S-Viets In New Invasion

The SDN Column

High school graduation is one of those milestones in life that has been appointed to hold special significance. It is a season for retrospect, no doubt, for many of the young people who will receive diplomas, and of anticipation for all.

It also is a season for advice, which may come from many sources. One source, traditionally in the past, has been the commencement speaker, and happily, this has been eliminated from the Snyder High School commencement program. As one who does not even recall the name of the speaker at either high school or college commencement, let alone any of the advice that was handed out, I agree that full-blown commencement addresses are unnecessary.

However, I hope that today's graduating seniors will not automatically turn a deaf ear on all of the advice they receive, because some of it, time-worn and trite as it may appear, may be beneficial.

Some of the graduates will go to college this fall, while others will go directly into gainful employment, and some will attend trade or technical schools. This will be determined by individual decision, and all should remember this. Regardless of the turmoil, disagreement and antagonism that is evident in the land, this still is the only country in which graduating high school seniors may decide themselves whether they will attend college, go into a trade or to a technical school for specialists.

There are many, many countries in which the government decides early in a youngster's life, not only whether he will go to college, but what he will study and whether he will be permitted to align himself with a trade. And when the decision is made, the choice of the college, or trade, is not left up to the individual. To some extent, this happens in some Western countries, and is the rule in all Communist countries.

Here, there may be various factors which enter into the decision of what a high school graduate will do, such as economic, personal interest, etc., but the decision still is left to the individual. Today's seniors may find that some of their predecessors do not remember, or perhaps never did know this, but it definitely is worth remembering if you are interested in making your own decisions in life.

Today In History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Sunday, May 24, the 114th day of 1970. There are 221 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1825, Peter Minuit of the Dutch West Indian Trading Company bought Manhattan Island from the Indians for $24 worth of goods and founded the colony of New Amsterdam.

On this date:

In 1819, Queen Victoria of Britain was born in London.

In 1839, the first passenger train in the United States began service between Baltimore and Elliott's Mills, 13 miles away.

In 1844, Samuel F. B. Morse transmitted the first public telegraph message — from Washington to Baltimore. The message read: "What hath God wrought."

In 1941, in World War II the German battleship Bismark sank the British battle cruiser Hood, with a loss of about 1,300 lives.

In 1962, astronaut Scott Carpenter became the second American to go into orbit as he circled the earth three times.

In 1967, French President Charles de Gaule gave a boost to the separatist movement in Canada when he shouted in a speech in Montreal: "Long live free Quebec."

Ten years ago— A tidal wave caused by an earthquake killed more than 200 persons in Hawaii, Japan and Okinawa.

Five years ago— A truce was reached in Bolivia to end fighting between government troops and striking tin miners.

One year ago— The Apollo 10 astronauts were heading toward a splashdown in the Pacific after a flight that took them close to the moon's surface.

Hit Rubber Plantation

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer

SAIGON (AP) — Two South Vietnamese task forces launched a two-pronged thrust today into Indochina's biggest rubber plantation, the 70-square-mile Chup plantation in eastern Cambodia.

About 10,000 South Vietnamese troops and hundreds of tanks and armored personnel carriers pushed northward along Highway 15 and westward along Route 7 toward the plantation to smash a crack Viet Cong regiment said to be operating there.

The plantation is east of Kompong Cham, Cambodia's third largest city.

Associated Press correspondent David Rosenzweig reported from the front that Task Force 318, driving northward toward the plantation's southern edge, killed 12 Khmer Rouge, the Viet Cong's Cambodian allies, and captured 13.

To the east of the plantation, 25 other enemy troops were reported killed.

Two South Vietnamese soldiers were reported killed and 11 wounded.

South Vietnamese bombers knocked out eight antiaircraft guns in the southwestern corner of the plantation, officers said.

Lt. Gen. Do Cao Tri, commander of the South Vietnamese forces, said intelligence indicated that most of the 272nd Regiment of the Viet Cong 9th Division was on the plantation.

A captured North Vietnamese soldier told South Vietnamese interrogators that 2,000 men of the 272nd were there. According to allied intelligence estimates, about 80 per cent of the regiment is made up of North Vietnamese soldiers.

"This is a hunting game between my forces and the Communists," said Tri. "If the Communists stand and fight we will destroy them."

The main objective of the drive is to destroy the regiment, but the South Vietnamese forces also hope to link up with Vietnamese civilian irregulars and open up Route 7 east of Kompong Cham.

The South Vietnamese task force moving along Route 7 had advanced by midafternoon today to within 12 miles of Kompong Cham. The city is about 35 miles from the Vietnamese border and 50 miles northeast of Phnom Penh.

U.S. advisers reportedly pulled out of the operation before the Vietnamese crossed the 21.7 mile limit of penetration set for American troops by President Nixon.

The drive kicked off the fifth phase of South Vietnamese operations along Route 1, the highway between Phnom Penh and Saigon.

Cambodian troops, with air support from the South Vietnamese air force, were reported last Sunday to have regained control of the strategically situated city, although strong North Vietnamese forces were still reported in the region.

Israel Planning More Reprisals

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Israel is massing troops and tanks on the Lebanese border to prepare more reprisals for the guerrilla ambush of an Israeli school bus, official sources in Beirut said today.

They said the troops were positioned on the eastern and central sectors of the 50-mile frontier and that Israeli tanks were grouping north of Acre on the Mediterranean coast 12 miles south of the border. Eight children and three adults were killed Friday when Arab guerrillas fired three bazooka shells into the school bus near the Lebanese border. Twenty-two other persons were wounded.

Within half an hour after the ambush, according to military communiques issued in Beirut, the Israelis opened heavy artillery fire on four Lebanese border towns. Israeli warplanes also went into action all along the frontier.

Lebanese officials said 20 persons were killed and 20 wounded in the reprisal raids and that 80 houses were destroyed.

The Lebanese government braced for more trouble today. Hundreds of civilians in towns that were shelled piled their belongings aboard trucks, taxis and donkeys, and fled their homes.

Many complained of lack of adequate shelters or means of defense. One man brandished a World War I rifle and a few bullets and said, "This is all I had to defend myself with."

The newspaper Le Jour quoted the mayor of Altaroun as saying: "In this town of 8,000 people, there will soon remain only the owls."

Lebanese Ambassador Edouard Ghorra said in a letter to the United Nations that "we deplore the loss of life in the attack on the bus. But he added that Lebanon did not know who did it and could not be held responsible.

The U.S. State Department called for condemnation of the attack "by the world community" but also expressed shock at Israel's reprisal attacks.

Britain called the ambush "a cruel act of terrorism" and said it would raise the issue at the United Nations.

Big Issue Is Delayed

The Snyder Daily News' "Decade of Development" edition, which had been scheduled for publication today, has been delayed for a week.

The big issue, which concentrates on Snyder area development during the sixties, just kept growing right up to press time and in order to get last-minute materials included, the publication date was moved back one week, said Herbert Feather, publisher. The special edition now is scheduled for distribution next Sunday, May 31.

School Ends Wednesday

Wednesday, May 27, is the last regular school day of the 1969-70 school term in Snyder. Secondary school pupils will end their final examinations on that day and elementary pupils will meet their regular classes for the last time on that date.

School will be dismissed at the usual time of Wednesday afternoon.

Pupils may report to their respective schools on Thursday afternoon at 3 to pick up their report cards. Buses will not run on Thursday.

Plans Made For July 4

Plans are taking shape for the annual Independence Day Celebration in Towle Memorial Park.

Organized and coordinated each year through the Snyder Chamber of Commerce, the July 4 celebration is one of the biggest annual events in the entire region.

The general chairmen of the event this year are Shelby Coker and Carl Whitfield. General plans were mapped at a meeting of sub-committee heads Friday afternoon, and other sessions will be held promptly.

Many activities will be staged in the county park during the day, and the traditional fireworks display will close out the event in the evening.

English Can't See To Far

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — A none too steady spectator in the back of the hall at a political rally got annoyed at the clutter of television gear on stage. "Mr. Chairman, what's all those lights, cameras and things on the stage?"

Bystanders tried to hush the drunk by explaining the equipment belonged to a crew from British Broadcasting Corporation. "Tell them to switch those lights off. We're too far in any case. The English will never be able to see us from this far."

Baccalaureate Service At 8

Baccalaureate service for the 1970 graduating class of Snyder High School will be held at 8 o'clock tonight in the Scurry County Coliseum.

The Rev. Jack Riley, pastor of Avenue D Baptist Church, will preach the Baccalaureate sermon.

Commencement exercises for the class of some 240 members will be held at 8 o'clock Tuesday night in the coliseum.

The Baccalaureate service will feature music by the Snyder High School A Cappella Choir, under the direction of J. D. Smith.

Barbara Carter, a member of the graduating class, will play the processional and recessional music for the service.

The Rev. Leonard L. Gallegos, pastor of Templo Bautista, will give the invocation, and the Rev. Raymond E. Hall, pastor of the First Baptist Church, the benediction.

Horrace Bostick, Snyder High School principal, will preside.

The audience will be asked to join the class in singing "Holy, Holy, Holy," after which announcements will be made by Bostick and the A Capella Choir will sing.

College Plans Go On Display Today

Scurry County residents will have an opportunity this afternoon to see some detailed plans for development of the campus at Western Texas College, the two-year community college to be operated by the Scurry County Junior College District (See page 1, Section B).

An "open house" event has been scheduled between the hours of 2 p.m. and 5 p.m. to display pictures and illustrations of plans for buildings and other campus improvements.

The junior college board and administration arranged for the special showing through the college district's architects, Parker-Croston Associates of Fort Worth.

Displays will be set up in the lobby of the coliseum, and in addition there will be a slide presentation in the meeting room on the south side of the coliseum.

"Although the buildings which have been designed are mostly of the 'plain vanilla' variety, they have been planned to provide an impressive setting as they fit into the overall campus development plan," said Dr. Robert L. Clinton Jr., president of the college.

The board and administration will establish some priorities, of course, in the campus development, and offerings to bidders likely will include several options, the main objective being to get facilities ready to begin classes in the fall of 1971.

The junior college board and administration said they hoped that residents of Snyder and Scurry County and the surrounding area would attend the event today at the coliseum so that they may obtain a clear idea of the objectives in the building progra.

Service Set For Victim Of Mishap

Funeral service has been set for 2 p.m. today at the Bell-Seale Funeral Home Chapel for Houston E. White, 26, who was killed late Friday in a traffic mishap at Abilene.

Bill Minick, minister of the East Side Church of Christ, will officiate at the funeral service. Burial will be in the Snyder Cemetery, under direction of Bell-Seale Funeral Home.

Mr. White, a graduate of Snyder High School, had lived in Abilene since 1965.

He is survived by his wife, the former Kathy Scrivner; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Houston White of Snyder; a sister, Mrs. Ronald Hollister of Abilene; a brother, Jerry White of Snyder; and his maternal grandmother, Mrs. Ellis Neal of Snyder.

Mr. White was killed when his automobile was in collision with a pickup truck at about 6 p.m. Friday at an underpass in the northeast edge of Abilene.

Hike Wanted Debt Ceiling

By JOHN M. PEARCE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration, facing heavier-than-expected needs for financing next year, has decided to ask Congress for an increase of about $16 billion in the national debt ceiling.

The plans, confirmed by sources in Congress and the Treasury Department, would bring the ceiling to a record $393 billion. Treasury officials insist the increase is necessary to keep the public debt under the legal ceiling, now $377 billion.

As of Friday afternoon, Treasury officials said they planned to ask for an increase of between $13 billion and $16 billion, and one said, "I won't rule out anything even above that."

Treasury Secretary David M. Kennedy and Budget Bureau Director Robert P. Mayo will go before the House Ways and Means Committee Monday to submit the administration's proposal.

A White House spokesman said he did not know if President Nixon would submit a message to Congress, as he did last year.

Although it had been clear for some time that an increase would be necessary, one official noted that it would have to be higher than expected because of figures released this week showing a budget deficit of $1.8 billion instead of the predicted $1.5 billion surplus.

He estimated the switch might force Treasury to ask for an extra $3 billion in the ceiling, which already is included in the plans.

The "temporary" $377 billion ceiling was set last year, and reverts to the "permanent" ceiling of $365 billion when the fiscal year ends June 30. The debt already has brushed against the temporary ceiling—coming within $100 million on March 20—and stood at $373.7 billion when Treasury issued its latest report last Tuesday.

The effect of the ceiling increase on inflation is unclear, but it means Treasury assumes it will have to borrow considerably more next year, thus adding to the competition for money.

Administration officials have placed considerable emphasis on assuring budget surpluses so they could repay part of the debt and thus, by reducing competition, help the beleaguered housing market. But the budget report indicated the government will instead have to borrow more than it repays.

Earthquake Felt In Denver

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — An earthquake was felt as a rolling sensation early today over the metropolitan area. No damage was reported immediately.

Some residents north of the Colorado capital city were awakened by the tremor, which was measured at 3.5 on the Richter scale at the Regis College seismology center.

Jaycee-Ettes To Canvass For MS

Snyder Jaycee-Ettes will conduct a campaign here Monday for the Multiple Sclerosis Society.

Karen Lunsford, chairman of the drive, said the members of the organization soliciting funds for the society will be properly identified and that they will be working all day Monday.

Remarriage up to dad

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1970 by Chicago Tribune-N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: After mother died, our father lost no time in finding another lady to keep him company. She is 36. Dad is 57. Dad also said he doubted if he'd ever marry again, but 8 months after mother's death he was a married man. He said we would be the first to know if he decided differently. We were the last to know.

Don't say it's none of our business. We are his children and we love him, and it's very much our business. We just can't see dad marrying a woman who is the same age as his oldest daughter. Are we wrong to be.

DISGUSTED WITH DAD

DEAR DISGUSTED: I think you are. True, since your father said you'd be the first to know should he decide to remarry, he should have kept that promise. But if you really "love" him, concern yourself only with his happiness. (P. S. If the age difference presents a problem between them, it will be their problem.)

DEAR ABBY: My husband [I'll call him Pat] has been acting kind of funny lately — moody and depressed and like that. I finally got him to tell me what was bothering him. Well, it seems he was feeling "guilty" about an affair he had last summer with my best friend [I'll call her Marge]. I was so hurt and heartsick I lost 10 pounds in 10 days.

Pat promised he'd never see Marge again, so I forgave him. But here's my problem:

Pat and I used to pal around with Marge and Mack [he's Marge's husband] and now I don't care to have anything to do with them. Marge told me she knew that Pat had confessed everything to me, and she didn't act one bit ashamed. She's all for continuing the friendship just like nothing happened.

Now Pat says if we don't keep seeing Marge and Mac, Mac will get suspicious and wonder why. Frankly, I don't care what he thinks. Pat says I'm being unfair because he and Mac are real good buddies now and I'm breaking up their friendship. Abby, I just don't want to see this couple any more. Am I wrong? PAT'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: No. Tell Pat if he wants to continue to be a buddy to Mac, he can do it on his own time, but to include you out. And to forget the foursome for the time being, too.

DEAR ABBY: To back up "OKLAHOMA WHITE": I'll ask, how many whites condemned to death could be trusted to go out and buy his burial clothes, be fitted for a coffin, say good-bye to his friends and be back at the appointed place at the scheduled time of his execution? There weren't many executions, but that is how they were carried out in the Creek nation. Indians ARE honorable!

DILUTED CHEROKEE: AURORA, ILLINOIS

CONFIDENTIAL TO WINDY CITY: Don't expect to find an honest partner for a crooked deal.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

Rap Reported To Be In Algeria

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Evening Star has reported that black militant H. Rap Brown has fled the United States to Algeria. The U.S. State Department says it has no information to confirm the report.

The Star said it learned of Brown's whereabouts from "government sources."

Brown is wanted for trial in Ellicott City, Md., on charges of arson, inciting to riot and inciting to arson in connection with a speech he made in Cambridge Md., in 1967. The talk was followed by two hours of rioting. Brown was arrested three days later in Washington.

While out of jail on bond, Brown was arrested on firearms and bond violation charges. The weapons charges brought a five-year prison sentence, but that and the other charges remain in various stages of appeal.

The FBI, in its search for Brown, has expanded its famous "Ten Most Wanted" list to 11 to include him.

Brown was last reported seen March 7.

One Injured In 2-Car Mishap

Mrs. Virginia Raines, 41, 2806 Thirty-sixth Street, sustained minor injuries in a two-car collision at Twenty-sixth Street and Avenue U at 4:05 p.m. Friday. She was taken to Cogdell Memorial Hospital by Snyder Ambulance Service.

Collision Kills 1, Injures Nine

PARIS, Tex. (AP) — A collision of a car and a dump truck 18 miles north of here on U.S. 71 killed Marjorie Stoddard of Dallas and injured nine other persons Friday night.

Officers said eight companions were riding in the car with Miss Stoddard.

Three of the injured were taken to Parkland Hospital at Dallas in poor condition. They were Jery Ruth Smith, 16; Jeri Andrews, 17, and Jerry Killey, 24.

Attendants listed three others in serious condition at a Paris hospital. They were Marvin Boughn, 19; Rebecca Roach, 16 and Vicki Bowers, 19.

Less serious injuries were suffered by Hilda Sinish, identified as driver of the dump truck; Charles Keys, 18, and Chris Larkin, 20.

UN Losing Public Support

NEW YORK (AP) — A high State Department official said today the United Nations is facing a crisis of confidence and called for reforms to make the international agency more efficient and responsive.

Asst. Secretary of State Samuel de Palma said he was speaking for the Nixon administration in reaffirming U.S. government support for the United Nations while at the same time voicing what he termed constructive criticism.

De Palma, who handles international organization affairs, set forth the current U.S. policy toward the United Nations in a prepared speech for the United Nations Association of the U.S.A.

Referring to what he described as the facts of life today concerning the world body founded after World War II, de Palma said:

"We all know there is a crisis of confidence ... from which the United Nations is now suffering."

He said there is much evidence of declining public support for the UN. Many believe the international organization has not achieved its central purpose of maintaining international peace and security, he said.

Meanwhile, he noted, the UN and its related agencies have grown into a large-scale organization with some 30,000 employes around the world running programs costing hundreds of millions of dollars.

The UN has become "a conglomerate which lacks a central board of directors," he said.

Member governments which pay the costs have been often unable to impose a unifying discipline on the system, he stated.

"The UN system should organize itself so as to provide more information to member governments, more central direction and a common order of program priorities," he said.

"Perhaps what is needed now is an increased sense of accountability to member governments on the part of the administration of the UN specialized agencies and programs ....

"It is no longer permissible to expect national delegations to act on the basis of late and sometimes totally inadequate documentation ...."

As for UN peacekeeping failures, de Palma said with the organization's founding after World War II "we began creating machinery to enforce the rule of law throughout the world before we had created the conditions necessary for the acceptance of that law."

Boling Wins Improvement Plan Award

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) — The first place winner in the 1969-70 community improvement program in Texas is Boling, in Wharton County.

The contest was sponsored by the utility companies and is conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Reagan Brown, of the extension service and program coordinator, said Friday the three runnersup were Quitaque in the Panhandle's Briscoe County, Cardinal Meadows near Beaumont in Jefferson County, and Rio Vista near Cleburne in Johnson County.

The top four finishers received awards of $550, $450, $350 and $250. A total of 98 communities will receive awards.

Brown said Boling, which has been in the program five years, has a new community center plus outstanding programs in agricultural development, health and youth.

Quitaque ranked high in beautification, store front improvement and agricultural development.

VFW AWARD PRESENTED — Linda Wesson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Wesson, was presented a $100 savings bond by Mr. and Mrs. Harold Spivey, chairmen of the VFW Voice of Democracy script writing program. Miss Wesson won the contest sponsored by VFW Post 8231 and also the District 8 contest. She received a $25 bond at the district contest. Subsequently she won the third place plaque in the Department of Texas contest, and this plaque was presented by District 8 Commander Don Ginbey. From left are Ginbey, Miss Wesson, Mrs. Spivey and Harold Spivey.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — A 15-year-old runaway girl, who was photographed screaming in horror over the body of one of the four Kent State University students killed in a confrontation with Ohio National Guardsmen, boarded a plane today to return her to her Florida home. Mary Ann Vecchio of Opa Locka, Fla., who ran away from a Miami juvenile home Feb. 10, was flying to Miami with a change of planes in Atlanta, GA.

She turned herself in to police here Thursday night.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Vecchio, arranged for her release with Indianapolis juvenile authorities.

Miss Vecchio was identified as the mystery girl photographed at Kent State kneeling over one of the four students killed May 4 after her parents saw The Associated Press photograph.

Graduation Busy Time For Fentons

Graduation time will be very busy for the Myron Fentons.

Both of their sons and a daughter-in-law are receiving college degrees this spring.

Their younger son, Jon, will receive the bachelor of arts degree Friday at Baylor University. Their older son, Ronnie, will receive his doctor of medicine degree from the University of Texas Southwestern Medical School on June 1. Ronnie's wife, the former Kay Haymaker of Corpus Christi, will receive the master of arts degree in computer science at the University of Texas at Austin. She and Ronnie received the bachelor of arts degree in 1966 at Baylor.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronnie Fenton will move immediately after graduation to San Antonio where he will intern at Wilford Hall Hospital at Lackland Air Force Base. Mr. and Mrs. John Fenton will live in Austin where he will be employed as service supervisor for the Triple A Automotive Club. Mrs. John Fenton plans to enroll at the University of Texas for her senior year.

Grandparents of the Fenton boys are Mrs. Maudie Blakely and Mr. and Mrs. Dick Webb of Snyder.

Former Dodgers Pete Reiser, Rocky Bridges and Norm Sherry are coaches with the California Angels.

MPs Escort Lane, Fonda From Post

FT. MEADE, Md. (AP) — Actress Jane Fonda and author Mark Lane led a troupe of anti-war protesters to another military post Friday and received the usual reception from Army authorities.

They and 12 others were escorted from this post by military policemen after they had gathered in front of the main post exchange and passed out antiwar literature.

Miss Fonda and Lane, author of "Rush Into Judgement," which questioned the Warren Commission report on the assassination of President Kennedy, earlier spoke to 1,000 students at the nearby University of Maryland.

Lane told that rally in College Park he thought Vice President Spiro T. Agnew should be indicted for allegedly crossing state lines to incite disorders.

Jefferson County Tops In Crops

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Jefferson County, which includes Louisville, ranks among the top plant-growing counties in the nation for dollar-volume produced.

The county agricultural agent says the volume comes from ornamental plants, flowers, nursery and greenhouse plants produced in the nearly 65-square mile area.

Tallest Telescope To Be Tested

By BEVERLY PETERSON
Associated Press Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — Astronomers at the 13,780-foot-high Mauna Kea Observatory may have to breathe piped-in oxygen, but they will get a smog-free look at the skies Sunday night when they use the world's highest telescope for the first time.

"The atmosphere at the summit is down to 60 per cent of sea level," Dr. John Jeffries, the observatory director, said. "We've had to pipe in liquid oxygen from a trailer outside."

Dr. Jeffries said personnel will sleep at the 9,009-foot level and commute to the summit in jeeps. Before they go to the top for the first time, they will have to spend a day at the lower level to acclimatize themselves.

Work on the observatory was started in 1967, and it took more than a year just to build a road to the summit. Workers, wearing oxygen masks and heavy sweaters, had to inch the telescope's two-ton mirror up the snowy slopes last month.

The 88-inch telescope and domed observatory atop the dormant volcano cost $8 million, supplied by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the National Science Foundation and the state of Hawaii.

AFTER MAJOR BURNS

New Technique Prevents Scars

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — A new treatment to prevent severe scarring after major burns has been reported by the chief surgeon at the Shrine Burns Institute in Galveston, Tex.

Dr. Duane L. Larson told a news conference Friday that doctors at the institute found a technique for preventing scars by keeping burn wounds wrapped tightly in elastic bandages for long periods.

"We found that the pressure of braces applied for the prevention of muscular contractions was also preventing the very thick scars that usually form when severe burns heal.

"A new type of brace for the hand required a tight elastic bandage to hold it in place. Then we found that the children fitted with the new brace were coming back with very soft, pliable hands almost no scarring. Now we are seeing the same thing on legs and necks."

Larson said the institute is developing a face mask to determine whether it would provide similar results.

He also reported a new life saving fluid replacement treatment for burned babies.

Larson said the old method called for giving a diluted saline solution to burned children less than 2 years old. But he said deaths have dropped "considerably" among critically burned babies given normal undiluted saline solution.

Research and clinical trials, he said, have shown that the diluted saline treatment causes "water intoxication" that worsens burn shock and leads to convulsions.

"We have lost only one child since January and we have had about 50 severely burned children during that time," he said.

Larson arrived Friday for a two-day medical symposium on burn treatment sponsored by the Al Bahr Shrine and University of California at San Diego.

Christmas In 1906 Here Disappointed Newcomer

By ALINE PARKS

The Christmas of 1906 was a decided disappointment to 18-year-old Minnie Seabourn.

The Seabourn family, only recently arrived in Scurry County that Christmas, was invited to the "Christmas tree" at the Crowder school. The young Seabourns, already missing their friends and old home in Parker County, were very disappointed to find only two other young folks at the Crowder gathering.

A wagon sheet covered the Christmas tree in the Crowder building as the crowd gathered. Finally the wagon sheet was pulled back and there stood a sparse-branched old hackberry masquerading as a Christmas tree.

"Our bunch was ready to go back to East Texas where they had pretty cedar trees," Minnie remembers.

Miss Minnie Seabourn is now Mrs. C. E. Trussell of 2311 Twenty-sevneth Street. She observed her eighty-second birthday this year, and is the last of the Seabourn clan that made the move to Scurry County in 1906.

IN STYLE — A red velvet hat was the height of fashion when Minnie Seabourn was around 20.

The Seabourn family was probably typical of the farm families moving into West Texas in the early 1900s as more land went from pastures into plowed fields. The Seabourns' oldest daughter, Effie, was married to John Ramsey and already living here when the family came.

The trip from Parker County took three weeks, partly because the roads were so muddy, Mrs. Trussell said. The move was made in four wagons and a buggy. The oldest son, Will, drove the first wagon carrying his family. Mr. Seabourn came in the next wagon with a daughter, Annie. Mrs. Trussell and her sister Ruth drove the third wagon, and two more of the children, Maggie and Joe, drove the fourth. Mrs. Seabourn and the youngest daughter, Velma, came in the buggy. A third son, Jim, didn't make the trip.

Mrs. Trussell remembers how the family camped out on the trip, sleeping in tents. Their last night on the road was spent in Kent County. A heavy snow fell during the night, and when they left the tents the next morning the countryside was completely covered. The family reached Snyder late in the evening and spent one night in a wagon yard north of the square where there had been a skating rink, Mrs. Trussell said.

Mr. Seabourn located land in the Bethel community about five miles west of Snyder. The family's first home there was a two-room house with a big dugout just a few steps from the back door. The dugout was used for cooking and eating. Crops on the farm included cotton, maize and kaffir corn plus some chickens, hogs and a few cows. One of their neighbors, Bill Shuler, raised broom corn and Mrs. Trussell believes he was the major producer in the county. The 1910 Texas Almanac says Scurry County produced 10 tons of broom corn in 1909.

The younger Seabourn children walked to school at Bethel. The older ones worked in the fields and Mrs. Seabourn needed someone to help her with the household. Sewing and cooking for that many hard-working people kept two women busy.

Neighbors of the Seabourns included the Davises, Cardens, Townsends, Flippens, Abbotts, Bynums, Dennises, and Womacks. The J. Wright Mooar ranch was also near, and the young people often gathered there on Sunday afternoons, Mrs. Trussell said. Entertainment for the young people was mostly get-togethers in homes. A favorite game at these "parties" was Snap, and they sang for accompaniment to "swinging games." Refreshments were not considered necessary for ordinary occasions, but sometimes there were ice cream suppers or candy breakings.

The Seabourn home was the scene of the wedding of Minnie and the late D. E. (Jake) Glover in July 1912. Mrs. Seabourn made Minnie a new white organdy dress, modestly ankle-length in the fashion of the day. Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Wren were witnesses. The Rev. Gatlin read the ceremony at sundown. All the bride's family came for the occasion and stayed for a supper which included assorted pies and cakes but no special wedding cake. After the supper, they went in a body to the Methodist meeting which began that night at the Bethel building.

Three other daughters married in Scurry County. Maggie married Jim Davis, Annie married Arlie Eicke, and Velma married Wray Huckabee.

The Glovers' first home was in the Turner community on the farm Mr. Glover's parents owned. The teacherage at Bethel was moved to the Glover farm, and Mrs. Trussell remembers hauling water up to the new house site because there was no well there. The Glover's son, Leo Dale, was born in 1913 while they lived there. They moved to Sweetwater in 1930 and lived there until Mr. Glover's death in 1946. Mrs. Trussell returned to Snyder and later lived in Fort Worth. She married Mr. Trussell in 1949 and they settled down in Snyder. Mr. Trussell died in 1967.

Mrs. Trussell's parents were both born in Tennessee. Mr. Seabourn enlisted in the Union army in 1864 and moved to Collin County, Texas, in 1869. At the time of his death in 1936 he was believed to been the only Union veteran in this county. Mrs. Seabourn died in 1921.

Mrs. Trussell jokes about being in the first stages of old age now that she has passed 80. She enjoys visiting and attends services at the Thirty-seventh Street Church of Christ. Her hobbies have included scrapbook collections and many items in her scrapbooks bring back memories of times now past.

Chevron Pollution Eliminated

AUSTIN (AP) — The Chevron oil well rupture off the Louisiana coast has been ruled out as the source of beach-pollution in Florida, but it is not yet known if Texas beach pollution is identical with Florida's, a governor's aide says.

John Shanahan told an impromptu news conference Friday that the federal water quality administration laboratory at Athens, Ga., eliminated Chevron and also the tanker Delin Apollo, which discharged petroleum in Tampa Bay in April, as possible sources of the material that washed up on Florida beaches.

Shanahan said matchup tests are under way in several laboratories to determine if the tar-like unrefined petroleum deposits on Texas beaches are identical with the deposits on Florida's beaches. Results should be available in about a week, he said.

Northerly winds have washed out to sea most of the deposits that dotted the high tide line on Galveston's beach earlier this week, he said.

The Galveston beach is "generally clean," he said.

However, deposits are increasing slightly in the Port Aransas area, said Joe Teller, deputy director of the Texas Water Quality Board.

Counties with cleanup problems have been advised they can get matching funds from the Parks and Wildlife Department. A $200,000 fund was set up for beach cleaning by the 1969 legislature.

"If and when we are able to positively identify the offender or offenders, prompt legal action will be taken," Shanahan said.

He said aerial photos of Texas beaches "show only a thin line of the petroleum tar along the high tide line of most beaches. There is no reason for beach visitors to be concerned with anything but having a good time."

Texas Oil Increase

AUSTIN (AP) — The Railroad Commission says 112 oil and 48 gas wells were completed this past week in Texas.

This raised oil completions for the year to 2,067, compared with 1,967 last year. Gas well completions total 784, compared with 1,059.

The commission said 192 wells were plugged, including 63 dry holes.

Eighteen wildcat gas wells were drilled—eight in the Corpus Christi District, six in the Houston District, three in San Antonio's No. 2 District and one in San Antonio's No. 1 District.

Eleven wildcat oil wells were drilled—2 each in San Antonio's No. 1 District and the Kilgore and San Angelo Districts, and one each in the Houston, Corpus Christi, Abilene, Midland and Wichita Falls Districts.

Market Active And Dropping

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market ended a week of steep decline with a day of active trading that dropped the Dow Jones average slightly lower.

The Dow average of 30 industrial stocks fell on Friday by 3.08 to 662.17, its lowest level since March 1, 1963, when it closed at 659.72.

Among the 1,589 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange, losers outnumbered gainers 797 to 515.

The Dow gained by nearly 8 points early in the session. Then the average declined by more than 8 points before closing at a loss of 3.

The Associated Press 60-stock average slipped 1.1 to 233.2, its lowest since Nov. 19, 1962. The New York Stock Exchange index of some 1,200 common stocks declined 0.02 to 39.44.

Meanwhile, Henry A. Kissinger, President Nixon's national security adviser, and Budget Director Robert P. Mayo scheduled a meeting for sometime in the next 10 days with Wall Street and business leaders to discuss the effect of the government's policies on the stock market.

Millionaire Returns Home To Gouple

MELBOURNE, Fla. (AP) — The man who bought bedridden Vincent J. Cattee's $11,000 home at a tax sale for $15 and court costs is going to give it back, County Commissioner Richard Muldrew said today.

Muldrew said he had talked with an attorney for millionaire Cecil Platt, who bought the house at a public auction to satisfy a $2 drainage tax, and was assured that Cattee would keep his property.

"I think I could just hug Mr. Platt's neck," said Cattee's 39-year-old wife, Gradie Mae.

"I've just been out in the garage going through all my files making sure that I don't have any bills which I haven't paid. My husband has not known about this. He has cancer and I've just gone through so much, so many operations."

Platt purchased $2 delinquent tax certificates on Cattee's home and 23 other parcels of land at an auction on the courthouse steps more than a year ago.

Mrs. Cattee said she thought the drainage bills she received were copies of originals sent to a savings and loan association which handles her mortgage payments.

"If I had known what was happening," she said, "I would have gone into my piggybank for a couple of dollars."

Muldrew stepped into the case after Gov. Claude Kirk told him it was "giving the state a black eye" and to do something about it.

Cattee has been confined to his bed for seven years. Two brain tumor operations left the left side of his body paralyzed and he broke his hip in a fall two years ago.

Rudy Underdown, Brevard County tax collector, and county assessor Clark Maxwell urged that the Legislature pass a special act requiring all special and district taxes to be included in a single bill. Such an act, they said, would "prevent these tragedies."

Dallas Judge Is Criticized

DALLAS (AP) — County Judge Lew Sterrett came in for attack Thursday from county Commissioner Jim Tyson, who said that Sterrett is "solely responsible for the rift that splits the black community and white community" in Dallas.

With Sterrett present, Tyson told a commissioner's court meeting that he didn't think "the judge really represents the people of Dallas."

Tyson and Sterrett have often disagreed on the conduct of the War on Poverty program in Dallas.

Tyson said that Sterrett had created "distrust and polarization" in the county and, referring to the judge's 22-year tenue, said "It is a strange thing that for 22 years everybody on the commissioners court has been wrong except the judge."

Tyson added, "I get violent letters filled with hate, questioning my patriotism because of this one man spreading hate."

Following the regular meeting Commissioner Mel Price also criticized Sterrett.

"He has split the people from one another and governmental bodies from each other," Price said. "Judge Sterrett has created a chasm you can't step across when you have to work together. It will wreck this county if it continues."

TODAY'S SCARLET LETTER!

GAO Is Watchdog For America's Public Purse

By RICHARD E. MEYER
AP Newsfeatures Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The way Chuck Hughers recalls it, one rocket fell 100 yards to one side and the other landed 75 yards to the other.

"They bracketed the building," he says. But Hughes and his men were used to it. "We never got reckless, but we didn't let it bother us."

Combat veterans? No. Auditors. The kind you usually find in white shirts sitting behind desks adding columns of figures.

They were government auditors, men from the General Accounting Office—the GAO—and its headquarters in one of the huge, gray-brown buildings on the edge of the capital's Chinatown.

This is the watchdog of the watchdogs of the public purse, an arm of Congress that sees that the money goes where it is meant to go.

Yet, despite claiming to have saved the taxpayers more than $1 billion in the last five years, the GAO is not always beloved, as you will see.

The boss is Elmer B. Staats, a tall, trim 55-year-old man with a reputation for being stern and decisive. He runs a staff of 4,500 accountants, lawyers, mathematicians, economists, clerks, statisticians and specialists in management and computers.

Not all the work is done at the office, however, which was what took Chuck Hughes to Vietnam in a farflung but representative GAO investigation.

Vietnam was where the action was, where the government had poured $1.3 billion into wartime construction: airfields, loading ramps, housing for a quarter million troops and 3.8 million square feet of storage for fuel, oil and ammunition.

Most of the work had been assigned to a combine of four contractors.

Under intense pressure from the government to get the work done, the combine reached a peak production of $41 million worth of work per month—and hit that stride one month ahead of schedule.

It imported men from Korea and the Philippines, solved major engineering problems on extremely short notice and trucked its equipment and supplies into isolated and uninhabited areas.

But when GAO auditors looked into things, they found that much of the work had been awarded under a cost-plus contract, which reimbursed the builders for all of their expenses and gave them an additional fee —providing little incentive to keep costs down.

The auditors also found that the speed at which the contractors were required to mobilize to meet Department of Defense demands had created all kinds of problems in management control.

To wit:

—Buyers often specified proprietary items—even brand names—available from only one manufacturer. This limited competition and increased the cost to the government.

—The contractors purchased materials of higher quality than commonly used in construction —and paid premium prices.

—As materials and equipment arrived in Vietnam, they were dumped at contractor depots, unidentified, unsegregated and unprotected from the weather or theft.

The GAO reported to Congress. Congressmen became more and more interested in wartime waste, and the GAO decided to open a fulltime office in Saigon—its first office in a war zone.

The General Accounting Office was established 49 years ago by Congress as one of its key ways of keeping a check on executive agencies and departments. As an arm of Congress, it operates independently of all other agencies. And it's designed to be nonpartisan.

Today, GAO men and women report costs and program results, losses and gains and overruns and underruns at 50 audit sites in all 12 departments and 60 agencies of the executive branch scattered throughout the United States and around the world.

Their findings are compiled in 16 regional offices and 30 suboffices in the United States and overseas in Frankfurt, New Delhi, Manila, Saigon and Honolulu, and sent to Washington.

Here the GAO reports to Congress, and often to the public, on whether government funds and other resources are being used for authorized activities, are being properly accounted for and reported, are being managed efficiently and economically and are achieving the objectives intended by Congress.

In measurable amounts, the GAO figures it has saved the taxpayers in fiscal 1968 a total of $232.8 million — including $30 million in savings it felt would recur in future years. In fiscal 1969, it measured savings at $187.6 million.

Often the reports carry a sting.

They have disclosed that much of $1.2 billion granted by the Federal Water Pollution Control Administration was used to build waste treatment plants on waterways where cities and industries were allowed to continue polluting nearby. That Army Reserve units selected from across the nation were not ready to mobilize and deploy as rapidly as planned in the event of war or national emergency. That the United States will contribute about $172 million to United Nations organizations this year without assurance that the money will be used effectively and efficiently, and that the Navy could have saved millions of dollars by requiring contractors to submit information certified as accurate, complete and current to support costs estimates for bombs for Vietnam.

To ferret out this kind of information, the GAO is armed with authority to examine the directly pertinent books and records of all companies holding negotiated government contracts and the records of all government agencies — except the Central Intelligence Agency and other spy groups.

Some of the GAO's most persistent problems of access are with the Department of Defense and its contractors.

Generally, says Staats, "we have had fine cooperation" with top levels at the Pentagon. But, he adds, "down through the hierarchy in the agencies and out into the installations, they tend to be more and more restrictive."

Disputes with the Department of Defense are usually handled privately. But occasionally the GAO gets piqued enough to take the matter to Congress.

Two months ago, for instance, the GAO report that the Department of Defense wasn't keeping a central file on the new types of weapons it was acquiring or their costs.

Moreover, it said, the weapons were growing more costly as they were being developed: a dozen out of 57 of them were performing more poorly than expected and contractors were taking from six months to three years longer than expected to finish them.

To come up with its report, the GAO told Congress, it had to fight "substantial delays" by over to the Department of Justice the Air Force in making the information available.

In instances where it suspects fraud, the GAO turns the matter over the department of Justice.

But one veteran GAO attorney can't recall a single instance in which a contractor or government employe has been convicted of fraud because of a GAO audit.

Most GAO reports are critical. Only one in recent months, praising the Strategic Air Command for its readiness, has been complimentary.

The House military operations subcommittee, headed by Rep. Chet Holifield, D-Calif., whose state is home for several large defense firms, compiled some of the angriest testimony on record against the GAO five years ago after the GAO became increasingly critical of defense contracts.

The GAO turned up example after example of what it deemed excessive prices, improper reimbursements, unnecessary costs and unwarranted charges.

"Out of the 40 cases where there was publicity that they were referring them to the Justice Department, only one might go to court as a criminal action —and then it would get dismissed, but there wouldn't be any publicity on this."

"GAO tells the executive agencies how to run their business... and interferes with the business judgment and operations of contractors," said H.M. Horner, chairman of United Aircraft Corp.

A Junior Editors Quiz About GUNPOWDER

QUESTION: Why does gunpowder explode when it's burned?

ANSWER: With a campfire (A, B,), gases and heat are produced, but since there is plenty of space around, the gases which expand with the heat pass off without being noticed. In 1242 A.D., Roger Bacon reported that certain chemicals — such are charcoal, sulphur and saltpeter — when combined and heated, would burn very rapidly or explode. This is because of gases formed when these chemicals suddenly combine with the oxygen of the air. The gases expand with great violence because they need much more room than the materials took up beforehand. The first cannons were made by mixing materials of this kind to make gunpowder, putting this inside a strong tube with a stone or metal ball in front, and setting off the powder through a hole. The suddenly expanding gases would then blow out the ball with great force. Nowadays, both gunpowder and bullet are combined in a metal cartridge. Since guns and gunpowder are so very dangerous, it is best not to experiment with them.

WINS SCHOLARSHIP — Ronnie Maddux, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Maddux, 4002 Austin, has won a scholarship to Odessa Junior College. He signed a letter of intent last Friday. Ronnie was an outstanding member of the Snyder tennis team which won the state championship this year. He was 6-1 in singles play and 26-6 with Max Falls on the doubles team. The Odessa school won the national JuCo crown last year.

A's, Cards Win Tilts

The Athletics unleashed a 12-hit attack to shoot down the Yankees 12-5 and the Cardinals slugged the Braves 12-1 in Little League action in Towle Park Friday night.

Leading 9-5 going into the last inning, the A's added 10 more runs to remove all doubt about the outcome. Chester Cobb had an exceptional night at the plate, sparking the A's attack with four hits. Included were two home runs and a double. Charles Cobb was credited with a triple. Mark Mueller and David Reed each got two singles while single base hits were credited to Royce Corbell, Bryan Walton and Dale Hobbs.

Charles Hammond and Chester Cobb divided the pitching chores and they limited the Yanks to only three hits. Randy Rinker got two of them and the other one was registered by Ricky Tate.

The Cards took a commanding lead over the Braves with six runs in the 2nd frame. Ricky Beard came up with another superb mound performance, giving up just two hits. Tim Falls got both of them and one of them was a triple.

For the Cards, Phil Robinson homered, Mark Anderson tripled and Beard and Bobby Allen each doubled. Two singles by Randy Browning and one single by Sid Everton accounted for the other Cardinal safeties.

The Little Leaguers begin play every week night except Wednesday beginning Monday, May 25.

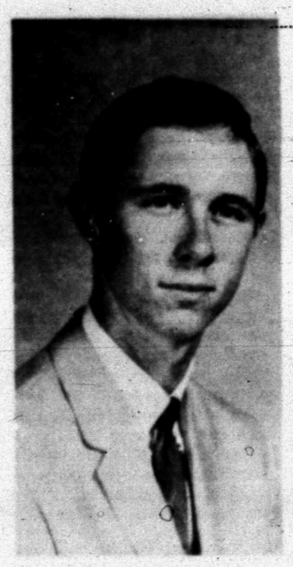
Rebs Get Cooksey

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP)—University of Texas at Arlington basketball coach Barry Dowd has signed Perry Cooksey of Odessa Ector to a letter of intent.



BENNY WARD

Benny Ward Gets 4-Year Scholarship

Benny Ward recently signed a four year basketball scholarship with Angelo State University. A former Tiger star, Benny averaged 19.5 points per game plus pulling down 10 rebounds per game during his senior year in Snyder High School in 1968.

He attended Lubbock Christian College last year on a golf scholarship and was No. 2 man on the golf team.

During his high school career, Benny was named to the All-Tournament teams at the Irving and Canyon Reef Tournaments during his senior year. He also was selected to the District 5-AAA All-District team, the All-South Plains team, the All-Area team, and the All-West Texas team.

"He will be playing at the guard position next year," said Angelo State Coach Phil George, "and should be a real contender for a starting position. He stands 6-1½ and weighs 170 pounds. He is a fine shooter, who hits from all over the court and also handles the ball real well.

"He jumps real well and has a lot of basketball savy and sees the court real well while handling the ball."

Scotch Foursome Begins Today

The Snyder Ladies Golf Association will sponsor a Scotch Foursome at the Country Club today with tee-off time set for 1 p.m.

Entry fee is $4 per couple for club members and $3.75 per person for non-members.

ALL-DISTRICT — These five Snyder High School baseball players were named to the All-District 3-AAA team this year. They are, from left to right, Standing, Stewart Sims, Wesley Bishop, Jim Patrick and Larry Wall; and, Kneeling, Merce Hernandez. Merce was a unanimous choice as a pitcher, and the right-handed senior was to pitch the first game of a best 2 of 3 series against Wichita Falls Hirschi Saturday in bi-district action. Sims and Bishop were named to the first team as a third baseman and second baseman respectively. Patrick was placed on the second unit as both a pitcher and a shortstop while Wall was named as a second unit catcher. Sims and Wall will be back next season.

REINSTATED NAGEL IS HAPPY

By CHUCK NOLAND
Associated Press Writer

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — "The future looks very bright," said Ray Nagel after being reinstated Friday night as University of Iowa football coach only four days after he had been relieved of his duties.

"Iowa has the greatest fans and friends in the country," said the 43-year-old Nagel, "and we're looking forward to the coming season with enthusiasm."

The university's Board in Control of Athletics announced Tuesday it had relieved Nagel of his duties and accepted the resignation of Athletic Director Forest Evashevski, both actions effective June 30. The board voted to fire Nagel at a special meeting Monday night.

The action came not long after disclosure that the state auditor's office was investigating falsified expense accounts filed by assistant football coaches.

The disclosure was the latest development in a long feud between Nagel and Evashevski, reportedly centered on Evashevski's dissatisfaction with the conduct of the football program.

Nagel told a news conference Wednesday he was told he had been fired because of "disharmony" in the department. He said he was "shocked and incensed" at the action and demanded a full explanation.

The athletic board met Friday night and voted to reinstate Nagel for the duration of his present five-year contract, which expires Dec. 31.

A statement issued by Prof. Samuel Fahr, chairman of the board, said Nagel and his assistants had promised to make full accounting in the future of all funds used for recruiting prospective athletes.

The statement said the action was taken after a group of Iowa football players said they wanted to play under Nagel this fall.

But the statement dealt mainly with the expense account investigation, and indicated that incident may have played a larger part in the original action than had been thought—and that a state attorney general's report on UI athletic department expense accounts may have been a factor in Nagel's reinstatement.

Suit Seeks Rule Change

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — What does Curt Flood want?

That's the question that has been kicked around this week outside the courtroom of Judge Irving Ben Cooper, who is hearing the suit against baseball in which the former St. Louis outfielder contends the sport operates in restraint of trade through the reserve system.

In developing their case, Flood's attorneys have called on Flood, Jackie Robinson, Hank Greenberg and Jim Brosnan, all former players, who condemned the reserve system for being weighted in favor of the owners and, therefore, unfair to the players.

Overlooked, generally, has been the fact that no one is calling for the total abolition of the reserve system—only modification. That's what Flood wants—a more reasonable and less restrictive system that corrects the owner-player imbalance.

During the week, Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Players Association, the organization that is footing the bill for Flood's suit, took the witness stand and told the U.S. District Court hearing what the players and Flood want.

He did so by talking about the modifications that have been proposed by the players in contract negotiations with the owners. If this trial were to establish a ruling that ultimately led to revision of the reserve system it likely would take its form from the base of those suggestions.

The main provision calls for a clause that, instead of containing an option on a player's service for life, reduces it to a specific number of years, the player after that juncture "to be given an opportunity to establish his market value by obtaining bids from other clubs."

The owners contend it would cost the club that originally signed the player the money it had spent in training the player. They also contend that under that provision all talent would gravitate to the wealthiest clubs.

Miller has added two qualifying provisos to attack those problems.

After the player had established his market value, his original team would have the right to retain him—and, therefore, not lose its training investment—by matching the bid. And no one club would be permitted to sign more than a given number of players in any period of time.

SWC Has Heavy Grid Schedule

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Southwest Conference will open and close the 1970 national football season.

Baylor opens the national collegiate season Friday night, Sept. 11 against Missouri in St. Louis. Texas and Arkansas help close it on Dec. 5 in Austin.

The 58-game schedule is the heaviest in conference history because of the NCAA rules change to allow member schools to slate 11 games. Six of the eight member schools scheduled the extra game. Rice and Texas were the only ones passing.

Arkansas plays in Little Rock Sept. 12 against highly-regarded Stanford to start the television season. The kickoff time has been set at 8:30 p.m.

The Razorbacks also play Oklahoma State, Tulsa and Wichita State in non-conference games.

Texas, the national champion, tackles California, UCLA and Oklahoma, the latter on national television in Dallas Oct. 10.

Texas A&M meets Wichita State, LSU, Ohio State and Michigan, owners of a composite 27-12 record. Baylor's non-conference foes were 26-12-2. Besides Missouri, they are Army, Pittsburgh and Louisiana State.

Texas Tech battles Tulane, Kansas, California at Santa Barbara and Mississippi State.

Texas Christian's slate includes Texas at Arlington, Oklahoma State, Purdue and Wisconsin.

Southern Methodist opens with Oklahoma and tackles Tennessee, New Mexico State and Northwestern in that order.

DALLAS (AP) — Here is a composite schedule of the 1970 Southwest Conference football season:

Sept. 11—Baylor vs. Missouri at St. Louis, 8 p.m.

Sept. 12—Stanford at Arkansas (LR), 8:30 p.m., TV; Oklahoma at SMU, 7:30 p.m.; Wichita at Texas A&M, 7:30 p.m.; UT Arlington at TCU, 7:30 p.m.; Tulane at Texas Tech, 7:30 p.m.

Registration For Junior Golfers Set

Registration for the Summer Recreation Golf program will be held from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. Monday and from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday at the Snyder Country Club Pro Shop.

Instruction will be given to junior golfers from June 9 to June 17, and the program will be highlighted by a Junior Invitation Golf Tournament July 21 and July 22.

Boys and girls from age 10 through high school age are eligible to participate in the program. It is a part of the Summer Recreation Program sponsored by the school, and J. P. Ward, varsity golf coach, will be the instructor. There is no charge for participation.

Parents are invited to join the Snyder Junior Golf Association. Annual dues are $2 and the proceeds are used in the promotion of junior golf in Snyder.

Cotton Bowl To Get New Turf

DALLAS (AP) — Astro turf will move into the Cotton Bowl this summer. This means that about $3 million will be spent to refurbish the 72,000-seat stadium.

Previously the arena had installed new chairback seats, new dressing rooms, additional entrance ramps, additional concessions, new scoreboards and additional color telecast booths. Finally $350,000 of Astroturf is included inthe renovation.

In 1965, Astroturf was installed in the Houston Astrodome. Since then a number of other stadiums have installed it.

Braves, A's Win In FL

The Cardinals outhit the Braves 10-7 but they still came out on the short end of a 9-7 score and the Athletics tripped the Yankees 12-10 in Farm League action in Towle Park Friday night.

Both tilts were close all the way, but the Braves had more firepower from their hits with three of the seven being for extra bases. Jerry Huddleston and Allen Gleghorn each socked triples and Doyle Browning hit a double.

The only Cardinal extra base hit was a double by Don Bennett. The Cards' Mark Duke and the Braves' Browning hooked up in a tight mound duel.

The Yanks outhit the A's 7-4 and four of the seven Yankee safeties were of the extra base variety with Mark Hester hitting a triple and Jay Hammond, Jimmy Digby and Eddy Woolsey each rapping doubles.

Mike Jones collected a triple and a double and David Zajicek stroked a 3-bagger for the A's. Three run rallies in each of the last two frames turned the tide in favor of the A's despite the Yanks' superiority at the plate.

Terry Lee, for the A's, and Ronnie Wooldridge for the Yanks, both did creditable jobs on the mound.

A Look At Urban Planners

Career Corner

by Joyce Lain

what job would you like to see explored in this column?

Dear Joyce: I would like to suggest the profession of urban planner. — R.O.H., PITTSBURGH

Some experts say that by the year 2000, we'll have to build the equivalent of all that has been built in America since the Pilgrims landed on Plymouth Rock. Every year we add about two million people — a city roughly the size of Philadelphia — to our population.

ORDERLY, physical, economic, social and cultural development of the communities where we live requires comprehensive quarterbacking to merge such component pieces as land use, housing, transportation, business and industry, recreation, community facilities, tax rates, budget needs, utility services, waste disposal and air and water pollution.

THE PROFESSIONAL who pulls all the pieces together is the urban planner. He (or she) may also be called a city planner, or, if working with areas larger than a municipality — a regional planner.

JOBSCOPE. This is highly technical, complex, sometimes grubby work, but also exciting with imaginative grand-scale concepts. Although much time is necessarily spent making laborious studies, the current emphasis is toward more public contact to help proposed projects materialize. During preparation of a proposal — ranging from location of a single building to the creation or redevelopment of a community or major area — the planner confers with local, state and federal officials, land developers, civic leaders and entrepreneurs (those who assume the risk and management of private business ventures). The planner often speaks at meetings and appears before legislatures and committees to gain community support.

A planner's life can be frustrating as he deals with groups in conflict, and with those who have power but inadequate understanding of what urban planning is all about. The "armchair general" problem is offset, however, by the planner's pride in seeing one of his ideas improve the quality of urban life.

MOBILITY. Younger planners typically change jobs often (two to four years). Most work for local governments, chiefly city, county and regional planning agencies. There is increasing demand by state and federal agencies. About one-third are consultants; work for large land developers (including corporations engaged in industrial expansion or building new towns); research organizations; or teach in colleges and universities.

PAY AND NUMBERS. Entrance salaries (with a master's degree) vary between $8-10,000 according to the American Institute of Planners (AIP), the national organization of professional urban planners. Experienced planning directors can earn more than $30,000. AIP says planning professionals are scarce. Some 8,000 are in this field now, and the Federal Labor Department estimates 800 annual job openings through 1975.

SEVERAL DOORS. The preferred background is a master's degree in planning (generally two years). Some enter the field from architecture, social sciences, law, engineering or statistics. You can start some jobs with a bachelor's degree.

Leading urbanist Donald C. Stone, of the University of Pittsburgh's Graduate School of Public and International Affairs, says the planner is concerned with many diverse subjects. A few: political and administrative processes; urban analysis; problems of land use and area development; creation of conditions which foster employment and industry; public services and facilities; mobilization of community resources; quality of environment; local-state-federal relationships; urban renewal; executive leadership and human motivation; public finance; and computer science.

WHERE TO WRITE — If you want my one-page resource sheet of several addresses where you may write for further information on urban planners — and planning assistants — send 15 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me at this newspaper. Write "URBAN" on outside envelope.

Lubbock Citizens Unite And Eye Reconstruction

LUBBOCK (AP) — Bolstered by moral and material support on both federal and state governments, Lubbock citizens have regrouped in the two weeks since a tornado raked their city to turn tragedy into progress.

The first step toward reconstruction was to form two committees to handle immediate problems of cleanup, and a citizens committee, called the Verner Commission, to plan for the future.

The 11-member Verner Commission, headed by A. C. Verner, president of the city's First National Bank, appointed six subcommittees, each responsible for a division of the damaged area.

One of the two committees formed to tackle immediate problems is the combined Lubbock United Fund and the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce. It will oversee development of a "Lubbock disaster relief fund" to handle more than $700,000 already donated and to raise more to aid tornado victims.

The other committee is to recommend disposal of tons of rubble amassed by collapsing buildings, uprooted trees, shattered glass, twisted power lines and assorted material damage.

Latest estimates fixed damage at close to $200 million. Fatalities now stand at 26. Hundreds were injured and hundreds more left homeless in the May 11 tornado.

Besides aid provided when the Small Business Administration declared Lubbock a disaster area and other federal funds, 600 displaced families have been assured rent-free homes at least until the end of the summer.

Asst. Secy. Lawrence Cox of the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development, made a helicopter survey of the damage Thursday. He then declared the 600 families now living in homes provided by the government could stay there rent-free for an additional three months. He said that following that period, the families could then stay in the homes for a "nominal" rent.

Meanwhile, rubble clearance progressed slowly as city officials encouraged property-owners to apply for aid in clearing their private property.

The U. S. Army Corps of Engineers took over direction of clean-up when President Nixon declared Lubbock a federal disaster area. Private contractors, under contract to the Corps, are clearing streets and hauling away rubble piled on curbs and in alleys by private individuals and businesses. Clean-up from private property itself awaits the application for aid from property owners.

Salvation Army officials say they have received truckloads of materials — both food and clothing — from all over Texas and as far away as Wichita, Kan.

Arrivals included 5,600 five-pound bags of fruit from Edinburg, Tex. The fruit was immediately put into food orders or distributed door-to-door in the devastated areas.

Mountains of donated goods, mostly clothing, is being housed in an East side warehouse, where it is being sorted and distributed.

Meanwhile, the Verner Commission and its subcommittees are looking to the future. Considerations have included building a freeway through the devastated areas or improving streets before businesses rebuild.

The possibility of building a civic center in one of the damaged areas is also being considered.

The commission and area subcommittees are to determine the needs of damaged areas, explore the possibilities of upgrading land uses where appropriate and studying the funding and programs available to help.

Another opportunity afforded by the tragedy was in one of the hardest hit areas — the Mexican-American Guadalupe neighborhood.

Commission members are studying the possibilities of redeveloping the area. Dr. Dudley Thompson of the Texas Tech University Department of Architecture already is at work on the project through the availability of a three-year study of the Guadalupe area by architecture students.

Fink Week Is Near

FINK, Tex. (AP) — National Fink Week, with the motto of Finks of The World Arise, is near and big things are planned for busy downtown Fink, Mayor Pat Albright disclosed. Downtown Fink is the Albright General Store.

The focal point will be the store where free refreshments will be passed out and poet laureate O. L. Fink will read one of his poems while accompanying himself on a guitar.

This year National Fink Day is June 20, a Saturday. Fink, 85, who admits "my daddy came from Ireland, I'm not a local Fink," said he gave Mayor Albright one of the fiddles he makes.

"It's quite possible that she will play while I recite "I Was Just Walking Down the Road," Fink said.

While Mayor Albright makes plans for the celebrating of National Fink Day, the adjoining Tanglewood Hills Country Club is planning its third annual Fink Open Golf Tournament.

"We are very happy with the dates of the tournament," declared Golf Director Jerry Peddicord. "It will be June 19-21, which coincides with the U.S. Open. We expect to have a very fast field this year, since once again we'll get a lot of the U. S. Open non-qualifiers."

Pedicord said he was sending a special invitation to Miller Barber, who hails from nearby Sherman-Denison, to play the final round of the Open this year at Fink. Barber is the touring pro who led through three rounds last year only to have Orville Moody overhaul him.

"We're not playing favorites," said Peddicord seriously. "We've invited Moody too."

National Fink Week opens on June 15 and runs through June 21, which just catches the Fink Golf tournament.

This year's celebrity tournament will include Roland Harper, the head pro at Colonial's golf course in Fort Worth; Charlie Menton, the pro at Barber's Woodlawn Country Club, plus a couple of special Finks.

Invitations have been extended to all of the Finks in a radius of several hundred miles of Fink to play in the tourney. Peddicord got answers back from a Fink in Dallas and a Zink in Norman, Okla., wanting to play.

"We had six Finks and one Funk in the lineup last year," said Peddicord. "With Zinks and Funks and Finks galore on hand this year, we should have a great time. And as for fellows named Smith and Jones, etc., I might just add that the books close when we get 132 entrants."

Vote Near On Postal Reforms

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate committee is expected to vote Monday on a postal reform bill that would give the Nixon administration authority to boost first class mail rates from six to eight cents.

Sen. Gale W. McGee, D-Wyo., chairman of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee, said Friday the compromise bill has won tentative White House support and the panel would vote on it Monday. But he added that many changes could be made before final enactment.

McGee said the bill includes these features:

—Authority for the administration to raise first class letter rates from six to eight cents—a 33 per cent increase. This, however, can be accomplished only if the administration first enacts a 33 per cent hike in second class (newspapers and magazines) and third class (chiefly advertising material).

—An additional 8 per cent pay hike for the 725,000 postal employes. A six per cent pay increase for postal and other government workers has already been approved by Congress.

—Creation of an independent agency run by a nine-member board of governors named by the President to administer the Post Office Department. The board would select a postmaster general who would no longer be a Cabinet member.

—Authorize the President to name a five-member commission to fix postal rates.

—Permit the new agency to work out collective bargaining agreements with postal unions.

Nixon reportedly favors the first class mail rate increase to help pay the largest part of the $1.5 billion annual deficit expected for the department in fiscal 1971.

The pay raise for postal employes would cost an estimated $538 million during the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Nixon originally asked for a first class letter stamp increase to 10 cents.

McGee said the Senate bill must first be approved by the full committee before going to the Senate floor. If approved, it would then be worked over in a Senate-House conference committee.

Soldier Says My Lai Ordered

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — A young soldier charged in connection with the alleged My Lai massacre in Vietnam says his unit attacked the village on orders from its commanding officer.

"We were told to kill every living thing and destroy all the houses," Spec. 4 William H. T'Souvas, 20, told a news conference Friday.

T'Souvas, who was 18 at the time of the alleged massacre in March 1968, said the village was a known Viet Cong and North Vietnamese army stronghold.

He said the order to destroy it came from Capt. Ernest Medina, his company commander who also has been charged in connection with the incident.

T'Souvas was accompanied at the news conference by his civilian attorney, George T. Davis of San Francisco, who allowed him to answer all but one question: Did you kill anyone?

David said a reply would go to the heart of the charges against T'Souvas and would be improper at the time.

FOR SIX SLAYINGS

Edwards Gets Electric Chair

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In 1953, blonde Stella Darlene Nolan, 8, vanished from a suburban auction center a few hours after writing, "Father, I hope you have a happy Father Day." A massive hunt yielded no clues.

In 1957, Jon Baker, 13, and Brenda Howell, 11, failed to return from a bicycle ride in the hills. They were never found.

In 1958, Gary Rocha, 15, was shot dead in his home. In 1963, Roger Madison, 16, disappeared. Last May, Donald Allen Todd, 13, was found shot dead in a gully, his clothes stacked neatly nearby.

And last March a 51-year-old construction worker, Mack Ray Edwards, walked into a suburban police station and said he had kidnaped three girls. He surrendered, he said, because one got away and he figured she would lead officers to him.

"I'm glad they got away," police quoted him, "because it would have been nine instead of six."

Officers said Edwards told them the six youngsters were slain after molestation attempts. He gave clues that led to finding three bodies.

Friday, Edwards, who twice tried suicide in jail and who pleaded guilty to murder "because I want to go to the electric chair," heard the words he has been asking for.

A jury impaneled to fix his penalty decreed death in San Quentin's gas chamber. June 5 was set for formal sentencing.

Death sentences are automatically appealed to the California Supreme Court. There also is a virtual moratorium on executions in the state while the U.S. Supreme Court considers capital punishment challenges. The last execution was on April 2, 1967.

Edwards had lived quietly in the San Fernando Valley suburb of Sylmar with his wife and teen-age son and daughter. His neighbors called him friendly. His only arrest was in 1941, for vagrancy.

Police are trying to determine if Edwards is linked to other disappearances between 1956 and 1968. The Los Angeles Times said police think the total might be as many as 22, although Edwards lists only six.

He was charged with murder only in the Nolan, Rocha and Todd deaths, because those were the only bodies found.

Edwards' attorney called his client a "monster" but asked for a sentence of life imprisonment.

Edwards said in a pre-sentencing interview: "My attorney got a bit mixed up and pleaded for my life. That's not what I want. I want the chair, that's what I've always wanted."

Edwards expressed no remorse in the interview, but said when [illegible] he found himself in: "I couldn't eat and I couldn't sleep. It was beginning to affect my work. I'm a heavy equipment operator. That grader I was using costs a lot of money—$200,000. I might wreck it. Or turn it over and hurt someone."

PROMOTED — Sp. 5 James F. Feather Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Feather Sr., 3113 Fortieth Street, was promoted to his present rank in a recent ceremony at Fort Belvoir, Va., where he is assigned to the U. S. Army Computer Systems Command Headquarters as a computer programmer in the command's Personnel and Force Accounting Directorate. Col. William L. Dupart, Director of Personnel and Force Accounting, and M-Sgt. William O. Morey Jr., Data Processing NCO for the directorate, placed the new gold stripes on Sp. 5 Feather's sleeves. Sp. 5 earned the bachelor of science degree in aerospace engineering from the University of Texas. Prior to entering the Army, he was employed by Lockheed Electronics Corp. at Houston, where he participated in the NASA project.

Doctor Indicted For Neglect

HOUSTON (AP) — A plastic surgeon was indicted Friday on a charge of murdering his socialite wife by deliberate neglect.

Dr. John R. Hill, 39, of Houston was charged with killing his wife "by wilfully, intentionally and culpably" failing to give her proper medical treatment, and by failing to take her to a hospital in time.

Mrs. Hill, a champion horsewoman, died March 9, 1969, about 15 hours after being admitted to a hospital.

The indictment came from a holdover grand jury which had been investigating her death for months. There were repeated autopsies on the body of Mrs. Hill, including one when she was exhumed last Aug. 16.

The autopsies never established the precise origin of the massive infection which pathologists said killed her.

The grand jury was the third one to look into the death of Mrs. Hill. Two other grand juries took no action in the case.

The murder charge is based on a rarely used provision of Texas criminal law which says that a homicide may be committed through "culpable omission" as well as by a positive act.

Hill's lawyer, Richard Haynes, said the doctor's reaction to the indictment was "the same as mine—shock and disbelief."

Haynes said Hill was in Corpus Christi but would present himself next week to the sheriff. Dist. Judge Wendell A. Odom set a $10,000 bond when the indictment was returned, but Haynes said after conferring with the judge in his chambers, it had been changed to a personal recognizance bond.

Man Hoists Flag On Court Order

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — Paul Hodson, 23, carried out the orders of the court on the steps of New Bedford High School Thursday by hoisting the American flag to the peak of the school flagpole and reciting the Pledge of Allegiance.

That's what Judge Samuel Barnet of District Court ordered him to do when he pleaded no contest Wednesday to a charge of disturbing a school rally by hauling down the American flag.

Judge Barnet placed the charge on file after learning that Hodson had fulfilled his assignment.

IMMEDIATE RULING WITHHELD

Texas Abortion Law Challenged In Dallas

DALLAS (AP)—Three federal judges withheld an immediate ruling after hearing arguments Friday in a case challenging the Texas abortion law.

The suit seeking to overturn the statute was brought by a single woman who is pregnant, a married couple and a doctor facing two criminal abortion charges.

Their lawyers maintain the law is unconstitutional because it invades the field of religious principles by denying a woman the right to choose whether to bear a child after conception.

One of the three jurists, U.S. Circuit Judge Irving L. Goldberg, suggested the Texas statute is vague about giving "a time factor in saving the life of the mother."

Goldberg was joined in hearing the arguments by U.S. Dist. Judges Sarah T. Hughes and William Taylor Jr. The courtroom was crowded with women predominating in the audience.

Judge Hughes repeatedly asked counsel for both sides if the law would remain constitutional if the court simply ordered deletion of a clause about saving the life of an expectant mother.

Asst. Dist. Atty. John Tolle of Dallas said such a step would make the statute almost meaningless.

Judge Goldberg said throwing out the entire law would permit "anybody to perform an abortion ... any place."

Linda Coffee, one of the lawyers appearing for the unmarried pregnant woman and the married couple said the challenged legislation "is so bad, really, the court is going to have to strike it all down."

The physician director of the University of Texas Student Health Service filed an affidavit in support of the suits.

Dr. Paul Trickett, who heads the gynecology clinic at the health center, said, "It would be conservative to estimate that we diagnose at least one pregnancy a day at the University of Texas' Health Center."

He said a majority of the girls desire an abortion, and he has seen "numerous young ladies who have gotten illegal abortions."

He said he has found that a large number of the women are getting illegal abortions under very poor procedures "which can not only threaten immediate life but can also lead to psychological and medical problems."

The physician said he refuses to do abortions because they are illegal but would do them if they were legalized.

The Texas abortion laws allow abortions that are performed to save the mother's life.

"The compelling interest is sufficient," he said, "to give the State of Texas constitutional authority to enact laws for that purpose."

He also argued that an unmarried pregnant woman "has assumed the risk attendant upon such condition."

The two federal suits were filed in March under the fictitious names of John and Mary Doe and Jane Roe. Dr. Hallford later was permitted to join as a party to the suit.

Dist. Atty. Henry Wade was named as the defendant in both cases.

The suit seeks to permanently enjoin law enforcement officials from enforcing the abortion statutes in Texas.

Bank Robber Nabbed By Agent

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — An FBI agent went into a downtown bank to cash a check Thursday and wound up arresting a man at gunpoint on bank robbery charges.

Agents accused the arrested man, Clifford E. Craine, 47, of Buffalo, of trying to take about $1,300 from a Marine Midland Trust Co. branch office.

FBI sources said agent Charles W. Clemens saw Craine leaving the bank with the money in a briefcase. Clemens said he "immediately felt something was wrong."

Craine, Clemens said, had his hand jammed in his pocket as if he were holding a gun. The bank manager had also noticed something wrong and reached Craine first.

The manager asked Craine what was in the briefcase. Then Clemens drew his gun, identified himself and arrested Craine, who, witnesses said, was "too shocked to resist."

Agents said Craine had handed a teller a note reading:

"This is a holdup," then flashed a small bottle and told the teller it contained acid.

Carroll Told To Go Politely

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Rep. R. K. Keith, R-Hodgenville, presented Democratic House Speaker Julian Carroll of Paducah with a plaque during the legislative session inscribed: "You are cordially invited to the theological place of eternal punishment."

Carroll responded that he has never been told where to go so politely.

Oilmen Are Waiting On Data From Manhattan

By MAX B. SKELTON
AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — The SS Manhattan has had her problems in the Arctic ice but the historic icebreaking oil tanker's $50 million feasibility study is nearing an end.

Within two or three days, the Manhattan is to be en route home from her second venture into the Northwest Passage, a somewhat shorter trip than had been planned.

The data aboard will help determine by the end of the year if it would be economically feasible for the petroleum industry to invest from $2.5 to $4 billion in establishing a year round Northwest Passage tanker route to move oil from Alaska's North Slope to the east coast.

Oilmen believe some two million barrels of oil a day will be moving to the east and west coasts within a decade or so from the arctic slope's Prudhoe Bay region where a rich discovery was made in 1968.

Cost estimates for the transportation problems created by Prudhoe Bay's remoteness continue to spiral.

A trans-Alaska pipeline to supply west coast refineries had an original price tag of $900 million. The current estimate is $1.3 billion and the project still is awaiting governmental clearance.

Before the Manhattan became last year the first commercial vessel to make a round trip through the treacherous passage Humble Oil & Refining Co. officials believed a specially designed jumbo icebreaking tanker for a year round route would cost $50 million. The latest estimates range from $60 to $90 million each.

A year round operation would require 30 to 40 such tankers, plus a $500 million deep water loading terminal some 30 miles offshore from Prudhoe Bay.

The 1,006-foot Manhattan, the largest commercial ship ever constructed in the United States, was cut into four sections and rebuilt before her first arctic venture. A special icebreaking bow was designed, braces were added internally, a second hull was built around the engine room, and special ice deflectors added to the twin rudders.

Last year's 8,800-mile trip proved a ship could make a round trip through the passage. The second and shorter voyage was designed to obtain additional data under different conditions of ice navigation, particularly in areas with comparatively new ice.

As was the case last year, the Manhattan is preparing to return home with arctic ice damage scars.

Ice ripped a 30-foot hole in the hull last year. The second trip produced two scars, one of which is believed to include an eight-foot hole or fracture to the stern.

Humble officials say, however, the damage in all three cases was in hull areas where old steel had not been replaced with high tensile steel.

Only the newer, high, tensile steel would be used in the jumbo tankers that would be of the 250,000 deadweight ton category compared with the Manhattan's 115,000-ton classification.

Last year's voyage called for a shortcut through McClure Strait at the western end of the passage but McClure's ice was too rugged for the test ship. The Manhattan had to back out and take a southwesterly course through Prince of Wales Strait before picking up a symbolic barrel of oil off Prudhoe Bay.

The second trip's destination was to have been only to the Resolute area, about 300 miles west of the eastern entrance of the passage. The Manhattan was 200 miles or so from Resolute, however, when Humble announced the 12-day return trip would begin within a few days.

"The decision not to go to Resolute was made independent of the damage report," a spokesman said.

"The Resolute destination was based on location of the types of ice needed for further testing. The ice encountered has been substantially different from the first voyage and has provided ideal conditions for testings."

New Hall Named After Asa Mercer

SEATTLE (AP) — Seattle's going to have its Mercer Girls again. This time they'll be residents of a new hall at the University of Washington. The regents named it Friday for Asa Mercer, pioneer woodsman who brought a group of young women from the East to the girl-less Northwest in the mid-1880s.

HearingSet On Auto Insurance

AUSTIN (AP) — Auto insurance policyholders in Dallas and probably Houston, Fort Worth and San Antonio will get a chance to complain about high premiums this summer.

Ned Price, state Insurance Board chairman, said the board definitely would hold a hearing in Dallas, where two state senators have complained about a rumored impending rate increase.

Price said the board also is making plans for other hearings, probably in the other three major cities.

No dates have been set for any of the big city hearings.

Price said the regional hearings will be after the regular statewide auto insurance hearing here Aug. 17.

He also announced the board will conduct a hearing in Austin July 14 on insurance companies' income from investing auto insurance premiums. A special committee headed by former Gov. Price Daniel recommended last fall that such income be taken into consideration when the board is deciding whether rates should increase.

Price explained that the regional hearings would take up proposed rates for those areas, since auto rates vary by rating territories.

Dallas Sens. Oscar Mauzy and Mike McKool have frequently criticized auto insurance rates. Mauzy said Thursday that Price had promised a public hearing in Dallas, which the senator called "a real breakthrough. They've never held a hearing of this kind outside of Austin."

McKool had quoted insurance industry spokesmen as predicting rates would go up an average of about 15 or 20 per cent statewide this year.

McCarthy To Seek Senate Seat

BOSTON (AP) — John J. McCarthy, a former state administration commissioner, said Friday he will seek the Republican nomination for the U.S. Senate seat held by Democrat Edward M. Kennedy.

McCarthy, 60, is a retired Army colonel who held the commissioner's post, an appointive position that involves serving as the governor's right-hand man in finance and administration, for two years under former Gov. John A. Volpe.

McCarthy said the candidacy of Josiah A. Spaulding, a former Republican state chairman who also seeks the Senate nomination, is "politically presumptious and philosophically preposterous."

Paella Joins Fish And Foul

By TOM HOGE
Associated Press Writer

Spaniards have a saying about their native cooking: "In the South you fry, in the Central Regions you roast, and in the North you stew." But along Spain's Costa Brava, they do a little of all three and a few other things as well.

The women of this coastal sweep of Catalonis cook the rich variety of local fish on a bed of hot coals and their chicken in a slow oven. But Paella, that succulent mixture of fruits of the sea and soil, is something else. Boiled, then fried and finally stewed, this dish has become an institution that has found its way, with variations, into the cookbooks of many nations.

The word paella orginally derives from the two-eared skillet in which the Spanish cooked and served the dish.

In olden times, the housewives of the Costa Brava called the dish "arroz" or rice, for originally that was the main ingredient. Only the cheapest cuts of chicken were used because the meat was intended mainly to flavor the rice.

Today all that has changed. Paella is a many-splendored dish in which chicken, fish of various sorts and sometimes pork, veal or beef, are used, each to its best advantage.

Good recipes for paella crop up in some of the least expected places. Jim Norman, a young writer friend from Weehawken, N.J., discovered paella a few years ago when he was half a world away in Sydney, Australia.

The source was a Spanish welder who had brought the recipe all the way from Valencia. Whenever the Spaniard was homesick, he could cook up a batch of paella.

"I have found that paella is as much a social event as it is a meal," said Norman. Jim's paella has become something of an institution with his friends.

"I try to cook enough for six people but there invariably is enough to serve a dozen. And it seems impossible to make any less and get in all the ingredients,' he adds.

PAELLA

1 medium-size chicken, cut up and boiled for about 30 minutes
1 pound beef round cut into inch square cubes
half clove garlic cut into chunks
2 green peppers sliced
1 dozen cherry tomatoes
2 medium Bermuda onions sliced
2 dozen large shrimp, with shells on
3 squid, cleaned and sliced into ½ inch strips with tentacles
2 dozen clams in shells
3 cups white rice
6 cups water
5 pinches saffron
salt to taste

Take deep skillet at least 12 inches across and heat enough oil to cover bottom.

Throw in chicken and beef cubes with garlic salt lightly and fry till lightly browned about 20 minutes. Throw in pepper slices, tomatoes and onions. Add shrimp, washed out with shells still on. Add squid and clams also with shells; salt again lightly and simmer over medium heat for about 15 minutes or until shrimp are bright pink, squid pieces are curled and meat is nicely browned.

Cover all this with dry rice pour about six cups of water over mixture and turn heat to high. Sprinkle saffron over the whole thing and stir vigorously until rice is tender, about 10 minutes. At about this point, the clam shells should start opening and the saffron should have stained the whole dish a bright yellow. If rice still is tough, add some more water and continue boiling and stirring.

When rice is tender and water is all boiled away or absorbed, the paella is ready.

"I use chicken as a civilized substitute," Norman noted. "In Australia we use rabbit meat. We used to add crabs as well if we were lucky enough to find some, and mushrooms gave the dish a lift.

"Since my Spanish friends insisted on using shrimp with the shells on to retain the flavor, I have followed this method," explained Norman. "They are skinned by your guests at the table, a rather messy undertaking which requires a good many paper napkins. But with a good supply of red or rose wine on hand, it adds to the fun."

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q—I intend to nail 1-by-3 furring strips to the beams in our basement celing and then staple ceiling tiles to the furring strips. How far apart should the strips be?

A.—It depends on the size of the tiles you purchase. If they are the popular 9-inch size, then the center of each strip of wood should be exactly 9 inches from the center of the next strip. It is important that these measurements be exact and equally important to remember that the measuring be done from the centers of the strips, not from the edges. The strips nearest the walls necessarily will be less than 9 inches from the walls, barring the coincidence that they come out even.

For the sake of appearance, the last line of tiles at the four walls should not be less than one-half a tile in width. If you determine that it will not come out properly, start the first furring strip a short distance from where you originally intended. You can do this only if you carefully pre-measure everything. A simple way to do this is by laying out a line of tiles on the floor until the border tiles are where you want them. Then use the same arrangement on the ceiling.

Q.—Everything I have read about antique effects on furniture goes into the business of using a paint, then a glaze. But a former neighbor of mine used to use two different colored paints. I didn't pay much attention then, but now I'd like to try his method myself. Do you know anything about this?

A.—There are a number of ways to get so-called antique finishes without using glaze. The most common is to put on a base coat of paint, allow it to dry, then apply a different color with a small brush. The second coat is put on in a kind of dragging motion, with very little paint on the brush. The brush is dipped into the paint, then wiped so that very little paint is left on the bristles.

In another method, a coat of one color is applied. When it is thoroughly dried, a coat of another color is spread on the first. After waiting about 15 minutes, rub the surface lightly with steel wool, which will take off some of the second coat and leave both colors showing. Before you attempt either of this systems on good furniture, try them out first to determine whether they give you the kind of results you wish.

Wet Flag Is Stolen

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — It rained Thursday afternoon, so custodians took down the U.S. flag from the flagpole in front of the state capitol and took it inside to dry on a railing.

Someone then walked off with the wet, eight by 12-foot flag during afternoon visiting hours.

Lady Never Late

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — An employment official of the Louisville Courier-Journal and Times asked a young female applicant how was her punctuation and got an unusual reply: "Sir, I've never been late for work in my life," she said.

I just can't keep anything to myself. Not ANYTHING. I was absolutely NOT going to tell anybody about the poncho I got from my favorite store. But in less than 24 hours, I not only told my best friend Mary Jane Stokely, but also Laura Lewisohn and Alice Mosely and even Patricia Ann Shope, whom I can't even stand. And now they all have ponchos! Oh well, maybe it was inevitable. After all ponchos are the latest thing for little girls to wrap themselves up in.

MRS. WILLIAM RAY HIBBS II

Griffith-Hibbs Vows Exchanged At Abilene

Doublering Rites at 3:20 p.m. May 17 in the Elmdale Baptist Church in Abilene united in marriage Miss Nannie Kay Griffith and William Ray Hibbs II.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Griffith of Abilene and Mrs. Hibbs is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Hibbs, 2810 Forty-second Street, Snyder.

Dr. Ray Ellis, professor at Hardin-Simmons University, officiated.

The bride wore a floor-length gown of elaskene with Chantilly lace beaded with seed pearls. Her mantilla-length train was made of silk illusion, edged with Chantilly lace.

She carried a bouquet of butterfly orchids and feathered carnations.

Janell Griffith, sister of the bride, who was maid of honor, wore a floor-length gown of yellow crepe and carried a nosegay of spring flowers. Michelle Robinson of Abilene, the flower girl, also wore a floor-length gown of yellow crepe, as did the bridesmaids, Kris Hibbs, sister of the groom, and Nancy Roebuck of Waxahachie.

Earl Carver of Wichita Falls was best man, while Jimmy Huffines also of Wichita Falls and Eugene Griffith, brother of the bride, of Abilene, were groomsmen. Ushers were Rodney Jay of Wichita Falls, Lloyd Jobe of Midland and Thomas Caton of Abilene.

Don Thigpen of Lubbock was organist and Becky Kellum of Andrews was soloist.

A reception followed the ceremony and decorations featured spring flowers. Mrs. Orvel Hill and Mrs. Thomas Caton served the four-tiered cake, while Lou Beth Bailey and Mrs. Welton Robinson registered guests. Others in the houseparty included Kay Marshall, Gail Carter and Mrs. Jerry Watts.

For the wedding trip to Ruidoso, N. M., the bride selected a baby blue, elaskene, A-line dress, belted at the waist and with blue pearl buttons and belt buckle.

The bride is a graduate of Abilene High School and is a senior economics education major at Texas Tech. She is a member of Phi Kappa Phi, academic honorary; Phi Upsilon Omicron, national home economics honorary; Alpha Lambda Delta, woman's service organization; Women's Resident Hall Council. She is on the dean's honor list and also the president's honor list.

Mr. Hibbs is a graduate of S.H. Rider High School in Wichita Falls and is a senior telecommunications major (pre-law) at Texas Tech. He is chairman of the National Convention for the National Association of College and University Residence Halls; past DeMolay state officer, member of Kappa Kappa Phi, member of the Red Raider Band, member of the Army ROTC, and was honored at the annual University Recognition service for scholarship and leadership. He also is on the dean's honor list.

Out of town guests were from Wichita Falls, Midland, Fort Worth, San Antonio and Snyder.

The bridegroom's parents were hosts for a rehearsal dinner at Wyatts in Abilene on Saturday evening.

Fresh Corn Not Scarce

COLLEGE STATION — Fresh corn is not a scarce item now as the supply of Texas grown corn is supplemented with Florida's new crop, advises Gwendolyne Clyatt, Extension consumer marketing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Prices have moved downward to attractive levels and supplies are expected to be good for several weeks to come. In selecting corn, look for: bright green husks, a sign of freshness; and also dark brown silk at the end of the husk, a sign of well-filled kernels. Keep the corn cool. Natural corn sugars change to starch within 20 minutes after picking.

Most of the sweet corn is hydrocooled in the fields, then iced in the stores. From the time the customer buys it, it's up to him to hurry it home to the kitchen range or to the refrigerator as soon as possible. If it must be stored, leave the husks on and wrap in moisture-proof paper to keep the kernels from drying out in the refrigerator.

While fresh corn is attractively priced, the homemaker might try corn fritters, scalloped corn, corn and cheese souffle, and the all-time favorite, corn-on-the-cob.

Girl Excels In Animal Science

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Carolyn Gunn is an attraftive, fun-loving Oklahoma State University coed, just like other girls there.

But what sets her apart is that, although city-reared, she making an outstanding record as an animal science student. It's a field that few students from the city, and even fewer girls, enter.

Now completing her junior year, Carolyn, of Tulsa, has a grade average of 3.69 on a scale of 4.0. She ranks third among 93 juniors majoring in animal science and is seventh among the 428 juniors in the entire College of Agriculture at OSU.

She eceived the special award for wo9eli,s'udents in agriculture and this spring was an alternate member of the OSU meats judging team at the Southwestern Exposition in Fort Worth. Next fall, she will be a candidate for the meats judging teams in the American Royal Livestock Show in Kansas City and the International Livestock Exposition in Chicago.

Carolyn placed second among 56 in the April 25 meats judging contest sponsored by OSU chapter of Block and Bridle, animal science students club. She judgbeef, pork and lamb and graded the carcasses and wholesale cuts according to U. S. government standards.

BAKED STUFFED PORK CHOPS . . . They're extra good when they hold a cornbread dressing

Stuff Pork Chops And Bake Them

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

"I have been trying to find a recipe for Pork Chops with cornbread dressing but so far have had no success. Can you help me?—Recipe Hunter.

Dear Recipe Hunter: No wonder you can't find the recipe. We've looked into half a dozen comprehensive cookbooks—but none of them features it. We're happy to say that we do have a recipe for the dish and hope you enjoy it as much as our tasters did.—C.B.

PORK CHOPS WITH CORNBREAD STUFFING

1 package (10 ounces) easy cornbread mix
2 tablespoons butter
¼ cup finely chopped onion
2 tablespoons finely chopped celery
½ cup chopped pared apple
1 teaspoon garlic salt
½ teaspoon sage
6 double pork chops, with pockets
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons solid white shortening
1 can (10½ ounces) condensed golden mushroom soup, undiluted

Make and bake cornbread according to package directions; cool. Crumble enough cornbread to make 2¼ cups. (Serve remaining cornbread split and toasted.)

In a large skillet, heat the butter add onion and celery; cook gently until softened. Add the crumbled cornbread, apple, garlic salt and sage; mix well. Stuff ½ cup of this dressing into pocket of each chop; secure openings with toothpicks.

Springkle chops with the salt. In the clean large skillet heat the shortening; add chops and brown slowly and thoroughly on both sides. (You may have to do this in two batches.) Arrange chops (discarding fat in skillet) in a shallow roasting pan or baking dish into which they just fit. Spread soup over chops. Cover tightly (with foil if necessary). Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven, turning twice, until cooked through—1 to 1½ hours. Remove chops to serving dish and keep warm.

Pour gravy in baking pan into a small saucepan; skim off fat; reheat gravy and serve with chops.

Makes six servings.

NOTES:

If you have a large overproof skillet into which all the chops will fit, you can use it for both browning and baking the chops. In this case remove chops from skillet after browning and discard fat before returning chops to skillet to bake.

Women's Comments

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Some quotable quotes from women during the week:

"I wasn't cut out to be a member of the jet set. None of them wants to play tennis—at least not until 4 in the afternoon."—Dinah Shore, in an interview.

"Black women have an inferiority complex concerning their physical appearance and I want to give them confidence."—Naomi Sims, one of the nation's best-known Negro models, announcing plans for a line of cosmetics tailored to the needs of the black woman.

"With 51 girls here, I was surprised to find they were not nearly as catty as I thought they would be."—Debbie Shelton, Miss Virginia, during interviews for the Miss U.S.A. contest she won.

"I grabbed the flag. Yes I did. I said I would do that if I ever saw them ... I'm the widow of a man who gave his life for them in World War I."—Florence Fitzgerald, 71, who grabbed an American flag from antiwar demonstrators marching on the Florida White House and scolded them for carrying it upside down.

"We must upgrade the skills of the domestic worker—and her wages. Many employers now say, 'I wouldn't mind paying that money but I just don't get my money's worth.' Well, let her try to do the same work in the same amount of time."—Elizabeth Koontz, director of the Labor Department's Women's Bureau, at the Women's National Democratic Club.

"I just refuse to let time bother me. I know we all must retire some day but I plan to go on until I can't take the pace anymore. Right now I feel that's a long way off ... You might say I feel ageless."—Singer Hildegarde, 63 year old, in an interview.

Tale Of Novelist Has Plot And Poignance

MIA. By Robert Nathan. Knopf. $4.95.

The time is the present and the scene is Cape Cod in the off season, winter.

Thomas Baggott, a well known novelist who is getting along in years, is trying to write his autobiography. But he is hung up, for as he looks back over the years too many of his memories take on a melancholy tinge.

Then a middle aged spinster, Emmeline Anderson, leases the house next door and the two become acquainted. Gradually, Thomas learns that something tragic happened fairly early in Emmeline's life, something to do with the limp that she has.

About this time Thomas keeps running into a teen—age girl who identifies herself only as Mia. She seems to be a troubled child who has something to fear, but won't—or can't—say what it is.

Before long, a bond has grown between Thomas and Emmeline, though both of them are uneasy about it. It would not be fair to give away the plot byt onnection Mia has with this situation, for the effectiveness of the novel depends on this element.

Nathan tells a poignant story, and his somewhat lyrical prose conveys it ably.

Engagement Announced

TO WED . . . Mrs. Eliot Crisp son, 305 Twenty-fourth Street, and James T. For the 13th year in a row — here comes the General Electric appliance train! It's loaded with GE refrigerators, freezers, color TV's, washers, dryers, air conditioners and other major items for your kitchen and/or home entertainment. At big savings for you! Here's why:

GE is the only major manufacturer which makes all its appliances at one location — Louisville, Kentucky. Each year at the start of the summer season the Southwest Distributor assembles at the factory a large selection of special production models, plus some closeouts and discontinued models. These are ordered by dealers in the Southwest at savings from regular prices. Because direct-to-dealer rail cars are used, additional savings in freight, warehousing, hauling and paperwork are made.

During the trainload sale event, all these savings are passed on to you — as much as $80.00 on some items!

Naturally, there is a limited supply of some models. So don't delay — if you plan to buy a major appliance, color TV or stereo soon, shop these bargains today!

White Stag

White Stag Makes Beautiful Clothes for Active People

Here's White Stag's short story that's long on active fashion. A little bit of girl short that's skirt-paneled in the back. $10. It's fashioned in a Stag-Prest® blend of Monsanto Blue C® polyester and combed cotton. The cotton top, in matching colors: $10.
