Recount Gains One More Vote For Candidate Rachel Garcia

A recount of ballots cast in Pcts. 1 and 1A in the June 7 run-off elections gave one more vote to county commission candidate Rachel Garcia -- but the matter isn't settled yet, according to Mrs. Garcia.

Asked if she was satisfied with the results of the recount, Mrs. Garcia told The Pilot that her attorneys were checking into the matter and she "couldn't comment too much on it."

In the meantime, Lola L. Bonner, Rockport attorney and chairman of the Aransas County Democratic Party, denied allegations that there were irregularities in the June 7 election and said nothing was done that was not in compliance with the Texas Election Code and directives from the office of the Secretary of State.

Miss Bonner said Mrs. Garcia came to her (Miss Bonner's) office Saturday night, June 7, after the election results were posted and asked what steps she should take to obtain a recount.

Mrs. Garcia lost the election -- according to unofficial Saturday night returns -- by a count of 294 votes to 306 votes for opponent John M. Lee.

"I gave her the toll-free phone number of the Secretary of State's office," Miss Bonner said. On Monday morning, Mrs. Garcia filed for a recount and Lee was notified of this filing, in accordance with election laws.

A recount committee, consisting of Don Kramer, chairman, Gertrude Ramirez and Faye Henderson, was appointed by the Democratic Executive Committee. The recount committee was asked to meet at 5 p.m. Thursday, June 12, in Miss Bonner's office to receive instructions.

Lee and Mrs. Garcia were both invited to this meeting, Miss Bonner continued. Lee did not attend, but Mrs.

'Watcher' Problems Reported From Pct. 3

Problems in Aransas County's June 7 run-off elections have raised questions of what action -- if any -- can be taken against a poll

Catherine Childers' "Morning Magazine" program, which is seen on Channel Three out of Corpus Christi, will feature a "Rockport Day" on Monday, June 30.

watcher who exceeds his authority under the Texas Election Code.

"We don't know if there is any recourse," says Lola L. Bonner, Rockport attorney and chairman of the Aransas County Democratic Party. "We've never had a watcher problem before."

The problem was reported in Precinct 3 where Gary Deason, a poll watcher for commission candidate Jimmy Woods Jr., is alleged to have exceeded his authority while the polls were open.

Among allegations against Deason is that he asked for additional identification of voters who did not have their voter registration cards.

"In every election," said Pct. 3 Election Judge Gertrude Ball, "you have people who forget to bring their voter registration cards."

The names of all registered voters in a county are on the voter registration list which the judge has, she said. Procedure under Texas election laws calls for a voter without a registration card to sign an affidavit to the effect that he or she is registered to vote.

The name on the affidavit is then checked against the voter registration list and the person, if their name is indeed on the list, is allowed to vote.

But, Mrs. Ball said, Deason challenged these people by asking for additional identification such as driver's license or credit card.

Under election laws, a poll watcher does not have this authority, she said.

"He (Deason) did a lot of things outside his province," Mrs. Ball said, adding that, as election judge, she has the right to bar anyone from the polling station who is disrupting the election.

Final Stage Of Census Work Started In Aransas County

By Eddie Bradley

According to officials with the Census Bureau, that organization is beginning its third and final push to gather data for the 1980 census.

Minnie Martinez, a Field Operator Assistant from Bay City, and Nancy Clayton, a Senior Office Clerk with the Kelly Field office in San Antonio, were in town last week to explain the next step in the project to count the heads of all Americans.

On April first the initial part of the census began when questionnaires were mailed out and then returned.

The second phase of the program, called Follow-Up I, ran from April 16 to May 15 and involved enumerators going out to check on the people who had not responded to the original questionnaire.

The third and last segment of the census program began on June 16 and is called Follow-Up II. This third step is divided into two phases: Phase One involves enumerators going back and making sure that all the homes which were originally listed as vacant really were, or if there had been occupants, why they hadn't been heard from.

Phase One also involves a canvassing of the area to see if any new houses and buildings have been constructed since last year's survey.

Phase Two of project Follow-Up II will feature a campaign called, "Were You Counted?," which is scheduled to get underway on June 27.

The "Were You Counted?" project will seek to

GONE FISHIN'

Stella Cox was recently down from San Antonio to do a little fishing and soak up a little sunshine. She was doing both on Fulton Beach Road. She said that this was one of her favorite spots and on previous trips she had done well there. She hadn't yet gotten any fish on this day, but didn't seem too unhappy about it.

WASHING DOWN THE HARBOR

Kenneth Rogers went shrimping last Thursday, June 19, but his trip was cut much shorter than he had anticipated. Apparently one of the fuel lines on his vehicle broke while it was parked at the dock and fuel began spilling out on the ground. Someone alerted notified officials, and fire units came to the rescue. One of them plugged the line and then the auto was moved to a location away from the boats and other vehicles. Firemen then thoroughly washed down the dock area. Rogers was notified of what happened by radio and headed back in to take care of his car.

THE NATIONAL TRUST FOR HISTORIC PRESERVATION may not be a very interesting subject for a column. We shall see.

To begin with, mention preservation of an old building in any town and at least half the population will be for it, but until mention is made 95 percent of the people have never given it a thought. In a small town, chances are that most have passed the building every day and never before given it a thought.

But suddenly, especially if demolition is threatened, saving the structure becomes a crusade. Yes, I've seen it happen! On the other hand, the National Trust, nationwide, has a piddling membership of a mere 160,000.

AMONG OTHER REASONS FOR MENTIONING the trust is that the current issue of its bimonthly magazine "Historic Preservation," a beautiful slick with photography that matches the Texas Parks & Wildlife mag, carries a feature by a former Texan titled "The Texas Nobody Knows."

It is an account of more than just old homes. It deals with our changing culture and dwells upon the ethnic backgrounds of the people, Anglo-Saxon, Spanish, Mexican, Negro, German, Polish, Czech and French. In so doing it covers the state from the southern border to San Antonio.

Or does it? There's a quick stop at the King Ranch, and then the sweep to San Antonio, west then to the Hill Country and on to West Texas, the while observing the people and architecture. Anyone see anything wrong?

TEXAS HAS A 450-MILE LONG COASTLINE, BUT left to the author of "The Texas Nobody Knows," the state might just as well be in the geographical location of Kansas.

Galveston, where there is some of the most extensive restoration of old homes in the state, doesn't get a line.

Nor is there mention of any of the old and sometimes quaint buildings at Palacios, Rockport, old light houses -- a list that might go on forever.

And what of the old missions, particularly La Bahia? And people. Have the Irish colonists played no part in Texas history? Or are they lumped with what the author refers to as the Anglo-Americans.

Anglo-Americans? I'm inclined to think the writer used the term in reference to white citizens of the United States who immigrated to Texas before and after the Civil War.

Also used is the term Mexican-American, logical enough, except that it is acceptable to some citizens who have come from Mexico, and to others not. There are those who most emphatically prefer Chicano, and so on.

ALL OF THIS MAY APPEAR TO BE CRITICAL OF the National Trust or, some may say, just nit-picking. It may be a bit of both. Yet I hold the Trust in high esteem in many respects. It must always be credited with the preservation of many fine old buildings that might otherwise have been bulldozed into oblivion.

Yet I must again be critical. Perusing "Historic Preservation" month after month, I am left with a feeling that virtually anything more than 50 years old should not be destroyed, not at least if it has any architectural or historic merit at all.

But one must wonder, if all such structures are to be saved year after year, how long will it be before the landscape is cluttered with preserved old homes that stir only local pride and sense of history?

The idea is fine enough if hometown folks are interested enough to fund the project or individuals elect to do their jobs independently because of interest in restoring an old dwelling for themselves. Galveston again, is a splendid example of this.

Nor do I fault those who take it upon themselves to restore old buildings or homes as inns or shops.

But when it comes to securing government grants I am obliged to say that such should never be, unless the place is of national significance. The home of a former President, as an example.

MUCH IS MADE OF OLD RAILROAD STATIONS that have "been saved." Most if not all have been built since the turn of the century. There have been those who have created "quaint" homes from old stations. They are proud of the still-remaining tracks that are a handshake's distance from the railroad platform which they have turned into a patio.

And there are other individuals who have turned station houses into museums, shops and offices. Splendid. Usually the railroad has sold them for a song, glad to be rid of them, and the new owners have often spent small fortunes restoring--although they have usually been very careful not to allow anyone to mistake the exterior as a station--even to maintaining the famous yellow paint.

Logically, inside, I would suppose that the old ticket window has just naturally become the bar. But waiting rooms have necessarily been chopped into bedrooms, dining rooms, kitchens--the usual thing in a home.

All this speaks of individual pride, enterprise and imagination.

For all of this I have a fear, at least a fear for these now owners of station houses. The railroad rights-of-way must still remain at their doorsteps and somehow if the country is to survive, the railroad must return. And then?

There is romance in the whistle or hoot of a train in the distance, but I suspect it will take some getting used to when an express goes roaring past one's bedroom every few hours.

Better think of that if you're considering a station house home. All that in the future? Time was when the future was "50 years from now." Today it's every hour on the hour.--ahah (C.M. Henkel)

"Low Down" FROM THE Congressional Record

By JOE CRUMP

Representative Joe Moakley (Mass.)...The housing depression which we are now experiencing will put many home-building firms out of business and cause severe hardship for the families of carpenters, bricklayers, plumbers and other construction tradesmen who will be out of work.

"It will affect all business related to housing--appliance manufacturers, household good makers and so forth."

"The bill (H.R. 7353, The Individual Housing Account Act of 1980) which I am introducing today would assist individuals and married couples who wish to purchase their 'starter' home by allowing them a deduction of up to $2,500 per year for an individual and up to $5,000 per year for a married couple for funds placed in an individual housing account."

"The account itself would not be taxed. (This measure extends a tax exemption for interest and dividends earned on savings deposits which are used for residential mortgage purposes.)"

"However, any amounts paid out of an individual housing account and not used for their intended purpose would be taxed and in addition, would be subject to a 10-percent penalty."

"Individual housing accounts would be required to be maintained at institutions which are in the business of providing mortgage financing for the purchase of single family homes...

"Funds in an individual housing account must be distributed within 10 years of the establishment of an account in connection with the purchase of an individual's or married couple's principal residence."

"However, since the amounts in the account were acquired tax free by the taxpayer, the bill provides that on the sale of said principal residence, the owner must recognize the original down payment as a capital gain."

"The Individual Housing Account Act of 1980 will help provide the large number of moderate income Americans in their twenties and thirties with a means to enter the housing market."

"As such it represents a well-considered method of alleviating the expected housing shortage of the 1980's and giving young Americans an opportunity to realize the dream of home ownership."

CRUMP'S GRASS ROOTS COMMENT "Principle residence" would indicate that the "starter home" would, not of necessity, have to be new construction. In that case the Individual Housing Account Act of 1980 would help sell small older houses.

State Of The Region

By Juliet K. Wenger Coastal Bend Council of Governments

Arson is described as one of the fastest growing crimes across the nation.

But some of the officers in fire departments of the Coastal Bend feel that many more fires are being identified as arson because we now have the technology to determine the fact that the fire was set deliberately. Until the last few years, most investigations ended with calling it a fire of undetermined origin.

Debris from the fires can be taken to crime laboratories, which can now determine whether or not a flammable material had been used to encourage flames.

That doesn't mean that determining who set the fire or proving it is any easier once arson is established. This is still described as the felony most difficult to prove.

Arson is often a crime of emotion, retaliation. Firemen are concerned, now, that it will be used more frequently as an economic weapon. As the economy worsens, more property owners may use fire as a last resort to turn debts into cash.

Detection and investigation of arson were the subject of a two-day crime school held recently in Beeville by the COG's Fire Protection Advisory Committee and A&M University. Volunteers as well as paid firemen are being brought up to date on the rapid advances in technology.

At the same time, they are working to keep up with expanded knowledge, the firemen from all the departments have banded together across the state and opened a fire museum.

The museum is at Grand Prairie, near Six Flags. The building is elaborate, originally built by Paramount studios as a wax museum of sports figures. There, vacationers can follow the history of fire fighting in Texas through the horse drawn pumpers, converted ladder trucks and grease pots that once oiled the wagon wheels.

Every department, down the smallest organization of volunteers, is contributing in some way to this ambitious project. One of the ways that Texas is remarkable is the number of fire departments manned by volunteers.

Eighty percent of the firemen in Texas are Volunteers, eight out of 10. These men, and a few women, give their time at convenient, or inconvenient hours, to protect or save their neighbors' property. And they give more of their time, often using their vacations, to go to fire schools.

Today, as more of these volunteers are completing courses of study and being certified, the key rate is being lowered in small communities and rural areas.

This means insurance costs are less where the firemen are trained up to a high standard.

A part of the training is what methods to use in fighting fires in which various chemicals are involved. In the Coastal Bend 20 years ago, firemen were taught to deal with 81 chemicals. Today, there are more than 2,000 in plants, stores, and other areas where flames might reach.

There is a hot line they can call to get immediate information from the manufacturer about properties of a chemical.

Firemen are banded together in a state association which works for legislation they consider to be to their benefit. At present, the state association is concentrating on passing a state-wide fire code through the next legislature.

Larger cities now have fire codes as a part of the Southern Building Code, but less populated areas do not have regulations that reduce such fire hazards as faulty electrical systems.

Volunteers are always needed. Now there is a special need for volunteer with degrees in such fields as chemistry and electrical engineering.

And some of our firemen are even contributing more time and effort by enrolling in fire technology courses now available at Bee County College and Del Mar.

Relationship of social activities and contacts to the ability of the aged to remain independent and productive will be one of the topics discussed at a Coastal Bend Council of Governments workshop.

The workshop will be held at Coleman Center, Del Mar College West, in Corpus Christi on June 27 from 1-5 p.m.

Dr. Leslie R. Fricke, chairman of the Department of Mental Health at Del Mar, will coordinate the workshop. There will be sessions on the need for social activities in the community and in nursing homes, planning and financing activities, and types of activities, active and passive, large and small group.

The workshop is open to the public without charge. Reservations may be made by calling the Council of Governments at 883-5743.

Eyes And Answers

SOME SIMPLY CAN'T Dear Dr. Petty: I'm so disappointed! I had my heart set on having contacts and getting rid of my glasses after seventeen years. My optometrist just said I was not a good candidate for them.

Count yourself as fortunate! You could have had immeasurable difficulty striving to wear them had he not been so straightforward with you. Then you would have lost confidence in the doctor, your money would have been spent, and you would be displeased.

In the early days of contacts, some practitioners predicted contacts would replace all spectacles. But the further we progressed in our knowledge about them, the more we realized there was a lot more to the field than we thought.

The shape of the cornea (eye front surface) is frequently so curved that comfortable wear is near impossible. Sometimes clear vision cannot be achieved. Flow of tears under the lenses can be difficult, robbing the cornea of its absolutely necessary lubrication and of oxygen so vital to a clear and healthy cornea.

Some people are allergic to the plastic used in the lens material. In that regard, however, soft, porous contacts have proved satisfactory for some patients when the firm lenses cannot be used. Comfort is sometimes also enhanced with soft lenses.

Despite all that, just think of the millions of people in the world who wear contacts in perfect comfort, clear vision, and complete satisfaction. I think especially of the post-operative cataract patient to whom contacts are truly a blessing--no heavy weight on the face and far less glare of lights that is so bothersome with strong spectacle lenses.

I don't know if it would really save money or not. Everyone is used to getting it on Saturday.

Laverne Cawthon,

West Terrace
I like my Saturday mail. I don't think I would like to see it stopped.

Sandy Leland,

San Antonio
I disagree. Everybody needs their mail on Saturday like every other day.

Steve Brown,

Simulator Puts Students 'Behind The Wheel'

By Pat Blair

You're driving across a narrow bridge. There's a railing on your right and an approaching car in the lane to your left. Suddenly a car pulls out in front of you --

The screen goes dark.

What did you do?

What's the next question asked if you're one of the Rockport-Fulton High School students taking driver education training this summer.

What you've just been doing is "driving" one of the computerized simulator cars in the Drivotrainer trailer.

Provided by AETNA, the Drivotrainer program gives students additional "behind-the-wheel" training through the use of the computerized stationary "cars" -- whose controls function exactly as they do in real cars -- and 16 films.

The films start with an introduction to the Drivotrainer and continue through a "Crash Avoidance" film that "makes the students feel like targets," says Skip Richardson, one of the two simulator instructors.

The "Crash Avoidance" film, shown this last Wednesday, June 18, was the climax of the simulator course for driver education students. From now through July, students will be finishing up with the classroom work and actual behind-the-wheel training.

In addition to Richardson, Carl Stracener also taught the simulator courses for six hours each day. Both men also do behind-the-wheel instruction.

Other instructors in the driver training program at the school are Teresa Denard, classroom instruction, and Vernon Denman, classroom and behind-the-wheel instruction.

Students to enroll in the course must be at least 15 years of age when they begin the course, says RFHS Principal Chester Barre. After they complete six hours of the course they can apply for a temporary driver's permit which allows them to operate a motor vehicle if accompanied by an adult.

No student can drive solo until he or she is at least 16 years of age.

Students in the drivers education course receive 30 hours of classroom instruction, one hour each day in the simulator and three hours of actual behind-the-wheel training -- plus nine hours in the car as an observer.

The advantage of the simulator is that it confronts the student with situations he may not face during his or her time behind the wheel.

For example, Richardson pointed out, one of the simulator films deals with expressway driving.

Students don't get much expressway driving except on the simulator, Richardson said, because the nearest expressways -- in Corpus Christi -- are too far away.

Other lessons on the simulator deal with driving in bad weather conditions, such as ice and snow, and how to drive in wet weather.

And films like the one on crash avoidance deal with situations the student should know how to handle -- but which the instructor wouldn't want to encounter in actual behind-the-wheel training.

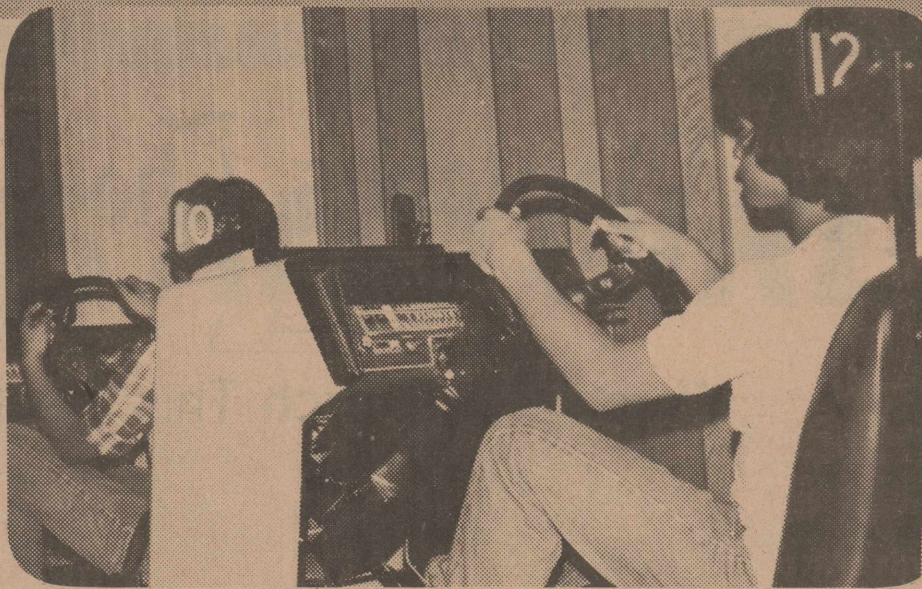

The Drivotrainer program is provided through the Region II Education Service Center of Corpus Christi and is set up to handle 16 students at a time. Each group of students received an hour of instruction daily with simulator classes beginning at 7 a.m. and continuing until 5 p.m.

Students usually were shown two films during each hour-long class session, Richardson said.

By the way -- getting back to the problem presented at the beginning -- the one where the car is pulling out in front of you across the bridge.

The correct reaction to this situation according to the training film is to brake and hold the steering wheel straight.

What would you have done?

Dr. Lutz is a graduate of Baltimore City College and Texas A&M University. He specializes in small and exotic animal practice. He was an instructor of small animal diseases and surgery in the Veterinary School at Texas A&M and was in private practice in Waco for 25 years.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Dear Dr. Lutz: I live on Copano Ridge. Since school is out, my friends and I swim in Copano Bay every day.

My dog swims with me and really enjoys it. However, I have noticed that he seems to scratch excessively for hours after each swim.

Do you think the salt water is bad for his skin? -- Perry.

Dear Perry: Salt water is excellent for a dog's skin.

However, after the swim, if you will hose all the salt water off his hair coat -- and also his skin -- you will notice the dog's scratching will be greatly reduced.

Tuesday afternoon, social hour for the residents was highlighted by stereo and taped music to go along with sherbet punch.

On Tuesday evening, the Pruitt Family and members of Aransas Pass Pentecostal Church presented a program of songs for the residents.

Wednesday afternoon saw visits by several "regulars" at the Center, including Delma Rogers and Sandra Lee. Thursday was the day for the weekly Bingo party, sponsored by ladies from Aransas Pass Lodge #307.

On Friday morning, Frankie, Lyla and Lisa, Frankie's granddaughter, conducted the weekly painting class.

A Friend At Headquarters

sents millions of responsible people enjoying that common good.

Respect for Law and the desire for Order must be gained in childhood. Having a "friend at headquarters" helps.

But the heart of the matter is our early discovery of God. His love for us... His expectations of us... the hopes and promises that give life its highest meaning.

Headquarters for moral and spiritual growth is the Church, with its program of religious education. There can be found our most enriching friendships.

Cooking For One

By Pat Blair

More and more people are learning that being a single doesn't condemn you to hamburgers, hot dogs and three meals a week at the local fast-food joint.

Even someone who's all thumbs in the kitchen can throw together a filling, fairly nutritious meal -- one that doesn't cost much per serving and provides enough leftovers for another dinner or two later.

One "secret" -- if there are any secrets -- is making use of skillet dinners. . . either ready-to-use from the grocery shelf or a blend of your own ingredients. You buy -- and cook -- in quantity, eat what you want tonight, and freeze the rest for later.

Most, if not all, skillet dinners keep very well in the freezer. Freeze your leftovers in individual-serving size bowls -- that way, your dinner is pre-measured for you the next time. (It's the TV-dinner principle -- and much better-tasting.)

Add a salad, bread, fruit for dessert if you like -- and you've got yourself a home-cooked meal. Another advantage to most skillet meals is that they don't take much more time than you'd spend waiting for a hamburger at the take-out place around the corner.

The recipe below is for a "do-it-yourself" skillet "taco." It's easy to put together with packaged taco seasoning mix and frozen corn, and you can round out the meal with guacamole salad, tortillas and iced tea.

SKILLET TACO

- 1 lb. ground beef
- 1 package taco seasoning mix
- 1 package frozen corn
- Package tortilla chips
- Mild colby cheese (or mild cheddar or Monterey Jack), shredded
- Brown beef in large (10-inch) skillet. Add seasoning mix and water (add about one-quarter cup more water than seasoning mix calls for). When mixture starts boiling, add corn. Continue boiling, uncovered, stirring frequently, until mixture is moist but very little liquid remains.

To serve: Crumble tortilla chips onto a plate. Top with desired amount of taco mixture, then top this with

The Shepherd's Staff

Mankind's life is divided into two categories, two and two only. First is spiritual matters and the second is social matters.

Spirituality is man's relation with God; social matters are man's relation with man. These two things comprise all of man's existence.

Of course, both of these categories are divided into subdivisions--two subdivisions to be precise. These two subdivisions offset each other. The subdivisions are: obligations and privileges.

Speaking spiritually, everything is either moral or immoral. Speaking socially, everything is either legal or illegal. All of the animal nature of man falls under the social and all of the freewill things about man fall under the spiritual.

There is an overlapping of the spiritual into the social where the spirituality of one person or a group of persons affects the activities of another person or group of persons. But we will not need to occupy ourselves with that aspect of the spirituality of mankind at this time.

We won't because, as the saying goes, if we take care of the individual, everything else falls into place. Conversely, if we do not take care of the individual, everything else goes to pot.

Looking into the subdivisions of "obligations and privileges," we see that mankind has definite obligations to his Creator. Basically, he must conduct his affairs in a moral way. He must reject the immoral things he comes in contact with.

If one does conduct his life embracing the things that are moral and rejecting the things that are immoral, then he meets his basic obligation to God and is accorded all sorts of privileges.

Since these privileges are in the category of spirituality, the rewards are generally in the area of spirituality -- but not always. Sometimes the reward is in the area of the material or social world.

However, whether there is any material gain or not, there is always spiritual gain of proportions that far outweigh the effort. God will not be outdone!

All of the material needs of Man, the real material needs, are taken care of by rote reflexes he possesses just like other animals. More specifically, like the warm-blooded animals -- dogs, cats, whales. When Man is hungry, he is reminded to eat, just like his fellow living organisms of this planet.

Now let's look at what just this one rote reflex reaction to eating has caused man to do within his social structure. First, it caused him to gather himself into groups for a more effective method of acquiring food.

Then it caused him to specialize, so that those with more talent could provide for those with less talent in that area. Just around this drive to satisfy his hunger, man created society in general. Everything else about society flows from that one simple thing, hunger. Our cities, our specialization, everything.

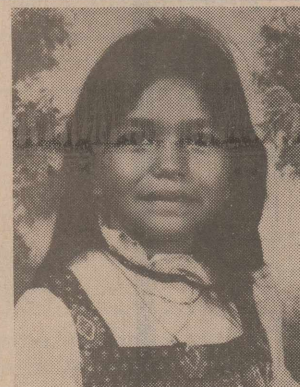

In the area of spirituality, there is one paramount drive. That drive is for the salvation of the immortal soul. Everything else about spirituality flows from that one thing.

Eternity and the satisfying of one's hunger addresses itself to the next few hours, we really can't begin to get much of a correlation between these two things, can we?

Yet there they are, the two most important things in the two areas of man's life. This oversimplification of a complex matter clearly illustrates just how inferior the affairs of the flesh are to the affairs of the soul.

It is both important and necessary that you keep your proper sense of values as you make your way through this jungle of life.

God love you!

While on vacation last summer at a lake in Mississippi we got into conversation with an old-timer who rented boats. When we asked him if many people used his boats for fishing, he drawled, "Well, yes, some people fish." Then: "And some people catch fish." After a pause he added, "And some people just drown the worms."

At a Horn & Hardart automat during the breakfast rush the man ahead of me asked the server for the lone piece of dried-up French toast left in the warming tray. She refused to give it to him, telling him firmly that a fresh batch would be along any minute. Just as firmly the man replied that he would take it anyway. The woman, adamant, said he must wait for the fresh toast. Exasperated, the man retorted, "Look, lady, if I'd wanted a fight for breakfast, I'd have stayed home!"

INCREDIBLE BUT TRUE!

It has long been known that, in times of extreme stress, the human body is capable of feats of unbelievable strength. This was documented in 1960 by a 123-pound woman in Tampa, Florida. The woman, Mrs. Maxwell Rogers, lifted one end of a 3,600 pound car after it had fallen on top of her son when the jack holding up the car slipped. She suffered only a few cracked vertebrae as a result of her efforts.

The oldest surviving working clock, still ticking away, is at Salisbury Cathedral in Wiltshire, England. The works date from 1386, possibly earlier. When restored in 1956, it was estimated that the clock had ticked more than 500 million times.

Sometimes a watch can withstand severe punishment and still come up ticking. Such was the case with Donald Belcher of Hunt, West Virginia. He lost his Timex while at work in a coal mine. Two months later, the Timex was found in a roadway. Heavy equipment and machinery had run over it many times, but when Belcher wound it, it started ticking again and, he reports, still keeps good time.

The Orient must be doing something right. A Korean boy, Kim Ung-Yeo Seoul, has the highest I.Q. ever recorded: 210. And the highest average I.Q. of a national population is 106.6 for the Japanese.

"The Wanderers" 1979

Cheryl used to really amaze me . . .

She'd come home after an all day shopping spree with a ton of packages. To look at her, you'd think she had all the money in the world! She was always in style while I wore the same old standbys. I was baffled . . . our paychecks were comparable — so, how did she do it?

She said she only buys bargains . . . bargains she finds in the newspaper, saving money on every purchase. Knowing when and where to buy was her secret . . . and with the newspaper she had absolutely no trouble.

Now I've discovered my own dollar stretchers in the Summer Homemaking Underway

By Beverly Wilken
Between the hours of 8 a.m. and 12 p.m. each Monday through Friday, Rockport-Fulton High School Homemaking teacher, Frances Mutscher is conducting clothing construction classes.

A Texas Education Agency program, the clothing classes will last for two weeks.

"There is no charge for the class," said Ms. Mutscher. "The students furnish their own supplies and come and go during the class time."

Ms. Mutscher also conducts a playschool for preschool age children from 1 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, in the homemaking classroom. There is no charge for the playschool, "depending on what supplies we have here in the classroom," said Ms. Mutscher.

The summer phase of the homemaking classes are an extension of homemaking education beyond the regular school term. It offers additional skills and competencies in various areas which would consume excessive amounts of time during the school year.

A minimum of 20 youths and/or adults must be enrolled in the program to justify the extended employment of the homemaking teacher.

Students may work on a credit or non-credit basis.

Students participating in the program this summer are: Dolores Villarreal, Carla Perkins, Tammy Anderson, Gloria Lara, Diana Torres, Loretta Lewis, Dorothy Arjona, Velma Rodriguez, Terri Estes and Jayne Meyer.

Also, Pam Walls, Yvonne Riojas, Carla Schuenemann, Causha Watkins, Toni Simpson, Jane Aleman, Jane Saucedo, Gina Guillet, Kathy Brownlee, Melissa Villa, Debbie Campney, Ly Nguyen and Susan Cole.

Incoming ninth grade students participating are: Herlinda Solis, Dana Hayes, Priscilla Garza, Diane Ramirez, Leticia Zepeda, Sandra Mott and Sue Tumlison.

Children who attend the playschool are: Devon Hill, Connie Riojas, Hector Salinas, Dafne Hill and Keri Richards.

SUMMER SEWING

Homemaking teacher Frances Mutscher teaches summer sewing student Priscilla Garza, an incoming ninth grader at Rockport-Fulton High School, how to handle material while using a sewing machine.
