Gov. Clements finds out there's no free lunch

By SUSAN STOLER

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — There was no free lunch for Bill Clements Wednesday on his first day as governor.

His midday meal cost $2.48, to be exact.

It was a change from the night before, when raw oysters, boiled shrimp, roast beef and other "heavy hors d'oeuvres" filled tables at his five inaugural balls.

Clements appeared to make the transition well from partying to business. He arrived at his Capitol office at 9:30 a.m., after retiring around 3 a.m.

"I finally looked at my watch last night and it was five minutes of 3 a.m.," he told reporters during a photo session at 1 p.m. "I was in my own room (at the Sheraton Crest Inn) visiting with some other people."

He began his the day by meeting with Attorney General Mark White.

"We talked about matters of concern to the attorney general's office, including appropriations and the case load," White said afterward. "I think we have developed a good working relationship. I also wanted him to know he has a hard working lawyer over there."

State Auditor George McNiel explained his official duties in another meeting with the chief executive and Dallas service contractor Joe Kirven discussed a possible position in the Clements administration with the governor.

After the morning conferences, Clements strolled out of the Capitol to the cafeteria across the street.

"Sorry to be causing all this disturbance," the governor told cafeteria manager Frank Beynon as two dozen reporters and photographers invaded the dining hall with him.

Rain began falling as Clements left with three aides.

The governor's Department of Public Safety driver, Jim Williamson, ran two blocks to the Capitol to fetch Clements' car for the one-block ride back.

Clements' first experience with the Senate was successful as the upper chamber unanimously confirmed his appointments of George Strake as secretary of state and Brig. Gen. Willie Scott as adjutant general.

"Both of these men represent the kind of high quality and very capable people I'm planning to bring into state government," he said.

4 SECTIONS, 44 PAGES

What do you do on a rainy day, which, depending on your outlook, may or may not be dreary?

If it's a workday for your average workaholic and office slaves, well, nothing much changes.

You just do your work as if the sun were out and as if all's well with the world.

But on those figuratively rainy days when you've got much of nothing to do or just don't want to do nothing very much what do you do?

Sleep.

Call police headquarters and complain about those squealy tires you heard last week.

Write the mayor a letter of indignation about anything that's amuck in the city. You'll have a wide choice. Be picky.

Call up the Sky leader of your church and say that you know the preacher is just as human as anybody else, but that he ought not to act that way.

Tell the principal of your children's teachers essentially the same thing about the teachers.

Drop by the library and scan or peruse those books you said you would read when you had time after college. (Did you think the 24-hour clock would expand after school days? Anything but.)

Write a letter to the editor of your newspaper or opinion magazine and say that, yes, you do believe in freedom of the speech, assembly and of the press, but that maybe some things should be toned down or not printed at all and that other issues or views should be toned up and voiced.

Rekindle that exercise recreation program that went on the wane when the cold, ice, sleet and snow descended.

Pledge not to gossip any more. Just discuss thy neighbor.

Or if you do, make it really worth

Firefighters prepared at airport

By GUY SULLIVAN
R-T Staff Writer

The city of Midland has prepared for that unpleasant possibility by stationing trained firefighters and some of the most modern firefighting equipment available at Midland Regional Airport.

Their purpose is to save the lives of passengers and crews.

The newest addition to the airport fire station is a $111,186 combination Ford chassis and Ward La France rescue and firefighting unit. That's fancy talk for a rescue fire engine.

They and two other shifts maintain a "constant vigil" waiting for what everybody hopes won't happen — a plane crash and fire.

Capt. Byron Pace and Larry Green, fireman-hoseman, do the rescue work on their shift, when it comes to that.

Driving the modern one man operated fire engines and spraying flame smothering foam and water up to 150 to 200 feet are Lee Pittman and Ray Tindall, equipment operators.

Then there are the occasional airport fires to which they respond.

The latest "weapon" in their anti-fire arsenal, the rescue fire engine, arrived last summer following a three year wait for delivery.

It's capable of carrying 300 gallons of firefighting foam, which costs $10 per gallon. That's $3,000 worth, said Pittman and Capt. Pace.

"It can spray 1,000 gallons of water or foam per minute," Pace added.

The 300 gallons of foam equals the effectiveness of 6,000 gallons of water, he added.

Pittman, who's been a city fireman "since the days when the police and firemen were the same," said the worst airport fire he can recall fighting took place Dec. 21, 1963.

On that date, a twin engine Corvair owned by Union Oil Co. of California was making an instrument landing under adverse weather conditions, he recalled.

As a result of efforts of men like Sgt. Billy Smith of the Department of Public Safety and Marvin Frizzell, then of the Air Terminal Fire Department, three people escaped the crash.

Bill Clayton is running

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Bill Clayton, just starting an unprecedented third consecutive term as House speaker, says he's running for a fourth term and claims it's already in the bag.

Representatives, meanwhile, will learn today where they fit in the House scheme of things when Clayton announces their committee assignments.

Clayton said he was pushed into the early announcement by Rep. John Wilson, D-La Grange, who told reporters Wednesday he was running for speaker of the 1981 House.

"He certainly forced us to make some decisions. We will be seeking a fourth term. We already have 90 signed pledge cards and expect by the next day or so we will have over 100," Clayton said.

The speaker is elected by the House, and it takes a majority — 76 votes if all members are present — to win.

~~Wilson said nobody should serve~~ more than two terms, and Clayton started his third one Jan. 9.

One killed, another hurt near Odessa

ODESSA — An Odessa woman was killed and a man was critically injured in a one car accident two miles south of here late Wednesday night.

Ector County Justice of the Peace Virgil Lumpee pronounced Mary Ortega Ramirez, 33, dead at the scene. Ms. Ramirez was a passenger in a pickup truck driven by Jose Castillo, 30, also of Odessa, according to officials.

Castillo was listed in critical condition today in the intensive care unit of Medical Center Hospital, undergoing treatment for a broken neck and broken right arm.

Investigators said Castillo was traveling south on Crane Avenue and was turning onto the southbound lane of U.S. Highway 385 when his car rolled over three times and went through a fence. Both occupants were thrown from the vehicle, officers said.

Department of Public Safety troopers Jack Wasson and Rene Ybarra investigated the accident.

Carter budget would cut many jobs

By OWEN ULLMANN

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's proposed "austere" budget for 1980 would eliminate 158,000 public jobs and cut the government's giant CETA employment and training program by $700 million.

The budget also would eliminate 250,000 federally subsidized summer jobs for underprivileged young people, The Associated Press has learned.

However, administration sources said proposed cuts in the federal jobs program would be offset by a new tax credit designed to encourage private business to hire poor, young and chronically unemployed adults.

The AP obtained details of the budget Wednesday as Carter declared that he has "more than met" his goal of holding the 1980 budget deficit below $30 billion, while still increasing spending for defense and providing an additional $4.5 billion for the poor.

It was learned that the budget Carter will send Congress Monday for the fiscal year beginning next Oct. 1 will total $532 billion with a deficit of $29 billion.

Spending in the 1979 budget year is estimated at $493 billion, with a projected deficit of $40 billion.

"The budget commitment will be to control inflation," Carter said Wednesday at a news conference. "It will be very austere, stringent, tough fiscal policy, but fair to the American people and oriented to help those who are most disadvantaged to have a better quality of life.

"We have not neglected the needs of disadvantaged Americans, poor Americans or those who are unemployed," said Carter. To prove his point, he said total allocation of funds for the poor will be increased by $4.5 billion, but he did not say how the money would be spent or whether the increase is sufficient to offset inflation.

On other subjects at his news conference, Carter:

—Said he is confident the people of Iran can restore stability to their nation and he supports the new administration of Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar. Carter said he does not know how long the Shah of Iran would be away from the country, and warned that an extended interruption in Iranian oil production "would create increasingly scarce supplies on the world market."

Vietnam rebel forces assault island bastion

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnamese forces assaulted the Cambodian island bastion of Kong today, launched heavy air strikes against two embattled coastal port areas and were faced with resistance in at least half a dozen hotspots across Cambodia, military analysts said.

Thai intelligence sources said Vietnamese troops, supported by gunboats, made their attack from the seaward side of Kong, located just off the coast of southwestern Cambodia. Other reliable sources confirmed the attack against one of the bases of the ex-Phnom Penh regime, but could not say who now held the island.

One analyst described the situation at Cambodia's only deep water port, Kompong Som, as "highly contested" with neither side being able to use the city's vital port.

Thai intelligence sources said the Vietnamese had moved large gunboats into the bay of Kompong Som to pound onshore resistance and were bringing reinforcements into the area along Highway 4, Phnom Penh's 125-mile route to the sea.

Fighting was also reported at Kampot, further along the coast toward Vietnam from Kompong Som; Sisophon in the northwest, near the famous 11th century Buddhist temple of Preah Vihear in the remote north, around the provincial capital of Mondolkiri in the northeast, and southeastern Takeo province.

Authorities at the Thai frontier, reinforced to prevent a spill-over of the fighting, said 200 to 300 Cambodians suspected of being troops of the fallen regime of ex-Premier Pol Pot escaped into Thailand's Surin province, arriving in several trucks that

Gov. Blanton replaced to block more paroles

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Lamar Alexander is Tennessee's governor today — taking over in an unprecedented and abruptly arranged ceremony aimed at blocking the release of more convicts.

Ousted three days early was Ray Blanton, the 48-year-old Democrat who stepped into a political hornets nest when he granted clemency to 24 convicted murderers and 28 other convicts this week.

The surprise swearing-in Wednesday came amid reports that a grand jury would investigate the pardons and commutations granted by Blanton.

Blanton's action Monday came a month after the arrest of two of his aides and a state trooper on federal charges of selling pardons and paroles. A federal grand jury is investigating the alleged scheme.

Blanton, who was not told of the oath-taking ceremony in advance, said he was "saddened and hurt for the state of Tennessee that this clandestine action has taken place...There is such a thing as courtesy. I thought they would have the courtesy to tell me."

He said he had been told he had been barred from his Capitol office for security reasons.

Shortly before taking the oath of office from Chief Justice Joe Henry of the state Supreme Court, Alexander said, "I have been authorized by the lieutenant governor and the speaker of the House to make this statement:

"The U.S. attorney today advised each of us that he has substantial reason to believe that the governor of Tennessee was planning to release

Pol Pot's ambassador to Laos, Sam San, arrived in Bangkok en route to Peking and told reporters 4,000 Russian advisers are operating with the Vietnamese invasion force in Cambodia. He claimed to have photographs to support the claim, but he did not show them.

Pol Pot's government is reported to have had 20,000 Chinese military and technical advisers.

The Philippines News Agency reported from Peking that Pol Pot's deputy premier, Ieng Sary, would return to Cambodia soon to help the former premier and former President Khieu Samphan direct a guerrilla war against the Vietnamese and the Cambodian Communist government they installed in Phnom Penh on Jan. 7.

The Philippine report said the guerrillas could draw arms and ammunition from "stockpiles built up in secluded areas in anticipation of the anti-Pol Pot offensive."

Vietnam sent an estimated 100,000 troops driving into Cambodia on three fronts after a three)year border war with the Khmer Rouge Communists who took control of Cambodia in 1975.

one or more persons from prison who are targets of an investigation of payoffs for release from prison."

A federal prosecutor, who asked not to be identified, said the federal grand jury may investigate the 49 commutations and three pardons granted by Blanton this week.

Alexander, the state's 45th governor, said before being sworn in: "These are not very happy days for the state of Tennessee and they are not very happy days for me. I ask for the prayers of the people."

He later ordered no more prisoners are to be released "without a properly executed document with my signature."

The state attorney general ruled earlier that Alexander could take the oath of office any time after Jan. 15. The decision to go ahead with the swearing in was made after conferences between Alexander, a Republican, and the speakers of the House and Senate, both Democrats.

In Jackson, during what had been scheduled as a pre-inaugural event, Alexander said, "I think it will be up to the people to judge whether I did the right thing. I think I did. I think I had no choice."

Blanton, who served one four-year term as governor, said Wednesday he had commuted the sentences because of a state court order to relieve prison overcrowding. "I tried to comply with it," he said of the order.

Light drizzle washes Basin

A light drizzle fell over most parts of the Permian Basin early today and the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport was forecasting a 10 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms for most of the day with a slight chance of rain on Friday.

Daytime temperatures continued to stay in the 50s and 60s, a contrast from the cold, winter weather that had visited the region several times during the first two weeks of the new year.

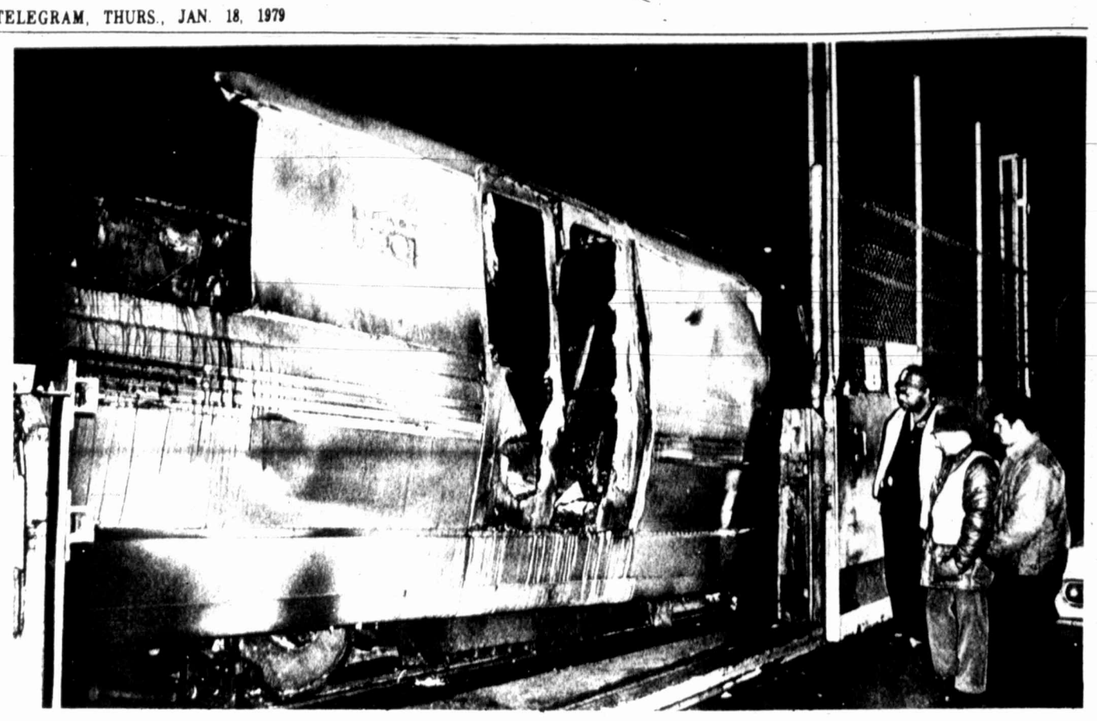

The weatherman is forecasting partly cloudy and cooler weather tonight and a 20 percent chance of rain on Friday. The high today and Friday is expected to be near 60. Tonight's low is expected to be near 10.

Winds are expected to blow from the southeast today at 5 to 10 mph, shifting to the southwest at 10 to 15 mph later this afternoon and blowing from the west at 10 to 15 mph tonight.

Clearer and cooler weather should move into the area by weekend, a forecaster at the airport said.

The National Weather Service had reported that .01 inch of rain had fallen over Midland by 6 a.m. today. Small amounts of rain were reported throughout most of the city.

Texas Electric Service Co. reported .01 inch of rain had fallen in East Midland, .03 inch in Odessa and a trace over most other parts of the Permian Basin.

Commuters in Bay Area facing delays after BART train fire

OAKLAND (AP) — Tens of thousands of commuters faced delays today after a Bay Area Rapid Transit train caught fire while whizzing through a tunnel under San Francisco Bay, leaving one firefighter dead and 32 persons hospitalized.

Investigators were poking through the charred remains of the train and a blackened strip of track for clues to the fire, the most serious incident in BART's 6½ years of operation.

All of those hospitalized suffered from smoke inhalation. Most were firefighters who battled the blaze for 1½ hours Wednesday night inside the 3.6 mile tunnel known as "the Tube."

BART officials said they had no idea what caused the fire.

"It could be anything from an electrical fire to who knows what," said BART public relations director Mike Healy. "We will hold a full-scale investigation."

Thousands of homebound commuters were delayed for hours because of the fire. Healy said service on the 75-mile BART system was expected to be limited today.

About 40 passengers were evacuated safely, although some were treated for smoke inhalation. Most of the injured were in stable condition, but at least one firefighter was in critical condition.

Healy said the fire began about 6:15 p.m. on the fourth car of a six-car train headed from Oakland to San Francisco. The train was about a quarter of the way through the tunnel, moving about 70 mph, when the fire broke out, he said.

"It was something under the bottom of the train, a big explosion," said Russ Tenny, a passenger. "You could feel a change of pressure in the air, then there were a lot of sparks and light outside."

"People were yelling, 'There's water coming in!' — which wasn't true, but it's the first thing you think of when you're under water in the Tube. It even caught me for awhile," he said.

Tenny said passengers sat in the train for about 40 minutes while the air thickened with smoke.

Carter's 1980 budget would increase outlays for welfare and income security programs — including Social Security and unemployment compensation — by $20 billion to $179 billion, and increase spending for defense by $10 billion to $122.8 billion.

and flames, according to a citation given the city employees by then-Midland Mayor H.C. Avery Jr.

Avery praised the "efficient work of the Fire Department in holding the blaze in check, in order that the rescue of the pilot, Donald McKee, could be effected."

Pace said Wednesday: "Our main job is to keep the fire down while airlines personnel help people off. Of course, in emergencies we'd call in help from town if it's justified."

He praised the new truck because, unlike on regular fire engines, specially designed rescue units can pump and discharge water or foam while the vehicle is in motion.

"That's because the pump engine is separate from the drive engine on both our two pumper trucks," he said.

"One pumper wasn't enough because in the last four to five years the air traffic here has doubled and tripled," he said.

"It's no fun fighting fires," said Pittman, adding, "especially if there are lives involved or people trapped. It's no fun at all."

He should know. Pittman said he's been at the scene of at least three such blazes in his 22 years on the department while working at the airport station.

Each man on an airport fire station shift eventually is trained at Crash Fire Rescue School, said Green. The most recent one was held in Lubbock and was sponsored by the state, cities, and the airline pilot association, plus the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration, he said.

'Baby boom' boggles hospital

The Hancock family caused some confusion this week at Midland Memorial Hospital, and a cigar salesman would have loved the whole thing.

The Hancock brothers, Jerry and Phillip, both became fathers of sons within the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Hancock recently became the parents of Andrew Hancock, and Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Hancock became parents of Phillip Nathan Hancock.

Sound confusing? How about putting both mothers and babies in the same room?

But both Mrs. Hancocks are now in separate rooms, and the confusion is all cleared up.

The chain of events began when Mrs. Jerry (Jill) Hancock delivered her baby Sunday. Mrs. Phillip (Judy) Hancock delivered her child Tuesday.

"It has been unusual," admitted Jill, adding, "When they brought me out of delivery about 6 p.m., they put me in with Judy."

Said Judy, "I had a large enough room to put in another bed. Our being in the same room confused the kitchen staff, but we both finally received our breakfasts."

"What with two baby Hancock boys and two Mrs. Hancocks, it was confusing for a while, but they moved me to a different room," Jill said Wednesday.

Both mothers and babies were reported doing fine late Wednesday.

MMH may have to use tax funds

Midland Memorial Hospital may have to take its first dip into tax funds collected by the hospital district this month, trustees were told at their meeting Wenesday.

While operating losses were expected and provided for in the budget, the $263,000 loss for the past three months was some $49,000 more than budgeted, according to John Grimland, chairman of the trustees finance committee.

Tax money to be used was collected for the hospital operating cost, he added.

Losses were caused primarily by bad debts and the $35,000 per month transferred from the operating budget and the equipment purchase budget to fund depreciation, Grimland said.

Another cost for operating losses has been the delay in the opening of the north wing of the hospital. Delays in the arrival of some equipment has put off the opening from October to late next week.

Meanwhile, the wing has been heated, cooled, lighted and staffed while it has produced no revenue for the hospital, according to Jerry Campbell, assistant hospital administrator.

In other business, Tevis Herd was elected president of the Board of Trustees. Outgoing president Mickey Cappadonna will serve as vice president, and Grimland was elected secrtary of the board.

Trustees agreed to pay printing costs for emergency room brochures suggested by the Citizens Advisory Committee. The explanations of emergency room procedures and costs, printed in both English and Spanish, will be mailed in gas bills as a service provided by Pioneer Natural Gas, committee members said.

Hospital Administrator Wayne Ulrich announced the retirement of two longtime hospital employees. Gwendolyn McKay, director of nurses, will retire April 15 after 20 years with the hospital. Comptroller Margaret Wright will retire Feb. 2 after 22 years.

Fire strikes London office building

LONDON (AP) — A major fire roared through an office building in the heart of London today, and police said a number of people were not accounted for.

The fire was in Villiers House, a large office block in the Strand. The building is a block from Charing Cross Station and near Trafalgar Square, one of the British capital's busiest hubs.

The Strand was closed to traffic as firemen used more than 20 pumps to fight the blaze. Police said they feared some people might be trapped inside the building.

Greenlanders vote for home rule after years of Danish leadership

GODTHAAB, Greenland (AP) — Braving howling blizzards, Greenlanders voted more than 2-to-1 for home rule for their sprawling, ice-crusted North Atlantic island after 250 years of Danish colonial administration.

Rockets and fireworks soared into the northern sky and paraders marched by torchlight in the capital city of Godthaab as islanders celebrated results of Wednesday's balloting.

Of 18,139 vooes counted, election authorities said 12,709 Greenlanders voted for home rule, 4,687 were opposed, 508 ballots were blank and 235 were invalidated.

The only votes still uncounted were from two isolated settlements on the East Coast cut off by a communications blackout. The communities have a total of 158 eligible voters.

More than 10,000 eligible voters failed to cast ballots. Authorities blamed fierce winter storms and bitter cold temperatures, rough even for Greenland. But observers said many of the island's nearly 10,000 Danes had decided to stay out of the referendum and leave the decision to the Inuits, the native eskimos who make up most of Greenland's nearly 50,000 inhabitants.

The overwhelming "Yes" vote implements a home rule plan worked out in five years of negotiations by a joint Danish-Greenlandic commission and approved last November by the Danish Parliament.

Lars Chemnitz, chairman of Greenland's Provincial Council, said the vote did not mean a "divorce from Denmark, but a healthy development in relations between an old colony and an old colonial power."

Midland's Republican delegation whoops it up at inauguration festival

AUSTIN — Dozens of Midland Republicans descended on Austin this week to claim the victory they won in November.

The occasion was the inauguration of William P. Clements, the first Republican governor in 105 years. And the Midland delegation made the most of the occasion.

"I've never seen so many Republicans. I didn't know there were so many," commented oil man Earle M. Craig Jr. at the Inaugural Gala.

Midlanders were grouped with party-goers from the rest of West Texas and Dallas at the largest of three black-tie dances to mark the changing of the governorship.

Midland Republican Jim Lacy lost his bid to become a member of the Railroad Commission, but he was celebrating Clements' victory all the same.

On the commissioner's job, Lacy said, "I saw my opponent (Commissioner John Poerner, a Democrat) the other day. He said, 'You haven't been down to see me.'" Lacy said he assured Poerner he would indeed be by later.

Lacy also came up with probably the worst pun of the day: "It doesn't matter whether the sun is shining or not. It's still 'in-Clements' weather."

George W. Bush, another defeated Republican, and his wife, Laura, also were on hand, shaking hands and visiting with old friends from other parts of the state.

"Hooray!" was the only comment of beaming Midland County Commissioner Win Brown, who was Clements' West Texas coordinator during the campaign.

Midland Rep. Tom Craddick, a Republican, wandered through the crowd at the ball. "It's gone well so far," said Craddick of the legislative session which began last week. "We haven't done anything."

House committees were scheduled to be appointed today, Craddick added, allowing business in that body to get into full swing.

State Sen. Pete Snelson of Midland, a Democrat, braved the Republican onslaught to attend the gala. "We're outnumbered, no question. But it's kind of fun anyway," he laughed.

However Republican and official the occasion, mostly it was a party, and one that got off to a slow start at that.

Early in the evening, one Midlander was heard to remark, "We're in a room full of people we don't even know; the governor's not here, and we're ready for it to liven up."

But by 10 o'clock, the entire floor of The University of Texas Special Events Center — site of Longhorn home basketball games — was a teeming mass of table-hopping and wandering folks, interspersed with waiters bearing trays of drinks.

Handshakes and hugs were the order of the day, as were jabs at the Democratic Party.

Midland school Trustee Marshall McCrea said the best part of the evening was meeting friends he hadn't seen in years.

"Isn't this a blast?" asked Fran Henderson, who commented it was the best-organized party of its size she had ever seen.

"I think we ought to do it every four years," her husband, Jim, commented.

Bill Shaner, Midland's Republican county chairman, said he had enjoyed "every inspired moment" of the day.

Midland Mayor and Republican National Committee Member Ernest Angelo Jr. made the rounds, though he and his wife, Penny, weren't think-

'Special visitors' or not, group savors occasion

Approximately 35 Midland Republicans had joined forces to take in the festivities surrounding the inauguration of Gov. William P. Clements.

They joined about that many more who had come down to Austin earlier for the same purpose.

Actually, there was a good deal of organization in the group arriving Tuesday, but Priddy was right about everything turning out all right.

For one thing, it was a happy day for Republicans who never expected to be on the winning side at an inaugural. "I've waited 105 years to go to one," said Mary Ann Yeager."

"My cup runneth over," was the mood of Jno. P. Butler.

The group arrived in part of the armada of private planes which descended on the city for the occasion.

They traveled around the city by chartered bus, complete with bartender. And, if anyone failed to have a good time, they didn't show it.

"The Democrats are burning the Capitol," he cried.

When slow restaurant service stymied those who had wanted to view the parade, they went to the Driscoll Hotel and Scholtz' Garden instead.

At Scholtz' Betsy Dwyer reminisced about her days as an undergraduate at The University of Texas, and one of her suitors was "Benny" Bentsen, now better known as U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen.

But Mrs. Dwyer has been happily married to her husband, Ed, for almost 35 years, she added.

Some of them never intended to go to the parade, which one man described as "1,300 junior high school and high school bands and the Kilgore Rangerettes."

For those who had expected to and missed it, there was an impromptu private show from a group of giggling high school majorettes, which met with applause from the Midlanders.

At the swearing-in ceremonies themselves, a press platform bedecked with bunting obstructed the group's view of the action, but nobody seemed terribly upset.

Mrs. Dwyer cadged a "special visitor" ribbon and got into the section of chairs reserved for those with that designation. "I'm the only one who got to see it," she said later. She reported to the rest of the group

Iran seeks peace with Khomaini

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — The new Iranian government sent an envoy today to seek peace with Ayatullah Khomaini, its most dangerous enemy, as six to 20 persons were reported killed in the second day of clashes between demonstrators and soldiers loyal to Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

Jalal Tehrani, head of the Regency Council standing in for the shah during his forced vacation abroad, was to meet on Friday in Paris with the religious leader heading the opposition to the shah and the government he left behind him, the sources said.

Another source reported former U.S. Attorney General Ramsey Clark has been meeting for more than a week in Tehran with members of the National Front, the chief political opponents of the shah and Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar. Clark, a Democrat, was reported on an "unofficial, private" visit, and there was speculation he was trying to establish contact between the Carter administration and the shah's foes.

Military sources said troops opened fire today on anti-shah demonstrators in Dezful, 60 miles north of the oil city of Ahwaz. They reported six persons killed and more than a dozen wounded, but other sources reported 20 killed.

Radio Tehran said the demonstrators attacked several officers' families, and soldiers came to the rescue and opened fire.

Thirty persons were reported killed Wednesday in Ahwaz when loyalist troops fired on tens of thousands of demonstrators jubilant over the shah's departure from Iran the day before. More violence was feared Friday, when Khomaini has called for peaceful demonstrations in honor of the 7th century founder of the Shiite Moslem sect.

Army sources also reported that Kurdish tribesmen attacked an army post at Gourish, on the Iraqi border, killed two of the post's five soldiers and wounded two, then surrounded the post. The shah supported the Kurds in their rebellion against the government of Iraq until 1974, when he and the radical Iraqis patched up their differences.

No easing of Iran's political and economic crisis appeared in sight despite an appeal from President Carter to Khomaini to give Bakhtiar's government a chance.

Carter, speaking at a news conference in Washington Wednesday, said he hoped the religious leader would "permit the government that has now been established by the legal authorities in Irwn and under the constitution to have a chance to succeed."

There was no immediate response from the 78-year-old Shiite patriarch at his home-in-exile outside Paris. But despite the Regency Council's mission to him, there was no expectation in Tehran that he would retreat from his announced goals of an Islamic republic in Iran with a government controlled by him.

Khomaini, who has repeatedly called Bakhtiar's government illegal because it was named by the shah and confirmed by the shah's Parliament, said Wednesday he was continuing to put together a provisional government and it would begin work soon on a new republican constitution for Iran.

Sadegh Ghotbzadegh, one of Khomaini's chief aides, said he hoped the government lineup could be announced by Friday. Meanwhile, Khomaini called on the Iranian people to continue the strikes and street demonstrations that forced the shah to leave the country. Power station workers blacked out Tehran for five hours.

Carter also told his news conference he expects the alliance between Iran and the United States to continue. But Ghotbzadegh said Khomaini would not allow the United States to continue to operate the intelligence bases from which it monitored the Soviet Union, and Bakhtiar has indicated the shah's huge orders for American arms would be reduced drastically.

Angelo said he heard some members of the Texas Aggie Band, who didn't know where he and his wife were from, commenting favorably on the Lee band's performance.

The brief appearance of Trini Lopez drew a favorable reaction from the Midland delegation.

The buffet — scrambled eggs, Canadian bacon, cheese grits, apple crepes and sweet rolls — got mixed reviews, though the apple crepes gained wide approval. There was some discontent when it was learned crab meat and oysters on the half-shell had been the fare at the gala at the Driscoll Hotel for the Houston area.

When they arrived, some of the Midland group had planned to switch at mid-evening to the the Driscoll. But by the scheduled time, most decided to stick with the Special Events Center and await the governor's arrival.

The governor's party, which included Lt. Gov. William Hobby, arrived late in the evening, the event being the last on the schedule of five official functions.

After brief remarks from Clements, Hobby and Mrs. Clements, the lights went up and the Midlanders began filing out, stopping first to get their "state of Texas" plates, the favor for the evening.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, who just a month ago chastized Iranian exile leader Ayatullah Khomaini for encouraging "bloodbaths and violence," is now taking a much more conciliatory view of the Moslem chieftain.

At a news conference Wednesday, Carter depicted Khomaini as a deeply religious man and made no mention of his year-long struggle to depose the Shah of Iran. Instead, Carter appealed to Khomaini to give Iran's new civilian government "a chance to succeed."

Carter's changed tone appeared to reflect an appreciation of the extraordinary popularity Khomaini commands in Iran despite his 15 years in exile.

Some officials believe that no Iranian government can survive without Khomaini's backing. They say the new civilian government headed by Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar may not survive because of Khomaini's vigorous opposition to it.

Khomaini contends the Bakhtiar government is tainted since it was authorized by the shah. He said Tuesday the shah's departure from Iran was only a "first step" toward the establishment of an Islamic state.

Khomaini is expected to announce a provisional government in a few days which he hopes will replace the 12-day-old Bakhtiar government.

Nonetheless, Carter called on Khomaini to join some other anti-shah political and religious leaders in support of Bakhtiar.

Ford meeting with Shah, Anwar Sadat

ASWAN, Egypt (AP) — The "vacationing" shah of Iran, former U.S. President Gerald R. Ford and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat discussed events in the Middle East today in a one-hour meeting on an island in the Nile.

A spokesman for Sadat said in a statement that "a spirit of understanding prevailed" among the three men as they discussed "the general situation and the latest events and developments in the area."

The discussion was believed to have centered on the turmoil in Iran which resulted in the shah's leaving his country Tuesday for what could turn into exile. Reports say that he will visit King Hassan of Morocco before flying on to the United States.

A spokesman for Ford said the former chief executive was "very, very sad" about the troubles in Iran and hoped that stability would return soon.

Delays fail to dampen high spirits

Actually, the entire party was entitled to the ribbons, but that word from the Inaugural Committee came so late that it had to take the form of a message left at the hotel.

And a delay in landing clearance, caused by fog and the number of planes, changed the schedule so the bus went directly to the inauguration instead of the hotel first.

But when Priddy expressed his view that they had more fun without being "special visitors" and thus free to "wander in and out," no one argued.

Closed hearing held in case of Dan White

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A judge heard testimony behind closed doors to decide if former Supervisor Dan White should be tried for murder in the deaths of Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk.

Municipal Court Judge R.J. Reynolds refused a defense request for a gag order to still witnesses, but said Wednesday he was required by law to grant a request for a closed hearing.

"I believe the people, press and news media usually, for the most part, at least try to report the news in a fair and impartial manner," he said in explaining his decision.

Most witnesses declined comment on their testimony.

Subcommittee report seeks tougher juvenile laws

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The preliminary report of a special Senate subcommittee on juvenile crime says youths who commit serious crimes should be punished accordingly.

"The manner in which justice is administered today is neither quick enough nor responsive enough to place the responsibility for a youth's conduct squarely on his or her own shoulders," said the report presented Wednesday to the Interim Subcommittee on Juvenile Crime.

"If criminal tendencies are to be stopped, a youthful offender should be made to realize that he or she will suffer the consequences of willful acts."

The report stems from federal court decisions shutting down the state's maximum security reform school that handled "what we then called juvenile delinquents," said Sen. Bill Meier, D-Euless.

New York and Oklahoma have passed legislation specifying how juveniles committing serious crimes can be legally treated, the report said.

"We now have no program as far as that type of individual is concerned," Meier said. "Right now we're hopelessly out of phase in terms of providing adequate juvenile detention facilities."

The problem juveniles, now referred to as status offenders, are sometimes placed with neglected or disturbed children.

The report said any new laws should stipulate, "Any youths tried and sentenced in adult criminal court should be confined separate and apart from adult offenders."

A related preliminary analysis of the state's juvenile crime facilities presented to the subcommittee Wednesday said $44 million would be needed to finance a complete youth justice system in Texas.

That figure represents a $20 million increase over present budget plans, said the report by Arthur Young and Co. consultants.

"I don't believe we can realistically consider appropriating large sums of money," Meier said. "We can change the structure of the law — where we're not talking about dollars."

Meier suggested groundwork for a juvenile justice system could be laid in the current legislative session but developing it completely could take at least four years.

State law should prohibit juveniles from being kept in an adult jail for any longer than 24 hours, but local courts in some cases should be able to commit juvenile offenders to state schools or programs, the Young report said.

Detention of juveniles "should be the last resort," Ed Reed, a Young spokesman, told the subcommittee.

Only 16 counties now have separate detention facilities for youths awaiting hearings and only one center is now equipped for youths after judgments are made, his report said.

"The only satisfactory approach ... is to do it on a regional basis," Reed said.

Among the other recommendations of the subcommittee's own preliminary report were increased power of juvenile courts, and increased crime prevention training for law enforcement officers as well as parents, and a new Texas Family Code provision for "Parents in Need of Supervision."

Gov. Clements resigns from board

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Gov. Bill Clements resigned from the board of trustees of Southern Methodist University the day before he became governor, a university spokesman announced.

In a letter to the trustees, Clements said he felt he should resign because serving in both positions "could be perceived as a conflict of interest."

Clements, a graduate of SMU, said that serving on the board had been "one of the most rewarding experiences in my life."

Marvin displays no feeling

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Lee Marvin showed no emotion when his former lover, Michelle Triola Marvin, wept bitterly on the witness stand as she recalled her pregnancies by Marvin and the abortions she said left her unable to bear children.

At one point Wednesday, as Miss Marvin spoke barely above a whisper, the actor's voice boomed across the courtroom: "I can't hear a thing." Miss Marvin was told to speak louder.

Her cross-examination by Marvin's lawyers was scheduled to begin today.

The 46-year-old Miss Marvin, testifying in the landmark property settlement trial, detailed the disintegration of her six-year love affair with Marvin — a relationship she says entitles her to $1 million plus a share of his assets.

She became pregnant three times, she said — once she miscarried and twice she had abortions at Marvin's urging.

"He didn't want more children," she said. He had four by a former marriage.

Her attorney asked if Miss Marvin suffered any ill effects from the abortions.

She took a deep breath and said almost inaudibly: "I have scars and I can't bear children." Then she burst into tears.

Marvin's attorney, A. David Kagon, told Superior Court Judge Arthur Marshall: "It's our contention a good part of this testimony is fictitious."

The importance of the abortion testimony in the non-jury trial was uncertain. Miss Marvin has the legal burden to prove that she and Marvin, 54, had an "implied contract" to share their efforts and property.

Lawyers in the case say such a contract may be implied from the conduct of the parties during their relationship. Thus, almost all conduct is relevant.

The case, the first to interpret a 1976 California Supreme Court decision, is expected to set a precedent for alimony without marriage in cases of cohabitating single couples.

In the final hours of her direct testimony, Miss Marvin said her romance with the actor was destroyed by his drinking problem.

Once, she said, she found him drunk, dangling a young woman by one leg out the window of a high-rise Las Vegas hotel. "I nearly fainted," she said.

She testified that she joined a self-help group for families of alcoholics, but Marvin resented her efforts.

"He told me that obviously his drinking was bugging me and making me unhappy and that he was never going to give up drinking," she recalled. "He said it was part of his life."

"He said I was uptight and tired and that I wasn't much fun anymore," she said tearfully.

Until the day they separated in 1970, Miss Marvin said she believed Marvin planned to support her indefinitely. She said she was stunned when the actor's lawyer told her: "You have no legal rights...you'd better take what you can get and don't make him mad or you'll get nothing."

'People mover' experiment no longer draws laughs

By BOB ROBINSON

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — They aren't snickering any more about those little cars that glide silently along the raised concrete guideways of the Personal Rapid Transit system.

An occasional gripe can still be heard, but the word "boondoggle" hardly surfaces in local conversation, even though the system has been closed for construction since summer.

The experiment in moving people through a congested area by computer also has proven itself to the federal government.

The Department of Transportation is committed to helping 10 cities build "people mover" projects, similar to the one here, at a cost estimated in 1976 at $578.7 million.

Copies of the PRT are being planned for Los Angeles, Jacksonville, Fla., Miami, Indianapolis, Baltimore, Detroit, St. Louis, Houston, Norfolk, Va., and St. Paul, Minn.

The Japanese already have one, and so do the Germans.

"The thing is 97 percent efficient and that's way above requirements," said Bob Trotter, a spokesman for the department's Urban Mass Transit Administration in Washington.

He said that last winter, when travel through most of the East Coast was restricted by bad weather, the PRT never missed a run.

"We've got films that show this thing running nicely through all the snow and ice," he said.

The PRT here has been idle since mid-summer while work is done on the second phase of the project. It is scheduled for start-up again next summer.

When finished, the PRT will connect two campuses of West Virginia University with 8.2 miles of single-lane guideway. Students buy passes with semester fees. The cost averages about 20 cents a day. Townspeople may ride the PRT for 25 cents a ride.

Only a few years ago, the PRT was in serious trouble. One federal official publicly stated that the then-incomplete system was in danger of being dismantled or blown up because it was too expensive.

Cost overruns had blown the projected cost from $17 million to $123.6 million.

But time and performance have overshadowed many of the doubts about the cost of the system, officials said.

"When the record started getting out to the public, this is when the attitude changed," said Samy Elias, the WVU engineering professor who is considered the father of the PRT. "... It became reliable. It does work."

The PRT was built as a demonstration project to show that such a system would work in a climate as varied as that in Morgantown.

But the new projects will not be nearly as expensive, partly because the research and development has already been done, Elias said.

"My own judgment is that of the first $60 million (of the PRT's cost), about 10 percent of it is research and development," he said.

In addition, the systems under consideration in the 10 cities are all much simpler than the PRT.

"The Morgantown system is very sophisticated," said Trotter. "Our people say there will probably never be another Morgantown built because of its complexity."

In the PRT, cars are summoned to the various stations, and when they are programmed to a desired location, they do not stop at stations in between. Most of the planned people movers in other cities will stop at each station.

The vehicles carry eight seated and 12 standing passengers and travel at speeds of up to 30 miles an hour. At peak periods, the vehicles, powered by electric motors that get energy from the guideways, can be spaced 15 seconds apart.

"They will be simple shuttle systems or loops which can best be described as horizontal elevators," said Trotter of systems planned for other cities.

SS tax cutback sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — A member of the House Ways and Means Committee introduced legislation Wednesday calling for a one-third reduction in the Social Security payroll taxes that workers pay.

Rep. William Brodhead, D-Mich., proposed using general revenues to finance a portion of the Social Security system to head off scheduled increases in the payroll tax in the future.

Congress has voted sharp increases in the Social Security tax for the next several years, and Brodhead said that unless some action is taken to roll back some of the planned increases, "I believe we will have a taxpayer revolt that will make Proposition 13 tame by comparison."

The maximum payroll tax a worker will pay this year is $1,404, a jump of $333 from last year. Next year, the maximum Social Security tax will go to $1,588, with annual increases planned thereafter for several years.

Brodhead proposed cutting the worker's tax by one-third over three years beginning in 1980, without recommending changes in the employer contribution.

The congressman proposed similar legislation last year, but the measure was never considered by the House.

Several members of Congress have proposed scaling back scheduled future Social Security tax increases, and the Carter administration also is studying ways of providing some relief from higher payroll taxes.

Red-dyed lollipops draw fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — A consumer group is accusing the American Cancer Society of passing out lollipops containing a coloring agent suspected of causing cancer.

The disagreement revolves around a fundraising drive by upstate New York chapters of the Cancer Society in which suckers containing Red Dye 40 are being used.

"Of all the dyes to use, this is insane," charged Michael F. Jacobson, head of the Center for Science in the Public Interest.

The Cancer Society response: "Until Red Dye 40 or any other additive has been declared unsafe and taken off the market, its use in manufactured products is perfectly proper."

The dye in question is approved by the Food and Drug Administration for use in food, but is undergoing re-evaluation as a result of scientific studies indicating it might cause cancer in test mice.

Jacobson released a letter he said he sent to Lane W. Adams, executive vice president of the American Cancer Society, urging the society to "immediately discontinue the distribution of the lollipops and join with others who are urging FDA to place a total ban on the use of Red No. 40 until its safety is established beyond doubt."

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Heart attack stays shorter

Dear Dr. Solomon: When my father had a heart attack about 20 years ago, he was kept in the hospital for three weeks. Recently a friend of mine had a heart attack and he was home in one week. Has the treatment changed that much in 20 years?—Earl

Dear Earl: Heart attack patients are no longer kept immobilized for long periods the way they were years ago. It is estimated that almost half of all patients suffering an acute myocardial infarction can be safely discharged from the hospital after one week. In general, candidates for early discharge include patients who have no serious complications during the first four days after the attack.

In a study conducted at the Duke University Medical Center, 33 of 67 patients who met the criteria for early discharge left the hospital after one week; the remaining 34 patients were discharged an averege of 11 days after admission. When the two groups were compared six months later, no significant differences between them were apparent, and all were doing well.

In addition to helping patients avoid the stress of lengthy hospitalization, early discharge can result in substantial monetary savings.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have a Lactase Enzyme deficiency and therefore have to be on a Lactase free diet. I love cheesecake but it's not allowed on my diet. Is there any way I can have it?—Mrs. C.C.

Dear Mrs. C.C.: Yes, you can have a cheeseless cheesecake. Here are the ingredients:

1 1/4 cups graham cracker crumbs
1/4 cup milk-free margarine, melted
1 tablespoon sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 cup boiling water
1 1-oz. package lemon gelatin
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1/2 teaspoon grated lemon rind
2 cups crumbled Tofu Bean curd, made from soybean, available fresh or canned, in vegetable markets or health food stores.)
1 10-oz. container Dessert Whip, thawed.

Press excess moisture from tofu; crumble and measure. Place on paper towel and let any additional moisture drain while preparing remaining ingredients.

Combine crumbs, margarine, sugar and cinnamon and press onto bottom of 2 in. round spring form pan or cake pan. Set aside. Pour boiling water into blender container, add gelatin and blend until dissolved. Add lemon juice, rind, and part of the tofu. Blend until smooth.

Add remaining tofu gradually; continue to blend until smooth. Pour into large bowl. Add dessert whip and combine with spatula or mixer at low speed. Pour over crust. Chill until set.

For a special treat, serve with sweetened fresh or frozen strawberries. Note: If you prefer not to use frozen dessert whip, you may add 1/4 cup nondairy liquid creamer to the blended ingredients and substitute a meringue made of four egg whites, stiffly beaten with 1/2 cup sugar and 1/2 teaspoon vanilla, for the dessert whip. This will make a lighter, less rich cheesecake.

Monks released

PARIS (AP) — The Vietnam government released four Buddhist monks after 20 months imprisonment, but continues to hold 37 other top Buddhist leaders, a Vietnamese Buddhist organization said here Wednesday.

The Paris office of the Vietnamese Buddhist Peace Delegation said the monks were arrested after the April 1975 communist takeover.

The group said it had thanked Hanoi for releasing its vice-president Thich Huyen Quang and executive secretary Thich Quang Do, both of whom were described as in poor physical condition.

Buddhist education chief Thich Thuyen An and executive council member Thich Than The also were released, the organization said.

Shah's wealth said incredible

WASHINGTON (AP) — Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and his family, now embarked on a vacation that may become permanent exile from Iran, can comfort themselves with a fortune that one source estimates at more than $20 billion, The Washington Post reported Wednesday.

In a dispatch from Tehran, the newspaper said the exact size of the monarch's wealth is a closely guarded secret. But the source, identified as an "Iranian economist," said the $1 billion figure previously reported was a "gross underestimate" and that the entire royal family's assets probably exceed $20 billion.

The newspaper did not explain how its source arrived at the $20 billion figure. But the Post quoted various other sources as saying that the royal family's wealth derives from Iranian oil revenues, widespread business investments and even a drug-smuggling operation in which the shah's twin sister, Princess Ashraf, was reported to have been deeply involved.

The main vehicle for the royal family's business interests is the Pahlavi Foundation, ostensibly a charity but in practice a profitable investment house, the Post said.

The newspaper said the official record of the foundation's assets has never been published, but it quoted from a list purportedly compiled by a dissident senior foundation employee and circulating in Tehran that names 207 firms in which the foundation or family members hold shares.

The Post said the foundation holdings include banks, hotels, casinos, industrial and mining ventures, agriculture, construction firms and trading companies.

Among the foundation holdings, the newspaper reported, is 10 percent ownership of a joint venture in Iran with General Motors Corp. to assemble automobiles. Among others are full ownership of an Iranian commercial bank which in turn owns 5 percent off the First National Wisconsin Corp. Bank of Milwaukee, and an estimated 50 percent of the Canal Street development project in New Orleans.

The Post quoted "a number of Iranian sources" as saying that Princess Ashraf and several former government officials had been deeply involved in the drug business.

The newspaper quoted one source, described as having knowledge of Iranian business and the royal family, as saying that "Iranian opium and hashish was leaving the country, and heroin and cocaine was coming in."

One Western economist, the Post said, said there was a discrepancy of about $2 billion a year in oil export revenues reported by the National Iranian Oil Co. and foreign exchange earnings reported by the central bank of Iran.

New book lauds Connecticut's famous 'firsts'

By CHRISTOPHER CORBETT

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)— Let us now praise Connecticut, home of the Fuller Brush Man, the Frisbee and the three-ring circus.

Wilson H. Faude and Joan W. Friedland want to do just that, so they've written "Connecticut Firsts" in order that states less fortunate may know of the glories that are the Nutmeg state's.

"What I can't wait for is for the other 49 states to read it and find out that they're not first," says the 32-year-old Faude, a historian and executive director of the Old State House, the former capitol of Connecticut — a first, too.

"The Old State House is the oldest state house in America, designed and built following the ratification of the Constitution in 1788," reads the entry in the pair's illustrated tour of firsts in Connecticut history from 1638 to the present.

"I think the careful wording is to make a point," notes Faude, adding, "The oldest state house in the nation following ratification rules out colonial assemblies."

From lollipops to the gun silencer, the cotton gin, the hamburger, the portable typewriter and the pay phone, Faude and Friedland faithfully and cleverly chronicle the state's achievements.

—In 1906 the first twisted-in-wire brush was invented by Alfred C. Fuller, who established his one-man concern at 78 Park St. The rest is history.

—America's greatest impresario, Connecticut-born P.T. Barnum, invented the two and three-ring circuses. In 1882 he took out the first insurance policy — $300,000 — on an elephant.

In 1640 the first public election was held in Wethersfield. A few years later, in 1647, the residents of nearby Hartford hung the nation's first witch, a woman by the name of Alse Young. In the same year, the first "blue law" was enacted, banning "social" smoking.

"It was felt that smoking in a group paved the way to dissipation," Faude and Friedland note.

Connecticut also fathered the first federal prison, the first submarine, the first martyr, Nathan Hale, and the first traitor, the British Major John Andre, who was captured in Westchester.

The nation's first boys' camp was located in Connecticut, Camp Gunn in Washington. The can opener, the clothes wringer and the electric shaver had their beginnings here as well.

"They're all accurate. We've got all the footnotes. We refused to put anything in that didn't stand up," says Faude.

"We're confident of our entries, but we're not infallible," he adds. "The first round manhole cover and ribbon candy aren't in there because we don't have a date," he notes.

"Submarine sandwiches aren't in there either," adds Mrs. Friedland, 49, the registrar for the Connecticut Historical Society.

Two years ago Faude and Friedland were asked to co-curate an exhibition on some of the state's first inventions. The project never developed. But the idea for "Connecticut Firsts" did.

Firearms played a major part in Connecticut's past. The repeating rifle was invented here in 1860. A few years later the first order by the U.S. Army for Gatling guns was given to Colt Arms Manufactory of Hartford. The first bazooka rocket gun was produced in Bridgeport June 14, 1942.

Connecticut gave the nation the first woman dentist in 1853, E.R. Jones; the first woman professor in 1870, Maria Sanford; the first woman minister in 1871, C.C. Burleigh, and the nation's first prima donna in 1873, Clara Louise Kellog.

The first woman to translate the Bible was Julia Smith, from Glastonbury in 1876.

And the tradition has continued in recent years. On Jan. 8, 1975, Ella Grasso was sworn in as the first woman in America to assume the office of governor without having inherited it from her husband.

Faude and Friedland say their collection of Connecticut firsts is not trivia, but history.

"I do hope that other states will take a similar pride. This in a way is an open challenge but we don't think they'll measure up," said Faude.

Legislators seek action on nuclear waste

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Sen. Roy Blake of Nacogdoches says he and House members interested in the problem of nuclear waste disposal "are going to try to come up with a consensus" on such legislation.

Blake says he or his staff members have talked with Reps. Bob Simpson, Amarillo; Luther Jones, El Paso; and Bill Keese, Somerville, regarding nuclear waste legislation.

Blake's administrative assistant, Charles Wright, is attending a two-day meeting in Atlanta, Ga., on nuclear waste storage, and is to return Friday.

"I expect we will prepare a bill after talking with him when he comes back from Atlanta," Blake reports.

The senator says he's aware the federal government could pre-empt Texas' effort, but adds his meetings with Department of Energy officials have produced indications that DOE would not attempt to store the wastes over states' objections.

"I don't want permanent storage of high-level wastes anywhere in Texas, much less in Anderson County," Blake said, referring to reports that East Texas area salt domes might be used for such storage.

Blake adds that he's not opposing nuclear power as such, and notes the problem of disposal is of concern to several utilities, including Texas Power and Light Co., and to "my friends at A&M," which has an experimental nuclear reactor used in research.

Project Aid records seized

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Post reported Wednesday federal investigators have seized records of Project Aid, which formerly assisted Indochinese refugees in the Houston area.

The newspaper said the investigation involves use of Comprehensive Employment and Training Act funds. Project Aid was turned down when it sought continued federal funding late last year and the refugee settlement program is now being handled by the Houston YMCA.

Bids cancelled for road work

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Department of Highways and Public Transportation has announced bids on an estimated $639,125.95 worth of seal coat work in Midland and five other West Texas counties have been cancelled for the Jan. 19 letting.

The work in Midland County involves 2.47 miles on SH 158 from SH 349 to near IH 20.

The project may be reset for a subsequent letting.

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Health Facilities Commission has approved an application by Permian Basin Dialysis Center Association of Odessa to expand its facilities by adding four dialysis stations.

The expansion bring the number of stations to 10, the THFC reports.

Gambling house suspects subpoenaed

LONGVIEW, Texas (AP) — More than 50 persons found in suspected gambling houses by federal agents Wednesday night have been subpoenaed to appear before a grand jury next month, the Dallas Morning News said in a copyright story Thursday.

FBI agents in Dallas confirmed Thursday they were among more than 40 federal law officers who raided at least two Gregg County buildings where they said gambling paraphernalia was found.

Amin may be seeking Saudi cash, arms

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — The Ugandan government revealed today that President Idi Amin has returned from a two-day visit to the leaders of Saudi Arabia, arousing speculation that he is seeking Saudi cash and military aid for his war with Tanzania.

Radio Kampala said Crown Prince Fahd, the strong man of the Saudi royal family, assured Amin of Saudi support for development projects. But there was no mention of military aid.

Amin earlier this month accused Libya's radical Arab government of sending arms to Tanzania. The Libyans for years have been Amin's principal foreign ally. Observers said if they have abandoned him, he may be turning to the conservative Saudis.

Police probe 'theft' of $9,500 auto

City police early today were investigating the alleged theft of a 1979 Pontiac Trans-Am, valued at $9,500, from Nickel Chrysler Plymouth at 3705 W. Wall St. at 9:30 p.m. Wednesday night.

Bob Huggins of the car dealership told police keys ordinarily are left on top of the cars in the lot so that prospective customers may test drive or look inside the autos.

Huggins said he believed the keys had been stolen Tuesday by a man who was looking at the car, according to police reports.

Another employee of the company reported seeing the car being driven in the city Wednesday night. Police located the suspect and the car. However, officers said today that there is a chance the vehicle may not have been stolen and that the car was taken off the lot by a person who wished to purchase the vehicle.

In other police activity Wednesday, Mrs. George Ulvestad of 2805 Douglas St. reported the theft of a diamond watch and ring from her residence. The items were valued at $1,009.20.

Barbara Harris of 1404 E. Nobles reported a burglary at Barbara's Boutique, 306 E. Illinois Ave.

Taken were 15 assorted wigs, costume jewelry, a ladies pendant, a watch and cologne valued at $599.50, she told police.

A Minolta camera and a Ruger .45-caliber ball and cap pistol valued at $315 reportedly were taken in a house burglary at 1007 W. Texas Ave.

Keith Binam also told police that he believed the sun roof of his car, valued at $800, may have to be replaced because it was damaged by someone.

Binam told police someone broke into his garage and house. Entry to the garage was gained by pulling out the door, police said. A screwdriver was used to pry the sun roof off his car, according to police reports.

Entrance to the house was gained through an unlocked door. The camera was taken from the bedroom and the gun from a closet, police were told.

Robin Edward Szczepanick of Big Spring reported the theft of a .38-caliber derringer, valued at $63 and $7 in cash stolen from his motel room at the Midland Hilton at Wall and Loraine Streets.

Hance appointed to Ag Committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas has managed to keep its representation on the Agriculture Committee and the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee.

U.S. Reps. Kent Hance and Charles Stenholm, freshmen from West Texas, were granted their desire Wednesday to represent their areas — which depend keenly on farm income — on the Agriculture Committee.

And Phil Gramm and Mickey Leland, two other Texas newcomers, got the recommendation from the Democratic Steering and Policy Committee for spots on the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee.

Further, Texas gained representation on the House Armed Services Committee it didn't have a year ago. Freshman Rep. Joe Wyatt got the appointment. He also was named to the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee.

Marvin Leith of Texas was named to the International Relations Committee.

Recommendations from the Steering and Policy Committee must be approved by the Democratic Caucus but reversal of a recommendation is extremely rare.

House Republicans will announce their selections today.

Gramm, a former Texas A&M economic professor, and Leland, a strong advocate of a national health program while a member of the Texas legislature, fill Texas seats on the commerce committee created by the defeat of Bob Gammage and the ill-fated Senate try by Bob Krueger.

Economy rolling at healthy rate, economist says

WASHINGTON (AP) — "The economy continues to roll right along at a healthy rate," government economist William Cox said after new reports of strong economic activity in the closing months of 1978.

In fact, Cox said the government might have to take new measures to "rein it in a little" if it doesn't slow down soon.

Just how fast the economy was rolling was to be documented later today in a Commerce Department report on the gross national product for the final quarter of last year.

The GNP, which measures the total output of goods and services by American workers and industry, was expected to show the economy grew at a rate of 5 percent in the October-December period.

A 5 percent growth rate is enough to further reduce unemployment if it is sustained for long. The economy grew at only a 2.7 percent annual rate in the third quarter.

The government had these bullish reports on the economy Wednesday:

—Construction of houses and apartment units last year totaled 2.02 million units, up from 1.99 million a year earlier. And in December, they actually sped to an annual rate of 2.12 million, despite extraordinarily high interest rates.

—Personal income of Americans increased 1.1 percent in December, the third consecutive strong monthly gain. For the year, personal income was up 11.7 percent, exceeding the rate of inflation, which was about 9 percent.

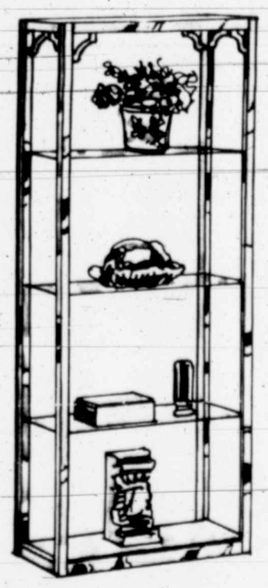

—Output of the nation's industry increased by a steady 0.6 percent in December and was up 7.7 percent for the year, compared with an increase of 5 percent in all of 1977.

—Reflecting the production gains, industrial utilization of available productive capacity was at 85.9 percent in December, the highest since June 1974.

In short, the economy at the end of the year appeared to be getting stronger, instead of starting the descent into a recession that many economists have been forecasting for 1979.

That could be a cause for worry by the administration as far as its campaign to fight inflation is concerned.

Names in the news

Although President Carter isn't talking, Lillian let it slip — he's betting on the Dallas Cowboys. She's got the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Carter was asked after his nationally broadcast news conference Wednesday which team he favored. He would only say that he had a bet with his mother, who was there for the news conference.

As Miss Lillian walked back to the White House from the Executive Office Building, a reporter called out, "I'll give you Pittsburgh and six points."

She replied, "I'm already betting on Pittsburgh."

●

When the offer came to chair the national commission of the United Nation's 1979 Year of the Child, Mrs. Young said she "almost jumped at it."

"Only 70 percent of children have been immunized in this country," she said. "Ten million children have not received any medical care and half of the children under age 12 have never seen a dentist. And there are the runaways, vulnerable to prostitution and crime."

●

BOSTON (AP) — Seiji Ozawa and the Boston Symphony will visit China if the orchestra can come up with $750,000 to pay for the eight-day trip.

The Chinese have invited the symphony and its principal conductor to play concerts in Peking and Shanghai in March and help train Chinese musicians in playing Western music, a symphony spokesman said.

"There's a possibility the Coca Cola company will underwrite the trip," spokesman Peter Gelb said Wednesday. "Nothing is definite. It is one of the companies we're talking to, and they have expressed interest."

NEW YORK (AP) — Nelson A. Rockefeller says selling quality reproductions of works from his private art collection can be compared with buying recordings of a Beethoven symphony.

The former vice president and New York governor dismissed criticism that some art works were not meant to be copied by saying critics were reading intent into the artist's mind.

The Nelson Rockefeller Collection Inc. offers pieces ranging in price from $65 for a copy of a Chinese Export tea stand to $7,500 for a copy of a Rodin sculpture.

The collection also offers Cibachrome reproductions — a process which is said to give the truest color and least fading — of some of Rockefeller's paintings, including Picasso's "Girl with Mandolin" priced at $850.

Rockefeller told a news conference that while a Cibachrome reproduction might convey 60 percent of a painting's aesthetic quality, a new process offered "80 to 90 percent."

In the new process, being done at Courtenay Studio Ltd. in Perth, Scotland, a Cibachrome reproduction is attached to canvas and an artisan then brushes a translucent resin over the reproduction to create an impasto that copies the original brush strokes.

"I think it's very exciting, and I think about five years from now, this is going to be just as accepted as Beethoven's symphony on a recording to be played in your home," he said.

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Despite his restoration to office, Marvin Mandel was not invited and did not attend the inauguration of his successor, Harry R. Hughes, as governor of Maryland.

An appeals court last week reversed Mandel's 1977 federal conviction on charges of mail fraud and racketeering. Federal prosecutors have not said whether they will seek to try Mandel, a Democrat, again on the charges.

Hughes pledged Wednesday that "integrity and independence will be the hallmark of this administration."

Hughes, also a Democrat, was elected on an anti-corruption platform. "We are a people who saw corruption and expelled it," said Hughes in his inaugural address.

Cancer found in John Wayne's lymph nodes

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Wayne's latest film role was that of an Old West gunfighter dying of cancer. In real life, he's "licked the big C" before, and now he's battling it again.

Cancer cells were found in lymph nodes near Wayne's cancerous stomach, which was removed by surgeons last week, and doctors said Wednesday there is a "probability that it will spread."

The Oscar-winning actor has been undergoing unspecified treatment since surgery Friday. A spokesman for UCLA Medical Center refused to elaborate on Wayne's prospects for recovery.

Bernard Strohm, medical center administrator, said doctors are consulting on whether more surgery is needed.

Asked if he could offer reassurances about Wayne's future, Strohm said, "I wish I could. Cancer is the type of disease that just doesn't give that option."

"He's been down before and he's come back before," said Patrick Wayne of his 71-year-old father.

Wayne's general recovery from surgery continued to be good, Strohm said. The actor was told about the cancer Tuesday night, and took the news in stride, said his eldest son, Michael.

The actor, who became Hollywood's biggest star through two-fisted roles in westerns and war movies, lost part of his lung to cancer in 1964. Later, doctors told him he had "licked the big C." Ten months ago, he underwent open heart surgery for a faulty valve.

Wayne's latest film was "The Shootist" in 1976. Since then, he has made a number of television appearances.

The latest cancer showed up in tests that were run after a routine gall bladder operation turned into a marathon surgery lasting 9½ hours.

Blast rips into market

JERUSALEM (AP) — A Palestinian guerrilla bomb blast wounded 20 persons in a crowded open-air market in the heart of the Jewish half of Jerusalem today as U.S. Mideast mediator Alfred Atherton began his second day of talks with Israeli leaders.

Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization said in Beirut that one of its underground units in Israel was responsible. It said the unit was named after Abu Ali Iyad, a senior military leader of Al Fatah killed in Jordan's 1970-71 civil war.

A Jerusalem police spokesman who gave the toll in the blast said the bomb went off near a vegetable stand in the Mahane Yehuda market. The market was packed with pre-Sabbath shoppers when the bomb went off at mid-morning.

Police said injuries were "light to medium" and that no deaths were reported. The area was cordoned off and casualties were taken to nearby Shaarei Zedek Hospital. The market is near the busy Jaffa Road and less than a mile from the walls of Jerusalem's old city.

Six months ago another terrorist bomb ripped through the market, killing two Israelis and wounding 47 others, and 10 years earlier guerrillas set off explosives in a parked car in the market, killing 12 Israelis and wounding more than 50 others.

The latest bombing came two days after Israel raided a Palestinian base in Lebanon, and five days after guerrillas attacked the northern Israeli town of Maalot. One Israeli woman died in the Maalot attack Saturday and the three guerrillas were killed.

Atherton and the Israelis were discussing language problems blocking agreement on a draft peace treaty between Israel and Egypt.

Atherton, an ambassador at large who is likely to travel to Egypt on Sunday, had asked for and was granted a meeting Wednesday night with Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan.

Road weight enforcement situation needs watching

By GUY SULLIVAN
R-T Staff Writer

Driving 55 miles per hour may take a little longer, but it saves fuel and lives in Texas — and that should be important to everyone, contends Joe E. Milner of Austin, chief of traffic law enforcement for the Texas Department of Public Safety.

Milner spoke during a luncheon meeting of the Downtown Lions Club in Midland Hilton.

Between folksy jokes and stories the lawman said, "Texas is in compliance with enforcement of this federal 55-mph law."

However, Milner said the enforcements of speed and highway weight limits must be watched constantly.

He complained of the state receiving a warning letter from the federal government about the weight enforcement situation. "It was asinine," recalled Milner. "Because we do have one of the finest weight enforcement programs around."

He said once a congressional committee was discussing a highway fund and the secretary of transportation was asked what states were not in compliance with the weight enforcement. "Texas ended up on the list after the secretary's staff stayed up all night figuring out how to answer the question," he speculated.

"It scares you sometimes when you learn some of the rules we live by," declared Milner.

He cited the situation in Iran as another example. "Most people don't realize what a terrible thing has happened to this country as a result of that situation. Right now 40 percent of the nation's fuel is imported."

He said Gov. William P. Clements was ushered into office Tuesday amidst some of the tightest security in years because lawmen suspected Iranian students might demonstrate.

"Our governor has a business with wide interest in Iran and that was published recently. But we never had a problem, and those Iranian students missed an opportunity to get nationally televised publicity," said the trooper, who put in a 16-hour Tuesday for security surrounding the capital event.

Back on the 55 mph limit, he said 91 percent of Texans approve of it, at least on an interstate basis. But he said, only 56 percent of the people want to clamp down and really enforce it. Another 50 percent would rather it be ignored, accordng to some polls.

Nationally, he said, about 80 percent of Americans approve of the 55 mph limit.

"People recognize it as a federal law and it's been shown to decrease deaths and fuel consumption. It's definitely a factor in saving lives in Texas," Milner said.

Joe E. Milner

In the Lone Star state, there are at least 9 million drivers, he added. "Texas drivers are increasing at rate of 1,000 net each day or a million every four years. Why, each day in Harris County between the time the sun comes up and the time it goes down, 401 more vehicles become registered," said Milner.

Asked the best way to slow down fast drivers, Milner replied, "Probably another Arab oil embargo."

He claimed the 55 mph speed limit has been "successful" in saving lives but not that much for energy. "It hasn't kept down highway speeds that much," he admitted.

In fact, Milner said, in 1972-73 the average speed in Texas was 72 mph, and it dropped only to 66 mph here in 1976-77. "To a certain extent it has kept down speed and numbers of deaths," he said.

Miss Lillian sometimes differs with children

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's 80-year-old mother, Miss Lillian, says she does not always agree with what her children may do.

"I have tried to raise all of my children to love their fellow man," she said Wednesday at the the Washington Press Club after she gave an illustrated lecture on her trip last summer to the draught-stricken areas of the Sahel region of Africa.

"After they get grown and get away from home, I can't help what they do," Mrs. Carter said. "I just hope for the best."

She was asked about the recent behavior of her youngest son, Billy Carter, and she said she believes her son Billy is sorry if his recent remarks and actions were offensive to anyone.

Teenagers charged in subway fire

Queens District Attorney John Santucci said Linda Krauss, 18, William Prout, 18, and Peter Grassia, 16, all of Queens, were charged with attempted murder, arson, assault and reckless endangerment.

If convicted on the charges, they could face life in prison.

Two ski-masked youths sprayed gasoline from a pressurized container into an opening of the enclosed booth Tuesday night, igniting it with a match, officials said. The gasoline exploded into an inferno that could be heard a block away, and the two token collectors were trapped for 10 minutes before they could be pulled from the booth.

"The victims were practically burned to a crisp," said John Keegan, who helped rescue the women. "You could hardly tell they were human beings. Their clothes were burned off and they were unconscious."

...A candidate for open heart surgery is likely to do anything his doctor tells him to. But the patient who has an elevated cholesterol level, which has no symptoms, often continues to keep on eating his steak and eggs, unless he is highly motivated to follow a low cholesterol diet, according to a California specialist.

High cholesterol, known medically as hyperlipidemia or hypercholesterolemia, is one of three major risk factors for heart disease according to the Framingham, Mass. study and others. Because it is "life-threatening," Dr. Eugene H. Weiner advises that physicians not wait too long before prescribing a cholesterol-lowering medication if the patient does not follow the diet prescribed, or if diet alone is not sufficient.

Patients are more likely to take drugs if they have few side effects and if they don't have to remember to take several doses during the day, Dr. Weiner maintains. "The simpler you can make the drug regimen, the better," he said...

Stantonites mark 50th

STANTON-Mr. and Mrs. James Jones of Stanton were honored on their 50th wedding anniversary with a reception held in the Fellowship Hall of the First United Methodist Church Sunday.

Jones, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wilmer Jones, married Opal Nichols, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Nichols, Jan. 15, 1929 in the parsonage of the First United Methodist Church. The Rev. J. B. McReynolds officiated.

Jones was born in Indian territory that later became Altus, Okla. He moved with his family to Martin County in 1906. Mrs. Jones was born in Callahan County and moved to Martin County in 1924. Both are graduates of Stanton High School.

At the time of their marriage, Jones owned and operated the Toggery, having started his career working in the J. L. Hall Drug. In 1941 they went into the hardware business and remained in that same location until they retired in 1970.

The couple is active in the First United Methodist Church and have continued to be civic workers over the years.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones have two daughters, Mrs. Dean Forrest and Mrs. Ellis Britton of Big Spring.

Assisting with the anniversary celebration along with their daughters and sons-in-law were the couple's grandchildren and families. These included Juli and Jimmy Britton, Mr. and Mrs. Roddy Caffey and Stacey and Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Heith.

Monitor aids in preventing crib death

By DANIEL Q. HANEY

BOSTON (AP) — Deaths from a mysterious ailment that attacks infants in their sleep are being prevented with electronic monitors that sound screeching alarms when a child stops breathing, doctors say.

The alarms are an almost foolproof way to prevent crib death in babies who are known to be susceptible to the ailment, the researchers said, based on five years of testing.

Although the devices do not restore the child's breathing, the alarm gives parents time to rush to the infant and shake the baby until he starts breathing again.

Doctors at Massachusetts General Hospital have provided the devices to the parents of 260 babies. Sixty percent of the infants had major episodes of breathing difficulty while hooked to the montors.

Four children died during the first three years of the test, but the researchers concluded this was because the alarms were not loud enough. The buzzers since have been turned up to the pitch and volume of home smoke alarms, and no children have died.

Crib death, which is also called sudden infant death syndrome, claims the lives of 10,000 seemingly healthy babies in the United States each year. It is the single biggest killer of children between the ages of two weeks and one year.

Victims usually die in their sleep without crying out or struggling. Doctors believe many simply stop breathing.

In the warning system, a sleeping baby wears a belt that is attached by a cord to an electronic box about the size of a stereo receiver. If he stops breathing for more than 20 seconds, a 70-decibel alarm goes off.

The alarm sounds until a parent turns it off, but parents are urged to reach the struggling infant within 10 seconds. Sometimes babies are limp and blue by the time help arrives.

If the baby does not start breathing again, the parents are told to shake him gently, and follow with more vigorous jostling if necessary. If shaking fails, the parents are told to try mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

A remaining problem is determining which babies should wear the monitors. Doctors usually do not know a baby is in danger of crib death unless the infant has been rescued from a near-fatal attack.

In the tests at Massachusetts General, the children studied either had near-fatal attacks or there was a family history of infant breathing difficulties or crib death.

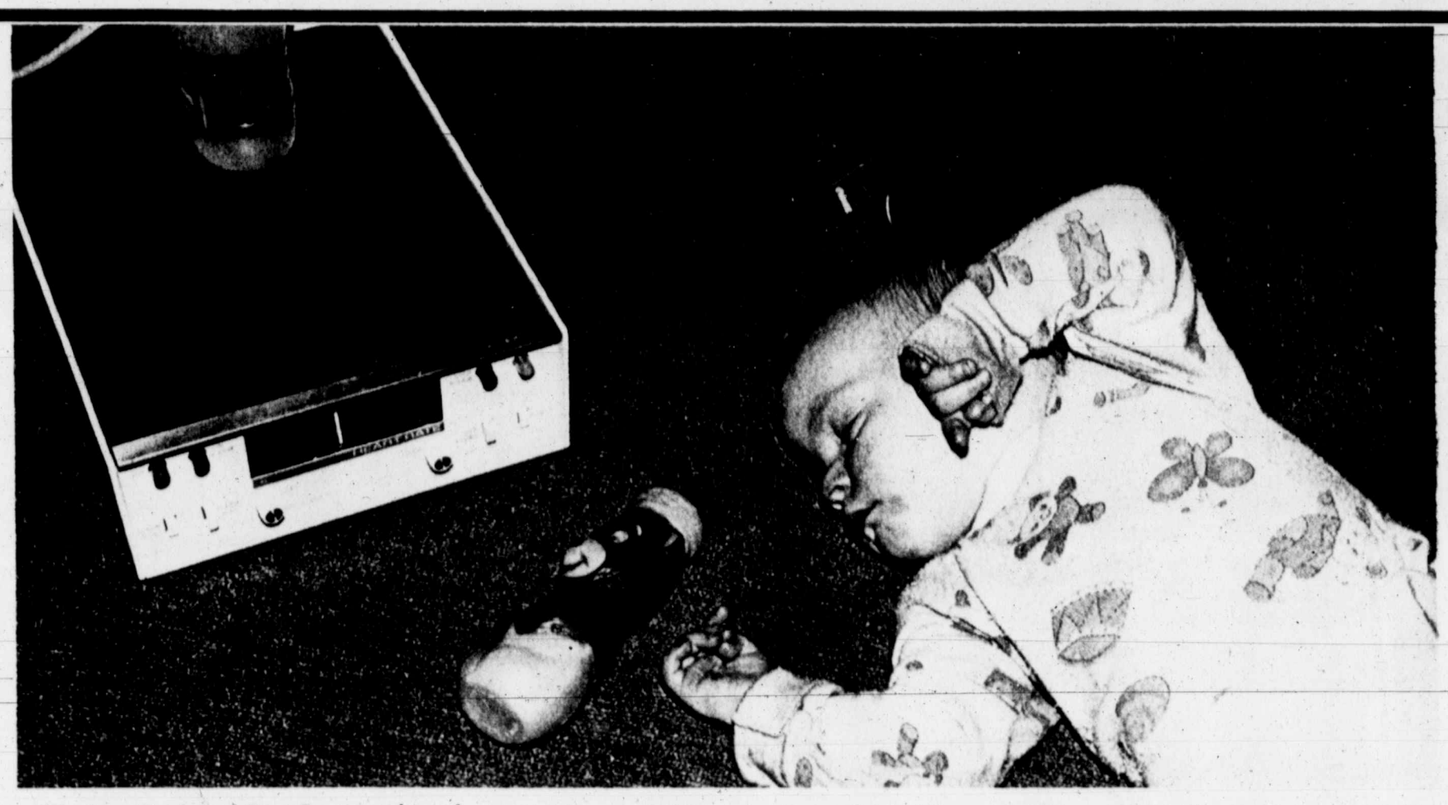

Other hospitals are beginning to provide parents with monitors, said Dr. Daniel C. Shannn, diyector of pulmonary research at Massachusetts General's children's service.

A parents group has been formed to make the devices available in Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island and New Hampshire, and doctors say the monitors will be mass produced in the future.

But not everyone is happy with the program.

"There's been a lot of resistance on the part of pediatricians who are concerned about putting an electronic device in the home between the parent and the baby," said Shannon. "There is a feeling that it is going to completely disrupt their parenting."

However, Shannon said a study conducted by the hospital showed that parents are able to use use the devices "effectively in treating their baby without intefering with their roles as parents."

Ellenjean Devine of East Boston, who suffers prolonged breathing pauses in her sleep, naps during an Massachusetts General Hospital visit, guarded by a heart monitor, while her father and mother meet with other parents of children with similar problems. (AP Laserphoto)

In Moscow, they're 'feisliftings'

By SETH MYDANS
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — In Russia, beauty comes cheap.

For a facelift, the cost is $60. For a nose job, $75. Work on the ear is $45 dollars, elimination of crow's feet $33, pierced ears $3.

The average worker's salary is $225-$240 per month, and the doctors at Moscow's Institute of Beauty note the fees are "much cheaper than in America." Indeed, a facelift can cost in the thousands of dollars in the United States.

The doctors who fix the noses, lips, chins and breasts of a few lucky Russians each year said in interviews that they were unaware of the publicity over the recent facelift of former U.S. first lady Betty Ford.

But they said they, too, ply their skills on "actors, heroes, heroines, farm workers, teachers, doctors." The names of any government leaders who have visited for facelifts are "absolutely secret," they say.

Incongruous in a nation where attractive clothes and even simple cosmetics are in short supply, where hospitals are crowded and some drugs are hard to find, the institute is housed in a gleaming, glassy high-rise on the western-style Kalinin Avenue, which was built by former Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev after a visit to America.

Asked whether the puritanical Soviets ever suggest that the institute engages in a decadent Western pursuit, its director, Dr. Inna Kolgunenko, retorted: "Decadence! I've only heard that word once before and that time it was from an Englishman."

"Cosmetology is not decadent," she said. "Cosmetology appears in nations which have developed a high social and cultural level."

And she went on to make her institute sound like an advertisement for the achievements of communism which, she maintained, has "already decided the problems of food, clothing and housing."

She made it clear that the institute, subsidized by the city, has the full backing of the Kremlin.

One of her surgeons, Vladimir Sovietsky, said the institute and an affiliated hospital perform about 5,000 operations a year, minor and major, including some 600 to 700 facelifts, known in Russian as "feisliftings."

Although Dr. Kolgunenko insisted that the institute is "for the masses" and that the typical client is a lady truckdriver, she did not describe the process by which patients are selected from what she said were 16,000 letters a year asking for help.

Dr. Sovietsky did say, however, that 6 to 8 percent of incoming patients are referred for help to psychiatrists.

Soiree features the arts

Midland students will benefit from proceeds of the annual Soiree to be held from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Friday in the McCormick Gallery in the Fine Arts Building on the campus of Midland College.

All money received will go into the Scholarship Fund of the Midland Society of University Women, sponsor of the event, from which scholarships will be awarded senior students at Midland and Lee High Schools.

Featured at the evening party will be the Thouvenel String Quartet, Sara Gilstrap of Midland College faculty and the Howard Payne University art faculty.

Gilstrap, art instructor at MC, will display ceramics and other works, and will demonstrate weaving. She teaches in the area of ceramics, fiber, jewelry, design and art education.

Gilstrap, an adjunct art instructor at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin, also has taught in Oklahoma schools.

The McCormick Gallery was donated to MC by Ret. Col. and Mrs. Walter B. Smith of Midland, who also has made a large contribution to the Scholarship Fund.

A doll collection of Mrs. Russell Sexton also will be on display in the gallery.

The late Mrs. J. Howard Hodge was president of the board at HPU and another Midland College benefactor, having made a gift of the Carillon Tower to MC.

Persons who have not made an acceptance of their invitations can do so Friday night as there will be a guest list at the door.

Eagles' auxiliary officer visits Midland group

Netta Patterson, state president of the Auxiliary to the Fraternal Order of Eagles, made her official visit to Midland Auxiliary No. 2982 recently in the Eagles Hall.

Ms. Patterson is a past president of the Odessa Auxiliary No. 2911 and has served on the ritual team and spent about five years serving in the state auxiliary before assuming the office of state president.

During her visit, she announced the corrected dates for the Bob Hope Telethon to be March 3-4. The Bob Hope Vocational School is a project of the Fraternal Order of Eagles and is non-profit. The school is a division of the Hughen Center in Port Arthur.

The local Eagles Hall was decorated with a baseball theme since the state membership slogan is "Let's Play Ball."

Eliabeth Wilson, Auxiliary 2982 membership chairperson, presented a report on membership, and Mary Brown, state membership director, presented Billie Doss of Odessa, special guest, a Quota Award.

Past Grand officer, Darlena French, was introduced, along with past state president, Dorothy Robertson, and state officer now serving, Mary Brown.

Netta Patterson

Also introduced were all past auxiliary presidents attending. They were Hazel Calhoun, Wilson, Helen Dunn, Bettie Twitchell, Brown, Iva Walden, Maye Buttery, Robertson, French.

The auxiliary will host a visit from Grand Madam President Bonnie Quatkemeyer on Jan. 24.

Laurie Ann Nolan

Laurie Nolan engaged to M. Michna

Mr. and Mrs. William E. Nolan of 2304 Seaboard Ave. announce the engagement of their daughter, Laurie Ann, to Martin R. Michna. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Michna of 3301 W. Dengar Ave.

The couple plans to exchange vows at 2 p.m. Feb. 10 in the chapel of the First United Methodist Church.

Miss Nolan attended Texas Tech University and is employed by The Midland National Bank.

National hairdressers choose top stylemakers

ST. LOUIS, Mo.-The National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association has picked its "Top Ten" stylemakers of 1978. The stylemakers and their recognitions, in alphabetical order, are:

Polly Bergen, wearable stylemaker; Erma Bombeck, humorist stylemaker; Rosalyn Carter, political stylemaker; Betty Ford, honesty stylemaker; Mary Tyler Moore, TV stylmaker; Marie Osmond, girl-next-door stylemaker; Diana Ross, superstar stylemaker; Jaclyn Smith, glamour stylemaker; Cheryl Tiegs, model stylemaker; and Barbara Walters, news-making stylemaker.

The 71,000 member association is touting the ten for having the most influence in setting style trends (hair, fashion and lifestyle) for the American woman in 1978. A National Stylemaker of the Year will be selected from the ten by the association's membership this spring.

AT WIT'S END

If she'd known

By ERMA BOMBECK

You may have noticed I was one of the few newspaper columnists who did not publish her list of New Year's Resolutions.

Frankly, I was waiting to see if I had the strength to keep it for at least two weeks. I say "it" because I only made one. It states, "I, Erma Bombeck, will not tamper/adjust/regulate/jiggle or hit with clenched fist, the thermostat without first consulting with my husband."

I don't want you to think I was coerced into making the commitment. I could have easily gone through an ugly divorce, gotten my own apartment, bought a pot of lip gloss, a pair of wedgies, and hit for a singles bar. But instead, I compromised.

When I think back, I don't know why my parents permitted me to enter into a mixed marriage with a man who was born with thermal skin. He use to come over to the house in the dead of winter wearing a little cotton jacket and I'd say, "Aren't you cold."

He'd say, "Nonsense! A little cold is healthy."

The first winter after we were married, I almost died of good health. It didn't seem fair that I slept in a room with an open window and the car was enclosed. No wonder it started in the mornings and I didn't.

I started to play the Thermostat Game.

Every evening when I crawled into bed, I would curl into a ball and uncoil my legs at the rate of one inch an hour. When I heard heavy breathing next to me, I would slip out and hike up the thermostat. One evening, I got caught. "Why don't you stop thinking about how cold you are and go to sleep," he said.

"I'm afraid to go to sleep. I saw a man climbing Mt. Everest once who went to sleep and he never woke up."

"You are overreacting," he said. "Besides, it's our civic duty to keep a low thermostat."

"I can tell you now," I said, "that if I had known you were a No. 3 on an electric blanket I would never have married you."

"And I can tell you that if I thought you would play with a thermostat like an electronic tennis on TV, I would have shopped longer. You are just going to wear heavier clothes and tough out the winter."

"I want you to make a resolution never to touch the thermostat again!"

You know, I've been thinking ... what's so great about being married.

Rights discussed

The Equal Rights Amendment was discussed in a program presented by Sharon Goodwin at a recent meeting of the Gwyn Garden Club.

The group met in the home of Mrs. Jack D. Sayers, 2409 Seaboard St.

Twenty-one members attended the meeting. Co-hostesses were Mrs. Sam Terry and Mrs. Frank Claunts.

Copley News Service

If the word, "rayon" was included in the fiber content of a garment a few years ago, women who remembered dreadful experiences with the fabric during World War II, and even later, were apt to pass it by.

Rayon, first of the man-made fibers, was revolutionary when it was introduced in 1889 in Paris.

It was called "artificial silk" and was, as it is today, made from wood cellulose, rather than artificial chemicals such as petroleum derivatives.

The original was used extensively during World War II for hosiery and women's clothing. It had a tendency to ravel at the seams, it shrank when washed. It looked sleazy and cheap.

Part of the problem has been a lack of quality controls, according to Astrida Woods, a New York fashion model and representative for the Avril Lifestyle Center.

"The rayon image is undergoing a great change and you are probably wearing something right now with rayon in it," Woods said.

To avoid the bad image, rayon is sometimes referred to as "Avril," but that simply means it has been quality tested before being released on the market.

DEAR ABBY

Old girls play role in hay

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column you printed a letter from a man who undertook to explain why older men prefer younger wives:

"When buying a car," he said, "who would opt for an old, used model when he could get a new, unused model for the same price? In an old model, the bumper sags, the frame is crooked, the paint job is poor and the pickup is gone. And if it's 60 years old, it usually comes with a crank."

I decided not to let that one pass without rebuttal, especially when my wife came to me with your column in hand and fire in eye.

"Something must be said for us old, used models!" she declared. I, of course, agreed.

For the record, my wife, is nowhere near 60. In fact, there was a time when she could not conceive of the possibility that she might reach 60; now she is beginning to realize this is a possibility.

Abby, I have had new models (speaking of cars) which, despite expensive attention, stubbornly refused to go places I wanted to go, and their finish faded prematurely when exposed to the sun.

There is much to be said for an agreeable, long-time association with an older model. You know its capabilities, its weaknesses, its eccentricities. You know how it will respond in a variety of circumstances. You know it will get you there. There are few surprises, and that's a comfort.

But enough of cars. Even if my wife were not the desirable creature she is, and even if she were not looking over my shoulder at this moment, I don't think I could stand playing the dating game again.

Those awkward preliminaries. Those pretenses. Those doubts. That loneliness when doubts prove well-founded. Those failures. That forced enthusiasm' Those silly conversations: "Oh! You're a Pisces, and you jog! Isn't that exciting!" Pardon me while I throw up. I guess maybe I've been away too long.—ROBERT MC MORRIS; OMAHA, NEB.

DEAR ROBERT: Thanks for a delightful letter, which I lifted (with permission) out of your column in the Omaha World-Herald.

DEAR ABBY: My married daughter asked me to spend the Christmas holidays with her. I was glad to accept because they live quite a distance from me and I don't see them often.

Besides my daughter and son-in-law, there are four children, two dogs and a cat. My daughter is a rather careless housekeeper who allows the pets to sleep in the children's beds.

The first night I slept there I noticed that something was disturbing my sleep. After the second night I decided to look at the mattress. There I found a nest of fleas and their eggs!

I knew I couldn't spend another night there, so I told my daughter I didn't feel well, and wanted to go home to see my doctor. I cut my vacation short and left.

Abby, I couldn't bring myself to tell my daughter the truth. Now I'm wondering what to say if I'm invited again. Please advise me.—BITTEN IN THE BRONX

DEAR BITTEN: You should have told your daughter the truth! Reciprocate. Put a bug in her ear at once.

Mrs. D. L. Coleman presents review

Book Review Unit of the Midland Woman's Club met Monday at Hogan Park. Invocation was given by Mrs George Grant.

Guests introduced were Mrs C. W. Chancellor, Estelle Reps of Los Altos, Calif; Nan Prothro, Mae Tidwell and Anna Mae Bryant.

Mrs. Jack Samples, ways and means chairman, reported on a Mexican luncheon set for Jan. 30 at the Midland Woman's Club. Luncheon will be held from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. for $4.25. Dinner tickets are $5, with the dinner to be served from 6 p.m to 8:30 p.m. The event is open to the public.

Mrs Ike Hynd, art committee member, reported on the reception Jan. 7 held in the Woman's Club for artist Jon Birdsong of Canyon. His watercolors are exhibited at the club through this month.

Mrs Samples announced that the next meeting of the Woman's Club will be a luncheon Thursday at 11:45 p.m. Program is to be presented by Mrs Buddy Ice, vice director of District One for Texas Garden Clubs, Inc. She will speak on bonsai trees.

Mrs Emmons introduced Mrs D. L. Coleman who reviewed the novel on Ethel Waters, "I Touched a Sparrow," by writer Twila Knock. Introduction was by Ruth Bell Graham. The review told of the life of Waters who she said was a unique woman, a real trouper and a professional. She also spoke on the latter part of Ethel Waters life in her dedication to the Billy Graham crusades.

Next meeting of the Book Review Unit will be Feb. 5. Program is to be presented by Sarah St. Claire who will speak on "Wild flowers and Glenrose."

Altrusans seek nominees

The Midland clubs and organizations that have not returned the forms for nominating a candidate for the 1979 Lucy Mashburn Woman of the Year Award are asked to do so by the Jan. 29 deadline, according to Debbie Gleason, chairman of Community Services Committee of the Altrusa Club of Midland, sponsor.

The fifth annual dinner meeting will be held Feb. 8 in Ranchland Hill Country Club. A social period will be held beginning at 6:30 p.m., with dinner served at 7.

The requirements for nomination is that the person be someone that has been of service to the community, but not previously recognized. This includes service above and beyond her duties at her place of employment.

Previous winners were Mrs. Helen Reid, Mrs. Marge Samples, Mrs. Clara Mims and Mrs. Marian Culbertson.

Individuals can make nominations, too, said Ms. Gleason.

Persons, clubs or organizations wishing to obtain an application, can do so by contacting Ms. Gleason at 682-7903 or by writing her at P.O. Box 1714, or they can call Betty McMullan at 694-9561.

Pyracantha club chooses officers

Officers include Mrs. Lucian Lindsey, president; Mrs. Charles Bradley, first vice president; Mrs. T. C. Watkins, second vice president; Mrs. E. V. Mitchell, recording secretary; Mrs. Chester Powers, corresponding secretary; Mrs R. D. Hardman, treasurer; Mrs. Harold Dobbs, historian; Mrs James Mann, reporter; and Mrs Clark Storm, parliamentarian.

Mrs James Mann, chairman of the nominating committee, read the list of nominees before elections were held.

Hostesses for the coffee hour were Mrs. Clark Storm and Mrs Chester Powers.

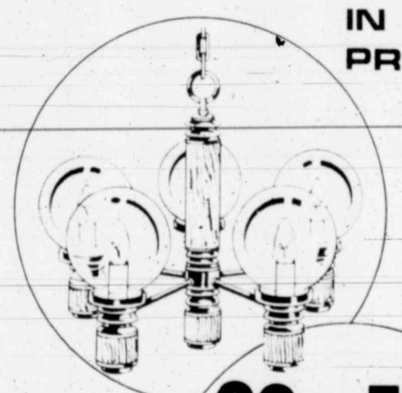

Mrs T. C. Watkins, club representative to the Lancaster Garden Center, gave a report on the board meeting and on Arbor Day. She said that the club voted to donate $25 toward landscaping at the Lancaster Garden Center. She also discussed the Big Thicket Wilderness Reserve located near Beaumont and urged members to visit the area.

A horticulture plant, a verigated African violet, was displayed by Mrs. Harol Dobbs. She explained that she cross pollinated the plant and named it Elva R. after her grandmother.

Guests were Sweetie Whitson of Odessa and Myrtle Greathouse of Midland.

Woman does fulfill dream

DETROIT (AP)-A year ago, most people-including Fran Rose-would have wondered if the 34-year-old woman ever would fulfill her dream to become an auto mechanic.

A car crash in 1976 killed one of her five daughters and left her paralyzed below the waist. Her back was broken in three places, many internal organs were crushed and she couldn't speak because of broken bones in her face.

But slowly the divorced woman began recovering. She received moral support from teachers and students at the Michigan Career Institute, where she was enrolled in an auto mechanics course at the time of her accident.

Actress Sylvia Kristel looking for new image

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — International sex symbol Sylvia Kristel tells of meeting Fred Astaire during a luncheon the Cannes Film Festival:

"He told me that he never really wanted to do all that dancing, that he really wanted to be a dramatic actor. But the studios insisted that he dance. It's the same way with me. I don't really want to be the star in erotic movies. But that is the only way that most producers see me.

"It is very hard work. First of all, it is physically tiring, because they picked tropical countries for the 'Emanuelles' and then dressed me in winter silks. Also, the Dutch are not very — what shall I say? — affectionate. I am Dutch, and so it is an unnatural act to portray all that lust on the screen.

"But then, perhaps that is the reason for the success of the 'Emanuelles': because I wander through them with a sense of wonder, like 'Alice in Sexland.'"

"Emanuelle," for which Kristel received $18,000, reached an international audience estimated by its producer at 350 million. That may not be an exaggeration, since the film proved an enourmous hit in Europe, Japan, and to a lesser extent in the United States. "Emanuelle II" performed 60 percent as well, according to the producer, and now "III" is coming.

Miss Kristel fled to Hollywood to escape the reputation she fears makes her look "dumb and without talent; in fact, I should get the Oscar for portraying the opposite to what I really am."

She has settled here with companion Ian McShane, the British actor, and hopes to find roles that will alter her image. The first is in Universal's PG-rated "Airport '79 Concorde."

What does she do in the film?

"I open and close doors and serve coffee. Also I have a romance with Alain Delon. I am a steward-ess, and he is the pilot of the Concorde.

"It is a challenge in several ways. If you keep your clothes on in a film, you have to act. And if you don't have a great deal to do in a film, you have to make it look like something. Like all 'Airport' movies, this one has a big cast, and none of us has much of an opportunity to make an impression. You've got three minutes to do your big scene."

Daughter and granddaughter of Dutch composers, Sylvia Kristel first worked as secretary to a metallurgist. "You're a bad secretary, why don't you become an actress?" he suggested, and he referred her to a friend in films. After a couple of minor movies, she created the role of Emanuelle, the innocent French girl who encounters the fleshly pleasures in Thailand.

"I became an international lust object," said the actress, who complained that the reputation made her "not human." Yet she also seems to enjoy the role — "I hate mediocrity."

She is astonished by the divergent reactions to Emanuelle: "The Japanese consider her a liberated woman because she assumes the dominant position while making love with her husband. In America, the women's libbers consider her more or less a victim since she is virtually gang-raped by three Thai boxers and is taught the ways of sin by an older man."

MCT making tryout plans for comedy

Midland Community Theatre is making plans for tryouts for its March production, "The Prisoner of Second Avenue."

The Neil Simon comedy has parts for one man and one woman in their 40s, and for two men and three women in their 50s.

Auditions to fill the seven roles are scheduled for 8 p.m. Monday, Tuesday and next Thursday at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. Newcomers to the city and surrounding area are given a special invitation to come and read for parts in the comedy. Persons do not have to be season members of MCT to qualify for a part.

Odessa film club feature Friday

ODESSA — Odessa Cinema Society continues its current season with a Friday night presentation of a classic comedy.

The 8 p.m. screening in the Student Lounge of The University of Texas of the Permian Basin will feature "The Thin Man," a 1934 detective masterpiece.

The film, which started a new cycle in movie entertainment by demonstrating that a murder mystery could also be a sophisticated comedy, starred William Powell and Myrna Loy, along with their dog, Asta.

Season members of the Odessa Cinema Society are eligible to attend the screening, and the public may purchase tickets at the door Friday night.

HPU slates art display in Midland

More than 50 art works by members of the Howard Payne University art faculty will go on display this weekend in the McCormick Gallery at Midland College.

The exhibit will feature works in all media. Included will be jewelry, sculpture, ceramics, weavings and fiber art, copper enamels, photography, and paintings in watercolor, pastels, oils and acrylics.

Stewart has long been associated with Howard Payne University as art professor and later as dean of the College of Arts and Sciences and now serves HPU as executive vice president. He holds a bachelor of fine arts degree from The University of Texas and holds a master's degree from Texas Christian University, with his Ph.D. degree earned at Texas Tech University. He has been featured in numerous art shows in such cities as Alpine, San Angelo, Odessa and Abilene. He is a past chairman of the Texas Commission on the Arts and Humanities.

Maurine Stewart is a painter and sculptor and currently is associate professor of art at HPU. She has a bachelor's degree in art from The University of Texas and holds a master's degree from HPU. She has studied privately with such well-known artist-teachers as Charles Umlauf, Clarence Kincaid, Juanita Pollard and the late Ward Lockwood. She has had solo shows in such cities as Midland, Fort Worth, McCamey, Brownwood, Monahans, Coleman, Brady and Austin.

Eloise Trigg, associate professor of art at HPU, is a specialist in children's art. Holding both bachelor's and master's degrees from Texas Tech University, she has had study with numerous noted artists, including Clarence Kincaid, Jan Herring, Bill Lockhart and Eleanor Matz. She has done special art research at the Louvre in Paris and other European museums.

Ann Abdias is an assistant professor of art at Howard Payne. She holds a bachelor of fine arts degree from The University of Texas and has done graduate work at Southern Methodist University. She completed work for a master's degree in design and craft at the Instituto Allende in San Miguel de Allende, Mexico.

Abdias' special areas of concentration are weaving and ceramics and she has taught workshops in weaving and fabric design decoration in Dallas and elsewhere.

Radio opera Saturday

NEW YORK — "Don Pasquale," a three-act comic opera by Gaetano Donizetti, will be heard Saturday afternoon over the Texaco-Metropolitan Opera Radio Network, with operatic superstar Beverly Sills in the leading role.

The broadcast from the stage of the Metropolitan Opera House in New York City's Lincoln Center, will begin at 1 p.m., CST.

Soprano Beverly Sills will be singing the role of Norina in the opera. Joining her in the performance will be baritone Gabriel Bacquier as Don Pasquale, tenor Alfredo Kraus as Ernesto and baritone Hakan Hagegard as Doctor Malatesta. The performance will be conducted by Nicola Rescigno, who will be making his Met conducting debut. Rescigno has long been identified with the Dallas Civic Opera.

A special program will highlight the second intermission, when eminent British musicologist John Culshaw discusses the historic Feb. 22, 1941, Met broadcast of Beethoven's only opera, "Fidelio."

Thouvenel Quartet slates concert Sunday night

The Thouvenel String Quartet has programmed works by Mozart, Brahms and Ernst Krenek for its third subscription program of the current season.

The concert will be at 8 p.m. Sunday in the Fine Arts Building recital hall at Midland College. Season tickets will be valid for the event and single admissions may be purchased at the doors before the start of the program.

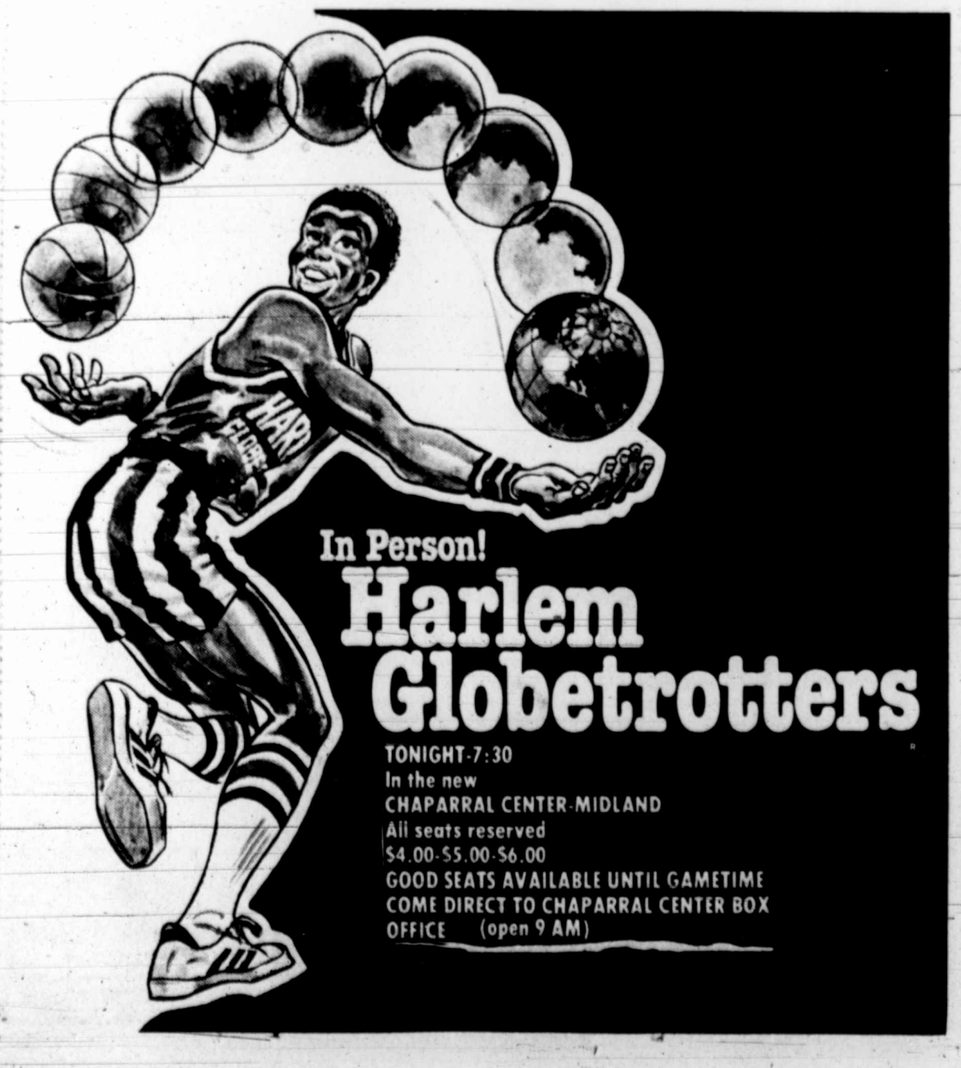

Joining members of the Thouvenl ensemble in a performance of the Piano Quintet in F minor by Brahms will be Jean Mainous, a member of the piano faculty at North Texas State University at Denton.

To be presented by the Thouvenel ensemble are Mozart's String Quartet in F major, K. 590, and a movement from Ernst Krenek's String Quartet No. 5.

'Star trek' filming finally over

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The weary travelers on the USS Enterprise have just about reached the end of their astral journey.

It's time for a checkup on "Star Trek — The Motion Picture," Paramount's big-screen, big-budget followup on the legendary television series. The movie is winding down, at least for the actors. Director Robert Wise and producer Gene Rodenberry will spend most of 1979 putting together special effects, music and other elements, airning for release next Christmas.

William Shatner (Capt. Kirk) admitted he expects withdrawal pains after six months of reporting to the studio every day — he is in virtually every scene of the movie. He added: "In typical Hollywood fashion, the last scene we will do is a continuation of the first scene we shot last August: Coming back to the Enterprise. Now I've got to remember exactly how I felt when we shot the earlier scenes."

In his luxury mobile home — symbol of the first-class treatment on the movie — Shatner confessed to misgivings about returning to "Star Trek," but the lure was irresistable — "it had been a force in propelling my career."

Another go at a TV series of "Star Trek"? Shatner has no interest. And, in fact, the Paramount forces have indicated favoring big-screen sequels.

"If the script was good, I could see doing more 'Star Trek' movies," said Shatner. "I think this one is going to be terrific.

It will be theatrical entertainment — and it might even be thoughtful."

Leonard Nimoy (Mr. Spock) might welcome the conclusion of "Star Trek — The Motion Picture" more than his fellow performers. It will mean the end of his daily ordeal of applying Spock's pointed ears.

"It takes about an hour and a half every morning, although we've speeded the process up a bit," said the actor. "It took about the same time for the television series, but the ears are a much better design. You can get away with things on the small television screen."

Nimoy seems grateful to Spock, but he also has sought escape from a one-role identity. he has appeared onstage as Sherlock Holmes and the psychiatrist in "Equus" and soon embarks on a national tour or "Vincent." a multi-media, one-man show about Vincent Van Gogh which Nimoy himself wrote.

De Forest Kelly (Dr. "Bones" McCoy) admits "Star Trek" is "the best thing that ever happened to my career." Yet he has profited less than his two co-stars.

"Maybe that's because I'm not as ambitious as Bill and Leonard," said Kelley. "I had a good career as an actor before 'Star Trek,' playing mostly heavies, and I'm content to take it easy. After all, I've been around a while."

Indeed he has. The Paramount lot holds a host of memories for Kelley, who first came there in 1941 as a Long Beach boy assigned to play a teen-age killer in "This Gun For Hire." Studio thinking changed, and the role was made older and cast with Alan Ladd, providing the springboard for his career. Kelley returned to Paramount after the war as a contract player, but he never landed a star-making role.

"This is by far the most complex picture I've ever made," said the silver-thatched Wise. "'The Sand Pebbles' was more difficult physically and logistically, because we were shooting in Asia. 'Star Trek' is hard because the actors have to imagine the visuals and effects that will be put in later. For that reason, story boards are indispensible as a guide to where we're going."

Registration now for MCT classes

The term will begin Feb. 5 at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., and registration is under way there each weekday through the remainder of this month, it was announced.

Theatre School classes are offered for pre-school youth to students of 12th grade level, said Debbie Waddell, director of children's theater at MCT. Included are classes for preschool age youngsters, those for children of first through third grades, those for youngsters in fourth through sixth grades, and those for students in seventh through 12th grades, she said. Tuition for the term is $35 for children of season members of Midland Community Theatre, $45 for children of non-members. Addition information on the various classes may be obtained by telephoning Miss Waddell at Theatre Midland, 682-2544.

Janssen in new thriller

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — David Janssen and Susannah York play a detective and a nun in the romantic suspense movie "Specter on the Bridge," now in production for CBS.

They work together in an effort to prove that a priest was murdered and did not commit suicide by jumping off the Golden Gate Bridge.

The film marks the American television debut of the British actress.

Famous operetta having performances in Fort Worth

FORT WORTH — "H.M.S. Pinafore," the famous Gilbert & Sullivan operetta, sails into Fort Worth this weekend for a pair of performances.

The melodic and witty musical work is the second production of the 1978-79 season of the Fort Worth Opera Association. Performances are scheduled for 8 p.m. Friday and 2:30 p.m. Sunday in Tarrant County Convention Center theater in downtown Fort Worth.

Sets and costumes for "Pinafore" are the same as were used in the New City Opera production. The New York City Opera is generally credited with initiating the upsurge of interest in Gilbert and Sullivan operettas throughout the nation in recent years as a result of its sponsorship of numerous G & S revivals, including "Pinafore."

Nothing is taken seriously in this musical gem which gained fame immediately after its 1878 premiere in London and its American debut in Boston approximately six months later. Written with wit and vigor, it is a parody on love, politics, social status and class consciousness and its clever words are as apt today as they were when first uttered a century ago.

Starring in Fort Worth's production are a group of talented young singer-performers from the New York City Opera's staging of the operetta. The cast includes baritone Charles Roe as Captain Corcoran, soprano Elizabeth Hynes as Josephine, tenor Henry Price as Ralph Rackstraw, baritone James Billings as First Lord of the Admiralty, bass Richard McKee as Dick Deadeye, mezzo-soprano Judith Christin as Hebe, contralto Carolyn Jones as Little Buttercup.

'Rocky' to be on TV

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The Academy Award-winning movie "Rocky" will have its television premiere on CBS on Sunday, Feb. 4.

Sylvester Stallone stars in the box-office hit, which he also wrote. Besides Best Picture, "Rocky" won Oscars for director John Avildsen and for its editing.

The movie tells the uplifting story of a small-time boxer's efforts to make something of himself.

Bishops to join in crucial talks

By CHARLES H. GREEN

PUEBLA, Mexico (AP) — Roman Catholic bishops meet here next week in what is already being talked about as a crucial gathering that will chart the course of the Roman Catholic Church in Latin America.

The meeting could set the church on a collision course with repressive South American governments or anger those pushing for change in an area where two-thirds of the people live in poverty.

At the least, the conference will provide some fireworks between liberal and conservative elements in the church. Its importance is underlined by the presence of Pope John Paul II, who will open the meeting on his first trip abroad since becoming pope.

The Jan. 27-Feb. 12 Third General Conference of the Latin American Episcopate — popularly called Celam III — will gather 350 Latin American bishops who have prepared for the meeting for over two years.

The theme is "Evangelization in the Present and Future of Latin America" and lines are already drawn between those who want the church to take a stronger, more involved role in helping the poor and those who feel the church can best help through traditional methods.

"Celam III, the third meeting of the bishops of Latin America...must make decisions that will have crucial, transcendental importance for the church in Latin America and beyond," wrote theologian Gary Maceoin in the U.S. quarterly "Cross Currents."

"What the bishops decide may not resolve the issues. It will, however, have a major bearing on the survival of the institutional church, either facilitating or complicating the struggle of the people of Latin America to free themselves from the oppressions under which they have long groaned," Maceoin added.

The Puebla conference is a direct descendent of what was called Celam II in Medellin, Colombia, in 1968 which emphasized the Vatican II results and put them within a Latin American framework.

"In the documents of Medellin, we find the church, for the first time, taking note of the common people, of the popular classes," J.B. Libanio of Brazil wrote in the magazine "Convergencia."

The documents that came out of the Medellin conference were widely described as liberal, socially aware guides for leading the Roman Catholic church into closer relationships with the poor.

However, some more conservative theologians think the documents did not reflect calm, mature deliberation and that the bishops that wrote them were influenced by widespread rioting and unrest prevalent throughout the world at the time.

Even more, bishops and priests who tried to put the Medellin concepts into practice were often accused of being communist and ran into conflicts with conservative and military governments.

An estimated 300 million of the world's 900 million Roman Catholics live in Latin America and two-thirds of them live in extreme poverty. Their lives are not ones of free choice but controlled strongly by economic need and in some countries by political oppression as well.

Against this background, those who see the need for change in Roman Catholic policy feel only the church can help these people get a better share of land, income, dignity and basic human rights.

Organizers of the coming conference wrote a preparatory document that many claim was strongly influenced by conservative, traditional elements. It has been widely criticized as "a subtle rejection of Medellin."

However, lay groups and clergy have met several times in regional sessions and out of these meetings has come a preliminary draft — more liberal and socially inclined — that may well become the basic working document at Puebla.

Now, two main schools of thought prevail. One is the conservatives, who range from those who think social work should be combined with a strong evangelical effort to the "ultras" who decry the lack of masses in Latin. The other group is made up of the followers of the so-called "theology of liberation."

The "liberationists" generally argue that the poor and the oppressed can only be liberated through change. How these changes are to be carried out is a matter of some very furious polemics.

Some claim all the social structures should be smashed and rebuilt, even that of the church hierarchy. Others advocate more moderate means of change. And others still want "a Marxist interpretation" placed on the church's thinking and its actions.

Robert McAfee Brown, a Presbyterian theologian, in the magazine "Christianity and Crisis" recently criticized the efforts to "return the Latin American Catholic Church to pre-Medellin status."

"If Puebla marks a reactionary turn, that development will stimulate similar moves elsewhere in Roman Catholicism and will give impetus to increasingly visible conservative tendencies emerging in Protestantism as well," Brown wrote.

West German retailer plans to purchase 42 percent A&P interest

NEW YORK (AP) — A West German food retailer has announced plans to buy a 42 percent interest in the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co.

The Tengelmann Group said Tuesday that it intends to purchase shares from the Hartford Foundation, which holds about 25 percent of A&P's shares worth more than $50 million.

The company also intends to buy shares from several other major shareholders. A spokesman said the cost will exceed $75 million.

The Hartford Foundation, which has held a major interest in the supermarket chain for many years, was formed by the son of the founder of A&P, George Huntington Hartford.

Based in Mulheiman der Ruhr, Tengelmann operates 2,000 stores in West Germany and Austria with annual sales of nearly $3 billion.

Jonathan L. Scott, A&P chairman and chief executive officer, said in a statement that the company "welcomes" the investment.

"We at A&P look forward to this new association as a further means of sustaining and solidifying our company's current profitable operations," he said.

A&P has been having problems in the last decade, as high labor costs and antiquated stores eroded profits. Now operating 1,800 stores, down from 4,000, the company showed a profit late last year, the first profit since the last quarter of its 1977 fiscal year.

Texans' pride focuses on oil, football, cattle

By FRANK RHOADES
Copley News Service

TYLER, Texas — You've got to be around them awhile to realize they sometimes are difficult to understand, these friendly, well informed sons and daughters of Texas.

To an outsider, the extent of their devotion to the Dallas Cowboys would seem unreasonable.

I was near here one night when the Cowboys were beaten by Minnesota. The disappointment among Texans next morning amounted almost to grief.

A Tyler waitress told me none of her customers could enjoy breakfast next morning they were so depressed by the Cowboys' defeat.

Tyler, though no large city, has one of the finest sporting goods stores I have ever visited. Discussing Minnesota's victory, a salesman there said, "People around here are so mad they won't speak to each other."

Outside of Houston, Texans care nothing for the Oilers and they don't like to be reminded that the Oilers have a good record this year.

But the Texan's love for football is by no means limited to the pro team in Dallas. He can become almost as enthusiastic about a high school game and play among Texas college teams is followed as closely as the progress of a world war.

Another thing hard to understand is why so many Texans continue to raise cattle on farms as small as 20 acres.

"There is no way to make money on them," said Clyde Tidwell, whose acreage is near Jacksonville, in East Texas. "It takes luck to break even."

But year after year he maintains his herd, selling the calves. This year there was a drastic shortage of hay. Tidwell bought the vines that were left after a peanut harvest and built a barn to store them as winter cattle feed.

Why all the trouble and all the expense when he's riding a loser?

"I guess it's a hobby," he said. "I don't play golf."

Actually, it's that strange Texas pride again. Texas since frontier days has been identified with cattle and the small farm operator is maintaining tradition.

Two years ago, Tyler's venerable public square had 13 vacancies. Retail merchants had relocated in a new air-conditioned shopping mall out on the perimeter of the town. (Every Texas community of any size has a "loop.") Downtown Tyler was dying.

Now it is going the way of countless other towns and cities. The downtown area is becoming a financial center and office-building district. One bank on the square is building a high-rise to match the one already in existence and a second bank is clearing vacant structures to add to its facilities. One of two high-rise hotels closed by competition from newer places on the Loop, has been rented as offices by the county.

Retired military officers were informed a year or so ago by one of their own magazines that Austin, Texas, was the most reasonably priced city in the country in which to reside.

This conclusion had to be based largely on taxes and the price of real estate. Housing is considerably cheaper than it is in Southern California communities that attract retired military. But "cheaper" stops right there.

Prices in the leading department store in downtown Austin were about the same — in some cases, higher — than in Southern California.

Three of us had lunch at the mellow, old Driskill Hotel: two glasses of bar wine, an Americano cocktail, two salads and a sandwich, $26 exclusive of tip. (Despite Austin's Mexican population, that Americano cocktail threw the bartender. He didn't know about equal parts of sweet vermouth and Campara over cracked ice. And in a nice, expensive place like the Driskill!)

Houston, anyway you take it, is one of the great cities of the world, growing hourly in population and expanding in all directions. The central business district bristles with new skyscrapers and others have gone up as far away as five miles.

"It's all predicated on oil," said stockbroker Bobby Traylor.

But aren't we facing total depletion of American oil?

Afraid of being burden, man, 101, hangs self

MENTON, France (AP) — Pierre Lapeyre was a hardy, independent man. When he could no longer look after himself at the age of 101, he hanged himself.

"He was always afraid of being a burden," said Clotilde Guglielmi, his landlady and the woman who looked after him when he became crippled by arthritis.

Lapeyre entered an old age home at 92, but treasured his independence so much that he moved out, and took a room in town.

His arthritis worsened, but the hospital in this town in southeast France had no room for him and sent him home.

The overkill myth

There are few myths more damaging to an understanding of the Soviet-American strategic balance than the specious notion that the United States already has more than enough nuclear weapons to destroy the Soviet Union and kill most of its citizens several times over.

Were this true, the Carter administration would not now be debating whether an American retaliatory strike against the Soviet Union should be aimed at Russian cities or military targets. If overkill were fact rather than a fallacy, the Pentagon could simply target every significant Soviet military, industrial and population center. The White House could then credibly threaten the Soviets with annihilation should Moscow ever initiate a nuclear exchange. Deterrence would be assured.

Instead, the administration must carefully ration a limited retaliatory force in the hope that the threatened targets are enough to forestall some future temptation for a Soviet first strike.

On paper, the American nuclear arsenal seems overwhelming: 1,054 land-based intercontinental ballistic missiles, 656 submarine-launched missiles and 375 long-range bombers, carrying a total of 7,274 nuclear warheads.

But American nuclear strategy is, and must be, predicated on a Soviet surprise attack. Unless the forces that survive such an attack are certain to inflict "unacceptable" damage on the Soviets, deterrence cannot be guaranteed.

Although the administration might quibble over the exact figures, there is every reason to believe that within a few years the Soviets will possess enough missiles and warheads to destroy up to 90 percent of our land-based ICBMs and perhaps half or more of our nuclear submarines and bombers caught in port or on the ground in a sudden, surprise attack.

Moreover, by most calculations, the Soviets would retain enough missiles and warheads to devastate the 100 largest American cities should the United States choose to launch its remaining nuclear weapons.

In such doomsday circumstances, an American president might well be compelled to surrender rather than sacrifice nearly every major American city in a war already lost during the first 30 minutes.

At the moment, the Pentagon is recommending that those weapons surviving a Soviet first strike be launched against Moscow's remaining missiles and other military targets. Presumably, such a strategy might save some American cities although it would almost certainly leave the bulk of the Soviet population virtually unscathed.

A study by the Boeing Aerospace Co. predicts that a nuclear exchange beginning with a Soviet first strike, in conjunction with implementation of Soviet civil defense measures, would kill only four percent of that country's population while inflicting more than 100 million deaths in the United States.

Admittedly, all this represents "worst-case" scenarios for a conflict none of us expects to occur. Yet, it is against such terrifying yardsticks that the adequacy of American retaliatory forces must be measured. Even under far less pessimistic assumptions, overkill is a hopeless illusion.

The Carter administration could raise the level of public debate over nuclear strategy by officially debunking the overkill myth, thus removing it as a political inpediment to the necessary strengthening of American nuclear deterrence.

ART BUCHWALD

He ain't heavy — or at least he wasn't until . . . .

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — "Poor Jimmy," a friend of mine from Georgia said.

"Why do you say 'Poor Jimmy'?"

"Here is a fellow who has arrived at the highest office in the land. As Commander-in-Chief he can call up the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps at a moment's notice. He can tell the Russians to stop messing around in Iran, and lift up the phone and send a flock of F-15s to Saudi Arabia. He can set wage and price guidelines for every man, woman and child in the United States, and by one stroke of the pen sell all the gold in Fort Knox.

"As President of the United States he can do anything he wants to except one thing — he can't control his own brother."

"If the President can't do that," I said, "he's in a lot of trouble."

"It won't come as any big surprise to people around Plains that Billy is out to do in Jimmy. He's been sore since Jimmy became President."

"But why? I should think Billy would be proud."

"No way. Bill is still mad that his mother let Jimmy run for President instead of him."

"I didn't think Billy wanted the job."

"Billy's always wanted anything Jimmy got. He was mad when Jimmy went to Annapolis. He was angry when Jimmy came back to Plains to save the family's peanut business.

"He can't stand the thought that Jimmy doesn't drink. For years his mother's been saying 'Billy, why can't you be more like your brother Jimmy?' The final blow came when Lillian called both boys into the house and said, 'I want one of you to be President of the United States; and it isn't going to be you, Billy.'

"That really ticked Billy off and he said, 'All my life I've been playing second fiddle to Jimmy. You liked him more than you liked me. Even as a kid when we went to school you put more jam on his peanut butter sandwiches than you did mine. How come I never get to run for President?'

"And Lillian said, 'Because you wouldn't know how to act if you were President. You'd sit in the Oval Office drinking beer all day with your buddies, and then...let's just say you aren't house-trained well enough to live in the White House.'

"Well, you can imagine how this hurt Billy," my friend continued. "He made up his mind at that moment that if Jimmy got to be President he'd make his life miserable."

"He's certainly succeeded," I said.

"Billy couldn't prevent his brother from being elected President but he's determined to see that he doesn't get a second term."

"But Billy's made so much money out of being the President's brother you'd think he'd want him to stay."

"He has made money out of it. But now he's become the country's No. 1 bore.

"People won't even drink Billy's beer, much less pay $2 to see him judge a hog-calling contest in Arkansas. So he's got nothing left to do but offend every segment of the electorate to make sure that in 1980 Jimmy doesn't have a chance of being elected mayor of Plains, let alone President of the United States."

"What do you think the President would do about the situation if he could?"

"Folks in Georgia believe Jimmy might decide to be reborn, but this time he's going to ask to be an only child."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

U. S. courted shah for stability

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — For three decades, Iran has been overrun with U.S. observers. The Central Intelligence Agency, which saved the shah's throne in 1953, had access to the palace. A case officer was actually assigned to the shah, who thereby became a confidential CIA informant. The White House was in close, constant contact with the shah. U.S. Cabinet officers, generals and diplomats had cozy relationships with their counterparts in Iran.

Yet in Washington, apparently no one in high places detected that something was rotten in Iran; no one foresaw the uprising against the shah; no one anticipated his downfall. Only two months before his collapse, President Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, telephoned assurances to the shah that the United States backed him 100 percent.

This is all the more baffling since we knew — and frequently reported in this space — that the shah was a dangerous megalomaniac who had oppressed and alienated his people, as well as an undependable ally who was likely to pursue his own aims in disregard of U.S. interests.

The president has complained petulantly that he had no warning of the turmoil in Iran. Yet we knew that Iran was ripe for revolt. Apparently all those CIA agents, diplomatic analysts and military brass, with their sophisticated techniques, were wearing blinders.

The mystery remains why the Washington wise men coddled the shah and condoned his oppression. We have it from CIA sources that the agency not only knew the shah was torturing his political opponents but actually gave instruction in torture techniques to his dreaded secret police.

Now Humpty Dumpty has had a great fall, and all our horses and men aren't going to put him back together again. The United States, thanks to the close association with the shah, is left with few friends in Iran.

While our slavish support of the shah was not generally known to the American public, it was no secret to the Iranian people. Their bitterness was dramatically and symbolically expressed when mobs trampled the American flag in the dust of Tehran during the recent demonstrations against the shah.

The consequences of our close ties with the tyrannical shah, and our resulting unpopularity with virtually everyone else in Iran, may well be disastrous. The United States relies on the shah to protect the Persian Gulf, whose oil fields pump the industrial life blood into the arteries of the West. Now these vital oil fields are vulnerable.

From presidents on down, U.S. officials have pampered the shah outrageously. Former President Richard Nixon wrote obsequious letters to the shah and catered to his slightest whims. President Carter has praised the shah in language he usually reserves for the Almighty. This incredible coddling has gone beyond logical reason.

Secret State Department files reveal, for example, that Saudi Arabia repeatedly urged the United States to bring pressure on Iran to hold down oil prices in the early 1970s. Washington had the clout to shut up the shah, who joined the clamor for higher oil prices. His demands were among the most extreme.

Yet the powers in Washington made no attempt to bring the shah into line. This convinced the Saudis, according to State Department documents, that the United States was secretly conspiring with the shah to keep oil prices up. The Saudis, therefore, reluctantly went along with the price gouging, despite apprehension over the economic consequences which later shook the Western world.

James Akins, while he was the U.S. ambassador to Saudi Arabia, reported an "explicit" conversation with the Saudi oil minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani about reducing oil prices. Yamani told Akins he knew that then-Secretary of State Henry Kissinger "is speaking lower oil prices but in secret doing everything possible to jack them up."

In a secret "memorandum for the file," the former ambassador revealed: "The Saudis had urged us on numerous occasions to put pressure on the Shah to cooperate with Saudi Arabia and reduce the oil prices, yet we had refused to do this."

Reported Akins: "In one of Kissinger's last meetings with King Faisal, the King urged him directly to take (oil prices) up with the Shah, and the Secretary agreed to do so. The Secretary saw the Shah in late winter 1975 and reported back to King Faisal that he had indeed tried to persuade the Shah to reduce oil prices.

"The Saudis themselves have subsequently been told by the Shah himself ... that the subject of oil was not discussed in these meetings," Akins reported. "The Iranians had told him that (the United States was) completely unconcerned about any price rise. The Shah has also told this to numerous oil men as proof that the U.S. is at least indifferent to an increase in oil prices."

The shah of Iran is just the latest in a long line of tinhorn tyrants who have been supported by the United States, and who have dragged us down with them when they fell. It is always more convenient for the Pentagon and the CIA to have a dictator to deal with instead of a democratic government that might be ousted in the next election. So they turned a blind eye to the shah's oppression of his people, and persuaded one president after another that the shah was a necessary bulwark against communism.

The bill for these years of shameful devotion to the shah must now be paid, and it could be a stiff one.

THE BIBLE
CAN YOU QUOTE IT?

By LAVINA ROSS FOWLER AND ELIZABETH ROSS WIERSEMA

1. Asenath, Joseph's wife was a daughter of Priest Potiphera. This name was popular around 950 B.C. and meant belonging to the goddess Sais. Asenath was the heroine of a beautiful legend in which she denounces her false goddess before becoming the wife of Joseph. This, of course, is not recorded in the Bible. Name the two sons born to her and Joseph. Gen. 46:20

2. What did Jesus promise his twelve apostles? Matthew 19:27-28

3. Which does 2 Peter 2:20-21 deem better to have never known grace than to have known it and departed from it?

4. Name one of the four rivers of the Garden of Eden. Genesis 2:11-14

5. "Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord? ------." Psalm 24:3-4

Four correct...excellent. Three correct...good.

Jimmy's ordeal with brother Billy and Bella Abzug

WASHINGTON — For better or worse, most citizens would rather read about Billy Carter or his brother's problems with Bella Abzug and her lot of militants than the complexities of SALT negotiations or turmoil in Iran. People relate to such human matters more easily than to ponderous issues.

Billy's latest utterances and actions embarrassed the President. In his now celebrated interview with Penthouse magazine the epithets Billy hung on Mr. Carter's closest confidants — Charles Kerbo and Hamilton Jordan — are the kind heard in the barracks or pool hall. And in declaring that Jody Powell belongs back on a Georgia farm, Billy hits at his older brother's judgment as to who should be advising him these days.

This Rabalasian discourse by Billy prompted chuckles, and, also, lofty statements deploring his bad taste. But to provoke outrage, Billy flaunted his hospitality for a visiting group of businessmen and government officials of the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriya — a long name for a revolutionary nation, Libya.

Now, Billy Carter is a Populist redneck who favored George Wallace for President over his older brother, and who sees the Libyans as underdogs victimized in the world of power politics.

The Libyan regime, for some time now, has clumsily attempted to put on a good face for the U.S. It regarded Billy's visit to their land as a public relations bonanza. Billy, being a friendly soul, invited them back. With his Libyan guests in tow, he was soon rambling on about how there are more Arabs than Jews in the world, and how the "Jewish media tears up the Arab country full time..."

This glibness infuriated Jewish groups, terribly thin-skinned about the Carter Administration anyway. The American-Jewish Committee publicly challenged Billy's connection with a nation pledged to destroy Israel. Jewish activists broke into an Atlanta hotel ballroom where Billy and his mother were among 300 guests hosting a dinner for the Libyans, and cried, "Murderers." Billy hollered back, "Go to hell."

The White House was moved to disassociate the President from Billy's Libyan activity. Officials in his native Georgia cold-shouldered him. There is a report that producers of a TV game show have canceled a scheduled appearance by Billy. Republican National Chairman Bill Brock sought to exploit this uproar by claiming that Billy had made anti-Semitic remarks.

Well, Billy's observation on the relative population of Arabs and Jews in itself is not anti-Semitic. But in mouthing the old one about the "Jewish media" Billy sounded more like Libyan Ruler Qadhafi than Huck Finn. Let's hope that Billy didn't know any better. He's a likeable guy who seems to be in a well-paid limbo these days.

There is nothing Jimmy Carter can do about Billy, who keeps bringing trouble on himself. Billy chose to leave his life in Plains for the Big Time and Big Money. It is pathetic the way he is exploited as much as he exploits. His own mother, no shrinking violet herself, urges Billy to remain in the public eye, and tells him that he is her favorite son. Those who know what family problems are — and that's nearly all of us — can appreciate this situation, one that Mr. Carter, like his predecessors also beset with family embarrassment, can't influence much.

If Billy is an embarrassment without remedy, Bella Abzug was a treacherous troublemaker that the President could do something about and did, for the good of the Republic. But like Billy, Jimmy also brought trouble on himself — by appointing her to co-chair the National Advisory Committee for Women last June.

If Carter would have checked, he might have discovered that Abzug is a contentious sort who threw out staffers like dirty shirts and had one of the worst reputations in Congress on her ability to work with people.

New York voters, including many who share her way-out views, turned her down successively for the U.S. Senate, the New York City mayoralty and Congress. They couldn't stand the din. Bella is always looking for a platform from which to bellow, and boost her political stock. Why did Carter think she would be any different in this post?

Bella saw Carter as a dumb shnook she could use to make a big name for herself again. Her committee abruptly cancelled a meeting with Carter last November, citing the 15 minutes he allotted for it as stingy. The Committee used facilities at the Department of Labor to draft and issue press releases critical of the Administration's economic policies.

Carter discovered that Abzug tried to orchestrate a walk-out of delegates to the mid-term Democratic convention in Memphis just as Carter was to speak. He heard that Abzug was charging the government thousands of dollars for bills charged to her home phone. And finally he learned that she was trying to undermine Sara R. Weddington, the White House specialist on women's issues, even to the point of not inviting her to meetings.

No wonder Jimmy fired her in such meat-handed fashion. Better to be awkward than to be axed by the likes of Bella. She represents only a tiny fraction of American womanhood. As she pokes about for a new platform, her resume should read: Have Bullhorn, Will Travel, providing Expenses Are Right.

Meanwhile, though 24 of its 40 members resigned, the committee continues and will be populated with new faces. The White House is catching a lot of bad mail and some good mail on this flap. In the long run, Carter won't lose much support.

Finally, Jimmy dispatched Bella, but he can't fire Billy. Blood is thicker than water. Jimmy can only pray that Billy wises up.

Bigger problems for 'baby boom' generation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Since its birth in 1947, the "baby boom" generation has successively crowded hospital nurseries, jammed the nation's public schools and deluged the job and housing markets.

And there's more in store as that generation — much larger than those before and after it — grows older, says a report released today by the House Select Committee on Population.

How, it asks, will the nation cope in 1990 when 544,000 children of working "boom baby" mothers need day-care facilities, or in 2010 when retirements come in record numbers?

"The major institutions in this country will face similar disruptions for the next 50 years as the 'baby boom' generation continues to move through its life cycle, leaving the problems of the 'baby bust' in its wake," the report says.

Rep. James H. Scheuer, D-N.Y., the committee chairman, said he hoped identifying the potential impact of the "population bulge" would help the government "better anticipate population change and develop more effective policy responses to it."

The more than 50 million "boom babies" born between 1947 and 1964 constitute close to one-quarter of the nation's 218 million population.

In 1936 the nation's birth rate (the number of births per 1,000 population) had fallen to a low of 18.4, the report said. During the peak years of the "baby boom," the birth rate never went below 25. But, by 1976, it had hit a historic low of 14.7.

One result, the report says, is that "the 'baby boom' generation may never achieve the relative economic success of the generations immediately preceding it or following it because its large size results in an oversupply of workers in that age group."

On the other hand, it says, crime rates likely will drop from highs in the 1960s and 1970s as the boom babies pass the youthful ages in which arrests are highest.

The implications of society expanding to accommodate the "bulge," then contracting when the next generation comes along already can be seen in the now-idle schools and unemployed teachers around the nation.

"Both the financial and human costs have been tremendous," the report says.

Coming up in the next few decades, the committee concludes, are:

—An "echo baby boom" in the 1980s as the earlier boom babies marry and have children, followed by nearly doubled demand for day-care facilities as the young mothers join the work force.

—An increase in the work force from 83 million in 1970 to 119 million in 1990.

—A rise in the number of people over age 65 from 20 million in 1970 to 34 million in 2010 and 52 million in 2030. At its peak, the report says, elderly people could represent as much as 22 percent of the total population — more than double today's 10.7 percent.

The committee, which issued the 132-page report based on hearings last year, urged more federal research and analysis, especially into the rising age of the population.

"Federal spending for the elderly amounts to nearly one-quarter of the federal budget, and it is projected that by 2025, 40 percent of the budget will represent outlays for the rapidly growing elderly population," the report concludes.

Needing special study, it says, are high medical costs, deficits in the Social Security system after 2025 and increased demands for nursing home care.

Tobacco industry tripled advertising expenses since first warnings

WASHINGTON (AP) — The tobacco industry has tripled its spending for cigarette advertising since the government started warning about health dangers of smoking, federal statistics show.

Industry spokesmen say they have spent the money to introduce low-tar cigarettes and to compete for purchasers who already smoke, not to attract new smokers.

The spending increase during the 15 years since the first surgeon general's report on smoking and health comes despite a ban on broadcast advertising that took effect in 1971. Before that year, a majority of spending for cigarette advertising had been for television and radio messages.

Despite a temporary dip after the broadcast ban, advertising budgets soon recovered and have been rising fastest in recent years, the Federal Trade Commission said Wednesday in a report to Congress. The FTC statistics were based on information from tobacco companies.

The report said domestic cigarette advertising totaled about $250 million in 1963, the year before the first surgeon general's report that linked smoking with lung cancer. The spending in 1977, the latest year for which there are figures, was $779 million, the FTC said.

A report last week by Surgeon General Julius Richmond said evidence is much stronger now than in 1964 that smoking shortens lives.

The tobacco industry has contended throughout the smoking-health controversy that the case against cigarettes has not been scientifically proven.

The industry also says advertising is not designed to attract new smokers. "The companies advertise to keep their share of the market. It is not to make smokers out of nonsmokers," said Walker Merryman, a spokesman for the Tobacco Institute.

Merryman said the higher spending for advertising is necessary to introduce new brands, such as the many low-tar brands that have come on the market in recent years.

"That's the only growth segment of the market. It's now responsible for at least one-third of the market and analysts say it will soon be 40 percent. All the companies have to have a successful low-tar brand to survive," Merryman said.

Asked if the government health warnings were the reason for the development of low-tar brands, he said, "It may extend to that. Why they are buying is a matter of conjecture."

The FTC, which tests all brands, said tar and nicotine content are continuing their downward trend.

The average 1977 cigarette had 17.1 milligrams of tar and 1.129 milligrams of nicotine, down from 21.55 milligrams tar and 1.349 nicotine in 1968.

In legislative recommendations, the FTC continued to ask Congress to require stiffer health warnings on cigarette packs, which now say, "Warning: The surgeon general has determined that cigarette smoking is dangerous to your health."

In one of the strongest proposals yet, the FTC said its readability consultant Rudolph Flesch suggested, "Danger! Tests prove cigarettes can kill you."

The FTC also recommended that tobacco companies be required to reveal tar and nicotine levels on cigarette packs, as they now do in advertisements.

Heavy rains wash Hawaii

HONOKAA, Hawaii (AP) — People living on the east coast of Hawaii Island can't recall anything like it — five feet of rain in five days.

"It was fierce. It just kept coming down," said Yasu Kawawaki, field superintendent for Honokaa Sugar Co.

The rain finally stopped Wednesday on the state's largest island, the National Weather Service in Honolulu reported.

Most areas recorded 20-to-30 inches of rain, but gauges at Kihalani showed 56.85 inches between 8 a.m. Friday and 8 a.m. Wednesday.

School out in St. Louis after try

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis school board has told 72,000 students to say home today, after a two-day effort to continue classes during a teacher strike.

"We are deeply saddened to inform the citizens of St. Louis that the educational program ... must be halted," Robert E. Wentz, district president, said Wednesday.

Police said five teachers were arrested Wednesday when they tried to keep people out of the schools. There were reports of slashed tires and a brick was thrown through a window of an empty school bus.

The 3,700 union teachers and 700 other school employees continued to defy a temporary restraining order against the strike, while only about one-third of the district's pupils attended classes.

Three pickets were arrested for refusing to allow school director Marjorie Smith to enter a school. They were released when she declined to press charges, authorities said.

Ninety-three of the district's 140 schools were open Wednesday, with 643 teachers and other personnel on the job, officials said.

A spokesman for Local 420 of the American Federation of Teachers said it appeared fewer teachers crossed picket lines Wednesday, but he had no exact figures.

The teachers are seeking more than the $100-per-year increase offered by the board. They had been working without a contract since September when they walked out Tuesday.

Now you can rat on fellow worker on toll-free phone line to Uncle Sam

Federal auditors have set up a new toll-free national hotline — 800-424-5454 — to take calls from the public on ripoffs or misspending by any federal department or agency.

Comptroller General Elmer B. Staats, head of the General Accounting Office, said callers will be guaranteed anonymity.

Today's GAO announcement comes only two days after President Carter's budget director, James McIntyre, suggested the government establish a hotline for "whistleblowers" to help federal workers complain about waste and corruption.

But the timing of Staats' announcement was just coincidence, GAO and OMB spokesmen said Wednesday. A GAO news release on the hotline was already in the mail before McIntyre's announcement, and GAO spokesman Roland Sawyer insisted, "It was our own creation and idea."

The auditing agency, which scrutinizes government programs for Congress, also gave credit to Sen. Jim Sasser, D-Tenn., for the idea of a national hotline.

Staats told a Senate Appropriations subcommittee Dec. 4 that the GAO had set up a local hotline in Washington (633-6987) for whistleblowers. Sasser suggested making the idea work nationwide.

The senator has said the hotline could help stem fetderal fraud, waste and abuse estimated as high as $25 billion a year.

"The people of this country are fed up," he said. "They want us to clean out the illegal activities reported in a number of government agencies. ... The use of the hotlne allows all concerned citizens to take part in this action."

Staats said the local Washington hotline has drawn 60 calls with fraud allegatons since last fall. Most of the callers were anonymous.

The charges, which are still being checked out, include reports of kickbacks on rental cars and abuse of overtime by federal workers.

69 deaths reported in wake of snow storm

CHICAGO (AP) — Transit workers used snow shovels to free the city's snow-bound commuter system as Midwest industry struggled to resume production — sometimes with limited success.

The toll of weather-related deaths rose to 72.

Meanwhile, the National Weather Service said a storm brewing in the Southwest threatened winter-weary Midwest states. A winter storm watch was issued for parts of Nebraska today.

A teen-age Chicago girl apparently died of carbon monoxide poisoning when she tried to start the family car, and there were more reports of fatal heart attacks among middle-aged men who shoveled snow.

There have been 24 reported deaths in Illinois, 19 in Wisconsin, 10 in Kansas, seven in Missouri, five in Iowa, three in Michigan, two in Oklahoma and one each in Ohio and Nebraska.

The Chicago Transit Authority bought 2,100 snow shovels and 600 ice scrapers to clear commuter tracks covered by more than 20 inches of snow. Trains were crowded and ran late because more than half of the system's rail cars were not available.

"We went around the city and bought whatever stores had on hand," said a CTA spokesman. "The only way to clear many sections of the 36 miles of track... is by hand."

Buffalo, N.Y., sent the city 30 pieces of snow removal equipment and manpower to run them. Additional equipment arrived from New York and Massachusetts. A Quebec firm offered its equipment free.

A fourth runway was opened at O'Hare International Airport, closed briefly by blowing snow, and then reopened. "I think we're finally starting to get ahead of it here," said a Federal Avaition Administration official.

Among the arrivals at the world's busiest airport was Illinois Gov. James R. Thompson, who cut short a family vacation in Florida. He left for West Palm Beach on Monday after asking President Carter to provide disaster relief for 22 counties.

The Chicago post office, largest in the nation under one roof, was closed for a third day due to problems at O'Hare. The post office normally handles 8 million pieces of mail daily.

to layoff 180 of its 3,100 workers in Milwaukee as a result of disrupted rail and truck shipments through Chicago, the nation's second-largest city.

About 7,500 roads remained closed in Iowa. Don Hinman, director of the state disaster office, estimated snow removal costs will reach $7 million, making this the most expensive storm in the state's history.

National Guard helicopters airlifted about 75,000 pounds of hay to cattle standed in eastern Iowa, he said. Troops reported spotting five dead animals.

Temperatures warmed. It reached 33 degrees in Chicago — the first time it has been above freezing in the city this year.

In Kansas, Okla., weather in the 40s melted ice that has kept public school students at home since Dec. 20. Classes were to resume today.

There were no deaths reported on the eastern coast of Hawaii Island, where 56.85 inches of rain fell over a five-day period ending Wednesday. The rain equalled the rainfall of a normal four-month period.

Sugar cane fields were flattened in the storm, and high winds ripped roofs off several homes. A sugar company storage shed was flattened.

Nine inches of snow hit Portland, Maine, and up to six more were expected. Commercial flights were canceled, and the city declared a snow emergency.

Hundreds of drivers, operating cars without snow tires, abandond their vehicles on Interstate 95 between Providence and Pawtucket, R.I., during a three-inch snowfall, state police said.

Thirteen inches of snow fell in the mountains of southern Utah, and there was rain over southern California and Arizona.

Here are some early morning temperatures and weather conditions from key cities around the nation and in Canada:

Eastern U.S: Atlanta 53, foggy; Boston 17, cloudy; Cincinnati 24, clear; Cleveland 20, snow; Detroit 12, clear; Indianapolis 18, clear; Louisville 28, clear; Miami 61, clear; Nashville 36, foggy; New York 32, clear; Philadelphia 28, foggy; Pittsburgh 27, snow; Washington, D.C. 34, clear.

Central U.S.: Chicago 4, clear; Denver 28, cloudy; Des Moines 10, clear; Fort Worth 52, foggy; Kansas City 18, clear; Minneapolis-St. Paul 2, clear; New Orleans 57, foggy; St. Louis 20, clear.

Western U.S.: Anchorage 23, cloudy; Los Angeles 54, partly cloudy; Phoenix 56, showers; Salt Lake City 30, smoke; San Diego 58, clear; San Francisco 46, clear; Seattle 37, clear.

Canada: Montreal 1, snow; Toronto 9, clear.

Unless you are young in heart you know Oklahoma can't have igloos. But in the just-past snow and ice storm, Charlie Green, 15, built this in his Bartlesville yard. Chris Morrow, 7, looks out the front door while Sandy Barmwater and Shelley Green, both 9, peer over the desk. (AP Laserphoto)

No casualties in fire

LONDON (AP) — More than 100 firemen battled a fire that raged through a 12-story office building in the heart of London today.

At first it was feared some people were trapped inside, but later police and firemen said there were no casualties.

The fire was at Villers House, a large office block on the Strand near Charing Cross Station and Trafalgar Square. The Strand was closed to traffic for several hours as firemen used more than 20 pumps to fight the flames.

A janitor in the building when the fire broke out alerted firemen and police and then escaped. Within minutes the building was ablaze from the sixth floor up. Firemen were not able to enter the upper floors for two hours.

Sandman to appeal jury guilty verdict

CAPE MAY COURT HOUSE, N.J. (AP) — Former Rep. Charles Sandman says he will appeal a jury verdict finding him guilty of slandering a Cape May police officer.

Sandman was found guilty of slandering Robert Marchiano. The former GOP congressman had accused the officer of police brutality.

The jury voted 5-1 for the guilty verdict Wednesday. Unanimous verdicts are not required in civil cases. The jury awarded Marchiano $25,000 in compensatory damages and $50,000 in punitive damages.

After the verdict was announced, Marchiano said, "I'm very happy. I had a lot of faith in our judicial system."

A libel charge against the former congressman was thrown out by the court, according to Sandman's attorney, Edgar Holmes.

Marchiano also charged Sandman publicly accused him of swearing out a false complaint against the youth. Sandman's allegations were made during a Cape May City Council meeting Sept. 7, 1976, more than a year after the alleged incident.

Population figures topic of reservoir hearings

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—Department of Water Resources planning head Dr. Herbert Grubb testified regarding his population projections for the area around the proposed Stacy Reservoir, as the Texas Water Commission resumed its hearings on the project Wednesday.

Grubb's figures for the area of the Upper Colorado Basin, approximately the area served by the Colorado River Municipal Water District (sponsor of the project), were revised last year to show additional growth in the region.

Those figures were prepared by DWR after Parks and Wildlife Department had requested an updated set of planning figures, Grubb reported.

The original figures had indicated the 1974 population of 270,000 would increase to 314,000, whereas the new figures indicated 364,000.

By 2030, the population will be within the range of 510,000 to 585,000, according to the new figures, instead of 385,000 shown in the old figures.

Those projections, Grubb says, indicate the area's growth will be "just a little slower" than the state as a whole. The earler projections had indicated slower growth, he said.

Grubb testified that the figures, which were attacked by opponent projects as being unofficial, are now the official DWR projections.

Grubb was questioned by Austin attorney Frank Booth representing CRMWD regarding testimony by economist Dr. James Vinson on population projections in relationship to oil and gas production in the Midland-Odessa area.

Grubb indicated that he feels the higher price for oil and gas has stimulated employment of those engaged in searching for it—despite declines in actual production.

If oil is brought from the Alaskan North Slope by pipeline to West Texas, as has been suggested, that could increase population, too, he commented.

Austin attorney Fred Werkenthin, representing Lower Colorado River Authority (one of the project's opponents), asked if Grubb or DWR had reassessed industrial use of water in determining projected needs—with Grubb indicating industrial, municipal and other uses were considered.

Considerable discussion was made of the methodology used in preparing the projections, with Werkenthin contending that projecting 50 years into the future is a risky business.

Grubb indicated agreement—but also that it is possible to do so with some assurance of accuracy.

Werkenthin also introduced some memorandums from a former DWR employee, who indicated he felt the projections for some counties were too low or too high, based on his talks with county officials.

Grubb's testimony is expected to be completed today.

They're two coaches who appreciate the finer points of the game of pro football, namely the art of keeping points off the scoreboard rather than piling them on.

To some, many of the past National Football League title games have been called, for lack of a better word, boring. Noll and Landry, both defensive assistant coaches before ascending to their present posts, shrug aside such suggestions.

"I saw the past couple of Super Bowls that we weren't in, then I read accounts of the game afterward and there was a difference between the game I read about and the game I saw," Noll said Wednesday.

"I guess I have an appreciation of defense and one of the things you're going to find in championship games are pretty good defenses because you don't get here unless you have a good defense.

"There are some people who may not have the appreciation for defensive football that I have, people who think the best games are where you run up and down the field and score a lot of points ... That's not outstanding football, in my view. An absence of defense doesn't necessarily make things more exciting. I think you have to be able to play a total game — and I think you have two total football teams here," Noll said.

"What's more, I think people who really appreciate and understand the game — and by that I mean all facets of it, not just points and bombs — appreciate how exciting Super Bowls really are."

Landry, too, seemed almost to recoil at the thought that Super Bowls are boring. "How can you say that? The Super Bowl is almost like constant sudden death. You can make mistakes during the season, lose games, then make up for it the next week.

"Heck, we had plenty of experience in that area." Dallas was a mediocre 6-4 at one point during the season, then reeled off six straight victories.

"But in the Super Bowl, your whole season can hinge on one or two plays, one or two mistakes, maybe. That, to me, is exciting," Landry said. "And because that's the way it is, with one play or mistake turning things around the way it did in our game here three years ago (Reggie Harrison's punt block that gave Pittsburgh two points on a safety and started the Steelers' comeback), you naturally get teams playing conservatively to avoid those mistakes."

With teams as explosive on offense and murderous on defense as the Steelers and Cowboys, it figures that neither team will dominate the other, as has happened so often — but Landry doesn't rule out the possibility of a runaway.

"All one team has to do is to get the jump on the other team, to break the other team's concentration, and you have the possibility of a game getting out of hand," said the Cowboys' coach.

"Take the Los Angeles game (for the National Conference title). Heck, there's no way in the world we're 28-0 better than the Rams, but we got the jump on 'em late in the game and they couldn't recover."

The same thing happened in Pittsburgh, where the Steelers blew out the Houston Oilers 34-5 in the American Conference championship, putting the game away with 17 points in a 48-second span just before halftime.

Clearly, both teams have the personnel capable of turning a nail-biter into a rout.

Says Mike Wagner, the Steelers' free safety: "What we're dealing with is two highly potent offenses and even though both teams have great defenses, there are too many game breakers. You just need Lynn Swann to get a half a step or Franco Harris to get half a hole or Tony Dorsett to get to the outside or Roger Staubach to get an extra half-second of protection and we're talking not just about a big game but potentially about a touchdown every time."

Is Pittsburgh Steelers' cornerback Mel Blount giving the Dallas Cowboys the old evil eye? Blount is either ready to face the Dallas Cowboys Sunday in Super Bowl XIII, or he is more than determined to get those shoulder pads off. (AP Laserphoto)

Bradshaw has marshmallow heart

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

MIAMI, Fla. — The man expected to lead the Pittsburgh Steelers to an unprecedented third Super Bowl victory Sunday is a big, blond bear with a marshmallow heart.

"I am basically shy," said quarterback Terry Bradshaw as he nervously fidgeted in the spotlight that goes with being the Most Valuable Player of the National Football League.

"I am not used to this kind of attention. I would be a lot happier sitting out there at poolside by myself spitting tobacco."

The road to the top in his profession hasn't been easy for the 6-foot-3, 215-pound veteran, who has suffered through jeers as well as cheers from Steeler fans, who once heard the crowd applaud because he suffered a shoulder injury and who another time, after losing the starting quarterback role, confessed:

"It's tearing my guts out."

That was nearly five years ago. Today the balding, pug-faced native of Louisiana is the hottest commodity in the game, voted the most valuable player in the league in the poll of sports writers and broadcasters of The Associated Press.

He has had a brilliant season in leading the Steelers to a 14-2 record and two impressive playoff victories. It is his rifle arm, producer of 2,915 aerial yards and 28 touchdowns, that has established the Steelers as a 3½ point favorite over the defending champion Dallas Cowboys in Sunday's title game in Miami's Orange Bowl.

"I thought once the Steelers were going to trade me — that was when I was benched in favor of Joe Gilliam," he said. "The club refused to trade me. That gave me new confidence. I stuck in out. Everything worked out okay.

Faith has been one of Bradshaw's intangible weapons in the restructuring of his social and professional life. After a broken first marriage, he married Olympic figure skater JoJo Starbuck. He bought some horses and cows and settled in Grand Cane, La. His football career blossomed. Life became beautiful again.

"Until this year I never even made the Pro Bowl," the balding quarterback said. "Nobody paid much attention to me. I just sat over in the corner, in the fringe of things, and other guys did all the talking. That was fine with me." It's not that Bradshaw is antisocial. On the contrary, he is one of the "goodest" off what they call in the grits and sorghum belt "a good ole boy." He enjoys people.

"I like to get around people and talk," he confesses. "But things like this (the organized pregame interviews) are different. I feel people are trying to pick my brains out."

Aggies shock Arkansas

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — The 15th ranked Texas Aggies, who died by the free throw last week in Dallas, survived by it Wednesday night en route to a 74-69 overtime victory over 11th ranked Arkansas.

"I'm going to shoot 100 free throws in practice tomorrow," said Aggie guard Tyrone Ladson, who sank two pressure free throws with 59 seconds left in the overtime to secure the victory for the Aggies.

Ladson, who missed four free throws in the final minute last Saturday in A&M's 78-76 loss to Southern Methodist, almost was the goat again when he missed a free throw with seven seconds left in regulation play that would have given A&M a three-point lead.

Instead, the Hogs whipped the ball down court to Tony Brown, who popped in a 25-foot jump shot at the final buzzer to tie the score at 62-62 and force the overtime period.

But after the Aggies edged to a 68-66 lead in the overtime, Ladson went to the line again and calmly pumped in two free throws that proved to be the winning margin and Rynn Wright's tip in with 21 seconds to play completed the hard-fought comeback.

The victory upped the Aggies' SWC record to 3-1 and dropped the Razorbacks to a 2-2 mark. Arkansas is 10-3 for the season and the Aggies are 14-3.

The loss marked an unhappy milestone for Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton. It was the first time in Sutton's five years at Arkansas he had lost three games in a row.

The Aggies held a sub-par Sidney Moncrief to 10 points in his lowest output of the season and used an effective zone defense to keep all Razorbacks blocked from the inside with the exception of freshman Scott Hastings, who scored all 20 of his points in the second half.

"People are gonna zone us all year because we're not a good shooting team and that's a way to neutralize Moncrief," Sutton said. "There was something wrong with Sidney Moncrief tonight. I've never seen him play like that. He lost the ball a couple times and missed some easy shots."

In fact, Hastings seemed to be the only Razorback given a pass to patrol near the Aggie basket.

"They might have been keying on Steve (Shall)," Hastings said. "A lot of times the ball was deflected off someone else to me. Point-wise it was my best game but I've played better defense."

A&M freshman Rudy Woods, who played the final 11 minutes with four fouls, scored 20 points and 14 rebounds and passed out seven assists to lead the Aggies in all three categories.

TED BATTLES
BATTLE SCENE

LAKE WORTH, Fla. — They said hotels in Miami would be jammed for the Super Bowl, but this is ridiculous. Lake Worth is 60 miles up the Florida east coast.

We could say we took a wrong turn at the airport and didn't discover our mistake until...but that would be fibbing.

How about, we decided to sneak off and go skiing and then were plagued by a guilty conscience, a dedication to God, country and the NFL and turn around. That's hard to swallow, too, so how about a free night's lodging away from it all before returning to the Moon and Miami's madness.

AFTER ALL, the Cowboys are billeted in nearby Fort Lauderdale, which is besieged daily by media members, but at least somewhat insulated from the frenzied scene of Super Bowl XIII.

The Cowboys and Steelers arrived Monday, and it didn't take Dallas linebacker Thomas Henderson long to start tongues wagging with his "Terry Bradshaw couldn't spell cat if you spotted him the CA... They'll have to think against us, and I don't know if they are capable of doing that."

Mean Joe Greene observed, "He backed it up. He is a tremendous athlete. If all his talk doesn't affect his teammates or the overall operation, more power to him. We should have more of that in sports. If I think we are going to kick the Cowboys' butts, I should say it."

LINEBACKER JACK Lambert said he thought Henderson was, "Kind of a Mohammad Ali type of guy, trying to put on a show for the fans. If he can back up all that talk, he can talk all he wants."

Running back Franco Harris said, "Thomas is a good player. He does a good job, but nothing to make me run to the other side."

More inflamatory perhaps than Henderson's promise of a shutout was the observation of Cowboys' safety Cliff Harris that for Dallas to win, "We'll have to knock Terry Bradshaw out of the game." Words that left no one smiling.

The Steelers arrived and immediately went out partying on the town with the "fine" money accumulated for player's mistakes during the season. According to Lambert it wasn't that big a deal. "We had a nice dinner and a few glasses of milk."

It was strictly a linebacker party and the fines amounted to something over $100, and there was still $40 left when it was over.

LAMBERT SAID, "The honor system is employed on fines for mistakes, but that doesn't work out very well for us with Jack Hamm. But the rest of us are pretty honest."

The 6-foot-4, 220-pound Lambert, in describing Hamm's mayhem, says, "He is a great player. I can't think of anyone I would rather play alongside. He is a pretty unpleasant individual, but a great player."

And Hamm on Lambert, "If he was a little tougher, he might make it in this league."

SUPER BOWL STEW — Tickets purchased at $30 are hard to find. One party advertising for two tickets was contacted by phone and asked how they would be willing to pay for two tickets, and the husky female voice at the other end, said, "Anything you want."

Parking spaces around the Orange Bowl in some instances will go at $30 a car.

Henderson's pitch for recognition may be a result of his days as a skinny high school defensive end. He didn't receive a college offer.

After the tragic plane crash that killed 18 Wichita State footballers, he figured the Shockers might be able to use him. "I called them, but they didn't want me." So Hollywood wound up at Langston University in Oklahoma.

Preston Pearson's mind not all on Super Bowl

FORT LAUDERDALE, FLa. (AP) — It seems Preston Pearson always has something to prove.

He has been traded away from two National Football League teams — Baltimore and Pittsburgh — and now he is wondering if the defending Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys really care about him.

"I'm 34 years old and I can do anything any 21 year old on this team can do," said Pearson, who is used as a receiver on third down passing situations.

"I told Coach (Tom) Landry that this was the last team I will play with. I'm not interested in other teams," said Pearson. "But now I just might think about it after Sunday's Super Bowl. You've got to think about yourself in this business."

Pearson was set free by Pittsburgh three years ago and Dallas was the first team to call.

"I appreciated that," said Pearson. "I sure didn't appreciate (Pittsburgh Coach) Chuck Noll. I was done wrong. He put me on waivers to make a place for a rookie (Mike Collier) who is no longer in the league."

Sisterly love goes courtside

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
R-T Sports Writer

When the Midland Lee Rebels meet the Midland High Bulldogs today at 8 p.m. in the Lee High gym for dominance in the first half District 5-4A girls basketball race, it could put a strain on sisterly love.

You see, this is a battle of sisters--of sorts. Midland Lee Coach Shirley Stephenson and Midland High Coach Jane Young happen to be sisters, and when these two teams meet, it usually is a shootout of high degree. It won't be any different tonight since the first half 5-4A cage title is at stake.

Midland High leads the league at present with a ½-game edge over Midland Lee and Abilene High. The Bulldogs own a 5-1 loop record while Lee will carry a 4-1 district mark into the game. Abilene High, who plays cross town rival Abilene Cooper today, also owns a 4-1 mark.

Should Midland High win tonight, the Bulldogs would own at least a share of the first half title and insure themselves of at least a district playoff at the end of the regular schedule. The first half winner meets the second half winner to determine the playoff representative in District 5-4A.

Lee, on the other hand, can take a big step themselves toward at least a first half tie with a victory. But Lee needs to win tonight and again Friday or Saturday against San Angelo in a makeup game in order to perform that trick. Abilene High still has Cooper and Odessa Permian left to play during the same time span. Abilene High can finish no worse than a first place tie with victories in both games.

This year's girls race is not much different from a year ago when the girls began district basketball competition for the first time. Midland Lee is the defending champion, in fact, the only 5-4A girls champion in the brief history of the sport. But last year's race came down to Midland High and Midland Lee with the Rebels winning the last game of the year to advance to the playoffs. It looks as if the two Tall City teams will be fighting again to the end for a playoff berth.

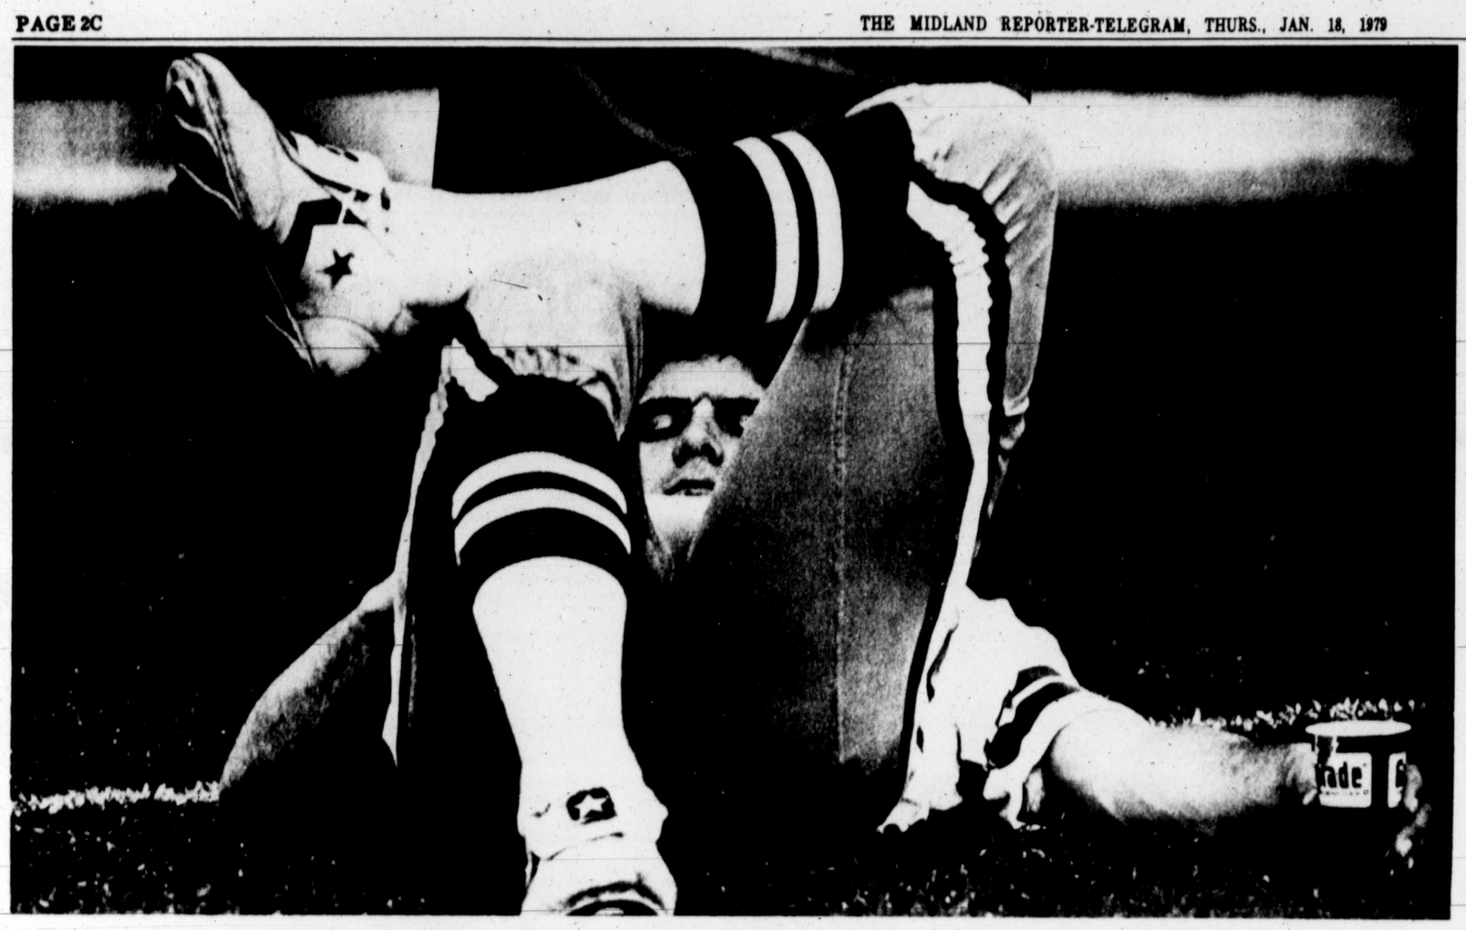

Abilene High is throwing in some extra competition this time around, and could easily win their remaining two games. Midland High, however, is in the best position for at least a share of the title. All they have to do is win tonight, which won't be easy.

Gowdy gets call for Super Sunday

By HOWARD SMITH
AP Sports Writer

Curt Gowdy, the dean of network television sports announcers, will be back at the old stand Sunday, calling the play-by-play at Super Bowl XIII in Miami.

This will be his seventh Super Bowl — NBC has only done seven of them — and, along with anchorman at the Olympics and play-by-play announcer at the World Series, is the most prestigious assignment in the business. There had been speculation throughout the season that Don Ohlmeyer, executive producer of NBC Sports, would bypass Gowdy in favor of Dick Enberg for the Super Bowl assignment. But Ohlmeyer elected to go with Gowdy and use Enberg as "host" for the overall Super Bowl show.

"The whole thought process was that we have two No. 1 teams, Gowdy and John Brodie and Enberg and Merlin Olsen," says Ohlmeyer. "It's only right to have all of them involved with the Super Bowl. I have had long discussions with Curt. He is interested in cutting back on his schedule. He's been on the go for a long time.

"Next year he may be doing only about half as many events as in the past. This may be his last Super Bowl. There will be many more Super Bowls ahead for Enberg. It just seemed like the right thing to do."

Gowdy was like a duck out of water as "host" for the World Series. His role was not clearly defined and both he and Ohlmeyer admit it didn't work very well.

"I enjoy doing play-by-play," says Gowdy. "I could be a good host but I'm basically a play-by-play guy. That's what I do best."

Gowdy, who is 58, says he has been thinking about cutting back on his schedule for some time, and resents critics who say NBC is forcing him out.

"They say 'Gowdy is washed up'. They say the network is phasing me out. But they never ask me about it and they don't talk to the network. That's nonsense. It's my decision. I don't want to be out there pounding away 52 weeks a year like I have been doing. My wife doesn't want to sit home alone all year anymore."

Gowdy's semi-retirement will be like a normal schedule for other people. He will continue to do a full season of football for NBC and host "The American Sportsman" for ABC. He will do some other events for NBC, including an occasional segment of "SportsWorld" and has been promised a meaningful role at the Moscow Olympics.

"NBC has been good to me," says Gowdy. "Ohlmeyer told me to pick out what I want to do."

He also owns five radio stations and plans to get more involved with the management of each.

As for the Super Bowl, Gowdy is more than ready to roll. "The big games are easier to do," he says, "and I think I do a better job on the big events. You're up more and you ride along with the emotions of the event. I love doing the big ones."

Gowdy, along with every other play-by-play announcer in the business, has been criticized for one thing or another. But he does have his strengths, chief among them his understanding that people tune in to watch the game, not listen to the announcers.

He talks more than most play-by-play men, slipping in an endless supply of information in between plays, but he doesn't distract his audience. He reports on the game. He gives you the necessary basics that others sometimes forget — the down and the yardage, the time left, etc.

He is at his best when the game is dull because he has a knack of focusing on this angle or that player, finding a sort of story line that holds the interest of his audience.

He says he learned how to do that in his days covering the Boston Red Sox when they were a bad ballclub. "In July and August when the team was 30 games behind I used to try and think what I could do to make the game interesting," he says. "We would always find some angle, something to hang our hats on. If the game was dull we would try and develop a story about a player who was having a great game, something to help the audience enjoy the game."

Gowdy is old school. He concentrates on the game. He has a sense of what's important and hammers away lest anyone miss the point. He doesn't like distractions and has been known to fling promotional announcements for upcoming entertainment shows out of the booth rather than interrupt the flow of the game.

For that alone, he merits some sort of award.

Midland sports gripe to end

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
R-T Sports Writer

One of the biggest gripes in Midland sports history will probably be put to rest Friday night.

More than likely, there will be a seat for every Tall City basketball fan for a game between Midland High and Midland Lee. It's not because there is less interest in Tall City basketball, but this game is being played in Chaparral Center and it is a far cry from playing in the cracker box gyms at the two high schools.

Students and fans alike should be able to get a seat for this one, and that will be a first. Sam Cox, Midland athletic director, thinks the Center will be more than adequate for this one.

"We really don't know how many people will come to this game," Cox said. "We really have nothing in the past to base it on. We've usually had sellouts for this game, but it has never been played in a place this big. We do know that a lot of fans that wanted to see a Midland High-Lee game never even tried to go in the past because they knew they couldn't get in. We shouldn't have that problem Friday. Unless I'm totally underestimating the interest in this game, the Center should be more than adequate."

The game is an important one too. Midland High can nail down the first half District 5-4A title with a victory over Lee. An upset by the Rebels could possibly produce a first half tie between Midland High and Abilene Cooper, who meets Abilene High Friday in an effort to keep their first half hopes alive.

In District 5-4A play, the winner of the first half plays the winner of the second half. Anyway you look at it, Midland High is insured of at least getting into a district playoff.

Cox said there will be no pre-game sale of tickets and there will be no reserved seats. Tickets may be purchased at the gate with prices 75 cents for students and $1.50 for adults.

"We will have plenty of ticket takers at the game, and there shouldn't be any problem of having to wait very long to buy a ticket," Cox said.

A junior varsity game between the two schools will begin at 6:15 p.m. while the varsity matchup will begin at 8 p.m.

Midland High will be the home team for this contest, and Midland High fans are asked to sit on the East side of the Center. They are also asked to use the East parking lot. The best entrance for this seating is the I Street entrance off of Wadley. This entrance is to the Northeast parking lot.

The visiting Midland Lee fans should sit on the West side of the Center. They should also park in the Northwest parking lot, which can be gained by using the Garfield entrance to Midland College.

One thing is for sure. More people will be able to see a Midland-Lee basketball game than ever before.

Tyler refuses to yield job

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Coach Bob Tyler said Wednesday he would not resign as head football coach at Mississippi State University and would challenge the decision to remove him as the school's athletic director.

"I have not resigned and I do not intend to," Tyler said following meetings with attorneys and others Wednesday.

President James McComas said Tuesday night that he had relieved Tyler of his duties as athletic director because the combined job was too much for one person.

The search for a new athletic director was under way, he said.

Tyler was told the the action during a meeting with McComas Monday and informed sources had said Tyler was prepared to resign if the decision was allowed to stand.

Sources said Tyler had told members of his staff at a Tuesday meeting that they should begin looking for other jobs.

Tyler said Wednesday that he had told McComas that he considered the move to strip him of his athletic director's title to be unsatisfactory.

Gerela to look for neck brace

It seems that before that game here three years ago, the Pittsburgh Steeler placekicker booted a practice ball into the stands.

In the confusion of the moment, he couldn't find a replacement. So he went into the stands and took the ball away from a fan, a New Jersey policeman whose subsequent suit claimed he was manhandled in the exchange.

"He'll probably be sitting in that same spot — wearing a neck brace," Gerela said with a strained smile as he awaited Sunday's Super Bowl rematch with the Dallas Cowboys.

Gerela doesn't know the status of the suit. "Haven't heard a thing about it for a couple of years," he said.

But assorted other dilemmas in his career have been well chronicled.

Calf and groin injuries cut his production to career lows of 14 field goals in 1976 and nine in 1977.

This season, the calf was fine, and so was the groin; but Gerela felt pain in his paycheck. And he said that playing out his option was the main reason he hit just 12 of 26 field goal tries this season and drew frequent boos from Steelers fans.

"I dwelled upon the thing too much, dwelled upon it, dwelled upon it — and dwelled upon it," he said in low monotone.

"I was down. My mind and my concentration just wasn't there and I just didn't care. I just didn't put forth the effort."

Yet Gerela said he took stock of himself and his statistics when the regular season ended.

"I said, 'Gee, you know all I needed was some incentive, some drive, some motivation and I could have gone out there and kicked 68-70 percent easily."

Believing his mind is now right, Gerela has hit four of six field goals tries in the playoffs. The longest boot was a 37-yarder that followed a pair of psyche-out timeouts by the Houston Oilers.

"It looked so close. There was no way I could possibly blow it," he said of the 37-yarder. "The ball was going where I wanted it to go."

Where the ball goes in Super Bowl XIII remains to be seen. The same is true of Gerela's contract talks.

"I don't care to discuss my contract situation," he said. "I'm concentrating on this game. I've got to go out and do my best and not care about this being the Super Bowl, the whole world watching and the pressure involved.

Mariners hire Danny O'Brien

SEATTLE (AP) — The Seattle Mariners, last in the American League West last season, Wednesday hired Danny O'Brien as president and chief executive officer in an attempt to improve their baseball fortunes on the field and in the stands.

O'Brien, 48, resigned last week after five years as vice president and general manager of the Texas Rangers.

O'Brien said at a Seattle news conference he hopes to make the Mariners as successful in baseball as the Seattle SuperSonics are in basketball and the Seahawks are in football — maybe even more so.

O'Brien announced no specific plans for changes. He said he has only one immediate priority — hiring a new director of player development.

The Mariners said O'Brien is an additional man at the top and that no other executive switches will be made. That means Executive Director Kip Horsburgh and General Manager Lou Gorman will retain their titles, but report to O'Brien.

O'Brien joined the Rangers after the club's first two seasons resulted in two last-place finishes and attendance was low.

The Mariners said under O'Brien the Rangers had three second-place finishes in the American League West and three club season attendance records.

Campaign begins for Larry Bird

BOSTON (AP) — A campaign to secure the basketball services of Indiana State University star Larry Bird is being put in high gear by the lowly Boston Celtics.

Red Auerbach, president and general manager of the National Basketball Association team, already has made a trip to Terre Haute, Ind., to watch the big foward. Player-Coach Dave Cowens eventually will be dispatched for the same purpose.

Bird is the leading NCAA scorer with a 32.6 average and the stumbling Celtics, deep in the Atlantic Division basement, are virtually drooling at the thought that their No. 1 college pick from 1978 will sign a pro contract immediately after the college season ends.

He would be joining a team in flux, with 26 different players in two seasons.

What Bird thinks, however, is a mystery. Indiana State spokesmen say he hasn't granted newspaper interviews since October.

But Boston — with playoff hopes smothered early in the current NBA season — doesn't want to wait too long. The team's rebuilding effort is picking up speed.

Wednesday's shuffle of backup center Dennis Awtrey to Seattle gave Boston its second No. 1 draft pick in 1979. Based on the Celtics' record, the team's own first choice will be at or near the top of the chart.

Auerbach, meanwhile, has first shot at Bird, and Celtics owner John Y. Brown says the college senior eventually will be subjected to considerable pursuasive efforts.

It may or may not be an accident that the latest Boston acquisition, rookie center-forward Rick Robey, is a friend of Bird's.

Judkins and second-year forward Cedric Maxwell have shown promise. Robey was specifically sought by Cowens. The addition of two top college draftees and possibly Bird would — the Celtics figure — make them a team on the way up instead of down.

Church play can be rough

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — A church league basketball referee was being treated today for injuries to his larynx after police said he was choked unconscious during a game disturbance at a city recreation center Tuesday night.

Charles Mutch, 31, was being treated at a Tulsa hospital after he was choked with the lanyard of his referee's whistle in the closing seconds of the game.

Texas College coach takes players off court

SAN MARCOS, Texas (AP) — Southwest Texas State defeated Texas College Wednesday night in a basketball game that ended almost 10 minutes before it was supposed to.

SWT won the game, 75-56, when Texas College coach C.L. Jackson took his team to the dressing room with 9:45 to play.

"I had one with a hurt ankle, I saw a rolling block on the floor, and when the referees won't call anything, we're not going to play," Jackson said.

"The game was too physical, and we're not used to playing that physically," Jackson said.

Jackson quit the rout after Phillip Davis — who led the Tyler, Texas school with 13 points — was called for an offensive foul in front of the Texas College bench.

Carew may be satisfied with California offer

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Agreement between Minnesota and California may soon be all that stands between seven-time American League batting champion Rod Carew moving from the Twins to the Angels for the 1979 baseball season.

Buzzie Bavasi, the Angels' general manager, met with Carew Wednesday and indicated that the Angels might agree to terms with the 33-year-old first baseman sometime today.

"We see no complications and we should have an affirmative report tomorrow," said Bavasi, who met with Carew and the player's attorney, Jerry Simon, at an undisclosed location.

"We had a very pleasant meeting with the Angels today," said Simon. "We should have something positive to report tomorrow."

Simon, Carew and Mike Port, the Angels' player personnel director, met later Wednesday.

Carew, who has played for the Twins since 1967, is supposedly asking for substantial money up front and a multiyear package worth up to $4 million.

If Carew and the Angels agree on a contract, California will have to work out a trade with Minnesota.

Players who have reportedly been offered for Carew have been outfielder Ken Landreaux, infielder Dave Chalk and left-handed pitcher Ken Brett. Other names that have been mentioned as possibilities in a deal are right-handed pitchers Paul Hartzell and Dyar Miller and some minor leaguers.

Pacers' Leonard crying foul play

By The Associated Press

"The officials just killed us," Leonard said Wednesday night after the Pacers lost 112-102 to the Seattle SuperSonics, who were whistled for only 19 fouls in the game, compared to 28 for Indiana.

"Seattle's a good club; they don't need those breaks," Leonard said. "We're going to send the tape (of the game) in (to the National Basketball Association office). We've been playing good basketball and this kind of officiating really hurts us."

Guards Gus Williams and Dennis Johnson also helped kill the Pacers, scoring 26 and 21 points, respectively, and keying a 17-4 second-quarter tear.

Seattle, a team which recently has done very well with the referees, outscored Indiana 24-12 from the line. In a 108-99 last Sunday to Los Angeles, Seattle was whistled only 11 times — equalling a season NBA low — and Los Angeles went to the line just six times.

Kings 120, Celtics 99

Scott Wedman scored 32 points, 14 of them in the fourth period, to guide Kansas City to their seventh victory in eight games.

Boston, which has lost seven of its past eight games, trailed by five, 84-79, going into the final quarter as Cedric Maxwell scored 20 of his 35 points in the third period.

But Wedman and Bill Robinzine, who had 17 points, led the Kings on a 14-4 burst and Kansas City pulled away for an easy victory.

Hawks 111, Blazers 110

Ron Brewer hit two free throws with 10 seconds left to give Portland a 110-109 lead. But Atlanta called a timeout and then got the ball to the 7-foot-1 Rollins for the winning basket. John Drew led all scorers with 36 points for Atlanta.

Nets 106, Pistons 99

John Williamson scored 28 points and Bernard King had 25 for New Jersey, and the two keyed an 11-2 spurt midway in the fourth quarter that gave the Nets a 94-87 lead after trailing 85-83. King had seven points in that stretch and Williamson four.

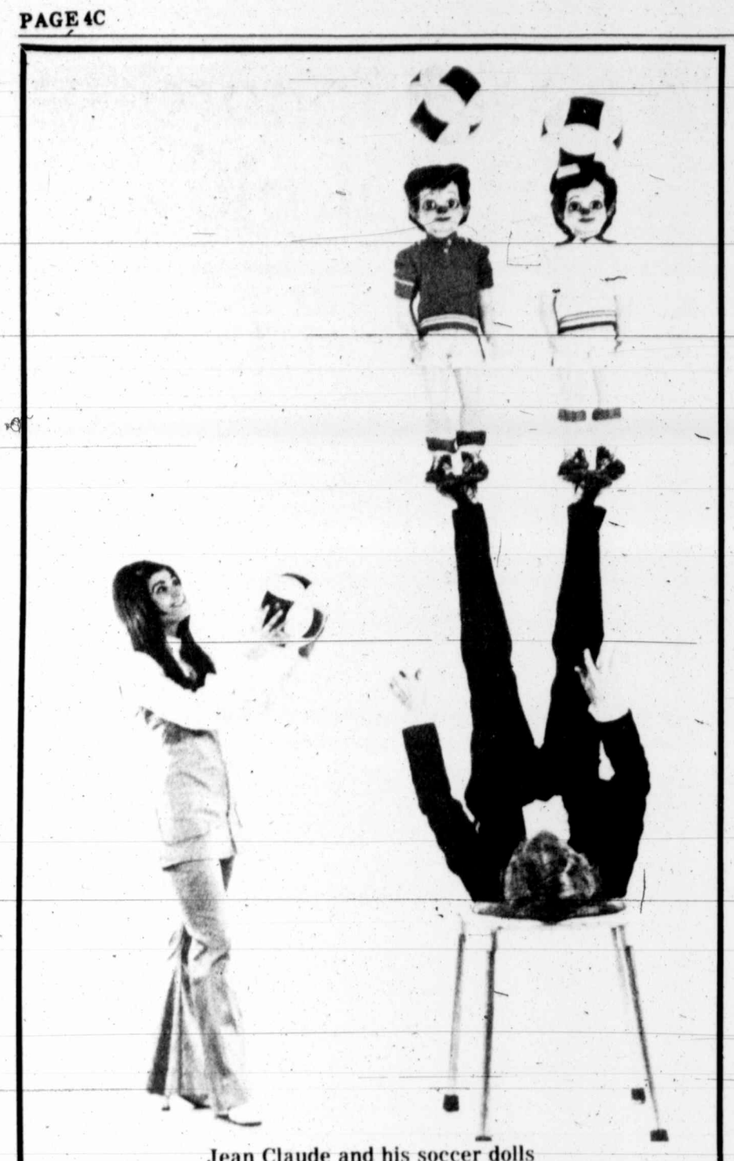

King also hit four crucial foul shots that gave New Jersey a 103-93 lead with two minutes to play.

76ers 107, Cavs 94

Bobby Jones' fast-break basket with 6:38 left in the first period snapped an 8-8 tie and Philadelphia cruised to an easy victory over Cleveland. Reserve guard Ralph Simpson — playing for Doug Collins, who was in Benton, Ill., for his father's funeral — scored 20 points to pace the 76ers.

Cleveland scored 10 straight points and rallied to 53-50 in the third period, but Jones and Julius Erving then ignited a burst that gave the 76ers a 62-54 lead. Erving wound up with 19 points.

Jean Claude and his soccer dolls

Trotter halftime will entertain

No one doubts that the Harlem Globetrotters put on an exciting, entertaining show, but when they appear at Midland College's Chaparral Center tonight at 7:30 p.m., spectators also will be treated to three unusual halftime performances.

Robert Biasini, a young Italian, does things with a bicycle that casual Sunday afternoon riders won't believe. During his remarkable act, he jumps rope while on the bike, pirouettes on the handle bars, balances the bike on one wheel while rapidly spinning around the arena floor and finally dismantles the bike itself whiel still riding tight, fast circles.

Also in the show is Dick Franco, who in only five years has learned the art of juggling well enough to perform at the White House. Dick was 20 years old and a champion diver at Youngstown State College when a friend a friend taught him to juggle three balls one summer. He became so intrigued that he turned professional, playing shows and circuses the world over.

Among other stunts, Franco has mastered the incredible feat of simultaneously juggling four ping-pong balls in his mouth.

Jean Claude's specialty is a presentation of a mock soccer game with two dolls on his feet--one a soccer player and the other a soccer referee.

Coach Hate analyzes grid thorns

By BOB WEIMER
Newsday

Q. It's not uncommon to see large defensive linemen making vigorous attempts to pull the heads off members of the opposition, especially quarterbacks. In your opinion, coach, what would happen if a player found himself with a head in his hands?

A. He couldn't run with it. We studied this tactic, and we came to the conclusion that popping a head would give us no particular advantage. The rules do not permit a player to move down the field with a head, nor do the rules demand that a decapitated player be removed from the game. In the case of a first-string quarterback, most teams in this league would probably tape the head on the neck stump and send the man back into the game.

Q. WHAT about ethics? Is it considered bad form to make an obvious effort to remove an opponent's head?

A. No. In fact, it's widely encouraged. When one of my players does it, however, he's not primarily interested in the head. We find head-twisting is a good way to force a man to fumble. Our defensive unit plays for the ball, and if a few heads come off in the process, so be it.

Q. A few years ago, coach, Sam Huff, a linebacker for the New York Giants, was one of the most widely known players in the National Football League. Whatever happened to him?

A. The New York what? Sam who?

Q. Obviously, you're not one for nostalgia. That's probably unavoidable. Professional football is a young man's game. Still we can't help but wonder what happens to players after they leave the league. Many of them have concentrated on football, to the exclusion of all other endeavors, for years. Counting high school and college it's not unusual for a player to have been in the game for over 20 years. Have you followed the careers of any of your players after they left the game?

A. NO. We're preoccupied with preparing either for the next game or the next season. So most of our time is spent developing strategy and scouting young players. This doesn't leave much time for staying in touch with the oldtimers. I've heard, however, that a few of them have found jobs as paperweights and bookends.

Q. Speaking of scouting, we'd like to know how you and your scouts spot young players with potential. It's obvious that size and natural coordination are important. What other qualities do you seek, and how do you go about evaluating young prospects?

A. I find there's no substitute for a personal interview. I like to drop in on the boy's parents. This enables me to size up the atmosphere in the home. And I always ask the folks if they ever caught the kid torturing the cat.,

Q. YOUR club and most clubs in the league are very strict about ankle taping. I understand a player can be fined if he neglects to have his ankles taped. Is this done to prevent sprains and strains of the muscles and tendons of that vulnerable area?

A. That's part of it. But the main reason for taping ankles is that it makes it much harder for an opponent to twist a foot off the leg bones. No club can afford to maintain a complete inventory of spare feet. We'd rather spend the money on tape, and keep the feet on the legs.

Q. Speaking of wrappings, coach, we've noticed that most linemen wear a bandage of some sort on their hands and forearms. Some wrap strips of orange sponge rubber around their arms. Others use white rubber. Still others simply wrap their wrists. Is this also done to minimize injury.

A. IN A way. But it is not done primarily to protect the forearm area from the opposition. The players strive to make the wrappings distinctive and easily recognizable. This enables them to avoid biting their own fingers during a pileup.

Q. We're glad you brought that up. A lot of action goes on at the line of scrimmage that the fans never get to see. That's a shame. Some experts contend that games are won and lost in these mostly hidden struggles. Do the players observe any limits? What would happen, for example, if in the heat of action one player reached down another player's throat and tore out his spleen and part of his liver. If he got caught, would a penalty be called?

A. THAT would depend. A member of the offensive team would have to be especially careful not to get caught. He might be called for holding.

Q. We have seen defensive players making a tackle and then trying to make the runner's knee bend in an unaccustomed direction. We've also seen defensive players who "clothesline" an opponent. This involves holding a rigid outstretched arm in front of the neck of an oncoming runner. This resultant impact often produces a partial collapse of the runner's throat. As a result of such tactics, the fans often see players writhing in agony or gasping for breath. Is football too rough?

A. That's a good question, and it deserves a thoughtful answer. The sight of a player being carried off the field is unsettling to some fans. These are usually the folks who have only a limited understanding of the game. They forget that the players are all highly trained professional athletes. They do not feel pain. What you see them expressing on the field are only symptoms of localized discomfort.

Q. What about people who criticize the game's unrelenting emphasis on winning? The late coach Vince Lombardi once said, "Winning isn't everything. It's the only thing." Was he right.

A. No. It's also important to beat the point spread.

Duncan leaves Oklahoma

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Donnie Duncan brought his wife and plenty of clothes when he flew here from Oklahoma Wednesday to be introduced as Iowa State's new football coach.

But he left the wishbone behind.

Duncan was Coach Barry Switzer's top assistant at Oklahoma and worked closely with the wishbone formation that made the Sooners one of the top offensive teams in the country. However, Duncan says he doesn't plan to incorporate the wishbone in his new position at Iowa State.

"My plan is to continue to use the offense that has been used here and that is the 'I' formation," said Duncan, who has worked with running backs, receivers and the offensive line in his six seasons at Oklahoma. "It's suited to the personnel here. They were recruited to play the 'I' formation.

PBWGA elects officials

The Permian Basin Women's Golf Association held its annual business meeting at the Ranchland Hill Country Club this week and named four new officers for the 1979 year.

Ranchland Hill's Ova Smith was named as the new president of the association while Midland Country Club's Edie Stahl was chosen as the new secretary. Odessa Country Club's Lin Wilkins is the vice-president while Ginny Elmore of Sunset Country Club is the treasurer. Andrews Country Club's Dessie North is the reporter.

A Play Day golf tournament was held after the meeting with the following results.

Championship Flight: Low Gross: Crystal Fouche, Odessa Country Club, 90. Low Net: Dessie North, Andrews Country Club, 76. utts: Bernice Flint, Andrews Country Club and Clara Christy, Ranchland Hill Country Club, both with 31.

First Flight: Low Gross: Lisy Smith, Ranchland Hill Country Club, 101. Low Net: Martha McCuen, Ranchland Hill Country Club, 77. Putts: Joanne Adkins, Ranchland Hill Country Club, 32.

Second Flight: Low Gross: Maxine LaBouff, Ranchland Hill Country Club, 99. Low Net: Verna Sigma, Sunset Country Club, 74. Putts: Orene Mitchell, Ranchland Hill Country Club, 31.

(Next Permian Basin Women's Golf Association Play Day will be Feb. 20 at the Odessa Country Club.)

Red Sox sign pitcher Kane

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Red Sox announced Wednesday the signing of right-handed pitcher Kevin Kane, the American League team's top choice in the recent free agent draft of amateur players.

Kane, 19, of Morro Bay, Calif., will report in March to the Red Sox minor league camp at Winter Haven, Fla.

Chaparrals face Wranglers tonight

ODESSA--Midland College, still smarting from a narrow 80-79 loss to Frank Phillips in Borger Monday night, renews its rivalry with the Odessa College Wranglers here tonight.

Midland takes a season record of 12-6 into the contest and a WJCC mark of 4-1 compared to OC's 11-5 reading and 2-2 league record, but the Wranglers hold an impressive 99-78 win over MC earlier in the year in the finals of the Odessa Tournament in November.

Tonight's game starts the first of two road trips, one long and one short with the Chaps playing 14 consecutive conference games in seven weeks.

Prior to the Christmas holidays, the Chaps won four straight conference tilts and six games in a row before losing three of their first four games after the break, including a one point loss to Frank Phillips in Borger Monday in a conference game.

Stone lost a couple of sophomore players at mid-term to grades. Letterman Ricky Murdock and Krieg Curry were lost, but Stone got a dandy replacement in freshman Carl Runnels, a 6-foot-5 inch shooter from Houston Wheatley who plays the guard slot.

Midland has been getting good scoring from Cullen Mayfield, Kenneth Young, Henry White and Luis Alvarado while OC's attack is built around former Midland Lee standout, Billy Ray Ennis who is averaging more than 18 points per game. John Savoie of Houston is next with a 14-point average while James Ivy of San Antonio is averaing better than 10 per outing. Odessa Permian's Tom McLemore follows with a 13.6 average. The fifth starter will be chosen from either Kelly Kitchens or Al Taylor.

Midland College will finally come back home to the confines of the Chaparral Center Monday when they host league leading Western Texas College of Snyder. It will be a big game for the Chaps and a big crowd is expected to attend due to a special promotion, which will be announced later.

"Ooooh, that was tough," he said with a wince.

"We should have had the two No. 1 teams out of Pennsylvania. I really feel that way."

And the 230-pound fullback doesn't want it to be a year of double disappointment in the Harris family, which contributed a pair of defensive backs, brothers Pete and Giuseppi, to the current Penn State team.

"You win or you lose — and I don't like to be a loser."

Harris has been the top rusher in 11 of 13 postseason games he's played. He holds National Football League postseason records with 1,206 rushing yards, 13 touchdowns and five 100-yard games, including a Super Bowl record of 158 against Minnesota in Super Bowl IX.

'We have a chance to be the first team to win three Super Bowls, and I think it should be the Pittsburgh Steelers to do that.

"We never have had the glamor a lot of teams have," he added. "Yet because of the ball we play and the way the guys are, we have a chance to say we dominated the '70s."

Harris and the Steelers have said more than once here that they don't think of themselves as a "glamor" team.

They suggest Dallas is such a team. And, without exactly saying it, you get the impression it's something that has the Steelers stirred up.

"Going to Penn State and being in Pittsburgh, there is something special about football there," said Harris.

'At Penn State, our whole thing during practice and games was hit, hit and be very physical, nothing glamorous. With Pittsburgh it's the same."

A writer from Texas asked Harris to elaborate. Does the Pittsburgh team reflect something about the city of Pittsburgh?

The Steelers will take a jet home. Whether it's a long flight will be decided Sunday.

"It's all or nothing," said Harris. "And I would like to come away with something."

Spending large legacy harder than anticipated

CHICAGO (AP) — They have more than $30 million a year to spend on good works, and decades of business experience to help guide them.

But directors trying to decide how to spend a billionaire's legacy have discovered they still don't know all they should before distributing the wealth of John D. MacArthur.

"It's embarrassing not to have all sorts of pat answers, but it is not easy to learn to do a good job with this money. The pressure of trying to do a good job is very real," said William T. Kirby, MacArthur's lawyer and among those trying to determine a course for the MacArthur Foundation.

One aim has been decided — to finance budding geniuses — mavericks who will be supported for six years to do whatever they want.

The foundation's first grant, one of $50,000, went to the California League of Cities to support a series of conferences on "Cities of Tomorrow," an effort to bring more people into the workings of local government.

The foundation, which overnight became the fourth-largest in the nation, was directed in the will to acquire MacArthur's largest single asset, Bankers Life and Casualty Co. of Chicago.

After 11 months of preparation, the foundation took control of the company Dec. 1. Though a final audit isn't complete, it is presumed the value of the company will be about $750 million.

Because federal law requires foundations to donate 5 percent of their assets each year, MacArthur directors will have an estimated $30 million to $40 million to distribute annually.

MacArthur left no specific directions about how the money should be spent. The directors — including the widow, Kirby, Bankers Life President Robert Ewing, a son, John Roderick MacArthur, Bankers vice chairman Paul Doolen and Paul Harvey, a nationally syndicated broadcast commentator — have met frequently in an effort to decide what to do.

The son, an independently wealthy businessman, came up with the plan to finance mavericks in the hope of bringing along the next generation of great thinkers. Under the plan, a panel will select brilliant young people to receive grants for up to six years to continue their studies, with no requirement to produce anything.

'New strategy' necessary for survival of 'web of life'

By MIKE RICHMOND
Copley News Service

Could it be that the fate of humanity is bound to that of the gray whale, the Furbish lousewort or some other endangered species?

One who believes that to be the case is noted Stanford University biologist Dr. Paul Ehrlich, who stressed the need for a new "strategy of conservation" in an interview.

He said it is time to start promoting the well-being and, in the long run, the survival of mankind as an issue in the conservation debate.

In suggesting a new approach to conservation, Ehrlich noted that arguments about the aesthetic value of nonhuman life forms or appeals for compassion for such forms "mostly fall on deaf ears."

"The public must come to understand that every time a population or species of other organism goes extinct, the tenure of homo sapiens on this planet becomes a little less secure. When the bell tolls for the snail darter, it may also be tolling for us," Ehrlich said.

"Humanity's fate is inextricably bound up with the fate of the great whales, the gorillas, the Furbish lousewort and other endangered species," he said.

When it comes to endangered plant and animal species, "you've got to save everything you possibly can because you don't know what's essential," Ehrlich said.

And preserving the various organisms is much more than a simple matter of compassion or of keeping them around for their aesthetic interest, he noted.

It is a matter also of maintaining the crucial life support functions of ecological systems, he said.

These systems, such as the vast tropical forests of the world and other natural areas, provide "a library of genetic information" from which future crops, domestic animals, antibiotics, spices, medicines and tools for medical research can be drawn, Ehrlich said.

"It is, more importantly, the plowing under, the paving over, strip-mining, submerging under tailings, mowing, herbiciding, pesticiding and so forth of a myriad unsung populations of unspectacular organisms that is the major threat.

"Killing off any given population or species will not necessarily produce a disaster any more than removing a single rivet will cause an airplane to fall out of the sky," he said.

'A turkey dinner that tastes just like oatmeal' part of astronauts' past

BY STEVE GRAY
Copley News Service

While scientists can put a man on the moon, they haven't been able to furnish astronauts with an appealing meal in space.

Until now.

No longer will space crews face bland, humdrum food served in plastic tubes so familiar to Mercury and Gemini astronauts.

Never again will they have to consume that pasty mixture that was supposed to be a turkey dinner but tasted remarkably like oatmeal.

Although crews aboard the three Skylab missions fared better than their predecessors, the shuttle crew will have the largest variety of 74 different foods and 20 beverages.

The astronauts will have a different menu for six consecutive days.

Caloric content also has been increased to 3,000 a day, because tests have shown that working astronauts need the same number of calories as ground-based people.

A real oven will be in operation for the first time. A crew member will be able to assemble a meal for four in about five minutes, heat it for about an hour, and serve.

The shuttle galley also will provide more comfortable dining surroundings, with the oven, a unit for washing up, hot and cold running water and a dining table.

Thermostabilized — thermal-heat processed foods canned or packaged in foil pouches such as cheese spread, tuna, or beef with barbeque sauce.

Intermediate moisture — foods preserved by controlling the available moisture, such as dried apricots, peaches and breakfast bars.

Freeze-dried — foods with all water removed (to be rehydrated or eaten as is, such as strawberries, shrimp and bananas).

This Is Midland:

A successful turn-of-the-century Midlander might have walked into such a kitchen for his breakfast after having drawn some water from the well and having stoked up the wood-burning stove. The 79-year-old Brown-Dorsey Medallion home at 213 N. Weatherford St., open 2-5 p.m. Sundays, offers modern Midlanders a glimpse at the recent past. The house, reputed to be the oldest in Midland, was restored by the Midland County Historical Society and was dedicated in 1976. (Staff Photo by Bruce Partain)

Big crops in nation set record

WASHINGTON (AP) — Huge crops of corn and soybean pushed farmers' total crop production to a record level last year despite efforts of the Carter administration to curb grain production.

The 1978 corn harvest produced a record of 7.08 billion bushels, up 10 percent from 1977, the Agriculture Department said Tuesday.

It also was 191 million bushels more than the previous department forecast of 6.89 billion bushels last November when the harvest was still in progress.

Last year's was the fourth record corn crop in a row, followed by 6.43 billion bushels in 1977, 6.27 billion in 1976 and 5.83 billion in 1975.

The huge harvests mean there is more than enough grain to meet all domestic and export demands in the coming year by a large margin. Corn is the main livestock feed grain used to produce meat, poultry and milk for American consumers.

Soybean production, also important as a source of high-protein meal for feed and vegetable oil, was estimated at a record of 1.81 billion bushels, up 5 percent from the previous record of 1.76 billion bushels last year. The November forecast was about 1.81 billion bushels.

Food prices this year are expected to average 6 percent to 10 percent more than in 1978, when they gained 10 percent, according to department economists.

The report did not include new estimates for 1978 production of wheat, cotton and rice, which were issued earlier.

Wheat production last year, reduced by farmers planting fewer acres, was about 1.8 billion bushels, down 12 percent from 2.01 billion in 1977, the department said previously.

Cotton output, reduced by poor yields and fewer acres, dropped 25 percent to 10.8 million bales from 14.4 million in 1977.

Rice production, however, soared 39 percent to a record of 137.8 million hundredweight from 99.2 million in 1977.

The department's "all crops" production index for total output last year was a record 131 percent of a 1967 base used as a standard, compared to the previous high of 130 percent in 1977. Last November the 1978 index was forecast at 128 percent.

Corn inventories, already at a six-year high when the new marketing year began Oct. 1, are expected to swell further because of the huge new harvest last fall. By next Oct. 1, the corn carryover could be at a 15-year high of around 1.5 billion bushels or more.

Despite the big supply of corn and other grain, prices at the farm have risen the last year, partly because of heavy exports to other countries.

Also, farmers have stored about 1.3 billion bushels of grain — mostly wheat and corn — under a government program to keep it off the market for up to three years to help boost prices.

In December, for example, corn at the farm nationally averaged $2.07 a bushel against $1.96 a year earlier, and wheat was $2.99 a bushel, compared to $2.47 a year earlier.

Upton 4-H show slated Jan. 27

RANKIN — Lambs, rabbits, dogs, cats, goats, birds and possibly a few pet rocks will be entered in the annual Upton County 4-H Livestock Show Jan. 27 in the Rankin School BusBarn.

Weighing in of lambs will be at 12:30 p.m., and the judging by Ollie Werst of Sterling City will begin at 3 p.m.

The pet show, also to be judged by Werst, will begin at 10 a.m. Pam Holt is superintendent of the pet show, which is for youngsters ages 8 to 19 as of first of this year.

A barbecue supper, followed by the auction, will be at 6 p.m. Tickets to the barbecue are $2.50 each for adults and $1.75 each for children.

Among those helping set up the annual show and the committees they serve on are:

—Barbecue committee: Sully Sullivan, chairman, and members Rusty Ratliff and Tommy Owens.

—Sales committee: E.L. Martin, chairman for McCamey sales, and Tommy Workman, chairman of Rankin sales.

JIMMY'S WHITE HOUSE

Soviet Embassy misses conference about china

By FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House took a keen interest this week in a day-long conference at the State Department on dealings with the People's Republic of China — and so did the Soviet Embassy.

For its part, the White House helped set up Monday's session as part of a broad effort to lobby for support of President Carter's China policy among businessmen and civic leaders.

And the Soviet Embassy, for its part, sought the admission of one of its diplomats to the sessions. But the embassy was told that Moscow would have to be content with sending a reporter from Tass, the official Soviet news agency.

The meetings were open to the press, but not to third country diplomats.

WHEN CARTER appeared Sunday at the Ebenezer Baptist Church in Atlanta to help observe the 50th birthday of the late Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., his remarks to the congregation were punctuated by occasional "amens" from "Daddy King," father of the slain black leader. Said Carter:

"I have been president for two years now. ... I was reading a two-year analysis of my own personal character this morning in the newspaper. It reminded me somewhat of Daddy King.

"First of all, the commentator said I was getting older. He said I was getting grayer. He said I was getting wiser. And he said I was getting leaner."

"At least I heard three amens," joked the president.

Back in Washington, Rosalynn declined to comment on the possibility of a reconciliation. Caron Carter is teaching school in DeKalb County, Ga., while her husband lives at the White House.

AFTER RETURNING from trips, Mrs. Carter often makes a point of looking at negative-size contact prints taken by White House staff photographers along her route. Then she decides which pictures should be enlarged and printed on glossy paper.

Just in case she decided to look at photos taken during the Guadeloupe summit, the White House photo staff expurgated in advance the contact prints from the Caribbean journey.

The reason: government photographers had been unable to resist the temptation to snap pictures of topless maidens on the beaches near the Carters' seaside abode.

Her husband did not commit himself on the subject, perhaps because he never was asked.

A SOUVENIR spotted in a Guadeloupe shop: a transistor radio shaped like a peanut and featuring a Carter-like plastic head. Sales of this item were not brisk — in fact, they were nonexistent — among the American contingent at the summit.

THE PRESIDENT may well wonder about the second-term endorsement he got this week from Chancellor Helmujt Schmidt of West Germany, a fellow summiteer.

Opening lead — ◇ Q

South led several rounds of trumps and then tried three rounds of clubs, hoping for a 3-3 break. Since there was no such luck South lost a club and a heart. Down one.

South was counting on an unlikely club break (the odds were almost 2 to 1 against it) or a foolish discard. Don't sell foolishness short, but in this kind of hand the defenders should have an easy time finding the right discards.

TWO FINESSES

South could afford to lead all of his trumps but should then lead the ten of hearts for a finesse. If the first heart finesse loses, South can win any return, cash the top diamond and try a second finesse. He loses only if East has both the king and queen of hearts. The odds are 3 to 1 against losing both finesses.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with two hearts (forcing to game), and the next player passes. You hold: S5; HK7632; DQJ1093; C94. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two notrump, the negative response. You plan to raise hearts vigorously later, but your first duty is to deny high-card strength.

Full schedule of short courses get under way next week at MC

A full slate of short courses is scheduled at Midland College beginning next week. The courses, part of the MC program of community services, cover such varied subjects as woodworking, exploration drafting, the fundamentals of bookkeeping and driver education.

"We believe we have something for just about everyone," noted James Bramlett, program director. "Most of the classes will be in progress five to 10 weeks, with a few extending beyond that."

Course fees are nominal, and with one exception, all classes will be held during evening hours, Bramlett said.

DON HARVEY'S ever-popular Real Estate Fundamentals I meets Monday, Tuesday and Thursday from 7 to 10 p.m. in room 100 of the Occupational-Technical Building.

Harvey covers professional standards, appraisal, marketing, finance, residential construction, real estate law, taxation, zoning and office administration. This is a five-week course and the fee is $45.

Driver Education, taught by Tony Madrid, includes both classroom and behind-the-wheel instruction. Students must be 15 years old on or before the first class meeting Monday. Class meets from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday for six weeks in room 114 of the MC Gym. Course fee is $60, and the class is limited to 30 students.

BOOKKEEPING Fundamentals I, taught by Nancy Holland, covers "double-entry" bookkeeping cycles as well as methods of analyzing business transactions, recording, summarizing effects and preparing simplified reports. Class is limited to 30 students meeting Monday from 7 to 10 p.m. for eight weeks in room 106 of the Occ-Tech Building. Course fee is $24, and books may be purchased at the MC Bookstore.

Dan McAngus presents an Introduction to the Stock Market on Tuesday from 7 to 9 p.m. for six weeks. This is where students learn the meaning of investments, the various types of stocks, the basic methods of investing and some of the risks involved. McAngus presents and explains the subject in a manner understandable to the novice.

AN EIGHT-WEEK course in Real Estate Appraisal, directed by Cliff Hogie, deals with real estate economics, residential and commercial valuation, neighborhood analysis and capitalization rates on investments. Class is limited to 25 students meeting Tuesday and Thursday from 7 to 10 p.m. in room 100 of the Occ-Tech Building. Course fee is $45.

Exploration Drafting, taught by C.W. Anderson, is a 13-week course designed to prepare the student for employment or advancement in the drafting field. Students are introduced to basic skills and equipment, and those with prior knowledge of the subject are brought up-to-date on new techniques.

Class meets Wednesday from 7 to 10 p.m. in room 106 of the Occ-Tech Building. Course fee is $45.

Dr. Thomas Luce holds his 10-week course in Computer-Basic Programming Language to introduce the student to new features of the "BASIC" language used in programs directed toward instructional needs. Students write, enter and de-bug one CAI program that can be used in individual subject areas.

Class meets Wednesday from 7 to 10 p.m. in room 100 of the Occ-Tech Building, and is limited to 20 students. Course fee is $30.

FOR THOSE INTERESTED in learning more about the care of house plants, Vannah Kleinbeck conducts a four-week course which includes instruction on how to select, light, feed, water, pot and multiply house plants. Mrs. Kleinbeck also discusses terrariums and hanging baskets.

Class meets Wednesday from 7 to 9 p.m. in room 104 of the Occ-Tech Building. The House Plant course fee is $8.

Rescheduled again because of its popularity is Rusty Freeman's course in Interior Decoration I. This six-week course covers the basics of color design, use of texture, furniture arrangements for apartments, and ideas for the living room and bedroom. Students carry out individual projects.

Class meets Thursday from 7 to 9 p.m. in room 100 of the Occ-Tech Building and is limited to 25 students. Course fee is $12.

For those who wish to learn the art of macrame, Judy Osborn holds a six-week course meeting Thursday from 7 to 9 p.m. in room 104 of the Occ-Tech Building.

MACRAME I is limited to 20 students. Call college for a list of supplies prior to first meeting. Course fee is $12.

Welding I, a basic course in the fundamentals of arc and gas welding, meets Friday from 7 to 10 p.m. in the Occ-Tech Shop.

Travis Womack, course instructor, demonstrates the correct use and setting of torches, regulators and welding machine. The techniques learned can be applied to hobby welding as well as agricultural needs.

This is a 14-week course and class is limited to 15 students. The fee is $52.

A Saturday morning course in Automotive Tune-Up begins Jan. 27 and continues for six weeks, meeting from 9 a.m. to noon in the Occ-Tech Shop.

Jerry Shankle familiarizes students with general testing equipment. Students learn to perform minor and major engine tune-ups. Class is limited to 15 students and the course fee is $22.

PRE-REGISTRATION for each of these classes is in progress now from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in room 140 of the Occupational-Technical Building. The office will remain open during the lunch hour. Interested persons may obtain more information by calling 684-7851, extension 147 or 216.

Gas leaks blamed in four explosions across nation

By The Associated Press

Gas leaks were suspected in explosions in four states that brought death, destruction, fire and injuries and the birth of a baby.

A fifth explosion and fire Tuesday did about $1 million damage at a South Carolina chemical plant.

There was one death — a 72-year-old woman whose granddaughter was delivered of a healthy son in a Caesarean section after an explosion and fire wrecked their home.

Killed in the Royal Oak, Mich. explosion was Mamie Erickson. Three other family members survived, including Cheryl Roth, 22. She was reported in good condition after the birth of her son.

Fire Chief Ronald Nancarow said the explosion apparently was caused by a gas leak in the basement of the home.

In London, Ky., an explosion destroyed five buildings and caused a fire that wrecked another five structures in the downtown area. Windows were shattered in at least 16 other buildings.

The street was closed to traffic today. "It'll take a good day to get the debris out of the street," said Rick Howard of the city police department.

Wrecked were a furniture store and storeroom, a women's clothing store and a large department store. Heavy damage was reported to structures housing a restaurant, two pool rooms and several offices.

A buildup of natural gas was believed to have been the source of the explosion, a city police dispatcher said. "It was just a gas explosion, but we don't know what caused it," he said.

Nine workers were reported injured, three of them seriously, by an explosion in a Chicago-area storm sewer project in Skokie, Ill.

An employee at a construction company near the tunnel project reported there had been a small propane gas explosion. Further details were not immediately available.

In Harrison, Ark., authorities speculated a gas leak may have caused an explosion that leveled the Allied Telephone Co. building. Several nearby businesses also suffered extensive damage.

The blast cut off service to about 5,800 telephone customers, and damage was estimated in the millions of dollars. Two law enforcement officers suffered minor injuries. The explosion occurred about an hour before telephone employees were to report for work.

In Beaufort, S.C., an explosion at Vega Chemical Corp. started a fire that spread a pungent ammonia-like odor that could be detected a quarter-mile away.

The plant makes agricultural chemicals, water treatment compounds and sassafras oil. The explosion occurred after pressure built up in a chemical-processing tank, officials said.

Four Marines who helped fight the fire were treated at a hospital for smoke inhalation. Three others also suffered minor burns.

99 more oil, gas tests announced in Basin area

Ninety-nine more oil and gas projects have been staked in West Texas and Southeast New Mexico. Two of the new tests are wildcats, and the other 79 are in proven field areas.

Forty-two of the new prorjcts were scheduled in District 8 of the Railroad Commission of Texas. The Midland headquarters of the district reported five wildcat tests and 37 field operations.

The District 8 wildcats were staked in Andrews, Crane, Howard and Loving counties, with Crane getting two.

Ector County led the district with seven new locations, all in field areas. Six field test were spotted in Winkler.

District 7-C, with headquarters in San Angelo, reported 31 new tests, five of them wildcats. Crockett gained two of the wildcats and Irion, Schleicher and Tom Green each gained one.

Southeast New Mexico accounted for 15 of the new operations, five in wildcat country. Lea County gained three of the wildcats and the other two were staked in Chaves and Eddy counties.

MHS YOUTH CENTER CHATTER

Ball now bouncing right for 'Daring Dribblers'

This week the balls are bouncing against our town rivals as all MH teams end the first half of district against the Rebs. The girls start the feud in the Lee gym with Sophmores at 4, Juniors at 6, and Varsity at 8. It all happens tongiht.

The boys continue the victorious battle against the Wimpy Webels at Chaparral Center Friday at MC. Both MH teams are leading the race for the first half district crown, so be sure to come back the Pack both nights! Super Dogs will make the cross town rivals bit the dust!!!

Congratulations to Lori Blackwell, who was chosen queen for 1979 Catoico Court. The Student Council is already making plans for the big event to be held Feb. 17. Watch for further announcements concerning this important day at MH.

During week nights when you get the blahs ... remember; the Youth Center is open. Drinks are served; jukebox, pingpong andd pool are waiting to be played. The YC is also an excellent place to meet friends and do your studying. So, instead of driving around and wasting gas, conserve and come to the YC.

Next Tuesday at 8 a.m. there will be a pep rally to pep up our basketball teams for the second half of district play. Come and fire up our teams!

There will be an aftergame dance Jan. 26 after our Daring Dribblers dunk and Steers from Big Spring. Keep that Friday night open and come boogie to the sounds of the Bulldog Disco at the YC.

C,J and V.

Ape-like creature identified as oldest ancestor of man

CLEVELAND (AP) — An ape-like creature that strode the savannahs of Africa 4 million years ago has been identified as the oldest known direct ancestor of man, anthropologists said today.

The creature, dubbed the Afar ape man, walked upright with a human-like body but had the face and brain of an ape.

The discovery shows that humans and apes may be more closely related than was previously imagined, said Drs. Donald C. Johanson of the Cleveland Museum of Natural History and T.D. White of the University of California at Berkeley.

Afar ape man also proves that human ancestors were walking on two feet millions of years before they made stone tools, Johanson said.

Some anthropologists thought it was the evolutionary pressure to free their hands for the use of tools that pushed men up from the stooped ape posture.

Robert Radcliffe of the National Geographic Society, which cosponsored the research, said Wednesday that Johanson's conclusions were expected to cause considerable controversy in the scientific community.

He said that noted paleoanthropologist Mary Leakey already has disputed Johanson's contention that the Afra ape man's bones are from a truly new species, arguing that they should be categorized as a form of an already recognized species.

Johanson and White will report their findings in the journal Science next week.

The creature's scientific name is Australopithecus afarensis. He was identified and named by Johanson and White after detailed studies of fossil skulls, jaws and other bones found in Tanzania and the Afar region of Ethiopia during the last seven years.

The Afar ape man supplants a creature known as Australopithecus africanus as the earliest known member of the family hominids, or ancestors of man, they said.

Johanson, co-director of the expedition that uncovered fossils from the Afar region, said it now appears that africanus was actually a descendant of the afarensis.

Instead of evolving into protohumans, as was previously thought, afracanus blundered into an evolutionary dead end that ended in extinction 1 million years ago, he said.

The discovery of the Afar ape man also suggests that the hominids diverged from the pongids, the ape family that evolved into the modern gorilla and chimpanzee, much later than 15 million or 20 million years ago, the commonly accepted figure.

"When you have something as primitive as the jaws and teeth in this new hominid species 3 million years ago, it's not unreasonable to think hominids split from apes as recently as 8 million years ago," Johanson said in an interview Wednesday.

Discovery well reports potential

Markay Oil & Gas Co. of Midland No. 1 Boyce Lynn has been completed as a Mississippian oil discovery in Nolan County, five miles south of Sweetwater.

Operator reported a daily pumping potential o 44 barrels of 42-gravity oil and 27 barrels of water, through perforations from 6,477 to 6,499 feet after 5,000 gallons of acid.

COKE WELLS

Enrich Oil Corp. of Abilene has completed a pair of wells in the Bloodworth, North (5650 Canyon) pool of Coke County, three miles southeast of Silver.

The No. 1 O. B. Jacobs, 13/4 mile southwest of other dproduction, was completed for a 24-hour flowing potential of 120 barrels of 48-gravity oil, no water, through a 24/64-inch choke and perforations from 5,754 to 5,775 feet. The gas-oil ratio is 13,992-1.

It completed for a daily flowing potential of 165 barrels of oil, gravity not reported, and no water, through an 18/64-inch choke and perforations from 5,624 to 5,643 feet after 1,500 gallons of mud acid and 51,366 gallons of fracture fluid.

Both the new wells were drilled as wildcats.

UPTON RE-ENTRY

Gulf Oil Corp. announced plans to re-enter its No. 1 J. B. Athey and others, former Bend oil producer in the King Mountain, NOrth field of Upton County, and plug back to 9,100 feet for recompletion in the Cisco.

The project, bottomed at 10,050 feet, is 13 miles northeast of McCamey and 467 feet from north and west lines of seciton 66, block Y, TCRR survey.

Canyon stratigraphic test reports gas shows

By J.P. SMITH
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A test well drilled in the Baltimore Canyon off the Atlantic coast has found "significant" indications of natural gas and possibly oil, government geologists said Wednesday.

The announcement by the U.S. Geological Survey follows a series of disappointing results from drilling in nearby areas of the canyon. It seems likely to have a major impact on the major oil companies' bidding for 650,000 acres adjacent to the new find that the Interior Department is expected to offer for lease next month.

"It's definitely encouraging news," said Robert Rioux, a resource evaluation specialist with the USGS.

Cautioning that it is still to early to determine whether the find could be exploited commercially, Rioux said that the "shows" of natural gas and possible oil from the test well has forced the Geological Survey to reappraise their estimates about how much oil and gas may be in the areas that will be leased next month.

More important, for the major oil companies now exploring for oil and gas in the Baltimore Canyon, the unexpected find revives earlier hopes that there would be major finds in the area, which is about 70 miles east of Atlantic City, N.J.

"It could change the game," said one major oil company executive who asked not to be identified.

So far seven major oil companies have spent more than $97.1 million drilling wells in leased areas in the Baltimore Canyon. But there has been only one major find. Last July Texaco announced that it has found "significant reserves of natural gas" and is now testing at another well near its first find.

Last week Gulf Oil Corp. joined Mobil, Exxon, and Shell Oil Co., all of whom have capped exploratory wells drilled in the cluster of leased tracts in the canyon.

What was surprising about the discovery announced Wednesday by Geological Survey head William Menard was that it was made from a stratographic test well, drilled near but not on prospective leasing areas by private oil companies to obtain geological information.

The test well, called Baltimore Canyon B-3, was drilled by Standard Oil of California for 10 other companies that were sharing the cost of a $12.6 millon test well. Last November a similar unexpected find in a so-called "off structre" test well was made near the Tanner Banks off Southern California.

Under federal law, the Interior Department's Geological Survey must make a public announcement if oil or gas is found while drilling geological test wells.

Last Friday Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus decided to go forward with the February leases in OCS Sale 49, as the potential leasing areas is called, but has not made a public announcement yet.

Recent USGS estimates of the potential oil and gas that could be discovered in the new areas say there may be 152 million barrels of oil, and 2.5 trillion cubic feet of natural gas, which is equal to about 17 days of total U.S. oil imports and about 12 percent of U.S. annual gas consumption.

Texas leads nation in oil, gas royalties

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong said Wednesday a survey of states which receive money from leasing state lands shows Texas led the nation in 1978 with approximately $370 million in oil and gas royalties, bonuses and rentals.

Armstrong prepared the survey for a meeting of the Western States Land Commissioners in Reno, Nev., on Thursday.

Armstrong, chairman of the commissioners' committee on fair return for use of public lands, said Texas received nearly $261 million in oil and gas royalties from production on state-owned land last year.

Also, he reported, Texas received $6,203,000 in other mineral royalties; $93,483,000 in bonuses paid by oil and gas companies to obtain leases on state lands; and $8,522,000 for oil and gas rentals of state lands.

Other states with major revenues from oil and gas production on state lands are Louisiana, $201 million; Alaska, $180 million; and California, $97 million.

"Our royalty income in Texas has more than quadrupled in the last five years, while royalty income in California and Louisiana is at the about the same figure as 1973," Armstrong said in a statement.

"This is a reflection not only of the increased oil and natural gas exploration in Texas and increasing gas prices, but also of our decision to raise our state royalty from 16-23 percent to 20 percent to make certain our state education system benefitted fully from the increased industry profits," he said.

Armstrong added that 1978 oil and gas revenues boosted the Permanent School Fund to $1.9 billion, "and we expect to hit the $2 billion mark next month. Income from the fund, which last fiscal year totaled $109 million, accounts for about 4 percent of the state's cost of the public school system."

Workers to vote today

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — Texaco refinery workers will begin voting at 6 p.m. today on a tentative two-year agreement reached Wednesday between Texaco, Inc., and the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers.

Workers will vote tonight and again at 9 a.m. Friday on whether to ratify the proposal, which follows a national pattern set by Gulf Oil in its pact approved Jan. 11 by OCAW negotiators.

Texaco offered a wage increase of 73 cents an hour across the board for the first year of the contract and a guaranteed 5 percent raise for 1980.

Texaco spokesman Larry Bingaman announced the tentative agreement at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Texaco refinery in Port Arthur. The union work force at Texaco's Port Arthur facility accounts for about half of the nation's OCAW-affiliated Texaco work force.

Company contributions to major medical benefit plans will be increased by up to $12 per month per worker for 1979 for the family, and by up to $4.50 per month per worker for individual coverage.

The accord also features a contract reopener clause, allowing for negotiations late this year on 1980 wages, major medical benefits and vacation schedules.

The union retained the right to strike on reopener issues, if necessary, on Jan. 8, 1980.

Policy money okayed

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A $581,682 appropriation for the Texas Railroad Commission to implement new federal gas policies has been approved by the Senate Committee on Natural Resources.

"I've been informed time is of the essence," committee chairman A.R. Schwartz said Wednesday. "It has reached a critical stage."

Schwartz, D-Galveston, and Sen. Grant Jones of Abilene, chairman of the finance committee, sponsored the proposal.

The money is for the fiscal period ending Aug. 31. The commission says it needs the financing to handle extra work required of the oil and gas regulatory agency by the Natural Gas Policy Act.

Explorer sites staked

Mobil Oil Corp. has rescheduled its No. 1 B. F. Foster and others, originally scheduled as a 7,500-foot Wolfcamp project in the Brown-Bassett multipay area of Terrell County, to 13,500 feet as a wildcat.

It is one and five-eighths miles northeast of Ellenburger and Strawn gas production and 18 miles south of Sheffield.

FIELD STEPOUT

Mobil also announced location for a 14,650-foot project 3/4 mile north of Ellenburger production in the Brown-Bassett field of Terrell County, 30 miles northeast of Dryden.

The project will be drilled as No. 4 Goode Estate

EDDY EXPLORER

Yates Petroleum Corp. of Artesia, N. M., spotted location for a 10,000-foot Morrow wildcat in Eddy County, nine miles northwest of White City.

Scheduled as No. 4 Lechuguilla Canyon Unit, it is 560 feet from south and 1980 feet from east lines of section 8-24s-24e and 100 feet south of an abandoned location.

The prospector is one mile southwest of 9,830-foot Morrow gas production in the Crooked Creek field. Elevation at drillsite is 4,214 feet.

CHAVES TEST

Depco, Inc., of Odessa announced drillsite for a one-mile south outpost to the Buffalo Valley (Pennsylvanian) field of Chaves County, N. M., 12 miles southeast of Hagerman.

It is No. 1 Brotar Communitized, 990 feet from north and west lines of section 20-15s-28e. It is slated for a 9,250-foot bottom.

LEA EXTENDER

Coquina Oil Corp. of Midland No. 1 Alexander has been completed one and one-quarter miles southwest of Atoka gas production in the Antelope Ridge field of Lea County.

From the Atoka, it finaled for a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 8,993,000 cubic feet of gas per day, through perforations from 13,022 to 13,054 feet opposite the Atoka zone.

Location is in section 10-24s-34e and 27 miles southeast of Halfway.

CHAVES FIELD TRY

Sundance Oil Co. of Denver, Colo., No. 4-B Oakason-Federal will be dug as a 4,000-foot project in the Tom Tom (San Andres) field of Chaves County, 12 miles souteast of Boaz.

The location is 660 feet from north and west lines of sectidon 33-7s-31e.

UNDESIGNATED AREA

DA&S Well Service of Hobbs, N. M., No. 2-A Federal will be drilled as a southest offset to production in an undesignated Yates oil area in Lea County.

The test, slated for a 3,600-foot bottom, is 1,980 feet from north and west lines of section 9-26s-36e and four miles south of Jal.

RUNNELS WILDCAT

Cerco Petroleum, Inc., of Abilene No. 1 Fowler will be drilled as a 4,000-foot wildcatin Runnles County, 3.5 miles southeast of Hatchell.

It is 467 feet from north and 2,350 feet from east lines of section 46, George W. Dyer survey No. 482 and 5/8 miles south of the Beddo, East oil pool and 1/4 mile southeast of Cerco No. 1 B. Howell, an active re-entry operations.

Committee members criticize Schlesinger

By J. P. SMITH
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger was criticized Wednesday by members of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee for not being prepared to deal with the Iranian oil cutoff.

Ticking off a list of concerns in his opening statement, Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., scored the administration for not having a workable strategic petroleum reserve program, and chided Schlesinger for not providing Congress with a standby rationing plan.

Schlesinger again Wednesday described the Iranian oil shutdown as "serious but not critical," saying that severe measures such as oil allocation or rationing will not be necessary unless the Iranian oil shutdown continues through the summer.

As a result of the Iranian oil shutdown, Schlesinger told the committee, the United States has been forced to go without about 500,000 barrels of oil a day, or about 1.5 perent of total energy consumption.

So far, this has been made up by drawing on inventories and could, Schlesinger said, be made up by voluntary conservation measures, if necessary.

Nevertheless, Jackson, chairman of the Senate Energy Committee, said in his opening statement that the administration has lagged in its efforts to increase energy supplies, has "paid only lip service" to developing nuclear power, has beem "less than decisive" about synthetic fuels programs, and has done a poor job of eliminating the West Coast oil glut caused by new oil supplies from Alaska.

Jackson was joined by Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., and Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., who pressed Schlesinger to send a standby gasoline rationing plan to Congress required by a 1975 law and now two years overdue.

ENERGY
OIL & GAS

"If we had a rationing plan today, we would be ready," Bumpers said.

Schlesinger told the committee that the Ford administration had sent a plan to Congress during its last weeks in office, but that the Ford plan had been withdrawn by President Carter. Since then, the Energy Department has prepared a gasoline-rationing plan, and is expected to send it to Congress soon.

During the hearings Wednesday, however, Schlesinger reiterated his position that gasoline rationing would only be "a last resort" in the event that the Iranian situation grew more severe.

Sen. Peter Domenici, R-N.M., joined Jackson in saying the administration should place a higher priority on readying a strategic petroleum reserve.

"I understand we are putting oil in the ground now that we can't get out," Domenici said last month, the Energy Department told Congress that contractors working on the oil reserves in Louisiana have yet to install pumps so oil stored there could be used in an emergency.

Schlesinger told the committee that the reserve, which now contains about 70 million barrels, is running about a year behind schedule.

Last year the Energy Department told Congress it hoped to have 250 million barrels stored by the end of 1978. In 1977, Carter told Congress he wanted to expand the reserve to 1 billion barrels by the early 1980s.

"We expected to reach 150 million barrels by midsummer, but we won't because of the Iranian situation," Schlesinger said.

—On oil-price decontrol, which the president could announce next June, he said, "I cannot give you a definitive statement." He also said he would tell the committee by April 1 what the administration's intentions were.

—On Alaskan oil swaps, which require congressional approval, he said the administration might consider swaps with Mexico or Canada. Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., said, "I think the climate may be better on this (in Congress) than it was 18 months ago."

—On Mexican oil and gas, he reiterated his position that the United States should burn off "the bubble of overdeliverability," as the domestic gas surplus is called, and only buy Mexican gas if Mexico lowers its prices.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, questioned Schlesinger's position saying that buying Mexican oil would allow the United States to use it in place of oil from the Organization of Oil Exporting Countries.

Shell stakes location

Shell Oil Co., operating from Midland, spotted No. 12-B Forristal as an offset to production in the Tippett (Wolfcamp oil) pool of Crockett County, 10 miles southwest of McCamey.

The project is scheduled for a 6,420-foot bottom and is 660 feet from northwest and 7,600 feet from northeast lines of section 41, block 31, H&TC survey.

REAGAN OILER

Saxon Oil Co. of Midland No. 2-9-9 University has been completed as a 1/2-mile south extender to the Spraberry Trend Area pool in Reagan County, 12 miles northwest of Big Lake.

The well finaled for a 24-hour pumping potential of 51 barrels of 40-gravity oil and 138 barrels of water, through perforations from 6,135 to 7,692 feet.

COKE TESTER

Pontotoc Oil Corp. of Midland No. 1-78-4 Hill & Harrisis a new test in the Bloodworth, South (5,600) field of Coke County, five miles south of Silver.

Drillsite is 6,800 feet from north and 850 feet from east lines of section 4, D. H. and J. W. Snyder and William Von Rosenberg survey.

John W. Millwee of Midland has announced potential test for his No. 2-65 Sealy Smith, re-entry project in the Monahans (Queen sand) field of Ward Coumty, five miles north of Monahans.

It finaled for a daily pumping potentjal of 11.28 barrels of 29-gravity oil and 24 barrels of water, through perforations from 3,178 to 3,192 feet. The pay was acidized with 500 gallons and fractured with 5,000 gallons.

The well originally was drilled by Paul1 DeCleva and abandoned in 1973.

Carter to propose cutting Medicaid, Medicare payments

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will propose cutting out Medicare and Medicaid payments for chiropractors and limiting fees paid to radiologists and other hospital-based doctors to hold down health costs in the fiscal 1980 budget, it has been learned.

At the same time, the administration's $53.4 billion budget for health needs will expand Medicare payments for outpatient psychiatric services. It also includes a hefty boost in HEW's anti-smoking campaign to $22 million, up from $6 million in fiscal 1979.

It also was learned the administration will propose that Medicare be made supplemental for the working elderly who have private health plans. That would save the government $200 million.

The Carter administration also expects to save $23 million with a new program of fines levied against anyone found guilty of fraud or abuse of Medicare and Medicaid.

Total federal spending for health, including Medicare and Medicaid, would rise by more than $4 billion from the fiscal 1979 level of $49.1 billion — an 8.7 percent increase.

But the total could go higher. The administration is counting on saving $1.7 billion by imposing cost controls on hospitals, which failed to win approval in the last Congress, and another $1.7 billion through efforts to eliminate fraud, waste and abuse.

The administration's proposal to stop paying chiropractors' fees for Medicare and Medicaid patients is expected to save $36 million in fiscal 1980 with all but $1 million of that in Medicare funds.

Medicare would triple to $750 its maximum annual payment for outpatient psychiatric services, and Medicare beneficiaries would be required to pay only 20 percent instead of half the psychiatrist's bill.

In addition to its hospital cost containment legislation, the administration is planning new rules to limit fees paid in hospitals to radiologists, pathologists and anesthesiologists. The step is predicted to save $55 million.

The administration will seek $3 billion for research by the National Institutes of Health, up from $2.7 billion, in an overall health research budget of nearly $3.4 billion.

Medicare is expected to spend $32.1 billion in fiscal 1980 paying medical bills for 27.5 million aged or disabled persons. The fiscal 1979 cost is budgeted at $29.1 billion.

Medicaid will pay $12.5 billion for health services for 24 million poor persons in fiscal 1980, up from $11.8 billion.

Speech tourney planned at Lee High School

More than 700 students from as far away as Dallas, Dalhart and Corpus Christi and Clovis, N.M., will be in Midland Friday and Saturday to compete in the first annual Robert E. Lee High School Invitational Speech Tournament.

The tournament has been in continuous operation for some 20 years as the Tall City Invitational Tournament.

Students from 38 schools will compete in the National Forensic League qualifying meet. All NFL and UIL competition categories will be offered in the meet, from standard and cross examination debate through duet acting, humorous, dramatic, prose and poetry interpretation, extemporaneous speaking and oratory.

Group improvisation competition also will be offered for drama students as a non-sweepstakes event. Each of the 30 teams entered will have three minutes to prepare a five-minute impromtu presentation.

The tournament begins at 2 p.m. Friday and continues with a dance at the youth center for contestants Friday night. Saturday's competition will end with an awards presentation at 7 p.m.

Contributions for the trophies to be presented were made by Texas Electric Service Co., the Permian Corp., Midland National Bank and the First National Bank of Midland.

GWTPA sets meeting for organization

ODESSA — The Greater West Texas Psychological Association, currently being formed, has as its goal the growth and development of psychology in this region.

The GWTPA is to have its second organizational meeting at 7 p.m. today in the faculty dining room within the Student Lounge at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin here.

Membership in the new organization is open to professionals, counselors, diagnosticians, students and all others interested in the advancement of psychology, according to Dr. James Olson, associate professor of psychology and acting chairman of the psychology department at UTPB. Additional information is obtainable by telephoning Olson at 367-2167.

Many Customers Think It's Just Sound Business To Buy A Used Car.

Year in and year out, we have certain steady customers who buy nothing but used cars.

To them, it makes good business sense to buy a good used car. In many cases, aside from the mileage...the only difference between a new car and a late model used car is the price!

1977 CHEVELLE MALIBU CLASSIC
