Soviet vote ends era

Congress sets transition to 'new system'

Deputies crowd around Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev Thursday after the Congress of People's Deputies accepted his plan to abolish a centrally controlled Soviet Union.

■ Interim government to usher in a new confederation of sovereign states.

N.Y. Times News Service

MOSCOW — Bowing to the reality of a collapsing union and an ultimatum from President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the all-Soviet Congress voted on Thursday to surrender power to a new government largely controlled by the republics.

The action served largely to confirm the collapse of central authority over the 15 constituent republics in the 16 days since the aborted hardline coup and the increasingly urgent need to restore at least a modicum of order before the centrifugal forces turned uncontrollable.

The major effect of the new central structures approved by the Congress of People's Deputies was to grant sweeping emergency powers for an undefined transitional period to a State Council composed of Gorbachev and leaders of the participating republics, backed by a largely subordinate legislature and a central Interrepublican Economic Committee to manage the economy.

In so doing, the congress effectively dissolved itself as the highest legislative authority in the Soviet Union and laid the foundation for a far looser union in which the republics would seem to predominate in deciding the policies and powers of a subordinate and reduced center. A major question remains the extent of Gorbachev's remaining power and influence. Although his powers seem sharply diminished, it is possible that he might emerge with important powers in the new State Council, particularly if the republican leaders pay more attention to their problems at home.

Under a rough timetable worked out on Thursday, the new two-house legislature will convene no later than Oct. 2, and will probably set up a commission to draft a new constitution. It is expected that the new constitution will provide for new elections to the presidency at some future date, at which time Gorba-

Events illustrate Gorbachev's resiliency

By Francis X. Clines
N.Y. Times News Service

■ News analysis

MOSCOW — The future of the Soviet nation under the new emergency law upending central Soviet power may be open to doubt, but Mikhail S. Gorbachev's resiliency as national leader is not.

He has once again displayed his talent in a crisis for adapting to the inevitable and making it seem like some personal inspiration. He remains the master of dire improvisation, the national champion of the Soviet art of free fall.

Gorbachev has learned the harsh lesson that this is an art that relates to political mastery and not necessarily effective governance. In a nation searching for continuity, the Soviet leader provides a singular role model of relentless survival.

By midmorning, as he cut off the microphones of 2,000 talkative deputies and scolded them almost parentally as failures who deserved to be sent home, it was clear that Gorbachev was fully back from coup captivity. He was showing his

Report: Officials 'squelched' BCCI probe

■ Rep. Charles E. Schumer stops short of making accusations of a conspiracy.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Federal officials ignored danger signs concerning the Bank of Credit and Commerce International and even "squelched" actions recommended by investigators, losing the chance to stop illicit activities much earlier, a congressional report released Thursday charges.

In July, regulators in the United States, Britain and other countries shut down operations of BCCI, now at the center of a global scandal involving alleged massive fraud, laundering of drug money and support of terrorists.

The report by the House Judiciary subcommittee on crime and criminal justice said U.S. officials knew about BCCI's activities as early as 1983, but overlooked a pattern of misconduct.

"There were people hot on the trail and they were told not to go ahead," Rep. Charles E. Schumer, a New York Democrat who is the subcommittee's chairman, said at a news conference.

"Now, the government seems to be doing a better job" of pursuing BCCI, Schumer said. "Unfortunately, much of the damage has been done."

Meanwhile, federal prosecutors announced in Tampa, Fla., that six former BCCI officials and a reputed cocaine kingpin have been indicted on charges of conspiring to launder millions in drug profits.

The indictment was unsealed hours

Town meeting sets counter-rally response to Klan's plan

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

"Community support" were buzzwords spoken with great passion at a Town Hall meeting in South Midland Thursday night.

More than 100 citizens packed the Midland Federation of Women's Clubs' building at 7 p.m. to reach a consensus on responding to the Ku Klux Klan's upcoming Midland rally.

■ Editorial/6A

An overwhelming majority of attendees at the meeting — who called on the entire Midland community to support them — voted in favor of staging a rally separate from the Klan's.

Klan members have a permit to gather at 4 p.m. Saturday at Windlands Park, although the actual rally is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Police Chief Richard Czech said the Klan is staging the event in order to recruit members.

Community leaders and citizens of all races were torn between taking a stand at the Klan rally or making a statement by staging their own rally at a separate location.

Several suggestions for a plan of action were presented by Alma Marshall, chairman of FOCUS (Federation of Citizens United to Serve), the umbrella organization of various civic, social and religious organizations.

One suggestion was to rally Midlanders at a 3 p.m. event at Centennial Plaza for prayers, songs and speeches.

"We are here tonight to devise a course of action. ... We wish to make it perfectly clear that we are unafraid, and that we deplore the concepts of hate and bigotry that an organization such as the Ku Klux Klan stands for," said the Rev. Bill Ashley, representing the National Association for the Advancement of Col-

Commissioners restructure Sheriff's Office manpower

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter was out of town on Thursday when the Commissioners' Court, without input from the sheriff, set the Sheriff's Office manpower strength and outlined the office hierarchy for the 1992 budget year.

The restructuring, which still allows the sheriff to select his officers and to place them where he will, eliminates some upper-echelon positions, eliminates a division and a captain, shifts manpower from the sheriff's investigative arm to the jails, cuts his authorized vehicle strength down to 40 from the current 64-vehicle level, and, all told, whittles down the sheriff's strength by two people — from 156 to 154. Of the 154 positions, 151 are to be paid through the county's general fund.

The Sheriff's Department, which is operating under a $4.8 million budget, employs about

Groups spurn White House call to yank pro-Thomas ad

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conservative groups Thursday spurned a personal appeal from White House Chief of Staff John Sununu to yank a pro-Clarence Thomas television ad attacking the ethics of three Democratic senators.

They said they would keep running the controversial commercial until "left-wing groups ... enter into a political cease-fire" over the Supreme Court nomination.

The White House said Sununu called L. Brent Bozell III of the Conservative Victory Committee on Wednesday evening to urge him to stop running the commercial, which assails Democratic Sens. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, Joseph Biden of Delaware and Alan Cranston of California.

"Unfortunately, the administration has no desire to confront the radical left," Bozell, the committee's executive director, and Floyd

SOVIET: Act confirms collapse of central authority

chev's political future would be decided.

Gorbachev, who had survived the coup only to stand on the brink of losing any viable levers of control, emerged in the interim order with considerably clipped powers and subordinate to the republics, less an executive president than a coordinating manager.

Yet the very fact of his survival, his experience in domestic and foreign affairs, and the familiar determination he displayed at the congress suggested that he could emerge with a significant role in the new council. Most republican leaders had problems enough at home, and Gorbachev was likely to be the major conduit for any foreign aid.

Whatever the reason, his obvious good humor at the congress testified to his satisfaction at what he described as a historic moment.

"By determining the principles and mechanisms for the transitional period, the congress lays the groundwork for a future union of sovereign states," he said before closing the session. "The congress rose to the occasion at this crucial and, without any exaggeration, historic moment in the development of our state."

For the moment, the arrangement was less a new power-sharing agreement than a desperate attempt to create an emergency control center that could combat the incipient chaos and ethnic strife loosed by the coup, and prevent the terminal collapse of the economy and the fragmentation of the military.

The law made no attempt to define the scope, functions, or procedures of the new State Council, leaving that to the republican leaders and Gorbachev to sort out. It was unclear how the republican leaders would be represented in the council and how often the council would meet, whether Gorbachev, more atuned to Moscow, might rule between meetings with the Russian leader, Boris N. Yeltsin, or would have to check his every action with representatives from the republics.

The congress did, however, pass a non-binding resolution outlying broad principles for the future, pledging to honor existing Soviet agreements with other states and charging the State Council with "insuring the legal continuity of power and management, guaranteeing a peaceful and orderly transition to a democratic civil society."

The State Council was to hold its first meeting today, when it was likely to appoint the Economic Committee — in effect an acting cabinet — and consider emergency economic programs. There were reports that Grigory A. Yavlinsky, the prime advocate of radical economic reform, was readying a preliminary economic plan.

The council was also expected to recognize the independence of the three Baltic states, an issue the congress avoided taking up for fear of prompting demands by other republics for similar recognition. The Baltics are the only states whose independence has received broad recognition abroad, and while most other republics have also proclaimed independence.

GORBACHEV: Soviet displays his talent in a crisis familiar small smiles of lawyerly confidence as he engaged in prodding, coaxing and demanding that the now toothless Congress of People's Deputies vote to leave the political arena and make room for the next act.

Once, twice and then once more, he monopolized and bent the congress's procedures to overrule rejection and order fresh votes on the critical issue of power transition until the result was the one he wanted. No one in the hall or in this nation seems his match in thrashing consensus from a balking audience.

By lunchtime, Gorbachev had his way. The radical emergency plan was law and he had successfully leaped from the old to the new, from the head of the Kremlin's ossified old central monolith, to a spot leading the new collective executive of republic leaders who are to try to design a better nation rooted in power for the republics and not for the Kremlin.

After a week devoted to shelving the union's constitution and most of its legislature, the 10 republic leaders who must share responsibility for the future with him in the new State Council seemed more than grateful to have Gorbachev.

Not only is he the executive panel's most reassuring voice for a watching world confused by the latest initiative brought forth to deal with the crisis, but he also brought his considerable powers of parliamentary domination to bear in the task of making the constitutional break with the past seem licit.

RESPONSE: Majority votes to stage separate rally

(From 1A)

ored People (NAACP).

"All that is needed for evil to prevail is that good people do nothing," said Ashley, reading from a prepared statement.

Ms. Marshall said, "There's nothing anybody can do to keep someone of color from going to Windlands Park. Maybe we can control what's going to happen at the park if we go there. We can stop someone ... say, 'brother, don't get involved.' If we don't go, we can't control anything that happens."

"If it were up to me, I would say: 'Stay home and don't give these people any dignity by showing up," said John McAfee, a school principal. "Physical or verbal, if we show up, there will be at least a verbal confrontation."

Some people decried the fact the Klan was allowed to come to Midland at all.

"Freedom of speech is everybody's right," Ms. Marshall said. "Whether it gets my blood pressure up to 210 or not, they have a right to hate."

Fred Poe, city manager, said, "The City Council and Chief Czech have done everything they could to discourage them from coming here. We talked them out of a permit once before."

Poe suggested people ignore the Klan. "I think people will drive by, but I don't think we will have anyone participating in their rally. The best thing we can do is not give them any attention."

"I'm afraid if we get the Klan and minorities in the same park, there will be a problem," Czech said. "They aren't here to cause problems, but they sure won't back away from them."

Gregg Owens, chairman of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, said, "If the only ones at the Klan rally are 30 or 40 ragamuffins and no one else is there, it will be the greatest failure they could have and the greatest victory Midland could have. They are simply trying to create a media event and enhance themselves."

One speaker asked, "Where is our mayor? Where are our city leaders on this? We want some answers."

Owens received some of the loudest applause of the evening when he pledged to stand shoulder-to-shoulder with the minority community "to show that Midland is united against people causing problems, that they don't reflect the attitude of Midland."

James Fuller, Midland schoolboard trustee, said attending the Klan rally would result in "falling into the very trap they have formulated."

Fuller said the minority community was "wasting time with the Klan" issue when the community should be debating other issues such as public education and community development in south and east Midland.

Fuller said an issue the minority community should rally behind is eliminating Lee High School's Rebel flag. "We should stand up for what we believe in. There are those persons in this community who gave out a signal that the flag is OK and prevailing attitudes about the flag are OK."

Isabel Jimenez, representing the Permian Basin Chapter of LULAC (League of United Latin American Citizens) agreed.

"The Anglo community made the Klan feel welcome after the Rebel flag issue," she said. "But we will add credence to the Klan if we go to their rally."

"There is only one parking lot at Windlands Park," Owens said. "There is one entrance in and out of that parking lot. Only one person has to foul up (to cause a confrontation)."

Several people, including Jessie Morris, challenged the Anglo community to stand with the minority community at the 3 p.m. rally to heal rifts that divided the community during the Rebel flag issue.

"Let's see if we are backed at the rally," Ms. Morris said. "Let that response determine what we do later. Maybe it's good the Klan is coming. This could be a start for us, for the whole community to stop being divided."

Some people said that if the Anglo community and city leaders did not support them, they would stand up for themselves at the Klan rally.

The Rev. Hadley Edwards then gave an impassioned plea for the "community to represent a united force, to stand for what is good and right ... without being afraid to turn the other cheek."

"We cannot let any outside force tear us apart," Edwards said, suggesting the minority community stay away from the Klan rally. "There are those who are going to go on their own accord. But you know the power of prayer," he said.

Ms. Marshall called for a vote. Attendees, who voted by standing up, stood up overwhelmingly for the suggestion to stage their own separate rally and not to attend the Klan rally.

"We will not have any formal delegation attend the Klan rally," Ms. Marshall said.

"Do not forsake us on this," she said, in a plea to the entire Midland community. "This is our last time to compromise. We will not go down this road again."

Brown, chairman of Citizens United, said in a statement.

"We didn't start the politicization and 'attack' campaigns now surrounding the nomination," they said, charging that liberal groups "viciously destroyed Judge (Robert) Bork in 1987" in his unsuccessful confirmation fight.

"Until the left agrees to discontinue all its efforts against Judge Thomas, our two-week campaign in the D.C. market will continue," the conservative activists said.

Vice President Dan Quayle said Thursday that the ad sponsors "got a lot of free publicity" because of the media coverage of the controversy.

"There's a way to be successful and a way to self-destruct," Quayle said. "That ad is not the right way to do it at all."

President Bush, who Wednesday called the ad offensive and counterproductive, invited Thomas to the White House for breakfast today.

Bozell said the two groups were spending $100,000 to run the ad locally.

The ad says Thomas, a black conservative who sits on a federal appeals court, "faces bitter opposition from liberal Democrats. ... How many of these liberal Democrats could themselves pass ethical scrutiny?"

A somber voice says Kennedy was "suspended from Harvard for cheating. Left the scene of the accident at Chappaquiddick where Mary Jo Kopechne died. And this year, Palm Beach."

Biden was "found guilty of plagiarism during his presidential campaign," it intones, and Cranston was "implicated in the Keating Five S&L scandal."

PROBE: U.S. overlooked misconduct, report says

after news that one of the defendants, former BCCI treasurer Seyed Ziauddin Ali Akbar, was arrested in France on Tuesday.

The indictment charges Akbar and five other BCCI officers, along with reputed Medellin cartel kingpin Gerardo "Don Chepe" Moncada, with conspiracy to use BCCI as a racketeering enterprise to launder $14 million.

Roert S. Mueller III, the head of the Justice Department's criminal division, continued to defend his agency's handling of the BCCI case, saying any delays in pursuing the allegations "have been remedied."

Treasury spokeswoman Claire Buchan said the report "has some inaccuracies." If the congressional investigators had interviewed more witnesses and examined more documents, "they might have had different conclusions," she said.

The Treasury Department includes the Internal Revenue Service and the U.S. Customs Service, which are named in the report.

While criticizing the government's handling of BCCI, Schumer stopped short of blaming specific officials or making accusations of a conspiracy. He didn't rule out the possibility, however, that influence-peddling and even bribery by BCCI could have played a role.

At a Senate subcommittee hearing last month, former U.S. Customs chief William von Raab said "lackadaisical" officials at the departments of Treasury and Justice — as well as prominent Washington power brokers — were responsible for the government's failure to pursue alleged criminal activity by BCCI.

Since then, legislators have been scrambling to determine how much government officials knew about BCCI's illicit activities.

"The government simply overlooked the repeated run-ins that it had with BCCI, its officials, customers and accounts," the congressional report says.

"On at least two occasions, high-ranking officials squelched actions recommended by rank-and-file investigators," it said.

MANPOWER: Court realigns Painter's department

(From 1A)

40 percent of the county's 400 workers. The 1991 budget, to be replaced by the 1992 budget on Oct. 1, represents about a fifth of the county's overall budget.

The sheriff's patrol unit will remain intact out of concern for the safety and well being of rural Midland County citizens, County Judge Charles W. "Bro" Seltzer said in outlining the sheriff's manpower chart.

The judge and commissioners expected criticism on their restructuring of the Sheriff's Office, they said.

Captain Richard Sexton, who heads the sheriff's Detention Division and who was the sheriff's only representative at Thursday's meeting, questioned the court for not consulting with the sheriff in restructuring his office.

"That was not really the proper thing to do," Sexton told Seltzer and Commissioners Durward Wright, Guy McCrary and Louisa Valencia. Commissioner Win Brown was not present at the session.

"I think that was unfair."

The judge and commissioners ought to have had a sit-down meeting with the sheriff, Sexton said, being careful not to admonish the court. "I'm not trying to become your adversary."

The sheriff, who had been in Austin in a governor's conference this week until Thursday night, said from his home late Thursday that he and his staff will "have to sit down and look at the damage that has been done" by the court in revising his office's manpower duties.

"This is certainly not unexpected, due to the (news) media reports that said my budget would be cut if I did not comply with the (Aug. 12 Commissioners') Court order" that set limitations on the sheriff's jurisdiction, Painter said.

He is contesting that order.

Even so, the sheriff said, "You can't argue with power, and the power is in the money" controlled by the Commissioners' Court. "All I can do is obey the law and sit down and look at our position and go from there."

Painter, 44, said he hopes the Commissioners' Court's decision "is not meant to cripple (the sheriff's law-enforcement effectiveness) and that it is done in the spirit of the budget, so to speak."

"It's up to me to get the job done with what they (the judge and the commissioners) give me. It's true that they set the positions" in the Sheriff's Office.

Painter said he would leave it "up to the people" as to why the Commissioners' Court waited until this year to restructure his office.

Seltzer, a 43-year-old lawyer who is in his first year as judge and chief county administrator, said that a 4-year-old state law backed — and demanded — the court's action.

The five-member Commissioners' Court, in wrapping up its budget study for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, was empowered by a 1987 statute to revise the Sheriff's Office.

The judge cited the 1987 law that requires, in a county with a population of more than 75,000 people, "county government shall classify all positions in its Sheriff's Department and shall specify the duties and prescribe the salary for each classification."

Also, the judge said the court's restructuring of the Sheriff's Department was "driven solely and only by numbers and economic necessity" and had nothing to do with the current controversy between the sheriff and the Commissioners' Court.

On Aug. 20, the sheriff filed a lawsuit against the Commissioners' Court, testing the validity and legality of the court's Aug. 12 order that virtually limited the sheriff's jurisdiction to Midland County.

The court, concerned with devising a reasonable budget by keeping costs down and concerned about liabilities in the sheriff's out-of-county and out-of-state investigations and drug-related sting operations, had ordered the sheriff and his deputies to stay within Midland County except under prescribed conditions or upon permission of the court.

Seltzer said Thursday that the office or department is not a separate governmental entity but a "sub-department of county government."

In explaining why the court took action on the sheriff's budget and manpower without his presence, Seltzer said "the sheriff has not chosen to communicate with or participate with the Commissioners' Court (in budget study) except through the press or through his attorney (Hal Upchurch of Monahans) for six weeks."

Upchurch represents the sheriff in the lawsuit. Vann Culp, a retired Texas district court judge, is representing the Commissioners' Court in that litigation.

However, earlier this summer, the sheriff did present his 1992 budgetary requests, which exceeded $5 million, to the Commissioners' Court.

On Thursday night, upon his return from Austin, Painter said he had not been invited to the budget studies after he first presented his requests for funds.

"The only way I know when the Sheriff's Office budget is coming up is when I'm told to be there."

Following Thursday's session, Sexton said that what is "upsetting is the fact that the court is dictating where those people (deputies) are going to be placed" in the sheriff's Administrative Section, which will have three people, including the sheriff, a secretary and a chief deputy (now, Jim Chancellor); the 46-member Operations Section, including a captain (now, Clayton McKinney), three lieutenants, 12 sergeants, three corporals, 19 deputies, five records clerks, and three secretaries; and the 103-member Jail Section, including a captain (now, Richard Sexton), two lieutenants, eight sergeants, six corporals, 55 deputies, 16 booking and bonding clerks, six nurses and paramedics, two secretaries and one maintenance person.

The total, as listed by the judge, includes one chief deputy, two captains, five lieutenants, 20 sergeants, 74 deputies, six secretaries, 16 booking and bonding clerks, five records clerks, six (jail) cooks, six nurses and paramedics, and the maintenance person.

The reorganization of the Sheriff's Office could have been done "on a more equitable basis," Sexton said.

Though the court did not alter the sheriff's patrol unit, the sheriff's more limited investigative arm will be hampered, Sexton said.

"There is going to be a compromise in that regard."

Earlier, Commissioner Guy McCrary said the Commissioners' Court had accomplished a "remarkable chore" in budget study by trimming budget requests throughout county government and by sculpting a "manageable tax increase" out of what could have been a dramatic tax increase.

The Commissioners' Court has yet to finalize Midland County's 1992 budget and to officially propose a new tax rate to help fund the budget.

Spending limits bar nuclear bomb plant cleanup, DOE says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Current spending limits don't permit the Energy Department to ask for all the money it needs to carry out its plan for cleaning up contaminated nuclear bomb factories, the department's cleanup chief said Thursday.

The government is trying to catch up on problems ignored for decades, when making weapons was a high priority and dealing with toxic refuse was a low one.

The department is in charge of 3,700 hazardous waste sites and 327 tanks holding high-level radioactive waste at federal facilities around the country.

Its new estimate for the next five years' worth of work, released Thursday, is $38 billion. But spending caps enacted into law as part of last year's budget deal between Congress and the administration limit budget requests to $10 billion less than that.

Estimates for the eventual total cost of cleanup range up to $200 billion.

If the department is given $28 billion for cleanup from 1993 to 1997, abiding by cleanup agreements with states and meeting federal environmental standards "would be very difficult," said Leo Duffy, director of the department's Office of Environmental Restoration and Waste Mangement.

However, Duffy stopped short of predicting his office wouldn't have enough money to meet its responsibilities. "That's an issue that we're going to be dealing with with OMB and Congress over the next nine months," he said.

Energy Department spending requests, like those of all executive branch agencies, go through the White House Office of Management and Budget, which decides how much money the administration will seek in its budget request.

"The real test will be when the doors close and they have to justify to OMB their funding request," said Rep. Dennis Eckart, D-Ohio, sponsor of legislation that would force the government to obey environmental laws.

Dealing with contaminated soil, ground and surface water and radioactive waste storage tanks should require $9.6 billion in 1993 through 1997.

Pact allows U.S. military in Kuwait

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 10-year defense agreement between the United States and Kuwait will increase the U.S. military presence in the Persian Gulf with periodic exercises, joint training and weapon stocks, a Pentagon spokesman said Thursday.

But the pact "does not in any way open the door for permanent U.S. military bases" in the region, Pete Williams said about the agreement expected to be signed later this month.

It's the first such Persian Gulf agreement completed in the post-war era.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney went to the region in May to open the way for the negotiations. The resulting upswing in military cooperation with the Arab nations is certain to heighten the U.S. military profile in the troubled area.

"At any given snapshot in time, there will be more U.S. forces in the region," Williams said.

He said the role would be different from that played in Central America, where U.S. forces in some nations rotate in and out but are present on a constant basis.

"It's not going to be a continuing military presence" in the Persian Gulf, Williams said.

There are many technical details to be worked out, such as the amount and placement of hardware stored in Kuwait and the timing for any exercises.

Williams said the pact gives the United States the authority to preposition stocks of weaponry and support material inside Kuwait, allows U.S. military personnel to conduct joint exercises with the Kuwaiti defense forces and permits the United States to obtain certain types of logistical support from Kuwait, such as the use of its ports by U.S. Navy ships.

He declined to put a cost figure on the pact, saying only that "some expenses" will be borne by the United States while others will be handled by Kuwait.

Similar agreements are being negotiated with Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, Oman, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates, Williams said.

Prospective juror calls Noriega human rights violator

AP Laserphoto

MIAMI (AP) — Jury selection began Thursday for former Panamanian dictator Manuel Noriega with one of the first potential jurors denouncing him as a human rights violator.

The juror's statement demonstrated the difficulties faced by both sides in finding an impartial jury as 96 candidates filed into the ornate central courtroom in the federal courthouse to begin Noriega's long-delayed drug and racketeering trial.

The defense, after reviewing 1,200 questionnaires sent out by the court, had predicted an uphill battle to seat an impartial jury. One juror illustrated that difficulty when the judge asked if anyone knew Noriega.

"I know him as a violation of human rights," said Lesbia Reyna, standing up and looking directly at the seated Noriega. But she admitted she did not know him personally.

Her husband, Dr. Roberto Reyna, was director of the Panamanian Human Rights Committee in Miami, he later told The Associated Press.

"I was very much involved in denouncing Mr. Noriega, so we were very surprised when she was called," he said. "I guess it was just coincidence."

Mrs. Reyna was one of more than 30 Hispanics on the 96-member panel from which the court will try to select a jury of 12, along with six alternates.

The questionnaire asked jurors such questions as whether they had ever heard of Noriega, George Bush, Ronald Reagan, Oliver North and other figures whose names will be raised at the trial. They also asked what television programs they watch, whether they can fly a plane and whether they ever visited Panama.

Reflecting Dade County's multi-ethnic society, about a quarter of the group are black, and the rest are non-Latin white. Slightly more than half are women.

U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler opened the selection process with a lecture reminding jurors of the ancient origins of the jury trial, and warned them to leave their prejudices behind.

"It is essential we select in this county — which I firmly believe we can do — a qualified jury in this case," he said.

Noriega, wearing four-star epaulets on each shoulder of his brown, short-sleeved military uniform, sat at the defense table, talking animatedly with his lawyers and poring over the juror list.

Behind him in the first row of the gallery sat his wife, Felicidad, and his three daughters, who were given special visas for the trial.

The judge has said he hoped to seat a jury in a few days.

But the defense said a review of 1,200 questionnaires sent to potential jurors did not bode well for seating an impartial jury.

Asked what they thought of Noriega, more than 60 percent were of the view "they should just hang him," defense attorney Frank Rubino said.

Prosecutors also agreed that jury selection might be tough.

The questionnaires issue "only makes me think we're going to have even more difficulty than I thought," said lead prosecutor Michael P. Sullivan.

Noriega is charged with turning Panama into a way station for Colombia's Medellin Cartel to process and ship drugs to the United States. He allegedly took at least $10 million in bribes to protect cartel operations as they shipped tons of cocaine by boat and plane.

Smith's lawyers clear release

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — William Kennedy Smith's attorneys said Thursday they wouldn't appeal, for now, the release of new pretrial witness statements sought by reporters.

Lead attorney Roy Black wrote Circuit Judge Mary Lupo, telling her defense attorneys "do not wish to unnecessarily delay the trial proceedings" with an appeal. The letter, dated Sept. 5, was obtained by The Associated Press.

Ms. Lupo ordered prosecutors Tuesday not to release any more information about allegations against Smith of past sexual crimes. However, she denied defense motions seeking restrictions on release of all depositions, sworn statements taken from people likely to be witnesses in Smith's trial.

Ms. Lupo told prosecutors to give Smith's attorneys 48 hours to ask an appellate court to block the depositions' release. But Black's letter Thursday said he decided not to appeal yet after researching the issue.

The defense decision clears the way for release of some 20 depositions requested by The Associated Press.

North Carolina has fewest plant inspectors

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina, where 25 people died this week in a factory fire, has just 27 workplace safety inspectors, giving it the bottom ranking in the country.

The state has 10 times more agriculture extension agents traveling the state helping farmers improve their harvests.

Workers advocates say the shortage of inspectors may have contributed to the 25 deaths at the Imperial Food Products plant in Hamlet on Tuesday.

Investigators are trying to determine whether locked exits at the chicken nugget factory trapped the workers inside the burning building. Witnesses said one door was blocked and others were locked. Workers said doors were locked to prevent pilferage.

Federal inspectors in Georgia found fire hazards in the cooking room at a Georgia poultry plant owned by the same company, and the cooking room was shut down.

A House committee will look into the accident next week, Rep. William D. Ford, D-Mich., said Thursday.

"From the initial information I have seen, this is a tragedy that should not have happened," said Ford, chairman of the House Committee on Education and Labor.

"There appears to have been a total lack of enforcement of even the most elementary safety standards," Ford said.

The plant was never inspected in its 11 years of operation. State officials say that's not unusual.

State Labor Commissioner John Brooks said his inspection staff is so small, it would take 65 years to visit every workplace in North Carolina.

A hiring freeze prevented Brooks from filling vacant positions. Gov. Jim Martin lifted that freeze Wednesday, but an earlier order from Martin that state agencies return money for replenishing the state's "rainy day" fund will take away the money available for new inspectors, Brooks said.

CIA's George faces charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iran-Contra prosecutors plan to ask a grand jury Friday to issue an indictment against retired CIA official Clair George that will accuse him of trying to cover up the CIA's role in the Iran-Contra scandal, three sources close the case said Thursday night.

If such an indictment is approved, it likely will say that George concealed his knowledge of the diversion of Iran arms sale profits to the Contra rebels of Nicaragua and hid Oliver North's secret contra aid network from Congress in October 1986, said the sources.

The three non-government sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said they could not say what sections of federal law would be alleged to have been violated.

Mary Belcher, a spokeswoman for the office of independent counsel Lawrence Walsh, the chief prosecutor, declined to comment. George's lawyer, Richard Hibey, could not be reached for comment. Several messages left for him were not immediately returned.

An indictment now of a former CIA official would come at a particularly difficult time for the agency and for the Bush administration.

Robert Gates, President Bush's nominee to be CIA director, will undergo confirmation hearings starting Sept. 16 before the Senate Intelligence Committee. He is expected to face tough questioning about his role in the Iran-Contra scandal. Gates served as the CIA's deputy director for intelligence in 1985 and was elevated to the No. 2 slot of deputy director in 1986.

Walsh's 4½-year criminal investigation began picking up speed this summer when Alan Fiers, the ex-chief of the CIA's Central American Task Force, pleaded guilty to two counts in the scandal and began cooperating with prosecutors.

George's legal troubles began when Fiers implicated him in the scandal in July.

Walsh has said that he is investigating a "cover-up in the CIA."

Jewish driver escapes indictment

NEW YORK (AP) — A grand jury voted Thursday not to indict the Jewish driver of a car that struck a black child and ignited last month's racial unrest in the Crown Heights section of Brooklyn, prosecutors said.

The vote came about an hour after the driver, 22-year-old Yosef Lifsh, appeared before the panel in state Supreme Court to give his account.

The panel, which had heard testimony for more than a week, was considering charges of criminally negligent homicide against Lifsh.

The panel found no criminal wrongdoing in Lifsh's actions, Brooklyn District Attorney Charles Hynes said at an afternoon news conference.

"I appeal to all residents of our great city to accept this grand jury's conclusions," Hynes said. "I implore all residents to refrain from senseless violence."

Lifsh's defense lawyer, Barry Slotnick, said: "He told the grand jury about a tragic accident that occurred. Without going into the facts of what he said, he just came here feeling the necessity to explain to the grand jury all the facts about the accident."

"He was very concerned," Slotnick said. "He obviously has remorse."

Seven-year-old Gavin Cato was killed and his cousin Angela, also 7, was injured in the Aug. 19 accident when the station wagon Lifsh was driving went out of control and mounted a sidewalk.

The victims were Guyanese immigrants and the accident set off days of violence between blacks and members of an ultra-Orthodox Hasidic Jewish sect, the Lubavitcher, which has its world headquarters in Crown Heights.

Swaggart lawyers complete the defense

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Lawyers for televangelist Jimmy Swaggart rested their defense Thursday in the trial of the $90 million lawsuit filed against Swaggart by rival minister Marvin Gorman.

Judge Julian Bailes rejected motions by attorneys for Swaggart and the other defendants to dismiss the case. The judge dismissed the jury until Monday, when closing arguments are expected.

Gorman has accused Swaggart and the other defendants connected with Swaggart's ministry of spreading false rumors about Gorman's sex life that led to the bankruptcy of the Gorman ministry. Swaggart's final witness testified Wednesday that Gorman's New Orleans-based ministry was failing even before the scandal.

Gorman attorney Hunter Lundy surprised many in the courtroom when he told the judge he would call no rebuttal witnesses.

"We just made the decision," Lundy told reporters later. "I didn't see any evidence that we needed to rebut."

Gorman said he was happy that the trial is nearing its end but would make no other comments.

Swaggart attorney Phillip Whitmann said he had hoped Gorman would take the stand again to refute allegations of sexual affairs he had with several women.

Whitmann said he would have asked Gorman "a lot of things he wouldn't want to answer."

When asked about Lundy's comment that the defense had not presented a case that needed rebuttal, Whitmann said: "I think they were in a different courtroom."

Barry Mabry, a New Orleans certified public accountant, concluded his testimony Thursday. Wednesday, he told the jury that Marvin Gorman Ministries was on the road to financial ruin long before July 1986.

Panel: Blood donors need more checks

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Red Cross should tighten screening of blood donors nationwide by using fingerprints or driver's licenses with pictures to confirm identities, a panel recommended.

The recommendations came from a committee of doctors the Red Cross appointed to investigate blood collection procedures at its Portland center after a Food and Drug Administration inspection found fault with the procedures.

The committee said Wednesday the local blood supply is safe but collection nationally could be improved to further prevent contamination with the microbes that cause AIDS and other diseases.

"There is no absolute guarantee that blood is safe," said Dr. Peter Kohler, who led the seven-member panel, but "it needs to be as safe as it can possibly be."

The Food and Drug Administration threatened in April to revoke the license of the Portland center after an inspection found violations of blood-handling procedures.

The FDA said the center released blood improperly tested for AIDS or hepatitis B. The agency later said no contaminated blood was used, which the panel confirmed.

"The committee took an in-depth look at our operations and has come up with some very reassuring conclusions for patients and donors in our region," said Dr. Frans Peetoom, director of the Red Cross Pacific Northwest Regional Blood Services center.

The report suggested the Red Cross nationally fingerprints or a driver's license that includes a photograph to identify donors.

Klan's rally is a challenge for Midland people

The Ku Klux Klan apparently has been working overtime in recent years on a major image change. Involving the rising within its ranks of a seemingly different type of leadership, that emphasis on seeking a "new look" has included a more calm, less radical public voice and the selection of more sophisticated, better educated regional and national leaders.

Likewise, the Klan has made a strong effort to align itself less with overt racism and more toward what many consider to be "mainstream America" philosophy.

The result has been a Klan that, among other things, calls for saving Americans' jobs and helping American farmers, both admirable goals. And in literature distributed here in advance of the rally planned Saturday, flyers localized the Klan's appeal to include phrases backing "our oil industries," opposing the drug menace, and getting prayer back in schools.

But it will take more than phrases attacking poverty, crime and drugs and supporting prayer and jobs to change the image of the Klan.

Americans — including those who live in Midland, Texas — shouldn't be, and hopefully are not being, fooled by public image campaigns aimed at pulling them over the line from rightful concern about today's economic and social problems into the realm of hate based on skin color.

Simply put: The Klan is the Klan is the Klan and that means racism and bigotry. Nothing more, nothing less.

While under the remarkable constitutional document that has made America the envy of the world members of the Klan have a right to stage their rally here, it's unfortunate they chose to do so. Whether they believe it or not, the Klan and its philosophical adherents are out of step with prevailing community attitudes.

Midland citizens traditionally have worked together on issues that divided them and while the compromise attained during last year's Rebel flag controversy probably did not completely satisfy anyone, it was at least a compromise with those on both sides eventually deciding the common good was more important than total victory for either side.

Even so, the Confederate flag issue apparently was "just what the doctor ordered" as far as the Klan was concerned and with the beginning of another school year and another high school football season members of the KKK say they will pay Midland a visit.

Midlanders, however, can send a strong message to the Klan by attending the counter rally scheduled for 3 p.m. at Centennial Plaza, thus showing that while our citizens may become divided on specific issues they are united on the more important overall issue of respect for their fellow man.

The important thing isn't the Ku Klux Klan rally, of course. It will be no more important than the citizens of Midland make it. What IS crucial is that cool heads prevail tomorrow and, if necessary, at tonight's Lee High football game.

For many, that will be more than difficult; it will be really challenging but we believe Midland people — of all races — will find the strength to meet that challenge with dignity.

To do otherwise will help no group except those who create racial strife and whose cause has always thrived on it.

Dingell strikes back at senator

WASHINGTON — Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., routinely bullies bureaucrats and House colleagues, but this summer he's got a U.S. senator in his cross-hairs.

His target is Sen. Richard Bryan, D-Nev., who had the temerity to advocate legislation stomping on Big John's sacred cow: the auto industry. Bryan's bill would require Detroit to build cars that get better gas mileage.

Anderson

Dingell went nuclear in this bitter tit-for-tat with a direct hit on Nevada. He is pushing legislation that will strip Nevada of having any voice in whether Yucca Mountain will serve as the nation's nuclear junk yard.

Congressional sources told our associate Jim Lynch that the bill is serving, in part, as a retaliatory strike, a way of serving notice that Dingell, a House superpower, will not tolerate missiles lobbed in the direction of Detroit.

Under Dingell's direction, his powerful Energy and Commerce staff drafted the Yucca Mountain legislation, then slipped it over to a subcommittee chaired by his friend and fellow auto-industry advocate, Rep. Philip Sharp, D-Ind. The Yucca legislation will get tacked on to a House energy bill.

Nevada's congressional delegation is still reeling from the attack, alleging that it's punitive and vindictive. Nevada legislators find it even more odious than a measure proposed earlier by Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La. The Dingell-backed bill takes the tough talk one step further by insisting that Nevada also not be allowed to block the creation of a temporary nuclear dump site while scientists study the suitability of a permanent site.

The Yucca Mountain controversy has created major fallout in Nevada. The 1987 legislation that narrowed the disposal site prospects to Yucca Mountain alone is infamous in Nevada as the "Screw Nevada" bill. Bryan won election to the Senate on the coattails of this combustible political issue, after his predecessor's ineffectiveness in blocking the bill became a campaign cornerstone.

Nevada has balked at signing the permits the government needs to conduct the multi-billion dollar tests that will determine whether the site can safely store radioactive waste for 10,000 years. The House bill states as fact that Nevada has delayed the testing process by more than three years. That contention is disputed by a recent General Accounting Office report that places most of the blame on Department of Energy ineptitude. DOE has little to show for the $500 million already spent on research in Nevada.

The combatants, Bryan and Dingell, held a summit earlier this year to discuss the offending Corporate Average Fuel Economy (CAFE) legislation. Bryan doesn't want Las Vegas turned into another Los Angeles. He has made global warming and reducing reliance on foreign oil imports a top priority.

Bryan has been careful not to overreach with Dingell. He understands Dingell can block any bill that angers the automakers, and has assailed the industry while conspicuously avoiding Dingell.

Despite efforts not to personalize the battle, Dingell is treating the matter like an attack on his sovereignty, specifically ordering his staff to write tough Yucca Mountain legislation that amounts to a hit on his mismannered colleague.

Dingell recently told the nuclear trade press that the siting of a "high-level repository for nuclear waste ... has greatly elevated in importance from my viewpoint in light of the great interest shown by the junior senator from Nevada in increasing CAFE standards."

Dingell was unavailable for comment.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Political parties seem indistinguishable

The Democrats can't find a candidate to lead them in the next election? Maybe they've no idea where they want to be led. Save of course to the front door of the White House, but that doesn't count, because route, not destination, is the crucial question here.

Murchison

A vast opportunity awaits the Democrats, but, bless their hearts, they can't see it. They are in the throes of self-definition, self-discovery. They don't know who they are anymore, but the Republicans don't appear to know who they are either.

The past few years in politics have been distinguished by the virtual indistinguishability of the governing parties, whom the Wall Street Journal's editorial writers have dubbed the "Remocrats and Dempublicans."

I hate to resurrect George Wallace's moldy bon mot from the '60s, but with a few exceptions, there is not a dime's worth of difference between the two parties. Neither one is really for bigger government or for smaller government — just government.

Oh, the Republicans are maybe a shade more conservative than the Democrats, but what have they done about it lately? The Democrats, to put it another way, are slightly more liberal than the Republicans. What have they done about it? The federal bureaucracy, which seems to make most of the critical decisions in American life, swells just as if Ronald Reagan had never left the Warner Bros. lot.

The tension and fluidity of normal partisan politics are, temporarily at least, in suspension. One party has staked out the White House as its preserve; the other hangs on to Capitol Hill.

As usual, the federal budget is out of hand. The spending caps imposed under last year's budget deal have failed to work. By fiscal 1993, domestic discretionary spending will be 40 percent higher than in 1989. The Congressional Budget Office announced that the deficit, $279 billion this year, will reach $362 billion in the coming year. The big "deficit-closing" tax hike levied last year is doing more to prolong the recession than to balance the budget.

How do the political parties occupy themselves? Chiefly they maneuver for position. The Democrats, not wishing to alienate voters dependent on federal largesse, grouse about the Pentagon. The Republicans grouse about the Democrats.

But I said the Democrats enjoy an opportunity. What kind? The opportunity, through courage and imagination, to become once more the small-government party.

Why lounge on the psychiatrist's couch? There are only two ideas in politics. One is more government, the other is less. The Republicans aren't actively promoting less government these days, or even talking about it.

So-called moderate Democrats like Albert Gore have played around with the idea but without real conviction. These ninnies talk of rationalizing existing programs; they never talk of yanking the country out of bureaucratic stagnation and the slough of high taxes. Too many Democratic voters favor stagnation and taxes, at least taxes levied on other people.

The Democrat who is most forthright about these matters is Virginia Gov. Douglas Wilder, who proposed a federal budget cut of $50 billion. No, he didn't say where the money should come from, and, yes, he may be an arrant demagogue. One thing is for sure: This is a different sort of talk than one normally hears from Democrats. It's get-off-dead-center talk. I wouldn't count on its failure at some point to make an impact.

Here, in the cradle of liberty, we cram more power into the bureaucracy's hands, without notable protest from either party.

A Democratic party that, as in pre-Franklin Roosevelt days, stood for sound money, lower taxes, limited government, individual freedom — what an invigorating idea.

LETTERS

Christians should base actions on love, peace

Concerning some of the articles that have appeared in the Midland Reporter-Telegram, concerning the meeting of the Ku Klux Klan (KKK) and the Rebel flag, there have been those who would lead the public to believe that they represent or speak for Midlanders and the Christian community. I would like to speak as a minority (Christian) on the subject.

In all of my studies and teachings concerning Christianity or the followings of Christ, not one time has it ever led me to believe that we should hate, retaliate or protest. It does teach to love thy neighbor and to pray for those who might hate you or spitefully use you. If there is some question about what action should be taken during Saturday's meeting, my suggestion is that pastors and priests should open up their churches to pray for those who need God's love.

Concerning the idea of pulling black atheletes from the football field in protest of the Rebel flag, let it be noted that in past years when community leaders' children played in the Midland High vs. Lee High annual football game, they did not pull their sons off the field and may I add, that there was a sea of Rebel flags.

There are enough hate, bigotry and acts that are unChrist-like going on without so-called educated or Christian leadership adding fuel to the fire. I might also add that I was born and raised in Midland. I am also of African-American descent, but most of all, I am a disciple of Christ.

CHARLEY REESE

PAW hypocritical, fanatical organization

People for the American Way (PAW), a misnamed organization, has one of the sorriest records in the United States for distortion and institutional demagoguery.

It practices a sort of liberal McCarthyism as it is quick to brand anyone who disagrees with its narrow view as obviously not someone for the American way, whatever that is.

Reese

This is the organization that put Gregory Peck on television to distort the record of Robert Bork in its multimillion campaign to sink his nomination to the Supreme Court.

Here is an example of the kind of demagoguery they routinely practice:

Arthur Kropp, their executive director, recently issued a statement that the 1990s would be "the decade of the censor." His evidence? Why, he said, 229 attempts to censor books or other school material occurred during the 1989-90 school year.

It goes without saying that anyone, in this age of Andrew Dice Clay and Eddie Murphy, who thinks censorship is a big problem is out to lunch. Short of raping and mutilating children, practically anything goes in this society as anyone not living in a monastery has to know.

But more to the point, there are 16,376 school districts in the United States with more than 40 million pupils, and if only 229 demands (or more likely requests) were made to withdraw or restrict material that's not a big problem. Assuming one demand per district, then in 16,147 school districts or about 99 percent, no demands were made.

People for the American Way frequently forgets that we live in a democracy. They forget that school boards are elected public servants. They forget that citizens have a perfect right to question their elected officials' judgment. Kropp even had to include complaints about drug abuse programs and sex education. Some people, for religious reasons, object to sex education courses and they have a right to express their objections.

PAW also forgets that it is not censorship to complain about materials used in an instructional situation. Teachers do it all the time. Kropp claims most of the complaints are by "conservative groups," but among the books complained about, he includes "Huckleberry Finn."

The people who have complained about this book are blacks who find the racial language offensive. Except for Clarence Thomas, whom People for the American Way also doesn't like, I don't know many black conservatives.

The only people who can practice censorship in this country are government agencies. They do it but what they are interested in keeping secret has little to do with sex or literature. It has to do with their own schemes and goof-ups.

I think it's a good thing if parents are concerned enough about their children to complain about books or materials if they think they are not appropriate. That's their democratic right. I may not agree with them on any particular book or material, but so what? Who appointed me or People for the American Way as the final arbiters of appropriate instructional materials.

PAW, of course, is a hypocritical organization. It sees political conservatives and religious Protestants in particular as an enemy and never misses a chance to propagandize against them. But people whose viewpoints are different from PAW's could be stoned to death and they wouldn't lift a finger to help or open their mouths to protest.

Their idea seems to be that all humans are in one of two categories: those who agree with PAW and fascists. That's fanaticism and intolerance.

Afghan guerrillas demand apology from Iran newspaper

PESHAWAR, Pakistan (AP) — Fundamentalist Afghan guerrillas Thursday demanded an apology from an Iranian newspaper that called for the death of their leader, Gulbuddin Hekmatyar.

In an Aug. 27 editorial, the English-language Kayahan International said Hekmatyar and his Hezb-e-Islami, or Party of Islam, faction had done more damage to the splintered resistance movement than had the nine-year Soviet occupation of Afghanistan.

A Hezb-e-Islami spokesman, Qutbuddin Hilal, said Kayahan never would have published the editorial without the Iranian government's consent.

"This is state terrorism and against Islamic law," Hilal told a news conference. "The Iranian government has kept quiet on this very provocative editorial."

In an Aug. 27 editorial, the English-language Kayahan International said Hekmatyar and his Hezb-e-Islami, or Party of Islam, faction had done more damage to the splintered resistance movement than had the nine-year Soviet occupation of Afghanistan.

He said a formal letter of protest demanding an apology from the newspaper, close to Islamic hardliners in Tehran, had been sent to the Iranian Embassy in Islamabad.

Hekmatyar has often engaged in blood feuds with the six other major guerrilla leaders headquartered in Pakistan. Despite his vitriolic anti-American rhetoric, Hekmatyar received the lion's share of weapons supplied by the United States because he was considered the most capable of victory.

But in its editorial, the daily said: "For the past 10 years, Hezb-e-Islami has caused more casualties upon the mujahedeen (guerrillas) than the Russian or Kabul troops.

"Surely Hekmatyar must be only interested in strengthening and protecting his power throughout Afghanistan in order to safeguard his future selfish interests.

"Now it is crystal clear that he is the one who must be blamed primarily for Afghan disunity and infightings. Thus, sooner rather than later, a brave Afghan should put an end to his disgraceful existence," it said.

Hilal said Hekmatyar's party would boycott the third round of talks with the Iranian-based guerrillas until it receives an apology. A date for the talks, aimed at drafting a workable settlement to the conflict, has not been set.

The guerrilla groups based in Pakistan and Iran have been at odds for years. The Pakistan-based mujahedeen, who represent the majority Sunni Muslims of Afghanistan, contend the Iranian-supported guerrillas have done little fighting but now want a major share of power.

Meanwhile, sources say the United States, Pakistan and Saudi Arabia have given the green light for Afghan rebels to launch a major military offensive.

Irish police find truck with bomb

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Police said Thursday they discovered an explosive-laden vehicle bogged down in the mud, apparently foiling an attempt by the IRA to plant its biggest bomb yet at a British army border post.

British army bomb disposal experts defused the device, which the Royal Ulster Constabulary said contained 8,000 pounds of explosives, the most of any bomb the outlawed Irish Republican Army has tried to plant. There was no immediate word from the IRA on the incident.

Police said the IRA abandoned the bomb Wednesday in a field near the army border post at Annaghmartin, 80 miles southwest of Belfast. No more than 10 soldiers are believed to man the post.

The explosives were contained in 40-gallon drums and loaded on the back of a tractor-trailer, which the IRA forced a 22-year-old farmer's son to drive, a police spokesman said, speaking on condition that he not be named.

The IRA is attempting to oust British troops from predominately Protestant Northern Ireland so it can unite with the mostly Catholic Irish Republic.

The incident began when at least six armed and masked men burst into the farmer's home while he and his wife were in church on Wednesday, police said.

The farmer, who asked not to be named, said in an interview the men bundled his son and one of his daughters into a van and drove them to a field near the army base where the bomb had been placed on the tractor-trailer.

He said he was convinced the IRA singled out his family because they were Protestants.

A spokesman for the army said if the bomb had been successfully delivered to the border post and detonated, everyone inside it, and possibly the young man driving the tractor, would have been killed.

Police said the explosive-laden vehicle had been driven across the nearby border with the Irish Republic, through a hole in a hedgerow.

2 men die in Zaire shootout

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — Two people were shot to death during a battle between anti-government demonstrators and backers of President Mobutu Sese Seko, hospital and opposition sources reported Thursday.

Opposition parties have threatened a national uprising to force Mobutu, long a leading U.S. ally in Africa, to hold a conference on democracy and step down after 26 years of dictatorial rule.

Foreign Minister Mark Eyskens of Belgium called the situation in the former Belgian colony "particularly grave."

He said in Brussels it was "more than necessary that Zaire implement without reserve democratic reforms and rapidly reconvene the national conference."

Such conferences have stripped power from other entrenched military leaders in Benin, Congo, Togo, Mali and Niger.

Wednesday, members of Mobutu's Popular Movement for the Revolution clashed with supporters of the opposition Union for Democracy and Social Progress.

Shots were fired were when people began tearing down posters of Mobutu outside a coalition office. Witnesses said police there seemed to be doing the shooting.

On Monday, at least three people were killed in fights between police and opposition forces.

Serbs, army step up attack on East Croatia towns

AP Laserphoto

Croatian militiamen keep watch in the village of Petyrinja, about 31 miles from Zagreb, Thursday.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Rebel Serbs and federal forces bombarded two strategic towns Thursday in east Croatia, and the Yugoslav army took the unprecedented step of inviting Western observers to monitor breaches of the cease-fire.

The secretive military has in the past strongly opposed foreign observers in Croatia.

It apparently reversed its stand to disprove accusations it has helped armed Serb rebels gain and hold territory in Croatia, which declared independence June 25.

The army, blaming Croatian security forces for the violence, urged 50 European Community monitors in the northern state of Slovenia to inspect its garrisons and units in war-torn Croatia.

"This is one way for the ... Yugoslav and international public to be convinced that the (army) is strictly observing the cease-fire agreement," the Defense Ministry said.

Croatia claims the army, with mostly Serb officers, is helping militants among the republic's 600,000 Serbs hold land that the militants pledge will never be part of an independent Croatia.

Although outnumbered an estimated 4-1 by Croatia's 85,000-man defense force, the better-armed Serbs have seized almost a fourth of Croatia's territory.

The ethnic hatred is fanned by memories of World War II, when a pro-Nazi puppet government in Croatia slaughtered hundreds of thousands of Serbs, and Serbs killed Croats in retaliation.

The army says it intervenes to keep the warring sides apart and fires only when attacked. But an EC monitor and several foreign governments have backed up least some of the Croatian claims.

Meanwhile, Serb guerrillas in the ethnically mixed Slavonia region bordering Serbia in east Croatia appeared poised to take the key towns of Osijek and Vukovar.

Media reported the fiercest fighting in a month around Vukovar, where Belgrade radio said federal forces and Serbs blasted the town from planes, tanks, artillery and gunboats on the Danube River.

Seven Croat soldiers, three Serb rebels and three civilians have died since Wednesday, the Croatian HINA news agency said.

Later in the day, a cease-fire was proclaimed in the region, when the army and Croatian forces signed an agreement arranged by Henry Wijnaendts, the EC representative in Croatia.

Soviet harvest behind last one

MOSCOW (NYT) — "I'm very happy about this harvest," said Yekaterina P. Slovodanyuk, grinning proudly over a scattered pile of dirt-covered pink potatoes she had just dug out of her private plot. "It's our first, but just look at them."

Not everyone in this country is so optimistic about the potato harvest this fall. The main evening news program "Television News Service" reported on Thursday night that just 3 percent of the potatoes necessary for the winter have been harvested from state farms. On Sept. 10 last year, the government said 17 percent of the potato harvest had been gathered.

Last year, the authorities abolished the old Soviet practice of compulsory potato harvesting by students and workers who were routinely sent to state farms for days or weeks at a time.

This year, workers and students are still being asked to help state farms with the harvest, and the Moscow city government has also set up a plan to pay volunteers in either cash or produce for such work.

"We're going toward a market system, so we're trying to stimulate people," said Vladimir I. Ivkin, general director of the Moscow Department of Social Work Labor Exchange, which introduced the paid-volunteer program early this summer to harvest berries at farms around the city.

Almost the entire crop of berries around the city was picked by Muscovites.

In the first few days of the fall program, which began on Aug. 28, 250 people have registered to harvest crops at five state-run farms, according to Pyotr I. Svyagin, head of the department, while others are believed to have skipped the registration and simply gone on their own. The wage is 25 rubles a day — not a small amount of money in a nation where the average government worker earns around 300 rubles a month — or 10 rubles and either 66 pounds of potatoes, 88 pounds of cabbage, 75 pounds of carrots, or 106 pounds of beets.

Svyagin, said: "Both volunteer and state farm workers are willing to work for that. There is a financial aspect to all this."

Another motivation for Muscovites' willingness to harvest potatoes — especially in their own plots — is fear of hunger, as the city and the nation look with apprehension at the coming winter.

Late last year, under pressure from residents, the city divided up a field that Mrs. Slovodanyuk said had been unused for as long as she could remember, and turned it into 5,400-square-foot parcels that may be farmed free of charge.

On Thursday afternoon, as planes from the nearby Domodedovo Airport streaked overhead, Mrs. Slovodanyuk, her husband, son, and 50 other neighbors were busy harvesting their small plots.

Joint purchases of seeds and machinery with neighbors helped contribute to the Slovodanyuks' bumper crop of one metric ton of potatoes, some of which they plan to store and sell in the city this winter.

Across the field, Antonina T. Sovechenkova and her three children were also busy with hoes and shovels, but they had not been as lucky. "Look at all these weeds," Mrs. Sovechenkova said. "There are no potatoes."

And others are still less fortunate. Soldiers are the one group still subject to compulsory labor harvesting potatoes, although they, too, get the 25-ruble-a-day wage.

Spain to remain in jail, magistrate rules

■ Sykes believes Odessa attorney poses risk to his ex-wife and other witnesses.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

An Odessa defense attorney, charged with scheming to have his ex-wife killed, will remain jailed because of the serious risk he may "threaten, injure or intimidate" his former spouse and other witnesses, U.S. Magistrate Robert Sykes ruled on Thursday.

Michael Jeffery Spain, 28, was arrested on Aug. 18 for plotting to have his ex-wife, Jami Leverette Spain, 26, murdered for $15,000.

The order to incarcerate Spain without bond pending his trial was the final decision on a detention hearing held Aug. 22 before Sykes.

Probable cause was found to believe Spain committed the alleged offense, the order stated.

The order to detain was partially based on a lack of analysis — specifically a psychological examination — on Spain's potential danger to possible witnesses, the order said.

Persons and agencies contacted to perform a psychiatric and/or psychological examination were not currently available, according to the order.

In addition, misrepresentations made by Spain at an initial pretrial interview contributed to the decision to detain the defendant, the order stated.

Spain allegedly lied to a pre-service trial officer about using illegal drugs and undergoing psychological counseling in the past, a motion filed Aug. 28 by the prosecution stated.

Events that led to Spain's arrest began on Aug. 8, when the defendant allegedly contacted Mark Marinelli, a former Odessa police officer, about the murder-for-hire, testimony at the detention hearing revealed.

Marinelli relayed Spain's alleged murder-for-$15,000 offer to a Drug Enforcement Administration agent on Aug. 12, testimony indicated. The result was extensive surveillance of Spain and Marinelli meeting to plot the murder, according to testimony.

The plan went so far as having Spain travel to Las Vegas, Nev., during the time Marinelli was to kill or have killed Ms. Spain, testimony indicated.

Law enforcement officials staged the murder of Ms. Spain in order to provide photographs for Marinelli to use as proof of the murder, testimony revealed.

The murder was scheduled for Aug. 15 and Marinelli traveled to Las Vegas to receive the payoff on Aug. 17, testimony indicated. Audio and video tape recorded a $10,000 payoff and a promise by Spain to pay the balance in six months, according to testimony.

Ms. Spain testified she was surprised to hear of the plan.

The Spains married on Sept. 24, 1988 and later went through a prolonged divorce that ended on Dec. 1, 1990.

Deep hate for Ms. Spain, who he thought tried to ruin his career, was Spain's motive for wanting his ex-wife killed, according to testimony about the taped conversation between Spain and Marinelli.

State has directory for fund application

■ New computerized system will make it easier for cities, businesses and groups seeking federal grants or loans.

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Comptroller John Sharp's office has created a computerized directory of state and federal grants and loans that will help cities, businesses and non-profit organizations interested in applying for funding for projects.

Sharp said that since 1981, Texas has ranked 45th or worse in per capita federal aid for state and local governments.

"To get $1 back, Texas has to send $1.31 to Washington," he said. "This grant directory is a new tool to help us bring more of our fair share of federal funding back to the state."

The directory is a personal computer-based system that will provide instant access to key information about federal and state funds, Sharp said in announcing the new system recently.

The directory is the first of its kind in the nation, he said, and was developed in-house by the Comptroller of Public Accounts Economic Development Division. Using a consulting company to create the directory would have cost the state $250,000 or more, Sharp said.

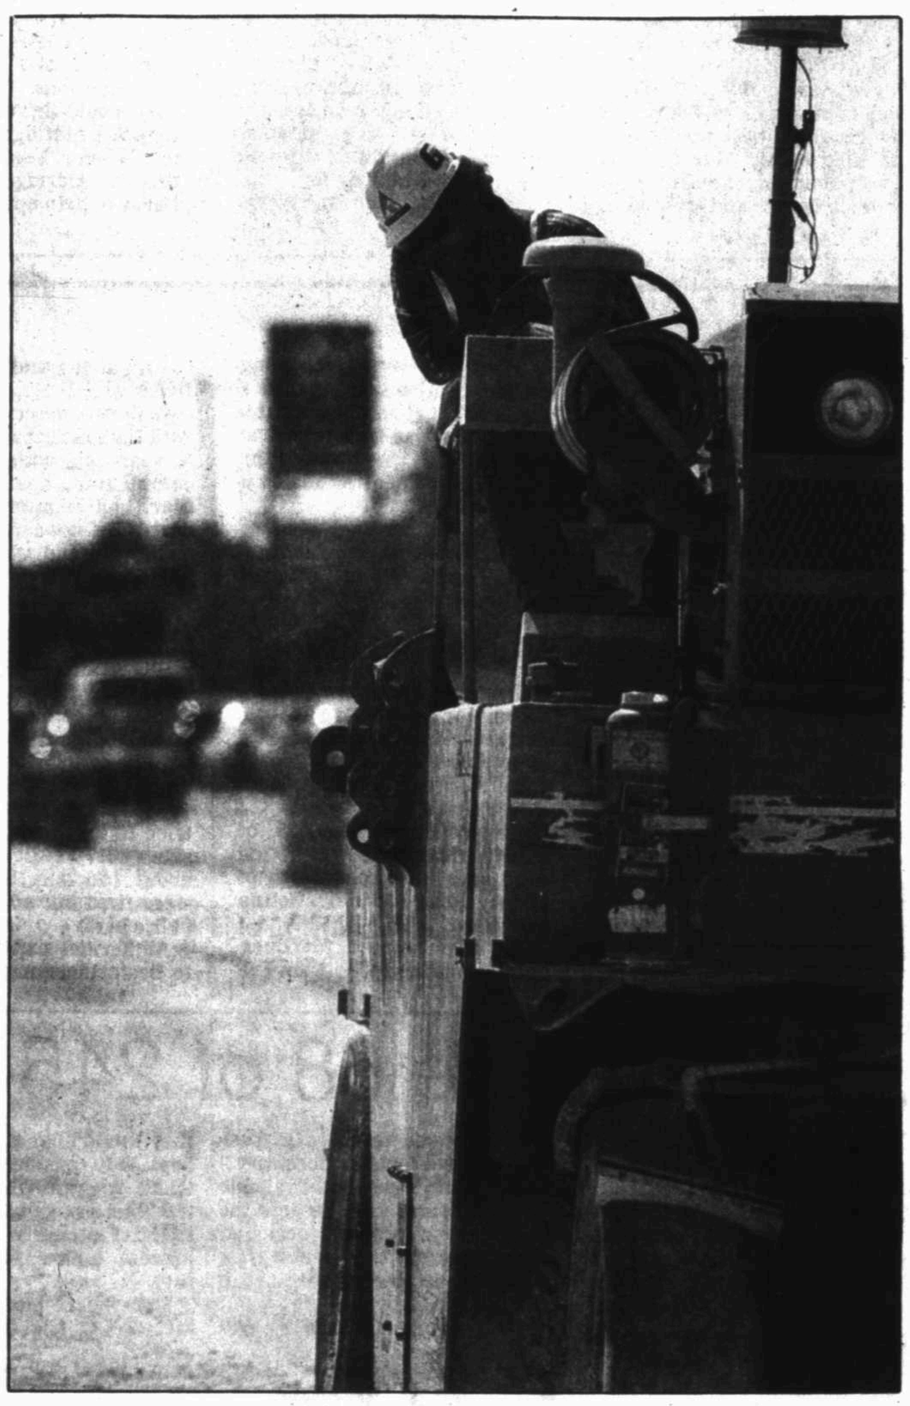

Six computers are in place in Austin and five field offices. Interested parties can go to one of the six offices or call the comptroller's assistance number toll-free by dialing 1-800-531-5441 and asking for extension 3-4911.

Callers can dial offices direct at: Austin, (512) 463-4911; Dallas, (214) 690-9786; Longview, (903) 236-7797; McAllen, (512) 687-9227; San Antonio, (512) 924-6434; Tyler, (903) 534-0333.

Staff members will make a computer search on grants and loans that might be applicable and give a printout of the information to the person making the inquiry.

The directory divides grants and loans into 20 categories, ranging from agriculture to Businesses need permit for displays

■ Before setting up outdoor seasonal displays such as Christmas trees or pumpkins, businesses must get permission from the city.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

This time of year, most Midlanders have barely accepted the fact that school has begun and summer, for the most part, has ended.

For city planning and zoning officials, however, 'tis the season of pumpkins and Christmas trees despite lingering high temperatures.

Businesses typically plan seasonal outdoor displays — some of which are tightly regulated by city ordinances. Even at this early date, the applications are rolling in.

"I have a permit application from a guy in Oregon who's going to sell Christmas trees at Western Auto," said city planner Jim Compton. "He's been coming here every year for eight years, but he has to get a new permit each time."

While most outdoor displays must be enclosed in what basically amounts to a "building without a roof," notable exceptions in coming months are Christmas trees and firewood.

Between Nov. 15 and Dec. 25, holiday trees and firewood can be sold by a business owner at his own shop. Others who want to sell holiday trees, including non-profit groups and private contractors, must secure a permit.

Pumpkins, typically sold during October and throughout the Thanksgiving holiday, are not exempt. Keeping the vegetables outside requires a temporary land use permit approved by the city council.

Marty Sheets, owner of Flowerama on Andrews Highway, recently got approval of such a permit, although the council rejected his request to display tropical and bedding plants during the fall season. He says the rejected request may eliminate possible profits during a busy season.

"We were planning on it, keeping some plants outside," he said. "We have enough space, but it would be better marketing if we could put them outdoors."

Council members argued that Sheets' request for keeping plants outside did not fit the definition of temporary or seasonal, but the pumpkins did.

Sheets' business is located in a retail zone. If it were in a commercial zone or even less-restrictive retail, outdoor displays would not be subject to the same rules.

Councilman J.D. Faircloth said he would support relaxation of the current restrictions, which were enacted in 1968 and clarified in a lengthy process that ended in February of 1990.

"I think we should let a business owner do what he reasonably can, as long as it's not extreme," Faircloth. "You get to a point of too much regulation and it's difficult to enforce."

Regulations on outdoor storage are not limited to certain times of year or types of businesses. An amendment to the code does allow display of tires at service stations, but one common sight — 12-packs of soft drinks displayed in front of convenience stores — is not allowed, except during specially arranged sidewalk sales.

Students need 'New Focus' to deal with negative issues

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Eating disorders, sexual abuse, suicide and depression are all issues which have a negative connotation. Students need management skills to deal with these issues in a positive way. They need "New Focus," a peer leadership program, according to Sarah Hulme, program sponsor and teacher at Lee Freshman High School.

A day-long seminar, Sept. 16, has been set up to teach selected Lee freshman students these skills.

"Each teacher will select two students for the training," Ms. Hulme said. "Teachers will select students who they believe would benefit — students they identify as positive peer leaders."

The teacher said that even students perceived as negative peer leaders might be selected since they could be positively influenced by the program.

About 65 students will be selected to participate in the program which was piloted at Lee Freshman last year.

The students will be excused from classes and they will attend the seminar from 8 a.m.-6 p.m. Parents will be allowed to participate in the closing session from 6-6:30 p.m.

Stephen Russell, a certified alcohol and drug abuse counselor and a former teacher, will conduct the seminar.

"There will be a morning break and a lunch break, but students will be totally secluded from students outside the seminar," Ms. Hulme said. "Once students come to the seminar in the morning they are committing to a whole day."

She said isolating the students in the seminar from their peers will facilitate bonding and eliminate distractions.

Russell and his associates will address issues including chemical abuse patterns, co-dependency, enabling, family dynamics, eating disorders, physical abuse, sexual abuse, sexual issues, depression and suicide.

Adult participants will include teachers, counselors and LFHS staff.

"We are excited about having Lee High School sophomores, former peer leaders, who will go through the training and act as facilitators this year," Ms. Hulme said.

Ms. Hulme said the returning sophomores are indicative that "the program is producing people who can be leaders."

The teacher said students who participate in the seminar can later form the nucleus of groups which focus on school, community and personal pride.

"These groups will come up with activities throughout the year," she said. "Since this is our second year, I know how to channel energy from the seminar and tie it into activities."

The activities will be open to all students.

LFHS Principal George Cooper said, "Our past experiences with New Focus have been totally positive, and we look forward to another year of providing our student with positive ways to be involved during their first year of high school."

Ms. Hulme said any student can benefit from the program. "Even if their parents have been married 25 years, there are no alcoholics in the family, a student makes straight A's and is on the football team, a student can still benefit."

Woman rides into sunset with mail-order cowboy

LUBBOCK (AP) — When Dale Rawn placed an advertisement in Western Horseman, he wasn't thinking about horses. The native of Pontypool, Ontario, Canada, had learned more than he wanted to know about the high-lonesome and figured to do something about it.

Jeana Kaye Aldridge had relocated from her Lubbock home to a California horse ranch and was feeling more than a little lonely herself when she settled in with her copy of the magazine. Perusing the personal advertisements, she thought anybody who advertised for a friend would have to be pretty desperate. But a particular ad caught her eye.

"Well, the ad said he was a cowboy who liked hunting, horses and working cattle," Aldridge said. "So I wrote him and sent a picture that had been taken while I was quail hunting with my Dad. I was holding a shotgun and some birds, and I figured he'd know

Dallas district to rehire 68 laid-off teachers

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Independent School District has uncovered $2.3 million that will be used to rehire 68 of 245 teachers laid off last week, the system's top administrator said Thursday.

The layoffs triggered massive protests and student walkouts.

In a separate move, a judge announced Thursday that none of the other layoffs can proceed until after a DISD board meeting Tuesday, at which trustees were to reconsider earlier budgetary cuts and ratification of the job reductions.

The Classroom Teachers of Dallas requested the hearing before state District Judge Frank Andrews. The union was seeking a restraining order against the layoffs.

"We were asking for injunctive relief to bar implementation of the layoffs," said Bob Baker, CTD president. "The settlement is that they cannot be implemented until after the board has met to consider these items."

Baker said the DISD board must consider whether to ratify the action it took in late June to implement the reduction in force policy. Attorneys for the teachers' union argued that ratification hadn't yet occurred.

Teachers notified they would be laid off are still receiving paychecks, said Baker, and no terminations will occur unless trustees approve them at next week's meeting. He said CTD attorneys would continue to fight the cuts in court if necessary.

Superintendent Marvin Edwards said his budgetary change to rehire the 68 teachers is a one-time move that's not meant to quiet critics who have fueled student demonstrations protesting the layoffs.

"This is not an action to solve everybody's problem that they've been expressing," Edwards said. "This will not cause young people to see the teacher they had in their classroom last week.

"This is about putting people to work for one thing. And about relieving situations that were impacted that needed special relief."

Dallas is one of hundreds of school districts grappling with sharp reductions in state aid. Those cuts were triggered after lawmakers, under pressure from the Texas Supreme Court, approved a so-called "Robin Hood" school finance plan that shifts hundreds of millions of dollars in property tax revenue from wealthy school districts to poor ones.

Under the plan, Dallas loses $47 million this year. District administrators say that prompted the layoff of 245 of its 8,500 teachers.

Edwards' leadership was critisome businesses, you can see those rules are being ignored or at least not followed," Faircloth said. "You wonder if there aren't some abuses. I think enforcement is a problem."

A code enforcement officer said ignorance of the rules seems to be the major reason for non-compliance.

"If they aren't aware, we're going to let them know about it when we are out making inspections, or if we get a complaint," said Roberta Allison, code enforcement officer. "But we basically get good compliance."

Regulation of outdoor displays seems to be working, said Richard Hennessy, planning department director.

"The way the regulations are, it seems to be considered very fair," he said. "We basically try to maintain the image and character of a particular zoning district and avoid a problem with clutter."

Sharp said his department will update federal grant information twice a year and state information every year, along with weekly updates on new grant announcments and deadline notices.

"The Economic Development Division staff in these six offices is fully trained to help Texans get the information they need," Sharp said.

In addition, the staff will help groups and individuals assess their resources and plan economic development strategies, he said.

better than to fool around with me."

Aldridge waited six weeks while Western Horseman routed her letter to the Canadian cowboy, and then when Rawn left a message on her answering machine, she had second thoughts about returning the call. While she was deciding, Rawn called again. They spent the next three hours on the telephone.

"He noticed the shotgun all right," Aldridge said. "He had one just like it and knew I was the girl for him."

Aldridge didn't like California and returned to Texas to find employment in the Dallas area. Because she was between jobs, Rawn suggested it would be a good time for a trip to Canada.

"I knew my mom wouldn't approve of this at all," Aldridge said. "I couldn't believe I was even thinking of doing such a thing, but we were so compatible on the phone that I just knew it was the right thing to do."

Aldridge took her mother to lunch and broke the news about her mail-order cowboy. "We decided that if I made the trip, I'd come home at the first sign of trouble," she said.

With six suitcases, trepidations and a promise from her mother not to mention anything to her father, Aldridge caught a plane for Toronto.

"Let me tell you, Pontypool is about 90 miles north of Toronto and about the size of Acuff," Aldridge said. (Acuff is a community of less than 100 people, about 15 miles east of Lubbock.)

"The airport in Toronto is bigger than Dallas-Fort Worth (airport), and when he picked me up, he was so nervous, he forgot where he parked his truck."

Rawn went off to locate the truck and Aldridge thought he wasn't coming back.

"I thought he didn't like me and had run away to Pontypool. I was just about to go check into a return flight when he came back to say he'd found the truck," she said.

Then, after carrying the luggage to the vehicle, Rawn discovered that he had lost his keys. Once again they traversed the airport, finally locating the missing keys in the pocket where Rawn always carries them. The drive to Pontypool was occupied by conversation and sightseeing. Aldridge had never been in the Ontarian province before and wanted to see as much as possible of the countryside.

'We got along so well that I stayed nearly three weeks.'

— Jeana Aldridge

"I thought his place at Pontypool was just beautiful," she said. "He had horses and cows and a heeler dog; it was just like being in Texas except winter arrives pretty fast."

Rawn has told her he knew they were destined to marry when she won over the heeler and allowed the pup the run of the house and furniture.

"We got along so well that I stayed nearly three weeks. I kept calling mom and telling her what a gentleman he was. Mom is my best friend, and I knew she would be supportive. I was right."

Aldridge finally made the return trip to Dallas, knowing that this relationship was going to be something permanent.

"I never felt so right about anything in my life," she said. "We were meant to be.

"Our goals are exactly the same. I know that opposites are supposed to attract, but I feel like, in another life, we might have been brother and sister. We agree on everything."

When she made the next trip to Canada, she planned to stay longer. Rawn met her at the airport with red roses, and this time he had the keys in his hand. "We both knew where the truck was parked; I told him to write and tell me before I came," Aldridge said.

After a dinner in Toronto, the couple returned to Pontypool and drove to a wooded area above a valley planted in alfalfa.

"Dale handed me the binoculars and told me there was a deer in the meadow. Then he handed me a little box with a ring in it. It was purely romantic, just the way I always dreamed it would happen," she said.

She stayed long enough to grow a garden with asparagus that grew so fast it had to be cut twice a day. She worked with some horses at a boarding stable and sold asparagus on the weekends. Once a week they would drive into Toronto to renew Aldridge's visitor's status. When it began to get cold, though, Aldridge returned to Dallas to help open the way for Rawn to follow.

"I was trying to find out all about green cards, and he called me one day from D-FW (airport) — and there he was."

Rawn is now a resident alien. In two more years he will be eligible to take the citizenship examinations. Not long ago he passed the test to qualify for his Realtor's license.

Aldridge and Rawn married in a cowboy-style wedding Aug. 31 at the V-8 Ranch, complete with two-stepping, chuck wagons and a carriage drawn by Miss Molly Mule, a world champion show mule owned by Aldridge's father, Ken Aldridge.

Wedding guests dined on tables with bandanna cloths and drank cowboy punch served from a galvanized tub. The bridegroom's cake was horseshoe-shaped, and the bridal cake was an image of the couple.

Male members of the wedding party wore black Wranglers and vests with white shirts and black felt hats with Fort Worth creases. The ladies in the bridal party wore period dresses, lace-up boots and straw hats.

The honeymoon was an elk hunting trip to Colorado with matching 1100 model 20-gauge shotguns.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Eatery robbery

Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 36-year-old man remained in jail Thursday awaiting arraignment after being arrested earlier that day for the aggravated robbery of a hamburger restaurant, police said.

Police were summoned to the Country Burger, 1123 N. Grant Ave., about 2:15 p.m. Thursday by an employee.

Witnesses told police the man held up the restaurant with a blue steel revolver but fled on foot with no money. One witness followed the robber, who escaped in a blue Dodge car parked at 13th Street and Grant Avenue, police said.

A short time later, police spotted a car fitting the decription at 1606 N. Jackson Ave. When police approached a man near the open trunk of the car, the man closed the trunk and went inside.

Police arrested the man and after obtaining a search warrant discovered a gun and clothes believed to be used in the robbery in the trunk.

Drug charges

Two men and a woman are expected to appear before a U.S. Magistrate today for an initial appearance following their arrest Thursday for possession of crack cocaine, sheriff's and federal officials said.

The three, along with three others, were arrested when sheriff's deputies executed a search warrant in the 1700 block of E. Pine Ave. and confiscated three ounces of crack cocaine with a $7,000 street value and approximately $900 cash, sheriff's officials said. The warrant was issued following an investigation that began as a result of a Crime Stoppers tip.

The case was transferred to federal authorities through the Drug Enforcement Administration, officials said.

Of the six arrested, charges are expected to be filed on three, perhaps four, officials said.

Murder suspect

Sheriff's officers are seeking a man for questioning in connection with the murder of a man found stabbed to death early Saturday morning, sheriff's officials said.

Jose Rodriguez Pina, 38, of 1512 N. Main St., was found dead on a lease road north of County Road 150 near Cotton Flat Road.

The man wanted for questioning was seen with Pina Friday night at a southside bar, officials said.

Witnesses described the man with Pina as Hispanic, about 28-30 years old, with a very light complexion, neatly trimmed black hair, moustache and beard. He stood about 5 feet 8 inches tall and weighed about 140-150 pounds.

Attempted murder

BIG SPRING — Police continued to look for a man Thursday wanted in connection with the attempted murder of a 42-year-old Big Spring woman Wednesday afternoon, police said.

According to police, a man tried to kill Irene Paredez outside a 1317 Kindle St. residence about 1:26 p.m. Several shots were fired but no one was hit, police said.

Authorities expect an arrest to be forthcoming.

Robbers caught

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Police say they have arrested men who are believed to be the ringleaders of a group known as the "Rolex Robbers," believed responsible for stealing expensive watches and jewelry in dozens of holdups.

A gang of about 35 men committed at least 80 robberies in the past 18 months in which an estimated $1 million in loot, mainly Rolex watches and other jewelry, was stolen, police said Wednesday.

Robert Anthony Ramirez, 18, and Samuel Torres, 21, were charged in the recent robbery of a 38-year-old woman, police Lt. Jesse Porter said.

It brings to 13 the number of people arrested in connection with the cases in the past year, Porter said.

Porter said members of the gang and would go in groups of two to five, steal a vehicle and drive around looking for middle-aged or older people wearing expensive jewelry.

cized by students and laid-off teachers, who said the district's "top-heavy administration" should have been cut to remedy the budget shortfall.

About 30 students showed up at the DISD administration building Thursday to protest the layoffs. Earlier in the week, demonstrations had swelled to several hundred people.

Edwards said the teachers rehired will be paid with funds left over from two projects completed this summer. Those projects were funded with bonds approved by taxpayers.

"It's almost like receiving a one-time gift," he said. "But in the situation we're involved in today, I think it's wise and prudent to take the two amounts and selectively put back some teachers in positions that we feel are necessary."

The money was not available sooner, Edwards said, because the bond closeout program occurred Aug. 30, nearly two weeks after board members adopted the budget.

Board members Thursday said they would hold a special meeting Sept. 10 to consider raising the district's tax rate. The board tentatively set a rate of $1.29 per $100 of assessed property value, or 17.5 percent higher than last year's rate.

Some board members want the increase to rise to 19.5 percent, which would allow the district to rehire all of the teachers.

"We ought to stop pretending that the issue relates to the administration," said board member Yvonne Ewell. "The issue relates to the board."

DEATHS

Rose Caruth

AUSTIN — Funeral Mass for Rose Marguerite Pliska Caruth, 77, will be celebrated at 10 a.m. today in St. Mary's Cathedral with Monsignor Edward C. Matocha officiating. Burial will follow in Austin Memorial Park under the direction of Weed-Corley Funeral Home.

Mrs. Caruth died Tuesday at her Austin home following a lengthy illness.

She was born Jan. 24, 1914, in Midland, to pioneer Texas aviator John Valentine Pliska and his wife Anna Louisa Hundl Pliska.

She graduated from Seton Infirmary School of Nursing in 1935 and retired in 1980 after 50 years as a nurse.

She was preceded in death by Charles Clifton Caruth, her husband of 32 years, in 1971.

Seeker of Noah's Ark now subject of search

The State

GARLAND (AP) — Marvin Wilson went to Turkey to find Noah's Ark. Now, thousands are searching for him.

His wife Renetta has gathered family members around their comfortable home in this Dallas suburb as she works the phones trying to find out the fate of her husband, kidnapped last week by Kurdish guerrillas.

"I know he'll be home," Mrs. Wilson calmly declares. "I just don't know when."

Wilson, 49, and two other Americans, a Briton and an Australian were abducted Friday while traveling to what they believed was the site of the biblical ark.

Thousands of Turkish searchers have combed the mountains of eastern Turkey, where Marxist Kurdish rebels have been fighting a guerrilla campaign for independence since 1984.

No trace has been found of the group and the kidnappers have made no demands.

Mrs. Wilson last spoke to her husband on Aug. 28, two days before he was kidnapped. She said the group had talked to government officials about getting permits to excavate a site near Mount Ararat, where the Bible says the vessel washed up. They also were seeking permission to film a television special about the quest.

Alex Young, president of the company where Wilson is a business consultant, was one of the last people to see Wilson before he left on the hastily arranged trip to Turkey.

He said Wilson could hardly hide his enthusiasm.

"He was expecting a big breakthrough," Young said. "He was all excited, basically running out of the office to there."

Mrs. Wilson, 48, learned of her husband's abduction from son Marty, who had been tipped off by a news report.

Since the weekend, Mrs. Wilson says she's gotten 200 calls a day from friends, family and government officials. In the kitchen, she keeps a notebook with about 20 pages of notes tracking who has called her and what was said.

She also is in touch with the State Department and other hostage-support groups.

Wednesday morning, Marty Wilson fielded calls from friends and family, and tried to locate his father's car at the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport. His stepbrother, Todd Key, had just called from Gainesville, Fla., to tell the rest of the family he'd be in Dallas this week.

Mrs. Wilson's other son, Brad Key, kept vigil in the living room for national news reports about his father. Two grandchildren in diapers toddled through the kitchen while an infant slept in a playpen.

"We believe in Dad and his attempts to solve the mystery," Brad Key said. "We're 100 percent behind his passion."

The Wilsons raised five children together ranging in age from 25 to 30 years old, all from earlier marriages.

"He was a very family-oriented man," Mrs. Wilson said.

She said the couple's 18-year marriage is based on a mutually strong belief in God. The couple doesn't belong to a church, but they hold meetings with others who share their faith and study the Bible.

It was Marvin Wilson's passion for biblical archaeology that drove him to Turkey over Labor Day weekend, Mrs. Wilson said.

Two years ago the couple read a book, "Discovered: Noah's Ark!," written by Ron Wyatt, who claimed in 1985 that his team found the ark near Mount Ararat.

Mrs. Wilson said the formation near Mount Ararat fits the ark's description in Genesis.

Her husband was so impressed, he called Wyatt and the two became friends. Last year, the couple traveled to Turkey for the first time with Wyatt and his wife, who live in Nashville, Tenn.

That was in August, after Saddam Hussein had invaded Kuwait, and although the military was often seen, she felt no danger, Mrs. Wilson said.

"So we decided we wanted to dedicate a part of our lives with the people interested and assist Mr. Wyatt with his research and continued efforts," she said.

Wilson had gone along on the trip to provide business expertise.

Wyatt, 57, was leading the group. Others abducted were identified as Richard M. Rives of North Carolina; Briton Gareth Thomas, and Australian Allen Roberts. They were ordered from their minibus and led away at gunpoint by Kurdish rebels in Bingol province last Friday night.

Mom's plan 'dumb thing,' residents say

CHANNELVIEW (AP) — Shanna Harper and Amber Heath, the high school freshmen caught in the middle of a murder-for-hire plot, won't suffer socially, their schoolmates say.

Most agreed neither of the girls will be shunned for the sins of the mother, and students said both girls will be warmly supported by their classmates at Channelview High School.

"They'll get funny looks for a while, but then things will get back to normal," 17-year-old Misty Story predicted.

"Both girls are so sweet to everybody," sophomore Paige Stephens said. "Everyone will be nice to them."

Shanna's mother, Wanda Holloway, was convicted of solicitation of capital murder for trying to hire a hitman to kill Amber's mother. Prosecutors said Mrs. Holloway apparently hoped Amber would be so distraught by her mother's death she would drop out of cheerleader competition, making it easier for Shanna to win.

Students and other Channelview residents also said the murder-for-hire plan was "a dumb thing to do."

Many questioned whether Mrs. Holloway was really guilty of seeking a hitman to kill Mrs. Heath.

But most agreed that if the jury was right, Mrs. Holloway got what she deserved.

"God, that's dumb," junior Mary Bascus, 17, said with a roll of her eyes. "I feel sorry for Shanna."

Betty Hanes, a 30-year resident and owner of the Channelview Sewing Center, reasoned that Mrs. Holloway "just got carried away with the game she was playing."

"It's a heck of a price to pay," Ms. Hanes said. "I think it is a shame because she does have a lovely family."

Those who know Mrs. Holloway described her as on overzealous stage mother and perfectionist.

"I'm glad I have the mother I've got, 'cause if I had a mother like Mrs. Holloway, I'd run away from home," 15-year-old Kermit Briscoe said.

The bizarre saga made unwilling participants of Channelview residents and some of them were embarrassed at the way their town was depicted in the media.

"She was just a bad portrayal of Channelview," said Jackie Porter.

Ms. Hanes said she believes time will heal the wounds.

"It's a small town, things die down pretty quick," she said. "There will be people unhappy with the bad publicity she brought here, it will be hard for the kids, but it will die down. This was an isolated incident."

Judge grants $75,000 bond

HOUSTON (AP) — Wanda Holloway left jail Thursday on a $75,000 bond, free while her lawyers appeal her conviction and 15-year prison sentence for trying to hire a hitman to kill the mother of her daughter's cheerleading rival.

State District Judge George Godwin earlier in the day granted the bond to Mrs. Holloway, who was taken in handcuffs to the Harris County Jail after she was sentenced Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Holloway, 37, was whisked through a jail exit not normally used by released inmates, accompanied by defense lawyer Stanley Schneider, and taken into a waiting car.

Defense lawyers sought the bond for Mrs. Holloway, which allows her to be free during the appeal of her conviction. Convicted felons sentenced to 15 years or less in prison are allowed such bonds.

But prosecutor Casey O'Brien said he disapproves.

"I feel when someone breaks the law, they ought to pay the piper," he said. "She's not going to pay the piper."

"She's not a dangerous woman," Schneider said. "If anything, she's a broken woman. The trial's taken a toll on her."

Mrs. Holloway, in addition to the prison sentence, was fined $10,000 for her conviction on solicitation of capital murder.

A jury decided, following a weeklong trial, that Mrs. Holloway wanted to hire someone to kill Verna Heath because she believed Mrs. Heath's daughter, Amber, would be so distraught she would drop out of cheerleading competitions last spring. That would improve the chances of Mrs. Holloway's daughter, Shanna, for a spot on the squad, prosecutors said.

FAMILY MATTERS

Couple strives to be happy by 'old rules'

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: We have been married for almost three years. We both have good jobs and no children. This is the second marriage for both of us and we are determined to make it work.

May

We are having problems whenever one of us is unhappy with the other. We never seem to finish an argument. Both of us try to avoid having to have a fight but lately that seems like all that we do. What are we doing wrong? We don't want to be mad at each other. We want to be happy.

My friend who told me to write to you said to tell you about the families that both my husband and I came from. In his family his father was an alcoholic and his mother never did anything to make him stop drinking. In my family my mother never supported me or anything that I did. She was always critical and sometimes would scream and yell at me. Nothing that I ever did was ever good enough for her. I could never do anything right.

Can you give us some advice about what to do so that we can have a happy marriage? We both want children but we're not going to have any if can't change this. WANTS TO BE HAPPY

DEAR WANTS: I am glad you told me about your families of origin because it makes a difference. All homes have rules, whether they are expressed or not. As children, we interpret those rules and they often become part of the way we live as adults. For example, a child raised in a critical home will often see the world through "critical glasses." This adult child often tends to focus on what is wrong with another person, place or thing. He or she has to work to see what is right with the world instead of what is wrong.

Making family rules explicit is an important step in a relationship. Couples may find it helpful to each make a list of the rules from her and his family of origin. Some rules from dysfunctional families are: Don't talk (to others about family secrets); don't show affection; don't talk about feelings; don't disagree (with me); don't be angry; don't admit that you're afraid; don't say you're sorry; don't talk about sex; don't confront anyone (it's not safe); and don't show your vulnerabilities.

After you and your husband have listed your old rules, discuss the rules you both live by. All of these rules prevent the two of you from honestly communicating in your relationship today. Have you lived by one or more of these rules and expected your spouse to KNOW them without sharing with him? Often unspoken conflict will arise just out of the mismatching of these rules. Give each other permission to point out when he/she finds the other following an "old rule." Don't correct each other, but instead help each other to be aware of old patterns that do not work.

Two people do not have to agree all the time to be happy. Discuss your differences. Argue if you need to. You are both adults and may have differnt opinions and ideas. A "right" or "wrong" seldom exists in most cases — just different ideas, thoughts and feelings. Family rules may have taught us there is only one "right" — my or the highway — but that is a false rule.

Make commitment to each other that you will work until you reach a compromise. Do not follow the old rules of communications. If you both work, things can and will change, but remember "if nothing changes, nothing changes." You both deserve a happy marriage. Work to realize that goal.

I encourage both of you to consider attending an Adult Children of Alcoholics group meeting. The groups include adults from many varieties of dysfunctional homes. I found it reassuring to learn that many others who seem "normal" have similar experiences. Call 682-4721 for meeting times and places.

DEAR CONFIDENTIAL: I encourage you to see a psychiatrist at once about your son's depression. Do not wait any longer. His sypmtoms suggest you need to seek immediate help. If you cannot afford to see a psychiarist in private practice, call Permian Basin MHMR at 683-5774.

DEAR ABBY

Young, single mom shares fears

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of a 7-month-old daughter, and another child is due in December. My husband and I were married last January and now we are being divorced. I'll be 21 in October, and I am terrified of being a single mother with two children, not to mention the fact that my husband has paid only $50 in child support. Clothes, food and diapers cost a lot of money.

Van Buren

Abby, this second child was a complete shock, and I'm not sure I really want it. I have no feelings for it. Am I making sense? I feel as though my world has no meaning except for my family, the child I have and myself. I don't know what to do.

I have dreams of how I could hurt myself badly enough to kill this child inside. I wish I wasn't pregnant, but I don't believe in abortion and I couldn't give it up for adoption.

Mom tells me I will have feelings for this baby when it begins to grow. Has anyone ever said this to you before? I will care for it, but I'm afraid that I will never love this baby. Scary, huh? What should I do? Help! — SCARED IN WASHINGTON STATE

DEAR SCARED: If you are having dreams about how you can "hurt" yourself enough to be rid of the baby you say you may never love, cannot support, and did not want in the first place — please talk with a professional counselor or a clergyperson about giving the child up. There are many couples waiting (and praying) for a child to adopt. They would love and provide for it in a way that you cannot. Please consider that option. You need not feel guilty for facing reality. I think you are sensible and courageous. I wish you well.

DEAR ABBY: I am a delivery driver for a major pizza restaurant in Atchison, Kan. I've seen all kinds of things while delivering pizza, but one thing I've seen often, worries me.

Many adults send their small children to answer the door and pay for the pizza. I've had children as young as 3 and 4 years old meet me at the door with no adult in sight. One woman sent her 5-year-old son to the door, and when there was a problem with the order, he had to get her from a second-floor bedroom!

One little boy even let me in the house, saying that he was the only one at home. I love children myself and don't have a problem dealing with them, but people don't know me. How do they know I won't try to abduct their child, or do something terrible to him or her? We read about things like that happening to children every day!

Abby, please tell people that if they want to let their kids "pay" for the pizza, that's fine, but they should be within a few feet of the child when the child opens the door. It could prevent a terrible tragedy. — A PIZZA DELIVERY DRIVER

DEAR DRIVER: Thanks for a valuable letter. You delivered something far more important than a pizza today.

What teen-agers need to know about sex, drugs, AIDS, and getting along with their peers and parents is now in Abby's updated, expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Farm safety day camp aims to prevent injuries

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Three hundred children die and 23,000 are injured each year in farm accidents in this country, and an Iowa program is wagering a trip to camp might save some lives.

Since Sartori Memorial Hospital in Cedar Falls held its first farm safety day camp two years ago, the program's 300-some graduates have been using what they learned.

"Not only do kids start using the information, they start building an attitude about safety at a young age," said Pam Delagardelle, who runs the camp.

"Just like wearing your seatbelt or not smoking, kids take these behaviors back to their parents. They're teaching their parents to use ear plugs to conserve their hearing or wear respirators to conserve their lung status," she said.

Now she's working on exporting the camps to other states, and they're so interested she can't keep up with all their inquiries.

"We want to kind of light a thousand lights," said Delagardelle, director of occupational health at Sartori. "We really feel that we could do the most good for the greatest number of people by showing other people how to do it in their town."

Delagardelle developed the one-day safety camp after requests for a children's program from parents who belong to Sartori's Farm Partners, a farm health and safety program.

Delagardelle is getting non-stop requests from other states and countries to send information on the camp or — better yet — trained staff. More than 1,200 calls and letters poured in after a December article on the camp in Successful Farming magazine.

Retirees market friendship

By Lynn Berry

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — There they were in their usual spot, at a table near the oyster bar, bakery and Peking duck shop. Canes resting against their legs.

Charlie's eyesight isn't so good, so Fran cut his cherry-filled pastry and helped him eat it with a fork.

They are retirees who meet every day in a corner of the Reading Terminal Market, escaping loneliness or boredom in the century-old marketplace where trains once rumbled overhead.

The upper level was the passenger terminal for the now-defunct Reading Railroad, and, until two years ago, served commuter trains. One day in the future, the giant old train barn is expected to be the focal point of a new convention center.

George Thomas, 82, a retired janitor, has been coming to the market since he was a boy and remembers when chickens were sold live and carried home on the train.

But now, since his wife died seven years ago, Thomas comes not so much to shop but to socialize.

"I have to get away from the four walls," he said.

The klatch began five or six years ago when Thomas met Charlie at the market. Then they met Eddie, and then Jean, and one by one the gathering grew.

"We just took a liking to one another, so we formed a group," said Jean Boeltger, 64, a retired waitress. Her husband likes to stay home and fix radios and televisions, but she enjoys her "outing."

"Sometimes we just giggle and everybody looks at us," Boeltger said. "We enjoy ourselves."

On Sundays, when the market is closed, they meet at the Gallery, a glitzy nearby mall. But they prefer the atmosphere of the market, and its scenery.

"There are all kinds of people, all kinds of shapes," Thomas said.

Korean grocers, Pennsylvania Dutchmen and proprietors of upscale French bakeries cater to a lunch crowd from downtown offices and people shopping for the evening meal.

From 60,000 to 70,000 people come to the market each week, according to Harry Ochs, president of the Reading Terminal Market Merchants Association. His grandfather started the family meat business in 1906.

But as much as the retirees like the place, they couldn't come every day if the bus trip weren't free for senior citizens from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

"People ask why I don't walk around my own neighborhood, but I feel more safe here," said Thomas, who lives in southwest Philadelphia.

Two members of the group have poor vision. Charlie Bailey, 68, suffers from glaucoma and can't see himself in a mirror, so he doesn't believe his friends when they tell him he looks good in his straw hat.

"When I turn my back, you probably say I look just like the back of a mule," said Bailey, who used to be bricklayer. "But I'm happy the way I am."

AP LaserPhoto

Lunchtime pals Jean Boeltger, 64, left, Charles Bailey, 68, right, and George Thomas, 82, front, share a laugh while spending their midday hours together at Reading Terminal Market in Philadelphia in May. The group meets daily sharing good conversation and friendship over coffee and the din of the market.

The market's future appeared threatened a few years ago by plans to build the Philadelphia Convention Center above and around it. Plans initially called for closing the market temporarily during construction, but merchants objected and sued in 1989.

Ochs said the agreement that was hammered out will keep the merchants in business and was the best option for the market.

The Convention Center Authority agreed to do the renovations in stages and keep the market open. The authority, which took over the market in November, also promised merchants that it will keep the flavor of the nearly 100-year-old building.

While others worried the market would not survive into the 1990s, Boeltger said she had no doubts.

"I didn't ever think they'd close it because it's a landmark," she said. "People come from all over. It has anything in here that you want."

NOTICE OF COMPARABLE TAX RATES AND REVENUES

The legislature has enacted a statute on school funding to comply with a court mandate enforcing the state constitution. Under prior statutes (SB 1) the tax rate for last year provides $5,246 per student in state and local revenues. Under this statute (SB 351) that same rate now provides $5,504 per student in state and local revenues.

State law only requires a minimum tax rate of $.7075 for county education districts. State law does not require a school district to adopt additional taxes. Neither does state law require a school district to adopt a tax rate that maximizes the receipt of state funds.

The board of trustees of the Stanton School District hereby gives notice that it is considering the adoption of a tax rate of .4945 that will provide $5,554 per student in state and local revenues.

Grand jury doesn't indict officer

FORT WORTH (AP) — A grand jury said Thursday that a police officer accused in the videotaped beating of a car theft suspect did not use excessive force.

A Tarrant County grand jury declined to indict Edward Parnell III, 32, who was videotaped July 3 striking Ernest Anderson several times after the officer stopped his patrol car on Interstate 30.

Anderson, who was in the back seat of the patrol car, kicked out a rear window and tried to jump out onto the busy interstate, police reports said. The officer said most of the blows he aimed toward Anderson in an attempt to subdue the man actually hit the side of the patrol car.

Grand jurors were shown photographs taken of Anderson shortly after the incident. Those photographs appeared to support Parnell's claims because the most visible wounds on Anderson's body were the cuts on his feet.

"I was very thankful for all the support I've gotten so far," Parnell said after hearing the decision.

Chief Thomas Windham said he did not want to comment on Parnell's case, which is still the subject of an internal police investigation.

Lt. Alvin Allcon, a Fort Worth police spokesman, said Parnell could still lose his job.

"The internal affairs investigation will be reviewed and recommendations will be made to the chief," Allcon said. "Ultimately, the chief will make a recommendation whether to take any action or not."

Windham still has about 100 days to decide Parnell's future. Allcon said the officer has been restricted to desk work and will maintain that status until the internal inquiry is complete.

Parnell was arrested two days after the July 3 incident. He was eventually charged with aggravated assault and placed on detached duty.

The officer has maintained throughout the investigation that he had no choice but to use force to restrain Anderson, 21.

The case raised several questions about the use of excessive force by Fort Worth police officers.

It came in the wake of the highly publicized taped beating of a black motorist by white officers in Los Angeles. In the Fort Worth case, both the officer and the suspect are black.

Shortly after Parnell's arrest, Windham instituted a new, comprehensive use-of-force policy designed to give officers what he calls a "single, easily understood" set of guidelines governing their conduct.

However, Windham said he began considering the policy last year and added that it should not be viewed as a response to the Parnell-Anderson incident.

Texas law gives police the right to use as much force as an officer "reasonably believes is necessary" to make an arrest, prevent the escape of an arrested suspect or prevent a suicide.

Police officers claim cook poisoned them

AUSTIN (AP) — Authorities are investigating the possibility that a restaurant cook served up a batch of poisoned chicken-fried steak to four police officers in retaliation for traffic arrests.

"I'm not ready to say that actual poisoning occurred. We are looking into it," police investigator Ray Sanders Jr. said.

Sanders said four officers reported they were incapacitated in May after eating chicken-fried steak at the restaurant on Interstate 35.

The cook, who no longer works at the restaurant, was arrested in 1989 and 1990 for traffic violations, according to police records. The arresting officers weren't among the officers who reported food poisoning, according to records.

An unidentified waitress at the restaurant told a waitress at another restaurant that the man had bragged about serving officers a dish that would make them ill, according to a police report.

Sanders said he has been unable to identify the waitress who allegedly heard those statements.

The former cook could not be located, the Austin American-Statesman reported Thursday.

Officers reporting food poisoning were Kevin Bartles, Cindy Cockman, Roger Hicks and Rick Blackmoore, according to police records.

All uniformed police face a unique situation when they eat in public, Sanders said.

"We sit there in uniform and there is always the possibility that someone (in the restaurant) has been handled by us before," he said.

A supervisor for the restaurant chain said he did not believe the officers had been served bad food at his restaurant.

"By the time they had even mentioned it, it was weeks later," he said. "It sounds like they were trying to get days off or something."

Many officers eat at the restaurant because it offers half-price meals to law enforcement officers, Bartow said.

Girl waits for money while lawyers squabble

HOUSTON (AP) — A $17 million judgment awarded to a brain-damaged child is being held from her while a court tries to determine which of more than a dozen lawyers can be involved in the case and for what fee.

Meanwhile, Taffidie McGough, 4, is being cared for by her grandparents, who are relying largely on donations for her care. Medication alone for the girl runs up to $800 a month, said her grandmother, Linda Wonzer.

Taffidie survived a near-drowning incident in 1989 at an unlocked apartment complex pool. Her 18-month-old sister, Tiffanie, died in the accident.

HR Management, which oversees the apartments where the accident occurred, was found liable for $17 million for Taffidie's care.

The money has been deposited with the court, but Mrs. Wonzer said Wednesday that the child has "not received a cent."

About 15 attorneys are involved in the case. State District Judge Louis Moore has scheduled a separate trial for October to decide which of those attorneys have legitimate claims and what their fees should be.

Lawyers in the case include attorneys appointed by the judge to represent Taffidie, attorneys hired by the defendants and the several plaintiffs in the suit, and lawyers hired by other lawyers to represent their interests in the case, which was a consolidation of three lawsuits.

"We've done our level best," she said. "It just doesn't seem right."

The child is on a respirator all but six hours a day and must be fed through a tube, the grandmother added.

Mrs. Wonzer said she and her husband, Bill, care for Taffidie by themselves in their home.

"Taffy's able to let you know she understands what you're talking about by smiling at you," Mrs. Wonzer said. "She's just a sweet little girl."

What Medicaid doesn't pay of Taffidie's medical costs, the Wonzers have paid out of their own pockets or relied on private charity, Mrs. Wonzer said.

Moore is expected to sign an order soon releasing about $4.5 million in monthly payments of $34,000 for the child's care.

Geologist studies hole to lean about volcanoes

KILBOURNE HOLE, N.M. (AP) — The fury of Mount Pinatubo horrified the world this summer with the power of its explosions, and as ashes continue to spew, a lingering question is: "Will it erupt again?"

University of Texas at El Paso geologist Elizabeth Anthony hopes to help answer that question one day through her research on a giant hole in the southwestern New Mexico desert.

"I honestly think it has a lot of potential to tell us about the lifetime of volcanic fields, their eruption rate and volcanic activity," Ms. Anthony said.

Hidden by desert flora in the Potrillo Mountains about 25 miles from El Paso, Kilbourne Hole draws gasps from breathless visitors who must drive over bumpy paths and trudge across desert dunes to reach it.

The mammoth oval cavity, technically known as a maar, is more than a mile across and a few hundred feet deep.

Towering dunes of supple sand border the crater's rim. Scattered across the dunes and among the desert sagebrush and yucca plants are some of the pieces of Earth that Ms. Anthony hunts, including a glassy, green, gem-like stone known as olivine.

A layer of basaltic rock, formed from lava flow, creates a band around the hole and is buttressed by a layer of silt deposited by the surface water that once covered the area.

"It makes me realize how much force and energy there can be in those volcanic eruptions," Ms. Anthony said. "In geology, we often just look at numbers and describe things that way, but when you go out there, you begin to realize the forces of nature."

The crater is well-known among geologists for its collection of inner Earth guts spewed out thousands of years ago in a cataclysmic event, leaving behind stratified layers of debris.

But geologists don't know exactly how many years ago the Earth's forces blew the top off the desert surface and sent lava, deep Earth crust and mantle shooting above the planet's surface in a turbulent dust cloud.

That is what Ms. Anthony has set out to uncover — the age of Kilbourne Hole.

And since volcanoes and volcanic fields have cycles of calm and cycles of activity, she says by discovering the age of Kilbourne Hole she can study the pattern of that field and make some predictions about what the lifetimes of other fields may be, based on their periods of calm and of activity.

To find her answer, she and two assistants have been squatting in the remote New Mexico desert, duck waddling along paths of volcanic rubble, flicking and fingering the scattered debris and scaling the walls of the Kilbourne Hole.

On a recent June day, their search was for large potassium-containing crystals of magma, or molten rock. The crystals change their composition over time as the potassium decays and becomes argon. The age of a sample then can be figured by measuring the amounts of potassium and argon.

"The going dogma about this whole area was it was a few million years old," Ms. Anthony said. That would make Kilbourne Hole an infant, geologically speaking. The Organ Mountains in Las Cruces are 30 million years old.

The Potrillo Field, which contains the Kilbourne Hole, stretches for a few hundred square miles, from El Paso, Texas to Columbus, N.M., about 70 miles west.

Ms. Anthony said her research, combined with that of other geologists, points to the long existence of a magma chamber 60 kilometers below ground.

"The whole Potrillo volcanic field is very young so it was always a problem to determine how young and how often and frequent the explosions occurred. That's changed drastically in the last five years" as technology has advanced, Ms. Anthony said.

Much of the improved technology emerged from Department of Energy studies on Yucca Mountain, Nev., the proposed site of a nuclear repository. Young geologic features near the mountain had to be tested for volcanic activity.

Tests by another of Ms. Anthony's colleagues, geophysicist Mick Whitelaw, showed that all basaltic rock samples he collected had magnetic grains that point north.

"We live in a period of time now where if you take a compass out, its needle points to the North Pole." Ms. Anthony said. "The fascinating part of the history of the Earth is there was a time when the needle would flip and point south."

The last time that happened was 700,000 years ago, she said. Therefore since the magnetic grains pointed north, it meant the field had to be 700,000 years old or less.

"What we are finding is things have been a good bit younger than 700,000 years," Ms. Anthony said. "We're actually zeroing in on the age."

Tests conducted in July indicate that some of the field is closer to 70,000 years old, she said. The tests also show a significant volcanic event occurred 15,000 years ago.

"That very young activity may very well represent the age of Kilbourne Hole," she said.

Currently, volcanic eruptions are predicted by monitoring magma earthquakes. Ms. Anthony said the method works relatively well, but requires scientists to be at the volcanic cone.

Ms. Anthony said once her work on Kilbourne Hole and Potrillo Field is concluded, what was learned about frequency of eruptions and their duration could be applied to other volcanic fields.

"If we find there were a series of eruptions that lasted say 5,000 years, we can go out to other systems and get a feel for how long they will be active," she said.

Although many volcanoes of the world have historical records of eruptions, there is little information available about how long they will remain active.

Godley arrested

ARLINGTON — Arlington Sam Houston running back Jeff Godley, arrested on charges of stealing two videocassette recorders from a department store, will not play with the team Friday, school officials said.

Godley, 17, was arrested Wednesday at a school office on a warrant accusing him of robbery with bodily injury and was taken to the Arlington jail. He was held there for about an hour before being freed on a pretrial release.

Sam Houston football coach Ken Ozee was first quoted as saying he would allow Godley, the state's leading 5A rusher last season and the catalyst of the Texans' offense, to play Friday night against Grand Prairie High School.

But Sam Houston principal Jerry Griffin on Thursday said Godley will not play or practice with the team until further notice, although he is attending classes.

"Right now coach Ozee and I think it's best for Jeff not to play this week," Griffin said. "We're just going to evaluate it as the situation develops."

Griffin said it had not been determined whether Godley would play next week against Irving MacArthur.

Police said Godley and Emmett Holmes, 18, a former Sam Houston football player, are accused of taking two VCRs on Aug. 2 from Montgomery Ward at a shopping mall in east Arlington.

According to the arrest warrant affidavit, while loading the VCRs into a car, Godley struggled with a security guard, pushing him backward with a VCR, then jabbing him in the eye.

Lee aim set on Eagles

■ As the Midland Lee-El Paso Andress rivalry heats up, the Rebels hope to exact some revenge on the team that knocked them out of the 1990 playoffs.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

You can't ask for much more than El Paso Andress vs. Midland Lee to open a football season and that's the show in town at 8 p.m. today at Memorial Stadium.

In case memory is short, Andress is the team that landed a 10-3 right cross to the Rebels last year in the season opener in El Paso. But that wasn't the end of it. Andress came back with a 21-21 tie against Lee in the Class 5A Small School playoffs, eliminating the Rebels from the state's run for roses by a 5-3 margin in penetrations.

The double dip hurt the Eagles put on Lee last year could mark El Paso's emergence from the shadows of Class 5A football. Did last year mark things to come? That is the question begging for an answer tonight.

Is revenge the key motivational factor for the Rebels? Well, Lee coach Earl Miller says that bigger factors are probably involved, but it's no secret that the Rebs have spent some major time on preparing for this game.

"I think the players, like myself, are tired of practicing," Miller says. "This isn't a fun time of the year. It's nothing but hard work and not something you really enjoy. I think we're ready to play.

"There is no question that we would like to win this one. Who wouldn't? But I really don't think the kids are thinking about revenge. They just want to play. This is the best preparation we've ever had for one game since we had the extra week. We are also healthier than at any time since we started and we've had two really good scrimmages against quality teams. We really have no excuses if we don't play well."

Andress coach Allan Sepkowitz says if there is a revenge factor, it lies with the

MHS travels to Monterey

■ Midland High and Lubbock Monterey just hope to be able to hang onto the ball in both teams' season opener.

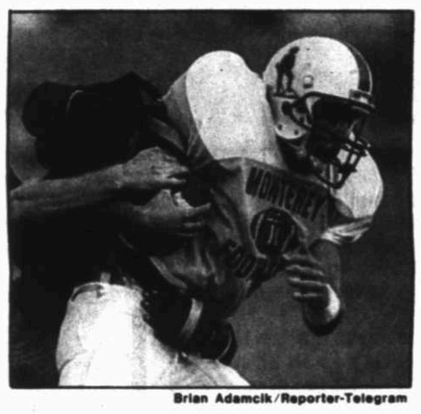

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

LUBBOCK — For the past two seasons, the Midland High-Lubbock Monterey football game has been decided on turnovers.

And, both head coaches agree, that's what tonight's 8 p.m. season-opener here at Lowrey Field will hinge on again.

A year ago at Memorial Stadium, the Plainsmen lost four fumbles and threw an interception on the way to a 7-3 loss. In the 1989 game here, MHS was the error-prone team, as a pair of interceptions cost the Bulldogs dearly in a 33-6 loss.

"We want to keep mistakes to a minimum. We're going to have to be able to control the ball and move down the field a little bit. Those four fumbles killed us last year," said Monterey head coach Bob Brown, whose Plainsmen were 4-5-1 a year ago.

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Monterey quarterback Todd Windfrey gets the nod for the Plainsmen.

"To me, the big key will be mistakes. That's what happened the last two years," agreed Davis Corley, MHS' third-year head coach.

And the fate of both offenses will be in inexperienced hands, as neither team has a returning starter at quarterback.

For the Bulldogs, junior Antwan Goodley will start at quarterback ahead of senior Geoff Simmons. But since Goodley will also start at safety on defense, Corley said Simmons will see playing time.

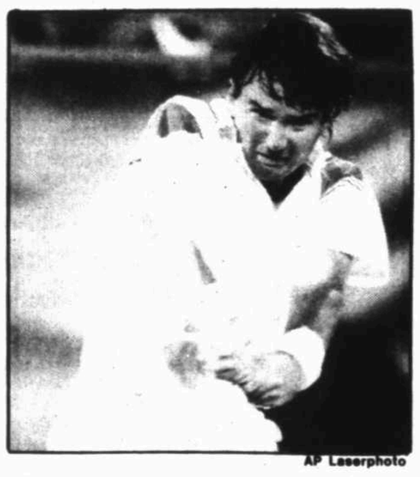

"Right now we are going to go with Antwan. Geoff will definitely come into the game because Antwan is starting on defense too. But to name somebody who will start the game, it will be Antwan," he said.

For the Plainsmen, 6-2, 200-pound senior Todd Windfrey won the first-team spot after battling junior Joey Gonzales, and will key an I-formation offense that scares Corley.

"They're so big offensively. They've got the kind of people that they can stick two tight ends in there and run that power I at us. It's hard to stop down in, down out, and ball control will be a big part of the game, especially if it rains," the MHS coach said.

Connors advances to semis

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Jimmy Connors didn't need a miracle to reach the semifinals of the U.S. Open, just a psyched-out opponent who cracked under pressure and let him steal the match at the net.

Connors methodically took apart Dutchman Paul Haarhuis 4-6, 7-6 (7-3), 6-4, 6-2 Thursday night before another frenzied crowd of nearly 20,000 fans to become, at 39, the oldest semifinalist since Ken Rosewall in 1974.

Connors, a wild card tournament entry who is ranked 174th in the world, reached that round for a record 14th time and is two victories away from his sixth Open title. The last player to win as many as six Opens was Bill Tilden, who won his seventh in 1929.

"Is this for real?" Connors wondered aloud as his achievement sank in. "I can't describe this to you, the highs, the lows. It'll take six months before I can tell you what happened here, and it's not over yet."

Haarhuis, who beat top-ranked Boris Becker in the third round, dominated an unsettled Connors early in the first set, then backed off and allowed him to take control.

Retreating totally to the baseline, Haarhuis ceded the net to Connors and eventually made more and more errors on groundstrokes as the pressure from Connors and the crowd grew.

"I've learned that I can't stay back time after time. It will wear me out," Connors said.

Haarhuis said Connors bothered him more than the crowd.

"I had a chance in the second set to serve it out," Haarhuis said. "He's shown this week that he's come back many times. It was a mistake for me to let the second set go. I started making too many errors."

Sepkowitz becomes hero in El Paso

For years El Paso vs. District 4-5A in football was like oil mixed with water. It didn't?

Oil rich 4-5A always rose to the top. Playing against a team from El Paso was as good as an open date. Odessa Permian, for instance, had a 39-1-1 record against El Paso teams. Midland Lee was 24-2 against border teams.

Williamson

Then came along one Allan Sepkowitz at El Paso Andress with those coke-bottle looking glasses and a desire to play District 4-5A on even terms.

Anyone who has ever sweated over reaching a goal understands what Sepkowitz went through. He had decided his teams were going to learn how to play against the likes of Permian and Lee. He put Lee on his yearly schedule.

It was brutal at first. Lee ripped off big numbers against Andress, but Sepkowitz' Eagles were beginning to understand just what it takes to win against good teams.

Then came 1990, a new decade of Andress football. A regular season victory and a playoff tie against Lee greeted the new decade and Andress finally got to travel across the state to play in a playoff game.

As far as El Paso was concerned, Sepkowitz had won at the Alamo. Restaurants have a seat for him. He's a hero.

And he is a worthy hero. Sepkowitz built a better mouse trap. Sure, he has had some talent in Northwest El Paso. You usually don't win without it on any level. But he did understand that talent must perform at a certain level to win. He showed El Paso at least that much and the lesson has been learned.

No longer expect one of his teams to come in here and just give a game away. It isn't going to happen. And that makes tonight's Lee-Andress game one of the major highlights across the state. This game is no longer an open date or a schedule filler.

In fact, you can use words like revenge, re-match and war. Sounds like a game in District 4-5A. It's more like sugar and tea than oil and water.

Here's how the district will fare tonight:

Midland Lee 21, El Paso Andress 14: Andress has now proved it can play football, but three in a row? I doubt it.

Lubbock Monterey 24, Midland High 18: The Plainsmen have a tight end who can go deep and linebackers with punch. This may be too much for the untested Bulldogs.

Odessa Permian 42, El Paso Irvin 0: Mojo is back, angry and talented. A lot of teams are going to suffer this fate.

Amarillo Palo Duro 22, Odessa High 7: The new Broncho Wishbone hasn't clicked as of yet, and until it does, this is what you will get.

Abilene Cooper 14, Brownwood 10: Cooper wasn't impressive against Sweetwater in a scrimmage, but Brownwood isn't Sweetwater. Surely, former Brownwood coach Randy Allen will place a lot of emphasis on this game.

Stephenville 21, Abilene High 7: Rough opener for Abilene High new coach Carlous Stone.

San Angelo 28, Victoria 20: Leaving West Texas for Austin, the Bobkitties will just see how advanced the passing game has become. The question: Is the defense any better than a year ago?

Bo drives in three

AL

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Bo Jackson drove in three runs with his first two major-league hits since his return from a crippling hip injury, and the White Sox scored 10 runs in the fourth inning for an 11-2 victory over the Royals on Thursday.

Charlie Hough (8-8) was the beneficiary of Chicago's 13-hit, eight-walk offense. The knuckleballer gave up seven hits in eight innings.

In his third start as Chicago's designated hitter, Jackson went 2-for-4 and is now 2-for-12 since his return to the majors Monday. He was released by Kansas City after injuring his hip in an NFL playoff game in January, and he played several minor-league games before arriving in Chicago.

The White Sox scored all 10 of their fourth-inning runs with two outs.

Blue Jays 13, Indians 1

CLEVELAND — Jimmy Key gave up one run in 7 2-3 innings and Rance Mulliniks drove in four runs as the first-place Blue Jays routed the last-place Indians.

Key (15-9) allowed eight hits before rookie Vince Horsman came on and retired four straight batters. The Blue Jays, 9-1 against the Indians this year, have won 10 of their last 14 games overall.

Mulliniks, Roberto Alomar and Candy Maldonado each had three of Toronto's season-high 17 hits. Joe Carter had two hits, including his 31st homer.

Athletics 4, Tigers 1

DETROIT — The Tigers dropped four games behind first-place Toronto in the AL East as Harold Baines had three hits, including a home run, in Oakland's victory over Detroit.

Mike Moore (13-8) allowed one run on six hits and six walks in six-plus innings, before giving way to the bullpen. Moore is 4-1 since coming off the disabled list on Aug. 6.

Red Sox 4, Mariners 3

BOSTON — John Marzano's pinch single scored Carlos Quintana from third base with an unearned run in the 10th inning Thursday night to give the Red Sox a 4-3 victory over the Mariners.

Marzano singled off Mike Jackson to cap a comeback which enabled the Red Sox to remain 5½ games behind first-place Toronto in the AL East.

Padres drop Cards

NL

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Pinch-hitter Benito Santiago hit a two-run single to cap a three-run rally in the eighth inning as the Padres beat the Cardinals 3-1 Thursday, despite a triple play by St. Louis.

Winner Greg Harris (5-4), lifted for a pinch-hitter in the eighth, limited the Cardinals to one run and three hits in eight innings with seven strikeouts and no walks. Jose Melendez got the last three outs for his third save.

Geronimo Pena homered in the third inning to give St. Louis a 1-0 lead and left fielder Milt Thompson preserved the margin by reaching over the fence in the sixth to take a potential two-run homer away from McGriff.

The Cardinals turned their first triple play since Aug. 8, 1988, in the second when Jerald Clark hit a grounder to third baseman Todd Zeile with runners on first and second.

Stadler, Benepe tied

OAKVILLE, Ontario (AP) — Craig Stadler and Jim Benepe had modest expectations for the first round of the Canadian Open.

"I didn't expect to get out of bed," Stadler said Thursday. "I got a cold in Japan last week and yesterday it decided to escalate into something else."

Stadler forced himself into an upright position, sniffled and coughed his way to the golf course and proceeded to shoot an 8-under-par 64 and tie Benepe for the lead.

"A lot better than I expected to play," Stadler said. "And one hell of a lot better than last year."

Last year, Stadler, a former Masters champion, struggled to an 83 in the first round — 19 strokes higher than his nine-birdie effort on the same Glen Abbey Golf Club course in the 82nd Canadian Open.

Benepe, too, more than exceeded his expectations.

"I certainly didn't expect a 64," he said.

There was good reason for surprise. He had missed the cut in 18 of 23 previous starts this season.

"The best round of golf I've ever played as a pro," he said after signing a card that showed no bogeys and no "5's."

Mickelson ires former Chap

PORTMARNOCK, Ireland (AP) — Phil Mickelson led American amateur golfers to an 8-4 lead over Britain and Ireland on the first day of the Walker Cup competition Thursday and was accused of being arrogant.

Mickelson, the former U.S. Amateur champion who won the Tucson Open in January, was one of four Americans to win both a foursomes and singles on the opening day.

Scotsman Andrew Coltart, who played last season at Midland College and was beaten by Mickelson 4 and 3, did not like the American's reaction when he was asked to sink an 18-inch putt to half the ninth hole.

Mickelson held his putter horizontally just off the ground to indicate to the large gallery how far away the hole was. He made it clear he did not think he should have to putt.

"I've seen Seve Ballesteros miss a putt that long and there's no place for what he did in this game," Coltart said. "It was derogatory.

"He's a bit arrogant, but you get people like that."

'DOGS: Plainsmen are big

will likely see starting offensive center Philip Warlick man the middle of the MHS 4-3. Also, offensive guard Brian Booker (a 265-pound junior) will play at 2-technique, giving MHS three two-way starters.

Boasting three linemen that weight 240 pounds or heavier and versatile tight end Buddy Billingsley, who burned Midland Lee in last week's scrimmage, the Plainsmen would seem to have an edge up front. Brown disagrees, though.

"Not when you look at what Midland's got. Booker more than matches up well with us, and that Warlick kid is a solid 180. And they've also got Maurice Lewis (260) on defense. There's no size advantage on our part," Brown said.

"Size-wise we many be equal, but we're not as far as experience is concerned. They've got Shane Dunn (6-3, 260) coming back. He's a big, impressive all-district tackle that gave Joe Phillips (since graduated) all he wanted against us last year," Corley said, who added that MHS will have to keep Billingsley in check.

"He's a super athlete and Coach Brown feels he's an all-state player. We have got to know where he is on the field, because sometimes they line him up out wide and sometimes he'll line up at tight end. You have got to be aware," Corley said.

Corley also noted that Monterey's defense is quick to pursue the ball, which could affect MHS' option.

"They're a real good defensive football team. We may have to run some mis-direction stuff. Lee hurt them with a lot of counters. But I'm sure they worked on that too after Lee hurt them with it," he said.

REBELS: Eagle QB returns

(From 1C)

Rebels.

"I'm sure revenge will be a factor down that way after last year," Sepkowitz says. "Getting past them a couple of times did help our confidence. We just hope that carries over to our younger kids.

"We have only two offensive and two defensive starters back, so it's really hard to say just where we are right now. We are trying to platoon now and we hope that's going to help keep us from wearing down late in the game."

Returning starting Keith Boyd, who was burned in a kitchen grease fire before the start of preseason workouts, joined the team Monday and will start tonight against Andress.

"The doctors told me I might miss the Andress game, but that's one game I really want to play in," Boyd said. "I plan to be back in time."

Andress has quarterback Isiah Lee returning that concerns Miller.

"Andress lost a lot of good players from last year, but they have Lee back and he was a big factor in what they did to us," Miller said. "They are supposed to have more speed than last year and that has to be fast. We couldn't catch them a year ago."

Sepkowitz fears the same old Lee team.

"We'll see the same thing as always — a great offensive line, quick backs and the same game plan. They've been doing this for quite a while now and they're good at it."

Lee will have its eyes on several areas tonight. Miller has been impressed with his kicking game. Returning is field goal and extra point specialist Todd Meade, who had eight field goals last year and newcomer Darrell Lucas, a transfer from Bronte, has been impressive in the punting department.

Lee also looks strong at tight end with returning starter Jeb Honeyman and Abilene Cooper transfer Ryan Tucker. Jovan Tellez, a starter at fullback last year, has been moved to middle linebacker and that is a key move to watch.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Let tomorrow take care of itself while you get caught up in today! Once you clear up a financial matter, everything else seems to fall into place. By Thanksgiving, set a realistic budget and stick to it. Improving your credit record will be a top priority in early 1992. Next spring brings a wonderful period for romance. You find what you have always wanted.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Swoosie Kurtz, baseball's Vince DiMaggio, comedian JoAnne Worley, actress Jane Curtin.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You will enjoy life more now that a financial burden is gone. Continue to pursue a prized goal. Your dreams can come true if your faith is strong. Meet a challenge head-on.

TAURUS (April 20- May 20): Life is never dull when children are at home! Your basic financial needs are met. Practice tolerance when it comes to conducting business overseas. A romantic relationship needs more nurturing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Romance is in the air. A passive attitude is not the way to professional or personal success! Get involved in important discussions. Family attitudes are clearer now. Stand up for your beliefs.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Resistance to change is holding you back and could prove expensive if you do not wake up soon. Short trips are useful. Postpone signing legal or financial papers until more data are available.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Staying fit and trim is as good for your state of mind as your looks. Teamwork helps everyone make more money! Stretch those dollars. Finesse is the key to romantic success.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Make a new plan to achieve your career goals. Further study or research will boost your earning potential. Be open to suggestions from your mate or business partner. Fresh ideas are essential.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An older person may want to go into business with you but lacks capital. Be flexible. A short conference with an attractive member of the opposite sex could give you romantic ideas.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your spirits are high, thanks to a terrific financial or career break. An unexpected gift will add to the fun. An absorbing artistic project could lead to your starting your own business.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A snobbish attitude will only make enemies; show your more generous side. Socialize with younger people when the opportunity arises. A blind date could turn out even better than you anticipated.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Routine tasks are boring but necessary. Complete paperwork before starting a new project. A change of scenery sounds delightful. A friend or relative helps you cut through red tape. Buy a special gift.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Extra money comes in, making you wildly happy. Try not to criticize grown offspring. They must lead their own lives now. A social evening perks up your spirits. Wear something really elegant.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be prepared to deal with someone who tries to swipe your business or contacts. A new neighbor could turn your thoughts toward romance. You shine in the role of host. Throw a small party.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are peace-loving, neat and unafraid of hard work. Conscientious and forward-looking, they seem wise beyond their years. These Virgos' ability to take on big responsibilities at a young age will ensure them success in college or their chosen career. Fired by a keen desire to help others, they may decide to go into social work, nursing or even politics. They are determined to make the world a better place by their efforts.

Opening lead: Six of ♠ Bridge is a game good for the ego. Many players make mistakes by the bushel and never even realize something went wrong! Follow the play on this hand.

The auction was textbook. North-South were using old-fashioned forcing jump raises, and South had no reason to look for more than game.

West led the six of spades, declarer played low from dummy and East inserted the jack. Declarer won the ace, drew trumps and went after clubs. When the suit did not break, declarer came to hand by ruffing a club and led a diamond to the king. Unfortunately, the ace was with East, so declarer lost three diamond tricks and a spade. Did you spot any errors in the play?

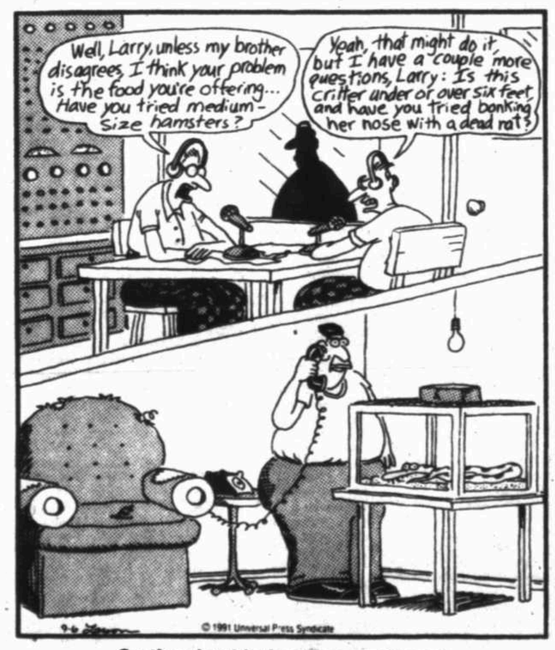

Actually, there were four errors, and three occurred on the very first trick! East desperately wanted a diamond lead through dummy's king. By the Rule of 11, East could have worked out that there was only one spade missing higher than the six and, since West would not be leading away from that card, the only card with which South could beat the six was the ace. Therefore, East should have followed low to the first trick, and West would have been guaranteed another opportunity to lead a diamond.

South made two errors. When East produced the jack, declarer should have allowed it to win, and the spade suit would have been killed as a means of transportation for the enemy. And declarer could have forced the cover by the simple expedient of putting up the ten from the table on the opening lead.

In with the jack of spades at trick one, East returns a spade. Declarer wins, draws trumps and then goes after clubs. When the suit doesn't break, declarer should discard a diamond on the fourth club (ruffing is a mistake). East is forced to yield a ruff-and-sluff or a trick to the king of diamonds by opening up the suit.

Jessica Lange ranks Shepard at top in terms of maleness

NEW YORK — There are men, and then there's Sam Shepard — or at least that's what his current flame Jessica Lange says.

"I've been with a lot of men and I've known a lot of men. And you know I've had romances with what you'd call famous men, and none compares to Sam in terms of maleness," the actress says in the October issue of Vanity Fair.

Yet Lange, who has had a longstanding relationship with the writer-actor, has some regrets about the end of her relationship with one of those famous men — ballet star Mikhail Baryshnikov.

"We might still be together if things didn't happen the way they did," said Lange, who broke off with the dancer years ago. "But we were both very careless about the relationship. . . . Sometimes I think we should have made more of an effort to make it work, because we did love each other so much."

Lang, 42, has three children, one by Baryshnikov and two by Shepard.

Filmmaker Woody Allen announced Wednesday he will leave financially troubled Orion Pictures and make his next film for TriStar Pictures. Allen's relationship with Orion was one of Hollywood's most enduring, covering his films of the past 10 years, including "Hannah and Her Sister," "The Purple Rose of Cairo," "Zeling" and "Broadway Danny Rose."

MANCHESTER, N.H. — Former Gov. Meldrim Thomson, recovering at home after two heart attacks last month, is offering some life or death advice in a newspaper column that almost never was.

"Had I not gone immediately to the hospital on Aug. 22, I would not be here today to give this urgent message," Thomson, 79, wrote in Thursday's edition of The Union Leader of Manchester.

Thomson, who reluctantly allowed family and neighbors to persuade him to go to the hospital after mild chest pain and even joked that the ambulance driver should turn back, already had suffered a mild attack. He had a more serious attack shortly after getting there.

"I was later told that twice my heart completely stopped and had to be paddled back into motion," after an artery closed, he wrote.

After a few days in critical condition, and more hospital recovery time, Thomson returned home last weekend.

He plans to write more about the experience in a column next week, but for now his message is simple: Listen to "the urgent cry of your heart.

"If ever you have any stress, pain, discomfort or any indication at all that something may be wrong with your heart, stop whatever you are doing and go immediately to the nearest hospital for help."

MANCHESTER, N.H. — This Bishop may be a queen, but in Manchester, she's just another knight.

Miss Teen USA, Janel Bishop, went back to class this week at Manchester West High School, three weeks after winning her crown on national television.

The 17-year-old beauty queen has resumed her role as a West High Blue Knight, the school's nickname, after a big welcome home party.

She said she's looking forward to getting back into her studies and onto the soccer field as a member of the state champion girls' soccer team, even though she missed a few practices because of her pageant activities.

"I don't know what kind of shape I'm in, but if I get a chance to play, I'm going to do my best," she said.

MADISON, Wis. — Although actress Helen Hayes' film career earned her two Academy Awards, she says the theater has always been her first love.

Hayes

"Sometimes the audience is annoying, sometimes they go to sleep and snore. But sometimes they're a true inspiration. . . . With film, you stare at a machine with a little red button. With TV, it's lickety split, get off fast," she said Wednesday at Edgewood College.

"As a performer. I yearn for the personal connection with an audience, and the theater is the only place you can get it."

The 91-year-old actress was at the school to accept an honorary degree.

Her connection with the school dates to the college's beginnings in 1927. Sister Marie Aileen, an old friend and former teacher, was the first head of Edgewood College. The actress visited her mentor here four times before the nun's death in 1965.

Ms. Hayes said she believes theater will endure.

"People want live theater," she said. "They want to see people in trouble, getting through a performance without mishaps. The experience of sharing with the audience will keep theater alive."

Prices lower

NEW YORK — Energy futures prices inched lower Thursday in moderate trading.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in October slipped 12 cents to settle at $21.69 per 42-gallon barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Refined products traded on the exchange also lost ground.

Analysts said prices declined in technical dealings following the release late Wednesday of energy inventory statistics. The American Petroleum Institute reported crude oil inventories rose in the week ended Friday, as did inventories of refined products.

In natural gas trading on the Merc, the October contract rose .25 cent to $1.593 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Dollar gains

NEW YORK — The dollar rose against most currencies Thursday in quiet foreign exchange dealings, as traders awaited release of the August employment report. Gold prices fell.

In London, one pound cost $1.6925, worth less than the $1.6940 rate late Wednesday.

Earlier in Tokyo, the dollar fell to a closing 135.32 Japanese yen from 135.85 yen at Wednesday's close.

Other late New York dollar quotes, compared with Wednesday's prices, included: 1.7380 German marks, up from 1.7365; 1.52595 Swiss francs, up from 1.5240; 5.9030 French francs, up from 5.8995; 1,295.50 Italian lire, up from 1,295.00; and 1.14105 Canadian dollars, down from 1.1419.

Sales disappoint

The consumer spending slump pummeled many retailers again last month, another sign the recession continues.

Results were especially bleak compared with the poor performance of a year ago, when the outbreak of the Persian Gulf crisis kept shoppers out of stores and malls.

As in past months, discounters like Wal-Mart Stores Inc. fared better than other merchants as consumers sought lower prices. But even sales at Wal-Mart, the nation's largest retailer, were off slightly.

The August results issued by the retailers Thursday signaled more trouble for the overall health of the U.S. economy, which is depending on a consumer spending rebound for a decisive exit from the recession. Such spending accounts for two-thirds of the gross national product, the broadest measure of economic activity.

Salomon won't pay ousted officers

■ Decision comes after harsh criticism at a hearing Wednesday in Washington.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Salomon Inc. said Thursday it will not pay compensation or future legal expenses for ex-chairman John H. Gutfreund and three other executives who resigned in the Wall Street firm's bond scandal.

Salomon announced its board of directors had decided not to give the executives any severance pay, bonuses or other compensation payments following their resignations last month to take responsibility for the scandal.

The board's decision came after Salomon came under harsh criticism at a hearing Wednesday in Washington from congressmen who called on interim chairman Warren E. Buffett not to pay the former executives any more money.

In addition to Gutfreund, the executives who resigned in the scandal are former president Thomas Strauss, former vice chairman John Meriwether and former general counsel Donald Feuerstein.

Salomon's top management has come under stinging criticism for failing to report bidding violations in Treasury securities auctions to authorities until August despite learning of them in late April.

Salomon said that in addition to compensation, no advance payments would be made for legal fees, and the firm would not pay for offices or other expenses. Salomon said the firm, however, would honor any exisiting legal obligations to the four, but did not provide details.

The action came one day after Salomon disclosed new details about violations at its government bond desk, depicting a renegade operation in which one man repeatedly broke Treasury bidding rules, altered documents to cover up the action, and lied to superiors and regulators.

Salomon is cooperating with several congressional probes as well as federal civil and criminal investigations.

Salomon last week conceded it was paying the legal bills of the former executives and had provided them with office space in the firm's old headquarters in lower Manhattan. At a board meeting Aug. 18 shortly after the resignations, Buffett hadn't ruled out severance packages.

The executives also had been eligible for large severance and compensation packages, and three of them would have been able to share in a $100 million deferred compensation pool to be doled out next year.

Gutfreund, Strauss and Meriwether together earned about $15 million in 1990.

Blue Bell wins name squabble with Japanese

BRENHAM (AP) — Blue Bell Creameries Inc. won its battle with a Japanese company over the use of the Blue Bell name in Japan when the foreign firm backed down Thursday, allowing the Texas ice cream maker to keep its trademark name.

"I only wish we could clear up the host of our other trade problems as quickly," U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, said. "That would clearly be in the best interests of companies and consumers in both countries."

Blue Bell officials had complained to Bensten after the Japanese government rejected the Brenham-based company's application for a trademark and granted the name instead for use by a Japanese firm, Ezaki Glico. Blue Bell had applied for the trademark in June 1989.

Bentsen then fired off a complaint to U.S. Trade Representative Carla A. Hills.

"The quick response to the concerns I raised in my letter to Ambassador Hills (Wednesday) was gratifying," Bentsen said. "The Blue Bell people tell me they were very happy to get the news (Thursday), but I'll bet they're no happier than the Japanese people will be when they get a chance to taste this ice cream as we know it in Texas. There are arrangements to be completed before the Japanese trademark is finalized but at this point the prospects seem bright."

Blue Bell officials did not immediately return telephone calls regarding the trademark decision, which was announced from Bentsen's office.

Earlier, however, they responded to what they termed the "underhanded tactic" by barring Japanese business executives from their ice cream plant.

"I will no longer permit any Japanese national to visit our plant, nor will I ever knowingly purchase any Japanese product," Ed F. Kruse, Blue Bell's chairman and chief executive officer, told Bentsen. "They have proven to me they cannot be trusted.

"It appears to me the Japanese give lip service to opening their trade barriers, and then underhandedly use another means to stop, delay, or limit imports."

Company President Howard Kruse told the Brenham Banner Press that Blue Bell would continue to pursue efforts to sell ice cream in Japan and that the company planned to talk to the Japanese firm Ezaki Glico.

Ezaki Glico, which sent representatives to Blue Bell in 1988 and 1989, apparently returned to Japan and filed for the Blue Bell trademark there.

T. Boon Pickens displays a fueling station at his home in a Dallas suburb Thursday morning.

Pickens uses natural gas to fill vehicle

UNIVERSITY PARK (AP) — T. Boone Pickens has turned his garage into a natural gas filling station.

Pickens, general partner of natural gas producer Mesa Limited Partnership, has the first home in the Dallas area with a $2,500 refueling unit for compressed natural gas vehicles.

The machine, about the size of a residential air conditioning unit, takes natural gas from the line that heats his home and compresses it for his Cadillac.

More than 125 such units have been sold in Texas by Fuelmaster Corp., the Canadian company that makes the only compressor certified by trade groups and regulators like the Texas Railroad Commission.

Most have gone to small businesses and government agencies for fleets. But Gov. Ann Richards, Railroad Commission chairwoman Lena Guerrero and others have added them to their homes.

"Compressed natural gas is a clean-burning, low-cost, American alternative to foreign oil," Pickens said. "There are not any flies on it. You cannot find anything wrong with natural gas."

The natural gas equivalent of a $1.20 gallon of gasoline is currently about 60 cents, Pickens said.

But the cost of converting a vehicle, up to $2,500, and lack of places to fill up has deterred motorists from the alternative fuel.

The economic advantages of such conversions can most quickly be realized by fleet owners, such as school districts.

Iacocca to leave Chrysler at end of '92

DETROIT (AP) — Lee Iacocca, one of the auto industry's most colorful figures, will step down as chairman of struggling Chrysler Corp. at the end of next year, the company's board said Thursday.

The board's terse announcement ended speculation about Iacocca's future. Although his contract as chairman of the No. 3 U.S. automaker expires at the end of this year, Iacocca had hinted he may stay in the executive suite beyond then.

The board said he'd stay until Dec. 31, 1992, and that it had begun searching for a successor.

Among those believed to be contenders are Chrysler President Robert Lutz and Vice Chairman Robert S. Miller Jr. Executive vice presidents William Hoglund of General Motors Corp. and Alexander Trotman of Ford Motor Co. are considered longshots.

Chrysler lost $810 million during the first half of this year and isn't expected to turn a profit before the fourth quarter. The company is trying to sell assets, but isn't finding any buyers.

If events happen as Chrysler executives plan, Iacocca could leave on a high note at the end of next year.

Early next year, Chrysler will christen the Jeep Grand Cherokee sport-utility vehicle, designed to compete with the popular Ford Explorer.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Mutual funds try to keep values constant

By Bill Doyle

Doyle

Q. Under the rules put in force by the Securities and Exchange Commission earlier this year, every money market mutual fund is supposed to hold debt securities with a dollar-weighted average maturity of no more than 90 days.

The portfolio of my money market fund lists securities maturing as late as the year 2027. Furthermore, of the total market value of those securities, only about 10 percent mature within the next 12 months. Yet, the portfolio average maturity is listed as 68 days. The numbers do not seem to correspond.

The fund's prospectus states investments will be in "high-quality securities which mature or have a demand feature exercisable in one year or less from the date of acquisition."

Is that the answer?

A. Yes. You spotted it.

Because they hold short-term, interest-paying securities, money market funds are allowed to use accounting techniques that keep the value of their shares constant — at $1 in the case of most such funds. As a result, such funds are considered among the least risky of all investments.

Because each fund holds many different securities with different market values and maturity dates, calculating its dollar-weighted average maturity is a chore best left to computers.

For simplicity sake, let's say XYZ Money Market Fund has a $200 million investment portfolio, made up of $100 million securities due to mature and be paid off at face value in 30 days and $100 million maturing in 90 days. Voila! The fund's average dollar-weighted maturity is 60 days.

A security with a "demand feature," also called a "put feature" gives its owner the right to present the security to the issuer and collect face value on scheduled dates, even though the maturity date is later.

So, when a money market fund calculates the average maturity of the securities it holds, it uses the next "put date" on each security with a demand feature.

That makes sense. After all, the fund will be able to redeem those securities on the put dates.

Q. About six months ago, the dividends paid by my money market mutual fund dropped sharply and my broker suggested I switch to a short-term bond mutual fund holding bonds with maturities of three to five years. I followed that advice.

I am getting higher dividends now and the per share value of my new fund has held reasonably steady. Actually, it has gained a little bit.

However, I am concerned about risk. Can I count on my new fund continuing to perform as it has so far?

A. Not really. One caution every mutual fund must note in its prospectus and sales literature is that past performance is no assurance of future results. The per share value of a mutual fund is determined by the ups and downs in market values of the securities the fund holds as investments.

Changes in value of short-term bonds naturally are less volatile than market price changes of long-term bonds. That's because the bonds will be paid off at maturity, unless they default.

As a result, short-term bond funds are far less risky than funds holding long-term bonds. But short-term bond funds are not as secure as money market mutual funds, which are virtually free from market risk.

Q. I'm told money market mutual funds are limited in the amount of high-risk commercial paper they can hold. Is that true?

A. Yes. A money market fund now can have no more than 5 percent of its assets in lower than highest-grade commercial paper and no more than 1 percent of its assets in less than top-grade commercial paper issued by a single company.

Commercial paper is an unsecured IOU issued by a corporation. The limitations were put into effect after tens of millions of commercial paper held by money market funds went into default. Fortunately, fund shareholders were not hurt. The management companies of the funds involved made good the funds' loss.

Flooded areas breeding ground for mosquitoes

It's fall and flooding rains have come once again to various parts of Texas. While the water is in itself a blessing, the flooding conditions have caused their share of problems and mosquitoes may come to be at the top of the list, if flooding conditions continue to persist as temperatures fluctuate.

Kiker

The potential mosquito problem is quite different from the usual situation where flower pots, hanging baskets, old tires, cans and buckets, and plugged rain gutters fill up and artificial container-breeding mosquito species continually produce vast numbers of adult mosquitoes. Instead, the current problem comes from mosquito species that place their tiny time bombs (eggs) in fields or woods, where eggs hatch in as little time as five or 10 minutes after flood waters cover them. These breeding sites can occur in fields, roadside ditches or home lawns, anywhere that a depression that already saturated soil holds water for any period of time. These are prolific species which may cause as many as 500,000 to 1 million eggs to hatch in one acre. Adult mosquitoes arising from the larvae hatching from these eggs can fly up to five to 20 miles or more from their breeding sites in search of blood meals. The problem will not lessen until the wet areas dry up or when the major emergence subsides, usually 10 to 15 days after flooding ceases.

Since vast areas may be involved, conventional approaches to control really do not work for floodwater mosquitoes. Source reduction is out of the question as is extensive larviciding. Adult mosquito control (adulticiding) will only provide limited, temporary relief from biting activity. Here is what is recommended.

- Make sure windows and door screens are intact
- Stay inside as much as possible, especially during the evening hours
- Wear repellent and protective clothing whenever outdoors
- Yellow lighting (to include sodium vapor lights) tends to be less attractive to mosquitoes.
- Hang bug zappers away from areas to be protected — use light to attract mosquitoes away from sensitive areas

Be sure not to overlook control recommendation for container-breeding species. Emptying water from containers will help reduce these kinds of mosquitoes which likely will also be on the increase.

The Texas Herb Growers and Marketers Association will have its 1991 Texas Herb Conference on September 20-22 at the College Station Hilton Hotel.

The theme of this year's conference is "Herbs: The Growing Business of Texas." The program will feature presentations, panel discussions and demonstrations covering a wide array of timely and interesting subjects. The conference is designated to interest herbalists from all disciplines and offers up-to-date information to individuals and businesses interested in the decorative, culinary, medical and horticulture use of herbs.

Some of the subjects to be covered in this year's conference include: the outlook for Texas-grown herbs, greenhose management, effective pest control, computer applications, aromatheraphy, pharmacognosy, landscaping with herbs, beneficial insect use, and cut flower production. A trade show featuring herbs and herb-related products will be held with the conference.

Sponsors for the conference are the Texas Herb Growers and Marketers Association, Texas Department of Agriculture and Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

For more information call Samuel D. Cotner at 409-845-7341 or Midland County Extension agent at 687-1351.

FDA head takes positive action

By Faith Keenan
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Once described as an agency "adrift," the federal Food and Drug Administration is now accused of "regulating by Chinese water torture" as it steps up policing of the nation's supermarkets and drug stores.

In the last few months, the federal agency charged with protecting the nation's supply of food, drugs, cosmetics and medical devices has:

- Forced corporate giant Procter and Gamble to remove the word "fresh" from its Citrus Hill orange juice that is made from concentrate.
- Warned companies to end misleading claims about fat and calorie content in food.
- Streamlined the approval process for new cancer drugs.
- Threatened action against drug manufacturers who advertise drugs for purposes for which the drugs have not been approved.
- Begun a review of hundreds of food and drug safety regulations that were never acted on.
- Demanded that companies producing breast implants prove they are safe.

The flurry of hardball tactics is largely due to the agency's new commissioner, Dr. David Kessler. And members of Congress, former FDA officials and representatives of consumer and trade groups who follow the FDA closely don't expect him to let up any time soon.

"He has let us know that this is not the end, but only the beginning," said Jeffrey Nedelman, spokesman for the Grocery Manufacturers of America. "He has reminded us that the F in FDA stands for food."

The trade group represents 140 members that account for eight out of 10 items on grocery store shelves, he said. The FDA regulates the labeling of about 17,000 food items.

Jodie Silverman, a spokeswoman for Public Voice for Food and Health, a consumer group, praised Kessler's strong start, but cautioned that he has a long way to go before restoring credibility to the beleaguered agency.

"He has shown there's a cop back on the beat," she said. "But it remains to be seen if the aggressive posture he has taken in food labeling carries over to food safety."

The stature of the FDA crumbled during the 1980s as its enforcement role slackened during the Reagan years of deregulation and as its budget and staff roster declined in numbers.

The agency endured a major blow in 1988 when it was revealed that FDA employees responsible for approving generic drugs had accepted bribes from drug companies in exchange for speeding their products through the approval process. Four agency officials were convicted of either accepting bribes or of racketeering.

According to a recent report by a special committee assigned by Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan to review the agency's problems, the FDA is "overextended, underfunded and shackled by bureaucratic constraints."

"The absence of a comprehensive, unified statement of purpose contributes to a sense that the agency is adrift," stated the study, which was conducted during the past year.

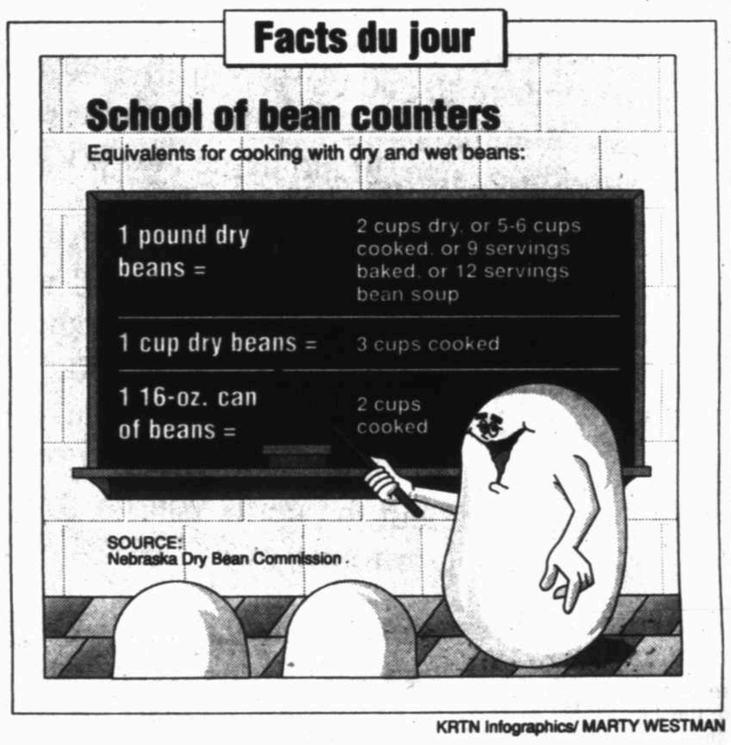

Upon moving to the FDA last November from his former position as chief of medicine at Albert Einstein Medical Center in New York, Kessler, 39, vowed to restore credibility to the agency.

Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., who chairs a health subcommittee that oversees the FDA, said that under Kessler's leadership the agency "seems to be on the track to come back to its former position as a preeminent regulatory agency.

"The most significant part of what Commissioner Kessler has done in singling out violators ... is that it's a signal to all industries that deal with FDA that he plans to take enforcement action that laws be upheld."

Some members of Congress and industry officials, however, say Kessler is picking on easy targets that would have to change their labels anyway by 1993 to comply with a new nutrition-labeling law.

"Dr. Kessler is off to a solid start, but the problems in the agency are very deep and very wide," said Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore. "The test is going to be whether he can take on tough enforcement issues" and keep the FDA staff in compliance with federal ethics rules.

1. Help your reader visualize the item you have for sale. You will sell your merchandise much more quickly if you include a very specific and accurate description of the item in the ad copy. You should include all of the essential details of an effective one-column ad—age, condition, size, brand name and price.

2. Let your reader know when and where to contact you. There is nothing more frustrating then trying to make a call only to receive no answer. Don't make it difficult for potential buyers to contact you! Be sure to include in your ad the hours you will be home to answer inquiries about the items you have to sell. Remember, a potential customer probably will not call twice!

3. Don't use abbreviations. Nvr. frust. a pot. cust. w, abb. You want to make the process of reading your ad easy for your potential customer. Most readers will not take the time to try to decipher confusing ad copy. Limit your use of abbreviations to the following ten: approx. (approximately), ave. (avenue), blvd. (boulevard), bldg. (building), condo (condominium), rec. room (recreation room), refrig. (refrigerator), rd. (road), sq. ft. (square foot), st. (street).

4. Choose a consistent ad schedule. To insure great results, plan to run your ad for several days. If you run the ad only once, you run the risk of missing the buyer most in need of what you have to offer. If you run the ad for several days, you will draw the maximum response. Remember, you can always cancel the ad as soon as you find a buyer!

Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a distributor?

Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?

The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!

RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!
