Plan unveiled to 'reinvent government'

Proposal designed to eliminate waste, saving $108 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Flanked by forklifts carrying reams of rules and regulations he hopes to cut from the federal bureaucracy, President Clinton today unveiled plans to cut, consolidate and reshape the government, saving $108 billion by the century's end.

Clinton said his effort to "reinvent government" will "rebuild the confidence of the American people in this great American enterprise."

The streamlined government would have 252,000 fewer jobs, with thousands of federal employees phased out through attrition, buyouts, early retirement and retraining for private sector jobs.

Reducing the civilian, non-postal work force by 12 percent over the next five years would bring the federal payroll below 2 million employees for the first time since 1967.

Echoing his statements in March that launched the National Performance Review, Clinton said: "Make no mistake about this. This is one report that will not gather dust in a warehouse."

He asked every American to read the breezily written 168-page report, and promised to "discuss it in great detail" with legislators.

Vice President Al Gore, Clinton's point man on the six-month study of government, said Monday fewer than half of the 800-plus recommendations in his National Council to set tax rate

Snyder City Council will be considering a tax rate hike of about 1½ cents when it convenes at 6:30 this evening at City Hall.

The tax rate, four requests for motel tax funds and an ordinance to approve increases in water, sewer and sanitation rates are among the business for council members this evening.

The board will also consider awarding bids for a bank depository, hospitalization and refuse containers, and will review a proposed franchise agreement with TU Electric.

Council members are considering a tax rate of 39.84 cents per $100 valuation for 1993-94, just over a 1½ -cent increase over last year's rate of 38.29 cents. City officials note that property values dropped $7.2 million last year. This year's proposed tax rate will bring in $818,067, as opposed to $819,936 in taxes for fiscal year 1992-93.

The budget for 1993-94 is $7,013,610, a 13 percent increase over last year. The key expense is compliance with new landfill requirements. City officials point out that the capital outlay in sanitation is over $1 million, a 476 percent increase over the $176,000 in 1992-93.

The board is expected to approve an ordinance reflecting changes in water, sewer and sanitation rates. In general, the ordinance reflects the following rate increases:

—Water will increase from $7.70 for the first 2,000 gallons to $7.80. In addition, the cost per 1,000 gallons will increase from $2 to $2.15.

—Sewer will increase from a base charge of $6 to $7 and the cost per 1,000 gallons will increase from $1.80 to $1.86. The base bill per service will increase from $9.34 to $10.35 a month.

—Sanitation rates for residential customers will double, from $7.25 to $14.50 per month and the basic commercial rate will triple, from $9.50 to $28.05.

—The ordinance includes an increase in the water deposit from $45 to $65 for residential customers and $55 to $75 for commercial customers.

According to city officials, the base or minimum residential bill will increase from $24.29 a month to $32.65 a month.

Four requests for motel tax funds will be presented. They include:

--A request from Jan McCathern, assistant professor at Western Texas College, for $4,595 for the Brock Memorial Speech Tournament.

--A request from the chamber of commerce for $2,500 for the Texas Cowboy Rodeo Association Finals.

--A request from the chamber for $8,752.68 for 7,500 maps, or $9,460 for 10,000 maps for economic development recruitment and tourism.

--A request from the chamber for $2,093 for the repair and painting of a billboard on U.S. Highway 84.

An ordinance which would amend the franchise agreement with the city and TU Electric will also be considered this evening. Under the agreement, the rate the company pays the city would increase from 3 percent of its gross receipts to 4 percent.

A report on a meeting of cities served by TU Electric raised concerns about the proposed agreement.

However, the city is expected to join more than 300 other cities which have approved the agreement.

Half-cent telephone tax proposal sparks discussion by court

Discussion of a proposed half-cent telephone tax dominated a final budget workshop for county commissioners this morning.

The proposed county budget, excluding the hospital, is $5.8 million. Commissioners have been considering a three percent tax rate increase to finance the proposal. A three percent hike would place the tax rate at 49.87 cents, compared to the current rate of 44.31 cents.

The court appeared in agreement over the budget, but when Precinct 2 Commissioner Roy Idom questioned the proposed half-cent telephone tax, a discussion was sparked.

Idom pointed out that the added half-cent tax will be a "double-whammy" to the people who live in Snyder because the city already charges a half-cent tax on telephone users.

Precinct 1 Commissioner Ralph Trevey said he is in favor of the tax because it will come off the ad valorem tax. He said when he explained that to people who were opposed to the tax, they were able to understand the tax better.

County Judge Bob Doolittle said if the commissioners are not willing to impose the tax, they will have to "tighten their belts" in order to make the budget work. Precinct 3 Commissioner C.D. Gray Jr. said he is not in a position to cut down on services to his precinct, and in order to cut back, he will have to spend less on his budget. Gray continued his support for the tax.

If the tax is not imposed when the budget is passed on Wednesday, the $30,000 that would have been generated from the tax will have to come from the county's surplus, which will be just over $1 million at the end of this year, said County Treasurer Eddie McHaney.

Trevey said if the tax is not imposed and the money comes out of surplus funds, the budget for the following year will have to be amended in the same way, eventually leaving the county "broke."

The court will convene Wednesday at 10 a.m. to pass the budget and set the tax rate for 1994.

Judge Doolittle presided over the workshop, attended by commissioners Gray, Idom, Trevey and Jerry Gannaway.

Election of officers planned for United Way this evening

Nominations are in and a Scurry County United Way organizational group hopes to elect officers today to get the 1993-94 campaign underway.

The group will meet at 5:15 p.m. in the Snyder Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse office, located on the west side of the city square.

"I think we'll be able to nominate and elect officers and hopefully plan the kick-off luncheon," said Claudia Fields, Noah Project outreach coordinator.

Fields said that once officers are elected, division chairpersons will be named and a budget committee appointed. She is hopeful the budget committee will then meet quickly, to set the goal for 1993-94.

Only about 75 percent of last year's goal of $60,000 was collected, forcing several of the United Way organizations to hold special fund-raisers to help make ends meet.

United Way agencies have been Noah Project, Scurry County Boys Club, Snyder Child Day Care Center, Oil Patch Foster Parents and Snyder Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse. Some others, including local scouting organizations, the Salvation Army and Red Cross, were cut from last year's list.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "It's impossible to dream ourselves into what we want to be."

"Shop at home" has long been a chamber of commerce slogan. Jim Reynolds, editor of the Tulia Herald, recently had a thought-provoking editorial that could apply to most West Texas towns. He wrote:

"Shop Tulia while it's still here.

"That was the message an individual requested to be placed as a paid advertisement in The Tulia Herald. This is a message to be heeded, but it likely will not be taken to heart by a number of individuals.

"A teacher in this town, which has two restaurants specializing in pizza, drove to Plainview to buy pizza for a school function. The following week, students who participated in this function paid visits to both local pizza restaurants...seeking donations?

"A local non-profit organization in the same town was catering a meal for a major town activity. They went to Lubbock for the food, then asked the local food store manager for major discounts on last minutes odds and ends to complete and serve the meal.

"The practice of driving out of town is 'killing the goose that laid the golden egg.' Who will fund all types of local endeavors — school yearbooks, gifts for senior citizens' events, livestock show premiums, youth baseball team sponsors, bowling team sponsors, picnic celebration sponsors and numerous others? The vast majority of these funds come from local buinesses.

"Sheer and simple, small town merchants can't stay in business and support worthwhile local activities if potential customers spend all their dollars in Amarillo, Plainview and Lubbock."

Senator pledges to testify

HOUSTON (AP) — U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison will comply with a subpoena ordering her to testify before a Travis County grand jury, a spokesman for her says.

The grand jury is examining allegations that Mrs. Hutchison used state workers and equipment for personal and political purposes during her 21/2-year tenure at the Texas Treasury.

David Beckwith, an aide to the Republican senator, said Sunday that Mrs. Hutchison will forgo her constitutional right to ignore the subpoena issued for a day when the Senate will be in session.

The panel had asked her to appear Thursday or Friday. After Mrs. Hutchison offered to show up the following Monday, the subpoena was issued.

"She voluntarily agreed to appear one working day later," Beckwith told The Houston Post. "But (District Attorney) Ronnie Earle is so arrogant and so obsessed with conducting this political witch hunt that he is going to yank her out of the United States Senate to stage this media circus at the courthouse."

Beckwith would not say if there are areas of questioning that could prompt Mrs. Hutchison to refuse to answer and claim her Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination.

But he did say that Mrs. Hutchison and her attorneys believe the subpoena is part of an attempt "to get her on some technicality."

DEAR ABBY: About three weeks ago, I ate at a fast food restaurant. An attractive young woman took my order, and since that day I haven't been able to stop thinking about her. I've never been one to fall in love at first sight, but there was something about that girl that was special.

Since then, I have returned to the restaurant several times. I know she recognizes me, and occasionally we exchange glances after I've taken a seat; however, she hasn't shown any special interest in me.

It's difficult to make small talk over the order counter, and the direct approach might put me in the same category as other men who hit on her at work, which is something I want to avoid. Love at first sight is new to me, and I don't want to wreck it.

Can you suggest some way I can gain her interest that will set me apart from every other fast food junkie?

MC FRUSTRATED

DEAR MC FRUSTRATED: You can't short-order a relationship, so don't come on too strong. You could ask one of her co-workers if the attractive young woman is married, or living (or going) with someone.

If the coast is clear, you could slip her a note saying you would like to see her if she's available — and include your telephone number. Good luck!

DEAR ABBY: Should a mother tell her daughter she should lose some weight if the daughter is 100 pounds overweight and is still in her 30s?

GARDEN GROVE, CALIF.

DEAR GARDEN GROVE: No. People who are 100 pounds overweight do not need to be told that they should lose weight. (They have told themselves that often enough.)

Telling someone he or she needs to lose weight is not helpful — it only adds to the frustration the overweight person is already experiencing.

DEAR ABBY: In 1972, I was a 45-year-old man with a terrible hangover, sitting at my desk, trying to correct the horrendous mistake that had just gotten me fired! The night before, I'd been thrown out of my house by my wife, who had made good her promise to file for divorce. Besides that, my physician advised me that I was drinking myself to death, and my priest said I was on my way to hell if I didn't quit drinking.

I looked up Alcoholics Anonymous in the phone book, dialed the number and said I had a friend who needed help.

Seeing through my subterfuge, I was asked, "Do you need help?" I broke into tears and confessed that I did.

Today, with 21 years of sobriety, I have a new career, a new home, a new family, and new hope — thanks to that one phone call that changed my life forever.

Hi-tech security at school

HOUSTON (AP) — A high-tech security system at Worthing High School is helping keep crime down as it keeps an eye on the campus and surrounding community.

"We're not saying by any stretch of the imagination that we've got it licked," said Principal Larry Alexander said. "But we feel we are on top of it."

The $15,000 system, installed nearly a year ago at the 1,100-student school, consists of five real cameras and two fake ones.

A retired coach is paid to monitor the system and report anything suspicious to the principal or to the two police officers who patrol the campus on the city's south side.

The security system, coupled with a strict dress code and an ever-vigilant staff checking passes in the hallways, has curtailed problems at the school.

Since it was installed, school administrators said, only two student fights have occurred.

Houston Independent School District police reported only 19 incidents ranging from assaults to trespassing last year — compared to 70 the year before.

"It would be a great piece of equipment in all of our schools if we could come up with the bucks," said Les Burton, director of security for HISD.

Alexander said administrators from other schools have visited Worthing to examine the system, one of the first in the Houston area.

The Worthing cameras watch the campus, but they also are powerful enough to keep tabs on the surrounding neighborhood.

One camera can zoom in on the door of a known crack house a block away, or check out a bus stop nearly two blocks away where drug deals have been witnessed.

During World War II...

More atrocities attributed to Japan

TOKYO (AP) — Dr. Ken Yuasa says he used healthy Chinese for practice surgery during World War II, removed parts of their brains and even shot prisoners in order to demonstrate how to remove bullets.

As a Japanese army doctor, Yuasa said, he tested the effectiveness of anesthetics on two healthy farmers and practiced a tracheotomy. His colleagues cut their arms, legs and intestines into pieces and then stitched them back together again.

After the surgery practice, the doctors killed their "patients," strangling one with a belt when he survived the injection of anesthetic into a vein, Yuasa said.

For decades after its surrender in 1945, Japan insisted there was no proof its military had conducted biological experiments, enslaved foreign women in brothels and made forced laborers of Chinese and Koreans.

In recent years, however, witnesses and participants have come forward in growing numbers. Their testimony and documentary evidence are embarrassing Japan into retracting denials about its atrocities during the war.

Like Yuasa, 76, most are goaded by conscience and concern that the true history of the war might die with its survivors.

Yuasa, interviewed at his Tokyo clinic, said his group killed 14 Chinese after using them for surgical practice and experiments at a military hospital in Shanxi Province, central China, between February 1942 and August 1945.

He and his colleagues also shot four prisoners in the stomach so they could remove the bullets, and extracted brain matter to provide samples to Japanese pharmaceutical companies, Yuasa said.

Hundreds of other military doctors and nurses conducted similar experiments in Shanxi Province alone, he said.

The government has never admitted its wartime military did biological experiments on living human beings. Most documents and other evidence of the experiments were destroyed at the war's end.

Canadians on top on Friday

As in last year's experiment, this year there were two Epson Worldwide Pairs, held on June 4 and 5. Clubs in 90 countries took part. Some 30,500 players competed in North America; there were 11,500 competitors in China.

The Epson is unusual in that when you finish a deal, you learn your score (from 0 to 100) immediately. The other results in your club — or anywhere — are irrelevant.

The deals are taken from tournaments held many years ago. The scores are derived from the original results.

The biggest single score was 1876 out of 2400. It was achieved on Friday, June 4, by Zhao Bao Qi and Wang Zuo Lei from China.

The best North American score on that day, 1818, was achieved by Roland Brunet and Sarko Kassabian, who live in Montreal. They did very well on today's deal from the event.

Kassabian, South, realized that he had a very strong hand. Opposite something in spades, which North must have had in order to bid three notrump, he decided to take a shot at the club slam. Even if his partner was short in clubs, perhaps the jack would drop. It pays to be aggressive in the Epson.

West led a low spade. Kassabian won in hand with the 10, played a diamond to dummy's king, ruffed a heart, ruffed a diamond, ruffed a heart, ruffed a diamond, overtook the club jack with the ace and ran the rest of his trumps. West kept two spades, so the contract made exactly.

Being plus 920 was worth 87 out of 100 matchpoints.

Io is icy moon; sharks don't sleep

Moon River

Water, water, everywhere and not a drop to drink. That's what you find if you visited Io (EYE-oh), one of Jupiter's icy moons.

For the first time, NASA scientists detected signs of water on the orange- and-yellow moon. "Unlike Earth, Io doesn't have running water," explains Dr. Fred Witteborn. "It's too cold for that." (The warmest surface on Io is a brisk minus 240 degrees F.) But there are tiny water molecules of frozen gas on Io's surface, he says.

This new discovery will help scientists figure out what the pizza-shaped moon is made of. It's definitely not cheese!

When Do Sharks Sleep?

Sharks don't sleep. Not even on the ocean bed!

Mammals, birds and reptiles sleep or snooze. Fish and amphibians, like frogs and newts, don't sleep, but sometimes they do stop moving and take a rest.

Most sharks must swim all the time to keep the water flowing through their mouths and over their gills. That's how a shark breathes. However, a few types of sharks are able to pump water over their gills — so they can take a breather. These sharks are sometimes found resting in underwater caves.

But for most sharks, the rule is "Keep cruising — no snoozing!"

Lady Tigers entertain LVHS, Water Valley in 3-way spike match

Snyder's Lady Tigers will make their second home appearance of the young volleyball season today when they host San Angelo Lake View and Water Valley in a three-way match.

The Lady Tigers, 4-8 on the campaign, are fresh from the Seminole Tournament where they split Friday pool play matches with Pecos and Denver City, before being eliminated by Big Spring, 15-11, 10-15, 17-15, in Saturday's consolation bracket.

"We played pretty well," said SHS coach Patty Grimmett. "We split with Pecos and Denver City on Friday, so it was kind of a let-down to lose to Big Spring, because we feel like we can beat them.

"Our defense really impressed me. We've improved 100 percent. Our defense did a super job."

Bianca Rocha was the Lady Tigers' top scorer in the Big Spring match, serving 11 winners, including an ace. C'Ella Clayton put in eight and Kristi McClure and Sterling Cave had six each.

Tonight's varsity matches begin at 5 p.m. at Snyder High School. Junior varsity action, slated for Snyder Junior High, also tips off at 5 p.m.

Redskins scalp 'Pokes, 35-16

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys learned what the Washington Redskins found out last season: Sitting on top of the world as Super Bowl champions can be a slippery slope.

A year ago, the Cowboys knocked the Redskins off in a similar season opener at Texas Stadium.

At RFK Stadium on Monday night, the Redskins, taking advantage of Emmitt Smith's holdout, returned the favor with a 35-16 rout. It was the most points the Cowboys gave up since their 1-15 season of 1989.

But even if the NFL's top rusher of the past two years had reached a financial agreement with Cowboys owner Jerry Jones and played, the end result probably would have been the same.

The Cowboys lost the ball four times on fumbles, including twice on botched punt returns. And they allowed Washington's new offense 171 yards rushing, more than twice the yardage they gave up to the Redskins in two games last year.

Lin Elliott's missed extra point after the Cowboys jumped to a 6-0 lead on an 80-yard touchdown pass from Troy Aikman to Alvin Harper in the first quarter may have been an omen.

"We didn't play nearly as well as we're capable of," Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson said, adding that he is "sick and tired of talking about Emmitt Smith."

Team owner Jones, however, may be having second thoughts about his vow last week not to reconsider upping his $2.5 million offer to Smith unless the Cowboys lose their first two games. On Sunday, Dallas faces the AFC champion Buffalo Bills, another team with something to prove after their 52-17 Super Bowl loss to the Cowboys last January.

Meanwhile, Redskins quarterback Mark Rypien returned to his 1991 Super Bowl form after a disastrous season a year ago, completing 22 of 34 passes for 161 yards, including three for touchdowns.

"For the most part, they really didn't have a bead on what we were doing," Rypien said of the new two-back sets and the quick, short pass timing routes that rookie head coach Richie Petitbon has added to the Redskins' playbook.

"We're going to spread the ball around, make people defend everybody," said Petitbon, making his debut as Joe Gibbs' successor. "It's just one game, you can't read any more into it. But I think potentially we have a chance to be a pretty good football team."

Not that the Redskins didn't make mistakes, too. No defender was within 15 yards of Harper when he caught Aikman's 20-yard pass over the middle and sprinted 60 yards for Dallas' first score.

And after the Cowboys narrowed the Redskins' margin to 21-13 early in the third period on a 32-yard touchdown from Aikman to Harper, Brian Mitchell, thinking he was in the end zone, downed the following kickoff on the Redskins 1.

That mistake, however, gave the Redskins a lift. Mitchell recovered quickly, picking up 12 yards on two carries as Washington moved the ball out to the 24. Rypien then completed five straight passes, including a 29-yarder to Art Monk to put the ball on Dallas' 15-yard line.

Two plays later, he hit Monk again in the end zone to give Washington a 28-13 lead going into the fourth quarter.

"That 99-yard drive was the turning point of the game after they cut our lead," Petitbon said. "We made enough mistakes to beat ourselves, but we came back."

Finally, Mitchell ran for a 29-yard touchdown with 2:12 left on the clock after Elliott made it 28-16 with a 22-yard field goal with just under five minutes remaining.

Palmeiro blasts two homers in 8-5 victory over Yankees

ARLINGTON (AP) — Rafael Palmeiro can become a free agent at the end of the season. The way he's going, Palmeiro stands to become a rich man next year, whatever team he plays for.

The Texas first baseman enjoyed another big game Monday, hammering his 33rd and 34th homers, stroking two doubles and finishing with four RBIs as the Rangers's 8-5 victory prevented the New York Yankees from taking over sole possession of first place in the AL East.

"It's his free agent year and everybody knows this guy is a ballplayer," Rangers manager Kevin Kennedy said.

Palmeiro said the gratification from Monday night's outburst didn't come from the fact that he pushed his RBI total to a career-high 93.

He said his only concern was that the Rangers kept alive their flickering hopes for a division title, moving into second place in the AL West, six games behind the Chicago White Sox.

"All that matters is winning," said Palmeiro, who tied club single-game records for extra base hits (four) and total bases (12).

"It (the RBI total) isn't that important to me," Palmeiro said. "If we can put together a good homestand and Chicago loses a few games, we'll be right back in the race."

Palmeiro's second inning double off the wall in right field drove in two runs to give the Rangers a 5-0 lead. He had another near-miss bid for a homer in the first when his drive to center field hit high off the wall for a double.

He added solo homers in the fourth and seventh to surpass his previous career-high RBI total of 89 set in 1990.

"Another couple of feet and I'd have had four home runs," Palmeiro said. "But I'll take it. The best ball I hit was the double to center. That's the deepest part of the ballpark and you have to hit it good to get it out there."

The Yankees have been tied for the top spot in the division eight different times but have never been alone in first place. Yet the Yankees insisted frustration hasn't set in.

"We're not going to jump off a bridge or anything," Danny Tartabull said. "We've just got to keep playing hard."

Said Yankees manager Buck Showalter: "It would have been nice to go into first place. Any time you get the opportunity to put pressure on them you'd like to take advantage of it.

"We buried ourselves early and it's tough to come back. I'm not happy about it but we're still close. It's important that it happens, not when it happens."

Rangers starter Roger Pavlik (10-6) threw no-hit ball over the first four innings before Paul O'Neill hit the first pitch of the fifth for a sharp single up the middle.

Astros hand Mets 7-2 loss

NEW YORK (AP) — Luis Gonzalez hit a career-high 14th homer and tied a career high with five RBIs, and Houston's Pete Harnisch pitched four-hit ball over seven innings as the Astros dusted the Mets 7-2.

Gonzalez hit a two-run double in the sixth off New York's Pete Schourek and a three-run homer in the eighth off Mauro Gozzo.

Harnisch (13-8) struck out five and walked three.

Sid Fernandez (3-6) left after five innings with soreness in his left shoulder. He allowed two runs and three hits.

Manuel Avila, R.T. Henderson, Vivian Norwood and Holly Sarefield combined for a 60 and won a scorecard playoff for the championship of Monday's Labor Day ABCD Scramble at Snyder Country Club.

Finishing second, also with a 60, was the team of Randy Weaver, Don Sealy, Morris Light and Randi Head. Bill Moss, Judy Moss, Travis Hatter and Bill Seale wound up in third place just one shot off the pace, and the foursome of Alton Patterson, Curtis Edwards, Cynthia Jackson and John Greene took fourth with a 62.

Dobson claims title at Rail Classic

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Helen Dobson needed a big finish at the State Farm Rail Classic to keep her LPGA playing card in 1994.

She did more than enough, earning $75,000 by finishing first Monday, sinking a birdie putt on the fifth playoff hole, the par-5, 531-yard 17th, against Dottie Mochrie, the 1992 LPGA player of the year.

"It's nice to know I can beat people out here if I play well," Dobson said.

Dobson had just $6,000 in LPGA earnings this year going into the Rail Classic, about $29,000 less than she needed to crack the top 90 on the tour. The first 90 money-winners automatically get to keep their LPGA cards next year, but Dobson's tour victory clinches a two-year exemption.

Dobson, playing in just her seventh LPGA event, and Mochrie, finished 54 holes of regulation play at 13-under-par 203. Dobson, from England, shot a closing 1-under 71, while Mochrie, making up three shots in the final nine holes, closed with a 68.

Sukova ousts Navratilova

NEW YORK (AP) — Six games into the match, Martina Navratilova knew she was in trouble. Sixteen games later, no American was in the women's quarterfinals of the U.S. Open for the first time in history.

"I blew it," Navratilova said after falling to Helena Sukova 7-5, 6-4. "I didn't make anything happen. I tried. I am very disappointed. But you know, I gave it my best shot."

The Louis Armstrong Stadium crowd agreed. When the match ended, the applause, scattered at first, grew in intensity, honoring the woman who has won more tournaments that any other pro player in history, including four U.S. Opens and a record nine Wimbledons.

Navratilova, a month shy of 37, lacked the sting on her volleys and bite on her serve against Sukova, an old rival. Neither seemed able to knock the other out, but Sukova landed enough blows to take the close decision.

In the quarterfinals, Sukova will play unseeded Katerina Maleeva of Bulgaria, who beat her younger sister, 10th-seeded Magdalena, 6-2, 6-3. No. 2 Arantxa Sanchez Vicario of Spain will meet Natalia Zvereva of Belarus.

Sanchez Vicario defeated No. 14 Natalie Tauziat of France 6-4, 6-3 and Zvereva stopped Argentina's Maria Jose Gaidano, a "lucky loser" who got her chance in the main draw when stomach cramps forced Mary Joe Fernandez to withdraw.

The first four men's quarterfinalists are No. 2 Pete Sampras, No. 7 Michael Chang, No. 12 Thomas Muster of Austria and No. 14 Alexander Volkov of Russia.

Sampras defeated Sweden's Thomas Enqvist 6-4, 6-4, 7-6 (7-4); Chang stopped South Africa's Wayne Ferreira 6-4, 6-3, 6-4; Muster outlasted Brad Gilbert 6-2, 7-5, 6-7 (5-7), 6-2; and Volkov ousted unseeded Chuck Adams 6-2, 7-6 (7-2), 6-1.

This wasn't the first time that Sukova spoiled Navratilova's parade. Their lives, in fact, have touched in strange ways.

A native of Czechoslovakia, Navratilova defected at the 1975 U.S. Open. The head of the Czechsoslovak players at the time was Vera Sukova, Helena's mother.

In 1984, Sukova pulled off a shocking upset at the Australian Open, snapping Navratilova's record 74-match winning streak, breaking her Grand Slam victory streak at six consecutive titles and denying Navratilova a calendar-year Grand Slam.

"It came into my mind the last game when I was serving," Sukova said. "I remember in that match back in Australia, I was 40-love up on my serve, trying to serve it out. I went to her forehand and lost all those points, and the one I serve to her backhand won me the match."

Frosh claim tourney title

Brandy Roberge served a total of 27 points in three matches to lead the Snyder Lady Tiger freshman A team to the championship of the Snyder Volleyball Tournament Saturday.

The Lady Tigers opened the tourney with a 15-2, 15-5 domination of Midland Greenwood, then outlasted Levelland, 15-6, 10-15, 15-12, to earn a spot in the title match against Abilene Cooper Blue.

Roberge hit eight points in the championship match as SHS topped Cooper, 15-9, 15-5.

Raechele Wemken scored 17 for Snyder in the tournament, followed by Samantha Trevino's 14, 12 from Shawn Purcell, Nicole Lyons and Monie Pena with 10 apiece, nine by Erica Garvin and Tyra Brooks' three.

Snyder's B team lost its first two meetings at Saturday's tournament, falling to Cooper 15-12, 15-4, then losing to Water Valley, 15-2, 15-12.

Leading scorers for the B team were Shauna Huddleston, who put in 10 points, and Angela Rodriguez, who slapped six. Brandi Cortez lifted five points, Sarah Knowles hit four, Christi Whitney punched three and Claudia Hinojos managed two.

The SHS frosh will return to the court Thursday at 5 p.m. at Abilene Cooper for a match rescheduled from Monday.

Another heartbreaking story...

Reformed father fights for custody of his son

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Michael, a rambunctious 21/2-year-old, plays in his back yard with no idea his future lies in the hands of a judge thrust into the role of King Solomon.

Like the now-famous Baby Jessica, Michael is caught in a heartbreaking adoption limbo.

But while Jessica was fought over by two couples, Michael is caught between the couple who raised him since birth, John and Peggy Stenbeck, and his biological father, Mark King, a troubled young man who has cleaned up his act and says he is ready to be a parent. In another difference, the boy's biological mother, Stephanie Harman, opposes King's efforts and supports the adoption.

Juvenile Court Judge Michael Wellington, by his own admission, is having a tougher time than the wise biblical king in deciding who should have the child, mostly because of a shift in California law.

King, a 24-year-old former drug abuser and high school dropout, says the Stenbecks and Ms. Harman have conspired in "legalized kidnapping."

The Stenbecks learned of King's intentions days after the birth but say they went ahead with adoption plans because Ms. Harman, a longtime family friend, was adamant King would be a bad parent.

Mrs. Stenbeck believes taking Michael away now from the family he grew up with would devastate him.

Ms. Harman has vowed to go to court if necessary to try to regain custody herself rather than see Michael go to King.

Ms. Harman and King, both of Prescott, Ariz., broke up before Michael was born on Feb. 27, 1991. The Stenbecks supported Ms. Harman, then 16, during her pregnancy.

The unwed teen-ager came to San Diego to arrange for the adoption. She told the Stenbecks that she wasn't ready to be a mother and that King had a history of drug and alcohol use and a violent temper. The Stenbecks contend King told them before the birth that he did not oppose the adoption, though he denies that.

King admits he abused alcohol and drugs. At one point he pleaded guilty to domestic violence and was sentenced to counseling after he was arrested on suspicion of assaulting Ms. Harman. Four months before Michael was born, King attempted suicide.

But then King surprised everyone. He stopped taking drugs and got his high school equivalency diploma and a steady job. He filed for custody one day after Michael was born.

"I want to be able to experience being a parent to my son," he says. "I want to be there for him."

At the time he filed for custody, state law appeared to be against him. In 1991, a Juvenile Court judge ruled the Stenbecks could adopt Michael, saying it was in the child's best interest. King appealed.

A few months later, state law suddenly shifted when the California Supreme Court, in another case, ruled that a father who demonstrates a willingness to be a parent should be given the opportunity.

Last August, an appeals court denied the Stenbecks' adoption and sent the case back to Juvenile Court. King was granted regular visits with Michael, who has been growing up with an older brother, John Timothy, now 4, who also is adopted.

In the Baby Jessica case, Jan and Roberta DeBoer of Ann Arbor, Mich., were forced after a long legal battle to return the 21/2-year-old to her birth parents, Dan and Cara Schmidt of Blairstown, Iowa. The Schmidts had broken up before Jessica's birth but later married and fought together for her return.

Michael is a blond, blue-eyed whirlwind, jumping on his bunk bed, ripping apart a toy or pouncing on the lap of the man he calls "Daddy," John Stenbeck.

"We're a family unit," said Mrs. Stenbeck, 33. "Anybody can come into this home and see what Michael wants."

Two accidents claim 10 lives

FLORESVILLE (AP) — Ten people died in Wilson County over the Labor Day weekend in a traffic accident and unrelated house fire that each claimed five lives.

All members of a South Texas family died in a fire that destroyed their rural home, Wilson County Sheriff Joe Tackitt said Monday.

The fire in the Eagle Creek Ranch subdivision was believed to have been Saturday night but was not discovered until Sunday, Tackitt said.

Sunday night, five people were killed when a pickup traveling on the wrong side of the road struck a car head-on, the Texas Department of Public Safety said.

The fire victims were identified the victims as Vernon and Charlene Pollok, both 34, and their three boys, Brad, 10; Craig, 8; and 2-year-old Darren.

There were no obvious signs of foul play, the sheriff said.

The home had smoke alarms and was equipped with a fire extinguisher, but it was unknown whether the alarms functioned when the blaze erupted, Tackitt said.

Because some houses in the subdivision are built on heavily wooded five-acre tracts, officials said, it wouldn't be unusual for a fire to go undetected.

"It is kind of an isolated area, and I understand the (nearest neighbors) were at a wedding Saturday night ... they may not have been at home when the fire occurred," the sheriff said.

The collision took place about 10:30 p.m. Sunday on U.S. 181 in Wilson County, said Laureen Chernow, a spokeswoman for the Department of Public Safety.

A 1984 Nissan pickup was traveling south in the northbound lane of the road when it collided with the car, Chernow said.

The driver of the car, Bernadine Richter Mutz, 36, of Floresville, died in the crash. Also killed were her husband, Peter, 39, and son Dustin, 13.

James Dugie Jr., 24, the driver of the pickup, and a passenger, Richard Don Howton, 17, both of San Antonio, also died in the wreck.

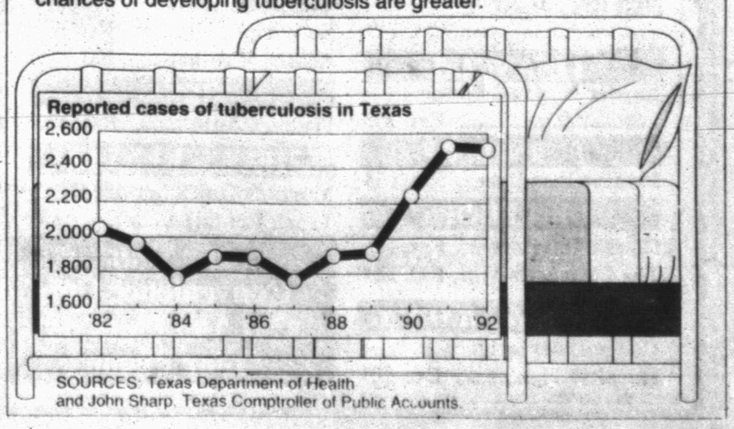

The Mutz' other son, Joshua, 10, was in critical condition Monday at Wilford Hall Medical Center in San Antonio, said Blair Bossie, a spokesman for the hospital.

Officials said the family was returning to their rural Wilson County home after visiting relatives in Floresville.

Keeping an eye on Texas

Texas TB cases increase

Texas has seen an increase in tuberculosis cases in recent years. The increase is expected to continue, in part because the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention revised its definition of AIDS in January 1993 to include tuberculosis. With HIV/AIDS, the chances of developing tuberculosis are greater.

Labor Day....time to say goodbye to summer

by The Associated Press

It has been anything but work the past few days as Texans said goodbye to the too short, sometimes too hot summer in traditional Labor Day style.

Many Lone Star residents took one last trip to the beach, area lakes and other favorite swimming holes during the three-day holiday weekend, which marks summer's official end.

Others barbecued in their backyards, went to the park to picnic and feasted on high school, college and professional football.

"We've been real lucky. The water conditions have been great. It's been beautiful," Galveston Beach Patrol Maj. Vic Macio said Monday.

Thousands flocked to Galveston Island, but Macio said the crowds were not quite as large as expected. Macio said the heavy football schedule and the fact that school already had begun probably contributed to the lower turnout.

"There were just so many other things going on," he said.

While some were outside exercising their holiday away, others slipped into their recliners this weekend to while away the hours on another favorite pastime — watching football.

On Saturday, for the first time since 1968, every Southwest Conference team opened the season on the same day. And Sunday marked the season debut for the Houston Oilers.

But it turned out to be a weekend of disappointment for many since the Oilers, the University of Texas, Rice University, Southern Methodist and the University of Houston all lost their games.

Monday night, it was the turn of Dallas Cowboys fans to be disappointed as the defending Super Bowl champions lost 35-16 to the Washington Redskins.

Although much of the labor force was at rest, Monday was a day of work for some less fortunate Texans. Some even mixed business with pleasure.

U.S. Senate back from recess

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Joycelyn Elders was poised for confirmation as surgeon general today as Congress returned from its summer recess with substantial unfinished business, including a hemispheric trade pact and health care reform.

As the Senate returned for its fall legislation session, lawmakers also were awaiting final action on the National Service Act, the program that President Clinton has put forward to help students go to college.

The Senate was scheduled to resume debate on that legislation after taking up the Elders nomination, which Republican opponents successfully stalled in the days preceding the break for the August recess.

But with an agreement for a vote after eight hours debate, the GOP hammerlock on the Elders nomination was effectively broken.

"In my view, she will be confirmed," Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas said today in an interview on C-SPAN.

Republicans, led by Sens. Don Nickles of Oklahoma and Trent Lott of Mississippi, had vigorously opposed the elevation of Elders, who headed the Arkansas health department, to the position of the nation's chief health official.

Nickles had invoked senatorial privilege to put a hold on the Elders nomination, preventing a vote before the summer recess.

His spokesman, Ernie Schultz, said today that "it was never his intention to delay this nomination permanently" and said that Nickles had consented on Aug. 5 to have a vote take place in September.

Shultz said that Nickles had wanted to delay a vote "just until after the recess so that word could be spread on the many controversial statements that Dr. Elders had made on health matters."

Eight hours of debate, divided between the Democratic and Republican sides, was set aside for the Elders nomination.

Opponents zeroed in on controversial statements Dr. Elders had made about distribution of condoms in schools and abortion. One senator, Dan Coats of Indiana, had criticized Elders for failing to publicly disclose a problem with leaking condoms that had been passed out to Arkansas youths.

Clinton proposal

Performance Review report can be enacted without approval from Congress. However, White House spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers said as many as two-thirds of the proposals can be implemented with Clinton's OK alone.

"This program makes sense," Clinton said. "It's going to work and we're going to do it."

The White House hopes to capitalize on the public's hunger for massive government reform, and expects bipartisan support on many of the proposals.

"The government is broken and we intend to fix it but we can't do it unless we all understand that this isn't a Democratic goal or a Republican goal. This is an American imperative and we all need to be a part of it," he said.

Clinton added: "This isn't just about changing our government. It's about changing our country."

The report recommends cutting or consolidating several agencies, closing hundreds of government offices outside Washington, overhauling the budget process, giving managers more control over personnel decisions, making it easier to fire incompetent employees, forcing government departments that provide services to compete with the private sector, and treating taxpayers like customers.

Police, counselors try to allay worries of parents in Plano

PLANO (AP) — Counselors were sent to Mitchell Elementary School today to help students and parents cope with the Labor Day weekend abduction and strangulation of second-grader Ashley Nicole Estell.

Police, meanwhile, were reviewing video tapes and still camera film from the soccer match where she was last seen in an aggressive search for clues into the first homicide anyone could recall in the upscale suburb north of Dallas.

Autopsy results released Monday showed Ashley was strangled. Police declined to say if the Dallas girl had been sexually assaulted.

Her disappearance Saturday morning from the crowded Carpenter Park rocked the community and brought out more than 1,000 volunteers to search for her Sunday. Her body was found about noon off a dirt road six miles from where she had last been seen, striking fear among parents as they recalled the disappearance and murder just two months ago of an 8-year-old autistic boy from the nearby suburb of Garland.

Parents gathered at Ashley's school Monday to meet with police, teachers and counselors, said teacher Barbara Lindsay, who had Ashley in her first grade class last year.

"The main thought was the welfare of the children. ... It was very emotional," Lindsay said.

Lindsay said Plano Police Chief Bruce Glasscock tried to assure the parents that their children were safe.

"He said there doesn't seem to be a tie to Garland, that it is probably an isolated type thing. .. There were 1,000 people at the park (when she was abducted). It was almost like a random shot," she said.

But Lindsay said the district would have counselors on hand "to make sure that (today) is an easy day for them to go through their grieving process."

Lindsay remembered Ashley as an intelligent, well-liked child.

"You wouldn't believe the stories she would write," Lindsay said. "You get a child like that very seldom., She was just such a treasure. She'll be someone that I'll treasure always."

Plano police said they were focusing all of their energy on trying to find Ashley's killer. Several video tapes and rolls of film had been brought to police and investigators were combing through "different bits of evidence" found near the body.

"We are receiving a lot of phone tips," he said. "We are trying to coordinate similar looking events. ... We have pulled together a large group of investigators. We are putting all available personnel on it."

Radiation therapy may burn tissue

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Two and a half years ago, I had 36 radiation treatments for a growth on my left vocal cord because of a constant sore throat, and I've been diagnosed with radiation burn. Is there any treatment for my condition?

DEAR READER: Certain malignancies shrink with radiation therapy. This treatment is particularly useful when the tumors do not lend themselves to surgical removal, such as in the larynx, where an operation would almost surely mean permanent loss of voice.

Regrettably, radiation therapy often leads to burns in the surrounding tissue, with resulting pain. To my knowledge, there is no treatment, other than pain medication, for this common complication. I'm afraid this is the trade-off for having your growth successfully treated.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Is there an over-the-counter medicine for help with kidney stones?

DEAR READER: No non-prescription medication will help TREAT kidney stones. Nonetheless, there are several easy methods that may help prevent them.

First, keep your fluid intake high. Drink six to eight glasses of water a day. This extra fluid will cause your urine to be dilute, thereby dissolving substances in the kidneys that could cause stones.

Second, if you have uric acid kidney stones, making your urine alkaline will discourage the uric acid crystals from developing into stones. A tablespoon of bicarb of soda in a glass of water two or three times a day will accomplish this. But ask your doctor first. Bicarb is not appropriate therapy for all stones and contains salt, which some hypertensive patients must avoid.

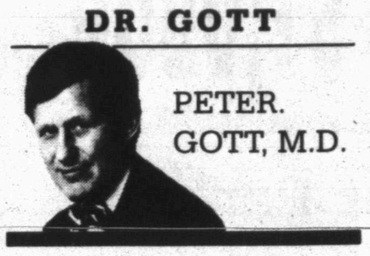

Finally, use a calcium supplement, such as two TUMS two or three times a day. Because it's actually the phosphorous (in foods) that causes stones to form, additional non-phosphorous-containing compounds with calcium may prevent stone-formation.

Before you can embark on a program to stop kidney stones from forming, your family doctor must first discover (by a stone analysis) what your stones are composed of. Therefore, I encourage you to question your doctor about this, as well as prescription drugs and the techniques I described.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Kidney Disorders." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

New U.S. ambassador has same old problem in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The new U.S. ambassador has been front-page news for weeks — not particularly good, either — and he isn't even here yet.

After James R. Jones told the U.S. Senate he would be willing to pressure Mexico on such domestic issues as election fraud and government corruption, politicians and the press fretted that he would be an interventionist.

They have calmed down since, but intend to keep an eye on him.

"We think the statements were unfortunate," Mario del Valle Fernandez, a legislator from the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, told The Associated Press last week.

"For us, these are domestic issues, issues of sovereignty. Mr. Jones needs to respect us and listen to our point of view. And he needs to be careful what he says."

Mexico's relations with American ambassadors often have been difficult. Jones says he will be different, but he may have to prove it.

John Gavin, who once held the job, likened it to walking through a minefield.

In a telephone interview, Jones said the news reports did not bother him and that he would not interfere in Mexico's internal affairs.

He said his comment to Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., during his confirmation hearing in July was blown out of proportion by the Mexican press.

"Once the reporters get to know me and my way of operation, there won't be any problem," he said. Jones is scheduled to arrive in Mexico today to assume his new job overseeing Washington's largest diplomatic mission.

Life has never been easy for U.S. ambassadors in a country that has an Intervention Museum dedicated to teaching children about how the Americans have tampered with Mexico over nearly two centuries.

The relationship of the two countries has been a complicated, contentious one conducted over a 2,000-mile border. Mexico has accused numerous U.S. ambassadors of meddling.

Historians blame Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson (1909-13) for the overthrow and execution of President Francisco Madero and Vice President Jose Maria Pino Suarez after Madero replaced dictator Porfirio Diaz, a U.S. ally.

Mexico's rejection of John Slidell as ambassabor was a pretext for the war with Mexico in 1846. The treaty ending the war in 1848, which ceded much of what is now the U.S. Southwest for $15 million, is viewed by Mexicans as a national humiliation.

"I understand that there are historical reasons for the positions they take," Jones said of the Mexican press. "In the past, the United States has had a paternalistic attitude toward Latin America.

"I hope to show that I am a member of a new generation of political leadership that wants to develop a new relationship with Mexico."

Jones, 54, was chairman of the American Stock Exchange for four years, a congressman from Oklahoma in 1973-86, and President Lyndon B. Johnson's chief of staff.

"During my time in public service, I've found that the good stories about me make me out to be better than I am and the bad stories about me make me out to be worse than I am," he said.

The Mexican press also accused current Ambassador John Negroponte of being an interventionist before he arrived in 1989.

Negroponte was accused of involvement in the Iran-Contra affair while ambassador in Honduras from 1982-85. He denied the charges.

Mexicans have not warred with all U.S. envoys.

They loved Dwight Whitney Morrow (1927-30) for understanding their culture and helping negotiate the end of the Cristero War (1926-29). He endeared himself to Mexicans by playing poker with President Plutarco Elias Calles.

Charles J. Pilliod Jr. (1986-1989), the retired chairman of Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., arrived when relations were strained over immigration and drug trafficking. He signed several important treaties dealing with the drug trade and crime in general.

Gavin (1981-86), appointed by President Ronald Reagan, was an actor well-known in Mexico through movie roles. His fluent Spanish and degree in Latin American economic history gave him ready access to Mexican officials and helped arrange for U.S. assistance in Mexico's economic crisis.

Still, the press accused the U.S. Embassy of meddling when one of Gavin's deputies met with government and opposition politicians. The ambassador made trouble for himself by asserting that at least two Mexican governors were "up to their elbows in the drug trade."

Health reforms will affect rich or poor

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton's promised health reforms could eliminate the nightmare of losing medical coverage for millions of Americans when they switch jobs or fall seriously ill.

But the reforms Clinton plans to unveil to Congress later this month also would impose new financial burdens on businesses and individuals and create potential turmoil in a $900 billion health care industry that employs 10 million people.

It would force virtually every American, rich or poor, young or old, to make choices about health care that are now made for them by their employers.

While Clinton's approach would preserve the option of fee-for-service medicine, it would apply heavy financial pressure on individuals to join managed care plans such as health maintenance organizations where choice of doctors and hospitals is limited.

Senior administration officials outlined aspects of the still secret plan to reporters over the weekend. Here are some answers to questions people may be asking:

Q. Will I be affected? Will I be able to keep my current insurance?

A. If it gets through Congress, nearly everybody would be affected and you would have to choose a new policy from a menu of plans offered by a new health alliance in your state. Some large corporations (5,000-plus workers) could keep operating their own plans.

Q. Will the benefits be less generous than what I have now?

Only if you have a gilt-edged plan with virtually unlimited coverage and few co-payments or deductibles, the White House insists.

The White House will require all employers and employees to split 80-20 the cost of the basic benefit package, which they estimate at $1,800 for an individual and $4,200 for families. There will be subsidies for small businesses (less than 50 workers) with low wages. Businesses will pay up to 8.5 percent of payroll; workers will pay up to 1.9 percent of their wages.

If consumers choose a plan that costs less than average — probably an HMO — they will pay less. But if they choose a more expensive policy that allows them to go to any doctor or hospital, they may bear the extra costs. If their employer helps pick up the difference, the worker may be hit with income taxes on that subsidy.

Q. So what's the advantage for me and my family?

You'll be guaranteed coverage at the same, community-wide rates no matter if you switch jobs or if a member of your family becomes gravely ill. The rates may vary by age, however.

Q. What if both spouses work and only pay for one insurance policy now?

Both will have to kick in to the new system along with their employers. The employers will make a standard family contribution per worker, and the husband and wife will contribute their 1.9 percent share of wages.

Q. When will this happen?

Whenever your state decides to join the new system, possibly as early as 1995, but more likely 1996 or 1997. States will have to start their alliances by Jan. 1, 1998. When they do, the government will also impose limits on how fast premiums can go up each year.

Q. What about elderly people on Medicare?

They will get the same prescription drug benefit ($250 deductible, 20 percent co-payment) as everyone else immediately, and new long-term care benefits phased in between 1996 and 2000.

Q. What about preventive health services?

The Clinton plan would cover routine eye and ear exams, pelvic exams, cholesterol screening, mammograms and some other services that many private insurers now refuse to pay for. Children's eye glasses and trips to the dentist also will be covered. Adults will get preventive dental care starting in 2000.

Teachers tell what they wish their students' parents knew

SLATON (AP) — Judy Privett, an accountant, was taking classes to earn a teaching certificate when she got bogged down in the heavy theories of classroom management.

"I knew you really had to be there to know what's going on," Mrs. Privett said. "As a parent, I'd like to know what teachers had to say."

So she and her husband Tony in January mailed questionnaires to principals at more than 6,000 schools in all 50 states. The forms asked teachers to complete the phrase, "I wish that parents ... ."

Replies came back from 415 teachers, including 58 in Texas.

The Privetts compiled the material from the cozy basement in their Slaton home. The result is the new guidebook, "What America's Teachers Wish Parents Knew," a mostly upbeat collection of 275 hints.

Some wishes are practical: "I wish that parents knew I do not need to know the gory details of a sickness in an absent note."

Others are more philosophical: "I wish that parents would remember that young people are like fresh cement — anything dropped on them will make a big impression."

The 111-page book rages on the vices of bad breath and juice boxes to the virtues of bedtime stories.

America's teachers also said they want parents to sing silly songs, hug their teen-agers and venture inside the school cafeteria once in awhile.

Turn off the TV set, the teachers plead, and make children read at home.

"I wish parents would learn to let go," one kindergarten teacher wrote. "Sad little faces crying at the classroom door, pitiful looks of abandonment, hanging around the halls, peeping through windows, prolonged kisses at the door and repeated declarations of 'I love you' have got to stop. Parents, your behavior is embarrassing. Get a grip!"

Annette Cootes, information officer for the Texas State Teachers Association in Austin, liked the book's premise.

"We say right on, and every parent should be forced to read it," Ms. Cootes said.

The teachers say they need parental backup. Mom and Dad should stop doing Johnny's homework, stop telling him math is hard and stop forcing him to compete in athletics.

"These are common sense things, but sometimes we forget," said Mrs. Privett, mother of Matthew, 15, and Meredith, 11. "This puts you back in touch."

Many of the teachers said they wished parents would substitute teach so they could get a taste for the stress — and joys — involved in the classroom.

"You could read the frustration, but they are there because they want to be," said Privett, who works for an education publishing company.

Longtime economist retires

DALLAS (AP) — Labor Day had a special meaning for Nic Santangelo, a longtime U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics economist.

After 14 years as the voice behind Texas' unemployment rate, the 63-year-old celebrated this Labor Day by leaving the workforce.

Through double-digit inflation, two national recessions and Texas' 1980s boom-and-bust cycle, the newly retired Santangelo has tried to explain the state's primary economic indicators in no fewer than 2,500 interviews.

"People take economics personally, because it is a pocketbook issue," he said. "Unemployment means jobs to the man on the street. Inflation means money in his pocket."

The government releases the unemployment rate on the first Friday of each month. On the day before, Santangelo and economist Cheryl Abbot would key in the latest passwords to retrieve the jobs information from a giant database.

The economists usually worked separately, plugging the numbers into their favorite analytical models, then conferred to decide how to interpret the data to the public.

Starting early on Friday, Santangelo's phone would ring, with calls from perhaps 10 print and broadcast reporters from across the state if the report was ordinary, as many as 25 if the news struck a chord.

The job was most fun when things were at their worst, Santangelo told The Dallas Morning News.

When joblessness or inflation skyrockets, his phone rings off the hook. And big problems are easier to explain.

"Unless it's really good news," he said. "Then that's as good as being bad news."

Lately, the economic signs have been less clear. "Sometimes, you can't tell — you simply cannot tell what it means. It's just a mishmash."

Government budget cuts have slashed Santangelo's economic analysis and information unit to three full-time staffers and one part-timer, from a peak of nine in the mid-1980s.

The bureau has considered trimming the office still further to two staffers, and only recently decided to hire another economist to replace Santangelo.
