U.S., Libya continue to exchange fire

Challenge began 16 years ago

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — Almost from the day Moammar Khaddafy took power in Libya in 1969 to overthrow the pro-Western monarchy, the United States has challenged him over issues ranging from terrorism to territorial rights. For 16 years there has been unrelenting verbal and economic hostility between the United States and the erratic regime in Tripoli.

But on one sector Monday crashes of the Libyan coast have the two countries confrontations. That was in August 1981, when U.S. fighter jets shot down two Libyan aircraft.

Later, Deputy Secretary of State John C. Whitehead, returning in January from a trip to Western Europe to win support for U.S. economic sanctions against Tripoli, predicted Khaddafy might turn away from terrorism to keep his economy intact.

"He may be short crazy, but he was crazy like a fox, and he will be smart enough to keep himself in power," Whitehead said.

Hostilities turned on the weekend over the Gulf of Sidra, the mouth of which Khaddafy once declared territorial waters to the limit of 100 miles, a claim the United States rejected as the basis of military confrontation with the Libyans.

White House Speakes, in White House spokesman, said Monday that the two countries were not at war. He also warned Khaddafy that the United States would consider approaching Libyan forces to have hostile intent.

Monday's attack by American airplanes on two Libyan ships and shoreline missile sites came 1 week after President Reagan tightened existing sanctions against Libya. He blames that country for the terrorist incident at the airports in Rome and Vienna in December in which 20 people, including five Americans, were killed.

With the announcement, virtually all business dealings between the two countries were severed. Khaddafy's trade with American companies, which totaled $2 billion a year, has been reduced to a trickle. Libya exports oil to the United States, but Reagan has exempted existing contracts from the sanctions.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz suggested that the United States was not through with Khaddafy, saying, "Libya is engaging in terrorism against the United States and we would consider using force, if necessary, to counter terrorism."

Whitehead agreed in the January trip that the United States would not hesitate to use force, if necessary, Shultz said. But Whitehead said the United States would not be provoked into a military confrontation.

He pointed out that Khaddafy owes his regime to the American military which put him in power in 1969 by overthrowing King Idriss.

Texas delegation supports measures

DALLAS (AP) — Texas members of the congressional delegation supported President Reagan's decision to impose economic sanctions against Libya.

Democrats and Republicans alike said Monday they hoped the action would help curb international terrorism.

Rep. Jim Wright, D-Fort Worth, House majority leader, said Reagan "has taken a step everybody out of the Gulf of Sidra, and we are fortunate that a U.S. airplane was not hit in the process."

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-College Station, said the president "is right and I am supporting him 100 percent."

Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Beaumont, said the president "has done the right thing" by ordering the attacks.

Rep. Jim Mattox, D-Dallas, said the action "was long overdue and a great step forward in the fight against international terrorism."

Maneuvers may conclude soon

WASHINGTON — Libya today fired an undetermined number of additional missiles at U.S. warplanes flying over the disputed Gulf of Sidra, and the United States struck back against two or more Libyan patrol boats and a radar installation, the Pentagon said.

Defense Department sources meanwhile disclosed the United States might conclude its naval maneuvers in the Libyan coast before the end of the week.

"It's a possibility as well as a probability," said one source.

Robert Sims, the Defense Department chief spokesman, said the Libyan missile launch detected was confirmed after the target was hit by American missiles.

He thought it at least four the number of Libyan missiles fired at U.S. planes. The Americans fired a number.

He said it was not clear how much damage had been inflicted on the radar site.

Sims indicated this morning that as up to 15 Soviet and Libyan-built missiles had been fired at American ships and planes since the first two were fired Monday.

But Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, commenting on that report later in the morning, said he was not sure how many missiles had been fired.

Weinberger also confirmed earlier reports by indicating that U.S. forces might have attacked a fifth Libyan patrol boat.

But he downplayed the weight to the reports that the maneuvers might end later this week.

The exact time of completion is pretty much up to the field commander, Weinberger said. The exercise is scheduled for a number of days. The naval practices to complete the exercise sometime short of that.

Last week, the Pentagon had said the exercises would run until April 1.

As for a fifth patrol boat being attacked, Weinberger said, "We have reports that it was hit, but we do not have confirmation of that."

We have reports that five boats were hit — four sunk, one severely damaged. But one of those five we do not have confirmation on yet."

Pentagon sources said they were surprised by Weinberger's reference to a fifth boat, saying they were aware of only four.

"I think we have three sunk and a fourth dead in the water, maybe two of the four sunk, one severely damaged, one turned around and limped back to Libya," one source said.

As for the missile count, Weinberger said, all had apparently been fired. There may have been as many as 15 of which missiles were fired....

Pentagon officials said they hoped to clarify the matter at a briefing this afternoon.

Earlier, sources said that as Libya's missiles were fired, U.S. forces between 7:30 and 8:15 p.m. EST Monday.

OPEC again fails to reach pact

GENEVA, Switzerland — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries failed again Monday, after two days of trying, to agree on new production levels that might force up prices on the world market.

As the 13 ministers of OPEC's member countries slipped out through the [illegible] governments as well as with [illegible] producing, exporting nations.

The group of OPEC's ministers reached a decision on how to deal with the situation were at prices ranging Monday.

The price of the most popular grade of U.S. crude plunged nearly $3 a barrel to $23 in early trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange. It closed at $24.10, down from $27

[illegible] $4 a barrel. Prices are now more than 40 percent below the level of last November.

There appears to have been general agreement from the outset that, to affect prices, OPEC would have to reduce production from around 17 million barrels a day to 15 million, but the apportioning of lower production levels was too painful for the individual members.

Aquino signs 'freedom constitution'

MANILA, Philippine (AP) — President Corazon Aquino today signed an interim "freedom constitution" that abolishes the National Assembly, guarantees human rights, and gives her wide powers to reorganize the government and make laws until voters ratify a new constitution.

She announced her action on nationwide radio and television exactly one month after becoming president, taking on nearly the same powers that Ferdinand E. Marcos assumed when he declared martial law in 1972. Her move allows her more direct power over local governments than her deposed predecessor exercised.

But she set a timetable for a new constitution to be put to a public vote within a year, and her justice minister said her powers were less sweeping than Marcos', with any government actions subject to judicial review.

Jose Rono, secretary-general of Marcos' New Society Movement, said he expected the development, adding, "There's nothing we can do about it. We're not fighting a windmill here. We're standing in the path of an oncoming train."

Leonardo Perez, political affairs minister under Marcos, called the new government "an open-minded dictatorship."

"This is part of the political realities of life," he said.

Opponents of the new government will meet Wednesday to discuss the action, which denied them any chance of using their National Assembly majority to political advantage. Mrs. Aquino called Marcos' control of the assembly "the cancer of our political system."

Marcos was overthrown and driven into U.S. exile Feb. 25 by a military revolt backed by the Roman Catholic Church and "people power" demonstrations in Manila streets. The four-day rebellion was mainly peaceful.

Mrs. Aquino's interim constitution allows a writ of habeas corpus, which Marcos had suspended. Habeus corpus places on authorities the burden of justifying detention of prisoners.

She said she hoped a new constitution and a new assembly could be in place within a year.

"Today I am announcing an interim constitution under which our battered nation can shelter after years of dictatorship in order to heal its wounds, restore its strength and enjoy the first fruits of its new-found freedom," Mrs. Aquino said.

Mrs. Aquino said the provisional constitution will be replaced by a permanent document that will be drafted by a commission of between 30 and 50 members. She said members of the commission would be appointed within 60 days.

She said she hopes the commission will complete its work within 90 days, after which the document will be submitted to a nationwide vote.

"It is my hope ... that our people will have a new permanent constitution and a duly elected parliament within one year," she said. "This is the route we will take to complete the return to a fully fledged representative government."

Court won't consider school prayer group issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, citing a procedural flaw in a Pennsylvania case, today backed out of deciding whether public high schools may allow students to meet during school hours for prayer and religious worship.

Four of the justices dissented, saying they would let students conduct such meetings.

Led by Justice John Paul Stevens, the court's 5-4 majority refused to reach the merits of a freedom-of-religion controversy from Williamsport, Pa.

The justices ruled that John C. Youngman Jr., a former member of the local school board, had lacked the legal standing to carry the case to a federal appeals court, and that the case should never have been decided by that court.

Although today's action sets no national precedent in the continuing debate over the role of religion in public schools, it did appear to reinstate a federal trial judge's ruling that allowed the student religious group to meet during student activity periods at the Williamsport high school.

The Reagan administration had urged the high court to allow student groups to meet for prayer and worship during activity periods.

Government lawyers had said that if the case washed out on procedural grounds, a cloud would be cast over the legitimacy of a 1984 federal law, the Equal Access Act.

In it, Congress made it unlawful for high schools receiving federal money and allowing some student groups to conduct meetings on school property to deny access to any student group based on what it proposed to discuss.

The Pennsylvania dispute, another outgrowth of the Supreme Court's 1962 decision outlawing organized prayer sessions in public schools, arose when a group of students at Williamsport Area High School sought permission to form a religious club.

The students wanted to meet twice a week during the school's 30-minute activity periods. During those periods, held just after homeroom, about 25 different student groups as varied as the Future Homemakers of America, the Spanish club, choir and the student newspaper meet. Faculty advisers are present.

Students also have the option of remaining in their homerooms, studying in the library or seeking career guidance.

The students initially were granted permission to form the religious club.

But this is not a service in which speech is simply translated into sign. Worship itself is in sign, interim pastor Tom Cole said.

Deaf services begin at 9:45 a.m. every Sunday, and Bible study is conducted after that. Along with regular services, the mission offers two Sunday School classes for children, two for high-school age youths and two for adults.

But Deaf Valleywide Mission provides more than just church services for the deaf, said Cole and Becky Swadley, deaf coordinator for the mission. It takes advantage of any opportunities it can to promote public awareness of the deaf and to help the deaf make better lives for themselves.

They said they feel the church is providing a need that often is not being met by schools or agencies in the area.

"A lot of these young people, other than in school activities, don't do anything," Cole said.

"Most deaf (young) people live in a home with hearing parents who don't know how to communicate with them.

"I'm not trying to be harsh; it's just the way it is," Cole said.

And Cole said he feels the Valley has a deaf ear of its own. A survey completed in February by church strategist Joanne LeGette, stated there are an estimated 5,842 deaf people in the Valley.

Cole said a state agency offical told him the deaf made few requests for services, thus he believes that many deaf are not aware of opportunities open to them.

Despite economic conditions and hardships, some of the deaf have done very well, Cole noted, such as the three members of the mission congregation who are teachers at one of the Valley's regional schools for the deaf. One of the teachers is continuing study at Pan American University using an interpreter.

But when Reach Out to Texas Deaf began its work here, the mission goal didn't materialize as rapidly as expected.

Although its slow start was partly attributed to socioeconomic conditions, it also had to do with the large number of deaf people who are young; 70 percent of the mission congregation is in its late teens or early 20s, Cole said.

"Older adults are going to take the adult responsibility (faster)," he said. Also contributing, Cole added, was the general complexities of reaching out to the deaf.

So the congregation began with 12 people meeting in Fairview Spanish Mission in Harlingen. After the congregation grew to about 50, the mission moved to Baptist Temple Church in San Benito, where Cole is pastor.

Cole, a Houston native, had been a pastor in Indiana, Iowa and Missouri, before arriving in the Valley about the same time as Reach Out to Texas Deaf.

"I started working with the mission teaching deaf adults at that time," he said.

Deaf Valleywide Mission attendance has grown to about 65 to 80 people each Sunday, sometimes as many as 100 when special services are conducted. Transportation is the biggest problem limiting the mission's growth, Cole said.

While First Baptist Church of Harlingen is the primary sponsor of the mission, support also comes from First Baptist churches in Weslaco, La Feria, Combes, Santa Rosa, even Forest Wood Baptist Church of New Caney, north of Houston.

Texans 'aren't surprised' by OPEC indecisiveness

HOUSTON (AP) — State oil analysts said Monday they aren't surprised OPEC oil ministers didn't come to terms Monday on a stablized price of oil and that the non-agreement creates further problems for oil companies and oil-dependent Texas.

"I think that something expected happened, after the inaction that they made no decision," said Houston independent oil analyst Dale Steffes. "They just can't come together with their set of morality and their set of individual needs."

The 13 Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries oil ministers, meeting in Geneva, failed after nine days to agree on a comprehensive plan to boost the declining price of oil. The ministers are set to met again April 15 to try to agree on cutting back on oil production.

Jack Carney, project manager for short-range forecasts at Houston's Pace Consultants Inc., also was not surprised with OPEC's inability to make a decision.

"It's hard to believe that OPEC would react in such a time frame," aud Carney. He predicted the earliest OPEC would agree on a stabilized price of oil would be in about three months.

Oil futures prices dropped sharply after Monday's OPEC meeting. On the New York Mercantile Exchange the May delivery price of West Texas Intermediate, the main U.S. crude and an important market indicator, dropped to $11.20 a barrel, down $2.74 from Friday's closing price, before recovering to just over $12.

Further drops in oil create more headaches for Texas government since it depends on oil revenues.

OPEC

The OPEC president, Arturo Hernandez Grisanti of Venezuela, told reporters while running to his car that he had been instructed by his government from the beginning not to go along with a cutback of as much as a single barrel.

The oil minister of the United Arab Emirates, Mana Said Oteiba, told reporters before the final session began that "this whole conference is a joke." He said that he would be demanding the 63 percent increase in the Emirates quota that was agreed upon last year.

Iran and Iraq, which are at war, refused even to consider any cuts in their production quotas.

Until the ministers meet again next month, at least, the oil market will remain wide open to the pressures of supply and demand. Conference observers regard it as certain that prices, now around $14 a barrel, will continue to decline.

Monday's statement did not say where the April meeting will take place. It could be in Geneva again or it could be in Vienna, where the organization has its headquarters.

An OPEC statement issued Friday said that the ministers were determined to work with non-OPEC producers to force the price back up to $28 a barrel. Measures to achieve this, the statement said, would be announced "in due course." Hernandez told the press then that the meeting would end Saturday with no further action.

But over the weekend, Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi Arabian oil minister, offered to cut his country's production if others would follow his lead.

By Sunday night, Subroto, Indonesia's oil minister who has only a single name, was proposing that the Saudi quota be reduced by about 20 percent, Venezuela's, Kuwait's and the United Arab Emirates' by 16 percent and all the other members' by 12.5 percent. But by Monday morning that proposal had been rejected.

THOMAS

Charging the council first should hold the line on the 1986-87 fiscal year budget, Thomas also said the best way to keep the lid on expenditures is by not adding employees.

"I'm not saying we have to cut. We staffed up pretty strong during the boom and have about 1,000 employees. And we've continued adding employees since the boom. We may be shifting some staff to areas where they're needed," he said.

For the 1985-86 fiscal year, Midland has a $61 million budget that includes the General Fund, Airport, and Water and Sewer funds. He suggested the council check priorities to determine if the money is being spent where it should be.

On street work, he said the council could stretch out its dollars by doing only overlay projects rather than the more costly rebuilding.

Coordinating the traffic signals in downtown and along Andrews Highway was to be part of the bond issue, and Thomas contended it still can be accomplished. Instead of costly replacement equipment, he suggested a computerized system which attaches to cable television lines and reportedly isn't as costly as what was proposed.

"What bothers me was the city would replace the 30-year-old system with the same kind of system," said Thomas. "You'd have to lay wires and dig trenches. With this computer system, you would hook into the cable line in the alley."

Relations with the county commissioners, school board trustees and hospital board members need to be improved, according to Thomas. "It would benefit the citizens the most. We're working for the same constituency, taxing the same people."

As a geologist who started his career with a large major (Mobil) and then progressed to an independent until he now is self-employed, Thomas realizes Midland's primary industry is oil. But instead of watching several companies fold during this latest economic crisis, Thomas said he would like to talk with heads of large companies here.

"If they have to close down exploration or some division, we would ask if they could bring in another operation to take its place," he said.

In light in the economic conditions, Thomas said whoever is elected ayor "can do more than any historically to work more personally with economic diversification...call on people personally...be more visible."

Midland's empty office buildings should be an asset in trying to attract other industries. The rent, he said, is two-thirds of what it is in other large cities.

Thomas said his previous years on the council and the fact he is 10 years older than Davidson should given him an edge in the campaign. "I have 22 years of business experience...and I've had more opportunities to associate with more people."

During his terms on the City Council, Thomas voted consistently not to apply for federal Community Development Block Grant funds, which now go to street paving and other improvements in south and east Midland. If elected, Thomas said he would no longer oppose the funds.

"It's become a way of life with every community. I would like to see Congress stop those programs; there's not a lot of money to spread around. I think the CD funds have been used wisely in Midland. Paving on the south and east sides and drainage improvements are a valid use of the funds," he said.

Looking back at the boom years when he served on the council and the sliding economic times when he left and the problems today, Thomas said, "We've really been through the wringer in the last few years. It's a hard time for the city and we need to pull together and help each other."

PERKINS

Police spokesman John McAhon said the case was referred to the Midland office of the Texas Rangers for investigation because it allegedly involved a public official.

McAhon said it is standard Odessa Police policy to turn investigations that may involve public officials over to an independent investigative agency to eliminate any question of bias.

McAhon also noted the offense report filed by Montgomery Ward's manager Freidel did not mention any specific suspect by name.

The reference to Perkins was made only in Deputy Chief Dodson's Friday news release. Dodson specifically said, "The Odessa Police Department has received a referral from Montgomery Wards regarding a felony theft. The Security Division of the business made the referral and said that the investigation involved a Montgomery Ward employee, Thomas Perkins."

Perkins, whose second two-year council term is ending, is not seeking a third council term, but is running for the Ector County Precinct 4 Commissioners Court seat occupied by Willie Hammond Jr.

TDC counsel to represent death row inmate in appeal for stay

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — The same department whose task it is to execute Texas Death Row inmate Johnny Penry is now in the peculiar position of trying to save his life.

When Penry couldn't get an attorney who would seek an appeal without pay, the Texas Department of Corrections' Staff Counsel for Inmates reluctantly agreed to take on his case.

It will be the first time that TDC attorneys will seek a stay for a death row convict. But it may not be the last, now that finding lawyers to work for free is getting more and more difficult.

Penry, an illiterate, got no help from the American Civil Liberties Union or the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, two national groups that specialize in finding volunteers to represent the destitute among the nation's 1,700 death row inmates.

Helen Gros, executive director of the Houston ACLU chapter, said it has become impossible to find free legal help. It costs more than $100,000 to appeal a stay to the U.S. Supreme Court, she said.

"It's very difficult to find help because nobody wants to get involved in these cases," said Carolyn Garcia, who represents about 30 death row inmates along with Houston attorney Will Gray.

"There are no financial rewards, and there is no groundswell of support to defend someone on death row," she said.

Without an attorney, a death row convict could be executed while there still are avenues of appeal, Ms. Gros said.

John Wright, Penry's former attorney, said the six years of appeals work he put into Penry's case before quitting has nearly ruined his marriage and law practice.

Penry is set to die May 7 for the Oct. 25, 1979, stabbing death of Pamela Moseley Carpenter.

Texas courts appoint attorneys to represent indigent defendants charged with capital murder. In the event of a conviction, the state pays the attorney to appeal to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, a lengthy first step that usually takes about five years.

Ms. Gros said most attorneys withdraw from cases after the initial appeal, even though further appeals might win freedom for their clients.

Inmates need more help at the second stage, she said, because more reversals have been granted at the later stages.

The normal appeals path leads from the Court of Criminal Appeals to a federal district court, to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans and finally to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Without an attorney, death row inmates are left to file writs and motions that are difficult to comprehend. Most know that simple failure to file a motion on time with the proper court can result in their death, said Jim Vanderbilt, 33, a death row inmate.

Developer's guilty pleas may aid probe

DALLAS (AP) — Guilty pleas by a suburban developer and one of his former business partners could help close a 2½-year investigation of questionable construction loans tied to the failure of five savings associations, a prosecutor says.

Mesquite developer Clifford Ray Sinclair and Robert Lueben entered the guilty pleas Monday, the same day they and Sinclair's wife, Kathryn, were to be tried on charges stemming from $750 million in loans made between early 1982 and 1984.

"I'd say it might very well mark the beginning of the end of the investigation," said Assistant U.S. Attorney Jack Williamson, the case's lead prosecutor.

A grand jury indicted the trio in December on federal charges of conspiring to defraud lenders in connection with the construction of thousands of condominiums along Interstate 30 east of Dallas.

FBI spokesman Don Baxter said the pleas leave only two of about 70 cases still awaiting trial in the wide-ranging probe of the I-30 development.

Baxter said all the other defendants have been convicted or pleaded guilty to charges arising from their involvement in the scheme.

Officials said most of those charged were investors who pleaded guilty to submitting false financial information to obtain the loans.

The trial Monday was to have been the fifth in the ongoing probe.

"The investigation is continuing and I anticipate more indictments in the future," said Williamson. "I think Mr. Sinclair could provide some modest help."

Three sentenced in credit-card scheme

AMARILLO (AP) — Three members of a counterfeiting ring that preyed on consumers' credit card carbon slips have been sentenced to prison terms ranging from one to three years.

The Amarillo residents had pleaded guilty to charges in a nine-count federal indictment that they took carbon copies of credit card sales slips and sent them to Dallas.

There, another person made fake credit cards based on the sales slips that were used as far away as Houston and Little Rock, Ark., said David Freriks, U.S. Secret Service special agent from Lubbock and chief investigator in the case.

U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson Monday sentenced Joe Douglas Mercer, 35, to three years in prison; Eva Joyce Latham, 31, to two years; and James Leonard Latham Sr., 27, to a year and a day.

All three were ordered to pay restitution to three Amarillo stores. Freriks said they charged more than $8,000 on the counterfeit cards at department stores and restaurants from October 1984 to Feb. 9.

The three were permitted to remain free on $5,000 bail each until April 7, when they must turn themselves in to a federal correctional institution.

Hance claims attacks on Clements 'nothing personal'

HOUSTON (AP) — Former U.S. Rep. Kent Hance, insisting his comments weren't personal, has gone after Bill Clements again with reminders that the former governor once called Texas legislators a "bunch of idiots."

Hance, stumping for the GOP nomination for governor, added Monday that his opponent once dismissed the comments of a Mexican immigration expert as those of "just another Mexican with an opinion."

"It's certainly nothing personal," Hance assured Clements before launching his latest attack in the increasingly acrid campaign. "I have the utmost respect for Bill Clements."

Clements offered no reply to Hance's comments.

"I'm not going to respond to anything in that nature because that gives a sense of legitimacy to it and a sense of importance to it that, in my judgment, just doesn't exist," he said.

Besides, Clements said, Hance's statements "are out of context" and "absurd."

Hance, Clements and Rep. Tom Loeffler, who are squaring off against each other in the May 3 primary, shared the same platform three times Monday in Houston.

For his part, Loeffler tried to steer clear of the Hance-Clements fray and chose instead to sketch the details of a new law-and-order plank he is adding to his campaign.

Loeffler said he would "cross the Rio Grande to work with the governors of the states of Mexico to control this problem on both sides of the border."

"There is a war being waged today in Texas, affecting every citizen and the very future of our state. I'm talking about the war against crime, and, unfortunately, it's a war we are losing," he said.

Meanwhile, two Texas Supreme Court candidates are taking turns disputing each other's charges.

Associate Justice Raul Gonzalez and challenger Jay Gibson came close to name-calling Monday as they accused each other of desperate campaign tactics.

Gibson, an Odessa attorney who served three terms in the Texas House, told a Capitol news conference that Gonzalez was being financed "lock, stock and barrel by the insurance company lawyers and their clients."

Gonzalez replied that Gibson' charges were nothing but "a loose interpretation of Grimm's fairy tales — Mr. Gibson is desperate."

Both are Democrats with two other candidates in the primary race for the Place 4 nomination.

Gibson said Gonzalez had been endorsed by the Supreme Court Justice Committee, a political action group that Gibson said was made up primarily of "Republican insurance company lawyers."

Gibson said he expected the political action committee to put as much as $1 million into Gonzalez's campaign.

But Gonzalez said the committee declared him "qualified," along with a number of other candidates, but did not endorse him because he would not meet with their screening committee.

"I do not expect to receive one dime from them," Gonzalez said. "If they send a check, I will return it."

Congressional bid to kill tax-free status of bonds will hurt Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — Congressional efforts to kill the tax-free status of many municipal bonds will hurt Texas and many of the state's counties and cities, a House committee has been told.

"This could wreak havoc to the state-wide water plan approved by voters in 1985," Reg Arnold told the House Committee on State, Federal and International Relations at a hearing Monday.

Arnold, fund manager of the Texas Water Development Board, said the approved $200 million bond issue to help farmers and ranchers use more efficient irrigation methods apparently was "totally out."

Attorney General Jim Mattox said latest Congressional efforts to remove the tax-exempt status of many state and municipal bond issues would also adversely affect Veterans Land Board loans as well as numerous other state bond issues involving public housing, industrial development and state building projects.

"There is going to be a very heavy squeeze placed on the cities, counties, school districts, along with operations of private corporations under these regulations," Mattox said.

Texas officials have been told that pending tax-reform legislation could be effective Sept. 1 if approved by both houses. Under the new regulations, many municipal bond issues will be declared taxable until they can prove they are essential to state or local governments.

Arnold said there is a question whether bonds for flood relief will be tax exempt under present proposals. Bonds that include sales of water to non-profit private corporations would be taxable.

Arnold said the difference in the interest rate between taxable and non-taxable bonds would be about 3 percent.

"I don't think we can pay for taxable bonds," Arnold said. "It will cost too much."

Wednesday, March 26, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Some unusual influences could have a positive effect on the project you will soon be undertaking. This bit of good fortune could mean more cash in your pocket. Doing extra work may result in only minor gains at present but will set the stage for bigger and better things to come. Your close relationship with family members offers a source of support throughout the coming year. Be more open as your reserved nature may be misunderstood.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Actors Leonard Nimoy, James Caan and Alan Arkin, Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, singers Diana Ross and Vicki Lawrence, the Oakland A's' Mike Warren.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Influential people are very impressed with your ability to handle details. Daydreams can be translated into profit, just have the courage to reveal them to the right person.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your finances require careful handling. Seek advice from someone knowledgeable in loans, budgets, interest rates and investments. Consider home improvements at this time.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Being patient is in your best interests today. Keep privileged information to yourself; it may keep an associate out of trouble. Show genuine affection to someone who has stuck by you through thick and thin.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Show someone you love a little compassion; they too are struggling with life's burdens. You are ready to undertake a big project. Someone you helped in the past shows gratitude in meaningful ways.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) An associate offers financial advice. Deal with jealousy by simply ignoring it. Getting along with a difficult member of the opposite sex may require you to soft-pedal criticism.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Business trips enjoy positive influences. A change is in the wind which will benefit you directly. Be realistic in dealing with family problems.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Thinking about all you have accomplished gives your self-confidence a boost. Completing difficult work assignments may require patience. You come through with flying colors, and some influential people are impressed.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Take your time when making presentations. Sharpening up work skills prepares you for a promotion. When around conservative people be more conventional. Take time to listen.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Your ability to deal with difficult people is unequaled. You become a troubleshooter for your company which may result in a promotion. Relocating may be required. Enjoy a quiet evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A change in personnel may require old methods to be updated. Stick to your original schedule in order to accomplish more. Be on your best behavior, your performance is being evaluated.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Do everything possible to advance a pet project. An exchange of business favors benefits everyone involved. A longtime wish may unexpectedly come true and you may feel like celebrating tonight. Do so modestly!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Pay little heed to gossips and they will leave you alone. A series of unexpected developments will have a profound effect upon your future. A blind date could turn out better than expected.

Opening lead: Four of ♡

We have a natural tendency to hoard our assets; to accept a bargain at face value and look no deeper into the matter. That can prove fatal at the bridge table.

North-South had a straightforward auction to reach their natural contract of three no trump. Since South's jump to two no trump probably denied a four-card major suit, North had no desire to look for any other contract.

West led his fourth-best heart and declarer saw an opportunity to win cheaply. He played the jack from dummy, which won. Only now did declarer start to count his winners. He found he had six fast tricks, and needed to develop three in the minor suits if he was to make his contract. He took a successful diamond finesse, then led the ten of clubs. East covered and, when declarer ducked, reverted to a heart. Declarer found that seven tricks were all he could garner.

South should have realized there was practically no way to make his no trump game unless he could develop dummy's diamonds. To accomplish that, it was essential that he keep an entry on the table. The only one available was the queen-jack of hearts.

Correct technique is to play low from the board and win the first trick in hand with the ace of hearts. Then declarer simply plays the ace of diamonds and another, and continues with diamonds until he has driven out the king. No return by East can do declarer any harm. Sooner or later declarer will gain the lead, and he can then force an entry to the table by leading a heart toward the queen-jack. There is no way the defenders can prevent him from reaching the good diamonds for his contract.

Oscar for supporting actress makes Angelica Huston 'feel like a dynasty'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With misty eyes and a bow to its glittering past, the Academy Awards bestowed Oscars on the film world's aging royalty as well as the crown princess of a Hollywood family who exclaimed, "I feel like a dynasty!"

The supporting actress award to Anjelica Huston, heiress to the legends of her father, John, and grandfather Walter, was greeted with whoops of approval as the first major award announced Monday night.

Before it was clear that "Out of Africa" would dominate the night with seven awards and "The Color Purple" would win none despite 11 nominations, the audience gave standing ovations for Geraldine Page, 61, as best actress, and Don Ameche, 77, as best supporting actor.

Ameche

Buddy Rogers, 82, who received a special humanitarian award, also got a standing ovation as did Audrey Hepburn, long absent from Hollywood, when she appeared as a presenter.

"Yay for the geriatrics, yay!" shouted Miss Page, who finally took Oscar home after seven previous nominations in 33 years.

She said her role as the aging widow in "The Trip to Bountiful" was a plum, but admitted sentiment might have influenced her award.

Page

"Maybe they did think, 'Oh, the poor thing, she's been up so often maybe we should just give it to her,'" Miss Page said. "I'm hoping I didn't get it because they just feel remorseful, but because they feel it's the best job."

Ameche, who won for his 50th movie in a 50-year career, said he didn't mind if his Oscar was not solely based on his work as the rejuvenated codger in "Cocoon."

"If it's a tribute to me for being around as long as I have and being in as many pictures as I have, that's lovely, too," he said.

Hurt

William Hurt was named best actor of 1985 for his portrayal of a homosexual convict obsessed with movies and drawn into revolutionary politics in "Kiss of the Spider Woman." The award left the 34-year-old actor nearly speechless.

Rushing to the stage after a bear hug from his Brazilian director, Hector Babenco, Hurt clutched his heart and exclaimed: "Baboom, baboom, baboom — it's incredible!"

"I share this with Raul," Hurt said, referring to Raul Julia as the Brazilian political prisoner who shared his cell.

Of its 11 nominations, none was for director Steven Spielberg.

Whoopi Goldberg, in the running for best actress as the oppressed black woman struggling for her own identity, had spoken out angrily about the snub.

"It's a small bunch of people with small minds who chose to ignore the obvious," she said — a comment which may have helped clinch her own loss.

Robert Wise, president of the Academy, said after the ceremonies he couldn't explain the outcome "except that maybe it was a reaction of the academy at large over questioning the integrity of the director's branch," which nominates directors.

"Perhaps the voters felt that the academy's reputation had been maligned," he said.

Only "The Turning Point" in 1977 had ever gained as many nominations and failed to win an Oscar, but Quincy Jones who produced "The Color Purple" and created its musical score, was philosophical: "The picture got 11 nominations. It did $78 million as of today. I mean, how greedy can you get?"

Miss Huston's victory made hers a three-generation Oscar family. It was 37 years to the day since her father won Oscars for his writing and directing of "The Treasure of The Sierra Madre," and his father was named best supporting actor for his role in the film.

The foreign language film award went to "The Official Story," the powerful story of terror by Argentina's old military regime.

The award was claimed by the film's director and co-writer, Luis Puenzo, who said, "I cannot forget on another March 24 we suffered the last military coup in my country. We will never forget this nightmare. But we are starting now to begin with our new dreams."

Rock superstar Lionel Richie won his first Oscar for the song "Say You, Say Me" from "White Nights."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Out of Africa" was the big winner at the Academy Awards, but producer-director Sydney Pollack knew it was a no-win situation to discuss why "The Color Purple" was shut out despite 11 nominations.

Pollack's insights into his own movie, as well as the delight of actress Geraldine Page in an overdue Oscar triumph, Buddy Rogers' memories of the first Academy Awards and William Hurt's reflections on winning were all part of the backstage scene at Monday night's Oscar ceremony.

Pollack hefted his director's Oscar in one hand and producer's in the other as he fielded questions about "Out of Africa," winner of seven awards, including best picture and best director for him.

Pollack admitted to some surprise about the shutout of "The Color Purple," and declined to analyze its failure. "You put me in a difficult spot, because I can't win no matter how I answer that question," he said. "And I would like not to put a damper on the evening by trying to speculate on an undiplomatic question with an undiplomatic answer."

DALLAS (AP) — The Lone Star State is now in the mainstream of the world film community after two Texas-produced movies won Oscars, a producer of the pair of films said.

Although the producers of "Kiss of the Spider Woman" and "The Trip to Bountiful" were in Dallas and not Los Angeles for the Academy Awards presentation Monday night, they don't consider themselves outsiders anymore, said Sam Grogg, one of three general partners in FilmDallas Investment Fund I.

Grogg formed the partnership with fellow Dallasites Richard Kneipper and Joel Williams. In the past 1¼ years, the trio produced four films, including "Kiss of the Spider Woman," which netted a best acting award for William Hurt, and "The Trip to Bountiful," for which Geraldine Page won the best actress Oscar.

"I think 'Bountiful' is true testimony of the quality this independent film industry is capable of creating. Texas is now a mainstream player in the world film community and we're not going to be denied that role in the future," Grogg said Monday.

The two movies were funded by $2.4 million raised by the partnership.

Moving to right

After giving the Socialists a chance to run their own nation over the past five years, the French moved back to the right little more than a week ago, giving control of the next parliament to the parties of a conservative alliance.

The vote, closer than expected, was not so much a repudiation of the government of President Francois Mitterrand as it was an adjustment. Having voted five years ago for a Socialist-Communist alliance that promised economic revitalization through "a rupture with capitalism," the French this time seemed to feel that further revitalization calls for deregulation and decentralization.

It's interesting how little actually changed in the five years the Socialists were in power there. Initially there were dramatic moves — nationalizing 11 sectors of the economy, reducing the workweek to 39 hours, fixing retirement at 65 instead of 60 — but there were no revolutionary "ruptures."

Like the conservatives in power elsewhere in the West, the Socialists found they had to rely on austerity. They cut government spending, held down wages and let outmoded industries close down. In the campaign just ended, they talked of deregulation and decentralization.

A good dose of reality apparently leavened their socialist zeal, but President Mitterrand can argue that his party was able to achieve meaningful reform. Along with the shorter workweek and longer vacations, the Socialists were able to implement a democratized system of local government, and the French economy remains strong.

Now France embarks on another experiment in democracy, this time a shared-power arrangement called "cohabitation." In the French system, the president appoints the prime minister to "conduct the policies of the nation," but the choice can be rejected by the Parliament. As a result, President Mitterrand must choose a figure acceptable to the conservative majority that emerged a week ago.

This is the first time since the institution of the Fifth Republic in 1959 that a president has had to share the running of the country with a prime minister from parties that oppose him.

Mitterrand's choice to form a new government is Mayor Jacques Chirac of Paris, a longtime political rival. Whether the two men can work together under a system that requires a high degree of cooperation between the president and the prime minister is very much an open question. Some political observers are predicting a period of political stalemate. With two years to go in office, Mitterrand will fight to preserve what he regards as the achievements of the past five years of Socialist rule; the conservatives, of course, will seek to reverse those achievements. One hopeful sign is that a large area of consensus already exists between Mitterrand and the conservatives on foreign and defense policy and on economic management.

In fact, one of the achievements of this experiment in "cohabitation" could be a new tone to French politics, a tone of compromise and calm transfers of power instead of passionate and often disruptive lurches from one end of the political spectrum to the other. It'll be interesting to watch.

TECAT provided stress

I think the people of Texas need to hear the personal feelings inside the professional teachers before they serve as "judge and jury" of the TECAT.

"The Morning After the TECAT" ... I feel hurt, insulted, humiliated, depressed, threatened, belittled, and sad. Even though the actual taking of the test is over, and whether or not I passed the test is unknown, I'm afraid the effects will be long lasting in many teachers' lives.

As I sat there March 10, from 4:30-9:50 p.m., I was under immense pressure and stress. After I read a paragraph over and over trying to decide which answer the author wanted, not necessarily which one was right, I would find my mind wandering ... as the pressure mounted.

I thought, "Surely 23 successful teaching years, a Bachelor's Degree in Education from a major university, a Masters Degree in Education from a major university, 25 college hours above my masters, plus many, many workshops in my teaching field each summer, surely this can't be happening ... all of this is being laid on the line for 85 multiple-choice questions ... many of which are tricky and misleading ... none of which have anything to do with teaching ... surely this isn't for real is it?"

Suddenly, I would direct my mind back to reality and to the test, only to come to another opinion or conclusion question that again, was a guessing game between the author and the person being tested.

My mind wandered again as I thought, "I love kids and I love to teach! By choice, I have given my life to the kids in Texas in order to help them better prepare for a future of success and happiness! Is this what I get in return? Here I sit, like an incompetent child instead of like the proven professional person that I am. Can my family's livelihood and a career that I have spent 25 years building suddenly be taken away by 85 questions?"

With each black dot, I felt my entire life, past and future, was at stake. God only knows which little circles I blackened ... I certainly don't.

Folks ... that is stress! People in other professions, past students, parents, the people of Texas ... we, your teachers, do not deserve this stress!

You, you, and you must not allow our government to continue to abuse your teachers. We are hurting ... we need your support!

Our government has led you to believe they were testing the competency of your teachers. This is not true! All they tested were endurance, a few basic English skills, and the ability to select facts, opinions, and conclusions out of paragraphs, often ridiculous answers from which to choose. That has nothing to with teaching ... nothing, nothing, nothing!

So, don't be misled by politicians. All Texas gained from the TECAT were health problems, emotional stress, and lower teacher morale. You must take a stand. Send a copy of this letter, along with your personal comments, to your legislators, Gov. White, gubernatorial nominees, the Commissioner of Education, and H. Ross Perot. They need to receive 500,000 letters now!

Our government must never again put the teachers through an experience of this nature. Our physical and emotional health cannot take this kind of stress again.

We are professionals. We deserve to be treated as professionals. We earned that right!

Budget cuts undermine drug war

WASHINGTON — Nancy Reagan has made the war on drugs her top priority. But the White House budget handlers are quietly undercutting her efforts.

Jack Anderson

The president's latest budget proposal, for example, amputated $20 million from the $75 million funding for the Customs Service's air interdiction program. The agency is already finding it difficult to keep abreast of the increasing drug traffic across the Mexican border. Unless Congress reinstates the money, the interdiction mission will be impossible.

One immediate effect of the budget cut will be elimination of a proposed "eye in the sky" over Fort Huachuca, Ariz.: a tethered, radar-loaded balloon that would keep 24-hour-a-day vigil for dope smugglers flying across the border to secret landing strips in the Arizona desert.

Just how helpful the radar balloon would be in the fight against narcotics smugglers was made dramatically clear in a secret three-day operation the Customs Service conducted last year to determine the extent of smuggling across the Mexican border.

Our associate Donald Goldberg learned the details from an internal memo of the Vice President's National Narcotics Border Interdiction System, and from interviews with officials familiar with the study.

Called "Operation X," it began when Customs officials in Tucson realized there had been a suspicious drop in the number of interdictions reported during the preceding months. Had the smugglers changed to other entry routes? Had they bought a tipster inside the agency to leak the schedules of the interdiction flights?

On three consecutive nights, the surveillance missions were taken over by Navy E2C radar planes out of San Diego, flying along the border as far east as Tucson. The arrangements were super-secret; even the pilots weren't told their flight plans until they were airborne. There was no way the smugglers could get advance information.

The planes flew during the smugglers' daily "window" — midnight to 4 a.m. — and the results were astonishing: "Fourteen suspect aircraft were detected crossing or approaching the U.S. border," the memo disclosed. "Ten were observed between Sells and Nogales, Ariz.; one near Douglas; one in the Animas Valley of New Mexico; one near Yuma, and one in the Gulf of California."

The Operation X results suggested that anywhere from 300 to 400 planes that could be carrying drugs were penetrating the border each month in that region alone.

"It is believed that such a high number of suspect targets were spotted in such a short period of time because the operation was initiated and conducted in a low-key manner that did not telegraph law enforcement intentions to narcotics smugglers," the internal memo explained.

Customs officials insist there are no leaks coming from their agency. They suggest that smugglers' spies might simply be watching the airfields or monitoring the agency's open radio transmissions to obtain the few minutes' warning needed to change course or abort a flight across the border. But if that were the situation, the Operation X flights could have been spotted, too.

In any case, tethered radar balloons would solve the problem; they are incorruptible. The radar would pick up illegal planes up to 150 miles from the balloons' anchor sites, eliminating the need for radar plane patrols.

The operation of weather balloons would be far less expensive than the E2C flights. Sources estimate that a radar balloon would cost about $400 an hour to operate, compared to the E2C's $3,700 an hour.

FUDDLE FACTORY: It's Catch-22 time again. Congress ordered the State Department to install an inspector general's office, in hopes of saving money by exposing waste and fraud in the department's far flung operations. But as Secretary of State George Shultz explained to House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., in a recent letter, it will cost $12 million a year for the 180 auditors, investigators and supporting staff an inspector general will require. And — you guessed it — the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing act has nixed any possibility of finding the $12 million. State will make a start by some in-house shuffling of personnel.

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: Travelers who recently returned from Iran report a macabre juxtaposition of two "landmarks" in every town or village they visited: a Revolutionary Guard recruiting office and an ever-expanding cemetery. They are cause-and-effect reminders of the grim toll of Iranian youth exacted by the war with Iraq. Incredibly, the Ayatollah Khomeini's recruiters seem to have no trouble enlisting volunteers, despite the likelihood that the teenagers will wind up in the cemetery next door.

Contra aid vote noted difference

WASHINGTON — The difference in the way the two parties approached the contra question was reflected in the rank-and-file GOP anger at the six senior Republicans who provided the margin of defeat for President Reagan.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The Republican vote — 164 to 16 to aid the anti-communist rebels in Nicaragua — manifests party solidarity on a nationally-divisive issue where public opinion still is running against the president. Yet, amid the gloom pervading the House Republican cloakroom after last Thursday's roll call were threats of retribution and pledges that a second vote would bring erring colleagues into line.

On the Democratic side, leaders were gratified that no more than 46 (out of 252 members voting) defected from Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill. Many went along only because of personal, emotional pleas from "Tip," who retires at the end of this Congress, and because of his assurance of a second-chance vote April 15.

But never did a party seem so unhappy in victory. Many Democratic members admit discomfort at being linked by White House aides to the first communist regime on the American mainland, and some are eager to vote some kind of contra aid package. In contrast, the Republicans' mood was conviction over the correctness of their position and anger at defectors. There was also extreme frustration that a mere three more GOP votes, according to the whip count, could have shaken loose the winning margin from others who said privately "if my vote will do it, you can count on me."

House GOP Whip Trent Lott talked bitterly of putting a sign in the cloak room commemorating "The Day the House Surrendered Nicaragua." He called his party's defections a "disgrace." The back-bench members of the Conservative Opportunity Society (COS), who look to Lott for leadership, were particularly upset that six ranking minority members of standing committees in the House were among the 16 defectors.

That "dirty half-dozen" consists mainly of members of the party's atrophied Eastern liberal wing, such as veterans Frank Horton of New York and Silvio Conte of Massachusetts, who habitually vote the soft line on foreign policy. What provoked the COS more was the "no" vote by Ohio's Chalmers Wylie, an old-fashioned Midwestern conservative who confessed to colleagues that Roman Catholic church pressure got to him.

Whether liberal Conte or conservative Wylie, junior members find it unacceptable that the party's senior members — elected by their Republican colleagues on the standing committees and beneficiaries of staff and other perquisites — should oppose the cutting edge of party policy. Many want to raise the issue in the House Republican Cknference.

This passion may subside, but Republican solidarity for an anti-communist counteroffensive — the Reagan Doctrine — will not. Of the 16 defectors, 10 come from the Northeast and three from economically-ravaged Iowa. The GOP growth regions — the West, South and Southwest — solidly supported the president save for Kentucky's Larry Hopkins (who seemed to think more rather than less money was needed for the contras).

As last week began, head counts showed 35 House Republicans not committed to contra aid and they became targets of intense pressure. Political consultant Roger Stone, who managed Reagan's presidential campaigns in Connecticut and New Jersey, was on the phone to undeclared members from those states. All six New Jersey Republicans and one of the three Connecticut Republicans ended up supporting the contras.

One Jerseyite late in making his position public, Rep. Matthew Rinaldo, received a letter from right-wing political activist Terry Dolan containing a nail. Dolan said the congressman was hammering the nail into the anti-communist resistance in Central America. An angry Rinaldo mailed back the nail and told Dolan he was voting "yes." In sum, life was not pleasant for opposed or uncommitted GOP lawmakers.

On the sticky question of whether Reagan's avowed willingess to compromise helped or hurt his cause, House Republicans think it hurt. "If you are telling members that the last bus is leaving the station," a GOP leader told us, "it doesn't help for the White House to say there's likely to be another bus along presently."

Many Democrats want to catch that second bus — perhaps including the respected Rep. Les Aspin, chairman of the Armed Services Committee. Before the vote, he seemed to be looking for the center but confessed to us "there may not be a center on this issue." The Aspins do not like being perceived as aiding the Sandinista tyranny in Managua, particularly when Republican lines are growing firmer and tighter.

CHARLEY REESE

Critical thinking declining

You can watch almost any public issue debate in the United States these days and observe the decline in critical thinking skills. Since the mind is man's only tool for survival, that's a bad omen for the future.

Charley Reese

If we use the debate over aid to Nicaraguan rebels as example, we can pick out several common flaws in thinking. First, there is the flaw of debating a subject out of context.

Too often people debate a problem as if the problem had just instantly arisen and had no history. The suggestion from Sen. James Sasser, D.-Tenn., that the military aid be appropriated but held in escrow for six months is typical. He is saying, let's see if in the next six months, the Sandinista regime will simply negotiate away our differences.

If in fact the dispute had arisen the day before Sasser's suggestion, it would be a valid suggestion. In that case, we would not have any knowledge on which to make a judgment about the regime's future behavior.

It so happens, however, that the dispute with the Managua regime is now going into its seventh year. If you look at the record of those years, as any sensible person ought to, one finds no evidence whatsoever to indicate that given six months more, the regime would become agreeable. On the contrary, you find evidence of intransigence disguised by deliberate lies and broken promises.

Predicting the future is always a chancy business but as Patrick Henry observed a long time ago, the only rational indicator of the future is the past. To attempt to predict the future of Central America without observing the past is plain stupid. To pretend there is no past indicates the goal is to deceive rather than to arrive at the truth.

A second flaw in thinking is to mistake opinions or predictions for facts. The claim made by some that regardless of U.S. aid the contras can't win is a prediction based on opinion. There is no definitive evidence that a victory for the Nicaraguan rebels is an impossibility. That claim, by the way, originates with the Sandinistas and as a propaganda tool is an ancient device. Tyrants always tell dissidents, "You can't win." Plenty of people told American rebels, "You can't win."

Actions are always better indicators of truth than words and the Sandinistas are not acting as if they really believed the contras couldn't win.

Argumentum ad hominem — attacking the person, not answering the person's arguments — is also common, particularly in political debates. Hence, all the allegations of human rights violations against the contras, many of them originating with the Sandinistas or their paid American agents.

The fallacy of using this as an argument rests not so much on the substance of the allegations, as on the implied false assumptions. It is implied that the contras are unique in violating human rights and so are therefore unworthy of support.

Alas, war breeds no angels. Whenever men engage in mortal combat, human rights go by the board. War itself is a violation of man's most basic human right — the right to life. The essence of war is brutality, violence, death and confusion. The contra record is no different than our own record or anybody's else's record. To judge wartime behavior by peacetime standards is absurd and amounts to lawyer-tricks. In peacetime, we would not have executed 100,000 people — mostly civilian noncombatants — in Hiroshima. In war, we did it and celebrated it.

The quality of public debate is not important in a tyrant's state because what the people think is not a factor in what the government does or doesn't do. In a free society, however, debate is all important, for that is how we arrive at decisions.

If public debate becomes nothing more than a propaganda war in which neither side is interested in the truth but only in defeating their opponents, then freedom will not survive. Such people are interested in manipulation, not persuasion, and obedience, not concurrence.

Sources claim Sandinistas chased Contras to Honduras

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Military sources said about 1,000 Nicaraguan soldiers chased hundreds of U.S.-backed Contra rebels into southern Honduras, and were camped on a mountain about 12 miles inside the Honduran border.

The sources, speaking on condition they not be identified, said the Sandinista soldiers were on Mount Capire, about 12 miles from the Nicaraguan border Monday, after they had chased the anti-government rebels into Honduras the previous day.

However, a government spokesman refused to confirm reports of an incursion, saying officials had no knowledge of Nicaraguan troops entering southern Honduras.

There was no immediate comment from the leftist Sandinista government in Nicaragua.

U.S. officials in Washington said earlier Monday that Nicaragua sent about 1,500 soldiers into Honduras in a major effort to crush rebels operating from bases along the border.

Nicaraguan forces were operating between nine and 15 miles inside of Honduras, said the U.S. officials who spoke on condition they not be identified.

There was no information available immediately on any fighting inside Honduras between the Nicaraguan army and the Contras.

President Jose Azcona Hoyo of Honduras convened an urgent meeting of the national security council, which includes Gen. Humberto Regalado Hernandez, chief of the armed forces, and ranking military and civilian officials.

But press secretary Lisandro Quesada said the government had no information about an incursion. "The situation is being investigated by the armed forces," he said.

A spokesman for the presidential palace said the government probably would release a statement today.

Foreign Minister Carlos Lopez Contreras, when asked earlier about the Washington report, said, "We do not know anything official at this time."

Marcos' collapse worries Chile's Pinochet

By RICHARD BOUDREAUX

An Analysis

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The collapse of the Marcos regime across the Pacific has sent ripples of insecurity through Chile's military government, in power for 12½ years and scheduled to stay there until 1989.

Last month, after a popular uprising drove President Ferdinand E. Marcos from the Philippines, Chile's ambassador in Manila was quoted by a Santiago newspaper as saying how happy he was to see Philippine troops abandon their tanks in the face of thousands of Filipinos carrying flowers.

"It was admirable. The Filipinos have shown a deep faith in their convictions and the good sense to seek a peaceful solution," the ambassador was quoted as saying.

But the Manila drama struck Chilean President Augusto Pinochet differently. In fact, an angry Pinochet was ready to fire the ambassador but was talked out of it by aides, said sources in the Foreign Ministry who insisted on anonymity.

At the same time, few foreign events during Pinochet's years in power have sent so much optimism through the ranks of his opponents.

"After the Philippines, the conscience of the world turns toward Chile," Gabriel Valdes, the most prominent opposition figure, told a rally of his Christian Democratic Party. "The time has come here for the final choice between democracy and dictatorship."

Like Marcos, the 70-year-old Gen. Pinochet is an unpopular but shrewd strongman who seems determined to stay in power indefinitely, despite social unrest, an economy saddled with a $20 billion foreign debt, and pressure from two powerful critics — the Reagan administration and the Roman Catholic Church.

Having seized power in 1973 from President Salvador Allende, an elected Marxist, army commander Pinochet fashioned a constitution to keep him in office with emergency powers until 1989. Then he can seek military backing for a new eight-year term, subject to voter approval in a one-man election.

Well-informed sources reported in January that top leaders of the Chilean navy, air force and national police want Pinochet to step down in 1989. But the president appears to have retained his support within the all-important army.

Pointing to what he says is a growing Marxist threat, Pinochet has kept the army united behind him, the broader opposition divided, and much of the middle and upper classes frightened of a revival of the turbulent Allende years.

Without commenting publicly, the president is said to have followed every step of Marcos' downfall and even instructed aides to write memos on what lessons may apply here.

Perhaps mindful of the church's catalytic role in the Philippine uprising, Pinochet quickly invited the Roman Catholic archbishop of Santiago, Cardinal Juan Francisco Fresno, over for tea.

The last time the two men met, last Christmas Eve, Pinochet angrily rejected the National Accord, an 11-party manifesto sponsored by the cardinal urging constitutional changes to permit open presidential elections. This time, Pinochet did not change his stance but talked vaguely of "reconciliation."

Nine killed in Sikh-Hindu clashes

CHANDIGARH, India (AP) — Nine people were killed Monday in police gunbattles and Sikh attacks on Hindus in the worst day of sectarian violence since last September, police and intelligence sources said.

The slayings raised to 40 the death toll in the last 10 days from sectarian and terrorist violence in Sikh-dominated Punjab.

The rising violence has been a major setback for Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi and the state government headed by moderate Sikhs elected six months ago with a mandate to end terrorism by separatists fighting for independence from India.

The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said that among the dead were two suspected Sikh terrorists and two paramilitary soldiers fatally shot Monday night in Mathewal village, near the Sikh holy city of Amritsar.

Rockets fired at embassy

TOKYO (AP) — Homemade rockets were launched today at the U.S. Embassy and the Imperial Palace in central Tokyo in nearly simultaneous attacks, but no injuries or damage were reported. Police said leftists apparently were to blame.

The rockets in both incidents were fired from vacant automobiles, apparently by remote control or with timing devices, police said.

Board to probe crash

GANDER, Newfoundland (AP) — Investigators have not been able to decide what caused the Arrow Air crash that killed 256 people last December, but will consider sabotage among the possible causes when it holds an inquiry next month, the head of the probe said.

There were no immediate claims of responsibility for the attacks, but police said they thought the rockets were the work of leftist radicals.

Leftists in recent weeks have said the Canadian Aviation Safety Board, told reporters Monday that an explosive device would be among many possible causes still under study.

"We have to be realistic. In hard times we have to tighten our belts."

"Our future is tied to the oil industry. I think it's a very bright future, with 25 percent of the nation's proven reserves right here in the Permian Basin. But our destiny is not in our hands. We're subject to fluctuations in price that are beyond our control.

"We'll see good times again. And I couldn't think of a better resource to have than oil in the ground. But now is a time for caution."

On February 4, Carroll Thomas was instrumental in alerting the City Council that a $10.8 million bond issue at this time was ill advised. Although he is generally in support of the proposed improvements, Thomas felt the election should be delayed until the local economy improves. At its February 11 meeting, the Council agreed, and deferred the bond election.

A Positive Approach

Thomas stands for positive, constructive improvements within the present City government. He is committed to:

- Improved street repair and maintenance programs to protect our $150,000,000 investment
- Drainage system improvements
- Synchronization of traffic signals
- A freeze on the citizen's City tax burden, the City budget, and City hiring
- Better relationships with other elected bodies.

Thomas believes that improvements to streets, drainage systems, and traffic signal synchronization can be funded out of the City's present cash surplus and unexpended bond funds. When the economy appears more favorable, he supports calling the bond issue to authorize necessary capital improvements.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Conditions forecast for 7 A.M. Wednesday

Fair, warmer days likely

From Staff and Wire Reports

Permian Basin residents may expect fair and warmer temperatures through Wednesday as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal calls for clear skies tonight with the low in the mid 50s. Winds will be from the south at 10 to 15 mph.

Wednesday will be fair with the high in the upper 70s. Winds will be from the south at 10 to 15 mph becoming northerly in in the morning at 10 to 20 mph.

Monday's high of 77 was 12 degrees below the record set in 1938. The overnight low of 47 was 24 degrees above the record set in 1955.

STATE

A high-pressure system retreating from East Texas left dry and relatively mild weather in its wake today, but forecasters expected some gusty winds along with warm temperatures.

Skies were mostly clear behind the system, moving into Louisiana. The National Weather Service said only western sections of the Lone Star State. Early-morning temperatures were generally in the 50s except for some 60-degree readings over the lower Rio Grande valley.

The weather service said no rain was detected anywhere in the state. Winds were south and southwest between 10 and 20 mph in West and North Central Texas as a low-pressure mass developed over New Mexico.

Winds gusted as high as 38 mph at Amarillo early today. Winds in East and South Texas were southeast between 5 and 10 mph.

The weather service posted lake wind advisories for much of West and North Texas through tonight for strong south breezes. Sunny skies were expected at most locations.

Afternoon high temperatures should climb into the 70s statewide except for some 80-degree readings over parts of South and Southwest Texas.

Other readings at 5 a.m. were 53 degrees at Waco and Wichita Falls; 54 at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport and San Antonio; and 50 at Amarillo and Lubbock; and 52 at Stephenville and Midland.

NATION

Freezing rain fell across north central Michigan today, prompting travelers' advisories warning of icy roads, and light snow was scattered over northwest Montana.

Partly cloudy skies prevailed across the southeastern third of the nation, while skies were cloudy from the upper Great Lakes west to the northern Pacific Coast.

Sampson improving after fall

BOSTON (AP) — Houston Rockets All-Star Ralph Sampson was reported improving Monday night with no broken bones after he fell while rebounding in an NBA game with Boston, according to Houston's trainer.

At Massachusetts General Hospital, where Sampson was taken for X-rays, trainer Dick Vandervoort said, "All (the pain) he feels right now is a stiff neck. He has the feeling back in his legs."

Vandervoort said X-rays and a CAT scan of Sampson's head, legs and neck proved negative. He said Sampson would leave the hospital and spend the night at the Rockets' hotel.

Earlier Celtics spokesman Jeff Twiss said, "The X-rays of the neck and head were negative."

The fall came in the second quarter and, according to Dr. Thomas Silva, the Celtics' team physician, it "resulted in a definite loss of the right neurological process in his right leg."

SAMPSON HAD no feeling and no movement in his right leg before being carried off the court, according to Silva's report. But the report said that after being taken to Boston's locker room, Sampson had "sensation and movement of his right leg."

Silva said Sampson could move his right foot in the locker room and, after speaking with hospital personnel, that "improvement in the right leg is continuing."

Rob Castagnoli, the shift supervisor at Mass General, said, "He is in good condition. He is being evaluated."

"I think we're going to be all right, but it does scare everybody," Silva said.

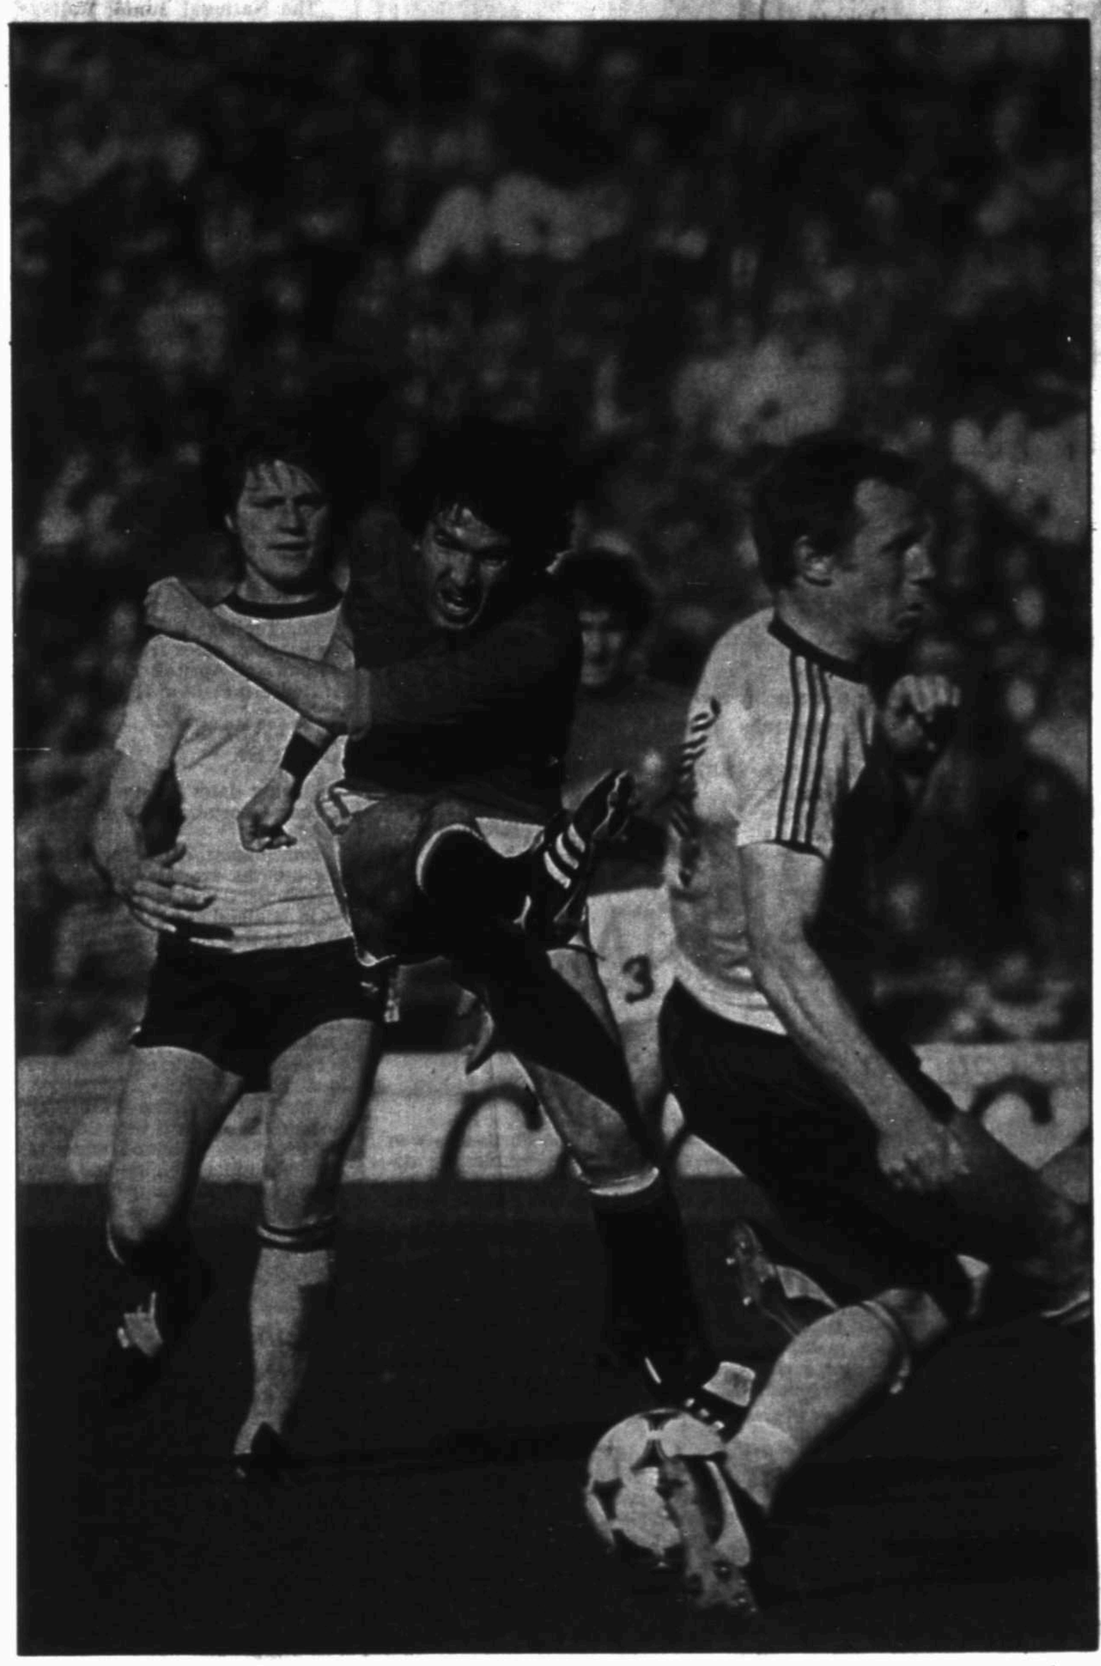

Silva's earlier statement said there was "a possibility of a fracture of the mid-back."

Twiss added that Sampson had had a contusion of his upper back, but his blood pressure and other vital signs were normal when he left for the hospital. He added that movement on the left side of Sampson's body was "fine."

Sampson was hurt with 2:19 left in the second quarter when he leaned backward while jumping under his own basket and hit the back of his head and the upper part of his back on the floor.

Houston Coach Bill Fitch: "He was in a lot of pain, a lot of pain.

Wyoming, OSU gain NIT finals

NEW YORK (AP) — Ohio State and Wyoming, who used superior size and strength to win in the semifinals, won't have that luxury again when they meet for the championship of the 49th National Invitation Tournament.

The Buckeyes, led by lame-duck Coach Eldon Miller, got an overpowering performance from 7-foot forward Brad Sellers in a 79-66 victory Monday night over Louisiana Tech, which had no one taller than 6-8.

ON WEDNESDAY night at Madison Square Garden, Ohio State will face Wyoming, which ousted Florida 67-58 with strong inside play from sophomores Fennis Dembo and Eric Leckner. Florida's tallest player was 6-7 Kenny McClary.

Sellers, who had 23 points, 13 rebounds and nine blocked shots, equaling the NIT shot-blocking record set in 1980 by Virginia's Ralph Sampson, said he expected a physical meeting with the Cowboys.

"They're a big, strong team, similar to our Big 10 competition I faced," Sellers said of Wyoming. "It should be a good game."

Dembo, not a tall forward at 6-4 but boasting big shoulders and a barrel chest, scored 23 points and Leckner, a 6-11 center, added 19 points and 12 rebounds as the Cowboys rallied from a 12-point first-half deficit against the Gators.

"Our strength and size paid off for us," said Dembo, who was 10-for-15 from the field, with nearly all of his shots inside.

"We used our strength," Wyoming Coach Jim Brandenburg said. "We gutted it up in the second half and played them a little tighter."

Florida, 19-13, led 25-13 at the 8:51 mark of the first half as Joe Lawrence hit six consecutive shots from long range, shell-shocking Wyoming, now 24-11.

"Lawrence had 12 points before we decided to guard him," Brandenburg said.

Lawrence, however, never scored again as he missed his last five field-goal attempts.

The Cowboys, meanwhile, abandoned their perimeter game and moved inside, rallying to 37-32 at halftime. They then scored the first six points of the second half for their first lead.

"I thought when we got it down to five, the game was well within reach," Brandenburg said. "As young as we are, with six sophomores in our basic seven-man rotation, this team doesn't scare easily."

Dembo scored all of his 11 second-half points in a nine-minute span and gave the Cowboys the lead to stay at 49-48 on a layup with 8:40 left.

McClary, who led the Gators with 13 points and 10 rebounds, finally was overwhelmed by Wyoming's inside game. Nine of his rebounds came in the first half and he fouled out with 2:47 remaining.

FLORIDA'S NORM Sloan, who coached North Carolina State to an NCAA title in 1974, agreed that size was the difference.

"When you have to rely so much on perimeter scoring, it's tough," Sloan said. "You need a couple of people who can move in there and get the ball. We didn't have it."

Sellers was 1-for-6 from the field in the first half for 18-14 Ohio State, but he was 7-for-7 and also hit four straight free throws in the second half. The Buckeyes still led Louisiana Tech 32-23 at halftime as guard Dennis Hopson scored 14 of his 23 points before intermission.

The Bulldogs, 19-14, never got closer than nine points in the second half as Sellers scored at will.

"We always try to get the ball in to Brad in close," said Miller, who was dismissed Feb. 3, effective at the end of the season, and already has been hired by Northern Iowa. "Everything we do is designed to do that, but if the jumper is there we'll take that, too."

"It was a physical game and I don't know if we were prepared to play it that way," Louisiana Tech Coach Tommy Joe Eagles said. "I don't know if we ever played a team as big and strong as Ohio State."

Raiders drop swimming program

LUBBOCK (AP) - The Texas Tech Red Raiders will drop their swimming and diving program effective at the end of the current school year, it was announced by Atheltic Director T. Jones.

Jones said Monday the budget crunch and the lack of a first class workout facility were the reasons for dropping the sports.

Tech will participate in eight men's and seven women's sports after this year.

"It is very difficult to eliminate what has been a fixture in our athletic program for many years," said Jones. "A lot of study went into this decision and I want to stress it was not easy to make.

Jones said "There was no other recourse but to do this."

KC's Dennis Leonard making dramatic comeback

Associated Press

It has been almost three years — May 23, 1983, to be exact — since Dennis Leonard won a major-league game. Exhibition victories don't count, but at least Leonard has one of those in his dramatic comeback bid to crack the Kansas City Royals' starting rotation.

On May 28, 1983, Leonard suffered a crippling injury while pitching to Baltimore's Cal Ripken — a torn tendon below his left kneecap. Since that time he has appeared in two major-league games, two fewer than the number of operations on the knee.

HE UNDERWENT surgery the day after the mishap and again Sept. 29, 1983. When an infection slowed the healing process, he underwent operation No. 3 on June 19, 1984, a season otherwise spent rehabilitating the knee. A fourth operation was performed July 31, 1984, to regraft the damaged tendon tissue using tendon from the back of the knee.

Last year, he appeared in four minor-league games and two late in the season with the Royals, pitching a total of 23⅓ innings.

Leonard was the starting and winning pitcher on Monday in the Royals' 7-1 triumph over the Toronto Blue Jays. He went five innings in his longest outing of the spring, allowing one run and three hits, all singles.

"I felt I threw better in the fifth inning (he retired the side in order) than the other innings. Little by little I'm feeling more comfortable out there.

"I feel good about the way things are going regardless of what happens. Just being able to come down here and compete again and do the things I've done basically my whole life before the injury gives me a good personal satisfaction.

"When I came down here, I came down with the idea of having a chance. If I pitched lousy, it would have made it an easy decison. It's not like I'm a rookie worried about making the team.

"I think it would be an accomplishment after what I've gone through the last three years. If I don't, I'm not going to bury my head and go cry. I can say I went down fighting, if indeed it is going down."

MANAGER DICK Howser says he is "impressed with the way he has been throwing the ball. I'm going to take a good hard look at him. He's going to get as many turns as everybody else. We will make a decision on him at the end of spring training."

Steve Balboni's three-run double in the first inning, before losing pitcher Doyle Alexander could retire a batter, was Kansas City's big hit.

Another veteran pitcher, California's Don Sutton, hurled six perfect innings and Reggie Jackson drove in four runs as the Angels beat the San Francisco Giants 8-3. Sutton, who turns 41 next month, lowered his spring earned run average to 1.53 for 17⅔ innings.

"I couldn't be any more pleased as far as what I want to accomplish in spring training," said the 20-year veteran who has won 295 games and pitched five one-hitters. "This was one of those days when I wish I was a more emotional guy. All the ingredients for getting excited were there."

Jackson's homer was his second of the spring and he leads the Angels with 12 RBIs.

"This was a good day," said the 39-year-old slugger, who will be the Angels' primary designated hitter this season. "I got in four good swings. I'm doing what I want to do. I hit and I sit down on the bench and wait 'cause I assume that's the way things will go during the season."

Jackson homered off Mike Krukow in the third inning and doubled a run across in the fifth. Rookie Wally Joyner collected four hits, including RBI singles in the fifth and sixth innings, and is batting .396.

It was not a good day for Rick Sutcliffe, the 1984 National League Cy Young Award winner. Sutcliffe was tattooed for eight runs and 10 hits in four innings as the Seattle Mariners blanked the Chicago Cubs 10-0.

Jim Presley went 3-for-3 to lead Seattle's 13-hit attack while starter Mike Moore allowed only two hits in six innings.

Exhibition Baseball Roundup

White Sox 7, Orioles 4

Joel Skinner and Greg Walker homered as Chicago tagged Storm Davis for six runs and 10 hits in six innings. Skinner, who was 1-for-18 earlier this spring, is up to .250 with a pair of homers. He is being counted on as the regular catcher with Carlton Fisk's shift to left field. Fred Lynn and Mike Young homered for the Orioles.

Mets 4, Dodgers 1

Stanley Jefferson's tie-breaking single ignited a three-run seventh inning off Ed Vande Berg. The rookie outfielder followed two-out singles by Argenis Salazar and Barry Lyons with the hit that raised his spring average to .409. Wally Backman's RBI single and shortstop Mariano Duncan's error allowed two more runs to score as the Dodgers lost their fifth straight game.

Expos 8, Reds 0

Herm Winningham had four hits and stole two bases while Floyd Youmans, George Riley and Randy St. Claire combined on a three-hitter. Montreal scored three runs in the sixth inning, four in the seventh and one in the eighth after Cincinnati starter John Denny yielded three hits in five scoreless innings. Frank Pastore was then tagged for eight hits and seven runs.

Phillies 3, Cardinals 2

Steve Jeltz walked with the bases loaded to force in the winning run in the ninth inning. Pinch-hitter Joe Lefebvre began the ninth with a double off Greg Bargar. Luis Aguayo singled Lefebvre to third and Greg Gross was walked intentionally before Jeltz walked on a 3-1 pitch. Jeltz, who leads the Phillies with a .444 average and nine RBIs, had a run-scoring single in the second inning.

Philadelphia's Steve Carlton pitched five scoreless innings in a 6-2 victory over the Cardinals in a morning 'B' squad game. He gave up four hits, walked one and struck out two.

A's 9, Brewers 4

Dwayne Murphy, Jose Canseco and Alfredo Griffin each had two RBIs while Tony Phillips had three hits and scored three times. The Brewers were blanked for seven innings by Eric Plunk and Keith Atherton.

Astros 4, Red Sox 3

Jose Cruz capped a four-run sixth inning against Boston starter Jeff Sellers with a three-run homer. Cruz's homer helped offset a hitting barrage by Boston's Mike Easler, who had a two-run homer, a double and two singles.

Sellers, a rookie trying to jump from Class AA to the majors, blanked the Astros on three hits for five innings before Jim Pankovits led off the Houston sixth with a double and scored on Billy Hatcher's double. Eric Bullock singled before Cruz homered.

Pirates 10, Tigers 7

Sid Bream singled home the tie-breaking run in the ninth inning and Mike Diaz added a two-run double. Detroit's Kirk Gibson had three hits, including a two-run homer, and drove in four runs.

Padres 6, Indians 2

John Kruk, vying for the final spot on the Padres' roster, had two doubles and two RBIs. Kruk doubled home two runs in San Diego's three-run third inning and doubled and scored in the eighth. San Diego starter Mark Thurmond pitched six innings, allowing two runs and five hits. Pat Tabler homered for Cleveland.

Chap golfers place high in 72-hole event

From Staff Reports

CONROE — The Midland College golf team finished ninth overall in the Lone Star Intercollegiate Invitational 72-hole golf tournament here over the weekend and fourth among Texas junior college teams.

The tournament was actually a two-in-one event. The Lone star event featured golf teams from all over the nation, but competition was also held from the same scores to decide the Texas Junior College championship.

MC golf coach Delnor Poss said the tournament was deeper than what the national tournament later this year will present.

Brevard College of Florida won the overall title with a 1187 team score and was followed by Florida teams of Florida Junior College, 1182 and Palm Beach, 1192.

McClennan placed fourth overall and first in the Texas competition with a 1206 and was followed by Odessa College, 1211; Paris, 1218; Alexander City of Alabama, 1218; New Mexico Junior College, 1225 and Midland College, 1231.

Twenty-four teams were in the tournament that was played at the Del Lago course. Ten of the teams were from Texas.

Glenn Collins led the Chaparrals with a four-round total of 305 with scores of 73-78-78-76.

Other Chap golfers were Leon Van Rensberg, 75-75-78-82—310; Raymond Cole, 80-78-85-73—316; Gordon Wessels, 79-79-74-89—321; and Ken Tresoor, 84-89-74-79—326.

Coaches select Williamson as sports writer of year

From Staff Reports

Midland Reporter-Telegram Assistant Sports Editor Terry Williamson was recently named as sports writer of the year by members in Region IV of the Texas High School Coaches Association.

It marks the third consecutive year that Williamson has received the Region IV honor. Region IV includes an area bordering San Angelo and Lubbock, Abilene and El Paso.

The THSCA named Michael Pullin of the McAllen Monitor as its statewide sports writer of the year from its eight region nominees. Pullin and the other nominees will be recognized at the Balfour Hall of Honor luncheon on July 31 in Houston's Astrohall during the annual THSCA coaching school activities.

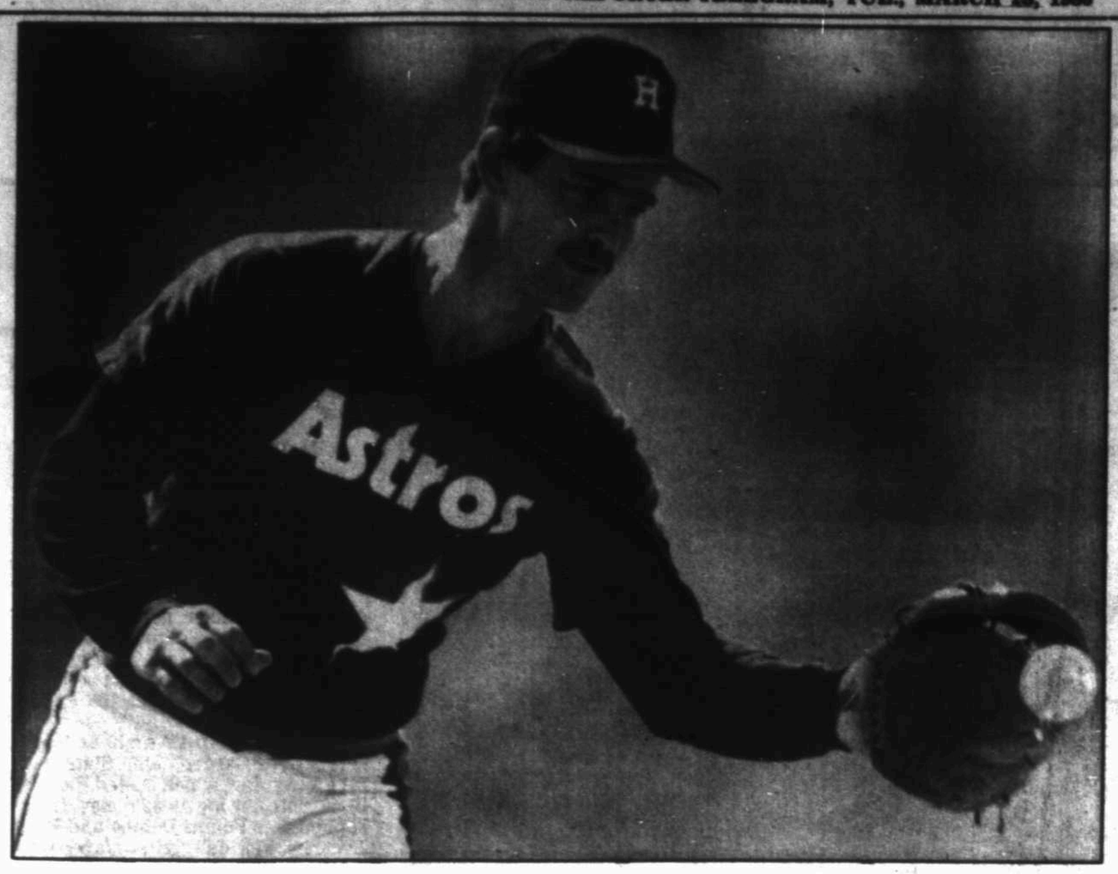

Over the weekend, Williamson was named a first place winner in the Associated Press' Class AAA spot sports writing contest, which includes Texas papers with a Sunday circulation of 25,000 to 100,000.

Terry Williamson

Williamson, who has covered high school sports for the Reporter-Telegram for 14 years, won for a story on Midland Lee's controversial bi-district basketball playoff loss to Amarillo Palo Duro in 1985.

Astros' Thon puts injury behind him

AP Laserphoto

Houston shortstop Dickie Thon says its time to put up or shut up about his ability to come back from a beaning incident that left him physically and emotionally injured.

KISSIMMEE, Fla. (AP) — Houston shortstop Dickie Thon wants to give Astros fans a season to remember so they'll forget about a beaning incident two years ago that almost ended his promising career.

"Hopefully, I can go out this season and play good enough that everyone will forget about what happened to me," Thon said. "All I can do is my best."

Thon crumpled at home plate in the Astrodome after being struck in the left eye by a pitch from the New York Mets' Mike Torrez in the fifth game of the 1984 season.

HE MISSED the 1984 season and struggled early last season, trying to shake off the effects of the near career-ending blow. Blurred vision sent him to the disabled list last season, but he returned to hit .251 in 84 games.

In 1983, Thon was good enough to earn a spot on the National League All-Star team. He hit .286 that year with 20 home runs and 79 runs batted in, all career highs.

Thon says his confidence is returning.

"I'm feeling real good at the plate, a lot more comfortable than last year," Thon said. "I just need to play in a lot of spring games to get ready for the season."

Thon is off to a good start, hitting .300 going into Monday's game against Boston at Winter Haven, Fla.

But Thon's biggest goal this season is to put the injury not only out of his mind but out of the minds of fans and the media.

"I'd like to concentrate on making the plays and not think about the injury," Thon said. "If I keep the injury in my mind, I might try to use that as an excuse if I don't make a play.

"I just want to try to do the job when I play. This year I'd like to get on base more and defensively, I want to be more consistent."

Chaparral netters defeat NMMI

Williams pulls team off court in protest

From Staff Reports

ROSWELL, N.M. — Midland College men's tennis team won its conference match against New Mexico Military Institute here Monday, but came home before the doubles matches were played. Officially, the Chaps won 6-0 to run their record to 13-2 and 4-0 in conference play.

However, a protest has been filed after a singles match ended on a dispute and MC Coach Joe Williams pulled his team out of the doubles matches.

The dispute came between MC's number three singles player Herve Rousseau and NMMI's Oba Ola. Rousseau won the first set 6-3 and was ahead in a tiebreaker with the games 6-all. A match-point volley by Rousseau was called out, then the next shot by Rousseau was called out by Ola to even the match at two sets each. Rousseau and his teammates, who had finished their matches, thought the shots were good.

Williams then filed a protest on both that match and the meet, noting that NMMI had listed its coach and a high school player as entrants for the doubles play. NMMI has not had a full complement of players for many of its matches this season.

The Chaparrals marched through their other four singles matches with ease and took the number six singles by default when NMMI failed to list a player. The Chaps also won the number three doubles by default, with the results of the other two doubles matches still to be decided later.

Dull Folks honor 'unrecognized' Kidd, Dudek

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Buffalo Bills punter John Kidd and Plymouth State running back Joe Dudek won "Unrecognized Athlete of the Year" awards for 1985, it was announced Monday.

The awards are given by International Dull Folks Unlimited, a group that says it's taken it upon itself to honor the bored, the unnoticed or the anonymous.

The awards — two plaques — went last year to a swimmer and a professional basketball player. The swimmer was 67-year-old Ashby Harper, of Albuquerque, N.M., who in 1984 became the first person to swim the shark-infested Santa Barbara Channel. The basketball player was Maurice Cheeks, a guard for the Philadelphia 76ers.

The third annual awards were announced by James D. Stewart, the group's chairman, as an alternative to the more well-known Cy Young awards in baseball, football's Heisman Trophy and All-Star team selections.

The 1985 amateur award went to Dudek, the record-setting tailback for the New Hampshire Division III school.

His 79 touchdowns broke the National Collegiate Athletic Association record set by Chicago Bears great Walter Payton when he was at Jackson State. Former Philadelphia Eagles running back Wilbert Montgomery held the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics record when he scored 77 touchdowns for Abilene Christian.

Dudek rushed for a Division III career record of 5,570 yards and led his team to a 37-6 record in four years.

The Dull Folks 1985 professional award went to the unheralded Kidd, the punter for the struggling Buffalo Bills of the National Football League. In his two seasons with the Bills, the team has won four games and lost 28, which translates into a lot of three-downs-and-a-punt situations.

In 1985, Kidd had 92 punts and averaged 41.5 yards per kick with none blocked. His longest punt was 67 yards.

Kidd also set an NFL record with 33 punts unreturned past the 20-yard line.

There probably will be no famous beer endorsements for Kidd and Dudek, though Stewart said his group's motto is "in generic beer is truth."

SMU to cut eight athletic positions

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist University will cut back eight full-time positions next year in an effort to save money, athletic director Bob Hitch says.

He said Monday that SMU was attempting to bail out of a "severe financial crunch." Hitch said an athletic budget of almost $7 million this year would be trimmed by about $400,000 next year.

Hitch said one of the eight positions was a coaching job. But he said the two revenue-producing sports, football and basketball, would be unaffected.

"At the end of the current budget year (May 31), we will drop eight full-time positions," said Hitch. "We have people out right now looking for jobs, so I don't think it would be fair to name them.

"But the cutbacks will involve one assistant coach's job in a women's sport, and the other seven will be administrative jobs. We are in a severe financial crunch."

Connors slapped with fine, suspension

NEW YORK (AP) — The Men's International Professional Tennis Council has slapped veteran Jimmy Connors with a $20,000 fine and a 10-week suspension for his refusal to complete a match in a tournament last month.

"We consider it very serious for a professional player to refuse to play when he's playing for money before fans who are paying," M. Marshall Happer III, administrator of the Pro Council, said Monday in announcing the sanctions levied against the 33-year-old left-hander.

"There were about 9,000 people present and there was a national television audience," Happer said. "And that's, in our judgment, one of the most serious things a player can do."

The fine, the maximum authorized by the Code of Conduct, equals the largest ever levied against a player.

Guillermo Vilas of Argentina was fined $20,000 for accepting an illegal guarantee to play in a tournament four years ago.

Connors also was fined $5,000 immediately after he was defaulted from his semifinal match against Ivan Lendl in the Lipton International Players Championships in Boca Raton, Fla., Feb. 21. That fine was assessed by Ken Farrar, chief MIPTC supervisor, for "Failure to Complete a Match."

Unless delayed by an appeal, the suspension would mean Connors cannot play in the French Open. The Pro Council said it is the first time a player has been suspended for misconduct through one of the four Grand Slam tournaments.

"At this point, I can only concentrate on my tennis," said Connors. "I will review the decision with my attorneys during the next few weeks, but for the time being, I'm concentrating on tennis."

Vilas was given a one-year suspension, but it was suspended when he appealed and terminated by the three-member panel that decided his case.

"I take full credit, good or bad, for what I've done," Connors said the week following his default. "If I'm suspended, I'll just go home and ride my horses."

Lendl was leading their semifinal match 3-2, 30-love in the decisive fifth set when Connors disputed a line call. That call gave Lendl a 40-love lead.

Houston Rockets head coach Bill Fitch looks over Ralph Sampson after Sampson injured his back during an NBA game against the Boston Celtics Monday. It was feared that Sampson broke his back, but X-rays proved negative.

SAMPSON—

"I'm not concerned about the loss. ... The only important thing is if Ralph's back is all right and there is no disc problem. ... If he needs a little R&R in the Bahamas, I'll take him there myself."

Houston forward Robert Reid said, "He went up for a two-handed rebound. ... He seemed to skid on the floor.

"He was scared. ... Anyone would be at that time with a doctor asking if you can feel this touch or that touch. ... The only thing he was saying was, 'Oh, my God. Oh, my God.'

Twiss said Sampson felt nauseous on the court but did not lose consciousness. He added that the three-year NBA veteran "was very calm" while being examined in the locker room and was able to recognize those around him.

As he was wheeled on a stretcher from the locker room to the ambulance about 50 yards away in a lobby area, Sampson moved his head from side to side and also moved his arms. While on the stretcher, he was wearing his Rockets uniform, but had no sneakers on.

"He said he wanted to talk with his mom," Twiss said.

The 7-foot-4 Sampson, 25, was the game's leading scorer with 17 points when he was hurt with Houston leading 53-51.

Sampson, who had played in all 71 of the Rockets' games, led the team in rebounding with an average of 11.6 per game and was second in scoring with 19.6 points per game.

Sampson was the first player selected in the 1983 draft and was that year's NBA Rookie of the Year when he led the Rockets in scoring, rebounding and blocked shots.

Last season, when the Rockets drafted Akeem Olajuwon, Sampson was moved to forward. He still ranked 11th in the league in rebounding and 19th in scoring, and was selected to the second All-NBA team.

Sampson came to the Rockets after a brilliant college career at Virginia, where he was an All-American for three years and Player of the Year from 1981-83. His scoring and rebounding led the Cavaliers to three Atlantic Coast Conference titles and four straight postseason tourney bids. They won the National Invitation Tournament in 1980 and finished third in the NCAA tournament in 1981.

Boston ended up winning the game, 114-107.

In other NBA action Monday, the Los Angeles Lakers defeated San Antonio 124-102 to win their seventh straight Western Conference title. In other games, the Dallas Mavericks escaped the Indiana Pacers 126-120, Utah defeated Seattle 116-108 and Washington upset the Philadelphia 76ers 100-93.

Namath dropped in ABC's shuffle

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Namath's career as a football analyst at ABC is over.

Namath, the Hall of Fame quarterback with the New York Jets who joined Monday Night Football as an analyst last year, has been dismissed by ABC, a network source said early today.

Ironically, Namath's first telecast for ABC was last summer on the day he was inducted into the Hall.

Capital Cities, which now owns ABC and is in the midst of cost-cutting measures, bought out Namath's contract for "less than $1 million but more than $800,000," said the source, who asked not to be named. In 1985, Namath signed a two-year contract worth approximately $1 million a year.

THE RELEASE of Namath was not the only change ABC made in its Monday Night Football lineup.

O.J. Simpson was offered a position as analyst on college football and, the source said, will accept it. Frank Gifford, who did the play-by-play on the series every year since 1971 — Keith Jackson handled those duties in the series' debut year of 1970 — has been offered the analysis spot on Monday Night Football.

Al Michaels, currently ABC's top baseball announcer, who also does play-by-play on some college football games, will take over as the NFL play-by-play announcer for the network.

Simpson, who worked three years on Monday Night Football, had been contacted by CBS and NBC about working NFL games. But, instead of leaving ABC, the source said he will join Jackson on CFA telecasts, replacing Frank Broyles.

Only Broyles could be reached for comment and the athletic director at Arkansas told USA Today:

"The reorganization by the new owners at ABC is understandable. A new broom sweeps clean."

Though it was not known if Gifford would accept the switch in assignments, he did begin his football broadcasting career as a color analyst at CBS.

Though Monday Night Football's ratings soared last year, the network's sports operations lost between $30 million and $50 million a year. Capital Cities apparently felt Namath and Simpson had nothing to do with those improved ratings.

ABC is planning to go with only two announcers for Monday Night Football for the first time. Ever since the series began, with Jackson, Howard Cosell and Don Meredith in the booth, there have been three voices doing the games.

ABC ALSO is making some announcing changes on its baseball telecasts, with Jackson returning to Monday night games. He will handle backup contests, with Michaels doing the main telecasts.

It has also been reported New York Mets annoucer Tim McCarver will join the ABC "A" team for Monday night baseball telecasts.

On the production side, Chuck Howard, a longtime producer of college football, will be replaced by Bob Goodrich, while Howard moves into the studios on Saturdays. Andy Sidaris, a longtime director of college football, is being reassigned.

In addition, there has been speculation that ABC is interested in dropping Monday Night Football after the contract runs out following the 1986 season. All three networks will conduct negotiations with the NFL following next season.

"Professional football is not making money for all three networks," Brodsky said. "But we are still very interested in it, though the (next) contract has to be equitable from both sides."

Weltlich may get extension

AUSTIN (AP) — The Men's Athletics Council at the University of Texas has recommended extending basketball coach Bob Weltlich's contract for three more years.

Weltlich, who came to Texas from Mississippi, had one year remaining on a five-year contract.

UT Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds said he had suggested that the council recommend the salary extension to school administrators, who must approve it.

Dodds said no proposed salary was included in the recommendation. Weltlich's current salary is $74,475 a year.

"He's done a good job," said Dodds. "We continue to improve. That is the bottom line. He's also done a good job on the academic side.

How much is that ticket?

DALLAS (AP) — Basketball fans are so eager to get tickets to the NCAA Final Four tournament this weekend that they're willing to trade cash, trips and even a used Rolls-Royce.

Prices vary from $650 for so-so seats to $1,500 for more prime seats in the lower level, agents said. And folks are eager to pay those prices for tickets to the basketball championship at Dallas' Reunion Arena.

"We buy them one minute and we sell them the next," said Spectrum Tickets' Bob Zidell, a former stockbroker who added that the atmosphere at his agency was as charged as at a commodities exchange.

He said phones rang constantly Monday with inquiries from prospective ticket sellers as well as buyers.

"It's big," said Scott Dalma of Texas Tickets. "We're selling as many as we can get our hands on."

Agents said the volume of tickets sold is small, about about 20 to 30 sales a day, because agencies must purchase the tickets before they can sell them.

The $46 general tickets, distributed by lottery, sold out several months ago, said Zidell, who describes himself as a "ticket broker" pricing his commodity by the laws of supply and demand.

Zidell said he has been offered free trips to London, Hawaii and Vail, Colo., in return for seats.

Dollar rises

LONDON (AP) - The U.S. dollar rose against all major currencies in early European trading today, reacting bullishly to U.S.-Libyan clashes and prospects of a further decline in oil prices. Gold prices edged up.

A Frankfurt dealer said tension in the Gulf of Sidra off Libya "will be a continuing factor supporting the dollar."

Analysts said many investors regarded the dollar as a safe haven during times of political instability.

The failure by the Organization of Oil Exporting Countries to agree a production-sharing formula also boosted the dollar, dealers said.

But in New York, Jack Barbanel, first vice president of Grunthal and Co. Inc. said that because falling oil prices have helped push down U.S. interest rates, any strengthening of the dollar would likely be temporary.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar continued its rebound from last week's post-World War II lows. The U.S. currency rose 2.30 yen to close at 179.60 yen, compared with 177.30 on Monday.

In London, the British pound fell nearly 2 cents against the dollar, depressed by lower prices for Britain's North Sea oil. The pound was quoted at $1.4645, compared with $1.485 late Monday.

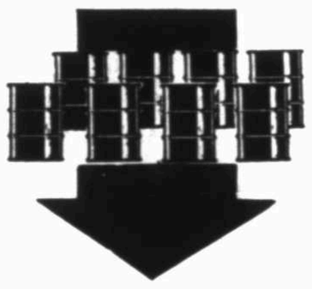

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $352.50 a troy ounce, compared with late Monday's $351.50. At mid-morning the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $352.90.

In Zurich, the bid price was $352.20, up from $350.50 late Monday.

Dealers said trading was quiet, despite the U.S.-Libyan clashes. Political uncertainty frequently boosts prices of bullion which also is regarded as a safe haven.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell $2.89 to close at a bid $351.50.

Saudi oil minister warns of fresh oil price shocks

New York Times News Service

GENEVA, Switzerland — Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi Arabian oil minister, warned Monday that the world faced a fresh round of oil price shocks in the 1990s, similar to those that jarred the world economy in the 1970s, if persistently low prices eliminate high-cost oil production and the incentive for new energy exploration.

His comments came as OPEC adjourned its nine-day-old meeting without agreement on how to stabilize the oil market, sending oil prices sharply lower. Reflecting the gloom and defeat that surrounded the discussions, most ministers refused to brief reporters here. They plan to reconvene April 15.

"You are putting the whole world into a situation where you will have an energy crisis not invoked by a political crisis, like 1973 and 1979," he said, his voice intensifying with emotion, "but by a serious shortage in the supply of energy." The 1970s oil price shocks were caused by cutbacks in Persian Gulf oil deliveries to the industrialized countries because of the Arab-Israeli conflict and the overthrow of the shah in Iran.

On other issues during a 65-minute conversation in his hotel suite with a small group of reporters, Yamani made these points:

—The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is unable to stabilize the oil market alone, without the assistance of major nonmember countries, like Britain.

AP Laserphoto

Fawzi Ahmed Shakshuki, oil minister of Libya, left, listens to Ahmed Zaki Yamani, oil minister of Saudi Arabia, before an OPEC session in Geneva.

—The group's policy of seeking a wider market share for its oil does not conflict with its declared intention of seeking to restore higher oil prices.

—Saudi Arabia has no intention "so far" of cutting its oil production.

The minister predicted that oil prices would probably continue to decline before OPEC ministers met again on April 15, but he refused to say by how much. He said the April meeting would show whether OPEC's unsuccessful search in Geneva for new individual national quotas under a global quota of about 14 million barrels a day had been "serious, or just a mental exercise."

Appearing calm and relaxed despite nine days of wearying negotiations, Yamani said that, according to one set of figures available to him, average prices of $15 for a barrel of oil would eliminate 1.8 million barrels a day of production of crude oil in the United States, not including Alaska, because the high cost of extracting the crude would make it unprofitable. He said further production cuts would be forced on North Sea oil producers, such as Britain and Norway.

"What disturbs me is that some cuts will be forever," he said. "Once you shut down stripper wells, you are not going to reopen them again unless the price of oil goes to $50 or more."

Within the oil industry, high-cost wells that produce less than 10 barrels a day are referred to as "strippers." Yamani refused to speculate on the political implications of the six-year-old Iran-Iraq war in the search for stable oil markets. "I have no guess to offer," he said. "I am not the one who is doing the threatening, so I don't know."

Iran has insisted that any increase in Iraq's production quota would have to be matched proportionately by an increase in its own production share.

Though the OPEC ministers appeared during their talks to have deserted the goal of securing wider market share through lower prices and returned to debates over securing higher prices through production restraint, Yamani appeared to set little store by the search for a new production ceiling and insisted the two goals of wider maket share and firmer prices were not mutually exclusive. Indeed, he said a majority within OPEC now sought a larger share of the world market for its oil through the help of nonmember countries.

Oil ministers from Egypt, Mexico, Malaysia, Angola and Oman discussed market strategies for two days last week with OPEC ministers but rebuffed suggestions that they cut their oil production by up to 20 percent, to allow OPEC a wider market share. Yamani nevertheless described the meetings as "encouraging" and said he hoped they would yield wider support for OPEC's goals among other non-member nations.

Emphasizing the importance of outside aid, he compared the 13-member group to "someone who's sick, and he needs some medicine."

"That injection comes from the non-OPEC producers," he said.

Consumer prices show sharpest decline in more than 30 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tumbling gasoline and food costs pushed consumer prices down 0.4 percent last month, their steepest drop in more than three decades, the government said today.

The February decline was the largest since a 0.4 percent drop in November 1953, and was bested only by a 0.9 percent decline in July 1949. The new decline is the first decrease since December 1982, when consumer prices inched down by 0.1 percent.

The drop in the Consumer Price Index followed a modest 0.3 percent rise in January.

The major factor in the February decrease in the cost of living was the continuing dramatic drop in petroleum prices. Gasoline prices fell 5.9 percent in February, after a 0.1 percent increase the month before. Home heating oil costs dropped 10.1 percent, after dropping 1.1 percent in January.

February's decline, if continued for 12 straight months, would be equal to an annual decrease of 4.6 percent, said the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Food prices also declined in February, 0.7 percent, after increasing 0.2 percent the month before.

The decline in food prices was led by a 7.5 percent drop in the price of vegetables and fruits and a 1.4 percent decrease in the price of meats, poultry and fish.

Partially offsetting the declines in food prices was an increase in the price of coffee. Ground coffee increased 26.7 percent and instant coffee 15.1 percent, reflecting a continued drought in Brazil.

Apart from food and energy, consumer prices rose an overall 0.2 percent in February.

Gasoline price drops had already shown up in wholesale prices.

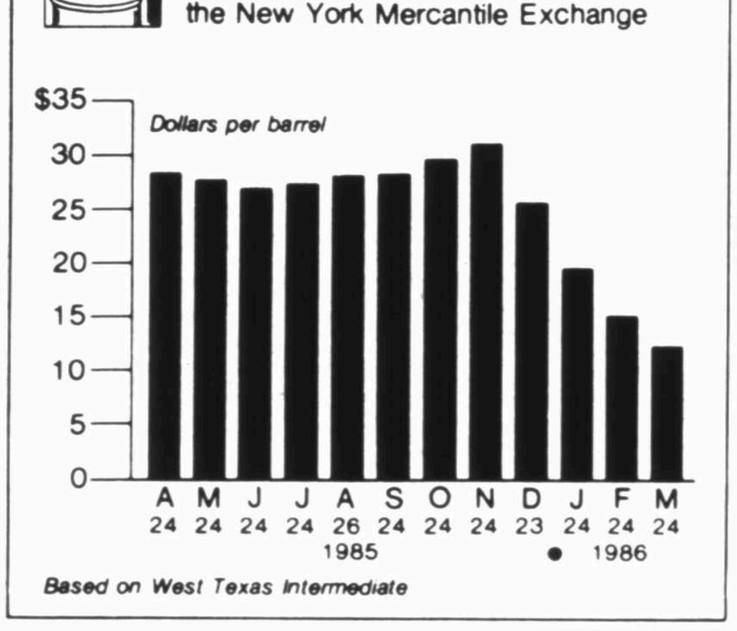

The producer price index for February, released earlier this month, showed a drop of 1.6 percent — the largest ever recorded and equivalent to an annual decline of 17.1 percent.

Economists said they anticipated that oil and gasoline prices would continue to decline before leveling off. Gasoline prices have already fallen below $1 a gallon in many parts of the country.

"They've got a couple months to fall at the retail level," said David Wyss, senior economist with Data Resources Inc., a forecasting service based in Lexington, Mass.

However, he said he anticipated that crude oil prices would soon level off at about $16 to $17 a barrel, up slightly from prices at $15 a barrel and below of recent weeks but still far below the prices of over $25 a barrel that prevailed just six months ago.

Wyss predicted that pump prices for self-serve unleaded gas would dip to an average of 90 to 95 cents a gallon, but go no further.

Midland's cost of living stays stable

From Staff Reports

Midland's cost of living remained stable during the month of February, increasing only 0.06 percent.

During the month, Midland registered increases in the cost of clothing and food at home as well as housing and medical expenses. According to ClayDesta figures, the cost of living has increased 0.1 percent during the past year.

Odessa showed a decrease of 0.04 percent for February, and a 1.5 percent increase over the last year, with a decrease by 0.1 percent in the last six months.

Transportation registered a decrease of 8 percent in Midland, with the decrease being attributed primarily to a fourth straight month of lower gas prices. Automobile maintenance and insurance was also reported lower. In the last year, Midland Transportation costs have gone down 20 percent with 12.7 percent coming in the last six months. Odessa transportation expenses fell 4.2 percent, where slightly higher automobile maintenance costs were offset by lower gasoline prices.

A 3.5 percent decrease in local residential utility bills was measured in Midland for the month of February. Odessans saw a 3.4 percent decline. This is the second month in a row these costs have gone down in both cities.

For the third consecutive month, Midland housing expenses have gone up. 2.4 percent is the percentage calculated for February and is the largest increase in the last three months. A second month of higher area rents was responsible for the trend. Odessa housing costs fell 0.2 percent after these costs went up for two months.

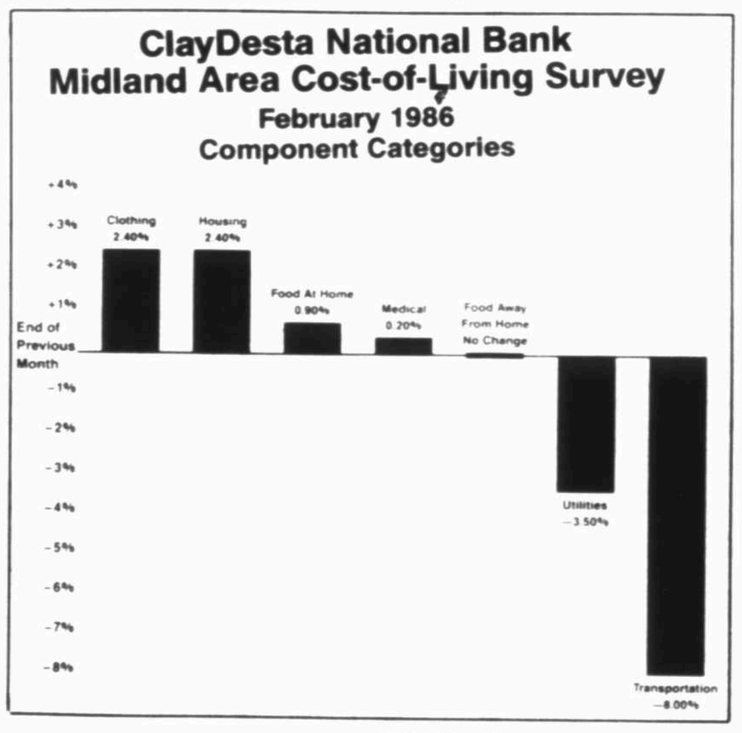

Both cities saw a 2.4 percent increase in the cost of clothing. Children's and women's apparel was higher in both cities, while men's clothing was lower in Midland.

Reversing January's trend, the cost of buying food to eat at home in Midland rose by 0.9 percent in February. For the fifth month in a row, Odessa grocery prices increased. The rate calculated was 2.8 percent. This was the largest single month increase since we began preparing these reports in February of 1985. Alcohol and produce prices decreased, while meat prices rose and shelf items remained stable.

Midland medical costs increased 0.2 percent. Slightly lower prices for non-prescription drugs were offset by higher costs for dental care. Following two months of increases, Odessa medical expenses decreased 3.6 percent in February.

Restaurant prices in Midland remained stable for the second consecutive month. These costs increased by 1.7 percent in December, 1985. The cost of dining out in Odessa rose 1.6 percent, following two months of decline.

The Midland/Odessa cost-of-living survey is compiled monthly by ClayDesta National Bank, Midland.

Orders for durable goods decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Orders to U.S. factories for durable goods fell 0.5 percent in February, the first decline since November, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said total orders for durable goods, items expected to last three or more years, dropped $600 million to $107.9 billion last month following a 0.9 percent January gain and a 3.8 percent December advance.

The weakness came from a huge 29.5 percent decline in orders for defense equipment, the largest decrease since a 57.4 percent drop last February.

Without the weakness in military orders, total orders would have risen 2.5 percent last month, the best performance excluding defense since a 3.5 percent December rise.

Defense orders fell by $3 billion to $7.3 billion, with the weakness attributed to a big drop in orders for aircraft.

OPEC's indecision may keep oil prices down

NEW YORK (AP) — Crude oil prices may level off in the $10- to $12-a-barrel range, at least until OPEC devises a way to restrain production and reduce the world oil glut — and that could take years, industry analysts say.

Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries oil ministers broke off a nine-day attempt at that goal Monday, triggering a nosedive in prices of crude and refined products.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, contracts for May delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, closed at $12.13, down from Friday's $13.94 close, but up from the low of $11 a barrel earlier Monday.

April contracts for unleaded gasoline slid from Friday's close of 44 cents a gallon to 40 cents; regular gas dropped to 39.55 cents from 44.24 cents; and heating oil closed at 47.69 cents, down more than a nickel from Friday's 52.83 close.

Analysts said that if crude oil prices fell below $10 to $12 a barrel, demand would eventually force those prices back up.

At the end of their Geneva conference, the OPEC ministers said they would meet again April 15.

In Los Angeles, the chairman of Chevron Corp., George Keller, predicted OPEC "will reach some sort of agreement on prices" by summer, and that crude would cost about $20 per barrel by year-end.

Several analysts, however, expressed doubt that an early resolution of the issue was likely.

"We could have $11, $12 oil for 1986 and 1987 — perhaps into 1988," said economist John Lichtblau, head of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation in New York.

In Washington, Philip Verleger, an analyst with Charles River Associates, a consulting firm, said he expected crude oil prices to range between $10 and $12 for a while, which he said would bring some cutbacks in production.

The Platinum Crisis (Free Video)

Jeopardizing This Nation's Oil Industry

The last time we ran this ad the price of platinum was around $300/ounce. Now it's over $400/ounce! Shearson-Lehman predicts over $450/ounce soon!

Last year the South African government warned that if the U.S. were to place an economic sanction against the Kruggerand, South Africa would stop selling platinum to the U.S.

Without platinum, the U.S. refining process will come to a stand-still. Plantinum is required in the processing of unleaded gasoline, aviation fuel and other refinery products, medicine and defense.

On Tuesday, October 2, President Reagan banned importation of the Krugerrand and loans from South Africa.

South Africa is the world's largest producer of platinum. 95% of the platinum used in the U.S. is imported from South Africa. The only other supplier is the U.S.S.R.

We predict that platinum prices (currently at $300 per ounce will reach between $430 up to the 1980 level of $1,100 per ounce in 1986.

OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Gaines strike pumps 538 barrels

From Staff Reports

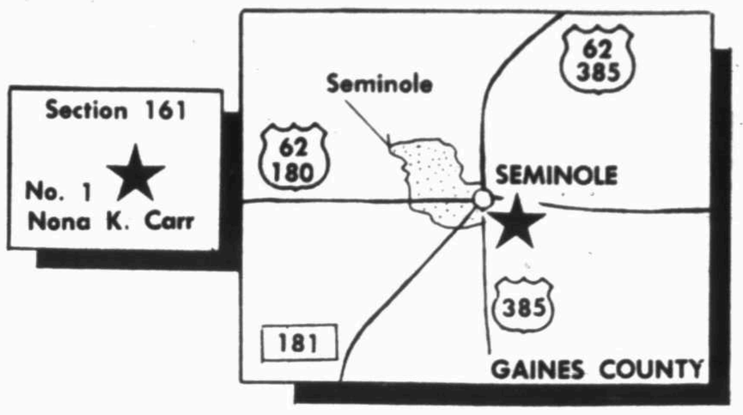

DAVIS OIL CO., New Orleans, La., completed a Woodford discovery located immediately east of the Seminole field in Gaines County with the testing of the No. 1 Nona K. Carr.

On potential test, the well pumped 538 barrels of 35.9 gravity crude and 130 barrels of water from perforations 12,108 to 12,123 ft., no treatment reported. Gas-oil ratio is 200:1.

Scheduled as a 12,850 ft. wildcat, the well reached a total depth of 12,520 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 12,190 ft. The well was plugged back to 12,185 ft.

Formation tops, on kelly bushing elevation of 3,284 ft., include the Strawn at 10,620 ft., Upper Mississippian at 11,010, Lower Mississippian at 11,472, and the Woodford at 11,980 ft. Pay was topped at 12,106 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from south and 2,173 ft. from east lines of Section 161, Block G, WTRR survey, one mile southeast of Seminole.

Tubb discovery opens field in Crane County

R.C. BANKS completed a Tubb discovery to open the Hamco field of Crane County.

Banks potentialed the No. 4 Lieurance to pump 25 barrels of 34 gravity crude and no water from perforations 3,853 to 4,001 ft. The interval was acidized with 200 gallons of 7.5 percent acid and 2,000 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid.

The well was drilled to 4,104 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,347 ft., include the San Andres at 2,357 ft., Glorieta at 3,060, Clearfork at 3,490,and the Tubb at 3,755 ft. Pay was topped at 3,853 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from northwest and 916 ft. from southwest lines of Section 12, Block 1, H&TC survey, 20 miles southwest of Crane.

Exxon completes new Fullerton producers

Development continues in the Fullerton field of Andrews County, with EXXON CORP., Midland, completing two new producers in the field. Both are in the Fullerton Clearfork Unit, both in Block A-32, PSL survey.

The No. 6128 Fullerton Clearfork Unit tested to pump 107 barrels of 41.8 gravity crude, 126 Mcfd and 487 barrels of water from perforations 6,784 to 7,241 ft.

Exxon completed the No. 6134 Fullerton Clearfork Unit to pump 75 barrels of 41.8 gravity crude, 27 Mcfd and 660 barrels of water from perforations 6,053 to 7,237 ft.

Snyder operator tests second Strawn strike

PATTERSON PETROLEUM, INC., Snyder, completed a second Strawn discovery in Scurry County, immediately east of an earlier discovery. Both wells are located in the Shannon Ranch field.

The No. 1 Von Roder tested to flow 110 barrels of 43 gravity crude and no water on a 12/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 320 psi. Production is from perforations 7,496 to 7,500 ft., which had been acidized with 1,000 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 800:1.

Permitted as an 8,500 ft. wildcat, Patterson drilled the well to 8,100 ft. The well was plugged back to 8,050 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 8,066 ft.

The well topped the Strawn at 7,238 ft., Mississippian at 7,976, and Ellenburger at 8,096 ft. on kelly bushing elevation of 2,504 ft. Pay was topped at 7,238 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from north and 933 ft. from west lines of Section 302, Block 97, H&TC survey, 14 miles northwest of Snyder.

Patterson completed an earlier discovery, the No. 1 Bullard to pump 77 barrels of 41 gravity crude and 434 barrels of water from perforations 7,514 to 7,518 ft. The firm has proposed a field name of Hardin (Strawn) for both discoveries.

NRM Corp. completes 25 barrel discovery

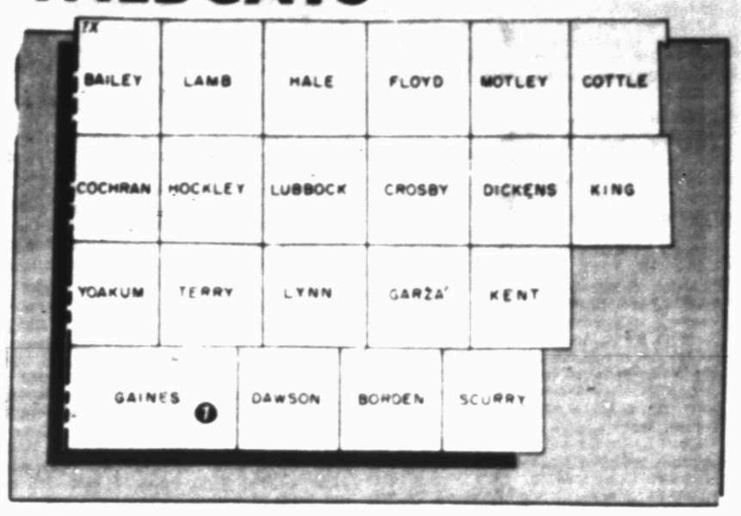

A location east of the BRC North field and south of the Rocker "A" South fields of Garza County is the site of an undesignated discovery.

NATURAL RESOURCES MANAGEMENT CORP. (NRM), Midland, finaled the No. 1 R. Clyde Miller to pump 25 barrels of 32 gravity crude and 70 barrels of water. Production is from open hole 8,109 to 8,113 ft., which had been acidized with 3,500 gallons of acid.

NRM drilled the 8,300 ft. wildcat to a total depth of 8,113 ft., with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 8,107 ft. Pay was topped at 8,109 ft.

Location is 2,173 ft. from south and 467 ft. from west lines of Section 41, Block 6, H&GN survey, 3.5 miles south of Justiceburg.

AGA addresses take-or-pay issue

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The American Gas Association recently told the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission that natural gas take-or-pay liability for interstate pipelines has reached such proportions that it demands immediate action by FERC.

AGA stated its analysis indicates that take-or-pay liability for pipelines has grown from $2.8 billion in 1984 to a projected $7.3 billion this year. Actual take-or-pay payments by pipelines to producers for unmarketable gas jumped from $52 million in 1977 to $1.15 billion in 1984.

"It is imperative that FERC provide both pipelines and producers sufficient flexibility to work out these take-or-pay problems.

"In order to created a climate favorable to the renegotiation of non-market-responsive contracts containing high take-or-pay requirements, the Commission should allow pipelines to require take-or-pay or price renegotiation as a precondition to open access carriage only for those producers having such non-market-responsive contracts," AGA said. Non-market-responsive contracts are clearly identified as those which do not contain an economic market-out provision exercisable by either party.

AGA also urged the FERC to rule that the payment of nonrecoupable take-or-pay payments violates the Natural Gas Policy Act's Title I when a producer is already collecting the maximum lawful price.

A tax break that will open your eyes.

Every morning.

When you contribute $2,000 to an InterFirst Individual Retirement Account by April 15th, you'll receive more than a tax break. We'll give you an AM/FM clock radio as a gift. And if that's what gets your attention, great. But we also feel you should know that an InterFirst IRA has quite a bit more to offer you than a clock radio.

A bonus rate that will really wake you up. To get your IRA off to a good start, InterFirst offers a special bonus rate when you invest in a fixed-rate IRA CD for one year or longer. Talk to an InterFirst banker for details.

You can choose from many options. You can also invest in a Money Market Savings IRA Account or a variable-rate IRA CD. With these investment options, you can make periodic deposits up to your maximum contribution. Additionally, if you enjoy trading stocks, bonds, government securities, zero-coupon bonds and options, you may want to consider managing your own Self-Directed IRA. Through InterFirst Brokerage Services, you can do so and save up to an average of 70% on brokerage commissions.

Opening an InterFirst IRA is less taxing. To open your InterFirst IRA, just step into your nearest InterFirst bank. You'll find experienced IRA counselors ready to help you choose the IRA plan that's right for you. It's that simple. And you'll get a tax break that's a real eye-opener, compliments of InterFirst. We believe in you.

Texas wants pipeline study

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department has joined in a suit to require more study of the environmental impact of a proposed heated, pressurized crude oil pipeline across Texas.

"The pipeline's potential environmental impacts have not been adequately evaluated," said Edwin L. Cox Jr., chairman of the commission, in a statement Monday.

The commission asked to become a party in the suit filed March 11 by Attorney General Jim Mattox that would require an environmental impact study before All-American Pipeline Co. is given a permit for the popeline from California to the Texas gulf coast.

"The department also objects to the company's apparent disregard for any efforts by other state agencies, elected officials and private citizens to obtain information about the project and to identify less sensitive routes," Cox said.

Cox said the commission was joining the suit because it had broad authority to protect the state's fish and wildlife resources, as well as state parks, recreation areas and wildlife management areas.

He said the pipeline would cross many streams and rivers but All-American has insisted that it is not required to obtain permits from the department in order to lay the pipeline underneath them.

WARNS

Yamani insisted there was no conflict between the price war strategy designed to achieve wider market share and the policy of seeking firmer prices. OPEC and the nonmember countries announced Friday they would seek to "gradually" re-establish a price of $28 for a barrel of oil.

"Both go together," he said. "When you establish a market share — not through competition but through cooperation — then this will bring stability to the market" and gradually increase prices.

He emphasized that Saudi Arabia, which has been blamed for causing price drops by nearly doubling its production to around 4.4 million barrels a day recently, had no plans to cut back.

He defended the Saudi policy of "netback" oil sales, by which crude oil prices are linked to the price of petroleum products. Some oil-producing nations bitterly oppose netback sales, arguing that in times of declining demand and prices they create a dangerous downward spiral.

But Yamani said Saudi Arabia was viewed by numerous customers as a "stable source of supply" and would have little trouble maintaining a high production level.

Oilman moves to buy CBS

NEW YORK (AP) — An offer to buy CBS Inc. apparently has been made by Marvin Davis, the Denver millionaire and former owner of 20th Century Fox Film Corp., The New York Times today quoted sources as saying.

The Wall Street sources said they were "70 to 75 percent certain" the oilman had made the offer to buy the entertainment and communications company, which fought off a separate takeover attempt last year.

Davis was understood to be in California for the Academy Awards ceremony on Monday and could not be reached for comment, the Times said.

"CBS does not comment on takeover rumors," company spokesman William E. Lilley III said today.

The sources were quoted as saying they had checked the report with others close to the situation and maintained that Davis had made a very friendly offer, which one executive described as a "quasi-bear hug."

That meant the offer would be subject to approval of CBS' board of directors and the implication was that if CBS' directors were not interested, Davis would drop the offer, the Times quoted the sources as saying.

The sources said Davis told CBS he would be willing to pay more than $150 a share. At $150 a share, CBS' 23.4 million shares would be worth $3.5 billion.

INTRODUCING THE NEW COMPAQ PORTABLE II

30% smaller. 17% lighter. 400% faster.

So small, so light, and so fast it defines a new industry standard. From the same company that set the standard—COMPAQ.® It's the new COMPAQ PORTABLE II™. Like the original COMPAQ Portable it's rugged, reliable, expandable, and compatible with hardware made for IBM® Personal Computers. Plus it's even more portable. It's 3 to 5 times faster than its namesake. And it runs all the popular business software written for IBM® Personal Computers.

Never before has a computer this small been capable of so much. The advanced 80286 chip provides the COMPAQ PORTABLE II with tremendous speed. Innovative design provides for your present and future needs.

Exchange data stored on diskettes with other compatible computers. Add an optional 10-Megabyte fixed disk drive system and up to a remarkable 4.1 Megabytes of RAM.

Because the most popular interfaces are built in, there's also room for adding up to two expansion boards for more advanced needs.

For your service and support needs, call on us—your Authorized COMPAQ Computer Dealer. We're as uncompromising as the COMPAQ Computers we sell. Which is one more reason why people who know personal computers know they can rely on COMPAQ.

Stock Market Loses

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned downward today in a selloff that analysts attributed to tension over the outbreak of fighting between U.S. and Libyan forces and growing nervousness over the aging bull market.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which at one point was down more than 10 points, dropped 7.79 to 1,775.14 by noon on Wall Street.

Declining issues outpaced advancers by about 9 to 5 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts said many investors already believed the stock market was overextended following its sharp runup of the past several months, and overdue for a prolonged slide. The tensions stemming from the outbreak of fighting in Libya combined with underlying uncertainties to trigger a selloff, analysts said.

CBS rose 3⅛ to 149⅛. Published reports said that Denver oilman Marvin Davis had offered to buy CBS, whose stock had risen 5¾ points on Monday.

Oil stocks fell. Exxon was down ⅜ to 54⅝, Amoco fell ⅞ to 58⅛, Texaco fell ⅜ to 28¾, Mobil was down 1 to 28½ and Chevron fell ¾ to 36¼.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries adjourned its meeting in Geneva on Monday without reaching agreement on a plan to boost world oil prices.

Eastern Airlines was unchanged at 8⅝ and led the NYSE most active list with 2.55 million shares changing hands, including a 2 million share block at that price.

Big Board volume was 63.82 million shares by noon on Wall Street, compared with 70.89 million shares at the same time Monday.

The NYSE's composite index fell 0.65 to 134.89. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 0.87 to 266.85.

Profits made on bonds counts as capital gain

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Two municipal bonds I owned reached maturity last year and I redeemed them at their face values. I had bought one at a premium price over its face value and the other at a discount price under it face value.

I am told I cannot take a capital loss for the bond purchased at a premium and that I must report a capital gain for the bond purchased at a discount.

Is this correct? If so, it seems the IRS profits both ways.

Doyle

A. It's correct. Although interest from municipal bonds — those issued by states and their political subdivisions — is not subject to federal income tax, the profit from redeeming a municipal bond at a higher price than you paid is taxable as a capital gain.

Assuming you owned the bond you bought at a discount for more than six months, the profit is a long-term capital gain — only 40 percent of which is taxable.

You can't take a capital loss on a municipal bond purchased at a premium price and redeemed at its lower face value. The theory behind this is that you paid a premium price for that bond, because it paid higher interest than municipals of similar quality available in the marketplace at face value.

Q. In January, I purchased a 14.625 percent $10,000 U.S. Treasury note, through my broker. Because of its high interest, this note trades at a premium price and I paid $11,600 for it. When the note matures in January 1989, the government will pay me the note's $10,000 face value. Will I be able to take a $1,600 capital loss for the premium I paid on my 1989 income tax return?

A. Unless the rules change between now and 1989, you can handle it that way. Under the present tax code, the difference between a premium price paid for a note, bond or other debt security paying taxable interest and the lower redemption price can be reported as a capital loss.

However, there is another — usually more advantageous way — to handle this. You can amortize that $1,600 premium over the period of time you own that note and take a tax deduction for each year until it matures.

Here's how that complicated arrangement works.

Let's say you bought that note exactly three years before its maturity date. Divide the $1,600 premium by three and you see you can amortize $533.33 of the premium per year until the note's due date.

You do that by taking an itemized deduction of roughly $533.33 for amortization on your 1986, '87 and '88 income tax returns. It won't work out exactly that way, because you'll be entitled to less than a full year's amortization deduction for '86 and a small amortization deduction for '89.

The amortization has to be prorated over every day you own the note. That calculation usually requires assistance from a good accountant.

Even though the amortization method can be bothersome, it can pay off in tax savings. At tax time, itemized deductions normally are more valuable than long-term capital losses.

Q. I bought $20,000 of U.S. Treasury notes in early June 1895. Since then, I have heard nothing about my notes, which are supposed to pay interest twice a year. What can I do about this?

A. If the notes are registered in your name, you should have received a semiannual interest check by this time. Write to Claims and Correspondence Branch, Treasury Department, Bureau of the Public Debt, Washington, D.C. 20226.

If you bought the notes through a brokerage firm or bank, the notes might be registered in the name of the brokerage or bank. When things are handled that way, the interest goes to the brokerage or bank and is credited to your account.

In that case, check with the brokerage or bank. And, if you want the interest checks to come directly to you, give instructions to have the note registered in your name.

Permian Basin's first PBS station goes on the air

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Monday morning marked the birth of a station for KOCV-TV, the Permian Basin's very own public television channel.

"We started at exactly 8:30 a.m. with Farm Day," said Chief Engineer Bob Borum. "Everything is working."

Actually, KOCV first appeared on UHF channel 36 last week, when Borum began testing the station's equipment. But Monday was the first official day of broadcasting, at least as far as the Federal Communications Commission is concerned.

"This has been a lot of fun," said a harried but happy John McCarroll, who runs the station for its licensed owner, Odessa College.

McCarroll used to be an OC journalism professor, and is still chairman of the school's Broadcasting Department. He said the college began applying for the license several years ago when it looked like local cable companies would drop KERA, the Dallas-Fort Worth PBS station.

A spokesman for Times Mirror Cable of Midland, which still runs KERA on channel 13, said this morning the company hadn't decided whether to add KOCV to its programming.

But McCarroll said local cable operators are expected to add KOCV by June 1.

"They all have said they're going to pick us up," he said.

If they then drop KERA, as expected, it would be bad news for fans of Dr. Who and other British imports, which KOCV will not carry.

"We won't be able to afford to do the British shows," said Gloria Munson, the new station's program director.

KOCV will be showing Sesame Street and Mr. Rogers' Neighborhood in the morning, various instructional shows in the afternoon and the familiar PBS programming at night, Ms. Munson said.

The MacNeil-Lehrer NewsHour will air at 6 p.m., she said, and such PBS favorites as Masterpiece Theatre, American Playhouse, Austin City Limits and Firing Line can still be found on the schedule.

Locally produced programming is also in the plans — "I just don't know when," Ms. Munson said.

Money is the problem. McCarroll hopes local subscribers and corporate sponsors will eventually supply half his budget, but right now he can't afford to produce his own shows.

"The ideal is 40-50 percent from contributions," he said. "In the beginning, we're hoping to get about 25 percent" of the station's $408,000 budget.

One Midland man has already sent in a $50 contribution. "And we haven't asked for a penny," McCarroll said.

The station hopes to sign up charter subscribers for $50 apiece, and eventually will produce a local version of that perennial PBS fund-raising tool, the pledge week.

If viewers support the station with contributions, KOCV will then try its hand at local programming. But even without such programs, having a locally produced PBS station is an advantage for the area, McCarroll said.

"We will be more responsive to what the people want out here" when selecting programs from the PBS package, he said.

At the moment, all the station's programs are beamed from a PBS transmitter near Washington, D.C., to an orbiting satellite, and then to KOCV's receiver — a trip of 44,000 miles, said Borum.

The station's newly constructed, 317-foot tower then sends the signals from the Odessa College campus north to Andrews, west and south to the edge of the Cap Rock, and as far east as Stanton, the chief engineer said.

According to McCarroll, there are probably more than 250,000 people within the station's range right now, and those numbers would increase considerably if cable operators in Seminole, Fort Stockton, Pecos and Monahans decide to add KOCV to their schedule.

As a non-commercial station, KOCV wouldn't benefit from the increased viewership the way a commercial television station would.

"We don't think like commercial TV — we're here to serve the public," McCarroll said. "Obviously, the more people we can reach, the more people we can serve."

Change of venue order filed in Sprayberry trial

From Staff Reports

An order granting a change of venue in the attempted-sexual-assault trial of Charlie Sprayberry was filed Monday in Midland's 238th District Court.

As previously agreed by defense attorney John W. Smith of Odessa and Special Prosecutor Andy Shuval of Austin, the trial will be moved to Abilene April 15.

The Midland justice of the peace is accused of attempting to force his former secretary to perform oral sex on him while they were riding in his car on April 26, 1984.

Smith submitted a motion to move the proceedings to Taylor County because Sprayberry's first trial received considerable attention from local newspapers and television stations, possibly jeopardizing his right to a fair trial.

The first trial ended with a hung jury Feb. 20.

Judge James H. Clack of Andrews signed the order last week, but it wasn't filed at the Midland District Clerk's Office until Monday. Clack is hearing the case for Midland's 238th District Judge Vann Culp, who excused himself.

Jury selection will begin April 15 at 9 a.m. in the 104th District courtroom at the Taylor County Courthouse, according to Carolyn Dycus, court administrator for 104th District Judge Billy John Edwards.

Absentee voting will end April 1

From Staff Reports

Voters who won't be home April 5 to cast their ballot in the local elections have until 5 p.m. Tuesday, April 1, to vote absentee.

The Elections Administration's headquarters is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, except for Good Friday, according to Betty Calvert, elections administrator.

The April 5 election will include the mayor's race, Midland City Council places 3 and 4, Midland College board, Midland Hospital District and Greenwood Independent School District board.

By Friday, 330 persons had cast their ballots in person and 50 by mail, according to Ms. Calvert.

To vote, a person must have registered at least 30 days prior to the election.

For persons wanting to vote in the May 3 primary, last day to register is April 3, she said.

Farmers market set to open by summer

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Cotton-poor farmers and other tillers of the soil will be selling farm-fresh fruits and vegetables in the 10-county Permian Basin Farmers Market by this summer.

"We're trying to save the family farm," said Midland County Agricultural Agent Earnest Kiker, "and to add cash flow to their (farmers') budgets." He estimated that the market annually would generate more than $350,000.

The market is to open in Midland and Odessa by early June, said Kiker and Midland horticulturist Guy Richards.

"There are 33 of them (farmers markets) in the state," Richards told the Midland County Commissioners' Court on Monday, "and every one of them is successful." Richards, who is one of 10 market directors, said successful farmers markets are operating in such metropolitan areas as Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston, El Paso, Lubbock and Austin.

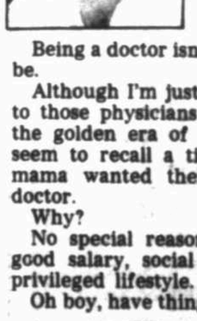

The competitive market will be set up in the barns on the Ector County Coliseum grounds in Odessa on Fridays and Saturdays and either in Dellwood Mall or in the Midland County Exhibit Building in Midland on two weekdays.

"Most definitely, we will be opened by June 1," Kiker said.

Prices will be competitive, as producers will be competing with each other for sales. "There will be no price setting," he said.

Kiker said that farmers and other producers have been attending Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX) seminars on vegetable growing and are primed for entering the produce market. Although the farmers market would be a "self-run deal," said Kiker, the concept is being promoted by TAEX, which has provided educational information, guidance, organization and direction in the markets' early stages.

Medical degree no longer ticket to healthy income

Being a doctor isn't what it used to be.

Although I'm just a kid compared to those physicians who remember the golden era of medicine, I too, seem to recall a time when every mama wanted their son to be a doctor.

Why?

No special reason, other than a good salary, social prestige and a privileged lifestyle.

Oh boy, have things ever changed.

A recent Forbes article outlined, very effectively, the rise and fall of medicine as a much sought after career.

The article, written by Ellen Paris, described the pre-status days of the physicians, from 1950 to 1965, when "Norman Rockwellesque" doctors still drove Buicks instead of Porsches and Mercedes and made house calls. Fledgling physicians were joining the ranks at the snail pace of two percent annually.

Meanwhile, she added, demand and the ability to pay for medical care were increasing at eight percent a year.

The law of supply and demand took off, she noted, with doctor's incomes rising from $16,000 in 1955 to $29,000 in 1965, $58,500 in 1975 and today's $100,000 plus figures.

Little wonder, surmises the article, that the per capita of doctors also took an upward spiral, with a doubling of the number of practicing physicians since 1965.

The result? Too many doctors, according to a recent Peat, Marwick, Mitchell study which warns there will be a surplus of between 70,000 and 185,000 physicians by 1990.

Besides the ever-growing doctor glut, other extraneous factors are making the promised picture of prosperity pretty poor indeed, according to the article.

There are many reasons, but chief among them is Uncle Sam.

A few years ago the governmental forces behind Medicare decided that they were tired of shelling out great sums of money with no questions asked. And so they began to ask questions. And stopped shelling out money.

The result was the infamous DRGs or Diagnosis Related Groups, an oversimplification of how to put a price on the failing faculties of the nation's elderly.

What was it? A list of 464 treatable conditions, each with a price tag. When a Medicare recipient went into the hospital, their coverage was pre-determined. Never mind that they could develop other illnesses while in the hospital, such as pneumonia, which would run their tab sky high.

This move by the government to reduce health costs to taxpayers, worked, despite much grumbling and soon other groups, including state Medicaid-type plans and private insurers joined in the belt-tightening parade.

Those belts are being tightened especially among physicians who now must see to it their patients don't overstay their welcome (and coverage) at the hospital. Doctors must now, besides making the morning rounds, battle over reams of bureaucratic paperwork — DRG forms — in order to justify their wise and expensive treatment.

Another thing about being a doctor in 1986 is lawsuits.

One local doctor who is getting out of the business very shortly and going for an 8 to 5 job, estimates some doctors pay up to $80,000 per year for malpractice insurance.

It seems people don't blame God anymore if their baby comes out with two left feet. They want results. Perfect results, that is.

If the expensive entry into doctorhood (four years of med school at Stanford is $65,760 now), the overabundance of such loan-burdened neophytes, the DRG hassles and the promise of expensive litigation if there is (heaven forbid) a mistake, is not enough to scare away potential healers, then the spread of group medicine as a salve for the wounded profession is leaving many with telltale scars.

One type of group practice, like Sheets Eye Clinic in Odessa, is branching into other cities and offering outpatient services, fully covered by Medicare. At least one local physician has responded by opening an emergency clinic to offset the expected loss of patients who will find that while their Medicare covers a decreasing percentage of standard hospital stays for such things as eye surgery, it fully covers and eagerly so, a brief stay at the outpatient clinic for the very same procedure.

Other groupings of physicians are Health Maintenance Organizations and Preferred Provider Organizations which offer discount medicine to large employers. In both, patients are encouraged to go to a certain physician or group of physicians by their employers.

The result? The physicians who are not a part of the groups have a decreasing market of patients. Those who join the groups must see more patients to make the same amount of profit as before, since the fee is less.

Midland doctors could soon be feeling the effects of the PPO, should an attempt by a group of local doctors and Midland Memorial Hospital to form such an organization materialize.

The result of all these upheavals in the medical industry is a gloomier future for physicians, less earnings, more debts and more hassles all the way around.

Underneath this mess, however, lies an unbudging maxim, the Hippocratic oath, which for most physicians, remains the Golden Rule of medicine. Their duty, quite simply, is to treat the sick.

If local doctors haven't escaped the ills of a changing profession, neither have they avoided their promise to look after the ill.

Many would like to believe the majority of physicians are money-hungry, sports car enthusiasts, whose sole ambition is to charge a higher fee and turn a quicker patient.

My brief view of Midland's medical community has allowed me to see another side. The majority of men and women I meet who have chosen a Doctorate of Medicine, are in it because they do honestly care.

There's a few Porsches in the driveways and money stashed in securities, I'm sure, but most are genuinely concerned about their patients and their profession. And their oath.

Children are picked up from their school and taken to the Washington YMCA where the fun and activities begin. The program is from the time school lets out until 6 p.m. For more information, call 682-0533.

The branch is now open on Sundays from 3 p.m. to 7 p.m. and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Members and guests may participate in a variety of activities including basketball, weight training.

Registration is now going on for Washington YMCA's Pre-School Gymnastics Class. The class is for children ages 3, 4 and 5 years old. The children learn tumbling, balancing skills, hand-eye coordination and social skills by meeting new friends and have lots of fun. Classes are Tuesdays and Thursdays from 9:30 a.m. to 10:15 a.m. The cost is $20 per session which lasts four weeks. The next session starts April 1. For more information, call 682-0533 or 684-8392.

Midlander in critical condition after mishap

From Staff Reports

A 28-year-old Midland woman remained listed in critical condition this morning in Midland Memorial Hospital after being injured in a Sunday morning traffic accident on the Garden City Highway.

Sabrina Huse Pyle, Route 1, Box 96R, suffered head and abdominal injuries and several fractured limbs about 8:30 a.m. when a truck heading in the opposite direction crossed the median and struck her 1980 Buick, according to Department of Public Safety reports.

Her 3-year-old son Casey and his 1-year-old sister Callie were listed in fair condition this morning, an MMH spokeswoman said. The truck's driver, 22-year-old Robert Randal Flora of Odessa, was treated for minor injuries and released Sunday.

Ms. Pyle was driving east and Flora was driving west when the accident occurred about a mile east of Midland. Flora told investigators he was swerving to avoid another vehicle, according to DPS reports.

In other reports from local law-enforcement agencies, the Midland Fire Marshal's Office was looking into a fire of undetermined origin which ignited Monday in an empty 18-wheel trailer.

The fire in the trailer parked at the M-System store at 400 N. Midland was reported at 10 p.m. It was extinguished with about 200 gallons of water, according to fire reports.

Jerry Snow, 1 Mary Circle, reported the theft of two portable buildings taken sometime between Friday and Monday, according to Sheriff's Office reports. No value was available for the buildings.

A 1976 Subaru valued at about $3,000 was reported stolen by Brian Stewart from a home on the northeast corner of county roads 1309 and 123. The car was taken sometime between March 17 and Monday, reports said.

Man seeks WWII glider pilots

From Staff Reports

A Midland man is looking for former military glider pilots who flew in Operation Varsity during World War II.

Monday marked the 41st anniversary of that event, which was the largest single-day airborne operation of World War II across the Rhine River into Wesel, Germany.

W.D. Knickerbocker, 2010 Douglas, noted the mission involved 2,937 aircraft — 1,346 of them gliders and 1,591 power planes. More than a million American and British troops were massed along the Rhine River, ready to cross into Wesel. The Nazis had 10 divisions and an estimated 100 tanks and self-propelled artillery within a 20-mile radius of the target area.

The sky train carried 17,000 paratroopers, glider infantrymen and their artillery, gasoline and supplies.

Knickerbocker noted there were only 5,000 American glider pilots, all of them volunteers.

Anyone who was involved in that operation or who was a glider pilot during WWII should contact Knickerbocker at 682-2242.

Candidate Fish names strategies

From Staff Reports

City Council candidate for Place 3, Kelly Fish, announced three strategies in building "a bridge to a better tomorrow" during a briefing this morning.

Fish is being opposed by Lawrence Connolly. Both are seeking the seat being vacated by Bart Hotchkiss.

Fish's three-part proposal is based on privatization, economic diversification and volunteerism.

The candidate explained privatization as the "realignment of functions performed by the public sector to the private sector. I believe our city government must aggressively explore the cost-saving opportunities afforded by allowing the private sector to deliver many services currently performed by the city."

Services suggested for turning over to the private segment were asphalt paving, janitorial duties, traffic signal maintenance, street cleaning, refuse collection and lawn and street tree maintenance.

Efforts to attract business from the outside are important, said Fish.

"But our goal of creating continued growth and a more stable economic base cannot be achieved by external marketing alone."

Fish suggested looking at Midland's assets, such as educated people, financial resources, expansive land and Midland Regional Airport. The airport, he contended, should be made an international port of entry and enhanced by a Foreign Trade Zone.

Capital improvements can come through volunteerism and examples of that are Midland Community Theatre, Windlands Community Park, Midland Soccer Complex and Centennial Plaza, according to the candidate.

MARKET

Seminars have been conducted by TAEX specialists, including Charles Stichler, agronomist; Joe Henggeler, irrigation engineer; Dr. Charles Allen, entomologist; Dr. Harold Kaufman, plant pathologist; and Dr. Austin Stockton, horticulturist."

"So, we're excited about the farmers market," Kiker said. "We're hoping this will be added cash in their (producers') pockets," Kiker said, "and will help the farmers keep the family farms."

The Midland County commissioners supported the market concept.

"I think we're all happy to help them (the producers) get off the ground," said Commissioner C. Wallace "Wally" Craig.

"If the mechanics can be worked out to everyone's satisfaction," said Commissioner Durward Wright, "the farmers market will be a tremendous (economic) boost (to farmers) at a time when a boost is needed."

The sandy loam soil in Midland County is well suited for vegetable growing, but "Our most immediate problem is (the lack of rainfall)," Kiker said. However, he noted that most produce growers would be watering their fruits and vegetables by drip-irrigation and sprinklers.

"We're going to run this thing year-round," Kiker said. "This is going to be a year-round farmers market."

All told, 70 producers from 10 counties are members of the market, which is to be incorporated as a tax-free organization. Producers would include homeowners, cotton farmers, pecan producers "and everything in between," Richards said. Counties in the market include Andrews, Ector, Glasscock, Howard, Martin, Midland, Pecos, Reagan, Reeves and Upton.

Fall and winter produce would include snow peas, broccoli, Brusels sprouts, onions, cabbage, turnips, beans, carrots, greens and lettuce.

Spring and summer produce would include tomatoes, potatoes, black-eyed peas, pinto beans, corn, egg plants, peppers, okra, sweet potatoes, watermelons, cantaloupes.

Fruits to be marketed would include apples, peaches, pears, plums, blackberries and pecans.

"It's going to take a couple of years for producers to learn to stagger their crops" for optimum results, Richards said.

Of the 70 producers in the farmers market, 23 are in Midland County. Members of the farmers market must grow at least 50 percent of what they sell, Richards said. However, noted Kiker, commercial peddlers "will be welcome" to set up booths in the market after members have had opportunities to set up their produce booths.

League of Women Voters to hold Candidates Forum

From Staff Reports

Midland League of Women Voters will sponsor a Candidates Forum at 7:30 p.m. today in the lecture hall of the new Health Sciences Building at Midland College.

Candidates for mayor, City Council, Midland College board and Midland Hospital District board will be present. After opening statements from each candidate, written questions will be taken from the audience and the candidates will respond to these.

On the ballot for mayor are Steve Davidson, Barbara Harris and Carroll Thomas; for City Council place 3, Lawrence Connolly and Kelly Fish; place 4, Robert Rendall.

Campaigning for the MC board are, place 1, Al Langford and Steve Kiser; place 2, Fred Wright; and place 3, John Cooper and Hugh White. Two positions on the hospital board are up for election and seeking those are Pat Estes and Margaret Purvis.

The forum is open to the public and all voters are encouraged to attend.

The League of Women Voters is a non-partisan organization open to all citizens of voting age. The League works to promote political responsibility by encouraging active participation of citizens in government.

Archer disagrees with Contra vote

From Staff Reports

Van Archer, candidate for the 21st District congressional seat in the May 3 Republican primary, said Monday at the Midland Kiwanis Club he was disappointed in the Contra aid vote in the U.S. House.

"Without continued aid the freedom fighters will be forced to fend for themselves against Soviet supplied tanks and helicopter gunships," he said. "The thousands of brave men and women who believe in freedom for their people and who have taken to the countryside to fight against the Communists will be abandoned by the United States if this vote stands. Without our help, they will be slaughtered."

Archer, a former San Antonio city councilman, said he thinks the aid package will be reconsidered and will pass the next time. "In the meantime, however, our friends around the world lose confidence in the United States as a stable ally.

"Congress must openly and unequivocally declare that no foreign power will be allowed to use foreign or proxy troops to threaten our neighbors," he added. "What is ultimately at stake is whether the United States will sit back and allow the Soviet Union to turn Nicaragua into a military and terrorist base directed against America, the Caribbean and the Panama Canal."

Also seeking the Republican nomination for the seat being vacated by Tom Loeffler are Midland Mayor G. Thane Akins, Henry Gandy of Kerrville and Lamar Smith and Jeff Wentworth, both of San Antonio.

MC groups present spring concert

Midland College's combined College Chorale and Chamber Choir are presenting a joint spring concert at 8 p.m. today in the Allison Fine Arts Center Auditorium.

Among the evening's program will be "J'Aime Mon Dieu" by Renaissance composer Guillaume Costeley; "Christ Lag in Todesbanden" by Baroque composer Johann Kuhnau; and "Aleluia" by contemporary composer Randall Thompson. Also scheduled for presentation are popular folk songs "Wade in the Water" and "Black is the Color."

Dr. Michael Jordan, coordinator of vocal music, is conductor of the chorale. Pianist for the ensemble will be Shari Weiner, staff accompanist at the college.

The concert is free.

Funds raised for Bell employee

From Staff Reports

Bell Telephone Community Relations Team, a group of volunteer employees, raised over $2,000 for fellow employee Art Romero, a repeater technician.

Romero was injured in a one-car auto accident in November 1985 and remains in a coma. In January, he was moved to a Dallas hospital.

The money was raised to help defray some of the expenses connected with the lengthy medical care.

St. Paul's offers Easter production

From Staff Reports

St. Paul's United Methodist Church, 4501 Thomason Drive, is planning a children's production of Dallas Holmes' "His Last Days" on Maudy Thursday.

The outdoor show will be staged at 8 p.m. Thursday. Directed by Pat Bingham and March Garrison, the play is being performed by about 15 5th, 6th and 7th graders.

The public is invited to attend.

Odessa man charged in murder

RAPID CITY, S.D. (AP) — An Odessa man was charged Monday with one count of first-degree murder and two counts of attempted murder in the Saturday morning shootings of three people.

Bond was not set Monday for Jimmy D. Weatherford, an unemployed carpenter. Weatherford requested a court-appointed attorney on Monday.

Angela L. Koricanek of Odessa was found dead in a Rapid City home early Saturday morning. Two others, Talia Anne Haefs, 23, and David M. Engelbrecht, 25, both of Rapid City, were injured from gunshot wounds.

Weatherford said he was married to Ms. Koricanek.

A .22-caliber handgun was seized as evidence, according to reports.

Ms. Haefs and Engelbrecht were listed in serious condition Monday evening at Rapid City Regional Hospital. Ms. Haefs reportedly had a bullet lodged in her spine, said authorities.

Weatherford was charged with first-degree murder of Ms. Koricanek and the attempted murder of Ms. Haefs and Engelbrecht.

Ms. Haefs was found next to Engelbrecht, who was shot in the head. Ms. Koricanek's body was found on a stairway connecting the upper floor of the house to the basement.

Democratic candidates forum set

From Staff Reports

A forum for candidates seeking the Democratic nomination in the 21st District congressional race will highlight today's meeting of the Midland County Young Democrats. The meeting will start at 7:30 p.m. in the second floor conference room of RepublicBank First National Midland.

Candidates on the ballot are Pete Snelson and Terry Lowry, both of Midland, and David Hunsicker and Joe Sullivan, both of San Antonio.

All four candidates or a representative from each campaign will attend the meeting. Each person will be given an opportunity to make a presentation and be available to answer questions.

Crime Stoppers seeks information on rapist

This week Crime Stoppers is seeking information on a series of rapes which have occurred in southwest Odessa over the past two years.

The rapist usually strikes between 3 a.m. and 5 a.m. He enters the residence through an unlocked window or door, then quickly gains control of his victim by threatening her with a knife. After the rape, he tells his victim not to move for a period of time, then leaves.

He has been described as a Hispanic male, 18-25 years old, standing five-feet-five to five-feet-seven inches tall and weighing between 150 and 170 pounds. He has a stocky build and short, dark, wavy hair which he wears to the middle of his ears. The rapist, who usually wears a blue bandana over his nose and mouth and a knit ski cap over his head, speaks with a strong Mexican accent and some broken English.

Crime Stoppers will pay $1,000, this week only, for information leading to the arrest and felony indictment of the person or persons responsible for these rapes. Crime Stoppers will pay cash rewards for other felony crimes. Call 694-TIPS in Midland or 333-TIPS in Odessa, and remember callers need not reveal their identities.

The Shoe Gallery specializes in narrow and slim sizes

The staff at The Shoe Gallery, located in San Miguel Square, have ordered and are expecting in for fall, a wider range of shoes in more sizes, such as AA, AAA and AAAA widths. Stop by, have a cup of coffee and look over the latest arrivals.

Have you ever gone into a store and found just the shoe you wanted but of course, the salesman told you: "I'm so sorry, ma'am. We're completely out of your particular size."

Then ladies, your problems are solved. The Shoe Gallery, located in San Miguel Square, carries a wide range of women's shoes in every size and width imagineable.

"Through the years with our store in Andrews and now here, we have realized that more and more women wear narrow and slim sizes, such as AA, AAA and AAAA widths. To fulfill those needs, we have ordered and are expecting in for the fall season a wider range of shoes in more sizes and in many styles, including sizes 4-11, also in the slim and narrow widths," said Sue Gibson, co-owner of The Shoe Gallery.

Pat Kolb, the other half of the duo, explained that she and her mother have enjoyed being in business in San Miguel Square. "So many times, our customers will come in and have a cup of coffee with us and just browse. We invite everyone to come by and visit while they look."

While the customer is visiting, the two women know that she will enjoy seeing the many new arrivals in such popular brands as Connie, Onyx, Palizzio, SAS, Selby, 9 West and Andiamo.

"Our customers really enjoyed the Connie's brand for their comfort and stylish practicality; and, for a long time they were quite hard to find in this area so of course, we brought them back," smiled Sue.

"But in the Connie brand as well as SAS and several others, if we don't have the particular shoe a customer wants in stock, we will certainly order it. Normally, we can have it in for them in just a few days," continued Pat.

Other "hot" items The Shoe Gallery carries are the Pro Ked Champion Oxford in several fashionable colors in sizes 4 - 10 1/2 and many styles of aerobic shoes. "The Keds are so popular that we are continuously ordering more," Pat explained.

The next time you think you're a hard-to-fit gal, go by The Shoe Gallery, have a cup of coffee with Sue and Pat and just see if they can't find "just the right fit" for you.

The Oak Leaf Bookstore, an interesting place tofind unique and popular books with a special touch

Judy Hubbard, owner of The Oak Leaf Bookstore, in Oak Ridge Square, stands before her newest arrivals in religious books, perfect gifts for Easter.

The Oak Leaf, a general trade bookstore, nestled within the heart of Oak Ridge Square, is an interesting place to browse for unique books and popular books as well.

"We do carry many types of books on various topics including travel, fiction, a wide array of children's books and coffee table books," said Judy Hubbard, store owner. "For those desiring a book 'out of print', I also have access to a network of individuals who can locate the book desired."

But more than that, Judy "specializes in personalizing" items.

"We carry many gift items for all ages. A lot of my customers enjoy choosing from our wide assortment of calling cards, stationary and personalized gifts for family and friends. The calling cards make especially-convenient gift enclosures and are quite reasonably priced," explained Judy.

Many of these pieces are printed in the store by Judy with a very good selection from several different type styles, with normally, a two-day service.

One popular gift item, Judy said, especially for Easter and graduation is a personalized Bible. "It makes a very special gift for any occasion though," she added.

And the personal touch Judy applies to business practices does not stop here. As a free service to preschool children through third graders, Molly Todd, a retired schoolteacher, enjoys relating exciting and wondrous stories to children right in the store during a Story Time session, in order to acquaint these youngsters with the world of books. "Story Time" meets the second Tuesday of each month from 3:30 to 4 pm.

"We will be meeting until April 8 for this schoolyear. But we will begin the sessions again in September with the new school year. I do invite mothers to bring their young ones to the sessions," Judy said.

During the monthly event, the ladies will enjoy browsing through her selection of cookbooks, children's books and religious books, a category she enjoys continually expanding. Just arrived is Amy Grant's new book, "Amy Grant's Heart to Heart Bible Stories".

Other gift items that many of her customers delight in selecting to give for special occasions include book lights, bookmarkers, bookends, lap desks, photo albums of all sizes, calendars, a wide assortment of all-occasion cards and a dictionary/Thesauraus set which can be personalized.

And to aid the student in gaining a broader interpretation in assigned reading for an upcoming literature final, Judy has in stock many of the Cliff Notes from the classics as well as popular authors.

So, the next time you want the latest best seller or a special gift item for that certain someone, remember The Oak Leaf Bookstore.

Judy Griffin, owner of Paint and Palette, enjoys teaching art classes to young pupils. Classes for this age group are scheduled at various times, four times each week.

Paint and Palette, fine arts shop at the top of the class

For the artist, locating an establishment which carries most every item needed to complete that special "work of art" is not an easy task.

Paint and Palette, located in Oak Ridge Square, is "strictly a fine arts shop," said the owners, Judy and Gary Griffin.

The Griffin's make it their business to have many different media types of art materials in stock: oils, watercolors, acrylics, pastels, a variety of drawing materials, colored inks, clay and calligraphy pens and paper. In the oils, the shop carries all accessory items including palette knives, palettes and mediums.

Linen and cotton materials can be found in the stretch canvas, which can be purchased by the yard or the roll in various sizes.

"We also carry gift items for the artist, featuring a good selection of art bins, art boxes, easels and institutional books," said Judy.

The special talents of this couple are continually extended to their many art students. Paint and Palette has several classes from which to choose including day, evening and weekend art classes for adults and separate individualized course work for children; both categories offer beginner and advanced levels.

"Betty Sue Rose and I instruct our adult pupils in basic skills as well as in completing competent works. These classes are offered in oils, watercolors, acrylics, drawing and portraits," explained Judy.

The children's classes, scheduled four times a week, are taught by Judy. "I think my having an All-Level Art Education degree allows me to offer a relaxed and structured art lesson to the children."

And when these students or any artist needs to frame their work, Paint and Palette offers a wide assortment of ready-made and custom frames. After the customer makes a selection of one of their lovely ready-made frames, Gary will assemble the art work free of charge.

In the art of fine arts shops, Paint and Palette is at the top of its class.

D'Anne Burchett at Christine Valmy specializes in electrolysis

Entering this season of warmer weather, most of us would like to be "looking our very best" in swim suit attire and active wear.

But then again, some of us do have places where problem body-hair has occurred. There is an easy, effective way for permanent removal of this undesirable problem -- Probe Electrolysis.

D'Anne Burchett at Christine Valmy, located at #39 Plaza Shopping Center, specializes in this procedure.

"While working as a registered nurse for 12 years, I became very interested in electrolysis through my own personal experience. I trained at Fontaines' Institute of Electrology in Dallas for six months of intensive study," said Burchett.

Burchett explained that the Food and Drug Administration and the American Medical Association have recommended this method of permanent hair removal exclusively. The method is not new; in fact, it was developed in 1875 by Dr. Charles Michael, an opthalmologist who was seeking a way to remove ingrown eyelashes. He attached a fine needle to a wire that was connected to a dry battery. This instrument was so successful that others quickly adopted it to remove unwanted body hair. Although this crude device differs from the modern electrolysis techniques applied today, the premise is the same. Most of the follicle is destroyed by the hot needle so the hair will not grow back. Dr. Michael unwittingly became the father of a profession that claims more than 10,000 practitioners.

One small section is usually worked on at a time. Discomfort varies from patient to patient; some nap during their electrolysis session. The most delicate areas of the body are the inner thighs and the centerline of the face. The breast is not a particularly sensitive area. Many electrologists use special cooling solutions and hand techniques that reduce discomfort in these areas.

Burchett said that electrolysis is most effective with a weekly or twice-weekly program of 15- to 60-minute sessions. A competent eletrologist can generally estimate the amount of time it will take to clear up an area. Other factors, such as which temporary hair-removal method was used before electrolysis was started, play a large part in the number of treatments needed before a problem area is "cleared."

"Through research we have found that approximately 80 percent of American women have unwanted hair at some point in their life, whether through natural physical occurrence or as a result of medication. And, many people think that electrolysis is a much-too expensive luxury. Many of my clients are surprised to find that their first visit can be priced as low as $15 - and quite pleased with the end result," Burchett continued.

As a fit active woman, you will feel sleeker and more beautiful once you have solved embarassing body-hair problems. If you choose electrolysis, make the time commitment at Christine Valmy that the complete treatment requires. Be patient and secure. Any goal - be it developing a fit physique or winning a tennis championsip - requires dedication and confidence.

D'Anne Burchett, R.N., specializes in the electrolysis procedure at Christine Valmy in Plaza Shopping Center. In utilizing this method, individuals with problem body-hair areas can look and feel better about themselves.

All clock collectors: The Right Time has your time

ATTENTION, ANTIQUE CLOCK COLLECTORS: THERE IS A STORE NOW JUST FOR YOU!!!

Yes, for all of you who enjoy the tick tock of an antique clock, The Right Time, located within Dellwood Mall, most likely has just the clock you've been looking for to complete your collection.

"We have quite a collection. Most of our clocks right now are American; but we do have some very interesting pieces from Germany, France, England and one Tiffany, which was patented in 1855 (This marble timepiece weighs about 45 pounds!)," said Dan Jones, co-owner of The Right Time.

In their selections, Dan said he and his partner look for clocks with their original finish, dials and labels, and they have several. But if he and his partner do not have the clock the avid collector may need, these two gentlemen will certainly help you find it.

"I am a member of the National Association of Watch and Clock Collectors, a nationwide organization with over 60,000 members. Through this network of individuals, we hope to be able to help each of our local collectors in their quest for completing sizeable collections," continued Dan.

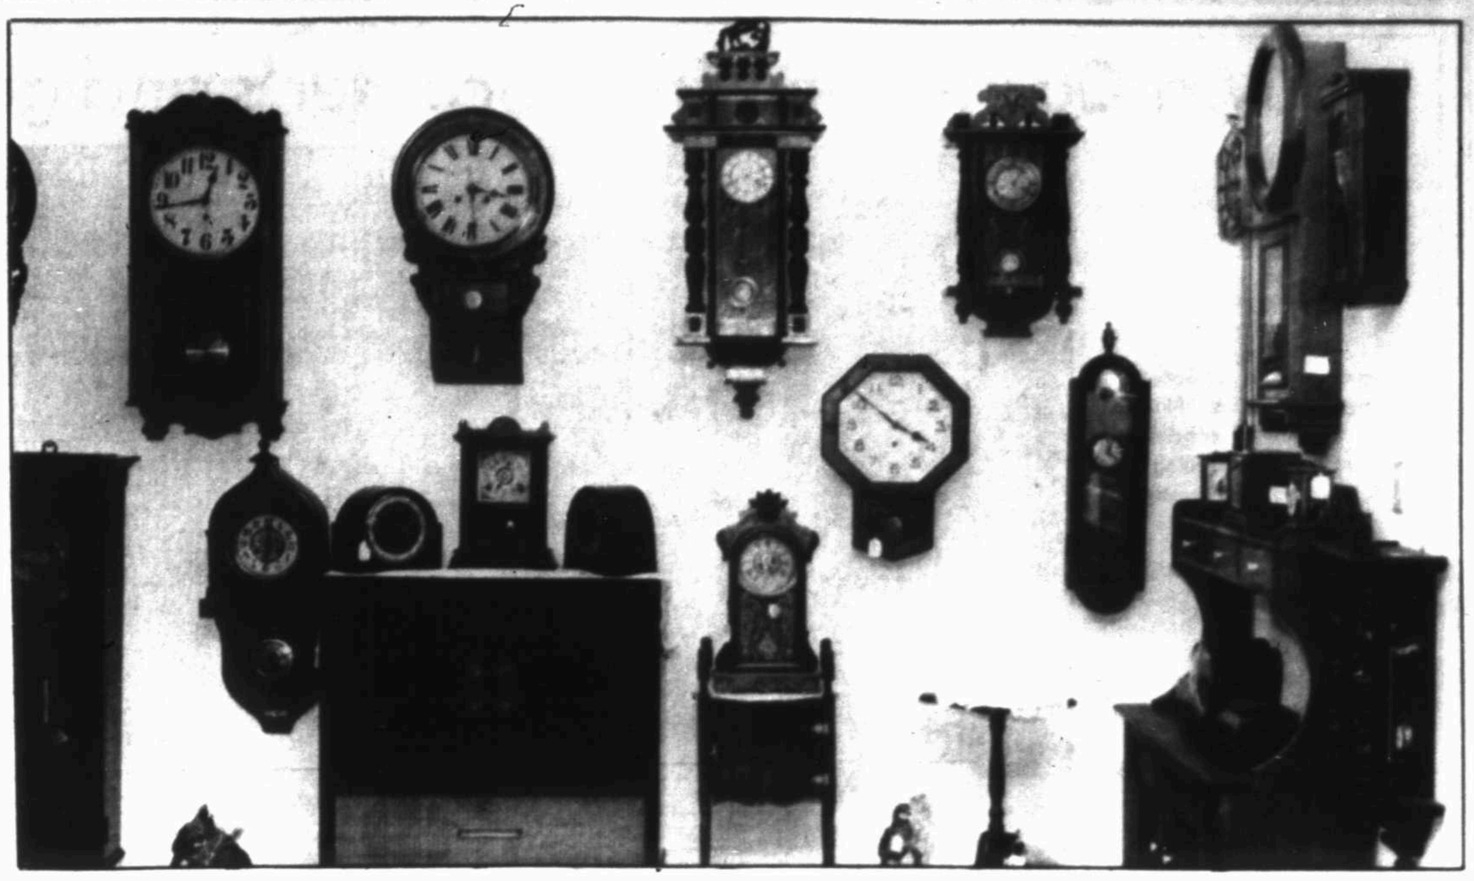

In their present selection of clocks, The Right Time has about 100 clocks on display, 95% of which are antiques, including repeaters from the late 1800's, a 400 Day Clock from 1890, an 1880's mantle clock, several clocks with visible escapement, and a movement clock by the German clockmaker, Gustav Becker, encased by E. Howard. And in their selection of clocks, one can find a lovely timepiece for as low as $65.

"We do have some unrestored mantle clocks on sale as they are for $125 each, a deal for any collector," said Dan.

But not only does The Right Time sell these timepieces; they also repair any type of clock imaginable. "We have a full time repair shop in our store where we have a very talented clockmaker from Vietnam who will be happy to help our customers with any service they may need on their clocks," explained Dan.

And The Right Time has a 90-day guarantee on all their sales and service, plus they gladly accept Visa and Mastercard.

So, clock collectors of any type, remember, there is a place for you now to find that final piece to your selection at The Right Time.

Most any collector of antique clocks will find a wide array of timepieces from which to choose at The Right Time in Dellwood Mall.

Cox's Decorator Fabrics carries wide variety of fabrics in stock

Bettye Jo and Sandra Cox of Cox's Decorator Fabrics in Western Park Plaza invite customers to come in and see the new line of fabrics.

In the past, whenever an interested party chose to have a wall, window or entire home custom remodeled with decorative fabrics or chose to make it a do-it-yourself project, locating a store which carried many types of fabrics in stock was next to impossible.

But no more! The very new Cox's Decorator Fabric in Western Park Plaza carries the materials needed for those projects: decorative fabrics for bedspreads, pillows, draperies, upholstering, floor pillows and of course walls.

"There simply is not another store like this in West Texas. We carry more fabrics in stock than any other store that I know of in the entire area; from polished and Haitian cottons to chintz, heavier upholstery fabrics, some sheers and tapestry and even lace, moray and drapery satins. By being able to see each bolt of fabric, our clients can more easily visualize the effect it will have decorating a bedroom wall or window," said Bettye Jo Cox, co-owner of the shop.

"And although we don't make 'house calls' in our clients' homes, we can help them in choosing a fabric to perfectly compliment the area they want to decorate," added Sandra Cox, the other partner in the store.

Sandra explained that when customers come in with questions about the "how to's" of completing a desired look, that Sandra and her mother first interview the client on the room's present decor and color scheme to gain a better feel of the client's personal preferences.

"We like for the client to bring in a sofa cushion or wallpaper or drapery sample. It makes it easier to coordinate colors when we have something to go by," continued Bettye Jo.

From that point the two women can recommend a competent individual to complete the task if necessary.

"With Sandra's degree in Home Economics/Interior Design from Tarlton State University along with her practical experience since then and my hands-on experience for the past 30 years, we have learned that htis is the most effective method for everyone concerned," said Bettye Jo.

"We have many fine brands of in-stock fabric, including Waverly, Cohama, Riverdale, Phillips, Bartson, Hoffman, Hazard, Hamilton, B & J and Peachtree," explained Sandra.

The two women realize that many of these potentially "interested parties" may want to learn how to complete a task such as decorating a wall with fabric or completing a pleated fabric cornice board. Sandra and Bettye Jo are very excited about an upcoming in-store workshop they're planning specifically for these customers.

"We know our customers will enjoy learning how to do these creative projects themselves. Although because of the work involved, the classes will be limited in number-so we can give each student the proper attention needed, but if we have enough response, we will certainly have more than one workshop," said Sandra.

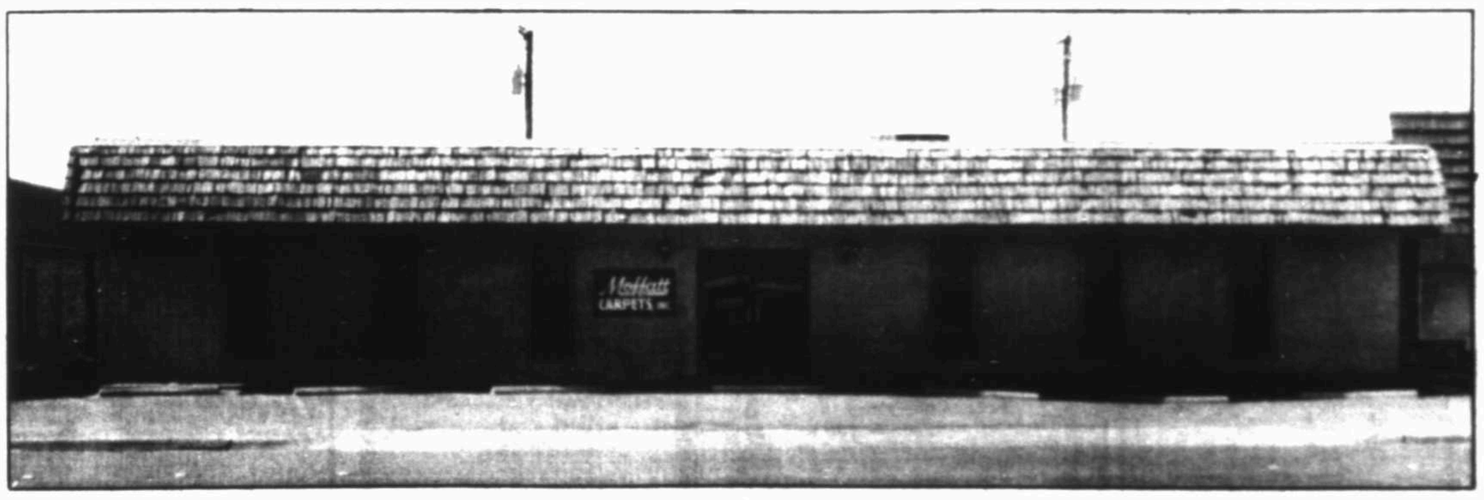

Registration for the workshop can be made by calling Sandra or Bettye Jo at 689-0114 during their store hours which are Monday through Friday from 10 am to 6 pm and on Saturdays from 9 am to 2 pm.

The two ladies invite the public to come by and see the many varieties and colors of decorative fabrics from which to choose.

Moffatt Carpets specializes in commercial and residential decor

Yes, it's spring cleaning time again and the place to go to replace that worn carpeting anywhere in your home or office is Moffatt Carpets, located at 3412 West Wall.

"Moffatt Carpets is basically a contract house; we complete a lot of large commercial and institutional projects. In our 30 years of successful service, 12 of which have been in Midland, we've worked with many area architects in a 300 mile radius of Midland; Shepherd's Air Force Base in Wichita Falls and Dyess Air Force Base in Abilene, local and area banks, churches, museums, public and private shcools and aided in the remodeling of Midland Memorial Hospital," said Gene Abel, General Manager.

Moffatt Carpets, located at 3412 West Wall, has proudly served the West Texas area for over 30 years. This competent staff can help you with your commerical or residential decorating needs.

The establishment carries such name brands for their commercial carpeting line as Stratton, Collins and Aikman, Leer, Philadelphia, Mohawk, J.P. Stevens and Wanda Reeve. "Since we buy such large quantities of these lines, we can offer the most competitive prices to our customers. We can also have our own contract installation - the key to maintaining happy customers; and, along with the fact that we have our own truck to carry our products to the job site, we believe we have the most professional service in West Texas," continued Abel.

But Moffatt Carpets doesn't specialize only in the business sector of our area.

"We have several 'specialists' on staff who can help our residential customers in selecting carpeting, hard surface flooring, custom draperies, bedspreads and general interior design, such as wall treatments or mini blind appointments. June Tucker, our interior designer, or one of our other competent sales members, is always happy to help our customers with any questions they may have. In these instances where a customer may need some creative interior work, we can either complete the project ourselves or sub-contract it out for the customer. This makes the entire task easier for everyone," explained Abel.

In the residential line, Moffatt Carpets selects only the best in subcontracting companies. "We have worked with each of these individuals for years and we trust their work."

The product line for the residential customer is extensive, including such reputable brand names as Mannington, Armstrong, Lee's, Philadelphia and J.P. Stevens.

So, for all of your office or residential carpeting or general decorating needs, look to the "specialists" at Moffatt Carpets for that look you want.

Graham's Pharmacy has gifts for every occasion

Graham's Pharmacy, located at 319 Dodson, is not only a friendly, efficient pharmacy but also a terrific gift store. Graham's has gifts for just about everyone and for any occasion.

Spring has arrived and Easter is just a few days away. Graham's is ready. There are soft sculpture Easter baskets, decorated with ducks and chickens, for the little tykes. Hand puppets and wooden inset puzzles are favorites. Fresh Pangburn candy from Graham's is always appreciated.

And, teddy bears make perfect Easter gifts. Graham's has a whole family of bears - big bears, little cubs, cuddly bears and porcelain bears. Their are little bears to help you save your pennies, musical bears that play cute little tunes and candle bears to light up your room.

Even bride and groom bears are waiting for you at Graham's Pharmacy.

Graham's has many gifts in stock for men. Whether the occasion is graduation, Father's Day or birthday, you are sure to find the right gift at this store. There are simulated leather portfolios of various sizes - some with built-in calculators, some with locks, some even with address books. Dominoes, cards and aerobic weights are just a few of the items in stock.

Perhaps, Mom has always wanted some Pfaltzgraff dishes. Now is the ideal time to get them. You can save up to 37 percent on the Folk Art and Village patterns. This sale lasts through March 31. It's an unbelievable opportunity to get a set of quality Pfaltzgraff dishes. Pfaltzgraff has been making dishes since 1811. Each one is hand painted, dishwasher and microwave proof and freezer safe.

Many colorful silk flowers have just arrived. Tulip, lilac and crocus bunches make it easy to take the beauty of spring into your home. Mauve, peach and red are just a sampling of the colors you will find. Beautiful musical birds add a special touch. Piano and flutterby music boxes play a variety of songs.

Graham's also offers some very unusual ceramic book ends and mugs for all occasions. Penguins and eagles are just a couple of the patterns.

Collectible animals, including horses, sheep and bears, are always in stock at Graham's.

For the bath, Graham's has decorative vanity sets and the popular Vita Bath. In fact, Vita Bath is now on sale. The 10.5 oz. container, which is regularly $15, is just $10.

In addition, spring jewelry is in for the children and women. Graham's always has a good selection.

You will want to enjoy Graham's old-fashioned, friendly soda fountain while you are browsing through the store.

Also, remember you can count on Graham's pharmacists for personal service. Though their schedules may be hectic, they make a special effort to take the time to answer their customers questions. They also keep complete prescription records for each customer. They will be glad to give you a print-out of those records for tax or insurance purposes.

Teresa Simmons of Graham's Pharmacy, 319 Dodson, says they have plenty of gifts, including a wide variety of teddy bears. Whatever the occasion, go to Graham's for the perfect gift.

Cardinal Electric Company adds commercial service deparment

Cardinal Electric Company, located at 2800 W. Front, has offered expert, commercial electric systems for 21 years and has recently added a commercial service department.

Since 1965, Cardinal Electric Company has been doing electrical work for large commercial projects. Now, Vice-President Bruce Keith announces that Cardinal Electric is developing a commercial service department.

Cardinal Electric, a Midland company, has 21 years of experience on large commercial projects, with jobs as far north as Colgate, OK, south to Temple, TX and West to El Paso. They have always worked strictly on large commercial projects and serviced the electrical systems they installed.

Their new commercial service department will allow them to offer service on buildings where they did not install the electrical system. Keith says his company sees a great need for this kind of service in Midland. Since another commercially-oriented, Midland electric company recently closed, Cardinal Electric has received a number of calls for commercial service. "This (commercial electrical service) is a real need in Midland and Odessa and we are equipped to meet the need... With the experienced staff that we have we just felt that was the direction we needed to go."

Keith explains that there is a great deal of difference between electrical systems for residential construction and that for commercial buildings. "Since Cardinal has dealt solely with commercial installations in the last 21 years, the company has great expertise in this area," he says.

Cardinal Electric will provide emergency service for their Midland and Odessa customers.

Of course, Cardinal will continue to offer installation for commercial projects. In fact, Keith says they are capable of doing their own engineering and design work.

For commercial electrical systems and service, go by Cardinal Electric, 2800 W. Front or call 683-5138, Monday-Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Cattleman's Steak House satisfies Texas-size appetites

When your mouth is watering for a delicious meal that will "stick to your ribs," Cattleman's Steak House is the place to go. Cattleman's Steak House, located at 3300 N. Big Spring, is known for the "Best Steaks in the West." And the big, tasty chicken fried steaks with delicious cream gravy and french fries or baked potato are only the beginning of an extraordinarily good, Texas-style menu.

It starts with a huge, irresistible salad bar where you can pile on the crisp lettuce, cherry tomatoes, carrots, sprouts and more toppings than you can imagine. Finish it off with the dressing of your choice and add a dab of potato or pea salad or strawberries. Cattleman's knows the meaning of fresh salad and selection.

Appetizers range from mountains of golden onion rings to fried zucchini and sauteed or fried mushrooms. This is only the beginning for those Texas-size appetites.

Your choice of fine steak, seafood, veal or even prime rib will arrive, cooked to your order of perfection.

Dinner steak, ribeye and club steak are some of your choices. Sirloins come in many sizes and the T-Bone steak, an old favorite, will satisfy even the biggest appetite. And, of course, Cattleman's always has the best chicken fried steak to be found anywhere around. That's because they make their own, instead of using pre-battered steaks like many places do.

Their selection also includes lasagna and spaghetti. And, it ranks right up there with the other fine dishes, Midlanders have enjoyed at Cattleman's for years.

Cattleman's chicken strips, steak fingers, hamburgers, barbecue sandwiches and club sandwiches are always favorites.

Perhaps, you're hungry for seafood. Cattleman's serves delicious fried shrimp, oysters, catfish, frog legs and scallops. Their flounder, lobster, sole, trout, salmon, and red snapper are equally tasty.

Whatever you select will be great with fries or a big baked potato with butter, sour cream, cheese and bacon bits.

Children love the "Kiddie Corner" on the menu. The same great food is served to satisfy their appetites.

A glass of delicious ice tea, a soft drink or cup of coffee will be perfect with your meal. Cattleman's also has a good selection of wines, champagnes and premium beers.

Blueberry cheese cake, pecan pie, ice cream, cherry cheese cake or apple pie at Cattleman's will make your lunch or dinner even better.

Bill and Pat point out that Cattleman's Steak House is famous not only for delicious food, but also for an efficient, friendly staff. That's what makes Cattleman's come to mind on those special occasions.

In the middle of a busy day at the office, you deserve to have a relaxing lunch at Cattleman's Steak House, and after a long day the whole family needs to experience Cattleman's food and friendly atmosphere.

Enjoy lunch or dinner at Cattleman's, Monday-Friday. On Saturday you can have the best dinner of your week at this fine steak house.

If the parking lot is full, don't wor ry. It's nearly always full and th wait is never too long at 3300 N. Bi Spring.

Cattleman's Steak House, located at 3300 N. Big Spring, is famous for its delicious steaks, tasty seafood, fresh salad bar and friendly staff.

Crystal Vend offers delicious drinking water and distilled water for just 30 cents per gallon in six convenient locations, 24 hours a day.

Crystal Vend: a delicious value in difficult times

In years to come, 1986 will be remembered as a year Permian Basin residents had to tighten their belts a bit. People are cutting out many of the little "extras," but good tasting, pure drinking water is one thing that won't have to be taken out of the budget if you turn to Crystal Vend.

Crystal Vend's delicious drinking water and distilled water is available at six convenient locations in Midland for only 30 cents a gallon. With the price of delivered bottled water going up and up, the Crystal-Vend machine circumvents the fuel and labor expenses, resulting in an incredibly low price and convenience.

The blue Crystal Vend cabinets are located at:

M System — 400 Midland Drive
M System - 2200 Rankin Hwy
M System - N. "A" and West Scharbauer
Safeway - 4340 W. Illinois
Safeway-Wasley and Garfield
Walgreen's - 215 Andrews Hwy.

These convenient cabinets house a miniature, precision water purification system. The system brings the mountain water fall right to your container, as the harsh tastes of medicinal chlorine and rusty pipes have been removed along with the taste of hard dissolved metallic salts.

This equipment which utilizes state-of-the-art technology transforms municipal water into delicious, clear water any time of the year.

In addition to being convenient, the machines are easy to use. Each machine is coin operated. Just place your one to five gallon container on the built-in tray and pick the kind of water you want. Press the green button and crystal clear drinking water, which retains a trace of the minerals for taste, will flow to your container. This is ideal for cooking, coffee, tea and ice.

Or, you can select distilled water by pressing the blue button. This purified water is suitable for low sodium diets and ideally suited for distilled water uses such as steam irons, car batteries, photography and potted plants.

So, Crystal Vend will let you keep delicious, pure water even when your trimming your budget.

Vacuum Cleaner City offers Panasonic vacuums, Host 'Dry' Carpet Cleaner

Vacuum Cleaner City has served the Permian Basin for 28 years with complete vacuum sales and care. The shop offers all leading brands of vacuums at reasonable prices. Included in the purchase, they give full in-shop warranty work. No more dealing with some unkown person by phone or mail. The staff at Vacuum Cleaner City cares about you.

Their expert repair and service force gives free estimates on all repairs. Your vacuum leaves the shop in the BEST condition possible. In most cases, you can pick up your vacuum the very next day. On full service repairs, they give you one year of free labor on further repairs.

How often should you have your vacuum serviced? Once a year is the standard for cleaning. Belts should be replaced every three months to insure peak performance. Bags require changing more often in the West Texas area because of the heavy sand. Vacuum Cleaner City carries a full line of belts, bags, tools and parts. Special parts can be ordered and usually delivered in four to five days.

Vacuum Cleaner City can give you side by side demonstrations of Hoover, Eureka, Royal, Kirby, Rainbow and many other brands. Home demonstrations can be arranged. They want you to have the choice of the one right cleaner for YOUR home.

This month Vacuum Cleaner City is featuring a full line of Panasonic vacuums. You will find just the right size, features and price for your needs. Panasonic offers the latest advances in vacuum cleaners. Many models not only clean your carpets, but also sweep your bare floors. Attachments are simple to use and give full power cleaning. Triple filtering leaves your home clean and fresh. The staff at Vacuum Cleaner City urges you to go by for a demonstration of this unique machine.

Be sure to watch for their manager's special of the week for real savings.

They accept Visa and MasterCard. The also offer 90 day accounts, free of carrying charges, on new purchases.

HOST "DRY" CARPET CLEANER is the newest addition to their complete carpet service. HOST gets the dirt that wet methods leave behind. Cleaned carpets can be walked on IMMEDIATELY. Host removes deep-down soil without irritating chemicals, water or dust. Plus, the Host rental machine actually brushes up the pile, reviving the texture to bring back that "like-new" look. See them today, you'll be amazed at the effectiveness and economy of the Host "Dry" Cleaning System!

Vacuum Cleaner City, located at 3304 W. Illinois in Midland and 3612 N. Dixie in Odessa, values your friendship and business. Go by and visit with the staff about your vacuum cleaner needs.

WilliWear displayed in unusual 'trunk show' expedition film

By WENDI WINTERS
Copley News Service

Willi Smith is an innovator. A designer of distinctly casual — even careless — men's and women's sportswear, he nonetheless turns the fashion industry on its ear each season with his outrageous designs and equally outrageous trend-setting fashion presentations.

While most of New York's designers were showing their spring '86 collections to retailers and the press in baroque ballrooms or darkened auditoriums, Smith packed over 1,000 of them into the Ziegfield theater for a 20-minute film depicting how he spent his summer vacation.

Willi spent it in Senegal, a small country located on the western side of the African continent.

There, he and a troupe of dancers from the Senegal National Theater shot a zany silent film titled "Expedition' — a wacky combination travelogue and fashion show — complete with overdubbed noises, music and animal sounds.

Lou Salvatori, an American actor, plays a photographer who resembles and acts like a demented rooster.

He arrives at the Senegal airport with a large steamer trunk.

Like in the old silver screen comedies, the trunk contains nearly a dozen men, women and children who climb in and out of the trunk throughout the film, modeling Willi Smith WilliWear Collection for spring.

Willi portrays the dim-witted customs inspector who allows this colorful crowd to sneak into Dakar, Senegal.

At one point, the troupe is fishing from a large yacht.

A tug on one line, then all the lines, and each player struggles to reel in his prize: WilliWear shirts and blouses. Nice catch and a novel way to show Smith's designs.

When the lights came on, a live conga line modeling the collection paraded across the stage.

The African influence was vividly evident in lightweight airy cotton seersuckers, twills, gauzes, cotton interlock and sweater knits.

Colors were either sun-whitened in pale cricket-match pastels or hot African brights in solids, prints, stripes and plaids.

Sengalese-inspired prints were layered over plaids and textured berbers or mixed pattern with pattern.

All with an attitude of unstudied elan.

His silhouettes did not follow this year's fashion dictum that everything must mold to the body.

The clothes fell softly away from the body in oversize proportions or gently wrapped and tied around the body to cool down the effects of warm weather. Shirttails flopped beneath unconstructed blazers or were elongated and tied together in a knot below the knees.

Pants for men and women featured slim legs and full, baggy dhotis. Bermuda shorts, full and long, reached almost to the knees.

Several shirttail-hem gathered skirts in mid-calf lengths unbuttoned over leggings.

Extra layers were knotted around the waist like cardigans.

Hats are fashion item for Easter

By NANETTE WISER
Copley News Service

What fashion accessory is brimming with possibilities this spring?

The hat, that's what. Hats are very much in the news, from Dr. Seuss's Pulitzer Prize-winning "The Cat In The Hat" to special department store seminars on how to trim a bonnet for Easter and then re-trim it so it can be worn all season.

Hat boutiques are popping up around the country, and people now can mix and match hat styles and trimmings. The ribbons, flowers, fruits and folderol of your choice can adorn a straw hat, a pioneer-style bonnet or a snappy fedora. Let your imagination take over.

What's topping off outfits in the Easter fashion parade? Jackie Kennedy pillbox hats, pastel and pretty, with a bit of veil for mystery. Romantic straw boaters trimmed with ribbon and subtle froufrou. White straw bretons with jaunty upturned brims. And the rage of the parade? The brightest of retro fashions — straw Panamas to go with Ralph Lauren buttercup silk dresses.

Brims are 1 to 2 inches, and crowns are squared off for a classic look. Some hat designers, like Patricia Underwood, are creating '40s-style chapeaus that sport such frivolous frippery as a rainbow-banded crown that waves 1 foot high.

What's new on the hat horizon? Scarves in floral prints, solid colors and lame. Whether tied around the head for a bunny-ear look or wrapped in a toque that rivals the Eiffel Tower, scarves are the latest twist in toppers.

The art of millinery dates back to the 17th century. Many of the styles so popular during the 19th and early 20th centuries have made the fashion cycle and are in style once again. People are snapping up reproductions in department stores and flocking to antique and resale shops in search of the real thing.

Unfortunately, the real thing sometimes is difficult to resurrect because unless preserved in a hat box — another disappearing millinery tradition — the chapeaus are often squashed, torn or faded.

Despite these problems, pictures of vintage hats still inspire today's contemporary woman looking to match the spare silhouettes of summer with something feminine and kicky.

And hats attract the rich and the famous, such as the infamous Mrs. William "Babe" Paley, whose pictures in Vogue and Harper's Bazaar often resembled a Monet painting. And no wonder — one of Monet's most famous portraits, which shows a women with a jaunty hat and lace veil, is in fact owned by the same "Babe," known for her insouciant taste in hats.

Hats also illustrate literature about the powerless. Wasn't O'Henry's short story of the poor working girl always illustrated by her smartly but carefully adorned hat that, for pennies, had been done in the style of the Fifth Avenue foxes she so yearned to be like? Or Colette, who keenly noted every detail of a hat's embellishment, looking for melancholy in the draping of a veil, a new love affair in the addition of a red silk tulip.

Hats have captured the attention of cinematographers, as well. Hitchcock used hats to foreshadow scenes of terror or anxiety in movies such as "Suspicion." And would Lauren Bacall have looked as seductive in "The Big Sleep" had she cocked her eyebrow at Bogey without a bowler on her head? I think not.

Hats today have much in common with hats of the 1920s. They can be worn for any occasion and be made of any material, be it straw, lace, chiffon, raffia or panne velvet. Colors are as varied as they were then — navy, black, white, cream.

It is the Schiaperelli hats of the 1930s that seem to be the call of modern hat wearing. She was known for her mixture of similarly colored materials. For example, a black straw with black ribbed silk on the crown, trimmed with black satin ribbon and a jet-black buckle.

DEAR ABBY

Man with invalid wife torn by loneliness, guilt

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am 67 years old. My wife has Alzheimer's disease. I took care of her at home for four years, then she became violent, unable to recognize anyone, unable to speak and she lost all control of her bodily functions, so I had to put her in a home. She's been in a home for six years, so altogether I have been without a wife for 10 years.

It has been very lonely for me, Abby. I know a lady whose husband died two years ago. She is 64 and lonely, too, so I invited her to lunch. We poured out our hearts to each other as her husband had a long illness before he died, and she knew how I felt. She invited me to dinner at her apartment and I enjoyed her company so much I want to spend more time with her.

Now the problem: I feel guilty. I'm still a married man, Catholic, and want the respect of my children and friends, but life is lonely without some kind of companionship. Is this wrong?

I would also like some thoughts on this from priests, ministers and rabbis. — LONESOME

DEAR LONESOME: As I see it, you and the lady have suffered a great deal, and my heart goes out to both of you. I see no reason why you can't enjoy each other's company without feeling guilty. Talk to your priest.

DEAR ABBY: A friend of mine wrote an article that I thought might be helpful to your readers. You have her permission to use it if you wish. — MARGARET IN JAMESTOWN, N.Y.

DEAR MARGARET: I wish to, and I thank you. Here's the article, with minor editing.

WHAT NOT TO SAY TO A WIDOW OR WIDOWER
by Joan D. Freudy, Freeport, N.Y.

"Are you keeping the house? Don't you find it too big now?"

"Wouldn't you be much better off in an apartment? A condominium?"

"Have you considered moving to Florida?"

"What do you do with yourself these days?"

"You stay home too much."

"You need to be with people."

"You really should get out and join some groups."

"You have to pick yourself up and DO things."

"L— always handled the money, didn't he? How do you manage now?"

"We'll be in touch."

"You must come over sometime."

AND WHAT TO SAY INSTEAD

"Come along with us. We'll pick you up."

"We'd love for you to come to dinner. How about next Thursday?"

"How about a walk in the park so we can have a chance to talk?"

"Let's take turns driving."

"We're going with a group to the museum next Sunday. Would you like to join us?"

"I belong to a group for ( ). Would you like to be a member, too? We could go to the meetings together."

"I always enjoy your company."

Never refer to a widow or widower as "recent." Loss is forever, and all losses are recent to those who must bear them.

DEAR ABBY: I read in your column about a man who was "turned off" because his wife was fat. How I pity his wife because of his selfishness, his lack of insight and his unknowing of love!

My wife is fat. So am I. We love each other. When I look at her, I do not see a fat old lady. I see a nymph on the beach in the moonlight. I shed my clothes and chase her. In close embrace we drop to the moist sand. With morning, we arrange our clothes and meet the day.

One night soon now we will drop naked to the sand — but we will not stir with the morning light. Our children will arrange our clothes and spade the moist sand. Our love will stay with our children. We will be with the sun. — TWO TUBBIES IN MARION, ILL.

Camp's respite care aids handicapped, families

By ANDREA HAMILTON

NATION

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — A handicapped child who requires constant care can strain parents and siblings, and a special camp where volunteers watch over such children for the weekend is strengthening families by providing relief.

Forty-eight weekends a year, parents leave their handicapped children at Camp Aldersgate. Teenagers, 14 and up, volunteer to care for the children.

"Many families will tell you how the respite care program saves their lives," said Anale Yarbrough, who coordinates volunteers at the camp.

The United Methodist Church owns the heavily wooded 120-acre camp, which was once a turkey farm. More than half of the $92,000 for the respite care program comes from state and federal programs, the rest from contributions.

Weekend respite care, one of five programs at the camp, began in 1982 after a survey showed that more than 10,000 families in central Arkansas needed relief from the demands of handicapped children.

Children who go to the camp generally range in age from 6 to 16 and are mentally retarded or suffer from cerebral palsy, seizure disorders, autism or spina bifida. Most are from central Arkansas, but some come from miles away.

The children get the constant attention they need and enjoy the games they play and the friends they make at the camp, Ms. Yarbrough said.

Moreover, she said, "By taking the children for the weekend, we give these families more time for other family members. It strengthens the families and gives them a chance to do things they otherwise couldn't do — whether it's going to a Razorback (Arkansas University) game, shopping or to church."

Camp officials tried to cancel the program one snowy weekend last year, but relented when a woman pleaded with them. "She said it was the first time she had been invited by her boyfriend to meet his family," Ms. Yarbrough said.

Julie Mills, a severely mentally handicapped 10-year-old with a speech impairment, attends the camp.

"It allows us to be together the whole weekend, to go shopping at our will or just sit around and watch television," Julie's mother, Sherry Mills, said of time alone with her husband, Carl. "We become a little closer, get to know each other. It's almost like a date."

Susan and Mike Walker send their 7-year-old daughter Rachel to the camp so they can spend time with their 9-year-old daughter Dawn.

Rachel suffers from seizure disorders and mental and physical disabilities, Mrs. Walker said, and caring for her can deprive Dawn of attention.

"It takes a lot out of you to deal with a child like Rachel," Mrs. Walker said. "When she goes to camp, I do things that Dawn wants to do. I don't want her to feel like she's second-best."

Children left at the camp are also made to feel special.

Volunteers take children canoeing on the camp's 10-acre lake, they tell them stories and play games.

The young volunteers also change diapers or decatheterize children and bathe them. Patience and enthusiasm are a must.

"If our program doesn't do anything else," Ms. Yarbrough said, "it helps teen-agers see that people with disabilities are just like everyone else — they have personalities, capabilities and limitatations."

Ms. Yarbrough said she would like the camp to become a national training center for respite care. Groups in major cities could offer such a program if they understood what facilities are needed.

About 60 teens recently attended a weekend training session at Camp Aldersgate.

Reagan will seek emergency military aid for Honduras

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will ask Congress for $20 million in emergency military aid for Honduras, officials said today.

The officials, who insisted on anonymity, said the decision was reached after the Sandinista government of Nicaragua dispatched up to 1,500 troops 16 miles deep Honduras in a bid to wipe out Nicaraguan Contra rebel camps.

The sources had no details on the Honduran aid package, saying it was still being worked on. The Nicaraguan incursion was described as the largest of more than 100 Sandinista crossings into Honduras since the rebels began using that country as a base of operations four years ago.

Word of the emergency request came as Reagan and Senate Democrats worked to strike a compromise on his request for $100 million in aid for the Contras themselves.

The officials said that Monday night, in response to the armed incursion, Honduran authorities formally requested urgent U.S. military assistance, including troop air transports and other aid.

In response, the officials said, Reagan notified pertinent members of Congress that he intends to exercise his authority under the Foreign Assistance Act to provide Honduras with materiel, services and training for its military.

Earlier, sources, speaking on condition they not be identified, said the Sandinista troops were on Mount Capire after chasing the Contra rebels into Honduras on Sunday.

A Honduran government spokesman refused to confirm reports of an incursion, saying officials had no knowledge of Nicaraguan troops entering southern Honduras.

As for the larger Contra aid proposa, Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., said Monday, "There is still a lot of effort being made to hammer out a bipartisan proposal that will be acceptable to a substantial majority, but we're a long way from arriving at that point now," Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., said Monday night.

The Senate was scheduled to begin debating Reagan's aid package for the Nicaraguan rebels late today, and a vote in the Republican-controlled chamber could come late Wednesday or Thursday.

Reagan's proposal would provide $70 million that could be used for military aid, along with $30 million worth of non-lethal assistance such as clothing and medicine, to the U.S.-backed Contra guerrillas fighting Nicaragua's leftist government.

The Democratic-controlled House voted 222-210 against the plan last week. Another vote in the House, which could mean passage of an aid package containing some restrictions, has been set for April 15.

Senate sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the President has thus far resisted any major attempts to compromise on his package in the Senate.

But Reagan's proposal to withhold all military aid exept for "defensive" weapons for 90 days is expected to be made part of the Senate package.

NATION IN BRIEF

Marcos moves to beach

HONOLULU (AP) — Deposed Philippine President Ferdinand E. Marcos and his wife, Imelda, have traded the Hickam Air Force Base officers' quarters for new, "nice and quiet" surroundings — the $1.5 million beachfront home of an auto dealer.

The Marcoses and about 20 of their followers moved from the base Monday evening, but it was unclear how many of the entourage remained with them, said a Secret Service agent at the gate, who declined to give his name.

A small crowd gathered in the rain outside the house that became Marcos's latest haven a month almost to the day after his Feb. 26 arrival in Hawaii. The couple were spirited from Hickam to the house to avoid the large crowds that have gathered on other occasions when it appeared likely they were moving.

Trade treaties favored

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan wants the Senate to ratify treaties aimed at encouraging U.S. investment in six countries, the office of U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter says.

The treaties, which Reagan was to ask the Senate today to ratify, have been signed by the United States with Turkey, Panama, Haiti, Senegal, Zaire and Morocco.

Another three treaties, with Egypt, Cameroon and Bangladesh, are expected to be sent to the Senate later.

Under the Constitution, treaties need a two-thirds vote in the Senate for ratification. No serious opposition to the treaties is expected.

Each treaty is intended to protect investors in both countries against confiscation and other dangers to foreign investors' property from the host government or its citizens. It also provides for settlement of disputes that may arise.

Sakharov worsening?

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) — Yelena Bonner says a secretly recorded Soviet videotape of her husband, Andrei Sakharov, showing him in apparent good health actually demonstrates that his condition is worsening.

"The very fact of its existence and its release is clear for me that it supports this," she said after viewing the 15-minute tape Monday before ABC-TV aired portions of it on its nightly newscast.

The tape was made with hidden cameras in the Soviet city of Gorky, where Sakharov is in internal exile. It was released to Bild, a West German tabloid which has received numerous Soviet leaks regarding Sakharov.

Bild sold the tape to ABC for $25,000, The New York Times reported today.

Mrs. Bonner accused Soviet authorities of staging some scenes depicted on the tape, and criticized them for recording a conversation between her and her husband.

"Today I made an exception to my promise not to talk to the press, and spoke to you because it seems to me that the demonstration of this video is an indicator that Sakharov's condition is worsening, deteriorating," she said, speaking in Russian. Her daughter, Tatiana Yankelevich, translated.

Burn unit to stay open

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The burn unit at West Jefferson General Hospital will remain open for the time being, but it still cannot afford to admit uninsured people from other hospitals who face months of expensive treatment, the hospital board says.

Stung by criticism that it has denied burn care to patients with uncertain insurance, the board strongly defended the hospital and its staff at a regularlyscheduled board meeting Monday.

The board voted to start a public relations campaign to explain its handling of the case of Deon Rivers, the 2-year-old boy, burned over 30 percent of his body last week, who was turned away fron the hospital's burn unit.

Soviet girl tours school

NEW YORK (AP) — Flowers, music and crayon-scribbled signs welcomed Katerina Lycheva as the 11-year-old Soviet girl and elementary school children in Brooklyn shared their hopes for peace.

Katerina, whose five city tour is in its sixth day, goes to the United Nations and the Statue of Liberty today, with time out for roller skating in Central Park.

Katerina's trip is in memory of Samantha Smith, a Maine schoolgirl who visited the Soviet Union in 1983 after writing a letter about peace to then-Soviet leader Yuri Andropov. Samantha died last summer in a plane crash.

Whitworth role argued

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Former Navy radioman Jerry Whitworth played an "indispensible role" in the Soviet spy ring headed by John A. Walker Jr. by stealing secret information for nine years, a prosecutor says.

But Whitworth's attorney told a U.S. District Court jury his client was duped by Walker, who made him a "sacrificial lamb."

Both sides presented opening arguments Monday in the trial in which Whitworth, 46, of Davis, is accused of selling secret information about codes and communications systems from 1974 to 1983 for $332,000. Seven of 13 charges against Whitworth, who retired in 1983 after a 23-year Navy career, carry life sentences.

Walker, who pleaded guilty to espionage, is scheduled to testify against Whitworth, his longtime Navy buddy.

New Latin loans studied

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mexico, Argentina and other Latin American nations would be the recipients of hundreds of millions of dollars in new loans in a program under consideration by the World Bank.

A bank spokesman said Monday night that the bank's board of directors would consider the major loan package in the next few weeks.

"They're the first in a series, the first of a new initiative," the spokesman, Peter Riddleberger, said of the loans. "But they haven't been confirmed. They're not absolutely assured."

The loans are part of a $1.5 billion package for Latin America, which officials expect will be approved before April, The New York Times said in today's editions. The package would be the largest commitment ever to Latin America in such a brief period, the newspaper said.

Report released on poor

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's 13.5 million rural poor are seriously undernourished, suffer disproportionate rates of infant death and stunted growth, and get less government help than their urban counterparts, a lobbying group said today.

In releasing a year-long study, the organization Public Voice said it found "consistent evidence of startling disparities between the nutritional status of the rural poor and that of the nation as a whole," and cited a continuing deterioration of that status.

"The disparities are extremely large," said Jeffrey Shotland, a nutritionist who directed the study for the Washington-based food and health lobbying group.

Practices questioned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Commission on Civil Rights had questionable personnel practices and its officials improperly let private groups pay for their travel, a General Accounting Office official said today.

William J. Anderson, director of GAO's General Government Division, said in testimony prepared for a House subcommittee that the findings included irregularities in hiring of consultants and temporary employees.

He testified that some of the private groups that paid for trips were not qualified tax-exempt organizations that could have legally made such payments — and their money should not have been accepted.

Salvage work continues

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The leader of the Challenger salvage effort says it may be two to three weeks before searchers know if they will be able to find and recover a section of the booster rocket that caused the shuttle explosion.

Air Force Col. Edward A. O'Connor told reporters Monday that the highest priority has been placed on retrieving a part of the joint between the bottom two segments of the right booster.

A plume of flame shot out of the joint 15 seconds before Challenger exploded Jan. 28, killing the seven crew members.

O'Connor said radar tracking indicated the right rocket broke into three or four major chunks and several smaller pieces and that they hit the water at a speed of about 400 mph from an altitude of about nine miles.

"Any object hitting the water at that speed would be like hitting a brick wall and you could expect a lot of damage," he said. Some parts could be shattered into small fragments and never be found, he added.

Bouvia case in court

LOS ANGELES (LAT) — Elizabeth Bouvia, the 28-year-old quadriplegic who once sought a court's permission to starve herself to death, no longer wants to die and only seeks to have a painful nasogastric feeding tube removed, her lawyers argued Monday before a California appellate court.

"Petitioner specifically is not asking this court...or anyone else to assist or to watch her commit suicide," attorney Richard Scott told a three-judge panel of the 2nd District Court of Appeal.

He said that Ms. Bouvia, a cerebral palsy victim, simply wants doctors to remove the force-feeding tube that carries nearly 2,000 calories of nutrients a day to her stomach. The tube was inserted by doctors at High Desert Hospital in Lancaster, Calif., about 50 miles northeast of Los Angeles.

Scott told the justices that Bouvia had maintained fairly constant weight on a liquid diet for about a year and is not in danger of dying.

Mountain lion killed

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO, Calif. (LAT) — A male mountain lion, believed to be the animal that attacked and gravely injured a 5-year-old girl in a wilderness park east of here, was shot to death Monday morning not far from the spot where it had carried off the child.

Rangers said that the animal appeared to have been in a weakened condition, which may have accounted for Sunday's rare attack on a human.

Surinamese leader linked to drug ring

MIAMI (AP) — A member of Suriname's ruling junta was in jail today on charges he offered cocaine smugglers military protection and a safe refueling haven in his small South American country for $1 million a load, authorities said.

Capt. Etienne Boerenveen, who said he was Suriname's No. 2 leader and "spoke for the highest levels of government," was arrested Monday with two countrymen by undercover U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agents who posed as smugglers, said DEA spokesman Frank Chellino.

Boerenveen, the "main man" in the scheme, allegedly offered the use of Surinamese airstrips and harbors, and military protection for smugglers' planes and ships, as well as land and security for cocaine labs, Chellino said.

The men said "they would provide safe haven for drug-laden planes and vessels to refuel and transship through Suriname en route to the United States from other South American countries," he said.

There was no immediate comment from the government of Suriname.

Boerenveen, 28; Cilvion Heymans, 65; and Heymans' 34-year-old son, Ricardo Heymans, were being held without bond at Metropolitan Correctional Center, and were to appear before a federal magistrate today.

Boerenveen is a member of Suriname's five-man ruling military junta, which seized power in 1980 and is headed by Cmdr. Desi Bouterse. The younger Heymans is area sales manager for government-owned Surinname Airways.

The trio were arrested as they stepped off a yacht after the second of two meetings with agents, Chellino said. The craft was supplied by the DEA.

Chellino refused to say how the five-month investigation began or how it led to Boerenveen and the Heymans, who first met with DEA agents in a Miami hotel. That meeting was videotaped.

Boerenveen allegedly offered military protection to smugglers at the country's commericial airstrip at the capital of Paramaribo or at an airstrip of the smugglers' choice after an aerial survey by their pilots.

Military protection could have been ready within a week, the agents were allegedy told.

Chellino said the DEA doesn't believe Suriname has yet been used as a drug shipment stopover.

Boerenveen and the Heymans were charged with conspiracy to import and distribute drugs.

Everybody knows she's in danger.
Everybody cares.
But not enough people are digging down and doing something about it.
If the work to restore her is to go on, a lot more people have to make their contribution. Today.

A U.S. Navy A-7 Corsair attack plane is launched from the deck of the USS Saratoga during exercises off the coast of Libya Monday. Libya fired at least six missiles at U.S. planes, triggering a counter attack against Libya.

Arab world condemns U.S.; Israel defends U.S.

Associated Press

The Arab world today condemned U.S. air strikes against Libya as provocative and armed aggression, but Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres called Libya the "arrowhead of international terrorism" and defended the American attacks.

Peres issued a statement to reporters in Jerusalem saying "the United States has the right, like any other country, to defend freedom of the seas."

In Washington, the Pentagon said Libya resumed its attack on U.S. planes flying over the Gulf of Sidra early today, firing at least six more surface-to-air missiles. The United States responded with retaliatory strikes against two Libyan patrol boats and radar installations, the Pentagon said.

The official Soviet media today blamed the United States for the clashes in the Gulf of Sidra.

"The armed aggression against Libya has been launched against the backdrop of preparations for a direct U.S. aggression also against Nicaragua, with U.S. ships cruising close to the shores of that country all the time," the Soviet news agency Tass said.

And Radio Moscow called the fighting an "open provocation aimed at creating a pretext for American military intervention in Libyan affairs."

Reaction from governments in Western Europe was mixed.

Italian Premier Bettino Craxi said that while Italy rejects Libya's claim to the Gulf of Sidra, U.S. military actions do not appear to be an appropriate way to uphold international law.

"Italy does not want a war at its front door," Craxi said today.

"The repeated American exercises in the Gulf of Sidra were not an appropriate way to re-establish respect for international law and contained a high element of risk which provoked worry," he told the Chamber of Deputies at a meeting in Rome.

The Dutch government, meanwhile, criticized Libya for firing missiles at U.S. warplanes. A statement issued by the Foreign Ministry said the Netherlands "regrets very much that Libya has undertaken actions in and above international waters against units that were on the high seas."

The Dutch statement said it was "inappropriate that claims like the one at issue should be emphasized by the use of force."

In Bonn, the Foreign Ministry issued a brief statement saying West Germany hoped the U.S.-Libyan hostilities would not escalate.

There was no immediate comment from Britain.

Greece expressed concern, but said its position was that "the provocations and confrontations are a danger to peace particularly in the eastern Mediterranean area."

Australian Foreign Minister Bill Hayden said the situation could "lend itself to escalation" and urged restraint.

In Beirut, the Lebanese media said the fighting in the Gulf of Sidra has brought about a "de facto state of war" between the United States and Libya. Beirut's leftist As-Safir daily, which is close to Khadafy, called the fighting an "American aggression" ordered by President Reagan.

In Abu Dhabi, capital of the pro-Western United Arab Emirates, the government-owned daily al-Ittihad denounced the attack as "aggression against Libya" and warned of "another Vietnam" for the United States.

Kuwaiti newspapers splashed reports of the attack across their front pages, terming the U.S. action a "provocation."

U.S. had right to be in Gulf of Sidra, expert says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most nations agree that the water extending 12 miles from a country's shores falls into its jurisdiction. Col. Moammar Khadafy's Libya claims 120 miles or more.

That legal conflict helped spark Monday's clash between U.S. forces and the North African nation.

Khadafy drew a "line of death" over the Gulf of Sidra, a U-shaped body of water north of Libya, and claimed the entire body as Libyan territory.

It was after U.S. jets crossed that line that Libya fired at least six missiles at them Monday, administration officials said. In retaliation, American warplanes knocked out a Libyan missile site and disabled two guided-missile patrol boats.

For most of this century, the United States and all other nations recognized a three-mile limit. But in 1979, as part of the negotiations over the International Law of the Sea Conference, the United States agreed to accept a 12-mile limit for territorial rights for most nations.

However, the "line of death" drawn by Khadafy extends more than 120 miles from the Libyan shore.

"Khadafy has drawn this 'line of death' which goes way out beyond what other countries accept as their international water borders," said one legal expert, who wanted to remain anonymous. "There's no question that the United States had the right to sail in that body of water."

That was the view of the Reagan administration, too. Said Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger: "We ...took retaliatory action to ensure that our ability to stay in international waters was maintained."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the U.S. Navy ships were operating in the area to demonstrate that the United States does not recognize the Libyan territorial claim.

Missiles — not guns — battle's key weapons

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the arms-length scrimmage in the Gulf of Sidra between United States and Libyan forces, both sides used missiles that could strike from great distances.

Monday's Mediterranean military exchange showed that missiles and not guns were the key offensive and defensive weapons used to strike at distant adversaries.

The Harpoon missiles fired from U.S. aircraft at Libyan patrol boats are all-weather, jet-powered cruise missiles made by the McDonnell-Douglas Corp. The weapon, designed to be launched from aircraft, ships or submarines, can be used against ships or ground targets.

A 14-foot-long weapon with short, stubby wings, the Harpoon flies just under the speed of sound, has a range of about 60 nautical miles and normally carries a 500-pound warhead of high-energy explosives.

Another American missile used in the engagement, the HARM, was fired by U.S. Navy jets at Libyan land-based radar sites.

The HARM, for High-Speed Anti-Radiation Missile, is a solid-fuel rocket built by Texas Instruments that is designed to home in on enemy radar transmissions as they track U.S. planes and ships.

The Soviet-made anti-aircraft missiles fired by Libyan forces at U.S. aircraft were SA-2s and SA-5s, U.S. authorities say.

According to military reference books, the newer, two-stage SA-5s are long-range weapons that can strike targets more than 150 miles away at altitudes exceeding 80,000 feet. The supersonic missiles are propelled into the air with a solid-fuel rocket booster and use a ramjet engine.
