Shiite cleric predicts Westerner's release

■ Speculation focuses on former Royal Air Force pilot Jack Mann, 77.

Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Kidnappers will soon free a Western hostage, probably a Briton, a Shiite Muslim cleric said Saturday.

Others also have predicted another hostage release, and a U.S. envoy discussed the issue Saturday in Beirut with Lebanese leaders.

Speculation about who might be released focused on Jack Mann, a 77-year-old former Royal Air Force pilot missing for two years. The Revolutionary Justice Organization announced Thursday that Mann was "alive and in good shape."

Adding to the speculation, a Tehran newspaper close to Iran's president said one or two of the 11 Westerners held in Lebanon could be freed soon. Iran has close ties to the Shiite Muslim kidnappers.

The developments came a day after U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar — who has led this summer's accelerating hostage diplomacy — finished three days of talks with Iranian leaders on the issue.

Perez de Cuellar has been seeking to arrange a swap of Arab prisoners and missing Israeli servicemen as part of a deal involving the Western hostages.

John Kelly, U.S. assistant secretary of state for Middle East and African affairs, said after his Beirut talks, "The United States' government remains concerned about the hostages and we hope for a very speedy resolution."

Along with President Elias Hrawi, he met with Prime Minister Omar Karami and Speaker Hussein Husseini.

Asked whether Washington was doing anything to speed the release of the Western hostages, who include five Americans, Kelly said: "We never conduct our di-

Black groups, Pretoria sign peace accord

N.Y. Times News Service

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — After months of difficult negotiations, South Africa's two main black political groups and the government agreed on Saturday on a comprehensive peace plan designed to end black factional violence that has cost thousands of lives.

But the violence continued on Saturday with at least 15 slayings in black townships around Johannesburg. And tensions rose even at the conference called to sign the pact, as supporters of one of the rival black groups, the Inkatha Freedom Party, staged a raucous mass demonstration, brandishing clubs, spears, shields, and swords in defiance of the accord's ban on provocative public

Man damages famed statue with hammer

FLORENCE, Italy (AP) — A man pulled a hammer from under his jacket Saturday and attacked Michelangelo's famed statue of David, but museum patrons subdued him before he could seriously damage the 487-year-old masterpiece.

Officials at the Accademia museum said the second toe of the statue's left foot was broken, but all the fragments were recovered and they would be able to make repairs.

"The material damage is reparable since we have found all the fragments, but the emotional distress remains," said

Festivities mark Mexico's Diez y Seis

When the sun was setting in Midland Saturday night the band La Fiebre (The Fever) was just heating up on the grounds of the Crown Royal Club.

The band was the featured attraction at the club's annual Diez y Seis de Septiembre festival, which celebrates Mexico's Independence Day.

Saturday also kicked off National Hispanic Heritage Month, which runs through Oct. 15.

In Mexico, Sept. 15 and 16 are celebrated as the anniversary of the country's War of Independence, which ended 300 years of Spanish rule. Mexicans traditionally begin the celebration late in the evening of Sept. 15, when the president rings a bell to announce the holiday.

In Midland, the two-day holiday began with a 10 a.m. parade that began at the library and traveled north down Lamesa Road to the Crown Royal Club.

The club was the site of an all-day fair, which included game and food booths and live entertainment.

Evangelist Billy Graham begins long walk home

Billy Graham

NEW YORK — Billy Graham no longer thinks he is going to save America.

Armageddon, he believes, is approaching. And even if it is not, his own mortality will prevent him from reviving a nation where good and evil are growing apace: He will be 73 in November, and his doctor at the Mayo Clinic has promised to keep him going only until he is 75.

"I know that my years are running out," he says.

This month, in the twilight of his remarkable career, Graham returns to New York, the "graveyard of evangelists" he conquered 34 years ago with a 16-week Madison Square Garden run that established him as America's preacher.

More than three decades ago, the prospect of the dairy farmer's son from North Carolina taking on the modern Sodom and Gomorrah — and drawing capacity crowds — caught the national fancy. Tall, broad-shouldered and square-jawed, he was the Kirk Douglas of the evangelical movement.

But when he walked through a Manhattan hotel on a recent morning, no heads turned. He walked haltingly, clinging to a handrail, his features furrowed with pain. He was hobbled by a back problem and jet lag from a trip to the Soviet Union.

Promoters of the New York meeting, set for Sept. 22 in Central Park, say it might draw Graham's largest American audience, upward of 250,000 souls. Graham himself says, "If we have 25,000, it will be a good meeting."

He approaches this latest crusade with enthusiasm, but also with weariness; the burden of carrying a $100 million-a-year evangelistic empire on his increasingly frail shoulders often wears on him.

Public hearing to consider 5-year state housing plan

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

A five-year plan for identifying and alleviating the state's housing woes will be discussed Tuesday in Midland.

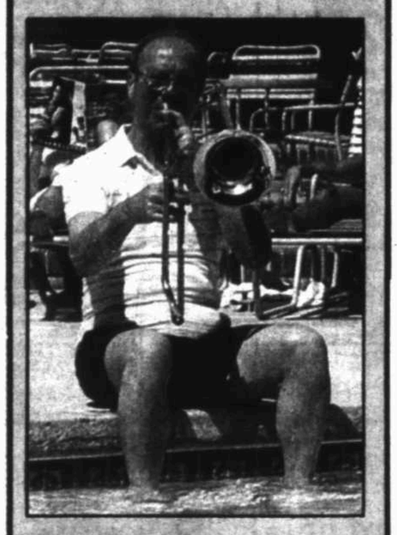

A public hearing on the Texas Comprehensive Housing Affordability Study (CHAS) is scheduled from 4 to 6 p.m. Tuesday in the City Council chambers at City Hall. It is one of eight locations for similar hearings throughout the state.

The Rev. Michael DeVaughn, a Midland City Councilman and local representative on the governor's committee for CHAS, said he expects great interest in the meeting.

"We think there will be a lot of participation from communities around Midland, some of the smaller communities," DeVaughn said. "The plan covers the entire Permian Basin, the entire area of West Texas. So we are expecting some

Jail fire kills four

FORSYTH, Mo. — A generator fire poured thick smoke into a county jail before dawn Saturday, killing four of the 26 prisoners who were trapped in their cells behind electronically powered doors. Firefighters donned air masks and used a special tool to open each cell. All the surviving prisoners were treated for smoke inhalation, and 13 were hospitalized./5A

Satellite drifts off

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Discovery's astronauts released the largest environmental research satellite ever carried into space late Saturday, and the observatory drifted off on a mission to study Earth's imperiled ozone layer. Mark Brown, working flight deck controls, freed the copper-colored satellite from the end of the shuttle's robot arm shortly after 11 p.m. CDT. The release, which occurred later than planned, capped seven hours of intensive work by the astronauts and ground controllers./5A

GRAHAM: Burden often wears on the evangelist

(From 1A)

Leighton Ford, the brother-in-law who worked for the evangelist for 31 years, said Graham confided to him late one night after a 1985 crusade, "I just wish I could go to heaven."

---

What is Billy Graham's legacy?

"Two or three centuries from now, he will be among a few names that we remember," said sociologist Jeffrey Hadden of the University of Virginia. "He's clearly a sterling figure in American religious history."

He has become "the most important figure in evangelical Christianity in a half-century," according to William Martin, a sociologist at Rice University who spent five years researching an upcoming biography of Graham.

Billy Sunday was reduced to preaching in small towns at the end of his career. Charles Finney gave up the demanding career of a revivalist to found Oberlin College. Other evangelists' stars rose and fell even more quickly with the changing mood of the country.

But Billy Graham keeps rolling on.

The man who once was an intimate of Dwight Eisenhower was the same man George Bush wanted at his side when he announced the nation was going to war in the Middle East.

The man who in 1956 compared the Soviet Union to a gangster set loose to murder and pillage is the same man who granted much-publicized audiences this summer to both Mikhail Gorbachev and Boris Yeltsin.

In the 1950s, he took on communism and complacency. In the 1960s, he reassured evangelicals who despaired in the Age of Aquarius. In the 1970s, he promoted a new way of thinking about the Soviet Union and arms control. In the 1980s, he settled in as an icon of American religiosity.

Throughout, he has been venerated. He has been listed 32 times in Gallup Polls of the world's 10 most admired men, more than any other person.

Again and again, say Martin and Hadden, secular people who are wary of the Jerry Falwells and Pat Robertsons ask, "Tell me why I like him."

For one thing, Martin notes, Graham is a regular guy who can skinny dip with Lyndon Johnson or flip through Playboy at a barber shop without embarrassment.

But he's also an example of clean living. He avoids even the hint of scandal, keeping his office door open when a woman is alone with him and having aides check hotel rooms for uninvited females before he enters.

Early in his career, Graham established pioneering financial controls for his empire. His ministry is run by an independent board of directors. He could make millions from his books, personal appearances and radio, television and film ministries, but he limits himself to a salary of $69,150 a year.

"Graham has rendered evangelical faith legitimate ... in part by being sort of a good guy," Hadden said.

Still, Graham has had to endure his share of critics.

Liberals going back to the Protestant theologian Reinhold Niehbuhr have criticized Graham's form of Christianity for relying on emotion and a simplistic view of the Bible, and ignoring social needs in favor of a mass-production approach to gaining converts.

Studies have found Graham's rallies largely preach to the converted. Many of those who answer the call at the end of his crusades have been swayed by techniques such as having the ushers come forward to give the impression there is a groundswell of people committing to Christ.

He also has drawn accusations that he is willing to tread carelessly along the line separating religion and politics in exchange for access to the rich and powerful.

In a gushing letter described in Martin's book, Graham wrote Eisenhower that a brief ride in the presidential limousine was "an unforgettable experience that I shall cherish the rest of my life." Hadden recalled a 1965 National Prayer Breakfast when Graham reassured a Vietnam-beleaguered Johnson that "God came not to bring peace to the world, but a sword." He also championed Richard Nixon before Watergate.

On the far religious right, Graham has been vilified for his willingness to work in cooperation with mainline Protestants, Catholics and others of suspect faith to fundamentalists.

"In relation to others, I used to think that if a person hadn't experienced what I had experienced, he wasn't a believer," Graham said. "It was my own ignorance. I had not had the opportunity to fellowship with people in other communities before."

During the 1957 New York crusade, Graham irrevocably broke with fundamentalists by having the Protestant Council, an ecumenical organization representing nearly all Protestant bodies, sponsor the meetings.

Bob Jones, John Rice and other fundamentalists withdrew their support, but Graham won the gamble that he could appeal to a larger audience without them.

More than 2 million people attended the crusade; it was extended from six to 16 weeks, and emboldened Graham to rent time on ABC for national television broadcasts — the birth of the modern electronic ministry that helped rescue evangelicals from the backwaters of American religious life.

In 1991, Cardinal John O'Connor is encouraging his flock to participate.

"The Roman Catholics know that I'm not against them, and in my thinking, rightly or wrongly, I represent all the churches," Graham says today.

He also blazed trails for evangelical integration — a singular achievement for a man who grew up in the rural South and was converted at a revival led by Mordecai Fowler Ham, a man accused of racism and anti-Semitism.

Disappointed by the lack of blacks attending the 1957 crusade, Graham hired his first black associate evangelist, Howard Jones.

He also publicly endorsed the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. Having King speak at a meeting during the New York crusade didn't place Graham in the civil rights movement's vanguard, Martin said, but he was "way ahead of his constituency."

Everywhere he goes, hundreds of churches who rarely had worked together in the past come together to prepare for his crusades. He is the founder of Christianity Today, the leading evangelical magazine, and has been a bulwark of the National Association of Evangelicals since its early days.

And it was Graham's integrity that may have saved the electronic ministry in its darkest hour after the fall of Swaggart and Bakker.

In recent years, he has concentrated on uniting evangelicals internationally. His 1983 and 1986 conferences in Amsterdam drew more than 12,000 evangelists from around the world. During his summer visit to Moscow, he helped lead a training school for evangelists.

"I think Billy Graham's greatest legacy will not be a university or any institutions, but it will be the tens of thousands of little Billy Grahams, itinerant evangelists, not well-educated, but who will do the simple door-to-door sales work of the evangelist," Martin said.

When he was riding high in the 1950s, Graham fueled the image of America as a nation with a special religious calling. He no longer is so certain.

"I used to think in my work we could see a great religious revival sweep America and solve all our problems," he said in a 1988 interview. "That's still the dream, the vision, but it's not the reality."

The reality, as Graham sees it today, is a nation and world moving toward the ultimate battle of good and evil.

To him, the sexual scandals that have brought down other clergymen are no coincidence. "I think we are living in an age when Satan is out to destroy families ... and I think particularly he is attacking clergy," Graham said.

Graham also sees evidence of Armageddon in the upheaval in the Middle East, where the final battle is foretold in the Bible. And, in an observation that carries Messianic overtones, he notes the command in Matthew 24:14 that the Gospel must be preached to all the ends of the world before the Second Coming.

That's what Graham has done before more than 110 million people in 88 countries, and it is what he plans to continue doing as long as he is physically and mentally able.

ACCORD: Government, groups sign peace plan

displays.

The pact is seen as an important test of the ability of the country's political movements to work together. Never before have the government and the two rival black groups, the African National Congress and the Inkatha movement, reached an agreement.

Moreover, the three political groups are expected to be the principals in coming constitutional negotiations to dismantle apartheid and extend voting rights to South Africa's 30 million blacks.

But Nelson Mandela, the African National Congress leader, on Saturday suggested the challenges ahead in bringing harmony to South African politics when he said those signing the accord "were under no illusions that it was a magic wand." And President F.W. de Klerk said it was but a "first step on the arduous road to peace."

Twenty other smaller anti-apartheid groups, including the South African Communist Party, also signed the accord.

Under the accord approved on Saturday, Inkatha, the African National Congress, and the government agreed to end the use of violence and inflammatory language against opponents and to adhere to a new code of conduct for political parties and the security forces. The agreement also calls for special courts to deal with political violence.

Since the agreement is meant to prevent provocative public displays or actions, and specifically imposes a voluntary ban on the carrying of weapons to meetings, the demonstration on Saturday by Inkatha supporters outside the luxury downtown hotel where the accord was signed immediately called into question Inkatha's committment to it.

Thousands of supporters of the Zulu-dominated movement and its leader, Chief Mangosuthu Gatsha Buthelezi, chanted, sang, and staged mock battles, to the obvious displeasure of heavily armed government soldiers in armored cars. The Zulus disregarded police requests to surrender their weapons.

At a news conference after the meeting on Saturday, de Klerk said the police had no reason to confiscate the weapons carried by Inkatha supporters unless there was an immediate threat of violence.

"The people outside the hotel, while they apparently enjoyed themselves, according to all the reports I received, at no stage posed a threat to anyone," de Klerk said.

But Mandela, the African National Congress leader, strongly disagreed with de Klerk's assessment.

"If the people outside were members of the ANC, the police would have used force," Mandela said. "And if they had refused to move, the police would have used firearms."

Mandela implied that the factional fighting between supporters of Inkatha and the congress is permitted and at times actively abetted by the government security services.

Inkatha supporters are often seen carrying traditional spears and fighting sticks, and the congress has long insisted that all such weapons be prohibited at political rallies, which have been catalysts for subsequent violence.

Although Buthelezi signed the accord on Saturday, he earlier had effectively dismissed the peace plan as meaningless.

The Pretoria government and the African National Congress reached a cease-fire in August 1990. Mandela and Buthelezi agreed to peace terms in January. But after both of those agreements, violence raged on.

Without Inkatha and Buthelezi actively involved in putting the new accord into effect, its success seems very much in doubt.

Although the African National Congress and Inkatha both oppose apartheid, Buthelezi has criticized the congress's suppport of economic sanctions and armed struggle against the white minority government, although the congress dropped the use of violence in August 1990 as it pursued talks with the government. Inkatha also professes greater commitment to a market economy than the congress.

Get set for some clouds, 80s

Staff Report

Today's forecast is partly cloudy with a high in the mid-80s and winds southeast to south 10-20 mph, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight is predicted to be partly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms and a low in the lower 60s.

Monday's forecast is partly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of mainly afternoon showers and thunderstorms, the NWS said.

Yesterday's high was 86, compared to the record high of 99, set in 1965. The record low for today's date is 50, set in 1969.

STATE

Flooding was reported near Waco Saturday as a flash flood watch remained in effect there and in the North, while clouds hovered over the West.

In South Texas, a large area of showers and thunderstorms over the Edwards Plateau and Hill Country was moving to the north at 12 mph.

Nearly 5 inches of rain fell in the Dolan Creek area near Loma Alta producing flooding of roads in that area.

State Highway 163 and Farm-to-Market Road 1024 in Northern Val Verde County were reported closed with up to 2 feet of water on the roads.

In the West, cloudy skies prevailed except in the Far West where El Paso reported clear skies. An almost solid area of light rain mixed with some thunderstorms covered the eastern half of the south plains.

State temperatures ranged from 57 at Marfa to 70 at Childress, but most readings were in the 60s.

NATION

Snow brought an early taste of winter-like weather to the northern Rockies on Saturday, while parts of the Southeast got record highs. Rain was scattered over the South and from the Plains across the Midwest to the Great Lakes.

Snow fell during the night in the mountains of northwestern Montana.

In northwestern Wyoming, 3 inches fell during the night at Indian Creek in Yellowstone National Park. The Big Horn Mountains of north-central Wyoming got their first snow of the season in the late morning.

In south-central Colorado, Alamosa cooled to a low of 30, giving the city its first frost of the season.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

RUMORS: Perez de Cuellar's cautiously optimistic

plomacy in public on questions like this, but you're all aware that the United Nations secretary-general is being active on the hostage question."

A U.N. spokesman reiterated Perez de Cuellar's cautious optimism.

Perez de Cuellar hopes that "we are about to make progress" in solving the hostage problem, Francois Guiliani said in Jiddah, Saudi Arabia.

Iran has helped secure the release of hostages in Lebanon in recent years, and backs the Shiite extremist group Hezbollah, or Party of God, that reportedly controls factions holding the hostages.

In southern Lebanon, Shiite Muslim cleric Sheik Ahmed Taleb told The Associated Press he had "information that a Western hostage, probably a Briton, will be released within hours, a day, or more."

Taleb said from his home in Jibsheet, "the last initiative by those responsible for the Western hostages" would be to obtain the release of Sheik Abdul-Karim Obeid from Israel.

Taleb succeeded Obeid as the imam, or spiritual leader, of the village of Jibsheet, after Obeid was captured by Israel in 1989 as a bargaining chip in hostage negotiations.

The release of Obeid — who like Taleb had close ties to Hezbollah — is a key demand of the kidnappers holding the Westerners.

Taleb was the second leader close to Hezbollah to make such a prediction.

On Friday, Hussein Musawi, a Hezbollah leader, said an American or a British hostage could be freed within a week. But he suggested a delay in a hostage release could occur unless Israel takes steps to release Obeid.

The English-language Tehran Times, meanwhile, said one or two hostages could be released soon but Israel should release more prisoners.

It said Israel's freeing of 51 Arab prisoners on Wednesday was "too little too late." However, it added the gesture was a hopeful sign that "should receive a favorable response."

The Israelis' proxy militia in Lebanon freed the prisoners and sent back the remains of nine Lebanese guerrillas after Israel received evidence that one of its soldiers missing in Lebanon had died.

Israel has demanded information on seven of its servicemen missing in Lebanon since 1982 before it will take part in any prisoner exchange.

Last month, the Tehran Times proved accurate in predicting a British and American hostage would be freed. Within a week of an editorial in the newspaper, Briton John McCarthy and American Edward Austin Tracy were released.

The newspaper often reflects the views of Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani, who is eager to improve ties with the West.

A high-ranking Israeli official, however, discounted suggestions that Israel should act next in the diplomatic minuet.

Uri Lubrani, who heads Israel's negotiating team on the hostage-for-prisoner trade, said now that the Jewish state has released the 51 Shiite Muslim prisoners, the next move was the Hezbollah's.

He spoke in an interview with the Voice of the South radio station, run by the Israel's South Lebanon Army militia.

Held in Lebanon are five Americans, three Britons, two west Germans and an Italian. The longest-held is Terry Anderson, 43, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press. He was kidnapped in Beirut on March 16, 1985.

PAGEANT: Miss Sapp smiled, wept and knelt

Miss Sapp dazzled the judges and audience with a rousing vocal rendition of Fats Waller's "Ain't Misbehavin." She has studied voice for two years.

Miss Sapp is 5-foot-10, 128 pounds and has blue eyes and long brown hair. She won one of three preliminary swimsuit competitions this week in a coral bathing suit, which she wore again Saturday night.

In the evening gown competition, she wore a black velvet gown with long sleeves and a high neckline. The ensemble also included black satin floral appliques on the bodice, sleeves and hemline. Handsewn Austrian crystal and black bugle beads covered the gown.

A junior at the University of Hawaii-Hilo, Miss Sapp is majoring in political science and international relations. She hopes to direct the Hawaii state Office of International Relations.

The new Miss America plans to promote education during her year's reign. Miss Sapp, whose natural parents are divorced, said in an interview that parents must be more responsible for raising their children.

"I've learned and watched through my parents" who were always busy with work, said Miss Sapp, the oldest of five children. Her father is a minister and representative in the Washington state legislature; her mother is a homemaker.

"They've taken the time to communicate with us. That's the first important step," she said.

Miss Sapp said she also would use her appearances as Miss America to promote racial unity. She said tension between people of different races will disappear when people "learn and understand to respect different cultures."

She said living her whole life in Hawaii's multicultural society has helped her learn about cultures other than her own.

The program was hosted for the first time by television talk show hosts Regis Philbin and Kathie Lee Gifford, who replaced Gary Collins and Miss America 1971 Phyllis George. Pageant chief executive officer Leonard Horn said he hired the pair to inject spontaneity into the live television broadcast.

Also missing from this year's contest was former pageant emcee Bert Parks, who was not asked to return this year after making a gaffe-filled appearance last year. Pageant officials deny that Parks' performance was behind the decision not to invite him back.

The pageant has retained the same basic structure — judging young women based upon appearance, talent and interview skills — since its inception in 1921 as a way for Boardwalk merchants to stretch the tourism season beyond Labor Day.

Horn has sought to move the spotlight from looks to brains.

FESTIVITIES: Parade kicks off Mexican holiday

hibit building.

Both fairs featured traditional Mexican fare including gorditas, flautas, fajitas, burritos and menudo. American fair staples — including popcorn balls, cotton candy, snow cones and sausage-on-a-stick — were also available.

Several bands were scheduled throughout the weekend at the county exhibit building, which was organized by First Association of Mexican Americans (FAMA), an umbrella organization for Hispanic cultural heritage.

Groups of giggling children sprayed each other with Silly String while adults sat in aluminum bleachers to watch La Fiebre perform.

"I've got on my dancing shoes now," said Enrique Ramirez, 37. "After all the goodies I ate today, I better do some dancing."

Lupe, Ramirez' 6-year-old daughter, primarily was interested in trying her luck tossing rings onto a coin-filled table at a booth manned by the Tall City Lion's Club.

"It's pretty fun," she said.

Fiesta activities are scheduled to continue today from noon to 11 p.m. at the Crown Royal and noon to midnight at the county exhibit building.

Activities will conclude tonight with "El Grito," the traditional cry of Mexican independence, hosted by the Consulate of Mexico. The consulate will sponsor the ceremony, which will begin 8 p.m. in Centennial Plaza.

The celebration harkens back to 1807 when French forces occupied Spain and imprisoned King Ferdinand VII. Unrest spread in the Spanish colony which was to become Mexico. Some creoles plotted to seize the government. The rebels were led by priest Miguel Hildalgo y Costilla.

Late on the night of Sept. 15, 1910, the priest called Indians and Mestizos to his church in the town of Dolores. He made a speech know as the Grito de Dolores, in which he called for a rebellion to allow Mexicans to govern Mexico.

The Midland consulate's "el grito" ceremony will feature typical Mexican music and dances. The performers will include Los Palmeros de San Juan Carlos, soloist Rafael Vargas, Ballet Mujeres, Midland Ballet Folklorico, Mariachi Estrella and the Midland Charro Association.

"The whole thing — these two days of Diez y Seis — is about freedom," said Tito Salazar, 11.

Admission to the Crown Royal celebration is $2 per adult and $3 per child. When bands are playing in the evening, admission to the Crown Royal event is $5 for adults and $2 per child.

HEARING: DeVaughn expects great interest

interest based on that."

Midland's public hearing covers a wide area to the north, west and south known as the Plains Region.

Designed to assess housing problems and develop solutions, the document is called the state of Texas' first effort at a comprehensive housing plan.

"I think the study turned out very good," DeVaughn said. "As we knew, there are some serious housing problems in the state that need to be addressed. There are problems especially for low-income families and people with disabilities.

"My concern in particular was housing for the homeless," DeVaughn said. "In many of our small surrounding communities, there's not that large amount of structured facilities available for them. I believe they often end up in larger cities, trying to find a place where there are facilities to serve their needs."

Much of the information in the CHAS divides people into groups. For example, elderly and minority households were found to have a greater need for assistance than non-elderly, white households. Black and Hispanic Texans represent 70 percent of all state residents living below poverty level, according to the CHAS.

DeVaughn said his major recommendation to the state committee's findings was that they should incorporate more action for the homeless of Texas. Other plans developed from the study, he said, were positive steps.

With the creation of the Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs Sept. 1, state housing officials hope to coordinate assistant programs. The agency is expected to handle allocations of all major state-funded housing programs, including Community Development Block Grants, from which Midland regularly receives funding.

Five-year and one-year plans for solving housing crises were developed by the CHAS. In one year, state funding will emphasize homeowner and renter assistance, two areas a Midland housing study found were much needed in the local community.

The statewide CHAS relates to Midland's own version, a city-specific document that will be used to identify and garner federal Housing and Urban Development funds through the state. Locally, major problems were found with low-income housing availability and the condition of existing housing for people who want to buy or rent.

City Planner Sylvester Cantu said the accuracy of the state's version could affect Midland's opportunities for housing improvement.

"Midland will not apply directly to HUD, but the state will get certain monies and dole them out based on information from the (local) CHAS," Cantu said.

The state could receive between $20 million and $40 million in federal funds based on information in the study.

"Some problems are addressed that we don't have here," Cantu said. "The problems of rural communities, and immigration-related issues from along the border are not really the same as our problems. But other problems we have are common throughout the state."

Before the meeting, copies of the state's housing study will be available at the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission office, 2910 LaForce Blvd., and by contacting DeVaughn at St. Paul Christian Methodist Episcopal Church, 409 S. Lee St.

STATUE: Man damages Michelangelo's famed David

A police official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, described the 47-year-old attacker as mentally ill. He was charged with damage to a national cultural treasure.

Officials said when the man began striking the statue, patrons grabbed him and held him until the police arrived.

The incident marked the second time a Michelangelo masterpiece in Italy has been damaged by a hammer-wielding attacker.

In 1972, a Hungarian-born man attacked Michelangelo's Pieta at the Vatican, breaking off the left arm and disfiguring the face of the madonna. The attacker spent two years in a mental hospital, and the Pieta is now kept behind a wall of protective glass inside St. Peter's Basilica.

Francesco Sisinni, the director general of Italy's Ministry of Culture, expressed "deep sorrow" at the attack on the David statue. But, he added: "It is not possible to put every work of art in Italy under bulletproof glass."

The chief prosecutor in Florence, Piero Luigi Vigna, called for tougher punishment for damaging works of art. Under current law, the penalty ranges from six months to three years in jail.

"Just think that someone who damages a statue such as David faces the same punishment as someone who damages a typewriter in a public office," said Vigna.

Fire in county jail kills four inmates trapped in cells

FORSYTH, Mo. (AP) — A generator fire poured thick smoke into a county jail before dawn Saturday, killing four of the 26 prisoners who were trapped in their cells behind electronically powered doors.

Firefighters donned air masks and used a special tool to open each cell. All the surviving prisoners were treated for smoke inhalation, and 13 were hospitalized.

"You couldn't send anybody in without air bottles," Fire Chief Ron Correll said. "It was unreal."

The four prisoners who died — three men and a woman — were jailed in cells near the generator, Correll said.

Nearly 100 firefighters were sent to the fire in Forsyth, in far southwestern Missouri, about 35 miles south of Springfield. Eleven firefighters and a jail dispatcher were treated for smoke inhalation.

The fire apparently started in an auxiliary generator next to the one-story Taney County Jail, Sheriff Chuck Keithley said. The blaze knocked out electricity to the jail.

"We have a lever that fits into the lock and you have to crank it open, and we did that individually with each cell," said sheriff's investigator Dick Ringler said. "Our maximum-security area was the toughest to get in. We had to use a cutting torch on that."

Firefighter Kevin Clayton said that when he arrived at the jail, "the generator was on fire, the roof was on fire, the jail was full of smoke. Inside, you couldn't see your hand in front of your face.

The inmates were shouting "Help! Help!" and "hollering to get out," he said.

"I was just about passed out when they finally got my door open," inmate Ronald Hankins said from the jail in nearby Branson, where he was taken after being treated for smoke inhalation. "You couldn't see nothing. You couldn't see the bars, you couldn't see where you were at.

"People were screaming and hollering. It was awful," Hankins said. "Then it got quiet because a lot of people passed out. I just know it was real scary. I knew I was going to die."

Firefighters instructed the inmates to cover their faces with water-soaked towels and lie on the floor until they could be freed, Clayton said.

Rescuers had to carry each inmate out of the jail. Emergency workers set up a makeshift clinic on the courthouse lawn, treating victims before they were taken to regional hospitals.

"We had bodies lying everywhere," the fire chief said.

The fire began at 3:45 a.m. when an extension cord connected to a battery charger on the auxiliary generator short-circuited, said Bill Zieres, regional chief fire marshal investigator. The extension cord ran up the side of the jail, inside and then ran the length of the jail, he said.

The short circuit was responsible for knocking out power to the jail, Zieres said. The short began a fire in the metal and wood shed housing the generator, and the fire fed on a propane tank situated nearby, Zieres said.

The flames then spread to the graveled roof of the jail. Apparently, some wood supports in the roof and some insulation also burned, producing a thick smoke, Zieres said.

"We don't know why it shorted out. We just have evidence there was a short," Zieres said during an afternoon news conference.

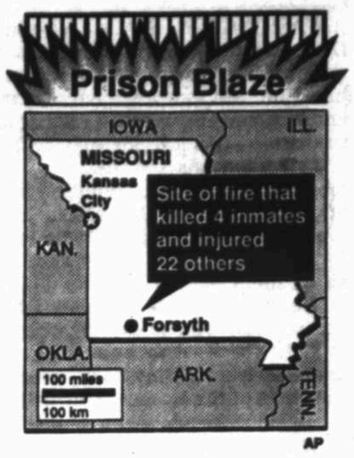

The generator and use of the extension cord didn't violate any fire code regulations, Zieres said. He didn't know why the propane gas tank was so close to the generator.

The dispatcher on duty, Jessy Newman, radioed for help before his system went out.

The generator had not had any "serious problems" before the fire, Keithley said. He was unsure when it was checked last and whether any repairs had been made.

The jail was built in 1981 and designed to hold 40 prisoners, he said.

Seven prisoners were in satisfactory condition at Skaggs Community Hospital in nearby Branson. Three were in serious condition at Cox Medical Center in Springfield, and three were at St. John's Regional Medical Center in Springfield, where hospital officials refused to release any information.

Astronauts begin main job in orbit

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Discovery's astronauts used the ship's robot arm Saturday to grapple and lift the largest environmental research satellite ever carried into space, preparing it for a late-night release.

Mark Brown, working flight deck controls, latched onto the 14,500-pound observatory in the cargo bay. He hoisted the copper-colored satellite high above the ship an hour later on the end of the 50-foot mechanical boom.

The satellite's solar panel, 30 feet long and 10½ feet wide, was unfurled via computer commands sent by ground controllers. Cheers erupted in the payload control room at NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md., as the accordion-like panel popped open.

"There are a lot of camera shutters clicking," said shuttle commander John Creighton.

The main, dish-shaped antenna was deployed next. This procedure also was performed with the observatory still attached to the shuttle arm.

No spacewalk was planned, but James Buchli and Charles "Sam" Gemar prepared their spacesuits and spacewalking tools in case they had to go into the cargo bay and repair the satellite.

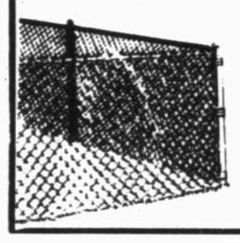

Discovery blasted off Thursday evening with the Upper Atmosphere Research Satellite, a $740 million project to study Earth's deteriorating ozone layer and other stratospheric features.

The five astronauts spent most of Friday night and Saturday morning preparing for the observatory release.

Creighton steered Discovery into a 354-mile-high orbit Friday, three miles higher than planned and one of the highest orbits ever flown by a shuttle.

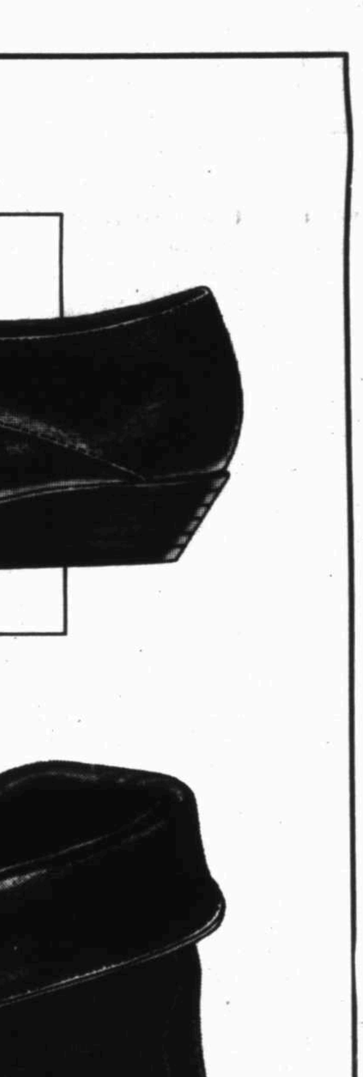

Those extra three miles will add at least eight months to the lifetime of the observatory mission, NASA flight director Al Pennington said. That's because on-board thrusters will need less fuel to shove the satellite to its ultimate destination 372 miles above Earth.

The mission is to last at least 1½ years.

Wilder's message expected to attract some votes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Virginia Gov. Doug Wilder is no Jesse Jackson, and most black voters in his state seem to like him fine. But can his moderate message and measured style inspire national black support for his presidential bid?

If Jackson sits out 1992, as expected, most analysts predict Wilder will attract at least some of the voters the fiery preacher won in his 1984 and 1988 races for the Democratic nomination. But not all of them.

"He is not going to certainly inherit the Jackson constituency. He's going to have to fight for it. And he's going to come under severe scrutiny," said Ron Walters, chairman of the Howard University political science department and a former Jackson adviser.

Wilder, the nation's first elected black governor, is not the kind of black politician Americans are used to seeing on the national stage.

'He is not going to certainly inherit the Jackson constituency. He's going to have to fight for it. And he's going to come under severe scrutiny.'

— Ron Walters
Former Jackson adviser

He talks of fiscal austerity and personal responsibility, resists a liberal tag, contends there are no "black" issues and avoids the emotional pulpit style that preacher-politicians like Jackson have used so effectively.

"He's clearly not in the tradition of the black preacher," said Floyd Flake, a black congressman from New York. But Wilder may even garner more support among blacks than Jackson because he "adds another dimension that takes the black community to the next level."

Jackson is "perhaps the foremost political activist of our time," Wilder said in a recent Playboy interview. By contrast, he said, "I've been an officeholder for 21 years.... I am called upon to make compromises — to take the half loaf when I can't get the whole one."

The rightward drift of Wilder's political career — he's cut education and other services to balance his budget and abandoned his opposition to the death penalty — has alienated some of the Virginia liberals who supported his run for governor in 1989.

But not too many of the black ones.

"Blacks have stayed with him even though he's been a 'fiscal conservative,'" said Brad Coker, president of the Mason-Dixon polling firm. "He still has a 78 percent approval rating among Virginia's black voters. They're with him because they think he's one of them."

Bishop H. Hartford Brookins, who heads 500 African Methodist Episcopal churches in the Virginia-Maryland-North Carolina area, said he played an active role in Jackson's 1984 run and salutes Jackson's "charismatic genius."

But he said, "There are great numbers in the black community who now say we need a winner... not an emotional leader."

Rosa Parks, who became a symbol of the civil rights movement when she refused to give her bus seat to a white passenger in Montgomery, Ala., in 1955, said Wilder would make a good candidate but "we'll have to find out" if he draws as much enthusiasm as Jackson.

Parks were attending a party Saturday at Brookins' Washington suburban home where Wilder made an appearance.

In announcing his candidacy Friday, Wilder was at his most eloquent when he described the barriers he'd faced and accused President Bush of "leading the retreat" on race relations.

Iraq could have made atomic bombs, U.N. says

NEW YORK (AP) — Iraq could have amassed enough radioactive material to build two or three atomic weapons a year by the mid-1990s if its production plants had not been destroyed, a United Nations report says.

Since the start of the Persian Gulf War crisis last year, there have been various estimates of Iraq's nuclear capability.

The Iraqis said they had produced about one pound of slightly enriched uranium unsuitable for weapons use and a small quantity of plutonium, which also can be used in weapons.

While Iraqi officials said their nuclear program was peaceful, the uranium and plutonium production they admitted to was nonetheless in violation of the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty.

An Iraqi defector has been widely quoted as telling U.S. intelligence that Baghdad had acquired about 80 or 90 pounds of highly enriched uranium, enough for four or five weapons.

The new report, summarizing the findings of four nuclear inspections carried out under U.N. auspices, paints the most comprehensive picture to date of Iraq's nuclear program and its potential, The New York Times reported Saturday.

The report is expected to be published soon as a Security Council document, the newspaper said.

The report said Iraq was planning to bring additional uranium enrichment equipment into operation within 18 months and estimated that the devices could have produced about 30 pounds of highly enriched uranium a year, enough for at least one weapon.

It said Iraqi scientists acknowledged that they expected output to rise as more equipment became available and they gained operating experience, the newspaper reported.

The production plants were destroyed by allied bombing in the six-week war.

Baghdad complained Friday that the fourth U.N. inspection team did not provide a complete technical evaluation of Iraq's nuclear program, despite receiving sufficient data.

The official Iraqi News Agency suggested there was an effort to create an appearance that Iraq was concealing information in order to justify continued U.N. sanctions.

A fifth nuclear inspection team arrives next week.

Also on Friday, the Security Council warned Baghdad to allow U.N. inspectors to use their own helicopters to fly over Iraq, or risk severe sanctions.

Battle looms over gay rights measure

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (NYT) — The Legislature has set the stage for an emotional and bruising political confrontation between homosexuals and religious fundamentalists in California with the final passage Friday of a bill barring discrimination against homosexuals in employment.

And in one of their last acts of business on Friday, state lawmakers killed a measure that would have shaken up the 1992 national presidential sweepstakes by moving up California's primary from one of the last in the nation to one of the first.

The state Senate's Appropriations Committee killed the bill amid doubts over its cost to the state and which party would benefit most from the change.

All that is left for the Legislature to do this year is the painfully complex and disputed matter of how to reapportion itself and the state's congressional delegation. That is now expected to be settled sometime next week.

The move on the gay rights bill poses a tough problem for Gov. Pete Wilson, a moderate Republican who has long courted California's substantial homosexual vote but who is facing revolt from the right wing of his own party. He has 30 days to sign or veto the bill, and religious leaders and gay forces are already planning public campaigns.

The public got a taste of the bitter conflict over the gay rights bill during the final debate in the state Assembly.

Assemblyman David Knowles, a freshman Republican from rural areas east of Sacramento, attacked the bill with graphic descriptions of what he said were homosexual practices.

Citing what he said was a report by the federal Centers for Disease Control, he said it was common for homosexuals to urinate on each other and play with each other's feces.

He said, "I believe it is the right of every Californian to know the specifics of the lifestyle" that a vote for this bill would advocate.

His words were so graphic that they caused an uproar on the floor, even among other conservative Republicans who oppose the bill.

"Point of order!" shouted Tom McClintock, a Republican from Thousand Oaks near Los Angeles who is a leader of the Assembly conservatives. "It is a monumental embarrassment for us who intend to vote against this bill that we appear to be on the same side as this speaker."

"In my nine years in this House I have never heard such language used on this floor" he went on.

Another assemblyman stood to say that he feared that the deliberations, which are seen in California on cable telvision, were violating federal obscenity laws.

Budget ax ready to cut CIA resources

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA is at a major crossroads: The demise of the Soviet Union has deprived the agency of the heart of its mission for the past 40 years and the congressional budget ax is poised to cut its resources.

The crisis is compounded by a void in the agency's leadership as a result of renewed doubts about the role of senior officials, including CIA director-designate Robert Gates, in the Iran-Contra affair.

The agency will likely send its cloak to the dry cleaners and sheath its dagger, but officials insist the intelligence community is far from being post-Cold War surplus.

Just as the CIA was born in response to Japan's catastrophic surprise attack on Pearl Harbor 50 years ago, the argument goes, so now intelligence is a vital element of U.S. defense.

"The challenges ahead of us in a world of instability, in a world of real confusion and realignment, are much greater in many ways than ... when we had a single, rather straightforward enemy to look at," acting CIA director Richard Kerr recently told a group of intelligence veterans.

Gates, or whoever is confirmed for the job, will face the mammoth task of revamping the direction of the intelligence community.

At best, officials estimate, the budgets of the CIA and more than a dozen of its sister intelligence agencies will be cut by 15 percent.

The reversal in the fortunes of the intelligence budgets — following a 1980s growth of as much as 200 percent by some estimates (the figures are classified) — will hit hardest in the Soviet accounts.

About 30 percent of the intelligence community's $30 billion estimated budget has until now been devoted to gathering and analyzing intelligence on the Soviet Union, officials say.

That figure probably will be cut by as much as 50 percent over the next five years, said a senior intelligence official who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

Parents chain up teen-age girl for year

NEW YORK (NYT) — A 15-year-old Bronx girl was discovered chained to an iron pipe in her family's home, and her parents told investigators that they had locked her up to protect her from drugs and other dangers in the community, the police said Saturday.

The girl, who the police said told them she had been chained up for a year, was found Friday night after a state agency passed an anonymous tip to the police.

The parents, Elizer Marrero, 44, and his wife, Maria, 42, were charged with unlawful imprisonment, reckless endangerment and endangering the welfare of a child.

While some residents of the building at 1387 Grand Concourse, in the High Bridge section, said the situation was a surprise, some neighbors, and an aunt, said the girl's condition had been no secret.

Investigators said that many relatives and friends had come and gone from the apartment in full view of the chained girl.

The girl's aunt, Carmen Rodriguez, 38, said she sympathized with what she called the parents' attempts to control an undisciplined teen-ager. She said the confinement had lasted two to three months.

The girl, whose name was not released, was taken to Lincoln Medical Center in the Bronx, where on Saturday she was listed as in stable condition.

The girl told the police she had been chained by the ankle to the base of an iron wall divider and was unable to move, even to go to the bathroom. She was given a bucket instead, the police said.

Mrs. Rodriguez, who lived downstairs and often visited the apartment, gave a slightly milder version of the confinement. The girl lived on a couch next to a television set and stereo, she said, and had a chain long enough for her to move freely through most of the four-room apartment.

"She had everything she needed," said Mrs. Rodriguez. "VCR, TV, music, a fridge full of food — everything."

The parents told the police that they were upset that their youngest daughter had become involved with drugs. The girl had often disappeared from home for weeks, Mrs. Rodriguez added, returning emaciated and in poor health.

"She liked the fast life out on the street. Her mother was afraid she'd get raped," Mrs. Rodriguez also said.

The police said that an anonymous tip received by the Child Welfare Adminstration about the girl was passed to police officers from the 44th Precinct, who went to check the ground-floor apartment at around 10:45 p.m. Friday. They found her chained by her ankle to the wall divider. Both parents were home at the time.

The girl will be in the custody of the Association for Child Welfare in the immediate future, a police spokeswoman, Sgt. Tina Mohrmann, said.

Mrs. Rodriguez, who cried repeatedly as she was interviewed at the building Saturday, described her sister's family as a largely happy one that had previously been without criminal mishap. Marrero is the building's superintendent and has been there 10 years.

The aunt said the girl's parents had had trouble disciplining her in school and at home for years. When she was 12 they put the girl in foster care in Brooklyn, but she escaped and returned home after a few weeks.

'She liked the fast life out on the street. Her mother was afraid she'd get raped.'

— Carmen Rodriguez

The couple have three other children, two boys and a girl, aged 19, 20 and 22, who live in their native Puerto Rico.

Mrs. Rodriguez said the parents' problems with the youngest daughter increased after she returned to New York last December after spending about half a year in Puerto Rico.

It was then, Mrs. Rodriguez said, that the girl's misbehavior worsened. She would hang out on the street against her parents' wishes and disappear for long periods of time.

"They were just trying to protect her," said Mrs. Rodriguez. She added that the girl had been allowed to go out of the apartment at least twice over the summer, when she herself took the girl on outings to the beach.

Cocaine disposal bad for health, environment

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — Cocaine is known to be bad for the brain, but a state law declaring the narcotic bad for the environment has left police, judges and others wondering how they should — or should not — handle the drug.

The California Department of Toxic Substances Control declared cocaine a hazardous waste in October 1989, but many law enforcement agencies were unaware of the decree until about a month ago, a spokesman said.

Cocaine is considered a hazardous waste material because it is toxic if ingested and could pose an environmental hazard if disposed of in an "uncontrolled manner," said Bob Borzelleri, a spokesman for the state toxic-control department.

The department never issued a formal notification because it does not have the resources to contact each law enforcement agency and also because the agencies are responsible for properly disposing of their own wastes, Borzelleri said.

He said he believes the cocaine classification became more widely known recently after a court clerk who handled the drug as evidence in a criminal case noticed it was listed as a hazardous waste material and spread the word.

While many court and law enforcement officials question whether the drug should be labeled a hazardous waste material, others are taking no chances.

Municipal Court Judge Karl W. Jaeger, who presides over the Municipal Court's Los Angeles Judicial District, ordered judges to prohibit cocaine from being brought into the courtroom unless sealed in an airtight container.

Drugs usually are brought into the courtroom in plastic bags contained in sealed envelopes, but Jaeger's ruling would require the plastic bags to be airtight, officials said.

The Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department and the Los Angeles Police Department recently halted burning the drug as a way to dispose of it.

Protesters form barrier around clinic in Iowa

Protester Scott Kliewer had promised a massive rally against the city's five clinics that offer abortions, but only 75 Operation Rescue supporters showed up at the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women.

Another dozen who picketed the Planned Parenthood clinic were met by about two dozen abortion rights demonstrators. Both sides used bullhorns to shout slogans and exchange angry words.

There were no arrests, said police Sgt. Ron Fort.

At Emma Goldman, the groups stood on opposite sides of the street.

Kliewer and a few supporters took turns crossing the street and walking on the sidewalk in front of the clinic. The abortion rights crowd chanted, "Not the church, not the state, women must decide their fate."

"You're shouting because your conscience bothers you. You've got blood on your hands," shouted Bill Randles, pastor of Believers in Grace Fellowship Church.

Neither of the Iowa City clinics targeted had abortions scheduled Saturday, a director at each office said.

"We're not intimidated by a bunch of out of town bullies," said Judy Rutledge, a spokeswoman for Planned Parenthood of Greater Iowa.

"Iowa City is a true pro-choice community and Iowa itself is a pro-choice state," said Jackie Russell, associate director at Emma Goldman.

Abortion rights advocates shouted "This is not Wichita" in reference to weeks of anti-abortion protests that resulted in hundreds of arrests in the Kansas city.

In Wichita on Saturday, about 100 anti-abortion and abortion rights protesters demonstrated at a clinic. Eleven were arrested for trespassing and one for battery, said U.S. Marshal Denis Amico.

Investigators question Gorbachev in coup probe

MOSCOW (AP) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev spent nearly two hours Saturday facing questions by investigators seeking to build criminal cases against the leaders of last month's failed coup.

The session was believed to be the first time a Soviet leader provided evidence in a criminal probe.

The session with Soviet and Russian prosecutors yielded "detailed answers," the news agency Tass said, without reporting what he actually said. No Soviet officials could be immediately reached for comment.

Even as Gorbachev recalled the coup, fallout from the political unheaval continued. In the southern republic of Azerbaijan, the Communist Party branch voted to dissolve itself a day after tens of thousands of protesters rallied against the party.

Party branches in most of the republics already have been dissolved, and the national party has been suspended pending the coup investigation.

The Aug. 18-21 coup was led by top officials including former KGB chief Vladimir Kryuchkov, Defense Minister Dmitri Yazov, Prime Minister Valentin Pavlov, Vice President Gennady Yanayev and late Interior Minister Boris Pugo, who committed suicide Aug. 22.

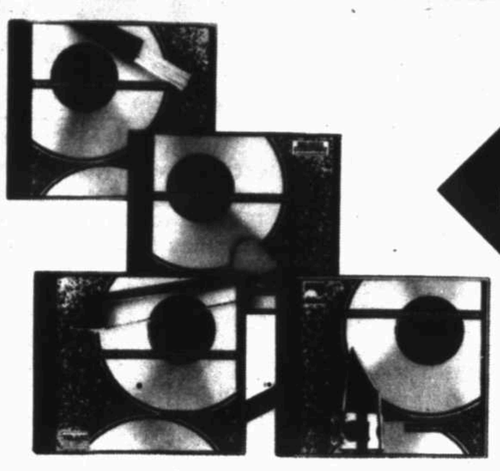

The seven surviving coup committee members and several top KGB, military and presidential staff officials have been fired and charged with high treason, which could carry a sentence of death by firing squad.

The Tass report did not say whether Gorbachev would answer more questions or whether he shed any new light on the investigation.

During the coup, Gorbachev and his family were held for three days in their Black Sea vacation home near the Crimean city of Foros.

Gorbachev has said a group including his former chief of staff, Valery Boldin, and the chief of his personal guards, Lt. Gen. Yuri Plekhanov, came to his home in the evening of Aug. 18 and demanded he sign documents turning over power to Yanayev.

Gorbachev has said all his phone lines had been cut, including a special line to military commanders. Gorbachev said he refused to sign anything, and an aide said the group left with a case containing communications equipment and codes for launching nuclear weapons.

Baker's trip highlights Baltics as symbols of change

TALLINN, Estonia (AP) — Secretary of State James A. Baker III is touring three tiny Baltic nations that stand as huge symbols of the changes occurring in the Soviet Union.

With a swiftness no one would have predicted only months ago, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania won their freedom last week after half a century of unwilling membership in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Baker said his one-day sweep through the three nations was "to share with the Baltic people and their leadership ... our joy and enthusiasm at their independence."

Baker's first stop was Estonia, which declared its sovereignty in 1988, the first of the republics to move to break with Moscow.

There the secretary pledged $14 million in U.S. aid for the three nations in the current fiscal year, and he promised more aid for the Baltics in the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1.

He also presented Estonian president Arnold Ruutel with the Estonian flag that had hung in the lobby of the U.S. State Department for the years the United States refused to recognize Estonia's forceable absorption into the Soviet Union.

The most prosperous of the three states, Estonia has a population of only 1.6 million.

From Estonia, Baker goes to Latvia and then to Lithuania.

Once the Lithuanians declared their intention to secede from the Soviet Union, they were the most aggressive of the republics in pressing for their freedom. Their tone often made the other two fear Soviet retaliation.

All three states were forcibly absorbed into the Soviet Union in 1940 as a result of the secret pact between Josef Stalin and Adolf Hitler.

Ironically, they all have significant Russian minority populations that were the center of opposition to their efforts to break away from the Soviet Union.

On Friday, Baker cited the independence of the Baltics as an example of how "some very contentious items between the United States and the Soviet Union were being resolved in this post-coup period."

But while Baker was hailing the success of the Baltic states in winning their freedom from Soviet dominance, he and aides also were stressing their belief in the need for a viable central government in whatever structure emerges from the turbulence that has seen 11 of the 15 Soviet republics declare their independence.

'They did for us in three days what it would have taken us 15 years to accomplish.'

— Alexander Yakovlev

In a briefing Friday night, State Department officials speaking on condition of anonymity said there was a desire emerging among many of the leading reformers "to sort of rein in separatist tendencies."

Baker and his aides have cited such matters as the control of nuclear weapons and the need for a single currency as examples of the critical functions of a strong central government.

State Department officials also praised the emerging Soviet leadership. They cited a meeting with Marshal Yevgeny Shaposhnikov in which the new minister of defense said he wanted to talk about military justice and expressed pride in Soviet troops who refused to fire on the Soviet people during the coup.

Cuba calls for close of military base on island

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Cuban government said Saturday the departure of Soviet military personnel would leave it vulnerable to a U.S. attack unless American forces also withdraw.

In an editorial in Granma, the Communist Party newspaper, the Cuban government called on the United Nations to help negotiate the closing of the U.S. base at Guantanamo Bay and an international treaty preventing the United States from invading Cuba.

The newspaper called the announced departure of Soviet forces an "unconditional concession" to the United States that "compromises our national security."

Without Soviet military in Cuba, the United States now has a green light to invade the island, Granma said.

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev announced Wednesday that the military training brigade of between 6,800 and 7,700 soldiers would be removed from Cuba in the next few months.

Soviet Foreign Minister Boris D. Pankin said the Soviet Union expects that the removal of their military personnel from the island will be matched by a U.S. closing of Guantanamo. But he did not demand that the United States close the base, which it has leased since the turn of the century.

Cuba, 90 miles south of Florida, has been one of the most volatile flashpoints in U.S.-Soviet relations since the abortive U.S.-backed invasion by Cuban exiles at the Bay of Pigs in 1961 and the Cuban missile crisis in 1962.

Granma said the U.S. base, on the far eastern end of the island, constitutes an "illegal occupation of Cuban territory ... that is totally obsolete for its defense strategies."

The Cuban government, the editorial said, would accept the simultaneous return of Soviet and U.S. military personnel to the island pending discussions with the government.

The editorial, titled, "Cuba Will Never Give up nor be Sold to the United States," was filled with harsh words of defiance and criticism of the 30-year economic embargo against Cuba.

Granma accused the Bush administration of being immersed in an "orgy of triumphalism," interested in causing "suffering" for the Cuban people.

Firefight erupts between U.N. peacekeepers, guerrillas

JERUSALEM (AP) — A gun battle between U.N. peacekeepers and guerrillas just north of the Israeli border claimed the lives of a U.N. soldier and one Arab gunman Saturday, a U.N. official said.

The firefight was the second in as many days in southern Lebanon, where U.N. troops have been deployed since 1978.

On Friday, guerrillas apparently intent on attacking Israel were forced ashore from dinghies and seized 14 U.N. soldiers hostage in south Lebanon, then traded fire with Israeli soldiers. A guerrilla and a U.N. soldier were killed.

Saturday's firefight began when a U.N. patrol intercepted an armed squad near the village of Yater, four miles north of the Israeli border, said Timor Goksel, spokesman for the U.N. Interim Force In Lebanon.

The gunmen killed one Nepalese soldier and slightly wounded a second, Goskel said, and the peacekeepers killed one of the gunmen.

Israel radio said the guerrilla squad was on its way to launch a Katyusha rocket into Israel, but Goksel denied the report.

"There was a report of an explosion, but it was probably from a (rocket propelled grenade)," he said, adding that no Katyushas were found.

Meanwhile, a guerrilla captured in Friday's clash said he belonged to Yasser Arafat's Fatah faction of the Palestine Liberation Organization, despite the denial of Fatah.

Rabia Salman Awad Abu Sebab repeated the claim several times in an interview with reporters in Tel Aviv, saying he belong to "Abu Amar," nom de guerre of the PLO leader.

Saddam fires Iraq's prime minister

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Saddam Hussein has dismissed Iraq's prime minister in an apparent retreat from post-war pledges of democratic reforms, drumming out the advocate of broader-based politics.

Iraq's ruling Baath Party officially dismissed Prime Minister Saadoun Hammadi, the highest-ranking Shiite Muslim in Saddam's Cabinet, at a party conference Friday, Iraqi media reported.

The Iraqi News Agency said Saddam was also re-elected president and secretary-general of the Baath party, a signal to observers that he was in firm control if not tightening his grip on Iraq despite his Gulf War defeat.

The report also said key hard-liners remained in Saddam's lineup.

They included Deputy Prime Minister Tariq Aziz, a well-known Iraqi defender during the war, and Ali-Hassan Al-Majid, a cousin of Saddam known as the "butcher of the Kurds" for a suspected chemical weapons attack in 1988.

Saddam, who rules through the party's Revolutionary Command Council, attended the conference and signed the decree replacing Hammadi with his little-known deputy, Mohammed Hamza al-Zubaidi.

Saddam, who rules through the party's Revolutionary Command Council, attended the conference and signed the decree replacing Hammadi with his little-known deputy, Mohammed Hamza al-Zubaidi.

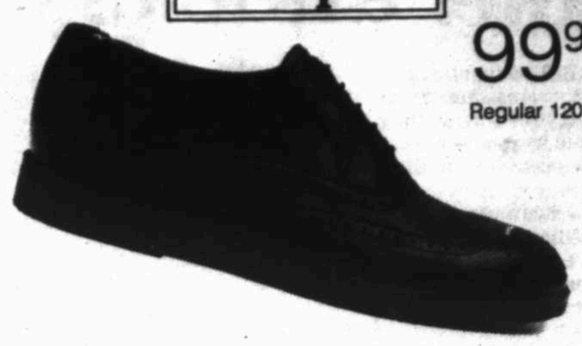

The Iraqi News Agency later said Saddam presided over a meeting of the party command Saturday.

Last March, with Saddam's control of Iraq uncertain after Kurdish and Shiite Muslim uprisings, Hammadi was appointed in a Cabinet reshuffle seen as Saddam's answer to promised reforms — after nearly 12 years of autocratic rule.

Hammadi is an American-educated economist from southern Iraq, focus of a Shiite Muslim insurrection crushed by Saddam after the Gulf War. His choice was seen an attempt to appease Shiites, who make up 55 percent of Iraq's 17 million people.

Iraqi politics are dominated by the Baathist regime, controlled by the minority Sunni Muslims.

Hammadi was regarded at the time as a leading advocate of hoped-for reforms to broaden Iraq's one-party politics.

Negotiations continue in bid to resolve bases issue

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — If the Senate refuses to allow the U.S. Navy to stay at its Subic Bay base, President Corazon Aquino will ask the people to overturn the decision in a national referendum, sources said Saturday.

The Senate is expected to vote Monday to reject an agreement under which the Americans would give up Clark Air Base next year but keep Subic for 10 more years in return for $203 million annually.

A referendum could nullify the Senate action and defer a final decision on the status of U.S. forces in the Philippines until the next administration and Congress, to be elected next May.

Twelve of the 23 senators oppose the agreement, four more than needed for rejection.

Anti-bases senators warned the referendum would polarize the nation, and Mrs. Aquino's brother-in-law, Sen. Agapito Aquino, said opponents would challenge its legality in the supreme court.

Nevertheless, Mrs. Aquino appeared determined to prevent the Senate she created from removing U.S. military forces from Philippine soil.

Well-informed sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Americans had agreed to delay their withdrawal from Subic, the largest U.S. naval base in Asia, pending the outcome of the referendum.

President Bush has described the draft agreement as "our best offer" and said the Navy would withdraw from Subic if the agreement were defeated.

Most Filipinos are believed to support the continued U.S. presence, and even opponents admit the country cannot provide jobs to the tens of thousands of people who depend on the Americans for their livelihood.

But a strong and influential minority in academia, the media and the professional classes believe the presence of foreign forces infringes on national sovereignty.

Typhoon kills nine

TOKYO (AP) — Typhoon Kinna lashed western Japan Saturday with winds of more than 80 mph and heavy rains that touched off mudslides, washed out bridges and flooded more than 2,700 homes. Authorities said at least nine people were killed.

Two people were missing and 53 others were injured, a National Police Agency official said. Nearly six inches of rain per hour fell in some areas of southwestern Japan.

By late Saturday, the storm weakened to a tropical depression as it passed over the Yonezawa region 250 miles north of Tokyo.

Army attacks Croats to break blockade of barracks

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — Federal tanks and warplanes retaliated with fierce attacks Saturday after struggling Croatian forces cut off food, water and electricity to army garrisons in the secessionist republic.

Federal troops surrendered at three of the besieged outposts, Croatia said.

Earlier Saturday, federal tanks and jets pounded the Danube River town of Vukovar, one of the last Croatian strongholds in the eastern part of the republic, Croatian officials said.

Neighboring Vinkovci also was reported under attack.

Belgrade media said a federal armored column was moving toward Vukovar under heavy fire from Croatian villages. They said the army had suffered casualties, but did not elaborate.

At least 400 people have died in 2½ months of fighting after Croatia declared independence on June 25. Ethnic Serbs who comprise 12 percent of the republic's 4.75 million people largely oppose secession.

The Croatians and some Western governments have accused the Yugoslav army of siding with the ethnic Serbs to capture one-third of Croatian territory. The army says it acts only to separate warring forces — or to defend itself.

The federal military called Saturday's combat "defensive" after army garrisons in Osijek, Slavonski Brod, Slavonska Pozega and Vukovar were blockaded by Croatian forces.

It said soldiers in Vukovar had received no fresh food since Aug. 25 and that it had no choice but to take "decisive measures" to save them or "abandon (the federal) units in Croatia to hunger and destruction."

"There was no other solution," a military statement said.

Croatia's Defense Ministry said late Saturday that army troops had surrendered at a barracks and a military warehouse in Zagreb, and at another barracks near Gospic, 90 miles south of the Croatian capital.

Earlier, Zagreb television reported that four federal warplanes attacked Vukovar, sending heavy smoke into the sky. Tanks and multiple rocket launchers just across the Danube River in Serbia also were firing on the town, it said.

The blockade of federal military facilities imposed early Saturday throughout Croatia deprived the federal troops of food, water and electricity.

The army said its airports in Zagreb and Zadar, inside Croatia, also were "practically cut off from the rest of the world."

Croatian Vice Premier Zdravko Tomac told a news conference that Croatia's blockades would "not be renounced" and the republic's defense minitery issued a statement urging all Croats to desert the federal army.

Border region tense in wake of clash

POONCH, India (AP) — Indian and Pakistani troops are facing each other ready for battle across a cease-fire line in Jammu-Kashmir state after the heaviest fighting between the two armies during peacetime.

At least 30 soldiers and three civilians were killed in a 10-day battle for control of a village straddling the cease-fire line, Indian officials say. The fighting, including heavy artillery firing by both sides, ended a week ago.

"I have not seen this kind of shelling since the war," said Haji Mohammed Khan, a 65-year-old farmer, referring to the 1971 war, the third and most recent between the two countries.

Khan said his daughter-in-law, Hanifa Bee, was killed when a shell landed outside his home. His 4-year-old grandson was injured by shrapnel, he said.

The fighting erupted Aug. 24, when Pakistani troops occupied Keerni village and surrounding areas, a small valley surrounded by Himalayan mountains, Indian military officials said. The Indian army regained control Sept. 2, an Indian military officer said.

"It was a tough job," said the officer, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Pakistan has said India attacked its border outposts with "battalion-sized thrusts" and that the raid was repulsed.

India's junior Defense Minister Krishna Kumar told Parliament that eight Indian soldiers were killed. He said the army recovered the bodies of two Pakistani soldiers, and had seen at least 20 bodies being taken away. Three civilians also were killed, he said.

A cease-fire, agreed to at a meeting by commanders of the two armies in no-man's land on Sept. 3, was holding, the minister said.

But military officials say the troops are on alert and patrolling has increased.

The area has been closed to civilians, said Sudhir Singh Bilowria, the top bureaucrat in Poonch district, where Keerni is located. At least 600 residents have been shifted to Poonch, the nearest town, he said.

"Although we have regained control, that does not mean we should end matters," Bilowria said.

Indian officials say the Pakistanis meant the border battle to be a prelude to establishing a route for Kashmiri Muslim militants to come to India from training camps in Pakistan.

Communism remains Beijing's top priority

BEIJING (NYT) — China's leaders have pledged in a series of confidential documents that the Soviet upheavals will neither diminish China's commitment to communism nor weaken its resolve to open the door wider to the outside world.

At least three classified documents are circulating at various levels in the Chinese Communist Party, outlining the leaders' response to the Soviet events, according to Chinese with access to high-level information. Two of the documents are based on advice from the paramount leader, Deng Xiaoping, that China must act prudently and avoid taking a belligerent stance against the collapse of communism elsewhere.

One of the three items has been previously reported. It is Central Committee Document No. 4, which concludes that the Soviet Union has restored capitalism and that its mistake was that it chose the wrong successor to earlier hardliners.

The second document, which is stamped "top secret" and has begun circulating to department heads in the central government and party apparatus, is a revised version of a speech given in July by the Communist Party leader, Jiang Zemin. Jiang emphasizes that communism has faced difficulties before and that it will overcome them, and that China will continue its open-door and reform policies.

To avoid the fate of the Soviet Union, Jiang says, China must adhere to three principles: Communist Party leadership of China, party control over the military and security forces, and disavowal of privatization in the economy.

He also takes a dig at the United States, noting that American relief for the devastating flood in central China amounted to only $25,000, while the people of Hong Kong donated some $50 million. Jiang suggests that the United States knew through satellite information that the flood was a terrible catastrophe and hoped that it would lead to turmoil that would threaten the regime.

Instead, Jiang says, the government has handled the relief effort extremely smoothly and has demonstrated the superiority of socialism. Under capitalism, many people would have starved to death or been left uncared for, he says.

While large sums have been raised within China, these have not all been voluntary. Some Chinese are grumbling that they are being told to give four or five new pieces of clothing to their work units to be forwarded to flood victims.

Five Midland ISD Students Named National Merit-Semifinalists

Jerri Talent

Krista Stanton

Teresa Talent

Marc Bruner

Five Midland ISD high school seniors, four from Lee High School and one from Midland High School, have been named by the National Merit Scholarship Corporation as National Merit Semifinalists.

Since 1988, Midland ISD has produced twenty-eight semifinalists.

"Midland schools continue to produce a larger number and higher percentage of semifinalists than most other West Texas districts," noted Joe Baressi, superintendent.

Of the 1.8 million participants nationwide in the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Tests (PSAT/NMSQT), only 15,000 students earn this designation.

| district | number semifinalists | student enrollment | expenditure per student* |
|---|---|---|---|
| Midland ISD | 5 | 21,082 | $3365.17 |
| Abilene ISD | 1 | 18,217 | $3709.73 |
| Amarillo ISD | 6 | 27,374 | $3323.76 |
| Ector County ISD | 2 | 26,993 | $3584.67 |
| Lubbock ISD | 10 | 30,994 | $2690.42 |
| San Angelo ISD | 3 | 16,497 | $3217.81 |

Midland Trinity School, with an enrollment of 454, has one semifinalist. Trinity high school tuition is $5715.

The Midland ISD semifinalists are:

Marc Bruner, Lee High School, has been active in numerous school activities, including German Club, National Honor Society, Academic Decathlon Team, and Students for Environmental Awareness. He has lettered in band and several academic areas, performed in school plays, and earned awards in math, science, and solo and ensemble contests.

Outside of school, Bruner enjoys computers and role-playing games. He plans to major in engineering at the University of Texas.

Krista Stanton, Midland High School, plans to pursue a chemical engineering degree at Brigham Young University. She was an award winning participant in the 1991 regional science fair, is an active member in the Junior Engineering Technical Society, and has been awarded the Rensselaer Mathematics and Science Award and several campus departmental awards.

Stanton is an instructor at the Bingham Dance Center. As a member of the "We Dance for Joy" troupe, she received the grand regional championship in the Stars of Tomorrow competition in Ft. Worth. The Midland High School senior is also active in her church, participating as a youth counselor and in an early morning weekday study program.

Jerri is spending her senior year in Germany.

Both Jerri and Teresa have been active in the National Honor Society, German Club and the band, participated in math and science competitions, lettered in academics and band, earned awards in instrumental and foreign language contests, and received the Presidential Academic Fitness Award.

Jerri has also been in the Lee High School orchestra and jazz ensemble. Teresa is a squad leader for the band's color guard.

The Talents' interest in music extends to their church, singing in the choir and touring with the Northwest Conference Methodist youth choir.

The semifinalists will now compete for designation as a National Merit Finalist. Last year, Midland ISD produced eight finalists. Every finalist will have a chance to win one of 1,800 National Merit $2000 scholarships.

PSAT/NMSQT is a lengthly multiple choice test measuring mathematics and language arts. The National Merit Scholarship Corporation is a privately funded non-profit organization.

*Enrollment and expenditure per student figures are from the Texas Research League 1990-91 Benchmarks report on Texas public schools.

Army buried Iraqi soldiers alive

WASHINGTON (NYT) — United States Army forces buried alive scores of Iraqi soldiers in their trenches in the early hours of the allied ground attack that ended the Persian Gulf war, Army commanders said last week.

The deaths took place during the operation in which American M-1A1 tanks of the 1st Infantry Division cut lanes through a 10-mile-wide stretch of barbed wire, minefields, bunkers, and trenches north of the Iraqi-Saudi Arabian border on Feb. 24 as the allied ground offensive unfolded.

Army officials said the Iraqi soldiers who died remained in their trenches as plow-equipped tanks dumped tons of earth and sand onto them, filling the trenches to insure that they could not be used as cover from which to fire on allied units that were poised to pour through the gaps.

The Army said it knew the operation would kill Iraqis who did not surrender or otherwise get out of the way, but said the tactic spared the lives of American soldiers who would have had to leave the safety of their armored vehicles and fight Iraqi troops hand to hand in the trenches.

"People somehow have the notion that burying guys alive is nastier than blowing them up with hand grenades or sticking them in gut with bayonets," said Col. Lon Maggart. "Well, it's not."

Maggart, commander of one of two brigades that led assaults on a key line of Iraqi defenses, said in a telephone interview from Fort Riley, Kan., that between 80 and 250 Iraqis had been buried alive. Army officials said the 1st Infantry's experiences had been the only incidents of live burials during the war.

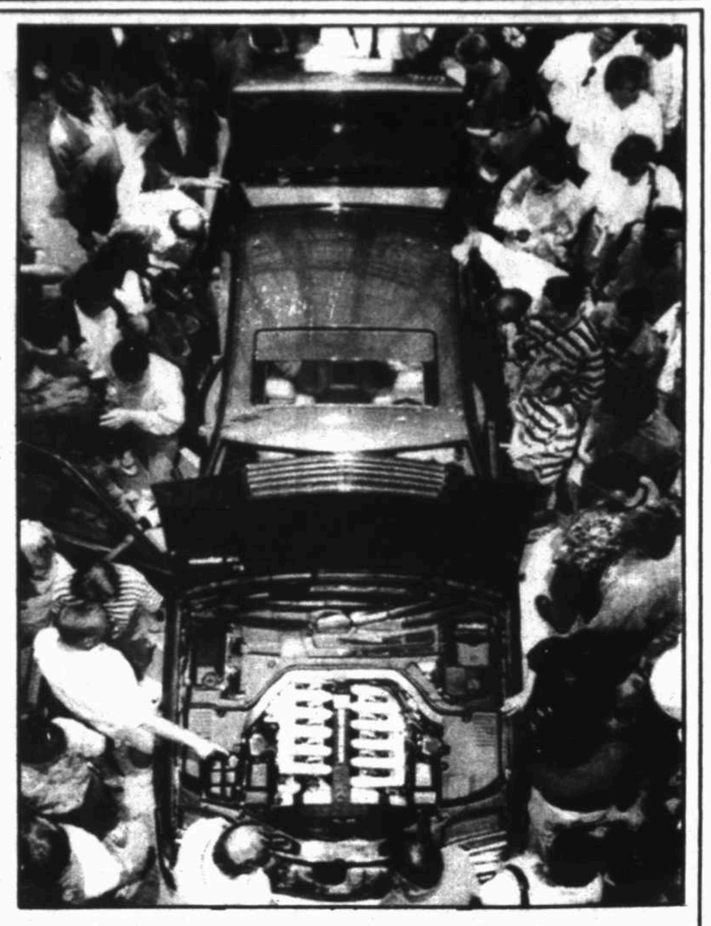

At a news conference here on Thursday, the Pentagon spokesman, Pete Williams, defended the tactic and said it did not violate the Geneva Conventions on the conduct of warfare. "I don't mean to be flippant, but there's no nice way to kill somebody in war," Williams said.

The disclosure of the live burials, which were first reported in Newsday last week, seems likely to add to the debate about how forthcoming the Pentagon has been in providing details about the toll suffered by the Iraqi army at the hands of American forces.

Non-socialists likely to win elections

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Sunday's parliamentary elections in Sweden were expected to measure Swedes' dedication to their welfare system and how much they are willing to pay for it in times of high inflation.

The Social Democrats, who founded the increasingly costly welfare state, were expected to lose power as the country faces Western Europe's highest inflation rate, 9 percent a year. Unemployment has doubled in a year to a post-World War II high of 3.1 percent.

A bloc of four liberal-to-conservative parties was favored to win the most seats in the 349-member Riksdag. They have promised lower taxes, business growth incentives, reduction of bureaucracy, privatization and more choice in services such as hospitals and child care.

Moderate Party leader Carl Bildt, a 42-year-old conservative, was likely to replace Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson, whose Social Democrats have governed Sweden for 53 of the last 59 years.

"The changeover from the old to the new, occurring all over the world as the last bastions of socialism fall, must also come to Sweden," Bildt said in the final campaign debate meant to swing undecided voters. About 800,000, or 13 percent, were undecided, according to final poll estimates Friday.

The non-socialists say boosting competitiveness and productivity while lowering taxes will save, not harm, the welfare system.

But Carlsson charges they want to dismantle it. "The election concerns the welfare, and security of the old, and of all families," he said in the final debate.

Carlsson, 56, reminded voters that Sweden enjoys "the best family policy of any country in the world," with laws guaranteeing parents' rights to spend time with their children, generous leisure and sick pay.

Magic nuptials

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Los Angeles Lakers guard Magic Johnson and Earletha "Cookie" Kelly were wed Saturday before a slightly larger crowd than expected.

The couple were surrounded by 3,000 cheering fans when they left the small Union Missionary Baptist Church, not far from where Johnson entertained high school and Michigan State University basketball fans in the 1970s.

Johnson and Kelly, both 32, met while they were students at the Big 10 school in 1977. Fourteen years later, the two were wed in what Johnson had hoped would be a private affair.

Johnson wore a white jacket and black pants, while Kelly wore a full-length white sequined dress with train and crown.

"It was typical Earvin and Cookie," said Joel Ferguson, a Michigan State trustee. "There was a lot of candor and they were very relaxed."

Fans outside the church cheered celebrity guests, including Isiah Thomas and Mark Aguirre of the Detroit Pistons and former Michigan State standout Gregory Kelser.

A private reception was held at Michigan State's Kellogg Center near Jenison Fieldhouse, where Johnson led the Spartans to a 1979 NCAA championship.

Tech ducks victory

AP Laserphoto

Former Abilene Cooper Cougar Jeff Ireland rejoices after his winning field goal for Baylor in the Bears' 16-14 win over defending national champion Colorado Saturday.

■ Oregon quarterback Danny O'Neil threw four touchdown passes to lead the Pac-10 Ducks past the Red Raiders, 28-13.

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

LUBBOCK — Most Ducks fly south around this time of the year for a little relaxation and seasonal preening, but the Oregon Ducks were here Saturday night for another reason — and still they cleaned up.

O'Neil

Red-shirt freshman Danny O'Neil tied an Oregon record with four touchdown passes, and the Ducks fashioned a 28-13 win over the Red Raiders at Jones Stadium.

"This was a heck of a game. Tech was everything we expected them to be," said Oregon coach Rich Brooks, whose Ducks flew to 2-0 against a Red Raider team depleated at wideout and discouraged in the defensive backfield.

O'Neil, who passed for just 129 yards in last week's 40-14 victory over Washington State, hit on 19-of-35 passes for 292 yards at Tech as the Red Raiders fell to 1-1.

His four TD passes in a single game tied marks set at UO by Dan Fouts, Chris Miller and Tom Blanchard.

"We had them in check most of the night, but they got a few breaks and turned them into big plays," said Raider safety Brian Dubiski.

"He (O'Neil) gave us a lot of problems scrambling and getting outside. We couldn't contain him very well, but those guys up front play as hard as they can and they get tired.

"O'Neil's a good runner and we just couldn't stop him."

Oregon tailback Sean Burwell came into the game as the apparent man to stop, having rushed for 189 yards in the season opener. But while Burwell did lead all rushers with 114 yards on 29 carries, it was the OU passing attack that controled the game.

"I think we did a good job of stopping the run, for the most part, said Tech coach Spike Dykes, whose Raiders trailed 14-10 at halftime.

"I'm just disappointed that we had the opportunity to win and didn't get it done."

Oregon out-gained the Raiders 456-340, and a lot of that had to do with the abscence of big-play threats Rodney Blackshear and Lloyd Hill, Tech's top receivers who were sidelined all night by injuries. Even so, Tech quarterback Jamie Gill managed to find receivers 17-of-27 times for 168 yards.

Baylor surprises Colorado

Associated Press

BOULDER, Colo. — Baylor ought to bottle it and apply for a patent, this habit of blocking field goals and recovering on the other end of the field to set up their own scores.

For the second time in two years, the Bears turned another team's scoring opportunity to their own advantage when Santana Dotson blocked a field goal attempt to set up teammate Jeff Ireland's clinching 3-pointer with 51 seconds left Saturday, rallying No. 23 Baylor past No. 12 Colorado 16-14.

Last year, the Bears blocked a Texas Tech field goal and finally recovered the bounding ball at the Tech 1-yard line, setting up a tying touchdown in the second quarter and sparking a 21-15 victory.

SWC Report

On Saturday, the timing was even better. Colorado had just recovered a Baylor fumble and appeared primed to add to its 14-13 lead with three minutes remaining.

"We were yelling 'Texas Tech, Texas Tech' on the sideline," Baylor coach Grant Teaff said. "Last year we had our backs to the wall and we blocked a field goal and it ended up turning the game around, and that's what we were thinking today. Santana may have won the Lombardi with that block."

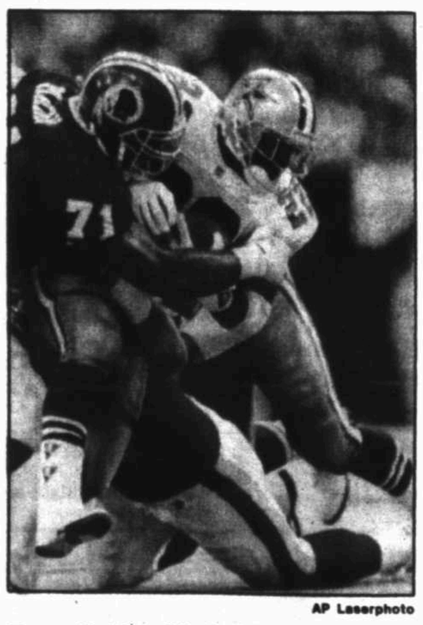

Dotson, a 6-foot-5, 264-pound senior defensive tackle, is one of 12 semifinalists for the Lombardi Award, which goes to the nation's top lineman.

Teaff called the game a "head-knocker. It ended up going 15 rounds, and we got lucky. They got a big break (with the fumble recovery), but then we made our own break.

"I've said all along this team was special because of what they learned last year. A team that never gives up,

Emmitt healthy for Philadelphia

Even ill, Emmitt Smith, right, made an impression against Washington.

Associated Press

IRVING — Emmitt Smith is heavy on the minds of Dallas Cowboys opponents before, during and after games.

They fear what the second-year running back can do, then they see him do it in a game and he's all they want to talk about afterwards.

Washington's Darrell Green, the fastest defensive back in the NFL, said Smith gave the Redskins nightmares.

"Emmitt is always hard to tackle," Green said. "We didn't do a good job when he ran 75 yards for a touchdown against us but you've got to remember. He's Emmitt Smith."

Linebacker Matt Millen said Smith "is kind of a funny running back. He doesn't overpower you but he has great feet. He just hits a crease and takes off."

Smith, the 1990 Rookie of the Year out of Florida, doesn't have great speed.

But he has world class legs.

"I blocked for Bo Jackson at Auburn and Emmitt and they are two different running backs except for the legs," Dallas fullback Tommie Agee said. "Their legs are incredible. That's what they have in common. All great backs have great legs."

■ Dallas Cowboys vs. Philadelphia Eagles, noon, CBS-TV (KOSA-Cable Channel 8).

Defensive back Alvin Walton of the Redskins hurt himself tackling Smith.

"I got a deep bruise on my shoulder when I tackled Emmitt after he caught a touchdown pass," Walton said.

Washington linebacker Andre Collins said Smith, a first-round draft pick by the Cowboys two years ago, "is a great back with great moves."

Smith, who will go against the Philadelphia Eagles today at noon at Texas Stadium, leads the NFC in rushing with 224 yards. He also is the leading receiver coming out of the backfield with 14 catches.

Apparently, you can take it with you

■ Die-hard fans can now take their love of school on step further and about six-feet under.

Associated Press

Loyal college football fans can take their alma mater with them into the grave, now that a company has come up with caskets with the school colors of Alabama, Auburn, Tennessee and Georgia.

Loretto Casket Co. will drape a $2,000 casket in the colors of the deceased's school. Team logotypes are in full color on a white velvet panel that fits inside the lid.

"The reception has been tremendous," said Ken Abercrombie, company owner.

Company officials got the idea early this year while preparing new lines of caskets for a Tennessee funeral directors convention. Abercrombie, after talking with the convention planners, decided to market an orange casket with a white lining.

He knew Alabama morticians would be at the same convention, so his company, which is about 25 miles from Florence, Ala., produced a red casket with an Alabama logo.

Funeral directors were impressed.

"They immediately thought of instances where these would be appropriate," Abercrombie said.

Auburn and Georgia coffins soon followed. For Auburn fans on their last flights, Abercrombie recommends his blue model with the orange accent stripes on the sides. It, too, has a white velvet interior.

Caskets for fans of other Southeastern Conference teams will be produced as licensing contracts are approved, Abercrombie said.

Michigan gets first win over Irish in five years

Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — The words of the prophet are no longer written on the subway walls. They are conceived by entrepreneurs, silk-screened onto T-shirts, and sold by the dozens, as were these words that were placed on sale on Saturday:

"You Da Man, Desmond."

And the price of this particular T-shirt is going up by the game.

With what once was a 17-point Michigan lead over Notre Dame all but gone, and with the Wolverines facing the nervous push-and-shove business of a fourth-and-1 at the Irish 25 with just over nine minutes to play, Desmond Howard turned the most daring decision of the afternoon into its most breathtaking moment.

Streaking up the right sideline, Howard, having beaten Irish defensive backs Greg Davis and Jeff Burris, threw himself forward in the end zone, stretched parallel to the ground, extended his arms, gripped Elvis Grbac's shocking pass inches from the grass and somehow withstood the force of his inevitable landing.

His 25-yard touchdown, Howard's second of the game and sixth of the season, secured Michigan's 24-14 victory, its first over the Irish in five years.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Casey Weldon threw a pair of first-quarter touchdown passes and nine different players scored as top-ranked Florida State routed Western Michigan.

The Seminoles (3-0) built a 38-0 lead as six players scored in the first half.

Weldon retired after Florida State's opening drive of the second period was capped by an 11-yard run by freshman fullback William Floyd that gave the Seminoles a 28-0 lead.

Weldon, who guided the Seminoles to four touchdowns in a span of less than 10 minutes, completed seven of eight passes for 111 yards. He teamed with Eric Turral on a 3-yard touchdown pass and hit Edgar Bennett for a 12-yard score.

In three games, Weldon has completed 75 percent of his passes for 628 yards and seven touchdowns without throwing an interception. The Florida State offense has averaged 46.7 points in victories over Brigham Young, Tulane and Western Michigan.

The Seminoles has 272 yards and 15 first downs by the half, while Western Michigan (2-1) managed just 41 yards and three first downs.

LOS ANGELES — The Southern Cal Trojans, coming off one of their worst games in recent years, beat fifth-ranked Penn State, a week after the Nittany Lions routed Cincinnati 81-0.

The Trojans, shocked 24-10 in their opener by Memphis State, shut down Penn State's running game and kept constant pressure on quarterback Tony Sacca, sacking him four times and forcing him to hurry almost every pass.

Sophomore Reggie Perry, who hadn't thrown a pass in a college game until the opener against Memphis State, threw for one touchdown and ran for another as the Trojans (1-1) ended Penn State's 11-game regular-season winning streak.

No. 16 Alabama 0

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Shane Matthews staggered Alabama with two third-quarter touchdown passes and sixth-ranked Florida used a powerful running game keyed by Errict Rhett to finish off the No. 16 Crimson Tide.

Rhett ran for 170 yards and one TD and Matthews finished with 15 completions in 27 attempts for 251 yards and three TDs as the Gators beat their longtime Southeastern Conference nemesis for the first time in seven tries at Gainesville.

Matthews broke up a defensive struggle with scoring passes of 23 yards to Tre Everett and 13 yards to Willie Jackson after Florida built a 6-0 halftime lead on field goals of 44 and 48 yards by Arden Czyzewski.

NORMAN, Okla. — Oklahoma intercepted six passes and blocked a punt in beating an outmanned North Texas.

The No. 9 Sooners sputtered offensively but shut down an Eagles offense that returned only three starters — all sophomores.

Mike McKinley had two 1-yard touchdown runs and Cale Gundy threw for another score as the Sooners rang up 361 yards in total offense. Gundy completed eight of 15 passes for 85 yards and was intercepted once.

wins. Today they would not give up, they would not quit."

Colorado coach Bill McCartney said Dotson was able to penetrate and make the block because "one of our young linemen (freshman Clint Moore) blocked down when he should have blocked out."

Moments earlier, Colorado (1-1) had recovered a Baylor fumble at the Bears' 30-yard line. After marching to the 6, the Buffs lined up for a 24-yard attempt by Jim Harper, but Dotson stormed in and blocked it. The ball careened back across midfield, where the Bears' Brian Hand picked it up and returned it 13 yards to the Colorado 30. Tailback David Mims had a 13-yard run to help move the Bears (2-0) in position for Ireland's 35-yard game-winner.

"It's one thing to block a kick and another to have it end up on the other end of the field," McCartney said. "It was the kind of game I thought it would be, a close game that wasn't decided until the fourth quarter. We made mistakes, but you expect young kids to make mistakes. I felt we played hard and could very well have won the game. We didn't win because we didn't convert that field goal."

Texas Christian 22, Ball St. 16

FORT WORTH — Texas Christian, its volatile Triple Shoot attack firing blanks, rode a feisty defense and Leon Clay's clutch passing to a shaky victory over Ball State.

The Cardinals (1-2) threw a terrible scare in the heavily favored Horned Frogs (2-0), scoring a safety and a touchdown in the closing minutes and recovering an on-sides kick at midfield with 1:49 remaining.

TECH: Stinnett, Lynn lead Tech attack

when O'Neil was tripped in mid-handoff on Oregon's first play from scrimmage and the ball squirted to the turf. Kevin Jackson recovered for Tech at the Oregon 22-yard line, and the Red Raiders capitalized five plays later when Anthony Lynn scored on a four-yard sweep.

But that was the only lead for the hosts despite a good many tries.

O'Neil came back with a pair of second-quarter touchdown passes that gave the Ducks a 14-7 lead.

O'Neil's 135 passing yards in the first quarter were more than he had all the previous week.

The 175-pound redshirt freshman hit tight end Jeff Thomason for a 20-yard score, and Ronnie Harris hauled in a 37-yard scoring pass as O'Neil fired for 135 yards in the first quarter.

A 44-yard field goal by Lin Elliott was the only score in the second quarter, closing the lead to 14-10 at the half.

The Raiders dodged a bullet late in the half, however, when Oregon safety Eric Castle picked off a Jamie Gill pass and returned it some 40 yards for an apparent touchdown. But a pass interference penalty negated the play.

"That was a real shame when they took Castle's touchdown return away from him because it was a heck of a play," Brooks touted his player.

But Castle had his revenge in the fourth quarter when he picked a fumble out of midair that set the Ducks up for a game-clinching TD drive and O'Neil's record-tying strike.

First, however, Tech rallied for to narrow the gap and give the home of 36,308 something to cheer about.

Pinned at their own three-yard line early in the third quarter, the Raiders put together a 14-play, 79-yard drive hightlighted by two third-and-long pass completions by Gill, and they came away with a 35-yard field goal that closed the gap to 14-13.

His last scoring pass — set up by Castle's recovery of Byron Morris' fumble — went 16 yards to Anthony Jones with 8:25 to play.

Lynn finished with 95 yards on 22 carries to lead the Tech ground attack. Flanker Anthony Stinnett caught eight passes for 98 yards to lead the Raiders in that category.

Klein's FGs lead Sam Houston

Associated Press

HUNTSVILLE — Mark Klein's five field goals tied a school record in Sam Houston State's 37-6 victory over Texas Southern.

The Bearkats of the Southland Conference, ranked 17th among NCAA I-AA teams, improved to 2-0. Texas Southern of the Southwestern Athletic Conference fell to 2-1.

Klein's kicks of 32, 24, 41, 35 and 22 yards tied the record for most field goals in one game set by Sam Houston's Phil Harmening in 1981 against Howard Payne.

Jeff Cheatham threw a 12-yard touchdown pass to Blake Vincent, and Danny Thomas threw a 2-yard TD pass to David Achilles.

The defense provided two of the Bearkats' scores. Linebacker Brandon Sandefur returned an interception 25 yards for the game's first touchdown, and Willie Lacey tackled TSU quarterback Ronnie Toliver in the end zone for a safety.

Texas Schools

Howard Payne 21
Hardin-Simmons 17

ABILENE — Howard Payne's freshman quarterback Scott Lichner threw three touchdowns as the Yellow Jackets beat Hardin-Simmons.

Lichner hit Royal Kyle with scoring passes of eight and 14 yards in the first quarter and hooked up with Keith Crawford for a 45-yard touchdown in the third period. He completed 22 of 44 passes for 276 yards and no interceptions.

Howard Payne (2-1) stopped a late Cowboys drive at its own 20.

Tom Enloe threw a 9-yard touchdown to John Jones and also scored on a 15-yard run for the 1-1 Cowboys.

McMurry 27, Sul Ross St. 3

ALPINE — The McMurry Indians scored three times in the fourth quarter, capped by linebacker Vernon Simmons' 36-yard interception return, in a trouncing of Sul Ross State.

Shawn Cauble scored on a 2-yard run after Vince Kelley intercepted a pass to open the final period, putting McMurry on top 13-3. Anthony Curtis added a 20-yard touchdown run with 6:04 remaining.

Simmons, who had 19 tackles, capped the scoring with 1:18 left.

McMurry improved to 2-0. Sul Ross fell to 0-2.

Sul Ross quarterbacks Gilbert Leal and Donnie Miller failed to complete a pass. Leal was 0-for-7 with two interceptions and Miller was 0-for-2 with one pickoff.

E. Texas St. 20, Pittsburg St. 13

COMMERCE — East Texas State turned back Pittsburg State three times inside the 6-yard line in the final minute, preserving an upset that ended the Gorillas' regular season winning streak at 56 games.

East Texas State of the Lone Star Conference (2-0) was ranked seventh in the NCAA Division II poll and Pittsburg State of the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association was ranked No. 2 nationally.

With 35 seconds left, Pittsburg had a second-and-1 from the ETSU 3, but Darren Dawson was dropped for a 3-yard loss. After an incomplete pass and a 1-yard run, the Lions took over on downs and ran out the last seconds.

Gary Perry gave East Texas State an early lead on a 3-yard run in the first quarter, but Dawson's 13-yard run tied the game, 7-7.

East Texas led 14-7 at the half on David Chapman's 25-yard TD run, and the Lions padded the lead on Billy Watkins' 46-yard field goal in the third quarter.

Jeff Moreland's 49-yard pass to Ronnie West brought Pittsburg State to within 17-13, but Watkins kicked a 51-yard field goal early in the fourth quarter for the final margin.

The loss was Pitt State's first since Sept. 28, 1985, when the Gorillas lost to Emporia State, 41-9.

Cameron 24, Tarleton St. 7

STEPHENVILLE — Alex Pugh threw for 212 yards and two touchdowns, including a 55-yarder to Michael Ivory just before the half as Cameron whipped Tarleton State.

Ivory broke four tackles and scored as time expired in the second period, giving Cameron a 17-7 lead.

Millsaps 31, Trinity, Texas 7

SAN ANTONIO — Buddy Bass rushed for 141 yards and scored a touchdown as Millsaps College beat Trinity in the Southern Collegiate Athletic Conference opener for both teams.

Millsaps improved to 2-0 overall and Trinity fell to 0-2.

Quarterback Les Lala completed 7 of 11 passes for 76 yards and a touchdown for the Majors.

Trinity quarterback Derek Stokes completed 8 of 19 passes for 120 yards, including a 59-yard touchdown pass to Alan Balch for the Tigers' only score. But Stokes was intercepted three times.

Millsaps had 365 total yards, including 227 rushing and 138 passing. Trinity finished with 214 yards, including 120 in the air and 94 on the ground.

Alcorn St. 38
Alabama A&M 10

IRVING — Alcorn State tailback Harry Brown scored two touchdowns, pacing the Braves over Alabama A&M before a crowd of 7,500 at Texas Stadium.

The Braves of the Southwestern Athletic Conference improved to 2-0. The Bulldogs, an NCAA Division II team in the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, fell to 1-2.

Brown, who had 81 yards on 17 carries, scored on runs of 2 and 1 yards. Quarterback Steve McNair completed 15 of 30 passes for 253 yards, including touchdown passes of 47 yards to Torrance Small and 13 yards to Cedric Tillman.

UTEP 22, NM State 21

LAS CRUCES, N.M. — Texas-El Paso quarterback Mike Perez threw a 39-yard touchdown pass and the Miners capitalized on a fumble in the second half for a 22-21 come-from-behind victory Saturday over New Mexico State.

The Aggies (0-1) at one point in the second quarter had led 21-7. The Miners improved to 2-1 with the non-conference victory. The Miners are from the Western Athletic Conference, the Aggies from the Big West Conference.

Perez's game-winning pass to split end Ansel Littlejohn came after the Aggies missed a 29-yard field goal. The pass capped an 80-yard drive that began at the UTEP 20-yard line.

New Mexico State led at halftime, 21-10, but UTEP closed in on the Aggies late in the third quarter when Miners' linebacker Baron Brown recovered a fumble by NMSU quarterback David Chisum on the Aggies' 18.

Blue Jays blank A's to increase hold on AL East

Associated Press

TORONTO — Tom Candiotti scattered five hits in seven innings and Toronto beat Oakland 6-0 Saturday to increase its AL East lead to 4½ games over second-place Boston.

John Olerud hit a two-run double and rookie Eddie Zosky hit a two-run single in the fourth inning and Joe Carter and Candy Maldonado later homered as Toronto won for the eighth time in 11 games. Boston lost 3-1 to New York earlier in the day.

AL

Candiotti (13-11) lowered his league-leading ERA to 2.26. He struck out five and walked two, and relievers Duane Ward and Mike Timlin each pitched an inning in the team's major League-leading 15th shutout.

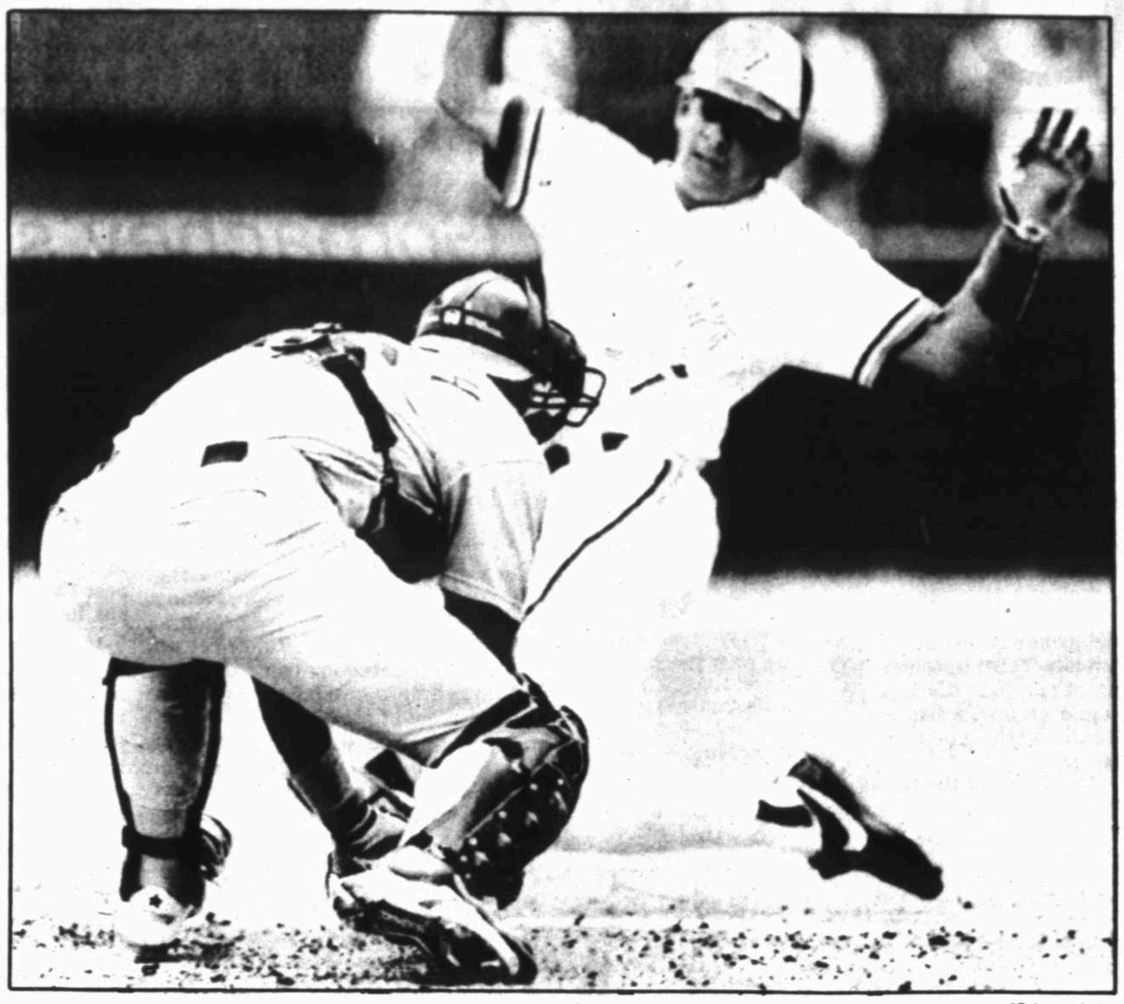

Bob Welch (11-12) gave up five runs on six hits over six innings. He struck out two and walked four.

The Blue Jays broke it open in the fourth. Roberto Alomar led off with a double, Kelly Gruber was hit on the hand with a pitch and Olerud doubled over the head of center fielder Brad Komminsk with one out.

Maldonado followed with a walk and after Mookie Wilson grounded out, Greg Myers was walked intentionally. The move backfired when Zosky ripped a line-single to center for his first two RBIs in the majors.

Maldonado hit his 10th home run of the season in the sixth off Welch. Carter hit his 33rd homer in the seventh off reliever Gene Nelson. Carter's 23rd home run this season at SkyDome tied a team record set last year.

Jose Canseco led off the Oaklad fourth with a drive off the left-field wall, but was thrown out by Maldonado trying to stretch the hit into a double. Manager Tony La Russa ran out to dispute the call, and he and Canseco stayed on the field for a few minutes to argue.

Toronto's Eddie Zosky is tagged out at the plate by Oakland catcher Terry Steinbach, but it did the A's little good as the Blue Jays won, 6-0, extending their lead in the AL East.

Yankees 3, Red Sox 1

NEW YORK — Boston fumbled away a run with a triple error in the second inning and stumbled a bit in the AL East race.

Pitcher Joe Hesketh, first baeman Mo Vaughn and left fielder Mike Greenwell combined to give the Yankees a Little League-type run in the second, and New York added two runs in the third as it stopped an eight-game losing streak.

Sanderson (15-9) increased his career record against Boston to 5-0. He allowed three hits in eight shutout innings, struck out two and walked two as he beat the Red Sox for the third time this year. Greg Cadaret gave up an RBI single to Carlos Quintana in the ninth and Steve Farr got the last out for his 19th save, finishing the five-hitter.

Boston, which had won nine of 10, began the day 3½ games behind first-place Toronto. The Blue Jays played Oakland later Saturday.

Hesketh (10-4) lost for only the second time in nine starts since July 29, a span that includes six wins. He allowed all three runs and nine hits in seven-plus innings.

Tigers 6, Brewers 4

MILWAUKEE — Cecil Fielder hit what was believed to be the first fair ball out of County Stadium for his major-league leading 41st homer as Detroit beat Milwaukee.

Fielder hit Dan Plesac's first pitch of the fourth inning an estimated 520 feet. The ball went over the left-field bleachers and landed in a dumpster between the stadium and the parking lot.

The longest home run in the major league history is believed to be Mickey Mantle's 565-foot drive off Chuck Stobbs in Griffith Stadium on April 16, 1953.

Detroit remained 5½ games behind Toronto, the AL East leader. The Blue Jays beat Oakland 6-0 Saturday.

Scott Aldred (1-3) won for the first time since Sept. 9, 1990, when he beat the Brewers in his major-league debut. He gave up three hits in six innings, including Greg Vaughn's 24th homer in the sixth.

Dan Plesac (1-7) made his sixth start since joining the rotation on Aug. 10th and allowed six hits in eight innings.

Rangers 3, Twins 0

ARLINGTON — Oil Can Boyd allowed five hits in seven shutout innings and Ivan Rodriguez hit a two-run single, leading Texas over division-leading Minnesota.

Boyd (2-5), who entered with a 6.96 ERA, struck out three and walked none. Boyd, acquired July 21 from Montreal, retired his first 10 batters and 13 of his first 14.

Terry Mathews allowed one hit in eighth and Kenny Rogers finished the six-hitter for his fifth save.

Tom Edens (1-2) gave up all three runs and nine hits in five innings.

Texas went ahead in the fourth when Ruben Sierra and Kevin Reimer singled and Mario Diaz walked, loading the bases. Rodriguez then scored them with a hit to shallow right field.

The Rangers got another run in the fifth when Brian Downing singled for his 2,000th career hit and scored on Sierra's groundout.

Angels 3, White Sox 2

ANAHEIM — When Buck Rodgers took over as manager, California was alerted to prepare to play more fundamental baseball.

On Saturday, the Angels experienced the benefits of something as simple as laying down some bunts. The Chicago White Sox misplayed two of them in the 10th inning and lost.

After being shut out for eight innings by Mark Langston, the White Sox tied it in the ninth with two runs off Bryan Harvey.

Indians 6, Orioles 5

BALTIMORE — Mark Lewis singled home Joel Skinner in the 11th inning as Cleveland beat Baltimore.

Cleveland, held to one hit in six previous innings, got consecutive singles from Skinner, Alex Cole and Lewis off Mike Flanagan (2-6), ending a streak of 25⅓ scoreless innings by Orioles relievers.

Eric Bell, Cleveland's third pitcher, threw 1⅔ innings for his first victory since Oct. 4, 1987. Steve Olin got three outs for his 12th save.

Blue Jays acquire Parker

Associated Press

TORONTO — Dave Parker, cut by California last week after losing his stroke at age 40, signed Saturday with the Toronto Blue Jays for the final three weeks of the season.

Parker will not be eligible for the postseason if the Blue Jays make it that far. Toronto took a 3½-game lead in the AL East into Saturday's play.

Parker was batting only .232 with 11 home runs and 56 RBIs in 119 games for the Angels, who got him from Milwaukee in a trade during spring training.

On Wednesday, Blue Jays general manager Pat Gillick said he wasn't interested in Parker. But Gillick changed his mind, and Parker will join the Blue Jays on Sunday for the finale of a three-game series at home against Oakland.

"We decided: 'Why not?'" Gillick said. "He's intimidating and with him sitting on the bench, the manager on the other side may change his pitching strategy."

The 6-foot-5 Parker is a veteran of almost 18 major-league seasons, five league championship series and three World Series.

Asked how Parker will be used, Gillick said: "That's up to (interim manager) Gene (Tenace)."

Parker has 339 career homers and 1,490 RBIs with five different clubs — Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Oakland, Milwaukee and Oakland. The seven-time All-Star hit a pair of homers and drove in three runs for Oakland when the A's beat the Blue Jays in the 1989 AL championship series.

The veteran DH traded words in the media after Toronto third baseman Kelly Gruber said Parker's snail-like home-run trots were blatant examples of showboating. Parker responded to Gruber's comments by saying he'd been using the same trot since Gruber was a youngster, and also wondered aloud whether Gruber was an expert on baseball etiquette and said he wasn't going to shift gears for anyone.

Gruber, the co-author of "Kelly: At Home on Third," quipped recently that he had put together his book of etiquette and hoped Parker would read it.

Gorbachev can 'reform' others

Now that the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics has been dissolved and a new government is being devised to direct future actions of the confederation, the world's attention is appropriately beginning to shift to the Soviet "outposts" in the interest of reforming communism in those locations.

Already Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev has announced his nation will launch talks shortly with Cuban President Fidel Castro about the withdrawal of the 11,000 Soviet military personnel from the island. That very item has been a major goal of the United States government for three decades and will leave Castro shaking in his boots, no doubt.

One item that the Soviet leader should certainly raise with Castro is the Cuban's penchant for stirring up trouble in other locations such as Angola, where for years Soviet money to Cuba has been diverted to Castro's mercenaries fighting legitimate forces. Of course, that activity may be fully ended once Castro is cut off the Soviet gravy train.

When Gorbachev finishes putting Castro's house in order, he should cast his eyes back across the Atlantic Ocean to Africa, where another nation has been struggling with communist-sponsored groups for decades — South Africa. That nation is striving to bring about meaningful change and Gorbachev, having brought about the dissolution of communism in the Soviet Union, seems like just the man to sell the South Africans on the fallacies inherent in the communist dream.

There the struggle continues unabated between the communist-dominated African National Congress led by Nelson Mandela and the Zulu-based Inkatha Freedom Party led by Chief Mangosuthu Gatsha Buthelezi. Although the struggle has been painted as largely tribal in nature, it more recently has been pictured as a struggle between the communist system and the those supporting a free-market economy.

The battle took on more ominous tones recently when it was rumored that Chief Buthelezi has been targeted for assassination by supporters of the ANC. Since Buthelezi has been a thorn in the ANC's side throughout its struggle to dominate South African politics, the assassination rumor is certainly conceivable.

This is no time for South Africa to install a communist government. Gorbachev would do a good service by telling Mandela and the others exactly that.

There's also no question that Buthelezi should be included in any plan for the new South African government since he advocates non-violent change and a free-market economy. That is the future — not repressive, authoritarian rule.

'Cheerleader mom' trial left blight on city

The case of Wanda Holloway is a grotesque embodiment of the misplaced priorities that too many parents and students in this area place upon extracurricular activities such as cheerleading and the football games at which cheerleaders perform. True, the competition among girls to become cheerleaders is intense across the nation, but it was in Texas that a jury found the desire for advantage in such competition to be a plausible motive for solicitation of capital murder.

A mystery left unsolved by the sensational trial is why our society attaches such importance to being a cheerleader in the first place. Aside from the transient popularity during a single school year, yelling at football games and doing somersaults provide little advantage in later life.

The "cheerleader mom trial," ... attracted international attention and blighted the reputation of the city of Channelview. The case also tended to confirm the exaggerated stereotypes people have about the values of Texans.

Communism's collapse affords opportunities

The Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is no more. This unwieldy collection of political entities was dismantled officially when the Congress of People's Deputies voted to dissolve itself. From now on, what is left of the new Soviet Union almost certainly will consist of a confederation of semi-autonomous republics.

Early in October, a new two-house legislature will convene and appoint a commission to draft a new constitution. That document will provide the framework for a nationwide election to allow voters to choose their president. Until then, Gorbachev will preside over a State Council made up of leaders of the participating republics.

After seven decades of communist repression, the road to democracy and independence will not be easy. But the opportunities afforded by the collapse of the Kremlin's centralized control are nonetheless monumental.

Yeltsin foresaw Gorbachev's downfall

WASHINGTON — More than two years ago, Boris Yeltsin told us that he foresaw the day when his rival, Mikhail Gorbachev, would lose power. At that time, Gorbachev had thrown Yeltsin out of the Politburo and had humiliated him by haranguing him in front of his comrades.

Anderson

A bitter Yeltsin told us that Gorbachev would wind up heading a shell of a government, just a confederation of independent Soviet republics. Yelstin predicted that Gorbachev would become a figurehead with no real power.

The hopes of the Soviet Union now lie with these two disparate men who have spent a good portion of their political careers trying to destroy each other. As their separate stars have risen, U.S. officials have been in a quandary about which one to wish upon.

When we first met Yeltsin in 1989, he was still a committed communist who clung to the notion that the Soviet system could be reformed with the party still intact. Gorbachev had been his mentor, but that relationship was fading fast. Gorbachev plucked Yeltsin from party obscurity in 1985 and made him Moscow party boss.

Gorbachev's plan, which Yeltsin went along with briefly, was to use Yeltsin as a stalking horse to clean up the Moscow party organization and agitate for reforms. While Yeltsin stuck his neck out, Gorbachev could sit back and watch him as if he were a laboratory rat in the great experiment of perestroika.

Yeltsin said that period marked a high point in their relationship, but apparently Yeltsin either didn't like the role or never had his part thoroughly explained to him. He was supposed to bide his time until Gorbachev would dust him off for the next battle. But the impetuous Yeltsin actually believed in his rhetoric.

He became privately contemptuous of Gorbachev's timid decisions and half-measures, but still tried to maintain some loyalty to the man who had put him in such an influential position. His principles won out over diplomacy in 1987 when his tongue got him in trouble.

Gorbachev summoned Yeltsin before an audience of his peers for a tongue lashing and then fired him. Yeltsin was supposed to disappear like all good communists who are ousted, but he decided to fight back.

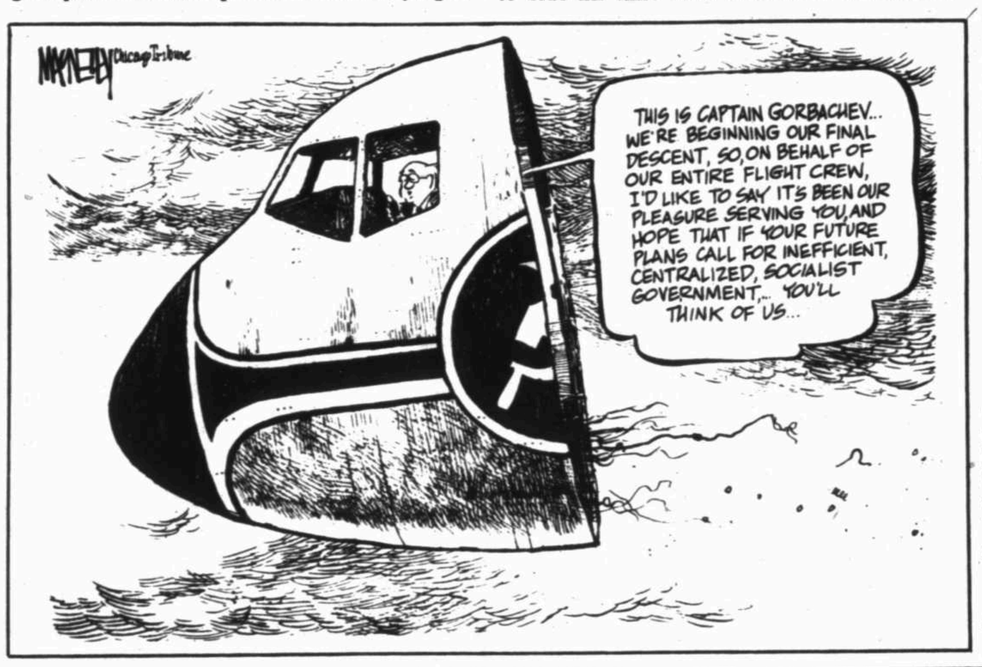

Last year Yeltsin was elected president of the Russian Republic by the republic's parliament. Gorbachev had backed his opponent, but Yeltsin no longer needed the help of his old mentor. He began agitating for sovereignty for Russia, and Gorbachev publicly accused him of wanting to break up the entire Soviet Union.

The Soviet republics didn't need Yeltsin to do that. A coup attempt by hardliners gave them the invitation. Now, with the endorsement of both Yeltsin and Gorbachev, the republics are peeling off and deciding what their future relationship with Mother Russia will be. Gorbachev and Yeltsin appear publicly like two oxen reluctantly yoked together and trying to pull their load in unison.

Our sources say Gorbachev still can't stand Yeltsin, whose blunt manner offends him. Some would say Yeltsin blusters. His sentences sound like ultimatums. Worse for Gorbachev, Yeltsin lives among the people, standing in line with them for food, sharing a small apartment with extended family.

Despite the coup attempt, Yeltsin has had to drag Gorbachev kicking and screaming through each radical reform of the last month. Each time they appear together in smiling unity we are reminded of Yeltsin's declaration to us two years ago that they were never friends. Yeltsin stated it in the strongest way a Russian can: "We never drank together."

Capra portrays upper class as bad guys

The obituary prose being written about the heartwarming Americanism embedded in the films of Frank Capra, who died the other day, neglects to mention that Hollywood would surely have blackballed him as an odious Bolshevik had he tried making his films in the 1950s.

Baker

In Capra's most admired movies, members of the snootier classes were greedy or black-hearted swine. In Capra's America good, upright, innocent Mr. Deeds, Mr. Smith, John Doe and George Bailey were all at the mercy of vile capitalists, lawyers and politicians who infested society.

Such stuff smacked of Daily Worker cartoons and could not have been filmed after the late 1940s when red-hunters discovered the glamorous joys of scourging Bolshevism in Hollywood.

Infected by the era's epidemic cowardice, Hollywood not only stopped making such films; it also connived in the famous blacklist, which aimed to put everybody out of work who held ideas repugnant to red-hunters.

Looking back at the films now praised for their rich American spirit, the wonder is that they didn't get Capra hauled to Washington as a threat to the Republic. He may have escaped this humiliation simply because Americans were not as interested in old movies then as now.

Maybe they simply forgot those old Capra films with their brutal treatment of American businessmen and politicians. In "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," in "Meet John Doe" and in "It's a Wonderful Life," the nastiness of society's pillars is drawn in harsh caricature strokes.

We can imagine these uptown villains cackling as they contemplate robbing or destroying good, clean-living, innocent Gary Cooper and James Stewart. Sweet Gary Cooper, for Heaven's sake, who wants only to give his $20 million to the homeless and play his tuba! Gentle Jimmy Stewart, who wants only to put poor, hard-working neighbors into homes of their own!

Yes, these films are also high in flapdoodle content, but let's stick to Capra's portraits of people who run America: suavely vicious Big Shot Douglass Dumbrille, conspiring to put sweet Deeds in the booby hatch.

Only in Capra's first big success, "It Happened One Night" in 1934, are the ruling classes treated with a humor that grants them enough humanity to be interesting. Claudette Colbert's runaway heiress may be spoiled, but she's never nasty.

Her father, Walter Connolly, may be a piratical tycoon, but he has the folk wisdom to know Claudette deserves better than that rich twit arriving at the altar by autogiro.

The proletarian hero here is Clark Gable, an unsocial, sassy, wise-guy reporter with a touch of the rogue. It was that touch of rogue that always kept Gable interesting.

It made him seem all grown up, which meant that while he might be a decent enough guy you'd better keep an eye on him anyhow. Sometimes it took a punch on the jaw from good Spencer Tracy to put Gable back on the road to righteousness.

Capra didn't work with Gable again. The four films he made with Cooper and Stewart could not have worked with Gable. They are all malarkey and sentimental nonsense. The considerable pleasures they provide are childish pleasures.

One agrees to suspend disbelief and go along with the preposterous idea that in real-life Washington the freshman Senator Jimmy Stewart could single-handedly whip the Senate's mightiest tyrants. Sure it's hogwash, but Stewart can make it fun.

Stewart and Cooper are actors of the boy-man type. They can look wide-eyed and simple-minded, gulp like 9-year-olds at the sight of a reclining nude, and say "Aw, shucks" without seeming ridiculous. These talents were essential to make Capra's Big Four of Sentimentality work. With Gable conveying his subliminal wise-guy wink, their foolishness would have been too obvious.

It's now said that Deeds, Smith & Co. speak of an America where old-time virtues will triumph if people will only live by them. Who can doubt it? The question is whether anybody more substantial than gulping actors will lead us in resuming our devotions to the old virtues.

Thomas' inquisitors look for 'smoking gun'

WASHINGTON — Ted Kennedy sagged forward, his face expressing both feigned and unfeigned puzzlement. Perhaps he was genuinely puzzled about why he was supposed to act puzzled about the things he was asking Clarence Thomas to discuss. But Kennedy plodded through the business of bayoneting the strawmen that he, or more likely his staff, had built for ritual slaying.

Will

The senator from Boston said he was really worried about something Thomas once said about the Agriculture Department not being necessary.

Thomas replied to Kennedy with the patience of one who knows that the sins of his interlocutor do not include the sin of being sincere when asking such silly questions. He said: "Senator, in the statement in question I was philosophizing that in a perfect world many government agencies would not be necessary, but this is not a perfect world..."

Indeed.

Senate staffers, fresh from law schools, their young minds, like their young faces, unmarked by life, are armed with Lexis and Nexis and the arrogance of their employers. They have gathered 30,000 pages of documents about Thomas. They have been searching for a "smoking gun." The results are hypotheses and speculations about natural law and other categories that rarely are the common currency of Senate discourse.

When Thomas said some of his past thoughts have been tentative and speculative, Ralph Neas chortled. Neas is a white man who heads a conglomeration of liberal lobbies and whose vocation is telling blacks what is best for them. He cynically accused Thomas of cynicism, for having a "confirmation conversion." This, too, is ritual: First a nominee is caricatured, then when he disputes the caricature he is denounced for apostasy and opportunism.

Thomas has said some philosophic things that were half-baked; he has occasionally changed his mind. A life of the mind involves changes of mind as a result of reflection. That seems strange to some senators who use consultants and "focus groups" to stock their mental cupboards.

Sen. Herbert Kohl, the Wisconsin Democrat, is distressed that Thomas has said he does not have "a fully developed constitutional philosophy." Kohl sits on the Judiciary Committee cheek-by-jowl with Patrick Leahy, the Vermont Democrat who worries that Thomas is a "hard-line ideologue." This is yet more ritual. When Republican presidents keep their campaign promises to nominate conservative justices, Democratic senators denounce each nominee's vagueness as evasiveness and denounce each nominee's explicitness as "rigid ideology."

Thomas was too timid, too concerned with the ill-informed anxieties of many members of the Judiciary Committee, to forcefully assert the relevance of philosophy to Constitutional reasoning. He should have said: A justice's obligation when construing the Constitution is fidelity to the intentions of the framers who created its text and structure. That requires taking seriously the framers' natural rights philosophy.

Thomas does. Having heard the slovenly, trivializing questions from Thomas' Senate critics, who can believe they do?

Power, jealousy will always be present

I would hate to see Sheriff Gary Painter leave Midland, but I believe he will always be spinning his wheels as long as he is here.

In my opinion no matter how this situation finally is resolved the power drive and jealousy will remain and continually turn up again and again.

With Painter's reputation and all of the publicity this situation has been given he could go anyplace he desired and be welcome.

One can always get a lawyer or two or three anyplace, anytime.

Good luck, Painter.

Shriners provide more than recovery

Everybody loves a success story. Let us tell you ours.

Four years ago our daughter, Leslie, was evaluated and accepted as a patient at the Houston Shrine Hospital. A shy teen, she was painfully, self-conscious of her knee braces and limited mobility.

Several hospital stays, two major knee reconstructions, and lots of physical therapy filled our calendar for almost three years.

The medical success of the knee operations alone is amazing, but the success of the entire body is delightful. During all the hospital visits, the Shriners also provided the means to keep up with school work, provided entertainment during long days of recovery, and even provided an occasional field trip outside the hospital.

A few days ago, Leslie left home for her freshman year at Hardin-Simmons University (Abilene). She is undecided about a major field of study, but she is now a confident, out-going, "people-person" — mostly due to leaving her physical worries behind. The Shriners gave our daughter so much more than two repaired knees!! They gave her wings...and where she will go with them is unlimited!

We no longer need to return to the Houston Shrine Hospital for regular checks, but the Shriners will forever be a part of our heart.

If you, too, have a child with orthopedic needs unmet, see a Shriner. They may be able to help your child at no cost to you ever. For information call 694-2356.

Beautifying project would benefit all

At the Midland City Council meeting on Tuesday, Sept. 10, it was announced by Sharla Hotchkiss, executive director of Keep Midland Beautiful, that the America the Beautiful Foundation awarded a challenge grant of $3,384 to landscape the area around the Confederate Air Force Museum at Midland International Airport. I appeal to the organizations and individuals to join together to undertake this worthwhile project. This will result in something that everyone can enjoy, not only the citizens of the Permian Basin but also the numerous visitors that will arrive to see the Confederate Air Shows and the Heritage Museum.

In our prior Beautification Project undertaken approximately three years agp at Midland International Airport, we were able to raise in excess of $25,000, which enabled us to plant over 200 trees along the boulevards at the airport. With the planting undertaken by the Texas Highway Department along the roadways and entrances to the airport, one can readily see the progress that we have achieved in this area. With the completion of the additional proposed landscaping project, we will have developed an area that all can enjoy.

The proposed formal opening of the Confederate Air Force Installation and Museum is scheduled for Dec. 7, 1991, which will mark the 50th anniversary of "Pearl Harbor Day." It is possible that the current landscaping project be funded by memorial gifts in order to raise the required matching funds. Likewise, with the Dec. 7th opening date, we will be heading toward the holiday season and one could consider donating a "living Christmas tree" to this project for all to enjoy in the years to come.

If we join together on this worthwhile project, we can achieve our goal. Please mail your contributions to Keep Midland Beautiful, which is a nonprofit organization and a tax-deductible entity, at 500 N. Loraine, Suite 191, Midland, Tx. 79701

Response full of unfair innuendos

G.L. McLaughlin, who responded to my letter questioning my 24-year-old son's arrest for an expired motor vehicle inspection sticker obviously skirted the entire issue with his response alleging my son's reckless driving.

His letter was full of innuendos and hearsay pertaining to the alleged behavior. My question was directed to the necessity of arrest for an expired motor vehicle inspection sticker which was the charge, not reckless driving.

I appreciate the concern of the mothers in the neighborhood. However, it appears that because the officer who was in the neighborhood looking for my son was in the neighborhood found something he could charge him with.

As for the contention by the residents of my son's reckless driving, it is hard to comprehend if this was a continuing problem why soneone did not confront my son as to his behavior.

Thanks to McLaughlin for his compliment regarding my creating writing style and for enlightening me about the "whole story." He may be surprised to learn that my son did tell basically the same story regarding the arrest incident. One question remains: if McLaughlin had such overwhelming proof of his "reckless driving" why wasn't he arrested for such?

As for McLaughlin's remark about my son being 24 years old and letting him fend for himself, since his only source of money was the 50-cent check the county issued him for the cash he had on his person at the time of arrest, it might have been a difficult task.

Obviously, McLaughlin is very good at presumptions.

Memories of last year are fading

It's here again — Friday Night Lights of West Texas high school football. Buzz and Jerry are gone. The memories of 1990 are still there but fading fast. It is a season I think most of us would like to forget.

Seems as though the executive committee is staying at home. The sanctions imposed on Odessa Permian could've happened to any of the 4-5A schools! They were tough and they hurt the kids. Hopefully all of this has taught many people a lesson, including those who ruled so harshly against who else but the kids.

Terry Williamson is a great unbiased writer. He tells it like it is and it is so refreshing to read his column. Our great district is intact once again.

Let the kids play football — let the fans enjoy it and support their teams.

For those of you who dislike high school football, stay at home and watch TV, go dancing, take up knitting or take a trip.

Friday Night Lights shall keep on shining. Regardless of those who would be critical, the game will be there, the fans will be there, the teams will take the field and you will hear the cheers and the boos from the stadium. But, you know, I just can't find anything wrong with supporting these great teams that work so hard to succeed.

Whoever the winner is on the scoreboard, everyone comes out a winner to be a part of this great district we have.

So if anyone disapproves of what we do under Friday Night Lights, perhaps that person might benefit from looking up Buzz or Jerry. They disapproved, too. Where did it get them? Where? Where is that? Oh yeah, a place called nowhere. But if you can find them you'll get all the sympathy you need. And happy trails to you.

READERS' VIEWS on: United Rally at Centennial Plaza

United we stand, divided we fall

I was extremely proud to see the tremendous turnout for the Unity Rally at Centennial Plaza last Saturday (Sept. 7). There are a lot of good, decent people in Midland. If you are a businessperson or professional and failed to stand up for what is right, afraid that to do so would hurt your business, shame on you.

I am an American, a Texan, and of Mexican descent. I proudly served our country in Korea with the 24th Infantry Division. My being of Mexican descent does not make me any less American than those who claim "white purity," whatever that means. I choose to stand up against evil-mongers, for I know that not to speak up is to silently agree. We should not be so naive as to believe there are no bigots in this country, and yes, even in Midland. Those bigots do not do business with minorities, but that is their problem, not ours. We choose to serve everyone, without regard to race, color, religion, nationality, sex or familial status.

Those who can't get along with minorities now face a bleak future since the minorities are going to become the majority. Let's all try to get along, accepting our differences. This country can't be defeated by outsiders. Our greatest threat lies within our own borders, with hate-mongers who try to divide us. As has been said before, "United we stand, divided we fall." Let us build on the progress we have made, and show we care for our fellow man. After all, the sun shines for everyone, and in the eyes of our Lord, we are all His children. God bless everyone and yes, even bigots.

Protesters were offensive, rude

I am writing concerning the recent klan rally staged here in Midland which I attended out of curiosity. I must say I was truly offended, but not by the klan (I could barely hear them) but by the so-called peaceful protesters.

These uncouth, rude people shouted offensive profanities throughout the event.

I heard more racist statements from the protesters than I ever heard from the klan. Many people I know who brought their children had to leave because they didn't want their kids exposed to the offensive language.

The protesters waved their middle fingers and shouted the "F" word throughout the event.

I was truly offended and I know the religious community would not support such immoral behavior in public.

These protesters need to leave themselves and their foul mouths at home next time.

I would also like to state that if Midlanders truly wanted to stamp out racism like they claim, they would start with the local racist groups, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) and League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC). These groups, like the klan, represent only certain races which also classifies them as racist organizations.

Anti-rally sparks community healing

I was overwhelmingly impressed by the support of Midlanders attending the anti-klan rally, just as many Anglo friends as black and Hispanics. It seems like it really backfired on the klan, as the great Book says, "What Satan (klan) meant for evil God used for the good!"

As for past differences in our community, it seems that this anti-rally has started a healing in our community that I hope continues.

About not attending the klan rally at the park, I had to choose between cutting my grass or joining my Anglo brothers (which I heard were the majority protesting against the klan). I had to choose cutting my grass; it's been raining in Midland, you see, and I almost lost my dog in the grass.

I am more proud than ever before, not just to be an "American" but a Midlander!

READERS' VIEWS on: Hospital, Midland county tax increases

Worst nightmare may be realized

The Midland Hospital Board has decided to raise our taxes once again. The week this was publicly announced a fellow co-worker received an invoice from Midland Memorial for a recent hospital stay. The bill was approximately $4,000 of which insurance paid 80 percent, leaving a balance of about $800.

At the bottom of the bill a short statement announced "A 50 percent discount is offered for prompt payment of your Same Day Surgery Account!"

Folks, even if the 50 percent discount is only offered on the 20 percent portion that insurance does not pay it is still an overall 10 percent discount. That may be great for the patient, but it is absurd for the Midland County taxpayers. Either the hospital is grossly overcharging those that can pay or our taxes should not have increased and no discounts offered.

Perhaps our worst nightmare has been realized and our hospital is now secretly controlled by the same incompetents that resurface our streets each year! Where will they strike next?

Tired of hearing about city's taxes

I hope all of you Midland residents read this letter. I don't know about you all, but I am getting a little tired of hearing about taxes. If you are like me and depend on your paychecks and live on a tight budget, you probably are, too.

The latest is the Midland County taxes. I read in the Midland Reporter-Telegram on Tuesday that the commissioners are wanting to raise the taxes just under 8 percent, just under the rate that the citizens can vote for. If you haven't noticed, they did the same thing last year and then gave themselves a nice healthy raise. How much of a raise are they giving themselves this time?

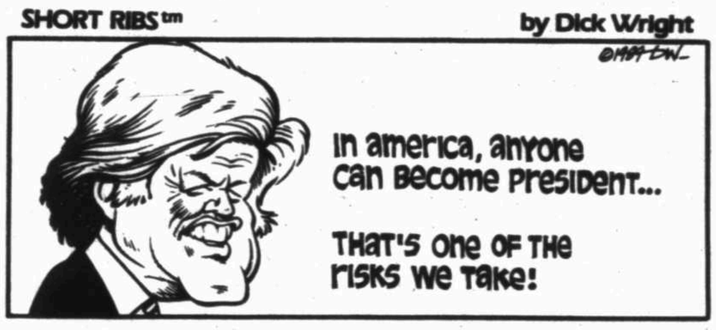

Doesn't it seem kind of funny why they would need to have such a high tax increase when they are still paying the employees the same amount? Instead they are trying to lay off employees. They already laid off two in the sheriff's office and say there are many more to come.

It seems logical that if they are so concerned about raising taxes, then they would lower their pay. Did you know the newspaper said they make an estimated $44,000 a year? This is only a part-time job. They make more than the majority of full-time county employees. What's the deal?

We don't need higher taxes, we need county commissioners who are willing to work part-time for a part-time salary like the city does. People, before long all of our hard-earned money will be going to the people we elect. Something has to be done before this happens! We need to find a way to de-elect those money-hungry commissioners and elect some honest, hard-working people who will work for their salary! Come on people of Midland, let's put our heads together and start working together.

Consequences of peace conference could be nuclear war

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — At stake in the dramatic showdown between President Bush and the pro-Israel lobby in Congress is the potential danger that our sons and daughters, or grandsons and granddaughters, could be slaughtered in a future nuclear or chemical warfare conflict in the Middle East.

That may seem far-fetched, but it could be the long-term consequence of losing a peace settlement in the Middle East. That is the danger of the hardline Israeli government's determination to use Soviet immigrants as a human shield against Palestinians trying to regain the territory they lost on the West Bank, in Gaza and the Golan Heights in the 1967 war, which the Arab nations provoked by preparing for an attack to destroy the Jewish nation.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and his reckless militants, who do not have the overwhelming support of the Israeli people, risk making the same fatal mistake the Western allies made at the end of World War I when they annexed the German Rhineland. That led 20 years later to World War II.

The greatness of President Bush's vision and leadership in foreign policy is evident in his expressed willingness to risk his re-election to avert another Arab-Israeli war and achieve a new order of peace and security in the Middle East.

Partly as a bribe to secure Israel's participation in a Mideast peace conference and partly as an effort to help the thousands of Soviet Jewish immigrants arriving in Israel, Bush promised the Shamir government he would respond favorably this year to Israel's request for $10 billion in loan guarantees to help build housing for the immigrants.

The pro-Israel lobby in Congress moved swiftly to have the House Appropriations Committee approve authorization for the loan guarantee. It did not involve cash, but it would provide U.S. government insurance coverage on defaults. That would enable the Israeli government to borrow money at advantageous rates.

President Bush never set a date for making the loan guarantee available. Shamir wanted it immediately, and American Jewish organizations, which raise big money to help elect members of Congress, launched a powerful crusade within and without the halls of Congress for quickly approving the loan guarantee and granting it immediately to Israel.

Convinced this could cost Arab support for the peace conference scheduled to start next month and block further release of U.S. and other Western hostages in Lebanon, the president suggested a 120-day delay in giving the loan guarantee.

This caused the Israel supporters to launch a furious battle against the president's position. With admirable political courage, Bush served notice he would veto any legislation granting Israel's request before next year.

The president told a White House press conference: "There is too much at stake for domestic politics to take precedence over peace. We must give peace a chance. A 120-day stay is not too much for a president to ask for with so much in the balance.

"I am going to fight for what I believe and it may not be popular politically. But that's not the question – whether it's good 1992 politics. What's important is that we give this (peace) process a chance.

"We're up against very strong and effective, sometimes, groups that go up to the Hill. I heard there were something like a thousand lobbyists working on the other side of the question. The Constitution charges the president with the conduct of the nation's foreign policy. Now and again, there is an attempt by some in Congress to prevent the president from taking steps central to the nation's security."

It was the president at his best. Those of us who want our children and grandchildren spared another, and undoubtedly, more deadly war in the Middle East, should flood members of Congress with phone calls and telegrams supporting the president in his quest for peace and release of all the hostages.

Braves nip Dodgers, 3-2, to reclaim first place

Associated Press

ATLANTA — It took awhile, but neither a downpour nor the Dodgers could stop the Atlanta Braves on Saturday.

Ron Gant's bases-loaded single off the left-field fence with two outs in the 11th inning drove in the winning run that put the Braves back in first place in the NL West with a 3-2 victory over Los Angeles.

The Braves lost a national television audience because of a 1-hour, 19-minute rain delay in the first inning, and were in danger of losing for the second straight day when the Dodgers scored two early runs.

The Braves, however, bounced back to take a one-half game lead over Los Angeles. They won it against Roger McDowell (8-9), the seventh Dodgers pitcher.

Pinch hitter Jerry Willard drew a leadoff walk in the 11th and was replaced by pinch runner Keith Mitchell. Terry Pendleton dumped a bloop double to left, and David Justice was walked intentionally, loading the bases before Gant's hit scored Mitchell with the winner.

It was Atlanta's eighth victory in nine games, and was only its fifth win in 14 meetings with the Dodgers this season. Los Angeles had won four straight against the Braves and still holds a 6-2 edge in Atlanta.

The Dodgers had their three-game winning streak stopped. The team wrap up the series Sunday, and then play three times next weekend at Dodger Stadium.

Jim Clancy (2-4) pitched two scoreless innings for the victory. A crowd of 44,773 saw the 4-hour, 10-minute game.

The Braves tied it 2 in the fifth when they ended a string of 19 1-3 scoreless innings by the Los Angeles bullpen.

The Dodgers took a 2-0 lead in the first inning before the game was delayed by rain. Because of the long delay, CBS-TV shifted its national telecast to the Oakland-Toronto game.

Just as he had in Friday night's series-opening, 5-2 victory by the Dodgers, Brett Butler began the game with a walk. Televison replays showed that pitcher John Smoltz picked off Butler at first, but umpire Steve Rippley called him safe.

Two outs later, Butler went to third on Eddie Murray's single and Kal Daniels followed with a triple past Gant in center.

The Braves cut the lead to 2-1 in the third inning when starter Tim Belcher lost his control. Smoltz drew a leadoff walk, went to second on a single by Otis Nixon and both runners advanced on a wild pitch. After Belcher retired the next two batters, he issued consecutive walks to Justice and Gant, forcing home a run.

Belcher made his start since leaving last Monday's game at Cincinnati with a pulled right groin. Smoltz, who had lost four previous decisions to the Dodgers this year, was lifted for a pinch-hitter in the sixth.

NL Roundup

Astros 7, Reds 3

CINCINNATI — Craig Biggio and Ken Caminiti hit run-scoring singles off Rob Dibble in the eighth inning as Houston rallied to beat Cincinnati.

Houston, which ended a six-game losing streak, took a 4-3 lead with two runs in the eighth off starter Randy Myers and Dibble (3-4), who blew a save for the third time in 32 chances.

Pirates 5, Phillies 3

PHILADELPHIA — John Smiley won his fourth consecutive decision and beat Philadelphia for the fourth time this year.

Smiley (18-8) allowed six hits in 8⅓ innings, struck out five and walked none. He tied Tom Glavine, Scott Erickson and Bill Gullickson for the major league lead in victories.

Smiley is the first Pirates lefthander to win 18 games since John Candelaria was 20-5 in 1977.

Cardinals 2, Mets 1

ST. LOUIS — David Cone and Jeff Innis combined on the Mets' second one-hitter of the week, but St. Louis beat New York on a two-run single by Ray Lankford in the fifth inning.

Omar Olivares (9-5) allowed four hits in eight innings and Lee Smith got three outs for his major league-leading 40th save, allowing a run in the ninth.

Cubs 7, Expos 5

CHICAGO — Hector Villanueva hit a two-run homer in the 10th inning as Chicago rallied from a five-run deficit and beat Montreal.

With the Cubs trailing 5-0, Andre Dawson hit a three-run homer in the sixth — his 27th — Hector Villanueva hit a run-scoring groundout in the eighth and Chico Walker hit an RBI single in the ninth.

Padres 3, Giants 1

SAN FRANCISCO — Andy Benes won his ninth consecutive decision and San Diego beat San Francisco for its ninth victory in 11 games.

Benes (13-10) extended the season's longest winning streak in the NL. He gave up one run on four hits in seven innings, struck out nine and walked one.

Red Devils blank Forsan

Staff Report

FORSAN — The Rankin Red Devils set up a mammoth showdown with No. 1 ranked Garden City next week by blanking Forsan 34-0 here Friday night.

Rankin, No. 9 in the Class A rankings, got 199 yards rushing from Kirk Kennedy, including four touchdowns to defeat Forsan.

Forsan stayed in the game through the half, trailing only 14-0, but Rankin erupted for 20 third quarter points.

Rankin will host Garden City Friday in one of the few meetings of state ranked teams next weekend.

Garden City beat Forsan last week 49-0 as the Class 2A Buffaloes have run up against two of the top 1A powers in the state.

COAL VALLEY, Ill. — Like most younger brothers, David Edwards wants to copy his older sibling.

Edwards rallied from six shots back on a windy Saturday to take the lead with only one round to play in the Hardee's Golf Classic. His brother, Danny, won the tourney in 1983, when it was called the Quad Cities Open.

"It would be nice to put my name on the trophy, too," said Edwards, eyeing Sunday's $180,000 top prize. "It would be fun and extra special to win the same tourney as he did."

Edwards shot a 6-under-par 64 for a 54-hole total of 11-under 199, the same score brother Dan had after three rounds in 1983. Then, first place was worth only $36,000.

Four golfers, including Greg Norman and Paul Azinger, were within two strokes of Edwards, whose round included an eagle on the par-5 No. 6 when he holed a 25-foot chip shot. He also had four birdies and no bogeys to extend his sub-par rounds to seven since last week's Canadian Open.

"To have no bogeys even on a calm day would be an accomplishment but on a windy day like this, I was very pleased," said Edwards, a 35-year-old from Oklahoma. "This game is like hitting a moving target."

He is looking for his first victory since the 1984 Los Angeles Open, although he did finish second twice this year — at the Canadian and at the Colonial in May.

Azinger birdied No. 18 for a par 70 as he slipped into sole possession of second place at 10-under 200.

Norman, the first-day leader, had an up-and-down third round and also finished with a 70.

For a second day, Norman complained strongly about the greens.

"It's frustrating playing in the afternoon when the greens are trampled," he said. "The only good thing about it is that all the leaders will have to play in the afternoon tomorrow."

On Saturday, Lowery shot a 70 and Jones carded a 64.

Leonard Thompson, the leader after two rounds with a stunning 62 Friday, tried to recover from a double-bogey on No. 2, but had to settle for a 3-over 73 and a 202.

Playing in the same twosome, Azinger, 31, kidded the 44-year-old Thompson about his age during the round.

"He told me to take some Geritol, get a good night's sleep and I'd be fine tomorrow," Thompson said.

Also at 202 were Robert Gamez and Jeff Maggert. Gamez had a 68 and Maggert a 67 for the third round.

MHS spikers split a pair

Staff Report

DENVER CITY — The Midland High volleyball team split games in a dual pairing here Saturday.

The Lady Bulldogs beat Denver City in straight sets by a 15-13, 15-7 margin and then lost to powerful Class 4A Lamesa, 15-13, 15-12. Lamesa recently won the title in the Seminole tournament.

MHS is now 5-3 on the season and will host Midland Lee at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in the District 4-5A opener for both teams. Midland High has a new gym floor that will get its first district test Tuesday.

The MHS junior varsity beat Lamesa and lost to Denver City Saturday, both matches went three sets.

Lady Rebs split volleyball match

Staff Report

MONAHANS — The Midland Lee volleyball team split two matches with Alpine and Monahans here Saturday in the final tuneup before the District 4-5A volleyball season begins Tuesday.

Lee defeated Alpine, 15-4, 7-15, 15-13, in the first match and then Monahans gained a little revenge on Lee in the second match, avenging an earlier defeat to Lee. Monahans won that game 4-15, 15-11, 16-14 in an exciting finish.

Lee will travel to Midland High Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. to open the district season.

Lee frosh impress

Staff Report

Lee Freshman rolled to two impressive victories this week with the White squad beating Midland Gold 35-7 Saturday and Maroon taking a 28-0 shutout over Odessa Bowie Thursday in the season openers for all the teams involved.

MCS pulls out dramatic win

Staff Report

IRA — Midland Christian quarterback Andy Awtry hit Aaron Awtry with a four-yard touchdown pass with 50 seconds left here Friday night to pull out a 60-59 Six-Man victory over the Ira Bulldogs.

Ira never led in the game until late in the fourth quarter when Mike Hughes hit Chris Hayes with an 18-yard scoring pass for a 59-54 lead.

The victory keeps Midland Christian unbeaten at 2-0; Ira is 0-2, despite scoring 123 points in two games. Ira lost to Guthrie 71-64 last week.

The Mustangs host Allen Academy at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

Will Cards finally fold this week?

If history means anything, it's time for Phoenix to fade

Associated Press

All the signs point to it.

This should be the week that Tom Tupa and the Phoenix Upstarts — er, Cardinals — learn the NFL facts of life.

Tupa, the Cardinals and that defense that's forced 13 turnovers in two road upsets, head into RFK Stadium Sunday to meet the Redskins, who have scored 78 points in two wins and are the NFC's best team ... this week at least.

One fact to ponder: the Cardinals haven't won in 13 games in Washington going back to 1978 and are 4-26 overall against the Redskins in the last 15 seasons.

Another (strange) fact: The Redskins haven't started 3-0 since 1982, the year they won their first Super Bowl. Not so oddly, the last time the Cardinals were 3-0 was 1974.

And a third fact: Twice in the last six seasons, the Cards have started 2-0 and finished ... well ... 5-11 both times.

And a fourth: Phoenix coach Joe Bugel is returning to the place where he built the Hogs into one of the NFL's top offensive lines. Washington's offensive line coach is Jim Hanifan, who coached the Cardinals from 1980 to 1985.

Most people don't run on the Redskins. They can throw on the Redskins, who will be missing strong safety Alvin Walton.

But Tupa, subbing for the injured Timm Rosenbach, has completed just 43 percent of his passes, although he did average 36 yards a completion in going 6 for 19 in the 26-10 win in Philadelphia last week.

"I think it's a misconception that people think we are afraid to throw the football," Bugel says. "No, we're not afraid to throw the football."

If they can't run, they'll have to.

In other games:

Giants (1-1) at Chicago (2-0)

The Ray Handley era is six games old (counting exhibitions) and a pattern has emerged — win one, lose one; beat the good teams (Buffalo and San Francisco); lose to the lesser ones (Patriots, Browns and Rams).

This is a "win" week and the Bears are an "up" team, so draw your conclusion.

What may also help is that Rodney Hampton, last seen when he broke his leg in last season's 31-3 playoff victory over Chicago in the Meadowlands, is finally ready to play after missing the first two games with a shoulder problem. Hampton and Dave Meggett in the backfield at the same time are tough to key on.

Like the Giants, the Bears have had their problems on offense — Neal Anderson, their workhorse, gained just 35 yards on 17 carries in the one-point win in Tampa last week.

This week they get back guard Mark Bortz and fullback Brad Muster.

"We need all our horses," says Mike Ditka. "These are the world champions we're playing, not Hoboken High."

Maybe Steve Young isn't Joe Montana, but the Vikings have seen enough of him — he ran 49 yards with 1:58 left in 1988 to beat them.

He could do it again — Keith Millard, the key to the Minnesota defensive line is out indefinitely, maybe for the season, with continuing knee trouble.

The Vikings are coming off their first outdoor win in 19 games and Herschel Walker's first 100-yard game since his debut in Minnesota two years ago. After Jerry Rice complained Young didn't throw to him in the opening week loss to the Giants, he caught nine passes for 150 yards in the 34-14 win over San Diego.

The Saints, 2-0 for the first time in their 25-year history, are having their most trouble with fans, who hadn't experienced a winning season until Jim Mora showed up in 1987. Their complaint — the Saints blew a 17-point lead before beating Seattle and almost did it again in Kansas City last week.

John Robinson is using the psychological approach so far this year. After the Rams lost to the Cards, turning the ball over seven times, he said "we're not that bad." After they upset the Giants last week, he announced "we caught them on a down week."

Miami (1-1) at Detroit (1-1)

This could make Shula just the second coach in NFL history to win 300 games and would put him just 25 behind George Halas, the all-time leader.

Both teams came to life last week after opening week losses and in similar fashion — with improved and unexpected defense.

Detroit's comeback was more dramatic, if only because it was so embarrassed in a 45-0 nationally televised loss in Washington. The Lions held the Packers to 253 yards in their victory even though Barry Sanders (18 carries for 42 yards) was just so-so after missing the opener.

The Dolphins continue to get surprising rushing yardage from Mark Higgs, who had 111 yards in the 17-6 win over the Colts and is second in the league in rushing after two weeks.

Buffalo (2-0) at Jets (1-1)

Could this be the beginning of the end for Scott Norwood? The Bills, who have hardly had much wrong this year, have signed Brad Daluiso to kick off because Norwood, who has missed two of three field goal attempts this season, has been too short.

That's important for the Bills, because they kick off a lot. So far in two games, they've scored 87 points and 12 touchdowns, both a league high. But they've also allowed 65 points and are last in the NFL against the rush.

This is the battle of the Thomases — Thurman and Blair. Call Blair the doubtful Thomas — he left the Jets' loss to Seattle with back spasms last week and probably won't play.

Jeff Kemp (see McMahon, above) showed against the Jets last week what an experienced backup can do. Unlike John Elway, however, he's not calling his own plays.

This game figures to be close — like the series. Since 1981, when the expansion Seahawks first became respectable, it's 12-11 Denver and most of the games have been close. The two teams split last year — Denver winning in overtime at home; the Seahawks winning by five in Seattle.

Indianapolis (0-2) at Raiders (1-1)

Eric Dickerson returns to Los Angeles? He's already been there — or at least to Anaheim — since he was traded to the Colts.

And does he want to come? The Indianapolis offensive line isn't exactly awesome, and the Raiders' defensive line isn't exactly fun to play against, particularly in the Coliseum, where Los Angeles is 14-2 since Art Shell took over after the fourth game of the 1989 season.

New England (1-1) at Pittsburgh (1-1)

The Patriots came back to reality last week after that opening win in Indianapolis — shut out by Cleveland, no less. In fact, the Colts (three times) remain the only team New England has beaten in its last 20 regular-season games.

Did Pittsburgh come back to reality?.

A defense that ranked first in yards allowed last year gave up 52 points and 537 yards to the Buffalo Scoring Machine last week.

Cincinnati (0-2) at Cleveland (1-1)

Bill Belichick, just 298 wins behind Shula after beating the Patriots 20-0, goes for No. 2 against Sam Wyche, who has decided not to change anything, even though his Bengals have scored just 21 points and allowed 77.

But Boomer Esiason things differently.

"Whatever the mistakes may be, we're all taking turns," he says. "There's not a player in this locker room that doesn't deserve a good chewing out."

The Majik Man may be back but the Majik isn't — the Packers have scored just 17 points in losses to the Eagles and Lions.

Vinny Testaverde should be back for the Bucs, but a quarterback controversy could be brewing. After Testaverde was sacked six times by the Bears last week, Chandler almost rallied the Bucs, throwing a 15-yard TD pass to Bruce Hill.

Who gets fired if the Chargers lose this one? The equipment manager?

This is a meeting of two teams with talent ... and a knack for losing. Look for Jerry Glanville to use an 11-man blitz against the inexperienced John Friesz in this one — Glanville has the ability to do just that.

On the other hand, there's little reason for Friesz to throw — Christian Okoye had 143 yards and Herschel Walker 125 against the Chargers, so why not Marion Butts and Rod Bernstine?

Tarpley may be in Dallas uniform by training camp

Associated Press

DALLAS — Roy Tarpley, suspended by the Dallas Mavericks, may be cleared to rejoin the team by the start of training camp, the director of the NBA's anti-drug and alcohol program said.

Dr. David Lewis said he is not aware of any information that would prevent him from lifting Tarpley's suspension, imposed following the forward's March 30 arrest on a charge of driving while intoxicated.

A Dallas County jury on Sept. 4 found Tarpley not guilty of the DWI charge.

But Tarpley's indefinite suspension without pay remained in place for failure to adhere to the conditions of his NBA-mandated after-care program. Tarpley admitted to drinking three beers prior to his arrest.

Lewis told The Dallas Morning News on Friday that he is reviewing whether Tarpley should be cleared to report to camp Oct. 4. Lewis said he would talk to Tarpley and Mavericks officials before making his decision.

"I can't say anything, because I need to evaluate what's going on," Lewis said from Palm Desert, Calif., where he was attending the NBA meetings.

It is the second suspension for Tarpley, a two-time offender of the NBA's anti-drug program. After a DWI arrest in November 1989, Tarpley was suspended without pay for 33 games, costing him $225,365.

Lewis, director of ASAP, spoke briefly Friday with Mavericks general manager Norm Sonju and vice president Rick Sund.

"David was very encouraging," Sonju said.

Sometimes, it's not quite so easy being Troy

Associated Press

IRVING — So, you say you'd like to be Troy Aikman, huh?

If you were quarterback Troy Aikman, you'd take the field every week with the fate of the Dallas Cowboys perched upon your shoulders, one of which bears a long, pink scar that is evidence of the pounding your body takes.

You wouldn't trust the horde of backslappers who want your friendship, or the volume of businessmen who want your millions, or the piles of women who dream that you'll catch them when they throw themselves at you.

You still wish you were Troy Aikman?

Sure you do.

Aikman nods hello, and the security guard allows him into his Irving neighborhood. Aikman is driving a huge, late-model car, a leather-seated, gas-swallowing luxury tug. He is as out of place in this driver's seat as some 24-year-old borrowing mom's car. Which, in a way, is what he is. Aikman has taken Charlyn Aikman's auto and plans to trade it for a 1991 version of the same car. A surprise gift for Mom. (His parents are divorced and Dad, Ken Aikman, lives in California.)

But as Troy Aikman has always been able to do — in the locker room, in his sometimes strained relationship with coach Jimmy Johnson, in life generally — he does what he can to make the ill-fitting fit.

"It's mostly my upbringing, though part of it is a conscious decision," said Aikman of his personal style. "I was brought up not to brag. I've always disliked people who do. I kept quiet my first two years for those reasons. Also, I hate changes. Here I moved to Dallas, with new people, there were the perceptions that go with my contract, all that stuff."

"Now, I'm going to be myself."

When he was 12, Aikman moved from Cerritos, Calif., to little Henryetta, Okla., a town of 5,000 that Rand-McNally almost skipped. He loves that place, just like he loves Los Angeles, where he played most of his college football at UCLA, and just like he loves Dallas, where he was knighted and packaged as public property as soon as he was made the No. 1 overall pick in the 1989 draft.

Henryetta now has an "Aikman Avenue" and "Home of Troy Aikman" signs on the city limits and will soon have the "Troy Aikman Athletic Complex." (He doesn't want you to know he's helping upgrade the high school facility and is fighting against the name because he thinks it looks like he's "flaunting the money.")

Had Ken Aikman not moved the family from California, Troy would not have played high school football. He would have stuck with baseball, as his California pals did. He would have used his 92 mile-per-hour fastball to give him a career.

But eighth-grade Henryetta boys went out for football. Going into the 10th grade, he contemplated dumping football to concentrate on baseball. He couldn't do it. He couldn't let down his father. As a senior, he led them to a 6-4 mark, only their fourth winning season in 25 years.

Aikman was good enough to earn a football scholarship from the University of Oklahoma. And he was a good enough catcher-/shortstop that, the night before the baseball draft, the New York Mets told him he'd be taken by the third round, as long as his signing-bonus request was reasonable. But he had made a commitment to football. He blurted out a signing-bonus figure — $200,000 — he hoped would be too outlandish for the Mets. It was.

Aikman is cool. But he is not hip.

"He's got everything going for him," said agent and friend Leigh Steinberg. "Rugged, handsome features, blue-eyed, blond, well-built, man other man like because he's a man's man, but a man who women find attractive, too. And on top of it all, he got sincerity. He treats people well."

Aikman's priorities are pretty straight: He has his religious beliefs, but a beer or two, and a dip of tobacco or two, prove he has his vices. He passed on a trip to Super Bowl XXV because buddy Tom Whiteknight needed him to be in his wedding that weekend.

"Troy personifies all the good things you want a person to be," said Whiteknight, a former backup guard at UCLA. "He's got a ton of money. He's got everything going for him. But he knows he's held up as an example, and he's never acted too big for his britches."

Whiteknight and Doug Kline, an ex-Bruins linebacker, are Aikman's two best friends from UCLA, where Aikman transferred after a year at OU. Both now live in Dallas and see or talk to Aikman daily. Still, even they aren't allowed full access into his private thoughts.

AP Laserphoto

He may be a multi-millionaire 24 year old, but Troy's still just a normal guy. Sort of.

"I'm not an open person," Aikman said. "Something's really got to be troubling me to have heart to heart talks with anybody. Except maybe my mom. She doesn't judge me, so I can tell her some things I'm not especially proud of."

Aikman's gang hangs out at the same old places, Kline said, where the regulars treat the quarterback like one of them. He avoids new places, where new people think they have the right to tell him how to live his life.

"I have nothing to be ashamed of," Aikman said. "There is nothing wrong with my lifestyle. I know what I do doesn't hurt the team. The hardest thing about my job is not being able to leave it behind for a moment."

Teammate Daryl Johnston said Aikman can't visit most Dallas restaurants without an autograph-/photo session breaking out.

"You might want to be Troy for a day, to see what all that attention is like," Johnston said. "But forever? No thanks."

In Dallas, Aikman is also Most Eligible. Want two scoops?

First, Aikman has a tough time finding a girlfriend.

"The problem is I can't walk in blindly and assume they like me for me," Aikman said. "And I'm not into making new friends."

Second, Aikman does now have a girlfriend, an ex-Dallas Cowboys Cheerleader.

The few conflicts Aikman has experienced have been created, he said, not by personality.

Former Cowboys quarterback Steve Walsh, traded to New Orleans last year after a season and a half of competing with Aikman won't say he doesn't like his ex-teammate. Their problems, both said, were the product of two 22-year-old rookies tossed into a dog-fight for playing time.

"When you're in that kind of battle," Walsh said, "it's tough to be hanging around together. Plus, you had other guys on the team taking sides. But Troy's a good guy."

And there is the Johnson/Aikman pairing, a sometimes volatile mix. Their strong wills and their inexperience at the pro level may have caused early uneasiness. The presence of Walsh certainly caused some.

"The problems all began, really, when they brought they brought Steve in," Aikman said. "There probably would've been tension no matter what with any two young quarterbacks, but here one of them had won a national championship for Jimmy at Miami. Jimmy didn't want to show favoritism — even though he had to have feelings for Steve — so he kept his distance from us. That caused problems for me.

"I never needed strokes. I just needed more communication."

Aikman and Johnson have wisely kept their disagreements private. And Johnson said he likes Aikman as a person as much as he likes Aikman as an athlete, which is considerably. Johnson lauded Aikman as a person and as a quarterback who can be football's best.

"Both those things," Johnson said, "make for a pretty good bottom line."

While he has been credited with too much power as a Cowboy — he labels as "unfair and ridiculous" the suggestions that he helped fire former offensive coordinator David Shula and that he has any voice in the acquisition of offensive talent — he is, along with Johnson, the hub of this team.

If you are a receiver and want to have success in Dallas, Aikman had better feel comfortable throwing to you. And even if he doesn't recognize his shot-calling power, the people who run this team know how pivotal Aikman is.

That's one reason why today, Norv Turner, an earthy, spotlight-shunning, C&W-lovin' ex-quarterback, is the offensive coordinator.

Aikman is not bothered by the demands placed on him while performing as a quarterback. It's performing as a celebrity, that "leading man" business, that gives him the shakes.

In his back yard Aikman will show you an example of how his high-profile career and his low-profile personality can conflict.

He has a lovely swimming pool back there. Some of the pool's tiles are emblazoned with big blue Cowboy stars, with Aikman's jersey number 8 in the middle of the stars.

"It makes me look egotistical," Aikman said. "Somebody talked me into it. It's embarrassing."

You still wish you could be Troy Aikman?

career, including three years at Florida.

"I think Emmitt will bounce back," coach Jimmy Johnson said.

Washington coach Joe Gibbs said he didn't see how Smith could play better.

"He has driven us crazy," Gibbs said.

Philadelphia coach Rich Kotite said the Eagles will have to key on Smith.

"He is an extremely effective running back," Kotite said. "He's a real hard runner. We have to stop him to stop their attack."

Dallas is 4-1 in the five times that Smith has rushed for over 100 yards.

Tyson forced to confront life in the real world

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — In a small rectangle, slightly larger than a boxing ring, Mike Tyson's future hangs in the balance.

There, on the floor of Marion Superior Court No. 4, Tyson was indicted and arraigned last week on charges he raped an 18-year-old Miss Black America beauty pageant contestant.

And there, come Jan. 27, the former heavyweight champion is scheduled to go on trial to determine if he will remain a free man or spend up to 63 years locked up in an Indiana prison.

It's the fight for his life in a quiet courtroom hundreds of miles from the rowdy casinos and boxing venues of Las Vegas and Atlantic City. And it will determine if Tyson will ever again fight for his livelihood.

"This man's life is at stake in this case," said promoter Don King, who accompanied Tyson to Indianapolis when his innocent plea was entered Wednesday. "It's not like a prize fight, or winning a fight or losing a fight."

It's real life, not the carnival atmosphere of the boxing world, not the realm where Tyson can determine the outcome with his own hands. His fate is not in his hands now; it will be in the hands of a 12-member jury.

Asked last week if he was shocked by the rush of events, a soft-spoken and subdued Tyson said: "Absolutely."

"I'm extremely worried about this situation, but I know I'm innocent," said Tyson, 25.

Tyson and King said they were confident the former heavyweight champion will be vindicated. They left Indiana for Las Vegas, where Tyson plans to fight reigning champion Evander Holyfield for the heavyweight title on Nov. 8. Tyson is expected to earn at least $15 million for the bout.

"I'm just so distorted by the whole situation being down here" in Indianapolis, said Tyson. "I just want to go back and train."

Boxing officials said the fight will go on. So will the media accounts about Tyson's background, his problems with women, the lawsuits pending against him.

Mike Tyson won't be able to get away from the limelight even if he wants to, his own attorneys admit.

"In 1991, there's probably only one other case that has attracted this kind of attention, and that is the William Kennedy Smith rape case," Washington, D.C., attorney F. Lane Heard III said on Friday. "It's almost an absolute certainty this kind of publicity will continue.

"And it will be made worse by the fact there is a heavyweight title fight November 8th," said Heard, who requested and received a judicial order barring attorneys and others involved in the case from making public statements that could prejudice potential jurors at Tyson's trial.

Even with that ban, procedural motions and pretrial maneuvering will draw attention, lawyers predict. The media — whose representatives descended on the courthouse last week — will continue to trail Tyson and track the story.

The trial could easily be postponed, as such cases often are, if either side needs more time to prepare its evidence or arguments, attorneys believe.

'This man's life is at stake ... it's not like a prize fight or like winning a fight or losing a fight.'

— Don King

When the case comes before a jury, prosecutors predict Tyson can receive a fair trial.

"I don't see any indication of prejudice," said David Dreyer, a deputy prosecutor expected to be on chief Prosecutor Jeffrey Modisett's trial team.

The prosecution, Modisett said, will attempt to prove Tyson came to Indianapolis for Indiana Black Expo and the beauty pageant with the specific intent of trying to meet pageant contestants.

He met the alleged victim, a college student from the East Coast, and convinced her to come to his room for what she believed would be a platonic meeting, Modisett said.

But the prosecutor said a grand jury concluded that when the woman refused Tyson's advances, he used or threatened force to coerce her into having intercourse and performing other sex acts.

"Certainly, it was not her intent to have sex with Mr. Tyson when she met up with him" at his Indianapolis hotel room, said Modisett.

Tyson claims she consented. The woman "knows what happened in that room, I know what happened and I know I'm innocent," he said.

But her attorney said the grand jury, which heard from the woman, Tyson and 26 other witnesses, obviously reached a different conclusion.

"The victim and Mr. Tyson both testified before the grand jury, and Mr. Tyson was indicted. Those are the facts, and they speak for themselves," said David R. Hennessy, one of the woman's attorneys.

Hennessy predicted Tyson's entourage of promoters and handlers would begin a campaign to smear the woman and question her credibility. Less than two days later, King told reporters they should ask the woman: "What were you doing in the man's room at two o'clock in the morning?"

"She must steel herself and be strong," said Hennessy. "But I'm satisfied the victim's history can withstand any assault from Mr. Tyson."

Judge Patricia J. Gifford, who issued a protective order to keep Tyson and his representatives away from the woman, also urged the boxer's attorneys to keep him quiet if they could.

She said she "was somewhat appalled" to hear Tyson talking about the case at a news conference only hours after pleading innocent.

Heard said he would urge Tyson to be quiet, but the attorney also said it's Tyson's right to proclaim his innocence.

King suggested that now that Tyson has done that, he will go back to work and quietly await the trial.

"We want the world to know he's innocent," King said. "Now we come to Marion County to be judged by our peers with the facts — not by what one was speculated or conjured up."

Massey still atop du Maurier board

Associated Press

COQUITLAM, British Columbia — Debbie Massey continues to flirt with greatness in the last major women's pro golf championship of the year. And she keeps tempting disaster on the final hole of the day.

Massey bogeyed the last hole for the second straight round Saturday when she desperately clung to a 1-shot lead after 54 holes of the du Maurier Ltd. Classic.

Massey shot an even-par 72 for 209 to keep her ahead of fast-charging Pamela Wright on the 6,421-yard Vancouver Golf Club layout.

Wright fired her second straight 3-under 69 for 210 with one round remaining in the hunt for the first prize of $105,000 in the 72-hole, $700,000 event.

"I'll need to shoot a better round tomorrow," Massey said. "You have to knuckle down in a major and play some of the best golf of your life."

Massey, 40, of Hilton Head, S.C., two-putted from 10 feet on the 54th hole for the bogey that kept her from getting comfortable with her lead.

Wright, from Scotland, had a bogey-free round and dropped a 12-foot birdie putt on the last hole to close the gap on Massey.

"It was kind of a boring round, but effective," said Wright, 27. "I'm being patient and not going for the stupid shot."

Two shots back of the leader at 211 are three players, including hot-shooting Nancy Scranton, who fired a course-record, 8-under 64.

Scranton was tied with Rosie Jones and Trish Johnson. Jones also had a solid 69 to move into contention, while Johnson slipped to 73.

Dottie Mochrie fell back when she bogeyed the last three holes for a 74 and sixth place at 212.

Roberts, Hagner earn wins at YMCA triathlon

Staff Report

Spencer Roberts and Karen Hagner took top honors Saturday in the eighth annual YMCA Hoffman Memorial Tall City Triathlon.

Roberts, the overall winner, posted a time of 56 minutes and 56 seconds in the three stage swimming, cycling and running competition. Hagner was the overall women's winner with a time of 1:06.08.

The overall team championship went to Ted Carson, Mike Garza and Bryan Vinson with a combined 53:31. Exxon won the corporate team championship with the 59:12 posted by Mike Moylett, Kevin Ferdinand and Richard Goddard.

Program helps young men end drug abuse

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Ryan (not his real name) is a well-groomed polite 17-year-old. His dark hair is stylishly combed with every hair in place. His clothes are pressed with crisp creases and the the colors coordinate. He is quick to smile and listens attentively to questions before responding in a soft voice. By all appearances he is well adjusted and mature, the kind of son every parent hopes for.

But just six months ago Ryan was "out of control and living on the edge."

"I was always getting into a lot of trouble. Drugs and drinking were involved. My friends were all into drugs. I dropped out of school and couldn't hold a job because of getting high," he said.

Ryan said that aside from the substance abuse and its resulting problems, the core issue wreaking havoc with his life was anger.

"Anger and stress, and not being able to cope with it, caused me to drink," he said.

In the span of five months, however, Ryan said he turned his life around at Country Mesa, the residential treatment program for adolescent males.

Country Mesa consists of a two-story, four bedroom brick house and metal building south of Midland on Cotton Flat Road.

"It's peaceful out here, not hectic with constant noise like the city," said program coordinator Don Boren, as he waved his hand at the expanse of land the ranch encompasses, about 11 acres.

The program is operated by Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health and Mental Retardation. It offers a homelike atmosphere for male adolescents age 13-17, and has been in operation for about a year and a half.

Boren said being secluded from the "real world" provides the young men with a setting for self-contemplation.

"When they work the program, they get in touch with themselves," he said.

While Boren spoke, the youths scampered off in search of a harness for "Numpsey," the resident horse, who spends much of the day grazing alone in a fenced pasture.

"I found a snake!" a boy cries, and all else is forgotten as the boys and a counselor head off to coax a desert snake away from the stored harness.

Boren allowed that country living has "it's surprises."

The program coordinator said spending time outdoors or riding the horse are just some of the recreational activities offered at the facility.

The metal building adjacent to the living quarters, houses a classroom, offices and a recreation room complete with ping pong, pool and foosball tables, weights and athletic equipment.

The young men are allowed various activities based on levels of recovery obtained in the program.

"There are three levels," Boren said. "With higher levels there are more privileges such as more phone time and visitations. The whole system is built around the boys. They work the program. They help us to design their treatment, and they become responsible and earn their rewards."

Fire brands still prove ownership in Texas

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

A cowman's brand is his signature.

It is as important and legal as a rancher's signature on a bill of sale, bank check and other documents in denoting ownership.

The brand, a burned-in-the-hide signature for helping cattlemen track down stolen or lost cattle, is a deterrent to rustlers.

"Whether cattle are stolen or lost," said Don Braly, Midland-based field inspector for the Texas & Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association (TSCRA), "the only way in the world they are going to get those cattle back is to have them branded, so they can identify them."

Texas law requires ranchers to register or re-register their brands and other marks with the county clerk every 10 years.

Midland County Clerk Rosenelle Cherry is recording new and renewed brands for six months ending in February.

And it doesn't matter when an owner previously registered his brand, Mrs. Cherry noted. The brand must be re-registered within that six-month time frame.

Brands not re-registered will be forfeited and its registration "void." An old brand legally may be claimed as another's new brand for the $5 registration fee.

Without the "fire brand" on a head of livestock, noted Braly, "it's almost impossible to positively identify ... any type of livestock."

Cattle may be branded just about anywhere, but in order to be a legal signature, the "fire brand" must be consistently located and be registered with the clerk.

Habitat project opens housing opportunities

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Habitat for Humanity International has more than 550 affiliated groups in the United States and more than 100 in 30 other countries.

Buying a house can be virtually impossible for a family of four when the husband and wife each earn only $4.50 an hour. They are not usually in a position to qualify for a home loan or able to save up for a down payment on a house — much less afford monthly payments.

Nevertheless, Midlanders who fall into that category may one day have a home to call their own thanks to Habitat for Humanity.

"The unofficial motto is 'No more shacks.' We can't house the entire world but we can help our community," said Joan Love, acting chairperson for the steering committee of the newly formed organization in Midland.

Habitat for Humanity International has more than 550 affiliated groups in the United States and more than 100 in 30 other countries. The program was founded in 1976 by Linda and Millard Fuller in Americus, Ga.

Each group works within its own community with local volunteers and private donations to make possible affordable housing.

"The beauty of the Habitat program is not only does it build houses but it builds community relations," said Jon Stasney, rector of St. Nicholas Episcopal Church, and a Habitat board member.

But the program is not simply a handout, Ms. Love said.

"We are not going to give these people a house. They have to put out some sweat equity," Ms. Love said.

"Sweat equity" means that homeowners-to-be must put 500 hours of work into their home and an additional 50 hours into another Habitat for Humanity home.

Habitat for Humanity homes are either built from ground up or are renovated houses, according to Don Hellinghausen, who spearheaded the Midland program.

"They are simple, decent homes, clean and safe," said Hellinghausen, who heard about the program in Abilene and got the ball rolling in Midland this spring.

"We sell them the house but we do not charge them any interest," Hellinghausen said. "When you eliminate the interest you eliminate two-thirds of a 30-year mortgage," he added.

And without that reasonable home cost, some Midlanders may never have a decent place to live.

Almost 5,000 Midland families live in sub-standard housing according to a study: Midland Introspective 1988, Hellinghausen said.

To Ms. Love, the need for affordable housing locally is more than numbers.

"This is not a statistic to me. There are people I know" who live in sub-standard housing — which are basically shacks, she said.

Owning a home through Habitat for Humanity also gives homeowners a sense of pride and accomplishment, Ms. Love said.

"If someone gives you something you will appreciate it but it will not have the same value as if you worked for it," Ms. Love said.

GARY OTT

People are experts on subjects they don't understand

How we got started on the topic remains a mystery to me.

It just sort of evolved. You know how it is. First you're discussing one thing, then another and before you know it you find yourself fully engaged in a conversation in which no one present has any idea what they're talking about.

Ott

But you can't let that stop you. So you keep talking. Opinions fly. Voices rise. And, if you're not careful, tempers can flare.

In this particular case, the topic of discussion was, "Are all famous people rude and arrogant, or are some of them actually nice, down-to-earth kind of folks?"

There were three of us doing the debating.

We each had met a rather wide assortment of well-known personalities. When you put all the names together, in fact, it was quite an impressive list, indeed. Try these names on for size. George Bush, Jesse Jackson, Joe Namath, Barbara Jordan, Stephen King, Willie Nelson, Waylon Jennings, Mickey Mantle, James Garner, Jane Fonda and Loretta Lynn.

There were a handful of others, but those were the biggies. This is not meant to sound boastful, but rather to make the point that we're talking about legitimate celebrities.

After about 45 minutes of discussion it was decided that James Garner was the nicest one, while Jane Fonda was probably the snootiest, though it should be noted that only one person had met her and his political views tend to waver somewhere to the right of Attila the Hun. So poor Jane started at a significant disadvantage.

If you were going to talk in broad generalities you could make the following statements:

Political figures have a distracted appearance while talking to the average Joe Blow. You get the distinct impression that their minds are somewhere else. They do not freely offer their undivided attention. Their eyes dart about the room, as if searching for someone more important with whom to visit.

Hollywood stars, on the other, reek of arrogance and inflated self-worth. At any moment you get the feeling one of them might pucker out his lower lip and start pouting. James Garner, who had just completed 18 holes of golf and was in a rather festive mood, was the exception.

Musicians seem spaced out. I suppose that's the artist in them. They are expected to be "mysterious."

Sports heroes, bless their hearts, talk in cliches. Blame it on their coaches.

Are we guilty of stereotyping here? Yes, of course. Are there exceptions? Certainly. Many, in fact.

But there's a lot of truth in what we're saying, too. Famous people are pretty much like everyone else. Some are pleasant, others aren't. Some make you feel right at home, others don't. Some can just naturally put you at ease, others can't. But all have their little hidden quirks.

People are people. That's the bottom line.

And in a way that realization can prove terribly disappointing.

When we meet someone famous, we automatically desire them to be special. We, through unrealistic expectations, place them on a pedestal. We want them to be more than they are.

Yeah, that's what we want. Someone special, someone who will overwhelm us, someone who can walk into a room and light up the place. But more times than not, it doesn't turn out that way. They're just regular human beings, nothing more, nothing less. Thus, the disappointment.

I've often wondered why we expect so much of the rich and famous. Why, for example, do we ask ballplayers their opinion on South African politics? Or, is there any special reason we care what a gifted actor thinks about the 1992 presidential race?

Just because that thespian has a great British accent and can bring the words of William Shakespeare to life, it doesn't necessarily follow that he knows doodley-squat about who is best-qualified to run this country.

Still, we seek out his opinion.

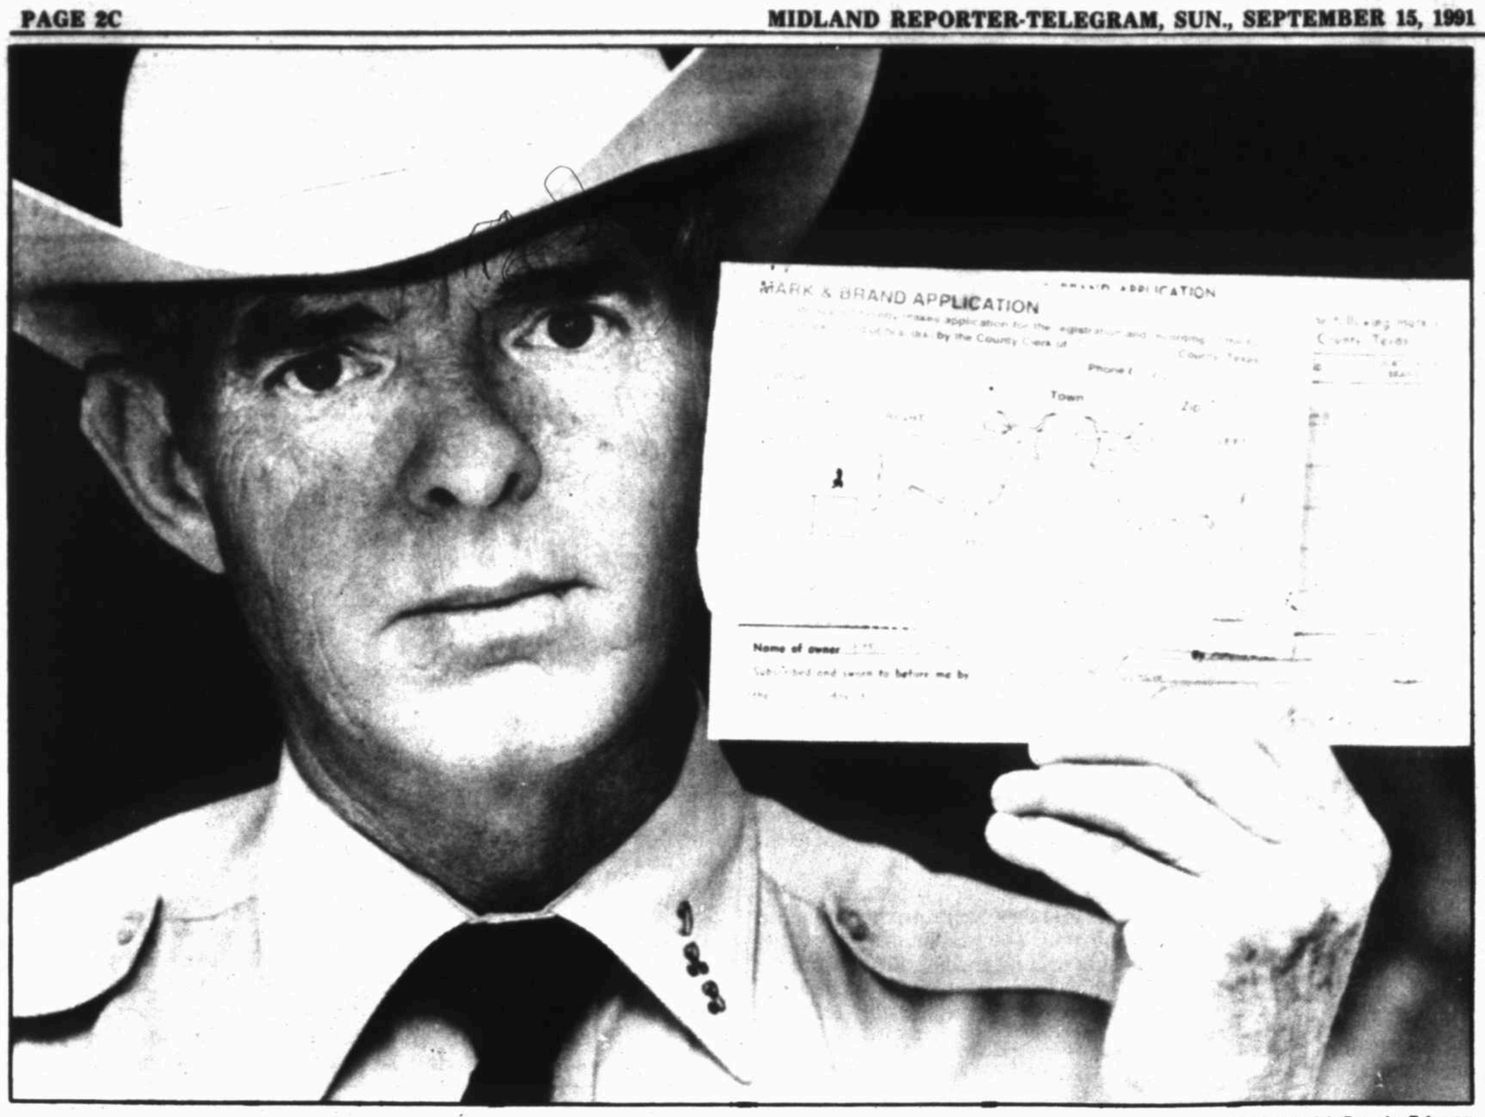

It is as though we have determined that a person who has one talent can magically transfer that knowledge into all other areas of life.

He can't, of course. To anticipate otherwise, is foolish on our part. It makes no more sense than to expect a carpenter to be a great opera singer.

In fact, the next time you are curious about the reasons leading up to the demise of communism in Eastern Europe, seek out the opinions of a famous poet and a gas station attendant.

More than not, I'm going to agree with the gas station attendant. And I don't care if he can make his answer rhyme or not.

BRAND: County is registering brands

(From 1C)

"It's not illegal to own a brand (without owning cattle), but it is illegal to use a brand without it being registered in your home county in your name," Braly said. The maximum fine for fire branding or ear marking a head of livestock without first registering that brand or mark is $500, Braly said.

By law, branding must be done in a pen and not on the open range. The fine for branding cattle outside of a pen is up to $50 per head, Braly said.

And the illegal altering of a brand, a practice suggestive of rustling, is a felony-theft offense punishable by fine or imprisonment.

However, another person can come along and "register the 'Diamond Horseshoe' just like I have," Braly said, but "cannot place the brand on the same location."

And ranchers may brand their cow-dogs which help herd cattle.

"I imagine the humane society would scream and holler that 'It's inhumane to brand a dog,' " Braly said, "but I know people that do it."

Rather than using a hot iron, "a lot of people are just ear-marking their cattle and not branding," noted Braly. But an ear mark is just "not good enough," because there are only a very few ways to cut an ear that is not going to be different from somebody else's ear cut in neighboring ranch country.

Braly also works as a special Texas Ranger investigating "livestock and ranch-related thefts" over a 14-county area in which 365 TSCRA members own more than 80,000 cattle worth about $40 million.

A rancher doesn't have to be a TSCRA member "to get us to investigate thefts," Braly said. A rancher may contact the sheriff or other law-enforcement officers who, in turn, will get ahold of the TSCRA field inspector to conduct investigations.

Just as county clerks throughout Texas record brands, the TSCRA maintains brand files on its members.

"The law states that if you use a brand, it has to be registered to you, and you can just register it in your home county if you want to," Braly said. "It is more logical, if you are running cattle in two or three different counties, that you have that brand registered in all three counties."

Brands are designed by their owners, who are to record their brands in exact detail with the county clerk and with the TSCRA if they are members.

"I would say the biggest percentage are probably an initialed brand," Braly said. "You can use a rocker under an initial or a rafter over the initial."

MESA: Residential program helps young men

(From 1C)

The highly-structured program includes classroom time with a homebound teacher from Midland Independent School District, individual and group counseling, and lectures on self-esteem, peer pressure, job retention and relapse prevention.

Counselors work three shifts to provide round-the-clock supervision. The average length of stay is five to six months and program capacity is 12. There are currently nine youths in the program. Clients are referred to the program by their parents, counselors or as terms of probation.

The program is voluntary, however, and young men can opt to admit themselves, according to counselor Carol Blevins.

"We only take the chronic substance abuse cases," Boren noted. "People try to send us boys with behavior problems. Maybe they just tried to run away from home. We don't take them. We are primarily here for substance abuse."

The young men get more group support in the lower level of the program. They bunk with several other roommates, while those in the highest level get more privacy.

"It's like a child growing up," Ms. Blevins said. "A child needs more supervision when it's younger and takes on more responsibility when it's older."

She said the highlight of the program is graduation. "The graduate gives a speech, his primary counselor gives a speech and friends and family are invited to attend."

The graduates also literally leave their mark on Country Mesa by painting their first names, date of graduation and applying their handprint in paint. Such signatures — in bright primary colors — are scattered on the white brick walls of the recreation center.

Once they leave, if they are Midland residents — though many of the boys in the program are from across the state — they have the option of getting outpatient counseling from Texas Place, a prevention facility in Midland.

The intent of the program is to give the young men the skills they need to survive and succeed in the "real world" without drugs or alcohol.

Ryan said he is ready to take that step and will be checking out of the facility in a few weeks.

"I'm getting my GED (General Equivalency Diploma) now," he said. "I've been studying for it here."

Ryan, who came to Midland from Dallas, has decided to make his home in Midland, where he can attend 12-step recovery support groups and enroll in Midland College.

Although Dallas also offers support groups and comparable education, it is also home to the fast crowd David fell in with.

"As long as I stay sober, I can make it," Ryan said. "I grew apart from my higher power. Now my connection with my higher power is strong, and I know what I want. I want to go to junior college and get a job. I want to stay sober. I just have to take it one day at a time."

Country Mesa accepts fees on a sliding scale. For those who do not have the financial means to pay for treatment, treatment may be provided through funding from the Texas Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse. For more information on the program call 687-4127 or 687-4128.

Pawn shops take on respectable image

PHILADELPHIA (NYT) — The lawyer needed an engagement ring but had lost his credit by filing for bankruptcy. The advertising agency owner couldn't meet her payroll because her clients were paying their bills late.

The fifth-grade teacher wanted to trim her credit card balance without her husband's knowledge.

So where did each of these upscale and respectable, though cash-poor, people turn?

Not to family, friends or conventional financial lenders. Instead, they used pawnshops, reaching out to an old but fast-growing and rapidly changing industry that until recently was best known for its unsavory characters (from Shylock in "The Merchant of Venice" to Rod Steiger in "The Pawnbroker") and usurious interest rates (as high as 24 percent a month, depending on the state).

"It's just very, very convenient," said the teacher, Angela Lindsey of West Deptford, N.J., who recently pawned a bracelet and a watch for $600 at Carver W. Reed, a 131-year-old pawnshop in Center City here. "The bank gives you such a runaround."

Though pawnshops are often lauded by customers for their easy and speedy transactions, the real lure has been their willingness to act as the lender of last resort for the working poor, who often find themselves abandoned by the mainstream banking world.

But they are being joined by increasing numbers of middle-class and even more affluent customers, hard hit by recession-related layoffs, bankruptcies, foreclosures and tight credit, as well as other modern money maladies, like high medical bills and costly divorce settlements.

"On any given day, you'll see as many suits and ties come in here as blue jeans and T-shirts," said Tod Gordon, the owner of Carver W. Reed.

Pawnshops profit by making loans in exchange for items that serve as collateral. Monthly interest rates, excluding storage fees and other charges, range from 2 percent in some states, like Connecticut, to 24 percent in Mississippi.

If the interest is not paid on time, the collateral is forfeited to the pawnbroker, who often sells it at near-wholesale prices. On average, shops hold goods about 60 days before they are forfeited.

No precise statistics are kept on the number of people who receive loans from pawnshops, although John P. Caskey, an associate professor of economics at Swarthmore College, has estimated that one in 10 Americans use them at least once a year.

The number of pawnbrokers in the nation, however, has grown by more than half in the past five years, from 4,849 to 7,354, according to American Business Information, a research organization in Omaha.

The industry is booming most in the South and West, particularly in Florida and Texas, which have more than 2,000 pawnshops.

"You never know what's coming through that door," said Mike O'Neill, the owner of the Happy Hocker in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. "I did a pawn on a 31-foot Chris-Craft. I lent him $10,000. He said he needed it because they were going to foreclose on his house."

Annie Nutt

BIG SPRING — Services for Annie Nutt, 83, of Big Spring are set for 10 a.m. Monday in Rosewood Chapel with the Rev. Kenneth Patrick officiating. Burial will follow in Trinity Memorial Park under the direction of Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home.

Mrs. Nutt died Thursday in an Odessa hospital.

She was born Jan. 3, 1908, in Sterling City. She moved to Big Spring with her parents and graduated from Big Spring High School.

She married John Ely Nutt Sept. 4, 1928, in Big Spring. The couple owned and operated Conoco service stations and the Western Motel and Restaurant. They were in the oil business and also ranched in Glasscock County. Nutt preceded his wife in death Feb. 3, 1986.

Survivors include: one son, John Edward of Denton; one daughter, Vonna Beth Negro of Big Spring; one sister, Maureen Worsham of Carlsbad, N.M.; one brother, Everett Day of Carlsbad; five grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

Fernando Leyva Jr.

Graveside services for Fernando Villa Leyva Jr., 2-month-old son of Nora and Fernando Leyva of Midland are pending with Ellis Funeral Home.

He died Saturday at a local hospital.

He was born July 6 in Odessa.

Survivors include: his parents, two brothers, Miguel Angel Leyva and Rovaldo Leyva, both of San Angelo; one sister, Angelina Leyva of San Angelo; and his grandparents, Rafael and Beda Leyva and Epifanio and Socarro Villa, all of Ojinaga, Chihuahua, Mexico.

Temple Jo Daniels

ODESSA — Services for Temple Jo Daniels, 56, of Odessa and formerly of Midland will be at 2 p.m. Monday at St. James Baptist Church with the Rev. R.T. McNeil officiating. Burial will follow at Sunset Memorial Gardens with Martinez Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

A wake service will be held at 8 p.m. today at the Martinez Funeral Home Chapel.

Mrs. Daniels died Friday at an Odessa hospital.

She was born Dec. 25, 1934, in Teague. She married Napoleon (Pete) Daniels on March 20, 1955, in Midland.

She was a graduate of Carver High School in Midland, where she had been homecoming queen. She moved to Odessa in 1955.

Mrs. Daniels was a member of Eastern Star, E.E. Burnet Delight, Chapter 107; the Castanettes Civic and Social Club; the City Federation of Black Women and the LVN Association.

She attended Odessa College. She had worked for 25 years at Medical Center Hospital.

In addition, she was a member of St. James Baptist Church, where she served on the deaconess board, the usher board and the missionary society.

Survviors include her husband; one son, Danny Bernard Daniels of Odessa; two daughters, Teresa Carol White of Odessa and Natalyn Temple Daniels of Houston; three brothers, the Rev. William Cullen Gillespie of Denver, Colo., and Bernard Gillespie and Lovie C. Gillespie, both of Houston; four sisters, Margie Phillips, Barbara Merchant, Betty Earl and Myrtice Newhouse, all of Houston; her step-mother, Flossie Gillespie of Fairfield; and two grandchildren.

LOCAL/AREA REPORTS

Four arrested

Staff Report

Four Midlanders were arrested and charged with possession of a controlled substance Saturday afternoon.

Arrested were Elizabeth Garcia Marmolejo, 27; Raymundo Perez, 20; Ruben Diaz, 28; and Maria Magdelena Diaz, 27.

The Midland County SWAT team and sheriff's deputies executed a search warrant at Cedar Creek Apartments, 415 W. Scharbauer Drive, at 1:45 p.m. Saturday.

Deputies discovered a $500 worth of a substance believed to be heroin, $200 worth of a white powdery substance suspected to be cocaine, and $850 in cash.

Ms. Diaz was also charged with intent to deliver both the cocaine and heroin.

All four persons were in jail Saturday night. Bond had not been set.

Boy charged

A Midland juvenile was arrested and charged with burglary of a business early Saturday morning.

The 15-year-old black male was arrested at 2 a.m. Saturday at Smitty's Grocery, 1411 N. Lamesa.

About $117 worth of beer and cigarettes were missing from the store, police reported.

Pillow attacker escapes jail

EDNA (AP) — South Texas authorities were hunting Saturday for a 24-year-old man convicted of using a pillow as a deadly weapon during a burglary during which a woman was raped.

Jose Vasquez of Edna escaped early Saturday from the Jackson County Jail by kicking out a reinforced window into an exercise yard, authorities said. He then scaled a wire fence, the sheriff's department said.

Jurors convicted Vasquez of burglary of a habitation and sentenced him Thursday to life in prison. Prosecutors said the pillow was used to facilitate the rape.

The May 7, 1989, incident took place at a home in Ganado. Authorities said the rape occurred in the presence of the woman's two young children.

District Attorney Robert Bell used genetic fingerprinting to convince the jury that Vasquez was the same person who broke into the residence and also committed the rape.

Prosecutors said Vasquez was tried for burglary with intent to commit a felony or theft because it is a first-degree felony and carries a stiffer penalty than sexual assault, which is a second-degree felony.

Bell said the jury's finding that use of a pillow during the rape constituted a deadly weapon means Vasquez will have to serve at least 15 years of the sentence before becoming eligible for parole.

Fire burns boats

AUSTIN (AP) — The dock of an upscale marina on Lake Austin caught fire Saturday night, burning about 50 boats to the water line, fire officials said.

About 60 firefighters battled the blaze for two hours before it was brought under control.

Oil and gasoline in the boats fed the fire at the Boatown Marina in west Austin. There were no injuries, said Dick Tidwell, an Austin Fire Department dispatcher.

The fire was reported about 8 p.m., he said.

City changes boards during September

By Lyn Miller

The City of Midland's 23 boards and commissions are undergoing some changes. During the month of September, annually, many terms expire of members of the boards and commissions and reappointments must be made by the mayor and city council.

At the first council meeting this month, 11 appointments and 46 reappointments of members to boards and commissions were made.

The two types of City of Midland boards and commissions are advisory and decision making. There are, also, boards whose membership is appointed by the council, but are separate legal entities.

Advisory boards and comissions advise the city council regarding public policy, as well as providing creative ideas, imput from the community and serving as a sounding board for proposed public policy.

Included on the list of advisory boards and commissions, but not limited to, are: the Airport Planning and Development Board, Airport Zoning Commission, Animal Control Advisory Commission, Midland Crime Prevention Commission and Parks and Recreation Commission.

Decision-making boards and commissions are "quasi-judicial" and governed by state law. The boards set or enforce public policy and are, potentially, subject to review by the courts.

Members serving on these boards are given the oath of office by the City Secretary, or his designee, and are subject to the open meeting, open records and ethics laws.

Some of the decision-making boards and commissions for the city are the Building Board of Adjustments and Appeals, Electrical Examining Board, Midland Center Advisory Board, Planning and Zoning Commission, Zoning Board of Adjustments.

Then, there are those boards and commissions that are separate entities, corporations or political bodies from the city, usually established under the provision of a a state statute which sets forth functions, duties, responsibilities and limitations of the corporation or political body.

Examples of these boards are the Midland Housing Authority, Midland Economic Development Company and Permian Basin Community Center for Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

An application procedure is utilized in the appointment process with certain qualifications required to serve as a member. Citizens interested in serving on a board or commission may obtain an application from the City Secretary's office, Room 430, in City Hall.

Dallas finds funds to rehire teachers

DALLAS (NYT) — The city's school superintendent, Dr. Marvin Edwards, has announced that the district has found the money to hire back nearly all of the 257 teachers laid off three weeks ago because of a budget shortage.

In a showy demonstration of support, school board members and representatives of four teachers' organizations joined Edwards at a news conference on Thursday to endorse the superintendent's latest plan.

"Everyone — and that's why it is symbolic that we are all here together — is interested in resolving this situation and putting it behind us and beginning the healing process," Edwards said.

He said the additional $1.75 million necessary to hire back the teachers would come from a freeze on hiring of administrators, changes in the timing of some teacher recertification programs and by a 15 percent reduction in the amount of money set aside for substitute teachers.

School officials said that about 30 of the teachers would not be returning because they had found other jobs.

Students, parents and teachers held angry demonstrations outside the school district headquarters after the layoffs took effect the first week in September; some students threw stones and bottles and one police officer was injured by a bottle that struck his head. The district has about 129,000 students and 8,400 teachers.

Left unanswered was why Edwards chose at first to lay off teachers rather than to make other budget cuts like those announced Thursday.

Some critics suggested that Edwards had deliberately resorted to a policy of brinksmanship, which touched off the demonstrations, in an unsuccessful effort to get his way.

Others, including some board members, said they believed that Edwards' hand was forced by a majority of board members who had an unswerving commitment to Dallas business leaders not to raise property taxes higher than the 17.5 percent increase they had already approved.

At a board meeting on Tuesday night, Edwards proposed increasing taxes another half a percentage point to raise money for teachers' salaries, but the board rejected his proposal.

The 6-3 vote came after three hours of public testimony overwhelmingly supporting the teacher hirings. All three black board members voted against the measure, making it clear that they preferred the solution that included the additional tax increase.

In presenting his original plan, which Edwards said would have resulted in a tax increase of $3.84 a year on a $100,000 income, the superintendent denounced the way in which the board had handled the layoffs.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Midland College plans for retraining

By H.A. Tuck

Here are some points presented recently by the College Entrance Examination Board, from studies by the American Society for Training and Development and the Department of Labor:

1) Two-thirds of the people who will be working in the year 2000 are already in the workforce.

Tuck

2) Seventy-five percent of the current workforce will need significant retraining in the next decade.

3) Over half of the new jobs of the future will require postsecondary education and training.

4) Eighty-three percent of the new entrants in the workforce by the year 2000 will be women and minorities. From those facts, it's apparent that community colleges are the instruments to which industry is looking for training and retraining.

Such training is done in the community, it's inexpensive, and it targets specific skills needed by local employers.

Midland College even has a person on the staff specifically to work with local employers to plan needed educational training. The training can be credit course, noncredit, or a combination of the two. The training can be done at the campus or at the workplace.

For more information, just call the Continuing Education office at 685-4518.

A regular meeting of the Board of Trustees is scheduled for 4 p.m. Tuesday in the Board Room, located in the Administration Building. The agenda is routine in nature.

Another of the monthly Small Business Breakfast meetings is planned for 7:30 a.m. Tuesday in Chaparral Hall, located in the college's Student Center. Cost is just $5. The first breakfast was held last month. It was to finish at 8:30 a.m. but a number of attendees still were talking with one another at 9:30 a.m.

If you are a small business owner, manager, or would-be entrepreneur, then you should attend.

The breakfasts are planned for the third Tuesday of each month, so you can mark your calendar now for Oct. 15 and Nov. 19. There will not be a breakfast in December.

Payment may be made at the door, but the college's Business and Economic Development Center would be most appreciative if you would call 685-4656 on Monday to make reservations.

Art instructor Warren Taylor stopped long enough last week to provide a list of some of his recent activities. He recently served as juror for the 17th annual Rocky Mountain National Aqueous Media Exhibit at the Foothill Art Center in Denver. He is presenting his works in a solo show Sept. 3-Oct. 12 at the Peregrine Gallery, located in Dallas' Crescent Complex, and has a one-man show during all of September and October at the Museum of the Big Bend in Alpine. He's also prominently featured in a new North Light Publication entitled "Splash: America's New Contemporary Watercolorists."

If you've not seen the current display at McCormick Gallery, please make an effort to come by the Allison Fine Arts Building soon. A retrospective of early work by the late Florence Barber-Pervier is on exhibit through Sept. 26. Her life was most interesting, but you need to learn about that as you view the works, most of which she did while a very young student at the Chicago Institute of Art. She was the grandmother of MC drafting instructor Curt Pervier.

You may view this show Sunday from 1-5 p.m., Monday through Thursday from 8 a.m.-10 p.m., Friday from 8 a.m.-5 p.m., and Saturday from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Admission always is free.

The MC African-American Student Alliance is planning a trip to Dallas and East Texas Sept. 26-28. They'll see Grambling University and Prairie View A&M University play in the State Fair Classic, visit college campuses and cultural centers during the trip. Cost is $75, which includes two nights lodging, chartered bus, and all admissions. The fee is due Sept. 23. For more information, contact 685-4649 or 682-0100.

There's an orientation for persons wishing to enroll for College Classics courses tomorrow from 1-2:30 p.m. at the Allison Fine Arts Building. There's a catch, however. You must be at least 55 years of age or you can't enroll for College Classics. A single fee of $25 allows those eligible to take as many courses as possible during not just the first session, but also the second session. The array of course is quite wide, most of the classes meet in the afternoon one or two hours one day per week, and it's lots of fun.

Session I is Sept. 23-Oct. 18 and Session II is Oct. 21-Nov. 15. If you can't attend the orientation session, but wish to enroll or get more information, just call 685-4518 or visit the Continuing Education office in the Administration Building.

There are lots of choices you could make from courses starting this week through the Department of Continuing Education. Just take a look at some these to enrich your life: Energize Your Life Through Beauty, Beginning Country and Western Dance, three sections of Computer and Your, CPA Professional Education, Landscaping Preparation for Winter, The Art of Magic, Beginning or Advanced Woodworking, Financial Strategies for Successful Retirement, Videography, How to Plan an Outstanding Wedding, West Texas, T-Shirt and Sweatshirt Painting, Medical Spanish, Beginning Quilting, Ski Vacations, or Intermediate Swing-Push Dance.

Register for any of these in the Continuing Education area, located in the Administration Building, or call 685-4518 to learn more.

Women's speaker stresses teamwork

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

Many experts point to teamwork as a key to help U.S. businesses compete with the Japanese, Germans and other countries.

Teamwork was the topic of a speech Saturday at the District 8 Fall Conference of the Texas Federation of Business and Professional Women.

Speaker Libby Fields of Port Arthur, treasurer of the state federation, gave her presentation in the context of helping BPW organizations, but, as she noted, teamwork also has applications in the workplace and even in personal relationships.

"There's a difference between a group or organization, and teamwork," she told the gathering. "Life is teamwork."

She pointed out that a key to teamwork is working together and accepting other people for what they are, not how they ought to be or how they ought to act, and taking their ideas as viable and important.

"When you work as a team, not every idea you have is the best one at that time," she noted.

Enthusiasm is another key ingredient, said, which comes from attitude and, especially action. "People can only judge you by the way you act. They can't see what you're thinking or what you're feeling."

She related how, a few years ago, she was having some personal problems and had read several books on positive thinking, with little result. Finally, a co-worker told her "Forget positive thinking. Try positive action." She said she tried it, and her life improved, and her attitudes about herself began to improve.

The final key ingredient to teamwork is motivation, "the reason to get you to move," she said. "Motivation means you as an organization have a purpose. Each of you has to find your motivation — what it is that makes you move, the reason that you do whatever it takes to do whatever it is you want to do."

She said applying these principals of teamwork at home, at work and in any organization will "help you feel better about yourself. Work will go smoother, and little things won't bother you as much."

She cautioned that "You're not going to win everything you do. But you can be a winning part of a team."

Houston student slain after game

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston high school student was killed when he apparently got caught in the crossfire of a shootout between rival high school teen-agers following a football game.

Madison High School student Mario Pittman, 19, whose body was found in a field in front of the southeast Houston school, was pronounced dead after 11 p.m. Friday.

Continental employees who worked on plane reassigned

EAGLE LAKE (AP) — A dozen Continental Express maintenance employees who worked on a commuter plane the day before it crashed have been temporarily reassigned and will undergo routine drug testing, federal investigators said Saturday.

Crews replaced the de-icer boot, an inflatable attachment made of fiberglass and covered with rubber, used to break ice off the tail, said Jim Kolstad, chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board.

The screws were not replaced before the Embraer 120 Brasilia left Houston Intercontinental Airport Wednesday morning for Laredo, Kolstad said.

On the return flight from Laredo, the twin-engine plane suddenly descended, killing all 14 people on board.

"There is a conflict in testimony between individuals who claim they informed the next shift that work had begun on the left hand side," Kolstad said at a Saturday night news conference near the scene of the crash.

He added that workers from the second shift claim they had not been told.

In a prepared statement, officials said, "a portion of the FAA (Federal Aviation Administration)-approved general maintenance manual was not followed with respect the completion of work on the left hand leading edge.

"Because these procedures were not followed, individuals involved have been suspended by the company from their maintenance duties pending the completion of the investigation and have been temporarily reassigned to non-maintenance administrative duties at another company facility."

Continental Express has not commented other than to say it was premature to speculate on the cause of the crash.

"We want to know what's up more than anyone," spokesman Art Kent said Friday.

The 9-foot-long rubber boot has not been recovered and was the object of a massive search that included the use of all-terrain vehicles and a helicopter.

"We're told by Embraer that they believe the loss of the de-icer boot would stall the tail and would result in a severe nose dive," Kolstad said.

That was consistent with reports from farmers who witnessed the crash, he said.

In addition, Kolstad said evidence showed there was an in-flight fire aboard Flight 2574 since molten metal was found on the left side of the stabilizer.

"The molten metal is suggestive of a very hot fire," Kolstad said. "The seats that were found suggest there was not a fire in the cabin, but the outside fire was very intense."

He said molten aluminum drops were found in the cornfield where the plane crashed.

The State

Students ask principal for longer school days

HOUSTON (AP) — When 10-year-old Samuel Ndiwe and some classmates told Anderson Elementary Principal LaWanna Goodwin they wanted more time in school, she couldn't believe her ears.

But now, the southwest Houston fifth graders have started going to school a half-hour early and staying a half-hour late just to get extra study time before taking the state's mandatory achievement tests next month.

Ndiwe and some of his classmates said they were worried that there was not enough time to learn everything they needed to know, particularly with the Texas Assessment for Academic Skills approaching in October.

"Are you saying you want me to put more minutes in the day?" Ms. Goodwin asked.

Ndiwe suggested an additional 15 minutes per class and a survey of his classmates showed overwhelming support for the idea.

"I've told the students over and over that you've got to want to learn," Ms. Goodwin said. "To see it is finally registering and sinking in is so refreshing, extremely refreshing."

The school has added 10 or 15 minutes to every class period until the TAAS is given in early October. The students said they also want the school day lengthened when they prepare for national achievement tests in the spring.

Math teacher Roslyn Vaughn said she was surprised and impressed when the students asked for longer class time. She said the time added to each hourlong class period makes it easier to cover all the subject matter.

"I think it's fantastic," Ms. Vaughn said. "From day one, we've noticed a big change."

The students, too, are enthusiastic. At first, Ndiwe said a few of the students gave him a bad time for bringing up the idea. "Now," he said, "they are thanking me for it."

Ndiwe said he decided to approach Ms. Goodwin with the idea after he and some friends discussed how there wasn't enough time in the school day to do all the work they needed to do to prepare for the all-important TAAS tests.

Ndiwe's friend, Robert Suber, 11, said he would like to see everybody in the fifth grade pass the test this year, and he thinks the longer study time will make a difference. "The extra work is worth it," Suber said.

Flight attendant planned to start new job

HOUSTON (AP) — A flight attendant who died in the crash of a Continental Express commuter plane with 13 others had given her resignation and was days away from starting a new job.

Nancy Reed, 33, had accepted a new job as a flight attendant on a corporate jet for the Arabian American Oil Co., known as Aramco.

Her resignation would have been effective Sept. 18, exactly a week after the flight from Laredo to Houston crashed Wednesday in a Colorado County corn field, Continental spokesman Ned Walker said.

A 10-year veteran of the airline, Ms. Reed was voted No. 1 flight attendant for Continental Express this year and also served on its advisory board, friends said.

"If she wasn't at work, she was taking a plane somewhere. She liked to explore and see places," said friend Debbie Hopkins. The two lived in nearby homes on the outskirts of Humble.

"She was a real sweetheart, loved by everybody. Everyone had nice things to say about her," Ms. Hopkins said.

In another twist, a half-million dollars in diamonds were found in the charred remains of Flight 2574. Authorities said they played no role in the crash.

"We're not pursuing the diamonds further," National Transportation Safety Board Chairman James L. Kolstad said Friday.

Diamond broker Albert Zelma Golman, who had lived in Dallas until moving to the Phoenix suburb of Scottsdale two years ago, was killed in the crash near Eagle Lake.

Golman, 59, was employed by Excel U.S.A. Inc., a diamond wholesaler with headquarters in Antwerp, Belgium. Before moving to Arizona, he had worked for Herbert Goldberg Inc. in Dallas for nearly 20 years, and before that for Gordon's Jewelers there.

Chronic cocaine use injures heart, study shows

AUSTIN (AP) — A one-year study by Texas researchers has offered the first evidence that chronic cocaine use thickens the heart's main pumping chamber, which may cause a heart attack or sudden death, a published report said.

Results of the study of 30 young cocaine abusers at the VA Medical Center in Dallas were published in this month's issue of "Circulation," a journal of the American Heart Association.

The study supports previous findings that enlarged left ventricles of the heart, in a condition called hypertrophy, are associated with sudden death, experts said.

The study supports previous findings that enlarged left ventricles of the heart, in a condition called hypertrophy, are associated with sudden death, experts said.

Dr. M. Elizabeth Brickner, a co-author of the report, said the study was prompted by observations of autopsies at the Dallas County morgue of young men who apparently died of cocaine overdose.

"Sometimes we'd go down and watch the autopsies out of curiosity and it's something we noticed," said Ms. Brickner, an assistant professor of cardiology at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center in Dallas.

The condition matched "a couple of descriptions in the (medical) literature of heavy heart weights with overdose, but it had never been looked at before," Ms. Brickner said.

She said most medical examiners probably have missed the condition in cocaine victims because they usually weigh the heart but don't look for thickness.

As many as 30 million Americans are estimated to have used cocaine at least once, Grayburn said, and as many as 5 million are thought to be chronic abusers.

The Texas study recruited 30 young men who were chronic cocaine abusers enrolled in a drug rehabilitation program at the VA Medical Center.

They were compared to 30 male center employees, matched for age and race, who were not drug abusers and had no history of heart disease. None of the subjects had any other condition that might cause thickening.

The study used painless sound waves to put together images of the structure of the study participants' hearts.

Using the sound waves, "we measured how thick their heart walls were and we calculated how much the heart muscle would weigh," Ms. Brickner said.

Unusual thickness was found in the left ventricles of 13 of the 30 abusers, compared with only four in the control group. The researchers speculate that the heart muscle thickens due to the huge increases in blood pressure that cocaine is known to cause.

Woman dies after blow to the head

HOUSTON (AP) — A 37-year-old woman became the 40th person in Houston to die as a result of domestic violence this year, police said.

Virginia Hernandez, a mother of nine, was killed by a blow to the head after she and her common-law husband had been drinking and arguing, relatives said.

Ernesto Beltran, 38, has been charged with the murder and remained jailed Saturday, in lieu of $10,000 bond.

A women's rights advocate called the slaying a tragedy that is repeated in Houston all too often. Houston police said 67 people were killed in domestic battles last year, while there were 54 domestic violence deaths in 1989.

Ms. Hernandez was found dead in her home about 4:30 a.m. Friday.

"The doctor said that her head wounds were probably caused by being pounded against a wall or floor," Detective Dave Collier said. "She had numerous bruises on her body, both old and new."

A relative staying with the couple said she took their 1-month-old infant into her room after the couple began arguing. She said she got up at 4 a.m. to get a bottle for the baby and saw Ms. Hernandez covered with a sheet and lying on the living room floor. Beltran lay on a nearby couch.

"A few minutes later, the suspect comes in there and tells them that he did something to his wife and thought she was dead," Collier said.

Collier said police records show that officers have answered disturbance calls at the house eight times since February. But Ms. Hernandez seldom pursued charges.

Children's Protective Services previously had removed eight of Ms. Hernandez' children from the home. The couple's 1-month-old had been in CPS custody after its birth but recently had been ordered returned to the home, said CPS spokesman Gene Daniels.

"We removed all of the children from the home because of abuse and neglect on the part of both the mother and the father," Daniels said.

Beltran is the father of three of the children, Daniels said.

Five of the children, including the infant, are now in the care of relatives, while four others are in foster homes, authorities said.

Martina Navratilova and attorney Mike McCurley talk with the press after the hearing.

Martina vs. Judy, matter of the heart

By Mike Cochran
Associated Press writer

FORT WORTH — The dispute between tennis star Martina Navratilova and her former lover, Judy Nelson, is not a matter of money but a "matter of the heart," Nelson says.

"We had a relationship that was very special. I think it was very good, very healthy," Nelson said. "She is a very special part of my life that I would never take away, and I don't think she would either."

In the bizarre Friday the 13th windup of a zany week in court, Navratilova denied calling Nelson a "money-grubbing parasite" but suggested it was time her ex-lover found a job.

"I'm disappointed," she snapped, "that the only way Judy is capable of making a living is through me, one way or another."

Nelson, claiming she is not emotionally ready to work, replied:

"That was really hard. I think that Martina was lashing out at me because she was angry. She had to be here this week and she didn't want to be here. She wanted to be on safari in Africa."

Navratilova also said Friday a dispute over book rights about her affair with Nelson is blocking a settlement in their stormy palimony case.

"This is really the only stumbling block," she told reporters at the conclusion of a week-long legal battle to have Nelson's lead attorney removed from the lawsuit.

Later, Nelson denied that a movie or book deal is the issue but blamed a less tangible demand that she surrender her "right to freedom of speech."

Baited by a foreign press contingent, Navratilova said Nelson insists on erroneously blaming their breakup on ski champion Cindy Nelson and declared:

"Judy has a hard time understanding I left simply because our relationship fell apart. She has to blame it on somebody. We (Cindy) are friends but I'm friends with lots of other women.

"It seems that everytime I'm seen with a woman, we're having a relationship."

She told a British reporter in response to a question that there is no woman in her life at the moment.

The back-to-back news conferences came after Nelson testified at the preliminary hearing that her lead attorney, Jerry Loftin, is a friend dating back to schooldays and "my lawyer all my life."

She said she was "very distressed and upset" when she broke up last winter with Navratilova, and Loftin "was willing to help me at a time when I needed some help.

Opposing lawyers maintain Loftin's representation of Nelson is a conflict of interest because he represented Navratilova on previous legal matters and was privy to confidential records.

It is undisputed that Loftin's legal aide in fact helped her and Nelson draw up the "nonmaritial cohabitation agreement" that lies at the heart of the current dispute.

But Loftin contends he had no knowledge of his aide's role in preparing that document in 1986.

State Judge Harry Hopkins ordered attorneys Friday to provide him written closing arguments by Oct. 7 and said he would rule on the Loftin issue by Thanksgiving.

He said he would then set a trial date agreeable to both sides.

At stake is half of Navratilova's earnings during the seven years of the relationship, estimated between $5 million and $9 million and the source of much bitterness.

"Judy wants me to pay for the pain I caused her in not wanting to be with her anymore," Navratilova, a nine-time Wimbledon champion, said in interviews this week with Dallas-Fort Worth newspaper reporters.

"My crime here is stupidity, naivete, and not loving Judy any more. For that I have to pay."

In her comments Friday afternoon, Navratilova said:

"The reason the case is not settled is because Judy insists on having the rights to write about our story personally. She would write a book about it, whatever."

Speech freedom in danger, lawyer says

AUSTIN (AP) — Even as freedom of speech and access to news is on the upswing in the Soviet Union and elsewhere, the U.S. Supreme Court is threatening Americans' First Amendment rights, a communications lawyer said Saturday.

Daniel Waggoner, a Seattle attorney, said during the 1991 John Henry Faulk Freedom of Information Conference that developing technologies such as video cameras and FAX machines are helping spread free speech around the world.

The power of communication was evident during the recent failed coup in the Soviet Union, he said.

"Speech can overcome guns, the KGB, and so on," said Waggoner.

But even as these historic changes take place, Waggoner said, U.S. Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia is a leading proponent of a theory that could quash expression here in America.

"This theory, simply put, states that the cultural and historical majority have the right to control speech of the minority or individual when that speech threatens the dominant and established standard of the community," he said.

Authorities in the Soviet Union probably began regulating speech under a similar theory, to control "wicked" citizens and "make a better world," Waggoner said.

"Why shouldn't the community be able to regulate these? The answer is, unfortunately, that once communities get used to regulating speech, it's very difficult for them to stop," he said.

"I think more speech is always better, and the fear I have is with the direction the U.S. Supreme Court is going, speech is losing that special sense of protection it's had," he said. "This is not a court which is friendly to the First Amendment."

The courts should not try to silence artistic and cultural speakers such as the rap group 2 Live Crew, even though many Americans find what they say distasteful. Waggoner said.

Cultural influences such as rock music and blue jeans laid a groundwork that helped Soviets seek freedom and defeat the attempted coup, he said.

"The system of free speech that grew in the Soviet Union began with things like 2 Live Crew. And if we lose those speakers, if we lose artistic and cultural speech, we'll ultimately lose political speech as well," Waggoner said.

"You need to protect all forms of speech, because you never know how it's going to turn into a wonderful form of speech that can protect individuals from government abuse," he said.

Waggoner has represented Cable News Network in the Manuel Noriega tape case and Home Box Office on issues relating to indecency in programming and 2 Live Crew.

Experts say officials duck open meetings act

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas officials frequently take the easy way out instead of adhering strictly to the state's Open Meetings Act — and the trend is worsening, media advocates and a former state senator said Friday.

Legislative accessibility was the topic of a panel discussion at the 1991 John Henry Faulk Freedom of Information Conference. Some 150 registrants were expected to participate in the conference and the subsequent 2nd National FOI Assembly, scheduled to end Sunday.

Former senator Kent Caperton, an attorney, said although elected officials generally are committed to the idea of open government, they frequently tire over time of dealing with its inconvenient aspects.

"To me, the trends are not heartening," Caperton said.

Walter Borges, a reporter for "Texas Lawyer" and FOI official of the Society of Professional Journalists, agreed that openness in state government is dwindling.

He cited as examples private summer meeting of top state leaders on Matagorda Island; secret scheduling of bills for floor debate by the House Calendars Committee; and the negotiating of this year's state budget without an official House-Senate conference committee, among other issues.

"The Legislature as a whole by its own actions demonstrates a level of contempt for the Texas Open Records and Open Meetings acts," Borges said.

"With the exception of a handful of people, we really won't find a widespread willingness to give open government a priority. Expedience takes priority over open government every single time," he said.

Man, 76, wants to call mother after soliciting arrest

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A 76-year-old Cuero man arrested in an anti-prostitution sweep wanted to call his 102-year-old mother to tell her he was going to jail, police said.

Max Cohen was one of eight men arrested Thursday on charges of soliciting for prostitution in San Antonio's Mahncke Park area, it was reported Saturday.

The arrests came during a police decoy operation.

After his arrest, Cohen told police he wanted to call his mother, detectives said.

"We asked him if he wanted to call his wife, and he said, 'I want to call my mom. I can't call my wife because she'll kill me,'" an unnamed detective said.

Cohen, who was released on a $400 personal recognizance bond, attributed his vitality to "blended whiskey," the detective said.

Capt. James Despres, commander of the vice and narcotics units, said the police department is stepping up enforcement in the Mahncke Park area. Residents complained last summer that illicit sex trade had overrun the neighborhood.

Despres said two female officers dressed as prostitutes arrested people who approached them and allegedly requested sex for money. Some incidents were videotaped, police reports showed.

In one case, a suspect asked an undercover female officer to strip naked and dance for him, according to a police report.

Thomas' silence contrasts with Bork's forthrightness

By Faith Keenan
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Four years ago, Supreme Court nominee Robert Bork astounded the nation by candidly stating his legal views on almost everything. One member of the Senate Judiciary Committee considering his nomination called some of the views "frightening."

This year, a far different candidate faces the panel, and he's refusing to reveal his thinking on almost anything. That position has led several committee members to call Clarence Thomas "frustrating."

Friday, after four days of listening to Thomas, senators were left bleary-eyed rather than bug-eyed as they tried to figure out what he believes and how his views would shape court decisions if he is confirmed.

Whereas Bork was forthright to the point of dooming his own nomination, Thomas is evasive and hopes the tactic will earn him a seat on the bench. He faces another round of questioning Monday.

If Bork was the tell-all nominee, Thomas is the no-opinion candidate. Bork has been described as a "philosophical standard bearer" for hardline conservatives. Thomas likens himself to "a stripped-down runner" who has swept away any previously held opinions to lighten the load he would bring to the court.

"As a judge, you strive for impartiality. You begin to strip down those policy decisions," Thomas said Thursday after Sen. Herbert Kohl, D-Wis., complained that the appeals court judge was not giving the panel any basis on which to evaluate him.

The result of shelving his opinions, said Thomas, is that he has become a "worthless conversationalist" since he joined the federal bench in 1990.

Legal experts say Bork was the first nominee to give detailed answers to specific interrogations of committee members, and he was widely praised for the level of scholarship he brought to the hearing room. His willingness to discuss prickly constitutional issues made the hearings "almost unprecedented in their scope," said one news account at the time.

Thomas has repeatedly run for cover under the shield of seeking to convey judicial impartiality. His oft-repeated message is that judges should be fair and leave their personal opinions outside the courthouse.

On at least some constitutional matters, the two candidates have strong differences.

For instance, Thomas said he believes the Constitution protects a marital right to privacy. He also acknowledged after lengthy sparring with Committee Chairman Joseph Biden that it protects a single person's right to privacy in the area of procreation.

Bork, however, said he did not believe a general right of privacy exists in the constitution.

"The right to privacy comes out of nowhere; it does not have any rooting in the constitution," he told the panel.

The right of privacy is important because it is the underpinning of the Roe v. Wade decision that in 1973 legalized abortion. Thomas has repeatedly dodged any question dealing directly with the case or the issue.

Bork, on the other hand, took a no-holds-barred approach to the decision. Roe v. Wade, he said, "contains almost no legal reasoning. We are not told why it (abortion) is a private act and if it is, why this one is protected."

"You are good enough to lay yourself right out on the table," said Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo.

But he told Bork he could also say, "I cannot respond to that." Earlier, Justices Sandra Day O'Connor and Antonin Scalia took that approach in their confirmation hearings.

In Thomas' case, Simpson has praised the nominee's non-answers and told him to keep up the good work. Thomas has "every right" to avoid answering questions about cases that may come before him, Simpson said.

Both candidates, however, provoked exasperation on the part of senators who accused them of "confirmation conversion." Four years ago, Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt. applied the term to Bork, whom he accused of softening his views on the issues of gender discrimination and freedom of speech.

In the current hearings, several Democrats as well as Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., have accused Thomas of high-tailing away from his previous writings and speeches.

"Instead of explaining your views, you ran from them and disavowed them," said Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, the only panel member to vote against Thomas when he was confirmed to serve on the U.S. Court of Appeals in 1990. Specter said Thomas's retreat on some issues "has been like a 100-yard dash."

Bork, in a television interview last week, defended Thomas against the accusation.

"The first time you express an opinion in your life, you're stuck with it forever," he told the Court TV cable channel.

Both nominees asked the panel not to judge them on their previous writings and speeches. Bork called his highly charged articles the "speculative writings of a law professor." Thomas has brushed off his references to natural law as "philosophical musings."

Thomas's answers to the committee may not stack up intellectually against Bork's, but the current nominee does have an edge over the failed nominee: The senators — even those most likely to oppose him — generally like him.

"He is a more likable person than Bork," said Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill. "That is a factor."

Despite persistent and repetitive questioning, Thomas has remained polite. He seems to take a deep breath before responding and begins most answers with a respectful "Senator ... "

There have been no audible groans like the one Bork emitted on his last day of testimony when he was asked about the War Powers Act, a question he had answered earlier by calling the act "probably unconstitutional and certainly unworkable."

'Best loved' evangelist may be hard to replace

By David Briggs
Associated Press Writer

When Billy Graham retires or dies, he will leave behind a $100 million-a-year evangelistic empire that for more than 40 years has been fueled by the drawing power of one man.

The issue facing the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association — which oversees all aspects of Graham's work from the crusades to "The Hour of Decision" radio broadcast — is whether anyone can fill the shoes of America's best-loved evangelist.

"Nothing would please most of us more than to have something like that happen," said E. Brandt Gustavson, executive director of the National Religious Broadcasters. But it is not likely, Gustavson acknowledged.

"The Billy Grahams of this world come along, very often, only once," he said.

Graham, 72, shies away from the question of who will succeed him.

"God will have to choose one. I don't think an evangelist can be made or trained or anything like that," he says.

But when pressed, he mentions two possible successors.

The first is his 39-year-old son, Franklin, director of Samaritan's Purse and World Medical Mission, two mission organizations serving the poor. Graham said his older son also has been preaching as a co-evangelist, and is ready to hold a crusade of his own in Brazil in November.

"He's a powerful speaker," the proud father said in an interview.

William Martin, a sociologist at Rice University who has spent five years preparing a biography of Graham, said Franklin probably has the inside track.

"Clearly, Billy Graham wants Franklin to be his successor," Martin said.

The other candidate mentioned by Graham is Jim Wilson, the son of his longtime right-hand man, T.W. Wilson. The 47-year-old head of the Jim Wilson Evangelistic Association became a vocational evangelist in 1990 after serving four years as the pastor of First Baptist Church in Orlando, Fla.

While Jim Wilson might be a dark horse, Martin said, "It's extremely difficult to underestimate the importance to Graham of having that trusted circle of old-time friends."

In Martin's numerous interviews with officials and board members of the Graham organization, another name that arose was Luis Palau, a Portland, Ore.-based mass-crusade evangelist that Graham has helped. But his style may be too "flamboyant" for the Graham association, Martin said.

Among the Graham association's associate evangelists in the United States, 57-year-old Ralph S. Bell of Bellvue, Colo., an associate since 1965, appears to best fit the requirements of age and experience.

Leading evangelicals doubt anyone can replace Graham.

"I think it's impossible because there's only one Billy Graham, and when he's gone, he's gone," said the Rev. Billy Melvin.

Hollywood's compassion is limited for AIDS patients, critics say

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hollywood's brightest stars gather Sunday to raise more than $1 million for AIDS patients. Such compassion doesn't necessarily extend to the set.

Actors with the disease tend to conceal their illness from an industry still frightened by AIDS. Major studios have yet to make one movie about AIDS, and television has scarcely done better.

Thousands of actors — many well-known, like the late Brad Davis — can't disclose they are infected for fear of banishment.

"Brad just simply couldn't take the chance," said Susan Bluestein, the widow of the "Midnight Express" star. "He couldn't afford disclosure."

Davis, 41, died last Sunday from AIDS complications. His wife said he contracted the disease using drugs years before and learned he was sick in 1985. He also hid his illness from everyone but his family and a few friends.

"I make my money in an industry that professes to care very much about the fight against AIDS — that gives umpteen benefits and charity affairs with proceeds going to research and care," Davis wrote in a book proposal.

"But in actual fact, if an actor is even rumored to have HIV (the AIDS virus), he gets no support on an individual basis," he said.

The disparity between Hollywood's public charity and private squeamishness is glaring.

Sunday's Commitment to Life benefit scheduled appearances by Bette Midler, Carol Channing and Tyne Daly, among others. Scores of top film executives were expected to attend. Proceeds go to AIDS Project Los Angeles.

Hollywood companies, from Paramount Pictures to the Creative Artists Agency, donate money or facilities to AIDS organizations. MCA Inc. and 20th Century Fox are set to launch an industry-wide AIDS education program.

Elizabeth Glaser, wife of actor Paul Michael Glaser, raised millions for the Pediatric AIDS Foundation in part through the celebrity album "For Our Children," featuring such performers as Elton John and Bruce Springsteen.

"People were very eager to help and have been extremely generous," said Ms. Glaser, who is HIV-positive from a blood transfusion.

But, she said, "Why do most of the people who ask us for information, if they're infected, ask us to send it back in unmarked manila envelopes?"

And why the lack of AIDS movies?

"I find it strange that Hollywood hasn't taken more of a leadership role, especially since Hollywood has so many gays in it," said filmmaker Robert Hilferty, whose documentary "Stop the Church," about AIDS and the Roman Catholic Church, generated controversy.

An excuse commonly given is that AIDS movies are depressing and not commercially viable, filmmakers and AIDS activists say.

Yet "Longtime Companion," to be shown on public television Sept. 29, made money for Samuel Goldwyn Co. The 1985 Emmy-winner "An Early Frost" drew a large TV audience. "Common Threads: Stories From the Quilt" won an Oscar for best documentary feature in 1990.

"I certainly would not subscribe to the fact that you couldn't do a good film about AIDS — I would certainly think you could," said MCA President Sidney Sheinberg.

"I would hope that the answer (to a lack of films on AIDS) is that no one has seen a script that they really liked," said Sheinberg, who was to be honored at the Sunday show.

Yet Larry Kramer's acclaimed AIDS play, "The Normal Heart," has been stalled in Hollywood for months, he said, with no film prospects in sight.

"Barbra Streisand was going to make it, but then an assistant said to me, 'She may want to make a comedy next,'" Kramer said. "What does it take? There's no sense of urgency ... We're 10 years into a plague."

A spokesman for Miss Streisand had no comment.

Barry Diller, chairman of Fox Inc., said he was horrified to read of Davis' plight. He said he hoped the Fox and MCA education campaign would lessen Hollywood's trepidation about ill actors.

"We have an obligation to make absolutely certain that everyone knows that these fears are unfounded," Diller said. In time, he said, Hollywood will make movies about AIDS, adding that "it is very difficult to portray the subject."

Craig Lucas, author of "Longtime Companion," is less optimistic.

"I think the movie industry is not especially interested in dealing with anything that has anything to do with reality," he said.

School program rescues language from extinction

By Bruce Dunford
Associated Press Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — It's "two plus two equals four," in most classrooms here and across the nation, but in five public schools in Hawaii, students in selected classes are taught " 'elua me ka 'elua — 'eha."

The language is different, but the answer is the same.

From bell to bell, Hawaiian is the only language written, read or spoken — even on the playground.

About 260 students are learning their reading, writing and arithmetic in Hawaiian. English is not introduced until fifth grade.

As a group, Hawaiians have done poorly in school and are stuck on the lower rungs of Hawaii's social and economic ladder. Low self-esteem has been blamed.

The immersion program "promotes a positive self-concept and preserves the Hawaiian language and culture," said Richard Port, who oversees the program for the state Board of Education. "That translates into being able to achieve well in school and feel good about themselves."

By all accounts, the four-year-old program has been successful. This fall, new kindergarten classes will bring the total participation to 360. And by the year 2000, there could be 1,000 students enrolled at seven schools throughout the state, Port said.

Children who were in the pilot program started in 1987 at the Waiau School near Pearl City on Oahu and Keaukaha on Hawaii Island are entering fifth grade this fall and haven't heard a word of English in the classroom since their first few months in first grade.

"I think it's working wonderfully. It's really amazing to see all they learn in one year and in a language that was foreign to them when they started," said Keiki Kawai'ae'a, a kindergarten teacher at Paia Elementary School on the island of Maui.

The children, who are given the same curriculum required by the Department of Education for all other students, appear to excel — perhaps "because they have to tap a new part of their brain that they need to understand the language," said Mrs. Kawai'ae'a, who has two children in the program.

Some of her kindergarten graduates have as much fluency in Hawaiian as do university students in their fourth year of Hawaiian study, she said.

The jury is still out on the program's longterm effects, said Helen Slaughter of the University of Hawaii, who heads the program evaluation team.

"So far, we see more positive than negative," she said. "It's still relatively small and seems typical of other classes with some higher achievers and some who have been referred for special services."

Port believes in the program, but "we're walking on eggshells on this. ... Potentially, it's a controversial program. We're sensitive to that and that's why it's voluntary."

The program has had its detractors.

"This exclusive Hawaiian program usurps the influential formative learning years, the worst time in a child's life to retreat to the past," wrote Billie Beamer, former director of the Department of Hawaiian Home Lands.

A.A. Smyser, a Honolulu Star-Bulletin columnist, wondered whether teaching children only in Hawaiian might create a separate society or hurt the students in later opportunities for higher education and employment.

"Is this a first step toward a separated society like that of the French in Canada, the Catholics in Northern Ireland or the Indians in Fiji ... with the same tinderbox potential?" Smyser wrote.

In response, Kauanoe Kamana and her husband, William H. Wilson, educators who founded an earlier Hawaiian-language preschool, accused Smyser of making a "vicious and uninformed attack."

They wrote: "In actuality, the ethnic rebellions Mr. Smyser refers to have their origins in precisely what he is advocating — banning freedom of culture and/or religion for peoples in their own homelands."

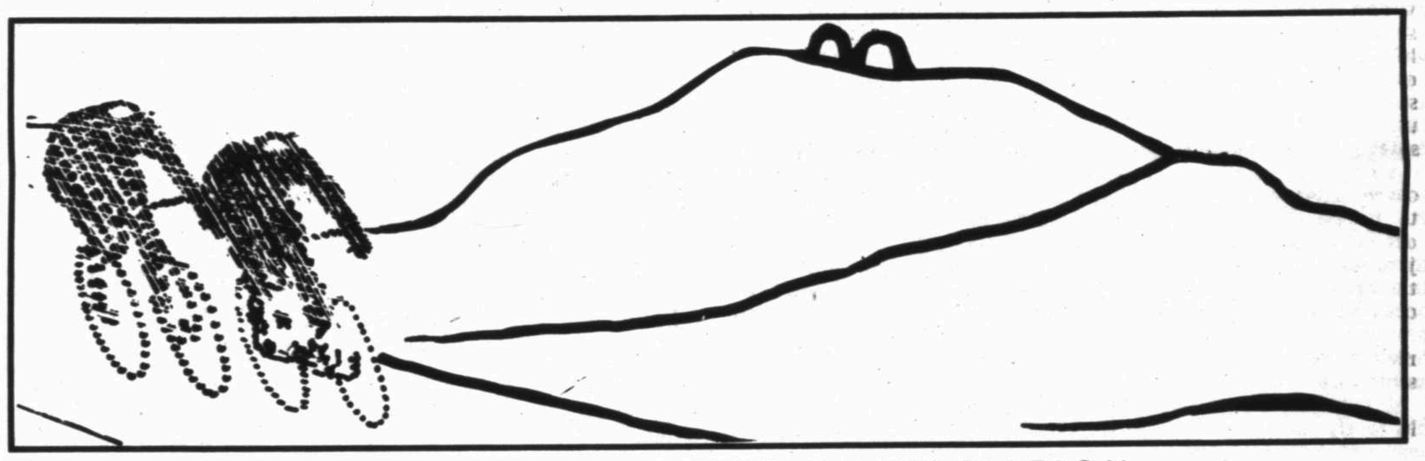

When the private Punana Leo Hawaiian Immersion Preschool was begun in 1984, there were only 30 children under 18 in all of Hawaii who could speak Hawaiian, Wilson said. By this fall, about 500 children under 10 will speak the language.

The program's biggest obstacles have been the lack of qualified teachers, a lack of translated texts and even a lack of Hawaiian words.

The oral Hawaiian language, evolving from the stone-age society first touched by western culture in 1778, had about 25,000 words, compared to standard English dictionaries, which have about 170,000.

Hawaiian language and studies experts at the University of Hawaii and the Department of Education have established a lexicon committee to develop Hawaiian words and phrases to meet contemporary needs.

Work has been completed on translating the popular "Charlotte's Web" into Hawaiian.

Mormons discover new hurdles

By Peter Steinfels
N.Y. Times News Service

SALT LAKE CITY — A century ago, the Mormon Church was widely viewed as a morally and politically dangerous sect. Today, it is widely seen as a conservative repository of old-fashioned values, an American success story.

One of the nation's fastest-growing major churches, it dispatches nearly 50,000 missionaries a year, many of them 19- and 20-year-olds, to spread its message in the United States and abroad.

There are now more Mormons than members of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) or the Episcopal Church, two pillars of the religious establishment. And no other major American religious group is so generously supported by its followers: By church law Mormons give up to 10 percent of their income to the church.

But thanks to its very success, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints confronts a whole new array of problems, some immediate and practical, some touching on the very nature of the faith.

Just as it approaches the safe harbor of national acceptance, it is being transformed again, this time into an international religion.

More Non-Americans.

By the year 2000, at the church's present rate of growth, only a minority of Mormons will be American. In 1960, the church had 1.7 million members, all but 200,000 in the United States. By 1990, its ranks had swollen to 7.7 million members, but with 3.4 million of them overseas, mostly in Latin America.

The church "is caught in a real bind" by its rapid international growth, said Michael Quinn, a Mormon historian.

"Typically the boast and pride of Mormon leadership has been that throughout the world the church is the same, not only in doctrine but even in the building of temples and chapels."

And even with tithing, the mandatory contribution from members, there are not funds to recreate the Mormon life and institutions of Salt Lake City in India and Africa, he said.

And the church is not always welcome overseas. In Chile, where 2 percent of the population is Mormon (as against 1.4 percent in the United States), 60 bombs were detonated last year in attacks on Mormon chapels by political groups who view Mormons as agents of U.S. imperialism.

In Peru, guerrillas assassinated three Mormon missionaries from that country. A church that was once reviled in the United States is now the recipient of "Yanqui go home" messages, even when local members are not Yankees.

At the same time, the church has barely shed its history of tension with American society.

The church had barely been founded by Joseph Smith in 1830 when persecution drove Mormons from New York to the Midwest, where Smith was lynched by an anti-Mormon mob in 1844, and then to Utah under the leadership of Brigham Young.

Until the church renounced its approval of polygamy in 1890, the practice sparked decades of cold war, and occasionally armed clashes, with the federal government.

Behind the battle lines, however, the church was instilling a code of sober living (no tobacco, alcohol, drugs or gambling), hard work, self-reliance, family stability and organizational efficiency. The church has produced a corps of individuals fluent in foreign languages, familiar with other cultures and trained in salesmanship.

The missionary effort has only one parallel among major Christian groups, that of the Jehovah's Witnesses. Mormonism's emphasis on family solidarity, expressed in the strict morality it preaches for this world and the continuation of the family unit in the afterlife, plays a crucial role in drawing people to the faith.

But the suspicions linger. Tightly governed by a small band of male elders whose decisions are usually made behind closed doors, the church discourages open debate or criticism.

Three weeks ago, for example, the highest church officials issued a formal rebuke of an August conference in Salt Lake City at which scholars examined problems of premarital sex, drug abuse and child abuse among Mormons and explored the changing meaning of church rituals.

The conference was sponsored by the monthly Sunstone, one of several independent journals where the swelling ranks of Mormon professionals and intellectuals try to explore their church's history, theology and policies. Church authorities have met these efforts with recurring threats to suspend the religious privileges of critics or bar them from church employment.

In 1985, this anxiety about maintaining its image enabled a trafficker in forgeries to sell church officials documents purporting to be from Joseph Smith's era that might have reflected badly on Mormonism's origins.

The scheme was exposed when the trafficker, Mark W. Hofmann, tried to kill his accomplices with bombs, murdering two people and nearly killing himself.

Inevitably, the church's political influence and economic power in Utah and surrounding states stirs rumors and criticism among Mormons as well as non-Mormons.

The church's opposition to the Equal Rights Amendment in the late 1970s stirred a feminist opposition within its ranks, and liberals began to view the church as part of the religious right supporting the Reagan administration on social issues.

Last month, after the Arizona Republic published a series of articles on the church's wealth, Richard Robertson, who oversaw the Phoenix paper's year-long investigation, said that the church's doctrines, its history of polygamy and what Robertson called a secretive "circle the wagons mentality" fostered in the church by past persecution had produced "curiosity and a lot of suspicion and rumors about what Mormons own, control and believe."

Robertson said that the investigators had begun with an expectation of finding "mischief" and misuse of funds and were "surprised not to find anything."

According to the series, the church collects $4.3 billion a year in tithes from its members and brings in another $400 million in revenue from more than 100 church-owned enterprises and extensive land-holdings.

Dr. Jan Shipps, a professor of religious studies at Indiana University in Indianapolis and a foremost non-Mormon scholar of the church's modern transformation, has noted that although Joseph Smith founded the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints as a "restored" form of Christianity, Mormonism quickly modeled itself on ancient Israel, with patriarchal leadership, a temple and an exodus to a promised land where a people distinguished by special dietary and ritual practices would be gathered.

But with the growth of a permanent Mormon "diaspora" throughout the United States and now of congregations in over 100 nations, Mormonism may have to recapitulate the kind of adjustments Christianity made during the early centuries when it spread from Jewish converts to Gentiles and from the Roman empire to the invading tribes and the rest of Europe.

In 1978, Spencer W. Kimball, then the church's President, announced a revelation revoking the church's longstanding ban on extending the priesthood, an office Mormonism grants to all worthy males over 12, to blacks.

The change was crucial both for Mormonism's acceptance in America and obviously for its expansion in Africa and in Latin American nations like Brazil with racially mixed populations.

More Inclusive Leadership

The church has only begun to incorporate non-American representatives into its top leadership. Since 1985 Ezra Taft Benson has been church's president, a lifetime office. Benson, secretary of agriculture under President Dwight D. Eisenhower, is now 92, and church leadership is largely in the hands of his first and second counselors, Gordon B. Hinckley and Thomas S. Monson.

All three are Americans. So are all members of the Council of the Twelve Apostles, the next highest level of church authority. Only at the next level, the First and Second Quorums of the Seventy, are there members born outside the United States: 21 out of 73.

Mormonism's origins, beliefs

By Peter Steinfels
N.Y. Times News Service

Joseph Smith, founder of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, came from a family steeped in folk religion and from an area of western New York swept by revival movements preaching that Christianity must be restored to a pristine condition as a necessary prelude to Christ's imminent Second Coming.

In 1830, Smith published the Book of Mormon, which he said he had translated from golden plates long buried in a hillside near Palmyra, N.Y., and temporarily placed in his possession by a heavenly messenger.

The book is a Bible-like account of God's dealings with ancient inhabitants of the Western Hemisphere who were said to stem from the Israelites and other Biblical peoples and to be the ancestors of the American Indians.

In the 1830s and 1840s, persecution forced Smith and his followers, who called themselves latter-day saints because they were restoring true Christianity in modern times, to move from New York to Ohio to Missouri to Illinois.

Smith's theocratic rule over his followers as well as growing awareness that he and other church leaders were practicing polygamy stirred violent conflicts with the non-Mormon population and among Mormons as well. In 1844 Smith was lynched by an anti-Mormon mob in Nauvoo, Ill.

The next phase of Mormon history centered in the Salt Lake, basin where Brigham Young led the majority of Mormons. By 1850, 60,000 had made the trek, including many converts from Britain and Scandinavia.

A minority who rejected polygamy eventually formed the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, a largely Midwestern group whose 250,000 current members are led from Independence, Mo., by Wallace Smith III, a descendant of Joseph Smith.

Basic to Mormonism is the belief that the Bible can be supplemented by modern revelations to Joseph Smith and his successors at the head of the church.

Distinctive Mormon doctrines include belief in a plurality of Gods. Father, Son and Holy Ghost are separate beings possessing tangible human-like bodies that are nonetheless "glorified" and "perfected."

The church also believes that humans can pass from a spiritual pre-existence through earthly life to a spirit world and then, after a bodily resurrection, to varying degrees of heavenly glory, including the possibility of ruling like gods over other planetary worlds. Marriage and the family unit are believed to endure into this future life.

Temple rituals also serve to extend baptism to those who have died and await resurrection and would have abided by church teachings if they had been able to learn of them in their lifetimes. The church sponsors extensive genealogical research so members can perform these proxy rituals for their ancestors.

Two years of missionary service are expected of dedicated young Mormon males, and many women now serve as well. Last year, the church baptized 331,000 converts.

Dyslexia might be brain, not language problem

By Sandra Blakeslee
N.Y. Times News Service

A new finding about dyslexia suggests that the disorder may not be a malfunction in the way people understand language but rather a brain abnormality that involves the sense of vision, and perhaps also hearing and touch.

A team of prominent brain researchers reported Saturday that studies of living dyslexic people, as well as autopsies of dyslexic brains, suggested that the basis of the condition might be a failure of the visual system's circuits to keep proper timing.

"This is the first observation that the visual system may be involved in dyslexia, and it is extremely important," said Dr. Drake Duane, an international authority on dyslexia and learning disorders at Arizona State University.

"It reinforces the idea that the nervous systems of those who are dyslexic are atypical."

Dyslexia, a broad term that includes a number of disorders affecting people's ability to read, is believed to affect 4 percent to 5 percent of the population, or some 12 million Americans.

The new finding gives theoretical support to one method of treating dyslexia, through the use of color filters in reading. If validated, it is also likely to suggest novel kinds of therapy, Duane said.

The finding could lead to methods of detecting dyslexia in infancy, and treatments could begin in very early childhood when the brain's circuitry is most capable of changing. This raises the hope that children with the abnormality will be capable of learning to read by the time they entered school.

The study's results, described in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, is based on a small number of study subjects and is therefore preliminary, said Dr. Margaret Livingstone, a Harvard neuroscientist who was principal author of the report.

"But we were so excited that we decided to not delay publication," she said in an telephone interview.

The research was carried out with two other Harvard researchers, Dr. Glenn Rosen and Dr. Frank Drislane.

"I am very excited about their results," said Dr. Paula Tallal, a professor at the Rutgers Center for Molecular and Behavioral Neurosciences.

She said it appeared to support the notion that early language problems, dyslexia and physical clumsiness were manifestations of the same basic brain disorder.

Most experts view dyslexia as purely a language problem, said Dr. Albert Galaburda, director of the Dyslexia Neuroanatomical Laboratory at Beth Israel Hospital in Boston and a co-author of the report.

In reading, dyslexics cannot break words down to their basic sounds, and they have lasting problems with the sound system of language, he said, even if their reading problems improve over time.

The role of vision in dyslexia was ignored, Galaburda said, in large part because ophthalmologists could find no differences between the eyes of good readers and bad readers.

This changed, he said, with the recent finding that the visual system in humans and other primates is composed of two major pathways.

One of these pathways, the magnocellular system, is composed of large cells that carry out fast processes. The pathway is used for seeing motion, stereoscopic vision, depth perception, low contrast and locating objects in space. It probably evolved to help animals see predators move through the night.

The second pathway, the parvocellular system, is composed of smaller cells that carry out slower processes. It specializes in color, detailed forms, high contrast and stationary images. It probably evolved to help primates see brightly colored fruit while swinging through the trees in broad daylight.

The question arose, Galaburda said: Could defects in the magno or parvo systems be involved in dyslexia?

Experimental psychologists in the United States and Australia had developed tests suggesting that there was some sluggishness in the visual systems of dyslexics, Dr. Livingstone said.

When two visual stimuli were presented in rapid succession, she said, dyslexics reported seeing only one image. Normal people saw both.

When the same stimuli were presented more slowly, she said, dyslexics saw both.

In the new study, five dyslexic and seven normal people were tested, Dr. Livingstone said. They were shown a 36-rectangle checkerboard on which the squares were reversed at different speeds under conditions of high and low contrast, the ratio of brightness between two objects.

At high contrast, when both the magno and parvo system should be responsive, the dyslexics showed a normal response to rapidly changing checkerboards, Dr. Livingstone said.

But at low contrast, when only the fast magno system should be responsive, she said, the dyslexics showed a greatly diminished response, suggesting that their magno system was sluggish.

Galaburda then performed autopsies on five dyslexic brains and five normal brains. Looking at a major visual relay station, he found that the parvocellular systems were similar in all brains.

But the magnocellular layers were more disorganized and the cell bodies appeared smaller in the dyslexic brains, he said. Overall, the magnocellular system was 27 percent smaller in this crucial area of the visual system.

Smaller cell bodies are likely to conduct impulses more slowly, Galaburda said.

Dr. Tallal said her research supported the idea that fast components of the auditory system were similarly impaired and that the problem was manifest in young children with language-learning problems.

Ninety-eight percent of language-impaired children also have trouble learning to read, she said, suggesting the problems are linked.

Dr. Tallal also found that children with language and reading impairments have a defect in their sense of touch and sometimes seem clumsy.

OAK EXTENSION TABLE

Made from oak and oak plywood, this extension table measures 64" long x 36" wide x 29" high and extends to 88" long with the leaf. Our complete plan includes 10 step-by-step photos and instructions, detailed diagrams, a materials list, cutting schedule and offers a source for the metal table slides used to extend the table if they're not available at your local store. No special tools are required. . . it's a project the amateur woodworker can construct at home.

Joie de Vivre

An island of calm, beauty and serenity — a refuge from a hectic world. That's what a home should be. And that's the prevailing feeling as the door opens to this delightful Polo Park home.

Welcome to a warm, comfortable home that's exquisitely decorated and highly liveable. A large, high-ceilinged living room and an enticing formal dining area can be seen from the entrance. The foyer walls are covered with a Laura Ashley-inspired paper — dark background with a bright, yet delicate, floral print. Foyer and hallway floors are a shiny white ceramic tile.

To the right of the entrance find the formal dining area. Rising from the floor to just above the chair railing, the foyer wallpaper is repeated. The rest of the walls are covered in a delightful pink, coordinated paper.

Facing the entrance is a splendid living room. Step on its cushiony champagne-colored carpet and admire the spectacular marble fireplace. To the right, light-colored wood built-in shelves and cabinets rise from the floor. Walls are painted a soft, alluring ecru all the way to the top of the 14-foot ceiling, which boasts molding all around. A ceiling fans whirrs gently overhead.

The sun streams into the living area through large windows; a glass door opens to patio area and yard. A 7-foot privacy fence insures seclusion. Come evening, the living and dining areas are bathed by soft, alluring indirect lighting.

A right turn from the entrance followed by a short walk down the hall leads to a bright, cheery kitchen. To the right is a large, sunlit breakfast area. Its walls are covered in a delicate floral print wallpaper with coordinated borders.

A left turn from the foyer leads to the bedrooms.

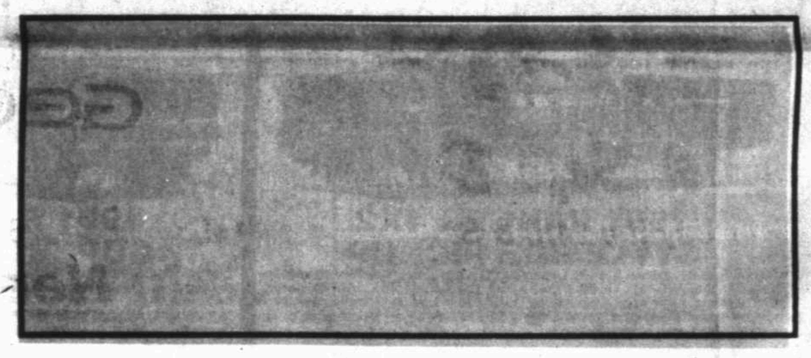

The large front bedroom is high-ceilinged. This sunny room, with a spacious walk-in closet, is ideal for children or guests. Connecting is a smaller bedroom, now used as a nursery. After that, find a large full bath. It's carpeted up to the splash area. Soft rose colors dominate.

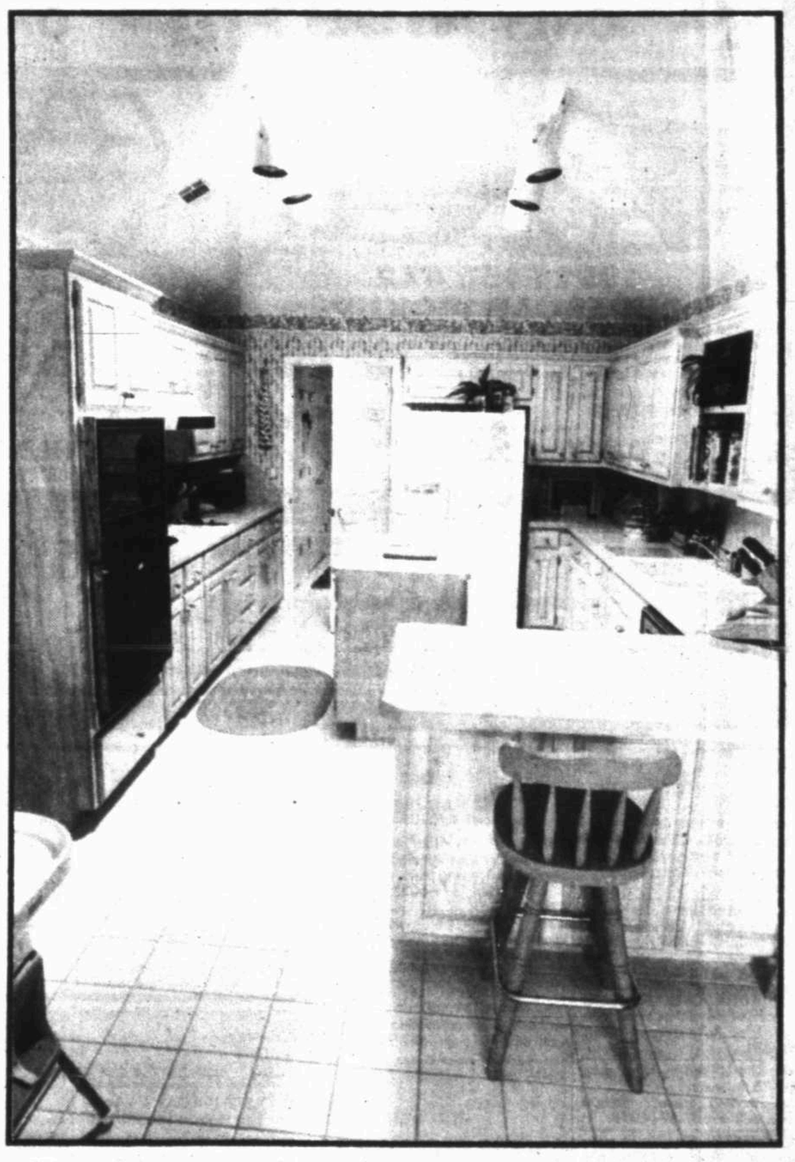

The master bedroom is huge. Windows are well-placed for furniture arrangement, a fan is centered in the ceiling. A door leads to the patio area and back yard.

The carpeted master bath has separate tub and shower areas and two separate dressing areas. It's wallpapered with a delightful small floral print.

Other amentities include white-washed woodwork and insulated windows throughout. Also, a security system, RO unit, water purifier and sprinkler system. The central air conditioning is upgraded.

Lone Star Chapter of CRS sets meeting

According to State Program Chairman Bonnie Cox, The Lone Star CRS (Certified Residential Specialists) will meet on Tuesday, Oct. 2 at Innonva, Greenway Plaza in Houston.

The first featured speaker, Rick DeLuca, is the 1991 Vice President/Treasurer of the Realtors National Marketing Institute and 1988 Residential Sales Council president. The afternoon speaker is C. Michael Brodie, Vice President/Treasurer of the Residential Sales Council.

"We are thrilled to present two of the industry's finest speakers for only the cost of lunch to the membership," Cox, a former Midland resident, said.

The cost of the luncheon is $12 for members, $37 for non-members. The event is underwritten by Gary Greebe/Better Homes and Gardens, Harbor Financial and David Weekly Homes.

Seating is limited and reservations for both members and non-members must be made by Sept. 25. For more information, call Kathy McCain at the Midland Board of Realtors, 682-9725.

Call the Doctor

Can you imagine an insurance agency that also offers golf lessons? What about a pastry shop that decides to manufacture and sell microscopes? Sounds a little ridiculous, doesn't it?

If the insurance agency understands rates, risks and policyholders, they will be quite successful. On the other hand, if they attempt to offer golf lessons, they will face stiff competition from the experienced golf "pro" who does that for a living.

As for a pastry shop that sells microscopes, well, you get the picture...To be successful at a business requires in-depth knowledge of a product and the market, dedication to serving the needs of customers, and experience.

Although their expertise clearly lies in another field, they decide to sell real estate on a "one-time" basis - as a "by owner".

Can you imagine the banker offering to do brain surgery as competently as a doctor, and expecting the same fee? It is highly likely that both the fee and the quality of the work will be lower than expected.

Selling real estate requires superior knowledge of such things as sale prices, list-to-sale ratios, zoning, income-to-debt ratios, discount points, and adjustable rate mortgages, combined with enthusiasm and a sensitivity to individual needs.

Selling a home at the best price, in the shortest possible time, requires education, experience, and a seven-day-a-week commitment to success. To a licensed professional, real estate is not a weekend diversion, but a way of life.

It is the polished expertise of the real estate professional which results in an early sale at a satisfying price. Get complete information before selling your home.

High cost of 'Aussie' housing surprises visiting realtors

Joanne Langston

Australia has a land mass almost as large as the United States (excluding Alaska) but a population of only 15,000,000 — half that of California. It is tremendously surprising, then, that land costs in the "country down under" are extremely high and comprise a disproportionate share of the cost of a home. For instance, In Queensland, on an average, the lot makes up 55 percent of the home's total value. To put this in perspective, consider that in Midland the cost of the lot usually represents only 10 to 20 percent of the total cost of a home.

It is not suprising, then, that home ownership is much more costly in Australia than here, and that the amenities offered are much fewer. Central air conditioning and heating, double ovens, walk-in closets, dishwashers and more than two baths or two garages are uncommon luxuries rarely found in even the more expensive homes. A riverview property that we visited in Brisbane had approximately 2500 square feet, none of the above amenities (not even carpeting) and had sold for $A 525,000 ($U 420,000) just 12 months before. Its counterpart similarly priced and in the same area, but without a river view, would probably include a dishwasher, a walk-in closet, at least in the master bedroom, carpeting, some central air (but no heating) and a pool.

There are, however, some "house and land packages" available on the outskirts of Brisbane for $A 100,000 ($US 80,000). First time home buyers are being encouraged to purchase "incomplete," that is without the "extras" of carpet or landscaping, then add these improvements later to increase the home's value.

Home mortgages are also more expensive than our own. During our visit, Australia was welcoming falling interest rates: 12.9 percent for variable rate loans that float monthly — down from 16½-17 percent just a year ago. "Fixed" rate mortgages are between 13.4 and 14.4 percent, but these loans are really not fixed, as they float after 6 month to 3 year intervals.

One the up-side of homeownership in Queensland is the fact that residential properties have appreciated in value 10 to 12 percent annually since purchase records have been kept.

One principal told me that a major portion of this firm's business consists of sales to investors who get a "9 percent return on their money in rents on the home plus the 10 percent annual appreciation whenever they decide to sell the property." Beats CDs! All in all, we found Australia to be a beautiful country, with lots of new construction, active downtown areas (even with a good percentage of vacancies) absolutely delightful people, and not as expensive in services, groceries and dining out as we had anticipated. The only downside of the trip was when our anticipated 23-hour return from Sidney became a 47-hour nightmare. Crisis followed crisis, first when a leaking lavatory endangered the plane's electrical system — four hours out — which meant four hours back under somewhat apprehensive conditions. Second, when the hotel that AA overnighted us in had a fire scare at 4 a.m. So much for sleep that night, as well as the next when we finally flew home.

One last note, many thanks to American Airlines for their hospitality, care and concern throughout the entire episode. The whole staff was absolutely wonderful — from flight attendants to baggage carriers. "You did great, mates!"

MOONLIGHTING!

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several distributorships which need to be filled with responsible individuals.

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current distributor force is already 90% adult and 10% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a distributor, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a distributor?

Depending on the size of the distributorship from $300 to $700 monthly! Some make even more!

How long does it take?

The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, distributors do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!

RESERVE YOUR DISTRIBUTORSHIP NOW!
APPLY TO:
CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT
MIDLAND REPORTER-TELEGRAM

Rig count

Racked pipe destined for TD. Rig counts showed little improvment this week.

Please see STORY/4C

Safety time

Twenty-five drillers and toolpushers of Sitton Drilling Co. were rewarded recently for their safety efforts with Rolex watches.

Frank Sitton said the watches were presented to show what a priority the company places on safety. "Safety is as important as anything we do." The employees were given a choice of a man or woman's Rolex, so they could wear it themselves or give it to their wives.

Other safety awards included: paid vacations, cash bonuses and gift certificates.

Sitton operates six rigs in the Lubbock area and employs 100. From July 1990 to August 1991, the company had only one lost time accident, which was a strained back.

Environment

The Petroleum Engineering Department of the University of Texas at Austin will offer to Permian Basin graduate students a course to address environmental issues facing the oil industry. Identical to a course being taught in Austin, the topics to be addressed are: sources of waste, environmental impacts of waste and the different methods oilfield waste can be minimized.

The course is being taught by Dr. John Reis at the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification. The course is taught Monday nights from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m.

P&P earnings

Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co. of Midland has reported a 115 percent increase in net income for the second quarter and a 67 percent increase for the first half of 1991 due primarily to the higher crude oil prices and increased oil and gas production, resulting from the purchase of Damson Oil Corp. assets.

Net income for $4.96 million for the quarter compared to $2.3 last year. Per share earnings for the period were 23 cents per share, up from 19 cents a year ago.

No position

A spokesman for the Independent Petroleum Association of America (IPAA) says it has not taken a position on a move to implement a major public relations campaign that would enhance the image of the oil industry. IPAA says it has not hired a public relations firm to study a check-off program that would be funded by an assessment of 2 cents per barrel on oil, as reported by the Reporter-Telegram in August.

Arco lists district managers

■ Following reorganization Arco has named managers for units and services in the Western District.

Staff Report

MIDLAND — Arco Oil and Gas Co. has named managers for its recently formed and expanded Western District located in Midland.

The announcement follows a corporate restructuring which resulted in the consolidation of Arco's Bakersfield district into the Midland organization.

As previously announced, J.K. (Ken) Thompson was appointed Manager of the Western District and a Senior Vice President of Arco Oil and Gas Company. Carl C. Smith was also appointed Vice President, Western District Exploration.

Managers for the three business units within the district are: Dan White, Larry Macicek, and John Morgan.

H.D. (Dan) White will manage the California Business Unit, with responsibility for Arco Oil and Gas Company's onshore and offshore producing operations in California. He will be located in Bakersfield.

Larry V. Macicek is manager of the Permian Business Unit, and his responsibility includes all Arco oil and gas producing operations in West Texas and Southeastern New Mexico plus $CO_2$ operations in Colorado.

John L. Morgan has been appointed Area Manager, Mid-Continent Business Unit. He is responsible for all of Arco's producing operations in Colorado, Wyoming, Oklahoma, Kansas, Michigan, Northwestern New Mexico, the Panhandle of Texas, and properties in North Texas along the Texas-Oklahoma border.

Meridian ups stake in Basin

■ Meridian will up its position in the Permian Basin by at least 50 percent with the purchase of Union Texas properties.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

When its acquisition of Union Texas Petroleum properties finals later this month, Meridian Oil Inc. will have substantially increased its position as a major player in the Permian Basin.

Union Texas announced earlier this month that Meridian would buy its onshore operations for an estimated $263 million. Many of those operations are in the Permian Basin.

"The Permian Basin is a major basin in the U.S. We have had a strong presence here since the 1980s and we plan to be an even stronger player in the Permian Basin," said Jim Buchanan, who directs Meridian operations in Midland.

Prior to 1985, Meridian had only a handful of employees and 150 barrels per day of production in the Basin. That was improved substantially in 1985 when the company bought Southland Royalty and production went to 40 mmcfd of gas and 9,800 bopd. In the process, Meridian's capital budget for the Basin

Petroleum accountants got start in Midland

While industry associations like the American Petroleum Institute (API) and Independent Petroleum Association of America (IPAA), look after the political welfare of the oil industry, it is (COPAS) Council of Petroleum Accountants Societies that looks after the accounting welfare of the industry.

Founded in Midland, this national organization with over 4,000 members celebrates its 30th anniversary this month.

The organization began as the Petroleum Accountants Society of the Permian Basin, headquartered in Midland.

As Midlander Stephen Castle, secretary-treasurer for Hanley Petroleum, explains, "Prior to COPAS' founding there were several groups operating around the U.S., and it was felt that it might be good for them to come together collectively." Castle is serving as COPAS president this year.

Currently COPAS has 4,000 members in 25 societies across the U.S. and in Canada, as well as limited members from Australia, New Zealand, England, Sweden, Finland and Indonesia.

COPAS has three major objectives:

■ Formulate and disseminate petroleum industry accounting practices, procedures and pronouncements through bulletins and interpretations.

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

■ Advance the capabilities of members through educational and professional development programs.

■ Provide a forum for exchange of information and ideas.

Castle notes that "Most people understand the Securities and Exchange Commission, and some have heard of the Federal Accounting Standards Board. We provide bulletins and interpretations like the FASB for oil and gas."

He said that COPAS has historically worked with such groups as the API to help develop standards for the industry, and now the group is expanding its relationships with other industry groups like IPAA, the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners association and the American Association of Petroleum Landmen.

He goes on to add that the majors have historically been involved in setting standards, but now COPAS is seeing increased influence from medium-sized

This is not the time for 'wait-and-see'

Pitts

In the past five years I have interviewed the chairman or president of practically every major oil company in America, and without exception they all sing the same song: "Technology is our future — the hope of a shrinking domestic industry," they harmonize.

While there is vision at the top for new oilpatch technology, getting it into the oilpatch is another tune.

The U.S. is the world leader in petroleum technology, but rest assured it has not been fast coming.

If it were not for horizontal drilling the U.S. rig count and the Texas rig count would be at even more disasterous levels.

The same can be said for the science of 3D seismic, which has put a whole new face on exploration and development, by allowing oil companies to get a three dimensional view of sub-surface geology.

It has flattened out the decline in the seismic land crew count, resulted in new exploration and development wells being drilled that would not have been drilled otherwise, and improved the success rate for finding oil and gas.

Now for the rest of the story. Both of these new technologies and the potential they bring for finding oil and gas have been around for more decades than anyone cares to know. Because of a few legitimate technical reasons coupled with typical oilpatch skepticism and inertia, it has taken far longer than it should have to bring these revolutionary techniques into the oil industry.

Ask any oilpatch manufacturer, inventor or salesman how easy it is to get new products and services into the market and you will hear horror stories of head-banging, hand-wringing and foot-dragging — of a painful, process, punctuated with too many: "We'll-wait-and-sees." In other words: "Come back when everyone else is doing it.

Sales resistance is common to all industries, but in the oilpatch it is legendary. For an industry of wildcatters that prides itself in taking risks, the U.S. oil industry plays it extremely close to the vest when it comes to taking a chance on new products and services — perhaps too close.

Other industries such as the computer and consumer electronics industry can get new technology off the board, manufactured, evaluated and on the shelf within a matter of months. Fashions change yearly in the clothing industry. But in the oil industry the gap between the time new technology is conceived and the time it gains wide acceptance in the field can be decades.

Why does so long? There are some logical reasons for this lag.

First, is the overwhelming amount of new technology coming down the pike. There is more than can be effectively evaluated at the field level. Most of it is expensive. And, there is no formal process for testing it.

Second, there is a problem of conformity. There are so many geological and producing variables that much of the new technology has to be evaluated almost on a well-to-well basis.

But perhaps the biggest reason new technology has a hard time getting into the oil industry, is the prevailing danger of career damage.

STAKE: Up for Meridian

has gone from $10 million in 1986 to $73 million in 1991.

Today in the Permian Basin, the company operates 1,200 wells, employs 250 throughout the Basin and has net production of 12,000 bopd and 130 mmcfd of natural gas. The acquisition of Union Texas properties could up Basin oil production at least 50 percent, says a Union Texas spokesman.

Permian Basin production already accounts for a lion-size share of Meridian's overall production which is 700 mmcfd of gas and 35,000 bopd overall, but the Union Texas acquisition could up Basin production by around 50 percent, according to a Union Texas spokesman.

It will certainly mean an increase in employees. Meridian currently employs 115 in Midland, and has recently moved into new office space at 3300 N. A Street to accommodate new employees. Jim Buchanan, Meridian vice president of regional operations in Midland, says the company has 100,000 feet of space, more than enough to accommodate employees that will be added with the purchase.

Union Texas employs 50 in the Permian Basin, with that number being evenly split between office personnel in Midland and field personnel throughout the Basin. Overall 275 are employed in Union Texas' onshore operations, with 130 of those employed in the Houston office. Meridian officials say they are not prepared to say how many of the Union Texas employees will be hired by Meridian in the Permian Basin or elsewhere.

"We are currently assessing what our needs will be, and I think we will have all Union Texas operations under our belt in as little as six months," said Richard Hebert, Meridian senior vice president of operations. "We have a well-organized acquisition team that knows how to assemble properties."

He noted that the time frame for determining employee needs would probably a lot sooner.

Randy Mundt, senior vice president of asset management and strategic planning, acknowledges that a significant percentage of the production purchased from Union Texas is in the Permian Basin and is concentrated in Andrews, Cochran and Terry counties.

Bill Brabham, vice president of communications and administration at Union Texas, adds that the properties being sold are located throughout the Permian Basin and include operated and non-operated properties. Among the major fields involved are the Wellman, Midland Farms, Slaughter, Levelland and Justice.

"Union Texas' gross operated production in the Permian Basin includes 6,500 bopd and 16 Mmcfd of gas," said Brabham. According to press reports, the sale is expected to increase Meridian's proved oil reserve base by 20 percent. At the end of 1990, Union Texas onshore reserves totaled 129 billion cubic feet of natural gas and 130 million barrels of crude oil.

Buchanan said Meridian was extremely pleased with the Union Texas purchase and expected it would include a great deal of upside potential.

"These properties have good value, they fit our operation geographically and strategically," said Buchanan.

He said Meridian's strategy was to buy properties and apply expertise developed by the company over the past four years to increase production. Some of the areas of technical expertise that have gained Meridian industry attention in recent years are: its coal seam operations, stimulation of tight sands, reservoir studies and horizontal drilling.

Meridian has been one of the most active horizontal drillers in the Permian Basin, and Buchanan said while the company had been encouraged by some of its horizontal drilling projects in the Permian Basin. It was too soon to know how big the potential for horizontal drilling might be. Also, he said it was too soon to know what kind of horizontal potential the Union Texas properties might hold.

COPAS: Tends to bottomline

companies and independents.

Castle credits this development to the fact that majors are increasingly turning their attention overseas and selling domestic properties to independents. This international move presents a challenge for accountants working for majors, because, as Castle noted, U.S. operations are subject to state and federal laws. But it's hard to write guidelines for working overseas because often overseas activities are done in conjunction with governments. "And it's hard to write guidelines or procedures for that."

The association's seven standing committees — Audit, Electronic Data Interchange (EDI), Education, Financial Reporting, Joint Interest, Revenue and Tax, are involved in a number of projects. The tax committee, for example, is working on a new tax guide entitled "Model Partnership Tax Agreement" that is designed to "provide language for special allocations due to tax law changes," according to Castle. He noted that the recent special session of the Texas Legislature made a number of changes in the franchise tax system.

The education committee is working on developing some training modules for the various accounting descriptions in oil and gas accounting, which Castle hopes will build into a certification program in the near future.

COPAS holds two national meetings each year, and a major topic at upcoming meetings is materials pricing, which has been the subject of much discussion and debate recently.

"Back in the 1970s, the problem was premium pricing. Operators couldn't get pipe and tubulars. Now, pipe and tubulars are in abundance and we have the problem of discounted prices," Castle explained. "Depending on a company's size, it can have considerable clout. Our goal is to get everyone on an even keel. We have a computerized system based on prices from the mill, but anyone can call a dealer and get a discount, which should be passed on to everyone. The operator is not supposed to make money off a non-operator."

Another issue facing petroleum accountants is the trend toward acquisition of reserves, rather than drilling for them. "In the 1970s, oil companies looked at getting reserves. Now, they're looking at the bottom line. There are no sacred cows, and everyone is looking at his partner. Everything's being scrutinized," said Castle.

He said the upswing in acquisition and divestiture activity is an area where the EDI committee can help. "When you make an acquisition, you take the data the former operator had and create your own data. They account for the property one way, you account for it another. Each company has its own internal procedure, and you have to decipher what they did and make it fit into your system. That's where EDI can be helpful."

For accountants, as with other industries, and consumers, the environment is also a big concern. "The environmental area is a minefield," stated Castle. "When you buy a property, you're liable for what happens once you take over operations. It could be running perfectly - no spills, no contamination. But suppose a problem does occur: You have to decide when the problem took place, whether it was when you were operator or if it was under the previous owner." He said new environmental laws, spurred by the 1989 Exxon Valdez oil spill and the Clean Air Act will present a challenge to accountants.

Also to be addressed by COPAS members is the issue of ethics, an issue also being confronted by politicians and government officials.

Castle is quick to point out that the oil industry is cyclical, and he believes it will be on the upswing again.

ARCO: Names new managers

(From 1E)

In other appointments, Michael D. Schall was named Operations and Technical Support Manager. He is responsible for providing technical staff support in the areas of drilling, speciality engineering, environmental and safety.

Thomas L. Holland has been appointed Land and External Operations Manager. He will manage all land and regulatory affairs activities performed by the Western District. He will also mange the External Operations Group which handles coowner operated properties.

Jerry B. Hays will become Business Manager for the Western District and will handle business and planning needs for the district.

Dale F. Dunn is Human Resources Manger for the Western District and will handle all staffing and related activities.

Ronald T. Sponberg will continue as Senior Counsel in Midland for the Western District, and Stephen M. Williams, will continue as Senior Counsel in Bakersfield for the Western District.

David M. Thomas was appointed Gas Marketing Supply Manager for the Western District, a position he has held in the Central District since 1989.

PITTS: No time for delay

(From 1E)

Geologists may be forgiven for dry holes. But, take a chance on new technology that fails and costs the company big dollars and heads can roll. When fingers are pointed, suddenly, no one remembers that the chairman of the board had a vision for expanded technology.

It is uncanny, how vision at the top becomes "business as usual" as it filters down through the bureucracy.

One result is the old "not-my-neck" syndrome. In government this attitude manifests itself as unending delay and bureaucratic obfusication. In industry it generally translates to "We'll wait and see."

Some service companies claim this bottle neck at the bottom is so severe that they can hardly recover R&D cost and that it has resulted in a disincentive to develop new products.

What is the solution? Certainly, there needs to be vision at the top, but there also needs to be a means of getting that vision to the field.

One notion making the rounds in the industry, that seems to have merit, is the creation of special departments or groups within oil companies that would do nothing but evaluate new products and services.

By nature of their dominance, resources and deep pockets, majors will have to lead the way with such an innovative program.

Such departments would not be penalized for trying things that did not work — only for not trying new things. For that reason they would need to be divorced somehow from typical channels.

Also, since technical evaluation requires both special expertise and a special attitude, these departments would need be staffed with positive, enthusiastic, forward-looking technical people who delight in making ideas fly rather than shooting them down. The most technically competent might not make the team.

These free-spirited groups would be charged with giving a fast, unbiased evaluation of all the ideas, processes, devices and gimmicks that may or may not help oil companies drill wells and produce oil cheaper.

Lord knows that with the plugging of tens of thousands of wells each year, disasterous rig counts and the flight of the major oil company dollars overseas, this is no time for technological bottlenecks and wait-and-see attitudes. This industry is looking very sick again, and doesn't have the time to "wait-and-see." Nothing short of an aggressive effort to get an abundance of dollar-saving, money-making technology into the market, can aid an ailing domestic oil industry.

55 GAL. - 80 GAL. - 180 GAL.

For the prevention of leakage and spills, SPILLGUARD SYSTEMS are available in three standard sizes to fit 55,80 and 180 gallon drums.
They are designed to hold the entire contents of the drum plus a 25% to 50% safety margin for protection. The body is 14 gauge steel and the triple welded end panels are extra heavy 10 gauge steel. The units are designed so that they may be easily tipped from their normal horizontal storage and use position to a vertical loading and unloading position.
A low center of gravity gives stability without sacrificing ground clearance. The drain plug is elevated for very easy access and removal of contained liquids. Space is provided for pumps to be mounted internally. Cutouts are provided for power cord entry and for the chemical pump output line. This provides protection, security, and contains any leaks or spills from the pump.

Oil companies can benefit from DOS.5

By Paul H. Pause'

Most oil and gas companies have the resources to take advantage of the newest PC technology. Many engineering and exploration departments are currently installing 486-based systems. Meanwhile, the 386- and 286-based systems they had been using are being distributed to other departments, where the increased speed and storage capacities will be much appreciated.

Pause

All of these departments, then, are perfect candidates to take advantage of the functions and features of DOS 5.0, a system that can manage memory significantly better.

A big improvement offered by DOS 5.0 is the way it uses memory. This will be especially important with many of the sophisticated, memory-intensive programs used in reservoir engineering, oil and gas database management, and exploration mapping, for example.

The way DOS now manages memory has also resulted in looking at our memory classifications in a slightly different, and, I think, more logical manner.

Most systems used in the oil industry these days come with at least 1Mb of memory. Random access memory (RAM) up to 1 Mb has been called conventional memory, even though DOS and our-"conventional" programs couldn't use anything above the first 640K. It makes more sense to refer to just that first 640K of RAM as conventional, or base, memory. The portion between 640K and 1Mb (1024K), we now call the upper memory block (UMB — sometimes called reserved memory — see below).

Any memory above 1Mb is still called extended memory. The first 64K of this range, between 1024K (1Mb) and 1088K is referred to as the high memory area (HMA).

If you have more than 1Mb of RAM, with DOS 5 you can now load most of the operating system into this high memory area just above the 1Mb boundary. First, load HIMEM.SYS, the high-memory manager, and then include the statement DOS = HIGH,UMB in your config.sys file. This can boost about 40K of DOS out of the valuable 640K area, leaving a program and data-file workspace of about 622K.

The region between 640K and 1Mb is traditionally reserved for video buffers and other input/output routines like disk controllers. On a 386 or 486 machine, DOS 5 can help manage this upper, or reserved, memory block area more efficiently, too. It does this through EMM386.EXE, its built-in expanded memory manager.

Using the DEVICEHIGH (for device drivers) and LOADHIGH (for memory-resident programs) statements in config.sys and autoexec.bat, you can then load device drivers and memory-resident programs (TSRs) into this upper memory area. This leaves still more conventional RAM available for running your application programs.

These are significant improvements to our operating system in this day and age of huge, RAM-hungry programs where every bit and byte of our base 640K is precious.

Please note — the advantages you may gain are dependent on the type of machine you're using and the amount of memory you have installed. On PC- and XT-type systems with 8088 or 8086 CPUs, you'll gain only a small amount of extra RAM, probably only 5K or so, because your machines are physically unable to access anything above 1Mb no matter what operating system you have. On a 286 machine with extended memory (more than 1Mb), you can load DOS into HMA, but you can't use EMM386 to load device drivers and TSRs into upper memory blocks. The real benefit belongs to 386 and 486 machines with at least 64K of extended memory. With extended memory to load DOS high, and expanded memory support from EMM386, you can gain a whopping chunk of real estate in base memory.

Fortunately, too, you won't have to worry about the details of setting all those memory specifications. The new install program determines the kind of system you're using, the amount of memory you have, etc., and automatically determines the optimum settings. Of course, you will probably have to do some fine-tuning to get everything to work just right with the other programs you're using, but this is still a big step forward.

The folks at Microsoft even realized that you might not like the new setup, so when you install DOS 5 it lets you create an UNINSTALL disk to restore your system to the way it was with your older DOS version. You'll probably want to keep the new one though, so all those old DOS files take up wasted space. DOS 5 has a cleanup utility called DELOLDOS ('delete old DOS') that searches for and removes your old DOS files painlessly. When it's finished, it even deletes ITSELF from your disk, since you'll never need to use it but once!

Exxon earmarks millions for cleaner fuels

By Thomas C. Hayes
N.Y. Times News Service

DALLAS — Exxon Corp. has become the latest refiner to announce plans to invest millions of dollars in new plants to produce an essential component of cleaner-burning fuel.

Analysts say the component, methyl tertiary butyl ether, could be in short supply for the next few years as tougher laws take effect to limit smog-related pollution, raising demand for cleaner fuels.

Exxon USA, a Houston-based subsidiary of the big oil company, said it expected to spend more than $100 million to build plants to make the compound, known as MTBE, at its three largest U.S. refineries.

Construction on the first plant is to begin this year at Exxon's refinery in Baton Rouge, La., with work on another planned for 1993 in Baytown, Texas.

Plans for a third plant, at Exxon's refinery in Benicia, Calif., north of San Francisco, are under study.

The Clean Air Act, passed by Congress in 1990, requires cleaner-burning gasoline to be sold beginning in the fall and winter next year in 41 metropolitan areas, including most of the nation's largest cities.

The anti-pollution standards for gasoline will be toughened again in 1995 and further in 2000.

Several large gasoline marketers, including ARCO, Shell and Exxon, began testing sales of cleaner-burning premium gasoline blends using MTBE more than a year ago.

The oil companies are depending on these reformulated blends to blunt campaigns by some environmentalists to restrict gasoline sales sharply in the years ahead.

"The Exxons of the world are trying to protect themselves from a shortage situation," said Urvan Sternfels, president of the National Petroleum Refiners Association, a trade group based in Washington. "There is a really serious question as to whether there is going to be enough oxygenates available to meet all of the new demand that we anticipate."

William I. Ludlow, vice president of DeWitt & Co., a consulting firm in Houston, said current supplies of MTBE appeared adequate to meet demand in the next few years, but could become tight when regulations are stiffened in 1995.

MTBE includes an oxygen molecule that permits more thorough combustion of fuel by engines and reduces carbon monoxide and other exhaust emissions.

The chemical compound had been used since the mid-1980s to raise octane levels in premium gasoline blends, but refiners have promoted it in the last few years as a way to reduce pollutants.

The Clean Air Act mandates higher oxygen levels in gasoline next year in areas where carbon dioxide pollution produces a brown haze during the winter months, especially in high-altitude areas like Denver.

MTBE and ethanol are considered the two most practical components available to refiners to raise oxygen levels to at least 2.7 percent of the gasoline mixture.

Aromatics like benzene and toluene, once used to raise octane levels, have been restricted because of concerns that they help to create smog and may contribute to cancer.

Sternfels of the refiners association said many refiners favored MTBE because ethanol was more costly and could not be blended into gasoline transported through pipelines.

Also, the building blocks of MTBE, the common chemical feedstocks isobutylene and methanol, can be easily supplied.

Total consumption of MTBE increased to 96,000 barrels a day last year, from 30,000 barrels a day in 1985, and will probably triple again to more than 300,000 barrels a day by 1995, said Joe Leonard, a petrochemical industry analyst at Chem Systems Inc., a consulting firm in Tarrytown, N.Y.

"As more and more gasolines are reformulated for more cleaner-burning characteristics, MTBE will go into all gasolines, not just premium blends," he said.

As recently as a year ago, few refiners produced their own MTBE; ARCO Chemical, which is 83 percent owned by ARCO Inc., accounted for 40 percent of the world's supply.

Since then, Chevron, Conoco, Shell, Unocal, Amerada Hess and Mobil have announced plans to build plants within existing refineries.

Most of these plants will produce fewer than 5,000 barrels of MTBE a day for use within the same gasoline refineries. But Tenneco Inc. and Phillips Petroleum are building plants to produce more than 10,000 barrels a day and plan to sell much of the output to other gasoline refiners.

With MTBE becoming a more important cost factor in gasoline output and future supplies uncertain, refiners want captive supplies, Sternfels said.

Exxon USA currently buys MTBE from a sister company, Exxon Chemical, and from other suppliers.

A spokesman for Exxon USA, Henry Beathard, said the company decided to build its new plants because "we can produce it more cheaply than we can purchase it."

U.S. oil companies set sights on Vietnam

By Dirk Beveridge

NEW YORK (AP) — The legacy of war is keeping America's oil companies out of Vietnam, but with foreign competitors moving in, U.S. industries are pressing for renewed ties that would allow exploration off the southeast Asian nation's coast.

Vietnam is off limits to the U.S. oil industry because of a long-standing trade embargo — a politically delicate obstacle because of speculation the Vietnamese may be holding U.S. prisoners of war.

Mobil Corp. said Monday it was talking with PetroVietnam, the Vietnamese state oil company, about exploration off the shore of Vietnam if the U.S. embargo against that nation is lifted. Exxon Corp., Amoco Corp. and Texaco Inc. have confirmed they are doing the same.

"There is sensitivity about some companies being painted as uncaring of our POW-MIAs, and that it could lead to some consumer backlash and some negative publicity," said Mark Van Fleet, Asia-Pacific director of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Nine large U.S. oil companies and six companies that are closely related to the oil industry are part of a group that enlisted the chamber to lobby to lift the embargo, Van Fleet said.

"As long as the embargo is on, they can't do anything. Their hands are tied, and they're watching their competitors making some investments there," said Van Fleet, who declined to name the companies.

The chamber believes business ties with Vietnam would help resolve the POW-MIA issues, while the embargo accomplishes nothing if the rest of the world does business with the Vietnam, Van Fleet said.

Oil companies from more than a dozen foreign countries, including France, which ruled Vietnam as a colony, are working in the offshore areas.

"It's a very sensitive issue because of the missing-in-action people," said one oil company executive who spoke on condition neither he nor his company be identified.

Mobil's talks were reported to the U.S. State and Treasury departments to ensure they observe U.S. policy and law, Mobil said in a statement from its headquarters in Fairfax, Va.

Parker acquires three rigs for Far East work

TULSA — Parker Drilling Co., has acquired three rigs from a Canadian drilling contractor to work in the Far East market.

Robert L. Parker Jr., president, said a Parker subsidiary purchased the SCR-electric rigs from Challenger International Services LTD and a subsidiary of the Calgary-based drilling contractor. The rigs will work in Pakistan and the Far East, Parker said.

"These all-electric, state-of-the-art rigs are an excellent addition of our Far East operations, said Parker. "That region is Parker's most active area of drilling activity and we are excited to expand operations in that part of the world," said Parker.

MEETINGS

SIPES to get history of Hanford CO2 project

Merritt

Mark Merritt will be the guest speaker at Wednesday's meeting of the Society of Independent Professional Earth Scientists. The meeting will be at Midland Country Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Merritt will present "A Case History of the Hanford San Andres Miscible CO2 Project." He is engineering supervior for Barbara Fasken of Fasken Oil and Ranch Interests.

A full-scale miscible CO2 project was implemented in Hanford field in July 1986. The field was discovered in 1977, unitized in 1984. Water injection begain in 1985. Unique aspects are CO2 injection after only one year of water injection, an independent operator, and modern log, core and pressure data.

Local IADC chapter to host PBPA executive

The Permian Basin chapter, International Association of Drilling Contractors, will meet Tuesday at the Petroleum Club. The meeting will begin at 5:30 p.m. with social hour, followed by dinner at 6:30 p.m.

Guest speaker will be Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Assocation.

Cost is $20 and reservations can be made by calling 561-8560 or 363-8180.

Conoco executive to discuss environment

Thoem

The environment will be the topic at the Sept. 25 meeting of the Permian Basin section, Society of Petroleum Engineers. The meeting will be at Ranchland Hills Country Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Terry L. Thoem will speak on "Protecting the Environment: An Industry Commitment." According to Thoem, the industry has a long history of sensitivity to environmental issues. "However," he notes, "we cannot rest on our accomplishments of the past. The public expects us to do more and we belive that there is ample opportunity for improvement in our performance."

Thoem is manager, safety, health and environment for Conoco Inc. in its exploration production, international division and is located in Houston.

Reservations should be made by Sept. 20 by calling 686-7329.

B.C. Canyon field topic for SEPM meeting

The Permian Basin section, Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists will meet Tuesday at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

The guest speaker will be Don Mozynski of Deminex U.S.A. Oil Co. He will speak on "B.C. Canyon Field, Howard County, Texas: An Ancient Analog to Modern Tropical Tower Karst Terrains."

Cost is $7 per person, and reservations should be made by calling 683-1573.

SEPM section issues call for papers

Staff Report

The Permian Basin section, Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists has issued a call for papers for the upcoming Spring 1992 field trip held by the society.

Papers are being sought for the Field Trip Guidebook, which will be entitled "Paleokarat, Karst Related Diagenesis, and Reservoir Development: Examples from Ordovician-Devonian Age Strata of West Texas and the Mid-Continent."

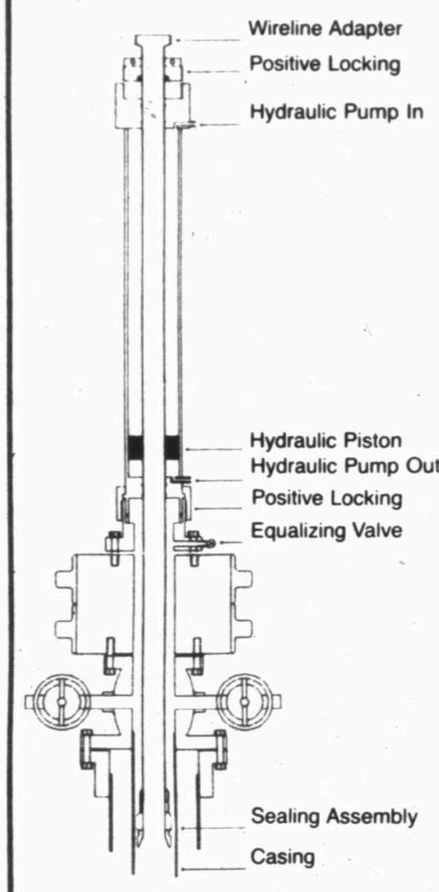

Deadline for manuscript submittal is Dec. 16, 1991. Details are available by calling Magell Candelaria at 688-5254, or SEPM at 683-1573.

Wellhead Isolation Tool

Safe ■ Simple ■ Cost Effective

Smith Energy Services now offers the industry's safest Wellhead Isolation Tools for both low and high pressure wellheads. They can be run safely on any well using any pumping service company.

OPERATOR USE

The Smith Energy Services' Wellhead Isolation Tools permit customers to stimulate through less expensive, low pressure wellheads to reduce cost, protect the wellhead tree from acid and abrasive fluids, and facilitates tree testing without wire line equipment — all with complete safety!

OPERATOR ADVANTAGES

- Safety increased with no exposed high-pressure seals
- Cost effective — saves valves, wellheads and BOPs
- Large openings for high pumping rates
- Wellhead Isolation Tool may be installed or removed at its maximum working pressure
- Permits wire line access through all casing tools
- Extended visible stroke allows positive location of seal assembly
- Positive mechanical and hydraulic locking devices

For more information contact your Smith Energy Services representative.

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

Wolfcamp strike pumps 252 barrels

Staff Report

CONOCO INC. has gained a Lower Wolfcamp (Permian) discovery in Glasscock County, just south of the unnamed Wolfcamp Lime strike, the No. 1 E.C. Books.

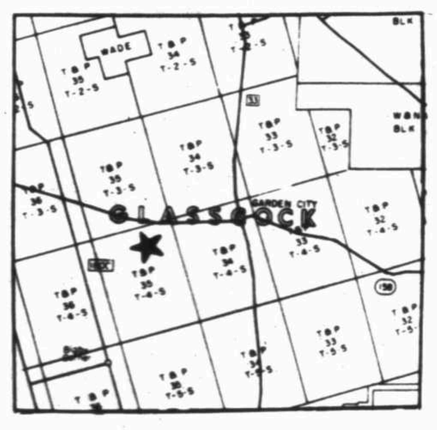

On potential test, the No. 2 E.C. Books pumped 252 barrels of 40.8 garvity crude and 380 Mcfd from perforations 8,451 to 8,529 ft. Gas-oil ratio is 1,508:1.

Drilled to 8k785 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 8,682 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,713 ft., include the Yates at 2,064 ft., San Andres at 3,364, Glorieta at 4,243, Upper Spraberry at 6,484, Dean at 7,880, and Wolfcamp at 8,431 ft. Pay was topped at 8,451 ft.

Conoco completed the No. 1 E.C. Books in March to pump 56 barrels of crude daily from perforations 8,418 to 8,493 ft.

Glasscock discovery

Conoco has completed a Lower Wolfcamp strike in Glasscock County, nine miles west of Garden City.

Upper Penn strike flows 11 barrels oil

Eddy County has gained an Upper Pennsylvanian discovery, north of the Red Hills field.

YATES PETROLEUM CORP. tested the No. 1 Wayfarer "AIY" State to flow 11 barrels of 44.8 gravity crude, 349 Mcfd and no water on a 16/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 500 psi. The well flowed from perforations 10,387 to 10,394 ft., which had been acidized with 1,500 gallons of 15 percent NeFe. Gas-oil ratio is 3,144:1.

Permitted as an 11,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 12,140 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, and plugged back to 11,065 ft.

On ground elevation of 3,322.6 ft., formation tops include the Salt at 307 ft., Base Salt at 1,286, Yates at 1,700, Queen at 2,688, Delaware Sand at 3,626, Bone Spring at 6,040, Wolfcamp at 9,552, Strawn at 10,640, Atoka at 10,984, Morrow at 11,296, Morrow Clastics at 11,654, and Lower Morrow at 11,900 ft. Pay was topped at 10,387 ft.

Anadarko Petroleum tests Delaware find

A Delaware discovery has been completed in Lea County, N.M., north of the Buffalo South field.

ANADARKO PETROLEUM CORP. finaled the No. 1 Exxon Federal to pump 36 barrels of crude, 94 barrels of water from perforations 5,492 to 7,415 ft.

Permitted as a 7,750 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 7,750 ft. and plugged back to 6,309 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 7,749 ft. Pay was topped at 5,492 ft.

Lea County field gains northern extender

The East Tristi Draw field of Lea County, N.M. has gained a northern extension as BETTIS, BOYLE & STOVALL complete activity in the area.

On potential test, the No. 1 State "20" flowed 15 barrels of 52 gravity crude, 600 Mcfd and 250 barrels of water on a 9/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 2,300 psi. The well flowed from perforations 14,495 to 14,505 ft.

Permitted as a 16,000 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 16,000 ft. and plugged back to 15,215 ft. A 7-5/8 inch liner was hung from 12,123 to 15,400 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 3,337.6 ft., include the Salt at 3,380 ft., Base Salt at 4,608, Delaware at 5,049, Canyon at 6,014, Bone Spring at 9,072, Wolfcamp at 14,172, Atoka at 14,400, and Morrow at 15,087 ft. Pay was topped at 14,495 ft.

Parker & Parsley sells gas unit interest

Parker & Parsley has agreed to sell its 3 percent interest in 13 gas wells in the Port Hudson Field Unit of East Baton Rouge Parish, La. for $16.4 million. P&P has also agreed to an option that would allow the buyers to purchase its remaining interest for approximately $2 million. The field is operated by Amoco.

Arch finals sale of oil, gas properties

FORT WORTH — Arch Petroleum, Inc. has finaled the previously announced sale of certain oil and gas properties to Plains Petroleum Operating Company, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Plains Petroleum Company, Lakewood, Colorado for approximately $17.3 million cash. The properties sold include interest in 193 producing wells in 19 fields located in the Permian Basin of West Texas and Southeastern New Mexico. The reservices attributable to the sale were less than 40% of Arch's total proved reserves as of October 31, 1990.

ANR Pipeline Co. to redeem shares

HOUSTON — ANR Pipeline Company, a subsidiary of The Coastal Corporation, has called for redemption on September 30, 1991, of 200,000 shares of its Cumlative Preferred Stock $2,675 series under sinking fund provisions for the series. There are 800,000 shares of the series currently outstanding.

NACE sets Albuquerque annual meet

ALBUQUERQUE — The National Association of Corrosion Engineers (NACE) will hold the 1991 South Central Region Conference in Albuquerque, NM, September 23-25, 1991. The conference, hosted by the Sandia Mountain Section of NACE, will be held at the Doubletree Hotel/Albuquerque and the Albuquerque Convention Center.

Exxon plans Gulf gas field development

NEW ORLEANS — With installation of a platform more than 600 feet high, Exxon Company, U.S.A. has taken the first step in a $500 million dollar investment program to develop two oil and gas fields in the Gulf of Mexico, according to Marshall Dickson, Exxon Offshore Division manager.

Amoco abondons tire, battery lines

CHICAGO — Amoco Oil has announced that it will withdraw from the business of marketing Atlas tires, batteries, and accessories in the first quarter of 1992.

Amoco is disbanding the TBA business unit because of its declining financial performance, said Daniel G. Beers, Amoco's TBA business manager. "In recent years, the unit has neither met corporate profitability standards nor shown potential for significant improvement."

Soviet-bound drilling rig makes stop in Odessa

Staff Report

A Parker Drilling rig bound for the Soviet Union first made a stopover in the Permian Basin.

The Tulsa-based company recently announced that it had sent over a third rig to be operated in Western Siberia oil fields by White Nights Joint Enterprise, a partnership of Anglo-Suisse (USSR) L.P., Phibro Energy, and Varyeganneftegaz.

Tim Colwell, director of public relations for Parker, explained that the rig was sent to Partech in Odessa, Parker's research and development and manufacturing center to be refurbished with an Arctic pad development drilling configuration. The rig left the Port of Houston the first of September, and is due to arrive in Saint Petersburg (formerly Leningrad) later in the month. It is expected to begin operations in its initial location in late October.

The rig, which was transferred from Parker's Rocky Mountain division, will join another Parker rig in the West Varyegan oil field. A third Parker rig is active in the nearby Tagrinsk oil field.

Colwell noted that the Odessa center has become the center for international operations and maintenance for Parker.

Asked if last month's attempted coup had given the company second thoughts about joint ventures in the Soviet Union, Colwell said no. He added that "Our operations people there are very confident (the venture) will continue. Our people saw a tank offloaded off a flatbed, and that's as close to the coup as they got."

A Jazz Classic

By Georgia Temple Todd

Trombonist George Masso returns to the Permian Basin Oct. 3-6 for the annual Midland Jazz Classic.

Trombonist George Masso is clear about the top priority in his life.

"The most important thing in my life is my family. I really enjoy them." Masso and his wife of 44 years, Louise, plan to move back to Rhode Island where their four children and seven grandchildren live, within two years.

"We made it through all the trials and tribulations of them growing up and all the problems that come along with raising children. And we still like each other. I think that's a lot to be thankful for."

At this point in his life, Masso said he only has one problem.

"I'm not home enough. In this business we travel very, very often."

Travel will bring Masso to the Permian Basin for the 15th annual Midland Jazz Classic Oct. 3-6 at the Holiday Inn Country Villa.

Mazzo traces his love for music to his parents, both of whom were musicians.

"My father was a trumpet player; and my mother was a pianist and organist. I heard music from the time I was born, I guess. And I got nothing but encouragement from my parents while I was growing up. I was very much affected by the music around me. They could see this; and that's why they encouraged me. I knew I loved it; and I knew that eventually I would do something with it."

Masso first took trombone lessons when he was about 10.

"One day I heard something on the radio. It was a trombone soloist. I just loved the sound of it; and I told my father I wanted to play trombone. He bought me a trombone and got me with a teacher. I took to it very easily."

During his senior year in high school, Masso worked with a professional band. When he graduated, he went on the road with the band. He was 17 years old.

"It was a thrill of a lifetime," Masso said, recalling the earlier days. "I was probably the youngest one in the band playing with a bunch of professionals; and it was certainly a wonderful learning experience. Traveling and playing with a big band, playing on the radio — it was just every young musician's dream; at least, a jazz musician's."

World War II interrupted his musical career in 1945. But, by the time he was sent overseas, the fighting was over.

"I spent a year and a half in the Army but even that turned out to be a blessing in disguise. I ended up in a marvelous band — actually and orchestra — in Germany." He eventually became a staff arranger for the 314th Army Service Force Band.

Please see TROMBONE/3F

'I was so young then. I was just all wrapped up in my music. I was spending just about all my waking hours either playing, or writing, and enjoying it very much.'

Jazz Classic celebrates 15th anniversary

Tickets are on sale for the 15th annual Midland Jazz Classic, set for Oct. 3-6 at the Holiday Inn Country Villa, 4300 W. Highway 80.

The annual event is presented by the Midland Jazz Association.

Musicians who have been invited to perform at this event include Clark Terry and Warren Vache, trumpet; Bill Watrous and George Masso, trombone; Scott Hamilton, Flip Phillips and Abe Most, reeds; Howard Alden, guitar; Paul Smith, Ralph Sutton and John Bunch, piano; Jack Lesberg, Milt Hilton and Monty Budwig, bass; and Jake Hanna, Jimmie Smith and Grady Tate, drums.

Admission to the Classic is $135 for a badge. The badge, which allows the bearer into all four performances, may be shared.

Classic hours are 8 p.m. to midnight Oct. 3 through Oct. 5 and 2 to 6 p.m. Oct. 6. For the Classic, smoking will be designated outside the ballroom in the foyer and domed area of the building.

In commemoration of the 15th anniversary of the Classic, the U.S. Postal service has designated a special, one-time only, pictorial cancellation for the event. Programs, envelopes, cards or other items can receive the special cancellation if first class postage is attached. The postal service will maintain a special booth at each performance.

For information or to purchase a badge for the Classic, call Bobby Crues at 683-5208 or Max Christensen at 682-5334, or write the Midland Jazz Association, P.O. Box 4045, Midland, Texas 79704.

San Angelo singer-songwriter releases record

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — What does a working mom in San Angelo have in common with Dolly Parton, Tanya Tucker and Reba McEntire?

Well, for San Angeloan Martha Hart, the answer may be a country and western singing career.

Hart has just released a single titled "I Need a Friend and a Lover" with Pleasure Records. The record is being played locally and at several radio stations and night clubs around the country.

Hart wrote both "I Need a Friend and a Lover" and the flipside, "I Close My Eyes," which is also being played at some radio stations.

When she's not writing and singing country music, Hart works as an office administrator for Edward D. Jones Investment Firm and takes care of her family. She and her husband David have lived in San Angelo for about 15 years and have two daughters, Angie, 20, and Jennifer, 16.

In addition to the two songs that have been released, Hart has written 48 other country and western tunes.

"Writing music is my outlet for expressing myself," she said. When she was younger she wrote poetry, now she writes country and western songs, Hart explained.

Not only has writing her own songs been an emotional outlet for Hart, but she also believes it will help her singing career.

"Writing your own music gives you a door open that singing someone else's song doesn't do," she said. "When you have your own material, you're more marketable."

Hart said she has very close family ties and draws inspiration from family members.

In fact, the inspiration for writing "I Need a Friend and a Lover" was her husband. The song describes "the age-old communication gap" between men and women in relationships, Hart said.

"I Close My Eyes" was also inspired by family closeness. "When I read about women in the (Persian Gulf) war leaving their families . . . the emotions, feelings surfaced," Hart said.

Hart plays the guitar to create the music for her songs. Even though she doesn't read music, she is able to pick up tunes by ear, she said.

Although she has always enjoyed music, her interest in singing really sparked when she was a teen-ager.

"My dad bought me a guitar when I was a sophomore in high school for $6," she said. "I've sung into my hairbrush since I was 16."

Hart said many of her family members sing, and she first started singing gospel music.

She wanted to start her singing career six or seven years ago, but didn't know what to do. "If you don't have ties, it's hard to get into" the recording business, she said. "It just happened."

And how it happened is quite unusual. A friend who worked for Hart's husband quit his position to go to Las Vegas and sing backup for Wayne Newton, Hart said. David Hart asked the man how he got the job. The man told him to contact a Dallas producer named Dick Michaels. Hart got in touch with Micheals and later went to sing for him.

Hart sang parts of about 25 of her original songs for Micheals. He was impressed and helped her choose two songs to put on a single. Then, Hart spent every weekend for the next three months recording the two songs with musicians and arrangers at the Southwest Sound Studio in Dallas.

The final recording was sent to several record companies, and Allen Newton of Pleasure Records in Whitney, Texas, was the first to offer Hart a contract. Hart recorded the songs again, and the single was released.

Although she often sings in San Angelo for civic groups, at banquets, and in churches, Hart has not performed in bars or nightclubs.

"The honky tonk scene doesn't go very well with raising a family," she said. "It's not a lifestyle that I wanted to raise my kids in."

Hart said she likes to write about everyday life and is concerned that so many songs focus on husbands cheating on their wives and people "hanging out" in bars.

"I would like to make music that cleans up the act of the whole music world" she said. "Family is the most important thing in my life. I would like to make music that even your kids could listen to."

Jackson hopes book will 'break the silence'

AP Laserphoto

Singer La Toya Jackson poses in her New York hotel room with her newly released book "La Toya Growing Up In The Jackson Family."

NEW YORK (AP) — It doesn't take long for La Toya Jackson to shatter the myth of her family as the talented, close-knit Jackson clan.

Forget the platinum albums. What La Toya Jackson wants to talk about these days is her claim that she and her siblings paid for their success by enduring emotional, physical and sexual abuse by their parents. Several of the nine children attempted suicide, she said.

Jackson, 35, the older sister of Michael and Janet, shifts in her chair in her Plaza Hotel suite. A hired bodyguard lurks outside. Her manager, Jack Gordon, whom she says she married in 1989 to protect herself from family kidnapping attempts, sits nearby.

She pauses as she recalls her childhood in Gary, Ind., before the Jacksons were famous.

"My sister Rebbie and I slept in the same sofabed," she recalled. "My father sexually abused Rebbie. I'd tremble down at the other end of the sofa. I wouldn't want to look. Every now and then my mother would come by and say, 'Not tonight, Joseph.' She needs her rest.'"

Both Jackson parents, Joseph and Katherine, strongly denied their daughter's allegations Tuesday, calling them "a bunch of lies." Both blamed Gordon, saying he's "brainwashed" La Toya.

La Toya said her sister called the police several times during their childhood because of the abuse, and also pleaded with their mother. She said Katherine Jackson ignored the problem, the family deterred the police and Rebbie left home at 16 to live with relatives.

After that, La Toya claims, her father began to sexually abuse her.

"It's very hard for me to talk about it," said Jackson, whose new book, "Growing Up in the Jackson Family" omits any mention of sexual abuse. She said the publishers were "worried."

Jackson said her father fondled her while the family lived in Indiana. The Jacksons moved to Southern California when La Toya was 12 years old.

"He only sexually abused me once in California," she said. "But he still kept up a lot of verbal abuse toward me."

"That's not true," her father said by telephone from Los Angeles. "La Toya is telling a bunch of lies. We never sexually abused her. We never punched her or any of the kids."

Symphony presents ballet tour

DALLAS — The Dallas Symphony Association is presenting the renowned ballet tour of Ekaterina Maximova and Vladimir Vasiliev, "Stars of the Bolshoi Ballet and Company" for three performances this month.

The Company will perform at Fair Park Music Hall at 8:15 p.m. Sept. 23 through 25. The program includes, among other selections, pas de deux from "The Sleeping Beauty," "Le Papillion" and "Don Quixote."

Principal dancers Vladimir Vasiliev and Ekaterina Maximova are husband and wife.

Both Maximova and Vasiliev have toured with the Bolshoi and throughout the world with leading ballet companies. They have appeared in performances on film, video and television.

Museum opens Franklin exhibit

ODESSA — An exhibit celebrating the contributions and accomplishments of Benjamin Franklin is on display at the Presidential Museum, 622 N. Lee St.

The exhibit is composed of the collected items of Dan Kalenak, augmented by items from the museum collection.

Kalenak presents a special commentary on Saturdays at 2:30 p.m.

No admission is charged. Also on display is the "Hail to the Chief" Exhibition, which is part of the Ector County Centennial Celebration.

For more information call the museum, 332-7123.

TROMBONE: Musicians top priority is his family

(From 1F)

"One of the members in that organization was Tony Bennett. I worked with him. We were very close friends; we still are. He's a very nice man — very sincere and extremely talented."

He was stationed at Bad Schwalbach, Germany, near Weisbaden. The 314th performed in the Wesibaden Opera House every Sunday. Its main responsibility was a weekly Armed Forces Network broadcast for GIs in the European Theater.

"I was so young then. I was just all wrapped up in my music. I was spending just about all my waking hours either playing, or writing, and enjoying it very much."

When Masso, who was engaged when he was sent to Germany, returned to the U.S., his top priority was getting married.

"I wasn't interested in traveling with any big bands until I got that (getting married) squared away," Masso said.

The responsibilities of a wife and child sent Masso traveling.

"I grabbed the chance to go on the road with the Jimmie Dorsey Orchestra. It was a pretty good job; and I was able to support my family. I also left as soon as I could. It was the tail end of the big band era, enthusiasm for big bands was waning."

Masso really wanted to be able to be home with his wife and child. So, less than a year later, he went to New York City where he got a job at the Latin Quarter Supper Club.

"That lasted about a year. I quit the Latin Quarter because neither my wife nor I were that happy living in New York. I guess we were basically small town people. So we moved back to Rhode Island, where we're both from."

Masso went to Boston University on the GI Bill and earned a degree in music education. He spent 11 years teaching in Rhode Island public schools and the next seven teaching at the University of Connecticut at Storrs.

"My situation was unique. There was a high school that was part of the Department of Education at the University of Connecticut. I did most of my teaching there, but I did teach the university students in music education. I was like a liaison between the high school and the university. I would have a lot of the students from the university come to the high school to observe what was going on and present short lessons now and then."

During those 18 years of his life, he lived in Rhode Island.

"It was a nice life. I was able to spend a lot of time with the children."

All of Masso's children played musical instruments when they were growing up, but none work as professional musicians.

"My son was quite a good trombone player, but he doesn't work at it. It's an avocation with him. Our youngest daughter is a good flute player, but she's busy raising a family."

In 1973, after his children were grown, Masso took a year's leave of absence to become involved in performing again.

"I did this with much encouragement from Bobby Hackett, who was a great trumpet player. He's dead now, but he was very, very well known in the jazz circles.

"We were friends for a long time. We would meet often, and he would always say to me, 'Why don't you give up all that security and come out and scuffle with the rest of us,' " Masso said recalling the conversations he used to have with Hackett.

"With his help some wonderful things happened to me that year I was on leave of absence," Masso said. He signed on with the Benny Goodman Sextet about a month after his leave of absence began, on Hackett's recommendation .

"It was a wonderful experience. Benny was the King of Swing. I learned a great deal just playing with him; and I met a lot of wonderful players and people. This experience certainly helped to further my career."

As for teaching, "I never went back. A lot of my colleagues thought I was crazy. I gave up tenure, which means so much to so many people, but I just felt that I wanted to do it.

"I came to the conclusion that no decision has to be final. If it worked fine, and if it didn't, then I would knock on doors again and go back into teaching or whatever. But, it never became necessary."

In addition to working with Goodman off and on until his death, in 1975, Masso joined "The World's Greatest Jazz Band of Yank Lawson and Bob Haggart and performed with the Bobby Hackett Quintet. Today, he still works with Lawson and Haggart.

In late 1976, Masso again moved to New York City.

"I began working as a free-lance performer — did jazz things, some studio work, television and radio commercials, played on some movie backgrounds and did some society work. I still do all this."

Masso has recorded extensively as a soloist especially on the World Jazz and Famous Door labels. He has participated in numerous U.S. jazz festivals including Newport as well as the Grande Parade du Jazz in Nice, France; Holland's North Sea Jazz Festival and the Bern Jazz Festival in Switzerland.

His work has appeared on several soundtracks including as a member of the jazz band in Woody Allen's "Crimes and Misdemeanors."

"It was kind of thrilling to be a part of that. When you see the jazz band, you will see different players than the ones who did the recording. That's because we were not available when they wanted to do the filming."

He regrets not having enough time to write music.

"I'm busy playing. I hope that in the very near future I will have some time to do some very serious writing in the concert idiom as well as the jazz. I do have some publications of chamber works and solo pieces written in the concert idiom. I love the writing because it's creative."

When he looks back over his career, both as a teacher and as a performer, Masso is grateful to his colleagues and the people he has met in the music business.

"I think we all share a kind of sensitivity because we're in the arts. I think this sensitivity carries over into our personal lives and into our relationships; and I think we're sensitive to each other."

He sees a need for music educators to focus their attention on developing consumers of music.

"So often we get involved in developing a band, a chorus and a musical organization; and we don't spend enough time with the lay person who is going to be out there going to concerts, being the consumer. I wish the music educators would spend a great deal of time in the general classroom on the aesthetics — helping people to listen to music and to be actively involved as listeners."

Masso works in New York City, but he doesn't live there anymore.

"I did live in the City when I first came in, but we moved out in the suburbs seven and a half years ago. We like it much better. I'm close enough where I can get in and out of the city very easily. Yet the lifestyles are so different. It's very provincial where I live. You'd be surprised. It's a well-kept secret, a small village on the Hudson River. It's like having the best of both worlds."

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

■ Diamond Rio presents concert

Diamond Rio performs a concert and dance Sept. 24 for the American Collegiate Talent Showcase at Midland Center, downtown. Special guest will be Westwind. Tickets are $10 in advance and $12 at the door. They may be purchased at Wells Boots and Luskeys Western Store. The event is sponsored by KNFM Radio and KMID TV.

■ Artists opens show

Midland Woman's Club will feature Midlander Jean Mothershead as September's artist.

Mothershead

Her show consists of watercolors completed in the last four years. Portrayed in photo-realistic style, her works are mainly traditional subjects such as flowers, still lifes, landscapes and animals.

Ms. Mothershead majored in studio art at The University of Texas at Austin and more recently has studied painting and watercolor under Warren Taylor's instruction at Midland College. Some of her work appeared in the juried show this spring with the Midland Arts Association at the Museum of the Southwest.

The exhibit may be seen Monday through Friday at the Midland Woman's Club, Hogan Park, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

■ Price to guest speak

Pam Price is the guest speaker for the Sept. 24 meeting of Midland Arts Association.

Mrs. Price is professor of art and acting director of Humanities and Fine Arts at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin. She will show slides of her new works in computer art, figurative works on canvas and will cast paper.

Of her work, Mrs. Price says, "My ideas come from a wide range of interests but primarily center on animals. Even my figurative work involves animals of some type.

The meeting will be held at 7 p.m. Sept. 24 in Room 180, Fine Arts Building, Midland College. The meeting is open to the public.

Your Horoscope

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You are on more solid emotional ground now. Set your own pace this fall. Although you will be drawn to projects involving drama and art in December, January will find you involved in humanitarian causes. An older person plays an important role in a career choice you make in early 1992. An important domestic adjustment takes place in the spring. A change of residence or employment is likely before next summer.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: humorist Robert Benchley, director Oliver Stone, actor Merlin Olsen, pianist Bobby Short.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Certain restrictions should be lifted soon. However, you will still be held to a promise. Fulfill your obligations with good grace. Go on a shopping expedition and refurbish your wardrobe.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be very careful when handling important transactions. Other people will be quick to take advantage of any mistakes. New acquaintances help you see yourself in a different light.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): "Friends" who are interested mainly in your social status or financial worth should not be trusted too far. Cultivate people who are reliable. Aerobics or cycling will help you develop greater stamina.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): It will make you feel good to get caught up on your letter-writing or bookkeeping. A loved one makes a special request. Spend the evening hours the way you wish. Busy days lie ahead.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take the initiative in a romantic relationship but avoid sounding overly emotional. An ultimatum will backfire. Any doubts may be the product of a too-lively imagination. Have more faith.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Strengthening your professional alliances and intimate ties will have a beneficial effect on your finances. Give others a strong incentive for following your lead.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Good companions and amusing pastimes should be yours today. Do not allow your duties to spoil your pleasure. Sharing a delightful secret with that special person will draw you closer together.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You need to be very circumspect during the next five days. Avoid dwelling on what could go wrong with a business deal. Spending more time with small fry will bring new rapport.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emphasize moderation in everything you do and say. Diplomacy helps you handle a difficult domestic situation. Family members are loyal and really do have your best interests at heart.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Something that has been a strong source of concern will disappear. You enjoy greater freedom of thought and action. Romance thrives on generosity. Share the spotlight with your mate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Domestic harmony may be threatened if you act unusually secretive or seem to lack understanding. Reject unfounded suspicions. A fun-loving companion makes you feel better about things.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Those who truly love each other should reconcile without further delay. Do not let false pride prevent you from finding true happiness. Feel free to be more expressive with your loved ones.

This deal, played many years ago by the late Lee Hazen in the Masters Individual, reminds us of the story of a foreigner who arrived at Kennedy Airport and helped a lady who was struggling with her bags. "Why are you being so good to me?" she asked. In his best English the samaritan replied: "Madam, I am good for nothing."

Hazen picked up one of the best hands he was to hold in a long lifetime of bridge only to hear the dealer preempt. When North showed some values in response to South's cue-bid, South proceeded to slam via the quickest route.

West led the ace of hearts, and dummy was a great disappointment. The king-queen of hearts were, to all intents and purposes, completely useless. There was not even an entry to the table for the trump finesse.

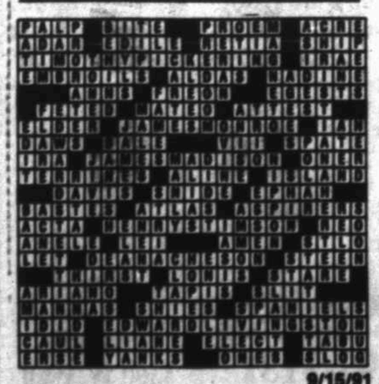

However, West continued with a heart, and declarer not only was able to discard a club on the heart king, but found himself on the table for a trump finesse. Hazen duly led the nine of spades, but paused to think before committing to the finesse.

West was an expert defender who had to know that Hazen would never have leaped to slam holding two fast heart losers. Therefore, there was no way for declarer to get to dummy to take the trump finesse. Why, then, had West so conveniently provided an entry to the board?

The obvious answer was that West was being good for nothing. If the defender wanted declarer to be able to take the spade finesse, it could not be in declarer's interests to be accommodating! So Hazen spurned the finesse, shot up with the ace of spades and landed the slam when the king came tumbling down.

Band claims they are true rock rebels

By Jon Pareles
N.Y.Times News Service

A family of screeches lives in Axl Rose's throat. One sounds like a chainsaw hitting a railroad spike; another slides and catches like a car alarm on a deserted street; another yowls like a tomcat locked out of a fish store. There's a ratchety quaver, a narrow-eyed low growl, a strangled shriek, a decadent cackle.

His voice, the voice of Guns 'n' Roses, is never pretty or endearing; it's a constant irritant. The band would rather stick in the craw than tickle the ear.

From the beginning, Guns 'n' Roses have been a skillful band with a nasty, often stupid attitude. Their unvarnished spite has paid off handsomely; although Guns 'n' Roses have only released one full-length album until now, they may well be the world's most popular rock band.

Violent incidents, confessions of drug use and vicious song lyrics have only convinced fans that Guns 'n' Roses are true rock-and-roll rebels.

The way their songs tell it, it's Guns 'n' Roses against the world on "Use Your Illusion I" and "Use Your Illusion II" (Geffen GEFD 24415 and 24420; all three formats), separate albums the band is releasing simultaneously. Rose, the group's main lyricist, has acted as a generation's voice of male resentment; his howl speaks for millions of listeners' free-floating anger. The band's first album, "Appetite for Destruction," has sold 14 million copies since its release in 1987; a stopgap EP released in 1988, "G 'n' R Lies," sold six million copies.

Over the last three years, Guns 'n' Roses have toured, appeared constantly on MTV and got themselves in well-publicized troubles. By barely managing to avoid self-destruction, they have become legendary — the band that defied every sober platitude of the 1980s, though they cleaned up slightly for the 1990s.

Rose tries to be more mature on the new albums. "These last four years of madness sure put me straight," he sings in "14 Years." But he still does his old job with glee. As the guitarists Izzy Stradlin and Slash knock out hard-rock riffs, Rose snarls the obvious expletives or lines like "Stay away from the bad side of me," "I got no more patience" and, over the sound of a cheering audience, "I'd like to crush your head tight in my vice" (sic).

Sometimes he's defensive, sometimes he's self-righteous. Either way, he turns confusion into confrontation. Finishing off the second album, a half-serious rap called "My World" describes his world as "a sociopsychotic state of bliss."

Guns 'n' Roses have nursed a lot of grudges since 1987, and they vent them all in the two-and-a-half hours of music that pack the two new albums. They lash out at the press, the neighbors, governments and, in song after song, rapacious women. Yet "Use Your Illusion" I and II do more than shake a fist at the world.

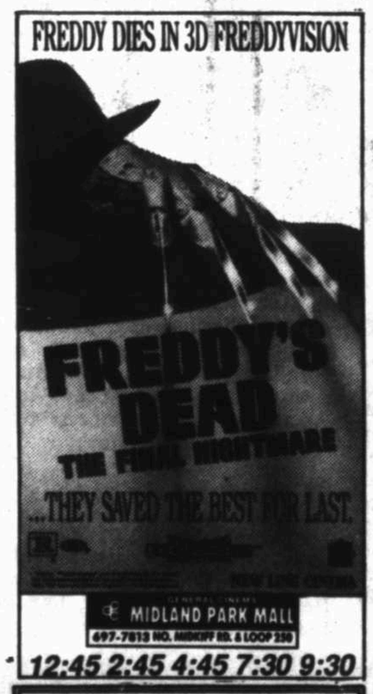

The music is brash and confident, but the lyrics aren't always so sure of themselves; they register doubt and admit to mistakes, veering from accusation to confession to self-pity to bluster. Often, they suggest an honest struggle to understand the "four years of madness," even if the conclusion is that the band has been persecuted.

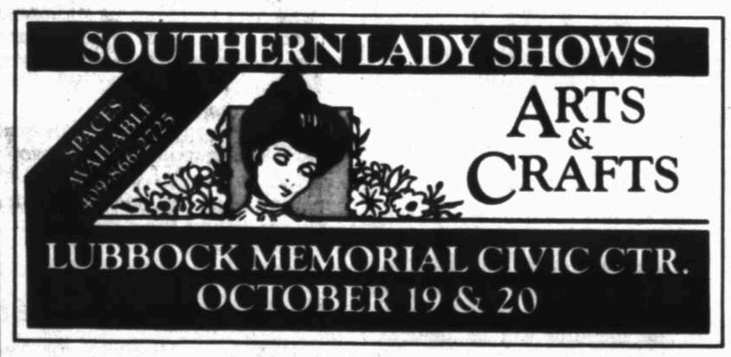

Reality is a little different. MTV, radio stations, Geffen Records, the makers of "Terminator 2," arenas around the world and virtually every place that sells recordings are eagerly coddling the band. That doesn't prevent Guns 'n' Roses from feeling confused, abused, defensive and defiant.

There's a fine line between rebelliousness and self-indulgence. During the band's current tour, which resumes in mid-October, Rose has started shows two hours late, ranted on stage about his perceived enemies, inadvertently sparked a riot in St. Louis by cutting a show short, and intimidated the Los Angeles Police Department out of giving his chauffeur a traffic ticket by threatening to cancel a concert.

For all their supposed iconoclasm, Guns 'n' Roses have played along with MTV, lately with a live performance and a contest giving away Rose's former apartment. And for a band professing "we built a world out of anarchy," it is virtually paranoid about controlling its image.

One reason Rose stopped the St. Louis concert was that he spotted an unauthorized camera in the audience. And early this year the band demanded that interviewers sign a contract that gave them copyright ownership and approval of whatever was published.

SOUTH LAKE TAHOE, Calif. — Perhaps one of the best kept secrets in travel is Lake Tahoe's South Shore during summer and fall. Although well-known for its winter ski resorts, not as many visitors have discovered the beauty of this area before the ground turns white. But that fact is slowly changing.

Generally, there are fewer visitors this time of year, making it much easier to secure hotel, rental car, dinner and show reservations. However, don't be too slow deciding what to do. Reservations for many activities do fill up quickly for some of the more popular shows and restaurants, and some rental car agencies exhaust their supply of cars. Hotel reservations on weekends, particularly Saturdays, can be hard to come by, but visitors during the week shouldn't have a problem finding a place to stay, and often less expensively.

No matter what time of year, Mark Twain may have expressed the beauty of the area best when he referred to it as "the fairest picture the whole earth affords."

This may not be true for those who have had the opportunity to see the whole world, but it is one of the most impressive sites that North America holds.

As there are no direct commercial flights into the Lake Tahoe area, commercial flights fly into Reno-Cannon International Airport, just an hour's drive from Lake Tahoe. There is a shuttle bus that takes visitors from Reno to the South Shore, but many people have said that the numerous stops the bus must make before South Shore visitors reach their final destinations makes renting a car a better option.

From the airport, the quickest automobile route to the South Shore of Lake Tahoe is via Hwy. 395 to Carson City and U.S. 50 to just past the stateline. However, some prefer to take a little longer drive (approximately 30 minutes longer, depending on how many photographing and viewing opportunities you take time

Ladies association begins fall season

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

The Ladies Association of Ranchland Hills Country Club opened its fall season recently with a luncheon.

McKnight-Harrison

The program, entitled "Fall Fashions of 1991," was presented by Lou Peters of Lou's Ladies Fashions. In style this year are slack suits, double breasted suits and quilted and shirred jackets, featuring fabrics of rayon, suede cloth and blends of rayon, poly, cotton and wool. Walking shorts are stylish and hemlines vary, depending on the wearer's preference.

Models included Florence (Mrs. Harold) Clark, Nancy Gill, Gloria (Mrs. George) Eng, Jane (Mrs. T.E.) Gill, Laura (Mrs. Tom) Klauss, Betty (Mrs. Wylie) Basham, Kelly Chesson and Katherine (Mrs. Harold) Stewart.

Confetti dressed Gerbera mums decorated the luncheon tables and other focal points in the clubroom.

Among those spotted in the crowd were Manetta Heckathorne, Anne Getz, Carol DePaul, Kay Murphy, Cathy (Mrs. Arch) Lair, Mary Jo Drury and Dona (Mrs. Ted) Triplitt.

SALLY AND MARTIN MOGFORD celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary with an Inland Passage Alaskan Cruise on the Holland-American Lines ship, the Noordam.

Sally described their week's cruise in one word, "incredible." The awesome sights included many forms of wildlife, the humpbacked whales at play and glaciers as far as the eye could see.

Their cruise began and ended in Vancouver, Canada, with stops at Ketchikan, Juneau, Skagway and Sitka, Alaska's first Russian settlement.

Their ship maneuvered up Lynn Canal, where the famed Alaskan King Crab are found. Most exciting, Sally says, was a flight in a six-seater Piper over the Juneau Icecap and down Mendenhall Glacier. They then enjoyed the sights of Glacier Bay.

The couple continued their trip to Seattle, Wash., to visit family members and then to the resort community of Rockaway Beach, Ore. From there, they explored the coastal villages and the many art galleries and restaurants in the area.

TWENTY-THREE PERSONS recently enjoyed the annual Santa Fe Opera Trip sponsored by the Music Ministry of Midland's First United Methodist Church.

Tour leaders were Brad and Jane Kisner, directors of Music Ministries at First Methodist. Other Midlanders making the trip included Betty Barnes, Joyce Brickey, Beverly (Mrs. Neal) Buttram, Margaret Cerf, Ruth (Mrs. Aubrey) Culley, Aida Dunlap, Billie and Louis Halstead, Marilyn (Mrs. Bruno) Hanson, Marian Mussett, Jane (Mrs. Eddie) Schulte, Ruth (Mrs. Joe) Thompson, Jane and Bob Ward and Mary White.

Joining the group were Jane Kisner's parents, Sara and Gordon Collins of Fort Wayne, Ind.; Brad's parents, Tess and Bob Gregory of Enid, Okla.; Ruth Thompson's sister, Nell (Mrs. Joe) Huff of Evergreen, Colo., and the Wards' daughter, Carol Ward of Dallas.

The group stayed at the historic St. Francis Hotel, located one block from the plaza and enjoyed dining at many famous eateries, including the Pink Adobe, La Casa Sena, La Tertulla, Pasqual's, The Ore House and Anthony's.

The unique shops and galleries of New Mexico's capital provided daytime entertainment, as did side trips to the Bandalero Indian ruins and the Santa Fe Folk Art Museum. In addition, some members of the group enjoyed the mountain views from local golf courses.

Each evening before traveling to the famous outdoor opera house, the group gathered for a preview of the opera they were to attend. These informative sessions were conducted by Jane Ward.

Operas seen by the group included the 20th Century "Die Schweigsame Frau" (The Silent Woman) by Richard Strauss and Mozart's masterpiece, "The Marriage of Figaro," which featured Midland's Susan Graham, daughter of Betty and Floyd Graham, as one of the leads. Several persons were fortunate also to attend the production of Puccini's "Girl of the Golden West."

out for along the way) via the North Shore, taking Hwy. 28 S. around the lake's shore and down to U.S. 50. The drive provides many breath taking views of the lake from high atop the mountains to right along the shore.

For those who do opt to rent a car, the Lake Tahoe Visitors Authority (LTVA) offers a brochure, "The Most Beautiful Drive in America," which is a step-by-step 72-mile shoreline guide of sights all the way around the lake.

As the largest Alpine lake in North America, Lake Tahoe is 22 miles long and 12 miles wide, walled on all sides by stark mountains of pale granite. During the summer months, the lake's top 12 feet of water can warm up to around 68 degrees. But below the depths of 700 feet, the temperature is a constant 39 degrees.

The average depth of the lake is 989 feet, but the deepest point is 1,645 feet and is the third deepest lake in North America. It contains an estimated 39.75 trillion gallons of water — enough water to cover the state of California to a depth of 14 inches, according to LTVA information — and this water is 99.9 percent pure, about the same as distilled water. In fact, the water is so pure that it is said a white dinner plate can be visible from 75 feet below the surface.

THE AVERAGE SURFACE elevation of Lake Tahoe is about 6,225 feet above sea level with the highest peak rising directly from the shoreline being Mt. Tallac at 9,735 feet. The highest point in the Basin is Freel Peak at 10,881 and skiers can start runs up to 10,100 feet.

Although summer and fall days boast pleasant temperatures with the mercury averaging around 70 to 80 degrees, the cool, crisp mountain air is very evident in the evenings. A sweater or jacket often is needed.

As for dress, Lake Tahoe is a very comfortable place where fashion is not of optimum importance. For daytime or evening, shorts and T-shirts are seen everywhere, from the shores of the lake to the casinos and celebrity showrooms. However, a cocktail dress, suits or blazers are equally appropriate for fine dining and shows.

There are numerous places to stay, from the bright lights and excitement of the casino hotels — such as Caesar's Tahoe, Harrah's Tahoe, Harvey's Resort Hotel and Lake Tahoe Horizon Casino Resort — to many small independent and chain-operated hotels off the main street (but still within close range of the action). The choice mainly depends on how much you wish to spend for lodging.

Places to eat also are abundant. From fancy dining to burgers and fries, almost any dining pleasure can be accommodated.

If you are visiting the Heavenly Valley area, the Sunday champagne brunch is a must. The Heavenly Aerial Tram glides up one-mile to an elevation of 8,250 feet, 2,000 feet above Lake Tahoe. From this vantage point, visitors can see Mt. Tallac, Pyramid Peak, the surrounding Sierra and 72 miles of Lake Tahoe shoreline.

ALMOST ANY TABLE in the Top of the Tram restaurant provides a beautiful view of the lake below. The breakfast consists of an all-you-can-eat platter of fresh fruits and as many fresh blueberry muffins and danish rolls as you can stomach, followed by a choice of entrees from the menu, with coffee, juice and champagne.

The tram ride is $10.50 for adults, but guests can enjoy Sunday brunch for just $6 more. Lunch and dinner also are available at at the Top of the Tram and the sunset view is said to be spectacular.

For those who enjoy hiking, the Tahoe Vista Trail begins at the top of the tram. The trail crests at 9,200 feet and offers spectacular views of the valley below as well as beautiful sites along the way.

Although gambling is available 24-hours a day in the casinos at the California/Nevada stateline, when the sun goes down, the lights come up and Lake Tahoe comes alive with entertainment. The casinos provide a complete list of activities including superstar entertainment, cabaret shows, fine dining, health clubs and spas, shopping, game arcades, tennis and swimming pools. The casino showrooms host the big-name show-biz personalities and stage shows such as Harrah's "Ziegfeld: A Night at the Follies," while the casino lounges host many newcomers, stars of yesterday and cabaret shows.

When walking through the casinos, the ringing of bells and clinking of change falling into the winners' trays almost beckons each person to try a slot machine just once. For those who prefer low-stakes gambling, nickel and quarter slot machines make the perfect option, while those who prefer high-stakes may want to check in at the $500 minimum Black Jack tables.

NEXT TO GAMBLING, skiing is probably what Tahoe is best known for. The Lake Tahoe Basin has the largest concentration of ski resorts, and their proximity to major towns makes it easy to combine action at the tables with action on the slopes. Interchangeable lift passes allow skiers to sample several resorts in one trip, according to LTVA information. Most of the 17 major resorts offer downhill skiing, and several also offer cross-country runs.

However, sports other than skiing also are popular in the area.

Lake Tahoe is a popular place for fishing. According to the Outdoor Sporting Goods Store, fall is the best time of year to catch the larger fish. But the LTVA warns that shore fishing isn't as good as fishing out where the water is 100 to 200 feet deep.

Boat and gear rentals are available, or there are places where individuals who have their own boat can launch them.

In the water sports include water skiing, jet skiing and board sailing. Tahoe's shallower waters are somewhat warm in the summer and early fall, but wet suits are recommended for those planning to venture out to deeper regions.

Several stables in the area rent horses by the hour or day until snow falls, with some stables offering guided tours or pack trips. Bikers and hikers will find several trails around the lake and in the mountains for their adventures. Bicycles and mountain bikes are available for rental from several area shops. One of the most popular paved paths for bikers is between the lake and Highway 89, also known as Emerald Bay Road.

IF GOLF IS YOUR sport, Edgewood Tahoe Golf Course is the home of the Celebrity Golf Championship and was named to the top 100 courses in the country by Golf Digest Magazine. However, beware that green fees are $100 per golfer. The South Shore also offers Glenbrook, the Lake Tahoe Country Club, Tahoe Paradise Golf Course and the Bijou Municipal Course.

For those who would prefer to call shopping a sport, Tahoe can be a haven.

Along with the numerous "tourist-type" shops selling T-shirts and other Tahoe memorabilia, there is an abundance of charming shops and boutiques, leaving no loss of places to spend your casino winnings.

At Caesars', the shop arcade includes Gucci and Sierra Galleries. Harrah's arcade includes Equinox — for elegant clothes — and Brittany Jewels International.

For those with bargain hunting in mind, there are outlet shopping centers. At "the Y" (the intersection of Highways 50 and 89), shoppers can find 20 percent to 60 percent savings on name brand merchandise from shops such as Cape Isle Knitters, Bass Shoes, Capezio Shoes, the Great Outdoor Clothing Outlet, Gitano, L.J.'s Leather and Jewelry Outlet, Oneida Silver Co., Sierra Shirts, Pfaltzgraff and Home Again.

WHILE SHOPPING, be sure to incorporate some sightseeing. Lake Tahoe has some wonderful attractions for visitors to enjoy.

The paddlewheeler M.S. Dixie and the sternwheeler Tahoe Queen are two of the more prevalent attractions for tourists. At almost anytime of the day, at least one of these vessels can be seen sailing around the lake.

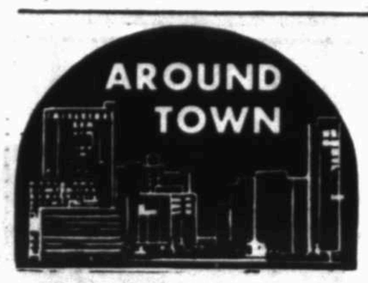

Both boats feature enclosed, heated decks; an open promenade deck; a glass-bottom viewing window; full-service bars and music, and both also offer dinner cruises. Each offer various cruises, one of which is the Emerald Bay Day Cruise.

Emerald Bay can easily be called the jewel in the lake, and is the lake's most photographed area. The water in this bay takes on a beautiful green hue, quite different from the deep blue waters of Lake Tahoe. This magnificent glacier-carved bay is home to Vikingsholm Castle and the quaint Tea House atop Fannette Island.

Vikingsholm Castle, built in 1929, can be viewed from the passing boat, or can be toured (June through September) by taking a one-mile hike from the highway to the castle. This 39-room replica of a Norse castle is considered one of the finest examples of Scandinavian architecture in the western United States. And, according to the captain of the Tahoe Queen, the architect was under strict orders to design and build the castle around the existing trees. No trees were removed from the area during the building of the castle.

ANOTHER POPULAR site in the Lake Tahoe Basin is the original site of the Ponderosa Ranch at Incline Village where the television series "Bonaza" was filmed. The ranch centers around the legendary home of the Cartwright family, with tours offered every 15 minutes throughout the day. The actual ranch house and all its

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Now is good time to plant spring flowering plants

By Deborah A. Benge

By planting flowers now you can get a big jump on the spring season. Not only will you have flowers sooner in the spring, but they will be much better established and showier.

Benge

Many of our favorite spring flowering plants are cool season plants and do very well when planted late summer and early fall. At this time of the year soil and air temperatures cool, soil moisture levels are usually very good and this makes great conditions for planting. Seeds planted at this time will germinate and small seedlings will tolerate light freezes and most winter weather. When spring comes these seedlings will shoot up and begin to flower with superior blooms to those same plants planted in the spring.

There are several plants that do well when planted from seed during this time. Just to name a few; pansy, viola, larkspur, poppy, bluebonnet, bachelor buttons, sweet pea, alyssum and stock.

In addition to planting seeds, there are several transplants that you can plant at this time. Depending on the plant you select, some transplants can give you fall color that will extend into the winter and spring. Transplants can normally be found in the garden centers at this time for just this purpose. Pansies, snapdragons, calendulas, ornamental kale and cabbage and dusty miller are a few of the transplants that can be planted for a colorful fall, winter and spring.

Whatever you decided to do — seed or transplant — bed preparation is very important. Beds can be and should be prepared several weeks ahead of planting time. If you have a drainage problem, be sure to raise your beds to prevent root rots. Beds need to be improved with organic matter for your gardening project to be at its best. Use a layer of organic matter four to six inches deep, tilled or spaded thoroughly into the soil to a 10-inch depth. Well-rotted animal manure provides an excellent source of organic matter as well as adding some nutrient value to the soil. If you don't use it you may want to till in a complete commercial fertilizer at the time of soil preparation.

By preparing the soil in advance to planting the soil can have an opportunity to settle, decompose raw organic matter and dilute chemical fertilizers that might otherwise burn young seedlings. After soil preparation you need to settle the soil with a good irrigation. If there is no rain you may want to water the soil thoroughly a few days prior to planting seed or transplants.

When sowing seeds you can plant them closer than you would in the spring. This closer spacing will help protect the seedlings from winter cold snaps. Also, the close spacing will insure that you have an adequate number of seedlings come spring if you lose some due to cold or some other factor. If you don't lose any of the seedlings you will want to thin the young plants in the spring just as they begin rapid growth.

Planting after extreme summer heat temperatures have ended but before winter cold begins you can get transplants and seedlings off to a good start. The root systems will be established and the plant will have gained some size before the growing conditions become less hospitable.

When planting seed be sure to plant at the correct depth. This is one of the biggest causes for seedling failure. The planting depth will vary with plant, but a rule of thumb is: the planting depth should be four times the depth of the seed. The second most common failure of seedlings is dry soil. Soils that dry out when seeds are germinating or while seedlings are still quite small will cause damage or death to the seedling.

Sudden winter cold snaps is one of the greatest dangers in losing fall plantings. To help protect seedlings from this kind of loss, you will want to mulch your plants with some type of mulch, like straw, pine needles, shredded bark mulch, cypress mulch and other types of suitable mulch. In addition to this, be prepared to cover the entire plant or planting with a protective layer of mulch when a Siberian Express weather front is expected.

Plans for paint need consideration

Associated Press

Before making a trip to a paint store, cautions Better Homes and Gardens Window & Wall Ideas magazine, consumers should ask themselves two questions: Where will they be painting, and what color effect are they after?

Where someone plans to paint will determine the kind of paint he should buy. For most interior projects, the choices are either water- or solvent-thinned paints. The distinction is whether the paint cleans up with water or with a solvent.

Water-thinned paints, also known as latex paints, wipe off floors and wash out of tools with soap and water. They're fast drying, nearly odorless, and easy to use. They are, however, less durable than solvent-based types.

Solvent-based paints, sometimes called oil-base or alkyd paints, require cleaning with a paint thinner. As a result, they're a bit more trouble to use. Some people may prefer solvent thinned paint where they need a longer-wearing surface, such as in kitchens, bathrooms, hallways, and entry areas.

FINISHES

Both latex and alkyd paints come in three types of finishes: flat or low-gloss (also called satin, eggshell, or low-luster), semi-gloss, and high-gloss. Beside appearance, the finish determines the paint's durability.

Flat paints generally work well on interior walls and ceilings. As a rule, they offer easier, better coverage than other finishes and cost less. The one drawback: The duller the surface of the paint, the less resistance it offers to wear.

Semi-gloss and high-gloss paints are commonly used to protect doors, windows, and other woodwork, as well as walls subject to especially hard wear, such as entry halls, kitchens, and bathrooms.

HOW MUCH PAINT?

Paint manufacturers' labels will help consumers figure how much paint most jobs will take; the label usually states the one-coat coverage to expect from 1 gallon of primer or paint. With that information, here are the measurements and calculations that will need to be made:

■ Measure the perimeter of the room (all walls) and multiply the result by the ceiling height to get square footage. Round off to the next full foot. Don't deduct for windows or other openings unless they add up to more than 100 square feet.

■ Divide that figure into the number of square feet a gallon of paint promises to cover. Double the quantity when planning two coats. Round up the number — remember, to round to pints or quarts as well as gallons — and buy as close to it as possible to eliminate unnecessary waste.

Specific jobs and some decorative painting techniques require paints made just for those purposes.

SPECIALTY PAINTS

Specific jobs and some decorative painting techniques require paints made just for those purposes.

One-coat latex or alkyd paints can be used on surfaces that are already sealed and have little patchwork to be blended in. Additional pigment adds to their hiding power.

Texture paints let people cover up imperfections and create the effect of stucco and other looks. Some come pre-mixed; while a silica-sand additive must be stirred in with others. Application is moderately difficult, and it takes time to work out the pattern.

Acoustic paints allow consumers to cover acoustic-tile surfaces without impairing their sound-absorbing qualities. They are available in a limited number of colors, however, and should be sprayed on or applied with a special roller.

Dripless paints make the job of painting ceilings easier to reduce cleanup time, but expect to pay more for this convenience.

Fashions by Julian Gold will be presented at the Green Tree Country Club Ladies Association luncheon and style show Sept. 24 at the club. Social time will be 11:30 a.m. with luncheon to follow at noon. Members will model fashions. For reservations call 694-8413 by Friday.

Cattle drives followed different trails

FORT SUMNER, N.M. (AP) — Early American cattle trails, which often followed Indian footpaths, included the Chisholm Trail from Texas to Abilene, Kan., during the mid-1860s.

Less well-known was the Goodnight-Loving Trail from near Fort Belknap, Texas, across the Pecos to Fort Sumner, N.M. It was established in 1866 by cattlemen Charles Goodnight and Oliver Loving. An extension of this trail ran north to Denver and Cheyenne.

Traditional wedding is returning trend

By Kimberley Baker

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Lindia Hawkins takes a bit of the faded past and restores the romance for modern brides.

Hawkins, who co-owns Creative Needle with her husband, Dee, kind of fell into the wedding dress business when she started refurbishing them a few years ago.

"When we bought the store eight years ago, we thought that we were going to just sell fabrics," Hawkins said.

"But you have to mold your business around what your customers demand as well as around the economy. We had to diversify. A lot of my customers are professionals who sew at night to relax and for a sense of accomplishment."

The trend is to return to traditional weddings complete with gown and veil and to traditional values, Hawkins said.

"My mom's generation went through the Depression, and they didn't have nice wedding dresses unless they were wealthy," she said.

"So, when that generation's daughters married, they bought them really beautiful and elaborate gowns. I like the trend to restore old or antique dresses. I advise my customers who buy new dresses to take good care of them, because one day their daughters might want to wear the same gown."

ONE OF HER MOST challenging refurbishing tasks involved a Jacqueline Kennedy style-gown that was discolored and deteriorated.

"It was a simple, elegant gown with an empire waist and simple sleeves," she said.

"We added lace and after we finished, it looked like a Jessica McClintock gown. Another customer brought in a beautiful dress that looked like a riding habit.

"She couldn't match the lace color or cover the rust spots. I dyed it in tea in my bathtub, brought it back to the store and dried it. It came out perfectly."

When Helena Hill was planning her April 20th wedding earlier this year, she sought help in restoring her mother's dress to its original splendor. Although it was not love at first sight for Hill, field editor of the Quarter Horse Journal, the thought of wearing the gown eventually won her over.

"My mom, Lucia Biasatti, suggested that I could wear her dress, which was up in my grandmother's attic all wadded up in a plastic bag," Hill said.

"She said it looked like it had coffee stains all over. So, she laid it out on the floor and took a Dustbuster to it and hung it up in her closet. She did all this before she knew I was getting married.

"My sister said it looked old and worn and that it would fall off of me before I could get down the aisle. But I love old and antique things. I looked at the dress and thought it was yellow and not very pretty. I didn't try on any other dresses. When I put my mom's dress on, I could see a lot of potential. I fell in love with it." The 37-year-old dress features a beaded neckline, sewn by Hill's great-grandmother, yards and yards of delicate lace layered over thick satin and a cathedral train.

ALTHOUGH HILL WAS A little embarrassed about the shape of the dress, Hawkins sold her on the treasure, Hill said.

"The traditional styles are coming back," she said.

"I had Dutch Girl Cleaners steam clean the dress to remove all the rust spots. When I picked up the dress, I almost died. It didn't look like poor, little dress that I took in. I felt like Cinderella going from rags to riches.

"The dress was the wedding. It gave my mom and me something to share and my father was really proud when he walked me down the aisle."

Joyce Shollenbarger, who owns Dutch Girl Cleaners, performs the magic which restores gowns. She is one of 100 persons in the country licensed by Webco Restoration Inc. to use a special formula that removes stains from old wedding gowns, Shollenbarger said.

"Gary Webster developed the formula about eight years ago for Webco, which is in Atlanta," she said.

"The process is approved by the Smithsonian Institute. While the process is primarily used for wedding gowns, it also works on christening gowns, quilts and handmade items.

"When air hits garments it turns them yellow and this oxidation causes brown spots. We soak the garment in the Webco solution for four days, which removes stains and brings back the original color.

"There's a big difference between restoration, which is taking the garment back to its original color, and renovation, where the fabric has rotted and deteriorated. I restore garments."

SCHOLLENBARGER SUGGESTS THAT brides not store their garments in plastic, because the plastic makes the garments sweat and lets bacteria and dust get into the items.

"Shortly after they're worn, we ask customers to preserve their new or fairly new gowns to save for their daughters and granddaughters," she said.

"Perspiration, perfume and food stains caramelize and turn into spots. But brides should get their gown cleaned and store it in an acid-free tissue, airtight box to preserve them."

Wedding gowns can stand the test of time through restoration or proper care, Hawkins said.

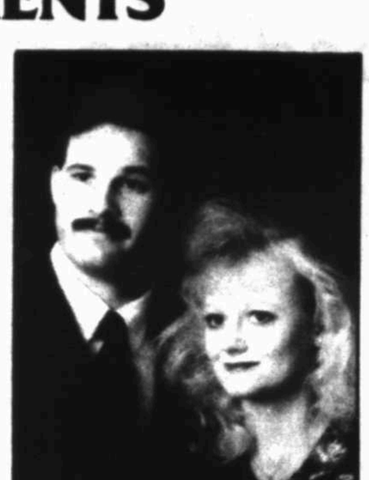

"Three generations in one family wore the same dress. It's wonderfully romantic to wear your grandmother's dress," she said.

LIFESTYLE POLICIES

Policies for publication of announcements in the Lifestyle sections of the Reporter-Telegram are:

Information for Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Monday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to be published. For example, an item for Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least two weeks before the wedding date. Wedding announcements must appear within one month of the event. Anniversary announcements — 25th or higher — must be published within one month of the anniversary date.

Announcements of pageant winners will only be published for teenage pageants and older. Photographs will be published only for winners, not runner-ups. These announcements are published Thursdays. Deadline is 5 p.m. Monday.

All articles must be submitted in writing. Forms for weddings, engagements and anniversaries, only published Sundays, are available in the Lifestyle office. All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them.

We cannot mail forms to persons in Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication. To have a photo returned by mail, include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Unclaimed photos are discarded after a month.

Photographs may be submitted with wedding and engagement announcements, and anniversary announcements of 50 years or more, but are not required. A portrait of the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements. Portraits of the bride only or of the wedding couple may be submitted with wedding announcements. A different photo must be submitted for the engagement and wedding announcements.

Photos should be vertical, black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but quality reproduction cannot be assured. Snapshots generally are not acceptable and Polaroid shots are not accepted. The MRT reserves the right to deny publication of any photo due to quality or content.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and stories.

Museum hosts history of wine-making

TURIN, Italy (AP) — A museum housed in the cellars of an 18th century villa in Turin contains a priceless collection of wine-making antiquities and artifacts.

The Martini Museum of the History of Wine-Making includes wine presses, Greek amphorae dating to the 4th century BC, ornate goblets, pouring vessels, silver drinking cups, Roman Imperial-era glasses, artistic agricultural carts and ancient Roman cellar equipment from about 200 BC.

Pignut known for strength, resistance

ATLANTA (AP) — In the forest products industry, a pignut is not someone enamored with hogs.

Pignuts are hickory trees that were named for their fruit, which is a favorite of hogs and deer, according to Georgia-Pacific Corp., a forest products company.

Pignuts and other hickorys, which are known for their strength, hardness and shock resistance, are used to manufacture tool handles, veneer, moulding, furniture and bent plywood.

Singles enjoy new kind of party mode

By Terry Lee Goodrich
N.Y. Times News Service

For Ann Haynes and Garland Jones, the magic began when he spotted her slicing strawberries at last spring's No Significant Other Party.

"I thought she was cute, but she was busy," said Jones, 45, owner of a landscaping business. "I went out on the deck."

When Haynes went outside later, she overheard Jones' conversation with some other people. "I liked his personality as soon as I heard him talking," said Haynes, 41, a secretary from Fort Worth, Texas.

They began talking to each other.

"It was kind of eerie how our backgrounds paralleled each other," said Jones, also of Fort Worth.

"We'd both been married before, and the first duplex she lived in was in the next block from the first one I'd moved into. Then I'd moved to another one on Wonder Court in Wedgwood (neighborhood in Fort Worth), and hers was on Wonder Drive ..."

Wonder of wonders, they were married six months later.

Chalk it up to fate if you like, but Arlington, Texas, elementary schoolteacher Anna Gant — host of that particular party — is convinced otherwise. She credits the nuptials of the couple to the power of the No Significant Other Party.

NO SIGNIFICANT OTHER parties and their close cousins, Insignificant Other parties, are the latest weapon of singles in an arsenal that includes personal ads, singles groups and video dating.

At an Insignificant Other Party, partygoers bring an insignificant other — defined as a member of the opposite sex they're not romantically involved with, but who's a good friend they'd be proud to introduce to family and friends.

At a No Significant Other Party, people who have no "significant other" may bring friends of either sex. At both types of parties, people are to mingle in hopes of finding Mr. or Ms. Right.

"My target is people in their mid-30s to 40s, professionals, college graduates — just quality people, people who are in the same situation I am," said Gant, 41. "Bars, Sunday school classes and singles groups haven't met their need, although all of those work for some people."

Elizabeth Schrupp, 30, a certified public accountant, is another who likes the idea. She and three women friends gave their first Insignificant Other Party a few weeks ago.

"I do litigation support work, so I meet tons of single guys," said Schrupp, an Arlington, Texas, resident. "I'll say to my friends, 'I can set you up on a blind date.' And they'll say 'Oh, no.' But I figured this wasn't a blind date. People can meet, and if they want, go out."

SCHRUPP SWEARS by a group game, which she said served as an ice-breaker at her party; Gant takes the opposite view.

"You don't want to do something goofy," said Gant, who gave three NSO parties last year and one after Valentine's Day this year. "Besides, it's not my job to lead them by the hand. I just send out the invitations, vacuum the carpet, unlock the front door and say, 'You're on your own' ... although I did have two guys playing guitar at the last one."

The parties' guests generally number 30 to 50, and Schrupp and Gant advise potential party-givers to figure on a 50 percent no-show rate. Keep it relatively small, Schrupp advised, "so people can meet each other, not just hang out and get drunk."

There's a final advantage the Insignificant Other Party has over any other type of party, Schrupp noted. "You can talk to anyone and know their date won't get jealous."

Portable phones are mixed blessing

By Paula Monarez
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Bob Wexler was sitting in a darkened theater watching a movie not long ago when his phone rang.

"I bolted out of my seat and into the lobby," said the 34-year-old from Studio City. "I didn't want it to disrupt anyone. But I had to take the call. It was important."

Scott Magged was attending a synagogue meeting when he heard a ringing in his ear.

"I pulled my phone out to see who was calling," he said. "But it wasn't my phone. It was the guy sitting next to me."

Doug Ross, owner of Raffles, an Encino clothing store, said ringing portables are becoming as commonplace as credit cards.

"I see customers hacking out a deal on the phone while they're in the middle of putting on a suit," he said. "It's really funny. I think the phones have become a status symbol. I have a hard time believing anyone is that important. But I guess they are."

Have phones will travel. On the golf course, in the doctor's office, at restaurants, in stores — it seems you can't hide from the telephone these days. Unlike bumbling agent Maxwell Smart in the television series "Get Smart," no one's reaching for his shoe to take a call. But technology means you might be reaching in your back pocket to answer your phone.

PORTABLE CELLULAR phones, with their compact fit-in-the-pocket size, are ringing everywhere. But their increasing use is also becoming an annoyance in places where many go to get away, including churches, theaters and restaurants, some say.

In recent months, the sales of portable telephones have exceeded those of mobile car phones, according to the Cellular Telecommunications Industry Association, which refuse to release figures.

"This is just the beginning," said Norman Black, spokesman for the association. "There won't a place left on Earth where you won't be able to make a telephone call."

Magged, a North Hollywood garment manufacturer, said he never leaves home now without his portable phone.

"When I leave my front door in the morning I make a check list. I have to have my wallet, keys and my telephone," he said. "I don't know what I did without it before. I carry it everywhere I go. I feel lost when I'm not carrying it around.

Magged said the phone gives him a sense of freedom.

"I can run around and not worry about missing any calls," said Magged, 35, whose monthly portable-phone bill averages about $120. "If something comes to mind that I need to relay to someone, I can do it and not worry about it. It allows me to make decisions immediately."

Black said portable phones, which range in price from $400 to $1,000, are becoming increasingly popular because of their size. Last month, Motorola Inc. introduced a portable that weighs 7.7 ounces and measures 11.6 cubic inches, about the size of a wallet when closed and a checkbook when opened.

"They are so easy to carry," he said, referring to the new compact models. "They slip anywhere. I know guys who carry more pocket change in their pants than what this phone weighs. And you can use them anytime and anywhere. It's a heck of an ability."

PRIOR TO THE cellular phone revolution in the early 1980s, people depended on pagers, beepers and answering services for their calls, Black said.

"We've eliminated all that," he said. "People can now go straight to the source and not have to worry about having enough change for a pay phone."

While cellular phone users are delighted with the convenience, others are less enthusiastic with the practice, saying they're nuisance calls.

Michael Carll, pastor of St. Nicholas Church in Encino, has yet to see a portable cellular phone during services at his church, but he said he feels it's inappropriate to bring such contraptions to worship.

"The church is a place where people attempt to get a different perspective on life," he said. "It's time to put a distance between daily business and all its gadgets.

"To bring all these things to worship defeats the purpose of finding refreshment and renewal. Who is so important they can't be away from a phone for an hour?"

Magged totes his portable cellular on vacation trips, to Los Angeles Lakers games, at the dentist's office and when he goes to the synagogue, he said.

"I don't keep it on during the services," he said. "That would be awful if it did ring then. But I do keep it on when I'm participating in other activities."

In May, the Music Center of Los Angeles County — home to the Ahmanson Theater, the Mark Taper Forum and the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion — banned cellular phones inside the theaters, said Sandra Kimberling, president of the Music Center operating company.

"We were getting complaints that they were disrupting the audience and the performers," Kimberling said. "Now, we don't do a phone sweep, ask everyone who comes in if they have one or anything like that. But it's in the program. We also keep our eyes open. If we spot one, we ask the person to leave it with us until after the performance."

CELLULAR PHONES are banned by the FAA on airplanes during flights, and most airlines ban their use on the ground because they could interfere with instruments in the cockpit, especially navigational instruments, officials said. Many airlines, however, provide pay phones on board.

Le Cirque, a New York restaurant, a few months ago hired a phone-check person to deter phone calls during dinner, said Benito, the restaurant's maitre'd.

"We decided to do it before it became a problem," Benito said. "We get about one to two phones checked in every night."

Cellular phone users have been spotted at Los Angeles restaurants, but they haven't become a nuisance, yet, restaurant owners say.

"But believe me the first time I hear a phone ringing at a table, I will go up and tell them something," said Jean-Jacques Retourne, general manager at Le Dome restaurant in West Hollywood. "I think the phones are an annoyance, even just seeing them on the table upsets me. I think by using the phones you are infringing on other people's rights. People are here to eat and relax not to talk or listen to someone else talk on the phone."

Accepting phone calls on the golf links is not a problem at the Malibu Country Club, said Debra Jones, a worker at the club. She said there are quite a few golfers who drive up and down the course, chatting on their cellular phones.

"I don't think there is anything wrong with it," she said. "It allows them to play golf and not lose valuable business time."

Portable phones have not put professional pagers out of business at airports or at the tony Polo Lounge in the Beverly Hills Hotel where it's still de rigueur to have your named called out, officials said.

HOWEVER, AT THE American Airlines terminal at Los Angeles International Airport, pagers have noticed a change, said Tim Smith, a spokesman for the airlines.

"We are getting more requests for pages from people on a cellular phone," he said. "A lot of them call and want to talk to someone to tell them they are running late and are on their way."

Users say they have come to depend on portable phones.

"It's always sitting in my shirt pocket," said Wexler, who owns a video company in Burbank. "It's the best thing when I'm away from the office. It might sound crazy, but the phone is a stress reliever. I never have to worry about finding a phone if something important comes up.

"I don't remember what life was like before the phone. I guess I just missed a lot of phone calls."

Bathing pet cat may help ease allergy to it, study suggests

NEW YORK (AP) — The 2 million Americans who live with a cat despite being allergic to it may get some relief through a strategy that includes giving Tabby a weekly bath, a study suggests.

Getting rid of carpeting, minimizing the amount of upholstered furniture, vacuum cleaning and using an air filter were also recommended.

The study found such steps can greatly reduce the amount of allergy-provoking material in the air. But researchers have not yet tested whether that will lead to easing of allergy symptoms, said study co-author Dr. Thomas Platts-Mills of the University of Virginia in Charlottesville.

Cat allergy can cause asthma attacks bad enough to send people to the emergency room. More commonly, it causes a runny nose or eyes, sneezing or an itchy skin rash. Platts-Mills said his study was aimed chiefly at easing asthma symptoms, but that the strategy probably would help other symptoms too.

He and co-authors Frederic de Blay and Martin Chapman presented the work in the June issue of the American Review of Respiratory Disease. The authors wrote that the most effective measure would be to get rid of the cat or keep it outdoors.

Platts-Mills said he believed that for a significant number of people, cat-washing plus the other recommended steps could replace serious asthmatic reactions with minor or more easily controlled ones.

"All these things are sensible measures and I think all of them will help," although to what extent is unclear, said pediatric allergist Dr. Peyton Eggleston at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore.

"This is a very common clinical problem," Eggleston said. "There haven't been good answers. And this (strategy) looks like a reasonable one to try."

In the study, a cat was found to give off far less allergy-provoking material, called allergen, after a weekly rinsing with water for four weeks.

"I think we would be recommending shampooing, or getting them to walk in the shower, which might be a good technique if you could get them used to it," Platts-Mills said in a telephone interview.

He acknowledged that some cats may resist getting washed, and recommended getting them used to it when young.

Oral biographies enrich family histories

By Terry Lee Goodrich
N.Y. Times News Service

'Everyone has a story to tell, if only someone will listen.'

— William Zimmerman
special projects editor for New York Newsday

"Everyone has a story to tell, if only someone will listen," said Zimmerman, special projects editor for New York Newsday.

That's why he has written a self-published book called "How to Tape Instant Oral Biographies" (Guarionex Press Ltd., $5.95).

Oral tradition long has been the way of handing down stories for posterity, family skeletons and all. But details of those stories can get fuzzy from generation to generation, or they can be forgotten. Worse, relatives may die before they get a chance to tell their stories.

"There's an African saying to the effect that when an old person dies, an entire library is destroyed," Zimmerman said.

Zimmerman's book, printed in large type, is designed partly to be of help to children wanting to interview relatives, but adults can benefit, too. The book has been revised recently to include tips for educators.

He suggests schools can invite children's relatives or friends to come to class for oral history interviews, which can be used as focal points for holidays such as Grandparents Day — Sept. 8 this year.

ZIMMERMAN BELIEVES that grandparent plus grandchild plus tape recorder equals "living history." His book features photos and anecdotes of living history taking place between his daughter and her grandmother.

"Wouldn't it be great if instead of kids carrying jam boxes around, people would start sharing their stories?" he asked.

Birthdays, anniversaries, holidays and reunions can be enhanced by taping family stories, he said. And teen therapy groups have used the book as the basis for programs in which they interview senior citizens.

"If a kid is going through a bad time, so have these older people," Zimmerman said. "This shows them you come through those bad times."

To the novice interviewer, he recommends overcoming the fear of handling a tape recorder or video camera by experimenting with it to feel confident of how it works. Be certain it's recording properly before you launch into an interview, he said.

He recommends preparing for the interview by jotting down questions to ask. If you need help with that, the book provides several suggested questions.

He advises the interviewer to think of the session as a conversation rather than a formal interview. "Have a cup of coffee or tea together as you talk," he suggested.

For video biographies, visual interest can be added with props, such as old passports, photos, even old maps.

"Sit someone down next to the family album," he said. "Or if they like to sew a lot, place them in the room with the sewing machine, or whatever their hobby is. If there's a pause in their talking — and that's natural — you can pan the camera around, or focus on their hands if they have very expressive hands, or if they're old. Old hands are very beautiful."

THE CAMERA can be turned off during the pauses, but "I don't think it's bad to have these quiet moments on the tape," Zimmerman said. "You need those quiet moments to integrate the information they're giving you."

The interview doesn't have to be one marathon session: He recommends recording it in segments over time.

"And it's good to have a third person in on it," he said. "You can take turns asking questions — or if the third person knows the person you're interviewing, it can round out the story.

"You may not get scientific precision. You'll get distortion and feelings," he said. "They may want to hide feelings. Or sometimes tears come, because memories bring lots of feelings."

"Don't worry about letting people wander a little in giving their answers," Zimmerman writes in the book. "That's how you get interesting information. Just make a note about what point you want to go back to and return to it later.

"Don't feel you have to be in total control over the interview all the while. It takes away the fun."

Besides giving advice on how to interview and some of the technical aspects of handling a camera or tape recorder effectively, the book provides a ready-made format for interviews. It also has space for an interviewer's own notes and ideas; 36 pages and charts for family trees and historical information; and even a bit of room for photos.

AN IMPORTANT note in all this recording of life stories: Older relatives are important, but don't forget the kids, Zimmerman said.

"When you're 6 or 7, you have dreams, jokes and a way of life that's worth preserving," he said. "It's a good idea for adults to turn it around and make it transgenerational."

The book can be obtained in many bookstores or, for an additional $2 (total $7.95), by writing to Guarionex Press Ltd., 201 W. 77th St., New York, N.Y. 10024, or by phoning (212) 724-5259.

Children 'personalize' fears

Associated Press

Dr. Benjamin Spock says small children know little about the world and think that when something bad happens to someone else — in real life or on television — it will happen to them, too.

During the Persian Gulf war, according to an article Spock wrote in the current issue of Redbook, many children expressed a wide range of fears.

"Listening night after night to news about bombings, and later reports of baby refugees dying for lack of food and water," Spock wrote, "some sensitive children become convinced the world isn't a safe place."

To help children cope, the first steps are preventive.

"I don't believe that children under the age of 6 should be exposed to the news at all," Spock wrote. "I would, for example, advise parents not to watch during meals or the early evening, when preschoolers are apt to overhear stories or see footage that would be frightening."

He said children between 6 and 12 are not as vulnerable, but they can be alarmed or upset by what they see and hear. He recommended parents monitor what children watch, possibly viewing news programs with them to offer perspective and calm fears.

Spock offered these suggestions for calming kids fears:

■ Do talk to your children about any bad news they're bound to hear anyway. Otherwise, you'll give the impression that sensitive subjects are off limits.

■ Don't lie about scary events. Children can detect when parents aren't being truthful.

■ Don't belittle children's fears. It will only increase their anxiety.

■ Do listen carefully. You'll find out how upset your children are by the questions they ask.

■ Never say never. Though you should assure your children of their safety, false guarantees could backfire.

Young children personalize tragedies and may suffer nightmares, headaches and stomachaches when they are worried.

"With frightened preschoolers, I'd suggest that you explain what happened in a general way," Spock wrote, "being careful not to offer any more details than are necessary. Reassure your child that whatever took place is very unlikely to happen to her. Don't share any fears you yourself may have — you'll only increase her misgivings."

Encourage school age children to talk about their fears.

"Since children between the ages of 6 and 12 are able to process information in a more sophisticated way," Spock wrote, "they tend to focus on details — such as how they would get in touch with a parent if a fire broke out in their school.

"It's better to explore what's on a child's mind first so you'll be able to give them the appropriate assurances and information."

Spock said some years ago a psychologist studied the fears of children hospitalized for tonsilectomies.

"It turned out that a number of the children assumed that the operation was a punishment," he wrote. "They had too many sore throats, they reported, because they hadn't worn their hats or boots when they were told to.

"One boy thought that in performing the surgery, the doctor would cut his throat from ear to ear, tip his head back like the lid on an old-fashioned coffee pot and reach in to cut out the tonsils."

Parents' soothing words and willingness to listen go a long way toward calming a child upset by a news story, but when a tragedy is more immediate or personal, more help may be needed.

"Professional counseling, even if only short-term, can help children come to grips with their feelings," Spock wrote in Redbook.

"This is especially true when a parent dies and the surviving spouse is grieving as well. It often takes a full year for adults and children to begin to restore some normalcy in their lives, and counseling can facilitate the process."

New Miss Wheelchair America works against misperceptions

By Jerry Coffey
N.Y. Times News Service

FORT WORTH — Miss Wheelchair America is a label that Deanna Greene wears proudly and with a sense of mission that includes a desire to do away with labels altogether.

"It bothers me that we live in such a labeled society ... that a lot of people look at me and see not Deanna the person but The Disabled Person," she said in interview in her office at American Airlines corporate headquarters near Dallas/Fort Worth Airport.

Greene refuses to be defined by the limitations imposed by her wheelchair — limitations that exist more in the minds of others than in reality, she says — and intends to use her reign as Texas' first Miss Wheelchair America not only to encourage other disabled people but to work against the still prevalent stereotyping and misperception of the disabled.

She was chosen for the Miss Wheelchair crown from among 13 states' delegates at the climax of national competition in Orlando, Fla., on Aug. 24. It was the first time a contestant from Texas had entered the program.

Miss Wheelchair America is picked mainly on the basis of achievement, but if it were more like a beauty pageant, Greene hardly would have been at a disadvantage. She is bright and articulate at 25, and has an infectious smile and pleasing voice.

A Dallas native and a graduate of the University of Texas at Arlington, Greene has a job with American Airlines in ground equipment technical support, is a world-class rifle shooter also active in other sports, and has a boyfriend who's a Navy aviator.

"I'VE BEEN very fortunate. I have a very good life," Greene said. Not, she emphasizes, a good life except for having to roll instead of walk. A good life. Period.

There was a time when it wasn't good. In 1984, Deanna was injured and lost the use of her legs in a car accident that killed her fiance and two members of his family. She was 18.

"It was very tough at first. I didn't want to go on living," she recalled. "It wasn't just my disability and the wheelchair. It was the death of my fiance that really was devastating. I was in that young state of love where you think your whole life revolves around that one person. But of course it doesn't. Lives are separate. They're meant to be shared, but if something happens, you must go on and live yours.

"That's a lot easier to say now than it was then. In the first couple of months after the accident, there was no way I could deal with it.

"The main reason I got through all that was the total support I had from my family from day one," Greene said. "They were wonderful, even when I was terrible to them. There are good patients and bad patients and I was definitely a bad patient. I would put on a front for visitors, and then the family would have to bear the brunt of my frustrations. But they didn't let my temper tantrums get to them; they'd just say, 'She'll get over it.' And finally I did.

"AND WHEN I did accept my situation and decided that I wanted to go right on to college immediately, they supported me all the way, even though there was concern that that might not be the thing to do. Mom says now she knew nothing would ever stop me, but I'm not sure she was so certain then. But everybody, family and friends, showed incredible belief in me.

"I think that in a way, the adjustment was easier for me because I went through the early stages with the wheelchair in sort of an angry fog," Greene said. "When I suddenly came out of it and was able to accept what had happened, being able to handle the chair helped me realize that I was going to be all right. Can't walk? No problem. I'll just roll instead. I knew I still could do what I wanted to do."

Greene says that there's more public awareness and acceptance of disabled people than there used to be but that a lot of "normal" people still have a mindset regarding the disabled that makes things more difficult for everybody.

"For the longest time, people kept asking me: 'Are you getting better?' I'd usually make some wisecrack — you have to have humor in this situation — but it's hard to respond to that kind of thing. No, I'm not getting better, because I've been fine. There's nothing to get better from. I don't have the use of my legs, but outside of that there's absolutely nothing wrong with me. It's discouraging how many people still associate people in wheelchairs with being sick."

DEANNA'S DETERMINATION not to let anything stop her is not strictly a product of overcoming her injury ordeal.

"I've always been one to push myself as far as I can, to try everything at least once," she said. "And I still am that way. I concede that there probably are a few things I shouldn't try. Maybe jumping out of an airplane wouldn't be good. But when somebody tells me I shouldn't do something because of my wheelchair, that's not a good enough reason. I don't accept that unless they can make a very convincing case. I'm not above admitting I'm wrong, but I think I have enough imagination and creativity to come up with ways to do the things I want to do."

It was her willingness to give everything a shot that launched Greene's successful career as a wheelchair shootist.

"I started with wheelchair sports in 1986, mostly track and field, and was at a regional meet, in Houston I think, when we needed someone to enter the rifle competition in order to give us a shot at the team trophy. A woman entrant would give us double points," she recalled.

" 'I'll do it,' I said, even though I'd never fired a rifle or even seen one up close. So, I entered and was absolutely horrible. But I had a good time, and got interested. By the next year, I had purchased equipment, got a coach and started training. I really liked it. So I trained real hard, tried out for the U.S. wheelchair shooting team in 1988 and made it."

She's been shooting internationally ever since and currently is ranked fifth in the world. She's thinking of switching to coaching after next year. Meanwhile, she enjoys other wheelchair sports — tennis, basketball, softball, swimming — and is looking forward to going skiing in the winter.

For the next year, though, a lot of her time off the job will be devoted to traveling as Miss Wheelchair America.

SHE HAD NEVER heard of the program when co-workers at American decided she'd be an ideal Texas representative and approached her about entering. As a first-year state entrant, Deanna was directly designated the Texas delegate. In future years, there will be a state competition.

"I want to see all 50 states represented in the program, and I'll be working on that during my year. There are lots of women out there with remarkable achievements that need to be noticed," she said. "My role is more or less as spokesperson for the disabled. And I'll be doing some motivational speaking. I especially want to talk to younger kids because it's harder for them to have the confidence it takes (to deal with disability).

"Fortunately, I love to travel," Deanna said. "I could live out of a suitcase."

Tooth Fairy is childhood tradition

By Jenny Vogt
N.Y. Times News Service

In today's version of childhood, the world is a not-so-innocent place where strangers are always suspect.

But one stranger is still welcomed in homes across America: that savior of secular childhood, the Tooth Fairy.

"How nice it is to think that there's someone on a good mission only: to come into the home and make a child feel better," said Rosemary Wells, a Deerfield, Ill., grandmother who has immersed herself in Tooth Fairy folklore for the past 20 years.

"The Tooth Fairy is a very important part of a child's development because it helps them be imaginative, it is an icon or image that has not been standardized and it is a rite of passage," she said. It can also be a moneymaker: Wells says the average donation from a Tooth Fairy is $1 per tooth.

According to a survey Wells conducted of 2,324 Americans, use of the Tooth Fairy concept at home is booming.

"As far as I can see, the Tooth Fairy ritual is still in existence and growing," said Wells, 60, who attributes the growth to today's parents' eagerness to have a symbol of goodness to help them in their parenting role.

"The only thing that is continuing in a child's imaginary existence is the Tooth Fairy. Santa Claus and the Easter Bunny have stereotyped images, so they're not developing or stimulating a child's imagination like the Tooth Fairy does," Wells explained.

But for Josefina Rodriguez's 7-year-old daughter, Marlene, having an imaginative way to try to conjure the Tooth Fairy didn't make the magical sprite appear.

"Marlene actually told her brother Milton to 'Punch me so my tooth will come out so I can get money,' " Rodriguez laughed. "Do you believe that?"

Telling her three children about the Tooth Fairy has been a good way to help them cope with the pain of a tooth that is coming out, Rodriguez said.

"I tell them, 'Don't worry, but just remember tonight when you're asleep the Tooth Fairy will bring the money,' " said Rodriguez. "This way they don't think about the pain as much."

This, says Wells, is an example of how the Tooth Fairy is one of the few symbols left that is helping pull the American family together.

"It's the mother and the family acting as the Tooth Fairy in a loving gesture to make their child feel better," she explained.

Still, some parents think relying on the Tooth Fairy is not the best way of dealing with children's concerns over a lost or painful tooth.

"My parents used the Tooth Fairy for me, but I don't do it for my children," said Joan Green, a mother of three. "I think it's a fun thing for children (whose parents) choose to do it that way, but I try to be as honest and up front as I can be with them on every issue and they handle it really well."

Wells, however, says the Tooth Fairy never harms children.

"No way would you ever have a Tooth Fairy who would take the tooth without leaving something of value in its place," she said. "But I would certainly not try to talk someone out of being truthful with their children if they felt it was very important to be truthful. I'm just not so sure you have to be truthful to a 6-year-old."

Wells, who has assembled more than 500 Tooth Fairy items, including pillows, dolls and stories, first got interested in the topic in the early '70s, while teaching English to dental hygiene students at Northwestern University's dental school. The topic came up in class one day and Wells immediately undertook what has grown into a 20-year search for information.

"But I'm not the Tooth Fairy," she cautioned. "I'm just the Tooth Fairy consultant."

Freckles caused by pigment called melanin

Associated Press

Deep in your skin are cells that make a brown pigment called melanin (say: MEL-uh-nin). Sunlight makes your body produce more melanin. That's why you get a tan.

Sunlight also can make freckles appear. That's because freckles are just clumps of melaninun under the skin. They appear because they darken more quickly than surrounding skin.

Melanin helps to protect skin from the harmful rays of the sun. But people who have less melanin get sunburned, because they have less protection. A sunburn is a first-degree burn. That means it burns the top layer of your skin, turning it red.

Getting sunburns — and even tanning — can cause wrinklin and skin disease. So slap on that sunscreen when you hit the beach — or the slopes.

Sea otter pups are picky eaters

Associated Press

Mother knows best — especially is you're a sea otter pup. It seems that most young otters develop the same food likes and dislikes as their moms.

Researchers at California's Monterey Bay Aquarium offered grown-up otters a choice of 50 types of seafood. They discovered each otter only chose three or four items from the "menu." And the otters mainly wanted to eat that good ol' mom had fed them.

The scientists think that eating only a few favorite foods — rock oysters, for example — may be a way for many otters to live in the same area without having to compete with each other for prey. That way, everybody can go back for seconds.

SELF-ESTEEM AND PEAK PERFORMANCE™

A One-Day Seminar for Women

How do you feel about you? If you're like most people, your image of yourself changes all the time. Sometimes we feel good about ourselves and can't wait to meet new challenges, and at other times our confidence deserts us.

That's why CareerTrack developed Self-Esteem And Peak Performance ... to give you the special techniques you need to nurture and maintain a consistent, positive self-image.

Because when you feel "charged up," you perform better at work, you concentrate on goals rather than dwelling on mistakes, you give and get more out of work and life. You reach peak performance.

SEMINAR TOPICS:

- The self-esteem issue that keeps many women from reaching their goals
- When to learn from criticism and when (and how) to ignore it
- 3 healthy ways to control negative emotions
- How to recognize and guard against "catastrophizing"
- A surefire way to give yourself a boost when you're down in the dumps
- The one thing you can and should do every day to maintain your self-image
- How to draw on your intuition and "internal wisdom"
- How to get charged for high-stress times: performance appraisals, customer contact, important meetings, end-of-the-day deadlines, etc.
- 2 techniques that can raise your self-esteem in 10 minutes
- How to identify and avoid people who aren't good for you
- Give up fear as an excuse for not getting what you want
- Getting to know the child you were can help you overcome your most stubborn self-esteem problems
- Recognize and remove your self-imposed limits
- Where to find the courage to stand up for what you know is true
- How to get your self-esteem back after a big failure
- Identify your values and how they affect your self-esteem
- 3 quick ways to beat the afternoon "blahs"
- Feel good about yourself when it seems no one else does

Self-Esteem And Peak Performance is a completely practical course. You learn the warning signs of low self-esteem and what you can do right now to boost your self-image and performance. You'll also see what's working in your life and how to build on your strengths.

This seminar is based on basic principles of behavior, not pop psychology fads. And don't worry, no one will ask you to reveal personal information or participate in embarrassing exercises.

Theme cruises are at high tide in popularity

By Jayne Clark
N.Y. Times News Service

In August, happy cruisers boarded a cruise ship and sailed out of New York Harbor bound for Bermuda and a chance to "leisurely solve some of life's problems" with the help of the host of a radio talk show called "What's Your Problem?"

Sound like a bummer? It didn't to cruisers who signed on for it.

"This cruise sold out fast," said Jill Gelb, manager of the Cruise Agency, the Philadelphia travel agency that organized and sold all 100 available spaces for the problem-solving cruise.

Cabins also are selling well for the upcoming Soap Cruise aboard Princess Cruises' new Regal Princess, where cruisers will get to mingle with 10 stars from six daytime dramas. Ditto for Norwegian Cruise Line's Country & Western Cruise, Holland America Line's Floating Film Festival and Celebrity Cruises' Salute to Glenn Miller.

PICK A THEME, any theme, and there's likely to be a cruise that hooks into it. Theme cruises range from the practical — Regency Cruises' travel-photography cruises, for instance — to the indulgent — the Chocolate Fantasy Cruise aboard Cunard's Queen Elizabeth 2. Some sound sublime — epicurean sailings featuring renowned chefs and winemakers — and some sound impossible — a cruise for dieters, to name one. Some, like big band and jazz cruises, have broad appeal — and some, like a recent cruise billed as an Astrological Spa Adventure at Sea for women, are strictly esoteric.

Though the popularity of these cruises tends to rise and fall, according to some travel experts, now is high tide for theme cruising.

"At times, there's just a tremendous amount of them, and they glut the market. Then there aren't so many for a while," said Tony Adler, president of Cruise Fairs of America in Century City. "It seems like right now, everyone's trying to come up with a theme."

Added Donald Lansky, vice president of the Cruise Line Inc. in Miami, "There's been an increase in the last couple of years because there's such a flood of new ships. The lines are head to head. They're trying to differentiate themselves."

IN MANY CASES, theme cruises are packaged, promoted and sold by travel agencies that book blocks of cabins and arrange for special guests and activities centered around a particular subject. Theme activities are available only to those passengers who have specifically signed up for the cruise through the sponsoring agency.

In other instances, however, the cruise line devises the theme cruise, and everyone on board the ship can join in the activities. Norwegian Cruise Line (NCL) is considered by some travel agents to be the master of the theme cruise. Since the line began offering them a decade ago, they've had comedy cruises, sports all-star cruises, fitness and beauty cruises and next year will offer a Universal Studios movie cruise.

"It's a marketing and sales technique," said NCL spokeswoman Fran Sevcik. "It's done to help fill up the ship. We wouldn't pick our most prime season to do one."

PRICES FOR THEME cruises are no higher than regular sailings, she added, meaning that, depending on the theme, passengers get to hear performances by top musicians, or hobnob with sports greats or get advice from health experts, at no extra charge. This may not be much of a plus if you don't happen to have an interest in the theme. And it may be a definite minus if you find yourself unwittingly aboard a ship full of, say, die-hard "Star Trek" fans out for a Trekkie theme cruise.

"The most-asked question is, 'my husband-wife-friend isn't interested in the theme. Will they have anything to do?'" said Adler, whose agency is sponsoring the upcoming soap opera cruise. "The answer: Yes. Anything else that's normally on the ship is still going on. No other events suffer."

However, some cruise lines steer clear of theme cruises that take over the entire ship. Others, like the upscale Royal Viking Line, avoid the word "theme," preferring the term "enrichment program" when they have guest lecturers on board.

"We don't want to theme everything, because we think the cruise should stand on its own right. But in low season, it is a value added as an incentive to attract people," said Rich Skinner of the Holland America Line.

THEME CRUISES tend to appeal to an older clientele, said Gelb, whose agency has been packaging theme cruises for the past eight years.

Cruises geared toward religious groups are becoming popular, Adler said. And his agency is booking an increasing number of family-reunion cruises. The appeal is obvious, he said.

"People like to travel with people they share a common interest with," he said. "Besides, (on a theme cruise) it's nice to know that no matter how weird (that interest) seems, the other passengers won't think so."

Theme sailings target special interests groups

By Jayne Clark
N.Y. Times News Service

Following are the particulars on a number of upcoming theme cruises. Prices are per person, double occupancy. For more information, contact a travel agent, unless otherwise noted.

■ Everyone's a critic on Holland America's second Floating Film Festival on the Nieuw Amsterdam, sailing Feb. 1 from Tampa, Fla., to the western Caribbean.

Among the film critics scheduled to sail are Richard Corliss of Time magazine, Roger Ebert of the Chicago Sun-Times and Sheila Benson of the Los Angeles Times. Oscar-winning actor Rod Steiger also is supposed to be on board. Last year's festival included screenings of 19 films.

Fares for the seven-night cruise start at $2,505 and include round-trip air fare from most major U.S. Cities. For information, contact Brotherton's Travel in Toronto at (416) 225-1151.

■ Soap fans get to 5rub elbows with "10 of daytime television's top soap opera stars," according to the people at Cruise Fairs of America, who have put together a seven-day Caribbean cruise aboard Princess Cruises' Regal Princess. The ship sails Oct. 12 from Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Fares, including round-trip air fare from most major cities, begin at $1,207. For more information, contact Cruise Fairs of America at (800) 456-4386.

■ Crystal Cruises' Crystal Harmony presents cruises for opera lovers in January and February. Opera stars Marilyn Horne, Regina Resnik, Joan Sutherland and Regine Crespin will appear at various times during the ship's 15-, 22- and 44-day cruise segments. In addition, seminars and receptions hosted by Terence McEwen, retired general director of the San Francisco Opera, are planned.

Fares start at $5,510.

■ Holland America Line presents two Theatre at Sea cruises departing New York on Oct. 24 and Nov. 3 for a 10-day trip on the SS Rotterdam to Bermuda and the Caribbean.

The on-board plays and musicals, featuring a number of award-winning actors, are produced by New York's Theatre Guild. In addition, there will be seminars and games centered around theater topics.

Fares begin at $1,629. An air-fare add-on program also is available. For specifics on the theater program, contact the Theatre Guild at (800) 626-9900.

■ Big-band nostalgia sets the tone for a Nov. 9 Salute to Glenn Miller cruise departing from Fort Lauderdale aboard Celebrity Cruises' SS Meridian for a seven-day Caribbean cruise.

Prices start at $1,095, including round-trip air fare.

■ Twelve epicurean cruises featuring award-winning chefs and winemakers set sail aboard Cunard's Sea Goddess I and Sea Goddess II in 1992. The cruises are to the Caribbean, Europe, the Mediterranean and the Orient, depending on the sailing. Starting fares are from $5,200 to $9,900, depending on the itinerary.

■ Royal Cruise Line features four big-band cruises beginning or ending in Hawaii in its 1992 winter season. Big-band orchestras will entertain at evening shows and at afternoon tea dances.

Starting fares on the Crown Odyssey are $2,259; fares on the Royal Odyssey start at $1,822.

■ A Fabulous Fifties cruise featuring the Coasters and other stars of the era departs San Juan, Puerto Rico, Nov. 2 on Celebrity Cruises' Horizon.

Rates for the seven-day Caribbean cruise start at $1,295, including air fare from some U.S. cities. For more information, call Cruise Holidays at (800) 676-1114.

■ New-age and jazz concerts are featured on a seven-day Caribbean cruise aboard Princess Cruises' newest ship, the Regal Princess. The cruise departs Fort Lauderdale Dec. 7.

Cruise ships return to Mediterranean

By Cheryl Blackerby
N.Y. Times News Service

I've taken cruises across Australia's Great Barrier Reef, down the Nile in Egypt, up the east coast of the United States, along the rugged coastlines of Scandinavia, and throughout the Caribbean from the Virgin Islands to Trinidad.

But if I could take a cruise tomorrow, there's no doubt where I would go: the Mediterranean.

To me, there are no sights as thrilling as the antiquities on the Turkish coast — walking the ancient streets of Ephesus near Izmir is a day I will remember for a lifetime — and no beaches as nice as the ones in Greece, and no food as great as the northern Italian dishes in Venice.

My ideal cruise would start at Malaga on Spain's Costa del Sol. Then we would head east, stopping at Monaco, Venice, a half-dozen Greek islands, go up the west coast of Turkey, and sail north across the Aegean and the Sea of Marmara to Istanbul. Then, we would go back to Greek islands we missed earlier, then down to Haifa, Israel, over to Alexandria, Egypt, and end the trip in Morocco.

THIS JOURNEY would have been almost impossible this year during the Persian Gulf War when most cruise lines sent ships to calmer waters in the Caribbean, the U.S. east coast and Alaska.

Now at last, a veritable flotilla of passenger ships is returning to Mediterranean ports.

Cunard's Princess, which is returning to civilian duty after serving as a rest-and-recuperation facility for American troops in the Persian Gulf, is leading the way.

At least 19 cruise ships including the Princess will have docked in Piraeus, Greece, by the end of the year, according to Cruise Lines International Association. About the same number will have stopped in Venice.

The Princess' first voyage after a refit and refurbishment following its tour of duty — it was docked in Manama, Bahrain, during the war — will be a 14-day "Mediterranean Fantasy" cruise from Malta to Malaga, Spain, sailing Oct. 19 with stops at Santorini, Rhodes, Patmos, Mykonos and Crete, Greece; Kusadasi and Bodrum, Turkey; Catania, Italy; Bizerte, Tunisia; Mahon and Alicante, Spain. (Rates, including air fare from the U.S., begin at $2,495 per person double occupancy.)

THIS, LADIES AND gentlemen, is a cruise.

One of my favorite cruise ships is Cunard's Princess not only because it's a luxury ship at fairly modest prices — and because the British officers and staff are efficient and cheerful — but also because of its itinerary. It specializes in the Mediterranean, with sojourns across the Atlantic to Madeira, the Canary Islands, and down to Agadir, Morocco.

Another favorite Mediterranean ship is Sun Line's Stella Maris, a yachtlike small vessel that specializes in the Greek islands and the Turkish coast. The ship, which holds only 200 passengers, has modest rates, particularly considering the small size and attentive service of the Greek staff.

The ship is in dry dock for the winter, but will resume Mediterranean sailings in the spring.

Beginning April 10, the Stella Maris will sail on seven-day cruises from Piraeus to Istanbul, then to Kusadasi and Bodrum, and the Greek islands of Rhodes, Crete, Santorini, Delos and Mykonos. Rates start at $1,195 per person double occupancy (not including air fare from the U.S.).

The Stella Maris also will offer spring "Mediterranean Rivieras" itineraries that include Italian and French ports.

THE CRUISE LINES that have ships sailing in the Mediterranean in 1991 include Chandris Fantasy, Classical, Club Med, Costa, Crystal, Cunard, Dolphin Hellas, Epirotiki, Renaissance, Royal Cruise Line, Royal Viking, Seabourne, Sun Line and Windstar. Schedules for 1992 are not final.

Unfortunately, I can't go on a cruise tomorrow, but perhaps I could manage a spring cruise. Let's see, I could sail from Piraeus to Istanbul, or maybe Venice to Malaga, or Morocco to Alexandria . . . .

Responsible tourism can help preserve planet

By Matthew C. Vita
N.Y. Times News Service

LONDON — The World Travel and Tourism Council calls travel a "basic right for all people in our democratic world." Few of the millions of holiday makers just back from the beach, the mountains, Europe or beyond would deny that.

But as tour operators count their earnings from another summer season, many people are claiming that the right to travel is in conflict with the rights of the environment, local cultures and mankind's cultural treasures.

In the face of an explosive growth in international tourism, many of the world's most beautiful and precious spots are being overrun by visitors. Some are suffering incalculable damage.

The once-pristine waters of the Mediterranean, Mexico's Acapulco Bay, Thailand's Pattaya and Malaysia's Penang are awash in human waste. Shorelines are marred by towering hotels built to accommodate millions of visitors.

The rare black-and-gold marble floor of St. Paul's in London and the unique mosaic floor of St. Mark's in Venice are being worn thin by the footprints of the thousands of people who visit the cathedrals each day. In Paris, the Cathedral of Notre Dame's floor is being eaten away by spilled soft drinks.

The 40,000 people who trek through the remote Himalayas in Nepal each year leave trails strewn with toilet paper, empty cans and bottles. Wood burning to meet their demands for hot showers and cooked food is destroying forests.

The Galapagos Islands off the coast of Ecuador, once a natural treasure of sea lions, penguins and unique species of birds, are overrun by more than 32,000 visitors each year — four times the number of 10 years ago.

MORE THAN 430 million tourists will travel outside their countries this year, according to the World Tourism Organization, a United Nations body. By the year 2000 the number will be 640 million. And these don't include the hundreds of millions of people who vacation in their own countries.

All are eagerly sought after by what is now considered the largest single industry on Earth — an estimated $2.5 trillion economy based solely on fulfilling man's desire for fun and foreign adventure.

Tourism employs 112 million people, or one in 15 workers worldwide, and is a mainstay for economies in both the developed and developing world, according to the World Travel and Tourism Council, an industry group.

Britain earned $39 billion on tourism last year. Italy took in $21 billion, France $17.7 billion, Malaysia $4.5 billion, Rwanda $10 million.

Tourism wasn't always big business. Once upon a time it was limited to a privileged or eccentric few who had the money and the time to spend on exotic adventures abroad. But in the past few decades, lower air fares and mass communication helped make the world a smaller place. And people with more disposable income on their hands wanted to set out to explore it.

"Mass tourism is a post-Second World War phenomenon that has grown very rapidly without much planning or looking ahead," said Antonio Enriquez Savignac, secretary general of the World Tourism Organization. "Now all of a sudden people are realizing there are limits to growth."

For many developing countries, tourism "either is or is becoming" the biggest source of foreign capital, said Julia Hailes of Sustainability, a British-based environmental consulting company.

"It is one of the only ways they can get foreign currency into the country," she said. "So they want to attract as many tourists as possible."

AS THE NUMBERS grow, however, many Third World governments that once viewed tourism as the path to domestic development are beginning to realize that their tourist industries are endangered by their very success.

"These countries are in a Catch-22 situation," said Henry Cruze, director of travel and tourism consulting services at Wharton Econometric Forecasting Associates. "They need the currency to survive, but the more they attract people the more they destroy the attractions that are bringing them there in the first place."

"There has to be a balance between the natural rights of people to travel and the protection of the environment" and indigenous cultures, Cruze said.

Costa Rica, cited as a model for preservation of its natural resources, is just one example of where the economic benefits of tourism are in conflict with the desire to protect its natural ecosystem.

Tourism to Costa Rica's Monte Verde rain forest increased fourfold in the late 1980s, bringing valuable foreign income. But the crush of visitors has damaged trails and footpaths and shattered the notion of the forest as an exotic escape to an unspoiled environment.

"Western tourists like the idea of a wilderness experience. But it's very difficult to have a wilderness experience with 20,000 other people," said Richard Tapper, an official with the World Wildlife Fund in Britain. "You end up going into a wilderness with a human motorway running through it."

IN MORE traditional tourist meccas in Western Europe, hordes of scantily clad back packers crowding squares, sleeping in parks and bathing in public fountains have worn out the traditional welcome mat.

Local officials blocked off roads leading into Britain's breathtaking Lake District this summer to combat overcrowding. Last summer, residents of Bath in western England turned hoses on tour buses crowding their streets.

Paris Mayor Jacques Chirac this summer ordered campsites around the Eiffel Tower that are popular with East European tourists torn down.

Venice officials banned swimming in public fountains and dowsed the floors of rail stations with water each night to deter sleeping bags. It fines shirtless men in an effort to maintain a minimum of proper decorum.

The island of Capri near Naples imposes an $800 fine on any tourist who obstructs traffic, even if he is only stopping to snap a photograph.

Many tour operators and guidebook authors, such as Thomas Cook in Britain and Arthur Frommer in the United States, who helped make the tourism boom possible, are joining those expressing concern about the consequences.

THEY HAVE joined a growing movement toward "green" or "eco-tourism" that seeks to guide tourists away from overcrowded spots and to educate them about the need to be sensitive toward the areas they are visiting.

Malaysia is one country that has cashed in on the eco-tourism boom. It declared national wildlife preserves in several vast tracts of rain forests, inviting adventurers to come for tightly controlled visits.

Tours through tropical rain forests have helped bring about a tourist boom in the southeast Asian country, where revenues from tourism have tripled since 1986, hitting a record $4.5 billion last year.

"A lot of countries are beginning to wake up to the difference between 'cheap tourism' and 'quality tourism,'" said Ms. Hailes of Sustainability.

As attitudes change, tourists are finding that access to sites of natural or manmade beauty — once considered a God-given right — are becoming more expensive and restricted.

St. Paul's in London, in what many consider a sign of a future trend, now charges visitors $3.25. Churches and monuments elsewhere are controlling access by setting limits on the number of people allowed in per hour or even taking bookings for advance reservations.

China has tripled the charge for visits to Beijing's famous Forbidden City after the annual onslaught of 10 million tourists ruined walkways and steps.

In Kyoto, the ancient capital of Japan, only 20 people are allowed to enter the moss-carpeted 8th Century garden at Saiho-Ji Temple — a backlash from an onslaught of tourist buses that had brought up to 10,000 visitors a day. People must apply in advance for permission to enter and pay $25.

ANTONIO ENRIQUEZ Savignac of the World Tourism Organization, a former minister of tourism in Mexico, said that despite the problems, tourism can still be a useful development tool for countries, if properly managed.

He cited the Mexican example, where, beginning with Cancun in 1970, the government has successfully developed five resort areas by carefully planning such necessities as sewage treatment, density controls and airport access.

"The world is not overdeveloped touristically," he said. "But you do have some areas that are."

Travelers protect environment, even when far from home

By Matthew C. Vita
N.Y. Times News Service

LONDON — A wide array of ecological tours are now available to tourists concerned with their impact on the environment.

They include such activities as planting trees in a reforestation project in Nepal, cleaning litter from Andean mountain trails in Peru, studying rain forest ecology in the Amazon jungle and helping scientists band and weigh penguins in the southern Patagonia region of Argentina.

But Sutainability, an environmental consulting company in London, is one of several organizations publishing guides on how even more traditional tourists can help save the Earth — while still enjoying themselves.

"We're not saying don't go on holiday, because that would be unrealistic," said Julia Hailes, who coauthored the guide (called "Holidays that Don't Cost the Earth") due out in January. "But we're trying to show people what they can do to make their presence more positive."

Some advice contained in the report:

■ When choosing your vacation, ask what the tour operator or resort are doing to help the environment. Are they recycling? Are they putting money back into the local community?

■ Choose the most environmentally friendly means of travel. "The best thing is to say 'why don't you walk to your holiday,'" Ms. Hailes said. While that's unrealistic, she said, you can often go by train instead of car or plane.

■ Pick your vacation activities with the environment in mind. Sometimes this includes the obvious, such as taking your litter with you from the beach. But often it involves being sensitive to the local community by such behavior as dressing properly in public or avoiding making noise in places of worship.

■ When visiting historical monuments or sites, wear shoes that will do less damage to floors and steps. Don't wear high heels, for example. But also, avoid sneakers, which track in lots of sand and dirt.

■ Don't expect everything to be just like home. For example, if you're camping in the Himalayas, don't demand hot showers or cooked food all the time. It results in more trees being chopped down and more deforestation.

"As a green tourist, you have a lot of power to create change for the better," Ms. Hailes said. "You can bring about a lot of pressure on the tourist industry in addition to behaving differently when you're away."

Visitors to Belize enjoy casual lifestyle

By Kiana Dicker
N.Y. Times News Service

The lure of Mayan ruins secreted in tropical hardwood forests draws many visitors to the Central American country of Belize.

But for the desert dweller, the pull of crystal waters dotted with numerous islands called cays (pronounced keys) and lined with white beaches protected by coral reef is irresistible.

All international flights land at Belize City, which is a little sad and shabby after being battered by Hurricane Hattie in 1961. The government moved inland to a new capital, Belmopan, in 1970, taking the vitality out of the city of timber houses on stilts.

However, this 300-year-old city built out of swampland on broken bottles and mahogany logs is a good base to tour the Mayan ruins of Tikal, Xunantunich and Altun Ho or visit the Mennonite communities or trek through the natural beauty of rain forest reserves and the jaguar sanctuary.

Once home to pirates, Belize City provides American-style resort accommodations at Radisson Fort George, Somerset Maugham elegance at Fort George Guest House and Villa Hotel or bed and breakfast at the Orchidia, where tropical drinks are served on a flower-encrusted, wrought-iron balcony.

THIS YEAR, Belize celebrates 20 years of independence from British colonial rule, when it was called British Honduras.

Independence Day is Sept. 21, and settlements across the land burst into festivity. English is the national language but Spanish, Garifuna, Mayan and Creole also are spoken. The folks in the Tourist Office, 53 Regent St., are very helpful.

But heed the call of cool waters, the magic of a wall of coral reef populated by brightly-hued tropical fish — this is the longest barrier reef in the Western Hemisphere — and a multitude of cays are dotted off shore. A bevy of high-speed motor boats leave from the dock behind the Shell station on Front Street and skim the surf, plane the waves to island paradise: Cay Caulker.

Once a pirate's playground, Cay Caulker, is now home to fishermen catching lobster, conch, bonefish, barracuda, grouper, sailfish and giant marlin for export. Their wives and sisters stay behind and run a skeleton of guest houses, bed and breakfasts and beachside cottages.

Cheap and cheery restaurants nestle with open air bars around the main dock. By afternoon the cake ladies walk the streets selling slices of powder cake, upside-down pineapple cake, doughnuts and banana bread sheltered under checkered cloth.

Egrets stalk the shore and pink spoonbills wade through the seaweed patches while pelicans dive for fish and frigate birds surf the airwaves. Babies swing in hammocks on clapboard porches while kittens and cats wait for returning fishermen to clean their day's catch.

THE COASTLINE is punctuated with piers of grooved, weathered wood. As night falls, people gather at the end of the pier and watch the blush of sunset give way to a canopy of constellation clusters. Overhead is a sparkle of shooting stars. Underfoot a flash of phosphorescence twinkles from the dark water.

Cay-hopping travelers sail out over the Caribbean. A favorite destination is the crescent-shaped Half Moon Cay heralded by the beat of the historic lighthouse beacon. Home to nesting turtles and nearly extinct red-footed booby birds, the tiny atoll sports white sand beaches and clear waters with 200 foot visibility.

Offshore is the Blue Hole, a sinkhole dropping 400 feet beneath the sea, explored by Yves Jacques Cousteau in 1984. Diving adventurers investigate the stalactite and stalagmite studded cave.

Of all the cays, Ambergris has the most-developed tourist industry. Tucked under the southern most tip of Mexico's Yucatan, Ambergris Cay's shoreline is dotted with multistoryed, thatched resorts encircling heavily planted courtyards.

Jet skis and paddleboats are parked on the beaches. The main drag of San Pedro Town is lined with boutiques selling black coral jewelry, zericote hardwood carvings and T-shirts emblazoned with "You'd better Belize it" and "Seeing is Belizing."

Scuba and snorkel fans head out to the Hol Chan Marine Reserve where for $3 divers can investigate the reef. No fishing is allowed in the reserve and friendly tarpon, yellowtail snapper, giant-sized angel fish and brilliantly colored parrot fish swim by to inspect their human visitors.

Pressed into the edge of the dock, the bar has created an aquarium within the ocean housing marine creatures from the deep water beyond the reef's protecting wall. Manta ray, sea turtles and sharks hosting lampreys entertain the bar's patrons.

At this bar's entrance, as at the doorway to most of the eating and drinking establishments, is inscribed the local motto: "No shoes, no shirt, no problem."

VERMILION, Ohio — Lester A. Pelton, a miner and inventor born here in 1829, joined the gold rush to California in 1850, later moving to the gold and silver mines of Nevada.

In 1880, he designed the Pelton water wheel for a stamp mill, transforming water power into electricity.

It was the first effective means of obtaining hydroelectric power in the United States.

AT WIT'S END

Movie gives doctors well-deserved needle

By Erma Bombeck

"The Doctor," starring William Hurt, is one of the finest films I've seen in years. The story of a heart surgeon who becomes a patient in his own hospital touches you in a hundred ways. But there is one moment that depicts a hero-come-to-save-us scene never before equaled on the big screen.

Bombeck

It is when the doctor turns to a group of young medical students — who breathe only purified air and refer to their patients by disease — to inform them that for the next 72 hours, they will be patients. They will endure everything, from unneeded tests to the humiliation of wearing hospital gowns that are half the size of their bill printout. For 72 hours, they will know how it feels to be scared, vulnerable and ignorant of what is going on.

At that moment, William Hurt becomes John Wayne leading the cavalry to save the wagon train. He is Indiana Jones swinging on a vine to save the heroine from a pit of vipers. He is Charlton Heston parting the Red Sea. The little people have a hero.

When the applause in the theater died down, it became clear that each member of the audience had suffered his own indignity. Some of it is self-inflicted. We are intimidated by the medical profession to the point where we don't ask questions. When we do ask them, we don't understand the answers. We trust them because we're afraid to do otherwise. I once saved urine for eight days, dribbling it into a jar from a small paper cup a drop at a time, until one day a doctor said in one breath, "Who ordered this? Get rid of it."

Not all of the medical profession deserves this exercise in humility, and certainly doctors aren't the only group who could benefit from a course in role reversal. Lawyers are notorious for listening to your story for two hours and then saying, "I'll get back to you." You don't hear squat from them again until you see them playing golf with the lawyer who represents your opponent. You have no idea what is going on.

Closer to home, I have always thought the publicist who arranged book tours should be handed a fistful of airline tickets and a 10-page, 15-city schedule to endure before he is allowed to enter the office. Let him (or her) try to do Larry King at midnight in Washington and be in Los Angeles in time for the morning show with a 15-minute connection in St. Louis in the dead of winter.

The audience filed out of "The Doctor" with smiles on their faces. They had seen good triumph over evil. They had seen the good guy win. They had seen arrogance rewarded with revenge. If voting members of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences have ever been a hostage of hospital bureacracy and impersonal treatment, this film could sweep the Academy Awards.

DEAR ABBY

Wheelchair doesn't limit to zest for life

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I speak for the people who are in wheelchairs permanently, having been in one myself for a short time following a head injury.

Van Buren

Recently, I went to a concert in the park. I noticed a man in a wheelchair struggling to get to the dancing area. As he approached people, he would reach out as far as he could with his better hand. He was rejected time after time — or just plain ignored.

Finally, my heart just couldn't take it anymore, so I walked over to him, took his hand and started swinging it back and forth to the rhythm of the music. Then I "danced" quickly around his wheelchair as I held his hand.

Ordinarily, I am scared to death to perform in front of people, but I was as peaceful and self-assured as I could be.

The only thing I saw was the look of happiness in his face. When the song ended, he pulled me close enough to give me a sweet little kiss on the cheek. After that, others "danced" with him, and he had a wonderful time.

Abby, I ask everyone to treat people in wheelchairs as if they were standing up — to recognize their courage and realize that they have the same feelings as you do. — CELESTE RICE, LORANE, ORE.

DEAR CELESTE: Thank you for a letter that warmed my heart and will be appreciated by many.

DEAR ABBY: My problem may seem insignificant compared to some you receive, but I need to air my feelings, and I hope my in-laws see this:

"Harry" and I have been married for 20 years (no children). We aren't poor, but he still gives me a weekly allowance for groceries. I worked the first nine years of our marriage, but I finally quit because all I was allowed to do with the money was make car payments on "our" car, which Harry drove most of the time.

Over the years, my in-laws have given us cards with checks enclosed for Christmas and anniversaries. They just hand the envelope to Harry in front of me, he promptly pockets it, and I never see it again. Once, I noticed that the check was made out for $1,000 to both of us.

If my in-laws ever asked me what we did with the money, I'd tell them the truth, but they have never asked. A few times I've asked Harry, and he said, "I've got it." End of conversation.

Don't mention "divorce," which I have considered a few times, but Harry would kill me before he'd give me a divorce. And lately, there have been times when I wish he would. — TRAPPED

DEAR TRAPPED: Marriage should be a partnership; yours is more like a master-and-slave relationship. Christmas and anniversary checks from the in-laws should be spent on something you can both enjoy, something for your home or a vacation trip. They should not go into your husband's pocket never to be seen again.

But there's more than material inequality ailing your marriage. Please see a marriage counselor. If Harry refuses to go — go without him. And if you still would "rather be dead," ending your miserable marriage is preferable to ending your life.

WORTH NOTING: "If the First Amendment means anything, it means that a state has no business telling a man, sitting alone in his house, what books he may read or what films he may watch." — RETIRED JUSTICE THURGOOD MARSHALL, U.S. SUPREME COURT furnishing, just as seen on TV, are there for all to see. Some of the furnishings are vary valuable antiques. Even the jackets and cowboy hats worn by Hoss (played by the late Dan Blocker) and Little Joe (played by the late Michael Landon) are hanging by the door where they always placed them when coming home.

During the tour of the ranch house, the guide shows how one wall of the home slides back to reveal a room to the side of the living area. This room was where a majority of the television crew was located while filming each episode. The guide also will point out a small removable wooden panel in the arch of the living area where a single camera man could perch to take the overview shots of the living area. Although the television series eluded that the home had a second floor, the orginal home only has a staircase leading to a fake upstairs. All upstairs shots were filmed in a studio.

In the barn just in front of the Cartwright ranch house, a 15-minute video detailing the history of "Bonaza" and showing a few clips from some of the episodes plays throughout the day. The hiking trail beyond the home offers a perfect vantage place for photographing the lake.

However, other than the ranch house and a shop along the main street which houses many photographs of the show's stars with various other people, don't look for any other authentic memorabilia from the Ponderosa. The remainder of the ranch is dedicated to displays of antique cars (some of which are said to have been used in the filming of "Bonanza: The Next Generation"), farm equipment, a wedding chapel, souvenir and snack shops in a re-created Western street, restaurant, an arcade and an animal petting farm.

FOR THOSE PLANNING travel to the area, the LTVA offers a free Travel Planner — an 80-page, magazine-styled guide that contains details on recreation, lodging, nightlife, history, dining, shopping, wedding services, meeting facilities and transportation. By calling 1-800-AT-TAHOE at least two weeks before you plan to visit, the planner will be mailed to you. A free lodging guide also is available.

The LTVA also offers an Instant Visitor Information phone line. By calling 1-900-776-5050, callers can select from a menu of current information on seasonal recreations, weather and road conditions, entertainment and special events and general data including Tahoe trivia, transportation options and wedding information. The cost of the call is $1 per minute and any revenue generated from the phone line will be used to offset the cost of the toll-free number.
