very special financial opportunity. An unexpected visitor arrives from out of town. Your social plans may have to be postponed. Ride with the tide.

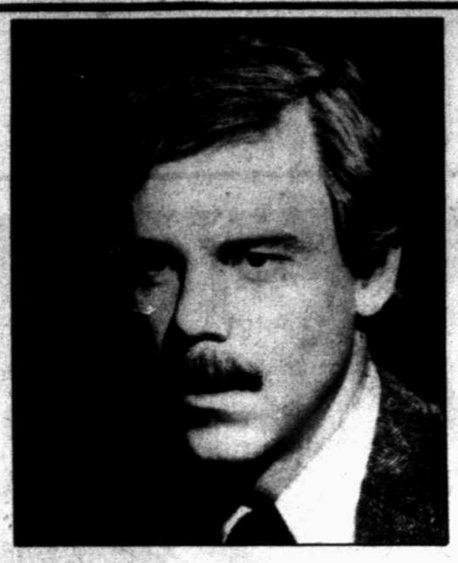

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stay in the background today, working on tasks that will restore your equilibrium. Loved one asks an important question. You need to have more facts and figures before making a decision.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Analyze your own emotions first if trying to work out a family problem. Loved ones may be hiding their true feelings. Bad weather could cancel a business trip. Have an alternative plan.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You have a talent for inspiring others. Seek an official leadership role. A creative project enjoys highly favorable influences. Someone makes an unusual offer. Answer your mail as soon as possible.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A misunderstanding could arise regarding family finances. Seek the cooperation of everyone involved before announcing a budget revision. The flames of an old romance are rekindled. Do not repeat a previous mistake.

Comedian on PBS tonight

NEW YORK (AP) — The best thing about "Popular Neurotics," an eccentric, marginally amusing comedy tonight on public television's "American Playhouse," is Jeff Goldblum.

If you've been to the movies more than once in the last half-year, chances are you'll recognize Goldblum. He's the lanky, bespectacled space-agency recruiter in "The Right Stuff" and the similarly arranged People magazine writer, Michael, in "The Big Chill."

Mimi Kennedy — whose credits include one short-lived replacement series on NBC in 1977, "3 Girls 3," and two for CBS, "Stockard Channing in Just Friends" and "The Two of Us" — is the object of Goldblum's affection in "Popular Neurotics." She's not bad, either.

They make the most of a limited script that relies too heavily on abrupt, wiseacre dialogue, thinly disguised as wit:

"No sweat," says Miss Kennedy's character, an anesthesiologist, when Goldblum, who installs exhibits at a museum, just barely makes a movie date. He's been playing handball. "Listen," he says, "if it's overpowering, we'll leave a few seats between us."

They meet at an automatic bank-telling machine, and he gives her his telephone number. She won't reciprocate.

"You know," the fellow says, "that isn't really my style, picking up women at cash machines."

"Right," she replies, completing an exchange characteristic of the whole, hour-long show.

Ultimately, they begin dating, but their neuroses — presumably common to young adults in love — interfere.

One problem is that the characters are appealing only to a point. "So talk," Goldblum barks as he answers the phone. The affectation might seem funny the first time; that kind of behavior in repetition is boorish.

"Popular Neurotics," which marks the theatrical debut of playwright Aubrey Wertheim, was taped for "American Playhouse" in Los Angeles in October 1982.

Goldblum grew up in suburban Pittsburgh and studied drama at Carnegie-Mellon University while still in high school. He moved to New York City as soon as he graduated, and landed a job in "Two Gentlemen of Verona." A part in the off-Broadway production of "El Grande de Coca Cola" led to his first motion-picture role, in "Death Wish."

Goldblum was also in Robert Altman's "Nashville," "California Split," Paul Mazursky's "Next Stop Greenwich Village," "Between the Lines" and Woody Allen's "Annie Hall," among other films. He is cast in the upcoming "Threshold."

4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ◇.

Sometimes, a defender is able to direct his partner toward the winning defense. At other times, however, a defender has to come up with the right play without help from anyone.

We are not sure that we would have opened the South hand with four spades, for two reasons. First, the 7-2-2-2 distribution is most unattractive; and second, South has a shade too much defensive strength for a preempt. Our vote goes to an opening bid of one spade, followed by a series of spade rebids.

Had West come up with an opening heart lead or a heart shift at trick two, which would have removed one of dummy's entries, this hand would never have attracted any attention. But he selected the more promising lead of the king of diamonds, and then, rather unimaginatively, continued the suit after declarer allowed West to win the first trick.

Declarer took the ace of diamonds and led a third round of the suit from the dummy. East sluffed a club, and declarer ruffed. He drew two rounds of trumps, finessed the heart queen and ruffed another diamond to set up a long card in the suit. He returned to the board with the ace of hearts and sluffed a club on the 13th diamond. He lost only a trump, a diamond and a club.

East missed his opportunity to defeat the hand. When declarer led a third diamond from the table, East should have ruffed with the lady.

There is no combination of cards where that would have cost a trick. And as the cards lie, the uppercut gains a trick. If declarer does not overruff, he must still give up a trump trick and a club to West for down one. If he does overruff, West must come to two trump tricks by force, plus the ace of clubs, for down one.

Missing children

While the federal government traditionally has been reluctant to meddle in matters considered to lie within state, local or family jurisdiction, a strong argument can be made for its intervention in the growing problem of the nation's missing children.

An estimated 150,000 children are kidnapped every year in the United States. About two-thirds of these are so-called "custodial" kidnappings, in which the innocent youngster is the helpless pawn in a dispute between separated parents.

In the 50,000 or so cases where a child has been abducted for ransom or for the evil purposes of mentally aberrant strangers, the enforcement machinery of the entire nation can be put into motion to recover the victim and bring the criminals to justice. Parential kidnappings, although equally tragic to the bereft mother or father and potentially as harmful to the victim, are less easily resolved.

Police often are hesitant to interfere in what they tend to regard as a custodial dispute, where the kidnapper may feel he was wrongly served by a court decision or is motivated by a desire for revenge against a former marriage partner. In seven states, a parential kidnapping has been so downscaled as an offense that it is next to impossible to obtain extradition.

Several privately financed volunteer organizations, notably Child Find, have achieved remarkable success in tracking down and recovering missing children. But the problem has grown to the point that it is overtaxing the efforts of even these dedicated volunteers.

The organizations have now petitioned Congress for legislation to provide $10 million a year toward a toll-free telephone number for people with information on missing children and to set up a national clearing house offering technical assistance to state and local governments in locating kidnap victims.

Inasmuch as most of the abducted children are borne across state lines and even into foreign countries, the requested legislation would appear to be a small price to pay to ease the anguish of deprived parents and curb an increasing menace to children.

Don't delay pull out

Now that President Reagan has decided to pull the Marines out of their Beirut airport bunkers, he should do so promptly and without unnecessary delay.

Last week there was some confusion about the withdrawal operation. It was not clear whether all the Marines would be moved to ships offshore quickly or not. There seemed to be some concern that too quick a move would make it seem that the United States had decided to "cut and run."

But the British weren't waiting around to see how long it took for the Marines to pull out. They moved their entire 100-man contingent out in one day. And the Italians prepared to leave. Only the French were reluctant to leave.

A pullout is a dangerous military operation. Perhaps we want to protect the Marines by being indefinite about their departure schedule.

But the longer they stay on shore, and the fewer of them are left, the more risk. They are serving no useful purpose.

There was some additional confusion about the purpose of shell fire from the ships offshore against rebel positions in the hills above Beirut. Mr. Reagan's press secretary, Larry Speakes first said the fire was to support the government of Amin Gemayel, then he said it was to protect the Marines. Another good reason to withdraw the Marines now is that, presumably, our ships would stop shooting. We should not be participating in the Lebanese civil war.

Another View:

For defoliant victims

The veterans benefit bill that the House has just passed and the Senate will now have to consider is only a stopgap measure. But it is the right stopgap measure.

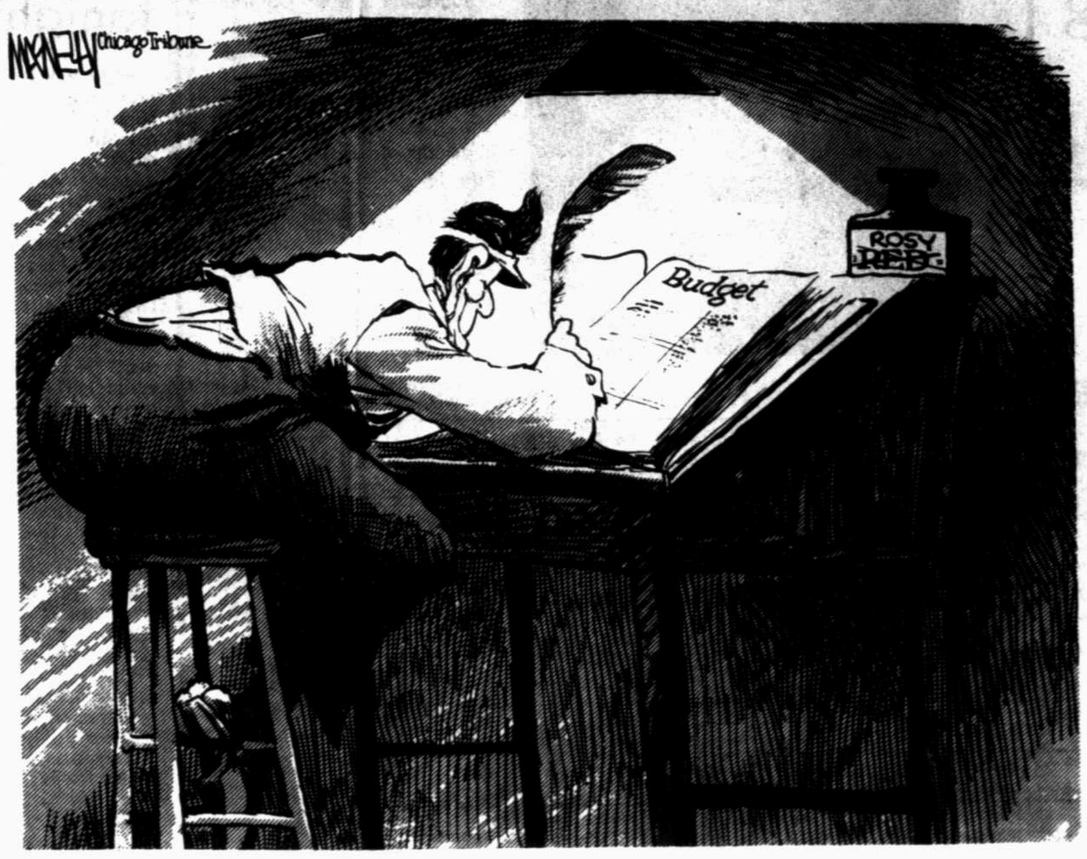

For years the Veterans Administration refused to acknowledge that Vietnam veterans exposed to Agent Orange, a chemical defoliant the United States used extensively in Vietnam, had suffered any lasting health effects as a result of that exposure. Although Agent Orange spraying was halted during the war because of indications that it might be causing cancers and birth defects among the civilian population of Vietnam, the VA saw no reason to believe the chemical had had any such effect on American soldiers.

Congress finally forced the VA to conduct a study of the issue, but after several years it produced a report so inadequate that Congress turned the task over to researchers at the federal Center for Disease Control. That study will not be completed until 1987 at the earliest. Meanwhile, the VA continues to deny war-injury compensation to veterans suffering even from the particular soft-tissue cancers and liver diseases that several outside studies by now have linked directly to the chemicals in Agent Orange.

At the moment, the VA acknowledges as a "war-related injury" only one disorder, a severe skin disease that Agent Orange causes, called chloracne. Of 18,500 veterans who have claimed Agent Orange-related disabilities, the VA over the years has only 1,461 eligible for disability benefits.

The VA's record on this issue is shameful, and given that the delays in answering the key medical questions are entirely its fault, it makes no sense that the disabled veterans should be suffering the consequences. Thus, the House bill would require that — until the Center for Disease Control study is completed — the VA consider any Vietnam veteran suffering from the soft-tissue cancers, the liver diseases or the chloracne that have been strongly associated with Agent Orange exposure to be eligible for veterans' disability benefits. The Senate should have no qualms about agreeing to this measure and extending such interim relief to a group that certainly deserves it.

CHARLEY REESE

Why do we have inflation, high taxes?

Politicians are the only people in the world who create problems and then campaign against them.

Charley Reese

Have you ever wondered why, if both Democrats and Republicans, are against deficits, we have deficits? Have you ever wondered why, if all the politicians are against inflation and high taxes, we have inflation and high taxes?

You and I don't propose a federal budget. The President does. You and I don't have the Constitutional authority to vote or not vote for appropriations. The Congress does. You and I don't write the tax code. The Congress does. You and I don't set a fiscal policy. The Congress does. You and I don't ccontrol monetary policy. The Federal Reserve does.

One hundred senators, 435 Congressmen, one president, and nine supreme court justices — 545 individual human beings out of 235 million are directly, legally, morally, and individually responsible for the domestic problems which plague this country.

I exclude the members of th Federal Reserve Board because that problem itself was created by the Congress in 1913 when it delegated its constitutional duty to provide a sound currency to a federally chartered but private central bank. Any time it so chooses, Congress has the power to abolish or alter the Federal Reserve system.

I exclude all of the special interests and lobbyists for a sound reason. They have no legal authority. They hav no ability to coerce a senator, a congressman or a president to do one cotton-picking thing. I don't care if they offer a politician $1 million in cash, it's the politician who has the power to accept or reject it. No matter what the lobbyist says, promises or offers, it is entirely the responsibility of the legislator to determine how he votes.

Don't you see now the con game that is played on the people by the politicians? Those 545 individual human beings spend much of their energy convincing you that what they alone did is not their fault. They cooperated in this common con regardless of party or even ideology.

What separates a politician from a normal human being is an excessive amount of gall and a total lack of any sense of shame. No normal human being would have the gall of Tip O'Neill to stand up and criticize Ronald Reagan for creating deficits.

The President can only propose a budget. He cannot force the Congress to accept it. The Constitution, which is the supreme law of the land, gives sole responsibility to the House of Representatives for originating appropriations and taxes. O'Neill is Speaker of the House. He is the leader of the majority party. He and his fellow Democrats, not the President, can approve any budget they want. If the President vetoes it, they can pass it over his veto.

Just 545 individual Americans have fouled up this great nation. It seems inconceivable to me that a nation of 235 million cannot replace 545 people who stand convicted by present facts of incompetence and irresponsibility.

I can't think of a single domestic problem from an unfair tax code to defense over-runs and deficits which is not directly traceable to those 545 individuals.

When you fully grasp the plain truth that 545 individuals exercise complete and sole power over the federal government, then you must recognize that it follows that what exists is what they want to exist. If the tax code is unfair, it's because they want it unfair. If the budget is in the red, it's because they want it in the red. If the Marines are in Lebanon it's because they want them in Lebanon.

There are no insoluable government problems. Do not let these 545 individuals shift the blame to bureaucrats whom they hire and whose jobs they can abolish; to lobbyists, whose gifts and advice they can reject; to regulators to whom they gave the power to regulate and from whom they can take it. Above all, do not let them con you into the belief that there exist mystical disembodied forces like "the economy," "politics," or "inflation" which prevent them from doing what they have all taken an oath to do.

They and they alone are responsible. They and they alone have the power. They and they alone should be held accountable by the people who are their bosses — provided they have the gumption to hire, fire and manage their own employees.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Salvadoran leader has slush fund

WASHINGTON — The provisional president of El Salvador, Alvaro Magana, has control of a special bank account that dispenses millions of dollars a year without proper audit. I've seen canceled checks from the account, which sources say is used as a slush fund to reward Magana's political cronies.

Jack Anderson

There's a good possibility that the money in the secret Salvadoran treasury account comes originally from U.S. aid to El Salvador. U.S. officials have complained that the auditing system set up to keep track of aid funds ranges from negligible to poor.

The Salvadoran sources who smuggled the documents concerning the president's secret bank account to my associate Dale Van Atta risked their lives to do so. The documents included copies of actual vouchers and checks — totaling more than $1 million — paid out of the account, which is known simply as "198."

The 58-year-old Magana is an astute political operator and a respected economist educated at the University of Chicago. For 17 years before he was named president in April 1982, Magana headed Banco Hipotecario, El Salvador's largest mortgage bank.

In fact, it was his longtime practice of giving interest-free loans to Salvadoran military officers that won him the army's support for the presidency. During the heat of the debate two years ago, political enemies on the far right denounced Magana as "the biggest thief in El Salvador."

The interest-free loans to selected officers — some of whom were not expected to repay even the principal — have been defended by Salvadorans as a shrewd political move. The financial favors supposedly enabled the officers to resist bribes and payoffs that would have put them under the thumb of the Salvadoran oligarchy.

Perhaps Magana's pay-outs from the secret slush fund can be explained with the same benign justification. But attempts to reach the Salvadoran president through the embassy in Washington and a high official in San Salvador were unsuccessful.

The vouchers are irritatingly vague in their description of the purpose for the disbursement: "Una comision de orden politica, autorizada por el senor Presidente de la Republica" — that is, a commission of a political nature authorized by the president.

An embassy spokesman acknowledged that the account number on the checks Magana signed — 150-52-101-11-101-001-198 — was a Salvadoran treasury account number. He suggested that it was being used for a multi-party commission set up in August 1982. But at least $720,000 had been paid out of the account before then.

I don't have copies of all the checks drawn on the "198" account. But the first check, for roughly $240,000, was dated May 26, 1982, only a month after Magana became president. Sources say that at least one check per month in the same amount was issued throughout 1982 and 1983, which would bring the total for that one vague purpose to nearly $5 million. And these were not the only checks drawn on the mysterious account.

My sources claim Magana acknowledged to a confidant that he was part of the venerable Salvadoran tradition of pervasive corruption. He assured his friend that his own money was safely salted away in England.

A few million bucks here and there might not seem like much to Americans contemplating a federal budget approaching $1 trillion. But El Salvador is a poor country, with an annual budget of less than $1 billion.

INSIDE REPORT:

Reagan to host Trilateral group

WASHINGTON — As he was indignantly denying the need for Joe Coors or any conservative activist other than himself in the White House, Ronald Reagan routinely approved an event certain to infuriate his right-wing constituency: an April 1 presidential reception for Trilateral Commission members.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The Trilateralists are seen by the conservative movement as symbolizing the international establishment targeted by Reagan's right-wing populist supporters of 1976 and 1980. The commission members — consisting of business, intellectual and political leaders from the U.S., Western Europe and Japan — are far from the communist sympathizers portrayed by the paranoid right, but tend to an elitist, anti-populist world view. Thus, the April Fool's party at the White House illustrates insensitivity there, shared by Reagan, toward his core constituency.

The most conservative president since Calvin Coolidge faces trouble from the right for succumbing to the establishment on issues far more important than the Trilateral Commission. Back-bench House Republicans are nearing open revolt protesting Federal Reserve Board and State Department policies that threaten calamities for the economy and Lebanon. Reagan's State of the Union, enveloped in euphoria, seems buried in a past more distant than Jan. 25.

It was during this euphoric afterglow that Chase Manhattan Bank Chairman-emeritus David Rockefeller informed the White House that the Trilateral Commission was meeting at Washington's Mayflower Hotel April 1-3. The famed international banker, symbol of the Trilateralists, asked whether the commission's members might be received by the president.

The reception was quickly approved, with the stipulation that it be announced eventually by the White House rather than by the Commission. When the April 1 date appeared on Reagan's closely-held advance schedule, one politically-astute insider assumed it was a tired April Fool's joke. When the Trilateralist reception disappeared from a later schedule, he was sure of it.

It was no joke, and the removal from the schedule apparently represented a bungled attempt at security rather than a cancellation. White House insiders defend the decision on grounds the Trilateralists have been entertained by heads of government in Japan and Western Europe. Besides, they say, David Rockefeller has helped the president on many issues — especially the Caribbean Basin initiative.

However, deputy chief of staff Michael K. Deaver jealously guards the president's time from visiting delegations, and is unrelenting in turning them down (he has yet to give the green light for the president to meet fundamentalist Baptists, a true Reaganite constituency, later in April). In truth, Deaver is an unabashed admirer of the Eastern Establishment in general and the Rockefellers in particular.

But what about Ronald Reagan? Did he not remember the 1980 New Hampshire Republican primary when his strategists, worried about George Bush's substantial lead, exploited rank-and-file concern over Trilateralists with a nasty — and effective — attack on the future vice president's past connections with the Commission?

The future president joined the fun, suggesting Bush's Trilateralist links "should be investigated." Reagan charged the Carter administration "has been unduly influenced by the Trilateral Commission" in reacting too passively to communist aggression. While no president ever slavishly follows the excesses of past campaigns, Reagan might have remembered the muzzle velocity of the Trilateral issue.

But the notion of the president vetoing a Deaver-approved date is exotic. That is why the right wanted Attorney General-designate Edwin Meese III replaced as Cabinet-level White House counselor by a conservative: precisely to alert the president to such unseen dangers as a Trilateral Commission reception. Brewer Joseph Coors of Golden, Colo., a member of the president's largely-defunct "kitchen cabinet," volunteered (perhaps as a stalking horse for a less controversial conservative).

But finally free of amiable Ed Meese, the West Wing "pragmatists" — led by chief of staff James A. Baker III and Deaver — were not about to accept hard-nosed Joe Coors as a substitute. Coors picked up only mixed conservative backing, and the coup de grace was administered by the president's assertion there already is a conservative in the White House: Ronald Reagan (a line used earlier by Deaver).

One New Rightist who is a Reagan loyalist warned that the April 1 reception could encourage an independent right-wing candidacy (probably Rep. Ron Paul of Texas). But there are more subtle repercussions. Reaganites who hardly worry at all about David Rockefeller and the Trilateralists are still concerned where their leader has gone.

A candidate who campaigned against the State Department and the Federal Reserve Board has become a president who, in the last two weeks, has silently followed their leadership toward a looming political abyss. His April Fool's Party fits that pattern.

Iranian kills himself, family

MADEIRA, Ohio (AP) — An Iranian who was director of international commerce for Iran under the late shah apparently killed himself after fatally shooting his wife and three young daughters, police say.

Mostafa Ansari, 38, was found dead Monday morning in a bathroom of the family's home. The bodies of his wife, Karin, 40; and daughters, Jasmine, 10, and 7-year-old twins, Nadia and Tania, were discovered in their bedrooms. Each had been shot in the head with a .38-caliber handgun, said Police Chief Phillip Hudson, declining to say if officers had found a suicide note.

Douglas Weigle, a lawyer who helped with the family's 1979 immigration to the United States after the shah fell, said the family had "a lot of money" but Ansari had been worried about his contracting business.

Patent office grants claims

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Apparently resolving the question of whether a process that occurs in nature can be patented, the U.S. Patent Office has granted Stanford University most of its claims involving gene splicing and gene cloning techniques.

The decision reversing an earlier Patent Office ruling was reported in a confidential letter to biotechnology and drug companies obtained by The Associated Press and confirmed Monday by a Stanford official.

The ruling protects millions of dollars of revenues split between Stanford and the University of California.

Agents shoot, kill fugitive

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — A fugitive twice charged with murder and wanted on federal drug charges was shot and killed by FBI agents after he fired on the agents with a submachine gun, authorities said.

Antonio "Tiny" Martines, 38, of Wilmington, Del., opened fire Monday after agents stopped the car in which he was traveling on Interstate 80 north of Youngstown, an FBI spokesman.

Two women traveling with Martines and three men arrested at a motel were charged with harboring a fugitive.

Martines was charged with making, possessing and distributing amphetamine, commonly known as "speed," authorities said.

Transsexual ready to retrain

CHICAGO (AP) — A pilot who had a sex change operation is "very, very pleased" with $158,590 in back pay and expenses awarded by a federal judge, and she is ready to receive retraining to go back to work, her lawyer says.

Attorney Brian Roche said his client, Karen Frances Ulane, 42, formerly Kenneth Ulane, now is operating a flower and plant store in suburban Chicago.

U.S. District Judge John F. Grady had ruled Dec. 28 that Eastern Airlines' claim that the pilot's presence in the cockpit posed safety hazards was a "sham of the first order." Eastern says it will appeal Monday's ruling on the back pay and expenses.

De Lorean's test dismissed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge who is a trained polygrapher dismissed a lie detector test given to John Z. De Lorean because of excessive movement by the automaker, but the judge did not say if he thought the movement was an attempt to influence the results.

In ruling out use of the test by the defense, U.S. District Judge Robert Takasugi also barred use of a prosecution polygraph which showed De Lorean was lying when he said he was innocent of charges against him.

Jury selection in the trial of De Lorean, 59, who is charged with conspiring to distribute $24 million worth of cocaine, is scheduled to begin March 6.

Dole orders air bag installation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The official word on airbags and passive seat belts won't come until April, but Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole has already ordered an airbag installed in her government car.

"I do feel that the airbag is a good safety device," she said Monday.

But Mrs. Dole said no decision has been made on whether to require the devices in all new cars, a move that is being vigorously opposed by the auto industry.

FDA to set guidelines for irradiation of food

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The federal government has decided to approve the use of radiation as an alternative to chemical pesticides for fruits and vegetables, a Food and Drug Administration spokesman says.

Guidelines on the process will be published today in the Federal Register, FDA spokesman Jim Greene told the San Francisco Chronicle. There will be a 60-day period for public comment and the rules could take effect by the end of the year, he said.

Proposals to allow the use of radiation on meats, fish and poultry are planned for the future, Greene said.

Companies that expect to profit from irradiated food expressed elation at the FDA decision, but critics of the process argued it may be dangerous and will result in "more radioactive garbage."

Under the process, the food would not become radioactive, the FDA said. Produce placed in metal containers would move on conveyor belts into large rooms with concrete walls where it would be exposed to cobalt 60 or cesium 137, both powerful radioactive isotopes.

The rules, which the FDA have reviewed for almost three years, would allow up to 100,000 rads to be used to kill bacteria and insects on fruits and vegetables. A rad is a unit of absorbed radiant energy. A typical chest X-ray, for example, is produced by less than one rad of energy.

The rules also would allow up to 3 million rads to be used to control bacteria on spices and seasonings. In July, the FDA approved doses of up to 1 million rads for spices.

"I'm elated," said Niel Nielson, president of Emergent Technologies in San Jose, which has plans to build irradiation plants in California.

"For the consumer, this heralds a measurable increase in the quality of life. It enables the reduction of the use of EDB, improved ability to have fresh instead of frozen food and the reduction of disease transmission through food by trichina and salmonella," Nielson said.

EDB, ethylene dibromide, is a citrus and grain fumigant known to cause cancer in laboratory animals.

However one critic said the FDA was being "dishonest" if it said it was sure the use of radiation was safe.

"When you irradiate food, you provoke a number of chemical changes in the food," said John Gofman, professor emeritus of biophysics and medical physics at the University of California at Berkeley.

Six generals, admirals testify at Argentine court martial

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Six generals and admirals, including two former presidents, have testified at a court martial investigating human rights violations during nearly eight years of military rule that ended in December.

Reporters were barred Monday from the session of the Supreme Council of the Armed Forces, and the statements given by the former junta members were not made public.

The military tribunal is to make formal accusations after testimony is completed, and the defendants then will have a chance to offer their defenses. Verdicts are expected next month.

President Raul Alfonsin, whose inauguration Dec. 10 restored democratic rule, ordered the court martial of the officers

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — The chief justice of the Supreme Court has told Nazi hunter Beate Klarsfeld that war criminal Josef Mengele left Paraguay years ago.

Mrs. Klarsfeld, who came here to ask the government to expel Mengele, met with Justice Luis Argana and also with Interior Minister Sabino Montanaro.

Mrs. Klarsfeld said both officials told her Mengele left Paraguay shortly before or just after West Germany asked for his extradition in 1962.

Mengele, a doctor known as "the angel of death" at the Nazi's Auschwitz concentration camp, is blamed for the deaths of thousands of prisoners.

Dissidents seek prisoners' release

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Czechoslovak and Polish dissidents, in an unusual joint action, are seeking Western help to achieve the release of political prisoners, according to emigre sources.

"We call on all people who value freedom and human dignity to support us in our fight for the liberation of political prisoners," said a statement signed by 46 human rights activists and made available Monday.

Reagan: 'Ominous cloud of war' threatens Middle East

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, reacting to last week's setbacks to American policy in Lebanon, is warning of an "ominous cloud of war that hovers over much of the Middle East" and wants people to urgently join in the search for peace and stability in the region.

A senior administration official says, meanwhile, that the "national obsession" with the role of the American Marines in Lebanon should end when the 1,200-1,300 Marines are withdrawn from the war-torn country to ships offshore. Once that happens, he said, chances of restoring stability to Lebanon may be enhanced.

The White House is expected to disclose either Wednesday or Thursday a plan for withdrawing nearly all the Marines within 30 days. Spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan favors the plan, but first wants to clear it with other nations in the multinational peacekeeping force.

Sources said Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger presented three options to the White House on Friday for withdrawing the troops — one for a brief pullout lasting a few days, a second for a withdrawal taking 30 days, and a third that would stretch the process out, possibly over several months.

Meanwhile, Reagan said he is ordering new Army units to Lebanon to help train and advise Lebanese soldiers in "certain specialties," including those "having to do with terrorism and that sort of thing." The president, in an interview with Knight-Ridder Newspapers published today, said he did not know the size of the Army force but it would be smaller than the Marine units in Lebanon now.

Reagan planned to meet jointly today with King Hussein of Jordan and President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt, two moderate Arab leaders who share Reagan's concern over instability in the Middle East, but occasionally differ over how to attain it.

Reagan met separately with Hussein on Monday and planned to meet alone with Mubarak today before having lunch with the two leaders at the White House.

Iraq hits Iranian towns

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq staged rocket attacks and air raids on six Iranian cities today in retaliation for shelling of six Iraqi residential areas that killed 22 people and injured 52 others, an Iraqi military spokesman said.

The spokesman said the Iranian towns and cities of Masjid Suleiman, Behbehan, Andimeshk, Guilan Gharb, Sarbeel Zehab and Ilam were "attacked by rockets and the air force" twice before dawn. He did not mention possible casualties, but a report from Iran said at least 90 civilians were killed.

The unidentified spokesman, reading a communique over Baghdad state radio, said the attacks were in retaliation for the "criminal and barbaric acts committed by the Iranian regime through its continuous shelling of our peaceful towns."

Iran's Islamic Republic News Agency said a total of 90 civilians were killed and 430 wounded in the Iraqi attacks on six Iranian cities.

The IRNA report, monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus, said 60 civilians were killed and more than 360 wounded in the raids this morning on Ilam, Gilan Gharb and Islamad Gharb, while about 30 people were killed and more than 70 wounded in overnight missile attacks against the cities of Andimeshk, Masjid Soleiman and Behbahan.

Townships quiet after rioting

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Extra police patrols were deployed today in Pretoria's tense black townships after a teenage schoolgirl was killed in a clash between police and boycotting black students.

The townships were reported quiet, but police in camouflage dress and milling groups of boycotting students were visible on the streets.

There were some earlier reports of continued unrest, but witnesses and police said no trouble had occurred since Monday night.

A police spokesman said 20 students were arrested Monday night in Atteridgeville when police dispersed a crowd of about 300 youths who threw stones at police vehicles and the home of a school principal.

Gold fever strikes Americans at Sarajeveo

U.S. athletes nearly sweep giant slalom, finish 1-2-4

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — The United States finally struck gold, and they had 24-karat Debbie Armstrong to thank for it.

"I wish I could always feel this way," said Armstrong, who led a 1-2 American finish that nearly was a sweep of the women's giant slalom Monday at the 1984 Winter Olympics.

The gold was the first for the United States as the Games passed their halfway mark, and it was the first in Alpine skiing since Barbara Cochran won the slalom in Sapporo, Japan in 1972.

"Try to imagine my emotions," she said. "Try to imagine. Whatever you imagine, you're probably right. It was pretty special."

Christin Cooper finished second, and less than a half second separated Tamara McKinney, 1983 World Cup champion, from third place as the United States finished 1-2-4.

The United States now has three medals, one gold and two silver. East Germany leads the medals race with 15 total, six gold. The Soviet Union has 14 medals, three gold.

BUT THERE was more U.S. gold to be mined.

Scott Hamilton, the three-time world champion from Denver, led in men's figure skating going into today's short program. Hamilton built a large lead over Jean-Christophe Simond of France after the compulsory figures on Monday.

"My coach told me if you see an opportunity, take it," Hamilton said. "If you see the door open, kick it in. And I'm going to nail it shut."

Judy Blumberg of Tarzana, Calif., and Michael Seibert of Washington, Pa., were third going into today's free dance finale, led by overwhelming favorites Jayne Torvill and Christopher Dean of Britain.

Three-time World Cup champion Phil Mahre and his brother Steve carried U.S. hopes into the men's giant slalom today, but the Yakima, Wash., twins had disappointing first runs. Phil finished 10th in a time of one minute, 22.09 seconds. Steve was back in 18th at 1:23.43, with the last of the huge field — 109 skiers — still coming down the course.

Switzerland's Max Julen was the preliminary leader. The second run was scheduled later in the day.

GAETAN BOUCHER became Canada's first gold medalist with a victory in the 1,000-meter speed skating. Boucher clocked 1:15.80 seconds, well off the 1:15.18 Olympic record set by American Eric Heiden at Lake Placid in 1980.

Sergei Khlebnikov of the Soviet Union won the silver in 1:16.63 and Kai Arne Engelstad of Norway was third in 1:16.75.

Eirik Kvalfoss won Norway's second gold medal of the Games. He finished today's 10-kilometer biathlon in 30:53.8, ahead of silver medalist Peter Angerer of West Germany and Matthias Jacob of East Germany. Kvalfoss took the bronze in Saturday's 20-kilometer biathlon, won by Angerer.

On Monday, Gunde Svan of Sweden added a gold to a silver won earlier by capturing the men's 15-kilometer cross-country race, and Karin Enke of East Germany won her second gold in the 1,000-meter speed skating event for women.

And the U.S. hockey team finally got going, although too late to win a medal. Team USA defeated Austria 7-3 as Pat LaFontaine scored three goals. Canada, the Soviet Union, and Czechoslovakia clinched three of the four spots in the medal round. Canada beat Norway 8-1, the Soviets downed West Germany 6-1, Sweden beat Poland 10-1, Yugoslavia defeated Italy 5-1 and Czechoslovakia beat Finland 7-2.

ARMSTRONG, 20, of Seattle, Wash., is only in her second year on the U.S. Alpine squad and began the season on the B Team. The grand dame of U.S. skiing, Cindy Nelson, once predicted future stardom for her.

The future was Monday, and Armstrong knew it as she stood center-stage on the platform at the awards ceremony later in the day. With the medal hanging around her neck and the Stars and Stripes waving, she shook her hands in the air in victory and laughed.

"I just couldn't stop laughing," she said. "I just couldn't believe I was up there. You can't put it into words. To be here in Europe and see your flag go up.

"I said to myself, 'This is yours and nobody can take it away now.' "

Second behind Cooper after the first run, Armstrong turned in a time of 1 inute, 12.01 seconds on the second heat to capture the gold medal in 2:20.96. Cooper, of Sun Valley, Idaho, a World Cup veteran, had runs of 1:08.87 and 1:12.51 for 2:21.38. Perrine Pelen of France had a total time of 2:21.40 to repeat her bronze medal performance of four years ago.

Chaps control inside to post 88-63 win over T-Birds

MC rebounding from flu, road losses

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

The Midland College Chaparrals knew, entering Monday's game with New Mexico Junior College that, Mike Richmond was tough.

Richmond, a 6-8 sophomore from Philadelphia, leads NMJC and the Western Junior College Conference in rebounding and was averaging a hefty 19.6 points per game. The Chaps narrowly escaped NMJC in December, 96-89.

But Monday, the Chaps showed they could rebound and play big inside. The Chap trio of big men, Teviin Binns, Brian Essary and Jackie Phinnessee, dominated Richmond and scored 50 points in the Chaps' 88-63 win over the Thunderbirds at Al Langford Chaparral Center.

Binns netted 19 points, Essary bombed away for 17 points, and Phinnessee had 14, but MC coach Jerry Stone thought "it looked like Jackie scored 30."

BINNS STOLE the thunder in the first half, Essary got the Chaps off to the blowout in the second half, and Phinnessee played showtime. The 6-5 sophomore from Bolivar, Tenn., scored all but two of his points in the second half. Included with the admission ticket were two jams by Phinnessee, two from Binns and another for good measure from Chuckie Graves. The T-Birds really were never in the game.

As for Richmond, he was held to 6-16 shooting, a dozen points and 12 rebounds. But the terrific tall trio took down 19 caroms. Binns would have had more but after the game started to tilt heavily to MC, Stone rested his troops.

"We're just trying to come back from the flu and losing on the road," said Stone, whose team lost last week at South Plains College. "We're still not in the kind of shape we need to be in physically."

MC can use the win. The Chaps currently are on the outside looking in where a guaranteed post-season berth is concerned. The WJCC's top two finishers claim automatic playoff spots, while the other eight teams must battle for two playoff berths available. Stone and the Chaps are eyeing the home stretch in hopes of winning out.

Doing so would likely give MC at least second place. It's doubtful they can catch Howard College, with only one loss in the league.

MIDLAND COLLEGE played one for memories against NMJC. The win was typical of Stone's title teams with Spud Webb: easy.

The Chaps hit the floor running and jumped to a 12-2 lead in the first six minutes. The ten point margin held through most of the first half, which MC won 44-34.

Essary left no doubt about the outcome at the outset of the second half. Taking feeds from Phinnessee and Coleman, and canning a long jumper from the left basleline, the 6-6 North Mesquite product upped the lead to 14.

NMJC threatened for the last time by cutting it to ten, 60-50, inside of eight minutes. But Phinnessee made two consecutive strong drives to the hoop for scores, and the Chaps raised their mark to 18-8, 8-5 in the WJCC. NMJC is now 14-12 and 5-8.

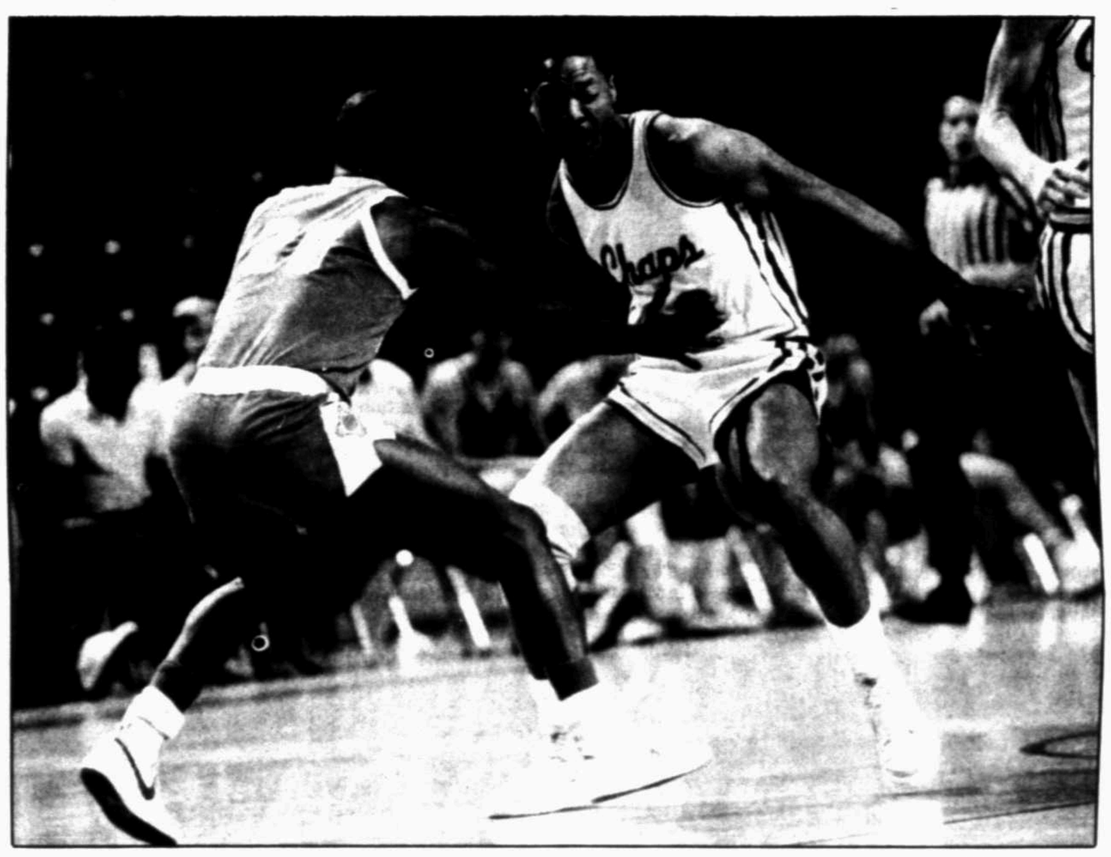

The game's oddest note may have been the fact that only 11 total points came from the line. NMJC might be angry that the Chaps were whistled for fouls only 13 times, the same as the T-Birds. But NMJC went 3-13 at the charity stripe, so MC could have hacked more.

The T-Birds certainly had opportunities. MC went inside all night, although many of the Chap layups came after steals and good passes. The best passer on the night was freshman Vernon Coleman, who made a blind, highlight-film reverse bounce pass for a Phinnessee layup. Coleman netted only four points, but more importantly made a contribution in the manner of the pure point guard. Coleman made great passes for baskets and played stellar defense.

"THAT'S NATURAL, it's just the way I play," said Coleman, 6-1, from Fort Worth Paschal. "I like to play hard and hustle. Coach told us to throw it inside. We didn't think he (Richmond) could handle Teviin. He's sneaky."

Coleman and Binns hooked up often in the first half, but Binns made all passes to him look smart. The New York giant finessed for 17 points in the first half, then Stone played a head game with Richmond, and it worked. Binns made only a cameo appearance in the half, and the Chaps opened up the floor, and then it was fun, fun, fun 'til coach Ron Black took the T-Birds away.

The Chaps return to action against the other Mountain-zone men, New Mexico Miltary, Thursday at Chap Center.

McCutchen expected to get MHS head coaching job

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The Board of Trustees of the Midland Independent School District was expected to name Doug McCutchen as the new Midland High head football coach during its regular monthly meeting this afternoon.

McCutchen, who is coming to MHS from Klein Forest High School near Houston, met with board members Monday afternoon. He is expected to take over the reigns of the Bulldogs in a few days.

McCutchen will replace Pat Culpepper, who resigned the MHS post last month to become head coach and athletic director at Lufkin. The Bulldogs were 17-23 in four seasons under Culpepper.

McCUTCHEN, WHO is only 34 years old, is no stranger to West Texas football fans, especially Texas Tech supporters. McCutchen led the Southwest Conference in rushing in 1970 and was the first Tech back to rush for more than 1,000 yards in a single season.

Since his glory days at Tech, McCutchen has been in the coaching ranks for 11 years, posting a 22-19 record over the past four years as a head coach at both Liberty and Klein Forest.

Both schools were coming off 1-9 seasons when McCutchen took over as head coach and turned those programs around. In Liberty, McCutchen posted a two-year record of 13-8, winning the District 9-4A west zone championship and the west zone co-championship in 1980 and 1981. He was voted Coach of the Year in 1981 for District 9-4A.

At Klein Forest the last two years, McCutchen posted a 9-11 record. His team placed thrid in district in 1983 with the league's most potent offensive unit. The third place finish for Klein Forest was the highest in the school's history.

"Doug has done extremely well with two programs at schools that had some problems. We feel he is the right choice for Midland High at this time," said Midland athletic director Gil Bartosh, who headed a three-man screening committee for the selection of a new coach for Midland High.

"He took 1-9 programs and turned them around and we liked that," said Bartosh. "I think the kids are going to like him and I think he will like the situation at Midland High. Things aren't as bad here as some of the places he has been."

McCUTCHEN HAS also had coaching assignments at Texas A&I University and San Angelo. He was at Texas A&I from 1977 to 1980 as offensive backfield coach under Fred Jonas and Ron Harms. Texas A&I had a 26-7-1 record during that span and led the nation in total offense in 1979. Texas A&I also won a conference co-championship, a conference championship and a national title during the time McCutchen was an assistant coach there.

He was at San Angelo under Smitty Hill from 1973-1977 where he coached both offensive and defensive teams. The Bobcats were 27-12-1 during the span McCutchen was there.

"We liked the idea that he has had both a college and high school coaching background," said Bartosh. "Everyone we talk to says that we are fortunate to get him for Midland High. I think he is one of the up and coming young head coaches in the state's high school ranks."

McCutchen graduated from Bronte High School in 1968, lettering in football, basketball, track, golf and tennis. He has college degrees from both Texas Tech and Angelo State University.

He and his wife, Kathy, have two sons, Chad, 7 and Shae, 4.

Lee girls face San Angelo in playoff

Winner represents 4-5A as champion at state

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

BIG SPRING — The Midland Lee girl's basketball team faces San Angelo's Bobcats at 7:30 p.m. here today at the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum. This battle is called a district playoff game, but its importance is of questionalbe nature.

The final result will not affect either team as far as its playoff hunting is concerned. Both are in the playoffs, but this game will decide which team will represent District 4-5A as the No. 1 team and which will go to the playoffs as the No. 2 team. It's really no big deal.

The big deal will come later this week when these two teams go against the top two teams of District 3-5A in the bi-district round of the state playoffs.

Tonight's winner will square off against Amarillo High, 3-5A's No. 2 team, while tonight's loser will face Amarillo Palo Duro, 3-5A's champion, later in the week at dates and times to be determined.

"We were hoping that Midland High would beat San Angelo in that last district game, so we wouldn't have to play this one," said Lee girls coach Shirley Stephenson. "I don't really think it matters if we go into the playoffs as No. 1 or No. 2."

LEE HAS won or shared every 4-5A title the girls have played in the last seven years and will be making their fifth playoff appearance. Lee, however, has won only one playoff game while dropping four.

Stephenson likes her team this year and will be entering the playoffs with some higher hopes.

"I like the team we have. It's never good to compare teams, but I think the one we have this year may have more depth than we have had in the past. They have played very well and we are naturally excited about the playoffs," said Stephenson.

Both Lee and San Angelo split district contests this year on the way to identical 12-2 loop marks and a share of the 4-5A crown. Lee's other district loss was a one-point affair against Midland High while San Angelo's other setback came against Odessa Permian.

Lee owns the best record of the two teams over the course of a season with a 23-6 mark while San Angelo is 18-8.

SENIOR FELICIA Farias has been the scoring leader for Lee all year with an 18.6 per game scoring average. Her 483 points is a school record over the course of 26 games.

Tunya Mayberry is averaging 12.4 per outing and is coming off a 23 point effort against Big Spring in the last regular season game. Stacy Harmon is averaging 10.8 per game and is the only other Rebel hitting in double figures.

However, Lee's strength has been its bench. Stephenson has been able to call on every varsity player this year and fresh troops have been a big plus for the Rebels.

Up in Amarillo, tonight's Lee-San Angelo battle will be of more concern than for both the Rebels and Bobcats. Palo Duro and Amarillo High will both have a chance to scout this contest. Palo Duro will be watching for the loser while AHS will be casting angry glances at the winner.

Palo Duro has finished an awesome 21-2 season with a 15-1 district record. Palo Duro's only district loss was a 49-44 setback to Amarillo High. Palo Duro lost its opener, 59-51, to Dumas and won 15 straight before losing to AHS. They have won six in a row heading into the playoffs.

Amarillo High is 18-5 on the year and lost a co-championship in 3-5A with a 50-49 loss to Lubbock Monterey at the buzzer last Friday night. AHS lost four of its games this year by a combined total of six points. They have won 17 of their last 18 games.

MHS in playoff tie with win

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The Midland High Bulldogs can do themselves, as well as the Midland Lee Rebels, a big favor tonight when they take on the Abilene High Eagles at 8 p.m. in Abilene.

The Eagles are currently tied for first place in District 4-5A with Odessa Permian at 9-3. The Bulldogs are in third place at 8-4 while Lee is just hanging on to playoff hopes at 7-5.

If Midland High can defeat Abilene High then, in all likely-hood, the two will be tied for the second and final 4-5A playoff berth. The Permian Panthers should stay atop the league since their opponent tonight is Big Spring, winless in 12 league games and only 2-26 for the year

Should Permian and AHS both win, then the playoff race is decided. Midland High and Midland Lee would be eliminated.

WHEN MIDLAND High and Abilene High met earlier this year at Chaparral Center, the game went from a near-blowout to a frantic one-point conclusion.

In the final two seconds, Midland High was at the free throw line twice for one-and-one attempts. Darrell Davis missed his shot and Fred Franklin missed his when he was fouled after bringing down the rebound.

Still, Midland High got the final shot of the game when Kenneth Johnson hauled down the rebound on Franklin's miss and put it back up at the buzzer. It, too, missed.

No matter how big the game may be, MHS coach Jack Stephenson insists it's no bigger than the rest.

"People talk about the game, how important it is," said Stephenson. "We're just going to try and execute and let things fall where they may. We're at a point now, after 32 ball games, where we can't get too emotional about one. Every game we play is a big game."

A plus for the Bulldogs going into the game is it looks like they've finally shaken the flu bug.

"This is the first time since San Antonio (Optimist Classic tournament) that every kid on the basketball team is well," said Stephenson. "Maybe that will be something in our favor. I think it is."

Chris Rooker leads the Bulldog scoring attack with a 19.4 season average, 17.1 in 4-5A play. Darrell Davis follows at 12.2, 14.0 and Kenneth Johnson is averaging 11.7, 13.0

Kirt Robinson and Tom Simmons pace Abilene with 12.9 and 11.8 district averages.

OF THE four teams still in playoff contention, Midland Lee is the shakiest. Not only do the Rebels have to win tonight's game against Abilene Cooper and Friday's against Midland High, they also have to have some help in the form of two losses to either AHS or Permian.

A loss for Lee or a win by either of the two leaders and the playoffs are history for the Rebs.

When Lee and Cooper first met, the Rebels took a 58-35 victory but Lee coach Paul Stueckler isn't expecting the same kind of result this time.

"We beat those guys pretty bad last time," he said. "We shot very, very well. I know it's not going to be as easy as it was last time. I'm expecting a real close ball game."

Lee's attack is led by Alvin Henry with a 13.9 overall and 14.1 4-5A average while Derek Westbrook is hitting at an 11.8 and 11.5 click.

"They've got some real fine shooters in Bob Estes (15.7), Joe Melson (15.1) and Derek Turnbow (10.1)," said Stueckler. I know they can hit the basket."

Armstrong 1,000th Amercian to win gold

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — Debbie Armstrong became the 1,000th American athlete to win an Olympic gold medal when he triumphed in the women's giant slalom at the Winter Games Monday, according to the United States Olympic Committee.

Bob Paul, the USOC's historian, said Armstrong, 20, from Seattle, was the 72nd U.S. competitor to win a gold in the Winter Olympics. Paul said there had been 928 U.S. gold-medal recipients in the Summer Games.

The USOC figures includes everyone who has received a gold medal while representing the United States in Olympic events, Paul said. Each member of a team, including relay teams in track and swimming, is counted, but no athlete is counted more than once.

Only one U.S. athlete, Eddie Eagan, has won gold medals in both the Summer and Winter Games — in boxing in the 1920 Summer Olympics and in bobsled in the 1932 Winter Olympics.

Gervin paces Texas-San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Derrick Gervin exploded for 37 points, including 22 in the second half, to lead Texas-San Antonio to an 83-66 victory over McNeese State Monday night.

Gervin helped the Roadrunners to a 27-23 halftime lead with four slam-dunks, and the Birds held the nation's fourth leading scorer, Joe Dumars of McNeese to just eight.

UTSA won its eighth straight game to raise its season record to 15-6. McNeese fell to 11-12.

Joe Dumars snagged 28 points in the second half for McNeese.

Cavazos led the victorious Javelinas with 18 points, hitting nine of 12 attempts from the field. David Stearns was leading scorer for Howard Payne with 15.

Texas A&I is 4-8 in LSC action and 7-18 overall. Howard Payne is winless after 12 conference games and 5-18 for the season.

SHS victorious in OT

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Yommy Sangodeyi scored 27 points to help Sam Houston State pull out a 97-95 cliffhanger win over the Angelo State Rams in overtime play Monday night.

The Rams had doubled that amount, pouring in 18 points to force the overtime.

Texaco seeks completion of Getty Oil Co. buyout

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texaco Inc. has taken control of Getty Oil Co. and is moving toward completion of the $10.1 billion buyout that ranks as the largest in history.

Texaco bought 56 percent of Getty's stock Monday just hours after the Federal Trade Commission gave it tentative antitrust clearance.

Shortly after the FTC acted, Texaco, the nation's third largest oil company, bought 44.4 million shares of Getty's stock for $5.68 billion. That gave it control of 56 percent of Getty, the nation's 14th largest oil company.

Texaco paid $4.49 billion for the 35.1 million Getty shares that stockholders had submitted for payment under Texaco's offer of $128 a share. Texaco then bought for $128 apiece the 9.3 million shares held by the J. Paul Getty Museum under terms of a contract signed in early January.

Texaco's next step is to buy the 31.8 million shares held by the Sarah C. Getty Trust for $128 apiece, or $4.07 billion, under a contract already signed.

That would leave only the nearly 3 million publicly held Getty shares that had not been submitted as of Monday for payment under the tender offer. Texaco eventually will buy those shares, too.

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Ford Motor Co. earned a company record $1.87 billion in 1983, rebounding from a sluggish 1982 when it lost $657.8 million.

Sales for the year rose 19.7 percent to $44.4 billion.

Chairman Philip Caldwell announced the results Monday and declared that Ford, after three straight years of losses, had become "profitable at home and abroad."

"Many more good years lie ahead," Caldwell said. But he cautioned that high interest rates for car buyers could jeopardize the auto industry's financial recovery.

The Ford earnings for 1983 broke a company record of $1.67 billion set in 1977. The 1983 total came to $10.29 a share excluding a three-for-two stock split last October. Figuring in the split, the earnings per share was $9.64.

Federal Trade Commission Chairman James Miller III, right announces the tentative approval by the FTC of a merger, allowing Texaco to buy Getty Oil Co., by a vote of 4-1. Commissioner Michael Pertachuk, left, was the dissenting vote. FTC director of the Bureau of Competition, Timothy Muris, center, defends the commission's decision.

Gulf Corp. fights off investors

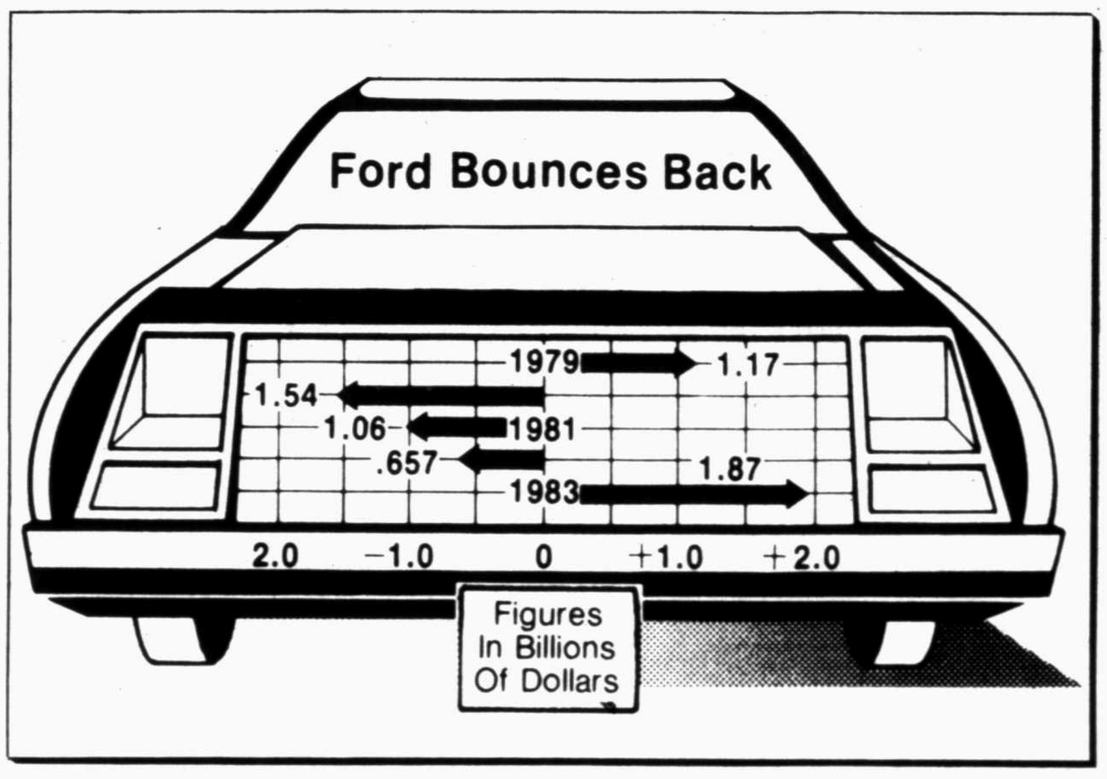

NEW YORK (AP) — Gulf Corp. has taken the offensive against an investor group that is thinking of waging a battle for control of Gulf and possibly dismantling it.

The New York Times, quoting Wall Street sources, reported today that Atlantic Richfield Co. has made an offer to buy Gulf for up to $70 a share, or $11.6 billion. The Times said it was unable to confirm the offer.

On Monday, Gulf asked a federal judge in Wilmington, Del., for an order barring the investor group from buying Gulf stock and to force the group to sell the 21 million shares it already owns. The group is led by T. Boone Pickens Jr., the chairman of Mesa Petroleum Co. who has frequently criticized Gulf management.

U.S. District Judge Walter K. Stapleton heard brief arguments by attorneys for the two sides and said he would hold a private conference with them this afternoon. Stapleton gave no indication of how or when he would rule on Gulf's request.

Gulf also confirmed it had beefed up its credit lines to $6 billion, and that it might use the money to make a public tender offer for its own stock. Such an offer would be a last-ditch effort to foil the Pickens group assault.

Ford Motor Co. reports that it had record earnings of $1.87 billion in 1983, bringing the year's profits of the recovered auto industry to a new summit which may reach $6 billion.

Retail sales get strong first of year increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales by U.S. retailers rose a strong 2.2 percent in January, the biggest increase since May, the Commerce Department reported today.

Total sales, spurred by good showings for cars and food, reached a one-month record of $104.4 billion. The 2.2 percent rise from December sales was the biggest since a 3.1 percent jump in May 1983. Then the nation's economic recovery was being spurred by a strong surge in consumer buying.

In recent months, however, the surge in consumer spending has slowed somewhat, including a tiny 0.1 percent December increase in retail sales. That figure surprised a lot of analysts who were expecting the December selling season to be at a record pace.

However, the strong surge in January's sales lends support to the theory that December sales were depressed by unusually bad weather.

Automotive sales continued strong, rising 1.2 percent from December and were 33.3 percent ahead of the level of January 1983. The $21.3 billion in sales was a new record for a single month.

Food sales were up 2.7 percent from December with some of that rise attributed to the fact that prices also went up in January.

The January 2.2 percent jump in total sales compared to a 1.1 percent increase in November and a 1.7 percent hike in October.

Other details of the January report:

—Sales of durable goods, those expected to last three or more years, were up a slight 0.1 percent to a January total of $35 billion.

—Sales of non-durable goods rose a hefty 3.3 percent in January to a total of $69.4 billion. It was the largest monthly increase since May 1975 and followed a 1 percent rise in December, when, the report said, "unusually bad weather had a negative influence on sales."

—Sales of nondurable items which were particularly strong included a 6.8 percent increase for drug stores, a 3.2 percent jump for restaurants and bars and a 3.5 percent hike for grocery stores.

Survey says housing prices dropped compared to third quarter in 26 cities

WASHINGTON (AP) — The median price of previously owned houses skyrocketed in New York and Atlanta in 1983, but in 17 of 30 big cities price increases stayed below 1983's 3.8 percent inflation rate, according to a survey.

The survey compared prices for the last five quarters.

During the final quarter of 1983, the median prices dropped when compared with the third quarter prices in 26 of the 30 cities surveyed by the California and National Associations of Realtors.

Only New York, Oklahoma City and Detroit showed increases from the third to fourth quarter. The median price remained the same in Minneapolis-St. Paul.

Oklahoma City and New York are the only two metropolitan areas surveyed that have shown increases in all of the last five quarters.

No city has shown a decline in all of the past five quarters.

In the New York metropolitan area, which includes Long Island and Newark, half the resale houses cost $94,400 or more at the end of 1983. Half the houses cost less than $76,500 the last quarter of 1982. That's a 23.4 percent increase.

Half of the homes sold for less and half for more than a median price.

Atlanta was also near the top of the list of cities with big jumps in the cost of resale homes. The fourth quarter median in 1983 was $65,800, compared to $55,500 a year ago. The increase was 18.6 percent.

In four California cities, San Jose, Los Angeles, San Francisco and San Diego, homes costing more than $100,000 are the norm or close to it.

San Fransisco remains the most expensive place to buy an existing house.

Market showing no signs of 'shaking off jitters'

By The Associated Press

The stock market is showing no sign of shaking off the jitters that have pushed the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials to its lowest level in 10 months.

On Monday, the Dow Jones industrials lost 10.57 points in a light trading session. That left the index at 1,150.13, the lowest since April 1983.

Since the slump on the New York Stock Exchange began Jan. 6, the Dow Jones industrials have given up more than 136 points, a reduction of nearly 11 percent.

The market has been shaken by the kind of comments made Monday by Philip Caldwell, the chairman of Ford Motor Co.

In Dearborn, Mich., Caldwell cautioned that high interest rates — which he blamed on the government's big budget deficits — could jeopardize his industry's recovery. Caldwell's comments came as Ford announced that it had earned a company record $1.87 billion in 1983.

Caldwell called on the government to slash its budget deficits by cutting defense spending. He suggested imposing on foreign nations, notably Japan, a "user charge" for defense and by working "something out with the Russians" on arms control.

Ford also announced that its earnings for the fourth quarter of 1983 were $781 million, compared with a loss of $236 million in the year-earlier quarter.

In other economic developments:

—A federal judge in Wilmington, Del., heard arguments from Gulf Corp. for an order to bar an investor group, led by Mesa Petroleum Co. chairman T. Boone Pickens Jr., from buying Gulf stock and to force the group to sell the 21 million shares it already owns. The judge said he would confer with both sides today but gave no indication when he might rule on the motions by Gulf, aimed at heading off a possible takeover bid by the investor group.

—Texaco Inc. bought 56 percent of Getty Oil Co.'s stock just hours after receiving an antitrust clearance from the Federal Trade Commisssion. The FTC's approval was tentative and was conditioned on Texaco selling certain of Getty's assets.

Sniffing of glue, acrylic problem that still persists

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

Acrylic and glue sniffing.

Misled kids picked up the practice in the late '50s and '60s. It gave them a "high."

And a low — inflicting damage to nerves and organs.

The fad passed, but the problem has not gone away.

Nor have the potential dangers to adolescent bodies.

"We make quite a few arrests for the sniffing of acrylics," said Lt. Ron Aaron of the juvenile division of Midland Police Department. "It's not just glue, but some of your clear paints and laquers."

The statistics on arrests on the charge are topsy-turvy, streaky, symptoms of a problem that doesn't always come to the forefront. In 1982, 17 juveniles between the ages of 10 and 16 were picked up in Midland on acrylics intoxication charges. In 1983, only four were arrested.

The problem in Midland, it seemed, virtually had vanished.

Then came January of this year. Six juveniles were arrested for acrylic sniffing — a figure in a 31-day period alone that amounted to 150 percent of the 1983 total.

"I don't think we have an unusually large problem with it here in Midland — no larger than any other town this size," said Aaron, "but we probably handle only a fraction of those who are actual offenders...This type of offense is such that most of the school officials, if they see it, have the authority to go ahead and handle it as an internal matter and take action. Some of the administrators will notify us immediately and some others will handle it within the system of Midland Independent School District."

"In the early '60s we had some problems on the elementary and junior high level," noted Garland Chapman, assistant superintendent of administration for MISD and former principal. "It doesn't seem to be as big a problem now as it was then. All suspensions for the school district are channeled through my office and our records are not showing any student suspension in the first semester for that reason."

While acrylic and glue sniffing have been reported as a growing problem among Hispanic youth in Dallas, such is not the case at De Zavala Elementary School, said Principal Ricardo Torres.

"I really can't say I have a problem with the use of those things on campus during school time," he said, noting that hallways and bathrooms are checked periodically. "The physical environment we have here helps us monitor that type of thing."

Torres did note that he found a paint pencil — a smaller version of an aerosol spray can — on the floor. "One of the kids remarked that it was one of the 'in' things with some children — sniffing it. I immediately banned those things from the campus...We hope kids use those things for what they were intended, but if you get wind that they might be abused, you must take some action...The staff is working concertedly to speak with the kids about the abuse of those things."

Most of the arrests made by Midland Police have been in public places, as intoxication due to acrylic sniffing is difficult to conceal.

"Acrylic has such an odor to it, if you were in some public building you'd just about run everybody out of there," said Aaron.

It's dangerous and harmful to the body, and yet the sniffing of acrylics, glue and gasoline remains a problem.

Eyeing the eagle

Rewards in excess of $1,000 are being offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of those responsible for shooting this bald eagle — the national bird of America — shown here with federally licensed bird rehabilitators Midge and Woody Erskine of Midland. It was found on a ranch near Leakey and had been shot in the upper left leg sometime Saturday. The bird suffered a shattered bone that will be replaced at the Phoenix Bird Rehabilitation Center in Arlington, where it was flown Monday. Anyone with information on the shooting of the bird or any other endangered species is asked to call Midge Erskine at 694-8001.

Commissioners OK security system for Midland's library

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The Midland County Public Library is getting a security system. The Midland County Law Library may be getting staff librarians, and the Midland Centennial/Sesquicentennial Commission got a $10,000 pledge from Midland County in the Monday meeting of Midland County commissioners.

Commissioners awarded Checkpoint of the Southwest a $13,784 contract for installing a book and other materials security system in the library and rejected bids by 3M Center and Knogo.

"It (thievery from the library) is enough of a problem that we think the system will pay for itself in about two years," said County Librarian John Deats.

The system will consist of entrance and exit gates and a sensing screen to detect books and other library material which have not been properly checked out, Deats said.

"It's the kind of thing you wish you didn't have to have," he said. "You wish it was an ideal world."

John Hyde, president of the Midland County Bar Association, told the commissioners that "There is a need now for a librarian" in the law library.

"One of the problems is security," Hyde said. "There can be no (effective) security without a librarian being there." The law library is located in the basement of the county courthouse and is across the hallway from the Midland County Sheriff's Criminal Investigation Division.

Hyde requested that the commissioners spend law library funds to buy equipment, such as another table and additional chairs, in addition to books and updating inserts, and hire a librarian. The commissioners approved buying the table and chairs.

"That (law books) is the single biggest expense," said Commissioner Durward Wright.

Of the $31,690 in law library funds brought in mainly by civil filing fees, about $20,000 was spent in 1983 on books and updating materials and other funds were spent on remodeling the library and on a $200 a month to Frances Williams, librarian of the Common Law Library, for updating material in the county law library. Not enough is left over for salaried positions outside the $200 a month fee.

Hyde proposed that the county check into hiring senior citizens to staff the law library under the federally-funded Senior Texans Employment Program (STEP). Under that program, each of two people would work 20 hours a week. "Frankly," he said, "a full-time librarian would be a significant benefit." He said lawyers are "notorious about working after dark."

Hyde noted that an honor system works "pretty well" in the Howard County Law Library.

Commissioner Win Brown suggested a security system to prevent law library patrons from "walking out with books."

"I would hope a law librarian would solve that," Hyde said.

The commissioners considered a proposal that a lawyer volunteer to work in the library.

Odessa cable company still stalled

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Ector County Commissioners were no help to a satellite cable TV company stalled by a homeowner refusing to let workmen run a cable through the property.

Jim Stewart, president of Plebeian Cable TV, asked commissioners Monday for permission to raise a cable across Bill Jones' land without Jones' agreement.

Stewart says he must raise the cable on Jones' property to service 23 families in a trailer park behind the Jones land. But Jones says the cable would block the front of a barn he uses in his roofing business.

"I need somebody's permission because he keeps running us off his land," said Stewart. He feels he has the right to use the utility easement on the property.

"Cable is not a utility," said Jimmy Jones, son of the homeowner. Cable companies' rights to the easements below electric poles are vague, with the electric company granting rights to the poles, but not the easements which run through private property. In most cases, landowners allow the work to get the cable strung.

But the Jones' say they own the property on both sides of the easement and insist that the cable will block off the front of the barn should they want to move tall equipment in or out.

Even Stewart is unsure what type of easement is involved. "I don't know whose easement it is," he said, "That's what I'm trying to find out."

Commissioners did not tell him. County Judge Jan Fisher said "It doesn't look to me like we have the authority at this point."

Until it is decided who has authority over the easement, the struggle will continue.

Ector County parks department head quits

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Three top-level positions were dropped from the Ector County Parks and Recreation Department Monday, with the director resigning amid allegations of personnel irregularities.

County commissioners ended a three-hour executive session by approving Director Roland Hancock's recommendation that his position be eliminated. The commissioners also eliminated the parks supervisor and recreation supervisor jobs and added an acting director's position, parks and recreations supervisor and secretary.

The parks board had met last week to field employee questions and get input on the effect of the budget cuts from citizens, said board chairman Kelly Godwin. Six members of the seven-member board went before the court Monday and made recommendations on restructuring. The court took action after meeting with the park board during the executive session.

"It wasn't working the way it was structured," said County Judge Jan Fisher. Godwin had denied that any irregularities were found in the department, but Ms. Fisher said "I differ with him on that and I had the same information." She declined to elaborate on the specific irregularities.

Hancock said he resigned because of budget cuts which he felt left the department too "top heavy," said a letter he offered to commissioners. When asked why Hancock had not been cut during regular budget cuts, Commissioner Julian Pressly said "He didn't resign then." But Hancock did not come forward until the alleged irregularities within his department were publicized.

"I think there are some problems within the department," said Ms. Fisher. While three spots were dropped and three added, additional savings will come because of the difference in levels of positions.

The department had already been cut $500,000 and 13 positions in November as the commissioners cut back to keep the county from deficit spending and replenish dwindling reserve funds. Two more positions and $31,000 were dropped after the rollback was approved by voters Jan. 21.

The city and county have been working on an agreement that would transfer the parks department to the city's management, but this agreement is still in the planning stages.

Despite the moves and allegations of improprieties in the parks department, Godwin said "we found no irregularities whatsoever" after giving the board's recommendations to commissioners. "Our reccomendations do not involve any terminations, they do involve some reorganization." Both reorganization and termination were approved by commissioners.

"The budget cuts brought it to a head," said Godwin. The changes made included absorbing the recreation department under the parks department, with only Supervisor Becky Kucera retained. She and Parks Supervisor Doug Kupper will likely be among those considered for the acting director and parks and recreation supervisor spots, after being cut from their present positions.

Commissioner Bryan Henderson voted against hiring the acting director, favoring eliminating the position until the next budget was considered in October. Hancock said he had planned to retire in 1986.

RHONDA RIGENHAGEN

Her husband's a slob, but she loves him anyway

They could make a great movie about my husband. "The Slob."

Similar to its predecessor, "The Blob," it could be an action-packed horror film about a pile of dirty laundry, miscellaneous tools and parts, used tissues, discarded mail and unwashed dishes that consume an entire house.

My spouse will ignore the wastebasket beside him and walk into the next room to put an empty beer can on the table.

He tosses his dirty clothes on the floor outside the closet wherein lies the dirty-clothes basket. When he washes a load of laundry he leaves it in the dryer until he runs out of clean clothes. Then each morning he'll pull out a wrinkled shirt, jeans and socks to wear to work.

He accusingly asks me why a particular tool isn't in the tool box. Inevitably it has been left wherever he last used it — generally in the path from the door to my car.

He has converted the bed of his pickup into a dumpster. In the cab he keeps only the essentials: two telephone directories, napkins, dozens of maps, three flashlights, radio, scanner, CB, two-way radio, all kinds of photographic equipment, dishes and silverware, leftovers from fast-foot meals, paper cups, sunglasses, old newspapers, junk mail, insurance forms, you-name-it.

And he leaves leftovers in the refrigerator until even the dog won't touch them.

Even after I finally trained him to rinse off dishes rather than let them turn green and fuzzy, he stacks them on the counter directly above the dishwasher.

Neatness is not our only area of contention. At times it seems as if we're totally incompatible. It goes much deeper than a northerner marrying a native Rankinite.

—He listens to records by groups named "Dead Kennedys," "Toxic Shock," and "Jerry's Kids." I own every Barry Manilow album recorded, interspersed with John Denver, Helen Reddy and Barbra Streisand.

—My favorite trilogy is Tolkien's "Lord of the Rings." His is "Totally Gross Jokes."

—I graduated from college summa cum laude. He got kicked out.

—I love dogs; he likes cats. I love kids; he likes cats.

—My idea of a good time is rereading one of the classics; his is hunting rabbits with a sub-machine gun.

—I like to spend a cold Sunday afternoon wrapped in an old bathrobe, with a cup of hot chocolate, watching Humphrey Bogart. He'll grab a six-pack and turn on the Orange Bowl.

—He stays up to watch David Letterman and then sleeps until noon. I generally yawn through the first few minutes of the 10 o'clock news, but I'm bright and cheerful at 7:30 a.m.

—Even though I have little fashion sense, I do try to make sure my socks match my slacks. He wears a pink "Sex Pistols" T-shirt with camouflage pants.

—He's laid-back and knows how to have a good time. I'm a workaholic who'll have an ulcer before I'm 25.

Even our occupations display our polarity. I'm a writer. He spells work with an "e" and doesn't know the meaning of many four-syllable words. He's a photographer. I don't know an f-stop from an ASA.

Sometimes I wonder if we'll make it to our first anniversary. How can I live with this type of person?

Actually, it's not hard. He gives me backrubs every night and never says "I told you so."

When subfreezing weather hit and we had water off and on (mostly off) for two weeks, he risked frostbite to thaw the pipes so that I might shower.

He spoils me constantly and pampers me when I'm sick. He wordlessly put up with my family when they came for a week-long visit.

He suffers through all my little moods and does great Donald Duck impersonations when I'm blue.

Best of all, he does most of the cooking and doesn't complain that my culinary talents are limited to spaghetti and Hamburger Helper.

So I guess I can close my eyes to soggy towels fermenting on the bathroom floor and muddy workboots on the kitchen table.

Besides, I could never leave him. I can't find the door.

Davidson running for re-election to council

From Staff Reports

Steve Davidson

Steve Davidson, a member of Midland City Council since 1980, Monday announced his intentions of seeking re-election to Place 4 in the April 7 election.

"I believe it is important for the public to know that there...is an agenda...which encompasses not only Midland's present needs, but its future needs as well," Davidson read from a prepared text during a news conference. "The challenge will be to meet those objectives within the framework of a sensible fiscal and tax policy.

"I believe that will require an individual who has the experience, who has a working knowledge of the City of Midland and who has a desire to continue his service to all the citizens of Midland to accomplish those goals."

Davidson noted that since he became a councilman, "our city has experienced a 'boom' of unprecedented proportions, believable only to those of us who were here, regardless of our vantage point. It was a boom which strained not only the public sector but also the private sector. We are now evolving into a more manageable and reasonable growth rate which I believe will allow the council the opportunity to pursue and begin to accomplish important long term objectives."

Those priorities, said Davidson, were established by the council-staff Retreat in September, 1983. They were, he said:

— Ensuring an adequate water supply by continued development of the Paul Davis Fields and the T-Bar Ranch in Winkler County, as well as continued good relations with the Colorado Water Municipal Water District.

— Continued street improvements. "Our streets were just not simply built to handle the traffic we have today," he said, citing as an example Midkiff — designed, he said, to handle 1,000 cars a day but which in reality handles 25,000. "It's an ongoing problem...We feel like we're staying on top of the construction work."

— Development of the city's master plan.

— Air Park Development.

Davidson said the council has had a "very positive attitude" toward diversifying Midland industry, but noted that "we're going to have to build on our own internal strengths."

The incumbent also expressed his belief that Midland City Council has "been a very positive force" in Odessa-Midland relations. However, he said he thought "individual contacts have a little more meaning to them" than joint council meetings.

Odessa truck driver William LeRoy Allen, 24, escaped with minor injuries when his rig overturned after the left front tire blew out about 3:30 p.m. Monday. The accident occurred on the Garden City Highway, 18 miles east of town. Allen suffered cuts and bruises and was released following emergency treatment at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Commissioners OK security system for county library

"My feeling is that an attorney should not practice law out of the law library," Hyde said. He said that time is supposed to be devoted to library work and not to practicing law.

The commissioners hashed around a proposal to prohibit smoking in the law library.

"Some lawyers think it (smoking) is part of their living," said County Judge Bill Ahders.

"They can't concentrate unless they're smoking," said Commissioner Durward Wright.

"I think we ought to respect the right of both sides," Ahders said of smokers and non-smokers.

In other business, the commissioners pledged $10,000 this year to the Midland Centennial/Sesquicentennial Commission for celebrating Midland County's Centennial in 1985 and Texas' 150th celebration in 1986.

The commissioners approved a $4,993 contract for a photocopying machine for District Attorney Vern Martin.

In addition, Martin said he would prefer to pay nurses $125 for conducting examination of rape victims until the pool of examinating nurses could be increased and then would drop the fee to $100. The current fee is $75.

"A lot of those examinations don't always result in prosecution," Martin said.

Welch's son announces candidacy for commissioner

From Staff Reports

Scott Welch

"County government is the people's business and should be run in a conservative and businesslike manner," says Scott Welch, who recently announced his candidacy for Midland County commissioner.

Welch, 30, is challenging the incumbent, C. DeWayne Davis, 64, for the Democratic Party nomination to the post in the May 5 primary elections. Davis, a retired schoolteacher, has been commissioner since 1981. Winner of the primary should be a shoo-in in the Nov. 6 general election, since there is no Republican opposition.

"If elected, I will strive to maintain open communication with all residents of the county," Welch says, "but Precinct 3 in particular, regarding their needs from county government and (will) work hard to ensure them full value from their county tax dollars."

Precinct 3 takes in much of east, southeast and south Midland and central and southeast Midland County.

Welch is a self-employed electrical line repair contractor. He and his wife, the former Vicky Calhoun, have three children. He is a native of Midland and attended Midland public schools and Howard College in Big Spring. Welch is the son of Charlie Welch, who served as commissioner of Precinct 2 for 14 years through 1982.

Welch said his background in farming and ranching, banking and real estate qualifies him to serve the citizens of Midland County.

"If elected, I will work hard to serve the entire community honestly and fairly."

Informant helps identify suspect

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A Crime Stoppers informant aided police in identifying the suspect in the Jan. 16 abduction of three women from the Shampoux Lounge in Odessa.

Charges of aggravated kidnapping were filed against Dennis Lee Johnson, 26, of Odessa Saturday night. Police have not arrested Johnson and are unsure of his whereabouts.

After the incident was shown on the Crime Stoppers "Crime of the Week," an informant furnished information leading to the name. Det. Paul Shepherd obtained Johnson's picture and showed the women a line-up, from which they made a positive identification.

The three women were forced at gunpoint from the lounge parking lot to drive around Odessa and then to their apartment. A boyfriend happened on the scene and was also kidnapped.

When the group left the apartment, one woman escaped. The boyfriend was let out near the city limits and the two women soon afterward near a downtown business. The car was found abandoned at the lounge.

Glue sniffing persistent problem

One 16-year-old Midland boy, noted Aaron, has been arrested 13 times on acrylic-related offenses, and on two of those occasions he was involved in other crimes.

Aaron said a youth seldom winds up in a state reform school for abuse of acrylics, but could if that offense is related to other charges.

Paul Garrison, counselor with Teen Challenge, noted that abuse of acrylics also may be a problem with some adults.

"Through my experience, I've found that most glue sniffing is detected in young kids and old winos or drug addicts that can't afford to go out and buy anything else," he said.

Regardless of the age of the individual, serious bodily damage can result from abuse of such substances, according to medical researchers.

Brain damage, for example, could result from hypoxia — lack of oxygen.

"Some thing that kids inhale out of pressure vessels — even though it was an inert gas and not particularly harmful — would replace the oxygen and the oxygen in the blood," noted a Midland physician who asked not to be identified. "If it happened over any long period of time, damage due to hypoxia, or lack of oxygen, could result."

Medical texts note that abuse of gasoline, acrylic, glue or cleaning fluid may result in addiction, kidney and liver damage, nerve damage, bone marrow injury, and irreversible brain injury.

IRS forms at Federal Building

Internal Revenue Service Forms for the 1983 Income Tax Year are available in Room 101H of the Federal Building in Midland, according to Postmaster Bill Williams.

"Many people have waited in line at Post Office windows only to find that the Post Office does not issue Income Tax Forms," Williams said.

The Internal Revenue Service maintains a supply of these forms in the Federal Courthouse Building just east of the Main Post Office Building on Wall Avenue. The address for Income Tax Forms is 200 E. Wall Ave.

Parks department head resigns

Ector County is one of few in Texas that manages a park system. The 40-park, five-pool system is mostly inside Odessa city limits, prompting the move for the city to take control of the department.

The county took over the park system in 1936 when the city was experiencing financial problems. With the rollback forcing the county to cut back on services not required by state law, many — such as the parks — may be dropped by the county permanently.

Businessman announces city council candidacy

From Staff Reports

Bart Hotchkiss

Bart Hotchkiss, 40, businessman and chairman of the Midland Planning and Zoning Commission, has filed for Place 5 on the City Council.

That seat is held by Tom Sloan, who has said he won't seek re-election.

Hotchkiss said he believes he can serve all people of Midland by:

—Stimulating a more diversified economic base for the city.

—Re-establishing a unified fight against crime by all law enforcement agencies.

—Preparing a plan for Midland to accommodate future growth in an orderly manner.

—Establishing better coordination between City Council, Midland Independent School District trustees and the County Commission.

He said he had considered running for the council the past two years, but decided that was not the proper timing.

Hotchkiss is involved in oil and gas and real estate interests. He also owns Murrays Delicatessen in downtown Midland.

He is a member of the Chamber of Commerce, served on local PTA boards, artist chairman of Septemberfest, active member of Southwestern University Alumni Association and active in establishing Neighborhood Watch groups.

The candidate said he believes he is qualified for the position, citing his diversified business experience and his four years with the Planning and Zoning Commission.

DEAR ABBY

Valentine's Day advice: 'Be a sweetheart'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR READERS: Can you believe it's St. Valentine's Day again? Well, it is, so here's my updated annual message:

Be a sweetheart; call someone who's lonely and say, "I'm thinking of you." Or better yet, say, "I'm coming over to take you to lunch ... or to run some errands ... or to give you a ride." Visit someone in a nursing home or a prison. Say a prayer. Donate some blood. Adopt a pet. Will your eyes, your kidneys and all your usable organs to someone who can use them after you're gone. Quit smoking. Listen to your teen-ager. Write a fan letter. Tell your parents you think they're great. Pay your doctor. Spay your dog. Neuter your cat. Forgive an enemy. Register to vote. Hug a child. Listen to a bore. Send a donation to the Salvation Army, Care or to the charity of your choice.

If you love someone, tell him or her now; don't wait until next Valentine's Day to be a sweetheart again. — Love, ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago my mother died of a lingering illness. Now my father will soon remarry. The big problem: He is planning to take the diamond out of Mother's wedding ring and have it reset for his new wife.

My sister and I both voiced our objections for sentimental reasons. By the way, my mother promised the ring to my sister, but toward the end, she told Dad (in our presence) that if he needed to sell it for financial reasons it was OK with her.

I am shocked that Dad would actually give that diamond to another woman. He said it was just a piece of jewelry. When we told him that we disagreed with him on this point, he held to his position.

Abby, this woman my dad is marrying has been married before (she's a widow) and is not in need of any more jewelry. Is Dad wrong? Or are we? Whose ring is it? — MAD AT DAD

DEAR MAD: You say that your mother promised the ring to your sister unless your dad needed to sell it for financial reasons, so since your dad did not sell it, the ring "belongs" to your sister, which is what I would tell your dad were he to ask me.

However, he didn't ask me; you did. So my advice to you is to forget it unless you want to take your father to court for breaking a verbal contract, which I think is unthinkable.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 29-year-old married woman (no children) and do not have a job outside my home. My husband and I are very happy with our lives and we have an excellent relationship.

When I meet people for the first time, they usually ask, "And what do YOU do?"

I don't want to say, "I'm just a housewife." And I don't want to say, "I don't do anything," because actually I do a lot of cooking, cleaning, shopping, laundry and entertaining. I make a nice comfortable home for my husband and myself.

Abby, do you know of some witty comeback? — AT A LOSS FOR WORDS

DEAR AT: Don't say, "I'm just a housewife." Say proudly, "I hate to brag, but I'm a housewife."

Personal letter tells it like it is

From Wire Reports

At Valentine's Day most people are happy to take the easy way out. They settle for sending their loved ones store-bought greeting cards, complete with pre-printed messages that are supposed to convey their deepest feelings.

This year if you really want to tell someone "I love you," send a love letter written by your own hand, said Rosemary Guiley, author of "Lovelines," an illustrated survey of love and romantic expression throughout the ages (published by Facts on File, New York City).

"Love letters are a special kind of communication for people in love," Guiley said. "They are intimate and personal, and allow lovers to express deep feelings they may not have the courage to voice. They have the power to conjure up vivid images and feelings. And love letters can be read slowly and savored and reread as often as desired.

"In days gone by love letters were written equally by men and women," she continued. "It's a shame we've let this beautiful custom lapse."

As part of her campaign to ressurect the art of writing love letters, Guiley shared her tips for writing something "straight from the heart" this Valentine's Day:

— Decide what type of letter you want to send and what you want to say. Writing a love letter is serious business — it is not like dashing off a note to a relative or aquaintance. Love letters run the gamut from eloquent and passionate to light and humorous, even to sexy. Ask yourself first which type of letter will get the best reception from the person you love.

— Select the proper stationery and writing utensil. If you are after eloquence a rich, high-quality parchment, fountain pen and brown ink might work best. A touch of perfume or cologne to scent the paper might be nice. Whatever you do, never, never type a love letter.

— Set the right mood. Pick an unhurried time of day or night to write. Shut the door and take the phone off the hook. Your sentimental reverie should be uninterrupted. For women who want to write especially sexy letters Guiley advised wearing a racy nightgown to get in the proper mood.

— Be spontaneous. It may take a few false starts, but once you get going let the words, feelings and emotions flow. Never rework a draft — if you do it may come out sounding stilted.

— Research for inspiration. Libraries contain volumes of love letters written by men and women throughout history, from Napoleon to Josephine and all the way to former president Harry Truman to his wife Bess.

— Send it. Don't let second thoughts stop you from sending your letter. Sometimes words of heartfelt emotion and passion seem embarrasing once they cool, but don't worry.

"The written word is a wonderful medium for expressing love," Guiley said. "It has an intensity that lasts"

Charlotte and Ray Wall (pictured above) are living proof that Nutri-System does work. Between the two of them they have lost almost one hundred pounds. If you would like to know more about Nutri-Systems call them at 563-2071 or 697-3088. Nutri-Systems of Midland is located on the Andrews Highway in the Western Park Plaza.

Nutri-System guarantees you a new slimmer body

Imagine- a guaranteed "new you"! Impossible? Not with the Nutri-System program. If you do not lose all of the weight that their computer says you should in the length of time in which it says that you can lose ityou continue on the program at no extra cost to you.

Does all of this sound appealing? It did to Charlotte and Ray Wall. They heard about Nutri-System through a relative who had a friend who had lost weight and kept it off.

For Charlotte, who had tried many diets without much luck, this intriqued her. So, she and Ray went to Nutri-Systems to find out more. They spoke to Dale Langan. Mrs. Langan told them that before anything else they would have personal information including height, weight, sex, age, wrist size (to determine whether your frame is small, medium or large) and the amount of exercise that you receive each day fed into their computer system. The computer then uses that data to determine your ideal weight and how long it will take you to lose it. This is all part of the free consultation.

Before you begin the program you must have a doctor's release. This is not because the program is dangerous but rather to insure that there are no hidden problems such as kidney or liver ailments. If an ailment is found, Nutri-System will devise a specific diet to meet the needs of the dieter.

Once you have begun the program, you must visit the center at least once a week although they do prefer twice a week. When you go in they check your blood pressure and weight to make sure everything is going along as planned.

The program is set up so that you use Nutri-System foods. They are pre-packaged in individual servings. The program is based on three meals a day.

Besides the food, which is low calorie, they also hold half hour behavior education classes to change you eating habits to help you maintain the new you.

After Charlotte and Ray had spoken to Dale they decided to try the program. Charlotte's goal was to lose 62 pounds. After a relatively short period of time she is very close to achieving her goal. Ray wanted to lose 30 pounds. He has already lost that and is now on a one year maintanence program. Charlotte said that after she began losing weight it seemed like a dream. She ssys now "I still pinch myself and say is this real? Is this really me?". The best part is that it really is Charlotte.

When asked what made Nutri-System so successful, both Charlotte and Ray had many reasons. The main reason seemed to be the food. It is both delicious and convenient. There is such a variety of good food that you won't feel like you are dieting.

Another positive aspect of Nutri-Systems is it's flexibility. You can go out to dinner and to socialize and you won't destroy your whole program.

The most helpful reason is that there is no more hunger than what one would expect at meal time. Yet despite this lack of hunger, the weight comes off fast.

Charlotte and Ray are not Nutri-System's only success story. Many others have tried Nutr-System and ahve lost a considerable amount of weight.

If you would like to find out more stop in at 1028-H Andrews Highway (Western Park Plaza) for a free consultation. To have any questions answered call 697-3088 or 563-2071 in Midland or in Odessa call 368-4081.

As Charlotte put it- "the whole success is that the food is good, easy to prepare and you are never really hungary." Nutri-System helped Charlotte and Ray Wall and they can help you too.

Mickey Spillane has begun new book

Mickey Spillane

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Author Mickey Spillane, creator of tough-guy detective Mike Hammer, has a new book in the works, but admits he's "not too far into it."

"I can afford to be lazy now," says the 65-year-old Spillane, who has been busy making beer commercials while the new television series "Mickey Spillane's Mike Hammer" climbs in the ratings on CBS.

Spillane, who lives in Murrells Inlet along the South Carolina coast, attended ceremonies Monday at the Charleston Veterans Administration Hospital marking national Salute to Hospitalized Veterans Week.

He was asked if the new book is in the Mike Hammer "genre."

"You guys use that awful word," he quipped. "There's something about that word. It sounds indecent."

"It's a novel," he said. "It's a Mike Hammer novel and it's a very heavy one."

"I haven't put a title on it yet," said Spillane. "I'm usually into a book halfway when suddenly a title will pop out."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Navy Capt. Richard Truly, with two space shuttle rides into space under his belt, is about to get a boost in military rank.

President Reagan has approved selection of the 46-year-old Truly for promotion to the rank of commodore, the Navy announced Monday.

It was not clear whether the nomination has gone to the Senate for confirmation, which normally is routine. Congress is in recess this week.

Truly, commander of the new Navy Space Command at Dahlgren, Va., flew aboard the Columbia space shuttle on its second mission in November 1981 and went up again in the Challenger on the eighth space shuttle flight last August.

Royal pregnancy pushes Chernenko off front pages

LONDON (AP) —A British gynecologist predicts the birth of Princess Diana's second child in September will produce a baby-boom, with an extra 60,000 young wives becoming mothers-to-be, the Daily Express reported today.

"Princess Diana has to realize that she is a trend-setter and whatever she does a lot of young brides will emulate," Harold Francis of Liverpool, in northwest England, was quoted as saying. He reportedly urged Prince Charles, 35, and his 22-year-old wife to limit their family to two children.

Buckingham Palace's announcement Monday that Diana was pregnant again was greeted enthusiastically in Britain, pushing the selection of new Soviet leader Konstantin U. Chernenko off the front pages of three of London's five tabloids.

The royal couple's first child, Prince William, was born June 21, 1982.

The new baby, regardless of sex, will be third in the line of succession.

Singer Elton John has Valentine's Day wedding

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Rock star Elton John, wearing a straw hat and a lilac and white outfit, married a 30-year-old recording engineer today in a sunset ceremony on Valentine's Day, just four days after proposing to her.

The traditional Anglican service lasted 30 minutes and was broadcast on a loudspeaker outside the church for the benefit of fans gathered there, but much of it was drowned out by passing traffic.

The bride, Renata Blauel, has worked with John on some of his records in the past. Born in Munich, West Germany, she lives in London.

"I really do love Renata," John said before the wedding.

Asked if he was nervous, the 36-year-old British singer giggled and said, "Yes."

More than 500 people, many of them fans, waited outside St. Marks Church in the posh Sydney suburb of Darling Point for the wedding party. Some perched in trees and a nearby resident played an Elton John album at full blast.

John said earlier he had proposed to Ms. Blauel over dinner Friday night. She accepted and they decided to marry on Valentine's Day, a plan that nearly collapsed when the couple discovered the state of New South Wales requires a 30-day waiting period.

Lawyers representing John appealed Monday to the state for an exemption. State attorney general Paul Landa agreed, saying the waiting period was intended to give younger people time to be sure they were making the right decision.

Wedding guest Nick Ferrari said John's friends had been astonished by the unexpected news of the wedding.

"Back in England, we couldn't believe it for a day. We thought somebody had got their lines crossed," he said.

John, wearing a white frock coat, a striped lilac and white shirt and a straw hat with a lilac band, arrived 20 minutes before the wedding in a white limousine. He waved shyly to the crowd before entering the church.

Ms. Blauel arrived a few minutes later in a white Rolls Royce. Clad in a traditional white wedding dress, she was ushered into the church for the start of the service. Three bridesmaids in pink followed her up the aisle.

The couple emerged beaming after the service to be showered with rice as onlookers cheered, whistled and applauded.

Abouy 3,000 white roses and hundreds of orchids were flown in from New Zealand to decorate the church and the reception. Hotel officials said the bill for the flowers was $10,000.

Some of the fans outside the church were far from happy that John was ending his bachelor days.

"I think it's really terrible. I never thought I'd see him get married," said Julie Russell. "I've been a fan of his since 1969. He's a wonderful man."

Top dog to be selected

NEW YORK (AP) — Madison Square Garden has gone to the dogs, 2,647 of them, as entries from far and wide compete for top honors at the 108th annual Westminster Kennel Club dog show.

The two-day show, where champions retire after winning the "Best in Show" prize because there is no higher honor, concludes tonight when one canine contestant is awarded the coveted silver cup.

One hundred thirty eight breeds and varieties of dogs are represented, from Affenpinschers to Yorkshire Terriers.

A new Michael Jackson doll is displayed in front of Jackson's "Thriller" album at the annual International Toy Fair Monday in New York. Manufacturers unveiled 4,000 new items they hope will capture children's fancies and become the Cabbage Patch boom of 1984.

Toy makers unveil new playthings

NEW YORK (AP) — Riding the wave of a banner year in 1983, toy manufacturers are sifting through things that cry, fly, crawl and just plain sit there in search of this year's big moneymaker.

About 800 toy makers gathered Monday as 4,000 new items were unveiled at the start of the annual International Toy Fair.

But the toy fair is not all fun and games; at stake is success or failure in a $10.4 billion industry. And deep in the heart of every buyer is the hope that he'll stumble upon the item that will be this year's hula hoop or Cabbage Patch Kid.

Coleco Industries, which last year scored big with the cuddly, adoptable Cabbage Patch dolls, has decided to make more of a good thing. It's offering Cabbage Patch Preemies, little bald baby dolls with belly buttons and disposable diapers said to have been "born of an early frost in the Cabbage Patch."

There is also Koosas, the Cabbage Patch pet, brought "by Colonel Casey, the kindly old stork."

"Instant success!" said one delighted retail buyer as he milled with dozens of others in the Coleco showroom.

In other showrooms the story was much the same, as manufacturers offered "soft" dolls to tap into that lucrative market.

The Snuggle Bumms Family — with Papa Gently, Mama Brightly and their four little offspring, Cutely, Warmly, Fondly and Spritely — was Playskool's cuddly new offering. The little pastel creatures with groomable hair giggle when picked up and glow in the dark for a reassuring presence at bedtime.

Michael Jackson is a big draw, and kids can sing along and emulate the recording star with LJN Toys' $12 cordless mike that sends the voice out over any AM radio. It comes with a Jackson-like glove.

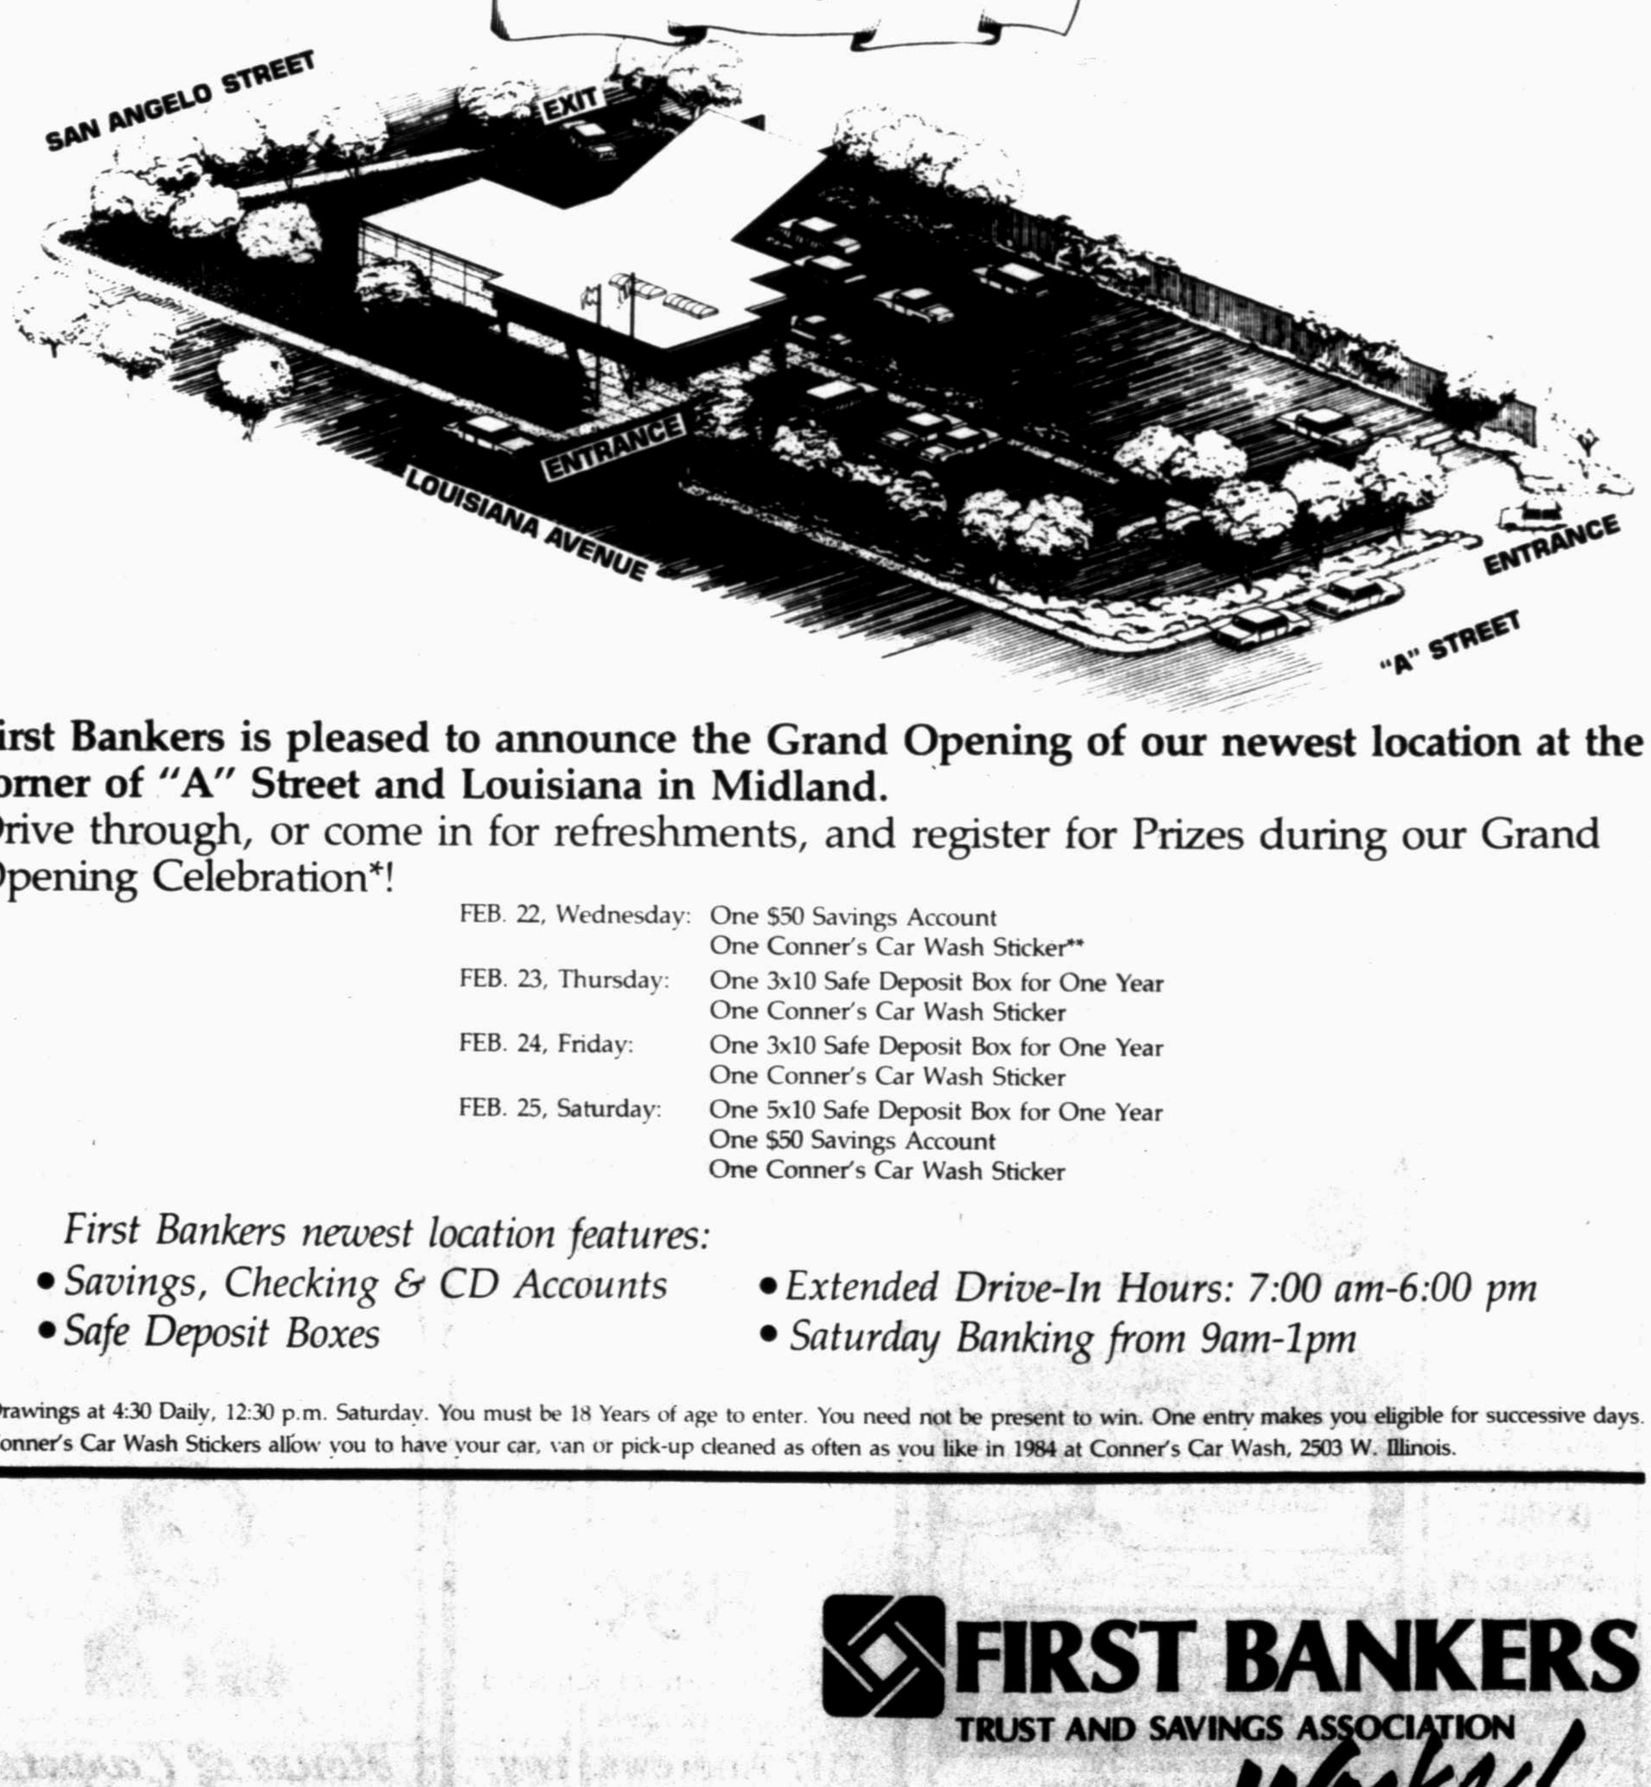

Or there is a $12 Michael Jackson doll, which stands 11½ inches high and, says LJN, is "a thriller of a doll."

Michael Jackson dolls and Cabbage Patch Kids may come and go, but one old hand seems to outlast them all. She is Barbie, the enduring teenage fashion queen, who turns a venerable 25 this year.

Barbie was introduced by Mattel Toys in 1959. She stayed current by adding an attentive boyfriend, a wardrobe that just won't quit and, now, "activewear" for her aerobics classes.

Chernenko will probably pursue conservative line

An Analysis

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL

MOSCOW (AP) — Unlike his predecessor, new Soviet leader Konstantin U. Chernenko has played no visible role in setting foreign policy. But his public comments suggest he will pursue a firmly conservative line in relations with the West and Moscow's allies.

In his first public message, Chernenko made clear Monday that Soviet defense capacity will be strengthened and that his government will not permit the West to gain military superiority.

Chernenko's predecessor, the late President Yuri V. Andropov, served as ambassador to Hungary, spent 15 years in government and party departments overseeing relations with the East bloc nations and then another 15 years as head of the KGB intelligence network.

By contrast, Chernenko's career focused on internal party affairs, especially ideology and propaganda.

Although he has been abroad, including trips to France and Denmark, Chernenko's career before ascending to the Politburo never included a government or party post in which he had a hand in setting or implementing foreign policy.

He traveled to Vienna, Austria for a U.S.-Soviet summit in 1979 with then-President Leonid I. Brezhnev, who was considered Chernenko's mentor. But U.S. officials said Chernenko played no major role in the discussions with President Jimmy Carter and acted as a sort of aide de camp to Brezhnev.

Still, there is evidence that Chernenko espouses the familiar, hard-line Kremlin stand toward foreign relations: a policy of toughness in dealings with the West and of enforcing rigid unity within the Soviet-dominated Warsaw Pact.

In Washington, the Reagan administration said it wanted to work with the Soviet leaders "in establishing a basis for greater mutual understanding and constructive cooperation."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Vice President George Bush, heading the U.S. delegation to Andropov's funeral today, would stress U.S. "commitment to peace and in particular to the search for mutually acceptable agreements" while in Moscow.

Chernenko had a 30-year alliance with Brezhnev, who forged Soviet policy through 18 years as general secretary of the Communist Party. Although he was a co-author of U.S.-Soviet detente, Brezhnev set the tone for the Kremlin's conservative policies and embarked on a massive arms buildup that made the Soviet Union the nuclear equal of the United States.

Brezhnev also took an iron-hand approach to East bloc relations, crushing the 1968 Czechoslovakian reforms and supporting the martial law crackdown on Poland's Solidarity labor movement.

In April, 1982, four months after Solidarity was crushed, Chernenko wrote that "opportunists in various countries have always rejected, in various forms, the need for...unity, upholding the concept of ideological and often organizational 'pluralism'" — the concept on which Solidarity was founded.

"With the same consistency," Chernenko said, "practice has shown that wherever 'pluralism' is flourishing, the party is gradually losing its combat ability."

Chernenko discussed "relations with the capitalist countries" in his speech Monday at the Central Committee session that named him general secretary of the Communist Party. He does not yet have the additional title of president, with which Brezhnev and Andropov consolidated their power.

The presidency will remain vacant until the Supreme Soviet — or parliament — meets next. Elections for the new body are scheduled for March 4.

Speaking last June at another Central Committee plenum, Chernenko exhibited an extreme conservative attitude on Western influence on Soviet daily life.

"Imperialism, first of all American imperialism, is mounting ever more massive attacks of unprecedented scope on our social system and on Marxist-Leninist ideology, is trying to poison the minds of Soviet people...All this requires renewing, enriching and making more relevant the content of ideological and education work...increasing the offensive nature of our entire propaganda."

Chernenko says he wants 'coexistence' with West

MOSCOW (AP) — Konstantin U. Chernenko, a pillar of the Kremlin's old guard, was named leader of the Soviet Union on Monday. He vowed in his first speech to maintain the country's military strength as a counter to "the hot heads of militant adventurists."

But the 72-year-old successor to the late Yuri V. Andropov said he supported the Soviet policy of seeking "peaceful coexistence" with the West.

Vice President George Bush, in Moscow for Andropov's funeral, was told he would be able to meet with Chernenko after today's services, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said.

Bush had said earlier that the Kremlin power shift could be a "turning point" in Soviet-American relations.

But some Washington officials expected little change, despite publication Sunday of a comment by Chernenko that "it is more important than ever before to multiply our efforts toward mutual understanding." The statement was written before Andropov's death.

In Washington, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said, "We invite the new leaders of the Soviet Union to work with us in establishing a basis for greater mutual understanding and constructive cooperation."

He said Bush "has not scheduled a meeting with the new general secretary, but we would welcome such a meeting."

A State Department statement issued in Washington said, "Mr. Chernenko's speech, on first reading, seems to reaffirm the basic lines of Soviet policy, so it is too soon to draw any conclusions about possible shifts in direction."

Chernenko, in his first speech as the new general secretary of the Communist Party, told the party's Central Committee, "The U.S.S.R. will cooperate in full measure with all states which are prepared to assist through practical deeds to lessening international tensions and creating an atmosphere of trust in the world."

U.S.-Soviet relations have deteriorated badly. The Soviets broke off two sets of arms reduction talks last fall over deployment of new NATO missiles in Europe. The United States has been urging resumption.

Chernenko, lifelong ally of the late President Leonid I. Brezhnev, is the oldest man ever to become general secretary of the Communist Party.

When Brezhnev died in November 1982, it was widely believed that Chernenko was Andropov's rival for the party leadership. After Andropov won it appeared that Chernenko's political future was in doubt, but he retained enough influence in the top party ranks to grasp the top party post.

Chernenko was chosen by his 11 fellow members of the ruling Politburo. Unanimous approval Monday by the Central Committee was announced by the official news media at 2 p.m. (6 a.m. EST), as heads of state and government leaders from around the world gathered to attend Andropov's funeral.

The funeral is today in Red Square.

Villagers speak of terror shot from American guns

TIBIYAT, Lebanon (AP) — This Druse village was one of the targets of last week's bombardment by the battleship New Jersey and residents spoke Monday of their terror as shells from the big 16-inch guns shattered their homes.

The incoming rounds "made a strange sound...a sound that would shake the whole village," said Nohad Abu Shahin, 30.

This Syrian-controlled area east of Beirut was struck by 250 shells from the New Jersey, the world's only active battleship, last Wednesday, blasting buildings and setting fire to the forests.

No specific casualty figures were given, but the official Syrian news agency said "dozens of civilians" were killed.

Wadad Swaid, a 51-year-old woman recovering from a leg wound, said, "We were hiding in the basement of the house. There were 25 of us, including children.

"Shells came closer and closer. Suddenly I felt I could not breathe. The house had collapsed on our heads."

Her nephew, Khaled Swaid, 33, took reporters to the broken remains of his aunt's home beside a crater 12 feet wide and four feet deep. The front wall was blown away, furniture was strewn about and there was a bloody mat on the floor.

"That is my brother's blood," he said. "We were together that night. You see this hole? We pulled 16 injured people through it."

He said when the bombardment began he left his aunt's house and ran to his home nearby.

"Not three minutes had passed when I left this house that a shell hit the front of it," he said. "I heard screams and looked at the house and saw the rubble all over.

"When I came back I found my brother Ali dead and the ceiling caved in. My uncle was injured, so was his wife."

Officials at the hospital in the town of Falougha said 16 members of the Swaid family were wounded and six were taken to Damascus, the Syrian capital, for further treatment. They said two of those sent to Damascus were children who needed psychological care.

At least two other houses in Tibiyat, which has a population of about 250, were hit by the battleship's shells.

In nearby Bmariam, a dozen houses were destroyed or heavily damaged.
