Glasscock Given Ten Years For Murder of Stokley

Fate of River Bridge To Be Known Aug. 10

Highway Commission To Rule at That Time On Application

AUSTIN, July 28.—(AP)—Decision as to whether to reallot $1639,000 toward the construction of a 3,000 foot bridge across the Red river at Burkburnett, in all likelihood will be made August 10, at the next regular meeting of the state highway commission, Senator Joe Burkett, member of the commission, said late today.

AUSTIN, Texas, July 28.—The golden voice of Joseph Weldon Bailey drummed a melodious protest to the interstate highway bridge across the Red river at Burkburnett Tuesday before the Texas highway commission and ranged all the way from the old-fashioned democracy to condemnation of present-day taxation and "outrageous" federal aid.

Bailey, speaking for toll bridge operators across the Red river, challenged the right of Texas to spend money on a free bridge, despite the attorney General's ruling; or to build a bridge across the U. S.-owned strip of the river without a special act of congress. James E. Ferguson sat through the hearing with Commissioners Lanham and Burkett. The case was taken under advisement for early decision. County Judge D. B. Sartin asked the highway commission to grant $163,000 aid on the bridge, and let Senator Bailey and his clients fight us in court.

"We will certainly do that," was Bailey's retort.

Is Opening Fight.

Judge Sartin declared that the Wichita bridge was the opening fight on toll bridges all over Texas.

C. C. McDonald of Wichita Falls quoted one of Bailey's speeches against government extravagance, and said Bailey was making the same kind of an effort here, "for an old plank pole bridge which civilization has outgrown." McDonald said it was rumored at Wichita Falls Bailey is getting a contingent fee based on the length of time he delays the intrastate bridge; but Bailey retorted:

"I am paid by the year, it will make no difference to me."

Judge Sartin told the two highway commissioners that the county will bear all the cost of the litigation; and that the state is asked for but one-fourth of the cost of the bridge.

The commission closed the argument at noon, and announced its decision would be reached "as soon as possible."

Wants Absolute Rule.

Bailey, in the opening of his remarks, decalled the days of "mud hole roads and wagons drawn by mule teams.

"I would rather see Texas go back to that day, and be sovereign of her roads, than for a Texas official to have to go to Washington to get the federal government's approval on its roads." He pictured the extent to which the Wichita bridge precedent might lead, that the federal government would take over complete control of all roads, and asserted if Texas could build the bridge on to Oklahoma soil it could build ten thousand miles of highway in Oklahoma.

Bailey expressed the opinion that the U. S. court was wrong in deciding the south cut—bank of the Red river as the Texas boundary, but said the holding resulted in failure of Texas attorneys to file motion for modification of the original Greer county decision on which it was based.

Britain Speaks.

A. H. Britain of Wichita Falls urged the commission to grant aid immediately and let the courts decide legal questions.

If you refuse us aid, you shut us off without any chance to get a court decision, he said.

Bailey made frequent references to Judge Sartin's interviews in Wichita Falls newspapers. "He's a very active young man," Bailey commented.

Judge Sartin and other speakers for the county pointed to large profits made b ythe toll bridges and declared that if the free bridge were started at once, the toll bridge would collect enough to pay its entire cost before completion and could still be moved down to another point where the same people are planning to put up another toll bridge.

LYRICS OF LIFE
By Douglas Malloch.

When Do We Eat?

I'd like to think man's master mind
The greatest part of humankind,
Or, better yet, the greater part
Of humankind the human heart.
But I'm in doubt. Though men debate
With might minds affairs of state,
Or men discuss the common good
And talk a lot of brotherhood,
Ask any woman, mother, wife,
The greatest question in life,
The one men oftenest repeat?
She'll tell you: "Say, when do we eat?"

Yes, that's the question which she hears,
The one to which a woman's ears
Are most accustomed. Governments
May rise or fall, and contentments
May change their form, the sea its shore,
But woman hears above the roar
One question still from sire and son
Which seems the most important one.
The things to please, a woman finds,
Are not men's hearts and not men's minds.
Great men great questions often meet,
But women "Say, when do we eat?"

And yet Lord bless them if they do
Make that old inquiry of you.
The world of sages and of kings
Is busy with important things,
And yet if heaven took away
Humanity's three meals a day
The world would drop its mighty task
That age-old question then to ask.
And so be glad that you may meet
With three good meals "When do we eat?"
Whatever lot in life we find,
Who serves good meals well serves mankind.

FATAL FIGHT DRAWS HEAVY PEN PENALTY

Defendant Pleaded Insult To Wife And Also Self-Defense

NO APPEAL FILED

Glasscock Has Two Days However in Which To do So

A verdict of guilty, carrying with it a 10-year sentence in the penitentiary, was returned at 10:20 Tuesday night by the jury in the W. J. Glasscock murder case. He was convicted of fatally cutting J. J. Stokley in a fight in the Maryland hotel on the night of June 13.

Out Hour and Half.

The jury reported its findings after having been out not quite an hour and a half. A night session of court was ordered by Judge Vincent Stine of the 30th district after testimony was concluded early in the afternoon. Defense ttorneys required the rest of the day to draft and filed exceptions to the court's charge; and arguments of counsel were heard in the evening. The case went to the jury at 8 o'clock.

Glasscock, on the stand in his own defense yesterday, asserted that the killing of Stokley came as a result of a battle started over an alleged insult offered by Stokley to the defendant's wife. He also injected the self-defense plea, stating that Stokley threatened to hit him with a water pitcher just before he trouble began. Stokley died from loss of blood, caused by severing of a large artery in the left groin. A keen-bladed pocket knife was the weapon used.

Wanted Suspended Sentence.

The defendant, in addition to entering a plea of not guilty filed application for a suspended sentence. This, however, was denied by the jury.

A crowd of perhaps 50 or more persons waited in the court room for the jury's verdict last night.

No motion for a new trial was filed by Glasscock's attorneys last night, nor was notice of appeal served. The law allows the defendant two days in which to do this, however, and it is presumed such a motion will be presented today or tomorrow.

Glasscock took the verdict calmly and said he had "nothing to say about it."

He was returned to the county jail after hearing the jury's report.

PADUCAH C-C AGAINST RAIL AID BY MOODY

Attorney General Asked Why He Intervenes In Matter

PADUCAH, July 28.—Protesting what it claims to be farvoritism on the part of Attorney General Moody for the Fort Worth and Denver railroad in the plains rail discussion, the Cottle county chamber fo commerce has sent the attorney general a wire in which it goes on record as favoring the proposed road of the Texas Panhandle and Gulf lines from Fort Worth to Tucumari.

Signed by W. H. Abernathy, secretary of the organization, the wire asks why "such an important state department" should be influenced in favor of one section of the state to the detriment of another section. The question refers to the proposed action of Ms. Moody to urge the granting of a permit to the Denver.

Following is the telegram in full:

We note that you are preparing to urge the granting of a permit by the interstate commerce commission to the Fort Worth and Denver railroad to build a branch line on the plains in accordance wi h their application now on hearing at Plainview.

Believing as we do that the granting of this permit will be fatal to the sp Gulf railroad to build a trunk line from plication of the Texas Panhandle and Port Worth to Tucumcari which will serve not only the territory covered by the Denver, but a large scope of country besides, which is now short on transportation, the Cottle county chamber of commerce is interested to know why the influence of such an important state department should be used in favor of one section of the state to the detriment of other sections.

$500,000 Corporation Is Formed by Western Capitalists

How a Wichita Falls product, manufactured for several years and distributed from this point to a number of states, came under the attention of a group of Los Angeles capitalists who became interested to the point of forming a big company in that city and have planned to move the industry bodily to California is the story told by E. S. Goodner, president of the O-U-Dust company and the Goodner Wholesale Grocer company, who has just returned from the west coast.

The O-U-Dust line of mops and polishes has been creating widespread attention in the merchandising world and a number of large corporations have expressed no little degree of enthusiasm over the prospects ahead of the O-U-Dust line.

New Company

Following an inquiry from Los Angeles, Mr. Goodner left some time ago to discuss the matter with the interested capitalists. The result of the series of conferences held on the coast comes in the form of an announcement that the O-U-Dust corporation has been formed with a capital of $500,000 and headed by Mr. Goodner of this city.

Heydon claims the well was dug as a shaft to a silver mine and that when oil was struck the Spaniards cemeted it with gyp rock and that when he recently opened it, oil stood within twenty feet of the top of the hole. He claims he learned of the well through aged Spanish documents, which he produced.

Power Franchise Is Granted at Waurika

WAURIKA, Okla., July 28.—In the special election called here today to vote on the granting of a 25-year franchise to the Southwestern Light and Power company which has recently bought the interests of the Consumers Light and Power company, the frnachise was granted by a vote of 200 for and 33 against. There were several contributing causes that a larger vote was not cast, chief of which was the practical assurance that the franchise would carry as there was no fight against it. The Southwestern will furnish high line service extending the line from Hastings on to Waurika, work beginning at once.

The new company promises a very material decrease in rates especially to heavy consumers, with a high grade of service. It will also maintain the Waurika plant as an emergency and standby, with more employes than are now being used. The manufacture of ice will also be continued.

The Southwestern is well known in southern Oklahoma and also in many parts of Texas, supplying high line service to many places and giving splendid satisfaction.

LANHAM OPENS WAR ON STATE TRUCK LINES

Claims Many Are Defrauding Government of Big Tax Revenues

AUSTIN, July 28.—(AP) — War was declared today by Frank W. Lanham of Dallas, chairman of the state highway commission, on what he termed wholesale violation of the automobile registration law by truck and bus owners when he took steps looking toward the deputizing of the maintenance supervisors in each county of the state in order to expedite arrest of offenders. Chairman Lanham estimated that the state is defraunded of several hundred thousand dollars each year by truck and bus owners.

Wants Help

Today Chairman Lanham advised the 18 division superintendents of the highway commission to request the co-operation of county officers in their respective districts in deputizing the county maintenance supervisors. Penalty for violation of the registration law is a 10 per cent increase in the ordinary cost of registration, together with a fine of $200.

Owners of large trucks are the most flagrant violators of the law, said Chairman Lanham. "Many big trucks which should pay an automobile registration tax of several hundred dollars pay only the tax that a small truck according to the law must pay," said Lanham.

IN 8 COUNTIES YIELD BEST OF ENTIRE STATE

General Rain of Monday And Tuesday Basis Of Confidence Now

1 TO 2 INCHES FALL

Farmers Have Been Offered Opportunity To Prepare for Fall

General rains over the Panhandle Plains counties now assures that section of good crop yields regardless of further rainfall. Crops in Childress, Collingsworth, Hall, Hale, Lubbock, Floyd, Briscoe and Donley are considered the best in Texas this year but were needing rain at this time.

Reports from those counties Tuesday night stated that the rain which fell Monday night and Tuesday morning amounted from 1 to 2 inches, and falling slowly all of it was soaked up.

Cotton Sands Welll.

Cotton has weathered the hot period of the past two weeks remarkably well. Where poorly cultivated the plant has been damaged but in the greater number of fields very little damage has been done. Monday night's rain will soon have the crop in good condition, assuring maturity of bolls and putting on a new growth. The growing period in the Panhandle section is fully three months longer.

The greatest value of the gra n at this time is for maturing feed crops. There is a large planting of maize, kaffir and fetetita,. Many fields of these crops are now in full head and more moisture was needed to fully develop the grain. The Panhandle section will be one of the few spots in Texas this year that will produce sufficient feed crops to run the farmers. Feed must be shipped into the central and southern sections of Texas.

The rain also permits wheat farmers to begin prepration of the fields for fll planting. On the Plains many wheat fields have not been touched, due to the insufficient season. It is also probable grain stubble land will be plowed and planted to feed cvrops, which will have mple time to mature before frost.

Heavy in North.

Trainmen on the Fort Worth nd Denver railroad reported Tuesday afternoon that more than two inches of rain fell at Amarillo. Near Clarendon two small washouts were encountered which delayed traffic a few hours. The Lubbock territory reported 1.36 inches of rain. Childress is enjoying muddy roads and fields, which extend as far eastward as Quanah. East of that city the rain was light, barely sprinkling at Vernon. The rain was general over the counties north of the Denver road in the Panhandle. Hartley and Channing, in the Canadian river basin, reported heavy rains.

The skies remained hidden by heavy clouds Tuesday afternoon and night. The rain is moving slowly from the Rocky mountains and is traveling in n eastwrd direction, drifting slightly southward. Eastern and Central Texas reported clair skies Tuesday with hot temperature. All of Northwest Texas, from Wichita county northwest into Oklahoma, had cloudy skies and a much lower temperature.

"The Tennessee Case"--Undelivered Address of W. J. Bryan

Released From Mrs. Bryan Tuesday

It Was the Commoner's Prepared Speech With Which He Intended Carrying Fundamentalist Fight to The People

DELIVERY PREVENTED AT TRIAL

Mr. Bryan's Assailment, Printed Herewith, Indicts Evolution on Five Broad Counts, Supporting Truth of Bible

DAYTON, Tenn., July 28.—(AP) "The Tennessee case," an address prepared by William Jennings Bryan in defense of the Tennessee anti-evolution law which the late Commoner was prevented from delivering at the Dayton trial because of an early termination of the case, was made known to the world today by Mrs. Bryan.

"A sudden decision of the defense to submit the case without argument, and permit a verdict of guilty prevented the delivery of the speech," says an introductory note to Mr. Bryan's address.

"As it presents the issues involved and the reasons for the law prohibiting the teachings in public schools of any hypothesis that makes man a descendant of any lower form of life, it is printed for the information of the general public."

Mr. Bryan declared in the address that the case was no longer local, but that it "has assumed the proportions of a battle royal between unbelief that attempts to speak through so-called science and the defenders of the Christian faith, speaking through the legislature of Tennessee.

"It is for the jury to determine whether this attack upon the Christian religion shall be permitted in the public schools of Tennessee by teachers employed by the state and paid out of the public treasury," was a conclusion drawn.

Indicts Evolution As Disputing Truth of the Biblical Account.

Asserting that "this law does not violate any rights guaranteed by any constitution to any individual" and was not an interference with freedom of conscience, Mr. Bryan indicted evolution on five broad counts, the first of which "is that it disputes the truth of the Bible account of man's creation and shakes faith in the Bible as the word of God."

"This indictment we prove by comparing the processes described as evolutionary with the text of Genesis," he said. "It not only contradicts the Mosaic record as to the beginning of human life, but it disputes the Bible doctrine of reproduction according to kind—the greatest scientific principle known."

"Our second indictment," the address said, "is that the evolutionary hypothesis carried to its logical conclusion, disputes every vital truth of the Bible. Its tendency, natural, if not inevitable, is to lead those who really accept it, first to agnosticism and then to atheism."

Here Charles Darwin was referred to, to illustrate what was meant by this charge. "I did not in the least doubt the strict and literal truth of every word in the Bible," Darwin was quoted as saying of the period from 1828 to 1831. Then said Bryan "the change wrought in his (Darwin's) religious views will be found in a letter written to a German youth in 1879. * * *"

Science has nothing to do with Christ except insofar as the habit of scientific research makes a man cautious in admitting evidence. For myself I do not believe that there ever has been any revelation. As to future life every man must judge for himself between conflicting vague probabilities.

The third indictment against evolution was "that it diverts attention from pressing problems of great importance to trifling speculation."

He described attempts of evolutionists trying to imagine what happened in the dim past and also to pry open the door of the distant future, declaring that the science of "how to live" is the most important of all the sciences. It is desirable to know the physical sciences, but it is necessary to know how to live. * * *

College Graduates Need "Heavenly Vision for Their Own Restraint."

"While not more than two per cent of our population are college graduates these because of enlarged powers need a 'heavenly vision' even more than those less learned, both for their own restraint and to insure society that their enlarged powers will be used for the benefit of society and not against the public welfare."

"Our fourth indictment against the evolutionary hypothesis is that by paralyzing the hope of reform, it discourages those who labor for the improvement of man's condition," Mr. Bryan said.

"Every upward looking man seeks to lift the level upon which mankind stands and he trusts that he will see beneficient changes during the brief span of his one life," he held.

"Evolution chills enthusiasm by substituting eons for years. It obscures all beginnings on the mists of endless ages. It is represented as a cold and heartless process beginning with time and ending with eternity and acting so slowly that even the rocks can not preserve a record of the imaginary changes through which it is credited with having carried an original germ of life that appeared sometime from somewhere. Its only program for man is scientific breeding, a system under which a few supposedly super-intellects, self-appointed would direct the mating and the movement of the mass of mankind—an impossible system."

"Evolution," Bryan said, "disputing the miracle and ignoring the spiritual in life has no place for the regeneration of the individual. It recognizes no cry of repentance and scoffs at the doctrine that one can be reborn."

The fifth charge brought was that "if taken seriously and made the basis of a philosophy of life, evolution would eliminate love and carry man back to a struggle of tooth and claw. The Christians who have allowed themselves to be deceived into believing that evolution is a beneficient, or even a rational process have been associating with those who either do not understand its implications or dare not avow their knowledge of these implications."

The Commoner denying that the Tennessee anti-evolution law had its origin in bigotry and was "trying to force any form of religion on anybody," said that the majority rather is trying to protect itself from the effort of an insolent minority to force irreligion upon the children under the guise of teaching science.

Asserting that Christianity welcomes truth from whatever source it comes he alluded to evolution as "not truth; it is merely a hypothesis—it is millions of guesses strung together."

"The real attack of evolution," Mr. Bryan held, however, to be not upon Christianity, but upon religion, the most basic fact in man's existence and the most practical thing in life."

Clarence Darrow and his conduct of the defense in the Leopold-Loeb murder case brought lengthy criticism from the fundamentalist champion under the question he asked:

"Do bad doctrines corrupt the morals of students?"

Reviewing quoted excerpts from Darrow's plea in behalf of Babe Leopold because he had become "enamoured of the philosophy of Nietzche," Mr. Bryan declared "this is a damnable philosophy and yet it is the flower that blooms on the stalk of evolution. Mr. Darrow thinks the universities are in duty bound to feed out this poisonos stuff to the students and when the students become stupified by it and commit murder, neither they nor the university are to blame."

Mr. Bryan went into a denunciation of science, declaring that science "is a magnificent material force, but it is not a teacher of morals," and that evolution is at war with religion because religion is supernatural. He claimed that science needs religion to inspire with lofty purpose those who employ the forces that are unloosed by science. Christianity, he said, can not remain indifferent.

The text of Mr. Bryan's address follows in part:

Christianity welcomes truth from whatever source it comes and is not afraid that any truth from any source can interfere with the divine truth that comes by inspiration from God himself. It is not scientific truth to which Christians object, for true science is classified knowledge and nothing therefore can be scientific unless it is true.

"Evolution Is Not Truth, But Millions of Guesses Together"

Evolution is not truth; it is merely an hypothesis—it is millions of guesses strung together. It had not been proven in the days of Darwin; he expressed astonishment that with two or three million species it had been impossible to trace any species of any other species. It had not been proven in the days of Huxley and it has not been proven up to today. It is less than four years ago that Professor Bateson came all the way from London to Canada to tell the American scientists that every effort to trace one species to another had failed—every one. He said he still had faith in evolution, but had doubts about the origin of species. But of what value is evolution if it can not explain the origin of species? While many scientists accept evolution as if it were a fact, they all almost when questioned that no explanation has been found as to how one species developed into another.

Darwin suggested two laws, sexual selection and natural selection. Sexual selection has been laughed out of the classroom and natural selection is being abandoned and no new explanation is satisfactory, even to scientists. Some of the more rash advocates of evolution are wont to say that evolution is as firmly established as the law of gravitation or the Copernician theory. The absurdity of such a claim is apparent when we remember that any one can prove the law of gravity by throwing a weight into the air and that any one can prove the roundness of the earth by going around it while no one can prove evolution to be true in any way whatever.

Chemistry is an insurmountable obstacle in the path of evolution. It is one of the greatest of the sciences; it separates the atoms—isolates them and walks about them, so to speak. If there were in nature a progressive force, an eternal urge, chemistry would find it. But it is not there. All of the 92 original elements are separate and distinct; they combine in fixed and permanent proportions. Water is H-20 as it has been from the beginning. It was here before life appeared and has never changed; neither can it be shown that anything else has materially changed.

Stately Mansion From Cottage As Much As Man From Ape, Claim.

There is no more reason to believe that man descended from some inferior animal than there is to believe that a stately mansion has descended from a small cottage. Resemblances are not proof—they simply put us on inquiry. As one fact, such as the absence of the accused from the scene of the murder, outweighs all the resemblances that a thousand witnesses could swear to, so the inability of science to trace any one of the millions of species to another species outweighs all the resemblances upon which evolution is to rely to establish man's blood relationship with the brutes.

Our first indictment against evolution is that it disputes the truth of the Bible account of man's creation and shakes faith in the Bible as the word of God. This indictment we prove by comparing the process described as evolutionary with the text of Genesis. It not only contradicts the Mosaic record as to the beginning of human life, but it disputes the Bible doctrines of reproduction, according to kind—the greatest scientific principle known.

Our second indictment is that evolutionary hypothesis carried to its logical conclusion disputes every vital truth of the Bible. It is a tendency naturally, if not inevitably, to lead those who really accept it, first to agnosticism and then to atheism. Evolutionists attack the truth of the Bible, not openly at first, but by using weasle-words like "poetical," "symbolical" and "allegorical," to suck the meaning out of the inspired record of man's creation.

We call as our first witness Charles Darwin. He began life as a Christian. On page 30, volume one, of the life and letters of Charles Darwin by his son, Francis Darwin, he said, speaking of the period from 1828 to 1881, "I did not then in the least doubt the strict and literal truth of every word in the Bible." On page 412 of volume 2, of the same publication, he says "when I was collecting facts for 'The Origin,' my belief in what is called a personal God was as firm as that of Dr. Pusey himself." It may be a surprise to your honor and to you, gentlemen of the jury, as it was to me, to learn that Darwin spent three years at Cambridge studying for the ministry.

This was Darwin as a young man, before he came under the influence of doctrine that man descended from a lower order of animals. The change wrought in his religious views will be found in a letter written to a German youth in 1879 and printed on page 277 of volume 1 of the life and letters above referred to.

Quotes Darwin's Letter to Show He Had Begun to Doubt Christ.

The letter begins:

"I am much engaged, an old man, and out of health, and I can not spare to answer your questions fully—nor indeed can they be answered. Science has nothing to do with Christ except in so far as the habit of scientific research makes a man cautious in admitting evidence. For myself, I do not believe that there ever has been any revelation. As for a future life, every man must judge for himself between conflicting vague probabilities."

Note that "science has nothing to do with Christ except insofar as the habit of scientific research makes a man cautious in admitting evidence," stated plainly, that simply means that "the habit of scientific research" makes one cautious in accepting the only evidence that we have of Christ's existence, mission, teaching, crucifixion and resurrection, namely, the evidence found in the Bible. To make this interpretation of his words the only possible one, he adds, "for myself, I do not believe that there ever has been any revelation." In rejecting the Bible as a revelation from God he rejects the Bible's conception of God and he rejects also the supernatural Christ of whom the Bible and the Bible alone tells. And it will be observed he refuses to express any opinion as to a future life.

Now let me read one of the most pathetic confessions that has come to my notice. George John Romanes, a distinguished biologist, sometimes called the successor of Darwin, was reared in the Orthodox faith and, like Darwin, was led away from it by evolution.

For 25 years he could not pray. Soon after he became an agnostic he wrote a book entitled "A Candid Examination of Theism," publishing it under the assumed name "Physicus." In his book he says:

"And for as much as I am far from being able to agree with those who affirm that the twilight doctrine in the 'new faith' is a desirable substitute for the waning splendor of 'the old' I am not ashamed to confess that with this virtual negation of God the universe to me has lost its soul of loveliness; and although from hence the precept 'work while it is day' will doubtless but gain an intensified force from the terribly intensified meaning of the words that 'the night cometh when no man can work,' yet when at times I think as I must of the appealing contrast between the hallowed glory of that creed which once was mine and the lonely mystery of existence as I now find it—at such times I shall ever feel it impossible to avoid the sharpest pang of which my nature is susceptible."

Calls Evolutionists' Attempts To Teach Belief But a Tragedy.

What pleasure can they find in robbing a human of "the hallowed glory of that creed" that Romanes once cherished and in substituting "the lonely mystery of existence" as he found it? Can the fathers and mothers of Tenenssee be blamed for trying to protect their children from such a tragedy?

If anyone has been led to complain of the severity of the punishment that hangs over the defendant let him compare this crime and its mild punishment with the crimes for which a greater punishment is prescribed. what is the taking of a few dollars from one in day or night in comparison with the crime of leading one away from God and away from Christ?

He who spake as never man spake thus describes the crimes that are committed against the young.

"It is impossible but that offences will come; but woe unto him through whom they come. It were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck and be cast into the sea than that he should offend one of these little ones."

Christ did not overdraw the picture. Who is able to set a price upon the life of a child—a child into whom a mother poured her life and for whom a father has labored? What may a noble life mean to the child itself, to the parents and to the world.

And, it must be remembered, that we can measure the effect on only that part of life which is spent on earth; we have no way of calculating the effect on that infinite circle of life which existence here is a small arc. The soul is immortal and religion deals with the soul; the logical effect of the evolutionary hypotheesis is to undermine religion and thus effect the soul. I recently received a list of questions that were to be discussed in a prominent eastern school for women. The second question in the list read: "Is religion an obsolescent function that should be allowed to atrophy quietly, without an arousing the passionate prejudice of outworn superstitions?" The real attack of evolution, it will be seen, is not upon Orthodox Christianity or even upon Christianity, but upon religion—the most basic fact in man's existence and the most practical thing in life.

He Discusses the Arguments Of Darrow in the Loeb-Leipold Case.

Psychologists who build upon the evolutionary hypothesis teach that man is nothing but a bundle of characteristics inherited from brute ancestors. That is the philosophy which Mr. Darrow applied in his celebrated criminal case. "Some remote ancestor"—he does not know how remote—"sent down the seed that corrup him." You can not punish the ancestor—he is not only dead, but, according to the evolutionists, he was a brute and may have lived a million years ago. And he says that all the biologists agree with him—no wonder so small a per cent of the biologists, according to Lueba, believe in a personal God.

This is the quintessence of evolution, distilled for us by one who follows that doctrine to its logical conclusion. Analyze this dogma of darkness and death. Evolutionists say that back in the twilight of life a beast, name and nature unknown, planted a murderous seed and that the impulse that originated in that seed throbs forever in the blood of the brute's descendants, inspiring killings innumerable, for which murderers are not responsible because coerced by a fate fixed by the laws of heredity! It is an insult to reason and shocks the heart. That doctrine is as deadly as leprosy; it may aid a lawyer in a criminal case, but it would, if generally adopted, destroy all sense of responsibility and menace the morals of the world. A brute, they say, can pre-destine a man to crime and yet God incarnated flesh can release a human being from his bondage or save him from ancestral sins. No more repulsive doctrine was ever proclaimed by man; if all the biologists of the world teach this doctrine—as Mr. Darrow says they do—then may heaven defend the youth of our land from their impious babblings.

Our third indictment against evolution is that it diverts attention from pressing problems of great importance to trifling speculation. While one evolutionist is trying to imagine what happened in the dim past, another is trying to pry open the door of the distant future. One recently grew eloquent over ancient worms and another predicted that seventy-five thousand years hence everyone would be bald and toothless. The science of "how to live" is the most important of all the sciences. It is desirable to know the physical sciences, but it is necessary to know how to live. Christians desire that their children shall be taught all the sciences, butt hey do not want them to lose sight of the Rock of Ages while they study the age of the rocks; neither do they desire them to become so absorbed in measuring the distance between the stars that they will forget Him who holds the stars in his hand.

Man's Condition Could Not Be Improved Under Evolution, Claim.

Our fourth indictment against the evolutionary hypothesis is that by paralyzing the hope of reform it discourages those who labor for the improvement of man's condition. Every upward looking man or woman seeks to lift the level upon which mankind stands and they trust that they will see beneficial changes during the brief span of their own lives. Evolution chills their enthusiasm by substituting eons for years. It obscures all beginnings in the mist of endless ages. It is represented as a cold heartless process beginning with time and ending in eternity and acting so slowly that even the rocks can not preserve a record of the imaginary changes through which it is credited with having carried an original germ of life that appeared some time from somewhere. Its only program for man is scientific breeding, a system under which a few supposedly superior intellects, self-appointed, would direct the mating and the movements of the mass of mankind—an impossible system. Evolution is shutting out the miracle and ignoring the spiritual in life of the individual. It recognizes no cry of repentence and scoffs at the doctrine that one can be reborn.

It is thus the unrelenting enemy of the process that can redeem society through the redemption of the individual. An evolutionist would never write such a story as the prodigal son; it contradicts the whole theory of evolution.

Our fifth indictment of the evolutionary hypothesis is that if taken seriously and made the basis of a philosophy of life it would eliminate love and carry man back to a struggle of tooth and claw. The Christians who have allowed themselves to be deceived into believing that evolution is a beneficient or even a rational process have been associating with those who either do not understand its application or dare not avow their knowledge of these implications. Let me give you some authority on this subject. I will begin with Darwin, the high priest of evolution, to whom all evolutionists bow.

On pages 149 and 150 in "The Descent of Man" already referred to, he says:

Compares the Brute to the Man And the System of Elimination.

"With savages, the weak in body or mind are soon eliminated; and those who survive commonly exhibit a vigorous state of health. We civilized men, on the other hand, do our utmost o check he process of elimination, we build asylum for he imbecile, he maimed and he sick; we institute poor laws; and our medical men exert their utmost skill to save the life of every one to the last moment. There is reason to believe that vaccination has preserved thousands who from a weak constitution would formerly have succumbed to smallpox. Thus the weak members of civilized society propagate their kind. No one who has attended to the breeding of domestic animals will doubt that this must be highly injurious to the race of man. It is surprising how soon a want of care or care wrongly directed, leads to the degeneration of a domestic race; but excepting in the case of man himself hardly a one is so ignorant as to allow his worst animals to breed.

"The aid which we feel impelled to to give to the helpless is mainly an incidental result of the instinct of sympathy which was originally acquired as part of the social instincts, but subsequently rendered, in the manner previously indicated, more tender and more widely diffused. Nor would we check our sympathy even at the urging of hard reason without deterioration in the noblest part of our nation. * * * We must therefore bear the undoubted effects of the weak surviving and propagate their kind."

Darwin reveals the barbarious sentiment that runs through evolution and dwarfs the moral nature of those who become obscessed with it. Can any Christian remain indifferent? Science needs religion to direct its energies and to inspire with lofty purposes those who employ the forces that are unloosed by scence. Evolution is at war with religion because religion is supernatural. It is, therefore, the relentless foe of Christianity which is a revealed religion.

Science Magnificent, But It Is Not a Teacher of Morals.

Let us then hear the conclusion of the whole matter. Science is a magnificent material for us, but it is not a teacher of morals. It can perfect machinery, but it adds no moral restraints to protect society from the misuse of the machine. It can also build gigantic intellectual ships, but it constructs no moral rudders for the control of storm tossed human vessels. It not only fails to supply the spiritual element needed, but some of its unproven hypothesis rob the ship of its compass and thus endanger its cargo.

In war science has proven itself an evil genius. It has made war more terrible than it ever was before. Man used to be content to slaughter his fellow men on a single plane—the earth's surface. Science has taught him to go down into the water and shooe up from below and to go up into the clouds and shoot down from above, thus making the battlefield three times as bloody as it was before. But science does not teach brotherly love. Science has made war so hellish that civilization was about to commit suicide and now we are told that newly discovered instruments of destruction will make the cruelties of the late war seem trivial in comparison with the cruelties of wars that may come in the future. If civilization is to be saved from the wreckage threatened by intelligence not consecrated by love it must be saved by the moral code of the meek and lowly Nazarene. His teachings and His teachings alone, can solve the problems that vex the heart and perplex the world.

The world needs a saviour more than it ever did before and there is only one name under heaven given among men by whom we must save. It is this name that evolution degrades, for, carried to its logical conclusion, it robs Christ of the glory of a virgin birth, of the majesty of His diety and mission and of the triumph of His resurrection. It also disputes the doctrine of the atonement.

Again force and love meet face to face and the question "what shall I do with Jesus?" must be answered. A bloody, brutal doctrine—evolution—demands as the rabble did 1900 ears ago that he be crucified. That can not be the answer of this jury representing a Christian state and sworn to uphold the laws of Tennessee. Your answer will be heard throughout the world; it is eagerly awaited by a praying multitude. If the law is nullified there will be rejoicing wherever God is repudiated, the Savour scoffed at and the Bible ridiculed. Every unbeliever of every kind and degree will be happy. If on the other hand, the law is upheld and the religion of the school children protected, millions of Christians will call you blessed and with hearts full of gratitude to God will sing again that grand old song of triumph:

"Faith of our fathers, living still,
In spite of dungeons, fire and sword;
O, how our hearts beat high with joy
When, ere, we hear that glorious word,
Faith of our father's holy faith:
We will be true to Thee till death."

Smith-Waggoner

In section 35, block 2 HTC survey, Wilbarger county, Smith and associates are completing their number 1 Waggoner as a nice producer from a saturated lime reported to have been drilled from 2405-10 feet. The well after bailing dry filled over 800 feet in a period of thirty hours.

Humble-Kilcrease

In the Litchfield pool the Humble Oil and Refining company have a good looking sand on which they are setting casing at 965 feet. The well which is located in the southeast corner of their lease in section 1809 TC&L is one location to the east of their number 1 producer which is good for 250 barrels.

Oxford-Kilcrease

In the Litchfield pool to the east of the Humble's producers the Oxford Oil corporation are equipping their number 2 to pump as a nice producer from the regular 900-foot sand and with the bottom of the hole at 996 feet. To the west and offsetting the Humble's well they are abandoning their number 1 as a dry at 992 feet.

Tidal-Waggoner

South of Oklaunion and about four miles to the east of the Noble production to the southeast of the South Vernon pool the Tidal Oil company's number 1 Waggoner, located in section 37 block 4 H. & T. C. survey, is testing a good looking sand drilled from 1,985-95 feet. The well, an absolute wildcat, opens up a nice stretch of territory and its favorable completion within the next few days will be watched with interest.

Sun Company-Farmer

Midway between production on their Farmer lease in the Bell County School lands and that of the Norday Pool and Sun company are looking for sand on their wildcat test which lies on the very south line of the B. C. S. L. survy, at 1,425 feet. The well occupying the strategic position which it does will be watched very closely for the next few days as a producer in this area, over a mile from production, will mean a good deal to south Archer activity.

Smith, Kleeden-Wilbarger

According to reports brought in to the Record News last night another Wilbarger county well came in Tuesday afternoon with a huge gas flow, in the W. A. Smith and Mark Kleeden cable tool test in the R. L. Castleberry land, section 67,, 14, H. & T. C. railroad survey. The well is flowing at an estimated rate of 10 to 12 million cubic feet of gas per day from a gas sand of about 1,200 feet.

The flow started yesterday afternoon when the test had been underreamed and the 8 1-4 inch casing lowered to the sand. The well cleaned itself out with an initial flow of gas of at least 10,000,000 feet, it was estimated.

Much speculation is advanced as to whether this well will open a new pool or will be an extension to the South Vernon pool.

PINCHOT AND THE POWER TRUST.

Governor Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania has extended his giant power campaign into every congressional district of the United States. He has sent a copy of the report of the giant power survey in his state to each member of congress and with it a letter in which he told the congressmen that his purpose in sending the report was "the hope that it may be of use to you in the wide spread consideration of giant power which is coming."

Governor Pinchot and his giant power organization announces the purpose through effective public regulation to break down and put an end to the present unfair discrimination in rates in favor of a few great users of electricity and against moderate and small users through which the latter are made to pay extortionate charges.

He declares giant power means regulation by the people of the coming electric monopoly while super power means regulation by the monopoly. Furthermore that super power is the name chosen by the electric magnates for their own set-up of a nation-wide electric monopoly; that giant power and super power are as different as a tame elephant and a wild elephant; that one is the friend and fellow worker of man; that the other, at large and uncontrolled, may be a dangerous enemy.

Governor Pinchot does not mince his words. He strikes straight from the shoulder. This is his conclusion:

"The place for the public is on the neck of the elephant, guiding its movements, not on the ground helpless under its knees."

There are new issues coming. Governor Pinchot has launched one that may be a paramount. He realizes that the electric age is here. He knows that a few men, with billions behind them, are determined to control the water power of America. He would not delay the coming of the electric age. He would permit the water ways of America to be harnessed but he would have federal regulation of the super power people and state regulation wherever it is necessary.

Governor Pinchot has ever been a leader of reform movements. He won the governorship of Pennsylvania with the bosses and the republican organization fighting him. Now he is a candidate for the senate. He knows he has the organization and the consolidated super power of his state arrayed against him. This includes the coal barons of his state and the powerful bosses who have millions, nay hundreds of millions, at their command.

Pinchot may be right, he may be wrong, but he is a fighter, he is a man who has confidence in himself and whenever he goes forth as the leader of a cause desperate fighting for political supremacy is certain to take place.

He fought the bosses to a finish and won. He fought the rum runners and their political allies to a finish and as yet it is a drawn battle. In the long ago he fought the political powers of the west to a finish in order to conserve the natural resources of the west. He had Theodore Roosevelt behind him and Roosevelt won.

One of the greatest political contests of the age is being staged by Gifford Pinchot. He has nothing to lose and everything to win. In his race for governor he had the women and the independent wage workers behind him as well as the prohibitionists and the friends of clean government. If he wins the senatorship he will be one of the leading figures on the national stage of action.

TOM BLANTON ON THE ROAD.

Tom Blanton of Texas is on the road again. He has printed at his own expense a 27-page pamphlet in which he handles in the Blantonian way, the administration of public buildings and parks in the District of Columbia. Blanton of Texas has distributed his pamphlet widely through the mails. Colonel Clarence H. Sherrill is the superintendent of the department which handles appropriations of millions every year. Now the colonel is a very cautious man. He refuses to make answers to the many accusations made by the Texas congressman. He says the Texan has been imposed upon by a mass of false rumors which have naturally led Blanton to accept as facts statements which are in reality in most cases entirely without foundation of fact.

And the colonel does not dodge an investigation. He advises that a congressional inquiry be ordered, this in order to avoid a personal controversy with a member of congress.

Tom Blanton of Texas dearly loves the lime light. He loves to pose as the watch dog of the treasury. He loves the spectacular. Away down here in Texas he is known as the greatest rabble rouser among the political Ciceros of the commonwealth. He is the idol of his district. His district is ever behind him. He was re-elected by a majority of 25,000 in 1924. He never bolts. He never scratches a ticket. He is said to be looking longingly to a seat in the senate of the United States. Should he make the landing Fat Jim Heflin of Alabama will have to look to his laurels.

Fat Jim is the noisiest man in the senate. That is he has been the noisiest. Coleman Livingston Blease of South Carolina will be a member of the new senate. He is tall and lean and he indulges in lurid language. When he begins to perform Fat Jim of Alabama may be forced to take a rear seat and hold his tongue. This is neither here nor there.

Blanton of Texas is on the road again. He paid for the printing and the mailing of his 27-page pamphlet. He did it because the public printer declined to do the work. It is midsummer in Texas. It is as hot as hades. There is a drouth on in some sections. But Blanton is at his post, determined to save the republic from the Wall street robbers and the political leeches who are sucking the life blood from the body of Jones. Jones the humble individual who is said to pa ythe freight in this land of the free.

Without Blanton of Texas there would be no one to contribute to the gayety of nations in the dog-day season of the year.

GROUNDLESS OBJECTIONS.

As spokeman for the new nationalist sentiment in China, Dr. P. W. KuKo, president of Southeastern university, Nanking, China, passed some serious criticisms upon American policies in addressing the Harris Institute of Politics at the University of China, Dr. P. W. Kuo, president of Southeastern principle of the "open door" in China and to our immigration policy. Extraordinary as it may seem, he asserted that both were unfair to China and intimated that they were alike products of national selfishness. On the subject of immigration he adopted the same position which Japan but recently failed to sustain. He stood for control of immigration by treaty engagement and inveighed against the method which we have demonstrated is the only effective one—control through the enactment of domestic laws.

China's protest against American immigration regulations would be of no avail even if officially uttered. We have established our right to deal with immigration as we see fit, and certainly will not recede from it. But it is decidedly interesting to learn that China, noted for her meekness, is developing a pride and sensitiveness which is alive even to imaginary slights.

Dr. Kuo admits that for China the immigration question is purely academic. Yet he regards it as important, because he thinks that the present handling of the question is hurtful to China's dignity. "With China," he says, "the objection against the exclusion of labor immigration is not a question of necessity, but of national honor and justice."

"National honor and justice" evidently enter into Dr. Kuo's objection to the "open door" policy maintained by the United States. He does not treat of that policy generally but attacks one of its most significant embodiments. The international financial consortium, proposed by the United States and generally regarded as one of the greatest triumphs of our policy in the far east, is particularly obnoxious to the Chinese, in Dr. Kuo's opinion, because it deprives China of her liberty of action in borrowing abroad. There is, of course, some truth in this charge. China must sacrifice something of her liberty of action in return for the protection afforded. But her liberty is purely theoretical while the protection thrown around her is real and necessary.

Where China must borrow she has no choice but to accept her creditor's terms. Nearly all the impositions and exactions put upon her, nearly all the invasions of her national sovereignty, in recent times have come by the financial route. It was to guard her against further encroachments, quite as much as to guarantee to the foreign powers equal opportunity in the development of her economic resources, that the consortium was organized. The consortium has served well its dual purpose and no doubt will remain operative until China proves her ability to stand upon her own feet, dealing justice to her people and discharging her obligations to the rest of the world.

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE.

Thief Catch Thief.

Charles Ponzi, a swindler who took several millions away from people who trusted him, has just been sentenced a second time to nine years imprisonment, having already served a term of two years.

When he has served this nine years he will be deported to Italy, from whence he came to the United States.

The judge in sentencing Ponzi declared that he was just a plain thief, which is true.

There is no excuse for him. But the real harm that he did was chiefly to the wives and children of the men who went into his scheme.

They were not tempted by greed, as were their husbands and fathers.

Yet the comfort of the wives, and the education of the children was sacrificed to build up a fortune for a swindler.

The methods which Ponzi told his victims that he employed were manifestly dishonest.

He had a system of postal exchanges, by which it was perfectly apparent that the government was to be defrauded. Only by such means could the profits that he promised be piled up.

And it was in the hope of making illegitimate profits that led most of his gulls to invest with him.

Had he told them that he was in an honest business which might possible earn for them six per cent, few of them would have had anything to do with him.

But the kind of people whose money he took from them were in such a hurry to get rich that they did not care how it was accomplished.

What Ponzi did, of course, was to pay dividends out of the money that was given him to invest, reserving a fat percentage for himself which he carefully stowed away.

As long as people kept investing he could pay dividends. But there came a time when money came in slowly. The dividends had to be passed, and investigation proved that the whole thing was a bubble, blown by a crook who had no power to keep it from bursting.

It was a wise and a useful thing to punish Ponzi. Indeed there are many people who will believe that his punishment fell far short of his deserts.

But it would be a wiser thing to begin with little children a campaign of education against the vice of greed, illustrating it by the hundreds of thousands of cases of people who in the hope of getting something for nothing have fallen for such rascals.

Short of finding a gold mine, inheriting a fortune, or salving a pirate cargo of gold, great wealth is not acquired without investment, and heavy investment, either of money or of brains.

Well regulated people do not expect or hope for a hundred per cent on their money.

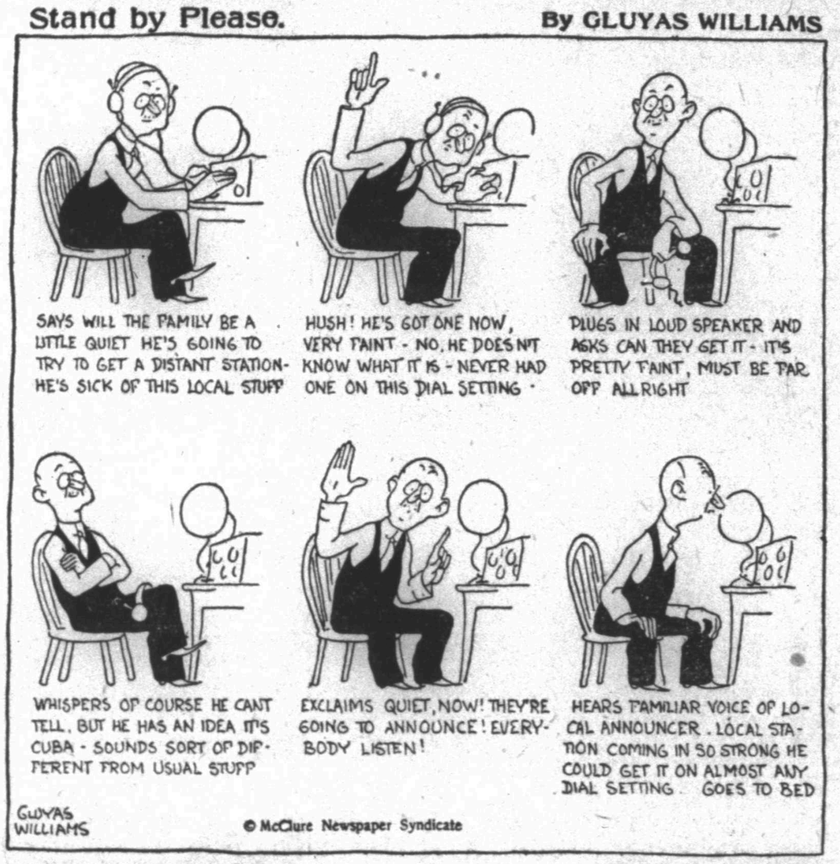

They know that such profits are not to be had honestly, and that any man who could make such profits would be likely to keep them for himself and not to share them.

But the desire for money is great. And greed is a powerful factor.

It can only be eliminated by years of education. And the earlier in the life of a child that education is begun, the better for the child.

WHAT TODAY MEANS TO YOU

By MARY BLAKE

Leo.

The planetary aspects of today contain during the morning to be an complex and difficult as they were yesterday afternoon and evening. Afterwards, however, the uncertainty ceases to exist, and they become very favorable, and in the evening there are very stimulating vibrations. During the early part of the day, it is advisable to refrain, as far as possible, from all aggressive effort and to concentrate only on preparations for any plan that you may have in mind, trusting to the more than encouraging conditions later on to put forward at that time your utmost force in order to carry out, with success the project contemplated. The conditions are quite benign in the evening, more especially in an emotional sense, and it is a good opportunity, if you stand in need of one, of testing your Fate and finding ou thow you stand with the object of your love.

A child born today will enjoy normal health under normal conditions, but the signs denote that more than ordinary care should be exercised in order to avoid accident. In disposition and temperament, it will be self-witted to the point of obstinacy, although to all those to whom it takes a liking, it will be generous and loyal to an exceptional degree. It will be quick to learn, very companionable, but not, to any marked extent, either industrious or ambitious. It should, within reasonable limits, be permitted to choose its own career, as only in such a way will it acquire success.

If today is your birthday, you are very temperamental, and your more than vivid imagination often creates in your mind impractical and unrealizable ideas, on which you spend useless and unremunerative effort. You are full of nervous energy, have an amiable and a pleasing disposition, and are magnanimous. Quiet and repose are not appreciated by you, and your decided preference is for excitment and change. You, however, have a keen sense of humor, and are generally well liked.

There is nothing that you will not do for a friend, and this quality ensures friends for you by the score. You are very affectionate, but are not likely to experience any one, great love in your life.

IRRIGATION

SOURCE OF THE MATERIALS USED IN THE BUILDING OF LAKE KEMP DAM.

The dam at Lake Kemp is about a mile and a half long. It is six hundred feet thick at the base and rises 100 feet above the bed of the Wichita river.

The upper face of the dam next to the water is covered with a layer of native lime rock about eighteen inches thick. This layer of rock called rip rap rests on a blanket of gravel.

There is a lot of concrete in the three spillways. The gate tower and the six big outlet conduits also contain many hundreds of cubic yards.

The earth, gravel, and rock which form the dam itself had to come from some place, and so did the sand and gravel which went into the concrete.

Most of the material came from the bed of the river where the big dredge picked it up and pumped it to the dam The rock for the rip-rap was quarried from the adjoining hills.

The contract between the irrigation district and Mr. Waggoner covers this matter of material supply. Part of paragraph 3 of section 3 governs this and reads as follows:

"The party of the first part (Mr. Waggoner), grants to the party of the second part (the irrigation district), the right to use from lands belonging to the party of the first part, within two miles of said storage dam, sand, gravel, and rock for the construction of said dam."

The district not only bought from Mr. Waggoner dam sites and reservoir sites but also many millions of cubic yards of constructiaon materials.

HOW IT STARTED

The First Book—The "Book of the Dead."

The products of the earliest scribes were known to have been made on slabs of brick or stone or planks of wood. These, however, do not fulfill the modern conception of books, in whose origin we find an interesting story, involving the history of the ancients and of literature.

The first known book, as we regard books today, is the Egyptian "Book of the Dead," a copy of which is in the British museum. The unique title names a collection of invocations to the deities, psalms, prayers and descriptions of experiences in the next world. Written on panvrii, the texts were placed in the coffins, frequently under the armpits of the mummies. Several copies of this "Book of the Dead" exist, some consisting of only a few chapters, others over a hundred feet in length.

Following the evolution of the modern book through its long history from the papyrus book, which was mounted like a map on a wooden roller, through parchment literature, the products of mediaeval monks, block-printed books and finally the products of the printing press, there is no stage in its history that holds the wealth of color and the stimulus to intellectual wanderings that is found in the very first book, the "Book of the Dead."

STORE NEAR WACO RAIDED

Eddy Concern Loses Merchandise of $2,000 Value.

WACO, July 28.—Burglars early this morning entered the dry goods store of T. A. Muckelroy and son at Eddy, 20 miles south of Waco, and made their getaway with merchandise of a value estimated between $1,000 and $2,000.

The yeggs were apparently not after money, as no effort was made to enter the safe. It is believed that several automobiles were used to carry the goods away, as entrance was secured through the front door.

The sheriff's office at Waco was notified and officers were sent to the scene of the robbery, but no clue was secured. The stolen merchandise consisted of shoes, shirts, yard goods and ready-made garments.

MAN DIES FROM ACID

Note Left Said He Was Tired of Living.

DALLAS, July 28—August Muller, 79, died last night from internal acid burns. He was found in a vacant lot, unconscious. A note said:

"I am tired of living and want to end it all." He had been ill for some time.

Ronald Corley jilts Enid Austin two days before their wedding and elopes with Coralie Brainerd. Three years later Enid marries Lucien Grant without loving him because she feels she has a right to be married. Of course, the situation is impossible and later Enid separates from Lucien without telling him that she is to have a child. In the meantime Ronald begins to find flaws in Coralie and once more becomes interested in Enid. Enid's little girl and when she returns to town her Zell, is born in a private sanitarium, friendship for Ronald is resumed. Later, when he tells her that he loves her, Enid pays the old score by laughing in his face. That very night Lucien, having seen Ronald and Enid lunching together, returns home. Enid threatens to leave and Lucien tells her she must do as she pleases, but that she cannot take the child with her. In the days that follow Enid finds Lucien changed. She cannot seem to combat his will and is forced to comply with his wishes. She finds it useless to struggle against him when he decides that they go away to the country.

Surely it wasn't because Nora had told her that Lucien had gone fishing and would be gone all day! That was ridiculous! Lucien's whereabouts meant nothing to her. If anything, she was glad that he had gone. She yould have the freedom of the camp for a long delicious day. And yet, because Enid was nearly always honest with herself she could not help admitting that Norah's remark had in some way marred the day for her.

Stubbornly she searched her mind for an explanation to this, and suddenly a wave of memory surged over her. Lucien's words long ago, when he had first suggested coming to Peter Burton's camp.

"We can tramp and fish together, and think of the nights, darling, out under the stars, the smell of pine everywhere and not a sound."

A stab of pain caught at her heart, and again the hot color flooded her cheeks. It was so amazing to feel emotion, she who had resolved never again to feel anything. It was incredible that she could feel so soft and warm inside, and so terribly defenseless, just as though certain barriers in her had suddenly been broken down utterly and entirely without her own violition.

Hurriedly, almost in a panic, she pushed back her chair and rose from the table. Without stopping for a hat she went out into the golden sunshine. A moment later she had set off on a narrow trail with pine needles. She wanted to get away from the house, to be alone somewhere where she could think.

As she hurried along chaotic thoughts were winging through her brain. Why should she remember what Lucien had said long ago? She cared nothing for Lucien, and yet if she did not care why should she feel this way. Searching wildly for an explanation, she seized desperately upon her pride. That was it! Her pride was hurt, because Lucien had once cared for her and was now entirely indifferent. She hated anyont to be indifferent toward her; it humiliated her to know that he was so unaware of her that he never deferred to her or consulted her wishes.

But this solution of the problem was not sufficient. It did not explain the hurt in her heart, as though she were sorry for for something. What had she to be sorry for; she had never done anything she regretted? And yet—and yet—the heaviness of her heart did not lift; she felt suddenly as if she wanted to cry, she, Enid, with her hard bright smile, her proud composure, wanted to cry. It seemed too absurd.

It was at this point in her thoughts that she deliberately faced the truth. She was sorry for something, she was sorry she had lost Lucien's love. And now that she had admitted that much, she suddenly saw her attitude of the last year in its true light, she saw her behavior toward Lucien as something monstrous. The wonder was that he had tolerated it as he had. She had not deserved consideration at his hands, it was no wonder that he had ended by despising her.

She felt her throat contract and the hot tears against her eyelids. A moment later she had flung herself down on the ground and was sobbing uncontrollably, and as she cried it seemed to her that all the bitterness of years was being washed away.

After a time she sat up and leaned her head against the trunk of a tree. She felt utterly depleted, and yet strangely at peace. It was the first time she had cried since Ronald Corley had jilted her.

CHAPTER L.

With the Coming of Night.

The leveling of Enid's pride, the realization of what she had done to Lucien, brought him before her vividly. She must have been mad to have hurt him as she had, mad with revenge and hurt pride, and now that it was too late for her to atone, now that she had lost his love forever, she knew the truth, she loved him.

Deliberately she set herself to remembering his lovemaking, his wild worship of her. He had laid his heart at her feet and she had trampled on it. She shuddered as she remembered her careless words, the way she had made him suffer. She would give anything in the world to be able to go to him with the truth, but she shrank from that because she was afraid he would pretend to love her out of pity. No, he would never care for her again. This was her punishment and she must bear it.

Nevertheless it was the eternal feminine in Enid that made her dress that night with a feeling she had never experienced before. She wanted to be beautiful, so that she might arouse some emotion in Lucien other than indifference, and it was with that thought in the back of her mind that she slipped into a dress of corn-colored silk, a smart sport model that had a soft yellow hat to match it.

She was in her bedroom when she heard him come into the house. Listening intently, she heard him go out to Norah in the kitchen and then his quick steps as he crossed the living room. She heard him splashing water in the bathroom, and the intimate little sound seemed to emphasize the barrier between them. With a weary droop to her slender shoulders she opened her bedroom door and went out into the living room beyond. Outside the shadows were falling, but within the room was filled with golden firelight. Norah was setting the small table before its ruddy glow, and there was a delicious smell of frying fish in the air.

Enid spoke first, and it seemed to Norah that there was a wistful note in her voice.

"Did Mr. Grant have a good catch, Norah?"

"Indeed and he did, ma'am, and it's not like some men he is, either, he stopped to clean them for me."

Enid laughed lightly, and after a moment's hesitation before the fire, went into the darkened room beyond for a glimpse of Zell. She was still there when she heard Lucien's bedroom door open, and she lingered where she was for the amazing reason that a sudden shyness had her in its grip. She was half afraid to meet him, and yet when a moment later she sauntered into the living room no one would have dreamed that she was other than perfectly poised.

He rose as she came forward. His back was to the fire, so that she could not see the expression of his face, and she felt her own burn as she said with an attempt at lightness:

"Norah tells me that you had a splendid catch."

"Yes," he said evenly, "I had a good day."

Enid dropped into a chair and reached for a book. There was a blur before his eyes as she leafed carelessly through the pages. If only he would talk to her on any subject at all, it would make things easier for her, and yet when she remembered the way she had treated him on his return to the apartment, she had pretended not to hear him enter a room, she knew that she was getting no more than her just deserts.

After what seemed an eternity Norah announced dinner, and Enid rose. Lucien held her chair for her; he was always punctiliously courteous, and tonight as he seated her, his fingers touched slightly the velvet flesh at the nape of her neck. She knew that he was unaware of the momentary contact, but her own heart leaped and the blood beat riotously in her temples. It bewildered her to realize that she cared like this for Lucien. This was a feeling that she had never experienced before. It made her long ago affection for Ronald Corley a bloodless, lukewarm thing, it roused in her a tempest of emotion that she had never known she could experience.

CHPTER LI

The Letter.

The days drifted by and to Enid each one seemed more intolerable than the last. Lucien never suggested that she accompany him on any of his expeditions, and so she spent the days alone. Sometimes she took walks by herself, but wandering around aimlessly was not much fun. She would have adored setting out with Lucien in the freshness of the early morning, a luncheon box in his knapsack, his fishing rods under his arm. She wondered what it would be like, a real cameradiere with him, and her heart ached when she realized that she had forfeited any hope of a reconciliation with him.

She wore her pretties clothes, but he never seemed to notice what she had on. His indifference stabbed her, but she was helpless against it. Sometimes she felt almost jealous of Zell because Lucien paid the child so much attention, and always the one thought kept reiterating itself in her brain.

"He would never tolerate me if it weren't for the baby."

And so it happened that proud Enid with her pride leveled to the ground, figured only in the background of her husband's life. Lucien never seemed to see her. Even when his eyes rested on her face it was as if he looked through her. He was as remote from her as she had once been remote from him.

A week passed and there came a day when the mail was brought over from the nearest town.

Enid was asleep when the postman arrived. She had taken to sleeping later and later so that her days would not seem so long, but Lucien, ready for another long day of his favorite sport, was standing on the porch as the postman drove his wheel around the corner of the house.

He threw the bundle of papers and magazines into a chair and leafed hurriedly through the letters. There were three for Enid, and he was about to carry them into the house when the handwriting of one attracted his attention. He tried to think where he had seen it before, and, then suddenly he remembered. It was a bold handwriting, the kind one would be apt to remember. Ronald Corley was writing to Enid!

When he left for his fishing trip he was shaken out of his usual calm. Why was Ronald writing to Enid? As he had held the letter in his hand, a wild temptation had come to him to rip it open, an impulse he had found difficult to restrain. And now the knowledge that it was lying beside Enid's plate waiting for her to open and peruse it filled him with jealous rage.

Back at the lodge Enid rose shortly after 11, bathed and dressed slowly. As she entered the dining room her eyes went immediately to the unexpected sight of mail lying beside her plate, and she took the letters up eagerly.

There was one from her mother, a bulky epistle that she put down to read later there was a note from Alica, announcing her engagement and the last was the letter from Ronald.

With fingers that trembled a little, Enid tore open the envelope and drew out the single sheet of paper. The next minute she was absorbed in what Ronald had written.

"Dear Enid:

"After making a clean breast of things to Coralie, I feel that I ought to write and tell you what a fool I have been. I thoroughly deserve the scorn you heaped upon me that day. I must have been temporarily deranged. Coralie was, and is, wonderful. She seems to understand the thing better than I do. I am only just beginning to realize how lucky I am to have her in my life, and I know you will be glad to hear this.

"Faithfully rours,
"RONALD."

MRS. CANADAY IS ARRESTED AS FUGITIVE

Kidnaping Case Breaks Out In Court Again With Action

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, July 28.—(AP)—The legal battle for possession of Roscoe Canaday, Jr., broke out afresh today when Mrs. Virginia Canaday, mother of the boy, was arrested on a fugitive warrant in connection with her indictment in New York on a charge of having kidnaped her child.

The warrant was issued in justice court on complaint of the county attorney and was served by a constable.

Mrs. Canaday had been notified by her counsel, Judge W. C. Linden, that she was wanted on the fugitive warrant and she went to the constable's office to accept service, accompanied by her lawyer.

Negotiations then were opened with a view to securing bail for her. The law provides that a prisoner may be held on bail for thirty days following service on a fugitive wrrant after which it is void.

New York authorities therefore must secure extradition prior to the expiration of this period.

The arrest was not unexpected as Judge Linden notified officials here early last week that in the event his client was wanted he would produce her within a few hours.

Since then Mrs. Canaday and her children have been visiting on a ranch near San Antonio.

Wfie Says Family Gave Man Auto To Leave Her, Sues

HOUSTON, July 28.—Suit for $75,000 damages for alienation of affections was filed in district court here today by Mrs. Margaret Stureman Myer and her mother, Mrs. J. Stureman both of Chicago, against Sterling Myer, Houston attorney, and his wife.

The suit reveals a secret marriage in 1921 between Sterling, Jr., the young son of the Myers, then a student at Yale university to Miss Sture[illegible] at Battle Creek, Mich., where the Myer family were spending a vacation, and asserts that subsequently the young husband in 1922 refused to live with her. Mrs. Myer and her mother declared in their petition that the separation was brought about by the parents of the young husband who, the document recites, offered to double his allowance, give him a car and send him to a school of his own selection if he would disown his wife.

The Myers are prominent in Houston society.

Whiskey Bath Is Latest Thing For Keeping One Clean

SAN ANTONIO, July 28.—It remained for five Italian children to reach that "seventh heaven" of which all lovers of alcoholic beverages dream.

To bathe in whiskey two times a week—that was the happy experience of the little Italians.

General prohibition agents who raided an Italian's farm in south Texas were amazed to find 253 gallons of whiskey thereon. The farmer admitted the whiskey belonged to him, but vehemently denied he had it for sale.

"It is for my children," he said, indicating five chubby little tots. "You see they are healthy and sturdy and strong.

"Every week, two times I bathe them in the whiskey. It makes them grow and keeps the germs of disease away."

MRS. BARRYMORE DISAPPOINT

Actor's Wife Misses Rehearsals and Refuses to Act.

SALEM, Mass., July 28.—(Mrs. John Barrymore as a novelist known as Michael Strange, disappointed a fashionable North Shore audience last night which ha dcrowded the Empire theater to see her take her first leading part on a stage. She was billed as one of the leading characters in Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest."

Stating that she had missed two rehearsals last week because of illness, Mrs. Barrymore informed the management just before the performance that she would be unable to appear. The performance was delayed more than an hour, during which a majority of the audience left, before Mrs. Barrymore consented to act in a "dress rehearsal" of the play. She made use of the prompter frequently.

AUSTIN, July 28.—(AP)—More arrests for drunkenness have been made by Austin police the past 18 months than ever before since the prohibition amendment went into effect, Chief of Jolice J. N. Littlepage said Tuesday. No reason for the increasing number of drunkenness cases can be given by police officials, but all agree that drinking in the city is steadily increasing.

Two Boys and Man Discovered Dead

NEW HAVEN, Conn., July 28.—Two boys and a man were found dead in a room at the Flanagan hotel here today after a door had been broken down to gain entrance to the room which they had occupied since Sunday. They were last seen Monday night when the man went to a nearby store to buy food.

The man registered as Mike Sepnczupa of Providence.

The boys were about seven and 12 years old. Their bodies were lying on the bed fully clothed. The man's body was on the floor, doubled up as if he had suffered convulsions.

Three glasses which had contained ginger ale were found in the room.

WASHINGTON'S MONKEY CASE CARRIED OVER

Hearing in Supreme Court Is Postponed Until Friday

WASHINGTON, July 28.—(AP)—Argument in the Washington evolution case, begun at the instance of Justice Siddons in the District of Columbia supreme court, was halted today with dramatic suddenness and the hearing of the whole cause put over until Friday.

Counsel for the federal government was addressing himself to the question of whether the plaintiff, Loren H. Wittner, an employe of the treasury had a legal standing in court as a federal tax payer when Crandall H. Mackay, counsel for Wittner, insisted on the legal right of his client to have two days in which to prepare an address to the motions filed by the defense.

Previously, B. H. Delby, one of Wittner's counsel after a colloquy with the court, had agreed to proceed to a hearing on what Justice Siddons described as the "threshold," the question of Wittner's right to maintain his suit.

J. N. Tvorsteed, the second of the original counsel for the government employes announced he also insisted on the legal right of his client and Justice Siddons then postponed the hearing.

ENGINEERS IN PROTEST OVER THEIR WAGES

New Body Says Dignity Of Jobs Not Upheld At Present Time

NEW YORK, July 28.—(AP)—An important corps in New York's great white collar working army today raised the standard of revolt.

The municipal engineers, 3,500 strong and representing the largest single aggregation of their profession in the world, outside of military establishments, completed an organization which has for its object improvements of salary and working conditions "comparable with the dignity, training and responsibility of the position."

The movement has aroused interest among other professions whose members, despite years of preparation, receive less compensation than the recently arrived immigrant "engineer of a compressed air driller or a brick hod."

The Association of Engineers of New York formed a large meeting, represented every city department, approved the re-submittal to the city authorities of their demands for a flat increase of 25 per cent in salaries and for amelioration of working conditions.

The engineers have received offers of support from members of the profession in other cities.

The conditions under attack are declared to be general throughout the country.

Illness Fatal To U. S. Ambassador

TOKYO, July 28.—(AP).—Edgar Addison Bancroft, American ambassador to Japan, died Wednesday morning at Karuizawa.

Ambassador Bancroft was taken ill at Karuizawa, a popular mountain resort in central Japan, where he was spending the summer, about three weeks ago. At first it was thought he was suffering from indigestion, but his trouble later was diagnosed as a small duodenal ulcer.

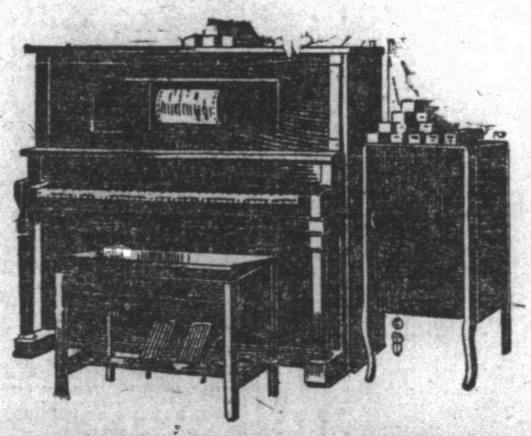

IF SICK, BILIOUS! START YOUR LIVER

Don't Take Calomel! "Dodson's Liver Tone" Acts Better and Doesn't Gripe, Salivate or Make You Sick—Don't Lose a Day's Work—Read Guarantee!

Ugh! Calomel makes you sick. It's horrible! Take a dose of the dangerous drug tonight and tomorrow you may lose a day's work.

Calomel is mercury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel, when it comes into contact with sour bile crashes into it, breaking it up. This is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you are sluggish and "all knocked out," if your liver is torpid and bowels constipated or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour, just try a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone tonight.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous I want you to go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroying the sale of calomel because it is real liver medicine; entirely vegetable, therefore it can not salivate or make you sick.

DAYTON

was Bryan, the clean-voiced herald of religious fundamentalism who received the last rites here today. Thursday and Friday in Washington, his countrymen will pay high honor to the democratic chieftian, presidential candidate and former secretary of state. In Arlington cemetery then the well-loved leader, colonel of volunteers in the war with Spain, will be laid to enduring rest among military heroes of the nation.

Tonight the widow—embodied of amazing fortitude in time of mighty sorrow—from her rolling chair was preparing her household for the departure tomorrow toward the country's capital. The special car for the funeral party arrived in Dayton late today. In the morning at 8:40 o'clock it will leave for Chattanooga, whence after an interval in which the public will view the body the dead leader and his escort will go to Washington. The journey will be all the way over Southern Railway lines on a schedule train which should cross the Potomac shortly before 7:30 o'clock Thursday morning.

Many With Him.

In the party, besides Mrs. Bryan and Mrs. Ruth Owen, the Commoner's daughter, and her husband, Major Reginald Owen, of the British army, are Col. P. S. Callahan, Louisville; William E. Thompson, secretary to Mr. Bryan; Wallace Haggard, Dayton lawyer and friend of the Bryan family; Mrs. O. C. Stevens, housekeeper and William H. McCartney, chauffeur for the Bryan family.

Funeral arrangements at Washington had not been definitely fixed tonight.

CONSOLIDATIONS POPULAR

Premium for Districts Starts New Movement.

AUSTIN, July 28.—(AP).—Consolidation of schools in Texas is becoming more popular since the rural aid law, which offers a premium of $1,000 for any consolidated school district, where the merger has been affected in the past two years, has been in effect, says a statement from the state department of education. Not an opposing vote was cast against the consolidation of two districts in Parker county in a recent election which effected 130 children, it was said.

DALLAS CUTS WHEELER JINX VERY QUICKLY

Each Club Wallops Dozen Hits, But Herd's Do Counting

DALLAS, July 28. — Shuman pitched shutout ball today but errors allowed Wichita Falls to score the final count being Dallas 7, Wichita Falls 4. Rip Wheeler was knocked out of the box in the first, Miller starred with a home run and great fielding. O'Brien also did spectacular work in center field.

This game broke up the jinx Wheeler has held over the Steers for three seasons. The jinx was broken when the Ripper met with an outburst of base hits off the Dallas bats in the first inning. Robert Osborn was sent to the rescue, but the damage had been done. Osborn was hit hard in the fourth and fifth innings.

Bauman opened the attack on Wheeler with a double. Turkey Gross sent him over the pan with a single to center. Williams doubled, and Miller scored both with a single.

The Spudders scored in the third frame. Dorman walked. Jonnard flied out to center. Osborn forced Dorman at second. Distel singled, sending Osborn to second. Callaghan doubled to left scoring Osborn.

Miller singled to center to start the Dallas fourth, stole second, took third on a fly to right, and scored on Hungling's single. Singles by Shuman and Bauman sent Hungling over the pan. William's single, and Miller's home run over the left field fence scored two more in the fifth for Dallas.

Callaghan's single, a walk, an infield out, and an error scored the first two for the Spudders in the eighth. Golvin singled and Turgeon scored for the final spud tally.

Shadie's the backbone of the Texhoma infield, many will tell you. And he's always dangerous with the bludgeon.

NEW YORK 10; CHICAGO 3.

CHICAGO, July 28.—(AP)—Five home run smashes by the Giants gave the champions an easy victory over Chicago today, 10 to 3, in the first game of the series. Jack Bentley allowed the locals only five scattered hits and never was in great danger as his team mates played great ball behind him. Meusel collected two of the four baggers, while Lindstrom and Gowdy hit their homers consecutively in the sixth. Bentley got his four base smash with two on in the seventh. Meusel's first homer was made in the first inning with one man on and the other in the eighth. Score:

The Passing Hour

VAGABONDIA

THE road lies white before me—
The long, long trail before—
I hear the wide world calling
And I shall turn no more;
My gypsy feet are straying
To far, far lands that call,
And if my heart is tugging,
I shall not turn at all.

Oh gypsy feet that take me
So far on restless quest—
You will not lead to firesides
Where I may take my rest.
I own that you're the masters—
It is your road I've ta'en—
But though you turn that way no more,
My heart is home again!

BETWEEN 1900 and 1925, the college population of the United States increased 470,000. This is the first information that there were 39,090 new football teams in the period.

HARD WORK secret of Helen Wills' success. This goes for all stars except left handed pitchers and offensive half-backs.

He Sized It Right.

YESTERDAY a few words of tribute were paid to the managerial genius of Connie Mack. But here is a story the Athletics' scout tells of one of those dark years in the last ten.

A young pitcher who looked good that year failed to show up at the ball yard. Mack sent the scout, Brennan, to look for him. Brennan knew his lairs and left word for the recalcitrant heaver where to meet him. The meeting took place and Brennan sat down to convince the young man of the error of his ways.

"Look here," he said, "you have a great future in this game. You are a real pitcher. You can win a lot of games. You report back to the club and when you get to going right, you will make a lot of money."

The young pitcher said nothing at all. But finally as Brennan, awed by his stony silence, arose to depart, he called after the scout:

"How are you going to win the American league pennant with a semi-pro ball club?"

WESTWARD the star of male tennis empire took his course a few years back and the sports pages were full of reams and reams of copy about the why and where-fore. There was one millionaire out there, if memory serves aright, who was largely responsible by devoting considerable money to good courts on which Kalifornia Kids learned the game.

First there was Maurice MacLoughlin—then there was Bill Johnston in turn to become champions. But of late years not only the champion. Large Bill Tilden, but a considerable section of the ranking players of the country seem to hail from the effete east, and some of the most promising contenders carry the southwest and midwest label.

Johnston is still a prominent figure at the national championship and a finalist if his path to the last match does not happen to fall althwart the orbit of Tilden. But most court critics are united in the belief that Little Bill has passed the peak.

PSYCHOLOGY expected to win the Conference title for the Longhorns. Another name for Leo Baldwin Rufus King and Mack Saxon?

They Should Go Good.

JINX TUCKER quotes Frank Bridges as estimating Baylor's place in the Conference campaign next fall about sixth. Frank of course knows better—that is just a habit.

There is every reason to suppose that Baylor should have a far better year in 1925 than in 1924 for the difficulties that confronted Bridges then do not exist now. In other words, where in 1924, he had a fine assortment of raw material from which to develop a new team, this fall, he returns the big majority of his squad, with a year's training behind it.

Baylor did not have a great year in 1924 except in the Conference but in winning the Conference title the coaching staff deserved exceptional praise, for they did it with a green and untried team. From this point of view, they had the best team in the Conference.

They deserved more credit than Morrison and Freeland at SMU. That is not said in disparagement of the Mustangs' greater season record, for that would be unjust to the fine play of the red and blue machine built around Reisor, Stollenwerck, King, Bedford, and McIntosh. But the point remains that SMU'S "immortal eleven" made up a three four-year veteran machine that should have been at the crest in 1925—where Bridges' raw and undisciplined youngsters were new in the making.

SMU could have been expected to have a great year. Baylor was not.

But from the same viewpoint, it is the Bear machine that goes in this year with the weight of tradition and achievement behind it. It is Ray Morrison at SMU and Doc Stewart at Austin that must put new clubs in the field.

TRYOUTS will be held August 3 to select Bill Tilden, Bill Johnston and Vincent Richards for the Davis cup team.

OTHER tennis players in that tryout week ought to draw pay as supers.

Johnston and Kinsey Defeated

SEABRIGHT, N. J., July 28—(AP)—William M. Johnston and Howard O. Kinsey of California third and fourth in national tennis ranking, met defeat in the second round of the annual Seabright bowl tournament today, Johnston at the hands of Dr. George King of New York 7-9, 6-0, 7-5, and Kinsey in his match with Alfred H. Chapin, Jr., of Springfield, Mass., 6-3, 6-4. Kinsey won the bowl last year.

It was a ruff day for the Kinsey family all around Robert G. Kinsey falling a victim to the accurate stroking of R. Norris Williams II of Philadelphia, 11-9, 6-1.

Playing as doubles team in the morning, the Kinseys were all but beaten by a young college combination composed of Arnold Jones and W. W. Ingraham of Providence, R. I., captains, respectively, of Yale and Harvard tennis teams. When within a point of the match victory the collegians defaulted owing to an engagement at Newport, R. I., Friday and Saturday, rather than eliminat the Kinseys, holders of the national doubles title, and then default later in the week.

NEW YORK, July 28.—(AP)—One old right hander proved better than two young left handers today and New York defeated St. Louis 6 to 2. Shawkey was more effective than Wingard and Falk, the latter going to the mound in the seventh. Ruth hit into the bleachers for his eleventh home run of the year in the seventh with Paschal on base and he drove in a run in the opending round with a single. He scored himself three times, being forced in by Wingard's wildness in the third. The Babe put a climax to the game by picking Hargrave's foul out of a pavillion box for the final out. Score:

CHRISTIANS GOT HOSTILE.

The First Christians are clamoring for second place in the last half race and see the way ahead of them. They have a postponed game ahead of them and hope to capture this. The game is with the Grace Methodist, who now holds second place by a mere half game. If the Grace Methodist do not play this off it is likely that McDermitt will claim a forfeit, and thus gain second place.

WOMAN IDENTIFIES NEGRO

Black Made Her Take Off Shoes and Then Chased Her.

SAN ANTONIO, July 28.—Miss Catherine Smith, victim of a negro holdup who made her remove her shoes and stockings and who then pursued her throughout the night in the St. Hedwig section Sunday night, has identified the bandit.

Two negroes had been arrested by deputy sheriffs and police officers under suspicion of having held up Miss Smith and her escort, Louis Bressitte.

Miss Smith was taken to the police station Tuesday and shown both suspects. She quickly pointed to the negro who she alleges chased her through the brush causing her to receive so many gashes from thorns and rocks that she was forced to take hospital treatment.

WANT MORE RIVER GUAGES.

Requests of Brownsville C. of C. Denied.

SAN ANTONIO, July 28.—Requests by the Brownsville chamber of commerce for additional river guages along the Rio Grande river, has been denied, according to a letter from J. H. Jarboe, in charge of the San Antonio weather bureau district, to Fred Herndon, publicity director of the local chamber.

Residents of the valley had sought additional guages in order that flood menaces could be established many hours ahead of danger.

Mr. Jarboe pointed out that he could not recommend the additional service as the added cost would not be commensurate with the need.

It was the president's conviction that while some of the criticism of the trade commission is perhaps justified, it is performing a difficult task as the policeman of business and on the whole is performing a useful service to the public.

Kizzair Slams Home Run With All Three Bags Populated

By MACK TURNER.

"No Hit" McDuffy held the Grace Methodists to five safeties and three runs, while Bill Andree was wild and the First Methodists took the first of a best two out of three game Sunday school title series, 11 to 3, today.

Hood Kizziar was the big cog in the First Methodist offense with a double and a home run in four tries. Kizziar started the second inning rampage with a scorching double down the third base line. In the seventh he poled a home run with the bases loaded. He scored two runs himself and drove in three. Kizziar also starred in the field with a great catch of Glenn Coolidge's pop fly back of first.

The Grace Methodists scored one in the last of the first. Windham struck out. Dick Gordon singled to left and went on to second when the ball got by McMahon. Kizziar made a nice catch of Coolidge's fly back of first, and heaved a good throw from a difficult position, but Gordon reached third. Glidewell was hit with a pitched ball. Whatley singled to center scoring Gordon.

Win in Second.

The First eMthodists iced the game in the second frame. Kizziar led off with a double down the third base line. After this and until the seventh both clubs played bang up ball and many good plays fere uncorked. In the fourth Cannon saved McDuffy fith a great catch of Skeen's drive to right and doubled Blue off first.

Hood's Homer.

The Grace Methodists threatened to score big in the sixth when young McDuffy had a streak of wildness. Coolidge was safe when Freddie Boone booted his grounder at first. Glidewell singled off Taylor's shins. Whatley walked filling the bases. Haney walked, forcing in Coolidge. Blue hit to Taylor, who threw to the plate for Glidewell, but Doke dropped his throw and Glidewell was safe. Skeen drew a life when Doke dropped his pop foul, but latter struck out. Andree struck out, and Windham forced Blue at second.

Walks to Taylor, Cannon and Rawls filled the bases in the seventh for the First Methodists. Kizziar slammed a home run to deep left scoring Taylor, Cannon and Rawls ahead of him. F. Boone walked, stole second and scored on Windham's low throw to first of Doke's grounder.

More Truth Than Poetry

SALVAGE

I do not want a fortune wrung from market or from mill,
Which takes a life of bitter toil to earn;
I do not want to labor at a dingy desk until
My spirit has departed past return.
I want no rich relation to bequeath me boundless wealth;
Nor to find a mine whose richness is untold,
I want to salvage a cargo,
An old and sunken cargo,
A seawood-covered cargo,
Of hard, red gold.

That winning of wealth is easy if one gives his mind to it
And thinks of nothing else but sordid gain,
While yonder happy hours with their golden sunshine flit—
Perhaps is true, but such a task is vain.
I long for endless treasure, but I'd like to have it now,
To find amid some shell-encrusted hold,
An ancient Spanish cargo,
Some brutal pirate's cargo,
A sweet, salt smelling cargo,
Of hard, red gold.

What use to have a fortune if it's bitter hard to build,
And one grows weak and weary with the years?
What use to pile up dollars if existence must be filled
With black distrust, and even blacker fears?
If joy in the winning, it is worth the while to win
In youth, before the grave looms dark and cold;
I want to salvage a cargo,
An ocean buried cargo,
A glorious shining cargo—
Of hard, red gold.

The bout started fast but White soon proved his superiority and had Rich badly beaten from the first. At the fourth gong Rich was bothered by a closed right eye.

City Buys Gas In Carload Lot

The city went into the gasoline business on a carload basis Tuesday when it bought its first consignment—8,000 gallons—in a carload lot from a local refinery.

In the past all gasoline has been purchased on the tank wagon basis, but in view of the large and ever-increasing need of gas for trucks, tractors and automobiles engaged in municipal work, it was decided to buy on a larger scale.

An estimated saving of $2,500 a year will be made on the 50,000 or more gallons the city uses, it is said.

Paving Work On City Progressing Slow But Steady

Paving work in the city is progressing steadily, although somewhat slowly. Actual laying of hard surfaces is held up in many instances through inability of the city to do the grading, but this work is being put through as rapidly as possible. The vast amount of new paving ordered by property owners has piled up the preliminary work to such an extent that the street department is virtually snowed under.

The Plains Paving company was laying asphalt Tuesday on Avenue F between Grant and Buchanan streets, while L. E. Whitham and company are pouring concrete on Tilden street between Avenue I and Ozark.

Southwestern Roads Show Bigger Profits

DALLAS, July 28.—Southwestern railroads earned over $4,850,000 more in net operating income the first months of 1925 than for the same period last year, it was indicated today on receipt of figures here from the bureau of railway economies at Wasrington.

Operating income of the Santa Fe, the Fort Worth and Denver and the Southern Pacific lines are not included in the figures for the southwest, these roads being grouped with reports which place them among central western systems.

The increased earnings is attributed to inbound tonnage, merchandise to be distributed over the territory, heavy building programs, and an increasing outbound movement of Texas products, such as winter vegetables, lumber and other raw products.

Rain Denied County Second Day Though Clouds Give Hopes

For the second successive day heavy clouds hung over Wichita County and vicinity, and for the second day rain was denied, though the general prayer was for rain.

No town over the entire territory reported even a light shower. Burkburnett, Granufield and Frederick reported the lightest of light sprinkles about 10 o'clock and were hoping for more, but nothing materialized. The Denver road stated that not a drop had fallen either to the south or north. The Katy reported the same thing in regard to the east and north. The Southern dispatcher failed to find rain anywhere on the line, though clouds were reported in abundance. The telephone company found but three places that had even found anything to encourage their hopes for a precipitation.

Wichita Falls received several drops shortly after 10 o'clock as her portion from the dark clouds that hung over the city. Nothnig materialized in any direction however.

tory on the coast, from which point the line of products will be merchandised and advertised over the entire country. Plans as all set for the initial merchandising effort in Texas and California and Mr. Goodner plas to leave with his family about the middle of August to assume his duties as head of the new company.

Mr. Goodner, who has been actively at the head of the Goodner Wholesale Grocer company, has been prominent in civic life and activities in this city. He is a member of the board of directors of the chamber of commerce, an active worker in the Central Presbyterian church and a member of the school board. Recently he inaugurated a change in distributing merchandise varying from the old form of the wholesale grocer and changing into the specialist distributor. This change has been highly successful and has been watched by manufacturers over the country as a new departure in merchandising.

To Return Frequently.

Mr. Goodner will continue as head of the Goodner Grocer company although an active manager has not yet been appointed. He expects to return here frequently to look after his interests.

The financing and enlargement of the O-U-Dust company marks an important phase in the history of the product. Many expert manufacturers who have examined the line, advertising agencies and sales organizations have been loud in the praised of the merits of the line. Its removal to California marks the beginning of a nation-wide distribution and manufacture on a large scale and if preliminary predictions may be taken as an indication, then it is but a short time until the fame of O-U-Dust mops and polishes has spread to every city in the country.

"HOW BAXTER BUTTED IN"

Olympic Feature Begining Today Is Best of Kind

Matt Moore takes the leading role in the comedy-drama "How Baxter Butted In," beginning at the Olympic today and showing through Friday. The above is a cartoonist's conception of a scene from the film.

"How Baxter Butter In," the new Warner classic of the screen that will be the feature attraction at the Olympic theatre beginning today, is a droll comedy of a shy young man who becomes involved in the drama of love, intrigue and the struggle for existence.

Matt Moore and Dorothy Devore have been chosen by Warner Bros. to enact the leading roles of Henry Baxter and Beulah Dyer, both members of the "want ad" department of a rapidly declining newspaper. Henry Baxter is an abnormally diffident and retiring chap, who lives a grand and glorious existence in his day-dreams rather than in real life. He loves Beulah, but is too overcome by his own inferiority to declare himself to her, until circumstances saddle him with the care and expense of his brother's wife and two children, which crushes Henry's last tiny bit of confidence and finally breaks down his health. When he recovers and is able to face the world again, he finds himself a hero of the wide-flung fame, with Beulah his adoring slave.

Warner Bros. have been particularly wise in their choice of directorial talent for "How Baxter Butted In," and have entrusted the whimsical comedy to William Beaudine, the director who has become famous for his ability to visualize the laughable side of life in its relation to drama. The story was adapted for the screen by Julien Josephson from "Stuff of Heries," by Harold Titus.

GRAND JURY TO BE AT WORK AGAIN FRIDAY

Will Take up Probe Of Swayzee's Death Saturday Morning

Acting on the request of District Attorney Ben P. Allred, Judge Vincent Stine of the 30th district court Tuesday morning ordered the grand jury to reconvene next Friday morning for an investigation into the death of J. E. Swazee, dairyman who was shot and instantly killed early Sunday morning. J. L. Marshal, foreman of the city incenerator, is under a formal charge of murder and bond of $5,000 in connection with the shooting.

The district attorney asserted he would order a full inquiry into all the causes leading up to the shooting and that he would ask the grand jury to act accordingly.

Swayzee was killed following an argument over some cattle which, Marshall alleged, had strayed into his cotton patch and caused heavy damage.
