Haig flies to England to mediate

LONDON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. flew to London today seeking a peaceful end to the crisis over the Falkland Islands, but Britain threatened to start sinking Argentine ships around the disputed territory on Monday.

Haig, who U.S. officials said wanted to be an "honest broker" between two friends of the United States, was to confer with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and Foreign Secretary Francis Pym. He will go to Buenos Aires later in the week to talk with the generals running Argentina's military government.

The Foreign Office said Pym welcomed Reagan's decision to send Haig as a mediator. It said he came as a "friend and ally."

Haig met in Washington with Argentine Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez, who said later he remains confident a peaceful settlement can be achieved.

"All points are negotiable as part of apackage deal," he said on ABC-TV's "Nightline."

Costa Mendez told the interviewer an arrangement like that of Hong Kong — with Britain recognizing Argentine sovereignty over the islands but continuing to administer them — "could be negotiated."

He also did not rule out compliance with Britain's demand for withdrawal of the invasion troops before negotiations, saying only that he wouldn't discuss it before Haig's visit to Buenos Aires.

Meanwhile, Defense Secretary John Nott announced a blockade of the Falklands starting at midnight local time Sunday (11 p.m. EST Sunday) to limit reinforcements and supplies reaching the Argentine troops who seized the windswept archipelago 250 miles off Argentina's southern coast last week.

NOTT PROCLAIMED A "MARITIME exclusion zone" of 200 nautical miles around the islands. He told the House of Commons any Argentine warship or support vessel found inside that area would be considered hostile and could be scuttled by British forces.

The Argentine government replied by declaring a "South Atlantic theater of operations" extending 200 miles from the Falklands and Argentine coasts, and said any ship considered hostile to the nation's security would be attacked.

Argentina's interior minister, Gen. Alfredo Saint Jean, said the islands will be defended "to the last Argentine soldier." A "partial recall" of draftees who recently completed military service was announced.

The Royal Navy's carrier-led armada en route to the Falklands was going into the fourth day of its 8,000-mile voyage and still had about 12 days to travel. But British government sources said several British submarines, including the nuclear-powered Superb, arrived in the Falklands area Monday, armed with powerful, long-range "Tigerfish" torpedoes that home on their targets. The Superb carries 20 of them.

Former Defense Minister Denis Healey, the opposition Labor Party's chief spokesman on foreign affairs, said in a TV interview that the blockade was "a very sensible first step." But he pointed out Argentina could supply the islands by air.

Nott said the naval force sailing south included the aircraft carriers Invincible and Hermes, the assault ship Fearless, five destroyers, six frigates, five oil tankers, two supply ships and five landing craft.

They are to be joined by more warships from Gibraltar.

British army paratroops, trained to fight as seaborne commandos, left for the Falklands Wednesday aboard the 45,000-ton cruise liner Canberra. Artillery and helicopter landing pads also were put aboard.

The Argentines have at least 2,500 troops on the Falklands and swear they will not retreat. After claiming the islands for the 150 years they have been a British colony, they invaded them last Friday.

Working in the shade

Is it a man-eating pickup, or a man fixing pickup? While it may appear to be a cannibalistic truck, actually it's just Tex Wilson changing the spark plug wires on the parking lot of Gibson's. Wilson, a farrier (horseshoer) by trade, said it's easier, and cooler, to work on the truck from within.

Copper workers latest victims of recession

By JAMES PELTZ
AP Business Writer

Despite a government economist's belief that a partial economic recovery is under way, the recession continues to take its toll on the nation's workforce, with Arizona copper workers the latest victims.

Phelps Dodge Corp., the nation's second-largest copper producer behind Kennecott Corp., said Wednesday it would suspend virtually all its U.S. copper operations from April 17 until at least June 1.

The company cited sagging copper prices, a reflection of weak demand from recession-hit industries such as auto and construction. The producer price of copper currently is about 74 cents a pound, compared with production costs of between 80 cents and $1.25 a pound.

Most of Phelps Dodge's operations are in Arizona, the nation's leading copper-producing state, and it said 3,200 of the 3,800 workers to be laid off are in Arizona.

Other copper producers also have pared operations in the state, and about 10,000 of Arizona's 28,000 copper workers have been on brief or extended furloughs since December.

Meanwhile, Michigan's recession-wracked auto industry received another blow Wednesday.

Kalamazoo-based Checker Motors Corp., maker of the boxy taxicab that has been a fixture on U.S. city streets for 25 years, said in a letter to employees that it will stop building the cabs in July.

The company, which lost nearly $500,000 last year, also said 225 production employees at its Kalamazoo plant would be laid off.

The Reagan administration continues to say its economic program of tax cuts and incentives will lead to recovery by boosting business investment and increasing consumer purchasing power.

The economy appears ready for at least partial recovery by summer, a top government economist said Wednesday.

But unless interest rates fall, any recovery "might limp so badly that it would never get off the ground," said Robert Dederick, assistant commerce secretary for economic affairs.

Dederick said several developing conditions indicate "this potentially could be one of the best post-war recoveries."

Those conditions include slack built up in the economy during the recession, giving it "a great deal of room to grow," indications of "a fair amount of pent-up demand" and a continuing low rate of inflation, he said.

But he also acknowledged fears that high interest rates would delay recovery — rates he said appeared to be partly due to lenders' worries about future federal budget deficits.

Financial options dominate hospital hearing

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

AUSTIN — Wayne Walthall and James Bingham Jr., representing Southwest Health Inc., offered testimony about the corporation's structure and finances at Wednesday's hearing before the Texas Health Facilities Commission.

Financial options dominated most of Wednesday's hearing, the first phase of a three-way hearing to determine which of three hospitals will build a psychiatric/chemical dependency unit.

Walthall, Southwest Health's financial controller, could not answer all the financial questions from the opponents, Midland Memorial Hospital and Parkview, because he did not bring the corporation's financial statements to the hearing.

"They (MMH and Parkview) did not ask for them at the pre-hearing conference," Walthall said, adding that Southwest Health Inc. was not the applicant for the West Plains hospital.

Structure of the proposed hospital, according to Southwest Health officials, is as follows:

—Southwest Health is a parent corporation. Bingham owns 100 percent of the stock. All the officials representing West Plains hospital are employed by Southwest Health Inc.

—Southwest Health of Midland-Odessa Inc. is a subsidiary of Southwest Health Inc. It is the applicant for the psychiatric hospital called West Plains Hospital and will be responsible for all debts. Southwest Health of Midland-Odessa has no employees. According to Bingham, the subsidiary was formed in October 1981 when it was decided to establish a psychiatric hospital in the Midland-Odessa area.

—One hundred percent of the Southwest Health of Midland—Odessa stock is held by Southwest Health Inc.

Walthall explained to the opponents' attorneys that Southwest Health of Midland—Odessa does not have any financial statements because it is a relatively new company.

Southwest Health Inc., however, does have financial statements, but only on a month-to-month basis.

In addition, Walthall said since Southwest Health is not a co-sponsor to the certificate of need application, the financial statement is not available to the opponents.

Walthall told the applicants' attorneys and the THFC hearing officer that Bingham would provide them with the financial status of the corporation.

In the early afternoon, Bingham took the witness stand to outline the financial picture. Assets and liabilities were discussed at great length in cross-examination by both MMH and Parkview attorneys. Both attorneys agreed that it was too early into the THFC hearings to comment whether or not they were satisfied with Bingham's answers.

And J. Kay Trostle, THFC hearing officer, said she would not make any statements concerning any of the firms during the hearings.

In other financial testimony, Walthall repeated a tax-exempt bond financing from Tuesday's hearing and compared it with a conventional loan financing. The bond financing would be more costly to Southwest Midland-Odessa, but Walthall said the charge to the patient would remain the same — $228 per day.

Walthall said the two debt structures are "nothing more than how long the corporation is willing to wait for its break-even point."

With the tax-exempt bond financing, the break-even point for the corporation would be approximately the 15th month into its operation. The conventional loan financing would bring the break-even point to the 13th month of operation.

Southwest Midland-Odessa Inc. officials stressed no extra charge would be made to the patient.

Reagan winds up working sessions

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — President Reagan winds up the business half of his working vacation today at a meeting in Barbados with leaders of the eastern Caribbean after accusing Cuba of trying to undermine democracy in the region.

Missing from the working luncheon the president had scheduled in Bridgetown, the capital of Barbados, was Grenada, an island U.S. officials say will be excluded from Reagan's proposed Caribbean Basin aid program because of its close ties to Cuba.

Flying to Bridgetown this morning after an overnight stop in Jamaica, the president was to meet with Prime Ministers Tom Adams of Barbados, Mary Eugenia Charles of Dominica, Vere C. Bird of Antigua-Barbuda, Milton Cato of St. Vincent and the Grenadines and Premier Kennedy Simmonds of St. Kitts-Nevis.

Reagan's proposals to aid their region and Central America includes trade concessions, investment incentives and $350 million in additional aid this year. But the majority of the funds are proposed for Central America and the larger islands, and the smaller islands say they would like a bigger chunk.

Foreign Minister Lester Bird of Antigua-Barbuda said the $10 million in supplemental aid for the eastern Caribbean should be increased to at least $6 million for each of the "lesser developed countries," and there should be greater effort to channel funds to them for such "infrastructure" projects as roads and water supply needed to attract industry.

Bird said the prime ministers would stress that last year their imports from the United States totaled $282 million, or eight times what the United States imported from them.

After finishing his work sessions, Reagan and wife Nancy planned to relax in the sunshine as guests of actress Claudette Colbert, an old friend, at her Barbados home. They will return to Washington on Easter Sunday.

During his stay in Jamaica, the president hailed the accomplishments of Prime Minister Edward Seaga, whose strong support for private enterprise closely parallels Reagan's own.

He accused Cuba of a "large-scale attempt to undermine democracy throughout the Americas, financed by its master across the sea," the Soviet Union. He said the civil war in El Salvador "bears the imprint of this interference," but voter turnout in the recent election showed lack of support for the leftist rebels fighting to topple the U.S.-backed government.

In a dinner toast to Seaga, Reagan said the Caribbean Basin plan was "our invitation ... to join a vast and dynamic market."

Earlier, on his arrival, he said Jamaica was "an inspiration to all of us who believe economic development and freedom are compatible and in practice are mutually reinforcing."

Seaga's Jamaica Labor Party was elected in November 1980, ousting Michael Manley's People's National Party which angered the United States by its close ties with Cuban President Fidel Castro.

Manley's defeat was due to economic crisis and increasing domestic unrest.

Jim Priceman, left is toasted with champagne in New York by his boss, Alan Doft of Doft and Co. Inc., after Priceman found and returned $37.1 million in negotiable certificates of deposit.Owners of the certificates, A.G. Becker Inc., rewarded Priceman with $250.

Wall Street cashier finds $37 million

By RICK HAMPSON

NEW YORK (AP) — A Wall Street cashier who found $37.1 million in the blizzard and then handed it back says he is satisfied with his $250 reward.

"I didn't expect anything to begin with, so I came out ahead," said Jimmy Priceman, 44, a $17,000-a-year assistant cashier who went out for a tuna sandwich Tuesday afternoon and came back with about 18 negotiable certificates of deposit.

A.G. Becker Inc., the investment banking house which owns the certificates, said they were in an envelope that fell from the pouch of a courier en route to a bank.

When Priceman stepped onto Wall Street on his way to lunch, he noticed the envelope lying in the snow on the sidewalk.

"At first I kept walking, but then I thought, jeez, there might be something in there," he recalled.

He turned around, and the first two things he found inside the envelope proved him right — certificates for $4 million and $5 million.

So Jimmy Priceman, who shares an apartment in the Greenpoint section of Brooklyn with his brother, was a millionaire for a minute as he stood in the wind and snow, waiting for whoever had dropped the envelope to come back for it.

But Priceman, who has worked on Wall Street for more than 20 years, said that during that minute he never considered keeping the certificates.

"I knew how hard it would have been for them to cover the money at the end of the day," he said. "It would have been a real pain in the neck."

People scurried up and down Wall Street, many leaving early to escape the blizzard. But no one came back for the certificates.

Priceman didn't go back upstairs immediately. He got what he had set out for — a tuna sandwich and cup of coffee. Then he went back to work, handed the package to his boss and ate his lunch.

A note of thanks from a Becker partner told Priceman it was "actions such as yours that maintain the credibility of the entire securities industry."

The certificates probably could not have been cashed, because Becker had serial numbers and could stop payment, explained Suzanne Pederson, spokeswoman for Becker.

"If most people tried to cash them at a bank the cashier would talk to him while someone else called the police," she said.

She said Priceman deserved his reward for sparing Becker "a great deal of administrative inconvenience."

"It's up to them," shrugged the man of the hour, who was honored for his honesty and sharp eyes at a champagne reception. "...I'll put it toward a new car." Priceman said he got first driver's license last year.

Priceman's boss, Alan Doft of Doft & Co., refused to say if he thought the reward was fair. But he noted that Priceman had saved Becker "a great deal of money ... I don't recollect a larger amount being found."

Hefner ruled unfit for casino license

By R. BRIERLEY THOMPSON

LAWRENCE TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Playboy magazine founder Hugh M. Hefner and Playboy Enterprises Inc. have been ruled unfit for a regular casino license in New Jersey, but the rabbit logo and bunny croupiers will stay on in Atlantic City — for a while at least.

The decision by the state Casino Control Commission on Wednesday means changes may be in store for the partnership that runs the lavish $150 million Playboy hotel-casino in the resort town.

The ruling doesn't mean Playboy will be forced to shut its doors when its temporary, one-year gaming license expires Tuesday.

Hefner and the other owners of the casino — the Elsinore Corp. of Las Vegas, Nev. — have six days to come up with a new operating plan acceptable to the commission. The commission will take a final vote Tuesday on a regular one-year license for the Playboy casino, which opened a year ago.

If the two sides fail to reach an agreement, the state could appoint a conservator to run the casino temporarily.

The commission voted 3-2 Wednesday to approve Hefner and the corporation as fit for a license — one vote short of the four required for approval.

The five commissioners unanimously endorsed Elsinore as fit for a license. Principles in Elsinore, a subsidiary of Hyatt Corp. of Rosemont, Ill., also gained approval.

"The company is going to explore what these decisions actually mean and what options are open," said Edward Fitzpatrick, Playboy's local lawyer.

Asked if Hefner would sell his interest in Playboy Enterprises Inc., Fitzpatrick replied: "I don't think there is a PEI without Mr. Hefner."

Fitzpatrick also said Hefner could consider a court appeal "but I'm not in a position to prejudge what my instructions will be."

Dissenting commissioners Carl Zeitz and Martin Danziger both cited Playboy's admitted part in bribing New York State officials to obtain a liquor license 20 years ago as reasons for voting against Playboy.

Zeitz said he would consider licensing Playboy at Tuesday's final vote if Hefner left the firm.

Danziger said the possibility was remote because Hefner, who founded Playboy, owns 66 percent of the stock. State gaming laws require individual licensing for each person who owns more than 5 percent of a corporation that operates casinos.

Zeitz and all commissioners except Danziger said they could overlook Playboy's loss of control over British gaming operations that led to a London panel rejecting a gaming license there last October.

During hearings this year, Playboy admitted paying $50,000 to the New York State Liquor Authority in the 1960s to obtain a liquor license for Playboy's New York City club. Fitzpatrick argued that the money had been extorted by liquor authority officials.

Moore, Garrett on probation for bribery

By SHARON HERBAUGH

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge branded Port Commissioner John Garrett and Deer Park labor leader L.G. Moore as "corruptors" but said imprisonment would punish their families far more than themselves.

U.S. District Judge Norman Black on Wednesday sentenced each to five years probation, imposed fines of $10,000 and ordered each to devote 350 hours to community service work during their probation.

He also warned the two men he would not be as lenient next time.

"If you ever stand before me again, you might as well have your suitcases in hand because you are headed for a federal correctional institution," Black said.

Garrett, 59, and Moore, 47, were charged in a scheme uncovered during the FBI's "Brilab" sting operation in 1979.

The two men were convicted Feb. 25 of using a long distance phone call to make a bribe and influence the awarding of health insurance contracts for municipal employees.

The judge told the two men he came "very close" to sending them to prison.

"You are corruptors. You bribed a public official," Black said. "However, I feel that to send you to a federal correctional institute would punish your families far more than it would punish you.

"I'm going to give you a chance to show you can be good citizens," the judge said.

Prosecutors refused to comment on the judge's decision, but defense lawyers said the sentences were fair.

"I thought it was a judicious, well-tempered, well-thought-out sentence," said Moore's attorney, Mike Ramsey.

Attorneys for Moore, who works in nearby Deer Park as regional director of the International Union of Operating Engineers, and Garrett had pleaded for probation, arguing the conviction alone had a punitive effect.

U.S. Attorney Daniel Hedges had argued the defendants should be given a "stiff penal term," claiming neither "has shown the slightest remorsefulness for illicit conduct."

Jurors deliberated for 23 hours over a four-day period before finding Garrett, 59, and Moore, 47, guilty on the charge involving a long distance telephone.

But on two other charges — conspiracy and making another phone call to further the alleged scheme — the jury was unable to reach a verdict.

Prosecutors have said they will retry the two men on those two charges and mey seek other indictments based on evidence that surfaced during the seven-week trial.

The alleged scheme was uncovered during the Brilab sting operation in 1979, in which Texas House Speaker Billy Clayton and two Austin attorneys were indicted in a similar scheme to influence a health insurance contract for state employees.

A federal jury here acquitted Clayton and attorneys Randall Wood and Donald Ray of all chrges in October 1980. Since then, all three have filed lawsuits against FBI undercover agents and Prudential Insurance Co., which they claim knowingly participated in the "sting" operation.

Pruett to take stand in his capital murder trial

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — An attorney for Marion Albert Pruett said Wednesday Pruett would take the stand in his own defense today, the fourth day of his capital murder trial for the Sept. 17 slaying of Peggy Lowe.

Co-counsel Billy Jordan of Columbus, a local attorney retained by chief counsel Alvin Binder of Jackson, said the decision was made Wednesday night after a conference between Binder, Jordan and co-counsel Bill Kirksey.

Jordan also said the defense team does not plan to use insanity as part of Pruett's defense.

"We will present a most unusual defense," Jordan said. "We will present an argument that is in the forum of seeking justice and not in any way avoiding the issue of guilt."

The state rested its case Wednesday afternoon in Pruett's capital murder trial.

Pruett is charged with killing Mrs. Lowe, 43, after taking her hostage during a robbery at a Jackson savings and loan branch where she worked.

In other developments, Binder, who has a heart condition, was treated for chest pains by a Columbus physician before court convened Wednesday. And in the afternoon, Kirksey was treated for nausea and stomach upset at the emergency room of the Golden Triangle Regional Medical Center.

The last two prosecution witnesses were Mrs. Lowe's daughter, Lana Goodman, who identified personal articles belonging to her mother, and Rodriguez Valdez, a pathologist, who testified Mrs. Lowe died of a gunshot wound to the head.

Earlier, a Jackson police sergeant testified that Pruett told him he decided he had to kill Mrs. Lowe when she started to stand up at the rural Alabama site where he planned to abandon her.

Sgt. O.T. McAlpin testified that Pruett had no trouble in finding the spot where the body was found in Sumter County.

McAlpin said officers talked to Pruett at length after he was returned to Mississippi last October before he agreed to lead them to the body of Mrs. Lowe.

The officer testified that during the 125-mile trip to Alabama, Pruett told them they would find her only partially clothed. He said he had forced her to undress so she could not follow him.

Sgt. McAlpin said Pruett told him and other officers he had developed a rapport with Mrs. Lowe during the trip to Alabama, and that she trusted him not to kill her.

McAlpin quoted him as saying that when he left her in the field, he told her he would call her husband and give him her whereabouts. But, McAlpin testified, Pruett said as he left, he saw Mrs. Lowe start to get up, and decided he had to kill her.

A videotape of the murder scene was shown in court with the jury outside of the room, but Hinds County Circuit Court Judge William F. Coleman ruled that the tape could not be introduced in evidence at this time.

Mrs. Lowe's family was in court again Wednesday, but at the suggestion of officials, left before the videotape was shown.

Defense attorneys questioned Sgt. McAlpin about Pruett's use of cocaine. McAlpin said that while Pruett might be psychologically dependent on cocaine, he was not physically addicted.

Goldwater: Appointments too political

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — Saying the process is too political, Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., has proposed an end to the system of congressional appointments to the nation's service academies.

He suggested instead that the academies be allowed to choose their own cadets.

Goldwater brought up the issue Wednesday at the annual meeting of the Air Force Academy Board of Visitors, of which he is a member. The board meets once a year to look into the morale, curriculum, finances and other matters at the academy and reports to the president.

"Maybe not in every single case, but politics enters into the appointments to the academies whether we like it or not," Goldwater said. "I have often wondered if we might not be better off by allowing the academies to select their own cadets...

Business funds solicitor claims to be Exxon representative

A man calling himself Lee Conway and purporting to represent the Exxon Oil Co. is soliciting money from the Permian Basin Business Community for the Dallas-based Lone Star Rodeo Association.

According to a news release issued by the Better Business Bureau, the man is not affiliated with Exxon. "Unscrupulous solicitors will sometimes claim to be employees of major companies as a device to put pressure on potential donors," said the BBB.

The BBB issued a similar warning last year concerning Championship High School Rodeo Inc. "The two schemes are similar because both involve collecting money for advertising and belt buckle awards," noted the BBB, adding:

"In schemes such as these, businesses are asked to have the check ready for a runner to pick up, making it possible for the check to be cashed immediately."

A man claiming to be Lee Conway with Exxon was also soliciting money last November for advertising to help pay for a church directory. Anyone who has been contacted by a representative of the Lone Star Rodeo Assn. is urged to call the BBB at 563-1880.

Rescue workers hope for rain to clear ash from Mexico

VILLAHERMOSA, Mexico (AP) — Officials and rescue workers anxiously scanned the skies over southern Mexico today, looking for rain to wash away clouds of volcanic ash hiding the fate of an estimated 5,000 villagers trapped on the slopes of the Chinchonal volcano.

Medical authorities said they had little hope any of them were alive. The trails to their villages were buried under three feet of volcanic ash, and it was assumed the accumulation in the villages was as deep.

"Every day that goes by we fear more for their lives," said Dr. Rigoberto Garcia, chief of medical services in Chiapas state. "Their principal lack must be water and the rain of rocks their biggest threat."

The eruptions that began March 29 stopped Wednesday, but a dense pall of ash, dust, steam and white-hot sand still hung over the 4,340-foot volcano in the Sierra Madre range of southeast Mexico.

Jose Luis Iracheta, a forecaster at the Villahermosa airport, said there was a 70 percent chance the first spring rains would fall by tonight.

Federal government will handle TMI core disposal

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — An agreement by energy officials and the owners of the damaged Three Mile Island nuclear reactor guarantees the federal government will dispose of its mangled, radioactive core — removing another stumbling block in the $1 billion cleanup.

Officials from General Public Utilities Corp., which owns TMI, and the federal Department of Energy signed the agreement at the state Capitol on Wednesday.

Gov. Dick Thornburgh called it a "major step" toward putting the "legacy of contamination at Three Mile Island...behind us."

Removal and disposal of the core is considered one of the final stages of the cleanup of the power plant damaged in the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident on March 28, 1979. The highly radioactive core lost some of its cooling shield of water, causing a partial meltdown.

Robert Arnold, president of plant operations at GPU Nuclear Corp., said the core could be removed by the end of 1985. DOE Assistant Secretary Shelby Brewer said GPU must repay the government for the estimated $10 million to $20 million cost of packaging the core, shipping it to research laboratories in Idaho and eventually disposing of it.

DOE originally agreed to take only 15 percent of the core, said Thornburgh, expressing gratitude that TMI will not become a long-term disposal site for radioactive wastes.

TMI officials also said Wednesday they have a $25 million plan for repairing damaged steam generator tubes in the plant's Unit 1 reactor and could have it ready to return to service by year's end.

Unit 1 has been kept idle since the accident at the adjacent TMI-2. To help pay for the cleanup, GPU has said it needs TMI-1 back in service. A restart will release $37.5 million a year in customer revenue and another $7 million now spent each month for replacement power, the financially strapped company has said.

But the restart has been put on hold since the discovery of corroson and cracks in the tubes of TMI-1's primary coolant system. In the plan outlined Wednesday to the NRC, the company would expand and reseal the tube walls to prevent further leaking.

TMI spokesman David Osterhout said the technique has not been used in this country, but had proven effective at a Belgium nuclear plant.

He said the repairs are planned to begin in July and be completed by fall, with the $25 million cost to come from TMI-1's $94 million operating, capital and maintenance budget.

Hatch confident radiation compensation bill will pass

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Sen. Orrin Hatch says he's optimistic about the passage, this time around, of legislation designed to give a "day in court" to people who believe they got cancer from above-ground nuclear tests.

The proposed radiation compensation bill was to be the subject of a hearing today before the Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources, which Hatch chairs. The governors of Utah and Nevada, scientists and representatives of people who say they got cancer from the nuclear tests two decades ago were to testify.

Hatch's previous legislation to compensate alleged victims of fallout from atmospheric nuclear testing at Nevada Test Site in the 1950s and early 1960s failed.

The measure currently before the committee would award damages according to the probability that an individual developed cancer from exposure to radiation.

"My legislation does not create a program that will compensate all those individuals stricken with cancer," said Hatch, R-Utah. "What it does is provide the individuals a day in court to prove that their cancer was due to atmospheric tests in the 1950s and 1960s."

About 1,000 residents of Utah, Nevada and Arizona say they contracted cancer or other illnesses because of exposure to fallout. Many of them, or their survivors, have filed suit against the federal government seeking compensation.

Several studies have found more cancer cases than would be expected in the population downwind from the Nevada Test Site. One University of Utah study said 2½ times as many southern Utah children died of leukemia during the testing.

A Department of Energy study released this week, however, said radioactivity from the fallout wasn't high enough to have caused the leukemia deaths. Physicists Philip W. Krey and Harold L. Beck of New York based their study on soil samples from 150 Utah sites.

If the bill were enacted, courts would determine an individuals' radiation dosage, Hatch said.

The Reagan administration opposes the Hatch bill, although representatives of the Defense and Energy departments say the government plans to compensate those injured by fallout.

"It is inappropriate to impose liability upon the government through a statutory system of attributable risk when the impact with respect to both radiation and other potential environmental exposures is unknown," said Lt. Gen. Harry A. Griffith, director of the Defense Nuclear Agency.

Utah Gov. Scott Matheson, Nevada Gov. Robert List, Hatch and Marriott were among witnesses scheduled to testify today.

Midland was hot spot of nation

Midland was the hot spot of the nation Wednesday, its 89-degree afternoon high tying for the honor as much of the northern part of the United States was in the grips of a frigid spring storm.

The high still failed to eclipse the all-time record for the date of 92 in 1946, while the low of 53 was way above the record 28 in 1938.

Colder temperatures are expected tonight, with a low in the low 40s expected. The high Friday, meanwhile, should be in the low 70s.

No precipitation is forecast, and the monthly total remains at a trace and the 1982 amount at 0.59 inch.

$25,000 bond set in stabbing case

Justice of the Peace Robert Pine has set bond of $25,000 on a woman charged with the stabbing death of her common-law husband late Tuesday night.

Marie Yarbrough, 37, is accused of murdering 48-year-old Freddie Collins during an argument at the couple's residence, 500 S. Lee St., Apt. 2, about midnight Tuesday. Collins was stabbed once through the heart, according to police, who said a knife was taken into evidence at the scene.

A Lubbock man whose pickup truck collided with a police car during a high speed chase late Monday night has had aggravated assault — a felony — added to the list of charges against him.

Judge Pine set bond at $10,000 on 31-year-old Stephen Dan Carpenter. Carpenter posted bond and was released from custody Wednesday.

He is also charged with traffic violations and attempting to elude after he allegedly turned off his headlights during a westbound chase on the north service road of U.S. Highway 80 and ran head-on into an unmarked detective car driven by Det. Sgt. Lindsey Therwanger, 24.

Hospitalized with a broken ankle is 24-year-old Det. Sgt. Danny Lee Neal. He was listed in satisfactory condition at Midland Memorial Hospital this morning. Police said Carpenter was being pursued by a marked patrol unit on a traffic violation when he made a U-turn and collided with Therwanger's car, which had joined in the chase.

The accident occurred in the westbound lane of the service road, a quarter-mile west of Midland Drive, about 11:45 p.m. Monday. Carpenter and Therwanger were treated for minor injuries.

Financial options dominate hearing hearing included Floy Hinson, an Ector County Independent School District official, and Dr. David Warner of The University of Texas at Austin.

Hinson testified about the possibility of using home-bound teachers in the psychiatric hospital. These teachers go to the homes of children who are incapacitated. Although Hinson said the school district has never worked with this type of facility, it would be in favor of cooperating with it.

Warner, the final witness of the day, testified about the need of psychiatric and chemical abuse services in the Permian Basin. In a 40-page report, Warner outlined three methodologies he used in demonstrating the need for such a facility.

West Plains is scheduled to wrap up its testimony today. Witnesses scheduled to testify today include a minister and an environmentalist. MMH begins its testimony Friday, with Parkview scheduled to start its case next Wednesday.

California teen-ager charged with first degree murder

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — A teenager held in the killing of a 9-year-old girl was formally charged Wednesday with first-degree murder and bail was set a $200,000, authorities said.

Lt. Don Silverman said that charges were filed against Daniel Ray Barrera, 19, who was held for arraignment Thursday in Pasadena Municipal Court.

Investigators on Wednesday searched the youth's hotel room "and another location" and came up with further evidence in the killing of Jenny Kao, Silverman said.

Police detectives said Barrera had worked as a waiter at a third fast-food restaurant, Papa's Famous Hot Dogs, for the last 18 months.

Time is running out on budget program

By CLIFF HAAS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiators in budget talks between the administration and Congress say the search for an alternative to President Reagan's plan will fail unless Reagan and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. compromise.

House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois said Wednesday that he and other participants in the secret discussions "are laying the groundwork for those two."

Michel said he and the other negotiators have at least the outlines of a budget compromise within their reach, but must persuade Reagan and O'Neill to accept the same framework.

"The rest of us are kind of in there chipping away at both those poles," Michel said, referring to the Republican president and the Democratic House speaker.

Another negotiator, Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., chairman of the House Budget Committee, told a Chamber of Commerce group earlier Wednesday that "We're going to have to figure out some way in which both principals can come on board."

But he warned that time is running out.

"If we are unable to reach a bipartisan consensus before the end of this month, then I don't think we're going to have a responsible budget program passed by the Congress this year," Jones said.

Michel, meanwhile, said he blows "hot and cold" about the prospects for an agreement.

Michel and Jones have been participants in the private talks along with White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III, budget director David A. Stockman, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan and key Democrats and Republicans from the House and Senate. Neither Reagan nor O'Neill has participated directly.

The talks are on hold — probably until next week — while Reagan and O'Neill review the progress so far.

Sources have said the negotiators are discussing a delay and reduction in cost-of-living increases for Social Security and other benefit programs as well as higher taxes to reduce budget deficits. Those tax proposals reportedly include an oil import fee and a 4 percent income tax surcharge, perhaps applying only to upper income taxpayers.

The negotiators also reportedly are considering an excise tax on all energy products, with an exemption for home heating oil.

Reagan has refused to accept any change in the three-year personal income tax rate cut Congress enacted last year while O'Neill has refused to discuss any cuts in Social Security unless Reagan agrees to a change in his tax policy.

But Michel indicated that an income tax surcharge might be acceptable to Reagan so long as the 10 percent personal income tax cut scheduled for July 1983 remains intact.

"A surtax is the kind of thing you can take on temporarily" and remove at a later date, Michel said. After the surcharge has expired, Reagan's three-year tax cut would still be in place, Michel added.

The negotiators hope to find a way to reduce budget deficits to less than $100 billion next year and to about $50 billion by 1985, according to sources. The administration now concedes privately that, without congressional action, the 1983 deficit will reach $179 billion and grow to $245 billion in 1985.

Meanwhile, Republican Reps. Stanford E. Parris of Virginia, Henson Moore of Louisiana and William E. Dannemeyer of California called a news conference Wednesday to unveil dozens of budget-cutting and tax-increase options they said would be generally acceptable to reduce the deficit.

The proposals include an $18 billion cut in Reagan's defense budget and $9 billion in reductions in benefit programs such as Social Security and food stamps.

The group outlined $48.7 billion in suggested tax increases, including removal of price controls from natural gas with an accompanying "windfall profits" tax.

Hinckley trial date set for April 27

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rejecting a defense request for more time, a federal judge has ordered an April 27 trial date for John W. Hinckley Jr., accused of trying to assassinate President Reagan.

U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker set the date at a hearing Wednesday.

Hinckley's attorney, Vincent J. Fuller, asked Parker to postpone the trial for another month, but the judge responded, "I don't look kindly on your request."

The 26-year-old Hinckley will be tried on charges he shot President Reagan and three others on March 30, 1981 as the president left the Washington Hilton Hotel following a speech.

Defense attorneys have conceded that Hinckley did the shooting, but the defendant has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity.

Appeals and legal maneuvering have delayed the start of the trial.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Roger Adelman opposed the defense request for a month-long postponement, saying, "We are ready for trial now.

But Fuller argued that a long stretch of time has elapsed since he interviewed witnesses.

"I appreciate your need for time, but it won't be 30 days," said Parker.

Five of the 13 counts lodged against Hinckley carry a life sentence as maximum punishment.

He is charged with attempting to kill the president and with assault with a deadly weapon on Reagan, presidential press Secretary James S. Brady, Washington police officer Thomas Delahanty and Secret Service agent Timothy McCarthy.

Brady, the most severely wounded, is slowly recovering. The others are back at work.

Collins proposes tax on imported oil to cut deficit

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

U.S. Rep. Jim Collins proposed instituting a $5 tax on all imported oil as one method to cut into the budget deficit, he said Wednesday during a news conference at Midland Regional Airport.

Collins is opposing State Sen. Walter Mengden in the May 1 primary in the bid for the Republican nomination for the U.S. Senate seat. If he wins that, Collins will face incumbent Lloyd Bentsen in the November general election.

"The budget is out of balance by $150 billion," Collins said. "The president is doing all he can to bring down the inflation rate. He's already brought interest rates down to 16½ percent. And he's doing that by cutting out the bureaucracy."

Claiming that the country is spending too much, he suggested the budget could be further reduced by slashing allotments for legal services, school busing and public broadcasting funds.

By taxing foreign oil $5 a barrel, it could bring into the government coffers as much as $12 billion, according to the Dallas area congressman.

He contended Congress has no intention of cutting the budget. "If they did, they would put the $5 tax on foreign oil. But the New England Democrats don't want to put it on there."

Collins supports Reagan's stand for a stronger national defense and the proposed hikes in the defense budget. "He wants to maintain peace for a balance of power," Collins said of President Reagan's plans.

However, he contended that the defense budget "will be cut by the liberals who control the House. And they also want to raise taxes and the Democrats are wrong on that."

Instead, this country needs to save more money than the 5 percent that is being placed in savings accounts today, he added.

Proclaiming that all foreign aid should be cut out of the budget, Collins admitted to a news reporter's question that he did vote in favor of a foreign aid bill a few months ago.

"It was the last day before we would be out for two months. Reagan said it would help national defense. Well, that morning Russia was standing on the doorstep of Poland, and Syria was on the doorstep of Israel. I don't regret the vote. I think the fact that we stood strong and showed that the country was behind Reagan" helped to stop any planned invasion of a country, he explained.

Looking at the United States picking up the mediator's role between England and Argentina over the Falkland Islands, Collins said the U.S. should stay out of the situation. The Falkland Islands, normally held by Great Britain, were taken over last week by Argentina.

In light of Collins' professed conservatism and Bentsen's alleged liberalism, the congressman was asked who the moderates in Texas have to represent them. Collins replied, "Texans want jobs and jobs are where conservatives are. It's conservative areas that attract jobs and businesses."

Jim Collins

He acknowledged that Mengden was running ahead of him in Harris County 60 to 40, but Collins said he held a 2 to 1 lead over his opponent in West Texas.

Florida man sentenced to death for hijack-shooting

MIAMI (AP) Rejecting a jury's recommendation for life imprisonment, a judge Wednesday sentenced a former longshoreman to death for the hijack-shooting of a Hialeah delivery truck driver.

A seven-man, five-woman jury deliberated only 20 minutes Wednesday in recommending a life prison term for Freddie Cecil Jones, convicted Monday of first-degree murder in the killing of Tomas Diaz de Villegas.

But Dade County Circuit Judge Robert Kaye overruled the recommendation, saying the aggravating elements of the crime far outweighed the mitigating factors that could be applied.

Florida's death penalty statute prescribes a series of aggravating and mitigating circumstances to be applied in deciding the sentence.

"The jury convicted an innocent man, judge," Jones, 25, told Kaye moments before sentence was passed. It was the defendant's only reaction during the proceeding.

During the trial, witnesses testified that Jones, after hijacking a Blue Ribbon Meat Co. truck last Oct. 7, coldly shot Diaz de Villegas in the head as the 56-year-old driver pleaded for his life. Jones, along with several other accomplices, then ran over the victim's head with the truck, the witnesses said.

The robbers got away with about $100 in the grisly crime, abandoning the truck containing some $18,000 worth of meat on a Carol City street, said Assistant State Attorney Roy Kahn.

Defense lawyer Myron Gold urged Kaye to impose a life sentence, noting that Jones had no significant prior criminal background.

Legislator concerned tornado victims won't receive help

PARIS (AP) — Even if President Reagan issues a disaster declaration for tornado-torn North Texas, it will not help the victims who need help the most, a state legislator said.

State Sen. Ed Howard, D-Texarkana, said Wednesday poor and elderly people left homeless by Friday's killer storm would not qualify for the Small Business Administration loans made available by a federal disaster designation.

"My concern is that there not be a false hope out there. I hope we can get the type of programs that will benefit the majority of people," Howard said.

Many of the victims were " ... low income, retired, on social security, on welfare," he said.

On Tuesday, Gov. Bill Clements sought a major disaster declaration for Lamar County and Paris City Manager Bob Sokoll wants residents to telegram Reagan asking to approve Clements' request.

Friday's tornado caused an estimated $50 million damage to Paris' north side.

A presidential disaster declaration would make available a variety of assistance programs, including SBA loans, Farmers Home Administration loans, income tax deductions and individual and family grants of up to $5,000 each for people that cannot qualify for the loans.

MENTAL HEALTH UPDATE

Hallucinogens nothing to fool with

By KENNETH H. WOLF
MSSW, SP

Hallucinogenic drugs are a commonly abused category of drugs. While most other commonly abused drugs have some legitimate medical uses, this is not true of hallucinogenic drugs. As the name implies, this group of drugs produces hallucinations and other altered perceptions of reality. Hallucinations may be visual, auditory, or tactile. In some cases, the hallucinations may be quite frightening and take on a highly paranoid character.

As such, hallucinated voices may be quite threatening, verbally abusive, or make derogatory comments about the affected person. Other common effects of hallucinatory drugs include panic, violence, euphoria, distortion of other senses, increased heart rate and blood pressure, and irregular breathing.

Commonly abused hallucinogens include LSD (lysergic acid diethylamide), PCP (phencyclidine), mescaline and psilocybin. It is important to emphasize that in certain individuals with underlying mental health problems, any drug that is abused may produce symptoms of paranoia and even hallucinations. There are many additional potential hazards associated with the abuse of these drugs.

These include the rapid development of tolerance to the drug, such that the drug has to be taken more frequently or in larger doses to produce the same effects. There are also risks of genetic damage to the user, which can produce birth defects in the user's children. Flashback experiences may occur for weeks or even months after the last use, and in some cases the user is driven to a suicidal act or a serious accident.

PCP is a highly dangerous drug of abuse, perhaps more so than other hallucinogens, because of its unpredictable effects on the user. There have been reports of bizarre behavior such as self-mutilation, suicide, or murder under the influence of PCP. Other possible effects resemble those of the other hallucinogenic drugs, such as euphoria, depression, confusion and distorted perceptions.

Tolerance to PCP also develops quickly, requiring larger or more frequent doses of the drug. Overdoses can cause psychosis, convulsions, coma or even death. PCP may be taken by mouth, by injection, or by smoking. It is higly dangerous because of its unpredictable effects and because it may be taken by a naive user without knowledge of its possible effects or in some cases without knowledge that it is even being consumed.

Treatment is available for the abuse of hallucinogens. Eearly intervention is of course preferable, but treatment can begin at any point during the abuse cycle. Prevention of drug abuse begins with education as to the effects of abuse. Prevention also demands that parents be actively involved in their children's lives from the time that children are quite young.

If young children grow up with a minimum of supervision or control, one cannot expect them to willingly accept more supervision and control as teenagers. Successful treatment or prevention requires a total effort by society to include family, schools, churches and treatment centers.

Doctors say survival will gave baby life

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Jessica Lewis weighed just over a pound when she was born, but her tremendous will to live helped make her one of the smallest babies in the world to survive, doctors say.

Today, she has grown to 3 pounds, 4 ounces, and "doctors are as optimistic now as they were pessimistic before," said Craig Lewis, her father.

Jessica weighed 1 pound, 2 ounces, when she was born Jan. 4. A twin sister, Annie, weighed 10 ounces and was too small to survive.

"They have no equipment that small," Lewis said. "They didn't have the technology to save her."

Jessica's first 2½ months were a medical battle. She was connected to a respirator, underwent heart surgery and had several brain scans, her parents said. Infection remained a threat.

"The first six weeks were real touch and go," said Pat Lewis, her mother. "The doctors wouldn't give us much hope. Every time the phone rang we thought she was gone. It took seven weeks for her to start growing."

But this week, she was transferred to the regular nursery at Poudre Valley Hospital here. She still receives a small amount of oxygen. Mrs. Lewis has begun to breast-feed her but since Jessica would use up too many calories eating that way all the time, she also is fed through a tube in her mouth.

The brain scans all were normal, her mother said, and an eye test last week indicated Jessica has the lowest level of eye damage possible for a child who has been on oxygen.

Jessica may have to wear glasses, but that is the extent of the damage, said Dr. Steven Block, a specialist with the University of Colorado Health Sciences Center in Denver where Jessica was born. Block said she is one of the smallest babies to survive.

"But it wasn't a surprise," he said. "Jessica is one of those babies who has a great will to survive."

Jessica's parents said her battle has been instructive and inspiring.

"People all over the country and the world have been praying for her," he said.

Elections said to prove democracy works

By RALPH de TOLEDANO
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Two days after the El Salvador elections, a curious organization in this city of the bizarre held a press conference.

The press was there in force to hear what the Council on Hemispheric Affairs had to say. Of course the press was there. After all, it was a leftist group. Had it been one of the conservative organizations which keep an eye on Latin America, the attendance would have consisted of two men and a small dog.

I left when one of the speakers — it was possibly Ramsey Clark but I was standing in the doorway of the room at the National Press club where the press conference was held — stated, so help me, that the Salvadoran election was "an abuse of the democratic process." I say "so help me" because none of the assembled reporters, busily taking down each golden word, sniggered.

Yet sniggers would have been in order. For here was an election with the largest turnout of voters in El Salvador's history. Many of these voters had risked their lives to cast a ballot. The terrorist guerrillas had threatened to kill anyone who voted, thus demonstrating their dedication to the democratic process. And in some villages, voters had braved communist gunfire to make their way to the ballot boxes.

BUT, OF COURSE, we are living at a time when, with national press connivance, black is white and anything with a made-in-Moscow political label is by definition "democratic." Like Afghanistan.

The election in El Salvador, let me hasten to note, was as clear an indication of democratic health as one could find. It demonstrated, moreover, that the major weapon of the guerrillas is not the terror they have let loose in the country but the Western media. In spite of the tremendous military and logistic help the Salvadoran guerrillas have gotten from Nicaragua, Cuba and the Soviet Union, they have yet to do more than inflict hit-and-run damage on the government and people of the country. But to read the stories in the major media, they are knocking at the door of power.

The elections showed that the guerrillas have no popular support. But they also made it plain as to where the sympathies of the people lie. Jose Napoleon Duarte and his "moderate" Christian Democrats were able, according to the last figures available, to get 41 percent of the vote. The several parties of the hard-core right, however, amassed a generous 51 percent of the vote. This in spite of the fact that Duarte and the Christian Democrats had the advantage of incumbency and the backing of the United States.

The communist-armed and communist-motivated guerrillas have been educating the people of El Salvador. The result of that education, as evinced by the vote, is that the voters are not interested in land reform and a "negotiated peace" with the guerrillas. They want their country liberated, with a return to domestic tranquillity. Not only the communists lost, both politically and militarily, in the elections. The whole concept of "negotiation" now being pushed by the Soviet Union and its minions in Central America ended up with a black eye.

New drug hasn't been found to aid arthritis

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have arthritis and I was all excited when I saw that television program about DMSO. I thought it was going to be made available to the public. Lately I don't see or hear anything about it. Is someone waiting to make a buck on it before the public can get a chance to use it? — Kenny, Charlottesville, Va.

Dear Kenny: The Food and Drug Administration has approved the use of dimethyl sulfoxide (DMSO) for the treatment of a condition called chronic interstitial cystitis. There is also research underway to determine if it is of any value in the treatment of scleroderma. It is doubtful, however, that DMSO will be found to have a role in the treatment of arthritis.

For example, Dr. John R. Ward, professor of internal medicine and chairman of the division of rheumatology of the University of Utah, says very flatly that there is no evidence that DMSO is effective in the treatment of arthritis.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am 35 years old and as bald as a cue ball. I would like to get fiber implants, but my wife is discouraging me. She says she likes me the way I am. She also says she has read that implants can cause trouble. Is this true? I don't think she knows what she's talking about. — Walter, San Francisco, Calif.

Dear Walter: I usually make it a point not to become involved in family debates, but I'm going to make an exception in this case: Listen to your wife.

Dr. C. William Hanke of the Indiana University School of Medicine and his associates report that fiber implantation for baldness is an unsafe technique that can cause serious complications, including infection and scarring. There are legitimate methods of reducing the degree of baldness, but fiber implantation apparently is not one of them.

Dear Dr. Solomon: It seems that parents are blamed for everything that goes wrong with a child. I heard someone on the radio say that asthma in children was caused by emotional problems between the child and his parents. Would you please comment on this? — Mrs. D.L., Detroit, Mich.

Dear Mrs. L.: Studies have shown that children with asthma do not have a greater incidence of psychiatric problems than children without asthma. However, psychological factors can be responsible for aggravating the disorder.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have always been self-conscious because my breasts are so small. I have read up on silicone implants and would like to know if they are permanent. In other words, if I had an implant, could I then forget about it? — Janet, Casper, Wyoming

Dear Janet: There is always the possibility that silicone implants may rupture. If this were to happen, surgery would be necessary to remove the material and replace the implant.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Argentina will defend 'to last soldier'

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Argentina will defend the Falkland Islands "to the last Argentine soldier" and will not be bullied by Britain into making concessions, Interior Minister Gen. Alfredo Saint Jean said Wednesday.

In Port Stanley, the capital of the islands — called the Malvinas by Argentina — Gen. Mario Menendez took the oath of office as the islands' first Argentine governor in 149 years.

A BRITISH ARMADA steamed toward the Falklands to recapture the South Atlantic crown colony seized Friday by Argentine troops. Defense Secretary John Nott announced in the House of Commons on Wednesday night that a 200-mile area around the islands would be considered a "maritime exclusion zone" starting Monday.

"...Any Argentine warships and Argentine naval auxiliaries found within this zone will be treated as hostile and are liable to be attacked by British forces," Nott said.

In response, Argentina declared a "South Atlantic Theater of Operations" in which the country's military committee, composed of the commanders in chief of the three armed forces and the defense minister, would be able to order "acts of self-defense."

A government communique announced that Vice Adm. Juan Jose Lombardo, chief of naval operations, was named commander of the operation.

The official Argentine news agency Telam said Nott's statements were part of a campaign of "psychological intimidation."

"The boasts, threats, bravado and pretentions underestimate the Argentine's analytical capacity and only serves to dissimulate that old empire — the old, corroded, decadent empire of Francis Drake, Walter Raleigh and William Beresford, does not have everyone with it," it said.

BRITISH AMBASSADOR Anthony Williams and 52 other British diplomats and dependents left Argentina Wednesday afternoon — ordered out after Britain severed diplomatic relations.

Argentina's Foreign Minister, Nicanor Costa Mendez, met with U.S. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. in Washington and said the United States offered to help resolve the crisis and he was confident peace would be achieved through negotiations. Haig is to fly to London and Buenos Aires in an attempt to defuse the crisis.

The British Embassy in Montevideo reported that about 150 British citizens, who had been told by their government to leave Argentina, entered neighboring Uruguay since Monday. An embassy spokesman said the majority left on flights bound for London.

In a ceremony displaying the greatest national unity since the armed forces seized power in Argentina in 1976, Menendez was sworn in as governor by Gen. Osvaldo Garcia — commander of the forces that seized the archipelago. Monsignor Desiderio Collino, an Argentine archbishop, delivered an invocation offering thanks "for the recuperation of our islands so dear to us all."

Six days after the invasion, Argentina began what was termed "a partial recall" of troops recently discharged after completing obligatory military service.

A military spokesman declined to estimate the number of troops recalled or Argentine army strength on the islands 250 miles east of Argentina's southern tip, but the figure is assumed to be in the thousands.

The government announced the mobilization of reservists recently discharged after completing their obligatory military service, but did not say how many men were affected.

Saint Jean said he thought Britain's dispatch of a 40-ship armada was "out of proportion" but emphasized Argentina was capable of defending the islands against any British assault.

The interior minister, questioned about U.S. efforts to promote a peaceful solution to the dispute, said: "Any kind of negotiations are valid. But we are not going to make concessions under any type of threat."

President Reagan offered America's "good offices" Wednesday and directed Haig to fly to London and Buenos Aires for preliminary talks aimed at finding grounds for accord.

ARGENTINA IS struggling through its worst recession in 50 years, with unemployment at 12 percent and real wages steadily declining. Demonstrations against the junta's economic policies erupted in several cities before the Falklands' seizure, and there has been speculation the invasion was designed to blunt the protests.

Britain's new foreign secretary, Francis Pym, accused the Agentine regime of being a "morally bankrupt" dictatorship, and said in London Wednesday that Britain will not appease the generals and will do everything in its power to regain the Falklands.

Meanwhile, the junta said the 8-year-old state of siege in effect in the rest of Argentina would not apply to the Falklands.

The great majority of the 1,800 British-descended, English-speaking Falklands residents have over the years expressed their desire to remain British, many of them citing a distaste for the military dictatorships that have alternated with periods of civilian rule in Argentina for the past 50 years.

Saint Jean told journalists at the airport the island residents would continue to enjoy "complete liberty" whether they chose to become Argentine citizens or remain British.

"We have in our country a British community that enjoys the most ample liberty and has integrated itself perfectly with Argentines," he said.

There are some 17,000 Britons in Argentina, and most of them have retained their British passports although residing here for years. An Anglo-Argentine community estimated at 50,000 — many of them descendents of the British who came at the end of the last century to build the railroads and develop wool and meat export industries — retain close cultural ties to Britain.

Negotiations slow-moving; Haig role clear to U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Administration officials are portraying Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. as an "honest broker" in the effort to avert war over the Falkland Islands, but Britain's ambassador in Washington insists he is confident of U.S. support on key issues.

Acting on orders from President Reagan, Haig left for London early today to confer with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and Foreign Secretary Francis Pym.

He goes to Buenos Aires later in the week for talks with Argentine officials.

"Obviously, we're going to be the honest broker," said a White House official traveling in the Caribbean with Reagan. He said both sides are looking for a peaceful solution but "their threshold of pain remains a question."

The official, who asked not to be identified by name, said one U.S. worry is that the Soviet Union could "try to take advantage...pretending to be the champion of the Third World."

EVEN AS HAIG prepared to leave on his trip, a large fleet of British warships was steaming toward the Falklands. Britain has declared that, effective next Monday, any Argentine ships within a 200-mile radius of the islands "will be treated as hostile and are liable to be attacked by British forces."

The fleet is scheduled to arrive in about 10 days with orders to use force, if necessary, to dislodge Argentine troops who seized the islands Friday.

Nevertheless, both Britain and Argentina have expressed willingness to arrive at a peaceful settlement.

Meanwhile, Britain's U.S. ambassador, Sir Nicholas Henderson, told The Associated Press in an interview Wednesday that Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger had called him personally to discuss a statement from the Defense Department that implied the U.S. was neutral.

British Embassy officials said privately they were upset earlier this week when Defense Department spokesman Henry Catto said: "We have no idea of doing anything but walking right down the middle. We're not going to give anybody any help either way."

Henderson said that in a telephone call, "The secretary of defense himself told me that he had issued a denial of what had allegedly been said. I'm in no doubt about it that the Americans are not neutral on these two questions, namely the use of force and the disregard of self-determination" by the Argentines.

But a Pentagon official said later: "I think the word denial is a little strong. The word clarification is a better word than denial. What the secretary did was to indicate that perhaps what should have been done...was to stress the United States did support the United Kingdom in the U.N. and did condemn Argentina's use of armed force in the Falkland Islands."

The official asked not to be identified.

THE REAGAN ADMINISTRATION, meanwhile, used the word "mediator" for the first time Wednesday in describing Haig's role in the dispute. An administration official in Jamaica with Reagan said "there is cause to suppose that the United States has now been accepted as a mediator."

Despite statements from key Argentine officials that they might agree to withdraw their troops as part of an overall settlement to the conflict, Henderson declined to express optimism that a settlement acceptable to Britain might now be in sight.

"I don't think it would be sensible to say one is more optimistic or more pessimistic," he said in the AP interview Wednesday. "The important thing is that the Argentines should become realistic and realize that we are going to insist on the restoration of the situation before this military aggression.

"When the Argentines have withdrawn their military oocupation forces, then the time will come to consider longer-term issues. They just have to go. If they are going, they go, and they must go."

Well-placed diplomatic sources speculated privately that the Argentine government may feel it misjudged the severity of the British reaction to the taking of the Falklands and may now be looking for a way to retreat while saving face. But one source, who didn't want to be identified, said the minimum loss to the Argentines probably would be the fall of the government headed by President Leopoldo Galtieri.

Britain declares island war zone

LONDON (AP) — Defense Secretary John Nott said Wednesday night that Britain has declared a 200-mile war zone around the Falkland Islands, effective next Monday.

He told the House of Commons that as from 4 A.M. GMT (11 p.m. Sunday EST) any Argentine ships within the zone "will be treated as hostile and are liable to be attacked by British forces."

Argentina invaded the Falklands on Friday, and Britain has not given the locations of ships that were at sea and headed for the area before the main naval force left Portsmouth on Monday.

Officials gave no immediate indication whether any British warships or submarines will be within the war zone by Monday, but Britain has a naval base at Ascension Island about 4,400 miles away and port facilities at islands that are closer.

"Our first naval action will be intended to deny the Argentine forces on the Falklands the means to reinforce and re-supply from the mainland," he said.

Nott's announcement came at the end of the second emergency Commons debate in four days on the Argentine invasion of the South Atlantic Falklands colony last Friday.

He spoke two days after Britain's two aircraft carriers left to lead a 40-vessel British task force on a more than two-week journey to reclaim the Falklands, by force if necessary.

Nott has said before that Britain could mount an effective blockade of the Falklands.

Foreign press ban nearly complete

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — International news media Wednesday were barred by the government from first-hand coverage of the swearing in of Gov. Mario Benjamin Menendez, the first Argentine to govern the Falkland Islands in 149 years.

With the exception of the official Argentine news agency Telam and the state radio and television network — which transmitted sound, but no picture — journalists were not permitted to attend the ceremony in Port Stanley, the capital of the islands, called the Malvinas by Argentina.

Menendez, 52, was appointed governor after Argentine troops invaded and occupied the British-administered Falklands and their dependencies — the South Georgias and South Sandwich Islands — last Friday, defeating a small garrison of British marines and ousting British authorities.

An estimated 200 journalists, photographers and cameramen, representing Argentine and international media, have gathered since the takeover in both Buenos Aires and Comodoro Rivadavia, a city more than 1,100 miles south of the capital and departure point for military flights to the islands, 250 miles offshore.

The only news-gathering trip allowed to the islands came on Saturday when a handful of Argentine journalists representing local newspapers and news agencies were flown over from Comodoro Rivadavia and allowed to spend three hours before being returned to the mainland. No foreigners or foreign media were allowed.

Cold, wind make Mount Washington life tough

By WILLIAM COCKERHAM
The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

MOUNT WASHINGTON, N.H. — This 6,288-foot rime-encrusted mountain that juts into one of the earth's major storm tracks is a citadel of weather.

It is a molehill compared to most mountains, yet it has the formidable reputation of having the worst weather of any inhabited place on the globe. At least 60 unwary hikers and climbers have lost their lives on this mountain as a result of the weather since 1849, most from exposure and exhaustion. Fifteen have perished during summer months.

There are colder and windier places on Earth, but nowhere is there such a dramatic clash of the two.

Hurricane-force winds howl across the mountain's arctic-like peaks on an almost daily basis in the winter. Combined with below-zero temperatures, these conditions could freeze your eyeballs within minutes.

"IT DOESN'T take much for a person who is ill-prepared for the weather up here to have the strength sucked right out of them," said Marty Engstrom, an engineer for Mount Washington Television who has worked on the summit of the Northeast's highest mountain since 1964.

Weather statistics on the peak, located in New Hampshire's White Mountains, are enough to make a snowman turn and run for cover:

—The world's highest wind velocity — 231 mph — was recorded here April 12, 1934.

—Hurricane-force winds (75 mph) are recorded on an average of 104 days a year.

—Gusts of up to 150 mph have been recorded here during every month except June, July and August.

—A low temperature of minus-47 degrees was recorded here in 1934.

—Zero or below-zero temperatures have been recorded during every month of the year at one time or another. The highest temperature ever recorded was 71 degrees.

—Record snowfall of 49.3 inches during a 24-hour period occurred in February 1969. For that whole month, snowfall was 172.8 inches.

Snowfall has been recorded on every day of the year at one time or another.

—The peak is in the clouds about 55 percent of the year.

Although Mount Washington is accessible to tourists from June until September over an automobile road, few but the most experienced of hikers and climbers can make it to the top the rest of the year. Hikers and climbers are warned even during the summer, though, to turn back if there is a sudden change in the weather. People don't die on this mountian, warns one sign, "They perish."

During the winter, the only way up the mountain is by vehicles with tank-like tracks, or by foot, which is not advisable.

BUT EVEN by tracked vehicle, the trip is perilous. Snowdrifts often obliterate the road and visibility vanishes to almost zero the nearer you get to the summit.

As bad as the weather is, however, between five and six people work and live on the summit year-round — two engineers at Mount Washington Television's antenna station and three to four people at the Mount Washington Observatory.

Every Wednesday, when weather permits, two tracked vehicles rumble slowly up the 8-mile Auto Road with relief crews, higher and higher until the trees diminish to heights of only a foot or more because of the wind and cold, and then disappear entirely.

Beyond the tree line, there is nothing except ice and rime-encrused rocks — no life, vegetable or animal, except for the human forms inside the Snowcat.

Outside the vehicles, hurricane-force winds tear across a part of the frozen terrain called the "Cow Pasture," shortening the drivers' visibiity to only a dozen yards.

"Nearly lost a tractor here last week," said Parker Vincent, Mount Washington Television's chief engineer. "Slid sideways down a drift just as easily as anything. Would have gone over the side except God put a rock right where it should have been."

A week before, another television station driver, Phillip Labbee, blinded by a fierce snowstorm, took a wrong turn on the way down from the peak and ended up against the side of a bluff. Labbee got out of his vehicle in an effort to find the road, wandered off about 16 feet, tripped on a rock and lost his direction when he got up.

Five hours later, suffering from exposure and exhaustion, Labbee luckily found one of a dozen search vehicles out looking for him. He was treated and released from a North Conway hospital.

As one rescuer observed, visibility that night was equivalent to being "inside a bottle of milk."

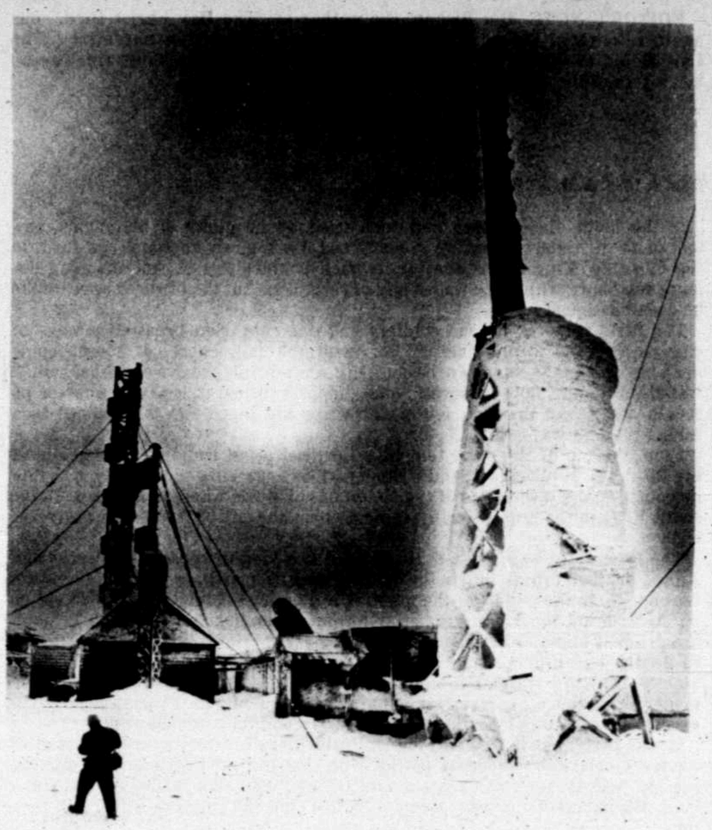
At the summit of the mountain, the word "weather" takes on a new significance.

The whiteness of the rime (supercooled fog) is blinding. The cold slices through you like a razor blade and the wind is often so fierce it is impossible to walk without leaning into it. A sudden change in wind direction will knock you over.

Willie Harris, a Mount Washington Television station engineer who is spending his 28th winter at the summit this year, wouldn't have it any other way, though. He loves the week-on, week-off shift and the drama of the weather outside the comfortable concrete bunker where he lives.

"After all these years, I'd miss the mountain," he said.

ALTHOUGH HARRIS and his partner Engstrom only venture outside their four-room living quarters when an emergency comes up, the two men have experienced temperatures as low as minus-46 degrees and winds as high as 136 mph.



LAT Photos

Snow and ice coat the television communications facilities on Mount Washington. Sub-freezing temperatures and hurricane winds often occur, due to the mountain's position in one of the major storm tracks on earth.

LA. . .otos

Ice and snow often form eerie shapes at night on New Hampshire's Mount Washington, where men live and work year-round in the observatory and communications facilities.

The two men said they enjoy each other's company and rarely get on each other's nerves, despite the close living arrangment.

"We don't discuss music, though. We don't see eye to eye on it and we just avoid the subject," said Harris, who likes jazz. Engstrom likes Lawrence Welk.

There are more jokes about the two men living alone on a mountaintop than you can imagine, so naturally Engstrom and Harris have a good sense of humor about their situation.

Once, said Harris, he was the victim of a joke which could be called "The Blonde In The Bed."

"I was relieving this one guy here and just before he left he said to me, 'Willie, A skier, a good-looking blonde, made it all the way up here and is taking a nap on your cot. Hope you don't mind. Wake her about 5 (p.m.).' Well, after about five minutes I just couldn't resist it, so I took a peek in my room. Sure enough, there was what looked like a blonde asleep on my cot. When I went to wake her at five, though, it turned out to be one of those life-size inflatable dolls with a blonde wig," Harris said.

"There is an element of awe connected with the weather," he said.

Crowd's roar sentences Jesus to be crucified

EDITOR'S NOTE: Jim Bishop, the author of "The Day Christ Died," has again re-created the first Good Friday in this rewritten narrative, "The Last Hours of Christ." This three-part version compresses those final hours but loses nothing in the power, the scope and the telling.

By JIM BISHOP
King Features Syndicate Inc.

Part I: 10:00 A.M. APRIL 7, A.D. 30

In the night, the prisoner had been tried, found guilty of blasphemy, sentenced to die, interrogated by Romans and Jews, given no water, no food. In the morning, King Herod sent Jesus back to the Fortress Antonia. The distance was short, within the walled city of Jerusalem, but the prisoner appeared to be deeply fatigued.

The little party of Roman soldiers and one centurion breasted a wave of citizens hurrying to the markets. For them, the daily chores of housekeeping must be complete by sundown, because this was not only the eve of the sabbath, it was also the most holy Passover. Some shoppers turned to look at Jesus, for no reason other than that any Jew whose wrists are roped and is being led by a soldier is on his way to die.

From the top of the great temple, a Levitical priest could see a blue rim of the Dead Sea, 23 miles east. And beyond that on a sparkling morning such as this, he could see the tawny hide of the Mountains of Moab, where Moses died. To the south, he required little vision to see Bethlehem, the city of David, only five miles away.

The Procurator was irritated. He enjoyed tweaking the noses of Caiaphas and Annas, the high priests, but, in the case of Jesus, he had either gone too far or not far enough. In the middle of the night, after Pontius Pilate said he had found no wrong in Jesus, the Sanhedrin had tried him under Hebrew law and had found the prisoner guilty of blasphemy. This was a grave crime, punishable by stoning to death. The Romans had long ago decreed that the Jews could not put anyone to death without the endorsement of the Roman Provincial government. Concurrence was given grudgingly, and frequently the Procurator took the execution itself away from the givers of the law and crucified the guilty.

It was petty, but it pleased Pontius Pilate. He was a middle level servant of Caesar Tiberius, a simpering patriot who won favor with Rome by building seaside resorts, such as Caesaria, and filling them with statues of his stone gods. His superstitious wife, laden with fear, did not improve Pilate's disposition.

NOW HE AGAIN had a Jew to be judged. The crowd threw Jesus through the portals of Antonia, where he fell on huge square stones called lithostrotose. No Jew, even a robber, would willingly set foot on the accursed Roman stones. Pilate beckoned to someone on the porch of the palace behind him. A servant brought a cerulean chair for the Procurator to sit on. The thing that vexed Pilate was that a small case had grown beyond its bounds.

The ranking Sadducees shouted that King Herod had interviewed the prisoner and found no wrong in him. Herod, a glutton, a womanizer, a betrayer of his people, was truly king of the Jews of Judea. The prisoner, it was said, claimed to be king of the Jews. Herod, who was terrified at the thought of competition, was expected to follow the verdict of the Sanhedrin: Guilty. Now, to confound the Procurator, he had done the opposite. The Jews, in effect, were now tweaking Pilate's nose.

Some of the high priests had started to chant for death to Jesus. They were ignorant of the issue, but had utmost confidence in their priests. The few hundred outside Fortress Antonia made a lot of noise. Elsewhere in the land there were many Jews who had come to believe that, in the light of his preachments of love, his miracles, his defiance of authority, Jesus was truly the messiah, the one sent by Jehovah to save them.

Jesus stood. Pilate studied him, noting the mockery in the red robe. "You brought this man before my tribunal," the Procurator shouted, "on the ground that he incited the nation to revolt. Now see the result: In your presence I personally conducted this hearing, but detected no guilt in him regarding the charges you preferred against him." The people listened, muttering softly. "For Herod referred this case back to us. This, then, is the verdict: He has done nothing to deserve the penalty of death."

The crowd cried loudly for vengeance. The noise upset Pontius Pilate. When it died down, he said, "Accordingly, I will discipline him, and then set him free."

The roar of sound engulfed him. For a time, he was not the all-powerful arm of Caesar; he was a frightened man. In the shouting, he heard pleas for a Passover pardon for Barabbas, a political rebel who had killed a man. He was to die at noon with two thieves. The Roman was still trying to squirm out of a bad situation. He would give the crowd its choice of a pardon between the conscienceless killer and the gentle blasphemer.

HE HELD his hands aloft for quiet. "Which do you want me to release as your choice," he shouted, "Barabbas or Jesus called the Messiah?" Describing Jesus as "called the Messiah" doomed the man. Part of the crowd worked in the temple and truly believed that Jesus was a fake messiah, one with a dangerously large following. Having him killed would be God's work, as the high priests and the Sanhedrin believed. All of them had seen many messiahs come and go. There was a temple phrase for such: "Egyptian fakirs." The other half of the crowd was a group of political friends of Barabbas, who had come to beg a Passover pardon.

The people shouted "Barabbas!" The priests did not have to prompt them. "Then what am I to do with Jesus, called the Messiah?" Pilate asked. Under normal circumstances, they would have shouted: "Give him to us for stoning," but, having moved Pilate so far from his will, they gave Jesus back to him. "Have him crucified!" they roared. "Why?" Pilate asked. "What wrong has he done?" The people were not bound to rationalize. "Have him crucified!" they yelled.

The prisoner stood silent through this, swaying slightly in the brilliant sunshine. When the news reached the courtyard of Caiaphas, he would be exultant. He had at last trounced this officious toady of Rome, this gentile. The Jews, when offended in their creed or their sense of justice, were known to riot. This was why Rome had built Fortress Antonia in the northeast corner of the walled city. Pilate dreaded a report to Rome which would accuse him of causing the Jews to riot.

Now, instead of freeing the inoffensive Galilean, he had pronounced two sentences on him, scourging and crucifixion. The thieves who would die today were not scourged. Indeed the Jewish law — Mithah Arikhta — forbade any prolongation of a death sentence. The prisoner to be stoned was taken to his village, led to the highest point of eminence, and ordered to jump. Whether he was killed or injured in the leap did not matter. Stones by the hundreds flew from the hands of his peers.

Across the courtyard were three Roman columns broken at a height of three feet. At the two-foot level, rusty iron rings had been embedded on both sides of each column. Jesus was led to one, bent forward and his hands compressed to fit into the rings. The cloak and his tunic were removed. The crowd at the gate pressed closer; the breathing was audible. In Rome, the discipline was administered by a lictor, a man trained to drive a prisoner "halfway to death" without permitting him to lose consciousness.

There was no lictor in all Palestine. The Tribune addressed the soldier who picked up the flagellum. The crime of the prisoner, the Tribune said, was in claiming to be king of the Jews. This was false. Jesus had said, in public: "... My kingdom is not of this earth." His crime was blasphemy, claiming to be the Son of God, the messiah sent to redeem the Jews. In the absence of proof, the elders of the Sanhedrin had expected a miracle, some magic at the trial.

HAD IT COME, the old men would have been happy indeed. They too had been waiting for a long time for God to fulfill his promise. What they got was a succession of spurious messiahs who bled the poor and the ignorant. The miracle did not occur at the trial because, in the Garden of Gethsemane, Jesus gave up all the powers of the Son of God so that he might endure the full range of pain and suffering and dying, the final act of love for all mankind.

There would be no miracle now; no escape. The soldier hefted the flagellum. It was a circular piece of wood which fitted his palm. To it were attached several strips of leather, possibly four feet long. At the end of each strip, a ragged chunk of bone or links or iron chain were tied with hemp. The soldier wanted to see the face of the prisoner. He bent low so that he could look up into the bearded countenance.

Businesslike, he stepped away, measured the distance and whistled the thongs at the back of the prisoner. Jesus sobbed and went to his knees. The crowd at the gate exhaled. Some of the priests left for the temple. Little tufts of flesh rose across the back of the prisoner. The soldier spread his legs and, probably not wishing to be reproved for delay, brought the thongs to a fresh target, just above the buttocks. Jesus' head came up toward the sun and he moaned. For a moment, he got off his knees, but the following blow brought him down again.

Handicapped girl's voice is her fingers

By DANIEL Q. HANEY

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — Since she was a teen-ager, Gayle Sabonaitis has lived in darkness and silence. But she talks with the tips of her fingers to a world that knows nothing of her handicaps.

Each evening, she crawls to a corner of her apartment house basement, where she taps the Morse code key of a ham radio set. It is a medium where she is more than an equal, where she is an expert, even though she cannot see, cannot hear cannot walk.

She holds a full-time job, writes poetry, regularly reads 13 Braille magazines, talks music and sports and recently earned the highest ham radio license granted by the Federal Communications Commission.

She has been blind since she was 1½, deaf since 15. Progressively she has lost her equilibrium so she must crawl or glide about in a wheelchair. Her senses have been taken away by a relentless and incurable nervous disorder, which has baffled her doctors.

Yet at age 38, Miss Sabonaitis challenges her surroundings with the faculties she has left.

"I have a keen sense of smell and taste and touch," she says. "They take the place of my sight and hearing."

Earning her novice license as a ham radio operator 11 years ago was a struggle. Since she cannot hear, Miss Sabonaitis uses a transducer to understand the dots and dashes. This is a loudspeaker with a piece of plastic the size of half a ping-pong ball glued onto it. She places her left hand on the ball and reads the incoming code by feeling the vibrations.

Her latest accomplishment was earning an amateur extra class license, the highest of the five that the FCC grants.

"When she's using Morse code, she's without a handicap," says Dr. Peter Sosnow, a ham radio enthusiast who works in the emergency room at the University of Massachusetts Medical Center. "Any person she's in contact with has no conception that she's deaf and blind. She sounds and seems the same as any other person."

Only 8 percent of the nation's 389,000 ham radio operators hold the highest license. The FCC's Personal Radio Branch keeps no records on whether any of them are blind and deaf, but the division's chief, John Johnson, said, "I would say that it is extraordinarily unique."

Tapping away at 28 words a minute, Miss Sabonaitis chats on the air for about three hours each evening with her radio friends throughout New England.

"I hear every word people say with my fingers," she says. "I hear through my hands."

Without ham radio, she says, "I would be psychologically dead."

Miss Sabonaitis speaks normally, but communicating without her Morse key is painstaking.

She can understand slowly spoken words by holding her fingers to the speaker's lips. Her mother, Stella, talks to her by tracing letters on her palm.

The two of them share an apartment in a building near downtown Worcester. But by day, Miss Sabonaitis works full time at the Come Play Products Co., a toy factory. There she staples small brooms and dustpans onto cardboard and stuffs them into plastic bags.

Miss Sabonaitis spent most of her childhood and teen-age years at the Perkins School for the Blind in Watertown, a Boston suburb. There she completed three years of college through correspondence with the University of Wisconsin.

She wanted to be a teacher. And even though it became clear that she could never teach in a public school, she now helps other handicapped people in her spare time to read Braille and operate ham radio sets.

Her time is full, for when she is not working or broadcasting or reading, she writes haiku, a demanding, Japanese form of poetry. Each poem consists of just 17 syllables. She has written 200 of these and is trying to get them published as a book.

"People said I couldn't do this," Miss Sabonaitis said, surrounded by electronic gear in her basement ham shack. "They said I couldn't work. But I am very stubborn and determined. I fooled them."

In one of her favorite poems, she wrote:

"Butterfly, my life is free from want, and yet I myself freely give."

"I hear every word people say with my fingers. I hear through my hands...(Without ham radio) I would be psychologically dead."

Of law and morality

A society that recognizes it can take steps that likely would reduce a significant number of preventable deaths each year but chooses to not do so is a society that will suffer the consequences of that negligence.

So it is in the case of drunken driving. Recent research findings released by Texas A&M University's Texas Transportation Institute reveal that there are four groups of people who are most likely to be involved in car accidents: (1) males 25 years or younger; (2) persons with two or more previous car accidents; (3) elderly drivers; and (4) drunk drivers.

There is an old axiom which contends morality cannot be legislated. Perhaps not. But rules of conduct for a society must be drawn or society eventually will deteriorate to a point at which social disorder will rule.

Statistics from years of abuse, countless July Fourths, Christmases and New Years' celebrations should have convinced Americans decades ago that drinking and safe driving are simply imcompatible.

Texas House Speaker Bill Clayton addressed the drinking-driving issue in a recent column, noting that 46 percent of all DWI (driving while intoxicated) accidents occur on the weekends. Three-fourths of the DWI accidents occur between the hours of 7 p.m. and 5 a.m. And one out of every two accidents involving an intoxicated driver includes personal injury while 3 percent of the accidents involve fatalities.

In the past three years, 15 states have raised the legal age for drinking for teenagers, reversing a trend that had been to lower the legal age. But that only attacks a part of the overall problem. To reduce the risk of injury and death on the highway, the drinking driver has to be controlled.

That's where society's lawmakers have a sworn obligation to get involved. A drinking driver increases the risk more than just for himself: He increases the risk of every motorist on the highway. In that respect society MUST attempt to legislate morality by punishing those who violate the rules for conduct.

During its next session, the Texas Legislature is expected to consider possibilities for increasing the penalties for those convicted of driving while intoxicated. It's our opinion that the legislators should strongly consider significantly strengthening the penalty. But they should not just take our word on the need. Careful study of the available ghastly statistics should more than convince them.

Why 'normalize' Cuba?

The argument now raging in the United States over what policy Washington should follow in Central America has also renewed the old dispute on the best way to handle Cuba.

Some argue that it is time for Washington to "normalize" relations with Havana by opening the way for talks with Fidel Castro over American property expropriated by his government and ushering in a new era of trade between the two nations.

American businessmen would find a big market in Cuba, they say, and Cuba could send its sugar, tobacco and tomatoes to the U.S. Hence the U.S. should lift its embargo on Cuba to the advantage of both countries.

We wonder how Cuba would pay for the goods it imports. The Cuban peso has little international standing as currency. Further, there are no accurate statistics on how the Cuban economy is working. The 1981 World Bank Development Report lists Cuba's gross national product growth at an average annual rate of 4.4 percent for the 1960-79 period, roughly the span of Castro's dictatorship.

If true, it would make Cuba an all-time success story. The prior year's World Bank Report listed the average Cuban GNP at minus 1.2 percent. The World Bank explained this difference to the Wall Street Journal by saying that Cuba doesn't publish its own economic statistics. The World Bank bases its estimates on statistics provided by Comecon, the East bloc trade group controlled by the USSR.

Even if the Cuban economy were flourishing the main issue in U.S.-Cuba relations would remain politics, not finances.

Cuba is an unsinkable aircraft carrier and a base for training communist guerrillas for action in Central America — and these are at Moscow's disposal. According to the most recent estimates, Moscow gives Havana $8 million a day. Cuba isn't worth that much economically to Russia, a major producer of beet sugar, which can be used in place of Cuba's cane sugar. It's the unsinkable aircraft carrier that Moscow values.

Whatever U.S.-Cuba trade could develop from "normalization" would not change that. Castro is committed to spread communism throughout the hemisphere.

Nor would trade with the U.S. liberate the Cuban people from a cruel dictatorship that has lasted more than 20 years. There are no elections or freedom of speech, of press or of assembly.

If Castro wants trade he can make an overture to Washington, promising free elections at a specific date, the release of all political prisoners and a break with Moscow.

Time enough then to talk about "normalization."

Another View:

Something to ponder

The junta government of Argentina has been contemptibly contemptuous of human rights within its own borders; now, by its invasion of the British-ruled Falkland Islands, it has declared to the world that it is equally scornful of international law, of the United Nations Charter and of commonly accepted standards of decent national behavior.

In the grandiose phrases that governments utter when they know they are being wicked, Argentine President Leopoldo F. Galtieri told his countrymen:

"We have regained the southern islands that legitimately form part of our national patrimony — safeguarding the national honor — without rancor, but with the firmness demanded by the circumstances."

"The circumstances" simply are that Britain had the islands and Argentina wanted them. "National patrimony" means "offshore oil and fish." "National honor" means crowd-pleasing diversion from the Galtieri government's economic mismanagement.

There is no clear title to the rainswept rocks in the South Atlantic, but the British, who have occupied them undisturbed since 1833, have talked about their future off and on for years with the Argentines, and at times have seemed willing enough to give them up. Not so the 1,850 inhabitants, who are British, like being British and don't want to be Argentines.

"The system they stand for is a dictatorship, where people permanently disappear," a member of the islands' legislative council said recently. "It may seem strange for a colony to say, but we're used to democracy here." Is it too much to hope that Argentina's attack will give pause to Third World countries that, under the banner of anti-imperialism, have been supporting Argentina's claim?

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Reagan-backed law would aid assassins

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — Incredibly, President Reagan is supporting legislation that will make it easier for another assassin to gun him down. The danger is described in a confidential report that was written the day after he took a .22 slug in the chest a year ago.

The pistol used in the assassination attempt was one of two "Saturday night specials" that were purchased — with frightening ease — by John Hinckley Jr. at a Dallas pawnshop.

Yet senators have reacted by pushing legislation that will make it even simpler to buy cheap handguns. This proposed weakening of the federal Gun Control Act has the tacit approval of the man in the White House, who was nearly killed by one of those pieces of lethal junk.

Under the Gun Control Act, records had to be kept that made it possible for federal agents to trace the gun used in the Reagan shooting in 16 minutes. The next day, Treasury Secretary Donald Regan had a confidential report on his desk detailing the shocking history of Rocky's Pawn Shop, where the gun was purchased on Oct. 13, 1980.

According to the report, "a joint Criminal Enforcement-Regulatory Enforcement review of the firearms records of Rocky's Pawn Shop indicated that nearly one-third of the customers purchasing firearms had prior criminal records, many with felony convictions."

The report by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms noted that in 1978, New York City police alone recovered six handguns bought at Rocky's; these had been used in crimes committed by various Chinese youth gangs.

The BATF investigators reported that Mike Yee, a gang leader, had bought a total of 32 handguns from Rocky's and another Dallas gun dealer, for delivery to Chinese gangs on the East Coast. The investigation also indicated that Yee was operating an extortion ring in the Dallas area. Regan was informed.

On May 23, 1979, two BATF undercover agents accompanied Yee and an associate to Rocky's. Manager David Goldstein sold 12 handguns to Yee's associate, who immediately resold 10 of them to the federal agents. Yee and his associate were arrested the next day; they have since been tried and convicted for extortion and gun law violations.

After cataloging the gun flow from Rocky's to the underworld, the BATF report added: "However, the review failed to prove criminal intent by the firearms dealer and criminal prosecution was not recommended."

My reporters Tony Capaccio and David Field read the confidential report to the owner of Rocky's, Isaac Goldstein. Regarding the charge that felons had bought guns in his store, Goldstein said: "I never heard of that. If that had happened, they would have canceled my license."

As for Mike Yee, Goldstein said the federal agents were "slow on the draw" in that case. He said he had called the agency several times to learn whether it was all right to sell Yee quantities of handguns.

"They told me it was all right to sell to Yee because 'we got nothing on him,'" Goldstein said. "I didn't know what he was going to do with the guns, and I called ATF. What else could I do?"

That, of course, is precisely the point. Goldstein was selling guns completely within the law. The federal agents were powerless to stop the traffic in deadly weapons, and when John Hinckley Jr. came along, he had no trouble buying the gun that nearly killed a president.

Footnote: One of the most controversial provisions of the proposed legislation would curtail surprise inspections by federal agents of gun dealers. Says Michael Beard, president of the National Coalition to Ban Handguns: "It would make it almost impossible for the federal government to detect violations of the 1980 gun act by licensed firearm dealers."

EXPENSIVE EDUCATION: Baseball teams aren't the only ones to hold training camps in the Sun Belt. The Office of Personnel Management spends millions of dollars a year training federal bureaucrats at resorts in Florida and elsewhere.

Take the "Seminar for New Managers" sponsored by OPM's Dallas-based training center next month in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. It's being held at the Rolling Hills Golf Club, and the bill will be at least $25,000, not counting travel costs for the participants.

The government is supposed to use its own facilities for training exercises whenever possible, but there apparently weren't any available in the southwestern United States. So OPM solicited bids from 19 fancy resorts, and Rolling Hills was the low bidder.

Sen. David Pryor was incensed when he heard about the Rolling Hills junket, which accounts for only a small portion of the $2.4 million the training center will spend this year.

So the senator tried to get hold of the OPM official in charge. No luck: The official was somewhere in a hotel in Orlando, Fla., attending a $40,000 OPM seminar.

EXECUTIVE MEMO: Interior Secretary James Watt was nearly cited for contempt for refusing to turn over internal documents to Congress. But things don't always work that way.

In recent testimony, refugee relief officials from the Department of Health and Human Services let Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., know of their unhappiness with the Office of Management and Budget, which has been holding up checks for the relief program.

Chiles asked Anthony Itteilag, deputy assistant HHS secretary for budget matters, if he would send the Appropriations Subcommittee copies of the funding requests sent to OMB. Itteilag was delighted to oblige.

GEORGE F. WILL

Falkland Islands crisis opens new doors

George F. Will

WASHINGTON — After wondering if the Falkland Islands crisis — the last 19th century war?, an operetta looking for a Gilbert and Sullivan? — is a case of carrying the nostalgia craze too far...

After remembering the axiom that the average citizen is no more capable of a grand passion than of a grand opera, and wishing that William James were here to see the roaring crowds in Argentina, and those cheering the British fleet at Portsmouth... ("Man lives by habits indeed," wrote James, "but what he lives for is thrills and excitements. The only relief from habit's tediousness is periodical excitement. From time immemorial wars have been, especially for noncombatants, the supremely thrilling excitement.")

After being pleased that this episode will further discredit the moralizing majority at the United Nations (where Spain — which has a restive army and covets Gibraltar — abstained from the call for Argentina to withdraw)...

After wondering when Sen. Kennedy or some similar keeper of the peace will seek legislation requiring the Reagan administration to get congressional permission before "becoming involved in" the Falkland Islands... (There is a slogan for the next Kennedy campaign: "He kept our boys out of Port Stanley.")

After marking this down as another example of the strength of the weak and the weakness of the sort-of-strong... (Argentina was not deterred by Britain's nuclear deterrent — or by anything else. Lord Wigg, a Kiplingesque soul, laments that Britain has spent "111 billion pounds on defense since the end of the last war and we can't knock the skin off a rice pudding." Welcome, your Lordship, to the Iranian hostage experience.)

After hoping that this episode will call American attention to this truism: that when your political will and military assets are perceived to be insufficient to sustain your commitments and pretenses, other nations begin acting rudely... (Britain's task force is led by the aircraft carrier Invincible, which Britain is selling to Australia for budgetery reasons.)

After recovering from astonishment at the principle that dictated the resignation of Lord Carrington, Britain's foreign secretary... (The principle is that a minister is responsible for what goes on in his area of responsibility, and that when something goes smesh, he resigns. America has "no fault" government: Not even a military fiasco like the rescue mission to Iran produces resignations.)

After savoring this paradox: A nation at the eastern end of the Mediterranean may benefit from the crisis in the South Atlantic... (Israel considered Carrington a nemesis. And if Third World diplomats are capable of feeling embarrassed, they will blush when, having been "understanding" about Argentina's aggression, they return to denouncing Israel. Israel is occupying the West Bank only because Jordan launched aggression from there.)

After fainting from shock at the impudence of Argentina's occupying force which, with tanks rumbling through the sheep, decrees imprisonment for any Falkland Islander who commits "actions that disturb community normality..." (The Islanders are, to say no more, happier about life under British sovereignty than most Argentinians are about life under the current government of Argentina.)

After fainting again from the thought that a number of governments which, like Argentina's, project internal tensions toward external foes, may someday have nuclear weapons...

After noting that this crisis underscores the wrongheadedness of American liberals who insist that the world is made safer by decreasing American power... (In 1956 American disapproval was sufficient to halt an invasion of Egypt by Britain, France, Israel; in 1982 American disapproval is disregarded by Argentina.)

After all such thoughts, comes this one: Little crises have ways of growing, faster than you can say "Sarajevo." Every little bit hurts: Every little injury done to the forms of international law lowers more than the tone of life on the planet. It also lowers, perhaps imperceptibly but not innocuously, the threshold at which disputes become violent.

And what a stimulating lot of disputes there can be if Argentina's "repossession" principle becomes an infectious precedent. Here is a mental game to play in the silent watches of the night: Count the number of borders and other political arrangements around the world that can be considered merely provisional, pending arbitration by force, if Argentina's action is not reversed.

Argentina has declared, in effect, that there is no statute of limitations on historical grievances, or at least none on grievances that are only 149 years old. So dust off a 19th century globe and let's reopen every dispute, from Schleswig-Holstein through...well, Heads Up, Texas. Manifest Destiny had its messy aspects.

ART BUCHWALD

Diplomacy repeats like an old movie

Every time Secretary of Defense "Cap" Weinberger goes abroad, I get the willies. The success of every mission seems to be based on how much American military equipment he can give or sell to the country he visits, as well as his ability to persuade the head of the state, he is drinking tea with, to build up his armed forces.

Art Buchwald

I don't mind when Weinberger does a selling job on a Third World power, but I start shaking when he puts pressure on a country like Japan to get its military act together.

This is what Secretary Weinberger has just done on a trip to Tokyo. He wants the Japanese to rearm and become a military power to be reckoned with.

To those of us who served in World War II, memories die hard when it comes to allowing a powerful Japanese defense establishment. And the way things are going economically for them and us, we're taking a big chance letting them return to their old ways.

For argument's sake, let's assume that the Japanese buy the Weinberger proposal, and, with their fierce competitive spirit, technological robots, and dedication to quality control, they manage in a few years to build the biggest and best army, navy and air force in the Far East.

At first, the Pentagon is overjoyed, as the Japanese relieve them of the financial burden of keeping American troops in Korea, Japan, and Okinawa.

Now a new president of the United States is elected, and under great pressure from American manufacturers decides to embargo all Toyota automobiles, and Sony television sets. A summit meeting between the president of the U.S. and the premier of Japan on Guadalcanal produces harsh words.

The president warns the premier that he has ordered U.S. submarines to sink any Japanese ship loaded down with Toyotas, on sight, and not to pick up any surviving spare parts.

The Japanese premier tells the president the survival of his country depends on shipping automobiles and TV sets to the U.S., and future shipments will be escorted by warships.

The president returns from his trip and orders all Seiko watches sold on the West Coast to be rounded up and sent to internment camps in Utah.

The premier of Japan disbands his cabinet and puts a new military clique in charge of the government. He orders them to start flooding the Philippines, Singapore, Hong Kong and Burma with jogging shoes and sweat bands.

U.S. intelligence manages to break the Japanese naval code and discovers that the Japanese also have plans to land 100,000 Toyotas and 50,000 Sony Betamax machines on Okinawa. They also intend to invade the U.S. Army PX there with thousands of Japanese instant cameras that could destroy the Polaroid and Eastman Kodak companies overnight.

The president calls in the Japanese ambassador to the United States and warns him that if the Japanese plant as much as one computer chip on Okinawa it will mean war.

The Japanese ambassador assures the president that his country has no intention of invading Okinawa with its products, but at the same time says that unless the U.S. lifts its embargo, his government intends to dump 10,000 Honda motorcycles on Wake Island, and sell them to the U.S. Marines.

After the Japanese ambassador leaves, the president turns to his most trusted counselor and says, "He's lying through his teeth. What is today?"

"Saturday, sir."

"Then tomorrow could be a 'Day of Infamy.' Damn, Weinberger. Why couldn't he have left well enough alone?"

Meanwhile, back at Pearl Harbor they're holding a dance at the officer's club, Burt Lancaster is making love to Deborah Kerr in the ocean, and 200 miles offshore Admiral Yamamoto is standing on the bridge of his carrier looking through his binoculars towards the lights of Hawaii.

He sighs and says to his aide, "Americans never learn. TORA, TORA, TORA."

Officials urge Reagan to renounce first use of nuclear arms in Europe

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bipartisan group of former senior U.S. officials is urging President Reagan to seriously consider renouncing the first use of nuclear weapons in Europe.

All four former officials agreed that it is virtually impossible to guarantee that a nuclear war can be limited.

"If we continue to depend on a strategy of first use deterrence will fail and Western civilization as we know it will be destroyed," one of the officials, former defense secretary Robert McNamara said at a news conference Wednesday.

The four rejected Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr.'s assertions Tuesday that their plan is "tantamount to making Europe safe for conventional aggression."

THE COMMENTS BY MCNAMARA, former national security adviser McGeorge Bundy, former strategic arms negotiator Gerard Smith and George Kennan, former U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union appeared in an article in the upcoming issue of Foreign Affairs Quarterly, published by the Council on Foreign Relations.

McNamara and Bundy served under Democratic presidents, while Kennan and Smith served in Republican administrations.

"We think a policy of no first use, especially if shared with the Soviet Union, would bring new hope to everyone in every country whose life is shadowed by the hideous possibility of a third great 20th century conflict in Europe," they said.

"It seems timely and even urgent to begin the careful study of a policy that could help to sweep this threat clean off the board of international affairs."

The United States and NATO now employ a strategy of "flexible response." This means that NATO will respond at whatever level aggression occurs but will escalate to whatever degree is necessary to end the aggression, including the use of nuclear weapons.

Previous no-first-use proposals by the Soviet Union, made over the past 25 years, have been rejected because, in theory, the policy would limit the alliance to accepting defeat from superior Soviet conventional forces.

At the news conference, McNamara said he believes the conventional strength of the Soviet Union and the Warsaw Pact has been overestimated while the strength of the United States and NATO has been underestimated.

HE SAID THAT WHEN HE was secretary of defense 21 years ago, the combined Soviet and U.S. stockpile of nuclear weapons totaled no more than 6,000 weapons. Today, he said, both sides have a combined total of 50,000 weapons and the numbers are growing.

As to Haig's objections, McNamara said, "I feel quite confident that neither he nor any of his associates have read the article."

In the article, the four acknowlege that adoption of a no-first-strike policy would have to be followed by a large buildup of U.S. and NATO conventional forces. McNamara declined Wednesday to say whether that eventually would mean the reinstitution of the military draft.

Haig has contended that adoption of the "no first use" policy would mean reinstituing the draft, tripling the size of the armed forces and putting the American and European economies on a wartime footing.

The four authors contended that "it would be wrong to make any hasty judgment that those new levels of effort must be excessively high."

No one really knows what would be needed, they said, "but it is political will, not budgetary pressure, that will be decisive."

They contended that a policy of effective conventional balance and survivable second-strike nuclear strength "is vastly better for our own peoples and governments, in a deep sense more civilized, than one that forces the serious contemplation of 'limited' nuclear scenarios that are at once terrifying and implausible."

Marijuana pound seized

CRANE — A 34-year-old Crane woman was arrested and a pound of marijuana valued at $1,400 seized in a drug raid here at 11:55 p.m. Wednesday.

The woman, held in Crane County Jail overnight, was expected to be charged sometime today.

The arrest came after the issuance of a search warrant at 11:38 p.m. by Crane County Judge Charles Blue.

Taking part in the raid were Crane County Sheriff's Department officers and a Department of Public Safety trooper.

Bell says Carter hurt by re-election obsession

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Attorney General Griffin B. Bell says the Carter presidency was hurt by the White House staff's obsession with getting their boss re-elected.

Bell's assessment of the Carter presidency is contained in his memoir, "Taking Care of the Law," scheduled to be published later this year. The Associated Press obtained proofs of the book on Wednesday.

Bell also said former Vice President Walter Mondale was one of the major reasons the Carter presidency "failed."

Mondale, Bell said, represented the Democrats' liberal wing, not the constituency that elected Jimmy Carter. "Their views were not the same. The attemps to gloss over some of the fundamental differences also helped produce the unclear, all-things-to-all-people voice the public heard so often from the administration," he wrote.

The former president made a mistake in allowing Mondale to have an office in the White House and giving him a role in policy formulation, Bell said.

From the time Carter took office, Bell said, the White House staff was "obsessed" with winning the 1980 campaign.

"Kowtowing to single-interest groups to hold their loyalty for the next election prevented him from appearing to have a coherent presidency," Bell wrote.

In the book, Bell said he frequently considered resigning because of what he felt were efforts by the White House staff to undermine his authority.

CITING ONE case, he said Mondale and domestic affairs adviser Stuart Eisenstat persuaded Carter to overrule Bell and instruct the Justice Department to favor allowing parochial schools to use federal job training funds to hire teachers and aides.

Bell had decided that such use of federal funds would violate the constitutional separation of church and state.

Besides Mondale, Bell said Carter should not have put the "Kennedy and McGovern people of the Washington government-in-waiting" in middle-level jobs because they were not loyal to Carter or his ideas.

On another matter, Bell said Pentagon officials once asked him to direct Justice Department lawyers to lie in court to protect a secret that had already fallen into the hands of the Soviet Union.

The incident occurred while the Justice Department was preparing to prosecute William Kampiles, a former CIA clerk, for selling to the Soviet Union the secret manual for the United States' KB-11 spy satellite. Kampiles was eventually convicted of espionage and sentenced to 40 years in prison.

Bell said Pentagon lawyers, whom he did not identify, asked Justice Department lawyers to say in court that the KB-11 satellite had never been put into operation by the United States.

If the judge appeared skeptical about why the Soviets would want a manual for an inoperative satellite, Bell said the Defense Department lawyers suggested four possible answers.

"The Pentagon approach showed no respect for the integrity of the criminal justice system," Bell said. Misrepresenting facts in court is a violation of U.S. criminal statutes and legal ethics, he said.

Bell said he refused the Pentagon request and was not overruled by the White House.

Sixteen-year-old jailed in shooting of Michigan woman, four children

By MICHAEL L. GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

YALE, Mich. (AP) — A 16-year-old "friend of the family" has been jailed as a suspect in the rural killings of a woman and her four children, who were shot in the head with a rifle in Michigan's third mass murder in two months.

The unidentified boy had attended high school with one of the victims and lives within a mile of the home where the five bodies were found Wednesday, police said.

A powerful storm that buried Michigan under 8 inches of snow shut down the rural Yale schools Tuesday and Wednesday, and town schools superintendent Albert Kimmel said they would remain closed today because of the killings.

"I don't know what time the slayings occurred, but it's possible the children might have been in school had it not been for the storm," Kimmel said. "Everyone here is in a state of shock."

"There are no charges formally filed at this time but the juvenile subject is being held in custody" pending a decision on whether to charge him in Probate Court, Prosecutor Robert Cleland said.

He identified the victims as Betty Giuliani and her four adopted children, Erick, 19, Kathleen, 16, Cindy Joe, 13, and Dino, 9.

Mrs. Giuliani's husband, Richard, was at work at the General Motors Corp. Tech Center in the Detroit suburb of Warren during the morning when the slayings are believed to have occurred, said St. Clair County Sheriff David Doktor. The home is 55 miles north of Detroit.

Detective Bruce Lindke of the St. Clair County Sheriff's Department said all five were shot with a .22-caliber rifle. Assistant St. Clair County Medical Examiner Benjamin C. Clyne said all five were shot in the head. Autopsies were planned today, Cleland said.

A neighbor who had planned to go bowling Wednesday with Mrs. Giuliani found the bodies inside the home shortly before 8 a.m., authorities said. The neighbor, who asked that her name not be used, said she had spoken to Mrs. Giuliani by telephone that morning.

Police took the unidentified teen-ager into custody around 6 p.m. He was questioned for about 75 minutes, handcuffed, then transported to the county jail in nearby Port Huron, where he was lodged as a suspect, Lindke said.

Cleland described the boy as a "friend of the family."

The detective said there were no other suspects in the murders.

Erick Giuliani was a quarterback for the Yale High School football team last year and his sister, Kathleen, sang in the high school choir this year, Kimmel said.

Cindy Joe Giuliani was in the eighth grade at Yale Junior High School and Dino was in the fourth grade at Yale Elementary School, Kimmel said.

Mrs. Giuliani had taught religious education classes for four years, said the Rev. Joseph Nosal, pastor of Sacred Heart parish.

Clyne, of the medical examiner's office, said the bodies of the mother and oldest daughter were found in a hallway, the body of Cindy Joe was found in a bathroom, Erick was found in a bedroom and Dino was discovered in a shower.

All the victims were fully clothed and one child was still in nightclothes, sheriff's deputies said. There was no sign of forced entry or robbery at the murder scene.

Seven members of the George Post family were discovered slain on their farm near Farwell in Clare County on Feb 16. On March 13, five members of the Robert Paulson family were found shot to death in their burning home in Allendale.

Robert Lee Haggart, 31, of rural Clare, is awaiting trial in Clare County Circuit Court on seven charges of first-degree murder in the Post killings. Haggart's estranged wife was one of the seven victims.

No arrests have been made in the murders of Paulson, his wife and three daughters, Ottawa County Sheriff Robert D. Dykstra said Wednesday.

Chrysler to offer maintenance program

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (AP) — With auto sales slumping and rebates losing their punch, Chrysler Corp. announced an unprecedented five-year warranty and free-maintenance program aimed at luring customers into showrooms.

"Today's customers want a long-lasting, trouble-free car, and they want a warranty that's at least as long as their finance contract," Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee A. Iacocca announced Wednesday.

The new program covers more components for a longer period of time than any warranty offered in the industry, Chrysler officials said.

Iacocca's announcement followed Ford Motor Co.'s disclosure Tuesday that it would extend and expand its two-year free-maintenance program on most cars until June 6.

General Motors Corp. and American Motors Corp. also have announced sales promotions for the next several months as industrywide sales in March fell 23 percent even with rebates.

Iacocca said meanwhile that Chrysler will report a profit for the first quarter of 1982, thanks to the sale of Chrysler Defense, its profitable tank-building subsidiary.

But he said the company's report for the first three months of the year will show a loss on its automaking operations. Iacocca refused to say how large a profit Chrysler made in the first quarter or to predict whether the automaker will post a profit for the year.

Chrysler sold Chrysler Defense to General Dynamics Corp. last month for $336.1 million.

Chrysler's new program, which begins Sunday, replaces rebates expiring Saturday which offered up to $2,000 on cars and trucks. The new program gives buyers of all Chrysler cars, except Mitsubishi imports, free, regularly scheduled maintenance for five years or 50,000 miles, whichever comes first.

The warranty, which includes labor and parts — even windshield wipers — is three years longer than the one offered at Ford.

Buyers also receive a five-year or 50,000-mile warranty on powertrain components, including engine, transmission, transaxle, drive axle and drive shaft parts.

In addition, Chrysler offers a five-year, 50,000-mile warranty against rusting of the cars' outer body panels.

The warranties are transferrable to second and third owners, said Iacocca, who would not say when the offer would end.

"We hope it is going to be so effective that is will run into perpetuity," he said.

Iacocca would not estimate the cost to the No. 3 automaker, except to say that consumers surveyed thought the savings would be about $1,500 per car.

"It's not a sales gimmick; it's too expensive for that," Iacocca said.

Chrysler has had sales promotions of one kind or another, mostly rebates, since Oct. 14, but reported sales were off 24.8 percent in March.

"The public, we think, is tired of rebates," Iacocca said.

Auto industry analysts agree that consumers are weary of the rebates and consider them complicated and gimmicky.

The offer excludes Chrysler trucks, and a company spokesman said no decision had been made on whether to offer promotions on those vehicles.

The announcement leaves only Volkswagen of America with a sales promotion set to expire Saturday. A spokesman said he did not know of any plans to extend the $350 rebates.

Fall fashions imaginative

By MARYLOU LUTHER
Los Angeles Times - Washington Post News Service

MILAN, Italy — You can star in next fall's spaghetti Western as the cultured cowgirl. You can stroll through your palazzo as a duke of Venice. You can play both Victor and Victoria. And you can dress like a fencer, falling on your sword as you're presented with the bill.

All of these possibilities will be yours next fall, thanks to the imagination of Milan's most famous designers.

For the estimated 12,500 retailers and 400 journalists who gathered here in search of a new look, the fall fashion theme is as disparate as Italian antipasto. A short skirt here. A long one there. A knee bared; an ankle exposed. A fur scarf for your ankle. Elbow-length suede mittens. Gray flannel tights. A necklace of knit. And enough tuxedos for the senior prom, Julie Andrews and the entire international penguin colony.

RETAILERS SAY THE CLOTHES will cost about 20 percent more next fall than last fall.

If there is one collection most fashion watchers agree is worth the estimated $1,200 to $2,000 per outfit it is the Mario Valentino line designed by Giorgio Armani.

Armani's cowgirls roam the fashion range in some of the most beautiful suedes and leathers ever to hit the runway. A purple and pink plaid suede cavalry shirt, for example, is worn with brown leather jodhpurs, a floral-printed suede blouson-vest, a brown leather neckerchief and matching gaucho hat and boots. To top it off: a blanket lined in leather.

When our cowgirl is ready for something more feminine she changes to a quilted, floral-printed suede poncho over a blue- and green-printed suede prairie skirt that stops short of the ankles to reveal a purple punchworked suede petticoat. The heroine's little blouse on the prairie is made of shocking pink punchwork suede.

By changing the cowgirl's colors from their original sagebrush drab to the high-density purples and shocking pinks of 1982, Armani takes her out of the wild, wild West into the wide, wide world of high fashion. When worn without the accessories that mark them as ranch fare, each blouse, each skirt, each pair of pants should be able to walk right off the back 40 onto the city streets.

Meanwhile, back at the Doge's Palace, Armani offers a Renaissance update in the collection he designs for Erreuno. Using the draped shoulder look he pioneered last season under his own label, Armani designs big, loose blouson vests over matchng cardiagn jackets and hipster pants, often in plaids or tapestries. As the collection progresses, he elongates the oversized sleeveless blouson jacket to just below the calf and shows it with short, plaid chemise dresses accessorized with black tights or pleated-front blouses and knee pants. For evening, the blouson vest almost touches the floor in satin umbre-striped versions worn over silk organza blousons and black velvet pants or black velvet blousons with gold lame mid-calf pants. You could call it The Merchant of Venice, revisited.

FOR GIANNI VERSACE, the Renaissance touch comes with the apron-skirted evening pants once worn by court pages. You'll see them in velvet and taffeta, worn with some of the most beautiful lace-edged blouses since the Renaissance.

Borrowing from the medieval knights, Versace brings their chain mail to 1982 via his chain-link insets on leather jackets, his see-through chain-link skirts and even a chain-link evening gown with surplice-closing bodice.

The designer who brought jodphurs out of the paddock onto the streets introduces a new draped pant for fall which is based on the East Indian dhoti. Versace offers it most often in bicolored jerseys blending black with brown, for instance, or black with slate blue.

One of Versace's favorite jacket looks for fall is the blazer with its own attached vest, usually in a contrasting color. A subtle maroon flannel blazer, for instance, is vested in yellow to match the yellow flannel pants. The bicolor theme, which is used this season by many designers, is repeated in Versace's full mid-calf flannel skirts. A black flannel skirt, for example, gets a center panel of slate blue. And the theme is repeated again in his two-color wool jersey pants, many with hip yokes.

As the song goes, this is the year of the cat. It's Krizia's new animal motif for fall, and it is, indeed, the cat's meow, featured on some of the most beautiful sweaters in Milan. There's the Cheshire cat, the puss-in-boots cat, the Persian, the Siamese and other varieties known only to the imagination of Krizia's designer Mariuccia Mandelli.

IN ONE OF HER all-time best collections, Mandelli also brings us the dinosaur — his curved silhouette appearing on sleeves of dresses as well as jackets.

Instead of following the trend to blousons, Mandelli introduces the long tabard tunic, showing it in tweedy knits in subtle greens and slate blues over coordinating tights.

There are remarkable short skirts here, made of a tweed so fine and light it has been mushroom-pleated in the spirit of Fortuny.

The new Krizia furs are wonderfully oversized, then drawn back to the body with knitted scarves wrapped casually around the hips. The big tweed overcoats look suitably androgynous, especially when worn over curvy sweater-chemises that blouson around the knees, their ruffled sleeves flutering in the runway breezes.

Fashion androgyny is also the theme at Gianfranco Ferre, where the Victor-Victoria looks are brought home with models in short, slicked-back hair and dark, dark eye shadow. The new Ferre jackets ar squared-off, waist-length kimonos, snugged to the body with stiff two-inch belts. The new look here is the bicolored spencer jacket, often in black with an electric blue lapel, for instance, or a bright red front. Most of these are shown with pants that narrow to the ankles, dipping to the heel in back.

FERRE JOINS THE REST of Milan in saluting the sometimes-tarty black leather jackets. His are more elegant than most, however, leding one retailer to suggest that they might be for the executive hooker.

Ferre's major contribution to fall fashion is seen in his new dress silhouette. The shape is something like a semi-fitted version of a nun's habit. The sides unbutton to reveal a sheath skirt underneath, often in white, sometimes in a contrasting fabric the same color as the dress. Like nuns' habits, the dresses have high white collars. Most of these dresses end around the knees.

For evening, Ferre reintroduces black with shocking color in tuxedos as well as tuxedo-dresses with side-draped, sarong-like satin extensions at one hip.

The noble sport of fencing is celebrated by Ferre as well as Luciano Soprani, both of whom use plastron-front, crusader jackets with big round sleeves. One of Soprani's most beautiful jackets combines brown leather with arched sleeves and front plastron of brown fur. He repeats the rounded theme of the sleeves in pants shaped at the sides like parentheses. Some have accordion-pleated side insets. This designer solves the question of length by showing long, above-the-ankle skirts in panels that are unzipped or ungrippered to thigh-revealing heights.

Soprani's collection for Basile also features the fencer, whose plastron-front, extension-sleeve jackets are layered with loose, hip-length sleeveless cloaks. Velasquez's paintings live again at Basile, where a typical Philip IV look features black velvet bloomers worn with black wool jacket with one lapel in bright red, turquoise or gold. The models wear big-brimmed black felt hats over black sequined snoods. The black look continues in black taffeta and black satin tuxedo looks, some complete with black sequin vests.

From jail to soccer

BRISTOL, England (AP) — Life has changed dramatically for 20-year-old Steve Edwards, who until last weekend was serving a jail sentence for burglary.

On Monday, Edwards came out of prison and went straight onto the books of a professional English League soccer team.

"Certainly a unique signing," said Bobby Gould, manager of third division Bristol Rovers, who took on Edwards when he was released from nearby Erlestoke jail after serving one year of an 18-month sentence.

Edwards, who gained six months remission for good conduct, was spotted by the Rovers while he was playing for the prison in a local amateur league.

"There will be no more trouble from me," he said.

LIVING TODAY

Squeeze savings out of your energy money

By SHARON HILLIS
Midland County Extension Agent
Home Economics

Now that the days of "good old summer time" are fast approaching, it is time to consider ways to stay comfortable and at the same time not deplete your purse money-wise when it comes to cooling dollars.

It behooves us all in times of inflation to watch how we use our financial resources, whether it be in investing our money to earn for us, or to use those resources wisely in operating our homes.

Squeeze a few more pennies — or even a few dollars, or more — out of your energy money. Try doing some simple and inexpensive things with your furniture, floors and windows.

How you upholster and arrange your furniture, insulate and cover floors and shade and drape windows can be major factors in determining how far those pennies can be stretched into dollars.

Mary Lou Rowland will address this area of energy saving at the "Texan II in '82" program to be presented from 7 to 9 p.m. today in St. Mark's United Methodist Church Fellowship Hall (north side of the church), 1701 N. Main St.

Probably the easiest and simplest way to begin saving is by arranging furniture away from radiators, registers (heating and cooling vents) and cold-air return vents.

This will allow warm and cool air to circulate more freely throughout your house.

For warmth in the winter, place furniture away from windows and outside walls, especially if walls are poorly insulated.

When upholstering furniture, consider a few guidelines for warmth and coolness, and let Ms. Rowland, housing and home furnishings specialist, Texas Extension Service, aid you tonight. Ms. Rowland, based in Dallas, will be the specialist to give pointers, especially in home cooling in the warm months ahead.

Wing chairs, covered in soft fabrics, give protection from drafts and feel warmer than un-upholstered furniture of leather, plastic or wood.

For those "sticky-feeling" non-abosrbent surfaces — leather, plastic or wood — use slip covers or fabric throws.

Remember that fabrics in blues and greens give the best feeling of coolness.

Floor insulation — carpet is the most popular — protects against winter heat loss. Wall-to-wall carpeting with a cushion or pad insulates floors much better than room-size or area rugs.

Hard, smooth-surfaced materials such as vinyl, terrazzo, brick and quarry tile will stay cooler year round than wood or carpeting.

The most important home furnishing factor to consider for energy conservation is window treatment.

Since most heat loss and gain takes place through windows and glass, plan window treatments to maximize energy use.

One execellent insulator is light-colored opaque roller shades mounted inside window frames.

Shades can be made of quilted fabric with a vapor barrier layer of material such as 4-mil plastic or reflective insulating film, for further insulating quality.

Another alternative is lined drapes, also good insulators.

Mount draperies, curtains, shades and other window hangings above the head and to the side of window frames.

This allows for the greatest amount of sunlight in winter; your solar heating.

To prevent cool drafts, fit closed cornices and valances over the top of draperies.

Upland cress good alternate to watercress in gardening

(Editor's note: Tom Stevenson, The Washington Post garden columnist for 24 years, died Friday morning, April 2, in Baltimore. He was 83 years old. When Mr. Stevenson went into the hospital a few days before his death, he had only one worry — meeting the deadline for his column. He made that deadline on time, as he had for all the years before.)

By TOM STEVENSON
Los Angeles Times - Washington Post News Service

Gardeners who love watercress and do not live near a body of cold, clear running water can find an acceptable substitute in upland cress, which doesn't need a moist situation, according to researchers.

There are both curly cress and cress with plain leaves. Both taste much the same. Both need a sunny place and are not particular about soil. Seed are planted about April 10 in the mid-Atlantic-coast region, earlier further south and later further north.

The seed should be spaced half an inch apart and covered with a quarter-inch of soil. The cress should be ready to use in about 50 days.

Seed of carrots should be planted about April 10, seed of swiss chard and plants of celery about April 15 — later in the north, earlier in the south.

Swiss chard is a leafy form of garden beet and will furnish greens in summer lone after spinach, mustard and other early-spring greens are no longer available. Swiss chard is easy to grow. In harvesting, only the large outer leaves are cut from the plant, leaving the inner leaves to continue development.

It requires about 10 weeks to grow seedlings of celery ready for transplanting outdoors. Generally it is better to buy the few plants needed than to try to grow them yourself.

Celery is one of the more difficult vegetables to grow successfully because of its exacting soil and climatic requirements. It needs a rich, moist, deep soil and a cool, even climate. Celeriac is much less exacting in its requirements than celery and may prove to be a satisfactory substitute.

According to research at Cornell University, at favorable soil temperature of 60 to 70 degrees F. carrots may have normal wedge-shaped roots, but if the soil temperature is 40 to 50 degrees, they may be long and pointed and at 70 to 80 degrees will be short and stumpy.

Agriculture Department plant breeders have found that both flavor and nutritional value of carrots can be improved while improving agronomic qualities. The studies involved a taste panel and laboratory analyses of nutritive components.

"We found that differences in flavor components were more attributable to genetics than to climatic conditions," the breeders report said.

To stimulate climactic conditions, they used rooms in a contolled-enviornment building on the University of Wisconsin-Madison campus. they also grew carrots under natural Wisconsin conditions.

Nothing Held Back!

DEAR ABBY

Reader raises ancient theological question

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have a comment that was prompted by your reply to "Damned in Dallas," whose 18-year-old daughter had a life-threatening automobile accident while under the influence of drugs.

You told this man to tell his daughter that the Lord spared her because he (the Lord) wanted her to live.

So you are assuming that the Lord made the decision to spare her life. There is nothing unusual about this. It is very common for people to thank God for the good things, like recovering from a serious operation or a life-threatening accident. Anything good is supposed to come from God.

And who should we blame for having put the girl in a position to lose her life in the accident? Why did the Lord not intervene then? Why don't we say, "The Lord is uncaring about his people"? Couldn't he have prevented the accident?

When the hostages came out of Iran, the consensus was that the Lord had rescued them from their captors. My question at that time was, "And who refused to help them when the Iranians were trying to take over the American Embassy in Tehran?"

If we are going to thank the Lord for the good things, should not we also blame him (or her) for the bad times as well? — WONDERING IN DEL MAR

DEAR WONDERING: Your question brings up an ancient unresolved theological question that would take far more wisdom and knowledge than I possess to answer.

DEAR ABBY: Please help me start a crusade against people introducing friends as OLD friends.

Why can't they say, "Good friends whom I have known for a long time"? I am 75 and resent being called "old." — FRANK R. LAMB, RICHMOND, VA.

DEAR FRANK: I'll try, but I'm not optimistic. Old habits die hard. Curious that old wine is better. So are old violins. And the older the antique, the more valuable.

In other cultures (the Oriental), age is respected and revered. Only in our culture is there a premium on youth, where everyone wants to live a long time but nobody wants to be "old."

DEAR ABBY: Apropos people who smoke when it annoys others: Recently I was standing in line at a movie when the man ahead of me took out a foot-long cigar. I politely tapped him on the shoulder and said, "Sir, please don't light that cigar. I am very allergic to cigar smoke." (That is the truth.)

He turned around and in a very nasty tone said, "I am getting tired of people telling me not to smoke. I don't see any sign forbidding smoking posted here, which means I have a right to smoke!"

I replied, "Sir, you DO have the right, but I must warn you that cigar smoke makes me sick to my stomach and this is a very tight line."

Then the young man standing behind me in the line said loudly, "Mom, did you enjoy the spaghetti and meatballs for dinner?" (I did not even know him!)

The man put his cigar away. It was funny! — THELMA IN PAINESVILLE, OHIO

Egg coloring tradition traces to ancient times

Traditions of egg decorating have enriched the myths and legends of many cultures, and have delighted people of all ages around Eastertime for centuries.

Popular beliefs, imagination and craftsmanship have turned egg decorating into a highly developed and diversified folk art. The egg itself possesses the secret of life; it symbolizes a "rebirth" and is often associated with Easter, Spring, dawn and creation. All involve a beginning, and in one form or another, almost every living thing comes from or can be traced back to an egg of some sort.

Many years before the birth of Christ, the Persians and Egyptians were coloring eggs. And while the Jews do not celebrate Easter, they too colored eggs at approximately the same time of the year, during their Passover season. In some parts of the world, Jews still use colored eggs for Passover and other religious celebrations. Because of the coincidental nearness of Passover and Easter, Christians may have gotten the idea for colored eggs from the Jews and incorporated it into their Easter celebration.

In many European countries, it was the custom on Easter day to have a "tapping" contest where children would knock the ends of eggs together to see who could keep his egg unbroken the longest. Egg-tossing and egg-rolling games were brought to the United States by German settlers, as was the concept of the "Easter Bunny". Because rabbits multiply quickly and are a symbol of fertility, they became associated with the celebration of Easter. According to legend, the pagan goddess of Spring, Eostre, turned a bird into a rabbit. This may explain why, in some areas, the Easter Bunny delivers baskets full of colored eggs to children on Easter morning.

Some of the early German and Pennsylvania Dutch traditions and customs are still in existence today. The most common tradition, still practiced, is hiding eggs for children to find on Easter morning. Both parents and children color them during Easter week, leaving the eggs for the Easter Bunny to hide on Easter Eve. If an egg is particularly beautiful, it may be kept to treasure as a work of art or given as a gift to a special friend.

The various methods of decorating eggs have also become tradition. Today, a few people still color their eggs by boiling them in natural materials such as onion skins or flowers, but a more universal method af applying color is to use commercial dyes made especially for that purpose. With paint-on egg dyes, colors can easily be applied with cotton swabs or brushes to create virtually any original design.

Stripes, floral and geometric designs, and dot patterns are most common. A slightly more difficult method involves coloring the egg and scratching off portions of the color to expose the shell, creating a "reverse" color effect. Probably the most sophisicated method is "pysanky", a "resist-dyeing" egg craft which produces intricate designs by using wax.

Coloring eggs for Easter is a tradition that dates back to other celebrations and other civilizations.

AT WIT'S END

White carpet

By ERMA BOMBECK

After 12 years I've finally done it.

My living room carpet is one large continuous wall-to-wall stain.

I have only experienced this euphoria on one or two occasions. Once when I succeeded in picking nail polish off the last nail minutes before I got married. Another time was in 1974, when I called everyone to come to dinner and they did — at the same time.

They tell me the odds of having a room of this size go total stain is about one in every 15 billion homes.

I knew it would happen. To begin with, the carpet is white. There are things that go with a white carpet that the salesman never tells you about.

1. With a white carpet, you must remain childless for the rest of your life. This includes children who visit or peek in the windows.

2. You must never use the room. If you go beyond the ropes, you must be prepared to take the risk and pay the price.

3. Putting furniture in it is just asking for it. White carpet cannot be expected to remain white in a room full of furniture legs.

4. If a dog comes within 500 feet of the white carpet, urine stains will materialize out of thin air and stay forever.

There are other characteristics of a white carpet. It has a pebble-in-the-water characteristic. A small piece of cheese from a canape will hit the carpet and within minutes spread to a diameter of three feet. A chewing-gum wrapper thrown carelessly on it will produce a brown spot that no amount of scrubbing can remove.

In retrospect, getting stains in the traffic areas of the room was a piece of cake. (Excuse the expression.) All someone had to do was walk through and the rug would part to receive a tomato caught in the sole, a newspaper with ink that rubbed off, chunks of mud that fell from the cuff of a jean and dirt from fingernails.

It's getting them under furniture without moving it that really takes skill.

But then I once had a footprint on the ceiling of the shower. Sometimes, I don't know how I do it!

Celebrate Easter with Spirited Mint Lamb

Rich in tradition, Easter has been one of the most important celebrations on the Christian calendar since early history.

In the past, many Christians who were baptized for this holiday wore robes of white linen, which started the custom of wearing new clothes on Easter Sunday. Another holiday tradition, the Easter parade, got its start in the European ritual of walking through fields after mass. Friends and neighbors were later invited to an open house and a sumptuous spread. And the focal point of Easter dinner the world over has historically been roast leg of lamb.

To preserve the meaning and rituals of this holiday, then, it's important to serve only the best quality meat to family and friends — New Zealand spring lamb. With its superior taste and texture, lamb is to New Zealand what wine is to France and cheese is to Switzerland — it's that special. The meat industry of that country puts tender, loving care into raising lambs on a diet of mother's milk and grass on lush, rolling pastures. The meat is aged to perfection in ultra-modern facilities before being quick-frozen to ensure excellent quality.

You can also be assured that with Easter lamb you're giving your family a rich source of protein and B vitamins, plus thiamine, riboflavin and iron.

Two recipes uphold the fine holiday tradition while uplifting the taste buds. Spirited Mint Lamb, for example, has the unusual twist of creme de menthe liqueur in a marinade, giving the dish sophistication and a hint of mint to the meat. When silky cream and garlic are added to the sauce, the delicate flavor of lamb becomes even more remarkable. New Zealand lamb shows off its finest features when it is roasted to a juicy pink doneness, or until the meat thermometer registers 140 degrees to 160 degrees F. Serve with fresh spring asparagus and new potatoes for a true Easter Sunday dinner feast.

The second sumptuous recipe featuring roast leg of lamb is Mushroom Stuffed Lamb, with an exceptional filling of walnuts, savory herbs and whole wheat bread crumbs. Because the dish features a hearty stuffing you may not need to fix an additional starch accompaniment — accentuate the lamb with bright golden carrots, broccoli spears or another appetizing season vegetable.

With these traditional, delicious dinners, you can be sure that the spirit of Easter lives on!

Tender roast leg of New Zealand spring lamb upholds the Easter tradition with a twist of the unusual: Mint liqueur. This sumptuous dish is called Spirited Mint Lamb

SPIRITED MINT LAMB

1 cup creme de menthe liqueur
1 large onion, chopped (1 cup)
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 frozen leg of New Zealand spring lamb, 5 to 6 pounds, partially defrosted
1 cup heavy cream
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 teaspoons cornstarch
2 tablespoons water
Salt
Pepper

In a small bowl combine creme de menthe, onion, garlic, salt and pepper. Remove "fell" and trim all surface fat from lamb. Pierce lamb all over with a skewer so marinade will penetrate. Place lamb in a shallow dish or large plastic bag; pour in marinade. Refrigerate 12 to 24 hours; turn meat often. Drain; reserve marinade.

Place lamb in a shallow roasting pan. Roast in a 325 degree F. oven 1½ hours or until meat thermometer registers 140 degrees F. for rare, 160 degrees F. for medium, 170 degrees F. for well-done. Baste often with reserved marinade. (Add water to roasting pan if it is dry). Remove lamb to heated serving platter. Scrape pan juices into a medium saucepan; add ½ cup reserved marinade, cream and butter. Combine cornstarch and water; add to saucepan. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture boils and thickens. Season to taste. Serve sauce with lamb. Yield: 6 to 8 servings.

MUSHROOM STUFFED LAMB

1 frozen leg of New Zealand spring lamb, 5 to 6 pounds
¼ cup butter or margarine
1 medium onion, chopped (½ cup)
¼ cup chopped celery
1 pound fresh mushrooms, chopped (about 5 cups)
2 cups fresh whole wheat bread crumbs
½ cup chopped walnuts
1 egg
1½ teaspoons thyme, divided
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper

Thaw lamb in refrigerator overnight. Remove "fell" from lamb; trim any excess fat. On a cutting board, hold lamb with round-side-down, concave-side-up. Insert a small, sharp knife alongside the exposed bone at top. With short strokes, cut along this bone, releasing the meat down to the joint. Begin again from the top and release the meat from the other side of the bone. With the knife tip, follow the curve of the bone socket and release the meat. Make a slit along the shin bone to free remaining meat from both sides, then lift out bone. (If desired, wrap and freeze bone and scraps for soup).

In medium saucepan melt butter; saute onion and celery until golden. Stir in mushrooms; cook 2 minutes. Remove from heat; stir in bread crumbs, walnuts, egg and ½ teaspoon thyme. Spread stuffing over meat and roll up. Tie securely in several places with clean, white string; sprinkle roast with reamining 1 teaspoon thyme, salt and pepper. Place on rack in shallow roasting pan. Insert meat thermometer into thickest part of meat. Roast in a 325 degree F. oven 1½ hours, or until meat thermometer registers 140 degrees F. for rare, 160 degrees F. for medium, or 170 degrees F. for well-done. Remove lamb to serving platter; allow to "rest" 10 minutes before carving. Yield: 6 to 8 servings.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Protect child by strapping in

DEAR HELOISE:

Your article about padding shopping cart handles prompted me to write...

Before I had my little girl, I used to watch parents in the grocery stores fight with their children to stay seated in the cart and not lean over and grab things from the shelves.

We all know how dangerous a fall could be, and that it's difficult for a parent to hold onto a child with one hand and shop at the same time.

So, when my little girl came along and was old enough to ride in the shopping cart, I took along the plastic belt from her swing and strapped her in at the waist.

She's secure in the cart and my hands are free to pick up the needed items.

An old belt would work just as well. If done from the beginning, I think a child gets used to being strapped in, just as with a car seat. — Stephanie Miller

+++

You are so right! No point in risking your little one's being hurt when it can be prevented so simply. Glad you shared your tip. — Heloise

FASTER FRINGING

Dear Heloise: I've just found a way to fringe an afghan...instead of using my crochet hook to pull the yarn through, I tried my latch hook. So much easier and faster.

Fold the length of fringe desired, insert the latch hook through the loop and into the right side (as opposed to the wrong side) of the afghan and it does a good job. — Hazel Shumway

WINE DECANTER

Dear Heloise: Is there any way I can get the water spots out of the inside of a very old cut glass wine decanter?

I have tried vinegar, baking soda, and ammonia without success. I would appreciate any other suggestions. — Virginia

+++

If full-strength vinegar does not remove the spots, more than likely the glass is etched, therefore beyond salvaging.

To be sure, though, take it to your jeweler and get his opinion. Cut glass decanters are far too beautiful to sit on a shelf if they can be made usable. — Heloise

BETTER BED MAKING

Dear Heloise: I really got a kick out of your item on bed-making and agree with you that an unmade bed is unsightly to look at after an especially long, hard day. I would like to tell you what I do...

Sheets and pillowcases are too pretty these days to completely hide under bedspreads. I straighten sheets, blankets and spread, and pull them up to the head of the bed. Then I turn down about 12 inches so the top sheet shows. I put pillows on top and the bed looks neat. That's all there is to it.

Traditions are rules made to be broken if there is a better way. Besides, whoever originated the traditional way of bed-making was probably trying to cover up plain white sheets which were all we had at one time. Thanks for letting me add my two cents. — Mrs. Nelly O'Reilly

LAUNDRY TIP

Dear Heloise: I go to the laundromat weekly and see many people bringing in baskets of unsorted clothes. They tie up washers while they stand and sort because it takes them longer to do their wash.

I use pillowcases, presorting a load into each case at home. Then, all I have to do is walk in carrying four cases (loads) at a time. Easier than baskets.

I also pre-spray clothes for stains at home and measure soap for each load too. This means all I have to carry is a small container of bleach. Seems so much less like work if you do all this at home. — Edythe Hawk

+++

Don't hoard a super washday hint. Do send it to your friend Heloise, P.O. Box 32000, San Antonio, TX 78216. She can't answer your letter personally, but she will feature the best tips in her column.

MOST UNFORGETTABLE CHARACTER

Despite his fame, Bing was private man

By BOB HOPE
Special from Reader's Digest

Bing Crosby and I shook hands outside the Friars Club on 48th Street in New York one autumn day back in 1932. He was already a recording star and had one of the most popular radio shows in the country. I was a comedian fresh out of vaudeville and nibbling at a Broadway career.

Two months later, I was emceeing a variety show at New York's Capitol Theater, and Crosby was the lead singer. It was the first time our names appeared together on a marquee.

Across from the theater there happened to be a watering hole to which Bing and I repaired each evening between shows. We started kidding one another, then developing little bits to work into the show. The crowd in the bar loved it.

On our respective radio shows during the 1930s, we both fostered the "Hope-Crosby Feud." He took potshots at my nose ("like a bicycle seat"), my golf and even my jokes. I fired back at "Ol' Dad," the aging star, ribbing him about everything from his "groaning" to his rapidly thinning hair and jug ears.

One night he walked on, unexpected, during my radio show. "Tell me, Bing," I said, "with so much hot air and those ears, why don't you take off?" He replied, chuckling, "The downdraft from your nose prevents it."

Bing could kid around about those very things that made other stars founder in a morass of vanity. He once wrote regarding my incessant razzing over the hairpiece Paramount made him wear in his films:

"Robert Hope, of the non-classic profile and the unlissome midsection, is sometimes goaded by a knowledge of his own lack of physical charms into referring to me as skin head. I don't have to specify what it means. It's generally known that for screen purposes I wear a device the trade calls a "scalp doily."

By the time I got to Hollywood and signed with Paramount, Crosby had already made his mark in movies. By then, too, ol' Cros was also a little mad about horses, though the ones he bought weren't necessarily mad about winning races. The first horse he owned was named Zombie, and it ran true to its name. Bing often averred that his losing stable was purely an altruistic gesture for my benefit, a charitable source of jokes. "Hope is always short of good material," he said.

Crosby always loved words and liked to trip them mellifluously over his tongue. I remember a scene in "The Road to Morocco" in which we were having trouble with a French policeman. I began ad libbing and asked Cros, "Can you talk French?"

"Certainly I can," he replied and directed an effortless stream of Gallic at the policeman. Later I discovered he had recited a short French fable about a crow and a piece of cheese — a classic piece of high-school French that was indelibly imprinted in Bing's brain.

If you want biographical detail on Harry Lillis Crosby, there are several books around. You can read all about Crosby playing drums with an outfit called the Musicaladers, about his big break with the Paul Whiteman band and the forming of a trio called the Rhythm Boys. Then, at the fabled Coconut Grove in Los Angeles, Bing began singing solo, and the music business was never quite the same.

The mischievous kid from the big Irish family who had wanted to be a professional baseball player became a recording star before there were recording stars. It's estimated that he sold more than 400 million records and recorded more than 4000 songs during his lifetime. Then there were the movies, and radio and television and concert appearances.

For all his celluloid escapades, for all his celebrity, Bing was a private man. He had the magnificent opportunity to love and be loved by two extraordinary women: his first wife and mother of his four eldest sons, Dixie Lee, who died of cancer in 1952; and Kathryn, the beautiful and vivacious lady who was his wife the last 20 years of his life, bearing him two sons and a daughter.

The public loved him because they saw in him an absolutely ordinary guy who had become very rich and very famous — yet never left his real self behind.

Who but Bing could be refused a room at a posh hotel when he came in from a hunting trip all bearded and bedraggled? And it was just like him, too, to be arrested by the Paris police who found him dozing next to a "Keep Off the Grass" sign, a newspaper tented over his face to shut out the sun.

He loved singing and show business, but he always let it be known that he might just rather be playing golf, fishing a good trout stream or hunting pheasant with a Labrador at his side.

Hope hoped for Oscar

By BOB HOPE
Special from Reader's Digest

It's no big secret how long I panted after that Barbie-doll-sized statue they call Oscar. In fact, it was a running gag between Bing and me, especially after he won one as best actor for his portrayal of Father O'Malley in "Going My Way." Once, during the filming of "The Road to Rio," the script had me down on my knees, clutching at Crosby's coattails, crying, "Don't leave me!"

As the take drew to a close, Crosby solemnly pulled his Oscar from beneath his coat and handed it to me. The sound stage broke up.

Eating pizza really pays off

RIVER RIDGE, La. (AP) — A 34-year-old Thai mother who won $100,000 in a national contest says she will use the winnings to retrieve the daughter she left behind in Bangkok nine years ago.

"I've been praying, 'God help me,' and he helped me," said a beaming Vilai Davis of New Orleans as she received earlier this week.

She said she couldn't afford to bring daughter Julie, now 11, with her when she came to the United States in 1973 with an American husband who had been stationed abroad with the U.S. Air Force.

"I miss her so badly. I'm so excited about seeing her, bringing her here," Mrs. Davis said.

Now divorced with another 7-year-old daughter, Stacy, the unemployed mother had other big plans for the money, she said. "I'm going to buy a house, too," she said.

It was the single top prize in the contest, sponsored by Pizza Hut restaurants, and the chances of winning were one in more than 2 million, company officials said.

The check was given to Mrs. Davis at a ceremony attended by the fast food chain's top executives. Mrs. Davis and Stacy arrived in a plush company limosine to find the restaurant flanked by armed guards.

The government had been notified and the restaurant arranged to have Mrs. Davis meet with bankers who could advise her on how to protect the money, she said. She did not know how much the taxes on the winnings would be.

After her card was picked, the company spent a full day trying to reach her. She has no telephone and was away for the day fishing with her boyfriend, Johnnie Goff, 24, when company officials came to her home.

She got the winning card on a Friday — Goff's payday — when they routinely went out for a meal instead of cooking at home.

Goff said he had also been trying to save money to bring Julie to the United States.

"But's it's not easy to save $5,000," he said.

Pinkerton got into private eye business by accident

Copley News Service

EAST DUNDEE, Ill. — He was the first private eye. Publicly, his life was one James Bond adventure after another. Privately, he took cold baths before dawn and was such a tyrannical boss, father and husband that almost everyone close to him eventually rebelled.

In youth, he was an impoverished radical risking his life to fight the establishment. In old age, his name became synonymous with headbusting, rightwing reactionary conservatism, and he left a $500,000 estate.

He was Allan Pinkerton, the most famous person ever to live in the Dundees and he has been celebrated with an exhibit of Pinkerton memorabilia at the Dundee Township Public Library.

An irascible, bearded Scotsman who typified the honest, tight-lipped and puritanical values of his homeland, Pinkerton was born in 1819 in Glasgow's worst slum.

Ironically, the young Pinkerton fell in with Chartist dissidents working to reform election laws and improve working conditions for children laboring in the sweatshops of the day. Pinkerton left Scotland, not by choice but because a price was put on his head.

SETTLING TEMPORARILY in Chicago (population 1,200), Pinkerton went to work making barrels. However, the rough-and-tumble speculative frontiersmen of the city apparently turned off the spartan Pinkertons. In 1844, they moved to the more sedate, Scottish-populated town of Dundee.

"It was a fair and lovely spot, with its murmurous river, splendid farms, forests, noble hills, sunlit valleys and opulent herds in the district," Pinkerton would recall later. Dundee then had one fourth as many people as Chicago.

The cooper built a one-story house and started turning out barrels in his basement. The young couple stayed in Dundee for six years.

Pinkerton apparently retained his liberal sympathies, for residents of Dundee soon began to notice a number of Negroes working around the cooperage. They suspected correctly that the Pinkertons had illegally turned their house into a station on the underground railway ferrying escaped slaves from the South to Canada.

The cooper wandered into the detective business almost by accident. Rowing out to gather barrel wood, Pinkerton found signs that someone was using an island in the river by night. The suspicious Scotsman camped out on the river bank and found a group of counterfeiters was using the island as a warehouse for fake coins.

Pinkerton took his suspicions to the Kane County sheriff. A posse was formed, seven crooks were nabbed and Pinkerton was made a sheriff's deputy.

PRIOR TO Pinkerton's move back to Chicago, Harry E. Hunt asked Pinkerton to investigate another counterfeiting ring.

Counterfeiters apparently were rife in Dundee in those days, partially because banks were allowed to print their own money and it was easy to copy. Hunt asked Pinkerton to get the goods on a suspiciously rich farmer who Hunt believed was passing the funny money.

Pinkerton struck up a friendship with a stranger who had asked for directions to the farmer's place. Pinkerton offered to buy bogus bills from the stranger. After a clandestine meeting, he nabbed several gang members.

Soon after Pinkerton returned to Chicago and became that city's first police detective. He also founded the private detective agency which would bring him fame and fortune protecting railroad fees.

As the Civil War began, the expert train protector was called on to ferry Abraham Lincoln safely from Springfield to Washington, D. C., to assume the presidency. Pinkerton said he had uncovered a plot to do in the president and he barely saved the Great Emancipator's life. Some later biographers would say Pinkerton made up the plot to glorify his role.

The incident so impressed Lincoln that he made Pinkerton head of the first secret service spy organization in the Union's main army, commanded by Pinkerton's old friend from Chicago, Gen. George McClellan. After Lincoln fired McClellan, Pinkerton quit the army in protest.

After the war, the former reformer's private eyes increasingly became a synomym for right-wing violence. "The Pinkertons" became an army for hire, to be called in by Midas-rich robber barons wherever their workers grew restless. His men waded into crowds of strikers with clubs swinging.

AN 1896 Chicago Herald newspaper story, two years after Pinkerton's death, states that "the expression 'the Pinkertons' is on the lips of nearly everyone in Chicago.

"Leaders of the Labor Party...are denouncing (the Pinkertons) as bloodhounds," continued the article, "and perhaps a third of the criminals in America and Europe are being shadowed by Pinkerton detectives."

Pinkerton was more than willing to become a legend and learned to be an adept manipulator of the press. But Pinkerton set out to win the hearts of America's boys with melodramatic accounts of his adventures. The very titles of volumes in the Dundee library exhibit are enough to stir the blood: "A Double Life and the Detectives;" "The Expressman and the Detectives;" "Strikers, Communists, Tramps and the Detective." They were best sellers.

Working with a battery of ghost writers following his outlines, Pinkerton left no doubt about who were the bad guys and who the good.

Today, historians say, it is difficult to tell where fact let off and dime novel imagination began in the books. But that was Pinkerton's style.

Doctor wins case against use of name in book

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — An internationally recognized British medical researcher who successfully fought the use of his name in a book about the cloning of a boy from the tissues of a 65-year-old man says the story was the work of an "unscrupulous writer."

Dr. J.D. Bromhall, on the faculty at England's Oxford University, won an apology and an out-of-court settlement Wednesday from J.B. Lippincott Co. He sued the company for $7 million after it published "In His Image: The Cloning of a Man" by David M. Rorvik in 1978.

The book, which Bromhall labeled "a fraud and a hoax," included a footnote reference to the researcher's work and cited his writing in the bibliography. Bromhall, an expert on experimental embryology, contended the references made it appear he supported the book.

Bromhall declined to reveal the amount of the settlement but called it "substantial."

Lippincott attorney Samuel Klein called it "insignificant."

It was "less than 1 percent" of the amount Bromhall sought, Klein said, adding that Rorvik wasn't a party to either the cash settlement or the apology.

In the book, Rorvik said an aging American millionaire code-named "Max" financed the birth of a boy his identical genetic makeup.

The book said a doctor called "Darwin" implanted a cloned cell in the womb of a surrogate mother, and that in late 1976 the cloned boy was born.

Cloning is the creation of a new individual from the genetic material of a single cell.

"This book purports to be a true account of the cloning of a boy from the tissues of a 65-year-old man," Barton H. Lippincott, chief executive of the publishing firm, said in a letter of apology.

The letter said the publisher regretted "any embarrassment, humiliation or other injury" because of the references to Bromhall.

"Lippincott acknowledges that Dr. Bromhall did not consent to the inclusion of his name or his research techniques in the book, and also acknowledges that Dr. Bromhall never engaged in, or attempted to engage in, or advocated the cloning of a human being," it said.

Bromhall said his work in the 1970s, which Rorvik "did quote reasonably accurately," was the most advanced "and led to the cloning of frogs, although I didn't aim at cloning human or animals and never did either."

"The effect of an unscrupulous writer combining with a respectable publisher created an event that never happened," he said. "It cast a slur on the whole scientific community. When you are a clever writer you can weave truth with fantasy, and the public can't be sure what is true or not."

Dr. C. Thomas Caskey, left, and Dr. John Brennard view chromosome studies. The two scientists at Baylor College of Medicine were leaders of a gentics research team which is reporting the successful cloning of a specific gene located on the X chromosome.

Doctors clone retardation-causing gene

HOUSTON (AP) — Cloning an identified gene from the human X chromosone has given science a "toehold" that may lead to a treatment for a type of mental retardation, two Baylor College of Medicine scientists say.

Dr. C. Thomas Caskey and Dr. John Brennand reported Wednesday that they isolated a gene known to cause a type of mental retardation called Lesch-Nyhan syndrome and then caused a bacteria host to reproduce the gene endlessly.

Caskey said the achievement, reported in the current issue of the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, marks the first time that a gene with a known function has been isolated and cloned from the X chromosone, one of the sex-determining genes.

This, he said, gives science a "toehold" on the X chromosone and may enable investigators to study genes associated with other inherited defects.

Scientists achieved the cloning by using what Caskey called the classic method of gene replication. The researchers transferred the gene to the nucleus of a bacterium called E. coli, and the gene became part of the genetic makeup of that particular bacterium. As the E. coli reproduced, the bacteria carried into each new generation the transplanted gene.

Caskey said the gene selected is associated with a genetic defect that causes a deficiency in an enzyme called hypoxanthine phosphoribosyltransferase, or HPRT.

This deficiency can cause Lesch-Nyhan syndrome. In its severe form, HPRT deficiency causes infants to be severely retarded. Milder forms cause arthritis and serious kidney distress.

A deficiency of HPRT occurs when the gene which directs its production in a new cell is defective. By being able to clone this gene, said Caskey, scientists may be able to at a broader understanding of the causes of such genetic failures.

HPRT deficiency can arise from inherited genes or it can come from a spontaneous mutation, a medical mystery still not well understood.

"At present, we don't know what leads to a new mutation," said Caskey. But by studying the newly cloned gene, "we may be able to determine at a molecular level what takes place."

Woman testifies she filed complaint about Rely

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (AP) — Procter & Gamble Co. received a complaint about Rely tampons nearly a year before a woman died of toxic shock syndrome after using Rely for four days, according to trial testimony in a suit against the manufacturer.

Susan Myers, testifying Wednesday in a suit by a man who alleges his wife died of TSS caused by Rely, said she called P&G to complain after she came down with a high fever, diarrhea and vomiting for two months in a row. She was hospitalized for about a week the first time.

"I just kept trying to think of what these had in common," said Mrs. Myers, 27, of Omaha, Neb. "All of a sudden I just realized I had started those Rely tampons and I started getting sick almost exactly the same time — a day and a half later."

She testified in U.S. District Court in the third day of trial in a suit filed by the husband of Patricia Kehm, 25, who died Sept. 6, 1980, four days after she started using Rely tampons. Her husband, Michael, claims P&G is liable for her death because it sold Rely without proper testing and later failed to warn women about the tampon's possible link to toxic shock syndrome, a rare and sometimes fatal disease. The suit seeks unspecified damages.

Lois Sterenchuk, a nurse who treated Mrs. Kehm on the day she died, was to take the stand today.

In notes made at the time, Mrs. Sterenchuk said she found a "Tampax," which is a brand of tampon. But Tom Riley, Kehm's attorney, said the nurse will testify she used the term generically and that the tampon appeared to be Rely.

A P&G memo dated June 27, 1980, which told employees how to answer questions about Rely and its link to toxic shock syndrome, was introduced as evidence Wednesday.

The memo, written nine months after P&G received Mrs. Myers' complaint, said employees should say, "We have never been aware of any severe illness or reaction...in regard to our product."

P&G removed Rely from the market a week after a federal study indicated a greater incidence of toxic shock among Rely users.

Mrs. Myers testified that when she called P&G, she discussed her symptoms with a woman who asked her to fill out a questionnaire and sign a release form so the company could talk to her doctor.

Thomas Calder, an attorney for P&G, asked Mrs. Myers why she failed to complete the forms. She said the questionnaire would have taken at least three hours to complete and that it was not important to her.

Doctors find enzyme makes sperm swim

BOSTON (AP) — Doctors have identified an enzyme that makes sperm swim, and its absence may be a cause of infertility in some men.

Researchers at Laval University in Quebec analyzed semen from normal men and from infertile men who have immobile sperm. The difference was the level of the enzyme protein-carboxyl methylase, a substance that also helps propel bacteria and blood cells.

Male infertility can be caused by a variety of abnormalities, including the failure to produce enough sperm. But some men cannot reproduce because their sperm fails to swim.

The study, directed by Dr. Claude Gagnon, was published in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

The doctors measured the enzyme levels in semen from nine infertile men, 22 fertile volunteers and 10 men who had had vasectomies. They found the levels in the infertile men were 75 percent lower than in the normal men and only slightly higher than in those who had vasectomies.

Enzyme levels returned to normal in one man, and his sperm spontaneously started swimming.

The doctors say that other chemical processes besides protein-carboxyl methylase are involved in sperm movement.

"Presumably, a series of reactions control the complex motions of these cells, and it is conceivable that the elimination of any one of the components will disrupt the entire process," the doctors wrote.

Pendergrass out of intensive care, having physical therapy

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Singer Teddy Pendergrass is out of intensive care and undergoing physical rehabilitation for injuries that left him paralyzed following an automobile accident last month, a hospital spokeswoman says.

Pendergrass

The 32-year-old rhythm and blues artist is in stable condition and has been transferred to a private room at the intermediate spinal cord injury unit of Thomas Jefferson Hospital, the spokeswoman said Wednesday.

Pendergrass, who is paralyzed from the shoulders down, is being treated by a physical rehabilitation team, said the spokeswoman, who asked not to be identified.

She said his condition has improved so that he can be moved in his bed to a sitting position, but she declined to comment further on the extent of his recovery.

Pendergrass was hurt March 18 when he crashed his car into two trees.

•

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Actor Erik Estrada will not have to pay his former agent a fee for salary raises he won in a renegogiated contract, the state Supreme Court has ruled.

Estrada

The court denied without comment Wednesday a petition from Jack Fields and Associates of Los Angeles seeking a review of a Court of Appeal ruling in favor of Estrada.

The dispute arose when Fields demanded a 10 percent commission on all income earned by Estrada under a contract which the actor said was procured by others after Fields stopped being his agent.

Fields represented Estrada, co-star of the TV series "CHiPs," from 1973 to Dec. 31, 1978. In early 1977, Estrada signed a contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for the series. It provided for $5,000 an episode for 1977-78, $500 more an episode the next year and annual increases thereafter.

Fields participated in May 1978 renegotiations which brought promises of a raise to $9,000 an episode for the 1978-79 season.

In March 1979, Estrada signed a new contract which called for $25,000 per episode in 1979-80, and raises at $5,000 increments in subsequent years to $45,000 an episode in the year 1983-84.

Fields demanded a 10 percent share under the new contract and the matter went to arbitration. A three-party tribunal, upheld by the appeals court, said Fields was entitled only to the percentage of the one-year, $3,500 increase for 1978-79, while he was still the agent.

STATELINE, Nev. (AP) — The appearance of Christmas decorations in spring probably wouldn't surprise many winter-weary residents of the Lake Tahoe Basin.

But Caesars Tahoe hotel-casino at the lake's south shore has decked its halls for the taping of a Christmas special scheduled to be broadcast at the end of the year.

Natalie Cole, Pat Boone and Catherine Crosby will be among those on hand for the taping Sunday.

Other guests scheduled to appear in the program are Gene Autry, David Copperfield, Jose Feliciano, Bob Hope, Johnny Mathis, Lou Rawls, the Chipmunks and the Mormon Tabernacle Choir.

The program, "Christmas Gold," will honor million-selling records of the holiday season.

Post-Oscars 'Chariots' drawing well

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Chariots of Fire," the movie about two powerful runners on Great Britain's 1924 Olympic team, has raced off to big box-office grosses since it won an Academy Award for best picture.

"Chariots" grossed $3.3 million in 555 theaters this past Friday through Sunday. That was a 72 percent increase over the previous weekend's $1.8 million in the same number of theaters, said Ashley Boone, the Ladd Co.'s vice president for distribution and marketing.

The film had grossed $30,222,429 in 28 weeks ending Sunday, said Boone, who added he thinks the movie will double that amount before it goes out of release, with $10 million expected in the next two weeks alone during Easter vacation.

Meanwhile, pictures that will be eligible for next year's Oscars race, such as 20th Century-Fox's "Porky's" and Paramount's "Some Kind of Hero," drew even bigger post-Oscar and Easter vacation crowds. The rerelease of the Disney classic, "Fantasia," soared to big grosses on the back of a new Dolby stereo digital soundtrack.

"Porky's," about teen-agers' antics at a 1950s bordello, gobbled up $8,034,766 at 1,484 theaters to bring its 17-day total to $31,278,442. Richard Pryor's "Some Kind of Hero" logged $5,631,293 at 975 theaters in its first three days in release.

"Fantasia" took in $38,000 in a single theater in three days in Los Angeles, which was termed "just short of fantastic" by Dick Cook, vice president and general sales manager for Buena Vista Distribution Co., the Disney film releasing arm.

Another big Oscar-winner, "Raiders of the Lost Ark," continued to draw amazingly well, taking in $2,002,677 last weekend in 737 theaters for an enormous 297-day total of $203,198,682.

The three-day take for "Raiders" the weekend before the March 29 Oscars was $1,598,648 in 760 theaters.

"I think it's popularly perceived as being the big winner," Paramount spokeswoman Susan Pile said of the five Oscars for "Raiders," all of which were in the technical categories.

"Reds," which won a best-director Academy Award, posted $781,249 on 484 screens last weekend, up from $664,880 in 400 theaters the prior weekend.

Double-Oscar-winning "Arthur," a Warner Bros. film, pulled in $462,260 at 294 theaters, compared with $473,732 at 530 screens the week before, to bring its 38-week total to $90,439,487.

However, Oscars aren't always made of gold. "On Golden Pond," which gained best acting awards for Henry Fonda and Katharine Hepburn and a writing Oscar for Ernest Thompson, dropped off to $3,805,370 in 995 out of 1,125 theaters reporting last weekend compared with $4,334,420 on 1,010 screens the weekend before.

But the film still had grossed a respectable $84,020,712 in 11 weeks.

Some new films didn't find many fans last week, notably Universal-RKO's "Cat People," starring Nastassia Kinski, which drew a slim $1,617,636 at 600 out of 700 theaters reporting, and Universal's release of MTM Enterprises' first theatrical film, "A Little Sex," which garnered $1,301,336 in 500 theaters.

Columbia's "Richard Pryor Live on the Sunset Strip," which had been the top box office draw until last week, apparently felt the competition from the other Pryor film, and dropped 50 percent to $2,288,353 at 851 theaters.

But it still was in second place in the 1982 box office chase with $27,215,487.

Injury helps end Andy Kaufman's wrestling days

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Comedian Andy Kaufman, recuperating in a hospital bed from a whiplash injury inflicted by an irate professional wrestler, says he's throwing in the towel — and his wrestling long johns.

"No more wrestling," Kaufman said Wednesday from his bed at St. Francis Hospital.

Meanwhile, the man responsible for ending Kaufman's wrestling "career" said he had nothing to apologize for.

"He wanted a lot of publicity over this and he's getting it, but I don't think it's the kind he anticipated," professional wrestler Jerry "The King" Lawler said in a telephone interview from his home in Hendersonville, Tenn. "I went into it with the idea of hurting him and I'm not sorry for it a bit."

Kaufman, co-star of ABC-TV's "Taxi," was brought to the hospital by ambulance after being carried by stretcher from the Mid-South Coliseum Monday night.

The 165-pound comedian-actor was injured when Lawler, a 234-pound brawler with a mean reputation, slammed him head first — twice — onto the ring floor.

"I never thought he would pick me up and throw me down," Kaufman said. "I was doing comedy and he was doing real."

For the past two years, Kaufman — attired in long johns covered by a pair of short pants — has wrestled women as part of his comedy routine. After a match against a woman in Memphis last year, he was challenged by Lawler, who charged the comedian was making fun of wrestlers.

Kaufman, who bills himself as the "Intergender Wrestling Champion of the World," accepted the challenge.

He said he thought he and Lawler would work out a routine that would be funny and not dangerous. His plan was to scamper about the ring, staying just out of Lawler's grasp.

President planning luncheon

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan plans a White House luncheon with Soviet dissidents now living in the United States, including famed author Alexander I. Solzhenitsyn, the Washington Post said in Thursday editions.

Unidentified senior officials were quoted as saying invitations had not been sent, but that May 11 had been set aside for the occasion.

White House spokeswoman Sheila Dickson said Wednesday night she had no information on such a luncheon.

President Ford refused to meet with Solzhenitsyn when the author came to this country in 1975, according to reports at the time because Secretary of State Henry Kissinger thought it would provoke Soviet leaders.

Solzhenitsyn, who works denouncing the Soviet system brought him the Nobel Prize in literature, now lives in Northfield, Vt.

Illegal aliens' rights detailed in ruling

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Illegal aliens from El Salvador and Guatemala cannot be deported unless they are first given the option of leaving voluntarily or applying for political asylum, according to a federal court ruling.

Current deportation procedures "do not suffiently assure that genuine asylum claims will be heard nor...that an alien subject to persecution will not be returned to the country of his persecutors," U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela wrote in a ruling issued Tuesday.

Vela said all Salvadoran and Guatamelan illegal aliens being detained at a nearby Los Fresnos facility must be told of their right to seek asylum.

Most Mexican and Central American illegal aliens arrested along the Texas border agree to "voluntary departure" without a deportation hearing.

Several illegal aliens had filed a challenge to U.S. immigration policies in January, prompting Vela's order.

His opinion countered an Immigration and Naturalization Service argument that the agency was not obliged to notify aliens they could ask for asylum.

Georgia court OKs exemption of taxes for 'witches' ' church

ATLANTA (AP) — A church founded by a woman who calls herself "a pagan and a witch" is entitled to a property tax exemption on the building it uses for worship, the Georgia Supreme Court ruled Wednesday.

The ruling came in the case of the Ravenwood Church of Wicca here. Its members call themselves witches and warlocks.

"It's an obvious victory for religious freedom for even (a) small minority, misunderstood churches or groups," said Thomas Maddox Jr., a lawyer for the church.

"And it means that the guarantees of religious freedom in this country have some meaning."

The court ruled that if property is used primarily as a place of worship it can qualify for a tax exemption. The ruling modified an earlier Supreme Court judgment that property must be used exclusively for worship to qualify.

Maddox said the church expects a refund of $2,000 to $3,000 for property taxes it paid under protest from 1978 to 1981.

Lady Sintana, founder of the church, said in a sworn statement to the court that her faith is a matriarchal religion that originated in Europe. It includes a belief in a deity, but not an anthropomorphic God, she said.

The Wiccan church believes in a primordial, supernatural force that created and permeates the universe, but the church is not Christian and does not believe in the devil. It does, however, believe in the teachings of Christ, she said.

Maddox said the religion is not a cult and "does not have anything to do with devil worship. They have rules and regulations...sort of like the golden rule and Christian doctrines."

The court vote was 4-2.

Alcohol, aspirin link described

BOSTON (AP) — As any hangover victim knows, aspirin and alcohol are a useful combination. But a new study suggests that mixing the two may also help prevent heart disease.

Doctors have long known that aspirin makes the blood clot more slowly. But the latest research shows that clotting is even slower if people drink alcohol after taking aspirin.

Doctors from the Boston Veterans Administration Hospital said the strength of this effect varies from person to person, but it might cause spontaneous bleeding in some.

The study, directed by Dr. Daniel Deykin, was published in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

The doctors measured the bleeding of 12 men and women who drank half-and-half mixtures of 100-proof vodka and fruit juice.

They found that alcohol had no effect if it was drunk 12 hours before the aspirin. But drinking alcohol with the aspirin or as long as 36 hours afterward had a significant impact on bleeding.

Two hours after taking alcohol and aspirin together, people bled 62 percent longer than they did after taking aspirin alone. The bleeding time was still slowed four days after taking the combination.

The declarer sees all of his side's assets. What makes defense so difficult is that each defender sees only half his side's assets and half of declarer's, and he must construct his partner's holding from clues in the bidding and early play.

West's overcall posed a problem for North. His hand was a whit too weak for a bid of three diamonds, which would commit his side to game, but too strong for a raise to two spades. North decided that the diamond bid was the least of evils, and a normal four spade contract resulted.

West led the king of hearts, and East started an echo by playing the nine. Defensive prospects did not appear to be bright. There were two heart tricks to be taken, and West had to hope that his partner had one sure defensive trick. The best chance for the setting trick appeared to be a trump promotion. If East held as little as the eight of trumps, a ruff of the third heart would set up West's jack of trumps, since declarer would be forced to overruff with a trump honor.

So West continued with the queen of hearts and a low heart, to force East to ruff. Since the king and queen of hearts both won, it was obvious that West had to have the ace, so this line of defense was clearly an attempt at a trump promotion.

East put on his thinking cap. If West was striving to promote a trump, he had to hold either Q-x or J-x-x in trumps — there was no other holding where a trump would promote.

East's solution was simple and decisive — he "squandered" his ace of trumps by ruffing the third heart. This had the same effect as a trump uppercut. When declarer gained the lead he could cash his two high trumps, but since the jack of spades did not fall, he had to go down one.

Government, media differences causing concern, says Cronkite

DALLAS (AP) — Battle lines that separated reporters and government officials during the Vietnam war are being drawn again because of the strife in El Salvador, according to veteran broadcaster Walter Cronkite.

The former CBS-TV news anchorman drew that comparison Wednesday in a speech to the National Association of Broadcasters. He said "bad news clashing with happy lies" tore the nation apart in the Vietnam era and "I very much fear we may be in for more of the same."

"I don't intend to liken El Salvador to Vietnam in any way except in this — that official reports and explanations often are woefully unconvincing, transparently wrong and often in conflict with reports from experienced and reliable American reporters on the scene," Cronkite said.

The results are "echoes of that earlier battle between the press and officialdom," he added. "The reporters are 'naive,' 'romantic,' 'leftist,' 'subversive,' 'anti-American.' 'Why the hell can't they get on the team?' Yes, we've been down this road before."

Cronkite, who received an NAB Distinguished Service Award, ticked off a list of press restrictions supported by the Reagan administration.

The list included changes to the Freedom of Information Act, limits on scientific exchanges and laws on identifying intelligence agents. He also mentioned a recent statement by retired Army Gen. William Westmoreland that "without censorship things can get terribly confused in the public mind."

Cronkite said government efforts to control the press during Vietnam divided U.S. society so sharply it still has not recovered.

But beyond the analogies between the two wars, Cronkite insisted a broader principle is involved.

"Everybody wants to hear the truth about everything except that which directly affects them," he said. "...we have to defend...the free and independent flow of public information; free and vigorously active news media including, of course, all forms of broadcasting.

"That remains democracy's only fail-safe system against both the dangers of its own excesses and the approach of tyranny."

Cronkite spoke on the final day of the NAB's 60th annual convention, which concentrated on lobbying efforts toward repeal of such restrictions on broadcasters as the equal-time and fairness-doctrine laws.

He was followed at the podium by Mark S. Fowler, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, who reiterated his call for broadcasters to be treated exactly as their newspaper counterparts.

Broadcasters told of future change

DALLAS (AP) — Although they cheered recent regulatory victories and mapped plans for new assaults on old laws, radio and TV station operators showed this week they're worried the march of technology may leave them behind.

The National Association of Broadcasters, during four days of convention workshops at an annual meeting, challenged its members to think big or be left behind by consumers turning to cable and satellite services.

Radio operators were told to program for cable themselves and establish satellite networks, while television broadcasters were urged to start planning now to offer an electronic information service known as teletext.

There were, of course, more immediate concerns.

The convention closed Wednesday with the NAB bestowing its highest award to former CBS anchorman Walter Cronkite. With the urging of the chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, the association also vowed to fight for repeal of such long-standing laws as equal time and the fairness doctrine.

The commission chairman, Mark S. Fowler, said in a prepared text it was "censorship" for the government to enforce fairness or equal-time rules. The commission urged Congress last fall to get rid of the fairness doctrine, which reqires stations to provide "balanced" treatment of controversial subjects.

But the technological issues were never really submerged. When radio broadcasters met for a luncheon Tuesday, they were treated to an elaborate stage production for entertainment, but the singers and dancers had a special message: "Tomorrow is Here."

Joseph Flaherty, the chief of engineering for CBS, warned television broadcasters they must start fighting now to reserve a portion of the airwaves for high-definition broadcasting — a new technology that holds the promise of providing film-quality pictures on a TV set.

If broadcasters don't start fighting, they'll find high-definition being offered by satellite-to-home broadcasters and cable operators and "you're betting high-definition television will never go anywhere. And betting against technology is not a very good bet."

There were dissenting views. Stanley Hubbard, the president of Hubbard Broadcasting, the owner of several TV stations, challenged Flaherty by calling high-definition technology "a ballyhoo of quicksand into which broadcasters should not enter" because it would never pose a threat.

Most kids outgrow epilipsy, study says

By DANIEL Q. HANEY

BOSTON (AP) — Most children with epilepsy will outgrow their illness by adulthood, and doctors can identify the few who are likely to have seizures later in life, a study concludes.

A study that followed 148 young epilepsy victims through their teens and 20s found that nearly three-fourths remained free of seizures after they stopped taking epilepsy medicine.

"The fact that overall, the relapse rate is low compared to what is generally accepted for adults, is most encouraging," said Dr. Jean Holowach Thurston, who directed the study.

The survey at Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis kept track of the childhood epilepsy victims for 15 to 23 years, the longest such followup ever conducted.

The report, published in today's New England Journal of Medicine, concluded that most "have an excellent chance of remaining seizure-free after the withdrawal of anti-convulsant drugs."

Two-thirds of the relapses occurred during the first two years after drugs were withdrawn, and 85 percent occurred within five years. Overall, only 41 people, or 28 percent, had new seizures after they stopped taking epilepsy medicine.

"Since there was one relapse in the 16th year and another in the 18th year, one cannot speak of a permanent 'cure,'" they wrote.

The National Institute of Neurological and Communicative Disorders and Stroke estimates epilepsy strikes 73 of every 100,000 children under age 1. The annual incidence remains at close to this level until age 10. Among adults, it afflicts about 46 of every 100,000 people yearly.

Nearly all the patients were under age 8 when their seizures began, although a few were as old as 13. They took anti-convulsant medicine for at least four years after their last seizure.

The researchers found that youngsters are most likely to have recurring seizures if they are mentally retarded or have movement handicaps. The problem may also reappear if the victims suffered a form of epilepsy called jacksonian seizure — a localized muscle twitching — or had more than one form of epileptic seizure.

"Because of the very high percentage of relapse in children with jacksonian seizures or combinations of seizure types together with neurologic dysfunction, we question whether medication should ever be withdrawn in children who have both these high-risk factors," the doctors wrote.

However, the study found that for most youngsters, the drugs can be stopped even if tests show the patients still have abnormal brain waves.

Mexican town may have found miracle

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Thousands of Roman Catholics are flocking to the town of Yaqui, in northwest Mexico, to see twin images of the Virgin Mary that appeared on the windows of a schoolhouse two weeks ago, a reporter for the local newspaper said.

Children leaving classes noticed one image on a window in a classroom at the Benito Juarez secondary school March 26, Rafael Lerma Limon of the Tribuna del Yaqui said in a telephone interview Wednesday night.

The director of the school, Benjamin Arceo, said he would turn the institution "into a cathedral" if another image appeared, Lerma Limon continued, and one did materialize that day on a window on the opposite side of the building.

The reporter said each image is about a foot high and "looks like a luminous painting, with all the colors of the rainbow." They are visible only from an angle and at a distance of four to ten yards, he continued, and are seen more clearly by daylight.

They are visible at night under a spotlight, he added.

The school director said the glass in the windows, like that in all the other windows of the building, is the original panes which was installed when the building was built 20 years ago.

Lerma Limon said the local priests asked the Vatican to certify the images as miracles after school officials tried unsuccessfully to erase them with gasoline and muriatic acid.

Word of the images has brought thousands of pilgrims from northern Mexico and the southwestern United States to pray in the schoolyard and to hear Mass celebrated there by the Rev. Domingo Arteaga, the local parish priest, Lerma Limon said.

More than 3,000 people were on hand for Mass last Sunday, he reported.

The images were said to resemble that of Our Lady of Guadalupe, the patron saint of Mexico, which according to legend was miraculously imprinted on the cape of an Aztec Indian as proof of his encounter with her in December 1531.

The cape hangs in the Basilica of Guadalupe in Mexico City, and is the object of the largest annual religious pilgrimage in Latin America. Hundreds of miracles have been attributed to it.

Yaqui is a farming town 17 miles from Ciudad Obregon, in Chihuahua state, and 340 miles south of Tucson, Ariz. It takes its name from the region's Yaqui Indians.

China may build, buy nuclear reactors

PEKING (AP) — China is on the verge of building its own small nuclear power plant, and may buy larger reactors for southern Guangdong province, a knowledgeable Western scientific source said today.

The source, who spoke on condition that his name not be used, said China planned to build a 300-megawatt power plant, possibly buying some of the components abroad.

Foreign companies do not build such small reactors, the source said. Larger plants are more economical but harder to construct, he said.

China announced last year that it had a research reactor in operation, and said this demonstrated the nation's capability to design and build its own nuclear power stations. It has had nuclear weapons for nearly 20 years.

The Chinese press has said only nuclear power can help the nation of 1 billion people meet an anticipated large shortage of energy at the end of this century. Vice Premier Zhang Aiping recently urged a propaganda campaign to inform citizens there is nothing mysterious or frightening about nuclear energy.

China launched its first satellite in 1970 and last year launched three separate satellites from a single carrier rocket, but communications satellites require precise positioning, and the rocket must reach a certain height to attain the right orbit.

Odessan wins Juilliard School music competition

NEW YORK — Lowell Hohstadt of Odessa won first place in a Juilliard School of Music composition competition, performing the violin solo of his winning concerto at the Juilliard Orchestra Concert at New York City's Lincoln Center March 28.

Hohstadt is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Hohstadt. Dr. Hohstadt is conductor of the Midland-Odessa Symphony, and his wife, Muriel, is a music teacher for the Ector County Independent School District.

The 17-year-old musician is a senior violin major in Juilliard's pre-college division. His winning "Concerto Breve," a concerto for violin and orchestra, was selected over some 15 works entered by composition majors.

Hohstadt, who began playing the violin in the sixth grade, is a former student of Dorothy Croft, a longtime Odessa violin teacher. He attended Burnet Elementary and Bonham Junior High before entering Juilliard during his sophomore year.

ENTERTAINMENT

Hohstadt has performed as soloist with the Oradea Philharmonic of Romania, the Juilliard Pre-College String Ensemble and the Midland-Odessa Symphony. He also has appeared in recital at Lincoln Center and Meadowland, a New York state school for violin soloists.

Other works he has written include "Le Bazar," a work for full orchestra, which also won an earlier Juilliard composition contest. His other awards include first place in the Juilliard Bach Competition, the Benno Rabinof Award and a special Juilliard award for outstanding achievements.

Hohstadt is scheduled to perform in England next fall and in Yugoslavia in the spring of 1983.

Book on Permian Basin published

A pictorial history evoking the lore, legends and people of the West Texas-southeastern New Mexico oil booms will be published this month. Written by University of Maryland history professor Walter Rundell Jr., "Oil in West Texas and New Mexico: A Pictorial History of the Permian Basin" will be the first publishing venture undertaken by the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame.

Published for the museum by Texas A&M University Press, this history of the Basin includes photographs selected by Rundell from the museum's archival collection of over 6,000 photographs in addition to others from major collections in Austin, Lubbock, New York, Washington and elsewhere.

The book features over 270 illustrations together with a text written by Rundell. The 208-page hard cover volume is published in a limited edition. It describes how oil was first discovered in quantity in the Permian Basin in 1923 and records the rise of cities and towns throughout the following decades.

Those interested in purchasing the book may do so for $24.50 at the museum's gift shop. Proceeds of the book sales will go to the museum. This project was undertaken by the museum in 1980 with the assistance of a grant from two members of its board of trustees, Ford Chapman and Richard Donnelly.

Rundell will be in Midland May 1 for two receptions and a book autographing session.

21st Student Art Festival at museum

The 21st annual Student Art Festival opens today at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

Art work by students in elementary grades will be featured today through April 22, with that done by secondary grade level students featured April 24 through May 9. Winners will receive their awards at April 27 reception, which begins at 8 p.m.

Entries are from all public and private schools in Midland. Goals of the Student Art Festival include stimulating student interest in the arts, offering the public an opportunity to understand and enjoy student art work and recognizing outstanding student accomplishments.

The festival is sponsored by the Midland Independent School District, the City Council PTA, the Junior League of Midland, Inc., and the museum.

The museum is open, free of charge, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Matting, framing demonstration set

The Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., will present a free demonstration on "Matting and Framing Prints and Pictures" at 7:30 p.m. today.

The demonstration deals with the proper techniques of matting and framing, plus how to show off art work to its best advantage while protecting it from possible damage and dust.

For more information call Jane Posey, the museum's educational coordinator, at 683-2882.

Righteous Brothers add to comeback list

Comebacks are taking over the music business. The always-hackneyed "Where are they now?" story has become obsolete. If they're still alive, they're performing somewhere.

Peter, Paul and Mary have done it, and so have their friends, the Kingston Trio. The Association regularly resurfaces. The Mamas and Papas now have two new mamas — Spanky MacFarland and John Phillips' daughter, Mackenzie. Chubby Checkers has come back. Bruce Springsteen recently brought Gary U.S. Bonds out of mothballs and Tom Petty did the same for Don Shannon.

When you ask these pop relics why they've now chosen to dust off their chops and come back, they rarely tell the truth. They talk about their new material. They tell you why the record business is suffering. Few, if any, ever mention the word money.

The one exception may be the Righteous Brothers. Bill Medley and Bobby Hatfield, both 41, are about to hit the road again. For the record, this is their second comeback.

"We're old and we need the money," admits Medley. "The money is always a factor. This is our 20th anniversary and it seemed like a good idea. If we can make some money and a lot of people happy at the same time, there's no reason not to do it."

And then, like so many American pop acts, the Righteous Brothers were buried by an avalanche of hard rock. Medley and Hatfield later disbanded, then tried it again in '74. The commercial results of their first reunion proved a bust.

The pair have remained best friends since their career began in 1963.

'Smurfs' on tonight

NEW YORK (AP) — Two of the best moves Fred Silverman ever made for NBC were to stick with "Hill Street Blues" and trust his daughter's judgment about "The Smurfs."

Tonight Hill Street's men in blue share NBC's prime-time lineup with those cuddly little creatures in light blue.

A Review

Exhaustion glazed his eyes, while his face showed the miles, the work and the missed hours of sleep. It could be seen through the camera lens and by those closest to the stage who were studying his expressions, but not by the audience at large. For most of the 3,000 fans gathered at Chaparral Center, Mel Tillis and his band, The Statesiders, created an impression of high-energy activity happening onstage.

Six feet tall and 170 pounds lanky, Tillis could almost fit the description of a "long, tall Texan," complete with the 10-gallon hat. Almost, but not quite. Tillis, who is a native of Florida, wears an under-10-gallon hat complete with, not a Lone Star flag, but a Confederate one.

Tuesday night's concert started promptly at 8 p.m. with The Statesiders, named for Tillis' 1963 hit "Stateside," providing the backup for Tillis. Following a 25-minute performance, which included some fine fiddle playing, Jim Buchanan, one of the fiddlers, announced that T-shirts would be sold from the stage during the 15-minute intermission.

Mel Tillis

Almost before the lights went on, the front of the center was filled with purchasers. Those who got there first went away happy. Others were not so lucky. They sold out almost immediately, leaving some 300 to 400 T-shirtless.

At 49, Tillis has written over 1,000 songs, over half of which have been recorded. During his concert he sang those he has recorded, such as "Send Me Down to Tucson" and "Coca-Cola Cowboy," to those others have recorded, such as "Burning Memories," "Detroit City" and "Ruby, Don't Take Your Love to Town."

Tillis said by way of introducing "Detroit City," without naming the song, "Out of all the records and songs I've had over the years, folks ask me, 'Mel, what's the biggest song that you ever wrote?' See if you remember this song." The immediate applause provided his answer.

Another selection which he made special reference to that drew laughter and applause from the audience was "Ruby."

"Kenny Rogers sold about 8½ million copies of this. It helped to pay my grocery bills for about 15 years," he said. Laughing, he added, "Lord knows, I needed it. I've got four boys and a girl which proves that stuttering (Tillis is well known for stuttering when he speaks, but not when he sings) ain't got a thing to do with it."

The concert was over promptly at 9:45 p.m. Tillis performed for an hour. There was no encore because the lights went on the minute he said good night. He did return to the stage to sign autographs and talk with his fans.

It was not a bad concert, nor was it an outstanding one. Perhaps the word that sums it up is brief.

It was apparent from the statement made during the show, "We're driving to Dallas tonight to catch a 7-a.m. plane out of Dallas. We're leaving for London Wednesday afternoon," that they were in a hurry to get the gig over with and leave.

Tillis had been keeping a hectic schedule lately, complete with filming a two-hour "Love Boat" special which wrapped up Friday in Los Angeles. Following and during the filming, he and his band performed several concerts. Tuesday's Midland performance was tucked between those and his performance at the Wembley International Country Music Festival which starts today in England.

Tillis plans to spend Easter at home in Nashville. Each day he is away from home he calls to check on his 1,700-acre farm because, as his road manager said, this is "the heavy spring planting season. That's where his heart and attention is right now."

No doubt, Tillis and his band will make a great hit at the festival because their brand of Western swing music, which they play very well, is quite popular in Europe. They are competent performers, who put on a well-run, professional act.

But sometimes it all becomes too much. When an entertainer is spreading himself between singing engagements, television performances, movie performances, commercials, and on and on and on, he begins to be spread a little thin. It showed Tuesday night.

Photog honored

Max Hutchins, a Midland photographer, received a merit from the Southwest Professional Photographers Convention this past March in Fort Worth.

The portrait photograph, "Apache Tear," was awarded the merit by a panel of five judges, which automatically places it in the National Convention of Professional Photographers of America Exhibit held in Las Vegas May 23-27.

The work will then be reviewed for the PPA loan collection. If chosen for this honor, Hutchins will receive an additional merit. Merits are collected towards a master's degree awarded by the PPA.

Piano, voice competitors get superiors

Seventy-seven of the 130 students entered in the Piano and Voice Festival held recently at Midland College received superior ratings.

Those involved in the festival were members of local junior music clubs affiliated with the Texas Federation of Music Clubs and, in turn, with the National Federation of Music Clubs. Mrs. Hans Roweck was the festival chairman.

Students receiving superior ratings for three or more consecutive years included:

Ten years — Carole Scott of the Harmony Club; nine years — Tommy Nunez of the Chopin Club; seven years — Alicia Thompson, Alla Capriccio Club; six years — Melissa Kibler, Grand Staff Club; four years — Blake Harvard, Gana Leggett, Daniel Simmons, all of Harmony Club, and Danny Daehling, Chopin Club; three years — Roslyn Eaden, Marty Kirby, both of the Weddle Club, Kelly Gosnell of the Grand Staff Club, Traci Standifer, Soon Sin Lee, Jo Ann Gentry, all of the Harmony Club, Connie Kreger, Rebecca Daugherty, Faye Daugherty, all of the Chopin Club.

The music clubs and sponsors involved in the festival were Grand Staff Club, sponsored by Mrs. Benton Howell; Weddle Club, Mrs. Carl Leonard; Chopin Club, Mrs. Roweck; Harmony Club, Mrs. Marion Ailes; Young Pianists Club, Dr. Betty Morris; Young Singers Club, Jane Clancey Huddleston; Alla Capriccio Club, Mrs. C.J. George; and Klaviatur Verein Club, Mrs. Eugene Motter.

Judges for the competition were Ronald Bennett, Ruth Ardis and Daphne Pemberton. All are Odessa music teachers.

Library offers chance to visit Fort Davis

Overland routes westward gained importance following the 1849 California gold discovery. In West Texas, the San Antonio-El Paso Road passed through the center of Apache and Commanche raiding country. To protect travelers, the United States Army built a fort at the mouth of a box canyon near Limpia Creek and named it for Jefferson Davis, then Secretary of War.

Fort Davis was active from 1854 to 1891, performing scouting duties, escorting the mail and protecting stagecoaches, wagon trains, surveyors and construction crews building the Texas and Pacific and the Southern Pacific railroads. When it was abandoned in 1891, the fort consisted of more than 50 adobe or stone buildings.

Area residents who would like to tour historic Fort Davis and dine at the Limpia Hotel restaurant will have a chance on April 17. The Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library is sponsoring a day trip which leaves the library, 1805 W. Indiana Ave., at 8:30 a.m. Space is limited. The chartered Greyhound bus accommodates 39 and over half the seats have been filled.

Reservations may be made by calling 686-8138. Cost of the trip, including meal, is $20.

Puntus 2nd Chap to make it

MC's Wilson All-America pick

Puntus Wilson, sophomore guard from Midland College's National Junior College Athletic Association champions, landed a berth on the NJCAA's All-America, the second Chaparral player in as many years to be named the first team.

Charles Johnson, a 6-6 forward now at Texas Tech, was named last year.

Wilson, a 6-3½ sharpshooter who erased all MC scoring marks for a single season, earlier was named the Most Valuable Player in the NJCAA tournament at Hutchinson, Kan.

Wilson's honors included WJCC MVP, All Region V this year as well as all-conference and all-region in 1981.

The Dallas South Oak Cliff High School graduate averaged 23.5 points per game this season for the Chaps. The slim left-hander with the deft outside touch scored a school record high of 45 points against New Mexico Junior College. The next time the teams met, NMJC "held" him to 40 points. Only one point in his 45 point game came from the free throw line. Previous single-game high was 37 points by Robert Tate in 1978.

Wilson scored 25 points in the NJCAA championship game, in which Midland defeated previously undefeated and No. 1 ranked Miami Dade North of Florida. Only three points came from the line.

Other first team picks included Emery Atkinson, 6-5, Miami-Dade North; Willie Mathis, 6-2, SUNY at Morrisville, N.Y.; John Pruitt, 6-3, Tunxix, Conn.; Rodney Nealy, 6-7, Vincennes, Ind.; Craig Jones, 6-4, Kankakee, Ill.; Donnie McClinton, 6-2, Three Rivers, Poplar Bluff, Mo.; Stan Cloudy, 6-3, Henderson, Texas.

Masters comes back

Augusta again terrorizes pros

By THOMAS BOSWELL
The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

"They've got these new greens so fast that you'll have to use bubble gum under your ball mark so it won't slide off the green. By Sunday, when the heat gets on, that putter is going to feel like a snake in your hands." — Hale Irwin, two-time U.S. Open champion

AUGUSTA, Ga. — The sanctified greens at Augusta National can rest easy these last chilly nights before the Masters starts Thursday. Once again, as of old, their honor is safe, their reputation secure.

After a decade of fretting hereabouts, the Masters is the Masters again.

Finally, this week, the sound that fanciers of the Augusta National like best was heard again in the Georgia air — the pathetic, hangdog complaining of the chronically spoiled professional golfer.

— Said defending champ Tom Watson: "The greens are so fast they've changed the whole nature of the golf course. Five-foot putts are going to be as tough as 35-footers usually are. At times, I putted like I would for a three-footer and watched the ball roll 40 feet. ... Treacherous doesn't describe it. Those greens are just about impossible now. They're right at the limit."

— "Those are now the fastest greens in the world, even faster than Royal Melbourne (in Australia)," said Greg Norman. "I had a six-foot putt roll 45 feet. I had an iron shot spin backwards 100 feet and 15 yards off the green. I'd rather be 40 feet below the hole than four feet above it."

— "Now, they can finally put on the test of golf they want again," said Hubert Green. "But, if they're not careful, they could make it a circus."

— "HOW DO you stop a four-foot downhill putt?" asked Hale Irwin rhetorically, slightly punchy from 27 practice holes on a blustery day. "Well, if you grip the putter right down on the shaft and yell, 'Bite,' and suck your breath back in real hard, it may stop. I may bring my six-shooter and start firing at the ball if it keeps rolling and yell, 'Stop in the name of the law.' "

— "The fastest ever," said Sam Snead, 70, the final authority.

For generations, the mounds and declivities of the putting surfaces here were the measure by which golfing treachery was measured. Why, this was the joint where Don January, leading the field on a Saturday, hit an apparently routine putt on the 13th green, then watched the ball roll into the water.

This was the place where Snead said the greens were so hard you could actually "hear the ball roll," where Ben Hogan could four-putt and where the oldest members said you had more chance of stopping a ball on a marble staircase than you did of putting the brakes on

Purple Pack hosts Cooper High today

Rebs face first place Abilene

The Easter weekend has caused a change in the normal District 5-5A baseball schedule. Instead of playing their regular Saturday games, the league teams will play today. All games are scheduled for 4 p.m.

Midland High will have the home field advantage before going into the long weekend. The Bulldogs, 2-3 in 5-5A pla and 8-9 overall, will host Abilene Cooper, 3-2 and 15-7 at Memorial Stadium Field.

The Bulldogs are in their longest winning streak of the league season so far with two in a row, a 1-0 win over San Angelo on Saturday and an 8-2 victory over Odessa High Tuesday.

But, Cooper looks to be a team that could end that streak for MHS if the Purple Pack doesn't play its best game. The Cougars were picked in the preseason polls as the No. 1 team in the league. So far they haven't lived up to that honor as the sit in a tie for third with Odessa Permian.

FOR MIDLAND LEE, things could be even rougher as they hit the road to play Abilene High. The Eagles have been playing strong baseball in the 5-5A this year and are currently tied for first with Big Spring. Both teams have 4-1 league records with AHS at 13-5 overall to the Steers' 13-8.

The Rebels, after taking a share of the lead through three games at 2-1, have hit the skids of late losing two straight to move into a tie with MHS and San Angelo for fifth place at 2-3. Lee is still above .500 overall with a 10-9 record while the Bobcats have a 9-12 mark.

Elsewhere around the 5-5A, Big Spring will be out to maintain at least a share of the lead when the Steers face winless Odessa High, 0-5 and 4-15; while Odessa Permian takes on San Angelo.

WEATHER TAKES TOLL

Red Sox return to warm Florida

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

It was an arduous climb for Dave Garcia to the fifth floor of Cleveland State University's thysical plant and when he finally got there, he was out of breath.

"By the time you'll get there," the Cleveland Indians' manager told his players, "you'll be too tired to hit."

Cleveland wasn't the only baseball team inconvenienced by the bizarre spring weather.

Other teams were forced indoors due to an untimely freak storm and one squad, the Boston Red Sox, headed back to Florida to continue tuning up for the opening of the delayed 1982 season.

Tuesday's snowstorm over the Midwest and East not only postponed several games a few days, but also delayed a hockey playoff game and put several horse racing tracks out of commission.

Garcia, commenting on his team's workout Wednesday, said: "It's better than nothing. I do know this, though. Whenever we play our first game, we will be ready. We did work very hard this spring."

SNOWED OUT of two games in Milwaukee, the Indians are now scheduled to open their season Saturday in Cleveland against the Texas Rangers, another team that had bad luck with the weather. The Rangers were snowed out of a series in New York with the Yankees.

Indians President Gabe Paul, for one, blasted league officials for the schedule, which in many cases has Northern teams playing each other or Southern teams traveling north to play games.

The Toronto Blue Jays, unable to play in Detroit, traveled to Minneapolis to play an exhibition game with the Chicago White Sox in the new, enclosed Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome. The Blue Jays won 3-2.

"I never thought I'd have to come back here to get out of the snow," Toronto's Hoskin Powell said. "The weather is really messing things up. It was worth it to fly in here, though, because we got to do something instead of just sit around in Detroit."

A's Billy Ball looks more like Silly Ball

The Oakland A's like to play "Billy Ball."

But Wednesday night, the California Angels made it look like silly ball.

"You almost have to get a lead to beat that club — it takes a lot of their game away from them," said Geoff Zahn after pitching the Angels' to a 7-0 victory over Billy Martin's team with a classy four-hitter.

The night before, the A's clawed out an 11-inning, 3-2 victory with their usual style, which includes a lot of daring baserunning. But they weren't able to play Martin's wide-open game Wednesday night, after falling behind early.

Fred Lynn and Rod Carew, each of whom had three hits and scored two runs, paced the Angels to a 4-0 lead after three innings.

The shutout was the eighth of Zahn's major-league career, but only his first since he pitched a three-hitter against the A's two years ago.

Twins 7, Mariners 5

Jim Eisenreich's two-run single and Kent Hrbek's solo home run lifted Minnesota over Seattle. The single was Eisenreich's first major league hit and it keyed a five-run fourth inning. Hrbek smashed his first homer of the season in the fifth inning to cap the Twins' scoring and give them a a 7-2 lead at that point.

A crowd of only 5,213 witnessed the Twins' victory at the Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome after a state-record audience of 52,279 saw the Mariners win 11-7 Tuesday night.

JIM MURRAY

No earthquake, that's just Dr. Naismith rolling over

The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

"Hello, operator? Get me Madame Lazonga. The medium. Hello, Madame Lazonga? Listen, I want you to whip me up a little seance. Communicate with the spirits. Get me Dr. James Naismith, the inventor of basketball. He's got to be up there someplace, he was a YMCA instructor. Try the gym.

"Hello, Dr. Naismith? Old 'Set-shot' Murray here, the last of the two-handed scourges. How's it going?

"Listen, Dr. Naismith, did you happen to catch the last of the NCAA Finals on the Eye last week? You didn't? Well, I was wondering what you thought of the fact the first eight points scored by the winners in the game were on 'Goal-tending' shots? Without those, the other team would have won by seven instead of losing by one.

"What do you mean what do I mean by 'goal-tending'? You know. Where a defensive player goes up above the rim to block a shot coming down to the basket.

"What? You say that's impossible? That you put the basket 10 feet above the floor? But, doctor, this goal-tender is somewhere between seven and eight feet tall, and his arms are so long he can walk on his knuckles without bending his knees.

"What do you mean, what do I take you for? What? You say people between seven and eight feet tall are in the circus? Where they can make some real money? Not anymore, doctor, they got hundreds of seven-footers in basketball today. Every center in the NBA is seven feet or over.

"WHAT? WHAT'S the NBA, you want to know? Well, it's a professional basketball league. What did you say? Do people pay to see basketball games? Oh, my, yes. Over 60,000 at the NCAA Finals. No, they don't come for the dance afterward anymore.

"How do you keep these seven-footers from signing with Barnum? Easy. Some of them make over a million dollars a year.

"Hello, hello. Dr. Naismith? Madame Lazonga, I think our connection is broken. Oh, there you are, Doctor. Yes, I said a million a year. Doctor, what's the matter? Are you strangling?

"But these are not sideshow freaks anymore, doctor. The whole race is just getting bigger. All that protein, you see. Some of them grow to be seven feet tall and then become vegetarians, but it's a good thing for them their ancestors weren't. I know if you study suits of armor and the length of bunks in the old slave ships, you can figure the average human was about 5-4, but in the NBA today, if a guy is 6-1, they call him 'Tiny.' Anyway, even the off-guards can slam dunk.

"WHAT? WHAT'S a 'slam dunk'? That's where you score a basket by dropping the ball in from above. What? Oh, sure. Everybody can do it. They've got guards 6-10 in this league, but even the ones only 6-4 can jump above the rim. The world high jump record is getting toward eight feet anyway. And they do that backwards. We got guys in basketball can slam dunk backwards.

"Dr. Naismith! Are you sure you should be using that kind of language in Heaven?

"What? You want to know doesn't anybody throw up that pretty long set shot anymore? Well, they give you three points for that now, doctor. Still, nobody does it. The Los Angeles Lakers attempted 7,382 field goals last year and only 94 from three-point range which is only 23 feet 9 inches from the basket. And they only made 17. It's a low-percentage shot. They score almost a third of their baskets by dunks, now.

"Isn't that kind of boring? Well, yes, it is. It's about as athletic as a giraffe eating leaves off a low tree. But I don't know what we can do about it. The basketball of the future may have 90 percent slam dunks in it, and 10 percent layups. What's a layup? Oh, never mind, doctor. You'd never understand.

"Why don't they just move the basket up five feet? Doctor! Tamper with the grand old game?! Trifle with the sanctity of basketball?!

"WHAT? YOU SAY they'd still have the center jump, the two free throws for a foul, the stall defense. Doctor, I don't know how to tell you this, but they don't have the jump ball anymore. And they have what they call a 'loose ball' foul where you don't go to the line anymore. Sometimes, when you do they have a three-to-make-two foul procedure. And there's no such thing as a stall. They have a 24-second clock.

"Wait a minute! Doctor! Calm down! The 24-second clock means you have 24 seconds to shoot for the basket or surrender the ball. What? You say that'll mean some team may score more than 35 points some nights now? Doctor, some teams score 175 points today.

"What, raise the basket?! No, they won't raise the basket. That's too simple. Neither will they make the slam dunk count only one-half a point. You see, the dunk and the layup make for violent physical contact under the basket. The public likes that. Makes for fist fights, broken faces, lacerated corneas, crushed pelvises.

"Wait a minute! Don't scream! I can hear you. I know you invented the game to do away with the brutality of physical sports like boxing and football. I know the slam dunk is an obscenity. Doctor, we're talking business, not sports, now. Wait a minute, doctor! You say you're sorry you invented the damn game? Is that any way for the Father of Basketball to talk?! Doctor, listen to me! Hello? Madame Lazonga, did he hang up on me?"

It's Masters time, but Ray Floyd still keeps up with Cubs

By WILL GRIMSLEY

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — When Ray Floyd woke up this morning and prepared to tee off in another Masters golf tournament, the first thing he didn't do was practice his putting stroke on the hotel rug.

He didn't turn quickly to the front sports page of The Augusta Chronicle and read what Jack Nicklaus, Tom Watson and Tom Kite were saying about their chances during the next four days.

No, sir, Floyd leafed over to the agate section and studied the baseball boxscores.

"It's always the first thing I do," said the bull-shouldered 200-pounder, Masters champion in 1976 and co-holder with Nicklaus of the tournament record 271. "I study all of them, not just who hit the home runs or pitched a good game but even down to the attendance.

"Ask me the attendance of any game, and I guarantee I can tell you."

THE 39-YEAR-old Floyd, long one of pro golf's top players, is more than just a baseball fan. He bleeds with the Chicago Cubs.

In that respect, he shares a role with the president of the United States, who in his early days broadcast Cubs' games on the radio.

Like Ronald Reagan, Floyd is on the mailing list of the Emil Verban Memorial Society of Washington, D.C., a unique organization.

The society was formed by a handful of die-hard Cubs supporters seven years ago and since then has pushed its membership to 200, including Reagan and former press secretary Jim Brady, wounded in the assassination attempt on Reagan a year ago.

When the Cubs won their opening game 3-2 against the Cincinnati Reds on Monday, the society, including Reagan, dispatched a quick wire of congratulations to General Manager Dallas Green & Co. of the Chicago Nationals.

"No, I didn't join in the wire," Floyd said. "The society is a Washington group. I live in Miami. I get their mail, that's all. My ties with the Cubs are a bit different."

RAY IS A faithful member of the clan, a cheer-leader, a booster. The Verban Society grew out of frustration, organized to commiserate with the Chicago club's unending futility.

It got its name from a Cubs second baseman of the 1940s, now living in Lincoln, Neb., who the Society said represented "mediocrity under pressure — an overachiever among the Cubs."

Floyd didn't grow up in the shadow of Wrigley Field. He didn't go around wearing an Ernie Banks T-shirt or flying a Richie Ashburn banner.

He was born in Fort Bragg, N.C., an Army brat whose father later took over the Cypress Lakes Golf Club in Fayetteville. Adept in both baseball and golf, he had a tough choice to make.

"Just out of high school when I was 17, I got a chance to sign with the Cleveland Indians," he said. "But after winning the National Jaycees golf title in 1960, I decided to go in the golf direction."

The next year, he quit the University of North Carolina to join the tour. As a 20-year-old rookie, he won the St. Petersburg Open.

SINCE THEN, he has won 15 tour events, including the 1969 PGA, 1976 Masters and World Open and the Tournament Players Championship last year when he finished second to Tom Kite in the money winning list with $359,360.

He became a Cubs fan by chance.

"Back in 1963, I got friendly with Don Drysdale and Sandy Koufax of the Dodgers," he said. "They both liked golf. I was a baseball nut. Also, I got to know Leo Durocher, then a Dodger coach.

"At a World Series, they introduced me to Nobe Kawano, the Dodgers' equipment manager.

"Kawano said, 'Say, when you're in Chicago, be sure to look up my brother, Yosh. He's equipment manager of the Cubs. He's a great fan of yours.'

"Of course, I did. Pretty soon, I had my own locker, a Cubs uniform No.6 — a catcher's uniform because I was hefty. In 1968-69-70, I went to spring training, traveled with the team and sat in the dugout during games.

"I didn't take chanves on getting hurt. I played first, shagged balls and did some pitching. My heroes were Ernie Banks, Ron Santo and Fergie Jenkins."

Once a bachelor with a reputation of being a playboy, Floyd married eight years ago and became a devoted family man with two sons and a daughter.

"Guess I haven't seen five games since I married," he said. "Priorities change. But I still keep up wwth what's going on in baseball, and my heart is always with the Cubs."

Householder gets in some licks

Old feud simmers again

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

In the minor leagues, Paul Householder and Dickie Noles had a running feud going.

It's still going strong in the majors, and Wednesday night Householder got some licks in with his bat.

"I wanted to get him — I wanted to hit him good," Householder said after hitting a home run and triple off Noles to lead the Cincinnati Reds to a 6-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs. "I had a little more incentive tonight."

It was a measure of revenge for a minor league incident that triggered antagonism between the two. Householder said that he and Noles exchanged words during a Class AAA game last summer, when Householder was with the Reds' Indianapolis farm club and Noles was on the disabled list playing for the Philadelphia Phillies' farm club in Oklahoma City.

"The next day in the outfield during batting practice he stopped me, challenged me and we threw punches," Householder said.

HOUSEHOLDER said Noles later hit him in the ribs with a pitch in a minor league game, nearly setting off an on-the-field fight.

Neither player was in a conciliatory mood Wednesday night, especially Noles, who chose an obscenity when asked about Householder after the game.

"I decked him before and I'll deck him again, if he comes after me," Noles said. "I welcome it."

Householder hit a two-out homer in the fourth inning and a run-scoring triple in the sixth, for two of the four hits allowed by Noles in 52-3 innings. Bruce Berenyi got the victory with late relief help.

Astros 3, Cardinals 2

Houston's Tony Scott and Luis Pujols smashed run-scoring doubles and Joe Niekro and Joe Sambito combined on a seven-hitter to lead the Astros over St. Louis.

Niekro and Sambito quieted the Cardinals, who pounded out 18 hits in Tuesday night's 14-3 season-opening victory over the Astros. Cardinal starter John Martin got the loss.

After Scott put the Astros ahead 1-0 with a second-inning double, Pujols' sixth-inning double scored Art Howe and Scott to give the Astros a 3-0 cushion and their eventual winning run.

The victory was the seventh straight over St. Louis for Niekro.

"I don't know what it is, I just feel comfortable pitching in St. Louis and I feel comfortable pitching here (in Houston)," said Niekro. "It also feels good to beat a club that hits as well as St. Louis. We found out last night that they can hit."

Niekro's reference was to the Cardinals' 14-3 win over the Astros in the season opener.

Braves 6, Padres 4

Dale Murphy stroked a single, double and home run and knocked in two runs and Brett Butler added three singles and drove in two runs as Atlanta defeated San Diego.

Bob Walk pitched seven strong innings, allowing five hits before Rick Camp relieved in the eighth when the Padres scored three unearned runs and Gene Garber finished up.

"It's important to get off to a good start," said Murphy, who hit only .247 last year but was .319 against the Padres.

Murphy got his hits off John Montefusco, an old friend.

"If I had my wishes, I would rather face somebody other than the Count," Murphy said. "You have to battle him every time out."

Dodgers 9, Giants 2

Ron Cey slugged a home run and singled twice and Ken Landreaux collected four singles to lead Los Angeles over San Francisco.

The Giants contributed three costly errors. Right fielder Jack Clark dropped a fly ball that led to three unearned runs in the third inning when the Dodgers scored five times. Third baseman Darrell Evans committed two errors in the fifth inning that led to two more unearned runs.

Winner Bob Welch gave up three hits in the second inning when the Giants scored their two runs, then retired 11 batters in a row to earn the victory before Alejandro Pena took over in the seventh. Steve Howe finished up for the Dodgers.

Ledbetter's 30th sets NCAA home run record

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Jeff Ledbetter of Florida State set an NCAA single-season home run record Wednesday night with his 30th homer as the Seminoles beat Jacksonville 10-7 to gain a split of a college baseball doubleheader.

Jacksonville won the opener 7-4.

Ledbetter, who already owns the NCAA mark for career home runs with 85, broke the single season record of 29 with a solo shot to right field in the fifth inning. He tied the record with a two-run blast in the opening game.

The single season mark had been held by three players — Jim Auten of UCLA, Franklin Stubbs of Virginia Tech and Mississippi State's Bruce Castoria. Auten hit 29 in 1979, while Stubbs and Castoria had 29 apiece in 1981.

Ledbetter surpassed the career home run mark, held previously by former teammate Mike Fuentes, early in the season.

Ledbetter, who was drafted on the fourth round by the Montreal Expos last spring but elected to play his final year of college, needed just 43 games to accomplish the feat.

Olson clears 18

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Record-setting pole vaulter Billy Olson won his event at an invitational track and field meet here Wednesday, but failed in three tries to break the U.S. outdoor record.

Olson, who holds the world indoor record, cleared 18 feet on his second attempt Wednesday for the win.

However the vault was delayed for 30 minutes while officials raised the bar to 18-9½ and measured it several times, and Olson missed all his attempts at the record height.

The Abilene Christian athlete's next competition will be Saturday in Dallas during a quadrangular meet involving Southern Methodist, Arkansas and Southern California.

Pam Kelly led Louisiana Tech to two straight nationals championships and broke as her team broke the all-time women's basketball winning streak.

3,000-point scorer has dubious future as pro cager

RUSTON, La. (AP) — With nearly 3,000 college career points on the No.1-ranked team, any man would be hiring agents to negotiate their first multi-million-dollar pro contract.

But if you're the best woman college basketball player in the nation?

"Right now, I don't have anything to look forward to," said Pam Kelly, the 6-foot center who wrapped up a spectacular college career by leading Louisiana Tech to a second consecutive national championship.

The defunct Women's Professional Basketball League was Kelly's best shot at playing for U.S. dollars, maybe a few thousand a year at best. Her best chance for a basketball career now is a $15,000 to $20,000 paycheck for playing semipro ball in Italy.

"I'm not going all the way over there for that," she said in a recent interview. "I can make that working in the United States."

Nor have there been any endorsement opportunities for the 21-year-old from rural Caldwell Parish, La., who won the 1982 Wade Trophy. The award is given annually to the nation's finest female collegiate women's basketball player.

Her senior year averages of 20.4 points and 9.3 rebounds pushed Kelly's four-year collegiate totals to 2,979 points and 1,511 rebounds — an average of 19.5 points and 9.9 rebounds per game.

a downhill putt at the Masters.

EVERY SUBTLETY of Bobby Jones' masterwork in dogwood, azalea and firethorn was built on the premise of those viciously nerve-splitting greens. How else could you have a course with unmissable fairways, no rough and only 43 traps?

Every penalty for inaccuracy, bad planning or lost nerve was exacted on those greens.

The punishment fit the crime: you might hit a piece of the green, but you'd face a long, tormenting, undulating lag putt. The first one might not get you, but, over the four days, you'd become a wreck. The more little mistakes you made, the more the three-putts would mount. Only the bold, who aimed at the sticks and hit them, survived.

Then, sickeningly, the Augusta National greens — a mixture of rye with a Bermuda base — began to lose their punch. They just slowed down to the pace of a quick public course. If you cut 'em low enough to keep their terrifying speed, they'd just die.

Purists, like Jack Nicklaus, mourned their passing; out of the sides of mouths, the word was passed in the locker room that the Augusta National just wasn't a great course any more.

Almost every year, the field average got lower and respect for the Masters faded. It didn't matter how wildly you hit the ball, as winner Seve Ballesteros did in 1980; you could always throw the ball up somewhere on the green and two-putt. Or, perhaps make an undeserved birdie.

Even Augusta's hallowed need for local knowledge got a body blow when blithe Fuzzy Zoeller won in 1979, the first time he ever played the layout. Lee Trevino got in the lowest blow, saying, "If they put up a sign that said 'Hartford Open,' everybody'd shoot 265." Golf Digest even dropped Augusta National out of the nation's top 10 courses.

Lee Frosh boys, girls win ninth grade track titles

Midland Lee Freshman School won both the girls and boys ninth grade division of the Midland Junior High City Track Championships Wednesday. Goddard Junior High won three of the four, seventh and eighth grade division titles in the two day meet held at Memorial Stadium.

The Lee girls were led by Brenda Haven who showed her versatility by winning both a field event and running event. Haven captured a first place in the triple jump, with a 35-8 attempt, and in the 200 meter run with a time of 27.78. The talented freshman also placed second in the long jump to help her teammates to a 101-75 victory over Midland Freshman School.

In the ninth grade boys division Lee crushed Midland 120-55. The freshman Rebels took first place in 11 of the 13 events and swept the top two spots in five of those events. Their only two non-victories were in the shot put and high jump events.

The Alamo girls prevented a Goddard sweep in the lower grades with a 168-147½ seventh grade victory. It was the double points in the relay races that proved to be the difference for the Alamo girls as they won the 400, 800 and 1200 meter team events.

In the eighth grade division, the Goddard girls swept first and second place in three events to post a 195-115 victory over Alamo. Melissa Whittington was a dual winner for Goddard as she won the triple jump with a 30-0¾ leap and the long jump with a 15-9¾ effort.

The Goddard boys won every running event and two of the four field events to capture the eighth grade team title over second place Alamo 245-101½.

In last week's Midland Invitational meet, a change has been made in the Girls Eighth Grade winner. Originally, San Angelo Lee with 116 points was given the title over Goddard, 105 points. However, a mathematical error was discovered and Goddard, with 116 points, has been declared the winner over SA Lee, which actually finished with 106.

The top two finishers in the boys divisions will advance to the Midland-Odessa Junior High Track Meet next week in Odessa.

To many Texans, the mention of catfish immediately creates visions of trotlining, juglining or still fishing in a favorite pond, lake or river. To others, it means platters of golden fried fish complete with all the trimmings.

Catfish are readily distinguished from other freshwater fish by their scaleless bodies, sharp dorsal and pectoral spines and barbels or whiskers located around the mouth.

THE MAJOR catfish species sought by Texas anglers are the channel, blue and flathead. Yellow and black bullhead (mudcats) are not considered major sport species in Texas.

Channel and blue catfish are easily distinguished from the flathead because of their deeply forked tails. The blue, as its name implies, is bluish in color on the back and sides and white on the belly. The channel catfish is somewhat darker in color and usually has dark spots along the sides on fish smaller than five pounds.

The easiest method of distinguishing between these two species is by examining the shape of the anal fin. The blue has an anal fin with a straight margin while on the channel the fin is somewhat rounded.

The flathead is native to all major river systems in Texas and can be found in most large reservoirs. This species has a blunt or unforked tail and the lower jaw protrudes past the upper jaw. Flatheads are dark to olive brown and appear mottled or splotchy on the back and sides. For this reason, many anglers simply call the species opelousas cat or op. In muddy water, the color is paler, thus the name of yellow catfish.

CATFISH ARE primarily bottom dwellers. The whiskers act as feelers to orient the fish along the bottom. The barbels also serve as an aid in locating food. Catfish rely heavily on their sense of smell to locate food. It is this acute sense of smell that makes stink and blood baits so effective for taking catfish.

Channel and blue catfish eat a variety of food, both dead and alive. Fish, aquatic and terrestrial insects and crustaceans are favorite foods. Flatheads are active predators and rely mainly on sight for locating food. Live fish make up the bulk of their diets and fishermen specifically after flatheads use live fish almost exclusively as bait.

Although catfishing is a year round activity, these species are most active during spring, summer and fall. In addition to blood and stinkbaits, earthworms and catalpa worms are highly touted as bait.

Trotlines and juglines are usually fished deep, near the bottom, except during the summer when shallow sets are perferred. Rod and reel anglers should find catfish in the deep holes of rivers and below the dams of many lakes.

SOME ANGLERS regularly bait an area for catfish by chumming with soured corn, cottonseed meal or dog food. Regardless of the method used, catfishermen agree that rising water levels put catfish on a feeding binge and can result in good catches.

When going after a "mess of catfish", consult lake and county regulations concerning bag limits and legal angling methods. Eating the catch is the only way to surpass the fun of catfishing.

Some of the better catfish lakes in Texas are Amistad, Falcon, Toledo Bend, Spence, Twin Buttes, Cedar Creek, Ray Hubbard, Livingston, Sam Rayburn, Caddo and Whitney. Most all major reservoirs and lakes in Texas are decent catfish angling places, but these lakes just listed are producing nice catches at the present time.

Chap net, golf teams see action

Golfers and tennis players from Midland College face a busy Easter holiday weekend with all four teams scheduled for action.

The MC men's and women's golf teams will be at Roswell, N.M. with Coach Delnor Poss' men competing in the WJCAA tournament. The Chaps will be led by Big Spring sophomore Bruce Carroll, who was medalist this week at San Angelo's Bentwood Invitational.

Coach Susan Holland's women will meet the University of New Mexico at the NMMI course. The Chaps also have a tournament at Oklahoma State University later this spring before the nationals in Florida.

Dr. Leon Dulin's Chap tennis teams will be host West Texas State University teams from Canyon at 10 a.m. Saturday and then will return to WJCAA action at 2 p.m. Monday against New Mexico Military Institute. Last Monday, the Chap men won 7-2 and the women 6-0 at Roswell, but Coach Dulin is taking nothing for granted.

"Most of the matches went to three sets and it was close all the way. It was good to win over there, especially by such margins, and then get to play them over on our courts.

Escape in Minnesota?

Steve Kemp of the White Sox said: "From a hitter's standpoint, I could have got just as much out of staying in Chicago and hitting in some indoor field house or something. But we've got pitchers, too, and they need the work, so it was a good move coming here (to Minneapolis.)"

THE PITTSBURGH Pirates and Montreal Expos, snowed out of a series in Pittsburgh, both took batting practice in an indoor cage of Three Rivers Stadium.

"You don't accomplish as much as you would outside," Pirate shortstop Dale Berra said, "but it's better, than not swinging at all."

The Milwaukee Brewers were another team that headed for shelter, taking off for the Houston Astrodome Wednesday for a few days of practice.

The Red Sox, meanwhile, found another way to beat the weather — fly back to their spring training site in Winter Haven, Fla.

"This is more like it," Manager Ralph Houk said as the Red Sox romped through a 2½-hour workout in 80-degree weather at Chain O'Lakes Park. "This way we can maintain the condition and the sharpness we developed in six weeks here."

Houk and General Manager Haywood Sullivan surprised everyone, particularly the players, by their decision to return to Winter Haven after a scheduled two-game series in Chicago was postponed because of the weather.

Six baseball games were postponed Tuesday and three Wednesday by the winter-like storm that dumped up to 20 inches of snow in some areas. Among the American League games postponed today were Boston at Chicago, Texas at New York, Cleveland at Milwaukee, and Toronto at Detroit. In the National League, bad weather postponed the Montreal-Pittsburgh game.

POSTPONEMENT of the Yankees' season-opener Tuesday against the Rangers, by the way, was the first time that a Yankee game had been halted by snow. The Yankees plan to get their season under way Saturday afternoon against the White Sox.

"I hope we play this weekend," Yankees Manager Bob Lemon said, "so we don't have four or five doubleheaders in August. It's tough when you only see a team in your park two times and you miss a series and have to make them up."

Tribe's Gabe Paul bemoans scheduling

(Compiled from R-T wires)

BASEBALL—Cleveland Indians president Gabe Paul says, "What has happened this week is a prime example of what I have been complaining about for years. They (American League officials) could not have made a worse schedule for the first week of the season if they tried."

Winter storms that lashed much of the Midwest and Northeast have claimed several major league baseball openers and resulting snow and wet grounds threatens more postponements, including the Indians home opener Saturday against the Texas Rangers. The AL schedule has such cold-weather franchises as Milwaukee, New York, Detroit and Chicago playing at home with warmer weather teams — those in California and Texas — on the road. Postponement of two games in Milwaukee will cost the Brewers an estimated $300,000. Cleveland was to have received 20 percent — the visitor's share of gate receipts — about $70,000...

Stanley Cup skirmishing begins

Islanders drub Pittsburgh, 8-1

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The New York Islanders apparently were serious when they said Sunday's five-goal regular-season loss to the Pittsburgh Penguins didn't mean anything.

The Islanders, seeking to win their third straight Stanley Cup, symbolic of the National Hockey League championship, started the playoffs with a resounding 8-1 victory over the Penguins Wednesday night. The second game of the best-of-five series is tonight, also at the Nassau Coliseum.

"Our heads weren't really in that (Sunday) game," said left wing Clark Gillies, who paced the Islanders with two goals and a pair of assists. "The guys were laughing and joking before that game. Today, the atmosphere was totally serious.

Mike Bossy and Gillies collected goals 52 seconds apart in the first seven minutes and Bryan Trottier also scored

Kings 10, Oilers 8

Los Angeles outscored the Smythe Division champions as its triple crown line of Charlie Simmer, Marcel Dionne d Dave Taylor scored four goals to outshine scoring sensation Wayne Gretzky.

Dionne scored two of the Kings' five goals in the second period as they took an 8-6 lead after trailing 4-1 in the first period. Goals by Gretzky, who had 92 in the regular season, and Matti Hagman tied the score 8-8 in the final period, but Simmer put Los Angeles ahead to stay on a goal with 5:04 left.

Canadiens 5, Nordiques 1

Two goals apiece by Mario Tremblay and Mark Napier paced Montreal to its easy victory over Quebec.

Tremblay got his first goal in the first minute of the game and the Canadiens never looked back, taking a 5-0 lead before Anton Stastny finally scored the Nordiques' only goal in the third period.

Canucks 5, Flames 3

Vancouver also scored in the first minute, with Stan Smyl connecting only eight seconds after the opening faceoff to give the Canucks a lead they never lost against Calgary.

Bruins 3, Sabres 1

Mike Moffat, Boston's 20-year-old goaltender, turned aside 24 of 25 shots as the Bruins defeated Buffalo.

Flyers 4, Rangers 1

Darryl Sittler scored two goals and goalie Pete Peeters made 35 saves as Philadelphia won on the road against New York.

Sittler, acquired at midseason from Toronto, scored on a first-period power play and gave the Flyers a 3-1 lead with a third-period goal.

Black Hawks 3, North Stars 2

Defenseman Greg Fox scored 3:34 into overtime to give Chicago its victory over Minnesota.

Murray Bannerman made 45 saves in goal for the Black Hawks, who also got goals from Doug Wilson and Glen Sharpley.

Tim Young and Al MacAdam tallied for the North Stars.

Blues 4, Jets 3

Guy Lapointe's goal with 1:58 left in the game lifted St. Louis over Winnipeg.

Willy Lindstrom had given the Jets a 3-2 lead on his second goal of the game with just 4:57 remaining, but Brian Sutter tied the score for the Blues just 14 seconds later. Lapointe's game-winner came with Lindstrom in the penalty box for tripping.

Perry Turnbull scored twice for the Blues.

Yankees to beat Cards in Series

Ah yes!

Tis that special time of year when life is renewed in the forest, green replaces white, and weak baseball teams, ever so quietly, begin their descent.

Here then, are my predictions, for the 1982 Major League Baseeball Season, complete with World Series prognostication:

NL WEST— Cincinnati ... 5—2 Houston ... 3—1 Los Angeles ... 7—2 Atlanta ... 4—1 San Francisco ... 25—1 San Diego ... 80—1

NL EAST— St. Louis ... 3—1 Montreal ... 7—2 New York ... 6—1 Philadelphia ... 7—1 Chicago ... 15—1 Pittsburgh ... 20—1.

AL WEST— California ... 7—2 Oakland ... 4—1 Chicago ... 6—1 Texas ... 8—1 Kansas City ... 10—1 Minnesota ... 35—1 Seattle ... 50—1

AL EAST— New York ... 2—1 Milwaukee ... 3—1 Detroit ... 5—1 Baltimore ... 6—1 Boston ... 8—1 Cleveland ... 10—1 Toronto ... 65—1

The American League is due to win both the All-Star Game and the World Series in 1982 ... look for both to happen, convincingly.

New York will defeat St. Louis in a five-game Fall Classic.

Teams to eye this season as prospects for the '80s ...
American League: Chicago and Detroit.
National League: New York and Atlanta.

THANK YOU, MIDLAND

For allowing me to serve another term as your Mayor and particlarly for passing all five bond issues for our City. I pledge to continue to work for the betterment of Midland and all of its citizens. Number of tunnel victims in inferno could increase

By JACK SCHREIBMAN
Associated Press Writer

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A gasoline tanker truck exploded in a "raging inferno" when a bus hit it inside a tunnel early Wednesday, setting off a 100 mph firestorm that roared through the tube and incinerated seven people.

"It was a raging inferno in here," said California Highway Patrol officer Jim Mattos, who noted the number of victims could go up. "It is theoretically possible that there were victims completely incinerated."

The initial blast was followed by about 20 smaller explosions and a 2½-hour fire that destroyed much of the tunnel. Officials said some of the 8,800 gallons of gasoline in the tanker leaked into a nearby reservoir and could cause an "environmental tragedy."

Hours after the 12:16 a.m. disaster, smoke and steam still clouded the 3,371-foot tube, one of three in the Caldecott Tunnel complex that runs beneath a hill separating the San Francisco Bay area from Contra Costa County suburbs.

Rush-hour traffic backed up 10 miles as motorists were diverted to the few alternate routes. One westbound tunnel remained open.

THE FIRESTORM LEFT foot-deep piles of tiles in the charred guts of the tunnel, said fire Capt. John Speakman. Heat-triggered sprinklers went off throughout the tube.

Speakman said that normally a 5 mph breeze blows west-to-east against traffic in the tunnel. He said the force of the explosion turned the tube into a kind of horizontal chimney that carried flames and smoke at an estimated 100 mph.

The collision began when the double-tank tractor-trailer passed to the right of a stalled passenger car. Tractor-trailer driver Mervyn Lee Metzker, 44, of Sacramento, said he saw the Alameda-Contra Costa County Transit District bus right behind.

He said the bus — empty except for its driver — hit the tunnel wall, possibly in an attempt to avoid the car, then banged into the truck's rear trailer, causing the truck's two trailers to overturn, but leaving the cab upright.

The bus driver, John Dykes, 54, of Oakland, apparently was thrown or jumped from the vehicle and Metzker said the bus shot past him as his rig came to a halt. The bus sped out of the tunnel and smashed into a concrete pillar, demolishing the front third of the bus. Dykes was missing, said Mattos.

Metzker said he got up and ran out of the tunnel.

Steve Rutledge, 30, and his 58-year-old mother, June, a part-time newspaper reporter, were behind the tank truck when they saw the explosion. As Rutledge ran back to warn oncoming motorists, his mother rushed to an emergency telephone along a tunnel wall.

"She was standing at the call box and just got caught up in a big ball of smoke and fire," said Rutledge. "I watched my mother die."

PAUL PETROELJE, AN Alameda city carpenter, saw Rutledge's warning and tried to back out of the tunnel. But he couldn't because another driver had parked his car sideways to block the lanes, and remained sitting behind the wheel.

"I'm sure he didn't see all that smoke rushing towards us," said Petroelje. "If he had, I don't think he would have stayed in his car that long ... I knew that if I was going to make it, it would have to be on foot. So I left my truck. Then I saw the lights of that car parked sideways go out."

Emergency workers later found a skeleton sitting in a car parked sideways. In all, workers found five vehicles, including two pickups and a loaded beer truck, abandoned in the tunnel.

Ian Allik, 18, was about to drive into the curving, 18-year-old tunnel when the explosions began. "They were incredibly loud," said the Walnut Creek resident. "There was one loud explosion followed by at least 20 other smaller ones."

Petroelje, 31, was treated for smoke inhalation at Merritt Hospital, said hospital spokeswoman Kathy Hall. She said Rutledge also inhaled smoke and was in good condition.

The Contra Costa County coroner's office said it would "certainly be a while" before remains taken from the tunnel were identified.

A five-member Highway Patrol accident team that was to be joined by a squad from the National Transportation Safety Board immediately began picking through the rubble to determine the cause of the crash.

State Fish and Game officials were investigating what impact the gas spill would have on Lake Temescal, a reservoir that overflows into San Francisco Bay.

The tunnel — 34½ feet wide and 17 feet high — was named for the late Thomas E. Caldecott, who championed the project while chairman of the Alameda County Board of Supervisors.

The Checker Motors Corp. taxicab manufacturing assembly line, shown in this 1980 photo, will be shut down in July due to lagging sales for the product and costing some 225 workers their jobs. The Kalamazoo plant has been producing cabs since 1922.

Two men saved other drivers from going into tunnel after fire

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Two men, including one who died, saved scores of other drivers from fiery death Wednesday when a gasoline truck exploded in a highway tunnel, killing seven people, a witness said.

Paul Petroelje said he had driven half-way into the 3,371-foot Caldicott Tunnel when he noticed a truck parked in the slow lane.

"Then I saw a man on foot coming toward me," he said. "He was waving his hands to stop the traffic and as he reached me he yelled that a bus had crashed and gone over and we wouldn't get through."

The man who warned Petroelje later was identified as Steve Rutledge, 30, whose mother died in the inferno.

Rutledge and his mother June, 58, were in a car behind an Alameda-Contra Costra County Transit System bus that authorities said slammed into a stalled car and the truck carrying 8,800 gallons of gasoline.

Rutledge said they jumped from their car to try to divert traffic. He said his mother went to a tunnel call box to report the accident.

"She was standing at the call box and just got caught up in a big ball of smoke and fire," Rutledge said. "I watched my mother die."

Another man had turned his car sideways in the tunnel to stop other drivers from proceeding toward the flames and smoke, Petroelje said. The unidentified man's remains were later found in the car.

"That man was a real hero, too," said Petroelje, 31, a carpenter who was treated for smoke inhalation.

Petroelje said the smoke "was really boiling out and was thick, like a refinery fire. I have friends in the fire department and they always said it's the smoke that kills you. I could tell this was the kind of smoke they were talking about."

"I was taking a lot of smoke and felt if I took three more gulps I wouldn't make it," he said. "I turned around just as I was getting out and saw the man (Rutledge) who had first warned us to stop. His face looked like a coal miner's.

"Once we got out of the tunnel we just stood there for awhile. All we could hear were the explosions, about five or six explosions and then the (tunnel ceiling) tiles falling. They sounded like rain," he said.

"But, you know, we couldn't ever hear any screams. Just the roar off explosions and the tiles falling, but no screams."

Missile crew chief to be tried

JACKSONVILLE, Ark. (AP) — An Air Force spokesman says a Titan 2 missile combat crew commander accused of being drunk while on duty is to be court-martialed April 15 at Little Rock Air Force Base.

Capt. Mike Stepp, chief of public affairs for the 314th Tactical Airlift Wing at the base, said Wednesday in a telephone interview the charges are against Maj. Patrick Hayes, 41, of near Cabot.

He said Hayes also is charged with violating Air Force regulations by drinking alcoholic beverages within eight hours of reporting for duty at a missile complex and by drinking while on duty at a launch facility.

Hayes declined comment Wednesday.

The Air Force has suspended Hayes from missile duty. He had been assigned to the missile wing in Arkansas since July 1979. He is working with his defense lawyer, Stepp said.

Stepp said Hayes was carrying a pistol, common for officer members of the missile crews. He said Hayes was working at the silo near Plumerville in Conway County when the violations allegedly took place Jan. 23 and 24.

Two of the other three members of the crew reported Hayes' activity, Stepp said.

The Air Force spokesman declined to say what Hayes was doing at the time. He said it would probably come out during the trial. He would not comment on the level of intoxication or any of Hayes' actions at the time.

Results of drilling project published

BARTLESVILLE, OKLA. — Results of a drilling project just published by the Department of Energy could lead to improved diamond bit designs and reduced drilling costs for oil and gas wells, according to research personnel at DOE's Bartlesville Energy Technology Center.

The results of the two-year research project, conducted by Terra Tek, Inc. of Salt Lake City under contract to DOE, are detailed in the report, "A Study of Diamond Bit Hydraulics and Pressure Distribution While Drilling Under Downhole Stimulated Conditions with Full-Scale Instrumented Bits," report number DOE/BC/10119-20.

Single copies are available from the Bartlesville Energy Technology Center, Attention Bill Linville, P. O. Box 1398, Bartlesville, OK 74005.

C. Ray Williams, BETC's project manager for drilling technology, said that diamond bit manufacturers have had limited information on the distribution of pressure and hydraulic energy to aid in bit design.

The Terra Tek project was designed to develop such information to help alleviate inadequate bit hydraulics that lead to reduced penetration rates, "bit balling," and high wear of the diamond cutting structure.

The project tested two conventional models of 7-7/8 inch natural diamond drill bits. Drilling tests were conducted in Mancos shale under simulated deep-well drilling conditions to determine the distribution of pressure and hydraulic energy on the face of the bits, pumpoff forces, drilling performance, and horsepower requirements.

Among other conclusions, the report states that a significant amount of hydraulic energy is consumed within 1 inch of the center of the bit, approximately 8 percent of the total bit area. Pump-off forces accounted for as much as 25 to 30 percent of the total indicated weight-on-bit.

Rotary speed did not have a significant effect on the pressure and distribution across the bit face. Penetration rates were almost linear with respect to rotary speed and weight-on-bit.

Also, adding more weight-on-bit to equal the pump-off force caused significant increasesin the penetration rate without damaging the bit.

Two local seniors awarded merit scholarships

In the first of three major announcements to be made this year, two Midland students were named winners of corporate-sponsored four-year merit scholarships by the National Merit Scholarship Corporation (NMSC) today.

Ted Bernard, a senior at Midland High School, and Rodney E. Mack, a senior at Robert E. Lee High School, are two of 1,500 winners of renewable, four-year scholarships funded by sponsoring corporations, company foundations, professional associations, unions and trusts.

Bernard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bernard, of 2004 W. Missouri Ave., received an Atlantic Richfield Foundation Merit Scholarship and Mack, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Mack, of 2605 Camarie, received a Texaco Philanthropic Foundation Inc. Merit Scholarship.

Bernard, who plans to attend Trinity University to study business administration, is a member of the Midland High band, the newspaper staff, National Honor Society and the Junior Classical League. He is a band cheerleader and a recipient of four academic letters and a National Latin Examination Magna Cum Laude certificate. He has been designated as an honor graduate.

Mack plans to attend The University of Texas at Austin where he will study petroleum engineering. He is a member of the All-Region band and the National Honor Society for two years, and the Junior Engineering Club. He served as 2nd Lieutenant of the band, president of the German Club, and Rotarian of the Week. He is also the recipient of a Youth Optimist Award and a PTA Academic Award. He also has been designated as an honor graduate.

The 1982 National Merit Scholarship Program is the 27th conducted by NMSC and by the time it is completed, some 5,300 academically talented students will have received merit scholarships worth over $17.5 million.

Tne corporate-sponsored four-year merit scholarships are awarded to students who qualify as finalists in the competition and meetsponsor-preferential criteria, such as relationship to company employees, residence in plant community or college major and career plans the sponsor wishes to encourage. The value of each award ranges from $1,000 to $8,000 or more over the four years of college undergraduate study, and recipients will receive annual stipend payments from NMSC, which handles the competition and administers the scholarships for program sponsors.

Over 1 million high school juniors entered the 1982 competition by taking the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test, PSAT/NMSQT, in October 1980. Some 15,000 participants were designated semifinalists in Fall 1981. In each of the 50 states, the number named represents about half of 1 percent of the state's high school graduates.

Approximately 13,500 of the semifinalists advanced to finalist standing in the competition by meeting requirements that included being endorsed and recommended by their high school principals, submitting school records that confirmed high academic standing and substantiating their PSAT/NMSQT performance with equivalent scores on a second examination. Only finalists can win merit scholarships.

NMSC is an independent non-profit organization that was established in 1955 to administer the annual National Merit Scholarship Program, a nationwide academic talent search in which over 21 million high school students have participated to date. NMSC's efforts are devoted exclusively to scholarship activities financed by grants from a diversified group of about 600 sponsor organizations. By the time the 1982 competition is completed, NMSC's expenditures and commitments for some 73,000 merit scholarships awarded since 1956 will amount to more than $210 million.

In addition to the winners named today, over 3,800 merit scholars will be named in two other announcements this month. The names of about 1,800 winners of National Merit $1,000 scholarships will be announced April 22 and the names of about 2,000 recipients of college-sponsored four-year merit scholarships will be announced April 29.

DANNEMORA, N.Y. (AP) — Inmates at the maximum-security Clinton Correctional Facility continued a boycott at the prison's mess hall for a third day Wednesday to protest an alleged "disrespectful attitude" on the part of guards, officials said.

About 800 of the 2,700 inmates at the prison refused to eat meals prepared for them in the mess hall starting Monday, state Department of Correctional Services spokesman Louis Ganim said, but by Wednesday night the number had dwindled to 600.

Ganim said most of the inmates involved were able to buy food at the prison commisary.

To Our Customers, The Used Car They Buy Is A New Car.

In many cases, a family budget just won't stetch to include a brand new car. And this is where a quality used car makes good sense.

FRANK SEE

As far as we are concerned, that used car is really a new car to the family that buys it.

And we take extra care to make sure our used car customers enjoy every bit as much satisfaction and pride as our new car customers.
