Police seek bombing suspects

TORONTO (AP) — Police searched through the debris outside a Litton Systems Canada plant Friday for clues to the identity of bombers who devastated part of the factory, source of guidance systems for the U.S. nuclear cruise missile.

The blast late Thursday injured four factory workers and three policemen who responded to an anonymous telephone warning about the bomb, which had been hidden in a delivery van parked outside the plant in suburban Etobicoke, authorities reported.

No one immediately claimed responsibility for the attack.

Litton Systems Canada, a subsidiary of Litton Industries of Beverly Hills, Calif., has been a focus of anti-nuclear weapons protest in Canada.

Earlier Thursday, an appeal court ruled that five Litton executives could not be forced to testify at the trial of 22 anti-war activists charged with trespassing on Litton's property last year.

Defense attorneys wanted to call them as witnesses in an attempt to establish the protesters' claim that Litton was committing a crime against humanity by helping build cruise missiles and the demonstrators were justified in trying to shut down the plant.

One policeman and two of the workers hurt in the blast remained hospitalized Friday, but their injuries were not critical, police Constable Jack Hobbs reported.

"The property damage is in the millions," he said. The explosion tore off the brick front of the office section of the two-story plant, blew out windows in a nearby hotel and damaged surrounding vehicles.

The anonymous telephone call, saying a bomb had been placed in a van at the factory, was received by the main Toronto police switchboard at 11:20 p.m., police said.

Three officers drove to the site and found the truck with a small box inside marked "Danger Explosives." As they walked away to radio for assistance, the vehicle blew up in a fireball. Wreckage was blown hundreds of yards away.

The explosion "knocked me off my feet — I thought that a plane had hit the roof," said Paul Duggan, a clerk at the Carlton Place Hotel across the street from the factory. "One lady was knocked right out of her bed."

Moments before the blast, a security guard alerted workers to the bomb threat.

"We started running toward the exit when suddenly there was a bang and everything shattered," Litton technician Leo Bailey said.

Smith to take fact-finding tour abroad

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General William French Smith plans to fly over the Golden Triangle in Thailand and walk through an illegal drug bazaar in the Khyber Pass on a 20-day, round-the-world trip to study drug and refugee problems, administration officials disclosed Friday.

"This is the first time an attorney general has ever made this kind of a trip," said a high administration official. "The purpose is to emphasize the importance we attach to these problems" and thus increase foreign cooperation with the United States.

Two officials briefed reporters about the six-nation trip at the Justice Department on the condition they be identified only as "a high administration official" and "an administration official." The trip, which begins Tuesday, will take the 24-person party to Tokyo, Hong Kong, Thailand, Pakistan, Paris and Rome.

Smith will be accompanied by his wife, Jean, acting Drug Enforcement Administrator Francis "Bud" Mullen, Immigration and Naturalization Commissioner Alan Nelson, Smith's spokesman Thomas DeCair, two secretaries and at least two special assistants. The other 13 members of the group will be "mostly security people," the administration official said.

Asked the cost of the trip, the official said he had no idea.

An Air Force spokesman, Capt. Sam Roberts, said the group's C-135, a military version of a Boeing 707 jet, will cost $381,612 just for the 61 hours and 40 minutes of flying time. Roberts said he could not estimate in advance the expenses and flight pay for the 19-member crew which includes pilot, navigator, Air Force security police, communications specialists, loading crews, stewards and stewardesses.

The administration official said the government would pay Mrs. Smith's way, because "she will be working on some projects for the United States Information Agency," but he did not know what the projects were.

A spokesman for USIA, Les Lisle, was still trying several hours later to determine what those projects were.

The high official said Smith would look at sanctions the British colony of Hong Kong imposes on employers who hire illegal aliens. The Reagan administration has proposed such sanctions in the United States.

In Thailand, Smith will tour two refugee camps outside Bangkok. The Thais have been concerned over the reluctance of other countries to resettle these refugees. But the high official said, "There is concern in Congress and around this country about the numbers we have been accepting, and the farther we get away from the Vietnam War, the more diffuse the interest of the United States is in the flow of these people."

In northern Thailand, Smith will get an aerial tour of a major source of heroin, the Golden Triangle, which extends from Thailand into Burma and communist Laos. The official said, "We're told it's easy to see how private armies run by drug lords can hide armed camps in the hills, mountains and valleys where the border is just something somebody put on a map and doesn't really exist for all practical purposes."

Smith also will fly to Peshawar in Pakistan's northwest frontier province, which the high official said is now an even greater source of heroin than Southeast Asia.

He will visit a refugee camp and the Khyber Pass village of Landikotal where, the official said, he'll tour "something called the smugglers' bazaar, where you can walk down the street and buy heroin or hashish or anything."

At one point, the official joked, "We thought it would be a good photo opportunity to have the attorney general make a buy there."

Friends play joke on judge

By ED TODD

The package addressed to Bob Pine might have given anybody else a worry and an headache.

Pine just smiled.

Inside the plain-brown wrapping was an Extra-Strength Tylenol box for 100 capsules of 500 milligrams of the powdered medication touted for its aspirin-like "extra pain relief" powers but lately tainted by the recent cyanide lacing of Chicago-area Tylenol capsules.

A printed note taped to the flimpsy box read: "Best Wishes From Your Many Friends."

Pine chuckled over the package, which was delivered in the mail to his Justice of the Peace office in the Midland County Courthouse.

"It's just a prank; it's just a joke," said Pine, a justice of peace since the mid-1960s.

Rather than capsules, the box was filled with concave Styrofoam-like packaging material.

The stock number on the box was 1949ME. Stock numbers on the boxes of the 50-capsule pain reliever, which were recalled by the manufacturer, Johnson & Johnson's McNeil Consumer Products, after cyanide was found in some capsules in the Chicago area, were MC2880 and 1910MD.

"I know," said Pine, "this was done for the fun of it. You've got to have some friends."

The judge said he had cause to believe that the prank probably was to get even with him for a practical joke he had pulled but didn't get away with.

Reagan puts himself in awkward position

By JAMES GERSTENZANG

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has placed himself in the awkward position of trying to explain why he is selling U.S. grain to the Soviet Union at the same time that he is attepting to enforce a ban against European sales of high technology equipment to Moscow.

But there is one group that is unlikely to press hard for an explanation — grain-belt farmers who have been hit by rising surpluses and declining prices.

Thus in offering the grain to Moscow, Reagan took a step that is likely to irritate European allies, who already are upset by the president's ban on the sale of U.S. high technology to the Soviets. But with Election Day only three weeks away, his action is likely to please voters in the Midwest.

The president, in a hastily announced radio address broadcast live in the Midwest, said Friday that the Soviet Union would be allowed to purchase 23 million metric tons of grain this fiscal year, if the contract is negotiated by the end of November and the grain is delivered within 180 days.

But the end-of-the-year grain glut means prices in November are typically at their lowest.

In fiscal year 1982, which ended Sept. 30, the Soviet Union purchased 13.9 million tons of grain. Under current agreements, the Soviets can buy a minimum of 6 million tons and a maximum of 8 million tons, unless the United States agrees to a larger purchase.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block said he had no assurance that the Soviets would go for the offer of additional grain. But he stood by an earlier prediction that they would buy 18 million to 20 million tons.

The secretary took exception with a suggestion that the announcement's timing was tied to the Nov. 2 election.

"It has nothing to do with elections or anything else," Block said. "It has everything to do with a big agricultural crop out here...I don't think there's a farmer in the country that would not want to see it done and done on a timely basis...the time is right."

But the speech precedes a Reagan campaign trip to Illinois and Nebraska next week, and follows by two weeks a meeting between Republican members of Congress and administration officials.

The officials were urged to adopt a policy of unconditionally honoring grain sale contracts with the Soviets, to boost U.S. credibility as a supplier and lift exports and grain prices while farmers are feeling severe economic pressure. Farmers feel the reliability of U.S. supplies was tarnished on Jan. 4, 1980, when Jimmy Carter embargoed grain sales to the Soviets following the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

"I thought they might have announced this two months ago, instead of two weeks before an election," said Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan. "But farmers have to accept the fact that if it takes a congressional election to get (the administration) to move, fine. We'll take it however we can get it."

The Reagan administration has used an embargo on the sale of high technology items to the Soviet Union to protest the Soviet role in Afghanistan and in the martial law crackdown in Poland. The equipment would be used in a 3,500-mile pipeline that would carry natural gas from Siberia to western Europe.

"It is hardly understandable for Europeans that one introduces an embargo against technical eqipment (for the pipeline) and argues against the alleged foreign currency income derived by this, and on the other hand exports grain," said a spokesman for the West Germany economic ministry, who declined to be identified.

A French foreign ministry spokesman, who by government policy may not be identified, said France had no objection to U.S. grain sales to the Soviets. "We find it curious that they are able to sell cereals, while they object ot our selling...goods which are not strategic," he added.

Oil companies pass United Way goal

Representatives of the Major Oil Division of Midland's United Way campaign reported Friday at a noon meeting they had passed their campaign division goal of $270,319 by tallying $273,686.

"This represents a 26 percent increase over the amount these 25 companies raised last year," said Division Chairman Larry Turner, "and a few groups have not yet turned in final reports." The Major Oil Division had set a 20 percent increase as its goal, while the general campaign goal is a 14.5 percent increase over last year's total.

Turner is vice president of the Western Division of Gulf Oil Exploration and Production, and has headed the United Way campaign among the major oil companies since moving to Midland last summer.

In thanking the volunteers and contributors who participated in the Major Oil campaign, Turner pointed out that such an increase could be attributed only to the "dedication and caring" of those involved, as many of the major oil companies had experienced wage and hiring freezes during the past year.

Turner also gave special credit to Loaned Executives who worked with the Major Oil campaign. Mickey Cohlmia of Gulf, Kay Bivens of Tom Brown, Inc., and Bill Newkirk of Adobe Oil and Gas, who are lent by their employers to the United Way 20 hours per week during the campaign, assisted company coordinators with their campaigns, including scheduling showings of the campaign film and agency tours.

Joe Kloesel, campaign chairman, told the group they were largely responsible for the early build-up of momentum being seen in this year's campaign. "Because of Major Oil's early support and the pilot organizations activity, we were right on schedule at 35 percent complete at last week's report meeting," Kloesel explained, "and hope to be at 60 percent by next week."

Alan McDaniel, who heads the entire Oil Unit, pointed out that the unit stands at 67 percent complete, and is expected to account for almost one-third of the campaign total.

Kloesel also said a half-time report rally has been scheduled for Wednesday at noon on the south lawn of the Courthouse. "Cliff Harris will be back to join us and announce our results to

Annual inflation rate at 3.1 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dipping for the fourth time this year, prices at the wholesale level fell in September at an annual rate of 1.7 percent, the government said Friday.

The new figures meant that, through September, wholesale inflation was running at an annual rate of 3.1 percent and raised the possibility the pace for all of this year would be the slowest since the 2.2 percent of 1970.

At the same time, the Federal Reserve Board reported that production at the nation's factories was off 0.6 percent last month, the 12th decline in the last 14 months.

Economists, heartened by the improved price picture, nonetheless largely attributed the declines in both reports to the stifling recession which they said still gripped the economy in September.

President Reagan, though, hailed the slowdown in wholesale inflation as another step on the road to economic health.

"BRINGING DOWN inflation brings down interest rates, which brings back the economy," he said during a signing ceremony for a banking bill in the White House rose garden.

Referring to the surges in the stock market and declines in interest rates earlier in the week, Reagan said, "What better way to cap off a big week of momentum toward recovery than this morning's Producer Price Index report?"

Allen Sinai, senior economist at Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass., said the price report "provides important evidence that inflation rates are down to stay."

He added that the better price results are "clearly the fallout of what the industrial production indicator shows — the economy was still sliding in September."

The price declines, as measured by the Labor Department's Producer Price Index for finished goods, were driven by sharp falls in new car and light truck costs as dealers tried to get rid of their inventories to make room for 1983 models, the report said.

Also fueling the decline was a 0.5 percent drop in food prices, mostly the result of good crop harvests, economists said. Energy prices, reflecting the continuing worldwide oil surplus, were up slightly as rising natural gas prices offset lower gasoline and home heating oil costs.

IN ANALYZING the fresh inflation results, economists pointed to the Federal Reserve Board's new report on industrial production for further evidence of economic weakness.

The report said the 0.6 percent fall in industrial production was fueled by a 1.6 percent drop in the production of business equipment.

The last time output dipped more than in September was in May, when it fell 0.7 percent.

John Albertine, president of the American Business Conference, said the twin falls in the reports "are symptomatic of a recessionary economy that cannot quite turn the corner to recovery."

Georgia State University forecaster Donald Ratajczak predicted wholesale inflation would remain moderate for the rest of the year, with the final tally for 1982 coming in under 3.5 percent.

Producer prices — one merchandising step before the prices paid by retail customers — had surged 7 percent in 1981 and 11.8 percent in 1980.

In September alone, producer prices edged down a seasonally adjusted 0.1 percent, compared with 0.6 percent increases in July and August, the report said. They also fell by 0.2 percent in February and by 0.1 percent in March and May.

IF PRICES fell for 12 straight months at September's 0.1 percent, the yearly decline would be 1.7 percent. The annual rate reported by the Labor Department is based on a more precise calculation of monthly changes than the figure the department makes public.

The new report said that for the 12 months ending in September, producer prices rose 3.6 percent.

The report gave these details on September price changes:

—Prices for new cars tumbled 6.3 percent and costs for light trucks were off 3.5 percent.

Without the auto close-out prices, the report said, the overall index would have gone up 0.4 percent, instead of falling.

—Prices were down for pork, poultry, soft drinks, beef, veal and processed fruits and vegetables. Prices were up for fish, fresh fruit, sugar, dairy products and coffee.

—Energy prices rose 0.4 percent as gasoline costs dropped 0.9 percent and the cost of home heating oil was off 1.6 percent. Natural gas prices rose 2.7 percent.

Thornberry says he has Connally, Shivers backing

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Republican agriculture commissioner candidate Fred Thornberry announced Friday that he has the support of former Texas governors Allan Shivers and John Connally.

Accompanied at a Capitol news conference by Deputy Secretary of Agriculture Frank Naylor, Thornberry announced a 550-member steering committee that includes Texas Rangers owner Eddie Chiles and Houston businessman Walter Mischer.

Thornberry, a 45-year-old career agricultural extension agent, assailed his opponent, former Texas Observer editor Jim Hightower, as a phony.

Texans "are not being fooled by his hayseed performances," Thornberry said. "He studied for a year at a fancy eastern university, but for our benefit, he comes back to Texas and says to us 'it don't' and 'there ain't.'"

Naylor denied that President Reagan's Friday morning announcement of additional grain sales to the Soviet Union was politically timed. He said the Reagan administration is committed to developing exports of farm products.

Reagan also has promised sufficient funding for short-term loans to farmers, Naylor said.

Though some farmers can be expected to fail, like in any business, Naylor said, "the vast majority will be well taken care of this year, and we'll see them through."

Later Friday, Gov. Bill Clements picked up the backing of Ruben Sandoval, national civil rights director and former general counsel of the League of United Latin-American Citizens.

Sandoval told a news conference he was "crossing over" to vote Republican in November. "We are not abandoning the Democratic party but we are abandoning (Attorney General) Mark White," he said. White is Clements' Democratic opponent.

He said he was not speaking officially for LULAC, but "I speak for myself and for the sentiment of a lot of Mexicanos."

Sandoval criticized White particularly for opposing the extension of the Voting Rights Act and then, in his campaign, claiming he is for it.

"I am a registered Democrat but I also am a liberated Democrat," he said. "If ever a party asks too much of a person it is in this governor's race."

But Sandoval said he probably would vote for Democrats Jim Mattox for attorney general and Jim Hightower for agriculture commissioner.

He said he spoke out in response to a Thursday news conference in which officials from four South Texas counties endorsed Mark White.

White, meanwhile, got some backing for his position against the fuel adjustment cost, which is added onto consumers' utility bills to cover the cost to the company of the fuel.

The Texas Consumer Association put out a press release Friday criticizing the charge and calling for the election of Public Utility Commissioners, who currently are appointed.

White has called for elimination of the charge, which Clements backs as a necessary expense to the companies. On Thursday, PUC counsel Allen King said White's proposal would not reduce utility bills for consumers.

"The fact that the PUC staff would rush to the aid of the incumbent governor's political campaign calls into question their objectivity as regulators," responded TCA Director Rebecca Lightsey.

Search extends nationwide for Tylenol deaths suspect

CHICAGO (AP) — Police investigating the seven Tylenol poisoning deaths searched nationwide Friday for a former accountant described as "a chameleon" who should be considered armed and dangerous.

Until Wednesday, Robert Richardson had been sought for allegedly trying to extort $1 million from the manufacturer of Extra-Strength Tylenol under the threat of more deaths.

Investigators at first regarded this as a possible attempt to embarrass a man who had owned a bank account to which the extortion money was to be delivered.

But on Wednesday night investigators learned that Richardson is really James W. Lewis, who at one time was charged in a 1978 Kansas City murder.

That development propelled Lewis, described by one investigator as a "bright, intelligent fellow," into the center of the Tylenol murder investigation.

"There could be a strong possibility that he's connected with the Tylenol murders," police Lt. August Locallo said Friday.

Illinois Attorney General Tyrone Fahner, who is heading the investigation into the deaths by cyanide-contaminated Tylenol capsules, said this "is an important lead, since Lewis was involved in a murder before."

Police put out a special nationwide bulletin for Lewis, 36, and his wife, Leann, 36. Both of them, the bulletin said, "should be considered armed and dangerous." Mrs. Lewis is charged with using a fictitious Social Security number to try to obtain work in Chicago.

The bulletin noted that Lewis has used many aliases in the past.

"He's almost like a chameleon with the names and things he takes on," said Sgt. Jim Treece of the Kansas City police department. "We don't know where he is...He might be in any of the 50 states."

Locallo said no definite links have been developed between Lewis and the Tylenol killings, but that Kansas City investigators told him Lewis had owned journals that described various poisons and their effects on people.

Kansas City authorities sent three officers to Chicago with Lewis' police file. While a judge dismissed the 1978 murder charge because the victim's cause of death couldn't be determined and some evidence had been illegally seized, Lewis was indicted last December in Missouri on theft and forgery charges. One of the Kansas City officers on Friday carried "some written material" to the FBI laboratory in Washington for fingerprint analysis.

Texas company recalls cans of chili

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Texas company has voluntarily recalled nearly 2,500 cases of canned chili that may contain food poisoning organisms, the Agriculture Department said Friday.

Officials said the 15-ounce cans are labeled Wolf Brand Chili Without Beans and were produced by Wolf Brand Products, Corsicana, Texas.

Merlin A. Nelson of the department's Food Safety and Inspection Service said two lots of the suspected chili were produced on Aug. 2 and distributed in Texas and Louisiana.

No illnesses have been reported, he said.

The cans can be identified by the code numbers PC2H2 and AC2H2, and the official establishment number, 1057, which are embossed on their lids. No other codes or products made by the company are involved in the recall.

Consumers who have bought the canned chili should return it to the store where purchased.

"Under no circumstances should the product be opened or eaten, even if it looks and smells normal," Nelson said.

The problem was brought to the agency's attention after a distributor in Garland, Texas, reported swollen cans. Tests at USDA laboratories "confirmed the presence of clostridia-type organisms which could be of potential public health significance," the announcement said.

date," Kloesel said, "and we will have free hot dogs and soft drinks for everyone who joins us."

"Judging by the turnout we had for our kickoff," Kloesel said, "people want to be involved with the campaign this year, and we want to give them every opportunity to do so."

Police investigate gas executive's murder

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — A retired Amarillo oil and gas executive was killed Friday when another driver pumped five shots into his pickup truck at a downtown intersection, police said.

Erle Winston Mathis, 63, who was vice president of Pioneer Production Corp., an oil and gas exploration subsidiary of Pioneer Corp., died at 3:40 p.m. at Northwest Texas Hospital.

Police issued a murder warrant for L.R. Wynne, a former chief of detectives in the Amarillo Police Department and the owner of Amarillo Security Control Co.

Police Lt. Jimmy Boydston said the shooting may have been over a business deal that had soured.

"We have not pinned down a motive," Boydston said. "That's a motive."

Witnesses said a man leaped out of his car, fired a large-caliber revolver through a closed window in Mathis' truck, then ran back to his car and drove away after 1:20 p.m. shooting.

The Cadillac was found about 7 p.m. at the Lubbock International Airport by the Texas Department of Public Safety, Boydston said. Passenger lists are being checked on outbound flights from the airport, Boydston said.

The 1982 brown Oldsmobile that the man was reported driving had been rented and was recovered near the Amarillo International Airport. Witnesses said the man got into a 1982 white Cadillac and drove off.

The man was believed to have driven toward New Mexico, authorities said.

Israeli consul: Lebanon invasion essential

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

ODESSA — While Israel's defense minister was offering to share with United States defense experts the intelligence obtained during fighting in Lebanon, an Israeli official in Odessa Friday addressed what he called the "misinformation and misunderstanding" surrounding the war.

Tzion Evrony, the Israeli consul general based in Houston, said "Operation Peace for Galilee," the invasion of Lebanon begun June 6, was essential for securing the safety of Israel's northern settlements and crushing the Palestinian Liberation Organization's "state within a state."

"We believe that we had the right to destroy PLO terrorist bases right on our border," said Evrony, who has served in his post since 1978. "How long would you tolerate terrorists planting bombs in schools, supermarkets...attacking school buses, always and only innocent civilians?" he asked, in a speech before the Odessa Optimist Club at Odessa College.

Evrony offered a glossy pamphlet, titled "Lebanon — The Facts," which states that between 1968 and 1982 more than 1,000 civilians were killed and 4,250 wounded in PLO attacks. He said the pamphlet, published by the Britain-Israel Public Affairs Committee in London, is intended to help readers understand Israel's goals during the war.

HE SAID CIVILIANS living in northern Israel were constantly imperiled by PLO raids and bombardment prior to the June operation. "Northern Israel is quiet now, and it is a very important achievement," he said.

Evrony said that while the Israeli military originally planned to venture only 25 miles into Lebanon, the pervasiveness of the PLO's "military infrastructure" called for Israeli forays up to, and eventually inside, Beirut.

"By doing so, we believe we did a great service to the entire free world — including the U.S. — by destroying this center of international terrorism," said Evrony, an eight-year veteran of Israel's Foreign Service. "We believe that the Israeli operation in Lebanon opened the opportunity for a new era in Lebanon," he said.

"Unfortunately, no one has yet invented a war without civilian casualties," said Evrony, stressing that Israeli troops used leaflet drops and loudspeaker patrols in an attempt to evacuate civilian areas prior to attacks. Evrony said eliminating the element of surprise often cost many Israeli fighters their lives.

PLO ARTILLERY and tanks were deliberately placed near hospitals, churches, schools and embassies, according to Evrony. "They simply were hiding behind the skirts of women," he said.

The pamphlet states that figures for the dead, wounded and homeless were "deliberate exaggerations" and notes that the International Red Cross' chief delegate to Lebanon, who quoted figures to the press, has been recalled. "Most of the casualties arose because of the PLO policy of using civilians as shields and hostages," the pamphlet states.

The pamphlet also states that documents found during the invasion indicate some PLO fighters were being "trained ideologically, as well as militarily, behind the Iron Curtain."

In a letter sent earlier this week by Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon to Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, the Israelis reportedly offered to share with the U.S. details on the terrorist operation uncovered in Lebanon.

The letter also reportedly offered to share extensive accounts of successful Israeli battle tactics against Soviet-built surface to air missiles, fighter jets and tanks.

Evrony said the Lebanon battles showed American-made weaponry to be superior to Soviet-supplied arms operated by the PLO.

DESPITE ISRAEL'S willingness to share military information, Evrony said the Israeli government cannot agree to a Middle East peace plan recently proposed by President Reagan.

"We believe we had the right to destroy PLO terrorist bases right on our border. How long would you tolerate terrorists planting bombs in schools, supermarkets...?"

—Tzion Evrony

He said Reagan's plan, which calls for associating the territories of Samaria and Judea with Jordan and establishment there of an independent Palestinian state, deviates from the Camp David agreements. Evrony said the Camp David plan calls for a five-year period of full autonomy for the Palestinians in those regions before interested parties resume negotiations aimed at a settlement.

"Historically, legally and morally, Jordan is the Palestinian state," he said. Evrony said creation of a independent Palestinian state on Israel's border amounts to "a prescription for war."

Searching for an analogy in the U.S., Evrony said establishment of a Palestinian homeland on Israel's border would be "like a communist enclave on the other side of the Potomac River."

He said the Israeli government is committed to signing a peace treaty with Lebanon, but will demand the return of an undetermined number of its captured soldiers and simultaneous withdrawal of Syrian and Israeli troops from Lebanon as part of any agreement.

When asked about the massacre of hundreds in the Sabra and Chatilla Palestinian refugee camps, Evrony said Israeli troops played no part in the killings and said an investigative panel is working to uncover details of the tragedy.

"This is a terrible crime committed by Christian Arabs against Muslim Arabs," said Evrony. "Israel, like the rest of the world, was terribly shocked."

DRAWING ON observations from a recent trip to Israel and Lebanon, Evrony said popular perceptions that the PLO is moderating militarily are misguided. He said about 8,000 PLO terrorists linger in northern Lebanon and Israeli troops uncovered large caches of PLO weapons stored inside Lebanon.

"The PLO is still a loose confederation of terrorist organizations bent on the destruction of Israel," he said. "We found enough Soviet ammunition and weapons to arm an army of 100,000 soldiers."

Despite its convincing victory against the PLO in Lebanon, Evrony said strong U.S.-Israeli relations must continue for the sake of both countries.

"Israel is the only pro-American, stable democracy with an army that can stand against the Soviets in the Middle East," he said.

Meanwhile, he said most Arab states look upon Israel as "a cancerous growth in the heart of the Middle East." With the exception of Egypt, said Evrony, "our only friendly border is the Mediterranean Sea."

DPS troopers to patrol bus routes

Midland County Constable Tom McGinnis announced Friday that he and his four deputies have begun supplementing Department of Public Safety troopers in enforcing traffic laws on rural county roads.

In particular, McGinnis said his office is paying special attention to school bus routes during the times when children are going to and from school.

He said a brief study of problems involving drivers not stopping for school buses was prompted by "numerous complaints from parents. The response from residents and bus drivers has been very favorable. They say (strict enforcement) is long overdue."

The constable's office, which employs uniformed officers but some unmarked vehicles, has issued 25 to 30 citations for school bus violations in the past week. McGinnis called the problem with motorists disobeying the school bus law "unbelievable."

Two deputy constables are certified on the breathalyzer machine and will also arrest drunk drivers. School routes on the Rankin Highway, Cottonflat Road and Tower Road will receive special attention.

McGinnis noted that drivers approaching school buses from either direction must stop if the bus has its red lights flashing.

Sun Belt grows

During the 1970s, 90 percent of the nation's population growth took place in the South and West — the Sun Belt. Those regions grew by 20 and 24 percent, respectively, while the Northeast had zero population growth and the North-Central area grew only 4 percent.

Clements: Gasoline tax hikes up to Legislature

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — If Texans have to pay more gasoline taxes in the future it will be up to the Legislature to order the increases, Gov. Bill Clements said Friday.

However, Clements said he would sign a tax bill if one were sent him by the Legislature, if he is governor in 1983.

"I think that tax is going to have a difficult time and I'm not going to be in a political posture of demagoguery in some mush-mouth manner of not addressing the issue... it had a failure in 1979, it had a failure in 1981 and Rep. Gib Lewis (D-Fort Worth, who is expected to be the next House speaker) has predicted it will fail in 1983."

Clements was asked at an impromptu news conference about a statement he made in the Oct. 11 debate with Attorney General Mark White. A transcript showed Clements as saying, "If we can get it through the Legislature I will sign the bill."

"I think this is something that the Democratically controlled Legislature, and it is, that's something they are going to have to do.

Mix-up leads to incorrect identification of premature babies, funerals, burial

DALLAS (AP) — Hospital and funeral home officials are blaming each other for the mix-up that caused a teen-age mother of one of two dead infants to bury the wrong child.

Rosa Torrez, 14, attended a funeral Oct. 6 that she believed was for her baby, and on Thursday returned to Oak Grove Cemetery in Irving to witness the burial of her child.

Authorites told Ms. Torrez Tuesday night that the baby she buried Oct. 6 was not her son, but the child of another woman.

Parkland Memorial Hospital officials said Rosa Torrez and another woman with a similar name, Rebecca Torres, delivered babies prematurely at Parkland six days apart. Both infants died at the hospital.

Rebecca Torres' son lived for five hours after his birth Sept. 25. Rosa Torrez' infant died Oct. 3, two days after his birth, officials said.

Ms. Torrez arranged to have Ben F. Brown Funeral Home of Irving pick up the body and handle her baby's funeral, which was held Oct. 6.

The error was discovered the next day.

People respond to plight of mission

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — The letters filled with money came from people of all faiths, from California to Canada, but the message was the same.

"Please use this to feed the poor," wrote Deborah Sulyma of East Freetown, Mass.

Dozens of people responded to the plight of Tijuana's Casa de los Pobres — "House of the Poor" — with an outpouring of aid and love.

More than $4,000 in cash donations, plus food deliveries, have been sent to the tiny mission that had trouble meeting the demands of Tijuana's swelling numbers of the poor and desperate.

The letters and donations began arriving a month ago, after an article on the mission by The Associated Press.

"The first one had a check for $1,500," said Sister Armida, administrator of the charity institution that feeds 1,000 people daily and rations out a sack of groceries to 400 families per week.

Lillian Campbell of Elgin, Ill., wrote, "I sit here dying of cancer and concerned for those who should have life better."

"She is sick and dying but she is thinking of others," said a grateful Sister Armida. "These are beautiful letters."

One of her favorites came from Michael Plante of Roxboro, Quebec, who wrote, "My wife and I have decided to cut down and eventually quit smoking. We would like to send you the money we can save by doing this." He enclosed $1 in the first letter.

Louis Sins of Orange, Calif., wrote, "I must try to help you feed someone, even for a short time. I would like to send more money but I am unemployed."

Miss Breezy Ayers of Klamath Falls, Ore., sent a $25 check and an apology. "I wish it could be more but I live on retirement pension."

On stationery under the name of the "Hi Notes Square Dance Club," Hal and Lil Posey of Grove City, Ohio, wrote: "We here in America do care."

Two weeks after the flood of money began, two Mexican-American families arrived at the mission with a personal delivery.

From their sagging vehicles they removed 100 pounds of rice, 100 pounds of beans, 40 pounds of meat, and bulk cans of powdered milk, fruit juice, and apple sauce. Their note was signed: "M. Zearott of Los Angeles" and "V. Romero of Anaheim."

"Somebody brought 30 gallons of milk," said Sister Armida, who answered each of the nearly 100 letters, even those offering only prayers. "Others called and said, 'What can we bring you?'"

Thanks to the $1,500 gift from Dean Funston, a Wichita Falls, Tex., businessman, the mission has its first large coffee brewer.

"The people who come here are just thrilled with it, Sister Armida said. "We've wished for a long time that we had one. Water was all we had before."

One letter asked that the money enclosed go to Trinidad Angeles, the elderly widow who could not remember her last meal with meat.

Since a recent Associated Press story on the mission, which feeds 1,000 people daily and rations out groceries to 400 families weekly, more than $4,000 in cash and food donations have arrived from the United States and Canada.

Perez de Cuellar suggests force remains in Lebanon

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar recommended Friday that the Security Council extend the life of the U.N. force in southern Lebanon despite Israel's opposition.

The Lebanese government requested that the mandate for the 6,500-man force, which expires Tuesday, be extended for three months, to Jan. 19, he said in a report to the Security Council, but "the attitude of the Israeli government as expressed to me has not been in favor."

The 15 council members, after discussing the report privately, scheduled a meeting Monday afternoon to hear Lebanese President Amin Gemayel on the issue. A member of the council who asked not to be identified said some members favored a two-month extension and others three months.

Perez de Cuellar in his report to the council said the withdrawal of the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon, or UNIFIL, "would have highly undesirable consequences" because Lebanese troops and police stationed in the UNIFIL area of south Lebanon "are not yet in a position to assume full control of that area."

"The withdrawal of UNIFIL in such conditions would therefore be a serious blow to the early restoration of the effective authority of the Lebanese government in southern Lebanon," he continued. "Moreover, the danger of violent incidents between the various factions in the UNIFIL area cannot be ruled out.

"I further believe that if, as is hoped, agreement is reached on the withdrawal of foreign forces from Lebanon in the near future, UNIFIL could play a useful and constructive role...in facilitating...the withdrawal process."

The Security Council created the force in March 1978 after the earlier Israeli invasion of Lebanon to destroy bases from which Palestinian guerrillas were attacking Israel. UNIFIL took over most of the territory from the Litani River south to the border area controlled by Maj. Saad Haddad's Christian militiamen.

The mission of the U.N. force was to confirm the withdrawal of Israeli forces, restore peace and help the Lebanese government regain effective control of southern Lebanon, which had been dominated by the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The U.N. troops were unable to prevent the infiltration of Palestinian guerrillas across their zone to Israel, and the Lebanese army and police had not rebuilt sufficiently to take over the area when Israeli forces crossed the border last June and occupied southern Lebanon.

"With the assistance of UNIFIL and the Lebanese battalion attached to it, the Lebanese gendarmes are playing an increasingly active role in the maintenance of law and order in the UNIFIL area," Perez de Cuellar reported.

He said "the attitude of the Israeli authorities" prevented the force from playing a humanitarian role outside its area of deployment "despite requests from the Lebanese government and local authorities that it do so."

The secretary-general also reported that the government of Nepal advised him it could no longer contribute to the force and was withdrawing its 462-man infantry battalion when the current mandate expires next week. Fiji, France, Ghana, Ireland, the Netherlands, Nigeria, Norway and Senegal also contribute troops to the force.

Graham visits prison camp site

BERLIN (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham visited the site of a Nazi concentration camp Friday and spoke out against superpower deployment of nuclear and biochemical weapons that he said could turn Europe into a "wasteland in a matter of minutes."

Graham visited the site of the Sachsenhausen concentration camp where the Nazis killed more than 150,000 prisoners between 1942 and 1945. He expressed "profound feelings of sadness and revulsion."

Graham, on a 10-day tour of Communist East Germany, said, "One of the tragedies of the human race is our tendency to forget."

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Union Carbide Corporation, Linde Division, New York, has applied to the Texas Water Commission for a permit authorizing a discharge of 30,000 gallons per day of treated wastewater effluent and stormwater in Howard County.

The plant is located about 600 feet north of Interstate 20 near Refinery Road and adjacent to the west side of Cosden Oil Refinery.

The applicant proposes to construct and operate an air separation plant producing nitrogen.

Sanitary wastewater shall be segregated from all other wastewaters and discharged into a septic tank and drainfield on company property.

The discharge is to Beals Creek, thence to the Colorado River.

No public hearing is planned on the request. However, a hearing may be scheduled if one is requested by an affected party.

Airports request moneys

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Two airports in the Midland area are requesting $200,000 in financial assistance from the Texas Aeronautics Commission for construction projects, which will be considered by the commission Oct. 19.

The city airport in Monahans seeks to construct a fence around the perimeter of the facility and also resurface the aircraft parking area, a spokesman said. The airport has requested $105,000 to assist in financing the projects.

The Schleicher County Airport has requested $95,000 to acquire land and construct a new runway measuring 4,190 feet by 60 feet and build a stub taxiway and apron for aircraft parking.

The requests will be considered by the TAC along with 23 others.

MTA wants buses sold

HOUSTON (AP) — The Metropolitan Transit Authority is seeking permission to sell 226 of its problem-plagued Grumman Flexible buses and requesting $9.4 million from the Grumman Corp. for non-warranty repairs on 100 others.

The request, which will be presented to the transit board, represents a tentative agreement between the transit authority and Grumman Corp. after years of bickering about who should pay for "remanufacturing" work.

Since the fleet was delivered in 1979, most of the buses have been out of service. Grumann officials claimed were not properly maintained, and transit officials argued the buses were poorly designed and plagued by mechanical and structural defects.

...And at The Reporter-Telegram that means people working in a dozen different departments with one common goal: To produce and deliver to you the best daily newspaper possible.

To help us do a better job we're taking a close look at ourselves, how we do things and how we could do them better. We're examining all the possiblities and looking at all the angles that could result in a better Midland Reporter-Telegram for you.

And our people are deeply involved in helping us make those changes. This week we'll be letting you know who some of them are and the role they play in producing your daily paper.

While a newspaper's task is to keep citizens informed on what's happening throughout the world, and The Reporter-Telegram utilizes five national news services to do that, we believe you also want thorough, timely, comprehensive local coverage...news and features about people, places and events here at home.

To obtain and produce that news we have enlarged our staff to its present size... 32 editors, reporters and photographers. We're proud of them because we know "It's PEOPLE that make newspapers go!"

(Declared by William D. Clements, Jr,Grov.of Texas)

We also wish to salute our carriers, because without their help, we could not get the paper out where it belongs-to you, our Subscribers. Braving the weather, spending long periods of time rolling, transporting and delivering your paper is a tough job, and one that we appreciate. We hope that you do too. Thanks, Carriers!

Official Memorandum

By

WILLIAM P. CLEMENTS, JR.

Governor of Texas

GREETINGS: AUSTIN, TEXAS

The International Circulation Managers Association has chosen October 16, 1982, as International Newspaper Carrier Day and will be honoring all newspaper carriers on that day for their contribution to society.

The United States Congress has also adopted a resolution honoring this Nation's boys, girls and adults delivering our daily news.

To these young adults and men and women must go much credit for the dissemination of the news to the people of our Nation.

Many of our business, civic, professional and religious leaders received their first training in the principles of free enterprise while serving as newspaper carriers.

It is fitting that the citizens of Texas set aside a day in special recognition of the day-by-day service rendered by their friendly newspapers as carrier.

THEREFORE, I, as Governor of Texas, in tribute to the thousands of loyal, efficient carriers who serve the public daily and help keep the integrity of the news at a high level, do hereby designate October 16, 1982, NEWSPAPER CARRIER DAY in Texas, and urge all the people they represent and the customers they serve so diligently to express their appreciation for these unfailing services.

In official recognition whereof, I hereby affix my signature this 5th day of Oct. , 19 82

W. P. Clements, Jr.

Governor of Texas

Rancher camps out at White Sands base

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, N.M. (AP) — An 81-year-old rancher refused again Friday to leave a homestead he says the Army took from him 40 years ago, and the commander of this missile base agreed to take the man's case to the Defense Department.

"I think we understand Mr. McDonald a little better now and what he's trying to do, and he's a little better aware of our situation, also," White Sands spokesman Jim Eckles said after officials met Thursday with Dave McDonald at the barricaded ranch on the restricted base.

While McDonald refused to move, he did agree not to use the two rifles or the old pistol that he and his niece brought to the dilapidated ranch house when they slipped in at dawn Wednesday, carrying bedrolls, water and enough food for a month.

McDonald and his niece were accompanied by a reporter and a photographer. The reporter and photographer left the range Thursday, but the McDonalds have stayed.

"As far as I know, there's no plan to evict him today or anytime soon," Eckles said Friday. "Sooner or later, he'll have to decide to leave the range."

Eckles said the range sent letters, signed by commander Maj. Gen. Niles Fulwyler, to Department of Defense officials Friday, "informing them of Mr. McDonald's concerns."

The remote ranch is about 10 miles from Trinity Site, where the world's first atomic bomb was exploded in 1945.

Army officials Thursday served papers on McDonald, asking him to leave, and Eckles said range officials had planned to evict the McDonalds on Thursday. But the military brass at White Sands decided to delay any action.

Acting missile-range commander Col. Dan Duggan and other range officials returned to the barricaded ranch Friday to talk to McDonald and his 32-year-old niece, Mary McDonald.

Military officials on Friday allowed state Rep. James L. Martin in to speak to the rancher and his niece "in his official capacity." Martin represents Socorro, where McDonald lives.

On Thursday, Duggan told the McDonalds, "I must ask you please, please do not use your firearms. I don't want you hurt, and I don't want any of my people hurt." McDonald said they would comply.

He and his niece strung barbed wire around the ranch house and erected signs saying, "Deeded Land, No Trespassing" and "Road closed to U.S. Army."

The Army took the 640-acre spread in 1942 for a bombing range and the atomic bomb development program known as the Manhattan Project. For years, McDonald was paid for the lease on the grasslands.

But in 1980, lease extensions expired and the U.S. Corps of Engineers began eminent domain hearings in which the land was condemned and McDonald was to be paid off.

Doctor awarded for nerve research

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Canadian scientist won a $10,000 award Friday for research that showed severed spinal nerves can be regrown in rodents, but he cautioned that more work is needed before human paraplegics can be helped.

"What these experiments were aimed at was exploring the potential for regrowth by nerve cells in the brain and spinal cord," said Dr. Albert Aguayo, director of the Division of Neurology at Montreal General Hospital and professor of neurology and neurosurgery at Montreal's McGill University.

"The crucial issue for human disease is whether the nerves can form a new functional connection," he said. "That's an issue for which nobody has answers."

Aguayo received the $10,000 Wakeman Award for Research in the Neurosciences at an annual symposium sponsored by Duke University and the award committee.

While the prize is given to research with the most promise for helping paraplegics, Aguayo said it would be a long time before a treatment based on his work could be conceived.

Aguayo said his work showed nerve cells had a "remarkable capacity for regrowth" to lengths that could reach limbs or organs cut off from the central nervous system, which is comprised of some 200 billion cells in the spinal cord and brain.

He said glial cells, which surround nerve cells and provide them with support and nutrients, may be responsible for turning growth on and off.

Montana candidate wants disarmament

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Republican Senate candidate Larry Williams is advocating that the United States unilaterally dismantle some nuclear weapons, a dramatic departure from the policy of his president.

"I'm calling for a limited cutback to see what the other side does," says Williams, who is in a close race against Democrat John Melcher.

His remarks are raising eyebrows at a time President Reagan is saying the people who back a less drastic freeze "want the weakening of America." Reagan says the United States seeks negotiated arms reductions, and only after a U.S. buildup erases what he describes as Soviet superiority.

Williams urges a risky American initiative.

"We could dismantle some weapons we have or dismantle weapons in production, just to give a sign to the world that we are willing to deal with the problem," Williams adds. He acknowledges that a one-sided cutback could leave the country temporarily vulnerable. But, he says, "The consequences of continuing this nuclear arms buildup are far worse."

The issue has arisen in a state which has so many nuclear-armed Minuteman missiles buried in silos that it would rank as one of the world's nuclear powers if it were an independent country.

Helena lawyer John Mahan, past national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, said he was shocked by Williams' stand.

"We are 100 percent against unilateral disarmament," Mahan said. "We think it's dangerous. Every president has been against it from Eisenhower on and Reagan's against it."

The Montana VFW has endorsed Melcher, who wants an end to the arms buildup, but opposes a unilateral move.

Williams' stance is no casual, off-the-cuff idea blurted out without much forethought.

In June, he called for limited unilateral disarmament at a conference on "The Consequences of Nuclear War" and he took that position again three times this week in Missoula — at a press conference, at a meeting with high school students and again in an interview with the local paper, the Missoulian.

Williams declines to say which weapons in the U.S. arsenal he would dismantle.

Williams, 40, is a former New York advertising writer who made a lot of money in commondities and stocks and reaped another harvest writing about how he did it. He is the author of the 1982 best-seller, "How to Prosper in the Coming Good Years."

Williams also is the candidate favored by the National Conservative Political Action Committee, which has earmarked more than $200,000 — an enormous amount for a Montana election race — to portray Melcher as a big spender and bring about his defeat.

Williams' arms control position is diametrically opposite that of Reagan, who says the United States' nuclear stockpile is smaller than the Soviet Union's and opposes a mutual nuclear weapons freeze until the United States catches up with the Soviets.

In Columbus, Ohio, on Oct. 5, Reagan said those proposing a nuclear weapons freeze are "inspired not by the sincere, honest people who want peace, but by some who want the weakening of America."

Asked about his differences with a president he supports on most other issues, Williams said Friday, "A lot of people support the president's position in Montana, but I think there might be something else we can do to curb the arms race."

Williams' position on arms control goes beyond Melcher's.

Evan Barrett, the Democrat's campaign manager, said Friday that Melcher also wants to end the nuclear arms race, but through negotiations.

"Their goals are the same," says Barrett. "They are both talking about the same thing, but it's a question of whether you do it yourself or negotiate with the Soviets."

Melcher and Williams part company on the nuclear initiative on the Montana ballot asking voters whether they oppose placement of MX missiles in Montana and further testing, development or deployment of nuclear weapons "by any nation."

Williams specifically endorses a vote against the MX and against further testing, development or deployment; Melcher takes a more cautious position. He intends to vote for the initiative and supports the concept but does not believe in advising voters on what stand they should take.

Melcher has been running television ads saying he favors a strong national defense but is "against gold-plated weapons systems, tanks that don't work and an Air Force that can get up only half the time."

The race appears close. The Republicans say a recent poll puts Williams ahead by four points. Melcher led in earlier polls.

United Auto Workers demand wage boost from Chrysler Corp.

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (AP) — The United Auto Workers opened a second round of contract talks with Chrysler Corp. on Friday, demanding an immediate wage boost instead of the delayed raise that was overwhelmingly voted down by the rank-and-file.

Negotiations should end by next Friday "one way or another," said union president Douglas A. Fraser.

"Clearly the Chrysler workers are saying almost in a single voice that they want a wage increase up front and that's the way we presented it," Fraser said at a news conference after Friday's bargaining session, which lasted less than an hour.

"We did not get into the size" of the raise, Fraser said, adding that workers are expecting "a substantial amount" of money. A day earlier he had said a pay raise of more than $1 an hour "has a nice ring to it." He said Chrysler officials would respond to the general proposal Monday morning.

Chrysler spokesman Charles Scales said the company had no comment.

The resumption of negotiations followed the UAW's announcement Thursday that autoworkers had rejected an earlier tentative contract by more than a 2-1 margin. UAW leaders said workers were angry the pact did not contain an immediate wage boost. The rejected pact would have reinstated cost-of-living allowances and would have tied wage increases to profits, both starting in December.

Asked about prospects for a strike, Fraser said autoworkers will continue to work under terms of the old contract that expired at midnight Sept. 15.

"I think the rank and file will wait until we authorize a strike" before staging any walkouts, he said, adding that he hoped a strike deadline would not be necessary.

Besides the wage boost, the union gave Chrysler a list of "issues that we perceive to be bothering the membership," Fraser said.

Included were a provision penalizing workers who are frequently absent, language on the ratio of supervisors to hourly workers in plants and some seniority issues, the union chief said.

The issues came up at ratification meetings around the country in the past two weeks as workers voted 70 percent against the earlier tentative contract reached Sept. 16, he said.

It was the first UAW contract at a Big Three automaker to be voted down by an entire vote of hourly skilled and unskilled workers. In the 1970s Chrysler engineers represented by the union rejected a pact, and in 1973 skilled tradesmen at Ford Motor Co. rejected a tentative accord.

Firefighters rescue two infants from burning building in Boston

BOSTON (AP) — Two infants were rescued from a burning building in South Boston early Friday, in the blue-collar neighborhood's third suspicious fire this week. Seven other residents escaped without injury.

Boston has been plagued by suspicious fires for four months, but the seriousness of the problem has increased in recent days.

After the latest fire, residents told officials that someone had thrown a "Molotov cocktail" in the front bay window of a third-floor apartment, said Capt. William Corbett of the Boston Arson Squad.

Firefighters found no evidence of a firebomb, but said the blaze did start in the apartment's front room. It quickly spread to the vacant fourth floor, causing the roof of the four-story, wood and brick building to collapse, said Deputy Fire Chief Gerald Hart.

Two residents, William Ordway and William Dejaney, picked up the children and carried them out of the building before fire engines arrived shortly before 2 a.m. All four lived on the third floor.

The infants, Letitia Jackson, 15 months, and her brother, William, 3 months, were treated at Boston City Hospital and released.

Firefighters spent three hours battling the blaze, which caused an estimated $60,000 in damage.

All residents found temporary shelter with friends or relatives, according to Charles Crocker, vice chairman of operations for the American Red Cross.

A four-month outbreak of suspicious fires has swept the city's older residential sections of Roxbury, Charlestown and Dorchester. South Boston suffered only occasional fires during that time, but "they've been getting more than their share lately," said Robert Marlowe, a fire department spokesman.

On Wednesday two fires in two hours broke out there, the last of a streak of eight suspicious fires in the city that morning.

Andrew behaved like prince, says Koo's mom

Prince Andrew

Koo Stark

LONDON (AP) — Prince Andrew behaved "like a prince in every sense of the word" during a much-publicized, eight-day Caribbean vacation with erotic film actress Koo Stark, Miss Stark's mother says.

The couple shared nothing but "innocent fun," Kathi Caruso said.

"I ought to know what went on. I was there the entire time," said the 62-year-old Mrs. Caruso, who chaperoned the trip.

She told the London Daily Express she was sorry for the trouble the vacation has caused Andrew.

"I am aghast at this awful thing the newspapers are doing," she was quoted as saying. "To think that they would treat one of their own this way is appalling."

However the publicity surrounding the vacation may have hurt her romance with Prince Andrew, it has helped Miss Stark's career, her father says. Miss Stark made two erotic films during her teens — "Emily" and "Cruel Passion."

Wilbur Stark, a producer credited with "The Thing" and "Cat People," said he knows of several offers for his daughter since she left for the island of Mustique with the prince.

Willie Nelson

GREENVILLE, Ill. (AP) — Country music star Willie Nelson made a phone call and brightened the day of a 13-year-old fan who is hospitalized with muscular cancer.

The call to Chris Nelson's room in Utlaut Memorial Hospital came less than an hour after a relative called the star's Connecticut headquarters to ask if Nelson could telephone the young patient.

Chris was asleep Tuesday when the singer called. The star offered encouragement and asked Chris to write when he felt up to it, Chris' father, Lew, said.

"After the call was over, he said, 'Daddy, was that really Willie Nelson?'" Lew Nelson said. "I said, 'Babe, it sure was.' You would think that the sunshine all of a sudden rose in the kid's face."

Chris' illness was diagnosed in April as rahabdomyosarcoma, one of the rarest forms of muscular cancer, hospital spokesman Alan Gaffner said. The boy has been confined to a wheelchair for about three months and is now bedridden and weak, he said.

Although they have the same last names, the country music star and the boy are not related.

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Veteran test pilot Charles E. Yeager flew a new fighter at 1,000 mph — his way of celebrating the 35th anniversary of man's first supersonic flight.

"A piece of cake," said Yeager after landing Thursday on Rogers Dry Lake, scene of decades of aerospace test flights and the main landing strip for the space shuttles.

Yeager was a 25-year-old Air Force captain strapped in a bullet-shaped X-1 rocket-plane when he became the first person to break the sound barrier Oct. 14, 1947.

Yeager is now a retired brigadier general and consulting test pilot for Northrop Corp.

First new area code being instituted in almost 10 years

SAN DIEGO (AP) — What's half of 714?

Wrong.

It's 619.

That's telephone company arithmetic.

Pacific Telephone announced it is splitting in half the six-county region from the Mexican Border to the eastern Sierra, which now has an area code of 714. Starting Nov. 6, millions of residents whose numbers used to be preceded by 714 will switch to 619.

It's the first new area code in nearly a decade.

The problem is the area has too many numbers.

"It was a problem of growth," said Steve Gould, a spokesman for Pacific Telephone. "If we had not split the area code and come up with a new one, we would have run out of new prefixes by 1984."

The communities getting the 619 code are in San Diego, Imperial, Inyo and Mono counties, the eastern portion of RiversideCounty and all but the southwestern corner of San Bernardino County.

Other towns and cities in the 714 code, including all of Orange County, will retain the 714 number.

"It's a form of identity, just like your street address or your phone number," said Pacific Telephone spokesman Tom McNaghten. "But this is a change we had to make."

The San Diego region is the first of three dialing areas in the United States scheduled to be split in the next year and a half.

Two more area codes will be added to the 106 codes in the United States. The Houston area's 713 will be split into 713 and 409 on March 19, 1983, and Los Angeles' 213 area will be split into 213 and 818 Jan. 7, 1984.

The last place to get a new area code was Virginia in 1974, said Bob Brillhart, staff manager of AT&T's numbering and dialing group in Basking Ridge, N.J.

The area-code system was mapped out after World War II, but in the 1940s the codes were used only by operators. The public first encountered area codes when direct-dial service began in the 1950s.

The boundaries of the new Southern California areas were based on phoning patterns.

"Calling habits will be disrupted regardless of how we split the code, but by dividing it the way we are, fewer calling habits will be disrupted," said Lincoln Ward, San Diego regional general manager for Pacific Telephone.

Pacific Telephone said roughly 1.7 million of its customers will be in the new 619 area code, and 1.2 million will keep the 714 code.

There will be a 90-day "grace period" once the changeover begins.

During that time, calls into either 619 or 714 areas will go through, McNaghten said. After Feb. 1, 1983, callers dialing the wrong area code will hear the familiar recording, "Your call cannot be completed as dialed."

In an informal San Diego Tribune survey, about 10 percent of the people questioned were aware of the impending change, but none knew the new area code.

McNaghten said the change will cost Pacific Telephone about $5.5 million, which includes the cost of sending numbered stickers to residential and business customers.

"But nobody's seven-digit phone number will change nor will the rates change," he said.

Pravda warns against eating orgies at wedding receptions

MOSCOW (AP) — Pravda issued a stern nyet on Friday to villagers who hold lavish wedding receptions that drag on for days in an orgy of eating and drinking.

The Communist Party daily newspaper said the results of such excess were palsied fieldhands, hung-over harvesters and milkmaids unable to do their work. It pleaded for restraint during harvest time.

"Nearly every wedding now is a fantastic waste of energy and finances. No one thinks about the life of the future family, only about prestige," Pravda lectured.

Pravda, mixing a few anecdotes with its lecture, said one rural bash lasted four days and "milkmaids were doing the gopak (Cossack dance) so long that they forgot about their cows. The combine and tractor drivers could not start up their machinery because their hands were trembling so much from hangovers."

Pravda attacked the custom of trying to outdo one's neighbors in hosting hundreds of guests at receptions, claiming it has no roots in old Russia.

"In ancient Russia, the newlyweds never drank at their weddings," Pravda said. "But now the organizers of the celebrations stock up with a minimum of a bottle of alcohol per guest for each day of the feast, including for children and old people."

Wild wedding receptions aren't limited to the countryside, Pravda said, but noted the city partes are on a smaller scale.

"Naturally a director of a city cafeteria wouldn't be able to take care of 300 people at a wedding feast lasting three days. He wouldn't be able to find a truck to carry away the smashed dishes and glasses," the report said.

Most rural weddings are held under makeshift tents with storage areas for food, drink and musical instruments and a sleeping area for the vodka victims.

"But the sobering station is different from those run by the state because the services are free of charge and, most important, no one complains to your boss about your behavior," Pravda added.

In the village of Mirolubovka, receptions were held in a school that was illegally abandoned by the director in favor of setting up a special restaurant.

"They gave fascinating parties until the time when there was an intrusion from outside. When authorities asked the organizers why the parties were so huge, the answer was always the same: they did not want to be outdone by their neighbors," said Pravda.

Families begin laying on huge amounts of food and drink as soon as the couple gets engaged, Pravda said. A rock'n'roll band is usually brought in to play "doubtful melodies" loud enough to keep the next town awake until the musicians are too alcohol-bleary to continue, said Pravda.

Guests are expected to bring along an envelope with a minimum of 10 rubles, the equivalent of $14 at the official rate, to help cover expenses. "Not being shy, the couple simply pockets the cash."

Pravda said it wasn't suggesting no alcohol be served. But it called for restrictions on long fetes during the harvest, and an end to wasteful outlays just to impress neighbors.

Burger King wins whopping victory in hamburger weigh-in WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Burger King won a whopping victory over McDonald's when a Florida museum held a weigh-in to settle a sandwich flap.

The Museum of Science in Palm Beach County this week weighed, prodded and chemically analyzed "regular" hamburgers from Burger King, McDonald's and Wendy's.

The results were announced Thursday at a news conference in front of a table laden with burgers, Styrofoam containers and a scale.

The museum concluded that Burger King, true to its assertions in a current $20 million advertising campaign, offers a regular hamburger bigger than McDonald's, the nation's largest hamburger fast-food chain. McDonald's came in second and and Wendy's third.

"The Burger King claim that their (regular) burgers are 20 percent larger is in fact correct," Dr. Edward Sobey, director of the museum, told reporters.

Regular burgers bought from West Palm Beach outlets of the three fast-food giants proved what the little girl with the syrupy voice has said on TV commercials: Burger King's cooked patty weighed 38.14 grams, to McDonald's 29.54, a difference of 29 percent.

But the museum said McDonald's Quarter-Pounder weighed 79 grams to the Whopper's 69. Wendy's Single came in a close third at 68 grams.

The Big Mac costs $1.26, or 1.59 cents per gram, while the Wendy's Single costs $1.29, 1.89 cents a gram, and the Whopper cost $1.42, or 2.05 cents per gram. Thus, Burger King's Whopper costs 29 percent more per gram than the Big Mac.

The museum did not conduct tests on flavor.

McDonald's last week lost the first round of a court fight to pull Burger King's new ads off the air when a federal judge in Miami denied a request for a temporary injunction halting the ads. Another hearing is scheduled for November.

Sobey said the museum decided two weeks ago to run the tests.

Honeymoon comes between editions

MARSHALL, Texas (AP) — The reception was on the loading dock of the newspaper plant, and the honeymoon was between editions when two carriers of the Marshall News-Messenger decided it was time to tie the knot.

Thomas Scarborough, 27, and Cissy Gresham, 22, met at the News-Messenger when Tom offered to help with Cissy's route, a rambling delivery around the forested East Texas back country south of Caddo Lake.

When they decided to get married, the eve of National Newspaper Carrier Day seemed an appropriate date. They asked fellow carrier Israel Nickerson, a local preacher with a News-Messenger motor delivery route, to perform the ceremony at Potter Mill Farm.

"All our friends are carriers, so we thought this would be a good way to have a reception," said Cissy, as route carrier guests filed along a buffet line set on the edge of the loading dock.

Art fans snap up tickets to Vatican art exhibit

NEW YORK (AP) — Proving that rock fans aren't the only ones who can snap up thousands of show tickets in a single day, museum-goers bought more than 30,000 tickets Friday for an exhibit of Renaissance and baroque art that opens in February.

The Metropolitan Museum of Art expects "The Vatican Collections" to be its most popular since "The Treasures of Tutankhamen" in 1978-79. The museum began selling the $4 tickets Friday at Ticketron and Tele-tron outlets nationwide.

Whatever the cause, females way below males in math inclinations

Hearst Feature Service

LOS ANGELES — Linda Alviti, a National Merit scholar, is the only female in a group of 12 students enrolled in an advanced math class at Lincoln High School here. She is not unusual. That's the problem.

That the number of females in the United States receiving doctorates in mathematics has remained at 6 percent for more than half a century is only one indication of the problem, says a Northwestern University study.

The reasons that boys seem to do better in math than girls have sparked a controversy that has pitted those who believe the roots of the problem are biological against others who feel society is the culprit. What is less debatable are irrefutable statistics showing that girls continue to lag behind boys in both course enrollments and college test scores:

—The latest nationwide Scholastic Aptitude Test math scores show a 50-point gap between the average scores of male and female college-bound students. The average male score is 493; the average score for females is 443.

—Nationally, the average male SAT applicant had 3.72 years of secondary school math; females had 3.44 years.

—Although girls often outnumbered boys in advanced eighth-grade math, by the 12th grade twice as many boys as girls were enrolled in calculus, reported the Math-Science Desegregation project in Northern California.

The catch-up girls are faced with is crucial, educators say, because math is a cumulative skill. "Mathematical knowledge and understanding is built up, not merely acquired," the Northwestern University study says. "This means that those who do not have a firm grasp of early mathematical concepts will have an exceedingly difficult, if not impossible, task of catching up."

The study, done by Northwestern's Program on Women, vigorously refutes an earlier John Hopkins University study suggesting that male superiority in math skills was genetically based. The earlier study, which raised considerable controversy when it was released two years ago, followed an analysis of SAT scores of males and females.

Other articles published in the New England Journal of Medicine and Science News suggest that male sex hormones and even anatomical differences of the brain may be responsible for boys being better at math. But most experts acknowledge that, even with possible biologically based factors, differences in math skills are, at least in part, influenced by different socialization patterns in raising boys and girl.

Others feel much more strongly about society's influences.

The authors of a new book, "How to Encourage Girls in Math and Science," contend that biology "cannot explain why such a large majority of women steer away from math and science-related work" any more than "it determines why boys do not do housework or become secretaries and nurses."

Task force goal center standards

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Juvenile Probation Commission is forming a task force in October to review as yet unwritten standards for detention centers across the state and eligibility requirements for workers, executive director Bill Anderson says.

The probation commission, formed one year ago by the Legislature, is in the process of holding public hearings in Texas to receive preliminary guidelines for such standards, which Anderson says are required by law.

Since January, public hearings have been held in San Marcos, Brownsville, El Paso, Amarillo and Marshall, and further hearings are scheduled for Austin next month and Dallas and Houston next year.

The task force, to be composed of five members each from the Texas Juvenile Detention Association, the Texas Corrections Association, the Texas Probation Association and the Juvenile Judges Committee of the State Bar, will probably review the recommendations in January, says Judy Culpepper, administrative assistant at the commission.

"To standardize anything in Texas is phenomenal," she says, noting there are 30 detention centers in the state and 152 city and county jails certified to detain juveniles.

Standards set for the centers will include provisions regarding supervision, nutrition and medical care, sanitation and staff requirements, Culpepper says.

Eligibility requirements for workers will include certification procedures and whether there is a need for Department of Public Safety checks on probation officer applicants.

A code of ethics for probation officers will also be written for approval next year, she adds.

Since the commission is "very similar" to the Adult Probation Commission, Anderson said they might be able to adopt the other commission's code of ethics and strike out the word "adult" and add "juvenile." The commission will consider such a possibility, he says.

Gang violence hits cities hard

Hearst Feature Service

America's big cities, already laboring under generally decaying conditions, can add to their woes yet another problem: a resurgence of youth gang violence.

A new nationwide survey by a juvenile justice panel found the majority of urban areas are facing lethal problems as gangs of young toughs are committing more and more serious crimes.

The U.S. Justice Department-commissioned survey of 168 American cities with populations over 100,000 also found a high percentage of the nation's smaller cities are experiencing serious gang-related violence.

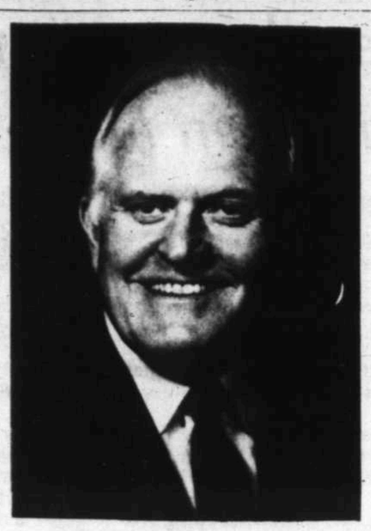
Vaughan Stapleton, director of the Center for the Assessment of the Juvenile Justice System in Sacramento, Calif., which conducted the survey, told a meeting of the National College of Juvenile Justice in Detroit that five of the six major urban areas in the nation studied are experiencing a resurgence of gang violence. Only Houston reported having the problem under control.

Stapleton said the problem appeared to be more serious in the West, especially California, though he noted the state was disproportionately represented in the study.

"Fourteen of the 16 western cities sampled acknowledged youth gang problems, and eight of them are in California," he said.

But the survey also came up with a surprising finding: About 45 percent of cities with populations of 100,000 to 250,000 reported problems with youth gang violence.

While the study did not rate the cities in order of the severity of their gang violence problems, Stapleton called Los Angeles the "archetypal bad example" of gang activity spilling over into the area of violent crime.



Dr.Bryce Jordan

UT official named PSU president

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Pennsylvania State University's new president says he will work to hold down tuition and seek more financial aid while pushing the institution's academic, research and athletic programs.

Dr. Bryce Jordan, executive vice president for academic affairs of the University of Texas system, was elected Penn State's 14th president Thursday.

Jordan, 58, of Austin, succeeds Dr. John W. Oswald, who has been Penn State's president since 1970. Oswald, 65, will retire June 30.

"We at Penn State must continue to let the people of Pennsylvania know that this is their major research and teaching university," Jordan said after the Board of Trustees unanimously elected him at a special 35-minute meeting.

One of three executives in charge of the Texas system of 14 institutions and 116,000 students, Jordan will take over control of the nation's 12th largest university system next summer.

Penn State has 57,294 students on 22 campuses throughout the state, including 33,756 at its State College campus.

Quentin E. Wood, chairman of the trustees' selection committee and president of Quaker State Oil Refining Corp., described Jordan as the "number-one preference...highly intelligent...very stable, mature and very energetic."

Jordan, a tall, white-haired Texan, refused to disclose his salary, citing Penn State "custom." He said his pay would be "in line" with other state university presidents.

He said he would seek more state aid and private financial support in the next few years as the number of college-aged students in the Northeast declines.

The state now provides $143 million of Penn State's $566 million budget.

Jordan said he also would seek to stabilize Penn State's increasing tuition, which now stands at $2,118 per year for undergraduates and $2,256 per year for graduate students at its State College campus.

"I think tuition has gone about as high as it can go," Jordan said.

Penn State, while proving its general importance to the state's prosperity, must "remain at the cutting edge of major scientific activities," he said.

He also stressed the importance of continuing Penn State's emphasis on athletics, especially in football.

"I think intercollegiate athletics, particularly winning in intercollegiate athletics, is a very strong part of what a state university does," Jordan said.

Jordan, born in Clovis, N.M., and raised in Abilene, Texas, received his doctorate degree in historical musicology and comparative literature at the University of North Carolina.

He served as president of the new University of Texas at Dallas from 1971 to 1981 when it grew from 40 students to more than 7,000 students.

He will continue in his Texas post until June 30.

The Budweiser Clydesdales get letters.

Just a few are poison pen letters.

Like the dispatch from the guy in Idaho Falls, Idaho, who claimed Big John had bit his hand.

Or the note from the family in Montana objecting to the way the horses were displayed to the public — rear ends facing out of their stables. "We couldn't pet their heads," they wrote.

But most complaints concern the partitions erected to keep the fawning public out of reach of the big bay horses.

"Most people believe that you haven't seen something until you've touched it," said Lloyd Ferguson, 27. "They relate to horses as house pets — petting them on their heads and putting fingers in their mouths. Horses don't like that sort of treatment. They get grouchy."

FERGUSON, MANAGER of a Budweiser Clydsedale team based near Hemet, Calif., has a lot of horse sense. Most of his adult life has been spent raising, training and showing horses. He was team manager for five years of the Carlsberg breweries' Belgian show horses in Canada.

Since 1979, he has worked for Anheuser-Busch Inc., brewers of Budweiser beer.

"The Busch family are horse lovers," explained Ferguson, a Canadian native who now lives with his wife and two sons near the ranch.

And brewery owner August Busch Jr. has a love for Clydesdales — so much so that his company spends $200,000 a year to maintain about 150 of the magnificent animals.

There is also some business acumen involved. As Will Rogers said — and August Busch is fond of saying — "Looking at the outside of a horse warms the inside of a man."

LOOKING AT CLYDESDALES apparently has a positive effect on the purchasing habits of beer drinkers.

The horses — for those who have been locked away in an empty room for the past several years — are used by the brewery for its three traveling eight-horse teams which do promotions in various towns, as well as for its television commercials. These ads most often depict a team of Clydesdales pulling a 3.5-ton, 1902-model beer wagon.

"Some companies use sex to sell their products. Anheuser-Busch uses horses," said a company spokeswoman.

The campaign has worked so well that, to many, the heavy, strong draft horses — known for the long snowy-white hair around their legs — are now known simply as "the Budweiser horses."

One traveling team is based in St. Louis (the corporation's headquarters and where the bulk of the horses are stabled); one in Merrimack, N.H., and the last in Riverside County, in California. Fanning out from their respective locations, the hitches each make about 300 appearances yearly, traveling a total of about 60,000 miles to parades, rodeos and state fairs.

(AN ADDITIONAL team is stationed at the Santa Anita race track, where it pulls out the starting gate before races.)

There are only so many days in a year, so "literally thousands" of other requests for appearances are turned down, according to company spokesmen.

The West Coast operation is based on a sprawling Riverside County ranch. There Ferguson, a six-man staff and 13 of the docile "gentle giants" retire for a few days every three or four months between tours.

When interviewed at the ranch on a recent humid weekday afternoon, Ferguson tried to explain the popularity of the Clydesdales while seated bareback atop Big John, who weighs 2,300 pounds and stands over 6 feet tall, from head to hoof.

A ruggedly handsome man with a calm, reticent demeanor much like the horses he tends, Ferguson said that "Clydesdales and horses in general draw a lot of interest and love from people. Especially from women, who seem to be more down-to-earth in their attraction to the animals. And using horses in advertising is smart — they elicit positive feelings in people."

THE CONTINGENT — horses included — was reeling from its latest tour, which had taken it to 24 cities in the West in less than three months, from Calgary, Canada, to Lakeside, Calif.

The act essentially consists of eight horses — two others are taken along as reserves — that prance along pulling the Budweiser beer wagon.

Although it sounds tame, the sight of these huge animals has a stunning effect on people. "Most people haven't seen a horse this size, except maybe on television," Ferguson said. "When we hit a town, people are just curious to come out and see them. When we unload them from the trailers for the first time, there is always the unanimous oohs and ahs."

There can be no horsing around among handlers while on the job, he stressed. The concentration and strain of guiding a team of Clydesdales through its paces is so demanding that drivers must alternate duties of driving and reinstraightening during long appearances or parades.

"Handling them is not nearly as easy as it looks," he said.

Midland High running back Ricky Madrid (25) is tripped up by a Broncho defender as he moves across the 10-yard line in Friday night's game against Odessa High. On the night, Madrid rushed for 119 yards to lead the Bulldog ground attack.

Dogs back in race with 10-0 win

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

ODESSA — Midland High's Ricky Madrid pounded out 119 yards on 21 carries Friday night to give the Bulldog's an offensive threat, but once again it was the defensive players that came up with the stellar performance as they held Odessa High scoreless for their second consecutive District 4-5A victory of the season, 10-0.

"They were tough yards too," said MHS head coach Pat Culpepper about Madrid's efforts. "They were a lot of very tough yards. Raymond Chambers (who claimed 188 yards last week against Abilene Cooper) was sick all week. He'd come to practice but he couldn't do much and Ricky is one of our great seniors who never gives up.

"Coaches (Bernie) Hagins and (Johnny) Williams said 'Go with Madrid' before the game but in the second half Raymond was feeling better so we decided to give him a shot."

On 10 carries, Chambers came up with 37 yards to help the Bulldogs gain 228 on the night.

THOUGH THE offense was able to move the ball, it was still plagued with turnovers with five in the game, four fumbles and one interception, and those gifts gave Odessa High good field position a good portion of the night. The Bronchos just couldn't go anywhere with it.

"It was a superb effort by our Junk Yard Dawgs," said Culpepper about his team's defense. "I don't know how they do it week after week after week. They're so small when I look at them and then look at the other team that I start saying the best Presbyterian prayers I can come up with."

Culpepper had a good reason to praise his defense. Odessa High managed only 85 yards rushing from 36 attempts and picked up 52 yards passing on four completions. But, the key statistic was first downs. While MHS was pounding out yardage for 12, the Bronchos only got five, and two of those didn't come until the final minute of play.

THE BULLDOGS started moving the ball early in the game. On their second possession, Madrid showed a break away threat as he picked up a quick 26 yards for a first down on Odessa High's 25-yard line. Quarterback Mark Page, who used the rollout effectively, picked up a second first down on an 11-yard carry to the 14 and with two consecutive five-yarders by Madrid Midland High was inside the five-yard line.

Odessa High was slapped with a penalty that moved the ball to the two and it looked like a sure touchdown until Madrid fumbled the ball and Odessa's Tim Smith recovered on the four.

But the defense was there and with the Bronchos' backs to the wall they dug in. Odessa gave up after two plays and got off a quick kick to the 44-yard line, excellent field position for the Bulldogs.

Getting the ball back in Odessa territory and with the help of three Madrid runs of five, 11 and two yards plus 10 more by Page (subtract a five-yard penalty) and Midland High was on the 21-yard line and, facing a fourth down, called for field goal kicker Chuck Dickenson. His 38-yarder was good for a 3-0 lead with 29 seconds left in the first quarter.

It was in the second quarter that the Midland High defense came up with one of several big plays as defensive end John Hibbitts snagged backup quarterback Boyd Cowan's errant throw and returned it 37 yards for a touchdown with 1:43 left in the half. That touchdown would prove to be the final score of the night, but it was enough to insure the victory, a first by any Odessa opponent in newly built Ratliff Stadium.

"You don't know what kind of thrill it is for our team to be the very first to beat an Odessa School in Ratliff Stadium," said Culpepper.

THAT VICTORY, combined with an Odessa Permian 27-0 victory over Midland Lee, a San Angelo 8-0 win over Abilene High and Abilene Cooper's 37-15 win over Big Spring, leaves the Bulldogs tied for the remaining 4-5A playoff berth. Permian, with a 4-0 record, is running away with the league but there is a five-way dog fight for second. MHS, Lee, San Angelo, Big Spring and Odessa High are all 2-2 in district play and that should mean a hectic scramble in the final three weeks of play.

Mojo mauls Rebels, 27-0

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

OK, now that Odessa Permian is out of the way, let the battle for second place begin.

That's about all you can say after Permian's Panthers literally demolished the Midland Lee Rebels, 27-0, Friday night at Memorial Stadium to take sole charge of the District 4-5A football race.

Permian is now 4-0 in the 4-5A race and only a wrecked mess of hopefuls are behind them at 2-2, including Lee, Midland High, San Angelo, Big Spring and Odessa High.

Thanks to the University Interscholastic League rule this year that the top two teams earn post season playoff rights, there is still a race, but Permian is out of it. Just go ahead and paint Mojo in as the district champions for the third year in a row and everyone else can start over from scratch in the battle for second.

Besides Permian doesn't belong in this league or any other on this planet. They were so dominant over the Rebels before a packed house of 12,500 fans that they looked like wind-up robots going through pre-programmed tapes. They were awesome and everything they did looked like it came right off the blackboard of Coach John Wilkins.

It was also the fourth game in a row that the Panthers have not allowed one single point to be scored against them. They have outscored the opposition by an overwhelming 125-0 margin in loop play.

And Permian put this haymaker on the Rebels without the services of starting fullback Britt Hager, and starting tailback Mike Troglin, who has a severe hip-pointer, played only on goal line situations.

Still, Permian is an ugly opponent with quarterback Brent Kelley, the cool general, leading the way. They also got 89 yards rushing from Richie Keller, who made his first start of the year.

You just knew Lee was in big trouble when Permian first touched the ball in the first quarter when they marched 59 yards in seven plays for a 7-0 lead without either Troglin or Hager in the lineup. The big play came from John Hamilton, who busted 46 yards to the Lee two to set up Keller's one-yard touchdown.

Lee was just simply never in the game, losing three fumbles, tossing two interceptions and playing patty cake with kickoffs and punts. The Permian defense mauled the once proud Lee offensive team, giving up only 97 yards rushing to Lee and another 66 passing, 50 of which came on a Paul Cox to Luther Johnson pass after Lee was already down 27-0.

In fact, it was fitting for the Rebels that they only got 50 yards out of the 68-yard pass play. Johnson actually got to the end zone, but Clarence Smith was called for clipping on Permian's Stacy Meador at the 18, and Lee never got it back into the end zone. That play, however, marked the first time all night that Lee had penetrated the Permian 50-yard line.

In the second quarter, Permian turned a fumble recovery by Johnny McCanlies into a 23-yard field goal by Bobby Knott, the same big-toed kicker who beat Lee last year in the final 13 seconds of play. Then Eddy Bizzell picked off a Cox aerial and Permian marched 35 yards for a 17-0 lead with only seven seconds left in the half. Lee's fortunes had been sealed. Kelley made the big play by hitting Kirk Strahan for the 14-yard TD. Strahan simply outran the coverage of Johnson, Greg Woodberry and David Hastings.

Permian didn't score again until the fourth quarter, but they got 10 points in the space of two minutes. Knott toed a 29-yard field goal after Permian marched from its own 48 to the Lee nine and the Rebels ran three plays before William Bruton blocked a Mike Mercurio punt at the 10 where Dion Delao picked it up and scored uncontested.

Lee was so inept on offense that Cox was the leading rusher with 27 yards on five carries. Smith, Lee's leading rusher this year, was held to a mere 15 yards on six carries. Lee used 11 backs in the game, trying to make something happen, but it never did.

Still, Lee seems to be in good shape to make a run at the remaining playoff berth with Big Spring, Abilene Cooper and Midland High left on the schedule. But this loss will hang in the memory for a long time. Permian has now won 19 of the 22 meetings between the two schools.

Midland Lee fullback Scott Ackroyd takes a shot in the head by an unidentified Odessa Permian defensive player at Memorial Stadium Friday night. It was that kind of night for Lee, who all but lost its chance at winning the district championship in a 27-0 loss to Permian. Lee, however, is still in the fight for second place with five other teams.

McGee's homers pace Redbirds

By JOHN NELSON

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Willie McGee tied a rookie record with two home runs and made relief ace Bruce Sutter's night a little easier with a leaping, ninth-inning catch as the St. Louis Cardinals defused the Milwaukee Brewers' bomb squad with a 6-2 victory Friday night and took a two-games-to-one lead in the 79th World Series.

McGee drove in four runs with his two homers and robbed Brewers slugger Gorman Thomas, whose 39 homers tied for the major-league lead, of yet another blast with a catch at the wall as Sutter struggled in relief of injured St. Louis starter Joaquin Andujar.

"I don't believe I'm here," said McGee, who began the season with the Louisville Redbirds in Class AAA ball. "But baseball is baseball and anything can happen."

SUTTER, the last of three St. Louis relievers, survived a two-run homer by Cecil Cooper in the eighth, then faced Thomas in the ninth with Ben Oglivie standing at first after an error by Cardinal first baseman Keith Hernandez.

Sutter pitched 2 2/3 innings for the second straight game but said the effect of those two long stints would not be known until Saturday.

"This is the World Series. You get a lead, and you can't hold back," Sutter said. "Milwaukee is a fine club; it can explode anytime."

Andujar took a two-hitter into the seventh inning and had retired the first batter when Ted Simmons drove a one-hopper toward the mound.

The ball struck Andujar about two inches below his right knee, and the St. Louis right-hander collapsed to the ground. He was carried by the field by his teammates.

Larry Tarnoff, vice president of public relations for Mt. Sinai Hospital, said X-rays and neurological tests on Andujar were negative. He said Andujar sustained a bone bruise below his right knee, but Cardinal team physician Dr. Stan London said, "The bottom line is, he can play if needed" again in the Series.

ST. LOUIS Manager Whitey Herzog was asked what would happen if Andujar were unable to make another World Series start on schedule, and he replied: "We just better hope for three or four days of rain."

Simmons said the pitch he hit was a sinker and "I knew it hit him hard."

McGee's three-run homer in the fifth inning ended a scoreless duel between Andujar and Milwaukee right-hander Pete Vuckovich.

Morris tackle saves Crane's 7-0 streak

CRANE—Quarterback Eugene Morris threw a 51-yard touchdown pass to Junior Sena, but it was his last ditch tackle, foiling a bid for two points, that gave Crane a 19-18 win over Coahoma in a District 6-3A football game here Friday night.
Coahoma had just driven 74 yards with the kickoff after a go-ahead score by Crane with 6:04 left in the game. Richard Seals rammed in from three yards out with 49 seconds to play and the Bulldogs sniffed victory in the air.
However, Morris made the tackle that broke up the quick-pitch sweep and gave Crane, winless last year, a 7-0 record for the season and a 2-0 league record. Coahoma, which came so close, is now 0-2.
It was Morris' TD pass less than four minutes into the game that gave Crane a 6-0 lead, but Coahoma scored on a 35-yard field goal by James Sanders with 2:33 left in the first period. Sanders hit again from 19 yards out with 9:15 left in the second quarter and Sena scored on a two-yard run with 2:35 left in the half to make it 12-6.
John Wilson erupted on a 73-yard run with 2:12 left before intermission to tie it and that's the way it remained until midway through the final period. Crane recovered a fumble at the Coahoma 25 and pushed in for the score with Gilbert Ramirez running in from the six and then Junior Bishop kicking what proved to be the deciding point with 6:04 left.
Crane will travel to Ozona for 6-3A action next week.

Mustangs shock No. 8 Sweetwater

By CHAD PUERLING

ANDREWS — The Andrews Mustangs celebrated homecoming with a stunning 24-14 upset victory over No. 8 ranked Sweetwater here Friday night in a key District 2-4A grid battle.

After falling behind 14-0 in the first quarter the Mustangs held Sweetwater scoreless the rest of the way and took advantage of four second half turnovers to hand Sweetwater its first loss of the year.

Andrews improved its record to 4-2, and 3-0 in district while Sweetwater fell to 5-1, and 2-1 in loop play.

Andrews began the second half by tieing the score at 14-14 before Sweetwater could run an offensive play.

The Mustangs took the opening kickoff and marched 71 yards in five plays for their first score.

The quick score was aided by a 17-yard pass interference call and a 50 yard pass completion from Bill Morrison to Ronnie Wallace.

Brent Petross capped the drive with a 8-yard run off left tackle.

On the ensuing kickoff the Mustangs stripped the ball from Donald Jones and recovered on Sweetwater's 23.

Five plays later Tudy Gonzales bulled in from two yards out to even the score.

In less than four minutes Andrews had taken apart a lead that looked as though it would hold up for the entire game.

But with the help of the four turnovers Andrews held the Sweetwater Wishbone attack to five yards rushing in the second half and scored 21 unanswered points to open the second half.

On their third possession of the third quarter the Mustangs again went to the air to break the deadlock.

Another pass interference penalty, this one for 20-yards, and a 43-yard aerial from Morrison to Floyd Cornejo highlighted a 57-yard scoring drive.

Petross again took the honors, this time on a four-yard run.

The Andrews defense, which allowed Richardson 103 yards passing on a 5 of 7 performance in the first half, held the junior quarterback to two completions in eight attempts for 47 yards in the second half.

Sweetwater also benefitted fron turnovers as they opened the scoring following a Mustang fumble.

Sweetwater recovered the errant ball on Andrews 33-yard line and wasted no time in scoring as they went over the top on a Scott Richardson to Donald Jones pass.

Richardson scored on Sweetwaters' next possession as he capped a 57-yard scoring drive on a 6-yard keeper.

Andrews closed out the socring in the four stanza on a 22-yard field goal by Brad Boynton.

Hobbs rallies to top Roswell

HOBBS (AP) — Halfback Jamie King ran for two touchdowns, including the game winner with just over two minutes left, to lift No. 3 ranked Hobbs to a 14-10 District 4AAAA victory over No. 1 ranked and previously unbeaten Roswell Friday night.

Roswell, which had its five-game winning streak snapped by the powerful Eagles, shocked the partisan Hobbs fans as Eddie Glenny took the opening kickoff and returned it 97 yards for a touchdown. The touchdown was the first scored on Hobbs this season by a New Mexico team.

But Hobbs came right back on its next possession and tied it at 7-7 as King broke loose for a 50-yard scoring run midway through the quarter.

The game then became a defensive battle until the fourth quarter, when Tooter Lara gave Roswell a 10-7 lead with a 20-yard field goal with 6:44 left in the game.

Portales loses

CLOVIS (AP) — Fred Baston ran for two touchdowns as Class AAAA powerhouse Clovis tuned up for its district schedule with a 35-7 win over Class AAA rival Portales Friday night.

Baston scored on runs of 2 and 27 yards and Dramin Buntun caught a 43-yard scoring pass from Brian Ainsworth as the Wildcats upped their recocrd to 5-1. Clovis is ranked No. 4 in AAAA.

Portales, which went into the game ranked No. 2 in AAA, dropped to 4-3. The Rams' only touchdown was scored by Carey Walsh on a 1-yard plunge in the fourth quarter.

District 4-5A produces five-way tie for second

While Odessa Permian was all but putting the lid on its third straight District 4-5A football championship Friday night, an interesting battle was developing for the second place playoff berth.

With the 27-0 loss to Permian, Midland Lee moves to 2-2 in district play as did Midland High and Odessa High in the Bulldogs' 10-0 win over the Bronchos.

But San Angelo and Big Spring both moved to 2-2 marks to make a five-way logjam for second place. San Angelo eked out an 8-0 win over Abilene High when Greg Thomas scored on a 27-yard run in the fourth quarter.

And Big Spring also moved to 2-2 in a heavy 37-15 loss to Abilene Cooper. Fullback Allen Gunter destroyed the Steers, scoring three touchdowns and running for two two-point conversions for 22 points on the night.

Barnes sparks Buffs to easy win over Miles

MILES—With fullback Rocky Barnes scoring two touchdowns, one on a 65-yard run, Stanton rumbled to a 43-0 District 8-2A victory over Miles here Friday night. The win makes the Buffs 2-0 in district and 4-3 for the season while Miles is 0-2 and 3-4.

The final score doesn't indicate the one-sidedness of the game. Stanton had touchdowns runs of 53, 46 and four yards wiped out by penalties.

Tailback Bobby Barnhill scored with 7:57 left in the first period on a one-yard run and then Barnes scorched Miles with his 65-yard for a 14-0 lead going into the second period.

Quarterback Darren Sorley scored on a one-yard run in the second quarter and Barnes, on an eight-yard run, and wingback Mark Helms, on a 25-yard run, made it 36-0 after three periods before Robby Barnes punched over from the four with 6:59 left in the game for the final TD.

Barnes had 108 yards in six first half carries while Barn had 90 on 17 carries and Robby Barnes, playing only the second half, gaines 46 in 10 attempts. Bobby Alamger, Tommy Esparza and Tony Ramos all recovered fumbles for Stanton.

Rankin bows to Iraan

RANKIN — For the second week in a row, the Rankin Red Devils won the statistics battle only to come away with another loss in District 6-A play. This time it was the Iraan Braves who turned the trick on the Red Devils, 10-0.

Rankin's Dennis Black, the leading rusher in West Texas, gained 203 yards on 43 carries to run his season total to 1,220 yards, but even that was not enough to insure victory for Rankin, who falls to 3-3 on the year and 1-2 in loop play.

Iraan's Jess Banner, the third leading rusher in West Texas, was held to a mere 57 yards rushing by Rankin, but the Braves won it with three seconds left in the game when Brian Vey toed a 25-yard field goal.

Rankin took a 7-0 lead with 10:33 left in the game when Black scored on a three-yard run, but Iraan roared back when Troy White hit Dewayne White with a 12-yard TD pass to tie the game at 7-7. Iraan then got the ball back and won the game with Vey's field goal.

Rankin had 17 first downs, compared to Iraan's 10 and the Red Devils also outrushed the Braves by a 240-81 margin. None of it, however, turned out to be enough.

ROSWELL (AP) — Wide receiver Sam Roberson caught three touchdown passes and quarterback Jimmy Townley threw for a school record 273 yards Friday night as power-ladened Carlsbad ran over Goddard 41-0 in a District 4AAAA prep football game.

Roberson caught scoring bombs of 63, 48 and 35 yards from Townley as Carlsbad scored virtually at will against the winless Rockets.

Longest win streak

SMU risks it against Houston in Astrodome

By Associated Press

Fifth-ranked Southern Methodist puts the NCAA Division One's longest victory streak on the line Saturday night against the dangerous Houston Cougars who would rather play the Mustangs on the road than in the Astrodome.

The unbeaten Mustangs, who have won nine games in a row, were an 8-point favorite in this vital Southwest Conference game although the series history between the two teams suggests there is no place like the road.

The teams have met seven times and six times the home team was the loser.

SMU HAS never beaten Houston at home.

The Mustangs have beaten Texas Christian and Baylor by three points each while Houston has tied Baylor and downed the Texas Aggies.

SMU is tied with Arkansas atop the SWC standings. Both own 2-0 records. In other SWC games, Texas A&M, still looking for its first conference victory under Jackie Sherrill, was a 2-point favorite over Baylor at Kyle Field; Texas Tech was a 6-point pick over Rice in Houston; and Mississippi was an 8-point choice to defeat Texas Christian on homecoming in an intersectional game at Biloxi, Miss. The Horned Frogs hope to improve the SWC's 14-10 mark against outside competition.

Both Arkansas and Texas are idle because their originally scheduled game has been moved back to Dec. 4 for national television.

HOUSTON LEADS the SWC in offense behind quarterback Lionel Wilson and running back Dallas Wiggins.

Houston Coach Bill Yeoman admires McIlhenny, saying, "The little kid is a great operator...that little squirt at the throttle is hard to deal with...he is a player. Believe me, I wish he wasn't."

The Mustangs dropped back on the offensive charts last week as Baylor stopped the Mustang running game cold and forced SMU to throw.

Quarterback Lance McIlhenny did just that, completing three touchdown passes and a two-point conversion pass in SMU's come-from-behind victory.

Houston Coach Bill Yeoman admires McIlhenny, saying, "The little kid is a great operator...that little squirt at the throttle is hard to deal with...he is a player. Believe me, I wish he wasn't."

SMU running backs Craig James and Eric Dickerson have never had great days against the Cougar defense.

The most yards James ever gained was 38 and for Dickerson it was 109. James has never scored against Houston although Dickerson did so twice in a 38-22 victory over the Cougars last year.

HOUSTON sophomore defensive end James Holmes said, "The SMU game will make us or break us in the conference race. Dickerson will be our biggest challenge of the year."

Free safety Calvin Eason added, "They've got great runners...if we can stop them from making the big play then things will be OK."

Houston admits its game plan is to force McIlhenny to prove he can throw the ball.

Jim Miller, a management spokesman, relays information to reporters during NFL Strike Talks, as they again bogged down Friday.

Haggling delays NFL talks eight hours

COCKEYSVILLE, Md. (AP) — Talks aimed at ending the 25-day-old National Football League players strike resumed Friday night after being delayed nearly eight hours by haggling over a legal action taken by the union in July.

Sam Kagel, the mediator who kept the two sides together for 21 straight hours Thursday and early Friday morning, announced shortly after 6 p.m. that negotiations had resumed and "will probably go most of the night."

They had actually been scheduled to resume at 11 a.m., but broke off five minutes later in squabbling over whether the union should withdraw a complaint before the National Labor Relations Board. The two sides spent the next eight hours caucusing and, despite a news blackout imposed by Kagel, issuing statements and counter-statements on what was said to have happened.

THE NET effect was to lessen the anticipation that a settlement was near. There had been hopes that both sides could reach agreement this weekend and avoid the cancellation of a fifth weekend of NFL football.

Since Kagel, 73, a San Francisco-based private mediator, entered the talks on Wednesday, they have concentrated on the so-called peripheral issues and appeared to be making considerable progress.

But even before Friday's haggling, sources indicated that some of the details on the secondary issues were getting bogged down on details, delaying Kagel's timetable for getting to the crucial economic ones — specifically the union proposal to pay players on a league-wide wage scale. One source close to the negotiations said he believed the talks, now in their fourth day, could stretch into next week.

On Friday, the two sides were back together after breaking off at 6 a.m. This time, however, they began squabbling immediately.

According to union spokesman Al Zack, management asked as "a precondition" to further negotiations, that the union drop "with prejudice" a petition it filed in July before the National Labov Relations Board charging management with failing to bargain on wages. "With prejudice" means the petition could not be reinstated.

But according to a statement distributed by Jim Miller, spokesman for the Management Council, there were no preconditions put on the union's dropping the NLRB's action. He said the union wanted to add iss es to its list of things to be bargained, including the ri ht to institute new litigation after an agreement was reached.

MILLER SAID management then left the room to await an answer. For the rest of the afternoon, they remained in separate rooms while Kagel shuttled back and forth.

STRIKE UPDATE

First word of the breakup came from Zack, who said:

"They are asking us to waive our legal rights as a union and we wouldn't be much of a union if we did that. We're being asked to waive our right to bargain on wages. We are being asked to give them a carte blanche to absolutely stonewall and not bargain any more."

Zack also said that they had been near the point of settling all peripheral issues and going into the economic ones. Asked if the union considered the new demand to be "a curve ball" in the negotiations, he said, "No, it's a spitter — because a spitter is an illegal pitch."

Three hours later came Miller's version, describing the talks as "not shattered, but bruised." Of the bargaining on the peripheral, non-economic issues, he said: "We have a long way to go to settle them."

Then it was the players association's turn. After Miller's statement, they retorted:

"The Management Council statement issued this afternoon is nonsense. We will have no further comment on it." The players statement added that it considered Kagel's news blackout still in effect. But the brief statement was not submitted to Kagel for clearance.

Kagel's original timetable had called for the negotiators to move onto the major economic issues in Friday's predawn hours. With negotiators contesting every detail of the proposed collective bargaining agreement, Kagel was forced to delay the discussion of money matters, the crux of the owner-player dispute.

Negotiations on those issues will center on four union demands: creation of a wage scale; a central salary fund; performance bonuses; and a percentage of the league's current and future television revenues.

THE PLAYERS originally sought 55 percent of each team's gross revenues. On Sept. 17, four days before the strike began, the union modified its proposal to 50 percent of the TV money.

The owners, however, have held fast to their objection to giving the union a fixed percentage of any revenues, which they perceive as an attempt by the union to "control the game."

New Mexico Junior College closed out the fall portion of the Western Junior College Athletic Conference tournament schedule with a five-stroke victory over second place Odessa College Friday at Midland Country Club.

Swedish golfer Peter Johansson helped pace NMJC to its winning score of 303 with a round of 74 while three other teammates posted sub 80 scores. Randy Harris contributed a 75 followed by Mike Scanlon with 79 and Ricky Avina, also of Sweden, at 78.

OC's Ray Sanchez tied Johansson for the tournament's medalist honor with a 74 but lost the trophy on the first hole of sudden death play. Johansson parred the par-four hole to win the title.

Like NMJC, Odessa College also had four golfers under 80 with Gilbert Morcho at 77, David Montelego at 78 and Greg Garrison with a 79. David Bond would have made it five golfers under 80 for the Wranglers with a 77 but he was disqualified after play because of a five he recorded on a hole that he played in six.

Coming in fourth was Midland College with a 319 for the day. The Chaparrals had trouble on the first nine holes of play with no one from the six-man team breaking 40. On the back nine, however, Emil Hale and Jeff Cranford settled down to shoot 77 and 79 respectively to pace MC.

"The front nine killed us," said MC coach Delnor Poss. "Nobody broke 40. Emil Hale ended up shooting 77 for a real good game.

"This is a real difficult course to play," continued Poss. "I told the team if we shot around 310 we'd have a shot at winning."

After glancing at the scoreboard to see NMJC's 303 Poss added, "That is an exceptional score. New Mexico Junior College has a veteran team with four sophomore players. Peter Johansson was one of the better players in the conference last year. So was Ricky Avina."

Of the six teams competing, Midland College fielded the youngest squad with six freshmen. South Plains and Western Texas each had four sophomores and Odessa College had three.

The WJCAC works its conference schedule on a rotating course basis. Each of the six teams will host a tournament and points are awarded on a 6-5-4-3-2-1 basis with six for the first place team. The first half of the schedule consists of three tournaments in the fall with the final three being played in the spring.

"We're not in bad shape in the team standings," said Poss, who then did some mathematical calculations and came up with the points for each team.

Going into the winter break, NMJC has the lead with 14 points followed by Odessa College and Western Texas tied for second at 13. South Plains is in fourth place with 11 points and Midland College in fifth at 10. With three straight last place finishes, NMMI brings up the rear with three points.

Next week, Midland College will be competing in the New Mexico State University Invitational with play starting on Thursday and running through Saturday.

Here are the individual and team results (best four scores per team) of the Western Junior College Athletic Conference golf tournament held at Midland Country Club Friday:

Rhubarb precedes game

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A metal plate three feet wide and two feet high caused a ten-minute discussion before Friday night's third game of the World Series as umpires and the rival managers debated what the ruling would be if the plate was hit by a ball during the game.

The plate, which is attached to the foul pole and is completely in fair territory, covers a gap between a railing in the stands and the top of the right field wall 315 feet from home plate. The top half of the plate is painted yellow and the bottom half green. The spot was the last stop on a tour of Milwaukee County Stadium during which the umpires explained the ground rules to the managers.

"I've never even seen that here all season," said Kueen. "No ball ever hit it."

Tennessee was never easy for Tide

Bear remembers the Vols of Neyland's day

By Associated Press

Not many folks have ever held the upper hand on Bear Bryant, but Tennessee is one of and the Vols under Gen. R.R. Neyland were one of the nation's premier college football powers (an NCAA study in 1974 showed Tennessee with the best record over the previous half-century).

"Tennessee week has always been, and I reckon always will be, something special for Alabama," the Bear said this week as he readied his troops for Saturday's visit to Knoxville. "It was when I was playing, and it is now while I'm coaching. There's a lot going on in Knoxville, with the World's Fair and all, and we're looking forward to going up there."

When Alabama began its hot streak, the series was deadlocked 23-23-7. It now stands 34-23-7 and the second-ranked Crimson Tide is favored by a couple of touchdowns to make it 12 in a row.

Most of the other Top Ten teams in The Associated Press poll are heavy favorites Saturday — No. 1 Washington at Oregon State, No. 3 Pitt vs. Temple, No. 4 Georgia vs. Vanderbilt, No. 5 Southern Methodist vs. Houston in a night game, No. 6 Nebraska vs. Kansas State, No. 8 Penn State vs. Syracuse, No. 9 Notre Dame vs. Arizona and No. 10 Arizona State vs. Texas-El Paso under the lights. Third-ranked Pitt and No. 7 Arkansas are idle.

IN THE Second Ten, No. 11 North Carolina entertains North Carolina State, No. 12 UCLA hosts Washington State, No. 13 West Virginia visits Virginia Tech, No. 14 Southern California is at Stanford, Ohio State at No. 15 Illinois, No. 16 LSU at Kentucky for a night game, Mississippi State at No. 17 Miami, East Carolina at No. 19 Florida State under the lights and Duke at No. 20 Clemson. Texas, the No. 18 team, has an open date.

Bryant finally beat Tennessee 9-7 his last year at Kentucky (1953), but Harvey Robinson had replaced Neyland as coach of the Vols. The Bear's 1957 Texas A&M club lost to Tennessee 3-0 in the Gator Bowl and his first two Alabama squads were 0-2-1 against the Vols.

It wasn't until 1961 that he began beating Tennessee consistently, and his only pitfalls since were a tie in 1965 and a four-year losing streak from 1967-70. Starting in 1971, Alabama has had things its own way, winning the last 11 games by a combined score of 315-135, which may be one reason Bryant terms this annual skirmish "the premier game of the South," which, of course, it has been for Alabama.

Or why Tennessee's Johnny Majors, 0-5 against the Bear, calls it "without a doubt our biggest challenge. Their football talent is, man-to-man, perhaps the best in the country."

ALABAMA AND Georgia are the cream of the Southeastern Conferencee, but they don't meet until 1984. Georgia may have its hands full Saturday with improved Vanderbilt, which shocked Florida last week for its first SEC home victory since 1975.

The Commodores have dropped their last eight meetings with Georgia, but Coach Vince Dooley warns that Vandy, led by Whit Taylor's pinpoint passing, has "the most sophisticated offense we'll see — and that's in a day of offensive sophistication. Their capabilities are a matter of record. They played Alabama down to the wire and had a chance to win the game. They can move the football and they can score points, as we saw very well in our game last year in Nashville (53-21)."

For his part, Vandy's George MacIntyre calls Georgia "a great, undefeated, nationally ranked football team. In Herschel Walker, the Bulldogs have the single best running back in the country, if not in the history of college football. Kevin Butler is the best place-kicker I've ever seen."

OREGON STATE snapped a 14-game losing streak by tying Washington State 14-14 last week — Memphis State's 15-game skein is now the longest string of futility among Division I-A teams — but the Beavers don't figure to be in Washington's class.

Temple also expects a long afternoon against Pitt. Coach Wayne Hardin says that "with the Pittsburgh Steelers on strike, you could put Pitt out there in their place and the fans would notice no difference. They've played four teams in the Top Twenty, and all of them have lost only to Pitt. Pitt's defense is just devastating, the best I've ever seen in college football."

Arizona got Notre Dame's attention last week by tying UCLA 24-24. "I suppose people may have tended to overlook Arizona a little bit with UCLA, Arizona State and Washington all unbeaten in their own league, but I'm sure their performance at UCLA will make some folks wake up and take notice," says ND Coach Gerry Faust.

"You look at their season and Arizona is not far from being 4-0 at this point. Iowa had to drive 80 yards to kick a field goal with less than three minutes in the game to beat them, and they played a great second half against Washington despite 156 yards in penalties."

Strike helps Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — Five injured Dallas Cowboys have profited physically from the nearly month-long National Football League strike.

Center Robert Shaw, guard Herb Scott and quarterback Glen Carano have made progress with knee injuries while defensive tackle John Dutton's sprained foot has healed. Tight end Jay Saldi is recovering from ligament damage in a knee.

Shaw couldn't have played this weekend, for an example, but Dutton, Scott, Carano, and Saldi could have come close.

So far no takers

Al Worthington's Series ring for sale

LYNCHBURG, Va. (AP) — Al Worthington, baseball coach at Liberty Baptist College, has a World Series ring for sale — for the right price — but says that so far he's had no takers.

People started calling Worthington when they read an ad in the classified section of Tuesday's New York Times that listed a Lynchburg address and said: "Famous former New York Giant selling 1954 World Series ring. Size 12. $10,000."

This being World Series week, the ad conjured up images of a washed-up, down-and-out ballplayer, a fallen American hero reduced to selling his treasured memento in order to survive.

But Worthington, who lives in a comfortable Campbell County subdivision, is anything but down-and-out. And he couldn't understand what all the fuss was about.

"I've sold five houses," he said, "and nobody ever called me about that."

BUT A World Series ring is different. The rings are presented by team owners to the winning (and often, the losing) clubs in baseball's annual fall classic.

Worthington has two of them.

He was a rookie with the Giants when they swept four straight Series games from the Cleveland Indians in 1954, and a veteran reliever for the Minnesota Twins when they lost to the Los Angeles Dodgers 11 years later.

"I didn't play at all in '54," said Worthington, an Alabama native whose nasty slider kept him in the big leagues for 12 seasons.

"That's one reason the ring doesn't mean all that much to me. The only ring I've ever had on my finger is my wedding band."

Worthington took his 1965 memento and had it made into a diamond ring for his wife. And he thought the '54 ring was lost until it turned up in a drawer last year.

"Why not sell it?" he said. "I'd rather have a pool than a ring any day. Last year, I sold one of my old uniforms for $500. My wife had been after me to get rid of it."

PAT NUTTYCOMB, who bought Worthington's Giants' jacket, said the World Series ring was "sort of like an elaborate graduation ring."

He said its intrinsic value was about $1,000. The going price for a World Series ring depends on the stature of the player who owns it, Nuttycomb added.

The 1954 Giants' team was managed by Leo Durocher and featured Willie Mays, Bobby Thomson, Monte Irvin and Dusty Rhodes.

"I still keep up with a couple of those guys," Worthington said. "(Outfielder) Don Mueller, for one. And I've seen (shortstop) Daryl Spencer a few times since. He lives in Wichita (Kan.) now."

Ashby Milstead, a local collector of baseball memorabilia, says it's unusual to find a World Series ring on the open market.

"I don't know if Al can get that price for it or not," he said. "I'm just not sure what the going rate is. But it is a rare item."

St. Louis Cardinals so boring they must eat quiche

The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Has anyone besides me noticed how boring the St. Louis Cardinals are? They don't win, they just kind of swarm. You should spray 'em, not play 'em.

They weren't recruited, they were cloned. Anyone who can tell the difference between Lonnie Smith and David Green and any other two outfielders gets a free photo of Stan Musial. And Tommy Herr and Ken Oberkfell are the same guy, aren't they? Okay, what's the difference, then?

Willie McGee is the one who looks like his name would be Willie McGee. Or Mickey Rivers. George Hendrick is the eyesore in the outfield who won't pull up his pants and let's them hang around his ankles which makes him look like an industrial leaguer in a hand-me-down uniform who plays for the company team on weekends and runs a lathe the rest of the week.

This isn't a team, it's a Xerox, players as alike as the leaders any week on the PGA tour. The team is about as exciting as Saturday night in Peoria, or homemade fudge.

THEY GET 13 hits and four runs a game and, laid end-to-end, all their hits wouldn't make one good home run for Babe Ruth, or Gorman Thomas.

It looks like the same guy coming out of the dugout over-and-over, getting his hit, stealing second, or going on a hit-and-run, and scoring on a ground ball that dies in the outfield grass. If you like the track meets, the Cardinals are your meat. You don't need a scorecard, just a stop watch.

They've turned the clock back to the days when the ball was a beanbag, and a guy got nicknamed "Home Run" Baker for the astounding achievement of hitting 12 of them in a single season. Frank Baker would bat cleanup for the 1982 Cardinals.

When Whitey Herzog was trading for the team, a wag commented, "Whitey is trading for the 1906 White Sox." The ballpark is so big, you half-expect to kids in the outfield begging for food from motorists. You expect to see trees in the outfield. Or cows. Roger Maris, who hit 61 home runs in a single season, came to the Cards and hit nine and five in successive seasons, to give you an idea. They ruined a good airport by putting seats in Busch Stadium.

SO, IF you like to see a lot of faceless gnomes hunt and peck their way to victory with a whole bunch of singles or "home runs" that never leave the ground; if you like sterile, antiseptic games, St. Louis is your outfit.

If you like called-shot home runs, balls disappearing in the gloaming and ninth innings with the winning run on, and the drama that comes with a home-run hitter at bat with the bases loaded and his team three runs behind, the Cardinals are not in that century yet.

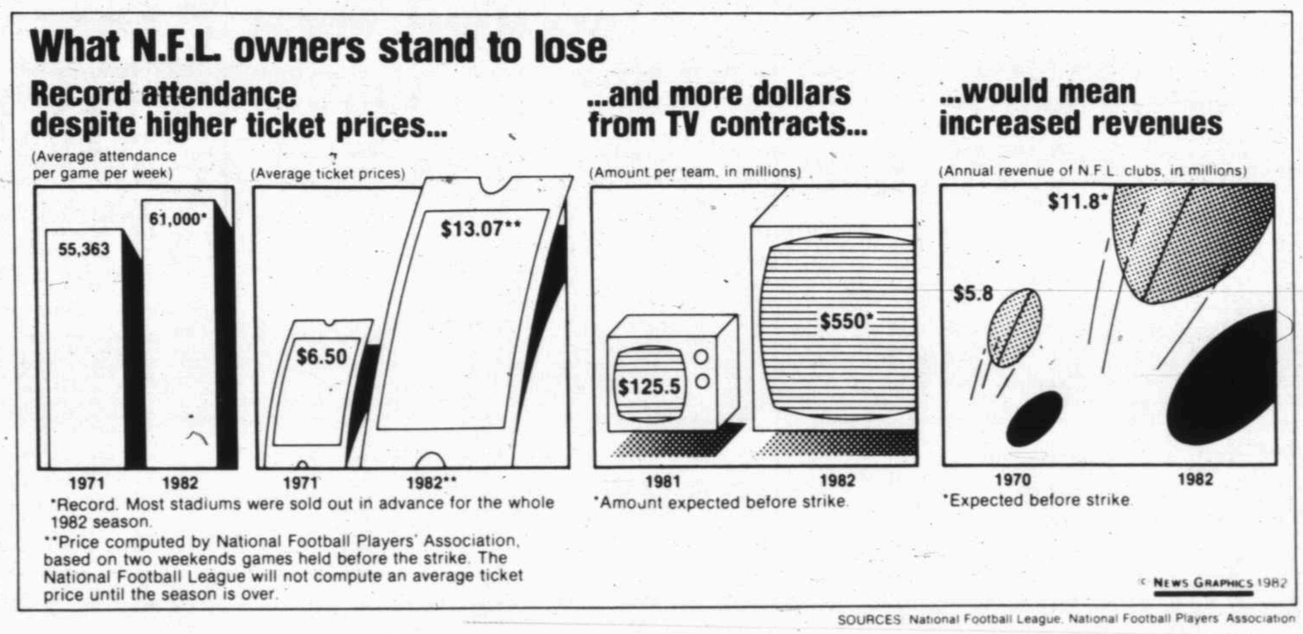
Which hurts. Because, this was the franchise of the storied "Gas House Gang." This is where Frankie Frisch and Dizzy Dean and Leo the Lip Durocher and Ducky Medwick played. This is the team Grover Cleveland Alexander staggered out of the bullpen in the late innings and struck out Tony Lazzeri with the bases loaded for. This is the team Rogers Hornsby hit .400 for. This is the team Pepper Martin ran wild for in the '31 World Series, single-handedly ruining one of the great franchises in baseball history, the last championship Philadelphia A's.

THIS IS the team Stan the Man Musial used to bust home runs and triples and doubles and 5-for-5 for. This was the team that upset the lordly '42 Yankees by out-slugging them, out-pitching them, and out-hustling them. This is the team that Country Slaughter battled for and Harry the Cat Brecheen and Red Schoendienst played for.

This is the team for which Bob Gibson and Curt Flood and Lou Brock and Ken Boyer took on the Yankees when they were the Yankees in 1964 with Mantle and Maris and Howard and Richardson and the teams got 121 hits, and 15 home runs, 19 doubles, and scored 65 runs, and the Cardinals won.

THIS IS a team full of Smiths and guys who, if they put on the wrong uniforms, nobody would know the difference. They hit 67 home runs this year, some of them in the air, almost as many as Milwaukee's Robin Yount and Gorman Thomas had between them.

They'll probably win the World Series. But this isn't the "Gas House Gang." This is the "White Collar Gang," the "Public Library Bunch." The St. Louis Ribbon Clerks. They'll probably put you to sleep with their soporific brand of one-base-hit-at-a-time baseball. They probably eat quiche.



Attorneys invited to examine Munson death file

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Summit County Coroner A.H. Kyriakides has invited attorneys in a $42 million lawsuit to come to his office "with or without a subpoena" to look at his file on the death of Thurman Munson, an All-Star catcher for the New York Yankees in the 1970s.

In the lawsuit, Munson's widow, Diana, alleges that Cessna Aircraft Corp. used high-pressure tactics to sell Munson the plane and that Flight Safety International Co. failed to provide adequate flying instructions.

According to a newspaper report, Summit County sheriff's detectives found a secret file on the Munson death while searching the coroner's office Sept. 17.

The Akron Beacon Journal reported this week that detectives found the Munson file separate from the coroner's other case files.

The detectives searched the coroner's office for a file in a case not associated with Munson's death. Detectives did not take the Munson file, the newspaper said.

Attorney Eugene Okey, who represents Mrs. Munson, said Kyriakides made the invitation to support his denial that he has a secret file on Munson's death.

Okey said Kyriakides told him the file contains documents which lawyers in the case have already seen.

Kyriakides investigated Munson's death after Munson died Aug. 2, 1979, when his newly purchased jet crashed short of a runway at Akron-Canton Airport.

'Adult' video games 'tasteless, derogatory,' say Indian groups

The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

The manufacturer of three new adult home video games came under fire earlier this week from the industry's dominant company and several special-interest groups on grounds that the sex-related cartridges are tasteless and derogatory to Indians and women.

"It's absolutely disgusting," Lois Red Elk of the American Indian Movement said of the games, being marketed under the brand name Mystique by American Multiple Industries, a home entertainment company based in Northridge, Calif.

She and John Howell of Indians United, basing their views on news accounts of the games, asserted that all three are disparaging to women and expressed particular disdain for one in which the player moves a naked cavalry officer across the screen to have sex with an Indian woman in what is billed as "Custer's Revenge."

The three games also were criticized by Sunnyvale, Calif.-based Atari Inc., which manufactures the home video game system on which the Mystique cartridges are designed to be played. In a statement issued from its headquarters, Atari, the largest company in the home video game field, called the cartridges "offensive."

"Atari takes a very dim view of this use of our product," said Michael Moone, president of Atari's consumer electronics division. "Unfortunately, some individuals take refuge behind certain legal precepts to the dismay of the majority of the people."

Stuart Kesten, president of American Multiple Industries, said he found Atari's statement "amazing, since they have not seen the games." The Mystique line — "Custer's Revenge," "Bachelor Party" and "Beat 'Em and Eat 'Em" — is only now being shipped to distributors, he said.

Kesten, contacted in New York City, where he was exhibiting the three cartridges at a video convention, said his company was being picketed there by Indian and women's organizations but added that he does not intend to withdraw the games or change his marketing plans.

"The purpose of the games was not and is not and will never be to offend anybody," he said, reiterating earlier statements that the games are designed to provide adult entertainment. He acknowledged that some people have been offended nevertheless, but said, "I think they are making more out of it than it deserves."

Rock 'n' roll piano player Joel not freak

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

"You find me a rock 'n' roll piano player who uses all his fingers and I'll show you a freak," says Billy Joel. "On my left hand, I only use two fingers.

"It drove my piano teachers crazy. They said I had to develop my left hand. I said, 'No, it's supposed to be a bass guitar.'"

Billy Joel's new Columbia album, "The Nylon Curtain," had one number yet to record plus one number to be written and recorded when he had his hand-injuring accident last April. He recorded "Where's the Orchestra?" playing piano with his right wrist in a cast and he wrote "Surprises" and recorded it, playing synthesizer and organ overdubs after the cast came off.

"For the last song, I knew I wanted to write something to do with unconscious and subconscious thoughts," he says. The idea of writing a song about not being totally master of your fate came after the wreck.

On April 15, Joel says, a woman ran a red light and he, on his motorcycle, heading through the intersection with a green light, ran into the side of her car. He says, "My right wrist was totally broken and dislocated. My left thumb was crushed.

When he realized a crash couldn't be averted, Joel says, "I thought, 'No, wait. I'm not ready yet.'

"WHILE FLYING THROUGH the air, I remember thinking, 'I'm flying through the air.' It was like I was giving myself a little narrative to make sure I was okay.

"Underneath, I was screaming crazy thoughts that came out when I was writing 'Surprises.'"

Joel can't flap his hands up and down at the wrists as far as he could before. But, he says, most piano-playing wrist motion is side to side. A piece of bone was taken from his left thumb.

"I used to break piano strings with that thumb. I can't hit as hard with it now but I'm sure going to try." He and six musicians will go on the road for two months at the end of October, doing one-nighters in big auditoriums.

Joel drifts into a fantasy of the future in which he's asleep on a couch and his grandchildren say, "Let's look at Grandpa's thumb" and "Grandpa was a wild guy when he was young. He rode bikes and everything." Then they get out an old issue of Variety with the headline "Billy Joel Sells Out Madison Square Garden." Lately, Joel has said he'd like to have children.

He and Elizabeth, his wife of nine years, have separated. He says, "We have maintained separate residences since the accident. I haven't figured out yet if there's a cause-and-effect. It's not all of a sudden like that.

"WITH THE WRECK, you have to re-evaluate everything. You come close to dying; you take a whole other look at life. I could have lost it."

Obviously eager to move to a lighter subject, Joel says, "I part my hair different. I decided — as long as I changed my fingers...actually it was the idea of the girl barber."

He wrote three songs for "The Nylon Curtain" which he didn't use. "That's rare for me," he says. "I can't stand to do more work than I'm supposed to do.

"The record started pointing itself in a certain direction. It would only accept certain subjects. The overall topic is an American dilemma, specifically of people born after World War II, post-warriors I call them. I don't give any solutions. Hopefully, the record speaks as someone in that age group, if only just to tie us all together as people, as an entity."

"Allentown" tells about unemployed steelworkers.

"The lyric is sort of dismal," Joel says, "but the music says 'We're not moving out or giving up.' For me it is hopeful. It says, 'We're going to try.'"

Walt Disney Productions moves 'Disney Channel'

The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post
News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Walt Disney Productions, intent on regaining control of a pay television service it once shared with Westinghouse Electric Corp., announced earlier this week that it is moving the headquarters of "The Disney Channel" from New York to its nearby Burbank studio.

In the process, Disney loses Alan Wagner, a CBS programming veteran hired last year to serve as The Disney Channel's president and chief executive.

The service is still slated to begin April 11, 1983, Disney President Ron Miller said, but Wagner is unwilling to move to Southern California to continue heading the operation. In a telephone interview, Miller said negotiations are under way to retain Wagner's services as a consultant.

Disney's announcement came a month after its 50-50 partnership with Westinghouse in the pay-TV service collapsed, amid some disagreement on the channel's format, now billed as family-oriented entertainment.

About 20 jobs will be lost in the closing of the New York office, Miller said, but Disney hopes to retain Barbara Ruger as the pay TV service's marketing executive. No replacement for Wagner will be sought immediately, Miller said.

At least one securities analyst, Joseph Fuchs at Kidder, Peabody & Co. Inc. in New York, has speculated that Disney must drastically cut back the service's programming schedule or costs if it is determined to offer the channel on its own.

But Miller said the only change contemplated is reducing the planned 18-hour programming day to 16 hours. "It's going to be as (grand) as before," he said.

Tony Hoffman, an analyst at A. G. Becker Inc. in New York, has applauded Disney's decision to regain full control of its pay-TV service, saying, "They've discovered how easy it is to run a pay-TV channel...The difficult part is getting your hand on product, and they've got product."

In a separate announcement, Disney said it has formed a corporate management committee "for formulating policy and directing the operations of the company." Miller confirmed that the committee is designed to help the company through a transitional period as Card Walker, Disney's chairman and chief executive, has already announced his intention to retire next year.

Oregon psychologist finds rock writing good therapy

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) - In the gloom of late afternoon in a restaurant and lounge in Multnomah, Walt Thompson enters with a small trove of flat, light rocks and, with a pen, begins working on his messages.

Working quickly, Thompson completes not only one of the myriad quotes he seems to have stored in his mind like a memory bank, but also a fine work in calligraphy. It's a spatial design esthetically pleasing and appropriate to the shape of the stone he has found, usually along some river bank.

Selecting a larger stone, Thompson begins a quote from Kipling: "If you can keep your head when all about you are losing theirs..."

Then he puts it aside to explain benignly, eyes peering through his glasses, that it's just a hobby, something to do while waiting for airplanes, trains or between sessions of a psychological convention he is attending in Portland.

Thompson, who is "about 50," has been inscribing rocks with his messages for the past 10 years.

"I was always interested in literature and quotations and had started writing in notebooks," he says. "Well, one day I ran out of paper and picked up a rock. It seemed nice, smooth and flat and round, so I began. Soon, people began asking for one, then another, and I couldn't believe it."

He seldom sells the rocks, though he has had plenty of offers, and those he doesn't give away he simply tosses by the roadside wherever he may be, delighting the unsuspecting who may find, there among the detritus of travel, one of Thompson's "universal messages."

By now, he estimates, there must be a small avalanche of quotations scattered about, some of which have found their way to Japan, Kuwait, Sweden, Germany and New Zealand.

"I never sign them," he says, "but some people have a way of tracking me down."

A native of Wisconsin, where he got his degree, Thompson claims to be proficient in French, German, Russian, Polish "and some Greek. My favorite quotations are from Shakespeare. I take a lot from Shakespeare, but I use a lot of others as well."

Thompson once taught education at Portland State University, but about 10 years ago he moved to Pendleton, where he is involved as a psychologist in a "child development practice," his forte, he says, being motivation and stress.

While rocks relax him, Thompson hasn't given up writing on paper but says, "It gives me a lot of pleasure to give rocks to people."

William Drinkard of Edna, Ala., stands outside the store where his father was murdered in 1972. Drinkard closed the store the day of the killing. Phillip Chance, one of three men sentenced to life in the case, escaped an Alabama minimum security facility and won asylum in Detroit, Mich.

Controversy over convict's asylum complicated by racial tensions

EDNA, Ala. (AP) — Walter C. Drinkard's name has faded from the sign on his grocery store in the 10 years since he was murdered, but the crime is still fresh for neighbors who are angry that a man sent to prison in the killing is free.

Three teen-agers walked into Drinkard's pine-board store on a November day in 1972. When they walked out, the 81-year-old man lay dying, stabbed in the head with a screwdriver at the grocery he had operated since 1935 on a farm road.

"It was the most brutal thing to ever happen in this community," said Mary James, a general store operator known here as the "governor of Edna."

"Mr. Drinkard weighed about 98 pounds. I could have beat him up myself," she said.

Phillip Lewis Chance, arrested with a brother and cousin only a few hours after the robbery, is a free man today. But his escape from prison and Michigan Gov. William Milliken's decision to grant him asylum has revived the anger that languished for a decade in rural Choctaw County, which borders Mississippi.

In this Deep South locale, home to 250 blacks and 30 whites, race remains an unspoken but lingering factor. Drinkard was white. The men sentenced to life in prison for the slaying are black.

CHANCE, HIS BROTHER John Chance Jr. and cousin Leroy Smith, were arrested within hours of the crime. All pleaded guilty to the slaying and were sentenced in April 1973 to life in prison.

But Chance, only 15 at the time, believes he was tricked into pleading guilty and thinks he has been rehabilitated.

John Chance and Smith, who once lived on a dirt road near the Drinkard store and were both 18 at the time, are still in prison. All three were from Detroit and spent some summer vacations with relatives here.

Phillip Chance walked away from a minimum security work-release center at Mobile on June 23, 1981, a month after he was denied parole. He was arrested in Detroit in May 1982 and began fighting extradition. On Sept. 22, Milliken appeared at an extradition hearing and refused to send back Chance, granting him asylum a week later.

"Even if he was involved in this crime, he demonstrated by his behavior in prison that he was rehabilitated," said Al Sandner, a spokesman for Milliken. "To send him back now would guarantee him another 10 to 20 years in jail."

In Edna, sentiment against Milliken's action runs strong.

"IF THE GOVERNOR of Michigan had to run for election down here, I could tell him how many votes he'd get — zip," said Sheriff Donald Lolley.

Chance, who now works in Detroit where he lives with his father, brother and sister, says authorities used "trickery" to obtain his statement in which he told police he saw Smith strike Drinkard.

He claims his attorney at the time "took advantage of me" when he was told that in exchange for incriminating himself, burglary and robbery charges against him would be dropped.

"He said I would only serve a year," Chance said in a telephone interview Wednesday.

His current attorney, James Waske, says those legal issues and "Phillip's record of rehabilitation" won the governor's confidence, adding that "as long as Mr. Chance remains in the state of Michigan he cannot be touched by Alabama officials."

> "It was the most brutal thing to ever happen in this community," said Mary James, a general store operator known here as the "governor of Edna."
> "Mr. Drinkard weighed about 98 pounds. I could have beat him up myself," she said.

But Hardie Kimbrough, an Alabama state judge who was the county prosecutor in 1972, said he cannot understand the Michigan position.

"This was one of the most heinous murders ever committed in Choctaw County," he said. "I have no reservations about the fact that these three individuals were guilty."

FORMER CHIEF DEPUTY Chester Rhentz, now police chief at Butler, arrested the trio and took their statements.

"I would say Phillip didn't take part in the actual killing, but he knew what they were going to do," said Rhentz, who added that Chance showed police where $204.93 taken in the robbery had been hidden.

Chance works days at the Equal Justice Council, a non-profit court-watching program. He attends night classes at a business school in Detroit and is trying to find work as a drug abuse counselor.

He plans to challenge in federal court the bargaining that led to his guilty plea. "Asylum gives me the time to prepare my case," he said.

Assistant Alabama Attorney General Don Bekurs said Thursday, however, that the state plans to ask Milliken to reconsider.

And Alabama parole board member Jack Lufkin recalls "very serious protests" from Choctaw County about parole for Chance before his escape, even though Chance was "highly recommended" by prison officials.

Poland reels from one-two punch

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

Poland's disaster-prone economy is staggering with one-two punches from an unlikely team — the Reagan administration and the Kremlin, a leading economic study institute reports.

An Analysis

In his latest jab at Warsaw's military government, President Reagan ordered steps taken to further restrict U.S. trade with the Poles a day after the martial-law regime outlawed the Solidarity union Oct. 8.

It was one of a series of U.S. economic sanctions designed to punish Poland's leaders for suppressing the independent labor federation.

But at the same time, the Soviet Union, rather than boosting aid to its beleaguered ally, actually has trimmed the amount of goods and loans extended to Poland, reports Wharton Econometric Forecasting Associates. The Washington, D.C.-based firm is considered one of the best U.S. sources for information about Soviet-bloc economies.

Continuing bad economic news from Poland comes at a time when fresh labor unrest, sparked by the ban on Solidarity, threatens to undercut industrial production further.

THE WHARTON GROUP says that in the first six months of 1982, Soviet exports to Poland declined by about 10 percent compared with the same period a year ago. The Poles, meanwhile, were increasing exports to the Soviets by a similar amount.

This is significant because it reduces Poland's huge trade deficit with the Soviets — the preponderance of imports from the Soviet Union over Polish exports to the Soviets. In effect, this deficit — $2.1 billion last year by the official dollar-Soviet ruble exchange rate — is a massive Soviet subsidy of the Polish economy.

Poland depends heavily, for example, on cheap crude oil bought from the Soviet Union. Polish industry also has relied on the Soviets for iron ore, paper and cellulose, cotton and other raw materials.

Now, the Wharton group says in a recent report, "Poland's crucial needs are for extra raw materials which the Soviets are not supplying."

At the same time, as the Poles struggle with an estimated $22 billion debt to Western banks and governments, the Soviets appear to have turned off their loans to Warsaw.

Last year Poland obtained more than $500 million in Western-currency loans from Moscow, but this year none has been reported, Wharton says.

"I THINK THE REDUCTION in assistance is a very conscious, very careful and calculated move by the Soviets," Wharton group economist Jan Vanous said in an interview.

He said he believes the Soviets, burdened with economic problems at home, are capitalizing on U.S. and other Western sanctions against Poland by slashing their own aid and blaming Poland's economic distress on the West.

As if to bear out this theory, Moscow radio said of Reagan's latest trade sanctions, "The head of the U.S. administration made no secret of his intention to have the new sanctions worsen the situation in the Polish economy."

Reagan called for removal of "most-favored-nation" trade status from Poland, which means sharply higher tariffs on Polish imports and consequently a drop in Polish sales to the United States.

But U.S.-Polish trade already has plunged because of previous sanctions.

Withdrawal of "most-favored-nation status" is "another inconvenience for the Polish government, another signal...but it will have very little effect in the short run," said Zbigniew Fallenbuchl, a specialist in the Polish economy at Canada's University of Windsor, Ontario.

TWO YEARS AFTER THE founding of Solidarity and 10 months after the military crackdown, Poland remains in its economic slide.

More than 40 percent of its industrial capacity is reported idle. "Produced national income" — comparable to the gross national product — is projected to decline 4 percent this year after falling 13 percent in 1981. The cash-short military government reportedly has scrapped $2 billion in investment projects.

Shoemaking, an important industry, provides an example of the severity of the Polish depression: production fell from 72.8 million pairs in 1979 to a projected 35 million this year.

"Even under relatively optimistic economic assumptions, it will take the Polish economy until 1990 to reach the peak level of 1979," Vanous said. "That sort of gives you a flavor of the depth of the Polish economic crisis, deeper than in the Great Depression."

Casinos aren't needed to entice tourists, says Mexican governor

By The Associated Press

MEXICO CITY (AP) — There is no need to put in casinos to attract tourists to Acapulco and other destinations in Guerrero state, according to its governor.

"It's necessary to leave that to places like Las Vegas, that don't have anything but deserts around them," Governor Alejandro Cervantes Delgado said after a meeting earlier this week with President Jose Lopez Portillo.

He also predicted that the slumping tourist industry will recover this year and bring in needed foreign exchange.

Tourism declined significantly in the past two years in Mexico because of high prices. There are few signs that it has picked up despite the prices lowered by two devaluations of the peso this year.

In addition to Acapulco, Guerrero state includes such important tourist destinations as the silver center of Taxco and the Pacific resort of Ixtapa-Zihuatanejo.

Casinos are illegal in Mexico.

Marilyn Monroe's 'red diary' will remain out of public eye

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The contents of Marilyn Monroe's so-called "red diary," recently the object of intense publicity, will remain secret as far as actor Ted Jordan is concerned.

Jordan said Thursday he returned to Ohio from Los Angeles this week to dig up a jewelry box which he said contained the diary and other personal items belonging to the actress, who died Aug. 5, 1962. Her death was ruled a suicide.

The actor said, "I brought it back to Ohio in October 1962" and buried it at the top of Mount Pleasant in his native Lancaster, Ohio. He said he dug it up on Wednesday.

"I put it there for sentimental purposes — just for memories," said the 57-year old actor, who played freight office operator Nathan Burke on the "Gunsmoke" television series between 1964 and 1975.

Jordan worked with Miss Monroe when both were under contract at 20th Century Fox in the 1940s. He said they became lovers in 1944.

The existence of the mysterious diary, however, remained unconfirmed. Jordan said he had mailed the book to Los Angeles. He refused to say to whom he had sent it.

Jordan has made several inconsistent statements about the diary.

In August he said he had the diary in his possession. Later that month, the actor said the "diary" was merely a book of love poems he and the late actress once shared and that it was stolen from the trunk of his automobile.

Thursday, Jordan produced the scarred and faded leather jewelry box. The box contained a pair of gloves that supposedly belonged to Miss Monroe as well as a knit sweater, a bracelet, an assortment of costume jewelry and a locket holding their photographs.

Friends of Miss Monroe who believe the diary exists say she was murdered because she was about to reveal its contents — purported government secrets she learned through an alleged romance with then-U.S. Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy. Those secrets allegedly included a CIA plot to kill Cuban leader Fidel Castro.

Jordan refused to comment on whether the diary contained such allegations. "I don't want to discuss those things," he said.

Jordan said he fears for his safety because of the publicity involving the diary. "Maybe they think I might know too much," he said without elaborating.

Jordan said he intends to contact the Los Angeles district attorney to discuss the diary.

"I wish they would drop the whole damn thing and let her lie in peace and forget the thing and let her alone and quit tryin' to make any money on it," he said.

"I'm not trying to make any money on it," he added. "I'm trying to end this diary thing. I hope it does when I get back."

Actor Ted Jordan, who says he and actress Marilyn Monroe became lovers in 1944, sorts through articles contained in a box he claims he buried in Ohio near his native Lancaster in 1962. Among the items contained in the jewelry box in these photos were mementos, the sweater in the photo at right and Ms. Monroe's "red diary," the contents of which have been the subject of controversy lately. Jordan says he won't publicize the diary's contents.

Texan loses arm, lives to tell about it

TEXARKANA, Texas (AP) — For nearly five hours Robert Renfrow lay unconscious under a broiling July sun.

His arm had been chopped off at the shoulder by a hay bailer and he was severely sunburned.

Doctors gave the 42-year-old Locksburg, Ark., farmer a two percent chance of survival, said Dr. Michael Blankenship, one of four physicians who treated him at Wadley Regional Medical Center.

But Renfrow beat the odds.

He was discharged this week from Wadely — without an arm, but otherwise fully recovered.

The accident happened July 24, Renfrow said slowly. Gently combing his sandy hair, his wife Laverne helped him reconstruct the events.

Renfrow said his long-sleeved shirt got caught in the bailer.

"I don't know how long it (the arm) stayed," he said.

The powerful machine also clasped Renfrow's face and trunk to it, Mrs. Renfrow said.

"I just knew something had happened by the time I got there," she said.

Renfrow said he had managed to crawl closer to the road, hoping people would see him, but it was four or five hours before his wife found him.

He was first taken by ambulance to De Queen General Hospital and then transferred to Wadley where he spent most of his stay in the Surgical Intensive Care Unit.

"He certainly was in the throes of death," Blankenship said.

Within a day of his arrival at Wadley, his kidneys gave out, the doctor said.

Renfrow underwent daily dialysis and was treated with a new antibiotic because of a resistant bacteria infecting his blood.

"Within a few days, he started to bleed from the (amputated) arm. We had to transfuse him a lot," the doctor said.

Renfrow also had seizures, which may have resulted from the July accident or from a fall on his had about two years earlier, the physician said.

His memory of time spent in the hospital is blurred.

"The doctors and nurses worked diligently," Mrs. Renfrow said. "He had 24-hour care. It couldn't have been better."

Southern California stallions special performers

BUENA PARK, Calif. (AP) — Amid the gas stations and franchised restaurants of Orange County rises a Moorish pavilion, an $8 million showplace where stallions dance beneath crystal chandeliers.

In the Kingdom of the Dancing Stallions, 37 Andalusian stallions are trained by a staff of 26 riders and five grooms, giving two performances a day in the grand style of the better-known Lipizzaner stallions at the Spanish Riding School in Vienna.

"What we're trying to do here is show this elegant horse in an elegant atmosphere especially built for him," said Edith Evans, who built the showplace with her Australian husband, Ray Williams. The two also breed Andalusians at a farm in Perth, Australia.

She said other horse shows generally tour, but "it's so hard to keep a horse sound when you're traveling all the time. This is a more relaxed atmosphere for people and horses."

Ms. Evans grew up in Mexico. Her father gave her a retired Andalusian bullfighting horse when she was 12. She was hooked.

"They're a breed of horse that will always try," she said, "try to do what is asked of them. And they suffer stress because of it. But these horses are brilliant."

What they do is called dressage, in which a horse is trained to execute complex maneuvers. There are 23 movements to dressage, which originated as an ancient Greek battlefield tactic to frighten the enemy.

In the movement called courbette, for example, the horse stands on its hind legs, raises the front ones under it and then kicks out the hind legs so that it seems to be suspended in midair.

The rider uses body movements to control the horse, along with rewards such as apples and sugar.

Ms. Evans declined to estimate the value of her horses but said an unbroken Andalusian colt can sell for as much as $40,000.

She brings an unusual background to her Orange County establishment. After joining a charro club — "It's like a family roping and riding group" — in Mexico, she watched men fighting bulls on horseback and decided to do it herself.

"I went to Portugal to study with the world's best bullfighter on horseback, David Ribiero Telles," said Ms. Evans. "I fought on three continents for seven years."

However, she gave up bullfighting for Andalusian breeding in 1971. After meeting her husband at an Andalusian breeders' convention, she decided to start a stallion show in the United States and the couple researched locations before choosing Southern California.

THE MOST IMPORTANT DAY OF YOUR LIFE

Your yesterdays are important, for it is through the past that you have built the present.

If we are happy with our present state of affairs, we know that we have learned some of the lessons of yesteryear. But it is unfortunate that very few people are happy with their today's, the present.

We can change all that. We can learn that it is today that builds our tomorrow, and the day after that, and the day after that. It is in worship that we start—where we can learn to build our happy tomorrow.

- Sunday John 15:1-10
- Monday John 17:9-23
- Tuesday Romans 12:4-8
- Wednesday I Corinthians 3:1-11
- Thursday I Corinthians 12:3-11
- Friday I Corinthians 12:12-27
- Saturday Ephesians 4:1-6

The Newspaper BIBLE

WHAT IS LOVE REALLY LIKE?

Love is very patient and kind, never jealous or envious, never boastful or proud, never haughty or selfish or rude. Love does not demand its own way. It is not irritable or touchy. It does not hold grudges and will hardly even notice when others do it wrong. It is never glad about injustice, but rejoices whenever truth wins out. If you love someone you will be loyal to him no matter what the cost. You will always believe in him, always expect the best of him and always stand your ground in defending him.

Now we know so little, even with our special gifts, and the preaching of those most gifted is still so poor. But when we have been made perfect and complete, then the need for these inadequate special gifts will come to an end, and they will disappear.

It's like this: when I was a child I spoke and reasoned as a child does. But when I became a man my thoughts grew far beyond those of my childhood, and now I have put away the childish things. In the same way, we can see and understand only a little about God now, as if we were peering at His reflection in a poor mirror; but someday we are going to see Him in His completeness, face to face. Now all that I know is hazy and blurred but then I will see everything clearly, just as clearly as God sees into my heart right now.

There are three things that remain - faith, hope, and love - and the greatest of these is love. (I Corinthians 13:4-7, 9-13)

Churches aid poor, downtrodden consistently, with little fanfare

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Seldom noticed in the devotional round of the churches is the far-flung work they carry on for the poor and downtrodden, a vast enterprise often distant from most American church-goers but derived from their pocketbooks.

A reminder of it came in the simultaneous announcements of new project grants by three church organizations — Lutheran World Relief, the World Council of Churches and the Roman Catholic Campaign for Human Development.

They're only a part of the total picture, and the grants even less of it, but they're a typical, periodic addition to the long-range pattern the churches maintain with such common regularity it gets little attention.

It's a continuing operation, both in this country and around the world, ranging from digging wells in waterless villages to providing livestock, to teaching sanitation and running medical clinics.

Thousands of personnel, doctors, agricultural experts, teachers, nurses, technicians and others, serve in the multi-denominational corps of workers in many lands.

Funds poured into the work amount to many millions of dollars annually, funnelled from local congregational giving to the wider church programs conducted nationally or internationally.

So extensive and experienced are these church operations that the U. S. government, when it was setting up the Peace Corps after World War II to help in needy regions, turned to the churches for advice on how to do it.

Because the churches already have missionary personnel and facilities in almost every country, the administrative costs of church relief and development work is generally less than 5 percent, far lower than that of most charities.

Consequently the contributions allotted to that work go almost entirely to filling needs of people, whether it's in planting trees, organizing village cooperatives or providing tents, blankets and food in disasters.

Special emergency relief currently focuses on Lebanon, the hard-pressed people of Poland and flood victims in Central America, but emergency efforts differ from the continuing help projects.

They were the kind involved in the current grants. The biggest batch — a total of $6.4 million to 195 self-help projects in the United States — came from Roman Catholicism's Campaign for Human Development.

It "helps us to live as Jesus did, in solidarity with the poor, with the wounded, the rejected and with those considered least in our society," says the Rev. Marvin A. Mottet, the program's executive director.

The funds come from an annual Catholic collection taken up in churches across the country each year during the Thanksgiving season.

The domestic self-help projects are distinct from global operations of Catholic Relief Services which, along with Church World Service, relief arm of the 32-denomination National Council of Churches, carries on world-wide work among refugees and the impoverished.

Another batch of grants — totalling $2.3 million for 41 development and aid programs in Latin America, Africa, India and the Middle East — was made by Lutheran World Relief.

Methodist church in California tries new fund-raising method

By TOM FULKS
Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — When the collection plate was passed around after a recent Sunday sermon at Riviera United Methodist Church in Redondo Beach, Calif., the congregation was treated to a real shocker.

Instead of dropping their usual donation into the plate, church Pastor Orlie White instructed the group to dig in and take out a $10 bill each.

"I've never seen a happier bunch after a sermon in my life," White said later. "Some of the people were so shocked the ushers had to urge them to take it," he added with a sheepish grin.

Altogether, the church gave away $2,000 that day.

No, he and church officials have not lost their marbles, White said. What they have done is put up the seed money for a church fund-raiser that should quadruple their money and involve the entire congregation.

Instead of the standard bake-garage sale fund-raiser, which usually involved a dedicated core of church supporters that brought in relatively little money, White decided to follow the example set by the rich farmer in the "Parable of the Talents," Matthew 25: 14-30, also known as the "Parable of the Three Servants."

The story goes something like this:

AS THE FARMER was preparing to leave on a trip, he gathered his three servants together and put them in charge of his property. He gave each one — according to their individual abilities — $5,000, $2,000 and $1,000, respectively, and went on his trip.

The servants with the $5,000 and $2,000 each invested their money and doubled it. But the servant with the $1,000 took the money and hid it in a hole in the ground.

After a long absence the farmer returned to settle the accounts. The two servants who had invested their money received praise from the farmer and were put in charge of larger amounts of money. But the servant who buried his money was scolded for being so lazy, uncreative and distrusting.

The farmer banished the lazy servant and said, "For every one who has, even more will be given, and he will have more than enough; but the one who has nothing, even the little he has will be taken away from him."

Using this theme, White initiated the "Talents Unlimited" program. Church members have until the Nov. 20 "Harvest Festival" to return the original $10 plus the proceeds from their efforts.

White said his main goal is to get people stimulated so they will use their own creative potential to raise money. He added that people are encouraged to turn their money over twice if they have the time.

"THE UNIQUE THING about this fund-raiser," White said, "is that nobody knows who has the money. If people want to keep the money they can, but I'm sure they won't. This program will involve more people than our usual programs. I've never seen so much enthusiasm among the members."

A few ideas White has heard of include:

— A woman who used her $10 to pay an entrance fee to a bowling tournament. She won the tournament and the $75 prize.

— The Parable, a young couples' fellowship at the church, pooled their money, made ice cream and will sell it at a salad potluck and arts and crafts fair at the church Sunday.

— One couple sells avocados at church functions while their children sell cookies and fudge.

— Other families used the money to buy food, cooked it up and invited guests over for dinner and a hot tub — for a price, of course.

'Smote' becomes 'killed;' Numbers made clearer

Following are some comparisons of the old and new Bible:

2 Kings 19:35:

And it came to pass that night, that the angel of the LORD went out, and smote in the camp of the Assyrians an hundred fourscore and five thousand: and when they arose early in the morning, behold, they were all dead corpses.

— 1769 King James Version

And it came to pass on a certain night that the angel of the Lord went out, and killed in the camp of the Assyrians one hundred and eight-five thousand; and when people arose early in the morning, there were the corpses — all dead.

First Presbyterian celebrates World Community Day Nov. 5

World Community Day will be celebrated Nov. 5 at First Presbyterian Church. The program will begin at 10:30 a.m. in the chapel and a covered dish luncheon will follow in Fellowship Hall.

World Community Day is a national observance sponsored by Church Women United. It calls Christian women to gather on this day to focus their energies on the crisis of scarcity and abundance in our world. The annual celebration, observed since World War II, is motivated by the concern of Church Women United for justice and peace in a global society.

The service this year will look at the universal problem of "Scarcity/Abundance" from a Christian perspective. Written by participants in Church Women United's international Christian Causeways, it draws upon insights gained from these experiences of sharing concerns and building bridges of understanding with Christian women of other countries and cultures.

Church Women United is the national movement bringing more than a half million Protestant, Roman Catholic and Orthodox women together into a Christian "community of caring."

World Community Day offerings make possible the mission of Church Women United, including the Intercontinental Grants for Mission Program that funds projects, national and international, in support of the empowerment of women, human rights, justice and peace.

All women are invited to attend. For more information contact Marilyn Hightower at 699-7221.

New King James Bible took seven years to prepare

By RITA GILLMON
Copley News Service

Editors of the New King James Version of the Bible, published in September, say they hope their work will enhance readers' ability to memorize and understand the meanings of scripture passages.

"We have tried to preserve the beauty and rhythmic flow of the text, while making the meaning clear," said Dr. Arthur Farstad, executive editor for the revision of the King James Version of the Bible which took about 130 scholars, clergy and laypersons about seven years to prepare.

"There are many other excellent versions for study, but for public reading and worship, there has been nothing to compare with the King James Version for beauty and majesty," Farstad said. "The problem with continuing to use the KJV, which was last revised in 1769, is the meanings of words have changed radically in that time. The word 'let' used to mean hinder or prevent and now means the opposite. It is bound to convey the wrong impression on the reader."

Farstad said that he has talked to people who have a vague idea that Jesus thought children would or should suffer for him.

"THEY GET THE IDEA from the passage in the KJV New Testament where Jesus said, 'Suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not.' When they analyze it, they know it means He wants the children to come to Him. But they are also left with the residual idea of suffering, which would not have been there for readers in 1611 when suffer meant allow or permit," Farstad said.

"Yet the KJV is so intertwined with our culture and has been quoted by so many great English writers from Dickens and Shakespeare to Abraham Lincoln, that we have good reasons for keeping it alive," Farstad said.

It was this problem that led Nelson Publishing to tackle the burden of bringing the KJV up-to-date without destroying its character as an English language Bible.

Half of the Bibles sold today are the KJV, so if the NKJV catches on, Nelson will have a large market to help defray the $4.5 million estimated cost of bringing out the new Bible.

FARSTED SAID THAT although the scholars who worked on the NKJV are conservative scholars who believe that the scriptures are without error in their original handwritten copies, the intent of the revisers was not to pander to the right wing conservatives in the Christian churches.

"We got calls and letters from some on the far right who objected to us tampering with the KJV. It's as though they thought it was handed down to Moses," Farstad said. "Many of them are not aware the KJV was not a new translation even in 1611 when it was first compiled, nor that the version in use today was updated in 1769."

To illustrate how archaic in language the original 1611 version is, Nelson is also publishing it in the original form with a modern typeface. The language is that of the Shakespeare plays and the spelling is erratic by modern standards.

When King James of Scotland succeeded Elizabeth I on the throne of England, one of the first steps he took in his reign was to try to settle some of the disputes in the Church of England raised by the Puritans. The meeting in 1604 settled almost none of these problems, but it did lead to the assembling of a commission to create a new uniform translation of the Bible to be used in all the churches of England.

"THE 47 SCHOLARS USED Hebrew, Greek and Latin texts of the scriptures and also consulted the work of earlier translators such as Tyndale, Coverdale, the Geneva Bible and the Douay-Rheims. The result was that about 80 percent of the text was from the Coverdale Bible," Farstad said. The book was prepared without marginal notes, which James had found to be "very partial, untrue, seditious and savouring too much of dangerous and traitorous conceits," according to Nelson's historical review issued with publicity for the new Bible.

Farstad said that the present work was prepared using the same Greek texts used by the original King James scholars, though more recent translators have used a Greek text based on manuscripts discovered in the 18th and 19th centuries which were older.

"'First we decided that to have a New King James Version we would have to use the same texts. In addition, many scholars also think that the text used before, called the majority manuscripts, are closer to the original autographs than those of the earlier date. An earlier scribe is not more protected from error than a later one," Farstad said.

VARIANT READINGS OF the text, including those from the Dead Sea Scrolls, are given in the footnotes.

What kinds of changes did the scholars make? Excessively long sentences were halved. Archaic verbs and pronouns were modernized. Punctuations are streamlined and quotation marks added for convenience of reading. All pronouns referring to God are capitalized and the words Jesus in the New Testament are in red. Though 17th century words are replaced with 20th century words when the original meaning is lost, those words which have acquired theological significance, such as "atonement" and "righteousness" have been retained.

Farstad said that close to 500,000 copies of the NKJV have been sold already. "I think it will grow and snowball, once people see what it is and how carefully it was done," he said.

Methodists open history center on campus of Drew University

MADISON, N. J. (AP) — A $2.7 million United Methodist Archives and History Center has opened on the campus of Drew University, a church institution.

Opening ceremonies were held early this month for the newly built center. It will serve as a depository of the denomination's historical materials, which Drew President Paul Hardin calls the "memories of Methodism."

Two floors of the four-story building provide 24,000 square feet of climate-controlled vault storage for documents, artifacts, books and other written records of the Methodist movement. Another 9,000 square feet are reserved for a library of 70,000 volumes and other materials.

Rev. Robert Harvey to dedicate new altar items at St. Paul's

The Right Rev. Robert C. Harvey will visit St. Paul's Anglican Church, 5200 W. Illinois Ave., Thursday at 6:30 p.m. to dedicate and consecrate the new altar furnishings which have been presented by members of the congregation in memory of loved ones.

New altar items include a cross, candlesticks, flower vases, a missal stand, a processional cross, flags and a missal prayer book and lectern Bible.

Following the service of dedication, there will be a church supper during which the bishop will explain the decision of the Diocese of the Southwest to leave the Anglican Catholic Church and revert to its previous status as a diocese of the Anglican Church of North America.

He also will inform the people of the church about the diocese's plans to join in full communion with the American Episcopal Church as well as other Anglican continuing church bodies in the U.S. According to a spokesman for the church, there are about 50 such bodies whom the bishop hopes will unite to form the Anglican Church of North America.

Anyone interested in attending the Thursday church supper is asked to contact the rector, the Rev. Stacey Hebden Taylor, at 699-6993.

Young Thai woman's battlefield Bangkok's fetid Klong Toey slum

KLONG TOEY, Thailand (AP) — It's a long way from the windswept plains of the American Midwest to the fetid slums of Thailand.

But when Prateep Ungsongtham heard that another threat loomed over her slum people she did not hesitate to drop her long-hoped-for studies in the United States to hurry back home — and fight again.

It was an old unfinished battle, one waged continuously in most corners of the developing world between land owners and impoverished squatters who have spawned vast ugly settlements on urban real estate that soars in value.

For Miss Prateep — a slight, unassuming, 30-year-old woman — the battlefield has been Bangkok's Klong Toey slum, one of the world's largest by United Nations' estimates.

Klong Toey — home for 30,000 to 40,000 people — is a dense concentration of shacks perched on stilts and connected by plankways. The smell of the swamp pervades all.

The average family — five to eight people — lives in claustrophobic quarters and makes money where it can, collecting mosquito larvae in the black slush; picking plastic bags from garbage piles for resale after cleaning; going out to haul concrete at the city's big construction projects. Klong Toey is also a center of crime and drug addiction.

Miss Prateep was born in this sprawling shantytown built over mosquito-ridden swamplands, and spent a poverty-wracked childhood here. While still a teen-ager she launched a struggle to bring learning, health and dignity to thousands of her neighbors who now call her "the slum angel of Bangkok."

When Miss Prateep accepted an American benefactor's offer to continue graduate studies in the United States this year, she thought an understanding had finally been reached between her community and its old adversary, the Port Authority of Thailand.

This government agency had been seeking to evict some 5,000 people from a section of Klong Toey where Miss Prateep had set up her now thriving Pattana Village community school, a nursery and a profusion of other welfare projects.

Word got back to Miss Prateep in Wichita, Kan., that the agency — which owns the slum land — was planning to move her community to expand its facilities from the adjacent river port area. If eviction had to come, Miss Prateep says, she wanted to insure that the government provided her people with adequate alternative land and facilities.

Miss Prateep's chief weapons are her sharp wits, force of personality and a national and international reputation which makes it more difficult for her opponents to bully and threaten as they had done in the past.

In 1978, she received Asia's equivalent of the Nobel Prize, the Magsaysay Award for Public Service, and in 1980 she became the first Asian to receive the John D. Rockefeller Youth Award.

Committee objects to covert acts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some CIA covert actions planned by the Reagan administration are coming under fire from Democrats on the House intelligence committee, according to ex-deputy CIA director Bobby R. Inman.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Inman said committee Democrats have taken the unusual step of writing letters to President Reagan protesting CIA clandestine operations, including one on Central America.

Inman said the dispute was the reason behind the publication of last month's committee report criticizing U.S. intelligence gathering in Central America. The report led Inman to quit as an unpaid consultant to the panel.

The retired admiral, who left the CIA on June 10, said he did not think the committee would have made the report public if the covert action dispute had "not been a factor."

Although no one disclosed what covert actions were protested, Inman's statement is the first time any ranking member of the U.S. intelligence community has suggested that the House intelligence committee has made a series of secret objections about ongoing clandestine operations.

Only one critical letter had previously come to light. In July 1981, sources said, the committee complained about a plan directed against the radical government of Libya's Moammar Khadafy.

WHILE REFUSING COMMENT on any complaints about covert actions, committee officials rejected Inman's claim that concern over such secret activities colored their report.

The committee report does not deal with covert actions. It argues that some U.S. intelligence used to buttress Reagan's policies in Central America has been simplistic and not well supported by fact.

Inman charged that the report reflected a bias against Reagan's Central American policies.

He said he feared the party-line vote to release the 23-page report and Democratic criticism of the covert actions were eroding the bipartisan tradition of the intelligence committees.

"What really troubles me is that here in the oversight process they have let sharply different views about covert action creep into what appears to be a critique on substantive intelligence," Inman said. "That's what really lies underneath the split and the criticism."

Inman said the report failed to say that a key House briefing on outside intervention in El Salvador was given not by intelligence analysts but by operational officials "deeply enmeshed" in covert actions.

INMAN SAID THIS distinction was important because these "operational personnel" are less analytical and less objective than "substantive intelligence people."

The report cited four claims made at that briefing as examples of misleading and overstated intelligence by U.S. spy agencies in their reporting on Central America.

In a response to Inman's criticism, Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C., chairman of the panel's oversight subcommittee, said that only two of 18 intelligence officers at the March 4 briefing were "operational" personnel and that they were not the prinicipal speakers.

"I find it surprising that Admiral Inman, who has such an excellent memory, is confused about this briefing," Rose said. "The committee has never received a briefing that was more formal, elaborate or high level. The top analytic spokesmen for each of the intelligence agencies were present."

The briefing was given after then-Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. asserted that the command and control of the insurgency in El Salvador was in the hands of "non-Salvadorans."

IT ALSO CAME AT a time when the administration was trying to persuade Congress and the American public that Cuba and leftist Nicaragua were trying to subvert pro-U.S. governments in Central America.

In contrast to those strong assertions, Inman said in the interview that much of the intelligence was less than compelling.

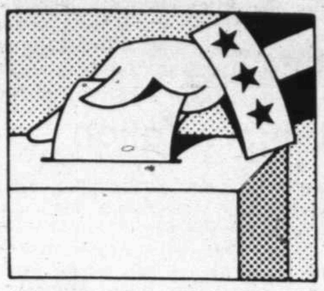
White-collar workers vote more regularly



White-collar workers vote more regularly than do other Americans—white or black. In this group, about 64 percent of black white-collar workers voted in 1980 compared to 72 percent among whites. No differences were noted between races among blue-collar and service workers. There was a marked difference for farm workers, a group which is small for both blacks and whites. Overall, 50 percent of blacks and 61 percent of whites voted in 1980.

Los Angeles neighborhood will miss 'Sunny'

The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — They called the old man "Sunny."

He worked as a security guard at a garment factory at 31st and San Pedro streets.

In the mornings, when the weather was nice, he would sit in a folding chair at the entrance to the parking lot, greeting passersby with a cheery "God bless you," occasionally reading them short passages from his Bible.

Rufus "Sunny" Elliot, 72, was sitting there Tuesday morning when three young men approached.

"They were after his gun," Detective Tom King of the Los Angeles Police Department said Thursday.

"He yelled, 'No! No! No!' " King said. "But they shot him."

AND AS the three young men ran away, Rufus Elliot died there, in the dirt, beside his toppled chair.

Policemen will tell you that in most such cases, "people don't want to get involved."

But this case was different.

Vernon Steward, 22, a student at California State University, Northridge, said he was sitting in his cottage behind the factory when he heard the shots.

"I saw a guy run down the alley, but I didn't pay that much attention," Steward said. "But then I saw him run back, and I saw Rufus lying there on the ground, and I saw the guy grab Rufus' gun and start running back toward my house."

STEWARD SAID that when he started to give chase, the man "pointed his guns at me...He had one in each hand...

"So I went back inside and I got my shotgun, and I got my friend Mike (Michael Cotton, 20, who lives next door), and we got Mike's Camaro, and we went after him.

"We lost that guy, but we backtracked, and we found another guy. We jumped out of the car and held that guy until the police got there."

Police say the young man Steward and Cotton held quickly identified his confederates, and within a few hours Windell Paul, 19, Anthony Hodge, 23, and a male juvenile were in custody, all booked on suspicion of murder.

STEWARD WAS asked why he was willing to risk his life to chase the suspects.

"Because of Sunny," he replied. "Sunny was so good to all of us. He was the kind of man that, when he spoke to you, you respected him.

"Anyone that knew Sunny would have done what we did."

Larry Burnett, vice president of Tattoo, Inc., the company where Elliot had worked for the past three years, said the security guard's relatives indicated that Elliot's nickname was pinned on him by his mother, "who liked to say the sun rose and set on him."

THE NICKNAME stuck, through Elliot's years as a street urchin in San Antonio, Texas, through his years as a shoeshine boy in Chicago, through his years as a security guard in Los Angeles, where he lived alone.

"It was because he was always cheerful," Burnett said. "Every day was an up day for him.

"He'd be the first one here every morning, making sure the place was safe before letting the employees in. He'd greet everyone with a 'good morning' and a 'God bless you.' "

"Then he'd go out and sit in that chair, reading from his Bible, stopping people now and then to read them the Scriptures," said David Lacy, shipping director at the factory.

"HE WAS very outgoing," Lacy said. "You couldn't walk down the street without his saying hello. If you spoke Spanish, he'd speak to you in Spanish. He'd even learned a little Japanese...

"He waved to every bus driver, and they'd honk their horns at him.

"If the police didn't have time to stop by, they'd say, 'Hello, Sunny Rufus,' to him over their bullhorns.

"People around here really loved him."

Miami deploys 'trash patrol' to sweep streets of bums, vagrants for travel agents

MIAMI (AP) — A special police "trash patrol" has swept hundreds of vagrants off the streets this week to impress a convention of travel agents, but the move has upset civil libertarians who say Miami is putting on a "phony face."

Since Sunday, when 6,000 members of the American Society of Travel Agents arrived here for a convention, police have arrested nearly 400 people on misdemeanor charges such as sleeping and drinking in public, loitering and fighting. All but 32, who were released on their own recognizance, were still in jail today.

Officials want to please the out-of-towners who could send millions of crucial tourism dollars to Miami, and police have stepped up their "Operation Clean Sweep," a police campaign started earlier this year to put vagrants behind bars.

Normally, the program averages 30 arrests a day. On Tuesday and Wednesday, police picked up 127 drifters — more than twice the usual rate.

"This is a one-week clean sweep strictly for ASTA," said Officer Luis Alvarez. "We wouldn't be doing this under normal conditions."

Capt. Kevin Hickey, a county corrections officer, said if the program convinces travel agents to steer tourism to Miami, "then it's worth every bit of this."

Another police officer, Capt. George Green, called it a "trash patrol."

This week's sweep has cost the police department $17,000 in overtime pay, but a host committee for the travel agent's convention is picking up the tab from its $600,000 convention budget, said Mike Stewart, police information officer.

When asked Thursday night who ordered the stepped-up action by police, Mayor Maurice Ferre said: "I haven't the foggiest idea."

Police say they are following the letter of the law. "It's not against the law to be a bum, so we have to wait for them to fall asleep," Green said.

But an official with the American Civil Liberties Union of Florida said he wasn't sure it's legal.

Bruce Rogow, the state ACLU's general counsel, called the sweep "selective law enforcement," and said he would urge the ACLU to examine the court affidavits to be sure the defendants weren't arrested for just being on the streets.

How much harm will France setback hurl toward Arafat?

By BERNARD D. KAPLAN
Hearst Feature Service

PARIS — PLO leader Yassar Arafat seems to be falling victim to his own political success.

Since the militarily defeated Palestine Liberation Organization forces evacuated Beirut two months ago, the peripatetic Arafat has moved from one diplomatic triumph to another. He has staged a dramatic reconciliation with his once-deadliest enemy, King Hussein of Jordan. He has been received as a virtual head of state by European presidents, prime ministers and even the pope.

But a meeting in Tunis this week with French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson may have marked the limits of how far the PLO chief can advance on his present course.

At first glance, the encounter was another in what has become the almost monotonous string of Arafat's political successes that have left Israeli rulers gnashing their teeth in frustrated anger and grudging admiration of his skill. Cheysson even emerged from their session to reproach Israel as the only serious stumbling block to peaceful negotiations.

However, in hard fact, Tunis was a sharp setback for Arafat. He expected it to prove a crowning event in his post-Beirut strategy of wooing and winning the West, arriving at a crucial moment in terms of checking rising opposition to him inside the PLO. Instead, the French let him down.

Cheysson was compelled to tell Arafat that an anticipated invitation to Paris to see President Francois Mitterrand was not in the cards. Mitterrand's message was surprisingly straightforward: There would be no invitation until the PLO unequivocably recognized Israel's right to exist and the Palestine National Council dropped the provision in its covenant calling for Israel's destruction.

An Analysis

Cheysson cushioned the demand by talking about "mutual recognition" by Israel and the PLO, but that could not have fooled Arafat.

The severity of the setback from his viewpoint can hardly be exaggerated. As the Israelis themselves bitterly concede, France has regularly acted as the initiator in breaking new ground for the PLO's advances on the international scene.

Arafat had every reason to hope a triumphant appearance in Paris would open the way very quickly to general Western European recognition and — why not? — that of the United States. Until this week, he had been able to register consistent political gains while conceding little or nothing on recognition of Israel other than what was involved in such serio-comic charades as his "exchange" of note-pad memoranda last summer with Congressman Paul McCloskey.

This astonishing feat of diplomatic broken field running had to impress even his PLO antagonists. But the Cheysson meeting climaxed a week in which all their major complaints about him seemed confirmed.

The reconciliation with Hussein was taken as a sure signal in Syrian and anti-Arafat PLO circles that he already has tacitly accepted President Reagan's peace plan, which they reject, as a basis for negotiation. His surprise declaration that Palestinians and Jordanians are "one people" struck many extremists as identical to what Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon has been saying.

Marines try to make tents more homey

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Seventeen days after the U.S. Marines returned to Lebanon, they still subsist largely on cold C-rations and spend much of their time shoveling sand.

But there are signs the men are settling in for a longer stay.

Two-man shelters, the meagerest of military residences, were coming down, being replaced by tents big enough for 16 cots.

With Lebanon's winter rains just around the corner and no word as yet on just how long the 1,200 Marines will remain in Lebanon as part of the multi-national peacekeeping force, they are starting to make the place look a little more homey — sort of.

The Americans joined French and Italian troops as peacekeepers in Lebanon after Palestinian guerrillas were evacuated at the end of the Israeli invasion last summer. They returned at the request of the Lebanese after the Sept. 16-18 massacre of civilian refugees while west Beirut was under Israeli control.

Asked about the new accommodations, an artillerymen remarked: "It's okay, I guess, but I still want to go home."

Hot food is another matter. Without field kitchens, the troops must make do with C-rations, the canned nourishment used by generations of American soldiers.

An occasional hot meal is brought in from the ships anchored offshore, or by letting the sun heat up an "MRE" — a made-ready-to-eat sealed pouch.

"Some of the MREs you can throw on a table and let the sun warm 'em up," said Capt. Bob Sullivan, commander of an artillery battery. "They're good."

The biggest problem remains boredom.

The Marines have taken up defensive positions all around Beirut International Airport and along the Mediterranean beach, but there is little real activity.

Capt. Ken McCabe says he tries to keep his men busy, often by filling sandbags for defensive positions and to help keep the rain out of tents.

"I've got a company sergeant who has even invented a sandbag-filling machine," said McCcabe, pointing to a simple wooden contrivance made out of crates. "Their record is 270 bags in an hour. In one day they filled 750 bags with eight men."

His E company men challenged another company to a sandbag filling race, the loser to provide the winning company with all its bags. They neglected, however, to mention their machine. In the interest of fair play, McCabe blew the whistle on his own men.

Alaskans battle capital relocation issue

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — "Alaska's Vietnam" — the 22-year-old campaign to move the capital from Juneau to the state's heartland — is heading for a decisive battle at the polls.

Voters on Nov. 2 will decide whether to authorize the Legislature to spend up to $2.84 billion to build a new capital city in the tiny settlement of Willow, about 70 highway miles north of Anchorage.

Alaskans also will decide whether to limit state funding for abortions and whether to lay claim to state ownership of virtually all federal land in Alaska — an initiative patterned on the "Sagebrush Rebellion" in Western states.

The abortion and "Tundra Rebellion" questions have drawn little interest. But the proposal to relocate the capital has sparked bare-knuckle debate, and polls indicate those who favor the move hold a slight edge.

"This fight is Alaska's Vietnam," said state Sen. Tim Kelly of Anchorage, whose leadership of the relocation drive in the Legislature has earned him the enmity of Juneau residents who fear their city will become a ghost town.

"This issue is the most divisive thing we've ever had," said Jim Clark, chairman of the Alaska Committee, which opposes the move. "It's time to stop thinking in terms of one region against another and start thinking as one state.'

Alaskans who favor carving a "Brasilia of the North" from a hunk of near-wilderness argue Juneau is too remote to be the center of government in this oil-rich, booming state.

Juneau, a quaint city whose 22,000 residents are trapped between water and rugged mountains, is about 580 air miles southeast of Anchorage — where about half the state's 420,000 people live — and accessible only by air or water.

"We need the Legislature up here where we can keep an eye on what they're doing," said Frank Harris, leader of the Capital Access Committee of Anchorage, which backs the relocation.

Willow, population 137, is home to a grocery-hardware store, a post office, a liquor store, an elementary school and a few churches. The $2.84 billion would go to build a new capitol and support buildings, to relocate equipment and an estimated 4,000 people, and to indemnify Juneau people whose homes and businesses would lose value.

Backers of the capital relocation assert that Juneau is difficult and dangerous to reach by air in the winter. And they complain because it is in a time zone two hours ahead of Anchorage.

Opponents contend the state, which is now coping with flat oil revenues because of the world oil glut, cannot afford to build a new city and still finance badly needed schools, roads and other capital improvements. They argue advances in telecommunications and improved air transportation have made Juneau reasonably accessible.

Opponents say the move would destroy Juneau, where state government is the main industry. They cite a state-sponsored study showing that the former gold-mining town would lose half its population by 1994, along with at least half its private businesses if the capital is moved. The study also estimated 5,000 houses would be left vacant.

"Business would be severely hurt. I sell building materials and there would be little need for mine or related services if our main industry were gone," said Don Abel, owner of a building supply store in Juneau.

The Alaska congressional delegation also raises the spectre that Congress will make good its threat to limit the state's ability to collect taxes on crude oil on grounds the state has too much money.

The fight over relocating the capital has been raging off and on since 1960, when an initiative to move the capital to the Anchorage area was trounced at the polls. In 1962, voters turned down a similar proposal.

In 1974, residents voted 46,659 to 35,683 to move the capital, and two years later Willow was approved as the new site. But in 1978, the voters soundly rejected a $966 million bond issue designed to get the move under way.

Now comes a new cost estimate from a committee appointed by Gov. Jay Hammond. The $2.84 billion price tag has been called "phony" and termed a scare tactic by backers of the relocation effort, while opponents of the move say it is too low.

If the proposal fails at the polls Nov. 2, the 1974 capital move vote is repealed, and backers of the relocation would be forced to start all over again. They promise to do so.

"Let's look at the big picture. Juneau has done this to us over and over again down through history...This time their device to keep the capital is the money," thundered Robert B. Atwood, publisher of The Anchorage Times at a recent debate. He is considered the most powerful force behind the fight for relocation.

Atwood said the estimated cost was designed to "frighten voters," a charge denied by Hammond.

The Repubican governor, long opposed to moving the capital, conceded the relocation could cost less.

"But if voters approve this $2.8 billion figure you can rest assured the Legislature will take it as an authorization to spend that amount, and given the history of large construction in Alaska, the move likely will cost more," he says.

Farmers' future uncertain with disappearance of grain

GRANGER, Texas (AP) — About the only thing the farmers in Granger know for sure is that their grain is gone from the grainery.

William Tonn, who had 138,000 pounds of milo in the local warehouse, and the 80 or so other farmers who depended on Victor Marek's grainery don't know where the grain went or if they'll ever see their money.

"I don't know the circumstances. I'm about as fuzzy as everybody else," he said at a Friday meeting at the local American Legion hall.

Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown conducted the meeting, and the best news he could offer was that the farmers might get 50 cents on the dollar for the lost crop.

The 8.2 million-pound grain shortage at Marek's Grain Producers Inc. was discovered by state inspectors in September. Sixty-six percent of the grain was gone, all 5,066 bushels of wheat had disappeared and 17 percent of the 12,926 pounds of corn had vanished.

Farther north on Texas 95, in Bartlett, 7.8 million pounds of grain was gone from a warehouse owned by Marek and his brother, Alvin.

"We don't know if we're ever going to get paid," said George Beatty of San Antonio, who had about $15,000 worth of grain here. "We hear rumors around town that none of the farmers are going to lose anything. The agriculture department says here today we're going to lose about 50 percent."

Louis Labaj, Beatty's father-in-law, says no one in this Central Texas town of 1,200, knew anything about the shortage until the state inspectors came through.

"I couldn't sleep for a couple of nights. It will affect the whole community. The farmers can't pay their debtors," he said.

Brown opened the Legion Hall meeting with a brief pep talk.

"I wanted to be here today to look you farmers eyeball to eyeball. In the six years I've been commissioner there hasn't been a dollar lost (in grain warehouses) in the state. I was determined the grain thieves were not going to operate in this state while I was commissioner," he said.

"Now we come, in the waning two months of my administration, to a situation where we're about 15 million pounds short," he said.

The state has been put in charge of the seven million pounds of grain still on hand. Darryl Ketchum of the agriculture department said the best the state could do for the farmers is to sell the remaining grain and cash in the $88,000 bonds on the warehouses. That money will be split among the farmers.

That will add up to about 50 percent of the actual value of the grain, he said. Marvin Kropp, who would not say how much grain he had stored with the Mareks, said that's not good enough.

"I don't think (the meeting) did a darned bit of good. They are going to drag the farmers down. At today's prices we can't afford to lose nothing," he said.

Some of the farmers who had grain in storage with the Mareks won't get anything as a result of the state takeover.

Beatty and many others had sold their grain to the Mareks in contracts that didn't call for payment until late this year or early 1983. That means that grain belonged to the Mareks and they were entitled to move it.

Beatty went from farmer to farmer after the meeting to organize an effort to hire one lawyer to represent everyone who might have to take the Mareks to court.

Victor Marek and his lawyer sat on a side of the hall during the meeting. Before and after the session Marek spoke with some of the farmers, who seemed cordial enough. Lawyer Jon Burrows would not speak with reporters about the case.

The attorney also asked a reporter not to listen to the discussion between Marek and the farmers.

The missing Granger grain case goes to a Georgetown grand jury Tuesday. District Attorney Ed Walsh said state inspectors and the Mareks will testify during the investigation, which will last several weeks.

The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 8½% for 95% loan to value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 13½% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent 6months Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7½% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principle exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATELY 14.28%
