Bambi's revenge

CAMP BLANDING, Fla. (AP) — A company commander leading 400 soldiers on a conditioning run collided with a deer and was knocked unconscious, authorities said Thursday.

Capt. Ian Erickson didn't know what hit him May 7 until he regained consciousness inside an Army ambulance and tasted deer fur in his mouth, said Capt. Pauline Geraci, a public affairs spokeswoman.

"He said the deer came crashing out of the woods — just leaped at him," Ms. Geraci said. Other soldiers said it "tumbled with him and then got up and ran off."

Competitive court

Crier

"We have moved into an arena where competition is the thing, and outdoing the other fellow may have surpassed the notion of serving clients, of seeking justice," said Crier, 35.

Gorbachev, Lithuanian official meet

■ Gorbachev calls the meeting with the Lithuanian prime minister a big step forward, although he seeks further concessions from the Baltic republic.

By Andrew Katell

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev met with the Lithuanian prime minister Thursday in a major breakthrough in the Baltic secession struggle, but he demanded the breakaway republic make further concessions.

Prunskiene

Lithuanian Prime Minister Kazimiera Prunskiene said they met for one hour and 40 minutes in the Kremlin, and that Gorbachev told her "the fact that we are meeting means we have moved from our initial positions. And this is a big step forward."

She told reporters the discussion was "difficult" at first, but improved as it went along, though complete agreement was not reached.

Gorbachev had refused to meet with the secessionist leaders of the three Baltic republics and earlier in the day accused them of adventurism.

The Kremlin meeting, set by Gorbachev in a telephone call to Mrs. Prunskiene shortly after she arrived at Lithuania's mission in Moscow, broke the deadlock between Moscow and Lithuania over Lithuania's declaration of independence on March 11.

Soviet authorities forcibly annexed Lithuania and its sister republics of Estonia and Latvia in 1940, and all three have declared moves toward independence this year.

Exxon moving 75 jobs to Houston

■ Although the downtown Exxon Building will be vacant, the consolidation does not affect the more than 500 employees who work in the firm's Southwestern Production Division.

By John Paul Pitts
Business & Oil Editor

Exxon announced Thursday it will form a new onshore exploration division in Houston, resulting in the loss of approximately 75 Midland exploration jobs, and the vacating of the Exxon Building at Missouri and A streets in Midland.

The move, however, does not affect Exxon's Southwestern Production Division, which employs more than 500 and is located at ClayDesta Plaza.

Approximately 100 Denver jobs also will be lost in the exploration consolidation, according to L. Bryant Williams, manager of the Western Exploration Division in Midland. He will become manager of the new onshore division.

Williams noted that more than 100 jobs were being removed from Midland with the closing of the Western Division Exploration Department here, but explained that about 35 would find jobs with Midland's Southwestern Production Division, resulting in a net loss of 75 jobs from the community.

The removal of Exxon's exploration force reflects a recent trend that has seen Midland become increasingly a "production town."

In the first quarter of 1990, three major oil companies — Texaco, Conoco and Chevron — have added nearly 300 production personnel to the employment ranks in Midland. At the same time, Texaco, Mobil and now Exxon have also reduced their exploration numbers in Midland.

Williams said Exxon's move from Midland should be complete by Sept. 1, and that all of the exploration employees had been offered jobs in Houston. "For those that do not wish to relocate we have offered a voluntary severance program," said Williams.

The Exxon move had been expected since the plan to consolidate exploration was announced in late January. For a time it was hoped exploration might be consolidated in Midland, but the plan to locate to Houston prevailed.

"It was a matter of deciding where we could be the most competitive in the oil and gas exploration business, and we determined that we could be the most competitive in Houston, where we will be near computer processing," said Williams.

He noted that Exxon's exploration efforts in the Permian Basin would continue and said that a special Trade Unit would

Hospital director to move out of district

Newly elected trustee says he can represent constituents without living in district

Dulaney

Richard Dulaney, a newly elected Midland County hospital director, said Thursday that he plans to change his residence to another single-member district sometime after he is sworn in next week.

A Texas Secretary of State's Office spokesman, however, said the move may conflict with state law if Dulaney continues to serve as the hospital board's District 4 representative.

Dulaney, who was unopposed in the May 5 election, said he will move from his 1203 Douglas St. house to 2815 W. Dengar Ave. as early as June. The new house — which Dulaney said he bought in March — is in District 6, represented by Dr. Stephen Wiesenfeld.

Dulaney, 38, a petroleum landman here since 1976, said he intends to hold the director's seat, which will not be up for re-election until 1993. He contended that representing District 4 while living in another district would not violate state law.

"We're not in violation of any rules," he said. "We checked with the (hospital district's) legal counsel, and he got the (Texas) Attorney General's opinion."

Ted Kerr, a Midland attorney retained by the Midland County Hospital District, said Dulaney only needs to be a District 4 resident on election day and the day he takes his oath of office.

Kerr said his opinion is based on a 1945 Texas Attorney General's opinion on a case involving a county commissioner who changed his residence to another precinct following an election. The commissioner was allowed to continue serving, Kerr said.

"The law has not changed any since 1945 so that it would affect the outcome in this question," Kerr said.

The attorney also said Dulaney's move would not affect Wiesenfeld's seat, which is up for election in 1991.

"The fact that somebody moves into Dr. Wiesenfeld's district does not change Dr. Wiesenfeld's situation at all," Kerr said. Wiesenfeld could not be reached for comment.

However, Mark Toohey, executive assistant to Texas Secretary of State George Bayoud, said Dulaney's move may violate a 1987 state law which applies to the hospital district.

Toohey made the statement after Texas Secretary of State officials researched House Bill 2123, which allowed the dis-

City officials consider building skateboard park

■ Skateboard enthusiasts meet with city officials to discuss obstacles to a park and potential locations.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

The biggest obstacle between skateboarders and a city-run Midland skateboard park is liability insurance, Midland Parks and Recreation commissioners said Thursday.

A group of about 45 skaters and some of their parents met with park commissioners to discuss the city building a skateboard park.

Skaters have been asking for a place to skate since May 1, when a city ordinance took effect banning skating in three of their favorite parks.

"If we put this park on city property, we need insurance," George Logan, city parks and recreation director, explained to the young audience which had gathered in the Dellwood Senior Citizens Senior.

Because the city is self-insured, the skaters would have to seek insurance on their own, Logan said.

Florence Larsh, park commissioner, suggested that the skaters organize into a group and research how skateboard parks nationwide handle their insurance needs.

"We don't have all the answers," Ms. Larsh said. "You have to answer to us, and we have to answer to you."

Logan introduced two very preliminary plans for a skateboard park. One would be built just north of Wadley Avenue near Midland Air Park and Midland

Controversies keep Bush from Baptist convention

Associated Press

DALLAS — President Bush will not be giving a scheduled speech to the annual Southern Baptist Convention next month because of controversies among the Baptists over political and gay rights, a presidential aide said.

Doug Wead, the president's religion liaison, said Wednesday that Bush will not be at the appearance in New Orleans because he angered feuding factions of the denomination.

Moderate Baptists complained that the president's appearance would be a political coup for the denomination's fundamentalists, Wead said.

But some fundamentalists were outraged that Bush invited gay rights activists to the White House on April 24 for a ceremony when he signed legislation requiring that records be kept on "hate crimes" against gays and other groups.

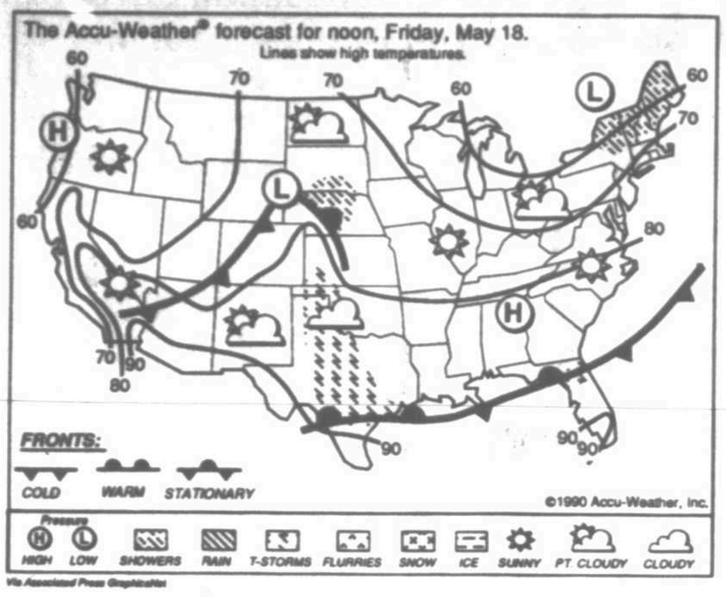

"We have the dubious distinction of making everybody mad," Wead said.

The newspaper said it is not clear whether Bush declined to speak or whether the invitation was withdrawn by the president of the denomination, the Rev. Jerry Vines of Jacksonville, Fla.

The Rev. Daniel Vestal, a former Midland minister and moderate candidate for president of the denomination, said he was embarrassed by the whole affair.

The cold front stretched on Thursday afternoon from near Beaumont west to South Central Texas and farther west to the Southern Edwards Plateau.

Along the front, there were scattered to widely scattered showers and thunderstorms. Some of the rainfall was extremely heavy, weather observers reported.

There was a weak high pressure system centered over eastern Oklahoma that was ridging south across Texas.

Most of the high temperature readings were in the 70s and 80s.

NATION

Severe thunderstorms soaked much of the nation Thursday, while the South and parts of the Plains still braced for the inundation of rising rivers.

Tornado watches were posted Thursday night for central and eastern Pennsylvania, central and southeastern New York state, and much of New Jersey.

Warnings of gale force winds stood through the night for the Great Lakes region and across the lower Great Lakes Friday. Winds reached 61 mph at Buffalo, N.Y.

Flood watches were in effect for New York state, Vermont and New Jersey. Heavy rain from strong thunderstorms could cause serious local flooding problems.

Flood warnings continued for the Little River near and below Rochelle, La., as well as along the Red River to where it joins the Black River.

Flood warnings remained along the Sabine, Neches, and Angelina rivers in east Texas, as well as the Trinity and Leon rivers in north Texas.

Panamanian found innocent of threat against president

Lakas

Otto Lakas, an architecture student at Lubbock Christian University, could have faced a 5-year prison term had he been convicted in U.S. District Court.

Lakas, the son of Demetrio B. Lakas, president of Panama from 1972-78, clenched his fists and looked toward the ceiling, tears rolling down his cheeks as the verdict was read. The jury deliberated only 15 minutes.

"I am very happy," Lakas said leaving the courthouse. "I don't want to comment any more than that, but I am glad to go back home."

Demetrio Lakas, who testified Thursday that death threats in Panama "are a way of expressing ourselves," cried and hugged his wife Elizabeth after hearing the jury's decision.

"The whole thing was so confusing," said the elder Lakas, who flew from Panama City to Lubbock to testify on behalf of his son. "I am so relieved. I want to take my boy home."

Otto Lakas was accused of threatening to kill Bush in a discussion with the managers of a pawnshop where he was looking at a gun.

During testimony Thursday Otto Lakas told jurors he did say "I have a bullet with Bush's name engraved on it" while talking to Stacy and Tracy Nichols at the Exect Pawn Shop last month.

"I apologize for making the statement," Lakas said under cross-examination Thursday. "I didn't mean it."

ton, told reporters he would meet with Mrs. Prunskiene today. President Bush received her at the White House earlier this month.

Gorbachev first demanded that Lithuania rescind its declaration, but on Thursday merely called for a suspension.

The Lithuanian parliament has balked at revoking the declaration but on Wednesday voted to suspend post-independence laws if the Kremlin will open talks on independence.

A compromise appeared to be emerging along the lines of a formula proposed last month by President Francois Mitterrand of France and Chancellor Helmut Kohl of West Germany.

In addition to suspending certain laws, Lithuanian concessions add a transition period before full independence and make concrete proposals on military cooperation, economic plans and other topics.

Mrs. Prunskiene said Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis would call the Supreme Council parliament into session on Saturday to formalize the offer. She said if Moscow finds parliament's action acceptable, the two sides could select negotiating teams.

(From 1A)

"I heard the president was uninvited," Dr. Vestal said. "I would like to have seen him come to New Orleans and speak to the convention any time after the Tuesday (June 12) election."

"He's our president and he is always welcome," Dr. Vestal added.

More than 40,000 Southern Baptists are expected to attend the convention.

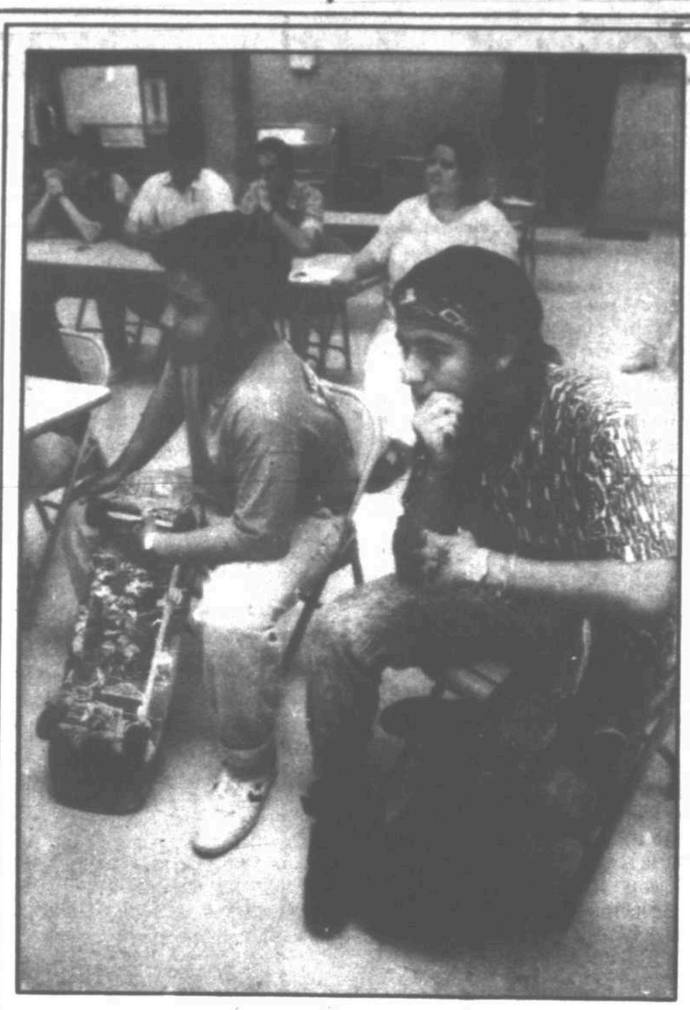

Some church officials told the newspaper that the underlying factor in the flap is that fundamentalists were upset that gay activists attended the White House ceremony in April.

Wead said the invitation to the gay activists was the idea of a White House staffer, who "pushed it."

The aide said Bush was not aware that the gay activists had publicly called Roman Catholic Cardinal John O'Conner of New York a "Nazi" and had opposed conservative Republican candidates.

Wead said Bush also was not aware that the gay activists were to attend the ceremony.

In retrospect, Wead said, "it was not a good idea, but he (Bush) wasn't aware what these groups were saying."

College.

Two drainage ditches at that site would be paved for skaters to use. In addition, a parking lot would be built and trees planted in the area to make it look scenic, Logan said.

"This would be the quickest, easiest way to get them their park," Logan said, adding that it also would help water drainage. "Part of the facilities already exist."

The other site would be where the Wild River Canyon water park once stood in southwest Midland. Skaters at the meeting, though, appeared to prefer the drainage ditch site.

Rusty Thompson, 17, a Lee High School junior, said a park would be a safer alternative than skaters taking to the streets.

"The point is that by closing down our areas, you're limiting our areas to skate," Rusty said. "This skate park would be ideal.

"You get all us skaters in one place. They wouldn't be bothering neighbors or anybody else."

Rusty's father, Paul, 47, said the skateboarders deserve a park.

"As a parent of a person who rides on skateboards, my principle concern is for the safety of the people who ride skateboards," Thompson said. "If they want to skate, they're going to skate, and they're going to skate somewhere."

He said the skaters would be willing to help any way they could in building the park.

"They're not just standing here with their hands out," Thompson said. "They're willing to jump in and help out."

Patricia Wilson, 40, also a skateboarder parent, said a skate park would be worth the city's effort.

"The kids would use a skate park more than other kids use other parks," Ms. Wilson said. "I'd like my tax dollars to go to a park they would use.

"There are a lot of kids skating in this town. I would enjoy seeing those kids in a good, healthy environment."

strict to hold single-member elections.

"We looked at the enabling legislation, and it is our understanding that a Midland County Hospital District director elected to a single-member district must be a resident of that district," Toohey said. "But it doesn't address the ramifications if you move out of it."

He said Midland County's district attorney or county attorney could challenge Dulaney's move in state district court.

Board President Margaret Purvis said the matter could become a legal issue.

"If it is a legal issue, it's a matter for the board to consider," Ms. Purvis said. "If it is not, it is a matter for the residents and voters of District 4 to consider.

"We certainly want to operate with a legally constituted board."

Dulaney said moving from District 4 would not cheat the constituents there out of representation.

"Just because I live a few blocks west doesn't mean the group of people in District 4 will not be represented," he said.

Dulaney pointed out that hospital directors are not like city councilmen and county commissioners, who must advocate and monitor projects such as street paving in their district.

"There's only one hospital that serves one community," he said. "The hospital doesn't have facilities in each district."

Dulaney added that single-member representation is needed to ensure that the predominantly minority residents of Midland's east and south sides have representation. "I'm not opposed to single-member districts," he said.

Dulaney will replace Pat Estes as the District 4 representative.

Mrs. Estes chose not to seek re-election.

The exit of Exxon's Western Division Exploration Department from Midland will leave a historical building empty, and add to an already excessive surplus of office space. According to Williams, the building will be turned over to Friendswood Development Co. in Houston, which manages real estate owned by Exxon.

According to Mike Lewis of Mike Lewis & Associates, a commercial real estate firm in Midland, most of the surplus office space in Midland is in buildings the age of the Exxon Building.

"Its vacancy will not do the market any good," said Lewis.

Baker, Lithuanian leader to meet

Pre-summit negotiations with Shevardnadze appear to be lagging

WORLD

By Barry Schweid
AP Diplomatic Writer

MOSCOW — Secretary of State James A. Baker III, venturing into sensitive pre-summit diplomacy, said Thursday he would meet in Moscow Friday with the prime minister of the rebellious Soviet republic of Lithuania.

Baker informed Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze of the decision as they tried to break a deadlock on arms control issues less than two weeks before the Washington summit.

"There are gaps between us still. ... I can't tell you we are going to get there," a senior U.S. official said of Baker's attempt to forge an agreement on nuclear weapons cuts before President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev hold their May 31-June 3 talks.

Bush said Wednesday that the Soviets' action against Lithuania "certainly puts some tension" on summit prospects, but he also said it would not stand in the way of any arms agreement.

Even so, the senior U.S. official insisted the Soviets had not fulfilled the Bush administration's call for them to take part in a dialogue with the Baltic leaders.

"It is not enough simply to talk about a need for dialogue," the official said. "You have to do something that makes it happen. And they are continuing to stick to a position that accepts dialogue but only under certain conditions."

Mrs. Prunskiene and other leaders of the republic have said they are willing to negotiate everything except their independence declaration.

The senior U.S. official said Baker, who was planning to fly home at midday Saturday, would stay on for further talks with the Soviets if there was a chance of an accord on nuclear arms control. He is due to see Gorbachev Friday.

"The work is intense right now," said the official, who briefed reporters under rules guaranteeing him anonymity.

Baker told Shevardnadze that he would see Mrs. Prunskiene and "his reaction was a non-reaction," the official said.

Gorbachev has demanded that Lithuania revoke its March 11 declaration of independence, but on Thursday asked merely for a suspension, Mrs. Prunskiene told reporters.

Tensions in the Baltics and the stalemate on arms control issues were hindering Baker's effort to set a summit agenda with Shevardnadze.

But symbolically, at least, they showed a spirit of cooperation.

Shevardnadze took Baker on a tour of a Russian Orthodox church complex at Zagorsk, 45 miles northeast of the capital, and to the nearby village of Radonezh.

The 24-car motorcade stopped at the modest home of a 76-year-old Russian woman who engaged Baker and Shevardnadze in a discussion of her pension, raised recently from 55 to 70 rubles a month — the equivalent of about $40. "It will be increased," Shevardnadze promised.

Another elderly woman, wearing a purple scarf, told Baker the village church was closed "and we have no place to pray." Appeals to authorities had not succeeded, she said.

Shevardnadze told Baker afterward that the church would be reopened, a U.S. official said.

When Baker arrived in Moscow Tuesday from Washington, the request from Mrs. Prunskiene for a meeting was given to him by U.S. Ambassador Jack F. Matlock Jr.

"We are not seeking to send any message by meeting with her," the senior U.S. official said. "It obviously gives us a chance to hear more about her concerns."

Mrs. Prunskiene has met in Washington with Bush. Still, the meeting with Baker here in Moscow, amid summit preparations, added a twist to the situation.

Baker has already informed the Soviets that failure to resolve the dispute with the Baltics could interfere with an improvement in U.S.-Soviet relations at the summit.

On the arms control front, meanwhile, Baker said Thursday he had not made much headway in bending the Soviet Union to U.S. positions on strategic weapons cuts.

Dominican candidate calls protest

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — Former President Juan Bosch, failing behind in partial electoral returns, accused President Joaquin Balaguer of "colossal fraud" Thursday and threatened street demonstrations.

Bosch, a leftist, told reporters he would lead the street protests on Friday "no matter what the consequences."

He called a news conference after results from Wednesday's general election announced by the electoral board showed Balaguer, a five-time president, had overtaken Bosch's narrow early lead.

With nearly two-thirds of this Caribbean country's polling stations reporting results, the outcome remained uncertain, with the two rival candidates in a close race.

Balaguer, 83 and blind from glaucoma, and Bosch, 80, who has moderated his leftist ideology in recent years, were opposing each other for the fifth time for the presidency of this nation of 7 million people. Balaguer won three of those previous elections.

"The Central Electoral Board and Dr. Balaguer committed a colossal fraud," Bosch said Thursday.

"We are announcing that PDL is going into the streets because the people have been cheated."

PDL is the Spanish acronym for Bosch's leftist Dominican Liberation Party.

Officials of Bosch's party met Thursday with six of the 30 international observers monitoring the election. Oscar Ayerve of Ecuador said there was concern over the slow vote count, but he did not elaborate.

Former President Jimmy Carter, one of the observers, was in the computer room at election headquarters and unavailable for comment. He said earlier the balloting was fair, but gave no assessment of the count.

Bosch, who was overthrown in a 1963 military coup, held a narrow lead earlier. The electoral board announced results of Wednesday's election by party, rather than by candidate.

With 3,914 the 6,663 polling stations reporting, Balaguer had 386,766 votes and Bosch 375,869, official returns showed. A former socialist mayor of Santo Domingo, Jose Francisco Pena Gomez, was third with 256,243 votes.

The two leading parties both claimed victory.

Car bomb injures 22 in Cartagena

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — A car bomb exploded Thursday night at a shopping center in Cartagena after President Virgilio Barco accused drug traffickers of trying to take over Colombia. The navy reported 22 people injured.

No one immediately claimed responsibility for the bomb, but the government has blamed all of the more than 200 bombings nationwide the past nine months on drug traffickers. Those bombings have resulted in the deaths of 259 people.

Cartagena on Colombia's Caribbean coast was a popular tourist resort for Americans until a bomb set off by drug traffickers exploded last year in the Hilton Hotel, killing two people.

Thursday's bomb exploded at the Boca Grande shopping center in the heart of the high-rise hotel and condominium district, Gov. Guillermo Pinazo of Bolivar state said in an interview with the radio network RCN.

Gold mining limited

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The country's largest mining company shut down part of a gold mine Thursday following a racial clash that left two whites dead and several blacks injured.

The victims were among 12 people killed in nationwide violence Wednesday, police said Thursday.

Heavily armed police and mine security officials for the Anglo-American Corp. sealed off part of the President Steyn gold mine near the central city of Welkom following Wednesday's fighting.

Blacks attacked whites at the gold mine after security guards fired on black protesters with rubber bullets, wounding at least eight blacks. Two whites were killed and four hurt by the black workers, who were protesting the dismissal of 30 miners.

Drugs found on bus

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — A bus carrying pilgrims who traveled to Chihuahua to see Pope John Paul II contained 160 pounds of marijuana when it reached Ciudad Juarez.

The pot was found hiding in three cardboard boxes containing religious portraits that were found on the Omnibus de Mexico. The bus traveled from Jalisco state to Chihuahua City and then to Ciudad Juarez.

Narcotics agents at a police roadblock south of Juarez found the pot, said Emilio Gutierrez, Federal Judicial Police spokesman.

No passengers claimed ownership of boxes. Police let the bus proceed to Juarez after seizing the marijuana and several portraits of John Paul and Roman Catholic saints, Gutierrez said.

Commuter plane hits Manila home

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A twin-engine commuter plane with 21 people aboard crashed after takeoff Friday morning into a house south of Manila's airport and exploded. Witnesses said there was no sign of survivors.

The witnesses said a Japanese man, his Filipino wife and two children were in the house, which burst into flames. Employees of the home in suburban Paranaque said the four residents were asleep in their bedroom and were feared dead.

Twenty-three bodies had been recovered a few hours after the crash, officials said.

The crash occurred one week after a Philippine Airlines Boeing 737 with 119 people aboard exploded and caught fire while waiting to take off from the domestic airport on a flight to the central Philippine city of Iloilo.

Eight people were killed but the cause of the incident has not been determined.

The Beechcraft propeller-driven aircraft, owned by the Aerolift Corp., took off about 6:25 a.m. Friday (6:25 p.m. EDT Thursday) for the Mindanao island town of Surigao when air controllers saw it was not gaining altitude.

Controller Francisco Reyes said the pilot radioed that he was returning to the domestic airport.

"When I noticed he could not gain altitude, I immediately advised the (local) fire station," Reyes said. "I said, 'Get out there immediately because the plane is going to crash.' "

Aerolift spokesman Benjie Torres said the plane carried 19 passengers and two crew.

Witnesses said the plane nosedived into the home in Paranaque, about a half-mile south of the airport, and exploded in flames.

Marilyn Molobuco, 19, a maid at the Japanese home, said she heard a loud explosion and rushed to her employers' bedroom to awaken them.

"I did not know that a plane crashed," she said. "I tried to wake up my employers but when I saw that fire was coming out from under the door, I ran."

Arlene Rebong, a neighbor, said she was having breakfast nearby when she noticed an aircraft flying very low.

"From the way it sounded, there seemed to be something wrong," she said. "In a split second it crashed. There was a loud explosion and a ball of fire."

Raymond Lebunao, 14, who worked in the house as an errand boy, said the plane slammed into the couple's bedroom, where they were sleeping with their children.

"I was inside the house," he said. "I saw the plane coming down. I ran. It was spinning out of control, then it crashed and burst into flames."

U.S envoys continue base talks

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — U.S. and Philippine negotiators met Friday for a fifth day of talks on the future of American bases in the Philippines after a late-night marathon session failed to produce a breakthrough.

Early Friday, unknown assailants fired two grenades at a U.S government library in suburban Makati, one of which exploded, causing minor damage. The library had not yet opened, and there were no injuries, police said.

The two sides disagree on whether the United States failed to make full aid payments, and on when the facilities would actually have to close if the two sides cannot reach a lease agreement.

After this round of talks, which is to end Friday, the two sides could either begin formal negotiations on a new pact or start working on a schedule for closing the bases. Their lease expires in September 1991.

Police said three masked men dressed in black fired two grenades about 6 a.m. from a taxi at the Thomas Jefferson Cultural Center, operated by the U.S. Information Service.

Police said the attack could have been timed to the bases talks.

The two sides met into the evening Thursday to try to resolve a Philippine claim that the United States owes $222 million in back payments for use of the bases.

U.S. officials said the talks resumed early Friday in hopes of a compromise before chief U.S. negotiator Richard Armitage leaves for Tokyo later in the day.

"We are trying to hammer out differences," said Philippine spokesman Rafael Alunan on Thursday.

Korean students, police clash

KWANGJU, South Korea (AP) — Radical students hurling rocks and firebombs fought police in Kwangju and a dozen other cities Thursday, the eve of the 10th anniversary of a bloody anti-government rebellion in Kwangju.

The nation's 130,000-strong police force was on top alert after a major dissident coalition called for nationwide anti-government protests to mark the Kwangju anniversary Friday.

At least 200 people died and more than 1,700 were injured when troops and tanks crushed a May 18, 1980 uprising in the southern city.

The Munhwa Broadcasting Co. said 20,000 students joined in protests on 50 campuses Thursday. Police reported arrests and injuries but gave no figures. The national Yonhap News Agency said 10 people were injured in one clash south of Seoul.

In Kwangju, 155 miles south of Seoul, tension mounted as radical students and dissidents prepared to mark the uprising.

American residents and travelers in Kwangju said the U.S. Embassy in Seoul advised them to stay off certain streets.

The dissident People's Alliance announced in Seoul that it would organize protests in several cities. The alliance was a major force behind nationwide protests on May 9 that were the largest and most violent since 1987.

Radicals and dissidents want the ouster of President Roh Tae-woo. They say the merger of his governing party with two opposition groups into the new Democratic Liberal Party earlier this year was a political coup and marks a return to dictatorial rule in South Korea.

Police fired barrages of tear gas from two armored vans, sending clouds of the choking gas billowing over the school's main gate.

During a campus rally before the clash, students charged that the United States took a bystander's role during the 10-day Kwangju revolt, thus condoning the crackdown.

Bush refuses to accept civil rights 'quota' bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush said Thursday he won't tolerate bias in hiring but also won't accept a civil rights bill that imposes quotas on employers.

Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and John Danforth, R-Mo., quickly unveiled a compromise amendment intended to deal with his objections to the bill that is at the top of many civil rights organizations' legislative lists for this year.

But the White House and Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, both said it failed to remove their concerns about quotas.

"I want to sign a civil rights bill, but I will not sign a quota bill," Bush declared at a Rose Garden ceremony honoring the recently revived U.S. Commission on Civil Rights.

The president, who met three times earlier this week with civil rights groups and other lobbyists to search for a compromise on the legislation, said before Kennedy and Danforth announced their new proposal, "I think we can work it out."

After unveiling the amended version, Danforth said, "After weeks of negotiating over this change, we are now convinced that quotas will not be the unintended result of this bill." Danforth signed with five other senators as the newest sponsors of the bill, which now has 47 sponsors in the 100-member Senate.

But Hatch said later, "The Kennedy-Danforth amendment in no way solves the severe quota problem in the bill." Hatch, the top Republican on Kennedy's Labor and Human Resources Committee, said Bush and his advisers were "too smart to be taken in by this new language."

At the White House, deputy press secretary Alixe Glen said, "It's a step in the right direction but it still does not eliminate our concern that employers would adopt quotas."

There is no mention of quotas — the hiring of a certain number or percentage of minority or other workers — in the bill. But Attorney General Dick Thornburgh and other critics have said the earlier version's standard of proof for justifying exclusionary hiring practices was so tough that employers would use quotas as a way of avoiding lawsuits.

Accused Bensonhurst gunman found guilty

NEW YORK (AP) — A jury Thursday found a 19-year-old white man guilty of second-degree murder in the killing of a black teen-ager in Bensonhurst, the most serious racial incident to polarize the city since the 1986 Howard Beach case.

Joseph Fama of Brooklyn, accused of being the triggerman in the killing of 16-year-old Yusuf Hawkins, faces a maximum sentence of 25 years to life in prison.

Jury forewoman Tonya Bailey delivered the verdict shortly after 7 p.m. The decision followed 10 tension-wrought days of deliberations during which police lined the steps of Brooklyn state Supreme Court to quell occasional scuffles.

Hawkins and three friends were attacked by a gang of whites last Aug. 23 after they ventured into the mostly white Bensonhurst section of Brooklyn to look at a used car.

The verdict, the first conviction in the case, was greeted with shouts of glee outside the courtroom by Hawkins' family and supporters, and chants of "Yusuf! Yusuf!"

Mayor David N. Dinkins, in a statement, said the guilty verdict allows "us to turn our attention to the process of healing."

"Yusuf Hawkins died of racism in the first degree. That is a crime far more common than most of us are willing to admit," the mayor said.

Fama was found guilty on 13 of 15 counts, including second-degree murder by depraved indifference to human life, riot, unlawful imprisonment, menacing, discrimination, and criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree.

The defendant was acquitted of second-degree intentional murder — the equivalent in seriousness of the depraved indifference charge — as well as criminal possession of a weapon in the second degree.

The shooting of Hawkins shocked the city and is the most serious racial incident since the December 1986 attack in which a gang of whites in Howard Beach, Queens, chased a black man to his hit-and-run death on a highway.

In the days after Hawkins' death, racial tensions in the city flared as chanting protesters marched through Bensonhurst, clashing with white residents who screamed obscenities and racial slurs.

Fama sat impassively beside his lawyer as the verdict was read. Several jurors wiped tears from their eyes.

Moses Stewart, the victim's father, let out a quick, "Yeah," but then said nothing else as the other charges were read.

Hawkins' family and friends, holding hands with their advisor, the Rev. Al Sharpton, walked silently out of the courtroom, saying nothing. Then they let out a shout.

Quickly they were surrounded by about 150 supporters who shouted "Yusuf! Yusuf!" At one point, Stewart raised a clenched fist in the air and smiled. When someone handed him a bullhorn, he joined in the chant for his slain son.

Meanwhile, Fama's family was in a third-floor corridor and not speaking to reporters.

Changes cast cloud on role of Radio Free Europe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Operations of U.S. radio networks that have broadcast to Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union throughout the Cold War are under intense review, but it is too soon to say the Bush administration is about to shut them down, U.S. officials said Thursday.

"There is an enormous interagency discussion going on," said one State Department official who asked not to be identified by name.

Though there doubtless will be recommendations for changes in format, he said, nobody is predicting the demise of such networks as Radio Free Europe, which broadcasts to Eastern Europe, or Radio Liberty, which aims its programs at millions of listeners in the Soviet Union.

He noted that changes in the Soviet Union haven't moved as quickly or gone as far as they have in many countries of Eastern Europe.

Meanwhile, Malcolm S. Forbes Jr., chairman of the Board for International Broadcasting that operates Radio Free Europe, took issue with recommendations on the broadcast service's future issued Wednesday by the independent U.S. Advisory Commission on Public Diplomacy.

The advisory panel said planning should begin now on eventually ending Radio Free Europe and turning its assets over to the Voice of America.

"Given that Radio Free Europe enjoys several times the audience of Voice of America in Eastern and Central Europe, it is premature to call for an end to RFE broadcasts to countries in the region," Forbes said.

The commission on public diplomacy serves as an advisory panel for the United States Information Agency, which operates the Voice of America, and Forbes said:

"The motives of such a recommendation concerning RFE must be questioned in light of the commission's close relationship with USIA."

Forbes called for creation of an independent presidential commission, saying, "The future of U.S. international broadcasting is too important a subject to be left to the advocates of special bureaucratic interests."

Edward Fuelner, chairman of the advisory commission and president of the politically conservative Heritage Foundation, said he regretted "both the tone and content" of Forbes' remarks, calling them "a cheap shot at the commission."

"They took one specific recommendation that we worded carefully and reworded it in such a way as to make it sound like we are on opposite sides and we are not," Fuelner said.

"At some stage you have to ask yourself, what justification is there for the U.S. government to be reporting what's going on inside Poland, for example, and competing with 20 or 25 independent Polish broadcast stations," he said. "You're not talking about changing everything tomorrow morning; you're talking about years out.

"I don't think the U.S. government ought to be competing with private internal domestic services. All we're saying is, plan for those days," Fuelner said.

Richard Boucher, the State Department's deputy spokesman, told reporters that "monumental changes" in Eastern Europe have prompted a government-wide review of future operations of the Voice of America, Radio Free Europe and other U.S. international broadcast operations.

"At this point we don't have any conclusions or results," Boucher said.

Boucher noted, however, that President Bush has expressed continuing support for the effort to "bring the voice of democracy to people everywhere."

Legislation on weapons approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate approved legislation without dissent Thursday night requiring the president to impose sanctions against countries that violate international agreements against use of chemical and biological weapons.

By a vote of 92-0, the Senate adopted the bill despite the threat of a possible veto by President Bush.

The United States and Soviet Union negotiate cuts in the superpower stockpiles of chemical weapons and reductions in strategic and conventional forces.

But lawmakers said they are concerned about the proliferation of the weapons among Third World countries.

"We have learned anew in recent years of the ghastly and indisputable horror of the use of chemical weapons in violation of international law," said Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

"We must not apply a lesser standard against chemical weapons use than the use of nuclear weapons."

The legislation, which had bipartisan support, was prompted by the use of chemical weapons in the Iran-Iraq war and Iraq's use of the weapons last year against its Kurdish minority.

In addition, Iraqi President Saddam Hussein has vowed to use chemical weapons against Israel if the Mideast nation launches a nuclear attack.

"Many months ago, I said that the evil genie of chemical weapons is already out of the bottle," said Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas. "It's even more critical today that we do everything we can to see that the genie does not spread its poison more widely."

Bush administration officials, however, said they would recommend a veto because the legislation would limit the president's authority to conduct foreign policy and doesn't provide the necessary presidential discretion.

The sanctions in the bill would call for a cutoff of arms sales, an embargo on imports from violating countries, an end to credit guarantees from the Export-Import Bank, a halt to financial assistance from U.S. banks and an end to military and economic assistance.

The sanctions would apply to countries as well as foreign companies that help the nations get the chemical and biological weapons.

Final passage came after resolution of a jurisdictional dispute between the Foreign Relations and Banking committees over export controls and the decision by two senators to withdraw controversial amendments.

Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., had introduced an amendment that would have singled out Iraq for sanctions, saying the United States had no business dealing with Hussein, "the butcher of Baghdad."

But Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, said the amendment would be a "giant step backward in pursuing the peace process."

Sen. Dan Coats, R-Ind., encountered opposition to his amendment that would make it unlawful to ship or transport solid waste produced by one state to another state for treatment or disposal.

The Senate did approve amendments requiring the president to submit to the Congress semiannual reports on the proliferation of chemical, biological and nuclear weapons.

By a vote of 96-0, the Senate also adopted an amendment calling on the administration to strengthen diplomatic efforts to control chemical agents.

Banking merger sets new course

While the merger of banks in Texas over the past decade has come to be regarded as an ominous development, typically signaling a problem with one of the institutions that ultimately led to insolvency, the merger of two Midland banks this week can and should be viewed as a positive sign.

The merger Wednesday of Texas Commerce Bank-Midland and United Bank of Midland marked the first time "two healthy and strong banks have merged in about a decade," said Marc Shapiro, president of Texas Commerce Bancshares. It was refreshing to hear some good news from the banking industry for a change.

Furthermore, oil drillers who rely on heavy support from the local banking industry to carry out their work should continue to be adequately served since 50 percent of Texas Commerce Bank's loan portfolio was in energy loans even prior to the merger.

During the announcement, Texas Commerce-Midland President Ed Jones expressed confidence in the future of Midland, noting that all the community's economic indicators are positive.

The merger underscored that confidence and shows that Texas Commerce has faith in the financial stability of Midland.

That confidence is important, as is the confidence of banking customers in their financial institutions. In fact, without that level of trust banks wouldn't exist.

Since Midland's old First National Bank closed its doors in October 1983, the banking industry in Midland and much of the rest of Texas has been through seven long and arduous years. With the merger of these two healthy banks — apparently the first under such positive conditions in a number of years in Texas — perhaps it truly does signal something of a new beginning for the banking industry in Texas.

That's a long overdue occurrence!

Rich Nicaraguan exiles demand favors

WASHINGTON — Silvio Arguello was once the vice president of Nicaragua under Anastasio Somoza. But when Somoza fell in 1979, Arguello reluctantly fled to Miami. For 11 years, he advocated the ouster of the Sandinista government that overthrew Somoza. He was thrilled when that happened with the election of Violetta Chamorro as the new president of Nicaragua.

Anderson

But today, Arguello is not packing his bags for Managua. Life is too good in Miami for the real-estate magnate with a house in a posh neighborhood and plenty of cash.

Arguello is not alone. Hundreds of successful business people who prospered under Somoza and scooted out of town with their millions when the Sandinistas took over now are waffling about going back. When Nicaragua needs their money and skills the most to rebuild its bankrupt economy, these armchair Nicaraguans have opted to dig in their heels in the United States.

A recent summit between some of them and Chamorro's chief economic adviser suggests why. They can't count on getting the same special privileges that they enjoyed under Somoza and they aren't willing to sacrifice what they have built in Miami.

Arguello complained to us that the new government of Nicaragua is only offering him "equal justice for all." Under Somoza, some people were more equal than others.

In early March, Chamorro's representative traveled to Miami to try to woo some of the exiled business people back home. Previous guarantees from Managua had hinted that they could bring their cars and other luxury items with them duty free. Tax breaks and compensation for the property they lost to the Sandinistas also reportedly were offered.

In all, 72 former Nicaraguan business people agreed to consider the deal and went to Managua to test the waters. Apparently they were pleased at the path the new government is taking, but the meeting turned sour when they realized their demands would not be met.

Sources told our associate Dean Boyd that the Miami clan hinged its return on a number of conditions — the return of all of their old property, appointments in the new government and direct benefits from forthcoming U.S. aid to rebuild Nicaragua.

Francisco Mayorga, Chamorro's economic adviser, was taken aback. He told them the compensation for their losses when Somoza was ousted would be up to the courts. And he warned them to give up their "eye-for-an-eye" attitude, saying that their demands did nothing for Nicaragua's "stability."

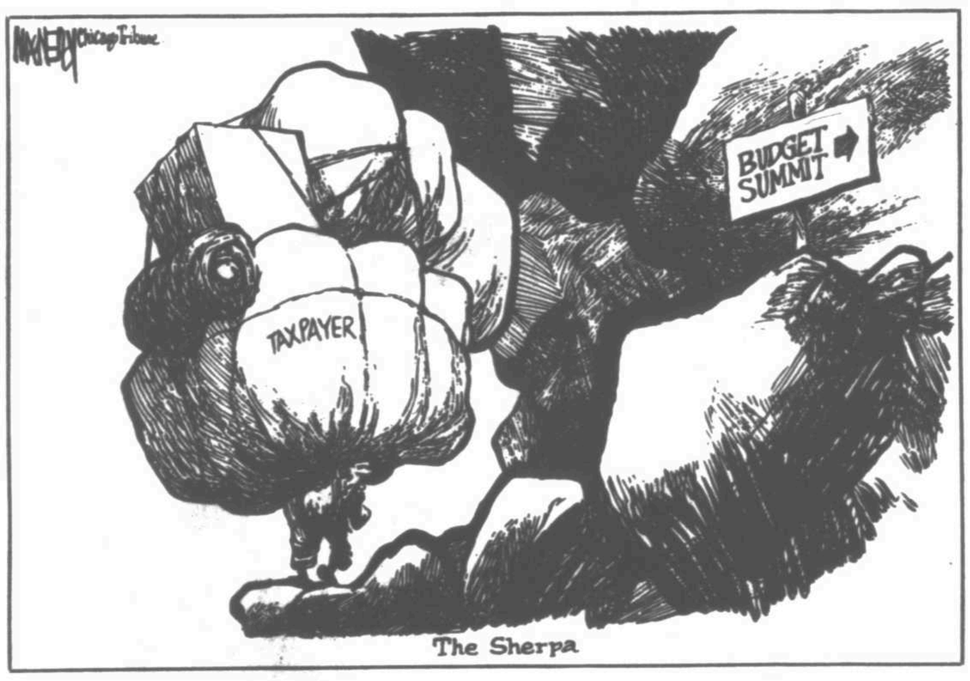

Mayorga also told the Miami contingent that prestigious government jobs couldn't be given to people who hadn't even been around for the hard-fought election. Mayorga then begged the wealthy exiles to play by the rules and participate in Nicaragua's reconstruction.

The group returned to Miami angry. "Why should we go back if we can't get our possessions back?" Arguello asked us.

A small Miami newspaper published by members of the exile community blasted the new government's position and characterized Mayorga's remarks as "excessively vulgar."

One exile who does plan to go home told us that the wealthy exiles will only return "if they can make a big profit and have their old ways. This is impossible and unfair to ask of Nicaragua which has just been through 10 years of war." Then he added a condemnation of the elites who got too comfortable in Miami. "They are no longer Nicaraguans."

I felt sorry for the Indians ever since I heard about how Donald Trump's people bilked them out of Manhattan for 24 bucks and one of Ivana's charm bracelets.

Grizzard

The Indians probably thought they were getting a good deal. How were they to know that 10 million people would show up one day and be willing to pay $2,000 a month for a second floor, walk-up efficiency.

The Indians, the Original People, continued to get the shaft.

We shot all their buffalo, we built railroads through their subdivisions, we convinced them to stop wearing their comfortable loin cloths and put on long pants, we massacred them, we relocated them, and depicted them in films and on TV as monosyllabic savages, always getting their personal pronouns messed up.

If the Lone Ranger had really been Tonto's friend, he would have said, "It's not 'me' go get horses, Tonto, it's 'I' go get horses."

He could have gotten around to teaching Tonto to use articles and proper verbs later.

I bring all this up because the Indians are getting shafted again, even in my home state of Georgia.

A few weeks ago, 80 Indian activists tried to hold a religious ceremony at the Etowah Indian Mounds, north of Atlanta. The mounds are an ancient Indian burial ground, now a state park.

Archaeologists dig up Indian graves and put their ancestors' skeletons on display, the Indian activists say. How would you like for an Indian archaeologist to dig up your great-grandpa and display his bones?

A state park official met the protesting Indians at the entrance and wouldn't allow them to hold their ceremony because it was against some silly rule.

In fact, according to news reports, Libby Forehand, the park manager, sought to make the Indians' leader, Cleo Montelongo, Cherokee from North Carolina, show a birth certificate proving he was a descendant of the Indians buried at the Etowah mounds.

Hey, sister, where's your birth certificate showing why you shouldn't be back in Ireland peeling potatoes where your ancestors are buried?

Squirrel-patrol person, Libby Forehand, said the Indians could have come inside the park for a $1.50 a head, but policy prohibits any type of religious ceremony.

So the Indians, who have learned by now not to deal with white people in any matter involving money, held their ceremony outside the park.

The Indians passed around a pipe, tapped their fellow protesters on the heads and shoulders with a feather and ended with drum play and the prayer song of the American Indian movement.

"The point ain't to make no trouble," one of the protesters was quoted as saying.

That's too bad. In the old days the Indians would have ridden in yelling and screaming and giving close haircuts.

CHARLEY REESE

Orlando's Magic transforms columnist

I have on brief occasions mildly envied some of my colleagues in the column-writing racket who can turn poetic on the subject of baseball.

After all, foreign affairs and domestic politics are dreary fields of nightmares. Some old Greek — Aristotle, I think — used to advocate moderation in all things and that certainly applies to reality. Too much reality these days will give you cirrhosis of the soul.

Reese

Unfortunately I'm not a baseball fan, even though the corporate plantation I labor on owns the Chicago Cubs, which are just the kind of losing team intellectuals are attracted to. Losing teams, the homeless, Third World countries, apartheid, and the struggle of homosexuals for acceptance seem to be obsessions with intellectuals these days.

Yeah, I know what you're thinking. I'm not an intellectual. Well, I know that. After all, I gave up baseball for girls at about age 13. I like boxing, but that is so sleazy and crooked you can't be poetic about it. I like bowling, but bowling is like sex. It's fun to do but no fun to watch or to write about.

I'm an occasional hunter but it's safer to offend Abu Nidal or the Teamsters than to get the animal rights people after you. Nidal and the Teamsters may be mean but they aren't crazy. And they won't bore you to death.

I also shoot pistols for a hobby, but only engineering types who get excited about such things as minutes of angle and ballistic coefficients can be poetic about that.

Basketball.

Never did I think I would ever like basketball. In my wayward youth, when I was a sportswriter, basketball struck me as even more ridiculous than football, but then all games played with a ball of any size or shape are basically ridiculous.

Nevertheless my hometown, Orlando, Fla., got itself an NBA franchise, built itself an arena, and fielded a team, the Orlando Magic. From the won-loss perspective, it's terrible.

In the beginning, I was Mr. Negative. Ha, you won't get a franchise. Ha, the arena will be late or lousy or both. Ha, if you get all that, no one will come, especially me.

So, if you're going to be dead, flat wrong, it might as well be about a recreational subject. The Orlando Magic turned out to be the biggest success since Disney World. The arena is great. And so were the crowds. And I went and I watched on TV and had a good time.

The charm of sports is that losing doesn't really hurt — boxing excepted. You can develop a kind of affection for the players and when they go beyond themselves, as all athletes good enough to be pros will do on occasion, you get really excited. And when they hit a slump, you sympathize with them. You can root for the young rookies, striving to make their mark, and you can applaud the old veterans, running on aches, guts and experience.

I see that you think I'm contradicting myself. I said I'm not an intellectual and here I am rooting for a losing team. There is no contradiction. I'm not being poetic and the Magic have only had one losing season. If they run up a string of losing seasons approaching that of the Cubs, I'll dump 'em in a flash.

Nor am I going to spread any fertilizer about the philosophical meaning of basketball, which is zilch, or attribute any demi-god like characteristics to the players. It's just a game where you try to throw a ball through a hoop with a fishnet that has a hole in it. It helps if you have an overactive pituitary.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

We should return to classical education

The problem with public schools is that they have so little to do with schooling. I speak of schooling in the old sense: training minds the way aerobic exercises train muscles.

Murchison

In today's schools, it's matter over mind. The first thing the schools are supposed to do is keep kids off the streets. The second thing is teach social dogmas — use condoms, say no to drugs, take hats off indoors, respect differing lifestyles; above all, these days, shed lingering suspicions that the West of Dante and Shakespeare produced ideas and works of permanent relevance. Federal judges juggle school attendance zones and prescribe curricula, not so our children will necessarily learn but so they'll be grouped somewhat in accordance with the community's racial makeup.

If there's time left in the school day, a few random facts may be imparted. Modern curricula are a mishmash.

Who's to wonder that most high school seniors according to a recent survey, can't tell you when the War Between the States was fought? As for McClellan's strategy in the Peninsula campaign, as for the siege of Vicksburg ... aw, forget it!

These somber observations come to mind on a day when teachers' unions are picketing the Texas governor's mansion — on account of the governor's plans to veto a tax bill for education. (He did so anyway.)

We talk about "throwing money at problems," and how it never works. What does throwing money at education mean?

It means building larger schools and buying fancier equipment and enticing teachers to earn advanced degrees so they can qualify for larger salaries. I know whereof I speak. My own school district has the fanciest football stadium you'd ever want to play on, but strings instruction for elementary students, thanks to budgetary constraints, is about to die away in a poignant pianissimo.

Through the whole education debate, I have rarely if ever heard a legislator, or a teachers' union, talk about ways to sharpen intellectual acuity. No, the idea is, throw money.

The good old materialistic society of the late 20th century equates money with success. Spend enough, and it's just got to be better. Matter over mind.

No doubt this is why I was beguiled by strenuously argued proposals I heard recently at the annual meeting of the Philadelphia Society, an estimable organization of traditionalist and libertarian thinkers. The proposals: Get back to classical education.

This was once the common experience. For recreation, for enjoyment — is it possible? — my great-grandfather Cook played the violin and read Greek.

I know, I know, that was eons ago. Yeah, at least 60 years — around the time of the war Lincoln was in, or was it the one where Stalin and the Kaiser were trying, you know, to take over France, or Saudi Arabia, or whatever?

All I can say is, nobody arraigned Great-grandfather Cook and his classically educated contemporaries on the charge leveled at most students today — gross ignorance. Or the charge of apathy in the face of ignorance.

No, we're not going back to classical education — not as a society, though our society would benefit enormously if we did so. But I have a hunch. It is that, if the teachers' unions don't quit thinking just about money, and the politicians don't stop truckling to the teachers' unions, and if the training of the mind is not somehow recovered as the chief educational objective, then it's bye-bye, public schools.

Those who want their children's minds well and truly opened will vote with their feet, they'll leave the public schools to those who don't mind being reminded five days a week to use condoms. We'll have home schools and private schools for the best minds — I'm talking brains, not money, race, or social status — and the teachers' unions won't be any better off, but the country might just be.

Ken Palmrose, a fire information officer with the U.S. Forest Service, said skies were overcast, humidity was high and there was a light drizzle earlier Thursday.

"That really quieted the fire activity down. It's (the fire) listed as 50 percent contained. There's no wind right now, and that's good news, and this weather's supposed to hold throughout the day," he said.

But it will not take long for dry conditions to return once the damp weather lifts, Palmrose said.

The fire, which has burned in rugged terrain since Sunday, was listed as man-caused, he said. "The investigation still is going on," Palmrose said.

The blaze, which was being fought by about 350 people, was partially contained to the south and west, but had been burning east toward Carlsbad Caverns National Park, officials said.

Crews were not working on the eastern edge of the blaze Wednesday night because the terrain was too steep and the fire too erratic, said Erin Connelly, another fire information officer.

Although the fire was two miles from the southwestern boundary of the 47,755-acre Carlsbad Caverns National Park, it was still miles from the famed caves, officials said.

A controlled burnout Tuesday night on the fire's western edge in southern Lincoln National Forest helped to create a solid fire line there, Ms. Connelly said.

On Wednesday, aerial bombardments of fire-retardant slurry had to be temporarily halted because of strong wind.

The drops were resumed later in the day, but Palmrose said the four air tankers were not needed for slurry drops Thursday because of the drizzle.

Ms. Connelly said more than 100,000 gallons of retardant had been dropped by four air tankers since Sunday.

Palmrose said Thursday's cloud cover grounded three helicopters that had been ferrying supplies and people to the fire.

Officials had anticipated containing the fire at around 600 acres, but winds of up to 60 mph spread the flames Tuesday. The fire burned 1,500 new acres Wednesday, Ms. Connelly said.

The fire threatened caves and archaeological sites and burned to within two miles of the national park boundary, said Bob Pena, chief dispatcher in the Lincoln fire control center.

Ms. Connelly said one firefighter suffered a minor injury when his leg was cut by a spine from an agave plant.

D.C. statehood bill introduced

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sens. Edward Kennedy and Paul Simon introduced a bill Thursday that would grant statehood to the District of Columbia, beginning what Kennedy predicted would be "a difficult uphill struggle."

"The measure we are introducing is not new, but it is overdue," said Kennedy, a Massachusetts Democrat who backed two previous statehood bills that died without votes being taken.

"No one doubts this will be a difficult uphill struggle, but we are committed to the effort," he said.

Jesse Jackson, an ardent advocate of statehood, joined Kennedy and Simon, an Illinois Democrat, at a news conference announcing the bill.

Mayor Marion Barry did not attend. Barry is scheduled to go on trial next month on charges of drug possession and perjury.

Kennedy, referring to President Bush's recent suggestion that the city could be given the compromise benefit of voting rights in Congress, said statehood was the only acceptable goal.

"Part-way measures and half-hearted initiatives do not satisfy the basic principle of self-determination," Kennedy said. "The people of the District of Columbia deserve their full rights."

Woman officially alive

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Rose Marie Posey is officially alive again after a computer error that declared her death was corrected. Now, she's ready for "The Tonight Show" and "Nightline."

The 73-year-old woman declared dead by U.S. Treasury Department and insurance company computers got word Wednesday that the errors had been fixed and her $871.13 monthly pension restored.

After her story appeared this week in newspapers, Med Pay Inc., a Springfield third-party administrator of group health plan claims, stepped in and notified the government Mrs. Posey was indeed alive.

"It needed somebody who just knew which button to push," company president Gordon L. Kinne said.

Travelers Medicare service representative Debbie Petersen called Mrs. Posey from Salt Lake City, Utah, on Wednesday to say she was once again alive in computer files, and the surgery claim would be paid.

Abduction claimed

CLOVIS, N.M. (AP) — A citizens group is distributing fliers calling the disappearance of a 6-year-old Clovis boy an abduction, although police said they aren't yet calling it an abduction.

Matthews Roberts was last seen May 8 after he wandered away from home, apparently trying to follow his mother to the store, unbeknownst to her. Divers spent two days looking in a nearby lake but found nothing.

Police Capt. Leon Morris said investigators "have nothing leading us in any direction."

Morris said, however, he had no objection to the announcement by the group, called the Friends of Matthew Roberts Foundation.

"It is extremely critical to the search for the child that we convey this to as many people in the Southwest as we can," said printer Art Smith.

Shuttle launch date set

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA said Thursday it is working toward a May 30 launch date for space shuttle Columbia, whose astronomy mission was delayed by work to replace a bad cooling valve.

The so-called "assessment dates" are usually accurate, barring unforeseen problems, said NASA spokesman Bruce Buckingham.

"It gives the workers a date and target they're operating toward. It gives them a schedule deadline so they know what work needs to be done," he said.

Mission managers are expected to set an official launch date at a flight readiness review teleconference on May 24.

Columbia had been scheduled to lift off this week with seven astronauts and the $100 million Astro observatory, capable of probing sources of ultraviolet and X-ray radiation. But the National Aeronautics and Space Administration postponed the 36th shuttle mission two to three weeks in order to replace the valve at the launch pad.

Technicians on Thursday finished soldering lines connected to a new valve. The bad valve, which was removed Tuesday, had a torn filter.

The valve, which has a replacement value of $141,000, will be recertified and installed on the shuttle Endeavour, which is under construction in California and due to fly in early 1992, Buckingham said.

Columbia's cooling system will be tested, then purged to remove excess moisture. It will be filled again with a refrigerant, probably on Monday.

Oregonian drops Breslin column over racial slur

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Oregonian has dropped Jimmy Breslin's syndicated column because of racial slurs he made about a co-worker, the newspaper announced Thursday.

Breslin recently lambasted a Korean-American reporter with New York Newsday after she criticized one of his columns as sexist.

In a newsroom tirade, Breslin called Ji-Yeon Yuh a "yellow cur" and "slant-eyed." The reporter wasn't present during the obscenity-laced outburst. On May 8, Newsday suspended Breslin for two weeks.

"Breslin revealed attitudes that have no place in the newsroom or in a nation of people from all walks of life, of all colors, religions and ethnic and national backgrounds," said William A. Hilliard, editor of The Oregonian. "And Breslin has no place in The Oregonian."

'Jimmy Breslin has been writing about minorities with compassion, sensitivity and skill for more than a quarter of a century and we're looking forward to having him back at Newsday,'

— Anthony Marro, Newsday editor

Reached by telephone in New York, Breslin had little comment about The Oregonian's action. "That's up to them. They run the paper," he said.

Breslin will continue at Newsday.

"Jimmy Breslin has been writing about minorities with compassion, sensitivity and skill for more than a quarter of a century and we're looking forward to having him back at Newsday," the paper's editor Anthony Marro said Thursday.

Marro said that since the suspension, Newsday has received about 100 telephone calls on the issue, the majority in favor of Breslin. The newspaper also has received about 80 letters that were about evenly split on the issue.

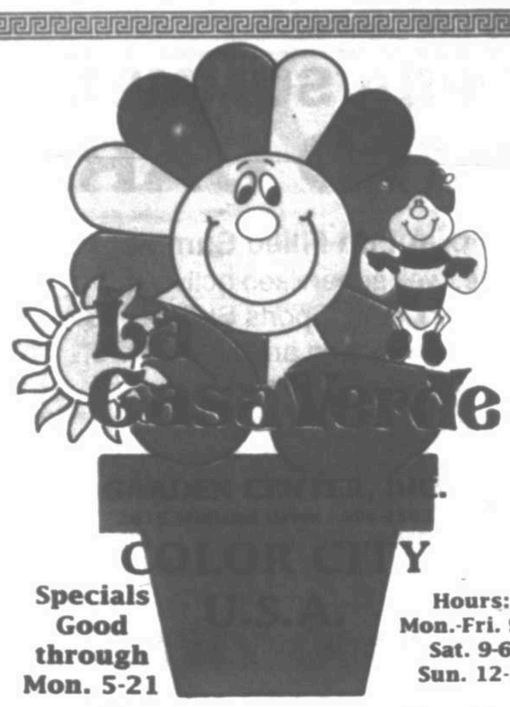

Public reaction to the controversy hasn't influenced the newspaper's response, Marro said.

"I don't edit this paper by poll or by plebiscite," he said.

Doug Mayberry, vice president of sales for the syndicate, refused to say how many newspapers subscribed to the column and how many have dropped it since the controversy.

Marro said he hasn't heard of any other cancellations.

Five students join Merit elite

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Four Midland high school students are among some 2,500 winners of college-sponsored National Merit Scholarships, it was announced this week.

Jim Murphy, Meredith Rentz and Brian Wojcik of Lee High School and Jay Parsons of Midland High School received scholarships ranging from $750 a year to full tuition at three Texas universities.

This brings to five the number of Midland Indpendent School District students named Merit Scholars in the competition, which awards three types of scholarships.

James Bankson, an LHS senior, received a corporate-sponsored Merit Scholarship to Texas A&M University from Mobil Foundation Inc. in March. None of MISD's finalists received $2,000 National Merit Scholarship Corp. awards announced in April.

This year, 11 MISD seniors were named National Merit Scholarship finalists based on their Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test and Scholastic Aptitude Test scores.

National Merit Corp. also considered extracurricular activities, school recommendations and grade point averages in naming finalists.

Of 14,000 finalists nationwide — who represented one half of one percent of all graduating seniors — 6,000 have received National Merit Scholarships worth $24 million.

Parson Murphy Rentz Wojcik

■ Parsons, 18, said he plans to major in aerospace or mechanical engineering at Texas A&M.

President of the MHS German Club, a Boys' State Delegate and National Honor Society Member, Parsons said the $750 renewable scholarship comes with strings attached.

"It's going to be a lot of pressure because you have to maintain a certain GPA to keep the money," Parsons said. "So every time you take a test, you're not only going to be thinking about the grade, but about the scholarship."

Nevertheless, Parsons said he was pleased to receive the scholarship, which comes in addition to scholarships from the Fasken Foundation and the Texas Society of Professional Engineers.

"It's going to help because you don't have to worry about working or anything," Parsons said.

■ Murphy, who distinguished himself as a mathematician on the Lee Academic Decathlon Team this year, said he is eager to attend the University of Texas at Austin this fall.

"I'm looking forward to the freedom and added responsibilities of college," said Murphy, who plans enter UT's honors liberal arts program.

Murphy, 17, said the $750 scholarship will relieve some of the financial pressure associated with college attendance, and credited his parents with his academic success.

A member of the National Honor Society, Murphy said he plans to eventually attend law school.

■ Miss Rentz, meanwhile, will attend Baylor University in Waco this fall, where her Merit Scholarship will cover tuition costs.

Like Murphy, she said her parents helped inspire her academic success.

"I think they had confidence in my ability to succeed," she said. "They almost took it for granted that I was capable of doing my best and that my best was enough to get me anywhere I want to go."

Miss Rentz, 18, said she is unsure what she will study at Baylor. She said she has been considering education.

"If I go into education, I'd like to go into educational psychology," she said, adding that teaching does not appeal to her.

"They should pay teachers more," she said. "If you're a teacher, you have to lean heavily on job satisfaction because the money isn't there."

Miss Rentz, a member of Lee's Bio-Med Club and the Academic Decathlon Team, said she is apprehensive about leaving for college.

"I'm afraid that when I get out of the small pond, I'm going to be eaten by a big fish," she said.

■ Wojcik, 18, said he will attend Texas A&M at no expense thanks to scholarship support.

A varsity soccer player and a National Honor Society member, Wojcik plans to study computer science and engineering.

"I'm looking forward to going off to college," he said. "I'm really not sure what will appeal to me there and what won't, but it will be different. Hopefully, it will be a good experience."

He said high school has not been hard for him, and said being an avid reader has helped him in school.

"I read a lot and I think it just helps a great deal because you learn to understand and communicate," he said.

City given time to clean tar pit

■ At a possible cost of $800,000, Midland has six months to devise a cleanup plan for the eastside pit.

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

The Texas Water Commission Thursday gave city officials 180 days to develop a plan to clean up an east Midland tar pit which contains mostly asphalt and some toxic materials, Councilman Jose Cuevas said.

Cuevas was among a group of city representatives who traveled to Austin to address TWC officials. Mayor Carroll Thomas, Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor and Assistant City Attorney Keith Stretcher also made the trip.

The officials were asking for advice on how to dispose of the pool of black goo, located near the Orchard Lane-Carver Street intersection, Cuevas said. Tests have shown that the pit contains traces of lead, chromium, toluene and trichloroethene.

The TWC gave the city a "180-day window" to find a way to take care of the pit, Cuevas said.

"It was an upbeat meeting," Cuevas said. "They said they understood the pressure we were under. They wanted to be optimistic, but ... cautious at the same time."

City officials initially estimated it would cost only $10,000 to mop up the pool. However, a consultant with the Carter and Burgess Inc. engineering firm of Fort Worth estimated earlier this month that it may cost as much as $800,000 for the pit cleanup, Cuevas said.

After Thursday's meeting with TWC officials, Cuevas estimated that the cleanup could cost anywhere from $200,000 to $800,000.

"We'll probably end up somewhere in the middle," he said. "It's going to be a long project, and it's going to be expensive."

Cuevas said that among other solutions, the city will look into recycling the pit material through a process which removes the toxic substances from the asphalt. Another option would be removing the material and hauling it to a hazardous waste dump, he said.

The city will be working step-by-step with TWC officials in Odessa to devise a solution, Cuevas added.

Stretcher said city officials were pleased with the TWC's response to the visit.

"I thought the meeting was very productive and very cordial," he said. "The city was given the opportunity to present all the facts and data. I came away feeling positive."

School finance bill No. 2 faces Clements' veto today

■ Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby on Thursday said he's not sure the governor wants finance reform legislation to pass.

By Rick Brown
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby accused Gov. Bill Clements' office of negotiating in bad faith Thursday, as a school finance compromise based on a bill the governor has in hand remained in a precarious balance.

Clements has told lamwakers he will decide by this morning whether he will accept their latest proposal.

Hobby, who presides over the Senate, said he was not prepared to break off talks previously since the alternative would be throwing the issue into the hands of a court-appointed master.

But if the compromise is rejected, "I can only conclude that the governor's office does not want a bill to pass," he said.

Clements on Thursday said he had "nothing to report."

"They're working," he said.

All promises from the governor for a quick veto of legislation that arrived in his office Wednesday were apparently off, even as Clements repeated them.

"I am prepared to veto the bill instantaneously — I mean immediately," he said at lunchtime Thursday. Meanwhile, talks continued.

Of the discussions, Hobby said "Everything is contingent on everything else." He agreed with a reporter's assessment that "that sounds like Alice in Wonderland."

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, said issues lawmakers thought were resolved kept re-appearing. When an end appeared in sight, new issues came up, he said.

House Speaker Gib Lewis said lawmakers had given in to the governor on several key points. "Let us just say they are very hard negotiators," he said.

He said that the state will provide $450 million in new aid to districts next school year, down from $555 million.

He said whatever revenue package emerges from the Legislature, some money will be devoted to budget problems in the state's human services agencies. The figure Lewis mentioned was $85 million.

Lewis also said an accommodation had been reached to allow the governor to appoint the commissioner of education and that most of the money needed next year would be raised through fee in-

TWC testing shows high chloride levels in 9 Odessa wells

■ The Texas Water Commission on Thursday connected water well contamination in South Odessa to the oil industry.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Oilfield contamination is the suspected culprit behind high chloride levels in some Ector County residential water wells, a Texas Water Commission official said Thursday.

Test results from nine wells in the Ranch Estates West subdivision west of U.S. Highway 385 show chloride levels as high as 3,647 parts per million.

That compares with a state-recommended maximum of 300 parts per million.

William Lockey, TWC district manager, said the high chloride levels are consistent with oilfield contamination.

"We're quite confident that all of the contamination that we've found out there ... is oilfield-related and therefore under the jurisdiction of the Texas Railroad Commission," Lockey said.

The TRC regulates Texas' petroleum industry.

Ronald Strong, railroad commission district manager, said his office will conduct an investigation of water contamination in Ranch Estates.

The railroad commission also is investigating contamination in south Midland County, where TWC tests revealed chloride levels up to 2,351 parts per million in some wells.

"We'll start looking first of all at any oil and gas wells in the area and see if there's any problems," Strong said.

He said his office would attempt to determine the source of the contamination, but said he did not know which oil companies have operations in the area.

Lockey said the TWC sampled

Federal agents break up 3-state drug operation

DALLAS (AP) — Federal drug agents have broken up an illegal drug manufacturing and distribution ring that was operating in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, officials said.

Most of the nine members in the drug ring were former students of Lancaster High School, and the suspected leader was a former schoolboy quarterback who freely spent the proceeds from the illegal sales of amphetamines and methamphetamines, federal authorities said Thursday.

"We believe they spent $500,000 in two years on fast cars and fast women," said Brad Morgan of the Drug Enforcement Administration in Dallas.

Without action, official foresees 'Third World' Texas

■ A state job-training official on Thursday expressed his fears of limited job success for today's average high school graduates.

By Sue Gutierrez
Staff Writer

Unless Texas quickly comes up with a plan to stop wasting its human capital, it could become a "Third World" state, said Glen Parkey, chairman of the State Job Training Coordinating Council.

Parkey told the Permian Basin Private Industry Council Thursday the state is working on a plan that will allow Texas to develop a quality, competitive workforce and assure its place as a leader in the global economy.

"Today's graduates are incapable of the high-tech responsibilities required in the job market and are incapable of entering college. We need to deal with children as they are today, not in the past. There is a growing consensus that something is terribly wrong," Parkey said at a press conference.

He said "Competition has eliminated jobs that many high school dropouts used to drop into. Now there's no place for them to drop into. If we continue to waste our human capital, Texas will be a 'Third World' state."

Meeting this challenge will require integrating various planning, administrative, operational and oversight responsibilities now held by multiple state agencies and programs dealing with human resources.

The challenge lies in changing the management of these bureaucracies into a system where clients can access multiple services simultaneously. Although each program has been designed to respond to distinct needs the system must become more user-friendly, Parkey said.

WATER: RRC to take over probe

the Ranch Estates wells on April 3 in response to residents' complaints about water quality.

Of the wells tested, three showed chloride levels of more than 3,000 parts per million, one showed 2,576 parts per million and one showed 1,050 parts per million.

R.C. Bond, a TWC geologist and investigator, said chloride contamination can occur when oilfield brines — saltwater found in some crude oil deposits — are disposed of by drillers.

Improper brine disposal in deteriorating injection or disposal wells or in unlined caliche pits can result in chloride contamination of groundwater, Bond said.

There are several oil wells in the Ranch Estates subdivision, TWC maps show.

Lockey said the TWC has not determined exactly how the Ranch Estates contamination occurred or who is responsible. The railroad commission will handle any further investigation of subdivision groundwater contamination, he said.

Lockey said the range of contamination has not been determined, but added that he would expect to find other wells in the area with high chloride levels.

None of the wells tested showed contamination by volatile organic compounds or fecal bacteria, Lockey said.

Jeb Barker, a Texas Department of Health water hygiene specialist, said chloride contamination is not deadly, but it can make water unpalatable.

"These things ... shouldn't lead to increased risk of cancer, they're just irritating," he said. "Certainly it gets to the point that you don't want to drink it."

For some Ranch Estates residents whose wells were tested, that point was several years ago.

"You can't even drink one sip," said Elena Guerrero, who has lived in the subdivision eight years with her husband and three children. "I can't use it for anything — not even for animals."

She said six baby chicks she recently bought died after one of her sons gave them well water. Her family can't shampoo with well water because it makes their hair fall out, and the water tastes so bad they can't even brush their teeth with it, she said.

Apparently, not even the vegetation is safe from the vile effects of the water, which showed chloride levels of 3,575 parts per million.

"I have to water the trees with good water," said Ms. Guerrero, who lives on Wagon Wheel Road. "As soon as I use my own water, they die. So we don't have any trees at all."

She said her water became undrinkable about five years ago.

Victor Gonzelez said he's never been able to drink his well water, which showed 1,050 parts per million of chlorides.

"It used to be way strong," he said. "To drink a glass you had to sneak up on it. It's mellowed out a little bit."

Gonzelez, a two-year subdivision resident who said he borrows drinking water from neighbors, said he would like to see whoever is responsible for the chloride contamination brought to justice.

Ms. Guerrero, meanwhile, said she doubts that anyone will ever do anything about water quality in her unincorporated neighborhood.

"What can I do?" she asked. "I don't want to move. If I have to pay for a new water well, I'd pay for it if they'd guarantee me that it's going to be good water."

SHOW: Local aerobatic pilots to perform show flights.

"Our primary goal is to have a fun, safe day in an outstanding air show," Spence said.

Gates will be open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. for aviation buffs to examine the static aircraft and, in the case of the mammoth C-5A, stroll into the airplane's cargo bay and climb upstairs to the cockpit, crew quarters, and passenger area.

Admission to the show is $8 per person. Admission is free for those aged 12 and under. Advance purchase tickets are available at the Midland and Odessa Chambers of Commerce and other businesses for $6 each.

"The public can watch perfection in motion," Air Show '90 coordinator Paul Erdmann said of the Thunderbirds' routine. "The public can expect their money's worth by watching one of the finest precision-flying teams in the world."

Additional schedule items include:

■ 12:55 p.m.: Skydiving by parachutists from Eagle's Nest Airport.

■ 1-2:30 p.m.: Aerobatic flying and military high-performance flights.

The Thunderbirds' aerial demonstrations are "aerial ballet choreographed purely for spectator entertainment," according to the Air Force.

The Thunderbirds have flown almost 3,000 aerial demonstrations throughout the world since the early 1950s.

The Thunderbirds are assigned to the USAF Tactical Air Command and fly the supersonic F-16 multi-role combat fighter.

"The Thunderbirds strive to demonstrate our Air Force capabilities," said Lt. Col. Charles "Chuck" Simpson, commander of the Thunderbird squadron, "and provide the best medium to attract the quality people we (the Air Force) need."

Thunderbird pilots in the show are Simpson, 39, of San Antonio; Capt. Steve Henderson, 31, of St. Louis, Mo.; Capt. John Posner, 31, of Alexandria, Va.; Maj. John Weida, 33, of Litchfield, Minn.; Maj. Chuck Greenwood, 35, of Grand Blanc, Mich., and Capt. Mo Beale, 30, of Franklin, Va.

Maj. Dave Janick, 36, of Daytona Beach, Fla., is the team's logistics officer who flies the seventh Thunderbird aircraft. The Thunderbirds narrator is Maj. Tim Hoy, 34.

The Thunderbirds fly the supersonic General Dynamics F-16 Fighting Falcon that has Mach 2 speed, 550-nautical-mile combat radius and can climb more than 30,000 feet per minute.

In addition to the Thunderbirds, F-15 Eagles from Holloman Air Force Base, N.M. will perform aerial feats, and T-38 and T-37 jet trainers from Reese Air Base in Lubbock will given aerial demonstrations. USAF Brig. Gen. Travis Harrell, 47, commander of Holloman AFB, and USAF Col. Monroe Sams Jr., 45, commander of the 64th Flying Training Wing at Reese AFB, are to attend the air show.

Among the world-class aerobatics pilots to perform are Dr. Julie Pfile and Janet Crosby, who will do a dual act in their biwing Pitts Special aircraft, and Debbie Rhin, a Southwest Airlines pilot, who will fly her Pitts biplane. Pfile, an Albuquerque, N.M., physician, and Rhin are members of the United States World Aerobatic team. Pfile and Crosby are members of the West Texas Aerobatic Club.

Additionally, local aerobatic pilots, including Bob Sears and James Jones, will perform.

Air-show observers are encouraged to drink plenty of water, to wear headgear, to use sunscreen and umbrellas for shade in order to prevent heat exhaustion and dehydration at the air show.

Red Cross seeks donations for East Texas evacuees

Staff Report

An emergency fund appeal has been launched by the American Red Cross to help victims of recent floods and tornadoes put the pieces of their lives back together.

But many other families are bracing for more flood waters to make their way down the rivers and into thier communities.

Volunteers will make sure that those fleeing their homes will have a place to stay, a hot meal and additional help as needed.

For thousands of families in northern Texas, the recovery process is slow. Many are still unable to return to their water-soaked homes.

Red Cross is seeking public support, so it may help those affected by the flooding and tornadoes.

Financial contributions should be directed to American Red Cross, Disaster Relief Fund, First National Bank, PO Box 1000, Grapevine, Texas, 76051.

Donors may also contribute by calling (800)842-2200. Donations are tax deductible.

Probe reveals cause of accident

Staff Report

BIG SPRING — A man, who was involved in a car accident about 3:35 p.m. Wednesday, died of a heart attack which caused the accident, authorities said.

Manuel Olague, 64, lost control of the vehicle he was driving near the 800 block of West Sixth Street, causing the car to jump a curb and hit a fence, police officials said.

Olague was pronounced dead at Scenic Mountain Medical Center about 5:25 p.m. by Judge Willie Grant. Olague had a history of heart trouble and was on his way to a doctor's appointment at the time of the accident, Grant said.

Storm losses put at $40 million

AUSTIN (AP) — Insured property damage to dwellings, mobile homes, commercial property and vehicles from wind, hail, tornadoes and flooding in Texas during late April totaled an estimated $40 million, insurance companies report.

The Insurance Information Institute estimated the losses Thursday for damage in storms that ravaged Texas April 24-28.

About $20 million damage also was recorded in six other states, the institute said. Leading those was $7 million in damage in Louisiana.

MMH may buy Imaging Center

Staff Report

Midland Memorial Hospital is considering purchase of The Imaging Center, a medical facility owned by a group of Midland doctors, a Midland County Hospital District director said Thursday.

"The (MMH) administration is trying to work it out right now," Director Pat Estes said. "They've been working on it for a long time."

The independent radiology center at 2205 W. Tennessee Ave., is located near the hospital.

"I don't know enough about it as a business deal to make a judgment on it," Ms. Estes said.

MMH spokesperson Laurie Johnson would not reveal details of the proposal. "That goes into a real estate matter, and I can't say anything about it," Ms. Johnson said.

The Imagining Center owners were not available to comment.

JOBS: El Paso, Amarillo to be network 'models'

(From 1B)

Parkey, owner of Sterling Group in Amarillo, was appointed by Gov. Bill Clements in April 1989 to head efforts to coordinate the work of all Texas human service delivery programs.

The assumption behind such a system is that families often have multiple problems that require services from many agencies. "You've got a one-stop approach to accessing these agencies," he says.

Parkey would like to see creation of a Human Investment Council (HIC) where various state agencies would set policy in coordinating services.

The HIC concept would create tools for restructuring these programs into a network with a common focus and commitment. Parkey says incentives will play a major role in bringing about change.

"To work effectively people have to have incentives. Give bonuses to teachers who are doing a particularly good job," he noted as an example.

This integrated system would involve comprehensive data bases that would determine client eligibility. The application and filing process would be coded and accessible to any necessary agency.

"There are tremendous opportunities to save money. It would eliminate duplication and waste," Parkey say.

Parkey and the State Job Training Coordinating Council are currently studying the concept. Implementation of a model program in Amarillo and El Paso is planned for this fall. Once the model has been tested, it will be extended across the state in 1991.

Parkey said communities have the flexibility to structure the model to meet local needs. It will be developed at the local — rather than the state or federal — level to determine what will benefit those people the agencies have the greatest impact on. "Anyone who wants to fit into this can, because we are doing it from a bottom-up approach."

BILL: Hobby wants action

creases and budget diversions.

He said some increases in "sin" taxes on tobacco and liquor also remain under discussion. Clements when asked whether the sin taxes would increase did not respond.

The chairman of the House Hispanic Caucus, Rep. Eddie Cavazos, D-Corpus Christi, said he was unable to support the legislation that negotiators have offered to Clements. "We've gone from compromise to surrender," he said.

Lewis said lawmakers want to maintain the current school finance practice of allowing more enrichment money to schools for students with special needs, like those in special education and bilingual education.

Caperton said Clements' office needed to check the compromise with House Republicans, the majority of whom have staunchly supported the governor, before coming back with an answer.

He said the governor's chief negotiator, Chief of Staff Mike Toomey, said he was meeting "a great deal more trouble than he thought."

Constitutionally, Clements has until midnight May 30 to act after taking physical possession of the document on Wednesday.

Hobby said, "I hope the governor tomorrow will either say publicly that he wants the bill or sends the vetoed bill back over here."

While other radio stations talk and talk about giving away money, K-103 hands it out.

Casebearers can destroy entire nut crop

Pecan trees are the pride of many home gardeners in Midland County. Pecans make up a big percentage of the home landscape trees in Midland and for that reason gardeners are often concerned about the damaging effects of the pecan nut casebearer.

Kiker

Adult moths are busy about this time of year laying eggs near the tip of the pecan nutlets. The pecan nut casebearer larvae (small worms) which hatch from the eggs, can destroy an entire nut cluster of pecans by feeding on the young pecans. Feeding on the small nutlets will kill the nut causing it to turn dark brown and mummified appearing. At the entrance holes into the nutlet webbing and frass can often be seen.

Home gardeners or commercial pecan growers wishing to control the pecan nut casebearer should inspect the young pecan nutlets for eggs to accurately schedule spray times to control the larvae. The eggs appear as tiny grayish-white to reddish oval dots smaller than a pinhead. If more than 2 eggs per 100 nutlet clusters are found, the trees should be sprayed.

Dr. Charles Allen, TAEX extension entomologist, has predicted the spray dates to span from about May 25 to May 29 for the petroplex. This spray date is predicted with a heat unit model that uses actual temperatures and historical weather data to predict the activity of the pecan nut casebearer. If the weather becomes unusually hot or cool after the prediciton has been made the best spray date may move up with hot weather or later with cool weather. A few days before the May 25 date and following this date nutlet inspection should take place every couple of days for eggs.

If you choose not to control the pecan nut casebearer, the worst that will happen is you may lose your nut crop. The casebearer does very little foliage feeding and no permanent damage to the tree. Another consideration of the casebearer is, if your nutcrop is very heavy the casebearer can thin it, giving you a better quality crop.

Homeowners wishing to control the casebearer can spray Malathion, Diazinon or Bacillus thuringensis. Bacillus thuringensis, or Bt, is an organic pesticide that will not harm anything except Lepidoptera larva, sparing your beneficials. But Bt must be used exactly on target and about 3 to 4 times with very thorough coverage sprays.

Commercial pecan producers will probably be looking at a target spray date more like May 29 with a second spray date about nine days later. Commercial producers can use a number of products including, Lorsban, Diazinon and Cygon.

As the time gets closer to May 25, give us a call at the Midland County Extension office at 687-1351. Insect activity is being monitored and the latest information on the best spray dates will be available.

'Vaccines' put natural insecticides into corn

By PAUL RAEBURN

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Researchers have developed a kind of vaccine that protects plants against pests by putting a natural pesticide into seeds.

The "vaccine" involves the insertion of bacteria called endophytes into a plant's seeds. The bacteria have been genetically engineered to carry a naturally occurring protein that kills insects, said Peter S. Carlson, the vaccine's developer.

As the plant grows, the bacteria spread the protein throughout the plant, he said Tuesday at a Rockefeller Foundation seminar on agricultural research.

"This is something brand new," he said. "No one ever thought of using endophytes before."

The technique was developed as a means of reducing reliance on dangerous pesticides, Carlson said.

As he was speaking, researchers were reporting in the Journal of the National Cancer Institute in Washington, D.C., that workers in flour mills had a cancer rate nine times that of the general population, because of the workers' exposure to pesticides in grain storage.

David Pimentel of Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y., estimates that pesticides poison 500,000 people around the world annually, resulting in 10,000 deaths.

Furthermore, the public health and environmental problems associated with pesticides are costing the U.S. government $3 billion per year, Pimentel said at the seminar.

Carlson, who founded Crop Genetics International in Hanover to produce the plant vaccine, has completed two years of field tests of corn that had been vaccinated to protect it against the European corn borer.

This pest, a tiny caterpillar, destroys $500 million worth of corn per year in the United States, said Carlson.

The vaccine has proven to be safe, and the tests have shown that the genetically engineered endophytes don't spread appreciably into neighboring plants, Carlson said.

Unlike human vaccines, the plant vaccine does not boost the plant's immune system to ward off pests. The endophytes are genetically engineered to include a gene from a bacterium called Bacillus thuringiensis.

Once that gene has been put into the endophytes, they make a Bacillus thuringiensis protein that kills the European corn borer.

The endophytes spread through the corn plant as it grows, causing it no harm but carrying the insecticidal protein with them.

When corn borers move into the corn stem, where they feed, they encounter the protein and are killed.

Conventional insecticides are not too effective against corn borers, Carlson said, because the insecticides do not get inside the corn plants where the pests live. The endophyte-transported protein does.

Another advantage is that biological pesticides like this one do not affect other insect species. "These are not broad-based poisons. They are specific biological toxins," Carlson said.

The endophytes and their toxic protein are not passed on to future generations of the plant through its seeds, Carlson said. And the corn produced by vaccinated plants has not been genetically altered itself, so it need not pass rigorous safety tests required by the federal government of genetically engineered organisms.

Carlson is seeking approval for the vaccine from the Environmental Protection Agency.

Carlson said that field tests are continuing and the vaccinated corn could be on the market by 1993 or 1994, if the tests are successful and the government approves the vaccine.

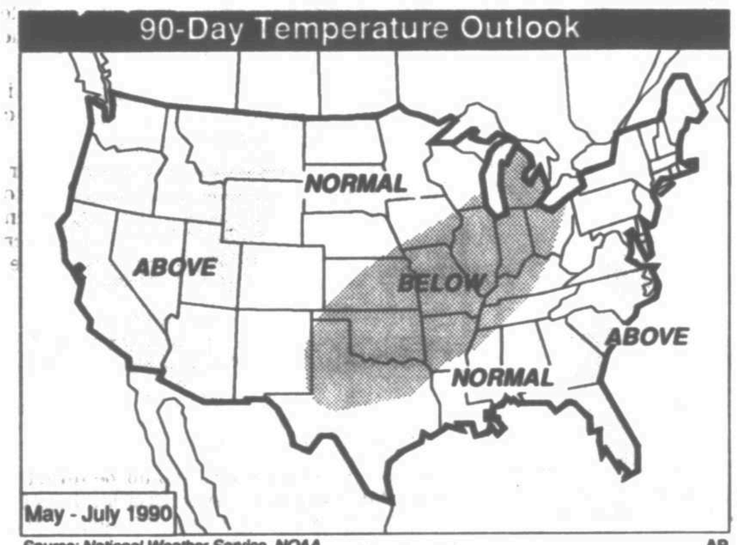

Yogurt statistics included first time

By Don Kendall
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yogurt has arrived in the Agriculture Department's annual book of dairy statistics.

Last year, according to the new figures, about 912.4 million pounds of plain and fruit-flavored yogurt were produced. There's no way to compare that with 1988 because it's the first time the USDA has published yogurt figures.

In addition to the regular yogurt, about 66.3 million gallons of frozen yogurt and 44.2 million gallons of frozen yogurt mix were produced in 1989.

Source: National Weather Service, NOAA AP

By comparison, last year's ice cream production was 831 million gallons, down 6 percent from 1988. Ice milk, at 377 million gallons, was up 6 percent, and milk sherbet was unchanged at 52.2 million gallons.

Dan Buckner of the department's National Agricultural Statistics Service said recently the yogurt figures were requested by the International Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers.

The trade group asked that the agency gather and publish figures only for frozen yogurt, but Buckner said it was decided to include regular yogurt "so we'd know exactly what we had."

Budget crunches in recent years have chewed deeply into some USDA statistical and economic research programs, and the ice cream people were prepared to see some of their other items struck from the list in order to get the yogurt figures.

However, Buckner said in a telephone interview that it was possible to squeeze yogurt into the statistical study without dropping something else.

But there are some dairy items that one of these days may be folded into "other" categories and not identified separately. This happens when the number of processing plants and production decline so much that it would be impossible to protect the identities of companies.

For many food manufacturers, including those who turn out dairy products, exact production figures for various items are considered trade secrets and are guarded closely.

One of the candidates for losing its separate statistical identity is limburger cheese, an aromatic product that tends to identify itself regardless of manufacturer.

"We're going to get a crunch one of these days, and it's going to be dropped into the 'other' (category) because such a small number of plants make it anymore," Buckner said.

Farmer Mac moves closer to mortgages

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmer Mac, short for the new Federal Agricultural Mortgage Corp., has moved a step closer to its debut in the nation's financial market later this year.

The new federal agency was created by the Agricultural Credit Act of 1987 as a secondary market for agricultural real estate loans.

Banks and other lenders can convert long-term assets — in this case, real estate mortgages — by selling the loans on the secondary market. Those who buy the mortgages then package or pool the loans and sell the mortgage-backed securities to the public.

The system is designed to improve the cash flow of the original lenders and make more loan money available.

Farmer Mac will share the risk of the farm real estate loan business by guaranteeing returns on the securities.

Other federal agencies such as the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. (Freddie Mac), Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae) and Government National Mortgage Association (Ginnie Mae) serve a similar function for their clientele.

Way of life disappearing for Louisiana shrimpers

Thibodeaux's hands are short and broad, the palms are calloused with lines permanently stained black. His fingers crook in odd angles from the big knuckles, almost as if they were stuck at random in the sockets.

For most of Thibodeaux's 67 years, he's used those hands to haul out nets, sort shrimp, stow gear, repair engines, and run his shrimp boat.

"It's been OK. It's a hard way to make money, but I like it. I never got rich shrimping, but we lived. Now I guess I'll have to get out of it or go broke," Thibodeaux said.

Thibodeaux, like many of his fellow shrimpers, said the way of life he has always known is quickly disappearing.

"The thing about shrimping is that you used to be able to run your own boat and your own business," said Tommy Griffin, 58, of Lafitte. "Now you got the government running it, and the bank running it, and the insurance company running it, and everybody else that can trying to run it."

Mounting costs, government regulations and foreign competition have all put pressure on Louisiana shrimpers, while more and more people have turned to shrimping as other employment has fallen off, officials explain.

Meantime, shrimp catches have dropped for several years, and an unusually prolonged freeze in December kept boats in port and catches down.

Clements seeks more disaster declarations

CAMILLA COVE, Texas (AP) — Trinity River Authority officials Thursday steadily opened the floodgates on rain-swollen Lake Livingston to unprecedented levels, putting low-lying riverfront areas under more water and threatening thousands of residents downstream toward Liberty.

At the Lake Livingston Dam, operators opened the flow at the dozen gates to a record 100,800 cubic feet per second by midday.

"It looks like we're going to be able to stabilize the lake level at this release rate," said John Jadrosich of the TRA. "We'll be at this release level for the next four days, possibly as long as seven days. We've got a very large amount of water here and it's going to take releases of this magnitude to take care of it."

The flow, which causes flooding in some downstream areas after passing 20,000 cfs, went from 94,800 cfs overnight Thursday to 97,200 at 9:30 a.m., then 99,600 an hour later. The following hour it passed the 100,000 mark.

Meanwhile, Gov. Bill Clements Thursday asked the Federal Emergency Management Agency to approve his request to add three more Texas counties to a presidential disaster declaration. The counties are Clay, Houston and Trinity.

The declaration, which already includes 33 Texas counties was issued because of flooding, thunderstorms and tornadoes that have hit the state since April 15. It allows residents to apply for a variety of loans, grants and other relief assistance.

STATE IN BRIEF

Charges filed against father

FORT WORTH (AP) — Formal murder charges were filed Thursday against the man accused of drowning his 10-year-old daughter to get a $100,000 insurance payoff, the Tarrant County District Attorney's office said.

The charges were filed one day after authorities said findings of mud and debris in the nose, ears, mouth and windpipe of Jeanette Lindsey bolster their belief that the girl was murdered.

Wendell Lindsey, 33, is charged with killing the girl on Feb. 27, eight days after he took out a $50,000 life insurance policy on her. The policy had a double-indemnity clause and would pay $100,000 in case of accidental death.

Lindsey has maintained that his daughter fell off a log while the two were fishing at the Fort Worth Nature Center and drowned in knee-deep water, despite his efforts to save her.

TCLU to be monitor

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Civil Liberties Union said Thursday it will monitor police handling of protests expected during President Bush's Saturday visit and help protesters who may be arrested in peaceful demonstrations.

Bush will deliver the commencement address at the University of Texas-Austin graduation ceremony at Memorial Stadium.

"Anytime any sort of public protest has been held on campus, we have had problems (with authorities)," said TCLU legal director Jim Harrington.

Nelson plans picnic

AUSTIN (AP) — Willie Nelson's not-quite-annual July 4 "picnics" are set to return after a two-holiday lapse, with a concert scheduled for Austin's Zilker Park this year, a promoter says.

Promoter Fred Smith said Nelson has committed for the daylong concert but a musical lineup and details for the show have yet to be firmed up.

Odessa's Crockett Jr. High named 'Drug Free School'

Odessa did it. Why can't Midland?

Odessa's Crockett Junior High School recently was recognized by the U.S. Department of Education as complying with President Bush's Drug Free Model School program. We congratulate the faculty, staff, students and parents at Crockett for showing us it can be done.

N.A.B.'D. Survey, April 1990

More than 95 percent of parents interviewed said they would favor a school policy to permit Midland's public schools to meet the qualifications for President Bush's Drug Free Model School program. Ninety-seven percent said they believe there is a drug/alcohol problem among public school age children in Midland. Nearly 71 percent said they believe school discipline could be improved.

Here are some of the qualifications for a Drug Free Model School

- Strong emphasis on academic excellence
- Drug curriculum in grades K-12
- Strong parent involvement
- Closed campuses during school day
- Strong no-use requirement for athletic and co-curricular programs; no-use pledges signed by participants and parents

Let your school board member know that you support these important goals.

Wake Up Midland!

Strapped state agencies may get relief

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A Texas Senate panel Thursday reviewed a bill that would appropriate $227 million to three social service agencies to prevent service cuts at those agencies.

But while Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, the Health and Human Services Committee chairman, was proposing the emergency appropriations for the departments of health, human services and mental health-mental retardation, Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, the Finance Committee chairman, was proposing that the governor's office consider $85 million in additional revenue for the agencies.

The Senate Finance Committee took no action on the bill, which is designed to avert a June cutoff in medical aid to 4,000 seriously ill children in the Chronically Ill and Disabled Children's Program (CIDC) as well as other cutbacks in Medicaid programs.

Joel Allison, an executive of the Driscoll Foundation Children's Hospital in Corpus Christi, said state programs account for two-thirds of the South Texas children the hospital serves.

The CIDC program, which is $40.7 million in the hole, serves children with the greatest medical needs, who suffer from illnesses such as spina bifida, AIDS, heart disease and cancer but who do not qualify for Medicaid, he said.

"Without this program a majority of them, I fear, would go without services," Allison said.

The Department of Human Services also faces a $211 million deficit in spending for Medicaid and the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation is seeking $43 million to comply with a federal court order to improve its schools and hospitals.

Brooks' bill would appropriate $30.8 million for the health department, $169.8 million for DHS and $26.8 million for mental health-mental retardation.

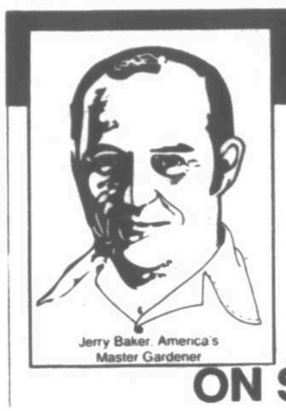

Brooks hoped the money would be available from the stream of revenue that will be part of the public school finance reforms.

"I would anticipate we will make our negotiations with the governor about these needs on the human services side part of that agenda," he said.

He agreed with DHS Commissioner Ron Lindsey that $169 million was not enough to maintain services at desired levels, but Brooks added, "What we're trying to do is to prioritize and get the most essential programs covered."

Caperton, who has been involved in negotiations with the governor's office on school finance reform, said House and Senate leaders have proposed $85 million for the three agencies.

Small shops dread arrival of big chains

SALEM, Mass. (AP) — Burger King, Wal-Mart, Kinney Shoes, Dunkin' Donuts are hardly names that stir feelings of fear and loathing in the masses.

But for Joseph and Lorrie Liani, the owners of a quaint doughnut shop down the road from Salem State College, the names are like a punch in the stomach. It's the feeling that strikes any mom-and-pop business when a national franchise — Liani calls them the "big boys" — rides into town.

Dunkin' Donuts is the newcomer in their case, and it has hitched itself up right across the street from the Lianis' little shop.

"What you've really got here is two countries fighting a war and one's fighting with sticks and the other country has guns," said Liani, 31.

The Lianis have poured their adult lives into the Donut Ring, a shoe-box-size diner with 10 swivel stools, a formica counter and freshly brewed coffee.

"There was always security knowing that we had our own business," said Lorrie Liani, 30. "There wasn't a threat — until now. Somebody's next door, taking our customers away and taking money out of our pockets and taking food out of our mouths."

The Lianis said their business has dropped 10 percent to 15 percent over the first month. "So it's not as bad as I thought it might be," Liani said.

Much of the Donut Ring's business comes from the morning traffic of professors and students to Salem State, and from commuters on their way to Boston, about 20 miles to the south.

The Lianis depend on the shop to pay for their home, their two cars and the hundreds of other debts that come from raising two children and running a business.

"Basically we're just working people like everybody else. It's not like we're making more money than we know what to do with," Liani said. "We have mortgages. We have car payments. Like everybody else, we rely on a weekly paycheck to pay for all that."

Patrick Kaufmann, an assistant professor of business administration and marketing at Harvard University who specializes in franchises, said there's not much more to say than "That's business."

He said about one-third of all retail dollars in the United States are spent at franchises each year.

"The numbers suggest a homogenization of our society and our tastes and our mobility," he said. "Standardization is something that is being sought. Franchising is a huge business."

Kaufmann said that while the situation the Lianis face is sad, it should be remembered that most franchises also are owned by small-business men and women with their own families.

"I don't see much evidence that franchises actively try to threaten independent businesses. Large franchises look for good retail space and potential customers. If they find them, they compete with everyone nearby," he said. "But I'm sure when these small independents find themselves competing with the franchises it can be quite daunting."

Liani is frustrated by the money franchises have behind them — money for advertising, facilities and equipment. It's hard for independent shops to compete, he says.

"And, you know, I can't afford to lose money as long as that guy because he might have three or four more successful stores."

Fernando Cafua, a businessman from North Andover, runs the Dunkin' Donuts across from the Lianis. He also owns three franchises in Lawrence and is planning more.

Dunkin' Donuts, which speaks for its franchises, has 1,651 shops in the United States and 191 in Massachusetts, said Lawrence Hantman, a vice president and general counsel for the company.

There are four Dunkin' Donuts in Salem, a city of more than 38,200 people best known for the witch trials of the 1690s.

Hantman said for the most part franchise owners decide on their own locations. "We have no real estate involvement in it," he said.

The Lianis aren't giving up. So far they haven't had to worry about a price war — both doughnut shops charge about the same prices. The Donut Ring, for example, has cheaper coffee but more expensive filled doughnuts.

And they upgraded their shop. They bought a new refrigerated display case and expanded and remodeled. They also added specialty items like pie crusts and croissants.

"We're going to try and offer things that they don't have. Like if you want a chocolate cupcake with real whipped cream like mom used to make, you'd be able to get it here — not there," Liani said.

Prices fall again

NEW YORK (AP) — The energy futures market closed narrowly mixed Thursday in lackluster trading.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the June contract for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark grade of U.S. crude, fell 16 cents to settle at $18.87 a 42-gallon barrel, after losing 56 cents Wednesday.

Other contract months, however, gained as much as 10 cents a barrel.

Andrew Lebow, an analyst at E.D.&F. Man International Inc., said a Department of Energy announcement confirming earlier reports of a sharp rise in crude stocks put selling pressure on the near-term crude contract.

Dollar firms

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar ended firmer Thursday against all key currencies except the British pound and Canadian dollar, even though the government reported the U.S. trade deficit widened sharply in March.

Gold prices rose slightly after declining overseas.

Traders said the bigger spotlight in foreign exchange Thursday was on the British pound.

Sterling was boosted by speculation that Britain would soon be joining the European Monetary System, said Robert Ryan, corporate foreign exchange manager for the Bank of New York.

In London, sterling traded at $1.6905, up from $1.6805 Wednesday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Wednesday's quotes, included: 1.6498 West German marks, up from 1.6450; 1.4045 Swiss francs, up from 1.4005; 5.5570 French francs, up from 5.5460; 1,212.50 Italian lire, up from 1,210.00; and 1.17475 Canadian dollars, down from 1.17505.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 152.00 yen, up from 151.95 yen Wednesday.

Gold fell in London to a late bid price of $369.25 an ounce from $370 Wednesday.

Silver closed in London at $5.05 an ounce, unchanged.

Record high

The Dow Jones Industrial average climbed to another record high Thursday, rising 12.03 points to close at 2,831.71.

Deficit surges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Record exports helped keep the U.S. trade deficit in March below its 1989 monthly average, the government reported Thursday, and analysts said the gap could narrow to less than $100 billion this year for the first time since 1983.

The Commerce Department said the March deficit totaled $8.46 billion, down from the $9 billion monthly gap last year but a sharp 36.5 percent increase over February.

RTC finds defunct S&Ls don't sell well

■ The Resolution Trust Corp. has lots of defunct S&Ls to sell, but midway into the job it is finding that it does not have many buyers.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Halfway through its "Operation Clean Sweep," the federal agency trying to sell off or close defunct savings institutions is not finding lots of eager buyers.

The Resolution Trust Corporation has managed to dispose of less than one-third of the 141 S&Ls in the bailout's accelerated sales campaign, and few are the hard-to-market big ones.

While the agency has substantially picked up its former pace by selling or closing 42 S&Ls in seven weeks, the RTC must dispose of another 99 institutions in the coming seven weeks if it is to meet its self-imposed June 30 deadline for completing "Operation Clean Sweep."

"We're certainly well within striking distance," said RTC spokesperson Nancy Schertzing. "I don't have any reason to say that we're not going to make it or absolutely that we're going to make it."

The biggest headaches are expected over sales of the biggest S&Ls, such as Royal Palm Federal in West Palm Beach, Great Southern Federal in Savannah, Ga., and Murray Federal in Dallas. They are among about 20 S&Ls that each made loans or investments of more than $500 million.

One of the S&Ls, CenTrust Bank in Miami, has loans and investments of more than $8 billion, compared to the $5 billion total in similar assets for all 42 of the S&Ls disposed of so far in "Operation Clean Sweep."

The sale or closing of 42 S&Ls in seven weeks is a dramatic advance for the RTC, which had disposed of only 52 in the previous seven months.

The sales have not been easy, with the RTC inviting hundreds of potential purchasers to make bids on each S&L and receiving only a few bids on each. In some cases no bids were considered acceptable, so the RTC ended up simply transferring the deposits of the failed institution to another bank or S&L rather than selling it intact.

That has left the RTC holding lots of the failed institutions' loans, which it may or may not be able to collect, and foreclosed property, which it must try to sell separately.

Schertzing said the RTC is not surprised at receiving so few bids.

Frank Anderson, senior financial institutions analyst at Stephens Inc., an investment banking firm in Little Rock, said the elimination of tax breaks and other incentives has narrowed the market for S&Ls.

"Everyone thought the individuals and investor groups would be hot after these," Anderson said. "Now they'll almost have to fire-sale some of this property to get any interest."

Thieves get dirty with new device

■ Employing the concept that it is better to burn the city than turn it over to the enemy, retailers are now using a dye that destroys stolen property.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — In an attempt to deter increasingly crafty shoplifters, a growing number of clothing stores are turning to a sort of doomsday device — a tag that, if tampered with, squirts the garment with an indelible dye.

The theory: Sometimes you have to ruin a dress to save it.

"If thieves know they can't sell it and they can't wear it, then they won't steal it," says Don Barnett, whose company makes ColorTag, one of two such products on the market.

The other is called INKTAG, and here's how it works.

You, the shoplifter, are strolling through a department store when you see an Anne Klein cream linen suit for $515 that you must have.

You notice a white plastic disc about two inches in diameter clamped on the skirt like a sandwich. It bears this "WARNING: Forcing tag open causes breakage. Permanent ink sprays out. Injury can occur from broken glass, metal and ink."

Since grenades are not customarily attached to dresses, you disregard the warning. Anyway, you figure, you can always remove the disc in the safety of your own home. So you take it into the dressing room, stuff it into your purse, and head for the exit.

You step out of the store, exultant. But when you get the dress home and try to pry the disc off with a screwdriver, your hands are suddenly squirted with blue, red and yellow ink that also stains the dress.

The stain wears off your hands in a few days, but repeated trips to the dry cleaner fail to eradicate the dress spot. You can't wear it anywhere, except to Halloween parties and the hipper downtown clubs.

Three vials inside the disc-tag were rigged to break when it did, releasing three teaspoons of "a biological stain that interacts with the cells of natural fibers so it can't be washed out," according to Robert DiLonardo of Security Tag Systems in St. Petersburg, Fla., which makes INKTAG.

Federal report details Franklin problems

■ A confidential goverment report details the problems that preceded the downfall of Franklin Savings Association.

Associated Press

TOPEKA, Kan. — Franklin Savings Association paid excessive bonuses, was hurt by its dealings with a Texas thrift and had little hope of making a profit, according to a confidential government report completed weeks before regulators seized control of the state's biggest thrift.

Franklin officials on Tuesday disputed the criticisms in the report.

Such reports usually are confidential, but Franklin's is filed in U.S. District Court in Topeka, where Franklin's owners are suing the federal Office of Thrift Supervision to regain control of their company.

Franklin was seized Feb. 16 by federal regulators, who said Franklin had misused accounting principles to defer losses created by its use of futures contracts.

The criticisms in the report go beyond that, citing $1.8 million in bonuses Franklin paid to its top officers and the fact that most of the real estate projects involving the Texas thrift had defaulted on payments to Franklin and were in foreclosure or bankruptcy.

The report was compiled by the OTS and the Kansas Savings and Loan Department.

Among examiners' criticisms were that Franklin:

— Failed to identify potential losses on junk bonds it owned and letters of credit it issued, particularly those involving Victoria Savings Association of San Antonio, which is now under government control.

— Paid depositors rates that were an average of 1 percent point higher than other thrifts, largely because it relied heavily on brokered deposits.

— Interpreted accounting rules to mean "do whatever you like" in deferring losses on futures.

— Was "highly exposed to a liquidity shortfall" because of a limited ability to resell many of its high-risk investments if it needed to raise cash in an emergency.

Franklin Chairman Ernest M. Fleischer refuted the report's findings.

Fleischer said the bonuses, which in many cases matched or exceeded executives' salaries, were given to assure that the officers earned "their worth in the marketplace." He said that worth was verified in a study by an outside consultant. Fleischer also said regulators did not pursue any possible repayment of the bonuses after they issued the report in January.

Fleischer said he disagreed with the potential for losses on Franklin's letters of credit because he disagrees with how regulators appraised the property securing the letters.

Fleischer also said that paying a broker to round up deposits was less expensive than operating a vast network of branch offices, even if the brokered deposits earned higher interest rates.

Paying broker flat fee is better business

By Jane Bryant Quinn

Quinn

WASHINGTON– Here's a better way of dealing with a stockbroker: Pay a regular fee instead of a sales commission on every trade.

Under the commission system, brokers and their clients face a fundamental conflict of interest. The brokers can't keep their jobs, or send their kids to college, unless they sell a certain number of high-commission products. Also, they have to prod their customers into frequent trades.

The suspicion and abuse that this system breeds is well known to the industry. But there's not much pressure to address the issue. So far, only monied customers have a way out.

Their escape is the "wrap account." With a wrap, the broker quits trying to manage your account–and you do, too. Instead, you jointly pick a money manager who will do the investing for you.

You pay a flat fee, which the broker and the manager split. On stock portfolios, it's generally 3 percent of assets up to $500,000, and less for larger sums. Bond portfolios might cost 1.25 percent. You don't pay any commissions on trades, and there should be no dealer markups on the securities you buy.

If your account grows, your broker makes more money; if it shrinks he or she makes less. This arrangement puts you and the broker on the same side of the table. You both are monitoring the manager, to achieve the performance that meets your needs.

No-load (no sales charge) mutual funds are much cheaper than wrap accounts. There, you can get top securities management for 1 percent of assets or less. But for people who like to have individual portfolios, wrap accounts make sense.

Even with wraps, there is still one possible conflict of interest. Your broker could urge you toward a stock portfolio rather than a less-risky bond portfolio, because stocks should grow faster and generate larger fees. But you also bear a responsibility for what you buy.

Many of the national and major regional firms now have some sort of wrap account. Typical minimum: $100,000. Shearson Lehman Hutton offers a Choice Advisor program with a $50,000 minimum and over $400 million now under management. Its money managers all have a Shearson affiliation. Shearson's Select Manager plan (running more than $2 billion) has unaffiliated managers and requires $100,000.

When you join one of these programs, you and your broker work out your financial objectives and tolerance for risk. You then choose portfolio managers who specialize in your kind of investing–aggressive stocks, income stocks, taxable bonds, tax-exempts, and so on.

The brokerage firm tracks how well these managers run your money. You get quarterly reports on your percentage gains or losses, compared with the performance of standard market indexes and the records of other money managers. If your manager stumbles, it costs you nothing extra to switch, says Stephen Thoma, of Merrill Lynch's wrap program, Merrill Lynch Consults (running more than $2 billion).

At big brokerage firms, you can tap into money managers who normally have minimums of $1 million and up. Regional houses may simply help you find appropriate managers who already offer $100,000 minimums. At St. Louis-based A.G. Edwards, you pay your broker 2 percent and the manager 1 percent.

"Long term, the industry would be better off if all clients could consult with stockbrokers on a fee-for-service basis," says Shearson's Dennis Bertrum, a senior vice president. Shearson is working on more fee-based products, like trust accounts, to serve the boomer generation as it moves into its flushest years.

But smaller investors who buy securities still face brokers steeped in conflicts of interest. If the well-heeled are turning to money managers, maybe you should, too–in a mutual fund.

ANALYSIS

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market climbed to another record high Thursday, resuming its recent rally after a brief pause on Wednesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had slipped 2.77 on Wednesday, rose 12.03 points to 2,831.71.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 5 to 4 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 832 up, 649 down and 505 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 164.77 million shares, against 159.81 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 201.75 million shares.

Most of the gains in stock prices came early in the session, encouraged by a brief drop in open-market interest rates.

As the day passed, however, rates turned higher. Yields on long-term government bonds climbed to the 8.65 percent-8.69 percent range.

In the economic news, the Commere Department reported that the nation's trade deficit increased to $8.45 billion in March from a 6½-year low of $6.10 billion the month before.

Brokers said the latest figure, though larger than expected, didn't significantly discourage the belief that the United States has been gradually improving its competitive position of late in world markets.

Hewlett-Packard fell ¾ to 45⅝ in active trading on top of a 1⅞-point drop Wednesday, when the company reported lower quarterly earnings that fell short of some analysts' estimates.

Gainers among the blue chips included International Business Machines, up ¾ at 116⅛; General Motors, up ⅛ at 48⅛; American Telephone & Telegraph, up ⅛ at 42⅞, and Procter & Gamble, up 1 at 76⅝.

Federal National Mortgage rose ⅝ to 38¾. A measure of the spread between what the company pays on its debt and what it earns on its mortgage assets improved in April.

Pinnacle West Capital Corp. posted the day's biggest percentage gain, up 3⅝ at 16⅜. Pacificorp, which has been rebuffed in several recent bids to acquire Pinnacle West, made a new offer of $21 a share.

The Gap Inc. fell 2½ to 66⅛, amid some evident disappointment with earnings for the company's fiscal quarter ended May 5 of 60 cents a share, against 43 cents in the comparable period a year earlier.

Standard & Poor's industrial index rose 0.92 to 412.44, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up .47 at 354.47.

TAG: Theft gets dirty

(From 1C)

If the garment had been purchased, the tag would have been cleanly removed by a sales clerk with a small device bolted down next to the cash register.

DiLonardo said his company has sold several hundred thousand tags to 40 stores since production began last fall; ColorTag says its product, on sale for two years, now is used in hundreds of stores.

Michael Myers, vice president of security for the Casual Corner chain of women's clothing stores, says ColorTag has reduced losses by about 60 percent at the 40 stores where they have been tried.

A quarter century ago, stores began tagging merchandise with magnetic strips and installing detectors at the door. But store security officials say professional shoplifters — who account for about 85 percent of all shoplifts — have learned how to remove the tags in the store and to shield them from the detector on the way out.

Meanwhile, shoplifting is soaring. Annual estimated losses exceed $25 billion, and one study found that shoplifters escape with the goods 97 percent of the time.

The ink tag concept originated in Sweden, and has been used in Europe for six years. Store security consultant Peter Berlin says that since such tags are more expensive than magnetic ones — INKTAGs cost about $2.75 each — they may be better suited for smaller clothing stores.

Supreme Court rules Arco didn't violate law

N.Y. Times News Service

The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that Atlantic Richfield Co. did not violate federal antitrust laws when it cut retail gasoline prices so low that smaller, independent stations lost business.

The court held that cutting prices to increase business was the basis of competition and that competitors cannot sue for damages unless the pricing is proven "predatory."

The Supreme Court never has defined predatory pricing, but the term generally refers to pricing a product below cost to drive competitors out of business.

On a 7-2 vote Monday, the judges overturned an appellate court ruling and upheld a district court decision that Santa Monica, Calif.-based USA Petroleum could not prove Arco engaged in predatory pricing. The ruling effectively ends the eight-year-old lawsuit brought by the independent station owner.

Los Angeles-based Arco applauded the decision and said it would continue its low-price strategy.

"We are delighted. We view this as a vindication of our marketing strategy since 1982," said Edward Reilly, senior vice president of marketing for Arco Products Co. in Los Angeles.

USA Petroleum officials said the ruling was harmful to consumers and that they planned to pursue other avenues.

"This has a future impact on everybody that buys gasoline. Arco can price gasoline so low (that) nobody can compete with them," said Mark Conant, executive vice president of USA Petroleum. "When they've eradicated the independents, they will raise the price of gasoline."

Arco denied the charge.

Because the suit has not gone to trial, the conspiracy pricing allegations by USA Petroleum are unproven.

Appeal fails

DALLAS (AP) — The Southwest Conference office Thursday said it will uphold its one-game suspension against University of Texas basketball coach Tom Penders, despite Penders' appeal.

Penders was suspended on April 9 by SWC Commissioner Fred Jacoby after criticizing the officiating in the SWC during and after the Longhorns' losses to Houston March 5 and March 10 during the SWC tournament.

The suspension means Penders will be forced to miss the Jan. 2 SWC opener against Texas A&M.

Holtz prods pros

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa (AP) — Notre Dame football Coach Lou Holtz says professional sports should set up a national system of 10 academies for those whose main goal is to play in the pros.

"Let the pros run 'em," Holtz said. "They'd have a football team, a basketball team, a baseball team, a hockey team, whatever. If you want to be a professional athlete, you go to that academy.

The coach suggested at least a partial program of courses.

"You learn how to write a check, how to do TV interviews and how to pick an agent," he said. "You lift weights and you play football. And when the pros say, 'We don't think you have a chance to become a professional athlete,' you are dismissed from the academy. Now you get on with your life."

Thursday's Answer — Rick Holtzman owns, in addition to the Midland Angels, the Tucson Toros, Chattanooga Lookouts, Quad Cities Angels and Columbia Mets.

'Dogs begin area title quest

George Wolf/Reporter-Telegram

Midland High shortstop Jason Stone forces Lubbock Monterey's Monty House at second, then completes the double play with a relay to first in the Bulldogs' bi-district opener.

■ Midland High skipper Tim Whalen needs only look at the 24-3 record of El Paso Burges to know his Bulldogs will be tested.

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

However, the Bulldog mentor also points to one figure that suggests MHS will have a fight on its hands when the 'Dogs host a best-of-three area playoff series this weekend at Angels Stadium, where Game 1 will be played at 4:30 p.m. today. Game 2 is set for noon Saturday, with Game 3 immediately following, if necessary.

"You can't help but be good if your record is 24-3," Whalen said. "Baseball is very big in El Paso. If a team comes out of that city into the playoffs, it can play."

Backing up Whalen's statement is the fact the the Mustangs possess the El Paso Times' 1990 prep player of the year in Jesse Munoz. Munoz, a pitcher-catcher, is 7-1 from the mound with a 2.34 ERA and has recorded 64 strikeouts in 59 innings of work.

When not pitching he sits behind the plate, where he has thrown out nine of 12 base stealers and caught six runners off first base. Munoz also adds to those figures his leadoff batting percentage of .369 with 16 RBI and a pair of home runs.

Backing up Munoz in the order are sophomore first baseman Dan Beck (.491 with 13 RBI and 11 stolen bases) and cleanup hitter Richard Martinez (.459, five home runs and 35 RBI).

On the mound, 20 year Burges coach Bob Osborne also has at his disposal senior Eric Vidal (7-1 with a 3.00 ERA and 51 strikeouts in 51 innings) and junior Robert Barrueta. Barrueta's record is a spotless 6-0, while he has held his ERA down to a 1.36. He also has a K per inning, with 36.

"Bob Osborne is a very good baseball coach — he always has a disciplined team. He's no rookie to the playoffs and knows how to get the best out of his kids," Whalen said. "We're going to have to have good pitching, play good defense and apparently put the ball into play."

MHS (20-9) had little trouble accomplishing any of the above mentioned goals in its 2-1 bi-district series win over fourth-ranked Lubbock Monterey last week.

In 22 innings of postseason play against Monterey, Bulldog pitchers Gabriel Salazar and James Madrid combined for 32 strikeouts while allowing 18 runs. Salazar took credit for 23 of those strikeouts and Madrid did not allow an earned run in the 8⅔ innings he threw in the series.

Madrid also excelled against Plainsman pitching, as he went 4-for-8 from the plate in three games with a pair of doubles and three runs batted in. His .500 average was only surpassed by shortstop Jason Stone, who hit .556 (5-for-9) with four RBI.

Four other MHS hitters were at or over .300 for the series, with centerfielder Will Sowders leading the pack at .455, catcher Patrick Mowles at .364, leftfielder Brian Conaway coming in at .300 with five RBI, and designated hitter Greg Galvan at .300.

The win over Monterey was emotional for the Bulldogs, who were forced into winning two games Saturday after falling 7-5 in the series opener May 8. MHS was up to the task, however, as the 'Dogs posted wins of 7-4 and 8-7 (eight innings).

But according to Madrid, earlier this week Whalen voiced his concerns about the 'Dogs coming out emotionally flat

Trevino winning

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Lee Trevino says he never knew the PGA Senior Tour could be so much fun.

Translated, that means he's winning.

Trevino became eligible for the PGA Senior Tour last December and in seven starts this year, he's finished in the top five six times and won three tournaments.

He'll be among the favorites teeing off Friday in the first round of the Doug Sanders Kingwood Celebrity Classic.

"I put a tremendous amount of pressure on myself," Trevino said. "The media and everyone kept talking about how I would play. So the only way to overcome that pressure was to practice."

Trevino practiced for three months before coming onto the Senior Tour and he's been rewarded with $275,133 to lead the Tour money list.

His 69.55 stroke average is a full shot better than any other senior player.

"It's like when I started in 1967, it's the same guys, the same type of courses," Trevino said. "This is something I've been looking forward to for quite awhile."

The difference is Trevino is no longer the brash 27-year-old who bolted onto the PGA Tour in 1967 and won the U.S. Open the following year. He's won 27 PGA tournaments.

He's 50 years old but he's still provides comic relief.

"We're not only golfers, we're performers," he said. "This is my stage. These 150 acres are where I perform."

Trevino will be joined in the celebrity-filled field of 54 senior pros by defending champion Homero Blancas, Chi Chi Rodriguez, Miller Barber, Sanders and Orville Moody.

The pros will play the first two rounds of the 54-hole event with amateur celebrities and on Saturday President Bush will play a full 18 holes in the final group of the day.

Bush will play in a foursome with his son, George W. Bush.

MC takes charge

Staff Report

TUCSON, Ariz. — Midland College broke out of a tie and grabbed sole possession of first place in the team standings of the women's national junior college tennis tournament here Thursday.

The Chaparrals had players in each of the six singles and three doubles brackets that comprised Thursday's semifinals, and advanced four singles players and all the doubles teams to today's final round.

MC owns 34 points in the team standings and is followed by Cooke County's 32. The Chaps face Cooke in four finals events, giving them the opportunity to make or break a national championship.

"Being up by two points going into the finals is a real advantage for us. We really should win the tournament, but it's going to be tough with Cooke," said Joe Williams, MC tennis coach.

MC sophomore Sharla Barone also kept her dream of a national individual title alive, as she downed Tyler's Lisa Beard by a 6-3, 7-5 count. Barone will face St. Claire's Chris Burkhart in today's No. 1 final.

"We were real fortunate today because Cooke County lost in both the No. 1 and 2 singles. Maria Vago lost at No. 2 for us, so it could have been a really tough thing," Williams said. "But now they can only get six points, and we can knock them out of four if we play well."

Ameel inks with Tyler JC

Staff Report

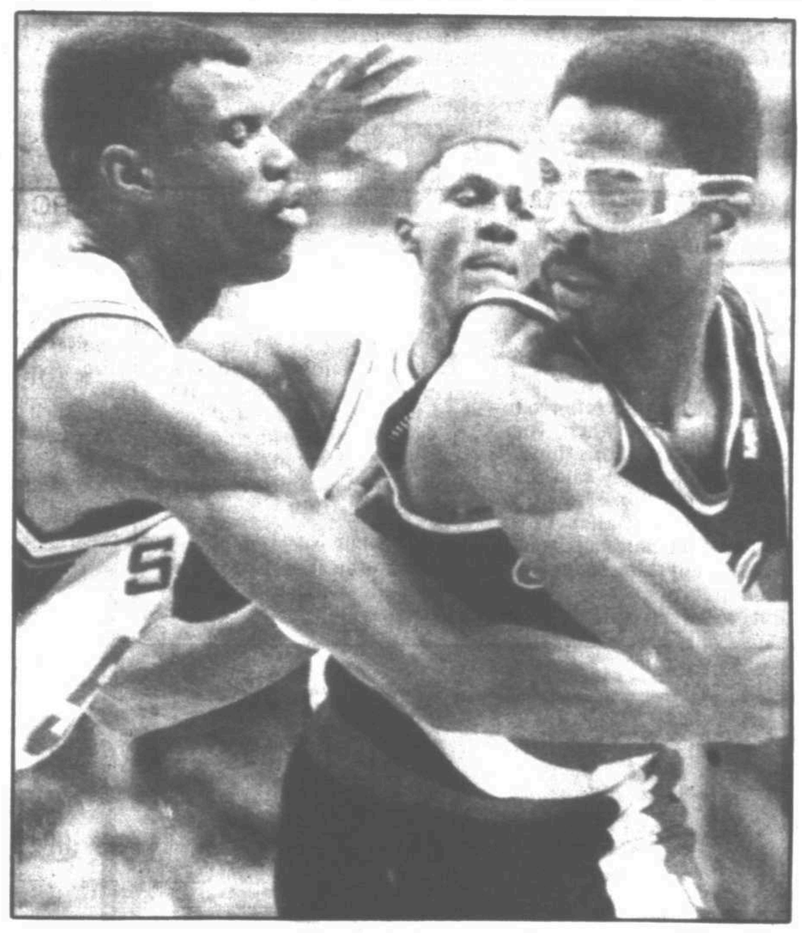

Midland High senior Elizabeth Ameel made her college choice official Thursday, inking a tennis scholarship with Tyler Junior College, a program that presently boasts a No. 2 national ranking among JCs.

"I'm looking forward to playing at Tyler," said Ameel, a state singles qualifier this season. "Coach (John) Petterson is the kind of coach that will make you work real hard which is what I wanted."

Ameel, a three-year varsity player for MHS, was the 1990 district champion and the Region I runnerup. She reached the semifinals at the state meet in Austin last weekend.

"This will be a good opportunity for me to improve my tennis," Ameel said after signing with Tyler. "This is a great offer, and hopefully, if I improve my game at Tyler, I'll get a chance to eventually play at a Southwest Conference school sometime in the future.

Spurs alive!

■ Willie Anderson scores 30 points, and the San Antonio Spurs no longer trail Blazers.

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — The homecourt hex held and it gets one more chance.

Thanks to Willie Anderson's career playoff-high 30 points, the San Antonio Spurs managed a 112-97 victory over the Portland Trail Blazers on Thursday night to even the best-of-7 Western Conference semifinals after six games.

Which team moves on to face the Phoenix Suns in the conference finals will be decided in Portland on Saturday afternoon. The home team has won each game in the series so far.

Anderson, averaging only 15 points against Portland and playing with a dislocated left thumb, couldn't be stopped.

"Forget the home court," Anderson said. "If we start good against them they will fold in Portland."

The Trail Blazers, who are playing this series without either of their centers, did fold early Thursday night. Things went to the desparate stage when Clyde Drexler was ejected by referee Mike Mathis with 3:01 left in the third quarter for hitting Anderson under the chin with an elbow.

"Clyde is always giving out those cheap shots," said Anderson, who made 13 of 19 from the field. "He was getting frustrated because he was having a bad night. He was doing a lot of crying and whining out there. I'll get him back someday."

Drexler, who had 35 points in Portland's double-overtime victory Tuesday, had just four points when he was ejected. He said he didn't know what happened.

"I was just knocking his hands off and the next thing I know I'm in the locker room," Drexler said. "I had my offensive lapses. And Willie was real good."

The incident provoked a verbal exchange between between Portland coach Rick Adelman and San Antonio coach Larry Brown. At one point, Adelman yelled at Brown "to get off

Bobby Valentine spent his fifth anniversary as Texas manager by witnessing a 12-0 loss to Detroit.

Valentine's day ends inauspiciously

ARLINGTON (AP) — Bobby Valentine has outlasted every American League manager except Detroit's Sparky Anderson since being hired May 16, 1985.

But it was Anderson's Tigers that spoiled Valentine's anniversary Wednesday night, pounding out 17 hits in a 12-0 thrashing of the injury-riddled Texas Rangers.

"Not a good time to celebrate," Valentine said following the team's worst shutout loss since Sept. 4, 1973.

Texas again was without three key offensive contributors — right fielder Ruben Sierra, catcher Geno Petralli and third baseman Steve Buechele.

"But once we get over our injuries, and start hitting the ball, we'll be back on track," Valentine said.

At the time of his appointment, Valentine was the youngest manager in the major leagues, and is now the fourth-youngest. He celebrated his 40th birthday on Sunday.

Valentine was hired by then-owner Eddie Chiles, and has worked closely with Tom Grieve ever since. Grieve was appointed general manager on Sept. 1, 1984, and at 36 became the youngest person in baseball to hold that position.

Valentine has won more games (383) and managed in more contests (809) than any manager in Rangers' history. He is the team's 11th full-time skipper. There have also been two interim managers.

"I guess we made a lot of people upset because when Tom Grieve and I started this thing," Valentine said. "They said that this was a one-horse town, a one-sport town (Dallas Cowboys) and that baseball would never have anything to do with the community.

"But we were able to take what we had — which was very little — and get a competitive team out on the field. And I think we've done that," Valentine said. "Now we have another major step to go."

Valentine said the first three seasons were spent on building the team through trades and signings, but mostly through the minor league ranks, a route he hopes will pay dividends in the 1990s.

"Last year and this year — you wouldn't know it by looking at it the last few days — we've had a credible team.

"We've got a lot of good days ahead of us," Valentine said. "Our defense is as good as it's ever been. Our walks are down. And if our offense performs up to its capabilities, we're going to win a lot of baseball games."

The Rangers were named Organization of the Year last season by the Baseball America, an honor indicative of talent at the minor league level.

The team also surpassed the 2-million attendance figure for the first time ever in 1989, when 2,043,993 fans saw the Rangers, which had four All-Stars — Sierra, Nolan Ryan, Julio Franco and Jeff Russell.

The team finished 83-79, a 13-game improvement over the previous year, but four games shy of their 1986 team, which finished second in the American League West, Valentine's best showing.

This is Valentine's 23rd season in professional baseball. He played for Los Angeles, California, San Diego, Seattle and the New York Mets in a major league career spanning 10 years that ended in 1979.

A first-round selection by the Dodgers in the June 1968 draft, Valentine was the fifth player drafted overall.

Associated Press

Dave Winfield wore a new uniform for the first time in a decade Thursday, but Milwaukee veterans Robin Yount and Dave Parker stole the show.

Yount and Parker spoiled Winfield's debut as a California Angel with consecutive RBI singles in the seventh inning that led the Brewers to a 6-3 victory.

Winfield, who joined the Angels hours after reaching an agreement that completed his disputed trade from the New York Yankees, pinch hit with two out in the eighth and grounded out with two men on.

"There's no excuse," Winfield said. "You're always looking to have the hit and have the confidence even though I hadn't hit in a week."

After Yount drove in Molitor with a single, Parker chased Fraser with his third hit of the day, a single through the drawn-in infield that gave Milwaukee a 5-3 lead.

"It was a hit-and-run type situation," Parker said. "Your first instinct is to hit the ball on the ground. You just want to hit it hard because all the runners are moving."

Greg Brock closed out the scoring with a sacrifice fly off reliever Scott Bailes. The victory gave the first-place Brewers a 1½-game lead over Boston and Toronto in the AL East.

"We did some good hitting early, did some good hitting late and we were able to get a big hit from Robin," Brewers manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "It's good to be where we are. We have a lot of people contributing. That's the key to teamwork."

Tigers 7, Rangers 5

Chet Lemon doubled home the go-ahead run in the 10th inning as the Detroit Tigers beat the Texas Rangers 7-5 to complete a three-game sweep.

Pinch hitter Mark Salas opened the inning with a walk and was replaced by pinch runner Tracy Jones, who stole second and went to third when catcher Mike Stanley's throw went into center field.

Lemon then doubled off reliever Jeff Russell (1-3), scoring Jones to give the Tigers a 6-5 lead. Mike Heath followed with a single that drove in Lemon.

Detroit reliever Mike Henneman (1-3) pitched the final 1 2-3 innings for the victory.

Mariners 14, Blue Jays 6

Giles chased Toronto starter Jimmy Key (4-2) from the game when he drilled a three-run homer over the right field fence in the third. He followed with his first career grand slam, off reliever Frank Wills, into the left field bleachers in the fifth.

The seven RBIs are the single-game high in the American League this season and gave Giles, the No. 9 hitter in the Seattle lineup, three home runs this week. He had six in his career before this season.

White Sox 7, Orioles 3

Sammy Sosa's RBI double keyed a five-run seventh inning that helped the Chicago White Sox beat the Baltimore Orioles 7-3 for their sixth straight victory.

Ozzie Guillen singled with one out in the seventh, stole second and scored the tying run on Sosa's double off reliever Brian Holton (1-1). Kevin Hickey came in and walked Lance Johnson before being replaced by Mark Williamson, who walked Ivan Calderon and Ron Kittle to force in Sosa with the go-ahead run.

Johnson scored on a wild pitch. First baseman Randy Milligan then booted Carlton Fisk's grounder, allowing Calderon and pinch runner Rod McCray to score.

Reliever Barry Jones (6-0), who pitched two shutout innings, got the victory.

Mickey Tettleton's third hit of the game, a two-run homer in the top of the seventh, had given the Orioles a 3-2 lead.

Twins 4, Yankees 1

Rookie Kevin Tapani allowed one run in 7 1-3 innings to win his third straight game as the Minnesota Twins beat the New York Yankees 4-1 in the fog.

Heavy showers about an hour before the game left the field drenched and the wet grounds helped both teams score a run. The two teams were rained out on Wednesday.

Tapani, acquired last season from the New York Mets in the Frank Viola deal, allowed seven hits.

'Stros drop Cubs in 11th

Associated Press

Pinch-hitter Ken Oberkfell's bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the 11th inning gave the Houston Astros a 5-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs on Thursday night in a game that featured one of the longest home runs in the Astrodome's 25-year history.

With the score tied 4-4, Houston loaded the bases against Jose Nunez (1-4) on a double by Ken Caminiti, an intentional walk to Glenn Wilson and a sacrifice bunt by Rafael Ramirez, with Ramirez reaching first when the Cubs failed to force Caminiti at third.

The win snaps a six game Houston losing streak and is only their second win in 11 games. The Cubs have lost eight of their last 12.

Dave Smith (2-2) was the winner with one inning of hitless relief. All the Cubs' runs came off Houston starter Mark Portugal and were unearned. Houston pitchers retired the last 19 Chicago batters.

The Astros took a 1-0 lead in the second inning when rookie Eric Anthony hit his first home run of the season and the sixth ever into the upper deck, the first since Dawson, then with Montreal, did it on April 16, 1983.The only other Astro to accomplish the feat play was Jimmy Wynn off Atlanta's Phil Niekro on April 12, 1970.

NL

The Cubs tied the score 1-1 in the third on an RBI single by Jerome Walton. The Astros went ahead 2-1 in their half of the third when Gerald Young scored on a groundout by Glenn Davis.

Chicago took a 3-2 lead in the fourth on a two-run single by Joe Girardi but the Astros scored twice in the bottom of the inning on RBI singles by Ramirez and Portugal to lead 4-3. The Cubs tied the score 4-4 in the fifth when Ryan Sandberg scored on a sacrifice fly by Dawson.

Cardinals 3, Reds 0

Jose DeLeon held Cincinnati to four hits in 7 1-3 innings and scored the only run off loser Tom Browning after a third-inning triple, leading the St. Louis Cardinals to a 3-0 victory over the Reds.

DeLeon (3-2) walked two and struck out seven before giving way to Ken Dayley, who finished the eighth. Lee Smith came on for his second save after the first two batters reached base in the ninth.

Braves 6, Pirates 1

Greg Olson drove in five runs with his second and third major-league homers and the Atlanta Braves ended Neal Heaton's two-year 11-game winning streak, defeating Pittsburgh 6-1 and handing the Pirates their third consecutive loss.

Heaton (6-1), who won his last five decisions in 1989,yielded three runs and 10 hits in six innings. The Pirates have dropped three straight for the first time this season.

Derek Lilliquist (2-4) scattered eight hits, walked one and struck out one in seven innings. Joe Hesketh pitched the last two innings for his first save.

Texas sends Kreuter to Oklahoma

To make room for Russell on their roster, the Rangers optioned catcher Chad Kreuter to the American Association club.

The 29-year-old Russell has been swinging a hot bat after being picked up by the 89ers on May 7. He is batting .409 with four doubles and two homers in six games.

Russell, who hit .182 in 74 games for the Atlanta Braves last season, refused an outright assignment to Richmond at the beginning of this year and became a free agent.

CHICAGO (AP) — It's time for the heavyweights.

The Chicago Bulls made surprisingly easy work of the Philadelphia 76ers and now face the major task of going up against the champion Detroit Pistons in the NBA Eastern Conference finals.

"Now that we got rid of Charles Barkley, we have to get ready for Mike Tyson and Buster Douglas," said Horace Grant, anticipating a rugged series against the physical Pistons.

The Bulls found it surprisingly easy to get rid of Barkley and the 76ers in five games, climaxed by Wednesday night's 117-99 victory.

Michael Jordan led the way with 37 points and Scottie Pippen scored 29. A 14-2 run at the start of the second half when Jordan, Pippen and Grant did all the scoring, put the Bulls up by 11 points and in command.

"They did not have the intensity or the fight they had in the first four games," Jordan said. "Now we have a nemesis in front of us in Detroit and I'm confident we're going to give them a heckuva series."

The last time the Pistons, who aim to become only the third champion to repeat in the NBA, came close to a difficult playoff series was against the Bulls last year. Still, the Pistons needed only six games to eliminate Chicago.

Jordan promises it will be different this time.

"I feel better with this team than any other we've taken to the playoffs," he said. "We've matured and are not going to be intimidated by Detroit. We've got to match their defense with our defense."

Jordan has averaged more than 40 points per game during the playoffs and averaged 43 points in the 76ers series. He doesn't expect to maintain that pace against the Pistons.

"They'll try to keep the ball out of my hands and double-team me," he said. "That should free things for Scottie and Horace. We know what we're up against. We have to overcome an even bigger hill. But we can take on the responsibilities and be productive."

Coach Phil Jackson, who said, "I have never seen as great an offensive series as I saw from Michael Jordan," has been looking ahead to Detroit.

"The challenge of the Pistons is immense and we have been looking forward to this all season," Jackson said. "We need to play very good fundamental offensive ball. Detroit is playing the best defense I have seen in years."

"We're a lot better," Jordan said. "We've matured tremendously on both offense and defense. This series will tell us how much we have improved."

"We are a better team and we have more confidence," Pippen said.

"If we play like we did against the 76ers, we can take the series," Grant said. "We've got to go there and get one win. The first game is important for both clubs because it gives the winner a big boost."

The first game of the best-of-7 series will be Sunday at Auburn Hills, Mich. Game 2 also will be there, Tuesday night, with Games 3 and 4 at Chicago May 26 and May 28.

Nash cites Sixers' needs as he walks out door

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Outgoing General Manager John Nash says the Philadelphia 76ers should stay with their nucleus, but try and add a premier shot blocker and a big guard to contend for the NBA title.

Nash, who has submitted his resignation effective at the end of the month, refused to make any excuses Thursday for the 76ers' elimination from the playoffs by the Chicago Bulls. The Bulls beat the 76ers 4-1 in their best-of-7 Eastern Conference semifinal series.

"We lost to a better team," Nash said. "They won more regular season games. They were the favorites ... "

Nash, who might change his mind about leaving after meeting with owner Harold Katz in about a week, analyzed the 76ers.

"First, it's been my experience it's best not to make any decisions the day after (elimination)," he said. "You should step back and let the dust settle. Then begin evaluating from top to bottom.

"I would expect the organization to be satisfied with the nucleus, the starting unit" of guards Hersey Hawkins and Johnny Dawkins, center Mike Gminski and forwards Charles Barkley and Rick Mahorn.

"The first and second players off the bench (forward-guard Ron Anderson and point guard Scott Brooks) are fine. But we do not have a premier shot blocker, and we may not be able to acquire one. We also need a big guard, 6-5, 6-6, who can play both the point and off guard."

Nash said the guards, 6-foot-2 Dawkins, 6-3 Hawkins and 5-11 Brooks are small at the position, and the 76ers often are undersized.

"We need an all-purpose guard," Nash said. "Beyond that, we have to look for improvement where we can get it."

Nash said the Sixers would have to go the free agent or trade route.

U.S. team claims it's gelling for World Cup

Soccer

NEW YORK (AP) — It could be blind faith. Maybe it's well-founded optimism. Either way, the U.S. World Cup soccer team claims it is jelling at the right time.

The 22 players who will represent the United States in Italy next month received a rousing sendoff Thursday, complete with a telegram from President Bush and a visit by Mayor David Dinkins. Banners wishing the team good luck and made by local youth soccer leagues hung outside the restaurant in Little Italy where several hundred people gathered to meet the players.

Team USA's official uniform was displayed and Dinkins received one, signed by each player, when he proclaimed it "U.S. National Team World Cup Day."

Maybe the festive atmosphere got to the players, who oozed optimism as they approach the first World Cup appearance by the United States in 40 years. No team could be a more decided darkhorse.

"At this point, we've set a goal for ourselves, and that is to make the second round," midfielder Tab Ramos said. "We have to steal points from the other teams. They'll all be favored.

"We're all happy to go. It's a great accomplishment for this team, this country. But we do not feel satisfied. It's our goal to get to the second round."

To do so, the United States must emerge from a grouping that includes Italy, Czechoslovakia and Austria, three European countries with strong soccer traditions. Two, possibly three teams, will advance to the round of 16.

"We might play our best and lose all three games," Ramos said. "We have to be at our best in all three games and if we catch one of those three teams not at their best, I feel we can win. But we have to take them out of their game."

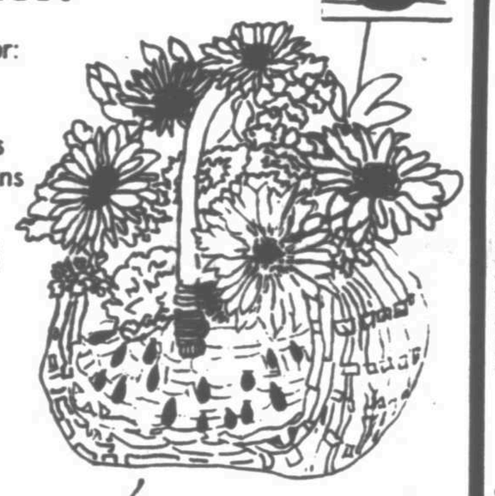

Coach Bob Gansler was cautious in his assessment of the team's chances. But he also was smiling, something he hadn't done often.

Sneva shoots for Indy 500 pole

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The "Gas Man" has become the "Guess Man" this week at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Tom Sneva, the 1983 Indianapolis 500 winner and usually among the quickest qualifiers on the 2½-mile oval, is one of about a half-dozen drivers with at least an outside chance at knocking defending champion Emerson Fittipaldi out of the pole position.

Sneva, who won the last of his three Indy 500 poles in 1984, is driving a Buick-powered 1989 Penske for Vince Granatelli. Teammates Kevin Cogan, at 217.738, and Didier Theys of Belgium, at 214.033, were among those who made the tentative 33-car lineup Sunday.

The best lap for Sneva going into Thursday's practice was 218.266 mph — a long way from the pole or even the outside of the front row, where 1986 champion Bobby Rahal is sitting with a 222.694 average.

"We put a new bullet (engine) in the car and now we have to go out and shake it down and see if it is going to be enough to give us a shot at the pole," Sneva said. "We've been gunning with a .22 caliber bullet and what we need is a .357 magnum.

"We're in a situation where we have no backup car and we're limited on engines, so going for the pole is probably not a good situation for us. But we need to work this motor a little, see what it is going to do — if it's good enough to have a shot at the pole — and take a guess at what we can get accomplished (in qualifying) without hurting anything."

Sneva said, however, that Indy always is a guessing game.

"One of the things that make Indy special is that no matter what your situation, you always have a couple of options," he said. "You make your guess and take your chances. But I think we'll make the race."

Sneva, like the other drivers, lost nearly two full days of practice this week because of rain. The weather forecast for the weekend is questionable, with showers a possibility both Saturday, when qualifying is scheduled to resume, and Sunday, the final scheduled day of time trials.

"The weather's a key," Sneva said. "The guys who already qualified had good conditions."

Others with at least a shot at the pole for the May 27 race include Al Unser Jr, whose 228.502 in practice last Friday is the fastest unofficial lap ever at the Speedway; 1985 winner Danny Sullivan, whose Penske Racing teammates Fittipaldi and Rick Mears currently occupy the top two qualifying spots; four-time winner A.J. Foyt, and Arie Luyendyk of The Netherlands.

The slowest qualifying speed a year ago was 213.105 mph by Bernard Jourdain, who is first in the qualifying line.

"I guess it'll take about the same — between 213 and 214," Sneva said. "But that's going to depend so much on the weather. If there is time to prepare and weather conditions when we qualify are good, it will be about the same. If not ... "

"I think Goodyear is safe with 213," said Jim Crawford.

Still struggling for speed are four-time winner Al Unser and Roberto Guerrero, Patrick Racing teammates who are using the new Alfa Romeo engine; three-time winner Johnny Rutherford; Crawford; Steve Chassey; Bill Vukovich III and rookie Buddy Lazier, whose chances were hurt by crashes during practice; and Rocky Moran and rookies Dean Hall, Jeff Andretti and Jeff Wood, whose best speeds probably are marginal.

Salt Walther, trying to make a comeback after an 11-year absence from the Speedway, Stan Fox and rookie Mike Groff haven't even approached the likely qualifying speeds.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Speed was hard to come by Thursday as practice resumed for the Indianapolis 500.

The track was open for a full day of practice for the first time since Monday. The rain that had closed down the track for all of Tuesday and all but 45 minutes of caution-flag running Wednesday was finally gone.

But a steady, often gusty, wind blew out of the west, hampering the on-track activities as drivers prepared for the resumption of qualifications on Saturday or worked on getting their cars ready for the May 27 race.

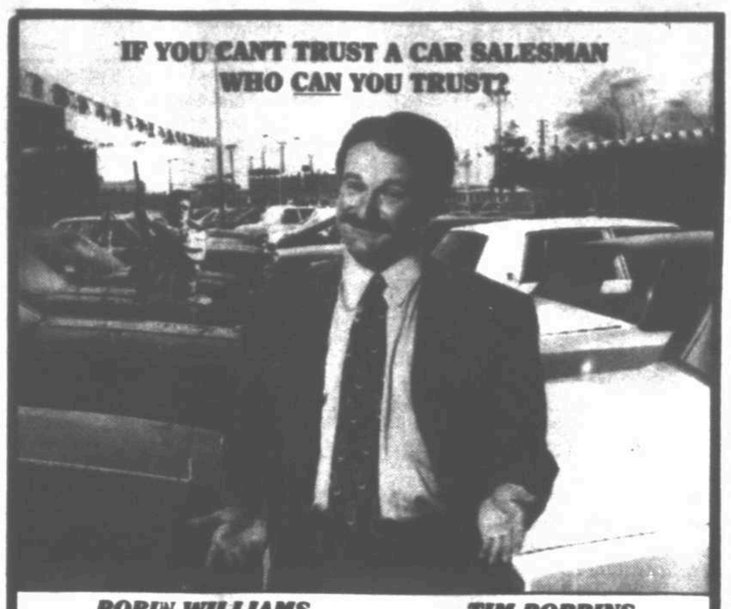

BULLDOGS: Pitching will be instrumental in series against Burges after beating state-ranked Monterey for the fifth time in seven tries. However, Mowles said he thinks MHS will have no problems in that regard.

"We are just going to have a good week of workouts, then see if we can come and play our best baseball," Mowles said after the second win over the Plainsmen.

PLAYOFF NOTES: MHS will be the home team for Games 1 and 3 (if played), while the Mustangs take home status for Game 2 ... The MHS-Burges winner will face Arlington High in the regional round of the playoffs. Arlington swept the first two games from Fort Worth Euless Trinity earlier this week to go 21-11 for the season ... Arlington Martin (20-9) also advanced in the Region I playoffs, with a sweep of Fort Worth Southwest, the 1990 Tournament of Champions titlist ... Martin will face the Abilene Cooper-El Paso Del Valle winner. Those teams play at 4:30 p.m. today, and noon Saturday in Abilene ... Angels Stadium will be bustling this weekend, with the Pecos-Lubbock Estacado Class 4A series being played in conjunction with the MHS-Burges encounter. Pecos and Estacado will face off right after tonight's Bulldog game, then will resume the series with Game 2 immediately after a MHS-Burges winner has been decided.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A new project requires all your skill and energy. Your self-esteem is on the upswing. Higher-up expresses appreciation for your efforts. Practice thrift and loved ones will follow your lead.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Employment affairs require greater self-discipline. Do your best to cope with tricky financial matters. Seek the advice and active support of your mate or partner. An old debt may have to be repaid.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A creative enterprise will prove satisfactory. Get those new ideas down on paper! Do not impose limitations on your imagination. Answer the questions of a child who needs reassurance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your efforts to advance a pet project should meet with success this morning. Showing more affection will help you resolve your differences with family members. You can rely on your mate to be tactful.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Take advantage of a friend's financial proposition. An unusual situation involving a younger person could require your personal intervention. Be willing to make concessions. Know where you stand.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Try not to get bogged down by trivial details. Money earned on the side will come in handy. Offer your services to friends and neighbors. Affairs of the heart can be somewhat tricky.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are modest and tend to underrate their abilities. Parental encouragement is vital if these Taureans are to reach their potential. They will welcome the routine and quiet discipline they find at school, but may not speak up in class. These youngsters shrink from the limelight but handle responsibility very well. Let them blossom at their own pace. Urging them to be more outgoing may have the opposite effect. The school pals they make often become their lifelong friends.

Follow the bidding and play of this hand. Then decide who, if anyone, committed an error in the auction or play.

Note South's game try of three clubs. It asked partner to bid four spades with help in the club suit, and North duly obliged.

West led the jack of hearts. East encouraged with the nine and declarer held up one round, winning the heart continuation. The ace of diamonds was cashed and two diamond ruffs were sandwiched around a heart ruff in dummy.

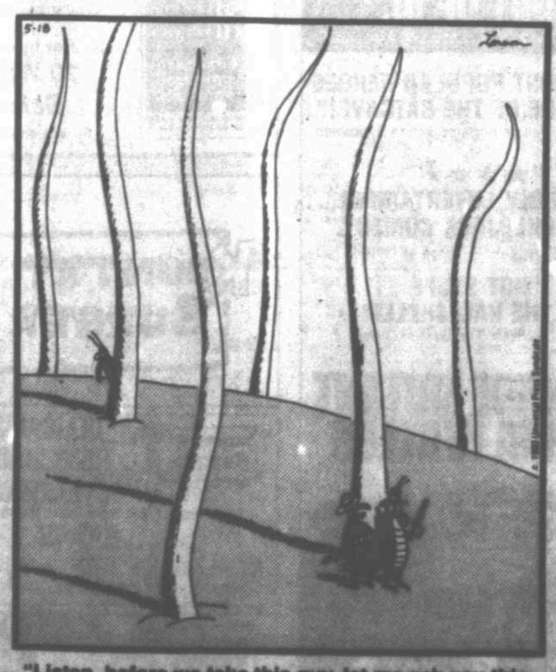

Declarer took his two club winners, ending on the board, and led another diamond. When East produced the last outstanding card in the suit, declarer ruffed with the ace! West discarded a club and now held nothing but trumps.

When declarer led his last heart, West was forced to ruff with a trump honor and then lead way from his J 9 5 of spades. By using dummy's ten judiciously, declarer was able to hold his losers to two trumps and a heart.

First, we must congratulate declarer on his play. However, we doubt whether he would have performed so skillfully had West refrained from doubling, which revealed the fact that trumps were not breaking, so we must give West a charge. But, most of the blame must be borne by East. By overtaking the jack of hearts with the queen at trick one, East could have assured an entry to his hand. Once in, a spade return would have forced declarer to bow the knee. Try it, if you don't believe us.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Marlon Brando's eldest son told police he shot and killed his pregnant sister's boyfriend in a fit of rage because the man had beaten her, investigators said Thursday.

Christian Brando, 32, was arrested in the actor's palatial Santa Monica Mountains estate Wednesday night and booked for investigation of murder, said Lt. Ron Hall. He was held without bail pending arraignment Friday.

Brando

"He admitted to the shooting," the lieutenant said.

Dag Drollet, 26, died instantly from a .45-caliber bullet to the head, police said. An autopsy was planned for Friday, said coroner's office spokesman Bob Dambacher.

Marlon Brando, 66, made a 911 emergency call to police at about 10:45 p.m. to report a shooting inside his estate, police said. Only one shot was fired.

"The dispute was over the victim's treatment of Cheyenne Brando, Marlon Brando's 20-year-old daughter," Hall said. "There were allegations that there was physical abuse, a beating. There was an argument and he became angry."

Tarita Cheyenne is the daughter of Brando and his current wife, Tarita Teriipia, a Tahitian actress who played his love in the 1962 remake of "Mutiny on the Bounty."

A Brando lawyer said the daughter was "pretty well along" in her pregnancy but declined to be more specific.

After police and paramedics arrived at the gated estate overlooking Beverly Hills, Drollet's body was found in what was described as an entertainment room. Hall said Christian Brando was alone with Drollet when the shooting occurred. The investigator said the Oscar-winning actor, his wife and daughter were in another wing of the home and didn't see the shooting.

After a 45-minute jailhouse meeting with Christian, attorney Dan Stormer said the younger Brando was distraught.

"He's as upset as you'd expect him to be for someone in his position," said Stormer, who is working with the actor's attorney, William Kunstler.

Christian Brando will plead innocent, Kunstler, an associate of the actor in civil rights struggles over the past 30 years, said from New York.

NEW YORK (AP) — Renoir's joyful depiction of an open-air dance hall in Paris, "Au Moulin de la Galette," was auctioned Thursday for $78.1 million, days after a haunting portrait by van Gogh sold for a record $82.5 million.

The large canvas of an afternoon crowd of revelers in a sun-filled garden framed by acacia trees had a presale estimate of $40 million to $50 million, the same as Vincent van Gogh's "Portrait of Dr. Gachet."

The bidding for the Pierre Auguste Renoir started at $25 million and went up in increments of $1 million. As it got beyond $40 million, the audience started gasping.

"Au Moulin de la Galette" was the highlight of a sale of Impressionist and modern art at Sotheby's. The auction house estimated the 70 offerings would bring $212.7 million to $284.6 million.

"With the van Gogh taking such an unprecedented leap into $82 million," collectors may raise their estimates of the Renoir, said Harry Brooks, director of the Wildenstein Gallery in Manhattan.

However, bidding for much of the rest of the 69 lots was expected to reflect the scaling back of the art market. This trend was evident at Tuesday night's sale at Christie's, where "Dr. Gachet" was the star painting, and last week's contemporary art sales.

The Christie's sale brought a total of $269.4 million, only $67,000 under the record for an art auction, held by Sotheby's. But 24 of the 81 offerings went unsold and some that did sell went for significantly less than their presale estimate.

"When you have a tremendous painting, like the van Gogh or the Renoir that's coming up ... you're going to get extraordinary prices," said Milton Esterow, editor and publisher of ARTnews.

Otherwise, he said, "the market is correcting to a more realistic level" after the frenzied buying of recent years.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Raisa Gorbachev will join Barbara Bush in a summit-time trip to Wellesley College where both first ladies will address the graduating class, it was announced Thursday.

Bush

Mrs. Bush is "absolutely delighted" that Mrs. Gorbachev has accepted her invitation, Anna Perez, the first lady's press secretary, said at the White House.

The two first ladies will travel together to the women's college in Massachusetts on Friday June 1, the second day of their husbands' four-day summit.

Some 150 students at Wellesley signed a petition last month questioning the choice of Mrs. Bush as a commencement speaker, saying her prominence was based on whom she married.

Mrs. Bush dropped out of Smith College after her freshman year in 1944 to marry Bush, then a Navy pilot. The couple was wed in January 1945.

Shoe turns to a career in horse training

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Bill Shoemaker, who retired 3½ months ago as the winningest jockey in thoroughbred racing history, officially begins phase two of his professional life Friday — as a trainer.

Star Child, a 3-year-old Kentucky-bred daughter of Our Native-Ice Princess, will run for Shoemaker in Friday's fifth race at Hollywood Park, a mile allowance event for 3-year-old fillies on turf.

Ironically, it was Delahoussaye, aboard Exemplary Leader, who won the final race in which Shoemaker competed, at Santa Anita on Feb. 3. Shoemaker's mount, Patchy Groundfog, finished fourth in the race billed as "The Legend's Last Ride."

While he's a little reticent to admit it, the man known simply as "The Shoe" for most of his 41 years as a rider, is chomping at the bit, so to speak, about his new career.

"It's just one of my horses to run. If it wasn't the first one, no one would care," Shoemaker said Thursday at Barn 65 South, where his stable is housed at Hollywood Park. "I'm excited to get her in a race. She's been training good. Hopefully, she'll run good.

"I'm excited. It'll be fun. That's what I'm here for, to get them ready to run. I just want her to run well. I expect her to run a good race. If she doesn't, I'll be disappointed.

"She's a nice little filly. She's run five times, won once, broke her maiden in England (last July 3). How good is she? We'll find out Friday."

Star Child will be running her first race in this country. She hasn't raced since finishing 14th in a field of 15 at Catterick, England, on Sept. 23.

Shoemaker, 58, won 8,833 races during his storied career which began in 1949. His horses earned $123,375,524. Both are records which will be hard to surpass.

Often known as Willie during his career, it's clearly Bill Shoemaker now, as evidenced by the initials emblazoned on the tack box and gates throughout his barn.

"My wife likes that better than Willie, so that's what we did," Shoemaker said. "I like Bill. If that's the most important thing I have to worry about, I'll be very happy."

Shoemaker said he has 24 horses in his stable.

"Some of the people just came to me," he said. "I just thought I'd start out with 10 or 12. It blossomed up to 24 before I knew it.

"So far, so good. It's a different phase of my life."

Shoemaker was emphatic when asked if he missed riding.

"No. I went 40 years," he said. "That's long enough. It's time to do something else."

Shoemaker had made it clear long before he retired as a jockey that he planned on becoming a trainer. He made it clear Thursday he's determined to become more than just another trainer.

"I'd like to win the Triple Crown, or win the (Kentucky) Derby with a horse," he said. "I won the Derby riding a horse, I'd like to train a winner. Only one guy's ever done that before and that's Johnny Longden."

Barrera still likes Mister Frisky

"I once picked seven races in one afternoon," said Laz Barrera, who handicapped for Avance in 1942-44.

On Saturday, the 66-year-old Cuban native will be satisfied with just picking the Preakness correctly since he now happens to train Mister Frisky, the beaten favorite in the Kentucky Derby.

To get the job done in the 1 3-16-mile race at Pimlico, Mister Frisky will have to beat Derby winner Unbridled, Derby runnerup Summer Squall and six other 3-year-olds.

The size of the field was reduced Thursday when Champagneforashley, the winner of five of six starts, and Pleasant Tap, who was third in the Derby, were not entered because of injuries.

Champagneforashley broke the sesamoid in his right front ankle while galloping; Pleasant Tap was found to have a strained tendon sheath in his left front leg.

Unbridled was made the 7-5 early favorite to win what will be the richest Preakness in the race's 115-year history. The purse, with nine starters, will be $686,000. The winner gets $445,900.

The odds on Summer Squall were 2-1; they were 3-1 on Mister Frisky.

"One race doesn't make me change my mind about my horse," Barrera said of Mister Frisky's eighth-place finish in the 1 1-4-mile Derby — the colt's first loss after 16 wins.

"My horse is a great horse and he's going to try and he's going to give everybody a run for their money."

In the Derby, Mister Frisky, who has run on the lead in most of his races, prompted the pace and led for an instant on the final turn before fading on a tiring track at Churchill Downs.

Pimlico is a speed-favoring track.

Barrera was pleased about Mister Frisky's No. 9 post. The stretch-running Unbridled will start from the No. 6 post, while Summer Squall, who likes to run near the lead, will leave from No. 7.

"We were No. 9 at Santa Anita at 1 1-8 miles (the Santa Anita Derby) and won," Barrera said. "My post position is beautiful to me. In that position he (jockey Gary Stevens) can see everybody and not get shut off."

Unbridled's trainer, Carl Nafzger, said: "The race has clear speed and any time you have clear speed and one gets away, it's bye-bye blackbird."

Asked if he would try different tactics with his colt, Nafzger said, "That's Craig's job,, not mine. Craig Perret will have to read this race and ride this race — and that's it."

The first half-mile of the Derby was run in a sizzling 46 seconds and the three-quarters time was 1:11, setting things up for Unbridled, who got a clear shot when he made his move.

"I like to get away with a 47," Barrera said.

Two colts expected to compete for the early lead are Kentucky Jazz and Fighting Notion, both of whom are making their debuts in Triple Crown competition, as are Music Prospector, Baron de Vaux and J.R.'s Horizon.

The only other Derby starter in the field will be Land Rush, who finished seventh.

Bidding farewell to the Triple Crown will be Summer Squall.

Trainer Neil Howard and Cot Campbell, president of Dogwood Farm, which manages the partnership that owns the colt, have said Summer Squall will skip the June 9 Belmont Stakes to rest for a fall campaign.

"We just didn't want to take a shot on running without Lasix right now," Howard said. "Whenever I've worked him or run him, I've protected him."

Summer Squall bled during a workout in Florida in February and he has run on the diuretic Lasix in all four of his starts this year. He will again Saturday. Horses are not allowed to race on any medication in New York.

Other horses on Lasix in the Preakness include Unbridled, Music Prospector, Land Rush, Fighting Notion and J.R.'s Horizon.

A $1 million bonus will be given to the horse who accumulates the most points while running in all three Triple Crown races. Points are awarded on the basis of 5 for a victory, 3 for a second place and 1 for a third.

Asked if a victory by Summer Squall in the Preakness might change his mind about the Belmont, Campbell said:

"No it wouldn't. We'd have to try to get that $1 million somewhere else. I think if we take good care of this horse and give him a rest, his earning capacity is enormous."

Summer Squall, winner of seven of nine starts, has earned $885,078 and will be ridden by Pat Day.

"I know how they feel," Howard said of the trainers of Champagneforashley and Pleasant Tap. "We've been there twice with this horse."

NOTICE OF CONSERVATORSHIP OF ETHIOPIAN MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY

Pursuant to Article 21.28-A of the Texas Insurance Code, the Commissioner of Insurance issued an official order, No. 90-0643 effective May 14, 1990, placing Ethiopian Mutual Life Insurance Company, Houston, Texas, in a state of conservatorship. This company is a domestic insurance company authorized to write life insurance in Texas.

The Commissioner of Insurance finds that pursuant to Article 21.28-A, Section 5, Texas Insurance Code, the company has requested and consented to the appointment of a conservator. Supervision is inadequate to accomplish rehabilitation of the company.

Under the order, the Conservator will assume control and operation of the company and will take all steps and legal measures necessary to preserve, protect, and recover the assets and property of the company. Efforts will be made to rehabilitate the company for the protection of its policyholders and the public.

If you are a policyholder of this company, your insurance coverage continues in effect for as long as you pay your premiums. If the company is rehabilitated, your coverage will continue as though nothing had happened. If the company is not rehabilitated, it may be placed into receivership or its busin reinsured, and you will be so notified. In either event, contractual claim obligations will be paid by the company, by the reinsurer, or by the guaranty fund subject to the limitations provided in law. The guaranty fund provides protection for covered claims up to the amounts specified in Article 21.28-D, Texas Insurance Code.

Courses of action available to policyholders include continuation or cancellation of their policies. Policyholders who wish to continue their coverage need do nothing more so long as their premiums are paid. If premiums are due, policyholders should continue to pay them in the same amount and manner as in the past in order to keep their coverage in force.

To avoid possible loss of coverage, policyholders must continue to pay premiums unless and until similar insurance can be obtained from another company. Policy provisions with respect to filing claims remain in force and must be observed.

Claims will continue to be handled in the standard process as specified in the insurance contracts issued by the company. Policyholders will be notified if there is any change in claims processing or handling.

Policyholders' rights are governed by the Texas Insurance Code, State Board of Insurance rules, and by policyholders' individual contracts of insurance. Policyholders with specific questions regarding policy provisions should seek independent legal advice. No action is required by policyholders under Commissioner's Order No. 90-0643. If any action should be required in the future, policyholders will be notified.

This notice is published pursuant to Article 21.28-A, Section 5A, Texas Insurance Code (Acts 1989, 71st Legislature, Ch. 1082, Sec. 4.02, eff. September 1, 1989).

Pryor still has to prove self

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Aaron Pryor's sluggish but successful return to the boxing ring left some predicting he will be a champion again, though others insist the dispute over his impaired vision won't go away.

"It's a long haul for Aaron Pryor to prove himself," said Ron Collison, a boxing manager and promoter in Milwaukee. "They (the boxing industry) won't accept him back and the controversy will continue."

Pryor, the 34-year-old former junior welterweight champion, returned to the ring after a 17-month layoff and knocked out former sparring partner Daryl Jones in the third round Wednesday at the Masonic Temple.

"I don't consider it a fight," Collison said. "No questions have been answered. I don't think the opponent was near challenging enough."

The fight was criticized by Wisconsin lawmakers and boxing promoters across the nation who said Pryor should not be allowed in the ring because he is legally blind in his left eye.

Four major boxing states — Nevada, New York, New Jersey and California — have denied Pryor permission to fight because of his eye, which has been operated on for a detached retina and cataracts.

After the fight, witnessed by 400 people inside a 1,200-seat hall, a jubilant Pryor said it felt good to be in front of a crowd again and vowed to fight his way to the top.

"I'm back and I'm going to be the champion," said Pryor, who insists he has kicked a cocaine habit that nearly ruined his life.

Overweight and rusty, a 154-pound Pryor felt his way through the opening round, then knocked the 37-year-old Jones down twice in the second round. Pryor finished him off at 1:15 of the third round, ending it with a four-punch flurry.

"I think he will be champion again," said Jones, who claims a 17-13 record and had not fought in two years. "He fights like he's 27. He can see and he still has a strong right hand."

The fight was canceled by the state Department of Regulation and Licensing Wednesday afternoon after it was discovered the promoter, Diana Lewis, said she was president of Wisconsin Boxing Inc., when in fact, the company wasn't incorporated at the time she applied for a license.

But a judge reinstated the fight just two hours before it was scheduled to begin, saying the state's denial of an exhibition permit was an abuse of discretion.

Hogs slip past Rice on pinch hit

SWC Baseball

AUSTIN (AP) — Bubba Carpenter's pinch-hit single in the bottom of the fifth inning snapped a 4-4 tie and carried the fourth-ranked Arkansas Razorbacks past the Rice Owls, 7-5, in Thursday's opening game of the Southwest Conference tournament.

The Razorbacks, 47-11, Friday will face the winner of Thursday night's Texas-Houston game.

Carpenter, along with Greg D'Alexander — both all-SWC performers — had been benched by Coach Norm DeBriyn for missing a team curfew Tuesday night. They entered the game in the fifth inning as substitutes.

The Hogs grabbed a 2-0 lead, scoring runs in their first two at bats. Rice wasted leadoff doubles in the first two innings, but went up 4-2 in the fourth after scoring a pair of runs in the third and two more in the fourth.

Rob Howard was the loser, lasting only four innings and falling to 8-10 on the year.

Jeff Houck, a 5-foot-2 outfielder, spearheaded the Hogs' 11-hit attack going 3-for-4 with an RBI and scoring three times. Carpenter and Mark Johnson contributed two hits apiece.

NFL names new drug advisor

NEW YORK (AP) — Dr. Lawrence Brown Jr., an internist who specializes in drug and alcohol abuse, was named by the NFL as its drug abuse advisor Thursday.

In making the announcement, Commissioner Paul Tagliabue said, "With the addition of Dr. Brown, the NFL will continue its testing and related efforts to eliminate drug abuse in the league. His education, training and practical experience will enable Dr. Brown to be a force against the use of street drugs."

Brown, 40, is an instructor in clinical medicine at Columbia University's College of Physicians and Surgeons, where since 1983, he also has been an adjunct professor and lecturer at the School of Public Health.

Brown also is a staff member of the Division of Endocrinology at Harlem Hospital Medical Center and a member of the Working Group on Alcohol and Drug Policy of the American Public Health Association and the Substance Abuse Advisory Committee of Carnegie Corporation.

the court."

"I was on the court because I was upset over a blatant cheap shot," Brown said. "I wasn't mad at Rick."

All Adelman would say about the incident was: "It makes it tough when you have two centers out with injuries then they throw out our best player."

Portland was led by Jerome Kersey's 22 points and Cliff Robinson added 20.

Anderson, one of the many playoff inexperienced Spurs, was able to shake off his injury with the advice of the veteran Cummings.

"I was worried about my left thumb but Terry told me a story about a big night he had playing with Milwaukee one time with a dislocated thumb," Anderson said. "That made me feel better. I couldn't hold the ball but I had a good shooting night."

Anderson scored 18 points in the first half to lead the Spurs to a 52-41 halftime lead.

"It was great to see Willie play a game like that with an injury," Brown said. "He really responded."

San Antonio built a 73-57 lead after the scuffle when Anderson made a free throw and then Frank Brickowski added two more. Cummings scored 14 points in the third period for San Antonio, which led 77-65 after the quarter.

San Antonio quickly stretched the margin to 18 points midway through the fourth quarter.

"They play very well in Hemis-Fair Arena," Adelman said. "They are on another level. Now it all comes down to one game in our place."

And that's a place where the Spurs have lost 12 straight games.

"This was the biggest game we've had all year," Robinson said. "We just need to translate the way we played here to the way we play in Portland. We can respond to challenges."

The Spurs trailed 27-26 at the end of the first period when Portland got 11 second-chance points.

San Antonio outscored Portland 15-5 to start the second period behind Anderson and Robinson, who contributed two dunks during the run. Robinson scored 14 points in the first half.

FAMILY MATTERS

Parents believe in closed campuses during lunch

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: I am writing you on behalf of a group of mothers who think that Midland's high school campuses should be closed during lunch. We have all heard horror stories about what goes on during the lunch hour and want to do our part to stop it.

May

One members of our group suggested that we write you and find out what you think about closing the campuses. She said (and we agreed) that there may be some other reasons for closing the campuses that we don't know about.

We feel like we need all the help we can get when our teens argue with us about our stance. They always say that we don't trust them and that it's just a small group of kids that cause all the problems. They say that they follow the rules and that they have shown us that they can be trusted. CLOSED

DEAR CLOSED: I believe the campuses should be closed during lunch, not so much because of "trust," but because of human development issues. Usually, teens are trying to establish their own identities. During this stage of development, they are more influenced by their friends than they are by their parents.

Parents should do everything they can to protect their teens from potentially serious problems. Leaving school at lunch exposes them to the whims and drives of their peer groups. They may make inappropriate choices because they want to "fit in." Some choices will be right, but some will be wrong. Some choices will have simple consequences, but some consequences may be long-term and serious.

Unsupervised teens are exposed to numerous temptations. Why expose teenagers to such temptations — such as alcohol, drugs or skipping school — when they are developmentally vulnerable? The issue is not one of trust, but rather one of reducing exposure. Most teenagers need help in this area because they see themselves as invincible.

I believe it is important for parents help their teens get through the years as unscathed as possible. Unfortunately, a few bad choices can lead a healthy teen down an undesirable path.

DEAR FAMILY: I have been helping my 6-yer-old struggle all year with his math. It's really very simple math, but he just seems to have a difficult time understanding what he was supposed to do. He is doing better now, but I would like to know if you have any suggestions on how I might help my 3-year-old with her math. I never did anything with my son to help him early and I want to avoid this problem with my daughter. ADD-OUT

DEAR ADD-OUT: The world is full of mathematics that we can use to teach concepts to children. Here are some suggestions:

- Teach your daughter about "classification" by letting her group silverware. Let her start by helping you empty the dishwasher and putting the silverware in the appropriate compartments by type, size and shape.
- Teach your daughter about "comparisons" by using objects that are roughly identical but different in size — different-sized balls, bars of soap, silverware, blocks, bowls, plates, etc. Mix them up and show her one item, then ask her to find another like it. Ask her which is larger or smaller.
- Teach your daughter about "counting" by introducing a number, such as four. Show her "four" on her fingers. Taker her around the house and show her groups of "four" things. Read her stories that emphasize numbers and counting.

You can teach you daughter about the fun of mathematics in many ways. You are wise to begin this process early when it can be fun and not drudgery. Keep up the good work.

Dating among 10-year-olds a growing worry for parents

By Carol Lawson
N.Y. Times News Service

Betsy Davis knew she would be having this conversation with her elder son one day. After all, it goes with the job of being a parent.

"He came home from school one afternoon and told me he wanted to take his girlfriend on a date to the movies," said Ms. Davis, the volume of her voice rising with each word.

"My response was, 'Girlfriend?' 'Date?' My son is only 11 years old."

Some parents might consider Ms. Davis fortunate, for they report having similar conversations with children even younger, only 9 or 10 years old.

In some communities, children are taking an interest in pairing off with the opposite sex at a time in life when their parents' generation was preoccupied with baseball practice or ballet lessons.

Their fascination with dating has little to do with budding sexuality, psychologists say. Instead, it is largely an attempt to act grown-up, a force that now pervades childhood more than ever before.

"Parents of 10-year-olds tell me they are under intense pressure to let their children date," said Dr. Ronald W. Taffel, a clinical psychologist in New York.

"Parents suddenly find themselves hassling with issues they did not expect to deal with until adolescence. There is a lot of extra friction in the air."

The children either walk there or are driven by a parent. Afterward, a parent picks them up and brings them to one of the children's homes for dinner.

Typically, he said, these dates are preceded by "a lot of wrangling" at home between parent and child.

Also, there are usually intense negotiations between the parents of the boy and girl, with the parents having "as much contact as the kids, if not more," he said.

The children, he added, "often have absolutely no idea of what they are supposed to be doing, especially the boys, even though they talk very hip."

Ms. Davis, who lives in Demarest, N.J., about eight miles northwest of Manhattan, said dating is not uncommon among children 10 and 11 years old in her community.

In fact, to bolster his plea for permission to date, her son cited one of his friends, who takes a girlfriend on dates to the movies and local pizza parlor.

Ms. Davis was unmoved. "I will not let my 11-year-old date," she said. "I have my limits."

Not all parents in the community agree with her, Ms. Davis added. "Nobody wants to admit to another parent that they openly sanction this," she said, "but there certainly is a desire among some parents, however misguided it may be, for their children to be popular."

Early dating is found primarily in affluent communities, said Dr. David Elkind, a professor of child study at Tufts University and the author of "The Hurried Child" (Addison-Wesley, 1981).

"More affluent families want their children to be more socialized," he said. "They feel that social dealings, as well as academic programs, are somehow a race: the earlier you start, the better."

Elkind said early dating also reflects other contemporary influences on children. "They watch sexual messages on television and identify with them," he said. "There are demands on children to be more grown-up earlier."

As an example, Elkind said he recently heard of birthday parties in Miami that take place in beauty salons, where 9- and 10-year-old girls have their hair and nails done.

Dr. Brenda Vander Mey, an associate professor of sociology at Clemson University, said that the rise in early dating also reflects growing peer pressure: "We used to think of peer groups as influential in the teen years, but they are becoming important at a much younger age."

Indeed, parents and psycholgists say peer pressure is pushing some children into dating at a time when they are not at all interested and want nothing to do with it.

They also say children may be deeply relieved, if not overjoyed, when their parents take a strong stand and refuse to let them date.

"Kids who do not really want to do this and are going along with the crowd are happy when a parent puts a foot down and says no," said Taffel. "The parent takes the burden and lets the kid off the hook."

Dr. Antoinette Saunders, a clinical psychologist in Evanston, Ill., said she knew a 9-year-old boy who told his parents that other children in his fourth-grade class were dating and that he was very confused about what he should do.

"He was was torn between being a kid, dressing up in a GI Joe costume on weekends, and having to pair off with a girl to fit in," she said.

"There is so much pressure to grow up fast. Dating can be a stressful situation for kids. It has everything to do with how kids think they should be acting, not what they really want to do."

In New Jersey, Ms. Davis said that peer pressure pushes 10-year-olds in her town to attend a monthly dance at the local school.

For some kids, dancing is torture," she said. "They are not ready for this. But if you don't go, you are out, so it is a no-win situation."

Her son Craig said that dating is "like a status symbol" in his circle of friends. He also called it "a big confusing mess because sometimes you don't know what to do."

"It is something you want to do because you never did it before," he added. "Like being an astronaut."

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 36-year-old, self-supporting female lawyer. Married once, now divorced. (Divorced is better.) No children. I like my life the way it is, and I'm no bowwow.

Van Buren

I recently met a man who is drop-dead gorgeous. He's 42, has had two failed marriages — no children — and he's also a lawyer. We met in court. This man is a real challenge, and I'm totally fascinated by him.

On our first date, he took me to dinner. And both our dinners got cold because we did nothing but talk. He took me home and we talked all night.

On our second date, he said, "You are the woman I want to marry, but there are three conditions. No kids, no dogs and no in-laws!" Abby, I can live without kids, and I suppose I could get rid of my two dogs, but what am I supposed to do with my parents?

This man has never met them and says he doesn't care if he never does, because the only people he's ever had trouble with were his in-laws.

I could bend your ear for hours about this man, but maybe this is enough to go on. He says I am the first woman he's ever proposed marriage to. (The two he married asked him.) How do you size him up, Abby? — "POWERHOUSE" (HIS NAME FOR ME)

DEAR "POWERHOUSE": I think he's very persuasive, but I would be in no big hurry to marry this man. He sounds very opinionated. (How dare he prejudge your parents?) Get to know him better — much better. If he stands the test of time and closer scrutiny, you can marry him later.

DEAR ABBY: I work with Paula, a single woman in her early 40s. She lives with Nancy — her "sister" — or so she says. Nancy is also a single woman in her early 40s. Paula brings her "sister" to all business and social affairs instead of a date. Actually, these two women behave more like a couple than sisters. Nancy even dresses in an obviously masculine manner. When anyone has even suggested trying to fix up Paula or Nancy with a date, they emphatically refuse — saying they're too "old."

Abby, I like Paula and Nancy, but I feel they are trying to masquerade as sisters when they are obviously lesbian lovers. I suppose it must be difficult for them to live like this, when it would be much easier for them simply to admit that they are lovers, which everyone in the office already knows.

It's gotten to the point where I don't feel comfortable pretending they are sisters. I would like to take Paula aside and ask her to tell me the truth. Since we are friends, I feel that I am part of this charade now, and I refuse to continue living this lie, even though they seem comfortable with it.

What should I do? — HAD ENOUGH

DEAR HAD ENOUGH: Since you asked, I think you should mind your own business.

The facts about drugs, AIDS and how to prevent unwanted pregnancy are all in Abby's new expanded booklet, "What Every Teen Should Know." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Mastering dialogue is key

By David Grimes
N.Y. Times News Service

Probably the biggest challenge in being a successful parent is mastering the dialogue.

Parents speak a different language from people who do not have children, and it takes years of practice to become fluent.

For you beginning parents, here are a few key phrases to get you started:

■ "I thought I told you to ..." Children are equipped with a special kind of volume control in their ears that shuts off completely whenever you ask them to do something unpleasant, such as pick up their toys. This same volume control can also increase ear sensitivity to such a degree that a child can pick out the sound of a bag of cookies being opened at a distance of several miles.

■ "Ask your mother/father." No parental decision is so important that it cannot be passed off to someone else. Furthermore, if the decision turns out to be a bad one, you are absolved of all blame.

■ "I'm going to count to three." Before you became a parent, counting to three was no big deal and was certainly nothing you would announce to the world before commencing. However, as a parent, you will find yourself counting to three several times a day in as loud and authoritative voice as you can muster.

■ "It's way past your bedtime." Children quickly learn that there are three stages to the bedtime procedure. The first stage is when the parents say, "It's bedtime." The second stage is when the parents say, "It's past your bedtime." You can expedite the whole process by skipping these two steps and going directly to the final directive, "It's way past your bedtime."

■ "Why? Because I said so, that's why." Parents learn quickly that children demand explanations not because they are logical creatures but simply to stall for time. By the time you rationally defend your order to "take the trash out," you have either forgotten what your order was in the first place or the garbage truck has come and gone. This bulletproof explanation is also valuable when you're not sure yourself why you've just said what you've said.

'Senior' prom

Program offers transition to retirement

BOSTON (AP) — While many people look forward to the day when they don't have to work, psychologists know that dramatic changes such as retirement can be devastating.

That's why Polaroid Corp. offers employees "retirement rehearsal," a three-month leave of absence so they can get a taste of daily life without a job before making a final decision about retiring.

"I don't know how people can head into retirement precipitously. Just Bingo! Go from 40 hours a week to zero," said Joseph Perkins, corporate retirement manager for Polaroid.

The company has run the program for about 13 years. Employees who opt for the leave can return to their jobs within the 90 days if they change their minds about retirement.

"It's a darn good test as to whether they can handle the leisure," Perkins said.

This may sound like a deal that's too good to pass up, but Perkins said only 75 to 100 people have opted for it since the program began.

About half the people who have entered the tryout retirement program have not returned to work.

Part of the reason more people don't opt for the plan is money. During the leave of absence, wages are halted; but a pension cannot start until the employee is officially gone from the company.

Also, Perkins said, some employees simply might be scared to request the leave, even though the program is open to anyone.

"It takes a lot of guts," he said.

It's not easy for the company, either. The company must leave the position open, which requires shuffling schedules and some overtime.

Occasionally, a department supervisor will protest, claiming the employee is indispensable. But Perkins said he reminds the supervisor that the employee can always retire for good.

Polaroid also offers another program, called "tapering off," in which employees gradually ease their workload. The plan is flexible, allowing someone to reduce the hours worked each day, or reduce the days worked each week.

Similar to the leave of absence plan, employees who taper off their schedule can return to full-time work.

"Polaroid's been in the forefront of experimentation with retirement," said Lois Aronstein, area representative for the American Association of Retired Persons. "It's important for people to have an opportunity to explore without being forced out."

The AARP says other companies around the country have programs to ease workers into retirement. For example, Corning Glass Works also offers a phased retirement program.

IT'S YOUR LIFE

Retirement causes lifestyle changes, problems

By Steve Edwards

Edwards

Retirement brings about changes in lifestyle. To live retirement years to the fullest, face reality and know the advantages and disadvantages to any situation you find yourself in.

Many younger people may not be getting the most out of their lives. As we mature and face retirement, we realize that facing reality will help us live in the present.

Maturity brings a realization of what is and is not important in life; such as how to use your time, how important true friends are, how you want to spend the rest of your life, and how to look and feel your best.

Once you have matured, you can be yourself. Look to the future and what it has in store. Recognize your shortcomings.

The "good old days" were wonderful, but they are gone. We are living in a changing world where the boundaries are constantly being extended; where knowledge is growing almost too fast to use. We live in a wonderful world.

Here's a checklist to help you make the most of your retirement:

- Explore activities which will make you a more useful person in retirement.
- Keep up with current events.
- Improve your knowledge of your hobby or develop new hobbies.
- Participate in clubs, church groups or senior centers to meet new people and become involved in new activities.
- Be aware of your physical condition and make sure you get enough exercise and proper nutrition.
- Check over your home and correct those things that could cause an accident or injury.
- Be aware of inflation and take steps to cope with it.
- Talk to people at the Social Security Administration in order to take the right steps to be assured of Social Security and Medicare benefits.
- Try to live on a retirement budget before retirement, just to see how things work out.
- Analyze expenses to see what can be eliminated or reduced.

Retirement can be the best years of your life, if you begin preparation today for all your tomorrows.

Steve Edwards is executive director of Community and Senior Services and the Visiting Nurse Service of Midland.

Copley News Service

Ginger seems to quiet stomach nausea, according to researchers. Ginger ale has always been a home remedy for a mildly upset stomach, and powdered ginger-root worked better than Dramamine in preliminary research from Brigham Young University.

At home, you can dissolve ¼ teaspoon of ginger in hot water or fruit juice.

Budget negotiators urged to use caution

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiators for the White House and Congress were urged Thursday to seek deficit savings of $50 billion to $60 billion but avoid more drastic steps that might send the economy into a slowdown.

Officials from the administration and the Congressional Budget Office gave the negotiators widely differing projections about the size of the growing federal deficit.

But both sides agreed that cuts of $50 billion to $60 billion would not be enough to head off automatic spending cuts under the Gramm-Rudman budget balancing law. Some negotiators have said loosening the deficit targets in the law could be one way of dealing with that problem.

"We're still trying to find out what the facts are," House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., said after Thursday's 90 minutes of closed-door talks.

"Then we'll set the goals we're trying to achieve, then we'll talk about ways to reach the goals."

Congressional aides said it was likely to be several days before a detailed proposal for spending cuts or tax increases surfaced in the talks. The meetings began Tuesday after President Bush set aside his campaign pledge of no new taxes and said there would be no preconditions to the negotiations.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, White House Chief of Staff John Sununu and Budget Director Richard Darman led the president's team into the negotiations.

Participants at the talks heard differing projections about the likely size of the 1991 deficit without tax hikes or spending cuts.

According to the non-partisan Congressional Budget Office, it will take $85 billion to $95 billion in savings to reach the $64 billion target in the Gramm-Rudman law.

The White House's Office of Management and Budget presented figures showing that $59 billion to $74 billion would be needed.

But Robert Reischauer, director of the Congressional Budget Office, and White House budget chief Richard Darman agreed that to cut next year's shortfall by more than $50 billion or $60 billion — about 1 percent of the economy — could contribute to an economic slowdown.

A leading Democratic negotiator concurred. "It is legitimate to ask the question, at what point do you begin to undermine the economy in terms of too many taxes and too many cuts," said Rep. Leon Panetta.

Accepting the lower target presumably would make the work of the negotiators easier and lead to less politically painful remedies.

Neither agency's figures included the costs of rescuing the nation's ailing savings and loan industry. CBO calculated that when those expenses are included, the amount of required deficit cuts could explode to $132 billion to $182 billion. The Gramm-Rudman law requires that the costs of the savings and loan bailout be included in calculations of the deficit.

When Bush unveiled his budget in January, he said that just $37 billion in cuts would be needed to satisfy the Gramm-Rudman law.

"What we're seeing today is the administration abandoning their rosy scenario," said one of the Democratic negotiators, Senate Budget Committee Chairman James Sasser of Tennessee.
