Bodyguard charged with Gandhi's murder

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — One of the late Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's bodyguards has been charged with murdering her, and two other Sikhs have been charged with criminal conspiracy in her Oct. 31 assassination, according to court documents.

A police report filed with the High Court on Monday said two Sikhs, including one of Mrs. Gandhi's bodyguards who was killed immediately after the assassination, had agreed that a falcon they saw in a tree last September brought "a message of the 10th guru of the Sikhs (Gobind Singh) to avenge" the Indian army's attack on a Sikh holy place.

The report made no mention of a foreign conspiracy against Mrs.

Gandhi, which had been rumored following her death.

The three suspects were sent to jail today to await trial. All three could receive the death penalty if convicted.

Documents filed with the High Court alleged that Satwant Singh and another bodyguard, Beant Singh, killed Mrs. Gandhi. Beant Singh was killed by other bodyguards.

The charge sheet alleged Beant Singh fired five rounds from his revolver and Satwant Singh fired 25 shots from a carbine as Mrs. Gandhi approached the gate of her residential compound for a television interview. Mrs. Gandhi fell on the pathway and was pronounced dead at a hospital, it said.

It quoted an autopsy report as saying Mrs. Gandhi died from "hemorrhage and shock due to multiple firearm bullet injuries which were sufficient to cause death in the ordinary course of nature."

Satwant Singh was charged with murder and criminal conspiracy. Two other Sikhs, Balbir Singh and Kehar Singh, were charged with criminal conspiracy.

Kehar Singh, Beant Singh's uncle, allegedly took his nephew to the Golden Temple in Amritsar, the Sikh religious shrine, to take an oath to assassinate Mrs. Gandhi.

Balbir Singh, a subinspector in the New Delhi police force, was arrested after Satwant Singh told interrogators he had joined in the conspiracy, officials said. The police report said it was Balbir Singh and Beant Singh who saw the hawk in the tree as a sign to kill Mrs. Gandhi.

Police documents said the two bodyguards surrendered "after the crime" and put down their weapons, but that other guards opened fire, killing Beant Singh and wounding Satwant Singh, who is now partially paralyzed. It did not say why the other officers opened fire.

Mrs. Gandhi, who governed India for 15 years, ordered an army assault on the Golden Temple in a move to end a four-year-old wave of Sikh terrorism.

Sikh militants demanding greater religious and political autonomy for Punjab had been responsible for bloody attacks in the state for months before the temple assault. The government said the attack was necessary because the militants were using the temple as a refuge and arsenal.

The government said nearly 600 people were killed in the battle for the temple complex, but unofficial sources placed the death toll at about 1,000 Sikhs and 200 soldiers.

India's 13 million Sikhs form a majority in Punjab, but a minority in the rest of predominantly Hindu India. The Sikhs' main political party today demanded a restoration of civil rights in Punjab.

The Akali Dal party demanded the release of all imprisoned party leaders, and it said "thousands of innocent Sikh youths" had been jailed in the army-controlled territory on suspicion of being extremists.

The party executive committee also demanded the repeal of laws which set up special courts for suspected extremists and shift the burden of proof from the prosecution to the defense.

Party leaders said they would not open negotiations with the government of Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, Indira Gandhi's son, on a resolution of the Punjab crisis until civil liberties were restored.

Bunton: Prosecution's case 'slipshod, shoddy'

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

Judge Lucius Bunton criticized the government's investigation as "slipshod and shoddy," but denied this morning's defense motions to dismiss the O'Michael Building arson case because federal prosecutors failed to release all the documents he had ordered.

Noting that several FBI documents had not been released to them, attorneys for Ector County Commissioner William Hammond Jr. and former Odessa City Councilman Keith Weddel called for the indictments to be dismissed because of prosecutorial misconduct.

After denying the motions, Bunton firmly instructed U.S. Attorney Ellen Byers and FBI agent Billy Kirkwood to release all documents he had ruled should be given to the defense.

"That is a slipshod, shoddy way to handle a case," Bunton told Ms. Byers. "We're not going to ambush anyone in this court."

Ms. Byers said she had not been aware of a June 1982 statement before this morning. "You should have known it was there," said Bunton.

The statement, which was read into the court record by Weddel's attorney, had John Thomas Peterson denying any involvement in burning the building and absolving Weddel and former Odessa Mayor Bob Bryant of blame.

After the discussion on releasing the documents, Bunton adjourned the trial until 1 p.m. today.

In testimony Monday before a jury in Midland federal court, Peterson said he, Hammond and Weddel were involved in the November 1981 burning of the building.

Earlier this morning, Shelton and Hammond's attorney, Warren Burnett, moved again for mistrial. Shelton also asked that Weddel's case be separated from Hammond's because of Peterson's testimony regarding the presence of marijuana during one meeting about the arson not involving Weddel.

Peterson, a federal witness under government protection, attempted to trace the string of events leading to the burning of the building during proceedings Monday in the trial of the two well-known Odessans.

Peterson, 45, told jurors that Hammond, 44, approached him about burning the O'Michael Building in October 1981 and originally planned to participate in the arson.

Weddel, 53, also met with Peterson and Hammond, according to the witness, to set up the arson of the downtown office building. During this meeting, the former councilman said, "It's about time to collect some insurance," said Peterson.

Hammond and Weddel are on trial for planning and aiding in the burning of the building on Nov. 25, 1981. Ms. Byers told the jury Monday she planned to show that Weddel wanted the building burned because of failed speculation it would be the site of a civic center following his purchasing an interest in July 1980.

Hammond — who owned no interest in the building — participated in the conspiracy because he needed money to pay creditors, according to Ms. Byers.

Attorneys for Hammond and Weddel first moved for a mistrial Monday afternoon after Peterson continually provided information not related to questions asked by the federal prosecutor and mentioned other illegal activities not related to the case on trial.

After denying the motion, Judge Lucius Bunton warned Peterson to stop volunteering information. Before adjourning court, he ordered Peterson to meet with the U.S. attorneys for a briefing, so his testimony today would not repeat the same errors.

"Me and him were supposed to burn the building," said Peterson. "Willie kind of wiggled out of it." Peterson also testified to convincing his younger brother to take his place.

According to the September 1984 indictment, Lawrence "Cotton" Peterson of Odessa and L.C. Burditt of Midland actually set the fire which partially destroyed the building. Testimony indicated the insurance claim was settled for about $150,000 in a civil lawsuit.

"We were just like brothers," Peterson said of Hammond, who faces up to 25 years in prison and a $40,000 fine if convicted of conspiring and aiding in the destruction of the building and of lying twice during depositions taken in the civil case.

Officials say states could lose $97 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — State officials, charging that President Reagan's proposed budget imposes a disproportionate share of spending cuts on state programs, say local and state governments could lose $97 billion over the next five years.

States might have to raise taxes as much as 5 percent to replace the lost revenues, the officials said Monday while disputing Reagan's assertion that the budget "freezes" federal spending in fiscal 1986.

"This budget is not a freeze of state and local aid — it contains substantial cuts," said Kansas Gov. John Carlin, who is a Democrat and chairman of the National Governors Association.

Joining Carlin in the budget attack was John T. Bragg of Tennessee, chairman of the National Conference of State Legislators.

"The state/local sector is again being asked to assume a disproportionate share of budget cuts compared to other sectors of the federal budget," Bragg said. "For state governments to assume all the responsibility for these reductions would require a state tax hike of approximately five percent."

The two officials made their comments as they released a joint study by the two associations on the impact of the Reagan budget on states.

"The administration's budget changes national priorities," the study said. "Defense spending is proposed to increase by $32 billion or 13 percent. Social Security payments are allowed to grow by $11 billion to reflect a cost-of-living increase."

"To hold total spending constant, decreases of $39 billion in other domestic programs are required."

The study forecast that by 1990, state and local governments would lose $97 billion in federal aid in areas ranging from the block grants in Federal Revenue Sharing that the president wants to eliminate to Medicaid, mass transit and housing, plus money for health, nutrition and education.

Midland's sales tax rebate check for February higher than 1983

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

Midlanders defied the Law of Reality that hit the rest of the state in December and spent more money than they did the previous year, according to sales tax rebate figures released by the State Comptroller's Office.

Odessa, however, followed the trend in Texas and that city's rebate came in only slightly higher than the year before.

Midland's rebate check was made out for $1,106,749.28 compared to the $1,001,890.15 received a year ago. For the calendar year to date, Midland has received $1,657,671.93, or 16.5 percent above last year's tally of $1,422,800.20.

Odessa's check amounted to $935,616.09, which was about $6,000 more than the $929,294.81 deposited for the same month in 1983. For the year to date, Odessa has received $1,447,941.83, which is 3.51 percent above $1,398,563.97.

The February checks represent taxes collected on sales made in December and the fourth quarter and reported to the comptroller by Jan. 20.

Task force to study jail issues

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

An 11-member task force to probe into Midland County Jail issues has been formed by the Midland Chamber of Commerce's board of directors.

The task force is to consider merits of a new jail, the renovation of the existing jail, which was built in 1974, and other alternatives.

"The committee is not restricted to the alternatives it can explore," Wayne Merritt, task force chairman, said today. Merritt is chairman of the board of United Bank and is a member of the chamber's board of directors.

Named to the task force were Merritt; Midland County Commissioners C. Wallace "Wally" Craig and Durward Wright; Jumper Davis of Texas Electric Service Co.; Howard D. "Rocky" Ford of Rocky Ford Moving Vans Inc.; Roger Robles of New York Life Insurance Co.; Bill Williams of Bill Williams Tire Center; Margaret Purvis, Betty Sumner, and lawyers John Hyde and Charles "Bro" Seltzer. Sheriff Gary Painter will serve in an advisory capacity as an ex-officio member of the task force. David Kling, executive vice president of RepublicBank First National Midland and an ex-officio member of the task force, will provide staff resources and assistance to the study group.

Merritt cited the task force's guidelines developed by the chamber's Executive Committee:

Balloonist had 'sense of indestructibility'

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — History-making adventurer Ben Abruzzo, who dreamed of flying around the world in a balloon as a modern-day Phileas Fogg, had a fearless sense of indestructibility right up to his death, a fellow balloonist said.

"He came close to death many times when I was flying with him," said Ron Clark, 44, who with Abruzzo and two other men became the first to cross the Pacific Ocean in a balloon in 1981. "I always felt that he had nine lives."

Ben Abruzzo

Abruzzo, 54, and his wife Pat, 52, died Monday in the fiery crash of a twin-engine Cessna 421 that sheared treetops as it cleared a mobile home park, bounced across Interstate 25 and landed in an open field.

Also killed in Monday's crash were Beverly Mullin, 47; Barbara Quant, 55; Cynthia Miller, 50; and Marsha Martin, 54.

Abruzzo was piloting the group to Aspen, Colo., for a ski vacation when the accident occurred, said Albuquerque police Sgt. Roy Manfredi.

"He always was an adventurer. I don't think he ever had any fear of death or dying," said Clark.

Abruzzo made history in 1978 when he and two other Albuquerque millionaires, Maxie Anderson and Larry Newman, completed the first trans-Atlantic balloon flight in the Double Eagle II.

Abruzzo, Clark, Newman and Japanese restaurateur Rocky Aoki teamed up in 1981 to conquer the Pacific in a helium-filled balloon, the Double Eagle V.

Abruzzo said trans-Atlantic flight captured the imagination of the world because "it was done simply — in a balloon. The whole world loves balloons."

It was on the second attempt that the Double Eagle II lifted off from Presque Isle, Maine, and landed six days later in a barley field outside Paris.

The three balloonists received gold medals from Congress and the National Geographic Society.

Abruzzo then said he wanted to build "a bigger balloon — and it can be done — and we'd go to a higher altitude and we'd go around the world in 30 days, fly all the way around the world, entirely circumnavigate the globe."

Had he done it, he would have bettered Phileas Fogg's record in Jules Verne's novel, "Around the World in 80 Days."

Newman is the only member of that crew still alive. Anderson, 48, was killed in July 1983 in a balloon crash in West Germany during the Gordon Bennett International balloon race.

The Pacific flight took off from Nagashima, Japan, and crash-landed 6,000 miles later in northern California in what Newman described as "the worst storm in 20 years."

"It was a flight that was very challenging," Clark said Monday. "And it was a feeling of great accomplishment. But there were a lot of ups and downs in the flight and a lot of things we went through together, that we shared, that I'll never forget."

Abruzzo's life was full of competition, whether it was in ballooning or business, friends said Monday.

A self-made millionaire, Abruzzo was chairman and president of the company which built the longest tramway in North America up the side of Sandia Peak east of Albuquerque. As a builder, he envisioned houses on land that was only tumbleweeds and rocks.

He was the developer of Sandia Heights, a 1,500-acre subdivision at the base of Sandia Peak.

He was chairman and president of Sandia Peak Ski Co., Sandia Peak Tram Co., Sandia Peak Utility Co. and Alvarado Realty Co. He recently purchased the Santa Fe Ski Area.

"He was an aggressive and innovative businessman, and through his work, he contributed significantly to the state's economic development," said Gov. Toney Anaya. "He made many friends while becoming a valuable resource in New Mexico, and he'll be missed by many."

Abruzzo, said Rep. Bill Richardson, D-N.M., "represented the best of Western individualism."

Abruzzo and his wife are survived by four children, Louis, 29; Benny, 26; Richard, 22; and Mary Pat, 18. Plans for funeral services were incomplete.

Saudi Arabia wants U.S. to pressure Israel

WASHINGTON (AP) — King Fahd of Saudi Arabia is facing stiff resistance as he appeals to President Reagan for U.S. pressure on Israel to make concessions to the Palestinians.

Fahd returned to the White House today for more talks, over breakfast, with Reagan.

The discussions took place against the backdrop of Monday's announcement that Jordan's King Hussein and the Palestine Liberation Organization had agreed on "a framework for common action" toward peace in the Middle East.

The Reagan administration was cautious in its initial appraisal. "Anything that would bring the parties to the table would be helpful," said a U.S. official who insisted on anonymity. And that apparently is the intent of Hussein and PLO chairman Yasser Arafat, he said.

But, the official emphasized, the United States insists that before negotiations began Hussein and Arafat would have to accept U.N. Security Council resolutions recognizing Israel's right to exist and calling for an exchange of Israeli-held territory for peace.

Reagan on Monday registered his support for the "legitimate rights" of the Palestinians at the start of Fahd's five-day visit. But he stressed the Arabs would have to negotiate an agreement with Israel that also guarantees the country's security.

So far, only Egypt has taken that step. Reagan and his senior advisers are urging Fahd to make it possible for Hussein to follow by giving him the support of the influential Saudis.

Until then, a senior U.S. official told reporters, the administration would devote its efforts to such "building blocks" as urging Israel to provide a better life for Palestinians living under Israel's jurisdiction.

"The major break would come the day that Jordan is able to announce its readiness to move into direct negotiations," said the official, who demanded anonymity.

The announcement Monday in Amman, Jordan, by PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat did not provide any indication of Jordan's role in a possible peace initiative.

In an interview published in today's editions of The New York Times, Reagan said peace in the Mideast could not be achieved without Hussein "or at least with the permission of the Palestinians representing them in direct negotiations with the Israelis."

The senior U.S. official said it was clear the Arabs would not be satisfied if Reagan appointed a special envoy to the Middle East. "They would like us to use our influence with Israel," the official said.

Bentsen holds hearing on high-level nuclear dump site

HEREFORD, Texas (AP) — The selection of a Texas site for the nation's first high-level nuclear waste dump was made by "a bunch of consultants who didn't want to get any manure on their Gucci's" by coming out to talk to area residents, Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said.

Hightower joined Gov. Mark White and area residents at a Monday hearing to lambast the Department of Energy for what they said was the agency's faulty research about the proposed Panhandle site.

The DOE "is making the same mistake with the disposal of high-level nuclear waste that this nation has made with the creation of high-level nuclear waste," White said.

"I don't believe they (DOE officials) know what they're doing," White said.

Hightower agreed, saying, "We can't believe their nonchalant assurances and we don't trust them."

Hightower said the government's environmental assessments of the Deaf Smith County site are inappropriate. They were made, he said, by "a bunch of consultants who didn't want to get any manure on their Gucci's and didn't want to tarnish some of their own preconceptions so they didn't really come out here and talk to the business people and the farmers of the area."

The hearing, called by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, was before the U.S. Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works subcommittee on nuclear regulation.

Deaf Smith County was selected by the DOE in December as one of three "preferred sites" for the controversial repository. The other locations are in Washington and Nevada.

STATE

Although a final decision on where to place the dump is at least five years away, exploratory construction work could begin in Deaf Smith County within the next two years if the DOE's preferred sites are approved by President Reagan later this year.

Monday's witnesses said the nine-square-mile site north of Hereford, a community of 16,000 about 50 miles southwest of Amarillo, is a poor choice.

Government officials had "paid very little attention to the extensive agricultural and other economic values of the area of the Texas Panhandle that is being considered for waste disposal," White said.

Most of the testimony received by Bentsen during the two-hour hearing centered on concerns that placing the dump in Deaf Smith County would have adverse effects on the local water supply and on agricultural production.

Wayne Richardson, a seed farmer who owns land within the proposed site, said DOE documents "contain a large amount of misinformation."

As an example, Richardson cited DOE statements that 50 percent of the land in the site is highly irrigated.

In reality, Richardson contended, 95 percent of the area is highly irrigated.

"The DOE greatly underestimated the amount of lost revenues for condemning this site," Richardson said.

DOE officials attending the hearing, however, said their research to date has been extensive and as accurate as possible. They also maintained that the suitability of the site could not be known fully until exploration work was conducted.

Bentsen, the ranking Democrat on the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works, said Monday's testimony would be used as evidence on whether the Deaf Smith County site was suitable for the dump.

But he added that he is opposed to placing the repository in Texas especially in light of reports that the states of Washington and Nevada favor getting the dump.

"I'm told that in the other two states ... I understand that the local people are ready to accept this site," Bentsen said. "Now, if that's the case and if the people here don't want it,

I don't know why we don't put it there."

The DOE is mandated to carry out a lengthy process in making a final decision on a site, and a state is to be given a veto opportunity.

The repository is to be operational by 1998.

DOE hearings on the Deaf Smith County site are scheduled for Feb. 26 in Tulsa, Feb. 28 in Hereford and March 1 in Austin.

Texas House plans water bill debate

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas House today plans to debate a water package put together by state leaders and approved by a House committee.

The $800 million proposal is expected to undergo hours of House scrutiny, including scores of amendments that will reflect the varied water needs around the state.

Eager to come up with a proposal that could win voter support, Gov. Mark White, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker Gib Lewis crafted a $600 million package before the Legislature came to town.

The program includes $400 million in bonds for water supply projects, such as reservoirs, and $200 million in bonds for water quality projects, such as sewage treatment plants.

The House Committee on Natural Resources added $200 million in bonds for flood control projects.

Also included is a $250 million state insurance program to back bonds issued for water projects by local governments.

The package comes to the House floor without the support of the Sierra Club. Spokesman Ken Kramer said Monday the proposal — as now written — is doomed to defeat at the polls in November.

Voters must approve the package because it includes a constitutional amendment.

"The presentation of a $1 billion-plus funding proposal to the voters is an invitation to disaster," said Kramer.

The Sierra Club prefers a $400 million package that scraps the bond guarantee program. The club also wants the flood control money to be available for "nonstructural" flood control, such as purchase of flood plain land.

Alcohol found in penitentiary

ANGLETON, Texas (AP) — Several gallons of illegally-made alcohol have been found at a Texas prison unit where an intoxicated inmate allegedly stabbed a guard, authorities say.

The guard, David K. Connery, 19, was treated at a Brazoria County hospital and released. Connery was stabbed in the thigh Sunday night as he struggled with an inmate at the Texas Department of Corrections'

Retrieve Unit.

A 27-year-old inmate is accused of stabbing Connery, who was trying to keep the prisoner from leaving a recreation room where inmates were watching television.

The incident prompted prison officials to restrict about 900 inmates to their cells while the unit was searched for weapons and contraband, said Warden Keith Price. Most of the inmates were allowed outside their living quarters by Monday afternoon, he said.

The search netted about four gallons of inmate-brewed alcohol, found in a dormitory and in the cell block where the suspect was assigned, Price said.

Also found were two weapons fabricated from screw drivers, he said. The weapon used to stab the guard has not been recovered.

Montford bill would create Tech system

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate on Monday voted to allow regents at Texas Tech University to create an administrative system that would be headed by a chancellor and would give Tech's Health Sciences Center its own president.

Sen. John Montford's bill creating a Texas Tech system was sent to the House on voice vote.

Montford, D-Lubbock, said Tech, with an enrollment of 23,500, is the only university of comparable size that does not have a university system office.

The bill would become effective Sept. 1, but Montford said it did not provide state funds for the first two years. The Legislative Budget Board estimated the bill in fiscal 1988-89 would cost the state $613,846.

Father sues DPT maker

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A man who contends his son suffered brain damage after getting a DPT inoculation has filed a $35 million lawsuit against American Cyanamid Co., alleging negligence in the manufacture and testing of the vaccine.

Larry Dean Milam Sr. of Dallas County said his son, Larry Dean Milam Jr., had an adverse reaction to a DPT shot administered in Dallas in June 1979 when he was 6 months old, according to a lawsuit filed Friday in federal court.

The child, now 6, suffered brain damage as a result of vaccine made by Lederle Laboratories, a division of American Cyanamid, the suit said.

DPT vaccine protects children against diphtheria, whooping cough and tetanus. Texas requires DPT immunization for children entering school or day care.

Milam seeks $10 million in actual damages as compensation for his son's injury, pain, loss of earning capacity and medical and custodial care expenses and $25 million in punitive damages.

Milam's suit alleges that American Cyanamid was negligent in failing to adequately test the batch of DPT serum from which his child was injected, failing to warn users of the risk of reaction, and failing to adopt adequate standards to determine if a certain batch of the serum was "unreasonably dangerous."

The Milams' attorney, Jan Champion of San Jose, Calif., said, "This particular batch had a high number of adverse reactions to it."

Martha Homma, who works in the public affairs office of American Cyanamid in Wayne, N.J., told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that the company has "no comment on this specific litigation."

However, on the general subject of Lederle's DPT vaccine, she said it is made "in strict accordance" with Federal Drug Administration regulations. "It is the safest vaccine medical science can now provide."

Lawsuits involving DPT vaccine have multiplied in recent months, prompting other suppliers to get out of the business. Lederle is now the nation's sole supplier, Ms. Homma said.

The Chairman of the Board — the Goren Editorial Board, that is — Richard L. Frey celebrates his 80th birthday today. In the 1930s, Frey was a member of the Four Aces team that dominated bridge. He left the team to become business manager for Ely Culbertson. When the American Contract Bridge League created the master point scheme, Frey became Life Master No. 8.

He still is a prolific writer whose articles appear in many magazines. In his days as editor of the ACBL Bulletin, he raised the standard of that publication to where it was regarded as one of the world's premier bridge magazines.

That he retains considerable prowess as a player is evident from this hand from a recent rubber bridge game. His reverse bid might not be to everyone's taste, but the final contract was certainly reasonable.

West led the four of spades, and Frey won in hand with the jack. Since a 3-3 heart break was only about a 35 percent chance, Frey decided to look for a better line. He ran the nine of spades at trick two, and when that held he continued with a spade to the queen. East shuffled clubs on these two tricks.

Since a club finesse was not likely to help, Frey led a club to the ace, on which West played the nine. In case West started with the 10-9, declarer continued with the queen of clubs. East won the king and shifted to a diamond, the ten losing to the jack. West led a spade to the table's ace, and declarer came to hand with a diamond to the ace to lead a heart. When West followed with a low heart, declarer inserted the table's eight.

East won the ten of hearts and continued with the king, but declarer allowed him to hold the trick. East's goose was cooked — if he returned a heart, dummy would score the last three tricks. If, instead, he played a club, declarer would take the last three tricks in hand.

Well played, and happy birthday, Dick!

Smith asks for preliminary hearing in Belushi murder case

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cathy Evelyn Smith will take her chances with a murder charge rather than plead guilty to manslaughter in the drug overdose death of comedian John Belushi because grand jury testimony shows she's innocent, her lawyer says.

Ms. Smith, a one-time backup singer with rock music groups, asked Monday for a preliminary hearing to determine if there is sufficient evidence to try her.

Superior Court Judge Robert Devich ordered her and her attorney, Howard Weitzman, to appear in Municipal Court again Wednesday, when the district attorney will file a murder complaint and a preliminary hearing date will be set.

"We're back on a case of murder," said Deputy District Attorney Michael Montagna.

Belushi, 33, a comedian who first gained fame on TV's "Saturday Night Live," died March 5, 1982, in a bungalow at the Chateau Marmont Hotel on the Sunset Strip. The coroner said he died of acute heroin and cocaine poisoning.

A year later, a grand jury indicted Ms. Smith, who was with Belushi before his death, on one count of murder and 13 counts of furnishing and administering narcotics.

Montagna said the decision to go for a preliminary hearing negates a plea bargain the Canadian woman struck with prosecutors before waiving extradition and returning to the United States last month.

She had tentatively agreed to plead guilty to a reduced charge of involuntary manslaughter and three counts of furnishing and administering narcotics, Montagna said.

"At this point we feel completely relieved of any obligation to keep that offer to plead guilty to manslaughter. That offer is withdrawn," Montagna told the judge Monday.

He added: "It's clear...that there is evidence, ample evidence to convict her of second-degree murder."

But Weitzman told the court, "I can't in good conscience, based on conversations with Ms. Smith (and review of the court documents) make a recommendation that she enter a plea of guilty to any homicide."

Weitzman, who won former automaker John Z. De Lorean's acquittal on cocaine-trafficking charges last year, said Ms. Smith's Canadian lawyer worked out the plea bargain without seeing grand jury transcripts regarding Belushi's cause of death.

"Expert testimony appears to exclude the alleged 3:30 a.m. injection as the cause of death," Weitzman said.

Ms. Smith could have entered a plea Monday, but state law allows her to seek a preliminary hearing before entering a plea.

A somber-faced Ms. Smith, dressed in black pants and black jacket, was silent throughout Monday's proceedings and ignored reporters' questions afterward.

On Wednesday, the prosecution will file its complaint against Ms. Smith containing the charges listed in the grand jury indictment.

Weitzman tried to keep the grand jury transcripts sealed, saying their release would sensationalize the case, but Devich said he will allow them released after the preliminary hearing.

"I don't want the public to be prejudiced one way or the other," Devich told Weitzman. "So far, we've only heard your side."

'Josephine the plumber' to be married on Valentine's Day

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Jane Withers, who's better known as Josephine the plumber of television commercial fame, is getting married on Valentine's Day, but she needed some help from firefighters to get out of an alley first.

The 58-year-old actress was outside her movie production office Saturday morning when the door slammed shut, trapping her in an alley blocked by tall fences.

She said she tried to pry the hinges off the door, then piled old props against a fence.

But the props kept toppling over and Ms. Withers, clad in a blue bathrobe, got desperate. The actress, who's getting married to her business manager, Thomas Pierson, had an afternoon appointment for a wedding dress fitting.

"I kept thinking, 'Oh, God, I can't break anything, I'm getting married Thursday,'" she recalled.

Around 5 p.m., her shouts for help were heard by a businessman next door, who alerted the Fire Department. The firefighters who came to her rescue received grateful hugs from the actress.

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. chairman Lee Iacocca, whose wife died of diabetes complications, has founded a non-profit foundation to promote research into the disease and named his elder daughter to lead it.

Kathryn Iacocca, 25, is the president of the Iacocca Foundation and its sole employee so far, her father announced Monday.

The Washington-based foundation also will set up a scholarship fund for Chrysler employees' children, she said.

The "biggest chunk" of money to operate the foundation will come from her father's current best seller, "Iacocca: An Autobiography," Ms. Iacocca said. Beyond that, money will come "pretty much from family funds."

Iacocca's wife, Mary, died May 15, 1983, at age 57 of complications related to diabetes and heart trouble.

The 60-year-old auto executive's other daughter, Lia, is a 20-year-old college student.

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Board of Review of Motion Pictures gave out its sixth annual D.W. Griffith Awards, but the only honoree to make the star-studded ceremonies was actor Victor Banerjee, and the absentees included ailing director John Huston.

Banerjee, named best actor of 1984, hailed the occasion at the Players Club Monday night as "a great day" for himself and his fellow Indians. He was honored for his performance in "A Passage to India," which was named best film and also garnered awards for Sir David Lean as best director and Dame Peggy Ashcroft as best actress.

Huston, 78, won the D.W. Griffith Career Achievement Award. Under doctors' orders to stay in Los Angeles, he made his acceptance speech by amplified telephone. "I thank you with all my grateful heart," said the veteran director of "The Maltese Falcon," "The Treasure of the Sierra Madre" and "The African Queen."

Sabine Azema was named best supporting actress for "A Sunday in the Country" and John Malkovich best supporting actor for "Places in the Heart."

Among the stand-ins and presenters were Paul Newman, Bette Davis, Patricia Neal, Jamie Lee Curtis, Marisa Berenson, Teri Garr, Sidney Lumet, Carol Channing and Maureen Stapleton. Tony Randall was master of ceremonies.

NEW YORK (AP) — Cher will be joining the likes of past winners Katherine Hepburn, Ella Fitzgerald and Meryl Streep when she is honored by Harvard University's Hasty Pudding Club as its 1985 Woman of the Year.

The student club will parade through Harvard Square to the Hasty Pudding Theater on Wednesday, where it will present its annual award for a lasting and impressive contribution to the entertainment world, Zarem Inc., a New York public relations firm, said in a statement.

Cher, 38, has been a hit singer, starred in her own television variety show and on Broadway, and was nominated for an Academy Award for her supporting role in the movie "Silkwood."

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — X-rated film star Marilyn Chambers will learn within a week to 10 days whether she will be slapped with prostitution charges for her nude performance at an adult theater, says District Attorney Arlo Smith.

Ms. Chambers was arrested Feb. 1 at the Mitchell Brothers Theater for allegedly committing a lewd act and soliciting prostitution.

Dangerous move

A report in The Wall Street Journal says a conservative group that includes U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms (R-N.C.) is launching a more forceful assault to take over CBS Inc. which the group charges has a liberal bias in its news coverage of "political events, personages and views."

The group which, according to the Journal story, has the backing of U.S. Rep. Philip Crane (R-Ill.), is urging individuals with similar views on CBS's news coverage to buy stock, write management with complaints about news coverage of political events and, if necessary, pool their holdings to take control of the company.

There is nothing wrong, of course, with anyone or any group attempting to influence reporting of particular events or with purchasing stock in a particular company to reap a profit and to attempt to influence management decisions. That is a fact of life in corporate America.

There is, however, a great danger in the takeover move by the group which calls itself Fairness in Media simply because a number of those involved in the group are politicians or in some way involved with politics.

It's entirely understandable that Helms or any other person may be unhappy with reporting at one time or another. That's largely because of the fact that in a free society which places a high value on freedom of speech and, concurrently, freedom of the press, there is unavoidably ample opportunity for differences of opinion regarding not only what is reported but how it is done. That's the price Americans pay for the right of knowing what is going on in their country and the assurance that what they read in a daily newspaper or hear on radio or television is truth.

That doesn't mean that mistakes do not occur, but responsible news organizations take great effort to keep errors to a minimum and to keep their reports as unbiased and fair as humanly possible.

If Helms and Fairness in Media truly believe CBS is guilty of willful violation of accepted standards of journalistic credibility, other avenues are available to them short of a corporate takeover which would cast future news reports into questionable light.

For example, have they made their grievances known to CBS management? If their grievances did not bring action, did they attempt to learn why?

Ironically, in seeking a takeover bid the group is undercutting its stated purpose: To overcome bias. Does the group truly believe Americans will find news from CBS more palatable when the company is controlled by those urging only conservative philosophy? Particularly when some of the primary stockholders are politicians who, in effect, will be controlling not only what is reported regarding politics, but how it is reported?

We don't believe it would be an improvement and, further, we believe it would be a large step backward for press credibility. That isn't what the news media — or the American public — needs.

True to form in Peru

The Pope was constructively true to form: he struck a deep chord among Peruvians by condemning political violence but demanding social justice. The Shining Path guerrillas followed their precedent: they struck not with political counterargument but with dynamite, against Lima's power stations. And sadly, the performance of President Fernando Belaunde Terry was just as predictably negative.

In this week of John Paul II's stirring visit, the President could find no more imaginative use for international attention than to rail against Amnesty International for reporting on the thousand civilians who have disappeared in the course of his brutal counterinsurgency campaign.

Shining Path is not responsible for every atrocity attributed to it by a hard-pressed Government; and the authorities cannot be expected to scrupulously respect civil liberties while fighting fanatical insurgents. Yet both sides, eager to shoot, have contributed to a breakdown of civil order. Combined with Peru's daunting economic difficulties, that shadows the future of democratic rule.

President Belaunde has not been lucky. His 1980 inauguration, which ended 12 years of military rule, coincided with the outbreak of rebellion and the onset of economic collapse. The Shining Path rebellion, nominally based on the teachings of a Maoist professor, took root in the discontent of poor and alienated peasants in the remote central highlands.

The economic reckoning also came quickly, speeded by the military Governments' excessive arms purchases and expensive nationalizations. Then export prices collapsed and the whole continent fell into a debt crisis. Recession has dragged on for four years, deepening rural poverty and urban unemployment. Peru has now stopped payment on its $13 billion foreign debt. Only one sector of the economy thrives: the illegal production and marketing of cocaine. That, of course, benefits neither poor Peruvians nor Government coffers.

If there is a basis for optimism it is in the presidential election scheduled for this spring. A new administration could symbolize a fresh start. But whoever wins will need substance, too.

The United States could help. Administration proposals to double military aid are worse than useless, unless paired with economic and political support. The Pope's words made clear the intimate link between social peace and social justice. Securing Peru's troubled democracy requires more than shipping guns.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today's highlight in history:
On Feb. 12, 1809, the 16th president of the United States, Abraham Lincoln, was born in a log cabin in what is now Laure County, Ky.
On this date:
In 1554, Lady Jane Grey, who had been Queen of England for nine days, was beheaded after being charged with treason.
In 1733, English colonists led by James Oglethorpe landed at Savannah, Ga.
In 1870, women in the Utah Territory were granted the right to vote.
In 1892, Abraham Lincoln's birthday was declared a national holiday.
In 1907, more than 300 people died when the steamer Larchmont collided with a schooner off Block Island in New England.
In 1908, the first round-the-world automobile race began in New York. It ended in Paris the following August, and was won by the team of George N. Schuster, George J. Miller and Montague Roberts.

U.S. targets Soviet spy satellites

WASHINGTON — Long before President Reagan brought up the subject of "Star Wars," the militarization of space had already begun. Both the United States and Soviet Union have been keeping a military watch on one another for years through spy satellites high in space.

But few Americans realize just what these orbiting Peeping Toms are capable of, and how big a threat they'd be in case of a conflict. My associate Dale Van Atta has obtained a secret General Accounting Office report that gives the Pentagon experts' assessment of the threats posed by the Kremlin's satellites.

I've already reported on the four types of spy satellites considered most immediately dangerous to the United States. But the Pentagon has assigned a No. 2 priority to other satellites; these, too, are considered a military threat.

The total number of satellites in the two top priorities is close to 40. In case of war, the planned "Star Wars" defenses would move from Priority One targets to Priority Two in a matter of seconds.

According to the Pentagon experts' assessment, U.S. intelligence-gathering satellites are still superior to those made in Moscow. More of ours transmit their information instantaneously, like a live TV show of Soviet military movements and equipment. More of theirs operate on a delayed broadcast system.

Here are the Priority 2 targets listed in the secret report:

— The Salyut series of military space stations. The report says: "The station possibly can provide near real-time intelligence-targeting data to military forces and can detect missile launches. Photo-reconnaissance is believed to be its major activity; however, these stations can possibly be modified to do reconnaissance such as electronic intelligence, communications intelligence and command and control."

— High-resolution photographic reconnaissance satellites that drop film in capsules by parachute from low orbit. "The one assessed to be of primary concern," according to the report, "is capable of ejecting recovery capsules — which minimize the time from when the photographs are taken to when the film is available for analysis."

The report explains that the photographs from these satellites are used to study troop positions and for targeting and damage assessment. "Resolution is capable of distinguishing automobiles," the report states.

It adds: "As the Soviet Union projects its forces further from its borders or into a denied area, such as China, it becomes increasingly dependent on this type of (satellite)." — Navigational satellites. "These satellites, deployed in regularly-spaced three- and six-satellite constellations, provide navigational fixes with an average waiting time of 90 minutes and 45 minutes at the equator, respectively, for NAVSAT-1 and NAVSAT-2," the report states, adding:

"NAVSAT-1 is accurate to 200 meters, and NAVSAT-2 is possibly accurate within 100 meters. They are primarily used by Soviet naval forces, including ballistic missile submarines."

Knocking out these navigational aids would make it difficult for Soviet missile subs to precisely determine their location — and precision is critical for launching nuclear missiles.

— Communications satellites. The secret report states: "The Molniya-Raduga types are of primary concern because they are able to provide real-time command and control to naval, land and strategic forces. As Soviet forces operate farther from the Soviet land mass, they become more dependent on these satellites for control of military forces."

STRICTLY PERSONAL: Occasionally a reader will ask, "What ever happened to S.I. Hayakawa, the former Republican senator from California?"

The Canadian-born, 78-year-old former English professor and college president has begun a new campaign — not to gain public office, but to make English the "official" language of the United States.

Hayakawa, who first gained fame as the author of a book on the importance of precise language, wants to rid the country of "creeping bilingualism."

His new organization is called U.S. English. It will lobby against laws that require multilingual ballots and voting materials, and against government funding for bilingual education. Ultimately, U.S. English hopes to help pass a constitutional amendment declaring English our official language — a measure Hayakawa tried in vain to get through the Senate during his term there.

"We have enough problems as a nation," Hayakawa wrote in a recent fund-raising letter, "without having to talk through an interpreter."

CHARLEY REESE

Pulling 'tooth' isn't painless

Cutting the federal budget is like pulling abscessed wisdom teeth from the nation's mouth. It's not easy. It hurts. And it's hard to feel kindly toward the dentist after he's done what you asked him to do.

Every penny spent by the federal government ultimately finds its way into some individual human being's pocket. I have yet to find a human being who likes having his or her income reduced.

Charley Reese

Therefore there is a constituency for every single item in the federal budget which will raise the devil to keep their part from being cut.

On the other hand, every penny spent by the federal government must first come out of some individual human being's pocket. Contrary to the myth, governments are not in the wealth-production business. They are in the wealth-confiscation-redistribution business.

If you created a board game based on the way we operate our governments in this country you would call it Plunder Your Neighbor. We are as a people engaged on a massive scale of sending money to governments in the form of taxes and getting money back from governments in various forms of benefits. The winners are those who manage to get more back than they pay in and the losers naturally are those who pay more in than they get back.

Plunder Your Neighbor got to be so popular that the government for a long time has been redistributing money it didn't confiscate through the taxes. It has been borrowing as well as confiscating and this has created a class of super-winners: those who receive the more than $150 billion each year in interest. They are primarily the owners of large banks, both domestic and foreign.

To put this in perspective, if each of us paid $10,000 annually in income taxes, it would require a year's labor from 15 million of us just to pay one year's worth of interest on the government's debt. Our individual $10,000 would not contribute a penny to the cost of providing any of the government's services.

The problem with Plunder Your Neighbor is that it becomes a rich man's game financed by a large body of people who become for all practical purposes landless serfs. The men who founded this nation knew this, because they knew human nature and they knew how European governments were operating. They hoped to prevent it by providing for an extremely frugal government with a very limited set of services. We have, in a very short time, undone all that they did for us.

To put the matter in a little perspective, the federal budget in 1960 was $100 billion. Today, interest alone is in excess of $158 billion. Thus, in just 24 years, we have gone from handling everything for $100 billion a year to spending nearly $1 trillion a year.

Part of this is a result of the devaluation of our currency, commonly known as inflation. Measured in what it can buy, $1 today is worth only a fraction of what $1 was worth in 1960. Since only the government can devalue the currency, the government has in fact stolen the difference from individual savers. Social Security recipients, for example, paid in high-value dollars and are getting paid back in low-value dollars. People bought insurance policies with high value dollars and their survivors get benefits in low-value dollars.

If played to its conclusion, Plunder Your Neighbor ends in depression, hyperinflation, revolution, or a combination of two or more of those things. Do not kid yourself that it can end in any other, less painful way. We have about 7,000 years of historical examples to guide us.

The coming battle over the size of the federal budget will be between those who can see the long-term interest of the nation as a whole and those who can see no further than their individual short-term selfish interest.

There are limits to what government can do without destroying the society it governs. We as a people will either re-impose those limits or we will suffer the consequences. As with abscessed wisdom teeth there is no painless solution. It is just far better to suffer the short-term pain of getting them pulled than the long-term, far more dangerous pain of doing nothing.

INSIDE REPORT:

Kemp proposal testing Reagan

WASHINGTON — A challenge for President Reagan's negotiating strategy in Geneva is coming from Rep. Jack Kemp, who wants the U.S. to insist on "dismantling" Soviet radars and other strategic weapons that violate nuclear treaties.

Kemp's proposals to stop Soviet cheating go much further than anything publicly said by any administration official. Nevertheless, the congressman's ideas are being studied by U.S. negotiators and conceivably could become part of next month's Geneva agenda.

Key U.S. policy-makers are interested in Kemp's proposal, but it excites fear in the arms control community that the "process" might be aborted just as it resumes. At the heart of Kemp's challenge is this question: Is the Soviet Union so afraid of Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) that it would dismantle its illegal radars — in an effort to derail SDI?

Kemp has emerged as a national leader of the party on economic, not strategic issues. Considering his interest in post-Reagan Republican leadership, including the 1988 presidential nomination, it is politically significant that he now engages the issue of Soviet cheating. Long a matter of disdain by practical politicians, it is now taking on a life of its own in the political arena.

Kemp's insistence on an effective response to Soviet treaty violations will soon be published in the winter issue of Strategic Review. His words closely follow President Reagan's recent report to Congress expressing "very serious concerns" over "continuing" Soviet cheating. Thus the cheating issue is becoming the mirror image for Republicans that the nuclear-testing issue was 30 years ago when Democratic presidential candidates competed for the best test ban scheme.

Of all violations laid on the Soviet doorstep by Reagan's report, illegal radars pose the most dangerous threat to the U.S. The reason: possible secret Soviet construction of what the president called "an ABM (Anti-Ballistic Missile) defense of its national territory." If the Kremlin ever perfected such a nationwide system and decided to "break out" from treaty restrictions, a first-strike against the U.S. might seem plausible to Moscow.

In his article, Kemp is adamant about dismantling illegal radars. "The gains that the Soviets have already amassed through such violations must be offset by appropriate action such as dismantling and destruction of illegal mobile and fixed radars," he writes. He clearly implies that anything less than dismantling the radars should set the U.S. free from anti-ABM restrictions. That would permit Washington to proceed at will on its own defenses, whether SDI or land-based interceptors.

Verifying that radars are dismantled might require a concession long dreamed of by Washington but always rejected: on-site inspection by trusted international agents, or U.S. Soviet teams. As concern over Soviet cheating deepens, high Pentagon officials are swinging over to support on-site inspection as perhaps the only way to guarantee treaty compliance.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Navy Secretary John Lehman stunned the Senate Armed Services Committee last week, saying for the first time that eyeball inspection by both sides may be the key to compliance. That includes, he said, "allowing inspection teams aboard our ships," in hopes of persuading the psychotically-secrative Russians to do the same.

Lehman's proposal fits the underlying thesis of Kemp's article: no president can ask the support of the American people for new nuclear treaties with the Russians until there is certainty that existing agreements are being scrupulously adhered to. That means violations must trigger automatic American retaliation by imposing some form of "sanctions" (though he does not describe them).

"Without effective sanctions for non-compliance, the party disposed to cheat ... will always have an advantage," Kemp writes. So any new agreement should "stipulate the consequences of non-compliance," which probably would mean American refusal to abide by provisions of the violated treaty.

Kemp proposes a new presidential board including the nation's best intelligence brains to watch over the cheating issue "in a focused and comprehensive" way. Years of fruitless appeals to an obscure bilateral commission in Vienna for Russian compliance would be replaced by Uncle Sam acting as his own judge and jury.

Kemp's frank talk signals an end to the days when Soviet cheating was a forbidden and a boring topic in Washington. The political message is unmistakable when a hot presidential prospect, instead of trimming on the peace issue, challenges the president to take a tougher stand on a life-or-death issue.

Reagan says 'Star Wars' necessary

NEW YORK (AP) — The "Star Wars" space defense program is necessary for national defense regardless of whether the Soviets agree to abolish all nuclear weapons, President Reagan says.

"I want a defense that simply says that if somebody starts pushing the button on those weapons, we've got a good chance of keeping all or at least the bulk of them from getting to the target," Reagan said in an interview published in today's New York Times.

The president, however, drew a distinction between research and deployment of a defense system. He said the United States would conduct research even if the Soviet Union agreed to deep cuts in offensive weapons.

"In other words, to negotiate then before there would be any deployment or anything to make sure that they understood that we weren't trying to create the ability of a first strike ourselves, that our goal was still the elimination of nuclear weapons," he said.

The government plans to spend $26 billion in exploratory research on the "Star Wars" plan.

Reagan was interviewed on a variety of issues at the White House by four Times reporters.

He also told them:

—New covert aid to the insurgent forces in Nicaragua was "necessary" and "desirable" because "the Sandinista government seized power out of the barrel of a gun."

—He blamed both the South Korean government and the Americans escorting exiled South Korean opposition leader Kim Dae Jung for the airport melee that occurred when Kim returned to his homeland.

"There was bad judgment on both sides," Reagan said.

—He was "not greatly optimistic" about Fidel Castro's comments for improved relations between Cuba and the United States. "We've heard this before. Early in my administration there were signals sent of this kind, and we took them up on it, and we tried to have some meetings with them, and nothing came of it."

—He didn't believe peace in the Mideast could be achieved without King Hussein of Jordan "or at least with the permission of the Palestinians representing them in direct negotiations with the Israelis."

—He said he had completed a set of shots to combat allergies that he said have plagued him for years. "I always looked down my nose at them," Reagan said about the allergies, but added that his wife Nancy had convinced him to do something about the problem.

Goetz told neighbor he didn't want publicity

NEW YORK (AP) — In a tape-recorded telephone conversation before his surrender, Bernhard Goetz told a neighbor he would "rather put a bullet in my head" than face the maelstrom of publicity created by his shooting of four youths on a subway train.

Goetz also demonstrated for the neighbor, Myra Friedman, how one of the youths had thrust his hand into a pocket, indicating he had a weapon. "I saw what was going to happen. And I snapped," he told her.

Goetz telephoned Ms. Friedman, a writer, three times between the Dec. 22 shootings and his Dec. 31 surrender in Concord, N.H., according to her article this week in New York magazine. She said she taped two of the calls.

Asked if the youths had threatened him, Goetz said, "I know what was in their minds. And they know that I know. Do you understand?... The threats are what you see. With your eyes."

"The threats were numerous. Numerous and subtle," he continued. "Those guys, I'm almost sure, are vicious, savage people. What I did, I responded in a vicious and savage way."

"What I did — I turned into a monster, and that's the truth. But if most people, a lot of people, had been in my shoes, they would have done the same thing," Goetz said.

Later, in a conversation in Ms. Friedman's apartment, Goetz "demonstrated a gesture he said one of the young men had made. He shoved his right hand into his pocket and thrust the fingers forward to suggest a weapon," she writes.

In his conversations with Ms. Friedman, Goetz's most persistent theme was his desire to remain anonymous and avoid publicity.

"What I want to lead is a normal life. That's all," he said.

"If I turn myself in, this (case) is just gonna run my life for the next several months," he said. Prison was "not the issue. That's not what I'm afraid of."

"Rather than go through this, I'd rather put a bullet in my head," he later said.

"I am a writer," writes Ms. Friedman, who was asked by Goetz not to reveal their conversations.

She said that when she told Goetz she had taped their conversations, he said, "I know, it's all right."

Goetz told Ms. Friedman that while he was a fugitive he was recognized by a deputy sheriff. "He said I should get a medal," Goetz said. "He knew what I wanted. And that is to be left alone."

Goetz also said "in the past three years I have been attacked three times. And I've been threatened twice seriously... The people have to have guns. And yet the city tells you, 'Don't you dare have a gun; you get a one year mandatory (prison sentence).'"

Meanwhile, lawyers for Darrell Cabey, one of the shooting victims, asked Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau to resubmit the case to the grand jury and have Goetz undergo a psychiatric evaluation. They cited Goetz's claims that he had "pulled his gun on several other occasions but did not fire."

"This incident, if proven, would seriously undercut Goetz's claims that he was in fear for his life" when he shot Cabey, according to the lawyers' letter.

Soldiers: Punishment cannot be justified

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two soldiers who were court-martialed for smuggling Soviet rifles into the United States from Grenada say their dismissals from the service cannot be justified, given the way an admiral was merely "cautioned."

The two said Monday they were hopeful their sentences will be reconsidered, but the Army said its punishment was by the book and had nothing to do with what the Navy did.

"I'm more upset at the fact that he got away with it, not that he took them (the rifles)," said former Staff Sgt. Allen Cassatt, one of five Army personnel who were court-martialed and ordered out of the service for bringing back Soviet AK-47 automatic rifles from Grenada following the U.S. invasion of the Caribbean island in October 1983.

"I'm not anti-military. I'm just disappointed in the military's judicial system," Cassatt said in an interview. "The punishment did not fit the crime."

"I'm sorry to see the admiral publicized this way," former Army Capt. John Dorsz said of Vice Adm. Joseph Metcalf III, the invasion commander who was only cautioned after U.S. Customs agents found 24 AK-47s in his airplane.

Dorsz, who also tried to bring back Soviet weapons from Grenada, served a prison sentence.

"But he did the same as I. He also deprived the U.S. government of those weapons. He, too, committed conspiracy, larceny and conduct unbecoming an officer."

"Given time, this public attitude may be in our favor," Dorsz said.

Last week, Navy officials had refused to discuss the manner in which Metcalf was "cautioned." On Monday, however, a reporter was briefly shown a copy of a letter sent to Metcalf by his superior, Adm. Wesley McDonald, the commander of the Atlantic Fleet.

The letter said the warning will not become part of Metcalf's permanent record. But it did say Metcalf committed a "careless" and serious breach of regulations that could prove highly embarrassing to the Navy, and that his actions were not the type of thing expected from an officer of his rank and position.

The Navy, however, continued to assert Monday that Metcalf's case could be distinguished from the courts-martial ordered for the five soldiers and two Marines. And the Army also defended its handling of the matter.

"There has been a suggestion by some that since the Navy only cautioned Metcalf, the Army should change its punishment," said Lt. Col. Craig MacNab, an Army spokesman. "But the Army hasn't done anything peculiar in handling these cases. These men violated regulations and they were punished."

Soviets confirm Chernenko ill

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet officials today confirmed that President Konstantin U. Chernenko is ill and canceled a scheduled meeting with Greek Premier Andreas Papandreu, a Greek government spokesman said.

The spokesman, Dimitrios Maroudas, said Chernenko was to have received Papandreu today in what would have been the Soviet leader's first public appearance in nearly seven weeks.

But Maroudas said the Greek delegation was informed by Soviet officials today that the 4:30 p.m. meeting had been canceled. He did not say when the announcement was made or who made it.

"The planned meeting of the premier of Greece with the general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party could not take place due to the illness of Mr. Chernenko," Maroudas said.

Asked if the Greeks were given any information about the nature of Chernenko's ailment, Maroudas said: "We have no such curiosity."

Earlier, Soviet officials had said that the 73-year-old Chernenko was out of the capital and that was the reason he could not meet with Papandreu.

"These two things do not necessarily contradict each other," Maroudas said. "He could be ill and out of town at the same time."

When asked earlier today if Chernenko would receive the Greek premier, a Soviet Foreign Ministry official said, "No. Mr. Chernenko is not in Moscow."

The Soviet official said: "He is in the country. He is on vacation."

Chernenko has not appeared in public since Dec. 27 and has not met a visiting foreign dignitary since Dec. 19 when he held talks with Dom Mintoff, then the premier of Malta.

During Chernenko's absence from public view, there have been conflicting reports on his condition.

The official news agency Tass said last week that Chernenko addressed the ruling Politburo at a weekly meeting. But Soviet officials and Western diplomats have said he has been ill. He reportedly suffers from emphysema.

Ionna Haritatu, a press officer at the Greek Embassy, told reporters Monday night that Papandreu's schedule set aside "reserved time" starting at 4:30 p.m. (8:30 a.m. EST) today.

"Everybody thinks that tomorrow he will meet Chernenko, that is the impression that has been given," she had said.

Western diplomats say that it would be customary for Chernenko to make a public appearance toward the end of the month, when he might make a speech before the Feb. 24 elections for the Russian Federation Parliament, in which he is a candidate.

According to protocol, Chernenko should speak two days before the election in what is usually a highly publicized event, the diplomats say.

Tass reported that Papandreu and Premier Nikolai A. Tikhonov concluded their talks today. It gave no details on what the two officials talked about.

Maroudas had said earlier that Papandreu and other members of his delegation were to discuss plans for an aluminum plant to be built in Greece with Soviet technical aid, along with agreements on the repair of Soviet ships in Greek ports.

Papandreu also is scheduled to meet today with Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

He spent 90 minutes Monday in the Kremlin discussing international and bilateral issues with Tikhonov, according to Maroudas.

Later, he and Tikhonov exchanged toasts at a Kremlin dinner.

Papandreu said his country, a member of NATO, welcomed plans for new U.S.-Soviet arms control talks next month in Geneva, Switzerland, according to an English-language text of his speech distributed by the Greek delegation.

"We expect the Geneva negotiations to continue in good faith and would like to believe that the international community will be kept informed as to their progress," he said.

Tikhonov also referred to the Geneva talks on nuclear and space weapons, echoing Kremlin statements that seek to put responsibility for progress on the United States.

"The Soviet Union has no shortage of goodwill. ... But not everything depends on the Soviet side," he said, according to a Tass text. "We would like to hope that the United States, too, will cover its part of the road with full awareness of responsibility for the future of mankind."

Relations between Greece and the Soviet Union have improved since Papandreu's Panhellenic Socialist Movement came to power in 1981.

Papandreu has drawn criticism from other North Atlantic Treaty Organization nations for some foreign policy positions, including his opposition to deployment of new NATO missiles in Western Europe.

Recovery work begins at Laotian plane crash site

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A joint U.S.-Laotian team has begun to search at a plane crash site in southern Laos for the remains of 13 U.S. airmen missing in action in the Vietnam war, a source at the U.S. Embassy in Vientiane, Laos, said today.

The source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the embassy was told by the Laotian Foreign Ministry that work began Monday at the site near Pakse city, where a U.S. Air Force C-130 transport plane crashed in December 1972.

The plane was hit by ground fire and exploded over the Pakse area. Two of the 16 servicemen aboard parachuted to safety, and the remains of a third were recovered the next day.

Meanwhile, Vietnamese

sources said Monday that it could take as long as a month to turn over the remains of five people whom Hanoi has identified as Americans missing in action in the war.

The operation, they cautioned, could be jeopardized by any U.S. criticism.

"Any hostile statements by the U.S. side could cause a postponement," said one Vietnamese source here, who spoke on condition he not be identified by name or position.

A team from the U.S. Joint Casualty Resolution Center flew Sunday to the Pakse area to join with Laotian Foreign Ministry and other officials to make the first official excavation of a plane crash site since the 1975 communist victory in Laos.

China plans 'Disney-type' park

PEKING (AP) — China's infatuation with Walt Disney was taken a step further today with the announcement that a "Disney-type park" is planned for southern Peking.

The Peking Daily said in a front-page story that the park will be built in the Chinese capital's 15,600 square-yard Dragon Pond park.

The Chinese have been enthralled with the creations of the American cartoonist since the U.S.-China thaw in the 1970s, which opened the way for tours of Disney parks in California and Florida by goggle-eyed delegations from Peking.

Enrique Salazar

Reward offered for kidnapped drug agent

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Saying the United States will not "be intimidated by mafia thugs," the U.S. Embassy has offered a $50,000 reward for information on the whereabouts of a Drug Enforcement Administration agent kidnapped by suspected drug traffickers.

An embassy statement Monday announced the reward offer in the case of Enrique Camarena Salazar, 37, abducted in Guadalajara on Thursday.

Camarena Salazar was last seen when he left the U.S. Consulate in Guadalajara for a luncheon date with his wife. Four armed men were seen intercepting him at gunpoint throwing him into a car, DEA officials said.

They said there has been no contact with the kidnapper and no ransom demand.

"If the kidnappers hope by these actions to deter the cooperative effort of the United States and Mexico to rid our citizens of the plague of drug trafficking, they are mistaken. Neither this mission (embassy) nor our governments will be intimidated by mafia thugs," U.S. Ambassador John Gavin said in the embassy statement.

DEA agents have been sent from Mexico City and Texas to Guadalajara, a big drug trafficking center 322 miles northwest of the Mexican capital, to assist police police authorities with the search.

Embassy officials refused to provide further information for security reasons.

A DEA agent since 1974, Camarena Salazar was assigned to Guadalajara in 1980, where officials said he worked with Mexican drug-enforcement officials but was not an undercover agent.

Camarena Salazar was born in Mexico, became a U.S. citizen, was a graduate of Imperial Valley College in Imperial City, Calif., and served with the Marine Corps. He is the first agent kidnapped since the DEA agent started working in Mexico in 1963, mainly exchanging information and lending technical assistance in an ongoing crackdown against drug trafficking.

An unidentified person machine-gunned a U.S. government vehicle assigned to another DEA agent in Guadalajara outside the agent's home in October but there were no injuries or arrests in that incident. The agent was transferred elsewhere.

In a speech in December, Gavin described Mexico as a major supplier of illegal drugs to the United States, but said Mexican government was making "significant improvements" in its anti-drug campaign.

Guadalajara has long been considered a haven for drug traffickers and a large-scale drug distribution center.

Midland High's Deidra Knapp seems to be offed by the effort of Midland Lee's Roz Eaden to take the ball away from her during Monday's district playoff game between the two local rivals.

Lady Bulldogs in playoffs

MHS sends Lee packing, 47-28

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

It's a tried and tired expression, but it rang true at Chaparral Center Monday night — "When you're hot, you're hot. When you're not, you're not. And never the twain shall meet."

The red-hot Lady Bulldogs of Midland High crushed the colder than ice Rebels of Midland Lee, 47-28, in a district playoff game to earn a berth in the 64-team state Class 5A playoffs.

Both teams came into the game with identical 18-9 season records and identical 11-3 District 4-5A marks. That's why they had to play this one. The two teams tied for second place in 4-5A and only two teams can enter the playoffs from each district.

Lee's state playoff hopes went up in a smokeless 20 percent shooting balloon from the field while the pressing and control conscious Lady Bulldogs gained state admission for only the second time in the school's history.

Both teams appeared to be tight, but the senior-laden squad of MHS ended up walking to victory over their younger counterparts at Lee. It was the fourth time the two teams have met this year and the Lady Bulldogs were winners in three of those contests and MHS has now won 12 of its last 13 games.

"Denise (Lanz), Dieder (Knapp) and Tina (Knight) showed some senior leadership for us and I think that was a big difference," said MHS coach Jane Young. "Lee's defense was awful good, but the experience factor may have been the difference."

THE LADY Bulldogs hit only 37 percent from the field, but they kept Lee off balance throughout the game as Lanz chipped in 13 points to lead all scorers while Knapp and Knight both hit for nine each. That was enough points right there to defeat the frustrated Rebels.

"We just couldn't make a shot," said Lee coach Shirley Stephenson. "Our inexperience showed. Only three of the 16 girls on the team are seniors. For three quarters, I thought that everyone on the floor was tight except for Lanz and Knapp."

"It's so easy to let your season go out on a sour note like this, but you just can't judge our season by this last game. We can't forget what these kids did all year long."

Despite the fact that Lee couldn't buy a hoop with a Fort Knox payload, the Rebels were in the game at the end of three quarters, 32-24. But then came the fourth quarter and it could go down as one of the worst in MHS history.

Lee hit 13 unanswered points for a 45-24 lead while Lee missed its first 11 shots of the period and didn't score until Joan Watley connected on a rebound after Midland Lee's Tina Swinney, left, and Lavette Wallace tell the story of Midland High's 47-28 district playoff victory at Chaparral Center Monday night.

Score by quarters:
Midland High 10 13 9 15—47
Midland Lee 9 7 8 4—28

only thing that kept the score from being much worse was the fact that Lee had a 39-28 advantage in rebounds.

"Lee is a good team, but a lot younger than us," said Knapp. "They play a little out of control and I think we controlled the ball much better."

Lanz, the city's top female scorer with a 16-point per game average, said, "I think we might match up better against them than some other teams because we try to control the game and went at the pace we wanted. It's also easier to play a rival like Lee because you get pumped up more."

Another big factor in the game was at the free throw line. MHS hit on 17 of 31 from the charity stripe for 55 percent while Lee hit only 10 of 24 for a 42 percent showing. Nothing fell for Lee.

PLAYOFF NOTES: Midland High will test rugged Lubbock Monterrey, the District 3-5A winner, in a bi-district game at 2 p.m. Saturday in Lamesa's Middle School gym. Tickets for that game can be purchased at the door for $3 for adults and $2 for students.

Bliss knew it could happen

Bears surprise Ponies, 94-90

Associated Press

In pulling off one of the biggest upsets of the Southwest Conference basketball season, the Baylor Bears surprised just about everyone but Southern Methodist Coach Dave Bliss.

"The last four games Baylor had played super basketball," Bliss said Monday night after his ninth-ranked Mustangs suffered a 94-90 loss to the SWC's last-place team. "They deserve all the credit for this win. We've just got to bounce back."

It was the third straight loss for the suddenly reeling Mustangs, who lost 69-66 at Arkansas and 82-78 in overtime at North Carolina State.

In the night's only other game involving ranked teams, No. 2 Georgetown tripped No. 16 Villanova 57-50.

The Baylor victory was keyed by freshman guard Eric Johnson, who came off the bench to score 24 points. Johnson teamed with backcourt mates Carlos Briggs and Michael Williams, another freshman, to lead Baylor's offensive show.

Williams' clutch free-throw shooting put what had been a very tight game away for the Bears. He hit nine of 10 free throws in the final 3:34 and finished the night with 11 points and 10 assists.

"Nobody but our coaching staff and players believed this, but going into this game we expected to win," said Baylor Coach Jim Haller. "After playing Arkansas into overtime and losing by two at (Texas) A&M, we learned how to play in big games."

"Our guys just fought their guts out," added Haller, who came into this season with seven of his top eight players either freshmen or junior college transfers. "We're not freshmen anymore. We're not junior college players anymore. Tonight we were winners."

Georgetown's Patrick Ewing scored 16 points and grabbed 10 rebounds as the Hoyas held off Villanova in a Big East Conference game. The Hoyas, winning their fourth straight game after a two-game losing streak, took the lead for good at 46-45 on Ewing's turnaround jumper from the baseline with 2:57 remaining.

After Bill Martin's free throws increased the lead to 48-46, Ewing converted two free throws and then assisted on a basket as the Hoyas opened a 52-47 lead with 40 seconds left. Villanova, which led by as many as nine points in the first half and led 45-44 with three minutes remaining, was outscored 13-5 down the stretch.

"We just can't catch a break," said Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino, after watching his team lose for the fifth time this year after leading at halftime. "We just can't get a basket when we need it."

Georgetown, which beat Villanova 52-50 in overtime earlier this year after trailing by 10, proved too strong again for the Wildcats, outbounding Villanova 20-7 in the second half.

"They wear you down but we shouldn't take a backseat," said Massimino, noting that Monday night's loss was the fifth time his club has been beaten by teams ranked in the top five in the nation.

Others
In other action, Detlef Schrempf scored 20 points and grabbed 10 rebounds to lead Washington past Arizona 81-63; Chad Tucker scored 21 points as Butler defeated St. Louis 66-61; Michael Foster scored a career-high 27 points and handed out seven assists to lead South Carolina to a 73-65 victory over Tulane; Maurice Myrick's 23 points led Florida State to a 91-79 victory over Southern Mississippi; and Glenn Clyburn scored 20 points and Appalachian State sank 23 of 27 free throws in the second half to beat Tennessee-Chattanooga 78-60.

Also, Terry Catledge hit a jumper with 1:24 left to play to give South Alabama a 60-59 victory over South Florida; Tony Neal scored 17 points and had nine rebounds as Fullerton State posted an 86-64 victory over Pacific; Scott Barnes scored 20 points and grabbed 10 rebounds to lead Fresno State to a 52-40 win over UC-Irvine; and Barry Sumpter scored 18 points to lead Louisville over Virginia Tech 70-65.

Losing to 'Skins hits hard

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

The Dallas Cowboys lost to the Washington Redskins twice during the 1984 football season, and obviously, aren't very happy about it. On Monday, Feb. 25, they'll try and get back some of their respect when the two teams meet in Abilene in the first game of a four-game swing through West Texas.

For Midlanders, it's the second stop on the West Texas Tour that will be of the most interest since it will be played for charity at Chaparral Center on Tuesday, Feb. 26, at 7:30 p.m. The game is being billed as the RepublicBank-First National Midland "Scalp the 'Skins" Basketball Challenge.

Monday, Cowboys Ron Springs, who organizes the basketball team during the off season, and his assistant Everson Walls were in Midland for some advance publicity on the game.

"We beat them three out of four times last year and would have won all four but Everson here missed some free throws at the end of the game...just kidding," said Springs. "Everson is my assistant because I might be traded at any moment and Everson will be ready to take over. Drew Pearson used to run this team before he had his tragic accident and retired."

THE COWBOYS and Redskins have one of the bitterest rivalries going in the NFL. On the playing field, each team likes nothing more than taking a victory from the other, whether it be football, basketball or "I'd play hard against the Redskins even if it was just marbles," said Walls.

The intense rivalry does cause a few problems on the basketball court, mostly because it's a one-sided crowd in the stands. Where you find Cowboy fans, there are few Redskins and where you find Redskin fans,

"This game does a lot for the Cowboy-Redskin rivalry," said Walls. "Any time we get together it does a lot for our causes."

Matt Holten/Reporter-Telegram

The Cowboys are bringing some of their biggest name players to the game and not just because they are well known. They also know their way around a basketball court. "We grew up playing basketball a lot," said Walls. "Basketball is a good way for us to stay in shape during the off-season."

According to Springs, the Redskins have some talent as well.

"Charlie Brown is a good player and Mike Williams did a good job on Ed 'Too Tall' Jones last year," said Springs. "Ed Jones will be our tallest man but he'll score the fewest points."

"Ed liked to get out there and clown around out there with Drew," added Walls, who also wanted it to be known that serious basketball was the main order of business. "We will clown around some but mostly we'll play basketball, especially when we're getting paid for points."

The money Walls is talking about is $5 per point scored by either team and it will be donated by RepublicBank to the Special Olympics fund. "We're talking $5 per point so you know we're going to be pushing the ball up court," said Walls.

THERE ARE other fund raising activities planned, including an auction of Cowboy items: autographed footballs, team jerseys, etc. The proceeds will benefit a local charity to be announced.

The game will be played under regulation rules with four 12-minute quarters.

Playing in the game for the Cowboys will be: Ron Springs, Everson Walls, Ed 'Too Tall' Jones, Tony Dorsett, Bill Bates, Michael Downs, Dennis Thurman, Dextor Clinkscales, Tony Hill, Doug Cosbie. For the Redskins: Art Monk, Curtis Jordan, Tony Peters, Ken Coffey, 'Downtown' Charlie Brown, Calvin Muhammad, Michael Williams, Anthony Jones, Perry Brooks and Jeff Hayes.

Assigned seating only tickets can be purchased at the Chaparral Center box office or at Endless Horizons in Midland and Odessa. Prices are $8 and $6 and were put on sale Monday.

'Dogs, Panthers can only hope Rebels, Eagles lose

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

If the Midland High Bulldogs hope to make it to the state playoffs this year they need an awful lot of help. And, all of it needs to come from Midland Lee and Abilene High in the form of two losses.

If the Lee Rebels and Abilene Eagles, both 9-3, defeat tonight's opponents or win on Friday, then the Bulldogs can pack it up. It's a triple long-shot at best. Even more so when you consider the teams the Bulldogs have to pull for: Odessa High and Big Spring, two of the bottom three teams in the District 4-5A standings.

While worrying how Lee fares against Odessa High or Abilene High against Big Spring, the Bulldogs have to keep an eye out on their own foe: Odessa Permian. Like the Bulldogs, the Panthers are 7-5 in the district and need a victory while rooting against Lee and AHS.

Midland High and Odessa Permian will meet tonight at 8 p.m. in Chaparral Center.

In the first district meeting between MHS and Permian, a 79-78 Panther win, the Bulldogs came up with a 39-point effort from Darrell Davis and 19 from Matt Sears but it wasn't enough. Permian's Terry Williams countered with 30 points while Jimmy Davis added 19.

Davis is the league's top scorer with a 26.5 average while Williams is ranked No. 4 at 17.6. The two have contrasting styles of play. While Davis likes to play muscle-ball under the basket or inside the lane, Williams likes to let 'em rip from all corners.

FOR LEE, Friday's 87-74 loss to Abilene High marked the third time this season the Rebels have been knocked from the top of the 4-5A ladder into a tie for first place.

The Rebels bounced back after the first two losses, but have been unable to put a lock on the playoff door.

Even with a victory tonight over Odessa High, Lee isn't guaranteed a playoff berth. It would only mean two less teams two worry about: MHS and Permian.

San Angelo, in third place at 8-4, has probably the easiest finishing schedule in the district, meeting Cooper tonight and Big Spring on Friday which sets up a very real possibility for a three-way tie for first place or a two-way tie for second. Lee finishes the season Friday against MHS while AHS takes on Cooper.

Mike Leach connects with a backhand in his match against Mats Wilander Monday. Leach came up with a 7-5, 6-2 upset.

Leach still preying on top seeds

DELRAY BEACH, Fla. (AP) — It was a dream come true for Mike Leach — and a nightmare for two members of Sweden's Davis Cup team.

"I was unseeded, unheralded and a naive country boy, and I won the NCAA (tennis) championship in 1982, beating Brad Gilbert in (final)," Leach said.

"When I went from the NCAA to the tour, I was the guy walking around the lockerroom getting autographs. There were guys I read about growing up.

"A couple of weeks after I joined the tour I went on the court against Vitas Gerulaitis. I was actually shaking on the court. He beat me so fast he didn't even shower."

With a serve faster than his quips, Leach pounded second-seeded Mats Wilander 7-5, 6-2 Monday to move into the quarterfinals of the inaugural $1.8 million Lipton International Players Championships, a two-week event with identical 128-player singles draws for men and women.

ALSO FALLING Monday were fourth-seeded Anders Jarryd of Sweden, a 6-1, 6-4 victim of No. 11 Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia, and the women's No. 3 seed, Wendy Turnbull of Australia, who lost to

Lipton Tennis

Yugoslavia's Andrea Temesvari 6-4, 6-3.

Other winners on a card that was curtailed by rain included Gerulaitis, seeded 12th here, Scott Davis and Sweden's Jan Gunnarsson in the men's singles, and West Germany's Steffi Graf in women's play.

Top-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia lost the first set and was leading in the second 6-5 against No. 13 Stefan Edberg of Sweden when the rain began. That fourth-round match was to be completed today.

The rain also halted a fourth-round match between two other former NCAA champions, Greg Holmes (1983) and Tim Mayotte (1981). Mayotte had a 1-0 lead in the opening set when play was halted.

Yannick Noah of France, seeded ninth, had his night match against Sammy Giammalva postponed.

LEACH SAID he is constantly confused with Rick Leach, another player on the tour, or Rick's father, Dick Leach, the University of Southern California tennis coach. He also noted the Association of Tennis Professionals' media guide lists his residence as Weston, Mass.

"I grew up in Boston, so the ATP press guy has me on the east end and the crowd has me in California — you know, wherever Dick and Rick live. But I live in Ann Arbor (Mich.). I have a house there, and house payments. You can ask the bank."

On Monday, for the second straight day, Leach conquered the winds that swept the hardcourts at Laver's International Tennis Resort. He had upset 10th-seeded Jimmy Arias to reach the fourth round.

"Reaching the round-of-16 at Wimbledon was a great week," Leach said of last year's tournament. "But beating Arias and Wilander back to back was probably my best."

"I felt with the way I was playing, beating Arias gave me confidence. And I saw (Bob) Green's match with Wilander (on Sunday), and Green and I play similar games."

Green gave Wilander problems with his big serve before the Swede was able to pull out a 6-3, 4-6, 6-4 victory.

"I always serve well," Leach said. "It's my best shot. Obviously I'm not used to the quarterfinals in major events or I wouldn't be 98th (on the computer rankings)."

"The wind was terrible, and gusty," he said of the conditions. "He was definitely hurt by it more than I was. I have a short ball toss. If it was a calmer day, obviously it would be a reverse score."

"At 5-1 in the second set, I was still going for it. He's dangerous," Leach said of Wilander. "He's a Swede. That may not say it all, but it does to us."

Noting the 17 mph wind, with gusts to 23 mph, "was the same for all of us — I can't say it affected me more," Wilander said.

"In the first set I had a chance for a break to 6-all, but he aces me three times. There's nothing you can do about that."

SMID SAID he used simple tactics to topple Jarryd.

"The wind was very strong. I just put the balls on the court. I did nothing special, just played steady. If any ball went over the net, I figure your opponent can miss it."

Turnbull said the wind bothered her more than it did Temesvari because of the difference in their style of play.

"I hit a slice more, and the wind can take that," the Australian said. "She hits topspin, and it drops."

"If it had been a cross-court wind, I don't mind. But it was a 'down' wind — at one end of the court you're with the wind and at the other end you hit into it."

No change in AP's top two; Race brewing for third

Associated Press

St. John's and Georgetown remained No. 1 and 2, respectively, in The Associated Press college basketball poll Monday, while the rest of the Top Twenty swapped places.

After a week of upsets, the real fight was for No. 3, where Michigan became the top challenger to the two Big East powers.

St. John's received 63 of 64 first-place votes and 1,279 points from the nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. The Redmen are currently on the nation's longest Division I winning streak — 14 games — and they set a Big East Conference record with Saturday's 70-68 decision over Villanova, 11 consecutive league victories.

Georgetown, which received the other first-place vote, was named second on every other ballot to finish with 1,217 points.

Then the scramble began as six schools — Michigan, Oklahoma, Memphis State, Georgia Tech, Duke and Southern Methodist — were named third on at least one ballot. Two other schools, Syracuse and Louisiana Tech, were tabbed as high as fourth on some ballots.

Michigan, 18-3, which had been No. 8, made the week's biggest gain and finished third in the voting with 1,044 points. The Wolverines, who beat Big Ten foes Purdue and Illinois during the week, have improved from 18th to 10th to eighth to this week's standings in the past four polls. On Thursday, Michigan, 9-2 in conference play, will face Iowa, which trails by just one-half game in the race for the automatic berth in the NCAA tournament.

Oklahoma, 19-4, jumped from seventh last week to fourth with 987 points, while Memphis State, which received just five points less, fell from third to fifth. The Tigers suffered just their second loss of the season last weekend when they were beaten by Kansas 75-71 on the road. Memphis State starting guard Andre Turner did not play in the game because of a death in the family.

Georgia Tech, 18-4, moved from 10th to sixth with 929 points after registering Atlantic Coast Conference victories over Duke and Wake Forest last week. Duke, 17-4, was next with 920 points, while Syracuse, 815, Southern Methodist, 761, and Kansas, 707, rounded out the Top Ten.

Southern Methodist fell from last week's No. 4 ranking after suffering road losses to Arkansas, 69-66, and North Carolina State, 82-78 in overtime.

Iowa led the Second Ten, followed by Louisiana Tech, North Carolina, Nevada-Las Vegas, Tulsa, Villanova, Illinois, Oregon State, Alabama-Birmingham and Maryland.

Last week, the Second Ten was Nevada-Las Vegas, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana Tech, North Carolina, Oregon State, Tulsa, DePaul, Villanova and Maryland.

Of this week's Second Ten, six teams suffered seven defeats, yet all held their Top Twenty placings.

Illinois, 18-7, which fell to Michigan State, 64-56, and Michigan, 57-45, was the week's big loser, dropping from ninth to 17th. The Fighting Illini, who were second to Georgetown in the preseason poll, are down to eight healthy players since center George Montgomery suffered a broken bone in his foot that may sideline him the rest of the season.

Alabama-Birmingham, 21-5, rejoined the Top Twenty after a one-week absence. DePaul, 15-6, which suffered their first loss in 36 games at the Horizon, their home court, fell from the list of ranked teams for the first time this season. The Blue Demons, who lost to Dayton 67-63, had been ranked as high as second during the season after being third in the preseason poll.

Alabama State rallies past Texas Southern

Associated Press

Tony Terrell sank a 15-footer with three seconds remaining to give Alabama State a 69-67 come-from-behind Southwestern Athletic Conference basketball victory over Texas Southern Monday night.

Alabama State trailed 40-34 at halftime and managed to claim its first lead, 67-66, with only 45 seconds remaining in the second half.

With 28 seconds left in the game, the score was tied 67-67.

Texas Basketball

Alabama State ran the clock to seven seconds before calling time out. Terrell, who came off the bench for Alabama State, then hit the winning basket.

With the win, Alabama State improved its overall record 8-14, and 4-5 in the league. Texas Southern dropped to 8-13 overall, and 4-5 in the SWAC.

Center Mark Johnson scored a game-high 22 points to lead East Texas State to a come-from-behind Lone Star Conference victory over Texas A&I.

ETSU is 12-12 on the season and 4-3 in the LSC while A&I falls to 10-12 and 4-4.

The Lions' Jerry Thomas gave ETSU its only lead of the first half with a 15-foot jumper with 16:23 left for an 8-7 margin.

The Javelinas rallied behind guard Alton Jackson, who scored 20 points, and forward Charles McClelland to regain the lead and A&I led at intermission 41-39.

Globetrotters going co-ed after 58 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Harlem Globetrotters are putting a new spin on the ball, as they prepare to end a 58-year "men only" tradition and welcome the first woman basketball player to their ranks.

Not everyone on the team of court comics is happy over going co-ed, but head coach Charles "Tex" Harrison says woman players have become too good to ignore.

More than 200 women across the country have answered the Globetrotters' call for applications. Harrison said that the winner — perhaps more than one — will be chosen in time to join the team next year.

Harrison said a woman's size will be no problem. But she should be skilled at handling a basketball and fast on her feet, he said, and she should have "a radiant personality."

The coach said Cheryl Miller of the University of Southern California would be an ideal choice, but that only non-students would be considered. Ms. Miller was a member of the U.S. women's basketball team that won an Olympic gold medal last summer in Los Angeles.

The Globetrotters were honored Monday by the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of American History as "an important part of American social history." They gave the museum a game uniform, a warmup suit, tour books, posters, photographs and other memorabilia of their performing career.

Hubert "Geese" Ausbie, 45, who is playing his 24th year with the Globetrotters, says the team's adjustment to having a woman player in its midst "will be kind of rough."

Ausbie said traveling by bus will be especially difficult, and he expressed concern over the "wear and tear on the body" that a woman will experience playing against "some big guys" on opposing teams.

Curly Neal, the bald, 20-year veteran of the team, said, "I think it's wonderful."

Cadets avenge rout by stunning Chaps, 64-63

From Staff Reports

ROSWELL, N.M. — The New Mexico Military Institute Broncos held Midland College Chaparral leading scorer Tevin Binns to only one point Monday night, wouldn't stay down when the Chaps had a lead and ended up with 64-63 victory that dropped the Chaps back into a tie for Western Junior College Athletic Conference first place with Odessa College.

It was a total turnaround from the first time the two teams met in WJAC play. In that game, Binns scored a college career high 42 points as the Chaps pounded out a 97-70 victory.

Unofficially, Binns missed 12 free throws and came up with his only point of the night with 10:15 remaining in the game when he hit the first of two free throw attempts.

After trailing by a 38-31 halftime score, the Broncos put on a second half rally to gain their first lead at 47-46 with 14 minutes left to play.

The Chaps were able to regain a four point lead but again couldn't hold it as Broncho Cliff Wiggins hit three straight buckets to give the Cadets a 57-55 advantage.

Chap Zeke Williams followed by making three straight steals which turned into two buckets, one by Williams and the second by Lawrence Chumbley for a 61-59 Chap edge.

NMMI's Johnny Wilson came up with a three-point play with 1:03 left in the game for a 62-61 lead followed by Chap Ricky Grace driving to the basket for a 63-62 score with 12 seconds left.

The Broncos worked the ball down court for their final shot and hit it with three seconds left when Wilson buried one from the corner.

MC's desperation shot by Pokey Wington was blocked.

The loss, combined with an Odessa College 75-73 victory over Western Texas, leaves MC and OC in a tie for first place at 11-2. The Chaps are 20-4 overall. NMMI kept a grip on third place with the win at 9-3 and improved to 19-6 overall.

Against OHS, the Rebels have a strong four-man attack led by Brian Marcynski with a 15.6 average and Raymond Morney at 14.5. Derek Westbrook is also in double figures at 11.6 while Anthony Dickens is under the mark at 7.9.

For the Broncos, Allan Bailey is the No. 5 scorer in the district with a 16.9 average while teammate Keith Smith is adding another 12.8.

MHS' only other playoff appearance came in 1983 when the Lady Bulldogs defeated Plainview in the bi-district round in Brownfield before losing to El Paso Eastwood in the area game in El Paso.

Monterrey coach Tim Tasker met with Young, Midland AD Gil Bartosh and assistant AD Ed Nixon following the game Monday to determine the home team for the neutral site contest in Lamesa. Young called tails as Nixon flipped and MHS won home team honors in what may have been the longest flip on record. The coin rolled about 40-feet before coming to rest against a Chap Center stairwell.

Odessa Permian's girls, the 4-5A champions, didn't have to play any kind of district playoff for advancement since they won the league outright with an 11-2 record. Permian will square off against 3-5A runnerup Amarillo High at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at the Lubbock Coronado gym.

A crowd of close to 1,000 was on hand for the Lee-MHS playoff, the largest of the season for either school.

Dollar strong

LONDON (AP) — The dollar shattered records for the seventh straight day today, even though trading was thin with American markets closed for Lincoln's Birthday. Gold prices gained.

Dealers explained the dollar's advance by citing bullishness about the American economy and the belief that the large U.S. budget deficit will mean continued high interest rates.

The dollar's strength and the absence of central bank intervention to stop its climb combined to propel the dollar to new trading highs against British, French and Italian currencies and a 13-year European trading high for the West German mark and Dutch guilder.

The psychologically important barriers of 2,000 Italian lire and $1.10 to the British pound were breached on Monday. The dollar was just fractions below another such level, 10 French francs, early today.

The British pound was quoted at $1.0655, a shade lower than its record-low close of $1.0975 in Europe Monday. Sterling has been suffering both from the strong dollar and weak oil prices, which deflate Britain's earnings from its North Sea fields.

Against other currencies at midmorning, one dollar bought:

—3.2738 West German marks, up from 3.2875.

—2.7855 Swiss francs, down from 2.7870.

—9.9945 French francs, up from 9.9545.

—3.7065 Dutch guilders, up from 3.6960.

—2,011.75 Italian lire, up from 2,004.50.

Analysts predicting steady interest rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interest rates, headed on a downhill path since September, should remain at current rates through June with the help of a hands-off policy by the Federal Reserve, private economists are predicting.

Most analysts hold this belief even though growth of the nation's money supply has been extremely robust in recent months. Such a surge in money growth in the past has prompted the nation's central bank to apply the brakes in order to keep inflation from getting out of hand.

However, since there are no warning signs that inflation is about to ignite, analysts believe the Fed is more likely to take a wait-and-see attitude.

Policymakers for the Federal Reserve were to begin two days of closed-door meetings today to chart monetary policy and reach final decisions on overall money growth targets for the full year.

The group — known as the Federal Open Market Policy Committee — meets seven to eight times a year, keeping the decisions secret until after the next meeting. This time, however, results of the annual growth targets will be known sooner since Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker is scheduled to report on these targets in congressional testimony next week.

Analysts were predicting the overall growth targets will be very close to the rates announced tentatively last July. They also expect this week's meeting will produce no deviation from the current short-term strategy.

"They obviously want to keep interest rates about where they are now," said economist Michael Evans, head of a Washington forecasting firm. "They have taken actions recently to keep rates from going any higher and also to keep them from going any lower."

The central bank seeks to allow creation of enough money to keep the economy growing but not so much as to overheat the system and spark inflation. By controlling the money supply, the Fed influences the cost of money — interest rates.

Economists say the Fed is behind a dramatic drop in interest rates since September. The decline of about 3 percentage points has been credited with spurring a strong rebound in economic growth that occurred in the last three months of the year.

Oil magazine predicts 1985 drilling increase

HOUSTON — World Oil magazine, published by Gulf Publishing Company in Houston, Texas forecasts 76,824 wells and nearly 382 MM ft of hole to be drilled in 1985. This is up 1.2 percent and 2.5 percent, respectively, from last year.

Bob Scott, editorial director, also predicts there will be 14,478 exploratory tests, up 7.2 percent overall, with an average U.S. rotary rig count of 2,520. This is a modest 91 units up from last year.

The forecast is based on 1984 estimated actual drilling of 75,937 wells, including 13,512 wildcats. This compares to the 81,941 total wells and 14,381 wildcats reported drilled for the same year. Estimated actual totals are calculated for each state and more realistically indicate actual drilling activity than do the reported number.

The overall 1985 U.S. drilling outlook is for offshore operations to post excellent gains and most major oil states should record marked increases in wildcatting. This or any other forecast will continue to be jeopardized by the ongoing uncertainty over oil/gas prices and shadows cast by tax bill writers, according to Mr. Scott.

The majors plan slightly reduced budgets and drilling for the year, but will increase exploratory and offshore work, and spend a greater percentage of their money on E&P. The independents plan healthy increases across the board, but many of the budgets may be less firm because they will depend on the course of oil and gas prices over the next several months. Other helpful indicators for 1985 include continued economic growth that should sustain recent increases in demand for oil and gas, and indications of more drilling between 10,000 and 15,000 ft that should help sales of higher profit products.

Overall, 1985 could produce more problems than solutions. Barring an oil/gas pricing disaster and/or tax fiasco, and if the forecast is met, there could be continued improvement in pricing and demand for equipment and services, Mr. Scott said.

Outside the U.S. and Communist countries, 1985 is expected to record a 6.8 percent gain to 17,905 wells, thanks largely to pro-industry policies in several key countries.

In Canada, revocation of the National Energy Policy and determination to export crude and gas will stimulate drilling to a record 10,000 wells this year, compared with 9,200 drilled in 1984.

Midland makes plant bid

Staff reports

Midland has joined the quest for General Motors Corp.'s Saturn plant and meets all selection criteria, said Grant Billingsley, executive vice president of the Chamber of Commerce.

The criteria includes specific land, energy, water and transportation requirements, he said.

"This is very preliminary," he said, adding that Midland is one of 150 Texas cities, as well as hundreds of others nationwide, applying for the campus-like plant.

Friday is the deadline for cities to submit selection criteria. The Texas cities involved were selected by the state's Economic Development Commission.

Jane Christensen, economic development representative for the Chamber, said the Midland Chamber is planning to meet with the Odessa and Big Spring chambers to discuss the possibility of applying for the plant cooperatively.

"It could make it more effective," she said. A site for the plant, which is expected to employ 6,000 people by 1990, could be determined by early summer.

GM specifications say all or none of the plant's employees will be hired locally. Preference in hiring will be given to those with the required skill levels, followed by laid-off GM workers.

Suppliers that will locate near the plant could generate more than 20,000 other new jobs, according to Argonaut Real Estate, a GM subsidiary.

The Saturn project is intended to eliminate the current $2,000-per-car advantage that Japanese automakers currently have over American counterparts in the small car field. The plant is expected to cost about $5 billion.

GM documents specify that the plant will be located in an area that is able to provide job opportunities for Saturn employees' spouses. The company also wants a site of 600 to 1,000 acres with access to an interstate highway system and to main railroad lines.

Petroplex sale moves closer

Midland Bancorp. Inc. a Texas-charter unitary savings and loan holding company which is sole owner of Petroplex Savings Association, has received a purchase offer from Jack B. Sommerfield of Dallas to acquire the $175 million savings association.

The proposed sale, which must be approved by the Midland Bancorp. stockholders, provides a cash consideration of $53.25 per share. It is, of course, subject to the ratification of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and the Texas Savings and Loan Department. "Such regulatory approval usually takes about 90 days to obtain," explained Jim Everett, president of Petroplex Savings and Loan Association, in making the announcement.

Sommerfield is Vice Chairman of Sunbelt Bancorp and has been associated with the savings and loan industry since joining the Murray Investment Company in 1964. The SMU law school graduate also served as executive vice president for a title insurance company and a real estate investment trust before moving to Murray Savings in 1976.

He was named president of Murray Savings in 1978, Lamar Savings, Austin in 1982 and Sunbelt Savings, Dallas in 1983. His promotion to Vice Chairman was announced in 1984.

"The tremendous growth of Petroplex Savings — which recently earned the Association the distinction of being named a High Performance Association by the National Thrift News for the third time — has attracted the attention of others," Everett continued. "However, the strong desire of Sommerfield to maintain the local influence in Petroplex Savings' management has made the Board of Directors consider his offer to buy in a favorable light. And, personally, I don't think we could have a more qualified individual to help us direct the future of this organization," he continued.

New York fights utility oil spill

ISLAND PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Floating booms have been placed across a creek to keep some 200,000 gallons of fuel oil that leaked from a utility storage tank from spreading into marshland that is a breeding area for fish and birds.

The booms at both ends of Simonson Creek on the south shore of Long Island were "doing a pretty good job of keeping it contained," Coast Guard spokesman Greg Creedon said Monday.

The spill occurred Sunday night at Long Island Lighting Co.'s E.F. Barrett Power Station, about six miles east of Kennedy Airport.

"The amount that leaked beyond the creek is minimal," Creedon said. Officials feared the No. 2 oil, used by LILCO to fire generators, would spread into hundreds of acres of surrounding salt marshland, a breeding ground for birds and fish.

But Creedon said most of the oil was contained in the creek, about a mile long and 100 yards wide, "and is not going beyond there into the marsh area."

Though a handful of ducks were found with oil-coated wings, "we got away lucky," said David Vieser, a spokesman for Hempstead Town Supervisor Thomas Gulotta. The oil-covered fowl were retrieved for cleaning by environmentalists.

"Mainly, we're lucky it happened at the time of year it did — in the winter — when a lot of the water is frozen, food is minimal and there aren't a lot of birds around," Vieser said. "If it was summer, well, who knows?"

Creedon said 200,000 of the 450,000 gallons of fuel inside the tank had spilled. Earlier, there had been conflicting estimates by various local officials, with some estimates as high as 400,000 gallons.

American standard of living higher

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans had a higher standard of living than they did in the last decade and spent a larger percentage of their income on items other than food, a new study says.

They also paid four times more for pet food than baby food and twice as much caring for their hair as caring for their teeth.

The study titled "How Consumers Spend Their Money" shows that changing lifestyles, smaller households and rising numbers of working women have altered consumer markets across the nation. In the last decade, for example, one- and two-person households have become a significantly larger market, while larger households have become a smaller market.

The study sponsored by Hearst Magazines was prepared by The Conference Board's Consumer Research Center, which based its report on findings by the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics. It focuses on how much money different groups spend on 150 kinds of food, household supplies and personal and health care products.

Merchants use such information to determine where they can sell their products, according to Fabian Linden, the author of the study released Monday.

"If you're peddling pickled peacock tongues, you want to know who is buying them," Linden said. "It's the kind of information that marketers spend millions on each year to find out who is buying their products."

The study also provides a look at how spending patterns and lifestyles have changed during the past two decades.

In 1980, an American family spent 22 percent of its income on food. That dropped to 19 percent in 1970 and 17 percent in 1980, when the government data used in the report was collected.

"This is an impressive demonstration of how our living standard has improved, because the amount you pay for food is an indication of how much you have left over for other things," Linden said.

Americans have also been spending a larger share of their food money eating out, the study said. Over 32 percent of the nation's food dollars was spent on restaurant food in 1980, up from 28 percent in 1970 and 17 percent in 1960.

Working women were a major factor in the eating-out trend, the study said. Families with working wives spent more than one-third of their food budgets on food away from home, compared with 25 percent in homes where wives do not work.

The study said single people and two-person families have proliferated, and accounted for more than 40 percent of all supermarket purchases, up from about 33 percent a decade ago. The number of households with five or more people has diminished and large families bought less than 20 percent of all food, down from 30 percent a decade ago.

Americans are also more educated than they were 20 years ago.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Bill aimed at credit bureau rating reporting

By BILL KIDD

AUSTIN — Credit bureaus would be required to notify persons whose credit ratings could be affected of unfavorable credit information, under legislation proposed by Rep. Al Price, D-Beaumont.

HB 515 would require credit bureaus, upon receiving information "that, if reported by the credit reporting bureau, would lessen the person's ability to obtain credit, the credit reporting bureau shall notify the person of its receipt of the information."

Violation of the act would be a misdemeanor. The bill is proposed to take effect Sept. 1.

Another bill by Price, HB 637, deals with repairs to be made to new motor vehicles under warranties.

The bill provides that if a consumer reports to a manufacturer or distributor "that the vehicle does not conform to an express warranty...given by the manufacturer, distributor, agent, or dealer," repairs are to be made to correct the problem "regardless of whether the repairs can be made before the expiration date of the warranty."

The bill provides that if the repairs aren't made, the unrepaired vehicle is to be replaced with a new vehicle "of the same type" or the consumer's purchase money (less a reasonable amount for the use of the vehicle) is to be returned.

Rep. Anita Hill, R-Garland, has introduced HB 547, setting out requirements for documents for conveying a home.

HB 547 provides that the seller must "write in longhand and sign" a statement on the deed, saying, "I understand that I am selling my home, including the title and all incidents of ownership in my home."

The bill is to take effect Sept. 1.

Legislation to continue the Air Control Board under the "sunset" review process, and increasing the amount of fees charged industries regulated by the ACB, has been introduced by Rep. Patricia Hill, R-Dallas.

HB 21 would require fees to be set "so that the board can recover not less than 25 percent nor more than 50 percent of the actual annual expenditures by the board" in reviewing and acting on permits, inspecting facilities and enforcing orders, rules and permits.

ACB currently is recovering less than half the minimum which would be required under the legislation.

The bill also would create a "Clean Air Study Committee," which would be charged with studying issuance of renewable permits, regulation of emissions from ships, and regulation of "grandfathered" facilities which were not required to obtain permits from the ACB because they were constructed prior to creation of the agency.

The panel would report its recommendations by Dec. 1, 1986, for consideration by the 1987 Legislature.

The bill also would allow the ACB to assess administrative penalties of up to $25,000 per day for violation of agency regulation or permits.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Scoliosis patient should follow doctor's advise

Dear Dr. Solomon: My niece has been diagnosed as having scoliosis, and she is wearing a brace for it. The doctor has also prescribed exercises, which my brother (her father) tells me she is not doing. I have some influence with my niece and I could probably get her to do these exercises, but I would first like to know how important they are. I don't want to hassle her for no reason. — Billy, Dallas.

Dear Billy: I recommend very strongly that patients follow the instructions given them by their physicians. If a physician prescribed an exercise regimen, the patient should follow it or get a different physician.

Having said that, I should add that in one study, exercise was found not to be helpful in a group of patients who were using the Milwaukee brace. That is, the final degree of curvature was similar in the patients who exercised and in those who did not.

Your brother might want to discuss this with the physician, but I suggest that your niece continue to do the exercises if that is what the physician prescribed.

Dear Dr. Solomon: What are occupational allergies? — Miss A.O., Dayton, Ohio.

Dear Miss O.: The term occupational allergy is generally used to describe episodes of allergic reactions occurring after working with industrial dusts, vapors, gases or fumes. Furthermore, substances like nickel (in coins), chromium (in cement), rubber, different dyes, formaldehyde and glues may result in eczema which occurs at the site of contact with the skin.

The degree of eczema depends on the length of exposure and the sensitivity to the substance. Symptoms may show within some weeks but often it can take months, years, sometimes decades before an eczema develops. Any part of the skin may become affected but the most frequent sites in my patients are the hands, arms and the face because these tend to be the least protected parts of the body.

Dear Dr. Solomon: What do you think of the use of drugs for the treatment of bedwetting? I don't like the idea of using them, but I've tried everything else I know about with no luck. Would you have any recommendations about the use of drugs in such a case? — Mrs. T.O., Tacoma, Wash.

Dear Mrs. O.: Certain antidepressant medications have been found to be effective in the treatment of bedwetting; however, these drugs are potentially toxic in children.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write Dr. Solomon at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

FAA continues push for automated cockpits

WASHINGTON (AP) — There may never be a pilotless commercial airliner, but the push toward an increasingly automated cockpit is likely to continue.

says William R. Fromme, director of aviation safety at the FAA.

Most likely, the aircraft of the late 1990s will have an airborne collision avoidance system that also could "talk" directly to the computer, which would automatically maneuver the plane to avoid a collision.

Federal Aviation Administration officials envision that within the next decade air traffic computers on the ground will be able to give direction and altitude changes directly to airborne computers. This direct link could replace the current voice communications between pilot and air traffic controller.

"A pilot could be sitting there and all of a sudden his airplane descends, or climbs, or turns left or right (as a result of a command from the ground). I can envision that within the next 10 years,"

In the newest technology aircraft, the flight path is programmed into the computers by the pilot before takeoff. Industry experts foresee the time not far in the future when a central computer at an airlines' headquarters will store flight plans for an entire fleet of aircraft and automatically send the information into the plane's onboard computer.

Prosecutors submit evidence in drug trial, defense objects

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

Despite objections Monday from the attorney representing a 40-year-old Midland man accused of felony possession of cocaine and methamphetamine with intent to distribute, prosecutors were allowed to submit boxes of plastic food bags found in a kitchen cabinet and other items confiscated during the execution of a search warrant in early December at the man's home.

The two-man, 10-woman jury selected Monday afternoon in the trial of Reese X. Barnes, 400 S. Benton, watched as the boxes of bags, a food scale, $796 in cash, a box of .25-caliber bullets, personal business cards and insurance forms and bills were submitted as evidence. Defense attorney Carmen Eiker objected to the submission of many of the items, arguing they were irrelevant and introduced for inflammatory purposes.

The money found on Barnes after he was followed in the early morning hours Dec. 6 from his home and stopped at Winchell's Donut House at the corner of Louisiana and Big Spring by three Midland police narcotics detectives, was introduced in an effort to tie the defendant to drug transactions, Ms. Eiker contended.

"THE STATE hasn't brought any evidence to the money," she argued before 238th State District Court Judge Vann Culp. "They haven't in any way tied it to the alleged offense."

Barnes and his wife, Barbara, were arrested after police searched their two vehicles and home. The two were charged with possession of marijuana with intent to distribute.

The Midland County Grand Jury handed down indictments in December charging Mrs. Barnes with unlawful possession of methamphetamine with intent to deliver and Barnes with unlawful possession of methamphetamine and cocaine with intent to deliver.

The first-degree felony charges against Barnes carry punishments of five to 99 years or life in the Texas Department of Corrections.

The lesser offense of possession of a controlled substance, which may be considered in Barnes' trial, is a second-degree felony punishable by two to 20 years.

The charges against Mrs. Barnes and the misdemeanor marijuana charges against the couple are pending.

According to testimony from Detective Sgt. Danny Neal of the MPD narcotics division, Barnes said he was on his way to work when he was stopped by police.

MS. EIKER did not object to the introduction of business cards identifying Barnes as owner of an independent lawn service which were seized from the front seat of Barnes' pickup at the time of his arrest.

Ms. Eiker asked Neal if he had any personal knowledge that the money had come as the result of a drug sale.

"No," the five-year Midland police veteran said.

She then asked the prosecution witness if it was "within the realm of possibility" that the money had come from Barnes' lawn service business.

"Yes," Neal said, adding, "but unlikely."

"No, I'm sorry, officer," Ms. Eiker responded. "I didn't ask if it were likely. Would you please wait until I ask the question? It would go more smoothly."

Johnny Anastasio and Mike Reed, detective sergeants with the Midland police narcotics division, corroborated Neal's testimony. According to the three, a warrant to search Barnes and his wife, Barbara, his two cars and property was signed Dec. 4 by Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry.

THE THREE followed Barnes Dec. 6, but didn't pull him over until his third stop, they said.

According to Reed, the delay was for "security reasons." Neal testified the police did not stop him earlier because "we were waiting for him to get out of the south side of town."

The officers said a brown paper sack containing 10 plastic bags of about 1.5 grams of marijuana and a bag with a piece of tin foil containing what they thought was cocaine was found in Barnes' pickup.

Highway department awards road contract

From Staff Reports

The State Department of Highways and Public Transportation has awarded a contract to Strickland & Knight, Inc., of Big Spring to improve a section of Loop 546 in Midland. Loop 546 previously had been known as State Highway 158 and follows the route of Florida Street.

The project will begin at State Highway 349 (Rankin Highway) and end at Interstate Highway 20, which is 2.3 miles.

Work should have started Monday, according to a news release from the Highway Department, and should require 100 working days. The city of Midland is paying the cost of curbs and gutters, estimated at $88,000. The city also will adjust manholes and water valve covers to meet the completed pavement elevations.

The contract also calls for scarifying the existing base material, adding new flexible base material to about half the project and placing hot mix asphaltic concrete pavement. Also, new pavement markings and traffic signal loop detectors removed during construction will be replaced.

The contract was awarded at a total cost of $754,285 with federal, state and city funds being used.

The contractor will work one-half the width of Loop 546 to completion at a time. Driveway access should be maintained at all times with minor disruptions while working in the immediate area. Minor street intersections may be closed for short periods with all intersections being open to traffic at night. A 40 mph speed zone will be established throughout the project.

Drivers are being asked to use alternate routes to reduce congestion and are urged to obey all warning signs in the work areas.

Lynn Passmore, resident engineer in Midland, is in charge of the work, with State Highway Department District Engineer W.A. Lancaster providing overall supervision.

Bush rally sold out

From Staff Reports

The 2,000 tickets to the Centennial Kickoff featuring Vice President George Bush had disappeared by 5 p.m. Monday, according to Robin Jackson, executive director of Midland Centennial Committee.

"At 8:15 a.m., people were lined up at the door and they came in a steady stream all day," she said.

Midland Center was the only site approved by Bush's security people for the 6:30 p.m. kickoff, which will commemorate Midland's 100th anniversary.

Ms. Jackson is asking persons who won't be using their tickets to please return them to her office at the Chamber of Commerce, 109 N. Main St. "If we have a bunch returned, we'll announce it to the public. We want to remind people if they can't use their ticket to please get it back to us."

The rush for the free tickets wasn't expected, she said. "I'm thrilled about it, but we didn't expect them to go right away."

Officials make tentative pact on branch library

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A proposed branch library known as "Midland Centennial Library" may be lending its 15,000 volumes to shoppers at Midland Park Mall if a tentative agreement between Midland County Commissioners' Court and shopping center is finalized.

The proposal is to be reviewed by the Indiana-based Melvin Simon & Associates, owners of the mall.

The mall would offer Midland County Public Library 1,375 square feet of floor space "rent free" this year and charge a below-market $8 a square foot — or $11,000 for the space — in 1986. Rental at the regular mall rate of $13 a square foot would hike the lease to $17,875.

"The library will be good for the mall, and the mall will be good for the library," said Commissioner Durward Wright.

"Sounds good to me," said Commissioner C. Wallace "Wally" Craig. "I think it's a very fine proposal on the part of the mall," said Wright.

The mall's rent-free gift in 1985 would be its contribution to the Midland Centennial, which is being celebrated this year.

"THE MALL'S continuing subsidy of below-market rates is made as part of its continuing contribution to Midland community groups and activities," John H. Wheeler, mall manager, said in a letter to Wright, who is the Commissioners' Court liaison to the library.

Midland County Judge Bill Ahders said the branch library would benefit the county, the mall and the people.

If the proposal is approved by the mall's owners, the branch library may be in operation by spring or summer of 1985.

The bow tie-shaped space is at the Sakowitz entrance on the Mall's northwest side.

Wheeler said both of the Mall's bookstores, B. Dalton Bookseller and Waldenbooks, are "highly in favor" of the branch library and each wanted the library close to its business.

The proposed library space is closer to Waldenbooks.

The booksellers' reasoned that "anything that promotes reading... would help their business," Wheeler said. He said that since the branch library "obviously can't have everything," the booksellers reason that they would be reap many referrals from the library's staff.

$1,200 in property stolen in household burglary

From Staff Reports

More than $1,200 worth of items were reported stolen Monday from the Arturo and Elida Urias residence at 1505 S. Baird.

According to police reports, Urias returned home from work at 4 p.m. to find a back door open, which he had secured at noon. Taken were a $250 30-30 Winchester lever-action rifle, $200 .22-caliber Ruger semi-automatic rifle, $700 remote-control color television set and $100 cable television converter box.

Nettie Williams of 1705 E. Wall St. told police her residence was burglarized by someone who removed a pane of glass from an eastside door. A 9-by-12-foot hand-woven rug valued at $800 and an $80 black and white television set were taken. The burglary took place between 9:20 p.m. Sunday and 8:40 a.m. Monday.

An undetermined amount of property was taken from a vacant residence at 304 S. Webster belonging to Ruby Morris, 507 S. Madison. The house, which has been vacant for more than a year, was last checked a few weeks ago, according to reports.

Taken from the house were a washer, dryer, stove, three-piece bedroom set, a table and four chairs. Extensive damage to doors and windows also was reported.

About $650 worth of items were reported stolen from a house at 2602-B W. Mariana Ave., owned by Aldy Macha of P.O. Box 3353. The owner said the renters moved out sometime Monday and took two dressers, a double bed, box springs and a mattress not belonging to them.

Seven Midland firefighters were called at 4 p.m. Monday to a residence at 2003 Sands St., owned and occupied by Kenneth Confer. The fire, which began when a skillet of grease left in the kitchen overheated, was out on arrival.

Only minor damage was reported to the kitchen.

Midland County sheriff's officials are investigating the theft of a woman's gold ring, valued at $1,300.

According to reports, Bonnie McLen of Dusty Lane No. 14 said the ring was stolen from her house sometime during the day Saturday or Sunday.

A burglary was reported at the National Trade Exchange, 900 W. County Road 114. According to reports, a check, replica of a Rolex watch and records were taken. Value of the items has not been determined. Entry was gained by prying sheet metal off the building, reports said.

Almost $300 worth of coveralls, yellow slicker suits, thermal underwear, work boots and hard hats were reported stolen between Saturday and Monday from a drilling site 100 yards north of West County Road 270. According to reports, a doghouse at the site, owned by Pool Well Service on West U.S. Highway 80, was entered by using a crowbar to pry off locks, reports said.

Adults justify wrongdoing, discover it's unfair

It's not fair. Why can those three words justify any wrongdoing at age seven and yet sound like downright whining when uttered by an adult?

Scenario please... There I was, three blocks from the Gulf inspection station, orange ball in site and my expired inspection sticker just moments from being renewed. With a sigh of relief I stepped on the gas, anxious to redeem myself.

I should have known better. An unmotivated motorist never wins.

The police car was actually in worse shape than the ignominious auto idling in front of it.

"Did you know that you're inspection sticker is expired?" said the officer.

"But I was on my way, really officer, and the station is right there and, and..." said I, stumbling in unbelievably honest apologies.

It's not fair, I said $30 later.

I muttered those same three words that I used so often as a kid. Funny, they seemed to carry more impact back then.

"It's not fair Mama," I said in my most teeth-grinding whine, when my older sister got to stay up an hour later. Most of the time I didn't get my way and was scuttled off to bed anyway, but every once in a while, those words held magic.

My parents would be in an exceptionally benevolent mood and a carefully emoted "It's not fair" would be just the ticket to another episode of Bonanza.

A true artist can wheedle, beg, outfox and charm himself into getting his way using only those three words. With a multitude of nuances, facial expressions and contrived facts, a child can rule his home.

I know.

Ah, but now 20 years later, in Midland, Texas, those golden years are a waning memory.

"It's not fair," I said to myself even louder as I dropped off the car at the inspection station, my hopes for redemption dashed by a five-minute lesson in humility.

The words bounced off the disreputable interior of the car. No one heard them. No one cared. No father to come along and say, "That's all right, you can tear up that $30 ticket and we'll give you another chance."

No warm embrace from a doting mother. Just a "It's going to take 45 minutes to inspect the car," from the station owner.

No anxious expectation of droning out my best "It's not fair" to any friend or family member within earshot. And the reception would not be kind from my fellow journalists should I let loose with a whiny "woe is me" in the newsroom.

No, things have changed.

Today, any self-respecting adult drag on his cigarette, hitches up his jeans and lets it fly right by.

The English have their own way of dealing with it. "Veddy good," they say. Or, "Carry on." Not quite as efficient as Americans who usually stick to one word.

The banning of "It's not fair" by all who reach adulthood has deep anthropologic roots. I am sure. When we stop using those three words, we start taking on responsibility.

I am positive that there was some cavekid in B.C. times, who whined all day long over such important matters as who had the newest toy spear or not being allowed to stay up and sit around the fire.

But I bet there were very few cavemen who nasally complained about how "unfair" it was to have to go out in the rain and search for food.

Sort of a stupid analogy, but you get the picture.

So here I am sitting in my disgraced auto 20,000 years later, still trying to get some justice with those three words.

The fact is, no one wants to listen to a grown man complain that the world is treating him unfairly. They (those not listening) figure that a grown man ought to act grown.

It's not fair.

Ron Gilmore is a Reporter-Telegram staff writer.

Clearing debris

Midland firefighter Jerrel Johnson shovels debris from a residence at 206 N. G St. at noon Monday. The house, owned by L.W. Boerm of 3208 Durant, caught fire after a paint thinner being used to remove a carpet mat from the floor in the living room ignited with a match. Ten men responded to the fire, which was out on arrival.

Midland County Librarian John Deats noted the commissioners have been "very enthusiastic" in setting up a branch library.

HOWEVER, THE commissioners had been apprehensive about the cost of funding a branch. The concept apparently became increasingly attractive to the commissioners after Wheeler reduced the proposed 1986 lease from a below-market rate of $10 a square foot to $8 and after the Friends of the Library agreed to donate $24,000 for the branch's shelving and furniture.

Were the branch library not to work out, the $24,000 would not be a lost investment, Deats said, since the furniture and shelving could be put to use in the downtown central library.

The branch library's operation is budgeted for $84,000 in 1986, Deats said. The downtown library, which has a 150,000-volume book collection, is operating on an $833,000 budget this year.

Deats had suggested the county hire an architect to help plan the branch library. Craig, however, wasn't overwhelmed by that suggestion.

"I certainly don't want to do anything in a slipshod manner," Craig said. "I just can't see the need for an architect."

Responded Deats: "I would think an architect would be very helpful to us in helping us to maximize the space."

CRAIG THEN suggested that an architect might donate his expertise for such a "civic-oriented service."

Commissioner Win Brown said Deats may be looking for an interior designer coupled with an architect to design the branch library.

"The interior design is going to be pretty essential," Deats said.

"We may end up hiring an architect," Craig said. In the meantime, the commissioners are considering asking Bill Harrah, a civil engineer who is the county's consulting engineer, to draft a library design.

In other business, commissioners:

—Awarded ClayDesta Communications a contract for long-distance economy telephone service. ClayDesta guaranteed rates 25 percent cheaper than AT&T's long-distance rates and, since it's Midland based, proposed, "Why not help us refuel the Permian Basin economy."

—Reaffirmed their confidence in the Treasurer's Office by passing a resolution in opposition to Texas House Bill 36 which would abolish the Treasurer's Office at the option of the voters in each county. The treasurer takes care of the county's payroll, insurance, retirement plans, among other functions.

"Ham is certainly getting a lot of smacks today," observed Mary Frances "Tany" Sloan. Her son, Tom, married McRae's daughter, Mary Ann.

Jno. P. Butler, a bank executive who came to Midland in 1927 to begin his career with The First National Bank, greeted McRae: "Happy Birthday...Many more of them."

Butler's wife, Alva, congratulated McRae: "I told Ham, 'Did you ever think we'd make it this far?'"

"We're getting to be old-timers," said McRae's wife, Adrian.

Fred T. Hogan, son of T.S. Hogan who in 1929 built the 12-story Petroleum Building, said McRae is "truly a great man."

"Of course, he's our attorney," said Hogan's wife, Novadean, "and when we go see him (even on business), it's a visit."

When the McRaes moved to Midland in 1936, he started practicing law on his own but in the offices of Tom Sealy and Frank Stubbeman. He was independent or so he thought. But since Sealy and Stubbeman frequently were out of the office on trial, McRae ran their affairs.

"They were gone so much of the time," McRae recalled. "I got tired of running their business and mine, and we went together."

Stubbeman had practiced law in Midland since the early 1930s, and Sealy set up practice here in 1935 at $75 a month.

"That was real money in those days," McRae told Sealy.

Since those days, McRae has developed a sterling reputation. "He's very well loved and highly respected," said Jerri Fielding, a legal secretary for the law firm, which has offices in Austin and Houston. "He has many friends."

"They don't make them like him anymore," said Nancy Bailey, McRae's secretary. "He's from the old school."

Also confiscated from the vehicle were the box of bullets, business cards and an envelope from an insurance company.

The officers testified they found a red coin purse containing 35 cents and a pink balloon with white powder they thought was cocaine in Barnes' pockets, where they also found the "roll" of paper money.

An expert from the Texas Department of Public Safety lab is expected to testify this morning about the results of tests run on the alleged drugs, according to Midland County Assistant District Attorney Jack Connors.

A loaded automatic pistol, food scale and a plastic bag containing a piece of tin foil with what was believed to be methamphetamine were found in a bedroom and bedroom closet, according to testimony.

"Isn't it possible that (the food scale) could be used for measuring drugs?" Connors asked Neal under Ms. Eiker's objections, which were overruled.

"DUE TO IT not being found in the kitchen and it being found in the same room as the tin foil, I'd say it's a very good possibility," Neal said.

But under cross-examination by Ms. Eiker, Neal said the scale was not tested for drug residue.

"What else was found in the kitchen cabinets with the plastic food bags?" Ms. Eiker asked Neal.

"Nothing, that we seized," he said.

"Are we to assume, then, that the contents of the cabinet were normal kitchen items?" she asked.

"Yes," he replied.

Ms. Eiker said Monday she had not decided whether or not Barnes would take the stand in his defense today.

Odessa men charged with robbery

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Three Odessa men were arrested Monday night and charged with aggravated robbery in connection with a failed robbery attempt Saturday morning, according to police.

Ricky Dale Kennedy, 23, and Ray Lynn Stull, 21, both of 208 Neal St., were charged with the attempted robbery of Pizza Inn employee Gary Wiley at 1:20 a.m. Saturday. Bond was set at $15,000 apiece.

A third Odessa man also was arrested but had not been arraigned by this morning, so his name was not released. A fourth suspect, a 20-year-old Odessa man, was not in custody but was expected to be arrested later today, according to police.

The men are accused of trying to rob Wiley as he attempted to make a night deposit at an M-Bank at the corner of 42nd Street and Grandview Avenue. When they approached, he drove away, police said. The men were arrested at 11:40 p.m. Monday after Odessa police received a tip from the Ector County Sheriff's Office.

Also arrested Monday was Carlos Jaquez, 27, of El Paso, who was charged with felony possession of marijuana and unlawful carrying of a weapon, according to police.

Acting on a tip from Crime Stoppers, police arrested Jaquez at the Greyhound Station at 5 p.m. and found him carrying half a pound of suspected marijuana and a pistol. Bond was set at $1,500 for the marijuana charge and $750 for the weapons charge, police said.

State officials prepare legislation to prevent 'non-bank' mischief

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State officials are preparing legal and possible legislative efforts to prevent the "mischief" of "non-bank banks" in Texas.

Banking Commissioner James L. Sexton says the Department of Banking is working with Attorney General Jim Mattox to "stop that mischief" and also plans hearings on at least some of the applications for such banks in Texas.

Sexton says 27 applications for non-bank banks in Texas have been approved by the Comptroller of the Currency. The banks would operate across state lines, and provide most, but not all, services of commercial banks.

Mattox has said he will bring suit to prevent operation of such banks in Texas on grounds they would violate Texas banking laws.

The 27 applications must be approved by the Federal Reserve Board, but Sexton says he's received no word on whether any of the applications have been accepted for filing.

"We're waiting for some indication from the Fed," Sexton says. He says hearings on some applications will be held under provisions of the Texas Banking Code relating to acquisitions and activities of holding companies. In some instances, he says, hearings will not be possible because the applications don't involve holding companies operating in Texas.

He reports information received on one company indicated it planned to make second mortgage loans on homes, which he said the Department of Banking would consider an "unsafe and unsound" practice since under the Texas home-state laws, there would be no way to foreclose on the collateral.

Crimestoppers investigates local fires

Crime Stoppers this week is seeking information about several fires at an Odessa apartment complex in November.

The fires were started Nov. 6 and Nov. 11 at the Oakwood Square Apartments, 4600 Oakwood, according to reports. The fires, listed as arson, resulted in heavy damage to at least one apartment, which was used for storage.

Information about the arson that leads to the arrest and indictment of those responsible could be worth a $1,000 reward. Crime Stoppers pays cash rewards for information about felony crimes. All callers may remain anonymous.

To contact Midland Crime Stoppers, call 694-TIPS; in Odessa, call 333-TIPS.

Centuries old docks become luxury zones along river

By BEN DOBBIN
Associated Press Writer

LONDON — Dilapidated docks from Britain's imperial past and cavernous warehouses used in the days of Charles Dickens are being transformed into luxury homes, offices, sports and cultural centers along the River Thames.

More than $1.2 billion in government and private funds have been spent or committed to develop land in the docks area, including ambitious renovation or demolition projects.

About 4,500 houses have been built and 10,000 more are planned over the next decade. New red-brick roads criss-cross the Isle of Dogs dock area, and plans call for rail, subway and ferry links with London's center, about five miles to the west.

An unused passenger and freight terminal is being converted into Britain's first national indoor sports complex, with a 200-meter running track, a dozen tennis courts and a five-to-a-side soccer field, with seating for 5,000 spectators.

One area has become a complex of telecommunications and high-technology industries, the home of satellite earth stations, computer companies, printing plants and Britain's largest independent television studios.

The metropolitan port, extending for seven miles along each bank of the Thames, owed its prosperity in the past to the expansion of the British Empire. But when the empire disintegrated, so did the port.

The Royal Docks, the largest of several necklaces of interconnecting, man-made lakes on peninsulas formed by the winding river, is the proposed site for a small airport to ferry business executives on short trips to the European continent.

Its runway would extend along land between two vast stretches of water where as many as 50 ships once berthed at a time, discharging West African timber, Indian tea, Australian wool and South American beef.

"I don't think it will ever come around the way it was," said waterman Ken Collins, surveying the wintry, disheveled landscape as he piloted a tugboat near Millwall and West India Docks, which was closed to commerce in 1980.

In the last decade, the Port of London Authority, which runs the London docks, has moved most of its operations 25 miles east to Tilbury, close to the mouth of the Thames. The London docks' work force has been trimmed from 25,000 in 1970 to 3,500 today.

Collins now works at the Millwall and West India Docks for the London Docklands Development Corp., a state-owned body set up in 1981 to coordinate the regeneration of the abandoned docks areas.

The development corporation's area runs from Tower Bridge, the gothic landmark within view of the city's financial district, to the Royal Docks, the last of the great, imperial docks that closed in November 1981.

Already, private developers have restored old wharfs within the shadow of Tower Bridge.

St. Katherine's Dock has been transformed by construction giants Taylor Woodrow into a marina and tourist center, with hotels, high-rise offices and expensive houses overlooking 19th-century Thames barges moored next to the latest glass-fiber cruisers.

The Kuwaiti royal family is building London's largest-ever inner-city development at Hay's Wharf at an estimated cost of $392 million.

Offices, shops, luxury apartments, a ship museum, pubs, restaurants, a private hospital, sports facilities and a park are planned for the 24-acre south bank site.

The area was formerly a thriving, bustling center for stevedores tending ships in what is known as the Pool of London, which had been derelict since the late 1960s.

The development corporation's urban redevelopment project, said to be the largest in Europe, is currently concentrated downriver on the Isle of Dogs, a broad peninsula at a sharp bend in the river.

Much of the Isle of Dogs remains dominated by miles of flattened land, corrugated-iron warehouses, dank canals, rusty locks and tall, skulking cranes — a scene of colonial activity laid low.

Yet all the while the landscape is changing. Warehouses of Dickens' day are being demolished, while other 18th and 19th-century edifices are being restored.

The development corporation says it has already spent $65 million on redevelopment, with private investors committing an additional $541 million to construction on the corporation's land.

At least $650 million has also been committed by private investors at other dockside sites in the city since 1980, the corporation says.

Immigration bill sponsor plans for new approach

WASHINGTON (AP) — The sponsor of a long-fought immigration reform bill that almost made it to the White House last year is looking to "tune up" the measure and try to satisfy some of the bill's opponents this time around.

Sen. Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., might propose a bill that would delay amnesty for illegal aliens until after a program of employer sanctions is in place and working, said Simpson's press secretary, Mary Kay Hill.

"Senator Simpson will be introducing immigration legislation, but it won't be the bill that died in the last Congress," she said. "We're looking at a number of alternatives. Most deal with a simpler bill — separating employer sanctions from legalization, or perhaps a trigger mechanism for legalization when employer sanctions are in place."

COMPREHENSIVE IMMIGRATION reform has two major components — employer sanctions, making it illegal to hire illegal aliens; and amnesty, a program to allow illegal aliens to see legal status if they have been living in the United States for a length of time.

Correspondingly, the measure has two major opponents — Hispanic groups, who oppose employer sanctions, and conservatives, who oppose amnesty.

Those groups don't often find themselves on the same side, but they banded together effectively last year to kill the bill.

The Hispanic groups fear employer sanctions will discourage employers from hiring anyone Hispanic, and conservatives argue the aliens broke the law and should not be rewarded with legalization.

"We recognize we're going to have to assure the opposition of legalization that it is a one-time only act," Ms. Hill said.

SIMPSON HAS given up on pleasing the Hispanic groups, she said, so he will court the other side of the opposition.

"The leaders of Hispanic organizations will most likely never support a strong employer sanctions program," she said. "Standing alone, the opponents would not be able to kill either or."

Many other groups worked against the bill for varying reasons. Organized labor opposed the measure as a threat to job security of U.S. citizens.

Joe Trevino, director of legislation for the League of United Latin American Citizens, was chagrined to hear of Simpson's plan, but he said Hispanic groups were prepared for it.

"I am troubled by Sen. Simpson's strategy, because it seems to appease the concerns and complaints of those who think there is widespread breaking of the law and not those concerned about discrimination," Trevino said.

"To pit the opponents of amnesty against Hispanics is to exacerbate the political differences that already exist between those groups," he said.

HISPANICS ARE NOT necessarily a united front this year, according to Trevino. He said LULAC will write a proposed immigration reform bill of its own. Last year, the organization backed an alternative measure sponsored by Rep. Edward Roybal, D-Calif.

This year, Trevino said, LULAC "had no hands on the Roybal bill." He said Roybal's measure would include a provision the Hispanic group does not like, a version of the "guest worker" program to allow agricultural workers to cross the border temporarily.

Because of freezes that have caused shortages of produce, Trevino said, "it is incomprehensible to me how growers would need guest workers today."

LULAC wants a simple bill, including amnesty and increased enforcement by the Border Patrol.

The Roybal bill also includes a form of employer sanctions, Ms. Hill said.

"Senator Simpson certainly appreciates that gesture, and it says to him that Hispanic leaders have read the tea leaves," she said.

THE IMMIGRATION and Naturalization Service has said it will seek to loosen restrictions on temporary agricultural workers in lieu of a "guest worker" program. INS says the administration is now considering seeking a "stripped" bill, containing only the amnesty and employer sanctions provisions.

President Reagan backed off the legislation last year because of lack of a spending cap, and Ms. Hill said that brings up another part of Simpson's strategy this year.

She said Simpson wants separate hearings on two stumbling blocks that helped kill the measure in its final days — the cost of enforcing the bill's provisions, and "alienage," the question of whether it would allow a person to bring a discrimination suit based on citizenship.

The Senate passed the Immigration bill with relative ease in 1983. The House passed the Simpson-Mazzoli bill, named for Simpson and Rep. Romano L. Mazzoli, D-Ky., its House sponsor, in the summer of 1984. The measure finally went to a conference committee, but the panel could not agree and the bill died when Congress adjourned.

MAZZOLI HAS been reconfirmed as chairman of the House Judiciary Subcommittee on Immigration, but his press secretary said he has not made a statement on his involvement in the legislation this Congress.

Mazzoli is "welcome" to join Simpson in the effort again this year, said Ms. Hill, but she said Simpson wants to find a broader base of support in the House. Meantime, his involvement is unquestioned.

"Immigration reform is going to pass," she said. "Simpson is not going to give up."

Let Lewellen pay your January heating bill

Bill Lewellen of Lewellen Construction and Home Improvement Center is willing to pay your January heating bill (the portion of your bill which applies to heating your home) if you are willing to take action by March 10 against future high heating bills. Bill points out that with the ever increasing cost of heating a home it is important to know that you are getting the most out of your energy dollar. Diamond storm windows from Lewellen's will help you lock the cold air out and the warm air inside. That's why Bill is offering to pay your January heating bill if you let him install storm windows throughout your home by March 10. There's no better time than now to take action against high heating bills!

Joan Lewellen at Lewellen's Home Improvement Center will write the check for your January heating bill if you let them install storm windows by March 10.

Government studies have shown that both storm windows and doors can save tremendous amounts of heat energy. That's why you may qualify for a tax credit if you install storm windows in 1985. In order to qualify for a credit of 15 percent up to $300 (15 percent of $2000) your home must have been substantially completed by April 20th of 1977. According to Bill, the law which grants this tax credit is only scheduled to be in effect through 1985. Though the time period may be extended, why wait and take a chance on missing this tax savings opportunity?

Moreover, you can have confidence in Diamond storm windows which have a 15 year nonprorated limited warranty against defects in material and workmanship. Just think if you have storm windows installed now you won't have to fight all the dust in the spring.

Storm windows can also eliminate nearly all sweating from inside windows if certain rules are followed and ideal conditions prevail in the house and its construction. Windows sweat when air comes in contact with the window surface which is below the dew-point temperature. The air is chilled and condensation takes place. A residue of water is left on the surface of the glass. The installation of storm windows usually raises the temperature of the inside window above the dew-point, thereby relieving the steaming, sweating, or frosting of the INSIDE window. In the winter when an excessively high inside humidity is created it causes a vapor pressure because relative humidity outside is comparatively low. Moisture vapor will tend to equalize. Therefore, the inside humidity will leak through cracks around the inside sash, into the air space between the primary and storm sash and condense on the inner surface of the cold storm sash instead of on the inside of the primary window.

It is important to have your storm windows installed by a qualified company. If the windows are installed incorrectly they won't be as effective.

Lewellen Construction is a local company which is well known for doing quality work at a fair price not only with windows, but also with siding and patio covers. Many Midlanders who have been approached by out of town companies with big discount prices on siding jobs have found that Lewellen's fair, everyday price is far below the other company's "discounted price."

Bill and Joan Lewellen will be glad to give you a list of past customers, so you can see how pleased they are with the work Lewellen Construction and Home Improvement Center does. Bill accepts VISA and Mastercard. Home improvement loans are also available so call 686-8007 today or go Lewellen's Home Improvement Center at 1811 W. Industrial.

Crescent Antique Furniture and Mini Storage offers practicality and beauty

Crescent Antique Furniture and Mini Storage displays antique items of many kinds, including dining tables, beds, buffets, English secretaries, signs, mirrors, and books. Mr. and Mrs. T.R. Welch, owners of the shop which is located on Highway 868, explain that much of the furniture comes from Europe, but about 50 percent of the stock is American.

Regardless of its origin, antique furniture brings a special character to any decor. As Mrs. Welch points out it is very practical, but that's not all. Antique furniture reminds people of their rich heritage. It offers a sense of identity. Maybe this is why the country motif has become so popular in recent years. Along with this trend, the acceptance of eclectic decorating, which utilizes both antique furniture and new furniture, has opened many more people's eyes to the beauty of antiques.

A wash stand, English secretary, buffet, or marble top commode from Denmark may be selected at Crescent. The new decor combines a revelation of one's heritage (through the use of antique pieces) with a statement concerning contemporary life (shown by the use of new furniture).

One of the most popular items,

Mrs. Welch says, is a space-saver type table. These tables are especially nice for apartments.

Mrs. Welch is partial to what she labels "granny chairs." Crescent keeps a wide selection of chairs in stock, including cane bottom and ice cream parlor chairs. Some are sold in sets of four, while others are sold individually. Some are grouped with dining tables.

There are many antique books in the lawyers' stacking book cases at Crescent Antique Furniture. Stained glass windows, beveled mirrors from the 1920's, and a Magnolia Petroleum sign, which is painted on both sides, are also available.

For the bedroom there are old oak beds, as well as brass and iron beds. The list goes on and Crescent offers free delivery on large items.

It's easy to find Crescent Antique Furniture and Mini Storage. Just go north on Midland Drive, immediately after crossing Loop 250 turn left on Highway 868 (road is not marked), then it is just two more miles to Crescent. They are open on Saturday 10-5 and Sunday 1-5. However, the Welchs will be glad to open the store at anytime (even after work) by appointment. Just call 694-6358 to set an appointment or to find out more about their clean storage units which are accessible 24 hours a day and checked frequently.

Permian Sign Company renews commitment to making painted signs

In 1953 Permian Sign Company, one of Midland's leading sign companies, was started in a small shop on Cotton Flat Road. Soon Permian Sign was known for offering the highest quality commercial signs available. As the sign industry developed, the company grew with the market and began producing electric, neon, and plastic signs.

Today, Jack Brady, owner of Permian Sign, says that they are renewing their commitment to making painted signs. Roy McCormick, who has 25 years of sign making experience, along with R. C. Eastin, who's been making signs for 12 years, are taking care of any type of painted sign that Midland might need.

Whether a billboard, a wooden logo, a magnetic sign, window lettering, or a menu board is in the making there are two signs of a good company at work. One is the production of a high quality product. The second is timely completion. Without question, Permian Sign Company fits the bill.

From the time that Permian Sign Company gives their free estimate to the delivery of the finished product quality is the emphasis. They will carefully survey the place that the sign will be placed, get the proper permits, and go to work on a first rate job.

Roy explains that the use of high quality paint in a endless variety of colors makes Permian Sign Company's work likely to outlast the wood it covers.

Vinyl letters in a number of styles make translucent colors and white stand out much better on a dark background.

In order to produce such a high quality product on a timely schedule, Roy and R. C. get a little help from Permian Sign's new computer, Sign Maker 4. This innovative friend does all the lay out work so that Roy and R. C. can spend more of their time actually making signs. Now they can offer one day service on window lettering and some small signs.

Permian Signs, still located at 1400 Cotton Flat Road, is open Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

A high quality product in next to no time - that's the sign of Permian Sign Company.

R. C. Eastin (left) and Roy McCormick of Permian Sign Company have combined sign making experience of over 37 years. Call them at 682-7203 to find out about Permian's renewed commitment to producing high quality painted signs.

Bright raincoats popular for spring showers

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Ask a woman at any time of the year to name the most useful item in her wardrobe and the chances are, after shoes, she will say, "My raincoat." Still, spring is the time when most raincoats are purchased, in deference to the proverbial April showers, and because of the need for a good lightweight coat that can go over spring clothes.

The crop of raincoats for this year is stronger than usual, and the magic word is "plastic." Cotton, polyester and even silk fabrics are backed with polyurethane and in some cases threads are wound with rubber, all of which adds to the impermeable quality of the new coats. It also gives them a high shine, which is especially attractive in the fresh colors that dominate the raincoat offerings.

"Happy colors" is what Luba calls the rose, marigold, teal blue and poppy red shades that glow throughout her collection. The designer for Luba Designs explains, "They're not neon bright but dusty. But they're still cheerful on a gloomy day."

Yellow and blue are in strong demand in orders at Drizzle, the raincoat specialist, according to Jane Lipman, one of the owners.

"But people still want black, because it goes with everything and, even more important, because it can be worn at night with dressy clothes," she reports.

For though raincoats are bought primarily to repel rain, they often also double as an evening coat. A black raincoat is the indispensable item in the luggage or on the backs of women travelers.

"I rolled mine in a ball and put it in my suitcase the last time I went to Paris," recalls Eleanor P. Brenner of the company that bears her name. "Then I wore it every day of my visit because it was raining."

The raincoat, black plastic with alligator markings, is in her spring collection. The designer of separates figured it would be as useful to other women too, so she added it to her line, to be worn over her various jackets, sweaters, blouses and pants.

There are some new ideas in raincoat design. The most useful is probably the double coat of Ilie Wacs. The outer layer is a slicker in bluish pink, navy or yellow. Inside is a separate coat of white cotton twill, which can double as a coat dress. In another version, the inside coat is navy wool flannel, the outer shell a yellow slicker.

Wacs is a longtime advocate of another type of rain fashion, the rain suit. He does it in cotton gabardine with either a bloused jacket or one that looks like a shirt, and the best colors are black, camel and yellow.

Harriet Winter goes a step further. In addition to rain suits — she does them in plastic — she offers a rain dress. The designer of the company known as Mrs. H. Winter uses the same off-white canvas of painters' dropcloths as well as various textured plastic materials for her rain clothes. One version combines the two, with sleeves of the heavy cotton on a jacket with lizard plastic used for the front and back.

While these styles are officially destined for spring selling, many of them will be in the stores this month.

Copley News Service

About A.D. 1440, Agnes Sorel became the first woman to adorn herself with diamonds, previously considered appropriate adornment for men only.

In a brazen attempt to catch the eye of King Charles VII of France, the resourceful Agnes collected every diamond she could from her male relatives and had them set in a spectacular necklace. She arrived at court bathed in diamond brilliance. Everyone was spellbound, and the king smitten by the charms of Agnes and her diamond jewelry. She became the king's mistress.

Ellis pushes light dresses

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Summer is not a time for fancy dress, according to Perry Ellis. His new collection of clothes for hot weather is spare, stripped of all gewgaws and extraneous decoration. This doesn't mean he has created fashions that are likely to go unnoticed. In knitted fabrics that cling to the body, some are as revealing as swimsuits. This effect is not accidental.

"I think of summer dressing as centered around the beach," the designer says. "Everybody is active and in good shape and is not in the mood for fussy clothes."

So he has made jackets that fasten on the chest and then open through the middle, shorts to be worn with matching bras or shirts and dresses that bare the knees.

What gives the clothes their special éclat is the colors Ellis has devised: slightly offbeat shades of mustard or burnt orange, and bright blue and green, which he combines in medleys of stripes of different sizes that are to be worn together or with solid-color pieces.

Minis are one of his enthusiasms, jumpsuits with halter necklines another. The jumpsuits are made with either short or long pants and are warmer-weather versions of styles well accepted in the spring collection.

Silk and linen fabrics are dyed the same colors so they can be worn interchangeably and big jackets are available to wrap up the snuggler pieces. Everything looks clean and bright to compliment tanned bodies. They have a resort flavor to brighten leisure hours. Look elsewhere for clothes to wear to work or to posh parties.

The clothes will be coming into the stores at the end of March, in plenty of time for long summer weekends. Typical prices are $130 for a miniskirt, $240 for a long cardigan.

Fall lines previewed

New York Times News Service

American designers have already begun to show their new fall clothes, or early fall clothes as they are called. The concept of many of the moderate-priced collections, including Perry Ellis Portfolio, Calvin Klein Classifications, Daniel Hechter America and Liz Claiborne, the queen of the moderate-priced clothes designers, is something called "wear now clothes" or "10 months a year dressing."

While the attention of the fashion world continues to be on the big-name designers, it is designers like Miss Claiborne, whose annual sales volume is $380 million, who are dressing the largest number of American women and doing it, often, in innovative ways.

The newest innovation is designing clothes that, though they may be named for a season, are essentially seasonless and can be worn as soon as they are shipped to the stores.

Ira Sadovsky, the president of Daniel Hechter, said, "Until now, stores carried clothing that was usually for the next season. So all clothes shipped in June were for fall and were tweeds and flannel. But the retail climate and the actual climate has changed. Now women don't need woools and tweeds in June because they are not buying their fall clothes months in advance."

Bells toll for mom

By ERMA BOMBECK

When the kids were small and I was looking for a career change from bathroom to boardroom, I made a list of my skills.

As it turned out, the only job I could have filled without additional training was one of those phone answering services. They're an "at home" business where a person has 15 or 20 clients and cuts into the phone call and says, "Miss Snowflurry isn't here now, but if you'd care to leave your name and number, she'll get back to you."

I guess in my lifetime I have answered thousands of phone calls for my kids, giving me insights that no one could believe.

For example, everyone who calls has the same name... Steve or Debbie. In 30 years, you'd think just once I'd get someone with a different name, but I never did. Steve and Debbie have no last names. It's always, "They know who it is."

And they never do.

I have never answered the phone for my children that the first words of the caller weren't "Who is this?" They always are surprised it is the number they called. When I tell them, their second response is also suspicious. "It doesn't sound like you."

Another revelation is that people who call your kids expect them to be there. That is possibly why, when they're told they're not, there is a two-minute pause while they adjust to the news. They never have a Game Plan B.

It's always, "Are you sure?" followed by, "Wow. I thought they'd be there. Gee, let me think a minute." Five minutes later, they come up with the dreaded request, "Can you take a message?" The message usually involves 15 names, five time zones, 14 meeting places contingent on weather and circumstances, and finally, "Have him call me if he can't get the car."

I don't know how they do it, but your children's friends call only during the hours the family is eating.

You can be as cute as you like about trying to trick them by eating lunch at 3 and dinner at 8:30 p.m., but they'll know and before you can get the first bite into your mouth, the phone will ring.

There was one caller who was struck dumb when a different voice answered than the one he called. He never said anything. He just hung up. When I mentioned this to the kids my son said, "That's Steve. He doesn't like to waste time."

I thought a lot about becoming a professional answering service. The routine was simple and the hours predictable. But I probably made the right decision to write. Today, I'd have been replaced by a little electronic device that wouldn't bite the telephone cord in half every time Steve hung up before the sound of the beep.

DEAR ABBY

Rent teaches child to live on budget

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: To "Furious in Dallas," who thinks it stinks that parents would ask their child to pay room and board for living at home: ("Children don't ask to be born," said "Furious.") "Their parents brought them into the world, and they're responsible for feeding, clothing and housing them until they decide to leave home."

When I finished my schooling and entered the working world, I, the child, was required to pay my parents room and board every week. My family was fairly well off, so at first I was angry, but my parents told me it was for my own good — that it would teach me responsibility and prepare me for the "real" world.

They were right. That's how I learned the value of money — how to spend it and how to save it and how to live within my means.

The day I went to buy my wedding gown, my wonderful mother pulled out a little book and gave it to me. Inside was a savings account with all the money I had paid for room and board! She smiled and said, "It's yours."

Actually, I learned two lessons: responsibility and love. — LEARNED IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR LEARNED: Lucky you to have had such wise parents. Read on for another example of how responsibility is taught:

DEAR ABBY: I know a couple whose daughter got pregnant when she was in high school. She kept the baby and her mother raised it while she (the young mother) ran around and got pregnant again.

Abby, my daughter will be taught the facts of life as soon as she is old enough to understand them. If she decides to have sex before she's willing to take responsibility for her actions, she will have to pay the consequences. In plain language, if she gets pregnant, she will have two choices: She will either have to put the baby up for adoption or she will have the baby, stay home 24 hours a day, seven days a week, and take care of it like any other mother!

If she wants a high school diploma or a college education, she will have to figure out for herself how to do it. — OLD-FASHIONED MOTHER

DEAR MARY: Assuming the boy's feet are normal, he doesn't need shoes until he starts walking outside — then he'll need them only for protection. And tell your husband that walking without shoes does not a flatfoot make.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter, who is getting married next summer, suffers from asthma and is allergic to cigarette smoke.

With the wedding invitations we plan to enclose a separate card noting that there will be a reception and dinner following the wedding. On that card, we shall (in polite words) ask the guests to please refrain from smoking.

Is it acceptable to do that? — WONDERING IN COUNCIL BLUFFS

DEAR WONDERING: Absolutely! The well-mannered invitees who cannot make it through the festivities without a nicotine fix will know that they will be expected to step outside for a smoke. And those who object need not attend.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are in a heated discussion over something that is so trivial I'm almost ashamed to ask, but I'm afraid if I don't find the answer, it could escalate into something serious.

We have a 9-month-old son who has just started to walk a little. My husband says, "Put shoes on him right away to help him walk better, and hurry up or the kid will grow up with flat feet."

I say, "He has 746 years to wear shoes; what's the hurry?" Please, Abby, help us. — FOOT-LOOSE MARY

(Problems? What's bugging you? Unload on Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Resort collections brighten season

Hearst News Service

January and February are tough months by any standard, so when the going gets tough, the tough go shopping. If you're not basking at a sunny resort, buy something from the resort collections to remind you that spring will come, even if it now seems most unlikely.

Resort clothes are harbingers of spring trends. You can get a feeling about spring clothes and a head start on what you'll be seeing then. Resort clothes are traditionally more playful, too, if that's your style.

Shirts, shorts and prints are the big message for spring that you can find in resort clothes now. White will be a big color story — if summer ever comes. Pinks and iced pastels as well as the classical nautical theme will be plentiful.

First the shirts. Across the board, from moderate clothes to the designer room, they create a new silhouette. The oversized man's shirt with long tails, worn soft and open, is a marked trend and perhaps the only vestige of the late, unlamented menswear look of 1984. Come spring, it will blossom in every imaginable way, from thin gauze to heavy silk. Consumer creativity will decide how the shirt is worn — with a tank top, perhaps, or over a camp shirt with a long or short skirt or shorts.

The big shirt, by the way, makes a great pajama look with comfortable pants. The pajama game is one designers want to play for day this spring.

The oversized polo shirt is another resort-into-spring silhouette. Neither the man's shirt or polo shirt is new to the consumer, but the oversized silhouette is.

The camp shirt is another trend that's stronger than ever, and oversized, too. It's come a long way from the short-sleeved, tailored-collared, one-pocket shirt kids really did wear to camp. Now it's a favored way to display the range of 1985 prints — tropical, geometric, graffiti prints and stripes. For juniors, the style is even stronger, with matching shorts in the same print.

Designer prints, on the other hand, are mixed and matched this year — stripes with florals, for example. They're different and new.

In addition to shirts and to prints, shorts are the big news for the spring ahead. Walking shorts, just above the knee, will be the correct short length this year.

A strong alternative, though, is the long, lean, narrow look — often a big shirt worn over very narrow pants or skirt.

Not news but continuing strong as ever are the natural fabrics. New versions with good surface interest include ramie cotton, made with the addition of strong, lustrous fiber from the Asiatic plant of that name, and silk noile, a nubby silk.

The nautical theme also should be strong for spring.

Designers show spring clothing

Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

PARIS — Twenty-three designers presented their spring-summer high-fashion collections in Paris at a recent show. They were 23 designers with different approaches to the subject, but who all agreed that a womanly shape will be in.

The well-dressed 1985 woman will have broad but gently rounded shoulders, a narrow torso and a well-marked waist accented by a corset-belt or a tightly draped effect, which also emphasizes the hips. Long legs will be shown off under knee-skimming hems.

Coats are rare for the coming fair-weather season. The designers prefer generous trenchcoats and other rain gear ideal for April showers. Loose-fitting three-quarter or seven-eighths coats are shown with straight skirts, longer trousers and gay little print dresses for afternoon.

Suits are everywhere. Jackets are usually short, like spencers or boleros, and skirts may be either straight or pleated. Longer jackets, sometimes to mid-thigh, go disguised as tunics and can be belted.

City wear is body-hugging, with dresses in navy or beige with big white lapels in lightweight wool, jersey or silk crepe.

Cocktail hours brings out both discreet stripes and splashes of exotic flowers in a range of non-solids. Fabric is draped everywhere — from the shoulder, the waist or the hip. At times tightly wound to imprison the body, the draped effect can also be set free to add volume.

Evening wear, which brings in most of the money to France's haute couture houses, is truly inspired for 1985.

Giant flowers are embroidered on crinolines at Nina Ricci, pearl-studded cardigans team up with simple white skirts at Torrente, heavy satin tubular sheath gowns are bustled at Cardin, and ruffled white organdy makes a surprising trouser outfit at Courreges.

Cotton-club style fringed flapper dresses reappear at Dior, in contrast to the grand lame gowns of Asian inspiration at Scherrer and the cheery, jet-trimmed yellow and red matador jackets of Patou.

Chanel, meanwhile, is proposing rustling taffeta Marie Antoinette gowns, while Guy Laroche likes wide-winged butterfly skirts and Saint-Laurent and Givenchy prefer the luxury of superfluous gauze-like evening coats over more structured pear-trimmed sheaths. At Per Spook, there are long body-dresses that shimmer.

Colors for summer include white, navy, pink, blue and yellow from dawn to dusk.

Hats gain importance, with two styles preferred: A giant straw picture hat or a tiny pill-box worn low on the forehead in black straw with a fluffy veil.

The youngest fashion plates will prefer the beret — from the simple black wool basque version to the jaunty gathered velours to the sailor's hat with or without the pom-pom.

Footwear is lighter than ever. Classic pumps and strapped sandals are best.

If you had a cold, your pillow still does.

Nevada couple recounts rocky road to record pact

By ROBERT MACY
Associated Press Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Robert and Linda Forman liken their 10-year odyssey through the record production jungle to the unlikely feat of juggling kittens — thus the title of their new album, "Cat Juggling."

Bolstered by the belief that the music they wrote, performed and recorded had a chance of beating the industry's 100,000-to-1 odds, Forman raised $500,000 from 22 Nevada investors, then began knocking on doors in Hollywood.

A decade of dreaming gave way to reality recently when Scotti Brothers, a division of CBS Records, began distributing "Cat Juggling" in the United States, Canada, Europe and Japan. It's the first album in an eight-record, five-year pact for the Formans.

"We have very high hopes for the album," Scotti Brothers president Johnny Musso said this week. "Bob Forman's a very unique writer and the album has a very interesting sound that will appeal to everyone from rock 'n' rollers to soft music lovers. The demographic appeal is great, which gives it the potential of being a very big album."

With hundreds of thousands of tapes inundating record companies annually, the Formans credit a lot of luck, the right contacts, a different sound and a hefty dose of tenacity for the album contract they finally won. Forman, 31, was raised in Dallas on bluegrass music and learned to play a variety of instruments to complement his distinctive singing voice. He worked his way through the University of Texas playing warmup for acts like Willie Nelson.

He met secretary Linda Teglia while playing a Reno, Nev., Fourth of July celebration in 1973.

The two married, played lounges at major hotels in Las Vegas and Lake Tahoe, always dreaming of an exclusive record pact. He quit the business in 1977 and began selling cars "because entertainment was not the most stable environment" for the family they were starting.

The Formans moved to Los Angeles in 1980 when one of his car customers offered him a job as sales manager at television station KSCI.

"We kept seeing those recording buildings and we wanted so bad to get into the business," Linda Forman recalled. "So finally we decided we were going to go for it."

Bankrolled by illusionist Doug Henning, the pair cut a demo tape with four of their best songs. The two returned to Reno in early 1982, disillusioned with offers of record contracts that left them little freedom — or financial returns.

Forman returned to the car business while trying to sell limited partnerships to Nevada investors to fund production of his own record.

"It was in the middle of a horrible recession and it was really tough at first," Forman recalled. "It took six months to get that first investor. If I hadn't been so naive I probably wouldn't have tried it."

He finished his first album early in 1984 and began making the rounds of record companies — thinking distribution would be a breeze.

He found secretaries collected tapes by the boxful and listened to them in their spare time.

"If they happened to hear one they liked, they'd pass it along to their boss, but even he couldn't — or wouldn't — make a decision," Forman recalled.

"You'd have a better chance driving down the street, tossing the tape on the sidewalk at the RCA Building, and hoping someone important picked it up," Linda Forman added.

Through their contacts with Henning the two met show business attorney John Mason, whose clients include Kenny Rogers.

Mason opened the door at Scotti Brothers and "we really liked what we heard," recalled Musso.

Forman ended up with guest artists such as Stephen Stills, Nicolette Larsen, June Pointer and jazz sax player Tom Scott. Emmy and Grammy-winner Jimmy Haskell happened by a studio where Forman was recording and asked to do the string arrangements.

Also on the album are co-producer and guitarist Don Evans, known for his work with Billy Joel; Bette Midler's drummer Tony Braungel; Paul Revere's keyboard player Danny Kraus and others.

Gay play attracts Mexican audiences

By JANELLE CONAWAY
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY — In a country where the macho tradition runs strong and homosexuals routinely are harassed, a three-man show that aims to coax gays out of the closet has been drawing audiences for more than two months.

"Mariposas" — "Butterflies" — gets its message across with a laugh. It's a farcical collage of sketches and songs, featuring a raft of bizarre characters including Snow White, a diva in black, a narcotics agent wearing a sequined tie as a disguise and a TV chef-sex counselor.

The chef is a chatty transvestite who burns the soup because he gets sidetracked over how to tell the sex of squash blossoms. This unleashes calls from repressed viewers.

At one point, the receptionist interrupts to announce a call from the Interior Department — the government agency that enforces laws against hard pornography.

"Tell them I'll call them after dessert — I'm only on the soup," the chef answers, and hurries back to cooking.

The message of all the sketches is summed up in the theme song: "Love — you can now say its name. It's time to get out of the closet. Free like butterflies."

Tito Vasconcelos, who wrote, directed and stars in the show, said in an interview that he wanted "Mariposas" to be funny in order to reach a broad audience. Still, he said that despite favorable reviews by local critics, the show continues to draw mostly gay men to the small theater.

"It fulfills a social function," Vasconcelos said, by catering to a group that is large but often feels isolated.

"We're way behind as a group," he continued. "There are a lot of misinformed people. We need to get together and create a consciousness as a fraternity."

Although there used to be three or four gay political organizations in the city, those have dissolved.

Vasconcelos said once a year homosexuals march here undisturbed. "But the rest of the year we're exposed to the police. Being gay is like a seal on your forehead," he said.

Gay couples stroll openly through parts of the city. In the play, Vasconcelos dedicates one steamy song "to those who have worn out at least one pair of sneakers on Paseo de la Reforma" — a main downtown boulevard.

But homosexuals frequently talk about being stopped by the police and taken in for questioning, or forced to pay bribes.

Vasconcelos said the Interior Department in the past had blocked several efforts to start gay publications by denying them licenses. But the authorities have not tried to censor "Mariposas," which stops short of full nudity and has little obscene language.

"Mariposas" touches on some of the less-than-funny sides of being gay in Mexico City, but doesn't dwell on them.

TV zappers cause ripples in ad industry

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Cable television, video cassette recorders and remote controls have created a generation of TV zappers and zippers who are causing ripples in the advertising industry, researchers say.

Zappers, persistent channel changers, and zippers, people with VCRs who fast-forward past commercials, have prompted TV advertisers to request changes in the way ratings are gathered, according to Carrie Heeter, coordinator of Michigan State University's communication technology laboratory.

Ms. Heeter and Bradley Greenberg, chairman of the university's telecommunications department, have prepared a paper on viewing styles.

It contained findings based on five Michigan State surveys of 1,500 adults and 400 children over the past two years. Four of the surveys were conducted in the Lansing area and one in a Detroit suburb, but their results were nearly identical to others conducted around the country, Ms. Heeter said.

"I cannot imagine that the characteristics we found would not be applicable anywhere where there's remote control or cable TV," Greenberg said.

According to the researchers:

— About 24 percent of TV watchers are "super-zappers," people who change channels constantly.

— About 27 percent of the viewers are "channel-loyal," people who make only one channel change every 1½ hours and rarely watch more than one show at a time.

— Men are more likely than women to zap TV commercials.

— Young adults do more zapping than older adults.

— Zappers cannot be categorized by income, education, marital status, household size or number of children.

Zappers and zippers have caused concern among advertisers, Ms. Heeter said Wednesday.

"Some thought of rating commercials instead of programs," she said. "So, instead of the 'Dukes of Hazard' being No. 1, it could be Pepsi."

"The concern is, are advertisers getting what they paid for when they buy commercial time?" Greenberg said.

Ms. Heeter said the situation isn't likely to improve for the advertisers because children of zappers are more likely to zap than their parents.

"So the quantity of zapping will only increase," she said.

Let them eat soup

Ladling soup from an iron kettle on a sidewalk in downtown Des Moines, Iowa, a group of some two dozen farmers protested the prime-rib dinner given by the Intermediate Credit Bank of Omaha, Neb. A spokesman for the farmers said they wanted to dramatize the difference between the lifestyles of lending institutions and of farmers in financial crisis.

Scientists' report criticizes 'Star Wars'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's "Star Wars" missile defense program is being criticized as an extremely costly experiment that is destined to fail at its main mission of providing a space-based shield to protect against incoming nuclear missiles.

The Federation of American Scientists made that assessment in a report issued Monday, and called on Congress to cut money for the program before it develops its own momentum and becomes unstoppable.

The federation, which also has criticized the MX missile and other elements of Reagan's military buildup, said the so-called Strategic Defense Initiative is likely to cost between $70 billion and $100 billion in the 1984-1993 development phase. And, it said, there is no guarantee that the system will work if a decision is made to actually deploy it.

"The defensive umbrella will be more effective in reducing the effects of a retaliatory strike than a retaliatory first strike," the report declared. "This increases incentives to strike first in a time of crisis."

It said the defense system "will be vulnerable to direct attack," will fuel the offensive arms race, undermine the solidarity of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and make nuclear arms negotiations difficult.

In addition, the report argued that the program "will soon violate" the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty between the United States and the Soviet Union. The treaty forbids testing a prototype, which John E. Pike, associate director for space policy at the federation and author of the report, said the United States would be technologically ready to do in about four years.

"To assume that somehow or another we are going to cajole or trick the Soviets into going along with this frankly boggles the imagination," said Pike.

On Capitol Hill, Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., alleged that many European officials fear "that NATO is being shoved out on a thin limb" by the program.

Proxmire called for a congressional review of the implications of ballistic missile defenses, "so we don't stumble into a crisis in NATO that we can't get out of."

Reagan is asking Congress to spend $3.7 billion on Star Wars research during the fiscal year starting Oct. 1. The amount is more than twice that made available for this year.

Pike said he estimated the probable 10-year cost using figures from non-government experts.

Despite the criticisms against the program, the administration is pushing it strongly on Capitol Hill and in Europe, where U.S. allies are concerned that it could leave them more vulnerable to attack by "decoupling" Europe's interests from those of the United States.

The Washington Post reported today that Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger told the House Appropriations Committee in a letter that the Pentagon would reduce five "Star Wars" demonstration projects next year in response to congressional demands to cut the program.

Weinberger said cuts totaling $141 million were being applied to five Army anti-ballistic missile programs.

Historians studying Edison's papers

Edison's papers called 'richer' than Da Vinci's

WEST ORANGE, N.J. (AP) — Thomas Alva Edison's notebooks are "much richer" than those of another legendary inventor, Leonardo Da Vinci, says a historian who examined the personal papers of the creator of the electric light bulb.

The findings of the first five years of the 20-year Edison Papers project were unveiled Monday, the 138th anniversary of Edison's birth which has been declared National Inventors' Day in his honor.

"Edison's notebooks are filled with sketches, rough drawings, in some cases very careful drawings, but for the most part spontaneous," said project editor Reese V. Jenkins.

"I think his notebooks are much richer than Leonardo's," said Jenkins. He said Edison, whose formal education consisted of three months in elementary school, drew technically superior sketches to those of Da Vinci, the Renaissance artist and sculptor.

"Edison was not a great artist but he was a great technologist," Jenkins said.

Among Edison's many inventions were the incandescent light bulb and the phonograph. He also made a major contribution to movies — the peep show.

"I am experimenting upon an instrument which does for the eye what the phonograph does for the ear," he wrote Oct. 8, 1888. "Which is the recording and reproduction of things in motion and in such a form as to be both cheap, practical and convenient. The apparatus I call a Kinetoscope 'Moving View.'"

Eight historians are participating in the $6 million Edison Papers project, studying some of the inventor's 3.5 million pages of notes, correspondence and drawings, the vast majority never before published.

In the ceremony Monday in West Orange, 28 reels of microfilm containing about 40,000 pages covering the inventor's early years from 1850 to 1878 were presented to Rutgers University.

The highlight was to have been a message from Jenkins to university President Edward Bloustein, taped with a replica of Edison's invention, the cylindrical phonograph.

But when an assistant cranked the machine before a hushed crowd, no sounds emerged from the tin foil tape, prompting Bloustein to joke, "Tom, where are you when we need you?"

Within the next 15 years, about 400,000 pages will be compiled on microfilm, Jenkins said. The project will also publish a selective 15 to 20-volume edition, he said.

"The research will allow us to significantly change what we understand about Edison and the development of big business in America," said another team member, Keith Nier.

The West Orange laboratory and office, now the Edison National Historic Site, was a workplace for Edison from 1888 until his death on Oct. 18, 1931. He also had workshops in Newark and Menlo Park.

Edison received 1,093 U.S. patents, the largest number ever awarded to a single person.

"He was a demon for work when he got involved in something," said Nier. "He just wouldn't stop. He would work 60 hours with only a few catnaps. He managed to inspire a lot of people to work the same way."

"He was much more comfortable in a workshop or laboratory than he was in most other circumstances," said Nier, adding, though, that the inventor "could bring out a bunch of Wall Street tycoons and charm and impress them."

Throughout his career, the one-time telegraph operator was up against "the niftiest swindlers in the country" when selling his inventions to manufacturers, said Nier. Edison made and lost several fortunes, but died comfortably wealthy.

"He was certainly concerned with being practical, but he was not the world's greatest businessman," Nier said.

Grain fumigant manufacturers pulling chemical off market

WASHINGTON (AP) — The manufacturers of the grain fumigant 80-20 are pulling the chemical off the market rather than comply with a government request for new safety data in the wake of the EDB scare a year ago.

The Environmental Protection Agency is expected to act soon to ban use of 80-20, after allowing the nation's only two manufacturers of the pesticide to deplete their supplies.

The impending loss of the chemical is making many growers unhappy, said Margie Williams, spokeswoman for the National Association of Wheat Growers.

farmer...He can get a good bug kill."

The EPA last year banned use of EDB — ethylene dibromide — after residues of that fumigant began showing up in grain products on grocery shelves. EDB is a potent carcinogen in laboratory animals.

The concern over EDB prompted the agency to accelerate its long-standing review of carbon tetrachloride, the major component of 80-20. Carbon tetrachloride, once widely used as a dry cleaning solvent, can cause liver damage, and has been shown to cause cancer in laboratory rats.

The other component of 80-20, carbon disulfide, has been linked to mental abnormalities.

The EPA requested the only two remaining manufacturers, Vulcan Materials Co. of Birmingham, Ala., and Stauffer Chemical Co. of Greenwich, Conn., to conduct studies to determine whether residues of the pesticide were present in cooked wheat products.

Instead, the companies decided to halt production.

Dennis Lindsay, product manager at Vulcan, said EPA would have "made it too expensive for us to stay in the business." The market, said Stauffer spokesman Fred Verhoven, "did not justify the expense."

Only about 12 percent of the nation's 2.5 billion bushel wheat crop is fumigated, but Agriculture Department tests of export grain have shown higher percentages. Seven samples taken at Galveston, Texas, last year all contained residues, the maximum being 1,600 parts per billion.

A consultants' study for the Grocery Manufacturers of America completed Jan. 22 concluded that the median residue of 80-20 in cooked wheat products — bread, cake, cookies, etc. — was less than two parts per billion. The consultants, Joseph V. Rodricks and Vasilios H. Frankos, concluded there was a slightly better than one in 10 million chance of getting cancer over a lifetime from eating grain products.

EPA had said exposure from all other sources meant a three in a million chance for a typical adult male,

"It is a much weaker carcinogen" than EDB, said Rick Johnson of EPA's pesticides office. "The risk is not nearly as great."

Some 250,000 people handle grain at rural elevators, mills and export terminals.
