U.S. fires trade volley

Punitive tariffs on Europe escalate dispute

■ Bush administration seeks to force concessions; angered European Community comes uncorked.

By Maria Recio
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Brandishing a bottle of Chablis in one hand and a Chardonnay in the other, Uncle Sam challenged the European Community to a trade duel Thursday.

U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills announced the imposition of punitive tariffs on $300 worth of European imports that will have the effect of tripling the price of white wine from France and other European nations.

The long-simmering dispute between the United States and the 12-nation European Community over subsidies on soybeans and other oilseeds erupted after Tuesday's election. Specialists on the issue said U.S. negotiators decided they were not making any progress and had to take some dramatic step.

President Bush said the United States was trying to resolve the trade dispute in a way that would be acceptable to U.S. interests.

"No trade war. Just looking after the interest of world trade," the president said.

President-elect Bill Clinton declined to comment on Hills' announcement and the prospect of a trade war. "We've got one president and he has to make those decisions," Clinton said in Little Rock, Ark.

Democrats familiar with the issue said that the move was actually postponed until after the election to avoid any charges of political manipulation. "This is a very bipartisan effort," said Jim Davis, spokesman for the House Agriculture Committee.

Aides: Clinton plans bold action on agenda

WASHINGTON — President-elect Bill Clinton aims to convey an impression of boldness and change during his first days in the Oval Office by issuing a whirlwind of executive orders on abortion rights, White House perquisites, and government ethics, his aides predict.

They sketch an ambitious domestic agenda for his first weeks, during which, Clinton has said, he will "focus like a laser beam on this economy" and "foreign policy will come into play in part as it affects the economy."

Aides predict that the new president will quickly move on matters he can change with the stroke of a pen, like doing away with fancy dining room privileges for high officials and reversing the Bush administration's bans on fetal-tissue research and abortion counseling at federally financed clinics.

But some of Clinton's aides and friends, often sounding eerily like President Bush on the campaign trail, say the success of these plans rests a great deal on unanswered questions about Clinton's character:

■ Can a man who is so eager to please say no to the demands of the power-starved interest groups that contributed to his election?

■ Can a policy specialist with so many detailed proposals choose a few crucial initiatives and single-mindedly push them through, rather than try to

Lies, election loss eclipse Guerrero star

By Joe Cutbirth
N.Y. Times News Service

AUSTIN — In the final days of her race for the Texas Railroad Commission — leapfrogging between small-town airports; eating most meals on the run — the letters kept Lena Guerrero going.

There was the note from a woman who worked with children at a local community college. The woman was afraid that, if Guerrero lost, she would be fired because she also hadn't finished college. The woman wanted Guerrero to know that a person's heart matters more than a college degree.

But a few weeks later Guerrero saw that her lack of a college degree did matter, but not as much as the way she handled revelations that she lied about it for nearly 12 years.

"Her problem was an obvious one, and she never could recover from it," said George Christian, a former press secretary to Lyndon Johnson.

Guerrero's once-bright political star faded to black this week as Texans rejected her attempt at a political comeback and elected newcomer Barry Williamson to the post she one held at the commission, which regulates the oil, gas and trucking industry.

Statistics surrounding the defeat are staggering.

Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton came within three points of beating President Bush in Texas, but Guerrero could barely muster the 40 percent base Democratic vote in a state that had elected only 10 Republicans to statewide office since Reconstruction.

Late in the race, polls showed that Williamson had relatively low name identification, but on election night he racked up more than 3 million votes, led the GOP ticket and beat Guerrero in every geographic region of the state.

Even more telling was the decision of a half-million voters who voted for presi-

United Way appeals for last-minute boost

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

Less than a week before this year's United Way fundraising drive ends, campaign chairman Jess Parrish is asking the community to help avoid a $140,000 shortfall on the $2,755,000 goal.

"If we don't meet our goal, it means the quality of life in Midland is not what it should be," Parrish said.

Parrish made his plea at a news conference Thursday at the Boys and Girls Club of Midland, one of 17 community service agencies the United Way helps support.

"We are asking people to help us wind this thing up with a bang," he said.

The campaign ends Tuesday.

For four hours this morning, a concentrated effort will be made to raise the money when volunteers will contact independents and small businesses that have not already been approached for donations.

"If people get behind us we can do it," Parrish said.

But if the money can't be raised, community service agencies will suffer.

"All programs will be decreased," said Parrish, surrounded by youngsters at the Boys and Girls Club.

"These guys are not going to have the programs they had ... all the way up to the (programs that benefit) senior citizens," he said.

"It might not be noticeable to you or me but it will be

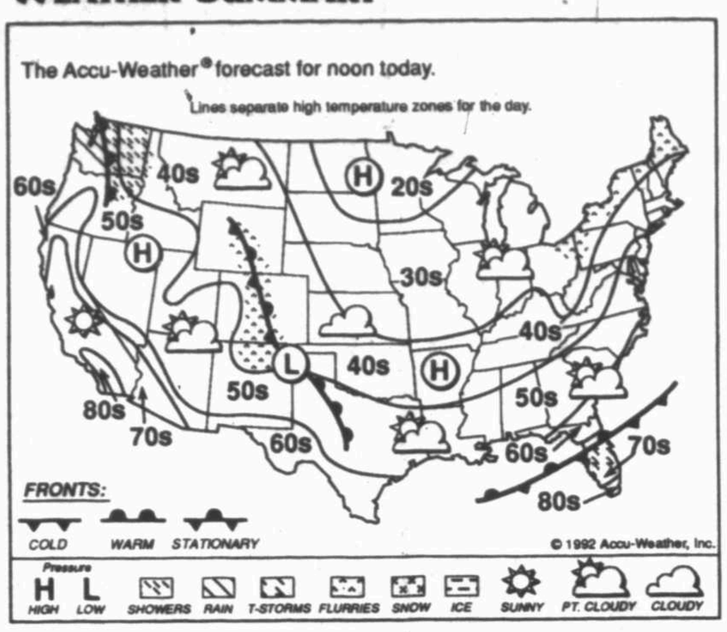
WEATHER SUMMARY



Expect some clouds, mid-50s

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high in the mid-50s and southeast winds at 5-15 mph. Tonight should be partly cloudy with a low in the mid-30s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Saturday should be partly sunny with a high in the mid- to upper 50s.

After an overnight low of 27, Thursday's high reached 58, compared to the record high for that date of 83 set in 1955. The record low was 21 set in 1959.

STATE

A cold front kept early-morning temperatures Thursday at or below freezing across North Texas, including two record lows, and forecasters expected more of the same through the start of the weekend.

The National Weather Service advised Rio Grande Valley growers that the high-pressure ridge building south out of Canada should begin moving eastward on Friday.

Lows in North Texas were significantly below normal, with Abilene tying the mark it set in 1970 with 26 degrees and Wichita Falls' reading dipping to 23 degrees.

That broke a record of 26 degrees set in 1959. The state's coldest location was Marfa, with 18 degrees.

Lows were again expected to reach the 40s in South Texas early today, with 20s and 30s in the Panhandle, lower to mid-30s in North Texas and 40s and 50s elsewhere.

Highs Thursday ranged from the 40s in the Guadalupe Mountains to the 60s in the southern tip of the state.

NATION

Rain spread across much of the East on Thursday and snow was scattered from the Rockies to the Ohio Valley and Great Lakes. Temperatures fell to record lows in Texas.

At midday, rain extended across the upper Ohio Valley, the Appalachians, the lower Great Lakes, the central Atlantic Coast states and into southern New England.

Thunderstorms extended over the southern Atlantic Coast states and Florida.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours up to noon CST was 0.92 of an inch at Valdosta, Ga.

Tornadoes touched down during the morning at Hernando Beach, Fla., and Ridge Manor, Fla., but no damage or injuries were reported, the National Weather Service said. High winds damaged power lines and trees around Morriston and Orlando.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

VOLLEY: Long-simmering trade dispute erupts

(From 1A)

The action has the potential to spark retaliation from angry European officials — especially France — but the United States is making the gambit to force a response on the soybean case and also to move stalled global trade talks.

"The EC has refused to provide the U.S. what it is clearly owed under international trading rules," Hills said.

She announced that effective Dec. 5, the tariffs on a 750-milliliter bottle of white wine from Europe would rise from 7 cents to 200 percent of the prices paid by importers. Rapeseed oil and wheat gluten, used primarily as a filler in pet food, would also be affected by the increased tariffs, which take effect in 30 days on Dec. 5.

Trade experts said Hills targeted the white wine market to get the attention of France, widely considered a major stumbling block in resolving trade disputes because of its resistance to lifting the heavy subsidies the government pays to French farmers. White wine constitutes about 90 percent of the targeted imports.

"We hoped that it would correct the tariff imbalance, encourage a resolution and cause the least amount of harm in our home market," Hills told reporters.

A bottle of wine that now costs $10 wholesale would increase by $20, although wines currently in inventories or shipped before the deadline would not be slapped with the higher tariffs.

Importers were "shocked" at being singled out, said Robert Maxwell, president of the National Association of Beverage Importers. Imported wines, already expensive, will be prohibitively priced compared to domestic wines, especially California products.

Texas reaction to the increased tariffs was mixed Thursday.

The news cheered David Clevenger, tasting room manager at La Buena Vida winery in Parker County. But it was disturbing to Michel Baudouin, owner of Le Chardonnay restaurant in Fort Worth.

"I'm sure it's going to be better for wines in this country," Clevenger said. "It's got to be a better situation for us."

But those sipping a French Chardonnay or enjoying a white Burgundy at Baudouin's chic eatery are in for sticker-shock. "If the price is going to triple, we're going to triple the price on the clientele," he said.

If the soybean dispute is not resolved, Hills has an additional "hit list" of products valued at $1.7 billion on which she could also impose higher duties. The next threatened price increases could come on a variety of goods, including perfumes and glassware.

Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Mission, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, said, "Retaliation in the form of higher duties is a serious step to take. However, I feel the U.S. is left with no alternative."

The U.S. decision came after Agriculture Secretary Edward Madigan met and failed to finally settle the case with EC Agriculture Commisioner Ray MacSharry in Chicago earlier this week.

The issue dates back to 1987 when the American Soybean Association brought action under the trade act, arguing that EC subsidies were anticompetitive and kept U.S. producers out of the European market.

Under the global trading framework known as the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), trade panels rule on cases and the United States has prevailed twice on the soybean matter. The problem is that the European Community has offered trade tariff reductions that the United States rejects as too low.

Hills estimates that U.S. soybean farmers have suffered $1 billion worth of damage.

A separate but related matter is the gridlocked Uruguay Round of the GATT talks, which have been hung up for several years because the European Community won't budge on U.S. demands that agricultural subsidies be limited.

SEMINAR: Professor blasts 'castrophe' view

ture is pristine and all the carcinogens of the world and all the pollution of the earth is caused by the technology of man — primarily the petroleum industry," Maxey said.

The cornucopian view, she said, is that technology makes a hostile world better for man. "Life without technology would be short, nasty and brutish." She said that if it were not for automobiles and trains, New York would be filled with horses, producing 25 pounds of horse manure per day per animal. "Think what that would do for the environment."

She went on to tout the benefits of the petrochemical industry and other industries that are often listed as prime polluters. "The biggest polluter in the world is poverty," she said, noting that industry was needed to create and distribute wealth in the world.

The catastrophic crowd, she said, believes the earth exists in a fragile balance and must be protected from man. She noted, however, that Mother Nature herself was the prime polluter of the earth. "Three volcanos have put more particulants into the atmosphere than all the industrial activity of mankind, thoughout history."

She said that Mount St. Helens exploded with the force of 500 atomic bombs, sending ashes and gas 80,000 feet into the air.

Maxey, who is professor of Bioethics in the Biomedical Engineering Program at UT, and also holds degrees in philosophy, ethics and theology, said that in recent years 10,000 died in a typhoon in Bangladesh and 10,000 in an earthquake in Mexico. But in the man-made environmental disasters, such as Love Canal or Three Mile Island, none died. Only 31 died at Chernobyl, and while 2,000 died at Bhopal, it was later found that the "accident" had been deliberately caused by a disgruntled employee, she said.

Other items on the agenda of the PBPA environmental seminar included: an update on the Laguna Quatro litigation in New Mexico, disposal liability; new plugging liability rules; and oily dirt remediation.

The Laguna Quatro dispute involved 38 oil producers who received fines up to $125,000 from the EPA for alledgedly illegal dumping of produced water into the New Mexico playa lakes near Hobbs.

PBPA executive vice president Harry Spannaus said EPA reversed the charges when it became apparent they did not have a case that would stand up in court, and when pressure was brought to bear from representatives from Texas and New Mexico.

Spannaus said the water being dumped into the lake was 70 percent better than the original water quality of the lake.

months, one for more than 1,700 barrels per day in Glasscock County and one of more than 700 barrels per day in Howard County.

He called 3-D seismic "the most exciting thing to come along since the advent of geophysics." The innovations he has seen in his 33 years in the industry — stacking, vibroseis, digital recording and digital processing — were only stepping stones to 3-D seismic, he said.

He wondered if 3-D seismic was perhaps a step toward the next innovation. "I can't even guess what the next innovation will be," he said, saying perhaps new innovations could be three-component 3-D or supercomputers with neural ability that would allow the computer to recognize patterns in seismic data that could represent potential production.

However, he said, "the best technology is not necessarily the answer to a problem. If it is not cost-effective, it is unusable." Pardue noted that 3-D seismic technology and equipment has been around since the 1970s, but only recently have costs fallen enough to make the technology more available to producers.

A good evaluation for a relatively small area, he said, can cost $25,000 plus permits. For a large area, producers are looking at $8,000 per square mile up to $15,000 to $16,000 per square mile.

And, he said, the "patch" method of shooting 3-D seismic is the method of choice because it is more economical, and his company almost exclusively uses the in-line array because it is easier for the field workers and loses nothing in quality compared to the circle array.

He advised producers to use target-oriented 3-D seismic until costs come down further and to be content with lower data quality at a lower cost and get a history of the prospect.

"Our objective is not to find beautiful seismic data. It's to find oil."

And although 3-D seismic is, as Pardue put it, a dramatic advancement, it is not foolproof. "There are still areas that jump up and bite you. There's isolated high-velocity areas or low-velocity areas that can distort the seismic picture."

He estimated that, using pure geology, one out of every 12 wells would be successful; with 2-D seismic, the odds rise to about one in eight wells, and with 3-D seismic, the success ratio rises to between 70 percent and 75 percent.

"There's no guarantee 3-D will find an oil field, but it does increase the odds tremendously."

GUERRERO: A once-bright political star fades

(From 1A)

dent but chose to skip the Railroad Commission contest altogether.

In conceding the contest Tuesday night, Guerrero said: "It would be inappropriate for me to predict what tomorrow holds for Lena Guerrero."

Later, she added that the election was "the greatest night for Democrats, not just in Texas, but across the nation ... and the beginning of a great new chapter in my life."

The remarks were as confusing to many as the explanations she gave for two weeks in September about her transcripts. Her resume had falsely stated that she was an honors graduate of the University of Texas at Austin.

On election night, some said she appeared relaxed and candid for the first time in months. Others felt she was almost defiant, reflecting a common complaint many Democrats had voiced since her college transcript misrepresentations first were revealed.

"It's not in her nature. She doesn't do humble well," explained a frustrated Democratic Party insider in the final days of the campaign. "She was chairman of the Railroad Commission at 33, and none of it (was) because she had a degree from the University of Texas."

In the decade and a half that Guerrero rose from president of the Texas Young Democrats to a historical fight to become the first Hispanic woman elected to statewide office in Texas, she moved through a network of mentors or patrons.

Among them, former Austin Mayor Ron Mullen, former state Rep. Mary Jane Bode, state Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, Democratic Party chairman Bob Slagle, and Gov. Ann Richards.

When the transcript story broke, some — like Richards and Slagle — openly defended her. Others quietly distanced themselves.

One of the more surprising developments was the dozens of tips for further stories on Guerrero that high-placed staff of some Democratic Party officials gave to reporters covering the commission race.

Guerrero had volunteered briefly on the mayoral campaign of Carole Rylander in the mid-1970s, but the two quickly parted.

"Lena lived a lie, many lies for many years ... and I'm not sure she still understands what she's done," Rylander said.

When Rylander switched to the GOP and challenged longtime Austin congressman J.J. Jake Pickle, Guerrero — by then a state representative — walked blocks in minority districts for Pickle.

During the final week of Guerrero's campaign, Pickle's office told Guerrero's staff that he would not be available for a final campaign event Guerrero had counted on.

Similar stories were commonplace.

AGENDA: Clinton plans bold action, aides say

do everything at once?

■ Can a man so sharply identified with his generation select a cross section of advisers that balances Washington experience with a youthful urge for change and power.

Clinton's agenda is still embryonic, and it is hard to tell which of the aides now describing it will be around after inauguration day on Jan. 20. And, inevitably, aides sometimes confuse their boss's priorities with their own.

Nevertheless, interviews with Clinton advisers, friends, and campaign aides in the last weeks of the presidential campaign suggest that his first 100 days will begin with several executive orders reversing Republican social policies.

They say the list could include all or some of these:

■ Ending the ban on homosexuals in the military and the ban on abortion in military hospitals overseas.

■ Repealing bans on abortion counseling at federally financed clinics and research using fetal tissue.

■ Allowing the importing from France of RU-486, the morning-after abortion pill.

■ Establishing a family-leave policy for federal employees who want time off to care for children or sick relatives.

■ Revoking the Reagan-Bush policy of forbidding American aid to foreign organizations that provide abortion services, counseling, or referrals.

■ Trimming the White House staff and eliminating executive dining rooms and other subsidized perks for top officials.

■ Requiring political appointees to sign a pledge barring lobbying of their government agencies for five years after they leave office. The current legal limit is one year.

Legislation

The Clinton team says it wants Congress to pass within the first 100 days a combination of tax incentives and public-works spending measures to stimulate the economy, perhaps delaying at first Clinton's campaign pledge to cut the deficit.

As for his other major legislative aims, including health-care and welfare reform and job training, Clinton aides have given themselves a 100-day deadline to submit legislation in these areas. But they do not expect passage that early.

Clinton's aides say he talks about keeping his legislative agenda broad enough to take full advantage of his mandate for economic change, but lean enough to avoid choking the House Ways and Means Committee, through which all tax legislation must pass, with so many bills that nothing gets passed.

Nevertheless, a friend recalls asking Clinton in June which transition model he would follow: Ronald Reagan, who in his first 100 days focused on one issue and got tax and budget changes through Congress, or Jimmy Carter, who pressed 15 equal proposals so complex and controversial that virtually none were approved.

Clinton replied that he would follow the Reagan model, but then ticked off a list of initiatives he would propose.

"Sounds to me more like Jimmy Carter," his friend told him.

Clinton's first task will be to choose the leading members of his domestic-economic team: chief of staff, director of the Office of Management and Budget, chief of his Council of Economic Advisers, secretary of the Treasury, and White House liaison with Congress, which will be a crucial job in his administration.

Already, rivalries are building. In the last two weeks of the presidential campaign, staff members at the Clinton-Gore campaign headquarters in Arkansas were playing a game that could best be called "Did you see who just walked by with his resume?"

noticeable to some of the people in these programs," Parrish said.

The last time the United Way of Midland failed to reach their goal was in 1988 when the organization raised only $2.27 million of an anticipated $2.5 million.

Parrish attributes much of this year's financial straits to the "transfer of major oil personnel" out of Midland.

Kay Bivens, campaign director, said the campaign cabinet, which sets the fund-raising goal, considered down-sizing and re-organization of major oil companies and the overall economy in determining this year's goal.

Last year, the United Way of Midland raised $2,755,143 — about $2,000 above its goal.

The agencies benefited by the United Way of Midland are: American Red Cross; Big Brothers/Big Sisters; Boy Scouts of America; Boys and Girls Clubs; Camp Fire Boys and Girls; Casa de Amigos and Citywide Community Services; Community and Senior Services; Family Services and Permian Basin Child Abuse Prevention Program; Freewill and Foster Home; Midland/Lee Youth Centers; Midland Need to Read; Midland Rape Crisis Center; Palmer Drug Abuse Program; Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children; Permian Basin Girl Scouts; Salvation Army Corps and Day Care Center; and the YMCA.

State to merge special bank accounts to save $540 million

AUSTIN (AP) — The state comptroller announced Thursday that 278 special government bank accounts — including the Barber Examiners Fund and the Brush Control Fund — are being consolidated for a one-time savings of $540 million.

The plan, authorized by the 1991 Legislature as a budget-tightening measure, will help unravel a costly hodgepodge of special accounts, Comptroller John Sharp said.

"Over the decades, the state's accounting system has evolved into a web of hundreds of separate funds, creating costly bookkeeping nightmares," Sharp said.

"Despite repeated attempts to consolidate many of these funds, those efforts failed until the idea was presented to the Legislature again last year" in the comptroller's performance audit of state government, he said.

The audit suggested merging many of the special-purpose funds into the state's main bank account, the General Revenue Fund, to help make state government more efficient.

The consolidation doesn't eliminate programs, and lawmakers may continue to fund them as they choose, officials said.

Lawmakers already had voted to spend the half billion dollars in savings in the current 1992-'93 state budget.

Under the law, consolidation is to be completed by Aug. 31, 1993.

Sharp said the advisory committee that recommended the merger candidates took heat from many in and out of government.

"This fund consolidation certainly hasn't been without criticism," he said.

"The recommendations have brought comments from approximately 50 state agencies, universities, legislators and trade associations — with most of them trying unsuccessfully to protect their own little pile of cash," Sharp said.

Among other funds being merged are the Vital Statistics Fund, the Circus, Carnival and Zoo Licensing Fund, Confiscated Liquor Fund, the Texas-Israel Semi-Arid Fund and the Artificial Reef Fund, the report said.

The state has another 268 accounts that are constitutional, trust funds or funds dedicated by law. They were exempt from the consolidation.

Sharp's announcement coincided with release of the annual cash report for state government.

Excluding trust fund operations, such as the Teacher Retirement System, the report shows that the state collected $29.6 billion in revenues for 1992, while operating expenses totaled $29.3 billion.

Net state expenditures for 1992 were up $3.7 billion, a 14.4 percent increase over the previous year. Of that increase, $2.3 billion went for human services and $826 million for education, the comptroller reported.

Incumbent Sen. Brooks blames defeat on redistricting, Perot

PASADENA (AP) — Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena for 29 years and known as the dean of the Texas Senate, is blaming redistricting and Ross Perot for his 2,718-vote upset.

Brooks, who first was elected to the Legislature in 1962 and four years later to the senate, has asked for a recount, the results of which won't be available for about 10 days.

"It was a combination of things," Brooks, 57, said, explaining his apparent loss Tuesday to Republican Jerry Patterson, 46, a Pasadena employee benefits consultant.

"Redistricting decimated the Harris County portion of my district. And we had unusually heavy turnout in the Clear Lake and South Shore Harbor areas where Republicans do well," Brooks said.

Brooks, the most senior member of the senate and chairman of the Health and Human Services Committee, attracted 47 percent of Tuesday's vote. Patterson had 48 percent and Libertarian candidate Marshall N. Anderson, a Pasadena physician, took 5 percent of the vote.

Redistricting split Brook's traditional territory three ways, dividing his hometown of Pasadena and eliminating his stronghold of South Houston, he said. Brooks was forced to move to avoid running against fellow Democratic Sen. Rodney Ellis of Houston.

Patterson agreed that the redistricting played a significant role in the most recent election, with the addition of the Clear Lake area laying the foundation for a Republican victory. But he still felt good about the win.

"It's a high," Patterson said. "But it's not an upset."

And then, there was the charismatic campaign of Dallas billionaire Ross Perot.

Brooks estimated about 9,000 votes in his Harris County precincts went to the independent presidential candidate. Brooks believes those voters then turned to Anderson in the District 11 senate race.

"Those voters were not voting for Democrats and they weren't voing for Republicans," Brooks said.

Officials: Iraq plays hide-and-seek with scuds, boosters

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Saddam Hussein is moving scores of Scud missiles around Iraq on camouflaged trucks so U.N. weapons inspectors can't find them and has buried an unknown number of rocket boosters, Western officials and other sources say.

One intelligence operative described it as a "real game" of hide-and-seek.

U.N. weapons inspection teams over the past 18 months have tracked down and dismantled much of Iraq's nuclear, chemical and biological weapons programs as well as its surface-to-surface missiles with a range of 90 miles or more under terms of the 1991 Gulf War cease-fire agreement.

But American and U.N. officials suspect that Saddam has stashed away some of the 819 Scud-B missiles he acquired from the former Soviet Union during the 1980-88 war with Iran, or longer-range al-Hussein and al-Abbas variants Iraq developed.

Tim Trevan, spokesman for the U.N. Special Commission charged with dismantling Iraq's weapons of mass destruction, said 151 ballistic missiles have been destroyed by the inspectors or the Iraqis, or are awaiting destruction.

But, since the Iraqis have still not come clean on what they have, U.N. officials believe Saddam still has around 100 missiles hidden away. The CIA believes the figure is closer to 200.

In March 1991, Iraq admitted it had 52 ballistic missiles. But under intense diplomatic pressure, Baghdad later confessed it had another 92.

U.N. inspectors believe at least 487 of the Soviet Scuds were fired during the Iran-Iraq war or in tests.

It's not known how many Scuds were provided by Syria, Libya or North Korea, or how many were cannibalized to produce the al-Hussein and al-Abbas variants.

Ninety-three missiles were fired at Israel and Saudi Arabia during last year's Gulf War. The Pentagon concedes that no missiles were destroyed in allied air strikes.

The Western operatives, based in Amman to monitor Iraq, said Saddam can't bury his missiles because they would deteriorate and become useless.

One source said Saddam has to constantly keep the missiles on the move on disguised trucks so inspectors who get tipped off to a particular location can't find them.

Travelers from Iraq, including an aerodynamics specialist who said he worked on Saddam's weapons program before the Gulf War, said the Iraqis have buried large numbers of rocket boosters.

An unknown number are under the Habaniyah airbase in the desert west of Baghdad, as well as in the basements of mosques — at least one in central Baghdad — hospitals and other buildings the Iraqis don't believe the U.N. inspectors will investigate, the specialist said.

Like most Iraqis and diplomats traveling to Jordan from Iraq, the sources declined to be identified to avoid reprisals when they return.

The Western-educated engineer provided The Associated Press with details of his work and the locations of installations where he worked, but asked that these not be published to protect him and his family.

Trevan, spokesman for the U.N. commission, said he could not comment on the claim.

The engineer said an undetermined number of missiles had been dismantled and hidden immediately after the war with large quantities of 6-foot rocket boosters, guidance systems and other key components.

He said Iraqis had dismantled an unknown number of Scuds before last year's war to use the boosters in their own variants.

Hate-filled music serenades skinheads

By Mark Fritz
Associated Press writer

BERLIN — The songs are loud, simple and filled with raw hatred. This is rock for somebody who likes to throw one at a foreigner, music with a stance you can beat to.

Europe's neo-Nazis are being serenaded — even inspired, some experts fear — by a new wave of rock groups who mix racist rants with thumping punk and frenzied heavy metal.

"It's 'Mein Kampf' to a four-four beat," said Tony Robson, a researcher at the London-based Searchlight, a monthly magazine that monitors neo-Nazi activities.

The hit parade of neo-fascist groups includes Hungary's Dwarf Minority and Healthy Head Skin, France's Legion 84, Germany's Storm Troop, Britain's No Remorse — a reference to the Holocaust — and dozens of others.

Czechoslovakia's white supremacist Orlik, which split up after it was banned, sold 100,000 records last year, an amazing number in a small nation.

Although the phenomenon is not new, the numbers of such groups — and their appeal — are rising in relation to an increase in xenophobia and rightist violence, particularly in Germany.

Under fire for their plodding response to neo-Nazi attacks on foreigners, German officials only recently began listening to the movement's musical messengers and probing a company in Cologne that records and sells music by Europe's biggest neo-fascist bands, including to U.S. markets.

German skinheads raise fists in fascist salute during right wing demonstration in Leipzig. Neo-Nazis are being serenaded, perhaps even inspired, some experts fear, by new wave of rock groups who mix racist rants with thumping heavy metal anthems.

In Britain, authorities are prosecuting a record distributor with a paraphernalia product list that includes Ku Klux Klan T-shirts.

But another blatantly neo-fascist distribution company in France, Rebel European in Brest, has operated internationally for six years. In Hungary, slick fan magazines openly cater to followers of skinhead music.

Although people who study the skinhead scene differ on the degree such music works as a recruiting tool, they agree it provides a universal bond and common currency to white right-wing rings.

"It gives them an identity. Kids in Poland, Germany, France all wear the same T-shirt," Robson said.

The bands themselves frequently team up for impromptu concerts, usually in white working-class districts.

Last year, Britain's veteran kings of fascist rock, Skrewdriver, organized a concert in the east German city of Cottbus with Germany's two hottest hate bands, Stoerkraft ("disturbing force," in German) and Radikahl (a play on the German word for "radical," radikal, with the added 'h' referring to the word kahl, which means "bald").

The Oct. 3, 1991, gig marked the first anniversary of German unity.

But five Skrewdriver members had to miss the white-power Woodstock after they allegedly stabbed a long-haired young leftist in Cottbus days earlier, police said.

The band members were released on their own recognizance after a stint in investigatory custody, and were gone by the time officials authorized formal charges.

"If they walk on German soil we'll arrest them," said Christoph Otto, Brandenburg state prosecutor spokesman.

The concert itself drew 600 people and featured syncopated shouts of "Sieg Heil" from a sea of bald bobbing heads.

The whole skinhead pose — shaved heads, boots and military clothing — began in working-class Britain in the 1960s. It re-emerged in more xenophobic form in the late 1970s, when it centered on an anthem-like form of punk known as Oi music.

Now it has pervaded eastern Germany and the ruins of the rest of the old Soviet bloc.

The leading band is Skrewdriver, the genre's Beatles-gone-bad. Its 1983 song "White Power" is the movement's theme and the band's records can be found in some alternative U.S. record stores.

Skrewdriver and other bands are recorded by a company called Rock-O-Rama, headquartered in Cologne.

'Clinton Fever' rises in English college town

By Susan Warren
Hearst News Service

OXFORD, England — There's a touch of "Clinton Fever" in the crisp autumn air of this venerable English college town.

The ivy-covered brick home with the glossy red door at 46 Leckford Road, Bill Clinton's residence while he attended the University of Oxford as a Rhodes scholar in 1969, was added to the official Oxford minibus tour even before Clinton won the U.S. presidential election.

Pubs near the house were already vying for the right to proclaim, "Clinton drank here."

Wednesday morning, though, Jane West, an Oxford Fellow from the United States, served champagne to her classmates to celebrate Clinton's victory over George Bush.

And the University of Oxford, long used to listing prominent world leaders in its yearbooks, finally laid claim to its first president-elect of the United States.

"It's something of a coup," said Oxford political science professor Timothy Hames, who is teaching a class this term on the 1992 U.S. elections.

If you listen to the students, Oxford is solid Clinton country, embracing and reflecting the president-elect's social consciousness.

"Oxford is full of liberals, it's true," said Graham Evans, a first-year British student at St. John's College who believes Clinton is the best man for "the most important office in the world. "It's because it's such a cushioned environment here — people just soften up and develop a social conscience," he said.

But there are Bush supporters to be found in Oxford, too. "The problem is, this place has been taken over by American Oxford students," muttered one pro-Bush British student.

Evans and about 300 other Britons and Americans paid 5 pounds (about $8) apiece to stay up through the night and watch televised election returns at Freud's Arts Cafe, a converted church just a few blocks from Clinton's old Leckford Road address.

The evening, billed as an "Election Night Extravaganza," was actually more of a Clinton rally, with an informal vote taken at the door showing guests favoring Clinton over Bush 129 to 15. While Clinton posters adorned the walls and Clinton campaign buttons were handed out at the door, a small and largely ignored stack of Bush-Quayle bumper stickers was the only acknowledgement of the other candidates in the race.

The election watch turned into a jovial, rowdy evening after early exit polls indicated that Clinton would win an electoral vote landslide.

"I'm looking forward to an Oxford man as president," said Jeremy Green, 19, a British student at Christ Church College. But his companion was of a different mind.

"We're not intellectual snobs like Jeremy," said David Blair, also 19. "Seven out of 10 British prime ministers since the war went to Oxford, and look what they've done."

British undergraduate Andrew Wright, who began the night as a Bush supporter, was soon fleeing for cover in the winner's camp.

"Oh, what the hell," he said, claiming a Clinton-Gore campaign sign for his own. "Might as well support the winning side. Bush is just a bumbling old twit, anyway."

But a few grieved as they watched Bush's fall. "Bush was — I wouldn't say great, but I'd say almost-great. And to see the great humiliated — it's always emotional," said Quentin Marshall, 19.

Americans celebrating Clinton's victory were giddy with joy at the prospect of the Democrats returning to the White House

■ Bikers denounce helmet, anti-Communist laws

BANGKOK, Thailand — More than a thousand motorcyclists demonstrated outside Parliament Thursday to demand the repeal of "dictatorial laws," including one requiring motorcyclists to wear helmets.

The demonstrators blocked a road, burned helmets and shouted obscenities as about 50 policemen looked on. No injuries were reported.

They demanded abolition of the helmet law, which takes effect next month. They also condemned a law requiring vehicle insurance coverage and anti-Communist legislation restricting political parties.

A statement issued by the motorcyclists said the helmet and insurance laws would only benefit helmet manufacturers and insurance companies.

The motorcyclists dispersed after being told the concerns would be brought to the Cabinet's attention.

■ Loot from Britain's biggest robbery to be sold

LONDON — Precious stones, jewelry and wristwatches recovered from Britain's biggest robbery will be auctioned in London next month after being unclaimed by their owners.

Christie's auction house said Thursday it expects to bring in up to $230,000 from the sale, which includes unmounted diamonds and a miniature gold replica of a sawed-off shotgun.

The proceeds from the sale Dec. 8-9 will go to people whose stolen property was not recovered.

The sale lots were recovered from Valerio Viccei, an Italian who masterminded the looting of the Knightsbridge Safe Deposit Center in London near Harrods store in 1987. Viccei and an accomplice were admitted to the center through a rear entrance by the managing director, who colluded with them.

Police estimated the stolen property was worth roughly $50 million to $100 million. They said the exact amount will never be known since criminals were among those renting the 121 looted deposit boxes.

■ Authorities ask entire school staff to transfer

SYDNEY, Australia — Education authorities have asked all 90 teachers and staff at a high school to take transfers after Aboriginal students and parents complained of racism.

The New South Wales state Education Department said that in one incident, an Aboriginal boy was suspended for swearing at a teacher who allegedly described Aboriginal students as "scumbags" and "vermin."

They said racism was "a continuing source of controversy and tension" for almost a decade at the school in the town of Casino, 375 miles north of Sydney.

Education officials began an investigation in July following complaints about mistreatment.

Slayings revive bitterness against U.S.

By Michelle Faul
Associated Press Writer

MONROVIA, Liberia — Slayings of five American nuns trapped in the siege of Monrovia have revived bitterness about the U.S. role in Liberia.

"The Reagan government and the Bush administration have to share some of the responsibilities for what has happened," Roman Catholic Archbishop Michael Francis said in an interview.

He and others believe the United States has a moral responsibility to help end the country's brutal, nearly three-year-old conflict.

Meanwhile, in Liberia-related developments Thursday:

—U.S. officials said Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi, trying to install a radical regime in Liberia and perhaps exert influence on the entire region, has been funneling weapons to rebel leader Charles Taylor's group.

The officials said Libya has been involved in the conflict from the beginning and recently increased its arms shipments, using Burkina Faso as a transit point.

'The Reagan government and the Bush administration have to share some of the responsibilities for what has happened.'

—Michael Francis
Roman Catholic archbishop

In November 1990, the Bush administration threatened to withhold aid to Burkina Faso if it did not stop supporting Taylor.

—The State Department announced it is recalling its ambassador from Burkina Faso to protest that country's arms shipments to Taylor's NPFL faction. Spokesman Richard Boucher said Burkina Faso has "actively undermined" the peace process in Liberia but declined to say where Burkina Faso got the arms.

—An AP reporter has spoken to Taylor fighters who say they received training in Libya and Burkina Faso.

Taylor in March 1991 invaded Sierra Leone alongside Siere Leonian rebels that trained with him in Guinea.

This year, Gambia accused Taylor of being behind the rebels who attempted a coup there.

—Drumbeats and prayers for peace rang from churches marking Thanksgiving Day in Liberia's besieged capital Thursday, replacing the terrifying booms of cannons, rockets and mortars.

Gunfire crackled from a strategic double-bridge leading to the Gardnersville-Banersville area, northeastern suburbs where Catholic priests pray they still may recover the bodies of the nuns, killed two weeks ago when Taylor's fighter advanced on the city.

—Shipments by air to Taylor's forces have been stopped for two weeks since Nigerian planes in a multinational force bombed Roberts Field International Airport, built by the U.S. Army in World War II, and a new airfield Taylor built at his headquarters in the central town of Gbarnga.

Taylor was also receiving supplies by road from the Ivory Coast.

Taylor began the war with an invasion from Ivory Coast on Christmas Eve 1989 that initially was a popular rebellion against a brutal and tribalistic military dictatorship. Samuel Doe was an illiterate master sergeant when he seized power in a bloody 1980 coup, the same year Ronald Reagan won elections.

"Reagan's government gave half a billion dollars to Doe in the first four years, more than they had given in the entire history of this country" founded by freed American slaves in 1847, said the archbishop, Francis.

Fischer overcomes Spassky, wins exhibition

N.Y. Times News Service

By coolly parlaying an audacious defense into a victory, Bobby Fischer defeated Boris Spassky on Thursday and won their exhibition match in Belgrade. It was perhaps a new beginning for the world champion of 20 years ago, who gave up a dazzling career for solitude.

In this series, neither Fischer nor Spassky equaled the brilliant play that graced their world championship match in 1972. But Fischer has indicated that he wants to keep on playing, and so the question now is: how does he match up against opponents who are stronger than Spassky.

There is Judit Polgar, the 16-year-old Hungarian chess whiz against whom Fischer is reportedly negotiating to play in a few months. And Viswanathan Anand of India, Vasily Ivanchuk of Ukraine or Gata Kamsky of the United States also come to mind. All are young, all are extraordinarily talented and all would give Fischer a tough match.

In Thursday's final game, Fischer played provocatively, almost tauntingly, in letting his king position — Spassky's prime target — be undermanned. Fischer shipped off his king's knight, normally the king's best defender, on an expedition of counterattack on the other side of the board, and Spassky responded overoptimistically.

He sacrificed a piece to break open the remaining defenses of Fischer's king, but the sacrifice was not correct, and made Fischer's cold-blooded defense easier. Fischer put away the game with confidence and brutal efficiency.

Fischer once more resorted to the King's Indian Defense, as he had in the previous encounter with Black, and Spassky again chose the Saemisch Attack with 5 f3, which braces the white center against counterattack and leaves White free to take the offensive on either flank.

Fischer countered with the Panno Variation, 6 ... Nc6 and 7 ... a6, as in Games 8, 12 and 28.

Killing of nuns puts civilization in danger

The feared massacre of five American nuns in the African nation of Liberia has once again underscored the dangers faced by representatives of churches who frequently put themselves at risk to carry a religious presence into war zones and hostile regions.

It's a risk they accept, but one with potentially vicious results as the massacre and previous killings show.

Liberia, where a seven-nation West African force is battling rebel troops under the command of Charles Taylor, has experienced more than its share of civilian casualties in the war. The U.N. World Health Organization says more than 50 civilians have been killed and 500 wounded since Taylor began his siege of Monrovia, the Liberian capital, nearly three weeks ago.

Yet the deaths of the five nuns — identified as sisters Barbara Ann Muttra of Springfield, Ill.; Shirley Kolmer and Mary Joel Kolmer, both of Waterloo, Ill.; Kathleen McGuire of Ridgway, Ill.; and Agnes Mueller of Bartelso, Ill. — came as a shock to both officials of the Roman Catholic Church and the United States Government.

Roman Catholic Archbishop Michael Francis said the nuns had been "brutally murdered," while the Vatican newspaper, L'Osservatore Romano, called the killing of the members of the Adorers of the Blood of Christ order a "massacre."

Meanwhile, an official at the State Department called the killings a "cowardly act" and indicated the nuns were slain several days ago in a rebel-controlled area.

The murder of innocent missionaries and others in religious life strikes at the very heart of what is considered clean and wholesome and good about the United States. The nuns only wanted to do what they could to relieve pain and suffering in the war-torn nation. Still, Barbara Brilliant of Brunswick, Maine, who was one of three American nuns remaining in Liberia following the deaths of the five, cast the killings in a new light when she said that Taylor's fighters "see the CIA behind every white face." All the slain nuns were white.

The killings are reprehensible, as were the slayings of four American missionaries in El Salvador in 1980. When church officials are murdered — even in a war zone — civilization's strength, its morality, is in danger of collapsing.

Madonna's latest artform is nothing more than 'Sex'

Well, everybody assumes she's not, like, a virgin, you know, but when she sells her latest offering, "Sex" (the book), for $50, there's no question she's a material girl, is there? We speak, of course, of Madonna. The material girl who insists she's really an artist.

And an artist Madonna is — if by that exalted term is meant her having elevated hucksterism to an art form. In that, she is poetry in motion. The Countess of Compound Interest. The Duchess of Dividends. The Empress of the Exchequer. One can almost hear her declaiming: "Art, how do I love thee? Let me count my bills."

Having said that, is it appropriate that this person Madonna intrude into the nation's collective consciousness? What is it she really wants? Liberation? Attention? Freedom from all restraint — in a word, libertinism?

This is not to impede anyone's right to creative expression, including the too user-friendly Madonna. But in the end, "Sex" (the book) is more narcissistic than artistic. Dorothy Parker's review more than half a century ago, of a long-forgotten book, resonates appropriately. "This book should not be tossed aside lightly. It should be thrown, with great force."

'Religious Rights' are whacky which means about 'average'

A bogeyman is peering through the window of the Republic: the Religious Right.

Don't trouble yourselves too much. American politics is a self-correcting system, seldom hospitable to zealotry.

As for the evangelical "infiltration" of local offices, a counter-attack by more secular souls is under way; some salutary balance doubtless will emerge. Meanwhile, religious convictions should not taint someone for public service.

Conservative Christians are not pod people. Often they're point people, leading a march into public bodies whose arrogance has riled citizens of all persuasions. Sometimes they get whacky, which makes them about average.

Postmaster may earn his nickname

WASHINGTON — The next time you feel like exploding at a spouse who forgets to put the cap back on a tube of toothpaste, heed this advice from the postmaster general: "Express your anger honestly but with love and respect."

Anderson

Marvin Runyon has been dispensing such monthly homilies to postal employees like an arm-chair shrink in what some observers believe is a matter of life and death for the shell-shocked Postal Service staff of more than 700,000.

The blizzard of brochures and flyers falling on postal employees suggests that Runyon realizes he may be sitting on a powder keg. One flyer, entitled "Healthy Steps (to) Releasing Anger," includes a cartoon depicting a female controlling her temper over the fact that some toothpaste has seeped into her sink because of her husband's neglect. It lists four steps "to release (anger) and maintain the respect of others."

Since taking office last July, Runyon — a.k.a. "Carvin' Marvin" — has presided over the break-up of the largest civilian workforce in the United States. He has vowed to eliminate 30,000 postal management jobs this year as part of a sweeping restructuring plan. He's already closed more than 50 regional management offices and shaken up various departments.

Days after Runyon announced the shake-up, workers at postal headquarters were informed that "many of our employees will be facing decisions that may cause undue stress, (so) all headquarters employees will be offered the availability of group stress reduction workshops and personal counseling. ..."

"Some people have become concerned that we may be making these changes too quickly," he told a congressional panel. "However, with change of this nature and magnitude, there's no way to do it slowly."

Some also fear there may be no way to do it non-violently.

Congressional investigators have been concerned about violence in the postal workplace for a long time. At least 36 people have been killed by current or former postal workers over the last six years, including five in a widely publicized case in Michigan last year when a disgruntled former employee murdered four supervisors and then took his own life.

Last week, Runyon visited that Michigan post office and told employees there that "for any company like the Postal Service to be successful, there can't be an adversarial relationship between employees and managers," according to a postal spokesman.

The spokesman also said that Runyon told the employees that both sides have to "sit down together and solve problems that are ultimately in the best interest of everybody."

But close observers are concerned that Runyon's changes are fueling an already explosive situation. "There's anger in the way it was done," Vincent Palladino, president of the National Association of Postal Supervisors, told our associate Ed Henry. "Especially the speed of it and some of the tactics that are being used to carry it out."

CHARLEY REESE

Government consensus can reduce deficit

All these plans — including Ross Perot's and Bill Clinton's — for solving our problems remind me of a remark made by the director of the Professional Golfers Association several years ago.

"All over this country," he said, "there are amateur golfers who can play a course with far fewer strokes than the professionals can play it — but not when there's $50,000 riding on it."

Reese

Like the amateur golfers, any of us can sit down with a yellow pad and a pencil and work out a detailed plan to reduce the deficit, revitalize our cities, or solve whatever other problem you can think of. Solutions are the easy part. Execution is what's difficult.

People could save themselves a lot of time and energy if they would just get it into their heads that are no problems for which there are not answers. Americans are not dumb. When we have problems it isn't because people don't know how to solve them. It's because people do not choose to solve them.

Take the federal deficit, for example. Politicians are masters at producing scapegoats and excuses. Some examples: we have deficits because we don't have a line-item veto, because we don't have a balanced budget amendment, because the Democrats control Congress.

All of those are wrong. We have deficits because neither the president nor the Congress has wished to take the political heat that reducing the deficit will generate.

Look at it this way. Every dollar of the $1.4 trillion federal budget goes into somebody's pocket. All those people have not only pockets, but voter registration cards and, many of them, highly paid lobbyists. To cut the budget means to take some of those dollars out of some of those pockets. Those pocket-owners will scream and resist. Talk about reducing the deficit is theory and doesn't harm anyone. Actually reducing it means reduction of income for somebody.

Republicans are willing to cut those areas that benefit people who don't vote Republican anyway while Democrats are willing to cut the benefits of or tax the people who don't vote Democratic. That's the basic formula for gridlock.

People should not be fooled by a laundry list of proposed spending cuts and tax increases. Any of us can draw up such a program. What is required is leadership that will produce, on a nonpartisan basis, a national consensus that federal expenditures and revenues must be brought in line. Once that consensus is established, a suitable formula can be adopted; without the consensus, nothing will get done.

Neither George Bush nor Ronald Reagan ever tried to build such a consensus. They found Congress too convenient a scapegoat. The same tax and spend formula that works for Democrats also works for Republicans. That's why it's nonsense to say the choice between the Republican or the Democrat is a choice between less or more government.

When Democrat Jimmy Carter left office, the federal budget was $590 billion and the annual deficit was $73 billion. After 11 years of Ronald Reagan and George Bush in the White House, the budget is $1.4 trillion and the deficit is $318 billion. For two of those years, Republicans controlled the Senate and for nearly the whole time there were enough votes to sustain a presidential veto.

Big government grew because Republicans wanted it to grow. Other than rhetoric there is hardly any difference between Republicans and Democrats, and even the rhetoric gap has begun to close.

It might even be better to have a president and Congressional majority of the same party. That way neither would have a partisan scapegoat on which to dump their failures. For a politician, accountability is hell, but for the American people, it's just what we need.

Charley Reese's column is distributed by King Features Syndicate.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

No, Mr. Hiss, you're still not vindicated

Was Alger Hiss guilty of espionage for the Soviet Union? Or, equally to the point, perhaps, does anyone nowadays care?

As the Hiss-Chambers case — 44 years old this year — surges once more into the headlines, we are likely to find Americans under 50 scratching their heads. Alger who? And what's the difference if a Soviet historian says, as he did the other day, that a search of KGB files reveals no evidence of Hiss' guilt? So what if Hiss pronounces himself vindicated? A country deeply divided on economic and political questions has scant interest in the controversies of yesteryear. George Bush's generation remembers the Hiss-Chambers case. Bill Clinton's doesn't. Perhaps that says it all. Or perhaps not.

Murchison

Yes, what a long time ago — the early days of the Cold War, when Joseph Stalin's baleful designs on Western civilization were becoming recognized. In August 1948, Whittaker Chambers, a senior editor of Time magazine, told the House Committee on Un-American Activities that he and Hiss had been Soviet spies in the '30s. Hiss, a State Department official who had been at Yalta with Franklin Roosevelt, heatedly denied the charge. Eventually, a federal court convicted Hiss not of espionage but perjury. He served four years in prison.

The coals of the controversy have long been gray and dull, but in the beginning they blazed hotly. Liberals tended to rally around Hiss, whom they saw as one of their own, beset by reactionaries and scoundrels like Rep. Richard Nixon. Conservatives and anti-communists lionized Chambers as a hero whose conscience had impelled him, at vast personal cost, to take his stand on the side of God and the West. When President Reagan posthumously awarded Chambers the Presidential Medal of Freedom, he observed that "the solitary figure of Whittaker Chambers personified the mystery of human redemption in the face of evil and suffering."

In 1952, Chambers published his autobiographical memoir "Witness." American literature knows nothing more sublime or moving. The book's introductory chapter, "Letter to My Children," is an excursion into little-frequented regions of the human soul.

Yet was Chambers lying after all? Hiss has consistently said so. Gen. Dmitri Volkogonov, after searching military intelligence files, seems to agree. The records do not demonstrate Hiss' guilt, the general says.

Do they demonstrate his innocence? Ah, that's something else. Prof. Richard Pipes of Harvard, who is probably America's leading expert on Soviet history, doesn't doubt that the general has "'given an honest report on what he saw, but there are a lot of things he might not have seen. There are archives within archives within archives. To say there is no evidence in any of the archives is not very responsible on his part."

Something is rotten in Moscow. Has the Yeltsin government — has Volkogonov himself — some ulterior, post-Cold War motive for wanting to put a pro-Hiss gloss on the case?

We just plain don't know, but we know it's much too early to vindicate Alger Hiss. More rummaging of the archives is needed. And what if in the end nothing more turns up? Such a void might be construed as pointing to the power of a kitchen match in the hands of a cynical Soviet bureaucrat.

Not that the case against Hiss depends on access to Soviet records. Testimony and material evidence, offered in American court, convicted Hiss and vindicated Chambers. As did something less tangible: character, as displayed and observed. Hiss was charming and sly from the start. First he didn't know Chambers, then, sure enough, he did recognize him, under another name. He could never reconcile conflicting bits of evidence.

Chambers' story never shifted. He flinched, felt pain and contemplated suicide, yet marched onward. Hiss was never able to show any personal motive Chambers might have had for destroying himself so as to destroy Hiss. Hiss' memoirs of the case are petty-fogging and legalistic; Chambers' are spiritual and exalted. None of which proves anything beyond cavil. Yet I am minded to say that if Whittaker Chambers was lying about Alger Hiss, no man ever told the truth.

■ Judge dismisses landmark tobacco lawsuit

NEWARK, N.J. — A landmark lawsuit against the cigarette industry was dismissed by a judge Thursday at the request of lawyers for the plaintiffs, the family of a woman who claimed smoking caused her fatal lung cancer.

The case had been sent back to federal court in Newark for retrial in June by the U.S. Supreme Court. The high court said a 1965 federal law requiring warning labels on cigarette packages did not shield the companies from all lawsuits based on state personal injury laws.

The 7-2 ruling also said smokers need to do more than prove that cigarette advertising and promotions tend to minimize the health hazards.

■ Jury finds former senator guilty of conspiracy

PHOENIX — A former state senator was convicted of conspiracy Thursday for taking $25,000 from an undercover agent during the "AzScam" investigation of statehouse corruption.

Carolyn Walker also was found guilty of making a false campaign contribution statement. But she was acquitted of six other charges, including bribery, money laundering and other campaign violations.

The centerpiece of the prosecution was hours of videotapes of legislators taking payoffs from undercover agent Joseph Stedino, who posed as J. Anthony Vincent, a crooked lobbyist pushing legalized gambling and other issues. Prosecutors have been criticized since for depending on the erratic Stedino.

In all, 21 people were indicted in AzScam; 12 people, including six lawmakers, have accepted plea bargains. Walker is the only lawmaker to go to trial.

■ Judge gives death sentence to man for killing 5

CINCINNATI — A burglar convicted of killing five children by setting fire to their home as they slept was sentenced Thursday to death.

William Lee Garner, 20, of Cincinnati showed no emotion as Common Pleas Judge Thomas Nurre gave the sentence, which a jury had recommended.

"You showed these children no mercy when you took their lives," Nurre said.

Garner was convicted Oct. 1 of five counts of aggravated murder. The judge set the execution for May 26, 1993, but appeals probably will delay it for years.

Garner set the fire Jan. 26 to cover his burglary of the townhouse. He told police he thought the children would smell the smoke and get out.

Political analyst tells what comes next

By Jerry Roberts
N.Y. Times News Service

■ Analysis

Democrats are gushing about an emerging new majority, Republicans are going into the woods for ideological soul-searching — and Ross Perot is still guffawing at them both.

Surveying the new political landscape, it is far from clear whether Tuesday's election signaled a sea change in America or just another bump in the road.

"You can't look at this election in the conventional way," said political analyst Mervin Field. "That Perot vote needs a lot of close examining."

Pawing through the entrails on Day II of the Clinton Era, here is a look at how the major political forces stand:

REPUBLICANS — In many ways, Republicans find themselves in the same spot Democrats did in 1972 — skunked in a national campaign and split internally on social issues by factional feuding that frightens many mainstream voters.

Although the economy was by far the overarching reason for George Bush's ignominious defeat, it is also inarguable that he ran a truly awful strategic and tactical campaign that never settled on a message and was organizationally beaten by the Democrats at every step.

But as the predictable finger-pointing and back-biting begins among the players in their defeat, it is clear that the GOP is headed for a round of Democrat-like breast-beating about their identity as Republicans.

The basic problem is this: For 15 years, the GOP's factions unified on a platform of low taxes, strong national defense and traditional cultural values. But Bush's "read my lips" debacle and the end of the Cold war erased the top two tenets of Republicanism, which suddenly thrust moral issues to the top of the agenda and exposed fault lines between social conservatives on one side and moderates and fiscal conservatives on the other.

The first battle for the soul of Republicanism will take place later this year, when party leaders meet to elect a new chairman. The fight will intensify over the next few years, as presidential wannabes position themselves for 1996.

DEMOCRATS — Many Democrats are trumpeting Clinton's election as a watershed event, marking the collapse of the Reagan coalition under the generational onslaught of a new breed of Democrats who stole back the middle class.

Clinton broke the Republican regional "lock" on the Electoral College, stealing states in the South, the West and the industrial Midwest. More significantly, he also broke through demographically, making inroads among suburbanites, blue-collar Reagan Democrats and working women. Perhaps most importantly, he beat Bush by 18 points among first-time voters.

"We didn't find the key to the electoral lock here," said Clinton adviser James Carville. "We just picked it."

Despite such inroads, the victory was built squarely on the party's traditional base, including minorities, union households and a huge gender gap among women; Bush won among white voters and ran almost even among men, while a Los Angeles Times exit poll showed that 74 percent of Clinton voters were partisan Democrats — but only 17 percent were political independents.

PEROT — Perot on Tuesday confounded the conventional wisdom one more time. All the pundits predicted that his 15 percent showing in pre-election polls would drop, as numbers almost always had for third-party candidates.

Not only did the Texas tycoon increase his share of support, but his 19 percent represented the best showing by a third-force candidate since Teddy Roosevelt in 1912.

What was more extraordinary was that his support was not regional.

Instead, Perot had consistent levels of support in almost all regions of the country, and his supporters were strikingly independent and moderate.

Cabinet possibles withdraw from running

WASHINGTON (AP) — Within 48 hours of Bill Clinton's election, three potential candidates had already removed themselves from the running for top administration jobs — Oklahoma Sen. David Boren, and retired Admirals William Crowe and Bobby Inman.

Speculation had all three as possible CIA directors in a Clinton administration.

Crowe "is not interested," said aide Jay Coupe. A former head of the Joint Chiefs of Staff under President Reagan, Crowe endorsed Clinton and gave him the imprimatur of the defense establishment when the presidential candidate was under fire for avoiding service in Vietnam.

Crowe has not had any discussions with Clinton about the CIA job or about becoming secretary of defense — another position for which he has been prominently mentioned, said Coupe. "Forty-seven years in service is enough," he said.

Inman, a former deputy CIA Director, said in an interview that he was not interested in a fulltime Washington job.

Boren, outgoing chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, has told Clinton he is not interested in the job, said an informed source who spoke on condition of anonymity. Boren himself said in a speech in Oklahoma Thursday that he was not interested in a Cabinet position, either, and would rather serve as the point man for getting Clinton's legislative agenda through Congress.

Boren's counterpart on the House side, Rep. Dave McCurdy, also an Oklahoma Democrat, appears still in the running for the CIA job.

Current CIA Director Robert Gates may be asked to remain for several months after Clinton takes office in January to ensure a smooth transition, said informed sources who also asked not to be identified.

Clinton probably won't make any announcements of top jobs until next week.

But as the guessing game picks up steam, these names are emerging as possible contenders for other positions:

Secretary of Defense: Rep. Les Aspin of Wisconsin, Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia.

Secretary of State: Rep. Lee Hamilton of Indiana, Los Angeles lawyer Warren Christopher, Nunn.

Secretary of Commerce: John Scully of Apple Computer Inc., Mike Walsh of Tenneco Inc., John Young of Hewlett-Packard Co., Robert Rubin of Goldman Sachs & Co.

Secretary of Treasury: Robert Reich of Harvard, Rubin of Goldman Sachs, investment bankers Roger Altman and Felix Rohatyn, former Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

Secretary of Interior: Outgoing Sen. Tim Wirth of Colorado, Gov. Roy Romer of Colorado, former Gov. Bruce Babbitt of Arizona, New Mexico Rep. Bill Richardson.

Secretary of Energy: Wirth, Romer, Babbitt, Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro.

Secretary of Health and Human Services: Gov. Booth Gardner of Washington, Dr. Joyceln Elders, Arkansas state health commissioner.

Secretary of Housing and Urban Development: Vince Lane, director of the Chicago Housing Authority, Mayor Maynard Jackson of Atlanta, Mayor Raymond Flynn of Boston.

Secretary of Education: Former Gov. Richard Riley of South Carolina, former Gov. Thomas Kean of New Jersey.

Secretary of Labor: Former Gov. James Blanchard of Michigan, Sen. Tom Harkin of Iowa, former Labor Secretary Ray Marshall.

Secretary of Agriculture: Harkin, Mauro, former Mississippi Gov. Ray Mabus.

Environmental Protection Agency: Former Gov. Madeleine Kunin of Vermont, Jessica Mathews, vice president of World Resources Inc., Wirth, Gardner.

Transportation Department: Henry Cisneros, former mayor of San Antonio; Kathleen Brown, California treasurer.

Chief of Staff: Campaign aces Mickey Kantor and Bruce Lindsey, Sen. David Pryor of Arkansas, Romer, Riley.

Attorney General: Civil rights lawyer Vernon Jordan, Kantor.

Office of Management and Budget: James Jones of American Stock Exchange, economist Alice Rivlin, former Rep. Bill Gray of Pennsylvania, Rep. Leon Panetta of California, Campaign aide Ira Magaziner.

Clinton team hopes Bush keeps actions to minimum

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — President-elect Clinton's team can't do much except sit by for the next two months while the Bush administration plows ahead with its own policies, like Thursday's decision to impose punitive tariffs on European imports.

"Hopefully, they'll keep their mischief to a minimum," Bruce Reed, a Clinton policy aide, said of the Republicans' lame duck period before the new president takes over Jan. 20. "We've waited 12 years. We can wait another two months."

Clinton himself sounded supportive of President Bush's decision-making powers for the next 70-odd days, reserving comment on the European tariff decision until he could review it.

"We've got one president," said Clinton, who was working on state and transition business at the Arkansas governor's office and placing introductory phone calls to foreign leaders.

"He has to make those decisions," Clinton said. "I don't want to get in the way."

Clinton aides noted that Bush — in his concession speech Tuesday night and in comments Wednesday — had pledged to work with Clinton's team to ensure a smooth transition.

Bush said "he wants to work with the new administration to get things rolling," Reed said. "The ball's in their court as to what kind of transition it's going to be."

Clinton's aides insisted there was nothing irritating about having the very Republicans they had just defeated still making decisions about the nation's fate.

MISD board names alternative-fuels panel

■ Seven-member committee to study the best way to bring district in compliance with mandate to convert school buses.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

The school bus of the future may be powered by propane or compressed natural gas.

At the very least, 30 percent of Midland Independent School District's buses must be converted to being capable of using alternative fuels by September 1994.

School board trustees, pooling local experts in fuel industries, have appointed a seven-member committee to study and recommend the best way to bring the school district into compliance with the alternative fuels state mandate.

"The state mandate is a phased-in program to decrease fuel emissions," said Wilson Heidelberg, executive director of auxiliary services for Midland Independent School District.

"The mandate evolved from Texas legislation commonly known as the Texas Plan for Clean Air," said Carlton Bell, executive assistant for alternative fuels in the Texas General Land Office in Austin.

"The mandate applies to school districts with more than 50 buses. The legislation was conceived by Texas Land Commissioner Garry Mauro," Bell said. "He was concerned about domestic resources, and clean-burning fuels."

The executive assistant said switching from gasoline to cleaner-burning fuels will result in a "win-win situation for Texas."

"The state has lost a lot of jobs because of its addiction to oil," said former Midlander Bell. "We need to build a job base and infrastructure keeping in mind that it costs less to use some alternative fuels."

Heidelberg will chair the Advisory Committee on Compliance with Alternative Fuels. Other committee members include Drew Diggins, alternative fuels manager for Wagner & Brown; Lezlie Forster, president of CNG Services Inc.; Mark Harrell, vice president of Frank's Fuels; Dan Moody, executive vice president of Eddins-Walcher Co.; Ken Morrison, certified public accountant and former MISD school board member; Midland College Board trustee Ken Peeler of Midland 66 Oil Inc., and Jack Sherman of Jack Sherman Chevorlet.

"The committee is charged with studying types of fuels that will meet the alternative fuels law," Heidelberg said. Acceptable alternative fuels will have comparably lower emissions than gasoline, which the MISD administrator said, "leaves the door open for someone to meet that definition with a new type of diesel or even electric or battery-powered cars."

Heidelberg said the local committee would concentrate its efforts on readily available fuels.

The first step in complying with the law, which is already in effect, will be to convert 30 percent of the district's buses into being capable of using alternative fuels.

"It could necessitate different bus engines," Heidelberg said. "There are various ways to comply. Some engines are dedicated to alternative fuels and some are dual-fuel capable." Dual-fuel engines can be switched from gasoline to an alternative fuel using the same engine.

"We will decide if dedicated or dual-fuel capable is best, and which alternative fuels to use," he said.

He said some fuels being developed by companies include CNG, a new type of diesel, and propane.

"Basically ... we are trying to make decisions a little bit ahead of technology. And to have 30 percent of our fleet running on alternative fuels in 1994, all funds must be budgeted in 1993-'94," Heidelberg said, noting that the 1993-'94 budget process starts February.

He said the state mandate resulted from Senate Bill 740 and SB 769. The law will increase to 50 percent of school bus fleets being alternative fuel capable in 1996, and possibly 90 percent in 1998.

Getting in the swing of cold weather

Midlanders are already getting acclimated to the cooler weather that accompanied the cold front that blew into the Permian Basin this week. The brisk conditions weren't enough to deter Alberto Cano and his son Christopher, 2, from a trip to the park on Thursday.

Group is to auction West Texas ranch

■ Bidders must have $250,000 certified check in hand in order to bid on Waco oilman's 5,000-acre Livermore Ranch.

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

FORT DAVIS — The 5,000-acre Livermore Ranch, hailed as a crown jewel among trophy ranches in Texas, is to be auctioned at 2 p.m. Saturday by the J.P. King Auction Group of New York City.

To be eligible to bid on the ranch, each bidder must have a $250,000 certified check in hand.

The King Auction Group is selling the mountainous ranch and its 11,000-square foot metal-roofed luxury lodge on a "no-minimum, no-reserve" basis for Marvin Boyd, an 80-year-old Waco oilman.

Near the lodge is a more-than-3,000-square-foot headquarters which serves as a base for hunting expeditions for deer and other game.

The lodge, designed by architect Frank Welch, is "just a beautiful thing," said Marathon rancher Ben Love. Love is a leader in the Davis Mountains Trans-Pecos Heritage Association, which functions to protect private landowners' rights and to halt or forestall government encroachment, such as through acquiring private ranches and wilderness areas.

From a West Texas rancher's perspective, Love noted that the bidding will be on "a house with a 5,000-acre backyard."

The 5,000-acre ranch covers almost eight square miles in a country where many ranches are measured in the scores or hundreds of sections.

William Bone, director of the King Auction Group, has described the ranch as "a Utopia for nature lovers, and its horse and cattle facilities have tremendous profit-making potential." Bone, in a prepared statement, said that the Livermore Ranch "is the ideal corporate retreat or spa."

The ranch, in virtual pristine wilderness, is in Jeff Davis County near Fort Davis and is encompassed by the Scenic Loop near The University of Texas McDonald Observatory.

Recent sales by the King Auction Group include Kentucky's Calumet Farms, which sold for $20 million, and, in Texas, the Crawford Farms for $8.1-million; Two Creeks Ranch for $2.3 million; Brinks/Sisterdale Ranch for $1.3 million, and the Buckhorn Ranch for $1.2 million.

The 5,000-acre Rancho de los Jefes hunting lodge near Falfurrias is to be auctioned by King on Dec. 10. The privilege of bidding there requires a $100,000 certified check in hand by each bidder.

Love, who has banded with other West Texas ranchers to protect land from government takeover such as through the National Park Service, said that the Davis Mountains Trans-Pecos Heritage Association fears The Nature Conservancy will buy the Livermore Ranch and, after entertaining supporters of the non-profit conservation organization, will "turn it over to the National Park Service."

However, Sherilyn Garcia of The Texas Nature Conservancy in San Antonio said that the member-supported conservancy, which is aware of the impending auction, is not financially able to purchase the ranch.

The conservancy is "interested" in acquiring and preserving land that is "ecologically sensitive, ecologically diverse, and rare."

For the National Park Service to buy the land outright, the government would have to "hold public hearings and notices and (honor) all the rules of fair play," Love said, "but the Conservancy can buy it and just deed it to them (the NPS), and nobody in the community gets any say-so." Controversy would be avoided, Love said. And a gift of land to the NPS "greases the tracks" to quick federal ownership.

Love maintains that private landowners, as caretakers of the land, will best preserve and conserve land, since land provides their livelihood and that of their children.

As far as a real-estate developer buying up the Livermore Ranch, Love said that the remote ranch is "not really accessible.

"As I see it, it's not really suited for any kind of development," Love said. "It's just too far from anything. It's pretty high in the moun-

Bush may have to adjust to life out of the public eye

By Geoff Davidian
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Former President Jimmy Carter conducted a news conference Tuesday outside a concrete polling place, three blocks from his home in Plains, Ga.

International media didn't attend. Only a few dozen reporters from Albany, Columbus and Atlanta who wanted to hear the one-term president's view point on Tuesday's Democratic victory were there.

State Highway 45 through Plains is a long way from 1600 Pennsylvania Ave., and so is 9 West Oaks South, where George and Barbara Bush have a piece of real estate big enough for a Houston town house.

As a former president, Bush will find a world much different if he moves back to Houston as he has indicated he may when he retires.

In Houston on Tuesday, Bush sent out for dinner from Otto's Bar-B-Que on Memorial, where June Sofka has been serving him for 30 years.

After a grueling campaign and bad re-election news, the president may not have felt much like stepping into the limelight.

"The last time he came here was during the Republican Convention in August," Sofka said Wednesday. "He was very upbeat, very confident.

"Fifty press and 50 Secret Service came first, then the president, then 20 more Secret Service, right in the middle of lunch. It wasn't disruptive; the customers love the excitement."

After January, when Bill Clinton moves into the Oval Office, Bush may end up walking into Otto's with as little fanfare as what greets Carter at a catfish fry.

Like Carter, Bush will leave the presidency on a sour note, and it will likely take him time to readjust.

"Early on, it was difficult for the Carters," reflected Rudy Hayes, editor of the Americus (Ga.) Times-Recorder.

"But he's the best ex-president there's ever been. The Carters were never bitter. They had all these challenges and goals. I always used to kid him that he was more of a humanitarian than a politician."

It may be too early for Bush to know what he wants to do, except maybe go hunting or fishing with his friend and political partner, James A. Baker III.

But one thing Carter and Bush have in common is a wealth of old friends with whom they share memories and experiences.

Houston, apparently, is where

Rebel band advances to state competition

Staff report

The Lee High School Band has advanced to the state competition. The Rebel band will vie for the top spot in Texas in Austin on Monday.

The Midland High School Band also shone in the recent El Paso competition where both local high school bands earned Division I ratings. The MHS Band tied for second place Area III honors with Odessa High School. Analysis of the second place scores gave OHS a slight edge, and the right to also compete in the state competition.

"Though Midland High School did not advance to state competition, the band can be proud of the improvements made in the group this year," said Grace Osadchuk, coordinator of fine arts for Midland Independent School District. "And it was good to see both Midland bands beat the Permian Band," she said.

In addition to competing against Odessa's high schools, Midland bands also competed against Amarillo, Lubbock, and El Paso 5A schools.

LHS was named the top band in the UIL (University Interscholastic League) competition in El Paso.

The Rebel band also will travel to Pasadena, Calif., to march in the Tournament of Roses Parade Jan. 1.

KTPX-TV meteorologist receives award

By Darren J. Waggoner

Mark Lee, alarmed at Midland's lack of a tornado siren, believes the city has been lucky to escape the wrath of such a damaging storm.

In April, he cautioned area residents about the devastation a tornado can cause — in the form of a one-hour severe weather special titled "The Fifth Season".

Last month, Lee — a meteorologist for KTPX-TV (Channel 9) — was honored by the National Weather Association (NWA) for issuing that warning.

"It can happen here. People don't seem to realize that," he said. "Midland/Odessa has never been hit, giving people a false sense of security."

Lee dispelled the school of thought attributing Midland's lack of tornadoes to the caprock — a geographical feature marking the edge of the South Plains bordering Midland to the west and north.

The NWA presents one Media Award each year for educating the community about severe weather, including the protection of life and property.

"I'm pleased as punch to get this award, mostly because it's an honor from my peers. There were entries from all over the country," Lee said.

Lee traveled to St. Louis on Oct. 21 to receive the award.

Lee credited his co-workers at Channel 9 for the extensive re-

Lawmen arrest 8 Big Spring residents on drug charges

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

BIG SPRING — Officers of the Howard County sheriff's office and the Permian Basin Drug Task Force arrested eight Big Spring residents Thursday in a drug sweep that was expected to continue today.

The drug bust, a result of several months of investigation between the two agencies, began about 4 p.m. Thursday, said a Howard County sheriff's office spokesman.

Warrants for delivery of a controlled substance were issued for 14 residents. Eight had been arrested by late Thursday evening and two remained in the Howard County Jail.

Ruben R. Gaboa, 36, was charged with delivery of cocaine and bond was set at $10,000. Gaboa was already in jail on another charge when the warrant was served.

Oscar Hernandez, 32, also was still in custody, charged with delivery of cocaine, with bond set at $10,000.

Those who had posted bond were: Jamie Delossantos, 18,

Man gets mementoes from his youth

■ WWII veteran, who had given his high school yearbook and photos to a buddy before he shipped, out receives a surprise in the mail 50 years later.

By Dan Feldstein
Hearst News Service

SAN ANTONIO — Fifty years ago during World War II, when Army paratrooper Sam Wong got the call to ship out for Europe, he gave his personal photos and high school yearbook to an Army buddy for safekeeping.

Wednesday, in a neatly wrapped, brown package, he got them back.

"Gosh, look at this!," he said as family photos, telegrams and newspaper clippings spilled across his living room couch and onto the floor.

Wong, a San Antonio native, was seven years out of Brackenridge High School when he enlisted in February 1942. In October of that year at Fort Bragg, N.C., he learned he was heading into combat.

He gave his things to a man with the last name of Lawrence, who he never saw again, and Wong assumed they were gone forever.

But this year, in Kersey, Pa., Jerry Pichler took possession of a family heirloom — the suitcase of an older brother, Leo, killed in combat in 1945.

Pichler often had looked through the suitcase, full of boxing awards, clothes and photographs. Among the items there was a "BHS '35" yearbook full of pictures.

Pichler, 11 years old when he last saw his brother, remembered him bringing home the yearbook on leave and saying it belonged to a Sam Wong, killed in battle.

For five decades, Pichler said, he thought about the slain Wong and prayed for him. Then, when another of Pichler's brothers died, he inherited the suitcase and resolved to find Wong's survivors in San Antonio.

Pichler's wife, Marge, wrote to an American Legion post, which suggested calling the San Antonio Light.

After placing a few calls to people in the Chinese community, the Light had a surprise for the Pichlers: Wong is alive, at his fighting weight and living on New Laredo Highway.

Wong, 77, was a little surprised himself, especially since he could not remember anyone named Pichler.

He figures that Lawrence must have passed the book to Pilcher at some point.

Wong was declared missing in action after a jump into Italy in 1943. He spent 21 months as a German prisoner of war. Leo Pichler was killed, never knowing that Wong still was alive.

In any event, it was one heck of a United Parcel Service package delivery.

"You know, I don't even remember some of this stuff," Wong said.

Sifting through the package, he came across a love poem composed by his prewar sweetheart, Edna. And sitting beside him Wednesday was Edna — his wife of 44 years.

One photo shows Wong jumping from a plane, a proud member of the 82nd Airborne, 509th Parachute Battalion. Another shows his elder sister, Helen, just weeks before she contracted pneumonia and died a month short of graduation from Brackenridge in 1933.

Also, the girlfriends. Lots of girlfriends.

"Some are dead," he said. "In the picture they're so young. It touches me."

Wong operated a grocery on the main square in San Marcos before and after the war. Now semiretired, he still opens his hardware store next to his home on most days.

The Pichlers are as excited as the Wongs about the return of the mementos. They are planning to visit the Wongs in San Antonio next spring.

State social worker's 'clients' include cats

AUSTIN (AP) — In the heart of the city, Raelynn Maxwell answers the call of the wild.

The longtime social worker is the "catwoman" of Austin State Hospital.

For years, Maxwell has been looking after the wild felines that make their lair in the greensward of the 180-acre state psychiatric hospital.

About 35 cats live on the hospital grounds, and Maxwell is the organizer of a crew of volunteers who feed them and take them to be vaccinated and neutered.

Only a few cats are tame enough to play with the hospital's mentally ill patients, but Maxwell hopes more of them will become used to people.

"It makes the environment more regular," said Maxwell, who worked at Austin State Hospital for 20 years before transferring to the headquarters of the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation. "Walk through Hyde Park or Tarrytown, you'll see cats in people's yards. This is the same thing.

"If I were out there (as a patient) and did not have the keys to come and go, I'd feel better seeing them," she said. "It's neat knowing that where you are cares about all living creatures."

Cats always have been attracted to the pastoral grounds. But in 1988, when the cat population began to soar, Maxwell realized a wildlife management program was needed to prevent the hospital from being overrun.

With help from hospital workers, Maxwell catches the cats and takes them to the veterinarian to be neutered. She uses her own money and donations to pay the bills. One year, her co-workers gave her a "Fix-a-Cat" gift certificate for her birthday.

Maxwell maintains an up-to-date file on which cats have had surgery and which could be adopted by her friends. Her devotion has kept the cats healthy and their population manageable.

"I'm a social worker," she said. "I do discharge planning and aftercare. I find placements for cats."

Some state parks face budget cuts, officials say

DALLAS (AP) — State officials, reversing plans to close seven parks for budgetary reasons, said Thursday some cuts would still occur in at least six facilities.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department told commissioners that negotiations were under way to keep five facilities open on a long-term basis, with agency staff members pursuing similar agreements for the other two.

"This has been an extremely difficult process, but some very positive benefits are emerging from it," said Ron Holliday, TPWD public lands director.

He said at least nine Friends of the Park groups have formed to assist the state, along with several other volunteer organizations.

In July, the parks and wildlife department had announced closures or reductions at about 20 parks. The closure list was later pared to 11 and then to seven facilities, which were scheduled to go off line Dec. 1.

But some communities planned to sign cooperative agreements for managing all or part of their local state parks' operations.

The department said Old Fort Parker State Historical Park in Limestone County became the first of the seven sites to go off the closure list when the Groesbeck City Council voted in September to assume its management.

A status report showed that some cuts were still planned at Fort Parker, the Confederate Reunion Ground near Mexia, Fort Lancaster near Ozona, the Magoffin Home near El Paso, Jim Hogg Park in Cherokee County and the Cassells Boykin site in Angelina County.

The Denison Chamber of Commerce said late Thursday that an agreement was reached with the state for continued operation and funding of the Eisenhower Birthplace in the North Texas city.

The Starr Family Home near Marshall, also on the closure list, was the subject of other discussions. Eighteen other sites were scheduled for some reductions.

search they did to produce "The Fifth Season," including detailing selected tornadoes and the damage each wrought.

The Saragosa tornado in Reeves County on May 22, 1987, played a significant role on the special. Thirty people were killed as a result of that tornado, including 22 in one building. Wind speeds neared 260 miles an hour.

Twenty tornadoes have been recorded in Reeves County between 1950 and 1986.

The NWA also recognized Lee and NewsWest 9 for producing a detailed brochure with a regional weather map and for providing free copies of the program to area schools, the National Weather Service, the American Red Cross and for use on local cable stations.

The station printed more than 125,000 copies of the brochure and distributed them throughout Midland and area communities when the show originally aired on April 13.

The idea for the program was conceived in February by Channel 9 General Manager John Foster.

"An unbelievable amount of work went into this story. For example, we needed pictures from all across the country and the National Weather Service helped out a lot," Lee said.

Lee, a Detroit native, obtained a meteorology degree from Central Michigan University in 1985. He then interned for The Weather Channel before taking his first job at a CBS station in Selma, Ala. He has also worked for one year in Spokane, Wash. and five years in Yakima, Wash.

He has worked at KTPX-TV since January 1991.

TWC: Used oil-collection program to be expanded

AUSTIN (AP) — State water officials have announced a $6.5 million expansion of a program to collect used oil.

"Do-it-yourself oil changers are out there. What we are attempting to do is to keep that oil out of the environment," Texas Water Commission Chairman John Hall said Thursday.

Hall said that each year in Texas "an estimated 18 million gallons of oil is dumped on the ground, poured into storm sewers and left with household garbage by the do-it-yourselfers. That oil pollutes streams, rivers, and groundwater supplies."

The $6.5 million in grants from a state fund for oil recycling will be used to set up at least 200 public collection centers.

Already there are more than 800 private collection sites, such as service stations, and oil change centers. Some collection centers also accept used oil filters.

Along with the grant funds, the commission is kicking off an education campaign with public service announcements that say, "Only a dipstick would dump motor oil on Texas."

And in the sparsely populated far-reaches of mountainous West Texas, Love said the "folks who come in for a quick buck are the ones we have problems with."

Love noted that land in Central Texas is "just going for a song.

"It (selling by auction) seems like a strange way to sell a ranch," Love said, "especially when it is one that is as desirable as that one."

However, Dusya Broytman, an agent for King in helping promote the auction, said auctions were once "used only for distressed properties," but now are "moving prestigious and historical landmarks," such as thoroughbred farms, super ranches, mansions and estates.

The auction of trophy properties is conducted in association with barbecue feeds and fanfare "because of the target audience," of qualified bidders, said auctioneer Bone. "After all, we are also selling the history and romance of the property."

Lawmen arrest murder suspect

ODESSA — The second suspect in an Odessa capital murder case was arrested in Pueblo, Colo., on Thursday.

According to an Odessa police report, James Robert Garcia, 20, was arrested at a hotel in Pueblo by the Pueblo Police Department at approximately 6:30 a.m. Thursday. Information on Garcia's whereabouts was obtained from the Raton, N.M., Police Department.

Garcia was the second man to be arrested in connection with murder of 22-year-old Noe Perez, whose skeletal remains were found south of Odessa off of Texas Highway 385 on Oct. 14. Perez had been reported missing to the Odessa police department on March 6, 1990.

After the remains were identified as those of Perez, a joint investigation by the Odessa Police Department Criminal Investigation Division and the Ector County Sheriff's Office and capital murder warrants were issued for Garcia and 23-year-old Christopher Huerta Ramirez.

Ramirez was already in custody in the Texas Department of Corrections with his warrant was served.

EYE: Bush may have to adjust

(From 1B)

Bush's heart is, and people here likely will want to talk to him, when the intimidating federal security apparatus turns its attention from him to Clinton.

Xavier Lividini, general manager of the Houstonian, said he was certain the first couple would return here, "but I have not received any indication at this particular juncture" when they plan to do so.

Finally, Bush and Carter will both have their presidential libraries to devote themselves to.

Bush's presidential library will be located at Texas A&M University.

At the Carter Center in Atlanta, Jimmy and Rosalynn have an apartment where they can stay while they tend to their humanitarian work.

"It's much more than a library, said Hayes, who has known Carter for 30 years.

"They have people there who are studying health conditions all over the world, and politics, and it's all funded through private donations."

Then, if he is not in Africa or traveling in some Central American country, he's home on weekends to teach Sunday School.

"He hasn't changed, he is still a very simple man," Hayes said.

"I respect Mr. Bush greatly. I think that with his wife having as wide an interest as he has, I don't think he'll have any trouble finding ways to help others the way Jimmy Carter does," the Georgia newspaper editor said.

FAMILY MATTERS

Woman worried about great-granddaughter

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: I wrote you a letter over two years ago about my small great-granddaughter. She is now 4. Her mama kept living with the no-good man who would spend her money and what little he made on alcohol or drugs. This caused her to be evicted from two apartments and lose her car. She stopped bringing the little girl to me because he didn't like the way I looked at him.

May

I visited her at day care a lot and I learned that the woman there spanked her and didn't give any of the children lunch. She put all of the kids in her car while she went shopping and let them run around while she took showers.

Last but not least, my granddaughter's ex-stepfather moved in with her mother and he pushed my granddaughter into letting him keep the child. My granddaughter's husband won't pay any child support. She spent so much money on her live-in boyfriend that she didn't have nay money for a divorce. Over a year ago my great-granddaughter started screaming when she went to the bathroom. They finally took her to a pediatrician, but he said her tonsils were worse than her bottom. The next pediatrician said that her tonsils didn't look that bad to him. My granddaughter and I both think that the old man molested her daughter.

I've read recently where a live-in boyfriend abused a child and the courts are giving a stiffer sentence, and I hope they keep it up. The live-in started treating my great-granddaughter better when she got big enough to tell on him. I saw and heard him before she got that big, but he lied to my granddaughter about things he did. She believed him, but she knows that I don't lie. She seems to have gotten him out of her life, but his 4-year-old is one mixed-up child.

I've been helping raise children since I was 12 and I've never had one so difficult. I baby-sat for a living for 10 years after I retired from my job. I've had runaways and bailed one boy out of jail. These kids came from good families but they pampered them just like my great-granddaughter's old drunk stepdad has her mother. She is seeing a counselor but she won't tell him the truth, so I doubt that he can help her. Help! 80-YEAR-OLD GRANDMOTHER

DEAR GRANDMOTHER: You have many reasons to be concerned about your great-granddaughter's well-being. As an experienced mother, you are well aware of the danger she is in. The hard part is approaching the situation in a way that can get the desired results.

I encourage you to contact Midland Rape Crisis Center (682-7273) and discuss your situation with them. They can give you some direct ideas. Yo may also contact Texas Department of Human Services Child Protective Services (686-2273) about inappropriate care for your great-granddaughter.

As you wrote, your great-granddaughter has shown many of the symptoms of a sexually abused child. According to Dr. Constance Fournier, pediatric psychologist at Scott and White Hospital, these signs signs include: behavior that is overly aggressive, regressive or sexual; sexual or violent themes in drawings or stories; or appearing very mature or immature for the child's age. Physical signs include difficulty in walking and/or sitting, frequent urination, or unexplained injuries or neglect.

I encourage you to seek professional help for your great-granddaughter. Childhood sexual abuse has powerful and life-long effects. You also have described "neglect," which is emotionally damaging and potentially life-threatening. Your great-granddaughter is fortunate to have a great-grandmother like you.

DEAR CONFIDENTIAL: I do not believe any one person in a relationship — even if it is marital — has the right to dictate and control the other. While I believe in the sanctity of marriage, I also believe that Christ said what he meant when he said the second great commandment is to "love one another as I have loved you." The words "submissive" and "subjective" are inconsistent with this commandment.

If your husband continues to insist that he will make all the decisions and that you will obey, then discuss this matter with your pastor. Hopefully he will be supportive of a more equal and loving relationship. If not, then I encourage you to seek additional counsel. I believe Christ's admonition stands as said and as written. You deserve to live in His love as expressed from your husband to you and from you to your husband — a unity symbolized by the wedding band.

DEAR ABBY

Paying not part of mom's plan for daughter's wedding

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Our 25-year-old daughter is engaged to be married. She has been living with her fiance since 1986. We live in California and she lives in New Jersey. She asked me to come to Jersey to help her plan her wedding. She wants a traditional church wedding with a wedding gown and tuxedo and reception for 100 people. (The cost is about $20,000.)

Van Buren

She and her fiance make $40,000 a year together. My husband and I make less. However, she knows that I came into an inheritance two years ago when my father died, but she doesn't know how much.

She and her fiance have no money saved up. When I visited her, I noticed they had plenty of money for beer, bingo and cigarettes.

I need your advice, Abby. Should I offer to pay for my daughter's wedding? If you say yes, I will accept that. If you say no, I will quit torturing myself with guilt because I honestly don't think I should, and I really don't want to. — MOM

DEAR MOM: A woman who has been living with her boyfriend for six years should not expect her parents to foot the bill for a traditional church wedding with gown, tuxedo, and a reception for 100 guests.

Your daughter declared her independence at age 19 when she left home to live with her boyfriend. Let her finance her own wedding, and don't feel guilty. And if you cave in and pick up the tab, I suggest you put aside a little extra to get your head examined.

DEAR ABBY: I read with great interest the letter from the woman who, sparked by her upcoming 20th high school reunion, was able to track down her high school sweetheart. Luckily, she ended up getting engaged to him, and now has wedding bells in her future.

Many years ago during World War II, when I was in England, I became friendly with an American airman. We shared not only friendship, but the dangers and uncertainties of war. As fate would have it, we were separated, and for nearly half a century we've had no communication.

I married, raised a family, worked a job, and was too busy to dwell on that romantic interlude. Now that I am alone again, I find myself thinking of him, wondering if he's still alive, if his life has been happy, and wondering if he would like to hear from me. Not being sure of where he is, I have made some halfhearted attempts to locate him.

Abby, do you think I should leave well enough alone, or should I go for it, so I can finally put the past to rest?

I can't sign my name, so I will sign it with the title of our favorite song ... "IT'S BEEN A LONG, LONG TIME"

DEAR "IT'S": I say, try to locate that American airman. And if you should find him and you meet again, please give me an update.

DEAR ABBY: I need some advice on a very delicate situation at my house.

Whenever I call one of my local relatives on the phone, her husband shamelessly listens in on the extension. At times, he has even corrected something his wife has said, or added something to it. I find this very irritating. Appparently, his wife doesn't mind because she has never asked him to please get off the phone.

Abby, I do not call this relative to have a three-way conversation with her husband. Furthermore, I think this is a blatant invasion of my privacy. Sometimes I may want to tell her something in confidence.

Any suggestions you can offer will be greatly appreciated. — MABLE IN MOBILE

DEAR MABLE: Tell your relative that you are uncomfortable and sometimes inhibited about telephone conversations with her — and tell her why. Be up-front; tell her that while she may have no objections, you have.

Everything you'll need to know about planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Gender biases eliminated at home

By Mia B. Moody
N.Y. Times News Service

WACO — To help strike down gender biases fostered by society, parents must begin at home.

Parents can help end the cycle of gender inequality by treating sons and daughters equally, Dr. William Lee Carter, a psychologist at Child Psychiatry Associates, said at a recent seminar.

"The traditional methods of raising children do little to encourage them to see themselves as equal," he said. "Boys see themselves as the heirs to the powers that be and girls see themselves getting the leftovers."

The Rev. Jean Turner, director of Shalom Ministries for Women, said many girls have internalized bad feelings about themselves because of the male dominance in society. "Everything about our humanism relates to being male," she said. "The female experience has been left out."

The counselors, who were part of a panel at a recent Gender and Grace seminar at Baylor University, agreed that gender biases have many repercussions for society.

For girls, Turner said, they can lead to a higher tolerance for violence. For example, many teen girls think violence is a normal part of sexuality, she said. "Many don't think they have the right to report a rape to the police. They accept it as a normal part of life."

For boys, though, it can lead to misconduct, Carter said. "They will act out emotions because they can't express them. They can't talk about their feelings of anger, frustration and embarrassment because they have been raised to be tough."

However, there is hope for the parents who want to end the cycle of gender inequality. Carter and Turner offer these tips:

■ Focus on gender similarities.

In fostering gender equality, Carter said, some of the things we teach boys and girls separately are appropriate for both sexes.

He said society tends to characterize boys as achievement oriented and girls as feelings oriented, while both boys and girls need these characteristics.

"I'm not trying to say that they are exactly alike because we need to let them be different," he said. "But there is enough about all of us that is similar that we sometimes ignore."

He said parents should teach both boys and girls how to be properly assertive. "We teach boys to be aggressive and achievement oriented, but not girls. I think all children need to be taught to stand up for themselves and how to say that something is wrong here."

■ Teach children to see themselves as equal to the opposite sex.

Turner said girls should be taught to feel good about their femininity rather than associating it with something bad. "Many women don't like their femininity because they associate it with something painful. They may have painful menstrual cramps and intercourse may be painful."

Carter said girls should also be taught that they can accomplish their own achievements without relying on men.

He said society encourages girls to be the cheerleaders in life without encouraging boys to return the favor. "We need to put the accomplishments of girls on display for all to see."

■ Show children gender equality by modeling in the home.

Turner said a father can set a good example at home by being supportive of his wife and daughter. "The father should nurture the mother's goals and not be threatened by her success."

Carter said fathers should also move away from leaving the child-rearing to the mother. The roles that mom and dad display for their children have a lot to do with how they view manhood and womanhood, he said. "In an age where women are taking on more traditional male roles, men need to take over tasks and activities that we typically have assumed are female, such as child care. Unfortunately, too many women who work outside the home don't get any help."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Fears over depleted funds will prove groundless — a red herring created by someone who wants to divert your attention from work. A period of solitude helps you get back on track. Be open to new ideas in early 1993. By March, communication between partners will have improved. Look forward to a raise or promotion next summer. A loving, tolerant attitude helps ease a domestic crisis in October of 1993.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Sally Field, actor Lance Kerwin, director Mike Nichols, rock star Glen Frey.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A short trip could be on the agenda. Welcome a break in your daily routine. Business and pleasure could mix rather nicely now. Watch for an old relationship to start heating up again.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your emotions may not be in sync with logic this morning. Postpone making an important decision until afternoon. Put work ahead of pleasure. A platonic relationship delights you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You need to make up your mind in a hurry about a new opportunity. Travel or an extended course of study is possible. Keep the lines of communication open. Seek new allies.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): If your entertainment plans get derailed, you can always liven up the scene with a spur-of-the-moment invitation. A worthy charity approaches you for a donation. Give if you can.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You can make a good impression on someone you admire. Do not fantasize about a romantic relationship, however. Tonight is for parenting or calling a family meeting.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Juggle a home-career conflict with grace. It does not pay to get overly emotional or to let personal interests interfere with your work. Stand firm if challenged about a business matter.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Domestic and employment affairs flourish in your capable hands. Tap your creativity. Keep to yourself when working on projects that will set the stage for stardom.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Others may drag their feet today. Stand alone and get the job done right. Strive for results, not fanfare. Spending a quiet, restful evening with your one-and-only recharges your batteries.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): All may not be what it seems in employment dealings. Avoid secrecy and "underground" activities. Flow with the tide, not against it, today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emotions sizzle today. A clever idea seems red hot. Seize the moment, but be careful not to damage your reputation. Do more listening than talking in social situations.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Pooled resources and team spirit make it delightfully easy to advance on the job. A thread of good will is all you need to sew up a winning day. Group functions sound appealing.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Group dynamics lack power, but there are still some delightful surprises in store. A one-on-one approach brings out the best ideas. Revisiting a favorite spot makes romance special tonight.

We have frequently remarked that the most successful bridge players are pessimists by nature. Follow Brazil's superstar Gabriel Chagas as he tackles a tricky five-spade contract against Canada at the 9th World Bridge Olympiad.

North's two-over-one response was a game force, and South's jump to four clubs was a splinter, showing club shortness. Blackwood revealed the fact that two aces were missing, and the result was a spade contract in no-man's-land—the five-level.

West led a low heart and the vast majority of players would reckon they could not lose more than a trick to the two black aces—and would quickly be defeated. After winning the heart they would immediately go after trumps. West would win, lead a club to partner's king and get a heart ruff for the setting trick.

While a heart ruff was distinctly against the odds, Chagas considered the possibility and took preventative measures. After winning the heart he immediately cashed three rounds of diamonds, discarding the club loser from hand. West was able to ruff the third diamond, but had no means of getting to partner for a heart ruff. The defenders still got the ace of spades, but that was their second and last trick.

In the trade, declarer's play is known as the Scissors Coup because it cuts the defenders' lines of communication. It's not difficult to execute; the secret lies in finding the right moment to apply it.

Cindy Crawford calls her model image 'The Thing'

NEW YORK — Cindy Crawford attributes her supermodel success to "The Thing."

"I get up in the morning and I just see a girl, like any other girl sees," she said in the December issue of the men's magazine Details. "Once these guys (makeup artists, hairdressers, etc.) do this number on me, I see Cindy Crawford, The Thing."

Not that she minds.

"I sort of created it myself," she said. "It's not totally different from who I am — her values are pretty much the same as mine. She doesn't get upset — just nods her head, grits her teeth."

Crawford stars in Pepsi and Revlon commercials, has her own calendar and exercise video and is married to actor Richard Gere.

Beauty, she said, has translated for her into "power, money, travel — a whole new life."

"I'm like a freak of nature," Crawford said. One that earns about $2 million a year.

CINCINNATI — Sheriff's investigators in the city where an exhibit of Robert Mapplethorpe's photos led to a trial have concluded Madonna's book "Sex" isn't obscene.

"It did not violate pornography laws in the state of Ohio," Hamilton County sheriff's spokesman Frank Weikel said Wednesday. "There was no bestiality, no penetration or no child porn in it."

About a dozen people, most of whom hadn't seen the book, called the sheriff's office with questions, he said.

Sheriff Simon Leis Jr. and Cincinnati authorities received national attention for their efforts to prosecute the Contemporary Arts Center in 1990 over the Mapplethorpe exhibit.

The display included pictures of homosexual and sadomasochistic sex acts. A jury acquitted the gallery and then-director Dennis Barrie of misdemeanor obscenity charges.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Michael Jackson is hoping his new line of fragrances will carry the sweet smell of success.

The pop star's name and holographic portrait will grace "Legende de Michael Jackson" for men and "Mystique de Michael Jackson" for women, publicist Lee Solters said Wednesday.

The men's fragrance is in a black box, the women's in white.

Jackson worked with perfumer Enrico Gambetta to create the scents, which will sell for under $30 and should be in the stores for Christmas.

The ad campaign will use footage from Jackson's "Remember the Time" video, a song from his 1991 album, "Dangerous."

PHILADELPHIA — Publishing companies for Prince and Guns N' Roses want a health club to pay up for the use of three songs or set their patrons sweating to some other exercise music.

Controversy Music, Guns N' Roses Music and Jobete Music Co. said in a copyright lawsuit filed Thursday that the Lancaster County Racquetball & Health Club failed to get license agreements for use of three songs on Aug. 5.

The songs were Prince hit "Round and Round," "November Rain" by Guns N' Roses and the Motown hit "I'll Be There," published by Jobete.

The lawsuit seeks at least $1,500 in damages and no more than $60.000.

HONG KONG — Prince Charles arrived Thursday in Hong Kong without his wife after their four-day tour of South Korea.

Prince Charles

The heir to the British throne was greeted in the British colony by Gov. Chris Patten.

The couple's trip to South Korea, the first official visit by members of the British royal family, was marred by fresh reports that their marriage is in trouble. It was the longest time the two have appeared in public together since a summer of speculation that they would separate.

During a dozen appearances in South Korea, Charles and Princess Diana seemed to avoid talking or glancing at one another. The princess flew home to London.

On Saturday, the prince is to attend a meeting of business leaders and will tour a downtown park. He is to return home Sunday after a ceremony to commemorate those who died in the two world wars.

NEW YORK — A federal judge rejected jailed hotel queen Leona Helmsley's bid for early parole, but said she can try again after a federal appeals court decides on her request for a new trial.

Mrs. Helmsley had sought to be declared eligible for parole before she serves one-third of a four-year sentence tax evasion, or 16 months. U.S. District Court Judge Thomas P. Griesa denied the request Wednesday.

The 72-year-old billionaire businesswoman was imprisoned April 15 following her 1989 conviction.

Older couples enjoy rich romance in marriage

CHICAGO (AP) — The happiest men and women in America are married couples who have sex frequently after age 60, says a report by the Rev. Andrew M. Greeley, the sociologist-priest-novelist.

Thirty-seven percent of married people over 60 make love once a week or more, and 16 percent make love several times a week, Greeley noted in his report, based on two previous surveys involving a total of 5,738 subjects.

Nine out of 10 of those over 60 who made love at least once a week said their spouses were "very attractive physically," said the report.

Men and women who engage in frequent sex after 60 report the happiest marriages and are more likely to report that they are living exciting lives, the report said.

"Their sex may be better because their lives are more satisfying, or the other way around," Greeley said. "I'm not trying to explain the flow. I'm just trying to show what's going on."

Greeley is a sociology professor at the University of Chicago and the University of Arizona, and a research associate at UC's National Opinion Research Center. He has written more than 100 books, including 24 novels.

Part of the data for his latest report came from the center's nationwide surveys of 4,424 people conducted from 1988 to 1991. The other part came from Gallup polls of 1,314 respondents analyzed previously in a 1990 study by Greeley.

He said he was prompted to write a new paper on the topic by two events. The first was the cancellation of television series such as "Matlock," "The Golden Girls," and "In the Heat of the Night," which portray and appeal to older people.

The second was a recent Kirkus book review that ridiculed Greeley's 24th novel, "The Wages of Sin," for offering "safe sex for seniors" in the portrayal of passion between a man in his 50s and a woman in her late 40s.

"The image of passionate love between older people as grotesque is dominant in American society," Greeley said in his report.

"It may be that the last great American taboo is passion among the elderly," he wrote.

Domeena C. Renshaw, co-chair of psychiatry and founder of the sexual dysfunction program at Loyola University Medical Center, said it has been known for years that many older people are sexually active.

For example, she said, a small inquiry seeking personal accounts on the topic that was placed in Consumer Reports magazine almost a decade ago generated "thousands" of responses. They led to "Love, Sex and Aging: A Consumers Union Report" by Edward M. Brecher in 1984.

Greeley said, however, that even though some reports have indicated that many older people have sex, little has been reported previously to indicate those who are sexually active live more satisfying, rewarding lives.

Alzheimer's disease has different phases

By Steve Edwards

QUESTION: Are there varying phases of Alzheimer's disease?

ANSWER: The word "dementia" refers to progressive intellectual decline and memory loss. Because there are a variety of factors which can produce these symptoms, it is imperative that the afflicted individual undergo a thorough neurological, physical and psychiatric examination. Through these examinations, the cause of mental decline can often be determined. Alzheimer's disease is a "diagnosis of exclusion." The label should not be applied loosely without complete evaluation.

Edwards

The course of Alzheimer's disease has been divided into four phases. We can all recognize some of these symptoms in ourselves from time to time, but they are generally the result of fatigue, depression, frustration, illness or fever, and we can recover from them quickly.

The person with Alzheimer's disease can be described as follows:

■ First phase: Less spontaneous, less sparkle; slower; less energy, less initiative; less discriminating; loss of words; slower to learn or react; readily made angry; seeks and prefers the familiar — shuns the unfamiliar.

■ Second phase: Much slower in speech and understanding; greater difficulty in making decisions and plans; inability to calculate; insensitive to feelings of others; avoids situations that may lead to failure; loses thread of story.

■ Third phase: Uncertain as to how he or she is expected to act; directions need to be repeated; memory of recent past is poor or failing; memory of distant past astonishingly clear; loses orientation to time and place; invents words; misidentifies people; lethargic; little warmth.

■ Fourth phase: Apathetic; poor remote or recent memory; cannot find the way around at all; incontinent; perseveration of phrases and syllables; no recognition of individuals.

Remember, there are different types of dementia, some of which are treatable and reversible. Check with your physician about symptoms or concerns.

Steve Edwards is executive director of Community and Senior Services and consultant for the Visiting Nurse Service of Midland.

Gout has been suffered since ancient times

By Henry Page, M.D.

Early Roman aristocracy frequently suffered from "Noxa" which fell in small drops (gutta) into the joints between the toes and foot mostly, but also between the foot bone and ankle bone, leg bone, hip bone, finger bones, etc., etc., and perhaps involving all "them dry bones." Some elderly, paunchy, pink-cheeked, red-nosed components of British nobility suffered likewise and at frequent intervals were compelled to relax in over-stuffed chairs. One inflamed and exquisitely tender foot would be elevated on an ottoman and swathed in soft cotton batting while the sufferer sipped claret, puffed on a Habana cigar and not so quietly digested a light lunch consisting of creamed liver, sweetbreads and kidneys. In this country Ben Franklin joined the host of personages railing against the fate that bequeathed them repeated bouts of what is now termed gout, a name derived from the Latin, "gutta."

In recent times gout has decreased in frequency but not in importance because it must be differentiated from all other forms of arthritis. It not only is completely different in origin but also responsive to therapy, thus preventing late complications involving, among other things, gnarled extremities and kidney stones.

Primary gout develops in older persons who possess an innate disorder of their purine metabolism. This results in an increased amount of uric acid in the blood settling out as urate crystals in joint spaces, thus creating an inflammatory response. There urate crystals can also deposit small or large bumps anywhere under the skin, and frequently in the kidney or in the lobes of the ear. It can either remain localized to a big toe which turns violacious pink or it can affect all joints, particularly extremities, and thereby resemble chronic arthritis.

Secondary gout can be a consequence of several types of blood disorders or of side effects from different medications, particularly diuretics. Management consists of treating the basic cause.

Luckily there are now several medications that control both the acute and chronic stages of primary and secondary gout. It seems fit to mention a new development in this field termed "poor man's gout," an unhappy expression of too much hard work, exposure, ill feeling and an excess in the use of malt liquors. So, add to the above therapeutic endeavors a slight change in lifestyle and you gain a happy result.

Remember, gout represents a touch of inherited nobility. In a recent laboratory survey of mental geniuses, an elevated uric acid constituted the sole over-all abnormality. So "mirable dictu," that makes you a member of the intelligencia.

Don't wait for the caste mark of sporting a tender toe that feels like it is being pierced with a red-hot poker, but rather eliminate that possibility with a medical examination and then be ready to "kick the gong around!"

Henry F. Page, M.D., F.A.C.P., is health and safety consultant to Midland Presbyterian Homes.

Coin flip

NEW YORK — The coin flip to decide whether the Florida Marlins or the Colorado Rockies will get to pick first in baseball's expansion draft this month will be seen live — during an NFL game.

The flip will be televised by ABC at halftime of the Buffalo at Miami game on Monday night, Nov. 16. The draft will be held the next day as the Rockies and Marlins select players left unprotected.

The draft will be televised by ESPN and is expected to last at least seven hours. The flip and the draft will be held at the Marriott Marquis Hotel in New York.

'Shaq Attaq'

ORLANDO, Fla. — The NBA's $40 million man will soon have a basketball of his own.

Shaquille O'Neal, who will make his debut tonight for the Orlando Magic, has signed a multi-year endorsement contract with Spalding, which plans to introduce a line of signature "Shaq Attaq" basketballs.

"We feel he will make an immediate impact not only in the NBA, but in the entire sporting goods industry as well," said Jack Lacey, a Spalding vice president and general manager. "Because Shaquille is as impressive off the court as he is on, we feel he will transcend the endorsement world in terms of consumer appeal."

Teaff reprimand

DALLAS — The Southwest Conference issued a public reprimand Thursday to Baylor football coach Grant Teaff for comments he made publicly regarding officiating during the Bears' contest against Texas A&M.

The fifth-ranked Aggies beat Baylor 19-13 in the Oct. 24 contest in College Station to move to 7-0 overall and 3-0 in the SWC. Baylor dropped to 4-4 and 3-2.

MHS excited about finale

■ The Bulldogs look to escape the district cellar with a win over Abilene High.

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

Midland High and Abilene High will play District 4-5A's "Cellar Bowl" at 8 p.m. today at Memorial Stadium with the loser owning last place.

In view of that basic fact of West Texas football life, you wouldn't expect much excitement to be generated, but Midland High, at least, can't wait to take the field against the Eagles.

When you own an 18-game losing streak, it's easy to get excited when you face any opponent when the odds makers say you have a chance to win. This could be the "streak buster" if the Bulldogs seize the opportunity.

"I think our kids are excited about playing this game," says Ronnie Reeger, MHS head football coach. "It's one of those games where you feel like you have a chance to win going in and it's one of those games that can turn it around for us.

"Our kids seem to be buzzed up to me and ready to go. We have an opportunity to get something done on the field."

And there is good reason for MHS optimism. After all, the statistics in District 4-5A play say this game is about as even as you can get. Both teams have scored only 35 points in 4-5A warfare this year. Abilene High has given up 205 points while MHS has given up 222 points.

The major reason for the defensive point difference is the fact that AHS held Odessa High to a meager 12 points last week, but Eagle coach Carlous Stone says even that is misleading.

"I'm not sure which team didn't want to win the most last week," Stone said of the game with OHS. "Odessa just ended out its season and it was a very sloppy game. Us holding Odessa to 12 points isn't a big positive the way I see it."

But if you listen to Stone long enough, you might get the feeling that his squad, which has two victories this year, is a big underdog against the 0-9 Bulldogs.

Asked if playing for last place would be a key motivation for his team, Stone said, "It's kind of like being shot or hung. Dead is dead and that's where both teams are right now.

"Pointing toward next year is about the only thing either team can hope to gain out of this one. Neither of us are going to ruin any playoff hopes in this game."

Midland High is coming off a 35-7 loss to playoff bound San Angelo, but the Bulldogs showed some key signs that they are ready to shake the shackles of their 18-game losing streak.

First, Michael Gilbert ended MHS' 19-game streak without producing a 100-

Chaparrals come out firing

■ MC opens its basketball season with a 98-67 triumph over Jacksonville College.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

When Midland College's Terrance Rone stepped beyond the three-point arc and let sail one of his picturesque long-rangers with just 18 seconds gone off the clock Thursday night, the sophomore guard from Chicago effectively set the tone for the rest of the game. And maybe the rest of the season.

Rone's trey, though, was one of only several positives for MC in its season-opening, 98-67 win over Jacksonville College in the first round of the 15th annual Chaparral Classic.

In the day's first two games, Odessa College came from behind to defeat Alvin, 83-77, and the upstart Ranger College Rangers booted South Plains College, 108-100.

Watching MC in the first half of its debut could have been confusing for any souls who may not happen to know it's still just November. The Chaps played in mid-season form in the first 20 minutes, making few errors and running up a lead that proved insurmountable.

The Chaps were up 19-6 less than five minutes into the game, and later built a 26-point bulge shortly before the break. MC's biggest advantage of the night — after the game had already virtually been decided — was a 75-41 margin with just over 13 minutes remaining.

"We expected this kind of game out of Midland," Jacksonville head coach Joe Shidler said. "We thought we might play

Cooper last foe for Lee

By Bill Price
Staff writer

ABILENE — What a juxtaposition of fate.

For the first time since 1982 Midland Lee will not be invited to the Class 5A football playoffs. For the first time since 1979, Abilene Cooper will.

While Cooper already knows the who, what, when and where of its Small School bi-district playoff, Midland Lee will try to keep out of fifth place in District 4-5A as the teams face off in the regular season finale here at 8 p.m. tonight in Shotwell Stadium.

Cooper, coming off an emotional 31-30 loss at Odessa Permian last week, will play Amarillo High at 4:30 p.m., Nov. 13, in Lubbock's Jones Stadium. That game will be part of a bi-district playoff doubleheader, with Permian and Amarillo Palo Duro also playing there at 1 p.m.

What worries Cooper head coach Randy Allen is that his Cougars may be caught looking ahead.

"We expect a very tough football game. It's really a game that's kind of caught us in between (Permian and the playoffs). I have a lot of respect for Lee's program and coaching

4-5A business still requires attention

Tonight marks the end of Midland's "Season of Discontent" in football.

Midland Lee won't be in the state playoffs for the first time in a decade and Midland High's losing streak still remains at 18 games.

Williamson

Before one blinks an eye, Midlanders will be shooting three-point buckets instead of making first downs. Pads give way to baggy shorts. Technical fouls replace clipping penalties. Wounds will heal.

But there is still business at hand. Is there any reason left for Lee and MHS to show up tonight?

It's simple for the Bulldogs. They face a team in Abilene High that they have a solid chance of beating. There is a monkey that has been hanging around for 18 games and it's time to give it a swift kick. You talk about motivation. This game should be as important to MHS as a playoff game would be. You can't turn the corner until you put that first victory in lights.

For Lee it could be more difficult. Shaking the realization that you aren't in the playoffs is a heavy burden. But this, too, could carry great significance for the Rebels.

For one thing, it's the difference in tying for fourth place or finishing fifth. But the bigger reason is that Lee has failed to beat any of the teams ahead of them in the standings this year. Lee needs that one feather in the cap to give this season a little better taste during the Thanksgiving meal.

Also, Lee hasn't lost four games in a single season since 1977, the 5-5 probation year in Jim Acree's last season. That was even before Earl Miller even arrived at Lee as an assistant coach. A loss to Cooper would end that streak.

This is a good time for Lee to be catching Cooper. The Cougars lost a tough mental game last week to Permian and have the playoffs to look forward to next week. Still, it will be a tough chore for Lee to win this game if the Rebels, themselves, have failed to re-group after losing its annual spot in the playoffs.

Of course, the big game tonight is Permian at San Angelo. The Bobcats have the chance to own a share of the district championship with a victory while Permian can crow alone from the top of the heap with a win.

San Angelo last shared the 4-5A title with Midland Lee in 1986, but lost to Lee that year. Cooper, who can still own a share of the league title with a win over Lee tonight and an Angelo win over Permian, last won a district crown in 1979.

Just another note of hope for MHS. Cooper was just 1-9 two years ago. Things can turn around in a hurry.

With a 36-8 (.818) record in the District 4-5A picking game, here's how it will turn out this week. Hold onto your hats for a couple of these finales.

Midland High 9, Abilene High 7: Whew! The 18-game losing streak ends. Now, why even play the game now that we know the result? Abilene High owns a 20-11 record over MHS since 1961.

Midland Lee 28, Abilene Cooper 24: The Cougars go to the playoffs with two consecutive losses as the Rebs finally beat a contender. Lee owns a narrow 15-14-2 margin in the series.

Odessa Permian 35, San Angelo 28: Somehow old Mojo figures out a way to win again. The feeling here is that the Bobkitties have a good shot at winning this game, but the San Angelo defense just may not be good enough to pull it off. Permian leads the series by a 23-9-1 margin.

Silverdome redemption at hand

Dallas' top-ranked defense looks to stop run-and-shoot

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

IRVING — A Silverdome redemption is at hand for the Dallas Cowboys' defense, currently rated as the best in the NFL.

It was the NFL's worst last season in the Cowboys' two appearances in the Silverdome. Now, Dallas has passed Philadelphia as the stingiest defender in the league in a 7-1 run.

Detroit's 1991 run-and-shoot offense shot defensive coordinator Dave Wannstedt's creation to shreds. It wasn't so bad in a 34-10 loss during the regular season because the defense gave up only two touchdowns. But the 38-6 playoff loss to the Lions was a disaster. The defense gave up 421 yards and five touchdowns.

"They embarrassed us, beat us bad," recalled defensive tackle Russell Maryland. "We have something to prove against Detroit. We have to prove we can play well in the Silverdome and we have to prove we can handle the run-and-shoot.

"People keep harping on it. We're ready to show what we can do."

What Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson did after the playoff game was vow to upgrade his secondary.

He drafted defensive backs Kevin Smith, Darren Woodson and Clayton Holmes, and obtained Thomas Everett from the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"We wanted to upgrade the entire team talentwise but the last area we upgraded was the defensive backfield," Johnson said. "We knew we had to do it.

"We didn't have trouble just with Detroit. We had problems with Atlanta and Houston during the regular season. We knew we had to make some changes. We feel we've done it."

The Cowboys worked long and hard against the run-and-shoot in training camp in several scrimmages with the Oilers. They also played Houston twice in preseason.

The Dallas "nickel" or pass defense package has improved to the point where the Cowboys are first in the NFL in third-down defense.

"I predicted in training camp that our biggest improvement this year would be on defense," Johnson said. "Now we've got the talent, an outstanding scheme and an outstanding coach (Wannstedt). The biggest improvement on this team is the defense."

It's a no-star defense. None of the defensive Cowboys has made the Pro Bowl or been picked on an All-Pro team.

"We play together," cornerback Issiac Holt said. "We are 'the who?' defense. Nobody knows us for nobody."

Defensive tackle Tony Casillas said "the last time we played Detroit we weren't sharp at all. We owe them one. Just like we owed Philadelphia one last week."

Johnson is brimming with confidence this time around.

"We're better served to defend the run-and-shoot," he said. "I still think our number one priority is to stop Barry Sanders. But we've had a talent upgrade in our secondary. We can handle the pass, too."

Heat on O'Neal right from the start

■ Orlando's rookie begins career against visiting Miami.

Associated Press

For the Orlando Magic, nothing can overshadow the regular-season debut of Shaquille O'Neal. For the Miami Heat, however, it's a chance to put on a good show on the road.

The Heat in four years of existence has never won in Chicago, New York, Boston, Atlanta, Cleveland, Detroit, Oakland, Indianapolis, Inglewood, Philadelphia, Phoenix, Portland, San Antonio or Salt Lake City.

Miami, which made the playoffs despite a 10-31 road record, opens the NBA season Friday night in Orlando, where the Heat has managed to win before.

"It's just our inexperience, our youth, not believing," Heat center Rony Seikaly said of the team's road problems. "We lost so much in the past. Going into buildings, there were lots of bad memories everywhere. Now we've become better than a lot of those teams, and we have to believe we can beat them."

But the Magic will surely be tough to beat in the coming-out party for O'Neal, the 7-foot-1, 300-pound rookie center who was the No. 1 pick in the 1992 draft.

"The guy is awesome," Orlando point guard Scott Skiles said. "He's as good right now as any big guy in the league. He's going to be unreal."

In other openers Friday night, it will be Minnesota at Boston, New Jersey at Philadelphia, New York at Atlanta, the Los Angeles Lakers at the Los Angeles Clippers, Washington at Charlotte, Chicago at Cleveland, Milwaukee at Detroit, Golden State at Utah, San Antonio at Sacramento, and Seattle vs. Houston at Tokyo.

Four teams will be at home when they play their first games Saturday night, with Utah at Dallas, San Antonio at Denver, Detroit at Indiana and the Clippers at Phoenix. Portland will be the last team to make its debut, when it entertains Denver on Sunday night.

Seikaly said Miami's biggest goal for the season is to learn how to win on the road.

"I'm sure we're going to improve on our home record, which was great last year (28-13)," Seikaly said. "If we can increase that and win five, seven, 10 more games on the road, that's going to give us a 50-win season."

Last season, Miami became the first of the most recent expansion teams to make the playoffs.

"I think we're good enough to have a better team than we had last year," Miami coach Kevin Loughery said.

The Heat added forward-center John Salley, who helped Detroit win two NBA championships, and high-scoring rookie guard Harold Miner.

Salley's presence should help Seikaly, who averaged 16.4 points and 11.8 rebounds last season. The primary scorer will continue to be guard-forward Glen Rice, who averaged 22.3 points and could become Miami's first All-Star "if he continues to rebound and play defense ... and we win," Loughery said.

Dennis Scott, who missed all but 18 games last season with a leg injury that required off-season surgery, is one of the players that Magic coach Matt Guokas is counting on to take the pressure off O'Neal.

"All the power in the world inside does you no good if you don't have a good outside shooter to spread the floor," Guokas said.

Foul trouble was a problem during the preseason, but Guokas thinks O'Neal will improve in that area when he learns how to help the team in other ways besides scoring.

"He's going to have to work to find other ways to help when things aren't going well," Guokas said. "We view him as a warrior, and when you're a warrior you have to be out on the floor, playing long minutes."

Seattle coach George Karl, coaching in Spain at this time last year, opens this season in Tokyo. The Rockets and SuperSonics also play in Japan on Saturday night.

"It's a dream," Karl said. "A year ago, I was in Spain thinking I'd never coach again in the NBA. Now, I'm not only coaching in the NBA but I'm coaching a team I think is capable of moving up the ladder."

Karl, who replaced K.C. Jones, coached the Sonics to a 27-15 regular-season finish and then took them to an upset victory over Golden State in a first-round playoff series.

"Maybe we can get to 53 or 54 wins," he said. "It's time for us to test the Phoenixes, the Portlands, the Clevelands, the New Yorks and the Chicagos. Those teams are special. But we think we can play at that level."

The Knicks, who won 51 games last season and took the Chicago Bulls to seven games in the Eastern Conference semifinals, have a revamped lineup with newcomers Rolando Blackman, Doc Rivers, rookie Hubert Davis, Charles Smith and Tony Campbell.

But the go-to man for coach Pat Riley again will be the team's leading scorer in each of the last seven seasons, Patrick Ewing.

"I don't see much of a change in my role," Ewing, 30, said. "I'm still here to block shots, score and rebound. There's definitely more balance, a lot of great players here and that should prove to be helpful in the long run.

"Everyone is committed to working hard, making contributions wherever they can. But that doesn't necesssarily mean that I'll be playing any differently."

But with all the additional proven players at Riley's disposal, perhaps Ewing will no longer have to be a dominant player for the Knicks to win. Last season, he led the team in scoring (24.0), rebounding (11.2), shot blocking (2.9) and minutes (38.4).

"With this group, it should take some of the burden from him," Riley said. "We'd like to get more balance, in that the opposition wouldn't know where the ball was going."

But Riley still expects the Knicks' style to be getting the ball inside, especially to Ewing.

NBA Opens Season

Rockets meet Sonics in Japan

Associated Press

YOKOHAMA, Japan — Japan is more than just another stop on Seattle SuperSonics coach George Karl's basketball globetrotting.

"I've coached in Spain, I've played in Russia, Europe and even China," Karl said on Thursday.

But there will be as special importance to the games Saturday and Sunday against the Houston Rockets because those will be regular-season games.

The Sonics-Rockets meetings at the 14,000-seat Yokohama Arena will mark the second time NBA season openers have been played outside of North America. Organizers say both games are sold out.

The Utah Jazz and Phoenix Suns began their regular 1990-91 season with a pair of games in Tokyo. The Sonics' Eddie Johnson was with the Suns at the time.

"Basketball is an ambassador for sport, and I think it is great that the NBA is trying to expand its horizons," Karl said. "We think this is going to be an exciting season."

Karl, who left a two-year coaching stint with Real Madrid in the Spanish League last year to join the SuperSonics in midseason, helped lift Seattle to the third best finish in the NBA. Winning 27 of their last 41 games, the team ended with a 47-35 record.

Karl and Rockets coach Rudy Tomjanovich — who also took over late last season — promised two fast, high-scoring games for the Japanese fans. But both coaches acknowledged it may be too early for either team to be at its best.

Houston Davis suffers 73rd loss

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Davis High School wrote itself into the national record books Thursday night with a 41-0 loss to Houston Worthing for its 73rd consecutive defeat.

Worthing took command with three first-quarter touchdowns against the Panthers, who finished the season 0-10 and broke the record of 72 straight losses set between 1965 and 1974 by Iberia, Mo.

Davis Coach Chuck Arnold called an on-sides kick to begin the game, but Worthing covered the ball and marched to its first touchdown with only three minutes elapsed in the game.

After Davis fell behind 26-0 early in the third quarter, tempers flared on the next kickoff and both teams flooded the field for a fight that delayed the game 10 minutes.

During its dismal streak, Davis has been outscored 2,916 to 354 points.

Davis' losing streak started after it beat Houston Austin 7-0 on Oct. 11, 1985.

CHAPS: Uptempo game returns at MC

a little bit better than we did."

MC was led by freshman Kirk Ford, who came off the bench for the foul-plagued Demeitreus Drew. Ford finished the night with 21 points, all of which came in a first half that saw the forward from Lafayette, La., hit 7-of-9 from the field and 7-of-7 from the line in 17 minutes. Ford also had a game-high 11 rebounds.

Drew, highly touted for his offensive ability, showed sparks of brilliance, scoring 15 points — the second highest total in the game — despite playing just 10 minutes unofficially.

A sophomore from Cheyenne, Wy., Drew played three first-half minutes, and when he had scored his final bucket to put MC up 72-41, he left for the night with 13:30 remaining.

"(Drew) played good position defense and came up with a lot of steals," MC head coach Steve Green said. "He could've scored 15 points a half" if he hadn't gotten into foul trouble.

"We've got Kirk Ford and Steve Walston (12 points, six rebounds) out there (when Drew was on the bench) but I can't afford not to have Demeitreus in there in the second half."

Still, there were some negatives for MC, including a game-ending injury to sophomore forward Kelon Haynie. Playing with a brace following pre-season arthroscopic surgery, Haynie landed wrong after a shot in the second half and fell to the floor in pain. Preliminary thought is that the injury is not serious and Haynie may have only re-strained the ligaments in his knee. He will undergo an examination today.

As for needed improvements, Green pointed to board work.

"One thing we really need to improve upon is coming down with strong rebounds," Green said. "We get our hands on a lot of balls, but we don't snatch it in. A defensive rebound isn't over until you get possession and clear it."

MC did manage to out-glass the Jaguars, 50-40. Twenty-nine of those 50 were on the defensive end.

Green credited his usage of several different lineups as the culprit behind an increase in second half sloppiness, and on a handful of occasions the Chaps had trouble finishing off their fast breaks with bad passes. More importantly, though, the Chaps once again appear to be a team that can excel in a transition type offense after having to revert to a slower pace last season.

"Team wise," Green said, "the brightest spot was what I think will be the strength of this team all year: We have strength in numbers. Individually, Kirk and Steve (Walston) had great efforts, and as a result, we had great results."

MC meets Alvin today at 7:30 p.m. Other games today are Jacksonville-South Plains, 3:30 p.m., and Ranger-Odessa, 5:30 p.m. All games are at Chap Center.

MHS JV triumphs

ABILENE — The Midland High junior varsity football team used a 21-13 victory here Thursday night over the Abilene High JV to finish the season with a 5-3 record.

The Bulldogs jumped out to a 14-0 first-half advantage on Jerel Washington's 10-yard touchdown run, and on Lavius Taylor's 45-yard scoring pass to Michael Ramirez.

AHS narrowd the gap with a one-yard TD run early in the fourth quarter. But MHS' Rusty Miller ended the Eagles' next drive, returning an interception 20 yards for a TD to put the game out of reach.

The Eagles ended the scoring on a 30-yard pass play late in the fourth quarter.

Washington and Dale Smith were the leading ball carriers for MHS.

Lee JV falls, 42-0

Midland Lee's junior varsity football team suffered a 42-0 defeat at the hands of Abilene Cooper, Thursday night in Memorial Stadium.

The Rebel JV ends its season with a 4-5 overall record, 4-2 in District 4-5A.

LFHS nips Bowie

ODESSA — Steven Hunter rushed for 158 yards and three touchdowns to lead the Lee Freshman High School football team to a narrow 28-27 victory here Thursday night over Odessa Bowie.

Oscar Valdez added an 85-yard kickoff return for a TD as the LFHS squad finished its season with a 4-5 mark.

Brian Powell and Scott Awbrey were the leading tacklers on defense.

Alamo wins finale

ODESSA — The Alamo eighth grade football team capped a perfect 1992 season with a 28-0 win here Thursday night over Odessa Bowie.

The Alamo squad, which finishes with an 8-0 record, outscored opponents 248-38 during the campaign.

West Orange-Stark must forfeit five games, miss playoffs

Associated Press

LITTLE CYPRESS — West Orange-Stark, the state's No. 7 team in Class 4A, was forced Thursday to forfeit five games for using an ineligible player.

The ruling will knock the perennial football power out of the state playoffs, which begin next week. The five forfeits include four district victories and a 30-10 non-conference triumph over Jasper, which at the time was ranked fourth in the state.

School officials admitted during a meeting Thursday with the District 24-4A executive committee that a varsity player's grade was changed after the six-week grading period that ended Sept. 25.

West Orange-Stark, which had won 38-consecutive district games dating to 1986, was to have played Port Neches-Grove Friday night to determine the district championship.

The five forfeits change the Mustangs' season record from 8-1 to 3-6.

The District 24-4A executive committee, made up of the principals of West Orange-Stark and the five other schools in the district, met in closed session for four hours Thursday afternoon at the Little Cypress-Mauriceville school.

The committee's ruling came on a 5-0 vote, with the West Orange-Stark principal not having a vote.

The executive committee spoke Thursday with officials of the Texas Education Agency and also with officials of the University Interscholastic League, which governs academic and athletic competition among the state's public schools.

"They agreed with our assessment that this was a rule violation, and we felt like we did not have the authority to just ignore the violation," said Derry Dunn, LC-M principal and district committee chairman.

Dan Hooks, head coach of West Orange-Stark, declined comment.

The committee also ruled that a junior varsity player was ineligible, resulting in forfeiture of two victories by the JV team.

Camacho charged with battery, possession after fight with police

MIAMI (AP) — Yelling "I'm the Macho Man!" in a hotel lobby, three-time world champion boxer Hector Camacho was arrested early Thursday on charges of fighting with two police officers who tried to quiet him.

The former WBC super featherweight and lightweight champion appeared intoxicated and was carrying a small bag of what appeared to be marijuana, police said.

The incident occurred at the Miami International Airport Hilton Hotel. When police approached Camacho, he ran out of the lobby into a parking area.

"If you want what's in my hand, you're going to have to catch me," police quoted Camacho as telling the officers.

Wearing a T-shirt bearing his nickname, "Macho," Camacho allegedly fought with the officers as they subdued him. Later he kicked one of the officers while being booked into the Dade County Jail, according to police.

One of the officers suffered a knee injury that required a soft cast, and the other was treated for cuts and bruises.

The 140-pound fighter was charged with possession of marijuana, disorderly intoxication and three counts of battery on a police officer. The substance he was carrying will be tested to determine whether it was marijuana.

Camacho, 30, was released on $16,000 bond.

At one time Camacho held the WBC super featherweight and lightweight titles, as well as the WBO junior welterweight championship. In September, he lost a unanimous decision to WBC super welterweight champion Julio Cesar Chavez. Now 40-2 with 18 knockouts, he has no fights scheduled.

Camacho has had at least two other brushes with the law in Florida. In 1988, he was arrested on cocaine and assault charges at Clewistown High School after allegedly pulling a gun on a juvenile. He received three years' probation and was fined $1,500 after pleading no contest to cocaine possession.

Camacho was arrested a year ago on a charge of driving with a suspended license after being stopped for driving too slowly on an interstate highway near Fort Myers. A state trooper said Camacho had a woman on his lap and was trying to do "the wild thing."

Prices rebound

NEW YORK — Oil prices rose Thursday on news that OPEC members have begun talking about ways to halt the current slide in world crude prices.

OPEC officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the consultations have only just begun, and that it wasn't clear whether they would lead to any concrete result.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in December settled at $20.64 per barrel, up 31 cents, at the New York Mercantile Exchange Thursday. Crude prices fell 37 cents per barrel Wednesday after the International Energy Agency reported a strong production increase last month.

Natural gas prices were lower, with contracts for delivery in December falling 2 cents per 1,000 cubic feet to settle at $2.382.

Savings bonds

WASHINGTON — Sales of U.S. savings bonds topped the $2 billion mark for the second time this year, the government said Thursday.

Sales in October reached $2.51 billion, up 24.3 percent from $2.02 billion in September and nearly triple the $769 million in sales a year ago. It was the highest-ever sales total for an October, the Treasury Department said.

Savings bond sales have been soaring this year as returns on alternative investments, such as bank certificates of deposit, have plummeted.

Savings bonds held for five years or longer earn a guaranteed minimum rate of 6 percent, or the average of the market-based rates for the period, whichever is higher. In contrast, rates on passbook savings accounts are as low as 3 percent.

The latest market-based savings bond rate, announced Monday, is 5.04 percent, down from 5.58 percent during the past six months.

Dollar rises

NEW YORK — The dollar rose against most major currencies Thursday in a quiet day of trading.

In New York it cost $1.5365 to buy a pound, less expensive than Wednesday's $1.5435.

The dollar fell against the Japanese yen to 122.85, down from 123.05 yen at Wednesday's close.

Stocks gain

NEW YORK — The stock market gained ground in a fairly busy session Thursday, rebounding from a round of selling that followed the presidential election.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 29.44 points on Wednesday, rose 20.80 points to 3,243.84.

Texas could get boost from Clinton

President-elect's backing for natural gas might pay dividends for state

Associated Press

FORT WORTH — President-elect Clinton's backing for natural gas could pay dividends for Texas, the nations' leading producer of the environmentally attractive fuel.

Dallas oilman Boone Pickens, a Republican and strong supporter of President Bush, said he thinks Clinton's overall energy policy "looks good."

Pickens is chief executive officer of MESA Inc., a large natural-gas producer. He also is chairman of the Natural Gas Vehicle Coalition, a group that touts compressed natural gas as an alternative motor fuel.

"I think Clinton sees very clearly that you can replace foreign gasoline with domestic natural gas," Pickens said.

Independent oilman George Mitchell of Houston also is enthusiastic about Clinton's energy policy.

"I think Bill Clinton will really push for gas," said Mitchell, chairman of Mitchell Energy & Development Corp., a large gas producer in North Texas.

Even though Clinton's strong support for gas has been embraced by some in the Texas energy industry, major oil companies, the nuclear power industry and domestic auto manufacturers find some of Clinton's key energy positions unsavory.

The major oil companies don't like Clinton's opposition to drilling in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge of Alaska, which the industry views as a leading prospect for an oil discovery on the scale of Alaska's huge Prudhoe Bay Field.

While Clinton doesn't express any interest in shutting down existing nuclear power plants, he shows little interest in building new ones. Clinton, in a position paper, said he "opposes increased reliance on expensive nuclear power plants."

The auto industry has vigorously opposed Clinton's call to expand the average fuel economy standard for U.S. autos from the current 27.5 miles per gallon to at least 40 mpg.

Washington analysts and oil industry veterans, however, say they expect little action on energy policy in the early stages of the Clinton administration.

Veteran Fort Worth oilman W.A. "Tex" Moncrief Jr., who backed Ross Perot for president, says he isn't expecting anything from Clinton, pro or con, when it comes to energy policy.

"I think the policy we have right now regarding oil and gas is quite all right, and I don't think that he will bother that one way or the other," Moncrief said.

Jobless claims drop to lowest level in 2 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of first-time claims for unemployment insurance fell in late October to the lowest level in more than two years and Americans' productivity improved in the third quarter, the government said Thursday in two upbeat economic reports.

Separately, many major retail chains reported sales increases last month, raising hopes of store owners for the first good Christmas season since 1988.

Economists were encouraged by the positive news but cautioned that economic growth, while showing signs of improvement, will not take off anytime soon.

"The economy is beginning to grow more rapidly, but we still won't have the kind of recovery that has followed past recessions," said economist Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch in New York. "Under those conditions, it's going to take a while to get the unemployment rate down."

New claims for unemployment benefits in the week ended Oct. 24 totaled 360,000, down from 376,000 the week before, the Labor Department said. It was the lowest level since the week ended Aug. 4, 1990, soon after the recession began.

A less volatile four-week moving average of claims, at 371,500, also was at a two-year low.

California to begin oil exports to Asia

By Gregory J. Wilcox
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — California oil producers can start exporting their crude to Asia this month for the first time in almost two decades.

Exporting domestic oil largely is banned by the federal government as a hedge against embargoes such as the one imposed by Arab countries in the early 1970s. This position was relaxed somewhat in late October when President Bush issued a memorandum that permits the export of up to 25,000 barrels daily of heavy California crude.

While there won't be a rush of domestic oil to foreign shores the decision could pump some cash into California independent oil industry. Federal officials estimate that if 25,000 barrels of crude oil were exported daily, it would be equal to about $138 million a year in export sales.

Judge sides with steelworkers in USX lawsuit

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Moe Tomlinson is thrilled he and 1,900 other steelworkers won a lawsuit that accused USX Corp. of cheating them out of their pensions. Now they must figure out what the victory means in dollars and cents.

A federal judge sided with the workers who accused USX of deliberately closing a mill in 1986 to cheat them out of millions of dollars in pension benefits.

Attorneys on both sides have mentioned damage figures ranging from $5 million to well over $100 million.

"The way it stands right now, we haven't seen any dollar figures," Tomlinson said Thursday. "Every channel on TV last night had a different one."

U.S. District Judge Bruce Jenkins, who awarded the damages, said the amount would be determined at future hearings. The ruling, signed Tuesday, came 17 months after an eight-week trial.

Jenkins agreed USX closed the profitable Orem mill to save on pension costs. He also said the company illegally changed its pension plans in the months before the closure.

Pittsburgh-based USX, formerly U.S. Steel, said the industry was chaotic during the mid-1980s and that the closure was part of a $1.2 billion restructuring of 10 steels mills involving about 6,500 workers.

The mill was closed in 1986 and sold in 1987 to Basic Manufacturing & Technology of Utah, which became Geneva Steel of Utah. The company reopened the mill, and about 1,000 of the plaintiffs, including Tomlinson, work there.

Tomlinson, 51, has survived of a heart attack and said he worries most about receiving retirement health insurance. "That'll be my big concern, when I finally find out what the judge has ruled."

Each side must submit its interpretations of Jenkins' ruling, and appeals of each other's briefs are likely, said plaintiffs' attorney Allen Young.

Dawne Hickton, a USX attorney, said the company may appeal.

The plaintiffs also may appeal Jenkins' earlier ruling throwing out age discrimination claims, which could have netted them double damages, Young said.

Tony Pickering, in whose name the 1987 lawsuit was filed, has said he lost $250,000 in pension benefits because he was a few months short of 20 years of service.

"Someone might have lost a little, another might have lost huge income and pensions," said Young. "We have to prove each guy's loss."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Investor weighs growth, income mutual funds

By Bill Doyle

Q: My wife and I have two mutual fund accounts, with approximately $1,500 in each. We now are adding $200 a month to each account. One, an aggressive stock fund, pays dividends only once a year but gets rave reviews from financial magazines. The other, an income fund, pays dividends quarterly.

Doyle

Would it be better to put $300 a month in the income fund, as it pays dividends four times a year?

A: That depends on your investment aims — what you hope to accomplish with each fund.

A growth fund buys securities with the money you and other investors pay. It buys mostly "growth" common stocks, with past records or future potential of increasing in value, thereby boosting the fund's assets and the value of fund shares.

Growth stocks generally are somewhat risky and do not pay high dividends. An aggressive growth fund tries for bigger gains and, consequently, takes on more risk.

An income fund, on the other hand, invests in bonds and stocks paying high interest and dividends and tries to keep risk low.

If you want to reduce your risk, invest more in the income fund. However, if you are willing to take on more risk in search of greater investment rewards, put more money into the aggressive growth fund.

Over the long term, growth funds have produced better results than income funds. Just be aware that there will be times when growth fund values take sudden plunges.

Unless you want current income, the frequency of dividend payments should not influence your choice between those two funds.

Most income funds pay dividends quarterly or monthly. That's because the interest and dividends those funds collect from its investments come in steadily.

The dividends growth funds receive from growth stocks are less predictable and typically are distributed to fund shareholders annually.

Q: We have an additional $1,000 to invest. Can you suggest a really good international mutual fund?

A: No. You must be a new reader of this column. Specific securities, be they mutual funds, stocks, bonds or anything else, are never recommended here. That would be touting, a sure way to get in trouble and be bounced out of my job by astute editors who refuse to put up with such foolishness.

An international fund invests in securities traded in markets outside the United States. That makes it different from a global fund, which invests in both U.S. and foreign securities.

Shares of more than 100 international and 60 global funds are offered for sale in this country. You'll find them and their investment performance records in financial manuals at many libraries.

Study them and make your pick.

Q: I work part time as a live-in companion to the sick and elderly. On the advice of my son, I put my 1987 individual retirement account contribution into a gold and silver mutual fund. My knowledge of investments, then and now, is equal to my understanding of the federal deficit: nil.

Most of my $2,000 is gone and what is left is being eaten away by brokerage charges. What can I do now?

Q: Get what money is left out, by redeeming your fund shares, and transfer that IRA to some safe haven such as a bank certificate of deposit.

And, if you are able to do it, spank your son. His advice was awful. Gold- and silver-oriented funds have performed terribly. And they were never suitable investments for someone such as you.

Purchasing Division
City of Midland, Texas

INVITATION TO BID
Date: October 30,1992

Sealed Bids will be received by the City of Midland, Texas (OWNER) at the office of the City Secretary in City Hall at 300 N. Loraine, Midland, Texas until 3:00 p.m., local time, December 3, 1992, for Sludge Lagoons Contract.

At said place and time, and promptly thereafter, all Bids that have been duly received will be publicly opened and read aloud.

The proposed Work provides for the construction of two new sludge lagoons and two lagoon decant structures including associated yard piping.

All Bids must be in accordance with the Bidding Documents on file at the office of the Director of Utilities, City Hall, Midland, Texas and at the office of Black & Veatch, 5728 LBJ Freeway, Suite 300, Mailing address P.O. Box 802004, Dallas, Texas 75380-2004.

Copies of the Contract Documents have also been provided to Dodge Reports, Associated General Contractors, and Texas Contractors.

Copies of the Contract Documents for use in preparing Bids may be obtained from Black & Veatch at the address stipulated herein at a charge of $25.00 for each set. No refunds will be made.

Bids will be received on a lump sum basis.

Bid security must accompany each Bid.

The Successful Bidder will be required to furnish a Construction Performance Bond and a Construction Payment Bond as security for the faithful performance and the payment of all bills and obligations arising from the performance of the Contract.

Contractor and all subcontractors will be required to conform to the labor standards set forth in the Contract Documents.

The City of Midland reserves the right to reject any or all Bids, including without limitations the rights to reject any or all nonconforming, nonresponsive, unbalanced, or conditional Bids, and to reject the Bid of any Bidder if Owner believes that it would not be in the best interest of Owner to make an award to that Bidder. Owner also reserves the right to waive informalities.

If the Contract is to be awarded, Owner will give the Successful Bidder a Notice of Award within the number of days set forth in the Bid Form.
