Zmeskal is back

BARCELONA, Spain — Kim Zmeskal of the United States, all but out of the running for the all-around competition Sunday night, roared back Tuesday to lock down a spot in Olympic gymnastics' big event. And while Zmeskal was battling back, teammate Shannon Miller topped all scorers with a 79.311 mark following two nights of gymnastics excellence that was lost in the wake of Zmeskal's triumphant battle./1C

School board approves slight tax-rate increase

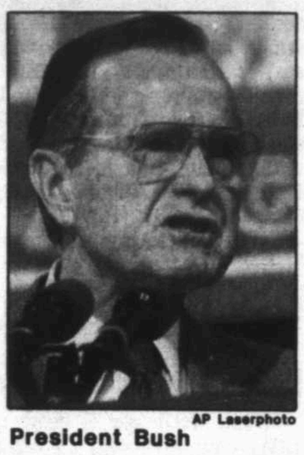

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Midland school-board trustees voted to raise the tax rate — no more than voters approved during the recent bond election — 3.5 cents, from 44.5 to 48 cents per $100 valuation.

Taxpayers authorized the increase in debt service taxes through the passage of a $24 million bond election. The funds are providing the construction of Greathouse Elementary School, Abell Junior High School, Viola Coleman High School and additions and renovations to campuses throughout the city.

"The 48 cents is a considerable distance from the levy of 61 cents (which would allow a rollback election)," said Joseph Baressi Jr., superintendant of Midland Independent School District.

Bush girds for renewed Iraqi defiance on access

By Stewart Powell

■ U.N. inspection/4A

WASHINGTON — President Bush, who is making crisis leadership an issue in his campaign for re-election, set the stage Tuesday for renewed U.S.-led attacks on Iraq before Election Day.

The president consulted Congress, urged stepped-up U.N. weapons inspections across Iraq and positioned U.S. forces to attack in the event that Saddam Hussein remains defiant.

Meanwhile, a senior White House official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Bush administration wanted President Bush, whose approval rating and re-election campaign have been hurt by the nation's languishing economy.

Salaries lag; confidence index drops

■ Wages post smallest increase in decade, can't hold pace with inflation.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Americans' wages and salaries failed to keep up with inflation in the year ended in June, posting the smallest increase in at least a decade, the government reported Tuesday.

"It's part of the reason for the funk that people feel they're in," said economist Robert G. Dederick of the Northern Trust Co. in Chicago.

The "funk" apparently continued into July, when a widely followed survey found that consumer confidence in the economy dropped sharply.

Some economists attributed the drop to consumers' rising anxiety about the job market and concerns generated by the presidential election.

The Conference Board's Consumer Confidence Index, which assesses consumer sentiment on a monthly basis, registered 61.0 in July, down 11.6 points from June.

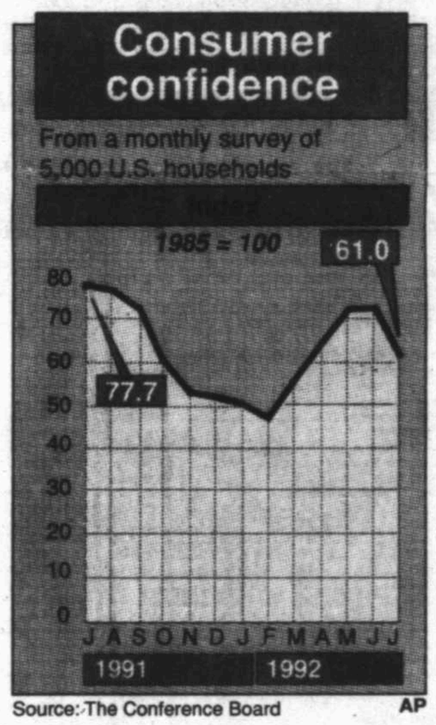

It was the biggest month-to-month decline since the depths of the recession in October 1991, when the index plunged to 60.1 from 72.9.

The latest drop equaled almost half the cumulative gain in the index during the spring months. That gain had been considered an important sign that consumers were growing more confident about their finances.

The results were more bad news for President Bush, whose approval rating and re-election campaign have been hurt by the nation's languishing economy.

The Labor Department said wages and salaries edged up just 2.9 percent in the 12 months ended June 30, less than the 3.1 percent inflation rate for the year, as measured by the department's Consumer Price Index.

Mystery of Alexei, Anastasia remains

YEKATERINBURG, Russia (AP) — An American forensic scientist who helped identify the remains of the murdered Czar Nicholas II said Tuesday a 74-year-old mystery remains: What happened to the czar's two youngest children, Anastasia and Alexei?

Their bodies were missing, he said, from the common grave containing the remains of the czar and the rest of the family.

The whereabouts of the pair have been the subject of legend and controversy since the Bolsheviks executed Russia's last imperial family in 1918 and dumped the bodies in a pit near this Ural Mountains city.

Council opens selection process in hunt for city manager

Vote stalls new motor-bank proposal

By Chris Van Wagenen
Staff writer

Texas National Bank had plans to build a new motor bank along Andrews Highway between Godfrey and Tarleton streets, but those plans faded Tuesday following a 2-2 City Council vote.

Although Senior Vice President Jeb Hughes came armed with a petition of those in favor of the project, area residents went one up on him with some petitions of their own.

Texas National might have fared better had it waited on the application, according to Mayor J.D. Faircloth, who supported the plan.

That's because two council members were missing.

District 1 Councilman James Devenport was unable to attend because of a death in the family, while newly elected At-large Councilman Jose Cuevas Jr. was on vacation.

While there's little doubt about the leading candidate, city officials nonetheless began their search today for a new city manager.

But they won't be looking long. And they won't be looking far.

The fact is, applicants for the job won't be coming from Dallas or for that matter any neighboring town.

"We're not going to do a statewide or national search," Mayor J.D. Faircloth said. "This process is going to be open to all city employees and citizens of Midland."

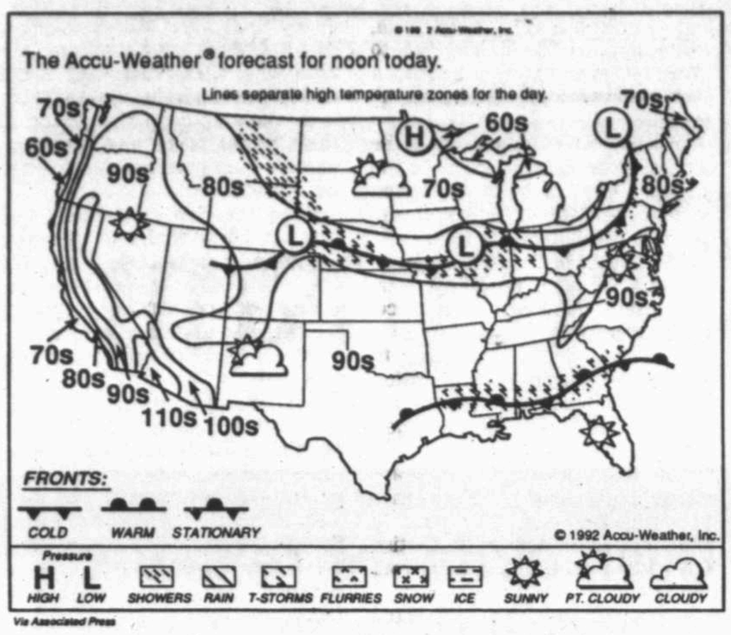

While that may well be true, the mayor, for one, is leaning in favor of Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor as the likely replacement for outgoing manager Fred Poe, who will retire in January.

McGregor has been more or less groomed for the job since coming to Midland nine years ago, city officials said.

During that period, nine City Councils have evaluated and reevaluated his performance and none have found fault, according to the mayor, who has worked with McGregor for three years.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Via Associated Press

Clouds, high 90s hit horizon

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high in the upper 90s and south winds at five to 15 mph. Tonight should be partly cloudy with a low in the upper 60s, according to the National Weather Service.

Thursday should be partly cloudy with a high in the mid-90s.

After an overnight low of 67, Tuesday's high reached 89 compared to the record high for that date of 106 set in 1944. The record low for that date is 63 set in 1988.

STATE

Cloudy skies and scattered showers prevailed through most parts of Texas Tuesday, with moderate temperatures generally in the low 90s in the South and West Texas, and in the 80s for most of North Texas.

The upper low of a cold front is expected to move closer to the coast and increase moisture and rain chances further inland.

South Texas can expect to see increasing clouds through Thursday with a chance of heavy rainfall. North Texas skies should remain clear, but some widely scattered thunderstorms by Thursday are expected.

Fair weather days should grace most of West Texas through Thursday, with scattered thunderstorms possible throughout the region and heavy rain likely in the Concho Valley.

Texas temperatures will stay in the mid-70s nights and in the 80s and 90s days, with West Texas probably posting extremes of low 60s nights and near 104 in the Big Bend lowlands.

NATION

Wet, stormy weather was scattered from the Rocky Mountains across the Plains into the Southeast on Tuesday, with locally heavy rain in Texas and Mississippi.

At midday, showers and thunderstorms extended over the central Rockies, northern New Mexico, the mid-Missouri Valley, the upper Mississippi Valley, northern Texas, southeastern Texas, the lower Mississippi Valley, the central and eastern Gulf of Mexico states and the southern Appalachians.

Vicksburg, Miss., got as much as 2.8 inches of rain during the morning, the National Weather Service said.

Elsewhere, the heaviest rainfall during the six hours up to 1 p.m. CDT was 1.35 inches at Waco, Texas.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

ECONOMY: Wages post smallest rise in decade

(From 1A)

The 2.9 percent advance was down from a 4 percent gain a year earlier and was the smallest increase since the department began keeping track of earnings in June 1982, near the end of the 1981-'82 recession.

Overall, the department's Employment Cost Index rose 3.6 percent when benefits were included. Still, that was down from a 4.6 percent overall gain in the year ended in June 1991 and was the smallest gain since a similar advance in December 1987.

"Total compensation exceeded inflation," Dederick said, "but what a person walks home with didn't."

One of the biggest boosts in compensation was the ever-increasing health-care costs. While company-supplied health-care benefits don't show up in workers' paychecks, increased costs to companies providing such benefits were included in the department's analysis.

While the anemic increase in wages and salaries adversely affects household budgets, it was good news for employers trying to hold down costs in an effort to attract buyers in a sluggish economic environment.

It also reflected the labor market. Unemployment rose to 7.8 percent in June, the highest in eight years, and provided employees with little leverage to seek pay increases.

"The real problem with consumers ... is a very slack job market," said economist Sandra Shaber of the Futures Group, a Washington forecasting firm. "Even for those working, income gains are flat or falling behind."

Benefit increases also were slowing, rising 5.3 percent.

VOTE: Texas National's motor-bank plans fade

(From 1A)

At-large Councilman Bill Morrow excused himself from the vote, citing a conflict of interest.

Council's decision marked the second setback for the bank, which lost a 5-3 vote following an earlier Planning and Zoning Commission meeting. At that time, Texas National attempted to have the property rezoned to accommodate the motor-bank on 15 acres of land near Golf Course Church of Christ.

Cyril Gallick, one of a number of Boyd Avenue residents who protested the project, told council members that traffic was the No. 1 concern.

Gallick, who collected a petition with 26 signatures, said the proposed motor bank also represented an "air pollution" problem from idling cars using the facility, to which Boyd Avenue is adjacent.

Rose Craft said she considered the pros and cons before arriving at her decision. "But I can't think of a place in town where the traffic is worse. It's just been wreck after wreck (in the vicinity). ... I'm against it."

In addition to traffic and safety, residents also said they are concerned that Godfrey would be turned into a thoroughfare for bank customers coming and going.

However, Hughes said the residents he visited with said they would support the bank in its venture. "We contacted a number of people in the neighborhood who were in favor of it."

He also said the bank was willing to design a facility in line with neighborhood architecture.

District 4 Councilwoman Claudia Egan, who initially supported the project, changed her vote after listening to area residents complain for about 30 minutes.

She was supported by District 2 Councilman Juluis Brooks.

Faircloth said he didn't believe traffic was as big an issue as some residents were making it out to be.

"I looked at it as a suitable use for that property. It's a commercial location as far as I was concerned," Faircloth said.

Councilman Buddy Sipes also supported the plan.

COUNCIL: Officials open search for city manager

(From 1A)

"Mike McGregor is quite qualified," Faircloth said. "I can't see one reason to go outside when so many past councils have thought the same of him."

But not all saw it the mayor's way.

Councilwoman Claudia Egan said she opposed the idea conducting the search strictly from within, stating the process should be extended statewide.

Ms. Egan was overridden on that point.

During a meeting on Tuesday, council voted 4-1 to adopt the measure and to begin accepting in-house applications from city employees today.

That process is to be expanded Sunday, when the city begins running advertisements aimed at residents who also might be interested in the job.

City officials said they will accept those applications until 5 p.m. Aug. 21.

Although Faircloth said the city does not intend to fill an assistant city manager's position once Poe's replacement is selected, he acknowledged the possibility does still exist, especially if someone not currently employed at City Hall is hired.

The office now is staffed by the city manger, a deputy city manger and two assistant city managers.

The mayor said that if an outsider is selected, the office might remain fully staffed to bring a new hire "up to full speed."

"My view is that we already have a strong candidate, but we're an equal opportunity employer so we are going to go through the process," Faircloth said.

In other business, council members:

■ Tabled a measure to establish parking by permit only along Ventura Street near Windlands Park. The city had considered the ordinance as a means of controlling parking associated with athletic events in the area.

Council directed the city streets, parks and police departments to work out an amenable arrangement with Ventura Street residents. The issue will be reexamined in two weeks.

■ Amended an ordinance prohibiting smoking at Midland International Airport to include the boarding terminal area. However, smoking will still be permitted in an airport restaurant and bar.

■ Approved $800,000 in certificates of obligation in connection with an $8 million Federal Aviation Administration program to upgrade runways, taxiways and related lighting.

CHARITY: United Way begins its pilot campaign

(From 1A)

The United Way," Parrish announced an anonymous $100,000 matching challenge grant to assist in reaching the goal.

"It's not going to be easy, but we can do it. There's only one way to win the West — the United Way," Parrish said.

The audience was entertained by a skit with members of the "Hopeless Gang" — including Hunger and Abuse — representing the bad guys that United Way agencies are fighting.

On the serious side, an agency success story was told by Bambi Lawson on behalf of the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children.

Ms. Lawson told a moving story about her experience as a battered and abused wife.

"My self-esteem had been beaten out of me,"she said as her voice cracked.

"With the help of the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children, I was able to bring myself up from a low of lows," she said. "The center has helped me regain my life."

Ms. Lawson received an enthusiastic standing ovation.

United Way supporters also viewed the annual campaign video, which outlined the benefits of the money to be raised.

Funds raised during the pilot campaign will be announced at the general campaign kickoff on Sept. 23 at the Midland Center.

Last year, the United Way raised a total of $2,755,143 — about $2,000 more than the original goal. Roughly 23 percent of the total was raised during the pilot campaign.

The 32 companies taking part in the pilot campaign this year are: Carriage Co. Realtors; City of Midland; Compressor Systems Inc.; Conoco Inc.; Cotton, Bledsoe, Tighe & Dawson; Dillard's; Energas; First City — Texas; Henry Petroleum Corp.; Memorial Hospital and Medical Center; Meridian Oil; Midland American Bank; Midland County; Midland Park Mall; NationsBank; O'Neill Properties; Oxy USA Inc.; Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co.; JCPenney Co.; Physicians & Surgeons Hospital; ReMax of Midland; Sam's Wholesale Club; Service Merchandise; TU Electric; TEAM Bank; Teraco Inc; Texaco Inc.; Texas Commerce Bank; Texas Instruments; Tom Brown Inc.; United Way Agencies; and Wal-Mart.

The agencies benefited by the United Way are American Red Cross; Big Brothers/Big Sisters; Boy Scouts of America; Boys and Girls Club of Midland, Camp Fire Boys and Girls; Casa de Amigos and Citywide Community Services; Community and Senior Services; Family Services and Permian Basin Child Abuse Prevention Program; Freewill Foster Home; Midland/Lee Youth Centers; Midland Need to Read; Midland Rape Crisis Center; Palmer Drug Abuse Program; Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children; Permian Basin Girl Scouts; Salvation Army Corps and Day Care Center; and the YMCA.

More than 36,000 Midlanders receive help from the United Way through its 17 affiliated agencies and funded programs.

BOARD: Trustees approve increase of tax rate

(From 1A)

The maintenance and operation portion of the tax rate will actually experience a slight decrease, from 34 to about 33 cents, while the debt portion will increase from 10.5 to 14 cents.

The small decrease in the maintenance and operation portion of the tax rate is the result of a $12 million increase in the taxable value of the district, from $3.320 billion to $3.332 billion. However, this amount still represents a decline of nearly one-third from the 1985-'86 peak of $4.674 billion.

The tax levy of any given property will depend on the property's present appraised value and any exemptions available and applied for by the property owner. Because of a special exemption, homesteads of persons 65 years old or older will not experience any increase in their MISD tax bill.

The 3.5-cent increase per $100 valuation, will increase taxes about $17 per year for the owner of an average home — valued at $53,210, according to the appraisal district.

Baressi said Midland taxpayers were essentially sheltered for one year after the bond election. "We actually deferred this a year. We had about 10 cents of debt service per $100 valuation, now we will have 14 cents," he said.

"When you put it into perspective, it is actually about 72 cents per paycheck for people with an average home (who get) paid twice per month," said trustee Gary Willis. "Most of us can afford 72 cents per paycheck."

Baressi said state law requires the district to hold a budget hearing for a tax increase of more than 3 cents.

Trustees expect to vote on teachers' salaries at the Aug. 11 board meeting and adopt the budget at the Aug. 28 meeting. The district is recommending a 5 percent overall raise, including benefits.

A $92.9 million total budget was discussed, an increase of about $8 million over last year's $84 million budget.

Baressi said the 1992-'93 budget includes renovations required by the Americans with Disabilities Act and one-time costs of furnishing the new buildings.

The Andrews-Greenwood-Midland County Education District is expected to generate revenues of more than $38 million. Revenues of $16 million are expected to result from local taxes, $30 million from state aid and $2 million from federal funds.

In other action trustees appointed Jimmie Kelly, director of compliance and administrative services as coordinator of Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973.

"We feel it's a compliance matter and fits into Kelly's job description," Baressi said.

Trustees approved placing additional teachers onto the career ladder by a 6-1 vote. James Fuller said he opposed because of questions about the process used to select the teachers.

Trustees also voted unanimously to extend contracts of a slate of administrators beyond the 1992-'93 school year, with the exception of Maridell Fryar, executive director of instruction; her husband, Jack Fryar, principal of Lee High School; and John Martinez, district coordinator of bilingual education, whose contracts will expire at the end of the upcoming year.

(From 1A)

the United Nations to force an early "test" of Saddam's readiness to allow additional U.N. inspections.

Said the official: "Personally I'd like to see it done tomorrow."

The president's actions appeared designed to recapture the initiative in a simmering dispute that netted Saddam a symbolic victory in the latest showdown.

White House Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater said the crisis had been "defused for the moment" by Iraq's agreement to allow a U.N.-inspection team into the Agriculture Ministry building Tuesday.

The nine-member team that entered the building after a three-week standoff did not immediately report finding documents detailing Iraq's chemical, biological, nuclear and ballistic missile arsenal, said spokesman Tim Trevan in Baghdad.

Top administration officials and members of Congress who met with Bush said the president was bracing for renewed Iraqi defiance following the latest inspection as part of a "widening pattern" of refusing to comply with U.N. Security Council resolutions.

Any Iraqi refusal would provide the "clear cut, visible, easy to understand" violation that could be used by the United States, Britain and France to win wider support on the 15-member U.N. Security Council for military action, the White House official said.

White House Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater hinted that Iraqi interference in future inspections of suspected nuclear weapons sites could trigger allied strikes. Access to such facilities is of "utmost importance," Fitzwater said. "That truly is a crucial and a priority item."

Fitzwater said the Bush administration wants additional inspections "as rapidly as possible." Saddam's readiness to grant access should be forced "at every opportunity," he said.

U.S. officials contend Iraq increasingly has defied U.N. Security Council requirements laid down in March 1991 as a condition for halting the 43-day allied offensive.

Bush accused Saddam on Sunday of "willful noncompliance" with requirements to allow weapons inspections, redraw the Iraq-Kuwait border, repatriate missing Kuwaitis, return stolen property, expedite humanitarian assistance and suspend offensive operations by warplanes. The "bully, the dictator, the brutal merchant of death" will not be allowed to continue his defiance, the president said Sunday.

Bush told a campaign audience in Michigan Monday that Saddam "may not know it, but he is going to live up to those resolutions."

Bush told congressional leaders his administration would "continue to show our resolve" in enforcing U.N. resolutions, Fitzwater said.

Warner Bros. to pull 'Cop Killer' song from album at rapper Ice-T's request

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Warner Bros. Records will pull "Cop Killer" from Ice-T's "Body Count" album at his request and he will give the song away as a single instead, the musician said Tuesday.

The move wasn't prompted by law enforcement protests over the song, but to shield the Time Warner media company and its Warner Bros. record label from further criticism, Ice-T said.

"It's not a Warner Bros. fight. It's my fight," he told a news conference.

And by giving a single of "Cop Killer" to anyone who wants it, Ice-T said he will prove that the heavy metal song wasn't released for profit.

"I'll bring it back to South Central and give it away free at concerts," he said.

A remastered "Body Count" album should be in stores in three to four weeks, Warner Bros. said in a statement. The original version had recently begun sliding down the charts.

In the meantime, Ice-T told the law enforcement agencies protesting the song to target him and not Time Warner.

"If you want to kill me, come and get me," he said of police. "They know they can't scare me."

He said the decision to pull "Cop Killer" shouldn't be seen as a victory for the song's critics.

"They have not won," he said.

An official at one police group said the move doesn't let Time Warner off the hook.

"I do think Ice-T's comment that he is pulling the song only so he can give it away free simply is a veiled attempt by Time Warner to remove themselves from any future liability the song may cause," said Glenn White, Dallas Police Association vice president.

White urged Time Warner to pull any remaining copies of the album from the shelves and to donate album profits to a Head Start program or recreational center in Los Angeles to demonstrate their commitment to "positive change."

A Los Angeles police officer, interviewed as he sat in his patrol car, lauded the decision.

"We are trying to rebuild," said Officer Barri Moore, apparently referring to restoring police morale after the Los Angeles riots. "We need to take all this negative stuff and put it aside."

Time Warner and its companies have been subjected to death and bomb threats, which Ice-T accused law enforcement officers of orchestrating. He said a caller also threatened "The Arsenio Hall Show" when he appeared on the program last week.

Hall's spokeswoman Dana Freedman confirmed the threat. Warner Bros. Records spokesman Bob Merlis also said a police bomb squad has been dispatched to company offices twice. He said he didn't know who was behind the threats.

Ice-T defended "Cop Killer" as an epistle to black rage and not an advocation of violence.

"The record is not a call to murder police. The record is about anger," he said. "This is the end result of police brutality.

"I don't understand why I'm supposed to like the police," he said. "They've never been a friend of black people."

CZAR: 74-year-old mystery remains

(From 1A)

But hints of the possibility of survivors arose earlier this month with the publication of notes filed by the assassins that had been hidden in Soviet archives.

The bullets bounced off the Romanov girls and whizzed around the killers' ears like hornets, they reported; the death squad found later that their corsets contained the hidden crown jewels — 18 pounds of diamonds that rendered their garments bulletproof.

Even the wounded 13-year-old Alexei showed a "strange vitality," the chief assassin, Yakov Yurovsky, wrote in his notes, published this month in the book "The Last Tsar" by Soviet playwright and historian Edvard Radzinsky.

Dr. William Maples, director of the C.A. Pound Human Identification Laboratory at the University of Florida-Gainesville, told a scientific conference examining the Romanov family remains that three of the skeletons belonged to Olga, Maria and Tatyana, the older children of Nicholas and his wife, Alexandra.

He also said the czar, his wife and the family doctor, Sergei Botkin, were buried in the grave, confirming identifications made by Russian scientists in June.

The remaining three skeletons were a middle-aged white female and two middle-aged white men, which appeared to correspond to three servants who also had been shot, Maples said. Anastasia was 17 in 1918.

"All the skeletons appear to be too tall to be Anastasia, and in the skeletal material we have looked at, there is nothing that could represent Alexei," Maples said.

"We're still left with a mystery, and in some ways it's going to be interesting for some time to come," he said.

"I think the bodies are out there," he said.

The Russians have said they are continuing to search for the other two skeletons, and they plan to conduct genetic tests with British scientists on bones and hair from the site.

Alexander Avdonin, who led the group that found the mass grave, said searchers have expanded the area where they think Anastasia and Alexei might be. He said there is a chance they'll be found if their burial place was preserved and the bones weren't scattered in the woods.

Over the years, stories arose that somehow Nicholas' youngest daughter, Anastasia, and possibly even the royal heir Alexei had survived the execution. A young woman who appeared in Berlin in 1920 claimed to be the czar's daughter.

Russian scientists began studying the Romanovs' remains last year after the skeletons of five females and four males were dug up on July 12, 1991, from the pit near Yekaterinburg, which was called Sverdlovsk during the Soviet era.

On July 17, 1918, Bolsheviks on orders of Soviet founder Vladimir Lenin executed the czar.

Jury to indict Clark Clifford, sources say

NEW YORK (AP) — A bank fraud indictment against Washington lawyer Clark Clifford, close adviser to Democratic presidents since Harry Truman, is expected to be announced today, two sources said Tuesday.

The possible indictment of Clifford, his law associate Robert Altman, and several others stems from their alleged role in the takeover of Washington's largest bank by the Arab-owned Bank of Credit and Commerce International.

The sources didn't say what the indictment would allege, but one said a charge of scheming to defraud was likely.

The BCCI scandal included the collapse of affiliated banks around the world and allegations of arms smuggling, money laundering and financing of terrorist networks.

Two sources independently agreed to provide The Associated Press with information on the Clifford case on condition that their names and their connection to the BCCI investigation not be disclosed. The pending indictment was first reported Tuesday by The New York Times and Washington Post.

The investigation centered on allegations that Clifford and Altman lied to bank regulators in 1982 when they said BCCI had no ownership in First American Bankshares Inc., the biggest bank holding company in Washington.

Clifford's lawyer, Carl Rauh, met with Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau on Tuesday but wasn't told whether an indictment was filed, the sources said. Any indictment would be handed up in state Supreme Court in Manhattan, where First American has three branches and BCCI had a Park Avenue office, now closed.

Both sources said an announcement about Clifford was expected today. One said this could suggest the grand jury has already acted, but no one would confirm this on or off the record.

Clifford, 85, a former chairman of First American, was defense secretary under Lyndon B. Johnson. Altman, 45, former president of the bank, is married to actress Lynda Carter.

The two socially prominent lawyers have denied knowing BCCI illegally controlled First American. Clifford, who gave federal regulators his word that BCCI had no secret ownership in First American, now says he was duped.

Defying government, Mafia murders third foe on Sicily

ROME (NYT) — Openly scorning the government's deployment of 7,000 soldiers to counter the Mafia in Sicily, mobsters have gunned down a third foe of organized crime on the island.

Prime Minister Giuliano Amato, facing a sea of troubles after only a month in office, said Tuesday that the government's credibility had been lost.

"We are going through a phase when everything seems to be stacked against us: the economy, finances, the foreign exchange market, the Mafia, the crisis of our political parties," Amato said in a television interview.

His unusually blunt and pessimistic assessment came hours after assassins pumped eight bullets into Giovanni Lizzio, head of anti-extortion investigations in Catania, Sicily's second city, as he drove home Monday night. He was the first senior police officer to be killed in a city that has long resisted the mob.

The 47-year-old investigator died even as authorities in the city were discussing how to use the troops sent there after the Mafia killings of Giovanni Falcone and Paolo Borsellino in Palermo earlier this summer.

Amato's reference to economic problems coincided with a drive by his fragile coalition to push an emergency budget through Parliament before its summer recess next week.

The beleaguered government also decided Tuesday to call a vote of confidence in the next few days on its proposal to cut Italy's huge budget deficit, which is Europe's biggest (at $130 billion this year) and, per capita, is 50 percent higher than the U.S. deficit.

The government proposal calls for reducing the budget by $27 billion through a combination of tax increases and spending cuts. Under Italian parliamentary procedures, opposition parties may not demand changes in proposed legislation before a vote of confidence, but the government must resign if it loses.

Amato's government has only a slender majority in the traditionally volatile Parliament, and is apparently calculating that none of his adversaries want to risk another political crisis at a time of such economic turmoil and such brazen challenges from organized crime. The loss of international confidence in Italy has also been weakening the lira steadily for weeks.

"It is essential the budget package is approved by both houses before the summer break," said Finance Minister Giovanni Goria.

If Italy does not heal its economy, it faces exclusion from some key decision-making processes as the European Community begins integration next year. But the Amato government's effort to make the economy its first priority has been sabotaged by the Mafia's campaign of killings and the resulting political pressure to curb Sicily's organized crime gangs.

Such is the mood of desperation that Prime Minister Amato called openly Tuesday for other countries and Italy's own secret service to join battle against the Mafia.

"Terrorism, for years the enemy of our intelligence services, no longer exists," he said in the broadcast interview. "What is the purpose of our intelligence services now unless they start infiltrating organized crime? We know why it's called Cosa Nostra, but it's not something only Italian." "Cosa nostra" means "our thing" and has been used by organized crime figures to emphasize a mob's exclusivity.

While Lizzio, the latest victim of mob violence, did not enjoy the same national status as Falcone and Borsellino, who were killed in car-bomb attacks, his death nonetheless showed how the mob, known in Italy as "the octopus," had spread its tentacles in Catania.

Until recent years the city had withstood Mafia infiltration, but, according to store owners there, up to half of them pay extortion money to the mob, more than in Palermo, which is regarded as the Mafia's fief. Lizzio was in charge of investigating protection rackets.

Inspectors enter ministry, Iraq stages protests

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Iraq opened its Agriculture Ministry to U.N. weapons experts Tuesday after a three-week standoff, but also unleashed anti-U.S., pro-Saddam demonstrations in Baghdad and other cities.

Protesters were kept away from the ministry, the scene of repeated demonstrations that forced an earlier, predominantly American team to end a vigil outside the building. The United States remained poised to strike if Iraq continued its foot-dragging on compliance with U.N. cease-fire resolutions that ended the Gulf War.

Under the cease-fire, Iraq must surrender its weapons of mass destruction under U.N. supervision. A nine-member U.N. team systematically went through the Agriculture Ministry to look for documents and other materials on Iraq's weapons of mass destruction Tuesday. The team left after after several hours, but planned to return early Wednesday.

"There is still work to be done," said the team's leader, Achim Biermann of Germany, in a television interview.

A U.N. official said the inspectors had not yet reported discovering material on weapons. Experts said Iraq likely had removed significant material since inspectors ended their vigil outside the ministry last Wednesday because of harassment by demonstrators.

U.N. officials suspect the ministry had contained documents on Iraq's chemical, biological, nuclear and ballistic weapons.

Two American members of the inspection team remained outside under a compromise worked out between Iraq and the United Nations. None of the experts inside were from countries that went to war last year to force Iraq from Kuwait.

A large crowd gathered in a square about two miles from the ministry and headed down Al-Rashid boulevard. Hundreds of people danced, brandished fists and placards and chanted.

"Bush, Bush, listen well, we all love Saddam Hussein," some of the demonstrators chanted, according to Iraqi News Agency.

Similar demonstrations were staged in several other major cities, it said.

Reached by satellite telephone in Baghdad, Tim Trevan, a spokesman for the U.N. commission on Iraqi disarmament, said: "There was sufficient security to keep the demonstrations away" from the ministry.

"When I met the members of the government this morning I underlined the importance of security and safety for our people," Swedish diplomat Rolf Ekeus, the chairman of the disarmament commission, told Cable News Network in Baghdad. "I got a very strong promise."

In northern Iraq, however, a grenade attack — the latest in a series of bombings and shootings aimed at relief officials — damaged the offices of the World Food Program in the Kurdish city of Suleimaniya, a U.N. official there told the AP's Rasit Gurdilek.

Iraq has moved troops into northern Iraq and shelled Kurdish rebel positions in the past week. Kurdish officials said Iraq was trying to drive foreigners away and tighten control of important oil sites in anticipation of a possible U.S.-led military strike.

Ekeus told CNN he hoped Iraq from now on would bow to the truce terms, saying that was the only avenue "for relief of sanctions, for ending the oil embargo, for bringing Iraq back to the cooperation and community of states."

Ekeus led weekend negotiations that allowed inspection of the Agriculture Ministry, then accompanied the inspectors to Baghdad.

Mandela slams police, says strike will proceed

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — ANC leader Nelson Mandela vowed Tuesday to press ahead with protests meant to topple the government, despite warnings from employers that strikers might be fired.

The African National Congress blasted the Johannesburg Chamber of Commerce and other business groups that said workers observing an Aug. 3-4 general strike could be dismissed or receive written warnings.

"This approach is in fact blatant intimidation of employees," an ANC statement said.

The strike, called by the ANC, the Communist Party and the Congress of South African Trade Unions, will kick off a week of what the groups have called "unprecedented" mass action to force the government's resignation.

Mandela said at a news conference that he believed government security forces might try to disrupt the marches.

He also joined growing calls for an inquiry into the deaths of people in police custody.

One of the country's top pathologists, Dr. Jonathan Gluckman, said over the weekend that he had evidence that police routinely killed prisoners.

"The only way of clearing this matter is to have an independent judicial commission to flesh the matter out," said Mandela, who had just returned from an overseas tour.

Trains collide,injuring 33 people

PARIS (AP) — Two underground commuter trains collided during evening rush hour Tuesday, injuring 33 people, including one seriously, the Paris Regional Transport Authority reported.

One train was apparently entering Paris from the eastern suburbs when it rammed the regularly scheduled train in front of it. The trains should have been 2½ minutes apart.

The most seriously injured passenger had to be extracted from the wreckage with special rescue equipment, the transport authority reported.

The collision occurred near the Porte de Vincennes station on the eastern edge of Paris. Transport officials did not speculate on the cause of the crash.

Both trains are part of the suburban subway system that links the greater Paris area to the capital's Metro subway.

Residents win; no hostel for AIDS children

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — A charity on Tuesday gave up its plans to open two hostels for children infected with the AIDS virus in a Warsaw suburb where neighbors had staged violent protests.

Health Ministry officials said the anti-drug group MONAR will no longer try to bring about 40 children to two houses in the village of Laski that it bought for $275,000 provided by the U.S.-Polish Joint Commission for Humanitarian Assistance.

Instead, the village will give the group land and buildings of similar value in another, unspecified location within two years or repay the price of the houses with interest, according to Polish press reports.

"I saw no other rational solution," said MONAR founder Marek Kotanski, whose organization is one of the few to champion the needs of AIDS sufferers in Poland.

After plans for the hostels to house children infected with the HIV virus were announced in June, the two houses were vandalized and one was burned in what police say likely was an arson fire.

Furious neighbors demonstrated outside the houses almost nightly, sometimes pelting the buildings with stones. They raised fears — dismissed by doctors — that their children would be jeopardized or that parents of infected youngsters would bring drugs and disease to the village.

Ignorance about acquired immune deficiency sydrome is widespread in Poland, where the Communists suppressed information about the ailment and the current government has little money for education programs.

Engineers restore Jerusalem monument

JERUSALEM (AP) — The graceful, golden roof of the Dome of the Rock — a symbol of Jerusalem and one of the glories of Islam — is being restored by engineers from Northern Ireland at a cost of more than $7 million.

Just the gold to cover the dome will run about $1.4 million, Pat O'Hare, the restoration's project manager, said Tuesday as the engineers from Mivan Overseas began surveying the 7th century mosque.

The restoration is being paid for by Jordan's King Hussein after a reported squabble with King Fahd of Saudi Arabia over who would pay and how.

O'Hare said his company will do its best to steer clear of the political hassles that seem to dog any restoration project in Jerusalem, with its mixed Jewish and Arab population and arguments over boundaries.

"We're not interested in politics, only in construction," O'Hare said. "We have enough problems at home." Mivan is headquartered in Antrim, just outside Belfast.

A climb up the scaffolding erected for the survey shows how serious are the disagreements over the mosque and its location on what Muslims call the Harem es-Sharif and Jews the Temple Mount.

Issam Awad, the Palestinian engineer for the Harem, points out dents made by bullets in the dome. He says the damage is from 1982 when a crazed Israeli soldier opened fire at the mosque, and from the Temple Mount riots of 1990 when 17 Palestinians were killed by Israeli police.

The Harem es-Sharif, or Noble Sanctuary, is a political and religious mine field. It was the site of Solomon's Temple destroyed by the Babylonians in 587 B.C. and the Second Jewish Temple built by Herod and razed by the Romans in 70 A.D.

A radical Jewish group called the Temple Mount Faithful wants to rebuild the ancient temple on the site and suggests simply moving the Dome of the Rock and the nearby Al Aqsa Mosque to Saudi Arabia.

The Harem es-Sharif, or Noble Sanctuary, is a political and religious mine field. It was the site of Solomon's Temple destroyed by the Babylonians in 587 B.C. and the Second Jewish Temple built by Herod and razed by the Romans in 70 A.D.

To Muslims, the rock beneath the dome is the place where the Prophet Mohammed made his journey to heaven described in the Koran, Islam's holy book. It is the third holiest site in Islam, after the Saudi cities of Mecca and Medina.

An indentation in the rock is said to have been left by Mohammed's footprint and another by the handprints of the angel Gabriel, who held the massive rock down so it would not rise up with the prophet.

The first mosque on the spot was built by Omar, Commander of the Faithful, who conquered Jerusalem in 638 A.D. The present structure, known for its beautiful mosaics and blue exterior tiles as well as the golden dome, was completed in 691.

Adnan Husseini, who heads the Muslim Trust that manages the Harem es-Sharif, says the dome was last restored in the early 1960s and has a problem common to old buildings: the roof leaks.

Kenny Andrew, Mivan's operations manager, said most of the 18-month project will be taken up with designing plates to cover the dome and completely scaffolding the structure.

The actual restoration will be done between next April and September, the dry season. The octagonal-shaped mosque is covered by a dome 20 yards across and 14 yards high, topped by the crescent moon of Islam.

The dome was originally covered in gold. Its present gold-colored aluminum plates will be replaced by brass plates, covered by a layer of nickel and then by a film of 24-karat gold, O'Hare said.

And after the work, what will be different about the dome that seems to shine forth in every photograph of Jerusalem?

"It will be more golden," Andrew said.

Pope John Paul II leaves hospital, plans recovery

ROME (AP) — Pope John Paul II smiled and waved to well-wishers Tuesday as he left the hospital nearly two weeks after surgeons removed a benign tumor from his colon. He will convalesce at a lakeside retreat south of Rome.

About 250 fellow patients, nuns and hospital workers watched as John Paul walked out of the main entrance of the Gemelli clinic Tuesday evening and stepped into a waiting black Mercedes.

He did not address the crowd.

Officials said the pope would need up to two months of rest in Castel Gandolfo, in the cool Alban Hills 15 miles from the Vatican, to fully recover from the operation to remove a colon tumor.

"We've advised him to take a long period of convalescence. We've said two months, but the patient can follow this advice or not," said the pope's chief surgeon, Francesco Crucitti.

"The Holy Father will finally be able to have what he has needed for a long time — a real, long, restful vacation," said papal spokesman Joaquin Navarro.

In an interview broadcast Tuesday by Vatican Radio, Navarro said that "for the moment" there were no plans to change the pope's scheduled trip to the Dominican Republic in October.

"Obviously, everything will depend on the speed in which the Holy Father recovers his previous state of health," Navarro said.

A scheduled trip to Sicily in September had earlier been postponed.

A medical bulletin issued at midday at the Gemelli clinic said the pope's "general conditions are good and gradually improving" and that he required no further hospitalization.

The 72-year-old pontiff entered the hospital July 12 and underwent surgery three days later. Doctors said the tumor was benign, although some cells had begun showing signs of possibly becoming cancerous.

Two days ago, John Paul waved from his hospital window in his first public appearance since entering the hospital. He had clearly lost weight after two weeks of eating little or no food.

Doctors said he is now following a normal diet.

The pope received few visitors during his hospital stay. But on Monday afternoon, officials said, John Paul made a brief visit to a children's ward.

Twain manuscript offers insight

While scholars plunge into new debate over Huckleberry Finn's origins — did Mark Twain, as one scholar suggests, adapt the voice of a black boy? — only now will they be able to examine the whole work as Twain wrote it.

The author, once part-owner of a newspaper in Buffalo, N.Y., gave the second half of his manuscript to a trustee of the city's library in 1885. But the first half was lost until the trustee's granddaughter, a Hollywood librarian, found it last year in an attic trunk.

Since then, settlement of the ownership has been in the hands of lawyers, about whom Twain once observed: "I have always kept a lawyer, though I have never made anything out of him."

Said lawyers have resolved that, for an undisclosed payment to the trustee's heirs, the first half shall join the second at the library. And because the new find includes a spooky episode that Twain's wife didn't want published, the heirs may also share in future royalties.

Meantime, the library is redecorating its former smoking lounge to house both halves of its prize. On that unhealthy subject, the cigar-smoking author once wrote:

"When they use to tell me I'd shorten my life ten years by smoking, they little knew the devotee they were wasting their puerile words upon — they little knew how trivial and valueless I would regard a decade that had no smoking in it!"

My how times have changed. In the American society of the 1990's, Twain would no doubt be at odds with most of the businesses and communities that have banned smoking because of its health hazards.

The newfound Twain materials should offer more enlightment about both the writer — and, perhaps, more insight into ourselves.

We are responsible for this recession

Congratulations to Gary Ott and John Paul Pitts for recent columns urging us to take responsibility for our own actions. We're buck-passers.

Take the current recession. Who really caused it? — You and I, the general public. Think back. Shortly after Desert Storm, patriotism was in; Bush's popularity was highest in history. What happened? Well, you see, we have two factions in Washington — the Elephants and the Donkeys. The Donkeys saw all this popularity for the head Elephant and said "We have an election next year. get something on this guy, or the Donkeys won't have a chance." They analyzed his personal life — nothing. No boozing, no drugs, no womanizing, nothing for which to fault him. His qualifications? Same deal. Most highly qualified man to ever apply for the job! Finally, they said, "A recession always works. Make one and blame it on the Elephant."

Remember, at that time the economy was going quite well. We were well out of double-digit inflation; interest rates were low enough to buy things, but high enough for retirees to realize a reasonable return on their savings. Our economy depends not on how much money we HAVE, but how much is changing hands.

The Donkeys decided that a recession was the answer, so the rumor was launched. Remember when it was just a rumor? And what did we do? We fell for it — again. A few million of us didn't buy a car that year because of the rumor, so Ford and GM posted huge losses. Plants shut down; people were laid off. We stopped buying other things, and Macy's after 107 years, declared bankruptcy. Garment industry and other manufacturers suffered. More plants shut down; more people were laid off. VOILA! RECESSION! Face it. We did it to ourselves — again.

Now, the Head Donkey, running for president, says he can fix it by taxing the rich to help the poor. Oh, come on! Do we really want to go back to 80-90 percent tax brackets? Do we really want the best business minds, our most brilliant industrial brains, to be handicapped by sending all that money to Washington instead of plowing it back into the economy? They'd have to raise their prices to avoid the Macy's fate. VOILA! Double-digit inflation.

Wake up! Let's not victimize ourselves again. RICH is not that kind of four-letter word.

Blaming government for ills is a cop-out

I find it ironic that Elizabeth Taylor is pointing an accusing finger at the White House for the AIDS epidemic. She needs to check her own backyard— Hollywood.

Many famous actors and actresses flaunt and promote promiscuous lifestyles in every movie they star in, as well as their own personal lives. The entertainment industry must except its fair share of the responsibility of the AIDS epidemic.

This is one problem the government and more money are not going to be able to fix right away, if ever. As with other incurable diseases that receive less publicity, we all hope for a medical breakthrough soon, but to blame the White House for all of our ills, is a cop-out. We all have a certain amount of responsibility.

AIDS brings new meaning to 'choice'

I found interesting the appearance of two items in the paper over the last few days.

On a Sunday, 1. The same old Planned NonParenthood propaganda about "a matter of choice"

And on a Tuesday, 2. The expectation that women will be far more susceptible to the AIDS virus in the future.

This is more than a dilemma. Taking the life of her baby has not been a deterrent. Then will the taking of her own life deter her from that same behavior?

Whatever the answer the AIDS virus certainly brings new meaning to the term "CHOICE!"

Health insurance maintains status quo

WASHINGTON — Until an aneurysm burst in her brain two years ago, Jaime Keller was a ninth-grade honors student and a member of her high school's soccer and crew teams. Since collapsing during a school dance, Jaime has started on the road to recovery, though she will never again lead a normal life. Jaime's doctors say that an inpatient behavior management program is the best way for her to get the full-time attention she needs.

Anderson

Jaime's insurer, Blue Cross/Blue Shield of Western Pennsylvania, does not agree.

Though Blue Cross has never examined Jaime, its representatives claim she can be treated just as well in an outpatient program. Her parents and doctors believe differently. While the matter waits to be resolved, her parents explain that Jaime is refusing outpatient treatment, as her condition deteriorates.

"We are not the be all and end all," a Blue Cross spokesperson said. "We're looking at appropriateness and for the proper setting." The spokesperson added that inpatient care would not be "cost effective."

Jaime and others like her are the orphans in the battle to reform health insurance, a battle that so far seems hopelessly bottlenecked in Congress. The health insurance industry makes a heavy investment in maintaining the status quo.

In all, there are more than 200 political action committees representing the medical, pharmaceutical and insurance industries, according to a recent survey by Common Cause. In the past decade, these groups have contributed more than $60 million to congressional candidates, with $43.2 million of that going to 519 of the 534 current members of the House and Senate.

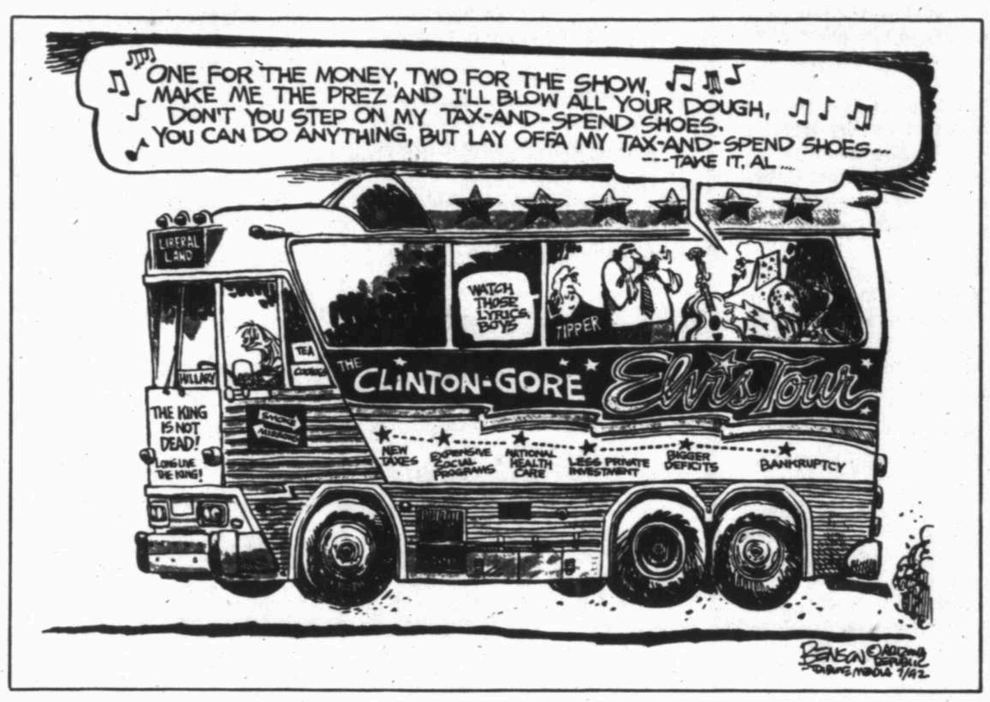

A disproportionate amount of that largesse is lavished on members whose committees have jurisdiction on health-related matters. Members like Pete Stark, D-Calif., chairman of the Ways and Means health subcommittee, Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., the ranking Republican on the Senate's Medicare subcommittee, and Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., chairman of the Energy and Commerce Committee's health subcommittee, are big favorites of the health-care lobby.

The health insurance industry has come under unwelcome scrutiny recently as a result of the high-profile insolvency of West Virginia's Blue Cross/Blue Shield association. Congress is asking what went wrong and why. But while the health insurance industry prefers to complain about the skyrocketing costs of care, a recent congressional investigation reaches some different conclusions.

The results of the investigation by the Permanent Subcommittee on Investigation, chaired by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., paints the picture of a system in which insurance companies have been weakened by shoddy management and poor investments.

In one case, a member plan that was nearly insolvent was paying its chief executive $350,000, plus country club memberships, a chauffeured limousine, and a $1.2 million pension buy out. In another case, two member plans that had requested extensive rate increases had found the money to buy "sky boxes" at local stadiums.

Cramer's book reopens a closed mind

In his 1,047-pager, "What It Takes," Richard Ben Cramer does for American politics what Marcel Proust did for the cookie. After dipping his madeleine in tea, you remember, Proust experienced total recall of French social and cultural history from Charlemagne to Maurice Chevalier. It took him 1.5 million words to get it on paper. Some say more like 2 million.

Buchwald

Cramer has ambitions to play in Proust's league, but he has handicapped himself by choosing politics for his explorations. Thus, as of this morning, after just five weeks of reading, I was up to Page 635, Chapter 63.

Still, Cramer's exploration of the hearts, minds and souls of America's ambition-crazed presidential candidates moves ahead at a pace that feels childishly frantic to anyone who has journeyed on Proust's stately galleon.

To put it more plainly, there are times when the reader absolutely hates this book. This is not just because it keeps referring to Senator Robert Dole as "the Bobster." Not just because it rarely lets Dole speak a line of dialogue without first having him issue Conan-the-Barbarian grunts, like "Aagh" or "Nnggh."

No, not just because of these occasional nutty strainings for a distinctive style, you also hate the thing because it almost always works. I mean: I just cannot stop reading the thing. It consumes weeks of my life, drives me up the wall every time it calls Dole "the Bobster," yet I can't stop turning pages.

What makes it even odder is that it's about a remarkably dull assortment of Presidential candidates, the gang who went for the job in 1988: Bush, Dole, Dukakis, Hart, Biden and Gephardt, as of Page 634.

Of course nobody who wants to be president can be truly dull, for as Cramer's book and the present campaign year make abundantly clear, only a freakish human being could even be tempted to seek the job, and only an authentic freak can possibly win it.

Cramer succeeds in making most of his flimsy cast seem fascinating by using the novelist's technique. This way he can write from inside his politicians, creating them as original characters.

Sure the accuracy of such stuff may be doubtful. Still, plausibility usually prevails, maybe because there is so much exhaustively researched data that the skeptical reader finally yields in admiration for Cramer's dogged pursuit of a zillion boring facts.

What is finally irresistible, however, is the alarming picture of what goes into the struggle for an increasingly curious and unattractive office. In Cramer's portrait, what astonishes one who antedates the age of media politics is the immense power demanded by and given to people with no ideas about nor interest in government, but a childlike devotion to election campaigns as games.

Cramer's candidates are all either overawed or overwhelmed by these campaign engineers, "handlers" as they're called this year.

The media role is almost as terrifying. Press and TV people will not like the bloody portrait Cramer paints of them.

Though I like to think "the media" unjustly maligned by people who ought to know better, I'm not so sure anymore after reading Cramer's persuasive tale of bigfeet and frenzy feeders. That's unusual: a book that reopens a closed mind.

American technology can't find septic tank

MARTHA'S VINEYARD — I haven't made up my mind whom I am going to vote for until the candidates tell me where they stand on septic tanks. The septic tank problem in this country is crying out for a solution because it is very much connected to the values of the American family.

Baker

I'll be frank and admit that I came to septic tanks late in life. I was sitting on Martha's Vineyard watching inspired speeches on the "new covenant" when my wife came in and announced that the septic tank was stopped up.

The reason I didn't get excited was that I didn't know what a septic tank was. When she explained it to me in layman's language, I suggested that she call the plumber.

"Plumbers are always more frightened of women than they are of men," I told her.

The next morning the plumber came and confirmed my wife's suspicion that the toilets were stopped up. "By the way, where is your septic tank?" he asked.

"No one ever told us. I thought that plumbers are supposed to know those things."

"We're inside men — that's outside work."

Nevertheless, he made a thorough search of the property and said that he couldn't find the tank. He suggested that we call the contractor who had renovated the 1888 house as well as the architect and various caretakers.

No one had any idea where the septic tank was buried. One man thought that it might be under the screened porch, which meant that we would have to tear the porch down to empty the tank. The contractor advised that experts be called in.

A man with a metal detector and Geiger counter arrived the next day and found nothing but an empty Budweiser beer can.

I told my wife, "I can't believe it. Every politician has told us that Americans are the most technologically advanced people in the world, but nobody can tell us where our septic tank is located."

The next day two gentlemen with shovels showed up.

They said that they would dig for the tank if they had to go through to China.

The men found nothing.

"Maybe there is no septic tank," I suggested to the boss. "Perhaps everything is just emptying out willy-nilly toward Chilmark."

He shook his head. "There has to be a septic tank somewhere. Do you have any objection if we bulldoze the vegetable garden?"

"I don't, but it makes my wife very unhappy every time she sees heavy equipment attacking her string beans. Have you dug up the driveway?"

"Yes, sir, and the retaining wall. We'd like to have a crack at the West Chop tennis courts, but the members always get angry when you look for a septic tank on their property. Suppose we broke up the cement on your garage floor?"

"I thought you'd never ask."

I wish I could report a happy ending to this story, but so far the location of the tank remains a mystery.

I'm thinking of sending my crew over to Mike Wallace's house on the off chance that he might have taken our septic tank by mistake. Andy Rooney told me he does it all the time.

Democrats criticize Bush's emphasis on foreign policy

ATLANTA (AP) — The Democrats counterattacked Tuesday in the increasingly bitter political debate over foreign policy experience, with Al Gore declaring that if President Bush and Dan Quayle "are such whizzes ... why is it that Saddam Hussein is thumbing his nose at the entire world."

Former President Carter joined the assault, blaming Bush for the "politicizing of foreign policy" and saying it would be "a travesty" if Secretary of State James A. Baker III quit such a vital post to lead the president's reelection campaign.

In contrast, the White House was all but silent on the issue, a day after Bush's spokesman called a statement by Bill Clinton on Yugoslavia "reckless" and Bush-Quayle campaign aides attacked Clinton as lacking both ability and experience in foreign policy.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater reiterated Bush's appreciation of the Democratic presidential nominee's general support on the Iraqi situation. Asked if the White House weren't sending an inconsistent message, Fitzwater smiled and said, "Nobody gets our blanket endorsements."

Clinton took a verbal shot at Bush's Monday suggestion that he alone had "the experience, the seasoning, the guts" to stand up to such foes as Iraqi President Saddam Hussein. Bush should show such qualities "a little more consistently," Clinton said.

Gore, appearing in Atlanta alongside Carter, accused the Bush administration of focusing on foreign policy to the detriment of domestic matters — and still failing to dislodge Saddam.

Although Americans do have concerns about world affairs, he said, "the dominant issue in this campaign is going to be how we're going to get our country moving forward."

Ex-CIA official testifies that George knew of covert effort to aid Contras

WASHINGTON (AP) — Onetime spymaster Clair George knew of Oliver North's covert effort to provide military aid to the Nicaraguan Contras long before he denied such knowledge to Congress, a former CIA official testified Tuesday.

Alan Fiers, the chief prosecution witness in George's criminal trial, said that in February 1986, he and George discussed confusion in Central America over North's activities and congressionally authorized humanitarian aid to the Contras.

Fiers said George told him "very clearly that this was a State Department-White House operation ... do not get involved in it." George sent him to Central America to give the same message to the station chief, Fiers said.

In August 1986, Fiers said, North told him the United States was selling arms to Iran and the profits were being diverted to supply the Contras. Fiers said he reported this to George, who replied, "Well, now you're one of a handful of people that know that."

George, the former head of CIA overseas spy operations, has pleaded innocent to three charges of obstructing Congress and a federal grand jury and six counts of perjury and false statements.

George showed no expression when Fiers, the former head of the CIA's Central American Task Force, was asked to point him out in the courtroom during the third day of testimony Tuesday.

Fiers, who pleaded guilty last year to two misdemeanor counts of withholding information relating to Iran-Contra, said former CIA official Duane Clarridge had urged him in 1984 to cooperate with what Clarridge called North's "special responsibilities" in Central America. Clarridge also faces criminal charges related to Iran-Contra.

Fiers said that by the spring of 1985, "There was no doubt that he (North) was driving the process and was the big player."

Company pays homeless to unload dirty trash train

SAUGET, Ill. (AP) — A company under the gun to get rail cars full of New York garbage unloaded and trucked to Illinois landfills is paying dozens of homeless men to do the smelly, dirty work.

State environmental officials said they would ask the federal government to investigate the working conditions.

Despite the temptation of being paid up to $10 an hour, some of the men have quit because of health concerns.

"Everything was rush, rush, rush, and I didn't want to stick my hand in and get poked by a needle," said one man who lives in a St. Louis homeless shelter and worked for several days before quitting.

"I didn't want to come up with some disease," said the man, who wouldn't give his name. He was one of dozens of homeless men recruited in the last two weeks.

Forklifts were used to move the baled refuse. One man who wouldn't give his name said his job was to shovel up anything dropped by the forklifts. One man who identified himself only as Mike said his main job was emptying buckets that caught liquid dripping from the rail cars.

Workers said Tuesday they were being paid $7 to $10 an hour for 12-hour shifts to work in the rail yard at Cahokia Marine Service in Sauget, a small community across the Mississippi River from St. Louis.

"Some need the money to exist," said the Rev. Eugene Davidson, shelter supervisor at Berea Presbyterian Church in St. Louis. "You can imagine $84 a day to a guy who hasn't seen 84 cents in a month."

The trash has been rotting in a rail yard because a contract expired June 15 between Oklahoma-based hauler TENNSV Inc. and a trucking company that was to transfer the commercial garbage to dumps.

TENNSV also was responsible for tons of garbage on a trainload of New York trash that wandered through three Midwest states for more than a week earlier this month. That train was shunned by every community where it tried to stop before it was sent back to New York for dumping. TENNSV will have to pay $160,000 to $175,000 to have that trash buried at a New York municipal landfill, said Conrail spokesman Bob Sullivan.

Kurdish leader seeks U.S. help to remove Saddam from power

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Iraqi Kurdish leader, preparing for unprecedented high-level talks here, said Tuesday he is seeking broad U.S. support including anti-aircraft weaponry in his quest to bring down President Saddam Hussein.

Jalal Talabani, secretary general of the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan, said in an interview he is seeking "military, financial, moral and political support — all kinds of support."

Talabani is one of six Iraqi opposition leaders who will be meeting this week with Secretary of State James A. Baker III, other top administration officials and key members of Congress.

The Bush administration has maintained contact with the Iraqi opposition for some time but never at a high level. The administration's interest in reaching out to the Iraqi opposition has coincided with renewed tensions over Baghdad's treatment of U.N. inspectors and Democratic claims that President Bush has not done enough to remove Saddam from power.

But Republicans and Democrats set aside partisan politics Tuesday during a White House meeting on the Iraqi situation.

"There wasn't any politics at all in that room," said Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, the Senate Republican leader.

"We don't view this in an election context," said Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine.

Accompanying Talabani to the meetings will be Massoud Barzani, a political rival who is president of the Kurdistan Democratic Party. Also in attendance will be two representatives of the southern-based Shiite population and two Sunni opposition leaders.

Experts: multi-party structure threatens the 2-party system

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a post-Perot post-mortem, experts on the politics of discontent contended on Tuesday that the two-party system is bound to give way over the next 10 years to a multi-party structure in America.

"We've found a level of discontent in American politics and American institutions that simply knows no parallel since the beginning of polling in the 1930s," said pollster Gordon S. Black, seeking to measure the public's appetite for trying something new. "Over half the people are willing to bolt the party system."

Analysts said future third-party movements are likely to grow from the ground up, electing local and state officials and members of Congress before trying to capture the White House. Ross Perot's supporters tried to elect him with no party at all.

"The American love affair with the two-party system is just about over," said John B. Anderson, a former Republican congressman from Illinois who bolted his party to run for president in 1980. After a strong start, he wound up with only 6.6 percent of the popular vote.

If a new party starts in 1996, "it may take six years before they can elect a president," Anderson said, citing the history of the Republican Party. It was founded in 1854, six years before Abraham Lincoln came along to lead it into the White House.

Larry Harrington, a Democratic consultant who managed Al Gore's 1988 campaign for the presidential nomination, dissented from the view that the discontent of 1992 is likely to give rise to new political parties.

'The American love affair with the two-party system is just about over.'

—John B. Anderson, former Republican congressman from Illinois

He said those backing Perot and supporting term limitation movements are inherently anti-politics and thus unlikely to coalesce politically.

They don't share a leader or an ideology, he said, and "it is very difficult to govern under those circumstances."

Joining at a Campaign magazine forum to evaluate the course of political discontent that the Perot movement tapped were Joan Vinson, Perot's Maryland coordinator; Black, who conducts polls for USA Today; Harrington and Joe Trippi, another Democratic consultant, and Lionel Kunst and Jim Coyne, leaders of organizations backing term limitation proposals that will be on the ballots of 15 states this fall.

Any new parties that evolve, the experts said, were likely to champion a variety of causes.

Most commonly foreseen was the development of a "Green Party" devoted to protecting the environment. Also envisioned were a party dedicated to preserving family values; a private enterprise party advocating that most government functions be contracted to private business, and a citizen-legislator reform party growing out of the term-limit movement.

Coyne said that movement already has become a "third force" in politics, gathering signatures from 3.5 million voters "without the benefit of someone with a billion dollars paying for it."

Trippi said the 800-number telephone technology that energized Jerry Brown's campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination and the Perot petition drives were changing the nature of politics.

When Anderson ran, he said, "there wasn't the technology that allowed masses of people to respond in one second to something said on television."

But he questioned whether a movement without a single leader can create a national party. Instead, "it is going to start taking place in congressional races," he predicted.

Joan Vinson, who headed the Perot Committee in Maryland, said she senses a determination among Perot volunteers — estimated by Black to number over 200,000 at the time of Perot's withdrawal — to keep their movement alive.

"Something has started which will not go away," she said. "There are many options open to us. A third party is certainly one of them."

Residents support distribution of funds

■ City Council's allocation of CDBG money favored people programs over property improvements.

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

Southeast Midland residents Tuesday night mostly supported the Midland City Council's preliminary distribution of Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) money and many offered their appreciation.

The reaction was in stark contrast to past town meetings on the subject, including one that left nearly 100 citizens baffled and angry.

But those meetings were held before the distribution of funds was announced.

The 30 citizens at Tuesday's meeting were generally pleased.

"There's a price tag on any request," Mayor J.D. Faircloth said. "And like any year there were far more requests than money available."

Distribution breakdowns reflected the council's desire to emphasize programs supporting people over property improvements.

"And we must continue to address people needs," councilman Bill Morrow said. "It's unfortunate we don't have enough money to fill all the property needs."

Faircloth agreed.

"When considering the allocations we took great care in feeding the citizens and taking care of the youth," Faircloth said.

Earlier, council members amended the original preliminary statement, issued July 14, to add $25,000 toward improvements at the Boys and Girls Club. The money was pulled from the $50,000 originally granted to the Homeownership Incentive Program.

"I'm here to thank the council for putting us on the list," said Bill Shuey, director of the Boys and Girls Club. "Right now we're serving 200 children a day — 90 percent minority. Most of these kids come from families earning $15,000 a year or less."

"Our need is building repairs. Our current site (110 E. New Jersey Ave.) has some hazards to the kids," he said. "Also we hope to expand our programs in the future ... such as teen pregnancy counseling."

Another program, the Housing Rehabilitation, Midland National Housing Service, was commended by a man who benefitted from their help.

"I waited 17 years to build on to my home. With the economic situation — gas going up, electricity going up and not knowing where the country was going — it made me hold back in getting a loan," Andy Abalos said. "Then this program came along and at a 3 percent interest rate it was hard to pass up. Much better than 9 or 9½ the banks were offering."

About 30 people attended the 7 p.m. hearing at DeZavala Elementary School.

Teacher offers workshop on 'healing power'

■ Lecturer with the Inner Peace Movement to discuss dealing with stress.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Susan Adams claims she can almost boast having earned "a Ph.D. in stress." But through stress management the single mother and Fort Worth business owner is living a life of balance.

Adams

"I even experienced the loss of a 17-year-old son. But I learned to heal my losses in a positive, constructive way," she said. "Life doesn't stop. I can't use loss, age or any excuse as an escape from living life to the fullest."

A traveling teacher with the Washington, D.C., based Inner Peace Movement for 25 years, Ms. Adams will offer the free lecture "There's a Healer in Everyone," 7:30 p.m. tonight in the Ramada Hotel, 3100 W. Wall.

The Inner Peace Movement is a nonprofit organization which offers a personal development and leadership training program "with tools for effective living."

"We all have a healing power within us. Many people have a concept of healing being a laying on of hands. That's not what I'm talking about here," Ms. Adams said. "If you have a problem, no matter what it is, we can find a solution, and a healing can take place. If we don't find a solution, then we become a part of the problem."

Ms. Adams said that people living on the fast tract may end up "so involved in everyone's life, they are not living their own."

She said that healing can take place in small ways. "Someone can give us a hug and we know that they support us, and we can go on. Something as simple as a mother caressing a child's forehead has some healing in it."

Learning to love without hooks also provides some peace of mind, she said. "The three main hooks are expecting, assuming and demanding. Using those hooks can make a relationship a business, based on demands and payments."

The workshop on healing will also discuss self-love. "Self-love doesn't mean egotistical self-love, but rather, recognizing the goodness in our heart. If we have no love in our heart we aren't going to find it anywhere else. If God is not in our heart, we won't find him in church Sunday morning," Ms. Adams said.

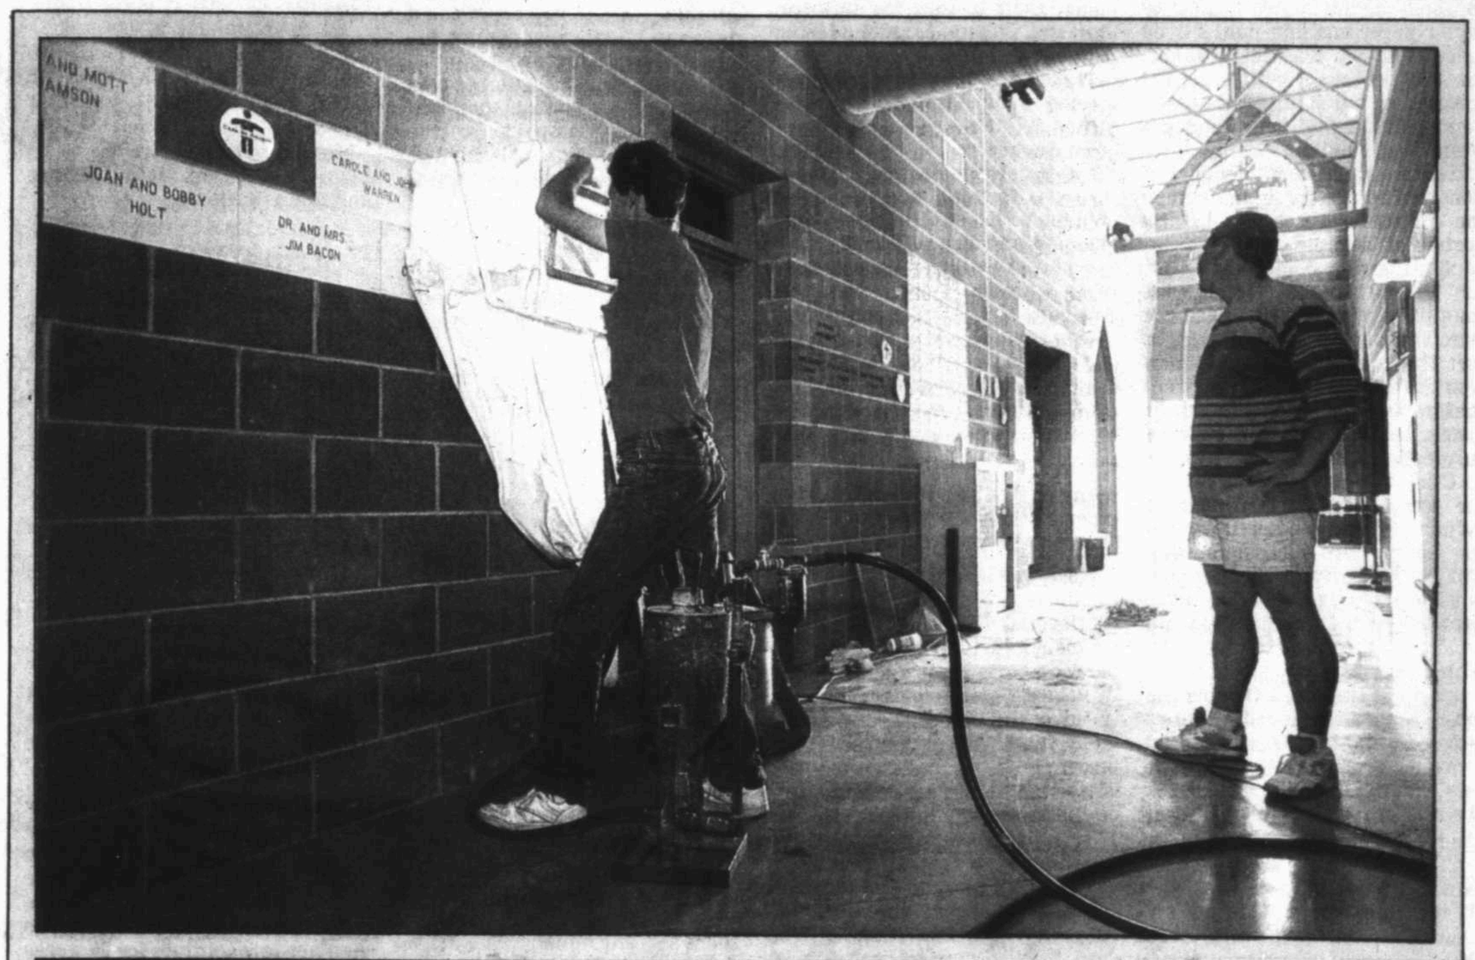

The lecturer said that science recognizes that some illnesses are brought about by stress, including the Type A personality that is prone to heart attacks. She said a Type C personality suppresses emotions. "They don't get angry. They don't show any hurt."

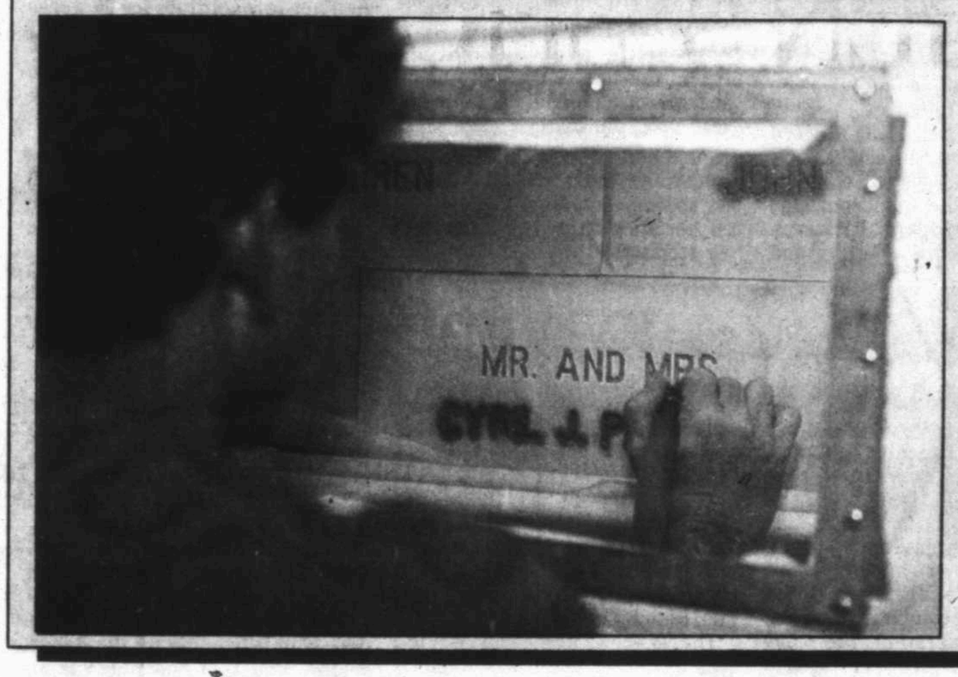

She said people should strive for a Type B, or balanced personality. "A Type B can still hold things up and not drive people away."

Sometimes people don't recognize signs of stress — such as headaches, upset stomach, shoulder aches or backaches, Ms. Adams said.

"Sometimes we have so many pressures we don't know what we feel. I can have words with someone, then forget it and let it go. It's when we get a fishing pole and

'Wall of fame'

Casa de Amigos is working toward a quarter-million dollar fund-raising goal with its "Building Blocks for Casa's Future" program. Toby Barrick, left, of Slaton Monument Co. uses a sandblaster to etch the names of contributors on cinder block along the agency's new main hallway. Contributors have given $250 per block for their names to be permanently included on Casa's "wall of fame." Sixty percent of the funds are expected to be earmarked for the agency's endowment fund, with the remainder used to support existing services.

Family-owned business gets popping for GOP convention

By Leslie Sowers
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Mary Lilly has only a few weeks to make 10,000 boxes of her chocolate-covered Popcorn Truffles, a candy that has been designated the official chocolate of the Republican National Convention. The truffles are made with four kinds of chocolate and popcorn made fresh on the premises of Lilly's plant here.

Lilly, her mother and her aunt started the candy business two years ago and have been going full-steam ever since, filling orders for 20 Neiman-Marcus stores and plenty of small gift shops as far off as Anchorage, Alaska. She sells the milk chocolate in eight-ounce boxes, $12, and a 1-pound, 8-ounce box that contains an assortment of dark chocolate, chocolate mint and white chocolate truffles, $31.

Soon Lilly and family will be suiting up in their work clothes and tennis shoes to make their deadline. They've got to be ready for 40,000 delegates and 15,000 members of the press expected for the Aug. 17-20 GOP convention.

Lilly's aunt, Mittie Williams, rolls her eyes. Her mother, Ollie Byrd, is pretty sure they can do it. But Byrd said Lilly has gotten them in up to their necks in popcorn before.

"Mary has gotten us all into trouble with this experiment," she joked. "Sometimes we pray and cry to get a shipment out in time."

Lilly said it takes burning the midnight oil for the three former schoolteachers to fulfill their dream of a family business. It also took financial commitment, since Lilly has never gotten a loan from the bank. The family incorporated from the beginning, she said, with several members buying shares.

Landing the chance to sell her product at the Republican convention is a payoff for the long hours of hard work. Lilly also has enjoyed considerable success at two large national markets held each year for specialty food sellers.

At the most recent one, Lilly met Orville Redenbacher. No, she does not use his popcorn for her product. No, he is not going to start marketing a chocolate-covered product like hers. And yes, he did like the truffles, sending several people back to sample them.

Lilly said this kind of marketing is crucial for her business. Attractive packaging is a big plus, as is a name that makes people want to try it. All these things Lilly learned by doing, since she had never had any business training. Her secret ingredient is a friend who earned an MBA from Harvard. When he moved out of state, she said her long-distance bill soared.

She's also gotten advice from her role model, Wally Amos of Famous Amos cookie fame. She said he's shared some marketing tricks to get her product moving.

"He got his start at Neiman's, too," Lilly said.

Lilly's business began with a holiday experiment in her kitchen. It was Christmas. She had company coming, and she was curious about whether she could coat popcorn in chocolate and how it would taste. She made several canisters in different flavors and had people try them. Interesting, they said. Different, they said. They voted yes with their taste buds, and Lilly decided to leap into action.

She called Neiman's, and the store's buyer happened to be looking for "a new fun food."

Popcorn Truffles were deemed fun enough to place an order.

The business continues to expand. Lilly was able to leave her teaching job after several months to devote all her energy to the business.

Lilly handles the bookkeeping, business details and marketing. Byrd, Williams and a cousin, Barbara Franklin, make the candy.

State offers loans for home improvement

Reporter-Telegram Austin bureau

AUSTIN — Midland County couples with annual income of $36,080 or less will be able to borrow as much as $15,000 from the state to improve their homes, and pay no interest on the loans.

Families of three or more with income of $41,492 or less are eligible for the no-interest home improvement loans.

The Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs said Tuesday that $1 million is available statewide for the loans.

The program's purpose is to assist in making permanent structural improvements to homes that enhance the livability of the house or correct a health or safety problem.

Terms for repayment vary according to the amount borrowed. Loans of from $1,500 to $5,000 have a maximum of 10 years for repayment, more than $5,000 and less than $10,000 loans have a 15-year term, and more than $10,000 loans have a 20-year term. The minimum monthly payment is $25.

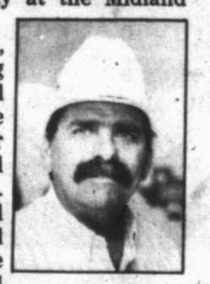

Interested parties can call the department's toll-free number, (800)792-1119.

Cowboy poets to give chuck wagon recitals

■ Organizers add poetry event to this year's Ranch Rodeo.

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

Cowboy poets, reminiscent of ranch hands who spun stories and made up songs and poems on trail drives in the 1800s, will be reciting poetry Saturday at the Midland Ranch Rodeo.

Hooker

The poets, mostly working cowboys, will gather to share their love for the West and ranch life. Reading and recitation will start around the campfires and chuckwagons following the rodeo events.

"It's not just about cowboys," said cowboy poet Eddy Hooker of Odessa. "It's about life — how a cowboy sees it, which can be pretty humorous itself."

Hooker, sitting on the back of a flat-bed truck in his cowboy garb, heeded a request and kindly recited a poem, true to life. It was about him and an old cowboy trying to be mythical cowboys by rolling-their-own cigarettes while riding at gallop on their horses.

They tried.

But tobacco spilled and flew all over the range.

"They are a lot of guys who can make a pretty good living in entertainment" with their poetry and tales, said Hooker, 43. "But they don't want to."

Hooker recalled what another cowboy poet, Joel Nelson, said about cowboys, cowboying, and writing poetry: " 'I don't do this because I have to. I do it because I like to.' "

And that's the way most cowboys look at their work and writings, Hooker said.

Cowboy poetry's appeal to both townspeople and country folks is its down-home flavor.

"It's written by everyday people about everyday things," Hooker said. "It's so varied."

Hooker will join other cowboy poets at chuck-wagons sites and campfires to recite poetry from about 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday following the five main Ranch Rodeo events on the grounds near the Midland County Rodeo Arena and Exhibit Building off U.S. Highway 80.

DEATHS

Frances Devenport

ALPINE — Graveside services for Frances Ferguson Devenport, 86, mother of Midland City Councilman James Devenport, are set for 2 p.m. Saturday at Elm Grove Cemetery in Alpine with the Rev. Mark Scott officiating. The family will receive guests at Mrs. Devenport's residence in Alpine following services. Services are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Devenport

Mrs. Devenport died Tuesday in Midland.

She was born Dec. 23, 1905, in Hale Center to Lola Lee Sherman and Joe Lee Ferguson. Her aunt and uncle, Miriam A. and James E. Ferguson, are both former governors of Texas.

She was in the first graduating class of what is now Texas Tech University in Lubbock. She taught home economics at Spring Lake School in Lamb County in 1929-'30. After receiving her master's degree from Sul Ross State College in 1958, she taught both home economics and first-grade classes in Alpine, Valentine, Marathon and Pecos until her retirement.

She was a lifelong member of the Methodist Church and a member of the Daughters of the Republic of Texas.

She married Elmer Devenport on March 21, 1929. He was employed by the National Park Service and Department of the Interior. The couple lived in Big Bend Park, Fort Davis and Balmorhea, before moving to Alpine in the 1930s. Her husband preceded her in death in 1962.

Other survivors include two other sons, John E. Devenport of Wimberly, and Joe Lee Devenport of Odessa; two daughters, Anne Devenport Powell of Marfa and Jane Devenport Hoffman of Austin; eight grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Memorials may be sent to the First United Methodist Church of Midland or of Alpine.

Wanda Louder

STANTON — Services for Wanda S. Louder, 64, of Tarzan are set for 2 p.m. today at First Baptist Church of Stanton with the Revs. Bill Shockley of San Antonio and Tim Swihart of Stanton officiating. Burial will follow in Evergreen Cemetery under the direction of Gilbreath Funeral Home.

Mrs. Louder, 64, died Monday at a Midland hospital following a lengthy illness.

She was born Dec. 18, 1927, in Dawson County. She had been a resident of Martin County for 63 years.

She married Marshall Louder on Nov. 18, 1946, in Lamesa. She was a homemaker and pianist at First Baptist Church of Tarzan.

Survivors include her husband; one son, Johnny Louder of Stanton; one daughter, Teresa Herm of Stanton; one brother, Darwin Sprawls of Midland and five grandchildren.

Pallbearers are to be David Chandler, Lynn Henson, Raymond Pribyla, Hester Badgett, Jimmy Wheeler, Gleen Holloway, Mac Tunnell and Brad Tunnell.

Honorary pallbearers are to be Mrs. Raymond Pribyla, Mrs. O.H. Badgett, Mrs. Lynn Henson, Mrs. Gleen Holloway, Mrs. Mac Tunnell, Mrs. David Chandler, R.C. Stewart, Mrs. Jimmy Wheeler, Mr. and Mrs. W.D. Chandler, Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Graves and Mr. and Mrs. Mike Black.

Thomas Haskins

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Services for former Midlander Thomas L. Haskins, 46, are set for 10:30 a.m. today in the Maider Quint Funeral Home in Columbus. Military burial will follow.

Haskins died Friday in Columbus following a brief illness.

He was born Sept. 27, 1945, in Arkansas and moved to Midland at a young age. He attended New Mexico Military Institute in Roswell, and had retired from the U.S. Air Force following a 22-year career.

Survivors include his parents; two children, Angela Haskins and Thomas Haskins, both of Columbus; five sisters, Margaret Hillin and Mary Jane Wilmeth, both of Midland, Paula Kay Smuck and Debbie Haskins, both of Austin, and Tanya Pyle of Dallas; and numerous nieces, nephews, uncles and aunts.

Ruby Boren

SNYDER — Services for Ruby Boren, 68, mother of Janet Nichols of Midland, are set for 2 p.m. Thursday at the Colonial Hill Baptist Church in Snyder with the Rev. Miller Robinson, pastor, officiating. Burial will follow at Hillside Memorial Gardens.

Mrs. Boren died Monday in a Lubbock hospital following a brief illness.

She was born Nov. 8, 1923, in Pelahatchie, Miss.

She married Cecil J. Boren on June 2, 1946, in Pensacola, Fla.

Mrs. Boren was a homemaker and had worked for several years at Dryden Shoe Store in Snyder. She was a member of Colonial Hill Baptist Church.

Other survivors include two sons, Whitt Boren of Jacksonville, Fla., and Jamie Boren of Dallas; two sisters, Violet Carter of Lisman, Ala., and Dora McDermont of Penasola; and one grandson.

Leslye Payton Winn

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Services for Leslye Payton Winn, 46, mother of Eric Carpenter Payton of Midland, were Tuesday in St. Louis, Mo., with the Lupton Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Winn died Saturday following a lengthy illness.

She was born April 22, 1945, in St. Louis.

She had worked as a flight attendant for American Airlines.

Other survivors include her husband, Robert Winn of Dallas; her parents, Lossetta Payton and Les Payton, both of St. Louis.

The family requests memorials be directed to the Multiple Sclerosis Society.

George Bechner

Graveside services for George F. Bechner of Midland are set for 11 a.m. today at Resthaven Memorial Park with the Rev. David Marx officiating. Services are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Monday at his home.

Pallbearers are to be Jim Sanders, Bud Dole, Don Haynes, Keith Levy, Stacey Bryant and Eric Bechner.

Honorary pallbearers are to be Dean Pennington, Jack Bechner and John Borleson.

Corrine Weis

Services for Corrine Weis of Midland are set for 1 p.m. today at the First Presbyterian Church with the Revs. Robert Douglas and J.E. Barrington officiating. Services are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home. Burial will be in Jefferson Memorial Park in Pittsburgh, Pa.

She died Monday in a local nursing home.

Senator wins nomination

HOUSTON (AP) — State Sen. Gene Green repeated an earlier slim victory that was thrown out by a judge and captured a narrow win Tuesday over Houston City Councilman Ben Reyes in the Democratic race for the new 29th Congressional District.

With 100 percent of the precincts counted, Green had 18,873, or 51.5 percent, to 17,766, or 48.5 percent for Reyes.

"We feel pretty good about it," Green said. "But we've been through this once and we want to make sure every vote is counted. It looks good where we're at now. What I think is people in this district are looking for quality of a person and not the color of his skin."

In April, Green narrowly beat Reyes, Houston's first elected Hispanic city councilman, but Reyes sued over the outcome and the election was thrown out.

"You've not heard the last from us," Reyes said in a concession speech. "We're just getting started.

"Let me tell you something Gene Green. You can bet we're going to be there after you in two years, two years later and two years later. This seat belongs to our community."

The district is one of three new congressional districts in Texas thanks to the state's population growth based on the 1990 census. It was meticulously designed to almost guarantee Houston's expanding Hispanic population with a representative of their own.

Instead, Green, who is white, could wind up holding the seat. Republican nominee Clark Kent Ervin, 33, a former White House aide who will face the Democratic winner in November, is black.

The campaign, elections and court battles stemming from both have dragged on nearly all year.

Reyes and Green emerged from a crowded field in the Democratic primary in March but neither received a majority so a runoff was needed. Green beat Reyes by 140 votes out of more than 31,000 ballots cast.

But in his lawsuit, Reyes successfully argued that some Republican voters improperly participated in the Democratic runoff and voted for Green.

Police seek robbery suspects

Staff report

Police are searching for two men wanted for the aggravated robbery of the Metro Inn motel early Tuesday morning, reports said.

According to Metro Inn employee Lillian Johnson, the men pointed a handgun at her and demanded money from the cash register. Ms. Johnson turned to the register and one suspect hit her in the back of the head with the gun, according to reports.

The suspects grabbed an undetermined amount of money and fled on foot.

One suspect is described as a Hispanic male, in his early 20s, about 5 foot, 7 inches tall and weighing 200 pounds. He was wearing a white shirt and black baggy shorts.

The second suspect is a Hispanic male in his early 20s. He was wearing a dark shirt and dark pants.

reel it back in that we create a vicious circle," she said. "If you want to live life simply you need to live it one breath at a time. Stay out of the past and don't live in the future. Stay focused and relaxed."

Tonight's introductory seminar, which is being offered free of charge, will focus on the "eight points of stress," "traits that make men and women natural healers and what they need to strengthen," " masculine and feminine traits in everyone," "how healing starts with the individual," and "how healing works."

Ms. Adams said weekly study groups will be formed for interested persons, following the seminar.

Cost of attending the study group is $3 per week for materials and supplies for a 12-week program.

Writer to bring everyday humor to the airwaves

CARLSBAD, N.M. (AP) — Joann Rice starts laughing early in the morning. She just can't help it.

After all, she has her own radio show that's scheduled to begin airing on Portales' National Public Radio affiliate, KENW-FM, by mid-August. It will be heard across eastern New Mexico and West Texas (including Midland and Odessa) — an area with about 350,000 pairs of ears ready to listen to her brand of humor.

Rice says she's new to radio, although the KENW-FM contract could lead to statewide and possibly national syndicate broadcasts of her two- to three-minute commentaries on household and housewife humor.

"I always wanted to be a writer," Rice says.

She dreamed of becoming a writer even before she graduated from high school in Roswell in 1962.

"I didn't think I'd be creating a radio program, but I'm finding writing for this is even more rewarding than it was for print.

"In print, everyone could see all of your mistakes," she says. "Radio's not like that, though. You can just be yourself, you can let your stories come out that way."

Rice's radio spots actually had their beginning in print. She wrote for the Carlsbad Current-Argus and Roswell Daily Record in the late 1960s and early 1970s. Those early newspaper columns would look at the humorous side of husbands and sports, Rice says.

But after raising a family and having household responsibilities, Rice fell away from writing. It wasn't until about six years ago that she began to turn the humorous things she saw each day into story ideas.

"I've always watched people," she says. "It's not like I eavesdrop, but I feel compelled to listen to what people are doing because there's so much humor in what we do everyday."

The little everyday things around the house, the store or in the supermarket contribute to her radio program material, she says.

She'd done a show twice weekly at another radio station for the last three years. Rice says people tell her they enjoy her spots and her stories.

"After a while of that I decided I'd try to see if I couldn't get the spots on any other stations," she says.

With that idea in mind, she found herself in Portales making a pitch to the National Public Radio affiliate to carry her spots. The end result was that KENW enjoyed Rice's material enough to sign her to a contract for 26 weeks of material.

Rice says she tries to humble herself when she begins to think of the show's possibilities.

"I'm just a normal person," she says. "My kids will sometimes tell me that I'm turning into a celebrity, but I don't think so. I'm still the same old me."

POETS: Cowboys to recite home-spun tales hunts in Colorado, said that the cowboy-poetry gathering will be a first for Midland.

Roush, who is helping coordinate the Ranch Rodeo, noted that the cowboy's "rustic poetry can be traced to the 1800s, when cowboys wrote and recited poetry to help pass the time during long cattle drives.

"When the cowboys got the herds calmed down, and they bedded down for the night, reciting poetry and writing poetry was a diversion for them."

Later on, trail riders put "their words to music, using familiar American, Irish and Scottish tunes and, thus, cowboy songs were born."

Cowboy poetry reading and recitation was resurrected in Elko, Nev., in 1985, Roush said. Since then, cowboy-poetry events have caught on in ranching country. Since 1987, the Texas Cowboy Poetry Gathering has been held each year on the campus of Sul Ross State University at Alpine.

Before the cowboy poetry event, eight West Texas ranch-rodeo teams will be competing in five events that represent the cowboy's working life out on the range besides fixing windmills and mending fences: ranch cutting, team penning, wild-cow milking, calf branding and team roping.

The events begin at 10 a.m. Saturday in the Midland County Rodeo Arena. Ranches fielding teams and their captains are: Munsell Ranch, Kenneth Munsell; Scharbauer Brothers & Co., Chris Scharbauer; Scharbauer Cattle Co., Ken Albus; Powell Ranch, Ralph Powell; Lazy Z Ranch, Bobby Matthews; Charlie Bird Ranch, Cedar Nolan; Mabee Ranch, John Mabee; and Dean Ranch, Hal "Rocky" Dean.

The Midland Ranch Rodeo's all-around championship teams are: The U (Windham) Ranch, 1988; the E (Eiland) Ranch, 1989; the C (Chicago) Ranch, 1990; and the Texas Ten Ranch, 1991.

The weekend event will start off with a country and western dance featuring Jody Nix and his Texas Cowboys at 8 p.m. Friday at Midland Center.

Early Saturday morning, campfires will be blazing for a chuckwagon cook-off. Judges are to be Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter and ranchers Billie Houston, Frank Cowden Jr. and John Casselman.

Both days the Bit, Spur & Western Collectibles Trade Show will be on display in the Midland County Exhibit Building.

The Ranch Rodeo's events will wind down with an 8:30 a.m. Sunday with a cowboy prayer service. Following the service will be team roping in the Rodeo Arena.

West Texas rancher Candi Cowden, who is heading up the Ranch Rodeo, said that the rodeo is an attempt to capture the "flavor of the true cowboy spirit and the West Texas ranching heritage."

■ 2-year-old finds gun, shoots himself

FORT WORTH — For the eighth time this year, a child or juvenile in Tarrant County is dead from an accidental shooting, police say.

A 2-year-old boy died Monday when he found a loaded small-caliber handgun on a high window sill of his mother's bedroom and shot himself in the face, police said.

Tristen Demond "Tank" Culton died at John Peter Smith Hospital at 12:21 p.m., less than an hour after his grandmother and great-grandmother rushed into the room after hearing a loud popping sound.

The child had been watching television. His mother was at work, and the grandmother and great-grandmother said they had never seen the gun before, police said.

"They didn't even know the gun was in the house," said Lt. Ralph Swearingin.

■ Suspect linked to woman's disappearance

DALLAS — Police have charged a 24-year-old suspect linked to the disappearance of a Dallas woman, officials said Tuesday.

Roy Glenn Harris of Dallas, was charged with aggravated robbery by Dallas authorities on Tuesday. Harris had been charged in Irving following his arrest Saturday with unauthorized use of Teri Edwards' missing vehicle.

Harris was transferred late Tuesday morning from the Irving jail to the Lew Sterrett Criminal Justice Center in Dallas.

He was arrested late Saturday after he left a service station without paying for gas in Ms. Edwards' Chevrolet Blazer. Irving officers found fresh blood inside the vehicle that matches that of Ms. Edwards.

Ms. Edwards, 31, has been missing since leaving her job at Baylor University Medical Center last Friday.

She was leaving the center on Friday when she called her sister to say she was stopping off at a bookstore on her way home. She never made it.

Dallas police believe that Ms. Edwards is probably dead.

"As time passes, it becomes more and more likely that that is the case," said Sgt. Jim Chandler.

■ Texan arrested in kidnapping, shooting

KENNER, La. — An East Texas man accused of kidnapping his estranged wife and shooting her boyfriend has been arrested in this New Orleans suburb on warrants issued in Austin, Texas.

Austin police Sgt. Don Martin said Cecilia Ann Ingram had been missing since July 12. She was with Charles Davison of Hallsville, Texas, when he was arrested Sunday.

Martin said the woman was reportedly unharmed.

Kenner police Sgt. Steve Caraway said officers received a phone tip that Davis could be found at a hotel. Caraway said Ms. Ingram had called someone in Austin from a restaurant near the hotel.

Davison is accused of abducting Ms. Ingram while she and her boyfriend, Randy Taylor, waited for her son after a Boy Scout event.

Taylor was shot as he chased the woman and her abductor.

Lujan defends free trade agreement

By Chip Brown
Associated Press writer

LUBBOCK — Secretary of the Interior Manuel Lujan renewed arguments for passing the North American Free Trade Agreement during a Republican campaign stop Tuesday, downplaying concerns from farmers who oppose the treaty.

Lujan touted President Bush's policies on crime, education and health care and blamed Congress for failing to enact many of the proposals. He focused on a free trade agreement with Mexico.

"In the whole United States about 600,000 jobs are related to exports to Mexico," Lujan said. "If the North American Free Trade Agreement passes that will be an additional 130,000 jobs. So it is very important that we get it passed."

The Bush administration is currently negotiating the trade agreement. The treaty will ultimately go before Congress for approval.

When asked about several Texas farm groups' opposition to the trade pact, Lujan said, "there is nothing to worry about."

Carl King, president of the American Corn Growers Assoc. based in Dimmitt, objected to Lujan's response Tuesday.

"Lujan is completely ignorant of the facts," said King, one of the country's most outspoken farmers against the free trade agreement. "There is nothing in that for agriculture."

King, who grows corn, cotton, sugar beets and wheat on 1,500 acres in the Panhandle, says farmers have not been assured that crops grown in Mexico won't flood the U.S. market, driving prices down.

"Mexico grows corn the way Japan does rice," King said. "We could lose a lot of our market."

The government has not given growers any assurances that other countries won't be able to back-door crops through Mexico into the United States, King said.

"There is no point of entry," he said. "There is nothing to keep Mexico from buying sugar from Cuba and sending it straight into the United States. Prices would crash."

Others fear substandard produce coming across the border, King said.

"We have to adhere to insecticides and they don't," he said. "Our biggest fear is that we would have to lower our standards to Mexico's rather than them raising to ours."

Lujan defended the agreement as an answer to economic recovery.

"When you talk about farm exports, farm exports have risen while the president has been in office from $22 billion to $37 billion," Lujan said. "And that is because we have not been protectionists. We allow for the expansion of trade."

King said Lujan's figures are deceiving.

"Trade exports are not up," King said. "They have been down for the last three months in a row.

"And if exports are below the cost of production, why export it?"

In closing, Lujan said the recession is over and that "the economy is not in bad shape."

Bush scheduled to tour SSC construction site

WAXAHACHIE (AP) — President Bush is scheduled to tour the superconducting super collider construction site on Thursday to help rally support for the endangered atom smasher.

The fate of the colossal scientific project is in the hands of the U.S. Senate following a stunning setback in the U.S. House in June.

A final vote on the collider, which is part of a $22 billion energy and water development bill, has not been scheduled, but the vote could come as early as Thursday.

U.S. Rep. Joe Barton, R-Ennis, hopes that scenario develops.

"Having the president at the (site) on the day of the Senate vote might convince some undecided senators to vote for it," said Barton, whose congressional district includes the super collider.

On the heels of the defeat of a balanced budget amendment, the House voted last month by a vote of 232-181 to kill the collider project.

But support in the Senate has always been stronger, and the Senate Appropriations Committee voted later to give the collider $550 million in the next fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1.

If the full Senate votes approval for the collider, the proposal would go to a House-Senate conference committee. Should it get to the conference committee, prospects for the collider are good, because most of those on the conference committee are supporters.

An advance team of White House aides and Secret Service agents toured the construction site Monday to plan the president's visit.

Collider spokesman Russ Wylie said Bush probably will walk through the construction site where the main shaft, 60 feet wide and more than 200 feet deep, is being dug for the collider.

Wylie said the president probably will also tour the completed labs where the project's magnets are being built and tested, and talk with employees and contractors.

The collider, if it continues to completion, will be housed in a 54-mile tunnel around Waxahachie in Ellis County, about 35 miles south of Dallas.

Seven more finalists chosen for $1 million

AUSTIN (AP) — Seven finalists have been chosen for the eighth million-dollar lottery drawing that will be held Aug. 6 in Longview.

Those selected Tuesday were: Okcha Graham, El Paso; James E. Fristoe, Austin; Herbert G. Delk, Richardson; James Dobeka, Mabank; Mary Marusik, Houston; Frances Morrison, Lone Grove, Okla.; and Bernard J. Moore, Houston.

Veronique Sledge, Fort Hood; Richard Rhinehart, Corpus Christi; and Mary Rose Cloud, Austin, were selected as alternates in the event any of the finalists are disqualified.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

WEDNESDAY, JULY 29, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: The business outlook is excellent if you stay alert. Be on guard against the deceptive practices of unscrupulous people. Any new associates should be chosen with great care. Fresh financial gains will help you turn an important corner in December. Although romance plays a secondary role to career interests now, it is still highly fulfilling. Marriage brings new contentment early in 1993. Next spring, a strong sense of duty makes you go out of your way to help family members. Your efforts are richly rewarded.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: choreographer Paul Taylor, lawyer Melvin Belli, newscaster Peter Jennings, singer Patty Scialfa.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An outing with old friends makes this a special day. Romance will progress smoothly if you play according to your partner's rules. Be supportive if hoping to cement a new personal relationship.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Teamwork is absolutely essential now. State your views in a frank but calm manner. An enthusiastic associate will spur you on. Reject superficial answers and seek the underlying causes.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Expect changes in office and business procedures. Scrutinize the fine print before signing a leasing agreement. The mail could bring a long-delayed check.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Devote more attention to your private life. Otherwise, a promising relationship could slowly slip away. Striking a better balance between work and recreation will safeguard your job and health.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An influential person offers financial support. A personal relationship could face new challenges. Additional job responsibilities bring deeper fulfillment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Heeding a "hot tip" from a friend could result in your losing your shirt. Rely on your own instincts when making financial choices. People who mean well can still be badly mistaken.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Chance can be fickle. The future looks brightest for those who have gone along with natural developments. Recognize the importance of being flexible.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Although there is work to be done, it can probably be put off if something important arises. This is one day when you can truly benefit from your ability to predict future trends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An elopement or sudden marriage could be featured today. You may even be one of the principals! As far as the future is concerned, it never looked more promising. Nurture loved one's dreams.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Obtain the latest available information when negotiating contracts. A friend or relative may be able to help. Something that has been humdrum in the past could take on an aura of intrigue.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A sense of duty helps you make the right choice today. The confusion that has marked a family situation can be cleared up. Someone special makes you feel attractive. Be good-natured.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A great day for promoting new projects. Rely on your own efforts to carry you to the top. Distant developments are more lucrative than in the recent past.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are sociable, energetic and fairly extravagant. A weekly allowance is an excellent way for these potential spendthrifts to learn about the danger of overspending.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	1 ◇	1 ♡	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ◇

Bridge is a difficult enough game without your contributing to its complexities. Winning players are those who make life simple for partner.

North's cue-bid was a limit raise in hearts. South might have tried three no trump rather than four hearts, a contract that would have been a pianola after a normal opening lead.

West led the ace of diamonds and, in an attempt to get partner to shift, East played a "low" nine of diamonds. Declarer dropped the seven, and West could not read East's signal. With the deuce of diamonds hidden in declarer's hand, West thought partner was playing an encouraging card. The diamond continuation allowed declarer to scoop up the rest of the tricks by ruffing a diamond in dummy before drawing trumps.

East blew the hand with careless play at the first trick—the correct card to play under partner's ace is the queen! That denies the king since, when holding touching honors, you show that by following with the higher of the honor cards.

With the threat of discards on dummy's spades there for all to see, it is not difficult for West to find the killing defense. Persevering with diamonds would obviously be futile, and if East has trump tricks coming, there's no hurry. The only winners that might disappear are in clubs, so at trick two East should shift to a club. The defenders would quickly rake in three tricks in that suit to defeat the game before declarer can collect a trick.

George Burns, Bobby Vinton record 'As Time Goes By'

LOS ANGELES — George Burns, old enough to be grandfather to Bobby Vinton, himself old enough for grandfather status, team up on a new album titled "As Time Goes By."

Burns

"It's important for young people to listen and learn from our elders. There is a wisdom that most older adults have gained that can be invaluable in teaching young people the mysteries of life," Vinton, 57, said in an interview this week.

Vinton and Burns, 96, perform three songs together, but Burns solos on "Gracie," a song honoring his late wife and comedic partner, Gracie Allen, who died in 1964.

MINNEAPOLIS — John Thompson, the brave 18-year-old who nearly lost his arms in a farm accident, got one standing ovation before he ever sang a note, and another after belting out the national anthem at a Twins baseball game.

Thompson

"At first I wasn't nervous, but now I am," Thompson said after performing at Monday's Minnesota Twins-Oakland Athletics game here. "I really couldn't hear myself."

The Hurdsfield, N.D., youth, whose arms were severed and then reattached after the accident in January, was introduced by announcer Bob Casey.

After recounting the Twins' "miraculous" World Series victory over Atlanta last fall, Casey said: "Tonight, we have a real, live, living miracle."

Monday's appearance was one of several Thompson has made since the surgery was a success.

"It's a lot of fun," said Thompson, who wants to be a rock singer. "It keeps me busy and keeps my mind off things."

LA HABRA, Calif. — Money and earthquakes proved more powerful than sentiment, so former President Nixon said he won't mind if the city razes his old Orange County law office.

Preservationists fought to save the brick building in this town 30 miles southeast of Los Angeles and near the Richard Nixon library and birthplace in Yorba Linda.

The city acquired Nixon's former law office in 1988, hoping to preserve it as part of a 1920s theme mall. But the need to reinforce it against quakes raised the question of cost.

"While I am deeply gratified by the efforts a number of my friends have made over the years to preserve the office I used in La Habra as a young attorney, I do not believe that the historical value is sufficient that it should be permitted to stand in the way of whatever alternative plans the city has for the property," Nixon wrote.

"It's what I've been saying all along," Mayor James Flora said after receiving the letter Monday. This frees the city to do what it likes, he said.

"We're frustrated, to put it mildly," said Kent Roberts, a leader in the preservation fight.

GREEN BAY, Wis. — About 50 children at Oneida Tribal School won't take Hammer's no for an answer.

The children wrote letters to the rap star asking him to reconsider his decision not to visit the school 15 miles west of Green Bay when he's in town Thursday to give a concert.

School administrators on Monday sent 10 of the best letters by fax to Hammer's New York agents.

Debbie Reiter, the school's administrative assistant, said Tuesday that the school received no response from Hammer.

Art Skenandore, the tribe's economic development manager, invited Hammer to visit the reservation in eastern Wisconsin in early July.

A Hammer spokesman, Scott Gorenstein, wrote Skenandore saying Hammer wouldn't have the time.

That spurred the letter-writing campaign in which Brooke Doxtator, 12, wrote: "Hi Hammer, it was a bad decision to come to Oneida and not to talk to the Oneida children.

"I think you're a real good role model for the children because we don't have many famous people to look up to."

• • •

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Tom Jones said he may take some credit for Elvis Presley's success in Las Vegas when the king of rock 'n' roll returned to the stage.

Presley took a break from concerts in the 1960s to make movies. While preparing for his comeback, Presley watched Jones' stage show, Jones recalled.

"He felt I was the closest thing to him," Jones told the paper. "He figured if I was successful, he would be too."

Jones, 52, was scheduled to perform Thursday in Memphis, Presley's hometown and the place where he died in 1977 at age 42.

Austin summer job program gives youth more than just paycheck

By Starita Smith
Associated Press writer

AUSTIN — Michelle Dominguez, 16, couldn't help screaming as she looked over her shoulder while she stood poised on the edge of a cliff ready to descend a 50-foot rock face on the end of a rope.

The Johnston High School student and member of the Austin Parks and Recreation Department's Youth Ranger Program had spent several minutes in silence gathering herself for her first experience in rappelling. But when she looked down into the boulder- and rock-strewn Bee Creek Preserve creekbed, she was anything but quiet.

Afterward, she said the program has given her a gift.

"I have conquered my fear," said Dominguez, who had been even more afraid of the canoe rescue on Town Lake than rappelling down the cliff.

For the young adults in the program, this summer job is more than a paycheck. It is a way to learn about nature and how to take care of nature preserves. It also is a way to learn how to guide tours through the Austin Nature Center.

Sixteen-year-old Sarah Fountain, a member of the Youth Ranger Program, surveys a cliff she must conquer by rappelling at Bee Creek Preserve in Austin recently.

The mixture of fear and triumph is becoming a regular occurrence for the seven members of the Youth Ranger Program. Along with learning canoe rescues and rappelling, they have gone caving in South Austin.

At a recent session, as always, the rangers cheered each other on as they tried the new and scary experience.

The Youth Ranger Program is one of many summer work projects run through the Austin/Travis County Private Industry Council Inc., a non-profit corporation that has a contract with the city to provide jobs for youths, said Bill Demestihas, the council's executive director.

Counselors say one goal of the program is to teach mutual support.

"Mainly, my favorite thing is just working with others and working with a team," said Sebastian San Miguel, 15, a Reagan High School student, who is also father of an infant son.

Counselors with the program, which is based on a U.S. Forest Service program, said an important ingredient is what young people learn about themselves.

"They have to be thinking very seriously about how to take care of themselves" in new situations, said Lee Stone, one of the Youth Ranger counselors.

This year, there is $2.5 million in federal funding for summer jobs for about 1,150 young people ages 14-21 in Travis County, Demestihas said. About half comes from the urban aid package passed by Congress in June in response to riots in Los Angeles in April.

'They have excelled at everything. We are just so blown away with how sharp they are.'
— Counselor Lee Stone

The jobs program is for students from low-income families who are Travis County residents and are eligible to work in this country. The pay is minimum wage, or $4.25 per hour. The jobs are as varied as the young people themselves, Demestihas said.

Few, however, will be exposed to the tasks the rangers have to perform. The group helps repair nature trails in preserves along Barton Creek Greenbelt, works with animals that cannot survive in the wild, learns about local flora and fauna and gives tours to children.

"They have excelled at everything. We are just so blown away with how sharp they are," Stone said.

Some of the rangers said the time in the woods, caves and waterways will help them in other parts of their lives.

For Sarah Fountain, 16, who will be returning to Austin's Bowie High School after a stint at the Alternative Learning Center, the Austin Independent School District school for students with behavioral problems, being a ranger reinforces a resolve to do better.

"I'm reformed. I was reformed before I came here. I reformed since my first day at ALC," she said.

Woman who sought to share husband's hobby finds talent of her own

By Lanza Myers
Associated Press writer

KERRVILLE — When Helen McCoy decided to start spending more time with her husband she didn't know she would develop a hidden talent.

The 75-year-old wood carver said that she spent many hours alone while her husband whittled away in his woodcarving shop until she decided to do something about it.

"My husband had been carving for 35 years," she said. "He started when he was a locomotive engineer; first he started whittling and then he developed his talents into carving.

"My husband carved all the time after he retired. He was always out in his shop and the only time I saw him was at mealtime. So I decided I had to either join him or find something else to do. He suggested I join him.

"I didn't understand my husband's interest in woodcarving. He would go out to his shop and stay out there for hours at a time and I would be left alone. I didn't know why he enjoyed it so much until I tried it," she said. "I haven't been carving that long, only about 10 years."

Mrs. McCoy added that learning to carve wasn't as easy as she thought it would be. "My first carving was a swan," she said. "I thought I'd try something small and compact. I wanted to start simple. I had to carve three swans before I got the hang of it. I kept breaking the neck off."

She says anyone can pick up a new hobby late in life. "If you have an interest in something and you really want to do it, you can do it. When you're trying it any little bit of talent you have in that area comes out."

Mrs. McCoy said that after she developed her talent, she began to show and sell her work at wood carving shows. "My second carving was a black bear. I didn't like the way it looked all alone so I added two bear cubs and put it on a base. It was a wonderful carving. I showed it in Dallas and took first place in the animal division and then it sold.

"It was the hardest thing for me to sell those bears. A lot of people ask me how I can stand to sell something I spent so much time on. It's hard, but there's no way you can keep everything you do. My house would be full if I kept everything. I use the money I make off of carvings to buy wood and supplies."

Animals, mainly horses, and Indian busts are Mrs. McCoy's favorite subjects. "I love Indian stuff, like totem poles, and I enjoy doing Indian busts the best," she said. "I love making different expressions on the Indians. One could look fierce while the other one could look sad. It's amazing what a little curve here and a curve there can do."

Mrs. McCoy said she switched her talents from animals to American Indians to avoid stress in her marriage. "I got into doing Indians because my husband and I were competing against each other at shows with animal sculptures," she said. "One of us would finish first while the other would finish second in the animal division. I didn't like competing against my husband."

"When I went out of animals and into faces I took classes on clay sculpting and that helped me get a feel for the human face. Mistakes with clay can be redone but you can't fix your mistakes in wood."

Among Mrs. McCoy's carvings with an American Indian theme are three totem poles outside her home. The poles support the roof of her porch. "It took my husband and I three months to do the totem poles," she said. "We did most of the work with a chainsaw because we thought it might be fun. We used chisels to do the fine work, though. A lot of people come here to take pictures of them.

"One morning I looked outside and there were four Japanese boys in my yard. I asked them what they wanted and they asked me if they could take pictures of my totem poles. That made me feel pretty good."

Johnson's pain

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Rookie of the year Larry Johnson complained of pain in his knee after working out in Dallas this week and could face arthroscopic surgery, the Charlotte Hornets reported Tuesday.

The Hornets issued statements from team physician Dr. Glenn Perry and Hornets' President Spencer Stolpen expressing confidence that the injury would not keep the former Odessa College star from participating in training camp.

Perry said Johnson had been examined by the Dallas Mavericks' team physician after he experienced some discomfort in his knee while working out.

"I can say that treatment of the injury should entail no more than the possibility of arthroscopic surgery," Perry said.

"If any measures of treatment need to be performed, the summer is the time to do it," said Stolpen. "By addressing the injury as soon as possible, the chance of Larry's missing training camp or a portion of the season is reduced."

Dickson's rally sinks Sutcliffe

■ One contender uses a mighty comeback to advance in the Midland Women's City Golf Championship.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

Dickson, down by five strokes after seven holes, defeated Penny Sutcliffe 2-and-1 in the championship flight of the match-play tournament.

"The word we used all the way through was ... it was an adventure," Dickson said of her misfortunes through the first seven holes. "I was hitting out of water. I was hitting out of bushes.

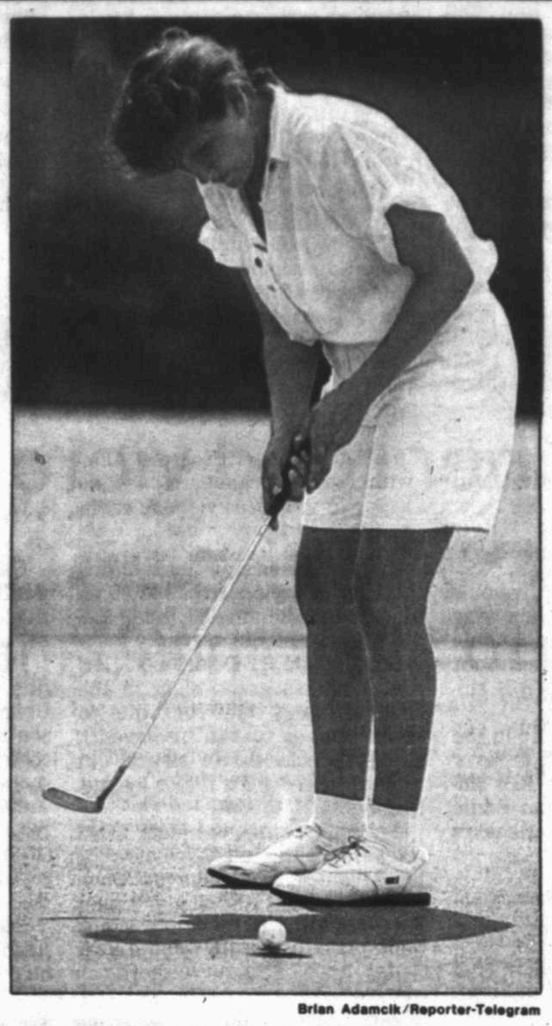

"Plus she (Sutcliffe) was playing exceptionally well. She was putting well, and I think on the back nine her putter kind of let her down.

"In match play like this, it all comes down to putting; it's very important."

Raburn, out to defend the title she won last year when she was an expectant mother, defeated Kristen Arnold, 5-and-4. Paula King defeated Jere Barnes, 2-up, and April King turned up her driver a notch to defeat first-year player Laura Waits, 2-and-1.

"I've been working on driving a lot," King said. "Lately I'd been skulling my driver. And I got lucky on a lot of shots."

Correia blast leads Angels

■ Midland shortstop Rod Correia's eighth-inning home run leads Midland to yet another late inning victory over Shreveport.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton fancies himself "The Comeback Kid," but chances are he'd rescind that reference if he were to ever witness a Midland Angels baseball game. The Arkansas governor may very well think the Angels are more worthy of such a moniker.

The Angels came from seven runs down to defeat the Shreveport Captains 8-7 Tuesday night for their second consecutive late-inning comeback, and third in the last four days. Which, of course, means that if Midland is cast in Clinton's 'Comeback Kid' role, Shreveport certainly must feel like the Jerry Brown of the Texas League.

But enough politics.

Rod Correia's two-run homer in the bottom of the eighth completed the Angels' return from the dead Tuesday night. The Midland win, combined with El Paso's 3-2 loss at home to Tulsa gives the Angels a three-game lead in the Texas League West.

It was the second time this month that Correia has connected for a home run in the bottom of the eighth to bring Midland from behind. On July 4, the 5-11 shortstop launched a three-run homer to left field to give Midland a 9-6 win over Wichita.

Biondi slips; spikers shave

Members of the U.S. volleyball team sport bald heads Tuesday, a move the team made to protest the overturning of their opening-round victory over Japan.

■ The U.S. wins a gold in the women's 400-meter freestyle relay to take a slim one-goal lead over the Unified Team.

Associated Press

BARCELONA, Spain — Janet Evans settled for silver, Matt Biondi settled for nothing, and the Summer Olympics settled the burning question:

"Mirror, mirror on the wall,
"Who's the ugliest of them all?"

With Evans and Biondi faltering, it was pretty ugly Tuesday night at the swimming pool, too, until the U.S. women's 400-meter freestyle relay team won the night's final event in world record time, giving Nicole Haislett her second gold medal of the Games.

"You'd like to be a superhero, but my cape slipped off," Biondi said.

There were other highlights for America. The U.S. baseball team remained undefeated after a 10-0 victory over Italy, with a game against mighty Cuba looming Wednesday, and American boxers now are unbeaten in six bouts.

Kim Zmeskal hit her final vault for a near-perfect 9.950, giving the United States a bronze in the women's gymnastics team competition and, even more importantly, earning herself a spot in the all-around event.

"I've never been under so much pressure, so definitely it was pretty strong," Zmeskel said.

With all 14 of the day's medal events over, the United States led with 16 total, four gold. The Unified Team was second with 15, eight gold, and China had 14 medals, five gold.

Coach is a liar, thinclads say

Dispute intensifies among members of track team

Associated Press

BARCELONA, Spain — Two members of the U.S. 1,600-meter relay team Tuesday called men's track and field coach Mel Rosen a liar.

Steve Lewis, the 1988 Olympic gold medalist in the 400 meters, and Danny Everett, the bronze medalist, vented their wrath because of the inclusion of Michael Johnson in the relay final and the exclusion of Andrew Valmon.

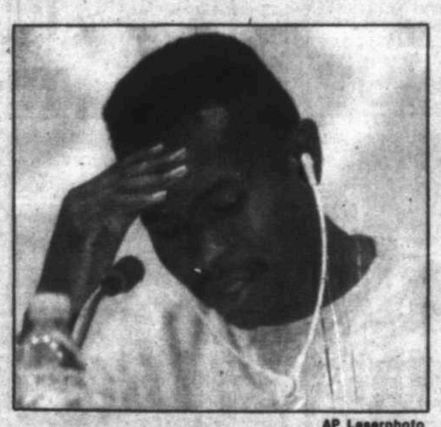

"Mel has changed his philosophy," Everett said. "He's been lying to a lot of people."

Although the coaching staff has not officially announced the makeup of the relay team, Johnson has said he will run the third leg, after Everett and Quincy Watts, and before Lewis.

Lewis and Everett are angry because Johnson skipped the 400 meters at last month's Olympic trials at New Orleans, apparently because he was assured of a spot on the team by Rosen.

"Mel Rosen is unprofessional, inconsistent and has not been truthful to Andrew Valmon," Lewis said at a news conference. "Michael Johnson is a good 400-meter man, but he could be an alternate.

"Michael was told before the trials he would be able to run in the 4x4 (relay) even if he didn't run the 400."

AP Laserphoto

Johnson, the 1991 world champion at 200 meters, ran that distance and won at the trials. He has been ranked No. 1 in the world in the 200 and 400 each of the past two years.

"There's no doubt I'm amongst the top four in the world rankings this year and I have never lost a race over this distance," Johnson said.

Everett, the trials' 400 champion, said Rosen "has mishandled the situation very seriously."

"I've lost all respect for Mel. He also has been inconsistent in the way he has handled the relays in the past," said Everett, who also disclosed he had an injured right Achilles' tendon and might have to withdraw from the Games.

"I don't think it would be helpful for team morale for me to engage in a war of words because our plan is still to put our strongest 4x400-meter relay team on the track," he said in a statement issued through the U.S. Olympic Committee.

"At this point we're still staying with the statement that I've made. And that is that a final decision on the relay personnel will come two days before the first round when we have to turn in a list of our final six people."

Everett charged that Rosen's and Johnson's affiliation with the Nike shoe company played a part in the coach's decision to give Johnson a place on the team.

Rangers beat Red Sox on Gonzalez' homer in 10th

Associated Press

AL

BOSTON — Juan Gonzalez hit his second home run of the game, connecting in the 10th inning Tuesday night to lift the Texas Rangers past the Boston Red Sox 2-1.

Right fielder Ruben Sierra preserved the lead in the bottom of the 10th, throwing out pinch runner Luis Rivera when he tried to score from second base on Billy Hatcher's one-out single. Catcher Ivan Rodriguez grabbed Sierra's throw on one hop and blocked Rivera from reaching the plate.

Gonzalez, who broke up a scoreless tie by homering with two outs in the sixth, hit his 24th home run of the season with one out in the 10th off Paul Quantrill (1-1).

Indians 4, Brewers 2

Nichols (2-2) allowed two runs on four hits, struck out four and walked two in his second start following a stay at Triple-A Colorado Springs. He pitched eight scoreless innings, allowing two hits, for a no-decision in Cleveland's 1-0, 14-inning victory last Thursday against Kansas City.

Blue Jays 6, Royals 4

Maldonado led off the third against Dennis Moeller (0-1) with his 10th home run of the season. Gruber, making his first start at home since a knee injury forced him to miss 21 games, followed with his ninth homer. It was Gruber's first home run since May 26 and first extra base hit in 75 at-bats.

Derek Bell and Pat Borders followed with consecutive singles and Manuel Lee advanced both runners with a sacrifice bunt before Devon White hit a sacrifice fly for a 4-1 lead.

Orioles 5, Yankees 2

NEW YORK — Mike Devereaux homered, tripled, drove in two runs and scored twice, leading Ben McDonald and Baltimore over New York.

McDonald (10-7) won for only the third time in 11 starts. He went eight innings and gave up two runs on eight hits and tied his career high with nine strikeouts.

McDonald, who leads the majors with 25 home runs allowed, did not give up a homer for the ninth time in 22 starts. Still, he had to overcome a shaky start in which he have up six hits, walked one and hit Matt Nokes in the batting helmet in the first three innings as New York took a 2-1 lead.

Gregg Olson pitched the ninth for his 24th save in 28 chances. New York lost its third straight game.

White Sox 8, Tigers 6
White Sox 5, Tigers 3

DETROIT — Shawn Abner hit his first homer and Alex Fernandez earned his first victory since being recalled from the minors as the Chicago White Sox defeated Detroit in the second game, sweeping a doubleheader from the Tigers.

Carlton Fisk, Frank Thomas and Craig Grebeck each hit two-run homers to enable the White Sox to hold off the Tigers 8-6 in the first game.

Athletics 12, Twins 10

MINNEAPOLIS — Mark McGwire kept Oakland close with two homers and five RBIs before Eric Fox keyed a six-run sixth inning with a two-run triple as the Athletics rallied past the Minnesota Twins 12-10.

The A's, who had a season-high 19 hits, have outscored opponents 42-17 during a five-game winning streak and have moved within one game of the AL West-leading Twins.

Dr. J's sons throw bash

VILLANOVA, Pa. — Two sons of Julius "Dr. J" Erving were charged with running a "large underage drinking party" for 75 to 100 people at the former basketball star's suburban home, police said Tuesday.

Cheo Erving, 19, and Julius Erving, 18, allegedly charged $25 per person to get into the party Thursday night and then stamped "paid" on the hands of guests, Lower Merion police said.

Police were alerted when the former Philadelphia 76ers star and his wife, who were not home, called police to ask them to check on the house.

When they arrived, officers saw several young people running from the house. Five kegs of beer were confiscated.

Both sons were charged with underaged drinking and disorderly conduct. Cheo Erving was also charged with drug possession, receiving stolen property and theft of lost or mislaid property. He is free on a $2,500 recognizance bond pending a hearing Friday.

The older teen allegedly had a small amount of marijuana and five checks that apparently had been taken from a Bryn Mawr home, police said.

The story was reported in the Philadelphia Daily News. A dispatcher who answered the phone at Lower Merion police headquarters Tuesday confirmed the arrests but said no one was available to release further information.

Astros post another road victory, 7-5 in Atlanta

Associated Press

NL

ATLANTA — Pete Harnisch won his first game since June 3 and his first road game this season as Houston held off the Atlanta Braves 7-5 Tuesday night, the Astros' second consecutive win at the start of their 26-game road trip.

The Braves, who entered the night one game ahead of Cincinnati in the NL West, dropped their third in a row, matching their longest losing streak of the season.

Harnisch (4-8) was 0-5 with a 6.27 ERA on the road this season, but shut down the Braves on four hits over seven innings. He struck out six and walked two.

Doug Jones got the last five outs for his 21st save despite allowing Ron Gant's RBI double, Lonnie Smith's run-scoring groundout and Jeff Blauser's bloop RBI single in the ninth.

Houston snapped a 1-1 tie in the sixth with three runs off reliever Marvin Freeman (3-4) on RBI singles by Pete Incaviglia and Eddie Taubensee and Casey Candaele's run-scoring grounder.

Mets 8, Phillies 6

PHILADELPHIA — Willie Randolph, whose first-inning error helped set up four runs, atoned with a go-ahead RBI single in the eighth.

Earlier, Randolph had ended the Mets' scoreless streak at 30 innings when he singled home Eddie Murray in the second.

David Cone (12-4) survived Darren Daulton's grand slam in the first, allowing only four hits in seven innings to win his seventh straight decision. He struck out nine to increase his major league-leading total to 186.

Anthony Young, the Mets' third pitcher, got the last three outs for his seventh save, allowing Dave Hollins' two-out RBI single. Young got John Kruk to hit into a game-ending forceout with two men on base.

Cubs 11, Pirates 1

CHICAGO — Steve Buechele doubled, tripled and hit his first home run for the Cubs as Chicago routed his former club.

Mike Morgan (9-4) allowed five hits in seven shutout innings as Chicago got 18 hits and set a season high for runs. The Cubs won their third consecutive game and their eighth in their last 11.

Pittsburgh lost for the seventh time in nine games. Randy Tomlin (10-7) gave up five runs and nine hits in four innings, and is 0-4 in six starts since June 22.

Buechele, acquired by Chicago from Pittsburgh on July 11, doubled in the second, tripled in the fifth and homered off Steve Cook in the seventh, his ninth of the year.

Reds 4, Padres 1

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Joe Oliver hit a two-run homer, his first in a month, to lead Cincinnati over San Diego.

Cincinnati trails Atlanta, a 7-5 loser to Houston, by .002 after beating Jim Deshaies (1-1) for the sixth straight time, the first five while the left-hander was pitching for Houston.

Jose Rijo (8-7) allowed one run on five hits in seven innings and won for the fifth time in his last seven starts.

ANGELS: Midland defense struggles with three errors

(From 1C)

"They just come at the right time," Correia said. "I wasn't trying to pull the ball out. I was just trying to get it over third base. If I do try to hit it out, it won't go. I'm a little guy."

Correia's shot drove in third baseman Eduardo Perez, who had reached on a fielder's choice, stole second and went to third on a throwing error by Shreveport catcher Dan Fernandez.

The Angels put themselves in position to win after scoring four runs in the sixth. A three-run home run by Dan Rumsey highlighted an inning that saw Midland erase a 7-2 deficit to come to within a run, 7-6.

The Angels trailed 7-0 entering the bottom of the fourth inning. Shreveport's Dan Lewis had a two-run double in the first to help put Shreveport up 3-0, and a monstrous solo home run over the right field wall by Lewis — estimated to be just shy of the 400 foot mark — was the high-point of the Captains' fourth.

Midland starter Phil Leftwich suffered through a rough five innings, allowing seven hits and seven runs. But three Midland errors — including two in the third — made only three of Leftwich's runs earned.

"Lefty didn't have his best stuff tonight, but we didn't help him much, myself included," Correia said. "We have a real solid team. Our defense failed us tonight, but our bats came through and helped us out."

Steve Peck earned the win in relief for Midland, his eighth in 11 decisions. Peck pitched one inning, allowed one hit and struck out one.

Wyche donates golf winnings to charity

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Tampa Bay Buccaneers coach Sam Wyche has donated $12,500 of his prize money from a charity golf tournament to help train mentally retarded workers at a vocational training center.

The donation came from winnings Wyche and businessman Allen Adams netted last month in the Bing Crosby event in Winston-Salem, N.C.

"We finished up tied for 10th place, and I designated part of the $17,500 prize money to the center for them to use as needed," Wyche said. "I wish I could putt because I'd have won more money for them."

Jean Stuck, director of the J. Clifford MacDonald Center, said the center had been forced to make cutbacks because of shortfall's in funding by Florida's social services agency. Now, he said, the donation will allow 27 retarded workers to keep getting about $175 a month as they learn job skills.

TRACK: Shoe company part of problem, athlete charges

(From 1C)

"It's a conflict of interest when you have a coach who is with a shoe company trying to get an athlete on the team from that company," Everett said.

The Athletics Congress, the national governing body for track and field, opened the way for Johnson to join the relay team last December when it passed a rule allowing anyone who made the Olympic team — in any event — to compete in the 1,600.

While the rule was not specifically designed for Johnson, it was legislated only a couple of months after the U.S. team lost the 1,600-meter relay at the world championships in Tokyo, where Antonio Pettigrew was overtaken by Britain's Kriss Akabusi on the anchor leg.

Many observers, including several U.S. coaches, were shocked by the upset, and said that if Johnson had anchored the relay, the U.S. team would have won.

"I don't feel the policy is right... I don't agree with what's going on," Lewis said, adding that despite the controversy he would not drop off the relay team.

It is the second straight Olympics that Valmon is being bypassed. In 1988, when he finished fifth at the trials, he showed better fitness and produced faster times before the Games than fourth-place finisher Kevin Robinzine. But Robinzine was picked for the final.

This year will mark the first time that four sub-44-second 400-meter runners will be on the same relay team.

OLYMPICS: U.S. pitcher fans 14, Cuba on deck

(From 1C)

Evans, a triple gold medalist in Seoul four years ago, got beat in the 400-meter freestyle for the first time since 1986, losing to Dagmar Hase of Germany. And Biondi, who captured five golds at Seoul, failed to win a medal in the 100 freestyle, finishing fifth.

"I think we may be seeing the end here for me," Biondi said.

Evans, of Placentia, Calif., had the lead until the final 50 meters, but Hase caught her at the end to win in 4:07.18, well off Evans' world record of 4:03.85 she set at the 1988 Olympics.

"I think I died a little at the end," Evans said through tears. "But I gave it my best shot. It was my best time in about two years."

Biondi, of Castro Valley, Calif., might lose his spot on the 400-meter relay team because of his poor finish. Alexandre Popov of the Unified Team won in 49.02, well out of range of Biondi's world record of 48.42.

The U.S. women's 400-meter freestyle relay team gave America it's only swimming gold of the day in 3:39.46, besting the old world mark of 3:40.57 by East Germany in 1986.

The team was made up of Haislett, of St. Petersburg, Fla.; Dara Torres of Gainesville, Fla.; Angel Martino of Americus, Ga.; and Jenny Thompson of Dover, N.H. Haislett won her first gold Monday in the 200 freestyle and gave it to her father to put in his pocket.

"I told him to keep his hand on it," she said. "This one, I'm going to put in a safe."

Kristina Egerszegi of Hungary also won her second gold medal, with an Olympic record 49.02 in the women's 100 freestyle. Lea Loveless of Crestwood, N.Y., won the bronze.

There were Ugly Americans everywhere in Barcelona, but none of them were uglier than the U.S. volleyball players. They redefined the word by shaving their heads in protest for a match against Canada.

They looked like a patch of ripe melons.

The Americans struggled in a 15-12, 15-12, 10-15, 11-15, 16-14 victory over Canada to stay in medals contention.

"It was real tough to focus on Canada," U.S. player Steve Timmons said, apparently referring to the controversy rather than the glare off his teammates' heads. On Monday, volleyball officials reversed the result of a U.S. victory over Japan after Japan protested.

Michael Jordan is feuding with the U.S. Olympic Committee over what to wear on the medal podium, assuming he gets there. And two members of the American men's 1,600-meter relay team say their coach, Mel Rosen, is a liar.

The USOC has a contract that requires U.S. athletes to wear Reebok uniforms when accepting medals. Jordan has refused because he has a contract with Nike.

USOC spokesman Mike Moran accused the Dream Team of being "out of touch with the rest of the Olympic team."

Even uglier, though, was the fight on the track team. Runners Steve Lewis and Danny Everett both blasted Rosen for including Michael Johnson on the relay team ahead of Andrew Valmon, the fourth-place finisher in the 400 at the Olympic trials.

"Mel Rosen is unprofessional, inconsistent and has not been truthful to Andrew Valmon," Lewis said.

Everett, who revealed that an injured right Achilles tendon might keep him out of the games, said: "I've lost all respect for Mel."

B.J. Wallace of Monroeville, Ala., pitched a five-hitter and struck out 14, while Jeffrey Hammonds had a pair of RBIs and Phil Nevin homered for the American baseball team. The U.S. team scored five runs in the eighth, and the game was stopped because of the 10-run rule.

Next up: Cuba, an 8-2 winner over Japan Tuesday.

"Can we beat them? I don't really think it's possible," coach Ron Fraser said. "If we do, it'll be because they play terrible or we play the best we possibly can."

Reyes, of Fort Worth, Texas, scored a 10-1 decision over Harold Ramirez of Puerto Rico in the 119-pound division. Byrd, of Flint, Mich., had a huge third round to beat Mark Edwards of Britain 21-3 at 165 pounds.

Midland advances to championship

A nine-run third inning keyed Midland National's 12-10 win over Pecos in Tuesday play at the Section I Seniors baseball tournament Tuesday afternoon at Simons Field.

Albert Flores and Britt Harper accounted for Midland's only extra base hits of the inning. Lance Watters was the winning pitcher while Pecos' Ramon Munoz received the loss.

Pecos out-hit Midland, 14-10, and scored two runs in the second, fifth and seventh innings.

Dominic Vasquez, Isaac Hinojos and Miguel Martinez all doubled for Pecos.

The win moves Midland to the championshp game Thursday at 5:30 p.m. Should Midland lose that game, an 'if' game would follow at 8 p.m.

Pecos will face the winner of Tuesday night's Borger-Lubbock Martin Luther King contest today at 8 p.m.

Results of the Borger-Lubbock MLK game were not reported by press time.

Patton sinks ace

George E. Patton fired a hole-in-one Monday on the No. 6 hole at Hogan Park Golf Course.

Patton, using a four iron, made the ace from 190 yards. Edwin Don Green witnessed the shot.

Montana elects not to strain arm by throwing

Associated Press

ROCKLIN, Calif. — San Francisco 49ers quarterback Joe Montana wasn't on the practice field Tuesday, and rumors continued to flourish around the elbow surgery which forced him to miss all of last season.

While the team went through passing drills under a broiling sun with Steve Young at quarterback, Montana was working out on a stairmaster in the team's weight room.

"The arm is still tired," said Montana, who underwent surgery last October to reattach a tendon to his right elbow. "It's not getting any worse, but it's not getting any better, either. So the best thing to do is try to let it get 100 percent healthy."

Montana said he decided not to throw at all — he threw 30 times on Monday — after discussing the matter with trainer Lindsy McLean.

"The throwing is not helping it any," Montana said. "I can go out there and throw, but what's the use if it doesn't get any better. I just want it to go one way or the other. Just to get worse or get better."

Later Tuesday evening, Montana announced he would not throw on Wednesday and Thursday.

Despite the setback, Montana didn't rule out a start in Monday night's exhibition game against the Denver Broncos at Candlestick Park.

"I don't know," he said. "I just have to see how it goes. I could easily (start). But I don't want to press it. I have five weeks. The elbow is really tight."

"Obviously, Joe's arm was tired and was bothering him," coach George Seifert said. "The training staff and he felt it was best that he get some treatment."

As for Seifert declaring him out, the coach said, "At this moment, no, but the thought has crept into my mind. We'll just have to see how he is Wednesday, see how he is the next day and make our decision from there. I would say if he has to rest it for a few more days, then it will certainly influence what we have to do for Monday's game."

"It's much too early or premature," he said. "He's coming back from a pretty serious injury and operation, and he hasn't played for a long time.

WOMEN: GTCC next stop

(From 1C)

King drove long and straight through most of the back nine, including landing her tee shot within 50 yards of the green on the relatively short 13th and 14th holes. And on the par-3 16th, King grimmaced as she let fly her first shot, but drove the green anyway, much to her surprise.

"I just couldn't make any putts for birdies to win," said Waits, who moved to Midland from Oklahoma City last November. "And she (King) didn't make any bogeys. She hit a lot of fairways and made a lot of putts."

Despite her opening round win, Paula King was so unhappy with her play she said she considered herself lucky to advance to the winner's bracket.

"I just didn't hit the hole very good," said King, runner-up to Raburn in last year's city championship. "The first nine I wasn't putting very well, but I think I came back a little.

"But (match play) is different hole by hole. If you play hard you can get back in it."

Today's second round is at Green Tree Country Club with tee-times starting at 8:30 a.m.

Moon shows up for team flight

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Quarterback Warren Moon showed up frustrated but on time for the Houston Oilers flight to Tokyo on Tuesday for an exhibition game.

There had been speculation Moon might skip the Saturday night game because of a contract dispute, especially after agent Leigh Steinberg said Moon could miss the trip.

Steinberg later said the quarterback would fly to Japan.

"There's been thoughts of a lot of things, but I'm here," Moon said prior to takeoff. "I'm very frustrated, very disappointed all this has happened but I'm encouraged that it can get taken care of."

Former MHS candidate named offensive line coach at SMU

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist University has named Clovis Hale, former Texas offensive line coach, to a similar position for the Mustangs.

Hale's appointment was among several position changes on the SMU coaching staff announced Tuesday by head coach Tom Rossley. Hale, a 24-year coaching veteran, was on the Longhorns' staff from 1987 to 1991.

Prices hold

NEW YORK — Energy prices were narrowly mixed Tuesday as traders eyed developments in the Persian Gulf and pondered the uncertain future for energy demand.

The price of West Texas Intermediate for delivery in September rose 1 cent a barrel from Monday to close at $22.05 in moderate trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Natural gas for September delivery settled at $1.838 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 1.8 cents.

Lower-grade sour crude for September delivery settled at $20.05 a barrel, up 1 cent.

After the domestic oil market closed, the American Petroleum Institute, an industry trade group, reported a slight decline in the stockpile of crude oil for the week that ended last Friday.

The API's weekly supply summary showed there were 323.930 million barrels of crude oil stockpiled, vs. 323.932 million the week before.

Other API statistics showed the supply of gasoline fell slightly for the week to 219.235 million barrels, vs. 220.767 million the week before. The supply of distillates, which includes home-heating oil, rose slightly to 112.86 million barrels, from 108.416 million barrels the week before.

Refineries operated at 91.1 percent of capacity in the wek, down from 92 percent the week before.

Dollar falls

NEW YORK — The dollar fell in global currency trading Tuesday following the release of disappointing data on the U.S. economy.

In New York, the dollar settled at 127.45 yen, down from 127.50 yen on Monday.

Market surges

NEW YORK — The stock market posted its biggest gain in more than six months on Tuesday, as falling interest rates and strong auto profits encouraged traders about the economy.

The market ignored a report showing a sharp decline in Americans' confidence in the economy in July, focusing instead on lower rates that could boost corporate performance.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 51.87 points to 3,334.07. It was the biggest gain since the market's main barometer rose 60.60 points on Jan. 14.

Advancing issues outnumbered declining ones by more than 3 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Sharp sees mixed future jobs outlook

■ State's economic forecast calls for growth, although many workers will earn low pay, comptroller says.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The economic forecast for Texas in 2026 calls for continued job growth, although many workers will be earning low pay, State Comptroller John Sharp says.

"The long-term economic news for Texas is mixed," Sharp said Tuesday after unveiling a yearlong study contained in the comptroller office's monthly publication "Fiscal Notes."

"Led by the construction and service sectors, the Texas overall employment outlook over the next 35 years is bright, but many of those new jobs — especially in trade and services — will be in lower paying occupations," Sharp said.

After adjusting for inflation, Sharp said, wages will increase about one-half percent annually which "will pressure more family members to enter the work force."

He said the state's economy will expand at a modest rate, slightly outpacing the national rate. But, he added, "State growth will be below that of the boom periods Texas enjoyed during the 1960s and 1970s," he said.

Past economic growth in Texas was fueled by an expanding workforce, but in future years, the growth will result from increased worker production "as the labor force matures," Sharp said.

Energy is expected to decline as a portion of the state's economy, while construction, service sector jobs, and manufacturing will lead growth, he said.

'The Texas overall employment outlook over the next 35 years is bright . . .'

— State Comptroller John Sharp

The year 2026 will also represent the time when many "Baby Boomers" retire. Their numbers will give them significant political clout, he said.

The fastest growing ethnic group in Texas will be Hispanics, whose numbers are expected to increase from 27 percent of the population in 1990 to 38 percent in 2026. The Anglo population will decline from 61 percent to 47 percent.

Chrysler Corp. racks up large quarterly profit

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (AP) — Chrysler Corp. said Tuesday demand for its new Jeep and a national sale on the automaker's popular minivans led to $178 million in second-quarter profits, more than double many Wall Street estimates.

The results, which amounted to 54 cents a share, marked the best performance for Chrysler since the second quarter of 1990. Chrysler lost $212 million, or 95 cents a share, in last year's April-June period.

Automotive analysts who follow the No. 3 automaker were stunned at the improvement, largely because it contained no obvious gimmickry such as asset sales or accounting adjustments to make the results look artificially strong.

Land parcels to go on block

Staff report

Midland will host an auction of properties ranging from land parcels to residential, commercial and industrial properties on Aug. 15 at noon at the Midland Hilton.

An entire spectrum of properties throughout West Texas, the Panhandle and the Valley will go on the auction block in an auction conducted by LFC Clearinghouse Inc.

"The properties offered include various parcels of land, office buildings and residences in towns ranging from Corpus Christ, Rockport and McAllen to El Paso, Fort Stockton and Odessa, to Lubbock, Amarillo and Sweetwater, among other communities," said Patrick M. Stanton, senior vice president of marketing.

The auction sale will be conducted on an absolute basis; all properties will be sold to the highest bidder regardless of price.

Auctions also will be held in Corpus Christ and Lubbock.

All bidders must be registered to bid and must have in their possession a cashier's check, made payable to themselves, in the amount of $500 for each property purchased.

Further information is available by contacting the Auction Information offices in the Wilco Tower, 415 W. Wall St., Suite 812.

Henry Archer of the Dutch firm Hentzh waits his turn at the computerized system that produces a customer-designed greeting card in about 3½ minutes at $3.50 each.

Texas' theme parks appear recession-proof

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas' amusement parks appear recession-proof this summer, with attendance up at Houston's Astroworld and Arlington's Six Flags Over Texas despite a new, successful competitor, FiestaTexas in San Antonio.

Attendance so far this year at Astroworld has increased 10 percent from last year's record crowds, and Six Flags Over Texas had its best spring yet with a 15 percent increase in attendance over last year.

Both parks are having record years despite the emergence of FiestaTexas, which is well on its way reaching its first-year attendance goal of 2 million, said spokeswoman Winter Prosapio.

Nationally, attendance in amusement parks this year is up 1.5 percent over last year, Harrison Price, a financial analyst for the amusement park industry, told the Houston Chronicle in Tuesday's editions.

Price said although theme parks do not reveal their revenue figures, attendance increases generally correlate with revenue increases because what people are spending inside the parks has kept slightly ahead of inflation.

Most of America's amusement parks have been resistant to past recessions.

When Price researched how the recessions of 1975, 1980, and 1982 affected the nation's theme parks, he discovered that most either were unaffected or increased their business.

Bob Pittman, Six Flags' chairman and chief executive officer, said theme parks generally are resistant to recessions because consumers tend to avoid expensive trips during hard economic times.

"People take shorter and more frequent vacations instead of going on a big destination vacation during recessions," Pittman said.

Six Flags, which owns seven theme parks around the country, including Astroworld and Six Flags Over Texas, is having a record year in both attendance and revenues this year, Pittman said.

The only theme parks that suffered in Price's studies of previous recessions were in California and Florida in 1982. Those states rely heavily on tourists from other states.

Price said he thinks a depression might be the only thing that can slow the amusement park industry down.

"The amusement business is like milk," Price said.

New restaurant to hire another 60 employees

By Mella McEwen

ABUELOS, a new Mexican food restaurant and cantina scheduled to open in Midland around Aug. 14, is looking to hire approximately 60 people.

McEwen

The restaurant already has hired 60 people in the first phase of its employment process, mostly people who will be sent to Lubbock for training in such areas as cooking. The second phase will be to hire people who don't need to go to Lubbock for training.

Applications are being accepted at the restaurant, located in the Colonnade at Polo Park shopping center, Loop 250 and Garfield St., next to Chilis.

Owned by a local family, Bobby's will offer hamburgers, french fries, a steak-finger basket and chicken-strip basket.

In addition, it will serve such breakfast items as breakfast burritos and sandwiches with sausage, ham or bacon with eggs and cheese.

Dine-in or carryout is available, phone-in orders are welcome and there is a drive-through window.

***

ADVANTAGE RENT-A-CAR has opened a second location in Midland, at the Midland International Airport terminal. The original location is at 8818 W. Highway 80.

Advantage is an independently-owned car rental company based in San Antonio with locations throughout Arizona, Colorado, Nevada, New Mexico, Texas and Utah.

***

Mike Fleck, who owns the store with wife Cathy, operated the store inside Service Drug for four years and decided to relocate and expand his business.

He offers custom jewelry design and has an extensive inventory of precious stones, colored stones — include those of unusual colors — loose diamonds, mountings, and 14 karat gold earrings and chains, pearls, Pulsar and Ricoh watches, fine crystal and gift items. He also does jewelry repair work and cleaning.

He has been in the jewelry business 20 years.

Hours are from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

***

J.E. BORRON'S, located in Midland Plaza, Loop 250 next to Toys R Us, has closed its ladies department and expanded the men's department.

While the store continues to carry suits, sports jackets and tuxedos, it now carries outdoor wear suitable for hunting or hiking — such as jackets, boots hats and vests. Two lines — Carhart and Columbia — have been added, and a "Timberline Outdoor Shop" established within the store.

The shoe line has been expanded to include casual shoes and hiking boots.

***

The restaurant, which offers home-style country cooking, is now open from 6 a.m. until 9 p.m.

Breakfast is served until 11 a.m., and lunch from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. The restaurant continues to offer daily specials.

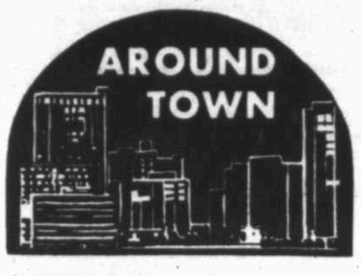

The menu includes such items as catfish, chicken-fried steak, steak fingers, soups and barbecue.

Put a slice in your diet

By Mary MacVean

NEW YORK (AP) — One reason so many diets fail is that dieters feel deprived. So, do yourself a favor and eat some crusty, satisfying bread.

Restaurant diet plates used to include the burger without the bun, and many a diet book recommended asking the waiter to keep the bread basket away from your table.

But whole-grain bread is the opposite of a dieter's scourge. High in complex carbohydrates, it provides fiber and nutrients, as well as a feeling of indulgence. The U.S. Department of Agriculture's food guide pyramid recommends that people get six to 11 servings a day of grains, including bread and pasta.

The most nutrious breads are the least refined, according to the "Mount Sinai School of Medicine Complete Book of Nutrition." But only recently have sturdy whole-grain breads also had such cache.

Because it required the least labor, whole-grain bread historically went to peasants, while the wealthy ate processed bread that was the forerunner of the factory-baked white bread which became an American staple.

The tide is turning, however, as restaurants and bakeries sell more and more hearty sourdough, dense multigrain, and rye breads not stripped of their nutrients.

Many breads are made with no or very little fat, and monitoring fat intake is a useful way to monitor calories. But slather a warm slice of bread with butter or smear cream cheese on a bagel, and you've no longer got a low-fat food.

"It's what you put on the bread that makes it fattening," said Evelina Emmi Rector, general manager at Ecce Panis, one of New York City's best bread bakeries. "I know fat is dreaded, it's like a vampire. Everyone runs away from it."

Ecce Panis makes four breads that have no oil, including a whole wheat currant bread that tastes "wicked."

"My biggest thrill is to have all our really slender customers come talk to people and say, 'Oh, I live on your bread,'" Rector said.

Some baked goods that appear low-calorie may not be: Muffins often are made with quite a bit of oil, for example. Try a bagel instead. If the food leaves an oily spot when left on a napkin, it's likely to be fatty.

And dark breads may seem less refined, but they are not always: The color is sometimes the result of added caramel.

One way to know what to buy is to ask questions at the bakery.

At the supermarket, read ingredient lists. Bread labeled whole wheat must be baked from 100 percent whole wheat flour; bread labeled merely wheat is made from a blend of whole wheat and enriched white flours, according to the Mount Sinai book.

Of course, another way to know what's in the loaf is to bake it. The smell of bread in the oven makes up for the effort of mixing and kneading the dough and waiting for it to rise.

"The greatest pleasure for me still is taking home a loaf of really great bread, and thinking I was able to make that for myself," said Noel Comess, owner of Tom Cat Bakery in New York.

Here's a recipe that is not fat free, but is low in fat and relatively easy to make. It comes from "Feasts & Fetes," by Martha Rose Shulman.

HERBED WHOLE WHEAT BREAD

1 envelope active dry yeast
2 cups lukewarm water
1 tablespoon mild-flavored honey
5 tablespoons safflower oil
1 small onion, minced
1 clove garlic, minced
1 cup plain low-fat yogurt, at room temperature
1 scant tablespoon salt
2 teaspoons dried thyme
2 tablespoons dried dill weed
2 teaspoons dried sage
6 cups whole wheat flour
2 cups unbleached white flour, plus additional for kneading
1 egg, beaten with 2 tablespoons water
dill seeds

Dissolve yeast in lukewarm water in a large bowl. Add honey and let sit for 5 minutes.

Meanwhile, heat 1 tablespoon of the safflower oil in a skillet and saute the onion and garlic, stirring over medium-low heat until the onion is tender. Remove from heat.

Stir yogurt into the yeast mixture, add remaining oil, salt and herbs. Stir in onion and garlic. Whisk in 3 cups of the whole-wheat flour and fold in the rest, 1 cup at a time.

Fold in 1 cup of white flour and place the remaining cup on your kneading surface. Scrape the dough out onto your kneading surface. Knead for 10 minutes, flouring your hands often and using a pastry scaper to scrape up and fold over the dough if it is sticky and hard to work with. When the dough is stiff and elastic, knead it into a ball, wash out and oil your bowl and place the dough in it, seam side up first, then seam side down. Cover with a damp towel or plastic wrap and set in a warm spot to rise for 1½ hours or doubled in bulk.

Punch down the dough and turn it out onto a lightly floured kneading surface. Oil two loaf pans. Knead dough for a minute or two, cut into two equal pieces, and form each piece into a ball. Roll each ball into a loaf shape, and place the loaves in the pans, seam side up first, then seam side down. Cover with a damp towel and set in a warm place to rise until doubled in bulk, or until the dough rises above the edges of the pans, about one hour.

Twenty minutes before you wish to bake, preheat oven to 375 degrees.

Brush the loaves gently with the egg mixture and sprinkle with dill seeds. Brush again, slash the loaves. Bake 45 to 50 minutes, or until they are golden brown and respond to tapping with a hollow thumping sound. Remove from pans and cool on a rack.

Favorite ice cream now in new flavor

By Linda Anderson

Anderson

Although never really what you could call "out of season," ice cream is one of those desserts that naturally seems to go better in summer. I'm not sure why that is, either, because let's face it, ice cream may be a perfect smooth, creamy, frozen treat for hot summer days, but it also melts into sweet slush a lot faster when the temperature is hovering somewhere around 100 degrees.

But never mind all that — ice cream is welcome any time, but especially when the temperature is at its hottest.

Maybe that's why Blue Bell introduced a new ice cream flavor this summer. Chocolate Chip Cookie Dough ice cream is one of the newest flavors to Blue Bell's already extensive and popular family of ice creams. When we heard about this new addition, we knew we had to try it.

I don't know who decided that chocolate chip cookie dough was a natural to pair with ice cream, but it seems to be a trendy flavor these days. I had heard that Ben and Jerry's ice cream had tried it, and then Dairy Queen introduced its cookie dough Blizzards (which is a line of ice cream desserts carried by that particular fast-food chain — and maybe a whole 'nother column), so I guess this is the year for cookie dough ice cream.

Now, I love cookie dough as much as the next baby boomer, but I have to admit I never thought about eating homemade cookie dough with ice cream (everyone knows you eat it with your fingers), so I did wonder about the wisdom of this pairing. In spite of my questions, I bought a half-gallon of the ice cream and took it home so my kids and I could try it.

Price for a half-gallon of Blue Bell ice cream usually runs about $4. I think the Chocolate Chip Cookie Dough ice cream I bought cost $3.88. Usually I wait until Blue Bell is on sale — two for $5 — before stocking up, but this was an exception to that rule.

Label advertising is very limited on Blue Bell ice cream cartons — just a paragraph or two that discusses the quality of the ingredients and something about the manufacturers eating all they can and selling the rest. I guess the ice cream's reputation is enough. It sure is for me.

In the taste test, the children agreed that the ice cream was delicious — it was the cookie dough in it that they didn't like. Both of them reached the point of eating the ice cream and picking out the lumps of cookie dough. I haven't reached that point yet — the cookie dough itself is kinda tasty — but I'm still debating with myself about the wisdom of teaming unbaked cookie dough with ice cream.

Stay tuned...

DEAR ABBY

Long and short of an underwear mystery revealed

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Last night, after my 6-year-old son's bath, he looked at me very perplexed and asked, "Why does Mom always turn my underwear inside out when she washes them?" (I confessed I didn't know.)

Van Buren

This morning, I cackled when I read the letter in your column from the 62-year-old California man who pondered why his boxer shorts turned inside out in the washing machine! I read the letter to my son when he woke up, and he laughed while nodding in agreement with your writer.

I decided to take a lesson from my youngster and my elder, and quit worrying so much about cash flow, taxes, deadlines, politics, etc., and contemplate the serious issues that face us. Why does underwear turn inside out in the washer? — ROBERT J. JESSEE, JOHNSON CITY, TENN.

DEAR ROBERT JESSEE: I was not aware that the mystery of the inside-out shorts was so universal. An astonishing number of male readers wrote to say that they were secretly perplexed by the same phenomenon. A faithful reader of the Orange County (Calif.) Register submitted the following:

DEAR ABBY: Boy, did you ever leave "Richard Thomas, Tracy, Calif." hanging out to dry — about his boxer shorts that mysteriously turned inside out in the washing machine.

Regarding this universal problem, you merely questioned his perception of whether or not, in fact, his shorts were actually inside out, as opposed to right side out, when placed in the washing machine in the first place.

Now, this problem must be taken very seriously because it used to be very frustrating for me, too. I eventually came up with the perfect solution — "wear and wash." That is, wear 'em as you wash 'em!

Other than for environmental considerations, a good place to wash them would be Yellowstone Park because the water is already warm. The ocean is a no-no because you can't get very good suds in salt water. And remember — don't starch shorts! — CARL PRICKETT, PLACENTIA, CALIF.

DEAR CARL: Let's hear it from a Minneapolis reader — from the distaff side:

DEAR ABBY: I'm sure that 62-year-old man whose boxer shorts come out of the washing machine inside out has made a point to put them in the machine right side out.

The same thing happens to women's underpants, depending on how the machine agitates the clothes. This happens more often with our new machine, so now I put them in inside out. It works. — MARIETTA KEMP

DEAR ABBY: In answer to the gentleman who has been washing his own clothes, and wonders why his boxer undershorts come out of the machine inside out: The same thing happens when I wash my husband's shorts.

I have come to the conclusion that it has something to do with the weight of the waistband. The action of the water pulls the heavier weight to the outside, and the lighter material just follows through. This is the same principle discovered by Sir Isaac Newton, who gave us the laws of motion and theory of gravitation. — SCIENCE MAJOR, VERMONT U., BURLINGTON, VT.

WHAT! NEWSPAPER ROUTES?

That's right...one of the best part-time income supplements around. Doesn't conflict with your 'day job.' Doesn't require day care. And it's dependable income.

The catch? You've gotta be able to handle early mornings and weekends! And when you take a few days off, you'll need to find a substitute for yourself.

So...are you serious about MOONLIGHTING, or what? If you are, and you have dependable transportation and can put up a $100 deposit...

Call 688-2700 and start making that extra car payment today!

WE ARE NOW Accepting Applications for Servers for all shifts. No experience required. But friendly personality is a MUST! Apply in person after 3 p.m. at Texas Grill, 4132 W. Wall.
