Judge: Death accidental

Jailers' restraints 'a factor' in inmate's collapse

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

Being restrained with his hands and legs bound behind his back contributed to the accidental death of Tomas Gonzales — the Midland County jail inmate who collapsed in jail and later died — the medical examiner said Wednesday.

The preliminary autopsy results indicate the death of Gonzales, 41, of Stanton, was accidental, said Midland County Justice of the Peace Robert H. Pine.

Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter issued a written statement on the death of Gonzales, who

Twentysomethings

WASHINGTON — Members of the twentysomething "Generation X," which has come of age in the shadow of the "baby boomers," issued an ambitious political manifesto Wednesday warning boomers to step aside. "The task of lobbying for the future has fallen on our shoulders," Douglas Kennedy, the 26-year-old son of the late Robert F. Kennedy, declared at a news conference with 39 other founders of Third Millennium, the organization they hope will be the rallying point for their generation. Reminiscent of the Port Huron Statement that propelled Tom Hayden and other founders of the Students for Democratic Society to political prominence in 1962, the Third Millennium Declaration is intended as a political wake-up call to Americans born between 1961 and 1981 — dubbed "Generation X" by Canadian novelist Doglas Coupland.

GREAT FALLS, Mont. — The families of nine airmen killed in an air collision are being denied $100,000 each in insurance benefits because the crash occurred 2½ hours before the policies took effect. Thirteen Air Force fliers from McChord Air Force Base near Tacoma, Wash., were killed last fall when two C-141B jet transports collided during a night aerial refueling mission over Montana and exploded. Nine of the victims had signed up for a $100,000 supplemental life insurance policy, scheduled to take effect Dec. 1. But the crash occurred about 9:30 p.m. on Nov. 30.

NEW YORK — A couple more shoes have dropped in the case of Marla Maples and her former publicist, Chuck Jones. He sued Maples' boyfriend Donald Trump, her mother, six New York Post reporters and others. In papers filed in state court Wednesday, Jones cited Post articles printed last summer and over the past two months reporting charges that he stole Maples' underwear, footwear, nude photos and diaries. The material published in the Post was "false and defamatory," said Jones. He said the reporters published the stories "maliciously."

Clinton tours flood zone, calls for $2.4 billion in aid

By Greg McDonald
Hearst News Service

DES MOINES, Iowa — President Clinton called for a $2.4 billion package of loans and other relief assistance Wednesday as heavy rains continued to cause severe flooding in several Midwestern states.

The aid announcement came after the president surveyed flooding damage that has contaminated this city's water supply.

"I have seen whole towns flooded, I have seen massive amounts of farmland flooded," Clinton told residents. "But I've never seen anything on this scale before.

"To my knowledge, there's never been an American city without water, that was this large, for this long a period of time," he added.

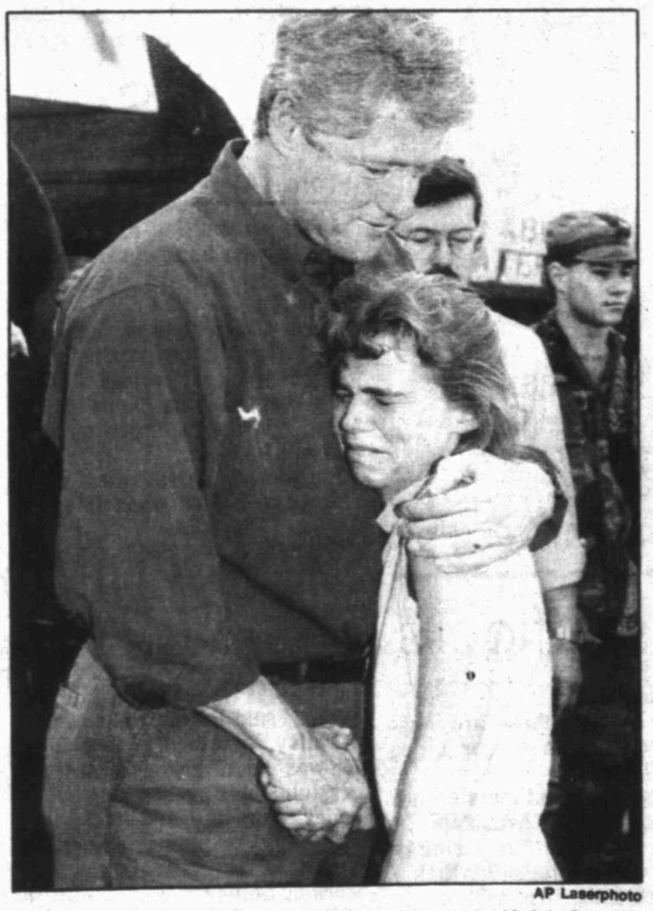

Weeks of heavy downpours have caused severe flooding in Iowa, Illinois and Missouri. The high water has been blamed for 21 deaths. More than 30,000 residents have been evacuated along the Mississippi River and its tributaries, and unofficial damage estimates run in excess of $3 billion.

More thunderstorms are forecast for Missouri and Illinois, threatening to wash out one of the last remaining bridges between the two states at Quincy, Ill. Flash flooding was forcing evacuations in dozens of communities in Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska.

'Better than kick in teeth:' Prices steady

■ Inflation disappears for first time in more than 2 years.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Inflation disappeared in June — the first time in more than two years that consumer prices did not increase. Retailers, meanwhile, registered moderate sales gains.

The Labor Department said Wednesday its Consumer Price Index was unchanged last month, helped by steep declines in fruit and vegetable prices. It was the best showing since March 1991 at the end of the recession.

Retail sales rose a modest 0.4 percent, the third straight advance, to a seasonally adjusted $171.9 billion, the Commerce Department said.

Together, the two reports portrayed an economy that is growing but not robustly enough to push prices up.

"There's no boom, no bust. It's not very exciting, but it's better than a kick in the teeth," said economist Paul W. Boltz of T. Rowe Price Associates in Baltimore.

Police 'blue form' frees officers from much fender-bender duty

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

The first instinct after an accident, no matter how major or minor, is to call the police.

However, many residents do not know that calling the police may not be necessary if the accident is "minor," described by police as an accident not involving injuries.

Many motorists also do not know that just exchanging insurance information with someone at the scene of a minor accident, without police investigating the accident, may not be enough to properly take care of damages.

"A lot of times, people will just exchange insurance information and one party will realize later on that the police should have been called," Midland Police Sgt. David Garcia said. "A lot of people have been involved in accidents where the other party tries to get out the back door as far as insurance is concerned. That's usually who will come in and ask about filling out papers."

Showers to take curtain call

Staff report

Rain finally made an appearance in Midland Wednesday as a late afternoon storm system brought precipiation and dropped temperatures about 10 degrees in an hour.

The National Weather Service reported 0.12 inches of rain late Wednesday and it was expected to continue off and on throughout the night. A small amount of hail was reported in Monahans due to the system; no hail was reported in Midland.

The chance of rain will continue today with skies remaining partly cloudy and the NWS forecasters predicting a 30 percent chance of rain during the day. The high will be in the upper 90s and winds will be southeast at 10-20 mph. Tonight should be partly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of rain with a low in the lower 70s.

Friday should be partly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of rain and a high in the mid-90s.

After an overnight low of 72, Wednesday's high reached 97, compared to the record high for that date of 107 set in 1933. The record low was 60 set in 1987.

STATE

Hot, mostly dry weather continued a firm grip across Texas on Wednesday, with only a slight chance of rainfall forecast, the National Weather Service said.

Afternoon temperatures ranged from the upper 60s to upper 90s statewide after early-morning lows in the 70s.

High pressure prevailed in the Gulf of Mexico, prompting showers along the upper coast.

Numerous showers and thunderstorms developed in the southeastern corner of the Panhandle and over the western Permian Basin, with scattered storms across the Big Bend and far West Texas.

NATION

Rain and thunderstorms were scattered from the West Coast to the East on Wednesday, and cool weather in the Northwest dropped temperatures to record lows.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended over the Pacific Northwest, the northern Rockies, the northern three-quarters of the Plains, the lower and middle Mississippi Valley, the Tennessee Valley, the Ohio Valley, the eastern Gulf of Mexico states, and much of the central and southern Atlantic Coast.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

BLUE: Form frees officers

(From 1A)

However, Garcia said, once motorists have left the scene of the accident, officers cannot fill out an accident form. Instead, the person is instructed to complete what the department calls a "blue form," which is a simplified version of an officer's accident report.

The form saves officers from having to spend their time at fender-benders and it gives the persons involved in the accident the benefit of an investigation without having called the police.

Anyone filing out a blue form must provide the location and time of the accident, descriptions of the vehicles involved and cost of damages to each vehicle, any damage to property other than the vehicles and any casualties. A brief summary of the accident must be reported as well as insurance information.

Forms such as these are standard procedure in bigger cities such as Dallas.

"In large cities, officers do not investigate minor accidents at all," Garcia said. "They simply don't run on anything other than a major accident. We still do in Midland."

However, he said that although officers still respond to minor accidents, there are some accidents that the Midland Police Department does not respond to.

"We don't investigate anything on private property," Garcia said. "Parking lots, driveways, apartment complex parking lots — anything that is not in a public roadway."

He said the blue form does not cover accidents on private property; it is only for minor accidents on public roadways and streets.

TOURS: Clinton asks for $2.4 billion in aid

(From 1A)

copter, spoke with local residents waiting in line to get potable water, and spent a few minutes helping young people fill sandbags to reinforce a levee along the Des Moines River.

The president also went on WHO Radio to talk about what he had seen and to outline what the federal government intended to do about it.

Clinton said he would ask Congress immediately for approval of more than $2.4 billion in farm and business loans and public works funding to help with relief and flood control efforts. The package includes $550 million for disaster relief and public assistance loans, $100 million for road repair, $45 million for flood control operations, $600 million to cover crop losses, and $300 million in small business loans.

The package contains $824 million in contingency funding, which won't be released by the federal government until local needs can be identified.

Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin, a Democrat, called the package "totally inadequate," saying it would barely "cover crop losses alone."

Clinton acknowledged that much more money would be needed, but said he was determined to send Congress the aid bill without waiting for full damage estimates to ensure that federal relief efforts would continue unabated.

"As the damage reports come in over the next four or five days, I expect you'll see some revision upward in the numbers that the administration has asked for," the president told a crowd who gathered in a shopping mall parking lot to collect fresh water.

"I want to say again I'm going to do my best to make sure that the full reach of federal assistance comes to the people of Iowa and to all the victims of this flood."

Clinton was obviously moved by the stories he heard from residents.

Several women told the president stories of lost homes and interrupted lives. Many Iowans told him that his visit and expression of compassion was "important" to them.

But one Iowan observed that more than a visit by the president is needed.

"We need some divine intervention," said Rodney Anderson, a 36-year-old pipe worker. "He (Clinton) has a lot of power but he doesn't have that kind of power. He can't make the rain end; he can't make the water recede. But I'm still appreciative of what he can do."

For Clinton, the decision to come here was not without criticism. Some Iowans complained that his presence was disruptive.

INMATE: Death an accident, judge says

(From 1A)

became unconscious in jail on July 5 and died four days later at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center.

Gonzales had been serving a sentence for a driving-while-intoxicated offense since July 2.

Capt. Gene Powell of the Texas Rangers, who are investigating the incident to see if the inmate's civil rights were violated or if excessive force was used, said that on the morning of July 5, Gonzales began exhibiting signs of paranoia. Gonzales told the jailers that he thought other inmates in his cell were trying to kill him.

Powell said that as the jailers attempted to move Gonzales to different cells, he continued to claim that inmates wanted to kill him. Powell said the jailers then tried to place Gonzales in a padded cell and had to restrain him in efforts to "prevent him from injuring himself."

However, a written statement issued by the sheriff's office says: "Mr. Gonzales was involved in a fight with another inmate and was removed to a single cell where he became uncooperative and was a danger to himself. Mr. Gonzales was handcuffed and carried to a padded cell until MHMR could be contacted for an evaluation."

About 11 a.m. the jailers then used a restraint method described as similar to "hog-tying" and the inmate collapsed, Powell said.

"While removing the handcuffs, Mr. Gonzales was struggling, then became still. Officers and the jail nurse checked for pulse and breathing, found none and began CPR. Paramedics arrived shortly after and continued medical treatment until arrival at Midland Memorial," according to Painter's written statement.

Gonzales officially was released from jail custody on July 6 after his sentence was served.

Pine called a press conference Wednesday morning to announce the results of the autopsy that the medical examiner performed on Gonzales on Saturday. The preliminary autopsy findings indicate he died as a result of a combination of positional asphyxia and alcohol withdrawal, according to Ector County Medical Examiner Sparks Veasey.

The medical examiner said he reviewed the physicians' reports from Gonzales' admission and hospital stay. He said those records indicate Gonzales had no alcohol in his system when he was admitted, but he did have bruises on his body.

"I cannot tell you how every bruise got on his body ... there were a number of bruises on the body.... Some of the bruises were documented to be present when he came in," Veasey said.

"But bruises are bruises and the reason to do an autopsy is to look under those bruises and see if the bruises are associated with a more severe injury that can explain death. That was not the case in this situation."

The written statement released by the sheriff's office states: "The release of information today by Dr. Veasey dispels the rumors and allegations that Mr. Gonzales died as a result of bruises received in the jail."

When asked if being restrained in a fashion similar to being "hog-tied" was a factor in his death, the medical examiner replied, "Yes it was."

"A restraint was utilized in this case which recapitulates the so-called 'hog-tie' maneuver, which is a maneuver that is a maximum restraint procedure used by law enforcement personnel, which includes hand-cuffing of the hands behind the back and a positioning of the feet with the knees bent along the buttocks and the back of the thighs. In certain susceptible individuals this may render the individual ... incapable of breathing to the full capacity," Veasey said.

"There are a number of ways a person can get positional asphyxia. ... This is a situation in which the individual is on a surface belly-down with hands handcuffed behind him and legs flexed at the knees and either tied or held on the buttocks or back of the thighs," the medical examiner reiterated.

"There are a number of factors that may be involved (to cause positional asphyxia) ... anxiety, a high level of adrenalin in the body, physical exertion ... " Veasey said.

When asked about the alcohol withdrawal factor as a partial cause of the death, Veasey said, "I'm not going to go into a lot of detail on that. That is based upon investigative information and I'm not really going to go into that. People that are in alcohol withdrawal may be anxious and may become physically exerted."

Pine said that, as a result of Veasey's findings, he anticipated the cause of death to be listed as "accidental," but would probably make his final ruling today or Friday.

Powell said the Rangers likely will close their investigation by the end of the week. He said that to complete the investigation, officers will be interviewing several inmates who were present when Gonzales was restrained.

"We want to make sure all the bases are covered ... but we see no criminal wrongdoing — no use of excessive force," Powell said.

He added that the finished investigation report will be presented to the district attorney and turned over to the grand jury, although he anticipated that no charges would be filed.

According to the sheriff's office, the FBI also is continuing its investigation.

became uncooperative and was a danger to himself."

The statement indicates Gonzales was "handcuffed" and transported to another cell and "while removing the handcuffs, Mr. Gonzales was struggling then became still."

Gonzales died at 6:45 p.m. Friday at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center.

Ector County Medical Examiner Dr. Sparks Veasey said Gonzales died as a result of the combination of being restrained with his hands being cuffed behind his back and his legs flexed at the knee and placed on the buttocks and from difficulties breathing. The medical terms are positional asphixiation and alcohol withdrawal.

Veasey said the death likely will be ruled as accidental.

Willie Serna, past LULAC District 5 director, said "we're not satisfied with that ruling."

"Anytime something like this happens to anyone, LULAC wants to know what happened and as quickly as possible," Serna said.

Felipa Lara, president of the Permian Basin LULAC organization said the Gonzales family is dissatisfied with the investigation thus far.

"He was in jail for three days before he began suffering any withdrawal. They should have sought medical treatment instead of restraining him and putting him in a cell alone," Ms. Lara said.

She said state LULAC officials, as well as the state attorney general's staff, have been asked to provide assistance in finding more information on the incident.

Serna said, "We are going to get as much information as we can and the investigation will continue," in spite of the Texas Rangers' indication that their investigation will probably close by the end of the week with the conclusion that jailers did not use excessive force.

LULAC officials met with members of the Gonzales family and about 50 other citizens who had concerns about the jail and local law enforcement.

Ms. Lara said about 50 people gathered Tuesday evening to relate incidents of friends or relatives who had been mistreated while incarcerated in the county jail.

The Gonzales family has retained the services of Midland attorney Sylvia Chavez, but attempts to contact Ms. Chavez were unsuccessful.

PRICES: Inflation disappears, retail sales rise only 0.1 percent, but reports earlier in the year had fanned fears on Wall Street that inflation would accelerate.

Wednesday's figures, combined with a report a day earlier showing that wholesale prices dropped 0.3 percent in June, banished any inflation concerns lingering in the financial market.

Long-term interest rates, which can surge higher when investors are worried about inflation, fell on the bond market to record lows immediately after the price report was released. Stock prices rose.

Economists said the Federal Reserve, which had been prepared in May to nudge short-term interest rates higher, now probably will keep rates steady for some months.

"My best case is that the Fed does not do anything through the balance of the year," said economist Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch.

Congress and the Clinton administration are counting on low interest rates to keep the economy going at the same time they raise some taxes to reduce the federal budget deficit.

For the first half of 1993, consumer prices advanced at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.1 percent, compared with 2.9 percent for all of 1992. Economists are predicting a slight acceleration to around 3.3 percent next year.

In June, prices excluding food and energy rose just 0.1 percent. Economists look to this "core" inflation rate as a more accurate gauge of underlying inflation pressures. Food prices fell 0.4 percent and energy prices declined 0.2 percent.

Vegetable prices plummeted 11.9 percent, the steepest drop in 13 months, and fruit dropped 4.6 percent. Lettuce fell 27.3 percent and tomatoes 18.1 percent.

SPY: Philby had disillusionment, alcohol, love said he was too old to start all over again," said Rufina Pukhova.

Philby, who died in 1988 at age 76, was one of history's most successful double-agents. For two decades, from the mid-1930s to the mid-1950s, he passed British and American secrets to Moscow while working at the top level of MI6, the British intelligence service.

Together with British diplomats Guy Burgess and Donald Maclean, he was part of the Cambridge spy ring — a group of upper-class Englishmen who became dedicated socialists while students.

Burgess and Maclean fled to Moscow in 1951, but Philby was not exposed until 1963, when he disappeared from Lebanon and reappeared in Moscow.

Philby left his British family behind. Seven years later, he met Pukhova, who was introduced by the Russian wife of another defector, George Blake.

Pukhova is writing a book about her 18 years as Philby's fourth wife. To promote her story, she answered questions from journalists at the offices of the newspaper Literaturnaya Gazeta, which published an interview with her Wednesday.

In a soft voice, choked with nervousness, she described Philby's disillusionment with communism under Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev.

Philby was repulsed by "the appearance of Brezhnev, an idiotic figure with all those ridiculous medals and endless speeches," she said.

They lived in a four-room apartment, spacious by Moscow standards, and received a generous KGB paycheck.

"But he could not help but see all the faults in our daily life, because we did not live in isolation, we walked through the streets, the stores. Materially, he was better off than the average person, but he understood everything anyway ... and suffered very deeply," she said.

Pukhova told Literaturnaya Gazeta that Philby never expressed regret for his spying, or homesickness for England. But he felt discarded by the KGB, whose officers viewed him as a "suspicious foreigner."

"Unfortunately, he had too much free time. They really did not make much use of him. ... I think his stroke and alcoholism and depression were connected with that feeling of being unwanted," she said.

Later, in the 1970s, KGB agents sometimes brought papers for Philby to work on, but she never learned the details of his work.

Philby battled alcoholism, which began in England, under the strain of his double-life, she said.

Sources say U.S. may send Army ground-attack jets, Marine F-A-18 hornet fighters, Air Force AC-130 gunships, other command-control aircraft.

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The United States and its NATO allies tentatively approved a plan Wednesday to provide air cover for about 7,500 U.N. peacekeepers in Bosnia.

Warplanes from the United States, Britain, the Netherlands and France began gathering at Italian air bases to prepare for the operation, which could begin as early as July 22. About 60 planes were to take part.

It would mark the first time NATO planes have been used to protect peacekeepers, although NATO aircraft have enforced a no-fly zone over Bosnia since April.

Ambassadors from the 16 nations of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization agreed to the plans, but must await final approval from officials back home.

Senior NATO officials intend to give the plan's final details to U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali later in the week, officials said.

The action would support a U.N. Security Council resolution authorizing protection for the 7,500-man United Nations Protection Force, which will patrol the so-called "safe areas" the United Nations has designated in Bosnia.

The six areas, which include Sarajevo, are populated mostly by Muslims.

Under the plan, any air strikes by allied planes would have to be authorized by the United Nations. Officials said the aircraft might also protect peacekeepers elsewhere in Bosnia.

This week, the United States sent 12 A-10 and OA-10 "Warthog" ground-attack aircraft to Aviano Air Base in Italy from their base in Germany.

Pentagon sources in Washington, speaking on condition of anonymity, said there also are plans to send eight Marine F-A-18 "Hornet" attack planes, five Air Force Special Operations AC-130 gunships and four Air Force EC-130 command and control aircraft to various bases in Italy.

Britain was expected to dispatch a squadron of 12 Jaguars.

Russia, Ukraine, Belarus push economic pact

MOSCOW (NYT) — The three main Slavic states that dominated the Soviet Union and effectively dissolved it in December 1991 have decided to press ahead with an economics and customs union, including coordinated economic policies.

Last weekend, after secretive meetings in a rest house outside Moscow, the prime ministers of Russia, Belarus and Ukraine announced agreement on the principles of economic integration and a "single economic space," with a draft treaty embodying that agreement to be ready by Sept. 1.

The three Slavic nations accounted for more than 70 percent of the Soviet Union's population and even more of its industrial wealth and sophisticated technology. They have said that other states of the former Soviet Union, like Kazakhstan, may also join, if they choose, but on the terms the Slavic nations are setting out.

Their agreement is a reflection of the pain of economic dislocation resulting from the collapse of the Soviet Union, as well as an acknowledgement that the institutions of its loosely drawn successor, the Commonwealth of Independent States, have been a failure.

Tuesday, Russian Deputy Prime Minister Alexander N. Shokhin told Central Asian nations exploring a similar customs union with Turkey, Iran, Pakistan and other Muslim nations that they will have to choose where their economic futures lie.

"Our friends from the commonwealth who, looking for better fortunes, are turning to the south should choose between closer economic integration with Russia and with their southern neighbors," Shokhin said. "Clearly, one country cannot be a member of two customs unions."

A senior Western diplomat commented Wednesday: "I'd hate to say it's a warning shot. But it's a reminder to the others from Russia of the need to choose, and to remember where their economic interests are."

To put flesh on the bones of this economic union will be difficult, the diplomat added. "In a sense this announcement is declarative, and there's a long way to go."

At the same time, he said, Russia has decided to press ahead with restoring a larger economic space with those countries most willing and eager to do so, creating a sort of "two-speed commonwealth."

In mid-May, 9 of the 15 former Soviet republics signed a vaguer declaration for better economic integration, but Russian officials and Western diplomats say little progress has been made since then, even on a desperately needed clearing bank for money transfers.

Runaway inflation spurs China to cool economy

Problem isn't stalled economy, but one that is stuck in overdrive.

BEIJING (NYT) — Alarmed that inflation is spinning out of control, the Chinese leadership has begu a far-reaching effort to try to rein in the nation's badly overheated economy.

The Communist Party is circulating a secret order, Central Committee Document No. 6, providing for a 16-point plan to bring down economic growth to a more reasonable level that can be sustained. "Work teams" are fanning out through the provinces to try to insure that Beijing's edicts are obeyed.

To be sure, as economic troubles go, China's are enviable ones. The present difficulty is not an economy that has stalled, but one that is stuck in overdrive.

Still, the overheating has caused prices to soar, with consumers rushing to buy gold to preserve their savings. The Chinese yuan has taken a roller-coaster ride on the currency markets, and real estate prices have soared on speculative buying, with the prices of some poorly situated apartments in Beijing exceeding $500,000.

Above all, there has been a feeling of disorder and chaos. "People in the hinterland began to panic," Ta Kung Pao, a Chinese-backed newspaper in Hong Kong, observed, and everyone remembers that inflation was one of the factors that provoked the Tiananmen democracy movement in 1989.

Zhu Rongji, a 65-year-old deputy prime minister, this month was named head of the central bank, after the previous central banker was dismissed for allowing the chaos to develop. Zhu, who is sometimes dubbed "China's Gorbachev" because of his sympathy for far-reaching political and economic change, has essentially become China's economic czar.

Many senior officials believe that Zhu is acting like a czar as well, for he has a withering style that has top bankers and economic cadres quaking at their desks throughout the country.

Just a few days ago, Zhu summoned provincial bankers to a meeting and berated them for exceeding lending limits. He asked one banker from Manchuria the size of his loan portfolio and then, after hearing the answer, lashed into him.

U.S.-Korea discuss nuclear proliferation amidst new fears

GENEVA (AP) — U.S. and North Korean negotiators reported progress Wednesday in talks to resolve a standoff over North Korea's refusal to permit international inspections of suspected nuclear sites.

Robert L. Gallucci, a U.S. assistant secretary of state and the chief American delegate to the talks, told reporters that the seven hours of talks were "useful."

He said the two sides would meet again Friday. An aide to Gallucci, who requested anonymity, said the United States had planned to end the talks Wednesday unless progress was made.

Vice Foreign Minister Kang Sok Ju, head of the North Korean delegation, described the meeting as intensive and productive. "We discussed a wide range of subjects," he said.

Gallucci, who declined to answer questions, said earlier that the United States would demand that the North Koreans commit themselves to the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty.

In Washington, however, the chairman of a House Republican task force urged the Clinton administration on Wednesday to prepare contingency plans to intercept nuclear weapons or missile shipments by North Korea.

"We have to deter the proliferation of these nuclear weapons and any thought the North Koreans may have about using them," said Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla.

McCollum's Task Force on Terrorism and Unconventional Warfare released a report citing Russian sources as concluding that North Korea had acquired nuclear weapons by 1990 at the latest.

The report quotes what it said is a British estimate that North Korea's communist government is now developing as many as six nuclear weapons.

The report states that the North Korean government began activating "the purely military component" of its nuclear program last year.

"Since June 1992, there have been intensified activities in the underground complex called "Building 500 at Yongbyon, primarily fortification, extensive camouflage, and deployment of defenses," the report said.

Italy becomes outraged over U.N. decision to remove its commander

ROME (AP) — The United Nations asked Italy on Wednesday to recall the commander of its Somalia force, saying he failed to obey U.N. orders while waiting for instructions from Rome. The Italian government exploded in anger.

Foreign Minister Beniamino Andreatta said he was "appalled" by the U.N. announcement in New York by Kofi Annan of Ghana, a U.N. undersecretary-general and head of peacekeeping.

Annan indicated that Gen. Bruno Loi's actions could endanger other troops.

Government officials refused to say if Loi would be brought home, and cast the problem as a difference over mission strategy. A multinational force was sent last December to safeguard aid deliveries to starving Somalis.

"We don't want to descend to a question of personnel," said Paolo Peluffo, a spokesman for Premier Carlo Ciampi.

Controversy stems from questions that involve Italy's roll in Somalia.

Loi himself told reporters in Mogadishu, the capital of Somalia, "I am perfectly satisfied with my conscience. I have respected the spirit and the letter of United Nations Security Council resolutions.

"The mandate I received when I left Italy was for a humanitarian mission."

In a radio interview from Somalia broadcast Wednesday before Annan's statement, Loi denied disobeying U.N. orders. "We have always attempted a dialogue, we have not always been heard, and what we have done we always have done informing the high command about it," he said.

Debate arose over Italy's involvement in Somalia, its former colony, when Somali gunmen killed three Italian soldiers and wounded 21 in a July 2 ambush — the first Italian ground troops killed in combat since World War II.

Italy asked the United Nations on Tuesday for permission to withdraw its troops from Mogadishu, the Somali capital. Andreatta said Italy wanted a U.N. debate over the mission's political objectives.

Annan noted Wednesday, "When we do have ... casualties, there's a public outcry and there is pressure on the politicians and they demand change in policy."

The imbroglio laid bare a growing rift over the peacekeeping mission.

Iraq protects strategic sites; hunger grows

BAGHDAD, Iraq (NYT) — In anticipation of renewed American and allied air strikes, President Saddam Hussein is trying to protect strategic industries and important government installations by removing crucial machinery, records and equipment and hiding it, foreign diplomats and Iraqis say.

This wholesale dismantling of the light industrial and government sites thought to be targets appears to have begun in earnest in June, they say, before President Clinton launched a Cruise missile attack against an intelligence center in Baghdad.

But it has accelerated since then, particularly in the military-industrial sector, with factories being stripped of whatever machinery can easily be removed and the workers sent away indefinitely.

This effort at protection is occurring as Iraq finds itself in another standoff with the U.N. Security Council over plans for monitoring two missile testing sites to insure that Baghdad does not develop forbidden weapons.

Elsewhere, The U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization said Wednesday that hunger and malnutrition have been detected in Iraq and that a "grave human tragedy" could unfold unless action is taken.

The warning was issued by the organization at its headquarters in Rome, and reported by the English-language government daily Baghdad Observer.

The newspaper suggested that the agency's statistics support Baghdad's call for lifting a worldwide embargo imposed on Iraq after its August 1990 invasion of Kuwait.

The embargo exempts food, medicine and other humanitarian goods. But cash-starved Iraq has been unable to buy enough for its 17 million people and relies on necessities provided at reduced cost by the FAO, the U.N. Children's Fund and other humanitarian agencies.

The immediate cash problem may be resolved soon.

Minority Congress members vow to fight broad 'attack on civil rights'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Black and Hispanic members of Congress, citing a "broad-based attack on civil rights," said Wednesday they will work at the state level to protect their districts from challenges expected in the wake of a Supreme Court ruling.

In a 5-4 decision last month, the court questioned whether political boundaries should be drawn according to race. The justices ordered a lower court to hear an appeal by white voters who argued that the snaking boundary of a majority black North Carolina district "bears an uncomfortable resemblance to political apartheid."

The ruling could invite challenges to several other newly drawn congressional districts that are either majority black or Hispanic. A challenge to the largely black Louisiana seat held by Democratic Rep. Cleo Fields, is pending before the court.

"We believe this is part of a broad-based attack on civil rights," said Rep. Kweisi Mfume, D-Md., chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus. "Those that say the district looks funny, we believe what they're really saying is the district looks too black, too Latino, too Asian."

At least one other majority black seat, Georgia's 11th District, lies open to challenge because it wiggles from the center of that state to the Atlantic Ocean, in the shape of a sea gull with outstretched wings.

There, black elected officials are bracing for a lawsuit, and are laying plans to counter with a lawsuit of their own, said state Rep. Tyrone Brooks of Atlanta, president of the Georgia Association of Black Elected Officials.

Medical authorities warn of increasing 'biblical diseases' among border's poor

WASHINGTON (NYT) — U.S.-Mexico border areas are plagued with a wide range of "biblical diseases" once rare in the United States that are spreading among a poor and migrant population, legislators and medical officials warned Wednesday in urging international action.

With substantial increases in population along the border, "this is a ticking time bomb," American Medical Association President Joseph T. Painter said at a news conference.

Those appearing at the news conference included Rep. Ron Coleman, D-Texas, and Sen. Jeff Bingaman, D-New Mexico, who have sponsored companion bills that would ask President Clinton to seek an agreement with Mexico for a binational commission on border health.

They cite tuberculosis, leprosy, plague, cholera, hepatitis A, rabies.

The group would bring together Mexican and American officials from various agencies to coordinate disease-prevention and immunization efforts on both sides of the border.

The commission "is a long-overdue first step toward a permanent solution," Painter said. The AMA can help lobby Congress, work through state medical associations, and disseminate information widely through medical publications, he said.

Coleman and Bingaman said the health problems stem from border poverty and are exacerbated by migrants.

Support lags during mom's homicide trial

SONORA, Calif. (AP) — In the barrooms and coffee shops of this gold country town, the once bold support for Ellie Nesler's legendary shooting has died down.

The letters that poured into the courts in defense of the mother who shot the man accused of molesting her son have slowed, and the donations for her defense have dropped off.

But as the murder trial of 40-year-old Nesler began here Tuesday, it seemed the whole town was waiting for a verdict — not only on Nesler's case, but on the judicial system.

To some in Sonora, justice will not be served by sending Nesler to jail in view of the fact that the man who allegedly molested her son had been released after a molestation conviction.

Nesler became a symbol of the problems of the court system when she stepped into a local court April 2 and allegedly fired five shots into Daniel Driver, who was on trial for molesting her 13-year-old son.

The shooting spawned "Support Ellie" bumper stickers and rallies on the courthouse lawn.

"When it first happened, everybody was ready to give her a medal," said Steve Orosz, a retired airline pilot. "I still think they should. She had a lot of courage."

Whether Nesler wins or loses, Orosz said it has brought a new awareness to the community.

"Because of her vigilantism, any other child molester will have to think twice," he said.

While it seems almost everyone here is rooting for Nesler as she goes up on murder charges — after pleading not guilty by reason of insanity — many become less vocal after prosecutors said she was high on methamphetamine, or "crank," at the time of the shooting.

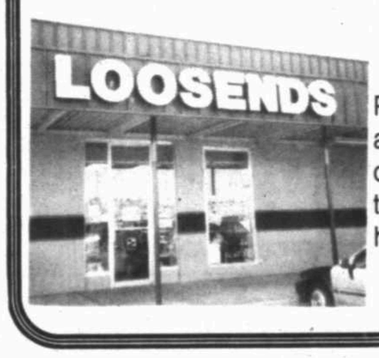

"A lot of people are turned off that she was (allegedly) on drugs," said local handyman Tim Ryan, who said she shouldn't serve hard time regardless.

Whether they believe it a case of heroic defense of her child or ruthless vigilantism, the people of Sonora are acutely aware that the case has thrown their usually peaceful town into the national spotlight.

"This is the little America that everybody thinks is so clean and pure," said resident Maureen Logan. "Nobody expected this to happen here."

Council must strive for retail balance

When a community such as Midland is attempting to encourage retail development, its leaders must be willing to work with developers hoping to bring new businesses to the city. At the same time, however, no wise city administrator would throw caution to the wind and operate on a "no holds barred" policy in regard to retail development at the expense of current residents.

What is required, of course, is a balance that both protects the interests of the city's residents and encourages the development of retail businesses, while providing for an orderly growth of the community.

Striking that balance isn't always easy and we've watched for years as Midland's city officials have weighed the interests of developers against those of the residents. Sometimes the officials have come down on the side of the developers; sometimes they have put the interests of a particular residential area first. Good examples of the concerns they must consider were those expressed this week at the Midland City Council meeting in regard to a proposed zoning change between Ward Street and Whitmire Boulevard. The council chambers were packed as 120 residents of that area expressed their concerns about traffic congestion, the impact of the proposed development on property values, and other anticipated problems.

On the one hand, the development would have benefited the neighborhood in some ways, but those were eclipsed by the concerns of residents about the potential impact on the neighborhood through changes, particularly traffic congestion.

In the end, the council denied the Wisconsin developer's request for a zone change at that particular site. We hope another suitable location can be identified here to the benefit of the developer, the businesses involved and the city in general.

Such decisions are always difficult and we do not envy the members of the City Council who are charged with making them. Midland still wants retail development. The business climate is improving locally and what the council can do to stimulate economic development it should do.

Even more important than economic development, however, is the orderly growth of the community. City officials must always strive to achieve a fine balance between the needs of developers and those of residents.

High court's bond ruling provides less disruption

The Texas Supreme Court has moved in timely fashion to ensure that state-supported colleges and universities aren't plagued by the same uncertainties to which lawsuits about equitable funding have subjected the public schools.

The court recently issued an order that will grant universities uninterrupted authority to sell bonds while the justices are trying to reach a decision on a lawsuit alleging inequitable state funding for colleges in South Texas.

Last year, ruling on a case filed in 1987 by the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund that charged state officials with denying a fair share of state resources to public universities in South Texas, State District Judge Benjamin Euresti Jr. gave lawmakers until this May 1 to make changes or quit funding all state colleges and universities.

The state appealed, and the case is still pending adjudication by the Supreme Court, prompting attorneys for the state to express concern about the legal status of bonds issued after May 1 should the court affirm Euresti's order.

To allay those fears, the court held Euresti's injunction in abeyance until a final ruling on the case is issued, which will allow schools to continue selling bonds in good faith.

It was a common-sense decision, one that can keep economic disruption to a minimum while the court continues to study the case.

Agreement to return Aristide brings skepticism to island

Temporarily at least, the agreement to restore Haiti's elected president must be counted a success for the Clinton administration, which gave the issue priority. Whether the ambitious agreement will hold is far less sure.

The palpable difficulty of stitching an accord together in the first place is symptomatic. The two principals, deposed President Jean-Bertrand Aristide and the military usurper, Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras, refused to meet face to face, communicating only through United Nations mediators. And even now skepticism prevails in Port-au-Prince, where the attitude toward Aristide's announced return by Oct. 30 seems to be: show me. . . .

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, July 15, the 196th day of 1993. There are 169 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 15, 1870, Georgia became the last of the Confederate states to be readmitted to the Union.

GEORGE WILL

Local tyrants chain American people

WASHINGTON — Imagine living in your own house in close confinement with hostile strangers who your state government prevents you from evicting. Imagine this for seven years. Jerold and Ellen Ziman and their two children did not imagine this nightmare, they lived it. Theirs is a cautionary story of a growing phenomenon —grassroots tyranny.

Will

In February 1984, the Zimans purchased a townhouse in Manhattan's Greenwich Village, planning to restore it as a single-family home. The house had been configured for seven rental units, three of which were occupied and covered by the state's rent control law, an "emergency" and "temporary" program enacted during wartime, in 1943, and still on the books.

But in June 1984, New York changed the rent control rules, making it extremely difficult to evict anyone, and impossible to do so without years of expensive wandering in bureaucratic wastelands. So the Zimans camped for years in two rooms of "their" house, finding drug paraphernalia left by tenants or by those to whom the tenants gave keys to the house.

The government-dictated rent did not even cover the Zimans' maintenance expenses. They acquired full possession of their house only after rent control — and $100,000 spent fighting it —had reduced them to a "hardship" exemption from the restrictions on the right of owners to evict unwanted tenants.

Their case, which suggests the interminable and impenetrable "Jarndyce v. Jarndyce" case in Dickens' "Bleak House" (perhaps filtered through Kafka), is an example of what is referred to in the title of Clint Bolick's new book, "Grassroots Tyranny." Bolick is a combative litigator determined to convince fellow conservatives that "conservative judicial activism" is neither an oxymoron nor a bad idea.

Bolick notes that "in today's society a zoning commissioner or a tax assessor can have far greater impact on personal liberty than the president."

For example, the Kansas Cosmetology Board recently decreed that Monique Landers, a 15-year-old African-American honored as one of the nation's five Outstanding High School Entrepreneurs, must close her $100-a-month business braiding and washing hair in Wichita. The board, acting at the behest of hair salons and cosmetology schools, says she must either go to cosmetology school and get a license, or go to jail.

The Framers of the Constitution would not be surprised by the fact that today's gravest attacks on free speech occur in small communities susceptible to tyranny in a small sphere — on college campuses. The Framers understood that small communities are particularly vulnerable to domination by overbearing majorities.

They also understood that stable, tyrannical majorities can best be prevented by the multiplication of minority interests, so the majority at any moment will be just a transitory coalition of minorities.

Federalism expresses a constitutional preference for decentralized power. However, Bolick, whose book is subtitled "The Limits of Federalism," argues that "the Framers were not concerned primarily with favoring one type of government over another, but with limiting the power of government.

He is one of a cadre of conservatives eager for courts to use the Ninth Amendment ("The enumeration in the Constitution of certain rights shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people") as a context for construing the entire Constitution, and particularly to block state and local acts of majoritarian tyranny.

Today the Zimans are suing New York, arguing that the years during which they were denied enjoyment of their house constituted a "taking" of property for which the Fifth Amendment ("... nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation") requires restitution. And conservatives everywhere are rethinking relative values .

George Will's column is distributed by Washington Post Writers Group.

CHARLEY REESE

People let machines fool them into idiocy

The big fad that has the technocrats in a swoon and the corporate wolves slavering over potential profits is the so-called river of information — the technology that will allow all sorts of information to travel in two directions on the same path.

Reese

This is just one more case of machine worship, a common superstition among the ignorant elites of our time.

Let's get centered and grounded on this subject. Information is just data. Noise, static, lies, propaganda, visual images, and so forth are all information. Information per se is of no value. As Tom Jefferson once observed, a person who knows nothing is better off than a person who believes what isn't true. It is safer not to know how deep a river is than to believe it's shallow when it's deep.

The technology of transmission, which ranges from the human voice to fiber optics, is nothing more than a delivery vehicle. The speed of the delivery, in most cases, becomes irrelevant after a certain point. The difference between a month and an hour is significant. The difference between a second and fractions of a second are irrelevant.

The computer also is just a machine. It's a fancy typewriter, filing cabinet, telephone, and calculator. But typewriters don't write, filing cabinets don't file, telephones don't talk and calculators don't figure. An idiot with a typewriter, a file cabinet, a telephone and a calculator is still an idiot.

If by now you are thinking that it's the content of the information, rather than its volume, format and speed of delivery, that matters to human beings, shout, "Bingo!"

We already have rivers of information in existence and some are polluted. Television sets have become not much more than electronic sewer outfall pipes, dumping the intellectual equivalent of manure into millions of American living rooms. Whether you have five channels, 40, or 500, you'll be lucky to find two hours a week worth watching.

Someone who spends all day playing games on a computer is no difterent than someone who spends all day playing a mechanical pinball machine. Someone who engages in banal conversation via computer network is no different than someone engaging in banal conversation in a public park or tavern.

The machine ain't God. It cannot save us or remold us or make us better than we are. The machine can only do two things: accomplish mechanical tasks in less time than we can do them manually and multiply our physical senses and muscular strength. The electron microscope can resolve an image better than our eyes. My pistol can throw a small object faster than my arm. The printer connected to my computer can type faster than my fingers.

But none of these tasks machines perform touch our essence as a human being. They cannot make us wise, moral or immoral. They cannot love us, comfort us, motivate us, or inspire us. They are all dead objects made of inanimate materials. In all the areas of human experience that are important, machines are irrelevant.

I was depressed to see a statement attributed to Vice President Al Gore that he longs for the day when every child in American can come home and have access to the Library of Congress.

It's depressing because it shows a shallowness of mind and lack of perception of what's going on in America today. Virtually every child already has access to the Library of Congress. Any public library can, through the interlibrary loan system, get you virtually any book in print. The problem in America today 's not lack of access to information, it's lack of desire to utilize it, lack of the education and intelligence to know which information is useful and which is junk.

Technocrats and gadgeteers are the alchemists of 1990s.

ART BUCHWALD

How many must die before gun reform?

A gunman shot and killed eight people in San Francisco the other day. It was a news story, but not a big story because it seems that every week a gunman is killing eight victims somewhere in the U.S.A.

Buchwald

For a story to qualify as BIG news, it has to be exceptional. Since killing people with guns is now the norm in this country, an editor is hard put to know whether to put it anywhere near the front page.

Because incidents of gun violence are not big news, it follows that trying to get legislation passed to prevent gun ownership is also not newsworthy. Nor is the hysteria of the anti-gun people considered news. Readers are bored with talk of banning automatic and semiautomatic weapons. The National Rifle Association's statement that the gunman was not a member of the NRA is not news either because no one cares. The gun lobbies are very strong when they say, "We don't like it when a person uses a gun for criminal purposes — but you don't throw out the baby with the semiautomatic assault weapons."

It appears that almost every time someone shoots more than six people, the handgun supporters pay politicians millions of dollars to make sure that nobody calls for anti-gun measures. It's done so often that you can't even call these payoffs news.

When children have been shot in school it used to be big news, but now it's a big yawn.

Years ago gangs who killed members of other gangs made the front page of the papers, particularly if photographs of the victims were available. These days, however, it has to be a real slow day in the newsroom before you'll find a story about 20 members of one gang wiping out all the kids down the block.

Since mass shootings are now so commonplace, Americans don't get as upset as they used to about them.

For one thing readers tend not to study their newspapers on the Fourth of July weekend. Even if they saw the story, it's doubtful that they even wondered how the gunman amassed such a large arsenal.

When I called my local paper to get more information on the story I was told that most of the editors were away and, besides, as long as Congress considers it legal for citizens to own semiautomatic weapons, the possession of the guns did not merit a Page One story.

"How many people have to be killed before it is headline news?" I asked.

"I believe our guidelines indicate between 15 and 20."

I asked him, "Why is killing eight people not a big story but the hoax of syringes in Pepsi-Cola cans is?"

"The Pepsi-Cola hoax captured the imaginations of news editors all over the world. It was different, it was frightening, it had mystery. The shooting in San Francisco has happened before in other locations. When readers see it, their eyes glaze over."

He admitted that as time went on more and more people, including children, would be shot. But except for those who thrive on sensation, the reader's attention span on these incidents is now down to 10 seconds.

"That should make the NRA happy," I said.

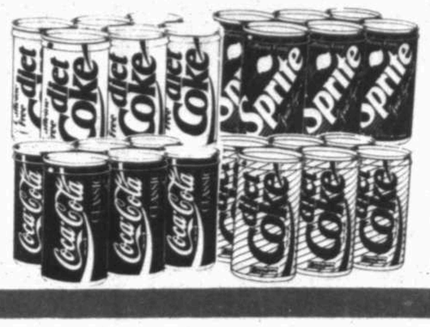

"It has."

Dems predict successful deficit-reduction tax compromise soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic leaders predicted Wednesday that party members would solve their differences and quickly send a compromise deficit-reduction tax bill to President Clinton.

Vice President Gore talked up the measure at a meeting with black lawmakers in the Capitol, and told reporters afterward that it was "inconceivable" that Congress would not approve a plan to Clinton's liking.

"Almost every member of the Democratic Party believes we must pass" the deficit-reduction bill, Rep. Steny Hoyer, D-Md., told reporters. "There is no optional bill."

House and Senate negotiators planned to begin meeting Thursday in an effort to write a compromise measure and send it to Clinton for his signature by early August.

Both chambers have approved measures that Democrats say would lead to about $500 billion in lowered budget deficits over the next five years. Their chief differences are over how energy would be taxed, the amount of cuts in Medicare, and how generous tax breaks for many businesses should be.

Republicans have unanimously opposed the measure, saying it lacks sufficient spending cuts and contains tax increases that would hurt business and the middle class.

To try to drive home their point, Republicans forced a symbolic House vote on whether to eliminate $21 billion the budget-cutting bill contains for food stamps, tax breaks for poor families, and other programs.

But after an angry debate that included raised voices and finger-pointing, majority Democrats rebuffed the non-binding measure by a virtual party-line, 238-184 tally.

"When it comes to economic policy, the Republican Party in this Congress has essentially been on strike since January" when Clinton took office, said Rep. David Obey, D-Wis.

"This is not an economic growth package, this is a growth in government package," responded Rep. Richard Armey, R-Texas.

Not one GOP lawmaker voted "yes" when the House approved its deficit-reduction bill by six votes in May, or when Vice President Al Gore broke a tie vote to pass the Senate version in June.

That has left passage of the measure up to Democrats, who say they know the consequences of failure.

"If it fails, the government's over. We know that," said Rep. Louise Slaughter, D-N.Y., referring to the administration's chances for success in the future.

Foley: Amendments couid derail abortion bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Abortion rights legislation won't get through Congress this year if it gets loaded down with amendments that let states restrict abortion, House Speaker Thomas Foley predicted Wednesday.

Foley, D-Wash., told reporters he still hasn't evaluated the fallout from the defeat abortion rights supporters suffered in the House recently on federal funding for Medicaid abortions. The House, by a bigger-than-expected margin, retained the so-called Hyde amendment, which bans such funding.

Also Wednesday, in what one congresswoman described as a sometimes "heated" exchange, the Congressional Women's Caucus met with Foley to air their lingering anger over the funding vote two weeks ago.

The women said that they felt the male leadership in the House abandoned them, and that the debate had racial and sexist tones.

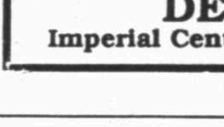

Anti-abortion lawmakers boasted momentum was turning their way after the vote on the Hyde amendment.

They noted 35 Democrats have told Foley they will side with Republicans on voting to allow restrictive amendments to be debated if the Freedom of Choice Act comes to the floor.

"There is such a thing as the mood of the House," Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., told reporters Wednesday at a breakfast sponsored by the National Right to Life Committee.

"Momentum begins, a tide commences," Hyde said, adding that lawmakers were starting to pay attention to constituents who don't want abortion on demand.

"Look, this is an issue that has political implications back home," Hyde said. "The members are pretty clear-eyed about how they vote."

'But we'll see whether the parliamentary circumstances exist for the bill to be considered.'

— House Speaker Thomas Foley

Foley said he hasn't counted votes lately on the Freedom of Choice Act. "I don't know yet what the situation is," he told reporters.

He has said he doesn't want to bring the abortion rights bill to the House floor unless the votes exist for a "closed rule," which would limit debate and therefore limit the number of amendments that could be added to allow states to impose waiting periods and other restrictions.

Inmate injury

An Odessa Municipal Jail inmate was treated and released Tuesday from Medical Center Hospital after suffering from what officials are calling a self-inflicted injury.

According to a police report, John James Udell, 28, was being held under authority of an Austin Police Department warrant charging him with forgery by passing.

After the Tuesday afternoon incident at the jail, Udell was transported to the hospital, where he was treated and returned to the municipal jail, officials said.

Police said that at approximately 11:45 a.m. Wednesday, Udell was again taken to the hospital, where he was treated and released.

He was released from jail Wednesday morning after all pending charges were dropped by the Travis County District Attorney's office, according to the report.

Carjacking

A federal grand jury handed down an indictment of carjacking against two New Jersey men on Wednesday. Warrants were issued by the U.S. Magistrate for Michael Scott Mortenson and Christopher J. Mortenson following the indictment, Assistant U.S. Attorney Jan Hartung said. The two are believed to be brothers, she said. The charges are in connection with an incident involving a Seminole man who was traveling from Odessa to Seminole last month. He stopped at a roadside park on Highway 385 between Odessa and Andrews and was approached by a man wearing a mask and carrying a gun, Ms. Hartung said. The masked man robbed the Seminole resident, tied him with duct tape and forced him into the car he and the other suspect had arrived in. One suspect drove the victim's car; his accomplice drove the other vehicle. The victim was found by police in Brownsfield after the driver of car was stopped by police for trying to make an illegal turn. The suspect then took off on foot. The victim's car was later recovered at the Lubbock airport. Ms. Hartung said Michael Mortenson is already in Andrews County Jail on state charges. Jail officials would not release what charges Christopher Mortenson was being held on. The case is under investigation by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Rap trial sentence

AUSTIN — A Houston man convicted of gunning down a state trooper was sentenced to death Wednesday after jurors rebuffed a claim that he was inflamed by hard-driving, anti-police rap music. The eight-man, four-woman jury had deliberated since Friday before recommending that Ronald Ray Howard, 19, die by lethal injection. Howard showed no emotion as the verdict was read. But he cried when his mother and grandmother embraced him./1D

White officers

HOUSTON — Founders of the White Officers Association say they are seeking equality for all Houston police officers and there are no racial implications to the name. Others are skeptical, asking why a police department that has long been dominated by white officers needs such a group. The group formed last month partly in response to the recent settlement of a discrimination lawsuit requiring 106 minority promotions over the next five years. Its leaders say they want a fair system for all, but they complain that white officers are victims of reverse discrimination./2B

City to tap into water savings

■ Officials plan to use new conservation program at parks that could save taxpayers' money.

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

City park officials plan to tap into a new water conservation program that could save taxpayers several thousand dollars annually.

Two wells at Hogan Park and another at Reyes-Mashburn-Nelms Park will begin pumping water from 150 feet below ground to irrigate sections of both parks. Community services director George Logan believes the program will trim water bills at Hogan Park by 50 to 60 percent.

"Hogan Park used to be an old water-well field. It makes sense to utilize that groundwater," Logan said. "It allows us to conserve money and conserve water, and at the same time we will be able to take the savings and do more park maintenance."

Utilities director Ken Jones believes the city could save $200,000 a year once the conservation program is fully on-line.

Logan — who estimates the parks department uses about 4 million gallons of water a year to irrigate Hogan Park alone — said the cost of pumping a thousand gallons of water will drop from $1.71 to 12 cents. The wells at Hogan Park pump 225 gallons of water a minute. The well at Reyes-Mashburn-Nelms Park generates 425 gallons a minute.

"We will be able to use a lot more water at a lot less cost, which means we can really green up

100s of freshmen receive good news from Abell-Hanger

■ Foundation awards several hundred incoming MC students local scholarships.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Several hundred Midland College incoming freshmen got good news in their mailboxes Wednesday.

"I got it. I got it," said one young woman who called the Reporter-Telegram. "I got the Abell-Hanger Scholarship and I'm going to school full-time instead of working full-time."

All but 11 students who turned in their applications by the July 1 deadline received the coveted local scholarship that will pay up to $325 a semester for tuition fees.

Since the Abell-Hanger Foundation began awarding the scholarships in 1985, this was the first year the group has limited the number of available scholarships. The foundation agreed to award $250,000 in scholarships this year, amounting to $650 for each student ($325 a semester provided requirements are met). The foundation has also committed to funding an additional $250,000 annually for three more years.

"Students really had a great shot at getting the scholarship," said Peggy Bartay, MC director of financial aid.

Ms. Bartay said that only 11 — of those students who had applications matched with transcripts on time and met grade point requirements — did not receive scholarships.

"There were 12 students we could not place with scholarships," Ms. Bartay said. "But then a sophomore called and returned an award, so that left 11."

Some students, however, may have missed even being considered for the scholarship since they neglected to turn in applications to be matched up with transcripts.

Lottery announces 2 new games, better odds

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Lottery officials have announced two new instant-win scratch card games.

Claiming "better odds and bigger prizes," Texas Lottery assistant director Zoann Attwood introduced "Tex Tac Dough" and "Texas Gold" on Wednesday.

Ms. Attwood said "Tex Tac Dough" offers overall odds of 1 in 4.37, the best of any game offered by the lottery to date. The game card is green, blue and gold with a tic-tac-toe board.

"The game features the popular tic-tac-toe style play with prizes ranging from $1 to $1,000, so it should not only be fun, but familiar as well," Ms. Attwood said.

"All you have to do is scratch the latex covering off of nine dollar signs, and if you have revealed three money bags in a row, either horizontally, vertically or diagonally, you win the prize amount under the rectangle labeled prize box," Ms. Attwood said.

Texas Gold features a gold oil derrick set against a golden sunset.

"With Texas Gold, every Texan really can own his or her own oil well," Ms. Attwood said. "The Texas Gold oil wells are affordable at just $1 each, and could be worth up to $10,000."

Southeast Elementary School teacher Alison Montgomery reads to children during a "Project Bluebird" session at DeZavala Elementary on Wednesday.

Project Bluebird encourages reading, writing

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Pupils in a school library were all a flutter over Project Bluebird on Wednesday.

About 30 youngsters darted to and fro, sharing rubber stamps and ink pads as they created stationary, books and journals at DeZavala Elementary School.

It was the last day of the summer program that encouraged reading and writing for pupils at four elementary schools — DeZavala, Pease, Burnet and Milam.

Students in neighborhoods near those four schools had an opportunity to attend the program from 1-3 p.m. on Tuesdays and Wednesdays. The program began almost as soon as school let out the first week of June.

"It's been a lot of fun. I liked working on the computers the best," said Israel Patino, 9, a fourth-grader bound for Henderson next fall.

But Israel also became an author this summer, and proudly read a few pages of his book starring "Fatso and Jojo."

Vanessa Soto, 9, who will attend Bonham as a fourth-grader, said she enjoyed learning techniques to create three-dimensional and pop-up books.

"What I liked best was making a paper house with doors that you can open and close and see what's inside," she said.

At her side, E.J. Franco, 6, an incoming first-grader at DeZavala, busily stamped colorful designs on his homemade stationary. "I will write letters on it later," he said.

As pupils from kindergarten through sixth grade stood side-by-side working on projects, language arts liaison Alison Montgomery noted that the

Couple's wedding vows stand firm after 70 years

By Linda Anderson
Staff writer

When Clay and Malinda Sullivan were married 70 years ago, women had only had the vote for a few years; few people had ever flown in an airplane; when anyone spoke about "The War" they meant World War I; Queen Victoria had been dead only about 20 years; and Calvin Coolidge was in the White House.

During the past 70 years, there have been enormous changes in the American way of life, and the Sullivans have experienced those changes together.

"It doesn't seem like it's been that long," Sullivan said.

The couple recently reminisced about their long and happy marriage.

"I remember our first date," Mrs. Sullivan said. "I had a girlfriend at my house and he actually came to make a date with her. ... Before the evening was over he made a date with me."

Even though they were quite young when they had their first date — Mrs. Sullivan was only 15 — their courtship was not an extremely long one.

"We dated for 17 months" before getting married, she said. "My parents liked him all right, but they didn't want me to date him. Back then girls didn't start dating as young as they do now."

The couple also was very young when they married on July 15, 1923 — she was 17 and he was 19. But even at that young age, Sullivan knew what his destiny was. "I've been a farmer all my life," he said.

Their lifestyle as newlyweds was a little different than what most young couples face today. After working all week on the farm, "when we first married, on Saturday night we'd dress up and go to town (Portia, Ark.) and visit with other young folks and drink sody pop and eat ice cream, and that was our entertainment," Mrs. Sullivan said.

In 1941, the couple decided to leave Arkansas and move to West Texas. They loaded everything they owned into a Model A car and drove west to become cotton farmers.

"His (Sullivan's) brother lived out here, that's why we came," Mrs. Sullivan said, even though they had never been to West Texas before.

"When we first saw mesquite, we thought it was a fruit tree," Mrs. Sullivan said. "It was Thanksgiving and they had no leaves. We didn't know."

They settled on a farm 16 miles outside of Snyder in the

Skeptics question association's name

HOUSTON (AP) — Founders of the White Officers Association say they are seeking equality for all Houston police officers and there are no racial implications to the name.

Others are skeptical, asking why a police department that has long been dominated by white officers needs such a group.

"Where are they not getting representation?" asks May Walker, president of the Afro American Police Officers League. "They have control here, that's just the way times have been."

The group formed last month partly in response to the recent settlement of a discrimination lawsuit requiring 106 minority promotions over the next five years.

Its leaders say they want a fair system for all, but they complain that white officers are victims of reverse discrimination.

"We don't want anybody to have preferential treatment just because of the color of their skin," said patrolman Jeff Larson, one of the founders.

Whites historically have dominated the Houston police department. The 4,627-member department includes 3,250 white officers, 720 blacks and 614 Hispanics. Of Houston's 1.6 million residents, 53 percent are white and 28 percent black. Hispanics, who also can be counted in the other groups, number 27 percent.

The settlement has sparked complaints from some white officers who claim minority officers have an unfair advantage.

Larson says neither the group's goals nor its name are racially motivated and that anyone can join.

"White is a neutral color, it's general," said Larson, an officer for two years. "I personally didn't vote for the name. But really it's sort of good, I guess, it catches the eye."

Only a few officers showed up at the group's second meeting a couple of weeks ago, but Larson maintains the membership has swelled to some 550 officers, including a few blacks and Hispanics.

His claims could not be independently verified.

Although leaders of some police groups are leery of the new association, they have so far refrained from formally protesting its formation.

"We'll wait and see what they're all about," said Ignacio Aranda, president of the department Organization of Spanish Speaking Officers.

Ms. Walker said grumblings over the discrimination lawsuit settlement are sour grapes.

"Someone else got a piece of the cookie and they got upset," she said.

Denton center handles flood assistance calls

DENTON (AP) — They're hundreds of miles away from the flood-soaked plains of the Midwest.

But operators at the Federal Emergency Management Agency's national teleregistration center are feeling the effects of the Great Flood of '93 as they juggle up to 4,000 calls a day from families seeking disaster assistance.

Since Minnesota, Wisconsin, Missouri, Iowa, and Illinois were declared federal disaster areas, calls have been pouring into the Denton operation. The center takes calls from around the United States for federal assistance whenever the government declares a major disaster.

"We are the initial entry point into the disaster relief system," said Glenn Garcelon, director of the center.

Garcelon said Wednesday about 300 staff members have been called in to help answer phones. Usually, about 30 people would handle the workload.

"We've registered about 6,300 families for assistance and taken approximately twice the number of calls," Garcelon said.

Anyone with disaster-related damage, regardless of personal income, is eligible for assistance, Garcelon said.

The most available type of relief is in the form of low-interest loans. However, grants are also available for people who cannot repay a loan, Garcelon said.

Under one program, if a house is damaged to where a family can no longer live in it, the government will pay the rent for a temporary place to stay.

SUCCESS: Project makes authors of children assignments were intended to appeal to a wide range of ages.

Ms. Montgomery, a teacher at South Elementary School, said the students were free to check out books, work on computers and study authors.

"We had structure, but it was multiple choice. They got to pick and choose what they wanted to do each day."

She said the DeZavala program averaged about 40 pupils each day it was offered.

"Some of these students are here for DeZavala College in the morning, they eat free lunch and then came to Project Bluebird," the teacher said. "So, it was a real extended day of enrichment for them."

"It's not like school at all. It's more fun," said Vanessa, who noted that she and many of her peers were veteran authors. "We always make books in school," she said.

Ms. Montgomery said she strived "for a stress-free environment."

The teacher said one of her pupils was shy, standoffish and reluctant to participate in activities at the beginning of the summer.

"Now look at her," Ms. Montgomery said, beaming and pointing to a pupil helping others at her table staple a book together.

"Seeing that makes me want to jump up and down," the teacher said. "The whole idea is to encourage writing and reading. They are connected."

She said the students took delight in having some books read to them, especially "The Principal from the Black Lagoon," by Mike Thaler.

"I developed lesson plans around the books, which would fall into an activity," she said. "Every hour or even minutes spent on reading each day raises test scores. Even better, the students are learning to get meaning from print."

"What I liked best was taking a book home to keep," one first-grader said.

Lucinda Windsor, coordinator of language arts for Midland Independent School District, said Parker & Parsley donated $1,000 to buy books for pupils in the program. "The program worked real well last year and we expanded it to more schools this year," she said.

"Some of the students don't have books at home," Ms. Windsor said. "This was a tremendous incentive for them to read the books and share. With one book you can touch more than one child. You can touch a whole family."

FUND: 100s of MC students receive scholarships

(From 1B)

"We have 160 transcripts that we never received applications for," Ms. Bartay said.

Confirmation letters were put in the mail Tuesday to notify award recipients. About 137 sophomores committed to returning and keeping their Abell-Hanger Scholarships.

Students receiving the scholarships — or their family members — must attend a 7 p.m. July 20 meeting in the college's Allison Fine Arts building and turn in a letter of commitment.

Students who neglected to turn their applications in should wait until after the July 20 meeting to apply. They will be put on a waiting list, behind the 11 students who turned in their paperwork on time, Ms. Bartay said.

Now, the next hurdle for scholarship recipients will be to maintain their scholarships. They must complete the required hours of course load, earn the required GPA, and complete 10 hours of community service a semester.

After completing 24 hours at MC, scholarship recipients meeting the required GPA will be inducted into the Abell-Hanger Society.

"This will indicate the student's mastery of the college curriculum and will be a clear indication to senior colleges and potential employers that those students succeed in whatever they do," said MC President David Daniel in a letter to scholarship hopefuls. "Abell Hanger Society membership will continue beyond Midland College and be a lasting connection to the student's alma mater."

Midway community. In 1949, they moved to a farm two miles from Snyder that is still their home when they are not in Midland with their son and his family. "We're just thankful that we can still stay by ourselves," Mrs. Sullivan said.

The Sullivans' two children — Clay A. Sullivan Jr. of Midland and Lavern Dooley of Claytonville — and their grandchildren and great-grandchildren are hosting a 70th anniversary reception Saturday in honor of the milestone event.

"The kids are giving us a big to-do for our anniversary," Mrs. Sullivan said.

And after all these years of marriage, the Sullivans have some advice for young couples just starting out who would someday like to celebrate their own 70th anniversaries. "All I can say is, it's a give-and-take situation," Mrs. Sullivan said.

But most important, "God has to be the center of the marriage. We've been church-going people all our lives, and living the Christian life is the best advice I have to give young people, because people are going to have their little differences and little tiffs, but if they are living for the Lord, it will work out."

The vows the Sullivans made 70 years ago have remained firm. "We've had a happy life," Mrs. Sullivan said. "We've been poor folk, but it's been wonderful."

these parks," Logan said. "After Hogan and eastside (Reyes-Mashburn-Nelms) park are ready we plan to move to the other large parks — such as Windlands and Bluebird."

Park employees plan to set the wells on timers to water sections of the park for an hour each night — as opposed to the current 30-minute nightly intervals.

Logan credited the parks department crew and Jimsco, Inc. — the low bidder on the installation — for the early success of the project.

"Except for the drilling of the wells, we did most of the work in-house. Our crew is skilled and very qualified. I'm real proud," he said.

Designers open bargain outlets

By Trish Donnally
N.Y. Times News Service

Geoffrey Beene opened his first women's outlet in Gilroy, Calif., last month, debuting a sporty, reasonably priced collection designed specifically for the outlet. Donna Karan opened an elegantly appointed outlet for men and women tucked discreetly among the vineyards of St. Helena, Calif., late last fall. Two of America's master designers opening outlets in the San Francisco Bay Area? What is this?

Yesteryear's grubby bargain-basement outlets filled with dingy, discontinued, out-of-season rejects are being replaced with light and airy well-designed factory stores filled with fresh fashions — sometimes actually current, seldom more than a season old — priced 25 percent to 70 percent off retail.

"I think it's the perfect moment because it looks as though a lot of outlets or chains out there have taken the basics about as far as they can go," says Beene. "Design must come into it. Women's wear needs things that make it feminine, personal, endearing and romantic that removes it from the ordinary. Women are not ready for a uniform."

HE'S HAPPY with the "refined" details in his sporty, licensed line, called Geoffrey Beene Sport, which is produced in New Jersey by Phillips-Van Heusen for the outlet.

"I wanted it to have a Geoffrey Beene look, signature and taste level; that's why I collaborate," says Beene, who visits the design studio about once every two months to oversee the collection.

And how does this affect his business with specialty stores? "It doesn't at all. It's totally another audience."

Developers of the many factory outlets dotting the countryside know exactly who that audience is.

"We attract a very sophisticated, well-educated, primarily female consumer. They're very smart shoppers. Our median age is about 39 and they usually have at least some college education and household income levels above $55,000," says Cheryl McArthur, president of McArthur/Glen Group, which has developed 16 outlet shopping centers around the nation, including the Pacific West Outlet Center in Gilroy.

WHILE SOME retailers are starving for business during this recession, outlet stores are booming.

"It's the fastest growing segment of retail right now, and I anticipate that it will continue to grow. More and more manufacturers are opening factory outlet stores," says Colleen Joseph, corporate director of marketing of Willey Creek Co., which is based in Exeter, N.H.

Willey Creek has developed or is developing 11 factory centers across the country.

"In the '90s, it's not how much you spend on something but how much you saved. It's a status symbol now to say you saved," says Randy Marks, president of Outlet Marketing Group, based in Orange, Conn. Outlet Marketing publishes a guidebook to the nation's outlets.

"Outlet centers are really the way of the future of retail. People are finding if they can shop factory direct, eliminating the middleman, they can save money. People are now getting brand-name merchandise. And now you're finding more and more it's in-season merchandise, so why pay more?" says Julie Plachta, marketing director of the Michigan-based Horizon Group, Inc., which has 10 outlet centers across the country.

CONSUMERS SPENT almost $10 billion at factory outlets last year. Rest assured, there are plenty of off-price clothes to go around.

"It's not how many centers there are, but the number of manufacturers. Three years ago you didn't have such players as Donna Karan, Carole Little and Kenneth Cole," says Marks.

Brooks Brothers, which began opening outlets about a year ago, also has one in St. Helena.

Baseball has spitting image

By Erma Bombeck

Nearly everyone's son wants to be a baseball player.

Why not? What other profession could he choose where he can slide around in the dirt, never work when it rains and spit whenever he wants?

Bombeck

I never understood spitting. It seemed like an old man's occupation. It gave them a time frame while they were sitting on the front porch whittling elephants out of Ivory soap. ("When I finish the trunk, I'll spit.")

It was always a shock for me to see young men in their 20s run out on the playing field with lumps in their jaws the size of tennis balls. The camera always seemed to know when they were going to spit. The spitters always seemed to know which way the wind was blowing.

There were the flashy long-distance spewers whose black juice would soar through the air like an oral shot put.

There were the conservative spitters who aimed for their shoes and hoped it didn't land on their shoestring.

The dribblers were always pathetic. It was usually a manager who wanted to be one of the guys. He always waited too long before he spit and it would slide slowly down his chin.

With the new ban on chewing tobacco in the minor leagues, all of that is about to change. The "field of dreams" will no longer produce a tobacco crop. A lot of players just don't get it. They ask us to look at the alternative — bubble gum and jawbreakers — and ask if that is better for you.

I'm looking at them. Bubble gum hasn't hurt Michael Jordan, or for that matter any of the other sports figures playing hockey, tennis, basketball or football. A quarterback or a hockey goalie aren't going to blow too many bubbles, but they couldn't spit a lot in their gear, either.

Personally, I don't like a sport that includes public body functions such as nose wiping, scratching and spitting out mouthpieces like dentures. And while we're at it, I might just as well include foul language. Maybe athletes aren't role models, but the respect for the sport should be kept intact. Children have become pretty adept at reading lips. They know one competitor is not shouting into his opponent's face, "Fine!"

There will undoubtedly be a lot of flap over the chewing tobacco ban in baseball. Someone will search the Constitution for the right-to-spit clause or stage a spit-in.

Just tell your kids, "Hey, you can still play in the dirt and take the day off when it rains. Two out of three isn't bad."

When you are a trick short of what you have contracted for, look for the possibility of gaining a trick by ruffing in the short-trump hand. But be careful which suit you ruff.

West's two-diamond response was a transfer to hearts. North's double showed diamonds and, after East-West bid the heart game, North competed further in his second suit. South took preference to partner's first-bid suit and East's double ended the auction.

The lead of the queen of hearts, for a look at dummy, followed by a spade shift would have worked well here, but West not unnaturally led the singleton spade. Declarer made the most of the opportunity.

The opening lead was taken with the ace and declarer immediately crossed to the ace of clubs and took a ruffing finesse for the queen. Had East covered, declarer would have ruffed, drawn trumps and lost only one trick in each major. However, East ducked as declarer discarded a heart, then ducked again when the jack was led, allowing declarer to part with a second heart.

East was forced to cover the next club with the king and it was tempting for South to ruff with the nine—that would land the fulfilling trick if East held the ten of diamonds. However, there was a surer way—declarer pitched the remaining heart. West ruffed, but a heart ruff in the closed hand was the fulfilling trick. In all, declarer scored five trump tricks, four clubs, a spade and a heart ruff.

Music insiders don't buy claims that Nashville shunned k.d. lang

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Music industry representatives don't buy claims that singer k.d. lang was shunned by Nashville.

lang

"People in Nashville had a lot of confidence in k.d.," said Bill Ivey, director of the Country Music Foundation. "Everybody admires her singing, and I think everybody thought she was a breath of fresh air."

The Canadian singer, who has proclaimed her homosexuality and is featured on the August cover of Vanity Fair pretending to be shaved by model Cindy Crawford, told the magazine that Nashville's problem with her was all in the hair: Hers wasn't big enough.

"Some people embraced her wholeheartedly, as I did, and thought she was refreshing and wonderful," Bob Saporiti, vice president of marketing at Warner Bros. Records in Nashville, said Tuesday.

Lang won a Grammy this year for her pop single, "Constant Craving." Before that, she was a country-styled singer with records such as "Crying" with the late Roy Orbison and "Absolute Torch and Twang" that featured Loretta Lynn, Kitty Wells and Brenda Lee on one song.

Her last album, the non-country "Ingenue," has sold more than 1 million copies.

LOS ANGELES — Comedian Sinbad hopes his new TV series about a single black man with two foster children will change the image of black fathers.

"Sinbad" debuts in the fall on the Fox network.

The stand-up comic, whose father is a minister, said the series will "toot our horns to say, 'Hey man, we raise kids, too.'"

"I'm so tired of reading the negativity that black fathers run away," he said. "They always talk about the matriarchal society in the black society. I have a great father. Most of the guys I knew had great fathers. It's almost like now the myth has become the reality, that black men do not take care of children. And that's not true."

NEW YORK — Mark Shields, the political pundit whose partner David Gergen left PBS-TV's "MacNeil-Lehrer Newshour" to join the White House, has had plenty of offers from people wanting to be his new teammate.

"I am just realizing what a coveted job it is," Shields said in an interview published Wednesday in The New York Times.

The two had been playing political commentary off each other for six years, until Gergen was named President Clinton's communications director. Gergen, a Republican, usually took the conservative position while Shields was the liberal.

"He hasn't tried to spin me yet," Shields said, using jargon that roughly translates "influence my thinking in Clinton's favor."

"But," said Shields, "I assume he will. I'd be frankly disappointed if he didn't. It's like not being asked to the drive-in."

DANBURY, Conn. — Elizabeth Taylor helped the city turn straw into gold at a celebrity hat auction benefiting a shelter for homeless women and their children.

A straw hat donated by Miss Taylor fetched $530 Tuesday, at least $200 more than any other hat sold.

More than 50 other celebrities also donated hats and other movie memorabilia to the auction, which raised $5,800.

Sharyn Fregosi of Danbury took home Taylor's white hat trimmed with crimson flowers.

"She's a hell of a woman. I just had to have that hat," Fregosi said.

An NBC "Late Night" cap from David Letterman sold for $80, while a baseball cap from former Brooklyn Dodger Pee Wee Reese went for $165.

A hat from the estate of singer Marion Anderson was sold for $105 and was then donated to the city's Scott Fanton Hat Museum.

Proceeds from Tuesday night's auction went to the Salvation Army Good Neighbor's House.

NEW YORK (— Maybe it was just another stunt on the movie set, but Indiana basketball coach Bob Knight reportedly sent Dick Vitale sprawling while they were cranking up for their star turns in a film about college basketball.

The New York Daily News reported in Wednesday that Knight shoved the ESPN-ABC announcer at a high school in Frankfort, Ind., where scenes for "Blue Chips" were being shot.

The incident reportedly occurred Friday when Vitale grabbed Knight in a surprise bear hug, saying, "Hey, big fella, how are you doing?"

Startled, Knight turned on Vitale and shoved the broadcaster, knocking him down, the newspaper reported.

"I slipped to the floor," Vitale said. "I was just playing. I was surprised when he pushed me, but it's not a big deal. I just wanted to surprise him."

"Bobby was having some personal problems, I don't know if it was family or business or what," Rob Harris the movie's publicist in Frankfort told The Associated Press on Wednesday. "There was some tension that he came in with, and Vitale just caught him at the wrong moment."

DEAR ABBY

Democratic process raises questions

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Recently, I saw a news story on television regarding the possibility of installing public toilets on the streets in New York City. It seems a European company had installed several as a test, which were very well received by the people of that city, with one notable exception — a group of handicapped people who were upset because the toilets were not designed to accommodate wheelchairs. These people threatened to block the adoption of these toilets until provisions for wheelchairs were made.

Van Buren

One group argued that the facilities might be used for purposes other than for the one intended. Still, this action by a few could prevent the adoption of these toilets by the city.

Abby, what is happening to our society? Why should a vocal minority prevent the majority from realizing an enormous convenience simply because they cannot also benefit? My high school civics teacher taught us that a test for democratic action was "the greatest good for the greatest number of people."

Since you have frequently championed the rights of the disabled, what are your feelings about this? — ROBERT M. JOHNSTON JR., AUMSVILLE, ORE.

DEAR MR. JOHNSTON: I, too, think it's unfair to deprive the able-bodied majority of the convenience of public toilets on the streets because the physically challenged minority cannot be accommodated. Therefore, I would recommend a compromise: Include some public toilets to accommodate people in wheelchairs.

DEAR ABBY: Twice, I've asked a friend of mine to concerts — usually with the opening, "Would you like to go to the concert with me?" She accepted both times.

I was expecting her to pay for her own ticket, but she said nothing — nor did she suggest a "pre" or "post-concert" refreshment on her.

She is good company and I am contemplating asking her again, but how can I ensure that she "gets it" by paying for her own ticket? — THIRD ROW CENTER

DEAR THIRD ROW CENTER: The next time you ask her, tell her that you would be pleased to have her company at the concert — if she wants to go "Dutch." Better yet, so there will be no misunderstanding, say, "We will each pay our own way."

DEAR ABBY: I'm a high school student, and since I constantly have to fill out forms (test forms, job, doctor, etc.), I have noticed something that bothers me. When you have to indicate "gender," "male" is always listed before "female." Why is this? Doesn't "F" come before "M" in the alphabet?

I would like to see "female" first for once. Is there anyone you could consult to find out why this is? I would appreciate it because I am very curious. — FED UP IN NEWPORT BEACH

DEAR FED UP: Spoken like a true budding feminist. I acknowledge that the practice is usual and customary, but I don't see it as a put-down for women. (I almost said "the weaker sex": Old habits die hard.)

DEAR ABBY: You want to hear about recycled gifts? Susie was visiting Elma and noticed a beautiful and expensive-looking beer stein in Elma's china cabinet. Susie kept looking at it, then she said, "Why, that's just like the one I bought Eddie!" (Eddie was Susie's husband.)

Elma then said, "Oh? ... Art (Eddie's half-brother) gave it to us." Susie just stood there with her mouth open. She then realized why Eddie's gift had mysteriously disappeared. — MYSTERY SOLVED

Summer 'fashions' can promote safety too

By Loretta Grantham
N.Y. Times News Service

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — First there was the bicycle. Then the basket, then the bell. And this was all very cute. But it was also ... very boring.

Well, yawn no more. Because now you can buy neon tubes — like the ones you see on Vegas-glow cars — for your bike.

The battery-powered tubes come in kits of two ($99) or three ($129). Green, fuchsia and purple are most popular.

"They certainly attract attention," said Dave Haynes, owner of Palm Beach Schwinn, a Palm Beach Gardens shop that carries the new product. "They're really getting popular down in South Beach, but we look at them more for safety."

The 12- or 20-inch tubes, which are made by Neon Flash 2000 in Hollywood, Fla., are attached with thin plastic strips. Just think: You'll finally have a beamer!

The latest hat trick is a disappearing act.

California designer Marty Karabees has invented a brimless baseball cap. (Can you see the confusion on the pitcher's face?) Behold the upscale beanie.

"It's a fun version of the standard cap, something different that just hit me," said Karabees, who launched the Plain Geometry label in 1984. "Response has been incredible. People think it's cool."

The hat, which you must wear backward to achieve total hipness, costs $16 and is available at major retailers.

Cowboys ink two

IRVING — The Dallas Cowboys signed two draft choices and two free agents Wednesday, just in time for the newcomers to join the defending Super Bowl champs for the beginning of training camp.

Linebacker Barry Minter, a sixth-round draft pick from Tulsa, and safety Brock Marion, a seventh-round choice from Nevada-Reno, were signed as were tight end Rich Bartlewski and defensive lineman Casey Gamble.

Bartlewski was in camp with the Cowboys last fall after catching 14 passes for 122 yards for Montreal of the World League. He also played four games for the Los Angeles Raiders in 1990 and once for the Atlanta Falcons in 1991.

Gamble played collegiately at Alabama A&M and Panhandle State University in Goodwell, Okla.

The Cowboys begin training Thursday in Austin.

McDowell back

ARLINGTON — The Texas Rangers have signed one of their former first-round draft choices, outfielder Oddibe McDowell, to a minor league contract with the Tulsa Drillers.

He had not played since breaking his collarbone last year. The Rangers said Wednesday that McDowell, 30, will join the Texas League team for workouts this week.

The Rangers' first-round draft choice in 1984, McDowell was promoted to the majors the following May and became the team's rookie of the year that season.

But McDowell went to the Cleveland Indians in 1989, and played with the Atlanta Braves in 1989 and 1990. He was with California last season, but the Angels released him at the end of the season.

The Rangers said in a prepared release that McDowell is expected to be activated on Wednesday of next week, following the Texas League's all-star break.

McDowell was playing for Edmonton when he suffered his injury in April 1992. His career major-league average of .252 included 73 home runs, 251 RBIs .

Baseball leaders roar

■ Colorado's Andres Galaggara uses expansion slot to go to the head of the hitting class in the National League.

By Alan Robinson
AP Sports Writer

BALTIMORE — 56. 755. .406.

They're statistics so recognizable, so remarkable and, perhaps so unreachable they'll likely be part of the lore and legend of baseball as long as the game exists. They're Joe DiMaggio's 56-game hitting streak, Hank Aaron's 755 homers and Ted Williams' .406 average.

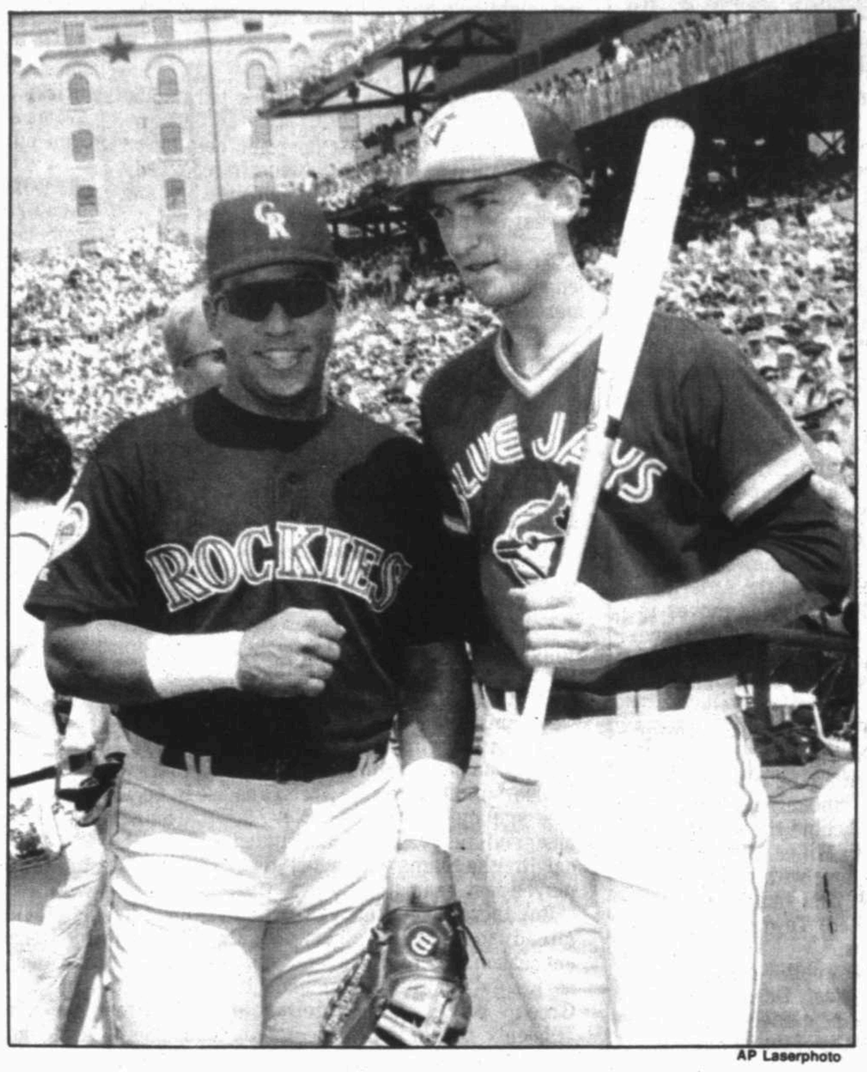

So how in the world is Andres Galarraga — remember, we're talking about a career .267 hitter, not Ty Cobb — flirting with the unthinkable?

No American Leaguer has hit .400 since Williams in 1941, no NL player has done it since Bill Terry in 1930. Yet both Olerud (.395) of Toronto and Galarraga (.391) of the Colorado Rockies are tippy-toeing on the fine line of instant immortality at the All-Star break. No player's average has been so high midway through the season since Rod Carew (.402) in 1983.

"To me, what he's doing is amazing," former batting champion Tony Gwynn said of Galarraga, who's never hit above .305 in the majors. "They always said the only chance for a .400 hitter was during an expansion season, but Olerud's doing it without expansion and (Galarraga) is on an expansion team."

Of course, expansion might have kept Galarraga in the game. The St. Louis Cardinals had all but given up on him,

■ Toronto's John Olerud is hitting .395 after entering the season with a lifetime .269 batting average.

By David Ginsburg
AP Sports Writer

BALTIMORE — Something extraordinary must have happened to John Olerud last winter. How else can one explain his .395 batting average, compared to a .269 lifetime mark?

"The big thing I can put my finger on is that I got married," the Toronto Blue Jays' first baseman said Monday, the day before his first All-Star game. "Yeah, that's it. She's a great hitting coach."

She must be. Because Olerud has done little to change his batting technique, yet he's challenging the .400 mark, which no one has cleared since Ted Williams in 1941.

Pressed to come up with an explanation, Olerud rattles off a variety of theories. A sampling:

"I've spent a couple of years in the big leagues, and now I know what it's like facing different pitchers and what they're trying to do to get you out. ... I've been more aggressive early in the count. That's been a big difference. ... Early in spring training, I started swinging the bat well. When you have success like that, it builds your confidence."

"This is definitely uncharted waters for me," Olerud, 24, said. "I'm used to getting off to slow starts in April and May, but it's been a good first half and I've been able to relax real easily."

Oh? About the only relaxation Olerud

Bichette riding 'Mile High' in Colorado

■ Former Midland Angel Dante Bichette is a "happy camper" in the wilds of the Colorado Rockies.

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

DENVER — Being relegated to an expansion team and destined for the lower part of the major league standings would appear to be the death knell for a baseball player. So why is former Midland Angel Dante Bichette such a happy camper in the wilds of the Colorado Rockies?

Bichette has had a tour with the California Angels and the Milwaukee Brewers before being picked by the Rockies this year in the expansion draft as Colorado makes its maiden debut in the Mile High land of big time baseball. It was a move Bichette embraced with open arms.

At first glance, it would seem strange that Bichette would relish the idea of being left on the unprotected list by the Brewers and then suffering the final reality that home would be with a pitching poor franchise that has to scrape for each and every victory. But Bichette would be disappointed if he had to leave the Rockies.

"Actually, this is where I want to be," Bichette said as the Rockies prepared to play its first game of the second half of the season. "Both Florida and Colorado called my agent prior to the (expansion) draft, and both said they were interested in me. I wanted the move to Colorado and I'm happy that things turned out the way they did."

And if being a happy player means results, then Bichette is a prime example. He was hitting .321 at the end of the first half and now stands at .309 after a mild slump, six games into the second half. However, he has knocked in 52 runs and homered for the 10th time in the first game of the second half to keep him on pace for 20 for the year. He also shares the National League lead for doubles with 26 at the All-Star break.

Those are results worth noting even though Bichette has taken a back seat to Rockies' first baseman Andres Galarraga, who has been flirting with the .400 mark all season.

Bichette says that those numbers haven't come by accident and credits Rockies' manager Don Baylor with a lot of his current ride of success.

"Coming to Colorado was a chance to stay with Don Baylor," Bichette notes. "He was my hitting instructor at Milwaukee and I owe him a lot. He gave me the chance to hit third in the order and that's where I'm used to hitting, but never got that chance with Milwaukee or California.

"Don put me in the third slot and I knew I could do the job because that's where I'm used to hitting."

But even Bichette admits that there might be a small asterisk to his success this year at the plate.

"It certainly doesn't hurt to be hitting in front of the hottest hitter (Galarraga) in the National League. I'm getting a lot of good pitches. I hope Andres hits .450 for the year."

Playing at Mile High Stadium doesn't hurt either.

Faldo early favorite

By Steve Wilstein
AP Sports Writer

SANDWICH, England (AP) — "Ching! Ching!'

It's the sound of the slot machine and the cash register, the sound of money, and Nick Faldo is ringing it up hole after hole in his final practice round before he begins defense Thursday of his British Open title.

A 10-foot birdie putt bumps along slowly into the 8th hole at Royal St. George's, he punches the air with an uppercut and rings it up again:

"Ching! Ching!"

Applause and laughter from the gallery, then he turns to his longtime caddy, Fanny Sunesson, and says softly with cocky coolness:

"It's like taking candy from a baby."

Changing clubs, Faldo tosses a few balls into the bunker on the right side of the green and pops them out. The first settles 6 inches from the cup, the second 3 inches closer, the third a foot away. He climbs up to the green to inspect his work, then quips to his caddy:

"You can take that magnet out of your pocket, Fanny."

More laughs. Is this guy loose or what? A year ago at Muirfield he sought to change his image as the "mechanical man."

"Call me Monsieur Naturel," he said.

Faldo showed his emotions when he cried unashamedly after sinking the winning putt, and now he's the 6-1 betting favorite again and joking with the crowd.

Toronto Seven better worry about AL East

■ The Blue Jays had fun as stars, but they have lost 10 of their last 11 games as teams go back to business today.

By Jim Donaghy
AP Baseball Writer

The Toronto Seven did just fine in the All-Star game. It's the American League East the Blue Jays better be worried about.

The first-place Blue Jays start the second half of the season with 10 losses in their last 11 games. The sudden slide has turned the East into a tight race, with four teams — New York, Detroit, Baltimore and Boston — within three games of the defending World Series champions.

In case the race stays close the rest of the way, mark down Sept. 30-Oct. 3 on the calendar: It's when Toronto visits Camden Yards to finish the season against the Orioles.

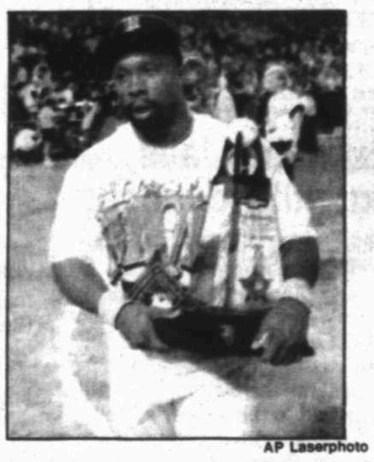

Baltimore's fans booed Blue Jays manager Cito Gaston in Wednesday's All-Star game for allowing his own Duane Ward to pitch the ninth in a 9-3 AL win instead of using the Orioles' Mike Mussina.

But back to the pennant race.

"Everybody goes through some struggles," said All-Star second baseman Roberto Alomar, one of seven Toronto players on the AL team. "What people don't realize is that we came a long way. Two months ago, we were seven games back."

For now, every team in the AL has a chance. Only 8½ games separate the first six teams in the East and everybody's in the race in the West.

In the NL, it will take a collapse by the San Francisco Giants to make things interesting in September. But remember, Atlanta is 104-55 after the All-Star break the last two seasons.

AP Laserphoto

Minnesota's Kirby Puckett ...the star of stars

The Philadelphia Phillies have shown signs lately why the NL East might have a race after all. The pitching has cracks and Mitch Williams has been inconsistent.

Here's how things shape up:

AL EAST

Each team needs a starting pitcher and the first to find one might be able to establish a comfortable lead.Last season, the Blue Jays got David Cone in August. This year, it could be the Mets' Sid Fernandez.

Dave Stewart (4-4, 4.69) and Jack Morris (5-9, 7.41) are showing their age. The Blue Jays' best starter is Pat Hentgen (11-4), but he's only 4-4 at home.

The Blue Jays have a 5.49 ERA in July and Joe Carter is batting .179 this month.

The Yankees are coming off a 2-8 trip

West Texas Heat wins state crown

TEMPLE — Midland's West Texas Heat came through the loser's bracket here over the weekend to win the ASA Girls 14-under State Championship Fastpitch tournament, winning six games in 12 hours of play on Sunday.

Overall, the Heat produced a 9-1 record after losing to the Corsicana Lady Tigers, 7-5, in the third game to fall into the loser's bracket on Saturday. They went on to win seven games in a row to win the title.

The Heat defeated the Freeport Fireballs, 16-12 and 15-7, in the championship finals. After losing to Corsicana, the Heat reeled off victories over Angleton's Lady Cats, 13-8; Temple's Tornadoes, 10-6; Clute's Chaos, 11-3; China Spring's Rising Stars, 6-5; Nacogdoches' Gangsters, 11-6; and Freeport twice.

The Heat opened the tournament with a Friday win over Lake Jackson, 15-4, and then battered Brownwood, 30-1, in their first game on Saturday morning before falling to Corsicana.

Thirty-seven teams from across the state competed for the title. The Heat's win qualifies them to be Texas' representative in the regional tournament to be held later this month.

Endurance was the key to this state championship. The Heat played six back-to-back games on Sunday's final day to pull out the title, covering almost 12 hours on the field.

Heat Team Members: Jennifer Aman, Jessica Garcia, Katrina Kelley, Jessica Moss, Jeni Neatherlin, Adrian Nobles, Kasie Norris, Kim Paschall, Shelly Primeaux, April Sheppard and Chrystal Smith. Coaches: Ray Kelley, Mike Primeaux and Stan Smith.

Midland National wins two games

Midland National beat El Paso Manning 10-2 Tuesday and then nipped the Big Spring All-Stars 8-5 Wednesday in the District 3 Senior League Tournament at Angels Stadium.

Ryan Elder was the winning pitcher against Big Spring while Britt Harper got the save. Elder was three-for-four with a double and Justin Ham had two doubles. Keith Lant also doubled and Daniel Christensen was two-for-two at the plate.

Against El Paso, Clay Johnston picked up the victory and had a triple in the game while Lant had another double.

Midland National will meet Lamesa at 8 p.m. at Angels Stadium today. The tournament runs through July 19.

Excalibur falls, but still advances

BLAINE, Minn. — Midland Excalibur absorbed a 1-0 loss to Coleigo Madrid of Mexico City here Wednesday night in the USA Cup soccer tournament, which is the largest youth tournament in the nation, but still advanced to the winner's bracket by virtue of a second place finish in their flight.

Excalibur now owns a 1-1-1 record in the tournament after Wednesday's round.

The loss may have been even more costly on the physical side since Excalibur may have lost starting midfielder Sam Reed and right half Kyle Berry to injuries. They were being checked for severe injuries from a very physical match with the Coleigo Madrid team late Wednesday, according to reports.

Excalibur will play again to today, but the team didn't know its opponent since all results were not in late Wednesday night.

N. Central beats Tower in tourney

BIG SPRING — Midland North Central gained a berth in the District Little League Tournament here Wednesday night with a 2-0 win over Midland Tower, which suffered its first loss in the double elimination tournament.

North Central's Eric Neatherlin tossed a one-hitter at Tower, giving up only a first inning single to Tower's Matt Watson. Neatherlin walked only one batter.

North Central got a solo home run from Aaron Perez in the second inning and Eric Clodfelter drove in Chris Appel with an RBI double in the third inning.

North Central moves to the championship game, slated for Saturday night at the American League Park. Tower moves to the loser's bracket and will face the winner of the Odessa Salinas-Odessa Sherwood game on Friday.

Earlier this week, Tower earned the right to meet North Central with a 7-2 win over previously unbeaten Midland Northern behind the solid pitching of Josh Miller. Miller aided his own cause with a solo home run in the first inning. Derrick Watters led Tower with two home runs.

Also this week, North Central pounded West Odessa 18-2 to move into the game with Tower, but no details of that game were available.

Thinclads move to nationals

Three members of the Tall City Christian Track Club will compete in the USATF Junior Olympics July 27 in Baton Rouge, La.

Tanisha Mills, a 1993 Midland Lee graduate, John McAfee Jr. and Marcha Tennon all placed third or better at events in the Region 12-USA Track and Field Junior Olympics over the weekend at Ratliff Stadium in Odessa.

Mills won the shot put with a 38-9 toss, the 200-meter at 24.48 and placed third in the 400. McAfee, an LHS sophomore, finished second in the triple jump (42-4), sixth in the 110 meter hurdles and was on the fifth-place 1600 meter relay team with Alex Strambler, Fred Pertile and Issac Smith. Tennon, an LHS junior, finished third in the shot put with a 35-2.

The Young Men's 400 meter relay of Jerry Norman, Landley Mannery, Roderick Mayfield and Dwight Allison placed seventh. Samuel Sherrod finished eighth in the 9-10 100. The Tall City Christian Track Club team will compete in Stanton this weekend at the TAAF State Qualifying Meet.

Ince captures NTPGA Jr. title

Brandon Sanders won the boys 14-15 division with a 75, Julie McMahon the girls 15-18 with a 79 and Eric Ray the boys 12-13 with an 81. In the girls 12-14 division, Suzanne Sowers won by shooting an 87, Jason Lindgren won the boys 10-11 with a 38 and Heather Norman won the girls 10-11 with a 42.

Here are second and third place finishers: Boys 10-11: Jaime Luna 40, Jarryd Foreman 43. Girls 10-11: Laura Sowers 48, Amy Roach 58. Boys 12-13: Brian Rainey 81, Laynce Nix 82. Girls 12-14: Shanna Anderson 128, Tabatha Breeding 131. Boys 14-15: David Todd 75, Pat Carter 77. Girls 15-18: Beth Covington 79, Heather Albright 80. Boys 16-18: Robert Freeman 74, Eddie Hatch 75.

Hogan aces fall

Landon Lay and Henry Shaw both had holes-in-one Tuesday at the Hogan Park Golf Course. Lay, playing in the park's junior tournament, used a seven-iron on the 180-yard No. 10 hole. Shaw aced the 150-yard No. 6 hole, using a six-iron and was playing with Bernie Hagins and Steve Miles.

SECOND HALF: Braves need big win streak to the West Coast. Despite collapsing in the late innings several times, New York actually gained on Toronto and trails by one game.

(From 1C)

Give the Yankees an edge in schedule and pitching. New York plays most of its games at home the next six weeks and must take advantage.

Detroit has 105 homers, but the Tigers pitching is weak.

Boston climbed back into the race without Roger Clemens. Clemens' time on the disabled list might help him in September when he tends to fade.

AL WEST

From top to bottom, the West is separated by 8½ games.

The Chicago White Sox have the best talent but can't put together a winning streak.They hold a one-game lead over Kansas City and Texas. Seattle and California are two out.

The sleeper's in Seattle. Manager Lou Piniella has kept the Mariners close despite numerous injuries.

With Tony La Russa managing and Dennis Eckersley heating up, don't ever count the A's out of it. But Oakland needs another starter.

Texas is staying close without Jose Canseco, thanks to Juan Gonzalez, Rafael Palmeiro and Deal Palmer. But the Rangers' top winner is Charlie Leibrandt (9-4).

Hal McRae might have to rip up his office again soon to keep the Kansas City Royals close. Cone needs a big second half.

NL EAST

It seems only yesterday the St. Louis Cardinals were 11½ games behind the Phillies. The Cardinals used their old formula of pitching, speed and defense to move within five games.

Greg Jefferies is batting .343 and the Cards .271 as a team. The addition of a starter might even put St. Louis within a game or two.

It looked like the Phillies' year for a while. But Curt Schilling, Tommy Greene and Terry Mulholland have been shaky lately and the Phillies don't have a relief pitcher to match big Lee Smith.

The Phillies should hang on if their pitching rebounds. If not, see you in St. Louis.

Only one other question in the East. Will Anthony Young win a game?

NL WEST

The best team in baseball? It's the San Francisco Giants right now. Barry Bonds is on his way to a third consecutive MVP and Robby Thompson is having a career year.

Rookie manager Dusty Baker is a little concerned about his pitching going into the second half. Trevor Wilson is hurting and it's unlikely John Burkett, Bud Black and Bill Swift can keep up their first-half pace.

The Giants might try for Dennis Martinez of the Expos or Greg Harris of the Padres.

Atlanta was picked by just about everyone. The pitching hasn't been the problem, either. The Braves have scored two runs or less in 30 games this year.

This team needs an offensive spark, whether it's Fred McGriff of the Padres or calling up shortstop Chipper Jones.

Any team with Tom Glavine, Greg Maddux, John Smoltz and Steve Avery starting can put together a winning streak. But they better on Thursday.

NFL has free agents freeze

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

In the NFL, July is now the time of year when the only players frozen are free agents.

Following the first off-season in which players were free to market themselves league-wide, all 28 NFL training camps open this week and next — two-a-day workouts arriving simultaneously with the dog days of summer.

Also simultaneous: a freeze on free agency — until next Nov. 9, unsigned players can be signed only by the teams with which they played last year.

But there's been enough action already to make this a very different season, where free agents such as Reggie White (Philadelphia to Green Bay); Tim McDonald (Phoenix to San Francisco), Anthony Munoz (Cincinnati to Tampa Bay) and Ronnie Lott (Raiders to Jets) will be in new uniforms.

And that's not counting trades, generated at least in part by free agency, that have sent Joe Montana and Marcus Allen to Kansas City, Wilber Marshall to Houston and Eric Dickerson to Atlanta. That's six almost sure Hall of Famers (White, Munoz, Lott, Montana, Allen and Dickerson) and a lot more Pro Bowl-caliber players in new colors.

How much will that change the face of the NFL?

Perhaps not very much — other than White, all those big names are well past their prime and Montana has played only one half in two seasons.

The Dallas Cowboys, who went from 1-15 to a Super Bowl title in three seasons, enter camp as the favorites to become just the second team in 14 years to repeat as Super Bowl champions. They made virtually no changes, although the loss of backup quarterback Steve Beuerlein to Phoenix could hurt — Super Bowl MVP Troy Aikman will probably miss most of training camp with back problems.

There already have been two examples of how risky free agency can be.

The Atlanta Falcons lost cornerback Melvin Jenkins — signed from Detroit to replace Deion Sanders — with a stress fracture. Also, offensive tackle Don Maggs, brought in by Denver from Houston, is out four months with a back injury.

Five teams open camp with new coaches — Chicago, Denver, the New York Giants, New England and Washington.

But like free agency, the coaching situation is something of a revolving door.

The biggest name among the new guys is Bill Parcells, who takes over 2-14 New England after spending two years at NBC following his second Super Bowl with the Giants.

Ray Handley has been replaced in the Meadowlands by Dan Reeves, fired by the Broncos after three losing Super Bowls. Reeves' successor is Wade Phillips, Reeves' ex-defensive coordinator, son of ex-coach Bum Phillips and the one-time interim coach of the New Orleans Saints.

The defensive coordinator trend is also there in the other two changes — Dave Wannstedt, who headed Jimmy Johnson's Dallas defense last year in Chicago and Richie Petitbon, who took over the Redskins when three-time Super Bowl winner Joe Gibbs stepped down last spring.

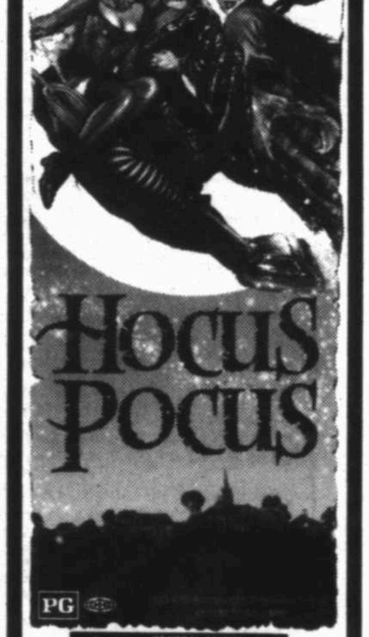

And just to complete the cycle, both Gibbs and Mike Ditka, fired by the Bears, have replaced Parcells at NBC, the cradle of coaches.

Free agency also turned out to be a revolving door.

New Orleans, for example, was involved in what amounted to two trades, losing fullback Craig Heyward to the Bears, then signing Chicago fullback Brad Muster. The Saints also let quarterback Bobby Hebert go after signing Wade Wilson from Atlanta and Hebert promptly signed with the Falcons.

In other cases, there were three-team movements, like the linebacker shift among the Steelers, Rams and Chargers. In those dealings, Jerrol Williams went from Pittsburgh to San Diego; Henry Rolling from San Diego to Los Angeles and Kevin Greene from Los Angeles to Pittsburgh.

Training Camps

Here's how the NFC East shapes up entering training camp.
EAST
Dallas (13-3)

OPEN CAMP: July 15, Austin, Texas.
STRENGTHS: Young veterans, including Aikman, RB Emmitt Smith, WR Michael Irvin and coming stars like Erik Williams, Leon Lett and Kevin Smith, taken with the bonanza of draft picks obtained for Herschel Walker.
ADDITIONS AND SUBTRACTIONS: Beuerlein's loss may hurt more than expected now that Aikman looks fragile. Also lost Kelvin Martin, their excellent punt returner and third WR, who went to Seattle. Millen was the only significant addition.
CAMP NEEDS: Relatively minor. Find replacement for Martin (rookie Kevin Williams?) and backup for Smith (rookie Derrick Lassic?). Again, assuming Aikman's OK.
OPENING EXHIBITION: Aug. 1, at home to Minnesota.
OPEN SEASON: Sept. 6, Washington (night).

Philadelphia (11-5)

OPEN CAMP: July 13 (rookies), July 20 (veterans, West Chester, Pa.).
STRENGTHS: A dwindling nucleus of defensive standouts, like Clyde Simmons and Seth Joyner, from what was once the NFL's best unit. WR Fred Barnett and QB Randall Cunningham on offense.
ADDITIONS AND SUBTRACTIONS: THE subtraction of the year was Reggie White, the hub of the defense, who signed with Green Bay. Tim Harris was signed to replace him as a pass rusher, but the Eagles lost two other defensive linemen, Mike Pitts and Mike Golic, as well as Jim McMahon, Cunningham's backup.
CAMP NEEDS: Replacing White somehow — Harris is more a LB-type than an all-around defensive lineman. Re-establishing Cunningham's confidence after an up-and-down year. Instilling faith in other veterans that the team is trying to win this year rather than tear down in order to build up.
OPENING EXHIBITION: Aug. 31, vs. New Orleans at Tokyo.
OPEN SEASON: Sept. 5, at home to Phoenix.

Washington (9-7)

OPEN CAMP: July 18, Carlisle, Pa.
STRENGTHS: Running game and overall defense, although no superstars there.
ADDITIONS AND SUBTRACTIONS: Coach Joe Gibbs, who took the Skins to four Super Bowls, retired and longtime defensive coordinator Richie Petitbon took over. The post-season was a revolving door — LB Wilber Marshall went to Houston in a trade and Carl Banks was signed to replace him; WR Gary Clark signed with Phoenix and Tim McGee was signed from Cincinnati; and CB Martin Mayhew defected to Tampa Bay and CB Tom Carter was selected No. 1.
CAMP NEEDS: Adjust to Petitbon as Petitbon adjusts to being No. 1 — he's already mastered putting together a defense from average individual parts. Upgrade the offensive line, which was battered last year. Hope QB Mark Rypien comes back from subpar year and if not, groom Cary Conklin to replace him.
OPENING EXHIBITION: Aug. 9, at home to Cleveland.
OPEN SEASON: Sept. 6, at home to Dallas (night)

New York Giants (6-10)

OPEN CAMP: July 18, Madison, N.J.
STRENGTHS: Overall offense as long as Phil Simms stays healthy at quarterback. Particularly running game featuring top offensive line and RB Rodney Hampton.
ADDITIONS AND SUBTRACTIONS: Addition by subtraction: coach Ray Handley, who coached two troubled seasons after two Super Bowl wins under Bill Parcells. He was replaced by Dan Reeves, who brought in old Broncos, WR Mark Jackson and LB Michael Brooks, along with WR Mike Sherrard. Rest of changes were revolving door — old standbys LB Carl Banks, DE Leonard Marshall, WR Mark Ingram left and Jeff Hostetler was shown the door by Reeves to avoid a quarterback controversy.
CAMP NEEDS: Defense, which went from great to awful, needs transfusion under new coordinator Mike Nolan, particularly the pass rush, which has LB Lawrence Taylor back from injury. Dave Brown and Kent Graham, both in second year, must be developed at QB in likely event Simms goes down.
OPENING EXHIBITION: Aug. 7 at Cincinnati.
OPEN SEASON: Sept. 5, at Chicago.

Phoenix (4-12)

OPEN CAMP: July 22, Flagstaff, Ariz.
STRENGTHS: Potential explosiveness on offense with the addition of WR Gary Clark, QB Steve Beuerlein and first-round pick RB Garrison Hearst to go with already decent unit.
ADDITIONS AND SUBTRACTIONS: Clark, Beuerlein and Hearst are important additions, but the defense may have suffered with the loss of SS Tim McDonald to San Francisco. Chuck Cecil was signed from Green Bay to replace him, but he's not an impact player of McDonald's stature.
CAMP NEEDS: Determine whether Beuerlein, a first-rate backup in Dallas, can become a first-rate starter in Phoenix. He will compete with Chris Chandler, who completed last season well. Upgrade the offense line, which could negate some of the positive changes.
OPENING EXHIBITION: Aug. 7, at home to Los Angeles Rams
OPEN SEASON: Sept. 5, at Philadelphia.

Angels falter in 12 innings

Staff report

■ More Sports/8C

SHREVEPORT — Midland Angel reliever Ken Edenfield threw a wild pitch in the bottom of the 12th inning to score the only run in a 1-0 Midland loss to the Shreveport Captains here Wednesday. Roger Miller, who scored the run, had led off the last inning with a double. He moved to third when Edenfield was called for a balk.

Three different Captain pitchers held the Angels to only three hits in the three hour and 20 minute game. The Angels failed to get a hit in innings two through six, and it was Midland's sixth loss in the last seven games.

The game was marked by good defense on both sides. The Captains missed a good chance to score in the seventh when Pete Weber was gunned down at the plate after Miller doubled with one out.

The Angels sent the game into extra innings with a good defensive play in the bottom of the ninth. With one on and two out, Miller again hit the ball hard, this time to the wall in left field. Emmitt Cohick made an outstanding catch to end regulation play.

The loss wasted a fine performance by Midland starter Shad Williams. Williams allowed only five hits and no runs in seven innings. Edenfield got the loss despite facing only three batters in his relief role.

Finks resigns GM post

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Jim Finks, who transformed the New Orleans Saints from a chronic loser into an NFL playoff team, resigned Wednesday as the team's general manager.

Finks, 65, has been fighting lung cancer since April and was limited to consulting with Saints officials by telephone on contract negotiations since undergoing chemotherapy.

"I have received good reports from my doctors," Finks said in a statement issued by Saints owner Tom Benson. "There is an opportunity for me to fight this disease, and that's what I intend to do."

Finks said he would continue as a consultant. Vice president Jim Miller has been handling most of Finks' day-to-day duties during his absence. There was no immediate word on a permanent successor.

"I've got seven-plus years of blood, sweat and tears invested with the Saints," Finks' statement said. "I'm proud to continue to be involved. and very proud of the people now running the organization."

Finks has been president and general manager since January 1986. Before his arrival, the team had 19 losing seasons — including 1980, when fans wore paper bags over their heads to protest a 1-15 record.

Finks hired Jim Mora as coach and the Saints finished 7-9, fourth place in the NFC West. The next year, the Saints were 12-3, their first-ever winning season and playoff berth.

In 1991, the 25th anniversary of the franchise, New Orleans was 11-5 and won the conference.

Finks had built winning teams in pro football and baseball before coming to New Orleans.

Finks played with the Pittsburgh Steelers and Baltimore Colts from 1949 through 1955, when he joined the CFL Calgary Stampeders as a scout. After moving up to general manager the following year, he helped Calgary to the Grey Cup, the CFL equivalent of the Super Bowl, then moved to the Minnesota Vikings in 1964.

OPEN: Playing largest miniature golf course

(From 1C)

At the 9th on Wednesday, his approach shot skims the fairway and rolls within 5 inches of the pin.

"Ching! Ching!"

He struts toward the ball, chest out, shoulders back, head high — the embodiment of confidence dressed in black. David Leadbetter, his coach, moseys behind carrying a rolled-up umbrella on this warm, dry, blue-gray day before the evening showers.

"We've got a little gambling game going to keep his attention," Leadbetter says. "He's relaxed. That's the most important thing."

They work on Faldo's swing one last time before he goes for a championship that could redefine his status in the game. He's already one of the dominant players of his generation with three British Opens and two Masters. Another major would lift him to a higher level with the likes of Tom Watson, Arnold Palmer, Lee Trevino and a few others — all on a plateau below Ben Hogan and, a couple of levels below Jack Nicklaus.

Meanwhile, the man Faldo fought down the stretch last year, runnerup John Cook, is feeling his way around the course, trying to imagine where balls will go in the shifting winds.

"I have never been haunted by last year," Cook says of the lead he took, then lost, in the final round at Muirfield. "It goes through your mind, but I am definitely a better player for it. I learned what majors are about last year. If I get myself back in that chance again, I can finish the job."

The blind shots, undulating fairways and thousands of bumps around Royal St. George's are challenging for everyone, especially newcomers like Cook.

"It is something I have never seen before," Cook says. "You get bounces you won't agree with, but you must accept your fate. It has been wild. It takes a lot of imagination."

Television flattens the roll of the course, the steepness of slopes on the edges of greens like the two-tiered 7th. Not many shots are made on level ground here. One foot always seems to be higher than the other.

It's a little like playing the world's largest miniature golf course, with whimsical winds playing tricks. All this place needs is a hole with a clown's mouth, a fairway with a windmill, and a pendulum bar dangling over a few greens to knock putts away.

The links are lined with tall sand dune grass, "lady's bedstraw," the color of wheat. Land in there and you need a machete, not a golf club. Some players call it an unfair test, others believe it's a superb challenge.

"You have to shape your shots into the greens the right way to be a success here," Watson says. "The course is very firm. It is very bumpy, hilly. That's the real flavor of the course. In America if you built a golf course like this, they'd say, 'What has this guy been drinking?'"

Yet, the more he plays it, the more Watson likes it.

"It is a 'feel' course," he says. "You have to feel the shot into the fairway and to the hole. It's not a target course."

Pipeline owners to pay $98 million

■ If settlement is approved, Exxon, its shipping subsidiary will be only remaining defendants in Valdez lawsuits.

By Keith Schneider
N.Y. Times News Service

The owners of the Trans-Alaska oil pipeline have agreed to pay $98 million to native villages, fishermen and thousands of other Alaskans harmed by the grounding of the Exxon Valdez, which spilled over 11 million gallons of oil into Prince William Sound in 1989. If the settlement is approved, it will be the first time plaintiffs other than the state and federal government have been awarded damages arising from the disaster.

The settlement, signed Tuesday night in Anchorage, is meant to remove the pipeline's owner, the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., from more than 300 lawsuits against it and Exxon Corp. If the settlement is approved by state and federal judges, Exxon and its shipping subsidiary will be the only remaining defendants in the lawsuits, which seek $2.5 billion in damages for thousands of Alaskans.

All the cases have been consolidated, and trials against Exxon and its shipping subsidiary are to begin in state and federal courts next spring.

Alyeska, which owns the 800-mile long Trans-Alaska pipeline and the oil-loading terminal in Valdez, is itself owned by Exxon Pipeline Co. and by the pipeline subsidiaries of six other multinational oil companies — Amerada Hess, Arco, British Petroleum, Mobil, Phillips and Unocal. In their lawsuits, Alaskans asserted that Alyeska had failed to take adequate measures to prevent a catastrophic spill.

The settlement is the second time that Alyeska has paid damages stemming from the wreck of the Exxon Valdez. In 1992, Alyeska paid $31.3 million to settle state and Federal claims for damages to the natural resources in Prince William Sound and for lost tax revenues.

The settlement, if approved, would pay out damages to as many as 60,000 plaintiffs, said Lloyd Miller, an Anchorage lawyer who is serving as liaison between the plaintiffs and their lawyers. Miller said payments would range from a few hundred dollars for cannery workers in Cordova, Alaska, to millions of dollars to native villages, which are the largest private landowners in the Prince William Sound and Kodiak regions affected by the spill.

The settlement also means that $10 million to $20 million will be paid to lawyers from 96 law firms from 18 states and Washington, Miller said. Much of that money, he said, is likely to go toward litigating the case against Exxon and its shipping subsidiary, which are the main targets of the lawsuits.

"The money will finance the balance of the case, and help us do battle against an economic giant," he said.

Lawyers for the villages and the fishermen said they expected both judges to approve the settlement.

Macy's sells Levis

SAN FRANCISCO — After refusing to buy Levi Strauss & Co. products for almost 12 years, R.H. Macy & Co. will put Levi's jeans and Dockers sportswear on the shelves of some of its department stores starting in November.

Macy's has agreed to buy Levi Strauss products for 26 of its highest-volume department stores initially, including several in northern California, company officials said.

The two companies hope eventually to put Levi's and Dockers into all 110 Macy's and Bullock's department stores in the West, South and East.

El Paso Electric

EL PASO, Texas — Southwestern Public Service Co.'s plan to take over El Paso Electric Co. is gaining momentum as it garners support from constituents in the utility's bankruptcy case, Southwestern said Wednesday.

But both El Paso Electric and Central and South West Corp. — Southwestern's rival in the acquisition battle — downplayed the expressed support.

Southwestern said it has reached an "essential" agreement with the equity holders of El Paso Electric's leased portion of the Palo Verde Nuclear Generating Station.

The group, also known as the owner participants, is the second to express support for Southwestern's $2.2 billion plan to acquire the El Paso utility, which has been operating under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy codes since January 1992.

Dollar declines

NEW YORK — The dollar ended lower against most major currencies Wednesday in light, uneventful trading.

In New York, the dollar closed at 107.10 yen, down from 108.13 yen late Tuesday.

The dollar was also weaker against the British pound. In New York, it was worth $1.5035, up from $1.4970.

Late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Tuesday, included: 1.7150 German marks, down from 1.7185; 1.5090 Swiss francs, down from 1.5190; 5.8565 French francs, down from 5.8695; 1,595 Italian lire, up from 1,583; and 1.2837 Canadian dollars, up from 1.2813.

Stocks soar

NEW YORK — Fading inflation fears and tumbling interest rates sent stocks sharply higher Wednesday, pushing the Nasdaq index to record levels.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 27.11 points to 3,542.55.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 11 to 7 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Kelley Oil fell 6¼ to 15 after a company report said preliminary indications are that its Goldsby No. 2 well won't produce at rates expected by some analysts. On the Amex, Kelley Oil & Gas fell 3 to 18.

In NYSE trading, Repsol was the most actively traded issue, rising ⅛ to 24⅛. The Spanish state trimmed its stake in the oil and gas company to 40.5 percent from 41.1 percent in a bond for stock swap.

The NYSE's composite index rose 0.97 to 249.35, while the Nasdaq index rose 4.02 to a record 712.49, eclipsing the last record high of 708.85 reached on February 4. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 0.44 to 438.67.

U.S. production of crude plunges to 35-year low

WASHINGTON (AP) — Domestic crude oil production dropped to its lowest level in 35 years during the first half of the year to less than 6.9 million barrels a day, the American Petroleum Institute reported Wednesday.

The API said in its midyear oil statistics that the 5.5 percent drop in domestic production was "larger than anticipated ... and substantially greater than last year's annual decrease."

Domestic crude production has been declining steadily since 1985 when it was at 9 million barrels a day. It dipped to 7.1 million barrels a day during the first six months of 1992, the lowest in 33 years.

The continuing decline in production along with an increase in demand during the first six months of 1993 caused imports of crude oil and petroleum products to rise to their highest level since 1990, the industry association said.

Imported crude oil and oil product accounted for 48.2 percent of the domestic deliveries during the first six months of the year, compared to 44.9 percent during the same period a year earlier. Imported oil products accounted for 49.8 percent of deliveries in the first half of 1990.

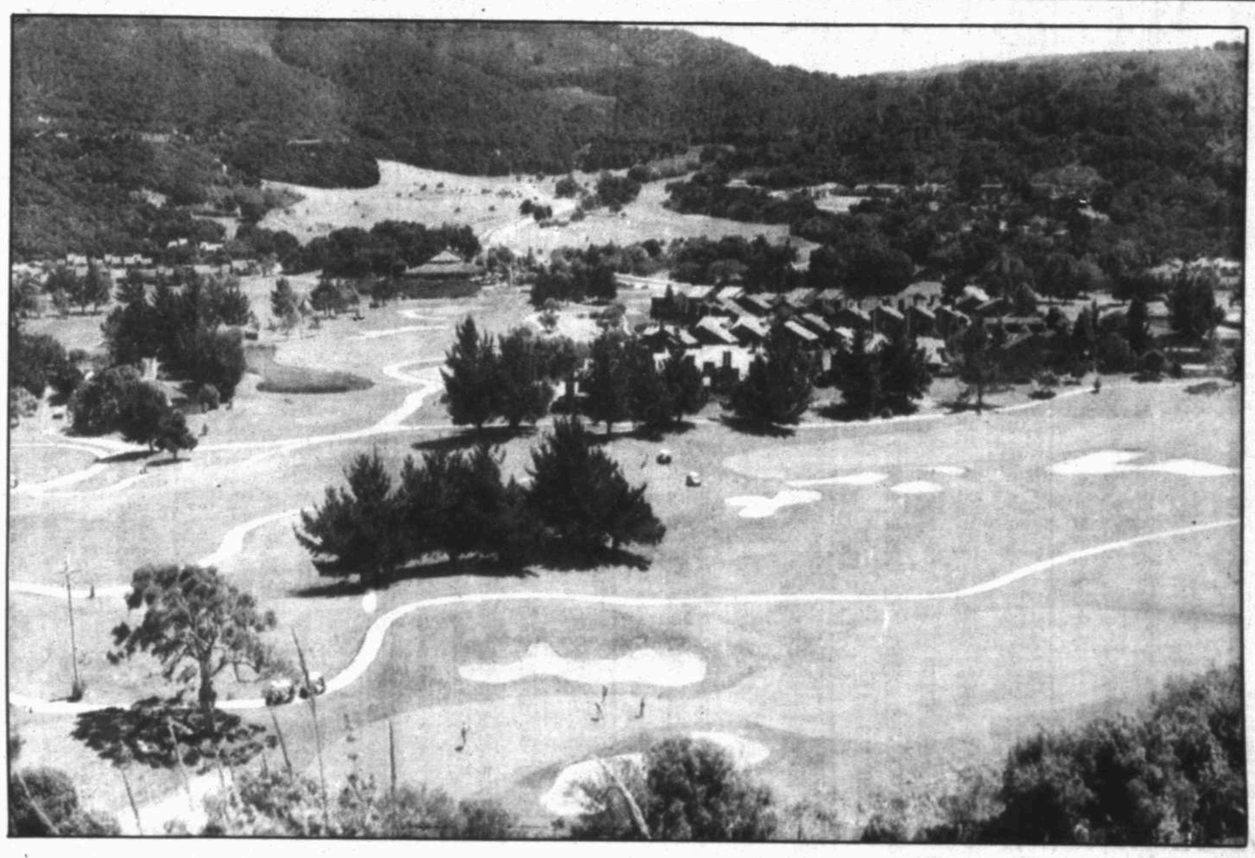

The API said demand for petroleum products in the United States rose 1.5 percemt in the first six months to an average of nearly 17.2 million barrels a day.

Dell shares slide on expectations

DALLAS (NYT) — Even as its sales continue to surge, Dell Computer Corp. provided more evidence Wednesday that it was having a terrible year, saying it expected to report its first quarterly loss ever.

Dell, which rose from obscurity to become the fourth-largest personal computer maker in America, said its earnings for the second fiscal quarter would amount to a loss of $1.65 to $1.85 a share. Analysts had been estimating that Dell would earn an average of 29 cents a share, and the company's announcement sent its stock price skidding.

In Nasdaq trading, Dell shares ended the day down $3.375, to $15.875.

The Carmel Valley Ranch Resort in Carmel, Calif, went on the auction block in Dallas on Wednesday.

RTC gets $400 million for lavish resorts

DALLAS (AP) — The Resolution Trust Corp. sold six luxury golf resorts for about $400 million Wednesday in a high-rolling auction where the dealmaking didn't stop with the final bid.

Four different bidders won the six clubs for a total of $404.2 million, but one group assigned away its interest in a club immediately after the auction ended. The total dropped to $395.4 million because two buyers took advantage of a cash discount, the RTC said.

The agency was delighted with the dollar amount fetched by the glamorous properties. Although the spreads originally cost $708 million, the RTC assessed their investment value at more like $366 million.

"We're extremely — that's an understatement — happy with the results," said Lamar Kelly, senior vice president for asset sales and management for the Resolution Trust Corp. "These are some of the premiere courses in the country."

The three-hour auction drew some 30 bidding groups who became enmeshed in layers of strategy.

After bidders fought over the individual properties in the first round, only one group offered a bid on all six properties, although several had expressed interest in doing so before the auction.

Morgan Stanley Real Estate Fund L.P. proffered $395 million, but the individual bidders triumphed in a third and final round when some raised their bids and Morgan Stanley wouldn't.

After the auction ended, KSL Recreation Group Ltd. — which won the three most expensive courses — agreed to assign its interest in Kiawah Island resort near Charleston, S.C., to the second-place bidder. The AMF Cos. of Richmond, Va., which bid as Virginia Investment Trusts and also owns the Ben Hogan Co. golf club manufacturer. will pay the $45.1 million in cash, the RTC said.

"Our bid on Kiawah was part of our bid strategy to be successful," KSL chairman Mike Shannon said. "We became good friends during the bidding process."

Vail, Colo.-based KSL, which already owns the Fairways Group of golf courses, is backed by Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. of New York.

KSL made the winning bids of $140 million for PGA West and $136.4 million for La Quinta Golf & Tennis Resort, both in La Quinta, Calif.

Dallas' ClubCorp won Mission Hills in Rancho Mirage, Calif., for $35.6 million. Palm Beach Polo and Country Club in West Palm Beach, Fla., went to Tri-State Group Inc. for $27.1 million. And Morgan Stanley, in partnership with Westcorp, will get the Carmel Valley Ranch near Carmel, Calif., for an even $20 million.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Converting Es to HH bonds delays tax bite

By Bill Doyle

Q: I own $6,000 face value of Series E U.S. savings bonds. With the accrued interest, the bonds are now worth more than $24,000. Some of the bonds will begin to reach final maturity next year.

Doyle

I would like to transfer the bonds into either EE or H bonds, in trust for my granddaughter to be used for her college education.

How can I accomplish this without paying income tax on the accrued interest? If that can't be done, what other way can you suggest to keep the accrued interest from being subject to income tax?

A: You cannot change the E bonds for either EE or H bonds. But you can exchange them for HH bonds. HHs, which have been issued since 1980, are similar to Hs, which were issued in earlier years. Interest does not build up on HHs. Like Hs, HHs pay interest every six months. That interest is subject to federal income tax.

By swapping Es for HHs, you won't avoid the tax on the accrued E bond interest. But you will postpone that tax until you redeem the HHs received in the exchange. There is no legitimate way to dodge that tax.

The only suggestion I have might seem a bit macabre:

When you exchange the Es for HHs, you can have the new bonds registered in co-ownership form — in your name "or" your granddaughter's name. Or you can have them registered in your name, "payable on death" to her name. With either form of registration, the bonds will belong to your granddaughter when you leave this vale of tears. Assuming she then will be in a low income tax bracket, the tax bite will be less severe.

Q: I have four $1,000 face value E bonds, with issue dates of July, September and November 1977 and February 1978. Are they still drawing interest? If so, at what rate?

A: Your four bonds continue to accrue interest and will continue to do so until 30 years after their issue dates. At that point they will reach final maturity and the interest buildup will cease.

Those particular bonds are in their second extended maturity period and are accruing interest at an annual rate of 6 percent. When each enters it next and final extended maturity — 25 years after its issue — its guaranteed accrual rate is scheduled to drop to 4 percent. However, because you have owned each bond for more than five years, it will be entitled to the "market based" rate, which changes every May 1 and Nov. 1.

The market-based rate for the current six-month period is 4.78 percent. It would be foolish even to try to guess what that rate will be when your bonds go into their next extended maturity period.

Q: My father's name is on my savings bonds as co-owner. Since my father is now dead, can I have his name taken off the bonds and my sister's name put on?

If so, can this be done without redeeming the bonds?

A: Yes to both queries. You can change the names by filling out Form PD F 4000 and providing a certified copy of your father's death certificate. When everything is squared away, you will receive new bonds — bearing the original bonds' issue dates — registered in your name "or" your sister's name.

Q: Will the bank at which I purchased my savings bonds remove my deceased father's name as co-owner and substitute my brother's name?

A: No. That chore will be handled by the Federal Reserve Bank serving your area of the country. The bonds on which the registration is to be changed, along with your father's death certificate and Form PD F 4000 must be sent there for processing.

However, the bank at which you bought the bonds should be able to provide the necessary form and send everything along to the Federal Reserve Bank. Most local banks do such things, as services to customers.

GALARRAGA: Luck aids .400 bid

(From 1C)

and he wasn't assured of a job until former Cardinals batting coach Don Baylor was hired as the Rockies' manager.

Baylor knew it was suicidal for Galarraga to consistently pull the ball in Mile High Stadium, a hitter's paradise but one with an expansive outfield that eats up fly balls. So he adjusted Galarraga's swing and stance to enable him to hit the ball to all fields.

Galarraga also had vision tests that determined his left eye was somewhat lazy. Baylor altered his feet so more of his head was toward the pitcher, enabling his dominant right eye to follow the ball better.

Galarraga has responded by hitting rope after rope into Mile High's seemingly mile-wide right-center field, so much so that he recently enjoyed a streak of nine consecutive hits.

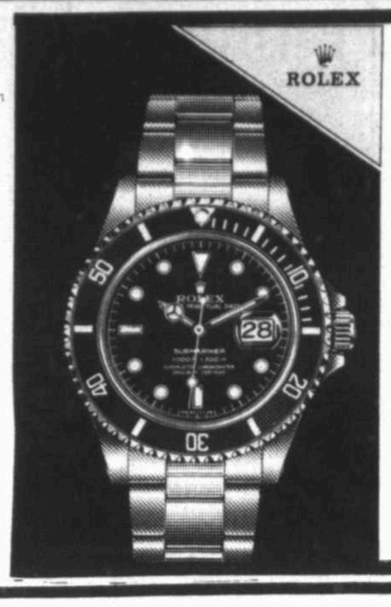

"I have only two infield hits all year, and to hit .400 you're supposed to get a lot of leg hits," said Galarraga. "I will never do that. In the light air, the ball has a little more flight, so I'm just trying to keep it in play."

Keeping a .400 average until a week ago made Galarraga realize how difficult it would be to be to maintain that average all season. It's not impossible, but ...

"I'd go 1-for-3 and my average would go down, and I'd think I was in a slump even when I wasn't," Galarraga said Monday at the All-Star workouts. "I wasn't really mad when I went below .400, but I did want to keep it there. You have to go 2-for-5 every night, and two hits, three hits a night, that is so difficult."

All-Star third baseman Wade Boggs said a .400 season would require a remarkable combination of luck, ability, and, probably, bad pitching.

"To me, luck is everything," he said. "You can hit the ball hard and have a perfect swing, but you might not get a hit unless you find that little hole or get a bad hop. Luck has to ride with your ball."

OLERUD: Lineup helps

(From 1C)

gets these days is at the plate. Before and after games, he's mobbed by reporters. Problem is, the last thing Olerud wants to think about at the plate is getting four hits every 10 at-bats.

"I don't want to start thinking about trying to hit .400 because if you do, you start going up there trying not to make outs," he said. "That's the wrong approach. You have to block out that .400 thing and be aggressive up there."

Hitting .400 was never a goal. It's something that just sort of started as a hot streak and never ended.

"There are going to be times when I won't be swinging the bat as well as I'd like to, but I'm just going to try to keep that as short as possible," he said.

History says Olerud, or Colorado's Andres Galarraga, who is batting .391, won't finish at .400 this season. So do a few of their peers.

"No, because of all the travel in the game today," New York's Wade Boggs said. "The media also plays a big part in it. Plus, he's at .395 right now and doesn't have a cushion to maintain, like an average of .450 at the All-Star break."

While Olerud's swing has been compared to that of Williams, Hall of Famer Frank Robinson said Olerud faces a tougher task in his pursuit of .400.

"I think it's very difficult because of the many pitchers you have to face," Robinson said. "It will happen one day, but not this year."

Chicago White Sox star Frank Thomas thinks otherwise. He said the potent Toronto batting order will make it tougher to pitch around Olerud.

"I think he can do it because of all the good hitters he has in the lineup with him," Thomas said. "The focus is not on him, it's on the other hitters. They're real dangerous."

The last player to make a serious bid at .400 was George Brett, who hit .390 in 1980. Last week, Olerud got a single in Kansas City and Brett was there holding him on first base.

"He asked me how everything was going with the media, and I wanted to know how he handled it when he was hitting .400. But before he got a chance to answer, there was a hit-and-run on so I had to leave," Olerud said.

Indurain increases Tour lead

SERRE CHEVALIER, France (AP) — Miguel Indurain of Spain led a breakaway up the final mountain to finish third in the 10th stage of the Tour de France on Wednesday and increase his overall lead to three minutes and eight seconds as the cyclists moved into the Alps.

Tony Rominger of Switzerland won the 127-mile run from Villard De Lans that included three climbs above 4,900 feet.

Indurain finished right behind Rominger and Alvaro Mejia of Colombia in 5 hours, 28 minutes, 52 seconds.

Mejia is the Spaniard's closest rival in the overall standings.

Indurain led a group of five up the final climb to 8,650. In the group were challengers Gianni Bugno and Claudio Chiappucci.

Child Care You Can Count On.....

We're rounding the corner to summer's end and it's time to start making arrangements for child care for the school year. Child care is a vital concern for today's children by today's parents and for this reason the Midland Reporter-Telegram is publishing our annual Child Care Directory on Sunday, August 8th.

The Child Care Directory is a method used to reach parents with information about the services that are available in the Midland area and who provides them. The parents of children in the Midland area have come to rely on this directory as a guide to quality child care. This section focuses on the basic "who, what, where and when" of quality child care in our area and the section includes a map so that your facility can easily be located.

You will probably want your facility represented with an ad in this special Child Care Directory, a story about your facility, a photo of your facility and a dot on the map to show your location. Special ad packages, ranging from an 8" ad to an 18" ad, are available. There are also rates for regular ads of any size.

Deadline for this special Child Care Directory is Thursday, July 29, 1993. For more information, and to reserve your ad space in the Child Care Directory, please call:

Jury sentences convicted teen cop killer to death

AUSTIN (AP) — A Houston man convicted of gunning down a state trooper was sentenced to death Wednesday after jurors rebuffed a claim that he was inflamed by hard-driving, anti-police rap music.

The eight-man, four-woman jury had deliberated since Friday before recommending that Ronald Ray Howard, 19, die by lethal injection.

State District Judge Whayland Kilgore, who twice urged jurors to keep working when they said they were deadlocked, then ordered the death sentence for Howard.

Howard showed no emotion as the verdict was read. But he cried when his mother and grandmother embraced him.

The same jury took only 40 minutes on June 8 to convict Howard in the April 1992 slaying of Department of Public Safety Trooper Bill Davidson.

The trooper had stopped Howard, who was driving a stolen vehicle, near Victoria because of a missing headlight.

Howard, an admitted car thief and crack cocaine dealer, confessed on numerous occasions to shooting Davidson in the neck at close range with a 9-mm handgun.

Defense attorney Allen Tanner argued that Howard's fascination with anti-cop "gangsta rap" music and his childhood in the oppressive inner-city were factors in the killing.

Tanner said he plans to represent Howard on appeal, which is automatic under state law to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

Jurors had been divided until Wednesday on how to punish Howard. They wrote two notes to the judge saying they were "hopelessly deadlocked" 10-2 in favor of the death penalty. All jurors had to agree in order to issue a death sentence.

But the two dissenters apparently decided to join the other jurors after Kilgore told them not to "hesitate to reexamine your own views and to change your opinion if you decide you are wrong."

One of the two holdout jurors, who declined to give his name, said he changed his mind Tuesday night.

"There was no coercion at all," he said of the deliberations. "Music can affect people very strongly I believe, but in the end a person is responsible for their own actions."

Tanner said he believes the death sentence would be overturned.

"We will have a record which shows how long the jurors deliberated and the notes which they sent out," Tanner said.

"All the jurors told us that they thought Ronald Howard was affected by this gangsta rap music," he said. "However, balancing it with his background and the crime which Ronald committed, they didn't think that it was enough whereby he deserved a life sentence."

Jackson County District Attorney Bobby Bell said he wasn't concerned about an appeal.

"I asked the members of the jury, specifically the two that were in the minority, if they felt any coercion," Bell said. "They said absolutely not."

The attorney representing the music company said he didn't know how the verdict would affect the civil case.

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday-Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?
