Oil price declines should reverse by 1990

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

SAN ANTONIO — Good news and bad news on oil prices were delivered to members of the Independent Petroleum Association of America here for its 56th annual meeting.

"The price of crude oil will decline two or three dollars until 1987, but by 1990 it should be back up to $32 per barrel. By 1995, it will be about $43 per barrel while gas prices will be $6 per MCF," said Larry Byrd, a Houston-based petroleum engineering consultant who calculates petroleum reserves in oilfields around the world.

On the negative side, Byrd said continuing unchecked production and reserves decline mean the U.S. will be importing twice as much oil by the year 2000, dramatically affecting the country's balance of payments.

"OPEC may be having its problems now," said Byrd, "but we need to keep the problem in perspective. The Middle East has more reserves than the rest of the world put together." Of the 700 billion barrels of reserves in the world today, the Middle East has almost 400 billion, while the U.S. only has 12 percent. In addition, he said the Middle East is accounting for 21 percent of total production while the U.S. is producing 24 percent, therefore drawing down U.S. reserves at a faster rate.

■ IPAA also discusses import fees — Page 6C

To put the problem in perspective, Byrd noted that average production per well in the U.S. is only 14 barrels of oil per day, while it is 300 barrels per day for the rest of the world. He predicted a strong demand for drilling in the next decade, saying that world population increases would cause petroleum demand to climb, and that current production levels would be unable to meet the demand.

Byrd is concerned about declining petroleum reserves around the world, saying that reserves in all major oilfields are declining. "It will take a lot of drilling to replace those reserves," he said.

The only recent significant reserve increase was in Columbia, which went up by 79 percent, but only 100,000 barrels a day of that find could be classified as excess production, according to Byrd. Mexico, the biggest supplier for the U.S., has estimated reserves of 50 billion barrels, but Byrd believes those may be overstated by one to two times. And the prospects of developing future reserves in Mexico is in doubt because of that country's tremendous debt, he said.

"The North Sea has tremendous potential," said Byrd, "but it is dwarfed by the Middle East, and offshore China has not proven to be as successful as thought."

Gallery gunmen sought

PARIS (AP) — French police hunted today for gunmen who held up an art gallery and vanished with nine paintings, including works by Monet and Renoir, that one museum official said showed the bandits had the eye of "connoisseurs."

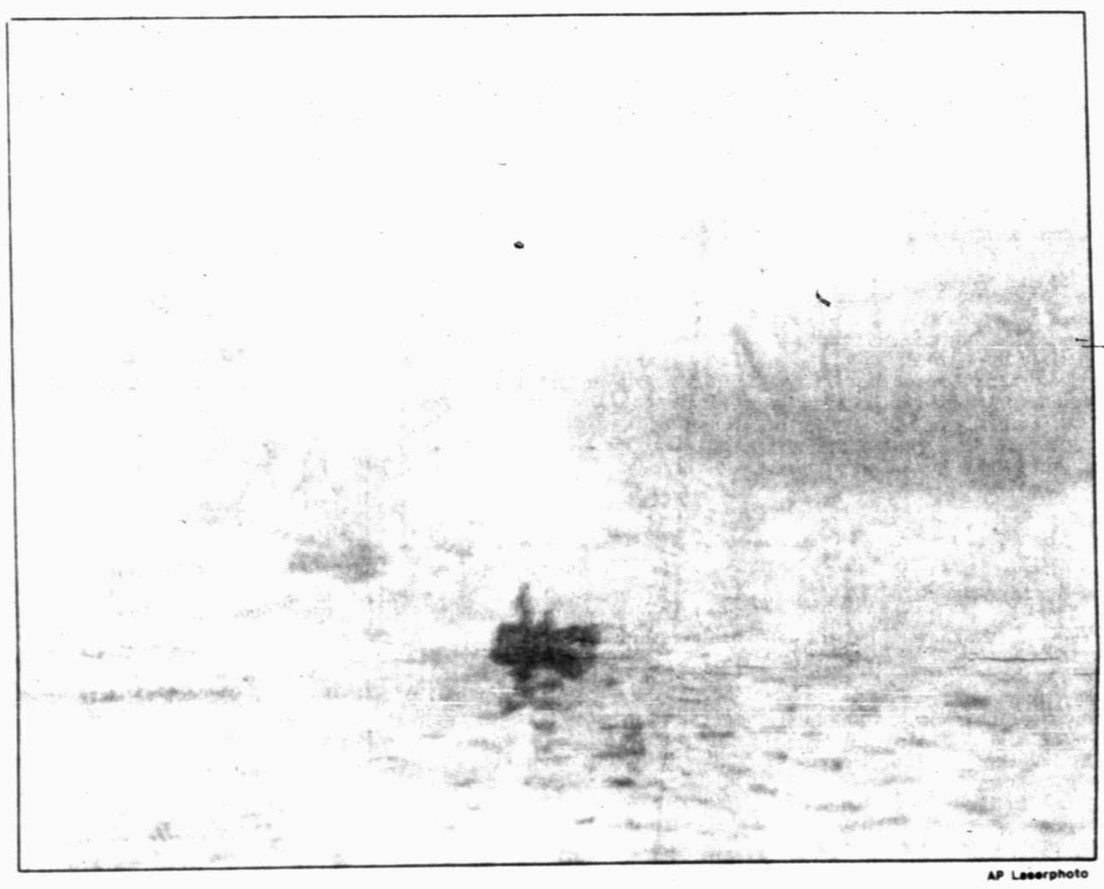

The thieves, said by police to number at least five, surged into the Marmottan Museum with pistols drawn during visiting hours Sunday. They forced guards and visitors to lie on the floor and fanned out through the gallery.

Within five minutes they were gone, along with artwork estimated to be worth $12.5 million, said Marmottan curator Yves Brayer.

"(It's) as if someone had stolen the 'Mona Lisa,'" said a shaken Brayer. "It's the theft of the century."

Among the canvasses stolen was Claude Monet's "Impression Soleil Levant" (Impression Sunrise), a port scene that gave the late 19th century Impressionist movement its name. Brayer said the painting "has no price" because of its historic value.

Midland man's conviction voided by jury misconduct

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

A 21-year-old Midland man found guilty Friday of voluntary manslaughter had his conviction voided this morning when 142nd District Judge Pat Baskin declared a mistrial due to jury misconduct.

Frankie Madrid Lujan was to be sentenced today by a seven-man, five-woman jury which deliberated more than eight hours Friday before convicting him of voluntary manslaughter in the July 6 stabbing death of 20-year-old Daniel Ozuna Padilla.

Instead, Baskin called the jurors in about 9:30 a.m. and announced he was granting defense attorney Richard Alvarado's motion for a mistrial. According to several courtroom sources, the jury misconduct occurred during deliberations Friday when one juror produced a lockblade knife supposedly similar to the one Lujan admitted using — in self-defense, he claimed — on Padilla.

Another juror called Baskin Saturday to report the incident, which is considered improper because a jury is supposed to consider only the evidence presented in the courtroom by the attorneys. The knife used on Padilla was not found by police.

"We'll just have to try the whole thing again with another jury another day," said Alvarado. "I welcome the chance to retry this case" and try to persuade a different jury his client acted in self-defense.

Baskin and First Assistant District Attorney David Rosado declined to comment on the mistrial.

A pathologist testified Padilla was stabbed five times, including a fatal wound to the heart. Testimony from both sides indicated Padilla approached Lujan outside a party in the Lakewood apartment complex, 4410 Lanham, and a fight broke out. The defense claimed the smaller Lujan stabbed Padilla in self-defense; Rosado said the defendant could have run away, but wanted revenge for a fight he'd lost to Padilla about a year earlier.

Lujan was charged with murder, but the jury convicted him of the lesser included offense of voluntary manslaughter. He faced a penalty range of two to 20 years in state prison.

Republican women urged to seek elected positions

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

It was author James Michener who wrote of a herd of cattle lead by a cow and not the bull: "For the leadership of a large group is too important to be left only to the males."

Reading those words, Marta Greytok of Houston urged the audience at the Texas Federation of Republican Women's state convention to run for political offices rather than serving only in a support role.

During the concluding luncheon Sunday at Midland Center, Ms. Greytok and Judy Hughes, president-elect of the National Federation of Republican Women, painted a picture showing the time is ripe for women to enter political races and predicted a woman will be on the GOP presidential ticket in the near future.

Ms. Greytok, a former nurse, became frustrated with unresolved issues in Taylor Lake Village, ran for mayor and won. She now serves as chairman of the board of the Harris County Central Appraisal District. It wasn't until the 1970s, she said, that women began entering political races as candidates. "The 1980s will bring even greater advances. Maybe we can double or quadruple our numbers."

In trying to encourage several women at the convention to run for office, Ms. Greytok said she found that many view themselves only in the supporting role. "We have to look in our mirror and say 'Why not me?' The bottom line is that the pendulum is swinging in the direction of the female candidate."

Even George Strake, state Republican chairman, has suggested TFRW seek creditable candidates from their ranks to run for office, she related.

Winning isn't impossible, according to Ms. Greytok, who looked at the three women now serving on the five-member Denton County Commissioners' Court. "Running for public office should be our priority over the next several years," she said.

Using the quote from James Michener about the cow leading the herd of cattle, Ms. Greytok summarized, "In short, ladies, let's go home and saddle up. Your country needs you."

Ms. Hughes from Colorado has been involved in the Republican women's group since she was 23 and has been chosen by the National Republican Committee in previous years as a surrogate speaker for the Reagan campaign. That has placed her against such political opposites as Democrat Bella Abzug, according to Lou Brown, who introduced Ms. Hughes.

"The Republican Party nationally is on a roll," she said, adding that inflation, food prices, gasoline costs and income taxes are down.

In 1984, Republican philosophies attracted more women to the party than did the Democrats, even though there was a woman (Geraldine Ferraro) on the presidential ticket, Ms. Hughes contended. She said polls showed that 10 percent more women voted for the Republican ticket in 1984 than did in 1980. Of that amount, there were 15 percent more women under the age of 30.

"There was no gender gap. A woman will grace the Republican ticket soon, but she will be the right woman," said Ms. Hughes.

The party has grown since early 1984, according to her figures. TFRW is pushing almost 10,000 members and the national group boasts of 160,000 in 2,600 clubs.

Nationally, the Republican women's organization needs to turn its appeal more to the young working woman, she said. "A young woman can find political involvement at every stage of her life."

U.S. Committee for Energy Awareness at work in Amarillo

AMARILLO (AP) — The U.S. Committee for Energy Awareness, a group formed by nuclear energy producers, has made its first footprints into Amarillo.

The group sent two nuclear waste experts to meet with the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce last week.

It has also hired the local advertising and public relations firm Holland, Merriman and Welty Inc. to help provide information about nuclear waste in the Panhandle.

But some critics say what the committee is really spreading is "misinformation" designed to create a receptiveness for the U.S. Department of Energy's plans to build a high-level nuclear waste repository in one of three states.

"We know from what CEA has done in other first round repository states that the first stage of their approach is to hire a local advertising firm," said Don Hancock, director of Southwest Information and Resource Center in Albuquerque, N.M.

"They then set up some sort of local citizens committee (and) bring in outside speakers and begin using those speakers for what they would consider public information.

"I call it misinformation," Hancock told the Amarillo Globe.

The committee also conducts what Hancock said are biased public opinion polls designed to calculate methods of changing public opinion. Then CEA buys advertising from the local media, tailoring the ads according to their opinion polls, he said.

"The goal of all of which is to promote the idea that nuclear power is safe and economic and that nuclear waste disposal is safe and somehow a benefit to local communities," Hancock said.

Dan Welty, of Holland, Merriman and Welty Inc., said the committee would view Hancock's conclusions as biased, just as Hancock would view CEA as biased.

The committee has no plans at this time to buy advertising or conduct public opinion polls in the Panhandle, Welty said.

"The CEA does not want to force-feed the Panhandle on the idea of a nuclear repository," Welty said. "The truth of the matter is that Congress has passed a law that says we will have a method of disposing nuclear waste, and the CEA's objective is to see that this law is carried out."

The Department of Energy has indicated it will choose three sites — one in Deaf Smith County, one in Hanford, Wash., and one in Yucca Mountain, Nev., — for further studies. If all goes as planned, one of these sites will be the nations's first high-level nuclear waste dump site by 1998.

Hancock said CEA, which is fully funded by nuclear industries, is intent on putting the dump site in one of the three chosen states and intent on changing public opinion to welcome the plans.

"You can expect that they will be spending lots of money," Hancock said. "They didn't carry through with it, but they had a proposal before them to spend several millions of dollars a year on this issue in Texas.

"Their normal tactic is to try and discredit the opposition," Hancock said, "which has the potential of creating more tension in the community, rather than really presenting more information to people. The issue is controversial enough without trying to increase community tensions."

Guru, under indictment, arrested while attempting to flee country

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Indian guru Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh, under federal indictment, was arrested today and taken in handcuffs from a plane in which he and several followers from his Oregon commune were trying to flee the country, officials said.

Waiting U.S. Customs Service officials surrounded two planes carrying Rajneesh and followers when they landed at Charlotte-Douglass International Airport following a flight from Oregon, authorities said.

Rajneesh was taken to the U.S. Courthouse and placed in a holding cell pending arraignment today on charges of conspiracy to make false statements to federal immigration officers and with harboring aliens illegally in the United States.

"They were going to change planes and charter another two planes to fly to Bermuda tonight," said U.S. Marshal Ray Abrams.

Texas coast under storm warning as Hurricane Juan approaches

HOUSTON (AP) — Hurricane warnings were in effect today east of Port Arthur while a wide area of the Texas Gulf Coast remained under gale warnings as Hurricane Juan slowly churned off the coast of Louisiana.

Weather forecasters said the brunt of the storm was not yet a great threat to the Texas coast although heavy rains spawned by the late-season hurricane also prompted a flash flood watch for much of East Texas from Galveston to as far north as Lufkin, some 170 miles inland.

No evacuations, however, had been ordered by officials in Galveston, Chambers or Jefferson counties along the coast.

Rains were occasionally heavy and steadily drifting west over much of Southeast Texas, generally east of a line from Palacios to Columbus to Lake Somerville and north of Houston to beyond Lufkin.

Spy 'leader' to plead guilty to reduce son's sentence

John A. Walker

WASHINGTON (AP) — John A. Walker, accused of masterminding a family spy ring, agreed to plead guilty today and risk getting a life sentence in order to obtain a shorter sentence for his son, Michael, sources say.

Walker, 48, accused of selling sensitive Navy codes and communications data to the Soviet Union, and his son, Navy Seaman Michael L. Walker, 22, were scheduled to enter guilty pleas today before a federal judge in Baltimore, according to government sources who spoke on condition of anonymity.

U.S. District Judge Alexander Harvey II announced on Friday in Baltimore that John Walker's trial, originally set to begin today, had been continued and that both father and son would appear in his courtroom for unspecified proceedings.

The elder Walker agreed to plead guilty in return for a recommendation by government prosecutors that Michael Walker receive a sentence ranging from about 25 to 30 years, according to one source.

But as part of the plea bargain, federal prosecutors will recommend that the elder Walker spend the rest of his life in prison. "We wouldn't have settled for anything less," the source said of the agreement.

The retired Navy communications specialist agreed to give U.S. authorities a full accounting of the sensitive Navy code and communications data he is accused of selling the Soviets, the source said.

The source said John Walker also agreed to testify against a friend, Jerry A. Whitworth, a former Navy code expert who is awaiting trial on espionage charges in San Francisco.

Whitworth, 48, a retired petty officer who lives Davis, Calif., pleaded innocent last week to amended charges that he passed a detailed description of a radio communications system to John Walker.

John Walker's elder brother, Arthur, 50, a retired Navy lieutenant commander from Virginia Beach, Va., was convicted Aug. 9 of giving his brother copies of classified documents from VSE Corp., a defense contractor where he worked. He is scheduled to be sentenced Nov. 12 in Norfolk, Va.

Arthur Walker, who had agreed to testify against his younger brother, told the FBI that John Walker told him he started spying while he was still in the Navy. Arthur Walker said he was recruited to spy in 1979.

John Walker's daughter, Laura Walker Snyder, told the FBI that her father tried to recruit her to spy in 1978 when she was an Army communications specialist.

Her father was arrested May 20 at a Rockville, Md., motel after he allegedly dropped a packet of classified materials for a Soviet agent along a rural road in nearby Poolesville. FBI agents found a bagful of documents from the USS Nimitz near the drop site.

The FBI says the Soviet official who was designated to pick up the documents, Aleksey Tkachenko, vice consul at the Soviet Embassy in Washington, left the country with his family three days after John Walker's arrest.

Michael Walker was arrested May 22 aboard the USS Nimitz while the aircraft carrier was docked in Haifa, Israel. A 15-pound cache of classified documents was found stashed near his bunk. Michael Walker had been scheduled to be tried in Baltimore after his father's trial.

According to FBI testimony at Arthur Walker's trial, agents followed John Walker from his home to the drop site in rural Maryland. "In every way it looked like a Soviet drop site," one agent testified.

Agent Bruce Brahe II said that when he searched the area he found a 4-inch to 5-inch stack of classified documents wrapped in a plastic garbage bag and sealed with masking tape.

A subsequent search of John Walker's home in Norfolk, Va., found maps of Vienna and procedures for meeting a Soviet contact, the FBI said.

Last summer, Navy officials said the secrets that Walker is accused of selling to the Soviets may have compromised submarine warfare strategies by exposing secret Navy codes.

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger called the damage "a serious loss."

Man couldn't cope with retarded son

IRVING (AP) — Care for William Clark's severely retarded, violence-prone son is going to have to come from another source because the 55-year-old Clark has reached a point of despair.

Last week Clark became so angry at John David Clark, 20, that he went for a gun. Instead, he said, he packed his son's suitcase, took him to the Fort Worth State School and drove away.

"I just got to the point where prison looked good to me — or the electric chair — compared to what I've been living through," Clark said.

Clark said his son has destroyed furniture and broken windows in his trailer home. When the boy attacked him again Wednesday, Clark gave up.

A state school spokeswoman said John David Clark has a man's body but the mental capacity of a 3-year-old and qualifies for 24-hour care.

After dropping his son off at the school without permission, Clark may not be forced to reclaim his son despite the school's two- to four-year waiting list.

"It's very stressful," said spokeswoman Barbara Edwards, adding no one was to blame for the situation. "I guess blame is not the word. We just need more public awareness of the dollars that we need."

She said the state school, operated by the Texas Mental Health-Mental Retardation Department, will admit the younger Clark on an emergency basis until an investigation is completed.

The Department of Human Resources will conduct a routine check of the circumstances in the Clark family, said Mel Hughes, school superintendent.

Ms. Edwards said John David Clark was put on the school's waiting list and counseling and care was provided in May 1984.

WOMEN

NFRW now offers about $14 million in labor to candidates, a campaign management seminar and a volunteer polling school. But its longterm plan is to strengthen those goals and increase the federation's visibility.

That visibility will entail educating the public and possibly high school students about the role of government. Ms. Hughes said a poll conducted by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce showed that 67 percent of the students questioned don't believe in the need for profit, 82 percent don't believe in the need for competition in business, 53 percent thought government contributed the most to national prosperity and 56 percent of the girls and 30 percent of the boys said they had no opinion on whether government should take over business.

The ultimate goal of the national federation, she concluded, is to "help elect Republicans to office at all levels of government and to offer to a woman a complete, practical and total political education."

RAJNEESH

"They didn't know it, but we had them surrounded ... when they came down to refuel. If they had seen anything, they never would've cut off their engines. It was just like in the movies," said a U.S. Marshal's official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The official said two planes were seized, along with more than 10 people. In Portland, Ore., Carl Houseman, regional director of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, said Rajneesh was named in indictments handed up Thursday by a federal grand jury in Portland.

Rajneesh, 53, is the spiritual leader of a sect that claims up to 500,000 adherents, mainly in the United States, Western Europe and Australia.

His commune, known as Rajneeshpuram, has been in turmoil for more than a month, since the guru's secretary, Ma Anand Sheela, split with him and fled to Europe with other top aides.

Rajneesh leveled a variety of criminal charges at Sheela and the others after they fled the commune the weekend of Sept. 14 and 15. He said, among other things, that they conspired to commit murder and conspired to burn a county planning office in Oregon.

The Oregonian newspaper in Portland said sources reported that those left behind when Rajneesh flew out of Oregon included his personal secretary, Ma Prem Hasya, and the president of Rajneesh Investment Corp., Swami Dhyan John.

Houseman said Rajneesh left the commune Sunday evening on a Gates Learjet. Rajneeshpuram has an airstrip and its own aircraft, officials said.

A flight plan filed with the Federal Aviation Administration indicated the airplane's destination was Charlotte. Customs Service officers, aided by the FAA, tracked the plane across the country, Houseman said.

He said he was unsure whether the guru knew of the federal indictments.

Ed Brigham, assistant agent in charge of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service in Charlotte, said the arrest was requested by the U.S. attorney of Oregon involving "an investigation concerning Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh and various other people relating to the violation of immigration laws."

Abrams said one of the Learjets stopped in Pueblo, Colo., and the other stopped in Salt Lake City before arriving in Charlotte.

A spokeswoman at Rajneeshpuram, Ma Prem Isabel, said Sunday night there was a meeting at the commune but "nothing was said."

"I have no idea why (he left)," Isabel said.

OIL

Byrd said there are still many basins around the world for potential development, but they are all in very hostile and costly environments.

The petroleum engineer is also concerned about the plowback ratios for the industry.

"Plowback ratios have dropped dramatically. Once the industry could count on an oil firm plowing back 100 percent of returns into exploring for new oil. It is now only 60 percent, and could go lower," said Byrd. He said the difference was going into real estate and other investments.

JUAN

At the Jefferson County Airport, winds gusting more than 50 mph were reported today. The Beaumont-Port Arthur-Orange area was under a travelers advisory because of the stiff winds.

Juan, an unusual storm because of the lateness of the hurricane season, was expected to make landfall along the south central coast of Louisiana by midday.

"There is a possibility that the hurricane will stall and actually stop near Lafayette, La., then could drift to the west or southwest during the afternoon and evening," Ron Stagno of the National Weather Service office in Houston said today.

If the westward drift should occur, that would mean even heavier rains for the East Texas areas, weather forecasters said.

More than one inch of rain already was reported in scattered areas overnight and rains were increasing, weather service officials said.

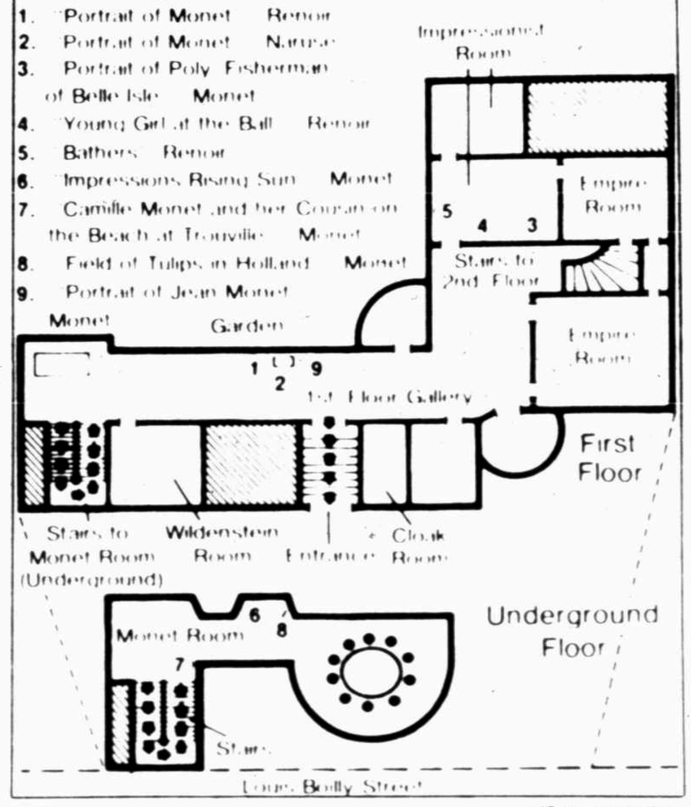

"As the rains move further west, amounts could increase and by later today could cause some standing water problems in low areas around Harris county and the greater Houston area," the weather bureau said.

On Sunday, wind gusts were strongest near Galveston, reaching nearly 50 mph late Sunday afternoon, according to Tom Kirkpatrick, a weather service meterologist in Galveston. Rain, however, was light and intermittent. Tides were 3 to 4 feet above normal.

"Everything's fine over here — just a rainy day," Verna Fuentes of the Galveston County Sheriff's Department said today. "The wind isn't as bad as it was last night. It's raining and windy, that's all."

For the entire Gulf Coast, hurricane warnings were posted from east of Port Arthur to Mobile, Ala.

Paintings Stolen

ART

Two paintings by another Impressionist master, Pierre Auguste Renoir, were also seized by the gunmen.

A police spokesman said no motive was being excluded, but suggested the possibility of extortion.

One Marmottan Museum official, also speaking on condition he not be identified, said of the bandits, "They are connoisseurs. They knew what they were looking for."

But Brayer said, "I don't understand how you can steal (something) so famous, because it's impossible to sell. It's too well known."

One museum guard said the alarm system was not operating at the time of the theft.

Brayer said everything was "in perfect order." But Estelle Tissier, who lives with her husband in the building, said the alarm was disconnected each day at 8:15 a.m. and reactivated at 6 p.m.

Mrs. Tissier, who was home at the time, said she called police after another museum employee told her the museum was being held up.

Witnesses said the men entered the museum shortly after 10 a.m.

One pointed his weapon at the temple of the chief guard and ordered guards and visitors to lie on the floor, said Brayer.

Two or three gunmen then went immediately to the Monet room in the basement, while at least one other went to other rooms.

"Everyone was on the floor, like in a bank," Brayer said. "This is the first time anyone has stolen paintings with weapons ... One guard was trembling like a crazy man when I arrived."

The bandits stuffed the paintings into the trunk of a gray car double-parked outside and then fled, witnesses said. About 30 visitors, mostly foreign tourists, were in the museum at the time.

The Marmottan, a converted mansion on a quiet street in Paris' elegant 16th district, houses an important collection of Impressionist paintings, including 87 Monets.

"Impression Soleil Levant," Monet's painting of the port at Le Havre done in 1872, inspired the name for the Impressionist school, which attempted to capture transitory images, mostly in nature, in a shimmer of color and light.

The Monet is a tableau of blues and browns highlighted by an orange disk shining through the morning fog.

First shown at a 1874 salon with other such paintings, the Monet work was derisively referred to by critics as "impressionist."

There have been six museum art thefts in the past decade in France. The most important was the Jan. 31, 1976, theft of 118 paintings by Pablo Picasso from the Palais des Papes in Avignon. All the paintings were recovered the following October.

Following is a list of the paintings stolen from the Marmottan:

By Claude Monet:

—Impression Soleil Levant.

—Camille Monet et sa cousine sur la plage a Trouville (Camille Monet and her Cousin on the beach at Trouville).

— Portrait de Jean Monet.

—Portrait de Poly, pecheur de Belle-Isle (Portrait of Poly, Fisherman of Belle-Isle).

—Champ de tulipes en Hollande (Field of Tulips in Holland).

By Renoir:

—Baigneuse assise sur un rocher (Bather Sitting on a Rock).

—Portrait de Monet.

By Berthe Morisot:

—Jeune fille au bal (Young Girl at the Ball).

By Naruse:

—Portrait de Monet.

Charges expected in subway death, suicide attempt

NEW YORK (AP) — A woman who allegedly threw her 4-month-old baby to his death in front of a subway train and then jumped after him was in critical condition today at a hospital, where she was to be arraigned on murder charges, authorities said.

Adilla Rosman, 34, of Queens, suffered severe head injuries in the incident at 10:49 a.m. Sunday, officials said.

She was charged with second-degree murder and was to be arraigned today at Elmhurts General Hospital, said Sgt. Raymond O'Donnell, a police spokesman.

Witnesses told police the woman threw the baby, Anthony Perez, and then jumped onto the tracks as the train entered the elevated station, said Transit Police spokesman Richard Burns.

Strip search stole dignity

CEDAR HILL (AP) — The father of a junior high girl who was among 15 students strip searched for a missing $1.85 says the faculty members responsible for the search stole the children's dignity and should be fired.

"What they really did was told our children their pride and dignity wasn't worth $2. It's only worth $1.85," said Bobby Hufstetler.

Some of the parents of the Cedar Hill Middle School girls who were strip searched are enraged by the action and say they plan to ask the school board at its Monday night meeting to fire the physical education teacher and assistant principal involved.

The students were ordered to remove their clothing Thursday when a girl in a seventh-grade physical education class reported $1.85 missing.

"This is a violation of basic human rights,' said Hufstetler.

"I feel like the school owes the girls something besides 'I'm sorry.' She (his daughter) was completely devastated," he said.

But other parents say they still support physical education teacher Janice Ellis and Jeanne Cothran, the assistant principal who authorized the search.

Mrs. Ellis acted out of frustation after several thefts occurred during the year, the parents said, and added that they plan to show support for the teacher at Monday's meeting.

On Friday, Ms. Cothran said the decision to search the students was made in haste and frustration.

"She (Mrs. Ellis) was very frustrated. It was the third day in a row that money was stolen," Ms. Cothran said. "In the back of my mind, I thought it might not be the right thing to do."

At least one girl was asked to strip completely while others were asked to strip down to their undergarments, parents said. Still others were asked to remove their bras. The missing money was not found.

Karen Kershaw, a friend of Mrs. Ellis, said the parents have overreacted.

"Naturally to them the girls have been embarrassed, but someone is guilty of theft," Ms. Kershaw said. "She was doing what she thought was right. In my feelings, she (Mrs. Ellis) has been treated unfairly and tried and convicted," Kershaw said.

The search was conducted in Mrs. Ellis' office, which has a window looking out into the locker room.

Last week Mrs. Ellis said the parents were "blowing it out of proportion."

Judge to rule today if Ruiz trial should be moved outside Austin

AUSTIN (AP) — State District Judge C.C. "Kit" Cooke will rule today whether the David Ruiz robbery trial will be moved outside Austin, as he has suggested.

Defense attorney Bob Looney has said he will oppose a change of venue.

"It doesn't really make any difference to us where it is," said Brian Bishop, an assistant Travis County district attorney.

Cooke has said if he decides to move the trial to another city, he will consider a defense motion to delay the trial until Nov. 18.

Cooke ordered a mistrial Oct. 15 after hearing two weeks of testimony and evidence on charges that Ruiz took part in the September 1984 armed robbery of an Austin apartment.

Cooke said he ended the trial after learning that an unnamed juror had been drinking alcoholic beverages during court lunch breaks.

On Oct. 16, Cooke notified attorneys that he was considering a change of venue and would ask them on Monday to give their arguments for or against the move.

"I just think there would be less problems if we try it somewhere else," Cooke said.

The judge said he was concerned about security problems and about the extensive news coverage given Ruiz's various court appearances. Attorneys and spectators have had to walk through a weapons detector to enter the courtroom. Several armed officers escort Ruiz to and from the courtroom.

Ruiz was the main plaintiff in the federal court lawsuit that brought on court-ordered reforms in the Texas prison system, mostly over overcrowding and mistreatment of prisoners.

Ruiz, 43, faces a possible life sentence if convicted of aggravated robbery. He was paroled from a robbery sentence in 1981 and is serving a 25-year sentence now for aggravated perjury. Several other indictments are pending against him.

Testimony given before a mistrial was declared said that Ruiz and two men broke into an apartment where there were three men and a woman. The 21-year-old mother testified they were robbed and that she was raped and sexually mistreated by Ruiz.

Ruiz has been charged with rape but is being tried only on the aggravated robbery charges.

GOP convert Hance says he voted for Reagan

DALLAS (AP) — Recent Republican convert Kent Hance, who is seeking the gubernatorial nomination in next year's GOP primary, said he has a good answer for those who criticize him for supporting the "liberal" Democratic presidential ticket and U.S. Senate candidate Lloyd Doggett in 1984.

In a Sunday story in the Dallas Morning News, Hance disclosed that despite his Democratic ties last November, he voted for President Reagan over Democrat Walter Mondale, and for Phil Gramm for U.S. Senate.

Hance said he also voted for Reagan in 1980 instead of Democratic incumbent President Jimmy Carter.

"I voted for Reagan in 1984 because I knew him, and I voted for Reagan in 1980 because I knew his opponent," Hance said.

Hance, a member of the conservative Democratic "boll weevil" caucus while in Congress, ran for the U.S. Senate but lost to Doggett in a runoff.

'Frost Belt' migration to Texas plummets as oil revenues decline

DALLAS (AP) — Texas' once-mighty population explosion is fading out along with its famed oil revenues.

Fueled by migration from a faltering Frost Belt, Texas attracted 383,000 people from other states between 1981 and 1982. But census figures show that number plummeted to about 32,000 between 1983 and 1984.

The slowdown in migration into Texas is a turnaround from the early 1980s, when census officials estimated that six out of every 10 new residents moved here from outside the state.

The phenomenon's cause is twofold, officials say.

The energy recession has damaged the economy of Houston, the state's largest city and the nation's fourth largest.

Falling oil and gas prices have had a devastating ripple effect on the Texas economy. Lower prices mean less drilling, which means fewer jobs, which in turn means less money to be spent on everything from drilling equipment to home appliances to movie tickets, economists say.

A second factor is that the Frost Belt recession — which spurred many residents of the Midwest and Northeast to move to Texas — is turning around, economists say.

"The economy in Houston took a downturn when the oil industry did the same. At the same time, the auto industry and the chain of industries related to it turned around and people went back to their roots and to higher-paying jobs," said Susan Szaniszlo, coordinator of the Texas Data Center for the state's Commission on Intergovernmental Affairs.

The 1980 census counted Texas' population at 14.2 million. In 1981-82, Texas' population grew 4 percent, a rate four times the national average, according to Census Bureau figures.

But last year, the state's population grew by only 1.3 percent, to 15.9 million. At the same time, the national average growth rate was 1 percent.

Ms. Szaniszlo told the Dallas Morning News that although Houston's population grew by 6.2 percent in 1981-82, it grew by less than half of that — 2.5 percent — in 1983.

"You can see it's slowing down, and since Houston consists of such a large percentage of the state's population, when Houston changes, you see a change in the overall rate of the state," Ms. Szaniszlo said. "The rest of the state is not changing that rapidly."

Texas' fast-paced growth earlier this decade had caused forecasters to believe it soon would overtake New York as the country's second-most populous state behind California.

But there is more at stake than just pride in being second-biggest, said Thomas Plaut of the Bureau of Business Research at the University of Texas in Austin. The state may face serious economic consequences.

Some of the effects are already being felt. The energy recession has meant oil and gas tax revenues — a major part of the state's budget — have not kept their expected pace.

Lesbians give blood for gay 'brothers'

DALLAS (AP) — A network of lesbian women who call themselves "Blood Sisters" have opened an account with a local blood bank and are donating blood for their gay male friends who cannot.

Lesbians, because they rarely have sexual contact with men, are among the groups least likely to carry the virus linked with AIDS, which has barred many homosexual men from donating blood, said Dr. Peter Drotman, chief epidemiologist for the AIDS program at the Center For Disease Control in Atlanta.

Most of the Dallas group of lesbians are members of the predominantly gay Metropolitan Community Church.

"When the AIDS thing came along, we said, 'Here's something we can do,'" said church secretary Sue Schraeder. "We had to get the women to give the blood. We decided then we needed a blood bank."

"The guys can't go down" and give blood, said another church member, "so it's up to the women to go down and give to their brothers."

Goodin sentence today

FORT WORTH (AP) — Michael Wayne Goodin is an "executioner" who abducted, beat and killed a young woman, then kept her driver's license and photograph as "trophies," prosecutors said.

Jurors, after convicting Goodin of murder last week, today begin considering punishment for the 19-year-old Fort Worth man.

Goodin was found guilty Saturday of killing Lisa Lyn Griffin, 20, one of nine young women who disappeared or was found slain in Fort Worth during late 1984 and early 1985.

He has not been implicated in any of the other cases.

Goodin's attorneys have asked for probation. He faces a possible sentence of up to life in prison.

During the trial, prosecutors offered no evidence about a motive to counter defense claims that Miss Griffin was despondent and begged Goodin to kill her.

Businessmen 'discontent'

DALLAS (AP) — A Houston-based committee of business leaders plans to raise millions of dollars for next year's Texas Supreme Court elections to halt a growing trend of court decisions benefitting people who sue corporations.

The committee says discontent with the court is so strong that two of the four contested court races in 1986 could be the costliest ever.

The races will be more important than the gubernatorial election to the business community because of skyrocketing insurance premiums paid by business to protect against such lawsuits, the group says.

Members of the committee, which is called the Texas Supreme Court Justice Committee, said that when they begin collecting money, they can easily raise $1 million each for contested races.

Fate of Soviet sailor uncertain

BELLE CHASSE, La. (AP) — Customs agents guarded a Soviet freighter today as State Department officials negotiated for a third day the fate of a sailor who twice jumped ship but was returned to the vessel.

State Department officials, aboard the Marshal Koniev since Friday, were trying to determine what the sailor wanted to do.

"There's nothing definite that I can tell you," a State Department officer who spoke on condition of anonymity said by telephone from Washington late Sunday. "The talks are going on, there's no resolution at this point."

As the negotiations went on, U.S. Customs agents and Coast Guard boats kept watch on the freighter in the Mississippi River.

White House National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane said Sunday the State Department wants to interview the sailor at a neutral site and find out what he wants to do.

"I think we have a responsibility to assure that the wishes of the individual are understood," he said on CBS' "Face The Nation." "I would expect the Soviet Union to understand that is our authority and our interest and I expect it will be resolved."

The State Department officer said a doctor and a State Department official had talked with the sailor but that the department still wanted an interview on neutral territory.

Mike Flad, a U.S. agent for the Soviet vessel, said he saw the sailor Friday afternoon, about 16 hours after he jumped. The man appeared to be in his 20s, said Flad, an agent for Universal Shipping Agencies Inc.

The sailor dove from the ship into the river near Belle Chasse, a small port town downriver from New Orleans in Plaquemines Parish, on Thursday and Friday. Flad said he swam 80-100 yards across river to shore.

Thomas Richard, who works for Universal Shipping, said he received a call Thursday night from the Border Patrol saying that a sailor had jumped ship and come ashore.

Richard said he was ordered to put the sailor back on the ship. The seaman jumped from the boat that was ferrying him back to the Soviet freighter, but was recaptured.

He was returned again after he jumped a second time Friday, but

A Soviet official steps off the dock at Belle Chasse, La., Sunday after a visit to the Marshal Koniev freighter, detained because a crewman jumped overboard Friday in an attempt to defect.

Immigration and Naturalization Service officials in New Orleans contacted Washington, said David H. Lambert, district director of the INS. Lambert said Border Patrol agents could not communicate with the man and thought he was a stowaway.

Raymond Guthrie, a boat operator for Port Ship Services, said Saturday he had ferried the sailor back to the Marshal Koniev.

"He didn't speak English, but we knew he didn't want to go back," Guthrie said, describing Thursday's incident. "The Russians picked him up and they carried him onto my boat and I brought him back to the ship and they carried him up the gangway. He was hollering. He didn't want to go back."

Officials on shore kept their second all-night vigil. Coast Guard boats carried Soviet and State Department officials to and from the freighter.

Earlier, a tugboat brought two Soviet officials ashore where they made a telephone call to the Soviet Embassy in Washington.

When asked about the condition of the sailor, one said, "He's feeling good. The State Department knows about it." The men left, boarded the tugboat and returned to the ship.

A man answering the telephone at the Soviet Embassy in Washington said no one was available to comment on the matter.

"At this time I don't know what will happen. At this time it's a stalemate," he said. Flad refused to comment about progress of talks between officials.

The big freighter and its 43-member crew was scheduled to go to Reserve, La., to pick up a load of grain. Flad said he didn't know when it would be able to leave Belle Chasse.

Another incident involving a Soviet sailor who jumped ship became a major incident in 1970.

Simas Kudirka, a Lithuanian, tried to defect by jumping onto a Coast Guard vessel off Martha's Vineyard. The Coast Guard skipper allowed Soviet sailors to drag him back.

Kudirka, now 55, was sentenced to 10 years in prison by the Soviets, but was released in August of 1974 and came to the United States.

Lugar: Soviet arms proposal shows willingness to negotiate

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Richard Lugar, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, says a Soviet proposal for a 50 percent reduction in strategic nuclear warheads is a "significant" step that gives new momentum to arms control.

"Many persons who are watching all of this say that maybe the Soviets really do want to negotiate, maybe they want to reach an agreement as opposed to going into polemical statements and simply reading the record back and forth to each other at Geneva," Lugar said in a recent interview.

In one of the most positive U.S. assessments of the Soviet deep-cut offer to date, Lugar said a parallel proposal to separate talks on intercontinental nuclear weapons from those concerning medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe was another positive sign.

"To rather suddenly say we might begin to explore INF (Intermediate Nuclear Force talks) separately is a substantial divergency, and I think probably encouraging," Lugar said.

Those two offers, together with the initiation by Moscow of a freer and more open diplomatic dialogue since the coming to power of Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, add up to "a new ball game" just weeks before the Nov. 19-20 summit meeting between Gorbachev and President Reagan, Lugar said.

The results of that "game" still are in doubt, as are ultimate Soviet intentions, Lugar said.

"But giving credit where credit is due, and not (looking at it) as a propaganda ploy but as an interesting and substantive proposal, the Soviet deep-cut situation is unique," Lugar said. "I think the unique aspect perhaps of the pre-Geneva summit period is that for the first time the Soviets have made a comprehensive proposal."

"The Soviets haven't offered this kind of thing before," he said. "A year ago they weren't even at the table at all. The fact that they are there and that they have made a proposal is significant."

But Robert McFarlane, the president's national security adviser, on Sunday reiterated the administration's warning that an arms control agreement hinges on Moscow's willingness to settle regional conflicts and alter its human rights policies.

"President Reagan, probably more than on any other issue, believes that his moment and his reponsibility is to leave office with a real reduction in nuclear weapons," McFarlane said on CBS-TV's "Face The Nation."

"But for that to endure it has to be surrounded by a climate of responsible behavior," he added. American responses to Soviet overtures "turn on things like Afghanistan and human rights."

When Secretary of State George P. Shultz goes to Moscow at week's end for pre-summit planning, there could be some progress on such issues as air safety and boundary rights, "if indeed the Soviet Union really wants it," McFarlane said.

Lugar, in the interview, acknowleged that as it stands, there may be problems in the Soviet proposal for the United States. But he said he nevertheless finds it encouraging and a positive base for negotiation.

Reagan meets today with families of six Americans held in Lebanon

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time in their lengthy ordeal, relatives of the six Americans believed held hostage in Lebanon have been invited to meet with President Reagan at the White House.

"The meeting will provide the opportunity for the president to bring the families up to date on our efforts to secure the release of their relatives," White House spokesman Mark Weinberg said Sunday of the session, scheduled for late this afternoon.

Reagan, returning to the White House from his weekend at his Camp David, Md., retreat, refused to answer reporters' questions about the session.

Since Feb. 10, 1984, nine Americans have been kidnapped in Lebanon, and the meeting marks the first time that Reagan has scheduled a White House meeting with a relative of one of the victims. Three of the kidnapped men have been freed.

Family members of at least four of the six hostages still believed held are expected to attend the White House meeting, said Peggy Say.

Ms. Say is the sister of Terry A. Anderson, 38, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, who was kidnapped on March 16.

Some family members have tried to meet with Reagan for more than a year, and do not know why the White House has suddenly granted their request, Ms. Say said.

During the summer TWA hostage crisis, Reagan met in Chicago with the families of nine TWA hostages and one of the long-time hostages, the Rev. Benjamin Weir.

Ms. Say said the relatives intend to ask Reagan to take action to help end their loved ones' ordeal.

"It would certainly help the cause if he'd give his blessing," said Ms. Say.

The group would like to see Reagan appoint a congressional delegation to go to Syria to meet with President Hafez Assad, and follow up on demands made in recent months by those believed to be the kidnappers, Ms. Say said.

The group believed responsible for the abductions is called the Islamic Jihad, an extremist Shiite Moslem group. The Syrians were involved in the freeing of the 39 TWA hostages this summer.

In the past, hostage relatives have charged they have been misled by the Reagan administration when they tried to get information on U.S. government efforts to aid the hostages. Earlier this month, some family members and friends formed the American Hostage Committee to focus public attention on the hostages' plight.

Ms. Say said the members of the committee had planned to come to Washington to take part in a three-day lobbying blitz this week before they received Reagan's invitation to come to the White House.

Administration officials have said the government is doing everything it can to obtain the Americans' release.

When family members became more vocal in their complaints that they were not able to see the president, a meeting was set up with Vice President George Bush in September. Members of the group also met with Reagan's national security adviser, Robert McFarlane.

The White House asked only the immediate family members of current hostages to take part in the session with the president, Ms. Say said.

Weinberg called news organizations Sunday to say the president had invited the group to meet with him.

"When the president learned that the families would be together in Washington, and of their interest in seeing him, he directed his staff to invite them to the White House," Weinberg said.

More Than A Hundred Years Ago, Liberty Was Conceived Over Brandy, Cigars And An Argument.

Watch "The Statue of Liberty"

KCOS-TV, Ch. 13, Tonight, 8:00PM

One summer evening in 1865, a group of men got together for dinner outside Paris, and passionately discussed the meaning of Liberty. They proposed a gift to the United States for its approaching centennial. They decided on a statue to personify "Liberty," because America had stood as a shining example of democracy for almost a century. And now, a century later, we are celebrating Liberty's centennial with an hour-long program funded by Liberty Mutual Insurance Company. "The Statue of Liberty" contains historic film footage and interviews with Americans from all walks of life, sharing their feelings about Liberty.

If you believe in Liberty and would like to give her a restoration birthday gift, send your donation to: The Statue of Liberty, P.O. Box 1986, New York, New York 10018. "The Statue of Liberty" will be closed captioned for the hearing impaired.

Chicago artist 'roots' for grass clothing

DALLAS (AP) — For a man who used to carry a fish-filled fiberglass briefcase and once engineered a pool in a car, walking around in grass suits really isn't all that odd.

Bill Harding says he simply likes the feel of roots against his skin. He also likes the gapes he gets when looking like a mossy Big Foot.

His friends call him "The Grass Man," but Harding calls himself an artist who creates a "personal, portable environment" in the form of grass-covered shoes, clothes and hats.

Harding was here to make a cameo appearance in a film and stopped by Dallas' Scottish Rite Hospital last week to entertain children there.

"I'm not sure why I did it at first," Harding, a 27-year-old Chicago resident, said of his grassy creations. "I was just drawn to the idea visually."

And what a sight it makes.

Earlier this year, he used a grant from the Illinois Arts Council to grow 37 of his suits. Soon after, he led a grassy tribe down Chicago's State Street that ended with a 20-minute "nature commune" on a park's lawn.

Harding's fertile mind seized on the idea when he was a student at the Kansas City Art Institute, where a friend was into hydroponic gardening, or growing plants in water with no soil.

His first grass-suited public appearance was in a June 1981 comedy skit at the Kansas City Market, where he carried a briefcase filled with fish and fled down sidewalks being chased by a friend armed with a lawnmower.

Shortly after, he cut a hole in a station wagon's roof, sealed its windows, filled it with fish and water and dubbed it his artistic "Car Pool."

Since then, Harding has grown grass on cars — "you should see how the wind slicks the grass back when you're driving" — and produced about 60 grass suits. He has modeled them for several magazines, including "People," and has dressed Johnny Carson in one for a "Tonight Show" segment.

To produce his craft — he estimates each suit at about $30 — all Harding needs is old clothes he buys at a thrift store and a dark room. He borrowed a Dallas resident's garage for his latest effort.

He lays the suits flat on a plastic sheet, sprays them with a petroleum-based adhesive and then strews about 40 pounds of grass seed that he grinds into the fabric with a heavy roller.

After about 10 days of watering and tending, every square inch of the suits sprout long, lush blades of grass up to 3 inches long.

Harding says the clothes are comfortable albeit clammy — they must stay moist so the grass doesn't perish — and they "make you feel calm and peaceful. You can feel the energy of the living grass, and it makes my fingers tingle."

The clothes are fairly sturdy and can last up to three weeks with proper care. After that, the grass turns blond and "begins to smell like a barn."

Though they're not permanent, Harding holds out great hope for his artistic creations and the psychological impact they can have.

"Astronauts could use them as an Earth substitute," he said. "And I want to grow some in a prison and a senior citizens' home. They're a personal, portable environment that is a metaphor for the larger environment."

'Glue' nerve cells of brain may repair damaged tissue

DALLAS (AP) — Certain cells thought to serve as a "glue" holding brain nerve cells together can speed recovery of damaged brain tissue, according to a new study.

The cells, called glial cells, are "the chameleons of the nervous system," said the author of the study, Carl Cotman of the University of California at Irvine. He described his findings recently at the annual meeting of the Society for Neuroscience.

The cells hold the brain together and control the blood-brain barrier that protects the brain against possibly harmful substances that might be carried by the blood.

Now it appears the cells may be useful in repairing brain damage and may be important in brain illnesses.

"We think that glial cells are much more of a key player in some of the degenerative diseases than is now accepted," Cotman said.

Cotman and his colleagues, including Patrick Kesslak, found that rats whose brains had been injured would recover the ability to perform in a certain maze almost twice as quickly if glial cells were put into their brains.

Brain-damaged rats who were not given glial cells required nine days to learn to perform one task and 19 days to learn a more complicated task, the researchers reported.

Identical rats given glial cells accomplished the tasks in five days and 11 days.

If, as it seems, glial cells are supplying some kind of growth-promoting factors to encourage the formation of new connections between brain cells, "then supplying these factors immediately after brain injury may enhance the rate of recovery," the researchers reported.

Glial cells fill the spaces between the nerve cells, or neurons, in the brain. There may be five or 10 times as many glial cells in the human brain as there are neurons.

The most common type of glial cell is the astrocyte, a star-shaped cell that helps hold the neurons together and may help protect them.

Glial cells are positioned along blood vessels in the brain.

Rumors of Satanic cult called pre-Halloween hoax

WILTON, Conn. (AP) — Rumors of a Satanic cult that has threatened children and poured blood on the steps of two churches have run rampant in this suburban town, but police say it's all probably a pre-Halloween hoax.

Police Chief Angelo Toscano said for the past 10 days his office has been bombarded with telephone calls from parents and others seeking information about a cult that was supposedly behind the incidents.

But Toscano said only two of the incidents ever happened. They were telephone calls answered by a 13-year-old and a 16-year-old.

Though the children said the calls were threatening, Toscano said he's "not totally convinced they were."

"I'd classify them more as harassing," he said.

Nevertheless, the principals of nine public, parochial and nursery schools in Wilton sent letters to parents late last week acknowledging the stories and warning them to take "normal precautions" with their children.

The letter was sent home with about 1,250 elementary school students and mailed to the parents of 1,600 other public-school students, according to a spokeswoman in the office of Wilton Schools Superintendent David F. Clune.

The letter, which acknowledged police have found "no evidence of group activity" behind the rumors, urged parents to take routine precautions for their children, such as not allowing them out alone at night.

Among the rumors were that the life of a high-school girl had been threatened and that blood had been spilled on the steps of the Wilton Congregational Church and Our Lady of Fatima Roman Catholic Church.

Unfair advantage

Consider the vast difference between the younger baby-boomers and the older baby-boomers. It's enough to make you cry in your Perrier.

Baby-boomers are those individuals born in the years immediately following the end of World War II. But there are different classes of baby-boomers. There are "yuppies," for instance.

Yuppies, as everyone should be well aware by now, is the acronym for young urban professionals. There aren't a lot of them around — only 4.2 million. According to American Demographics magazine, the yuppies are people aged 25 to 39 who live in metropolitan areas, work in professional or managerial occupations, and have an income of at least $30,000 if they live alone or a household income of $40,000 if they live with someone.

Yuppies are baby-boomers, but not all baby-boomers are yuppies.

The magazine reports that most of the older baby-boomers — the ones 30 to 39 years old — live essentially settled lives. But the younger baby boomers — the ones 21 to 29 — are still looking for spouses, houses and satisfying jobs.

What's more, there are more younger baby-boomers than older ones. In fact, there are 42 million younger BBs and a mere 36 million older ones.

But the older baby-boomers make up for their scarcity by claiming a coup in the head of household category. There are more older baby-boomers than younger ones who can claim to head their own household.

The 2.2 million households headed by yuppies represent only 6 percent of the households headed by baby-boomers. And the magazine added this revealing assessment: "In most cases it takes two incomes to be a yuppie — fully 72 percent of the yuppie households are headed by married couples, compared with 58 percent of all baby-boom households."

Each group of baby-boomers has its own particular advantage as these statistics indicate, but the older baby-boomers still seem to win out overall. Here's the revealing final statistic:

"Twenty-nine percent of the younger boomers are still living with their parents."

Saving the forests

Each year more than 27 million acres of the world's tropical forests are lost.

These deforested lands often become virtual deserts. Weather patterns change abruptly. Topsoil is carried off to the sea by erosion. If such destruction continues unabated for another 15 years, it will wipe out 20 percent of the plants and animals now on earth.

Most of the tropical forests are devastated by one billion people in Africa, Asia and South America who are only trying to meet their survival needs. Their daily foraging for fuel and shelter materials and their antiquated slash-and-burn farming methods spell ruin to trees and ground covers.

Governments also are to blame. They permit exploitation by huge timber operations that leave the land sterile and denuded. Scientists estimate that 40 percent of the world's tropical forests have already been cleared or degraded.

Now an international effort to stop this waste is under way, through the efforts of the World Resources Institute, in cooperation with the World Bank and the United Nations Development Program. These institutions hope to arrest and ultimately reverse this worldwide destruction.

They have formed a task force which recommends public and private investment of $8 billion over the next five years, half to come from development assistance agencies and international lending institutions and half from the private sector.

The funds will be used in forestry, erosion and agriculture programs. Most of the techniques needed to save the forests of the world already have been tried and found workable. In Korea, for instance, tree plantations now provide enough wood for fuel to supply 20,000 villages. In Senegal, 50 miles of coastal dunes have been stabilized with eucalyptus windbreaks and reforestation has started.

The task-force report will be presented to a U.N. World Commission on Environment and Development meeting next week in Sao Paulo and to a conference of development assistance agencies gathering next month in The Hague.

We hope U.S. representatives to these meetings pledge our nation's participation in this massive effort to reverse world deforestation.

Another View:

Enforcing payments

The federal government's new program to tighten the enforcement of child support could help many children. The government can play an important role in insisting that parents fulfill their financial duty toward their children.

A new federal law requires states to seize, if necessary, wages or tax refunds of parents who have fallen behind on child support payments. In most cases, the offenders are fathers. The Department of Health and Human Services says more than half of the people ordered to pay child support either underpaid or paid nothing last year.

Violations occur at all economic levels. Lenore Weitzman, a Stanford University professor and author of the book "The Divorce Revolution," said fathers who earn between $30,000 and $60,000 a year are just as likely to fail to pay child support as fathers who earn less than $10,000.

Child support payments can be a touchy issue between divorced parents. Some fathers use the checkbook to retaliate against their ex-wives. Some mothers deny fathers visitation rights because of problems over the financial support of their children.

Such acrimony, however, does not excuse parents from giving their children adequate financial support. Children have basic needs for food, clothing and shelter that must be met. They should not be made to suffer deprivation because of quarrels between their parents.

The government is right to crack down on parents who refuse to support their children. A divorce or dispute does not cancel the basic parental responsibility to care for children.

JACK ANDERSON

Kansas unsure of Capote's fame

WASHINGTON — FBI documents have just come to light that provide an ironic footnote to American literary history: The late Truman Capote, whose stock in trade was writing about celebrities and being one himself, once had to ask the FBI to tell Kansas authorities who he was.

Jack Anderson

They weren't convinced that he was a New Yorker magazine correspondent, as he claimed to be. But even more humiliating was the bureau's response: "(W)e are not acquainted with Mr. Truman Capote, nor are we familiar with his connection with the New Yorker. ..."

The embarrassing episode is described in a memo of Dec. 21, 1959, to Cartha "Deke" DeLoach, assistant FBI director in charge of the criminal records division at the time. Our associate Tony Capaccio obtained a copy of the document. Here's what it said:

On Nov. 15, 1959, wealthy wheat farmer Herb Clutter, his wife and two children were savagely murdered in their home in Garden City, Kan. Five weeks later, Capote arrived at the scene and informed the local lawmen that he was a reporter for the New Yorker.

Unfortunately, the diminutive writer had neglected to pack any credentials from the magazine, and discovered that his literary fame had not reached the hinterlands of western Kansas. He promptly called his publisher, Random House, for assistance.

Capote may have imagined the publisher calling J. Edgar Hoover on the hot line. But the best a Random House representative could come up with was an FBI inspector, Bernie Suttler, who had escorted the Random House rep and his family on a tour of the FBI building and had later invited him to lunch.

"Bernie, I want the FBI to do me a favor," the unnamed Random House man told Suttler. He explained that the local Kansas lawman, a former G-man, "would not give (Capote) any information on the Clutter case" because he didn't believe he had been assigned to do a story for the New Yorker.

"Capote didn't take any credentials," the publisher's representative went on, "as he felt his many articles in the New Yorker had given him a national stand as a writer, and he is quite crushed to think that the (official) of Garden City, Kan., has never heard of him."

Because Capote "had written many splendid articles and books and has a fine, national reputation as a writer," the Random House man said he "would appreciate the FBI sending a wire to Garden City identifying Truman Capote as a legitimate writer assigned to do a story for the New Yorker." He added that the skeptical Kansas cop would not accept "telephonic identification."

According to the FBI memo, Suttler told the publisher's representative that, "as much as we would like to do him a favor, some checking would have to be done, as he was not personally acquainted with Truman Capote nor could he see why the FBI should enter the picture."

"See what can be done, Bernie, and call me back," the Random House man persisted.

A check was made, but "no reference sources show Capote's connection with the New Yorker, so he might be used for special assignments only." Evidently no one thought to call the magazine.

In the end, the FBI refused to vouch for Capote, because no one in the bureau knew him or could confirm his alleged connection with the New Yorker, and because "the Clutter case is not a federal case under our jurisdiction."

Suttler called the Random House man and broke the bad news.

Capote went ahead without the FBI's assistance, eventually producing a chilling four-part series in the New Yorker in October 1965, and three months later the best-selling book, "In Cold Blood."

PEN PALS: Prison has not dampened John Jenrette's zest for politics. The former South Carolina Democrat, doing time in a federal prison in Atlanta for his part in the Abscam scandal, may try to regain his old seat in Congress next year. He told us he's getting "a strong push to run," and added in bemusement, "Isn't that wild?"

Wild or not, politicians in Jenrette's old district don't discount his chances of a comeback. He lost narrowly in the 1980 primary, even though it came only a few weeks after his bribery conviction. His successor, Democrat Robin Tallon, is regarded as able, but lacks Jenrette's charm and dynamism.

As a convicted felon, Jenrette won't be able to vote for himself, but nothing prevents him from running — and serving if elected. He expects to be out on parole by the end of this year, so would not actually have to campaign from prison.

Jenrette can get financial advice right in the Atlanta prison. Former Tennessee banking magnate Jake Butcher is a fellow inmate. According to Jenrette, Butcher is planning to write a book while he's serving a 20-year sentence for bank fraud and tax evasion.

EVANS & NOVAK

NFL owners solicited for support

WASHINGTON — Commissioner Pete Rozelle's unseen hand is behind a request to each National Football League owner to buy a $10,000 table for the Oct. 31 fundraising dinner for Rep. Jack Kemp, one of professional football's most famous political alumni.

Each owner received a telegram asking support of Kemp's dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria in Manhattan, supposedly celebrating his 50th birthday year but actually kicking off his presidential campaign. Before receiving the telegram, the owners were alerted by telephone calls from the office of the commissioner's wife, Carrie Rozelle. At this writing, about half of the NFL owners have forked over the $10,000.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

But, so far, Kemp has not received a check from the NFL owner whose help he most covets: Bum Bright of the Dallas Cowboys, a power in Texas Republican politics. According to a close associate, Bright might prefer Kemp's ideology but is apt to wind up supporting a fellow Texan, Vice President George Bush, for president in 1988.

NANCY PROTECTS RON

Nancy Reagan's mother-hen worry about the president's schedule reached a new peak when her protective instinct kept the top Western representative of Poland's outlawed Solidarity movement waiting two weeks before letting him see her husband.

Brussels-based Jerzy Milewski, who arrived in Washington at Reagan's personal invitation, cooled his heels day after day waiting for the summons to the Oval Office. The first lady, worried about an overscheduled president preparing for the Geneva summit, kept taking Milewski off the daily schedule.

When he finally got to see Reagan last Monday, Milewski spent most of his 15 minutes persuasively arguing for putting the repression in Poland on the summit agenda. Reagan made no commitment.

CAP TO GENEVA?

Strong pressures on the White House to include Caspar Weinberger on President Reagan's delegation for the Geneva summit may backfire against the Secretary of Defense and his hard-line supporters.

Weinberger has done nothing to stimulate the campaign to get him to Geneva. But he is being put in an embarrassing light by White House coolness to continued arguments from the Pentagon and Capitol Hill that President Reagan desperately needs Weinberger at his side to protect against summit giveaways.

Lyndon Johnson and Jimmy Carter took their defense secretaries to U.S.-Soviet summits. But Secretary of State Henry Kissinger made sure there was no competition from the Pentagon at Richard Nixon's two Moscow summits.

REAGAN'S FEUDING ALUMNI

Ex-White House political aide Ed Rollins is set to sign up as a political consultant to help ex-Gov. William Clements of Texas regain his old job next year, but might say no if he finds he has to compete inside the campaign with Reagan pollster Richard Wirthlin.

Clements has been making it clear that Wirthlin not only will poll but will be a major strategist for the campaign. Rollins has expected to sign up with Clements on a visit to Texas this week, but he may beg off because of Wirthlin's elevated status. Rollins as campaign manager and Wirthlin as chief pollster often clashed in the 1984 Reagan re-election campaign.

A footnote: Another veteran Reagan operative, Stu Spencer, ran Clements' 1978 and 1982 campaigns for governor but was not asked back for 1986 (and probably would not come if asked). Clements complains that the California-based Spencer was never around when he wanted him in his losing 1982 effort.

THE LAST RHODESIAN

Ian Smith, the conservative white leader in Zimbabwe, was not even permitted inside the Reagan White House on his previous visit to Washington in 1982 but last week was given a sympathetic hearing there by Communications Director Pat Buchanan.

Smith argued that President Reagan had made a big mistake in ordering sanctions against South Africa, a move unsuccessfully opposed inside the White House by Buchanan. The last prime minister of Rhodesia contended that communism was on the march in the southern part of the continent thanks to inattention by the West.

In leaving, Smith gave Buchanan a Zimbabwe newspaper clipping relating how the American film "Rambo" was withdrawn from theaters at the request of the Soviet Embassy. It was the kind of raw material Buchanan loved to use as a conservative newspaper columnist.

CHARLEY REESE

Government friendships nonexistent

George Washington, were he alive today, would be branded an isolationist. Nevertheless, the recent behavior of the governments in Italy, Egypt and Yugoslavia following the capture of the Achille Lauro by terrorists confirms Washington's wisdom and insight.

Charley Reese

"There can be no greater error than to expect, or calculate upon real favors from nation to nation. It is an illusion which experience must cure, which a just pride ought to discard," he said in his farewell address to the nation in 1796.

A Turkish colonel I interviewed as a cub reporter reminded me of those words. Kid that I was, I had asked him if he tought Turkey and the United States would remain friends. Without a smile, he said firmly: "Turkey and the United States are not friends. We just happen to have the same enemy."

At least I learn from most of my experiences. Unfortunatley our national leaders persist in foolishly speaking of friends and friendships when referring to relations with foreign governments. There is no such thing as friendship between foreign governments. Sometimes, when their separate selfish interests run parallel, there is a temporary alliance.

It is just as foolish to be outraged over Egypt's treachery, Italy's double-dealing, and Yugoslavakia's disdain as it is to be disappointed. In both cases, the reaction implies an expectation that these governments would do us a favor. No foreign government has ever done the United States a favor. None ever will.

There is an element of hypocrisy in the Reagan Administration's righteous indignation over Egypt's lying, Italy's release of the head terrorist, and Yugoslavia's refusal to arrest him. The current U.S. crusade against terrorism is somewhat a charade.

Recall the 1982 invasion of Lebanon by Israel. Who arranged the rescue of the PLO, the world's premier terrorist organization? The Reagan Administration. If you wondered why the more recent bombing of the PLO headquarters in Tunisia caused some awkward moments for the administration it is because it persuaded Tunisia to accept the PLO.

Saudi Arabia has never made a secret of the millions of dollars it has provided the PLO. Crate after crate of new U.S. rifles still in boxes marked clearly for shipment to Saudi Arabia were found in the arms caches of the PLO in Southern Lebanon. Have you heard any criticism from the Reagan Administration of Saudi Arabia's support of terrorism? No, and you can bet your Aramco stock — if you have any — that you never will.

Iraq and Syria harbor terrorists. There are all kinds of intelligence data implicating Syria in the bombings of our embassy and our Marines in Lebanon. Yet the Reagan Administration is trying to maintain good relations with both.

In short, the U.S. is doing exactly what it got mad at the Italians for doing — going after underlings, for the public's benefit, while playing footsie with their bosses.

You aren't going to hurt terrorism very much by chasing down the gunmen. The terrorists consider them expendable anyway. If you want to put a dent in terrorism, you have to be ready to break diplomatic relations and impose economic sanctions against any and all nations which harbor and support them.

The Reagan Administration, with its ties to big oil and big banking, is about as likely to do that as I am to send Hanoi Jane Fonda a bouquet of roses.

To put a plain face on it, the Reagan Administration is not being intellectually honest with the American people. I don't expect any favors from foreign governments but I do expect our own government to be honest with us.

Rostenkowski's House committee speeds to revise tax law

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, who put his House Ways and Means Committee through a weekend of closed-door sessions to write a new tax law, predicts the effort will pay off even though the panel has strayed from the plan recommended by President Reagan.

"More so today than I have ever seen, there is the optimistic view that we will get a bill" this year, Rostenkowski, D-Ill., told reporters after the committee he chairs adjourned Sunday night. At an earlier news conference, he had conceded a slow start but rejected any notion the tax issue is dead for the year, despite what appears to be a lack of public excitement about it.

"Once we see what the (final) document is, attention will be focused on it and we will get that army of constituents I think are for tax reform," Rostenkowski said.

A senior Republican on the committee, Rep. Bill Frenzel of Minnesota, says the panel is moving too quickly. Where once members were examining Reagan's massive proposal a line at a time, Frenzel said, "now we are taking too big a bite, section by section" just to put together a package.

Rostenkowski said the committee should be able to complete its work on the bill within four weeks. Even if that happens, there is almost no chance any big tax bill will be considered this year by the Senate Finance Committee.

In its Sunday session, aides said, the committee:

— Agreed to allow corporations a deduction for a portion of the dividends they pay to shareholders. When fully effective in 1997, the deduction would cover 10 percent of dividends. This has been a long-time goal of businesses, and Reagan wants the full 10 percent effective next year.

— Accepted Reagan's proposal to repeal the law that allows a person to exclude from income $100 ($200 for a couple) received in dividends.

— Voted to tax at the parents' rate any unearned income (such as interest) of a child under 14 if the income arises from property received from the parents. Under present law, such income is taxed at the child's rate, which often is zero. This change would bring in about $1.1 billion over five years.

— Approved a tighter taxation of trusts to the tune of about $2 billion over five years. One section would end tax benefits for Clifford trusts, which many parents use to cut their taxes by turning over property to their children for more than 10 years.

— Reduced tax benefits for Employee Stock Ownership Plans, which encourage worker ownership of their employers.

Including Sunday's votes, the committee has tentatively approved provisions that would gain revenues of $16 billion less over the next five years than would Rostenkowski's proposal. The loss compared to the president's plan would be even greater.

Most of the committee's actions on Sunday were fairly close to what Reagan recommended. But over the past month, the panel has agreed on numerous occasions to provisions that would be considerably more generous to one group or another — whether bankers or farmers — than the president proposed.

Rostenkowski has expressed concerns about some of those votes. However, he told reporters, he is convinced the final bill will be close to Reagan's. "I realize that without the president's help, it will be very difficult for us to pass a bill through the House of Representatives."

The chairman said his goals remain basically the same as those stated by Reagan: to make the tax system fairer, to reduce tax rates for most Americans, especially for middle-income families, and to make sure the new tax law produces the same revenue as present one.

Bringing those elements together is "a near impossibility," he said. That, coupled with the fact the committee's senior members are having to divide their time between tax overhaul and a balanced-budget bill, is why the panel is off to a slow start, he added. The budget measure is likely to occupy the committee most of this week.

Among Saturday's committee votes were those to:

— Sharply reduce special tax incentives for the timber industry, an action producing $4.9 billion over five years. Corporations would no longer be allowed lower, capital-gains rates for their timber; individuals could retain the benefit except for timber from federal lands. A special fast writeoff and credit for reforestation expenditures would be repealed. And only producers whose timber acreage is 50,000 acres or less could keep a five-year writeoff for pre-production expenses, such as interest.

— Grant $1 billion in tax concessions to developers of low-income housing over the next five years. Financing with tax-exempt bonds would be permitted in many cases. Depreciation deductions would be 25 percent to 50 percent more generous than for other real estate.

Halloween revelry draws coffin-renters, religious protesters

Associated Press

With Halloween barely two shakes of a witch's broomstick away, business is booming at some California costume and coffin shops, paraders in Delaware were criticized for celebrating the devil, and Jaycees in Wyoming came under fire for a haunted house in which Santa Claus brandished a straight razor.

Jaycees in Charleston, W.Va., fared even worse. Their haunted house burned down over the weekend, sending members scrambling to find a new location for their main fund-raising event.

And revelers filled the streets of Key West, Fla., for a Halloween parade that capped an annual extravaganza marking the start of the tourist season.

In Los Angeles, adult trick-or-treaters were getting ready to trade their everyday clothes for Thursday-night stints as pirates, clowns and gorillas.

"Halloween has become an adult holiday," said Theresa Saidy, owner of Adele's of Hollywood, where military uniforms and Renaissance outfits were hot items, along with more traditional witch and clown costumes.

"We did our biggest business ever last Halloween," she said. "More than 700 people came in for costumes. The way things are going this year, we expect to do even better."

Cassandra's Costumes and Coffins in Los Alamitos, Calif., in Orange County, caters to people who take Halloween seriously enough to rent a real casket for party centerpieces.

Gloria Parker, who operates from her home, says the trade in custom caskets comes alive this time of year and all 22 of her coffins were reserved by Oct. 10. The rate is $35 per day.

"We have cobwebs, tombstones for the yard, snakes, spiders and little caskets," Parker said. For $50 a day plus a mileage charge there's a black 1964 Cadillac with silver curtains.

Not everyone was getting into the spirit, however.

Churchgoers in Georgetown, Del., denounced the "high holy day of Satanic worship" as about 700 children and adults in brightly colored costumes paraded Sunday. The Rev. Jack Mercy and his Pentecostal parishioners failed in a bid to have the parade moved to some day other than the Christian sabbath.

"It's all the work of the devil," Mercy said in an interview Friday.

Jaycees in Cheyenne, Wyo., voted Friday night to dismantle the Santa Room in a haunted house the club operates every Halloween as a charitable activity. The room was based on the movie "Silent Night, Deadly Night," which portrayed a person who dressed up as Santa Claus and murdered rapists and child abusers.

Jaycees in Cheyenne, Wyo., voted Friday night to dismantle the Santa Room in a haunted house the club operates....The room showed Santa Claus chasing a man with a straight razor. Other characters were made to look dead and dismembered, including a baby nailed hand and foot to the wall.

The room showed Santa Claus chasing a man with a straight razor. Other characters were made to look dead and dismembered, including a baby nailed hand and foot to the wall.

No one under 18 years old would have been let in, club members said, but it was more than some members of the community could take.

A statement issued by the Jaycees said the project was canceled following criticism by Cheyenne residents and threats to club members.

The Jaycees refused to elaborate on the alleged threats. But Michelle Baker, chairman of the group's haunted house comittee, said in a separate statement, "I have had my life threatened and my job terrorized." She said she couldn't elaborate.

The creators of the room, Mike Langlois and Ira Brown, said they were surprised at the controversy.

"We don't see what the big deal is. This is the same thing you see in the movies," Langlois said.

In Key West, Saturday's Grand Parade wound up the annual Fantasy Fest, the island's version of Mardi Gras that comes at Halloween time and marks the beginning of the tourist season.

Trick-or-treat for UNICEF turns 35 this year. In the early 50s, children used milk cartons with UNICEF stickers, left, to collect pennies for sick and starving children. Today, right, specially designed boxes hold collected funds, which total amore than $90 million since the program's inception.

Illinois city not over shock, horror of last year's Halloween slayings

DECATUR, Ill. (AP) — Pumpkins are heaped on the blacktop in front of Tom's Produce. Costumes and candy crowd the shelves at Woolworth's. But the make-believe fright of Halloween has been replaced by genuine fear a year after the slayings of two young trick-or-treaters.

Sherry Gordon, 12, and her cousin, Theresa Hall, 9, were found strangled in a vacant second-floor flat at a sprawling public housing project near their home. An autopsy indicated they had been sexually assaulted.

Theresa's younger sister, Patricia, now 8, had accompanied them on their Halloween rounds and was found cowering in a closet of the apartment, physically unharmed.

The crime, which shook this blue-collar city of 93,000 people, is unsolved despite a year of full-time investigation by state and local authorities. And a persistent undercurrent of concern is becoming magnified as Halloween approaches, some residents say.

"I tell you that devil is still out there, but people let their babies run loose in the street," said LaVonne Williams, a mother of four who lives almost within sight of the building where the bodies were found. "Some people don't learn nothin'."

It's the possibility of a repeat occurrence, and the beastliness of what happened to those children," said Rev. David Brown, pastor of Central Baptist Church, where Sherry and Theresa were baptized and attended services. "Who knows where or when, especially at this season, someone else might be moved to do the same thing?"

"What I'm hearing most from parents now is they don't want their children to take part in Halloween, period," said Sandra Johnson, who is coordinating Halloween safety programs for DOVE Inc., a Decatur youth group.

In recent weeks, the city has planned extraordinary safety measures for Halloween. Police have canceled holidays to provide officers for extra patrols. Forty Army reservists will guard an outdoor party that organizers say could draw more than 1,000 children. And more than a dozen other parties are planned at churches and schools as an alternative to trick-or-treating.

The City Council has urged parents to limit trick-or-treating to lighted porches in a familiar neighborhood in the early evening. But, to the dismay of some parents, it rejected a proposal to ban trick-or-treating altogether.

"I guess what I was asking was rather drastic and I'm sure there would be a lot of parents who would disagree with me," said Donna Skelton, a housewife who agitated for the ban. "But let's face it, things aren't going to get any better in this world."

Discussing progress in solving the killings, Decatur Police Chief Patrick Vaughan reeled off a list of statistics: 2,000 pages of reports compiled from 2,700 interviews, 2,790 names mentioned, contacts with 28 police departments, 21 polygraph examinations, trips to a dozen cities. A sergeant and a detective are assigned full-time to the case.

"We have a large body of evidence," Vaughan said. "We just need a link."

Patricia, who is mildly retarded, was interviewed by police, psychiatrists, social workers and others, but was of "very limited" help to investigators, Vaughan said. According to court testimony by a state police officer, she described the killer only as a "a black man — a mean man."

Police circulated a composite drawing of a bearded, curly-haired black man who had been seen with the girls the night they disappeared. He was described as in his 20s and between 5-foot-8 and 5-foot-10 in height. But Vaughan said the description fit hundreds of young men in Decatur.

Patricia "came to the experience with a lot of emotional conflicts and problems, and she came away from it with a lot more," said Dr. Michael Campion, a psychologist who treated the girl.

One method used to question Patricia and to help her deal with the shock of her experience was "play therapy," which employs toys, dolls and drawings to help a young victim recall and explain a traumatic episode and so come to terms with it.

"She needs long-term therapy, but it's unlikely she'll get it considering the environment she's in," Campion said.

Trick-or-treating inappropriate 'practice'

DALLAS (AP) — Child development expert James Campbell feels a little like the Grinch that stole Halloween.

He thinks scary things are bad for little kids, trick-or-treating is a perilous affair and Halloween masks can be dangerous.

Campbell, a North Texas State University professor, is going against the grain of traditions that have their roots in ancient pagan festivals of harvest and death.

After 2,000 years, the symbols and mythology of the autumnal holiday have lost their power over most adults.

But for little children, who Campbell said see reality and process information differently than adults, Halloween can be genuinely frightening.

"You see a lot of post-Halloween nightmares," he said.

Every year, there are reports of poisoned or spiked treats, traffic accidents, or worse.

"We don't live in a society anymore where children can be free to roam through the neighborhoods," Campbell said.

NATION IN BRIEF

Animal experiments should be 'humane'

NEW YORK (AP) — Most Americans accept the need to use animals in medical and scientific experiments, but many are concerned that test animals may be treated inhumanely, according to a Media General-Associated Press poll.

Nearly half of the 1,412 people questioned in the nationwide telephone poll believed laboratory animals were treated humanely, but 30 percent did not. Twenty-four percent of the respondents were unsure.

Animals have contributed to medical advances and basic scientific research, sometimes with their lives. They are also used in allergy testing by cosmetic companies and others.

Eight in 10 respondents in the Media General-AP poll said they believed it was necessary to use animals in medical research on diseases such as cancer, heart disease and diabetes.

Seven in 10 said animal testing was also needed for basic scientific research, and six in 10 said animals were needed in allergy testing.

Which animals should be used for medical experiments? Nearly 9 in 10 had no objection to using rats. But when it comes to dogs, 55 percent approved and 40 percent disapproved their use in experiments.

Farm policy on block

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress grapples with farm policy and money issues this week, including a plan to force the swollen federal budget into balance by 1991.

The Senate is resuming work on the 1985 farm bill, a four-year plan for food and agriculture policy that is being criticized by the Reagan administration as a budget-buster that helps wealthy farmers along with those in financial trouble.

"I'm hopeful that somewhere in this chamber we can put together a majority (for a bill) that will not be vetoed by the president," said Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan.

Dole and other Republicans planned a series of controversial amendments aimed at paring back the cost of the bill, estimated by the Agriculture Department at $20 billion or more annually for the foreseeable future.

High on the list were proposals to scale back the four-year freeze on income subsidies for wheat, corn, cotton and rice farmers to just one year, and to slash the current $50,000-per-farmer subsidy payment limit in half.

INS eyes marriages

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — "What does your wife take in her coffee?"

"When was the last time your husband brought you flowers?"

"What color is your bedroom ceiling?"

These are some of the questions a couple might have to answer if one applies for U.S. citizenship as the new husband or wife of an American.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service calls this legal version of "The Newlywed Game" a marriage-fraud interview, intended to trip up a growing number of foreigners who use sham marriages to get into the country, said Ernest E. Gustafson, district director of the service.

Lighter causes death

HUNTINGTON, Ind. (AP) — A man died of burns and heat asphyxiation when the butane lighter he was using to light a cigarette exploded, the Huntington County coroner said.

William Schacht II died Friday about 5 p.m. from injuries suffered in the accident, said coroner Greg Sprinkle.

He said Schacht, who may have released too much fuel from the lighter, was wearing a flammable robe.

Foggy mornings continue

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midlanders will continue to wake up to an early morning fog on Tuesday, the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal said.

Cool air on top of warm air seems to be the culprit causing the fog for the past several mornings, said a NWS spokesman.

Tonight will be fair with low clouds and fog expected after midnight. The low will be in the upper 50s with light and variable winds.

Early morning cloudiness and fog will continue Tuesday, becoming fair later in the day. The high will be in the upper 70s with light and variable winds.

Sunday's high of 76 degrees missed the record mark by 13 degrees. The record high for Sunday's date is 89 degrees set in 1950. Today's low of 54 degrees missed the record by 20 degrees. The record low for today's date is 34 degrees set in 1980.

STATE

Widespread rains, with embedded thundershowers, were reported across Southeast and East Texas today as a result of Hurricane Juan, which was aiming itself toward the Louisiana coastline.

Heaviest thundershowers in Texas were concentrated along the upper Gulf Coast. The National Weather Service issued a flash flood watch for Southeast Texas east of a line from Galveston to Lufkin. A gale warning was in effect for the entire upper Texas coast.

On the other corner of the state, travelers' advisories were posted for the Texas Panhandle, the South Plains and surrounding regions because of dense fog that lowered visibility to near zero at times early today, making driving hazardous.

A veil of high clouds kept other sections of Texas partly to mostly cloudy, except for the Rio Grande Valley and Far West Texas, where skies were mostly clear.

NATION

Rain spread across broad sections of the South today as Hurricane Juan pushed blustery weather inland, showers spread along the Pacific Coast, and sections of Washington were under snow warnings.

Snow-prompted travelers' advisories were issued for the passes of the Cascades in Washington, the National Weather Service said.

Gale-force winds prompted warnings along sections of New England's coast.

Sports Briefs

Triathalon

KAILUA-KONA, Hawaii — Scott Tinley of San Diego, who finished as the runner-up to Dave Scott the past three years, won the Ironman Triathlon World Championship with a new record for the event.

Tinley's composite time of eight hours, 50 minutes and 54 seconds broke the mark Scott set last year.

Joanne Ernst of Palo Alto, Calif., was first among the women in 10:25:22.

Marathon

NEW YORK — Orlando Pizzolato of Italy passed Ahmed Saleh of Djibouti with a strong second-half surge Sunday and won the New York City Marathon for the second consecutive year.

Norway's Grete Waitz again dominated among the women, placing first for the fourth straight time and the seventh time in the past eight years.

Neither Pizzolato or Waitz came close to breaking the course record due to the mid-70 degree heat which plagued the record 18,168 starters.

Pizzolato, 27, finished in 2 hours, 11 minutes, 34 seconds; the 32-year-old-Waitz was clocked in 2:28:33.

Baseball

NEW YORK — Lou Piniella, a former outfielder with the New York Yankees, was named manager of the team on Sunday, thus ending Billy Martin's fourth term as the club's manager.

Martin, who took over the Yankees in April when Yogi Berra was fired, had a 91-54 record as the team finished second in the AL East to the Toronto Blue Jays. But it was Martin's off-the-field problems — most notably two barroom altercations in September in Baltimore — that led to his departure.

Piniella, who retired in 1984 after 11 years with the Yankees, became the club's batting coach last year. He becomes the ninth man to manage under owner George Steinbrenner.

Boxing

MONTE CARLO, Monaco — Britain's Terry Marsh won the junior welterweight European boxing championship title Saturday, knocking out Italy's Alessandro Scapecchi in the sixth round.

Auto Racing

MARTINSVILLE, Va. — Tommy Ellis won the battle, but Jack Ingram won the war as the NASCAR short track season drew to a close with Sunday's running of the $146,085 Winn-Dixie 500.

While Ellis cruised to victory in the Late Model Sportsman portion of the 500-lap triple-header at Martinsville Speedway, Ingram finished fifth, good enough to clinch his fifth national title in the division, the most ever for a NASCAR Sportsman driver.

Skating

LONDON, Ontario — Caryn Kadavy of Erie, Pa., made her international figure skating debut a successful one Saturday when she won the women's singles title at Skate Canada.

Kadavy, 17, third in the U.S. Championships last winter, swept all three phases of the competition — compulsory figures, the two-minute short program and the four-minute freeskating finale.

Tennis

COLOGNE, West Germany — Sweden's Peter Lundgren upset Ramesh Khrishnan of India 6-3, 6-2 Sunday to win the $119,200 Cologne GoldStar Grand Prix Indoor Tennis Tournament.

MELBOURNE, Australia — Marty Davis of San Jose, Calif., defeated Paul Annacone of Bridgehampton, N.Y., 6-4, 6-4, Sunday to win the $200,000 Black and Decker Indoor Tennis Tournament.

Scott Tinley wins Ironman Triathlon in eight hours, 50 minutes and 54 seconds.

Royals stage Greatest Comeback

By BRUCE LOWITT

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City Royals finally have a crown as big as the one atop their scoreboard. They are champions.

Most unlikely ones.

Two years after a drug scandal wrenched them apart, and one night after they received the gift of an umpire's controversial call, 1985's losingest division winners peeled their backs off the wall one final time and staged the greatest comeback in World Series history. They did not just beat the St. Louis Cardinals; they destroyed them Sunday night, 11-0, in the seventh game.

In the 82 years these classics have been staged, no team ever had lost the first two games of a World Series at home and come back to win it all. Now Kansas City has.

"It would take me two or three weeks to tell you about this season," Royals Manager Dick Howser said, reflecting on the late-season charge when they overtook California to win the American League West and the victories that wiped out Toronto's three-games-to-one lead in the AL playoffs.

"No one likes to be behind like we have been this year, and always battling the odds. To put it mildly, we never did anything easy, from the regular season to the playoffs to the World Series."

Not easy, but also not new.

THE ODDS were against the Royals even being in the playoffs. No division winner had repeated since the 1981 New York Yankees. And with a week to go in the season, the Royals were a game out of first place. They won.

Then came the American League playoffs, and the Royals were down 3-1 to Toronto, one game from elimination. They won.

Finally came the World Series, and the Royals won again, even if Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog can't quite believe it.

"I'll give some credit to Kansas City, but they really aren't that good," Herzog said. "If they were, they'd have won more than 91 ballgames during the season. ... We won 108 games this year. Nobody else did that. They struggled in a very weak division. They couldn't have won the National League East. They couldn't have won the American League East."

But they won the World Series.

While Bret Sagerhagen, Kansas City's proudest new father and Most Valuable Player of the Series, silenced the St. Louis batters like so many Little Leaguers Sunday night, the Royals battered John Tudor, the Cardinals' ace, and a few of the pitchers who followed him to the mound.

"I've always been a little hesitant before when I've been asked about our pitching staff," Howser said, "but I can say now that I think we have the best staff in baseball."

Saberhagen, who had begun the Royals' comeback with a six-hitter and a 6-1 victory in Game 3, climaxed it in Game 7 with a five-hit shutout that left St. Louis with a collective batting average of .185, the lowest ever in a seven-game Series.

"Having a baby two days ago is my biggest thrill," the 21-year-old Saberhagen said. "This was a close second."

TWO YEARS ago, the Royals were in turmoil. A federal drug crackdown had netted four of their players, including center-fielder Willie Wilson, the 1982 AL batting champion. The pitching staff of the 1980 World Series team was being replaced by Saberhagen and other young arms. A lot of people said the Royals were good for fifth place, no more.

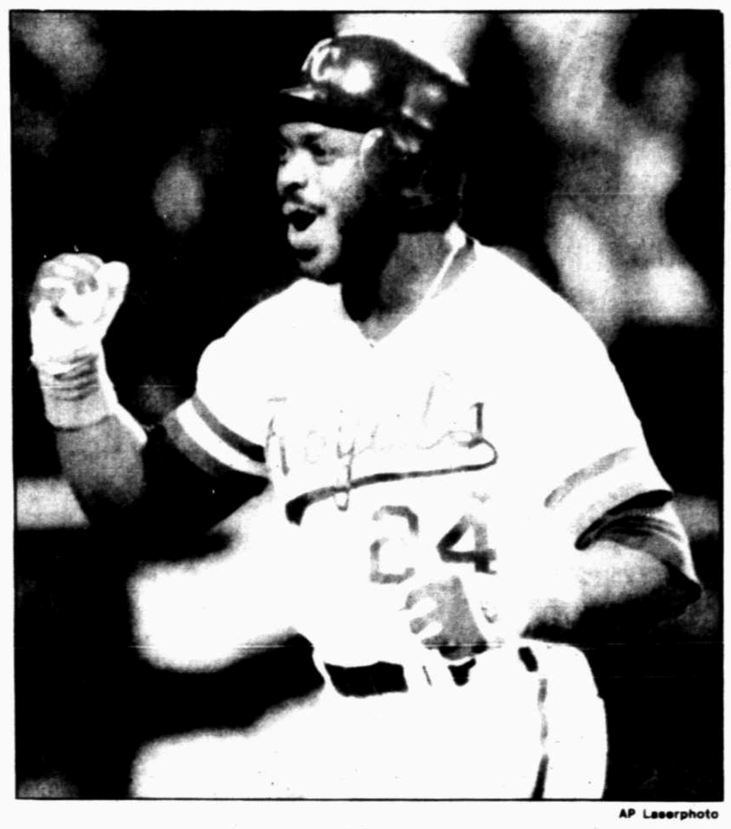

Kansas City won its division in 1984. It won it all in 1985, with Wilson batting .367 for the Series.

"Thirteen runs in seven games is almost a disgrace," Herzog sniffed. "Basically, when you look at the whole Series, we were fortunate to win three ballgames. I don't know why we stopped hitting."

Tudor, who had won the first and fourth games against Kansas City and had allowed five walks and one run in those 15 2-3 innings, was gone after 2 1-3 innings Sunday night, having given up four walks and five runs.

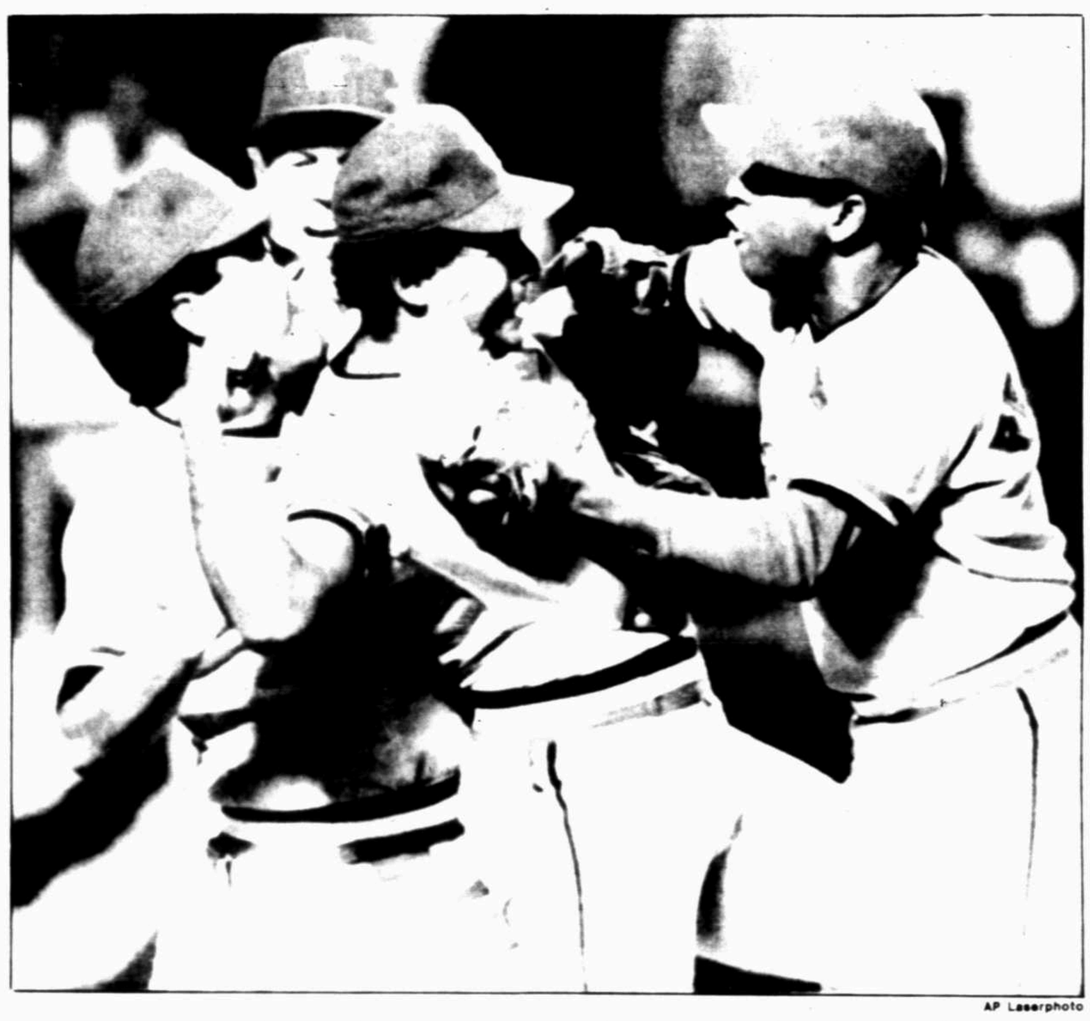

After his quickest exit of 1985, Tudor swung at an electric fan in the Cardinals' clubhouse, requiring a quick trip to the hospital for stitches in his left index finger.

Joaquin Andujar, center, is restrained by teammates after being ejected during an argument with plate umpire Don Denkinger Sunday night.

Herzog plans to keep Andujar

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Joaquin Andujar, said to be on the trading block, may still be in a St. Louis Cardinals uniform next season, pitching "the second or third game of the season for us," Manager Whitey Herzog said Sunday.

"He'll probably win 20 games by the All-Star Game and I'll take that," said Herzog, who was ejected from Sunday's Game 7 World Series loss to Kansas City along with Andujar for disputing a pitch.

With the Cardinals, who had blown a 3-1 games lead in the Series, trailing 10-0 in the fifth, Herzog was tossed out of the game for arguing with plate umpire Don Denkinger and one pitch later, Andujar was given the thumb for doing the same.

Andujar said he had no intention of swinging at Denkinger, although he looked every bit the part of a restrained barroom brawler when his teammates pulled him away.

"No way," he said. "I have 10 years in the majors. I know better. I control myself. I had the umpire in front of me."

"I'm not sorry," Andujar said. "I'm mad. I'm a professional. We tried, but we lost the World Series. I feel good because inside I know I tried."

Saberhagen Series MVP

By HAL BOCK

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Kansas City Royals wrote an appropriately improbable climax to a most bizarre World Series.

Given the way the first six games had gone, it figured that the seventh — matching two 20-game winners — would deteriorate into a comic opera.

Kansas City's Bret Saberhagen held up his end of the bargain, pitching a five-hit shutout that made him the Series' Most Valuable Player. John Tudor of St. Louis came up way short, and so did his team.

While the Cardinals raged at the umpires for misdemeanors past and present, real or imagined, the Royals accumulated 14 hits and 11 runs and laughed their way to a world championship.

They scored six runs in one inning, two more than the Cardinals scored in any game. The 11 runs in Game 7 were only two fewer than the Cardinals managed in all seven.

The Cardinals were driven to such distraction that Manager Whitey Herzog and pitcher Joaquin Andujar both were ejected, one pitch apart, by plate umpire Don Denkinger during a nightmarish fifth inning that sent the game hurtling out of reach.

The Royals buried the Cardinals in the fifth with seven hits, five after two were out. When Andujar, pitching in relief with the game all but gone, started arguing ball-and-strike callsr, Herzog arrived to offer his opinion.

One word led to another, and manager and pitcher soon were ejected, the first time in 50 years that more than one participant has been thrown out of a Series game.

Herzog's beef with Denkinger had as much to do with the umpire's controversial ninth-inning safe call in Game 6, which set the stage for Kansas City's game-winning rally, as it did with Andujar's complaints.

"The umpires were no factor tonight," Herzog said. "We should have been home yesterday. I think he missed the play last night. He's a good umpire. The human element has to come into being. When something gets taken away from you, you get upset."

That was the case with Tudor, often nearly unhittable this season. The Royals sent him into such a frenzy that he punched an electric fan — "That's a metal object, not a person," a team spokesmen said — after being knocked out in the third inning. Her sliced the index finger on his pitching hand and required stitches.

"I made a dumb move," Tudor said. "That's my business, though."

Tudor's frustration was understandable. The Kansas City Royals were not supposed to win this Series, certainly not after they lost the first two games at home and definitely not when they fell into a 1-3 hole, one loss away from elimination.

These are the poor-relation Royals, representatives of the sad-sack American League West, losers of 10 straight postseason games over one stretch.

They were deprived of designated hitter Hal McRae, one of their best bats, by the crazy quilt rules that prohibit use of the designated hitter in odd-numbered years.

Kansas City went in with a lineup that seemed full of holes, a team that will be shopping for a number of replacement parts next winter, a team facing a National League championship club that had won 101 games.

And all the Royals did was win.

"It will take me two or three weeks to get over it," Manager Dick Howser said. "I'm not good enough to explain this season. I can't explain it. It's amazing."

Landry ready to go fishing

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

IRVING (AP) — Give Tom Landry a 6-2 record in the second half of the National Football League season and he'd take a hike.

"I'd go fishing or play golf if you'd give me 6-2 again," said Landry after the Dallas Cowboys thumped the Atlanta Falcons 24-10 on Sunday and kept their National Conference Eastern Division lead.

"I'm very happy to be at 6-2 at this point," said Landry. "I never thought it would be."

Up jumps the hard part for the Cowboys, who play at St. Louis on Monday night Nov. 4 then travel to Washington the next week.

"Now comes our tough stretch," said Landry. "We have a tiring combination of games coming up."

A SORE-ribbed Danny White was far from perfect in his return to the Dallas lineup. But he offset three interceptions by running for a touchdown, passing for another and hitting 27 of 47 passes for 362 yards against the 1-7 Falcons.

Tony Hill caught a 35 yard touchdown pass and had 10 receptions for 161 yards. Tony Dorsett gained 90 yards, 60 of them on a touchdown burst up the middle.

"Danny did have three turnovers but that's not surprising when you consider the harassment he was under," said Landry. "Still, he made the big plays for us. His experience enabled him to make those big plays."

White, who had beaten the Falcons in two previous outings against them, said "It wasn't pretty but it was a win. I did some good things and some bad things. It was good to get back. My ribs still hurt."

"We knew we were going to have a tough time," said Landry. "We had to make the big plays to beat them.

"Danny had to run for his life back there. We don't like to see him run because of those blitzes but sometimes you have to. He did what he had to do. He is hurting and this game probably didn't help him any."

THE BUSY White called an audible and bootlegged a yard for a touchdown, and had to tackle Scott Case to save a touchdown after an interception in the fourth period.

"Danny threw a couple he wish he hadn't thrown," said Landry. "I feel good about this team. We'll go to the playoffs for sure if we keep playing like this."

White, who wears a flak jacket, said he never intended to run three times against Atlanta with his bad ribs.

"Believe me, it's a last-ditch effort," said White. "I'm just trying to do the job the best I can. We had a lot of pressure and I won a few and lost a few."

Atlanta quarterback Dave Archer hit only 9 of 23 passes against the Cowboys, suffered five sacks and three interceptions. He flipped a three-yard scoring pass to tight end Allama Matthews.

The Falcons' luck ran out in more ways than one. Radar-accurate placekicker Mick Luckhurst kicked a 38-yard field goal to run his consecutive streak to 17 in a row. However, he then missed kicks of 46 and 27 yards.

"This losing isn't easy for anybody," said Case. "I was really surprised White caught me on the interception. I thought I'd score. I guess he had the angle on me."

ARCHER had no excuses for his dismal day, saying, "I just didn't do a good job. Dallas didn't do anything new or different. I just didn't make the plays."

Dallas strong safety Dextor Clinkscale, who had two interceptions, said "I thought we'd be 8-0 but I'll settle for 6-2."

Permian, Lee playoff cinches, barring bizarre finish

From Staff Reports

When Odessa Permian beat San Angelo, Midland Lee escaped from Abilene with a win and Big Spring shook the very foundations of 4-5A, yea, state 5A, football with its win over Odessa High, it just about settled things for 1985.

As a result of last weekend's games, Odessa Permian and Midland Lee sewed up playoff berths, right?

If you are interested in sure things, last week you could have taken BYU over UTEP, too.

Permian and Lee, indeed, appear to be shoo-ins, but the world of sports is replete with things that were, but weren't...just ask the St. Louis Cardinals.

Midland High this Friday challenges Odessa Permian at Memorial Stadium and it's this week's game of the week in the Midland Reporter-Telegram football contest.

Permian should win, but for the Bulldogs this is the opportunity to play the No. 1 team, a rare privilege that sometimes brings out the best in an underdog. It also presents an opportunity for Midland to make a name for itself.

Meanwhile, over in Odessa, Lee can nail down that playoff berth by beating the Bronchos. A week ago this shaped up as a vital contest in the 4-5A scheme of things. Then Odessa lost to Big Spring, ushering Odessa out of the playoff contention.

Coach Jerry Millsapps, however, added a new dimension by announcing he planned to retire at the end of the season. One can only wonder and wait in anticipation of the possible emotional ramifications his retirement will create.

As far as Coach Jack Tayrien is concerned, it could mean trouble, inspiring the Bronchos for their final two games against Lee and Permian.

In other action, San Angelo faces Abilene Cooper and Abilene meets Big Spring.

Elsewhere, McCamey assumed the driver's seat in the 8-2A race, but Greenwood's game with Reagan County Friday at Greenwood carries playoff overtones. Crane is cruising in 7-3A, but meets its severest test in Ballinger.

In 6-A, Iraan looks like it is home free, facing Grandfalls this week, while Rankin, idle this week, is in line for the other playoff spot and perhaps an eventual rematch with Iraan. The two teams battled to a 13-12 decision a couple of weeks ago.

No one is going to catch Sweetwater in 2-4A, but there's another playoffberth to be settled and Monahans looks at this week's game against Andrews as a step in that direction.

OU promises to help in Big Eight's probe

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — University of Oklahoma President Frank Horton says the school will do all it can to help the Big Eight Conference investigate allegations that several Oklahoma athletes signed with sports agents while still eligible to play.

Horton told The Sunday Oklahoman that the university's report on its investigation into the matter had been sent to the Big Eight offices, but refused to talk any further about it.

"We'll cooperate with the Big Eight in any way we can," he said.

The newspaper reported in its Sunday editions that school officials had decided to not use basketball player Shawn Clark in any games until the Big Eight rules on his situation. Clark is the only athlete involved in the allegations who has eligibility remaining.

According to a lawsuit filed in Tulsa in July, Clark signed a promissory note to Brent Barnes, who at one time was president of Intersouth Sports Management Corp. The lawsuit did not make clear the nature of Clark's alleged debt.

Triad Bank of Tulsa filed the suit in an effort to foreclose on a $125,000 loan it made to Intersouth. The bank said Intersouth had put up as collateral sports representation contracts with basketball player W.L. Tisdale and football players George "Buster" Rhymes, Danny Bradley, Alvin Ross, Keith Stanberry, Fred Sims and Paul Clewis.

The bank said Intersouth also put up promissory notes of $25,000 from Rhymes, $15,692 from Sims, $14,880 from Ross and $1,070 from Clark. All the notes allegedly were dated Sept. 30, 1984.

National Collegiate Athletic Association rules state that collegiate athletes lose their eligibility when they sign agents to represent them.

Most of the athletes have denied signing with Barnes, but The Tulsa Tribune said Clewis admitted he received $2,000 from Barnes.

Ross has since transferred to Central State University, but has not played because the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics said it did not have enough information to decide if Ross was eligible.

Clark continues to practice with the basketball team.

Aggies-SMU hogs spotlight while Baylor rests

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

The Southwest Conference-leading Baylor Bears get a week of rest before meeting the Arkansas Razorbacks in what could be the showdown game of the year.

Baylor bounced Texas Christian 45-0 on homecoming Saturday to increase its SWC ledger to 5-0 while Texas, the only other unbeaten team in league play, took a 44-14 strapping from Southern Methodist.

Baylor will travel to Little Rock for a night game Nov. 9.

In other games, Arkansas stayed in the title chase with a 57-27 massacre of the Houston Cougars and Texas A&M kept close with a 43-28 victory over the surprisingly tough Rice Owls.

The SWC spotlight game this week finds SMU at Texas A&M in a 6:45 p.m. nationally televised matchup on ESPN.

In other games, Texas finally gets back home to entertain Texas Tech, Arkansas travels to Rice, and Houston is at TCU.

SMU gave Texas its worst whipping in the 69-year history of their series and scored more points than the Mustangs had ever posted against a Longhorn team.

"We never anticipated that it would turn out this way," said SMU Coach Bobby Collins. "I'm surprised."

The only consolation for the Longhorns was a fourth-period touchdown, their first offensive TD in 12 periods.

"So many times Texas had the ball inside the five and couldn't score a touchdown," said linebacker T.D. Briggs. "That totally wipes out your concentration."

Tailback Reggie Dupard scored four touchdowns for the Mustangs.

Baylor is 7-1 for the year and even Coach Baylor Grant Teaff had to admit "Right now, we're in pretty good shape. But we still have a long road to travel. We've got to make two big road trips to Arkansas and Texas before this thing is decided."

Baylor rolled up 526 yards offense againstg TCU and held the Frogs to only 184.

Arkansas is now 3-1 in the SWC and 6-1 overall. Houston, which appeared in last year's Cotton Bowl, is 0-4 and 1-6.

"We stunk up the place and it's obvious we aren't the same team we were last year," said Harold Wheeler, Houston assistant coach.

The 57 points were the most for Arkansas since beating Tulsa 60-0 in 1974.

"I was shocked how wide open our guys were," said Arkansas quarterback Mark Calcagni who passed for 161 yards and ran for a touchdown.

A&M is 5-2 and 3-1 going into the game with SMU.

"When you score 43 points and don't play well it can be frustrating," said Aggie Coach Jackie Sherrill.

A&M's Andrew Toney got 116 yards on 25 carries.

Just another win for Miners

EL PASO (AP) — Texas-El Paso Coach Bill Yung has been waiting a long time for something to go right.

His lowly Miners, one of the worst college football teams in the nation, have not had a winning season since 1970. In the past 10 years, they have not won more two games a year. And this year, they were winless.

That is, until Saturday night. Then, something finally went right.

In one of the most shocking upsets in college football history, Texas-El Paso defeated defending national champion Brigham Young, 23-16.

The seventh-ranked Cougars had not lost to the Miners in 14 years and the setback broke BYU's unprecedented 25-game Western Athletic Conference winning streak.

IT GAVE the Miners their first victory of the year, a 1-6 overall record and a 1-3 mark in the WAC, while dropping the Cougars to 6-2 and 3-1.

Yung said the victory was "perhaps" a miracle.

"I've been praying and beating the drum for so long that I think the Lord must have sore eardrums," Yung said after the stunning defeat that had excited UTEP fans tearing down goalposts.

"This is the first time we have ever played four quarters with BYU. We played hard and perhaps it was a miracle. But you know that I believe in miracles," he said.

For BYU Coach LaVell Edwards, however, there was nothing miraculous in the loss that left him worried about the Cougars' national standing.

"We wasted a lot of opportunities in the first half, but you have to credit UTEP for playing hard and well," said Edwards. "This was costly to us from a national standpoint. We have lost conference games before and won the WAC, but we can't afford to lost any more WAC games this season."

Contest Winners

1. Don D. Moore, 609 Brooks, Midland.
2. Theresa Dickey, 4603 Kiowa, Midland.
3. Genny Stevens, 3416 W. Kansas., Midland.

THE MINERS gained their first victory of the year with big plays, not the least of which was an interception by defensive back Danny Taylor in the second quarter.

Taylor grabbed a Robbie Bosco pass in the Miners' end zone and returned it 100 yards for the touchdown that put UTEP ahead for good, 17-10.

Bosco was intercepted three other times and fumbled a snap that led to a Miner recovery and field goal.

"We did make a lot of mistakes when we were ready to score," Bosco said. "There's been about six or seven upsets this year and we happened to be in that category."

Also in the Miners' big-play category was a 52-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Sam Garza to Clarence Seay for UTEP's first score of the night. Hugo Castellanos kicked a career best 50-yard field goal in the first period to move the Miners into a 10-10 tie.

But it was the UTEP defense that held one of the nation's top passing attacks to just six second-half points.

Bosco, who last week threw for 585 yards in BYU's 45-23 defeat of New Mexico, connected on just 15 of 34 attempts for 151 yards against the usually dismal Miners, who came into the game with an 0-1 year record of 1-4-10?

Kentucky stung by slush charges

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — The University of Kentucky, stung by a newspaper report showing money and gifts flowing freely from boosters to basketball players over the past 13 years, will intensify its own investigation into purported violations of NCAA rules.

In a lengthy copyright story based on a seven-month investigation, the Lexington Herald-Leader reported Sunday that, since 1972, some players had received as much as $1,000 in exchange for a season ticket, cash payments of $500 for making speeches and public appearances, and gifts of clothing, automobile tires and free meals from a small group of boosters.

National Collegiate Athletic Association rules limit students on athletic scholarships to receiving tuition and fees, room and board, required class books and four passes to games.

Fifteen former players told the paper they took cash, received excessive speaking fees or sold tickets in violation of rules. Others said they got meals and other gifts but some declined to say for the record specifically what they received.

"Now that the specific names and incidents have been provided, the university can better intensify and focus its investigation," Raymond Hornback, vice president of university relations, said in a statement Sunday. "We will continue to stay in contact with NCAA and SEC officials, are informing them of these allegations, and will assure them of our continuing cooperation in pursuing this matter."

Series Quotes....

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Random quotes from Sunday night's seventh game of the World Series:

"Us winning didn't surprise me. It's the way we won. Scoring a lot of runs is not our trademark. We always do things the hard way, but tonight things fell into place." Kansas City Manager Dick Howser as the Royals completed their comeback season with a seventh game, 11-0 rout of St. Louis to win the World Series.

"Having a baby is my biggest thrill. This is a very close second." Royals pitcher Bret Saberhagen, whose wife gave birth to their first child on Saturday. Sunday night, Saberhagen pitched a complete game shutout and was named the Most Valuable Player of the Series.

"I thought tonight was a laugher, but the other way. We didn't play well. We didn't swing the bats. They made the pitches." St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog.

"The season boiled down to one ballgame, and it was a mess." John Tudor, the Cardinals' 21-game winner, who was knocked out in the third inning and then injured his hand when he struck a metal fan in frustration.

"I chose the bat with the best wood." Darryl Motley, who had to quickly replace a broken bat on a foul ball in the second inning, then hit a two-run homer off Tudor.

"Andujar came off the mound screaming that the pitch was inside. I told him one more and he's gone. Whitey came out and started yelling. He was using vulgarity. He was gone. We got settled down, startd again, one pitch, Andujar starts again. He's gone." Umpire Don Denkinger on a wild bottom of the fifth inning in which he ejected Herzog and St. Louis pitcher Joaquin Andujar. By the time the half-inning was over, almost 39 minutes had elapsed, the Royals had scored six runs and someone in the Cardinals' dugout had thrown out a white towel.

"I would like to congratulate the National League umpires. They were honest to both sides. You cannot blame everything on the umpires. They are human, they can make mistakes. I just think they made too many." Andujar on his view of Denkinger's strike zone. Denkinger is an American League ump.

"The 2-2 pitch was close. The 3-2 pitch wasn't close. I felt compassion to a certain degree. It's frustration. They were supposed to win in four." Kansas City's Jim Sundberg, who was at the plate when the fifth-inning firestorm struck.

"Hello, President Reagan? This is Dick Howser." The Kansas City manager, taking the almost-obligatory telephone call from the White House in the champion's locker room.

49ers besmirch Rams' record

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

For seven weeks, the Los Angeles Rams had been pulling away from Super Bowl champion San Francisco. The 49ers finally hit back.

"We have to grasp this as a 16-round fight and we just finished Round 8," Rams Coach John Robinson said Sunday after watching his team fall behind 28-0 in the first half en route to a 28-14 loss to the defending Super Bowl champions. "We got knocked down a couple of times in Round 8. But it's also clear we're three games ahead of them halfway through the season."

"It's difficult for us to celebrate at this time," San Francisco Coach Bill Walsh said after the 49ers handed the Rams their first loss of the season. "We're just 4-4 and we still have to play a second half."

The loss by the Rams left the Chicago Bears, 8-0 after a 27-9 victory over Minnesota, as the only unbeaten team in the National Football League.

Tonight's game has San Diego at the Los Angeles Raiders.

San Francisco quarterback Joe Montana broke out of a slump by throwing for 306 yards and three first-half touchdowns. He completed 22 of 30 passes and was not intercepted before leaving the game late in third quarter with a minor chest injury.

"The big key was our line. They were able to control the line of scrimmage from start to finish," Montana said. "We ran the ball well and that set up our passing game ... and we were definitely successful at that."

"This was the best we've seen of Joe this year," said Walsh, who thought the key to the game was to get an early lead and force the Rams to pass.

Which is exactly what happened.

"They shut down our running game and we had to pass," Robinson said. "We saw the world champions at their best."

Montana engineered first-half touchdown drives of 79, 88, 88 and 60 yards. Roger Craig scored on a 14-yard run and Montana threw scoring passes of 8 yards to Dwight Clark, 9 yards to Wendell Tyler and 35 yards to Craig.

Trailing by four touchdowns, the Rams went to the air in the second half and Los Angeles quarterback Dieter Brock finished with a team record 35 completions in 51 attempts. He threw for 344 yards, 222 in the second half.

Bears 27, Vikings 9

Jim McMahon threw two scoring passes, Otis Wilson returned an interception 23 yards for another touchdown and Walter Payton gained 118 yards on 19 carries for the 67th 100-yard game of his career to keep Chicago unbeaten.

Our goal was to be undefeated, and we still have a chance to do it," said Payton, only half in jest.

The 8-0 start is the best for the Bears since they went 11-0 in 1942.

McMahon hit Dennis McKinnon with a 33-yard scoring pass on the game's opening drive and connected on a 20-yard touchdown pass to Payton in the fourth quarter.

Lions 31, Dolphins 21

James Jones gained over 100 yards for the second straight game and tied a team record for carries with 36 to lead Detroit's upset of Miami.

The 36 carries by Jones, who turned in his first NFL 100-yard game in last week's victory over San Francisco, equaled the Lions record for rushes in a game set by Billy Sims.

Jets 17, Seahawks 14

Ken O'Brien, sacked seven times in the game, passed 15 yards for a touchdown to Wesley Walker with 5:11 to play as New York beat Seattle for the first time in eight tries.

Eagles 21, Bills 17

Philadelphia also had to rally to win, coming back from a 17-0 deficit in the fourth quarter against Buffalo, which lost for the 13th straight time on the road.

Ron Jaworski threw 32 yards to wide receiver Mike Quick with 1:55 left in the game to cap a three-touchdown fourth period for the Eagles.

The comeback started early in the fourth quarter when the Eagles drove 77 yards to their first touchdown, a 3-yard run by Jaworski. Moments later, Eagles safety Wes Hopkins intercepted a pass by quarterback Vince Ferragamo and returned it 24 yards for a touchdown that made it 17-14 with 4:40 to go.

Patriots 32, Bucs 14

New England pulled off yet another comeback from a two-touchdown deficit, easily beating winless Tampa Bay.

Craig James, who threw an 11-yard TD pass to Tony Collins in the second quarter, rushed for 96 yards and scored on runs of 8 and 22 yards in the fourth period.

Broncos 30, Chiefs 10

Randy Robbins blocked two punts to set up 10 points and Denver scored after each of Kansas City's first four possessions.

Giants 21, Saints 13

Cornerback Elvis Patterson set up two touchdowns with an interception and a fumble recovery to lead New York over New Orleans.

Patterson intercepted a Dave Wilson pass before Phil Simms passed 6 yards to Bob Johnson midway through the second quarter. Then, with the Giants holding a 7-6 edge, Patterson recovered a bobbled punt at the New Orleans 12 to set up the first of two late touchdowns by Joe Morris, who finished with 104 yards rushing.

Redskins 14, Browns 7

Washington scored both of its touchdowns against Cleveland in the first half after turnovers by rookie quarterback Bernie Kosar.

John Riggins scored his 114th career touchdown on a 1-yard burst to take over second place on the all-time list, 12 shy of Jim Brown. The other TD came on a Joe Theismann pass to Gary Clark.

Kosar, who was benched at halftime, completed only seven of 17 passes for 84 yards.

Bengals 26, Steelers 21

Jim Breech kicked four field goals and the maligned Cincinnati defense forced six Pittsburgh turnovers.

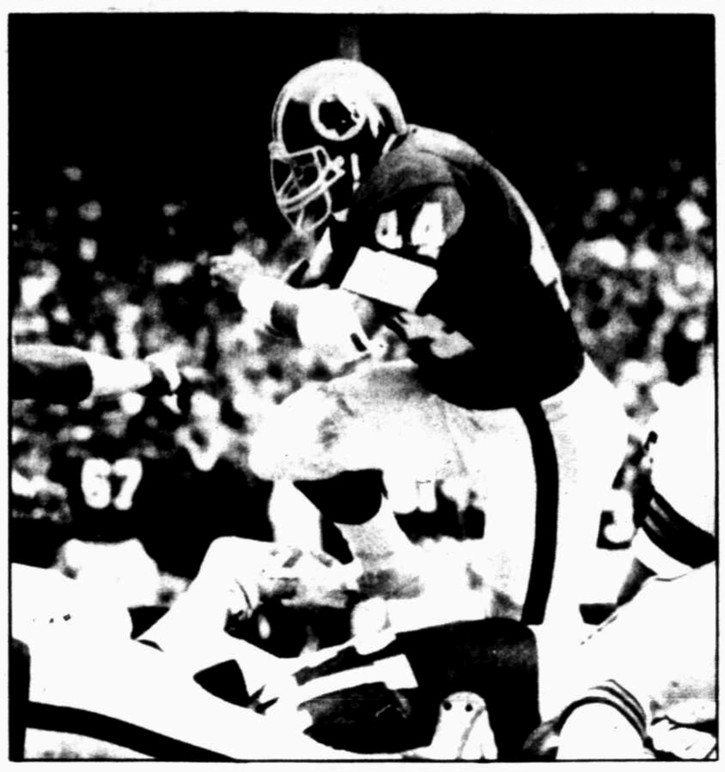

The Bengals' defense, ranked last in the NFL, had three interceptions and recovered three of seven Steelers fumbles.

Cincinnati led 26-7 before Pittsburgh rallied when Louis Lipps returned a punt 62 yards for a touchdown and then caught a 34-yard pass from David Woodley to set up a 1-yard TD run by Walter Abercrombie.

Colts 37, Packers 10

Wayne Capers, making his first start, scored on a 20-yard run and on pass receptions of 39 and 33 yards, leading Indianapolis over Green Bay.

Two of Eugene Daniel's three interceptions set up first-half touchdowns by the Colts, who built a 20-10 lead at intermission. On the first Indianapolis possession of the third quarter, Randy McMillan took a handoff from quarterback Mike Pagel, who took a return pitch and threw 39 yards to Capers.

Oilers hand Cards fourth straight loss

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Houston quarterback Warren Moon hit Drew Hill on a 37-yard scoring pass and Mike Akiu scooped a blocked punt and ran 12 yards for another fourth-quarter score as the Oilers defeated St. Louis 20-10 Sunday to hand the Cardinals their fourth straight loss.

St. Louis led 10-6 when Moon found Hill over the middle with a scoring strike that gave the Oilers their first lead of the game with 12:29 left.

On the Cardinals' next possession, Houston linebacker Frank Bush blocked a punt by Carl Birdsong and Akiu ran it in for the score.

It was the second straight victory for the Oilers, who improved to 3-5. St. Louis, losing its fifth in six games, dropped to 3-5.

The Cardinals took a 7-0 lead on their first possession when Neil Lomax connected with Pat Tilley on a 12-yard pass to end a 56-yard drive.

After the teams exchanged punts, O'Donoghue, who later missed three consecutive field goal attempts, connected on a 30-yard field goal for a 10-0 lead.

The Oilers scored in the second quarter when place-kicker Tony Zendejas connected on a 39-yard field goal that capped a seven-minute drive. The Oilers closed to within 10-6 on a 38-yard field goal by Zambejas.

Hill had six receptions on the day for 132 yards.

Ex-pilot Bob Scheffing, 72, dies

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Bob Scheffing, a former American League "Manager of the Year," died Saturday at St. Joseph's Hospital and Medical Center. He was 72.

Scheffing was born in 1913 in St. Louis County, Mo., and moved to Arizona in 1956 from Los Angeles. He was a resident of Scottsdale at the time of his death.

He was a former general manager of the New York Mets.

ROYALS

"John couldn't get his changeup over and couldn't make the big pitch," Herzog said. "There was no doubt in my mind after I saw him pitch two innings that he wasn't going to be able to do it. ... If he'd gone out and set 'em down for four, five innings, we'd have been all right."

"I don't know what it was, whether I was trying to get too fine, to make my pitches too good — I don't know," Tudor said. "I just didn't make the pitches we needed.

"I could've understood it if I was nervous, but I wasn't. That's what bothered me. I've gone through streaks when I couldn't throw strikes, but I've always been able to get out of it. This time it just kept coming. ... I know I'm vulnerable. There's nothing superhuman about me.

"My success has been throwing strikes and allowing these guys to play," he said, looking nowhere in particular in the Cardinals' tomb-like locker room. "I didn't do that tonight. I didn't allow them to play. I walked guys and gave up a home run. You can't defense that.

"When I really had to be there, I wasn't there."

ALMOST LOST in the drama was Darryl Motley's two-run homer in the second inning, the only runs Saberhagen needed. Almost lost was Steve Balboni's two-run single in a three-run third.

By the time the game ended, Herzog was long gone, thrown out by plate umpire Don Denkinger in a raucous fifth inning when the Cardinals paraded a record-tying five pitchers to the mound and the Royals scored their final six runs.

"I really didn't mind leaving," Herzog said. "I'd seen enough. I really wanted to enforce the 10-run rule like they have in the Wichita tournament — if you're 10 runs down after five innings, let's call it off and go home."

Home was where the Cardinals should have been Sunday, Herzog said. "We shouldn't have been out there tonight," he said.

In the bottom of the ninth Saturday night, Denkinger, an American League ump, called leadoff batter Jorge Orta safe at first. Television replays showed he was out. Denkinger never said he'd blown the call, but he did say, "I did the best I could."

A missed pop foul, a passed ball and a few hits later, the Cardinals' 1-0 lead was transformed into a 2-1 Kansas City victory.

"The umpiring had nothing to do with getting our butts kicked 11-0, but the umpiring did have something to do with us getting beat last night," Herzog said. "He didn't miss the pop-up and he didn't have the passed ball. But that whole inning was changed around when he blew that play. I'm sure we would have set them right down if he'd called that guy out at first base.

"He knows he blew it and 200 million people know he blew it."

On Sunday night, when he brought the lineup card out to the plate, Herzog insisted he didn't throw any digs at Denkinger.

"Not really," he said. "I just said, 'Try having a good night.' We sure as hell didn't. He had a better one than we did, let's put it that way."

In the fifth, with the Cardinals' dreams dissolving along with their pitching, Herzog called mercurial starter Joaquin Andujar in from the bullpen.

It was like throwing a hand grenade into an ammo dump.

Andujar gave up a run-scoring single to Frank White — that made it 10-0 — and went to work on Jim Sundberg, who had led off the inning.

When Denkinger called a 2-2 pitch inside, Andujar fumed, waving his arms. Darrell Porter, the catcher, headed toward him.

"That pitch was right down the middle," Andujar said. "I called Darrell and asked him where it was." But Denkinger also headed toward the mound, an argument ensued and Herzog joined it, trying to protect his players. In the process, he happened to mention that he thought the Cardinals should have been celebrating a six-game triumph instead of playing a seventh.

Denkinger said Herzog related all this rather emphatically — obscenely, to be exact. Herzog was thumbed out.

The next pitch also was called inside. Ball four.

Andujar was howling now, flailing his arms.

Goodbye, Denkinger said — or something to that effect. He ejected Andujar, too.

It took half a dozen Cardinals to keep the pitcher from getting close enough to the umpire to do him harm.

Bob Forsch's first pitch, a wild pitch that allowed the final run to score, was anticlimactic.

So were the final four innings. Howser's biggest fear was that Saberhagen had rested too long between the fifth and sixth, while the Royals spent two ticks short of 39 minutes to turn the game into a shambles.

"He was a little shaky," Howser said, "but then he settled down and finished up strong."

Reports in recent months have said the Sullivan family is seeking $90 million for the package, but the memo mentions no price.

College Football Quotes....

Texas-El Paso Coach Bill Yung, whose previously winless Miners, 14-107 over the past 11 years, shocked seventh-ranked Brigham Young in one of the biggest upsets in college football history: "I've been praying and beating the drum for so long that I think the Lord must have sore eardrums. We played hard and perhaps it was a miracle. But you know that I believe in miracles."

Iowa Coach Hayden Fry, after quarterback Chuck Long completed 19 of 26 passes for 399 yards and six touchdowns in a gusting 14-mile-an-hour wind to lead the No. 1 Hawkeyes to a 49-10 rout of Northwestern: "They were not always beautiful, but they were right on target."

Northwestern Coach Dennis Green, on Iowa's 140 rushing yards: "We played against a team that was much more physical and we kept them honest as far as the running game. But the game is not who is the toughest kid on the block, it's football, and their passing game turned out to be a tough counterpunch."

Florida Coach Galen Hall, whose second-ranked Gators beat Virginia Tech 35-18 and play No. 6 Auburn this week: "We didn't talk about the big, big game at all. We knew this was a game we had to take care of in order to reach our goal of being ranked as high as a football team can."

Michigan nose guard Billy Harris, commenting on Coach Bo Schembechler's halftime speech after the fourth-ranked Wolverines pulled away from a 15-15 standoff and crushed Indiana 42-15: "It was his toughest halftime talk of the year. When we have low intensity and aren't playing up to potential, he comes in and goes berserko."

Colorado Coach Bill McCartney, after Nebraska's Tom Rathman bolted 84 yards for the tie-breaking touchdown late in the third period to trigger the fifth-ranked Cornhuskers' 17-7 victory: "Any time someone runs 84 yards against you it changes the complexion of the game."

Auburn Coach Pat Dye, whose sixth-ranked Tigers managed only 308 yards in a 21-9 victory over Mississippi State: "We weren't able to hammer out anything. This is a good football team that has now become ordinary."

Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer, after freshman quarterbacks Jamelle Holieway and Eric Mitchel, filling in for injured Troy Aikman, led the 10th-ranked Sooners to a 59-14 rout of Iowa State: "Our kiddie corps backs played great."

Baylor Coach Grant Teaff, whose 13th-ranked Bears crushed Texas Christian 45-0 and lead the Southwest Conference but still face road games at Arkansas and Texas: "I don't think our fans are thinking Cotton Bowl, but at least we have a chance to control our own destiny."

Miami Coach Jimmy Johnson, whose 15th-ranked Hurricanes followed last week's victory over Oklahoma by trouncing Howard Schnellenberger-coached Louisville 45-7: "We weren't real sharp, but we didn't expect to be sharp under the circumstances. I don't believe you can be up every week. You have to be able to win at times just because you're the better team."

Michigan State tailback Lorenzo White, on hearing that he carried a school-record 53 times — for 244 yards and two touchdowns — in the Spartans' 28-24 triumph over Purdue: "Wow!"

Rice Coach Watson Brown, on the Owls' 43-28 loss to Texas A&M: "Number one, I don't think we played very well. Number two, I think we played a good football team. Add the two up and you have 43 points."

Americans established schools to educate their children almost as soon as the first settlers landed on our shores.

Since then, the American commitment to provide education to all children has led to the development of a public school system that educates more children to a higher level of achievement than any other school system in the world.

But schools can't afford to rest on their past achievements, Becky Ferguson, coordinator of communications with the Midland Independent School District, implied. Most schools need extra help.

That's why hundreds of citizens are pitching in to help. They are forming a stronger alliance with schools — a partnership in education.

Partners in Education is a growing national movement involving voluntary formal arrangements between business and schools in which the partners match educational needs with available private sector resources to improve the quality of education within the community. A recent national report indicates some 15,000 schools are involved in partnerships and more than 46,000 companies are partners.

Ms. Ferguson said the program is designed to bring business into partnerships with schools for the enrichment and support of the education environment of the students.

MISD joined the Partners in Education program this fall in cooperation with the Midland Chamber of Commerce, Volunteers In Public Schools and three local businesses — First City National Bank, Texas American Bank and the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

Under the teacher's direction, company volunteers offer special help to students in the district's three junior high school computer labs.

Theoretically, these volunteers act as the teacher's second pair of eyes and ears, or perform other tasks that will allow the teacher to concentrate on teaching, according to Goddard Junior High School computer literacy instructor Ron Bolin.

"With 30 students in each class, it's hard to get to all of them," Bolin said. Partners in Education will "help students get the individualized instruction they need."

In addition, business volunteers serve as motivators and role models and bring expertise not otherwise available to students.

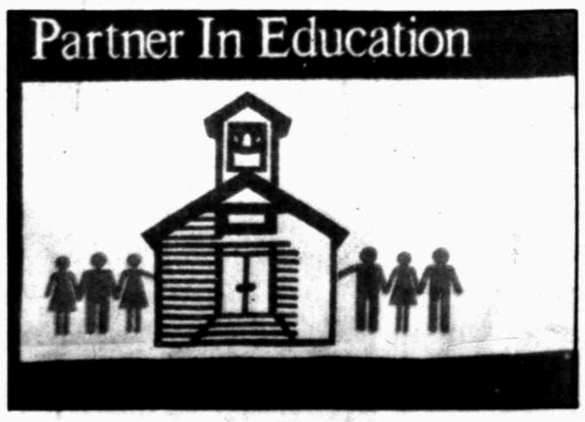

Bolin explained that successful partners will talk with students about their career, relating it to what students are learning in school or to the skills, knowledge, and attitudes students themselves might need to be successful.

In the coming "information age," workers will need to be increasingly better educated and good schools are essential to maintaining an economic position in the world, according to Ms. Ferguson.

David "Doc" Larson, a 19-year-old carnival worker at the Brazoria County Fair, yells to potential customers on the midway. Larson has been working fairs since April.

Carnival life is 'just a blast'

ANGLETON, Texas (AP) — Doc Larson, 19, wakes up in the cab of a diesel truck with a bad taste in his mouth. A steer is bellowing in a pen somewhere, beyond the rows of striped tents.

He steps out into the morning air and squints in the sunlight. The midway of the Brazoria County Fairgrounds is deserted, littered with paper cups, corndog sticks and greasy napkins. The lights on the fun house are still blinking, the awnings of the games booths tied down.

Walking with an unlighted cigarette in his mouth, he looks for a place to get some breakfast and coffee. A woman with tangled hair, wearing stained blue jeans that drag the ground, has some coffee and Doc asks her where she got it and if she has a match. She doesn't.

This is the biggest show he's ever been on, and last night after the lot closed down, some of the carnival workers got together for a good party.

Consequently, he doesn't feel that great today, but that's okay. Sooner or later somebody will have a match or a lighter.

It's just a blast out here," he said.

Doc is a jointie. He runs a dart game. The guys that work the rides are called jockeys.

After graduating from high school in Minnesota, he tried to get in a vocational program but lost his financial aid. The Navy wouldn't take him because he's got a bum shoulder. He took a regular job but got tired of doing the same thing all the time.

So he joined a carnival out of St. Cloud, Minn. His real name is David, but there were already three Davids on the show so they called him Doc and it stuck.

THAT WAS IN April, seven months ago.

"That all?" he said. "Seems like forever."

Last night was not a profitable one. He took in 80 bucks and got to keep 20 to 25 percent of that. A generator was parked near his game and nobody could hear him yell. "Hey, come right over here, win yourself a unicorn. Don't take much, just a little bit of luck."

A lot of guys blow their money as soon as they make it, he said. Doc tries to hang onto his and not spend much on the fair food, which is pretty expensive.

But he likes the rides.

The only one that ever got old was the Hurricane. When he was a ride jockey, if the Hurricane had only two passengers, he had to ride in a tub on the other side to counterbalance it. He'd just sit there and smoke a cigarette because he was so bored.

The hard part of the job comes in when they set up and take down the games and rides. The worst part is working until midnight and then immediately disassembling the show and hitting the road, he said. Everyone keeps a set of greasy clothes for that job.

"But look at this," Doc said, turning sideways and pulling the back of his shirt forward. There's a big black grease smear on the shoulder.

"I was just standing underneath a trailer and I got this," he said.

The grime doesn't seem to bother him much. It's not a bad tradeoff. It's a dirty job but he gets to set up camp in a new place every two to six days. That's what he likes best.

"Traveling. Just going. Moving."

Guys like Doc make Hickey Culpepper, 54, kind of sad. He's been in the game business 40 years and sees versions of his younger self all the time.

"IT'S NOT A good feeling. I feel sorry for them, all the rough times I went through," Hickey said.

But seconds later, the big man changes his mind.

"I liked the merry go-round music and I liked the fun thing about it. It is a great life," he said, pushing away his dark hair streaked with gray that tends to hang down in his eyes.

"You know the old saying with the circus. You get sawdust on your feet and you're hooked forever. And that's the truth."

And he is proof. He ran away from home in Oklahoma when he was 14 to join the carnival, attracted by the free life and excitement. They paid him $3 a day to sell popcorn.

"Got in a big beef stew about it with my mother," he said. His parents didn't want him to leave home, but they were poor people and barely digging out a living for themselves.

He stayed in the business and started working games. Years later, he met his wife and built a game and started running it himself. Now he has eight.

He explains part of the basic game formula. It's all based on percentages, he said.

Take apple darts, for example. You hit a small one and get a big prize. But hitting a small one is harder. You hit two big apples, which is easier to do, and win a prize. But by then, you've spent two bucks.

"I MADE A success in the games business," he said, adding that he hasn't accumulated a lot of money. When he's not working, he and his wife have to live off their savings, and every spring, they have to borrow money to go back on the road.

"But I know where I'm going, and I know where I come from. I know who to call."

Pat O'Brien, 50, went to work for Hickey about 12 years ago. He runs the game where you throw two softballs into a basket and win a stuffed animal. He has blond hair, almost white, and his tanned face stretches easily into a smile.

Pat did construction work in Maine for several years, spent some time in the service. A relative got him interested in the carnival business and he's stayed because he likes the people he meets.

"I think I like the people. They're all nice people in this business."

Including his boss.

"He is one of the best. He's a legend in the business right now," Pat said. "Now you're saying I'm saying that because I work for him, but I can take you to the Dallas State Fair and I can walk up to any genuine concessionaire and mention his name and they'll say, 'Hickey Culpepper? Oh yeah. One of the best.'"

Unlike the younger workers like Doc who don't mind whether they sleep in a truck, under a truck, in a tent or in their game booths, Pat and Hickey travel with trailers.

They set up next to each other in a lot filled with other trailers where a miniature horse is tied up outside, munching on grass, and potted plants soak up sunlight near another trailer.

They put lawnchairs in between the trailers and Hickey and his wife, Pat, sit around and tell stories and visit with friends they haven't seen in a while.

Pat and three other workers spent one happy afternoon trying on cowboy boots in an Angleton store. Three hours they spent doing that, Pat said, laughing. They bought five pairs between them.

Around 4 p.m., the jointies begin setting up their games. Hickey supervises as the awnings go up and his employees pick out some new prizes to add to their stock.

One man chooses a big bag of brown koala bears. "That's a real nice bear there," Hickey commented.

He yells some instructions in one direction, gives a bit of advice in another. "It's coming to life now, it's coming to life. It was dead all day."

Standing at the end of his row of games, he surveys the commotion. A bit of that 14-year-old kid who sold popcorn creeps into his grin.

"We're getting organized. We're gonna have fun tonight."

Nonprofitable TDC prison rodeo may see its last round-up Sunday

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — The Texas Department of Corrections may stage its last rodeo ever next Sunday if the 54-year-old event does not turn a profit this year, officials say.

But even if the rodeo attracts the 60,000 to 67,000 spectators this month needed to stay in the black, the tradition may still be eliminated, prison officials say.

TDC board chairman Al Hughes said prison trustees are evaluating the rodeo to decide whether it is worthwhile and has enough support to keep it going.

No one outside TDC has complained about the rodeo, which is held every Sunday in October, but no one has offered financial support for it, Hughes said.

If the rodeo draws 60,000-plus spectators this year, the event will bring in about $100,000 more than the $400,000 it costs the corrections department, said prison spokesman Jay Byrd.

"But the board will still determine the future of the rodeo," Byrd said. "In reality, they could still put an end to it. But I would hope they wouldn't do that."

Hughes agreed, saying, "If we can't justify the rodeo moneywise, it doesn't stand a chance. But the board won't make this decision solely on accounting."

Byrd said prison officials are concerned because only 200 of the state's 37,000 inmates wanted to participate in this year's rodeo. However, he and Hughes said the TDC also is worried about the safety of participants.

"The overriding concern is the safety of the prisoners," Hughes said. "I'm willing to accept their willingness to (compete), but there are certain events in the rodeo that pose an inordinate risk to the inmates."

One event that concerns officials, said Hughes, calls for about 50 inmates to gather in the Walls Unit arena, where the rodeo is held, with a surly bull. To win the event, an inmate must grab a pouch filled with $400 in cash off the animal's horns.

"If a guy has ridden bulls and horses in the past and wants to ride, there's no problem," Hughes said. "But to put 50 guys out there who know nothing about bulls and have them try to make some hard money off a bull's horns — that I feel is an inordinate risk."

If the rodeo continues, major changes will be made, Hughes said.

"If we keep the rodeo," he said, "we will restructure the whole organization so that it's more professional from the standpoint of the participant as well as the spectator."

Tailpipe fire in jets 'not uncommon'

DALLAS (AP) — Safety board officials say a tailpipe fire that prompted the evacuation of 15 passengers from Delta Flight 43 is not uncommon.

The fire started when excess fuel flowed into the tailpipe and ignited, causing the Lockheed l-1011 to abort its takeoff at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport Friday, National Transportation Safety Board investigators said.

The fuel in the tailpipe of the jumbo jet's number three engine ignited as the pilot started the engine on final approach to Runway 18L, preliminary findings by the safety board this weekend revealed.

No one was seriously injured, but one woman was treated for minor injuries when another passenger fell on top of her as she went down an emergency chute. Only 15 of the plane's 226 passengers and crew evacuated down the chute. The rest remained on board.

Safety board investigator Warren Wandel said the fire started when the acceleration of the engine ignited a buildup of fuel. NTSB spokesman Ira Furman said the fire was not the result of a fuel leak. He said when priming the engine, fuel often flows into the tailpipe.

"Normally we don't investigate these instances. What prompted this was the fact there was an evacuation," Furman said Saturday.

The evacuation was halted after the fire was extinguished. Wandel said the evacuation was "unnecessary," but stopped short of criticizing the Delta crew.

"At this point, it's going to be a part of the investigation," Wandel said. "We will also look at Delta's guidelines. I'm not sure it is an issue at this point.

Cause undetermined for fire in caliche pit landfill

From Staff Reports

A caliche-pit fire which broke out Sunday night was still burning this morning in a landfill on County Road 1140 south of Highway 80, according to fire reports.

Firefighters used 2,000 gallons of water on the fire, which was reported about 7:56 p.m., but finally gave up and allowed it to burn. Cause of the blaze was undetermined, and the landfill's owner had not been identified, reports said.

In other reports from law-enforcement agencies, a Midland woman reported the loss of property worth $255 in a burglary which occurred sometime between Sunday and early this morning. Maria Giardea, 804 E. Wall, told police a $115 stereo, an $80 television and a $60 radio-cassette recorder were missing, reports said.

Education also is vital to a strong national defense and to the health and quality of life in an individual community. Studies show educated workers are more productive and companies which are considering relocating regard the public school system as one of the major considerations in their decision.

Finally, the partnership these businesses establish with the schools is an investment, Ms. Ferguson said, and it's an investment that will provide businesses with great returns.

At no other time in our nation's history have schools been so important, she indicated.

She added, "The economic future and success of Midland in attracting new industries are linked to quality schools. Schools and businesses working together can ensure an active and economically vital community."

'Daughters' squeak over price of Santa Anna's bed

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Most folks would think $8,500 is an outrageous price to pay for a used bed with tarnished brass and oxidized iron, even if it was slept in by Mexican Gen. Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna.

But the bed is for sale at that price, and the Daughters of the Republic of Texas would like to buy it.

The group's chances of purchasing the antique in which the eccentric Mexican warrior laid his head at the end of his battle-scarred days are slim.

"We don't have the money to buy it," said Edith Mae Johnson, the group's Alamo committee chairwoman.

The Terrell Hills man trying to find new owners for the brass bed — complete with a mosquito net — said he offered to sell it to the daughters. But William Orbelo claims the daughters did not want it.

So Orbelo changed his marketing strategy. He bought a newspaper classified ad to publicize availability of the bed, documented to be the one confiscated in 1847 by the U.S. Army's 7th Infantry at Cerro Gordo, Mexico, during the war between the United States and Mexico.

Alamo assistant curator Steve Beck said he wished the daughters could acquire the artifact for the Alamo during the Texas Sesquicentennial.

"It looks like something a vain Santa Anna would sleep in," Beck told the San Antonio Light.

Beck described the bed as fancy with brass tubing, steel hinge joints and 5-foot posts mounted on a headboard with ornamental designs.

A brass frame at the headboard's top was used to drape a mosquito net over the sleeping general in canopy fashion. The net was secured with leather straps.

The French-made bed was able to be packed into a wooden chest so the power-hungry Santa Anna could take it wherever he went. The bed and chest combined weigh 90 pounds.

Through the years the brass has tarnished, iron parts have oxidized and the leather straps have cracked.

But Beck said the bed still is significant to Texas history because it is believed to be the one used by Santa Anna at the Battle of San Jacinto. The Mexican general lost the 1836 battle in only 18 minutes, but he was the only soldier on either side who enjoyed the luxury of sleeping in a bed.

"General Santa Anna had a bed when all the Texans — even a sick (Gen. Sam) Houston — slept on the ground," Beck said.

When U.S. troops stormed Santa Anna's army in Cerro Gordo, the bed was recovered along with the general's carriage, gold coins and artificial leg.

Beck said Gen. Joseph Potter from Jamestown, N.Y., a member of the U.S. Army during the war at Cerro Gordo, went to Mexico City and retrieved the bed.

The 1903 edition of the U.S. Army Historical Register mentions Potter, Beck said.

Other documents indicate the bed remained in the Potter family until a family friend, Don Williams, bought it in 1935. From there, Beck said, it is not clear when and how the Terrell Hills man obtained it.

Odessa Crime Stoppers tip lands suspect in $15,000 jewelery theft

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 21-year-old woman remained in the city jail in lieu of $15,000 bond and more arrests are expected in connection with the Oct. 22 theft of $15,000 in jewelry from Alsobrook Jewelry.

Detri Arnold, 419 E. Odessa, was arrested about 10:25 p.m. Sunday on a warrant issued by Ector County Justice of the Peace Jimmy Harris.

According to police spokesman Rusty Baker, the arrest of Ms. Arnold was the result of followup investigation and a Crime Stoppers tip.

Police reports indicate 12 men's rings were taken from the jewelry store located at 1541 Parkway Blvd. sometime after the store opened at 9 a.m. Oct. 22.

Store owner Bennie Alsobrook told investigating officers the rings were in the store when he opened but were found missing from a showcase about 4:30 p.m., shortly after two women left the store.

Baker said none of the stolen jewelry has been recovered.

NTSB to begin sorting causes of fatal Delta 191 crash

GRAPEVINE (AP) — Eyewitnesses to the fiery crash of Delta Flight 191, the jumbo jet's crew, air traffic controllers and some of the tragedy's 29 survivors will meet again to re-enact the Aug. 2 disaster.

Almost three months after the crash of the L-1011 claimed the lives of 137 people, the cast of characters will appear before a five-member National Transportation Safety Board panel and the public to tell their stories.

Four days of investigative hearings are scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. Tuesday to search for new information and possibly draw a concrete conclusion to the cause of the crash.

Agency officials say the purpose of the hearing is not to assess blame, but to design safety recommendations that would help prevent further tragedies.

"No one is denying that weather is involved in the crash," said Ira Furman, an NTSB spokesman. "But that doesn't mean it's the only cause."

Toy company executive promotes 'fun and games'

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Every day is Christmas for Bernard Loomis, whose work is play.

"When I was growing up — as not the most affluent kid on the block — my favorite toy was a Lionel electric-train catalog," says Loomis, who looks a little like Santa Claus without the beard and red suit.

"Though my rolling stock was only the pictures in the catalog, I ran the biggest railroad of anybody, in my head. Five years ago, I spoke at a conference of Lionel people, and they gave me a whole real system.

"But you know, I had more fun running trains in my imagination."

The toy executive was here recently to promote his new game, Stage II, for Milton Bradley.

As an adult, Loomis has made a game of life, enjoying the toys he missed as a child. He has brought children Care Bears and Hot Wheels. They've brought him a bagful of profit.

He bought the rights for "Star Wars" toys before the movie premiered. When the movie spun into orbit before the toys were ready, he issued Darth Vader rain checks.

He coordinated the triplet birth of Strawberry Shortcake as a doll, American Greetings card and television special.

LOOMIS IS BLAMED for originating the idea of producing television specials that promote toys as much as they entertain. In the old days, first came the movie or the book or the television program, followed by the toy. In this speedy day, it all happens simultaneously.

The idea man believes "television can enhance a product and accelerate its sale, with collectability as the payoff. Thanks to television, the product is identifiable when the consumer goes to spend his money.

"Toy stores sell television-advertised toys as loss leaders, at or below the wholesale price. But you must have product satisfaction."

As an example of a how a toy can be scuttled, he brings up "Baby Alive," a doll that could be fed a formula and then would need its diaper changed. Allied with those who found the idea repulsive on esthetic grounds were groups concerned about bacteria in the dirty diapers.

Loomis defended the doll with research, "which showed children had more bacteria on their hands than the formula." In general, he thinks the toy company's safety code works. But, he says, "We were dealing more with perception than reality."

As for toy guns, Loomis says, "They cause an emotional reaction. When I was at Mattel, I kept them from advertising guns. There was a time when guns were part of the John Wayne Western syndrome, but guns seemed more fun when we were further away from the reality of war.

"Since television brought Vietnam to the dinner table, playing with guns has become less and less acceptable. The only acceptable guns now are the Zap phasers.

"Too much reality can ruin play. Who wants a hijacking game?"

LOOMIS IS NOT one who believes that television and toys are corrupting childhood. "Consistently, evil is vanquished by good. We'd have a great world if real evil took the beating it gets on Saturday morning."

Loomis called his current company GLAD because "I used to be MAD (Marketing and Design for General Mills), but not anymore."

He's currently president of Great Licensing and Design, a joint venture with Hasbro Bradley Inc., the progenitor of Transformer figures of last Christmas.

Before that, he was president of General Mills MAD, vice president of Mattel Toys and chief executive officer of Kenner Products Co. Loomis is a past president of the Toy Manufacturers of America.

He hasn't always been the person who invents the toy, but he's the one who decides if, when and how it will be made and marketed.

Loomis started in toys after being sales manager of a hardware company and deciding his talents lay in being a manufacturer's representative.

In 1970 he began the Kenner division of General Mills, bringing its gross to $200 million. After years in management, he went back to working closer to product development.

He once said he left General Mills because "they were into market research; I'm into guts.

"We didn't decide to promote those toys on the basis of so-called sophisticated market research. Coca-Cola spent four years testing their new Coke, and look what happened. Their intelligent recovery was made with guts, not research.

"The trouble with research is that it tells you what people were thinking about yesterday, not tomorrow. It's like driving a car using a rear-view mirror."

LOOMIS IS NOT one to claim all good ideas are his. "Other contributions have often been more important. But I am the decision-maker who makes it happen. Good ideas often die because people lose faith. You can't fear failure. I just try to win big and lose small."

Even so, he admits introducing every game "with butterflies in my stomach."

The folly of market research was shown to Loomis at his daughter's 7th birthday party, 30 years ago. He was testing some new Mattel toys to see if they were suitable for his daughter's age group. Most of the guests were children of his neighbors, scientists at an aerospace research center.

He remembers especially an 8-year-old child named Mitchell whose brain ran at high speed. He knew all the answers almost before they were asked. "Mitchell and the other guests weren't a fair test. They were way ahead of their ages."

Toys in the United States are serious business. "By the end of this year, Hasbro, currently the tops, will do a billion dollars of business. Mattel, the second-largest toy company, maybe will hit a billion as well."

Christmas toys can help children express feelings

Associated Press

Dr. Benjamin Spock says children use play to express feelings and toys that help them do this are the ones that retain their fascination — a good tip for Christmas toy shopping.

"I always bought too many presents and too-expensive presents for my children and grandchildren," Spock wrote in his "Parenting" column in the November issue of Redbook. "It's a common mistake."

He advised parents instead to look for "creative playthings rather than elaborate, one-purpose toys."

Spock said children want to express their own interests, drives and problems at different stages of their development and they like to invent their own ways of playing with toys.

"What you want to look for, then, are toys that the designer intended to be used in a variety of ways," Spock said.

He gave blocks as a classic example.

"As a matter of fact," he said, "blocks are the plaything that I would most strongly suggest, and they are basic equipment in all good nursery schools."

He went on to suggest other multiple-use playthings for children between the ages of 4 and 12:

- A large box of crayons and a ream of paper.
- Colored construction paper. Kids can cut up and paste the pieces together to make things. It's another way to satisfy a child's strong urge to make pictures.
- Dolls that allow children to express a wide range of feelings.

"A girl between the ages of 3 and 6, whose strongest drive is to grow up to be like her mother, will happily play out these fantasies with her dolls for hours and days on end," Spock said, adding:

"Boys will do the same things with dolls if they are not teased about it, especially if their fathers help in child care."

Children also use dolls and household play to work out fears, sorrows, resentments, jealousies and hatreds, he said.

- Construction kits with wooden pegs and wheels, or plastic blocks that lock together.
- Bicycles and tricycles that help act out fantasies and blow out steam. They can be taxis, police cars, horses or racing cars.
- Jungle gyms and sandboxes also offer long-term appeal, Spock said.

He advised against "one-purpose toys that evoke no feelings in children, can't be used flexibly and creatively, and soon poop out."

These include toys in which the child's only input is to flip a switch, and chemistry and electronics sets that allow the child only a limited number of experiments to perform.

DEAR ABBY

Right book for latchkey kids, parents

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR READERS: I have just read a wonderful book titled "Alone After School" by Helen Swan and Victoria Houston. It's a complete self-care guide for latchkey children and their parents. Now that more than 60 percent of American mothers work outside the home and approximately 10 million children under 12 years old are coming home to an empty house, this book is a timely treasure.

It tells children what to do about accidents — bumps, bruises, burns, cuts, nosebleeds, poisoning, electric shock, stomachaches, etc. It covers every imaginable emergency, including what to do if somebody tries to break in; it stresses the importance of having the phone numbers of police, firemen, paramedics, neighbors and the 911 emergency number taped on every telephone. It tells a child how (and how not) to answer the door and telephone. There are simple recipes for children, and guidelines for parents on how to set up rules to keep peace between siblings.

A single chapter titled "Is My Child Ready?" is well worth the price of the book. It contains a checklist for parents to test a child's readiness to be left alone. (Age is not always the determining factor.)

"Alone After School" should be in every home where children are left unsupervised — if for only a few hours occasionally. It's available at your local bookstore for $8.95. If it's sold out, it can be ordered directly from the publisher by calling this toll-free number: 1-800-238-2333. Or send a check or money order to Prentice-Hall, Englewood Cliffs, N.J. 07632 (add a dollar for postage). You'll be glad you did.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 26-year-old man with a problem. How can I find a woman that both my mother and I can agree will be the right wife for me?

It seems every time I get serious with a woman, my mother finds at least a hundred things wrong with her.

I want to get married and settle down, but I just can't seem to find anyone my mother thinks is good enough for me.

Can you help? — WANTS TO MARRY

DEAR WANTS: No, but you can help yourself by seeing a counselor to find out why your mother's approval is more important than your own in choosing a wife.

DEAR ABBY: I operate a motel in a college town. I have discussed this problem with other motel operators, and we seem to have the same problem: unregistered guests. We rent a room to one person, and it ends up with more than one occupant.

Our greatest fear? Fire!

The thought that we wouldn't know to search the rooms for other bodies in case there had been a fire is terrifying. Right now I have a room rented to a college female on a monthly basis. She's had four different overnight male visitors that I'm aware of, but I have no idea what their names are or whom to contact in case of emergency.

It's not only college students; some parents think because we don't charge extra for small children, they don't have to be registered. Abby, please bring this to the attention of the public, so people will understand how serious this matter is. — WASHINGTON INNKEEPER

DEAR INNKEEPER: Thanks for a letter that I hope will give people cause to pause — and sign the register.

CONFIDENTIAL TO TOMMY IN TAMPA, FLA.: Congratulations. But money isn't everything. Sometimes it's not even enough.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Plants expected to save money

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — This affluent desert community has installed two new energy plants which are expected to provide $1 million a year to the city treasury in savings and sales of electricity.

According to Energy User News, the co-generation plants will supply all the electricity, heating and cooling for the downtown municipal complex and park, and still have enough power left over to sell about half of the electricity output to the local utility.

The plant at the complex will provide energy to seven buildings spread out over one square mile, and the park plant will supply electricity and thermal energy for heating and cooling a library, pavilion, administrative offices and a swimming pool.

Should natural gas and oil prices skyrocket, contingency plans have been worked out to convert generators to burn ethanol or methanol, the publication reports, adding that if the economics of burning alcohol vs. gas become more favorable the city will consider the switch.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1 – Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠J74 ♡A8652 ◇95 ♣J54

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A. – Many players think that North's jump to two no trump is forcing. That is not the case. It shows a balanced hand of 19-20 points, and responder is free to pass with a dead minimum. Here, it is inconceivable that North can come to nine tricks unless he has three hearts, and even with some of those hands, he won't have time to develop the suit. Pass, and apologize if partner makes nine tricks.

Q.2 – Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠76 ♡K543 ◇A85 ♣10743

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A. – First, let's eliminate the bids we shouldn't make. Don't bid three no trump with only one stopper in one unbid suit and a very slow stopper in the other. Next, raising partner's second suit with only three-card support is another taboo – you need four cards to raise opener's second suit. That leaves only a preference to opener's first suit, even though we have only a doubleton. Partner's rebid will paint a clearer picture of his hand – and allow us to proceed intelligently.

Q.3 – Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠J83 ♡AK76542 ◇Q93

Partner opens the bidding with three clubs. What action do you take?

A. – We agree with you that three hearts will quite likely be a better contract than three clubs. However, there is no way to play there, because a bid of three hearts by you would be forcing, and there's no telling where you would land or what disaster you might suffer. Pass, and see what happens.

Q.4 – Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AQ95 ♡A ◇A982 ♣AK103

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?

A. – We can't understand how much a simple question slipped into this quiz. Despite the fact that you have a singleton in partner's suit, your hand is just enormous. There's only one way to show your power. Jump shift to two spades.

Q.5 – Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠62 ♡A52 ◇KQ ♣AK9864

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?

A. – It is a close decision between two clubs and three clubs. We are swayed toward the more conservative two clubs because of three flaws: with only a doubleton spade, there might be a partial misfit; our queen of diamonds is of doubtful value since it is unprotected; and, since we have a minor suit, we would prefer it to be a bit more robust. Bid two clubs.

Q.6 – As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠KQ107 ♡62 ◇KQ985 ♣102

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A. – For the moment, you don't know whether partner's jump shift was based on sheer power or on a strong fit for your diamonds. To find out more about the hand, you should continue bidding naturally. You have a good second suit, so show it. Opener's response to your two spade rebid should clarify the situation.

Donor heart found for implant patient

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A 47-year-old man kept alive for four days with an artificial heart today received a human heart and was reported in critical condition at Presbyterian-University Hospital, a hospital spokesman said.

Thomas Gaidosh received the human organ in a 3½-hour operation that began at 2:15 a.m., said spokesman Thomas Chakurda.

"According to Dr. Bartley Griffith, who led the surgical team, the surgery was 'routine,'" Chakurda said.

The heart was obtained from a man in Dayton, Ohio, officials there said. Chakurda would not release any information about the donor of the heart, but said Gaidosh's size was a factor in finding a suitable organ.

Gaidosh had received a Jarvik-7 artificial heart on Thursday as a stopgap as his own heart failed. Doctors had reported no complications with its operation.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dexter King says he has found a way to take the message of his father, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., to teen-agers: A rap record based on speeches of the slain civil rights leader.

King

With help of rap music performers, he has started on a record to mark the first celebration Jan. 20 of a national holiday named for King, who was slain in 1968.

"I wanted to do something inspirational as well as educational," the 24-year-old son of the rights activist said during a recording session at a Pasadena recording studio.

Five members of the group New Edition were practicing the lyrics in the distinctive rhythmic chant characteristic of rap:

"He had a dream./Now it's up to you/To see it through, To make it come true./Now do it!"

King also plans an album and a video and said he will donate profits to the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change in Atlanta.

LONDON (AP) — Carl Perkins played some vintage rockabilly music for the 30th anniversary celebration of his platimum record "Blue Suede Shoes."

Perkins, Eric Clapton, Dave Edmunds, Ringo Starr and George Harrison were on hand for recent taping of a rockabilly revival for Britain's Channel 4 to be broadcast New Year's Day.

Perkins was a star before many audience members at the Limehouse Studios were born, but that didn't keep them from getting into his style of music and dancing a few steps on the aisles last week.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michael Reagan, the newest talk show host in town, launched his venture with a nod to his famous father, President Ronald Reagan.

Reagan

Speaking about Paul Trout, a 15-year-old atheist West Virginia youth who was kicked out of the Boy Scouts and later reinstated, Reagan said, "Every day ... my dad fights so hard, of course, to put prayer back in school."

Reagan began the two-hour show on KABC Sunday and said it will air at least the next 16 weeks.

The president's oldest son has appeared as substitute host on the Michael Jackson radio talk show on KABC and on KHJ-TV's "Midmorning L.A."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The foreman of a grand jury asked to review the death of Marilyn Monroe says he will ask for a special investigator to probe the actress's 1962 death, which was ruled a suicide.

"There is enough evidence to substantiate a special prosecutor to work with the grand jury on an investigation," said Sam Cordova. "A full investigation has never been done by the grand jury."

The round of inquiries into the 1950s sex symbol's death began Oct. 8, when the county Board of Supervisors unanimously requested that the grand jury review Miss Monroe's death. The request was introduced by Supervisor Michael Antonovich, who received a letter from author Robert Slatzer claiming to have taped interviews suggesting a cover-up in her death.

Slatzer, who wrote a book titled "The Life and Curious Death of Marilyn Monroe," contends the cause of death listed on the death certificate was changed from "suicide" to "possible suicide" to "probable suicide."

Slatzer, who claims to have been secretly married to the actress, also alleges that she was taken by ambulance to Santa Monica Hospital, where an ambulance operator alleged that she died. Records in the case show Miss Monroe's body was found in her home.

MOSCOW (NYT) — Anatoly Karpov dragged out the 20th game of his world chess title defense to 85 moves but his stubbornness could not stave off a lifeless draw with Gary Kasparov in the Tchaikovsky Concert Hall in Moscow Sunday.

Thus, Kasparov got a half-step closer to becoming, at 22 years of age, the youngest world champion the game has ever had. He has 11 points to the 34-year-old champion's 9 and needs only three more draws or a victory and a draw to win the series, which is limited to 24 games. A victory counts as one point for the winner, while a draw yields each player a half-point.

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Carl Maria Hauser, one of Austria's most prominent contemporary artists, died today at the age of 90, the Austria Press Agency reported.

After more than four decades of near-neglect, Hauser's early work regained some international popularity about 10 years ago. Critics said his expressionist paintings and drawings of the 1920s reflected some of the dreams and aspiration of Western Europe's 1970s generation.

He was lesser known as a novelist. But books such as "The Lost Son's Story" and "The Vampire" were reasonably popular among German readers.

Born in Vienna Feb. 2, 1895, Hauser studied at the Vienna Art Academy. He was a lieutenant in Austria's Imperial Army between 1914-1918, and his first sketches were scenes of action on the front.

Hauser's style changed as he matured, and his name became synonimous with the surrealistic "Magic Realism" of a small group of Austrian artists. His early fascination with religious motifs remained throughout his career.

IPAA could reach import fee decision today

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

SAN ANTONIO — Petroleum import fees were a central topic at the Independent Petroleum Association of America's 1985 annual meeting, which opened here Sunday.

The oil group, which is split on the issue, heard pro and con views for an import tax, and could arrive at a position today. Petroleum economist Richard J. Gonzales, professor at the University of Texas Institute for Creative Capitalism, said an import fee would be useful if it were implemented within the right motivation and political context.

"An import fee on crude oil and petroleum products should not be viewed as a revenue measure, as Congress now sees it," said Gonzales, "but as a part of a comprehensive energy policy to restore market stability to the oil and gas industry, and maintain a healthy domestic petroleum industry."

He said the thrust of an energy policy should be to increase domestic development of energy reserves and decrease dependence on foreign crude imports. Gonzales said there are still reserves to be found in the U.S., but they are mostly under offshore and onshore lands controlled by the government, and it would be necessary to explore these areas to increase reserves.

The former Exxon employee said it was a mistake for Congress and the administration to think they could view the oil and gas industry on the same terms as other businesses. "This is a high risk, capital-intensive research business, in which the results cannot be measured until all the money has been spent. The oil and gas business should not be measured by other low-risk industries."

He said to replace annual production in the U.S. would require the drilling of 40,000 new oil wells and 18,000 gas wells, requiring a massive infusion of capital into the oil and gas industry.

Gonzales said this would require all the incentive the industry could muster, and instead of moving to remove incentives, the government should be looking for ways to expand incentive.

"Intangible drilling costs should be retained, and percentage depletion should be restored to its historical high," he said.

Gonzales warned that if a comprehensive policy of incentive expansion and import fees were not inacted immediately, the U.S. would be dangerously dependent on crude oil by the 1990s.

He said a $.05 per gallon import tax on foreign products was warranted, and that Mexico and Canada should be exempt.

"If Congress wants to raise revenues," said Gonzales, "perhaps it should consider that gasoline at the pump — after taxes are removed — sells for less than soft drinks. Perhaps Congress should consider a tax on soft drinks as a revenue-raising measure."

Bill Edwards, of Edwards Energy Consultants, Houston, agrees that an import fee on petroleum imports is in order, but would make it a "pure" tax with no exceptions — not Mexico or Canada.

Edwards said the U.S. was suffering a shortfall between the energy it consumes and what it can produce. "We can only reduce our dependency on foreign crude oil in one of several ways. We can turn to coal, with government determining which industry and utility would use coal, because coal is the only energy resource in abundant supply that can help us reduce that gap. Or we can decrease the demand for petroleum."

Edwards said the oil industry did a very poor job in setting the price of its products. "We hire experts for every area of our business, and spend millions in reducing costs, but we lend no expertise at all indetermining the price of oil." He said economists and consultants should not inherit the task for helping determine petroleum prices, but suggested IPAA could play a role.

"Price shifts in the price of a barrel of oil have too profound an impact on the economy of this nation to be set capriciously by foreigners," he said.

Edwards said the oil industry could not afford to be on a roller-coaster of severe ups and downs in energy prices, and that an import fee would help stabilize prices.

"An import fee should not be implemented for revenues, but only to stabilize oil prices and maintain our domestic energy industry," he said, pointing to the severe problems brought about in the oil industry as a result of recent price swings. Edwards said the notion of an import tax on refined products alone was just a "paper tiger" fabricated by an ailing refining industry reaching out for help from any quarter. He noted that the real problem with U.S. refining was over capacity, since the import of light petroleum products accounted for only five percent of the market.

"Over-capacity, which was achieved under price controls, has given the U.S. refining industry only one good year in five," he said, "and the problem of over-capacity will be around for a long time. It's not too surprising the refiners are turning desperately to producers for help."

Dissenting on the need for an import fee was A.A. Phillips, president Coors Energy, Golden,Colorado.

Phillips said any boost in revenues for the government from such a tax and any benefit to the oil industry would be only temporary and short lived, and would certaily result in additional taxes to the oil and gas industry.

"A five dollar tax on imports could result in a windfall tax on both oil and natural gas," he said. "We have to be wary of any proposed trade-off on import fees that would take IDCs and depletion from the oil industry." Phillips said also that espousing protectionism at this time would go against everything the oil industry stands for.

"It would destroy our credibility. You can't be for a free market while asking for protectionism," he said. "What we need is a stable market price, access to onshore and offshore leases, and a favorable regulatory climate. It's time for the industry to stand up for free enterprise. You can't have it both ways."

He said there would be no way to control exemptions with an oil import tax, that exemptions could start with Mexico and Canada, and would surely spread. "Unscrupulous men can always find ways to get around exemptions," he said.

While Phillips would not approve of an import tax as general practice, he would approve of a temporary tariff to be enacted in case OPEC dumped petroleum into the market in an attempt to collapse the U.S. petroleum industry.

Chrysler strikers return to work

DETROIT (AP) — The assembly lines were rolling again today at Chrysler Corp., where 70,000 workers began returning to their jobs after ratifying what a United Auto Workers official said was "the best contract we've negotiated in 25 or 30 years."

The three-year pact, which brings Chrysler workers wage and benefit parity with General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. hourly employees, was approved by about 87 percent of those who voted, UAW Vice President Marc Stepp said Sunday.

"We expected ratification," said Bob Kruger, president of UAW Local 1268 at Belvidere, Ill. "There's a lot of up-front money. We're right back on track with Ford and GM. That's what the leadership wanted. That's what the rank-and-file wanted."

Third-shift employees began returning to work late Sunday night at the Belvidere assembly plant and other Chrysler operations nationwide. Results of the voting, conducted Sunday and Saturday, were tallied Sunday night.

"This contract brings to a close the era of concessions," Stepp said at UAW headquarters in Detroit. "That's why the members are very happy.

"A number of veteran UAW staffers and former board members called me ... and they said this is the best contract we've negotiated in 25 or 30 years."

The contract includes an average 2.25 percent increase in base wages the first year, a lump-sum payment of 2.25 percent in the second and a 3 percent wage increase the last year. Chrysler workers now receive $13.23 per hour.

It also offers Chrysler workers immediate cash bonuses of $2,120 each for concessions granted when the automaker was battling bankruptcy in the late 1970s.

"Our demand for parity was nothing less than a demand for justice," UAW President Owen Bieber and Stepp said in a statement. "The fact that this contract achieves every single parity goal in addition to compensating UAW-Chrysler workers and retirees for their past sacrifices represents justice."

Union spokesman Bob Barbee said Sunday that specific vote totals would not be available until at least today because one unit in one of the UAW's 50 Chrysler locals had not reported its tally.

But Stepp said the contract was approved by 87 percent of Chrysler's production and maintenance workers, who make up 90 percent of the automaker's UAW-represented workforce. Smaller units also approved the pact by margins ranging from 81 percent to 90 percent.

"It's the best thing that's happened in many, many years. It's brought the union together," said John Coyne, president of UAW Local 212, which represents 2,800 workers at a Chrysler trim plant in Detroit.

"We had about 2,000, 2,500 people here (to vote), and about three voiced any kind of dissent," Coyne said Sunday.

Coyne was among the local leaders who said the contract represented a personal victory for Bieber, who hammered out the agreement during a 42-hour bargaining session that ended Wednesday.

Bieber, 55, succeeded Douglas Fraser 2½ years ago as UAW president. He is up for re-election in June.

Tucker, Enercorp. announce merger

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

NUI Corp. has announced that Tucker Exploration Inc. of Midland, has been merged into Enercorp Resources Inc., the firm's oil and gas exploration and production subsidary in Houston.

The undisclosed cash purchase consisted of all of the assets of Tucker Exploration, including working interests in drilled and undrilled prospects, and oil and gas reserves in which Tucker had a working or royalty interest. The purchase came after an 18 month period in which Tucker Exploration had developed a number of prospects for Enercorp.

Enercorp has established a branch office in Midland and Carl A. Tucker, founder and president of Tucker Exploration will continue with the firm, as will Cecil Ellis and other key employes. Tucker employs six in its Midland office, but the staff is expected to expand under the Enercorp banner.

Tucker said that the company looked to become more aggressive in exploration and production, and that he was pleased with the terms of the merger.

"Our exploration philosophy is to expose ourselves to a lot of well, rather than loading up on a few wells. We hope to develop a balanced, mixed bag of prospects from safe, close-in development wells to high risk home runs," he said.

He said the firm was still in the process of developing drilling budgets, but he anticipated it would be significantly more.

Tucker Exploration Inc. was formed by Carl Tucker, a veteran Exxon employee in 1981.

"We had moved 13 times in 16 years, and had made two tours in Midland. Of all the places we lived, we liked Midland best. We decided it was time for me to settle down and give the oil business a go on my own," said Tucker.

NUI Corp. is a New Jersey holding company, which has paid corporate dividends continuously, since 1893. In 1984, it reported gross revenues of $318 million and earnings of $10.12 million. The holding company owns Elizabethtown Gas, a New Jersey utility serving more than 200,000 customers and Energy Marketing Exchange, which buys and sells spot market gas. It also owns Utility Propane, a retail and wholesale distributor of propane and Computil, a data processing firm.

Producers plan drilling cutbacks

HOUSTON (AP) — Independent oil and gas producers throughout the country plan major drilling cutbacks if certain federal tax proposals become law, according to a recent study.

"Independents responding to our survey reported that they plan exploration and development spending of about $1.5 billion in 1986 under current tax law, but that they would cut back by an average of 36 percent if the deducation for intangible drilling and development costs is eliminated and an average of 16 percent if percentage depletion is eliminated," said Kenneth Burke, national director of Energy Industry Services for Ernst & Whinney.

A statement from Ernst & Whinney was distributed by Texas Independent Producers & Royalty Owners Association, which was among the groups surveyed by the international accounting and consulting firm.

The company recently surveyed nearly 10,000 members of 11 state independent producers associations and received 502 responses.

"The realities of the situation are pretty clear," said Burke. "Many independents will be forced to butcher their drilling commitments if they are faced with the kind of increased after-tax economic risks contained in some of the tax reform proposals."

Appeals court bars Alaskan offshore oil exploration

New York Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — A federal appeals court has issued a preliminary injunction prohibiting exploration for oil and gas on two tracts of federally owned land on Alaska's outer continental shelf.

The ruling reverses a lower court's decision that the public interest favored oil exploration over the preservation of the subsistence culture of Alaska's natives, who had sought the injunction.

Amendments passed in 1980 to the Federal Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act require that "the uses and needs of the Alaskan natives, and our national concern over survival of their culture, must prevail over our possible energy needs," the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit said in its ruling Friday.

The ruling, in effect, requires that oil exploration be halted and drilling equipment be dismantled pending resolution of all the legal issues in the case by the lower court, the Federal District Court in Alaska. Oil companies, including Exxon, Arco and Amoco, have already committed

The suit was filed last year by residents of the villages of Gambell, on the northern tip of St. Lawrence Island in the Bering Sea, and Stebbins, on the southeastern shore of Norton Sound, against Interior Secretary Donald P. Hodel and the oil companies.

One lease involves 2.4 million acres in Norton Sound 25 miles off the western shore of Alaska, and the other consists of 37 million acres in the Navarin Basin, due west of St. Matthew Island in the Bering Sea and about 250 miles off the west coast of Alaska.

The villagers argued that energy exploration would interfere with their aboriginal hunting and fishing rights and said Secretary Hodel had failed to evaluate the impact on the subsistence culture of native Alaskans as required by the 1980 law.

While the district court found that the villagers were likely to succeed in their case, it declined to issue an injunction halting oil exploration on the outer continental shelf, saying such exploration would not cause the type of harm the federal conservation law was designed to prevent.

In its decision Friday, the appellate court dismissed Hodel's argument that he had gone forward with the sale of the leases last year and earlier this year in the belief that the 1980 law did not apply to land beneath the outer continental shelf.

The court said the law provides that, in determining whether to lease public lands, the secretary shall evaluate its effect on subsistence uses and needs and consider alternatives that would eliminate or reduce use of lands needed for subsistence purposes.

Arafat to open talks with Hussein

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — PLO chief Yasser Arafat arrived in the Jordanian capital today for crucial talks with King Hussein about the future of their joint plan for peace with Israel.

The king, who has said he is displeased with a series of events during the last month that have hurt prospects for peace talks with Israel, told reporters last week that he planned to have a "very serious discussion (with Arafat) to ascertain where we go from here."

Hussein told a news conference Thursday he was "reassessing the entire situation."

Arafat's meeting with Hussein is the first since the Sept. 25 slaying of three Israelis in Cyprus, which set off a cycle of violence and diplomatic setbacks that has badly damaged their joint peace effort.

The Palestine Liberation Organization leader arrived at Queen Alia International Airport late this morning accompanied by senior aide Salah Kahalf. He issued no arrival statement.

However, Arafat's chief military deputy, Khalil Wazir, told reporters that "everything will be solved after the meeting" with the king.

He said several members of the PLO executive committee and the central committee of Fatah, Arafat's PLO faction, would meet to discuss the program for the talks, and that Arafat and Hussein would meet this evening.

"We believe that we have a solid basis to continue our cooperation" with the Jordanians, Wazir said. "We believe the accord will not be affected by what has happened."

Egyptian officials said Sunday the PLO leader later in the week would travel to Cairo for talks with President Hosni Mubarak, who also has encouraged Arab-Israeli negotiations.

A Jordanian government spokesman said Sunday that the government will not seek a separate peace with Israel despite King Hussein's frustration with his peace alliance with Arafat.

Information Minister Mohammed Khatib said there had been no change in Jordan's opposition to one-on-one negotiations with Israel outside of an international conference that includes the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council, and all parties to the Arab-Israeli conflict.

A Palestinian newspaper editor in Jerusalem, Hanna Siniora, said, "Monday and Tuesday will be crucial." Siniora is one of several Palestinians who have been mentioned as possible participants in a Palestinian delegation to peace talks. He said he believed Jordan and the PLO would patch up their differences.

Israel has sought direct talks without PLO involvement, and has opposed the idea of an international conference. But Israeli government officials said Sunday that Prime Minister Shimon Peres might be willing to accept limited involvement by the Soviet Union and China, the two Security Council members that do not have diplomatic ties to Israel.

Peres was facing a vote of confidence for his position in the Knesset, or parliament, today.

He said after returning from a 10-day trip to the United States and the United Nations that there had been a "dramatic improvement" in prospects for peace talks.

Khatib, the Jordanian spokesman, said in a statement issued through the official news agency Petra: "Our concern at this time is to emphasize that Jordan reaffirms its catagorical refusal to hold direct negotiations or make partial or bilateral agreements with Israel."

"We also insist on the convening of an international conference attended by all parties concerned, including the PLO, and the five permanent members of the Security Council."

He said that conference should "implement (Security Council) Resolution 242, which is the only way to reach a just and comprehensive settlement of the Palestinian problem."

That resolution calls for Israel to withdraw from lands occupied in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war and for all states in the region to live in peace, with secure borders.

That principle is central to the peace forumla Hussein and Arafat agreed upon last Feb. 11. Their plan also calls for a Palestinian state confederated with Jordan.

But Hussein said the peace effort has suffered setbacks because of the Cyprus killings.

Prime minister, coalition meet to discuss talks with Jordan

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Shimon Peres met today with the leader of his coalition government's right wing in an attempt to avoid a showdown in Parliament over his plan for peace talks with Jordan.

Israel Radio reported that Peres agreed in his meeting with Likud Bloc chief Yitzhak Shamir, the foreign minister, to clarify key points in the proposal he made to the United Nations last Monday, thereby averting the showdown.

However, a Peres aide contacted by The Associated Press refused to say if agreement had been reached, or if Peres would clarify anything. The aide, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the Labor Party prime minister would "stand by what he said in the United Nations."

The key issue was international involvement in the peace process, and Israel Radio quoted Shamir aides as saying the prime minister would tell Parliament he is opposed to an international peace conference.

Jordan, PLO factions under Yasser Arafat, and Egypt support a conference attended by all five members of the U.N. Security Council and all parties to the Arab-Israeli conflict.

In his speech to the General Assembly last Monday, Peres said peace talks could be initiated with the support of an international forum, but that Israel would not agree to a role for countries like China and the Soviet Union as long as they lack diplomatic relations with the Jewish state.

Peres later confirmed he had also discussed a possible airlift of Soviet Jews seeking to emigrate with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze, and an Israel official said Kremlin assent would open up the Middle East peace process to Soviet participation.

Summit could affect German relations

By SUSAN J. SMITH

BONN, West Germany (AP) — West German officials looking forward to next month's superpower summit say a positive meeting between the U.S. and Soviet leaders could boost their own country's relations with communist East Germany.

Relations between the two Germanys have eased lately and the summit will help determine whether this trend continues or the two countries go back to marking time, the officials said.

A harmonious meeting between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev would expand the possibilities between East and West Germany, they said.

"Just the fact that the leaders of the two alliances are talking creates a good background for more positive developments in intra-German politics," said Heinrich Windelen, Minister of Intra-German Relations, in a recent radio interview.

If the Nov. 19-20 summit in Geneva, Switzerland, has a fairly happy ending, it could even help pave the way for a similar summit between West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and East German President Erich Honecker, Bonn officials say.

"If there is a positive outcome at Geneva, perhaps it will make it easier for Honecker to make the decision (to visit West Germany)," government spokesman Herbert Schmuelling told The Associated Press.

"But it would be speculative to say that a good outcome at Geneva would automatically produce that result," he cautioned. "First we must obtain a good result at Geneva, and then we'll see what the effects are in the German Democratic Republic (East Germany)."

The conservative newspaper Die Welt, which has close ties to the Bonn government, said last week such a visit could come as early as December.

Officials in Bonn and East Berlin say that a Honecker visit would carry extraordinary symbolic importance for the two countries divided after World War II.

Moscow pressured Honecker into canceling a trip to West Germany in September 1984, when the Soviet Union was trying to isolate West Germany for deploying new U.S.-built Pershing 2 nuclear missiles.

But events since then indicate any damage to relations between the two Germanys was short-lived.

In the past year, there have been several modest steps forward, and even a spate of spy scandals has not soured the atmosphere.

"Talks (with the East Germans) are now going on about a dozen fronts, from traffic to environmental problems, cultural exhanges and trade," said Joseph Dolezal, spokesman for the Bonn Ministry of Intra-German Relations.

Among the recent developments:

—Honecker promised last month that the last of the land mines along his side of the border will soon be removed. This could make the communist frontier less bloody, if not more penetrable (a fence has been built a few hundred yards back).

—East Berlin has indicated that as many as 20,000 East Germans who want to move to the West will be given exit visas by the end of 1985, Bonn officials say. That was surpassed only in 1984, when 35,000 were allowed to emigrate (although some now reportedly want to return). East Germany's population is nearly 17 million, and West Germany's is about 61 million, according to 1983 estimates.

—Trade between the two Germanys has jumped this year, with West German exports to the East up by 24 percent over 1984 and imports up by 0.1 percent.

—West Germany in July increased the special interest-free "swing" credit line available to East Germany to finance deficits in intra-German trade. It will go up from 600 million marks ($226 million) this year to 850 million marks ($300 million) a year over the next five years.

—West Germany agreed to pay 80 percent of repairs on a highway from West Berlin to Bavaria. East Germany agreed to buy 30 million marks ($11 million) worth of West German construction machinery to do the work.

—Negotiations on a cultural exchange agreement and an environmental agreement are under way.

Bonn officials are pleased with these developments. But they stress that the official contacts do not compensate for communist restrictions remaining on contacts between ordinary citizens of East and West Germany.

In a speech Oct. 11, Windelen complained that most East Germans are still not allowed to visit the West until they have retired, a restriction grimly demonstrated by the Berlin Wall.

"The situation now cannot satisfy us. ... We remain obligated to make the results of the division as tolerable as possible," he said.

Sicily probing 'confrontation' over hijackers

ROME (AP) — Officials in Sicily have begun investigating a showdown between Italian and American soldiers over custody of the four Achille Lauro hijackers, whose plane was forced down on the island by U.S. military planes, judicial sources said today.

Sources at the Siracusa prosecutor's office, who spoke on condition they not be identified, confirmed news reports that magistrates had opened an investigation, but they refused to provide further details.

State-run RAI television and the ANSA news agency reported Sunday that magistrates began the investigation after receiving a police report on the Oct. 11 incident.

U.S. officials have refused to comment on news reports about the confrontation. However, Italian Premier Bettino Craxi told Parliament that after the plane landed, 50 Italian soldiers faced down 50 American soldiers led by a general who had orders from the White House to pick up the terrorists.

The state-run television said police reported an "initial refusal" by the American soldiers to turn over the hijackers, and that a "tense confrontation" followed. It quoted unidentified sources in the prosecutor's office in Siracusa, Sicily.

The Rome newspaper Il Tempo today quoted the police document as saying the U.S.-Italian military showdown became so "exasperating" at one point that Italian authorities summoned extra paramilitary soldiers from nearby areas and armed about 200 air force personnel at the base.

Italy is prosecuting the four hijackers on several charges, including a charge of murdering an American passenger on the Italian cruise ship, 69-year-old Leon Klinghoffer of New York City.

The hijackers seized the ship Oct. 7 off the Egyptian coast with more than 500 people aboard. They surrendered two days later, and were flying out of Egypt when U.S. military jets intercepted their Egyptian jetliner and forced it to land at a NATO airbase in Sicily.

ANSA, the Italian news agency, also reported that a decision by prosecutors to issue an arrest warrant for PLO official Mohammed Abbas apparently was based on a review of a tape recording of Abbas talking to the hijackers.

Abbas, the leader of the Palestine Liberation Front, a faction of the Palestine Liberation Organization, was with the hijackers on the jet intercepted by U.S. warplanes.

Italy released him despite an arrest warrant issued by the United States accusing him of planning the hijacking.

American firms call for end to South African apartheid

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Heads of some of America's largest corporations, including General Motors, Exxon and IBM, have called for an end to apartheid and negotiations between black leaders and the white-minority government.

The call came in an advertisment placed Sunday in South African newspapers by the U.S. Corporate Council on South Africa. It bore the names of 52 U.S. business leaders whose corporations have interests in the country.

In other developments:

— Police said they shot and killed three blacks during anti-apartheid rioting. Two policemen were wounded.

— A leading Afrikaans-language newspaper reported the government make take "strict action" against foreign journalists during the next few weeks. Rapport, a Sunday paper that has good sources inside the government, said police believed foreign correspondents were presenting a "false image" of South Africa.

— In London, the head of the outlawed African National Congress black guerrilla movement, Oliver Tambo, said in a television interview that his organization might engage in "very destructive levels" of conflict to end white-minority rule.

— Police announced that after 14 months of persistent riots, the national force of about 45,000 police will be expanded by 25 percent, with 11,000 new officers to be put into uniform.

The ads placed by the U.S. Corporate Council on South Africa were in support of an initiative Sept. 29 by 91 South African corporate leaders who bought newspaper space urging President P.W. Botha's government to end racial separation.

"Today, we add our voice to theirs," said the ad, signed by the council's co-chairmen W. Michael Blumenthal, chairman of the Burroughs Corp., and General Motors Chairman Roger B. Smith.

Blumenthal was secretary of the treasury for two years during the Carter administration.

The advertising campaign demonstrated growing pressure by the business community on South Africa's leaders to end apartheid. American corporations have come under increasing pressure from stockholders and state and municipal governments in the United States to withdraw from South Africa.

Many U.S. corporations have argued they are a force for change by remaining in the country.

The American businessmen said in their ad that the group "strongly supports" the South African businessmen in their call for abolition of statutory race discrimination "wherever it exists," government negotiations with black leaders over power-sharing, granting South African citizenship to all South Africans and "restoring and entrenching the rule of law."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Five killed in jet attack

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Police said today that five people were killed and nine were wounded in an attack by Israeli jets on two bases of a pro-Syrian Palestinian guerrilla group in eastern Lebanon's Bekaa Valley.

Officials of rival militias ended talks in Damascus, Syria, on Sunday on ways to end Lebanon's 10-year-old civil war.

In Beirut, police said militia fighters exchanged tank and mortar fire across the Green Line that divides the city into Christian and Moslem sectors, killing five civilians and wounding 13 other people.

Christian radio stations accused the radical Shiite Moslem Hezbollah, or Party of God, of shelling Beirut's Christian sector to sabotage the peace negotiations. There was no comment from the fundamentalist, pro-Iranian Hezbollah. It opposes the peace talks because of the Christians' former links with Israel.

Grain record expected

PEKING (AP) — Hubei province, one of China's major grain producers, is expected to have its largest grain harvest on record this year, the official Xinhua news agency said today.

The agency quoted the central province's agriculture bureau as saying grain output is expected to be 21.5 million tons, an increase of 2 percent over the previous peak year.

Hubei province escaped flooding that plagued the northeast and drought that hit southern areas of China this year.

Jefferson wine to be sold

LONDON (AP) — A bottle of 198-year-old French wine inscribed with the initials of Thomas Jefferson is up for auction, the Times of London reported today.

Jefferson, third president of the United States, was a conoisseur of wine and wrote a report on the Bordeaux vineyards while in France in the 1780s. When he returned home, he ordered 10 cases for himself and 30 cases for George Washington.

The bottles were engraved with Jefferson's and Washington's initials, and the one for auction at Christie's on Dec. 6 reads "1787 Lafitte Th J." — meaning it came from the Chateau Lafitte vineyard, the newspaper said.

Six bottles of the wine meant for Jefferson were bought in Paris by a collector of old wines, Hardy Rodenstock, who lives near Wiesbaden, West Germany, the report said. There was no explanation why all the bottles were not sent to Jefferson.

Americans' cars bombed

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Two cars owned by U.S. servicemen were damaged early today by bombs, police said. No one was hurt.

A police spokesman said there was no immediate claim of responsibility for the bomb attacks in the Kypseli neighborhood of Athens and the suburb of Glyfada.

The spokesman said the cars belonged to Air Force sergeants Joel Brownlee, 46, and Steven Bost, 40, both serving at the U.S. Air Force base at the Athens airport. Hometowns of the two servicemen were not immediately known.

Several other bomb attacks on cars belonging to U.S. servicemen in recent months have been claimed by an extremist group calling itself Wild Geese of the City. No arrests have been made.

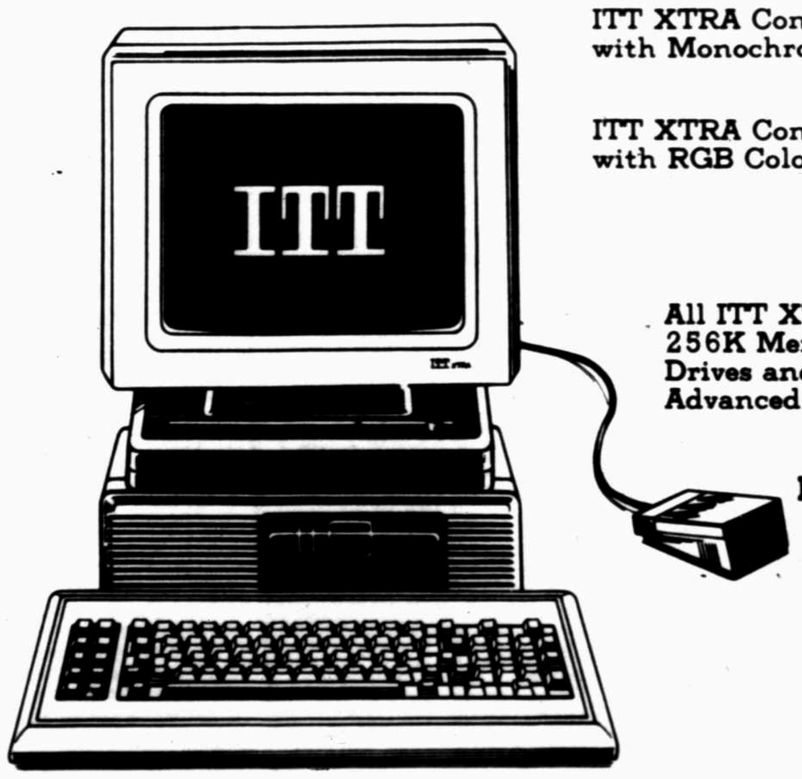

Subway station burns

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A fire broke out Sunday in a crowded Mexico City subway station, and the Red Cross reported about 600 people were treated for smoke inhalation while 50 suffered more serious injuries.

But the government's Notimex news service said later that about 100 people were injured and most suffered smoke inhalation. It said the cause of the fire was two burning rubber tires on one of the subway cars.
