Deadly, disastrous fires pepper state

Three transients killed in Midland

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Autopsies have been ordered in the deaths of three unidentified transients who died in a house fire at the intersection of Marienfeld Street and Louisiana Avenue early this morning.

Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry pronounced the men dead at the scene and ordered the autopsies.

"They were burned real bad," said Fire Chief James Roberts. "It will be difficult to identify them. There were nine men in the house and only six got out."

The cause of the blaze, which Roberts said had been burning for some time before firemen received the 3:32 a.m. call, was not immediately known. Firefighters were still on the scene at 8 a.m.

The owner of the vacant, wood frame house, located at 703 N. Marienfeld, was listed as Bobby Buys, no address available. The house was destroyed.

The bodies of the victims were taken to the Ellis Funeral Home. Their deaths mark the city's second fatal house fire of the year.

On March 5, 58-year-old James Niles Johnson, a transient from Alexander, Ark., died when a vacant house at 1701 S. Midkiff Road caught fire about 7:45 p.m.

Fire officials said that blaze was caused by a leaking garden hose that had been hooked up from an outside propane tank to a space heater in the house.

A second man in the house — Robert Warren Lewis, no age or address available — was not injured.

Second fire stuns Nacogdoches

NACOGDOCHES, Texas (AP) — A spark from a welder's torch was blamed for starting the second major fire in Nacogdoches in three days.

A Monday destroyed the International Paper Co. plywood plant, throwing 300 people out of their jobs.

Plant manager Mel Nobles estimated damage at between $5 million and $8 million from the wind-swept blaze.

An estimated $2 million loss resulted from a fire, believed deliberately set, that roared through a series of connecting two-story buildings in downtown Nacogdoches Saturday night.

The fire at the 160,000-square-foot paper plant in an industrial area southeast of downtown was reported about noon Monday. Firefighters said the plant was already engulfed in flames when they arrived. Flames shot as high as 300 feet, they said.

Fire marshal Raymond Lewis said the fire is believed to have started by sparks from a maintenance man's welding operations. The fire occurred despite routine safety precautions the workman had taken, including spraying down the area where the welding was to occur, Lewis said.

Winds of 20 to 30 mph fed the fire, and the Forest Service and Nacogdoches County fire units were dispatched to extinguish grass fires that burned as far away as 1½ to two miles from the plant. A small fire at a lumber yard one-fourth mile east of the plant also was attributed to the paper company blaze.

Firefighters kept the flames from reaching several nearby propane storage tanks. The fire was brought under control at 2:10 p.m., fire officials said, but the plant was a total loss.

A spokesman at Memorial Hospital said six firefighters were treated for minor injuries.

The fire in downtown Nacogdoches Saturday was reported about 6:30 p.m., a half hour after most of the businesses had closed for the weekend. It roared along a common attic, spreading to several adjacent businesses before firefighters got it under control about 10:30 p.m.

A man was arrested at a Nacogdoches residence about 11 p.m. Saturday and brought in for questioning about the fire, which began in Colony Mall, a two-story building erected about the turn of the century that was renovated into a mall housing several small specialty shops.

Austin traffic stalls firefighters' efforts

AUSTIN (AP) — An insurance agency and a waterbed store were destroyed by a fire that began in a trash dumpster and spread while firemen stationed a block away tried to make their way through rush hour traffic on a north Austin street, officials said.

The fire began about 5:20 p.m. Monday. Store employees tried to extinguish the blaze themselves, but when it appeared they couldn't they called the fire department.

Renewal of Odessa's wastewater permits proposed

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The tenuous bonds of friendship between Midland and Odessa may be weakened by the recommendation by a Texas Water Commission (TWC) hearing examiner to renew Odessa's permits to discharge treated wastewater into Monahans Draw.

Midland County and the city of Midland have joined in protesting Odessa's bid for renewal of the permits. Midland claims the effluent is polluting the underground water and thereby is lowering quality of water along the draw, which passes south of Midland through Midland County.

"Although the evidence does not support the protestants' contention of groundwater pollution, it does show consistent problems with the South Dixie Plant," according to TWC Hearing Examiner Kaylene Ray.

She is recommending restrictions on that older South Dixie plant but said the newer East Plant has an excellent record of operation.

Midland County Commissioner Win Brown was irked over the recommendation, which Ms. Ray is submitting to the three-member TWC, which on May 23 is to consider the applications for renewal of the permits to discharge the effluent into the draw.

"WE SHOWED (in hearings) where their (Odessa's) problem created problems for us," said Brown, who has been fighting Odessa's discharge into the draw since the mid-1970s.

He said Ted Kerr, Midland County's lawyer in the Midland-Odessa dispute, and hydrologists Ed Reed and Joe Reed did "beautiful and magnificent" jobs in representing Midland in the hearings.

Brown contends the wastewater is contaminating the underground water systems, is causing flooding and is a massive culture for breeding and hatching of mosquitoes.

Brown said Ms. Ray's recommedation would be an affront to the "obelisk of friendship" along Texas Highway 191 between Midland and Odessa.

Ms. Ray is recommending that the TWC renew the permit for the East Plant for five years and renew the permit for the South Dixie Plant for 1½ years. In addition, she is suggesting that the daily flow from the East Plant be increased to 7.8 million gallons and that the flow from the South Dixie Plant remain at 11.8 million gallons per day. Odessa sought to increase the discharge rate at 14.7 million gallons per day.

"IN VIEW OF the continuing problems with the South Dixie Plant, a means by which untreated or partially treated sewage could be retained without posing a threat to the draw seems to be advisable," Ms. Ray wrote. "In this regard, a retention pond capable of holding at least the authorized maximum daily flow (11.8 million gallons) appears to be reasonable."

Brown said he is willing to take legal action against Odessa.

"If they want to go to federal court, I'm ready to go," he said. "I'm sick and tired of following the rules and getting hit in the neck."

He said the Midland partisans would "have to get down there (to Austin) and talk" to the commissioners, Paul Hopkins, Lee B.M. Biggart and Ralph Roming.

"We can't run our water after it'ss treated down the (Midland) Draw."

Out of fairness, Brown said since the TWC earlier in the 1980s had ordered the city of Midland to find alternative means to dispose of its effluent, then so should the TWC order Odessa. Midland had been disposing of much of its primary-treated effluent via irrigation but the treated water nevertheless got into Midland Draw and apparently seeped into the underground water zones. Midland did not have permits to discharge into the draw.

Unlike Brown, Odessa Deputy City Manager Chester Nolen said Ms. Ray's recommendation "sounds favorable to us."

Nolen said Odessa already is complying with Ms. Ray's proposals or has already made plans to do so.

"It looks favorable," he said. "We feel like we're doing nothing damaging."

Further, Nolen said Brown's reasoning in suggesting that the TWC should treat Midland's and Odessa's effluent similarly is without merit.

"You're talking about apples and oranges," he said. "Midland is discharging the effluent only after it's primarily treated and sprays it on the ground." Odessa puts its wastewater through another cleansing process called secondary treatment.

"It's a more refined process than what Midland does," Nolen said.

Odessa chamber reveals new name, mission

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — What's in a name? That's what the Greater Odessa Area Chamber of Commerce and its new extension Westside Council will be finding out as the civic group works to improve communication and business links between the city and the west side area.

The chamber announced this change in its name and scope this morning along with the formation of the group which will work to further the interests of people living west of the city limits. Sam Holloman, the first homeowner west of FM 1936 and a member of the chamber, will serve as chairman of a 16-person committee made up of people who live, work or have some affiliation with this area in west Ector County.

Executive vice president of the chamber, David Jenkins, explained the name change and formation of the group as a beginning of an effort to find "a better communication link with a segment of our community we have not had."

Art Lish, chamber president, said the name change idea was to reflect the increase in the geogophical area with which the chamber is concerned. One-fourth of the county's population — between 25,000 and 30,000 people — live in West Odessa, according to Lish.

"It's an idea I feel whose time hascome," said Lish.

Jenkins explained the idea just now came about because of the economic downturn the area is experiencing. During the boom, "the chamber was trying to manage the growth rather than look at arms of communication," Jenkins said. "The Westside Council will have its own mission, its own long- and short-term goals."

Noting west Odessa's past feelings of not being part of city activities or decision making, Holloman said, "We're trying to make it part of the family. There's a lot of problems out here we will be seeking solutions to."

The opening of Wesley Horse Center in West Odessa should mean more commerce for the entire area, according to Jenkins.

"West Odessa is an opportunity," he said.

The name change follows a nationwide trend of cities broadening the base of their chambers of commerce.

Mental illness linked to lunar, solar patterns

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK — A study of 4,000 mentally ill patients over nearly two decades indicates that the disease's severity varies with the motions of the sun and moon, with psychotics showing their most bizarre behavior when the moon is full, a psychiatrist says.

The new study found that at the time of the full moon — and especially during the full moons of the summer and fall — psychotic mental patients display their most inappropriate appearance and strongest irrational fears, said Dr. Charles Mirabile, a psychiatrist at The Institute of Living in Hartford, Conn.

Tonight's forecast calls for fair skies and mild temperatures dipping into the middle 50s. Southeast winds of 10 to 20 mph are expected.

Wednesday, however, should see increasing cloudiness with a 20 percent chance of mainly afternoon showers and thunderstorms. Highs in the middle 80s should be offset by gusty 15- to 25-mph winds.

Monday's high reached 74 degrees, 22 below the record high of 96 set in 1937. An overnight low of 41 was 14 degrees warmer than the 27 mark recorded in 1947.

STATE

Clear skies and cool temperatures dominated the Texas weather picture before dawn today.

A ridge of high pressure was keeping clouds out of the state. However, forecasters expected increasing cloudiness tonight over West Texas and a chance of widely scattered showers and thunderstorms over the region Wednesday.

Pre-dawn temperatures were in the 30s over the Panhandle and the Big Bend region. Readings hovered in the 40s and 50s over the remainder of the state. Temperatures at 4 a.m. ranged from 31 at Marfa in the Big Bend area, to 60 at McAllen in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Winds were light and variable statewide.

The forecast called for mostly fair skies over North, East and South Texas through Wednesday.

Clouds were expected to increase over far West Texas tonight and over the entire region Wednesday. Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms were expected to develop over northern and southwestern sections of West Texas on Wednesday.

Warmer conditions were forecast for a couple of days. Afternoon highs were expected to hit the 80s over much of the state, with a few readings topping out over the 90-degree mark in the Lower Rio Grande Valley and the Big Bend region.

Along the coast, southeasterly winds at 5 to 10 knots, along with fair skies, were forecast tonight and Wednesday.

NATION

Light rain was scattered over the East today, as flash flood watches remained in effect for northern New Jersey and southeast New York state.

Rain extended from lower Michigan across the Great Lakes, the lower Ohio Valley, the Tennessee Valley and northern Georgia, as well as much of Maine. Showers were scattered from West Virginia across northern New Jersey, and along the northern Pacific Coast.

For the rest of today, the forecast called for rain and occasional thundershowers from Atlantic Coast states to the Great Lakes, the Ohio Valley and the Tennessee Valley. Widely scattered rain was expected from western Montana to northern Idaho and along the northern Pacific Coast.

High temperatures in the 30s and 40s were predicted over the lower Ohio Valley and over much of the upper Great Lakes; in the 50s across northern New England; in the mid-50s along the northern Pacific Coast; in the upper 70s over southern Florida; in the low 80s for southern Texas; in the upper 80s across southwest Texas and in the mid-90s through the inland Southwest.

Bush to battle chemical warfare

AP Laserphoto

President Ronald Reagan, left, talks to reporters as Vice President George Bush looks on. The White House news conference was held Monday to outline Bush's trip to Geneva.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush, vowing to avoid a "shouting match" with the Soviets, flew to Geneva today to enlist support at a 40-nation disarmament conference for a U.S. proposal to end the threat of chemical warfare.

"If successful it will elevate the hopes of mankind," Bush told reporters at Andrews Air Force Base Monday night before his departure for Switzerland. "It is our hope the Soviet Union will give our broad ranging proposals serious consideration."

The vice president arrived at Geneva's Cointrin Airport early this afternoon and was whisked away in a limousine without speaking to reporters. A U.S. official who asked not to be named said Bush would have "his private time" today before addressing the conference Wednesday.

The U.S. plan, announced by President Reagan at his April 4 news conference, provides for enforcement and verification of existing bans on the use of chemical weapons.

The proposal followed White House confirmation last month that Iraq has used poison gas in its war with Iran and charges — denied by the Soviets — that the Red Army and its allies have used chemical weapons in Afghanistan and Southeast Asia.

The Soviet news agency Tass has called the Bush trip "a propaganda trick the White House is going to use to camouflage and justify a program for the speedy buildup of its chemical arms arsenal."

The Soviet government newspaper Izvestia went further and said in an editorial that Washington had set forth "patently unacceptable conditions" and in reality wants to "intensify the preparations for chemical war."

Bush chose not to respond directly to the Soviet's initial rejection of the plan in advance of the conference.

"There's no sense elevating the decibel level," he said. "I'm not going to becloud the issue by getting into a shouting match with the Soviets."

He said, "all countries are going to have to take a hard look," at the proposals.

The vice president spent the day of his departure in a round of meetings and public appearances designed to put the spotlight on the urgency and lofty purpose of his mission.

He attended a lengthy briefing at the White House and then appeared publicly with Reagan. "Godspeed," the president told Bush. "Our goal is to eliminate from this Earth one of the most horrible and terrifying weapons known to mankind."

"Chemical weapons provide a sad example ... of past arms control failures," Reagan added. "In recent years, both combatants and noncombatants have fallen victim to them in several areas of the world. We must move to ban these weapons now, but not only their use but also the development, production and possession of them."

Key Salvadoran won't take stand

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The leader of a key conservative party says his group will remain neutral in the May 6 presidential runoff, a decision expected to hurt the chances of ultra-rightist candidate Roberto d'Aubuisson.

On the civil war front, El Salvador's army suffered a bloody setback Monday when leftist guerrillas ambushed an army convoy, killing 37 soldiers and wounding 14.

In Nicaragua, the leftist government said its forces launched a counterattack against rebels who took a port town on the southeast coast. The rebels' leader, Eden Pastora, said he would set up a provisional government in the region.

Civilian and military sources said another rebel force took over a government-owned ranch used for military purposes in north-central Nicaragua, and the Defense Ministry said government troops killed 34 rebels in an ambush in the area.

In San Salvador, the government reported no arrests in the assassination of Joaquim Alfredo Zapata, the highest-ranking Salvadoran employee on the U.S. Embassy security staff.

Gunmen in a taxi opened fire on Zapata Monday when his car stopped at a traffic light, killing him instantly and wounding his wife, Yolanda, embassy spokesman Gregory Lagana said. The couple's daughter, Lindora, also riding in the car, was not injured.

No group has claimed responsibility for the shooting.

The outlook for Salvador's presidential runoff took a new twist Monday when Francisco Jose Guerrero, the unsuccessful presidential candidate of the conservative National Conciliation Party, said he would not support d'Aubuisson.

Guerrero said d'Aubuisson's Republican Nationalist Alliance had proposed an alliance in which Guerrero's party would be given control of four ministries if d'Aubuisson defeated Jose Napoleon Duarte of the centrist Christian Democratic Party in the May 6 runoff.

Guerrero, who placed third with 19.3 percent of the vote in the first round of presidential voting last month, said he rejected the offer in part because d'Aubuisson would not give ground on ideological questions. Guerrero also said he would not support Duarte.

"The only kingmaker in this election is the people," Guerrero said.

D'Aubuisson's apparent failure to win Guerrero's support is expected to hurt him, since Duarte won 43.4 percent of the March vote compared with d'Aubuisson's 29.7 percent.

Salvadoran guerrillas using the cover of a wooded mountainside ambushed army troops at El Junquillal, about 45 miles east of San Salvador on the Pan-American highway, said Col. Carlos Mauricio Guzman, executive officer officer of the 3rd Infantry Battalion. He said 37 soldiers were killed and 14 wounded.

Guzman said bombing runs by A-37 planes after the ambush eliminated "a column of terrorists" but that no body count had been made.

The Salvadoran rebels, who are boycotting the country's presidential election, announced election of a "provisional president" and a junta in the northern province of Chalatenango.

The rebels' clandestine Radio Farabundo Marti said a 28-year-old agricultural worker they identified only as Comrade Andres was chosen "new people's president" for a one-year term in an election April 9 in the "controlled territories" of Chalatenango.

Guerrillas have long controlled many towns in the province and claim to have set up a regional government that provides health, education and other public services.

In Nicaragua, military sources said the army early Monday launched a counteroffensive to try to retake San Juan del Norte, 180 miles southeast of Managua. They estimated the port was held by 500 rebels in the Revolutionary Democratic Alliance under Pastora's command.

U.S., Mexico air differences on Central American issues

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Mexico were holding high-level talks today against a background of profound and growing disagreement over how to deal with the political turmoil in Central America.

Much to the distress of some Reagan administration officials, Mexico has emerged as a key ally of Nicaraguan authorities in its role as one of four countries engaged in the so-called Contadora peace mediation process.

That issue was expected to dominate today's State Department discussions between Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Mexican Foreign Secretary Bernardo Sepulveda.

Also on the agenda for the discussions, starting in late morning, was the scheduled visit here next month of President Miguel de la Madrid and bilateral financial and trade issues.

The meeting is the fourth in a series of yearly high-level discussions between Mexican and American officials. Joining Sepulveda for the discussions were Finance Minister Jesus Silva Herzog and Secretary of Commerce and Industrial Development Hector Hernandez.

At a news conference last Friday in Mexico City, Sepulveda denounced the American-sponsored mining of Nicaraguan harbors as a violation of international law and called for the "total elimination of all armed violence, direct or indirect, against Nicaragua."

Mexico's view is that revolution in Central America is a historical inevitability and it that the best way to ensure the good will of the insurgent forces is not to obstruct their path to power.

The United States, by providing arms to rebels opposed to the Sandinistas and by resisting revolution in El Salvador, is polarizing the politics in both countries and ensuring Soviet bloc involvement in the region, Mexican officials believe.

The Reagan administration, meanwhile, feels its policies are the only way to head off Soviet bloc domination of the region.

The administration has said little about its differences with Mexico, sensing that a public debate would only aggravate relations and make progress in other areas more difficult.

Mexico has been cooperating for the past 15 months with Colombia, Panama and Venezuela in the Contadora peace process, named for the Panamanian island where the first meeting of the group was held.

Reward offered in Brooklyn slayings

NEW YORK (AP) — Police have offered a $10,000 reward and opened a special phone line to help find whoever pumped bullets through the heads of two women and eight children, a massacre authorities believe may have stemmed from "bad blood" in drug dealings.

The slayings may have been drug-related because milk sugar used to cut heroin and foil often used to wrap narcotics were found in the blood-spattered apartment in a working-class Brooklyn neighborhood, police said Monday.

The women, ages 20 and 24, and the children, ages 3 to 14, were found Sunday in front of a blaring TV set like figures "in a wax museum" after what authorities called the worst mass killing in the city's history.

Most of the victims were found sitting upright in chairs. A slain pregnant woman still held a spoon and pudding can in her hand as though feeding a baby, and a crying infant — the only survivor — crawled among the bodies.

In the Colombian drug world, murdering children is a revenge tactic that has been used as a reprisal against adults, said Patrick Murphy, first deputy police commissioner. Although the victims were Puerto Rican, the revenge motive was being investigated, he said.

"We're looking into the possibility it could be a reprisal because of some bad blood," Murphy said at a news conference. "We're speculating because of the fact that there were young children involved and they were murdered in the fashion they were."

Enrique Bermudez, 34, who was father of two of the slain children and who discovered the bodies at his apartment, was being interviewed and his background was "being explored," Murphy said. Murphy said Bermudez was not a suspect "at this point."

The Daily News, quoting investigative sources, reported today that Bermudez was arrested in 1974 for selling heroin in Brooklyn, served nearly five years on a sentence of 5 to 15 years and is now on parole.

The victims were shot in the head at close range about 2 p.m. Sunday, and Murphy said two weapons had been used, a .22- and a .38-caliber pistol, leading police to believe there were two killers. No weapons were recovered.

"In our experience we've never known a shooting where 10 people were killed in such a fashion here in New York City," Murphy said.

All of the victims were shot at least once in the head, according to a preliminary report from the medical examiner's office. Powder burns on several victims indicated that the muzzle of the murder weapon was in contact with the skull when the bullet was fired, the report said.

Carmine Rossi, a neighbor who found the surviving infant girl after being summoned by Bermudez, said there were "bodies all over the place. They were sitting up. It looked like a wax museum, like dummies. They were all dressed like they were alive, watching TV."

Christina Perez, 11 months old, was the only survivor. Rossi discovered her unhurt, crying and crawling around in the bloody living room where some of the bodies were found. Authorities said she has been placed in a foster home.

Murphy said he was not sure why the little girl was spared, but added, "The shooter may have thought he also shot her."

Police identified the victims as Bermudez's two children, Betsy, 14, and Marilyn, 10; Virginia Lopez, 24, with whom Bermudez lived and who was six months pregnant; her two children, Eddie, 7, and Juan, 4. All apparently lived in the five-room railroad flat.

Also killed were Carmen Perez, 20, Christina's mother and Mrs. Lopez's cousin; her sons, Alberto, 5, and Noel, 3; Migdilia Perez, 14, Carmen Perez's sister; and Maria Perez, 10, a cousin of Carmen Perez. Police said the Perez family lived nearby and was visiting.

Seven bodies were found in the living room, one in the main bedroom and two in the second bedroom. The victims were "almost in repose" and wereshot "almost simultaneously," Murphy said.

A $10,000 reward for information leading to the arrest or conviction of the killers was offered by the city, which set up a special telephone hotline for information in the case.

The largest previous multiple slaying in the city occurred in 1979, when six people were shot to death in a Harlem apartment.

Mental illness linked to lunar patterns

For centuries, poets have speculated about the ill effects of the moon. Shakespeare spoke of people becoming "fools by heavenly compulsion," and the poet John Milton wrote of "moon-struck madness." The word "lunacy" itself comes from the Latin word for the moon, luna.

"It has been recognized for some time that patients with mood disturbances tend to become ill during particular seasons of the year," Mirabile said. But the new research suggests "that seasonal effects are much more pervasive than has generally been realized," he said.

Speaking Monday at a symposium sponsored by the Institute for Child Development Research, Mirabile said the 4,000 patients were observed daily for more than 18 years with the aid of a computer.

Mirabile's study also found that disease severity climbs not only when the moon is full but also at the time of the new moon, when the lunar image disappears and no moonlight appears. This effect was most apparent in spring and winter, Mirabile said.

The seasonal and lunar variations were most obvious in psychotic patients, but were also evident in patients with other mental disorders, he said. Psychosis is defined as a mental disorder marked by deranged personality and loss of contact with reality.

Seasonal variations in mental illness have previously been attributed to changes in the length of day and night — changes brought about by the motion of the sun relative to the Earth.

The link between illness and the invisible new moon, however, suggests that the brain may also be responding to the same lunar effects on gravity that are responsible for rising and falling tides.

"Perhaps, during the course of evolution, the brain organized its development around these geophysical cues, and the systems responsive to them are obliged to maintain an appropriate temporal order for effective function," Mirabile said.

Perot continues attack on board of eduction

state

AUSTIN (AP) — H. Ross Perot says he will drop his education reform efforts if legislators reject his committee's plan to replace the elected State Board of Education with an appointed panel.

Public school reforms approved by lawmakers would be squelched by the elected board, according to Perot, chairman of the Select Committee on Public Education.

"It's got to be obvious to you that I am not going to use whatever credibility I have with the people of Texas to be part of a sham to pick their pockets," he told a Monday meeting of the Society of Professional Journalists.

Perot promised a "grassroots" campaign to overcome legislative opposition to scrapping the 27-member elected board that has ruled Texas education for 25 years.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, and Rep. Bill Haley, D-Center, chairmen of the House and Senate education committees, favor the elected board. The Legislature is expected to meet in May or June for a special session on education.

Perot's attack has focused on Joe Kelly Butler, the Houston oilman who has served as Board of Education chairman for nine years. Perot's comments in recent months have sparked an exchange of barbs between the two men. Butler says abolishing the elected board would leave Texas public schools in the hands of "dictators."

Other comments Perot's made on Butler and the board are:

— Of a Saturday meeting in El Paso where the board approved a new rule on textbooks' handling of evolution: "I'm surprised they didn't go to Carlsbad Caverns (in New Mexico) and meet underground."

— Of the board's Austin meeting room, named for Butler: "I would describe the setting as imperial. There's the life-sized picture of the chairman. In order to testify you have to stand at an angle so the cameras have to shoot (the Butler portrait) in the background."

— Of the board meetings: "I thought they were playing the stock market for awhile, all these women running around handing them notes on paper."

Also Monday, the appointed board proposal was rapped by the Texas Federation of Teachers.

"A case might be made that no reform is possible until the present board is removed from office," said TFT president John Cole. "However, a means already exists for the removal from office of foolish, venal or incompetent board members."

Man recalls explosion which leveled town

TEXAS CITY (AP) — At 9:07 a.m. April 16, 1947, W.H. Sandberg walked off the deck of a burning French freighter, intending to find out why tugboats called to stand by the ship had not arrived.

Five minutes later, the SS Grandcamp exploded in a blast which leveled the town and killed 398 people and left 115 others missing. Thousands were injured. Damage was estimated at $67 million.

Sandberg said a stevedore asked him where he was going as he left the ship.

"I remember looking at my watch," the 83-year-old Sandberg said. "I said it was 'exactly 9:07 a.m. and the tugboats have not come, so I'm going over to raise a little hell about those tugboats.'"

Sandberg said he had just gotten back to his office at the Texas City Terminal Railway Co., where he was vice president, when the ship's cargo exploded. The blast was so powerful that three anchors, each weighing several tons, were hurled a mile and a half from the ship.

Sandberg, who suffered cuts on his head and shoulders from flying glass, said he and another man helped carry victims to a hospital in a truck.

"I was leading the way on foot," Sandberg said. "I'd pull pieces of iron (from the road) so the truck could get up to the doctor's office."

Another freighter, the High Flyer, loaded with ammonium nitrate, ammunition and sulfur caught fire and at 1:15 a.m. April 17, it also blew up.

Meeting proposed to decide next Lucas trial

FORT WORTH (AP) — A meeting of Texas district attorneys is being planned to decide where and on what case self-procliamed mass killer Henry Lee Lucas will be tried next, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported today.

In today's editions, the newspaper quoted sources close to the case as saying a task force of Texas Rangers will seek agreement from the prosecutors to hold off for at least a couple of months any further trials.

The task force has been coordinating interviews of Lucas by law officers from around the country and taking Lucas to crime scenes around the state. A delay in further trials would give the Rangers more time to fullfill the requests of hundreds of more law officers for interviews with Lucas.

Last Friday in San Angelo, Lucas was sentenced to die for the 1979 slaying of an unidentified hitchhiker whose body was found near Georgetown. He faces nine additional murder charges in Texas and seven in five other states.

Six of the Texas cases are capital, as well as various cases in Arkansas, Louisiana, Maryland, Washington and Florida.

Lucas, a 47-year-old drifter who claims responsibility for as many as 360 murders nationwide, also has been convicted in two other Texas murders.

Prison inmates to lecture students

ANGLETON (AP) — Texas prison inmates Dan Paul Sivley and Don Doyle Horton will travel 100,000 miles by the end of the year to tell 83,000 high school students not to turn out like them.

In return, says Doug Eckels, an administrator in the prison system's education program, they can look forward not to early release or special treatment — but to eating lunch with him and a guard every day.

On the road, the two 21-year-olds are kept in county jails.

The miseries of prison life are numerous, the two tell their adolescent audiences.

They talk about rapes, stabbings and violence.

They compare the size of their two-man cells to that of Ping-Pong tables.

And they complain about regimentation.

"They tell you what to do, when to do it and how to do it," Sivley recently told an Angleton High School audience. "When you go to eat, you have to sit at the first available seat. There is no talking.

"You have to eat in 10 minutes because there are 2,500 people on the unit who have to be fed. That's why they start feeding us at 2:30 in the morning," he said.

Not the least of the problems is the solitude, they told the group at Angleton.

"It's a lonely place to be," Sivley said. "The only thing we see at night are concrete walls and steel."

Days aren't much of an improvement, Horton said.

"You're allowed two adult visitors every two weeks, but you can only talk to them through a thick, wire-enforced window. This is, if you get any visitors," he said.

Sivley is serving eight years for a 1982 Harris County burglary. Horton was sentenced to 10 years for burglary in Dallas County.

Doctor has show on cable

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — T. Berry Brazelton, the baby doctor whose books are gospel to the modern baby-boom brigade in much the same way that Dr. Spock was endorsed by previous generations, is a daddy and mommy doctor, too.

His soothing bedside manner, exhibited so warmly on his daily TV show, "What Every Baby Knows" on cable's Lifetime network, reaches beneath the symptoms to grab the underlying — and often hidden — worries of the parents.

Just like the italics he uses in his books to relate the parents' real concerns, Brazelton uses voiceovers on his series to communicate root problems.

"I knew Andrew was fine," he says of the 4-year-old boy whose skull was fractured in an accident while his single mother was at a party. "This exam was to reassure Linda."

In this episode, "Parenting Alone," which will be on Lifetime Thursday and repeated next month, Brazelton explains how Linda's guilt has made her vulnerable, especially when hospital staffers insensitively raised her fear level. This good doctor muzzles the alarms with sound, fatherly talk.

Brazelton is a rare breed, a pediatrician with training in child development and psychology.

"Doctors today are trained very well in pathology and disease, but not at all in interpersonal relationships, child development and social and preventive medicine," he said in an interview. "The pediatrician's role is to be supportive and to empower people to look closely at themselves."

Brazelton said he didn't believe in advice. "I teach parents to observe, to open up their eyes and to pay some attention to what they're seeing and believe in it," he said.

Watching Brazelton in his loving communication with babies, in his interviews with parents and in his question-and-answer sessions at the end of each program, it's evident what Brazelton means about observation.

He's marvelous at looking and listening. Known for his experiments on the capacities of newborns, Brazelton offers some enlightening evidence in "Giving Birth," which will be on next Tuesday and repeated several times next month.

Brazelton said raising children in the age of nuclear weapons and chemical pollution often provoked anxiety and that it didn't help that extended families for support and child-care help were growing extinct.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
3 ♣	4 ♡	5 ♣	?

On many occasions we have posed quiz problems regarding the forcing pass. In general, the rule is that, when your partnership is in a game-forcing auction, either your side plays the hand or the other side plays it doubled.

However, there are many other situations where the forcing pass applies — enough for Eddie Kantar to have written a booklet about the bid ("The Forcing Pass in Contract Bridge," by Edwin Kantar. Barclay Bridge Supplies, 8 Bush Ave., Port Chester, N.Y. 10573. 72 pp. Paperback. $3.95 plus $.60 postage). This is not the stuff for the rank-and-file bridge player, but if you take your partnerships seriously, you cannot afford to be without it.

Cover up all but the South hand and the auction, and decide what action you would take.

Most players would pass because they have nothing. However, Kantar contends, and rightly, that a pass would be forcing. It would imply some values, because it expresses doubt as to whether to double or bid on.

"You must double! Partner has shown a strong hand. (One should not preempt directly after an opening preemptive bid by the opponents) . . .

". . . You can't brush aside your hand because it is hopeless. Hopeless hands must double in forcing pass auctions to warn partner against bidding on.

"As you can see even four hearts is too high. Perhaps partner would double if you passed, but surely he cannot be criticized for bidding further. The K-Q-x-x-x in either spades or diamonds would be enough to make five hearts."

The rule here is: Any time you and your partner have voluntarily bid game after an adverse preemptive opening bid, all subsequent passes by your side are forcing.

It's in the book!

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. For a copy, send $1.75 to "Goren-Four Deal," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make checks payable to Newspaperbooks.

Three transients killed in Midland

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Autopsies have been ordered in the deaths of three unidentified transients who died in a house fire at the intersection of Marienfeld Street and Louisiana Avenue early this morning.

Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry pronounced the men dead at the scene and ordered the autopsies.

"They were burned real bad," said Fire Chief James Roberts. "It will be difficult to identify them. There were nine men in the house and only six got out."

The cause of the blaze, which Roberts said had been burning for some time before firemen received the 3:32 a.m. call, was not immediately known. Firefighters were still on the scene at 8 a.m.

The owner of the vacant, wood frame house, located at 703 N. Marienfeld, was listed as Bobby Buys, no address available. The house was destroyed.

The bodies of the victims were taken to the Ellis Funeral Home. Their deaths mark the city's second fatal house fire of the year.

On March 5, 58-year-old James Niles Johnson, a transient from Alexander, Ark., died when a vacant house at 1701 S. Midkiff Road caught fire about 7:45 p.m.

Fire officials said that blaze was caused by a leaking garden hose that had been hooked up from an outside propane tank to a space heater in the house.

A second man in the house — Robert Warren Lewis, no age or address available — was not injured.

Austin traffic stalls firefighters' efforts

AUSTIN (AP) — An insurance agency and a waterbed store were destroyed by a fire that began in a trash dumpster and spread while firemen stationed a block away tried to make their way through rush hour traffic on a north Austin street, officials said.

The fire began about 5:20 p.m. Monday. Store employees tried to extinguish the blaze themselves, but when it appeared they couldn't they called the fire department.

Second fire stuns Nacogdoches

NACOGDOCHES, Texas (AP) — A spark from a welder's torch was blamed for starting the second major fire in Nacogdoches in three days.

A Monday destroyed the International Paper Co. plywood plant, throwing 300 people out of their jobs.

Plant manager Mel Nobles estimated damage at between $5 million and $8 million from the wind-swept blaze.

An estimated $2 million loss resulted from a fire, believed deliberately set, that roared through a series of connecting two-story buildings in downtown Nacogdoches Saturday night.

The fire at the 160,000-square-foot paper plant in an industrial area southeast of downtown was reported about noon Monday. Firefighters said the plant was already engulfed in flames when they arrived. Flames shot as high as 300 feet, they said.

Fire marshal Raymond Lewis said the fire is believed to have started by sparks from a maintenance man's welding operations. The fire occurred despite routine safety precautions the workman had taken, including spraying down the area where the welding was to occur, Lewis said.

Winds of 20 to 30 mph fed the fire, and the Forest Service and Nacogdoches County fire units were dispatched to extinguish grass fires that burned as far away as 1½ to two miles from the plant. A small fire at a lumber yard one-fourth mile east of the plant also was attributed to the paper company blaze.

Firefighters kept the flames from reaching several nearby propane storage tanks. The fire was brought under control at 2:10 p.m., fire officials said, but the plant was a total loss.

A spokesman at Memorial Hospital said six firefighters were treated for minor injuries.

The fire in downtown Nacogdoches Saturday was reported about 6:30 p.m., a half hour after most of the businesses had closed for the weekend. It roared along a common attic, spreading to several adjacent businesses before firefighters got it under control about 10:30 p.m.

A man was arrested at a Nacogdoches residence about 11 p.m. Saturday and brought in for questioning about the fire, which began in Colony Mall, a two-story building erected about the turn of the century that was renovated into a mall housing several small specialty shops.

Renewal of Odessa's wastewater permits proposed

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The tenuous bonds of friendship between Midland and Odessa may be weakened by the recommendation by a Texas Water Commission (TWC) hearing examiner to renew Odessa's permits to discharge treated wastewater into Monahans Draw.

Midland County and the city of Midland have joined in protesting Odessa's bid for renewal of the permits. Midland claims the effluent is polluting the underground water and thereby is lowering quality of water along the draw, which passes south of Midland through Midland County.

"Although the evidence does not support the protestants' contention of groundwater pollution, it does show consistent problems with the South Dixie Plant," according to TWC Hearing Examiner Kaylene Ray.

She is recommending restrictions on that older South Dixie plant but said the newer East Plant has an excellent record of operation.

Midland County Commissioner Win Brown was irked over the recommendation, which Ms. Ray is submitting to the three-member TWC, which on May 23 is to consider the applications for renewal of the permits to discharge the effluent into the draw.

"WE SHOWED (in hearings) where their (Odessa's) problem created problems for us," said Brown, who has been fighting Odessa's discharge into the draw since the mid-1970s.

He said Ted Kerr, Midland County's lawyer in the Midland-Odessa dispute, and hydrologists Ed Reed and Joe Reed did "beautiful and magnificent" jobs in representing Midland in the hearings.

Brown contends the wastewater is contaminating the underground water systems, is causing flooding and is a massive culture for breeding and hatching of mosquitoes.

Brown said Ms. Ray's recommedation would be an affront to the "obelisk of friendship" along Texas Highway 191 between Midland and Odessa.

Ms. Ray is recommending that the TWC renew the permit for the East Plant for five years and renew the permit for the South Dixie Plant for 1½ years. In addition, she is suggesting that the daily flow from the East Plant be increased to 7.8 million gallons and that the flow from the South Dixie Plant remain at 11.8 million gallons per day. Odessa sought to increase the discharge rate at 14.7 million gallons per day.

"IN VIEW OF the continuing problems with the South Dixie Plant, a means by which untreated or partially treated sewage could be retained without posing a threat to the draw seems to be advisable," Ms. Ray wrote. "in this regard, a retention pond capable of holding at least the authorized maximum daily flow (11.8 million gallons) appears to be reasonable."

Brown said he is willing to take legal action against Odessa.

"If they want to go to federal court, I'm ready to go," he said. "I'm sick and tired of following the rules and getting hit in the neck."

He said the Midland partisans would "have to get down there (to Austin) and talk" to the commissioners, Paul Hopkins, Lee B.M. Biggart and Ralph Roming.

"We can't run our water after it'ss treated down the (Midland) Draw."

Out of fairness, Brown said since the TWC earlier in the 1980s had ordered the city of Midland to find alternative means to dispose of its effluent, then so should the TWC order Odessa. Midland had been disposing of much of its primary-treated effluent via irrigation but the treated water nevertheless got into Midland Draw and apparently seeped into the underground water zones. Midland did not have permits to discharge into the draw.

Unlike Brown, Odessa Deputy City Manager Chester Nolen said Ms. Ray's recommendation "sounds favorable to us."

Nolen said Odessa already is complying with Ms. Ray's proposals or has already made plans to do so.

"It looks favorable," he said. "We feel like we're doing nothing damaging."

Further, Nolen said Brown's reasoning in suggesting that the TWC should treat Midland's and Odessa's effluent similarly is without merit.

"You're talking about apples and oranges," he said. "Midland is discharging the effluent only after it's primarily treated and sprays it on the ground." Odessa puts its wastewater through another cleansing process called secondary treatment.

"It's a more refined process than what Midland does," Nolen said.

Odessa chamber reveals new name, mission

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — What's in a name? That's what the Greater Odessa Area Chamber of Commerce and its new extension Westside Council will be finding out as the civic group works to improve communication and business links between the city and the west side area.

The chamber announced this change in its name and scope this morning along with the formation of the group which will work to further the interests of people living west of the city limits. Sam Holloman, the first homeowner west of FM 1936 and a member of the chamber, will serve as chairman of a 16-person committee made up of people who live, work or have some affiliation with this area in west Ector County.

Executive vice president of the chamber, David Jenkins, explained the name change and formation of the group as a beginning of an effort to find "a better communication link with a segment of our community we have not had."

Art Lish, chamber president, said the name change idea was to reflect the increase in the geogophical area with which the chamber is concerned. One-fourth of the county's population — between 25,000 and 30,000 people — live in West Odessa, according to Lish.

"It's an idea I feel whose time hascome," said Lish.

Jenkins explained the idea just now came about because of the economic downturn the area is experiencing. During the boom, "the chamber was trying to manage the growth rather than look at arms of communication," Jenkins said. "The Westside Council will have its own mission, its own long- and short-term goals."

Noting west Odessa's past feelings of not being part of city activities or decision making, Holloman said, "We're trying to make it part of the family. There's a lot of problems out here we will be seeking solutions to."

The opening of Wesley Horse Center in West Odessa should mean more commerce for the entire area, according to Jenkins.

"West Odessa is an opportunity," he said.

The name change follows a nationwide trend of cities broadening the base of their chambers of commerce.

Mental illness linked to lunar, solar patterns

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK — A study of 4,000 mentally ill patients over nearly two decades indicates that the disease's severity varies with the motions of the sun and moon, with psychotics showing their most bizarre behavior when the moon is full, a psychiatrist says.

The new study found that at the time of the full moon — and especially during the full moons of the summer and fall — psychotic mental patients display their most inappropriate appearance and strongest irrational fears, said Dr. Charles Mirabile, a psychiatrist at The Institute of Living in Hartford, Conn.

Increasing cloudiness due in Basin area Wednesday

From Staff and Wire Reports

Pleasant spring weather will continue through tonight, predict forecasters at the National Weather Service, but probably end Wednesday.

Tonight's forecast calls for fair skies and mild temperatures dipping into the middle 50s. Southeast winds of 10 to 20 mph are expected.

Wednesday, however, should see increasing cloudiness with a 20 percent chance of mainly afternoon showers and thunderstorms. Highs in the middle 80s should be offset by gusty 15- to 25-mph winds.

Monday's high reached 74 degrees, 22 below the record high of 96 set in 1937. An overnight low of 41 was 14 degrees warmer than the 27 mark recorded in 1947.

STATE

Clear skies and cool temperatures dominated the Texas weather picture before dawn today.

A ridge of high pressure was keeping clouds out of the state. However, forecasters expected increasing cloudiness tonight over West Texas and a chance of widely scattered showers and thunderstorms over the region Wednesday.

Pre-dawn temperatures were in the 30s over the Panhandle and the Big Bend region. Readings hovered in the 40s and 50s over the remainder of the state. Temperatures at 4 a.m. ranged from 31 at Marfa in the Big Bend area, to 60 at McAllen in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Winds were light and variable statewide.

The forecast called for mostly fair skies over North, East and South Texas through Wednesday.

Clouds were expected to increase over far West Texas tonight and over the entire region Wednesday. Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms were expected to develop over northern and southwestern sections of West Texas on Wednesday.

Warmer conditions were forecast for a couple of days. Afternoon highs were expected to hit the 80s over much of the state, with a few readings topping out over the 90-degree mark in the Lower Rio Grande Valley and the Big Bend region.

Along the coast, southeasterly winds at 5 to 10 knots, along with fair skies, were forecast tonight and Wednesday.

NATION

Light rain was scattered over the East today, as flash flood watches remained in effect for northern New Jersey and southeast New York state.

Rain extended from lower Michigan across the Great Lakes, the lower Ohio Valley, the Tennessee Valley and northern Georgia, as well as much of Maine. Showers were scattered from West Virginia across northern New Jersey, and along the northern Pacific Coast.

For the rest of today, the forecast called for rain and occasional thundershowers from Atlantic Coast states to the Great Lakes, the Ohio Valley and the Tennessee Valley. Widely scattered rain was expected from western Montana to northern Idaho and along the northern Pacific Coast.

High temperatures in the 30s and 40s were predicted over the lower Ohio Valley and over much of the upper Great Lakes; in the 50s across northern New England; in the mid-50s along the northern Pacific Coast; in the upper 70s over southern Florida; in the low 80s for southern Texas; in the upper 80s across southwest Texas and in the mid-90s through the inland Southwest.

Temperatures around the nation at 2 a.m. EST ranged from 36 degrees at Cheyenne, Wyo., to 82 degrees at Phoenix, Ariz.

Bush to battle chemical warfare

AP Laserphoto

President Ronald Reagan, left, talks to reporters as Vice President George Bush looks on. The White House news conference was held Monday to outline Bush's trip to Geneva.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush, vowing to avoid a "shouting match" with the Soviets, flew to Geneva today to enlist support at a 40-nation disarmament conference for a U.S. proposal to end the threat of chemical warfare.

"If successful it will elevate the hopes of mankind," Bush told reporters at Andrews Air Force Base Monday night before his departure for Switzerland. "It is our hope the Soviet Union will give our broad ranging proposals serious consideration."

The vice president arrived at Geneva's Cointrin Airport early this afternoon and was whisked away in a limousine without speaking to reporters. A U.S. official who asked not to be named said Bush would have "his private time" today before addressing the conference Wednesday.

The U.S. plan, announced by President Reagan at his April 4 news conference, provides for enforcement and verification of existing bans on the use of chemical weapons.

The proposal followed White House confirmation last month that Iraq has used poison gas in its war with Iran and charges — denied by the Soviets — that the Red Army and its allies have used chemical weapons in Afghanistan and Southeast Asia.

The Soviet news agency Tass has called the Bush trip "a propaganda trick the White House is going to use to camouflage and justify a program for the speedy buildup of its chemical arms arsenal."

The Soviet government newspaper Izvestia went further and said in an editorial that Washington had set forth "patently unacceptable conditions" and in reality wants to "intensify the preparations for chemical war."

Bush chose not to respond directly to the Soviet's initial rejection of the plan in advance of the conference.

"There's no sense elevating the decibel level," he said. "I'm not going to becloud the issue by getting into a shouting match with the Soviets."

He said, "all countries are going to have to take a hard look," at the proposals.

The vice president spent the day of his departure in a round of meetings and public appearances designed to put the spotlight on the urgency and lofty purpose of his mission.

He attended a lengthy briefing at the White House and then appeared publicly with Reagan. "Godspeed," the president told Bush. "Our goal is to eliminate from this Earth one of the most horrible and terrifying weapons known to mankind."

"Chemical weapons provide a sad example ... of past arms control failures," Reagan added. "In recent years, both combatants and noncombatants have fallen victim to them in several areas of the world. We must move to ban these weapons now, but not only their use but also the development, production and possession of them."

Key Salvadoran won't take stand

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The leader of a key conservative party says his group will remain neutral in the May 6 presidential runoff, a decision expected to hurt the chances of ultra-rightist candidate Roberto d'Aubuisson.

On the civil war front, El Salvador's army suffered a bloody setback Monday when leftist guerrillas ambushed an army convoy, killing 37 soldiers and wounding 14.

In Nicaragua, the leftist government said its forces launched a counterattack against rebels who took a port town on the southeast coast. The rebels' leader, Eden Pastora, said he would set up a provisional government in the region.

Civilian and military sources said another rebel force took over a government-owned ranch used for military purposes in north-central Nicaragua, and the Defense Ministry said government troops killed 34 rebels in an ambush in the area.

In San Salvador, the government reported no arrests in the assassination of Joaquim Alfredo Zapata, the highest-ranking Salvadoran employee on the U.S. Embassy security staff.

Gunmen in a taxi opened fire on Zapata Monday when his car stopped at a traffic light, killing him instantly and wounding his wife, Yolanda, embassy spokesman Gregory Lagana said. The couple's daughter, Lindora, also riding in the car, was not injured.

No group has claimed responsibility for the shooting.

The outlook for Salvador's presidential runoff took a new twist Monday when Francisco Jose Guerrero, the unsuccessful presidential candidate of the conservative National Conciliation Party, said he would not support d'Aubuisson.

Guerrero said d'Aubuisson's Republican Nationalist Alliance had proposed an alliance in which Guerrero's party would be given control of four ministries if d'Aubuisson defeated Jose Napoleon Duarte of the centrist Christian Democratic Party in the May 6 runoff.

Guerrero, who placed third with 19.3 percent of the vote in the first round of presidential voting last month, said he rejected the offer in part because d'Aubuisson would not give ground on ideological questions. Guerrero also said he would not support Duarte.

"The only kingmaker in this election is the people," Guerrero said.

D'Aubuisson's apparent failure to win Guerrero's support is expected to hurt him, since Duarte won 43.4 percent of the March vote compared with d'Aubuisson's 29.7 percent.

Salvadoran guerrillas using the cover of a wooded mountainside ambushed army troops at El Junquillal, about 45 miles east of San Salvador on the Pan-American highway, said Col. Carlos Mauricio Guzman, executive officer officer of the 3rd Infantry Battalion. He said 37 soldiers were killed and 14 wounded.

Guzman said bombing runs by A-37 planes after the ambush eliminated "a column of terrorists" but that no body count had been made.

The Salvadoran rebels, who are boycotting the country's presidential election, announced election of a "provisional president" and a junta in the northern province of Chalatenango.

The rebels' clandestine Radio Farabundo Marti said a 28-year-old agricultural worker they identified only as Comrade Andres was chosen "new people's president" for a one-year term in an election April 9 in the "controlled territories" of Chalatenango.

Guerrillas have long controlled many towns in the province and claim to have set up a regional government that provides health, education and other public services.

In Nicaragua, military sources said the army early Monday launched a counteroffensive to try to retake San Juan del Norte, 180 miles southeast of Managua. They estimated the port was held by 500 rebels in the Revolutionary Democratic Alliance under Pastora's command.

U.S., Mexico air differences on Central American issues

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Mexico were holding high-level talks today against a background of profound and growing disagreement over how to deal with the political turmoil in Central America.

Much to the distress of some Reagan administration officials, Mexico has emerged as a key ally of Nicaraguan authorities in its role as one of four countries engaged in the so-called Contadora peace mediation process.

That issue was expected to dominate today's State Department discussions between Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Mexican Foreign Secretary Bernardo Sepulveda.

Also on the agenda for the discussions, starting in late morning, was the scheduled visit here next month of President Miguel de la Madrid and bilateral financial and trade issues.

The meeting is the fourth in a series of yearly high-level discussions between Mexican and American officials. Joining Sepulveda for the discussions were Finance Minister Jesus Silva Herzog and Secretary of Commerce and Industrial Development Hector Hernandez.

At a news conference last Friday in Mexico City, Sepulveda denounced the American-sponsored mining of Nicaraguan harbors as a violation of international law and called for the "total elimination of all armed violence, direct or indirect, against Nicaragua."

Mexico's view is that revolution in Central America is a historical inevitability and it that the best way to ensure the good will of the insurgent forces is not to obstruct their path to power.

The United States, by providing arms to rebels opposed to the Sandinistas and by resisting revolution in El Salvador, is polarizing the politics in both countries and ensuring Soviet bloc involvement in the region, Mexican officials believe.

The Reagan administration, meanwhile, feels its policies are the only way to head off Soviet bloc domination of the region.

The administration has said little about its differences with Mexico, sensing that a public debate would only aggravate relations and make progress in other areas more difficult.

Mexico has been cooperating for the past 15 months with Colombia, Panama and Venezuela in the Contadora peace process, named for the Panamanian island where the first meeting of the group was held.

Reward offered in Brooklyn slayings

NEW YORK (AP) — Police have offered a $10,000 reward and opened a special phone line to help find whoever pumped bullets through the heads of two women and eight children, a massacre authorities believe may have stemmed from "bad blood" in drug dealings.

The slayings may have been drug-related because milk sugar used to cut heroin and foil often used to wrap narcotics were found in the blood-spattered apartment in a working-class Brooklyn neighborhood, police said Monday.

The women, ages 20 and 24, and the children, ages 3 to 14, were found Sunday in front of a blaring TV set like figures "in a wax museum" after what authorities called the worst mass killing in the city's history.

Most of the victims were found sitting upright in chairs. A slain pregnant woman still held a spoon and pudding can in her hand as though feeding a baby, and a crying infant — the only survivor — crawled among the bodies.

In the Colombian drug world, murdering children is a revenge tactic that has been used as a reprisal against adults, said Patrick Murphy, first deputy police commissioner. Although the victims were Puerto Rican, the revenge motive was being investigated, he said.

"We're looking into the possibility it could be a reprisal because of some bad blood," Murphy said at a news conference. "We're speculating because of the fact that there were young children involved and they were murdered in the fashion they were."

Enrique Bermudez, 34, who was father of two of the slain children and who discovered the bodies at his apartment, was being interviewed and his background was "being explored," Murphy said. Murphy said Bermudez was not a suspect "at this point."

The Daily News, quoting investigative sources, reported today that Bermudez was arrested in 1974 for selling heroin in Brooklyn, served nearly five years on a sentence of 5 to 15 years and is now on parole.

The victims were shot in the head at close range about 2 p.m. Sunday, and Murphy said two weapons had been used, a .22- and a .38-caliber pistol, leading police to believe there were two killers. No weapons were recovered.

"In our experience we've never known a shooting where 10 people were killed in such a fashion here in New York City," Murphy said.

All of the victims were shot at least once in the head, according to a preliminary report from the medical examiner's office. Powder burns on several victims indicated that the muzzle of the murder weapon was in contact with the skull when the bullet was fired, the report said.

Carmine Rossi, a neighbor who found the surviving infant girl after being summoned by Bermudez, said there were "bodies all over the place. They were sitting up. It looked like a wax museum, like dummies. They were all dressed like they were alive, watching TV."

Christina Perez, 11 months old, was the only survivor. Rossi discovered her unhurt, crying and crawling around in the bloody living room where some of the bodies were found. Authorities said she has been placed in a foster home.

Murphy said he was not sure why the little girl was spared, but added, "The shooter may have thought he also shot her."

Police identified the victims as Bermudez's two children, Betsy, 14, and Marilyn, 10; Virginia Lopez, 24, with whom Bermudez lived and who was six months pregnant; her two children, Eddie, 7, and Juan, 4. All apparently lived in the five-room railroad flat.

Also killed were Carmen Perez, 20, Christina's mother and Mrs. Lopez's cousin; her sons, Alberto, 5, and Noel, 3; Migdilia Perez, 14, Carmen Perez's sister; and Maria Perez, 10, a cousin of Carmen Perez. Police said the Perez family lived nearby and was visiting.

Seven bodies were found in the living room, one in the main bedroom and two in the second bedroom. The victims were "almost in repose" and wereshot "almost simultaneously," Murphy said.

A $10,000 reward for information leading to the arrest or conviction of the killers was offered by the city, which set up a special telephone hotline for information in the case.

The largest previous multiple slaying in the city occurred in 1979, when six people were shot to death in a Harlem apartment.

Mental illness linked to lunar patterns

For centuries, poets have speculated about the ill effects of the moon. Shakespeare spoke of people becoming "fools by heavenly compulsion," and the poet John Milton wrote of "moon-struck madness." The word "lunacy" itself comes from the Latin word for the moon, luna.

"It has been recognized for some time that patients with mood disturbances tend to become ill during particular seasons of the year," Mirabile said. But the new research suggests "that seasonal effects are much more pervasive than has generally been realized," he said.

Speaking Monday at a symposium sponsored by the Institute for Child Development Research, Mirabile said the 4,000 patients were observed daily for more than 18 years with the aid of a computer.

Mirabile's study also found that disease severity climbs not only when the moon is full but also at the time of the new moon, when the lunar image disappears and no moonlight appears. This effect was most apparent in spring and winter, Mirabile said.

The seasonal and lunar variations were most obvious in psychotic patients, but were also evident in patients with other mental disorders, he said. Psychosis is defined as a mental disorder marked by deranged personality and loss of contact with reality.

Seasonal variations in mental illness have previously been attributed to changes in the length of day and night — changes brought about by the motion of the sun relative to the Earth.

The link between illness and the invisible new moon, however, suggests that the brain may also be responding to the same lunar effects on gravity that are responsible for rising and falling tides.

"Perhaps, during the course of evolution, the brain organized its development around these geophysical cues, and the systems responsive to them are obliged to maintain an appropriate temporal order for effective function," Mirabile said.

Perot continues attack on board of eduction

AUSTIN (AP) — H. Ross Perot says he will drop his education reform efforts if legislators reject his committee's plan to replace the elected State Board of Education with an appointed panel.

Public school reforms approved by lawmakers would be squelched by the elected board, according to Perot, chairman of the Select Committee on Public Education.

"It's got to be obvious to you that I am not going to use whatever credibility I have with the people of Texas to be part of a sham to pick their pockets," he told a Monday meeting of the Society of Professional Journalists.

Perot promised a "grassroots" campaign to overcome legislative opposition to scrapping the 27-member elected board that has ruled Texas education for 25 years.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, and Rep. Bill Haley, D-Center, chairmen of the House and Senate education committees, favor the elected board. The Legislature is expected to meet in May or June for a special session on education.

Perot's attack has focused on Joe Kelly Butler, the Houston oilman who has served as Board of Education chairman for nine years. Perot's comments in recent months have sparked an exchange of barbs between the two men. Butler says abolishing the elected board would leave Texas public schools in the hands of "dictators."

Other comments Perot's made on Butler and the board are:

— Of a Saturday meeting in El Paso where the board approved a new rule on textbooks' handling of evolution: "I'm surprised they didn't go to Carlsbad Caverns (in New Mexico) and meet underground."

— Of the board's Austin meeting room, named for Butler: "I would describe the setting as imperial. There's the life-sized picture of the chairman. In order to testify you have to stand at an angle so the cameras have to shoot (the Butler portrait) in the background."

— Of the board meetings: "I thought they were playing the stock market for awhile, all these women running around handing them notes on paper."

Also Monday, the appointed board proposal was rapped by the Texas Federation of Teachers.

"A case might be made that no reform is possible until the present board is removed from office," said TFT president John Cole. "However, a means already exists for the removal from office of foolish, venal or incompetent board members."

Man recalls explosion which leveled town

TEXAS CITY (AP) — At 9:07 a.m. April 16, 1947, W.H. Sandberg walked off the deck of a burning French freighter, intending to find out why tugboats called to stand by the ship had not arrived.

Five minutes later, the SS Grandcamp exploded in a blast which leveled the town and killed 398 people and left 115 others missing. Thousands were injured. Damage was estimated at $67 million.

Sandberg said a stevedore asked him where he was going as he left the ship.

"I remember looking at my watch," the 83-year-old Sandberg said. "I said it was 'exactly 9:07 a.m. and the tugboats have not come, so I'm going over to raise a little hell about those tugboats.' "

Sandberg said he had just gotten back to his office at the Texas City Terminal Railway Co., where he was vice president, when the ship's cargo exploded. The blast was so powerful that three anchors, each weighing several tons, were hurled a mile and a half from the ship.

Sandberg, who suffered cuts on his head and shoulders from flying glass, said he and another man helped carry victims to a hospital in a truck.

"I was leading the way on foot," Sandberg said. "I'd pull pieces of iron (from the road) so the truck could get up to the doctor's office."

Another freighter, the High Flyer, loaded with ammonium nitrate, ammunition and sulfur caught fire and at 1:15 a.m. April 17, it also blew up.

Meeting proposed to decide next Lucas trial

FORT WORTH (AP) — A meeting of Texas district attorneys is being planned to decide where and on what case self-procliamed mass killer Henry Lee Lucas will be tried next, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported today.

In today's editions, the newspaper quoted sources close to the case as saying a task force of Texas Rangers will seek agreement from the prosecutors to hold off for at least a couple of months any further trials.

The task force has been coordinating interviews of Lucas by law officers from around the country and taking Lucas to crime scenes around the state. A delay in further trials would give the Rangers more time to fullfill the requests of hundreds of more law officers for interviews with Lucas.

Last Friday in San Angelo, Lucas was sentenced to die for the 1979 slaying of an unidentified hitchhiker whose body was found near Georgetown. He faces nine additional murder charges in Texas and seven in five other states.

Six of the Texas cases are capital, as well as various cases in Arkansas, Louisiana, Maryland, Washington and Florida.

Lucas, a 47-year-old drifter who claims responsibility for as many as 360 murders nationwide, also has been convicted in two other Texas murders.

Prison inmates to lecture students

ANGLETON (AP) — Texas prison inmates Dan Paul Sivley and Don Doyle Horton will travel 100,000 miles by the end of the year to tell 83,000 high school students not to turn out like them.

In return, says Doug Eckels, an administrator in the prison system's education program, they can look forward not to early release or special treatment — but to eating lunch with him and a guard every day.

On the road, the two 21-year-olds are kept in county jails.

The miseries of prison life are numerous, the two tell their adolescent audiences.

They talk about rapes, stabbings and violence.

They compare the size of their two-man cells to that of Ping-Pong tables.

And they complain about regimentation.

"They tell you what to do, when to do it and how to do it," Sivley recently told an Angleton High School audience. "When you go to eat, you have to sit at the first available seat. There is no talking.

"You have to eat in 10 minutes because there are 2,500 people on the unit who have to be fed. That's why they start feeding us at 2:30 in the morning," he said.

Not the least of the problems is the solitude, they told the group at Angleton.

"It's a lonely place to be," Sivley said. "The only thing we see at night are concrete walls and steel."

Days aren't much of an improvement, Horton said.

"You're allowed two adult visitors every two weeks, but you can only talk to them through a thick, wire-enforced window. This is, if you get any visitors," he said.

Sivley is serving eight years for a 1982 Harris County burglary. Horton was sentenced to 10 years for burglary in Dallas County.

Doctor has show on cable

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — T. Berry Brazelton, the baby doctor whose books are gospel to the modern baby-boom brigade in much the same way that Dr. Spock was endorsed by previous generations, is a daddy and mommy doctor, too.

His soothing bedside manner, exhibited so warmly on his daily TV show, "What Every Baby Knows" on cable's Lifetime network, reaches beneath the symptoms to grab the underlying — and often hidden — worries of the parents.

Just like the italics he uses in his books to relate the parents' real concerns, Brazelton uses voiceovers on his series to communicate root problems.

"I knew Andrew was fine," he says of the 4-year-old boy whose skull was fractured in an accident while his single mother was at a party. "This exam was to reassure Linda."

In this episode, "Parenting Alone," which will be on Lifetime Thursday and repeated next month, Brazelton explains how Linda's guilt has made her vulnerable, especially when hospital staffers insensitively raised her fear level. This good doctor muzzles the alarms with sound, fatherly talk.

Brazelton is a rare breed, a pediatrician with training in child development and psychology.

"Doctors today are trained very well in pathology and disease, but not at all in interpersonal relationships, child development and social and preventive medicine," he said in an interview. "The pediatrician's role is to be supportive and to empower people to look closely at themselves."

Brazelton said he didn't believe in advice. "I teach parents to observe, to open up their eyes and to pay some attention to what they're seeing and believe in it," he said.

Watching Brazelton in his loving communication with babies, in his interviews with parents and in his question-and-answer sessions at the end of each program, it's evident what Brazelton means about observation.

He's marvelous at looking and listening. Known for his experiments on the capacities of newborns, Brazelton offers some enlightening evidence in "Giving Birth," which will be on next Tuesday and repeated several times next month.

Brazelton said raising children in the age of nuclear weapons and chemical pollution often provoked anxiety and that it didn't help that extended families for support and child-care help were growing extinct.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
3 ♣	4 ♡	5 ♣	?

On many occasions we have posed quiz problems regarding the forcing pass. In general, the rule is that, when your partnership is in a game-forcing auction, either your side plays the hand or the other side plays it doubled.

However, there are many other situations where the forcing pass applies — enough for Eddie Kantar to have written a booklet about the bid ("The Forcing Pass in Contract Bridge," by Edwin Kantar. Barclay Bridge Supplies, 8 Bush Ave., Port Chester, N.Y. 10573. 72 pp. Paperback. $3.95 plus $.60 postage). This is not the stuff for the rank-and-file bridge player, but if you take your partnerships seriously, you cannot afford to be without it.

Cover up all but the South hand and the auction, and decide what action you would take.

Most players would pass because they have nothing. However, Kantar contends, and rightly, that a pass would be forcing. It would imply some values, because it expresses doubt as to whether to double or bid on.

"You must double! Partner has shown a strong hand. (One should not preempt directly after an opening preemptive bid by the opponents) . . .

". . . You can't brush aside your hand because it is hopeless. Hopeless hands must double in forcing pass auctions to warn, partner against bidding on.

"As you can see even four hearts is too high. Perhaps partner would double if you passed, but surely he cannot be criticized for bidding further. The K-Q-x-x-x in either spades or diamonds would be enough to make five hearts."

The rule here is: Any time you and your partner have voluntarily bid game after an adverse preemptive opening bid, all subsequent passes by your side are forcing.

It's in the book!

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. For a copy, send $1.75 to "Goren-Four Deal," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make checks payable to Newspaperbooks.

Judicial races

When Texas voters go to the polls May 5, they'll be asked to choose among candidates in a number of contested races for judgeships on both the Supreme Court and the Court of Criminal Appeals. In some instances the winners of those races will be the next judges to sit on those benches because no opponent is running against them in November. Following are the Reporter-Telegram's choices in four of the races.

Clinton

The race for Place 1 justice on the Court of Criminal Appeals is between Sam Houston Clinton, 60, of Austin and Brookshire district judge Oliver Kitzman, 49.

Clinton, the incumbent, has been on the court since Jan. 1, 1979. In that time he has written 1,341 opinions. Now fifth in seniority and presiding over the court's Committee on Rules of Post Trial and Appellate Procedure in Criminal Cases, we feel Justice Clinton's service has been valuable to Texas and he should be returned to the bench.

Davis

In the race for Place 2 on the Court of Criminal Appeals, W.C. "Bill" Davis, the incumbent, is being challenged by three newcomers — Buddy Stevens, Roy Greenwood and George Martinez.

Davis gets high marks from the legal community in Midland. We believe he should be returned to the bench for another term.

Sharpe

The quest for Place 2 on the Supreme Court pits incumbent C.L. Ray, who has been on the court four years and is endorsed by the AFL-CIO, against newcomer Shelby Sharpe.

Ray was elected in 1980 over Will Garwood, who was heavily endorsed and a favorite of the legal community. Since that time, some of Ray's practices, such as his supposed "result orientation, have raised eyebrows in the legal community. Some local attorneys indicated in conversations with the Reporter-Telegram that Ray's rulings in some cases even involve his ignoring or overturning existing, well-established laws.

On the other hand, Sharpe is a 43-year-old Fort Worth attorney who has a couple of impressive legal credentials. He is strongly backed by the legal community including four former Texas Supreme Court justices, an unprecedented accomplishment in the annals of the court.

In his legal practice, Sharpe's time was almost equally divided between representing plaintiffs and defendants.

He is the choice in this race since he obviously would bring to the court a more even-handed orientation.

Thorpe

A number of Democrats are seeking the nomination for judge of Place 3 on the Court of Criminal Appeals, but the one outstanding candidate is Thomas B. "Tom" Thorpe of Dallas.

Judge Thorpe was appointed to 203rd District Court in 1973 and in the past decade has earned a 90 percent overall approval in evaluation polls conducted by the Dallas Bar Association. Judge Thorpe says he's concerned that the victim of crime is too frequently "lost in the shuffle." He stresses the need for judges to strive for truth and common sense in the courtroom.

What's more, Judge Thorpe is the only candidate seeking this position who has experience as a trial judge. We believe voters should cast their ballots for him.

Destroying trees

A top Mount Mitchell in North Carolina, the trees are now leafless and virtually no plant life is reproducing. Growth of the loblolly and short-leaf yellow pine in the Piedmont regions of South Carolina and Georgia is stunted. The red spruce on Camel's Hump in Vermont are almost all dead.

And from Maine to Alabama there has been a marked decline in the growth and health of a variety of mostly soft-wood tree species, mostly at higher altitudes, reminiscent of the decline that began some 20 years ago in Central Europe and by now has wiped out more than a third of Germany's forests.

At first, researchers were inclined to blame the blight on acid rain. But studies at Mount Mitchell found more potential sources of the destruction than scientists could sort out — not just sulfur, but high ozone levels, more nitrogen in the air than the vegetation could absorb, and heavy metal concentrations 25 times what they should have been. The mountaintop was a "garbage dump" of pollution, the chief researcher discovered.

It's a finding that has been duplicated in forests all along the Eastern Seaboard. The pronounced increase in air pollution in the region in the 1950s and 1960s has been followed by a dramatic and abrupt increase in tree deaths and growth disorders. In an earlier era, that might have been called the price of progress. But in a nation that now has both the technology and the resources to control the sulfur, nitrogen, ozone, lead and aluminum that industry spews into the air, the continuing destruction of the Eastern forests is a scandal.

Profit tops security in Japan

WASHINGTON — The KGB has found Japan a rich source of Western high-technology products that can be turned to military advantage by the Kremlin.

Jack Anderson

Yet Japanese officials are unwilling to stop the massive leakage of technology — or even admit it's going on. When confronted privately with the evidence, they profess skepticism that their trading benefits the Soviets militarily since, they say, it involves only commercial products.

Intelligence sources laid out the problem of Japan's weak export controls to my associates Michael Binstein in Washington and Dale Van Atta in Tokyo.

The sources said there have been about three dozen documented cases of high-tech diversion by the Soviets through Japan since 1968. The CIA is disturbed that more than half of these diversions were commercial transactions approved by the Japanese government — which, U.S. officials charge, puts short-term profits ahead of the West's long-term security needs.

But that's only the tip of the iceberg. The suspected cases of high-tech theft run into the hundreds. The very uncertainty over the numbers is a source of continuing frustration for U.S. intelligence agencies.

By legal and illegal methods, the Soviets have bought Japanese manufacturing equipment and used it to build up their own microelectronics industry for military purposes. The Soviet objective is to improve both the technology and productivity of industries that have historically lagged behind the West's: microelectronics, machine tools, automation and specialty steel.

Technology acquired from the Japanese has enhanced the Soviets' ground-based weapons systems and solid-state circuitry for missiles and aircraft, according to intelligence sources. The Soviets have obtained a satellite navigation system through Japanese trading firms.

The Russians also used illegal means, such as industrial espionage and outright theft, to evade U.S. and other Western export controls on products reaching Japan. In fact, there's a large KGB force working out of Soviet diplomatic residences in Japan whose sole mission is high-tech diversion.

Japan's national police and public-security investigative agency have the primary responsibility of countering the high-tech theft, and they have impressive files on KGB agents and their operations.

But the police authorities have not been permitted to take action against the KGB's high-tech larceny, thanks to bureaucratic niceties. Japanese law puts such matters outside the jurisdiction of the police and gives it to the ministries of foreign affairs and international trade. The best the lawmen can do is provide "administrative guidance" — but no enforcement — for companies considering trade with the Soviets.

Multiple transshipment (shipments to four, five or more destinations) and creation of dummy corporations are two methods used by the KGB and profit-hungry Japanese businessmen to get around whatever restrictions there are.

Sometimes the illicit trade is a small-scale enterprise, as when Japanese fishermen win the privilege of fishing off islands claimed by the Soviets by meeting KGB agents at sea and slipping them everything from digital watches to microchips and information on U.S. and Japanese military bases.

Footnote: In an attempt to stop the high-tech drain, Congress is rewriting the Export Administration Act. The debate has pitted Rep. Don Bonker, D-Wash., who believes Japan and other countries are adequately controlling high-tech exports, against Rep. Toby Roth, R-Wisc., who questions Japan's record.

DISPATCH FROM EL SALVADOR: My roving reporter, Jon Lee Anderson, has just returned from a foray into rebel territory. He found the guerrillas more edgy, more hostile toward Americans.

In the small town of El Triunfo, he talked with guerrillas who had American-made M-16 automatic rifles slung over their shoulders. They were dressed in a bewildering hodgepodge of civilian garb and cannibalized military uniforms. Most were peasant boys.

As Anderson chatted with a sentry in the town's hot, squalid little plaza, an army helicopter clattered overhead. The guerrillas didn't scramble for cover; they seemed indifferent to the enemy chopper.

But the sentry blurted: "We know American pilots are flying the bombing missions against us, and so we're ready to fight against the Americans, too."

Anderson, who speaks fluent Spanish, prodded him cautiously. The guerrilla responded fiercely: "We want to kill gringos! We're waiting for them!"

Will Reagan betray the contras?

WASHINGTON — Halfway measures by an administration lacking the will to win are leading to this tragic turn in the fight against Central American communism: betrayal by political posturing in Washington of Nicaragua's anti-Marxist contras.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Murky charges float around Capitol Hill that last week's political maelstrom was started by high-placed career officers in the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) who always had opposed Director William Casey's anti-Sandinista campaign in general and mining Nicaragua's ports in particular.

In truth, however, retreat was started elsewhere — by the Republican leaders in the Senate. Seeking vainly to defuse the issue, and pressed to do so by the White House, they joined liberal senators instead of fighting them.

Thus can be glimpsed the end of an anti-Sandinista policy in Nicaragua that was too cautious from the start. Ronald Reagan now finds himself on the brink of a foreign debacle dwarfing the Lebanon fiasco, endangering his foreign policy and his re-election.

An attempt by the president to mobilize the nation may be necessary to avert a congressional cutoff of funds. Unless third-nation backing (Israel or Saudia Arabia is mentioned) can be found or token U.S. financing maintained, communist control in Nicaragua will be confirmed.

Playing cute politics last week ended the administration's chances to shape a dramatic up-or-down vote on Nicaragua. That test would have created an election-year contest between a resolute Reagan, willing to take risks to save Central America, and a divided Democratic Party whose neo-isolationist wing abjures the use of force against revolutionary Marxism. Such an election-year issue would at least give voters a chance to choose.

Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker set the stage for the mass Republican backdown on the portmining issue. Addressing a closed-door Senate Republican conference April 10 (with an unusally high attendance of nearly 50 senators), Baker called for a show of hands on this question: How many support Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's resolution to cut off all aid for the mining?

Counting 16 hands, Baker told his colleagues that much support would guarantee Kennedy's winning. Rather than court humiliating defeat for the president, he said, better for the Republicans to "defuse" the issue by joining Kennedy. Yet, a shrewdly-managed battle against the resolution conceivably might have won in the Senate. Instead, moderate Democrats were freed by the Republican surrender to join Kennedy.

Baker's rationale was that since the resolution was non-binding, Kennedy's victory would signify nothing. That ignored screaming headlines and major takeouts on the evening television news. It also ignored the poisonous impact of retreat on other Latin American states.

But the majority leader was in tune with the White House, where chief of staff James Baker III was an architect of the go-with-Teddy strategy. Jim Baker's political priority today is not fighting communists in Central America but in devising new ways to shape Reagan as the peace president.

Even before Reagan took the presidential oath, his national security planners had focused on Nicaragua as the obvious place for the new administration to prove its credibility in the East-West struggle. Step by step, however, original plans were shaved and shorn. Published reports of planned mining of Nicaraguan ports appeared as early as July 1983, but nothing happened for months.

When it finally did, the mining was not kept secret from Congress. Members of the Senate and House Intelligence Committees, now whining about being left in the dark, learned — if they listened — of the mining operation on three separate occasions. Sen. Malcolm Wallop, an attentive Republican on the Intelligence Committee, told us it was "an outright fabrication" for any member to claim otherwise.

The roots of the uproar on Capitol Hill go deeper than Bill Casey's difficulty or unwillingess to communicate with Congress. They go to congressional indifference over the nature and spread of Marxism in Central America, to members of both parties concerned about the niceties of international law instead of the enemy at the back door.

That mood counts heavily when the White House is more solicitous over the president's election-year image than over the future of the contras. In contrast, a few deeply-concerned senators are urging Reagan to go to the nation. The alternative might be another chapter of betrayal of allies, this time by a president who just four years ago pledged to close the book on such conduct.

CHARLEY REESE

'Freebie' commission gave hope

American citizens owe a big thanks to J. Peter Grace, chairman and chief executive officer of W.R. Grace & Co. He was chairman of the President's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control.

Charley Reese

This tough-minded American persuaded more than 850 companies to donate people, time, services and money to study controlling federal costs. The dollar amount of this gift to American taxpayers is estimated at $75 million.

What's neat about the Grace Commission is that it hit irresponsible politicians, bureaucrats and their liberal supporters in that tender part of the anatomy that hurts most.

The standard cry for decades from this Big Spender Mob has been: "If you think there is all that much waste in government, then you show us where it is."

The Grace Commission did that. It presented the President with 2,478 separate and specific recommendations it says will save $424 billion in three years. There is now no excuse and I repeat, no excuse, for any politician or liberal advocate to tell you that he does not know how to cut waste and reduce costs. It's right there in black and white — 2,478 separate recommendations.

What has happened to us is that a majority of 435 Congressmen and 100 Senators have acted irresponsibly over a period of decades. They spent more money, usually in an attempt to get votes, than they were willing to tax the people to pay for. This resulted in the long accumulation of deficits that now total a public debit of $1.4 trillion at a high interest rate.

This public debt, if it is paid, will not be paid by the politicians who created it. It will come out of your sweat and your savings and my sweat and my savings and your children's sweat and savings and their children's sweat and savings.

The collateral for that massive debt is our labor and the federal government's power to tax our labor. Since most of that debt is owed to the very rich, primarily banks, the net effect is that the poor and the middle class are being taxed to enrich the already rich.

The next time you hear some liberal politician clack his teeth about his compassion for the poor as a justification for more government spending, just stop and think what a dirty game he is really playing. He is mortgaging your labor to buy votes, often from people who don't deserve a dime. He's being Mr. Big Heart at your expense, not his. He's willing to risk putting you and your family out in the streets just to get himself past the next election.

He's voted himself a big salary, a lot of perks, and a Rolls Royce pension not to mention whatever private favors he can accumulate so he is immune to the economic havoc that he is wreaking.

The sorry (expletive deleted) are shedding crocodile tears for the poor and the working class while they are creating more poor people and turning the working class into serfs who can look forward to a lifetime of hard work capped off with a cheap funeral.

This rape of the middle class by Congress will continue until we get angry enough to change things. And we can change things. Don't ever let them poison your mind with the idea that there's nothing you can do about it.

The favorite mind trick of people who want to maintain the status quo is to convince the people that they can't fight city hall. You can. The history of this nation is full of examples of the people rising up to bring about radical changes in the status quo.

Write your congressman and your two U.S. senators and ask them to send you a copy of the Grace Commission report. Then write them again and ask them to read it themselves. Then write them again and tell them you expect them to implement it. Then write them again and ask them which specific recommendations they have voted to be implemented. Then write them again and tell them you cannot vote for them if they refuse to do what is necessary to save the American people from economic ruin.

And I'm not exaggerating. If the present trend continues, the American economy will collapse. History is full of examples of governments which spent themselves into bankruptcy which caused not only an economic collapse but a massive social upheaval.

Just use your common sense. Can the working people of America pay enough taxes to spend $800 billion or more annually plus reduce a debt pf $1.4 trillion on which the annual interest tab alone is over $100 billion? Of course not.

Police continue search for Wilder's victims

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Authorities don't know where fugitive Christopher Wilder was the night before he was killed, and the uncertainty has prompted an FBI search for more possible victims of his cross-country crime spree.

Authorities said Monday they cannot account for Wilder's whereabouts from the time he dropped a California girl off at a Boston airport at about 9:20 p.m. Thursday to his alleged attempt to kidnap a teen-age girl in a Boston suburb at about 8:20 a.m. Friday.

The FBI has sent photographs of women who might have been his kidnap victims to Washington. The photos were contained in a briefcase Wilder apparently carried with him.

Wilder, an Australian-born businessman who lived in Florida, was accused of kidnapping at least 11 young women. Four of the women were killed, three escaped and four are still missing.

Wilder's six-week trail of terror ended Friday in a gasoline station in Colebrook when he shot himself twice as he struggled with a state trooper in the front seat of a car he had stolen.

At a news conference Monday, the FBI and state police exhibited articles they believe Wilder, who posed as a photographer to lure his victims, discarded as he traveled through the state toward Canada on Friday.

Wilder's body was expected to be shipped to West Palm Beach today, said Robert Moore, owner of Newman's Funeral Home in Colebrook. He said FBI agents took more fingerprints and footprints of Wilder and were conducting other tests Monday.

Greenleaf said Wilder reportedly had vowed he would not be taken alive as he criss-crossed the country on a sex-murder crime spree.

Wilder's activities last Thursday night remain a mystery, however.

"From about 9:30 p.m. that evening (Thursday) until the attempted abduction of a female in Massachusetts along Route 128, we don't have any idea where he was," Greenleaf said.

Authorities said they have evidence indicating that sometime after 1:30 a.m. Friday, Wilder took a license plate from a car that had been abandoned on Route 128.

Greenleaf noted that Wilder had made a habit of staying overnight in motels or hotels during his journey — but that appeared not to be the case Thursday. The lack of information about where he was has raised concern about other possible victims, he said.

The FBI official also said the few hours that lapsed between Wilder's alleged kidnap attempt in Massachusetts and his arrival in Colebrook, about 225 miles north, indicated he had little time to do anything but drive and dispose of a few belongings.

On display Monday were items discovered by a state highway crew earlier in the day off Route 16 in Wakefield. They included a jacket with an identification card belonging to Beth Dodge, the Rochester, N.Y., woman allegedly killed by Wilder, an electrical cord, a bracelet, camera bag, knife holder, a Florida license plate, laundry basket and towel, jumper cables, a comb and two pairs of shoes.

Also exhibited were items found Saturday on a road off Route 16 near Lake Chocorua by a man who regularly ate lunch there. They included a bullet casing, two jackets that may have belonged to victims, a cosmetic case and luggage thought to be stained by blood.

Meanwhile, 16-year-old Tina Marie Risico, of Torrance, Calif., who was abducted, tortured and then released by Wilder, may write a book about her ordeal, her grandmother and a lawyer said Monday.

Miss Risico hasn't talked to reporters since she returned to Torrance in the Los Angeles suburbs Friday. Wilder had bought her a plane ticket home the night before in Boston.

"She hasn't told us anything. She said she might write a book," Ms. Sokolowski said by telephone Monday. "She's not going to talk to anybody. Her lawyers are telling her not to say anything."

Trip will cost taxpayers more than $683,727

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. taxpayers were charged more than $683,727, not including salaries and hotel bills, for Attorney General William French Smith's 23-day trip around the world in 1982 to promote drug control.

That figure emerged from expense vouchers released Monday by the Justice Department in response to a 17-month-old Freedom of Information Act request by The Associated Press.

The $683,727 includes the expenses of 10 Justice Department officials and 11 FBI agents, four round-the-world advance trips by aides, and $595,340 that the Air Force charged for the military Boeing 707 on which the party traveled.

But significant expenses from the trip are still unavailable.

Not included are the salaries and hotel charges for any of the officials or the agents, who provided security. And no expenses have been released for six officials in the party from the State Department, the Drug Enforcement Administration and the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Nor, excepting the figures for the four advance trips, is there an accounting available for the cost of preparation here and abroad and the costs incurred by U.S. embassies in squiring the Smith party around.

Department officials said the documents were released more than 17 months after the trip ended on Nov. 10, 1982, because some expenses had not been submitted. Smith himself was the latest to submit his expense account, filing it on Feb. 3, 1984.

On that date, he claimed expenses of $857.73 and returned to the government $442.47, the unused portion of his $1,300 travel advance.

Smith's expense forms were filed less than two weeks after he announced his resignation to return to private life and to help with President Reagan's re-election campaign. Since then, a special prosecutor's investigation has delayed the confirmation of his replacement, White House counselor Edwin Meese III, and Smith has agreed to stay until a successor is confirmed.

Smith submitted only two receipts, for two dinners for two at the Oriental Hotel in Bangkok. Department officials blacked out the portion of the receipts that showed what he ordered. The dinners cost $24.91 and $25.37.

In general, Smith stayed in embassy residences along the way while the rest of the party stayed in hotels.

Smith's wife, Jean, accompanied him, but submitted no expenses. Smith did not, however, reimburse the government for her share of the cost of the jet.

Plane lands on belly

MILWAUKEE (AP) — An airliner with crippled landing gear circled Lake Michigan for 1¼ hours before skidding along a rain-glazed runway on its belly in an emergency landing. None of 10 people aboard was injured.

The crew of Midstate Airlines Inc. Flight 867 from Indianapolis reported to Mitchell Field about 4:40 p.m. Monday that the plane's starboard landing gear would not fully extend, a Midstate spokesman said.

The plane circled while ground crews prepared emergency equipment. Pilot Richard Reudebusch then brought the plane to a wheels-up landing about 6:05 p.m.

"It was a super job of landing," airport spokesman Gary Gloede said. "The pilot apparently did everything right."

St. Luke's Hospital said a 40-year-old Mequon man was treated for nausea.

But no other medical requirement was required for the eight passengers and two crewmen, the airline said.

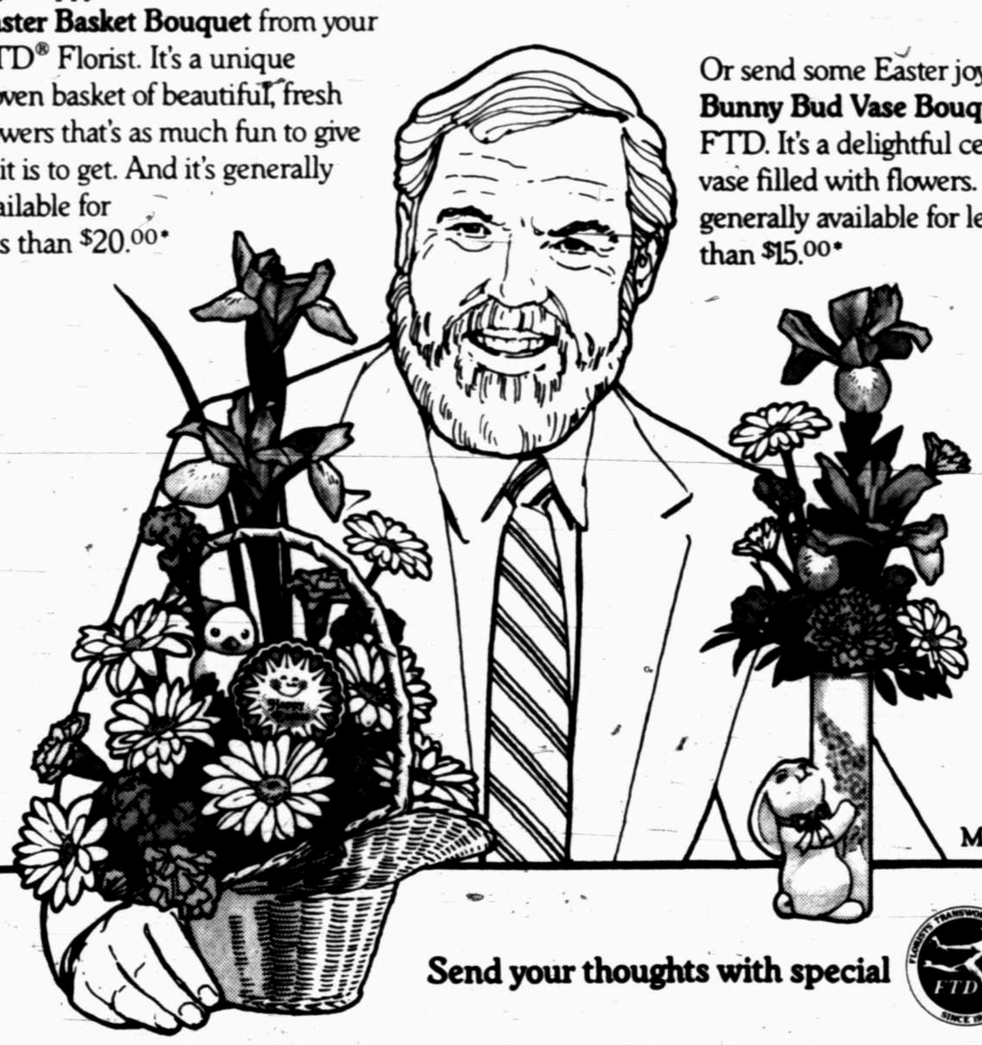

It said the plane sustained bent propellers and scrapes along the underside of the fuselage.

Police vehicles and ambulances gather near the Libyan People's Bureau, or embassy, in London today after a shooting incident in which ten Libyan students and a policewoman were injured.

Man fires on students from embassy window

LONDON (AP) — A gunman firing from a window of the Libyan Embassy sprayed submachine-gun rounds today at Libyan students protesting against Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy. Ten students and a policewoman were wounded, Scotland Yard said.

Police rushed to the embassy, on fashionable St. James's Square a few blocks from Buckingham Palace, and sealed off surrounding streets. A dozen sharpshooters were dropped by helicopter.

A short time after the mid-morning shooting, a man emerged from the embassy and surrendered to police, witnesses said.

The shooting was the latest in a string of attacks on Libyan exiles opposed to Khadafy. Last month, five bombs in London and Manchester injured 26 people. Authorities arrested three Libyan students, deported five other Libyans and warned Libyan diplomats that Britain would not tolerate such attacks.

An ambulance service spokesman said the injured were taken to Westminster Hospital, where the policewoman and a demonstrator were in serious condition.

Witnesses said some 70 anti-Khadafy Libyan students — many of them wearing masks to avoid identification — assembled in the square and walked across it to the embassy, known officially as the Libyan People's Bureau.

Police kept the protesters behind barricades. Across the street, two groups of 20 counter-demonstrators also were hemmed in by officers.

Richard Bowden, 31, a salesman who used to work in Saudi Arabia, said the anti-Khadafy students were shouting in Arabic "Khadafy hangs students" when the shooting began.

"There were no screams. People just started falling. I don't think anyone realized what was happening," Bowden told The Associated Press.

Free-lance journalist Brian Cartmell said he heard "what seemed like a fire-cracker." But then, "I saw bullets hit the pavement and realized it was small arms fire."

"The policewoman, 15 feet in front of me, crumpled to the ground, clutching her lower stomach. (Her) hat rolled slowly into the gutter while three of four officers, shouting 'My God,' ran past me," he said.

Bowden said there were about 10 shots, which "appeared to come from a window on the ground floor."

After police sealed off the square, a man emerged from the front door of the embassy. "He was instantly told by police to lie on the pavement," said a witness. The man was handcuffed and taken away in a police car.

Around the square, ambulances stood by and police marksmen with automatic pistols and flak jackets sheltered behind trees.

A man who answered the phone at the Libyan Embassy declined comment on the shooting. "Sorry, we don't know anything about that," he said.

Claudette Williams, who works near the embassy, told the London Broadcasting Corp. radio station she saw the students gather in the square, then begin marching toward the embassy.

"We heard a round of machine-gun fire...and we saw a student to the right of the building fall, and then of course everything went mad," she said.

Advertising executive Dave Robson, also interviewed on LBC, said a policeman was brought into his office in shock, apparently because he was the boyfriend of the wounded policewoman.

Brazilian president offers compromise

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — As shouts of "The dictatorship will end" echoed from a rally of more than a million people, the military regime offered to compromise on demands to speed up the timetable for direct presidential elections.

The issue has sparked mass protests in cities nationwide, including a rally Monday evening by an estimated 1.3 million people clogging streets in downtown Sao Paulo, Brazil's largest city and its financial center.

The turnout, as estimated by police, topped the 1 million reported to have participated in a similar rally in Rio de Janeiro last week that was described as the biggest demonstration in Brazil's history.

The Sao Paulo crowd jeered when they heard the compromise proposal by President Gen. Joao Figueiredo, who went on television and radio to address the nation shortly after the demonstration began.

Figueiredo, after an emergency Cabinet meeting Monday, sent a proposed amendment to Congress calling for direct elections for president in November 1988 — two years sooner than previously proposed.

Opposition leaders are demanding that direct elections be held in time to select the successor of Figueiredo, whose term runs out March 15, 1985.

The current system calls for an electoral college — in which the government's Social Democratic Party is assured a majority — to choose Figueiredo's successor.

The armed forces have controlled Brazil since a coup in 1964 against an elected government.

Referring to opposition leaders' proposed constitutional amendment calling for immediate direct elections, Figueiredo, a retired army general, said his proposal was "an invitation to negotiate" and an offer of "conciliation and compromise."

In his broadcast address, Figueiredo said: "Direct elections are not the only remedy for our ills." He said the government would not cave in to "the radicalism of some."

He has said previously that he supports direct elections for his successor's successor. It was not known when Congress would vote on the proposal he made Monday night. The bill needs a two-thirds majority to pass.

At the rally, demonstrators carried banners and wore T-shirts saying "Direct Elections Now!" and "Figueiredo, Your Time Has Come." The protesters made their way from the main Roman Catholic cathedral to a wide avenue a mile away, where the rally was held.

"If the government feels direct elections in 1988 are a good thing, then why don't they want a good thing right now," Gov. Leonel Brizola told the crowd.

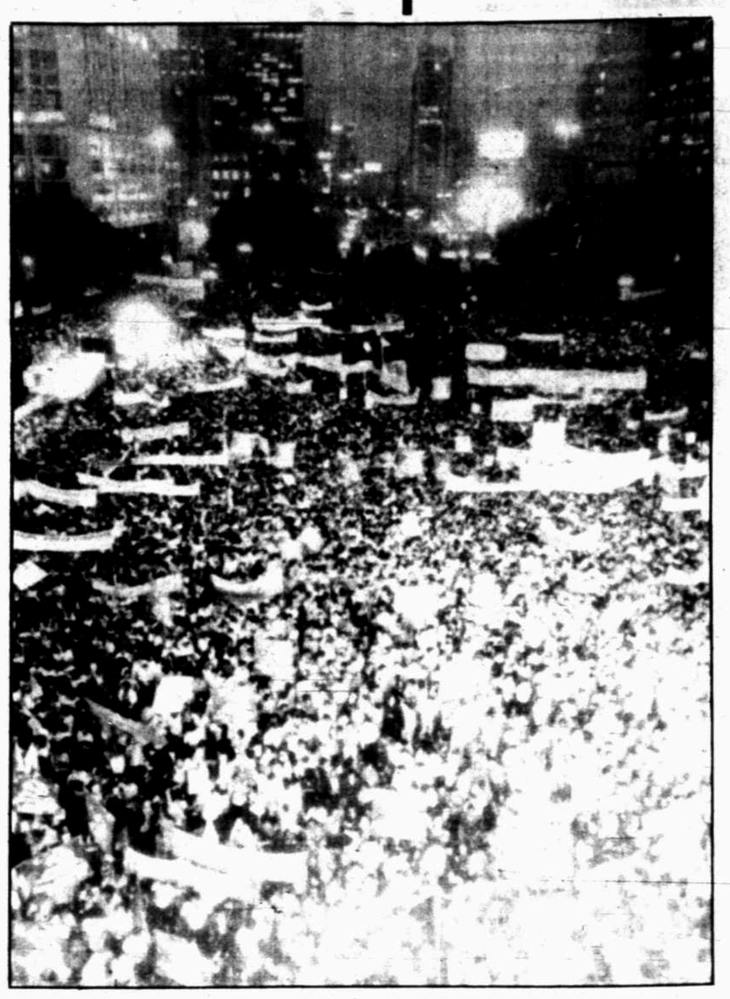

A labor leader, Luis Inacio da Silva, said of the president's proposal: "We won't negotiate with the government. The will of the people and the country's dignity are not negotiable."

Rep. Ulysses Guimaraes, president of the largest opposition party, the Brazilian Democratic Movement, told The Associated Press that "direct elections represent an immediate cure for problems that require immediate solutions."

Many of Brazil's 131 million people suffer from the 230 percent rate of inflation. About 40 percent of able-bodied citizens can't find adequate work. Brazil is struggling to repay huge foreign debts.

Congress is scheduled to vote on the opposition's proposed amendment April 25, but lawmakers from the four legal opposition parties do not have the votes for a two-third majority to pass it. Figueiredo's proposal could weaken the chance that any lawmakers from his party would support the opposition amendment.

According to Figueiredo's plan, his successor will be picked by an electoral college, which was formed on the basis of elections held in 1982 for state and local officies.

Zimbabwe's army accused of killing villagers

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — Government troops raped, tortured, killed and starved villagers during a two-month hunt for dissidents in Matabeleland province, according to a report by Roman Catholic officials.

Prime Minister Robert Mugabe, while promising to examine the allegations, suggested the report's chief author was using the charges to curry favor with Mugabe's chief rival, Joshua Nkomo, whose main tribal stronghold is Matabeleland.

On Monday, Mugabe threatened to clamp tight, although unspecified, restrictions on foreign journalists because of overseas reports of alleged atrocities by his army.

Speaking to local editors at his official residence, Mugabe accused foreign correspondents of seeking to discredit him and called their reporting "mischief-making," according to the semi-official Zimbabwe Inter-African News Agency.

On Sunday, London's Observer and Sunday Times newspapers published accounts of torture and mass murder in the province. The reports were from correspondents who visited Matabeleland and heard villagers' accounts of brutality by security forces.

Nkomo, in London to promote his autobiography, said the newspaper reports were "not far off the mark."

The Mugabe administration has steadfastly denied its forces have committed atrocities, blaming them instead on "dissidents" — the official label for insurgents who deserted the army two years ago when Nkomo was ejected from a coalition government for allegedly plotting a coup.

In their report, the Roman Catholic officials expressed "grave concern" about "the suffering of people in southwest Matabeleland arising from the continuing conditions of starvation, beatings of people, torture and killings."

The report was commissioned by Matabeleland's Swiss-born Bishop Henry Karlen, and prepared by him and four priests. It was presented last week to Information Minister Nathan Shamuyarira, who passed it to Mugabe.

A copy of the report was obtained Sunday by The Associated Press from a Catholic priest in Bulawayo, provincial capital of Matabeleland. The priest asked not to be identified for fear of official reprisal.

Responding to the report, Mugabe accused Karlen of "worshipping Nkomo instead of God," and said clergymen should stick to missionary activities and stay out of poliical issues. But he promised to study the allegations.

Zimbabwe's security forces are dominated by Mugabe's Shona tribe, historical enemies of Nkomo's Ndebele tribe. The two men led rival black nationalist guerrilla groups in the war for independence in Zimbabwe, formerly the breakaway British colony of Rhodesia. It achieved independence April 18, 1980.

The Catholic report focused on alleged brutality between Feb. 3, when the government imposed a round-the-clock curfew in Matabeleland, and April 9, when the curfew was eased to run from dusk to dawn.

During the period, government troops waged a vicious campaign against civilians while hunting for rebels, the report said. It singled out the army's North Korean-trained 5th Brigade as particularly brutal.

"People are beaten up on the mere suspicion that they are dissidents or are helping dissidents or when they say they do not know anything about dissidents," the report said.

"Some men have been taken away to various camps and have not returned to their homes. There are reports of torture by electric shock and other means and of killings."

The report quoted a man detained at an army camp in Belabwe as saying three other prisoners were beaten to death during interrogations. At a Catholic mission in Minda, the local priest knew of 22 people killed during the curfew, the report said.

It said all stores were closed for two months, resulting in starvation of villagers already struggling with a three-year-old drought.

"At meetings in the early stages of the curfew (army) commanders gave the impression that it is the policy of the army to make the people in the area suffer," the report said.

"A policy of starvation became clear when the commanders told the meetings that they would eat their chickens, then their goats, after which they would eat their cattle and their own children."

The report proposed that the curfew be ended and all stores reopened, that an independent inquiry of atrocities be launched and that negotiations be started with Nkomo's opposition Zimbabwe African People's Union.

Bomb threat evacuates Australian Parliament

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — Police found an explosive device in Parliament today after a telephoned warning, and evacuated the building while a bomb squad "neutralized" it, authorities reported.

Parliament is not in session, but some members were in their offices. Security officers moved through the building when the device was discovered, warning people and ushering them outside.

A police spokesman said the device was found in one of the central halls.

The spokesman said the incident appeared to be linked to a wave of bomb threats in Melbourne in the past few days from people claiming to be anti-nuclear activists.

Beirut crossing reopened

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Police reopened the only remaining passage between Christian east and Moslem west Beirut today as fighting between rival militias tapered off.

The crossing at the National Museum had been closed Monday because of heavy artillery and sniper fire that wounded 12 people. It was the first full-day official closure since March 25, when leaders of Lebanon's political and military factions declared it neutral ground and agreed on an observer force to monitor it.

Despite the official closure Monday, reporters saw a trickle of traffic get through. Today, traffic was heavy despite sporadic exchanges of rifle fire. There were no reports of casualties.

Hong Kong's fate discussed

PEKING (AP) — Chinese Premier Zhao Ziyang met today with Britain's foreign secretary, Sir Geoffrey Howe, and said there had been "great progress" toward a pact on Hong Kong's future.

But a British source said "several substantial points" were unresolved. He spoke on condition he not be named.

Qi Huaiyuan, a Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman, reported that Zhao said an early agreement on China's resumption of sovereignty over the British colony in 1997 was "highly possible."

Howe's spokesman, John Goulden, cautioned reporters, "It is too early to judge when a satisfactory agreement can be reached."

Nazi too ill to stand trial

BONN, West Germany (AP) — A West German court has ruled that a former Nazi doctor is too ill to stand trial on charges of experimenting on concentration camp prisoners with deadly mustard gas.

The Bonn district court ruled Monday that Dr. Richard Ruehl, 66, was unfit for trial on charges of being an accessory to the murders of four Gypsies interned during World War II at the Natzweiler concentration camp in occupied France.

In 1952, Ruehl was condemned to death in France after being convicted in absentia of being an accessory to the murders of the four prisoners and the attempted murders of two others. He was never extradited to France, and worked at the Bonn Health Department until retirement in January 1983.

Ruehl's doctors certified that he has suffered from psychosomatic nerve disorders.

NBA season begins

By The Associated Press

The Boston Celtics, the winningest team during the regular season, will begin a quest for their 15th National Basketball Association championship when they open the playoffs tonight against the Washington Bullets.

Dallas, Detroit, Denver and Utah also open best-of-five series tonight in quests for their first NBA titles.

Wednesday night, the Philadelphia 76ers begin play for a fourth title and a bid to become the first champion to repeat since the Celtics, of course, did it in 1967-68 and 1968-69.

"This won't be an easy series," Celtics swingman Scott Wedman said Monday of the series that opens in Boston. "But we have the talent to beat them."

THE CELTICS, with players such as Larry Bird, Robert Parish and Cedric Maxwell, had the talent to post a 62-20 regular-season record, 27 games better than Washington, who finished last in the Celtics-led Atlantic Division with a 35-47 mark. That is the worst of any playoff club.

Boston also has incentive. In last year's playoffs, they were swept 4-0 by Milwaukee in the Eastern Conference semifinals.

"Our players believe we can get to the Celtics, and I think the Celtics think we can beat them," said Coach Gene Shue.

In Tuesday's other series openers, Seattle is at Dallas, New York is at Detroit, Denver is at Utah and Atlanta is at Milwaukee.

Defending champion Philadelphia, which finished 10 games behind Boston in the Atlantic Division with third best regular-season record of 52-30, will host New Jersey Wednesday. Two other series that begin Wednesday will have Kansas City at Los Angeles, which won the Pacific Division with the second-best record of 54-28, and Phoenix at Portland.

Dallas will be appearing in the playoffs for the first time in the Mavericks' four-year history, and Coach Dick Motta is happy about the way his team earned its berth in post-season play.

"It wouldn't have meant much if we had made the playoffs because of the expanded list of eligible teams," said Motta. The Mavericks compiled a 43-39 record.

"OUR RECORD would have put us in the playoffs last year, and that means a lot. It just wasn't given to us."

All but seven of the NBA's 23 teams will compete in the playoffs.

Homecourt advantage will be questionable in the Dallas-Seattle series.

The first two games will be at the Reunion Arena in the Dallas, but if a fifth game is necessary, it will have to be played at Moody Coliseum in Dallas because The World Championship of Tennis will be held in the Reunion Arena at that time.

Games 3-4 are set for Seattle, but the third game can't be held at SuperSonics regular home, the Seattle Kingdome, because the Seawhawks of the National Football League have booked the facility for the preimier of their highlight film. So the game will be played at the Seattle Center Coliseum.

Cubs drop another one

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

It seems as though the Midland Cubs are doing whatever it takes to lose. Monday it was four errors, eight walks and a hit batsman, enough freebies to beat the Baltimore Orioles.

But that's the way it goes when you are in the throes of a losing streak, this one now six in seven games.

El Paso capitalized on the gratuities with nine hits and an 8-4 win over Midland in the second game of the Texas League series at Cubs Stadium.

It's Bingo night tonight and the Cubs will see Bill Wegman, 16-5 last year at Lodi in the California League. "Not overpowering, but he'll stay low, mix his pitches and keep you off balance. He knows how to pitch," says Midland Manager George Enright.

The Cubs will counter with lefthander Jim Boudreau, a 5-0 loser to San Antonio in his first start.

EL PASO built up its winning margin in the early innings off Midland starter Jeff Fruge, 0-2, who contributed to his own downfall with six walks and a hit batsman.

Dave Klipstein, who hit safely in three run-scoring innings for the Diablos, opened the game with a single and scored on Jim Paciorek's hit to right. Paciorek reached third on a wild pitch and scored on an infield out.

Another single by Paciorek in the third led to a run on a sacrifice fly by Bob Skube.

In the fourth, Fruge walked Dale Samuel, surrendered a single to Klipstein and then hit Juan Castillo with a pitch. That loaded the bases and one run scored as Paciorek grounded into a double play. The other crossed the plate on Dale Sveum's single to right.

An infield hit by Castillo and walk to Michael finished off Fruge in the seventh. Jorge Carpio relieved and Castillo scored on a grounder to first when first baseman Mike Anicich came home with the throw and was too late. Carpio then uncorked a wild pick off throw to second, allowing the runners to move into scoring position and Michael scored a second run on a wild pitch. That made it 7-0 and the Cubs were still trying to figure out Ted Higuera, a lefthander who was 17-8 last year for the Juarez Indios in the AAA Mexican League.

THROUGH FIVE innings, Higuera had walked just one and allowed only two hits, a singled to Don Hyman in the second and one to Jim Auten in the fourth. And the Diablos had supported him in errorless style.

The Cubs finally got something going in the sixth when Darrin Jackson beat out an infield hit. Shawon Dunston's grounder to third forced him, but then Higuera fumbled Danny Norman's grounder and the Cubs had runners on first and second with two out.

Auten singled for one run and then Hyman drilled a double into the left-center hole for two runs and the Cubs were alive. Gary Varsho caromed a shot off Higuera's glove for an infield hit, which brought in Mark Effrig from the bullpen. He got Mike Anicich on a grounder to second to end the threat.

The Cubs had three innings left, but managed only a run in the eighth on a walk to Norman and a two-out single by Varsho as Chuck Crim came in to get the third out and pick up the save.

CUB-ICLES—Enright is trying every thing to get the Cubs' attack going. Seeking more contact in the sixth spot, he moved Don Hyman up.

"He's a contact hitter. Maybe he can get something going for us," Enright said before the game. Don came through with two hits. In fact, Auten, Hyman and Varsho, the Cubs' five, six and seven hitters accounted for six of Midland's seven hits...

Jim Paciorek batted .326 with nine homers and 85 rbis for El Paso last year, so what's he doing back in this league? He's already 5-for-10 in the series...Jeff Rutledge came up with a couple of fine defensive saves at third for the Cubs on Paciorek in the sixth and Klipstein in the seventh...

The Cubs have three more games with the Diablos, including Ladies Night Thursday, before going on their first road trip, starting Friday...

Geoff Smith passes rain test with LA steam hopes

BOSTON (AP) — Rainy-day runner Geoff Smith, the winner of the 88th Boston Marathon, thrives on wet, windy days in the fall and spring. But what about steamy Los Angeles in the thick of its Olympic summer?

No problem, says the confident Englishman who splashed through puddles and crushed the competition Monday to capture the Boston Marathon by four minutes, 15 seconds, one of the widest margins in the event's history.

"I think I'm all right," he said. "I intend to come back and train under those (warmer) conditions."

Last Oct. 23, another cool and rainy day, Smith led for much of the New York City Marathon only to be passed by Rod Dixon 385 yards before the end. Smith finished second in two hours, nine minutes, eight seconds, the fastest debut marathon in history.

His time of 2:10:34 Monday in his second marathon was only the 79th fastest in history and the slowest winning time here since 1980. But he was running into an often stiff headwind.

Smith also was trying to overcome the resistance of the British Amateur Athletic Board, which is scheduled to choose on May 15 its country's three marathoners to compete in the race Aug. 12, the last day of the Summer Olympics in Los Angeles.

Board members were upset that Smith chose to run here instead of in the London Marathon on May 13.

"It should impress them. I know it impressed me," the heavily favored Smith said of his performance. "If the wind had been in my favor, I think I could have run two or three minutes faster," possibly challenging Alberto Salazar's world best time of 2:08:13.

Before the race, the 30-year-old Providence College student had said, "I'm an experienced track runner. I think Los Angeles will be a tactical race. I'm a 3:55 miler and I'm capable of sprinting at the end. I don't see anybody in the pack going out at world record pace in 85 degrees."

Smith had predicted he would beat the relatively weak field over the 26-mile, 385-yard course here. After he did it by taking the lead from Arega Abraha of Ethiopia between the fifth and sixth mile and never losing it, he was asked who will be the hardest runner to beat in the Olympic marathon.

"Me," he said without hesitation.

Little-known Gerry Vanasse of New Milford, Conn., finished a distant second in 2:14:49, out of a total of about 6,800 entrants. It was not known how many actually ran in the nasty weather.

The winning margin in the women's competition was even greater and enhanced winner Lorraine Moller's chance to make New Zealand's Olympic team.

She finished in a personal best time of 2:29:28, nearly seven minutes slower than the world record of 2:22:42 set here last year by Joan Benoit. Midde Hamrin of Sweden, also fighting for an Olympic berth, was second Monday in 2:33:51.

"I think I will be selected now. I hope so," Moller said.

This isn't late night bunch

Midland Lee's David Jackson and Midland High's Ross Petree have been named as designated baby sitters for the Lubbock's Region I track meet, May 4-5. After all, they are the only Tall City qualifiers who are allowed to stay out past 6:30 p.m.

Jackson and Petree are the only seniors among the 10 Tall City athletes who earned Region I berths. The other eight are not exactly in diapers, but they might need some help when it comes time to find the restroom.

The Midland track scene in 1984 has been one of underclass youth. That says the track future of Lee and MHS look bright and experience over the next three or four weeks is going to show worth in the next two years to come.

LEE'S WALTER Jones may cringe at the fact that Jackson will be holding his hand. Jones has already been through so many wars that Alexander The Great pales in comparison. Still, he's only a junior.

Jones qualified for the Region I meet in three events last year and has qualified in four events (long jump, 200 and both relays) this year. He also rushed for more than 1,000 yards during Lee's state finalist football season. He's really the veteran of the group. Jones is also the one who takes it upon himself to see that his fellow Rebels stay in step and keep minds to business.

Lee junior Marc Brackens has also been to war. He is a repeat Region I qualifier in the 400 meters, but this time he is hoping to run. Last year, Lee coach Sam Volpe yanked sophomore Brackens out of the 400 meters and installed him on the 1600-meter relay team. The move paid off and Lee won a state berth in that event.

"I wasn't disappointed last year when I didn't get to run in the 400 because I knew we had a better chance at state in the relay," said Brackens. "But this year I would be extremely disappointed if I couldn't run in the 400 at regionals. There is a chance this year and I want that chance."

Brackens and Jones are on both of Lee's qualifying relay teams. Joining them on the sprint relay will be Harold Woods and Gary Powell. There's not a senior among them. Add John Lewis and Craig Swearingin to the 1600 relay and there still isn't a senior to be found.

THEN YOU can add sophomore Quintus Hampton to Lee's qualifiers in the 300 hurdles. He didn't do anything but set the District 4-5A record with a 38.29 in an event many thought he wasn't even a solid contender. The favorite Mike Fanning of San Angelo was fourth in district and sitting home.

Brackens also set a 4-5A mark in the 400 with his 48.78, but that doesn't count — he was expected to turn that kind of performance.

Midland High junior Darrell Davis isn't exactly a surprise qualifier in the shot put, but the fact that both Davis and Permian's Britt Hager qualified ahead of Lee senior Isaac Garnett, a qualifier last year, is the surprise. Either Davis or Hager was expected to sit at home, but Garnett is the one with that tag now. And it's a good year to be in the shot put since no one in the state has gone over 60-feet this year.

Hager's 59-8½ may be the state's best throw and Davis' 59-5 is close. "I'll be over 60-feet by the time the region meet is held," said Davis. "You can bank on that, I'm going to do it."

Of course that leaves seniors Jackson and Petree, who will have other duties than baby sitting. Jackson qualified in the discus with a 151-10 and Petree in the 800 meters with a 1:58.91.

JACKSON, A left-handed tosser, won his region berth without the aid of a left-handers' wind. Left-handed throwers have been the bane of the 4-5A discus for a long time. It seems that left-handed discus throwers always come through at the district meet.

Petree wasn't even considered a contender in the 800. The week before district he finished seventh. He had never cracked the two-minute barrier in his life. Then comes the district bell and he's in the 1:58 range.

"I would like to thank Mike Mashburn, Claire Hardy and Coach (Johnny) Williams for all this," said Petree after learning he had qualified. "I ran cross country with Mike and Claire, and they helped me keep at it. We trained together all the time."

And now if Jackson and Petree can find the restrooms in Lubbock, Midland's track future may be secure. We're counting on you, fellows!

1953 — Mickey Mantle leaned into a Chuck Stobbs pitch and sent it 565 feet, over the bleachers at Washington's Griffith Stadium in the fifth inning of the New York Yankees' 7-3 triumph over the Senators.

1976 — Mike Schmidt of Philadelphia brought a .167 batting average into a game at Wrigley Field and smashed four home runs and a single to drive in eight runs and lead the Phillies back from an 11-run deficit to a 10-inning, 18-16 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Capitals fail against surging Islanders on home ice

Nordiques, Oilers, North Stars also win

By The Associated Press

It apparently is going to take more than a home-ice advantage to stop the four-time defending champion New York Islanders.

Washington split the first two games of the best-of-seven Stanley Cup quarterfinal series in Uniondale, N.Y., but the Islanders have rebounded by winning the next two games on the Capitals' home ice, including a 5-2 triumph Monday night.

Clark Gillies continued his National Hockey League playoff rejuvenation with two goals for the Islanders.

"We like playing on the road," said Gillies, who now has four postseason goals after posting only 12 during the regular season. "The home team fans yell and scream, and that gets us up."

"Our club has played better on the road than at home," New York Coach Al Arbour said. "When you make a mistake at home, the fans jump all over you. That has a tendency to make the guys a little tight."

THE FIFTH games in all series will be played Wednesday.

"Things are going much better for me in the playoffs," said the 6-foot-3, 215-pound Gillies, referring to his subpar regular season. "I'm not sure I know why, but I'm not going to question it."

"Size and strength are a major factor in the playoffs," Washington Coach Bryan Murray said. "Our small guys are having a tough time handling them. Time after time, we've been pushed around from a strength point of view. They lean on you in front of the net."

"The difference in size is obvious," said Doug Jarvis of the Caps, who face elimination from the best-of-seven Patrick Division final when Game 5 is played on New York's home ice Wednesday night.

Goals by Bob Carpenter and Dave Christian within a 34-second span cut a 3-0 deficit to 3-2 at 5:39 of the third period. But Gillies' second goal at 16:18 blunted the comeback attempt.

Bryan Trottier, Pat Boutilier — who had two assists — and Mike Bossy, who scored into an empty net at 19:01, scored New York's other goals.

New York captain Denis Potvin will miss the fifth game to attend the funeral of his father, who died in Canada on Sunday.

"What makes it so hard," Potvin said of his father's death, "is that we were so close. I got to see him a couple of weeks ago. We spent the whole day together."

As for his decision to play on Monday, Potvin said: "I'm happy I did, I'm happy we won, but it was never out of my mind for a minute."

Stanley Cup Playoffs

Nordiques 4, Canadiens 3

Bo Berglund's goal three minutes into overtime lifted Quebec past Montreal and evened the best-of-seven series at 2-2.

Quebec, which lost five and tied 10 in 15 overtime games during the regular season, dominated the extra period, forcing Canadiens' goalie Steve Penney into several good saves before Berglund's game-winner.

Mario Tremblay's goal had given Montreal a 3-1 lead late in the second period. But Andre Savard responded just 1:20 later to make it 3-2 and Randy Moller tied it for the Nordiques at 11:23 of the third period.

Oilers 5, Flames 3

Dave Hunter scored two goals and to lift Edmonton to victory at Calgary and give the Oilers control of the Battle of Alberta.

Mark Messier's goal nine seconds into the third period gave the Oilers a 4-2 lead. The Flames' Lanny McDonald scored about two minutes later, but Edmonton hung on down the stretch before getting an empty-net goal from Hunter with 30 seconds remaining.

Willy Lindstrom and Jari Kurri also scored for Edmonton, while Eddy Beers and Paul Reinhart got Calgary's other goals.

North Stars 3, Blues 2

Minnesota got a short-handed goal from Brian Bellows and a power-play goal from Tom McCarthy to deadlock its series with the Blues in St. Louis.

The North Stars moved ahead to stay at 16:04 of the first period on Bellows' blazing slap shot. They extended the margin to 3-1 at 8:01 of the second session on McCarthy's power-play goal.

Crenshaw revives some old values

By Barry Lorge
Copley News Service

Analysis

I wish every kid who plays junior golf or tennis, Little League baseball, Pop Warner football or youth soccer, and all their parents and coaches had watched the closing minutes of the Masters Tournament on television Sunday. There was a universal lesson at Augusta National Golf Club in the reception Ben Crenshaw was given for reviving some old values we don't celebrate as much as we should.

For folks who treasure sportsmanship and sentiment in an age of commercialism and cynicism, Crenshaw's triumphant march up the 18th fairway was also a heartening stroll back through time to a gentlemanly era we should remember more often.

At Augusta, where pristine sports values are thankfully preserved alongside remnants of an antebellum social order that would best be buried, the champion is traditionally transported to the final green on a wave of applause. This time the adulation was loud and heartfelt, for Crenshaw is an exemplary champion.

A student of every aspect of golf, from architecture to Zen, he appreciates the game's evolution, mystique and fundamental code that rules are sacrosanct. Purists expect players to abide by both their letter and spirit.

Bobby Jones, the founder of the Masters, and the other guardians of golf's royal and ancient traditions could not have found a more appropriate ambassador to walk the last fairway of honor in the soft, rose-tinted twilight of a gentle Georgia day.

"Coming up 18, I had so much support it was just incredible. I don't know how to describe it," said Crenshaw, who for 13 years had fantasized what this personal Easter parade would be like. "... For some reason, I started thinking about high school golf. I don't know why, but I just thought about all the people who meant so much to me in my career, and helped me, and talked to me. I won this tournament for my friends. I'm so lucky that I have so many of them."

This would have been a maudlin monologue if spoken without complete sincerity, but Crenshaw is not known as "Gentle Ben" without reason. He has so many friends because he is a sweet guy, with a heart as big as his native Texas. Many golfers on the tour list hunting as their hobby, but Crenshaw is a birdwatcher.

You don't have to be a saint to qualify as a decent human being. Crenshaw has his foibles. His marriage broke up recently, but typically he blamed himself. His admirers transcend the fraternity of golfers and the Audubon Society. Among his buddies are good ol' boys like the Gatlin Brothers of country music fame.

"Aside from myself and my own kids, I've never wanted anybody to win anything as much, and that's no lie," testified Larry Gatlin, who flew all night to see Crenshaw win at Augusta. They met when Gatlin was a football scholar at Houston, and the golf coach asked him to try to talk a high school hotshot from Austin named Crenshaw out of going to the University of Texas. Anybody worth a yellow rose knew that was impossible, but Gatlin did recruit a a golfing partner.

"He's as good a friend as I have in the world, and I'm thrilled for him," Gatlin said Sunday. "This is a great day for golf because he's somebody grown-ups and kids can look up to.

California Angels' third baseman Doug DeCinces, right, makes tag on Minnesota Twins' Jeff Reed. Reed tried to make third on a single by Lenny Faedo, but was tagged out when he overslid the bag. Kent Herbek's grand slam homer later gave the Twins a win, however.

Dave Kingman rips three homers

By The Associated Press

With Dave Kingman, it's either hit or miss.

And Monday night, he couldn't miss.

The Oakland slugger, known as much for strikeouts as long-ball hitting, slugged home runs his first three times up against the Seattle Mariners, driving in eight runs. The one-man power show at the Kingdome provided the A's with a 9-6 victory.

"It doesn't take very much to get it out of this park," said Kingman. "I don't think I would want to be a pitcher and pitch here."

Kingman had missed the past three games because of a sore leg muscle.

"I can only run about half-speed," he said. "When I came out early for batting practice, I didn't know if I could play. It just plain hurts. It's fun to start out this way. It makes it easier to sustain."

Kingman belted a grand slam in the first inning after singles by Joe Morgan, Davey Lopes and Carney Lansford. Lansford walked before Kingman in both the third and fifth innings, and both times Kingman followed with a two-run homer. The first two, off stater Matt Young, 2-1, came on 0-2 pitches and the third on a 1-1 pitch off reliever Ed Vande Berg.

On his next at-bat, in the seventh inning, Kingman struck out on three breaking balls from Vande Berg. In the ninth, he popped out to the infield with two men on base.

"I was purely over-anxious the last two times," Kingman said. "They didn't give me any pitches, but I wasn't going to walk."

Morgan also homered for the A's, while Alvin Davis slugged a solo homer for Seattle. Oakland right hander Mike Warren, 1-2, worked the first 6 2-3 innings and picked up the victory.

Baseball Roundup

Indians 4, Orioles 3

Andre Thornton drove in two runs, including the tie-breaker on an infield single in the seventh inning, to lead Cleveland over Baltimore.

With runners at first and third and two out, Thornton greeted reliever Dennis Martinez with a single, scoring Tony Bernazard from third.

Mike Flanagan, 0-2, took the loss, giving up four runs, three of them earned, on nine hits in 6 2-3 innings.

Bert Blyleven, 2-1, was the winner, surrendering three runs on eight hits while striking out seven in seven innings. Ernie Camacho pitched two scoreless innings for his first career save.

Cal Ripken's home run, his fourth of the year, had tied the game 3-3 in the Baltimore sixth before Thornton's tie-breaking hit.

Twins 9, Angels 2

Kent Hrbek's grand slam homer capped an eight-run sixth inning, leading Minnesota over California behind Mike Smithson's six-hitter.

Trailing 2-1 in the sixth, the Twins put the game away with their big inning, the most runs scored by a Twins' team since they produced 10 against Oakland on April 27, 1980. Hrbek's grand slam was the second of his career.

Smithson, 3-0, struck out a career-high nine and walked two. Ron Romanick, 1-1, was shelled in the sixth and suffered the loss.

Dodgers 5, Astros 4

Mike Marshall's bases-loaded double with two outs in the top of the ninth inning lifted Los Angeles over Houston.

Trailing 4-3, the Dodgers loaded the bases on singles by Steve Sax and Candy Maldonado and an intentional walk to Jose Morales after Maldonado had taken second on the throw to the infield.

Losing pitcher Frank DiPino, 1-1, forced pinch-hitter Dave Anderson to pop up before Marshall's two-base hit scored the winning runs for the Dodgers.

Pat Zachry, 1-0, the fourth Dodger pitcher, hurled 1 1-3 innings for the victory.

"I knew what was coming with a 3-1 count and the bases loaded," Marshall said. "I was thinking fastball all the way and that's what I got — a knee-high fastball right where I wanted it. I was determined to hit my pitch, I wasn't going to hit his pitch."

Jackson to undergo scalp surgery

Jackson

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — Security guards will be laying down the law this week at Brotman Memorial Hospital when superstar Michael Jackson is admitted for reconstructive scalp surgery.

"The fans are beginning to call, and we are preparing for a barrage of phone calls," said Judy Davis, a spokeswoman for the hospital where the Grammy award winner was to sign in tonight for surgery Wednesday.

Jackson received second- and third-degree burns on the back of his head when special effects set his hair ablaze during filming of a Pepsi commercial in January. He spent a day at Brotman immediately afterwards and "we got 800 calls an hour," Ms. Davis said Monday.

Plastic surgeon Stephen Hoefflin planned to remove the scar tissue from Jackson's head with a carbon dioxide laser and replace it with healthy tissue from elsewhere on the scalp. Ms. Davis said Jackson would probably be discharged Thursday.

Liberace

NEW YORK (AP) — He's got the fuzziest furs, the ritziest rings and the glitziest Rolls-Royce in show business. And Liberace showed them off in style to the thousands of fans who watched him realize a "dream come true" — his first concert at Radio City Music Hall.

"I've always felt that music is something that should be a shared and happy experience," Liberace, 64, said before opening his 14-day stint at the art deco auditorium. "Although I'm celebrating my 40th anniversary in show business, 50 percent of the audience is seeing me in concert for the first time."

What the audience saw Sunday night was a sequined Rolls delivering Liberace to center stage, the pianist resplendent in a white floor-length virgin fox coat with an 8-foot train over his sequined suit. For those who needed a closer look at what was making the light flash off his hands, there was also a video tribute to his diamond and gold rings.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Although the British aren't generally known as fashion pacesetters, neither are they merely "cute, accented traditionalists," Prince Andrew would like the American people to know.

The 24-year-old prince, himself no slouch in a smart dark suit and red tie, toured six shops on Beverly Hills' chic Rodeo Drive on Monday to promote British goods.

He said British manufacturers have been able to respond to the demands of modern tastes while maintaining high standards of quality.

Queen Elizabeth's middle son, a helicopter pilot in the Royal Navy, is on a four-day tour of Southern California to sightsee and raise money for the British Olympic team.

His first official function was a Chamber of Commerce breakfast at which he was serenaded by the Beverly Hills High School band's renditions of "God Save the Queen" and "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Pulitzer prize winners speechless

NEW YORK (AP) — Two writers with plenty to say, novelist William Kennedy and whimsy-spinner Theodor "Dr. Seuss" Geisel, declared themselves all but speechless at being honored with Pulitzer citations.

"I have no thoughts. I'm unable to think," Kennedy, a 56-year-old former reporter, said Monday after his novel, "Ironweed," won the 1984 Pulitzer Prize for fiction. The book had been rejected 13 times, he said, before Viking Press published it last year.

Geisel, whose imagination spawned the Grinch and the Cat in the Hat, received a special citation for his contributions over the past half-century to the "education and enjoyment" of America's children and parents.

"It's the damnedest thing, unquote," the 80-year-old Geisel said from his home in La Jolla, Calif. He seemed not to mind that the honor came so late in life: "It's amazing that it came at all," he said.

Playwright David Mamet won the drama award for his work "Glengarry Glen Ross," which is currently on Broadway. Tracked down in a movie theater where he was watching his wife, actress Lindsay Crouse, in the film "Iceman," Mamet called the prize "an extraordinary endorsement."

"Ironweed," the story of a baseball player-turned-murderer who returns to his hometown 22 years later, "wasn't an easy book to write or an easy one to read," Kennedy said from Averill Park, N.Y.

Dozens of journalists were also celebrating. Photographer Stan Grossfeld of the Boston Globe was so excited that he couldn't "make a good print to save my life," and Karen Elliott House planned to "drink champagne with everybody" at The Wall Street Journal.

Four newspapers won two awards apiece: The Los Angeles Times, public service and editorial cartooning; The Boston Globe, special local reporting and spot news photography; The New York Times, national reporting and criticism; and The Wall Street Journal, international reporting and commentary.

Other awards went to Newsday, Long Island, N.Y., general local reporting; The Denver Post, feature photography; The Seattle Times, feature writing; and the weekly Georgia Gazette of Savannah, editorial writing.

Fuss making Dr. Seuss' life 'rather unprivate'

NEW YORK (AP) — As Dr. Seuss, he can converse in private with the Lifted Lorax, a roly-poly brown creature with a yellow walrus mustache, or drip a nasty green slime on Bartholomew Cubbins.

As Theodor Geisel, he grumped gently about the hoopla over his special Pulitzer citation.

"Oh, I like some of it," the 80-year-old author, his voice a bit gruff over the telephone, said after the award honoring his 44 children's books was announced Monday.

But all the fuss, he said, was making him "rather unprivate."

For more than 30 years, Geisel lived relatively unchafed by the press in a gleaming, white hilltop castle in La Jolla, Calif. There he created the classics that have delighted generations of youngsters — "Horton Hears a Who," "The Cat in the Hat," "Green Eggs and Ham" and "How the Grinch Stole Christmas," among them.

Geisel — Seuss is his middle name — wasn't chagrined in the least that it took almost 50 years to be recognized with such a prestigious award for his accomplishments in children's literature.

General who accepted German surrender dies

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Retired Gen. Mark W. Clark, who led the U.S. 5th Army on its long fight from Africa to the liberation of Rome and accepted the German surrender that ended World War II in Italy, died today. He was 87.

Clark

Clark, a four-star general whose highly decorated military career spanned three wars, entered the Medical University of South Carolina for tests March 20, but by Sunday was listed in critical and deteriorating condition. He died shortly after 1 a.m. today.

Clark had heart trouble and used a pacemaker, but hospital spokesman Charles Gudaitis said in a statement that Clark's death "was related to the cancer of the pancreas, which spread to his liver."

Clark became the liberator of Rome in 1944, commanding the 5th Army as it chased German forces out of Italy. He was later supreme commander of the United Nations forces in the Far East and the signer of the Korean War armistice in 1953.

After retirement, he served as president of The Citadel military college in Charleston, S.C., from 1954 to 1965.

Clark was born May 1, 1896, into a military family. A graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, his scholastic record was undistinguished. But after getting his commission in 1917, he was quickly promoted to first lieutenant and then to captain within the year.

During World War I, Clark joined the 11th Infantry of the 5th Division in France, where he was wounded in action in the Vosges Mountains west of the Rhine River. Assigned next to General Staff Headquarters of the 1st American Army, he participated in the St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne offensives and later served with the 3rd Army in Belgium and Germany.

By 1942, Clark had attained the rank of major general and was made deputy commander-in-chief of Allied Forces in the North African theater of World War II. In that capacity, he played a major role in planning the invasion of North Africa. At age 46, he became the youngest lieutenant general in the history of the Army.

In January 1943, he was designated commanding general of the 5th Army, the first American force to move onto the continent of Europe during the war.

From bases established in Africa, Clark's 5th Army captured Naples later that year after a hard battle at Salerno, where he was often seen at the front lines.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Sickle cell disease evident in fetus

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is it true that sickle cell disease can be diagnosed during pregnancy? If so, how soon can it be done? — Evelyn, Atlantic City, N.J.

Dear Evelyn: Sickle cell disease can be diagnosed by amniocentesis at approximately 15 weeks of pregnancy.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have heard different stories about whether it's good to give aspirin to a child who has asthma. Some people say to give a substitute, and others say it doesn't make any difference. Can you straighten me out on this? — Edna, San Francisco, Calif.

Dear Edna: The results of a study of 25 children with asthma suggest that the use of aspirin should be avoided. The investigators report that while acetaminophen cannot be considered completely harmless, it is preferable to substitute it for aspirin in children with asthma.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is it true that older people who have breast cancer do better than younger people? I've been told this by someone who should know, but I find it hard to believe. — Mrs. E.N., Cedar Rapids, Iowa

Dear Mrs. N.: According to Dr. Ronald H. Blum, of the New York University Medical Center, the outlook for older patients with breast cancer is better than that for younger patients; however, attempts at chemotherapy in the older patients may be complicated by prior illnesses. For example, a patient who has reduced kidney function may not be able to tolerate some of the drugs commonly used in chemothrapy.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have just finished reading about a policy that has been adopted in some hospitals when a newborn baby dies. The main point in this new policy seems to be that the parents should be able to see the baby, and that they should even be given the child's identification bracelet and other things like that. Can you explain the reasons for handling the death of a baby in this way? — Ruth, N.Y.

Dear Ruth: The results of studies have shown that the kind of approach you describe helps the parents cope with the loss of their newborn infant. Some families who were not given the opportunity to see the baby have later expressed disappointment about it.

In addition to being permitted to see the baby and being given tangible reminders such as the identification bracelet, it has been suggested that parents be encouraged to give the baby a name; and that if the mother wishes to attend the funeral, that services be delayed until she is able to leave the hospital.

Hospital wants Parkview replacement reconsidered

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A two-year long battle for psychiatric and drug abuse treatment facilities will continue after Parkview Hospital ducked the last punch thrown by West Plains Psychiatric Hospital Thursday.

In an effort to strengthen its case in a lawsuit filed by Parkview, West Plains requested reconsideration of a replacement hospital for Parkview, approved by the Texas Health Facilities Commission March 8.

THFC approval of the new $15.4 million Doctors Hospital of the Permian Basin was given after Parkview officials cited deficiencies in the present 60-bed facility, built on less than three acres on Sage Street. The 75-bed Doctors Hospital will be constructed on 9.69 acres of land on the southeast corner of Preston Drive and Loop 250.

American Medical Corp., the Tennessee-based owner of Parkview, and Southwest Health, Inc., parent company of West Plains, were joined in a THFC hearing for psychiatric and drug abuse facilities in April 1982. The THFC approved Southwest Health's request for West Plains, a $3.9 million, 60-bed psychiatric and chemical abuse facility in July 1982. At that time, American Medical Corp.'s request for a $600,000 conversion of the present Parkview facility into a psychiatric and drug abuse hospital was denied.

Parkview filed a suit against the THFC and Southwest Health Inc. for approval of West Plains, which will be built on 10 acres of land west of Midland Regional Airport at the northwest corner of the interesection of FM 1788 and Highway 80. The hearing is scheduled for May 11 in a Travis County district court.

According to Carla Cox, attorney for West Plains, the request to rehear the application for Doctors Hospital was made in an effort to have THFC on record as saying the present Parkview Hospital, if unacceptable as a medical hospital, is then also unacceptable to be converted into a psychiatric hospital.

"We don't care whether they build a new (medical) hospital or not," Ms. Cox told the Reporter-Telegram Monday. "But we brought out a number of these deficiencies we felt would preclude the (present) facility being converted into a psychiatric facility. Basically, we were asking the commission to make findings to the effect that the facility cannot be renovated."

"In Parkview's application, they cited difficulties with the existing hospital," said Diane McIver, project manager of Healthcare International Inc., which was selected to manage and develop West Plains. "West Plains involvement was that those same difficulties would exist if there was an effort to convert Parkview into a psychiatric hospital. It certainly seems to be a relevant consideration to the lawsuit."

Although West Plains had not filed in opposition to Parkview's hearing on the new hospital, THFC Deputy Administrator Carol Daniels said West Plains did testify at the hearing on Doctors Hospital.

"They had a couple of findings at the old Parkview facility that she (Ms. Cox) wanted to change," Ms. Daniels said. "They were minor changes for clarification purposes and Parkview agreed to them."

The THFC approved Doctors Hospital March 8 and West Plains filed the petition for rehearing March 23.

"They requested the rehearing in order to determine the suitability of the existing Parkview Hospital for conversion to a 60-bed psychiatric facility," Ms. Daniels said.

"We said they are not a party to the application at all," said Dick Liley, Parkview Administrator. "They had no grounds to respond."

The three-member THFC unanimously denied the motion for rehearing Thursday, Ms. Daniels said.

Whether or not West Plains will try the same defense in court is still "under consideration," Ms. Cox said.

"We feel we have a real strong case on appeal — we were granted our request and they weren't. All we want is the court to say the THFC was absolutely, positively right in its decision.

"We don't know if we need that additional information to prevail in court or not. We have to be careful. We don't neccessarily want to muddy the waters."

Riding high

Bicyclists have enjoyed riding high since the 1800s, when the high-wheeler was in fashion. That bicycle, which had an enormous front wheel and a small rear one, posed the same difficulties as this bike, designed by Larry Melendez. A rider needed a ladder to mount and a soft place to land when stopping. Melendez turned his bicycle frame upside-down and extended the handlebars and seat to make this two-wheeler.

Coonce having hard time in his bid for constable

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Just as he had done before, Fred L. Coonce Sr. treaded into the Midland County Courthouse to file for constable.

Twenty years ago, he filed, won the $25-a-month constable's job in the old rural Precinct 4 west of Midland, became unpopular with the voters and was ushered out in 1968. Coonce says his defeat at the election polls was "set up."

He wants back in office but apparently took the wrong turn. He claims he wasn't received eagerly by Midland County Judge Bill Ahders, who, Coonce said, gave him the "run-around." Ahders had told him to check with County Clerk Rosenelle Cherry about his filing as a write-in candidate. Ms. Cherry wasn't in her office.

But Coonce, a 50-year-old truck driver, didn't persist in filing his independent write-in candidacy with the judge and said instead he'd file it with Texas Secretary of State John Fainter.

At first, Coonce tried to file for constable for Precinct 1, Place 2.

"There's no such office," County Attorney J. Scott Henderson told Coonce.

Coonce's plan had been to run for constable of Precinct 1, Place 2, since he figured Constable Tom McGinnis was constable for Precinct 1, Place 1.

He was mistaken.

McGINNIS IS constable for Precinct 1, period. There are no constable places within the precinct, which is one of four justice of the peace-constable precincts in the county. However, Precincts 2, 3 and 4 each take in a square mile of rangeland unpopulated by people and each is without voters and constable candidates. Precinct 1 takes in 97 percent of the county, including the city of Midland. That has been the case since 1969 when the Commissioners' Court realigned the JP-constable precincts and thereby restricted the county to only one constable's slot.

McGinnis, a Republican, has been constable since 1981 and is seeking re-election this year. He has four deputy constables.

"You can do that (file for constable for Precinct 1) if you want to," Henderson told Coonce, "and run against Tom McGinnis. That's fine with me. As far as any rendition on the legal aspects (of his filing), that's neither my responsibility nor the judge's."

Coonce

Henderson suggested that Coonce consult with another lawyer in the private sector.

"They've got their own brand of law and order around here," Coonce said after Henderson and Ahders left his presence. "They send you here; they send you there."

McGinnis, who said he had heard rumblings about Coonce planning to file for election, said he welcomes any competition.

"IT'S CERTAINLY a public office, and he has a right to run against me," McGinnis, 47, said. "The people should definitely have a choice."

Article 5, Section 18, of the Texas Constitution provides that in each precinct "there shall be elected one justice of the peace and one constable." However, the constitution says that "in any precinct in which there may be a city of 18,000 or more inhabitants, there shall be elected two justices of the peace."

"I think you can have only one constable per precinct," said Mark H. Dettman, first assistant county attorney, "but you can have more than one justice of the peace. There does not exist (Constable) Precinct 1, Place 2. There's just Constable of Precinct 1."

Initially, Coonce said the constable's slot he was seeking would coincide with Justice of the Peace Precinct 1, Place 2, which is held by Justice Robert H. "Bob" Pine. Charlie Sprayberry is justice for JP Precinct 1, Place 1.

Coonce said he's not seeking the constable's job for money but rather out of principle. (The job in 1984 is paying $29,868 a year; 20 years ago, the constable was getting about $6,000 a year.) Even if there were another slot for constable, the Commissioners' Court sets the salary, which presumably could range from $1 a year to $25 a month to pay insurance or more.

"I'M NOT RUNNING for the job to please the county commissioners," Coonce said. "I'm running for the benefit of the people."

As he has in the past, Coonce again accused the commissioners of violating their oaths of office by realigning the JP-constable precincts and putting three of them "out in the pasture" and "willfully and deliberately depriving the people of their rights to vote or seek office, which under the federal law is supposed to be a federal offense,...a penitentiary offense."

"The commissioners know it," he said. "That's the same oath of office you take when you serve your country, too. If you can't comply with your oath of office, then it makes a mockery out of the Constitution, the laws, and it makes a mockery out of the Holy Bible."

However, Commissioner Durward Wright said, "That's not true." A similar JP-constable situation had been tested by the courts which held the JP court, unlike the Commissioners' Court, is not a quasi-legislative body and hence is not subject to the one-man, one-vote rule.

Wright's stance is that the county is better served by the one-precinct concept, since Midland County essentially is a one-city county.

"I guess," Wright said, "this is a free country, and that's his prerogative" to run for office, he said of Coonce.

Dettman has said he sees no constitutional problem with the current JP-constable situation. "Nobody's vote is being diluted the way the system is set up," he said. "Everybody has an equal vote. I'm not going to advise the commissioners to change a thing."

Coonce said he wants to be constable to bolster law enforcement in the rural areas.

"A constable is sort of like a doctor," he said. "You handle all state laws; you don't handle just one specific law."

ECISD board expected to OK cost-cutting measures

Administration recommends $2.15 million in cuts

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — School officials tried to tell rollback advocates cuts of up to $2.2 million would have to be made to the coming year's budget to offset the $3-4 average taxpayers will save on every $10,000 in property taxes.

But voters passed the rollback Jan. 21 by a wide margin anyway, ushering in a year of relative austerity for the Ector County Independent School District in 1984-85.

Until recently, the county government had been saddled with the problems that go with making cutbacks in mid-budget year. Under provisions of the Property Tax Code which offered voters the rollback option, the county had to make its cuts immediately, while the school district had some time to plan for the reductions.

But this grace period is fast disappearing, leaving the school district with the task of finding the places to cut its proposed budget in anticipation of the approaching fiscal year.

Tonight's meeting of the ECISD school board is expected to feature approval of cost-cutting measures recommended by the administration totaling about $2.15 million.

Warning that 80 percent of their budget went for staff, the district predicted it would have to drop some employees if the tax rate was rolled back. Part of Monday's "cost-reduction alternatives" is dropping 47 positions.

As was the case with the county, some of these positions were already open. So 10 of the jobs just will not be filled, saving the ECISD $306,667 in salaries and fringe benefits.

Included as casualties of the position cuts:

— One assistant superintendent, saving $51,867 in payroll costs.

— One secretary to this administrator, saving $21,639.

— One director of planning, evaluation, research and development, slicing payroll costs by $47,602.

— Two associate directors, one for planning, the other for parental involvement, reducing the payroll by $87,034.

— Two principal interns, saving $58,913.

— Two elementary clerical aides, saving $17, 973.

— One secretary of special education materials, who would have earned $21,639 in salary and fringe benefits.

Under contract with the school district are a field inspector earning $35,489, a draftsman paid $31,997 and a secretary to the director of school improvements receiving $19,503 in salary and fringe benefits. These three positions, all involved in construction projects financed by a $26 million 1980 bond program, will likely be dropped for the next fiscal year as most of the construction has been completed.

Rounding out payroll cuts totaling $828,791 are 34 jobs the administrative staff recommended could be cut from "areas other than the instructional program" or where changes can be made because of program changes or anticipated enrollment declines.

Victims of these cuts and payroll reductions would be:

— One security officer ($23,979).

— 10 vocational education clerks ($23,520).

— Three secondary counselors ($72,579).

— 13 teacher units expected to be absorbed by enrollment declines ($224,393).

— Two high school clerks ($24,292).

— One secretary to nurses ($9,921).

— Two high school librarians ($28,364).

— One vocational adjustment coordinator ($26,155).

— Reclassification of the coordinator of transportation ($1,932).

By cutting these 34 positions, payroll would be reduced by $435,145.

Savings of $175,000 have been estimated in reduced attorney fees (with the desegregation suit at an ebb in the action after the March court order), consultants fees, accounting costs and building rent.

Another $150,000 has been cut from supplies and materials. A newly negotiated building insurance plan is expected to save $50,000 and reduced travel expenses to account for savings of another $40,000.

The administration figures to save $520,000, as 12 buses will need to be purchased during the next fiscal year, down from 26 bought in 1983.

Cuts of $275,000 will be made in various budgets, book allocations to two libraries will end, saving $15,216, and no land acquisition budget will be made, saving $100,000.

Board members will have a chance to make changes in this plan tonight, but approval is expected.

Introduction to the alternatives setting out the criteria used in making the recommendations reads: "Levels of funding in the area of instruction would be maintained in order to permit the continuation of quality educational opportunities throughout the ECISD."

Formerly abused child back with foster parents

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A formerly abused Stanton child who was taken by her biological parents, including the mother who served a year-long prison term for felony child abuse, was returned nine days later to the Midland couple who had been named temporary managing conservators by court order.

The 21-month-old daughter of Jesus and Juana Martinez was placed in the custody of Mr. and Mrs. Alberto Loya after she suffered severe physical abuse — including bruises about the face and head, five fractured ribs, a fractured skull, fractured left arm and what appeared to be cigarette burns to the neck, armpits and groin — in August 1982.

At that time, her then 19-year-old mother pleaded guilty to the felony offense of injury to a child and was sentenced to three years in prison by 118th District Court Judge James W. Gregg of Big Spring.

Ms. Martinez served 13 months at the state penitentiary in Gainesville before returning to Stanton and her 59-year-old husband Dec. 23, 1983.

Gregg named the Loyas temporary managing conservators of the child at the request of Martinez,

Royalties may soon silence jukebox

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

It looks like another traditional American cultural institution is about to bite the dust. According to a press release put out by the Amusement and Music Operators Association of Oak Brook, Ill., the jukebox soon may be a thing of the past.

The villain, according to AMOA, is the Copyright Royalty Tribunal, which was set up by Congress to determine how much copyright owners should be paid for the use of their songs. The fee for each jukebox was increased from $8 to $25 in 1982 and to $50 this year, and the jukebox industry is appealing to Congress for relief.

"The jukebox may soon sit silent," warns the AMOA.

But bars are not sitting silent; many of them have turned to tape systems.

"We use a four-hour tape of pre-programed music" said Mike McMahan, manager of the Wall Street Bar and Grill. The tapes are rented from a Seattle company which programs them by genre — country, classical, soft rock — allowing their clients to select the type of background music they think is most appropriate for their bar or restaurant.

"I can't imagine using anything else," McMahan said.

But the jukebox is not entirely without its defenders in its hour of need. Carolyn Johnson, manager of the downtown 007 bar, said she is sticking with her jukebox. Even though she agrees that the copyright fee is too high, she has no plans to switch to a tape system.

"I really don't want to mess with it," she said. "We're not changing."

And the manager of B and B Vending, a Midland jukebox distributor, said the dire tone of the AMOA release was "a little premature."

"This is the first year it (the higher fee) has hit us," said Lee Edwards. "We don't know yet what the effect will be."

It's ironic that songwriters' royalty fees are threatening the jukebox industry, because over the years jukeboxes have provided songwriters with a rich source of imagery:

"Hey Mister that's me up on the jukebox...I'm the one who's singing that sad song...and I cry every time that you slip in one more dime...and play me singing the sad one one more time..."

If James Taylor had written, "Hey Mister that's me up on the tape system," it just wouldn't have sounded the same.

Norman Hemingway not like his famous cousin

DEL RIO (AP) — Ernest Hemingway expressed his feelings best on paper. His cousin, Norman Hemingway, does his story-telling vocally.

Bearing a striking likeness to his famous cousin, Norman Hemingway says that the thing they had most in common was drinking. They enjoyed getting together to "toss a few."

Norman, a bearded and robust man, first met the famous author in Havana, Cuba, in 1948. Norman was a pilot in the Air Force at the time and was subsequently sent to the Navy in an exchange program. He found himself working on a submarine that docked in Cuba.

"My Air Force buddy said, 'Why don't we go to Cuba?'" Norman agreed. They radioed the admiral. Permission was granted. The submarine went to Cuba.

"You never get anything if you don't ask," Norman said. What he did get was a meeting with his long-lost cousin.

Because of a split in the family during the Civil War, Norman didn't realize his connections. He also knew very little about the famous writer.

"Bear in mind when I was younger Ernest Hemingway wasn't heard of in Northeast Texas. We didn't know those Yankees," he said with one of his frequent grins.

"My friend knew more about him than I did."

Norman found Ernest at the Floridato Bar, one of the writer's favorite hangouts. There he learned from Ernest that the two were cousins. He also found out about one of Ernest's famous drinks — a mixture of gin and green coconut juice.

"It's a very good cooler drink and Cuba's pretty warm."

Later Norman, while with the Air Force, had contact with Ernest in Spain a few times and again they met to talk and drink.

"Ernest was a great admirer of the military," Norman said. "He flew with the Royal Air Force since the U.S. wouldn't allow him."

Norman is a retired colonel and misses military life.

"I miss flying as much as I miss the arguments. I really have a great respect for the Air Force. We're not as bad some people think."

When Norman first joined the service, he was in the infantry, but he decided he wanted to be a second lieutenant so he could drive a jeep.

Not long after he received his commission the brass decided that second lieutenants should walk with the troops.

"There went my damn jeep," he grinned.

Norman is driving plenty now, though. Each winter he packs up his dog Benson, a traveling companion Stanley and heads off into the wild, blue yonder. He even has his trailer controls set up to look like a jet instrument panel.

'I've got an instrument for everything," he said.

A native Texan from Clarksville, Norman is considering resettling in this area.

"I love it. We love it so much that we're thinking about buying some land."

He also loves to fish — although he claims it's cheaper to buy fish to eat rather than catch them.

Norman's quick wit proves a personality of his own rather than an extension of his cousin's. He also seems a man to make friends quickly — unlike Ernest.

"I don't think Ernest considered many people his friend. He used to say I can count my friends on one hand. His main friends were his fishing and drinking partners.

"Ernest didn't care for the publicity. I don't think he even liked going to his publisher." Norman doesn't believe his famous name has affected him, although the name "got to the press" recently when he entered a national chicken-cooking contest.

Not long before Ernest's death by suicide, Norman spoke to him on the telephone.

"He said he was burned out, wasn't good for anything. Little did I know he probably had it (suicide) in mind.

"I thought it was a total waste myself, but you'd have to understand his life. I don't think he had any fear of death."

Norman attended the funeral in 1961 and claims that no grass has ever grown on the grave. He says tourists pocket the dirt from the writer's grave as souvenirs.

Norman's opposite and positive attitude towards life is shown in his battle with cancer. Norman won the war, but cancer claimed a leg.

"I'm very much aware a leg is missing," he said. "I had a little cancer bug."

While patting his belly, Norman said, "You might not realize by looking at my size now, but a year ago I weighed about 110 pounds."

After his battle with cancer, he said he was "totally changed; you need some good coaching."

And Norman found it. He left his wife to attend to business in their home in Nebraska and now wanders the winters away. Just Hemingway, Stanley and the dog.

Officials seek information on girl's disappearance

Crime Stoppers

Midland Crime Stopper's this week is seeking information on the disappearance of Kristy Lynne Booth.

Ms. Booth is described as a white female, five feet seven inches tall, 120 pounds with reddish brown hair and blue eyes. She was born Dec. 26, 1960.

On Feb. 2, 1980, Ms. Booth left the Dimensions Night Club, 411 Air Park Rd., at about 11 a.m., leaving behind her shoes, coat and purse.

Two days later, her vehicle, a maroon and white 1975 AMC Pacer, was found about two miles south of I-20 on Rankin Highway.

Investigators of the Police Department and Sheriff's Office have been probing the case since Ms. Booth's disappearance and no leads have developed.

Law enforcement officers and her parents are asking for the public's help in locating the woman.

Midland Crime Stoppers will pay a $1,000 reward to anyone providing information that leads to the whereabouts of Ms. Booth. All callers can remain anonymous. In Midland, call 694-TIPS and in Odessa, 333-TIPS.

a friend of the Loyas, in 1982. The court order was effective through Jan. 2, 1984 or until further notice from the court, Gregg said.

The Loyas were not informed of any changes, which Gregg said was an oversight on his part.

"I didn't mean for my order to expire," he told the Reporter-Telegram April 7 after signing a writ of attachment mandating the child be returned to the Loyas.

Three days before, Martinez took the child from the Loyas during a regular visitation, but failed to return her that evening. That week, a hearing requested by the Martinezes to regain custody of the girl was cancelled after the Loyas were not served the court papers.

Martin County Sheriff Dan Saunders was ordered "to seize Soledad Martinez...and deliver her to Alberto Loya, her foster parent in Midland," Saunders said in a written statement Monday. "There existed a dangerous situation in removing the child from the Martinezes and placing her back into the Loya home. It was my duty and responsibility alone to determine the best way to do this. My utmost concern was for the safety of the child."

Saunders said he was unable to locate the Martinezes on the several occasions he tried to serve the writ. He declined to comment further about the time it took to locate the Martinezes and place the child with the Loyas, the alleged ineffectiveness of communication between the law enforcement agency, the court and the Department of Human Resources and the "dangerous situation" involved in serving the writ.

In his statement, Saunders said, "at 2:30 p.m. on Friday, April 13, the Martinez baby was brought to my office at the courthouse by her parents and handed over to me. A female deputy and I immediately transported the girl, who appeared to be fine, to Midland and delivered her into the hands of Alberto Loya at 3:05 p.m. At that time, the order of the court had been carried out and the writ executed."

Saunders also said a motion to modify the suit affecting the parent/child relationship had been filed by the Martinezes' Lubbock attorney. Also, an affidavit supporting a change of managing conservators and an order asking Gregg to appoint an investigator to make a social study, similar to that in an adoption case, were filed. Gregg declined to sign the order, Saunders said.

The district judge, out of town for the week at a conference, was unable to be reached for comment Monday.

Ron Wood, Department of Human Resources Martin County child protective worker, declined to comment when asked if the DHR was involved in the case Monday night. He referred all questions to his Midland supervisor, Mike Hardy.

Hardy, who declined to comment because of the confidentiality involved in DHR casework situations, said "I can say that...I have met with Judge Gregg and that I think he's doing everything possible he can with the situation."

Wood had told the Reporter-Telegram earlier that the DHR closed the case when the child originally was placed with the Loyas.

"We have no reason to think the woman would abuse the child again," Wood said April 7. He also said at that time no counseling or visits with Ms. Martinez had been conducted by the DHR since she returned from prison.

In a letter to the editor, published in the Stanton Reporter Thursday, Martin County Attorney Robert S. Morris criticized the DHR for "inaction."

"I believe that the TDHR responded well to the emergency placement of the child immediately after the incident of child abuse. Since that time however, they have washed their hands of any responsibility for the child. I believe that at least an attempt to terminate the parents' rights should have been made and, failing this, TDHR should have remained in the case until a permanent custody order was made," Morris wrote.

Clean Midland deadline for pick-up is Thursday

CLEAN MIDLAND
A CLEAN TOMORROW BEGINS TODAY

The deadline to make arrangements with Clean Midland, Inc. for free pick-up service of large items such as old appliances and beat-up furniture is Thursday.

Phone calls should be made to 682-5326 or 683-9256 for hauling requests. The city's sanitation department will devote three weeks — from April 30 to May 18 — to answering those requests.

The program is jointly sponsored by Clean Midland, the City of Midland and the Chamber of Commerce.

Officials stressed that neighbors may request pick-up of large trash items from anywhere in the area, as long as they can provide a description of what is to be hauled and an exact address for pick-up.

To expedite the pick-up process, everyone is asked to bundle items neatly, mark them clearly and stack them in the alleyway. Normal trash service will continue as usual, allowing a large amount of smaller items and loose debris to be hauled sooner than the more bulksome objects.

The hauling of junk cars will be handled by Warren Cloyd in Code Enforcement at City Hall. He can be reached at 683-4281, ext. 412.

Hance against gay rights legislation, amnesty for aliens

AUSTIN (AP) — U.S. Rep. Kent Hance says he is against gay rights legislation, against amnesty for illegal aliens in the United States and against a tax increase — three positions that he says set him apart from his two principal rivals for the Democratic nomination for the U.S. Senate.

"Lloyd Doggett has said he would vote for a tax increase now. And Bob Krueger said a tax increase was unavoidable. I was the one that passed the tax cut bill in 1981," Hance said Monday.

"Both of them came out for amnesty for illegal aliens. I'm opposed to granting amnesty," Hance said.

As for pending legislation to prohibit discrimination against homosexuals, Hance said, "I think it goes too far."

Meanwhile, the head of Walter Mondale's presidential campaign in Texas said Monday his only major concern at the moment is how much of the black vote that the Rev. Jesse Jackson will take from the former vice president.

"The only area I'm willing to concede that Mondale will not come out with a strong majority is in the urban black areas, but even there we will do all right," Dwayne Holman said.

Mondale will be in Texas on April 26, and other members of his family are scheduled to be in the state several times before Texas' May 5 primary election. Mondale's aides have been having seminars across the state to line up strong representation for Mondale in the precinct caucuses across the state.

Among the races on the ballot, it is the battle for the Democratic U.S. Senate nomination that is shaping up as one of the biggest fights.

Hance, who is from Lubbock, said the way to offset the projected federal budget deficit of $150 billion to $200 billion is to cut government spending and take action to ensure the economy grows.

Former policeman pleads guilty to drug charge

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A former San Antonio policeman has pleaded guilty to a single drug charge in exchange for the dropping of 15 other narcotics counts against him.

Jesus Gonzalez, 30, was one of three policemen indicted on narcotics charges.

He pleaded guilty Monday to conspiring to possess cocaine with the intent to distribute the drug.

Prosecutors recommended a seven-year federal prison term, and U.S. District Judge H.F. "Hippo" Garcia said he would assess punishment after studying a pretrial report.

FASHION

Fashion, chivalry: Show duo

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Lifestyle Writer

Recent trends in hair fashion teamed up with old-fashion chivalry as vaudeville visited Midland recently for a one-night benefit showing of "Puttin' on the Ritz" at Yucca Theatre.

About 425 guests attended the show presented by the local chapter of Hairdressers Affiliate Fifty-six, said Chuck Wilcox, chapter president.

During the three-hour performance reminiscent of an old burlesque show, models, hairdressers and merchants from Midland and Odessa joined together and treated guests to a glimpse of the latest craze in spring hairstyles and fashions.

Models sported creations encompassing all facets of the fashion industry.

But the hairstyles, which proved to be nothing short of unique, were the main attraction providing local hairdressers an opportunity to show off such styles as shoulder-length blunt cuts and original versions of the increasingly popular bob.

Also on display were experimentations with several new wave styles, haircoloring and make-up techniques.

"It was better than we ever expected," said Wilcox. "We had more people show up than last year. There's just no comparison. It was even better than state (THCA convention)."

The show opened with the familiar Broadway tune "There's No Business Like Show Business."

During the first act, models donned their new hairstyles while parading along the stage draped with sparkling silver streamers.

Highlights of the second act included a tribute to silent screen star Rudolph Valentino. The skit featured models dressed in harem costumes dancing affectionately around a male model posing as the 1920's film idol.

The second act also featured routines choreographed to include samples tap, ballet, tango and the charleston.

During intermission, topless male waiters — dressed only in tuxedo trousers, white collars and bow ties — served cocktails to the attending guests awaiting the third and final act.

Guest artist Jose Cardono performed the show's theme song "Puttin' on the Ritz" accompanied by models wearing Las Vegas-style costumes and feather head dresses.

Cardono of Reflections Salon in San Angelo, is an expert in Las Vegas-style dance routines, which include plumes and feathers in elaborate displays of color, said Wilcox.

"It started out as a hair show, then a fashion show and finally it ended up as an extravaganza," Wilcox said. "We'll definitely do it again next year."

He said Hairdressers Affiliate Fifty-sixth, a member of the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association, is a professional hairdressers organization.

Wilcox said the primary purpose of the association is to provide hairdressers with educational opportunities, fashion expertise, salon management assistance and opportunities for competitive hairstyling.

Proceeds from the event will be used to help Midland and Odessa hairdressers continue their education.

Copley News Service

In spring, woman's fancy turns to fashion and innovative hairstyles to shake off winter. If your hair has been sabotaged by dreary weather, it can regain its shiny, healthy look with a minimal amount of spring cleaning.

If hair has dried out, seems dull or just won't fall into place, the best remedy is a simple one. Use a deep conditioner and allow it to soak into the hair for at least 20 minutes. To replace the hair's sebum, the natural oils lost throughout the colder months, there's nothing like a hot oil treatment.

Now also is the time to think about styles. Is your present hairdo right for your current lifestyle or have you outgrown it? You may wish to consider a new look the next time you visit your beautician.

When making your choice, keep in mind that versatility is important in any spring hairstyle. You'll appreciate a look that carries itself well whether you're exercising or getting ready for a formal evening.

Let hair accessories do the work for you — their versatility can't be topped. They help you create most of today's fashion looks without a lot of time, effort or special skills. Here are some ideas to get you started.

According to spokesmen at Goody, a hair accessory manufacturer, the best way to keep hair securely and attractively in place is with a barrette.

Curly tops can be left natural, with the back blown dry and straightened with a full round brush. Use your hands to flip up the ends and add an eye-catching barrette on the side.

Straight or wavy hair can assume new elegance when it's pulled up on the sides and pinned on top of the head with a pearlescent barrette. Allow a few strands to hang loosely over the forehead while the back falls naturally.

One style that's made a comeback is the ponytail. It is perfectly suited to sweater sets, puffy short skirts and capri pants. Long hair gives a casual, but romantic appearance when it's pulled to one side in a large ponytail.

When spring fever has your thoughts wandering toward a special evening affair, use your imagination to dream up an all-out glamorous look. The French are known for their high-fashion chic, and the elegant French twist is no exception.

For a smooth twist, brush all your hair over to one side. Use tortoise shell-covered bobby pins to fasten at the back, from nape to crown. Then brush all loose hair back over the pins, roll it up and tuck in the ends, fastening with hair pins.

Celebrate the season by taking a long walk in the country, gathering a bunch of flowers or putting on a pretty, summery skirt. And top off your celebration with a fresh new hairstyle just right for you.

Sun tans through 'unsuit'

Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK — After bringing us the wonders of space travel and nuclear weaponry, modern technology has come up with the "Unsuit," a bathing suit that lets you get an all-over tan right through it, with no marks.

According to Hans Buhringer, its inventor, the suit is made of 100 percent cotton with an engineered weave and special printing. You can't see through the suit when it's on, but it's transparent to light. He says that the sun shines through the fabric and reflects off the yarns in the weave to screen out harmful ultraviolet B rays. "The suit acts like a sun protection factor — SPF 6," a mild but effective sun block.

Buhringer says he is a nutritionist who studied photobiology in order to perfect the suit. He acknowledges that 240,000 Americans suffer from skin cancer and that overexposure to the sun can be a cause.

But he points out that there are proven medical benefits to tanning, aside from simply looking better. "The sun clears up many skin problems and stimulates the adrenal glands and immune systems. You can work more and take more stress than you can usually withstand."

He claims the suit uses regular bathing suit dyes and contains no chemicals harmful to the skin or body. "It's totally safe."

However, he does recommend that the new wearer "use caution for the first few hours — 45 minutes in the sun and 15 in shadow. Even very fair-skinned people can stay out two hours without burning if they are protected by an SPF 6."

Buhringer came up with the idea when he moved to Hawaii from his native Austria. He discovered that Americans wanted all-over tans, but were shyer about nude sunbathing than Europeans.

It took him eight years to perfect the suit and a year on the road with his fiancee, actress Ann Turkel, to sell it to stores like Bloomingdale's and Neiman-Marcus. So far, it's a hit, with over 200,000 suits sold.

"I think we've got a 'Cabbage Patch' doll," says a delighted Turkel. She said the suit appeals to "everyone, young and old, fat and thin. The suit supports you better than any Lycra suit, since it doesn't stretch. It holds you in."

Without any training in sales or marketing, Turkel shelved her acting career temporarily to get the new venture on its feet. "It will give me the security so that I can pick and choose my roles," she says. But her acting career comes frst.

In addition to her appearances on TV's "Knight Rider," this fall she'll star in her own syndicated series, "The Good Life," a magazine-format show that celebrates "the things that money can't buy — the quality of life."

She and Buhringer have been going together for a year and a half. The bicoastal pair are planning a September wedding in New York, with a big party in Los Angeles, all depending on how well the suit is doing.

Turkel is excited about the success of their venture, but she's beginning to tire of flying around the country on promotion tours. "We're both exhausted," she confesses.

AT WIT'S END

Crafts kill with kindness

By ERMA BOMBECK

I turned the page of a leading magazine recently and my heart skipped a beat.

There in full glorious buttercup yellow were 12 crocheted pieces for your bathroom. There was a crocheted cover for the toilet seat and the tank, a contour rug, an oval rug for use in front of the bowl, a cover for the toilet tissue and a tie-back for the shower curtain. There were also crocheted covers for the bar of soap, the nose tissue, cleanser can, facial tissue and a little hat to decorate the wall.

I pray my Aunt Mae will not read the article and crochet herself blind by next Christmas.

Don't bother to write and tell me that gifts made from the heart are the most beautiful gifts one can receive or that I am a pile of worthless slime who doesn't deserve to be remembered in such a personal way. Don't you think I know that and feel rotten enough about it?

It's just that I have a whole house full of gifts from Aunt Mae's heart already. Aunt Mae leaves nothing undressed. There is a Mexican serape and 10-gallon hat over my tabasco sauce. Every bottle on our bar is dressed like a poodle. There's a costume for every doorknob for every season beginning with a crocheted valentine and ending with a Santa Claus.

There are crocheted coasters, afghans, pillows, tablecloths, sachet holders, lampshades, bookmarks, chairback doilies, placemats, and a cover for the phone book.

Poor Aunt Mae succumbed to the talents of her nimble fingers years ago. And who among us has not at one time or another nearly drowned in our handiwork? With me, it was a knitting class I joined back in 1973. By 1974, everyone who nodded to me within a 200-mile radius had a pair of knitted one-size-fits-all bedroom slippers. I was a woman possessed.

With my sister-in-law, it was seashells. She moved to a Florida beach a couple of years ago and worked the beach like a mine sweeper. Shells became her life. Christmas ornaments, mirrors, lamps.

The last time I walked the beach with her, she only picked up two shells, thought about it, then discarded one. She's recovering.

They tell me amateur painters are the same way. At first, they fill up their own walls with their talents. Then when they run out of space, they start passing out their paintings like senior class pictures.

I know Aunt Mae will read this. I will understand if she crochets me a noose . . . in buttercup yellow.

DEAR ABBY

Irritated mother finds expression 'tasteless'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: You are going to be my sounding board today. I've got to get this off my chest before I explode.

My husband and I have been separated since November. We have three children, the eldest a son of 14½. Now for the problem that's eating me up. It's the expression "Take care of your mother." When my husband walked out the door, he turned to our son and said, "Take care of your mother."

When my parents were told of our separation, before they left, they, too, told my son, "Take care of your mother." Again, the same stupid remark was made by my in-laws. And every time we meet relatives, the parting words to my son are, "Take care of your mother."

Doesn't anyone realize the responsibility that is being placed on a child's shoulders by such an irresponsible remark?

My son has just started his first year of high school and is doing well. He is experiencing all the problems of adolescence, and the burden of "taking care of his mother" should not be thrust upon him. Even though it is just an expression of concern, I think it is highly tasteless and very carelessly used. It's one thing to be told by a dying father to take care of one's aging mother, but quite another thing to be said to a teen-age boy!

I'd like to hear your feelings on this. — FUMING IN FULLERTON, CALIF.

DEAR FUMING: I think you are overreacting to a comment that was not meant to be taken literally. People don't expect your 14½-year-old son to "take care of you," but in an effort to make him feel like "the man of the house," they are also reminding you that you are now without a husband, which is both tasteless and thoughtless.

(If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with check or money order for $2.50 (includes postage) to: Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Briefcases new status symbols

Hearst Feature Service

The briefcase — or attache case, portfolio, call it what you will — is fast becoming an essential accessory for the well-turned-out woman. The reasons are many, but an excellent one comes from John "Dress for Success" Molloy. He says the briefcase gives an instant air of executive-suite achievement.

There certainly are many who subscribe to Molloy's theory, even if the case contains nothing but lunch and a paperback for noontime relaxation.

Far more prevalent, however, is the realization that placing the daily necessities in two separate carriers, instead of jamming them in a handbag, can mean far fewer headaches when an item must be located, whether it's a lipstick, a shopping list or the agenda for the upcoming board meeting.

Another reason: Career women who plan to go on to dinner or other diversions after work have learned the advantages of checking their briefcases and spending the evening unencumbered by a bulging, heavy handbag.

As a result, the briefcase has entered the field of fashion design. The famed Fendi firm of Rome, tops among the producers of status-symbol leather goods, devoted almost an entire show recently to such accessories, paired with career clothes that were a far cry from the strictly tailored suits recommended for "Success" dressing.

The styles included pale leather oversized envelopes, shoulder-strapped rectangles with bellows sides, even-textured black rubber with colorful fastenings.

Some had retractable handles, many were soft-sided, but several had the hard sides recommended when pocket calculators and tape recorders are part of the contents.

An American firm, Hazel, Inc., the largest full-line manufacturer of business cases and accessories in the country, recently began adding stylish versions for women to its hitherto purely practical line.

"Although we still have an abundance of basic brown and black cases, shades of burgundy, pewter and taupe are becoming popular," said Ed Jones, head of the St. Louis company's design department.

The newest styles include one case in soft gray, with generous hand-carry handles and a combination of suede and smooth leather, and a wine-tone shoulder case with bright metal accents.

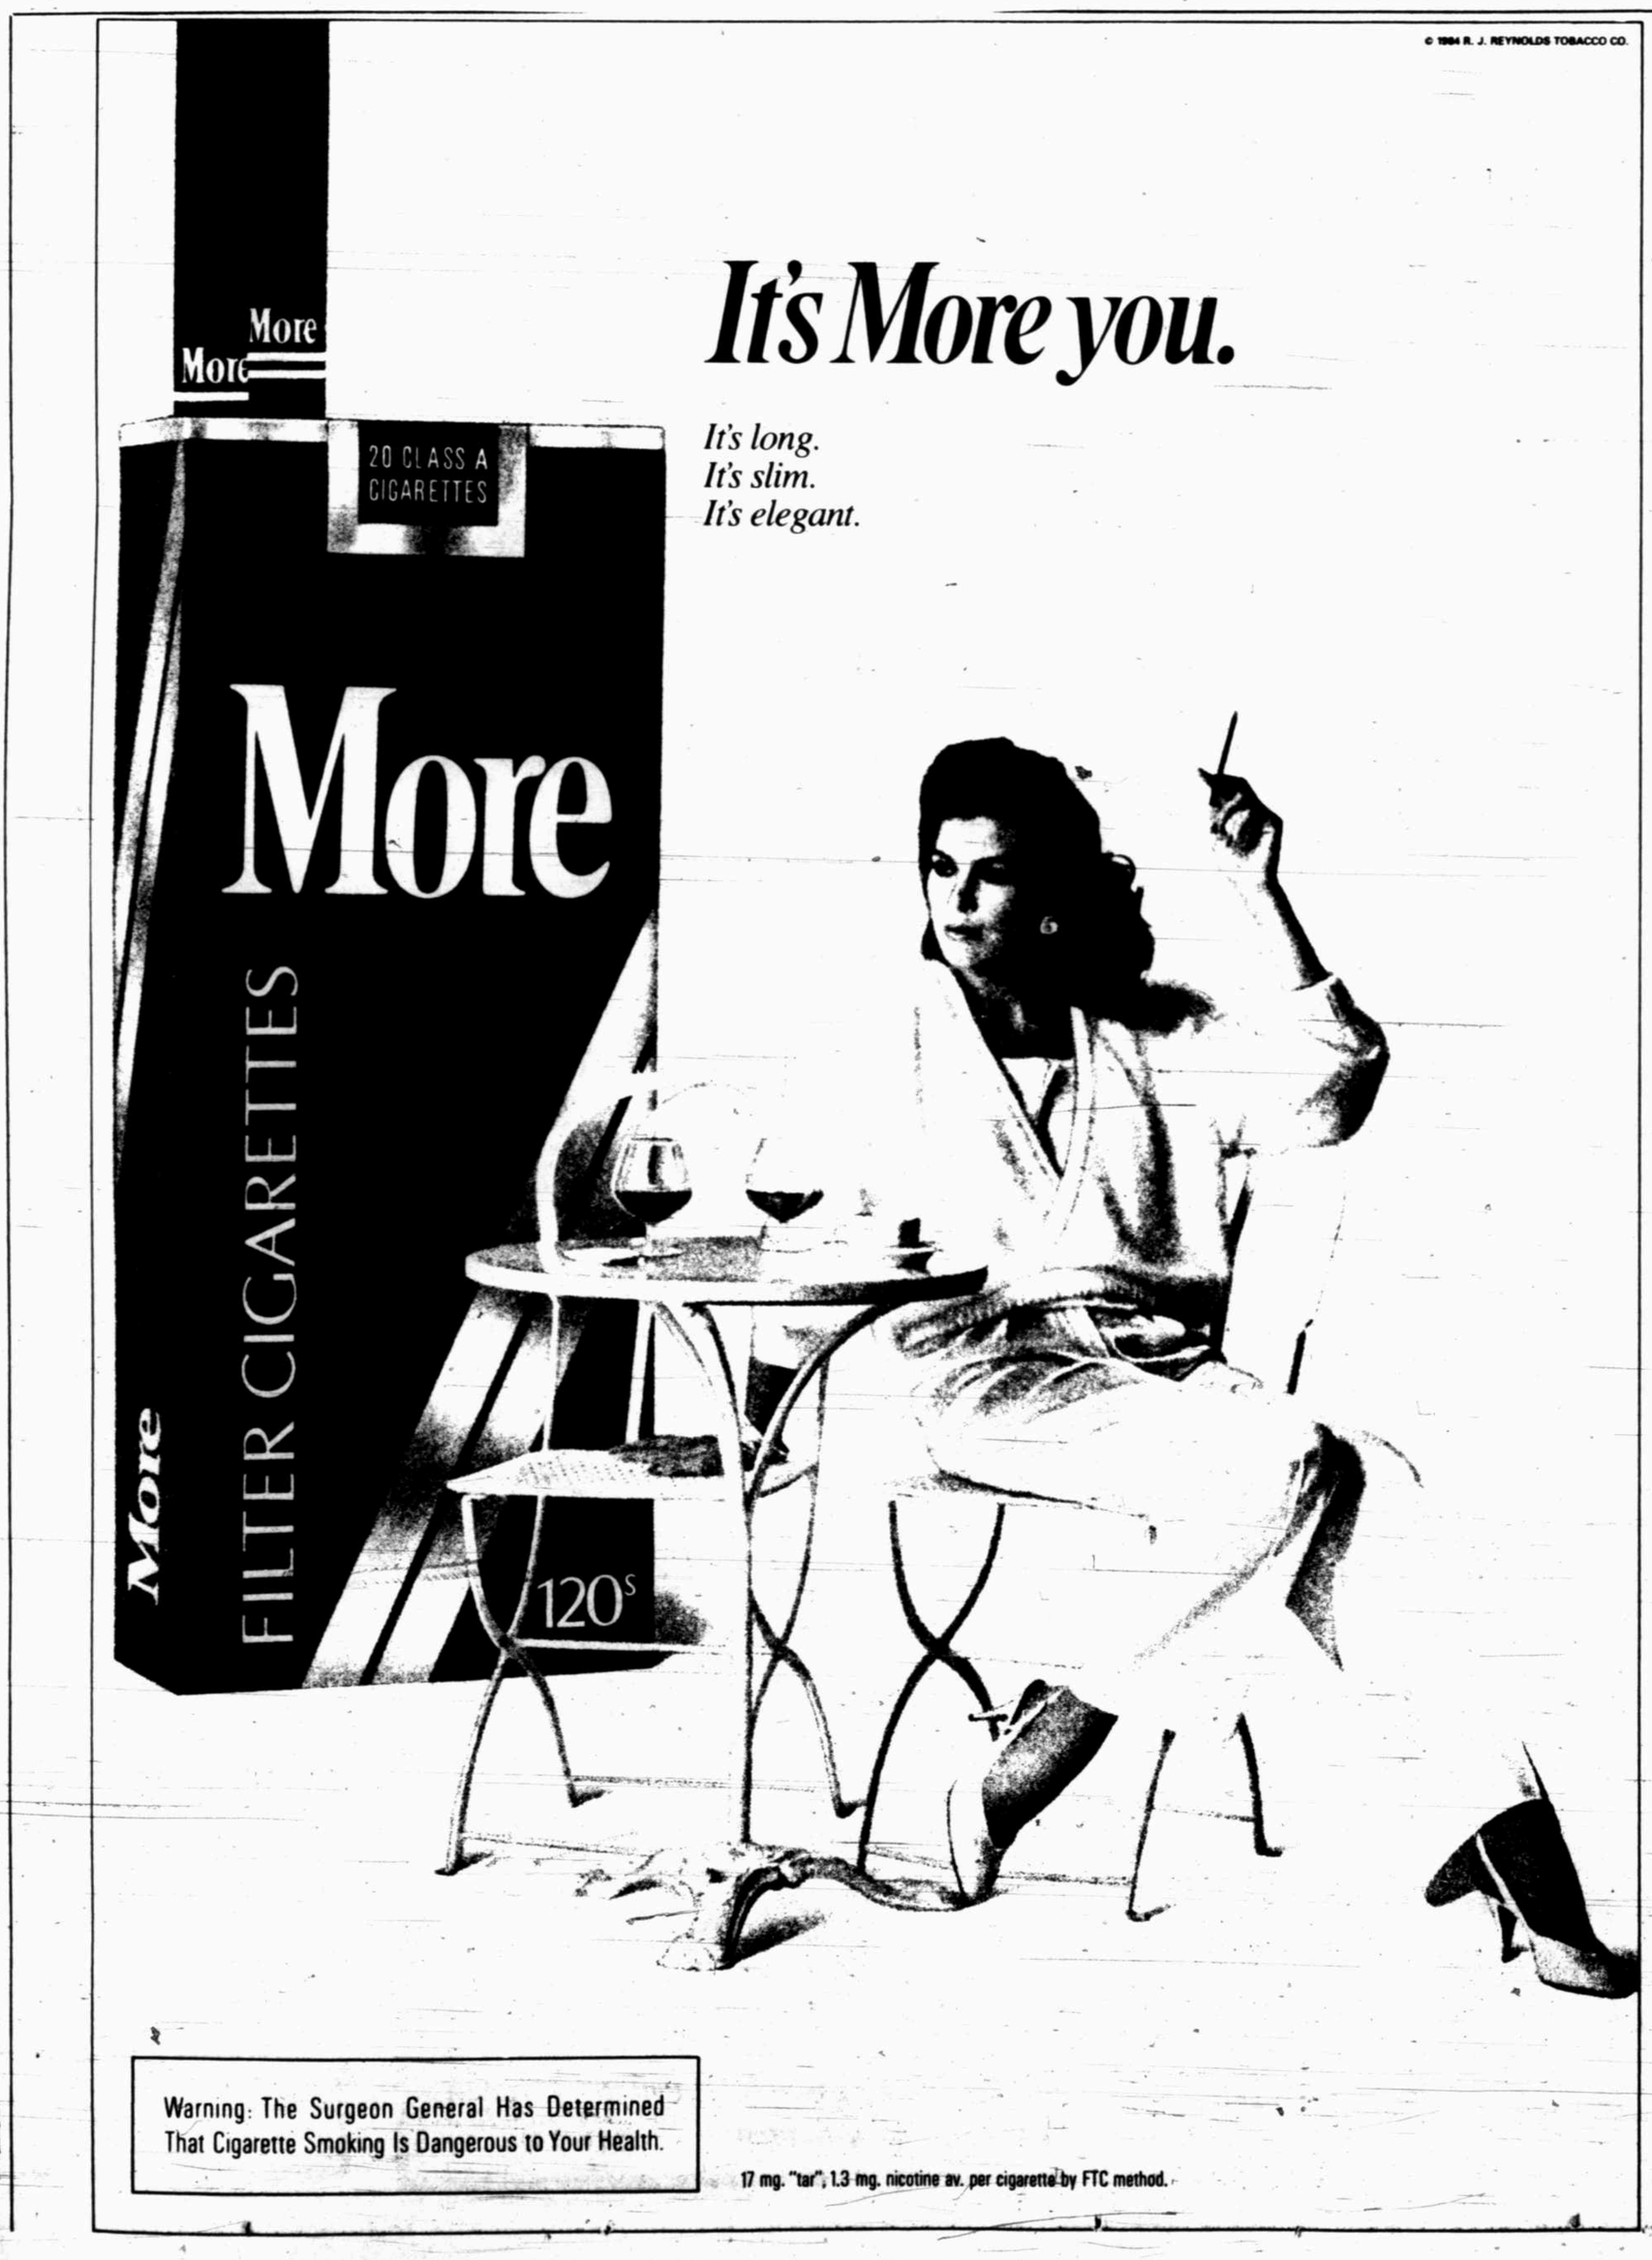

Depending on construction, cover materials and hardware, a simple portfolio can cost as little as $20 in vinyl, and attache and briefcases can go from $5 for vinyl to $350 or more for genuine leather.

For something really different, there are wooden briefcases in oak, teak, parquet, light and dark rosewood, cedar and knotty pine.

Some details the briefcase shopper should consider: Are there cardboard reinforcements? The best don't have them. Is the briefcase lined? Better not, if it's of good leather. Is there an industrial-zippered inner pocket? It should be essential.

Whether she fancies an assortment of color choices to coordinate with different fashions, or prefers to stick to just one big-ticket type, and whether she's a veteran devotee or a first-time shopper, a career woman will find one thing about briefcase buying completely to her liking.

"Perhaps the best news in looking for a new briefcase or your first is that the IRS allows virtually all cases to be deducted as a work-related expense," says Connie Schrader, a writer for a New York-based consumer publication called Best Buys. "If you're in the 40 percent bracket, that may be quite a deal. After-tax cost of a $400 top quality case may be under $250."

Drilling sags in first quarter, completions increase

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

Drilling sagged in the first quarter, but completions were up in all categories.

In the first quarter of 1984, a total of 8,276 drilling applications were filed as opposed to 9,610 for the same period last year. The factor making the difference was amended applications. In 1983, 2,370 were filed to 1,045 for the first quarter of 1984.

A substantial increase is seen, however, in the completion department. The first quarter of 1984 saw 4,583 oil completions as compared to only 3,695 for 1983's first quarter. Field drilling accounted for all of the increase with 4,414 field wells drilled in 1984 and 3,488 drilled in 1983. Oil discoveries, however, showed a disappointing 169 completions compared to 207 in 1983.

Total gas completions for the first quarter were also up, and as suspected, most were field wells as operators continue to take advantage of soft drilling costs.

The first quarter saw 1,290 gas completions in 1984 as opposed to 1,214 for the same period in 1983. Of the completions this year, 947 were field wells as compared to last year's 930 completions.

One encouraging sign was the significant number of gas discovery completions in the first quarter period. There were 343 gas discovery completions this year and 284 last year. Many major oil companies have taken advantage of high cash flows and low drilling costs to drill prospects and build reserves. Others have had to drill prospects to secure acreage.

All totaled 5,901 oil and gas wells were completed in this quarter, compared to 5,107. That's an increase of 793 new completions for this quarter, and an increase of 1,038 new holes for the quarter.

Holes plugged were also up substantially for the quarter.

The number of oil wells plugged this quarter were 1,818 compared to 824 last year, again probably an indication that operators are plugging while costs are low. Only 370 gas wells were plugged for the period, compared to 340 last year. Service wells plugged were 119 for 1984 and 61 for 1983.

Dry holes were down, too, but the data is not comparable due to a change in Railroad Commission reporting systems.

FAA to keep close watch on Continental

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration says it is keeping a close eye on Continental Airlines and considers it safe despite charges of "benign neglect" by pilots on strike against the carrier.

The Air Line Pilots Association, which has waged an eight-month walkout against Continental, accused the FAA on Monday of "shirking its ... duty" to investigate the airline and accused the agency of ignoring unsafe incidents at Continental.

The union cited what it said were 35 verified incidents that posed safety concerns at Continental since last September and said it has forwarded nearly 100 cases to the FAA for possible investigation.

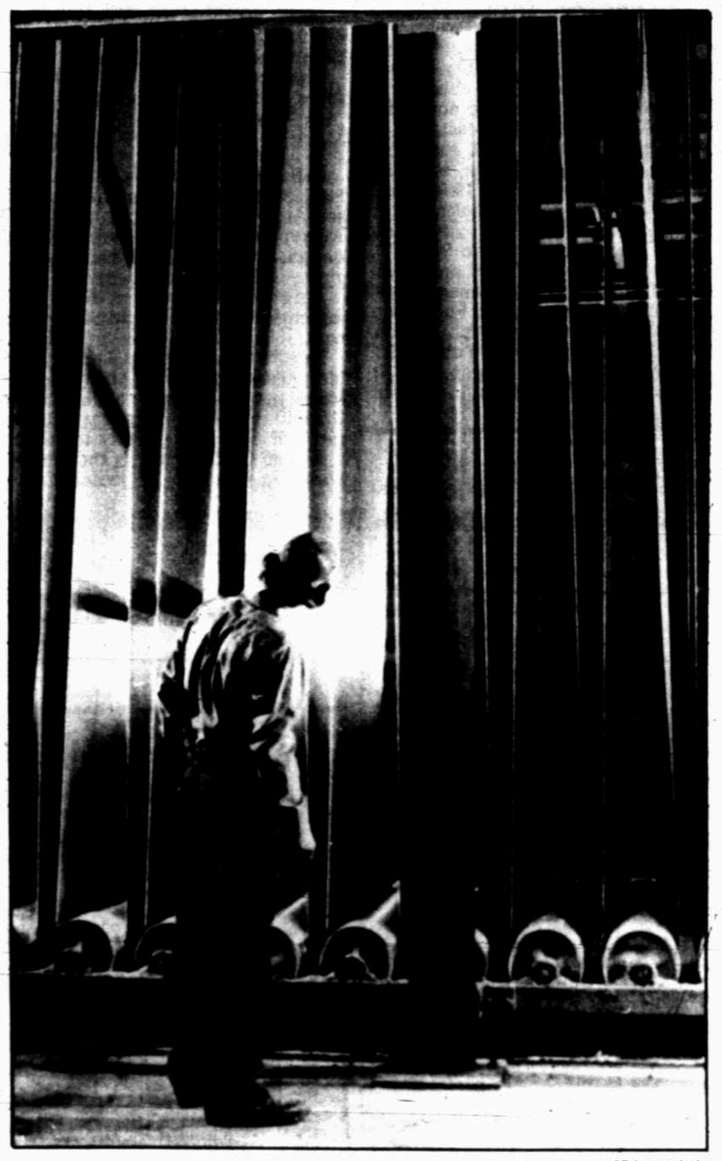

Union President Henry Duffy said, however, that FAA officials "appeared to completely dismiss our safety concerns" and have declared the airline's operations safe, though investigations into many of the incidents have yet to be completed.

Duffy at a news conference called for a congressional investigation into the agency's surveillance of Continental.

FAA spokesman Ed Pinto declined to comment directly on the union's accusations. But he said since last September the FAA has conducted more than 1,000 inspections of Continental, including "a system-wide" look at the carrier, and "we have found them continuing to meet the standards that permit them to be a certificated carrier."

Pinto said the FAA is looking at all of the incidents raised by the pilots union and acknowledged that in some of them Continental already has been cited for violations of regulations. But he said he could not say how many violations had been issued.

Meanwhile, Continental officials denied the airline was being operated unsafely and accused ALPA of waging a vendetta against the carrier.

The dry felt is used as a base in the production of roofing shingles, roll roofing and saturated felt.

Lubbock bank to be conservative

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Bill Loyd says lending decisions will be more conservative at the new City Bank than at its predecessor, Security National Bank, which was declared insolvent.

Loyd, a Dimmit investor, reopened the bank under the new name on Monday.

Security National was declared insolvent Friday by the acting Comptroller of the Currency, who cited a bad loan portfolio for the bank's failure.

Loyd, board chairman and president of the new bank, said he will "just completely change the way of doing business" at the bank.

"My philosophy of banking completely differs from theirs. It is more conservative," said Loyd, who added that he has a different approach to making loans and will not try to make the bank grow too quickly.

Loyd and his family's $3.45 million bid for the bank was accepted Friday afternoon by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., which had been named receiver of the failed bank's assets.

The new owners did not purchase any of Security National's commercial loans or new construction, which are now controlled by the FDIC.

Security National was the sixth bank closed in recent months in West Texas, which has been hit hard by a downturn in energy prices. Two banks at Midland, one in Odessa and institutions at Seminole and Brownfield were previously declared insolvent.

FDIC senior liquidation specialist Arthur Lorentzen, who spent the weekend supervising the ownership transaction, estimated the bank's deposits at $52 million.

Loyd said there were some losses by depositors who had accounts that exceeded $100,000, but he would not say how many or how much.

Loyd said the new bank will review the loan portfolio over the next 30 days and may take over some that it did not purchase in the original bid. He said loans the new bank does not purchase would be liquidated by the FDIC.

The new owners will be taking over the bank's deposits and assets, including the present building, furniture, fixtures, equipment, cash, bonds and consumer installment loans, Loyd said.

Dollar edges downward against major currencies

LONDON (AP) — The dollar edged downward against all major currencies in early trading today. Gold prices were higher in quiet trading.

The drop in the U.S. currency reversed the direction of the day before, when the dollar rose in European and New York trading amid expectations that interest rates would remain high in the United States, making the dollar an attractive investment.

Currency traders in Frankfurt said there was little substantial movement in dollar exchange rates and no major fluctuations were expected during the next few days leading up to the long Easter holiday weekend.

In Tokyo, where trading ends as Europe's business day begins, the dollar dropped to a closing 224.90 Japanese yen, compared with 225 yen on Monday.

In London, the British pound gained. It cost $1.423 to buy a pound, compared with $1.422 on Monday.

Other dollar rates in Europe at midmorning Tuesday compared with late Monday:

—2.1855 Swiss francs, down from 2.1872.

—8.1150 French francs, down from 8.1175.

—2.9735 Dutch guilders, down from 2.9765.

—1,630.50 Italian lire, down from 1,631.45.

—1.27935 Canadian dollars, down from 1.28035.

Gold trading was described as very quiet in Europe.

In London, gold opened at a bid price of $380, down from Monday's close of $380.25. The city's five major bullion houses set the morning fixing price higher, at $380.30.

In Zurich, gold was trading at a bid $380 an ounce, up from $379.40 late Monday.

Earlier in Hong Kong bullion rose the equivalent of 76 cents to close at $381.83, compared to Monday's $381.07.

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Terry County wildcat set to test Ellenberger

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

Zephyr Petroleum and Patton Energy, Ft. Worth, will drill a 14,750 ft. test in Terry County. The well is the No. 1, Cotten, located 1980 ft. from the north line and 660 feet from the west line of Section 91, Block "T", D&WRR survey, four miles south of Brownfield.

The depth makes this well a wildcat. It is located within the confines of the Brownfield South multipay field, which produces from the Strawn, Canyon and Fusselman. The Fusselman top in the field is approximately 12,000 ft. in the area.

Only two deep tests have been drilled in the field. One was a Union Oil Co. well drilled to 12,598 in 1952. The other was an American Quasar well drilled to 12,450 ft.

"We are going to the Ellenberger and beyond," said a spokesman for Zephyr. "We want to test that plus a few other things, we feel may have been overlooked. If things go well, we will get into the granite wash, pretty close to basement."

Kent County wildcat set to drill to 4200

Newhall Resources Inc., Midland, has staked a 4200 ft. test in Kent County. Well is the No. 2-3 Wallace, located 4382 ft. from north line and 558 ft. from east line of Section 3, W.P. Wilson Survey 3, five miles east of Clairemont.

Loving wildcat hits, new field designation proposed

Gerald Brockman & Associates, Midland, has completed a Cherry Canyon discovery in Loving County.

The No.1 Jones was drilled one and one-half miles north of production in the Dimmit field and the operator has applied for new field status, with the proposed new field name to be the Pinal Dome field.

The well is located 1980 ft. from the east line and 1980 ft. from the south line of Section 12, Block 53, T&P survey, 17 miles north of Mentone was completed for 700 Mcfd of gas and 33.1 bopd on initial production on a 18/64 choke. The well pumped 150 bwpd, and oil gravity was 39.3 API.

Drilled to a total depth of 6620 ft., the No. 1 Jones was plugged back to 6575 ft., and perforations were shot at intervals between 6468-6485 ft. Formation tops were set at 990 ft. for the Rustler, 4920 Delaware, 5937 Cherry Canyon. A foam frac of 10,000 gals. and 20,000 lb. sand was used in the completion.

No seismic was used in drilling the well, but the operator feels that there is structure in the area. A confirmation well is scheduled to be drilled soon, and more wells will be predicated on that test.

Quito, Oates Southwest fields get strong producers

Two gas producers have been added in Ward and Pecos counties.

In Ward County, Gulf Oil has completed a 6910 ft. Cherry Canyon well for 6.2 Mmcfd in the Quito East field. The No. 2 University 18-30, located 2700 ft. from the north line and 1000 ft. from southwest of Section 30, Block 18, University Lands survey, 13 miles northwest of Pyote.

It was drilled to a TD of 6910, plugged back to 6885 and completed in perforations between 6602-6692 ft.

It was treated with 550 gal. acid and fraced using 64,500 gal. fluid and 66,000 lb. sand.

In Pecos County, HNG Oil Co., Midland, has completed its No. 1 Hudgins 37 in the Oates Southwest (Devonian) field for 1.6 Mmcfd.

Located 660 from south and east lines of Section 37, Block 121, 27 miles southwest of Fort Stockton, the well was drilled to 14,000, plugged back to 13,570 ft. and completed in perforations between 13,461-13,570 ft. Formation tops were Wolfcamp 7636, Barnett 12781, Mississippi 12974, Woodford 13062.

Crane County wildcat tests for 209 barrels

A wildcat oil producer has been completed in Crane County by Gulf Oil Co. The Fee 159 P.J. Lea, et al, located 1980 ft. from the north line and 4430 ft. from the east line of Section 47, Block 32, PSL survey, 12 miles northwest of Crane, was completed flowing 209 bopd, 19 Mcfd gas and 2 bwpd on a 12/64 choke.

The well was drilled to 8740 TD, plugged backed to 8725 and completed through perforations at intervals between 8644-8646 ft. Formation tops were: Devonian 6152, Rustler 652, San Andres 2901, Tubb 4356, Silurian 7042, Ellenberger 8639, It was treated with 15 bbls. 15 percent NeFe.

OIL & GAS DIGEST

Saxon Oil reports record loss

DALLAS — Saxon Oil Co. reported a $5.7 million loss for the fourth quarter, and said its auditor has suspended judgment on the company's 1983 financial statement until it restructures about $120 million in debt.

Saxon said the loss includes $2.4 milion in write-downs on oil and gas properties and certain other assets. In the year-earlier quarter, the company had a loss of $41 million, including write-downs totaling $34.3 million. Revenue fell to $3.5 million from $5.5 million.

For all of 1983, Saxon had an operating loss of $17.7 million, including write-downs totaling $5.6 million, on revenue of $18 million. An extraordinary gain of $24.8 million from a settlement with trade creditors enabled the company to post net income for the year of $7.1 million, or 30 cents a share. In 1982, Saxon had a loss of $90.9 million, including write-downs of $82.3 million, on revenue of $24.2 million.

Amoco Australia, Ltd. to be sold

CHICAGO — Amoco Oil Co. has announced that it and the Queensland State Government Insurance Office have agreed in principle to sell Amoco Australia, Ltd. to BP Australia Ltd., subject to the approval of Australia's Foreign Investment Review Board. The company, which declined to disclose the sale price, said it hopes to have review board approval in the near future.

Amoco owns 80 percent of the Australian petroleum refining and marketing company. Queensland State Government Insurance Office owns 20 percent.

Negotiations began in January, following a BP inquiry concerning possible purchse of Amoco Australia, which has facilities consisting of a 45,000 barrel-per-day refinery at Brisbane and terminals at Brisbane, Townsville, Gladstone, Sydney, Mackay, Melbourne and Adelaide. Amoco markets through a network of more than 600 service stations in Australia.

Amoco Oil Company is the wholly-owned marketing, refining and transportation subsidiary of Standard Oil Company (Indiana).

Rainbow Enterprises-- heating and cooling experts for Midland

Rainbow Enterprises, Co. Rd. 1225 South, carries a variety of heating and cooling systems. They also have 73 storage units available for rent. For more information call them today.

No matter what the season, Rainbow Enterprises can help you efficiently heat or cool your home.

In West Texas the weather is so unpredictable that it is hard to tell whether it is time to gear up for the hot weather that is beginning to be upon us now or make sure that if we have one last cool spell you will be warm, Rainbow can help.

If you decide to make sure you'll be warm if it gets cool again Rainbow Enterprises carries Superior Fireplaces, Earth Stoves and inserts and Firey Furnaces.

Superior Fireplaces have 33", 38" and 43" openings to choose from. Superior has been in business for 52 years.

The Energy Home at the World's Fair in Nashville featured the Earth Stove and inserts. The Earth Stove makes a masonary fireplace more effecient because it is completely enclosed. It can burn for 12-14 hours without adding wood. A 2400 square foot house can be heated nicely with an Earth Stove.

Complete installation is available and Rainbow will even stone the front of the fireplace with camp stone. Camp stone is a man made stone. They also carry lava stone which is also a man made stone. The benefit of this stone is that it is much lighter.

If you are planning for the warmer weather ahead, Rainbow Enterprises distributes Aireze Fiberglass Evap Coolers and Tradewinds Poly Resin Evap Coolers.

Aireze manufactures 3 different units. The units are downdraft, sidedraft and window models. A five year warranty comes with each unit. To clean and prepare these units for summer all you have to do is sweep them out and you are ready to go.

The Tradewind is a very strong unit that also offers a five year warranty

Both units eliminate the need for scraping and painting because of the fiberglass and poly resin bodies.

Recently Rainbow began carrying Associated windows and doors. These storm windows and doors are Thermo Shield so they keep the warm or cool in to help your fireplace or evap coolers run more effeciently.

Rainbow has 73 storage units. The sizes available range are 10x15, 10x20 and two 20x20 units. The prices on the units are $40.00 a month for the 10x15 and $45.00 a month for the 10x20. The first month's rent and a $20.00 deposit are required and then you get the second month free of charge.

Rainbow Enterprises is a little difficult to find but is well worth the trip. To get to Rainbow you need to turn South off of the South I-20 excess road between Midkiff and Loop 250 onto CO. Rd. 1225 South. They are located on the West side of the road.

If you prefer to gie them a call the number is 697-0127.

Gaye's father needs 'care, love'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The father of slain soul singer Marvin Gaye is "unable to meaningfully assist in his defense," his attorney told a judge who scheduled a hearing next month to determine whether Marvin Gay Sr. is competent to stand trial in his son's killing.

Superior Court Judge Michael Pirosh on Monday also appointed a doctor to evaluate Gay, 70, and bring a report to the May 2 hearing. Gay has pleaded innocent to a murder charge in his son's April 1 shooting death.

Defense attorney Arnold Barry Gold told the judge that Gay "doesn't understand the nature of the proceedings against him.... We think he needs a lot of care and a lot of love."

Patriotic sing-a-thon successful

ATWATER, Calif. (AP) — A patriotic "sing-a-thon," in which 120 elementary school students belted out 72 hours' worth of patriotic songs on their Easter vacation, was a "smashing success," says the teacher who organized the project.

The students at Thomas Olaeta Elementary School sang in shifts, accompanied by a tape recorder. They repeated seven songs, including "The Star-Spangled Banner," "God Bless America" and "Anchors Aweigh," beginning about 3:30 p.m. Friday and finishing Monday.

"I feel this has given them a little more patriotism," said history teacher Joe Rivero. "I wish we could have it more often," added 10-year-old Andrea Ferguson.

Immigrant kills his relatives

LEOMINSTER, Mass. (AP) — A 56-year-old Korean immigrant bludgeoned his wife and then set a blaze that killed him and two granddaughters because he was apparently depressed over life in a new country, authorities say.

Chang Chu Kang's two-story home was engulfed in flames when fire trucks arrived about 2 a.m. Sunday, said Deputy Fire Chief Robert C. Reheault. His wife, Mak Nae Kang, 48, was taken to Leominster Hospital, where she died of head injuries, police said.

Two grandchildren, ages 5 and 7, died of smoke inhalation, said authorities, who are treating the incident as a murder-suicide.

Teen girl sentenced to prison

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A 15-year-old girl showed no emotion as she was sentenced to 30 years in prison with no chance of parole for robbing and murdering a disabled coal miner who was gagged and couldn't breathe with the help of his oxygen tank as needed.

Delphone Green also was ordered Monday to pay a $1,000 fine to a crime victims' compensation fund. Her attorney said he will appeal the "outrageous" verdict.

Miss Green was convicted last month in the Dec. 8, 1982, murder of William Carter, 64, who died after being gagged and bound. One of Miss Green's two male companions pleaded guilty to felony murder and is awaiting sentencing. The other was sentenced to life in prison.

Names must be released

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government must give the non-profit National Association of Atomic Veterans Inc. the names and addresses of servicemen to took part in atmospheric nuclear weapons tests in Nevada and the South Pacific from 1945 to 1963, a federal judge says.

In her ruling, U.S. District Judge Joyce Hens Green said Monday that studies planned by the group would provide a public benefit beyond the government's own studies, such as a 1977 finding by the Centers for Disease Control of a number of leukemia cases among veterans of nuclear testing.

The Pentagon's Defense Nuclear Agency said it withheld the information because disclosure would constitute a "clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy."

AMC will recall 1979 cars

WASHINGTON (AP) — American Motors Corp. will recall 62,400 cars from the 1979 model year to upgrade pollution control systems, the Environmental Protection Agency says.

The cars are Concord, Spirit and Pacer modes with automatic transmissions and 258-cubic inch (4.2 liter) engines, the agency said Monday. Cars sold in California are not affected.

EPA spokeswoman Marth Casey said many of the cars probably have exceeded the 50,000-mile limit for which manufacturers must warrant pollution control systems, and thus the government cannot force a recall. But she said that issue did not arise because the company is acting voluntarily.

Companies lose $40 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two companies planning to merge into what will be the nation's No.2 steelmaker estimate first-quarter losses of up to $40 million each and acknowledge they would face risks even after final approval of their proposal.

Republic Steel Corp. and LTV Corp. "have incurred substantial operating losses in 1982 and 1983," the two companies said in a joint proxy statement to stockholders sent in preparation for a May 18 meeting. They estimated losses for the first three months of this year of $35 to $40 million for Republic and $30 million to $40 million for LTV.

The proxy statement, released by the Securities and Exchange Commission on Friday, said bluntly that the risks include the possibility that their steel operations "may not return to profitability." But it also said "operating results for both companies improved progressively during the quarter" and cited possible increased efficiencies that are the stated reason for the merger.

Haze mostly from Europe

WASHINGTON (AP) — A reddish-brown haze that appears over the Arctic every November and disappears in April comes mostly from Europe and the Soviet Union, a University of Rhode Island researcher says.

"Although we don't yet know the exact region of origin in the Soviet Union, the likeliest possibility is the industrialized southern Urals," Prof. Kenneth A. Rahn said in the May issue of Natural History magazine.

U.S. weather reconnaissance flights over the Alaskan Arctic that began in the 1940s discovered the haze, which is difficult to see from the ground. Interest was renewed with the 1976 discovery of desert dust from eastern Asia in the air of Point Barrow, Alaska.

Reagan to visit products firm

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will visit Tacoma, Wash., on Thursday to tour a Weyerhaeuser log-shipping facility.

Afterward, Reagan will fly to his California ranch, where he will remain until leaving for China on Sunday, Deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said Monday.

Speakes said the president wanted to visit Weyerhaeuser because it was the first wood products company to deal with China and is helping China with a reforestation project.

Jackson urges moratorium on foreclosures

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) - Democratic presidential candidate Jesse Jackson is calling for a moratorium on farm foreclosures as he reaches out for support from Missouri's rural voters.

Arriving in this caucus state where 75 Democratic National Convention delegates will be chosen Wednesday, Jackson told a rally outside a Farmers Home Administration office that farm interests coincide with those of urban consumers.

"We've got so much in common and so little in conflict we must have the judgment to turn to each other and not on each other," Jackson told the rally, where farmers aired grievances against Reagan administration agriculture policies.

"There should be a moratorium on foreclosures," Jackson said. "If we can bail out Chrysler and we can bail out Argentina, we can bail out the American farmer," Jackson said.

About 12 people in the crowd of 100 wore brown grocery bags over their heads with eye and nose holes. One man said he did it for fear he would not get an FHA loan if his identity were known. Kenneth Allison of Armstrong, Mo., said, however, that the display was "just a ploy."

"If you've got a lot of money, it's not hard to get a loan from the Farmer's Home Administration," he said. "If you are just ordinary, it's hard to get them to give you any money."

Another farmer, Carlos Welty of Qulin, Mo., said he had been campaigning for Jackson here for six weeks.

Welty, a member of the American Agriculture Movement who operates a 500-acre rice and soybean farm, said he was "hoping like heck that Mr. Jackson comes up with enough delegates" to the Democratic National Convention "so he can do some bargaining."

"If he can, we expect to get some deals made for us," Welty said.

The rally ended with Jackson being driven around the federal agency's parking lot in a tractor, wearing a farmer's green cap, while the weather provided a coincidental touch that dovetailed with the black civil rights leader's call for a "Rainbow Coalition" of all races and ethnic groups. An overcast lifted and a rainbow appeared.

A few whites, including some farmers, joined an overflow crowd that met Jackson at Second Baptist church in Columbia.

"Never did I think on this day I would be standing on a tractor with some white small farmers who are so afraid of our government that they have to wear sacks over their heads to hide their faces," he said.

"If we are going to get somebody in the White House who makes real sense, we are going to need each other," he said.

There and at a rally attended by several thousand persons in Kansas City Mo., Monday, night, Jackson urged crowds to participate in the caucuses.

"When they see this ghetto crowd and those farmers walking in there together, that will be a resurrection," he said at the Kansas City Municipal Auditorium.

Jackson also talked with students at the University of Missouri's main campus here, site of one of the nation's top journalism schools, about how the news media cover the race for the Democratic nomination.

Hart trying to convince Midwest of his ideas

St. LOUIS (AP) — Gary Hart, struggling to revitalize his Democratic presidential quest, is trying to convince the Midwest of the value of his "new ideas."

The Colorado senator was meeting today with McDonnell Douglas Corp. aerospace workers in St. Louis in attempt to blunt criticism of his opposition to some of the company's military aircraft projects.

The appearance comes on the eve of Missouri's party caucuses to decide 75 of the states' 86 total delegates to the Democratic National Convention, and caps a two-day swing through the state that was heavy on events aimed at getting free radio and television time.

Hart has opposed construction of two models of aircraft carrier fighters, the F-15 and the F-18a, while supporting a third model capable of vertical take-off and landing.

Campaign aides said it was decided that Hart could use the session to confront the issue as well as outline his defense stand.

From St. Louis, Hart was flying to Indiana for stops in Gary and East Chicago, and then on to Ohio for appearances in Columbus and Cleveland.

Ohio and Indiana hold primaries on May 8.

Hart was expected to make pitches in those states for putting "new ideas" to work to revitalize industry in the area and improve the local infrastructure — a Democratic buzzword for highways, bridges and the like.

On Monday, Hart flew from California to Jefferson City, Mo., where he noted that it was the deadline for filing federal tax returns and took the opportunity to call for reform of the tax code.

Johnson saw Vietnam as critical trouble spot

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two and a half years before he became president, Lyndon B. Johnson told a Senate committee that Vietnam was a critical trouble spot for the United States, but sending U.S. troops was not the answer "at this time."

Johnson's testimony, given May 25, 1961, while he was vice president, was released Monday by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which periodically issues edited transcripts of historic closed hearings.

"American combat troop involvement is not only not required, it is not desirable," Johnson, who had just returned from his first trip to South Vietnam and other parts of Southeast Asia, told the committee.

After being catapulted into the presidency by the assassination of President John F. Kennedy on Nov. 22, 1963, Johnson presided over a deepening U.S. military involvement in the Vietnam War, which eventually claimed more than 55,000 American lives.

The increasing unpopularity of the war was a major reason for Johnson's decision not to seek a second elected term in 1968.

In his previously undisclosed testimony, Johnson said, "Vietnam and Thailand are the immediate and most important trouble spots that are critical to the United States."

"There is no alternative to U.S. leadership in Southeast Asia," he added.

But he cautioned: "Asian leaders at this time do not want American troops involved in Southeast Asia other than on training missions. American combat troop involvement is not only not required, it is not desirable."

The 655-page transcript, covering closed hearings for the first five months on 1961, also showed that Kennedy administration officials gave conflicting testimony as to whether the abortive Bay of Pigs invasion in 1961 was intended to trigger a popular uprising in Cuba.

The April 17, 1961, invasion — in which 1,400 Cubans opposed to President Fidel Castro were landed at Cuba's Bay of Pigs with support from the Central Intelligence Agency — was a major foreign policy disaster for Kennedy. The invasion was crushed within three days and all of the survivors were captured.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk told the committee on May 1, 1961, that part of the objective was "to spark an uprising by many elements in Cuba, which would open the way for upsetting Castro by the Cubans themselves."

The next day, CIA Director Allen Dulles, saying he wanted "to correct what may be a slight misapprehension," told the senators, "We did not count on ... any immediate uprising in Cuba."

Two weeks later, Gen. Lyman Lemnitzer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, testified that the operation was approved "in the hope this would trigger off other uprisings throughout the island."

The late Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, then a member and later chairman of the committee, told Lemnitzer he was "a little bit confused on what seems to me to be a different emphasis now coming from CIA and from this testimony this morning."

Lemnitzer replied that he agreed with Dulles that it was not anticipated there would be "immediate" uprising but "a flow into and reinforcement of ... the people who were coming ashore."

Lemnitzer also testified that "if the beachhead was held for a reasonable length of time, a matter of several days, if the uprisings did not begin to show up at that time, and the pressure from Castro's forces developed to the degree which required them to give up the beachhead, they would then resort to a guerrilla status."

Challenger prepares to fly home to Florida

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The space shuttle Challenger, able to soar miles above the earth at 17,000 mph, was at the mercy of the weather today for a piggyback return to its Florida home port.

Winds that threatened to delay Challenger's departure abated Monday and the shuttle was scheduled to head back to Cape Canaveral atop a modified Boeing 747 jumbo jet at 5:45 a.m. PST today, said Nancy Lovato, a National Aeronautics and Space Administration spokeswoman.

"The winds died down and it's calm as forecast," Ms. Lovato said.

She said the trip from California to Florida should take eight hours with a refueling stop at Kelly Air Force Base in San Antonio, Texas. If the weather deteriorates, the shuttle will stay the night at Kelly, she said.

Over the weekend and Monday, some 300 workers prepared Challenger for the trip home. Technicians attached a tailcone to cover the shuttle's rear engine and make the craft more aerodynamic, she said.

The jumbo jet's engines were tested Monday and functioned properly, Ms. Lovato said.

Meanwhile, the five astronauts spent the weekend with their families before reporting Monday to Johnson Space Center in Houston for intensive tests and interviews with NASA officials to review the seven-day mission.

During the mission, the crew chased, caught and repaired the inoperative Solar Maximum satellite and deployed a large cylinder containing 57 experiments. The cylinder, to be retrieved in February, is expected to provide information vital to space station construction.

Challenger was to have landed in Florida, but bad weather forced it to land instead at Edwards, about 100 miles north of Los Angeles.

A NASA spokesman said the shuttle suffered minimal damage during its fifth flight and was in good condition. The flight was the 11th in the shuttle program.

More detailed inspections will take place once the shuttle reaches Cape Canaveral, Ms. Lovato said.

Social insurance, retirement benefit...half the budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Social insurance and retirement benefits will probably account for more than half the federal government's domestic budget through the 1980s despite a sharp reduction in the growth of those programs.

A recent study by the federal Office of Management and Budget provides fresh details showing how much spending on those programs has been restrained since 1980.

Even so, the combined programs are projected to cost $305.8 billion in the upcoming 1985 fiscal year. The total domestic budget — excluding defense, space, foreign assistance and net interest costs — is pegged at $525 billion in the budget President Reagan put forth for the fiscal year that starts Oct. 1.

In comparison, spending on defense, as proposed in the deficit-reduction plan supported by Reagan, would be $258.5 billion in 1985.

The social insurance and retirement figures cover spending on a range of programs, including Social Security, Medicare, federal retirement, railroad retirement and unemployment compensation.

Combined, they represent the largest single group of domestic programs. They are chiefly financed by taxes on wages, paid both by employees and employers. Money for Medicare, though, comes from general revenues.

Recent changes in the programs, particularly the rescue plan approved last year for Social Security, have slowed the increases in spending.

Between 1970 and 1975, the average annual growth rate for the social insurance and retirement programs was 13.3 percent, after adjustment for inflation, the budget office said. The growth rate is projected to run at an annual average of 3.5 percent between 1981 and 1985 and 3.3 percent for the second half of the decade.

Still, the amount of spending on those programs has grown, as a share of the domestic budget, from 46.7 percent in 1975 to 50.7 percent in 1981, the study said. It is projected to run 57.5 percent in 1985 and 62.3 percent in 1989.

Total spending on the combined insurance and retirement programs was $192.3 billion in 1975 and $266.8 billion in 1981, it said. After reaching $305.8 billion next year, it is projected to rise to $348.1 billion at the end of the decade. The figures are adjusted for inflation.

The budget office attributed the sharp rise in costs to a greater number of people receiving benefits, both because of longer lifespans and broadened eligibility standards.
