Summit concludes, differences remain

GENEVA (AP) — President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev today concluded their "fireside summit" and headed home without agreement, or even guidelines, on how to limit nuclear arsenals. The leaders said "serious differences remain," but pledged to accelerate the pace of arms talks.

After two days of talks, both leaders expressed optimism, largely because of a decision to meet again next year and again in 1987. Nonetheless, their differences, rather than five minor summit accords, dominated news briefings by both sides after this morning's cordial closing ceremony.

"All restraint will be blown to the winds" in nuclear competition unless the United States pulls back from its spaceborne anti-missile efforts, Gorbachev said at a news conference where he characterized summit talks as "very frank."

He referred to his many private hours with Reagan and said, "Not a tete a tete went by" without talking about the issues of war and peace. It was "the central thread of our meeting," he said before departing Geneva.

Going into the summit, a chief Soviet goal was to trade the nuclear weapon cutbacks sought by Reagan in exchange for limitation on the president's "Star Wars" program. Reagan vowed to stand firm and apparently did. He also hoped to raise human rights issues uncomfortable to the Soviets, and officials said "extended discussions" did take place.

Reagan, in a 17-hour day across two continents, was to provide his view of the summit this evening, at 9 p.m. EST, in a speech before a joint meeting of Congress. En route to Washington, he was stopping in Brussels to brief leaders of the NATO nations.

Gorbachev was heading for either Moscow or to brief Warsaw Pact allies in Prague; officials would not say.

Reagan and Gorbachev, chatting amiably before separate departures to brief their allies, signaled a thaw in the U.S.-Soviet relationship by announcing they will hold a second summit next year, and a third in 1987. The last summit was held six years ago.

"These two days of talks should inject a certain momentum into our work on the issues between us, a momentum we can continue at the meeting we've agreed on next year," Reagan said.

A U.S. official said the next session would take place in June in Washington, with the return summit tentatively set for Moscow a year later.

Gorbachev, who came to Geneva intent on getting Reagan to abandon his Star Wars missile defense plan, said, "We have to be realistic and straightforward. And therefore the solving of the most important problems concerning the arms race and increasing hopes of peace — We didn't succeed in reaching at this meeting."

The Soviet leader added that, "So, of course, there are important disagreements on matters of principle that remain between us."

Reagan, who sought a sharp reduction in nuclear stockpiles, said, "The real report card on Geneva will not come in for months or even years."

A joint statement added, "the two sides have confirmed the importance of an ongoing dialogue, reflecting their common desire to seek common ground on existing problems."

The leaders reached accord on five agreements covering issues such as cultural exchanges, air safety in the North Pacific, U.S. and Soviet consulates and research on solar technology.

Secretary of State George Shultz, at a news conference, acknowledged the summit "has not produced anything" to curb the nuclear arms race. But he said negotiators may now have "some political impulse" for their talks.

"I would say you get a little advanced by this kind of discussion, but certainly there wasn't any definitive movement," Shultz said.

At his own news conference, beamed to the Soviet Union and broadcast live to America by Cable News Network, Gorbachev said, "We realize the U.S. is unhappy with our reasoning (about Star Wars) but we feel the same way."

Two armed gunmen appear to be robbing the Hereford Federal Credit Union early Thursday morning. Actually, the robbery was staged to prepare the employees in case the real thing ever happened. The Senate approves farm bill changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has approved an unusual hodgepodge of farm bill changes, keeping alive the Reagan administration's hope for an agriculture policy that eventually would wean farmers from federal subsidies.

The lawmakers, voting 56-41, on Wednesday gave Majority Leader Robert Dole the power to represent them in negotiations with the House and to settle the most contentious policy issues in that forum, rather than on the Senate floor.

They did so by approving Dole's unorthodox grab-bag that included enough goodies to buy the majority he had been unable to achieve in negotiations through the two previous weeks on a 1985 farm bill. Dole acknowledged the package was designed more to get votes than to set future farm policy.

"At least we made a big step ... toward getting a farm bill this year," Dole said. "We've got a long way to go."

The move skirted the chamber's deep division over what to do about future farm income subsidies by including both a proposal for a four-year freeze on current payment levels and another calling for a one-year freeze followed by annual 5 percent reductions.

That issue will have to be settled when the Senate and House conferees meet to work out their differences. The House bill would provide for a five-year subsidy freeze.

Dole's package also included a new $35-an-acre subsidy, for 1985 only, for qualifying soybean producers, increased forgiveness of federal loans to rice growers, higher disaster payments for soybeans and sugar crops damaged by bad weather, new guaranteed minimums on income subsidies for grains and even a new subsidy for growers of sunflowers.

"It was expensive," said one senior staff aide, although the Congressional Budget Office estimated the overall package would result in three-year savings of $6 billion, including $2.7 billion realized from the subsidy cuts.

Credit Union 'robbed'

By SHAWN COCKRUM
Staff Writer

The Hereford Federal Credit Union was the scene of an early morning hold-up Thursday as three men, armed with a .12 gauge shotgun and two .357 magnums, forced employees and patrons to stand with their hands over their heads while an undetermined amount of money was taken.

Or so it may seem. Actually, Credit Union general manager Bob Baker joined the Deaf Smith County Sheriff's Department in staging the hold up by using the services of Panhandle Regional Crime Prevention Coordinator John Bradshaw. Bradshaw provides his "mock robbery" services for financial institutions throughout the Panhandle. The service is to allow the employees to actually go through the fear and confusion of a robbery.

The armed bandits were all members of area law enforcement agencies using weapons loaded with blanks. The three would-be bank robbers were placed in a closed off office and were told to proceed at about 7:45 a.m. The assailants rushed out of the office, fired a shotgun blast, and told all those present to turn and face the window with their hands behind their head. They next had a teller empty the cash drawer, then left the scene. Employees then wrote down a description of each man.

Following the fake robbery, Bradshaw read over the descriptions and brought the robbers back into the room.

"You did a super job with the evidence and descriptions," Bradshaw told the group of employees.

Baker stated that even 35 to 40 minutes after the exercise the employees were excited. "Even though the employees knew that the robbery was going to happen, the adrenaline was really flowing, especially when they saw those guns," Baker said. "I felt the exercise went especially well."

Bradshaw's services are much in demand, the Hereford Credit Union had to wait about six weeks before the robbery could be staged.

Bradshaw stated that most people fear the unknown in these situations. "We hope that we can relieve the anxiety of the situation by letting people see for themselves what is involved."

The perpetrators were instructed to keep yelling as loud as they could to keep the employees off balance. In the descriptions, the employees admitted that all the yelling got them confused.

Later, the employees were told that in most situations the assailants were just a nervous as they were. "You should just do what they tell you to do, when they tell you to do it," Bradshaw told the employees.

On one of the Brand sports pages Sunday was a feature on senior football players at Hereford High School. The players were interviewed about highlights of the season and their future plans. It was an appropriate feature for those who had donned the pads for the last time for HHS.

However, we got to thinking about another group of athletes who never get much recognition—those who sat on the bench most of the season. Back in the 17th century, John Milton wrote: "They also serve who only stand and wait."

We doubt football was being played in those days, but the thought is the same. The spotlight seldom shines on the bench warmers, yet they are a necessary and vital part of any sport.

It's the substitutes, the bench warmers, the ones who serve as canon fodder who provide the regulars the opportunity to sharpen their skills and learn to execute the plays that make the difference between victory and defeat.

Waiting for a chance to become a regular can be a demeaning and frustrating experience for many youngsters. They may not realize it at the time, but the bench-warming experience is part of the education received in sports participation. But, the rallying cry of "Wait til next year!" is the reward-like carrot dangling at the end of a stick.

So, we salute the members of the Herd football team for their great season, and we reserve a pat on the back to all those youngsters who rode the bench. The teams could not have done without you. To paraphrase Milton, "You served while you sat and waited."

Kate causes Florida evacuation

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Hurricane Kate trudged steadily northward through the Gulf of Mexico today, and 87,000 Panhandle residents were ordered to flee inland from the storm whose 110 mph winds and tidal surges have been blamed for up to 10 deaths.

Gov. Bob Graham called out 300 National Guardsmen to prevent looting in three of the eight coastal counties he ordered evacuated and to set up roadblocks on roads jammed with refugees from Kate's threatened fury.

"It's still a formidable hurricane and we are predicting no further weakening," forecaster Gil Clark said today at the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables.

About 2,200 people were evacuated Wednesday from Grand Isle, La., and coastal residents in Louisiana, Alabama and Mississippi prepared for what could be the fourth Gulf Coast onslaught this year.

Kate, which caused up to 10 deaths in Cuba during a 16-hour battering Tuesday and blacked out wide areas of the Florida Keys, stalled for several hours earlier today while its center reorganized. Slightly weakened, the late-season storm then began moving and has clung stubbornly to its original course, Clark said.

"This will bring the center across the Florida Panhandle later today or tonight," Clark said. Kate would be the first Atlantic hurricane to reach land in November since the Yankee Storm hit the Florida Keys on Nov. 4, 1935.

Never before have four hurricanes struck the same area in one season, and business and Red Cross coffers already have been drained of

Reserves key to energy industry

HOUSTON (AP) — A glut of mergers and buyouts is making it harder for several major U.S. energy companies to dole out sufficient money to replace their vital oil and gas reserves, according to a new study.

And smaller independent companies often lack the capital for such exploration and development, said a study of the industry released Wednesday by Arthur Andersen & Co.

Finding new oil and gas reserves is "the real key factor" that affects the financial status and futures of energy companies, said Richard Adkerson, director of the nationwide accounting firm's Houston-based oil and gas industry services.

"For them to be able to stay in business, they have to be able to replace those reserves," he said.

But while domestic energy companies' profits rose 7.5 percent in 1984 — the first time in four years, many of the 400 firms surveyed were plowing smaller portions of their profits back into exploration and development.

Profits declined 7.4 percent in 1983 and 18 percent in 1982, according to the annual study, which examines trends in the oil and gas industry from 1980 to 1984.

Man convicted for castrating dog

PALO PINTO, Texas (AP) — A county judge said he has received notice of appeal from a man convicted of cruelty to animals for castrating a neighbor's dog in a trial that drew more spectators than a murder case.

Dale Scott was sentenced Wednesday to one year's probation and ordered to pay $1,400 in fines and restitution. Scott was convicted Tuesday in a day-long before Palo Pinto County Judge Norman Porter.

Porter said 17 witnesses were called to testify. "We had a capital murder trial that was highly publicized. But we had a bigger crowd than during that capital murder trial," Porter said of Tuesday's trial. "We actually had more witnesses."

Scott, a Mineral Wells businessman, testified during the trial that he castrated his neighbor's dog. But he said he followed standard medical practice and denied torturing the dog.

Scott said the dog, a young Yorkshire terrier named Cajun, had been bothering his female dog for more than a week before he decided to use his agriculture training to castrate the dog.

"I was going to castrate it to alleviate the problem I had," said Scott. "I'm not one to kill dogs or be that vicious to them."

Porter said publicity surrounding the case involved a pre-trial allegation that Scott had castrated the dog with a pair of pliers. But the judge said claim was not made during Tuesday's proceedings.

Convicted killer prepared to die

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Convicted killer Jay Kelly Pinkerton, facing lethal injection next week for the slaying of an Amarillo woman, says he's hoping to duplicate his efforts of earlier this year, when he succeeded in an appeal that blocked his date with death.

From what I understand, my family, my lawyer, are still working on it," he said Wednesday in what could be his last meeting with reporters.

Pinkerton, 23, who would be the youngest person put to death in the United States since the Supreme Court allowed the death penalty to resume in 1976, says he too is working "around the clock" on what he hopes will be a 30-page appeal he'll mail to the high court.

T.I. cuts 500 from payroll

AUSTIN (AP) — Officials of Texas Instruments Inc., as part of a plan to return their troubled computer division to profitability, have cut 500 workers from the Texas payroll, including 250 workers here.

Texas Instruments also laid off 200 people in northwest Houston and another 50 workers in Temple. Officials said the layoffs were part of a cost-cutting campaign designed to trim $70 million and 1,000 employees from the company's Data Systems Group, headquartered in Austin.

The cost-reduction plan, announced in late October, provided workforce reductions in the Data Systems Group to 5,500 people and consolidation of operations in Austin and Temple. Counting the most recent layoffs, the group employs 5,700 people.

TI's Data Systems Group produces printers, terminals, minicomputers, personal computers, and artificial intelligence workstations. Steve Leven, TI personnel director, told the Austin American-Statesman the layoffs hit a wide range of employees, but declined to provide any further details on the kinds of workers affected by the announcement.

Officials said the company's Austin employees were told Wednesday morning they had lost their jobs.

Leven said the company within the next six months plans to close its College Station facility, which now employs 250 people making personal computers. That work will be transferred to Austin.

TI is trying to place some of its College Station employees at other TI operations, including Austin, he said.

The company, after reporting a 16 percent decline in sales and an $82.8 million loss during the third quarter, announced plans to cut 2,200 people from its worldwide payroll.

Officers equip themselves against AIDS

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Fort Worth undercover vice officers who fear they might contract the deadly Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS) are taking special precautions when handling persons they arrest, police officials say.

They have added such items as alcohol, hydrogen peroxide, rubber gloves and tetanus shots to their crime fighting arsenal.

The medical supplies are being furnished to officers who make most of the department's average of 160 prostitution arrests each month. They say the precautions were prompted by a fear of AIDS and other diseases.

Although health officials say AIDS and other diseases such as gonorrhea and syphilis usually are spread only through sexual contact, the undercover officers are taking no chances.

"We're using gallons of alcohol," one undercover officer told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Police vice Capt. B. Ray Armand said he has discussed the problem with health officials and they have assured him that the diseases are transmitted sexually, "but there's one chance" officers could be infected by touching or fighting with a suspect.

"I can't imagine how much alcohol we use," he said.

Armand said officers fear dealing with prostitutes because they have multiple sexual partners, increasing the risk of infection.

"All our arrests are made face-to-face, but they are made within arm's length," Armand said.

A health official says that the officers face a greater possibility of encountering people with some type of venereal disease than they do an AIDS victim.

Lois Kantor, manager of the sexually transmitted disease program for the Fort Worth-Tarrant County Health Department said two of the 30 people in the county since Oct. 31 confirmed to have AIDS are females.

D.H.S. to conduct hearing

The Texas Department of Human services, the state agency which provides assistance to needy families and children and aged and disabled persons, will conduct a hearing in Amarillo to obtain public comment regarding program directions, budget priorities, and expenditure of federal block grant funds including Title XX and Low-income Home Energy Assistance.

The hearing is scheduled for 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Dec. 2, 1985. It will be held in the Continental Room, First National Bank, 8th & Taylor. Facilities are accessible to disabled persons and interpreters will be available for deaf or Spanish-speaking persons.

Conducting the hearing will be members of the department's advisory committees and staff of the agency. Comments from individuals, representatives of interest groups, and recipients or providers of agency services will be recorded for consideration by department executives in establishing a program and funding plan for 1987 through 1989.

Almost one out of every nine Texans use one or more department services. During fiscal year 1985, the agency provided services for 1.7 million people or about 10.6 percent of the population. Services include financial assistance, health care, day care, family planning, employment services, nursing home care, community care, licensing of child-care facilities, and protective services.

millions of dollars because of the storms.

One death was reported during the evacuation, when an 81-year-old woman evacuated from Panama City to a hotel in Chipley suffered a heart attack Wednesday night, said Joy McIlwain, state emergency management spokeswoman.

Washington County officials listed the death as stress-related but had not decided whether to blame it on the hurricane, Ms. McIlwain said.

At 8 a.m. EST, Kate was centered near latitude 28.4 north, longitude 86.6 west about 130 miles southwest of Apalachicola and was moving north at 5 to 10 mph, Clark said.

Forecasters were waiting to see whether Kate would turn to the northeast as expected before lowering hurricane warnings posted from Bay St. Louis, Miss., just east of New Orleans through Alabama and possibly extending them from St. Marks to Cedar Key.

Flood tides as high as 12 feet above normal were expected along Florida's west coast, and small craft were warned to stay in port from central Louisiana to Jupiter Inlet on Florida's eastern coast.

Graham declared a state of emergency in 12 north Florida counties and ordered mandatory evacuation for an estimated 87,000 people in low-lying and coastal areas in eight counties.

At least 2,000 people packed 34 shelters opened for evacuees, most in the Panama City area, said Ms. McIlwain. Northbound roads toward Tallahassee were jammed with cars as thousands of residents fled the eight counties, she said.

"This year it seems that every two or three weeks we have a hurricane that imperils our state," Graham said.

Personal spending fell last month

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' personal spending plummeted 0.9 percent last month, the biggest decline in almost 25 years, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department attributed the big plunge to a drop in car sales following an auto-buying binge in August and September.

Personal income rose 0.4 percent in October, the best gain since a 1 percent rise in April.

The big spending spurt had left consumer debt levels at a record high and the personal savings level at a record low. Given those two factors, analysts had predicted that spending will slow sharply in coming months as consumers take a breather.

This slowdown is expected to have adverse effects on the overall economy. Since consumer spending makes up almost two-thirds of the gross national product, many analysts are predicting extremely weak growth in coming months.

The government reported Wednesday that the GNP grew at a 4.3 percent annual rate this past summer, the fastest clip in more than a year.

While the Reagan administration is forecasting growth will top 5 per-

Funding vital to campaigns

LUBBOCK — A candidate may have all the right answers, but if there is insufficient money to finance the campaign the race may be over long before election day, according to a Texas Tech University political scientist.

Professor Murray C. Havens said, "There is a threshold point in campaign financing. If a candidate can't raise a certain level of money, then running a serious campaign is difficult."

That threshold level is dependent on what level of campaign is being run, Dr. Havens said.

With candidates gearing up for the 1986 election year, Havens estimated that on a local level, a hotly contested race in a medium-size city could cost at least $25,000, Havens estimated.

"For a congressional race at least $250,000 must be raised," he said. "And in a state like Texas, a gubernatorial campaign would require at least $3 million."

Havens said an increased reliance by voters on television as their prime source of information has caused campaigning to evolve into an expensive media spectacle.

"Prior to the mid 1950s, television was not the principal instrument of campaigning as it is today," he said. "Thirty years ago a presidential candidate could run a reasonably satisfactory campaign for $10-$20 million. Now, with television, it takes about 10 times that much to run a successful race."

While a great deal of a campaign's money is spent in the media, Havens pointed out that other expenses such as survey research, travel, campaign staff and fund raising take up huge amounts of money.

"One of the most expensive things in a campaign is fund raising," he said. "It takes a lot of money to raise money for a campaign. That's why if a candidate has some personal wealth he's willing to spend to begin with, he may find it a tremendous help in getting to the point where campaign contributions are beginning to flow in."

Havens said the rise of political action committees (PACs) indicates how important campaign financing has become. PACs have grown in importance and influence because special interest groups and individuals want to make it obvious how much they are contributing to a candidate.

Havens said the candidate who has no personal wealth has to start from scratch raising funds is at a disadvantage.

"That kind of candidate may find the effort necessary to get those first few contributions has exhausted his resources and he finds he's out of the race early simply because he can't raise the money necessary to get more money," Havens said.

"Before PACs the same amount of money was probably donated, but it was in the form of many smaller individual contributions," Havens said. "Now because the money can come in one very large sum, the candidate is much more aware of the impact of the contribution."

Havens said while various types of limitations have been imposed on how much can be donated or spent, no method has succeeded.

"It's almost impossible to enforce those kinds of laws anyway," he said. "There are almost always loopholes if someone is clever enough to look for them. If you place limits on how much people can give to a campaign organization, then the candidate just creates more organizations."

Havens said enforcing campaign finance laws has also been a problem.

"All too often it's not really practical for anybody to do the job," he said. "A body may have legal authority, but they are usually not inclined to do so."

He said this reluctance is partly due to enforcement techniques which normally have to wait until after an election has been decided.

"If you are trying to punish the winner, that's awkward and difficult. And what's the point in penalizing the loser anyway," he said. "Occasionally there are blatant infractions, and you see prosecution and convictions, but that usually means the person or group charged were not very subtle about the means in which they gave their money."

Havens said he is convinced that no one person could "buy" an election just because he spends the most money. But, he is concerned that many good candidates never run because they simply cannot raise sufficient money.

"I think a lot of good people get ruled out early simply because they don't have the financial resources to wage a viable campaign and that hurts the political system."

Export crisis for grapes, cotton

California has ag problems

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — As crops began to sprout last spring, farm leaders in California — the nation's biggest agriculture producer — were hopeful that the hard times facing farmers were beginning to ease.

Most crops have been harvested, however, and farmers say the crisis remains. High interest rates and a still strong dollar continue to hamper exports, leading to depressed domestic prices, profits and land values.

But as always seems the case with California's wide variety of crops, not all are in trouble.

Growers of tree fruits like peaches — which have gone through long stretches of tough times in the past — had a good season this year as declining acreage better matched demand. Demand and prices also were good for citrus growers.

But growers of the state's top two cash crops — grapes and cotton — continue to have serious problems, particularly with exports.

Raisin and wine grape growers have not recovered markets lost when the dollar's value rose strongly against other currencies in recent years and European competitors began pushing harder — with unfair subsidies, some Americans contend — to sell their products.

"Some growers still probably are going to go out of business," said Fred Price, field representative for the Raisin Bargaining Association. "Where are they going to get the interest payments from when they can't even cover cash outlay to make their crop? They can't service their debts."

Growers of the San Joaquin Valley's high-quality Acala cotton faces the same weakness in export markets. China, which had been a major importer, now is growing enough cotton for its own needs and is beginning to export.

With record world production and the continued strong dollar, exports of American cotton are expected to drop from 6.2 million bales in 1984-85 to 3.5 million bales this season, said Cathy Merlo of the Calcot grower cooperative.

Some crops offered a mixed bag in 1985. For instance, growers of medium short-grain rice, which represents more than 80 percent of California's crop, had a fairly good year because there was good demand, said Ralph Newman, president of Farmers' Rice Cooperative. But growers who stuck with long-grain rice ran into surpluses.

Some of the worst-strapped growers have lost their land, a rarity since the Depression half a century ago.

"We have seen a continual downturn in some land prices," said Darryl Zenger, chief of farmers' programs for the federal Farmers Home Administration.

Craig Nielsen, senior vice president of Farm Credit Banks of Sacramento, is one who thinks the situation has become worse since spring.

"We do have an increasing number of loans in foreclosure status," Nielsen said. "It's still a very small percentage, but the point is, it is increasing."

Agribusiness leaders say the federal deficit needs to go down before exports can go up and soak up some of farmers' oversupply.

Soybean prices could improve in coming months

COLLEGE STATION — Although worldwide oilseed stocks are still bulging, soybean prices could improve a bit in the coming months.

After a long downward trend since last spring, soybeans prices appear to have bottomed out, points out Johnny Feagan, economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Feagan says the following factors should help the soybean market in the new few months: the U.S. dollar is finally decreasing in value, making exports more competitive; an abundance of oilseed supplies are available at a bargain, and lower prices tend to encourage purchases for present and future use; and the demand for soybean meal has increased considerably.

Feagan expects soybean exports to increase a bit in 1986 over this year, and he also anticipates some increase in domestic usage of soybeans.

Federal sugar program becomes important part of industry system

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new report by the Agriculture Department says the government's current policy of supporting the domestic price of sugar has effectively protected the industry from world price fluctuations.

"But in doing so, it has supported the production of U.S. beet and cane ... at costs which are well above current world market prices, and enhanced the profitability of domestic producers of high-fructose corn syrup," the report said.

The report, issued Thursday, said the federal sugar program has become such an important part of the system that "without continuing government assistance, the U.S. sugar industry would undergo a major structural upheaval" if domestic supports and quotas were removed so that unlimited amounts of lower-priced foreign sugar could enter the market.

"Many producers and processors would go out of business, the industry would wither in some regions, and the remaining units would have to adjust their operations to become more cost competitive," the report said.

However, the report added that in the long run, "The general interest of society would be served best with less international protectionism so that sugar production could be concentrated in those countries that have a comparative advantage."

One policy option is for the United States to use its influence to reduce protectionism by all the major sugar producing and exporting nations, the report said. Another option "is to engage in retaliatory protection by increasing price supports and imposing higher import fees and more restrictive import quotas on sugar."

The farm legislation being worked out in Congress includes a provision that generally extends the current sugar program, including supports or loans to processors of 18 cents a pound, with annual increases depending on inflation.

Current sugar import quotas and duties would be used to keep cheaper foreign sugar out of the United States and keep domestic market prices above 21 cents per pound.

The report was prepared by Frederic L. Hoff and Max Lawrence of the department's Economic Research Service.

One of the effects of U.S. sugar policy has been the rise in use of high-fructose corn syrup or HFCS as a sweetener in a wide variety of food products consumed by Americans, including many soft drinks.

With sugar costs elevated by the support program, corn sweetener has become highly competitive, and more profitable.

"As a result of the inroads made by HFCS under the umbrella of sugar price supports, U.S. sugar imports are now less than half their level of the early 1980s, the report said. "This reduction in imports is equivalent to about 10 percent of the world free market."

According to estimates developed by Landell Mills Commodities Studies Ltd., London, England, U.S. production costs "are clearly above both current world prices and the prices at which major can sugar exporters can operate profitably," the report said.

"This means that the U.S. sugar industry is not in a position to compete in an open domestic sweetener market unless it receives government assistance on a continuing basis.

World production of sugar increased from 73 million metric tons, raw value, in 1970 to more than 100 million tons in 1982 before edging down slightly the last few years.

Although consumption has increased, it has not kept up with production, meaning there has been a buildup in global sugar inventories.

Cuba, the European Community, Brazil and Australia accounted for nearly two-thirds of the sugar entering world trade in 1980-83. The four largest importers — the Soviet Union, United States, Japan and China — accounted for nearly half of the world imports.

Plant pathologist named as 'distinguished scientist of year'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A plant pathologist who specializes in the fungus diseases of wheat has been named as the Agriculture Department's distinguished scientist of the year.

The award will be made on Monday to R. James Cook, according to Terry B. Kinney Jr., administrator of the department's Agricultural Research Service, who described Cook as "one of the world's top authorities on soil-borne fungal diseases."

"Because of his extensive research, we may soon be able to stop the most destructive of these diseases through the use of ecological and biological control methods that are safe for the environment," Kinney said.

Cook was chosen especially for having identified pythium as the chief cause of stunted growth and poor yields in wheat grown on minimally tilled fields in the Pacific Northwest. He and several colleagues developed a bacterium that can shield wheat roots against pythium.

Cook is the agency's supervisory plant pathologist for root disease and biological control research in Pullman, Wash., and is also adjunct professor of plant pathology at Washington State University.

Several others in this year's award competition also will be recognized: Arnel R. Hallauer, Ames, Iowa, for work in corn genetics; Lyman B. Crittenden, East Lansing, Mich., for work on commercial chicken flocks; and Steve C. Huber, Raleigh, N.C., for enzyme controls of carbon metabolism in plants.

Beef industry placing hopes on new products

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Care for some beef McNuggets? How about frozen taco meat ready to heat and serve?

The beef industry is placing high hopes on new, convenient and leaner beef products, according to members of the Amarillo-based Texas Cattle Feeders Association.

About 1,200 members of the association's estimated 6,200 members were in Fort Worth this week for its annual convention.

The group is worried about slumping consumer demand for beef and increasing health worries over heavy beef consumption.

"Our greatest hopes are on a restructured product" — a steak formed from the best parts of chuck roasts bound together by an edible product "right out of the nation's health food stores," said Marvin Berschet, an Ohio and Texas cattle feedlot business veteran of 30 years.

Berschet said Monday the formed steak would be held together by calcium alginate, a byproduct from common algae already found in traditional health store foods.

"It's strictly healthy, a natural," Berschet said.

The process, still awaiting federal Food and Drug Administration approval, would enable the beef industry to improve cheaper cuts of meat, such as chuck roasts, that are becoming less popular with consumers, he said.

By pre-cooking the tailored items, which would come in any shape or size desired, they could be ideal for heating in microwave ovens, Berschet said.

The business of keeping consumers' taste for beef intact is big business for the industry. The cattle feeders are worried about a decrease in retail beef consumption from an annual peak of 104 pounds in the 1970s to about 72 to 78 pounds this year, with poultry gaining the market share beef has lost.

"Fat is the issue, not beef," said Jo Ann Smith, president of the National Cattlemen's Association.

The industry is depending on a $70 million to $80 million beef promotion and product development campaign to reverse the slump in consumer demand, Ms. Smith said.

USDA tightening up indemnity rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is tightening up on procedures for paying federal indemnities to curb outbreaks of brucellosis, also called Bang's disease.

Henceforth, officials said, indemnities will be paid for animals destroyed only if those are killed as part of "a total herd depopulation or as part of an approved action plan" to eliminate the disease from known infected herds.

"This rule is necessary to help ensure that herd owners do not abuse the indemnity system by not taking adequate measures to eradicate the disease from their infected herds," said Bert W. Hawkins, head of the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

Federal indemnity rates include: $50 per head for non-registered beef cattle and bison, $250 for registered animals and non-registered dairy cattle, and $50 for certain calves.

Hereford is site of 2 more playoff games

Whiteface Stadium continues to be the site of high school playoff action this week when games are scheduled Friday and Saturday.

A class A regional playoff game between Phillips and Amherst will be played Friday at 7:30 p.m. at the stadium. Phillips has an 8-2 season record, and Amherst is 7-2-1.

On Saturday at 2 p.m., Perryton goes against Post in a class AAA area playoff contest. Both teams have 9-2 season records.

Phillips placed second in District 1-1A with a 6-1 record, with its only loss coming to Wheeler which is undefeated at 10-0. Wheeler was ranked third in the state in the Harris Rating System's final regular season rankings.

Phillips closed out the regular season last Friday with a 14-0 victory over Groom.

Amherst scored a 22-13 win over Nazareth in a District 2-1A zone playoff game last week. Amherst went into the game as a 16-point underdog, according to the Harris Rating System.

Amherst moved out to a quick 6-0 lead over Nazareth when Jerry Smith returned the game-opening kickoff 97 yards for a touchdown.

Nazareth, however, held a 7-6 lead at the end of the first quarter.

Amherst gained a 14-7 halftime lead after Brad Williams caught a 15-yard touchdown pass from Kevin Fluellen.

In the fourth quarter, Amherst increased its lead to 22-7 when Ronnie Price rushed three yards for a touchdown. Price's touchdown capped off a 94-yard drive.

Nazareth scored its other touchdown with just six seconds left in the game.

The Harris Rating System lists Phillips as a nine-point favorite over Amherst.

The class AAA area playoff game on Saturday brings together teams that wiped out their opponents in the bi-district playoffs.

Post walloped Fabens 75-14, and Perryton pulled something of an upset by defeating Tulia 34-7.

Post was ranked 26th in the state in the final regular season Harris rankings, and Perryton was 36th. The Harris Rating System puts Post as only a two-point favorite over Perryton.

Post running back Tracy Price scored three touchdowns in the first half as Post built up a 40-0 halftime lead over Fabens. Bruce Crenshaw of Post returned the game-opening kickoff 93 yards for a touchdown.

Two players named Kirkpatrick also played roles in Post's wipeout victory. Ben Kirkpatrick rushed 10 yards for a first quarter touchdown, and Joel Kirkpatrick passed 11 yards to Danny Foster for a second quarter score.

The only touchdowns that Fabens could produce against Post were a 100-yard kickoff return and a 26-yard touchdown pass, both scored by the same player.

Perryton was rated as a six-point underdog against Tulia, according to the Harris Rating System, but crushed Tulia 34-7.

Perryton and Tulia were tied 7-7 at the end of the first half. Perryton gained the lead for good when Mike McKinley raced 83 yards for a touchdown in his team's first play of the second half.

McKinley had completed a 10-yard pass to Damon Witt for Perryton's first half touchdown.

The Perryton defense then stopped Tulia in a crucial third down play in Tulia's next possession, and the romp began to take shape.

McKinley rushed five yards for a touchdown that helped move Perryton to a 21-7 lead later in the third quarter. McKinley scored again in the fourth quarter with a two-yard run.

Perryton quarterback Chris Wright helped set up both of these last two touchdowns, the first one with a 34-yard pass to Taylor Newcomb, and the other one with a 25-yard run.

The McKinley name figured in Perryton's last touchdown, but that one was scored by Jeff McKinley, who rushed three yards for the touchdown.

Based on each team's last game, the Perryton-Post battle could be a high scoring one if the two potent offensive machines both get rolling.

Texas Tech closes '85 season at Houston

Texas Tech's Red Raider football team closes out the 1985 season Saturday when they play the Houston Cougars at the Astrodome in Houston. Kickoff for the Texas Tech season finale is 7 p.m. Each team has just one victory in the Southwest Conference.

Texas Tech is 1-6 in the conference, and 4-6 overall. Houston stands at 1-5 in the SWC and 2-7 overall.

The Red Raiders will be looking for their first win ever in the Astrodome over Houston. The Cougars have defeated Texas Tech in all four meetings between the two schools at the Astrodome.

Houston lead the all-time series against Texas Tech, 13-4. Texas Tech's last win over Houston was 22-21 in Lubbock in 1978. Texas Tech did win once in Houston, 41-21 in 1953.

Last week Texas Tech lost to SMU 9-7, and Houston had an open week.

About the game against SMU, Red Raider Coach Jerry Moore said, "It was an outstanding performance by our entire team. Overall, I am very pleased."

"One of the big keys for us was our leadership. We have been getting excellent leadership from not only our seniors but underclassmen as well.

"I think it is pretty obvious we are playing our best football right now."

The loss to SMU was the second time this season that the Red Raiders lost when an opposing team kicked a 57-yard field goal. Brandy Brownlee of SMU kicked his 57-yard field goal with 4:52 left last Saturday, and earlier this season, James Hamrick of Rice kicked a 57-yard field goal with three seconds left to give Rice a 29-27 win over Texas Tech.

About the Houston game, Moore said, "Houston has had a very frustrating year, a lot like us. Some people picked them to win the Southwest Conference."

"They still have a lot of talent. I don't think our team is going to let down. I look for us to close out the season in good fashion in Houston."

Texas Tech had four players total 15 or more tackles against SMU, led by Brad Hasting with 25. Hasting had 11 unassisted tackles.

James Johnson had 16 tackles, seven unassisted, and Mike Kinsey had 15 tackles, including seven unassisted. Also, Carl Carter totaled 17 tackles, 14 of them unassisted.

WINE AND TIME

It is wrong to assume that simply because a wine is older, it is better. Tales of wonderful cabebbed old bottles have led to a general belief that age is in itself a good thing for wine. It is only partially true. There are wines that need a long time to mature. There are others, however, which are ruined by being kept for even as much as a year or two. As a very general rule, red wine needs more time to mature than does white. The making of red wine, which involves the skins as well as the juice of the grapes, leaves extra substances to be dissolved. The substances need time to undergo the chemical changes which make the difference in the eventual glass of wine.

If you are hosting the family Thanksgiving Dinner this year be sure to come by THE STORE where we carry a marvelous selection of red and white wines, both imported and domestic. A bottle or two of wine will add just the right touch of conviviality to your gathering. Perhaps you have been invited to a friends or relatives. If so, a bottle of wine makes the perfect hostess gift. You'll find us at 400 N. 25 Mile, 364-7802 where we are open Mon. - Sat. 10-9, use our drive up door until midnight for beer and wine, on Sun. only beer and wine is available from 12-12. A very Happy Thanksgiving Day to you and yours!

Before the cork and bottle, there was no way to age wine properly.

When Pete Rose played in a 4-3 win for Philadelphia over the New York Mets on Oct. 2, 1982, he broke a record for a major league baseball athlete playing for the most winning teams during a major league career. It was the 1,736th time he had played on a winning team, breaking the old record of 1,735 held by Hank Aaron.

The first player to hit a grand-slam home run in his first major league baseball game was pitcher Bill Dugleby of Philadelphia in the National League, on April 21, 1898, in his first big league at-bat. The second player who did it was Bobby Bonds of the San Francisco Giants on June 25, 1968, in his third major league at-bat.

BASKETBALL
NEW YORK (AP) — National Basketball Association Commissioner David Stern denied a request by the Los Angeles Clippers to set aside the six-player trade which sent Marques Johnson from the Milwaukee Bucks to the Clippers last year.

The Clippers sought to have the deal, in which Terry Cummings went to Milwaukee, nullified on the grounds that they had not been told that Johnson had been a patient in a drug rehabilitation center in 1982.

Stern said he found no proof of any misrepresentation by the Bucks and there was no claim of any drug usage by Johnson since 1982.

NEW YORK (AP) — Center Darryl Dawkins of the New Jersey Nets has been fined $750 and center Wallace Bryant of the Dallas Mavericks has been fined $500 for fighting during a game at Dallas, the National Basketball Association announced.

The NBA said the fines include the automatic $250 they were fined when they were ejected from the game last Friday night.

Trivia question: After Babe Ruth replaced him in the New York Yankees outfield, what man became known as "Pappa Bear" in the National Football League?
ANSWER: George Halas.

GAMES TOO LONG
MISSION, Kan. (AP) — The length of big league baseball games has long been a subject for concern and now it's the turn of the colleges. Officials are annoyed with the fact that too many games take three hours to complete. Some officials believe the major culprit is the aluminum bat which has led to more offense and more runs. A committee is investigating that phase of it.

Another change next season will find the number of warmup pitches between innings reduced from eight to five. And there's also a feeling that some umpires have shrunk the strike zone, leading to more walks.

Rocky Colavito, who played mainly for Cleveland and Detroit in his major league baseball career, set an American League record from 1964 to 1966 when he played 234 consecutive errorless games.

Mattingly receives A.L. MVP award

NEW YORK (AP) — Once again, Don Mattingly is on the same team as Willie McGee — members of the Most Valuable Player club.

Mattingly, who led the major leagues with 145 RBI this season, won the American League MVP award Wednesday by an overwhelming margin in voting by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

"There's nothing more I could have done this season," said the soft-spoken Mattingly, who batted .324, hit 35 home runs and led AL first basemen with a slick .995 fielding percentage. "The numbers kind of pile up on you. You look up three-quarters of the way through the season and you don't want to let it end."

The honor came two days after St. Louis' Willie McGee, the top hitter in the majors, was voted the MVP in the National League.

This year's MVP awards reunited Mattingly and McGee, who were teammates with the Yankees' Class AA team in Nashville in 1981.

"I remember a lot about playing with Willie McGee," Mattingly said. "It was my first year in Double-A. I played left field and he was in center."

After the 1981 season, New York traded McGee to St. Louis for pitcher Bob Sykes — a deal that has continued to haunt the Yankees' front office.

"When I heard they wanted to move me up to Triple-A and leave him down there, I couldn't believe it," Mattingly recalled. "When they let him go, it was tough to swallow."

Mattingly, sidelined for the first 18 games of spring training this year with a minor cartilage tear in his right knee, homered in his first at-bat of the exhibition season. From that point on, things just kept getting better for Mattingly as he helped the Yankees rebound from a slow start to finish second to Toronto in the AL East.

The brilliant year came in Mattingly's second full season in the majors. In 1984, he led the league with a .343 average while hitting 23 homers with 110 RBI.

Mattingly got 23 first-place votes and five second-place votes in balloting by 28 writers (two from each AL city). He had 367 points in finishing ahead of Kansas City third baseman George Brett, who got the other five first-place votes and wound up with 274 points.

Yankees center fielder Rickey Henderson was third (174), followed by Boston third baseman Wade Boggs (159) and Baltimore first baseman Eddie Murray (130).

"I would have never dreamed of putting those kinds of numbers up on the board," said Mattingly, the 20th Yankee to be voted MVP.

Mattingly led the major leagues with 48 doubles and became the first AL player to do that in successive seasons since Tris Speaker did it four straight years, 1920-23. Mattingly's 370 total bases and 86 extra-base hits also led the AL. He was second in the league with a .567 slugging percentage and second with 66 multiple-hit games.

College basketball season begins tonight

By DICK JOYCE
AP Basketball Writer

According to college basketball sage Al McGuire, "Nobody wants to start off 0-1."

As evidenced by their schedules, most college basketball powers line up pushovers for some early-season momentum, except in the few cases where television intervenes. After all, the conference schedule is the thing, the coaches maintain.

Witness mighty Georgetown, ranked eighth nationally, playing its first two games against little schools from Hawaii and few tough opponents until the Big East Conference season begins. The Hoyas' nonconference schedule is similar to the one it had the past seasons, even though 7-footer Patrick Ewing roamed the middle.

But teams who have joined the field for the 16-team field inaugural Big Apple National Invitation Tournament fly in the face of McGuire's logic.

The tournament's early games will be played at four sites, beginning tonight in Houston and on Friday at Hartford, Conn., Cincinnati and Denver.

Six of the NIT teams are ranked in the preseason Top Twenty — No. 5 Kansas, No. 6 Duke, No. 9 Louisville, No. 10 Auburn, No. 16 Alabama-Birmingham and No. 19 Navy.

And most of the entrants which aren't ranked are considered as title contenders in their respective conferences or, in Dayton's case, a leading independent.

Texas A&M faces Alabama-Birmingham and Duke takes on Lamar in a doubleheader at Houston, while it is Tulsa against Dayton and Louisville against Miami of Ohio at Cincinnati, and Washington against Texas-El Paso and Kansas against Pepperdine at Denver.

"This tournament is good because we'll find out right away what we have and what we have to get ready for the Big East. Navy has everybody back from an NCAA Tournament team and they've got the big guy (6-foot-11 David Robinson)," St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca said.

St. John's, a Final Four team last season but now without All-America Chris Mullin, takes on Navy in the opener of the Hartford doubleheader, which is followed by Auburn's game against West Virginia.

The winners at each site meet in second-round action Sunday night, with the four survivors moving to New York's Madison Square Garden for the semifinals on Nov. 29. The consolation and title games will be played Dec. 1.

While playing a tough early schedule isn't every coach's desire, it generally is the way such coaches as Denny Crum of Louisville, Lefty Driesell of Maryland and Bobby Knight of Indiana have hardened their teams for the conference grind.

"Playing weak schools is no way to get ready for the NCAA Tournament," said Crum, who has the track record to prove it — 11 NCAA appearances, including five times in Final Four, in 14 years.

Before the Big Apple NIT, the eight-team Great Alaska Shootout in Anchorage and the Chaminade Tournament in Hawaii, where giant-killer Chaminade lurks, have provided true early-season testing grounds.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Mayor Dianne Feinstein has vowed to do everything in her power to keep the San Francisco Giants in town, including considering using public money to build a new baseball stadium downtown.

Feinstein and Giants owner Bob Lurie are to meet later this week to discuss the situation. Lurie, who has vowed not to play another season in the open-air stadium on San Francisco Bay, met briefly with baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth, but declined to comment on what was discussed.

GENERAL

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — A judge has dismissed a Macon newspaper's suit seeking access to financial records of the University of Georgia Athletic Association, ruling that the association is a private corporation not subject to the state's open records law.

Superior Court Judge Franklin Pierce issued the decision in a six-month-old suit filed by the Macon Telegraph and News, which had argued that the records should be available to the public because the association's officers, who possess the records, are public officials employed by the university. The newspaper's attorney said he would appeal the ruling.

"Iron Man" McGinnity, a star pitcher for the New York Giants in the early part of this century, pitched both halves of a double-header five times during his career.

Members of La Plata Study Club entertained their husbands at a Thanksgiving dinner Tuesday evening at Hereford Country Club. Following the buffet meal, everyone played "dummy bridge". Winning high were Dorothy Mercer and Raymond White. A new member, Lola Smalts, was welcomed into the club and Ruby Carmichael was recognized as a special guest of Margaret Schroeter. Couples attending the event were Messrs. and Mmes. Raymond White,

O.G. Nieman, Kenneth Helms, Ray Simpson, Phillip Shook, Frank Prowell, Jim Mercer, Jay Boston, Ken Rogers and Jay Boston. Others attending were Fox, Mary Lyles and Mozelle Neill. Members plan to exchange gifts.

BB-BS Appreciation Dinner held Friday

Athletic director, Jerry Taylor, was the guest speaker during the Big Brothers/Big Sisters Appreciation Dinner held Friday evening in the Fellowship Hall of First United Methodist Church. Taylor presented an inspiring and informative talk on "Positive Attitudes" during the event which was hosted by the BB/BS board of directors. There were 107 people in attendance at the dinner which honored the Little Brothers/Little Sisters in the program as well as BB/BS volunteers who make the program work. Special awards were given to several volunteers who have been in the program for several years.

Recognized for their services were Norma Walden (a volunteer since 1975), Robert Medina (1976), Wanda Verschelde (1977), Earl Brookhart (1978), Joe Garcia (1978), Jeff Brown (1983), Donna Weaver (1984), Alice Eades (1984), and Willy Salazar (1984). TOPS 576 meet here

A new losing game and a bazaar were discussed when members of TOPS Chapter 576 met in regular session Tuesday morning at the Hereford Community Center. The Japanese ferry "Toya Maru" capsized during a 1954 typhoon, and 1,172 lives were lost.

Vicky Jones was the top loser of the week with Roberta Blackburn being runner-up. The program was presented by Novella Hewitt. Mary Lou Spinhirne served as meeting leader; Suzannah Gonzales, secretary; and Hewitt, treasurer.

New Club Officers

Officers not pictured include Betty Quillen, recording secretary; Betty Taylor, corresponding secretary; Audine Dettmann, historian; and Sunny Brush, parliamentarian.

Rebekah bazaar set this weekend

When members of Hereford Rebekah Lodge No. 228 met Tuesday evening their main topic of discussion was their Bazaar-Bake Sale-Garage Sale.

A variety of Christmas gift items, toys, baked goods and garage sale items will be available from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. Saturday at the Odd Fellow Hall, 605 E. 6th St. The bazaar will be open Sunday from 1-5 p.m.

Under the direction of Noble Grand Kee Ruland, plans were completed for the annual Thanksgiving supper Nov. 26. Members and their families and guests are invited to attend.

Nineteen visits, 16 cheer cards, four flowers and five dishes of food were reported.

An announcement was made of the appointment of Susie Curtsinger as assistant Rebekah Assembly of Texas musician for the year 1986-87. Dorothy Lundry was hostess to Ruland, Curtsinger, Irene Merritt, Ada Hollabaugh, Karrol Rettman, Lydia Hopson, Beth Hall, Verna Sowell, Leona Sowell, Glessie Shelton, Anna Conklin, Edna Mathes, Jo Irlbeck, Peggy Lemons, Thama Pearson, Bessie Lawrence, Ursalee Jacobsen, Wallace Shelton, Ben Conklin, Tony Irlbeck, Fred Ruland, Gene Bishop, Guy Lawrence and Helen Bishop.

According to the World Almanac Book of Inventions, the first successful cloning of animals occurred in 1980. In an experiment by a Swiss professor and his researchers, the ovary cells of a mouse were stimulated. The result was two fatherless mice that were exact replicas of their mother.

PROJECT
CHICAGO (AP) — The Archives of American Art has initiated a two-year project in Chicago to identify, collect and microfilm art-related archival collections in institutional as well as private hands throughout the metropolitan area. Sue Ann Kendall, the Detroit-based Midwest regional director of the archives, said the "materials discovered will bring to light information providing a greater understanding of the development of the visual arts in Chicago."

Welcome

Ann Landers

Boy wants operation

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am writing this letter for my brother. He is 13 and I am 14. I will call him Jeff although that is not his real name. The kids at school make fun of Jeff when he is in the showers because he has not been circumcised. He would like to get the operation done without discussing it with Mom. He is sure she would say no.

I don't know anything about this sort of thing. Where should Jeff go? Can it be done free? I don't even know if he could get a doctor to do it unless a parent gives permission.

And while you are at it, Ann, please tell me, what is the reason for getting circumcised? We read your column every day and consider you a friend.—WANTING TO HELP (WINNIPEG)

DEAR WIN: According to Victor L. Lewis Jr., chairman of the Department of Plastic Surgery at Northwestern University Medical School, the normal state of the male is to be uncircumcised. The reason for this surgery is that doctors thought it would improve male hygiene. (Today many physicians disagree with this notion.)

Another reason is religious tradition. Jewish males are circumcised within a few days after birth. It is described in Genesis 17 as a ritual to signify God's covenant with Abraham.

It is doubtful that Jeff could have this operation without parental consent. If he wants to investigate the possibilities, he should see a urologist who is connected with a university hospital. Jeff should also know that the operation is not without some discomfort.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The "solution" you offered the mother of that spoiled teenage brat who insisted on loaning out her blouses, sweaters, skirts, shoes and what not, was one of the dumbest things you've ever written. What kid is going to promise she will never do it again, and keep her word?

My solution is to tell that sappy girl to go out and get herself a parttime job and buy some of her own clothes instead of handing over the plastic and letting her go wild in the department stores.

You can be sure the girl who earns money to buy sweaters and blouses and shoes is not about to lend them to friends and forget where they are.

Today too many parents are like puppets on a string. They let their children manipulate them like crazy. They give them everything they ask for because they want their kids to LIKE them!

I don't care if my kids like me or not. I want them to like themselves and become responsible adults. I have never forgotten an old saying I heard when my little ones were in diapers. Please pass it on: "It is the RESPONSIBILITY of parents to teach their children RESPONSIBILITY."

Kids who are spared the consequences of foolish, thoughtless, dishonest, irresponsible behavior turn out to be emotional cripples and it's hell to watch them suffer.—A TOUGH MOM WHO CARES

DEAR MOM: I can't argue with one word of your letter. Thanks for cleaning up after me. I hope this column goes up on lots of refrigerators today.

Ann Landers' booklet, "Sex and the Teenager," explains every aspect of sexual behavior—where to draw the line, how to say no, the various methods of contraception, the dangers of VD, the symptoms and where to get help. For a copy, send $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (39 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Spelling theft

Before Noah Webster compiled his dictionary, he produced one of the most useful volumes ever printed in English, the Blue Book Speller. Unscrupulous publishers pirated the Speller and reprinted it without payment or credit. This led Webster to devise the federal copyright law in 1790, which protects the rights of authors.

Don't let children burn

In the time it takes to read the next few paragraphs, several homes in this country will catch fire. A residence burns every 45 seconds, adding up to 1,900 a day and almost 700,000 a year. Nearly 7,000 persons die in these fires and at least one-fourth of the victims are children under 14.

Most children are pathetically helpless to save themselves in a fire. Through lack of knowledge and practice, they make deadly mistakes such as rushing into smoke-filled hallways or down burning stairways when they could go safely out a window. Some don't even try to escape. They wander in bewilderment or panic. Many hide in closets or under beds and firemen find them dead, waiting in vain for parents to rescue them.

The tragedy is that youngsters could get out alive if parents would take a few minutes to show them how. Parents would be appalled to discover that their child's school did not hold fire drills. Yet, have you ever held a home fire drill with your child? He is about 200 times more likely to be caught in fire at home than at school.

A child who has practiced what to do in a fire is much less susceptible to panic and has a better chance of surviving, fire authorities unanimously agree. This has been proved by thousands of pupils who, fire-drill trained, have calmly escaped from burning schools.

A home fire drill could be done "straight" like a classroom exercise.

On the other hand, there is value in capitalizing on a child's imagination. Drills conducted as a "let's pretend to be firemen" game may stimulate more interest and impress the information more firmly in the child's mind.

Below is the first of several home fire drills to be offered in this series designed to teach children how to survive a fire. In the fifth part of this series, a final "rookie" examination will be presented to determine whether your children qualify as "firemen."

The first drill is "Meet the Fire Chief." In this drill, the entire family, called the "fire department staff," gets together to make escape plans. A "fire chief" is elected to draw a rough diagram of the house. He asks the other "firemen" to help map out two separate escape routes from every room in the house. There must be a main route, and in case that is blocked, an alternate. Pay special attention to escapes from bedrooms where fire is most likely to trap you. Don't depend much on stairways as these are often flooded with heat and deadly smoke, making passage impossible.

Your best escape route is through a window, perhaps one that opens onto a garage deck or porch roof. Even if you can't get to the ground from there, you can usually wait safely in the fresh air for rescue. Or, you could use a sturdy trellis or commercially available fire-escape ladder either portable or permanently installed. A knotted rope might be all right for athletic youngsters if they go down hand over hand instead of sliding.

Decide on who will help very young children or the elderly in the family and where you will meet after the escape, so no one risks going back in for someone who is already safe.

A youngster may want to draw his own copy of the fire-escape plans and regulations to put on a bulletin board in his room.

Part 2 of this series deals with two of six drills designed to teach children how to survive a fire.

DR. GOTT

Peter Gott, M.D.

How to manage old neck injury

DEAR DR. GOTT — I've had a neck injury for 13 years. I've been told an operation won't help. For the past three years, I've been having severe neck pain, headaches and dizziness. I'm taking Motrin (600 mgs.) for pain, which helps, but the dizziness is still a concern. I hope you can give me some information that will help.

DEAR READER — Frankly, I don't believe I'm going to be able to contribute much to solving your problem. A 13-year-old injury does not lend itself to easy fixing. If you haven't already done so, I suggest you have a neurological evaluation, on the outside chance that some correctable type of nerve compressor, may have developed from your injury. If you are neurologically all right and if the circulation in your neck is normal, you may have to be content with investigating other methods of dealing with your discomfort. Physiotherapy, massage and — occasionally — chiropractic may help.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Have there been any studies made on longstanding chronic low blood pressure? We hear so much about high blood pressure, but nothing about the other.

DEAR READER — All the studies of which I am aware have shown that with blood pressure, the lower the better. In some elderly patients, of course, low blood pressure can result in dizziness and fainting; this form of low blood pressure is usually secondary to a circulatory disorder. Your doctor is the best judge of whether your low blood pressure is right for you. In general, low blood pressure is a non-disease.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have severe numbness, tingling and pain of the fingers that spreads to the elbows. A friend of mine said I have carpal tunnel syndrome. Can you tell me more about this?

DEAR READER — Carpal tunnel syndrome refers to a pinching or constriction of the hand nerves as they pass beneath a fibrous band in the wrist. It is correctable. See a doctor to determine if your friend has made a correct diagnosis.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Is it possible to have a reaction from acupuncture? What would it be? I'm on Aldoril (25 mg.), Corgard (40 mg.) and 18 units of insulin a day. I've never had any problems with my medicine.

DEAR READER — Because acupuncture involves the placement of needles in the skin and underlying structures, the complications are predictable: infections, blood-borne disorders (like hepatitis and AIDS) and bleeding. You may experience other symptoms because, judging by your medications, you seem to have diabetes, hypertension and heart trouble. Also, you are taking potent drugs that can cause a plethora of side effects. Rather than pointing the finger at acupuncture, you might better consider that either your illnesses or their drug treatments are more likely causes for your difficulty. Remember that a person with diabetes has more of a tendency to develop infections, and therefore might be less willing to become a pincushion.

SAY IT WITH MELONS

TOKYO (AP) — In Japan they say it with melons when a friend is ill.

The fruit, which is native to Asia but is very rare and expensive in Japan, is used to show respect and love, according to Masao Yuri, president of Sun-tory International which makes a melon liqueur.

"The more melons the friend who is sick receives, the more respected he is," said Yuri. "Melons are used much as flowers are used in America. Because of the Japanese climate and soil, melons are grown in hothouses."

NBC to leave Toscanini Studios

NEW YORK (AP) — After more than 50 years, NBC is planning to leave Rockefeller Center, the complex that became Radio City because of the network's presence and from which Orson Welles announced "The Shadow" and Fred Allen told listeners, "Hollywood is a great place if you're an orange."

In the 1950's, NBC's "Today" show made the area familiar to people who had never been to New York with live TV pictures from studio windows of passersby and skaters at the Rockefeller Plaza ice rink across the street.

The NBC studios in the RCA Building at 30 Rockefeller Plaza have been the home of such television highlights as Milton Berle's "Texaco Star Theater," and Johnny Carson's "Tonight" before it moved to California 15 years ago.

But even with much of its entertainment production moved to the West Coast, NBC has had to spill out of the building to 10 sites around the city.

About the only major network shows now beaming regularly from "30 Rock," as the building is familiarly known, are "Today," "NBC Nightly News," "Late Night With David Letterman" and, still live from New York, "Saturday Night Live."

Local TV and radio affiliates also air from 30 Rock and Phil Donahue's syndicated talk show originates in the building.

But the NBC radio network now operates from a building five blocks away and TV soap operas and Bill Cosby's top-rated show are shot at a studio in Brooklyn because "we can't accommodate them here," said NBC spokesman Curt Block.

NBC's leases, for just under half of the 2.3 million square feet of space in the 70-story RCA Building, will be expiring between 1989 and 1997.

The network announced it was hunting for a new home several weeks ago and has talked to a number of real estate operators, among them Donald Trump, who earlier this week unveiled plans to build a project called Television City, with a 150-story skyscraper, on Manhattan's West Side.

"I'm sure we'll have additional discussions with Mr. Trump," Block said. "The ideal plan is to consolidate our New York studios and personnel in one new location."

The New Jersey Meadowlands complex also has been mentioned as a possible new home, but New York's deputy mayor for economic development, Alair Townsend, has said her office was trying to keep NBC and its 3,000 jobs here.

Block said the move would be phased, with the network hoping to acquire a 1.4-million-square-foot site in the mid 1990s and expand another 300,000 square feet in two steps by the year 2013.

He said NBC had been forced to compromise over the years as it built TV broadcasting and production into a building not designed for the medium.

Cancer Society campaign gets mixed reception

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The American Cancer Society found welcome in much of the South's tobacco country for its ninth Great American Smokeout today, but its message was likely to be ignored in some quarters of the land where the golden leaf means jobs.

"I would hope (the city of) Wilson wouldn't be participating in a Smokeout because if it hadn't been for tobacco, there wouldn't be a Wilson," said Marvin Coghill, president of Standard Commercial Tobacco Co.

Although Coghill's hometown declined to participate, the nationwide midnight-to-midnight kick-the-habit campaign aimed at America's 55 million smokers is drawing more people from the tobacco-rich South than ever before.

"We have nearly 80 of our 100 county units participating this year, so there are many activities going on," said Wendy Scott, spokeswoman for the American Cancer Society's North Carolina office. "In 1981, we had 32 units."

Scheduled activities included school essay contests in Nashville, Tenn., "kick the habit" games in Kentucky and a frozen turkey giveaway for Northern Telecom's North Carolina employees who quit cold turkey.

Many companies planned "adopt-a-smoker" campaigns that uses the buddy-system approach to giving up cigarettes. A Maryland ice cream store chain offered a cone of turkey-flavored ice cream to anyone who turned in cigarette packs.

But the approach in tobacco country is low-key, says Wanda Jeffers, a group organizer in South Carolina's Pee Dee region, where much of that state's $184 million tobacco crop is produced.

"I don't think we make everybody mad," she said.

The Cancer Society says smoking contributes to heart and lung disease, including cancers. But many Southerners do not want to hear such a message, particularly those whose livelihood depends on tobacco.

"I smoke five packs of cigarettes a day, and I think it's good for you," Coghill, 52, said. "I'm a living example that they don't know what they're talking about."

The crop brought in more than $3 billion to tobacco growers in eight states in 1984. That money also bolsters department stores, equipment and car dealers and government tax coffers. North Carolina leads the nation in tobacco production, bringing farmers $1.05 billion in 1984.

Across the United States last year, a record 20.4 million smokers participated in the Smokeout. Of those, 5.4 million stopped for the day and 3.1 million were still off cigarettes five days later, according to the Gallup Poll. The society was unable to provide a regional breakdown.

The Cancer Society's goal this year is to get at least one in every five smokers to give up cigarettes for 24 hours.

The Washington, D.C.-based Tobacco Institute launched a counter-offensive Wednesday, issuing a poll in which most people disagreed with legislative restrictions on smoking.

"This poll confirms that the small minority of vocal anti-smokers in America are elitists, totally out of step with the general public," said

Walter Merryman, assistant to the president of the institute.

Others in the South voiced opposition to the Cancer Society campaign.

"If it stops some people from smoking and that's what they want to do and that's their personal choice, fine," said Brad Crone of the North Carolina Department of Agriculture.

"But I also think you have to look at the people who do wish to smoke and respect their rights also."

Doctors, nurses unlikely to get AIDS

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 500 American health care workers have contracted the deadly disease AIDS, but chances of doctors, nurses and hospital technicians getting the disease through their work "continues to be very low," a new federal report says.

"No specific occupational exposures could be implicated as the source of infection in any of these cases," it said.

The report was presented on Wednesday at the annual meeting of the American Public Health Association by scientists with the AIDS Task Force of the national Centers for Disease Control.

The CDC has closely monitored the occurrence of the disease — known formally as acquired immune deficiency syndrome — among health workers because they are more likely than many Americans to be exposed to victims' blood or other bodily fluids through which the disease is believed to be spread.

The agency reported last September that two health care workers out of 1,750 tested for exposure to the AIDS virus — a nurse and a laboratory employee — had indeed tested positive. However, neither has gone on to develop the disease so far, the agency said at that time.

Wednesday's report said occupations were known for 10,612 of the 13,061 people who had contracted the disease in the United States through mid-September.

Health care workers accounted for 556 of the cases, or about 5 percent, the report said, but 530 of those "had non-occupational risk factors such as homosexual contact or intravenous drug use."

The remaining 26, with no identified risk, made up 4.7 percent of the total cases for health care workers. The comparative figure for the general population was 3.5 percent, the report said, calling the difference not statistically significant.

Kickapoo Indians to take their oaths

EAGLE PASS, Texas (AP) — The road to citizenship has been a long and winding one for the Kickapoo Indians, who have fought for years for recognition from the United States.

Today, about 45 tribe members were scheduled to take their oaths of citizenship. Nakai Breen, long-time spokeswoman for the Kickapoo, said she initially was uncertain of the number that would take the oath because not all of the migrant farm workers have returned to the area.

But she said those who were taking the oath were excited about their new citizenship. The tribal members will have all the rights of U.S. citizenship.

Those who do not wish to become citizens will be termed "permanent residents," said Mario Ortiz of the Immigration and Naturalization Service. Ortiz said 145 cards were distributed to tribe members and that "99 percent" opted for citizenship.

The Indians, who live in cane and cardboard huts beneath the international bridge here, were not recognized by the United States until 1983.

Recognition as a Texas Indian tribe came in May of this year.

The Kickapoos traditionally migrate each spring from the interior of Mexico to the north as far as North Dakota following crops.

The Kickapoo tribe is one of the poorest in the nation. However, the group recently purchased land for a reservation.

The tribe has had difficulty settling the land. Water that was drilled had bacteria in it and until that problem is solved, the Kickapoos have decided not to move there.

Tribal members, who signed a peace treaty with the United States in 1815, were awarded Mexican citizenships and a reservation many years ago.

Mexican-Americans have greater health risks

WASHINGTON (AP) — A caution for Mexican-Americans: becoming more Anglo could be hazardous to your health.

That is one message that can be gleaned from preliminary findings of an ambitious Hispanic health survey presented by researchers in a series of talks Tuesday and Wednesday at the convention of the American Public Health Association.

Thousands of Mexican-Americans living in the Southwest were interviewed and examined in 1982 and 1983 for information on such potential health risks as smoking, cholesterol levels, hypertension, overweight and contraception.

The preliminary findings showed, with some variance for age groups and sex, that Mexican-Americans who identified more with Mexican culture smoked less, weighed less, had lower cholesterol and less hypertension.

Public Health specialist Robinson Fulwood, who presented the paper on cholesterol levels, said preliminary findings showed that Mexican-Americans generally had lower cholesterol levels than whites, who had the highest, or blacks.

The level of cholesterol increased as the Mexican-Americans became more "acculturated," or adopted lifestyles more like their non-Hispanic neighbors.

The acculturation score was based on questions about language understood, used and preferred; ethnic identity; ethnic identity of parents; place of birth; and where one's parents were born.

"Mexican-Americans who were less acculturated, poor and less educated had lower mean serum cholesterol levels. Why this is true needs to be examined and will be the subject of future analyses," said Fulwood.

The results of the Hispanic health survey were compared with results of a similar national health survey conducted in the late 1970s, the researchers said.

Mexican-American women had higher cholesterol levels than Mexican-American men, which Fulwood theorized could be related to stress.

"We can look at the lifestyle of Mexican-American women ... being enclosed in the home they tend to be quite depressed sometimes," he said.

Mexican-Americans also had generally lower hypertension rates than non-Hispanics, said the researchers.

Hypertension was higher among Mexican-American males than females, but the females had greater awareness of their condition, the study suggested.

The acculturation factor did not affect hypertension among Mexican-American women, but hypertension increased among Mexican-American men who considered themselves in the mid-range, or "bi-cultural."

Of Mexican-American men, who were almost twice as likely to smoke as Mexican-American women, 80 percent in the 55-70 age range said they had smoked at some time in their lives.

Current smokers comprised 43 percent of Mexican-American men, compared to about 40 percent for whites. But smoking rates were about 10 percent higher for blacks. Mexican-American women smoked less than non-Hispanic women.

And, said study author Marilyn McMillen, "Mexican-American men and women smoke substantially fewer cigarettes than their non-Hispanic white counterparts."

Mexican-American men smoked about 12 cigarettes per day compared to 24 for whites. For women, it was nine a day for Mexican-Americans versus 20 for whites.

Mexican-American women smoked more as they became more Americanized, from 19 percent for the most Mexican-oriented to 28 percent for the most U.S. culture-oriented, "suggesting that as Mexican-American women adopt U.S. lifestyles, they're more likely to smoke cigarettes and become at higher risk of developing smoking related diseases," said Ms. McMillen.

There was "no such clear trend" for Mexican-American men, she said.

Smoking rates for both groups went down with higher education.

One in three Mexican-Americans is overweight, compared to one in four for Anglos and blacks, according to the research.

Mexican-American men who were bi-cultural or more U.S. culture-oriented were about 10 percent more likely to be overweight. The least acculturated Mexican-American women had the highest level of overweight, which dropped for the bi-cultural group, then went up again for the most acculturated.

A study of the health of Mexican-American children showed that they have about the same rate of hearing and vision problems as white or black children, but are better immunized. But the Mexican-American children reported more bad or missing teeth than whites.

In 1965, Gen. Joseph Mobutu deposed Congo President Joseph Kasavubu.

Waking up hard on heart

BOSTON (AP) — Even getting up in the morning, it seems, can be hazardous to your health. Results of a study published today show that heart attacks are three times more common at 9 a.m. than at 11 p.m.

"This represents a big new area to research," said Dr. James E. Muller, part of the study team. If researchers can learn why starting the day triggers attacks, they might be able to devise new strategies to stop them.

The doctors theorize, although they cannot be certain, that the blood becomes more likely to clot just after people awaken, leading to the increased occurrence of morning heart attacks.

Muller said 14 other published studies have noted that heart attacks seem to happen in the morning. But until now, many doubted that the phenomenon was real. Some suspected that people often suffer heart attacks while they sleep but do not notice the pain until they get up.

However, the new study looked for enzymes in the blood that are released a few hours after a heart attack and confirmed that the attacks really were occurring in the morning and not the previous night.

Results of the study of 2,999 heart attack victims was published in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Usually a heart attack — what doctors call a myocardial infarction — occurs when a blood clot blocks an artery that feeds the heart. The heart muscle is starved of oxygen, and some of it dies.

"Since we know that infarct is associated with a clot, the leading possibility would have to be that there is some variation in the tendency of the blood to clot during that time of day," said Muller, a cardiologist at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston.

Other research suggests that levels of a natural blood thinner called heparin are lower in the morning, when blood platelets are more likely to clump together.

Muller noted that the sympathetic nervous system is also less active during sleep.

"It begins to be activated in a very harsh manner, as we all know, when the alarm clock rings," he said. "It could be related to some aspect of that stress in the morning."

His study found that heart attacks are more common between 6 a.m. and noon than at any other time of day. The incidence reaches a peak at 9 a.m. and then declines to a low point at 11 p.m.

Muller said most cardiologists are unaware that heart attacks frequently occur in the morning.

"Doctors tend to remember the heart attacks that they get awakened for in the middle of the night," he said.

A majority of Americans have or want to have two children or less. Today, 60 percent of Americans think two or less is ideal, but in 1941, only 30 percent of Americans preferred small families.

Reagan defends chief of staff

GENEVA (AP) — The White House has come to Donald Regan's defense, saying the chief of staff "meant nothing derogatory" by his remark that most women don't understand serious issues.

In a Washington Post story Monday about Nancy Reagan's schedule at the summit, Regan had remarked about women:

"They're not ... going to understand (missile) throw-weights or what is happening in Afghanistan or what is happening in human rights. Some women will, but most women — believe me, your readers for the most part if you took a poll — would rather read the human interest stuff of what happened."

The White House, in a statement Wednesday, said the chief of staff made his comment in an interview "several weeks ago for a Style section article on Mrs. Reagan and her role at the summit.
