From Staff and Wire Reports

The threat of snow won't be very serious in the Permian Basin area during the next 24 hours although the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is forecasting a 20 percent chance of light snow through Friday.

"No measurable amounts of snow are expected, we're only forcasting trace amounts," a forecaster said this morning. "The brunt of the snow will be in the North Texas area where they're expected to get up to three inches," he said.

Driving conditions Friday morning could be hazardous, the forecaster said. "Spots of ice may form if we receive additional precipitation." A travelers advisory is in effect through Friday.

Cold weather will continue here for the next several days. Tonight's lows will be in the lower teens, warming only to highs in the mid-20s Friday, the National Weather Service said. Temperatures are expected to remain cold through the weekend but will gradually warm to an expected high of 50 by Monday, the forecaster said.

Wednesday's high of 66 was 14 degrees below the record set in 1971. This morning's low of 13 was 3 degrees above the record low of 10 set in 1951.

STATE

Snow, sleet and freezing drizzle blanketed most of Texas today, and weather forecasters said the newest winter storm to hit the state would stay around for days.

"It doesn't look like there's going to be a break in this until Sunday or Monday," said James Ott, meteorologist for the National Weather Service in Fort Worth. "It could be the longest cold spell that we've had this year."

Virtually the entire state was under a winter storm watch, and chill factors under zero were common because of northerly winds that gusted up to 20 and 30 mph.

Roads were reported extremely slick and hazardous this morning in many areas this morning where only light precipitation had occurred so far. Freezing drizzle and sleet overnight glazed a number of highways and overpasses with a thin coating of ice. Light snow that followed, added to the already treacherous driving conditions.

The heaviest snows during the early hours of the storm fell in the Panhandle and in North Texas, along the Red River.

More than 2 inches of snow fell overnight in Wichita Falls, with drifts up to a foot.

From Staff and Wire Reports

AUSTIN — House Speaker Gib Lewis, hailing a compromise that officials said clears the way for the Stacy Dam in West Texas, says both sides in the dispute should be credited for helping save statewide water legislation.

With the breakthrough on the dam, a Midland legislator predicted the water package may go to the House floor as early as next week.

The warring parties in the dam case, the Lower Colorado River Authority and the upstream Colorado River Municipal Water District, on Wednesday announced a pact under which they will share river water so the dam and reservoir can be built.

That concession by the LCRA, which previously had fought the dam all the way to the Texas Supreme Court, was demanded by West Texas lawmakers who promised to oppose the $600 million statewide water plan unless the dam is built.

"Even though each side cannot be fully satisfied, they realize the importance of a comprehensive statewide water plan," Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said of the Stacy Dam compromise.

"As we all know, without a comprehensive water plan I think the outlook for the future is not what we would all like for it to be," Lewis said.

The statewide water plan would provide $600 million in bond revenue for a variety of water development and conservation projects.

The plan's sponsor, Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, said he expects his House Natural Resources Committee to send the bill to the House floor early next week.

Craddick, who was among those urging the Stacy Dam compromise, said opposition from West Texans would have doomed the water plan.

"I think if you get one area of the state like that against the plan, I think you're pretty well dead before you start. So I think we'd have been in trouble in the vote," he said.

The Stacy Dam and reservoir on the Colorado would provide water for Midland, Odessa, Big Spring, San Angelo and other West Texas cities.

A permit for its construction was issued by the Texas Water Commission in 1979, but the Supreme Court overturned it on Nov. 14, 1984, saying the state water department lacked the authority to grant permits when its own records showed that the supply would come from water already spoken for downstream.

Although the Supreme Court later sent the case back to the water agency for further action, Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, and other West Texas legislators tied their support of the water plan to the Stacy Dam.

"If we can't build Stacy or other upstream projects, I don't see what's in it for West Texas," Jones said two weeks ago.

On Wednesday, LCRA board chairman John W. Jones said the compromise will allow the LCRA and the Colorado River Municipal Water District to share water. Dispite the LCRA's earlier contentions there wasn't enough water to go around, Jones said he believes the new plan will succeed.

"The Lower Colorado River will supply and will share water sufficient to satisfy the anticipated demand of the proposed Stacy Dam and reservoir. In return, the Colorado River Municipal Water District will, under certain circumstances, release water back to the LCRA," he said.

The LCRA board on Tuesday voted 8-2 to accept the compromise after being pressured to reach a settlement by Gov. Mark White and other state officials.

Senate panel studying U.S. foreign policy

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee, under a new chairman, is launching a six-week review of U.S. foreign policy that could provide clues on whether President Reagan plans major shifts in his second term.

The leadoff witnesses are two of Reagan's principal advisers, Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger. Policy conflicts between the two sometimes marked Reagan's first term.

On tap, as well, for future testimony were former Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger, former secretaries of state Alexander Haig and Cyrus Vance, and Richard Allen, a former White House national security adviser.

Together, they will provide a cross-section of the views of the past three administrations, Republican and Democratic.

The incoming chairman, Sen. Richard Lugar, an Indiana Republican with a moderate-to-conservative outlook, said last week he hoped to re-establish unity among Americans in dealing with world problems.

"The foreign policy consensus that we seek is not simply one of a few dedicated senators but a coming together of the American people at the grass roots," Lugar said.

The chairman's own approach — and how independent or supportive he may be of the White House — may surface during the hearings.

Lugar's predecessor, Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill, who lost a re-election bid last year, was inclined to back Reagan on most fronts.

Some past chairmen, such as former Sen. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., challenged the direction taken by the White House. An early opponent of U.S. involvement in the Vietnam War, Fulbright wanted the United States to lower its profile.

Most chairmen, however, have tended to cooperate with presidents and support their policies.

Lugar said last week one of the issues he intended to review during the hearings was the use of American force.

Reagan, who began his first four years accusing the Soviets of reserving the right "to commit any crime, to lie, to cheat," has begun his second term exploring the prospects for a treaty to reduce nuclear weapons on both sides.

OPEC cuts may foretell further relief

By STEVEN P. ROSENFELD
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Consumers are unlikely to reap any immediate savings at the gas pump as a result of OPEC's latest price cuts, but the odds favor further price relief in the years ahead, analysts said.

The analysts also said the trend to lower oil prices will continue to hold down inflation while stimulating economic growth. And a drop in prices for imported oil will help reduce the nation's foreign trade deficit, which soared to a record $123.3 billion last year.

The United States counts on OPEC for about 13 percent of all its oil needs and about 40 percent of all imports.

After an acrimonious three-day meeting in Geneva, Switzerland, ministers of nine of the 13 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries agreed Wednesday to cut some prices and raise others. Four other ministers said their countries would go their own way.

Shiek Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the oil minister of Saudi Arabia, estimated the net effect would be a 29-cent drop in the average OPEC price, to $27.96 a barrel of the participating producers.

"The whole thing is still a house of cards," said Stephen Smith, an oil specialist at the private consulting firm of Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass. "There is at least a 50 percent chance of a controlled erosion of prices over the next two to three years."

But for the time being, analysts said consumers, who have enjoyed savings from earlier price cuts by such OPEC competitors as Britain, Norway, Canada and U.S. oil companies, should not expect OPEC's action to send prices even lower.

"OPEC was responding to conditions on the open market, rather than leading the way," said Philip Verleger Jr., an oil industry analyst in Washington for the private consulting firm of Charles River Associates.

The average price of a gallon of gasoline has fallen 5.3 cents in the past three months as world oil prices have slumped, according to a recent nationwide survey conducted by Dan Lundberg, a Los Angeles gasoline price consultant.

He said despite the reductions, OPEC's official prices were still higher than terms available on the open market and that he doubted OPEC's cuts would solve the cartel's problems. "Nobody's going to buy at these prices, just as no one's bought at the official prices for a long time," he said.

Price trimming won't soon affect Texans, Bullock says

AUSTIN (AP) — OPEC does not carry the clout it once did so its decision to cut oil prices has no immediate, measurable effect on Texas, says state Comptroller Bob Bullock.

In past years, state leaders calculated that every $1 drop in the price of a barrel of oil cost Texas $43 million in tax revenues.

OPEC ministers, meeting in Switzerland, agreed Wednesday to lower some of its oil prices by as much as $1.41 a barrel.

Bullock said, "OPEC's action cutting oil prices, only the second such cut in 25 years, appears to be more symbolic than economic."

"The mere act of setting prices is not a road map to the effects on the U.S. or on Texas," he said.

"I must add, in all candor, that even by the admission of some of its own ministers, OPEC is not the viable factor in setting oil prices that it once was."

The price of oil now is controlled by the spot market, according to Bullock spokesman John Moore.

The net effect of Wednesday's modest cuts would be a 29-cent drop in the average OPEC price, to $27.96 a barrel, the Saudi Arabian oil minister, Ahmed Zaki Yamani, said at a news conference in Geneva.

Loeffler seeks repeal of IRS ruling

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Hunt, Wednesday introduced legislation cosponsored by 13 Texans to immediately repeal new Internal Revenue Service record-keeping requirements on all taxpayers who use personal property for business.

Loeffler's bill is similar to several others introduced in response to an avalanche of protests from irate taxpayers who balked at keeping detailed logs on personal cars and trucks as well as computers and other property used in business.

"These idiotic requirements...represent nothing less than punitive harassment," said Loeffler.

SNOW

Early morning snow depths ranged from as much as 4 to 6 inches in the Hereford and Amarillo areas of the Panhandle to roughly an inch in the southern portions of the South Plains.

Gusty bone-chilling north winds were blowing the dry powdery snow in some areas, adding to the danger and discomfort.

By daybreak, the snow had almost ended in Amarillo, but drifts of 18 inches and more reported, and forecasters said up to 4 inches of new snow could fall today and Friday in the area.

In the Panhandle, the schools in the community of McLean called off school until Monday. The school population was already hit hard by influenza, and school officials decided to wait until Monday to try to resume.

West Texas State University at Canyon called off classes today, as did Amarillo College and the Amarillo public schools.

By tonight, snowfall accumulations of 2 to 4 inches were considered possible from Wichita Falls to Dallas-Fort Worth.

The Dallas public schools canceled school for the day, mainly on the prospect of worsening driving conditions later on in the day.

Bitter cold temperatures were the rule across the state. At 5 a.m., it was 2 degrees at Amarillo, where the gusting northerly winds dropped the chill factor as low as 37 below.

South Texas wasn't exempt from the wintry invasion. A chill index of near zero was likely for the hill country, and snow was expected north of a line from Laredo to Kingsville. The lower Rio Grande Valley, with its delicate citrus crop, also was included in the winter storm warning.

Dense fog was reported in Southeast Texas for the second straight day. The National Weather Service at Houston reported at 2 a.m. that visibility was near zero, and motorists were urged to exercise extreme caution

By midafternoon Wednesday, the storm had dropped almost an inch of snow in the Panhandle and created "a pretty dreadful situation," a state highway department official said.

A fatal accident near Perryton, in the northeast corner of the Panhandle, was blamed on the weather Wednesday. An Oklahoma man was killed.

NATION

Snow and dangerous wind chills hit the nation's midsection today from an arctic air blast that pushed freezing rain, sleet and snow into Texas and caused zero-degree temperature readings as far south as Arkansas.

Snow was falling from northern Texas through the Great Lakes. Showers and even a few thundershowers were reported across Kentucky, Tennessee and northern Alabama.

Cold northerly winds of up to 35 mph were common from northern Texas to the mid-Mississippi Valley and western Great Lakes.

Freezing rain, sleet and snow were reported from northeast Texas across southern Illinois, with an expected change to snow as colder air moves in.

In the west, snow fell across northern Utah's Tooele Valley.

Today's forecast called for snow spread from the southern Rockies to New England.

Freezing rain and sleet were forecast from south central Texas to northern Louisiana and rain was predicted from the Gulf Coast to the Virginias.

New UFO sighting excites Soviets

By SETH MYDANS
New York Times News Service

MOSCOW — Witnesses say it first appeared as a yellow light, then as a white ray. Then, it became a green cloud that turned into something resembling a plane.

It was the latest example of a phenomenon that has caught Russians' imagination — sightings of unidentified flying objects.

The witnesses were the passengers and crew of Aeroflot 8352 on a night flight from Rostov to Tallinn and ground controllers who had seen unexplained blips on a radar screen. And their audience was a member of the Academy of Sciences, who solemnly declared that the sighting must have been of "what we call a UFO."

The report, carried Wednesday in the labor union newspaper Trud, was one of a number that have appeared over the years in a nation fascinated by unexplained phenomena such as Abominable Snowmen, the Bermuda Triangle, Loch Ness monsters and the search for the lost city of Atlantis.

In 1967, the Soviet Air Force set up a commission to investigate UFO's, though its findings have not been made public. And Trud carried an appeal from a Commission on Anomalies asking for more reports of sightings.

The newspaper account emphasized the sobriety of the crew, giving the names, educational backgrounds and flight experience of its four members.

The second pilot, Gennadi Lazurin was quoted as having said during the flight, "Of course, they are going to say we are not normal."

But it seemed from Trud's account that, on the contrary, they were being taken quite seriously.

According to the account, the adventure began at 4:10 a.m. on a clear night when crew members saw a bright yellow light that shot a thin white ray toward the ground.

They watched, transfixed, as the ray turned into concentric cones of light, and then dissipated into a green cloud that crossed their flight path and began to take on the shape of a plane.

Passengers asked anxiously what was going on.

"Tell them it is some sort of cloud," the captain, Igor Cherkashin, is said to have told the flight attendant. "Say the yellow thing is a reflection of city lights, the green thing of polar lights."

But ground controllers in Riga and Vilnius confirmed the presence of a cloudlike plane next to the Aeroflot airliner.

After landing in Tallinn, the crew learned that ground controllers had seen not one but two blips following the Tu-134 across the radar screen.

Nikolai N. Zheltukhin, a corresponding member of the Academy of Sciences, ruled out weather as an explanation and said a genuine UFO was involved.

He said his Commission on Anomalies had made a study of UFO's, and he called the sighting a valuable documentation of the transformation of an unidentified flying object.

Not all newspaper accounts have taken UFO's seriously. A television documentary in 1981 derided them, along with underwater monsters, snowmen and the rest.

In 1976, an underground document attributed to a professor at Moscow's Aviation Institute referred to 300 UFO sightings over the years. The report was not confirmed, but its author did not publicly refute it.

Some of the purported sightings have become classics. These include a 1976 UFO said to have hovered for 36 hours over Nalchik; a flying saucer that purportedly appeared above a railroad crossing near Moscow in 1961, stalling engines for 45 minutes, and an object that, like the one reported Wednesday, trailed an airliner from Vorkuta all the way to Omsk.

The document drew a sarcastic rebuttal in the youth newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda, deriding UFO's "and humanoids everywhere, in trolleybuses and in palaces of culture," as Russians call their community centers.

Komsomolskaya Pravda even managed to blame the Americans. It said the Pentagon was using the UFO scare to justify more military spending, calling flying saucers the "secret weapon of the Bolsheviks."

IRS

"In the past, taxpayers could claim business deductions by reasonably reconstructing their expenses. Under the new rules, they must keep a record each time equipment is used."

Last Saturday, the IRS backed down from some of the more stringent record-keeping rules, but Loeffler and others in Congress say they will not be satisfied with anything short of outright repeal.

The new rules were part of the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984 intended to close some tax loopholes and make it more difficult for taxpayers to cheat on deductions.

Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Beaumont, chairman of the House Government Operations Committee, Wednesday also threw a similar bill in the legislative mill. He said the IRS requirements "run counter to the philosophy of the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980," which he authored.

Brooks earlier had signed on as one of 93 co-sponsors of a repeal bill by Rep. Buddy Roemer, D-La.

Proxmire says Meese decision rests on unanaswered questions

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Before confirming Edwin Meese III as attorney general, Sen. William Proxmire says the Senate should resolve questions about meetings Meese had with General Dynamics officials during a government probe of the company.

In a speech prepared for delivery to the Senate today, the Wisconsin Democrat asked if the 1981 meetings "would be viewed as a not so subtle sign of White House favoritism" for a company under investigation.

Meese, the White House counselor, Wednesday finished two days of testimony at his confirmation hearings before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Proxmire — not a member of the Judiciary Committee — suggested that Meese's nomination for attorney general "should not be acted upon" until the questions about General Dynamics are cleared up.

Although Meese was not questioned about the meetings during his testimony, his deputy, Bruce Chapman, said Meese "is eager to answer any questions" about the General Dynamics contacts.

According to a letter Meese sent Proxmire last Monday, the meetings involved construction problems for the Trident submarine built by General Dynamics. Proxmire earlier had asked Meese for a description of the meetings.

Some of the meetings took place while the Justice Department was investigating possible fraud in submarine contracts the Navy had with the company's Electric Boat division in Groton, Conn.

"The question here is whether the particular discussions that Mr. Meese and his staff had with General Dynamics raise any clouds of suspicion," Proxmire said. "In view of the circumstances, the timing and frequency of the meetings and conversations with General Dynamics, I believe there is reason to be suspicious."

But in his written response to Proxmire's letter, Meese said, "neither I nor my staff ever had any contact with the Department of Justice regarding any matter concerning General Dynamics, other than recent routine briefings for my current confirmation hearings."

Proxmire, chairman of a Joint Economics subcommittee and Sen. Charles E. Grassley, R-Iowa, have sought Justice Department documents from the investigation of General Dynamics. The current attorney general, William French Smith, has refused on grounds that the investigation is still ongoing.

The Justice Department's General Dynamics probe was closed in December 1981 and reopened last year.

Meese promised Grassley at the Senate hearing that if confirmed, he would quickly work out an arrangement for the senators to see the documents.

Defense price charges 'exaggerated'

By GENE GRABOWSKI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Two defense contractors told a Senate panel Wednesday that reports of weapon over-pricing are exaggerated and are resulting in oppressive government control that could weaken the country's armed forces.

Lockheed Corp. Chairman Roy A. Anderson and Martin Marietta Corp. Chairman Thomas G. Pownall said their companies are more likely to deliver weapons on time and at reasonable cost if government regulations and audits are reduced.

"I'm convinced the system is burdened by red tape," Pownall said. "It is not uncommon for one of our plants to receive 10 to 15 visits from auditors on a project. It disrupts the work day and takes our eye off the ball."

The contractors testified before the Senate Armed Services Committee's Task Force on Selected Defense Procurement Matters chaired by Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind. The panel, created last year, is conducting hearings to determine ways to reduce defense costs without cutting weapon quality.

In a related development, The Washington Post reported in its Thursday editions that audits last summer and fall by the Pentagon's inspector general, Joseph H. Sherick, found significant problems in eight weapons systems in various stages of development.

The audits were designed to review the effectiveness of the Defense Systems Acquisition Review Council, a panel of senior department officials.

According to the Post, the audits found that the Army embarked on a potential $87 billion purchase of helicopters without any valid estimate of how much each helicopter would cost. Also, it said, the Navy spent nine years and $65 million trying to develop a new communications system for its fleet without top-level Pentagon review.

Anderson said Congress, the Defense Department and defense contractors should work together in a "cooperative triad" rather than as adversaries who stall defense projects with oversight committee hearings and investigations.

"I would hope that we could substantially lessen or eliminate the frequent and duplicative — and sometimes trivial — probes, audits and reviews which tend to impede program progress," said Anderson, whose company sells jet planes and missile systems to the government.

One panel member, Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., challenged the contractors' position, saying Congress and each government agency with a stake in a military project has a responsibility to check a supplier's work.

"From your perspective, it's too many auditors. From our perspective, it's making sure we're getting our money's worth and determining whether you're doing a good job," said Levin, a frequent critic of the defense industry.

"I don't expect you to safeguard the national treasury," Levin continued. "Not because you're bad guys, but because your goals are to maximize profit."

But Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., whose state is home to many defense plants, said "Congress has complicated the situation in its effort to improve it." He suggested that legislators consider "undoing some congressional and DOD (Department of Defense) requirements" that appear to delay completion of defense projects.

Pownall, whose company has worked on such projects as the Titan missile and the space shuttle, said instances of defense industry price-gouging are isolated and should not be allowed to "erode the very essense" of U.S. strength.

"For every diode procured at $110, over 100,000 were procured for 4 cents; for every hammer bought at $365, over 3,000 were bought at less than $7," Pownall said.

"Excessive concern and disproportionate criticism discredits the excellent work being performed and weakens the very institutions of our nation that we are trying to preserve," he said.

Arctic cold front could prove 'dangerous' to some Americans

By STEVE ELLWANGER
Associated Press Writer

A "potentially dangerous" arctic cold front dipped into the nation's midsection today, unleashing a blast of frigid air that made it feel like 46 below in Iowa and spread snow from the Great Lakes to Texas.

The latest Canadian cold wave closed schools in Kansas and Georgia on Wednesday and was blamed for the deaths of at least four people.

In Arizona today, helicopter crews prepared for a second day of distributing crucial supplies of food, fuel, medicine and livestock feed to hundreds of people stranded on isolated northern Indian reservations.

Two babies, believed suffering from pneumonia, and an elderly man with heart problems were airlifted Wednesday from the hardest-hit areas north of Keams Canyon, Ariz., where members of both the Hopi and Navajo tribes live.

Travelers advisories were posted for early today from southern Illinois to the mid-Atlantic coast with up to 4 inches of snow expected, the National Weather Service said. Travelers advisories remained in effect through the early morning hours across portions of Kansas and Missouri. The storm dumped up to 5 inches of snow by early today in Lebanon and Rolla, Mo., the weather service said.

Reagan completes his spending cut proposal

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Doing some personal lobbying for his record 1986 defense budget, President Reagan has completed his list of proposed domestic spending cuts with a recommendation to accelerate the demise of revenue sharing.

Reagan will ask Congress to terminate the $4.6 billion revenue sharing program a year earlier than anticipated, sources inside and outside the government reported late Wednesday.

The president has decided to recommend abolishing the politically popular program of aid to the cities and counties at the end of the current fiscal year, these sources said. If approved by Congress, the step would save $3 billion in 1986 and $4.6 billion a year thereafter.

Reagan had earlier decided to call for the end of the program when its congressional authorization expires at the end of the 1986 fiscal year.

Administration officials said the decision to advance the proposed termination date by one year was the final major decision made by the president in recent days as he wrapped up a 1986 budget.

The proposed spending package is expected to call for $51 billion in savings — including a 5 percent pay cut for federal workers — but still leave a deficit estimated at $178 billion.

The defense budget is expected to call for spending of about $277.5 billion, which is $8.7 billion less than the Pentagon originally asked for but still large enough to prompt persistent demands for further cuts from Republicans and Democrats alike in Congress.

The president demonstrated on Wednesday he is willing to lobby personally for the spending request, telling members of the House Appropriations Commitee that continued support of the MX missile is necessary to demonstrate "evidence of continued U.S. resolve" in arms negotiations with the Soviet Union.

"No one wants to put the nuclear genie back in the bottle more than I do," Reagan was reported by his aides to have told the congressional committee members in a White House meeting.

Vernon Walters likely to follow Jeane Kirkpatrick in U.N. post

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Presidential troubleshooter and onetime spymaster Vernon Walters is expected to be nominated to succeed Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, who is ending her sometimes stormy tenure as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.

A high-level administration official, insisting on anonymity, said Wednesday that Walters would likely be picked for the U.N. job being vacated soon by the outspoken Mrs. Kirkpatrick.

A former deputy director of the CIA, the multilingual Walters now is a roving ambassador who has traveled widely on delicate presidential missions.

The former Army general was tapped by President Reagan for a secret trip to Havana early in the administration for talks on U.S.-Cuban relations.

Last year, he was dispatched to El Salvador to warn rightist leader Roberto D'Aubuisson to call off an alleged assassination plot against U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering.

After meeting privately with Reagan on Wednesday, Mrs. Kirkpatrick ended months of speculation about her future, revealed she is quitting the administration and said she will continue to speak out on foreign policy as she returns to a career of writing, teaching and lecturing.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick said, "I now feel that I can best serve the president and our shared objectives for the United States and the world by returning to teaching and writing.

"In private life, perhaps even more than in public life, I can speak out clearly on behalf of shared foreign policy objectives, such as restoring and preserving American strength, supporting democracy and independence in the hemisphere, defending our friends, our principles and our interests in the Middle East and elsewhere."

An aide to the ambassador, insisting on anonymity, said Mrs. Kirkpatrick clearly intends to speak up after becoming a private citizen. The aide emphasized the implication in her statement that she could play a more useful role outside the administration.

Reagan had said he wanted to keep her in the administration and, as recently as last week, said he had a job in mind to offer her, somewhere outside the White House.

Yet, it was not clear that he offered any job in their one-on-one meeting.

Refusing to say whether Reagan proposed a new position, Mrs. Kirkpatrick said that throughout her four-year term, "I have not commented on private conversations with the president and my colleagues. And I don't propose to break that habit today."

White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes also refused to comment.

A close associate of the ambassador said, "She walked in determined to leave government. There might not have been any kind of frontal offer (from Reagan)."

Sunday's announcement of Stephen Eric Dehlinger's engagement to Dana Lynn Toungate indicated he attended The University of Texas at Austin.

Woman jailed for refusing to testify against stepson finally released

"I was faced with a choice, a choice between the law of the land and the law of my conscience. It was a very difficult choice and I paid the price. I went willingly and I paid my debt to the state."

— Odette Port, stepmother of son accused of murder

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman who spent 4½ months in jail for refusing to testify before a grand jury investigating a murder charge against her stepson says she "paid the price" for following her conscience.

"I believe the family unit must be protected," Odette Port said as she left the Harris County Jail on Wednesday.

"I was faced with a choice, a choice between the law of the land and the law of my conscience. It was a very difficult choice and I paid the price. I went willingly and I paid my debt to the state," Mrs. Port said in a shaky voice.

Mrs. Port and her husband, Bernard, were jailed Sept. 12 after repeatedly refusing to testify before a grand jury investigating the slaying of a female postal carrier. Port spent two months behind bars but was released after answering questions from the grand jury.

The couple's son, David, 17, was indicted in September for the murder of Debora Sue Schatz. The youth, who remains free on $20,000 bond, will be tried next month in New Braunfels, a community 175 miles northwest of Houston.

Although a murder indictment was returned by the grand jury, prosecutors asked the panel to continue its investigation for evidence that could warrant upgrading charges to capital murder.

The Ports claimed they should not be forced to testify against their child, saying they should have the same privileges as spouses, who are not required by Texas law to testify against each other. Their arguments were repeatedly rejected by state and federal courts.

The court also rejected the Ports' argument that it is a violation of their Jewish religion to bear witness against a relative.

Port said he and his wife never expected to be locked up when they decided not to testify. But he praised his wife's fortitude.

"She's staying in there for the love of a husband," Port said. " All I can find is beauty that there is someone who's done something for me. My concern is my wife and the sacrifice she made for me. She was the hero. I was the father."

But when told of Mrs. Port's release, the victim's mother, Barbara Schatz, said, "It's just one more thing that hurts."

Ms. Schatz, 23, disappeared June 7 while delivering mail to the affluent westside neighborhood where the Ports live. Her body was found two days later in a remote area.

Mattox seeks funding for new collections divisions

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox says his department needs a new collections divisions to scour the state for unpaid millions of dollars owed the state.

"I can produce $5 for every $1 you give me," Mattox told the Senate Finance committee Wednesday in asking for $54.6 million in state funds for his department the next two years. He said he could produce $273 million.

The Legislative Budget Board recommended $35.9 million.

Gov. Mark White recommended $43 million.

Mattox said his department got $33.8 million in state funds in 1984-85.

"We had $12.88 won in judments for each dollar appropriated for 1984," he said.

Mattox stressed particularly the need for adding a "Collections Division" to his staff at a cost of about $2.5 million to collect the more than $264 million owned the state "right now, but uncollected."

"We don't know how much we have out there," Mattox said.

Sheriff's cowboys head 'em up- move 'em out

DAYTON (AP) — The Liberty County sheriff has hired a group of cowboys to round up about 200 head of wild cattle that have roamed free for years, invading gardens and creating traffic hazards.

"These cattle have been inbred 10 or 15 years and that makes them crazy," says Vernon Fregia, a 60-year-old cowpoke.

Fregia and the other cowboys are using dogs to sniff out the cattle, which have become skilled at hiding from their would-be captors.

One cow even attempted playing dead, Fregia said.

Even though dogs were nipping at her ears, the cow collapsed on all fours and had to be dragged to a pen, he said. But once inside, the cow bounded to its feet.

Some stray hogs and horses also are expected to be caught during the two-week roundup.

"We already killed one horse out there last week," said cowboy Bucky Havard, 38. "It got crippled in the bog. Another horse died after being gored by a bull."

Man testifies cadet tore up evidence in hazing death

BRYAN (AP) — A former Texas A&M University cadet destroyed a written schedule of exercises performed by a student who suffered a fatal heatstroke, a former commanding officer testified.

John Havel, a former commanding officer in Company F1, testified Wednesday that he gave the exercise roster to cadet Gabriel Cuadra, but that Cuadra ripped it in pieces and flushed it down the toilet.

According to a tape recording of Cuadra's testimony before a grand jury, Cuadra said he knew that authorities would want the exercise roster as evidence in the hazing death of Bruce Goodrich, a sophomore transfer student in the Corps of Cadets.

Cuadra, 21, of Houston, is charged with hazing and tampering with evidence in connection with the Aug. 30 death of Goodrich, 20, of Webster, N.Y. He is being tried first on the tampering charge.

The indictment alleges that Cuadra, the senior personnel officer in Goodrich's cadet unit, knew of plans for the motivational exercises, which had been banned by the school. He is accused of destroying an exercise roster after officials began investigating Goodrich's death.

If convicted, Cuadra could get up to a year in jail and a $2,000 fine.

According to the recording, Cuadra said his attorney had asked to see the roster and had warned that police might get a search warrant to look for it in his dormitory room.

When asked on the recording why he ignored his attorney's advice, Cuadra replied: "I basically got scared and didn't know what to do."

"I gave him the piece of paper. I gave him the list. He tore it up, ripped it up. I asked him what he was doing and he ripped up the piece of paper (and said) that he knew what he was doing. I said didn't he think we needed to talk to someone and he said he'd already talked to his lawyer," Havel said.

Havel said he later asked Cuadra what he did with the pieces.

"He told me he had flushed it down the commode," Havel said. "He said, 'Tell them I tore it up.'" Havel said he called the commandant of the corps within five minutes.

Ten-year-old sleuth finds evidence deputies overlooked

FORT WORTH (AP) — A child murder-mystery buff who decided to search for clues in the slaying of a Fort Worth woman has found important evidence overlooked by sheriff's deputies.

The 10-year-old girl is a reluctant heroine, dismissing questions about her sleuthing with a red face and shrug.

But law enforcement officials say the girl uncovered crucial evidence they had overlooked in their investigation of a series of rapes, slayings and disappearances that has this city on edge.

"I found them laying right there," the girl said Tuesday as she relived her search at a local shopping mall. "They weren't hidden at all."

On Jan. 16 she found an unspent .22-caliber bullet and the car keys of Lisa Griffin, whose car was found abandoned near the same shopping center 10 days earlier.

The body of Miss Griffin, who had been shot in the head with what appeared to be a .22-caliber weapon, had been found elsewhere in Tarrant County the day before.

The 21-year-old waitress is one of five women killed or reported missing in southwest Fort Worth since September.

The evidence found by the girl was overlooked by sheriff's investigators in a search of the area a week earlier.

"She's to be commended," Chief Deputy Bob Stone said. "She went over there to help out and she helped out."

The girl, whose parents asked that she not be identified, is something of a murder mystery buff who has a "knack for coming up with things," her mother said.

The girl had heard her parents discussing Griffin's slaying. When she walked to a convenience store for a snack, she said she decided to do some investigating on her own.

The youngster set out with pop and potato chips in hand. Within minutes she saw the keys and the brass-colored bullet sticking out from behind an air conditioner.

"I was just shivering," she recalled.

Senate OKs 'Sesquicentennial Day'

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate has approved a bill that would give state employees a day off in 1986 to celebrate the 150th anniversary of Texas' independence from Mexico.

Senators voted Wednesday to declare April 21, 1986, as Texas Sesquicentennial Day.

April 21 currently is San Jacinto Day, and the law provides that public state offices may be closed. In changing the name of the holiday for next year only, the bill by Sen. Lindon Williams, D-Houston, would require state offices to close.

The optional holiday has commemorated the Battle of San Jacinto, a decisive victory in 1836 by the Texas forces over the Mexican Army.

The measure was sent to the House on a 29-0 vote.

Also approved 29-0 was a bill that would authorize the state treasury department to invest in bank certificates of deposit and certificates guaranteed by Federal Home Loan Banks and the Federal National Mortgage Association.

Property owners lose tax deductions

LUBBOCK (AP) — About 5,500 Lubbock County residents will be unable to claim income tax deductions this year for their 1984 property taxes because a Los Angeles-based tax service failed to pay the more than $4 million owed before Jan. 1, local tax officials say.

County Appraisal District officials confirmed Wednesday that Ticor Realty Tax Service has not submitted the property tax payment for 5,544 local accounts. Ticor provides its service to 33 lenders with accounts here.

Even though the affected residents are not at fault, the Internal Revenue Service will not allow them to claim the deduction for 1984.

"The general rule is if you're a cash basis taxpayer, items are deductible in the year they are paid," Larry Batdorf, spokesman for the IRS national office in Washington, said.

Marlene Gansek, public affairs officer for the IRS regional office in Dallas, said the law does not make allowances "no matter who is to blame."

Defense contractors: Less auditing, regulation will improve performance

NATION

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two major defense contractors say the way to improve the defense industry's performance is with less — not more — government regulation and auditing.

Lockheed Corp. Chairman Roy A. Anderson and Martin Marietta Corp. Chairman Thomas G. Pownall told a Senate defense panel Wednesday that reports of weapon over-pricing are exaggerated and spurring oppressive government control that could weaken the country's armed forces.

"For every diode procured at $110, over 100,000 were procured for 4 cents; for every hammer bought at $365, over 3,000 were bought at less than $7," said Pownall, whose company has worked on such projects as the Titan Missile and the space shuttle.

"Excessive concern and disproportionate criticism discredits the excellent work being performed and weakens the very institutions of our nation that we are trying to preserve," he said.

The contracters testified before the Senate Armed Services Committee's Task Force on Selected Defense Procurement Matters chaired by Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind. The panel, created last year, is conducting hearings on how to reduce defense costs without cutting weapon quality.

Anderson said Congress, the Defense Department and defense contractors should work together in a "cooperative triad" rather than as adversaries who stall — and often raise the cost of — defense projects with oversight committee hearings and investigations.

But one panel member, Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., disagreed, saying Congress and each government agency with a stake in a military project has a responsibility to check a supplier's work.

"From your perspective, it's too many auditors. From our perspective, it's making sure we're getting our money's worth and determining whether you're doing a good job," said Levin.

New Yorkers buy copies of CIA manual

NEW YORK (AP) — New Yorkers are snapping up hundreds of copies of a how-to book with a violent twist: the CIA's guerilla manual on overthrowing the Nicaraguan government.

Two bookstores in the city's Greenwich Village have sold about 300 copies of "Psychological Operations in Guerilla Warfare." The book caused an uproar last year when Congress learned it had been distributed among anti-Sandinista forces in that leftist Central American nation.

The 44-page manual instructs guerrillas to "kidnap all officials of the Sandinista government," to benefit from the "implicit terror" that comes with carrying weapons, and on how to put the killing of an informer in the best light.

Just why New Yorkers want to know these things is not clear.

"It's sort of like selling a copy of (the paramilitary magazine) Soldier of Fortune," said John Webber, a clerk at the Kiosk bookstore. "You don't know whether to joke or not. The people who buy it may take it seriously."

A surprising number of businessmen have bought the photocopied book, apparently because "they want to know how their tax money is being spent," Webber said.

The people who buy the book are a diverse group, said Lynda Shepard, assistant buyer at B. Dalton's Greenwich Village branch. She believes the demand for the book is a healthy sign.

"They're not just buying 'The Hollywood Wives,'" she said.

The Kiosk has sold 200 copies; B. Dalton displayed the handbook in the window and sold about 100 copies in a matter of days.

"We sold them out amazingly quickly. We sold all of them as we got them," said Bill Sweeney, senior sales clerk.

Officials at both stores said they received the manuals from friends of their employees. The makeshift publishers apparently obtained a copy of the handbook from the Library of Congress and made photocopy reproductions.

Plane crashes into house while trying to land

EDGEWOOD, Ky. (AP) — A twin-engine, private plane crashed in a subdivision while trying to make an emergency landing in a snowstorm Wednesday night, killing three people aboard the plane and injuring two on the ground, authorities said.

The Beechcraft BE50 came down about five miles east of the Greater Cincinnati International Airport, which is located in the northern Kentucky town of Hebron, said Ted Bushelman, a spokesman at the airport.

James W. Nunnally, 30, whose house was struck by the plane, was in stable condition at St. Elizabeth Medical Center South with facial injuries and burns, said Tina Aluise, spokeswoman for the hospital.

Gary Berkmeier, 47, a neighbor who ran into the Nunnally home to offer help, was hospitalized for smoke inhalation, she said.

The pilot of the plane reported having engine trouble and asked permission to land, Bushelman said. There was a steady snowfall at the time of the crash.

"They were vectoring him into the airport when he went down," said Bushelman, who did not know the origin and the destination of the flight.

The dead were not immediately identified.

"None of the people in the plane got out. But all of the people in the house got out," said Bushelman.

Meese harassed

President Reagan's nomination of Edwin Meese III was made for sound and sensible reasons. Mr. Meese, who has practiced and preached law, is an intelligent and loyal citizen who has an excellent legal mind. His life is an open book. He has served as assistant district attorney for Alameda County, Calif., across the bay from San Francisco. For years he was in Gov. Reagan's administration in Sacramento, and for the past four he has been in President Reagan's administration in Washington.

Surely he may have shown poor judgment on occasion. Who among us has not? He may not have paid as close attention to all his family's financial dealings as he should have, one of the reasons being a period of terrible strain when his son was killed in an automobile crash. But an investigator, Jacob A. Stein, cleared Meese of any criminal misconduct charges and said he had committed no indictable offense.

In this week's second set of hearings before the Senate Judiciary Committee, he is being unduly harassed. One of the needlers, as in the past, is Democratic Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, who has not been especially courteous in his questioning. There may be a few questions about the Ohio senator's financial background that ought to be asked.

Ed Meese has served his country well, and can continue to do so if given the opportunity he has earned.

Endangered species?

Dark despair looms for the millions of Americans addicted to that magnificent mollusk, the scallop. At least partly to blame for this gloomy picture is the ruling of a court loftily removed from the bays and seabeds from which the succulent delicacies are harvested.

Like all shellfish, scallops can be prepared in a variety of ways — all good. They are splendid when broiled or served en brochette.

They become a gastronomic ecstasy when dolled up and brought to the table as an aromatic, steaming Coquilles Saint-Jacques. They can even be occasionally palatable when degraded by batter and fried at a truck-stop lunch counter.

But unless something is done soon — either by Mother Nature or the politicians — the scallop may vanish from many menus or become priced beyond the reach of the average consumer. The threatened scarcity is due to the reduce availability of the creatures in their usual haunts along the Northeast coast — either from over-harvest or from some biological mystery.

On top of this situation, the International Court of Justice has given Canada jurisdiction over half of the fish-rich Georges Bank. That happens to be the half that was supplying a big share of the scallops for American tables.

What can be done? One slim hope rests on a possible biological turn-around. Nature already has come partially to the rescue by producing big beds off the coast of Florida. Real scallop fanciers, however, prefer those from the colder expanses of the Atlantic.

Meanwhile, the Northeast scallopers, facing ruin and the loss of their boats, are demanding the imposition of duties on the cheaper Canadian imports. That is a pretty drastic remedy but it will get the support of scallop lovers if it saves the industry and assures an uninterrupted flow of one of the sea's delights.

Another View:

Korea's weakness

The shoving between opposition leader Kim Dae Jung and President Chun Doo Hwan of South Korea illustrates nothing so much as the central role the United States plays in the affairs of its longtime ally.

It isn't that the Reagan administration is deliberately butting in. But Washington's natural weight is so great that it becomes all but impossible for Korean parties not to try to swing it to their advantage.

That puts a burden on Washington in turn to use its weight for American ends.

In 1981 Seoul released Kim Dae Jung early from a 20-year "sedition" sentence — plainly, he was a political prisoner — in order to earn Chun's passage to Washington to visit President Reagan.

In the current cycle Kim is preparing what he hopes will be a safe return from Washington exile to Korean public life. He has reaped dramatic publicity by suggestively evoking the assassination of the returning Filipino opposition leader, Benigno Aquino.

Around him Kim has fashioned a living shield comprised of prominent Americans interested in Korean democratization. For his return he deftly chose the moment when Chun was again planning a visit to Washington — and would again likely be on his best behavior.

It's working well for Kim so far. Last Tuesday the Chun regime said that if Kim returned he would be clapped back in jail. On Wednesday the State Department reacted to this publicly, and privately informed Korea that it was deferring announcement of the return visit to Washington that Chun has avidly sought. On Thursday the Koreans started backtracking on the threat to imprison Kim. D-Day is Feb. 8.

It infuriates the Korean government to see the gadfly Kim making this use of the open American political system. But the government has a good alternative: open up the Korean system to make room for legitimate opposition figures such as Kim.

Over the past 30 years Korea has become, in educational and economic terms, one of the most successful developing countries; it is beginning to challenge Japan. Yet it retains a narrow and obsolete political system dominated by the military.

Both government and opposition are in the habit of turning to the United States for approval and internal leverage. It is one of the clearest signs of Korea's political weakness.

Korean politicians should be turning to their own citizens instead. And Washington should always be trying to push them in this direction.

ART BUCHWALD

Meeting was pure dynamite!

I dropped in on a "Right to Bomb" anti-abortion meeting the other night.

Art Buchwald

The speaker was holding several sticks of dynamite as he addressed his small but fervent audience.

He said, "Now the purpose in blowing up abortion clinics is to show the country we're serious about saving unborn lives."

There was loud applause.

"Everyone talks about anti-abortion, but nobody does anything about it. The 'Right to Bomb' movement believes that marching and silent vigils are a waste of time, and the only way people will listen is if we make a loud explosion."

The audience laughed.

"Bombing abortion clinics is just another way of saying that we revere human life. We want to make our blasts so loud that every congressman and Supreme Court justice will hear them and know the 'Right to Bomb' people mean business."

Loud applause.

"Blowing up bricks and mortar is nothing compared to killing millions of babies," the speaker said. "But if we don't prove the end justifies the means, we have no right to call ourselves pro-lifers."

The speaker continued, "The most important thing in blowing up an abortion clinic is making sure that your bomb works. Every time you set off a dud, you give aid and comfort to the criminals. Now are there any questions so far?"

A teen-ager got up. "I never made a bomb before. How do you do it?"

"After the formal meeting we will break up in study groups and our instructors will show you. It's quite simple once you get the hang of it."

A man raised his hand. "Suppose an innocent person gets killed when the bomb goes off?"

The audience booed the question.

The speaker smiled. "Naturally we hope no one gets hurt, but we have to expect some casualties when we're doing the Lord's work."

"Amen," we all said.

The next question from the floor was, "When we build our bombs where do we place them?"

"Before you leave tonight we will give you a list of the abortion clinics in the neighborhood, and you can choose the one most convenient to your home."

"Suppose two of us want to blow up the same clinic?"

"All the better. Two bombs are better than one."

More laughter.

"If we get caught will the 'Right to Bomb' movement provide legal services?"

"We certainly will. Our lawyers are on 24-hour standby and ready to plead each and every one of you 'not guilty,' no matter what the charge might be. But our goal is to get a law passed legalizing all abortion clinic bombings. If we can't get it through Congress we'll work for a constitutional amendment."

The audience got on its feet and broke into song. "All we are saying is give bombs a chance."

The speaker raised his hand to quiet the crowd and said, "Let us pray for life."

We all bowed our heads.

After the prayer the groups went to their assigned bomb instructors to learn about explosives, fuses and timing devices.

As I left to get my coat a man said to me, "What did you think of the meeting?"

All I could reply was, "Dynamite."

JACK ANDERSON

Hatfield cleared by ethics panel

WASHINGTON — The Senate Ethics Committee has sprinkled holy water on a new form of the old Washington game of influence buying — making payments to a politician's spouse.

Jack Anderson

This is the only interpretation I can make of the committee's decision giving Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., a clean bill of ethical health in the case involving payment of $55,000 to his wife, Antoinette, by a Greek promoter for whom the senator opened doors in official Washington. The Greek, an arms dealer with a certifiably unsavory background, got Hatfield to introduce him to administration officials who might be useful in promoting a bizarre scheme for a trans-African oil pipeline.

According to reliable witnesses interviewed by my associate Corky Johnson, the Greek businessman, Basil Tsakos, boasted of having Sen. Hatfield in his pocket. But even this affront to the storied dignity of the Senate failed to impress the Ethics Committee. It concluded there was "no credible information" that Hatfield had been guilty of any wrongdoing.

To his credit, Hatfield was tougher on himself than the Ethics Committee was. In the midst of a re-election campaign last summer when my stories broke, Hatfield acknowledged that the payments to his wife might look a little fishy, and the Hatfields gave the $55,000 to charity. This was more than enough for the voters of Oregon, who re-elected him by a solid margin.

I believe that the senator was not consciously guilty of any wrongdoing. An honest man is often unaware of the interpretation that will be given to unwitting actions that a crook would have taken care to hide.

But I also think Sen. Hatfield was either naive or careless, or both, when he failed to see any connection between his support of Tsakos' pipeline scheme and the overly generous payments the Greek made to Mrs. Hatfield for some rather vague real estate and interior decorating services.

A reprimand by the Ethics Committee would at least have served notice on other members of the Senate — perhaps less upright than Hatfield — that such conflicts of interest between their personal and public lives are unacceptable.

As things stand now, though, any promoter who comes to Washington will feel free to offer payments to any senator who can help him — as long as he takes the precaution of laundering the cash through the senator's wife, or child, or other relative.

Perhaps the most disturbing feature of the Hatfield-Tsakos case is that the Ethics Committee apparently never intended to conduct a serious investigation of the deadly serious charges against the senator. The investigation was carried out with a big bucket of whitewash.

"I don't see anything to investigate," committee Chairman Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, told reporters after I broke the scandal. Only after several former Tsakos employees filed formal complaints did the "Ethics Club" begin an inquiry. But with the chairman's opinion already on the record, it's hardly surprising that the investigation was a charade.

I had already reported — and documented — serious allegations against Tsakos, most particularly that he was an international arms dealer with an unsavory record. I also reported solid eyewitness evidence that Mrs. Hatfield's alleged business services to Tsakos were of a kind that ordinarily doesn't call for such generous remuneration.

Long before the Ethics Committee announced its judgment, I offered to supply the committee with the evidence I had amassed on Tsakos. Stevens replied that he would review the material, but made it clear that the investigation was already completed. As for the compensation to Mrs. Hatfield, Stevens said it was "a judgment call" whether she really earned the money Tsakos paid her.

Stevens insisted that his staff investigators were "professionals." But if they're really pros, they made some surprising errors and oversights. For example:

— Several witnesses complained that the committee staff was antagonistic, sarcastic and belligerent toward them.

— The staff failed to check charges that Tsakos had bragged of having "bought" Hatfield.

— The apartment building caretaker, who said Mrs. Hatfield was never there during the redecoration of Tsakos' apartment, was never interviewed. Neither was the decorator.

— Witnesses who supported Mrs. Hatfield's claim of giving remodeling advice, gave only lukewarm confirmation of her work to my reporter. One Hatfield friend said Mrs. Hatfield's advice to the Greek was similar to that offered by several of his non-paid friends.

— The committee staff took a junket to Greece, but failed to get any of the documented evidence on Tsakos' past dealings, which were contained in Greek government files. I was able to obtain this information with no trouble.

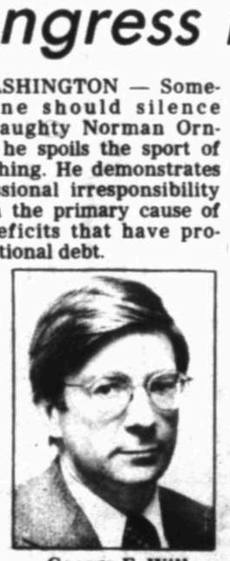
GEORGE F. WILL

Congress not only deficit villain

WASHINGTON — Someone should silence naughty Norman Ornstein before he spoils the sport of Congress-bashing. He demonstrates that congressional irresponsibility has not been the primary cause of the many deficits that have produced our national debt.



George F. Will

In an essay for American Enterprise Institute, he notes that the $80 million Revolutionary War debt was cut in half by 1811. The War of 1812 tripled the debt, but it was almost eliminated in the 1830s. It rose as a result of the Mexican War, but then declined until the Civil War produced a $2.6 billion national debt. That caused Congress to centralize spending, resulting in two powerful appropriations committees. In 31 years (1867-1897), there were 27 surpluses. In 13 years revenues exceeded expenditures by more than 25 percent.

The Spanish-American War, combined with the 1896 recession, initiated 20 years with 11 deficits, but in 1916 the national debt was approximately what it had been in 1896. After 127 years the Republic's debt was $1.23 billion. But 1919, modern war, the foremost shaper of the modern world, had increased the debt 20-fold, to $25.8 billion. Then Congress again tightened budget procedures and the debt again shrank, to $16 billion by 1930.

Depression deficits were almost trivial compared to those of World War II — $211 billion. The national debt as a percentage of GNP was 33 percent on the eve of the Depression, 43 percent in 1940, 128 percent in 1946.

In 1946 Congress cut the number of committees and took other measures to restrain spending. Thanks to that and economic growth, the national debt as a percentage of GNP shrank to 98 percent by 1949, 56 percent by 1961.

But in the next quarter-century there was just one small surplus ($3.2 billion in 1969). From 1960 to 1980 the debt grew from $293 billion to $993 billion. In Reagan's first term it nearly doubled, as did the clamor against Congress and four proposed constitutional amendments (to restrain Congress).

Although Congress has been, in Ornstein's word, an "accomplice" it has been less important as a deficit-maker than Presidents, from Lyndon Johnson with a guns-and-butter policy through Reagan's gamble that the stimulative effect of his tax cuts would make the cuts virtually self-financing, eliminating the need for politically hazardous cuts in spending on middle-class programs.

Ornstein acknowledges that Congress has contributed to the deficit problem by the decline of its institutional tough-mindedness and the rise of "subcommittee government" which has weakened the central control of spending through appropriations committees. And Congress has mastered the art of bestowing blessings by tax breaks rather than appropriations.

But Congress has reduced politically profitable discretionary domestic spending by reducing the amount (as a percentage of the budget) and the discretion (adopting formula programs). Congress indexed entitlement programs, thereby stopping the politically advantageous but fiscally irresponsible process of voting ad hoc increases every few years.

In 1982 Congress, dragging a reluctant President, attacked the deficit by raising taxes in an election year. In 1983 it attacked the deficit by initiating an energy-tax increase. In 1984 there again was something like congressional government, with another attempt to reduce the deficit by raising taxes in an election year, with an essentially passive President acquiescing.

Today there are reports that Reagan will go barnstorming to rally support for substantial cuts in middle-class programs. I, for one, will believe it when I see it from the man who, as Ornstein notes, has supported almost all the water projects President Carter tried to kill, has supported swollen farm subsidies and generous farm-loan guarantees, has supported subsidized electric power and grazing fees for his Western friends, has pledged to "not stand for" cuts in the biggest sector of big government (Social Security), and wants some new deficit-enlarging programs, such as tuition tax credits. "These," says Ornstein dryly, "are not the habits of a President who would wield the line-item veto pen mercilously."

The proposed item veto would cover only appropriations bills, and only a small portion of spending is controlled by such bills. In the $925 billion fiscal 1985 budget there is just $81 billion in non-defense discretionary spending. And Ornstein thinks an item veto might increase spending because Presidents would use it as a club to threaten legislators who oppose spending the President favors. For example, he says, in Reagan's hands the item veto could be used to threaten dams and federal buildings desired by legislators opposed to MX. We would wind up buying the dams and buildings — and the larger number of MXs.

Ornstein, you see, is doubly insufferable. He robs us of two comforts: the image of Congress as a convenient villain, and the hope that constitutional tinkering can be a panacea.

NATION IN BRIEF

Suit filed against Goetz

NEW YORK (AP) — Lawyers say they filed a $50 million lawsuit against Bernhard Goetz to "temper the wave of adulation" for the man who admitted shooting four youths he said menaced him in a subway train.

The suit was filed Wednesday on behalf of 19-year-old Darryl Cabey, who was shot along with three other teen-agers Dec. 22.

A grand jury refused to indict Goetz on attempted murder charges but returned an indictment on a weapons charge. Cabey's attorneys contend their client was shot in the back although he never went near Goetz.

James Kelner, Goetz's attorney, refused to comment on that version of the incident.

FAA official faces prison

NEW YORK (AP) — A senior Federal Aviation Administration official faces a 25-year prison sentence after pleading guilty to charges that he and others used bogus construction and supply bills to trick the agency out of $1.3 million.

Three other FAA officials were indicted Wednesday as Allen Moserwitz of Wheatley Heights, the 39-year-old chief of the radar-data unit at Kennedy airport, pleaded guilty to one count of bribery and two counts of tax evasion.

Union Carbide plant officials say lethal gas leaks 'not serious'

INSTITUTE, W.Va. (AP) — The 28 reported leaks in five years of deadly methyl isocyanate at Union Carbide Corp.'s Institute plant represent one-third the actual number, but none was serious, the company says.

None of the 61 "in-plant losses" of methyl isocyanate and 22 leaks of a mixture of MIC and phosgene was extensive enough to require reporting to the Environmental Protection Agency, the company said in a statement Wednesday.

The company had provided reports on 28 MIC leaks to the House Subcommittee on Health and the Environment shortly after the panel held a hearing in Institute on Dec. 14.

"On such short notice from the congressman's staff, and given the priorities of shutting down the MIC unit and meeting with investigators of four federal and state agencies... the company was unable to complete a search for all relevant documents," it said. "That has since been done."

Production of MIC was suspended at Institute after a leak of the chemical at a Union Carbide plant in Bhopal, India, killed more than 2,000 people on Dec. 3.

The leaks of MIC and phosgene, both used to make pesticides, occurred from Jan. 1, 1980 to Dec. 14, 1984, the company said.

Under the federal Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act, which set up the Superfund to clean up hazardous waste dumps, MIC releases only have to be reported to the EPA if at least one pound of the chemical goes beyond the perimeter of a plant over a 24-hour period, the company said.

"To the best of Union Carbide's knowledge, if any MIC escaped across the fence line in MIC incidents, it did not equal or exceed one pound in any incident."

An EPA report released Jan. 23, however, said that of the 28 leaks it was told about, 12 were of less than a pound, seven were greater than 10 pounds and two were in undetermined amounts.

The report also said one of the leaks, which occurred Dec. 31, 1983, involved 840 pounds of MIC. It said the chemical leaked inside the Institute plant and was recovered and "returned to production." The report said "actual MIC losses to the environment cannot be estimated."

Union Carbide spokesman Jackson B. Browning told a news conference in Danbury, Conn., last Friday that the Dec. 31, 1983, leak involved only five pounds of MIC.

The company said in its news release that the MIC releases were "not a threat to life or the environment and are not abnormal."

It's working well for Kim so far. Last Tuesday the Chun regime said that if Kim returned he would be clapped back in jail. On Wednesday the State Department reacted to this publicly, and privately informed Korea that it was deferring announcement of the return visit to Washington that Chun has avidly sought. On Thursday the Koreans started backtracking on the threat to imprison Kim. D-Day is Feb. 8.

It infuriates the Korean government to see the gadfly Kim making this use of the open American political system. But the government has a good alternative: open up the Korean system to make room for legitimate opposition figures such as Kim.

Over the past 30 years Korea has become, in educational and economic terms, one of the most successful developing countries; it is beginning to challenge Japan. Yet it retains a narrow and obsolete political system dominated by the military.

Both government and opposition are in the habit of turning to the United States for approval and internal leverage. It is one of the clearest signs of Korea's political weakness.

Korean politicians should be turning to their own citizens instead. And Washington should always be trying to push them in this direction.

Hatfield cleared by ethics panel

WASHINGTON — The Senate Ethics Committee has sprinkled holy water on a new form of the old Washington game of influence buying — making payments to a politician's spouse.

Jack Anderson

This is the only interpretation I can make of the committee's decision giving Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., a clean bill of ethical health in the case involving payment of $55,000 to his wife, Anteinette, by a Greek promoter for whom the senator opened doors in official Washington. The Greek, an arms dealer with a certifiably unsavory background, got Hatfield to introduce him to administration officials who might be useful in promoting a bizarre scheme for a trans-African oil pipeline.

According to reliable witnesses interviewed by my associate Corky Johnson, the Greek businessman, Basil Tsakos, boasted of having Sen. Hatfield in his pocket. But even this affront to the storied dignity of the Senate failed to impress the Ethics Committee. It concluded there was "no credible information" that Hatfield had been guilty of any wrongdoing.

To his credit, Hatfield was tougher on himself than the Ethics Committee was. In the midst of a re-election campaign last summer when my stories broke, Hatfield acknowledged that the payments to his wife might look a little fishy, and the Hatfields gave the $55,000 to charity. This was more than enough for the voters of Oregon, who re-elected him by a solid margin.

I believe that the senator was not consciously guilty of any wrongdoing. An honest man is often unaware of the interpretation that will be given to unwitting actions that a crook would have taken care to hide.

But I also think Sen. Hatfield was either naive or careless, or both, when he failed to see any connection between his support of Tsakos' pipeline scheme and the overly generous payments the Greek made to Mrs. Hatfield for some rather vague real estate and interior decorating services.

A reprimand by the Ethics Committee would at least have served notice on other members of the Senate — perhaps less upright than Hatfield — that such conflicts of interest between their personal and public lives are unacceptable.

As things stand now, though, any promoter who comes to Washington will feel free to offer payments to any senator who can help him — as long as he takes the precaution of laundering the cash through the senator's wife, or child, or other relative.

Perhaps the most disturbing feature of the Hatfield-Tsakos case is that the Ethics Committee apparently never intended to conduct a serious investigation of the deadly serious charges against the senator. The investigation was carried out with a big bucket of whitewash.

"I don't see anything to investigate," committee Chairman Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, told reporters after I broke the scandal. Only after several former Tsakos employees filed formal complaints did the "Ethics Club" begin an inquiry. But with the chairman's opinion already on the record, it's hardly surprising that the investigation was a charade.

I had already reported — and documented — serious allegations against Tsakos, most particularly that he was an international arms dealer with an unsavory record. I also reported solid eyewitness evidence that Mrs. Hatfield's alleged business services to Tsakos were of a kind that ordinarily doesn't call for such generous remuneration.

Long before the Ethics Committee announced its judgment, I offered to supply the committee with the evidence I had amassed on Tsakos. Stevens replied that he would review the material, but made it clear that the investigation was already completed. As for the compensation to Mrs. Hatfield, Stevens said it was "a judgment call" whether she really earned the money Tsakos paid her.

Stevens insisted that his staff investigators were "professionals." But if they're really pros, they made some surprising errors and oversights. For example:

— Several witnesses complained that the committee staff was antagonistic, sarcastic and belligerent toward them.

— The staff failed to check charges that Tsakos had bragged of having "bought" Hatfield.

— The apartment building caretaker, who said Mrs. Hatfield was never there during the redecoration of Tsakos' apartment, was never interviewed. Neither was the decorator.

— Witnesses who supported Mrs. Hatfield's claim of giving remodeling advice, gave only lukewarm confirmation of her work to my reporter. One Hatfield friend said Mrs. Hatfield's advice to the Greek was similar to that offered by several of his non-paid friends.

— The committee staff took a junket to Greece, but failed to get any of the documented evidence on Tsakos' past dealings, which were contained in Greek government files. I was able to obtain this information with no trouble.

GEORGE F. WILL

Congress not only deficit villain

WASHINGTON — Someone should silence naughty Norman Ornstein before he spoils the sport of Congress-bashing. He demonstrates that congressional irresponsibility has not been the primary cause of the many deficits that have produced our national debt.

George F. Will

In an essay for American Enterprise Institute, he notes that the $80 million Revolutionary War debt was cut in half by 1811. The War of 1812 tripled the debt, but it was almost eliminated in the 1830s. It rose as a result of the Mexican War, but then declined until the Civil War produced a $2.6 billion national debt. That caused Congress to centralize spending, resulting in two powerful appropriations committees. In 31 years (1867-1897), there were 27 surpluses. In 13 years revenues exceeded expenditures by more than 25 percent.

The Spanish-American War, combined with the 1896 recession, initiated 20 years with 11 deficits, but in 1916 the national debt was approximately what it had been in 1896. After 127 years the Republic's debt was $1.23 billion. But 1919, modern war, the foremost shaper of the modern world, had increased the debt 20-fold, to $25.8 billion. Then Congress again tightened budget procedures and the debt again shrank, to $16 billion by 1930.

Depression deficits were almost trivial compared to those of World War II — $211 billion. The national debt as a percentage of GNP was 33 percent on the eve of the Depression, 43 percent in 1940, 128 percent in 1946.

In 1946 Congress cut the number of committees and took other measures to restrain spending. Thanks to that and economic growth, the national debt as a percentage of GNP shrank to 98 percent by 1949, 56 percent by 1961.

But in the next quarter-century there was just one small surplus ($3.2 billion in 1969). From 1960 to 1980 the debt grew from $293 billion to $993 billion. In Reagan's first term it nearly doubled, as did the clamor against Congress and four proposed constitutional amendments (to restrain Congress).

Although Congress has been, in Ornstein's word, an "accomplice" it has been less important as a deficit-maker than Presidents, from Lyndon Johnson with a guns-and-butter policy through Reagan's gamble that the stimulative effect of his tax cuts would make the cuts virtually self-financing, eliminating the need for politically hazardous cuts in spending on middle-class programs.

Ornstein acknowledges that Congress has contributed to the deficit problem by the decline of its institutional tough-mindedness and the rise of "subcommittee government" which has weakened the central control of spending through appropriations committees. And Congress has mastered the art of bestowing blessings by tax breaks rather than appropriations.

But Congress has reduced politically profitable discretionary domestic spending by reducing the amount (as a percentage of the budget) and the discretion (adopting formula programs). Congress indexed entitlement programs, thereby stopping the politically advantageous but fiscally irresponsible process of voting ad hoc increases every few years.

In 1982 Congress, dragging a reluctant President, attacked the deficit by raising taxes in an election year. In 1983 it attacked the deficit by initiating an energy-tax increase. In 1984 there again was something like congressional government, with another attempt to reduce the deficit by raising taxes in an election year, with an essentially passive President acquiescing.

Today there are reports that Reagan will go barnstorming to rally support for substantial cuts in middle-class programs. I, for one, will believe it when I see it from the man who, as Ornstein notes, has supported almost all the water projects President Carter tried to kill, has supported swollen farm subsidies and generous farm-loan guarantees, has supported subsidized electric power and grazing fees for his Western friends, has pledged to "not stand for" cuts in the biggest sector of big government (Social Security), and wants some new deficit-enlarging programs, such as tuition tax credits. "These," says Ornstein dryly, "are not the habits of a President who would wield the line-item veto pen mercilously."

The proposed item veto would cover only appropriations bills, and only a small portion of spending is controlled by such bills. In the $925 billion fiscal 1985 budget there is just $81 billion in non-defense discretionary spending. And Ornstein thinks an item veto might increase spending because Presidents would use it as a club to threaten legislators who oppose spending the President favors. For example, he says, in Reagan's hands the item veto could be used to threaten dams and federal buildings desired by legislators opposed to MX. We would wind up buying the dams and buildings — and the larger number of MXs.

Ornstein, you see, is doubly insufferable. He robs us of two comforts: the image of Congress as a convenient villain, and the hope that constitutional tinkering can be a panacea.

ART BUCHWALD

Meeting was pure dynamite!

I dropped in on a "Right to Bomb" anti-abortion meeting the other night.

Art Buchwald

The speaker was holding several sticks of dynamite as he addressed his small but fervent audience.

He said, "Now the purpose in blowing up abortion clinics is to show the country we're serious about saving unborn lives."

There was loud applause.

"Everyone talks about anti-abortion, but nobody does anything about it. The 'Right to Bomb' movement believes that marching and silent vigils are a waste of time, and the only way people will listen is if we make a loud explosion."

The audience laughed.

"Bombing abortion clinics is just another way of saying that we revere human life. We want to make our blasts so loud that every congressman and Supreme Court justice will hear them and know the 'Right to Bomb' people mean business."

Loud applause.

"Blowing up bricks and mortar is nothing compared to killing millions of babies," the speaker said. "But if we don't prove the end justifies the means, we have no right to call ourselves pro-lifers."

The speaker continued, "The most important thing in blowing up an abortion clinic is making sure that your bomb works. Every time you set off a dud, you give aid and comfort to the criminals. Now are there any questions so far?"

A teen-ager got up. "I never made a bomb before. How do you do it?"

"After the formal meeting we will break up in study groups and our instructors will show you. It's quite simple once you get the hang of it."

A man raised his hand. "Suppose an innocent person gets killed when the bomb goes off?"

The audience booed the question.

The speaker smiled. "Naturally we hope no one gets hurt, but we have to expect some casualties when we're doing the Lord's work."

"Amen," we all said.

The next question from the floor was, "When we build our bombs where do we place them?"

"Before you leave tonight we will give you a list of the abortion clinics in the neighborhood, and you can choose the one most convenient to your home."

"Suppose two of us want to blow up the same clinic?"

"All the better. Two bombs are better than one."

More laughter.

"If we get caught will the 'Right to Bomb' movement provide legal services?"

"We certainly will. Our lawyers are on 24-hour standby and ready to plead each and every one of you 'not guilty,' no matter what the charge might be. But our goal is to get a law passed legalizing all abortion clinic bombings. If we can't get it through Congress we'll work for a constitutional amendment."

The audience got on its feet and broke into song. "All we are saying is give bombs a chance."

The speaker raised his hand to quiet the crowd and said, "Let us pray for life."

We all bowed our heads.

After the prayer the groups went to their assigned bomb instructors to learn about explosives, fuses and timing devices.

As I left to get my coat a man said to me, "What did you think of the meeting?"

All I could reply was, "Dynamite."

Suit filed against Goetz

NEW YORK (AP) — Lawyers say they filed a $50 million lawsuit against Bernhard Goetz to "temper the wave of adulation" for the man who admitted shooting four youths he said menaced him in a subway train.

The suit was filed Wednesday on behalf of 19-year-old Darryl Cabey, who was shot along with three other teen-agers Dec. 22.

A grand jury refused to indict Goetz on attempted murder charges but returned an indictment on a weapons charge. Cabey's attorneys contend their client was shot in the back although he never went near Goetz.

James Kelner, Goetz's attorney, refused to comment on that version of the incident.

FAA official faces prison

NEW YORK (AP) — A senior Federal Aviation Administration official faces a 25-year prison sentence after pleading guilty to charges that he and others used bogus construction and supply bills to trick the agency out of $1.3 million.

Three other FAA officials were indicted Wednesday as Allen Moserwitz of Wheatley Heights, the 39-year-old chief of the radar-data unit at Kennedy airport, pleaded guilty to one count of bribery and two counts of tax evasion.

Union Carbide plant officials say lethal gas leaks 'not serious'

INSTITUTE, W.Va. (AP) — The 28 reported leaks in five years of deadly methyl isocyanate at Union Carbide Corp.'s Institute plant represent one-third the actual number, but none was serious, the company says.

None of the 61 "in-plant losses" of methyl isocyanate and 22 leaks of a mixture of MIC and phosgene was extensive enough to require reporting to the Environmental Protection Agency, the company said in a statement Wednesday.

The company had provided reports on 28 MIC leaks to the House Subcommittee on Health and the Environment shortly after the panel held a hearing in Institute on Dec. 14.

"On such short notice from the congressman's staff, and given the priorities of shutting down the MIC unit and meeting with investigators of four federal and state agencies... the company was unable to complete a search for all relevant documents," it said. "That has since been done."

Production of MIC was suspended at Institute after a leak of the chemical at a Union Carbide plant in Bhopal, India, killed more than 2,000 people on Dec. 3.

The leaks of MIC and phosgene, both used to make pesticides, occurred from Jan. 1, 1980 to Dec. 14, 1984, the company said.

Under the federal Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act, which set up the Superfund to clean up hazardous waste dumps, MIC releases only have to be reported to the EPA if at least one pound of the chemical goes beyond the perimeter of a plant over a 24-hour period, the company said.

"To the best of Union Carbide's knowledge, if any MIC escaped across the fence line in MIC incidents, it did not equal or exceed one pound in any incident."

An EPA report released Jan. 23, however, said that of the 28 leaks it was told about, 12 were of less than a pound, seven were greater than 10 pounds and two were in undetermined amounts.

The report also said one of the leaks, which occurred Dec. 31, 1983, involved 840 pounds of MIC. It said the chemical leaked inside the Institute plant and was recovered and "returned to production." The report said "actual MIC losses to the environment cannot be estimated."

Union Carbide spokesman Jackson B. Browning told a news conference in Danbury, Conn., last Friday that the Dec. 31, 1983, leak involved only five pounds of MIC.

The company said in its news release that the MIC releases were "not a threat to life or the environment and are not abnormal."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Strong sanctions sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — While pushing for renewed aid to Nicaraguan rebels, the Reagan administration is also moving toward tougher economic sanctions against Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger says.

Claiming the Sandinista regime "unabashedly exports subversion and terrorism," Weinberger said Wednesday that the United States "shouldn't do anything" to help Nicaragua economically and should cut trade with the Central American nation to a minimum.

In another development, two Democratic congressmen said new U.S. military exercises in Honduras could funnel illegal "back door aid" to Nicaraguan rebels and they called for suspension of maneuvers slated to start next month.

Reps. Joseph P. Addabbo of New York and Norman Y. Mineta of California criticized the Big Pine 3 exercises as "million dollar saber-rattling by the Reagan administration with the intended byproduct of back door aid to the Nicaraguan contras," as the CIA-backed rebels are called.

Salvadoran ills continue

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rightist "death squads" have sharply reduced their activities in El Salvador but the country's armed forces have continued "indiscriminate attacks" on civilians in conflict zones, a human rights group says.

Americas Watch, a New York-based group, said in a report issued Wednesday it welcomes the positive developments that have taken place but in some respects "the human rights situation in El Salvador continues to be terrible."

The report, based on four visits to El Salvador by Americas Watch investigators, covers the period since last June when an elected civilian president, Jose Napoleon Duarte, took office.

Sharon seeks new post

JERUSALEM (AP) — Back from his self-proclaimed victory in a libel suit against Time magazine, Ariel Sharon has begun consolidating his political position for a possible drive to become Israel's prime minister.

After a two-month absence to fight his court battle in New York, Sharon returned home Wednesday and repeated his claim that he proved "Time lied" about his role in the Lebanon war.

He refused to comment at an airport news conference about his future political plans, but Sharon has never kept his ambitions a secret.

Cooperation encouraged

MEKELLE, Ethiopia (AP) — Despite their political differences, the U.S. and Ethiopian governments should work together to make the people of this famine-stricken country self-sufficient in food production, says Archbishop John J. O'Connor of New York.

O'Connor, who commented Wednesday while touring feeding centers for refugees, didn't offer specific proposals for U.S.-Ethiopian cooperation.

But he said, "Regardless of political, ethnic and religious differences, it would appear to me that the U.S. and Ethiopian governments together could really accomplish miracles."

"The United States has the agricultural and technological expertise," he said. "You cannot just continue feeding people forever, which is short-sighted. But what is needed in an investment to make people self-sufficient."

Iraq begins offensive

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraqi forces today launched an offensive against Iranian troops in the central sector of the front line, inflicted heavy losses and "occupied new positions," a military spokesman said.

It was the second offensive announced by Iraq this week — the first time in 31 months that Iraq has reported staging major ground assaults along the border.

On Monday, Iraq said 40,000 of its soldiers supported by air and artillery attacked across Iranian lines in the southern sector of the 730-mile front line.

The military spokesman, reading a communique on Baghdad radio, said the Iraqi forces were "entrenched in the new positions" after today's attack.

Tech, TCU winning battle for Midland grid talent

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Texas Tech University and Texas Christian University appear to be the most successful colleges in the recruiting of Midland football players as the Feb. 13 national signing date nears.

Players from both Midland High and Midland Lee have been sought by major schools this year.

Two Lee all-district running backs, Tyrone Thurman and Walter Jones, have verbally committed to Texas Tech, according to Lee head football coach Jack Tayrien. Thurman and Jones both played for Tech's defensive coordinator Spike Dykes in 1983 when the Rebels were 13-3 and in the state finals.

Midland High receiver Allan Foret committed to TCU this past week, according to MHS head football coach Doug McCutchen, and TCU expects another committment from MHS second team all-state tight end Darrell Davis sometime next week.

Davis is scheduled to visit the University of Texas soon, but it is felt that Davis is leaning toward TCU. Davis also visited Texas Tech.

Midland High all-district tackle Brad Edgar has opted to go out of state to the University of California, according to McCutchen. Edgar also visited Brown, according to reports.

Verbal committments are not binding on the athletes. Colleges can not sign an athlete to a scholarship agreement until the Feb. 13 signing date.

Lee has posted a 25-5 record in the past two years with Thurman and Jones playing halfback.

Jones also visted the University of Texas at El Paso, but Tayrien said that he has cancelled a visit to the University of Nebraska. Jones said that Oklahoma, Baylor and TCU were also interested in him.

During the 1984 season, Jones became the first Rebel back in history to have back-to-back 1,000 yard rushing seasons and is Lee's all-time leading rusher with 2,799 yards.

Thurman also visited UTEP and Baylor was also interested in the 145-pound scatback, who had 1,203 yards rushing for Lee in 1984, averaging 7.3 yards per carry. Thurman also led Lee in scoring with 150 points.

Foret has been the most prolific receiver in MHS history. In 1984, Foret caught 19 passes for 329 yards and three touchdowns, averaging 17.3 yards per catch. In 1983, Foret caught over 400 yards in passing while gaining all-district honors as a junior.

Davis earned second team all-state honors with 35 catches for 569 yards and two touchdowns and was the only player to gain all-district honors on both offense and defense. In addition, Davis is the leading scorer in 4-5A basketball and placed third in the state in the shot put in 1984. He has also been mentioned to a couple of national all-star teams.

Edgar was all-district as an offensive tackle, but was an honorable mention choice as a defensive lineman for the Bulldogs. He is the only Midlander who appears to be considering a major university out of state.

Several other Tall City footballers are being courted by smaller schools.

Lee's all-district safety Earl Davis is being wooed by Angelo State, Eastern New Mexico and West Texas State. Angelo State is alos interested in Lee fullback Randy Ellis.

Lee linebacker Donnie Rivas has visited McMurry and has had feelers from Southwest Texas State.

Eastern New Mexico, a team that has recruited the Midland area heavily in the past, is also looking at Midland High running back Keith Byrd and MHS lineman Steve Mizzels. WTSU is also interested in both Byrd and Mizzels.

Other names and schools may crop up prior to Feb. 13 and after. Many of the smaller schools will take another look at available talent after the Feb. 13 signing date.

WJCAC enters second round action tonight

From Staff Reports

The second half of Western Junior College Athletic Conference play gets underway tonight with Midland College and Odessa College tied at the head of the class with 8-1 records.

As matters stand now, the conference title could be decided when the Petroplex rivals tangle in the next to last game of the season at the Langford Chaparral Center. But that's a long way down the road and the Chaps and Wranglers have treacherous road trips to Roswell, N.M., Snyder, and Big Spring.

Coach Jerry Stone isn't even looking that far ahead. He takes his Chaps into the Panhandle tonight to play Clarendon, 1-8. After Monday's win over Western Texas College, the Midland College coach was deploring the necessity of another trip to the cold, unfriendly north, even though MC defeated Clarendon, 80-60, in the first meeting.

Odessa College, meanwhile, will be opening the second half against Frank Phillips College, a team the Wranglers beat the first time around, 74-61.

Two games back of the Chaps and Wranglers is Amarillo College, the preseason favorite to win it all, but now 6-3 going into tonight's game against Howard College after losing 63-61 in overtime against NMMI Monday.

Clarendon's lone WJCAC victory came over South Plains, 88-84, but the Bulldogs have been playing some close ones, last week losing to NMMI, 52-49, and Howard, 63-61. Another loss was by two, 69-67, to Western Texas College.

R.J. Greathouse, averaging 11.7 per game, is the top scorer for Clarendon, which boasts the fourth stingiest defense in the league.

While MC's 6-9 Teviin Binns is the league-leader in scoring, 23.8 per game, and rebounding, 8.6, Clarendon comes off the boads with Keith Kubicek (5.6 a game), Carl Curry (5.5), Greathouse (5.5) and Adam Richafds (5.3).

CHAPSTYQUES — Midland College returns home Monday to face South Plains and then goes to Roswell next Thursday for NMMI...Zeak Williams moved up to second in WJCAC steals with 64, eight behind SPC's Steve Liford....Tony Wright still leads in field goal percentage with 55-85 for .647 and teammate Vernon Coleman is among the free throw percentage leaders with 45 of 57 for .789...Best shooting teams from the field: WTC .552, Amarillo .548, Midland .538, NMMI .534, Odessa .520...

Discipline moves hit SWC teams

Associated Press

Southern Methodist Coach Dave Bliss joined Indiana Coach Bobby Knight and Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton in doling out some discipline Wednesday night, and the spurred No. 4 ranked Mustangs took it out on the Houston Cougars.

Bliss benched star guard Carl Wright for "philosophical differences" in SMU's 85-78 Southwest Conference victory over the Cougars.

Center Jon Koncak scored 27 points and grabbed 21 rebounds and Wright bounced off the bench with 19 points and passed off 10 assists.

The victory left SMU alone atop the SWC ladder with a 7-1 ledger.

The surprise second-place finisher for the first half of the season is the Texas Aggies, who downed Rice 64-52 to seize second place with a 6-2 record.

IN THE only other SWC game, Arkansas defeated the Baylor Bears 64-57 in Waco.

Knight benched four of his starting players this week and Sutton sat down a star forward in disciplinary action.

"I started Kevin Lewis because he's been playing well lately," said Bliss. "Carl and I have resolved our differences. It was nothing major. He did a super job coming off the bench for us."

Bliss held closed door practices all week preparing for the Cougars.

Koncak said the Mustangs were mad about losing to Texas Tech last Saturday night.

"We played with a lot more emotion, we had something to prove," said Koncak.

Wright didn't stick around to talk to the press.

"I'm in a rush, I'm not talking," said Wright, benched for the first time in his career.

Houston Coach Guy Lewis said the Mustangs didn't particularly need Wright anyway. Koncak was the difference, Lewis said.

"They had success going into him all night long. He's a great player and we don't have anybody to match up with him. We had three guys on him there at times," Lewis said.

The Mustangs raised their record to 7-1 in SWC play and 17-2 overall. The defending champion Cougars dropped to 5-3 and 13-6.

The Mustangs snapped a six-game losing streak to the Cougars.

Eric Dickens scored 16 points for the losers, Alvin Franklin added 14 and Marvin Alexander had 12 points.

"All the writers picked SMU overwhelmingly at the beginning of the season," said Lewis. "You're the experts, and they're proving you right."

Bliss said he wanted to beat the Cougars more than any team he had played this season.

"I haven't wanted to win a game this year as much as I wanted to win this one," said Bliss. "This is a marvelous team when they play together as a team as they did tonight.

"I know it's a cliche, but this is a team with a great future in front of them. It was very important for us to play as well as we did tonight."

At Waco Wednesday, Arkansas forward Charles Balentine hit 4 out of 4 free throw attempts in overtime to lift the Razorbacks to victory over the Baylor Bears.

Balentine, who led all scorers with 20, broke a 55-55 deadlock with 2:55 remaining in the extra period. He later put the game on ice with another pair, giving UA a 63-55 lead with 29 seconds.

"This is a big win for us," Coach Sutton said. "We're still in the conference race, though a lot of people might think we're not.

"But we just had to pick up this win on the road," he said. "During overtime, I thought we responded well. Our defense looked really good."

The Razorbacks are 14-7 overall, and 5-3 in the SWC. The Bears fell to 8-10 and 1-7.

THE AGGIES defeated the Rice Owls by riding on Don Marbury's 19 points and Todd Holloway's 17 points. All but two of Holloway's points came in the second half.

Texas A&M won for the 12th straight time on Rice's home court dating back to 1973, and increased their season record to 14-5. Rice lost its sixth straight game, falling to 8-10 and 1-7 records.

"Todd (Holloway) has kind of been in a slump," A&M Coach Shelby Metcalf said. "It was good to see him shoot so well."

The Owls hit only 8-of-16 free throws and were outrebounded 45-32 by the Aggies.

St. John's beginning to catch on TV ratings key to college success

By WILLIAM C. RHODEN
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — CBS hopes that St. John's elevation in the national rankings will be beneficial for all concerned.

For all of its triumphs on the court, St. John's has been just fair as a television attraction. But officials at CBS are saying that the Redmen's nationally televised victory over Georgetown on Saturday could change things.

"Judging from the overnight ratings and from what I'm reading in the papers, St. John's has caught on," said Kevin O'Malley, the executive producer of college sports for CBS.

Although the national Nielson ratings will not come out until Friday, the game's overnight numbers were impressive. In New York, the game earned a 9.7 rating and a 25 share. According to CBS, which began televising college basketball in 1980-81, the New York rating was the best overnight rating ever for a Saturday college game.

In Washington the game pulled a 15.4 rating and a 36 share. In Chicago it got an 8.4 rating compared to 4.0 for the North Carolina State-Louisville game carried by NBC. In Los Angeles and San Francisco, the game earned 5.5 and 5.3, respectively, compared with 3.5 and 2.2, respectively, for the California-Southern California game carried on NBC.

"That means the game went from being a great conference game to a great national game," said Len DeLuca, the director of program planning and development for CBS. The network is in the second year of a three-year, $6.5 million contract with the Big East.

CBS's best national rating this season was an 8.6 mark earned after the Southern Methodist-North Carolina game. NBC's best was the Villanova-Georgetown game that earned a 4.8 rating. A rating point is 1 percent of the 84.9 million households in the country with television sets. A share is a percentage of all the homes in the nation watching television at a given time.

But is St. John's becoming more appealing, or did Georgetown's national reputation lift Saturday's ratings?

"It was a combination of things," O'Malley said. "The conference identity is what fans are aware of, you don't get ratings based on one team. Here you had Number One against Number Three, and a local team that had a chance to become Number One. People were really anticipating this game."

Before this season, St. John's had made four national appearances on CBS, never earning more than a 5.2 rating nationally nor more than 4.0 in New York. In 10 appearances with NBC, dating back to 1969, the rating has ranged from 10.5 for a tournament game to 3.2 for a regular season contest.

St. John's nationally televised game with UCLA last month earned a poor 3.1 national rating and only a 2.6 rating in New York.

"New York is a tough sports televison market because there are so many other entertainment opportunities," DeLuca said. "You have to be exceptional. Now St. John's is exceptional."

If Patrick Ewing was the defensive heart of Georgetown's 1984 national championship team, Gene Smith was unquestionably its soul. The 5-foot-10-inch guard was the key force behind Georgetown's incredible second-half rout of Kentucky in the semifinal game when the Wildcats made just 3 shots in 33 field-goal attempts. Smith is no longer in basketball. After earning his degree in buisness, he worked briefly with an accounting firm in Washington and now works as a sales representative for Davimos Sports Management Inc. in Boca Raton, Fla. Georgetown, meanwhile, has lost consecutive games to St. John's and Syracuse.

The last team to beat St. John's was Niagara, which upset the Redmen Dec. 15 at the Niagara Falls Convention Center. Niagara went on to lose four straight games.

Lee celebrates 12-2 football year

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland Lee held a side splitting celebration of its "New Tradition" at Midland Center Wednesday night with a banquet honoring the 12-2 Rebel football team.

Anytime you put together a lineup of Dr. Don Newberry, Scotty Alcorn and Vivian Thurman, you have the makings of a celebration. And it doesn't hurt when your football team goes 12-2 on the year to help create a happy atmosphere.

Dr. Newberry, president of Western Texas College, was the quest speaker and he did a great job of setting the tone for some aisle rolling. Scotty Alcorn, master of ceremonies, even admitted he was upstaged by Dr. Newberry, saying, "I didn't want to waste all my good stuff with him up there."

And of course, Mrs. Thurman, who was named Booster of the Year, led the crowd in a couple of cheers that brought the house down.

But the center of attention went to the Rebels, who vaulted into the state playoffs for the second year in a row after losing 55 seniors from the 1983 state finalist team under the direction of head coach Jack Tayrien.

The Lee coaching staff dealt out a bushel of individual honors with a surprise or two thrown in.

Running back Tyrone Thurman, the 145-pound mighty mite who set a school record by scoring 150 points during the season, was named as the team's most valuable offensive player. Defensive end Mike Rittenberry, who wasn't even selected to the all-district team, was named as the most valuable defensive player.

But Bobby Dunn, assistant principal at Lee, presented the biggest surprise of the night when he presented the annual Bob Dillon Fighting Rebel award to a team member who didn't "score a touchdown, make a tackle or make a run from scrimmage." The award went to team manager Oscar Reyes, the first non-player to receive the award. It was probably the most popular vote of the night.

"This is the biggest award I've ever received in my life," said Reyes, who was stunned when his name was called. The Fighting Rebel award is presented annually in memory of Bob Dillon, a sports writer of the Midland Reporter-Telegram who died in a car crash four years ago.

In another special award, place kicker Craig Kamradt was presented the annual Lena Douglas award for being Lee's top scholar athlete. Kamradt owns a 4.25 grade point average and ranks 13th in a senior class of over 500 students. That award is also given every year in honor of Lena Douglas, Lee's first choir director who wrote Lee's alma mater.

Other individual awards listed as outstanding player awards included Wayland Jenkins, defensive lineman; Donnie Rivas, linebacker; Chris Embrey, defensive back; Dexter Traylor, receiver; Ariel Elliott, offensive lineman; Walter Jones, offensive back; and Tracy Mayfield, special teams.

Kelly Sanner of KOSA-TV also presented the Lee Booster Club a check for $250 on behalf of the parents of sportscaster Jeff Shull, who was killed in a plane crash after covering a Lee playoff game in 1983. Sanner said the donation would be presented annually.

Lee Booster Club president Herb Pearce was also given a special plaque from the Lee coaching staff for his work over the year.

Lloyd, Navratilova war has new meaning

By PETER ALFANO
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — When she reflects on her career, Chris Evert Lloyd prefers to think in terms of how she has grown, not aged. It is a subtle but an important distinction.

Lloyd remembers her emergence as a bashful teen-ager, nicknamed Chrissie, Little Miss Cool, the Ice Maiden. She remembers being "inhibited and a little afraid," compared to the way she sees herself now — as a 30-year-old, self-assured role model for women's tennis who is still improving. Chrissie, she says, would be no match for Lloyd.

UNTIL LAST weekend, however, some fans may have preferred to remember her as Chrissie, a shy but also a steely tough baseliner who would rally interminably for a point, until winning it became more a matter of principle than worth. Chrissie was the young woman who dominated tennis during the 1970's, when her sole purpose was to be the best.

"I was more single-minded then," Lloyd said Tuesday. "I had better concentration. I had nerves of steel."

In the last two years, her nerves became jangled when she faced Martina Navratilova. Thirteen times they had played since the 1982 Australian Open, and all 13 times Miss Navratilova had won. Most times the matches were excruciatingly close, and Lloyd could single out a point or two that had made the difference, but that had made losing more frustrating.

If Navratilova had not become an obsession, she had become an obstacle for Lloyd, whose ambition was to regain her No. 1 spot in the world. Instead, she heard that she would never beat her again and that Navratilova might be the most dominant player of all time.

Chris Evert Lloyd

Martina Navratilova

"The letters and response I got from people the last two years mostly said, 'Please beat Martina,' " Lloyd said Tuesday in an interview as she helped to promote the Virginia Slims championships at Madison Square Garden in March. "They weren't used to seeing me lose."

Then last Sunday, in the final of a tour event at Key Biscayne, Fla., she defeated Navratilova, 6-2, 6-4. The victory was especially sweet because Navratilova had said that, even on an off day, she thought she could beat Lloyd. It was a victory that might have silenced some skeptics — for now.

"People were starting to doubt me, to lose faith," Lloyd said. "And I wondered sometimes whether I would ever beat her again. That's why winning gave me a lot of satisfaction. I had been coming close, but instead of giving up, thinking it was futile, I showed I can still play my best."

She showed that the toughness was still there, the need to compete and win. She may not be as driven as she once was, she said, but she is willing to make the sacrifices necessary to remain at the top.

In the 1970's, when she was dominant, it was the other women who had to measure up. When Tracy Austin beat Lloyd at her own baseline game five consecutive times, she understood it was time for her to change. She was introduced to the net.

Then, when Navratilova began to overpower her with a more physical style, Lloyd, the one with the grunts who never appeared to sweat, began pumping iron. "Not to be a body builder," she said, "but for more strength. Martina is stronger than any of the women. I wanted to be a better athlete because now it isn't enough to be a great player."

She exhibits a sense of purpose when admirers wonder why she has not retired. What is there left to prove? Lloyd said that some women do ask, "Why don't you have a baby?"

"I used to say I would when I was in my 30's," she said. "Now I'm 30 but I'm not impetuous or a good planner. I feel comfortable now and I don't feel any pressure. There's plenty of time."

As with most celebrities, her career and personal life have been a matter of public record. And as she has matured, Lloyd has been willing to share some of her innermost thoughts, something Chrissie would not have been capable of doing.

There was her fling with Jimmy Connors, her marriage to the Englishman John Lloyd, which has survived a brief separation, and the self-imposed sabbaticals she took to pursue other interests, even one as seemingly mundane as sunbathing at the beach.

Last month Lloyd, a native Floridian, was persuaded to go snorkeling for the first time. She picked a place in Australia that occasionally drew sharks.

"I pace myself well," she said. "Bjorn Borg played 25 weeks of tournaments and then 25 weeks of exhibitions. I don't play exhibitions. I like to lie at the beach and around the house.

"It was back in 1976 when I realized that career thrills were not the only thing that would make me happy. I had just won Wimbledon and an hour later, I was back in an empty hotel room feeling depressed. The only thing that will make me happy is to have other interests."

THOSE INTERESTS can be distractions for someone working her way back to the top, but now they are part of Mrs. Lloyd's challenge. The risk is that she will linger too long, becoming a stepping stone for a new generation of teen-agers. But she is ready to accept that, too.

Marino leaves bachelor status

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Miami Dolphins quarterback Dan Marino, wearing a black jacket and white tie, married a Pittsburgh-area woman Wednesday in a private church ceremony attended by several of his present and former teammates.

Marino, 23, who broke nearly every major National Football League single-season passing record, including 48 touchdown passes last season, was married to 22-year-old Claire D. Veazey of suburban Mount Lebanon.

Marino, a four-year starter at the nearby University of Pittsburgh, exchanged vows with his new bride before about 120 relatives and friends in St. Regis Roman Catholic Church, across the street from the gray frame home of Marino's parents, Daniel and Veronica.

"Beautiful, really beautiful," was how Marino's grandmother, Julia Marino, described the 90-minute ceremony.

She said her grandson had not seemed nervous beforehand, adding, "Danny holds his composure always."

The 6-foot-4, 215-pound Marino, who led the Dolphins to a 16-2 record before a 38-16 Super Bowl defeat to the San Francisco 49ers on Jan. 20, had no comment for the dozens of cameramen and reporters clustered outside the small brick church.

College scouts ignore small fish

By SHAUN POWELL
Dallas Times Herald

MIDLOTHIAN, Texas (AP) — Dennis Washington's insides were burning, just as if he'd been smacked by a 250-pound tackle. However, his face failed to show the pain. No problem, no big deal was the instant signal.

"It's OK," he managed to say.

But drat, that internal feeling was horrible. The college scouts usually say he is too small to play big-time college football. This time, they didn't even bother to say anything.

Washington, a 5-10, 170-pound running back for Class 3A Midlothian, thought he was set to attend his college choice, Texas Christian University, on an athletic scholarship. The school sent him material, talked encouragingly, brought him to campus...all before the Christmas holidays.

Then weeks went by with no word.

"I guess it was a way of saying I was too small," he said.

Washington's situation is not unique. Every year, a number of proven players graduate from the lower classifications, looking to escape their small town and gain attention at a large universtiy. Some, like Billy Sims of Hooks and Eric Dickerson of Sealy (both 3A), have been successful. But most small schools produce small athletes, who played against suspect competition.

Call them high risk Blue Chips.

"I learned through the years in 3A," Midlothian coach Fred Johnson said sarcastically, "that maybe if you'd gained 3,000 yards rushing per ballgame, you'd get a serious look. (The scouts) feel the higher level of competition, the higher level of the athlete. But some of those players probably don't have half the (football) knowledge that Dennis has."

Washington has had a fruitful rushing career. In three seasons, he has 4,314 yards, including 1,382 as a junior and 2,192 and 26 touchdowns last season. He also was a threat as a returner — kickers directed the ball to him only twice — but Washington broke one for 94 yards and a touchdown.

He has speed — Washington placed sixth in the state last spring in the 100 meters, clocking 10.65, and runs a 4.49 in the 40. For strength, Washington benches 310 pounds, and 750 pounds leg pressing. And, with a 15.4 average in receptions last season, Washinton has shown he can catch the ball.

But, he has received attention only from Texas-Arlington and North Texas State, and one Southwest conference school, Baylor. Washington says his Feb. 1 visit to Waco is important. Should Baylor offer him a scholarship, he'll gladly accept. If not...

"I'll go to either UTA or North Texas," he said. "Don't you worry about that."

Perhaps living in a small town has hurt Washington's chances of attracting more attention. Midlothian, located south of Dallas off U.S. Highway 67, is known as "The cement capital of Texas," as one sign proclaims.

"It's pretty small, with a lot of nice people," Washington said. "But no one notices you. I thought I'd have more (scouts) interested in me, with the year I had. I want to leave here and play football. That's all I really work for. It's my long-range goal."

Midlothian's competiton? Cedar Hill, Hillsboro, Alvarado. No Plano, Carter or Highland Park here. Which leads to the most-asked question: Could he have done the same on a 5A team?

"Anyone in 5A would've liked to have had him," Johnson said. "He'd gain 2,000 yards on that level."

"I think I could've had just as good a year," Washington said. "But it's too late to find out."

Washington could find out where he fits in by playing with a big school, for a change, in college. But his chances remain slim.

Kentucky feels No. 1 Redmen sting

Associated Press

The last time St. John's University was No. 1 in the country, the Redmen took a trip to Kentucky that ended in disaster.

Frank McGuire was coach of St. John's that December in 1951, and he took his team to Lexington, Ky., with its first top national ranking. The Wildcats won 81-40, although St. John's later avenged the loss in the NCAA tournament.

This time, the trip was a little shorter, and the result was vastly different. St. John's, ranked No. 1 after a 66-65 victory over Georgetown last Saturday, went to Providence, where the Redmen won 77-60.

Lou Carnesecca, the St. John's coach 33 years later, was relieved after watching the Redmen trail 22-20 midway through a lackadaisical first half.

"We were lethargic," Carnesecca said. "I think it's a natural thing when you've been on an emotional high. The body can't sustain the level, so the body tries to recoup."

St. John's forward Walter Berry, who scored 15 points, also was relieved that the Redmen's first No. 1 test was over.

"You don't know what could happen," he said. "It could be an upset, coming off a game like Georgetown. Being No. 1 is a lot of pressure on us. Everyone's gunning for us."

Bill Wennington had 18 points and Chris Mullin added 16 as St. John's won its 11th straight for a 16-1 record, 8-0 in the Big East Conference. Harold Stark had 16 for Providence, 9-12 and 2-6 in the conference.

College Basketball

Two Top Ten teams — No. 5 Illinois and No. 8 Georgia Tech — were upset and another, sixth-ranked Duke, had to go to overtime before winning. Purdue clobbered Illinois 54-34, North Carolina State defeated Georgia Tech 61-53 and Duke got by Wake Forest 76-70.

In other games involving ranked teams, No. 4 Southern Methodist beat Houston 85-78, Clemson upended No. 11 North Carolina 52-50, No. 12 Tulsa edged Drake 67-66, No. 17 Maryland defeated Virginia 71-58 and No. 19 Kansas clobbered Kansas State 75-57.

Top Ten

Illinois scored only 16 points in the second half, five in the final six minutes, as Purdue beat the Big Ten Conference leader. The Boilermakers, led by Jim Bullock's 18 points, led 27-19 at the half and 45-29 with 5:10 to play. The loss dropped Illinois to 17-5 and 6-3 in the Big Ten. Purdue is 14-5, 5-4 in the league. The Illini did not have a player in double figures.

N.C. State, which led by 12 points in the second half, held on to beat Georgia Tech as Lorenzo Charles score six points down the stretch. Charles finished with 23 points and gave the Tar Heels a 51-50 lead with two free throws with 3:35 to play. N.C. State now is 12-6 and 4-3 in the Atlantic Coast Conference, while Georgia Tech is 15-4 and 4-3.

David Henderson hit four foul shots in the final minute of overtime as Duke scored an ACC victory over Wake Forest. After a 62-62 tie at the end of regulation, Duke outscored the Demon Deacons 7-2 to start overtime. Wake Forest had pulled within 69-68 when Henderson hit three of four chances at the foul line. Duke is 15-3 and 5-3 in the ACC.

Second Ten

Chris Michael's 18-foot jumper with three seconds left boosted Clemson over North Carolina. Grayson Marshall had given Clemson a 50-50 tie with two free throws with 54 seconds left. Steve Hale missed a 20-footer at the buzzer for North Carolina, 14-5 and 4-3 in the ACC. Clemson is 11-7 and 3-5 in the league.

Steve Harris scored 15 of Tulsa's final 21 points as a Drake rally fell short at the buzzer when Stephfon Butler missed a desperation 35-footer. Butler's errant shot came after Tulsa's Herbert Johnson missed the front end of a one-and-one free-throw opportunity with 13 seconds to play. The victory gave Tulsa a 17-2 record and 14 straight victories. The Golden Hurricane now is 8-0 in the Missouri Valley Conference. Harris had 32 points.

Adrian Branch scored a career-high 30 points as Maryland expanded a 36-32 lead with 13:25 left to 13 points at the final buzzer. Len Bias added 19 for the Terrapins, 17-5 and 4-1 to lead the ACC.

Kansas outscored Kansas State 12-1 over an eight-minute stretch midway through the first half to coast to an easy Big Eight Conference victory. Freshman forward Danny Manning led three Jayhawks in double figures with 20 points. Kansas is 16-4 and 4-1 in the conference.

Knight places Alford back in starting lineup

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Indiana coach Bob Knight, who in a week benched six upperclassmen, left two at home for a road game and then kicked one off the team for academic reasons, says "very shortly we'll see the results" of his decisions.

One of the benched players, sophomore guard Steve Alford, an Olympian and Indiana's first freshman most valuable player ever, is back in the starting lineup for tonight's game with Iowa. It's the Hoosiers' first game at home since their troubles began with three losses in as many games on the road.

The Hawkeyes have a 16-4 season record and with their 5-2 Big Ten mark are tied for first with Michigan.

Knight will stick with his revised lineup tonight, using three freshmen with Alford and senior center Uwe Blab.

Blab and six freshmen played against Illinois on Sunday, losing 52-41.

Alford, a member of Knight's gold medal-winning U.S. Olympic team last summer, is the Hoosiers' leading scorer with a 19.5 average.

The rest of Knight's lineup, released by the school's sports information office, includes freshmen forward Kreigh Smith, who will be making his first start and is averaging 1.2 points a game; forward Steve Eyl, who has started twice this season and is averaging 3.1, and guard Delray Brooks, a starter in five previous games with a 3.9 average.

Blab is averging 15.6 points a game.

Iowa Coach George Raveling, Knight's assistant in the Olympics, is telling his team to ignore the the controversy.

"I told my players it's like a fight at the neighbor's house. You hear the fight, but you don't go marching over there to break it up. You just stay in your own house.

"You have a disadvantage anytime you play Indiana at Bloomington," Raveling said. "They are going to play hard, play good defense and have a sold-out arena. I don't really see that the meaningful factors have changed."

Mike Giomi, a former starter, was dismissed from the squad for failing to meet Knight-imposed academic standards that are more strict than those of the university or the NCAA. The 6-foot-8 junior started 11 games and was the team's leading rebounder.

Winston Morgan, left home with Giomi from the Illinois trip, practiced Tuesday and is expected to be in uniform against Iowa. Morgan, a starter in nine games, has not played since Jan. 19, when Indiana lost at Ohio State.

Knight, 11-6 overall in his 14th season with Indiana and 3-4 in Big Ten play, has used 11 different starting units this season. Of 15 players on the roster, all but Smith and freshman center Magnus Pelkowski have started at least one game. Only Blab and Brooks have played in every game.

Dollar mixed

LONDON (AP) — The dollar was mixed against major currencies in early European trading today. Gold bullion prices were higher in a very quiet market.

The British pound, which rallied Wednesday after OPEC ministers held oil price cuts to modest levels, was fractionally lower at mid-morning today.

Dealers said potential buyers, though attracted by Britain's 14 percent base interest rate, were holding off in the belief that some reduction was imminent.

In Frankfurt, the West German mark was fractionally higher against the dollar. Dealers said the market was waiting for the outcome of today's meeting of the West German Bundesbank's central bank council. Most traders said they didn't believe the central bank would raise interest rates.

In Tokyo, where trading ends as Europe's business day begins, the dollar climbed for the second day, finishing at 254.78 Japanese yen compared with 254.25 yen late Wednesday.

Other mid-morning dollar rates compared with late Wednesday's included:

–3.1685 West German marks, down from 3.1695.

OPEC's dispute may show extent of cartel's power loss

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press Writer

An Analysis

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — OPEC's failure to agree on uniform price cuts shows vividly how far the cartel has fallen as an oil power.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, which a decade ago raised prices almost at will, has become increasingly vulnerable to forces beyond its control.

The key force now is independent producer Britain. Free to set its own prices for North Sea oil and to increase its production, Britain has boxed in OPEC.

"I have my two feet in OPEC but my two eyes on the North Sea," says Tam David-West, the oil minister of Nigeria.

The Nigerians feel compelled to match Britain's prices — regardless of what their OPEC colleagues want — because the African nation competes head-on for sales with North Sea producers.

That has made a shambles of OPEC's efforts at solidarity.

Rarely has the group's dissension been more visible than during the three days of negotiations that ended Wednesday with a split decision on price cuts. Nine members accepted the deal; four did not.

As a result, three countries cut their prices by as much as $1.41 a barrel, one raised its price by 65 cents, five agreed to keep theirs unchanged and four said they would go their own way.

Saudi Arabia's oil minister, Ahmed Zaki Yamani, said the net effect would be a drop of 29 cents in the average price of a barrel of OPEC crude oil. It is only the second price cut in the 25-year history of group — the first coming in March 1983.

Because the ministers could not all agree how to reshape their complicated pricing system, they abandoned their traditional "benchmark" price of $29.

That price applied to Saudi Light crude, which served as a reference point from which prices for other grades of OPEC oil were calculated.

Yamani said it was "anybody's guess" what the benchmark is now.

By abandoning the reference point, OPEC has allowed its pricing system to fall into even greater chaos. And it has demonstrated that the most important benchmark now is the North Sea price.

Fawzi A. Shakshuki, Libya's oil minister, conceded this point in an interview after Wednesday's session. Visibly disappointed, he said OPEC was throwing away its leadership position in the oil market.

"It's not the OPEC prices anymore, its the North Sea price" that counts in the pricing scheme favored by nine of the members in the Geneva meeting, he said.

While he would not say Britain had sapped all of OPEC's strength, Kuwait's oil minister, Ali Khalifa al-Sabah, acknowledged that any move the British make in the future will force OPEC to react in kind.

"If the (British) price is reduced too much, if it is reduced at all, we would have to reconsider our situation," al-Sabah told a news conference.

Britain now is the main focus of OPEC attention, he said.

"Call it an obsession, call it what you like. It's a fact of life," al- Sabah said.

Britain's production of North Sea oil rose in December to a record 2.7 million barrels, making it a bigger producer than all OPEC members except Saudi Arabia.

Britain is not the only competitor worrying OPEC.

Mexico, which like Britain is not a member of the cartel, also pumps more oil than all in OPEC except the Saudis. Unlike Britain, it has tacitly agreed to accommodate OPEC by neither cutting its prices below OPEC's nor increasing its production.

But that may not continue. The Mexicans told OPEC ministers at the outset of this week's meeting that unless they started acting in unison the Mexican government might cut all ties to the cartel.

Egypt's relations with OPEC also illustrate the cartel's weakening clout. Egypt's oil minister, Abdul-Hadi Kandil, began attending OPEC meetings as an observer last October even though his country is not a member of the group.

But on Tuesday, Kandil walked out of the meeting and said he would never come to another one. He told reporters that OPEC was wasting his time and that most OPEC ministers were "puppets" unable to make decisions.

OPEC's share of the world oil market has been shrinking for more than four years.

Oil minister says Egypt will set prices independently

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egypt's oil minister, who walked out of an OPEC meeting two days ago, was quoted today as saying his country will set future prices for oil exports "completely independent" of the cartel.

Abdel-Hady Kandil was quoted by the state-owned daily newspaper Al-Akhbar as saying Egypt would announce its prices for February on Friday.

"Tomorrow we will announce our decision concerning prices of Egyptian oil for February, and our policy in coming months will be completely independent, first and foremost with Egypt's interest in mind," Kandil was quoted as saying.

But President Suharto of Indonesia said today that OPEC's decision Wednesday to cut oil prices was in his country's best interests and was the best move in view of the world oil glut. It was only the second time in its 25-year history that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has cut its prices.

In line with OPEC's decision, Indonesia is cutting its Minas oil price from $29.53 to $28.53 a barrel effective Friday, said Ali Wardhana, Indonesia's minister for finance and industry, after meeting with Suharto in Jakarta. He quoted the president as saying, "OPEC's decision was in Indonesia's national interest in order to prevent a further drop in oil prices."

Egypt, which exports about half of its daily production of 870,000 barrels, is not an OPEC member but had sent observers to OPEC sessions since October.

On Tuesday, Kandil withdrew from OPEC deliberations in Geneva, Switzerland, citing differences with cartel members over prices and production levels. At the time, he told reporters he doubted Egypt would continue to cooperate with OPEC on restraining production and moving cautiously on pricing decisions.

"We froze our prices for 10 consecutive months so that the oil market would not collapse," Al-Akhbar quoted Kandil as saying.

"When (OPEC) proposed reducing production, Egypt was the first country to cut production."

Egypt, which relies on revenues from oil sales as its second major source of foreign exchange, agreed last year to cut daily production by 3 percent in line with OPEC's strategy to shore up oil prices.

"OPEC's main problem is its inability to take a decision," Kandil was quoted as saying. "They are in blocs, each with its independent personality and they cannot reach a decision because of these regional blocs."

Egypt's top grade gulf of Suez crude sells for $28 a barrel. Its cheapest, Ras Ghareb heavy crude, sells for $25.60 a barrel.

Wardhana said Indonesia will stand to lose $300 million in foreign exchange earnings this year because of the price cut, but the losses represent only 1.4 percent of total foreign exchange earnings and would not have much effect on Indonesia's development plans.

Economic index down in December

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's main gauge of future economic activity edged down in December, turning in a disappointing performance despite a variety of positive signals throughout most of the economy.

The Commerce Department reported today that its Index of Leading Economic Indicators dropped 0.2 percent last month.

In addition, the department revised the November gain to just 0.6 percent. It had originally reported that the index had risen more than twice that amount — 1.3 percent — in November.

The December decline had not been expected by most analysts, many of whom were predicting an increase of about 0.5 percent. Private economists were basing this expectation on a variety of business barometers all pointing to an economy that rebounded sharply late last year from a four-month slump.

The decline in the index came despite the fact that the government last week boosted its estimate of overall growth. The increase in the gross national product — the total output of goods and services — was put at a rate of 3.9 percent for the final three months of the year.

This represented a sharp increase from the original estimate and was also more than twice the rate of growth during the July-September period, when the economy grew at a sluggish 1.6 percent.

The GNP was not the only economic indicator pointing to a sharp rebound in the economy in the final months of the year. Factory production registered its sharpest gain in five months in December and Americans' personal income rose a strong 0.5 percent in December.

But the Commerce Department said that the elements that go into making up its Leading Economic Index turned in a weak peformance. The index is made up of a dozen measurements selected because of their ability to signal future trends in economic activity.

A single month's decline is not taken as significant. But a decline for three straight months has often signaled an impending recession. The index did decline in three consecutive months in 1984, dropping in June, July and August.

However, after strong gains in September and November, most analysts said that fears of a recession in 1985 were unwarranted. This optimism was backed up by a host of other signals showing strong gains in consumer and business spending in the final months of last year.

The department said that five of the 11 indicators available for December contributed to the decline. The biggest negative factor was contributed by a slump in new contracts and orders for plant and equipment followed by a decline in net business formation.

Other negative factors were the rate at which companies receive products from their suppliers, a drop in stock prices in December and a decline in building permits.

Six of the 11 indicators showed gains but the strength was not enough to offset the declines. The biggest positive factors were contributed by an increase in the money supply during December and growth in the average workweek.

Other positive factors were a drop in average weekly initial unemployment claims, an increase in orders for manufactured consumer goods, growth in credit and a change in prices for sensitive materials.

The total effect left the index at 164.9 percent of its 1967 base in December. In November, the index stood at 165.2 percent of its 1967 base

Eastern continues labor talks as creditors' deadline nears

MIAMI (AP) — Eastern Airlines and its 37,000 employees are working against a midnight deadline on a labor agreement that would keep 60 creditors from declaring the company in default on $2.5 billion in loans.

Eastern spokesman Glenn Parsons said Wednesday the company needs a viable business plan for 1985, including labor contracts, by midnight so that the waivers on its loans don't expire.

Part of the loans were used to finance Eastern's growing fleet.

"We have a plan ... that includes specific profit levels. The lenders agreed to the plan provided that the wage issues were resolved," Parsons said.

Although neither the company nor negotiators for its pilots, flight attendants, machinists and non-union workers would discuss the negotiations in detail, a key to the talks is said to be wage concessions granted a year ago.

Eastern had threatened to turn to bankruptcy court unless employees helped bail it out of its financial woes. They agreed to pay cuts of 18 percent to 22 percent in exchange for 25 percent of Eastern's stock and four seats on the board of directors.

The company unilaterally extended the cuts when the contract expired Jan. 4, but lawyers for the workers contended that the concessions expired with the contract. The pay cuts were discontinued.

There is no immediate threat of a strike.

"I can't tell you that we got anything firm at all," said Charles Bryan, president of International Association of Machinists District 100, which represents one-third of Eastern's 37,000 employees.

"I really couldn't say we're making a lot of progress. We're presenting proposals that we think are extremely innovative and they're coming back with the same repressive-type traditional alternatives. But I'm a perennial optimist," Bryan said.

Bryan, who sits on the Eastern board, said the biggest issue is the company's desire to extend the pay concessions.

Robert Callahan, president of the flight attendants' Transport Workers Union of America Local 553, also has spoken against the continued cuts.

Judge rejects release of Hodel documents

SEATTLE (AP) — A federal judge has refused to order the release of a report outlining the involvement of Secretary of Energy Donald Hodel and the Bonneville Power Administration in the Washington Public Power Supply System's troubled nuclear construction program.

The confidential report, prepared in August and September of 1983 at a time when Hodel was concerned about being interviewed by the CBS television news program "60 Minutes," was sought under a Freedom of Information Act suit filed by The Associated Press and KING Broadcasting of Seattle.

U.S. District Court Judge Charles Richey in Washington, D.C., ruled Wednesday the report was prepared to aid BPA, federal power marketing agency, in litigation and was thus protected from release under the Freedom of Information Act.

Hodel, nominated by President Reagan to be interior secretary, has a Friday confirmation hearing before the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee.

Hodel headed BPA from late 1972 through 1977, when WPPSS was beginning its program to build five nuclear power plants.

In 1982, WPPSS, in the largest default in municipal bond history, admitted it couldn't pay off $2.25 billion it borrowed to build the plants. Only one of the projects has been completed, while the rest are mothballed or canceled.

Donald Hodel

A civil suit was filed by Chemical Bank of New York, trustee for some 78,000 investors, and names 200 defendants, including BPA. The suit asks damages of $2.25 billion, plus interest.

The suit accuses BPA of negligence in preparing electricity demand forecasts while Hodel was administrator and negligence in overseeing the WPPSS projects. The suit does not seek damages from Hodel, although Chemical Bank officials say he will be an important witness.

Shortly after the suit was filed in August 1983, BPA hired former Deputy BPA Administrator Ray Foleen to "prepare and compile appropriate materials, including documents, studies and analyses, to assist in preparing the secretary of energy (Hodel) for hearings and interviews related" to the WPPSS projects.

Ten days after the contract was signed, it was amended to make clear the report was to assist "the Department of Energy, BPA and the Department of Justice in preparing for and conducting litigation and other matters requiring a high degree of confidentiality."

In an affidavit to the federal suit, Justice Department attorney Mark Rutzick said the report "was commissioned after multibillion dollar claims had been made against the United States, and has been used solely for the benefit of litigation."

In his brief, Rutzick admitted that at the time the report was compiled, Hodel was concerned about a "60 Minutes" interview. The interview never took place, and attorneys for Hodel said he was never shown the report.

The AP and KING Broadcasting first requested Foleen's report in March 1984, and filed suit in federal court on Oct. 15, 1984.

Midland TI plant continues strong in microchip market

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business-Oil Editor

Despite a recent nationwide controversy over faulty semiconductors and a weakening, commercial semiconducter market the Texas Instrument's Midland plant has not been negatively affected, according to company spokesman Norman Neureiter.

Neureiter said the military market for semiconducters was reflecting strength in contrast to the commercial market, which has has a decrease in demand in recent months. As a result the Midland plant, which is engaged primarily in the manufacture of military semiconductors is not likely to be impacted by employee lay offs.

Neureiter stated further that problems with the firm's test procedures, that became the center of controversial news reporting, for several weeks earlier this year had been cleared up and the Midland plant was shipping semiconductors again.

He said that following a thoroughreview of 6,000 test programs for semiconductors it was determined that all the differences between customer specifications and those printed out in the TI test programs were all trivial, dealing mostly with electrical parameters.

"The reliability and quality of the parts was never in question," informed Neureiter, who feels the story was blown out of proportion in the news.

"I read press clipping from around the world and some of the stories insinuated that the military weapons in which TI semiconductors were used were defective. That was never the case."

Neureiter also dismissed reports that IBM had "blown the whistle" on TI forcing the firm to reveal discrepancies in its test programs. He said that differences in test programs were first noticed a year ago, while reviewing tests with IBM on semiconductors purchased from TI by IBM.

"We noticed the differences, and reported the differences to our customers, because TI is a company with integrity," said the TI spokesman.

He could offer no explanation as to how the differeces between test programs and customer specifications might have happened.

SBA selecting businesses for program

LUBBOCK - The U.S. Small Business Administration announced today that the Small Business Institute (SBI) program is in operation at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin (UTPB) for the Spring semester and is now selecting client businesses.

Midland and Odessa area businesses wishing to participate should contact SBA's Lubbock office, (806) 743-7481, or Professor Tom Schaefer, SBI Director at UTPB, (915) 367-2166.

The SBA sponsored SBI Program assigns teams of senior or graduate students to provide research, case analysis, counseling and consulting services to area businesses free of charge.

Approximately twenty small businesses in the Permian Basin have participated in the program each semester in prior years. UTPB is seeking a like number this semester.

The program provides graduating college students with a practical "real world" experience and an opportunity to apply the skills they have learned to a live business environment.

Professor Schaefer said that the Small Business Institute at UTPB is particularly interested in working with energy service businesses since several student teams have excellent oil and gas backgrounds.

Interested business owners are encouraged to call SBA or UTPB as soon as possible as client spaces are limited.

Georgia newspaper to fold

ATLANTA (AP) — The Georgia Gazette, the weekly Savannah newspaper that won a Pulitzer Prize in 1984, will stop publication March 1 because of financial difficulties, officials said.

Editor Albert Scardino said Wednesday that the paper's already precarious financial situation was dealt the fatal blow Jan. 2 when Chatham County officials took away the legal advertising that had provided 60 percent of the Gazette's revenues.

"We're ceasing publication of the paper because that particular publication doesn't make any sense financially without the legal ads," Scardino said in a telephone interview from New York, where he has taken a job with The New York Times.

The Gazette, which claims a circulation of 3,000, became the first Georgia newspaper to win a Pulitzer since 1966 when it won the award for editorial writing last April. The Gazette also was the first weekly in 20 years to win the coveted editorial writing prize.

While it struggled financially, the Gazette won awards for its journalistic work, particularly for exposing and pursuing the political corruption surrounding former state Labor Commissioner Sam Caldwell, who eventually was convicted of state and federal fraud charges.

"We accomplished a great deal of good with a very small amount of resources," said Scardino of the Gazette's seven-year existence. "We were very lucky to be able to do it.

"After a while it got to be very, very frustrating. We would get involved in stories that were very interesting journalistically, but we couldn't afford to make the long distance telephone calls, to go to Atlanta to look up records or to file information requests under the Sunshine Law," he said.

Scardino, 36, said he took the Times job in November, before he decided to fold the Gazette, hoping that by taking himself off the payroll "I could stop being a burden to the paper."

Scardino said he and his wife Marjorie, an attorney and former reporter who serves as publisher for the Gazette, had tried unsuccessfully to sell the company they launched in 1978.

The Georgia Gazette Publishing Co. will remain in the newspaper business with a minority interest in its other publication, The Islands Gazette, which is distributed free in suburban Savannah and depends entirely on advertising revenue.

The Gazette first obtained the county's legal advertising in 1979, when one of the three county officials who designate the legal organ, the late Sheriff Carl Griffin, "said he wanted to help generate newspaper competition," Scardino said.

After the Savannah daily newspapers filed suit, the Georgia Supreme Court upheld the Gazette's designation as legal organ, but six weeks later officials returned the designation to the dailies for 1981 and 1982.

Northwest Industries announces earnings

CHICAGO — Northwest Industries, which announced Monday that a $1 billion proposed buyout of the company by an investor group had been terminated, Tuesday announced fourth-quarter earnings of $22.4 million, or $1.10 a share, in contrast to a loss of $85.3 million a year earlier.

The loss, however, included special charges. Without the charges, the company said it would have posted earnings of $4.7 million for the final quarter of 1983.

Fourth-quarter sales rose 9.7 percent, to $486.4 million, from $443.5 million for the comparable period a year earlier.

For all of 1984, the Chicago-based conglomerate reported net income of $77.5 million, or $3.75 a share. The special charges, which primarily related to oil and gas investments, resulted in a loss in 1983 of $80.4 million.

Sales in 1984 rose 17.5 percent, to $1.88 billion, from $1.6 billion in 1983.

NYMEX set to introduce gas futures contract

A natural gas futures contract will be introduced by the New York Mercantile Exchange (NYMEX) before options on heating oil and crude oil futures, according to priorities set recently by the NYMEX Board of Governors at its regularly scheduled January Board meeting.

The Board targeted introduction of natural gas futures for late 1985, pending fine-tuning of contract specification and resolution of issues related to the industry's recent deregulation. After natural gas futures are introduced, the Board will consider the timing for introducing options on heating oil and crude. All three contracts were filed with the Commodity Futures Trading Commission (CFTC) in 1984, with approval expected in 1985.

"Based on meetings with the oil and gas trade, the futures industry and our membership, the Board has decided that natural gas futures represent the Exchange's number one priority in new contract offerings", said Chairman MichelD. Marks. "We expect to launch the contract late this year. Options will then be considered."

The New York Mercantile Exchange, with futures contracts in heating oil, leaded and unleaded gasoline, and crude oil, is the world's premier energy futures exchange. In 1984, energy futures trading on NYMEX reached 4.6 million contracts, or the equivalent of 4.6 billion barrels of oil. This was up 76.6 percent over energy futures trading on NYMEX in 1983. Total energy trading volume peaked on Tuesday, January 15, 1985 at 42,878 contracts and Wednesday, January 16 crude open interest peaked at 62,067.

PUBLIC NOTICE

AT&T Communications of the Southwest, Inc. ("AT&T Communications"), in accordance with the Public Utility Regulatory Act and the rules of the Public Utility Commission of Texas ("PUC") hereby gives notice of its intent to implement a new schedule of rates for its services. The new rates will be effective February 22, 1985, unless otherwise determined by the PUC. All customers and classes of customers would be affected by the proposed rates.

AT&T Communications has filed restructured tariffs designed to more closely recover access and other costs for private line, DATAPHONE* Digital Service, OCC Facilities, WATS and 800 services.

Also proposed is the institution of a charge for directory assistance to begin to recover access costs incurred for such service, and increases in rates for operator assisted AT&T Long Distance calls.

AT&T Communications is proposing to restructure its AT&T Long Distance Service and to reduce its overall revenues from basic long distance approximately $25 million.

While long distance rates will, in most instances, be reduced, certain AT&T Long Distance rates are proposed to be increased to more nearly recover the access charges approved by the PUC for such service.

The proposed new rates for all services would result in an increase in adjusted test period revenues of $123.4, or 11.3 percent.

A complete copy of the proposed tariffs are on file with the Texas Public Utility Commission.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene or participate or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Loving discovery flows 30 barrels

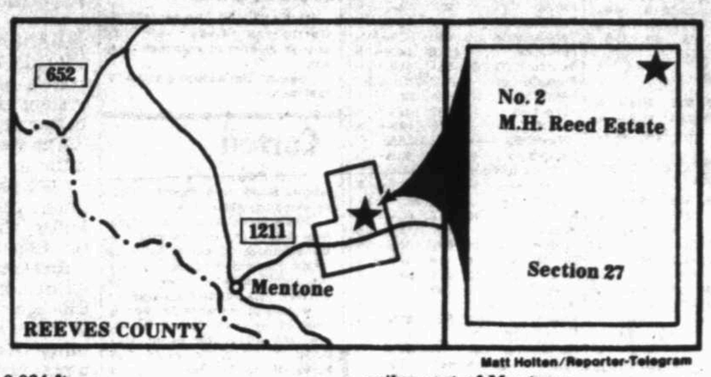
Staff Reports

A Bone Springs discovery in the Haley field of Loving County has been completed.

WESTLAND OIL DEVELOPMENT CORP. tested the No. d2 M.H. Reed Estate "27" to flow 30 barrels of 47 gravity crude, 20 barrels of water and a small amount of gas on an 8/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 250 psi. Gas-oil ratio was too small to measure. The Bone Springs zone was perforated from 9,856 to 9,864 ft., acidized with 1,500 gallons of 20 percent NeFe and fractured with 35,000 gallons of gel and 363 sacks of 20/40 sand.

The project was drilled to 12,000 ft. and plugged back to 11,500 ft. Final casing set was 5 1/2 inches at 12,000 ft.

The operator chose the following formation tops on a ground elvation of 2,977 ft.: the Rustler at 904 ft., the Delaware Lime at 5,126 ft., the Bone Springs at 9,064 ft. and the Wolfcamp at 11,712 ft. Top of the pay is 9,064 ft.



Matt Holten/Reporter-Telegram

The well is located 467 ft. from north and 467 ft. from east lines of Section 27, Block 29, PSL survey, 11 miles east of Mentone.

The operator has requested a field designation of Haley (Bone Springs) for the discovery.

Morrow gas produer flows 2.7 Mmcf daily

A prolific Morrow gas producer has been completed in the Haley field of Loving County.

WESTLAND OIL DEVELOPMENT CORP. tested the No. 1 Nell Harrison "14" for a calculated absolute open flow of 2,777 Mcfpd with a flowing tubing pressure of 11,465 psi. The well is flowing from Morrow perforations 17,105 to 17,496 ft., which had been acidized with 800 gallons and fractured with 46,500 gallons.

Drilled to 18,000 ft., the well is plugged back to 17,906 ft. A seven inch liner was hung from 12,492 to 18,000 ft.

On a ground elevation of 3,006 ft., formation tops chosen were the Delaware Lime at 5,140 ft., the Bone Springs Lime at 9,128 ft., Upper Wolfcamp at 11,450 ft., Strawn Lime at 14,895 ft., Atoka Lime at 15,503 ft., the Morrow at 15,970 ft., base of the Morrow and top of the Mississppian at 17,858 ft.

Location is 1,320 ft. from south and 1,980 ft. from west lines of Section 14, Block 29, PSL survey, 11 miles east of Mentone.

Westland completed the No. 1 Emma Showman Aug. 12, 1984 for a calculated absolute open flow of 23,000 Mcfpd and a flowing tubing pressure of 11,330 psi. The well flowed from Morrow Sand perforations 17,245 to 17,546 ft. Total depth of the Showman was 18,760 ft., plugged back to 18,706 ft.

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

Yippie leader Abbie Hoffman, left, gestures to the crowd in rebuttal to accusations by former co-conspirator Jerry Rubin during a debate of political philosophies Wednesday at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin. Jerry Rubin, a founder of the 1980s Yuppie movement, impresses upon the audience that change in America will occur through enterpreneurial fervor from a generation of former 1960s activists.

Aging activists stage debate

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

It could neither be compared to the famous Kennedy/Nixon debate of 1960 nor the more infamous Carter/Ford debate of 1976.

But the occasion did, however, rekindle fond memories from an audience caught in the crossfire surrounding the emotional controversy of maintaining idealism or becoming part of the status quo.

And there to egg them on were the subjects of changing philosophical attitudes — Yuppie Leader Jerry Rubin and his former co-conspirator of the dissident '60s Yippie movement Abbie Hoffman.

On the right stood Rubin, who now fashions his political activities after the same establishment values he swore to destroy two decades ago.

Dressed in a sport jacket, button-down shirt, tie and carrying a bottle of Perrier water, Rubin looked, well, like a Yuppie.

On the left stood a bearded Hoffman, his hair now thinning and graying, boyantly defending the same intense convictions of the '60s; urging Americans to fight for global human rights and to "go out into your communities and fight poverty and injustice."

The sparring match Wednesday at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin between Yuppie and Yippie was one of many stops across the country for Hoffman and Rubin — once co-conspirators for national revolution and co-defendents in the Chicago conspiracy trial. They now are enveloped in entirely different political philosophies and are taking their differences to the public.

Rubin, 46, who founded the 500 Club, a network of enterpreneurs, talked of the change from an industrial society to an information society with the baby boom generation leading the way, using power and money to effect change.

He also spoke of Walter Mondale representing "negativity" while President Reagan represents "postitivity," adding that the country will be changed with enterpreneurial fervor from a generation of former 1960s activists. However, he acknowledged voting for Mondale in the 1984 presidential election.

Hoffman replied with talk of "false patriotism" spreading across the country and "right-wing conservatives" striving for success by "screwin' the poor."

Hoffman, 48, also replied "I am against everything Jerry stands for. The world has become as narrow as his tie."

He called for change, adding that "if you can't change the powers that be, you live in a police state and you deserve to live in a police state."

The debate drew responses from the audience of about 150, most of whom vividly recalled the activism of the '60s movement.

One middle-aged woman asked the men their philophies regarding U.S. involvement in Central America with Rubin answering, "The U.S. should be active in Central America and should recognize the Sandinista government and eventually become its economic partner."

Hoffman, on the other hand, answered "The U.S. shouldn't paint them as Soviet satellites. We're always going to have problems until we tend to the economic needs of those nations.

"I believe we are the best country in the world," he said. "But I believe we can do better. One way to do that is not to see other countries, especially the Russians, as devils."

Ex-employee sues Odessa radiologists, hospital officials

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Already facing the prospect of a lawsuit by the Texas Attorney General's Office, a group of Odessa radiologists and two Medical Center Hospital officials were sued Wednesday by a former employee for more than $2.6 million.

MCH Administrator Sam Glenney, Board Chairman John Commander and four doctors affiliated with Odessa Radiology Group in September 1984 are charged with conspiring to terminate the job of Raye Delcore of Odessa.

The suit also claims the six defendants "spread certain scandalous, unfounded and untrue gossip and rumors" about the 55-year-old woman, who worked at MCH for 30 years, according to attorney Michael McLeaish.

Ms. Delcore, who is a member of several Odessa civic organizations, worked in the radiology department under the direction of Dr. Robert L. Lewis, managing partner of the radiology group.

The other doctors named as defendants were Dr. William Haley, currently at Hayes Memorial Hospital in San Marcos and Drs. Charles Nicolette and Radames Martinez Jr. of ORG.

McLeaish said the official reason for Ms. Delcore's dismissal was disloyalty, but speculated the six men had other motives. "It's a lot easier to hire someone young," he said, noting the higher salary and benefits due an employee of 30 years.

"Because of her age and her sex," Ms. Delcore was terminated, according to the suit. Glenney, Commander and the doctors "have at some point in time in the past combined as a group to accomplish the unlawful purposes."

The suit charges the defendants with conspiring to deprive Ms. Delcore of property, insurance benefits and retirement benefits due her as an MCH employee.

For the alleged conspiracy resulting in Ms. Delcore losing her job, the suit calls for:

— $9,936 for past losses due to losing the job.

— $150,000 for future losses from the job loss.

— $1 million for punitive and exemplary damages because "the actions on the part of the defendants were wanton and malicious, cruel and premeditated, and totally unjustifiable."

The suit claims the six men slandered Ms. Delcore by spreading "gossip and rumors" that she was disloyal to the hospital.

McLeaish said Ms. Delcore supposedly told other employees of better job opportunities outside MCH. The last time this was illegal in Texas was after the Civil War, when former slaves were prohibited by law from talking about other job opportunities, according to the lawyer.

For the alleged slander, Ms. Delcore is asking $500,000 for "harm and damage to (Ms. Delcore's) reputation in the community." McLeaish said she is an active member of the community, involved in several civic groups in Odessa.

Another $1 million is asked for because the men's actions were "wanton and malicious and designed to harm (Ms. Delcore's) reputation."

McLeaish said he was aware of no direct connection between his lawsuit and an ongoing antitrust investigation under way by the State Attorney General's Office, which prompted a Tuesday closed-door meeting of the MCH Board of Trustees.

No action was taken at the meeting. Another has been scheduled for next Tuesday.

A Jan. 22 letter from the Attorney General's Office to MCH and county officials (Medical Center is Ector County's hospital) outlining the state's objections to a contractual agreement between the radiologists and MCH noted a seven-day deadline for a response, but "since this letter undoubtedly arrived somewhat unexpectedly, I will not hold you to a one-week response period if you need more time."

While not officially threatening legal action, the letter asks that MCH amend the contract "to accommodate all concerned interests without resort to litigation."

MCH's agreement with ORG has kept radiologists not in the group from using hospital radiology equipment for the past 30 years, according to the letter from Steven Baron, assistant chief of the Attorney General's antitrust division.

"The reality is that hospital patients and their physicians for all practical purposes are captive and must use ORG for their radiological needs," said the letter. "Such a complete lack of choice cannot promote high quality, low cost health care."

The letter noted MCH's argument that such an agreement was in the interest of effective administration. Glenney and Lewis have declined comment on the investigation.

Through a spokesperson in his office, Glenney also declined comment on Ms. Delcore's lawsuit.

Firm offers insurance for legal expenses

By MARK LEWIS

"So sue me."

This smug response is the last refuge of the scoundrel who refuses to pay for the fender he's dented, or the defective merchandise he's sold, or the window his kid has broken with an errant baseball. He knows his victim won't incur a $300 legal bill to win a $100 settlement.

But staying out of court is sometimes unavoidable. That same victimized citizen might find himself sued for an unreasonable sum as a result of a car accident, and be forced to spend thousands of dollars on legal fees just to respond to a nuisance suit.

In a country where litigation is fast replacing baseball as the national pastime, legal services are becoming almost as necessary as medical services, and almost as expensive. But while most people have health insurance to help with doctor and hospital bills, they're on their own with legal bills.

Equipment stolen from defunct firm

From Staff Reports

About $2,130 worth of equipment was reported stolen from the Western Fence Company, 3406 N. Big Spring St., according to complaints filed with Midland police.

Jim Worley of Dallas said the company, which is no longer in business, is checked by his son-in-law Steve Hillard, 4406 Parkdale, who discovered the burglary Friday morning. According to reports, storage rooms and the office had been entered and an air compressor, post hole digger and a cutting torch were taken.

More than $1,800 worth of items were stolen from the residence of Valentin Reyes, 1108 N. Tilden, between 7:45 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Reyes told police he had come home for lunch to discover a satellite receiver, video cassette recorder and tapes, home computer and jewelry missing. Entry was gained by breaking out a bedroom window. Four cans of beer were stolen and a bookcase and several ceramic or china figures were damaged.

G.B. Magee, Route 4 Box 17D, said he had parked his 1984 Chevrolet van in the parking lot at the VFW Post, 1306 E. Taylor, at 7 p.m. Tuesday. When he returned to his vehicle at 9:30 p.m., it had been burglarized and a 13-inch color television valued at $500 and a wooden van table valued at $100 were missing. Damage to two windows totaled $550, making the total loss $1,150, reports said.

A 1982 Yamaha motorcycle owned by Michael O'Timothy Bullard, Route 6 Box 400, Space 197, was reported stolen from the parking lot of the Sandstone Apartments, 4315 Neely, according to reports. The theft took place between 10:15 p.m. Tuesday and 8 a.m. Wednesday.

Michele Kolden, 5244 N.W. Loop 250 No. 305, reported a couple came into the Red Cross Shoes store at Midland Park Mall Wednesday night and grabbed $266 worth of items before fleeing the store.

Misbehaving pupils weren't always exiled for antics

Never in my life have I purported to be an authority on discipline, particularly when it comes to school conduct. But I have some opinions and observations, as does the fellow who knows nothing about art but knows what he likes.

I've heard that nowadays principals, who most invariably are the villains, ostracize miscreants. They'll either kick them outright out of school for a day, week or a semester. Or they'll knock a few points off their grades and force them to cut classes by sending them to all-day study halls. It would seem their main ploy is to exile the misbehaving student and to protect the masses from the errant student's influence.

When I was in public school, I don't recall any student being expelled for any reason; perhaps that happened. I do recall one student, a teen-age girl, who left school because she mistakenly thought she was pregnant by a football player, but she wasn't sure by which one. Please don't misunderstand; she was selective. She liked both guys, but the one she really loved wasn't keen on marriage. So she transferred to another school, married someone else and, by reports, did well. She was a regular church-goer and a good student.

She wasn't kicked out of school for misreading her body chemistry. She just left in the name of wounded pride, I suppose.

I remember when a stern high school English teacher, who could have been an even sterner principal, lectured our class for a solid period on morality, specifically on promiscuity. It seems the teacher, Maude O., got wind of some of us students' turning the back seats of cars into mating beds. That was the rumor around the school. We just listened; she accepted no arguments. And she seemed to know who was fooling around with whom. None of us got kicked out. That was fortunate.

If my old school teachers and principals were more intent on punishment and discipline than on scholarly attainments, then virtually none of us would have survived the senior trip to St. Louis by way of Joplin, Mo., and back by Eureka Springs, Ark.

I don't know what we, collectively, didn't do. Misbehaving was part of our itinerary. Many of us discovered or rediscovered the thrill and kick of booze, especially liquor and beer, found quick money or losses by gambling via blackjack and poker, learned firsthand about bawdy houses, sang ribald songs and told rude jokes, pulled off daily and nightly pranks, smoked cigars and most certainly did not smoke those "funny cigarettes" or snort coke. We weren't that advanced into no-no habits.

The Class of '56 had a grand time. On those rare occasions when we get back together, we reminisce. And it is with both fondness and a tint of regret that we recall that our class put an end to the senior-class trips.

The whole Texas town was talking about our adventures and misadventures. Some of the talk, I'm sure, turned into outlandish rumors. But what we boys and girls from a little old Texas community did do was somewhat outlandish. But none of us got kicked out of school and weren't denied our education.

Most of my discipline came at home and in grade school. You see, I rarely, if ever, got away with anything deemed out of line in the early grades. My father was a principal but was out of public school work when I was at my prime in high school. And when I misbehaved at school, the teacher would pop me a few licks with the paddle and send me right home to clean up or straighten out. Mother would be curious. And Dad, once home, would sternly lecture his son, get out the razor strap and give me a working over.

But I never got exiled from school, though, I must admit, I got escorted out of the classroom or off the recess grounds and got paddled more than once and got seated in the dunce's corner once or twice. But I never — justly or unjustly — got kicked out of school. Maybe the principal erred. I sure did at times.

LEGAL

"The amount spent for attorneys has tripled in the last 10 years," says Kevin Woodard, a Midland insurance representative. "But 10 percent of the people are using 90 percent of the lawyers."

Woodard proposes a solution: legal insurance. For $8 per month, his firm, Pre-Paid Legal Services Inc. of Ada, Okla., will insure customers for certain kinds of legal services.

The idea of legal insurance has the support of William Reece Smith Jr., former president of the American Bar Association.

"The need to provide middle-income families with fuller access to legal services has become increasingly obvious," Smith has written in Risk Management Magazine. "Prepaid legal service plans provide one of the most effective mechanisms for achieving this goal."

"I think it's a great idea," says Werner Pfennigstorf, a research attorney for the American Bar Foundation in Chicago. "In Europe it's been around for 60-70 years. It's almost as common as health and car insurance."

"There's a lot people out there who are trying to take advantage of you. They know you won't sue them for $200," Pfennigstorf says. With legal insurance, "You're no longer defenseless."

Some legal insurance plans sign up a pool of attorneys for the clients to use, but Woodard's company allows the client to choose any lawyer he wants. The plan pays for one half-hour consultation every three months on a particular subject, but puts no limit on the number of subjects.

"If you have any kind of trouble with somebody else, you can have your attorney give them a call," Woodard says. "It's nice to know you have, in essence, an attorney on retainer."

Woodard's plan pays the entire fee if the client wants to contest a traffic ticket, or faces criminal charges as a result of an accident. With limitations, it will pay for legal help in getting a suspended driver's license restored, or defend a personal-injury suit under $1,000 (up to $250 worth of legal services). And it pays up to $5,000 if the client is named in a civil suit during the first year he's with the plan, increasing to $25,000 during the fifth year.

Woodard says the plan is available for individuals, but he emphasizes group plans which large companies, governmental bodies and unions can include in their employee benefit packages.

"It makes them look like they're concerned about the legal needs of their people," he says. "It's good employee relations."

But according to Rick Langley, senior employee-relations specialist at Exxon in Midland, legal insurance is unlikely to join health insurance as a standard benefit, because benefit packages are too expensive already.

"You might get it with cafeteria benefit plans," when the company pays a certain amount and the employee picks which benefits he wants included, Langley said. "That's where it might be an option."

Bill would establish water resources panel

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Creation of the "Multi-State Water Resources Planning Commission," to work with Texas' neighboring states on "sources and methods of augmenting water supplies on a regional basis," is proposed in HB 536 by Rep. J.W. Buchanan, D-Dumas.

The commission would be composed of six members appointed by the governor and confirmed by the Senate.

Commissioners would represent different sections of the state, with two from the general public, and one each from higher education, "some area of business," agriculture and an "energy-related field."

Commissioners would serve staggered six-years terms.

The commission would study "the water needs of the region after the year 2000" and "initiate and carry out discussions with representatives of neighboring states" on water supply needs.

The Department of Water Resources would assist the commission, preparing studies "that consider only that floodwater that is determined to be in excess of the future needs of any potential water source area."

Other work by the commission would include designation of areas in Texas "in which the present and future water supply is not sufficient to meet the future requirements of those areas, even after giving full consideration to the effects of water conservation in the projections of future needs."

Reports and recommendations on meeting those needs would be made by the commission to the governor and the Legislature.

Authority is provided for the commission to negotiate with other states on "the need for establishing interstate contracts addressing groundwater, if an aquifer underlies several states, and addressing other beneficial subjects."

POLICE

Reports indicate the couple entered the store at 8:20 p.m. and grabbed a small quartz clock and five purses before running.

The male suspect was described as black, 24 to 26 years old, 6 feet tall, 150 pounds and wearing a gray jacket, slacks and gloves.

The woman was described as black, 28 years old, 6 feet tall, 135 pounds and wearing a maroon sweatshirt with gray lettering and blue jeans. She was further described as having long fingernails and a gold front tooth.

David Murray of Wichita Falls told police $790 worth of items were stolen from his 1982 GMC van while it was parked in a lot north of Home Savings at 4511 N. Midkiff. According to reports, clothes and an overnight bag with toiletries were taken from the van between 3 p.m. and 5:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Rosie Long, 3713 Monty, told police she discovered $241 in cash missing from a safe at the Shell service station at 2405 N. Big Spring when she arrived for work at 7 a.m. Wednesday. According to reports, the theft took place between 10 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday morning.

Raji Chhabra, 2702 Marantha, reported about $235 worth of criminal mischief at a residence at 201-B Edgewood. According to reports, a key was used to gain entry and at least two water faucets were broken, causing extensive flood damage to the carpet and the kitchen tile.

About a gallon of orange paint was poured on the carpet in the bedroom and living room and smeared on all the walls in the house, reports said.

Budget writers restore some education cuts

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislative budget writers have taken steps to restore most of the 26 percent slash in higher education funds contained in earlier budget proposals for the next two years.

With no formal vote, but without opposition, the Legislative Budget Board forwarded to the House and Senate Wednesday an "alternative" 1986-87 budget.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby pointed out the new revenue proposal also leaves $200 million "on the table" in case the oil and gas economy continues to worsen, decreasing state revenues.

Hobby, who was instrumental in the new effort, estimated the alternative would raise an additional $569 million, give colleges and universities another $367 million and leave about $200 in additional funds.

The extra money for colleges would give them 94 percent of current spending, a decrease of about 6 percent.

The new money would come primarily from new and expanded fees proposed by Gov. Mark White, increased tuition at state colleges and universities, rededication of one cent of the state cigarette tax, and trimming the increase planned for the state's contributions to the teacher retirement fund.

Speaker Gib Lewis, an LBB member, said he thought the proposal "had a great deal of merit but I'd like to study it a little further."

White, who in the past has stopped short of adopting a general college tuition increase, said he "might support such a move provided there were guarantees that poor students would receive sufficient financial help."

Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, chairman of the House Higher Education Committee, said later she was "delighted they are recognizing that institutions of higher education cannot sustain a 26 percent cut. There's just no way. I'm delighted we got other people's attention."

Hobby said the LBB was actually a "non-budget board" now since it technically went out of existence when it made its recommendations in December to the Senate and House. However, he said, "we are faced with the prospect that future revenue estimates from the comptroller are more likely to go down than up," Hobby said. "And in view of these changes, we do not want the cuts the LBB recommended before to cause catastrophic changes in our higher education system.

"It would be a terrible mistake at this time for the state to signal it was failing its higher education system," Hobby said.

Briefly the proposed revenue increases proposed for the Senate and House would:

— Take one cent of the state cigarette tax intended for development of local parks and place it into general revenue for a gain of $36 million.

— Increase the amount of highway fees used to support the Department of Public Safety, without affecting the Highway Fund, $60 million.

— Increase the amount of federal funds used in paying Medicaid claims at schools for the mentally retarded, $40 million.

Lamesa man charged in robbery

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 25-year-old Lamesa man was in the Ector County Jail this morning, charged with the Dec. 7 aggravated robbery of an 80-year-old Odessan.

Greg John Elliot Butler, 25, of Lamesa, remained in the county jail on $15,000 bond. He was arrested on a warrant in Lamesa Wednesday and transferred to the Odessa police.

He is charged with robbing Carl Glover, 80, of Odessa, as the man was leaving his business at 9:15 a.m. Dec. 7. According to police reports, the robber took money and a pistol from Glover after knocking to the ground.

Glover suffered a broken hip in the incident, according to reports. The amount of money taken in the robbery was not available.

Plane loaded with dope crashes

VICTORIA (AP) — The pilot of an airplane carrying 500 pounds of marijuana was killed and a passenger injured when the plane crashed in dense fog in a field northwest of Victoria, authorities said.

Much of the marijuana, which was packaged in 25-pound bags, was scattered around the wreckage, said state trooper Gerald Bryant.

Drifter arraigned on forgery by passing charges

From Staff Reports

A 19-year-old "drifter" suspected of being absent without leave (AWOL) from an army base in California, where he also may be wanted on statutory rape charges, was arraigned Wednesday on charges of forgery by passing.

Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry set bail for Kenneth Anthony Luckas at $25,000.

"He's a drifter," Sprayberry said, explaining the high bond. "He has no ties and he was concealing his identity. The bond is for the purpose of him showing up. If he could make bond, I don't think he'd ever want to show up."

According to police reports, the man was arrested at 1:30 a.m. Monday at the Town & Country convenience store at 2109 S. Midkiff Road after he tried to cash a check.

According to Sgt. Johnny Thompson of the Midland Police Department, Luckas, who had no identification other than a military card for Billy Randell Bentley, was trying to cash a check belonging to Bentley. Although Bentley's identification card and picture showed him to be a black male, Luckas, who is white, insisted he was Bentley, Thompson said.

Crime history checks and conversations with the military base indicate Luckas is wanted for AWOL and a statutory rape charge in California but police are not sure that the man they took into custody is Luckas.

The only ties Luckas said he has, according to Sprayberry, are parents in Houston who could not afford an attorney for their son.

The man arrested Monday morning also was charged with misdemeanor possession of marijuana after police found a plastic bag containing what they believe to be marijuana in his shirt pocket during booking procedures.

Crude oil reported stolen from county drilling site

From Staff Reports

More than $10,000 worth of crude oil was reported stolen from a drilling site east of State Highway 158 and north of West County Road, according to Midland County Sheriff's Office reports.

Jack Brown of Anschutz Corp. reported the theft of the 367 barrels of oil from the Casselman Lease No. 1601. The incident took place between 7 p.m. Monday and 7 a.m. Tuesday.

Steve Patton of Blue Heron Designs, Inc. on East Loop 250, reported an undisclosed amount of currency was taken from the company between 7:30 p.m. Monday and 7:45 a.m. Tuesday. According to reports, entry was gained by breaking a glass pane out of a door, reaching in and disengaging the door's lock.

A homemade trailer valued at $1,000 was reported stolen last week from the Scurlock Pipe Yard on State Highway 158. According to Russell Presley, who reported the theft, the double-axle trailer had a wooden floor.

About 250 gallons of diesel fuel were reported stolen from the Warfield Truck Stop at 6 a.m. Wednesday after a truck-tractor-trailer filled up and drove away, according to reports.

Reports filed with the sheriff's office also included the theft of $900 worth of equipment taken from a 1984 Chevrolet pickup. A spokesman for Mobil Producing Co. said the pickup was parked at the Sprayberry Office on FM 1379 between 4 p.m. Saturday and 7:30 a.m. Tuesday. Taken were a carburetor, air cleaner, transmission oil dipstick and a radiator cap.

Jack Wooten, of Midland Mobile Ranch on South Rankin Highway, told sheriff's deputies a $900 riding lawnmower was stolen between 7 p.m. Tuesday and 7:30 a.m. Wednesday. The three-speed transmission lawnmower was in an unlocked storage shed, reports said.

Bowl-a-thon to raise funds for girl's surgery scheduled

From Staff Reports

A bowl-a-thon to raise money for a cochlear implant for 3-year-old Amanda Glasgow will be from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Feb. 9.

Sponsor forms may be picked up at Dellwood, Fairmont or Regal Lanes.

Amanda, who has been deaf since birth, is the daughter of Penney and Wes Chappell and granddaughter of Jack and Barb Pallick, longtime Midland residents and bowlers.

Amanda is scheduled to go to Houston the week of March 11 for the implant, which involves surgically implanting an electronic device behind the ear. This device translates sounds into electrical impulses, which would allow Amanda to hear environmental and speech sounds.

Cost of the operation and evaluation is $14,000. Insurance may pay part of the cost but the family is expecting to pay at least $6,000. Contributions may be made to the Amanda Glasgow Fund, Western State Bank, attention Valerie Crook, new accounts, P.O. Box 4157, Midland, 79704.

More information about the bowl-a-thon or Amanda's situation may be obtained by calling Jenny Klatt, 697-3248 at the office, or 699-0206 at home.

Teacher competency bill introduced

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Legislation relating to competency testing for public school teachers has been introduced by Rep. Jim Rudd (D—Brownfield).

House Bill 418 would amend the Education Code to provide for teachers to take a "basic literacy examination developed or adopted by the State Board of Education" when teacher performance is appraised as "below expectations or unsatisfactory" in "basic literacy."

The bill sets out provisions for administering the examination and for "remedial aid" for persons not performing satisfactorily on exams.

School districts would be authorized to exempt from basic literacy examinations teachers and administrators who previously have passed literacy examinations.

Corporate profits tax needed, lawmaker says

AUSTIN (AP) — A Texas corporate profits tax could turn the state's money shortage into a $2.5 billion surplus, says a Houston lawmaker whose previous calls for a corporate tax went nowhere.

The "free ride" for corporations must end, said Rep. Senfronia Thompson, D-Houston.

"The benefactors of our great business climate have to be told that the free ride is over because in a fair society everyone pulls their weight — even the billion-dollar conglomerates," she said at a Wednesday news conference.

Texas corporations now pay a franchise tax based on the amount of business they do within the state. Most corporations pay the $68 annual minimum, according to John Moore, director of tax information for the comptroller's office.

Required general education courses are available at local colleges.

Students in the Permian Basin will be able to pursue the bachelor of science in nursing on a full-time or a part-time basis, making it possible for working professionals to earn an advanced degree close to home.

The baccalaureate degree program offered by TTUHSC School of Nursing is fully accredited by the National League for Nursing. It places special emphasis on clinical competence and faculty are practicing specialists with graduate degrees in nursing.

Principal says teachers think competency tests 'insulting'

AUSTIN (AP) — Many teachers are insulted that the new state school reform law requires them to take competency exams, says an official of an elementary school administrators' group.

"They are taking it rather personally," said Brad Duggan, executive director of the Texas Elementary Principals and Supervisors Association.

"They think they have made a commitment to the children and to the community, and they have a level of professionalism which is of a very high standard," he said Wednesday.

"To ask them to come in and assume they are guilty before it's been proven, after they've been education leaders in the community, is personally rather insulting to them."

Rather than force all teachers to take a test, they should be evaluated individually with tests given to those about whom questions arise, Duggan said.

"We're not really opposing competency testing. We think an evaluation process is much more logical than just saying, 'Everyone will now walk in and take a competency test because we're going to assume that a small percentage of you is incompetent,'" he said.

The school reform law passed by a special legislative session last summer calls for competency testing of all public school teachers. Several teachers' organizations are seeking to have the 1985 Legislature repeal that reform measure.

At a news conference, the principals' group released a new poll which showed that only 21.1 percent of the 1,216 elementary school administrators surveyed believed that competency tests can accurately measure teaching skills.

The poll also found that just 21 percent thought a competency test would demonstrate to the public that Texas schools provide a quality education.

A total of 71.4 percent thought teachers should be able to re-take the test if needed, and 68.5 percent though other tests such as the National Teacher Exam should be considered an acceptable substitute to a state exam.

The survey found favor for many other reforms, however, said Gene Stokes, president of the elementary principals' group.

Among the reforms, Stokes said, the poll found that 88 percent supported limiting the size of elementary school classes to a maximum of 22 students; 63 percent favored full-day, full-year kindergarten; 59 percent backed half-day education for 4-year-olds with limited proficiency in English or from low-income families, and more than 70 percent favored the requirement that a student maintain a 70 grade average to advance to the next class.

Proposed bill would allow loan suits

Austin Bureau

Legislation allowing the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System, to bring suit to recover loans under the Texas guaranteed student loan program has been introduced by Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin.

House Bill 433 would authorized the coordinating board to bring suit to recover loans on which a student has defaulted and provides for the appointment for a "master in chancery" to handle such cases.

Touch of Butter lacks taste of margarine

By LINDA ANDERSON

Wouldn't it be nice if scientists discovered diet and low-calorie foods were bad for health, but goofing off and high-calorie foods were not?

Many frustrated calorie-counters discover they really don't notice which foods they like best until they dieting and can't eat these foods.

One item among the first struck from a dieter's menu is margarine (or butter, if the dieter has money). And many calorie-counters discover to their dismay how much the flavor of certain foods is missing along with the spread.

Reduced-calorie margarines have been available in the supermarket for several years, but Kraft Inc. has recently gone one step further and introduced Touch of Butter, a reduced-calorie margarine advertised to taste more like real butter because it contains a "touch" of that forbidden (to most dieters) food.

To a chronic calorie-counter it sounds almost too good to be true. (You can tell the world you "don't really like butter, who needs all that fat?" until you turn purple in the face, but your taste buds know better.) Real butter is too fattening and too expensive for many people. At our house we like real butter and indulge in it whenever we have the opportunity. Which isn't often.

The adult, teen, pre-school and toddler taste-testers checked the product for taste, price and advertising accuracy.

Although Touch of Butter spread is available in sticks (four sticks per one-pound box) and in tubs. We we tried a three-pound tub which cost $2.26. This averages out to about 73 cents per pound, which is about what most other brand-name margarines cost. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.)

The product contains 50 calories per tablespoon (Touch of Butter in sticks has 60 calories per tablespoon), while regular margarine contains 100 calories per tablespoon, according to information contained on the labels of several popular brands.

Touch of Butter's ingredients label lists water, partially hydrogenated soybean oil, butter, salt and strange-sounding substances including something called xanthangum.

The product is soft and spreads easily, even on soft breads and thin crackers. It has a distinct taste similar to butter. (However, after reaching the bottom of the three-pound tub, most of the taste-testers had become so accustomed to the flavor they no longer noticed the difference.)

But for some reason I wasn't completely enthusiastic about Touch of Butter spread. Maybe it tastes too much like butter. Or maybe the combination of butter flavor and unbutter-like spreadability was the prooblem (butter straight from the refrigerator sometimes seems like one of the hardest substances known to man).

I'll probably buy Touch of Butter again. Spreading margarine wihtou ripping the bread is convenient. It tastes good and is not overly expensive.

But I'll probably not buy it very often. I hate to admit it, but I really miss the taste of margarine.

BETTER BUSINESS

Credit card theft, fraud charges millions annually

By LINDA TRUITT

Based on the number of telephone inquiries recieved at the Better Business Bureau, it appears there has been a significant increase in the number of companies calling people in the Permian Basin requesting major credit card numbers.

The cost of credit and charge card fraud to card holders and card companies may be as high as $500 million a year, the Federal Trade Commission estimates. Whether or not a consumer is personally defrauded, he also pays for credit and charge card fraud in the form of higher prices.

Theft is the most obvious form of credit and charge card fraud. A second and more subtle form of fraud is misappropriation of the use of a consumer's card number (not the card itself) without his permission. This type of fraud may occur in ways such as:

— When a phone caller tells the customer he needs to provide only his card number and its expiration date to qualify for a special vacation, prize, discount, etc. The U.S. Postal Service estimates more than 100 companies are operating this type of scheme in California alone.

— When someone rifles through trash to find discarded receipts or carbons in order to use the card numbers illegally.

— When a dishonest clerk makes an extra imprint from a customer's charge card for his personal use.

The BBB suggests consumers take these precautions protect themselves against credit and charge card fraud:

— New cards should be signed as soon as they arrive.

— Cards should be carried separately from wallets. A record of card numbers, expiration dates, phone numbers and addresses of each company should be kept in a secure place.

— The customer should keep his card in view, whenever possible, after giving it to a clerk and he should retrieve the card promptly after using it.

— He should avoid signing a blank receipt, if possible, and he should draw a line through blank spaces above the total when he signs card receipts.

— The customer should void or destroy all carbons and incorrect receipts.

— Card receipts should be kept to compare with billing statements.

— Billing statements should be opened promptly and card accounts should be reconciled each month.

— Any questionable charges to the card issuer should be reported promptly in writing to the card issuer.

— Card companies should be notified of address changes in advance.

In addition, the BBB notes, consumers should not lend cards, leave cards or receipts lying around, put card numbers on postcards or on the outside of envelopea, give numbera over the phone unless initiating a transaction with a reputable company.

Questions about companies may be checked with the BBB at 563-1880 before ordering.

Research proves mom's soup theory

MIAMI (AP) — Go ahead, ignore your mother when she tells you to take a nice bowl of chicken soup for your stuffy head. Maybe you'll pay attention to the nice doctors at Mount Sinai Medical Center. They sell chicken soup in the gift shop.

Six years ago they said your mother was right about chicken soup. They proved it clinically and wrote about it in a medical journal.

And last month, at the height of influenza season, they began selling 10½-ounce cans of kosher "Mount Sinai Medical Center Clear Chicken Soup."

Mount Sinai's research, published 1978 in the pulmonary disease journal Chest, found that simple chicken soup actually helped to clear stuffy noses and heads.

"It had already been proven that tea could clear your (nasal) airways," said Dr. Marvin Sackner, who headed the chicken soup research team.

The surprise was that the soup itself, not just its vapors, had healing effects, he said.

So far, about 3,000 of the 10,000 cans distributed to Mount Sinai have been sold or distributed free of charge to civic and donor groups, Judy Stanton, a spokeswoman for the Miami Beach hospital said Tuesday.

Baby gate production stopped

WASHINGTON (AP) — Accordion-style baby gates, sold by the millions to parents trying to protect toddlers, go out of production today under an agreement sought by a federal safety agency that says they are dangerous to children.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission, citing eight toddler deaths since 1975, convinced U.S. manufacturers to stop making the gates.

Parents with questions about the safety of baby gates can contact the Consumer Product Safety Commission by calling, toll-free, 800-638-2772.

DEAR ABBY

Boyfriend lost to 'best friend'

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm so upset I can't sleep nights. I'm a 50-year-old woman, divorced for eight years, living alone and supporting myself. A year ago I met the man of my dreams. He really made my life worth living and is the kind of lover every woman dreams about.

Well, I made two mistakes. The first was telling my best friend that the new man in my life was the kind of lover every woman dreams about. And the second mistake was introducing her to him.

You guessed it. My best friend fell for him, and now she has him. I had to get this off my chest. It might help somebody. — LOST HIM

DEAR LOST: If you lost him, you never really had him. Consider yourself lucky to have discovered the superficiality of your best friend's loyalty. Write them both off; you can do better on both counts.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I were sitting at a small table at this public nightclub when a strange man asked her three times to dance. She refused, but the fourth time he asked, she accepted. (He didn't acknowledge me at all.)

My wife danced maybe three steps with him when he asked her if she would dance with his friend. Before she had a chance to answer, he motioned to his friend who had been watching from the sidelines. He came out on the floor and my wife was handed over to dance with this second stranger.

They danced the entire set (about 15 minutes), after which my wife was left standing in the middle of the floor while the man walked off the floor alone.

I was very angry, and told my wife that she showed a lack of respect for herself and for me. She didn't see anything wrong with it.

Abby, please explain to my wife how she was rude to me, and how these two men were rude to both of us. My wife doesn't understand how she and both these strangers should have behaved if any of them had any manners. Thank you. — INSULTED

DEAR INSULTED: Stranger No. 1 should have approached your table, introduced himself and asked your permission to dance with your wife. Then you should have asked your wife if she wanted to dance with him. If she did, fine. He should not have handed the lady over to his friend without first asking the lady's permission. After the dance was finished, Stranger No. 2 should have escorted your wife to her table, thanked you and then departed.

DEAR ABBY: Please put in a good word for the people who have "No Soliciting" signs posted on their front doors.

We have one on our front door, but almost every day someone ignores it and tries to sell us something. After pointing out the sign that clearly reads "No Soliciting," you should hear some of the excuses we get!

Two missionaries said, "We're not selling anything — we just want a donation."

A college girl selling magazine subscriptions said, "I saw the sign, but didn't think it meant me."

Several people said they didn't see it. (It's big as life, posted at eye level right in the middle of the front door.)

The best one yet was the man who said, "I thought it said 'No Smoking'"!

Thanks, Abby. If this makes your column, I am going to frame it to hang on my front door! — SICK OF SOLICITORS

DEAR SICK: Save your money. Solicitors who ignore your "No Soliciting" sign will also ignore this — framed or not.

(Problems? What's bugging you? Unload on Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Pills for treating herpes soon to be available

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first prescription pill to treat genital herpes will be available to an estimated 5 million to 20 million herpes victims under the trade name Zovirax.

The pill, known as oral acyclovir, will be manufactured by Burroughs Wellcome Co of Durham County, N.C.

Genital herpes is now the No.2 sexually transmitted disease in the nation, Grigg said, second only to gonorrhea.

The new pill does not kill the virus that causes genital herpes, but it provides relief to long-term sufferers by keeping the virus from growing, researchers say.

Since 1982, an ointment form of acyclovir has been on the market for herpes victims and an intravenous form has been available for hospital patients.

The FDA and the manufacturer are recommending that the new oral form of the drug be used for no more that six months at a time.

Dr. Stephen Straus, a herpes researcher at the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, said he is "enthusiastic" about the use of the drug "in selected individuals."

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, February 1, 1985

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Clark Gable, director John Ford, golf pro Debbie Austin, Princess Stephanie of Monaco, Sherman Hemsley of "The Jeffersons" and cabaret singer Hildegarde were born on this date. Your friendly yet reserved manner fascinates members of the opposite sex. You will never lack for romantic admirers! A rewarding home life is the key to happiness in the months ahead. A Capricorn could share a message that will benefit you for years to come. Get to the heart of a financial or credit matter and you will be able to move forward again. Family members draw closer together. Do not rock the boat.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You get new titles and rewards when you reach out for them. The competition is keen in both business and romance. Postpone signing any legal papers. A love relationship brings delight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Patience and persistence are the key to victory. You need to spend some time alone planning for the future. Do not make yourself so available to loved one when he/she plays games.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A dispute ends, but you may continue to feel angry if you do not put all your cards on the table. Better timing is the key to greater success in business or romance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You win approval for a special plan or loan. Patch up a quarrel as soon as possible. Be tactful when explaining a problem to higher-ups. No one likes admitting a mistake.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Try to remain neutral when relatives argue. Others believe in you, but are hesitant to show it. Curb a tendency to procrastinate. Get several estimates if planning home repairs.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Salespeople should do especially well today. Discuss a misunderstanding face-to-face. Money is available from a new source. Your social life accelerates. A Leo could make the perfect mate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Business and romance mix just fine now. Dispel someone's misconceptions; your timing is excellent. Count on attracting the right kind of support. Look beneath the surface for answers.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An offer is accepted. Diversify investments if seeking long-term security. A family member helps you land a new job or client. You find yourself falling for a newcomer.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Obstacles fall by the wayside. A strategy you develop with mate or partner will work brilliantly. Put your own flair into everything you do. Originality counts big with prominent person.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A raise or promotion is in the wind. Make the most of any breaks you get. Financial figures do not tell the whole story about a business proposition. Observe an associate's body language.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be more specific where your goals are concerned. Tensions within the family circle will subside if you adopt a more positive attitude. Forget past criticisms. Teamwork will produce the results you want.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be alert to what is happening around you. You need to review all of your options before choosing a course of action. A prospective romantic partner could intimidate you at first. Be yourself!

Opening lead: King of ♡.

How would you feel if, after your partner opened the bidding and jumped to game, the opponents bid to the five-level in a suit in which you held A-10-x-x-x? You could change your mind after reading this article.

This hand is from the recent Fall North American Championships in San Diego. South's double of two hearts was responsive, i.e., describing a hand with a modicum of values and support for the unbid suits. North's four no trump showed at least six diamonds and four clubs, and South chose the 4-4 fit. East indicated that he heartily approved of the idea, but we are not sure that we would have sat for five clubs doubled with the West hand once we had received heart support from partner.

West led the king of hearts, taken by the ace. Declarer shot back a diamond and West jumped in with the ace to shift to a spade. A trump to the king revealed the break and the declarer, Ted Horning of Toronto, entered dummy with a diamond. Now winning diamonds were led through East. He ruffed and declarer overruffed.

The ten of hearts was covered by the queen and ruffed in dummy. Back came another diamond winner, again ruffed and overruffed. Declarer cashed the nine of hearts and crossed to the table with a spade ruff to lead another diamond. East was down to two trumps and, no matter what he did, declarer would make his contract.

Note that, after a club lead, five hearts can't be beaten. Declarer discards a diamond on the ace of clubs and leads a trump to the queen. Now he leads a spade, and that's that.

American stars record song for Africa

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A song recorded by 45 American rock and movie stars to aid the starving in Africa will not be released until March, but those involved are already estimating it may help raise as much as $200 million for relief efforts.

After the single, "We Are The World," is released, a recording featuring previously unreleased songs by many of the artists who participated will follow, said Ken Kragen, personal manager for Lionel Richie and Kenny Rogers, two of the artists involved in the project.

Kragen, who organized the session with Richie and Harry Belafonte, said a video of the 10-hour recording session will also be marketed.

The total effort could raise $200 million to combat starvation in Ethiopia and elsewhere in Africa, Kragen estimated.

Quincy Jones produced the single by the 45 stars.

The song was written by Richie and Michael Jackson, who recorded it along with Bruce Springsteen, Stevie Wonder, Cyndi Lauper, Tina Turner and Bob Dylan.

The session began Monday night after the American Music Awards show. The group was called United Support of Artists for Africa — or USA for Africa.

Also participating was Irishman Bob Geldof of the Boomtown Rats, one of the organizers of another Ethiopia-aid record, "Do They Know It's Christmas?" by a collection of British rock stars known as Band Aid.

The Band Aid single has sold an estimated 7 million copies worldwide.

Reagan fifth-most hated figure, according to survey

President Reagan

M. Thatcher

LONDON (AP) — President Reagan is the world's fifth-most hated figure, but also the third-most admired political leader, according to a survey by Madame Tussaud's wax exhibition.

Similarly, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is the fourth-most hated figure, but the most admired political leader, according to a survey of visitors to Madame Tussaud's in London last year.

The world's most hated figure was Adolf Hitler, followed by British coal miners' union President Arthur Scargill and Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy, said the survey released Wednesday.

In the same survey a year before, Reagan was in second place and Mrs. Thatcher was fourth.

The greatest hero of all time was the late British Prime Minister Winston Churchill, followed by Superman and actor Harrison Ford, who played the title role in last summer's hit movie, "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom."

British rock singer Boy George was the favorite entertainment hero, with American singer Michael Jackson in second place.

The leading sports hero was American tennis star John McEnroe, with British Olympic decathalon winner Daley Thompson second.

Farrah Fawcett

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Farrah Fawcett and her first child, a 7-pound, 2½-ounce son, were doing well following a natural birth attended by the father, actor Ryan O'Neal, her publicist says.

"We don't even know the (child's) name yet, because they're all still asleep," spokeswoman Andrea Jaffe said following the birth Wednesday morning at an undisclosed hospital.

"Ryan O'Neal, 43, was with Miss Fawcett through the entire natural birth of their son," said Ms. Jaffe. The couple is not married.

She refused to give any details about the hospital except to say that "it's a natural birthing place" that handled the delivery quickly and privately.

O'Neal, whose most recent movie was "Irreconcilable Differences," is also the father of actress Tatum O'Neal, who co-starred with him in the film "Paper Moon."

Miss Fawcett, 37, who previously was married to actor Lee Majors, first starred as one of "Charlie's Angels" on ABC-TV and most recently as a battered wife in NBC's "The Burning Bed."

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Miami Dolphins quarterback Dan Marino married a Pittsburgh-area woman in a private church ceremony that his grandmother, Julia Marino, said was "beautiful, really beautiful."

Marino, 23, exchanged vows Wednesday with Claire D. Veazey, 22, of suburban Mount Lebanon.

About 120 friends and relatives attended the 90-minute ceremony at St. Regis Roman Catholic Church, a small brick church across the street from the house of his parents, Daniel and Veronica.

Marino, who led the Dolphins to a 16-2 record before a 38-16 Super Bowl defeat to the San Francisco 49ers on Jan. 20, wore a black jacket and white tie. His bride wore a white, calf-length gown and a crown of white flowers.

Marino had no comment for the dozens of cameramen and reporters clustered outside the church, but as she entered, Miss Veazey told them, "I'm glad you all could come."

Raymond Burr

CHEHALIS, Wash. (AP) — Actor Raymond Burr of "Perry Mason" and "Ironsides" television fame says he's finished with the tube and is returning to his first love, the stage.

Burr, 67, said he would return to the theater in a play on Henry the Navigator which is now being written and is scheduled to open in 1987 in England.

"Twenty years of years of TV is enough," Burr, on a promotional tour for independent insurance agents, said Tuesday. "Many demands are placed upon you. You have little time for anything else. My next seven or eight years are fairly well planned out. If I were to do another series, all those plans would be out the window."

Henry, a 15th century Portugese prince, is "a man that the world doesn't know very much about," Burr said. "He started most of the great explorations of the world."

DEL RAY BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Mary M. Eckley, food editor of McCall's for two decades, died Wednesday. She was 63.

Miss Eckley worked as a food consultant to American Airlines and associate food editor of Good Housekeeping before joining McCall's in 1960. Miss Eckley was the author of The McCall's Cookbook.

ROSS, Calif. (AP) — Charles J. Davis, who spent 20 years as a member of the United States delegation to the United Nations, died Saturday. He was 61.

Davis was an officer in the U.S. Marine Corps in World War II and served with the Sixth Marine Division on Guam and in China. Davis, who was fluent in Chinese, Korean and Japanese, joined the staff of the United Nations delegation when Adlai Stevenson was U.N. ambassador. He remained until 1976.

SEATTLE (AP) — Ivar Haglund, who built a chain of seafood eateries from a small fish bar on the Seattle waterfront, died Wednesday. He was 79.

Haglund, a member of the Seattle Port Commission, owned three restaurants and 17 fish bars in the Puget Sound area, as well as a clam harvesting operation and real estate.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — William V. Schneiderman, a former state Communist Party leader whose fight against deportation to the Soviet Union enlisted the aid of Republican stalwart Wendell Willkie, died Tuesday. He was 79.

Schneiderman, chairman of the Communist Party of California for 25 years, ran for governor of Minnesota in 1939 on the Communist ticket.

The government tried to take his citizenship in 1939, contending he concealed his party membership when he applied for naturalization in 1927. Willkie, the Republican presidential nominee in 1940, argued the case before the U.S. Supreme Court and won in 1943.

Professor rewriting edition of 'The Andy Griffith Show'

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — More about the fictional town of Mayberry, N.C., is on the way from a university professor whose first book on Andy, Barney, Opie and Aunt Bee has sold out three printings.

Richard Kelly, who teaches English to University of Tennessee undergraduates, said "The Andy Griffith Show" is one subject of which he never tires.

Instead of a fourth printing, Kelly decided to rewrite the 1981 edition of "The Andy Griffith Show" (John F. Blair, $8.95) and add a new chapter on the writers who spun the tales of small-town life in the South.

"I made a few slips in plot summaries," Kelly said of his first effort. "I remember one story where I said Andy went fishing and caught a bass. People really watch the show closely. I found out from many letters that it was a silver carp."

In addition to the new chapter on the series' writers, Kelly is including the script of a show that was never produced and a short trivia section.

"The Andy Griffith Show" was produced by CBS from 1960-68 and starred Andy Griffith as Sheriff Andy Taylor. Don Knotts played his deputy, Barney Fife, while Ron Howard played Opie, Sheriff Taylor's son, and Frances Bavier played Aunt Bee, Taylor's aunt.

Kelly, a New York native, was first exposed to life in North Carolina when he taught at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He began research on the book in 1975 after being encouraged by colleagues at the University of Tennessee and his publisher.
