

Mullinax: fireworks are banned except on Rockport Beach

Fireworks. Roman candles...sparklers...rockets that explode into dazzling colors... They're a 4th of July tradition. They are also a fire hazard, say officials — especially this year when a long period without rain has dried out Aransas County. At Monday night's city council meeting, officials approved shooting of fireworks on the bay side of Rockport Beach — but emphasized that anywhere else in the city, the shooting of fireworks is illegal. City police and Fire Marshall Elva Mullinax emphasize they are going to enforce that law. "Anybody caught shooting fireworks anywhere except on the bay side of the beach will be fined on," Mullinax said. And he and Police Chief Joe Hinojosa said police officers will be patrolling the city "pretty heavily" on the lookout for violators. They added this does not apply just to the 4th of July but any time. "If we catch 'em shooting where they're not allowed — any time," Mullinax said, "it's a fine." Mullinax also asked anyone who hears fireworks being shot off around residential areas to please call the sheriff's office. House fires can be — and have been — started by sparks landing on rooftops, officials said.

Even on the beach there is a hazard, Mullinax said, adding that one year, one of the "bird islands" in Little Bay was set ablaze by fireworks. He added that fireworks should be shot out toward the bay. Observed Mullinax: "I don't know of any safe place in the whole county for shooting fireworks."

At Art Festival

Record crowds expected

By PAT BLAIR
Staff writer

Record crowds are expected in Rockport this coming weekend as the city's 13th annual Art Festival opens at noon Saturday, July 3, at Ski Basin Park.

"This year should be our biggest and best Festival yet," according to Estelle Stair, chairman of last year's Art Festival.

Last year, an estimated 18,000 to 20,000 people attended the two-day event. Cam Leonard, president of the Rockport Art Association — sponsors of the annual festival — is looking for crowds in excess of 20,000, possibly 25,000 or more.

The Festival is from noon until 9 p.m. Saturday and from noon until 6 p.m. Sunday, July 4. Approximately 125 artists from 32 cities will participate in the juried art show and two-day sale.

"About 75 percent of these artists are people who come back year after year," says Sandy Booth, artists chairman for the event. "Many of our artists have participated all 13 years."

Chairman of this year's Festival is Gertrude Bryant.

In addition to the artists, a special feature of this year's Festival will be a Country Store tent staffed by members of the Women's Committee, Aransas County Medical Services Inc., featuring homemade jellies, candies, pickles, cakes, cookies and other "goodies" as well as handcrafted items and antiques.

For those who want to make a "day" at the Festival, a food tent will serve ranch steaks on tortillas, ground steak with chilies, Polish sausage on tortillas, chili dogs, hot dogs, tamales, cups of beans, corn on the cob and nachos. Beverages include soft drinks, iced tea, lemonade and beer.

For exhibitors and workers in the Festival, events will get started Friday, July 2, with the traditional tamale and beer party at 6 p.m. on the Festival grounds.

Profits from sale of food and from artists' booth rentals go into the Art Association's building fund for a proposed Art Center to be constructed on land adjacent to Rockport Harbor.

Leonard said approximately $38,000 more must be raised by the Association before ground can be broken for the building. "We are getting close to our goal," he added, "and we expect to raise the remaining money this year."

Complaint filed against airport

The Aransas County Airport, run by Rockport Aviation Inc., is the object of a complaint filed today in Commissioners Court by airport user Don Meek.

Complete details of the court session will be in the Pilot Weekender. At Pilot press time Monday, shortly after the release of the court agenda, Meek was quoted as saying, "I don't like the way things are going out there. I don't like the service I'm getting. They are inattentive."

Meek, a private pilot, said that he is a daily user of the airport. He cited a parking problem and high hangar rent as just two areas he would be touching on in court session.

$100,000 revenue bond issue gets city council okay

A $100,000 revenue bond issue to help pay for repairs to the Little Bay Shores lift station received approval from Rockport's city council Monday night, June 28.

And public hearings on a request for annexation of the Wal-Mart site on Hwy. 35 North were set for July 12 at City Hall and 6:45 p.m. July 26 at the site of the new store now under construction.

An ordinance authorizing issue of revenue bonds to pay for lift station repairs will be presented to the council July 26 — the same date that bids will be opened for repairing the facility which city officials say is badly deteriorated.

City Administrator Herman Johnson said the plan calls for a 9.5 percent maximum rate on the bonds and emphasized that the bonds can only be retired through revenues. No tax money can be used.

Any repair costs exceeding the $100,000 bond issue will be paid out of city funds currently on hand, officials said.

J.C. Gurley, director of public works, said the Little Bay Shores lift station "is falling apart." The facility is about 25 years old, Johnson said.

Council members officially accepted a petition from developers of the Wal-Mart project requesting that the site be annexed into the city. Under state law, two hearings are required on annexation with at least one hearing to be on-site.

The July 26 hearing will immediately precede the regular city council meeting which will open at 7:15 p.m. at City Hall.

Also scheduled for July 26, as a result of action Monday night, will be opening of bids for sale of the lot on which the demolished elevated storage tank was located. An appraisal set value of the property at $12,500 and bids must start at that amount.

Council members gave 3-1 approval — with Alderman W.B. Allen casting the "no" vote — to a request by Pepe Zambrano for permission to hold an Antique Car Show with music at his place of business on South Austin on Sunday, July 25.

July 26 was set as the date for opening bids on sale of a used garbage truck and packer and July 12 as the date for opening bids for purchase of 20 garbage containers. A loan of $6,000 from the general fund to the garbage department was approved to cover cost of the packers.

Mayor Burt Mills announced that a hearing has been called by the Coastal Bend Council of Governments at 7:30 p.m. July 19 at Rockport City Hall to hear comments on the final report of COG's nutrient absorption project in Rockport.

Reduced rate increase approved for CPL

Following a reconvened public hearing on the matter, Rockport's city council gave reluctant approval to a rate increase for Central Power & Light amounting to about 48 percent of what the utility company is requesting.

The action came during the council's meeting Monday night, June 28, and was followed, later in the meeting, by Southwestern Bell Telephone's request for a rate increase. Council members were informed the Texas Municipal League will meet July 8 in Austin to discuss the possible participation in the rate case.

Council members adopted a resolution approving a rate schedule that would allow annual revenue requirements of $72,862,000 to CP&L — less than half of the $156,020,642 the company is asking from the Public Utility Commission.

This represents an increase to consumers of 22.67 percent in the utility company's base rate and an 8.72 percent increase in total revenue. The CP&L request would result in increases of 48.54 percent in base rates and 18.68 percent in total revenue. Under the resolution adopted Monday night, the rates would not go into effect until after July 29 and the rate design would be proposed by CP&L so the residential customer would bear the least proportionate burden of the increase.

An amount recovered from the controversial South Texas Project through litigation would be passed on to the ratepayers after costs of the litigation are deducted.

CP&L would be allowed to recover 60 percent of its Construction Work in Progress (CWIP) through the rate increase instead of 100 percent of the CWIP as the company requested.

Before the council adopted the resolution — recommended by Touche Ross and Company, the rate consultants retained by the TML to study CP&L's request — Rockport City Administrator Herman Johnson reminded council members that "The Public Utility Commission (PUC) is going to have the final say, and that's it." However, TML was urging cities to adopt the reduced rate resolution and send copies of those resolutions to the PUC before its July 29 hearing on the CP&L request.

During Rockport's reconvened public hearing Monday, Johnson told the council a decision was expected by the PUC on July 29 and if no decision is made at that time, CP&L could put its proposed new rates into effect under bond.

No one else spoke during the public hearing. During the later voting on a motion to adopt the TML-proposed resolution, Alderman W.B. Allen voiced the apparent feelings of the council when he said he was voting for the measure "reluctantly."

Later in the meeting, council members were formally presented with Southwestern Bell's request for a rate increase which includes a rate hike of $4.60 per month on one-party residential phones and an

Operations begin at new support center

Alice Specialty Company, the first facility to locate in Aransas County's new Offshore Support Center, kicked off operations last week with more than 2,700 barrels of liquid mud loaded between Monday, June 21, and last Friday morning.

"We still have a way to go before we have things like we want them, but we're still operating," was the comment of Wayne Baldwin with Liquid Mud Inc., of Alice, developers of the multimillion-dollar, 85-acre offshore support facility.

Alice Specialty Company is an associate of Liquid Mud and the offshore support project was originally launched to provide a coastal base so the company — which provides liquid mud for offshore drilling — wouldn't have to truck the mud from Alice.

Until this facility was completed, Baldwin said, blended mud had to be delivered by truck to the contractors. Since the trucks can only carry 50 barrels of liquid mud apiece, this meant a boat would have to wait as long as two or three hours waiting for 20 trucks to empty their loads. "And that's just loading

READY FOR THE ART FESTIVAL, members of the Aransas County Medical Services Inc. Women's Committee are joined by Gertrude Bryant, Art Festival chairperson, in looking over a few of the items to be sold in the Women's Committee's "Country Fair" booth next weekend. Joanne Haskell, Bryant and Ella

Anderson check out some of the edibles the booth will offer — but like an old-fashioned country store, the ACMSI booth won't be limited just to foods. This year's Art Festival, an annual event with proceeds channeled into the Rockport Art Association's building fund, will be on Saturday and Sunday, July 3-4.

47 will die over Fourth, says DPS

AUSTIN — The Department of Public Safety estimated that as many as 47 persons could die in traffic accidents during this July Fourth weekend unless drivers are exceptionally careful.

Colonel Jim Adams, DPS director, said the risk of traffic accidents will increase during the 78-hour holiday period as more drivers take to the streets and highways for the holiday.

"As in many weekend traffic accidents, alcohol, excessive speed, and failure to use seat belts are the major contributing factors in the traffic deaths," he said.

DPS statistics show that 63 persons were killed during the last Fourth of July holiday and 25 of those fatalities resulted from accidents in which driving while intoxicated was a factor.

"We know that drinking may have been involved in more of the traffic deaths, but since state law does not require blood alcohol samples from traffic victims, we are uncertain how many more of the deaths, may have involved drivers impaired by alcohol," Adams noted. "Additionally, 59 persons were seriously injured during the last holiday in traffic accidents."

The DPS director said additional troopers would be assigned to areas where heavy volumes of traffic are expected.

"Our troopers are working during this holiday period to assist travelers and to watch closely for drivers who may have had too much to drink or who insist upon exceeding the speed limits," he said.

The DPS says many municipal police and county sheriffs' officers will also work local traffic safety programs during the holiday period.

The DPS Operation Motorcade counting period begins at 6 p.m. Friday, July 2 and continues through midnight Monday, July 5. The Department will tabulate city and highway traffic fatalities and release totals three times daily at 10 a.m., 3 p.m. and 8 p.m. The first report will be made at 10 a.m. Saturday, July 3.

Conservation is answer to high bills

Mike Rothrock
County Extension

San Patricio-Aransas

Don't just turn on your lawn sprinkler when hot, dry weather arrives and gripe about your high water bill. By watering, fertilizing and mowing your lawn properly, you can reduce your water bill as much as 40 percent during the summer months.

Conservation by the homeowner provides the only solution to high water bills and excessive water demands during our hot and usually dry Texas summers.

In small cities where industrial demand for water is low, lawn watering may account for as much as half of all the water used during summer months. Even in larger cities, lawns get 30 to 40 percent of all the water supplied by municipalities.

Most Texas lawns need about two inches of water per week during the summer and most of this usually comes from irrigation.

Exactly what can a homeowner do to reduce his summer water bill? The first thing is to water your lawn only when grass starts to show signs of drought distress. Look for discoloration and wilting. If leaves roll up in the late afternoon and footprints remain after walking across the lawn, then water within 24 hours.

Once you've decided that your lawn needs watering, do it right. Most homeowners don't water their lawns properly. They either water too often, causing grass to develop shallow roots and making it a prime target for insects, diseases and temperature extremes, or they water too infrequently and apply too much water at one time, resulting in a lot of runoff.

When watering, soak the soil to a depth of four to six inches. In heavy clay soils, watering for 15- to 20-minute periods may be necessary to prevent excessive runoff.

Cutting back on lawn fertilization can also reduce watering. Applying fertilizer in the spring and fall will generally keep your lawn healthy. Fertilizing during the summer, especially with nitrogen fertilizer, will green up your lawn, but it will also make it grow faster and use more water.

Mowing less often and cutting your grass at taller heights also will help keep your lawn in better shape during hot, dry weather. St. Augustine grass does well when mowed at a three-inch height, and Bermuda grass can be cut at a two-inch height.

600,000 vets to get raises

More than 600,000 veterans and their survivors in Texas and elsewhere will be getting larger Veterans Administration pension checks next July 1 — the result of a 7.4 percent increase in the government's cost of living index.

Some 1.9 million VA pensioners are affected in some way by the cost of living index, said Ted W. Myatt, director, Houston VA Regional Office.

Pensions are paid to veterans totally and permanently disabled from circumstances unrelated to their military service. They are paid also to survivors of veterans who are in need.

Mrs. Turnbull has been a member of the nominations committee and the Board of Trustees. She is an honorary member of the auxiliary to the Art Museum and has been actively involved in the museum development for many years.

Drownings can be prevented

A thermos bottle or ice chest could save a drowning person's life this summer, a Texas Safety Association officer said recently.

Many drownings which occur close to the shore can be prevented by quick action, even if the rescuer has no lifesaving training, according to TSA's Vice President for Home and Leisure Activities, Nelson Mueller.

"This Fourth of July weekend, while many families are enjoying water-sports, drownings can be prevented by action of those on shore," said Nelson Mueller, Safety and Health Administrator for ALCOA in Rockdale.

Sailboat among items reported stolen

Items ranging from a sailboat to power tools to baby clothes were reported taken in thefts in Rockport during the past week.

The sailboat, valued at $500, was drydocked at Allegro North Apartments at the time of theft sometime last Thursday or Friday, June 24-25. Owner of the craft, Carl Fisher, told police it was a 12-foot "Sunfish."

A radio, an estimated $10 in coins and a six-pack of soft drinks, totalling $112.50 in value, were reported missing when C Cushions was burglarized sometime between 5:30 p.m. Friday and 8:30 a.m. Saturday.

The power tools were taken when the residence of A.L. Van Buren was burglarized. Also taken were miscellaneous hand tools and an automobile carburetor. Total value of the missing items was estimated at $450.

And the baby clothes, baby bottles, toys and papers were taken when a car driven by Cindy Webster was burglarized in the parking lot of a grocery store Friday night.

Police said the items were in a handbag which was also taken. The incident occurred between 9:15 and 9:30 p.m.

In other action during the weekend, police made three arrests on charges of public intoxication and one arrest on warrant for revocation of probation.

Nugent says drilling down

AUSTIN — Railroad Commission Chairman Jim Nugent announced that Texas oil and gas wells produced 490,786,592 Mcf of gas in February, 1982, down 4.52 percent from field runs a year earlier.

Marketed gas production totaled 418,038,756 Mcf and reflected a 4.96 percent decrease from the February, 1981, volume. Marketed production is the total gas to transmission lines, carbon black and plant fuel and lease use.

Gas exported from Texas in February totaled 276,910,150 Mcf. Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of America was the month's largest exporter, moving 75,619,368 Mcf of gas of which 37,144,697 Mcf was Texas-produced gas.

Exports of Texas-produced gas in February totaled 196,879,171 Mcf and reflected a 6.31 percent increase from the year-earlier month.

Texas gas production in February came from 223,379 oil and gas wells.

In January, 1982, Texas wells produced 554,272,209 Mcf of gas. Marketed gas production in January totaled 472,026,121 Mcf. January exports of Texas-produced gas totaled 216,047,170 Mcf.

Channel catfish offer lots of action

AUSTIN — Channel catfish are suckers for a free meal.

They don't require anything fancy, just a little soured maize. Fishermen across Texas are taking advantage of this characteristic by baiting areas and reaping a harvest of fat catfish for the frying pan.

Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials say that with the onset of hot summer days, catfish become more active. "This is the time of year when schools of channel cats move into shallow water to feed, and a little timely baiting can really get results," said Inland Fisheries Chief Ernest Simmons.

Simmons noted that catfishing can offer plenty of action when other fish are difficult to catch. "For instance, during the past few weeks most of the lakes in the North Texas area have been high and murky because of heavy rains on the watersheds," Simmons noted. "This usually spoils fishing for bass and other game fish, but it couldn't be better for catfish."

Baiting catfish with soured grain is not a new idea, but it seems to be picking up momentum on many major lakes. Even fishing guides are getting into the act by offering clients catfish outings, or dividing their fishing day between catfish and bass.

On Amistad Reservoir near Del Rio, a number of guides have turned exclusively to catfish guiding during the hot-weather months and have had no trouble finding clients.

Preparation of bait is easy and inexpensive, Simmons said. "A 50-pound sack of maize (also known as milo) can be purchased from a feed store for $5 to $8. Then you can obtain a couple of pickle buckets discarded by a fast-food restaurant and you're in business," said Simmons.

Simply pour a couple of pounds of maize into the bucket, add enough water to entirely cover the grain and then put the lid on. In about four days, natural fermentation will "sour" the maize sufficiently to use. Soured grain is superior to unsoured for chumming, according to veteran catfishermen, because it develops a distinct odor and it also is said to be more digestible for the fish.

Children never outgrow the appreciation of a hug or a squeeze

You're having morning coffee with a neighbor. Suddenly your two-year-old rushes in to tell you something important: "Sam broke too me ever!" Since he's not a fluent speaker yet and the urgency of the situation interferes with intelligibility, you don't know what he's trying to convey to you. What to do?

"Growing Child," the monthly child development newsletter, first gives these hints about what not to do. Don't belittle the child with criticism. "Who can understand you when you talk like that?" Don't threaten him, "If you don't talk better no one will ever understand you." Don't bribe him, "If you say it nicely, you can have a cookie." Don't command him, "Say it like this so we know what you mean." Don't overprotect him,

"Go out and play and we'll talk about it later." Now, what to do: Echo what he has said insofar as you can and replace the unintelligible part with one of the "wh" words: Youngster: "Sam broke too me ever." You: "Sam broke what?" Assure him that you truly understand his feelings (even if you do not understand his speech). This is very reassuring to a child.

Growing Child

None of us ever outgrows the appreciation for emotional support. For a child, a hug or squeeze accompanied by simple feedback: "I know you are upset right now. I understand how you feel. Come have some milk and we'll talk about it." Treating a youngster as a sensitive individual with his own sense of personal dignity which can be hurt or gratified will result in cooperative behavior.

At about two years, a youngster has increased speech and language comprehension, but still understands only concrete and practical words and statements. He uses words which he himself creates. This occurs when he wants to say something and he doesn't know the appropriate word. Many children enjoy their own creations and do a lot of it, combining interesting sounds and phrases. The pronouns "mine" and "me" are in use but he refers to himself by his given name instead of using "I." He loves to hear stories about himself. When he talks or "tells a story" he sing-songs his sentences. He may even be very fluent in telling his experiences, but he has no sense of "pastness" — he's a here-and-now person. The Growing Child newsletter follows a child's development month-by-month. For more information on the social and physical development of children from birth to six years old, write to Growing Child, P.O. Box 620N, Lafayette, IN 47902. Include child's birthdate when writing. A year's subscription to the newsletter costs $11.95.

Medication may be great risk to sunburned users

FORT WORTH — Certain drugs may expose the people who use them to greater risk of sunburn and heat exhaustion, according to a physician at Texas College of Osteopathic Medicine.

Johannes Steenkamp, D.O., chairman of TCOM's department of public health and preventive medicine, reminds the public that drugs such as tetracycline (an antibiotic) and Thorazine (a tranquilizer) sensitize the skin, increasing the chances of sunburn.

Amphetamines, atropine-related drugs including marijuana and drugs for stomach cramps like Donnato and Benti affect the heat-regulating system in the brain, he said. Drugs with diuretic (promoting the secretion of urine) effects such as caffeine also affect the way the body responds to heat. Any of these drugs can increase the user's susceptibility to heat exhaustion.

"If you think your medication may expose you to greater risks in summer," Dr. Steenkamp said, "check with your physician."

THE ROCKPORT HAM operators participate in a nation-wide field day to demonstrate the use of emergency equipment. The HAMs will set up equipment in times of emergencies such as hurricanes to help keep lines of communications open.

Don't get lost in hunting regulation shuffle

AUSTIN — When major hunting and fishing regulations, bag limits, means and methods and licensing requirements are announced, some outdoor sports get lost in the shuffle.

Regulations governing such pursuits as frog catching, sport crabbing, freshwater clamming and coon hunting are sometimes overlooked, according to Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials.

Frog gigging is definitely not in the "top 10" outdoor hunting experiences; in fact, it's probably down in the "bottom 10." Ask any frog gigging enthusiast what license is needed and he probably would guess "fishing license."

Wrong. The Law Enforcement Division of the department says persons taking bullfrogs or any other terrestrial vertebrate need a valid hunting license or an exemption under the hunting license provisions if they pursue their sport outside their county of residence. However, there are no closed seasons or bag limits.

Sports crabbing along the Texas coast requires a valid fishing license unless otherwise exempted by the fishing license requirements.

Taking the lowly crawfish, crayfish or crawdad in public waters of the state also requires a valid fishing license or an exempt license.

Persons exempted from having to purchase a fishing license are: a person under 17 years old or 65 years old or older if the person is a Texas resident or, if a nonresident and the person's state of residence grants a similar exemption to Texas residents; those who fish on property they or members of their immediate family own or reside on, fishing in the county of residence with trotline or ordinary pole and line having no reel or winding device attached; certain disabled veterans; and legally blind persons.

A resident under 17 years old or 65 years of age or older who hunts deer or turkey is required to have a $1.25 exempt hunting license. There are no non-resident hunting license exemptions.

Anyone going after the main ingredient in baked 'coon or 'possum and sweet 'taters needs to have a trappers license, but such furbearers may be possessed only in the open season during December and January. Although they may be hunted by holders of a trapper's license during the rest of the year, their pelts and carcasses may not be possessed.

No age or county residence exemption is listed for a trapper's license which costs $10 for Texans and $200.75 for nonresidents.

Hunting bobcats, rabbits and coyotes may be done year 'round but the hunter needs a valid hunting license if hunting in a county other than his county of residence. Pelts and carcasses may be possessed any time, but bobcat pelts may not be sold without a special tag from the department, and pelts may be tagged only during a designated tagging period.

Taking freshwater mussels or clams for any purpose requires a special $10 license. No age or residence exemptions are listed for this activity.

ARMY AND AIR FORCE HOMETOWN NEWS — Robert L. Agler, son of Denver L. and Cora M. Agler of Rockport has been specially identified for early promotion to senior airman in the U.S. Air Force.

The airman was awarded the new rating ahead of other Air Force members by a "below-the-zone" promo-

Hunters and fishermen are urged to study the hunting and fishing regulations thoroughly before going afield. The new digests for the 1982-83 year will be available from license dealers, department offices and sporting goods stores around the state during the latter part of August. Additional information may be obtained by calling your local game warden or by calling the toll-free information line, 1-800-792-1112.

Agler promoted

tion board which considered job performance, military knowledge, bearing and self-improvement efforts.

Agler is an avionics systems specialist at Cannon Air Force Base, N.M., with the 27th Aircraft Generation Squadron.

His wife, Karen, is the daughter of Bernie and Monteene DeForest of Fulton.

Panel to discuss redfish

AUSTIN — Two legislative panels are slated to examine the scientific data used to justify the passage of a controversial new state law prohibiting commercial fishing for redfish and speckled trout at a hearing in Austin on Wednesday, June 30, State Sen. H. Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso, chairman of the Texas Senate Committee on Natural Resources, said.

Santiesteban, chairman of the Texas Senate Committee on Natural Resources, said his committee will hold a joint hearing with the Texas House of Representative Committee on Environmental Affairs at 10 a.m. Wednesday in the State Capitol Building, State Rep. Bennie Bock II, D-New Braunfels, is chairman of the House committee.

Santiesteban said the committees will receive testimony from independent biologists, economists and statisticians who have examined the data used to back the passage of the commercial fishing ban by the Legislature last year. Officials of the Texas Parks & Wildlife Department who conducted the studies on which the data was based, as well as representatives of the commercial fisherman who have criticized those studies, will also be present to answer any questions the legislators may have about the data and how it was gathered and analyzed, Santiesteban added.

"We invited both groups to testify because we want to insure that both have an opportunity to present their arguments. We want to make sure that the Committee hears both sides and is able to make an informed judgement about the quality of the data the Legislature has received in support or opposition to this law," Santiesteban stressed.

He explained that the study was ordered "because many legislators were concerned that one side — backed up by the Parks & Wildlife Department's studies — claimed there was a shortage of redfish and speckled trout while the other side disputed those figures and claimed that a study by the U.S. government's Fish & Wildlife Service showed there was no shortage. Most thought the supporters of the bill were correct but, since we will have to act on this subject again next year, the Legislature asked us to make this study to resolve the questions some had."

Santiesteban said his committee had already "put one major question to rest" at the hearing it held in Galveston in October.

"The testimony we received at the Galveston hearing clearly established that it would be improper to compare the figures from the federal government's study with those generated by the Texas Parks & Wildlife through its studies," Santiesteban said. "We brought the authors of both the state and federal reports before the committee," he pointed out, "and they testified that the two studies were so radically different that it was impossible to compare the results."

"For example," Santiesteban explained, "the federal study was based on less than 500 interviews conducted with fishermen along the entire Gulf Coast from Brownsville to Key West while the state surveyed more than 2600 fisherman only in Texas," he noted. "The scientist who direct both surveys told us they had different purposes in mind when they made their surveys and, as such, they were convinced that the figures couldn't be compared. In fact," he pointed out, "the author of the federal study said he believed that the state's figures on redfish and speckled trout populations in Texas were more accurate than his own. This resolved one of the major unsettled disputes," Santiesteban said.

"Since we have established that it isn't possible to compare those two studies," he said, "we now plan to take a better look at the figures from our own Parks & Wildlife Department's studies to determine how accurate they are. That's why we think about the methods used to develop the figures as well as the data itself."

Know the signs of heat stroke

FORT WORTH — In weather as hot as Texas' can get, it is wise to know the signs of overheating and heat stroke, warns a Texas College Medicine physician.

Scott Taylor, D.O., clinic director at TCOM's Institute for Human Fitness, advises coming in out of the sun and getting a drink of cool water when you:

- get cramps in the abdomen or calves;
- feel flushed;
- seem disoriented; and/or
- are nauseated.

When the relative humidity is not high, the body cools most effectively by evaporation. Placing the person in a shaded area and fanning the neck and trunk will usually be sufficient.

When the relative humidity is high, the body cools most effectively by conduction. Cool rags, cool water from a garden hose or ice packs to the head, neck and armpits will help conduct heat out of the body.

"The problem has gone past overheating and is heading into heat stroke when the person becomes extremely disoriented or stops sweating," Dr. Taylor said. "Then it's time for a physician or an ambulance."

A dark tan is not very healthy

FORT WORTH — Don't fall for the Madison Avenue pitch that deep, dark tans make people young, healthy and vigorous. Not so, says a Texas College of Osteopathic Medicine dermatologist.

"We live in a sun worshipping society, where deeply tanned people are admired and regarded as healthy," said Stephen Kessler, D.O. "In reality, deep tans wrinkle and age the skin before its time and present the threat of skin cancer."

And, of course, sun can burn. Dr. Kessler's advice is to wear a sunscreen lotion (the best available is marked SPF 15) if the skin hasn't been exposed to sun for a while. Continue to wear the sunscreen over a period of weeks until the skin tans. Then the tan will be a protection from normal summer sun exposure.

The TCOM faculty member urged the use of common sense when in the sun. People who don't tan well should avoid mid-day sun (10 a.m.-2 p.m.), when the ultraviolet radiation is the highest. "If you must be out then, wear a sunscreen and clothing and hats to cover the skin." And don't be fooled by a cloudy day, Dr. Kessler added. The skin-burning ultraviolet rays come through the cloud cover.

A sunburn can be severe enough to require medical attention. "If the burn does not respond to home care," he said, "consult a physician."

REAL ESTATE CONSUMER Condominium pros and cons

With the price of conventional houses continuing to rise, more and more people are looking at condominiums as alternative shelter. Remember, however, that like most purchases, condos have advantages and disadvantages.

A condominium entitles you to all the benefits of home ownership. Property taxes and the interest on the mortgage loan are deductible from your income tax. You also benefit from the buildup in equity, increase in value and pride of ownership.

But condos also involve other people. You own one of many units. You have a vote, but the majority will rule on such matters as pets and exterior changes.

Condo ownership can be more complex than ordinary home ownership. Ask questions and investigate before signing any legal documents.

It's called the renegotiated rate mortgage or RRM, and it may provide a means for you to buy a home you could not otherwise afford.

The RRM is a short-term loan of usually two to five years but with payments based on a 25- to 30-year repayment schedule. When the short-term loan expires, you may renew the loan at a new rate offered by the lender or you may shop for a better rate elsewhere.

Lenders have constraints which provide that the interest rate not be adjusted by more than one-half percent per year or five percent over the life of the mortgage. You pay no penalty for retiring the loan after the first term, and you are guaranteed renewal at the new rate if you so desire.

The RRM represents a compromise between you and the lender. It is likely to become more popular while interest rate trends remain uncertain.

In these days of tight money and high interest rates for housing, taking over someone else's mortgage may be the least expensive way for you to become a homeowner.

Assuming the payments on an existing low-interest home loan could prove less expensive than paying for a new loan at current market rates.

When evaluating an existing loan in comparison with obtaining new financing, consider these things. Does the existing mortgage allow for an assumption? If it does, can the lender change the terms or charge significant assumption fees?

What would be your liability under the loan assumption? In some transfers, the seller remains solely liable for the mortgage note, even though the buyer takes over the payments. In other assumptions, the buyer takes over liability along with the payments.

Before you buy a house, you should know what you are getting. Here are some things to look for when you inspect a house being offered for sale.

Check the foundation. It should be level and free of cracks. Examine the quality and condition of the roofing material.

Ask to see utility bills and check the energy efficiency of the house. Are the walls and ceilings properly insulated? Are doors and windows tightly fitted and weatherstripped? How old are the air conditioner and heater, and are they economical to operate?

Examine the number and condition of electrical outlets. Make sure bathroom fixtures work, and check the condition of the hot water heater.

The list could go on, but these are some of the more significant things to consider before you sign a contract.

If you are using electricity to heat your home in winter, here is a tip that might save you money.

A heat pump produces far more heat for each kilowatt-hour of electricity than does a resistance heater. This means your electric bill could go down substantially while you maintain your present level of comfort.

A heat pump operates somewhat like an air conditioner in reverse, and in fact, can actually warm your house in winter and cool it in summer.

The reliability of heat pumps has often been questioned, but present heat pump designs appear to be as reliable as conventional air conditioning units. Extended warranties are advisable for heat pumps at the same cost as for conventional air conditioners.

A heat pump costs more than a conventional electrical heating unit but could be worth the added cost in areas where electricity, propane or butane are used for heating.

Six injured in three local traffic accidents last week

Six people were reported injured in a rash of traffic accidents in and around Rockport this past weekend, according to reports of local law enforcement officials. The injured included a Refugio man, David Linney, whose left leg was reported "almost amputated" when he was thrown from his motorcycle in an accident on FM 136 near Bayside about 1:41 a.m. Sunday, June 27. According to Aransas County Chief Paramedic Bill Aston, Linney ran off the road and struck a stationary vehicle. The impact knocked him off his motorcycle onto the roadway and into the path of an oncoming car which struck him.

Linney was taken to Spohn Hospital.

Earlier on Thursday afternoon, a San Antonio man and his wife were reported injured when their Suburban, pulling a boat and trailer, was in collision with a car driven by Debra Ann Kullman of Rockport on Hwy. 35 at one of the entrances to Sea Aire Shopping Center.

Kullman also suffered reportedly minor injuries in the accident that occurred about 4:30 p.m.

Clarence H. Callahan, driver of the Suburban, was taken first to Enterprise Medical Clinic then to Coastal Bend Hospital in Aransas Pass after he complained of chest pains following the collision. His wife, Beatrice, was treated at Enterprise Clinic for a broken arm.

Kullman was taken to her personal physician. Rockport police who investigated the accident said Callahan was ticketed for failure to yield right-of-way following the accident.

Mary Cook of Rockport and Lisa Schwab, also of Rockport and a passenger in Cook's car, were treated for apparently minor injuries after they were in an accident just outside Rockport city limits on Hwy. 35 about 2:20 p.m. Friday, June 25.

Texas Highway Patrolman Mark Little, who investigated the accident, said a car driven by Raymond Mercer of Rockport was turning left from the highway into a private drive when the collision occurred. He said Mercer was cited for failure to yield right-of-way and not having a Texas driver's license.

Rockport police were called to investigate two more accidents over the weekend but no injuries were reported in either of those mishaps.

Luis J. Chavez of San Antonio was ticketed for following too closely after his car was in collision with a vehicle driven by John C. Thompson, also of San Antonio, about 5 p.m. Saturday, June 26.

Police said Thompson, westbound on Harbor Drive, was attempting a turn onto Baywood when his car was allegedly rear-ended by Chavez's vehicle.

And Juanita Jordan of Houston was ticketed for failure to yield right-of-way after her car was in collision with one driven by Kathleen Tillison of Rockport at the intersection of Market and Live Oak. That accident occurred about 12:13 p.m. Friday.

Harlan, Walston file as charter candidates

J.C. Harlan and W.G. (Bill) Walston, who both served on Rockport's 1979-90 charter commission, became the fifth and sixth candidates for the charter commission that city officials hope will be elected on Aug. 14.

Harlan filed late last week and Walston filed Monday, June 28, as candidates on the 15-member commission that will be empaneled to write a charter for Rockport if such a measure is approved by city voters in the Aug. 14 election.

Also serving on the 1979-80 charter commission was Ed Armstrong, who was the first to file as a candidate for the commission that city officials hope will be elected in August.

Others who have filed for candidacy so far include Ralph Winkelman, Dr. Curtis Kovacs and Marcelino Ramirez. Ramirez served on the steering committee that last month determined Rockport had sufficient population — in excess of 6,000 — to call a charter election.

Voters on Aug. 14 will be asked to cast their ballots "yes" or "no" on the question, "Shall a commission be chosen to frame a new charter?" If the voter marks "yes" to that question, he or she will then be asked to vote for 15 candidates to serve on the commission.

City officials emphasize that voters must answer the first question on the ballot since that will be canvassed first following the election. Only if the "yes" answers outweigh the "no's" will the city council then canvass votes for the charter commission candidates.

Deadline for filing for the charter commission is July 14. Filing is in the city secretary's office, City Hall, from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. Mondays through Fridays.

Rockport presently has no city charter and is governed by general law statutes of the Texas Legislature. With the adoption of a charter, Rockport would become a home rule city and, city officials say, would have more control over its own affairs.

An attempt to become a home rule was made in 1979 with election of a charter commission.

Lots of food is needed for annual Art Festival

By PAT BLAIR
Staff writer

Ask anyone who's worked in the food tent in years past: it takes a lot of food to make an Art Festival.

Approximately 125 artists will be exhibiting in the Festival set to begin Saturday, July 3. Crowds are expected to exceed last year's 18,000 to 20,000.

And there's no figure on how many volunteers are participating in this year's event — but it's a lot.

And most of those people are expected to do a certain amount of eating and drinking in the Festival's food tent.

The menu this year includes ranch steaks on tortillas, ground steak with chillies, Polish sausage on tortillas, chili and hot dogs, tamales, beans, corn on the cob and nachos. To quench thirst, there will be soft drinks, iced tea, beer and lemonade.

No figures are available yet on how much food is being ordered for this year, but last year, for example, the food order included approximately 1,250 ranch steaks, 1,250 Polish sausages and 3,000 flour tortillas, 1,000 hot dogs for chili dogs, 1,000 for just plain dogs, 2,000 hot dog buns.

Those in charge of last year's food tent ordered three gallons of chili (for the chili dogs), eight gallons of prepared cheese for nachos, six cases of nacho chips and four gallons of jalapeno peppers.

There were 700 ears of corn on the cob, 24 six-ounce bottles of catsup, 24 eight-ounce bottles of mustard, a gallon of sweet relish, 1,200 tamales.

The 1981 Art Festival opened with 250 gallons of lemonade, 300 gallons of iced tea, 40 kegs of beer and 64 cases of three different kinds of soft drinks.

In addition to all of this, there were 10,000 napkins, 12 cases of plates, 5,300 cups and more than three tons of ice.

And all of the food was sold out last year by early Sunday. Workers made several trips to the nearest grocery store to replenish supplies until finally, about 3 p.m., they gave up and simply started telling people they were "sold out."

Al and Elaine Vandever and Jane Turner are the chairpeople in charge of this year's food tent. Other chairpeople are Bob and Caroline Bernardy in charge of iced tea; Sally Brock, soft drinks; and Pete and Virginia Lazidas, beer. Food tent hostesses are Jane Moren and Ginger Duckworth.

Some of the volunteers working in this year's Festival are Wanda Sorem, Fred and Jo Gwinn, Ruth Gordon, S.E. Hodges, Sue Hunsinger, Esther Lonquist, Tootsie and Lou Guido, Jack Brown, Byron Bice, Bill Agee, Carol Brody, Della Roberts and Florence Gooder.

And though it isn't yet known how much food will be on hand when this year's Festival gets rolling at noon next Saturday, it's a safe bet that there'll be a lot of it...

Body needs water to combat summer heat

FORT WORTH — "Be aware of salt tablets," warns a Texas College of Osteopathic Medicine biochemist. "Not only do they not work, but they also can be dangerous."

Robert L. Kaman, Ph.D., associate director of TCOM's Institute for Human Fitness, explains that the idea promoting salt tablets is that they replace the salt the body loses through sweating. "Wrong," he said. "While you do lose some salt, the net effect of heavy perspiring is loss of water, not salt."

If a person takes salt

$1,575 in value, were white and brass with four tulip lamps and the microwave ovens, valued at $325 each, were Kenmore brand.

Theft reportedly occurred sometime between June 14 and June 18 and was reported last Thursday, June 24. The items were said to have been in condominiums that had been furnished and locked up.

In an incident of criminal mischief reported last Tuesday, June 23, a redwood storage shed valued at about $300 was apparently damaged by an axe.

The incident is believed to have occurred on June 20.

A fuel tank valued at $35 was reported taken from a boat in a slip at Palm Harbor Marina. Theft occurred between 1:40 and 1:55 a.m. Monday, June 14.

tablets, Dr. Kaman continued, salt will concentrate in the body in greater amounts than the water in the body is able to dissolve. The body then retains water in effort to keep the salt dissolved. That slows the sweating process, the body's heat regulating system.

"The danger is that your core temperature could soar and result in heat shock," Dr. Kaman said. "Because almost all of us get enough salt in a well balanced diet, the important thing to replace is water."

ACTA protests verdict

The verdict of "not guilty by reason of insanity" returned last week against presidential assailant John Hinckley has been called "one of the most dastardly miscarriages of justice ever performed," in a letter of protest from the Aransas County Taxpayers Association (ACTA).

At their meeting Tuesday, June 22, ACTA, on a motion by member Harold Pinchin, assembled a committee to draft the protest letter. The letter was completed and mailed on June 25 to Governor William Clements, Senator "Buster" Brown, Representative Leroy Wieting, State Senator Lloyd Bentsen, State Senator John Tower, U.S. Representative William Patman and United States Speaker of the House, Thomas "Tip" O'Neill.

ACTA member Pinchin, interviewed after the letter had been mailed, gave this reason for making the motion to register a protest — "I guess I'm just a hardheaded American. I can't see the ruination of our government by the Supreme Court or the poorly enacted laws that we've got."

Asked why ACTA should be the body to send such a letter, Pinchin replied, "Who else around here is going to?"

According to ACTA president Mitch Ammons, the drafting and sending of the letter is as far as ACTA was going to pursue the protest of the controversial insanity plea.

"I don't think that there's anything else a group like ours can do," said Ammons.

The ACTA letter reads as follows:

"On June 21, 1982 one of the most dastardly miscarriages of justice ever performed, occurred in this country. Last year 160,000,000 Americans watched on television as five upstanding citizens, including our president, were gunned down by an assassin. There was absolutely no question as to the guilt of the man who did the shooting. However, this week because of massive amounts of money involved, this criminal was given a 'not guilty by reason of insanity' verdict. We feel that this type of so-called justice only furthers the lawlessness that is rampant in this country.

"We therefore request that a new law be enacted to by the state of Texas to eliminate insanity as a factor in the guilt or innocence of a defendant. When a crime is committed the parties responsible are guilty. If a person committing a crime is of unbalanced mind, this does not alter the fact that the crime has been committed and should have no bearing on their serving their sentence. If subsequently they are incarcerated and later discharged from an institution for the criminally insane, then they should complete a full sentence in a regular penal institution, not be released.

"Other states already have such laws in their justice system, Texas should be the next state to enact such a law. The members of our organization urge you to give this matter your consideration and make every effort to have such legislation in our state."

Asked what he felt the sending of the letter would accomplish, Pinchin replied, "Just like everything else, probably nothing." He added however, that he believed it was important for citizens to register their dissatisfaction with the government.

Said Pinchin, "One of these days, we will gain control of our country again. Right now, it's gone to the dogs."

Recycling sets records in Texas during '81

A record 90 million glass bottles and jars were recycled in Texas in 1981, according to the Glass Packaging Institute (GPI).

The trade association for glass bottle makers says five Texas glass plants recycled 15 percent more containers than the year before.

In total, 50 million pounds of glass bottles were crushed and melted down to make new bottles, thereby reducing litter and solid waste in the state.

This trend of increased glass recycling is apparent throughout the United States, where a record three billion glass containers were recycled in 1981. This new high, the trade association reports, represents an 11.2 percent rise in glass recycling over 1980.

"These dramatic increases reflect the commitment of the glass industry to promote recycling to protect the environment, conserve natural resources and reduce energy consumption in the glass manufacturing process," said GPI President William W. Sadd.

More than 100 glass container manufacturing plants produce new containers in part from recycled glass. In addition, there are thousands of collection points throughout the United States that accept or pay the public for used glass containers. In fact, hundreds of independent recyclers throughout the nation are presently paying consumers up to one-and-a-half cents a pound for used glass.

These multi-product recycling centers take clean, color-separated glass containers and crush them into small bits known as cullet, which they store and ultimately transport to glass manufacturing plants.

Although the primary components of glass — sand, soda ash and limestone — are in abundant domestic supply, cullet has long been an integral part of the glass manufacturing process because of its economic advantage over virgin raw materials.

The use of cullet also provides energy benefits.

Since cullet melts faster than virgin materials, its use allows manufacturers to lower the temperature of their furnaces and, thus, decrease energy usage and emissions.

Motorcycle really taken on test ride

An $800 motorcycle was reported stolen after the youth who took it out for a test ride failed to bring it back Monday afternoon, June 21 — and the car he had been driving was reported stolen from Palacios.

Owner of the 'cycle, Aubrey Gene Kosciuski, called police Monday afternoon to report theft of the vehicle. Kosciuski said he had been offering the motorcycle for sale and the youth asked to test ride it.

He drove off on the motorcycle about 12:30 p.m.

After Kosciuski reported the theft, police ran a check on the Lincoln Continental the youth had left at Kosciuski's residence and learned that it had been reported stolen in Palacios.

The youth is described as a white male in his mid-20s, about five feet seven or eight inches, weighing about 185 pounds with brown hair and mustache.

Police were notified of a soft drink machine burglary at a bait stand in Rockport Harbor between 9 p.m. Monday and 6 a.m. Tuesday. Roe Fleming said approximately $50 in change was taken from the machine in his stand.

And Winston D. Churchill called police Tuesday afternoon to report a burglary he believes occurred around March 19.

Churchill told police he had missed his lawnmower from the garage of his residence around March 19 and since that time he has discovered other items missing.

Total value of the property believed taken amounts to $894.31 and includes power tools, batteries, two motor boat propellers and trampoline springs.

Police made one arrest on a charge of driving while intoxicated Wednesday, June 23.

Patience, not force, is needed to stop dog's digging

By Dr. Hap Lutz

Not all dogs dig holes for the same reasons. There are some dogs that are problem diggers, and make your yard look like the back side of the moon. Then you have other dogs that are not considered problems. The dog who occasionally digs a hole to bury a bone he considers a "treasure." He usually covers his hole up.

A puppy looking for a new game to play will take a fling at hole digging. Gentle discipline and perhaps a new toy will usually solve this problem.

Some dogs were originally bred to dig. Beagles and Bassetts will dig right into a rabbit's lair, and the Cairn Terrier into a fox hole.

Sometimes a dog will actually hear a gopher, and if his own canine instinct doesn't trigger the compelling urge to dig for him, his own inquisitiveness will. This dog isn't a problem digger, either.

Many pregnant females, if left unattended outdoors, will dig a hole to give birth to her litter. Samoyeds burrow under the snow to give birth because of the strong ancestry instinct; otherwise, the newborn puppies would freeze to death. The above dogs are not problem diggers.

Now, we come to the impish young dog that doesn't seem satisfied unless he can excavate the entire back yard. Motivated by boredom, they would rather dig than play with a toy. These dogs, between the ages of six and 18 months are in the "teenage" category. Positive training techniques have to be instituted.

It is always advisable to start with the simplest training method, and if necessary work up to the more complex.

I like to use "Hap Lutz" philosophy in training dogs and women." Use kindness and tenderness in your dealings with them and you will receive the same in return, and faster and more satisfying results.

Dogs have varying degrees of responsiveness to correction. Generally it requires the average dog seven days to learn — or in cases of hole-diggers — to unlearn.

Punishment at the time of the crime is just as necessary as punishment at the scene of the crime. It would do absolutely no good to come upon a hole that has been dug the day before and expect to be successful in reprimanding your dog. Visual observation and supervision are absolutely necessary. You'll have to catch the culprit in the act so he'll be able to associate what he is doing with the displeasing consequences which should follow.

Start with the most simple training method, which is the verbal "No!" Follow by shaming with "Bad Dog" as you approach him. Take him by the collar and hold him as close to the hole as you can and repeat your scolding commands. If after one week he continues, add one more step, and a good shaking along with the verbal admonishment and shaming. Ninety percent of the hole diggers will respond to this simple training method.

If you have been consistent with your verbal admonishment — yet have not seemed to make any headway, another method is needed. When you observe your dog digging, take a wood or iron stake and drive it deep in the center of the same hole. Tie an 18 inch length of clothesline or rope to his collar and the other end to the stake. Confine your dog to that hole. Let him meditate at his excavation site for 45 minutes — all alone. Don't stand there and keep him company. Each time you release your dog from his confinement, leave the stake in the hole as a reminder. When you are sure your dog has given up the habit, remove one stake a day, until all have been removed. To remove them all at once might indicate that it is now okay to dig holes again.

A favorite method for many professional dog trainers is using a string of the smallest fire-crackers. When they see a dog start to dig a hole, they light the string and throw them within three feet of the dog. Dogs don't generally like loud noises. I have used the same principle. However, instead of firecrackers, I tie about six empty tin cans together. When I observed my dog digging I would throw the cans near him. The sudden noise of the cans hitting the ground stopped the digging.

Beating a dog for hole digging is not the answer. If we humans went through life getting a physical beating each time we made a mistake we'd quickly learn to avoid the one doing the beating. So will your dog.

It is up to us, as owners of dogs, to provide the experience which will teach our family dog right from wrong.

From your dog's best friend. The one with a warm heart for cold noses.

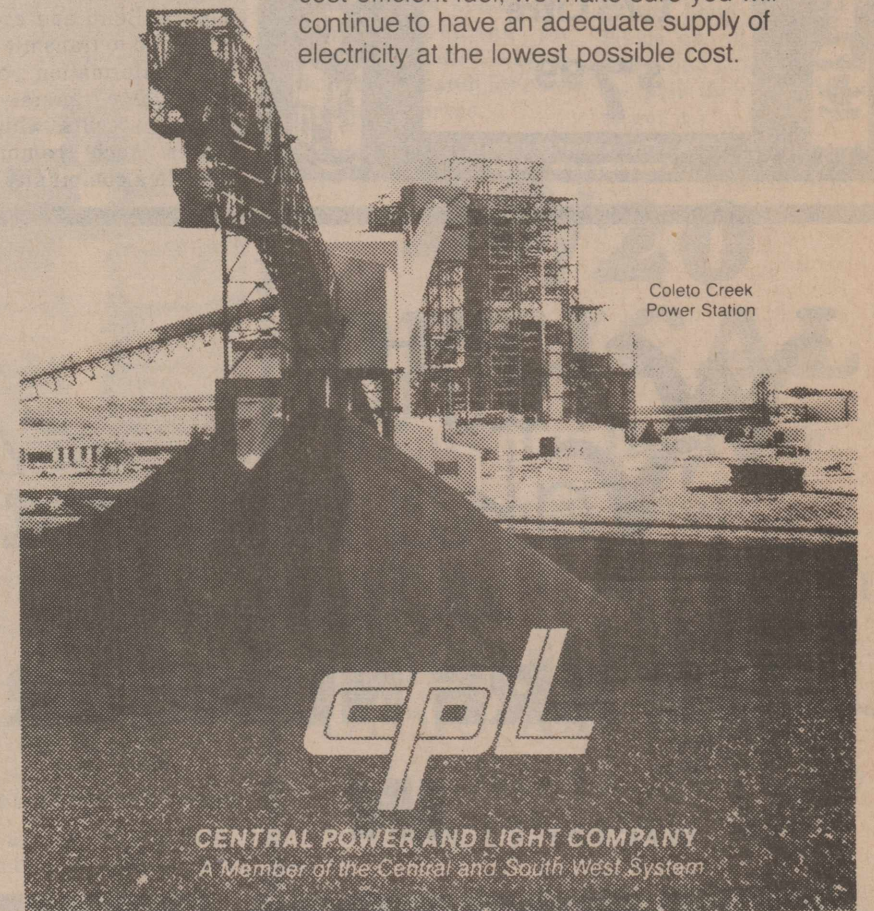

Dr. Hap Lutz

Coal helps control rising fuel costs

And when fuel costs are lower, so are your electricity bills. Moreover, thanks to modern technology, coal is clean-burning: the flue gas released from CPL's coal-fired plant is 99.5% clean.

Last year, Coletto Creek Power Station generated about one-quarter of the electricity used by our customers. The cost of the coal burned at Coletto Creek was two-thirds the cost of the natural gas used at our other plants.

In the years ahead, coal will assume an even bigger role in providing power for South Texas as CPL builds and shares in additional coal-fired units. By relying on this dependable and cost-efficient fuel, we make sure you will continue to have an adequate supply of electricity at the lowest possible cost.

Coastal Bend communities look at defenses against nuclear attack

By Juliet K. Wenger
Coastal Bend Council

Civil defense directors in communities of the Coastal Bend have received training in recent weeks to bring them up to date on means of protection being recommended at this time. They are preparing for hurricane season. At the same time, information is being given to them on actions that would be taken in the event of nuclear attack.

Anyone who has lived in the Coastal Bend for any length of time is aware of the need to review family and community plans for protection during each hurricane season. One of the basic factors in any type of emergency is communications. Electricity is cut off. Telephone lines go out or phones are continually busy. Eddie Bertram and Joe Cowan, amateur radio operators in Beeville, are members of RACES, whose members are designated by the Texas Department of Public Safety.

These designated operators form a network to provide emergency communications. Members of RACES live in most of the larger communities of the Coastal Bend and are fully equipped to transmit necessary information on an immediate basis. If a disaster occurs which requires such communications in a community which is not the home of such an operator, RACES can be called and an operator can move within a short period of time with portable equipment and in not much more time set up a fixed station and transmitter if they are needed.

These operators test their equipment and drill on a regular basis so that they are always ready to move. These are resourceful individuals, the type who can make do with what presents itself and find a way to accomplish what could not be done by traditional means.

It's easy to be glib in discussion of hurricane preparedness. Talking about nuclear disaster is something else. We all know that sooner or later we are going to deal with a weather emergency. We all hope, fervently, that we are not going to have to deal with a nuclear emergency. There are differing opinions about the possibility of dealing with it.

Doyal Childress of Beeville is one of the civil defense directors who recently returned from training sessions. Childress says that communities such as Beeville, home base for Chase Field, would be risk communities, and in any nuclear emergency the population would be evacuated to northern Bee County or Karnes County. The city is being divided into quadrants and people in each quadrant will be notified where they are to go and by what roads. This is true for other risk communities.

Communities with no naval installation or any logical target for nuclear attack would be host communities. In them buildings are being inventoried to show which have sufficient strength to be used for fall-out shelters. Dirt would be piled up eight feet high on the sides of the buildings and on the tops as insulation against fall-out. Childress says, surprisingly enough, that most food stuffs would not be contaminated by fall-out. He says the most current information provided by the federal and state government in training programs is that vegetables, fruit and other foods could be washed and eaten. Also, he says that unless water supplies were contaminated by blast effects, such as broken sewer lines, the supply would not be contaminated by fall-out. These words are encouraging, in so far as there can be any encouragement in such a subject. At the federal and state level, the term used today is "emergency management." At the local level, many of the directors, including Childress prefer what he calls the "old fashioned term" of civil defense. By whatever name they call it, our local governments are keeping abreast of accumulated knowledge and putting us in the best position possible to deal with whatever the unexpected category of emergency.

Tax deferral period extended

Taxpayers who sold or will sell their homes after July 20, 1981, have 24 months to reinvest the proceeds of the sale in a new home if they wish to postpone the tax on the profit, or gain, according to Internal Revenue Service (IRS) officials.

Previously, the purchase of another principal residence had to occur within 18 months of the sale of the old home.

The Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 has not only extended the reinvestment period for sales made after July 20, 1981, but also for sales made before July 21, 1981, if the 18-month rollover period did not expire before July 20.

For example, a taxpayer who sold a home on Dec. 10, 1980, would have 24 months to reinvest the gain because the original 18-month rollover period would not expire by July 20, 1981.

In order to postpone all the tax on the gain, the cost of the new residence must be at least that of the old home's adjusted selling price, according to the IRS.

The IRS stressed that the tax on the gain is only postponed, not eliminated. Any gain from the sale is subtracted from the cost, or basis, of the new residence. This means that the gain from a subsequent sale of this new residence includes the gain from the sale of the previous home.

For example, if a taxpayer sold a home for $90,000 and made a $10,000 gain, then bought another house for $100,000, the gain is not taxed, but it is subtracted from the $100,000, making the basis of the new home $90,000.

In addition, taxpayers who are 55 years of age or older on the date of sale of the personal residence may elect a one-time exclusion of gain of up to $125,000 on the sale.

Certain other conditions apply to be eligible to exclude the gain. The individual must have owned and used the property as the principal residence for three or more years out of the five year period preceding the sale or exchange.

Homeowners who postpone gain must report the transaction in the same year on Form 2119, "Sale or Exchange of Principal Residence," the IRS said. If any of the gain is taxable, it must be reported on Schedule D of Form 1040. If the gain is excluded, as in the case of those 55 years of age or older, homeowners also should use Form 2119.

More information on the sale of a home is available in IRS Publication 523, "Tax Information on Selling Your Home." This publication and tax forms can be obtained by calling IRS. The number in Corpus Christi, the nearest office, is 888-9431.

Osteopath advises

Don't dive in to weekend exercises

FORT WORTH — Our bodies were not meant to sit in an easy chair Monday through Friday and swim all day Saturday and Sunday, says a Texas College of Osteopathic Medicine exercise scientist.

The advice of David Upton, Ph.D., to weekend sports enthusiasts is this: Do stretching exercises before diving in. Better yet, do them every day. "They aren't difficult and take no equipment," he said. "And you can begin before you get out of bed in the morning."

For example: When you hear the alarm, stretch — the kind that feels really good. Once out of bed, sit on the floor and do shoulder shrugs. Then sit with your back against the wall and try to get your hips into the corner with your legs out in front of you. Away from the wall, sit with soles of the feet together and work to get your knees down to the floor. Sit in a chair and lean forward as far as possible until your head is between your knees. Stand facing the wall, palms on wall, lean into the wall with one leg bent and the other extended straight back; then switch leg positions. Bend over to the floor, stretching until you feel a pull and stay there a few seconds. Steady yourself with your left hand against a wall, stand on your left leg and bend your right knee all the way back; grab the right foot at the laces with the right hand and stretch; switch sides. End on hands and knees with an arching and relaxing of the back.

"All of these should be done slowly and not jerkily," Dr. Upton cautioned. "If you still feel tight in the shoulders, grab a door jamb and lean out."

The same exercises hold for the weekend waterskier who thinks he cannot get out of bed on Monday morning.

Students get working experience on seismic ship

GALVESTON — The ship had been firing its guns onstop for three days, but no enemy was in view and no battle in progress. The target for this particular sea maneuver was layers of ocean sediment, the ammunition was compressed air and the objective was information.

"That's what we're out here for — data," Dick Boffler told the geophysics students gathered in the ship's laboratory shortly after the research vessel "Fred H. Moore" had left its dock at Galveston. The 165-foot seismic ship, belonging to The University of Texas at Austin Institute for Geophysics, had embarked on its first training cruise for students.

During the four-day trip into the Gulf of Mexico, the 12 UT Austin seniors and graduate students on board had the opportunity for hands-on experience in collecting seismic data, the raw material geophysicists use to determine what lies beneath the earth's surface.

Although the Moore had made numerous scientific cruises in the past, this was the maiden voyage dedicated exclusively to students, and particularly undergraduates. The trip was the culmination of months of planning on the part of Dennis Brock, president of the UT Austin Geophysical Society. What better way to learn marine geophysics than to do the actual work, had been the graduating senior's point of view.

"This is a unique experience for undergraduates," said Dr. Clark Wilson, a UT assistant professor of geological sciences and advisor for the student society.

"I don't know of any other place in the world that does this," he observed. The Institute for Geophysics now plans to offer the training cruises regularly.

Back in the ship's lab, Dr. Boffler, a geologist at the institute, was giving the students an overview of what they would be doing for the next four days and how they would do it.

"You want to record everything you can in the logs," he said. "You'll need that information for processing the data later."

He made assignments for the watches: three groups of four students each alternating duty in the lab, four hours on, eight off, to begin at midnight that night.

"Instead of sunning yourselves in your off hours, I want you in here reading the literature," he ordered, pointing to a stack of maps and technical papers on the geology of the Gulf of Mexico.

"I get to sun," he added with a grin.

The layers of sediment to be studied during the cruise, he went on, are part of the Texas-Louisiana Slope, a step-like region under the Gulf that extends from the continental shelf to the deep sea floor. Underlying the slope are salt domes, geological features that can be big traps for oil and gas.

"It's your cruise, too," Dr. Boffler told the students. "If you want to alter the route, we're open to suggestions."

He went through the routine to be followed in the lab, explaining the specific entries the students would make in the numerous logs and the equipment they would be monitoring.

"We'll shoot for three days straight," the scientist announced.

He was referring to the ship's air guns, which later would be lowered into the water. The guns are timed to emit periodic bursts of air, compressed at about 500 pounds per square inch. The blasts are the source for sound waves, the backbone of what geophysicists call "continuous seismic reflection profiling." It's the primary method of geologic exploration in deep water.

In the technique of reflection profiling, sound waves are generated at precisely controlled and closely spaced intervals. Some of the waves travel downward through the water and into the sediments below the sea floor. At the boundaries of the different kinds of sediment, part of the sound waves are reflected back toward the surface of the water.

Floating detectors — hydrophones — capture that reflected acoustic energy, convert it to electrical energy and transmit it back to computers and monitors aboard the ship. The end result, after subsequent digestion of the complex data by computers on land and then more painstaking interpretation by geophysicists and geologists, is a geologic cross section, a picture of the many layers of sediment deep in the earth.

Early in the morning the students donned life vests, for safety, and converged on the Moore's stern, where the 24-channel streamer sat looking like a giant 10-foot spool of thread turned on its side. Inside the mile-long "thread" — really five-inch diameter plastic tubing — were 24 evenly spaced "live" and "dead" sections. Each live portion had 25 to 30 sound-sensitive hydrophones, followed by an empty or dead space.

With a radar buoy attached to its end, the streamer was slowly unreeled and fed into the water. At regular intervals, the students clamped around the streamer "birds," pressurized fiberglass cylinders with wings that maintain the streamer at an optimum depth of about 35 feet as it trails behind the ship. If the streamer rides deeper than that, the hydrophones pick up too much reverberation; if it's too shallow, there is too much noise from the water's surface.

After the two 750-pound torpedo-like air guns were hoisted from the deck and lowered over the stern about 25 feet down into the water, the data collection was about to begin. The Moore began steaming away at 6.2 knots, the precise speed needed to fire the computer-controlled guns every 22 seconds. As the shots commenced, the returning sound waves triggered the magnetic tape drives in the lab and the students started making entries in the logs, some every few minutes, others hourly.

With a short course in navigation from Patty Ganey, a research associate at the institute in charge of organizing the lab for the cruise, the students took over plotting the ship's course.

By the second round of watches, everyone had settled comfortably into the lab routine. Fine weather and plenty of good food added to the comfort.

"I'm proud of you all for how quickly you caught on," Dr. Boffler said with sincere approval. "The record keeping is very important. It pays off a million times."

During the three days of shooting, the Moore covered 400 miles of the Gulf. The data collected, which some of the students will process later as class projects, will tie together existing multi-channel lines from earlier UT research projects along the slope. The whole thrust of the work at the Institute for Geophysics is toward a better understanding of the geologic history of the Gulf and other areas and the dynamic processes taking place in the earth. Such knowledge has direct bearing on earthquake studies and is critical in the search for new petroleum reserves.

Most of the students on the training cruise soon will be involved in that search in one way or another. Many have jobs lined up with oil companies.

So was the trip beneficial to them? Had they really learned anything?

"A LOT," was a succinct, but virtually unanimous, response.

"The trip far surpassed my expectations in every way," said one student. "I've been writing my thesis on all this kind of data, but I never knew all the pain they went through to get it."

Health care costs can be minimized

Americans spent nearly $218 billion on personal health in 1980. This amount represented almost 10 percent of the gross national product.

Figures such as these have prompted increased concern over the rising cost of health care.

Recently, six organizations representing health care providers, insurers, business and labor issued a joint statement. They encouraged their members of local affiliates to form health care coalitions and to direct their activities toward restraining health costs.

The groups were the American Medical Association, the American Hospital Association, the Blue Cross and Blue Shield Associations, the Health Insurance Associations of America, the Business Roundtable and the AFL-CIO.

The Texas Medical Association says individuals also can help minimize health care costs by:

Having a family doctor. The physician will keep a permanent record of your medical history, which can prevent duplicating expensive and time-consuming tests. The family doctor also can advise you on preventing illness.

Not waiting too long before seeing a doctor. Some people try to cut costs by waiting until they are seriously ill. This approach defeats the purpose of preventive medicine and costs more in the long run.

Using a hospital emergency room only for emergencies. The emergency room is an expensive place to treat minor ailments. Try calling your personal physician first.

Using the telephone. A family doctor who has examined you regularly is familiar with your health history. Sometimes the doctor can advise you over the phone about minor health problems.

Having regular check-ups. The American Medical Association says that if you are past 35, a complete health evaluation every one to three years is a good idea.

Asking about pre-admission testing at hospitals and short-stay or outpatient surgery problems. These programs can shorten or eliminate a hospital stay for minor surgery, treatments or tests.

Following your doctor's advice.

Public Notice

Southwestern Bell, in accordance with the rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas, hereby gives notice of the company's intent to implement a new schedule of telephone rates in Texas, effective July 27, 1982, unless otherwise determined by the Commission.

It is expected that the requested rate schedule will furnish a 13.4 percent increase in the company's intrastate revenues.

A complete copy of the new rate schedule is on file with the Public Utility Commission at Austin, Texas, and with each affected municipality served by Southwestern Bell, and is available for inspection in each of the company's public business offices in Texas. The Commission staff has contended in the past that all rates are subject to change as a result of Southwestern Bell's rate application.

Notice to El Paso Area Customers

Effective January 1, 1982, Southwestern Bell adopted the Mountain States tariffs in effect for El Paso County. Southwestern Bell proposes to merge the separate El Paso tariffs with its tariffs applicable to the rest of Texas. The resulting new rate schedule is on file with the PUC and the El Paso area municipalities served by Southwestern Bell, and is available for inspection at our El Paso business office.

Notice to Customers of Other Telephone Companies

The filing includes, but is not limited to, proposals to increase rates for interexchange private line and foreign exchange (FX) service. Changes in such rates would also affect customers of other telephone companies because such companies provide interexchange private line and foreign exchange service in accordance with rates specified in Southwestern Bell's tariffs. While Southwestern Bell has proposed no increase in long distance rates, any change in those rates would also affect customers of other telephone companies.

Aviso Público

Southwestern Bell, en conformidad a las reglas del Public Utility Commission (Comisión de Servicios Públicos) de Texas, por la presente hace saber su intención de establecer un nuevo arancel para servicio de teléfono en Texas con vigencia a partir del 27 de julio, 1982, a menos que la Comisión haga otra determinación.

Se espera que el nuevo arancel que se ha solicitado rendirá un aumento de 13.4 por ciento en los ingresos intraestatales de la compañía.

Una copia completa del nuevo arancel se ha archivado en las oficinas del Public Utility Commission en Austin, Texas, al igual que en cada municipalidad afectada y servida por Southwestern Bell, y cada una de las oficinas de la compañía para negocios con el público en Texas tiene una copia para lectura pública. En el pasado, la Comisión ha sostenido que toda tarifa está sujeta a cambios que resulten de la manera en la cual Southwestern Bell aplique sus tarifas.

Aviso a Clientes en la Región de El Paso

Con vigencia a partir del 1o de enero de 1982, Southwestern Bell ha adoptado las tarifas de Mountain States efectivas en el condado de El Paso. Southwestern Bell propone unir las tarifas de El Paso con sus otras tarifas que se aplican al resto de Texas. El nuevo arancel que resulta de esta unión se ha archivado en la Comisión de Servicios Públicos (Public Utility Commission), al igual que en las municipalidades de la región de El Paso servidas por Southwestern Bell, y está disponible para inspección pública en nuestras oficinas de El Paso.

Aviso a los Clientes de Otras Compañías de Teléfono

El registro incluye, pero no se limita a, propuestas para aumentar las tarifas para servicio de línea privada entre centrales telefónicas (interexchange private line) y servicio de central telefónica extranjera (foreign exchange FX). Cambios en dichas tarifas de servicio también afectarían a clientes de otras compañías de teléfono porque dichas compañías proveen los servicios ya mencionados en conformidad a tarifas especificadas por Southwestern Bell. Aunque Southwestern Bell no ha propuesto un aumento en las tarifas para larga distancia, cualquier cambio en las mismas también afectaría a los clientes de otras compañías de teléfono.

Comptroller's office eyes flea markets for violations of state sales tax laws

AUSTIN — State Comptroller Bob Bullock said today Comptroller enforcement officers are visiting flea markets across the state to make sure all Texas retailers are treated equally.

"We have received complaints from taxpayers about competitors who don't charge or don't pay sales taxes. The business people who have made these complaints are only asking for what they deserve — to be treated just exactly like their neighbors and their competitors," Bullock said.

Bullock explained the enforcement officers now visiting flea markets aren't looking for the once-a-year garage sale a family might hold to clean out the overflow from the attic.

"We're looking for people who continually sell merchandise. When you start setting up shop week in and week out, you're not a garage sale anymore, you are a retailer. And the Legislature says retailers must have a permit from the Comptroller, post the necessary bond, report and pay their taxes."

Bullock pointed out that businesses who do not pay sales tax gain an unfair advantage over the conscientious taxpayer.

TAMU offers doctorate in agriculture

COLLEGE STATION — Texas A&M University now offers a doctoral degree in agricultural education.

The new doctoral program will begin Sept. 1 and will lead to either the doctor of philosophy (Ph.D.) or the doctor of education (Ed.D.) degree, announces Dr. Earl Knebel, head of Texas A&M's Department of Agricultural Education which will administer the program.

The program was approved at the last meeting of the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System. It is designed to prepare individuals to pursue careers in the following:

- Teacher education in agriculture at universities and colleges.

- Agricultural Extension Services.

- Programs of international development in agriculture.

- Community college agricultural instruction and administration.

- Training and education for agricultural industry and agricultural business.

- Programs in agricultural education in state departments of education.

"Seven graduate faculty members in agricultural education will be involved in teaching and directing students in the new program," says Knebel. "Two years of full-time study and research will be necessary to complete program requirements, while students on assistantships will normally complete the degree within three years."

Graduate fellowships and assistantships are available to qualified students, and applications for admission to the program are now being accepted, he adds.

"This new doctoral program will give added breadth to our overall efforts in preparing individuals for various agricultural fields," points out Knebel. "Such programs are already in place at eight prominent land-grant universities over the nation, and we are proud that Texas A&M has joined these ranks."

Veterans ask...

Questions frequently heard by the Veterans Administration

Q. I have applied for a GI home loan at every bank in town and have been turned down. I thought the Veterans Administration guaranteed every veteran a loan.
A. The guaranteed home loan is a guaranty by the VA to the lender that if you default on your loan the VA will pay the lender 60 percent of the loan, not to exceed $27,500. The veteran, however, must be a good credit risk and be reasonably able to repay the loan.
Q. I have been receiving VA widow's pension since my husband died two years ago. I have recently become eligible for Social Security. Will that affect my widow's pension?
A. Yes. The amount of your widow's pension is determined by all your other income, including Social Security. You should report any change in income to the VA immediately to avoid an overpayment. It is advisable to furnish the VA a copy of the letter awarding you Social Security so your benefits can be adjusted

Meat distributors often use their own standards

COLLEGE STATION — Though often confused with one another, meat inspection and grading are related but are distinct in intent and purpose.

"Neither state nor federal meat inspection directly affects the price level, but the type of inspection certainly dictates the distribution area," says Dr. Edward Uvacek, economist in livestock marketing with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

The Meat Inspection Act, passed by the U.S. Congress in 1906, required federal inspection for cleanliness and wholesomeness of all meat moving in interstate and foreign commerce, Uvacek explains. Shortly after the Act passed, similar state and municipal sanitary regulations extended protection to consumers for meat not slaughtered and processed under federal supervision.

"It must be understood that meat passed under federal inspection is wholesome at the time of inspection," Uvacek says. "The meat inspection stamp denotes a piece of meat was checked by a federal inspector and found free from disease or contamination."

All interstate commerce meat must be federally inspected, though livestock may be slaughtered and meat sold within a state with only state inspection, the economist points out. Prepared and processed meat items also are subject to federal inspection if the products are for interstate movement.

In December, 1967, Congress passed the Wholesome Meat Act, which allowed each state three years to improve the quality of state inspection systems to the same level as federal standards.

"If a state didn't comply within that time period, the Federal Meat Inspection Division of the U.S. Department of Agriculture had the power to take over the state program," Uvacek notes. "States passing a mandatory state inspection system equal to federal standards could receive federal assistance up to 50 percent of the cost of such inspection."

Texas has a mandatory state inspection system for meat, meaning all commercially produced meat in Texas is inspected by either federal or state inspectors.

Federal meat grading, on the other hand, influences price levels of meat. In fact, federal beef grades are designed to facilitate communication between sellers and buyers on the quality of the graded product.

"Grading is a classification system process which separates beef carcasses into distinct groups based on physical factors such as color, texture, firmness, marbling and estimated yields," says Uvacek.

Marbling — the flecks of fat found throughout the carcass muscles — is the chief characteristic in beef grading and an indicator of palatability. Color, texture and firmness also are associated with consumer acceptability.

Federal beef grading is an activity of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. It is voluntary and is paid for by meat packers, Uvacek explains.

"In this grading system, the higher the degree of marbling, color and texture, the higher the grade," he continues. "The four most familiar quality beef grades are USDA Prime, Choice, Good and Standard."

Only about half the commercially produced beef is federally graded, notes the economist. Carcasses not federally graded are usually graded by the staff of a large meat distributor or supermarket chain. These distributors often use their own standards, which may or may not be the same as USDA grades, says Uvacek.

Blind couple offers sight of spirit

Robert J. Smithdas is a poet, an author, a philosopher, and he holds three honorary doctoral degrees in the humanities. His major area of activity is rehabilitation of the handicapped. It's a subject with which he is well acquainted, for Smithdas is both deaf and blind and has been since the age of four.

As a child whose world had suddenly gone black and silent, it was imperative that he go to school and in this case the Western Pennsylvania School for the Blind. From there he entered the famous Perkins School for the Blind in Watertown, Mass. At Perkins he achieved a nearly perfect scholastic average, and although deaf-blind students do not usually attempt the complexities of undergraduate work, Robert was anxious to take on the challenge, with his teachers encouraging him to do so. The result was that in 1950, Smithdas graduated cum laude with a B.A. from St. John's University in Jamaica, N.Y., the first deaf-blind student to earn a college degree since Helen Keller received hers from Radcliffe a half century before. Smithdas was not content; he was determined to reach higher, and three years later he was awarded his Master's degree at New York University, the first deaf-blind student ever to attain such academic distinction.

He could not have accomplished any of it alone and to aid him, he had had the unstinting assistance of assigned volunteers. They recited class lectures to him, using the manual alphabet; transcribed his texts into braille; accompanied him on his rounds, always present, always ready to help sustain his efforts. He could never thank them enough.

Writing had always been a means of expression for him, and his autobiography, "Life At My Fingertips," published in 1958, brought considerable acclaim. As a member of the Poetry Society of America and a fellow of the International Institute of Arts and Letters he was named Poet of the Year for 1960-61. His book of poems "City of the Heart," speaks to the heart, for, as he says, "My heart sang (these poems) to me over the years — because poignant moods or powerful emotions made me ache to crystallize my thoughts and feelings into verbal expressions..." His second book of poems, "Shared Beauty," is soon to be published.

A winner of presidential citations and a member of key committees to aid the deaf-blind, Smithdas considers his most important achievement to date was to play a major role in developing the legislation by which Congress voted in 1967 to establish the Helen Keller National Center for Deaf-Blind Youths and Adults at Sands Point, N.Y.

The Center is a unique and vital training facility, the only one of its kind. It houses up to 50 deaf-blind clients at one time, who come under the tutelage of a dedicated staff of experts assisted by trained volunteers, many of whom are high school age.

As the Center's Director of Community Education, Dr. Smithdas spends a great deal of time on the lecture circuit. He travels without help, using public transportation, impressing and holding audiences with his remarkable capabilities and stimulating personality. He's a swimmer and an avid angler also, but perhaps most important of all, he's married.

His wife, Michelle, is deaf-blind, too, having lost her hearing at 16 and her eyesight in an accident five years later. She entered the Helen Keller Center in 1972, and on her first day there she met Robert Smithdas. Perhaps it was love at first touch; they were married in 1975, and today Mr. and Mrs. Smithdas reside in their own home in Port Washington not far from the center, where she is also employed as an assistant instructor.

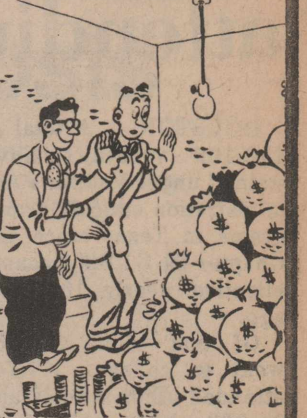

Together, though deprived of sight and sound, they offer to anyone who wishes to see and hear, the sight and sound of the human spirit at work.

'Guys and Dolls' at Jones Auditorium

KINGSVILLE — A joint effort by Texas A&I University's music and theater arts departments will bring the hit musical "Guys and Dolls" to Jones Auditorium July 1 - 3 as part of Kingsville's Founder's Day celebration.

Curtain time is 8 p.m. Admission is $2 for students and $3 for all others.

Based on a story by Damon Runyon, with music and lyrics by Frank Loesser, the award-winning production was presented more than 1,200 times on Broadway. A film version starred Frank Sinatra and Marlon Brando.

The show features actors, singers and dancers. Members of the university community, as well as the Kingsville and other area communities, have been cast according to music director Robert Scott.

Stage director David Deacon said the variety of roles makes this production one of Texas A&I's largest.

"The story," explained Dr. Deacon, "deals with the lowlife characters, including flashy gamblers and chorus girls, who haunted Broadway after World War II."

Miss Sarah Brown, portrayed by Texas A&I sophomore Roseann Crandall of Kingsville, is in charge of the Save-A-Soul Mission near Times Square. She holds street corner meetings in the same vicinity where Nathan Detroit, played by Bishop junior Sammy Guitierrez and his cronies hang out.

Nathan is the operator of a floating crap game that is temporarily homeless because Lt. Brannigan, played by Texas A&I theater arts professor Dr. Randall Buchanan, is waging a campaign on crap games in the neighborhood.

Kingsville resident Donna Coker has been cast as Miss Adelaide, a singer at the Hot Box, who is tired of her 14-year engagement to Nathan and wants him to marry her.

If Nathan can raise $1,000 he can get a place to hold his game and the town is full of anxious crap shooters looking for action. He hits on the idea of tricking Sky Master-son, portrayed by Texas A&I sophomore from Kingsville Charlie Leon, into betting he can name a "doll" who will not fall in love with Sky. Sky is sure of himself, not only in gambling, but particularly with women, and takes the bet. Nathan names Miss Sarah.

The plot thickens and the crap games float.

Summer pesticide accidents on rise

FORT WORTH — The misuse of pesticides and fertilizers results in accidents every summer, a Texas College of Osteopathic Medicine toxicologist cautions.

Most accidents are caused by improper distribution or storage, says Gary Wimbish, Ph.D., associate professor of pathology at the medical school. "The ABCs for proper use of pesticides are simple: Read the label, mix and distribute them as instructed and avoid contact with the skin or inhalation of the vapors."

Accidents usually go something like this: Some of the poison is left over, it is stored in a soft drink bottle, and a curious child comes along and drinks it. "The way to avoid this, of course, is to maintain the excess in the original containers and store them out of reach of children," Dr. Wimbish said.

Symptoms of dangerous contact with a pesticide can be mistaken for those of a cold or virus, he added. The symptoms are nausea, loss of appetite, cramping, excessive sweating, salivating and diarrhea. If you suspect an ingestion of a poison, first call your physician, who can make a definite diagnosis with lab tests, and if a doctor is not available, then call the local poison control center, whose number should be kept by the telephone.

One of the most dangerous fertilizers used in farming operations, Dr. Wimbish said, is anhydrous ammonia. "Tanks can leak and as pressure builds (usually associated with overfilling and heat), the safety valve may release a large blast of ammonia into the operator's face, causing permanent damage to eyes, skin or the respiratory system, or even death. The only advice I can give is to be very careful of leaks and take all proper precautions, treating the anhydrous ammonia as a deadly gas."

More veterans attending school

HOUSTON — A total of 442,169 veterans have trained under Veterans Administration education programs in Texas since the Chapter 34 GI Bill became effective nearly 16 years ago.

Of that total, 302,451 went to college, 117,749 attended other schools and 21,969 chose on-the-job training, according to a new report by the VA Office of Reports and Statistics, said Ted Myatt, director, Houston VA Regional Office.

The report noted that during fiscal 1981, a total of 65,821 veterans were being educated in Texas through VA programs. They included 56,024 in colleges, 6,096 in other schools, 1,145 by correspondence, and 2,556 through OJT.

Among the veterans receiving compensations in Texas last year for disabilities, 2,637 were over-coming service-connected disabilities under VA's Chapter 31 Vocational Rehabilitation program. Of those in voc rehab training, 2,502 were Vietnam-era veterans.

The vocational rehabilitation training was divided into 1,909 Texas veterans in college, 650 in other schools, nine on farms, 56 in OJT and 13 unknown.

Among survivors or dependents of veterans, 1,427 spouses and 7,415 children were attending college or other schools in Texas last year under the Chapter 35 Dependents Educational Assistance program according to the VA report, Myatt said.

Those seeking more information on those programs should use the toll free numbers listed for the Houston VA Regional Office.

Economy causes students to hustle

FORT WORTH — Today's economy means college students will have to hustle, said Robert Divall, who recently visited Texas Christian University as the David L. Tandy executive-in-residence.

Two essential tools for success for any major are writing and verbal skills. With less opportunity than ever before in the job market, these tools become a necessity, Divall said.

Divall is a business consultant and professional corporate director. He met with community leaders, business classes and faculty and staff as part of a week-long visit to TCU's M.J. Nealey School of Business.

Without verbal and writing skills, people cannot prepare a proper report, much less sell themselves with their written programs, Divall said.

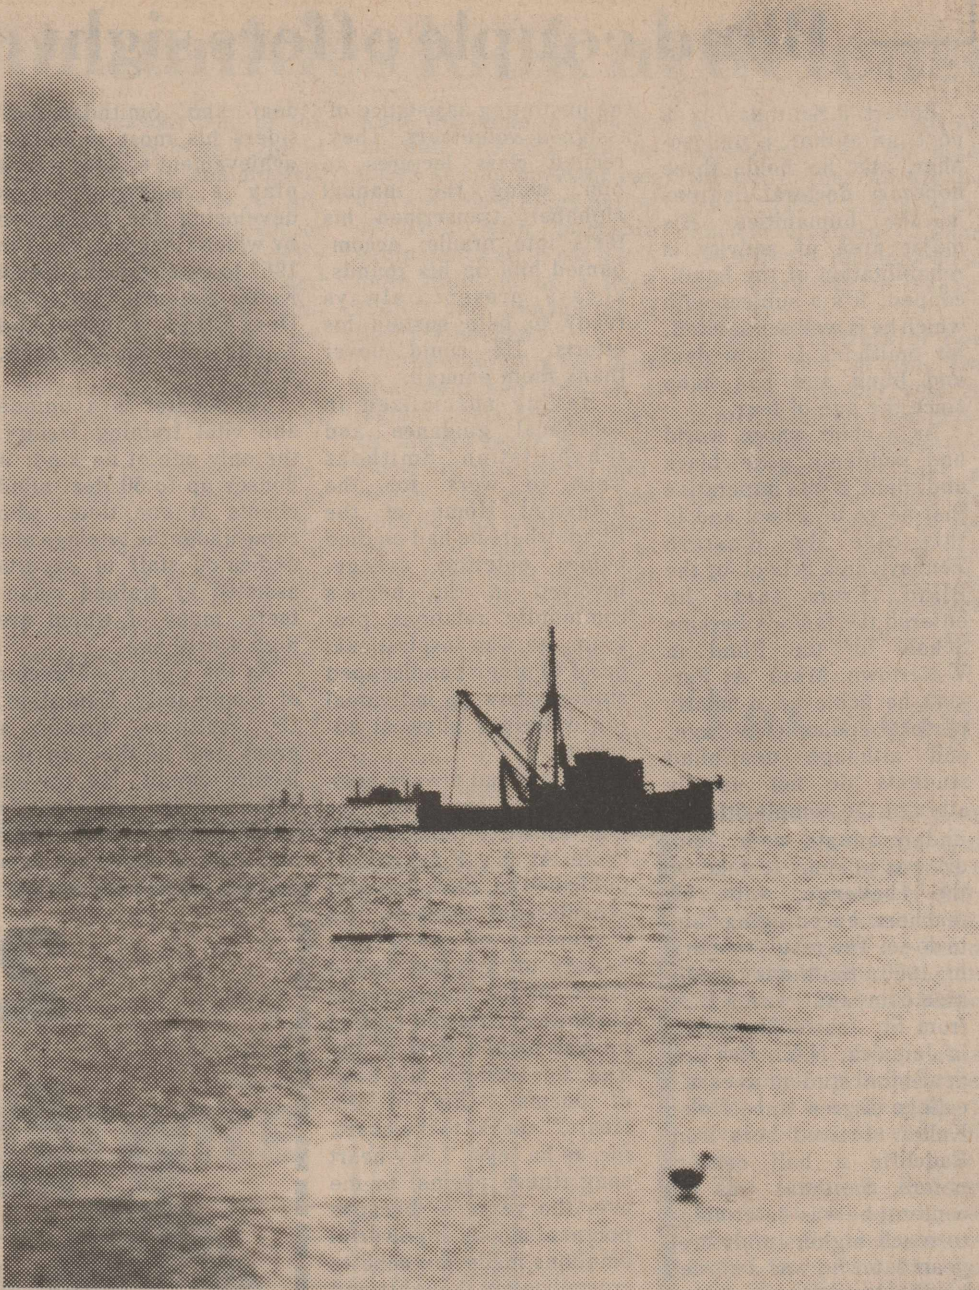

The corporate executive also talked about the qualities necessary for a corporate director, including integrity, good judgment, common sense, conscientiousness, independence and a willingness to ask questions and take positions of responsibility. A corporate director also needs the ability to learn and to be willing to act on one's belief, he added.

And of course there must be a knowledge and understanding of free enterprise, Divall said.

Divall has worked for six companies during his career: Arthur Anderson, Cenco Instruments, Mitchell Manufacturing Co., Benjamin Electric Co., Lytle Corporation and American Hospital Supply Corporation. He was chief financial officer of American Hospital Supply, a manufacturer and distributor of health care products and services worldwide, whose 1979 earnings totaled $109 million.

Divall currently is director of First Illinois Corporation, Roper Corporation, Xonics Inc. and Northwest Community Hospital.

The executive-in-residence program, funded by a grant from the Tandy Corporation, has brought several top executives from leading American corporations to TCU.

Summer brings mosquitoes threat

Along with the pleasures of summer comes a threat to your comfort and health — disease-carrying mosquitoes. St. Louis Encephalitis (SLE) and Western Equine Encephalitis (WEE) are considered to be endemic in Texas. The vector (or carrier) of arboviral encephalitis is the mosquito. Texas offers an ideal environment for encephalitis because of its large bird population which can become infected with the virus, and because it is on the flyways of migratory birds. Widespread rainfall could add to the mosquito problem this year.

Although most patients recover, encephalitis can cause brain damage and death, usually in the very old or very young. Two children among four Texans with reported WEE last year suffered neurological problems from the disease. Encephalitis starts with headaches and fever, and is hard to diagnose in infants and small children. From that point, it can proceed to stiffness in the neck, nausea, vomiting, stupor, and coma. In addition to four cases of WEE, four cases of SLE and one case of imported dengue fever were reported to state health authorities last year.

The diseases are cyclic, with ups and downs in reported cases almost yearly. In 1980, for example, there were 68 reported cases of SLE, compared to only five in 1979. Most of the cases in 1980 were related to outbreaks in Harris County and Jefferson County. Also during 1980, 62 cases of dengue fever were reported in Texas residents. No recognized case of WEE was reported in 1980.

Although most cases of encephalitis appear in July, August, and September, when mosquito populations are at their peak, the Texas Department of Health (TDH) has its Mosquito-Borne Encephalitis Surveillance Program now in operation. In a cooperative effort between the TDH Laboratories, veterinary public health personnel, environmentalists, epidemiologists, and mosquito control districts, live mosquitoes are sent in weekly to the Austin central laboratory. Also received are blood samples from sentinel chicken flocks, wild birds and, less often, from wild and domestic animals.

If the encephalitis virus is isolated from mosquitoes or wild bird blood, or if antibodies are detected in sentinel chicken or wild bird sera, local or regional health departments are notified immediately. Physicians also are alerted to be on the lookout for symptoms in their patients.

Through the surveillance program, mosquitoes can be controlled in specific areas from which positive samples were received to prevent the disease transmission to humans.

Mosquitoes, which can disrupt sleep and take the fun out of many activities, are at their peak during the traditional summer vacation months. In addition to being pesky, they can transmit disease.

Mosquitoes must have water in which to hatch their eggs, and individuals can play a big role in reducing the number of places where water collects.

When ground water collects, after a rain for instance, it usually draws what health officials call flood water mosquitoes. These mosquitoes are very aggressive and will even attack you during the daylight hours, but they seldom carry disease, said Dickens.

After the water stands for awhile, however, and then becomes stagnant, it draws the Culex quinquefasciatus, commonly called the Culex mosquito. This mosquito is a carrier of encephalitis and usually a night feeder.

Jimmie D. Dickens, Director of the Texas Department of Health (TDH) General Sanitation Division, said some mosquitoes lay their eggs in old tires, tin cans, or water-holding containers in which eggs may remain for weeks or months until they are covered with water.

Mengden denounces the insanity verdict

Senator Walter Mengden, Republican from Harris County, has denounced the "not guilty by reason of insanity" verdict that John W. Hinkley received in his trial for the attempted assassination of President Ronald Reagan.

"Insanity should be abolished as a defense in criminal cases on both a state and federal level. Whether a person committed a crime or not has nothing to do with that person's mental condition. To say that a person is 'not guilty' — that they did not commit the crime — because of 'insanity' is absurd. As it now is constituted, the insanity defense is a severe distortion of justice," Senator Mengden said.

In every legislative session since 1973, Senator Mengden has introduced a bill to abolish insanity as an affirmative defense, but to permit evidence of mental illness to be introduced at the punishment stage of a criminal trial.

Under this proposal in the 1981 session, SB 492 and its companion bill, HB 964 by Representative Terral Smith of Austin, if a defendant was found guilty, a judge or jury, whichever is assessing the sentence, would then determine if the defendant was mentally ill and required psychiatric treatment in confinement or treatment in confinement, or, if probation is granted, as an outpatient. A person sentenced to psychiatric treatment, either at a treatment center within a prison or at a mental hospital, would be credited with time toward his or her sentence. However, a prisoner in a mental hospital who recovered from the mental illness before the expiration of his sentence wouldn't be transferred back to the Department of Corrections to serve the remainder of the sentence.

"The proper place for considering the possibility of mental illness of a person is in the punishment phase of trial when the judge or jury can look at all mitigating circumstances," Senator Mengden said. "If a criminal is in need of treatment for mental problems, he or she should receive it as part of their sentence. But a criminal should not be able to be released completely free a few weeks, months, or even years later, as can now occur to Hinkley and others in the civil commitment process.

"My bill would make some important, fundamental changes in the criminal justice system regarding crimes by the mentally ill and those claiming to be mentally ill. While I did not run for re-election to the Texas Senate and will not be able to pursue this legislation in the next session, I am hopeful that something will be done to bring about needed reforms in the insanity defense," Senator Mengden said.

Hurricane preparedness2nd in a 4-part series

Destination emergency shelter. Take blankets or sleeping bags, flashlights, special dietary foods, infant needs and lightweight folding chairs. Register every person with you at the shelter. Do not take pets, alcoholic beverages or weapons of any kind to shelters. Help shelter workers if your assistance is necessary. Don't travel farther than necessary — roads can be jammed — don't let your standard auto become your coffin. Move at right angles to the storm if landfall is imminent.

If you stay at home. Stay indoors in an inside room away from doors and windows. Do not go outdoors, especially during the brief calm passage of the eye of the storm because winds can increase in seconds to 75 mph or more. Without taking unnecessary risks, make temporary repairs to reduce losses. Stay away from windows and glass doors and move furniture away from exposed doors and windows.

Keep a continuous communications watch. Keep radio or television tuned for information from official sources. Unexpected changes such as tornadoes developing due to the storm can sometimes call for last minute relocations.

Remain calm. Whether in a shelter, your home or a friend's home, your ability to meet emergencies will help others.

AFTER THE HURRICANE
If you have evacuated delay your return until recommended or authorized by local authorities.

Beware of outdoor hazards. Watch out for loose or dangling power lines and report them immediately to proper authorities. Debris-filled streets are dangerous. Snakes and poisonous insects will be a hazard and washouts may weaken roads and bridge structures that could collapse.

Avoid bad food and water. Water supplies could be contaminated — use your emergency supply until official word that the water is safe. Food may spoil if refrigerator power is off for more than a few hours and do not refreeze food that has thawed.

Take extra precautions to prevent fire. Lowered water pressure in city mains and the interruption of other services may make fire fighting extremely difficult after a hurricane.

THE RECOVERY

Insurance representatives will be on the scene immediately following a major disaster to speed up the handling of claims. Notify your insurance agent or broker of any losses — and leave word where you can be contacted.

Take steps to protect property. Make temporary repairs to protect property from further damage or looting. Use only reputable contractors (sometimes in the chaotic days following a disaster, unscrupulous operators will prey on the unsuspecting) — check the Better Business Bureau. Keep all receipts for materials used.

Be patient. Hardship cases will be settled first by insurance representatives. Don't assume your settlement will be the same as your neighbor's. Policy forms differ and storm damage is often erratic. In a major catastrophe the insurance industry will have emergency offices and extra manpower to expedite claim settlements and to speed recovery. Everyone cannot be first.

It takes a team effort. Responsibility for the clean-up falls to numerous local, state and federal agencies. A local disaster coordinator/director (the mayor, county judge or their designated representative) will be on hand to help residents in this effort.

11,400 injured in fireworks accidents last Fourth of July

The Texas Society to Prevent Blindness reports that separate surveys conducted by the Society and the Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) indicate that fireworks pose a major threat to public safety and that fireworks injuries are on the rise.

The CPSC study reports that 11,400 people were treated for fireworks injuries in hospital emergency rooms around the country during the July Fourth holidays in 1981. Of these injuries, 1,600 were to the eyes. These figures only begin to indicate the extent of the problem as they do not include injuries treated at home and in private doctors' offices or those admitted directly into hospitals.

The survey of Texas ophthalmologists conducted by Prevent Blindness shows that the average victim of a fireworks injury is a teenage male and that the majority of serious injuries are caused by bottle rockets. However, the statistics show that men and women of all ages annually suffer injuries from virtually all types of fireworks. The Society's study also shows that the majority of reported accidents occur around the home.

"Both studies confirm our viewpoints that fireworks are not toys but rather dangerous projectiles and that there are no 'safe' fireworks," said R.E. Margo, M.D., State Medical Chairman of the Society. "A great deal of the responsibility for reducing the tragic toll of fireworks injuries must be accepted by parents since two-thirds of all reported injuries occur to youngsters under the age of 19," he continued.

HOUSTON When life hands you a lemon, make lemonade.

That is the basic lesson in learning to cope with stress, say specialists at Baylor College of Medicine.

The first step is to take personal charge of your response to routine aggravations such as deadlines and traffic jams, said Seth Silverman, M.D., assistant professor of psychiatry at Baylor.

As people learn to control their own reactions during stressful events, they gain a feeling of mastery that they can draw on during the next crisis.

Staying in control may be easier if people understand what causes some of the tendency to act irrationally under pressure, said Silverman.

Stimulated by stressful cues in everyday life, an alarm system is turned on in the body. This automatic reaction to stress, switched on by hormones, is known as the "fight or flight" syndrome and it worked well for our early human ancestors, preparing them to run fast or fight hard in life-threatening situations.

But these changes in the brain, nervous system, heart and muscles also impede certain mental abilities.

People under stress often become forgetful, irritable and find it hard to make simple decisions, said William Blocker, M.D., assistant professor of physical medicine. Ironically, the body's adaptation to stress, intended by nature to help people out of tough spots, can actually hinder them in dealing with modern problems that require a cool head rather than a hasty departure.

Continued stress is also dangerous to health, said Blocker, since it can stimulate the body to act as if constantly under siege. One result can be an increase in blood pressure, a risk factor in heart disease.

However, there are ways to control stress.

Silverman said stress management begins with good self-monitoring: being aware of feeling angry, tired, sad or anxious. Accepting feelings frees one to deal with them.

While there are countless ways to handle problems, methods have common elements of information gathering, evaluation and planning.

As one engages in this process, stressful situations in the past may be remembered. Past experiences can cushion people in a crisis, helping them to view the problem as solvable. But if an old memory is hurting instead of helping self-confidence, the person can learn to separate the past and present event.

Exercise and relaxation techniques can also help people handle emotions while performing life's necessary tasks.

A free brochure providing tips to help cope with stress may be ordered from Baylor College of Medicine, P.O. Box 13567, Houston, Texas, 77019.

Nursing Home News

By Maxine Mayer

Activities at the Aransas Pass Nursing and Convalescent Center were varied and very entertaining last week. We had many visitors and friends as well as our very faithful volunteers who come out every week to bring cheer to our residents.

Monday afternoon was "Blue Grass Music" with John Blair, Albie Albers and George and Fannie Langley from over Rockport way.

Tuesday, Annie Stacey

was out to do her one-to-one visiting and giving out her candy canes.

Tuesday afternoon, our ladies of First Presbyterian Church of Rockport were over to visit and bring new name plates for our most recent residents.

Wednesday morning, Delma Rodgers was out to visit, shop and make a lot of people happy. Delma comes out several times a week and performs her duties as a very active volunteer.

Wednesday afternoon was Bible Study and Holy Communion with Bro. Bob DeWolfe of the Episcopal Church of Aransas Pass.

Tuesday evening, Hope Rangel and her group representing the Aransas Pass Chapter #636 of LULACS were out to play bingo with our residents.

Last week, we were very happy to have had Marie Knight of Rockport over to go up and down the halls and into some of our residents rooms to play the harmonica. Our residents really enjoy this kind of entertainment.

Also, Shirley Loftin was out to visit on a one-to-one basis with many of our people.

Friday morning, Lyla Olive and Maggie were out to lead our weekly paint class and to bring goodies for their painters to eat.

Saturday morning Father James Hamilton was out to give Holy Communion to our Catholic residents.

Sunday morning worship services were led by Rev. A. Bankert, who used as his text — "Taking Jesus For Granted." (Luke 2:44)

Sunday afternoon was "Sing in" time with members and friends of the First Christian Church of Ingleside.

Edith Arrington and Carla Haskett were out to visit their adopted grandparents. We like having our young people out to visit.

Traffic collisions aren't accidents, says state DPS

"There's no such thing as a motor vehicle accident," an officer of the Texas Safety Association stated recently.

James R. Halverson, TSA Vice President for Traffic, said drivers don't experience auto accidents; instead they are in crashes or collisions.

"Driver attitude is of great importance in preventing crashes, especially over a heavy traffic weekend like July 4," Halverson, a 3-M Company Account Executive in Austin said. "Texas drivers can reduce the number of collisions they are involved in by driving defensively," he added.

The Texas Safety Association actively promotes traffic safety and driver improvement through the National Safety Council's Defensive Driving Course. Last year in Texas more than 230,000 persons took the eight hour course.

"When driving, anticipate what the other driver will do and always have an escape route," Halverson said. He also noted one of the basic lessons of the DDC which is to complete one crash-free auto trip at a time.

"This means to make each trip in your car a safe trip, one with no crashes," he said. "We believe most crashes and collisions can be eliminated by defensive driving."

Be sure your Fourth of July weekend is crash-free.

If you don't like the heat, do something about it

FORT WORTH — Planning ahead during summer months will take the heat out of the kitchen, says a nutritionist at Texas Christian University.

"The most important thing to do is to drop back to lighter food," said Carol Davis, assistant professor of home economics.

"Many people have fresh garden products. Squash is in season, as well as other vegetables that you might put in a casserole. Add eggs and cheese to your recipe and make a meatless meal. Put a crisp salad with it, a good bread, a cold beverage and fruit for dessert. You've not only cooled your body temperature, but you've lessened the metabolism of the body as it works to digest foods," she said.

Cold vegetable soups such as avocado, vichyssoise and gazpacho are also energy-saving, nourishing and filling, said Davis. Another reason for reduced cooking is to save utility bills, she said. "Plan your cooking to take advantage of cooler times of the day and do as much oven cooking as possible at one time. Then consider serving those foods cold or with a minimal reheating. If you're the owner of a microwave and you don't make use of it, this is the time to learn the advantages of reheating foods without reheating the entire room."

Davis also reminds consumers who have gardens and freezers to take advantage of them. "Vegetables do need to be sliced and blanched, meaning dropped into boiling water for one to three minutes, depending on the type of the vegetable.

Then chill immediately and put into freezer bags or other good wrapping. If you don't know how to store a certain type of vegetable, you may call your local extension agent and ask specific questions."

Stress your positives, correct negatives

COLLEGE STATION — To develop self-awareness, look at yourself positively first, then improve those things that seem to be negative, says Cindy B. Wilson, a family life education specialist.

Wilson is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

By starting out with all the positive things you can think of about yourself, you will then think of some of your negative characteristics, the specialist points out. It helps to write these things down for a clearer picture of yourself, Wilson notes.

For example, some positive traits might be things you like to do and have the ability to do well or traits or characteristics of which you are proud.

On the negative side, write down things you don't like to do, activities you would like to do but don't have the ability or training to do or traits or characteristics which do not please you.

After you have listed all these thoughts, go back and pat yourself on the back for all the positive things you have written, the specialist advises.

Then look at the negative list and decide which one bothers you the most and think of ways you can overcome the problem, Wilson says. By working on solving these problems, you are well on your way to developing, growing and changing as a person.
