U.S., British envoys hurt in Beirut blast; Two Americans killed

By TERRY A. ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A van filled with explosives and driven by a suicide commando ran a hail of gunfire and blew up today a yard from the U.S. Embassy annex in an east Beirut suburb, severely damaging the building and reportedly killing 23 people. The U.S. State Department said two Americans were among the dead.

Lebanese military sources put the total number of casualties at 23 dead and 60 wounded, but could not say how many were American and how many were Lebanese. At the blast scene, officials supervising the rescue reported two Americans were killed and 21 wounded.

Among the injured were the U.S. and British ambassadors. Neither man was seriously hurt.

Richard Murphy, assistant secretary of state for Mideast affairs, said in Washington that two Americans and at least four or five Lebanese employees of the embassy were among the dead.

The names of the dead were not immediately available.

The explosion ripped a 6-foot-deep, 16-foot-wide crater in front of the six-story annex and injured people inside and outside the building. The Voice of Lebanon radio estimated the van carried 330 pounds of explosives. Murphy said the vehicle, which he described as a small pickup truck, bore forged Dutch diplomatic license plates.

Islamic Holy War claimed responsibility for the blast. The same shadowy terrorist group also claimed last year that it blew up the U.S. Embassy in west Beirut, killing 63 people, and the twin bomb attacks on U.S. Marines and French peacekeeping troops, in which 299 servicemen died.

American and Lebanese guards said they fired at the speeding van today as it scraped through concrete anti-vehicle barriers on the road next to the embassy annex. British bodyguards waiting outside the annex for their ambassador said they fired at the van and hit it several times.

Despite the gunfire, the vehicle rolled to a spot directly in front of the main entrance to the annex and exploded.

Lebanese Red Cross officials at the annex, which is in the east Beirut suburb of Aukar, said they had taken 15 bodies from the wreckage two hours after the blast, and had treated 18 wounded. Abu Jawdeh hospital officials said they had received two bodies and treated 40 wounded.

The blast occurred at about 11:45 a.m. (4:45 a.m. EDT), and the U.S. and British ambassadors were meeting on the top floor of the annex at the time. U.S. political officer David Winn said neither U.S. Ambassador Reginald Bartholomew nor British Ambassador David Miers was seriously hurt in the blast.

Both ambassadors were taken to Abu Jawdeh hospital in Christian east Beirut, where they were seen conscious and talking.

President Reagan said the explosion was part of "the worldwide terrorist movement," which he said "threatens our people whereever they are in the world because these groups are opposed to everything we stand for."

But, Reagan told reporters as he left for a political swing through the Midwest, "You have to live and do you have to do your best to protect yourself. But you have to know that these terrorist groups are threatening all over the world."

First reports from Lebanese military sources had said the 48-year-old Bartholomew sustained head and chest injuries and was in intensive care. Reagan and the State Department denied the report.

Winn said he rushed to Bartholomew's office after the explosion."When I first got to his office, Ambassador Bartholomew was pinned under the rubble," he said. "We (Winn and Miers) had to pull him out."

Winn said that at the time of the blast, there may have been "30, 40 or 50 people in the building. It depends on how many were in the visa line."

U.S. Marine Cpl. Larry Gill said he was on duty at the front entrance of the annex when the attack occurred."We heard shooting, saw it (the van) skidding, then the lights went out," he said.

Gill, of Mobile, Ala., suffered cuts and bruises. He said he had been partially buried in the rubble, but "I think I'm okay."

The wreckage of the vehicle used in the attack lay about five yards from the main entrance to the annex building. The Dodge or Chevrolet van exploded a yard from the annex entrance.

One diplomat on the scene said, "Our guards shot at the car and tried to stop it, but it got into the compound and exploded right here" — pointing to the spot in front of the entrance. The diplomat also spoke on condition of anonymity.

Other witnesses also said embassy guards opened fire on the approaching van. There was one report that a U.S. Marine killed the driver of the van just before the explosion.

State Board of Education won't include Midlander

From Staff and Wire Reports

AUSTIN — The new State Board of Education is a big step toward making Texas' public school system one of the nation's finest, Gov. Mark White says.

"What we've tried to do is build in this 15-member board all of the life experiences necessary for bringing this school system into preeminence," White said Wednesday after appointing the new members.

Katherine Pearcy Raines of Cleburne was named to represent the 14th district encompassing Midland County. Pete Snelson of Midland, who was one of three candidates considered for appointment to the 14th district, was not selected.

Contacted this morning, Snelson said, "this was not a mountain I set out to climb. I was nominated for appointment based on my qualifications and experience in education.

I'm not acquainted with her (Mrs. Raines). But I'm sure she's a very fine person. It's unfortunate that the whole Permian Basin will not be represented on the board," he added.

Midland Independent School District Board President Parker Humes added, "I'm very disappointed that Pete Snelson was not appointed. I don't know of anyone more qualified with the educational knowledge of public schools in Texas. And of course, I'm also disappointed that we in the Permian Basin will not have a representative on the board," he said.

MISD member Ronald A. Britton said of the selection, "I don't know that much about her. I only know of her and her reputation. Maybe she will do an outstanding job. But I would have felt much better had we had someone representing Midland or Odessa.

"The entire education bill was a very poor one and part of that is the selection of the 15-member board. I hate to see our state board of education become a political football and be taken out of the hands of elected officials," he said.

The new board members, who must be confirmed by the Senate, replace the current 27-member elected panel which got repeated criticism from White and the Select Committee on Public Educataion.

Although it reverts to an elected panel in four years, the new board will implement the sweeping reforms enacted by the special session of the Legislature this summer.

In announcing the appointments, White said he found the mix he wanted between those experienced in education and those experienced in business and management.

"I think we have a good balance between business leaders, a demonstrated talent for managerial leadership, for leading large organizations successfully," White said.

"You'll find we have teachers on this board, probably more than we've had at any time in the history of this state. We have local (school) district members ... We have a strong commitment from those individuals there."

The 15 names were chosen from a list of 45 — three in each of the new districts — submitted by a panel of legislators. The new members and their districts:

1st District, Maria Elena Flood of El Paso, assistant professor at Texas Tech's health sciences center; 2nd, Mary Helen Berlanga, a Corpus Christi lawyer who served on the elected board; 3rd, Pete Jose Morales Jr., a former president of the Devine school board; 4th, Voily C. Bastine Jr. of Houston, a lawyer and elected board member.

Mondale, Bush step up their verbal attacks

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

President Reagan is heading into the Farm Belt today after moving this week to help debt-ridden farmers, as Walter F. Mondale attacks him on the environment and says the president "put a 'for sale' sign on our public lands and a 'for rent' sign on our wonderful beaches."

Reagan's trip to Cedar Rapids, Iowa, today capitalizes on a series of presidential actions in the past week that may aid farmers, including his move Tuesday to increase federal loan guarantees for farmers and to defer repayment of some government loans.

While the Democratic presidential nominee was on the West Coast sharpening his "Fighting Fritz" attacks on Reagan, Vice President George Bush was stepping up his rhetoric too, saying the Democratic ticket — which trails badly in most recent polls — was desperate and collapsing.

"These kamikaze attacks are nothing more than the politics of desperation of a campaign going down in flames," Bush said Wednesday night in Columbus, Ohio.

"... And on the subject of nuclear arms negotiation especially, they've lost all sense of proportion," said Bush, who was campaigning in New England today.

Mondale was in Seattle today for a union convention before flying back to Washington to attend a Hispanic dinner. Running mate Geraldine Ferraro was in Dallas before heading to California.

Reagan was going to Michigan after his Iowa stop, campaigning with former President Gerald R. Ford in Ford's former hometown, Grand Rapids.

Besides his move on farm loans, Reagan may have helped himself among Midwestern farmers with his move last week raising limits on grain sales to the Soviet Union.

New GNP figures reveal slowing of economy; Inflation also down

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy has slowed dramatically from its breakneck pace of the first half of the year, but inflation has edged down also, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department reported that the gross national product, the broadest measure of the nation's economic health, was increasing at an annual rate of 3.6 percent from July through September.

That preliminary estimate for growth in the current quarter marks a pronounced slowdown from the 10.1 percent pace set in the first three months of the year and the 7.1 percent revised estimate for the period from April through June.

The slowing of economic growth had been widely expected, given a string of weaker business statistics released in recent weeks.

Security licensing plan reveals fears

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

State legislation that requires licensing of all security officers and alarm systems installers is being met with open arms by some area security companies while the state agency is realizing its fears were founded.

Passed by the 1983 Legislature, the bill requires all private security personnel and alarm systems installers to be licensed in the state. The bill is an expansion of a 1975 law which requires only armed security officers to register with the Texas Board of Private Investigators and Private Security Agencies.

Through the licensing procedure, criminal histories have been discovered in 30 percent of the unlicensed private security personnel and alarm systems installers investigated since Jan. 1. There are 60,000 uncommissioned officers and systems installers in the state, according to the executive director of the state board.

"What we feared was out there was out there," said Clema Sanders. "We're doing a criminal history check on those people who have never been checked before."

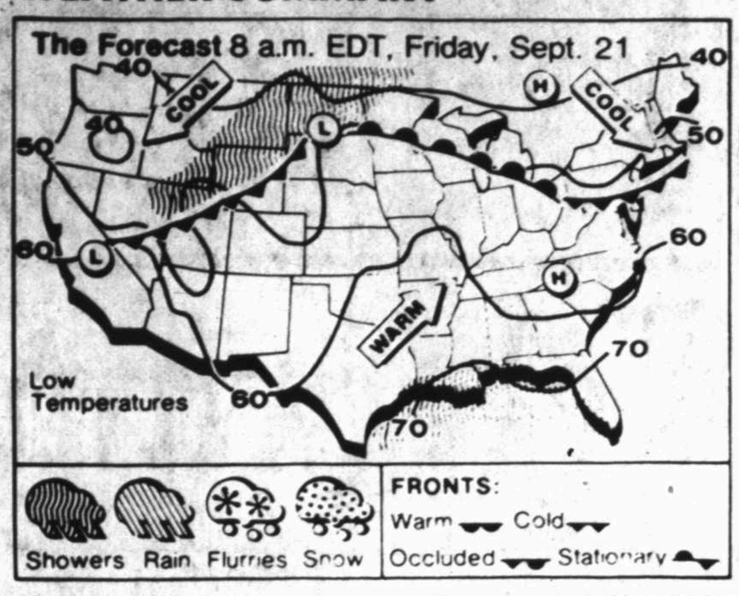

Of the 23,000 who have been investigated, about 7,000 were found to have criminal records preventing them from working in the security business.

Any person with a felony conviction or a misdemeanor conviction of "moral turpitude," within the last seven years is prohibited from employment as a private security officer or an alarm systems installer.

Ms. Sanders defined moral turpitude as "lying, cheating or stealing."

BOARD

5th William V. McBride, a retired Air Force general and president of the San Antonio Chamber of Commerce.

6th, Charles Duncan of Houston, former president of Coca-Cola Co.; 7th, Carolyn Crawford, director of psychological services at Beaumont Independent School District; 8th, Jack Strong, a Longview attorney and former state senator; 9th, Rebecca Canning of Waco, former consultant with the Texas Youth Council and a former high school teacher; 10th, John Prescott, a Texas A&M professor.

11th, Jon Brumley of Fort Worth, president of Southland Royalty Co., an oil and gas firm; 12th, Fred Bucy of Dallas, president of Texas Instruments; 13th, Emmett Conrad, a Dallas physician who served on the Dallas school board; 14th, Katherine Raines, a former teacher and a trustee of Cleburne Independent School District; and 15th, Paul C. Dunn of Levelland, a dentist and member of the Levelland Independent School District board.

White said he would pick one of the 15 to be chairman, adding that he considers all qualified for that post.

Although several of the new board members were nominated for the non-salaried jobs by billionaire H. Ross Perot, who headed the Select Committee, the governor denied that Perot had any undue influence on his selections.

"I would hope that everybody likes these appointees. I suspect there might be some he (Perot) doesn't like, but I didn't ask him if he liked them all or not," White said.

The board will include three Hispanics, two blacks and five women, White said.

"It's an increase in the absolute percentages for Hispanics and blacks" over the current board's makeup," he said.

The governor said the new board will give more guidance to administrators and teachers in the nearly 1,100 local school districts than the present board has.

"Rather than this kind of wavering that's out there right now, there'll be direction given, and instructions and information," he said.

GUARDS

"It's a catch-all," said Everett Butler, branch manager of Network Security West Texas Inc. at Midland Regional Airport. "If they (employers of private security companies) don't like what you did, they can say no (to hiring you)."

At Network, the company does its own background check on all potential employees, Butler said. But because the Department of Public Safety, which does the criminal history checks for the State Board of Private Investigators and Private Security Agencies, has access to more complete data through computers, whatever the private companies miss, the state more likely will catch.

The bill, sponsored by State Sens. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, and J.E. "Buster" Brown, R-Lake Jackson, stemmed from a 1981 murder of a Houston theater director, who was strangled by an unarmed security guard, according to a spokesperson for Doggett.

"A person doesn't necessarily have to have a gun to hurt you," Ms. Sanders said. "This (bill) is going to do tremendous things for the security industry in the state."

Under the new law, security firms have 10 days to send in "blue cards" which contain personal information and history, and fingerprints of all new armed and unarmed security guards and security systems installers. Most companies, prior to sending the material to the state board, have run their own checks on potential employees.

Those seeking jobs who balk at the background checks "have no choice," Butler said. "If they don't fill out the paperwork, they don't work.

Although provisions for appeal hearings are included, the forms may be a "sore spot" to some employees, Butler said.

"It's just necessary paperwork," he said. "It's not a problem, really, because it's a nice safeguard."

Tom Booth, manager of Security Guard Service in Midland, agreed: "I think this is a good deal. I like it. It helps get a better quality of security guards.

"It should benefit the public," Booth said. "In the past, you could pick up any nut off the street, put a gun on him and let him be a security guard. It's not like that anymore."

"I think the industry has come an awful long way," said Bill Cooksey of the Odessa College Law Enforcement Division. "There used to be really very little regulation."

In 1975, the law was passed regulating security guards carrying weapons. When the unarmed guard was charged in the Houston murder, "the board did catch a lot of flack," he said. "But really it was just one situation.

"Certainly, we feel like security guards are in the protective business and have a responsibility. They do provide security for private industries and, therefore, it's certainly good that we do have some regulation and provide some training," said Cooksey.

Odessa College has been offering courses for security personnel for four years and armed guards for two. The material covered in the 30-hour security guard course is mandated by the state board.

"We're in the business and we know the 30 hours aren't enough," Cooksey said. "But it's a start. We tried to get the rule changed to 40 hours but they started off with 16 hours, so it's been improving."

But the demand is surpassing the supply. "Our school really can't stay up with the need," he said.

The increase in private security, which has spread from residential protection to that at nightclus, shopping malls and office buildings, is due in part to better burglary and fire insurance rates offered by some companies to those who hire security guards.

But the main reason is an increase in crime.

"The public police aren't able to provide the level of security they have in the past," he said.

GNP

Some economists had feared the drop would be more pronounced, predicting the GNP rate could dip as low as 2 percent.

The more moderate growth rate is welcomed by most economists as a signal that the recovery from the 1981-82 recession can be sustained without kicking up inflationary pressures.

Indeed, the latest report contained good news on the inflation front. An index of prices tied to the GNP declined for the second consecutive quarter. The index rose at an annual rate of 2.9 percent in the third quarter, down from a 3.3 percent pace in the second quarter and a 4.4 percent rate in the first quarter.

The combination of low inflation and strong growth, especially in the first half of the year, is expected to give the country its best economic gains in more than three decades.

The Reagan administration has predicted that GNP growth for the entire year should be 7.2 percent, the best rate since 8.3 percent growth in 1951. That would compare to a 3.7 percent gain in 1983 and a 2.1 percent decline in 1981 as the country was mired in its worst recession since the end of World War II.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said the new report showed "the economy has shifted down to a more moderate and sustainable growth rate." He predicted that growth for the "foreseeable future" would average about 4 percent.

Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson Lehman-American Express said the 3.6 percent growth estimate was neither too big or too small. A higher number would have sustained fears the economy was growing too quickly while a lower number might have spawned worries of a recession.

"Politically, it is an ideal number," he said. "The luck of the Irish is holding."

In its report today, the Commerce Department said that it had made no adjustments for the effects of the auto strike against General Motors Corp., which began last week. However, it estimated that if the strike lasts at its current level for the final two weeks of the quarter it would shave no more than 0.3 percentage points from the preliminary 3.6 percent estimate of GNP growth. It gave no predictions for the impact if the strike drags on into the fourth quarter, which begins in October.

The smaller third quarter growth rate reflects "a sharp slowing in the increase in final sales," the report said. In this group, the report said that personal consumption spending showed the greatest decline. This confirmed earlier reports showing that retail sales posted back-to-back declines in July and August.

Consumer spending has been a main force driving the recovery, but most economists were predicting the rapid gains in this area would slow as pent-up demand was satisfied.

But the government reported that business investment, which has also been a key force in the recovery, is expected to post a substantial gain in the third quarter.

In addition to the lower estimate of growth for the current quarter, the report also reduced slightly its estimate of growth in the second quarter from an earlier 7.6 percent down to 7.1 percent.

The departent said this revision stemmed from a weakening in the trade area and smaller revisions in business investment and government purchases.

The GNP figures are expressed with the effects of inflation factored out. Before this calculation, GNP increased at a 6.6 percent annual rate in the third quarter to a new annual total of $3.64 trillion. The increase before adjusting for inflation was 10.7 percent in the second quarter.

The department also reported today that after-tax corporate profits declined 0.3 percent in the second quarter following a 6.8 percent gain in the first quarter. The second quarter decline had originally been reported last month as a 1.5 percent gain.

The unemployment rate, after hitting a low of 7.1 percent of the civilian labor force in June, went back to 7.5 percent in July and remained at that level in August.

For the past two months, the index of leading economic indicators — the government's main forecasting report — has registered declines, the first back-to-back monthly setbacks in 2½ years.

Retail sales also registered declines in July and August, as did housing starts, which the government announced Wednesday fell to their lowest level since December 1982.

ATTACKS

And his rejection of the steel industry's request for import quotas may also please farmers, who had feared quotas would prompt retaliation against U.S. farm exports.

Campaigning on opposite coasts Wednesday, Reagan and his challenger provided contrasting imagery in describing Reagan's first term.

"There is a new mood in the country these days. Uncle Sam is seeming mighty jaunty," Reagan said in Waterbury, Conn. "... I see our country today and I think it is springtime for America."

Mondale, in San Francisco criticizing inaction on toxic waste, acid rain and other environmental threats, said: "Come see America, Mr. President, and see what you've done to it and what you refuse to do to protect this country. ... Take a trip with me and see what your policies have done to America."

At an outdoor rally that drew thousands of people in downtown San Francisco, Mondale received the endorsement of the Sierra Club, the first time in its 92-year history the 200,000-member enviromental group has backed a presidential candidate. He also picked up the support of Friends of the Earth, another environmental group.

Mondale accused Reagan of being isolated in "a question-free zone," of campaigning through "photo opportunities" that lack substance, and of refusing to say what he would do in a second term.

He said Reagan refused to enforce clean air and clean water laws, and citing the federal fund set up to clean toxic waste dumps, said the administration "turned the 'superfund' into a superfraud."

"He put a 'for sale' sign on our public lands and a 'for rent' sign on our wonderful beaches," Mondale said.

"And then Mr. Reagan's pollsters told him he was getting in trouble," said Mondale.

Ferraro breakfast tickets selling like hotcakes

DALLAS (AP) — Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro's first venture in the Republican stronghold of Dallas looks like a sellout, according to the organizers of Dallas for Ferraro.

"Between 3,000 and 4,000 tickets" have been sold for a fund-raising breakfast for Ms. Ferraro at the Fairmont Hotel here this morning, said Kathleen Livingston, one of the organizers.

"It's double what we expected," Ms. Livingston said Wednesday. "We have literally taken over the entire downstairs of the Fairmont."

The political experts say Ms. Ferraro has injected some excitement into the underdog Democratic ticket in Texas.

"Ferraro is one of the better things Mondale has going for him in Texas," said Democratic pollster George Shipley of Austin. "She is drawing strong crowds, better than Mondale."

Shipley also said polls show that the flap over Ms. Ferraro's financial disclosure had only a "minimal" negative effect.

Republican pollster Lance Tarrance of Houston disagrees. He thinks the shine Ms. Ferraro put on the ticket is fading.

"At best, it's a wash," he said Wednesday.

Tarrance, who polls in the Sunbelt, regards the conservative, success-oriented Dallas as hostile territory for the Democratic ticket.

"Dallas seems to be everything Mondale-Ferraro is not," Tarrance said, expressing surprise at the numbers of tickets organizers say they have sold to the Ferraro fund raiser.

David Butts, a spokesman for the Mondale-Ferraro Texas campaign, said the vice presidential candidate is in "hot demand" for appearances all over the state.

The Dallas trip is Ms. Ferraro's second visit to Texas. In August, she campaigned in Austin, Houston and San Antonio.

Ms. Livingston plans for a sitdown breakfast in the Regency Room of the Fairmont were revamped because of brisk ticket sales. Now, guests will dine buffet-style in three rooms instead of one, she said.

While most of the guests at the $40-a-plate affair are from the Dallas area, Ms. Livingston said tickets have been sold all over the state.

Ms. Ferraro is also scheduled to speak at a rally on the campus of the University of Texas-Arlington before leaving in midafternoon for Ontario, California.

'Yellow Rose Campaign' blooming all over state

DALLAS (AP) — Polly McFadden and Josephine Garner may not seem to have much in common.

Ms. McFadden is a 34-year bank vice president in El Paso. She is on the board of directors of the 30,000-member National Association of Bank Women and calls herself a feminist who is "married" to her work.

Mrs. Garner is a 76-year-old widow and retired history teacher in the tiny northeast Texas farming community of Ravenna. She is the president of the Fannin County Democratic Women's Club, which boasts between 30 and 40 regular members.

But Ms. McFadden and Mrs. Garner are united by the historic candidacy of Geraldine Ferraro, the first woman to run for vice president on a major party ticket.

They have been recruited by something called the Yellow Rose Campaign.

Its organizers hope the fledgling Yellow Rose can harness the enthusiasm of Texas women for Ms. Ferraro and turn it into votes for the underdog Democratic ticket on Nov. 6.

The Yellow Rose has a paid staff of one and $2,000 in the bank. It operates out of a back room at Mondale-Ferraro campaign state headquarters in Austin.

"It's really a shoestring operation, but I think it will work," said Claire Korioth, the paid coordinator.

The Yellow Rose is the brainchild of State Treasurer Ann Richards, someone with a healthy respect for female voting clout.

Ms. Richards, the state's first woman treasurer and the first woman to win statewide office in 50 years, says the enthusiasm generated by a female candidate helped make her the party's top vote-getter in 1982.

"After I got home from (the Democratic National Convention in) San Francisco my phone rang off the wall with women who wanted to do something," Ms. Richards said Wednesday

The Yellow Rose was born under the auspices of the Texas Democratic Party during its convention Sept. 7 and Sept. 8.

Ms. Korioth, who says she "became a raging feminist at the ripe old age of 48," has spent most of the time since then on the telephone, lining up coordinators across the state.

"We emphasize working through existing organizations like business and professional women's groups, PTA's and social service organizations," she said.

Democrat: GOP behind anti-abortion protests

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle says he believes the national Republican Party is behind many of the anti-abortion protests which have dogged recent campaign appearances by Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro.

"We have a strong suspicion that a lot of these demonstrations...are orchestrated by the Republican Party. I feel very strongly that those are not spontaneous demonstrations. It's 1984's version of dirty tricks," Slagle said Wednesday.

Slagle, saying most voters have yet to make up their minds, also voiced confidence that Walter Mondale can overcome his poor showing in the opinion polls and defeat President Reagan.

"I feel very confident about it. Every poll we look at shows the folks believe he (Reagan) is pro-big business, pro-big banks. He does not represent people like me, average folks," Slagle said.

His comments came at a news conference called to announce the appointment of Texas First Lady Linda Gale White as state chairwoman of a Mondale fund-raising effort.

The effort will organize fund-raising parties in private homes on Oct. 7, to be based around a half-hour national television broadcast sponsored by the Mondale campaign.

"The polls show Mr. Reagan is leading in the race. That's one of the main reasons I'm taking a lead role in this campaign," Mrs. White said.

"Four more years of a president who's giving unlimited funds to a perilous arms race while he allows arms control talks to collapse is a president we literally can't afford," Mrs. White said.

Slagle said about one-third of the voters won't make up their minds until three weeks before the Nov. 6 election, and many will wait until the last 72 hours before election day.

"We think we're going to win by getting out the vote," Slagle said, adding that proceeds from the Oct. 7 parties would be used for mobilizing Democratic voters.

As have other Texas Democrats this year, Slagle noted that Gov. Mark White trailed Republican Gov. Bill Clements in opinion polls during the final stages of the 1982 campaign, but White still won.

Slagle also sharply criticized Reagan's abilities, saying the president apparently doesn't know what much of his own administration is doing.

"I think Ronald Reagan knows less about the government of the United States than any president we've had since Calvin Coolidge," he said.

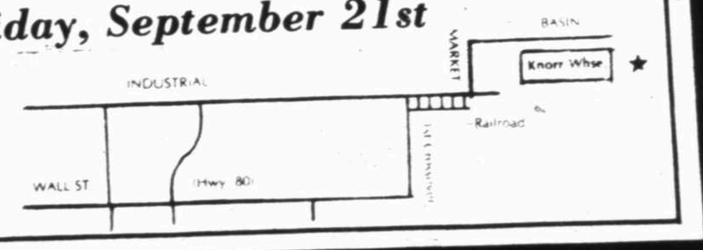

Mrs. White said she believes the presence of Ms. Ferraro on the ticket was a big boost for women and Democrats.

Police say they have photographs of suspect in killing of four people

HOUSTON (AP) — Police believe they have photographs of a suspect who murdered four people, including a 3-year-old girl, and seriously injured a fifth in an apparent robbery.

Investigators found the pictures Wednesday as they searched the house in a quiet, middle-class neighborhood where the bodies were found, said police spokesman J.C. Mosier. He declined to release the photos or further details.

Officers also were questioning the only survivor, Jesse James Lewis, 35, at a Houston hospital where he was in serious condition late Wednesday with a gunshot wound in the forehead, Mosier said.

After Tuesday night's attack, Lewis crawled through a bathroom window to summon help, police said.

"His information could be vital," Mosier said at a news conference Wednesday. "He is the only living witness except for the suspects."

Mosier refused to comment on any possible motive aside from robbery.

Killed in the attack were the owner of the house, Larry Gentry, 36; Lloyd Armstrong, 25, who lived in the same neighborhood; Beverly Ann Clark, 21, of Victorville, Calif., and her daughter, Christille Lakey, 3. Each had been shot in the head, police said.

Neighbors said a teen-ager who had been visiting the house walked out as two men in a white Cadillac pulled up. But they said there were frequent visitors at the home.

"That's why no one thought anything of that Cadillac in the driveway," said a neighbor who asked not to be identified.

Mosier also refused to comment on the car, except to say, "We have heard the same reports."

The Houston Chronicle also reported an investigator at the scene said police found a floor safe with its door open inside the house.

Death Row inmate seriously burned in attack

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A Death Row inmate was in fair condition today after he was seriously burned in a firebombing incident at the Texas Department of Corrections Ellis I Unit, authorities said.

Calvin J. Williams, 24, a black man condemned to death for the 1980 murder of a Houston travel agent, suffered second- and third-degree burns on his legs Wednesday when a flammable liquid was thrown on his legs and matches and a homemade bomb tossed into his cell, prison spokesman Phil Gurthrie said.

Williams was flown from the prison near Huntsville to Galveston's John Sealy Hospital for treatment.

"He had enough sense that he turned his mattress upside down, putting the bomb between his bunk and the mattress. That's probably the only thing that saved his tail," said Walker County Chief Deputy Ted Pearce.

The bomb did not explode but added a new twist to months of violence in the Texas prison system, where more than 280 inmates have been stabbed, including 13 fatally, this year.

Guthrie said the incident, the second attack on Williams in the past 17 months, appeared to stem from a grudge between the victim and his attackers.

"The victim is black and the suspects are white, but we are more inclined to look at this as personal animosity rather than as a racial or gang-related incident," he said.

Guthrie identified the two suspects as Warren Eugene Bridge, 24, and James Michael Briddle, 29.

Bridge, a Georgia drifter, faces death for the Feb. 10, 1980, slaying of a 62-year-old Galveston convenience store clerk.

Briddle was sentenced to die for the Feb. 24, 1980, killing of a South Houston man. Officials say the Californian has belonged to a white supremacist prison gang, the Aryan Brotherhood, and wears the swastika and lightning bolt tattoo of the group.

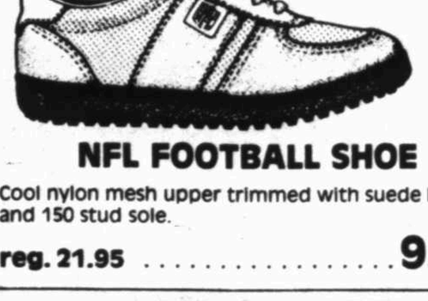

The bomb, about the size of a soft drink can and equipped with a fuse at one end, was removed from the cell by a prison guard and later detonated in the prison yard by officials from the Fort Hood bomb disposal squad, Guthrie said.

There were no reports of further injuries in the 8 a.m. attack.

Williams, convicted of the June 2, 1980, strangulation of Emellie Anderson, was stabbed April 20, 1983, after refusing the homosexual advances of another Death Row inmate, officials said.

Couple acquitted of child sexual abuse charges

CHASKA, Minn. (AP) — Robert and Lois Bentz vowed to regain custody of their children after they were acquitted of abusing their 6-year-old son and four other children in the first trial involving two alleged child-sex rings in a small farm town.

But prosecutor Kathleen Morris, blaming the verdict on the jury's refusal to believe child witnesses, said she'll fight the reunion and press the prosecution of 23 other Scott County residents.

"It'll be nine months tomorrow since they took them away from us," a jubilant Mrs. Bentz said Wednesday night after a jury of eight men and four women acquitted her and her husband.

"All we want now is to get the kids back. ... I just hope she isn't vindictive enough to fight us," she said, referring to Ms. Morris.

The case against the Bentzes was based on testimony from six children, including two of the couple's own, that they had been sexually abused.

Since last year, 24 adults and one juvenile, including a police officer and a county deputy sheriff, have been accused of involvement in two child-sex rings. The Bentzes were the first to stand trial.

The cases have split the small farming town of Jordan, about 40 miles southwest of Minneapolis, with some townspeople charging that prosecutors had gone overboard.

The Bentzes originally were charged with 24 counts each of sexually abusing children. District Judge Martin Mansur dropped half the charges Aug. 6, leaving each facing 12 charges and a maximum of 40 years in prison.

"The nine-month nightmare is finally over," said Bentz, embracing his attorney, Earl Gray, after the verdict. "The real celebration won't come till the children are back."

Asked if he was bitter, Bentz responded, "Of course we are. We got our kids pulled away from us for no reason.

"This whole thing is going to cost us more than $200,000 before it's over. That's a lot of money for a family living from paycheck to paycheck," said Bentz, an assembly plant worker for the Ford Motor Co. in St. Paul.

Ms. Morris said that, despite the acquittal, she planned to fight moves by the Bentzes to regain custody of their three boys.

"All this means is that I didn't prove my case beyond a reasonable doubt. This proves that people don't believe kids," she said.

Ms. Morris said the outcome of the case "doesn't affect in the least" the other cases she is prosecuting on sex abuse charges. "We're going ahead with another trial Oct. 1."

"The hard thing," she said, "is going to be telling those kids that adults don't believe them. We aren't at a point in our society where kids get a fair shake."

The prosecution's case was weakened early in the four-week trial when Mansur threw out the testimony of James Rud, a garbage collector who claimed he had seen the Bentzes engage in sex acts with children.

High SAT scores hailed as sign of recovery

NEW YORK (AP) — Leading politicians and educators hailed a strong rise in the average Scholastic Aptitude Test scores as fresh evidence that a 20-year slide in public education may be ending.

The College Board announced Wednesday that average math SATs were up three points to 471 in 1983-84, while average scores on the verbal section of the exam rose one point from the previous year to 426.

Education officials particularly noted the strong showing by women and future teachers. Seniors expressing an interest in majoring in education improved their math performance by seven points to 425, and by four points to 398 in the verbal section. Many educators have voiced concern over the steadily declining caliber of new teachers.

The SAT exam is scored on a scale of 200 to 800, with 800 a perfect score. Nearly a million college-bound high school seniors take the SAT each year.

Mary Hatwood Futrell, president of the National Education Association, the 1.6-million member teachers union, said the higher scores were a "positive signal that teachers are doing good work in the classroom." She added she was "particularly pleased" at the showing by prospective teachers.

President Reagan, addressing a political rally Wednesday in Waterbury, Conn., hailed the SAT gains, but was more reserved in his praise. "It's not enough. We've got to do better," he said.

"Significantly, the increase in this year's math average can be attributed largely to women, whose scores rose four points over 1983, while men's rose by two," College Board president George H. Hanford said at a news conference. Women still trailed men, however, with males averaging 495 in math, compared with 449 by women.

Verbal score averages were up in 32 states, fell in eight and were unchanged from 1982-83 in 10 states. Math scores rose in 37 states, declined in 11 and were unchanged in two, the board reported.

Iowa led the nation with average math scores of 570 and verbal scores of 519 — but only 3 percent of that state's high school graduates took the exam last year.

Montana tallied the biggest year-to-year gain. Verbal scores of 490 and math scores of 544 were a total of 19 points higher than the previous year.

South Carolina, where 49 percent of high school graduates took the test, scored the lowest average — 419 on the math, 384 on the verbal.

Hanford said the nationwide gains meant that "instruction in the schools has been improving and high school students are giving greater attention to academic study." But he added there's a long way to go before schools made up the losses in test performance over the last 20 years.

The erosion in average SAT scores has been cited as proof that public education has deteriorated. Hanford insisted, however, that "SAT scores do not paint a complete picture of the state of American education."

In Washington, Education Secretary T.H. Bell said that "we have some encouraging signs that we are involved in an academic recovery period. It is a modest preliminary indication that we just might have an academic rally going on."

"Teachers and students during the '83-84 school year adopted a little of the slogan of Avis Rent-A-Car: they were trying harder," he said.

San Diego mayor, associates indicted

Copley News Service

SAN DIEGO — Mayor Roger Hedgecock and three political associates Wednesday were indicted for perjury and conspiracy to violate election laws in connection with his 1983 mayoral campaign.

The 15-count indictment alleges that Hedgecock, former J. David & Co. principals Nancy Hoover and J. David "Jerry" Dominelli, and political consultant Tom Shepard designed a scheme as early as 1981 to secretly funnel massive amounts of J. David money to Hedgecock and his campaign.

Hedgecock, Hoover and Shepard denied any wrongdoing and said they are confident of being found innocent. Dominelli, charged with bankruptcy fraud, is in federal jail and unavailable for comment.

Hedgecock's chief of staff, Mike McDade, had also been a target of the grand jury but the district attorney did not seek to indict him.

Pollster Bob Meadow, who testified under grant of immunity, was listed as an unindicted co-conspirator.

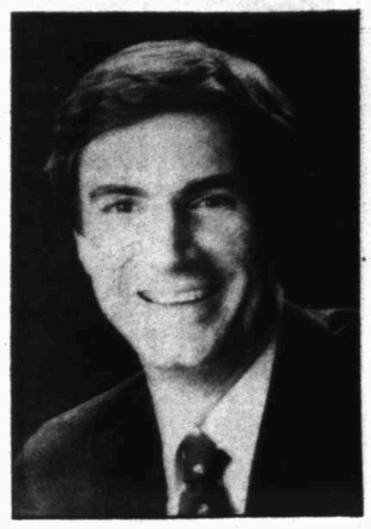

The San Diego County grand jury, which had heard six weeks of testimony behind closed doors, returned the indictment after less than two hours of deliberation. The foreman refused to discuss the case.

In addition to the single count of conspiracy, the indictment charges Hedgecock and the others with 14 counts of perjury in connection with failing to report contributions and financial dealings as required by law.

All 15 counts are felonies.

A single count of perjury carries a maximum prison sentence of four years and a $5,000 fine. But under California's complex sentencing laws, the maximum prison term for all the counts probably would not exceed eight years.

For the 38-year-old Hedgecock, a conviction would also mean he would lose his license to practice law and would, by municipal ordinance, be removed from office.

Roger Hedgecock

Hedgecock, who has repeatedly stated that the grand jury investigation was a political vendetta by his longtime political opponent, District Attorney Edwin Miller, said he was not surprised by the indictment.

"Since last week we have known the DA kept from the grand jury evidence submitted by me that conclusively demonstrates nothing was done wrong by either me or my campaign committee," Hedgecock said.

Hedgecock, facing a Nov. 6 re-election fight, said he will not resign in the face of the indictment. He added: "It's only as devastating as you let it be."

He said the indictment "is composed of the same old rehash, slander and innuendos. When the facts come out, these charges will be found to be false."

House denies use of drug for pain

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill allowing the use of heroin to treat the pain of dying cancer patients for whom no other drugs proved effective has been soundly defeated in the House.

It voted 355-55 Wednesday against the legislation, which was opposed by the Reagan administration and by the American Medical Association.

Minority appeal

It may have been something of an oddity when the Rev. Jesse Jackson organized a campaign to register voters earlier this year while seeking the Democratic nomination for president. Jackson's effort seemed to focus attention on the minority vote, a bloc many believe has been overlooked far too long.

Now more and more politicians are seeking that minority voting strength and there's additional credibility for that effort. In a recent edition, American Demographics noted: "By 1982, according to the Census Bureau, blacks of voting age numbered 17.6 million, or 10.6 percent of all Americans of voting age. Hispanic Americans of voting age numbered 6 million, or 4 percent of the total.

"What this means, simply," said the magazine, "is that blacks and Hispanics for the first time have it within their power to elect or defeat national candidates and to shape national policy."

That voting clout could be visible in November, as the result of voter registration drives such as the one headed by Jackson's campaign and other organizations. "... turning such potential into reality requires massive voter registration and then turnout at the polls in November and all the Novembers to come. Both blacks and Hispanics in the past have suffered from low registration and turnout. In 1976, for example, only 49 percent of voting-age blacks cast a ballot, and only 32 percent of Hispanics, compared with 61 percent of whites."

Whether the turnout is in evidence this November likely will tell politicians and political-interest organizations if the voter registration effort was worthwhile. It also should tell politicians at all levels of government whether attempting to appeal to minority voters is meaningful to their potential constituency.

Voting strength can only be exerted at the polls.

Another View:

Line-item veto fake

President Reagan asserts at every opportunity that something called the line-item veto would enable him to conquer the runaway spenders on Capitol Hill. It sounds reasonable, but it's a fake.

Every president has chafed at the practical impossibility of rejecting individual programs in otherwise acceptable appropriations bills. To get at one such item requires vetoing an agency's whole budget.

Presidents since Ulysses S. Grant have asked for the line-item veto, to let them pick and choose. Every Congress, including the present one, has refused. Reagan now seems to prefer gaining the authority through a constitutional amendment — along with the balanced-budget amendment that's got more steam behind it.

The main thing wrong with Reagan's pitch is that a line-item veto would not be relevant to the overwhelming majority of government outlays.

Interest on the national debt can't be item-vetoed. Nor can entitlement programs, because they have no lines to veto. Any Social Security, Medicare, farm subsidies and the like gets them, automatically. As for military spending, Reagan has proposed more budget lines than Congress has passed. There are also hundreds of billions more in tax benefits that are expenditures in all but name and contribute to deficits just as much as direct outlays. They wouldn't be affected at all by a line-item veto.

That leaves less than 15 percent of the budget, about $160 billion this year, not much of which can be touched if the government is to function. That's the amount left to pay for things like weather forecasting, federal highways and the census. So much for the urgency of the matter.

A further argument turns on the balance of executive and legislative powers. The president says Congress has proved incapable of controlling the budget so he needs this tool to do it himself. He had line-item power as governor of California and, as he tells it, thus saved the state from all manner of profligacy. Defenders of Congress's turf respond that a federal shift of power would shake the foundations of the Constitution.

Both sides exaggerate. It's wrong to blame Congress for most budget deficits; most Congresses pass largely what a president requests. But the log-rollers who stuff appropriation bills with each other's pet projects are also wrong to contend that a line-item veto would wreck the Republic.

The governors of 43 states have such a line veto, for the historical reason that American governors are more the boss than is the president — but the boss of much less. And state fiscal policies, in any case, have nothing like the federal government's responsibility for the total economy.

But there's no point worrying about an issue about which Reagan cares only casually. He asked for a line-item veto in last January's State of the Union Message but never even submitted a specific proposal. Even now the administration has no precise formula in mind. The line-item veto is a campaign slogan to divert attention from the horrendous deficits piled up in the Reagan years.

Army snafu changed man's life

WASHINGTON — For eight long years, thanks to a still unexplained bureaucratic goof, Robert F. Cooper was led to believe that he suffered from a mysterious, disabling disease. And even when he was able to establish the truth, his tormentors refused to correct the error that all but ruined his life.

Jack Anderson

Cooper's story is a nightmare out of Kafka — with a touch of "Catch-22" thrown in for good measure. It began in 1971, when Cooper, 23 and fresh from a two-year stint in the Army, joined the Washington, D.C., Metropolitan Police Department.

During his probationary year, Cooper was summarily fired. Under the rules, no reason for dismissal had to be given. But Cooper's superiors volunteered just enough information to scare the daylights out of him. They told him he was let go because he had a disabling medical condition.

Cooper was understandably terrified at the thought that his body was under attack by some dreadful malady. He also found he couldn't get other work because of the medical mystery. He decided he had to know what was wrong with him.

After eight years of dogged petitioning, Cooper was finally allowed to look at the police records on his dismissal. The documents identified the mysterious affliction that had caused Cooper's firing: enuresis, the medical term for bed-wetting.

Cooper was dumbfounded. He had never been a bed-wetter. Where had the police department gotten such a crazy idea?

It turned out that the erroneous diagnosis was contained in Cooper's Army medical record, which had been sent to the district government.

Without ever examining Cooper, or even interviewing him, the police department's supervising physician accepted the Army's false diagnosis and jumped to the conclusion that Cooper wasn't macho enough to be a cop.

In a memo reviewed by my associate Indy Badhwar the doctor wrote: "Bed-wetting represents deep-seated personality conflicts and a degree of unassertiveness which is a serious handicap in functioning in the expected role that a male plays in our society."

Cooper demanded reinstatement because he said he had been fired on false grounds. The district's personnel department sent him this incredible response: "There exists no medical examination which would determine in fact that the disqualifying condition (i.e., enuresis) exists, nor is there any sound reason to believe it does not."

In other words, the bureaucrats admitted there was no way to be sure Cooper was a bed-wetter, but they refused to give him his job back because there was no way to be sure he wasn't.

Cooper then appealed to the Army. In November 1980, Col. George R. Helsel, chief of the medical corps' inquiries branch, wrote that in his opinion Cooper had never been a bed-wetter, and that his medical record was simply wrong. The Army corrected the record by deleting all reference to enuresis.

The Army never explained how it had made its long-ago error, but in a deposition Helsel speculated that someone had confused "enuresis" with "urinary frequency" caused by drinking water.

"If you drink lots of water, then you have to go to the bathroom many more times," the doctor testified, adding: "It's a normal response."

Still rebuffed by the police department despite his vindication by the Army, Cooper went to court in 1982.

At the trial, police officials explained that they hadn't told Cooper the exact reason for his dismissal "in order to protect Mr. Cooper's feelings." U.S. District Judge William Bryant ordered Cooper reinstated with full back pay.

JUST ASK DIRECTIONS: As its name suggests, the Defense Mapping Agency supplies the maps and charts the armed services need for their sometimes far-flung missions. But the agency has a problem with its classificatons: It makes it tough for the right people to get maps, while letting secret maps get into the wrong hands. For example:

— According to one source, some of the ground troops in the Grenada invasion had to use air-reconnaissance charts insteaad of easier-to-follow ground maps of the island because of poor distribution. The ground maps didn't arrive until three days after the first troops landed.

Another source said the Marines had to rely on 19th century maps because it was considered too great a security risk to give them up-to-date maps.

— Auditors found "major inventory errors" and "the possible loss of classified products" by the map agency. In one case, DMA almost sold a classified map to an Oregon businessman for $10.71. In another incident last December, a series of classified charts were sent to an office in Canada; they were later returned.

— According to an internal inspector-general report, auditors ran a spot check of eight "war reserve stock" maps of potential trouble areas in Central America. "All eight line items were below 'war reserve stock' levels by significant amounts," the IG concluded.

GEORGE F. WILL

Genocide treaty 'dead letter'

WASHINGTON — Although Ronald Reagan has suddenly become the seventh President to endorse ratification of the U.N. treaty against genocide, a conservative senator from North Carolina — Jesse Helms, taking up where Sam Ervin of North Carolina left off in the 1970s — has put sand in the gears of the process. How, you ask, can anyone oppose a treaty opposing genocide? Easily, if you start by reading it. Perhaps Eisenhower did; in any case, he did not favor it.

George F. Will

The United Nations adopted it in 1948. President Truman favored ratification, but the Senate Foreign Relations Committee would not send it to the floor. Nixon was the next President to send it to the Senate, where Ervin tied the process in wholesome knots.

The treaty commits signatories to prevent and punish individuals responsible for genocide, which it defines as committing any of the following acts against a national, ethnic, racial or religious group: killing members of the group; causing severe bodily or mental harm to members; inflicting conditions designed to bring about the group's physical destruction in whole or in part; preventing births; taking children away from the group.

"In part"? "Mental harm"? Under this language any act of war can qualify as genocide.

The traditional conservative objection to the treaty is that it jeopardizes U.S. sovereignty, giving foreign powers a pretext for stigmatizing, in their courts or international tribunals, U.S. racial or foreign policies as genocidal. But a graver objection is that the treaty, far from being likely to be promiscuously invoked, will remain what it manifestly has been for more than three decades — a dead letter. Thus, ratification would be yet another instance of the bad habit of striking poses and considering them policies.

You say large deficits are bad things? Outlaw them. Amend the Constitution — verily, call a constitutional convention. You say genocide is a bad thing? Ban it. Take the genocidal to court.

The New York Times says, "Ratification would reaffirm and strengthen the world's capacity to act against mass murder." Oh? Something like genocide is being committed against religious minorities in Iran and elsewhere, and ethnic groups in Uganda and elsewhere. Would ratification make a particle of difference to U.S. policy — and if so, how, or why?

The Los Angeles Times says that ratification will put the United States "firmly on record in behalf of the rule of law." Wrong. Ratification will not disguise the fact that no one thinks of it other than as a gesture. How is the rule of law enhanced by an unenforceable tissue of miscast definitions — by a document that disregards the fact that international law, such as it is, is an intramural code for the like-minded, useful among nations that share common values but not germane to dealing with totalitarian or other gangster regimes?

The Washington Post says the treaty "allows the United States to make a clear moral statement." But acts of dubious morality do not make moral statements. Presenting this treaty as even relevant to the ongoing tragedy of genocide is an evasion of moral choice. Ratification deepens the moral self-satisfaction of the safe, while doing nothing for those in jeopardy.

The treaty had been ratified by nearly 90 nations in the mid-Seventies when genocide consumed Cambodia. The treaty was irrelevant. The way to have prevented genocide in Cambodia was to have won the war in Indochina.

Under the language of the treaty the Soviet regime is today, and has been for 67 years, guilty regarding its treatment of various national, ethnic and religious groups. If the treaty is ratified, would the United States promptly try to bring the Soviet regime to the bar of justice? Of course not; it is like pulling teeth to get even this conservative administration to issue congressionally mandated reports on Soviet violations of arms-control agreements.

No, the treaty would be just another pretty patch on the quilt of hypocrisy typified by the Helsinki process, in which we solemnly discuss the rights of trade unions and journalists in the Soviet bloc, where there are no trade unions or journalists. Under the genocide treaty the United States would solemnly commit itself to act against certain crimes; then by not acting, the United States would, inferentially, acquit the Soviet regime of the crimes.

After 44 months of allowing the treaty to gather dust, the administration, two months before an election, has dusted it off. No doubt some deep thinker is thinking about the Jewish vote. One can imagine what survivors of the Holocaust think of a treaty perfectly designed to restrain through its moral authority any regime that believes in both genocide and the rule of law.

ART BUCHWALD

Stork saga tale of bird control!

With all the controversy going on about abortion and contraceptive devices, it's time to have a Remedial Sex Education course for adults.

As everyone is aware, a baby is delivered by a stork.

Art Buchwald

The question is, how does the stork know if the person wants a baby or not? The answer is, it doesn't.

The stork is a very dumb bird and never questions when it drops a baby on somebody's mat whether it is welcome or not.

Sometimes it dumps a baby at a teenager's house, other times it may deposit one with a family that doesn't have enough to eat, and on many occasions it delivers its package to somebody who doesn't even like children.

The stupid stork never thinks that an unwanted baby can grow up to be an unwanted adult, lacking in love and mad at the whole damn world. The bird doesn't hesitate to leave one at a door where there is no father, and the mother is forced to raise it all alone.

Years ago women got angry at the stork making so many mistakes. They demanded "stork control" and protection from unwelcome bundles on their steps. Bowing to pressure, American industry developed an entire array of anti-stork devices to scare the bird away. While not completely stork-proof, the devices did cut down on the number of indiscriminate deliveries the stork had been making.

Since the anti-stork mechanisms did no harm to the bird, they were sold in drugstores and were even made available free to those who couldn't afford them.

You would think that everyone would be happy to have devices on the market that could keep a stork from depositing an unwelcome baby on a doorstep.

But this doesn't seem to be the case. There are well meaning people in this country who fervently believe that storks should be permitted to deliver babies anywhere they please, no matter how much havoc it will cause in the future.

They are angry with anyone interfering in the stork delivery program. While no one challenges their belief that storks should be permitted to drop babies willy-nilly all over the place, many people are disturbed that they want to impose their views on others who feel differently about the matter.

The pro-storkers accuse people who don't want babies of being stork killers, and they demand all anti-stork remedies be taken off the market.

They want to close down any private or government agency that advises women on how to keep the stork away from their door. They refuse to accept the fact that while their teachings have made the stork infallible, other people in the world may have some reservations about the bird swooping down unannounced on a stoop or tenement apartment.

The stork issue has become the most emotional one in the American political campaign. The pro-stork and anti-stork factions are splitting the country.

At the moment, the law of the land is that if you want to keep a stork from dropping a baby on you, you can legally do so. But the pro-storkers are working feverishly to change this, so you have to take delivery whether you want to or not.

The majority of women in the country insist they should decide for themselves whether they want a bundle of joy from the big bird or not.

The majority of men couldn't care less because when they're out to have a good time the last thing they think about is a stork.

Student says Mondale hecklers coached by Reagan campaign

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Local Reagan campaign officials incited and coached students who heckled Democratic presidential nominee Walter F. Mondale during a speech at the University of Southern California, one of the students said.

The hecklers, who provoked angry responses from Mondale, appeared at Tuesday's rally on the urging of local Reagan-Bush campaign officials, said Ellis Reyes, 19, who identified himself as a member of the Trojan College Republicans organization.

The officials positioned people carrying pro-Reagan signs to afford maximum exposure to the television and still cameras covering the event, Reyes told the Los Angeles Times Wednesday.

"The Mondale people started calling us 'fascists,' that kind of thing," Reyes said. "We started chanting 'Reagan-Bush,' that kind of thing. Mondale seemed to get upset."

State and college Reagan campaign officials denied the allegation and condemned the hecklers. The anti-Mondale demonstrators were also rebuked by the USC Student Senate in a resolution passed Wednesday night.

Mondale lashed back at the hecklers, comparing them to dirty trickster Donald H. Segretti, one of several USC alumni who worked in former President Richard M. Nixon's re-election campaign in 1972.

"You are going to lose this election, because you are not showing respect for the American people," Mondale told one woman who was yelling at him from the crowd.

Jim Dutra, a spokesman for the California Reagan-Bush campaign, denied any organized effort to disrupt Mondale's speech, as did Tony Semon, a USC student campaigner for Reagan, who said: "The chanting, the foul language, was not organized."

Semon said he and other Reagan-Bush campaigners tried but failed to restrain the hecklers.

A spokeswoman at the local Reagan-Bush headquarters, who declined to give her name, said Wednesday that the headquarters sent materials and personnel to the campus for the demonstration. She said she was not there, and did not know whether Reyes' account of the demonstration was correct.

Inmate becomes seventh person executed in Florida this year

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — James Henry, who denied killing an 81-year-old civil rights leader, died in the Florida electric chair today, the seventh person executed in the state this year.

Henry, 34, electrocuted minutes after a court-imposed stay expired, was the ninth person executed in Florida since 1976 and the second this month. Twenty-five people have been executed nationwide since the U.S. Supreme Court reinstated the death penalty in 1976.

The execution was carried out despite pleas from national civil rights leaders that the inmate be spared.

About 30 demonstrators — a few supporting capital punishment — held vigils in a pasture across the street from Florida State Prison as a black-hooded executioner put Henry to put death with 2,000 volts of electricity administered over 60 seconds.

He was pronounced dead at 7:09 a.m., four minutes after the electricity was turned off.

The Supreme Court on Wednesday turned down Henry's appeal in a 7-2 decision. But the court prevented the first double execution in the nation in 19 years when it rejected 8-1 a request by state officials to electrocute convicted child-killer Aubrey Adams today.

Henry was under his second death warrant for the March 24, 1974, murder of Zellie Riley of Orlando.

At a prison news conference, Henry maintained his innocence, but apologized to the dead man's family.

"Most of all I would like them to know — and this is not an admission of anything — that I'm sorry for their grief," he told reporters Tuesday. "I know that's not a whole lot but it's from my heart."

Henry, who said that he believes in God and life after death, was visited Wednesday night by a girlfriend and family members, but declined a visit from a minister.

William R. Hearst III

Hearst named as publisher of Examiner

Hearst News Service

William R. Hearst III has been named publisher of the San Francisco Examiner.

The appointment was in effective Wednesday. It was made jointly by Frank A. Bennack Jr., president and chief executive officer of The Hearst Corp., and Randolph A. Hearst, chairman of the board of Hearst and president of The Examiner.

The new publisher will report to Robert J. Danzig, vice president and general manager of the Hearst Newspapers.

Bennack said: "The Hearst Corp., today one of the nation's largest and most diversified media companies, had its genesis here in San Francisco when William Randolph Hearst assumed control of The Examiner in 1887. It is especially pleasing to witness our founder's grandson, on the eve of our centennial, rise to the role as publisher of the distinguished newspaper that was the first Hearst publishing activity.

"Will Hearst has an excellent record in a variety of positions he has held within our company and outside it. We are confident he will bring energy, talent and well-rounded experience to his new position as publisher of The Examiner."

Hearst, 35, is a graduate of Harvard University. From 1972 to 1976 he was a reporter and assistant city editor of The Examiner and shared in the Roy Howard prize for investigative journalism.

From 1976 to 1978 he left Hearst Corp. to be managing editor of Outside Magazine. He rejoined Hearst at the Los Angeles Herald Examiner as an assistant managing editor, a post he held until he became West Coast development manager for The Hearst Newspapers, working directly for Danzig.

Since October 1982 Hearst has served as vice president of Hearst Cable Communications with responsibilities related to Hearst Cable Systems in the San Francisco Bay Area and the company's electronic publishing activities. He served as a director of Hearst Corp. from 1975 to 1977 and since his return to the company in 1979.

He and his wife, the former Nan Peletz, live in San Francisco.

Three killed in duplex fire

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Fire raced through a six-family duplex here, killing three people and injuring nine others, some of whom leaped from windows onto mattresses laid out for them by neighbors, officials said.

Among those injured were 11- and 13-year-old sisters and their 83-year-old grandmother, who jumped to safety from their third-floor apartment, said city Fire Director John Caufield.

Caufield said the fire may have been caused by someone playing with matches or smoking in bed, added that arson investigators were looking into the fire.

He identified the dead as Sylvester Huff, 32, Charles Jackson, 26, and Raymond Hampton, 11. The boy was found in a bathroom of an apartment, while the bodies of Huff and Jackson were discovered in a front room, Caufield said.

The eight injured included two sisters, Melissa Maddox, 11, and Stephanie Maddox, 13, who jumped from their third-floor apartment window, he said.

Pope John Paul II waves to the crowds assembled on the edge of Ottawa's Rideau Canal from his barge on Wednesday afternoon.

At final stop, pope calls for 'new vision'

OTTAWA (AP) — Pope John Paul II, at the final stop of his 12-day Canadian tour, appealed for a "new vision of humanity" without abortion, war and starvation.

"We cannot close our eyes, nor should we harden our hearts, in the face of untold suffering and needs that afflict millions of our fellow human beings," the pope, who flies back to Rome tonight, told Canadian leaders and foreign diplomats Wednesday.

"One person alone cannot change the world," said the pontiff. "But all of us together...will be able to create a peaceful and peace-loving society."

This morning was set aside for a private meeting with Canada's Roman Catholic bishops. Some bishops said touchy subjects such as clerical celibacy and the ordination of women might be raised with the pope, a stout defender of traditional doctrine.

World peace was the topic for the pontiff's last sermon in Canada this afternoon, when he says a Mass at a riverside park near downtown Ottawa.

The pope arrived in Ottawa on Wednesday in high style, cruising down the Rideau Canal through the center of town in a pontoon boat decked in flowers, waving to crowds lining the banks.

His first stop was at the Convent of the Servents of Jesus-Mary, across the Ottawa River in Hull, Quebec, where he said the simple life of nuns is "perhaps the protest that most urgently needs to be made to a society where profit-making efficiency has become an idol."

At his Government House reception, with Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, other government officials and the capital's diplomatic corps, the pontiff elaborated on his sweeping critique of today's world.

Society, he said, is "lacking in sensitivity when it does not allow certain facts to influence its action." His list was extensive:

—The absence of arms control agreements.

—The use of science to build weapons of mass destruction.

—Limited wars killing "people in countries not one's own."

—Abortion, which he described as "disregard for the value and dignity of unborn life."

—Experimentation on human embryos.

—Starving or undernourished children.

—Lack of basic health care.

—Massive flight to cities that cannot offer work, education or food.

—Loss of liberty, especially freedom of religion.

What is needed, the pope said, is "a vision that does not see society's problems in terms of economic, technical or political equations alone, but in terms of living people."

Such a vision, he said, "inspires action and overcomes complacency, insensitivity and selfishness."

John Paul took note that he was speaking for once to people who hold the power to enact many of the changes he demands.

"Is it not, in a particular way, the mission of all those entrusted with public responsibility — on the national and international levels — to promote this vision of humanity?" he asked.

Iraq says it attacked Iran's key oil terminal

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq said its armed forces attacked Iran's main Persian Gulf oil shipping terminal at Kharg Island today, damaging installations there in retaliation for an Iranian attack on two Iraqi ports.

A military spokesman announced in Baghdad that Iraq attacked "some facilities" on Kharg Island but did not elaborate.

The unidentified Iraqi spokesman, reading a communique over the state radio, termed the attack "a warning strike."

The reported attack was "in response to" a reported Iranian attack last Sunday against the Iraqi ports of Al-Baker and Al-Amiq in the gulf region, the spokesman said.

The statement did not say if the attack on the island was mounted by navy units or warplanes.

(But diplomatic sources in Manama, Bahrain, said the attack was carried out by Iraqi jetfighters.)

Iraq "is capable of launching destroying attacks against Iran's oil and economic installations," the spokesman threatened without further elaboration.

(Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency had reported that Iranian airplanes pounded the jetties of Al-Bakr and Al-Omaya on Sunday, set them ablaze and precipitated "extensive damage and considerable casualties.")

(The Iranian and Iraqi references to Al-Omaya and Al-Amiq appeared to refer to the same port. Al-Amiq is the name of the region and Al-Omaya is the name of the installation.)

(The Iraqis had not mentioned the attack until today.)

The state radio quoted the spokesman as saying the attack showed "the enemy that we are capable of dealing crushing blows to their oil and economic installations unless they discontinue their aggression and respond to the logic of wisdom."

Iraq in recent weeks threatened to "demolish" Kharg if Iran launched its long-expected ground offensive into the southern Iraqi Basra region. Iran has massed some 400,000 regulars and revolutionary guardsmen and volunteers for the Basra offensive.

(Iraq has attacked Kharg Island previously during the four-year war between the two nations.)

Iraq announced late last February it was imposing a sea blockade on Iranian ports, including Kharg Island 138 miles southeast of Iraq, to strip the Iranian government of "vital resources that finance its war machine."

Revised Tors have things hopping in Lamesa

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

Two critical junctures in a high school football season have already passed. From this point, the area teams begin earnest preparation for the district schedule.

The first important test came with the season openers, and the second was last weekend's games.

For teams that lost openers, last week was get back or get worried time. Only Crane and Rankin were in that boat, and they still are there after losses in week two.

For the winners, the status quo will do nicely.

In Lamesa, even coach Clyde Noonkester admits "the people are real high right now." After Lamesa's 2-0 getaway start, it is no wonder. Last year, Lamesa also won twice, but it took the entire season. Before that, the Tors had the firepower of a wet match, going 1-19 in 1981-82.

Yet desire, defense and dedication have made the Tors into the year's earliest Cinderella story. Noonkester only hopes midnight is far off.

"The team's effort has been good, but there was never a question of their effort," said Noonkester. "It's no surprise to us."

The Tors aren't doing it with mirrors, but with illusion. They can't really be 2-0 if one judges the book by the cover. Even Noonkester admits his team is generally outmanned.

"We're not blessed with a lot of natural ability," he said. "We're small, and we haven't played the toughest teams yet. But we'll be able to compete."

Area Football

Compete the Tors have done, and the defense has been the key in an opening 7-3 win over Levelland and last week's 14-8 stunner over Brownfield.

"The defense is doing a real good job. They're a swarming defense and they get after it," said Noonkester.

Then comes the most amazing fact of all: "We only average 156 pounds per player on defense." Lightweights can play heavyweight football, too.

IN SEMINOLE, the Tors face a true heavyweight size-wise. "They're a very physical football team, a power-type team," Noonkester said. "They just run right at you, which could hurt us. Their passing game is good. We can't let tham have a big play."

Big plays ruined Seminole in a 41-12 loss to Colorado City last week, but they ground out a 21-0 win over Coahoma to start the year off right.

Friday, however, Seminole will walk into a snake-pit. Not only is the team and the city of Lamesa fired up about the football fortunes, it's Homecoming.

"We're just trying to concentrate on the football game," said Noonkester. "They're great to have, but sometimes Homecoming is a distraction."

Greenwood has also been toeing up a glass slipper. The Rangers might have been penciled in to be strangers when playoff spots were passed out, but like Lamesa the Rangers are turning heads.

If a 12-0 win over Ozona in the season opener wasn't enough, last week's 29-0 romp over Water Valley was a guarantee. The Rangers are for real.

The Rangers travel to Fort Stockton to face Presidio Friday. When Greenwood was reclassified by the UIL a year ago, the automatic dates with A schools were dropped and the Rangers had holes to fill.

So did Presidio, and since the distance between the schools is so great, they agreed to meet in Fort Stockton.

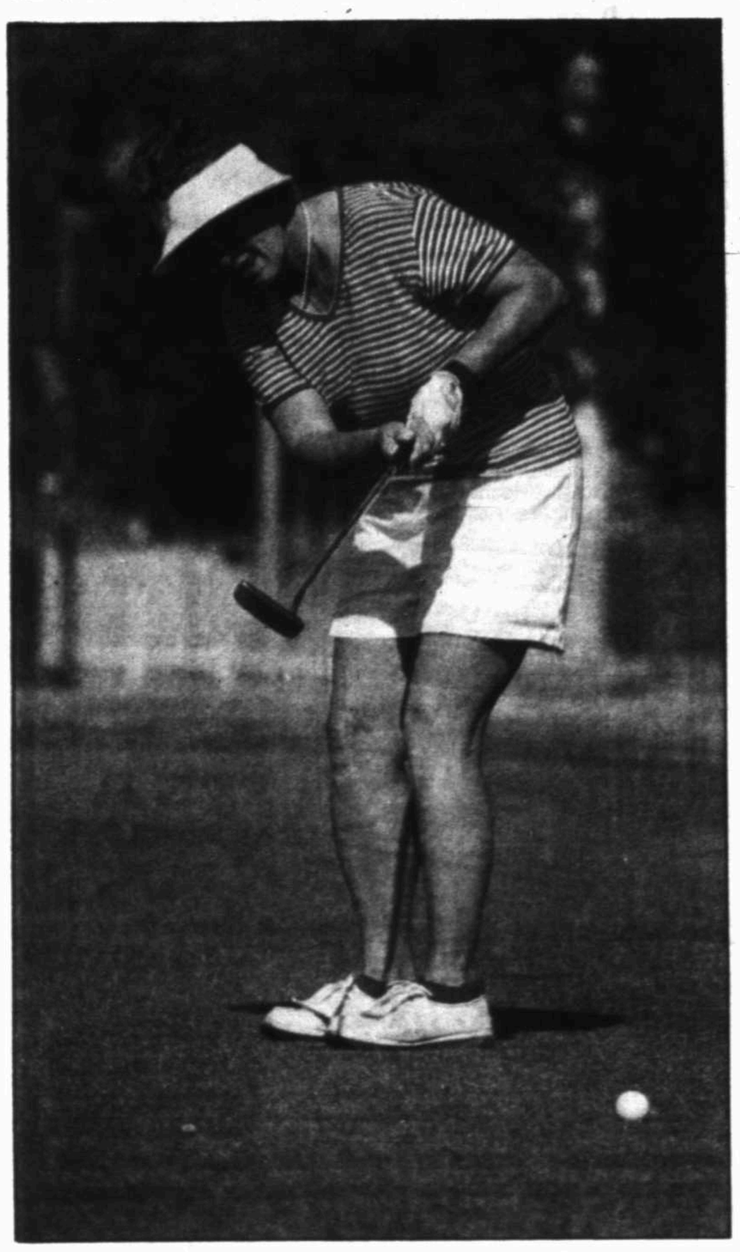

The road is long, but the Rangers have a fleet of talent where it counts. In the offensive backfield, Greenwood is loaded, and that's fine with coach Joe Longley.

Against Water Valley, senior fullback Roger Smith did his thing to the tune of 215 yards rushing on 14 tries. Smith ripped off TD runs of 81 and 30 yards in the rout.

A year ago Smith was gaining over 1,500 yards from the tailback slot. He had moved in from Ballinger and sparked the unproven Rangers.

It's deja vu. This year, a tailback moved in from Stamford-Frisch named Terry O'Steen displaced an All-West Texas player in Smith. The results have been awesome. O'Steen got into the act Friday with an 80-yard score of his own and tallied 137 yards on 10 carries.

Lee can't take Eastwood lightly

Execution, intensity keys for Rebel success

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Even though the Midland Lee Rebels are 2-0 and have outscored their opponents by a 61-7 margin, Coach Jack Tayrien isn't ready to say Friday's game against 0-2 El Paso Eastwood will be an easy task.

Too many things can still go wrong that could mar the Rebels' early perfect season record, one of which is over-confidence against a team Tayrien sees as a scoring threat.

"If we play to our capability, run our plays and execute, we'll be in a good situation against Eastwood," said Tayrien. "I'm not saying we'll win the game, I can't predict that, but we'll be in a good situation."

On the other hand, should the Rebels not run their plays or execute properly...

"We're concerned about this game," said Tayrien. "You have to be concerned about every one you play. You can open a paper on Saturday or Sunday and read about high school and college football teams who lost a game they were supposed to win. We can't take Eastwood lightly. We're not good enough to go out and play poor football and expect to win, regardless who the opponent is."

EVEN THOUGH the Rebels have won by two decisive scores, Tayrien sees a lot of breaks that went Lee's way, especially in the 32-7 win over Temple last Friday. "We had no drives of any kind against Temple," said Tayrien. "Walter Jones broke a long one (scoring run), Tyrone Thurman broke one and the defense came up with the other three touchdowns. Todd Mitchell intercepted a pass and took it in for a touchdown, Tyrone broke an 83-yard punt return and Donny Rivas intercepted a pass and carried it to the nine."

Quarterback Dirk Bergoon finished the final yards aftr Rivas' interception for the score.

"Don't get me wrong, I like to see the long runs and big plays but we can't expect them in district play," said Tayrien. "Defenses in district have been more intense this year and have been noted for their play in past years."

Defense is one area Tayrien has been pleased with but also realizes that his defensive unit hasn't been placed in too much trouble yet and would like to see it stay that way this week against the Troopers.

"We've played two good defensive footbal games," said Tayrien. "The reason why is we've been playing with intensity and with good pursuit. We've had gang-tackling and good game plans that were carried out. But, if we put the defense with its back to the wall (consistantly), like a fumble in our territory, Eastwood has the ability to put points on the scoreboard."

AS IN past years, the Troopers are noted for their offensive passing attack and Tayrien expects the same this year. Also, being a team without a win makes Eastwood even more dangerous.

"This type of game will scare you because Eastwood hasn't won so far and will be at home for the first time," said Tayrien. "They are the type of team, regardless of past performances, that can score points. They've scored 47 in their first two ball games.

"They have an outstanding quarterback in John Brochu. A lot of colleges have been asking about him," said Tayrien. "They also have two good tight ends and a good flanker to throw to. When you haveplayers like that at skill positions, you have a good offensive attack.

THE REBELS are also taking their newly-acquired No. 9 Associated Press ranking into El Paso and like every coach before him, Tayrien said, "The ranking doesn't win games. I don't think it's ever won a game. Look at college football for instance. Already, there have been three different No. 1 teams."

If things work out, Padres can clinch West title today

Cubs drop magic number to three despite lop-sided loss to Bucs

Associated Press

The San Diego Padres are faced with a dilemma that any team would enjoy.

With a 5-4 victory over San Francisco in 10 innings Wednesday night, the Padres cut their magic number for winning their first National League West crown to two.

This afternoon, the Padres were to play the Giants and a victory would clinch a tie for the division title. If second-place Houston then loses to Los Angeles tonight, San Diego would win the West.

"It'll be kind of messed up if we win and then have to wait and see what happens in Houston," said Padres outfielder Tony Gwynn.

"I hope it's a nice celebration," San Diego Manager Dick Williams said. "I imagine there will be some bubbly iced from now on."

In other NL games, Pittsburgh clubbed Chicago 11-6, Philadelphia drilled New York 13-5, Cincinnati beat Atlanta 4-2, St. Louis blanked Montreal 1-0 and Los Angeles downed Houston 3-1.

Chicago's magic number for clinching its first NL East crown was reduced to three with New York's loss.

San Francisco reliever Scott Garrelts, 1-3, walked the bases loaded full of Padres with one out in the 10th.

Garry Templeton then grounded to second baseman Manny Trillo, who threw high to the plate. Catcher Bob Brenly made the catch, but pinch-runner Eddie Miller's slide jarred the ball loose for an error and allowed the winning run to score.

"He was pulled off the plate, but I thought he (Brenly) was a little anxious to try to pull out and throw to first," San Francisco Manager Danny Ozark said. "He held the ball, but the collision knocked it away."

Said Williams: "We'll take it."

Pirates 11, Cubs 6

Tony Pena hit a grand slam homer to highlight Pittsburgh's six-run sixth inning and Johnny Ray knocked in the winning run for the second day in a row as the last-place Pirates routed the Chicago Cubs 11-6.

It was the East-leading Cubs third loss in a row and second straight to Pittsburgh. The Cubs' magic number for winning the division title remained at four with the loss, and their lead was cut to 7½ games pending the New York Mets' night game at Philadelphia.

Larry McWilliams, 11-10, pitched five innings for the victory, giving up six runs, while Jimmy Winn pitched the last four innings, allowing two hits. Tim Stoddard, 10-6, gave up four runs in 1⅓ innings of relief to take the loss.

The Pirates scored a run in the first off Chicago starter Rick Sutcliffe with the aid of third baseman Ron Cey's error. Jason Thompson added a two-run double in the third to make it 3-0.

National League

The Cubs tied the game 3-3 in bottom of the third when Gary Matthews smashed a McWilliams pitch into the center field seats for his 13th homer and Keith Moreland followed with a solo shot into the left field bleachers.

Pittsburgh took the lead again in the fourth, when Jim Morrison doubled and scored on Doug Frobel's single.

Sutcliffe was knocked out with one out in the fifth but escaped with his 13-game winning streak intact.

Phillies 13, Mets 5

Philadelphia combined 15 hits, including four triples, eight walks, five stolen bases and five New York errors for a rout.

Jeff Stone went 4-for-5 — he's 21-for-41 against the Mets this season — to key the attack. Steve Jeltz, who entered the game batting .156, lined a bases-loaded triple to cap a five-run explosion in the first inning, during which New York starter Ron Darling, 12-8, threw 55 pitches.

Steve Carlton, 13-7, got the victory.

The host Phillies led 11-0 after seven innings. Kelvin Chapman hit a three-run homer in the ninth for the Mets.

Reds 4, Braves 2

In the second inning, Pete Rose cracked an RBI-double to give Cincinnati a 2-0 lead over Atlanta. It was the 725th double of Rose's career, tying him with Stan Musial on the all-time NL double list.

The hit was Rose's 100th of the season, extending his own major-league record of consecutive 100-hit seasons to 22. Rose now has 4,090 hits, leaving 102 shy of breaking Ty Cobb's career hit record.

Dave Parker followed Rose's double with a sharp single to center, and Rose was thrown out at the plate after running through third-base coach Joe Sparks' stop sign.

"That's $50," player-Manager Rose said in announcing that he was fining himself.

Duane Walker and Tom Foley each homered for the visiting Reds.

Cardinals 1, Expos 0

Danny Cox threw a three-hitter for his first major-league shutout as he raised his record to 9-10.

St. Louis scored the game's only run in the sixth off Steve Rogers, 6-15, when Ozzie Smith tripled with one out and came home on Terry Pendleton's sacrifice fly.

Dodgers 3, Astros 1

Jerry Reuss was the pitching star and Dave Anderson was the hitting hero.

Reuss tossed a four-hitter for just his second victory since coming off the disabled list on July 12. He is 4-7 this season.

Anderson had three hits, including a run-scoring triple, as visiting Los Angeles broke Houston's six-game losing streak.

Waldo, unlike Lynn, would be a streak hitter

"Consistency, thou art a jewel." — William Shakespeare.

"Consistency is the hobgoblin of little minds." — Ralph Waldo Emerson.

It is clear Ralph Waldo never played major league baseball. He loved wild bursts of spontaneity ("I wish to write such rhymes as shall not suggest a restraint but contrariwise the wildest freedom"). Ralph Waldo would be in baseball what the game calls a "streak" hitter. Baseball prefers a sluggish stream of dependability. That's why it surrounds the game with decimal points.

Frederic Michael Lynn of the California Angel Inconsistents is not a streak hitter. He is one of the most gifted strikers of the ball in the game. He is a picture ballplayer. His day-in, day-out level of play is impeccable. No one hits or catches a ball with more skill and grace than Freddy Lynn.

Still, he can have the most brilliant bursts of incandescent baseball of any player who ever lived. Ralph Waldo Emerson would have loved him.

In 1982, in the league playoff series against Milwaukee, Lynn had probably one of the most spectacular displays of hitting in a short series this side of Babe Ruth. Against Milwaukee, he went 3 for 4, 2 for 4, 2 for 3, 1 for 3 and 3 for 4. He did it against right-handed pitching, left-handed pitching, relief pitching. He hit to all fields. He got two doubles, a home run, five runs batted in, he walked twice and he scored four times. His average was .611, the highest any regular ever batted in a championship series.

LYNN IS the only member of a losing team ever to be the Most Valuable Player in a playoff series. He is the only player ever to be Rookie of the Year and the MVP in the same year.

When Lynn first came up to the big leagues in 1975, the sportswriters weren't sure whether he should report to the Red Sox or direct to Cooperstown. He hit a baseball the way Sam Snead hit a golf ball — with seeming effortlessness. He held the bat over his head like a Roman candle, a la Carl Yastrzemski. And with similar results.

Brought up from the minor leagues and the USC campus, he hit .419 in a 15-game stretch at the end of 1974. In 1975, he terrorized the league. He hit the ball for 16 total bases in a single game in midseason, tying the league record. The people he tied included Ty Cobb and Lou Gehrig. He broke the league record for two-base hits by a rookie, 47. He led the league in runs and doubles and hit .331.

It was a tough act to follow but in 1979, he followed it, leading the league in batting and narrowly missing the Triple Crown with 39 homers and 122 runs batted in.

WHEN HE came to the Angels in 1981, the popular theory was that Autry got him for Wilshire Boulevard and everything south of San Marino.

The funny thing about Fred Lynn is that, in spite of the periodic exploits that light up the game, he yearns rather to be consistent. It's like a zebra dreaming of being a burro, a lion envying a camel.

In 1981, his first year with the Angels, Lynn was consistent. Injury-riddled, he was consistently lousy. Consistency is the hobgoblin of little averages, and Fred's was .219. He was a streak out.

The next year, the gloriously unpredictable Lynn returned. In one 13-game stretch in midseason, he slugged seven home runs and 22 runs batted in. He raised his average an even 80 points, he drove home 34 runs in 24 games. He hit 21 home runs and, in the playoffs, systematically knocked a succession of Milwaukee pitchers out of the box.

In 1983, he hit six home runs in one 11-game span, had 17 runs batted in in 11 games, had 17 multiple-RBI games and 33 multiple-hit games. In Lynn's case, inconsistency is not the jewel. But neither is runaway consistency.

This year, Lynn is carrying the Angels toward another playoff with what USC Coach Rod Dedeaux once called his "Fourth Of July" or bombs-burst-in-the-air type of baseball. Lynn has 23 runs batted in in his last 17 games and 44 in his last 44 games. His batting average on July 29 was .247. Today, it is .280. He has hit eight home runs in his last 16 games and scored 16 runs in his last 14 games.

FRED LYNN stood in a locker room the other night and tried to analyze what takes over when these moods strike. Can he feel the ghost of Ty Cobb settling in his cleat marks? Does he get a better look at the ball? Have the pitchers suddenly lost track of the pitches he can't hit? Are there any pitches he can't hit?

"What I'm trying to do is be a consistent hitter. Every big-league hitter is striving for that," he began.

"No, I don't think I'm seeing the ball any better when I'm getting these (multiple) hits. And I don't think the pitchers throw to any good hitter the same way all the time.

"I really feel it's just a matter of confidence. It's like in golf. You can visualize the ball going out there 240 yards in your mind, and often it does. That's the way I set up there. I know I'm going to hit it. And I do. When I don't, I know just what I did wrong and can correct it.

"No, I don't 'take' a pitch to see what the pitcher's best stuff is. Ted Williams could do that, but the rest of us need all the strikes we can get. I don't believe in spotting the pitcher the first strike, ever.

"I'd just say I feel good at the plate in these periods. Comfortable."

He does nothing differently? "No," says Freddy Lynn. "The only thing is, I try to be consistent. I'd like to be consistent."

A horrible ambition, you'd have to say.

REBELS

Facing a highly-ranked team gives Eastwood an edge in preperation. The Troopers know they have to play a great game and will come ready to do so. The Rebels, on the other hand, are facing a team they've trounced twice in years past, including last year by a 34-0 score.

"We won that game 34-0 but the score at halftime was only 7-0," said Tayrien. "If it hadn't been for their fumbles and turnovers, it could easily have been a tight football game."

The Rangers are also blessed at quarterback in Chad Longley, who has a direct line to coach and father. Longley is small by any football standards, and has beefed up to a stout 140 pounds this year.

But it works to effect, since Longley only wins. After an 0-2 start last year, the Rangers have gone 10-1. That sole loss came against Klondike by a 7-6 count in the playoffs.

In other area action this week: Alpine is at McCamey (2-0); Crane (0-2) is at Stanton (1-0-1); Water Valley visits Rankin (0-2); Big Lake (2-0) hosts Ozona; and Levelland treks to Andrews (1-1).

Vincent denies he's 'tough act'

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Jan-Michael Vincent often plays tough guys, but he says he's innocent of knocking a man unconscious during a June 3 barroom brawl in Malibu.

Vincent, charged with one misdemeanor assault count, entered the innocent plea Wednesday during an arraignment in Municipal Court. A pretrial hearing was set for Oct. 17.

Sheriff's deputies said the 38-year-old actor punched John Bogasian, 42, of South Pasadena. Bogasian was knocked unconscious when his head struck the barroom floor, they said.

Vincent has appeared in many films and television series, including the TV mini-series, "The Winds of War," and the films "Tribes," "Damnation Alley," and "Going Home," for which he won a Golden Globe nomination.

Shaw

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Patricia Hearst Shaw, daughter of publishing magnate Randolph A. Hearst, has given birth to her second child — a 5-pound, 6-ounce girl.

Lydia Marie Hearst-Shaw was one month premature, Yale-New Haven Hospital spokesman Tom Urtz said Wednesday. Mother and daughter were doing well, he said.

Mrs. Shaw, 30, and her husband, Bernard Shaw, live in Westport and have one other child, a daughter, Gillian, 3.

Kidnapped from her Berkeley, Calif., apartment in 1974 by members of the radical Symbionese Liberation Army, Mrs. Shaw was a fugitive for nearly two years and participated with her captors in bank robberies until she was caught and convicted.

She was pardoned by President Jimmy Carter and freed from prison in 1979, later marrying Shaw, her former bodyguard.

Wednesday also was a big day for another branch of the Hearst family. In San Francisco, Mrs. Shaw's cousin, William R. Hearst III, was named publisher of the San Francisco Examiner.

ESCONDIDO, Calif. (AP) — Brad Anderson, who has delighted readers for 30 years with the cartoon adventures of Marmaduke, the awkward but lovable pooch, says he doesn't have a Great Dane for inspiration.

Marmaduke stars in his syndicated cartoon appearing daily in more than 600 North American newspapers, but Anderson said there's never been a "real" Marmaduke in his life. The character, Anderson said, is based on a bulldog owned by his mother and stepfather. Parts of its personality also come from dogs Anderson has met over the years, a sort of "everydog," the cartoonist said.

Anderson, 60, dabbled in grape farming and had thoughts of becoming pilot before settling on a career as a cartoonist.

"Cartooning kept taking over more and more, so finally I gave into it and went into it fulltime," said Anderson.

As for Marmaduke's name, it just sort of popped up one day.

"It's just a good name for a dog," he said.

Mandrell

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country singer Barbara Mandrell should be hobbling about by Saturday after surgery to put a foot-long steel rod in her leg bone, which was broken in a car accident, her doctor says.

Dr. David S. Jones, the orthopedic surgeon who performed the operation Tuesday night at Baptist Hospital, said the 35-year-old entertainer will regain full use of her leg. She should be abie to use crutches or a walker by the weekend, he said.

Miss Mandrell has been hospitalized since the accident Sept. 11. The driver of the vehicle that swerved into her car was killed.

Known for the hits "I Was Country When Country Wasn't Cool" and "Sleeping Single in a Double Bed," Miss Mandrell has canceled all public appearances for the rest of the year.

The singer-actress still will be in the hospital when her first made-for-TV movie, "Burning Rage," premiers Friday night.

JERUSALEM (AP) — Former Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin underwent surgery today for a prostate gland ailment, a spokeswoman at Shaare Zedek Hospital said.

The spokeswoman, Yaffa Alkelai, said she had no further details and that a news conference would be held later to release details of Begin's condition.

Begin, 71, was hospitalized last week suffering pains in the urinary tract. Doctors carried out a series of tests and said they found no signs of any malignant disease but that Begin would probably require surgery for a prostate gland complaint.

Begin resigned unexpectedly in September 1983, citing unexplained personal reasons. He was said to be depressed over the death of his wife the previous year and over Israel's continuing entanglement in Lebanon.

Since resigning, he has secluded himself at home and has only been seen in public once, when he moved from the official prime minister's residence last December.

Sinatra

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A biographer says Frank Sinatra only wanted to scare off her and her sources with a lawsuit which he has now dropped, saying it would serve "no further purpose."

Lee Solters, a publicist for Sinatra, announced Wednesday that the 68-year-old entertainer is abandoning the suit which accused Kitty Kelley of falsely claiming to be his official biographer to obtain interviews.

According to Solters, Sinatra had received assurances that Miss Kelley has not and will not mislead anyone into believing she is his authorized biographer. But Miss Kelley, of Washington, D.C., said no one has given Sinatra any such assurances.

"Mr. Sinatra not only sought to get an injunction against my book, he hoped to frighten me, to scare my sources ... and to scare off my publisher," said Miss Kelley, whose past books have included "Jackie O!" and "Elizabeth Taylor, the Last Star."

MOSCOW (AP) — Semyon K. Tsarapkin, a Soviet diplomat and disarmament expert, died at the age of 78, Tass reported Wednesday.

Tsarapkin was a member of the Soviet diplomatic corps since 1937. He served as minister of the Soviet Embassy in Washington from 1947-49 and spent five years as deputy representative to the U.N. Security Council. Tsarapkin served as Soviet ambassador to West Germany from 1966-71 and was appointed ambassador at large at the Soviet Foreign Ministry, a post he held until his death.

LYON, France (AP) — Paul Touvier, 70, the Lyon militia chief during the Nazi occupation who spent more than 30 years in hiding, died according to a death notice in Wednesday's edition of the newspaper Dauphine-Libere.

Touvier was twice condemned two death in absentia after the Allied liberation on charges of collaborating with the Nazis and executing and torturing members of the Resistance. In 1971, the late President Georges Pompidou pardoned Touvier. But in 1981, Paris Judge Martine Anzani issued an international arrest warrant against Touvier.

Philadelphia zoo sees aardvark born

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The first aardvark to survive birth at the Philadelphia Zoo, a 3-pound, 15-ounce baby that zookeepers christened Aarthur, is being cared for by humans because the mother initially ignored its baby, officials said.

The Philadelphia Zoo is one of only eight in the United States to house aardvarks, the long-nosed, pig-like African mammals that eat insects and ants and are known for their digging prowess.

Keepers discovered the foot-long newborn about 7:45 a.m. Wednesday, and immediately noticed that the mother was ignoring the new arrival. Aarthur was removed from the exhibit and placed in a heated incubator, where he will be hand-reared by surrogate mother Ann Hess, a veterinary assistant.

Zoo officials, who were not expecting the birth, plan to rear Aarthur until he is old enough to be reunited with his parents, Amy and Aarnold. Amy, who has been on breeding loan from the Miami Zoo, and Aarnold, on loan from the San Diego Zoo, are to be sent to San Diego before the end of the month.

Aarthur is the second aardvark to be born at the Philadelphia Zoo. Both mother and infant died shortly after the first birth there in 1969.

Baby Aarthur, which appears to be in good health, will be cared for around-the-clock by Ms. Hess, who is bottle-feeding him a milk-formula diet every two hours.

Opening lead: Three of ♠.

The recent Summer North American Championships in Washington made front page news in the world's press, though not in a way to bring joy to the hearts of bridge administrators. First, a team was suspended from the tournament for "improprieties." Then Edith Rosenkranz, wife of the developer of the Romex system, Dr. George Rosenkranz, was kidnapped and held for ransom. Sterling work by the FBI resulted in the safe return of Mrs. Rosenkranz, the recovery of the ransom and the apprehension of three suspects in the kidnapping.

The FBI investigation was not all that Dr. Rosenkranz had to admire in Washington. On this hand from an event prior to the kidnapping, it was the defense of his partner, Eddie Wold of Houston, that earned his plaudits.

North-South were playing five-card major opening bids with a forcing no trump response. South really had no reason to invite game with his hand, since he might have found his partner with an even weaker holding.

Wold led a club, and declarer captured East's queen with the ace. Ace, king and another trump left West on play, and a club return looks natural enough. However, declarer would win that and take three diamond tricks for his contract.

Wold found the killing continuation — a low heart! The defenders took their four heart tricks for down one. Why a low heart and not a high honor? The auction marked East with a doubleton heart. What if that doubleton did not include the queen? Then East probably held the queen of diamonds, and the defenders would get their three heart tricks anyway.

Angels narrow gap with 4-3 victory over Royals

Associated Press

It's the same three teams in the American League West Division race, only the order has changed.

By beating Kansas City 4-3 Wednesday night in 11 innings, the California Angels moved within 1½ games of the division-leading Royals and took over second place, one-half game ahead of Minnesota. The Twins lost their third straight, 7-3 to the Chicago White Sox.

Only a bad-hop single by Bobby Grich kept the Angels from falling 3½ games behind the Royals with 12 games to play.

"This was really a big win because now we're in second place and only chasing one team," California Manager John McNamara said. "It's a lot tougher to chase two teams instead of one."

Doug DeCinces led off the California 11th with a single and Rick Burleson was sent in to pinch run. He was advanced to second on a sacrifice bunt by Brian Dowing. Reggie Jackson was walked intentionally, setting the stage for Grich's good hop hit off Joe Beckwith, 8-4.

"I'm not going to say that I just put my head down and ran," Grich said. "I was watching the ball all the way wishing that it would take off. I knew it had a chance because I hit it with a lot of top spin and on this infield the ball has a tendency to pop up."

What had been popping up in the minds of many was that California was pulling a fold in its biggest series of the year. The Royals had taken the first two games of the series 10-1 and 10-0.

"In everyone's mind this was a must game," California reliever Doug Corbett, who pitched 3⅓ perfect innings, said. "We wouldn't have been mathematically out of it but it would have put a big damper on things if we hadn't come through."

Rod Carew came through for the Angels, tying the score 3-3 in the seventh inning with a pinch-single off reliever Dan Quisenberry. Darrel Miller led off the inning with a walk and Quisenberry relieved starter Danny Jackson. Miller went to second on Bob Boone's sacrifice bunt, but Quisenberry struck out Juan Beniquez and went 0-2 on Carew before the seven-time AL batting champion came through.

American League

White Sox 7, Twins 3

Pinch-hitter Steve Christmas hit his first major-league home run, a three-run shot that broke a 3-3, seventh-inning tie. Floyd Bannister, 13-10, allowed five hits in seven innings as the Twins lost their third straight to fall out of first-or second-place in the division for the first time since July 22.

Greg Walker led off the top of the seventh with a single. Two outs later, he stole second and pinch-hitter Roy Smalley was intentionally walked, setting the stage for Christmas, who was batting for Marc Hill. Mike Smithson, 15-13, took the loss for the Twins, who scored all their runs on homers, a two-run shot by Tim Laudner and Tom Brunansky's 32nd of the season.

Red Sox 10, Blue Jays 4

Dwight Evans continued his assault on Toronto pitching, hitting two three-run homers. Evans' second home run came in the Red Sox' six-run fifth inning that gave Boston a 9-1 lead. In the last two games in Toronto, Evans slugged four home runs and drove in 10 runs.

Mike Easler added a two-run shot in the fifth that gave Bruce Hurst, 12-10, the cushion he needed for his road victory since defeating California on July 21. Boston's Jim Rice took over the AL RBI lead when he drove in his 118th run of the season with a ninth-inning single.

Tigers 4, Brewers 2

With a reserve-filled lineup the day after they clinched the AL East title, the Tigers beat the Brewers as Jack Morris won his 18th game of the season, tying him with Baltimore's Mike Boddicker for the league lead.

Rookies Nelson Simmons, who had three hits, Scott Earl, Dwight Lowry, Mike Laga and Doug Baker supplied all the offense Detroit needed while Willie Hernandez, the last of four Detroit pitchers, worked the final inning for his 31st save.

Milwaukee had taken a 1-0 lead on Roy Howell's fourth homer of the season.

Yankees 6, Orioles 5

Don Mattingly drove in three runs with three hits to improve his batting average to .346, one point behind teammate Dave Winfield, the league leader who was rested Wednesday night by Manager Yogi Berra.

Joe Cowley, 9-1, allowed four runs on six hits in 6⅔ innings for his eighth straight victory. All the Baltimore runs scored on homers as Mike Young, Jim Dwyer and Rick Dempsey hit solo shots and Al Bumbry added a two-run blast for the visitors. Boddicker, 18-11, was the loser.

A's 8, Rangers 7

Garry Hancock drilled a two-out, bases-loaded single to cap an Oakland rally in the bottom of the ninth. The A's trailed 7-2 and scored two runs before Texas starter Charlie Hough was forced to leave with arm problems.

Carney Lansford tied the game in the eighth with a two-run single and Hancock made a winner of Steve McCatty, 8-14. Gary Ward drove in three runs for Texas and Buddy Bell knocked in two.

Mariners 4, Indians 3

Seattle's rookie duo of Alvin Davis and Mark Langston combined to down the visiting Indians. Davis' two-run, second-inning double proved to be the game-winner and gave the outfielder 112 RBI, the highest American League total for a rookie in 34 years.

Langston, 16-9, allowed four hits and struck out nine to increase his American League-leading total to 195. He was relieved by Edwin Nunez after surrendering a leadoff single to Carmen Castillo in the ninth. Pat Tabler followed with a home run off Nunez, who was relieved by Dave Geisel, who earned his third save.

Ali gets non-fatal diagnosis of illness

NEW YORK (AP) — Three-time former world heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali has been diagnosed as having minor symptoms of Parkinson's disease and not a fatal illness, his doctor said.

And the charismatic and controversial ex-boxer has vowed to overcome his undiagnosed problem.

"I'll whip this thing. I'll whip it," Ali promised Wednesday, adding he was not frightened by the prospect of fighting the disease.

"I'm not scared. They could tell me tomorrow, 'Ali, you have cancer of the heart, you've got six months to live.' I'll say I'm glad," the 1960 Olympic gold medal winner said. "I had a good life and was good to people and I'll be glad to meet Allah."

Ali was given test drugs at Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center earlier Wednesday "to see if it helps him and how much it helps him," said Martin Ecker, a diagnostic radiologist consulting on Ali's case.

"He's not in any danger. It's not a fatal disease," said Ecker, medical director of Ali's boxing management company. "You don't die from what he has and I feel very optimistic that what he has can be controlled by medication."

The 42-year-old ex-boxer said that his slurred speech and slow body movement could be the result of his boxing career.

"I've been punched a lot of times," he said. "I've been in the boxing ring now for 30 years and taken hard punches in fights and also in training preparing for the fights, so there's a great possibility something could be abnormal."

Ali underwent five days of tests at the Manhattan hospital this month before leaving Sept. 11 for a brief trip to Europe. He returned Tuesday for more tests and treatment.

He said while it was possible boxing had caused his problems, he never regretted his ring career because of the good it had allowed him to bring to other people.

"I'm glad I've been charitable all my life. I'm glad I gave away a lot of money. I'm glad I helped a lot of poor people," Ali said. The boxing great said he expected to be hospitalized for two more days.

Because Ali's condition was apparently not worsening and he lacked classic symptoms, doctors ruled out both Parkinson's disease, a degenerative brain disease, and "the punch-drunk syndrome," caused by repeated blows to the head, Ecker said.

When asked if boxing should be banned, Ali replied: "I think boxing is one of the less sports where people die, and if you're going to start protecting people because they're hurting each other then you got to stop a lot of sports and I don't think they can stop boxing because I'm ill . . . There are sports much rougher than boxing . . ."

Ali, the only fighter to have won the heavyweight boxing championship three times, had a 21-year career from 1960 to his retirement in 1981. His title was stripped in 1967 when he refused to be drafted into the Army for the Vietnam War. He won it back from George Foreman and later lost and recaptured it from Leon Spinks.

Ali's speech has been slurred for about two years. An interviewer in Germany quoted Ali as saying, "I always feel tired but don't feel pain at all . . . I don't know exactly what it is."

Former heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali signs an autograph at an impromptu press conference where he announced his recent illness isn't fatal and that he's going "to whip it."

Ecker said doctors also were unsure of Ali's precise aliment. "Obviously he has a neurological problem. It's not a progressive thing," he said.

"It's Parkinsonism," Ecker said. "By that we mean it mimics some of the symptoms of Parkinson's."

Asked if Ali's illness condition would worsen, he said, "We don't believe so. We hope not."

Hinkle's career-best score good for lead

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) - Slump-ridden Lonnie Hinkle left his driver in the bag, found the fairways with his 3-wood and — playing consistently from the short grass for this first time this season — compiled a career-best 62 that staked him to the first round lead in pro golf's richest tournament.

"This is almost like cheating, this playing from the fairways," Hinkle said Wednesday after he'd put an amazing birdie, birdie, birdie, birdie, eagle finish to his 9-under-par effort Wednesday in the Panasonic Las Vegas Invitational, which offers $1,122,500 in total prizes and $162,000 to the winner.

"Playing from the short grass is a lot easier, a lot more fun, than playing out of the woods and the water and the rough and the garbage and the bunkers, where I've been all year," said the long-hitting Hinkle, a non-winner since 1979.

The problem, he said, was with his driver. He has been unable to find a replacement for the one he broke in Houston more than a year ago.

"I've got the prettiest club you ever saw," he said. "And I can't hit it. I can't hit it at all. I just can't be as bad as I've been playing."

So, after driving into the rough off the first tee, he left the driver in the bag, used a 3-wood or iron off the tee and devastated the Las Vegas Country Club course.

"That was a lot of fun. There was a lot of laughing and giggling out there," Hinkle said.

The effort was built around that amazing finish, four birdies and an eagle on the last five holes; scores of 2-3-3-2-3, with a wide-breaking, 35-foot putt catching the cup for the eagle that gave him the lead in this 5-day, 90-hole event.

The format calls for the 176 pros to play one round on each of four courses at this desert playground, each day with a different, 4-man team of amateurs, before the field is cut for Sunday's pros-only finish at the Las Vegas course.

Fuzzy Zoeller, the current U.S. Open champion and the 1983 winner of this title, will not be among them.

Zoeller suffered a recurrance of chronic back problems — severe spasms — and, despite medical treatment Tuesday, was unable to defend his title. Zoeller was hospitalized for six days in August when back problems forced him out of the PGA National Championship and the World Series of Golf.

Corey Pavin, who is closing in on a money-winning record for a rookie, had a 63, also at the Las Vegas Club, in temperatures that reached toward 100 degrees.

He was followed by Dan Pohl, whose 64 was six under par at the Tropicana Club.

Scott Hoch and Canadian Dave Barr, both at Las Vegas, and Willie Wood, at Tropicana, had 65s.

Jay Cudd, Bill Kratzert and Jim Simons, all at Tropicana, and Jim Blair, Mike Donald and Gary Hallberg, all at Las Vegas, had 66s.

Rain delays Navratilova's bid at Evert Lloyd's streak

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Rain has delayed Martina Navratilova's bid to break Chris Evert Lloyd's 55-match winning streak in play at the Lynda Carter-Maybelline Tennis Classic.

A steady downpour washed out Wednesday's matches, postponing Navratilova's first-round contest against Melissa Brown.

The match between the world's top-ranked player and the 16-year-old from Scarsdale, N.Y. was rescheduled for today.

Navratilova's record chase received a boost Tuesday when the Women's Tennis Association ruled that a match Lloyd won on a forfeit 10 years ago should not count.

That reduced Lloyd's record from 56 and put her on a par with Navratilova.

It also meant Navratilova, 27, had actually tied the record by, ironically, beating Lloyd 4-6, 6-4, 6-4 in the finals of the U.S. Open earlier this month.

Navratilova refused to come to the press tent at the Bonaventure Racquet Club when the match was postponed, but Brown didn't mind talking about her place in history.

Facing the most important match of her career, Brown approached the Navratilova confrontation in a manner befitting her age.

"I have to play her sometime, it might as well be now," said the high school junior.

But she admitted, "I was pretty upset at first."

Brown said she could surprise Navratilova when the two meet in the third match of this morning's play.

Brown's top career performance came in the 1984 French Open when she beat Zina Garrison to reach the round of 16.

Navratiloa has won 99 of her past 100 matches. She has six straight grand-slam titles and has only lost five times in the past three years.

Proposed city plan presented to officials

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

During the growth boom of the late 1970s and early 1980s, City Hall fumbled with the football of development, passing it off from the staff to the Planning and Zoning Commission to the City Council.

On Wednesday, those same groups were given a glimpse at a comprehensive game plan for the future that should eliminate the fumbling. Colored maps dividing the city into seven areas were unveiled by the planning firm of J.T. Dunkin & Associates of Dallas during a joint session of the staff, P&Z Commission and City Council at City Hall.

Maps and recommendations for zoning and developments will be completed and sent to the city staff in a month. The group decided the commission and council will review the plans and in January begin a series of neighborhood meetings to gather ideas from each community. The plans should be finalized by Spring 1985.

"A lot has happened," said Richard Hennessy, director of planning and development for the city. "We've seen the end of an explosive boom period. What we're into today is the most important — an analysis of the city on a community area basis. This is what makes the plan a practical document."

With the city broken down into areas, Hennessy suggested the Planning and Zoning Commission go into each neighborhood for a public hearing. "You need these proposals," he said of the ideas from Dunkin & Associates. "But we're also looking for public input."

The planning firm submitted preliminary plans for Areas 5 and 7. Number Five is bounded by U.S. Highway 80, Midkiff Road, Interstate 20 and FM 715-Fairgrounds Road. Area Seven's boundaries are Andrews Highway, Loop 250, Midkiff Road and Highway 80.

Dan Sefko, an urban planner and associate partner in the firm, said the two are case studies to get the city officials' reactions before completing the master plan. "We didn't want to prepare a lot of information they felt wasn't relevant," he said.

With the group's approval, the company will prepare the rest of the plan and guidelines in a similar format.

Dunkin & Associates has been working on plans for the city for two years, he said. The first was a master plan for the Central Business District. The second has been the plan incorporating the rest of Midland.

A comprehensive master plan, Sefko said, "is the ultimate combination. It shows future land uses and thoroughfares. They (City Council) can make decisions on individual zoning cases. They can look at this plan and see if the case fits into the overall picture. It does not rezone anyone's property."

Once adopted, this plan only is valid as long as it is followed, said the urban planner. And it should be updated every five years, he said.

However, "if there is a complete change in the philosophy of the community, the plans should be revised," he added.

Midland's last master plan was produced in 1970 and even then was not comprehensive, according to Sefko. "This will be the first plan that gets into the nuts and bolts of this community."

Part of those nuts and bolts is a lot-by-lot assessment of housing and housing conditions. One map of the city rates each housing unit by condition. The color green on the lot reflects Type 1, good condition; light blue is Type 2, needs repairs; red, Type 3, in need of repairs that can't be done by the homeowner; black, Type 4, dilapidated, doubtful if can be rehabilitated.

Sam Liste, planner for the city, said a set of planning and zoning policies had evolved during the boom but they didn't solve the problems. "These are unwritten policies on how development should be laid out," he said. "But this master plan will identify those processes and policies."

The plan won't be set in concrete, but will serve only as a guide, according to Liste. And it will give the developer a written idea of the direction city officials want Midland to grow, eliminating the problems developers faced in the past when they couldn't get a plan approved by the council or the community.

"It will be a much better condition for everyone — the developer, council, planning staff and commission," he said.

David Godfrey, mayor pro tem, remembered his years on the Planning and Zoning Commission when the hearings during the boom years would run into the night. "We'll have a framework to work in. The developer will see what the city's policy is. We've been walking around in a vacuum for the last several years," he said.

Planning and Zoning Commission member Ronnie Lynch also viewed the plan as a way to help city officials prepare for the future. "We don't want to get caught like we did in the last boom."

Planning firm presents analysis of neighborhoods

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

An analysis of two neighborhoods in Midland shows one has too much retail in the area while the other has an abundance of dilapidated buildings and vacant land, according to reports compiled by the Dallas planning firm of J.T. Dunkin & Associates.

The preliminary report on the city's comprehensive master plan was revealed Wednesday to the city planning staff, Planning and Zoning Commission and City Council. Although the group approved the analysis in general, some in the group questioned parts of the assessment.

Studied were Community Area 5, bounded by U.S. Highway 80, Midkiff Road, Interstate 20 and Fairgrounds Road, and Community Area 7, bounded by Andrews Highway, Loop 250, U.S. Highway 80 and Midkiff Road.

The analysis looked at such categories as streets, utilities, parks and schools, fire stations, housing conditions and strategies for community preservation and stability.

Area 7, for example, was assessed as having a large percentage of single family housing with a wide range of quality and price. The planning firm suggested the vacant land be developed in uses that would protect established neighborhoods.

However, drilling activity that has taken place in this area isn't compatible with existing residential uses and should be discouraged, according to the report.

If the remaining vacant land were developed as retail, it would require a population of 60,000 to support the market demand. As it is, the area has more than sufficient retail. "Vacant land in the Dellwood Mall retail area is evidence of surplus retail land," the report states.

In Area 5, which includes much of south Midland, "vacant land still accounts for the greatest single land use at 38.3 percent," the report states.

Housing condition in this area "varies substantially," according to the report in which statistics showed the majority of housing rated as Type 3, or needing major repairs that can't be done by the homeowner. Of 1,269 single family homes, 632 were rated Type 3.

Seven local students National Merit semifinalists

From Staff Reports

Five Lee High School students and two from Midland High School have been named by the National Merit Scholarship Corporation as semifinalists in the competition for some 5,500 National Merit scholarships to be offered in 1985.

The students represent the top half of 1 percent of each state's high school senior class.

Named as semi-finalists from Lee High are Dean Preston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Preston, 2307 Wedgewood; Laura Renick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Renick, 3611 Imperial; Glenn Woessner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Christian Woessner, 5111 Teakwood Tract; Teri Bailey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl F. Midland High semifinalists are Holly Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Williams, 1027 Ward; and Craig Cunningham, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Cunningham, 2609 Culver.

More than one million students attending 18,000 secondary schools entered the competition by taking the PSAT/NMSQT in 1983 when most were classified as juniors.

To qualify as a finalist, the semifinalists must be endorsed and recommended by their high school principal, submit records that demonstrate high academic standard and performance, substantiate high qualifying test scores with equivalent scores on another examination, and supply biographical data and self-description of activities and extra-curricular accomplishments.

Preston was awarded the Eagle Scout rank during his freshman year and has also held numerous offices in Boy Scouts of America, including many hours of volunteer work.

He received a National Science Merit Award, an academic letter as a sophomore, a National English Merit Award as a junior and represented Midland high schools at the 1984 Texas Energy Science Symposium at The University of Texas at Austin.

Preston is planning to attend Clemson University, where he plans to work toward a Ph.D. in engineering.

Miss Renick has a variety of interests including Medical Explorers, French Club and church activities. She spent a summer in Belgium on a home-stay program and her family hosted a French foreign exchange student last year.

Miss Renick has won numerous awards in state-wide French competition. She plans to attend college at Southwestern in Georgetown and is undecided on a major field of study.

Woessner plans to attend The University of Texas at Austin and major in aerospace engineering.

Candidates add religion to national political debate

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

As if Ronald Reagan and Walter Mondale didn't already have enough to disagree about, they've recently added religion to the national political debate.

When Reagan courts the new religious right with paeans to family values and public morality, Mondale accuses him of implying that God is a Republican. The Democratic candidate harks back to John F. Kennedy's famous declaration of an absolute separation of church and state, but Republicans point out that Jesse Jackson — the Rev. Jesse Jackson — leaned heavily on black churches for support during his run for the nomination.

Meanwhile, anti-abortion groups hound Geraldine Ferraro, a Catholic, for separating her personal opposition to abortion from her pro-choice views on its legality, and Mario Cuomo, the governor of New York, is engaged in a running debate on the same subject with his archbishop, John O'Connor.

Many people become alarmed when religious leaders seem to be supporting partisan causes, but the Rev. Jerry Falwell, leader of the Moral Majority, cites the civil rights activism of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. as an example of how religious leaders should try to influence politics.

"My position — and I believe it is the position of a majority — is that it is not only legitimate to advocate basic religious values in the political arena, but it is essential for the health of our republic that believers participate in the debate of the day," he told Newsweek magazine last week.

David Godfrey, Midland's mayor pro tem and chairman of the Midland County Reagan/Bush campaign, agrees with Falwell.

"I think people want leaders in government to have moral values," he said. "The Constitution does not say people have to be atheists to be government officials."

Godfrey said the Democrats' charges that Reagan is claiming God for the Republican party "are ridiculous. I don't think Reagan is trying to say that Democrats as a class or as a group are immoral. I think he's trying to say that he embraces the moral concepts that the evangelical Christians have."

How can Democrats talk about separating church and state, asks Godfrey, "when you have an ordained minister (Jackson) running for President? And there was no harder Bible-pounder around than Jimmy Carter."

To Godfrey, the whole fuss about religion and politics is just a ploy to get votes. Midland County Democratic Chairman Janet Massey agrees, but she thinks it's the Republicans, not the Democrats, who are using religious issues to further their electoral chances.

"I think the abortion issue is one, to a degree, and prayer in school is one," she said.

Ms. Massey agrees that society has become more secularized. "But I don't think you can blame politics," which are a reflection, not a cause, of the change in society.

She claims to see a bit of hypocracy in Reagan's wrapping himself in Christian morality while cutting social programs for the needy.

"I can't see how President Reagan and the Republican Party can uphold a platform that completely ignores the principles of the Christian religion, turning their backs on the homeless, the hungry and the elderly," she said. "To me, that does not follow the teachings of Christ."

Ms. Massey doesn't approve of religous leaders such as Falwell telling their congregations for whom to vote.

"I feel like Rev. Falwell as an individual should be as active as he pleases," but not imply that everyone in his congregation should feel exactly as he does, she said.

"Rev. Falwell does appear to think God is a Republican. And I definitely disagree."

Former Odessa city marshal indicted

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

Former Odessa City Marshal Pat Trout was indicted Wednesday on four counts of federal firearms violations, including one sale of a gun to the city's previous city manager, ending more than a year of investigation and speculation.

Trout, a licensed firearms dealer, is alleged to have made three firearms sales in Odessa between October 1981 and August 1983 without properly recording the sales. The fourth count charges Trout with possession of an unregistered machine gun in February or March 1983.

If convicted on all four counts, Trout faces a maximum sentence of 25 years in prison and a $25,000 fine. He surrendered to authorities at the Midland federal courthouse Wednesday afternoon and was released after posting $2,500 in cash, 10 percent of the $25,000 bond set, according to an agreement with the assistant U.S. Attorney Mike McDonald.

The Oct. 15, 1981, sale of a Winchester shotgun is alleged to have been made to Kerry Richard Sweatt, who at that time was city manager of Odessa. The three counts of failure to make and maintain records all charge Trout with failing to make an entry in his records or having completed a form required of all licensed arms dealers by federal law.

Following a suggestion by McDonald, U.S. Magistrate Darrell F. Smith instructed Trout not to harass any of the witnesses in the case during a hearing held about 5 p.m., Wednesday in the magistrate's courtroom in Midland.

McDonald said the case would likely go to court by November. Trout's attorney, Steve Clack of Andrews, suggested he and his client were relieved the 1½-year investigation had ended.

"We're glad it's finally come to a head," said Clack, "We look forward to our day in court when we can prove his innocence."

In addition to the alleged violations in the sale to Sweatt, Trout is charged with the same violations in two sales to law enforcement officers.

Midland Republicans build new framework

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

With a new party framework, Midland County Republicans will be putting together a structure they hope will carry them to the top in the November general election.

County Chairman Kelly Fish announced new officers and a "fortified organizational structure," or the concrete evidence of a promise he made when he took over the party's reins in July. One of the first steps in building that concerted election effort will start Monday with a door-to-door canvassing.

"I talked to some of the local leaders," said Fish. "We identified the problems and needs and how we could best address those needs. It was a joint effort with precinct chairmen and past party chairmen."

Serving as vice chairmen and their areas of construction will be Lou Brown, precinct organization; Pat Blackwell, headquarters; and Mary Tom Roper, campaign liaison. Co-chairmen of finance are George Hover and Adalbert von Gontard III. Other officers are Dean Rucker, legal adviser; Tracy Elms, treasurer; and Margaret Rhea, secretary.

Some of the positions are new to the party's structure, according to Fish. "The Republican Party in Midland has had basically the same organizational structure for more than 20 years. With the tremendous growth and development of the community and the party, we felt we needed some new responsibilities delegated within the organization.

"We added a co-chairman of finance. We now have three vice chairmen of precinct organization, headquarters and campaign liaison. We also added the position of legal adviser to assist the party in keeping up with the constant changes to the election code," he said.

The party's building blocks are as follows:

— Kelly Fish, a landman with Getty Oil. He has been active in political and civic affairs. He is a past president of the Young Republicans and Midland Jaycees. A graduate of Lee High School, he received his bachelor's degree from the University of Texas.

Congress objected to proclamation

Some members of the first Congress objected to the Thanksgiving Day proclamation passed by a majority.

As president, Thomas Jefferson refused to sign such a proclamation. And late in life, on reflection, President James Madison opposed the issuance of such proclamations by the federal government.

Appeals court says 'no, sir' to 'yes, sir' judge

AUSTIN (AP) — State District Judge Michael McSpadden said he was trying to teach a defendant to "be responsible" by jailing him for not saying, "Yes, sir," but state appeals judges say the judge went too far.

"The record clearly reflects that, rather than acting as a trial judge should act, Judge McSpadden, instead, acted much like a military drill instructor might act when dealing with a raw recruit," said Court of Criminal appeals Judge Marvin Teague.

But the court said Wednesday it could not grant the relief requested by Michael Washington, who wound up with a 30-day jail sentence imposed by McSpadden. The court did, however, indicate Washington stands a good chance of winning with a different type of appeal.

Washington went to McSpadden's court on March 29, 1983, to plead guilty to burglary. A plea bargain in the case would have placed Washington on probation for four years. After the guilty plea, McSpadden questioned Washington.

"Let's have a 'yes, sir,' every time you say 'yes,' I want a 'sir' behind it. Do you understand that? Or you are not going to get probation...you are going to get 30 days," the judge told Washington.

In later questioning, after replying with "yes, sir" several times, Washington dropped the "sir." McSpadden said, "Let's have a 'yes, sir.' I swear to God, how long does it take you to listen?"

Washington later again dropped the required "sir." McSpadden ordered the 30-day jail stay as part of Washington's probation conditions.

"So, for 30 days just thank me every single day you spend there," the judge told Washington. "Please think of me, Mr. Washington, every single day you spend in jail. Start saying 'sir' to people. You understand that?"

PLANNING

Planners suggested the residential areas should be reinforced through maintenance programs. But the "residential area west of Big Spring and east of Lamesa is questionable for residential rehabilitation and other transition uses should be explored," the report states.

This area includes Interstate 20 and South Garfield Streets, both of which should see "high quality industrial and related development," the planners said. "The South Garfield/Interstate 20 corridor is one of the few remaining vacant undeveloped areas suitable for large scale industrial development."

Council and commission members disagreed over the recommendation of the restrictive IP-3 zoning, or industrial park.

"A major landowner and several small ones in that area say IP-3 is too restrictive a zoning," said Councilman Steve Davidson.

"Economically, statistics show you IP-3 doesn't work. In the last boom, it didn't develop," said Mayor Pro Tem David Godfrey.

But Jane Wolf of the P&Z Commission argued that the last boom centered on the oil industry. "We need to diversify. I think it would develop (as IP-3). I'd like to see the city and chamber cooperate and make this a priority for 1985-86."

"Maybe you need another tool to implement it," suggested Dan Sefko, a planner with J.T. Dunkin & Associates. "There may need to be a diversity of attacks to achieve that. But first we need to get a consensus of what you want it to be."

"We want an aesthetically pleasing corridor along I-20 and South Garfield," said Godfrey. "Almost anything would look better than that dump ground along I-20."

Katie Heck with the P&Z Commission questioned the report's statement about housing maintenance programs in the south Midland area, and Dunkin said reinvestment zones would be a feasible idea for those areas. The final report on the city's seven community areas will be completed in about a month and should include guidelines on such zones, he said.

The planners concluded that Area 5 "could emerge, through appropriate land use changes and rehabilitation efforts, into a more well-defined residential and industrial part of the southern sector of Midland. The west portion should be viewed as a potential gateway to the city from the south. As future development occurs in the gateway area, it should enhance the image of this area through higher design standards."

INDICT

Sometime between July and August 1983, Trout allegedly sold Bobby Ray Forbus, a former Highway Patrol officer now with the Odessa warrants division, a .44 magnum revolver without properly recording the sale.

According to the indictment, Trout repeated the illegal acts in July 1983 in a sale of a .357 magnum rifle to Carlos Trevizo, a warrant officer for the city who worked under Trout.

The counts of failure to make and maintain records each carry maximum sentences of 5 years in jail and $5,000 fines, while the charge of possession of an unregistered Colt AR-15 machine gun carries a 10 year sentence and $10,000 fine.

Trout was city marshal in Odessa until Aug. 25, 1983, after city officials were notified he was under investigation by the DPS for possession of stolen cars. His firing also involved current Odessa Mayor John Minor — then municipal court administrator.

Minor has said he met with city officials when he learned they were dismissing Trout. During this same period, the warrants division, of which Trout was chief officer, was transferred from Minor's supervision to the police department.

Minor filed charges of official misconduct against City Manager John Harrison and official oppression against Fiscal Services Manager Frank Muser the day after Trout's dismissal, claiming they had acted illegally in making the change in supervision.

The two city officials were arrested, but an Ector County grand jury later determined no criminal actions were committed and issued no indictments on the charges.

Minor was fired after this, along with part-time Municipal Judge Larry McMillion, who issued the warrants for the officials' arrest. Also suspended until recently were two warrant officers, who served the warrants on Muser and Harrison.

Minor filed a suit against the city, which is still in litigation, contesting his firing Nov. 8. He has come under fire from fellow city councilmembers for not dropping the suit since his April election as mayor.

Grand jury still probing November 1981 burning

From Staff Reports

Grand jury deliberations were scheduled to resume this afternoon in the federal courthouse in Midland, with the panel apparently continuing its investigation of the November 1981 burning of an Odessa office building.

More records were subpoenaed from Odessa City Hall this week regarding the resignation of Ector County Commissioner Willie Hammond from city council, according to Mayor John Minor.

The grand jury reportedly heard testimony from two doctors and former City Councilman Keith Weddell Wednesday, but no indictments were issued. Weddell and former Mayor Bob Bryant were co-owners of the building, then known as the O'Michael Building. Renamed the Jackson Center, the refurbished building is located at 300 N. Jackson in Odessa.

Originally investigated by police as arson, the Nov. 25, 1981, fire has since gained the attention of the Ector County District Attorney's Office, the FBI and the U.S. Attorney's Office.

Bryant and Weddell were among a list of officials subpoenaed to testify. Hammond was not subpoenaed, but invited to testify in the case.

John Thomas Peterson, the man originally arrested for "arson for hire" in the case, has never been indicted. He is currently serving prison time for burglary.

Authorities apparently suspect a link between the fire and the failure of a local bond issue to erect a civic center in downtown Odessa.

Passing car scares would-be robber of convience store clerk

From Staff Reports

A convenience store clerk, held up by a man early this morning as she was taking out the trash, escaped injury and robbery when the man was scared off by a passing car, according to police reports.

The 38-year-old clerk said the Hispanic man came up behind her shortly before 3 a.m. as she rounded the corner of the store, located at 1709 Rankin Highway, and placed "a hard object" held in his coat pocket at her back.

A passing car scared him off, according to reports. He was last seen fleeing east on foot.

He was described as being in his early 20s, about 5-foot, 7-inches tall and weighing 180 pounds. His black hair was pulled into a ponytail and he was wearing a bandana around his head, a dark jacket, jeans and suede-type boots.

Some colitis patients can eat almost anything

Dear Dr. Solomon: What kind of diet would you recommend for a person with ulcerative colitis? I'm thinking particularly about a 17-year-old boy who was in good health before this happened. — Ernie, Hagerstown, Md.

Solomon

Dear Earnie: Many patients with ulcerative colitis eat all kinds of foods without restriction. Some, however, find that a diet that is low in fiber and in spicy foods is easier for them to manage, especially when the disease is active.

An emphasis on sound nutritional practices is more important than empahsizing or avoiding particular foods.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Why do doctors so often recommend extra iron when a woman is pregnant? Doesn't a good diet have enough iron? Also, do women who are nursing their babies need more iron? — Mrs. J.Q., Waterbury, Conn.

Dear Mrs. Q.: The typical diet of American women is not adequate to meet the increased need for iron during pregnancy. Therefore, an iron supplement is advisable.

Women who are breast-feeding their babies have a need for iron that is about the same as that needed by nonpregnant women. However, it is often advisable for women to take an iron supplement for a few months after giving birth in order to replenish the iron lost during pregnancy.

Dear Dr. Solomon: There are certain foods that my daughter seems to be allergic to, but when the doctor tested her no allergy appeared. Now he wants to do other tests. Is this the normal procedure and do you think it would be a good idea? — Mrs. B.L., Oakland, Calif.

Dear Mrs. L.: A single test is not always sufficient to confirm a food allergy. It is possible, of course, that the test already performed was accurate and your daughter is not allergic to the particular foods you have in mind. However, no single test can be said to be 100 percent accurate. With my own patients, for example, I know that not all of them will show a positive skin test for a food allergy.

The real proof of an allergy to a food is the fact that eating that food causes symptoms, and eliminating the food from the diet causes the symptoms to disappear. This is a technique I use with certain patients who can understand the rationale behind the test and can follow instructions.

One of the difficulties with such a challenge test is the fact that some foods contain ingredients that are not readily apparent. For example, some hot dogs contain milk, a fact that few patients may realize.

The fact that the physician plans to perform other tests suggests that he does not want to rely on a single test which, as I have indicated, may not be accurate.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have a sex problem but it isn't like any of the problems I'v ever read about in your column. I have no trouble with getting an erection or in having sexual relations. But I don't really enjoy sex. I'm in good health, and I don't mess with alcohol or drugs. Can you explain this or am I just nuts? — Howie, Salem, Mass.

Dear Howie: Attaching a label, whether "nuts" or some other, to your problem is really not very productive. Although I am not a psychiatrist, I have seen patients such as yourself in my practice. A common denominator among many of them has been the belief that there is something wrong or sinful about having sexual interests and feelings.

I could speculate about the type of environment in which you were raised, but that would not be very helpful. You may benefit from psychotherapy, and I suggest you ask your physician for such a referral.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A nephew of mine has been told that he has ulcerative colitis. I used to think that it was caused by emotional tension, but I know for a fact that this is not the case with my nephew. Do doctors still believe that ulcerative colitis is caused by stress? — Joe, NYC

Dear Joe: The cause of ulcerative colitis is not know, but there is speculation that a viral or bacterial agent may be involved. There is no evidence that suggests that psychological factors play a part in the disorder.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Why isn't it a good idea to have an enema too often? It seems to me that it is a healthy practice because it helps rid the body of waste material. I know that doctors don't agree with this line of reasoning but I don't understand why. — Lonnie, Dearborn, Mich.

Dear Lonnie: The frequent use of enemas may imapir the natural muscle action of the bowel and prevent the bowels from functioning normally. Furthermore, frequent enemas are usually not necessary.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I may have to have my gallbladder removed, and I know of other people who have had this operation and they seem to be gettig along all right. But the gallbladder must have some use and I would appreciate if you would tell me what that is. — Mrs. P.E., Ann Arbor, Mich.

Dear Mrs. E.: The primary purpose of the galbladder is to store bile secreted by the liver until it is needed for digestion in the small intestine.

For Elaine, Madison, Wis.: It is true that there is a difference of opinion among physicians about the best method of screening for breast cancer. Dr. Louis G. Keith, of Northwestern University Medical School in Chicago, points out that every screening technique has some limitation, and all must be confirmed by a pathology examination. The simplest screening test, and the least expensive, is manual examination.

Neil Solomon, M.D., is a syndicated columnist for Los Angeles Times Syndicate. If you have a medical question, write Dr. Solomon at 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon will not give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.

Man doesn't let handicap slow him down

"He's built four pulpits for me. Our teachers told me they needed cabinets where they could put their stuff, and the next day he drove up."

— Rev. Mark Woodruff, pastor of Holy Angels Catholic Church

SAN ANGELO (AP) — Motels prices are a little too steep these days for Bill Eggemeyer. He prefers to sleep in his car while he wanders across West Texas looking for a church that needs a carpenter.

Eggemeyer, 71, recently measured out a piece of wood for a cabinet destined for Sunday school teachers at Holy Angels Catholic Church. His good hand holds the wood in place. He lost his other hand in a cotton gin accident about 20 years ago, but a hook-like prosthesis doesn't slow him down.

"The motel rent is too high," he said. "I park the car in a cool place, and I keep close to my tools."

The Rev. Mark Woodruff, pastor of Holy Angels, watches his old homeless friend as he speaks. "He's built four pulpits for me. Our teachers told me they needed cabinets where they could put their stuff, and the next day he drove up."

When Woodruff was at St. Joseph's Catholic Church across town, Eggemeyer was there doing carpentry work on an altar. Before that, he was at St. Lawrence's Church in Garden City, and at St. Mary's Parish in Fort Worth, and in Robert Lee, Crane, Rowena...

If he's not working at a cotton gin, you'll find Eggemeyer working a hammer and saw for some of his favorite friends — priests. "They're always nice people to work for," he said. "That's the reason I like to work for them. They're really good and intelligent people."

"And handsome," Woodruff added with a grin.

"Some of them know more about woodworking than I do," Eggemeyer said.

Priests provide most of his contacts with civilization. He has a son working for a telephone company in Houston. His 90-year-old mother lives in Hillsboro with his sister. And that is the extent of his family.

Where does he call home? "Where I hang my hat," he said. He glances at his white station wagon, and the blue wooden trailer that holds his tools.

Eggemeyer's good hand is a large, knobby piece of Nature's work. He grips a hammer and works at a stylized cross engraved on the front of the cabinets. He said he hasn't had to modify his tools to accommodate his prosthesis, the result of a cotton gin accident on the Arizona-Mexico border in 1948.

"Those cotton gins, they're pretty dangerous, especially the saw." He laughed. "It happened just a little before Christmas," he recalled. "On Christmas Day, I was back ginning. I've done pretty good with it."

He looked at his prosthesis. "I guess if I get this thing close to the saw, it won't hurt me," he said with a laugh. "It'll probably do more damage to the saw."

Woodruff said that when Eggemeyer was working on a priest's rectory in Crane, there were two other parishes about 55 miles from the small West Texas town that needed some attention. "He drove it every day," he said.

West Texas is fertile territory for Eggemeyer's brand of carpentry. It's also the area of the nation he is most familiar with, following his birth in East Texas. He doesn't quite remember the exact city, but "it's not too far from Houston."

At the age of 4, he moved to Rowena, where he spent his childhood years, he said. He remembered carrying bricks for the workers who were building St. Joseph's Catholic Church at that time. The sight of steeples and sawhorses just seemed a natural image to him.

He tried to enlist in the Army, but he failed a physical three times. "They never would tell me what the reason was," he said. "So I went off to California to work in a shipyard." That brief experience taught him welding, a skill he still uses on occasion.

He farmed for a short time in the Rio Grande Valley before he began his nomadic ways. When he finishes his work at Holy Angels, he said he will probably head for the cotton gins again, working for whoever will take him on.

Farmers get new viral weapon

America's farmers now have available for the first time a viral insecticide — Heliothis NPV (nuclear polyhedrosis virus) — to control two major Heliothis pests in cotton, corn, soybeans, sorghum, tomatoes and tobacco.

Together those six commodities occupy 45 percent of U.S. cropland each year.

Trucker survives plunge in ravine

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — A 52-year-old Oklahoma truck driver left several marks on steep ravine walls as he tried for 4½ days to crawl to safety after his truck wrecked, officials say.

Harry E. Barfield of Erick was in critical condition today at Northwest Texas Hospital after the wreck left him trapped a ravine off Interstate 40 near Shamrock, officials said.

ARE YOU CONDEMNED?

JOHN 3:18 READS; "HE THAT BELIEVETH ON HIM IS NOT CONDEMNED. BUT, HE THAT BELIEVETH NOT IS CONDEMNED ALREADY; BECAUSE HE HATH NOT BELIEVED IN THE NAME OF THE ONLY BEGOTTEN SON OF GOD."

Jesus (God in flesh) died for your sins, and when you reject Jesus, you also reject God, and that is serious.

JOHN 1:12 READS; "BUT AS MANY AS RECEIVED HIM, TO THEM GAVE HE POWER TO BECOME THE SONS OF GOD, EVEN TO THEM THAT BELIEVE ON HIS NAME."

Joining a church won't save you. You must receive Jesus into your heart.

The first part of REVELATION 3:20 READS; "BEHOLD, I STAND AT THE DOOR AND KNOCK: IF ANY MAN HEAR MY VOICE AND OPEN THE DOOR, I WILL COME INTO HIM..." Jesus is knocking. He wants to come into your heart and give you everlasting life. What is your answer? If yes...Pray and ask Jesus to save you, before it is too late, 699-0586.

Warm economy cools in August

Reports of a big fall in new housing construction in August and a small gain in Americans' personal income have prompted some private economists to begin revising their predictions of economic growth for the rest of the year.

But Treasury Secretary Donald Regan says the administration is sticking by its earlier growth forecasts.

The government reported Wednesday that new housing construction plunged 12.8 percent in August while Americans' personal income rose 0.5 percent, the smallest gain since May.

In the wake of those reports, Regan said he saw no reason to revise the administration's current estimate for growth around 4.5 percent in the third quarter and 4 percent in the fourth quarter. He noted that this would be half of the 8.8 percent pace turned in from January through June.

But Allen Sinai, chief economist of Shearson Lehman-American Express, said the personal income and spending figures showed a "surprisingly decided slowdown in the growth of the economy."

He predicted third quarter growth at a 3 to 3.5 percent rate.

Other economists predicted the expansion would dip even lower to perhaps 2 percent in the third quarter.

"This is just a real weak quarter," said Michael Evans, head of Evans Economics in Washington. "Every number we have gotten in the past few weeks has been lower than expected."

Analysts blamed high interest rates for not only the slowdown in housing construction but also the decline in consumer spending.

The government said construction of new homes in August plummeted to an annual rate of 1.54 million units, the lowest level since December 1982 when the country was beginning to pull out of the long recession.

The housing decline was led by a 19.5 percent drop in construction starts on apartments. Single-family construction starts posted their third straight monthly decline, dropping 9.7 percent.

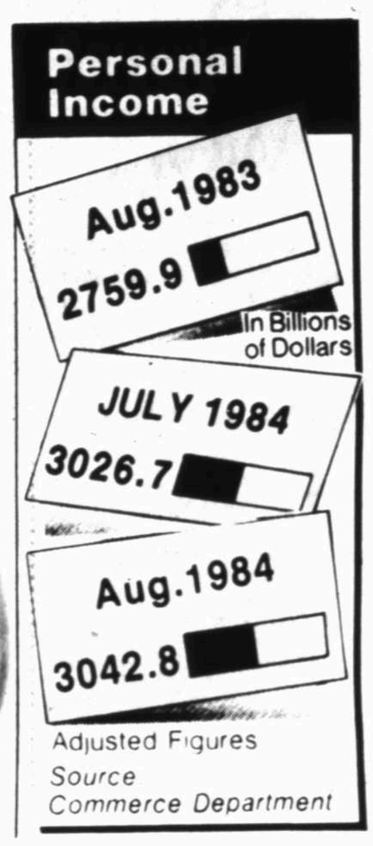

The personal income report also said Americans were not as eager to spend their earnings. Personal consumption spending rose by only 0.1 percent, matching the meager increase of July. Early in the year, spending grew as much as 1.8 percent in a single month.

The report said wages and salaries increased $3.9 billion in August compared with an $8.7 billion gain in July. The payroll gains came primarily from manufacturing, with auto plants and electrical equipment plants registering the biggest gains.

In other economic news Wednesday:

—European oil industry sources said the Soviet Union, the world's largest oil producer, is raising the price of its main export grade of crude oil by 25 cents a barrel in October, the second such increase in as many months. In a related development, the American Petroleum Institute reported that U.S. oil imports fell 13 percent in August from the same month a year ago, while total petroleum inventories fell in a period when they normally increase.

—Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker said he still expects to schedule Senate debate this year on a proposed constitutional amendment to balance the federal budget, as sought by President Reagan.

Facing off in the yellow pages

Independent takes on Ma Bell

By RON GILMORE
Business-Oil Writer

What has white and yellow pages, long lists of phone numbers and advertising in the back. The Southwestern Bell telephone book, right?

Not necessarily so.The Midland-Odessa area will soon be getting its first independent phone directory.

"The Wildcatter", a publication of Nationwide Directory Inc., will be distributed free of charge to businesses and residences before the end of the year.

The directory will be one of 300 independent phone listings now publishing in the country.

"There are very few places in the U.S. without independent directories," said Susan Weseley, president of Nationwide Directories for the Greater Permian Basin.

Weseley believes that the public will accept the new directory.

"We are not trying to replace the Bell telephone book," she said, "We just feel that it will be used as a second directory in the house."

Although the new phone book will be vying for the same advertising base as Southwestern Bell, Weseley is confident that the new directory can survive.

"We call it double-dipping," said Weseley. "Some businesses are going to advertise in both directories."

"Besides," said Weseley, "Southwestern Bell takes out over $10 to $12 million a year in the Midland-Odessa area alone in yellow page advertising."

Southwestern Bell would not comment on those earnings.

Matt Holton/Reporter-Telegram

Weseley maintains that advertisers have been enthusiastic about the new directory.

"We've had such a tremendous response that we have had to extend our deadline", she said.

The two books are similar in appearance, but have one distinct difference. The independent directory will offer phone listings for 22 communities in the Permian Basin. The towns listed in "The Wildcatter" are: Midland, Odessa, Stanton, Andrews, Kermit, Monahans, Crane, Pecos, Ft. Stockton, Lees, Lomax, Lenorah, Garden City, Penwell, Florey, Frankel City, Notrees, Iraan, McCamey, Rankin, Midkiff and Goldsmith.

Although the new directory will be in direct competition with Southwestern Bell, lists for the white page section were obtained from Bell.

"We purchase a lease agreement to print the white pages from the utility companies," said Weseley. "Southwestern Bell had to sell the rights to us," said Weseley."

Southwestern Bell admits that they are required to print the white pages, but did not state that they were required to sell the lists.

"They do have to come to us," said Kerry Hibbs, a Southwestern Bell spokesman.

"Those lists are copyrighted and we are required to print them," he said. "It's just an additional source of revenue."

The name lists vary in cost to the independent directory publisher, said Bell.

"There are four or five ways in which they can buy the lists," said Hibbs. "For example, they can buy one-time -only publishing rights and that usually runs around five cents per listing."

While Nationwide Directories is positive of their success, Southwestern Bell isn't so optimistic.

"Competition is nothing new to us," said Frank Morgan, sales manager for Bell's Midland-Odessa area. "We've had directories in the past and most are short-lived."

Morgan cited lack of public acceptance as the major failure of the independents.

"They usually come in with the pitch, 'We're cheaper', ", said Morgan. "But they usually sacrifice quality."

Quality seems to be one of the amenities, the fledgling directory is touting.

"We will offer full color ads, front and back page advertising, complete high school sports schedules and city maps," said Weseley.

"This is not a new business," said Weseley, " It has been going on for over 20 years."

Nationwide Directories Inc. has a sister publication in the El Paso-Las Cruces area called Sun Country Directory Inc. Both are run by the same officers.

TI finds test problems in 200 of 5,000 chips

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Instruments is revising several of its testing programs in the wake of tests that found defects in several of its microchips, a company spokesman says.

Of nearly 5,000 kinds of microcircuits under scrutiny after the Pentagon ordered defense contractors to stop using them, fewer than 200 have yielded testing problems so far, TI Vice President Norman Neureiter said Wednesday.

TI is just under halfway through a testing review of microchips sold to about 80 defense contractors, officials said. The Pentagon ordered the halt because it said some of the chips may not have been properly tested.

Neureiter said Wednesday of about 2,200 kinds of chips reviewed by the first of this week, fewer than 200 had testing problems.

He said problems found so far stem from the testing programs drawn up by TI officials, and that some programs omitted tests ordered by customers.

Pentagon and TI officials have said the problem does not affect the reliability of the tiny electronic devices, which are used in a broad range of weapons.

TI is revising the testing programs found to be incomplete or incorrect, and microchips still at TI factories will be retested according to the revised programs, Neureiter said.

He said TI hopes to complete the review within a few weeks, and that the company is providing the Defense Department with weekly updates.

"What we're doing is working through each one of these device types," he said. "Over 90 percent had no discrepancies in the testing procedure."

Neureiter said a special team is working around the clock, verifying each element in the battery of tests ordered for every type of military semiconductor.

Auto strikes increase; Little progress in talks

DETROIT (AP) — Stepped-up strikes by the United Auto Workers kept 106,000 General Motors Corp. workers on the street today and idled more than 1,000 people in related industries, but the stoppages had little apparent effect at the bargaining table.

The UAW wound down a 13-hour negotiating session for a national contract Wednesday night with a statement saying "virtually no progress was made" despite the widening of the labor conflict earlier in the day.

The talks, set to resume this morning, apparently bogged down after the UAW offered a proposal Tuesday on wages and job security and the company responded Tuesday night.

Before dawn Wednesday, the UAW, which had struck 13 GM plants over local issues at midnight Friday, struck four more, raising the number of strikers from 62,000 to 92,000.

Another 16,000 GM hourly workers at 18 plants in five states have been laid off because of the strike. Several hundred are members of the United Rubber Workers union and nearly all the remainder belong to the UAW.

Fifteen of the struck sites are assembly plants, and that has caused a backup of parts in GM's vast components system.

"It won't be long until it really hurts them," said Scott Merlis, an automotive industry analyst with Shearson Lehman-American Express.

Merlis estimated that GM was losing $150 million a week and that the longer the strikes last, the more it will cost to get the giant company moving again.

"They've shut down 40 percent of the company, but it's the most profitable 40 percent," said David Healy, an automotive industry analyst at Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. in New York.

For the first time, the strikes have begun to touch businesses outside GM.

Two trucking companies said they were furloughing hundreds of workers because they were running out of cars to ship, and a supplier of plastic trim and panels said it was losing $300,000 a day from the strike.

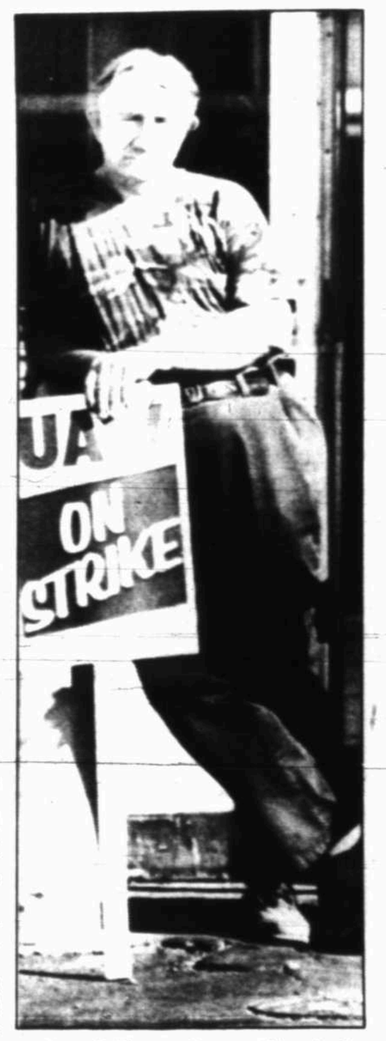

Anchor Motor Freight and Fleet Carrier Corp., two Pontiac, Mich., area car haulers, said Wednesday their layoffs would total more than 500 by the end of the week if the strikes continue because they were running out of GM cars to haul.

Voplex Corp.'s Canandaigua, N.Y., plastics division has laid off 250 of 850 employees since Monday as a result of walkouts against GM. Voplex President Joseph Tolley said Tuesday that an additional 150 workers might be furloughed if the UAW walkouts continue for another week.

Voplex depends on GM for 70 percent of its business at the Canandaigua plant, Tolley said.

In Louisiana, 34 hourly workers at Universal Hoover Inc., a supplier of bucket seats, and 30 truckers were laid off. In Doraville, Ga., 200 drivers who normally deliver midsize cars made at the GM plant there were furloughed because there were no cars left to deliver.

On Wall Street, GM stock declined 2¼ points Wednesday to 74⅛.

Jim Wilson, Greenville, Ind., took his position on the picket line after 3,200 went on strike at the GM Truck and Bus Division in Indianapolis.

Cheers fade for Reagan steel plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The quick applause for President Reagan's plan to limit steel imports has faded in a barrage of criticism from Democrats and a labor leader along with confusion over what the government has actually promised.

The United Steelworkers union officials and House Democrats said Wednesday they were deeply disappointed by the 10-point program designed to curtail imports through stepped up enforcement of existing trade laws and voluntary restraint agreements with problem foreign producers.

Steel importers qualified their earlier plaudits, though executives of big steel producers stood by their favorable response.

The bipartisan Congressional Steel Caucus did not take a position on the presidential policy, but its chairman, Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa., and other individual members reacted along party lines.

"I am increasingly skeptical that the administration's plan will do anything to help our steelworkers and steel communities," said Murtha.

"It fails to provide any guarantees that imports will actually be reduced. It depends on negotiations with countries that have shown no regard for American workers or the American economy," he said.

On the other hand, Rep. Don Ritter, a Pennsylvania Republican whose district includes Bethlehem, said, "It's a heck of a lot more than we've ever had and I think there's commitment behind it. Our effort now is to keep the administration's feet to the fire and see that implementation does occur."

United Steelworkers union president Lynn Williams scoffed at what he called "a phantom program" and said he fears Reagan's enthusiasm will evaporate after the November election.

"None of it is required; none of it is a matter of law," Williams said at a press conference. "There is nothing to prevent him from backing away from the whole situation in a few months or a year."

Told of the union displeasure, Reagan said while campaigning on Wednesday, "They don't have all the details."

And White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the president "does feel the steel decision has not been explained adequately ... that it does provide a great deal of protection for the steel industry."

Administration trade officials say they hope their new policy will reduce imports from about 24 percent to 18.5 percent of the American market.

U.S. Steel Chairman David Roderick and Bethlehem Steel Chairman Donald Trautlein said separately Wednesday that they view the 18.5 percent figure as a government commitment. However, U.S. Trade Representative William Brock described it as an estimate and an aide reiterated that description Wednesday.

"It is not a target, not a goal, not a ceiling," said spokesman David Demarest. "It is a prediction."

"I don't really care ... as long as it occurs," Trautlein said.

Meanwhile, a director of the American Institute for Imported Steel noted the group's earlier praise but said, "The institute is now concerned by reports the president has taken steps to impose orderly marketing agreements whose severity goes beyond any measures contemplated by the International Trade Commission."

Ernst Wimpfheimer said, "Such actions would contradict the free-trade policy announced by the president Sept. 18. These threats negate that policy, which is intended to benefit U.S. consumers, U.S. farmers and manufacturers who export, and the U.S. economy."

Trautlein said an import reduction to 18.5 percent could translate into the recall of up to 25,000 of the 200,000 steelworkers laid off since 1977.

"What we are doing here is not going to bring many steelworkers back to work. That's unfortunate but it's realistic," he said. "Most of the people that have been laid off — those jobs are permanently gone."

Car dealers peg promotions on strike

DETROIT (AP) — Car dealer Don Massey, undaunted by a United Auto Workers walkout that threatens to discourage customers, says his gamble on a strike-related sales promotion seems to be working.

Massey this week is offering to make payments on any Cadillac bought or leased from his dealership until the UAW's strike against General Motors Corp. is settled.

"We had one firm that buys cars from us that was going to wait until after the first of the year to buy. They just came in and bought four cars," he said.

Howard Emmer also has a strike-related deal for new customers of his Berkley-based Aluminum Construction Co. — have your roof patched now, and make no payments until two months after the strike is settled.

"We've got to help our local people ... what do you do if a guy has a hole in his roof and it's leaking on his head and he's on strike?" Emmer said.

The UAW strike has put more than 92,000 autoworkers out of the plants and onto picket lines nationwide, while another 16,000 have been laid off because of the strikes. Many of the workers affected are in the Detroit area.

"I looked at this and computed we'll sell 150 cars if our promotion works," Massey said. "The average Cadillac payment is $400, so we're talking $60,000 a month."

Coal talks facing tough decisions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Contract negotiators for the mine workers and the soft coal industry continue to search for a settlement amid indications the union is nearing some tough decisions.

The bargaining teams for the United Mine Workers of America and the Bituminous Coal Operators Association met through much of the day Wednesday before recessing the talks late in the evening.

Dennis O'Neil, a spokesman for the industry group, said it was uncertain whether the two sides would return to the bargaining table today.

The intense contract talks came as the UMW drew close to an informal deadline for achieving an agreement in time to avert a strike and as sources reported that union leaders from the various field districts had been called to Washington for consultations.

The contract between the union and the BCOA doesn't expire until Oct. 1, but a tentative agreement would have to be reached today to permit time for rank-and-file ratification by the union, which has in the past refused to work without a contract in force.

A UMW source, who spoke on the condition that he not be identified, said officers who once made up the UMW's now-defunct "bargaining council" had been called to Washington on Wednesday.

These officials — presidents and international executive oard members from each of the union's 21 political subdivisions — were to meet Thursday evening, the source said.

"It's either to discuss a proposed contract, or to discuss targets for a selective strike," he said when asked about the purpose of the meeting.

A news blackout on the negotiations has been agreed to by UMW President Richard Trumka and Consolidation Coal Co. chief executive officer Bobby R. Brown, chief negotiator for the BCOA, which represents 30 major eastern and Appalachian coal companies.

In previous negotiations, the bargaining council, comprising the presidents and the international executive board representatives of each of the districts covered by negotiations with the BCOA, had to review and approve a tentative contract settlement before it could be recommended to the miners.

However, the bargaining council was eliminated during the union's constitutional convention last December. That decision was urged by Trumka, who made it clear during the convention that he planned to keep the negotiations as secret as possible.

General Motors announces recall of 1984-model sports cars, vans

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. has announced that it is recalling 31,000 1984-model Chevrolet Camaros and Pontiac Firebirds and 2,900 1984-model GMC vans and Chevrolet vans to correct two separate safety problems.

Brake hoses on the Camaros and Firebirds could separate from an end fitting, causing brake fluid to leak and possibly lead to a loss of brake power, GM said in a statement Monday.

The vans affected being recalled are equipped with both front and rear air conditioning systems, GM said. A plastic plug may not have been removed from the front air conditioning unit during assembly of the vans, leading to possible overheating and fires in engine compartments, the automaker said.

The defects will be corrected at no cost to owners, GM said.

No injuries have been reported as a result of the defects, which were discovered during factory inspection checks, GM said.

House approves airline consumer protection rule

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation is nearing approval in Congress to assure the survival of airline consumer protection rules after the Civil Aeronautics Board shuts its doors at the end of the year.

The House approved a measure Wednesday that would continue a variety of airline regulations, including those that guarantee compensation for lost baggage, require airlines to have no-smoking sections, and assure passengers an airline seat or compensation when they have a ticket and show up on time.

The legislation must still pass the Senate. Supporters say they expect approval there before Congress adjourns in two weeks, although action has been stalled in a dispute over where responsibility for airline antitrust matters should be transferred.

The consumer protection language is part of legislation that ties up loose ends involving the shutdown of the Civil Aeronautics Board at the end of the year.

Consumer advocates as well as CAB officials and many members of Congress have argued that without the legislation, virtually all of the aviation consumer rules would cease to exist after Dec. 31, when the CAB goes out of business.

The legislation, pushed by Rep. Norman Mineta, D-Calif., chairman of the House aviation subcommittee, calls for the consumer regulations to be transferred to the Transportation Department.

The House and Senate approved different versions of the legislation ending the CAB earlier in the year. Last week a conference committee agreed on a compromise that was returned to the two chambers for final approval.

MGF reveals statement

MGF Oil Corp. has anounced the effectiveness of its registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission in which 20,092,602 shares of senior convertible preferred stock (Preferred Stock) and 205,815,495 shares of common stock were offered in exchange for $29,578,223 of secured bank debt and $124,815,000 of aggregate principal amount of four issues of subordinated debentures. The debentures are composed of:

—69,118,000 aggregate principal amount of 6 percent Senior Subordinated Debentures due 1988.
—$20,882,000 aggregate principal amount of 14.5 percent Senior Subordinated Debentures due 2001.
—$24,538,000 aggregate principal amount of Class A and Class B Non-Interest Bearing Convertible Senior Subordinated Guaranteed Debentures due 1989, and 10,277,000 aggregate principal amount of 8 1/4 percent Convertible Subordinated Guaranteed Debentures due 1995, and $40,055,500 of indebtedness to certain other unsecured creditors.

W. Phillip Marcum, President and Chief Executive Officer of MGF, stated "the minimum acceptance level for the exchange offer is extremely high, but is vital to MGF's continued existence outside bankruptcy. MGF does not expect its securedlenders to waive or modify the minimum acceptance levels."

Completion of the exchange offer is subject to certain conditions in the preliminary agreement MGF has with its secured lenders including: acceptance of the exchange offer by holders of 95 percent aggregate principal amount of the above noted four issues of subordinated debentures; the termination, by acceptance of the offer, of a rig lease of which General Electric Credit Corp. is the lessor; the acceptance of the offer by holders of 100 percent aggregate principal amount of certain unsecured indebtedness of MGF; the execution of a definitive loan agreement between MGF and the secured lenders; and employment of a Chief Operating Officer. In addition, the approval by MGF's shareholders atan annual meeting to be held September 21, 1984, to increase authorized shares of common stock from 200,000,000 tl 750,000,000 is a general condition to completing the offer.

If succesfully completed, the exchange offer will result in the conversion of approximately $194.4 million of MGF's total indebtedness and other obligations of approximately $315 million into Preferred Stock and common stock and will result in positive stockholder's equity.

In addition, if the exchange offer is successful, MGF will evaluate a corporate readjustment, to be effected in the form of a quasi-reorganization, which will result in the revauation to estimated fair market value of MGF's assets and liabilities.

Marcum also said that MGF also believes the successful completion of the exchange offer will enable MGF to remain a viable entity outside bankruptcy and to satisfy its remaining debt obligations in the ordinary course of business, all based primarily on current conditions.

CURIOUS SHOPPER

Salt substitutes cost more per ounce than salt

By SONJA HEINZE

Q. I am on a salt-restricted diet. I bought a 3 ⅛-ounce container of Morton Salt Substitute, which is mainly potassium chloride, for $1.15. On the same grocer's shelf a 1-pound 10-ounce box of Morton's ordinary salt sells for 23. This means that the salt substitute is more than 41 times more expensive than ordinary salt!

There are many salt-restricted food items sold today. You will find these items, if you compare their prices, to be from 40 percent to 60 percent higher priced than the ordinary variety.

Since most people on salt-restricted diets are elderly, it seems that some greedy manufacturers are taking advantage of those least able to pay. Joseph Mutoli, Clarks Summit, Pa.

A. The pricing of new products in American groceries today is, I agree, a puzzling phenomenon. Soup without salt is much more expensive, as is canned fruit without sugar and ice cream without artificial color.

Although the difference between the price of ordinary table salt and the new salt substitute is exorbitant, Morton's Jane Dudley, their consumer affairs administrator, claims that in order for the sodium content of their product to be less than 10 milligrams per 100 grams of their product, they have to purchase a special grade of potassium chloride from an outside supplier, blend the ingredients in an isolated area away from the manufacture of salt products, and regularly analyze samples for sodium content.

I'm not an economics expert, but it seems to me that these reasons fail to justify the huge difference in price.

Warning: Both Morton Salt and the Food and Drug Administration advise that no one should use these salt substitutes without medical supervision. The major ingredient, potassium chloride, is potentially dangerous and overuse can be fatal. This substance is known to have caused deaths of otherwise healthy individuals.

Q. A recipe I have for Chinese food calls for the addition of soy sauce. The recipe specifically directs not to use imitation soy sauce, only authentic. I didn't know there was a difference in soy sauces, and wonder how I'm supposed to know which is which.

A. True soy sauce is made today in the same manner it was made 2,500 years ago in Japan. Soybeans, wheat, salt and water are fermented for six months.

The way to tell the difference between real and imitation soy sauces is by reading the ingredients list on the bottle. Kikkoman produces authentic soy sauces; Chun King soy sauce is imitation.

Penny stocks can amount to big dollar losses

By LINDA TRUITT

So-called "Penny Stocks," which are generally traded at very low prices and promote new untested products such as electronic asparagus cutters or gold mining operations, have been a growing investment problem.

Penny stock losses have mounted to hundreds of millions of dollars in recent years. State securities regulators have taken scores of actions against dealers for violations of state and provincial securities laws.

Forty-five percent of 78 new penny stock issues recently surveyed by a trade magazine called "Venture" had participants who were convicted felons, securities violators, targets of securities investigations, reputed crime figures or principals who faced serious charges of insider financial misdealing.

In the classic penny stock fraud, promoters assign themselves millions of shares of stock at a fraction of a cent per share, or no cost to them at all. Next a prospectus is prepared disclosing that the product has little or no chance of success and the stock is offered at five or 10 cents a share. The market is then artificially inflated through demand created by the controlling broker who uses pushy, high-pressure tactics to lure investors.

A broker may not allow an investor "in" unless there is a promise to buy more shares later in order to keep the price up. After the share prices reach several dollars the "smart money" gets out and the stock plummets.

Novices often don't realize what is happening and cannot sell in time. After the stock plunges, the development of the "moose pasture" dies and the company goes out of business and promoters line their pockets with the stock proceeds in the company treasury.

In this situation most of the investors will lose a substantial portion, if not all, of their money.

This classic example is not true in all cases of low-priced stocks, but it has been seen numerous times. There are, of course, legitimate companies whose securities are traded at low prices, but discriminating between a legitimate offer and the penny stock fraud can sometimes be difficult.

The following suggestions may be helpful in making a decision when facing the opportunity to buy penny stocks:

— The fraudulent penny stock broker has a "boiler room," a bank of telephones manned by high-pressure salespersons who tout stocks with outrageous promises.

— No matter what the salesperson's claims, get a prospectus and read it. The prospectus is the document containing full disclosure of all the facts about the offering. It must be filed with the state or provincial securities administrator. (In a private deal the document is sometimes called offering circular or offering memorandum and contains much the same information as in a prospectus.) Anything a salesperson says that contradicts disclosures in the prospectus should be a red flag warning. Discrepancies in the management, financial status and the use of proceeds sections usually means something is wrong.

— Find out if the stock is registered with the state securities agency or the Federal Securities Exchange Commission.

CONSUMING INTERESTS

'AlmostHome' cookies just not quite 'home'

By LINDA ANDERSON

Raising teenagers is not easy. Teens have special needs (over and above food, clothing and shelter), including more privacy, freedom to pursue their own interests, encouragement to develop talents, the use of the family car, a telephone of their very own and, of course, chocolate chip cookies.

O.K., I admit teens aren't the only chocolate-chip cookie munchers at our house. I always make sure I have at least one package of chips on hand so I'll be ready whenever the urge to make cookies strikes.

My 3-year-old could eat her weight in cookies. The 1-year-old likes to smoosh the cookies up and smear them in her hair, but the more teeth she gets the more she demands her fair share.

Nabisco has recently introduced a line of cookies, "AlmostHome." These cookies come in different varieties, including favorite flavors like oatmeal, chocolate and peanut butter, but we decided tested — naturally — chocolate chip.

We tested AlmostHome chocolate chip cookies against real homemade chocolate chip cookies and assorted cookies from the store for taste, texture and advertising accuracy. The eager taste-testers were adults, children and teenage chocolate-chip cookie experts.

AlmostHome chocolate chip cookies cost $1.69 for a 12-oz. bag. That is comparable to other brands of chocolate chip cookies, including Keebler's Rich 'n Chips, which cost $1.69 for a 13-oz. bag, Nabisco's Chips Ahoy, $1.68 for a 13-oz. bag and Keebler's Chips Deluxe at $1.68 for a 12-oz. bag.

Nabisco advertises these new cookies as "...so close to homemade in taste, appearance and aroma, you'll be tempted to call them your own!...moist and chewy, like cookies you'd bake at home...so close to homemade you'd almost think they're warm!" The chocolate chip variety has a soft, chewy texture, similar to the texture of homemade chocolate chip cookies. Most commercial chocolate chip cookies are crunchy.

The list of ingredients is similar to that of homemade chocolate chip cookies: brown sugar, honey, vegetable shortening, eggs and "sweet chocolate drops." However, also listed on the ingredients label is calcium phosphate, natural and artifical flavors and cocoa (processed with alkali).

The taste testers agreed the cookies were good. One teenager said she was "in love with these cookies," as she drifted around the kitchen with the cookie bag clutched in one hand, her other hand inside the cookie bag and a hungry expression on her face. The other teen said the cookies were "O.K. for store-bought," and the adult male expressed the same opinion.

The two small children weren't all that impressed with the cookies. They prefer "cookies with white in the middle" — vanilla sandwich cookies filled with vanilla frosting.

The adult female thought the cookies lacked something. They are good cookies (for store bought) but I was disappointed in the taste. My favorite commercially prepared chocolate chip cookies were — and still are — Keebler's Rich 'n Chips.

But homemade cookies still cannot be beat.

Camille Cain, daughter of G.H. and Peggy Cain of Midland, was crowned queen at the Permian Basin Fair & Exposition recently.

Miss Cain, a senior at Midland High School, was among 20 contestants in the pageant and is the first Midlander to have the title since the pageant was organized seven years ago.

Competition categories included a 10-minute interview with judges, stage interviews, evening gowns and a dance performed with the group.

Miss Cain was named Miss Midessa Teen in February and will compete in the Miss Texas Teen USA pageant in El Paso against 50 other contestants for a cash college scholarhip. The Teen pageant is not affiliated with the Permian Basin Fair pageant. She will compete in the fair pageant finals, the Miss West Texas pageant, in June 1985.

The fair pageant will award the 17-year-old queen entry fees for the June competition and a $1,600 college scholarship.

On Wednesday, Miss Cain was named youth chairman of the Reagan, Bush and Gramm campaign in Midland. She is also president of Teenage Republicans of Midland.

She plans to major in business administration at the University of Texas. An enthusiast of jazz and modern dance, photography and politics, she has been accepted by the Who's Who Among American High School Students.

Latest electric wheelchair looks, feels comfortable

Copley News Service

Dan Meyers feels electric wheelchairs, which are intended largely for the seriously disabled, have a psychological hazard: they give the impression of illness and helplessness.

"They clearly started out as manual folding wheelchairs and someone added a motor," said Meyers, an electrical engineer by trade and the president of Davis-Smith Corp., a San Diego manufacturer of recording heads. "There's still that feeling that wheelchairs are for the handicapped."

Yet there are people like Meyers' mother, Ruth, of North Tonawanda, N.Y., who have medical conditions that don't necessitate an electric wheelchair, but who could make great use of one. However, there is the psychological problem of getting into a chair that is for truly handicapped people, and the added problem of the fact that standard electric wheelchairs are unwieldy around the house.

"My mother has severe arthritis, and she can't get around without two canes and a leg brace," said Meyers. "One day when I was visiting her, I said, 'Mama, we're going to buy you an electric wheelchair,' but when we looked at them, we found they were too big and ugly and not maneuverable around the house."

He pointed out the large wheels most of the electric wheelchairs have, and the width needed to turn around. "She had a 24-inch-wide door, and the chair we saw was wider than that.

"So I said, 'I'll build you what you'd like to have,'" and the result is MobilChair 360.

One of the first things you notice that makes MobilChair so different is its appearance. First, you see basically a fabric-covered, cushioned seat and back chair with a cushion armrest. You see no wheels; they are hidden under the chair. Then you notice that the chair has a seating width of 18½ inches, but its narrow tubular steel frame is only 19½ inches wide.

The chair is 18 inches off the floor, designed to roll under most standard-height tables, and the wheels are large enough to roll over thick carpeting or sliding glass door frames. And the chair dimensions are so compact that it can do a complete 360-degree turn in a 37-inch-diameter circle.

The chair is quite comfortable, and includes a carpeted footrest that may be raised electrically to allow the user to sit down without contortions. Also, the wheels are locked in place when it is stationary, so a person who must lean on something before sitting down doesn't have to fear the chair will roll away.

DEAR ABBY

Halloween safety hints offered

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: It's a little early to be thinking about Halloween, but I know you prepare your column several weeks in advance so I'm writing you now.

For several years, we at Mercy Hospital in Charlotte, N.C., have watched the fun of Halloween being replaced by fear and dread among parents as more incidents of candy tampering are reported in the news media.

This year, for the 10th consecutive year, Mercy Hospital in Charlotte and the Mercy Urgent Care Center in Pineville, N.C., will offer free X-rays of candy for children in our area.

Over the years, hundreds of families have taken advantage of this offer. X-rays, as you probably know, will detect only metal or solid objects in candy or fruit. X-rays will not detect poisons or drugs, however, so parents should still check their children's candy for signs of tampering: discoloration, or torn or punctured wrappers.

The local police departments from Charlotte and Mecklenburg County also made these suggestions, which we pass on to the public at Halloween:

— Parents or an older sibling should accompany young children as they make their rounds at Halloween.

— Trick-or-treaters should stay in familiar neighborhoods.

— Children should avoid masks that could impair their vision, and cumbersome shoes that could cause them to trip.

— Children should eat nothing until the "treats" are inspected.

— Children should dress in bright-colored clothing, or wear reflective costumes so they can be seen at dusk by drivers.

— Observe one of the most important rules of all: NEVER go inside the house of someone the child doesn't know well.

Thank you, Abby. With a little luck, we can make Halloween safe for all children everywhere. — PHIL WHITESELL, VICE PRESIDENT, PUBLIC RELATIONS

Soul singer struggles to regain his mobility, career

By RICHARD HARRINGTON
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

GLADWYNE, Pa. — Twenty minutes from Philadelphia, the roads are uninvitingly curvy, snaking through a green forest sparsely dotted with expensive houses. At the end of one long driveway sits the mansion on the hill, elegantly Tudor, its 34 marbled rooms open to the soft light that floats through whip-fresh country air.

Chateau D'Amour.

Its privacy is defined by tall black iron gates and stony walls that loom and is ensured by an imposing dog house adorned with a scrawled threat — "Killer's Place."

The man who owns this house is earth-handsome and bristle-bearded, elegant in his stylish red track suit and sneakers. When he talks, he moves his head easily, his arms less elegantly. That is all. Though he has some strength in his biceps, he cannot move his fingers, and must guide his motorized wheelchair with gestures that are sometimes awkward, and sometimes apprehensive.

"If I go forward, you better catch me," he warns. "I'm just beginning to understand these things."

Teddy Pendergrass, 34, once the most popular soul singer in America, is paralyzed from the shoulders down. He has been a quadriplegic since March 18, 1982, when his luxurious Rolls-Royce careened off a guardrail in nearby Germantown and crashed into a tree. Pendergrass' neck was broken, his spinal cord crushed. It took police 45 minutes to cut him out of his car and rush him to the Spinal Cord Injury Center at Thomas Jefferson University Hospital.

WHEN PENDERGRASS woke up moments after the crash, he knew he was alive, but he couldn't feel it. "I realized I was still here because I saw the wreckage," he says softly. "After that I didn't know very much of anything."

In the chill of that early spring morning, Teddy Pendergrass ended his career as one of the most charismatic singers and sex symbols in pop music and began his battle for survival. If there was to be life, there must also be song, or the life was not worth living. To hear that first note, to make that first sound, was downright scary.

"There was no time when I said, 'Well, now I'm going to try,'" Pendergrass says, reliving moments that must once have seemed endless. "It wasn't until after all the hospital rigmarole and the tests that I recognized I could probably still make a go of singing. I hummed, starting out with television commercials. I thought to myself, 'Well, I'm still in tune.' That's when I became conscious I was going to make a go of it, come hell or high water."

The hell would come first. It soon became apparent that the injuries had left Teddy Pendergrass significantly paralyzed from the neck down, with functional use of and sensations in only his shoulders and elbows. Even now he must be fed and exercised by attendants, who take care of all his needs.

FOR PENDERGRASS, known to his predominantly female fans as Teddy Bear, the accident — and with it the revelation that his carmate, Tanika Watson, was a well-known transsexual with a long arrest record (Pendergrass insists he didn't know) — was the greatest in a series of personal tragedies that included the still-unsolved murder of his manager and at least one attempt on his life by a distraught fan. If he had his way, it would be the last.

"I'm constantly trying to be on the upswing," Pendergrass says. "I'm going to do the best to hell I can. I've always been sensitive to the problems other people have, tried to help elevate others' spirits. When this happened to me, all that concern for other people, I borrowed some of it. I use it for myself, to get up, to try to feel alive. Because I'm going to be here until I go...

"But it's hard. I've always been one to operate under pressure. You take me to the line and say it's time to go, whatever may be the problem, I tend to use that as a motivating factor. I remember the days when things weren't financially decent at all. I'm talking about the $10-a-show nights and you worked five shows a night. That's a test. How bad do you want to be in show business? Are you willing to walk to work, do five shows and walk back home, to crawl through the city? I feel if I can get above that...

"I do know what it is to have some success. And to have no success. I've done that three or four times. I've had to move out, move back, move out, move back." Pendergrass looks around at the expanse of his "joint," as he likes to call Chateau D'Amour. "To be very honest," he says, "sure I looked at another house. I don't need this big tub. This ain't necessarily for me, it's for everybody else. It's a comfortable place to be, but I certainly don't need the size. I think I can make pretty much any adjustment."

LAT Photo

Teddy Pendergrass, 34, once the most popular soul singer in America, is paralyzed from the shoulders down. He was paralyzed in a 1982 automobile accident.

GLADWYNE IS quite an adjustment after the North Philadelphia ghetto where Pendergrass grew up. It was there that he started singing in church at age 2, became an ordained Pentecostal minister at age 10, a self-taught drummer at 13. His mother, for whom he bought another "joint" in Gladwyne, is deeply religious and, says Pendergrass, "there was no rock music in my house when I was growing up. I didn't go to a party until I was 14. I was a late bloomer."

Eventually he joined a group called the Cadillacs (as a drummer), which merged with another Philadelphia group, the Blue Notes. By 1970 Pendergrass had moved from behind the drum kit to center stage as lead vocalist. He stayed there until 1976, when, after an acrimonious split, he embarked on a solo career that turned him into a major pop idol. His performances, some of them before women-only audiences, were stereotypically macho, yet his talents as a singer were never obscured.

"I found a road to go down that would be rewarding musically and careerwise," Pendergrass explains, "and that was to sing about love. To this day, I don't understand the difference between a love song and a gospel song. I guess it all depends on who you're singing it to. It's all from the heart, it's all honest. It all flows together."

ALTHOUGH HE recently released his first album since the accident, it's obvious that Pendergrass' first order of business is his continued physical therapy, which includes electrical muscle stimulation and biofeedback, and what he calls "mental therapy." He seems on top of things, though he's quick to admit, "I have my days. I have my days."

Kid's rock LP on market

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Children have listened to rock 'n' roll for years, but now comes Steve Zaldin with a rock LP and video aimed especially at children aged 4 to 10.

The album is called "Rock of Young Ages" and the lyrics address the things that children think about — "frustration, sadness, the need for reassurance and parental love, the reality that stepmothers are mothers, too," he said.

Cosby returns to network television

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

ENTERTAINMENT

LOS ANGELES — After the mayhem on the networks' new detective series here comes a night to recover your sense of humor and laugh.

Bill Cosby makes his return to network television in a new comedy series for NBC that debuts tonight. Now that's something to rejoice about. Cosby has lost none of his magic and it is far and away the best new comedy of the season.

In "The Cosby Show" he plays a New York City obstetrician who has a wife and four children. That right there is an interesting development — a real family.

But, of course, everything doesn't run smoothly at home, and that's where Cosby's deft touch lifts it above the ordinary. When he returns home one night he finds his son has made all "D's" on his report card. His wife (Phylicia Ayers-Allen) wants him to handle it because "he'll just say 'no problem' and then I'll kill him."

Cosby says, "I see, what you want me to do is go upstairs and kill him for you." Exactly. Cosby handles his son in a manner that is not only funny but intelligent. He is more than a match for his offspring's maneuvers.

The comedy also stars Malcolm-Jamal Warner as his son, and Tempestt Bledsoe, Lisa Bonet and Keshia Knight Pulliam as his daughters.

That's the good news about the Cosby show. The bad news is that its competition on CBS is the highly successful "Magnum, P.I."

ABC's main event for tonight, which directly follows "The Cosby Show," is "Who's the Boss?" This comedy series doesn't quite have the same impact, but it's not bad, either.

Tony Danza stars as a former athlete who takes on a job as a live-in housekeeper to support his young daughter. Judith Light is the business executive who reluctantly hires Danza to look after the household and her young son.

ABC's term for it is that "she's French vintage. He's Milwaukee suds." In an earlier time it would have been said they have a Katharine Hepburn-Spencer Tracy relationship. They spar a little and there is the electricity of romantic tension in the air. Danza comes off well as the lovable roughneck and Miss Light manages to hold her own and be irresistable at the same time.

Aman Folk Ensemble to open MCC season

Aman Folk Ensemble, an American folk group ensemble, will be the opening act of Midland Community Concerts season. The performance is set for 8 p.m. Saturday at Midland High School Auditorium.

For many years, Aman has performed annual concerts at the Los Angeles Music Center, on college campuses and in other theaters throughout California. This year, the group performed for the Olympics Arts Festival and was chosen to be one of the featured groups in the Opening Ceremonies of the 1984 Olympic Games.

Founded in Los Angeles in 1964 for the purpose of preserving and presenting America's multi-cultural heritage of folkloric music, song and dance, the company takes its name from the biblical affirmative that Eastern Europeans and Middle Easterners pronounce "Aman," and Americans "Amen."

Now celebrating its 20th season, the Aman Folk Ensemble made its first international tour in 1983-84 under the auspices of the United States Information Agency. The group traveled to seven countries in North Africa and the Middle East.

This season, audiences will be treated to a work that was especially created for the Olympics, the California Heritage Suite. The program will also include folk music and dance presentations from Eastern Europe, North Africa, India, the Orient, South America, the British Isles and North America.

MCC is an all volunteer association that conducts its membership drive in the spring. Admission to concerts is by subscription membership only.

Those who joined MCC but have not received their season membership tickets need to call Helen Codington, 694-0176.

Brothers enjoy acting with each other

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Randy Quaid. Vital statistics: age 34; height, 6 feet 4 inches; profession, top character actor and currently an Emmy nominee for his supporting role in "A Streetcar Named Desire."

Dennis Quaid. Vital statistics: age 30; height, 6 feet; profession, leading-man type with starring roles in "Dreamscape," "The Right Stuff" and "Breaking Away."

They're both actors and they're also brothers. And they're playing brothers on stage in Sam Shephard's "True West."

The play was a hit off-Broadway, where the Quaids also performed together. Now they're doing it again closer to home, at the L.A. Stage Company in Hollywood, and they have tentative plans to take the play to London next year.

Do people ever get them confused?

"Our mother does," Randy said.

"Our mother calls me Randy all the time," agreed Dennis.

In the play, Dennis is a prosperous screenwriter confronted by his ne'er-do-well brother, who promptly invades his life.

In real life, it was Randy who succeeded first.

Both began acting at Bellaire High School in Houston. "I took the class because the room was air-conditioned," said Randy.

Later, both attended the University of Houston. While in college, Randy was cast by Peter Bogdanovich in "The Last Picture Show," and was later flown to Los Angeles for "What's Up, Doc?" and "Paper Moon."

Why did Dennis begin acting? "I waited to see how much money Randy could make and then I started," he joked.

In fact, he followed his brother to Hollywood. "I hung out for a year and I got a job a year to the day after I got here," Dennis said.

Their father, Buddy Quaid, an electrician, had been dubious about his sons' chose profession at first, but later began acting part time. He appeared with Dennis in "The Night the Lights Went Out in Georgia."

The brothers first professionally performed together in the film, "The Longriders." They were cast as — what else? — brothers.

Then, when Dennis was asked to star in "True West," he suggested Randy for the other leading role. Both say they identify with the story.

"The play's really about all siblings and the rivalries and the jealousies that go on," said Dennis. "It's really our relationship when we were 9 and 13."

They said they had no trouble working together, though, according to Dennis, "It was a little scary at first."

After "True West," Dennis will fly to Munich to star with Lou Gossett Jr. in "Enemy Mine," directed by Wolfgang Petersen.

Audiences will be able to see Randy in two movies awaiting release: Universal's "The Wild Life" and Columbia's "Slugger's Wife," written by Neil Simon.

Will 'Dallas' dazzle in syndication?

By PETER W. KAPLAN
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — "Dallas," the serialized drama of greed and power in Texas that promoted itself around the world as a stereotype of American values, will go into syndication in 112 markets, distributed by Lorimar, the company that also produces it.

Rarely has the television industry succeeded in recycling a serialized program, as opposed to series with self-contained plots, such as "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" and "M*A*S*H." If "Dallas" succeeds in its presentation around the country, it will have strong ramifications in television in general.

In addition to the recycled serial — which begins in New York on Sept. 24 — CBS will begin its new season of fresh Dallas episodes on Sept. 28.

In the last few years, concern has grown among independent stations that they would not have the programming they needed to reliably bring in audiences: The situation comedy, which for years had been the mainstay of their schedule, had dried up as a network programming staple, and they had nothing to replace it with. "Dallas," the most popular program on television, is a serial, and already-used serial episodes have not been successful as summer repeats. When "Dallas" became available for independent stations there was less than a huge rush to pick it up.

LORIMAR, HOWEVER, took measures to create a fresh situation with its successful series: The company spent $500,000 and shot a series of 45-second openers for the syndicated programs in which Larry Hagman, who plays the notorious J.R. Ewing on the series, and a number of the other players, set up the program to come with plot teasers. This was meant to quell the fear independent stations had that viewers would not tune into a program whose premise was based on plot information they did not necessarily have.

Ken Page, the president of television distribution at Lorimar, said that he didn't know if it would work, and didn't even feel as though the set-ups were necessary. "We're in a speculative arena," he said. "We debuted the program in Dallas last week. We did spectacularly. Is that conclusive? I don't know. It's one week." Mr. Page said the program had drawn a 40 percent share of the television sets that were turned on during the hour it was broadcast.

Nevertheless, Page said, there were unknowns in the picture, which his company — with more serialized programs, like "Knots Landing," to be sold at higher prices if "Dallas" succeeds — had to consider. "Dallas," he said, " is a phenomenon. A phenomenon is something that defies description. We have zero here, no prior description, no experience about what happens when this kind of program is run every day. I do know that we'll be looking at a $25 million investment running across the screen Monday-to-Friday."

IT'S NOT ONLY Lorimar that has a concern over whether the program works immediately and in the long run. Independent stations have invested a great deal, and they are tense about the outcome.

"It's a sequential, or an episodic situation," said Pat Servodidio, the president of WOR-TV in New York which will run the "Dallas" repeats Monday through Friday at 7 p.m. "With 'Dallas' the question is, can you turn old audience habits into new loyalty?"

In New York, starting next week, "Dallas" will be on the air six hours a week, broadcasting 161 episodes for which WOR-TV has paid what Servodidio called "a handsome amount."

It was on CBS that the program built since its inauspicious introduction as a mini-series in 1978, when it finished 40th in the ratings. The next year, it became the sixth-rated series in the nation, and the first in 1980.

It is primarily watched by slightly older, slightly less educated Americans, and it is watched more in the South and in rural areas than it is in the rest of the United States, but throughout the country, through all television-watching groups, the program's audience is as high as anything being broadcast.

Actress likes acting, not public speaking

NEW YORK (AP) — Academy Award-winning actress Joanne Woodward has no trouble getting in front of a camera or on a stage. But just tell her to give a speech and she heads to the shower.

"Speaking is not something I do well," she said in an interview. "I guess because I'm a character actress, it's very hard for me to stand up in my own skin."

So when she has to give a speech, she practices in the shower. "Because I sweat so. It's terrifying," the actress said.

Miss Woodward was preparing to give two major speeches at the recent National Women's Conference to Prevent Nuclear War in Washington.

But the rest of our seats have no restrictions what-so-ever. Not so much as a single word.

Which means you don't have to worry about an advance purchase or a minimum stay. You can get one of Frontier's low peak or lower off-peak fares no matter how soon you want to leave, no matter how long you want to stay, no matter what. WORLD IN BRIEF

American drops pants in court

MONTREAL (AP) — A 65-year-old American accused of planting the bomb that killed three people in a Montreal railroad station lowered his pants during a court session at which he declared his innocence.

"I'm not part of the bomb squad, I am the truth squad," said Thomas Brigham, a native of Rochester, N.Y., during a six-minute arraignment Wednesday on three charges of first-degree murder. "I couldn't be part of a heinous thing like this."

Although handcuffed, Brigham managed to drop his trousers moments after he arrived in the courtroom. He remained in his shorts until he was led back to his cell.

On the advice of a psychiatrist, Judge Bernard Grenier placed Brigham in custody for 30 days to undergo psychiatric examination before he enters a plea.

Brigham was arrested at a rooming house hours after a pipe bomb exploded Sept. 3 in a locker at Central Station, killing three French tourists. The blast occurred a week before Pope John Paul II arrived in Montreal on his 12-day Canadian visit.

'Reagan against Cuban visit'

MEXICO CITY (AP) — An American lawyer visiting Havana said President Reagan is trying to prevent U.S. intellectuals from visiting Cuba, the official Cuban news agency Prensa Latina reports.

In a dispatch Wednesday, Prensa Latina quoted Harold Meyerson, identified as the legal adviser for the Marazul travel agency, as saying Reagan doesn't want American intellectuals to learn about the economic and social reality of Cuba.

The dispatch said Meyerson is in Havana along with a group of lawyers attending a symposium about politics and ideology and their relationship with the law.

Prensa Latina quoted Meyerson as saying proof of Reagan's intentions toward those who travel to Cuba is a demand from the U.S. Treasury Department that Marazul turn over its information about some 2,000 lawyers who received catalogues about the forum in Havana.

Hungarians asking for help

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Hungarian environmentalists are asking Austrians to help them fight a huge Soviet bloc power project which they say will cause irreversible damage to a long stretch of the Danube River.

The Hungarians, members of a group known as the Independent Danube Circle, are seeking Austrian support for a petition campaign they began this summer. It was believed to be the largest environmental protest ever in the Soviet bloc.

An appeal being circulated in Vienna says the project, which includes plans to dam or divert a 138-mile stretch of the Danube, "completely ignores economic factors, in particular the supply of drinking water and the protection of nature."

Plans call for construction of power plants in Czechoslovakia and Hungary. Austria says it is considering helping Hungary finance its part of the project in return for a supply of power.

The Independent Danube Circle said construction of the plant would endanger drinking water supplies of 5 million to 8 million people.

Socialist, Communist to share

SAN MARINO (AP) — The Parliament of this tiny mountain republic has elected a Socialist and a Communist to share executive power for the six months beginning Oct. 1.

The Great and General Council, San Marino's legislature, picked Socialist Marino Bollini, 51, and Communist Giuseppe Amici, 45, to be the new captains-regent, according to an announcement Wednesday.

A Communist-dominated coalition has ruled San Marino, a 23.6-square-mile enclave in Italy's Apennine mountains, since 1978. New captains-regent are elected every six months by the council.

San Marino, founded in the year 301, is the world's oldest republic.

Head of state fires official

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — Head of state Samuel K. Doe has fired his information minister for allegedly implying that the military leader wants to establish a dictatorship.

A statement issued by Doe's office Wednesday said Alhaji Kromah was dismissed because he made persistent references to the establishment of a dictatorship and a one-party system. It said the comment undermined Doe's attempts to ensure a smooth transition to democratic rule in 1986.

Doe, an army sergeant who came to power in a 1980 coup in this West African state, has scheduled elections for October 1985 and a return to civilian rule in January 1986.

The statement said it was "false and misleading" to say Doe wanted to establish a one-party state or dictatorship.

Doe, who has said he will run for the presidency, has had nine former government officials and potential political opponents arrested since cutting short a foreign trip last month on learning of an alleged conspiracy against his regime.

Sandinista supporters attack opposition leader at school

LEON, Nicaragua (AP) — Several thousand Sandinista supporters trapped opposition leader Arturo Cruz in a school during a political meeting, then hurled stones and mud and spit on him as he was evacuated by police, leaders of Cruz's coalition and witnesses said.

Cruz, 54, leader of the Nicaraguan Democratic Coordinate, was hit on the forehead by a rock but was not seriously injured in the incident Wednesday, said Rivas Leiva, president of the Social Democrat Party.

The coordinate — Nicaragua's main opposition group — is composed of the Social Democrats, three other parties, two labor federations and a business association. The coalition selected Cruz as its presidential candidate but refused to register for the Nov. 4 elections because the leftist Sandinista government did not meet its conditions.

Cruz, a former ambassador to Washington for the Sandinista government, "remained calm despite the threats against him by the mob," said Leonel Briceno Gonzalez, owner of the English Center, a private institute in Leon where the political meeting was to take place.

"We were getting ready to start the meeting...when the mob began to arrive, and it looked like they were going to enter the building and lynch us," Rivas Leiva said.

He said he and many of the roughly 200 local coalition leaders at the meeting escaped by climbing over the roofs of nearby houses in this city 50 miles northwest of Managua.

"They were furious," Rivas Leiva said, "and were banging on the doors of the school with clubs. They were screaming that he was an agent of imperialism and an emissary of (President) Reagan."

Witnesses said many of the demonstrators had painted their faces red and black, the colors of the ruling Sandinista National Liberation Front, while others wore red and black neckerchiefs, the symbol of the front.

Cruz reportedly was trapped in the building for more than three hours. A witness who spoke on condition of anonymity said demonstrators tried to overturn a police jeep in which Cruz was evacuated.

"Despite the police protection, some people managed to spit on him and throw mud on his clothes," Briceno said.

Rivas Leiva said that while Cruz was trapped, he spoke by telephone with the president of Colombia, Belisario Betancur, who was able to hear the screams of the mob outside.

Cruz returned Friday from a series of visits to Colombia and other Latin American nations with democratically elected governments. He said presidents of all the countries offered support for his efforts to insure that Nicaragua's elections be free and honest.

Among its conditions, the coalition has demanded an end to press censorship and a halt to harassment by Sandinista supporters.

Besides the Sandinista front, six minor parties are taking part in the election of a president, vice president and national assembly.

A government source said Wednesday that Betancur called junta coordinator Daniel Ortega last week to press him to meet the coalition's demands.

The source said Betancur encouraged Ortega to postpone the election to give the major opposition parties time to conduct a campaign if they decide to participate but "Ortega said that was not possible because the campaign was too far along."

In El Salvador, Attorney General Jose Francisco Guerrero, a member of an far-right Republican Nationalist Alliance, said Wednesday he opposes plans to have a special panel investigate political murders.

Guerrero, whose office is independent of the executive branch, said his legal department was investigating whether President Jose Napoleon Duarte had the constitutional authority to create an investigative commission. Duarte set up the commission Aug. 28.

Presidential spokesman Gerardo Le Chevalier said Duarte had such authority under a broad interpretation of constitutional powers.

Among the cases the commission plans to investigate are the murders of Roman Catholic Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero in March 1980 and two U.S. labor experts and a Salvadoran official on Jan. 3, 1981.

Duarte, visiting Venezuela, said Wednesday that no U.S. or other foreign troops would be allowed in his nation but that U.S. military advisers could continue to operate in El Salvador, which is fighting a five-year-old war against leftist guerrillas.

Owners say wildcat strikes over

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The owners of one of South Africa's largest gold mines said 99 percent of 16,000 striking black miners returned to work today, ending a five-day series of strikes that left seven dead and almost 500 wounded nationwide.

In continuing unrest in the vast black township of Soweto, police shot and killed a black youth Wednesday in one of several clashes with crowds of stone-throwers, police Lt. Derick van der Walt said in the capital, Pretoria.

Excluding the mine deaths, police figures and unofficial church estimates show about 60 blacks have died in violence in black townships since Aug. 31, when school boycotts and protests against rent increases erupted in rioting.

The end of the illegal strike at Hartebeestfontein Mine, the nation's seventh-biggest gold producer, came after owners threatened to dismiss strikers, said Ray Moore, spokesman for Anglovaal Ltd., which owns the mine.

Miners launched the strike Monday to demand immediate recognition at the mine of the national black miners' union. The owners said the union's long-standing application was being processed.

Moore had said the strike involved 10,000 of 12,000 day-shift workers Wednesday, but today he said a total of 16,000 of the mine's 18,000 black workers from all shifts had taken part in the strike.

Wednesday afternoon, police used tear-gas and rubber bullets to break up crowds of strikers at the mine, 108 miles southwest of Johannesburg, said van der Walt. The miners were dispersed as they moved toward management offices.

Wednesday night, police again used tear gas to disperse crowds gathered outside residential hostels on the mine, van der Walt said. No injuries were reported in either incident.

The mine violence broke out during the nation's first legal black miners' strike, called by the 2-year-old National Union of Mineworkers at seven gold mines owned by Anglo American Corp. on Sunday after a pay dispute.

Anglo made a last-minute offer to give unskilled workers half-pay during annual one-month holidays, effectively bringing the pay increase package to 16.3 percent above current monthly average wages of $222 monthly for black miners. The union presented the offer to members on the seven Anglo mines.

While the offer was debated, violence flared at two Anglo mines, and police used birdshot, rubber bullets and tear-gas to break up crowds of what the company called "intimidators."

Anglo said 250 black miners were hurt, and the union accused the company of using excessive force against peaceful, legal strikers.

About 40,000 miners refused to work at the Anglo mines until the offer was approved by union members. The strike was legal because the union has formal recognition from Anglo on the mines and went through lengthy arbitration steps after declaring a dispute.

During the legal strike, illegal walkouts began at three non-union mines — Durban Roodepoort Deep, Western Areas Gold Mine and Hartebeestfontein — with miners demanding union recognition or benefits like those given Anglo American union miners.

At Western Areas, owned by Johannesburg Consolidated Investment Co., seven miners were killed and 112 injured in battles with police.
