Authorities still seeking assailants

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Police are hunting the gunmen who killed a U.S. Navy sailor and wounded three others returning to their ship after a night on the town, but they don't know whether it was a political attack or an attempted robbery.

Authorities said the four young enlisted men were wearing civilian clothes early Sunday when an automobile pulled to the curb and those inside opened fire on the sailors walking back to the pier where the USS Pensacola was tied up.

Petty Officer 3rd Class Darryl T. Phillips, 22, of Dublin, Ga., was killed while Petty Officer 3rd Class Larry S. Skowronski, 21, of Erie, Pa., Petty Officer 3rd Class Randell L. Keyte, 23, of Adrian, Mich., and Seaman Anthony L. Phaneuf, 20, of Ashville, Maine, were wounded, the Navy reported.

Skowronski, wounded in the abdomen, was reported in stable condition in the Veterans Administration Hospital with a good prognosis.

Lt. Drew Malcolm, a spokesman at the Navy's Roosevelt Roads Base, said the other two were in the intensive care unit at the Puerto Rico Medical Center's University Hospital, in San Juan, with guarded prognoses.

Keyte reportedly had gunshot wounds in the right arm and the abdomen and Phaneuf had a bullet wound in the right side of his body that might have hit his liver.

It was the bloodiest attack on U.S. military personnel in Puerto Rico since pro-independence terrorists attacked a Navy bus in December 1979, killing two sailors and wounding 10 others.

The same extremist organization that claimed responsibility for that attack acknowledged shooting at ROTC officers a few months later and claimed it destroyed nine jet fighters worth $45 million belonging to the Puerto Rico Air National Guard last year.

But nobody had claimed responsibility for Sunday's attack 24 hours after it took place. That and the fact that the sailors were in civilian clothes indicated political terrorists may not have been involved, said one federal official who asked that his name not be used.

Malcolm said authorities had no motive for the attack and could rule out neither an attempted robbery nor a terrorist attack.

The FBI, the Naval Investigative Service and the Puerto Rican police were all investigating the shooting.

Did 'dirty tricks' push Braniff over the edge?

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A Braniff International executive says he believes an indictment will result from a grand jury investigation he predicts will show that senior officials at American Airlines instructed their workers to sabotage Braniff's reservations system.

Braniff vice president Sam Coats also said such dirty tricks were among the factors leading to the airline's demise and he added that Braniff's creditors might be able to win some compensation for their losses by suing American.

"In my view, one of the largest potential claims that the shareholders, employees and creditors have is a potential claim against American Airlines for violation of the criminal antitrust laws," Coats said Sunday, declining to speculate on how much money such a claim might seek.

American has denied past allegations of dirty tricks and on Sunday spokesman Al Becker said Coats' comments were "unworthy of comment."

Coats said he based his comments on "statements that have been made to me, documents that have been brought to me and turned over to the Justice Department, and various conversations that have been held during the past seven months." He refused to say who made the statements and provided the documents.

In a telephone interview from his Austin home, Coats stressed that no suit has been filed against American and none is being prepared. He also said he was talking about his personal opinions as an officer of Braniff, adding, "Braniff as an entity has made no allegations."

"I feel there will be evidence developed that American talked to some of Braniff's bankers and convinced them not to restructure Braniff's debts," Coats said.

He said he also believes it will be shown that American:

—Tried to persuade travel agents not to use Braniff.

—Discriminated against Braniff through the SABRE computer reservation system, which is owned by American but also used by other airlines.

—Instructed its agents to try to avoid booking Braniff for connecting flights with American's flights.

A federal grand jury in Fort Worth is investigating allegations that American employed dirty tricks in its fierce competition against Braniff. The two Dallas-area airlines shared many of the same routes until Braniff suspended all flights last Wednesday.

On Thursday, Braniff filed for protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Act. Its chairman, Howard Putnam, said then that Braniff might reorganize and renew operations later. In an interview published Sunday in The Dallas Morning News, Putnam said that if operations are resumed, it would be a much smaller airline and would not carry the Braniff name.

Coats said Sunday that he hoped the investigation into allegations of dirty tricks "does not die just because Braniff is dying. Braniff is dead, but the court may have this claim and be able to make the shareholders, employees and creditors a little more whole that they might be otherwise."

"In my opinion, there will be an indictment that will arise from the grand jury investigation," he said.

Coats said he believes it will be shown that "there were instructions from above that activity be undertaken to avoid booking Braniff flights, to cast doubts on Braniff, to dissuade the public from using Braniff services, to not properly display Braniff flights with the SABRE system and also to preferentially display American's flights."

He said he also believes that some Braniff flights were not listed and that some people were told "that Braniff did not serve given markets by American when in fact Braniff did serve that market."

"Basically it boils down to an attempt to monopolize the Dallas-Fort Worth hub," he said, "and that involves many complex economic issues and it will take a long time for the grand jury to ferret out the facts and take action."

Champagne service makes flight aMUSEing

EDITOR'S NOTE: Midlander Carolyn Fitz-Gerald, waiting at Dallas Love Field Sunday when no standby seats were available on a Southwest Airlines connection, heard of Muse Air's Inaugural flight to Midland. She grabbed the opportunity — and a seat. Following is her account of that airline's first official flight into Midland Regional Airport.

By CAROLYN FITZ-GERALD

Lamar Muse, chairman of Muse Air, proved that starting a new airline route is as easy as falling out of a tree when he did just that and was hospitalized the day before Muse Air's inaugural flight from Dallas Love Field to Midland Regional Airport Sunday afternoon.

In his place, son Michael Muse, company president, stepped aboard to greet the first passengers on the new DC9-Super 80 bound for Midland as scheduled at 2:15 p.m. Sunday. An inaugural flight to Tulsa, Okla., also was scheduled for Sunday afternoon.

Executives on the flight said that without the recent demise of Braniff Airlines, the Midland route might never have been added to existing Dallas-Houston flights which began in July.

Vice President for Marketing Diane Harker said the Federal Aviation Administration turned down a Midland route originally scheduled by Muse to begin May 9, citing overloaded air traffic controllers as a reason for barring Muse from Midland. She added that the government agency then reversed itself and allowed Muse to begin operations after Braniff canceled all flights May 12 and declared bankruptcy May 13.

Harker noted that in order to service the new routes, Muse was able to make a rapid purchase of two new planes that were originally ordered by Republic Airlines before the Minneapolis, Minn.-based airline found it did not need as many of the $22 million aircraft as it had ordered.

On the first flight into Midland, smoking was prohibited but the champagne was flowing. Drinks will continue to be free on subsequent flights while smoking will continue to be banned, Muse officials said.

Like an expensive new automobile, the aircraft had a combined aura of good leather, designer carpet and freshly upholstered walls — all blue, white and sparkling.

"Our airline will keep this clean image," said Vice President D. Buck White. "The main reason for no smoking is cleanliness and the fact that it won't take four hours of labor to clean up an interior which will enable us

Braniff won't 'rise like Phoenix,' airline's chairman says

DALLAS (AP) — Braniff International is dead and hopeful employees should face facts and find new jobs, the airline's chairman says.

Howard D. Putnam says he's worried some former workers believe Braniff will "rise like the Phoenix."

"We need to get across to our employees that even if we fly again, the airline will be too small to hire them all back," Putnam told The Dallas Morning News.

"I talked with one of our flight attendants last night, and she was all smiles. She said, 'I'm not even going to go out and file for unemployment or find another job, because I know you will have this thing flying again soon.'"

But Putnam said he told her: "Go out and find another job."

Last week Braniff suspended all flights and filed for protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Act.

The Wednesday suspension of operations came one day before payday for most of Braniff's 9,500 workers. Employees also learned that the company had not paid health, life and disability insurance premiums for more than a month before it closed, and the insurance carrier retroactively canceled the policies.

The airline delivered a check Wednesday to Connecticut General Life Insurance Co. for the premiums that had been withheld from employees' pay through May 13, so claims made through May 1 would be honored.

The company could reorganize and fly again, but Putnam told The Dallas Morning News that any airline that emerges from bankruptcy would be much smaller than Braniff, have a different name, and make no international flights.

"The truth is Braniff died at 12:01 a.m. last Thursday," Putnam said. "The airline is dead."

"Braniff will never fly again," said Thomas Donavan, chief corporate lending officer at Marine Midland Bank in New York, a major Braniff creditor. "The world would be better off without Braniff."

Donavan said any plans to revive the airline were "poppycock."

Braniff officials have said the company's debts could exceed $1 billion.

Braniff, the nation's 10th largest airline, incurred net losses of more than $300 million during the three years ended Dec. 31, and lost another $43 million in the first quarter of 1982.

"The Braniff name cannot be used again, if we succeed in organizing another airline," Putnam said. "I know it is going to hurt some feelings, what I am saying. But with the things we have done — grounding airplanes, the bankruptcy, leaving passengers stranded — I don't see any way we could sell the name Braniff again."

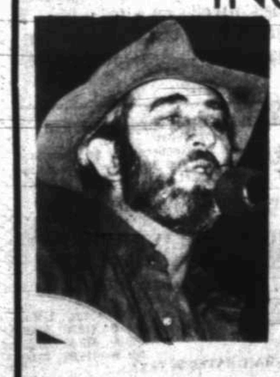

M. Philip Guthrie, Braniff's chief financial officer, said it will be at least 90 days before all the paperwork can be filed and an operating plan for a new airline can be developed.

But Putnam said success might still elude the company.

"We will also have to file a plan with the court that has an extremely high probability of making money or the court won't approve it.

"No airline has been in bankruptcy before, and we don't know if it is possible," Putnam added. "We may have to come back in a few months and say, 'We couldn't do it, folks.'"

Decision expected soon on U.N.'s mediation efforts

By The Associated Press

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is expected to decide within the next 48 hours whether to abandon U.N. diplomatic efforts to solve the Falklands crisis and order a British invasion to retake the South Atlantic islands, Britain's domestic news agency said today.

"Unless there is an unexpected breakthrough at the United Nations ...the invasion now appears certain," the Press Association said.

On Sunday, Britain's defense minister said Argentina had a week to reach a settlement at the United Nations or face an invasion of the islands.

The Press Association said Mrs. Thatcher and her advisors "are convinced that Argentina will never agree to withdraw" its forces from the Falklands until Britain agrees to surrender sovereignty over the islands. Britain has refused to discuss sovereignty as a precondition for withdrawal.

The news agency did not identify its sources for the report by its political and defense correspondents. But they are regularly briefed by Defense Ministry, Foreign Office and other government officials on a non-attributable basis.

The Argentines "are acting like someone playing a game of tennis and giving a precondition before the game that it is being played on the understanding that they win," Britain's U.N. Ambassador, Sir Anthony Parsons, told reporters at London's Heathrow airport today.

"It is not an acceptable basis to start a game and it is not an acceptable way to start negotiations. We should not prejudge the outcome of the talks," Parsons said before boarding a Concorde flight back to New York to resume the bargaining at the United Nations.

Parsons was recalled over the weekend to brief Mrs. Thatcher and her war cabinet. British press reports said Parsons was instructed to give Argentina another 48 hou to reach an agreement. After that, the papers said, Mrs. Thatcher would give the British fleet commander, Read Adm John Woodward, the go-ahead to retake the Falklands.

Britain tightened its Falkland Islands blockade Sunday with air raids on the Stanley airfield and two Argentine ships, forcing the crew of one to abandon it.

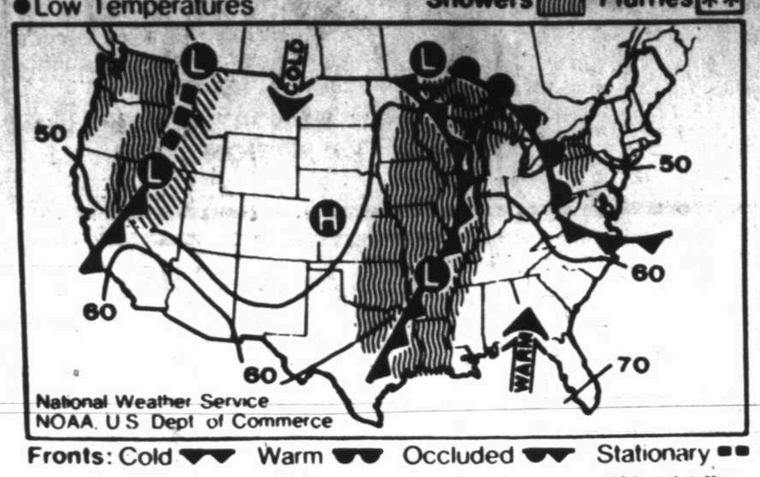

Military sources reported today that Britain planned to step up its attacks on Argentine-held airfields, radar installations and communications facilities on the islands in advance of an invasion.

Argentina accused Britain of mounting "indiscriminate attacks" on unarmed freighters carrying food, medicine and fuel to the people of the Falklands and said it would take "appropriate steps to protect the residents' legitimate rights."

Argentine Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez accused Britain of delaying the talks being held by U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuella to try to arrange a cease-fire and negotiations on the future of the South Atlantic islands. Costa Mendez said this would be a "difficult week" at the United Nations.

Dole concentrates on rescuing economy

By JIM DRINKARD

WASHINGTON (AP) — Easing into traffic, Sen. Bob Dole glanced in his rearview mirror and spied a network camera crew tracking him to a secret budget meeting. The finance chairman stepped on the gas, took evasive action, and lost the crew in the morning rush hour.

Dole chuckled later about the incident and the spotlight he has found himself in.

The 58-year-old Kansas Republican is projecting a new image today as a forger of compromise, a thoughtful power broker and a supporter of — but not apologist for — the Reagan White House.

"Bob has changed. He's a totally different individual. His views were highly parochial and provincial for a long time. ... He was hell on wheels on commies and everything else," says Norbert Dreiling, a former Kansas GOP chairman.

Early this month, the new Bob Dole helped engineer the Senate compromise that would strengthen the Voting Rights Act. When the White House announced that President Reagan would go along, Joseph Rauh Jr., the tireless liberal partisan, said of Dole: "He was superb. He got us the perfect bill."

He is urging a minimum tax on corporations and upper-income individuals, and has said he thinks the defense budget should be pared.

DOLE, FIRST elected to the Senate in 1968, is using his national standing to try to prod the Reagan administration into accepting what he believes is a more realistic economic program. He was a leading member of the "Gang of 17" that failed to forge a budget compromise between Congress and the White House.

"We're just going to limp along here the rest of the year with high interest rates and big deficits," he said in an interview. "It's going to put a lot of people out of work, put a lot of farmers and business people in more trouble than they're in. And it's also going to be a political disaster."

Much of Dole's growing influence came with the chairmanship of the Senate Finance Committee, which he assumed when Ronald Reagan swept into power and the Republicans won control of the Senate in January 1981.

"I think he's the most effective committee chairman in the Senate," said Sen. Russell Long, D-La., Dole's predecessor.

Dole, his right arm immobilized by machine-gun fire during World War II, was introduced to politics at age 26 with his election to the Kansas Legislature and a four-year tenure as prosecutor in his native Russell County.

His early political mentor, McDill Boyd, publisher of a Phillipsburg, Kan., weekly newspaper, tells of their first meeting:

"I was driving through Russell on my way home one night around midnight, and I saw a light on in the courthouse. I thought that's kind of unusual, for somebody to be working this late. So I stopped and walked in, and there was a guy working on his file cards, getting ready to run for Congress. I made up my mind then that the man had something special."

DOLE WAS elected to the House in 1960 and served four terms. Dreiling, now an attorney in the county adjacent to Dole's home, recalls Dole in those days.

"He could treat anyone with contempt out of hand, and he did it with humor," he said. "It was a mean, a vicious humor in his earlier days — not even humor, it was mean sarcasm."

That streak later got Dole into trouble when he became self-appointed apologist for President Nixon during the Vietnam War, Republican national chairman during the Watergate scandal and the losing vice-presidential candidate on the Ford ticket in 1976.

In the 1976 campaign, Dole traveled the nation, attacking the Democrats while Gerald Ford remained aloof in the White House. That role prompted fellow GOP Sen. William Saxbe of Ohio to call him "a hatchet man" who "couldn't sell beer on a troop ship."

Four years later, Dole was little more than an also-ran in the Republican presidential primaries. His campaign was plagued by staff discontent, financial problems and the candidate's time-consuming work on the oil windfall profits tax law.

But Dole bounced back.

"He's got a certain amount of lucky streak in him," Dreiling said. "But he's one guy who will work 24 hours a day for what he believes in. When everybody else goes home, Dole's willing to pay the price."

THOSE WHO have known Dole since his county prosecutor days say he has become more effective since he subdued his right-wing views and softened his biting wit. Some say the turning point was a narrow brush with defeat in a bitterly fought 1974 election against Democrat Bill Roy. Others cite the influence of Elizabeth Hanford Dole, whom he married in 1975.

Dole admits that he is interested in another run at the presidency in 1984, "but I'm not lying awake nights thinking about it. I don't drive by the White House every morning and think, 'Well, I may be there in '85.'"

His political action committee, Campaign America, soon will begin raising money for Republican Senate candidates in this fall's elections and for Dole's travels as he tests the presidential waters. But all of that depends on whether Reagan seeks a second term, the senator said.

For now, Dole is concentrating on rescuing the economy and keeping the GOP from losing the political gains it made in 1980. Much of the job falls to him because of the broad jurisdiction of the Finance Committee.

"Whether it's tuition tax credits or enterprise zones, or whether it's the Caribbean Basin initiative or this big budget compromise or new federalism, or whether it's trade with Japan or whatever, it all comes to our committee," Dole said, noting that perhaps as much as 70 percent of the federal budget package will be funneled through his committee and its House counterpart, the Ways and Means Committee.

But Dole sees image problems for the Republican Party, "that the Reagan administration has an image of too much for the rich and not enough for the poor," Long said. "He wants to have his own image."

Dole is worried that the GOP base is being eroded by Reagan administration policies, and his attacks on new tax rules that allow corporations to buy tax breaks, along with his proposals for a minimum tax on corporations and a closing of tax loopholes reflect that concern.

"I THINK very honestly the administration, rightly or wrongly, is perceived to be against poor people, or black people or Hispanics," he said. "I think we have lost some ground, and that shouldn't happen.

"I keep saying instead of citing some poor guy in a leg brace who might be ripping off some disability claim, why don't you go after some physician or somebody who, through the tax system or Medicare, is driving around in a Mercedes-Benz," he said.

Texas among fastest growing states

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 1980s are following the trend of the 1970s, with America's population growth concentrating in sunny southern and western states, according to a new Census report.

Just three Sunbelt states — California, Florida and Texas — accounted for more than half the growth in the 15 months following the 1980 census.

The new Census Bureau population estimates for July 1, 1981, released Sunday, show a nationwide increase of 2.8 million people. Of that, 2.6 million was recorded in the South and West, the bureau reported.

During the 15 months after the national head count, the fastest growing states were Nevada, Florida, Wyoming, Utah and Texas. These were also among the big gainers of the 1970s.

Meanwhile, Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, Iowa, South Dakota and the District of Columbia lost population.

Overall, the nation had a growth rate of 1 percent, a bit below the 1.1 percent annual rate of the 1970s.

The Sunbelt reflected that decline in the growth rate. The annual growth rate of the South during that 15 months was 1.7 percent, down from 1.8 percent in the 1970s. And in the West it was 1.8 percent, down from 2.1 percent annually in the previous decade.

In the Northeast, however, growth in the 15 months was at a rate of 0.3 percent per year, an improvement over no net gain during the 1970s. But the rate in the North Central states was a mere 0.1 percent, down from 0.4 percent the previous decade.

Here is a rundown of the states, their estimated population as of July 1, 1981, and the percentage change between the 1980 Census and that date:

New England:

Maine, 1,133,000, up 0.7 percent; New Hampshire, 936,000, up 1.6 percent; Vermont, 516,000, up 0.8 percent; Massachusetts, 5,773,000, up 0.6 percent; Rhode Island, 953,000, up 0.6 percent; Connecticut, 3,134,000, up 0.8 percent.

Middle Atlantic:

New York, 17,602,000, up 0.3 percent; New Jersey, 7,404,000, up 0.5 percent; Pennsylvania, 11,871,000, change less than 0.05 percent.

East North Central:

Ohio, 10,781,000, down 0.2 percent; Indiana, 5,489,000, down 0.4 percent; Illinois, 11,462,000, up 0.4 percent; Michigan, 9,204,000, down 0.6 percent; Wisconsin, 4,742,000, up 0.8 percent.

West North Central:

Minnesota, 4,094,000, up 0.4 percent; Iowa, 2,899,000, down 0.5 percent; Missouri, 4,941,000, up 0.5 percent; North Dakota, 658,000, up 0.9 percent; South Dakota, 686,000, down 0.7 percent; Nebraska, 1,577,000, up 0.4 percent; Kansas, 2,383,000, up 0.8 percnet.

South Atlantic:

Delaware, 598,000, up 0.5 percent; Maryland, 4,263,000, up 1.1 percent; District of Columbia, 631,000, down 1.1 percent; Virginia, 5,430,000, up 1.6 percent; West Virginia, 1,952,000, up 0.1 percent; North Carolina, 5,953,000, up 1.3 percent; South Carolina, 3,167,000, up 1.5 percent; Georgia, 5,574,000, up 2.0 percent; Florida, 10,183,000, up 4.5 percent.

East South Central:

Kentucky, 3,662,000, change less than 0.05 percent; Tennessee, 4,612,000, up 0.5 percent; Alabama, 3,917,000, up 0.7 percent; Mississippi, 2,531,000, up 0.4 percent

West South Central:

Arkansas, 2,296,000, up 0.4 percent; Louisiana, 4,308,000, up 2.5 percent; Oklahoma, 3,100,000, up 2.5 percent; Texas, 14,766,000, up 3.8 percent.

Mildland weather should be fair, warm

After days of predicted thunderstorms, tonight through Tuesday should be partly cloudy and mild, becoming fair with warmer temperatures.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, tonight's low should be in the upper 50s with partly cloudy skies. Winds are expected to be variable at 5-10 mph.

Tuesday's forecast of fair and warmer should kick the mercury into the upper 80s with southeast winds 10-15 mph.

Sunday's high of 91 was hot, but not as warm as the record high of 100 set in 1946. The overnight low of 63 did not come close to the record low of 47 set in 1932.

Officers hope autopsy reveals cause

ODESSA — Ector County Sheriff's Department investigators are hoping an autopsy will reveal the cause of death of a badly decomposed body found on rangeland near here early Saturday afternoon.

The man has been identified as Leon Thomas Barnett, 59, of Denver City, whose whereabouts were unknown until two men "witching" for water stumbled onto his body.

Capt. Gene Kloss said the two men found the body in a pasture along West County Road just outside Odessa about 12:15 p.m. Saturday. Investigators estimate the body had been at that site four to five months.

Capt. Kloss talked with Denver City's chief of police who indicated Barnett had left Denver City Oct. 29, 1981, and had not been heard from since.

Barnett was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Charles Gee. The body was taken to Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home.

Search of car reveals drugs, gun

Two men were booked into Midland City Jail early Sunday morning after being stopped on a traffic violation. The subsequent search of their vehicle revealed a large amount of what was believed to be illicit drugs and various paraphernalia.

A police officer reported he saw the vehicle driving in the 3800 block of North Spruce Road with its bright headlights on. The officer said he stopped the car and asked its two occupants — ages 23 and 19 — to step out.

While searching the car's interior the officer found a tin containing a substance believed to be marijuana under the driver's seat. The trunk was then opened, revealing a large amount of pills, a substance believed to be marijuana, $117.94 in change, cigarette papers, plastic bags, a homemade "bong" pipe and a .38-caliber pistol and bullets.

The two men were booked into city jail and charges were to be filed later today.

MHS band to present spring concert

Midland High School band will present its spring concert at 6 p.m. Tuesday in the MHS Auditorium.

It will feature the San Jacinto Junior High beginning and advanced bands, directed by Maria Weatherl, starting at 6 p.m.

The Midland Freshman Band, directed by Melvin Scott, will follow at 7 p.m.

Following that will be the MHS symphonic band, directed by Chuck Hazlewood. The final band to perform will be the MHS honor band, directed by Clyde Wilson.

A series of light, popular music will be performed by all groups. The Midland Freshman and MHS honor band recently won sweepstakes in the UIL contest. The San Jacinto band won the first division awards in concert and sightreading.

The concert is free and the public is invited. A reception in the school cafeteria will follow the concert.

Correction

While Upton County voters are primed to march to the polls Tuesday in a controversial $19.5 million bond issue to finance a water system for Rankin and McCamey, opponent Sam Holiman is wagering that the issue will be defeated.

Holiman, president of the Upton County Landowners Association, in Sunday's Reporter-Telegram explained his reasons for campaigning against the proposal. However, a typographic error — an intended "now" became a "not" — indicated that Holiman was confident the issue would be defeated; that is not the case.

The context of the story indicated that Holiman is certain that the bond issue will fail.

The bond issue was called by the Upton County Water District, which was created in 1977.

to pass that savings along to our customers."

White added that round trip fares will be competitive with Southwest Airlines, Muse's major competitor, and special fares on other airlines. He did point out that one-way fares will cost $5 more on Muse than on Southwest but added that first-class service and innovative ideas will more than make up for the additional one-way fare.

The ideas that White hopes will make Muse more attractive to passengers are seat assignments, boarding passes that are automatically voided and counted with a newly-developed processor so that there will be no last-minute counts or mistakes in number of passengers to seats. Also, seats are three abreast on one side of the aircraft but only two abreast on the other side.

Flight attendants clad in simple blue skirts and print blouses are far from the image that Lamar Muse created by dressing his stewardesses in skin tight shorts and white boots when he was president of Southwest Airlines in the early 1970s. The appeal now is designed to reach the sophisticated traveler.

Muse Air has bowed to the times and 50 percent of employees are female and all employees are cross-trained to perform all jobs.

When your telephone call to Muse Air is placed on hold, it is Lamar Muse's voice rather than a throaty female's who says, "Please don't hang up." In the background is the William Tell overture, better known as the Lone Ranger music.

Only the conservative part of the former Muse image survives: Banners at Love Field ticket counters proclaim, "Support Free Enterprise, Fly Muse Air," with no cheesecake attached; outlined in the red, white and blue of the American flag.

State officials unveil plan to accept more prisoners

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — State officials who suspended admissions to Texas prisons and paroled about 600 inmates to ease overcrowding prepared to unveil their plan to accept new inmates.

However, the officials said they don't expect to admit many prisoners immediately.

"The plan for controlled admissions hasn't been totally worked out yet," said Texas Department of Corrections spokesman Rick Hartley. "But we hope to be getting in touch with the sheriffs today and letting them know what the situation is."

"But I don't see a big flood of prisoners coming in, because we have to evaluate our space, look at the numbers and see what's available," Hartley said.

Because of a court order to stop overcrowding, the TDC on May 10 began refusing to admit new prisoners from county jails.

Officials had released about 600 inmates from Thursday through Sunday to make room for new prisoners, Hartley said.

Under consideration as a possible plan for readmitting prisoners is a proposal to accept prisoners first from county jails that were hit hardest by the admission ban, he said.

Like the state prison system, county jails in Harris, El Paso, Bexar, Travis, Smith and Victoria counties are under federal court order to end overcrowding.

Prosecutors challenge doctor's conclusion Hinckley mentally ill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A psychiatrist's conclusion that John W. Hinckley Jr. was mentally ill when he shot the president faced a renewed challenge today by federal prosecutors.

Dr. William T. Carpenter Jr. was returning to the witness stand for a second day of intense cross-examination by Assistant U.S. Attorney Roger M. Adelman.

Carpenter told jurors at Hinckley's trial Friday that the defendant was controlled by an inner world of fantasy at the time of the March 30, 1981 shooting. The 26-year-old defendant was unable to appreciate the wrongfulness of his conduct, the doctor said.

When Adelman began his cross-examination Friday, he attacked the techniques used by the psychiatrist in forming his conclusion.

The prosecutor suggested that the University of Maryland doctor was looking for mental illness when he first examined Hinckley two months after he shot Reagan.

"You were trying to find evidence that Mr. Hinckley was mentally ill?" Adelman asked, jabbing his finger at Carpenter.

"The whole point of the evaluation is to determine whether mental illness is present," then to form a diagnosis, said Carpenter. "I don't know if it was obvious to Mr. Hinckley that he wanted to be found sane or insane."

Carpenter was asked why he didn't interview witnesses to the shooting and doctors who examined Hinckley after the shooting. He replied that he was "not then and not now concerned that I don't have the reports of witnesses."

Christian school administrator quits

Arnold Evans, administrator of Midland Christian School, 2001 Culver St., announced his resignation during a faculty-staff meeting at 4 p.m. today.

Evans, who has been with the private school in Midland for the past three years, has accepted a position as assistant director of supervision with the Christian School of Beaumont in Beaumont.

Evans' wife, Shirley, who has been office manager for the past 1½ years during the "Vision for the '80s Campaign" at Midland Christian School, will be working as special assistant to the executive director at the Christian School of Beaumont.

Evans will report to his new position July 1 while Mrs. Evans is scheduled to begin Aug. 1.

Odessan charged in attempted murder

ODESSA — A 33-year-old Odessa man remained in Ector County Jail this morning charged with attempted murder in connection with the shooting of another Odessan.

Troy Donald Cottrell was arrested at 11108 Helm St. about 12:40 a.m. Sunday by Ector County Sheriff's Department deputies who responded to the scene of a shooting.

Kenneth Reed of 325 Cedar Creek had been shot one time in the back, a sheriff's department spokesman said. Reports indicated five shots had been fired.

The spokesman said the shooting apparently occurred when Reed arrived at the address with a woman identified as Cottrell's ex-wife.

Reed remained in critical condition this morning at Medical Center Hospital.

Clark struggles for place in Canadian politics

By CHARLES CAMPBELL

TORONTO (AP) — Joe Clark is fighting to continue as leader of Canada's resurgent Progressive Conservative Party, but fellow Tories think he may not be able to live down his disastrous brief tenure as prime minister.

The Conservatives have built up a comfortable 10-point lead in the polls over Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau's Liberals, whose government is struggling with high interest rates, inflation, unemployment and the sagging Canadian dollar.

But Clark has not been able to sit back and enjoy the political prosperity. Even his staunch supporters worry that his image problem may be irreversible.

"I think Clark was a very good prime minister, but that's not the way he was perceived," said Sinclair Stevens, who was a member of Clark's cabinet, in an interview. "We have to get our leader's image into more of a winning image. Whether Clark is able to do that I don't know."

Tory members of Parliament and other party leaders from around the country held a weekend policy conference in Toronto. The party leadership was not on the agenda, but the matter kept cropping up in corridor conversations.

Clark was forced by the death of his father to miss all but the closing brunch. He got a warm welcome Sunday morning from the 900 delegates, including even those who want to dump him.

After a tearful tribute to his father, he called on his party to get ready to take its program to the country. He said aggressive Conservative tactics in Parliament have made Canadians well aware of the party's opposition to Trudeau's unpopular policies.

"Now Canadians want to know what we stand for, what changes we want to bring," he said. "We're here to form a government."

Under Clark's leadership, the Conservatives defeated the Liberals and ousted Trudeau in 1979. But the Tories did not win a majority in the House of Commons, Clark failed to provide strong, assured leadership, and his government fell after nine months when it tried to raise the gasoline tax 18 cents a gallon.

Now the Liberals are taking their lumps. A dismal economy, with 9.6 percent unemployment and inflation over 12 percent, has soured the public.

"We couldn't lose today," said Otto Jelinek, a Tory member of Parliament from Halton, Ontario. "The problem is that the election isn't being held today, and Mr. Trudeau knows it."

The Liberal leader has two more years in which to call an election.

Clark defeated one attempt to elect a new party leader in February 1981. But that didn't stop Tory fears that the public considers him a loser. Many Conservatives expect him to put the party leader's post up for grabs and settle the matter at the next party conference, scheduled for January.

There are no declared challengers yet and won't be until the issue is formally opened. But a nationwide speaking tour by Montreal businessman Brian Mulroney, one of those who lost to Clark in the last leadership fight in 1976, was widely regarded as the beginning of Mulroney's new candidacy.

"You can't imagine what a tremendously crushing experience it was for Conservatives to have won office and have it snatched away again," said Perrin Beatty, another member of Clark's short-lived cabinet. "They want to win so much they can taste it."

When it comes to assessing Clark as party leader, Beatty added, "the only question they ask is, 'Can he win?' "

Jorge Blanco, 55, claims Dominican presidency

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — Government candidate Salvador Jorge Blanco claimed the Dominican Republic's presidency today on the basis of a substantial early lead after a big voter turnout.

Jorge Blanco, a 55-year-old left-of-center senator from President Antonio Guzman's Dominican Revolutionary Party, was running stronger than Guzman did four years ago.

Their party also was leading in races for the House and Senate.

In party primaries, Jorge Blanco was the candidate of the government party's left wing and opposed Guzman's centrist faction. But after the preliminaries were over, he picked up support from a number of more conservative businessmen and bankers. He also promised no radical changes in foreign policy — specifically not to reopen relations with Cuba.

Returns from 655 of the 5,611 polling places gave Jorge Blanco had 95,242 votes, or 47.95 percent: former President Joaquin Balaguer, 75, of the right-wing Reformist Party, 66,991 votes or 33.72 percent, and former President Juan Bosch, the leftist who was deposed in 1963, 22,087 votes or 11.12 percent.

Five other candidates ran far behind.

The balloting Sunday was conducted in an atmosphere of calm unmatched in the recent turbulent history of this country of 5.6 million people who emerged from a 30-year dictatorship in 1961 and spent the next 20 years in an often painful transition to fragile democracy.

In recent weeks, however, there were sporadic street clashes in which nine people were killed and about 100 injured.

Election officials predicted the turnout might approach 90 percent of the 2.6 million voters. People waited patiently in lines that stretch for blocks. In the 1978 election, the turnout was about 85 percent.

The military, which four years ago tried to stop the vote count when Guzman started winning, was conspicuously absent from the streets of the capital. In the last four years, Guzman rearranged the military leadership, and this time the commanders pledged to remain neutral.

It was the fifth election in the Dominican Republic since a civil war following Bosch's ouster and U.S. intervention in 1965. But it was the first conducted in conditions approaching those normal for a democracy.

In 1966, Balaguer won while foreign troops were still on the island. He was re-elected in 1970 and 1974, but his opponents charged the voting was rigged and boycotted the election. In 1976, Guzman was allowed to win only after the United States and other countries put pressure on the generals.

"Today we have definitively consolidated democracy in the Dominican Republic," said Guzman.

"Nothing and nobody will be able to stop the people from having their election," said Manuel Garcia Lizardo, president of the Central Elections Board.

U.S. Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md, who said he came to observe the elections "very informally," said the peaceful scene was "heartening." He said the peaceful election was "a big step down the road."

The burned-out hulk of a government pickup truck provides a grim reminder of the student protest and takeover of ther Hermanos Escobar agricultural school in Ciudad Juarez, Mexico. Sunday, student play soccer in the background. About 24 hours earlier, they free the director of the school and relinquished control of 15 million insects.

Students threaten further action

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — Protesting students who freed 15 million insects and their school director after five days in captivity say they may strike out again if the government fails to negotiate with them.

The students held to their declared "truce" Sunday, but said they might take further action by tonight if the government does not contact them to begin negotiations on financial help for the school.

"We can take drastic measures," student leader Fernando Reyes, 19, said through an interpreter. "But we haven't yet decided what to do next."

The students on Saturday abandoned a laboratory where the larvae of 15 million beneficial insects are kept and freed school director Rigoberto Delgado Perez. They also cleared out of three government agriculture department offices they had occupied.

After the students left, between 500 and 800 soldiers and police surrounded the school and retrieved seven government trucks the students had captured. Students had burned two trucks Thursday in protest.

The students released Delgado before noon Saturday, saying he was being made a martyr and was harming their cause.

Meanwhile, the students received promises from Juarez Mayor Jose Reyes Estrada and local television personality Arnoldo Cabado that they would try to get federal agriculture officials to negotiate today. The men pledged their support after the students ended the five-day siege.

The protesters say the federal agriculture department reneged on an agreement that would have provided $4.9 million in cash and farm equipment to the Hermanos Escobar agriculture school. They rejected an offer of about $580,000 the government made after the demonstrations began.

Syria strengthens positions against possible Israeli attack

MACHGHARA, Lebanon (AP) — With Israeli forces massed on the border with southern Lebanon, Syria has begun strengthening its positions in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley in a bid to block a possible Israeli end-run through Lebanon into Syria.

"If the Israelis attack us we will defend ourselves and everyone should consider that it will not be a picnic for Israel. They will pay heavily," said a Syrian official in Damascus.

The official would give no details of the Syrian buildup at the mouth of the Beeka Valley, about 20 miles north of the Israeli-Lebanese border.

"We are strengthening our army and positions because we have to be alert," said the official, who spoke on condition that his name not be used.

Western reporters who toured the area late last week saw new Soviet-built T-62 tanks dug in along one of the two main roads leading from Israel to the Bekaa Valley, the strategic pass between Lebanon and Syrian around the flank of Mount Hermon, a peak that straddles the Israeli, Lebanese and Syrian frontiers.

The reporters also saw anti-aircraft batteries and troop transports in freshly dug positions in the hills to the north and east of this town, 25 miles southeast of Beirut, as well as new, though still unmanned positions guarding the second road into the valley from the Israeli frontier.

Yugoslavia's Parliament endorses new government headed by woman

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — A new government, headed by a woman for the first time, has been endorsed by Yugoslavia's Parliament.

Milka Planinc, 57, who has been head of the Communist Party in the southern republic of Croatia, was approved as prime mininster in a joint session Sunday of the Federal Assembly, which comprises a Federal Chamber and a Chamber of Republics and Provinces.

Among her 28 Cabinet appointees are Lazar Mojsov, foreign secretary; Stane Dolanc, interior secretary and Adm. Branko Mamula, defense secretary.

She succeeds Veselin Djuranovic, who had been appointed to succeed Dzemal Bijedic after his death in 1977 and was re-elected by the Assembly in 1978.

Ms. Planinc's official title is president of the Federal Executive Council.

Name your poison: Researchers say some eye surgery avoidable with botulism injections

By WARREN E. LEARY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Researchers have developed a way to use a little bit of poison to help people avoid expensive and uncomfortable eye surgery.

Dr. Alan B. Scott of San Francisco said Sunday that his research group's method for treating crossed or weak eyes involves injecting tiny amounts of botulism poison into optic muscles to correct these defects without surgery.

Scott said the treatment has corrected eye deviations stemming from muscle imbalances in most of the 90 patients, between the ages of 3 and 80, tested over the past four years in an experimental trial.

The technique could become a considerably cheaper alternative to the surgery traditionally used to correct the problems and could ultimately replace one-third of these procedures, Scott told a seminar sponsored by Research to Prevent Blindness, a voluntary national eye research group.

"We don't yet know the relative value of the treatment compared to surgery because no one has conducted this type of trial yet," Scott said in an interview.

"But while this approach won't replace all surgery, we think it will be very useful in many cases — sometimes in conjunction with surgery," he continued.

Scott and colleagues at The Smith-Kettlewell Institute of Visual Sciences developed the treatment as an outpatient alternative to surgery and hospitalization.

Each year doctors perform about 68,000 eye operations, at a cost of between $2,000 to $3,000 each, to correct muscle imbalances. Although future cost of the non-surgical treatment is uncertain, Scott estimated it could be "several hundreds of dollars" by comparison.

The problem is formally called strabismus, a condition in which some eye muscles are too strong in relation to others positioning the eyeball.

An estimated 4 percent of the population is either born with or develops varying degrees of strabismus during the first six years of life, making it one of the most important causes of visual impairment in children, experts say.

The most common form of the defect is one or both eyes converging inward toward the nose — crossed eyes — because the inner muscles are so much stronger than the counterbalancing outer muscles. The condition also is seen in eyes pointing outward, and, less commonly, up or down in the vertical plane.

In surgery, doctors tighten or loosen muscles attached to the eyeball to correct the imbalance, a procedure that can lead to scarring, irritation and surgical complications, Scott said.

With the new treatment, doctors first deaden the eye with anesthetic drops and then inject a small drop of a derivative of botulism A toxin into the stronger muscle. This toxin is commonly associated with food poisoning.

The toxin works by temporarily blocking nerve signals to the muscle that is working too hard, causing it to loosen up and stretch out.

Public hospitals face 'unemployment crisis'

BOSTON (AP) — Patients could die outside emergency room doors if financially troubled public hospitals have to start refusing to care for unemployed workers who have lost their health insurance, a hospital official says.

"We are not far from health riots," said Larry Sage, president of the National Association of Public Hospitals. He was interviewed by the Boston Sunday Globe after a meeting of the association in Boston.

"If public hospitals reach the point where they have to refuse to accept emergency patients, then it's fairly obvious what's going to happen. Once the first 10 patients show up at closed emergency room doors and die, then something's going to blow."

David Rosenbloom, Boston's commissioner of health and hospitals, said the crisis is the result of Medicaid cuts and unemployment that eliminates people's health insurance.

Rosenbloom also said the economy is forcing many low-income workers to drop company health insurance because they cannot afford their share of premiums.

Madeline Bohman, executive director of New York's Bellevue Hospital, said patients in New York City have died because ambulances had to travel extra distance getting victims to Bellevue after they were denied admission by private hospitals.

One person killed in two-car accident

ANDREWS — Two cars collided on Texas 176 near here Sunday afternoon after one of the vehicles lost a rear tire.

The resulting collision killed one Las Cruces, N.M., woman and injured four other people, according to Department of Public Safety investigators.

Officers said Elaine Hulan of Hobbs, N.M., was eastbound on Texas 176 at 12:20 p.m. when her vehicle lost its right rear wheel. Seconds after that, a westbound car pulling a trailer and driven by John Rodgers, 71, of Las Cruces struck the Hulan vehicle broadside, investigators said.

Killed in the collision was a passenger in Rodgers' vehicle, Mary Rodgers of Las Cruces, but another passenger in that car, 3-year-old Joshua Alberson of Las Cruces, sustained only minor injuries and is reported in good condition in Permian General Hospital in Andrews. Rodgers sustained a broken leg in the crash and also is hospitalized at Permian General.

Ms. Hulan, 37, suffered a broken arm and is hospitalized in a Hobbs, N.M., hospital. Also injured in Ms. Hulan's vehicle was Rhonda Carrasco, 30, of Hobbs who is in serious condition in a Hobbs hospital where she is being treated for head injuries.

Ms. Rodgers was pronounced dead at the scene of the crash 4.3 miles west of Andrews by Judge Jay Williams of Andrews.

Budget brawl expands to full Senate, House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Divisions within the ranks of both Republicans and Democrats promise stormy fights on Capitol Hill this week as the 1983 budget is taken up by the full Senate and House.

The Republican-controlled Senate acts first, resuming consideration today of a $779.1 billion 1983 budget blueprint drafted by the GOP majority on the Senate Budget Committee and embraced by President Reagan. It includes a controversial provision for $40 billion in unspecified savings from the Social Security system over three years.

A $780.5 billion package fashioned by the Democratic majority on the House Budget Committee goes to the full House on Friday. It leaves Social Security untouched and calls for $52 billion more in taxes and $25 billion less in military spending than the Senate plan over three years.

Both plans project 1983 deficits of just over $100 billion.

In remarks prepared for delivery on the Senate floor today, Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., told his colleagues that the election-year decisions he is asking them to make are unpleasant but, nonetheless, must be made.

"You cannot hide from the precarious nature of our national economy now and the prospects for even more serious problems in the future, unless we act boldly," Domenici said.

MOVING UP TO ELECTRONICS
This is the turning point.

Royal 5010
Advanced Electronic Typewriter

Two-line correcting memory for more productive typing

The new Royal 5010 electronic typewriter shifts the burden of typing to the typewriter, where it belongs. An advanced microprocessor-controlled correcting memory has a 132-character capacity. Two full lines, including programmed functions such as tabs, carrier returns and backspaces, can be corrected automatically.

The Power of Memory
The memory does practically everything... automatically aligns columns, selects one of the three type pitches plus proportional spacing, and sets tab stops, impression control, margins and line spacing.

72-Hour Retention
Once functions are programmed through the electronic keyboard, the memory stores them as long as 72 hours.

Print-Wheel Quiet
Interchangeable print wheels create distinctive-looking printwork. Whisper-quiet, too!

Keeps Pace With the Fastest Typist
A keyboard memory, which stores the last 16 characters and prints them in correct order, allows the 5010 to keep pace with the fastest typist, without jamming or flicking.

Put the Turning Point to work in your office, today! Advanced electronics makes it a smarter, faster, quieter, far more productive typewriter.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, May 18, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: His Holiness Pope John Paul II, baseball superstar Reggie Jackson and singer/entertainer Perry Como were born on this date. Also sharing this birthday with you: former baseball defensive ace, Baltimore's Brooks Robinson. In the months ahead, you find it much easier to attain key goals. Team spirit is a contributing factor. Be sure to give credit where it is due. Additional income helps relieve the tension that has affected your personal life lately. A love match that has had its ups and downs becomes more rewarding. Strong-willed and outspoken, you sometimes go too far. Curb your tongue and temper.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): All work and no play could reduce work productivity by making you bored with what you are doing. Romance needs a gentle nudge. Suprise an older relative with a phone call.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Someone you trust may be trying to deceive you. Stay on your toes! Your creative abilities and past experiences give you the upper hand in business.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your plans so smoothly. A romantic overture is music to you ears. Gossip could leave mate feeling jealous. Personal relationship requires tender loving care.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are now asked to participate in a charitable effort. A sympathetic friend helps you fulfill a personal desire. You fantasize about the past.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Self-improvement activities build your confidence. Join a local political club. Exercise your imagination with artistic projects or friendly intellectual contests.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your intuition tells you how to deal with difficult people. A romantic interlude proves both exciting and soothing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You may be indulging in wishful thinking about the future. Put some practical ideas into action. Your social life can be productive as well as pleasurable.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A business venture should be profitable. Rely on a friend or family member for good advice. Private credit dealings are favored. Take the initiative in romance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The employment picture brightens for those who are job-hunting. Member of opposite sex makes you more conscious of your appearance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Friends arrive with encouraging news. A promotion or raise is possible. Play your hunches where romance is concerned. Luck is on your side.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You gain new freedom of thought and action and are able to advance your loved ones' interests. Ignore those individuals who make unreasonable demands.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Follow up on a creative idea and you will be able to resolve a business misunderstanding. A new plan's benefits outweigh its drawbacks.

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKQ105 ♡AJ3 ◇8 ♣AK65
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	3 ◇	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—Proceed with caution. Partner might have a subminimum two-over-one response with long diamonds, so you have a potential misfit. Still, your hand is too strong to stop short of game, and slam is still a distinct possibility—if partner has no more than seven diamonds to the K-Q-J, you have reasonable play. The best way to probe is to complete the description of your hand with a bid of three hearts.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠107 ♡AJ8 ◇K9863 ♣KJ9
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Pass	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—In the balancing seat you can make a takeout double with fewer high cards than in the immediate seat, and that is the action we would choose. It is superior to a bid of two diamonds because it does not limit partner's options, and permits you to punish the opposition should partner have a trump stack.

Q.3—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K754 ♡J10632 ◇74 ♣95
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	2 ♠	Pass	Pass
Dble	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Thus far, you have promised partner nothing when, in fact, you have quite a useful hand. You have four-card support headed by the king for partner's second suit, and ruffing values in the minors. We would not quibble with an aggressive jump to four spades, but our preference is to give partner a little leeway by only raising to three spades.

Q.4—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q1062 ♡853 ◇KQ965 ♣6
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
2 ♡	2 ♠	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—In view of West's demand opening bid and the fact that he or his partner must be short in spades, obviously this is their hand. Therefore, you should make it as difficult as possible for the opponents to get together. Bid four spades, not because you expect to make it, but because you are depriving the opponents of valuable bidding space and are forcing them to guess at a high level.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J1054 ♡J98762 ◇6 ♣83
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Dble	2 ♠	?

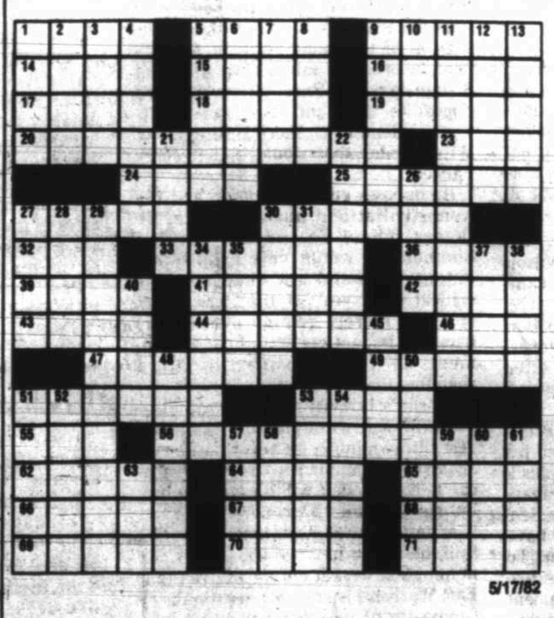

What action do you take?
A.—Bid three hearts. It might seem rash to advocate a free bid with only two high-card points, and at the three-level to boot, but consider the auction. Partner is marked with heart support and at most a singleton spade, so the hands should fit well. Failure to compete now could mean the loss of a partscore, or even a game should partner have the right values.

Q.6—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠74 ♡AKQJ106 ◇KQJ105
What is your opening bid?
A.—Although you have game in hand, this is not the hand for a demand opening bid. It lacks the high-card requirements. For instance, if partner has something like the ace-king of clubs and queen of spades, he will, undoubtedly, think that he has a good hand and you could get too high. Open one heart—it is virtually impossible that everyone will pass. You can convey your strength with a jump in diamonds at your next turn.

An ever-present danger

If the relative quiet of the past few months lulled anyone into the belief that highly-visible public figures have somehow become safer, that belief should have been shattered by the attempts in recent days on the life of Pope John Paul II and the threat on the life of President Ronald Reagan.

Ironically, these incidents came just about a year from the time each was critically injured by would-be assassins and re-emphasized the inescapable fact that all our public officials risk their lives every time they make a public appearance. Hand-in-hand with that fact goes the responsibility for American citizens to help when possible those officers charged with protecting officials.

In the most recent attempts Pope John Paul II was rushed by a man in clerical garb and carrying a bayonet. That incident occurred during a religious service at the Shrine of Fatima in central Portugal. The man, who identified himself as a priest, has been charged with attempted murder. The pope was uninjured.

A Rock Island man was hospitalized to undergo a mental examination Wednesday after he allegedly threatened President Reagan, according to police officials. The man, identified as Lewis A. Dillworth, reportedly called a long-distance operator and asked for the White House. He then started complaining about the president's proposed Social Security cuts and threatened to kill Reagan.

The man was arrested by police after the operator connected the call to an emergency police dispatch system.

It is a sad fact of modern life that often the very individuals millions respect are the ones who lives are threatened, endangered and sometimes lost in the name of service. That is the regrettable part of an open society, but a part that must be largely overlooked in order to achieve the vastly important factor of visibility of national and religious leaders.

Unless and until a better system can be devised through which our public officials can communicate with and touch the public — without the public touching them — it will be a danger we all will have to endure. The best that can be hoped is that the injury and death — that already have brushed each of these men — will not come to pass and that violence of this type will one day subside.

It is, we are afraid, a want hope.

Influencing the ratings

There may never be a conclusive end to the debate over how the violence depicted on television affects the behavior of children and adolescents. Even the most careful studies are open to criticism of their methodology, possible bias, and interpretation of data.

Still, those who argue that violence on television incites heightened aggression in young people seem to be winning gradually on points. The latest endorsement for this critical view of television's influence comes from no less a prestigious organization than the National Institute of Mental Health.

In a report released last week, the government-funded institute concluded that there is "overwhelming" evidence that violence on television leads to aggressive behavior by children and teenagers.

The report, based on an extensive review of several hundred research studies conducted during the 1970s, is an update of a 1972 Surgeon General's report that came to similar conclusions.

Defining the dimensions of this problem is difficult enough. Deciding what to do about it is even tougher.

Government censorship would be undesirable for obvious reasons even assuming the First Amendment could somehow be construed to allow bureaucrats to decide what should be shown on television.

Handing over control of the airwaves to self-appointed censors — the Moral Majority types or the anti-violence crusaders — is likewise undesirable, and for the same self-evident reasons. Freedom of expression is a goal worth enshrining despite the certainty that it will sometimes be abused.

What about self-policing by the broadcasters themselves? The National Institute of Mental Health report leaves little doubt that self-policing has not come close to curbing television's daily diet of mayhem.

"Violence on television seems to be cyclical, up a little one year, down a little the next, but the percentage of programs containing violence has remained essentially the same over the past decade," the report said.

More to the point, the fortunes of broadcast executives and the commercial networks that employ them ride with the ratings. The stylized violence depicted on television remains popular despite its unwholesome effects on children.

Nevertheless, there is much to be said for keeping the pressure on broadcasters to curtail excessive, gratuitous violence, especially during hours when children are most likely to be watching. Without such pressure during the last decade, the incidence of violence on television might easily be far greater than it is today.

The ultimate and most practical sanction, however, remains with parents. No network mogul has the power to prevent responsible parents from simply switching off the boob tube when what it offers might harm their children. Were this to happen often enough, the ratings would deliver an unmistakable message to broadcasters about violence on television.

Another View:

Giving rope to Moscow

Rebuffed on previous fronts, the United States has lowered its sights in the economic war on the Soviet Union. The new offensive will be tested when Cabinet ministers of major Western industrial nations assemble in Paris for a meeting of The Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development.

Up to now, the United States has had little success in winning Western cooperation on the development of economic sanctions against the Soviets. Some leaders in the West appear more inclined to curry favor with Moscow than to acknowledge appreciation for what Washington has done for the free world.

U.S. officials say that at the Paris meeting an attempt will be made to limit Western credits to the Soviet Union. Rather than seek a freeze on loans and loan guarantees to the Soviets, the United States will try to reduce the level of credit extended to Moscow by the West, the officials said.

As a first step, it is reported, the U.S. plan calls for creation of a special group to consider ways of reducing aid to the Soviet Union in the future. That could open the door to a possible agreement at the seven-nation economic summit in Versailles in June on limiting Soviet credits.

In the past, West European nations have refused to go along with U.S. calls for curtailed business dealings with the Kremlin as a sign of American displeasure.

The Europeans certainly weren't thinking of their American allies when they became involved in a new natural gas pipeline from Siberia to Europe. This is considered an accomplished fact.

It would be extremely shortsighted of the West Europeans not to go along with the call for a tighter limit on Soviet credits. Giving the Soviets more rope is like sending out invitations to a hanging — of the West.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Budget fight puts Demos against Demos

WASHINGTON — In the battle over the budget, it's hard to keep straight who's assailing whom. President Reagan has found himself waylaid by Republican forces whom he would prefer to see attacking Democrats. But there is similar turmoil in the Democratic trenches.

Jack Anderson

The Republican budget, with its estimated $117 billion deficit and $40 billion cut in Social Security benefits, is a wide-open target. But the Democrats are too busy shooting at one another.

At the center of the shooting match is Rep. Jim Jones, D-Okla., the Budget Committee chairman. He believes that a serious recession is no time to be trying to wring partisan advantage out of the budget process. So he has been working with the Republicans on a compromise budget.

This has offended Democrats who think the party would be foolish not to seize the opportunity to stick it to Reagan. The squabbling over strategy has been exacerbated by petty animosities and hurt feelings.

Jones' tendency to go it alone has aroused resentment. His solo negotiations with the White House without consulting his committee members were described by one bitter critic as "an attempt to cut a deal between the executive branch and one of the 435 members of Congress."

In response, Jones grumped that his critics "have springs in their pants," causing them to jump up continually to protest their exclusion from the budget negotiations.

Yet Jones likes to keep his own counsel. "He's never forthcoming," a Budget Committee source complained to my associate Peter Grant. "Not even his staff knows where he's coming from."

Beyond the clash of personalities is the difference over political strategy. Jones sees danger in the Democrats' trying to make political hay out of economic hard times; his opponents want to point up the philosophical differences between Democrats and Republicans.

This strategy has been pushed behind closed doors by several Democrats, including Reps. David Obey, Wis., Don Pease, Ohio, and Leon Panetta, Calif. They would like to prepare an "ideological" budget, meaning a political document that might win friends and influence voters.

The object of the strategy is to carve out a distinct image for the Democrats, with full knowledge that an "ideological" Democratic budget stands no more chance of passage than President Reagan's ideological White House budget did.

"I'd like to show the people where we stand before we start compromising," Obey said in a closed meeting of Budget Committee Democrats.

Unhappiness with Jones' strategy and tactics has been building ever since the Republicans presented their fiscal offering. In a meeting with the influential "gang of four" — Reps. Norman Mineta, D-Calif., Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., Tim Wirth, D-Colo. and Panetta — Jones was told bluntly that he either works with the committee or "he does not get a budget."

Jones called a peace conference to mend the fences with his committee, but it had exactly the opposite effect. What really infuriated the disgruntled Democrats was that when they asked for copies of Jones' budget figures, he said he hadn't prepared any. Next day, Republican members of the committee turned up with copies of the figures Jones said didn't exist. The GOP committee staff said the document was found in the photocopying machine.

BUY THIS GUY A MIRROR: Samuel Kenric Lessey was recently confirmed as inspector general of the Synthetic Fuels Corporation. A good place for him to start investigating waste and inefficiency in the agency would be his own eight-month consulting contract with SFC.

Beginning last September, Lessey collected $300 per day as a consultant, even though he wasn't nominated for his present post for five months. By the time he was confirmed and finally went on the SFC payroll, he had collected $37,650 in consulting fees. Congressional sources say Lessey wasn't very productive, failing to complete a reorganization plan he was assigned to do, and presenting no substantial reports or other evidence of useful activity.

While Lessey was collecting his fees, incidentally, the acting inspector general was also kept on the payroll, costing the taxpayers another $300 a day.

What particularly concerns congressional critics is the possibility that Lessey's ride on the SFC gravy train may have compromised his strict objectivity as inspector general. "They're supposed to be truly independent," one source told my reporter Matt Berke. "I'd hate to think this is a precedent for the future."

Footnote: An SFC spokesman conceded it was a "little unusual" to hire an appointee as a consultant before his nomination. But, he added, Lessey wanted to get right to work and should not be blamed for the delays in his nomination and confirmation.

WATCH ON WASTE: Attila the Hun recognized the value of a soldier's fearsome appearance, and even more sophisticated modern generals assessed their soldiers' physical attributes on the basis of usefulness, not looks. But some squeamish tea-sipper in the Pentagon evidently doesn't agree. Inserted in the U.S. Army's "Standards of Medical Fitness" is this clause for rejection of a potential recruit: "Scars and deformities of the fingers and-or hand which ... are so disfiguring as to make the individual objectionable in ordinary social relationships."

INSIDE REPORT:

Moderation beneficial to some Republicans

LOS ANGELES — Mayor Pete Wilson of San Diego, heir to California's moderate Republican tradition, was visibly displeased by what he heard at the end of a candidates night at Sportsmen's Lodge in the San Fernando Valley.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Rep. Robert Dornan, the fire-eating conservative in the seven-candidate Republican field to oppose Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. for the Senate, assailed Wilson on grounds that "we've tried moderates against Jerry Brown, and they don't work." Wilson later grumbled that Dornan had misrepresented his record on abortion. But had he not actually supported public funding of abortions as Dornan claimed? "Yes," he told us, "but that was 1978." What happened since then? "I changed my mind."

That Wilson has changed his mind about many things the last four years is interpreted by right-wing foes as a ploy for the Republican nomination. The truth is less conspiratorial. The switch signifies rightward movement of the whole Republican spectrum. Pete Wilson, moderate of the '80s, sounds a lot like conservatives of the '70s — a similarity beneficial to Wilson and possibly Republican prospects here and elsewhere this year.

Wilson cannot equal Dornan as a conservative ideologue and cannot match the free-enterprise innovations of the president's daughter, Maureen Reagan. Both are incomparably more dynamic candidates than the mayor. But empty treasuries doom Dornan and Reagan in a state where the alternative to paid television is anonymity. The contest is essentially a two-man deadheat between Wilson and Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr.

That seems to break the rule that Republicans in the Earl Warren liberal mold no longer win California primaries, particularly against so famous a name as Goldwater. But Wilson has pulled even in the polls, reflecting not only a perception that he is better able to beat Brown but that there is not all that much ideological difference between him and Goldwater.

It was not always so. In 1976, Wilson traveled to New Hampshire to campaign against Ronald Reagan for president. In 1978, he opposed Proposition 13 while running fourth in the governor's primary. ("It has worked better than I thought," Wilson now says of the tax-cutting initiative.)

Wilson's early endorsement of President Reagan in 1980 has not erased his 1976 sin of joining what Dornan calls a "lying untruth squad" against Reagan. Such eminent Reaganites as State Senate minority leader Bill Campbell have neither forgiven nor forgotten. To compensate, radio ads flaunt presidential brother Neil Reagan's endorsement and television ads declare, "The president needs him."

Those same TV spots depict Wilson as a shirt-sleeved mayor fighting crime and public-employee strikes. He has abandoned the left to Rep. Pete McCloskey (running a poor third in the polls). "The government should not be America's growth industry," Wilson says on one TV spot. "And when I'm elected senator it won't be." This shift is obviously dictated by political realities but also by what seems a genuine mid-life political correction by the 48-year-old Wilson. "Experience is a pretty good teacher," he told us.

Wilson only occasionally displays the Republican moderate's propensity to straddle issues (he opposed the House version of the Saudi Arabian AWACS deal, favored the only slightly different Senate version). Except for continued opposition to an anti-abortion constitutional amendment, there is little about Wilson today that would bother Jerry Falwell.

He opposes gun registration and the Kennedy-Hatfield nuclear freeze. He favors school prayer and the B-1 bomber. He would vote against big defense cuts and any change in the critical third year of the Reagan tax cut. Not merely coming out for the balanced-budget constitutional amendment, he wants to stiffen it with a spending limitation.

Wilson's television spots explicitly claim he can win ("the one candidate Jerry Brown hopes he never has to run against") and implicitly that Goldwater can't. The implicit will become explicit before the June 8 primary if Wilson uses anti-Goldwater ads now in the can. Still, he would have no chance for the nomination were it not for the fact that Earl Warren's legatee echoes the Barry Goldwater of 1964 as much as his own son.

CHARLEY REESE

Paul Harvey is wrong on the ERA

Hello, America. Paul Harvey has endorsed the Equal Rights Amendment! To not pass that amendment is...to say...women are not equal! Well, shut my mouth, the old conservative radio commentator and columnist has surprised some of his fans.

Charley Reese

I am not a fan and I am not surprised. Paul Harvey has never been trapped by consistency or philosophy. He has a talent for missing the point with great flair.

The problem all along with the Equal Rights Amendment has not been the question of political equality, which is the only kind of equality attainable outside of a cemetery. So far as I know, the Bill of Rights has always applied equally to women and men. If there are any political rights possessed by men and denied women, I don't know what they are and neither, apparently, does the feminist movement, for I have never seen nor heard them speak of any.

So Harvey is wrong. To vote against the ERA is not to say that women are not equal; it is to say that you have better sense than to pass a bad piece of legislation that will cause more problems than it solves.

In my home state, which has refused to ratify the ERA, I challenged the persons to come forth with any state statutes that discriminated against women. They couldn't produce one. Perhaps in some states they could and if they can, I hope the people in those states would repeal them. No law should discriminate against any citizen for any reason.

There are two basic defects in the Equal Rights Amendment. One is that it would, if passed, remove whole areas of family-related law-making from the state legislatures and place it in the Congress and federal courts. I'm opposed to transferring any more responsibility from the state and local level to the federal level.

The second defect is that it would bar any legal distinction between the sexes. Making distinctions, taking into consideration individual capabilities, is not discriminating in the perjorative sense of that word.

The fact is that in some characteristics women are not equal. They are not as physically strong as a group as men as a group. They can become pregnant; men can't. The bones in their body are put together differently and they have a different muscular system.

For that reason, women are not equal to men as combat soldiers. At the present, we can allow women to serve in non-combat units if they so choose and we can exclude them from combat units. If the ERA passed, this distinction could not be made nor could women be excluded from a draft. This would weaken our military capabilities.

If the ERA passed, those states which now choose to prohibit funding abortions with tax money would be forced to fund them. When Massachusetts passed a state ERA, the court ruled it could no longer prohibit public funding of abortions since this constituted discriminaion based on sex (men don't need abortions).

The ERA would be a bonanza for the legal profession since it would spark innumerable lawsuits. Homosexuals support it because they see it, and rightly so, as a boon to their efforts to force the law to recognize their perversion as an alternative lifestyle. Homosexual adoptions and homosexual marriages are two certain results if the ERA were to pass.

The feminist movement from the beginning has engaged in a massive campaign of deception. It is no accident that homosexuals and Marxists have flocked to the feminist cause, for their goal all along has not been the alleged discrimination but the destruction of the traditional family relationships which hold this nation together.

To cite one deception, the aggregate of women's salaries is lower than the aggregate of men's salaries not because of discrimination but because a larger number of women choose to go in and out of the job market than remain in it permanently as most men do.

Of course in private social relationships some men do discriminate unfairly against women, but the cure for this is education, not altering the Constituion or creating a new federal bureaucracy. If you think the federal government can control people's prejudices in their private relationships, just ask a black American or an Indian or an Oriental or a Jew.

Paul Harvey is dead wrong on the ERA. Good day.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, May 17, the 137th day of 1982. There are 228 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On May 17, 1536, the marriage of King Henry VIII to Anne Boleyn was declared invalid in England.

On this date:

In 1756, Britain declared war on France.

In 1940, the Nazis occupied Brussels, Belgium, during World War II.

Is 'Shy Cy' Vance developing bolder stance?

By JOHN P. WALLACH
Foreign Affairs Editor
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — Cy Vance, the preppy, middle-aged alumunus of Yale whose one act of defiance was to quit the Carter administration over its abortive Iran rescue mission, is shedding his mild manner and boldly attacking the Reagan administration on everything from El Salvador to nuclear arms control.

At a luncheon here for a small group of reporters, the former secretary of state exhibited something that was in rare display, at least publicly, during his three years in office – impatience and anger with the fact that Reagan allegedly "is not managing our foreign policy in a competent manner."

"It's not clear at all that this administration has any real ideas or vision about today's world, the world in the decade ahead or in the 1990s," Vance said. "It is my judgement that they have not thought through the nature of the problems that face them. This could profoundly affect our future."

VANCE WAS UNUSUALLY outspoken, even at one point breaking his silence about someone who hasn't hesitated to criticize him — former National Security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski.

Vance all but charged that Brzezinski stagemanaged the Iran rescue mission decision to deliberately exclude him.

Asked about a White House meeting to give final approval to the raid that was scheduled during a rare three-day Florida vacation trip by Vance, the ex-secretary said: "I was terribly upset that it took place in my absence. I did not know the meeting was going to take place at all."

At another point New York Times columnist James Reston, in asking Vance whether there should be a Democratic "shadow cabinet," remarked that "I have the feeling you Democrats are as divided about that as you and Brzezinski." Retorted Vance: "No, we're not that divided."

VANCE ALSO provided the fullest public explanation to date over why he felt compelled to quit after Carter ordered the raid. Had it succeeded, he said dozens of other Americans, including newsmen, would have been rounded up and tortured and Iran "would have been pushed into the arms of the Russians."

But far "more dangerous," Vance said, there could have been war between "a broad group of Islamic nations and the West."

Asked why Carter ultimately ordered the rescue mission, Vance implied it was for mostly political reasons. "He decided it was necessary to take some action and this was the appropriate step." Any regrets about his own decisions?

"I am more convinced now in hindsight that the mission was a grave mistake," Vance said, "and if I had to make the decision all over again I would have made exactly the same one — and resign."

BUT IT WAS on the substantive agenda of the Reagan administration that Cy Vance showed his real colors. Here are a few of the views that emerged from the wide-ranging session:

— On the President's proposal for dramatic cuts in the strategic nuclear arms race. "I have honestly read that five times and I still don't understand it," Vance said. He explained that it will take years before an agreement is reached with the Soviet Union for such sweeping reductions.

Therefore, he said, in order to preserve the public consensus that still exists for arms control, the U.S. should "reach agreement with Moscow on the essential terms of SALT II" and allow the Senate to ratify the pact signed by Jimmy Carter and Leonid Brezhnev in Vienna in June, 1979.

"You're not going to get the second (dramatic nuclear cuts) if you don't get the first," Vance said. What's more, Moscow today would accept SALT II even with "all the reservations and understandings" the Senate attached to it. "There even may be one or two more changes the Soviets would accept."

Vance pointed out that the Russians, like the U.S., "have been abiding by the terms of SALT II" and in some of his toughest language about Reagan's refusal to submit the treaty for ratification, said: "I never understand why if it's so flawed, it's something they feel they have to abide by."

— On the Middle East. There is at least a 50-50 chance that Israel will invade Lebanon in part because the Reagan administration has abandoned the search for a settlement of the Palestinian question, Vance said. That tends to give Israel a free rein to do whatever it pleases, he explained.

"We have to reengage ourselves in the issue," Vance said. "I think we have let the reins of effective policy slip and failed to push forward on the Palestinian question. There can be no solution that is going to last without dealing with that," he said sharply.

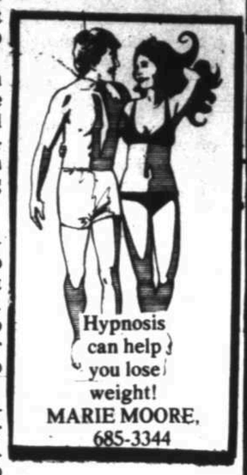

"I'm terribly worried about Lebanon," Vance added. What would he do now, a reporter asked. "At this point Camp David still has some life in it. What we ought to do is again to try to press the PLO to recognize it is in their interest to say they are prepared to accept Israel's right to exist."

— The Falklands dispute. Vance criticized the Reagan administration for trying to go it alone. He said the U.S. would have been better advised to work closely together with the Organization of American States (OAS) and the United Nations.

He explained that in that crisis, the Johnson administration worked together with the UN and NATO "to stop a war from breaking out." He was the chief intermediary.

"I look back to a somewhat similar problem in Cyprus in 1967," Vance said.

Older citizens have rights, too

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

A growing proportion of the U.S. population is over 50 and these older Americans may not know that they have many new legal rights.

The American Bar Association points out that laws passed in recent years in the area of jobs, education and money protect people against discrimination because of age.

The laws affect more than one person in four. According to preliminary figures from the 1980 Census, nearly 59 million people or 26 percent of the population are over 50. Ten years earlier, the over-50 group totaled only 50 million or 24 percent of the population.

The ABA has prepared a 41-page guide, "Your Rights Over Age 50," spelling out some of the new laws which help older Americans. Single copies of the guide cost $1, plus $1 for postage and handling. To get a copy, write the Circulation Department, American Bar Association, 1155 E. 60th St., Chicago, Ill., 60637.

One of the most important laws is the Age Discrimination in Employment Act which extended the mandatory retirement age from 65 to 70 in most jobs and protects people still on the job against arbitrary discrimination because of age. That protection means you cannot be pressured to retire; you cannot be threatened, forced to take a less responsible job, given fewer privileges, paid less or treated differently from younger workers.

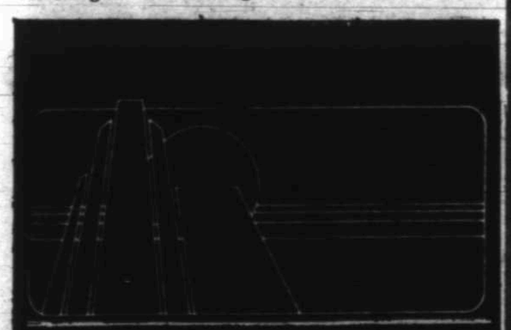

The law does not prevent people from being fired for good cause — as long as age is not a factor. Suppose, for example, you are fired for absenteeism. The firing is not age discrimination. If, however, a younger worker was absent just as often as you were and was not fired, you might have a case of discrimination.

The age discrimination act also protects you when you are looking for a job. An employer cannot discriminate in hiring on the basis of age unless age is a "bona fide" qualification for the job. The law does not define bona fide, but the ABA says some cases are obvious; an acting company, for example, would not have to hire a 60-year-old to play the part of a younger person. In other cases, the bar group says, the courts so far have been willing to accept arguments based on the idea that some employers have to protect public health and safety; they have, for example, upheld the right of a bus company not to hire anyone over a certain age.

The same anti-discrimination rules generally apply to employment agencies and to labor unions. Help-wanted ads cannot include words or phrases which would discourage older workers from applying, unless age if a "bona fide" qualification.

There are some exceptions to the law. You can, for example, be forced to retire at 65 if you have been an executive or have been in a high policy-making position with your company for at least two years and are entitled to retirement benefits of at least $27,000 annually, not counting Social Security benefits. Some small businesses also are exempt. Under existing federal law, college or university employees with unlimited tenure can be forced to retire at age 65, but this exception will no longer apply after July 1. (In all cases, state laws may provide extra protection not included in the federal law.)

If you think you have been a victim of age discrimination, you can file a charge with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission; to find the nearest office, look in the telephone book under the section for U.S. government listings.

Senator calls for investigation into Nazi recruitment operation

By MADELYN MILLER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., has called for a congressional investigation into reports that State Department officials secretly smuggled hundreds of Nazi war criminals into the United States in exchange for Soviet intelligence information.

The Nazi recruitment operation "is the most appalling mixture of moral insensitivity and incompetence I have seen," said Frank, a member of the House subcommittee on investigations.

Frank said Sunday that he was informed of the clandestine program by John Loftus, a former prosecutor with the Justice Department's Office of Special Investigation, the unit responsible for ferreting out war criminals.

Loftus described the smuggling program, run by the State Department's Office of Policy Coordination, on the CBS program "Sixty Minutes" on Sunday.

More than 300 Nazi war criminals still live in the United States and some of them work for the government, Loftus said.

The FBI, the Army and the State Department were all involved in enlisting Nazi help to spy on the Soviets in exchange for American citizenship and jobs, Loftus said.

"They knew that the entire Nazi government of Byelorussia — the president, the vice presidents, cabinet ministers, governors and mayors, police chiefs were all living in America," Loftus said. "The FBI, Army Counter Intelligence, Army Foreign Intelligence, the Department of State — they knew and recruited them because they were Nazis."

Loftus said that classified information "indicated that a number of these programs were approved at the highest level."

Justice Department spokesman Dean St. Dennis said Sunday that "the department is aware of the allegations and is looking into them," but would not elaborate.

State Department spokeswoman Carolyn Johnson on Sunday declined to comment on Loftus' charges. Spokesmen for the FBI and the Army both said they had no information on the report.

The State Department began recruiting Nazis for espionage work shortly after World War II, Loftus said, in a program run by the late Frank Wisner, the postwar chief of operations for the CIA.

The espionage program was a failure, Loftus said. "It was worse than a botch," he said. "Many of the Byelorussians were later identified as having been double agents."

The clandestine recruitment contravened the orders of Presidents Roosevelt and Truman.

"We had one unit of the government out trying to prosecute the Nazis and other units of the government trying to secret the information. We later established that the files pertaining to the Nazi immigration had been withheld from Congress, from the courts, from the CIA and from the local agents of the Immigration Service," Loftus said.

In late 1980, former Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti received a report on the clandestine operation from Allan J. Ryan Jr., who headed the Justice Department unit, Loftus said.

Ryan could not be reached at home Sunday night for comment.

Frank said he hoped Congress would investigate the matter. "This shows the danger of trying to beat our enemies by acting exactly like them," he said.

Ex-policeman kills two, commits suicide

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — An ex-policeman murdered his former girlfriend and an off-duty policeman in a crowded shopping center before fatally shooting himself in his car parked outside, police say.

Steven N. Witkowski, 32, shot and killed police dispatcher Dallas V. Aasen, 29, and Patrolman John R. Peterson, 26, at 4:25 p.m. Sunday near a hospital health care exhibit in the Lancaster Mall, said Lt. Ronald Sonderman.

Miss Aasen was hit in the head and Peterson, in the neck, witnesses said.

Witkowski fired up to six shots inside the mall and reloaded his .357 Magnum revolver as he ran to his car, police and witnesses said.

Sonderman said Witkowski got in his car and shot himself in the heart. Witnesses disagreed on whether he first tried to start the car before committing suicide.

Witkowski was forced to resign from the Salem police force Jan. 19 because he failed to meet minimum standards after a probationary period, Sonderman said.

Police would not speculate publicly on the motive, but Dan Mitchell of the Portland suburb of Gladstone, who said he was a close firend of Peterson, said Miss Aasen broke up with Witkowski two months ago and had recently begun dating Peterson.

Mitchell said Peterson told him on Thursday that Miss Aasen was pregnant.

The shooting occurred in the presence of several doctors and nurses, who were at the hospital display and who attempted to render first aid.

Witnesses said about 100 people were in the mall foyer at the time. No one else was injured.

"I was coming out of a shoe store," said Bill Benning, 14, Salem. "I saw this guy with a gun. He shot the woman in the head and then shot a man in the neck and the guy ran out the main hall.

"I thought it was staged until I saw all the blood."

"It sounded like it was either gunshots or firecrackers," said Dr. Jock Pribnow, a family physician. "When I saw people jumping under benches and hiding, I knew it wasn't firecrackers."

Pribnow said he heard four to six shots.

Witkowski, a former Marine from New Rochelle, N.Y., joined the Salem Police Department last Aug. 17.

A woman who lives in the same apartment house as Witkowski said he had no job, and recently had applied with the Seattle Police Department.

Miss Aasen, a native of Hot Springs, Mont., was a graduate of South Salem High School. She had been a fire and police employee, working mostly as a dispatcher, since 1972.

Her stepfather, Sgt. Ed Ginther, has been with the Salem Police Department since 1957.

Peterson was from Portland and was a graduate of the University of Oregon. He joined the Salem police in August 1980.

AT&T lobbies against regulation bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Al Swift has a favorite description of the lobbying prowess of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.: "It's Bell against the world, and the world is losing."

Swift, a Washington state Democrat, is in a position to know whereof he speaks. He is a member of the House communications subcommittee that two months ago stunned AT&T by unanimously approving a telephone regulation bill that modifies the recent antitrust settlement requiring the break-up of the Bell System.

Since the subcommittee's vote on March 25, AT&T has shed its image as a low-key, behind-the-scenes persuader. For example:

—In the space of two months' time, AT&T convinced its three million shareholders and one million employees to flood Congress with mail, urging rejection of the subcommittee bill. AT&T estimates congressmen have received 150,000 letters.

—At least one Bell System operating company, Mountain Bell, has used an insert in monthly bills to lay out its position. That company's four million customers were urged to join the lobbying campaign.

—Large ads have been taken out in many of the nation's largest newspapers, urging the same type of grassroots mail campaign.

—Advertisements have also appeared in the districts of selected congressmen — Swift is one — criticizing the bill and noting the congressmen supported it.

—AT&T executives have appeared at the conventions of influential trade groups. And at its recent annual shareholders meeting, it provided special letter-writing packets including a form letter and offer to pay the postage.

All told, AT&T says it has spent roughly $2 million on the campaign, courtesy of its shareholders and not consumers.

The Jan. 8 settlement requires AT&T to give up ownership of its 22 wholly owned Bell System companies. It allows the firm to retain its long-distance, Yellow Page, equipment, manufacturing and research operations.

In return, the Justice Department agreed to drop a 1974 antitrust suit as well as a 1956 consent decree that has prevented AT&T from entering any unregulated business, like data processing.

The subcommittee's bill would ratify the break-up of the Bell System, but make other changes as well. It specifies the Yellow Page operation must remain with the Bell companies instead of going to AT&T, and requires AT&T to isolate its long-distance phone operations — still a virtual monopoly — from all other ventures.

More riots could break out in Miami's Liberty City

MIAMI (AP) — Two years after rioting claimed 18 lives, the neighborhood known as Liberty City still has rundown housing, high unemployment and vacant storefronts that serve as hangouts for out-of-work young men.

But financial commitments by private industry, government-backed loans and minority hiring by the police have some given black leaders hope for long-term improvements — if the city can get through the summer without new rioting.

Miami Police Chief Kenneth Harms says the summer could be "critical," with the national recession leaving more than half of the black youths unemployed and with little to do but congregate for "street discos." Police say they have noted increases in the number and size of youth gangs in the city.

Young blacks were blamed for the worst violence and most of the $100 million in damage in three nights of rioting in 1980. The disturbances were touched off when an all-white jury in Tampa acquitted four white former Dade County police officers of charges stemming from the beating death of black businessman Arthur McDuffie.

Dade County's two major police agencies have responded with intense minority-recruitment drives and special community-relations patrols of troubled areas. Eighty percent of the Miami police department's new hires since the riots have been members of minority groups.

"I'm very optimistic about the rebuilding efforts going on right now," said Charles H. Rogers of the mostly black Miami-Dade Chamber of Commerce. "I think the effort is well-placed. The strength of a community is its businesses."

Howard V. Gary, Miami's first black city manager, said city government deserved no better than a "C" for its efforts to provide government contracts to black-owned businesses. "But I assure you next year, it'll be at least a 'B.'"

Only 2,148, or 1.5 percent, of all businesses in metropolitan Dade County are black-owned, according to the Census Bureau. Of those establishments, Dade's community revitalization board says 82 percent are owner-operated and have no employees.

Nationwide, about 3.8 percent of all businesses are minority-owned, according to a study done this year for the Commerce Department's Minority Business Development Agency.

In Miami, Rogers said he's particularly optimistic about the Greater Miami Chamber of Commerce's $5.4 million private-industry revitalization plan. It calls for businesses to donate money to train black entrepreneurs, build an industrial park and set up a job-skills training center.

Among the more ambitious rebuilding projects is the move to establish Dade County's first black-owned bank. Black millionaire Sonny Wright has asked the Federal Reserve for permission to buy a branch of People's National Bank.

'Keeper of the flame' students' hero

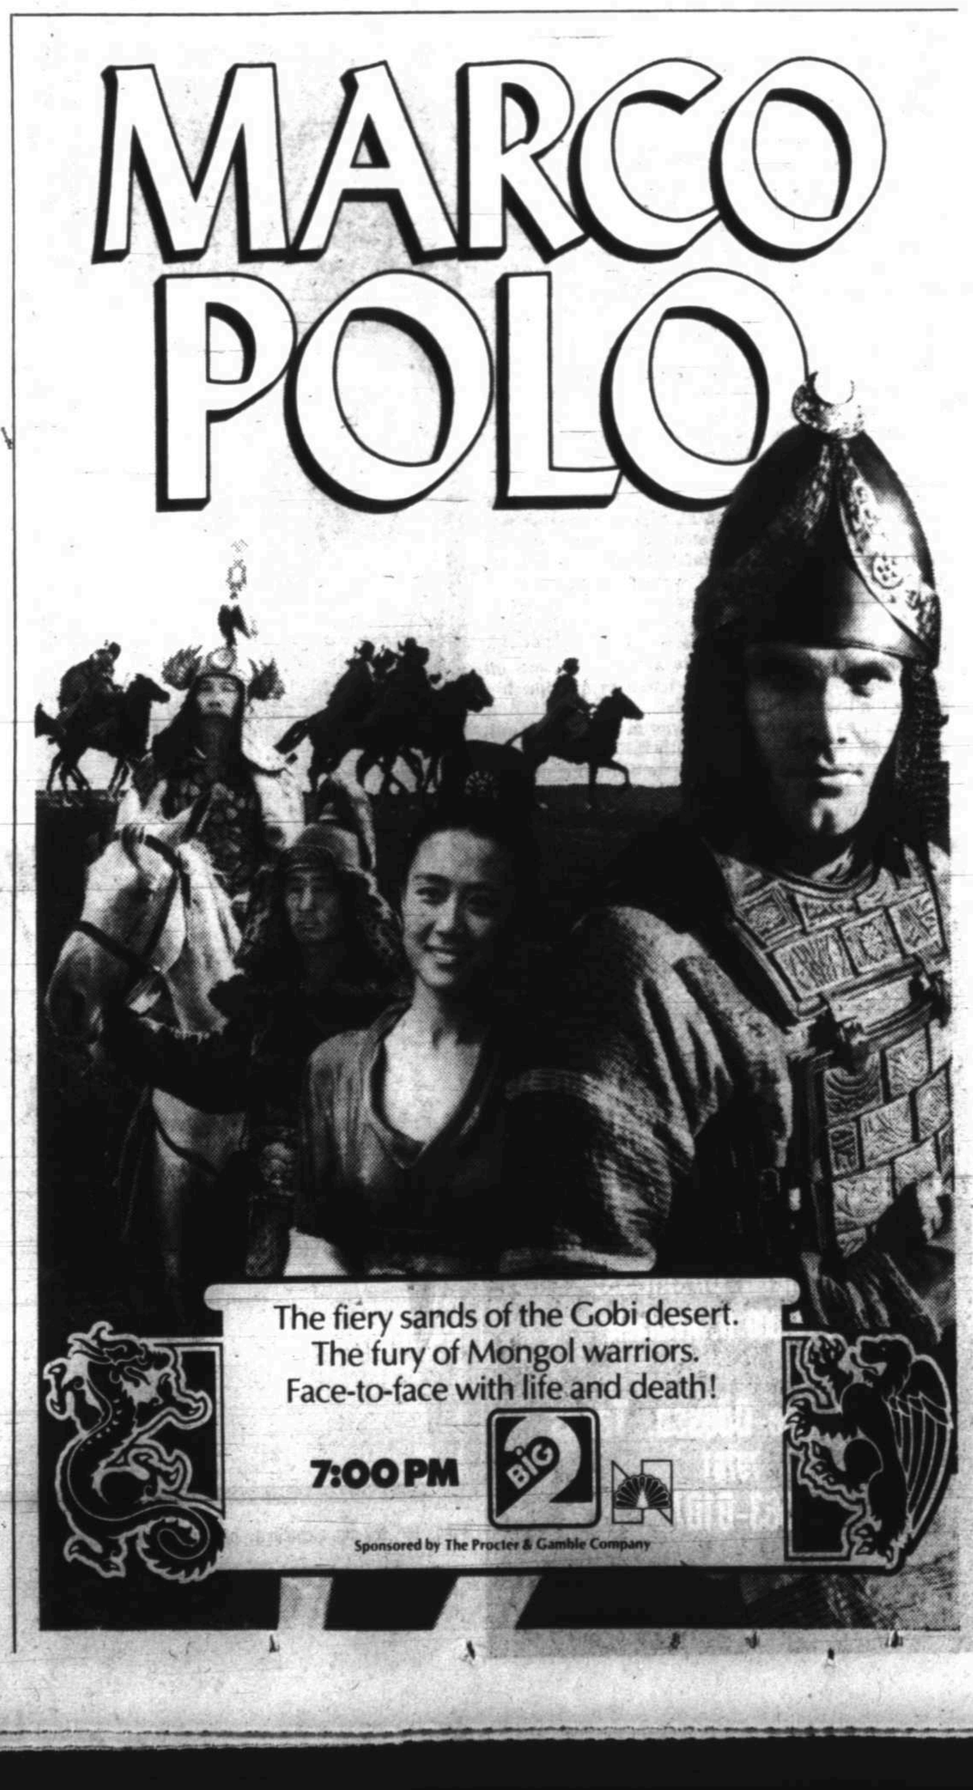

HOUSTON (AP) — A man known as the "keeper of the flame" at the Statue of Liberty has become a hero to a group of fourth graders at Ed White Elementary School.

A textbook essay about the Statue of Liberty sparked the interest of students in Room 14 recently. Later, classmate Meredith Francis found a magazine article about Charles DeLeo, a maintenance worker in the torch for the past 10 years.

Students began corresponding with DeLeo to get to know more about him.

"How is the Statue of Liberty?" asked 10-year-old Scott Grissom.

To the children's delight, DeLeo answered each letter and included a post card and a booklet about the statue.

DEAR ABBY

A billion dollars here and there adds up to real money

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Our politicians toss the term "billions of dollars" around so casually that it might interest your readers to know how much a billion dollars really is. To illustrate:

A man gave his wife a million dollars and told her to spend $1,000 every day and come back when she ran out of money. She did so, and returned, broke, after about three years.

He then gave her a billion dollars. After spending $1,000 a day, she returned — after about 2,740 years! — FELIX IN L.A.

DEAR FELIX: Thanks for explaining in understandable terms how much a billion dollars really is.

Now let me explain it in terms of today's economy: Let's say Mohammed Khalid Ibn Jamal (not his real name) gave his wife a billion dollars and told her to go shopping on Rodeo Drive in Beverly Hills and buy whatever she wanted. She started on Monday, and came back on Friday. Broke.

DEAR ABBY: When Jack and I became engaged seven months ago, I asked Jack's mother to please start making up a guest list because I had to know how many people to plan on. I am paying for the reception myself. My father is dead and my mother has all she can do to support the family.

After waiting for three months, I asked Jack's mother for her guest list and she said there was plenty of time. Finally I told her that I could afford to have no more than 150 at the reception, which meant 75 from her side and 75 from ours.

Well, the invitations are ready to be mailed, the wedding is eight weeks away and Jack's mother now informs me that she must invite 85 guests or a lot of people will never speak to her again.

What can I do? I hate to start my marriage off with bad feelings between Jack's mother and me, but all I can afford is 75 from her side. Also, we are short 10 wedding invitations and it's too late to order any more. Please help me. — BITING MY TONGUE

DEAR BITING: Tell your mother-in-law that if she needs 10 extra guests she will have to pay for them. And if you're short 10 wedding invitations and it's too late to reorder, 10 guests (on Jack's side) will have to settle for hand-written invitations or a telephone call.

CONFIDENTIAL TO TEARS ON MY PILLOW IN CLEARWATER, FLA.: Regret is the cancer of life. Although it's too late for you to give your own mother pleasure, others can profit by your "sins of omission."

There are nursing homes filled with elderly people who would so enjoy a little regular attention. Drop in with a few flowers from your garden, magazines you would have thrown away, some homemade goodies, etc. One day a week take one or two or as many as you can for a little ride. Bring the children along on occasion. Old folks love children.

Do this, at first, in reparation, and in time it will become a labor of love. True, of course, we can only have one mother, but in the family of God we are all one: He loves us, he forgives us.

Cheer up by cheering others up. It is a beautiful prescription for sleep and peace.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Rules for sorting laundry important for good final results

DEAR HELOISE:

I have been an avid reader of your column since my dear wife of 40 years suffered a stroke and has been unable to function as a homemaker.

I have derived much valuable assistance from the hints sent in by your readers and am now humbly aware of the tremendous job women have been doing since the dawn of time.

If possible, I would like to know why clothes are sorted out prior to washing, and just how this is done.

How can one like me, with no experience, identify fabrics and be sure that there's a correct mix of colors and fabrics? — Richard D.

+ + +

You pulled at my heartstrings. You're not the only male (or female) to have the sudden and sole responsibility of running a household. And housework most definitely doesn't include just washing the dishes once a day and making the bed, as many are finding out.

As the song says, "Momma, don't let your babies grow up to be cowboys." Instead, teach them how to grow up to take care of a house, iron, do laundry, cook, etc. They'll bless you for it (as will their wives and husbands) in later years!

Back to the problem at hand:

It's necessary to sort laundry because washing dark colors with lights and whites will dull the lighter colored fabrics.

Fuzzy type fabrics will leave lint on certain other fabrics. For this reason, washing towels with corduroy is a no-no.

Heavy weight fabrics should be washed together. Ditto for heavily soiled fabrics. Washing a mechanic's clothes with your daughter's favorite blouse will make for one unhappy daughter!

Separate laundry into whites (those things that are bleach-safe), light-colored, medium- and dark-colored. Any new items in deep colors, such as reds and blues, like towels and jeans, should be washed separately that first time so as not to bleed on other items.

Sorting laundry also helps you to spot things that need special treatment with a pre-wash spray. While you're sorting, close zippers and hook hooks to cause less wear and tear on clothing.

Sorting also enables you to use different water temperatures, when necessary. Cold water works fine most of the time on colored fabrics but whites need hot water to really get clean.

If you wash garments of the same weight together, when it comes to that dryer, you'll find dryer time on some garments cut way down.

Laundry isn't all that much fun, as we all can attest, but if you have to do it, you might as well do it right and have a feeling of accomplishment when the chore's finished.

After all, your dollars paid for the items in the wash as well as for all that washing paraphernalia, so make them last as long as you can and look as clean as possible.

Hugs to you all. — Heloise

HINTS FROM HIM

Dear Heloise: When I read the hint about the lady who covered the tops of her cabinets with plastic wrap to keep the dust off (her cabinets didn't reach to the ceiling but were about a foot below it), I decided to send in my solution to the problem.

I went to the local hardware store and bought lengths of double track, tacking it to the top of the cabinet as well as the ceiling directly above it. In these tracks I put small sheets of colorful decorator plastic to make two sliding doors.

I drilled a hole in each sheet to make a place for a knob.

Now I have storage instead of grease and dust — Ernie Szerecsen

+ + +

Have you come up with an ingenious solution to a problem? Write Heloise, P.O. Box 32000, San Antonio, TX 78216 and tell her all about it. She can't answer your letter personally but she just might feature it in her column so keep watching.

Museums are entering the lucrative market of reproductions

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

There has been a steady growth of interest in the history of this country's way of doing things and nowhere is it more evident than in the decorative arts.

Figures from the Institute of Museum Services, for example, reveal there are now more than 4,600 museums — one quarter of them established in the past decade. Annual museum attendance has been recently recorded at 350 million. In addition, publications, programs and classes covering American building methods, furnishings, crafts and cookery are widespread.

A relatively recent indication of this phenomenon has been the introduction of a number of authentic reproductions of American furnishings, many of them copies of priceless antiques. Museums are licensing manufacturers to copy their treasures and reaping some of the profits from their sale.

Winterthur, a museum in Wilmington, Del., which celebrates American design from about 1650 to 1850, has licensed 12 manufacturers to offer 202 reproductions from its collection of some 60,000 items.

The objects, which will be sold through home furnishings stores, the museum and by mail order, cover most of the home furnishings categories. Wood and upholstered furniture, fabrics, wall coverings, clocks, mirrors, silver flatware and tankards, dinnerware, art objects and even furniture miniatures are being reproduced. All the copied items date from 1740-1815, which is known as the golden age of American decoration and embraces the Queen Anne, Chippendale and early Federal periods.

Among the reproductions are copies of an eight-panel chinoiserie wallpaper, tankards by Paul Revere, a mahogany tall case or grandfather clock, and a mahogany secretary attributed to the Townsend and Goddard school. At approximately $12,000 retail, the secretary is the most expensive item in a collection for which prices range from $18.50 for a single tile to thousands for substantial pieces of furniture.

Though Winterthur is only one of a growing number of museums involved in marketing reproductions, its entry has caused quite a stir because of the eminence of its holdings and the size and scope of its program. The museum even hired interior designer Mario Buatta to create the gallery where the objects are being displayed and sold. The prototype gallery will be duplicated in some of the 56 retail stores which will carry the full collection. (Many other stores are expected to stock some of the items.)

As perhaps the preeminent museum of American decorative arts, Winterthur is all the more remarkable for being the work of one man — Henry Francis du Pont — who personally took charge of the purchase and arrangement of the furnishings, the expansion of his home into a building now housing 196 display rooms and the development of the 963-acre property into a horticultural showplace. Du Pont, who liked to refer to himself as "the head gardener," did not even get started on his collecting passion until he was in his 40s.

Besides the rooms and gardens which were visited last year by more than 200,000, Winterthur today encompasses graduate training programs in conjunction with the University of Delaware, active research and publications divisions, and a large number of programs for specialists and the general public.

Moon finances Washington Post competition

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's capital, a one-newspaper town for the past 10 months, got a new daily today with the debut of The Washington Times, which is financed by followers of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon.

The first edition consisted of a 20-page news section, a magazine and an 8-page tabloid supplement introducing the staff and explaining how the paper came to be.

Noting that the Unification Church founded by Moon is "a controversial religion," the sole story in the supplement said, "The Washington Times will face what is described in today's phrase as 'an image problem.'"

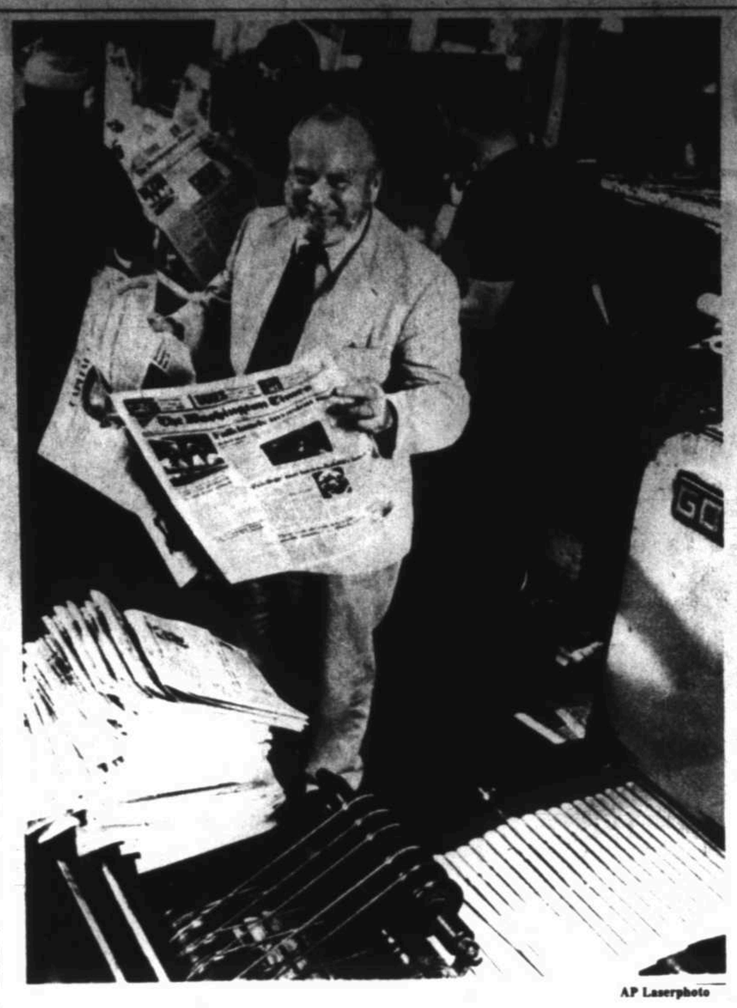

The paper, which is to be published five mornings a week in competition with The Washington Post, contained no advertising. None is planned until the paper takes root and can arrive at circulation figures on which to base its rates.

The paper is predicting an immediate circulation of 100,000 or more. The Post, the only daily in town since The Washington Star folded last August, has a circulation running at 700,000 weekdays, 984,000 on Sunday.

James Whelan, a veteran newsman and the paper's editor and publisher, has said that while followers of Moon will put up the capital for the paper, he alone will dictate the contents of the paper and its policies. He has a five-year contract promising autonomy.

Moon, a Korean evangelist, is the "second Messiah" to his followers but a demon to his critics because of the church's vigorous proselytizing methods among young Americans.

"The Washington Times will be a truthful newspaper, conscious always of the principle that our planet is and ought to be governed ultimately according to the wishes of Almighty God, the Supreme Authority," Whelan wrote in a front-page statement of the paper's principles. "But the Washington Times will represent the interests of no one religion, any more than it will close its mind or pages to any moral man or cause."

Reagans keep gifts worth more than $31,000

By MAUREEN SANTINI

WASHINGTON (AP) — Looking for the perfect gift for President Reagan or his wife? Take a clue from the wide range of items they chose to keep out of hundreds they were given last year: picture frames, jewelry, belt buckles and boots.

The president and his wife, Nancy, revealed their choices in a financial form released last Friday by the Office of Government Ethics. Asked about the gifts the next day, Reagan told reporters:

"I have never in my entire experience ever had anyone suggest to me that any contribution, gift they ever made should lead to something to their benefit. No one has ever done that."

The gifts were valued at more than $31,000, plus 10 whose value was not determined. The list didn't include gifts valued at under $100.

Nor does it include 17 items of clothing, mainly evening gowns, that five of the nation's finest designers gave to the first lady. Mrs. Reagan gave them to museums after she wore them.

Expensive jewelry from Bulgari and Harry Winston was omitted, too. The jewelry Mrs. Reagan borrowed from Bulgari was returned. The disclosure form says a diamond necklace and pair of earrings from New York jeweler Harry Winston will be returned, but does not say when. Ronald Winston, president of the store, was quoted Saturday saying the jewels were "not something we've asked for back."

THE 69 itemized gifts included seven picture frames, five belt buckles and three pairs of boots.

As a Christmas gift, Mrs. Reagan's staff gave her a personally inscribed frame worth $250. She also accepted a $125 Swiss enamel frame from a friend, Prentis Cobb Hale.

Frank Sinatra gave the Reagans two silver frames, inscribed, valued at $400. Sonny Werblin, the president's agent when he was an actor, gave the couple an inscribed silver frame valued at $225.

There was a $300 frame, with the presidential seal, from an unknown source. And a friend, businessman Bill Winans of Beverly Hills, Calif., gave a green enamel frame worth $125.

Reagan accepted a pair of $150 shoes from the Allen-Edmonds Shoe Corp., of Belgium, Wis., two pairs of boots worth $600 from the American Footwear Industry Association, and a pair of $300 calfskin boots with the presidential seal from bootmaker Tony Lama of El Paso, Texas.

He kept a $500 silver belt buckle from Robert Boyd of Reno, Nev.; two belt buckles of undetermined value from hotel owner John Bennett Coleman; and two buckles worth $2,000 from Wilford Fultz of Southlake, Texas. Also, a silver buckle from the Don Kings of Sheridan, Wyo., of undetermined value.

The president kept a $150 sweater from steel executive Earle Jorgensen, a member of Reagan's kitchen cabinet; $199 worth of sportswear from Danny Lawler of New York; a sportcoat and slacks valued at $500 from Marman of San Francisco; and a western hat from Gus Miller of Cincinnati worth $150-$200.

MRS. REAGAN accepted a cameo worth between $400 and $450 from Guy L. Beury of Mechanicsbury, Pa.; a pair of $1,500 earrings from friend Mildred Everett of Beverly Hills; a $975 necklace with crystal acorn pendant from Nancy Mehta, wife of Zubin Mehta of the New York Philharmonic; and a seed pearl bracelet worth $900 from another friend, Virginia Milner of Beverly Hills.

Also, two quilted coats from designer Bill Blass worth $250; three cotton housecoats worth $114 from close friend Betsy Bloomingdale, who designs them; and a $250 evening jacket from the designer Fendi.

In addition, the electric-red coat and dress she wore to her husband's inauguration valued at $2,000, from designer James Galanos; and two sweaters, worth $220, from William Wilson of Los Angeles, another member of the kitchen cabinet.

Boehm porcelain gifts included a $1,200 "American Bald Eagle," from James Barret and the United Service Organization; a $220 "Baby Wood Thrush," from C. Alvin Bertel of Metairie, La.; a $650 "Nancy Reagan Camellia," from the artist, Helen Boehm; and a $2,500 American eagle from oil executive Henry Salvatori of Los Angeles, a friend. He also gave them a $225 glass elephant.

There were two bronze western scenes of undetermined value sculpted by and presented by actor George Montgomery.

Also, several pieces of Chinese export porcelain, including a pair of plates, circa 1800, worth $1,500 from Ted Cummings, the late ambassador to Austria; a $200 teapot, circa 1800, from florist David Jones of Los Angeles; a dinner service worth $2,963 from New York artist Mildred Mottahedeh; and a $250 teapot and saucer, circa 1800, from David Orgell, a Beverly Hills store owner.

Gifts from other friends included a $165 crystal bowl from rancher Robert Adams of Valley Center, Calif.; a brass clock worth $2,650 from Mrs. Everett; a $1,000 silver Christmas box from stage producer Robert Fryer of New York; and Rigaud candles in glass containers valued at $378 from Gerald Miller of Beverly Hills.

Graham expected visit to create controversy

LONDON (AP) — The Rev. Billy Graham said today he expected his Moscow visit to create controversy and rebuffed criticism that he was naive to discuss peace and nuclear war at a church conference.

Criticism followed the American evangelist's earlier remarks that he found more religious freedom than he expected and he was surprised at the warmth of his welcome.

"I was able to preach the gospel and if there had been any restriction on what I wanted to say I would not have gone," the Southern Baptist clergyman told a news conference.

Questioned about his efforts to help the "persecuted" Christians, Graham said: "I went to the Soviet Union as a spiritual leader for 5½ days and I could not be expected to solve problems that have been talked about for years and years."

The evangelist said he believed it was important for him to go to Moscow because "weapons are getting so sophisticated that they are getting almost beyond the control of man ... I believe we stand on the brink of Armageddon."

Graham is in London to receive the Templeton Prize for Progress in Religion on Tuesday and returns to the United States on Wednesday.

On Sunday, Graham said on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley," he hopes to return to the Soviet Union for a preaching tour, and acknowleged that his change of heart toward Soviets may appear to be "an element of opportunism."

"I believe that there are millions of people in the Soviet Union that go to church on Sunday and practice their religious faith," Graham said.

"I'm not an expert ... I learned that there are two sides to all these questions," said Graham, who more than 30 years ago called communists "Satan worshippers."

Graham, who returned from Moscow last Thursday, said he noticed in the Soviet people "a hunger for something, not necessarily God. I believe it's God ... (but) they don't know it's God."

He said he visited the Soviet Union because "Jesus said 'go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel.' He didn't say 'go into the capitalist countries only.'"

Graham agreed he had changed his tone since the beginning of the Cold War. He admitted it might look as if there were an element of opportunism in his change of heart.

"It looks that way to the outsider and probably looks that way a little bit to me," he said.

But he said his desire to preach in the Soviet Union was not egotistical: "It's not my ego, it's my calling."

He said he tried to focus on the gospel and stay away from political problems. During his visit, he attended an international conference against nuclear war and preached at Moscow's only Baptist church. He also prayed with six Pentecostalists who live in the basement of the U.S. Embassy, while seeking permission to leave the Soviet Union.

Graham's comments about religious freedom in the Sovet Union were protested Sunday by demonstrators who gathered at his alma mater, Wheaton College in Wheaton, Ill.

Some 50 demonstrators outside the Billy Graham Center carried signs reading "Billy Graham has been duped by the Soviets," "Graham eats caviar as Russian Christians suffer in jails," and "Russian Baptists tortured as Graham praises the torturers."

"...weapons are getting so sophisticated that they are getting almost beyond the control of man...I believe we stand on the brink of Armageddon."

Alabama has had right songs at right moments

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Entertainment Writer

The request was simple. He wanted to strum a few songs with the house band. All it required was a yes or no answer. The answer was affirmative.

They knew he could play. He made his living touring, picking, recording and singing. And he didn't need much introduction; one word was all that was necessary.

Alabama.

Alabama's lead guitarist, fiddler and keyboard artist Jeff Cook had asked this reviewer Sunday afternoon, immediately after a press conference with the group, if there was a place he might go and play a few with the house band after the Sunday night Chaparral Center show.

The first place that came to mind was the Stardust and Pepper Martin's band.

The concert was over about 10 p.m. Although members of Alabama sign autographs following the show, Cook signed fewer autographs and left sooner than the others. As the promoter, Ken Fowler, said, "He likes to do that (play with a local group) wherever we go."

By 11 p.m. it was all arranged. He was to play one set.

He looked exhausted, so right before they began I couldn't resist asking him, "Do you love it so much you always want to play, or is this a form of punishment?"

Laughing, he replied, "What I just got through doing is my job. I can come down here and relax. Besides, it keeps me flexible — playing with other bands."

In the spring of 1980, the quartet — Teddy Gentry, Randy Owen, Mark Herndon and Cook — were playing for tips in honky-tonks. In the spring of 1982, the same quartet had a series of No. 1 hits behind it, plus numerous country music nominations and awards.

It sounds like an overnight success story. It isn't.

Overnight stretches back 11 years to Lookout Mountain, Ala., where Gentry and Owen were raised on neighboring farms. Then, they were spending their time picking cotton and hauling hay.

Some singers have been inspired by listening to the radio. Such was not the case with Gentry and Owen. Neither had one until he was 11 years old.

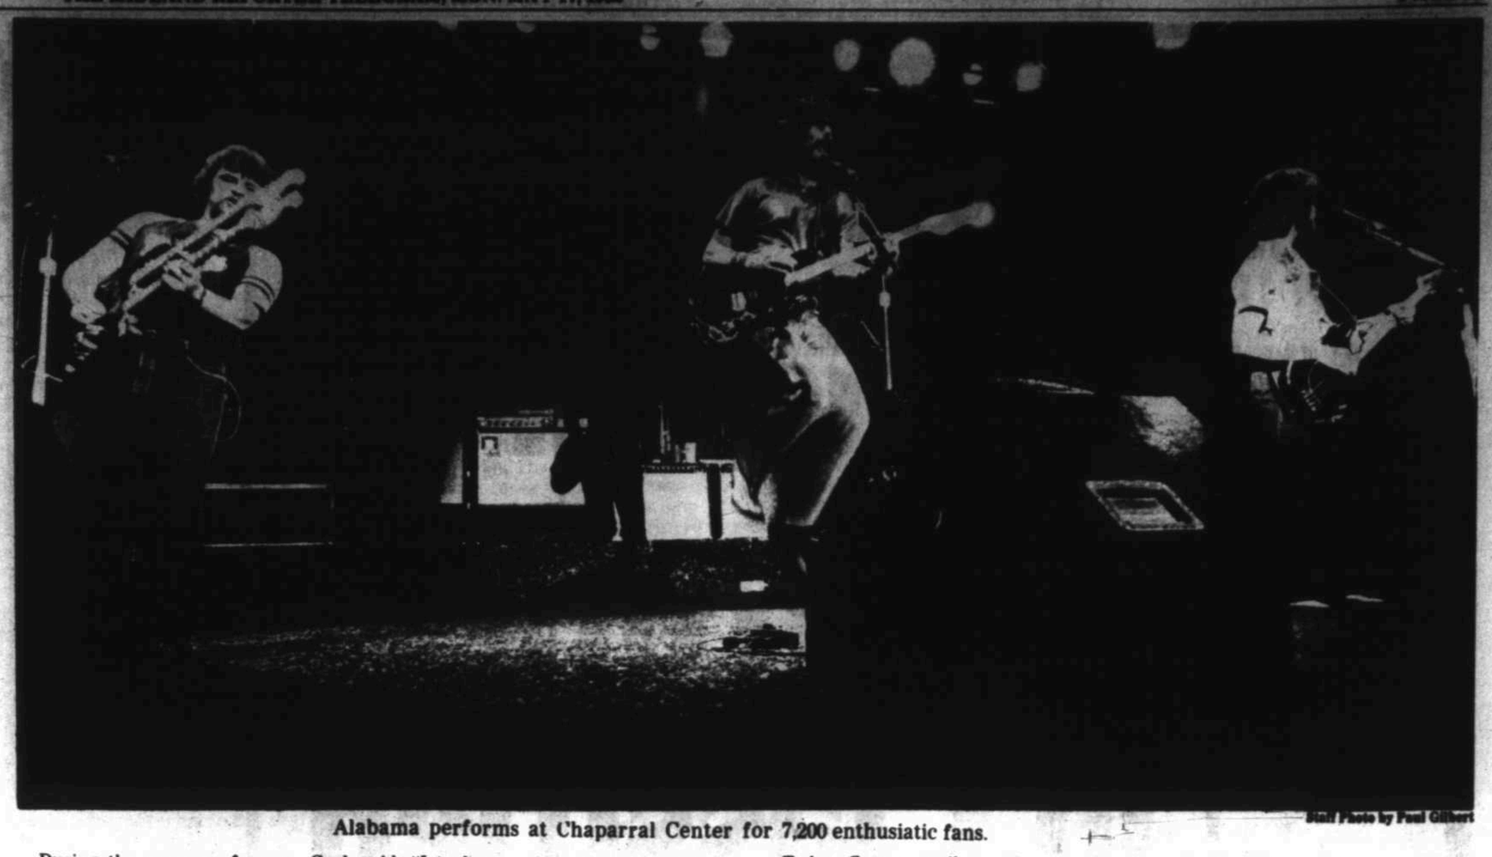

But both families did a lot of playing and singing. The music was gospel. This later led them to bluegrass and country music.

Cook's background was a little different. Raised in nearby Fort Payne, Ala., he was a disc jockey when he was 14. It was then he developed a love of the "'60s-type rock."

The three knew each other because of the family ties they shared. They are cousins.

Although they formed their first band in 1969, they had been playing together every time they had a chance since they could remember.

None has had any formal training.

During the press conference, Cook said, "I took two piano lessons. I didn't take any more because I didn't want to miss Saturday cartoons."

Owen added, "None of us read music," to which Gentry interjected, "We say, 'You go thump, thump, ding ding.' They all laughed.

The group has had several lows through the years, times when they considered giving up.

The last one was when, as Gentry said, "Jeff cut his finger. Several months of Jeff being in a real bad mood, playing with one hand," almost did it.

Jeff added, "I wasn't in a real bad mood; I was impossible for about a month."

Another difficult time occurred some years ago when Alabama lost its first drummer. Gentry considered quitting, but the other two wanted to go on, so he stayed. Herndon, who has been with the group about three years, is number eight in the chain of drum players the group has had.

Today, Gentry attributes the group's success in the last years to several factors.

"It seems every song we've put out was the right song at the right moment," he said.

"You've got to get some good songs. Being good is not good enough. The business — good lawyer, good CPA (certified public accountant), good manager, someone you can trust, — has got to be better than the music."

In the area of singles, "we do probably have more control over what we release than anybody in the business."

Quartet members are interested in doing "a good show, rather than seeing how many shows we can do. You have to go out on the stage as a unit, like a football team."

Owen perhaps summed up how they all feel when he said, "Every morning I get up, I thank God I'm part of this band."

Alabama played mix of country, rock, pop

The Alabama concert was sold out. It had been for three weeks before the Sunday performance, making it the only Chaparral Center concert which sold out before the concert.

By 4 p.m. the line to get in was forming for the 7 p.m. concert. Those who were there early had a singular purpose. They wanted to get a good seat. Unlike most concerts, except those which are rock, the seating was not reserved. It was general admission with the fiesta-style presentation which denotes Chaparral Center's rock concerts, not its country ones.

The reason for this seating was simple. Alabama has been selling out all of its concerts this tour. Fiesta-style, which means standing room only on the floor, accommodates 1,000 more bodies. The only other Chaparral Center concerts which have sold out to the 7,200 number were Ted Nugent and Heart — both rock groups.

By 6:45 p.m. Sunday, the coliseum was filled to capacity. The atmosphere was relaxed. Some fans were buying souvenirs, while others were standing in the also filled-to-capacity lines at the concession stands. Although the air conditioner system was set at 40 degrees, the heat in certain areas was West Texas summertime stifling. The dress was casual, with the majority wearing jeans.

Janie Fricke and the Heart City Band were up first. Their appearance onstage brought most of those sitting on the floor to their feet.

Her performance lasted a little over 45 minutes, during which time she sang her single hits "Do Me With Love," "Down to My Last Broken Heart" and "I'll Need Someone to Hold Me (When I Cry)," as well as other selections, including "It's A Cheating Situation," a duet she recorded with Mo Bandy.

Miss Fricke's onstage antics clearly demonstrated her showmanship abilities. She joked with the audience, sang, danced and played her way across the stage and back, creating the impression of having as much fun performing as the audience had watching her. Her energy level, combined with her talent, provided a good warm-up for Alabama's performance.

The girls in the audience particularly enjoyed the number Miss Frickie sang with Heart City Band member Benny Wilson. Besides singing vocals, Wilson also plays the harmonica, and he plays it well. Once the girls in the front rows discovered him, it would have been risky for Wilson to have gone too close to the edge of the stage. He didn't.

WHEN THE HOUSE lights were turned out after a 20 minute intermission, the crowd was turned on. This time, there was no one sitting on the floor.

Immediately, tiny white lights sparkled throughout the center, stroking across the audience, the walls and the ceiling. The stage's backdrop, a large ceiling-high banner with gnarled trees drawn on both sides and Alabama written across it in blue letters, had hung above it an equally large Confederate flag. Now, in front of it appeared the four performers this crowd came to hear.

The applause was almost deafening. The audience's reaction to the group's performance of "My Home's in Alabama" and "Tennessee River" almost brought down the house.

The music they played represented a mix of country, rock and pop. It spanned styles from the '60s rock 'n roll to the '80s crossover country, with a number of traditional country music selections thrown in for added balance. Alabama's playing of each style clearly demonstrated not only the group's versatility, but also its ability to do each well.

There was no doubt this audience agreed with what Jeff Cook, lead guitarist, fiddler and keyboard artist, said has become the group's slogan — "Ain't we having fun now?"

Following the concert, the members of Alabama — Randy Owen, Teddy Gentry and Mark Herndon and Cook — signed autographs. A clause in their contract, which they insist upon wherever they perform, reads that they will sign autographs until the last Alabama fan has left the hall. A sizeable portion of the 7,200 fans stayed to take them up on the offer.

FROM THE MAY 5 Willie Nelson concert to the Friday Charlie Daniels concert at Ector County Coliseum, local country fans have been presented with a selection of concerts. A choice is better than no choice, however, it can affect the attendance at some performances.

Such might have been the case at the Joe Stampley-Don Williams Saturday night concert at Ector County Coliseum. The show was sandwiched in between the Beach Boys Friday concert at Ector County Coliseum and Sunday's Alabama concert at Chaparral Center. Both have played West Texas in the last couple of years, the others have not.

The 2,700 fans who came out for the show weren't disappointed. Stampley warmed them up, entertaining the crowd with his antics, while Williams sang most of the songs he has written and recorded during the two decades he has been in the business.

A man of few words onstage, he sang continuously throughout the show. He did make a few comments at the start which drew laughter from the crowd.

After thanking the crowd for its response he said, "You're fantastic. It's good to be here and we are sure glad you're here and we wish the pigeons weren't."

A Review

When the laughter died down, Williams said, "We have a small pigeon problem or maybe a big pigeon problem — just happens to be whether you're sitting under where they're nesting or not."

Then he added, "Oh, well, we'll do the best we can."

Their best was certainly good enough. The audience's applause was spontaneous on a number of occasions, with two numbers — "I Believe in Love" and "Amanda" — drawing a second wave of applause. On both, Williams said, "Mercy," and sang part of each again.

Williams performed in a laid back manner, sitting throughout the show singing and picking in what appeared to be an effortless manner. It was the most relaxing and comfortable evening's entertainment this reviewer has seen in a country show.

• • •

ALSO COUNTRY was the Eddy Raven Stardust performance in Midland Wednesday. This was Raven's first Midland date.

Considered by some in the country business to be an up-and-coming star, Raven has spent much of his time during the last years writing songs for others to perform, such as "Country Green," "Good Morning Country Rain," "I Don't Want to Talk it Over" and "Sometimes I Talk in My Sleep."

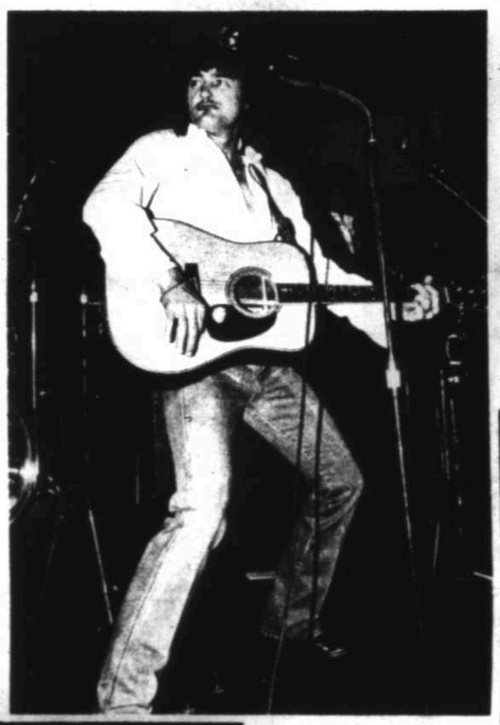

Since 1979 his releases have included "Sweet Mother Texas," "You've Got Those Eyes" and "I Should've Called."

During his two one-hour sets, he played those he has recorded and some he has written that others have recorded. His singing voice was not as clear in person as it is on his recordings. He was difficult to understand on some of the selections, with his words coming out garbled. It wasn't the sound system because Pepper Martin and his band members, the house band, were quite easy to understand.

He's quite an accomplished musician instrumentally.

The dance floor was filled throughout the concert, with the audience seeming to have a good time. And that's what Raven said he likes — to play dancing music to a happy crowd.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Certificates would have been better

By BILL DOYLE

Q. We are a couple in our mid 50s and earn $20,000 a year. Our main goal is to save for retirement in about eight years. We own our home and have saved about $55,000, approximately $40,000 of which is in individual retirement accounts and savings certificates. It is the other $15,000 my husband is worried about.

After listening to a salesman, I put $5,000 into a money market mutual fund, $5,000 into tax-exempt bond funds and $5,000 into a real estate fund. Are these investments right for people such as us? Or, should I have listened to my husband and put the money in 182-day savings certificates?

A. Looking at the total investments you made, you would have been better off listening to your husband. Of the three things that salesman put you into, one was sensible and the other two have to be counted as bad moves.

The money market mutual fund, which produces about the same yield at 182-day savings certificates makes sense for you. There is virtually no risk involved and you can withdraw the money you put in at any time. The other two are different stories.

Because tax-exempt mutual funds hold municipal bonds, which pay interest free of federal income tax, such funds pay tax-free dividends. But that yield is much lower than you can get from such things as money market funds and savings certificates. That makes tax-exempt funds suitable only for people in high income tax brackets — not you.

The real estate fund has to be counted as highly speculative and also unsuitable for people in your financial situation.

Here's more food for thought. The money market fund is a "no-load" fund, on which there is no sales commission. The other two are "load" funds, on which you paid fat commissions. Don't be surprised if that salesman calls again and suggests you switch out of the money fund into one of his load funds. That would give him another commission.

* * *

Q. I have invested in a tax-exempt mutual fund. The fund holds many different municipal bonds, from which it collects tax-free interest. What does the fund's management do with that money between the time it gets the interest and distributes it to fund shareholders as tax-free dividends?

If that money is put into U.S. Treasury bills and other short-term securities, it should earn more money. If the interest on T bills is then passed on to fund shareholders, is it taxable?

A. To begin with, any mutual fund worth its salt "doesn't keep a dime in the house overnight," as the expression goes. Any organization handling large amounts of securities and money should never let money just sit idle. A fund's "cash position" can be put to work in short-term investments — even for just one day — to earn more money.

If a municipal bond mutual fund distributes to shareholders interest it has earned on T bills and other taxable investments, the shareholders then have to pay income tax on that part of their dividends. The Form 1099 you receive from the fund each year will give you a break-out showing what part of your dividend is tax-free and what part is taxable.

Most likely, however, the fund won't distribute the taxable interest it receives. Instead, it will use that money to pay the fund's operating expenses. That will leave only non-taxable income to be passed along to fund shareholders.

* * *

Q. I invested in a mutual fund over 10 years ago. I have had no communications from the fund or its custodian bank for several years. The brokerage firm through which I made the investment shows no interest in my problem. I wrote to the fund's bank, twice, by registered mail. No answer. Where can I file a complaint and get some action?

A. Write to Office of Consumer Affairs, U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, 500 North Capital Street, Washington, D.C. 20549. You're what's known in the mutual fund business as "an orphan account." You haven't bought shares and paid a commission in so long that no brokerage house salesman is interested in you.

Recession puts in appearance in Oklahoma's oil country

By CHARLIE SMITH
Associated Press Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Oklahoma's oil-fueled economy raced full speed as hard times hobbled the rest of the nation. But a slowdown in the search for energy is costing the state thousands of jobs and its "recession proof" image.

For the past two years the boom in gas and unregulated oil gave the state surpluses — $350 million is projected this year — while other states paid the bus fare to send their unemployed to Oklahoma.

Jobless workers lured by the state's unemployement rate, once the nation's lowest, flocked from the Frost Belt to live in tent cities and labor in the oil fields.

Firms sprang up virtually overnight looking for oil, and companies expanded to produce the goods needed to keep the boom going.

Now a glut of oil worldwide, which has depressed prices, has sharply slowed the petroleum business. Workers in industries throughout the drilling process are getting pink slips. Rigs — once scarce at the height of the boom — are idle. And many of the overnight "oilies" and firms have vanished as quickly as they appeared.

The same thing is happening in other oil states. The drop in oil prices has cost the Louisiana state treasury about $80 million. Texas is in a state budget standoff because petroleum-related tax receipts are down. Alaska, which counts on oil for 90 percent of its revenue, has cut state spending plans by 25 percent.

"It's hit like somebody just threw a switch," said Thomas McLane, staff representative of the United Steelworkers of America in Tulsa. "This is just an indication that Oklahoma is feeling the effects of the recession just like the rest of the country."

Industry officials say there's less oil being drilled because it isn't profitable to get it out of the ground. And because of the lack of profits, many new firms have bailed out.

Most of the wells in Oklahoma are drilled by independents, who claim they take all of the chances in the risky drilling process, and then provide petroleum to the major oil companies.

Spokesmen for the independents blame the slowdown on a worldwide oil glut, the falling price of crude, inflation, high interest rates and what many see as a vacillating government policy toward energy.

Will Bowman of the Oklahoma Employment Securities Commission estimates that unemployment among the oil-related manufacturing industries has reached "into the low thousands."

Bowman said Oklahoma's overall jobless rate could soon reach 6 percent — double the figure of one year ago — but still well below the national jobless rate of 9.4 percent.

Layoffs have been announced by a number of companies. CMI in Oklahoma City is typical. CMI, which makes roadbuilding equipment, added 600 workers to branch out into the manufacturing of oilfield equipment last year, but now has laid off 500 workers, a spokesman for the firm said.

Refineries also are feeling the pinch. Cities Service in Tulsa and Phillips Petroleum in Bartlesville have announced plans to cut operations. Texaco's Tulsa refinery is closing.

But stubbornly resisting the downturn is activity in the energy-rich Deep Anadarko Basin of western Oklahoma. According to some statistics, the area last year was ranked as the second leading geologic province in the nation.

Rick Conner, a statistician with the Oklahoma Corporation Commission, said the deeper wells, in addition to being more expensive to drill, also take more time to complete, so any slowdown would not be felt immediately. He also said much of the activity — done mostly by major oil companies — centers on drilling for natural gas at depths deeper than those affected by price regulation.

Because fewer firms are participating in new drilling, fewer landmen — who search out the leases on land suspected of having oil — are working.

Carl Gungoll, partner in Warn and Gungoll Oil Producers in Enid, Okla., said investors who once pumped funds into the oil business with hopes of overnight riches during the boom are now putting their money in other projects.

Despite the layoffs at the manufacturing level, oilfield spokesmen said they're optimistic. Many believe the downswing could be a lull while the bloated petroleum market shrinks to normal levels.

And most industry watchers say they believe that although the "fly-by-night" firms will be driven out of business by the slowdown, the large, established firms will continue to prosper.

Much more than cattle auctioned at Connally's annual black-tie event

Connally

HOUSTON (AP) — The dress was black tie. The host was John B. Connally, former U.S. Treasury secretary and governor of Texas. The guests came from 40 states and five nations, by invitation only. The event was a cattle auction.

It was the sixth annual black-tie Western Heritage Sale that Connally had arranged, and 1,200 people attended Saturday night.

Cattle wasn't the only commodity being auctioned. Included were 26 American quarter horses, 26 Santa Gertrudis bulls and 27 objects of contemporary art.

Auction officials said they netted about $3.46 million. Last year, about $4 million in sales was recorded.

Among the lucky bidders was Donald Crawford, a rancher from Carrizo Springs, Texas, who paid $150,000 for a purebred American quarter horse. Another buyer paid $140,000 for an oil painting by Tom Lovell of Santa Fe, N.M., and a painting by Howard Terpning of Tucson, Ariz., sold for $130,000.

BOSTON (AP) — An animated Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis rose and cheered as her family made the Boston University commencement a family outing.

Mrs. Onassis, in a white frock with navy polka-dots, was accompanied by her son, John F. Kennedy Jr., a student at Brown University, and her daughter, Caroline, at two Sunday ceremonies where her nephew, Anthony Radziwill, was one of the graduates.

When Radziwill was called to collect his diploma, Mrs. Onassis and her family rose and cheered. Among the group was the graduate's mother, Lee Radziwill, Mrs. Onassis' sister.

The group attended the commencement Sunday morning of more than 5,000 from Boston University and a separate ceremony later in the day at the university's School of Public Communication, from which Radziwill received his degree.

Haley

BALTIMORE (AP) — Alex Haley put Juffure, Gambia, on the map in his best-selling novel "Roots," but he says the West African village feels it was given short shrift from the writer.

Haley said in an interview published Sunday in the Baltimore Sun that Juffure — the village Haley traced as his ancestral home in the novel spanning hundreds of years of black history — got only one promise from him: help to build a mosque.

He told the paper he has fulfilled that promise by sending $6,000 to an engineer in Juffure to get the mosque started.

The paper quoted the chief of Juffure, 78-year-old Bakary Taal, as saying that Haley had promised more.

"He made a lot of promises," Taal told the Sun through an interpreter. "He said he wanted to give us a school, a mosque or something beneficial, but he has not done anything."

Taal added, "My people are not angry, just disappointed." And, pointing to the half-finished cinderblock mosque, he said, "We started this mosque because everybody in this village prays to Allah. Now we are out of money. We still hope he will come back and give us what he prommised."

Juffure has about 200 residents, most either fishermen or subsistence farmers, the paper said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Mary Martin thinks New York Mayor Edward Koch is "a pixie" like Peter Pan and says she'd even enjoy teaching him how to crow like the boy who refused to grow up.

"I think of Mayor Koch in flight," the 67-year-old star said Sunday on WNBC-TV's News Forum. Miss Martin, who has played Peter Pan on Broadway and television, praised the mayor's theatrical talent, saying he has "magic" and "rapport with people."

When she compared Koch to "a pixie," an interviewer asked if that meant he was "like Peter Pan."

"Yeah, I think he is," Miss Martin answered.

Young grad's dad says siblings 'show promise'

Jay Luo

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — The father of a shy, solemn 12-year-old who became the youngest college graduate in U.S. history says his two other children show promise of matching their brother's academic feats.

Jay Luo, son of immigrants from Taiwan, joined about 1,460 other Boise State University students at graduation ceremonies Sunday. The young Luo earned a degree in mathematics.

He will enter graduate school at Stanford University as early as this summer, says his father, Zong Luo.

The elder Luo, who plans take his family to California to be with Jay, told reporters at a news conference that his 9-year-old daughter and 3-year-old son already show academic talents.

He said Kay studies in a program for talented and gifted children and her teachers say she needs more attention.

Bobby, the youngest Luo, may be the smartest of the lot, said the father. "He has every chance of chaleng-ing Jay," he said.

The elder Luo is an engineer for a computer company. His wife, Judy, graduated at the top of her class at Providence College, he said.

The two youngest Luos will have to work hard to match brother Jay, who spent less than three years in college and skipped high school and junior high entirely. He maintained a B-plus average while carrying more than a full college class schedule.

William Mech, the boy's adviser and a past president of the National Collegiate Honors Council, helped Luo enroll in part-time classes at age 9.

Jay was obviously nervous at the news conference before the ceremony, sweating and slumping down in his chair while he gave short responses to reporters' questions.

The family had prohibited interviews before graduation, channeling inquiries through school officials.

Mech said he is attempting to compile the experiences of those who have taught academically gifted children to provide future prodigies with advice.

According to the "Guinness Book of World Records," the youngest college graduate in the United States before Luo was Merrill K. Wolf of Cleveland, who got his degree in music from Yale University in September 1945, the month of his 14th birthday. The book lists the youngest graduate as William Thomson, later Lord Kelvin, who graduated from Glasgow (Scotland) University in November 1834 at the age of 10.

World's Fair officials honor surprised Alabama family as 'millionth visitors'

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — World's Fair officials rolled out the red carpet for a surprised Alabama family designated the "millionth visitors" to the 2-week-old exposition.

Tommy and Vera Britt of Cullman, Ala., were picked at random Sunday by fair officials as they were about to walk in the east gate with their two young daughters and infant son.

"These people are very close to being the millionth," said Bill Carroll, the fair's communications vice president. "But anybody in their right mind would know that with four gates on different ends of the site there's no way we can know exactly who the millionth person is."

Meanwhile, fair officials said they planned to install seven more water fountains as the summer heat intensifies. Mint Lingefelt of the fair's emergency services said many visitors suffered heat stroke Saturday.

But a sudden shower Sunday cooled temperatures to the low 80s, and Ms. Lingefelt said heat-related health problems were minimal.

"I guess if we hadn't spent 20 minutes arguing over where to park we wouldn't have been the millionth visitors," Mrs. Britt said.

In addition to free admission — which for the Britts was worth $28.15 — the family received an assortment of souvenirs, a VIP tour of the 72-acre downtown fair site and season passes worth $250.

Fruits, beverages contain tannic acid

Dear Dr. Solomon: I remember that back in high school I was taught that tea contains tannic acid. I never heard that it was found in any other food. Do any other foods have it? — Chris, Newport News, Va.

Dear Chris: Tannic acid occurs in fruits as well as in tea. It is also used to clarify beer and wines, and may be added to caramel, brandy and other flavors.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I always feel jittery and on edge, but I don't like the idea of popping pills. Is there any chance that biofeedback would help me calm down a little? I'm ready to try almost anything. — Charlie, Modesto, Calif.

Dear Charlie: The reviews on the value of biofeedback in reducing chronic anxiety have been mixed. Some studies have suggested that the technique is effective. However, critics maintain that the studies could be misleading since the subjects' anxiety might have disappeared spontaneously. They also contend that any benefit realized from biofeedback might not be due to the biofeedback itself, but to its placebo effect — that is, the patient expected the technique to be effective and responded accordingly.

Dr. Leonard White, of the Long Island Research Institute in New York, says that other methods, such as meditation or progressive relaxation, are easier and less expensive than the use of biofeedback.

If, as you say, you are ready to try almost anything, why not start with a complete physical examination. It is always easier to prescribe a course of treatment that is based on facts rather than guesswork.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have been reading your column for years and really enjoy it and find it extremely helpful. I was surprised to learn at our social that three different members of our church travel all the way to Baltimore to see you. One had a weight problem, one wanted to stop smoking and one had a thyroid problem. They said you are a medical detective. What kind of medical detective cases do you solve? Are these the same things you write about in your column? Have you had patients who have come further than from Houston? — Mrs. J.S., Houston

Dear Mrs. J.S.: I am pleased that you enjoy reading my column; I enjoy writing it. I suppose that like many doctors, I am a medical detective, trying to find out exactly what is wrong with a patient and then specifically treating the patient for that specific illness. The majority of patients I write about and see have the following problems: they want to lose weight, want to stop smoking, thyroid, adrenal, pituitary, parathyroid, allergy, male and female hormone problems, hyperactivity in children, excessive hair falling out, dry skin, lack of energy, swelling, excessive gas, increased belching, arthritis, constipation, decreased sex drive or decreased sex performance, diabetes, gout, male infertility, impotence, irregular menstrual or no menstrual periods, women with increased hair on face, arms and/or legs, hypoglycemia, headaches and people who want to gain weight. Over half the patients that I see come from out of state. The farthest patients come from Athens, Greece; Cairo, Egypt; and Tel Aviv, Israel — so Houston is not the farthest.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer an many questions as possible in his column.

Coalition pushing rewrite of 1902 Reclamation Act

By WARD SINCLAIR
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — As most of the country's farmers face federal farm program cuts and the gloomiest economic picture since the Depression, Congress is about to extend big new subsidies to irrigation-water users in the West.

A coalition of western agribusiness groups, irrigators and legislators is pushing through a generous rewrite of the 1902 Reclamation Act, which provides below-cost irrigation water to farmers in 17 states.

A House-passed bill and a more bounteous version pending in the Senate would broaden, in a variety of ways, the tax-subsidized benefits available to federal water users in the arid reclamation states.

With support from the Reagan administration, despite its professed insistence that farmers pay their way without federal subsidy, the western coalition is pressing for quick final action to avoid the strict enforcement of the 1902 law ordered by federal courts.

The fight, bubbling for years in Congress, appears to be virtually over.

Opponents-family farmer, environmental and religious groups-concede that their hopes for reform are down the drain. Traditional liberal critics of the water subsidy, typified by Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., have thrown in the towel, saying they have done all they can.

Senate floor action on a committee-passed bill has been blocked temporarily by Sen. Richard G. Lugar, R-Ind., who questions increased water subsidies while farmers elsewhere are being urged to get along with less federal aid. Lugar, aides say, may offer a substitute measure.

Although details remain to be worked out, the new legislation would:

— Increase the limit on subsidized water from the present 160 acres (640 per family) to at least 960 acres, even though about 96 percent of reclamation farmers already are under the 640-acre limit. The House bill sets a 960-acre limit; the Senate bill allows up to 2,080 acres.

— Require that "full cost" be paid for irrigation water. True full cost, according to the Congressional Budget Office, would produce $16 billion in new payments to the government. New revenue from the House "full-cost" version is estimated at $3 million. The federal subsidy in some areas ranges as high as $800 per acre.

— Provide permanent subsidies to big companies and wealthy growers; authorize absentee and new corporate ownership; allow owners of land in excess of acreage limits to determine who will get their water rights; permit leasing of additional land at higher, but still subsidized, water rates.

— Exempt U.S. Army Corps of Engineers projects in California, where major corporations receive irrigation water, from the law's limitations. Corporate operators in those projects include the J.G. Boswell Co., the world's largest cotton grower, Superior Oil, Tenneco and Chevron USA.

The House bill, passed earlier this month on a 228-to-117 vote, was virtually unchanged from the version adopted by the Interior Committee, dominated by westerners and lobbied heavily by the irrigation interests.

Their power drowned out protests by the National Farmers Union (NFU) and the National Grange, among others, who charged that the measure would guarantee an end to the small-farm development envisioned by the 1902 law.

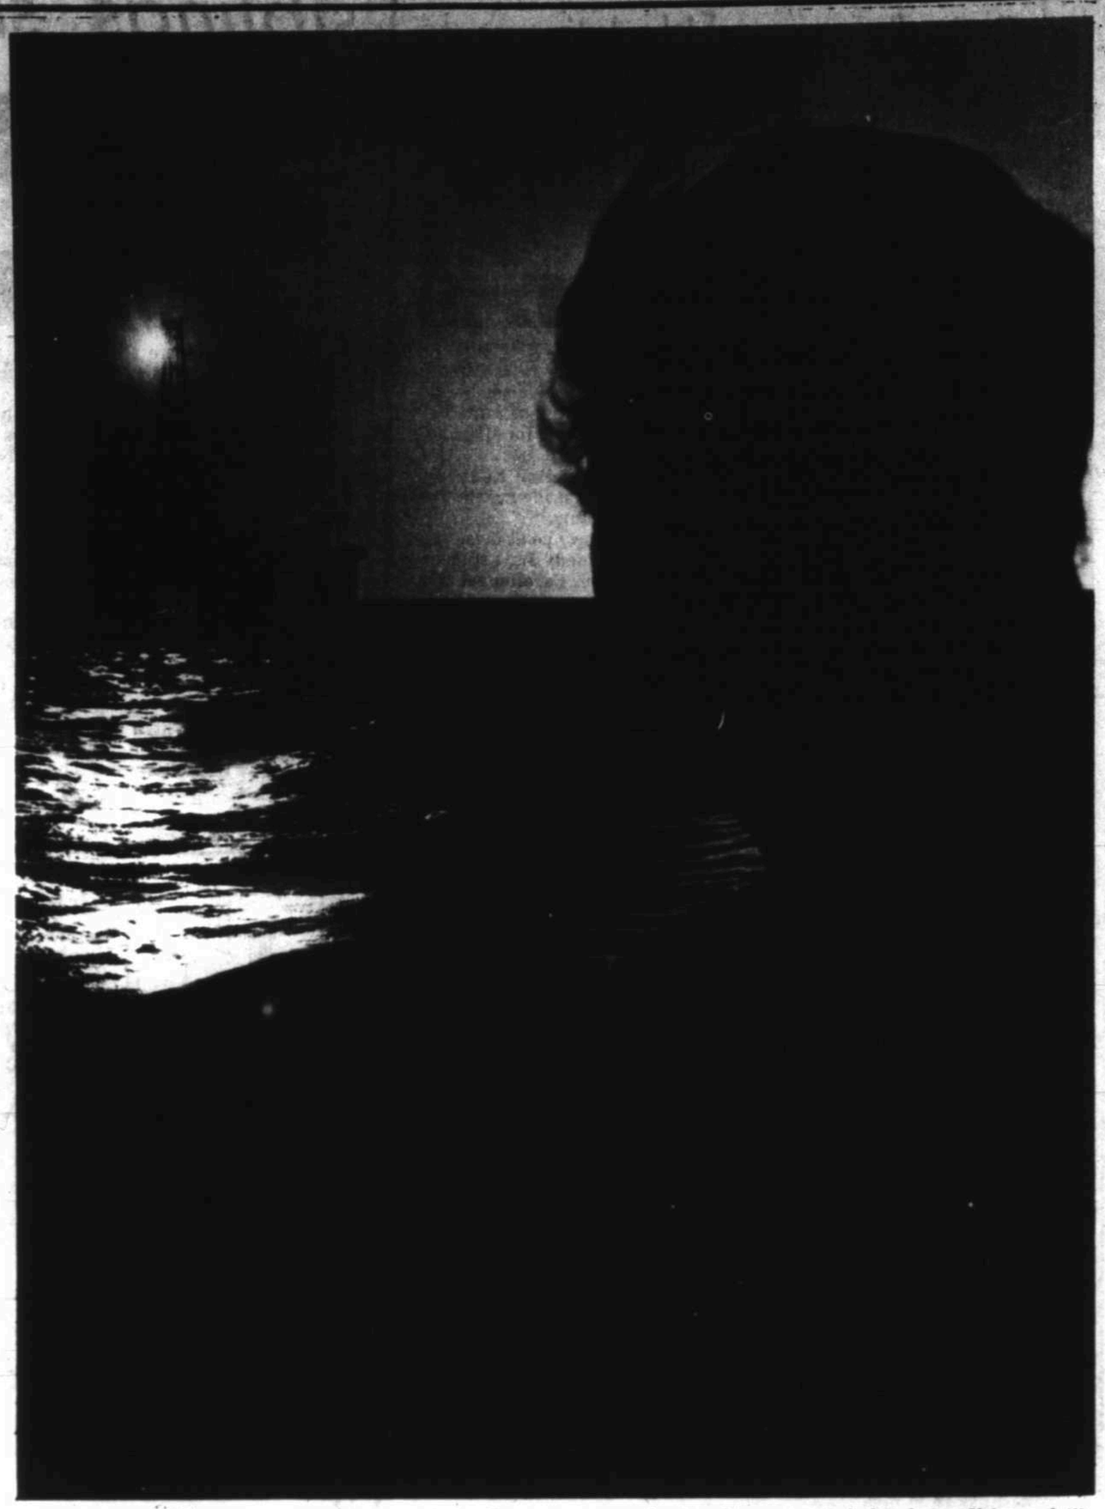

NFU president George Stone said both the House and Senate bills "propose to legalize vast subsidies to a relatively few, but large, corporate farms and investment syndicates."

Rep. James Weaver, D-Ore., agreed, calling the House version "a bald-faced, anti-family farm package of direct subsidies to the richest of America's agribusiness interests ... . How can Congress justify a fat subsidy to the richest agribusiness concerns when the rest of the nation's farmers are facing ruin?"

Reps. David F. Emery, R-Maine, and Dale E. Kildee, D-Mich., made similar criticisms. Kildee, for example, said the bill "would really legalize that which the court has declared to be illegal."

Their arguments made little impact.

Rep. Abraham Kazen Jr., D-Tex., chairman of the subcommittee that drafted the bill, said, "There have been some abuses, as there are in any program of this nature. But there have been substantial investments made in labor, as well as in money, by persons who in good faith have relied upon the representations of their government. They must be treated fairly, as must the government itself. (This) is a fair bill."

Shell to spend $50 billion for exploration, development

BOSTON (SWN) — Shell Oil Company anticipates spending about $50 billion over the next 10 years to find and develop energy reserves, John F. Bookout, Shell president said.

That level of capital and exploration spending would be "some three times the $17 billion expended in the last decade when our gross assets in exploration and production increased almost five fold," Bookout said in remarks prepared for the Boston Security Analysts Society, Inc.

The $17 billion includes the $3.6 billion Shell spent to acquire Belridge Oil Company in 1979.

Reviewing the company's accomplishments in exploration and production, Bookout said, "Shell Oil's domestic hydrocarbon reserves of 3.5 billion barrels of crude oil equivalent at the end of 1981 were only two percent below their level 10 years earlier, and that was after we produced 3.3 billion barrels during the period."

He added, "I am confident that our reserves in 1991 will be higher than they are today."

Bookout said his confidence was based on Shell's expectations that "the major exploration and development areas of the next decade will be on the outer continental shelf and in enhanced recovery. Shell is a leader in these areas, and enhanced recovery alone could add many hundreds of millions of barrels to our reserves in the 1980s."

Bookout reviewed Shell's outlook for the balance of 1982. He said, "It is too early in the year, under the circumstances, to predict results for the full year, but we cannot rule out even moderately lower earnings. The outcome largely hinges on oil prices and the level of economic activity." Nonetheless, he said, Shell expects no significant activity adjustments to its capital and exploratory expenditure program for the year.

Looking at the main segments of Shell's business, Bookout said, "In exploration and production, we may not be able to equal last year's net income unless we see improvement in domestic crude oil prices over the months ahead."

He noted, however, that there has been recent price strengthening for crude and products on the spot market. Bookout also pointed to several other positive factors that should impact the E&P segment, such as lower Windfall Profit Tax, slower rates of increase, or even decline, in some costs, and the prospect of a 20 percent increase in natural gas prices. Production levels for oil and gas are expected to be essentially flat for the year.

On oil products, Bookout said, "Our first quarter net income of $34 million looked good relative to most major competitors, but we need, and expect to have, higher levels of income in this segment in the remaining quarters of the year." He also said, "We will be helped in the second quarter by an after-tax gain of some $30 million from the sale of our Ciniza Refinery in New Mexico."

However, he added, "Although full-year results may not equal the $360 million net income we earned in 1981 (in oil products), the year should be one of our better ones."

On chemical products, Bookout said, "Whether or not we exceed last year's performance depends almost entirely on the economy."

BOTTOM LINES

San Francisco — Natomas Company reported 1982 first quarter earnings of $49.9 million, down from $58.2 million earned during the comparable quarter of 1981, and revenues of $389.6 million, compared with $365.4 million reported in the same period last year.

Earnings per common and common equivalent share were 92 cents during the first quarter of 1982, versus $1.08 during the same quarter last year. First quarter earnings were down primarily due to increased interest expense, reduced demand and prices for the company's petroleum products, and were offset in part by gains from the compnay's transportation, geothermal, coal and real estate operations.

Natomas' President Dorman L. Commons said the company had reduced the 1982 capital budget by 10 percent, yet it still is a record budget for the company.

••••

OMAHA — InterNorth, Inc. has announced its first quarter, 1982, results. The company reported earnings of $106.6 million, or $2.40 per share, representing a decrease of 8 percent from the $116.9 million or $2.61 per share earned during the same quarter a year ago.

The company recorded operating revenues of $1.45 billion, up 27 percent over revenues of $1.14 billion for the same quarter last year.

The compabny's natural gas operations recorded a gain in first-quarter earnings, to $1.93 per share. Most of the increase can be attributed to the winter weather, which was 30 percent colder during the first quarter, 1982, than in the same period in 1981.

••••

Newport Beach, Cal. — Smith International, Inc. reported increased results of operations for the first quarter ended March 31, 1982. Net income was up 46 percent, to $35.7 million. Earnings per share were up 46 percent to $1.56, and revenues were up 23 percent, to $322 million.

Domestic revenues for the quarter increased 25 percent over the same period in 1981, to $211 million, accounting for about two-thirds of total revenues.

The larger proportionate increase in income compared with revenues was due to income in the first quarter of 1981 being reduced by the McEvoy acquisition and by a lower tax rate in the first quarter of 1982, according to chairman, president and chief officer Jerry Neely.

The board of directors declared a quarterly cash dividend of 24 cents per common share, payable May 28, 1982. This is a 20 percent increase over the quarterly dividend announced last year at this time.

••••

Tulsa — Cities Service Company reported net income for the first quarter of 1982 totaled $53.3 million, equal to 68 cents per share. This represents a decline of 1 percent on a per share basis from the 1981 net income of $57.7 million, which included a loss on discontinued operations of $8.5 million, or 10 cents a share.

It was also a decline of 14 percent on a per share basis from the comparable income from continuing operations for the three months ended March 31, 1981.

Nicklaus ends two-year drought at Colonial

Post first victory since 1980 U.S. Open

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Jack Nicklaus was on the 10th green studying his birdie putt when he glanced at the scoreboard.

"I said, 'hmmm, something's changed,'" Nicklaus muttered to himself.

What was about to change Sunday was Nicklaus winning his first tournament in two years, the elusive Colonial National Invitation which had eluded him in nine tries.

Nicklaus saw that challengers Andy North and Danny Edwards had found disaster on the tricky pond-fronted ninth hole. North had made double bogey and Edwards triple bogey.

"I decided to do something about it, and I turned around and made the putt for birdie," Nicklaus said.

It was a familiar scenario for the man who now has earned 69 tour victories and $3,907,320. Give him an opening and he'll bury you with his putter.

North temporarily recovered from the shock with two birdies to tie; then, Nicklaus' killer instinct took over again.

North, trying to win his first tournament since the 1980 U.S. Open, three-putted the 15th hole.

Nicklaus responded by canning a 17-footer that broke a foot for birdie. The tournament was over. Nicklaus strolled to the clubhouse with a 3-under-par 67 and a 72-hole total of 7-under-par 273, pocketing the $63,000 first prize check.

North was three shots back, winning $37,800 with a final round 72 and a four-day total of 276.

Jerry Pate shot 71 for third place, a shot behind North, and Tom Kite was a stroke behind with a final round 68.

"Anytime you go through a period where you haven't won and you feel you should have ... well (the feeling) is just great," said Nicklaus. "I kept wondering when the wheels would come off, and it didn't happen."

Nicklaus hadn't played at "Hogan's Alley," the nickname of Colonial Country Club because Ben Hogan won here five times, since 1975.

He was 0-for-9. He also hadn't won a tournament since the 1980 PGA.

"I haven't played well here before because I didn't use my head," said Nicklaus. "I had failed to do so to this point."

Asked if he was starting to doubt whether he would ever win again, Nicklaus replied: "No! Now let's get off that question."

He added "The feeling to have won again is a nice feeling ... when they get far apart you sometimes forget how good it is."

Nicklaus' sense of humor bubbled to the surface when he walked into the press room, eyed some of his critics, and quipped: "Well, it's been about a half-hour since I've won."

Nicklaus had some seeing-eye help for his putts. Son Steve caddied and Nicklaus decided he would ask for advice reading the greens.

"Steve really helped me," said Nicklaus. "I'm not sure if he is going to get a bonus. We'll have to work that out ... we haven't negotiated that."

North said of Nicklaus' performance: "It took a great score by a great player on a great course."

At 42 years of age, Jack is back.

He had only been gone two years.

Islanders capture third Stanley Cup

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Sometimes the vanquished have the best perspective of the battle.

That was the case Sunday night when the Stanley Cup finals were over and the New York Islanders had swept the Vancouver Canucks. It was the third straight National Hockey League championship for the 10-year-old Islanders, an incredible achievement. Their 3-1 victory in the fourth game made the Islanders the first United States-based franchise to capture three Cups in a row.

"(Bryan) Trottier is the best player in the game today," said Canucks Coach Roger Neilson. "(Mike) Bossy is the best scorer. (Denis) Potvin is the best playoff defenseman and (Al) Arbour is the best coach.

"They're going to be tough for a long while to come."

They've been too tough for the oppsition for three seasons.

Bossy had two power play goals in the second period and was named the most valuable player in the playoffs, in which he scored 17 times. Trottier had a pair of assists and finished as the the No. 1 point man with 29, including a record 23 assists. Potvin also had two assists and Arbour won his seventh Cup, four as a player.

"If we don't rank with the best teams in history," said goalie Bill Smith, who has backstopped the Islanders to the three titles, "then I don't know what more we can do."

General Manager Bill Torrey, who built what now may fairly be called a hockey dynasty on Long Island, wasn't looking for more right now.

"This team in three years has won all kinds of series in every kind of way," he said. "This team deserves everything they'll get.

"Every one gets tougher and better. There's more satisfaction every year."

Torrey was asked whether the Islanders could surpass Montreal's five straight Cups, won from 1956-60.

"I'm just thinking about No. 4," he said. "Otherwise, we can never get to six."

"Winning three in a row sets us apart," said captain Potvin, who accepted the Cup from NHL President John Ziegler, then skated it around the rink for the third year in a row. "That's something you never get tired of. I'll sit back tomorrow and read all the accolades about us. I'll enjoy that."

Butch Goring, on an assist from Potvin, put the Islanders on top at 11:38 of the first period by beating Canuck goalie Richard Brodeur.

Stan Smyl tied it by poking home his own rebound at 18:09, but Bossy took charge in the middle session. He knocked in the rebound of Potvin's shot with just two seconds left on a Darcy Rota penalty at 5:00. Three minutes later, Bossy blasted home a 30-foot drive with Smyl penalized.

"Their power play killed us," said Brodeur. "Bossy doesn't waste any time. He's the greatest scorer in the league right now."

And the Islanders are the greatest team, perhaps one of the best ever, as Smith insisted.

"We deserve to be called a great hockey team," said left wing Clark Gillies. "But we'll leave it up to the people across Canada and the U.S to decide how great."

Baseball Roundup

Rookie lifts Rangers in extra innings

By The Associated Press

Garry Templeton smashed a three-run home run in the ninth inning, Sunday, highlighting a seven-run San Diego rally that carried the Padres past Montreal 8-2.

That inning in Montreal, however, only the second biggest inning of the day in the National League.

Bob Bailor drove in three runs with a pair of singles in a nine-run sixth inning as the New York Mets routed the Los Angeles Dodgers 13-4.

In Sunday's lone night game, Baltimore edged Seattle 5-4 on Rick Dempsey's sacrifice fly in the 10th inning. Rich Dauer and Ken Singleton had homers for the Orioles, while Mariners starter Gaylord Perry struck out 11 in a losing cause.

Montreal ursed a 2-1 lead into the ninth inning against San Diego. But with one out, rookie Alan Wiggins singled and stole second. After Juan Bonilla walked, Templeton tagged reliever Jeff Reardon for his second homer of the year, thrusting the Padres in front. Before the inning was over, Sixto Lezcano and Dave Edwards added RBI-singles and Luis Salazar drove in two runs with a double.

Rick Mahler, who pitched two shutouts in the first week of the season but had not won a game since then, broke his dry spell by hurling Atlanta past St. Louis. The Braves scored their runs with two out in the first inning with Bob Horner's two-run double fueling the rally.

Philadelphia's Mike Krukow hurled a three-hitter and the Phillies won their 13th game in the last 14 starts, beating San Francisco. Krukow, 3-2, struck out seven and walked two and did not allow a hit after the third inning.

Mario Soto spaced seven hits, pitching Cincinnati past Pittsburgh. Alex Trevino drilled three singles, driving in two runs and scoring another.

Three Chicago pitchers combined for a four-hitter as the Cubs nipped Houston. Doug Bird worked the first seven innings before Bill Campbell and Willie Hernandez finished up. Hernandez came on to strike out Alan Knicely for the final out with two runners on base.

Steve Kemp and Tom Paciorek drove in five runs between them and rookie Salome Barojas posted his ninth save of the season as the White Sox defeated Milwaukee.

Alan Trammell belted a grand slam homer and Larry Herndon's solo shot in the seventh inning moved Detroit past Minnesota. Mike Ivie and Chet Lemon also homered for the Tigers with Randy Johnson, Tom Brunansky, John Castino and Dave Engle connecting for the Twins.

Dennis Leonard and Dan Quisenberry combined for a five-hitter and John Wathan and Frank White contributed three hits apiece to Kansas City's victory over Boston.

Rookie George Wright tripled home one run in the eighth and then singled home Texas' winner in the 10th as the Rangers topped Toronto.

Ken Forsch pitched a four-hitter and Reggie Jackson and Fred Lynn smashed home runs as California blanked Cleveland. Jackson' homer was his fifth and Lynn hit his first since May 1, 1981.

Davey Lopes rapped two RBI singles as the Oakland A's celebrated Manager Billy Martin's 54th birthday with a 7-6 victory over the Yankees.

High heat slows Indy qualifying

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Motorsports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Geoff Brabham, one of 11 drivers to soar over the 200 mph mark during practice at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway this month, and Dennis Firestone were the only qualifiers in Sunday's slow-paced round of time trials for the Indianapolis 500.

Brabham, 30, the son of former world driving champion and Indy-car racer Jack Brabham of Australia, qualified for his second Indy race by putting together a solid, four-lap qualifying average of 198.906 mph.

That made last year's fifth-place finisher the 11th fastest of the 22 entries who completed qualifying runs in the first weekend of time trials for the May 30 race. The rest of the 33-car starting field will be determined during the final two rounds of qualifications next Saturday and Sunday.

The sun-baked track was open for practice most of the day as the non-qualified drivers chose either to wait for the cool of the final hour, between 6 p.m. and 7 p.m., EDT, or to use the next five days of practice to try to find enough speed to make the race-day field in next weekend's qualifying.

Rick Mears set a track qualifying record in Saturday's opening round of time trials, zipping around the track for a four-lap average of 207.004. His top one-lap speed of 207.612 also broke the record set in 1978 by Tom Sneva.

Brabham, who now makes his home in San Clemente, Calif., got onto the track twice Saturday without finishing an official lap.

"We had problems yesterday, a mixup with the green flag (taking one too many warmup laps), which meant we didn't have an official run," Brabham explained. "So we went to the back of the line for another attempt, but, unfortunately, we burned a piston the second time.

"I'm just glad to get in the race without a problem today," he continued. "The car was pushing pretty bad, but I felt it didn't matter whether I went 196 or 200. I would start in the same position (21st) for the race."

Firestone, a two-time Indy starter who finished 10th a year ago, clipped off a qualifying run of 197.217 mph in his Milodon-powered Eagle race car. The 37-year-old driver from Gardena, Calif., dedicated his effort to his friend and fellow race driver Gordon Smiley, who was killed in a fiery crash during a warmup lap Saturday at the Speedway.

Smiley, 33, from Grapevine, Texas, was the first driver killed at Indianapolis in nine years.

"I know Gordon would have wanted me to do this," Firestone said. "He was a fine racer and a good friend and I just felt I wanted to do this for him. I'm glad I'm in the race."

The only other drivers to make attempts on Sunday were Greg Leffler and rookie Jim Hickman. Both called off their attempts after three laps at around 193 mph. Each car is allowed three tries to qualify.

Moments after Hickman waved off his attempt, rain began falling and officials closed the track five minutes early.

The average for the first 22 cars in the field is 198.685, 8.8 mph faster than the top 22 a year ago and tentatively the quickest Indy lineup in history.

Lakers waiting in the wings

Toney leads 76ers' to third straight win

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia 76ers needed no reminders about what happened the last time they took a 3-1 lead in a conference championship series against the Boston Celtics.

"We all realize it's not over because of what we've been through before," 76ers Coach Billy Cunningham said Sunday after Philadelphia routed the defending National Basketball Association champion Celtics 119-94.

What they have "been through before" was a reference to the Eastern Conference final series a year ago when the 76ers also took a 3-1 lead only to lose the last three games by a total of five points.

Despite the overwhelming victory over their archrivals in Game 4, which saw 76ers guard Andrew Toney score 39 points, Philadelphia was in no mood to celebrate.

"We've beaten the Celtics three in a row (since a 40-point defeat in Game 1)," said Cunningham, "and they've surely got the ability to win three in a row from us. What we've got to avoid are the emotional peaks and valleys."

"There's a possibility we could lose three in a row," said the 76ers' Julius Erving, who scored 17 points. "Anything's possible in the NBA. But if we prepare ourselves properly, we shouldn't lose any."

The Celtics, who are on the verge of elimination after going 63-19 in the regular season, were totally dominated in the final 15 minutes of the game, when they were outscored 47-27.

They sorely missed the offensive spark of injured guard Nate "Tiny" Archibald, who suffered a dislocated shoulder in Saturday's loss.

"I was the only optimistic guy at this time last year, but the team's confidence grew," Boston Coach Bill Fitch said. "I believe I can read the mood of the team and they believe they can come back. These are players who have done it before."

In Sunday's game, Fitch said, "We just couldn't stop Toney, either by guarding him or making him guard someone. But our game just wasn't there. It wasn't all Toney, not all the absence of Tiny."

The 6-foot-3 Toney was brilliant throughout the game, hitting 11 of 12 free throws and 14 of 20 shots from the field, from all ranges and angles.

Boston never led in the game, and managed only one tie, at 44-44 with 3:31 left in the first half. But the 76ers outscored Boston 11-4 the rest of the second quarter for a 55-48 halftime lead.

LOS ANGELES faces a long layoff while Boston and Philadelphia battle for the right to meet the Lakers for the NBA championship, but Coach Pat Riley says he is not worried about the team's inactivity.

"I know we are facing a long layoff, but if history is indicative, it might be just what we need," Riley said.

Riley was referring to the rest his team took prior to meeting Phoenix in the semifinals and San Antonio for the Western Conference championship.

The red-hot Lakers downed both Phoenix and San Antonio in four straight games, becoming only the second team in National Basketball Association history to put together eight consecutive playoff wins. The 1950 Minneapolis Lakers hold the record of nine.

Earvin "Magic" Johnson — who accomplished "triple doubles" of more than 10 points, rebounds and assists in five of those eight victoroies — says it doesn't matter to him whether Los Angeles meets Philadephia or Boston for the world championship.

"We are playing them one game at a time," Johnson said. "It doesn't matter who we play now; we just want to play. We still haven't accomplished what we want to. We're happy, but we're not there yet."

Andrew Toney drives past Chris Ford for two of his 39 points in second half action in the fourth game of the 76ers', Celtics playoff series. After winning the opening game of the series by 40 points the Celtics have dropped three consecutive games to Philadelphia.

Texas captures fourth SWC baseball crown

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas coach Cliff Gustafson points to a home run by Mike Livermore as a turning point in the Longhorns' 10-5 victory over Houston for their fourth straight Southwest Conference baseball championship.

"When Livermore hit the home run, it seemed to wake us up," Gustafson said after Sunday night's win. "I never dreamed we'd hit five home runs. I think the team is getting to the form they were in earlier in the year."

With Texas down 3-0 in the sixth, Livermore started things off with his solo blast. Randy Day added a three-run homer and Jeff Hearron slammed a two-run homer before the inning was over. Texas never trailed again.

Spike Owen added a home run in the seventh and Randy Richards had one in the eighth.

Houston got a two-run homer from Wesley Gregersen in the losing effort.

But the Cougars didn't go away empty-handed. Earlier Sunday they avenged a first-round tournament loss to Arkansas by edging the Razorbacks 9-8. Then, after the championship game, Houston's Dale Oliver was named the team's most outstanding player.

In Sunday's first game, Oliver hit a three-run homer in the third inning to push his home run total for the tournament to four and his RBI total to 10. Those marks tied tournament records set in 1980 by Kevin McReynolds of Arkansas.

Arkansas leaped to a 7-0 lead as Mike Robinson drove in four runs on a ground out and a three-run homer. But the Cougars came back, powered by catcher Jeff Jacobson. Jacobson hit a home run that was one of Houston's five runs in the third inning, then lifted the Cougars to victory by hitting a three-run homer with two out in the bottom of the ninth.

"We knew Jake had the capability to hit it out, but he was lucky to get his pitch," said Houston coach Rolan Walton

Ruidoso Results

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) — Denim N Diamonds, the eight-richest quarter horse of all-time, flashed to a three-quarters length win in Sunday's second division of the Go Together Stakes at Ruidoso Downs.

The five-year-old mare, who was purchased for a bargain $32,000 in the 1978 All-American Yearling Sale at Ruidoso, earned $3,040 with her latest win and boosted her career earnings to $616,902.

Denim N Diamonds is owned by R.D. Hubbard of Wichita, Kan.

The mare led from wire-to-wire in the 350-yard race. She Mite Go closed strongly on the outside to take third while Angies Dancer was third. The victory was the 21st in Denim and Diamond's career.

The winner returned $2.20 across the board. Denim N Diamonds covered the 350 yards in 18.17 seconds.

She Mite Go paid $3.00 and $2.20 while Angies also paid $2.20.

The first division of the Go Together Stakes was captured by Coalcreek Ladybug. Runnin Bare was second and Rockay took third.

When you feel a splitting headache coming on...

...relax with the Want Ads!

When you've got interesting reading at hand, it's easy to relax and put your problems aside. When it comes to reading that captures the interest of the whole family, it's hard to beat the Want Ads.

Everyone is interested in bargains. Dad may be thinking of a better car, or a larger home. Perhaps he needs help with some remodeling project around the house, he can check the Business Services directory.

Mom can look through the Classified Pages and find a seemingly unending source of fascinating reading. There are great bargains in household furnishings of every description.

The kids have a ball, too, drooling over the enticing offerings in such things as bicycles, trikes, sporting equipment, a cuddly puppy or kitten and, for the musically inclined, a wide range of instruments.

Persons looking for a job, a change of employment, or a business opportunity find the Help Wanted ads of unusual interest. Many a promising career has been started in the Want Ads.

Of all the interesting things about Want Ads, possibly the most interesting is the money factor. Not only do you save on great bargains, but you have access to ready cash by selling off your no-longer-needed articles. Take inventory of these usable items and call our Classified department to place a fast-acting selling message.

Man involved in accident warns teens against drinking, driving

By JOE QUINLAN

EASTHAMPTON, Mass. (AP) — A 20-year-old mechanic who was behind the wheel in a crash that killed his best friend has been recruited to discourage teen-agers from drinking and driving during this season of high school proms and graduation parties.

Carl Dawson was the perfect case for county officials who wanted a spokesman to warn teens against drinking and driving. His accident followed a night of partying. It ended with death on a country road where Dawson had tried to take a curve at 50 mph.

Dawson says he was like hundreds of other youths who drink and cruise in their cars, until the Dec. 12 accident that killed Brian Forrestall, 19.

"I killed him," Dawson says, reading from a roughly typed speech he has been delivering to high school students.

Dawson is making the rounds of nine Hampshire County public high schools under an agreement with court officials.

Massachusetts' legal drinking age is 20.

HAMPSHIRE COUNTY assistant district attorney Charlotte Guyer had asked probation officers last year to come up with someone to talk to students about the dangers of drinking and driving. Dawson's case was just what she was looking for.

Last Dec. 12, he was behind the wheel of his family's 1975 station wagon. Forrestall was by his side. A buddy, home on leave from the Army, and a woman friend were in the back.

The car went off a curve, rolled over a stop sign and two trees, snapped a telephone pole and flipped over. Dawson and the two passengers walked away from the wreck. Forrestall was hurled out of the car.

In his speech, Dawson describes walking up to Forrestall's body and turning it over.

"His eyes were open and they seemed like they were looking right at me," Dawson says.

Dawson pleaded guilty to vehicular homicide in Hampshire District Court, where Judge George Keady approved Ms. Guyer's idea. Dawson also lost his license for four years and was placed on probation for three years. An 18-month suspended jail sentence hangs over his head.

Police never asked him to take a breath-alcohol test, and he wasn't charged with drunken driving.

DAWSON LOOKS no older than the students in his audience. He doesn't preach.

"It may be boring to you, but I'm glad to come around," he told a group of students. "It might help somebody else.

"There's times you think that you're not drunk and you really are. Some people get busted for drinking and driving and some don't. The people who don't, think, 'Wow, the cops didn't catch me,' and they think they're cool. They're not," Dawson says in his speech.

Dawson stuck close to the speech in his first talk at Granby High School. But he summarized it quickly in Easthampton, choosing instead to deliver most of his message through a question and answer session with students.

They asked how he coped with being blamed for his friend's death. In answering each question, he almost always followed it with a plea, "If you drink, don't drive."

"I went to his wake, I couldn't even look at him. I still can't go to the cemetery," Dawson said. He said some people avoid him, while others stare with looks that remind him that he is to blame for Forrestall's death.

"I think they feel I'm responsible for taking away one of their best friends," he said.

"PARENTS ARE calling me, asking me to let their child hear him," said Assistant Principal John Naumowicz, who had 100 juniors and seniors from psychology and justice classes attend the speech.

Naumowicz said the school of 640 loses at least one student at year in an accident involving drunken driving or speeding.

"If it gets 5 percent to change, that's better than before," he said.

Man pulls accident victims from burning car

LEXINGTON, Mich. (AP) — Randy Newman was awakened by a loud noise outside his house and when he looked out his bedroom window, he saw a small car upside down and in flames.

Newman, 31, told his wife to call the police and a neighbor before he ran to the car with a flashlight and small fire extinguisher.

The driver, Daniel Aman, 16, had been thrown from the the car as it rolled into a ditch along Michigan 25 in this town about 60 miles north of Detroit on Lake Huron. Three people were trapped inside the car in the accident at 1:40 a.m. Sunday.

"There was a lot of hissing" from the 1979 Mercury Bobcat's burning fuel tank, Newman said. "I saw two people in the back window area of the car," he said. "They were half in and half out."

The two, Anna Aman, who was four months pregnant, and her husband David, were conscious but unable to move, Newman said.

He grabbed a piece of tangled metal that was in the way, threw it aside and pulled Mrs. Aman free of the car by her wrists, then returned and pulled her husband to safety.
