NATION REFUSES TO GET EXCITED OVER ELECTIONS

November 4 Less Than A Month Away And All's Quiet

NO HARD FIGHTING

Candidates Shoot It Out In West With Long Range Guns

By ROBT. T. SMALL
Special Correspondent, Copyright, 1924, by the Consolidated Press Association

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Scarcely more than three weeks away from election day and the country still refuses to get excited. Everyone thought the lethargic campaign would "open up" October 1 and there would be a whirlwind of mad excitement. Senator "Bob" La Follette was to go galloping forth with fiery nostrils, stirring up the land to strike down both the old parties and get a new deal all around. It is true the gentleman from Wisconsin has satisfied a large share of whatever excitement has happened, but even that excitement has spread over the entire country, the layer has been powerfully thin.

Washington headquarters of three grand pratien have been paralyzed thus last week. Baseball knocked politics into a cocked hat. "Who will pitch today?" Became of more importance than the "aluminum scandal," "the slush funds," the "rubber tariff" or "brother Charley's" old skull cap.

Coolidge Saws Wood

President Coolidge has found himself with virtually nothing to do but to keep on sawing wood. No attack has been made upon him directly enough to call for a personal reply or for a more active participation by him in the campaign. Things are moving along precisely to his liking. He did not want to be active. He thought his best role was to continue to be the president and let others do the campaigning. Mr. Coolidge really has given less time to politics than any many who ever ran for a second term in the white house. It was thought the white house would be a great clearing house of political information of political generalship, of craft and strategy and "such like" but the executive mansion has been the quintessence of quiet. The president has been to the ball games and sailing down the river at week-ends on the Mayflower. No one would ever imagine that the quadrennial political cyclones were swirling their stormy ways about, looking for a shining mark to hit.

Says All He Wants To

When Mr. Coolidge remarked some two or three weeks ago that he never heard of a man being defeated for president because he said too little, he evidently said about all he wanted to say of the coming election. The president has kept off the firing line and therefore it has been difficult to train a gun at him. If he had faced forth in the trenches, waving a red flag at the enemy, things might have been different. But he has felt he held an unpregnable position back of the lines and no one yet has bombed Mr. Dupont.

The big political guns are booming out over the country. Much of the campaigning is being done in the west. Only the faint echoes are heard back here. The firing, however, at best is of only a desultory nature. There has been no concerted or sustained attack in any particular sector. There has been no drum fire, no breaking through the lines. The shooting has been done mostly "by the spits" as they used to say in France. It has been long range work. There has been no coming to grips—no hand-to-hand fighting, no getting in with the bayonet.

COOLIDGE LAUDS COLUMBUS

Pays Tribute to Explorer in Letter to Contessa

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—President Coolidge in a Columbus day letter to Vita Contessa, of New York, president of the Italian benevolent society, made public here today, paid tribute to Christopher Columbus and to American citizens of Italian birth.

Commenting on messages which he said made apparent that this year Columbus day would be "observed very widely," Mr. Coolidge recalled that Columbus in his own time "was repaid with little else than disgrace, disappointment and ignomy."

Cronkhite Murder Case Closed With Pothier Acquittal

By The Associated Press

TACOMA, Wash., Oct. 12.—Roland W. Pothier, former sergeant-bugler of the 213th engineers, U. S. A., and Robert Rosenbluth, former captain of the same organization, today were out from under the cloud of suspicion that has been over them for six years as a result of the death on October 23, 1918, of Major Alexander Cronkhite at Camp Lewis.

With the acquittal of Pothier in federal court here yesterday of a charge of murdering Major Cronkhite, the government announced that the prosecution of Pothier and Rosenbluth is a closed incident.

Considerable mystery has attended the death of Cronkhite. He fell mortally wounded from a pistol shot at the entrance to an old farm on the Camp Lewis Military reservation, while his command stood at rest, scarcely 50 yards away, but behind a jog in the road. Dense underbrush obscured a view of the shooting.

Pothier was accused and made several alleged confessions, in the first of which he admitted killing Major Cronkhite but said that Captain Rosenbluth caused him to do it.

Missing Remains Of Slain Woman Found in Woods

Victim of Daughter-in-Law's Shot Discovered in Lonely Forest

CONFESSION IS MADE

Girl Admits Murder From Jail In Little Rock, Ark.

By The Associated Press

TULSA, Okla., Oct. 12.—The missing body of Mrs. Lena Green, who was shot to death near Red Fork, Okla., September 25, by her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Winona Green, according to the latter's alleged confession to the police at Little Rock, Ark., was found today in a wooded tract near Fisher, Okla. The body rested against a rock at the spot the young woman told officers it would be found. The condition of the body made it impossible to determine the cause of death, officers said.

Directs Search.

Deputy Sheriff Morris Evans, who resides near Fisher which is 12 miles southeast of Tulsa, set out early Sunday morning with a party of neighbors and found the body at 9 a. m. Earlier Sheriff Sanford of Tulsa county had held another conference with officers at Little Rock and she told him the body would be further back in the woods where the officers previously had searched.

A buzzard circling overhead led the searching party to the spot. The body was removed to Tulsa and placed in a sealed casket to be sent to Little Rock for burial.

Shot Her to Death.

According to the alleged confession of Mrs. Winona Green, she came to Tulsa on September 25 accompanied by her mother in law, took the elder woman to a lonely spot and shot her to death with a pistol which she had obtained here from a loan agency. After slaying the woman, she took a $2,000 draft from her. Returning to Tulsa, she rode to a Kansas town in a hired automobile and caught a train for Pueblo, Colorado, where she was arrested and returned to Little Rock.

The girl also confessed to the slaying of her father in law, J. R. Green, at Little Rock, last August. He was mysteriously killed while walking through a railroad cut.

More Cattle In Houston Infected

By The Associated Press

HOUSTON, Oct. 12.—Outbreak of foot and mouth disease in a herd of seventeen cattle under observation by federal inspectors, was reported today by Dr. Marion Imes, government inspector in charge. The animals were immediately killed and buried, Dr. Imes said.

This herd was the last of the five cattle in the original infected area placed under quarantine, Dr. Imes said. It was owned by Bob Brockman, at Olivet, and was considered "contact" cattle.

Dr. Imes stated today that the finding of infection in this herd vindicated the action of the state and federal authorities in having all live cattle in the infected area and adjacent to it, killed. He said he did not believe any of the cattle in the Brockman herd had been in contact with any outside of the quarantined district. No dairy products from this herd have been sold, he said.

RACERS WORRIED BY DEATH

Fatal Fall of Woman Climaxes The Wichita Contests.

By The Associated Press

WICHITA, Kansas, Oct. 12.—The death of a woman parachute jumper marred the final day's program of the national air congress meet here today. Mrs. Ruth Garver, well known aerial performer of Attica, Kansas, was killed when she fell one thousand feet when a parachute failed to open.

Mrs. Garver and Mrs. Sevaughn Neville of St. Joseph, Mo., jumped simultaneously from a plane of K. R. Garver, husband of the dead woman. Mrs. Neville landed safely, but the parachute of Mrs. Garver, its cords tangled, fell like a plummet, and landed in the midst of a large crowd. She died a few moments later.

Four army pursuit planes from Selfridge Field thundered the greatest thrills of the races today. The race for the Wichita Chamber of Commerce trophy for pursuit planes was won by Major Thomas Lanphier, with an average speed of 156 miles an hour.

No Help Wanted From Congress Davis Declares

Says He'll Win Without Needing Recourse From Electoral College

IS IN INDIANAPOLIS

Changes His Itinerary For Swing Through Middle West

By The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 12.—Confidence that the November elections will be decisive and that the democratic ticket will win in the electoral college without reference to congress was expressed today by John W. Davis, democratic nominee for president.

The candidate's statement was made to newspaper men here and was said to have been founded upon reports given him by democratic leaders in the middle west.

Revises His Tour.

Mr. Davis also announced today a revision of his itinerary for the remainder of his two weeks tour of middle western states. He will leave Indianapolis at noon tomorrow, making brief addresses at Lebanon, Lafayette, and Green Castle and in the evening at Terre Haute. On Tuesday Mr. Davis will visit the tomb of Abraham Lincoln at Springfield, in the afternoon, and deliver a night speech in that city.

Wednesday will be spent in Quincy, Ills., with an evening address on the program there and Thursday will be given over to a series of addresses in Chicago.

Go to St. Louis.

From Chicago the Davis party will go to St. Louis, Mo., arriving there Saturday morning. It is planned to motor to East St. Louis, Ills., for a noon speech there and return to St. Louis, Mo., that night for the principal address of the day. Mr. Davis will arrive in Nashville, Tenn., Sunday, the day being set apart for church and rest and on Monday evening he will speak there. Louisville, Ky., has been designated for an address Tuesday night. From there the candidate will go to Evansville, Ind.

READY TO RECEIVE ZR-3

All Preparations Complete at Lakehurst for Big Dirigible.

By The Associated Press

LAKE HURST, N. J., Oct. 12.—Lieutenant Commander J. M. Deem, acting commander of the naval air station here said tonight that arrangements for reception of the dirigible ZR-3 here are virtually completed. The crew of several hundred men whose duty it is to handle the ZR-3's super ship Shenandoah are eagerly awaiting the night of two big naval dirigibles placed side by side in the spacious hangar for the first time.

When the ZR-3 arrives, the hangar and its immediate surrounding territory will be forbidden to public trespassing. This "danger zone," the acting commander said, will be maintained until the hydrogen gas in the ZR-3 is withdrawn and the non-inflamable helium substituted.

American Smelting and Refining Shows $13 Per Share.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—Earnings of the American Smelting and Refining Co., in the six months ended June 30 were at the annual rate of almost $13 a share on the common stock, a report to stockholders revealed today.

After deducting for all bond interest, depreciation, ore depletion and taxes, net income amounted to $3,190,537, an increase of $394,491 over the corresponding period last year and an increase of $1,947,734 over the last six months of 1923.

HOUSTON GUARDS AGAINST SPREAD OF DREAD FEVER

88 Persons Quarantined After Mexican Dies In A Hospital

NO NEW CASES FOUND

Authorities Believe That Malady Has Been Checked

By The Associated Press

HOUSTON, Texas, Oct. 12.—No cases of yellow fever have been discovered among 88 persons placed under quarantine following the death of Fernando Peres here Thursday, according to Dr. A. H. Flickwir, city health officer. Peres died of yellow fever and every one known to have come in contact with him was immediately placed under guard in a detention camp.

Large Crew At Work

A large crew of men were at work all day today waging war on mosquitoes, oiling pools, cutting weeds and taking other precautions. This will continue until all possible breeding places are eliminated, Dr. Flickwir said.

R. E. Tarbett of El Paso and R. L. Turner, from the lower Rio Grande valley, both having experience in combatting yellow fever in Panama and Mexico, arrived today to aid in the work of preventing a spread of the disease.

No New Cases.

Dr. Flickwir said late today that if no new cases developed those now in quarantine probably will be released Wednesday. The hotel in which Peres stopped before being taken to the hospital has been thoroughly fumigated and released from quarantine. All buildings adjoining the hotel also have been fumigated.

Dr. G. M. Guiteras, senior medical officer of the United States public health service at Galveston, has charge of the situation here.

REPORT FEATURES COTTON

Government Estimates Brings Some Reactions.

By The Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 12.—The main feature of the cotton market during the past week was the government report issued Wednesday morning and showing a condition average of 53.5 per cent of normal and an indicted yield of 12,450,000 bales exclusive of linters. The condition shown about met grade expectations but the indicated crop, although nearly a hundred thousand bales smaller than the crop indicated two weeks earlier, nevertheless proved much larger than those who had bought expected. As a result heavy liquidation ensued which forced prices down on Wednesday after the report was issued from 23.09 for December the price ruling just before the crop indications was flashed to 22.82, a decline of 187 points or something over $9 a bale.

LABOR COMMITTEE COMPLETE

Demo Party Finishes Its Organization.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12. — The democratic national committee announced today that the national democratic labor committee had completed organization under the chairmanship of George L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen's Union of America. State chairman of the new organization have been named in all but three states.

Landiser Woodrow Wilson and urging the election of John W. Davis, Mr. Berry said in a statement that "the attempt of a few labor leaders to deliver the labor vote en-bloc to the LaFollette forces had stirred up considerable storm among the organized workers, from Maine to California and from the Canadian border to the gulf."

NO TERROR FOR HIM.

Herriot Not Worried by Threats Of Big Walk-Out.

By The Associated Press.

PARIS, Oct. 12.—"The London and Geneva conference were easy alongside this." Premier Herriot remarked to friends the other day just after he had received an ultimatum from a half million government employes who had taken the organization of the civil service into their own hands and fixed the minimum salary they were willing to accept.

The employes announced that if the government refused to accept their ultimatum they would carry out demonstrations in the streets and at the polls on the next election and also that if necessary they would go on strike.

LAFOLLETTE ON THE ROAD

Starts on Campaign Tour of States West of The River.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Oct. 12.—Senator Robert M. LaFollette, independent presidential candidate set out tonight on another lap of his stumping tour with the intention of devoting a week or more to campaigning in agricultural states just west of the Mississippi river.

Kansas City, Mo., was the candidate's destination when he left. He speaks there tomorrow night, and Tuesday night will make an appeal for votes in St. Louis.

In addition to these two engagements, which were known when Senator LaFollette started out from Washington, a week ago, it was announced tonight that he will speak Wednesday evening in Des Moines, Iowa.

Accident Orgy In Bowie Hurts Four Saturday Evening

Three Seriously Injured In Auto Wreck; Two Others Badly Bruised Up

CARS ARE WRECKED

Four Auto Disasters Take Toll in and Around The City

Special to The Record News.

BOWIE, Texas, Oct. 12.—One young woman and two young men in the local hospital, seriously injured, a second young woman at home with a wrenched back, and a half dozen other persons suffering minor injuries, are the results of four auto accidents in and near this place Saturday night. All injured parties reside near Bowie.

Miss Mamie Allen is in the Bowie hospital suffering from a broken collar bone and broken arm. Joe W. Sparkman is also in the hospital with a broken collar bone and other injuries. This couple may suffer internal injuries as the Ford roadster in which they were riding is said to have turned over three times and was completely wrecked.

Lloyd Winningham is being treated at the hospital for a badly mashed hand and lacerated arm and Miss Opal Gustin is at her home in south Bowie suffering from a wrenched back. Other principals of the various wrecks escaped with only slight injuries.

The most serious accident occurred about midnight near the eastern edge of town on the Meridian highway leading to Fort Worth. A Ford coupe owned by Olan Perkins and occupied by Misses Opal Gustin and Beulah Key, Lloyd Winningham and Perkins, was struck by the roadster of Sparkman who was driving with Miss Allen. According to eye witnesses Sparkman was speeding and was attempting to pass another car when he smashed into the perkins car. Both cars were badly damaged, especially the Sparkman roadster which is reported to have made three flips before landing in the ditch.

Two cars were damaged in another accident near the business section of town on Tarrant street. The third wreck occurred on the Bellevue road and a fourth near the scene of the first on the Fort Worth highway. No one was injured in these accidents.

TRUCK STRIKES AUTOS

No One Injured in Smash Up Near Tenth and Monroe Streets.

A large truck such as is used for carrying casing stayed on its side near Tenth and Monroe the better part of the day yesterday following a smashup earlier in the morning which turned it over leaving the trailer upright, however. Two larger cars were slightly damaged by the impact of the truck when it turned a corner into Tenth street.

An ambulance was called but upon arriving at the scene of the collision could find no one injured.

Anatole France Is Dead

By The Associated Press

TOURS, France, Oct. 12. — Anatole France is dead. His end came peacefully today. From August last, the state of the great French writer's health had caused anxiety. Gradually his condition became worse, until only a few days ago he himself expressed the conviction that he had but a few hours of life remaining.

Owing to his advanced age, 80 years, there was no expectation of his recovery, but almost up to the end he retained his interest in those around him and was able at times to converse briefly.

3 Unaccounted For As Petrolia Hotel Is Burned

Special to The Record News.

A report that two men, known to have been in the building when fire broke out were still unaccounted for, was causing a search of the Leath hotel ruins in Petrolia late last night. The hotel was burned to the ground about 7:30 by flames of undetermined origin.

While the possibility of the two having perished in the blaze was given credence both here and in Petrolia, it was not thought at an early hour this morning that any fatalities had occurred. It is presumed that the two men, neither of whose names are known, escaped in the confusion and excitement attendent on the discovery of the fire.

Further doubt was added to the case by reports reaching here that a third man had leaped from a second story window of the hotel, that he had been seriously hurt and had been brought to the general hospital here. At 1:30 this morning he had not arrived and a search of the city failed to reveal any trace of him.

Loss at the hotel is estimated at about $5,000.

BIG SHIP TAKES OFF SUNDAY ON EPOCHAL FLIGHT

All Friedrichshafen Out To Watch Departure Early In Day

31 MEN ON BOARD

Cranks Make Life Miserable For Officials as Trip Is Started

LONDON, Oct. 12.—A dispatch received from Berlin from Reuters shortly after 9 o'clock this evening said the latest reports received in the German capital were to the effect that the ZR-3 was then out over the Atlantic ocean.

By The Associated Press

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, Oct. 12.—The Zeppelin company's pride of the air, the dirigible ZR-3, which was built here for the United States navy, started away at 6:35 o'clock this morning on her long delayed trans-Atlantic voyage, to the big hangar awaiting her at Lakehurst, N. J.

The start was made in a mist that was almost rain. With several men scampering about and tugging at long lines of ropes, the airship swung out of her hangar amid the cheering of the throng and the tossing of flowers upon its side. A little German band, its members blowing with might and main, endeavored to make the "Deutchland Uber Alles" heard above the buzz of the motors.

When the ZR-3 was let go by those holding her down she was out of sight within a few minutes. Once the start was actually made it was all over so quickly, as far as Friedrichshafen was concerned that the crowd apparently had difficulty in realizing that the ship really had deserted her cradle and begun the longest non-stop cruise ever undertaken by a dirigible.

To Pay German Debts.

The ZR-3 is known here as the last of the Zeppelins. She goes across the Atlantic to pay the United States part of Germany's war bill. It seemed to be gratifying to the spectators to see a great German flag trailing from the ship's stern as she ascended. Almost 5,000 persons who were on the scene cheered and waved handkerchiefs and flags and altogether displayed enthusiasm and emotion unusual among German crowds.

The four American officers on board the air ship apparently were not in particular good humor as they paced back and forth in side the gondola awaiting the final word to cut loose, being visibly fearful of a repetition of yesterday's false start after having been engaged in saying "good byes" for a day or so.

But as the ship took the air, Captain George W. Steele, U. S. N., who is to command the ZR-3, relaxed and smiled and commander Jacob H. Klein, Jr., who is in charge of the naval air station at Lakehurst, seemed immensely relieved. Lieut. Commander S. M. Kraus who is to be engineer officer of the airship and Major F. M. Kennedy, the United States army observer, centered their attentions on the activities of the crew.

Eckener On Edge.

Dr. Hugo Eckener, the commander, and Captain Ernest A. Lehman, executive and watch officer and other German officers, were serious of visage. They had no time to respond to farewells, but Dr. Eckener found a moment just before the airship rose to wave to his wife, daughter and son and to Countess Heller, daughter of the late Count Zeppelin.

The gayest and cheeriest of the crew were the mechanics who leaned so far out of the motor gondolas and waved so frantically that the crowd was fearful some of them would fall out.

The mascot canary sang lustily Saturday despite the fact that all Friedrichshafen was in gloom as the leaving here of the ZR-3 was being looked upon for the moment almost as the town's greatest tragedy. This morning, however, the canary was quiet. It sat in the corner of its cage apparently disgusted because its slumbers had been disturbed for the early getaway.

The departure of the last of the Zeppelins was a great occasion for Friedrichshafen. For two days, the town had worn the kind of festival appearance but without gaiety. People came here from various parts of south Germany, by automobiles and trains, wagons, motorcycles and bicycles. They filled all the hotels to overflowing, many of the visitors going to near-by villages to sleep.

Big Crowd Out.

The town was fully awake at 4 o'clock this morning and there was such a jam at the main entrance to the Zeppelin grounds before daylight that Captain Steele and other American officers got through the gates with difficulty. The gates were opened only a few minutes prior to bringing the ship out of her hangar. Then the crowd broke through the police lines, causing much confusion. Burgomaster Schnitzler, who had prepared a short speech for delivery before the airship went aloft, was delayed owing to the jam and was prevented from making his farewell address.

As the noise of the motors died away many of the persons were seen to be weeping. Women were the most nervous among them. The men expressed themselves as opposed to the idea of Friedrichshafen's prize ship going to a foreign land.

Then the crowd melted away from the hangar and the great 100 ton doors, made of cement, closed slowly to await the coming of the inter-allied commission of control which is to supervise the direction of the hangar.

Through the examination of a student who arrived last night and who had made threats against Dr. Eckener, it became known that Stuttgart detectives had been brought in by the WINNIPEG, Ont., Oct. 12.—After a crowded 36 hours in Winnipeg the Prince of Wales left at 3 o'clock this morning for Chicago traveling by way of Duluth, where there was to be a half hour stop.

The prince played squash racquets yesterday morning and golf in the afternoon. In the evening he was a dinner guest of Sir James and Lady Aikens at government house and the guest of honor at a dance given by Mr. and Mrs. George Galt. Immediately after the dance the prince and his party boarded their special train.

Two Women Faint

Several thousand persons milled about the train in a fog that they might have a glimpse of royalty.

Two women in the crowd fainted.

Besides the mayor, and the presidents of six local business concerns who were guests of the prince, William Magie, a young friend of Wales and a resident of Duluth, who met the future British king at Long Island was present. He received a special telegraphic invitation from the royal visitor to be on hand.

Changes His Route

Announcement of changes in the prince's pouting east were made aboard the special train today. Wales will arrive at Lake Forrest station, Chicago at 8 a. m. and be the guest of Louis Swift, Chicago packer, on a tour of the stock yards tomorrow. Tuesday morning he will arrive at Detroit to be the guest of Henry Ford until Wednesday noon, and Thursday and Friday will be spent at Ottowa.

Wind Behind It But It Fails to Make Mark Expected

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, Oct. 12.—Telephonic advices from Friedrichshafen state that although the wind has been chasing the ZR-3 since two o'clock in the afternoon the average speed for the first 1,000 miles dropped to 64.7 miles an hour. This is 1.3 short of cruising speed.

The exact time set for the first 1,000 miles was 14 hours, 59 minutes, but this was not quite achieved

France Catches Few Sights Of Speeding ZR-3

Ship Dodges Large Towns And Travels 80 m.p.h. Over Country

IN TOUCH BY RADIO

Messages from Eckener Tell That All Is Well On Board

By The Associated Press.

PARIS, Oct. 12.—The ZR-3 sped across France today at about 80 miles an hour and at such a great altitude that only a few persons saw her, particularly as she steered clear of the larger towns. The airship, so far as reported, was sighted only twice in France near the east frontier and her wireless signals were caught as she passed close to Bordeaux.

Departing from France, the dirigible was sighted first at 8:40 a. m. over Belfort, a short distance west of the German-Swiss frontier along France's eastern boundary. She then turned slightly southward toward Bordeaux in sight of the Alps, and was seen again near Montbellard, 30 miles to the east, flying high and fast. It is estimated that over France and Switzerland she maintained an average altitude of 5,000 feet, and she crossed France in less than six hours.

Runs Into Fog.

The next sign of life for the French from the trans-Atlantic voyager came when the Bordeaux wireless station caught the airship's location signals as she was leaving French soil for the bay of Biscay, where she began her great sea flight to Lakehurst.

The ZR-3 flew over Basle, Switzerland, soon after she left Friedrichshafen. In this section the fog was quite dense. She followed the Rhine until opposite Belfort when she turned westward and gradually swung slightly to the south. As the Zeppelin's speed would indicate she followed a fairly direct line from Belfort to the Bordeaux region and probably passed over the most sparsely settled country and at such a height that many of the thousands who watched for her failed to get a glimpse of the airship.

SIGHTED OFF SPAIN

Favorable Winds Make the Sailing Safe

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, Oct. 12.—The ZR-3 was sighted off the Spanish coast shortly after eight o'clock tonight and at 9:36 passed Cape Ortegal, on the Bay of Biscay, and then headed for the open Atlantic.

Before leaving the Bay of Biscay the dirigible's officers and crew sent last off-shore greetings to their families and friends at Friedrichshafen. Dr. Eckener reports favorable winds and auspicious weather generally.

Motors and Ship Work Perfectly, Is Report

BERLIN, Oct. 12.—The big dirigible ZR-3 which left Friedrichshafen at 6:30 o'clock this morning for Lakehurst, N. J., was over the Bay of Biscay near Bordeaux, France, at 4 o'clock this morning.

The motors and wireless of the airship were functioning perfectly. Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the airship, decided to take the southern route from Bordeaux by way of the Azores and Bermuda which is considerably shorter than the route via Spain.

MAKES AVERAGE SPEED OF 65

Wireless From Eckener Reports Pleasant Trip

By The Associated Press

BERLIN Oct. 12.—At eight o'clock tonight the German wireless stations were out of touch with the ZR-3. The following wireless message from Dr. Eckener, was received by the Frankfort Gazette during the day:

"Reached the west coast of France after a very pleasant and uniformly good flight through central France. Here at the mouth of the Gironde we take leave of Europe. We are traveling at an average speed of sixty-five miles an hour with a south wind measuring six or seven metres per second. The ship's motors are in excellent working order and everybody is in the best of spirits."

BIG SHIP TAKES

Zeppelin works to guard the director during the past few days owing to threats by cranks and others that the ship would never leave her berth.

Escorted By Police.

Dr. Eckener went aboard the ZR-3 just before "all aboard" was sounded this morning; detectives escorted him to the gang plank where their duty ended.

The parents of the student were notified of his arrest and they are sending for him, the police having confiscated his rifle and cartridge and the rambling notes of a diary in which he declared he was opposed to the principles of the dirigible going to help pay reparations.

There are no stowaways abroad the ship so far as is known.

Instead of 32 persons as previously announced, there are but 31 on the air ship, Herman Pabst, chief mechanic of the star board rear motor, which has not been working properly the last few trial flights, having suffered a nervous breakdown this morning, necessitating his withdrawal from the crew. Pabst has been worrying because the oil feed pipe of his motor had not been functioning in a normal manner despite his day and night work to remedy the trouble.

Just before taking off the dirigible was given a large dose of hydrogen gas, which increased her lifting power. The favorable weather today made this possible, whereas yesterday it was too hot to take on more gas. The ship carries 20 tons of gasoline. Some repair supplies and other metals were taken off the dirigible yesterday in order to lighten her. Dr. Eckener, consenting to sacrifice tools in preference to gasoline, every ounce of which may be needed if head winds are encountered.

Deafened passengers and ambitious correspondents who had hoped to stow away on the ship found their footsteps dogged by a squad of plain clothes men which the Zeppelin company engaged to guard the hangar and shoo away suspicious loiterers. Even the score or more newspaper correspondents who had made life miserable for Dr. Eckener for the past seven weeks were placed under scrutiny by the sleuths who saw to it that they were safely on the ground as the airship sailed away.

Railroading for Pleasure

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

I am never hermetically sealed in a solid vestibule train and shipped in bond to Chicago or some equally important destination without thinking how remarkably railroads have developed in the last 20 or 30 years. I was in the railroad business once, in the west, and they were then conducted with a difference.

My niche in the system was the front seat in the smoking car where I kept a little collection of peanuts and oranges and yellow-covered novels which now and then I attempted to vend to the passengers that ran from a western railroad town to Regal City, a village 30 miles away. I do not recall now that I ever sold any of my wares. In those days and in the locality people thought very highly of a five cent piece, and it required a better selling talk than I had mastered at the age of 14 to persuade them to part with one for anything of less value than a one dollar bill.

Ed Hall was the conductor of our train, Wilbur Tompkins was the brakeman, and Dal Billings and Lucius Fitzgerald the engineer and fireman.

Pretty soon the passenger came up and asked Ed when we were going to start.

They were all nice sociable folks, and we were quite a happy family together.

Sometimes we had passengers, and sometimes we didn't. We never had the same passengers twice if there was any possibility of their reaching the terminal in any other way than by railroad. The fact that although we had a schedule we never adhered to it, seemed to irritate the travelling public, especially those who came from more populous districts, where it was considered the correct thing to get trains in and out of stations at the hours fixed on the time tables.

I remember one day a man got off the main line who was in a hurry to get to the end of our line, where he wanted to buy a farm for a bank he worked for. He walked up and down the platform impatiently while Dal Billings the engineer was trying to persuade his wife that he never took a drink while he was away from home, insisting that it was a new kind of cylinder oil whose aroma she mistook for liquor when he returned at night from his run.

Mrs. Billings was a woman who talked a good deal, and who always insisted on the last word, so it was an hour or two before Dal got her mollified and was able to put his hand on the throttle. Then along came the town marshal who wanted to buy a horse from Hall, the conductor, and he and Ed haggled about the price of the horse for another half hour.

Pretty soon the passenger came up and asked Ed when we were going to start; but, the marshal had begun to come up gradually toward Ed's price, so Ed said: "Pretty soon," and went on with the bargaining.

Finally Ed and the marshal agreed on five dollars, the horse being about 15 years old and not so good as he used to be, and Ed waved to Dal to go ahead.

The passenger climbed aboard, and was complaining to me about the slovenly way railroads were run in our state when the train came to a stop. We hadn't gone more than 20 miles, and there didn't seem to be any reason for the pause. The passenger and I looked out of the window to see if anything was broken, or if there were any cows on the track, and nearly got our necks disjointed by a sudden start. But it was a backward instead of a forward start, and pretty soon we were moving back to the railroad town as fast as we had come from it.

This surprised even me, for I had never known anything quite like that to happen, so when Ed came through I asked him the reason.

"Why Dal forgot to give his wife the rent money," he said, "and it's due today, so we're going back."

I thought the passenger would have apoplexy.

"Do you mean to tell me," he said to Ed, "that this railroad is run just for the convenience of your train hands!"

"Well, now, you wouldn't have Dal and his wife and year-old baby put out of the house just because you were in a little bit of a hurry would you?" said Ed, smoothingly. "Be reasonable. It won't take us more an hour to get back here again, and we were only an hour and a half late in starting. We'll get to the end of the line by 6 o'clock, if we have any kind of luck."

"Six o'clock!" gasped the passenger. "The court house will be closed by that time, and I wanted to get back to the main line tonight."

"You got plenty of time young feller," said Ed. "You don't look more about 30 years old and that court house'll be open for hundreds and hundreds of days during your lifetime."

The passenger didn't say anything more. He just sat and looked at Ed with his mouth open.

We went back to the town and Dal ran over and gave his wife the money, and pretty soon we were on our way again. But about half way up the line Mrs. Flannery who runs a chicken farm came out and waved her apron to Dal to stop.

"I wish you'd wait a mite, Dal," she said when he stuck his head inquiringly out of the window, "till little Pat gets the rest of the eggs picked up. I want to get them up to Bollinger's store tonight sure. There's a church sociable at the village tomorrow, and there'll have to be a lot of cakes made."

"Well, all right," said Dal, "but tell little Pat to hurry."

That stop was only for 10 minutes, but you should have heard the passenger talk about it. Anybody would have thought that we were running the train just for his exclusive benefit.

We were due to return to the railroad junction that night, and the man managed to get his business done by paying the county officials to come back to their office. But Ed and Dal found out there was to be the annual pool tournament in the local saloon that night, so they decided to stay over.

The passenger was pretty mad about it, and hired a horse and buggy to get back in. We heard later that he made a complaint about it when he got back to the big city where he lived, and for the next week or two we ran the train pretty regular. But then we slipped into the old leisurely style, and if the passengers didn't like it they had to lump it.

SALISBURY TRIAL TODAY

Clay County Man Faces Murder Charges

The trial of L. C. Salisbury, purported deputy constable of Clay county, charged with the murder of H. D. Jobe of this city about two weeks ago, will begin this morning at Henrietta before Judge Paul Donald. Many Wichitans have signified their intention of attending the trial and it is indicated that there will be no delay in bringing it to a finish.

Jobe, a city fireman here at the central station was shot and fatally injured with a glancing shot on the top of his head two weeks ago when he resisted arrest by Salisbury, who claimed to carry a deputy constable's commission. Jobe and a girl friend were parked on a country road near Henrietta in an automobile when they were accosted by Salisbury. Resistance to arrest led to Salisbury drawing his gun, and its discharge, the firing claimed to have been accidental.

Salisbury was taken before the grand jury, indicted for murder and released on bond.

Public First and Then Business is Coolidge's Claim

President Says that the Public Welfare Always Leads in America.

SPEAKS OVER RADIO

Addresses Heinz Workers on Anniversary of Company's Birth.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Working cooperation between business and the public "in accord with the dictates of common sense" was held up by President Coolidge, in an address by radio to employes of the H. J. Heinz company, gathered at banquets in various cities to celebrate the anniversary of the founding of the business as the "true and practical ideal" wished by the government.

The supremacy of the government has been the main motive dominating the economic and political development of recent years, he said, adding that it has brought the public interest into the equation of modern industrial and commercial relations.

Let It Run Itself

But the government, Mr. Coolidge declared, prefers to let business go its own way "so long as that is the right way; so long as it is the way of honest and genuine service to the real public interest. The government," he continued, "must be the servant of the public welfare and the creation of an informed and seasoned public opinion.

"It can not be dominated by any privilege," the president warned. "It cannot be subservient to any private advantage. It must always represent the public. With the hearty sympathy of both business and the people, we have made a long advance toward such a standard. There are encouraging signs of readiness to go further on the same way. The government will surely be prepared to give all encouragement in such a program. For by these methods only shall we bring about a proper balance, a secure and lasting adjustment of the supreme individual interest by bringing it into harmony with the highest consideration of the national welfare."

Will Always Rule

The people of America will keep control and ownership of their property Mr. Coolidge insisted "as a preliminity to the maintenance of their supremacy over their government."

"They know" he added "that when the government begins to own property it begins to own people. They want all these powers in their own hands."

It is the firm policy of the American people, the president, declared to insist that "business forms and methods shall be subordinated to the public interest" in this regard, he said, public authority as presented by the government has taken up the attitude of "moderation and reasonableness in dealing with these difficult and complex problems."

"The change in policy toward consolidation of railroads" he continued "is warranted by the change in policy toward operation. The government's power and its right to control and regulate the charges of public facilities is now fully recognized. Through the interstate commerce commission, the government determined when and upon what terms securities of carrying corporations may be issued. Within the constitutional prohibition against confiscation it fixes their rates, determines the income they may earn and demands from them for railroad use any surplus beyond the fixed rate of legal returns. The public demands service of the railroads without confiscation but at fair and reasonable rates fixed by the government."

BILLY WHISKERS

BY FRANCES TREGO MONTGOMERY

Billy's friends, Stubby, the little yellow dog, and Button, the black cat came to the motion picture studio yesterday, you remember.

After the greetings were over, Billy said, "How in the world did you two find me?"

"In this way," answered Stubby. "As soon as we heard you were in Chicago, we determined to come and search for you until we found you. And it was easier than we dared to, hope it would be, for on the first street we walked down after entering the city we saw your picture displayed on a movie sign, showing you fighting a ferocious bulldog."

"That is a splendid likeness of you, Billy," interrupted Button, "but neither Stub nor I envied you your job of fighting that brutal looking dog."

"Ho, ho! Ho, ho!" laughed Billy. "That is a good joke on you. That is not my picture at all!"

"Not your picture?" they exclaimed.

"No. But I don't blame you for thinking it was, for it bears such a close resemblance to me. It fooled me when I first looked at it. Only I knew I could not have been snapped any time when not aware of it, for I had never been in a fight with a bulldog like that."

"Now this is where our luck came in," said Stub. "As we stood before the picture wondering how we could find out where the studio was where it had been taken, three boys came along and stopped to look at the picture. One exclaimed, 'I've seen that very goat.' And I know where they are taking pictures of him!'

"'But you don't! You are only talking through your hat,' replied one of the others.

"'If you don't believe me, I'll show him to you,' was the offer.

"'Oh, yes, you will!' taunted the other.

"'Very well, you doubting Thomases, come with me over to the Emmanem Studio and I'll show him to you.'

"'How far is it?'

"'Only three or four blocks from here,' and they all started off.

"Of course we followed. And here we are! Did you ever hear of anything so lucky?"

"Well, I declare!" exclaimed Mr. Strobel as he stepped out of the studio into the yard with Mr. Dates and Mr. Benton, and saw Billy, Stubby and Button. "If here isn't just the combination we want for our scene this afternoon! A goat, a dog and a cat. And such a cute little dog, though not much to look at for beauty. But, oh my, oh me! that cat is a beauty! I am going to dress him up like a dandy dude for my cat picture and show him flirting with a white cat, all dressed up as a pretty girl. Then I am going to have an old Angora dressed as the girl's mother come down the street pushing a doll carriage with a little kitten in it fixed up as a baby. That cat is so large and has such splendid big yellow eyes he will look cute when I have him all rigged out as an English dude with a monocle."

(And tomorrow we'll see how Button and Stubby took to the idea of working in a motion picture studio.)

Should Split Up College Cost Is View of Experts

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 12.—Cost of junior colleges in Texas should be borne in part by the state and in part by the community in which they are located, the Texas Educational Survey recommended in a report published today. This is the fourth article on the survey to be released for publication.

This report on the junior college situation has no connection with a statement on the same subject issued a few days ago by Superintendent S. M. N. Marrs, who warned communities against establishing such colleges without proper preparation to continue them.

The survey commission declares the question of state subsidies for these colleges is certain to be a problem in the near future. The figures of the survey show that the number of students going to college is increasing rapidly.

Shenandoah Held Up By Big Storm

By The Associated Press

CORONADO BEACH, Calif., Oct. 12.—Seven o'clock Tuesday morning is the new hour set for the departure of the navy dirigible Shenandoah on her voyage up the Pacific coast according to an announcement late today by Rear Admiral William Moffett, chief of the naval bureau of aeronautics, after conferring with Lieut. Commander Zachary Lansdowne, commander of the craft.

Weather bureau reports of a storm sweeping down from the Alaskan seaboard caused postponement of the sailing which previously had been set for daybreak Monday.

Repairs would be complete for leaving Monday, the admiral said, but he believes the stormy weather predicted will bring with it haze, fog and probably rain and in order to give as many cities as possible an opportunity to see the giant airship, the take-off has been delayed until Tuesday, when it is believed the gusty weather will have passed.

Daniels Attacks Hughes' Speech On Campaign Issues

Makes it Special Target Of Attack in Address At Washington

CALLS IT A JOKE

Declares Former Secretary Trying to Make Light Of Scandals

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—Secretary Hughes' recent campaign speech in Cincinnati was made the particular target of an attack delivered against the record of the present administration here tonight by Josephus Daniels, who served as secretary of the navy under Woodrow Wilson.

Mr. Daniels took as his text for a radio address, the declaration of Hughes, that, "we not only have common honesty in this country, we have a sense of humor."

This, said Mr. Daniels, shifted the republican campaign to a new strategic basis.

Conspiracy Broke Down.

"The conspiracy of silence," he continued, "broke down everywhere except in the White House. Oh, I forgot, and in the navy department. It was converted into a deaf and dumb asylum until after election. The muzzling of Wilbur was not a new policy, however. Every responsible man in the navy department was muzzled at the Washington conference while the secretary of state became secretary of the navy, hauled down the American flag, and handed the supremacy of the sea to Britain, the supremacy of the air to France, and control of the Pacific to Japan.

"The secretary undertakes now to make a joke of a long series of scandals and rejoices that we have a sense of humor. It is a novel method of campaigning. But Mr. Hughes is a past master at practicing it, not to speak of his ability to see a joke which did not exist in the income tax law, which as governor of New York, he opposed, or his sense of humor because of his political associate, Newberry, whom he defended, or his ability to laugh up his sleeve at the trick of the famous proclamation of the thirty-one, that the only way to insure entrance by this country into the League of Nations was to elect Harding and Coolidge.

Height of Humor.

"But the flowering of the sense of humor so much praised came when it leaked out that the oil kinds had obtained the whole of of 80,000 acres of the naval petroleum reserve. Fall and Sinclair had a hilarious time at Three Rivers. The sense of humor was most appealed to when the end man of the performance transferred the $68,000 into 'six or eight cows' right in the presence of the audience.

"There has been no more delicate appeal to the vaunted sense of humor than the enforcement of prohibition. In private life, Secretary Mellon was a boss distiller. In public life he has made a failure of prohibition enforcement, but when Senator Couzens wanted to investigate Mellon, for the first time, the White House became vocal.

"You can imagine the hilarity behind closed doors when, with a straight face, treasury officials assured President Harding that if the soldiers were given a compensation, the treasury would go broke, and shortly afterward snickered as they displayed a surplus. Don't you know Bascom Slemp and Edward B. McLean had a jolly time in Florida when they were practicing on giving horticultural names to their friends. They say official Washington laughed until their sides shook when they learned that 'Apples' was the code name for Fall.

Nothing Funnier.

"Could anything be funnier?

"Our foreign policy, when we have had any, has been almost as side-splitting as Sancho Panza's travels.

"In this emergency comes the diplomatic and witty secretary of state, and expounds the only philosophy that gives his party a chance. It is: 'You cannot stupify the public conscience by silence. You cannot satisfy it by sweet words. The people work hard and pay high prices. They have grievances. Do not answer, explain or defend. Entertain and amuse them. Give them an apricot circus and excursions to Palm Beach. If you can induce them to laugh, they will forget their troubles and grin as they go to the polls'."

CORN 55% NORMAL

78,232,000 Bushel Yield Is the Forecast

By The Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Oct. 12.—Condition of the Texas corn crop is reported at 55% of normal, which forecasts a production of 79,232,000 bushels, the lowest since 1918, according to the Oct. 1, report issued by H. H. Schutz, government statistician.

"In places most of the crop has been gathered," the report recites, "while in others it is practically all in the field. Very few good yields were made this year except in the south."

The report notes that September rains broke the long drouth, helped most of the crops and made a good season for fall breaking and sowing. A few sections, however, still lack sufficient moisture for plowing and to revive the grass. While some injury was done to the cotton by rains, generally it benefited from the moisture.

Eighty per cent of the wheat crop has been marketed, against 78% on Oct. 1 of last year.

T. C. U. CONVENTION MEETS

Fiftieth Anniversary Observed At Houston

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN, Oct. 12.—The fiftieth anniversary of the national organization of the Women's Christian Temperance Union is to be commemorated by the Texas branch in the state meeting to be held at Houston beginning Monday. This will be the forty-third annual meeting of the Texas branch of the organization, which has fought for prohibition for many years.

Mrs. Claude de Van Watts of Austin, is president of the state W. C. T. U. In a call for the meeting sent forth today she warns that this "great organization of courageous women must not be deceived even by the great victory of prohibition" but must plan a campaign for law enforcement.

Farmers Fear For Cotton As Frost Date Approaches

By The Associated Press

HOUSTON, Texas, Oct. 12.—Date of the first killing frost in Texas has become a matter of considerable concern in many sections to cotton growers whose fields are white with millions of bolls which need growing weather for their maturity, according to the October 1 cotton report of H. H. Schutz, government statistician. He adds that light frosts visited the northeast, northwest and western parts of the state on the night of Sept. 27, with little damage. Average date of the first killing frost, his records show, in the northwest lies between Oct. 15 and Oct. 25; in the north, northeast, west and central-west between Nov. 1 and Nov. 15 and in the central and eastern portions between Nov. 10 and Nov. 20.

Insect Damage Grows.

The report notes that insect damage is increasing in many sections. The government estimates that Texas crop is 51 per cent of normal, which forecasts productions of 4,225,000 bales of 500 pounds each gross weight, and contrasts it with the 56 per cent condition a year ago.

Ginning, the report says, is keeping pace with picking, and adds that selling of the product is not far behind. The total number of running bales ginned prior to Oct. 1 amounted to 2,273,544, which was an increase of 796,608 bales since the Sept. 16 report.

Picked in Many Fields.

In this connection Mr. Schutze's report shows the crop has been picked in many localities where gins are beginning to shut down and cattle are turned into the fields or the cotton stalks cut and turned over. An effort is being made to clean the fields early this year to kill the weevil crop of next year.

Central Texas has ginned two-thirds of its crop, South Texas over four-fifths and Northwest Texas one-seventh.

W. C. M. ON THE AIR AGAIN

University of Texas Station to Broadcast Market Data.

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 12.—Broadcasting station WCM of the University of Texas will be on the air again within a few days with four daily market reports, according to J. Austin Hunter, marketing expert of the State Department of Markets and Warehouses, in charge of the station.

The station, which radiocast market reports last year, was discontinued about three months ago when George Endress, who had been in charge of the station, left the university to enter business in Houston. Hunter was given control by the regents, and he recently began the work of reconstructing the station for the winter reports. New wave length assignments have not been received yet, but the station probably will operate on a 360-meter wave length.

Several special reports will be given during the winter. Beginning Nov. 3 special reports on the turkey crop and market will be collected and radiocast. The spinach reports will begin on Jan. 1. Cabbage, beets and carrots will start some time in January or February.

WEDDINGS GALORE IN LONDON

American Debutantes Marry British Royalty.

LONDON, Oct. 12.—Weddings and the coming general election are the topics of the hour. Two thousand guests went to the wedding Wednesday of Maxine Forbes Robertson, daughter of Gertrude Elliott, the actress. The bride is a grand daughter of Thomas Dermot, of Oakland, Cal. She married Freeman Thomas, who is Lord Willingdon's heir. The American colony was well represented at the wedding.

Another important wedding of the season will take place Wednesday at St. Margaret's, Westminister, when Phillips Wendell, of New York, is married to the Earl of Calloway. About 1500 invitations have been issued for the wedding reception and at the last moment Mrs. Wendell decided that she could not possibly hold the reception at her house 34 Bryanston Square, South Charles, as the famous maitre at Claridges, where the reception will now be held, has undertaken to entertain them all.

Visitors To The State Fair Find New Attractions

Bigger and Better Than Ever Is Promise Of The Management

BIG CROWDS ATTEND

Races and Auto Show Are Features of Program On First Day

By The Associated Press.

DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 12.—With a large crowd in attendance the thirty-eighth annual State Fair of Texas got under way here yesterday to run 16 days. Throughout the huge grounds there was ample proof of the claim of the fair officials that the 1924 exposition would be "all new," for the coliseum as an auditorium is no more; the main exhibit hall has been rebuilt; other buildings on the grounds have been completely renovated and modernized.

Among the special attractions for opening day was the football game between A. and M. college of Texas and Sewanee university of Tennessee.

Have "Big Top" Now

To replace the coliseum, which henceforth will be used as the agricultural exhibit hall, the fair is housing its vaudeville and specialty attractions in a huge tent that compares with the "big tops" of the circuses. The agricultural hall has been tastefully decorated and the county agricultural exhibits prepared with unusual care.

The main exhibit hall has been converted so as to represent a complete Spanish village, a city beneath a roof. The Spanish theme has been carried throughout the entire building, even to the installation of a set of chimes which ring out the Angelus and other appropriate selections at stated intervals.

Olmstead Trophy Run

The horse racing program of the fair was inaugurated with the running of the "Olmstead Trophy" race for two-year-olds. This trophy was donated by Harry Almstead, president of the fair. The racing program will be in progress throughout the fair.

An automobile show that ranks in size with some of the major exhibitions of the north and east was started in the automobile and manufacturers building. The manufacturers are featuring "action displays" this year and here, too, there were some interesting exhibits.

The opening day was "Press Day" in honor of the newspaper men of the state. The fair officials are contemplating an aggregate attendance of 1,000,000 at the 1924 exposition.

STILL FLY AT LOVE FIELD

But Peaceful Business Is Gaining Foothold There

By The Associated Press.

DALLAS, Oct. 12.—The pursuits of peace have caused Love field here, one of the major aviation training centers during the world war, to change from a fast training ground of aerial militarism into a growing industrial center. Yet, throughout the six years that evolution has been in progress, the field has not lost its identity as a flying center for north Texas, and within a few months it will be one of the central stations on the airplane mail service of the United States postal department.

With a municipal landing field approximately 50 acres in size as the center, a varied assortment of industries has been established around the circumference, separate from the city of Dallas, but yet a part of the Greater Dallas movement that is now under way.

MINERS TO GO ON STRIKE

Expect 20,000 In Pennsylvania Will Walk Out

By The Associated Press.

SCRANTON, Pa., Oct. 12.—Twenty thousand mine workers employed by the Glen Alden Coal Co., at its several collieries between this city and Nanticoke are expected to go on strike Monday in response to a vote taken late today at a meeting of the general grievance committee of the employes held in Wilkesbarre.

The men charged discrimination against members of the union at the Taylor colliery and the refusal of the company to hire men who have been idle in preference to new men.

Color Cut-Outs

"Oh, what a terrible day," fretted Betty Cut-out as she pressed her nose against the windowpane and looked out at the rain falling in sheets, and at the muddy ground where they had meant to play that Saturday afternoon.

"Looks like it would rain all day, too," sighed Billy. Betty and Billy and a bunch of boys and girls had gone over to their friend Nick's house to play in his big yard, when the rain had driven them indoors.

"Don't look so blue," exclaimed Nick. "I've a scheme that'll be rainy day fun. Come on up to the attic with me."

Nick has light brown hair. He is wearing a light tan shirt and brown and tan checked trousers with tan hose to match. Color him, then mount him on lightweight cardboard and cut him out to play with you.

PEARLS FOR DIAMONDS

She Uses One For Her Engagement Ring Now.

LONDON, Oct. 12.—Miss Madeleine Byrne, of New York, a debutante of last season's court, has just become engaged to Captain Osland Mansfield of the Cold Stream Guards. She has set a new fashion in engagement rings. Otto Byrne, a pearl king who lost his life while fishing at Palm Beach a year ago, was her father, and Miss Byrne has chosen her father's favorite, a big pearl, as the single set in platinum for her engagement ring. The pearl is as large as a hazel nut.

"They are pearls are symbolic of tears," said Miss Byrne the other day, "but I am just going to try it and find out."

CHINESE WAR FLAES OUT

Brooklyn Laundryman May Die From Injuries.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—Wing Wing, a Chinese laundryman, may die as the result of two bullet wounds he received tonight in what the police believe is an expansion of the tong war to Brooklyn.

After the shooting orders went out from Brooklyn police headquarters doubling the patrol over Chinese restaurants, laundries and other places where it was feared the feud might flare up anew.

Wing Wing was alone in his shop when two Chinese entered and fired revolvers at him simultaneously.

DARNEY SUPPORTS DAVIS

Claim Noted Educator Repudiates G. O. P. Pledge

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—The democratic national committee today issued a statement declaring that Charles W. Dabney, former president of the University of Cincinnati, one of the thirty-one prominent voters who signed an appeal to vote for President Harding in 1920, would support John W. Davis, democratic choice for president, this year. The committee said that President John Grier Hibben of Princeton another Harding advocate four years ago had also repudiated his action in signing the appeal by declaring for Davis.

"WHAT IS THE MATTER WITH KANSAS"

Why ask? William Allen White is on the road again. William Allen White is an indepndent candidate for governor. William Allen White has a platform, "smash the ku klux klan."

William Allen White is a republican. He was born in Kansas which is the same as saying that he was born a republican. This year he is going to save Kansas, so he says, from dragons and goblins. This year he is going to send Governor Jonathan Davis back to the farm. This year he is going to do his best to keep Ben Paulen, republican nominee for governor, in his little country bank where he may charge the farmers and other borrowers forty per cent for Paulen money on guilt edge security.

William Allen White says Paulen is klan endorsed—that "Paulen went to the cow-pastures for his nomination"—that Governor Jonathan Davis had klan support last year and then kicked the klan in the teeth because the kleagles endorsed Benjamin instead of Jonathan.

William Allen White, as an editor, an orator, a thinker and a traveler has an international reputation. He is the Masse Henry Watterson of the west. He publishes a newspaper in a country town. He is as widely quoted as any writer in America. This is his first campaign in quest of office. Now you know what's the matter with Kansas.

MELLON ON THE RACK.

Andrew W. Mellon, the Alexander Hamilton of American finance, has been placed on the rack by John W. Davis. There is an aluminum trust in America. It is owned by the Mellon family. They control the aluminum industry.

John W. Davis contends that the existing aluminum tariff rates are exhorbitant and unnecessarily high, adding many millions of dollars annually to the cost of aluminum products to American consumers.

According to the Mellons, the aluminum manufacturing industry, a billion dollar concern, is fair in its dealings with the world and a benefactor to the American consumer.

According to John W. Davis and the democratic leaders the friends of the Mellon Aluminum Trust were cared for most generously when republican lawmakers hammered into shape the Fordney-McCumber act of 1922.

Andrew W. Mellon is a billion dollar man. He was the strong right arm of Warren G. Harding. He is the front and the back of the Coolidge administration.

It is said that the federal trade commission has a report on the aluminum industry, the men who own and the profits they make.

It is very late in the campaign but perhaps President Coolidge, with the advice of the Alexander Hamilton of the period, will order the federal trade commission to release the report for the public prints.

Then the American consumer will be able to ascertain whether he is being skinned or just trimmed.

What Today Means to You

LIBRA.

Today's planetary aspects are not very distinctive in any of their characteristics and, while they neither favor nor counsel aggressive action or radical change, they portend a fair measure of success along usual lines, as well as acontented mind. It will not be found difficult today to maintain an even and equable temperament, if routine work alone claims your attention; but should you depart from this course, worry and vexation will ensue.

A child born today will be normally healthy except for infantile ailments which, given proper care and attention, need cause no trouble. Its character will be very dependable, its disposition more serious than gay, its mentality quick and active. This child will, at a very early age, show signs of its dependability, by being truthful and absolutely frank, in order to prevent too much seriousness of disposition, it should be persuaded to associate as much as possible, with children of a similar age. It will be quick to learn, and will succeed in any vocation that it may choose.

If today is your birthday, you have several reliable qualifications, and are conscientious, and painstaking. You have a exaggerated sense of duty, and at times, make life not only irksome for yourself, but also for those associated with you.

If a woman, and a married one at that, you are disposed to conduct your house in such a way as to make it less of a home than a residence. You are excessively methodical and tidy, and resent the lack of these virtues in your husband and children, with the result that they are at all times the unwilling victims of your criticism and fault finding. This induces hard feelings, as the upstanding character principles, which you possess in so marked a degree are forgotten and overlooked, while the memory of the pin pricks remains. A little less insistance on non-essential details, and a little more tolerance and forbearance, would evoke both happiness and affection.

If a man, you carry your rigid ideas of work into your office, and expect one and all to be strictly conscientious and careful in the discharge of their duties as you are. You have set yourself a very high standard, and by dint of perseverance, have reached it. You must not, however, anticipate the same degree of excellence in everyone else, and, to be happy, you must be more philosophical and not jump to the conclusion that everything is going to the "demnition bow-wows" because all are not equally painstaking.

Successful people born on this date are: Eben D. Jordan, merchant; John W. Hoyt, educator; Charles H. Stockton, naval officer; Charles S. Pearce, artist; Augustus C. Bernays, surgeon; Thos. H. Barry, major general, U. S. A.

Fortunately, even the worst spoiled youngsters must work his way through the school of experience.

More Truth Than Poetry

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

THE PARTY CHAIRMAN

He has an earnest manner,
He looks you in the eye,
And right away you sagely say:
"This person cannot lie."
He says, as on his fingers
The count he indicates:
"I've figured out beyond a doubt
We'll carry all these states:

Ohio, Indiana, Nebraska, Kansas, Maine
And Illinois you bet, my boy,
We'll carry that again;
New York, New England all en bloc,
And yes, the whole Northwest,
And if I'm right about this fight
We may get all the rest."

Of course he's not a liar;
It should be understood
That in these claims he merely aims
For his great party's good.
Just mention any section,
And straightway off the bat,
He will declare—nay more, he'll swear—
That he will carry that.

At night, perhaps he slumbers,
As other men must do,
But is his sleep profound and deep,
Or does, the whole night through,
The small stern voice of conscience
Observe: "What will you say
If all that crew runs out on you
On next election day?"

ON EXPRESSING ONE'S PERSONALITY

Said a society women the other day: "I was handicapped at the start by having neither wealth nor beauty, so I endeavored to express my personality in my surroundings and in my dress.

"I adopted a certain certain color and kept to it, making it my own, as you will doubtless have noticed. My hats, my gowns, and every detail of my toilette to the smallest accessories, was carried out in a restful, peace-giving shade of pastel grey. I have identified my whole personality with it. The pastel shades of my drawing room give the air of almost cloistered peace. Now I am known as the lady of repose."

This lady confessed to Lady Diana Manners, who adds that while most women are content to go with the crowd and follow where others lead, it is best to be individual.

Be in the fashion, yes, she says, if you are not you will be old-fashioned and dowdy, but fashion must be adapted to suit yourself.

She adds that she is a firm believer in individuality in clothes and that in many cases she makes her own gowns. She thinks that every woman should try to design at least one dress for herself.

"Since I was a child I have made nearly all my own dresses, from the designing, cutting-out and fitting, to the actual stitching. I even made my own wedding gown and I do not think many women can boast of having done this. I did this because I wanted my personality to rise above mere fashion."

One's personality does not depend upon beauty of face nor shapeliness of form; it depends upon one's self.

Recently an actress in London advertised herself as the plainest woman in the world and the worst singer. She achieved a success, however, because she was entirely herself, had a distinct personality and expressed it.

It will be found that the women who have more influence in the world have not been those gifted with beauty of face and form but those who have been enabled to express themselves in dress and otherwise.

To be sure there is such a thing as carrying individuality too far, and of expression to the point of exaggeration, but there is also such a thing as carrying conformity too far. Just what is the golden mien, every woman must find out for herself.

LET'S PRETEND.

Let's pretend that all of you girls who have found it difficult to carry on a conversation with young men have carefully read and studied the books and periodicals on the list I sent you.

Your mind is full and brimming over with things to talk about—it is Wednesday evening, and you have a date with John Henry.

Your outward appearance is all you could make it, with every beauty secret you know used to its best advantage.

John Henry is announced. The overture has commenced, the curtain is up—everything is ready for your entrance, and you have stage fright!

Your lines leave you—you walk into the room, give John Henry a cold and clammy hand, and both of you sit down.

(Thank your stars that you have no audience, and that the Good Lord who safely directs the mariner to the shore will loosen your tongue in a minute.)

You must say something, even if it is about the weather. Open your mouth and speak. The worst is over—the ice is broken—now you can remember all the interesting things you intended to talk about.

John Henry sits up and begins to take notice. You cleverly discuss one subject after another.

It is marvellous! You feel like a new person—a wonderful person, in fact—a girl who can entertain men. You will never be afraid again. You have mastered the art—you know how to "put it across." What has happened? Here is the truth of the matter. You forgot to be self-conscious.

You couldn't think of yourself and remember the things you wanted to talk about at the same time.

At last, John Henry knows how attractive and full of fun and bright you are.

Wouldn't surprise me a bit if he proposed next Wednesday night!

CHAPTER IV

All Over

Her voice was raised. It was almost shrill with the intensity of her emotion.

Disappointment pregnant with pain too cruel to be borne had her in its grip. A word from Alan spoken earlier might have calmed her. Now her very power of reason was obliterated by her anger and contempt.

He made no reply. His face had become drawn and white.

To Barbara it was the face of a guilty man. There was a silence when the ticking of the cheap clock on the mantel-piece beat upon her ears like the blows of a hammer. Outside a taxicab changed gears raucously. There was a mist of tears before Barbara's eyes that put the objects in the room in grotesque proportions. She wrenched off a glove.

"There!" she gasped.

She stumbled blindly from the room. It was all over—all over. In a short half hour the walls of her dream castle had been all cast down, and were as dust and ashes.

That which had been fair and beautiful, with the promise of happiness and the fulfillment of a more complete life, she saw now as ugly and gross and underhand the utter disgraceful. The door of the outer office closed noisily after her. It was all over.

The sound made Alan Kennedy start.

He had not moved since she had turned on him with her vehement words of scorn. He had followed her exit with unseeing eyes. Now they were turned upon the half-hoop of diamonds that lay on his desk.

He picked it up, looking at it with a kind of awe and wonder. Then it slipped from his fingers and fell to the floor, rolling away unheeded.

Alan Kennedy sank into the chair, sitting in it all huddled up like an old man, instead of a man in the prime of his youth. He had not moved when the small office boy came in to inquire if he might go home.

It was all over for Alan Kennedy, too.

Barbara's state of mind when she reached her flat defies analysis.

Her Anger had gone, she was ashamed of having given rein to it, yet she felt that it was justified.

She was bitterly disappointed in Alan Kennedy, and she blamed him, while blaming herself. She had, she felt, been too hard on him, yet had not spared her. Her brain seethed with a riot of conflicting emotions. But the dull, predominating thought was, that which was dearest of all to her had gone out of her life, and that nothing could ever again take the place of the man she loved.

She spent the autumn afternoon until dusk fell thinking of him.

She was appalled by the realization of how much he means to her. Since she had given him her love she had planned not one hour outside her business life without consulting him.

It seemed as though there never had been a time when he had not influenced her mode of life. A chance meeting, a few mutual interests, had developed into a rare comradeship, and the comradeship had become that unity of thought and desire which is love.

To a nature like Barbara's that unity depended on the completest respect. Her man must have a regal inability to do wrong. And she had found him capable of a common, vulgar trick. He had played the informer. He had done so, knowing he was doing wrong, knowing that she would despise him for it, else he would not have sought to deceive her with this story of a legacy.

She wondered dully if his love for her had been as great a sham as the honor and integrity with which she had credited him.

If he had loved her he could not have done by stealth what he knew would wound her should she learn of it.

Yet, thinking of his many acts of generosity and consideration, she found it impossible to believe that his love had been false. These memories were bitter sweet. They reminded her of what had been hers. They reminded her of what she had given back, and was hers no longer.

Darkness had fallen when Barbara, a wan, pathetic little figure in a warren of flats, resolutely put from her these clamorous regrets, and faced the combat before her.

She was alone now in the world, with a living to earn, with nothing to help her save her brains, her initiative, and a few pounds of capital. With furrowed brows she thought out her plan of campaign.

It was a week later, when by permission of her landlord, a neat brass plate at the entrance of the block of flats and office proclaimed the legend:

Barbara Linwood.
Typewriting. Translations.

She had abandoned the idea of seeking another office post. References would be required, and from Kennedy's she could get none.

With her typewriter as her weapon of attack, and an advertisement in a trade paper as the gauge of battle, she awaited events. The advertisement proclaimed her specialty in builders, engineers' and contractors' estimates.

The immediate result of the advertisement was to Barbara nothing short of miraculous.

When a youth in a very high and very soiled collar rang her bell and having satisfied himself that Barbara belonged to the brass plate, delivered a mass of manuscripts into her hands, she could scarcely believe her good fortune.

"From Micklem & Smart," he announced. "And it must be done by tomorrow morning. Two carbon copies. Can you do it?"

And Barbara said "Yes," at a venture.

When the youth called next morning for the work it was ready for him, and he left another bundle of manuscript in its place.

Already Barbara saw in her mind's eye her sitting room blossoming into a big and busy office, filled with clattering typewriters, earning a lot of money for the principal and chief of staff, who received in her private room the suppliant directors of important companies who wanted work done.

She would have, she decided, her private room furnished with green leather. Green leather looked so solid and respectable.

The vision grew dim when Micklem & Smart sent no more manuscripts, and there were weeks when it faded away to give place to one not nearly so attractive. There were weeks when the cost of Barbara's advertisements represented Spartan economy. Then came more work, some of it regular, and the wolf was driven from the door.

One day she was on the top of a bus held up by the traffic in Fifth avenue. Alongside was a taxicab, and she glanced down at the occupant. Her heart leaped within her. The man, who was reading a paper, was Alan Kennedy.

Her first fear was that he should look up and see her. She shrank from the ordeal of recognition. But he was engrossed in what he was reading, and she watched him by stealth.

He was looking, she thought, much older. In repose his expression was stern and grave. Then, as he moved a hand, she ventured to lean over and watch him more narrowly. She had given him a plain signet ring, which he had worn on the little finger of his left hand. He was wearing it no longer.

HOW IT STARTED

By JEAN NEWTON.

"PICNIC."

The modern American idea of a picnic is the most informal sort of affair. Its principal and determining characteristic, of course, is taking a meal in the open.

The word has its origin in the French "piquenique," which described a somewhat different event. This was a party, usually indoors and frequently in the evening, at which each person contributed some dish to the common table.

The "piquenique" was sometimes a formal affair at which evening dress was prescribed. A far cry to the old clothes which are de rigueur at our own version of the picnic!

Tomorrow: "Ice Cream."

BUNNY FUR FOR TIGER

Demand For Skins Exceeds Supply in London.

LONDON, Oct. 12—There has been such a rush for tiger, leopard and jaguar skins during the last three weeks that the supply was exhausted and these precious furs are now scarcely to be had. A few mornings ago, however, the supply seemed to be more plentiful than ever, but now the secret is out. The ever obliging bunny rabbits have come to the rescue again and in places like the Berkeley the Savoy and Claridges can be seen dresses trimmed with fierce looking fur that would terrify a bunny out of his life. But it is his fur just the same.

When Custom Permits Women to Pop the Question There Will be Fewer Unhappy Marriages—For Women Loves the Heart of Man, While Man Chooses Only a Pretty Face.

Why is it that women are so much better judges of men than men are of women? Why is that women are attracted to man by what is within his soul and brain, while men look only at a woman's hair and complexion?

Men will answer these conundrums by denying they exist, but every woman knows better. Every woman knows that the average man judges a woman solely by her external appearance, and that it is better for a woman who wants to marry to have a willowly figure and a gift for clothes than for her to be a model of all the virtues and a college president in the bargain.

Women never cease marveling at the qualities in women that attract men, and that cause men to pick out the women who possess these attributes for wives, because these same qualities in a man would bore a woman to tears, and she would not willingly bring down on her head the calamity of having a husband who was afflicted with them.

You can see this difference in the point of view of the sexes at any social function. Only the pretty girls receive any attention from the men. The homely ones line the walls. You cannot imagine any good-looking young man devoting himself to a girl who is fat and red-faced and triple-chinned and bald-headed, no matter how wise and witty she may be.

If women were like men, and they put the taboo on every man who was not young and slim and who didn't have varnished hair and look like the advertisement of Kollege Kut clothes, no hostess could scrape together enough couples to give a dinner party, and there would be nothing stirring in society.

But women use more intelligence in measuring men than men do in measuring women, and they put good looks at their rightful place in the scale—desirable, but not necessary, and far outclassed by a dozen other attractions.

A woman doesn't care what color a man's hair is, or whether he's got any hair at all so long as he's got brains in his head. A women doesn't even look at a man's waistline if he can hand out an entertaining line of conversation. A woman isn't half so interested in the size of a man's collar as she is in the size of his heart, and the thing that attracts her to a man is not his being easy on the eyes, but easy to trust.

Homeliness is no bar to any man winning any woman he wants for a wife provided he has the intelligence and charm of manner, and the strength and manliness that women set far above personal appearance in their judgment of a man, but an ugly woman has practically no chance at all of ever being noticed by any man, no matter what beauties of heart and intellect she may possess.

Among my acquaintances are several women who have every desirable quality that a woman can possess, except beauty. They are clever and cultured; they bubble over with humor and good nature; they see life gayly and are the most interesting and fascinating of companions; they are domestic; they are affectionate and sympathetic and understanding.

They would make the most wonderful wives in the world. Their husbands would be petted and made much of; they would have wives who make them perfect homes and who would make them perfect homes and who would help them in every way. Their husbands would never know a dull moment at home, never be bored, for they would find in their wives the most stimulating of chums.

But Nature gave these women plain faces and, in consequence, the men have passed them by. They have never had a beau, never a proposal of marriage. Men have ridden by their doors and married doll-faced little fools of whom they tired before the honeymoon was over.

Women would not have been that idiotic. If these friends of mine had been men, and 10 times as homely as they are, but had possessed the intelligence and charm they have, women would have loved them and been proud and glad to have married them.

The less sense a woman has, the more she seems to appeal to men. The less she knows, the better they like her. The girls who talk baby talk and look at men with big, round calf-like eyes, and ask silly questions, have men flocking around them like flies about a honey pot, and can marry whom they choose.

But male idiots make no appeal to women. Women loathe ignorant men. Masculine morons do not fascinate them; they disguest them.

Of course, after a man gets married to a woman he would like to have all the good qualities of her sex thrown in, as a chromo goes with a package of tea. He wants a wife who has intelligence enough to run her end of the domestic partnership. He wants a wife who is an interesting companion and who is a thrifty manager, but the trouble is that he doesn't seek these attributes in the first place. They are not what attracted him to the woman, not what induced him to marry her.

That is why the women who are calculated to make the best wives seldom get the opportunity of being wives at all. That is why marriage is so often a failure and there are so many divorces.

And that is why, if convention ever permits women to select their mates, we shall have more suitable and happier marriages, for women have more sense about men than men have about women.

Gleanings From the Book of Life

BY CLARK KINNAIRD

SPEAKING OF HISTORY.

In one of the most readable of histories, The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, Gibbons opines that history is little more than the register of crimes, follies, and misfortunes of mankind.

To Goethe, the best that history gives us is the enthusiasm it arouses.

He saw the historian's duty as two-fold: first towards himself, then towards his readers.

"As regards himself, he must carefully examine into the things that COULD have happened; and for the reader's sake, he must determine what actually DID happen.

"His action towards himself is a matter between himself and his colleagues; but the public must not see into the secret that there is little which can be said to be positively determined."

Perhaps what Henry Ford intended to say was "All written history is bunk."

Goethe observed that it is seldom that any one of great age becomes historical to himself, and finds his contemporaries become historical to him, so he neither cares nor is able to argue with any one.

"On a closer examination of the matter," Goethe opined, "it will be found that the historian does not easily grasp history as something historical.

"In whatever age he may live, the historian always writes as though he himself had been present at the time of which he treats, instead of simply narrating the facts and movements of that time.

"Even the mere chronicler only points more or less to his own limitations, or the peculiarities of his own town or monastery or age."

He believed that an historic sense means a sense so cultured that, in valuing the desserts and merits of its own time, it takes account also of the past.

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE.

ON THE FAVOR LINE.

Lately I kept an appointment with the president of a big corporation—not a business appointment, by the way.

In the office were at least thirty men of varying appearance.

I took my place at the foot of the line, and was presently surprised to be told by a doorkeeper that the man in the office would see me right away.

Running a gauntlet of black looks from the gentlemen in the chairs, I went in.

"Why am I preferred?" I said, as I entered the inside office. "There seems to be quite a lot of people here before me."

"That's the favor line," said the president, grinning. "Those boys are here every morning. I try to see them all before I leave for lunch. But it's a waste of time. There's not one in the bunch that does not want some favor or other to which he has no right.

"Some of them are boyhood acquaintances who paid no attention to me till I got this job. Some are distant relatives who considered me beneath their notice till they found I might possibly be in a position to do something for them.

"The rest are just men who want something—not jobs, but loans, or recommendations to business men which will help them get other favors. They line up regularly every day. I hate to be rude to them, but sometimes they try my nerves.

"Men who want employment with this concern do not come here. We have a department which attends to that.

"But every loafer who is too weak or too lazy to help himself seems to think he has a perfect right to come in here and waste my time by asking for some favor which I could not grant if I wanted to.

"I'm new in this office, and I don't want to get a reputation for a grouch or a 'high hat,' so I speak to each of them in turn as I go out. But it's getting sort of tiresome, and I begin to think pretty soon I'll cut a back door in the office so I can escape them."

Every big business man has this sort of thing to deal with.

There are hundreds of people in the world who depend on others to do something for them, and who spend as much time seeking favors as they do trying to earn an honest living.

Some of them want loans for various wildcat schemes, some of them want help in getting business, some of them want introductions to important men who very properly refuse to see strangers who have no real reason to see them.

The world is filled with favor seekers, who never under any circumstances would do a favor for anyone else, but who seem to think they have a right to ask help of others.

The young man who finds that he has fallen into the way of frequenting the "favor line" will do well to get off it. It will only mark him as one of the sponges of society, a class which all industrious and honest men carefully avoid.

Let such men spend half the time in trying to help themselves that they do in trying to get others to help them, and there will be some hope for their future. The favor seeker seldom gets even the favor he seeks, and never counts for anything in the big game.

A SAILOR TO BLAME?

Believe He May Have Brought in Hoof Disease

HOUSTON, Texas, Oct. 12—No theory, however, fantastical it may seem, is being overlooked in the search for the origin of the foot and mouth disease in Harris county. Dr. W. E. Cotton, assistant superintendent of the bureau of animal industry experimental station at Betheseda, Md., who is here assisting in the eradication campaign, has been entrusted with the job of tracing the origin of the hoof and mouth disease.

One of the many theories now under investigation is that the germ may have been introduced by a deserting sailor of a tramp steamship at a southern port. Such steamships sometimes buy cattle in other countries and keep them alive on board until they are needed for food. An animal bought in Brazil, for instance, might reasonably be supposed to be infected as many of the cattle in South America are said to be. Slain on board the steamer it would not be improbable that germs would cling to the clothes of sailors. Sometimes sailors desert their ships, and what would be more reasonable to suppose, it was said in advancing the theory, the sailor would take to the highway, enroute to a city. And thus it is deduced, the deserting sailor might become an agent of destruction.

Texas S. M. U. Clash Feature Grid Card of Week

Contrary to Early Dope Longhorns Have Shade Over 1923 Champions

Baylor May Find Arkansas Tough Team to Beat—Owls Meet Real Test in Louisiana

By JINX TUCKER.
Special to The Record News.

WACO, Oct. 12.—While the most difficult football task of the week confronts the Baylor Bears who will be forced to face a strong team Tuesday, and then play their first conference game Saturday against the formidable Arkansas Razorbacks, the feature football clash of the week in the southwest will be the contest in Dallas between S. M. U. and Texas university. There the two undefeated conference elevens of 1923 will meet for the first time in years. In fact it will be the first time the two clubs have met on the gridiron since the Mustangs galloped among the conference favorites. When S. M. U. refused to play Texas a few years ago for the very good reason that the Longhorns steadfastly refused to a home-and-home agreement, the Ponies were doing only a jog trot in the annual conference race.

"Go get a reputation," or words to that effect were hurled at S. M. U. authorities when they first endeavored to prevail upon the Texas authorities to send their team to Dallas for a clash with S. M. U. Well, S. M. U. got its reputation, but if it had not been for the attitude on the part of the Texas team, which prevented a game between Texas and S. M. U. in Dallas, it is not likely that the Mustangs would now be enjoying a championship reputation. S. M. U. had a better record than the Longhorns last year, and under the circumstances deserved the title, but had the two clubs met on the gridiron, the Mustangs would hardly have been accorded an outside chance of victory.

Last Year's Championship Eleven Almost Intact and Ready to Face Stewart's Club

Now the S. M. U. team of 1923, almost intact, and with enough new material on hand to be greatly strengthened will meet a new Texas university team. In early September the dopesters checking over carefully the returning stars and the possibility of new stars, immediately predicted a victory for S. M. U. and with the dope at hand such seemed the logical prediction, but time does much to add to the discomfort of the dopester, and if there are any odds offered on Saturday's battle in Dallas, those odds will be on the Longhorns.

Last year S. M. U. emerging from the Austin college conflict in a manner most fortunate, outstepped themselves for the balance of the season. The Mustang coaches did more with their material than could hardly have been expected. They even surpassed their fondest hopes. This year with many veterans back the S. M. U. supporters expected a stronger club, but strange to say, the stars on hand have not played the game of which they are capable. They have not even reached their normal stride, and unless there is a great rejuvenation in their play, the champions of 1923, and the pre-season favorites of 1924 will be eliminated from the chase before the race has hardly begun.

If their showing in the practice bouts can be taken as any sort of indication the Ponies are back in their jog-trot, which will take them no-where in particular in competition with their speedier rivals. The only hope the Mustangs have of winning that game of Saturday against Texas will lie in their aerial attack. If they cannot gain over the Longhorns for the day through the air, then their only chance for victory will be a lucky break such as characterized their efforts against the Texas Aggies at College Station last October. And Lady Luck who stumped her toe spilling her entire bag of favors for the season of 1923 in the S. M. U. camp, may overlook the Ponies altogether this year.

When Baylor meets Arkansas in that conference game Saturday which will eliminate another strong contender from the race, the Bears are apt to see more forward passes than they have seen since last Thanksgiving day. Forward passing is Coach Schmidt's specialty, and the Razorbacks are just as apt to launch an attack by air from their own 10-yard line, as they are from mid-field. They scored two touchdowns on a Baylor team which was well versed in combatting aerial attacks two years ago. Last year Baylor got the jump on the Hogs, and they were defeated before they hardly knew that the game had begun. The team which gets the jump Saturday is apt to be the team to which the victory will go. The contest should prove one of the most spectacular tilts of the year.

John Heisman's Rice Owls Have First Real Test of Season With Louisiana

John Heisman's Rice Owls will face their real test of the young season this week when they take on Louisiana State university in Houston. Two rival coaches of old will match wits in this game. For years Mike Donohue, who has not done so well in bringing Louisiana State out of the wilderness of defeat, was head coach at Auburn. Some of the greatest teams Auburn ever knew were produced by this former Yale star, and when Donohue was producing many of his brilliant Auburn teams, Heisman was developing the great teams at Georgia Tech. At this institution Heisman climaxed his efforts with the nationally famous Golden Tornado club of 1917, the greatest team in the United States for that year. He produced several other brilliant elevens at Tech but none the equal of the club of 1917.

Playing on its home field the Owls are doped to win from the Louisiana State team, which has not had a capable eleven since 1921.

The T. C. U. club has a game scheduled with Simmons college this week, and may have some trouble in winning. Next week, however, the Christians will entertain the Rice Owls in Fort Worth in an important conference game. The Texas Aggies after their hard struggle with Sewanee yesterday, have a let-down game scheduled this week, playing the Arkansas Aggies at College Station Friday. Following this contest, however, the Farmers will take on such worthy contenders as S. M. U. and Baylor in rotation. These games will be followed with two more conference contests which should be a bit easier against T. C. U. and Rice.

The Oklahoma Aggies, who do not play enough conference games this year to be given championship consideration, will meet the Rolla School of Mines this week, and are not likely to encounter much trouble. The Stillwater team is now pointing for the game of Nov. 1 against Oklahoma university. Victories for the Oklahoma Aggies over the Sooners are about as scarce as Baylor supporters in Austin, but this year it seems that Johnny Maulbetsch has a brilliant opportunity to realize one of the chief ambitions of his coaching career. The game will be held in Stillwater and the Oklahoma Aggie team is unusually strong this season. That combination ought to assure victory in the annual scrap. The Oklahomans close their season with two conference contests, meeting Arkansas on Nov. 22 in Stillwater and S. M. U. in Dallas on Nov. 27. The Oklahoma Aggie team has no game scheduled with Rice, Baylor, Texas or Texas A. and M.

Odds Too Even For Jack to Risk Bout With Wills?

Kearns Fears Scrap With "Brown Panther," Avers McGann

COLOR LINE ALL BUNK

Negro Strong and Clever Enough to Win On Points

By SPARROW McGANN
Special Correspondent of the Record News
Copyright, 1924, by the Consolidated Press Association

NEW YORK, Oct. 12—The title of heavyweight champion of the world is worth, at a conservative estimate, a million odd dollars a year in cold cash. Hence the crown is a very valuable possession. Hence, also, when the title holder's management consents to let their men bring in a title bout, you can bet your bottom dollar that manager is pretty sure his meal ticket is going to win it.

When this assurance does not exist, well then, no fight. The writer has taken a long time to make up his mind, but having seen quite a little of Harry Wills lately, and having balanced all the facts relating to him and Jack Dempsey, he has come to the conclusion that the odds are too even for Kearns, Dempsey and company to risk a battle for the next year or so at least.

Looking back over the evidence there is no escaping the conclusion that Kearns upon more than one occasion has sidestepped the dark-skinned claimant at times when he could have picked up a great deal of money by meeting him.

Must Have 2 to 1 Odds

The color line is bunk. Kearns would hurry his champion into the ring against a plaid man if he thought this fight had at least a 2 to 1 chance of winning and the cash inducement was large enough.

The answer is that Wills is very strong, the strongest man in the prize ring, and combined with this strength is a vast amount of skill—skill sufficient in all probability to keep Dempsey pretty well tied up through 15 rounds. Even the champion, hard hitter though he unquestionably is, cannot knock out a man if he is unable to land a telling blow.

Probably Dempsey could stand anything Wills could send in, that is, he would not be knocked out; but he would stand the best chance in the world of being outpointed. And think of losing a job that pays between one and two millions a year on points.

Its enough to make the hardest boiled manager shiver.

As a matter of fact, Kearns, Dempsey & company are torn between gratitude and self interest. They would like to put Wills in line for a big piece of change, not so much because of Wills, as because of his manager, good old Paddy Mullins.

Mullins Saved Jack Once

Mullins has always liked both Kearns and Dempsey and they have for him that respect to which an honest manager like Mullins, a manager who is a square shooter every minute of the day, is entitled. But they have more than respect. And this is why:

Remember a few years ago when Dempsey was to meet a third rater over the four-round route in an exhibition bout for charity in the garden? Well it was rigged up that night to frame the champion. The angle was to have Joe Jeanette, a really clever heavyweight, in the ring in place of the third rater. Then just before Dempsey climbed into the ring, a fight was to start and Kearns was to be knocked out and lugged out of the building. This would leave Dempsey facing Jeanette and obliged to do his own talking and thinking. No fighter likes to do that. Probably he would have consented to meet Jeanette and might have been shown up in four rounds.

Anyway Paddy Mullins heard of the plan and that night when Kearns and Dempsey came to the ring, Paddy Mullins and a guard of able citizens surrounded them. Result was that the plot fizzled and Kearns was able to meet the tricky situation and withdraw his man.

So Dempsey and Kearns have not forgotten and are still grateful.

But after all a title is a title.

World Series Action—Safe and Bases Full!

Jack Bentley's batting was one of the features of the fifth game of the world's series, although he weakened in the box in the eighth inning and had to be yanked. The photo shows Bentley "beating the ball" to third in the third inning. The big pitcher had singled and moved up on Lindstrom's infield hit. Frisch hit to Bluege. Washington shortstop, and all hands were safe when Bluege's throw to third to head off Bentley was late. Bentley later died at home.

When Johnson's Hopes Were Dashed

The failure of Walter Johnson to hurl his way to victory in the first and fifth games of the world's series must be set down as the tragedy of the series. This photo shows Johnson "playing the game out" in an effort to turn defeat into victory in the fifth game. Bill Terry, Giant first baseman, had tripled in the fourth inning. Wilson, next man up, hit to Johnson and the king headed off Terry, bound for home. Third baseman Miller took Johnson's toss and tagged Terry out. In photo Johnson, at left, has just thrown the ball (seen in midair) over Terry's head to Miller, at third.

GIANTS BEAT WHITE SOX

Gotham Club Wins 13 to 5, in First Exhibition at Montreal.

MONTREAL, Oct. 12.—The New York Giants defeated the Chicago White Sox, 13 to 5 here today in the first exhibition of their winter tour, which, before it is concluded, will take them through the principal countries of Europe. Over six thousand persons saw the game. They will play here again tomorrow. Score by innings:

Leading Players Agree Change In Golf Ball Needed

New Spheroid to be Put Into Use During 1926 Competition

By RAY McCARTHY
Special Correspondent of The Record News.
By The Consolidated Press Association, Copyright 1924.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—According to the opinions of the leading professional and amateur golfers the promoters of golf balls and the officials of the United States Golf Association, who ought to know whereof they speak, the new standard golf ball 1.55 ounces in weight and 1.68 inches in size, will not have any great effect on the game. The new ball will be used in competitions in 1926 for the first time.

The reason for the change in the size and weight of the present standard ball needs clarifying apparently for all of the discussions the writer has heard among the rank and file the opinion is that the duffer will suffer as a result of the change. As a matter of fact, the new ball will help the poorer golf play a better game.

Present Ball O. K., But—

"The present ball is all right," said one U. S. G. A., official in discussing the matter with the writer at the National Amateur championship, "but too much leeway is allowed the manufacturer in the present standard. It is possible now to squeeze in some 25 or more yards into the flight of this ball and judging from the keenest of the competition among the various golf ball manufacturers, it is likely they would take advantage of this possibility. In that event no golf course could be found long enough for championship play.

Jim Barnes, one of the keenest thinking professionals in the game thinks the new ball will help all golfers.

"The present ball is too heavy for the average player," said Long Jim during a discussion of the matter among several pros one night on the veranda of the French Lick Springs hotel. "In order to drive this ball a long distance one must have a lot of muscular power and must know how to get the ball into the air quickly. You don't see many duffers getting a very high long flight with this ball because they don't know how to get the ball up. You check up what I am telling when the new ball comes out and you will find the poorer golfer is getting more distance than he is now. The new ball won't affect the good player much, because he has the strength and the timing needed to hit the present ball properly.

Larger in Size

"I agree with Jim," said Wee Freddy McLeod, another crafty linksman, who has won many matches because he out-thought his opponent. "To begin with, the new ball will be a little larger in the size and that certainly isn't going to hurt the duffer any. He'll be able to keep his eye on the ball better."

Walter Hagen and Gene Sarazene both agree with Barnes and McLeod that the new ball is a help rather than a handicap to the poorer golfer.

Secret Sessions For Coyotes Until Vernon Contest

Both Elevens to Present Fairly Intact Lineups Saturday

LIONS DOPED TO WIN

Light Scrimmage Billed For Early Part of Week Only

Both Coach Baggett's Vernon Lions and McCallum's Wichita Falls Coyotes will begin more or less the tapering off process today in preparation for the Vernon-Wichita Falls grid clash next Saturday at Spudder park in which the Lions rule the favorite to win.

Scrimmage the early portion of the week followed by fundamental and signal drill is on the cards for the Vernon eleven.

The Coyotes will train this afternoon at Spudder park behind closed gates. Secret practice will be in order today and the remainder of the week. The team possibly will run through a light scrimmage this afternoon for the last time before the struggle this week-end, said Coach McCallum Sunday evening.

The rest of the week will be spent in skull sessions, signal drills, and general conditioning exercises.

Barring accidents between now and the hour of the battle each school will place a club in the field handicapped but little by injuries. The Lions are intact but for a few minor scrapes and bumps. Several of the Coyotes are on the hospital list at present, but the eleven as a whole is expected to be in fairly shipshape condition by Saturday.

Particular care of the Coyote ends will be taken this week. For possibly the wing positions are the only department in which pre-game figures give the crimson and black team an edge over its opponents. Vernon boasts one of the best high school backfields in the state, in running, plunging, and punting attack. The two lines may be on a par, but dope at hand gives the Vernon forwards a slight shade over the Wichita Falls youths. But in fighting spirit shown so far this season it is doubtful if the Vernon line or any other Texas high school vanguard has the Coyotes bested.

PACIFIC COAST LEAGUE RESULTS

Sacramento 2-6, Oakland 8-2.
Salt Lake 7-5, Vernon 4-4.

Persistent Tom Loughran Meets Greb Again Tonight

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 12—Harry Greb, the "human windmill" from darkest Pittsburgh, who leads the middleweights, will clash with Tommy Loughran here, his home city, Monday night. The bout is a scheduled 10-rounder. This match is the headliner of week's heavy pugilistic action over the east.

Fought Four Times

Because of the fact that he always has been able to give Greb a hard fight, Loughran is much in demand as opponent for the middleweight king. This youngster is undoubtedly one of the most dangerous challengers for the title. He may outgrow the division before he reaches the top, but if he doesn't he is a splendid candidate to succeed Greb on the throne when the legs of the old timer get too wobbly to support him longer in successfully defending his laurels.

Four times Loughran has fought Greb and on one occasion he outpointed him. In 1922 they fought eight rounds and in 1923 they fought three times. On the first occasion they went 10 in Pittsburgh and Greb was given a newspaper verdict. On the second trip they went 15 in New York and the referee handed the verdict to Greb, which he won by a safe although not a wide margin. The third meeting was in Boston where they stepped 10 sessions and Loughran was returned winner, but there was no official decision and the title was not at stake as Loughran was a bit above the middleweight limits, as also was Greb, although the title would have been Loughran's had he gained a referee's verdict and been at the proper weight, no matter what Greb scaled.

Should Go Limit

Now for their fifth meeting, but this one also will be a non-decision affair and the only chance Loughran has to take the title is to score a knockout, which is a rather remote possibility. Loughran is a very fast, clever boxer and a good ring general, but he hasn't the punch necessary to beat many tough fighters. However, any fighter can be knocked out if hit in the proper location.

Greb wins his fights by his "windmill" method of administering punishment. There are a few knockouts sprinkled through his record but he is not a hard puncher. This is due chiefly to the fact that he is always dancing about, throwing his gloves in the direction of the opposition in whirlwind fashion and ever sets himself to put over a wallop with a sleep potion in it.

Undoubtedly the result of this fight will be a dispute as to who wins and another 15-round battle in New York during the winter season will decide the issue.

Comeback Talk By Beckett Fails To Thrill England

Even British Consider Joe Hopeless as Ring Hero

LONDON, Oct. 12—Joe Beckett, once king of the British heavyweight boxers, with the privilege that goes with the title of gracefully falling on his knees before foreign ring artists, chiefly one George Carpentier from gay Paree, wants to "come back."

Not that Joe was ever "there" as a boxer, according to the view of boxing experts, but Joe's proud boast is: "Didn't I defeat all the British heavyweights and retire with the title?

Youngster Expected Soon

Joe's chief incentive for wanting to re-enter the ring is that he is expecting shortly to become a father.

Joe believes he has found the secret of success—or rather the cause of his failure as a boxer.

"In my eagerness I always trained too fine and became stale," he claims. "For the Carpentier affair (Joe doesn't call it a fight) I started vigorous training seven weeks ahead of time and after three weeks was stale. Instead of taking a rest I was overeager and went on with my work, and this was the cause of my downfall. I am quite candid about it and a wiser man for my experience."

Too Modest

Not only that, but Beckett thinks he didn't make enough noise for himself when he was in the "game."

"A successful champion must be a big noise, otherwise nobody believes he is a champion," claims Joe. "While I was champion of England I did not think it wise to blow my own trumpet, and personally I don't think that is an Englishman's way. Boxers of other nationalities are much more successful on that score."

Despite Joe's widely heralded desire to "come back," the promoters are not falling over themselves to reach the door of his seaside cottage at Worthing. One optimistic promoter did make an offer of $1,000 for Beckett's next fight. For his last fiasco with Carpentier, Beckett received something like $25,000. He doesn't think a former champion should be forced to start at the bottom again. Promoters and the public don't relish the idea of Joe starting at the top. Hence he may not start.

NEW RING CHALLENGER

Mike Ballerino to Battle Kid Sullivan this Week.

Mike Ballerino, the Italian who is to meet Kid Sullivan for the junior lightweight crown this week, is a newcomer in the boxing game. He has had enough fights to put him up in the challenging class, but unless he shows more than he has shown in his previous starts he cannot be expected to lift the crown from Sullivan, who took it from the brow of Johnny Dundee, the little "scotch-wop" who has fought more battles than any other man active in the ring today.

Five Major Grid Classics Slated For This Week

Notre Dame-Army Tilt And Yale-Dartmouth Head Big List

NEW YORK, Oct. 12. — Major eastern football elevens dazed by the surprise of Saturday's game will seek to retrieve in contests this week when some of the classics of the season will be presented.

Heading the list is the annual inter-sectional premier between Army and Notre Dame which will be played this year at the Polo Grounds. Yale and Dartmouth meet at New Haven. Princeton and Navy clash at Princeton. Pennsylvania state goes to Atlanta for an intersectional game with Georgia Tech, and Colgate journeys to Nebraska to meet the Corn Huskers.

FENCING AT TEXAS U.

Women Athletes Take Up Foils For Exercise

AUSTIN, Oct. 12.—Fencing is offered in the University of Texas this year as a physical activity for women, according to Miss Anna Hiss, director of physical training for women. Women students, excepting freshmen, will be given credit for this work.

Fencing is a new activity started last year by a group of boys. During the summer several women students took fencing but this year is the first time that the women have entered the sport for credit.

STEER TRACK STOCK SOARS

Return of Jackson to Fold Augurs Third Varsity Championship

AUSTIN, Oct. 12. — Return to school of Aubrey Jackson of Hillsboro, high point man in track and field athletics in 1924, is considered to have materially enhanced the chances of Texas university to win its third consecutive southwestern conference championship in track and field by winning the 1925 title. Jackson married this past summer, and Coach Clyde Littlefield had just about decided that he would have to develop several men to take the place of the versatile star, when the Hillsboro athlete returned Monday, Oct 6, to the university.

For the season of 1924 Jackson, representing Texas university for the first time, was easily the most versatile track and field athlete in the south. Jackson showed the greatest advantage in the broad jump, breaking the southwestern conference record for this event. He was a star, too, in the 100 and 220 yard dashes, and in the 220 yard low hurdles. Besides breaking the conference record in the broad jump Jackson, last spring, won the conference championship in the low hurdles.

M'GILL AFTER LEWIS AGAIN

Nebraska Grappler Wants to Have Head Lock Barred

Pat McGill, one of Nebraska's most famous grapplers, is now angling for another match with Champion Ed "Strangler" Lewis. Pat has failed in other attempts to lift the crown from Lewis' head and always it has been the headlock that has caused him to go down in defeat.

McGill now wants a match with the headlock barred. In a letter to Gabe Kaufman McGill asks the promoter to get him the match. Kaufman, however, must wait for Billy Sandow, Lewis' manager, before he can move.

EPINARD AND VICTOR REST

Match Race Between French Horse and Sarazen Proposed

LATONIA, Ky., Oct. 12.—Sarazen, the victor, and Epinard the vanquished, rested serenely today in the surroundings of their memorable battle in the international mile and a quarter race here yesterday, in which all existing Kentucky records for the distance were smashed before the greatest crowd that ever went through the turnstyles at Latonia.

Epinard probably will be shipped to Maryland this week for a race there next Saturday although nothing definite could be learned otday. A match race between Sarazen and Epinard also was proposed during the coming Churchill Downs meeting, but whether Mrs. Vanderbilt will consent to risk the reputation of her horse was not known.

Race writers who "covered" the last of the international series in the room in which Pierre Wertheimer's horse started were of the opinion that Epinard was given the best ride of his three American starts by Jockey Everett Haynes.

ANDY SMITH WATCHES ALL

California Coach Fails to Overlook Any One on Squad

BERKELEY, Calif., Oct. 12.—How does Andy Smith pick his men?

Owing ot the smooth working of the Smith system at California, Andy usually has a pretty good line on his football prospects long before a season starts.

The great majority of the men on a Blue and Gold varsity eleven have played freshmen football at California. And it is during this service in the Freshman ranks that the assistant coaches of Andy Smith gather information, which is passed on to their chief. And, of course, Andy himself keeps more than a weather eye on his cub squad.

Promotion to the varsity doesn't mean that a player is going to remain there indefinitely. Not by a long shot. The man who holds a job on Andy's front rank eleven must constantly prove that he is worthy of the confidence placed in him.

So far as the "goofy" are concerned Andy not only receives reports from the reserve team coaches on the progress of promising players in the "goof" ranks, but he also watches them himself when the lowly ones scrimmage against the varsity.

MAD PLAY A FAVORITE

Brother of Last Year's Winner Duped to Win at Latonia

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—It is within the limits of possibility that the sixth Latonia championship will be won by an own brother of the winner of the first. Mad Hatter, son of Fair Play and Madcap won the first under the silks of Samuel C. Hildreth. Mad Play is another son of Fair Play and Madcap that resembles Mad Hatter in nothing barring speed and ability to carry on indefinitely looks as good, probably, as any colt or filly eligible to start in the sixth, which will be run next Saturday, on his performance of last Saturday at Jamaica in a renewal of the Continental handicap.

GIBBONS FIGHTS BURKE

Tommy Gibbons, who still entertains an idea he will again be given a bout with Jack Dempsey in a year or so, meets Martin Burke in New Orleans this week. Gibbons should beat Burke. If he ever hopes to be punched about the ring by Dempsey again it will be necessary that he win in an impressive manner from men like the New Orleans heavyweight.

ST. PAUL EVENS SERIES

Saints Broken Greene and Ogden for 3to 2 Victory

ST. PAUL, Oct. 12.—Excellent pitching by Fittery and Markle combined with opportune hits by their team mates, gave St. Paul its second straight victory over Baltimore here today, squaring the game count in the junior world's series at four all.

Taking the lead in the first inning against the aged ball hurling of Lefty Groves, the Saints were never headed, winning 3 to 1 and carrying the series to the sixth game which will decide the minor league championship here tomorrow. Score:

LEGAL NOTICE.

SHERIFF'S SALE

THE STATE OF TEXAS,
County of Wichita.

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of a certain order of sale issued out of the honorable 89th district court of Wichita county, of the 7th day of October 1924, by A. F. Kerr, clerk of said district court, for the sum of ten hundred sixty-five and 78-100 (1,065.78) dollars and costs of suit, under a judgment, in favor of C. O. Roberts in a certain cause in said court, No. 15838-C and styled C. O. Roberts vs. C. V. Derden and H. P. Mansfield, placed in my hands for service, I, Frank Morgan, as constable precinct No. 1, Wichita county, Texas, did, on the 7th day of October 1924, levy on certain real estate, situated in Wichita county, Texas, described as follows, to wit: The oil and gas leasehold estate and the personal property thereon situated and used in connection therewith, covering the north 20 acres of the southeast 1-4 of the northwest 1-4 of section 12, H. & T. C. R. R. Co. survey, abstract 473, Wichita county, Texas one-third interest in and to said property being levied upon as the property of H. P. Mansfield and two-thirds interest in and to said property being levied upon as the property of C. V. Derden and that on the first Tuesday in November 1924, the same being the 4th day of said month, at the court house door, of Wichita county, in the city of Wichita Falls, Texas, between the hours of 10 a. m. and 4 p. m. by virtue of said levy and said order of sale, I will sell said above described real estate at public vendue, for cash, to the highest bidder, as the property of said H. P. Mansfield and C. V. Derden as aforesaid.

And in compliance with law, I give this notice by publication, in the English language, once a week for three consecutive weeks immediately preceding said day of sale, in the Wichita Falls Record News, a newspaper published in Wichita county.

Witness my hand, this 8th day of October 1924.

FRANK MORGAN,
Constable Wichita county, Texas, preinct No. 1.

Lord's Prayer Is Subject of Kay's Bible Class Talk

He Goes Into Detail On Meaning and Portent It Conveys

435 PERSONS PRESENT

Judge Urges Close And Constant Study Of Great Theme

The Lord's prayer was the subject taken up Sunday by Judge John C. Kay in his Bible class talk at the Strand theatre. Four hundred and thirty-five men were present to hear the address, which was as follows:

The lesson this morning is about the Lord's Prayer. The Savior uttered this prayer not for Himself, but for you and me, because, in this prayer there is a confession of sin. There is no record that the Savior ever made a confession of sin.

We say we know the Lord's Prayer, all of us. But, do any of us know it? Do we know much about any part of it? I sometimes think not.

It starts off, "Our Father." Now, let us take that word "our." It is a possessive pronoun. What do we mean when we say our house; our money, our Junior college, our city, our children? You men it, then. Not somebody else's, but mine! Mine! Now, is that the way you feel about the Lord?

Latin Is Different

Now, the English translation is not so good. It says, "Our Father," but the Latins put the Father first and said "Pater Noster"—Father ours.

We come to the second word of it, "Father." Nobody knows from how far back that word came. It is common to nearly all languages. The "Pater" of the Latins. The "Padre" of the Spanish. The "Vater" of the Germans, and all the way back to the snowy mountains of India, from whence the word came. It is the same word in each and all the languages. One of the first words that humanity ever lisped, "Father." Now, that word does not mean some great heavenly despot sitting beyond the stars, unapproached and unappoachable, but, it means kinship. Do you feel close enough to the Lord that you were of kin to Him? Do you feel that way about it? This prayer is packed with meaning, from beginning to end, but there is no word in it packed with more meaning than that word "Father."

Owing to the smooth working of the "Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name." There is no room in the temple, nor in the outer courts, no room in front of the gates, no room in the highway, for the profane man. Think about that, you men that are sometimes given to cut loose with a little careless, thoughtless profanity, that His name is to be hallowed, kept pure, not branded about as a byword, but, holy! Holy!

"Thy Kingdom come." Almost everybody in this house has prayed that prayer, for His kingdom to come. What did you do when you wanted an irrigation district out here? What did we do when we wanted 50,000 people? What did we do when we wanted a school house? What did we do, some of us, when we ran for office? We set about to answer our own wants. How do you set about to answer your own prayer in "Thy kingdom come?" Because—Men, I am saying to you this morning that at least that part of this prayer depends in part upon human work and human agency. Do you want the kingdom to come? Do you? If you do, you live like you did.

"Thy will be done." Not much room there for the hardheaded fellow like I am, is there? Even the Master, himself, passing through His greatest Gethsemane said: "Not my will, but thine be done." Do you feel that way about it?

Can you face suffering and disaster and wrong and still say, "Thy will be done?" Let me tell you men something. I am trying to do something here this morning. I am trying to fix you so you will never make this prayer carelessly, indifferently, ceremoniously, formally. I want to fix you, if I can, in my weak way, so that you will be afraid to make this prayer carelessly. A Christian cannot make this prayer carelessly. Even a gentleman could not do it.

Do It Right Here

Thy will be done—where? Up there where the morning stars are singing together? Up there where the planets are tracing out the great circles? No! On earth. Right here among the Smiths, and Browns, and Jones, and Robinsons. Right here on earth! That's where men live. And, how is it to be done? As it is in heaven

Then we come to "Forgive us our debts." There are some queer things in the Bible about that. There are some hard things about that. There is a phrase in there saying: "You come to the altar with a gift for God, you are going to give something now to heaven and you brought it to the church to give it to heaven, and will lay it on that altar; if there is a man in town that has got anything against you, do not lay your gift on the altar and do not offer it to God if you hate somebody. That is a terrible thing to think about. Such things as that in the Bible frighten me. I do not know whether they do you, but they do me, so He says—what? "Forgive our trespasses." Just forgive them? No! There is a condition added to it, and there a man, for the first and last time in his history is invited to be equal to God himself. Forgive my sins even as I rise to the dignity of God and forgive other men. Now, that is the biggest thing you will ever be called on to do. Let me tell you something right there. Hating somebody is a habit. To my mind, it is much worse than getting drunk, infinitely more dangerous, that it will destroy your soul quicker than strong drink, and I am not holding any brief for strong drink here, either.

So remember, if you would be forgiven, you must first forgive other men.

"Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil." There is a lot of us fellows that do not have to be led. You know, sometimes I think, with a lot of us fellows, the devil just sort of sets us like one of those eight-day clocks, and we go along and run it, without any supervision on his part at all. He just trusts us to go on and do about what a shabby fellow would do. It looks that way sometimes to me. I may do wrong without any [illegible] from anywhere that I am [illegible] of. You know, I do not know how much [illegible] is in the devil. I do not understand that, but one thing I do know, there is a lot of it in me. Now, are you going to pray, "Lead us not into temptation," and then just take a jump and just jump into it voluntarily yourself? Are you going to do that?

So, we see at last that there is hardly a phrase in this prayer that does not lay open a weakness of humanity like a surgeon's knife, and there is hardly a phrase in it that a man can repeat honestly and fairly, without first preparing himself in sobriety, and in decency, and in righteousness, and in love for his fellowmen.

NO FUNERAL PLANS

Body of Harold Lovet May Be Buried Next Tuesday.

No funeral arrangements have been made as yet for Harold Lovet, 16, who was killed early Saturday night when he was run over by a truck on a down-town street and his skull crushed.

The body is being held by the Merkle Undertaking company pending the arrival of a sister from Dodge City, Kansas. Burial will probably take place Tuesday it was stated yesterday.

MANCHURIANS VICTORIOUS

They Capture Chinwangtao, Annihilate Enemy.

By The Associated Press.

DARIEN, Manchuria, Oct. 12.—The Manchurian forces marching on Pekin have captured Chinwangtao, a gulf town near the Manchurian border of Chihli province, an aerial bombardment assisting the troops, according to an unconfirmed report.

The first Fengtien (Manchurian) army, led personally by General Han Lin-Chun, captured a corner of the Chihli fortifications after four hours of assault. Hand grenades were used effectively. Few of the shock troops survived, subterranean mines swallowing whole groups.

WANTS TO RETAIN BUTLER

Philly Mayor Will Seek to Help the General.

By The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 12—Mayor W. Freeland Kendrick announced tonight that prior to the expiration of General Smedley D. Butler's leave of absence from the Marine corps, he will make personal application to President Coolidge to have the general remain in this city as director of public safety.

"General Butler and I have disagreed on some things," said the mayor, "but these differences have been settled and I want General Butler to continue in his present position."

BRYAN TO TRAVEL.

Will Stay on Road Until Curtain Falls on Campaign.

By The Associated Press.

BRYAN TRAIN, ENROUTE TO LINCOLN, NEBR., NORTON, Kan., Oct. 12.—Returning to Lincoln tonight after having made twenty-four campaign speeches during a trip into Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas and Colorado, Governor Bryan, democratic candidate for vice-president, announced he was planning an itinerary that would consume his time from now until the curtain fell Tuesday, November 4. After spending tomorrow at the Nebraska state capitol, looking after state duties, Governor Bryan will leave probably Tuesday on the final two weeks' swing, making day and night speeches in states east and north of his home state and winding up the last three campaign days in November with a flying spin around Nebraska.

WANTS A RECORD TRIP.

Eckener Determined to Put ZR-3 Across by Tuesday.

By The Associated Press

FRIEDERICHSHAFEN, Oct. 12—Dr. Eckener, in command of the ZR-3 has determined to make a record flight not only because of pride in the dirigible constructed under his supervision, but also from the desire to have the trans-Atlantic flight serve as a favorable influence for the German reconstruction loan, which will be placed on the market for popular subscription just about the time the ZR-3 reaches the American coast.

If the German commander is able to maintain the speed with which the airship traversed France today he should reach Lakehurst, N. J., Tuesday afternoon. This would allow the Zeppelin about 60 hours sailing time.

Leather Medal As Biggest Liar Is Given Bootlegger

Judge Tells Jury It Will Have to Choose In Rum Trial at Montreal

TESTIMONY IS MIXED

And as a Result a Not Guilty Verdict Is Returned

MONTREAL, Oct. 12.—Expert testimony by professional bootleggers like the testimony of alienists at a millionaire's murder trial, frequently conflicts. To that fact perhaps more than any other, Captain Samuel Forde owes his acquittal on a charge of piracy from a British ship on the high seas.

One of the "frankest" exposures of the rum running exploits of ships off Long Island and the Connecticut coast that ever was made in any court, was unveiled during Capt. Forde's trial. Confessed bootleggers by the dozen came on from New York and testified. There were bootlegger witnesses for the prosecution and bootlegger witnesses for the defense just as there are alienists on both sides in an expensive murder case. In the end the judge told the jurors there evidently had been perjury on one side or the other and that it was up to them to decide which bootleggers were the biggest liars. The jury gave the leather medal to the prosecution's array.

Got Ship in Bermuda

The piracy charge arose out of the voyage of the steamer Lutzen, a ship which had belonged to the French government during the war and which had been acquired at Bermuda by the Sunrise Steamship company, of which Meyer Rosenthal of New York, was president, and which Norman Wielman of Montreal and Alick Adelman of New York were interested. The boat had never been registered since the war and Capt. Forde was engaged to make a trip for her and obtain British registry. He did so and the boat was used in running liquor from St. Pierre Miquet on to rum row.

On one of its trips, the super-cargo was Max Jerome Phaff, whose arrest on a charge of piracy connected with a French vessel off rum row, and trial in Brest, France, caused a sensation in bootlegging circles because of his theatened exposure of the men higher up in the game of beating the Volstead act.

Owners in Dispute

In October while the Lutzen was at St. Johns, N. B., Forde and the owners had a dispute, and Captain Plessner, known in New York according to one witness, as "one round Johnson" was placed in command. Evidence was given, however, that he "got drunker and drunker day by day" and the mate took charge. On the Lutzen were two super cargoes, J. M. Isaacs, a Winnipeg lawyer who was looking after the interests of the Adelmans and Jack Norris of New York.

When the vessel arrived off rum row, according to the story of the super cargo, and three of the crew held up the super cargoes, forced them into the chain locker and kept them prisoners. In the early hours of the morning, Captain Forde came aboard and took command of the ship. Its color and name were changed and he proceeded to sell the liquor over the side to visiting speed boats at $15 a case, until he had disposed of 4,300 cases.

Forde declared that when a row developed between the owners at St. John, N. B., over a division of profits the crew was paid off with the exception of himself and he stayed in New York. Then they were rounded up and sailed for Mantauk Point, off Long Island, but he was not notified.

Dealy Honored As He Completes 50-Year Service

By The Associated Press

DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 12.—George Bannerman Dealy, president and general manager of A. H. Belo and Co., publishers of the Dallas Morning News, The Dallas Journal, the Semi-Weekly Farm News and founders and for many years publishers of the Galveston News was honor guest Sunday afternoon at a dinner given by employes of the Belo papers celebrating his fiftieth year of service with the institution.

Mr. Dealy began work on the old Galveston News on October 12, 1874, when a lad of 14. He was employed in the mailing room, then as an office boy, and rose through several positions to that of directing head of the corporation. His employment during the half century has been continuous.

Given Gold Medal

At Sunday's banquet he was presented with a gold medal by Mrs. Helen Ponder Belo and Mrs. J. B. Peabody, principal stockholders of A. H. Belo and Co., while employes of the organization gave him a watch, one of 500 made by a nationally known watch company in celebration of its own fiftieth anniversary.

Speakers included Tom Finley Jr., E. B. Doran, W. H. Benners, John F. Lubben, Dewitt McMurray, and Hilton Greer, all executives in the Belo organization. Mr. Dealy told of some of the unusual things that happened in journalism of bygone days. More than 300 employes attended the dinner.

ED IS SUED AGAIN

Mr. Gallagher in Court Because He Got The Cash.

By The Associated Press.

DETROIT, Oct. 12.—Edgar Gallagher of the team of Gallagher and Shean comedians playing here this week is being sued by Robert Landry, Montreal millionaire, for $25,000, according to a story appearing in the Detroit Free Press this morning.

"Landry says he would have gotten a $25,000 split of Yvonne Lussier's salary because he 'put her over' in the first place if I hadn't stepped in and taken her away from him," the paper quotes Mr. Gallagher as saying.

Yvonne is a member of Gallagher's company.

LAD KILLED IN WRECK

Auto Turns Over at Tulsa; Oil Man's Son Dies.

By The Associated Press

TULSA, Okla., Oct. 12. — Bobby Hughes, four year old son of R. H. Hughes, prominent oil man, was instantly killed and his grandmother, Mrs. Alice Sutherland, 64, Austin, Minn., was seriously injured in an automobile accident here today.

The car in which Mr. and Mrs. Hughes, the three Hughes children and Mrs. Hughes' mother were riding, was struck by a machine driven by Wane L. Dickey former county treasurer. The Hughes car was knocked across the street and turned over twice. Dickey was arrested and is being held on a charge of reckless driving.

TIT FOR TAT HERE

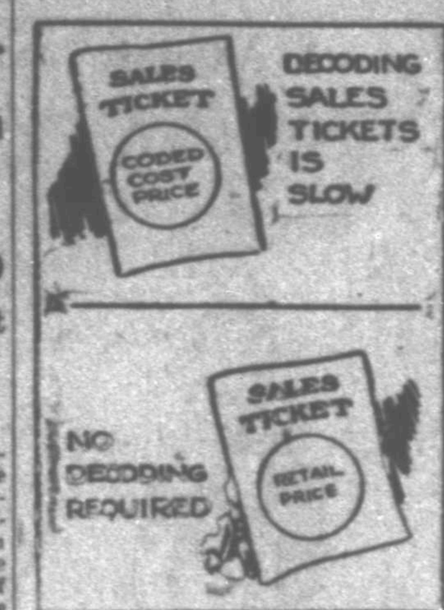

German Crown Prince and Ludendorff at Outs.

BERLIN, Oct. 12.—Former Crown Prince Rupprecht, who, though not sitting on the throne, is popularly called "king" by the Bavarians, has refused to submit himself to a court of honor of the Prussian general staff. This is the latest development in the merry war between Prince Rupprecht and General Ludendorff. Prince Rupprecht wrote a bitter letter to General Hindenburg making various charges against General Ludendorff after the latter had declared that the prince caused dictator Von Kahr to break his word last November in the Hitler-Ludendorff revolution. Von Kahr had promised to support the revolt but in a few hours turned against it.

General Ludendorff preferred charges against the "king" of Bavaria before a court of honor of Prussian generals. The prince answered with charges against General Ludendorff before a Bavarian military court of honor. Prince Rupprecht refused to answer the charges before the Prussians and General Ludendorff refused to answer before the Bavarian [illegible]

MONEY AT WORK

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.

Difficulty in understanding percentages is often due to the fact that cost instead of sales is used as a base.

The modern practice is to compute all percentages of expenses, cost, margins, and profits on the basis of sales. The cost price has fallen into discard for this use, yet many persist in still using it, with the result that the figures so derived cannot be compared with other figures. This greatly lessens their value.

To illustrate the difference, suppose the sales for 1923 in a certain grocery store, were $100,000 and the goods which had been sold had cost $80,000. The wages of the sales force had amounted to $8,000. If the expense of the sales force is computed on the basis of sales it amounts to 8 per cent, but if computed on the basis of the cost of goods sold it amount to 10 per cent. The first percentage may be used for comparison with published figures—the second can not.

Two Ways Out Of Mock Marriages; Both Get Results

One Illinois Pair Wait For Altar; Other For Gallows

DEATH VS. DIVORCE

Professor's Wife to Wed Her Lover After She Is Free Again

CHICAGO, Oct. 12.—Lost in the wide world, at least to the public, Mrs. Shirley Hall-Quest and Fred W. Hart are somewhere waiting today for the time when their union of the past year can be sanctioned by law. Their unconventional love story is one of the most romantic that has come to light in many a day.

Nobody knows where to find them. If their immediate friends and relatives have information, they are guarding it as a detective does the clew to a crime.

Prof. Starts It.

When Prof. Alfred Lawrence Hall-Quest, head of extension work at the University of Pittsburgh, quietly and, as he thought, secretry secured a divorce from his brilliant and beautiful wife here two days ago, he unwittingly turned the spotlight of publicity on the lovers

They had eloped to Chicago and were living in the guise of a staid married couple in a fashionable hotel in Evanston. At once they checked out, boarded a train apparently bound for Minnesota and disappeared. On next Monday Mrs. Hart's divorce suit will be heard in Cincinnati, where she is living. Should the decree be granted, there will be no obstacle to the marriage of the runaway pair.

Two Ways Out.

Apparently there are two ways of ridding one's self of a legal mate in order to wed a "perfect lover."

Killing the unfortunate one who is not wanted—the primitive way that can end only is prosecution and probably execution.

Or quietly slipping off with the chosen love partner until the generous lawful mate can secure legal dissolution of the offending bond—which is the civilized way that appeals to cultured minds.

The Rev. Lawrence M. Hight, of Ina, Ills., "poisoning parson," and Elsie Sweetin chose the former and are now awaiting trial on charges of double murder. They killed their life partners by slow poison in order to marry each other.

Wait for Time to Pass.

Shirley Hall-Quest and Fred Hart chose the latter. They are waiting, too, but only for time to pass.

Hight and Mrs. Sweetin will never marry on this earth. The arm of the law brought mutual regrets and shattered the love dream and original hope for marriage, the dream that turned them into murderers.

They will travel the rest of the road alone—a road strewn with such unpleasant things as iron bars, courts of justice, jury verdicts, and, it may be, the gallows. Or, in case they go free, which is not likely, they will set their feet on separate highways because, they declare, there is no more love.

But Hart and Mrs. Hall-Quest have almost immediate marriage to look forward to. Unless some unforeseen obstruction jams the wheel of circumstances, all they have to do is to be patient for a few days. And they will be joined in wedlock and live like ordinary married people—if they can.

New York Girls Taught to Avoid Public Flirting

Delinquency Increase Is Laid at Door of Strange Auto Parties

By JESSE HENDERSON
Special Correspondent.

Copyright, 1924, by the Consolidated Press Association.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—"Don't stop, look or listen," is the newest instruction to the public schools of this city. It is all on account of an old problem which of late has suddenly become acute hereabouts. It is the problem of the male flirt; in this instance of the male motor flirt.

Flirting—to put it mildly, has become so much of a problem around New York these days; and there have been, this autumn, so many disastrous instances of school girls and school boys lured into cars by men of the Leopold and Loeb type that anti-flirting courses have been introduced in some of the school buildings. The only reason why this instruction is not being given in all the schools seems to be that the thing was instituted in Flushing—a suburban section of New York City—and is being tried out there before spreading to schools in more crowded sections. Oddly enough, the child in a rather suburban section appears to be in more danger from the motor flirt than the child in the crowded streets.

Teachers Teach It.

"Teachers in the public schools are supposed to instruct their pupils once a week in current events, safety and the like topics," said Dr. George J. Ryan, superintendent of New York schools, when he was asked about the addition to the curriculum.

"Instructing the children not to talk to strangers, not to accept candy from them, and never to accept a ride from them, seems to me highly important at this time. Such instruction was not ordered from headquarters; it is however, being done on the teachers' own initiative as part of the current events and safety courses and it is altogether an excellent idea."

Lured by Motorists.

As it happens, Dr. Ryan lives in Flushing. "In that section," he added, "we have had during the past few months a number of cases of young people being lured into danger by motorists. Instructions against accepting any advances from strangers is something which the public school teachers have hitherto left to the parents. But with so much evil of this sort abroad just now, it is instruction which the children not only cannot hear too often but need to hear both at home and in the class room. It is a new feature of the local school's course, but an important one."

Because of its numerous tree-lined parks and its many miles of roads bordered by fields or large estates, Flushing has been the favorite hunting ground this season of the male flirt. Two youths have just been sentenced to from 30 to 60 years in Sing Sing for holding up and abducting two young women on Flushing Roads last summer.

STILL WAIT FOR MEDALS

American Women and Men Delayed By Breakdown in Mint

By The Associated Press.

PARIS.—Many American men and women who were engaged in welfare work in France during and after the war still are waiting for the medals awarded them by the French government for services rendered the French people and the French soldiers.

The reason for the delay in presenting the medals is not forgetfulness on the part of the government, but is due to the sluggishness of the service at the mint, where in addition to coining money, medals are struck.

The mint is always years behind in its work. It has not yet produced the medal commemorating the election of M. Millerand as president of the republic.

Such medals always are struck and given to the senators and members of the chamber of deputies who participate in presidential elections. The Millerand medals are promised during the coming session of parliament. No appropriation has been made as yet for a medal to commemorate the election of President Doumergue, parliament not having provided for the unforseen eventuality of three presidents being elected inside of five years.

Lord's Prayer Is Subject of Kay's Bible Class Talk

He Goes Into Detail On Meaning and Portent It Conveys

435 PERSONS PRESENT

Judge Urges Close And Constant Study Of Great Theme

The Lord's prayer was the subject taken up Sunday by Judge John C. Kay in his Bible class talk at the Strand theatre. Four hundred and thirty-five men were present to hear the address, which was as follows:

The lesson this morning is about the Lord's Prayer. The Savior uttered this prayer not for Himself, but for you and me, because, in this prayer there is a confession of sin. There is no record that the Savior ever made a confession of sin.

We say we know the Lord's Prayer, all of us. But, do any of us know it? Do we know much about any part of it? I sometimes think not.

It starts off, "Our Father." Now, let us take that word "our." It is a possesive pronoun. What do we mean when we say our house; our money, our Junior college, our city, our children? You men it, then. Not somebody else's, but mine! Mine! Now, is that the way you feel about the Lord?

Latin Is Different

Now, the English translation is not so good. It says, "Our Father," but the Latins put the Father first and said "Pater Noster"—Father ours.

We come to the second word of it, "Father." Nobody knows from how far back that word came. It is common to nearly all languages. The "Pater" of the Latins. The "Padre" of the Spanish. The "Vater" of the Germans, and all the way back to the snowy mountains of India, from whence the word came. It is the same word in each and all the languages. One of the first words that humanity ever lisped, "Father." Now, that word does not mean some great heavenly despot sitting beyond the stars, unapproached and unapproachable, but, it means kinship. Do you feel close enough to the Lord that you were of kin to Him? Do you feel that way about it? This prayer is packed with meaning, from beginning to end, but there is no word in it packed with more meaning than that word "Father."

Owing to the smooth working of the "Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name." There is no room in the temple, nor in the outer courts, no room in front of the gates, no room in the highway, for the profane man. Think about that, you men that are sometimes given to cut loose with a little careless, thoughtless profanity, that His name is to be hallowed, kept pure, not branded about as a hyword, but, holy! Holy!

"Thy Kingdom come." Almost everybody in this house has prayed that prayer, for His kingdom to come. What did you do when you wanted an irrigation district out here? What did we do when we wanted 50,000 people? What did we do when we wanted a school house? What did we do, some of us, when we ran for office? We set about to answer our own wants. How do you set about to answer your own prayer in "Thy kingdom come?" Because—Men, I am saying to you this morning that at least that part of this prayer depends in part upon human work and human agency. Do you want the kingdom to come? Do you? If you do, you live like you did.

"Thy will be done." Not much room there for the hardheaded fellow like I am, in there? Even the Master, himself, passing through His greatest Gethsemane said: "Not my will, but thine be done." Do you feel that way about it?

Can you face suffering and disaster and wrong and still say, "Thy will be done?" Let me tell you one thing. I am trying to do something here this morning. I am trying to fix you so you will never make this prayer carelessly, indifferently, ceremoniously, formally. I want to fix you, if I can, in my weak way, so that you will be afraid to make this prayer carelessly. A Christian cannot make this prayer carelessly. Even a gentleman could not do it.

Do It Right Here

Thy will be done—where? Up there where the morning stars are singing together? Up there where the planets are tracing out the great circles? No! On earth. Right here among the Smiths, and Browns, and Jones, and Robinsons. Right here on earth! That's where men live. And, how is it to be done? As it is in heaven.

Then we come to "Forgive us our debts." There are some queer things in the Bible about that. There are some hard things about that. There is a phrase in there saying: "You come to the altar with a gift for God, you are going to give something new to heaven and you brought it to the church to give it to heaven, and will lay it on that altar; if there is a man in town that has got anything against you, do not lay your gift on the altar and do not offer it to God if you hate somebody. That is a terrible thing to think about. Such things as that in the Bible frighten me. I do not know whether they do you, but they do me. So He says—what? "Forgive our trespasses." Just forgive them? No! There is a condition added to it, and there a man, for the first and last time in his history is invited to be equal to God himself. Forgive my sins even as I rise to the dignity of God and forgive other men. Now, that is the biggest thing you will ever be called on to do. Let me tell you something right there. Hating somebody is a habit. To my mind, it is much worse than getting drunk, infinitely more dangerous, that it will destroy your soul quicker than strong drink, and I am not holding any brief for strong drink here, either.

Be remember, if you would be forgiven, you must first forgive other men.

"Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil." There is a lot of us fellows that do not have to be led. You know, sometimes I think, with a lot of us fellows, the devil just sort of sets us like run of these eight-day clocks, and we go along and run it, without any supervision on his part at all. He just trusts us to go on and do about what a shabby fellow would do. It looks that way sometimes to me. I may do wrong without any prompting from anywhere that I am conscious of. You know, I do not know how much interests is in the devil, I do not understand that, but one thing I do know, there is a lot of it in me. Now, are you going to pray, "Lead us not into temptation," and then just take a jump and just jump into it voluntarily yourself? Are you going to do that?

So, we see at last that there is hardly a phrase in this prayer that does not lay open a weakness of humanity like a surgeon's knife, and there is hardly a phrase in it that a man can repeat honestly and fairly, without first preparing himself in sobriety, and in decency, and in righteousness, and in love for his fellowmen.

NO FUNERAL PLANS

Body of Harold Lovet May Be Buried Next Tuesday.

No funeral arrangements have been made as yet for Harold Lovet, 16, who was killed early Saturday night when he was run over by a truck on a down-town street and his skull crushed.

The body is being held by the Merkle Undertaking company pending the arrival of a sister from Dodge City, Kansas. Burial will probably take place Tuesday it was stated yesterday.

Dealy Honored As He Completes 50-Year Service

By The Associated Press

DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 12.—George Bannerman Dealy, president and general manager of A. H. Belo and Co., publishers of the Dallas Morning News, The Dallas Journal, the Semi-Weekly Farm News and founders and for many years publishers of the Galveston News was honor guest Sunday afternoon at a dinner given by employes of the Belo papers celebrating his fiftieth year of service with the institution.

Mr. Dealy began work on the old Galveston News on October 12, 1874, when a lad of 14. He was employed in the mailing room, then as an office boy, and rose through several positions to that of directing head of the corporation. His employment during the half century has been continuous.

Given Gold Medal

At Sunday's banquet he was presented with a gold medal by Mrs. Helen Ponder Belo and Mrs. J. B. Peabody, principal stockholders of A. H. Belo and Co., while employes of the organization gave him a watch, one of 500 made by a nationally known watch company in celebration of its own fiftieth anniversary.

Speakers included Tom Finley Jr., E. B. Doran, W. H. Benners, John F. Lubben, Dewitt McMurray, and Hilton Greer, all executives in the Belo organization. Mr. Dealy told of some of the unsual things that happened in journalism of bygone days. More than 300 employes attended the dinner.

TIT FOR TAT HERE

German Crown Prince and Ludendorff at Outs.

BERLIN, Oct. 12.—Former Crown Prince Rupprecht, who, though not sitting on the throne, is popularly called "king" by the Bavarians, has refused to submit himself to a court of honor of the Prussian general staff. This is the latest development in the merry war between Prince Rupprecht and General Ludendorff. Prince Rupprecht wrote a bitter letter to General Hindenburg making various charges against General Ludendorff after the latter had declared that the prince caused dictator Von Kahr to break his word last November in the Hitler-Ludendorff revolution. Von Kahr had promised to support the revolt but in a few hours turned against it.

General Ludendorff preferred charges against the "king" of Bavaria before a court of honor of Prussian generals. The prince answered with charges against General Ludendorff before a Bavarian military court of honor. Prince Rupprecht refused to answer the charges before the Prussians and General Ludendorff refused to answer before the Bavarian generals.

Leather Medal As Biggest Liar Is Given Bootlegger

Judge Tells Jury It Will Have to Choose In Rum Trial at Montreal

TESTIMONY IS MIXED

And as a Result a Not Guilty Verdict Is Returned

MONTREAL, Oct. 12.—Expert testimony by professional bootleggers like the testimony of alienists at a millionaire's murder trial, frequently conflicts. To that fact perhaps more than any other, Captain Samuel Forde owes his acquittal on a charge of piracy from a British ship on the high seas.

One of the "frankest" exposures of the rum running exploits of ships off Long Island and the Connecticut coast that ever was made in any court, was unveiled during Capt. Forde's trial. Confessed bootleggers by the dozen came on from New York and testified. There were bootlegger witnesses for the prosecution and bootlegger witnesses for the defense just as there are alienists on both sides in an expensive murder case. In the end the judge told the jurors there evidently had been perjury on one side or the other and that it was up to them to decide which bootleggers were the biggest liars. The jury gave the leather medal to the prosecution's array.

Got Ship in Bermuda

The piracy charge arose out of the voyage of the steamer Lutzen, a ship which had belonged to the French government during the war and which had been acquired at Bermuda by the Sunrise Steamship company, of which Meyer Rosenthal of New York, was president, and which Norman Wiel-man of Montreal and Alick Adelman of New York were interested. The boat had never been registered since the war and Capt. Forde was engaged to make a trip for her and obtain British registry. He did so and the boat was used in running liquor from St. Pierre Miquel on to rum row.

On one of its trips, the super-cargo was Max Jerome Phaff, whose arrest on a charge of piracy connected with a French vessel off rum row, and trial in Brest, France, caused a sensation in bootlegging circles because of his theatened exposure of the men higher up in the game of beating the Volstead act.

Owners in Dispute

In October while the Lutzen was at St. Johns, N. B., Forde and the owners had a dispute, and Captain Piesner, known in New York according to one witness, as "one round Johnson" was placed in command. Evidence was given, however, that he "got drunker and drunker day by day" and the mate took charge. On the Lutzen were two super cargoes, J. M. Isaacs, a Winnipeg lawyer who was looking after the interests of the Adelmans and Jack Norris of New York.

When the vessel arrived off rum row, according to the story of the super cargo, and three of the crew held up the super cargoes, forced them into the chain locker and kept them prisoners. In the early hours of the morning, Captain Forde came aboard and took command of the ship. Its color and name were changed and he proceeded to sell the liquor over the side to visiting speed boats at $15 a case, until he had disposed of 4,300 cases.

Forde declared that when a row developed between the owners at St. John, N. B., over a division of profits the crew was paid off with the exception of himself and he stayed in New York. Then they were rounded up and sailed for Montauk Point, off Long Island, but he was not notified.

MONEY AT WORK

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.

Difficulty in understanding percentages is often due to the fact that cost instead of sales is used as a base.

The modern practice is to compute all percentages of expenses, cost, margins, and profits on the basis of sales. The cost price has fallen into discard for this use, yet many persist in still using it, with the result that the figures so derived cannot be compared with other figures. This greatly lessens their value.

To illustrate the difference, suppose the sales for 1923 in a certain grocery store, were $100,000 and the goods which had been sold had cost $80,000. The wages of the sales force had amounted to $8,000. If the expense of the sales force is computed on the basis of sales it amounts to 8 per cent, but if computed on the basis of the cost of goods sold it amount to 10 per cent. The first percentage may be used for comparison with published figures—the second can not.

Wait for Time to Pass.

Shirley Hall-Quest and Fred Hart chose the latter. They are waiting, too, but only for time to pass.

Hight and Mrs. Sweetin will never marry on this earth. The arm of the law brought mutual regrets and shattered the love dream and original hope for marriage, the dream that turned them into murderers.

They will travel the rest of the road alone—a road strewn with such unpleasant things as iron bars, courts of justice, jury verdicts, and, it may be, the gallows. Or, in case they go free, which is not likely, they will set their feet on separate highways because, they declare, there is no more love.

But Hart and Mrs. Hall-Quest have almost immediate marriage to look forward to. Unless some unforeseen obstruction jams the wheel of circumstances, all they have to do is to be patient for a few days. And they will be joined in wedlock and live like ordinary married people—if they can.

New York Girls Taught to Avoid Public Flirting

Delinquency Increase Is Laid at Door of Strange Auto Parties

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—"Don't stop, look or listen," is the newest instruction to the public schools of this city. It is all on account of an old problem which of late has suddenly become acute hereabouts. It is the problem of the male flirt; in this instance of the male motor flirt.

Flirting—to put it mildly, has become as much of a problem around New York these days; and there have been, this autumn, so many disastrous instances of school girls and school boys lured into cars by men of the Leopold and Loeb type that anti-flirting courses have been introduced in some of the school buildings. The only reason why this instruction is not being given in all the schools seems to be that the thing was instituted in Flushing—a suburban section of New York City—and is being tried out there before spreading to schools in more crowded sections. Oddly enough, the child in a rather suburban section appears to be in more danger from the motor flirt than the child in the crowded streets.

Teachers Teach It.

"Teachers in the public schools are supposed to instruct their pupils once a week in current events, safety and the like topics," said Dr. George J. Ryan, superintendent of New York schools, when he was asked about the addition to the curriculum.

"Instructing the children not to talk to strangers, not to accept candy from them, and never to accept a ride from them, seems to me highly important at this time. Such instruction was not ordered from headquarters; it is however, being done on the teachers' own initiative as part of the current events and safety courses and it is altogether an excellent idea."

Lured by Motorists.

As it happens, Dr. Ryan lives in Flushing. "In that section," he added, "we have had during the past few months a number of cases of young people being lured into danger by motorists. Instructions against accepting any advances from strangers is something which the public school teachers have hitherto left to the parents. But with so much evil of this sort abroad just now, it is instruction which the children not only cannot hear too often but need to hear both at home and in the class room. It is a new feature of the local school's course, but an important one."

Because of its numerous tree-lined parks and its many miles of roads bordered by fields or large estates, Flushing has been the favorite hunting ground this season of the male flirt. Two youths have just been sentenced to from 30 to 60 years in Sing Sing for holding up and abducting two young women on Flushing Roads last summer.

STILL WAIT FOR MEDALS

American Women and Men Delayed By Breakdown in Mint

By The Associated Press.

PARIS.—Many American men and women who were engaged in welfare work in France during and after the war still are waiting for the medals awarded them by the French government for services rendered the French people and the French soldiers.

The reason for the delay in presenting the medals is not forgetfulness on the part of the government, but is due to the sluggishness of the service at the mint, where in addition to coining money, medals are struck.

The mint is always years behind in its work. It has not yet produced the medal commemorating the election of M. Millerand as president of the republic.

Such medals always are struck and given to the senators and members of the chamber of deputies who participate in presidential elections. The Millerand medals are promised during the coming session of parliament. No appropriation has been made as yet for a medal to commemorate the election of President Doumergue, parliament not having provided for the unforseen eventuality of three presidents being elected inside of five years.

Troubled With Eczema For Years Cuticura Healed

"I had a very severe case of eczema. It started in pimples that were very hard and itched and burned so badly that I could not help rubbing them. I could not put my hands in water and was unable to do my washing for about a year. On account of the irritation I could not rest. I was troubled in this way for ten or twelve years.

"I tried different remedies which helped and then the trouble would break out again. I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and they helped me and in a short time I was completely healed." (Signed) Miss Etta Montgomery, Ozark, Ky.

Cuticura Soap to cleanse and purify, Cuticura Ointment to soothe and heal and Cuticura Talcum to powder and sweeten are ideal for daily toilet purposes.
