Iranians mourning slain leaders

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — More than a million mourners shouted "Death to America!" at a mass funeral today for 72 slain revolutionary leaders and Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini blamed an underground Marxist group for the bomb blast that killed them.

Thousands of motorcyclists in black T-shirts and wielding black banners led the six-hour funeral procession. Token forces from the nation's armed servies and the Islamic Revolutionary Guards followed the coffins from Parliament House to the martyrs' section of Tehran's Behesht Zahra Cemetery.

Tehran radio said all 72 victims were to be buried there. Previously the government said they were to be buried in their home towns.

The casket of Warden Mohammad Kachou of Tehran's Evin Prison joined the procession. Iranian officials said today in telephone interviews that he was killed Monday by an unidentified prison guard, who was arrested. Earlier the official Iranian news agency Pars said he had been "assassinated by U.S. agents," but did not elaborate.

The forbidding prison on the outskirts of the Iranian capital is the chief place of confinement for opponents of the Islamic fundamentalists controlling the Iranian regime. Firing squads have executed hundreds there since the overthrow of the monarchy in February 1979.

Khomeini, the 81-year-old patriarch of Iran's Islamic revolution, said in a message read over Tehran radio that the blame for the bombing rested with "blind hearts who claim to take part in crusades for the people."

A literal translation of Mujahedeen Khalq, an opposition group that blends Islam with Marxism, is "people's crusaders."

A spokesman for Tehran's revolutionary police said in a telephone interview that an undisclosed number of suspects had been arrested in connection with Sunday's bombing.

The United States also was condemned at the funeral for victims of Sunday's bombing at the Islamic Republican headquarters. The chanting crowd extolled the "martyrs" and shouted "America defeated!" over and over, Tehran Radio reported.

"What happened was an American crime," one unidentified speaker told the throng as it assembled for the funeral procession through the Iranian capital. "The crimes of America are w3ll known all over the world. America calls itself a civilized nation. Such civilization is a barbaric civilization. It is a civilization to enslave mankind."

Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani told the mourners they must fight on two fronts, one the battlefield with Iraq "and the other an internal one."

"With your determination, you can defeat the enemy and the Fifth Column trying to create disturbances," he declared.

Rafsanjani threatened an intensified crackdown on the opposition, saying, "We have been trying to reason with the counter-revolutionaries. But after this horrible crime, how can anyone expect us to let them do what they like to do."

There was speculation that the foes of the Islamic zealots controlling the government might try to make truble. TheInterior Ministry urged the public to "be careful that no disruption of public order occurs, because that is just what your enemies expect."

Mourning demonstrations were reported in cities throughout Iran Monday. Fanatics of the Hezbollah, or Party of God, many with shaved heads, raced through Tehran's streets on motorcycles displaying posters of Ayatollah Mohammad Beheshti.

Carpenters' strike could curb construction

The Midland construction boom may come to a temporary halt or at least be crippled Wednesday if union carpenters and the Associated General Contractors fail to reach accord in negotiations over pay raises and benefits.

"All the big commercial jobs will shut down," a spokesman for Carpenters Union 1428 in Midland told The Reporter-Telegram after union members Monday night overwhelmingly voted to go on strike if their demands are not met in negotiations today.

The approximately 350 carpenters in the 17-county AFL&CIO union are holding out for a $3.85 hourly pay increase over a two-year period or a $2.40-an-hour pay raise plus benefits, including health insurance and pension plans. The AGC has agreed on the flat $2.40 increase without benefits, he said.

"We feel that our request is following the cost of living."

But he doesn't predict a settlement today.

"I feel real sure it's going to fail," he said of the two-week-old negotiations.

The spokesman-carpenter and about a half dozen other craftsmen will be making posters and other placards at the union hall at 2211 Florida Ave. today in readying to walk the picket line Wednesday if union demands aren't met. Other carpenters were on the job today.

"Really, they're not unrealistic," he said of the union demand.

"Contractors are making money hand over fist," he charged.

The spokesman said about 20 building contractors in the Midland-Odessa-Big Spring area are members of AGC. One of the largest contractors, Area Builders of Odessa, is not in AGC, he said, though Area Builders, like the others, employs union workers.

Journeyman carpenters are earning $11.55 an hour but without benefits, the spokesman said.

"It's about $2 an hour less than (what) the electricians (earn)," he said.

Other skilled union workers, including electricians, iron workers and plumbers, have said that they will honor the picket lines, the spokesman said.

He said the carpenters likely would settle for less of a pay raise if they could get benefits, including health insurance and a pension plan.

"The carpenters don't have any insurance benefits. No insurance. No pension plan."

He said the carpenters union is one of the few unions which doesn't have health-pension benefits for its workers.

"We're kind of the laughing stock (among unions)," he said.

Panel's message a little dry

Unless Texas does some "big thinking," it stands to lose six million acres of irrigated corn and wheat production in the northwest quadrant of the state.

That's the message the National Democratic Policy Committee is trying to impart in a statewide "public awareness" blitz being conducted by committee spokesman Tim Richardson of Houston.

Richardson outlined solutions to "the depletion of the nation's largest underground water supply" — the huge Ogallala Water Aquifer which runs from South Dakota into Texas — at a press conference this morning at the Chamber of Commerce.

"It's the major water supply for 225 million acres of America's most fertile (farm and ranch) land," said Richardson. "And it's drying up — especically at its southern end."

The Texas and Oklahoma Panhandles, along with western Kansas, are the major areas affected by what Richardson said is an annual loss of 14 million acre-feet of water — most of which is being depleted because consumption exceeds rainfall.

"Exhaustion of the (water) supply could occur in less than 10 years," said Richardson. "And catastrophic effects on America's food supply are forecast. The affected area produces 40 percent of all the cattle marketed annually in the U.S., and feed grain production has increased there from 129 million to 386 million bushels in the past decade."

If something isn't done, according to a government study presented by Richardson, "One million acres of Texas farmland will be lost to irrigation outright, and another five million acres would remain in production to cotton — the only crop that could survive an anticipated reduction from 1.38 to 0.65 feet of water per acre annually."

Two government proposals and a joint resolution being sponsored by Texas House Speaker Billy Clayton are designed to ward off the coming problem, said Richardson.

One government solution involves channeling water from the Missouri and Arkansas rivers into the area affected by depletion of the aquifer. The other federal project would draw water from Alaska and the Canadian Rockies into the Southwest.

While no firm cost estimates have been made yet, Richardson said the price tag could range from $16 billion to $40 billion.

The Clayton resolution, which has the support of Gov. Bill Clements and is on the agenda for the special session of the legislature next month, calls for a constitutional amendment that would see half of the state's future financial surpluses set aside for water development in Texas.

"This is precisely the kind of big thinking required to meet the challenge before us," said Richardson.

The resolution cleared the House during the legislature's regular session, but died in the Senate.

Opposition to the proposals, according to Richardson, comes from liberal elements who want the money spent on social programs, and ultraconservatives who oppose government involvement in anything.

Richardson said it's impossible to predict how much money would be involved in Clayton's resolution, but added: "It would be a considerable amount, though."

If passed, the resolution would result in a statewide referendum calling for a constitutional amendment allowing the surplus money to be used in water development, such as dams and irrigation ditches.

Zoning panel sides with, against citizens

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

The pleasures of rural life which lured some Midlanders away from the city limits several years ago to far north Midland could soon become a memory.

In a 5-4 vote, the city Planning and Zoning Commission approved Monday a housing-office-retail development by Texaco for 155.22 acres on the west side of Midland Drive between Loop 250 and Bluebird Lane. But it was with mixed feelings that the commission passed the plan on to the City Council with a favorable recommendation, vascillating between the knowledge that growth won't stop at that piece of land and yet wanting to retain the rural flavor.

In other action, the commission went in favor of the residents, denying an application for a zone change to allow a pipe yard in a residential area.

THE PLAN by Texaco involves about 45 acres for O-2 office district, 17 for LR-2 retail and the rest in single family homes and townhouses.

Harrell Feldt, representing Texaco, denied stories that had been circulating that Texaco was putting in the houses for their employees or that 1,700 families were moving to Midland from Texaco's New York office. "This housing will be developed under city ordinances; it will not be a planned camp for Texaco employees," he said. The attorney pointed out the development would amount to more than $100 million which would be added to the city's tax rolls.

But the residents living north of Bluebird Lane still didn't want to see the development become a reality. It was this same area which was annexed by the city in June 1980 under the residents' objections. This marks the first year the people will pay city taxes.

Charles Aldridge, attorney for the protestors, said, "Our objections are as numerous as leaves on a tree. The problems grow out of the project being so massive."

He cited possible drainage problems that would result from developing 155 acres, the four-story office buildings and traffic problems.

"WE FEAR low-income housing and we fear failure of the project," said Aldridge. "Even Texaco can't

Leading U.S. economic indicators plunge in May

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's index of leading indicators, an important gauge of future national economic strength, plunged in May, the Commerce Department reported today.

The drop was in line with other recent government reports that have indicated the economy is slowing in its recovery from last year's recession.

"The decline in the index of leading indicators for May, together with other information available, suggests that the economic recovery that began last summer temporarily has stalled," said Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige.

"Since the end of last year, the leading index has been telegraphing the message of a slowdown.... We do not expect to see a recession — but do expect a continued slowdown in the short term," Baldrige said in a statement.

The department said the index declined 1.8 percent in May after gains of 0.4 percent in April and 1.8 percent in March.

Firefighters battle two blazes at local Sears

Two fires were reported at Sears Roebuck and Co. at Midland Park Mall this morning.

According to a spokesman at the Midland Fire Department, the first fire was reported at 8:44 a.m. by Sears employees. The fire apparently started in a box of new clothes. Two fire department vehicles were dispatched to the scene.

Another fire broke out in the Sears warehouse at 9:47 a.m. The exact origin of the second fire is unknown, the spokesperson said. Twelve fire department vehicles were sent to the second blaze.

No injuries were reported in either fire.

Sears employees were working late this morning to clear the store of water and smoke. Damage estimates were unavailable, but the store was closed to the public. A Sears spokesperson said she had no idea when the store would reopen.

Cause of the fires is unknown and an investigation is under way.

Zoning panel favors development

comprehend what's going to happen."

John Countryman, 4407 Robin Lane, said he didn't want to see a shopping area that close to his house. "There's already enough shopping in the area."

George Oschner, who lives in Melody Acres, called it "outlandish to consider putting this development on the edge of town. It looks like you're trying to move downtown up here. Retail at the mall (Midland Park Mall) should be sufficient on that edge of town."

He added that the large cash outlay ($100 million) by Texaco isn't needed: "There's already enough going in out there."

Another woman contended that when her family moved to the northern outskirts, she was under the assumption the area would remain rural.

And another man said, "Let Texaco spend their money on exploring for oil."

In answering the residents' charges, Feldt claimed the development "will promote jobs, reflect the continuing growth of this community, and will provide white collar jobs — not the blue collar that the city has gone out after."

HE NOTED THE development will corner Loop 250, which will carry the increased traffic load. And in talking with engineers, this piece of land doesn't have drainage problems seen farther east along the Loop, according to the attorney.

In pushing for approval by the commission, Feldt added, "Let's do this project in such a way to have economic growth and still protect these people."

Daryl Faris, a member of the commission, said he could see the advantages of the larger tax base and jobs, but he had doubts about the plan which provided no areas for parks or schools.

Despite the residents' pleas to retain the rural flavor, commission member Bart Hotchkiss remarked, "We need to recognize that this area will be developed at some point. That area could sustain some offices and some retail."

W.H. Jowell was a member of Planning and Zoning last year during annexation and he opposed that move. But this time around, he voted to approve the project.

"My family came here in 1893 and I've watched the town grow from 8,000 to what it is today," he said. "And I'd like to see it continue to grow."

ELIMINATION OF the rural life bothered another commissioner, Steve Melzer, although he noted that "it's unreasonable to believe that for very much longer you will have it up there. We're sorry for that, but the city's growing that way." When it came to a vote, he opposed the project on the basis that it was too big for that area.

Mary Jane Young, commission chairman, noted she had voted for annexation "over a lot of dead bodies that are in the audience. Now I can't turn around and vote for putting four-story offices in these people's back yards."

Giffert Alstrin also grew up in Midland and remembered the rural area at D and Ohio Streets. "But it's not there any more. We have natural barriers on the north side with Martin County and on the west with a major landowner. The only corridor to grow is the northwest, and everybody's in the path."

The project will go before the City Council at its July 28 meeting for consideration. At that point, the council can give it the go-ahead or reject it.

Leonard Busby, president of B&R Inspection, a pipe-threading operation, asked the commission for approval to change the zoning on both sides of Taylor Avenue between Connell and Camp Streets from a mobile home district to commercial. This would allow him to expand his operation, he told the panel.

BUT THE RESIDENTS complained they didn't want to see the pipe yard expand and charged that he already was using a piece of land that didn't belong to him for storing pipe.

John Baxter, 1310 Camp St., said the pipe yard was noisy and disturbed nearby residents.

J.W. Suttle, 1410 Camp St., contended the pipe yard was in his front yard "and I'd like to have it moved. It's not fenced in."

George Kelly, 1310 Connell St., said he has seen "little kids playing on those pipes. They're just piled up."

Busby agreed the current conditions weren't desirable, but promised that with the zone change he could acquire more property and fence the operation.

But the commission unanimously denied the request. Busby may appeal the decision to the City Council.

False report

Reported shooting of mayor proves to be hoax

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mayor Marion Barry was "as surprised as anybody" to hear the news bulletin that he had been shot. It was a hoax, and a television anchorman admitted to his viewers: "We've been had, folks."

Washington's three network stations interrupted normal programming Monday night to report that Barry, 45, had been seriously wounded in a shooting at his home. A half hour later, they broke in again to say it wasn't true.

Barry heard the bulletin at the home of his legal adviser, Herbert Reed.

"I was as surprised as anybody else," the mayor said later at a news conference in front of his southeast Washington home. "I think it's a horrible way to play a joke."

Barry's first reaction was to call his wife, Effie, and tell her he was OK. But she was at a friend's house, where she heard the same report.

"I couldn't believe it," Mrs. Barry said. "There were just so many stories going. I just said, 'Take me home so that I can see what's happening.'"

What was happening, according to information pieced together from city officials and the television stations, was a hoax.

James Van Messel, executive news producer at NBC-owned WRC-TV, said someone called the network desk there about 9:45 p.m. EDT to say the mayor had been shot and police had two suspects in custody.

The caller, who identified himself as James Taylor, said he was phoning from the mayor's command post and left a return number that later turned out to be a public telephone booth.

When a reporter for the station immediately called the number, Van Messel said, a man answered as the mayor's command post and said Barry was being taken to the hospital at Andrews Air Force Base.

"In our case, a number was stuck under somebody's nose," Van Messel said. "He asked some questions and when we got some answers, the question was whether to go with the story."

WRC went on the air with a news bulletin, moments before stations WJLA and WDVM.

Van Messel said his station's reporters then found another number for the command center and called it. "The cops knew nothing, the hospital knew nothing. All of a sudden things started to fall apart," he said.

Mrs. Barry said she was numb from the experience.

"I think that this is probably one of the worst tricks you can play on anybody," she said. "It's possible, it's real that we have crazy people in this world."

There was, in fact, a shooting Monday night about a block from the mayor's home.

Acting Police Chief Maurice Turner said an off-duty police sergeant shot himself in the side when a .22-caliber gun in his hip pocket discharged accidentally earlier in the evening.

It was not known, however, if that incident prompted the hoax telephone call.

In a city where there was media confusion when President Reagan was shot three months ago and where The Washington Post returned a Pulitzer Prize for a story about an 8-year-old drug addict who did not exist, the Barry report stirred more media criticism and self-searching.

Van Messel acknowledged in strong terms that his station bungled the story.

Bids to be sought on Midland library property

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland County commissioners on Monday offered hard-core evidence that they haven't shelved the proposed new library.

They unanimously approved advertising for bids for the "sale or exchange" of the site of the present library at 301 W. Missouri Ave.

The county and city are asking $100,000 earnest money from bidders on the property.

Plans call for construction of a three-story library near the present library site and under the shadow of the proposed 40-story First National Bank tower in the projected Eagle Plaza in downtown Midland.

The bank has said that it may assist in financing a new library after its obtains title to the present library site, which is immediately south of the 24-story bank building. The site is to be within the core of the bank's Eagle Plaza, a venture which eventually may feature two 40-story office towers flanking the new library. Projected cost of the plaza's Phase I, which includes one 40-story tower, is between $95 million and $120 million.

The commissioners were taciturn about the library, though they and the Midland City Council met in a joint closed session last week to talk over the library property. The city is a part owner.

THE BANK IS expected to be high bidder for the property.

"I would say they're going to try to be," Commissioner Durward Wright said in a break between Commissioners' Court sessions Monday.

Public property, such as the lots comprising the library grounds, can only be disposed of by public sales, such as via sealed bids.

The county commissioners and city councilmen are jointly offering the library property for sale via bids. The $100,000 earnest money required by each bidder is "payable without recourse" to the city and county as a "guaranty that the (successful) bidder will accept a conveyance" to the land.

Bids are to be opened at 2 p.m. Aug. 3 in the Commissioners' Courtroom on the second floor of the courthouse.

For "sale or exchange for other land" are Lots 1 to 12 of Block 87 of the Original Town of Midland.

For months, The First National Bank has been acquiring property on either side of the Missouri Pacific Railroad tracks for its expansion.

Though the library is supported by the county, it at one time was a joint city-county operation. But, according to Commissioner Charlie Welch, when the city pulled out, it somehow failed to deed to the county the city-owned property upon which part of the 1958-built library building rests.

The city has deed to 2½ lots of library property, said Welch, while the county owns the remaining 9½ lots.

TWO WEEKS AGO, the commissioners voted to hire real-estate appraiser Weldon Taylor to set a value on the library property even though the bank had appraised the downtown land. Welch had suggested a second appraisal due to the bank's vested interest in the property.

"I'm sure that we're not going to tell (the appraised value)," said the commissioner, who is hoping for a windfall bid.

Since Bank President Charles Fraser announced the bank's ambitious Eagle Plaza plans last April 23, the commissioners have indicated they favor the three-story, 80,000-square-foot library as a low-profile centerpiece to the plaza. And the commissioners have speculated that sale of the land, if it should run into millions of dollars, would help finance the new library, which could cost $4 million or more.

Fraser, however, said the bank would help with the library financing. But he was adamant that the bank, Texas' largest independent financial institution with assets of $1 billion or more, simply would not donate a new library to the county.

IN OTHER ACTION, the commissioners:

—Complimented County Veterans Service Officer Melle May for her efficient and dedicated work in administering the office. The praise came after Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis noted that more than $7 million in benefits were paid to Midland County veterans in 1980.

Davis also presented a form letter from Aubrey L. Bullard, Texas Veterans Affairs commissioners. The letter said that the "monetary benefits" paid to veterans by the U.S. Veterans Administration is "an excellent barometer of the effectiveness and the valuable service you (Ms. May) perform for veterans, their dependents and survivors" in Midland County.

—Postponed until July 13 a report by Midland County Tax Assessor-Collector Frances Shuffield on her projected costs should she take over the property appraisals for the six taxing entities in the county and for collecting taxes. Welch has proposed that Ms. Shuffield could appraise property and collect taxes in a more economical fashion than could Chief Appraiser Virgil Jones Jr. The Midland County Appraisal District has proposed, subject to public hearings, an $830,000 operating budget for the Jones's appraisal-collecting functions in 1982.

—Asked County Judge Bill Ahders to thank members of the county's blue-ribbon ad hoc building committee for their "time, diligence and hours consumed" in coming up with recommendations for courthouse expansion.

The nine-member committee, headed by John Hyde, offered a two-fold proposal: That the 51-year-old courthouse be razed and a new one be built or that a tower just north of and linked to the 51-year-old courthouse be constructed to complement the courthouse. The latter recommendation would call for a wrap-around multi-story, parking-office building on the west, north and east sides of the courthouse.

—Agreed to postpone awarding a contract for a new county warehouse to hold voting machines.

Temperatures to stay warm, skies cloudy in Midland area

Warm temperatures and partly cloudy skies will remain in the Permian Basin through Wednesday, according to the National Weather Service at the Midland Regional Airport.

The forecast calls for the temperature Wednesday to reach into the mid 90s after an overnight low near 70 degrees.

That slight chance of rain that's been in the forecast for the last couple of days also has been removed.

Tonight's winds will be out of the southeast at 5-10 mph.

Monday's high temperature reached 95 degrees, far from the record temperature of 109 degrees set in 1946.

The low this morning was 70 degrees. The record was set in 1954 at 60 degrees.

Showers and thunderstorms were reported early today in the Panhandle, along the coast and in far West Texas.

The showers and thunderstorms began late Monday. Beaumont received the most rainfall, .50 of an inch. Amarillo had .25 and El Paso had .03.

Forecasts called for partly cloudy skies, warm and humid conditions and widely scattered thunderstorms statewide today. Highs were to be in the upper 80s to upper 90s.

Skies were partly cloudy early today outside the rain areas. Some patchy fog was reported in eastern and southeastern sections.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 70s except in the Panhandle, portions of the South Plains and in the mountains of Southwest Texas where readings were in the 60s. Extremes ranged from 65 at both Marfa and Amarillo.

Chinese condemn Mao Tse-Tung

PEKING (AP) — Chairman Mao Tse-Tung, whose every word was revered and studied for decades in China, was depicted today as a smug, arrogant, tragic blunderer in a long-awaited assessment issued by the Communist Party he guided to power.

The historic document says Mao strayed from Maoist doctrine beginning in 1957 in the Great Leap Forward and refused to accept "systematic correction" of his mistakes in provoking and prolonging what the party now calls the "catastrophic" Cultural Revolution of 1966-76.

The statement was issued the day after the party announced it had ousted Mao's chosen successor Hua Guofeng as chairman, replacing him with Hu Yoabang, a critic of Mao and an ally of Vice Chairman Deng Xiaoping. Deng twice survived Mao's purges and is now considered the real power in China.

The party document ad leadership changes officially close the Maoist era of political strife as the party prepares to celebrate its 60th anniversary on July 1.

An early draft of the ferociously debated assessment of Mao had threatened to cleave the party between supporters of Deng's pragmatic policies and those still devoted to Mao's permanent revolution.

The document represents a clear victory for Deng, one of Mao's most prominent victims, who argued early on for a brutally honest assessment of the late "Great Helmsman."

The 35,600-word document depicts Mao, the founder of modern China, as having become smug, arrogant and divorced from the masses. It says that he committed mistakes after 1957 in the Great Leap Forward and overemphasized the importance of class struggle.

In his later years, the document says, Mao "imagined" that his theory and practice were Marxist and essential for China. "Herein lies his tragedy," it says.

But in conclusion, the assessment says that Mao's early contributrions to the Chinese revolution and the early years of the Republic established in 1949 were primary, and his mistakes secondary. It affirmed that he always will be a "respected and beloved great leader and teacher."

It said Mao's philosophy — which he himself betrayed in his later years — would continue to be China's guiding ideology.

But China apparently intends to avoid a return to the "personality cult" which led to masses of Chinese waving aloft the little red book containing Mao's sayings.

"The cult of comrade Mao Tse-tung was frenziedly pushed to an extreme," the assessment says.

The Cultural Revolution, in which students were sent to work in the fields and intellectual work effectively banned for 10 years, was "initiated by a leader laboring under a misapprehension and capitalized on by counterrevolutionary cliques," including his wife, Jiang Qing, who formed what the Chinese now call the ultra-leftist "Gang of Four."

Jiang Qing, 67, was given a suspended death sentence in January after a sensational trial in which she often shouted her defiance and her insistence that she followed a true revolutionary course abandoned by Deng and other "revisionists." She is now believed to be imprisoned outside Peking.

The document says Mao "gradually divorced himself from practice and from the masses, acted more and more arbitrarily and subjectively and increasingly put himself above the Central Committee of the Party."

But it praises Mao for standing up to the Soviet Union, for building China in the early years of the People's Republic and for bequeathing his "scientific" system of revolutionary thought in a Chinese political philosophy.

Controversy continues to persist over slaying

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Six weeks after he was shot dead in his bed, Roman Catholic butcher Patrick Martin's killers remain at large, and a controversy persists over initial speculation that he was slain by the mostly Catholic Irish Republican Army. Police suspicions now center on Protestant extremists.

Martin, 38, was killed May 16, the day after the funeral of IRA hunger striker Francis Hughes.

Police sources initially told reporters they suspected the outlawed IRA's Provisional wing was responsible. They speculated that Martin was shot because he refused to close his two butcher shops during the funeral. The IRA had called on all businesses to close in Catholic areas.

On the day of the shooting, The Associated Press reported without attribution that the slain man had refused to close his shops.

The IRA denied responsibility for the killing, and Richard MacAuley, a spokesman for the IRA's political front Sinn Fein, has since said Martin's shops were closed during the funeral. He told The AP that Catholic merchants had been asked to shut down only during the funeral, not for the entire day.

A spokesman for the Royal Ulster Constabulary, Northern Ireland's police force, who declined to be named, disputed this.

"As far as we know, he didn't close his shop that day," he said.

The police nonetheless said soon after the killing that their suspicions had switched from the IRA to Protestant extremists, such as the Ulster Freedom Fighters.

The Ulster Freedom Fighters have links with the Ulster Defense Association, biggest of Northern Ireland's Protestant paramilitary groups. Both organizations have been responsible for the killing of scores of IRA activists and other Catholics since 1971.

"Even after that, some British papers continued to say the IRA was suspected," MacAuley complained.

He said Protestants may have killed Martin because he was believed to have attended the funeral of the first IRA hunger striker to die, Bobby Sands. Protestant paramilitary organizations distributed photographs of people at the funeral, and Martin may have been singled out for attack, MacAuley said.

The killers, after cutting telephone lines in the street outside Martin's house in the Ardoyne district of North Belfast, broke in and shot him five times in the head with a silencer-equipped gun as he lay sleeping, police reported.

MacAuley said the butcher had no connection with guerrilla groups. He dismissed the suggestion that he was mistaken for an IRA activist because he worked at night at a club frequented by IRA Provisionals.

He said that during May "there was a great deal of British propaganda" that people had been intimidated into supporting the IRA hunger strikers.

"The Martin incident was used by the British despite the fact that the IRA said it was not responsible and the RUC later said it thought a Loyalist (Protestant) organization was responsible."

The IRA, which has killed hundreds of soldiers, security officers and Protestant activists here, is fighting to pull this Protestant-majority province out of the United Kingdom and unite it with the predominantly Catholic Irish Republic to the south.

Marcos begins new term in Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos began a new six-year term today before a crowd of 2 million people who watched a seaside spectacle of roaring jets, booming cannons and marching horses.

Vice President George Bush and other foreign leaders were in the audience as Marcos, who has been in power for 15 years, proclaimed a "New Republic" and called for unity among 48 million Filipinos. He pledged to crack down on corruption and to end to a bloody Moslem uprising in the south.

Marcos, 63, his wife Imelda and their three children rode to the inaugural at the sprawling Rizal Park in a closed limousine escorted by motorcycle policemen and about 70 uniformed horsemen recruited from the Manila Polo Club.

Twenty-one men perched on the roof of a massive grandstand sounded native horns and thousands of people lining the presidential route waved banners and palm leaves. Drums rolled and a choir of 1,000 male voices chanted "Marcos, Marcos, President Marcos."

A military honor guard fired a 21-gun salute as 10 Philippine air force jets flew in formation overhead.

The inaugural speech contained no major policy statements, and he did not say how he intends to end the Moslem separatist revolt in the southern Philippines, which has claimed more than 50,000 lives since 1972.

The uprising minority was one of problems Marcos vowed to solve when he declared martial law in September 1972 to usher in what he called the "New Society," a label now supplanted by his "New Republic."

Marcos said the "New Republic" would liberate the Philippines from the vestiges of centuries of Spanish colonization and 50 years of American rule.

"It is unthinkable that we should approach this task as partisans to warring interests, creeds and ideologies," Marcos said. "Our goal is to unite, not divide."

Marcos, who won 88 percent of the vote in a June 16 presidential election boycotted by his major opponents, first came to power in 1966. In 1969, he became the first Filipino president to win re-election.

Two slain in disco shooting

NEW YORK (AP) — Two men killed on the dance floor of a mid-Manhattan basement discotheque in a shootout that wounded six others were a major Harlem narcotics dealer and his bodyguard, police say.

The two flashily dressed victims were identified as the drug dealer, Ronald Borroughs, 33, and Ray C. Brown, 21, one of two bodyguards who took part in the wild shootout at 3 a.m. Monday during a private party at Reflections, a restaurant and disco on East 58th Street.

The other bodyguard, Edward Thomas, and five other party guests, including three women, were shot during the exchange of gunfire but all were reported in good condition.

Several hundred people were on the dance floor early Monday when a lone gunman paid the $5 entrance fee, walked onto the floor and up to where Borroughs and a woman friend were dancing.

The gunman pulled out his weapon and shot the drug dealer in the head, "execution style," according to Police Inspector Joseph DeMartino.

Borroughs dropped, killed instantly, and the two bodyguards exchanged more than a dozen shots with the killer, but he was unhurt and fled the club.

The surviving bodyguard, Thomas, was treated for a gunshot wound in the shoulder, then arrested for illegal possession of a dangerous weapon.

Brezhnev, Brandt meet for talks

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev and former West German Chancellor Willy Brandt met in the Kremlin today for talks expeced to focus on arms controls and East-West relations.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and Brandt's advisor Hans-Juergen Wischnewski participated in the talks this morning in the Soviet leader's office.

Western sources said the 74-year-old Brezhnev appeared to be in good health as he greeted Brandt, who is making his first visit to Moscow since 1975.

Brandt, chairman of West Germany's Social Democr$tic Party, arrived Monday evening on a four-day visit to sound out Kremlin leaders on disarmament and other issues, including the Polish labor crisis.

NATO's plan to station new medium-range nuclear missiles in Western Europe in late 1983 to counter scores of Soviet SS-20 rockets already deployed is expected to e a major topic.

Moscow wants Western European governments to drop plans for the 572 U.S.-built missiles. A vocal anti-nuclear movement in NATO countries also opposes the weapons.

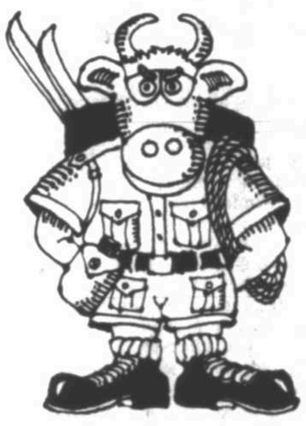

Although Brandt said he was not coming to negotiate any agreements, his trip was supported by Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, a Social Democrat, as a way to explain Bonn's foreign policies in a time of tense international relations.

Ryan sentenced to life in prison

DUESSELDORF, West Germany (AP) — Hermine Braunsteiner Ryan, the concentration camp guard who married a GI and lived as a New York housewife, was sentenced to life imprisonment today for her part in the death of more than 100,000 prisoners at the Majdanek death camp during World War II.

Seven other defendants were given prison sentences ranging from three to 12 years at the conclusion of West Germany's longest war crimes trial.

A ninth defendant, former SS Cpl. Heinrich Groffmann, was acquitted because of insufficient evidence.

The prosecutors had recommended the acquittal of Groffman, but all the sentences were less than they requested. The verdicts set off shouts of protests from some of the scores of spectators in the packed courtroom.

"Nothing learned in five and a half years!" shouted one. Others yelled "Giant Scandal!" "An outrage to the victims!" and "Nazi murderers behind bars!"

There was a similar uproar in 1979 when four other defendants were freed for lack of evidence. w

The defendants were guards at the Majdanek concentration camp in German-occupied Poland, one of the largest built by the Nazis to carry out their "final solution to the Jewish question." In addition to Jews, it held Gypsies, Ukrainians, RUSSIANS, Poles, homosexuals, retarded persons and other "undesirables."

Estimates of the number who died there range from 250,000 to 1.5 million between the opecing of the camp in 1941 and its liberation by Soviet troops in 1944.

The trial began Nov. 26, 1975, and the court heard testimony from more than 300 witnesses in Germany, Israel, Poland, the Soviet Union, Australia, Canada and the United States.

The prosecutors asked for three consecutive life sentences for Mrs. Ryan, 61, who was extradited from the United States for falsifying her citizenship papers. Judge Guenter Bogen handed down two life sentences for her.

Witnesses at the trial said she was known as "The Stomping Mare" because she trampled prisoners to death with steel-studded boots. She was convicted of child murder and selecting prisoners for the gas chambers.

Life imprisonment was also asked for the other woman defendant, 61-year-old Hildegard Laechert, but she got 12 years for conspiracy to commit murder. Witneses said she was known as "Bloody Brygida" and accused her of drowning inmates in a latrine, beating others to death with a steel tippedwhip, setting a vicious dog on a pregnant woman and other murders.

Other defendants and their sentences were:

Former SS Capt. Hermann Hackmann, 67, the highest-ranking defendant, 10 years for being an accomplice to murder. He was accused of shooting Soviet prisoners of war and singling out Jews and sick inmates for death. The prosecution had requested life imprisonment.

Former SS Cpl. Emil Laurich, 60, whom former inmates called the "Angel of Death," eight years for conspiracy to commit murder. The prosecutor also recommended a life sentence for him,

Former SS Sgt. Fritz Petrick, 68, four years for conspiracy to commit murder.

Former SS Lt. Arnold Strippel, 70, 3½ years for conspiracy to murder.

Former SS Cpl. Thomas Ellwanger, 64, three years, conspiracy to commit murder.

Former SS Cpl. Heinz Villain, 60, to six years, conspiracy to commit murder.

The prosecutors had asked life sentences for Hackmann, Laurich and Petrick in addition to the two women.

Newspaper says man confesses to 21 killings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — William George Bonin, charged with 19 murders, has confessed to 21 killings of boys and young men found along Southern California freeways, a newspaper said today.

The 14-hour tape was allegedly made by the 34-year-old Downey truck driver in December or January in hopes of avoiding the death penalty, the Los Angeles Times reported, citing unnamed sources.

However, the newspaper said the prosecution is withholding the tape for undisclosed reasons and will not use it in Bonin's upcoming trial. Santa Monica attorney Earl Hanson, who is representing Bonin on the Los Angeles charges, said he doubts the tape exists.

He also said that by state law the tape would have had to be given to him to aid in the preparation of Bonin's defense, or else it could not be used as evidence.

In addition to the seven Orange County cases, bonin has been charged in Los Angeles County with 12 murders.

The deaths of 43 young men and boys in Southern California since 1973 had been called the Freeway Killings because many of the victims' nude and battered bodies were discovered dumped near freeway ramps. All of the deaths may not be part of the same case, authorities have said.

Meanwhile, Bonin's arraignment on 33 felony counts of an Orange County grand jury indictment, was posoponed Monday until a defense attorney is appointed.

The delay came when the public defender's office withdrew from his defense, citing a conflict of interest because it had represented two potential witnesses in the case.

Orange County Superior Court Judge William Murray postponed the case to July 10, when Hansen is expected to be named by the judge to take over the defense in Orange County as well as in Los Angeles.

The grand jury last Wednesday indicted Bonin on seven counts of murder, including several with "special circumstances" that could bring the death penalty. Other counts against him include multiple allegations of robbery, forced oral copulation, sodomy, false imprisonment and kidnapping, and a single count of child molestation.

The "special circumstances" that qualify the Bonin case for the death penalty include murder during robberies, murder during acts of sex perversion and murder by torture, authorities said.

In three of the Orange County murder allegations, Bonin has been accused of the same murders as in Los Angeles County. Carter said that Orange County District Attorney Cecil Hicks and his counterpart in Los Angeles County, John Van de Kamp, are expected to meet in the coming week to discuss how to consolidate the duplicate charges.

Gas leak may have caused explosion, fire

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Sheriff's arson investigators say a gas leak may have been responsible for an explosion and fire that destroyed a two-story apartment building, injured 10 people and shattered windows two miles away.

Fire investigators said gas may have collected in the attic and been ignited by electrical wiring. Two nearby apartment buildings also were damaged by Monday's blast, an arson investigator said.

At one point in the investigation, army ordnance experts were called in, but determined no explosives were involved.

San Diego Gas & Electric Company investigators said they found no leaks in street gas lines. But building manager Frank Morgan said one meter had a higher-than-normal reading, indicating gas may have been leaking in the building.

The most severely injured was Leroy Dixon, 29. A spokesman at University Hospital said Dixon was in fair condition with first and second-degree burns over 15 percent of his body.

"I was on my knees cleaning the bathroom floor when the whole room shook. If I hadn't been there, I'd been killed," said Connie Green, whose apartment was located next to Dixon's. "I was glad my kid wasn't home."

Mrs. Green's 15-year-old daughter, whose bedroom was destroyed, was at camp.

"The entire stairwell exploded into my apartment from next door. I heard people screaming and thought I smelled gas. So I left through the bedroom window. Neighbors helped me down the fire escape," she said.

Mrs. Green escaped injury, but others ranging in age down to a year old were hospitalized.

Christopher facing 4th murder charge

LOCKPORT, N.Y. (AP) — Another murder charge has been lodged against Joseph Christopher, the white Army private accused by police of being the ".22-caliber killer" who terrorized the Buffalo area last year.

Christopher, 25, previously was charged with three fatal shootings of black men last September. On Monday, he was indicted by a Niagara County grand jury in the fourth of those killings.

Christopher was arraigned a few hours later on second-degree murder chargees in the slaying of Joseph McCoy on Sept. 24. He pleaded innocent.

McCoy was one of four black males gunned down in the Buffalo area last Sept. 22-24 by a killer detectives described as a young white man. Investigators said all the shots were fired from the same .22-caliber weapon.

Christopher entered his plea through Kevin Dillon, one of his lawyers, at the arraignment before Niagara County Court Judge Aldo DeFlorio. DeFlorio ordered an investigation to see whether Christopher is entitled to a public defender.

Dillon, who represents Christopher in Erie County, where the other three .22-caliber killings took place, requested that his associate, Mark Mahoney, be the court-appointed lawyer if DeFlorio decides Christopher is entitled to a public defender.

The .22-caliber slayings were the first in a series of gun and knife attacks on dark-skinned men in New York state late last year.

Four killings and two assaults took place in Manhattan Dec. 22. Christopher has been indicted in one of those slayings as well as one of the non-fatal attacks.

He also has been indicted in Buffalo on charges of assaulting two black men with knives last Dec. 31 and on Jan. 1 this year. One survived despite a knife wound to the heart, and the second ducked in time to evade the knife.

None of the cases against Christopher has yet reached the trial stage.

Still unsolved are the slayings of two black cab drivers whose bodies were found with their hearts cut out in Buffalo suburbs last Oct. 8-9. Two black men were stabbed to death at bus stops in Buffalo and Rochester Dec. 29 and Dec. 30.

Christopher, according to Army records, enlisted in Buffalo on Nov. 13 and was assigned to Fort Benning, Ga. He was being held in an Army stockade there on charges of attacking a black soldier when he was indicted and returned to Buffalo this spring. The Army said he had been on furlough from Dec. 19 to Jan. 4.

All the slayings and attacks took place either before Christopher joined the Army or while he was on furlough.

Suspected hoaxer faces trial on similar charges

MORGAN CITY, La. (AP) — A man sought as the glib hoaxer who conned innkeepers and authorities with reports of an offshore oil rig disaster was to stand trial in Monroe today on similar charges, authorities said.

But the suspect, identified as Barry Allen Richardson, 28, of Monroe, was still at large on charges stemming from his bogus reports of an accident out in the Gulf of Mexico.

According to court records in Ouachita Parish, "Barry Alan Richardson" was arrested May 21 for giving false information given to Ouchita Parish deputies.

Court records in Monroe show that Richardson was freed on $250 bond on the misdemeanor criminal mischief charge and faces trial this afternoon.

Ouachita Parish deputies refused to release details of the Monroe case in which Richardson is accused of falsifying information.

In the Morgan City hoax, Inspector Duval Arthur of the St. Mary Parish sheriff's office said Richardson was fired from his roustabout's job with Gulf Intercoastal Oilfield Services on Wednesday, June 24.

Richardson stayed at the hotel for five days, and on Sunday he told the hotel management Sunday that 17 offshore oilworkers had been injured — some critically — in a rig accident, and then reserved a block of rooms for a "disaster center."

Then, early Monday, a man identifying himself as a Shell Oil Co. executive telephoned newspapers and radio stations and reported the "accident."

His reports, similar to those in actual rig disasters, were convincing enough to be published and broadcast.

The hoaxer also put offshore boat and air services on standby, and even asked the Berwick Police Department to lend him radio gear.

"He played it pretty much convincingly," Arthur said. "He was very shrewd about what he did, and he went pretty far with it."

Litton wins antitrust suit

NEW YORK (AP) — Litton Systems Inc. has been awarded more than $92 million after a federal jury found the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. used its monopolistic tactics to force Litton out of the office telephone equipment business.

AT&T could be made to pay more than $276 million to Litton because under antitrust law jury damage awards are automatically tripled if the verdict is not overturned on appeal.

Edward Goldstein, spokesman for AT&T, said the company would appeal the jury's decision and award.

The verdict came Monday after seven full days of deliberations at a five-month antitrust trial in U.S. District Court in Manhattan.

The case stems from a 1977 antitrust suit filed by Litton, a division of Litton Industries Inc., in which AT&T was accused of driving Litton out of the office telephone equipment business after it entered the field in 1971.

Irish parties jockey for prime minister post

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — The opposition Fine Gael and Labor parties sealed a coalition agreement that could unseat Irish Prime Minister Charles Haughey's Fianna Fail Party. But Haughey was busy wooing the handful of independents whose votes could give him a parliamentary majority.

A stalemate in the June 11 parliamentary election left no party with an outright majority in the 166-seat Dail, or Parliament.

At a special conference Sunday, Labor Party delegates voted 737-477 to join forces with Garret FitzGerald's Fine Gael, largest of the opposition parties.

The alliance would given the coalition a potentially victorious block of 80 votes when the Parliament meets Tuesday to choose a prime minister.

Haughey, whose party has governed the Irish Republic for all but 10 of the past 49 years, won 78 seats in the election.

He must gain the support of four of the six independents elected to Parliament if he is to defeat the Fine Gael-Labor challenge and remain as prime minister.

British press reported today speculated that Haughey would not be able to muster the maverick votes and would become the shortest serving prime minister in the republic's history. He came to office last December.

At Sunday's Labor Party meeting, party chief Michael O'Leary said Labor would have at least four of the 15 seats in FitzGerald's 15-member Cabinet. O'Leary, a one-time union leader, would become deputy prime minister. When the two parties last ruled in coalition, between 1973 and 1977, Labor had five Cabinet posts.

One of the toughest problems facing the new government is efforts to arrange an end to strife between the Protestant majority and the Roman Catholic minority in Northern Ireland, the six British-rule counties which many in the Republic see as a legitimate part of Ireland.

Haughey, 55, who was cleared 10 years ago in a major scandal involving gun-running to Northern Ireland, was under pressure throughout his campaign to take a more active role in gaining a solution to the problems of the North.

It can pay to bargain hunt on trip

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

The recent rise in the value of the dollar makes overseas travel attractive again for many Americans, but bargain hunters who aren't careful may find unfamiliar pitfalls in foreign lands.

Currency conversion is often the first problem. Do NOT assume that everyone accepts U.S. dollars. Try to get at least a little foreign currency — $10 or $15 worth — before you leave home. You'll need it for porters and for transportation from the airport to your hotel. If you can't get the foreign money you need in the United States, make the airport bank the first stop on your arrival.

Do NOT carry a lot of cash. Buy travelers checks in U.S. dollars or foreign currency. It is not only safer, but cheaper. When you convert money, you get a better rate of exchange for travelers checks than for cash. Shop around for your checks. Compare costs as well as refund policies. The commission charged for the checks varies; some are free, while others carry a fee of up to 1 percent.

Use credit cards wisely. They can be a convenience, but some card companies impose a fee when they convert foreign charges into dollars on your monthly bill. American Express, for example, adds 1 percent.

Convert money at a bank — not at your hotel or in a store or restaurant. Check banking hours; they are not the same as in the United States. In France, for example, many banks close for lunch. If you run out of money during the weekend, ask if there is a 24-hour, seven-day bank at the local railroad station.

Try to plan your budget in the currency of the country where you will be spending the most time. Suppose you are going to France. Figure out how much money you have — in dollars — and convert it, mentally, into French francs. Then divide by the length of your stay. Suppose it works out to 500 francs — about $90. That's your daily budget. If you're considering a 20-franc purchase, you won't have to convert 20 francs into dollars and compare the result to $90 to find out how big a dent in your budget you'll make. You can simply compare francs to francs — 20 to 500.

Don't assume you'll get a bargain just beca?se you're in the country where a product is made. Local taxes and fluctuating exchange rates can make things like French wine, Scotch whisky or Italian leathergoods more expensive abroad than in the United States.

Take advantage of special deals for foreigners. In England, for example, you can often get a refund on the value added tax or VAT, which is a sort of sales tax included in the price of most items. Ask the clerk to fill out a VAT refund form and turn it in so the customs officer at the airport when you leave the country. Eventually, you will get a check — probably in pounds sterling — for the amount of the tax. Some stores require a minimum 0urchase or impose a service charge for processing the VAT forms, but you will still save since the tax on most items is a hefty 15 percent.

Note: The refund $pplies only to things you take out of the country. You can't, therefore, get a VAT refund on your hotel room or meals. Nor can you get a refund on something you buy and give to someone in England. You may be asked by the customs officer to produce the items you claim a refund on; it's a good idea to pack them in luggage you'll be carrying on the plane.

Be careful about duty-free airport shops. Prices may be no cheaper than for the same items in regular stores. "Duty-free" means different things in different countries. In some places, there is no tax at all; in others, there is only a partial reduction of tax. Many people automatically buy a bottle of liquor, only to find the price, when figured in dollars, is higher than it is at home.

"Duty-free" does NOT mean your purchases are free of U.S. import levies. Anything you buy at a duty-free shop must be included when you total your purchases for customs at home. Each adult returning from a foreign country can bring in $300 worth of goods without paying any tax. Beyond that, you must pay duty — no matter where you shopped.

Clock will work 'overtime' tonight as extra second officially added

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's official clock works a bit of overtime tonight to get back in synch with the earth.

Between 7:59 p.m. and 8 p.m. EDT, timekeepers at the U.S. Naval Observatory will add an extra "leap" second to their master atomic clock, producing a 61-second minute and the year's longest day.

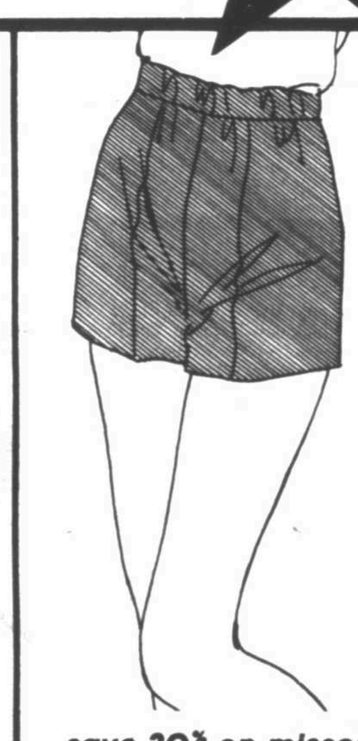

Such adjustments are made periodically to compensate for the long-term slowing of the earth's rotation which lengthens days. The last "leap" second was added Dec. 31, 1979.

Official time is used by scientists, broadcasters and others in need of accurate time. The observatory says its system of interconnected cesium beam atomic clocks is accurate to within a billionth of a second a day.

Terry Fox's victory

Terry Fox's race with cancer came to an end Sunday and there undoubtedly will be those who will say he lost the race, his last.

There are millions throughout the United States who, like their neighbors north of the Canadian-U.S. border, were enthralled by the young marathon runner's story and his message to the world. Canada, as a nation, mourns today just as the United States, as a nation, should mourn. A light has gone out. A symbol of courage is gone.

Terry Fox was more than a 22-year-old stricken with cancer whose Marathon of Hope unquestionably was the embodiment of the daily struggle of cancer victims. The attention his story focused on cancer, the disease's many victims and the hope of modern medical research will help to bring renewed hope and meaning to the lives of those suffering from the disease.

Fox's courage was unsurpassed. Last summer his attempt to run across Canada on his one good leg and his artificial leg ended when ill health forced him to give up. But that ending marked no more of a failure for Fox than did his inevitable death. Terry Fox lived courageously, never succumbing to the fears and the pain that haunted his life.

His courage will remain a light for the people of the world. The millions of dollars his efforts raised for cancer research will benefit not only Canadians but all those throughout the world who suffer from this tragic, deadly disease.

Through Fox's efforts an estimated $23 million has been raised for the Marathon of Hope fund. That's $23 million more than would have been raised had Fox not had the courage and personal commitment to dedicate a portion of the few remaining years of his life to the conquest of the disease.

Terry Fox did not lose his great race in life; he won. It is through efforts like his that cancer research can at last be successful and the dreaded disese can be brought under control.

That is Terry Fox's victory.

A quiet appointment

When Nunzio Palladino becomes chairman of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission Wednesday, front-page headlines are not likely to proclaim his elevation to public office. Unlike some of the other Reagan appointees of recent vintage, Mr. Palladino is not controversial.

Nary a word was raised in opposition as he appeared for questioning the other day before the Senate Environment Committee. He was quickly and quietly confirmed by the Senate.

The quietness surrounding the appointment may bode well for the commission's new chairman, for he will be heading an agency sure to be involved in the nation's most controversial and complicated energy issues in the years to come. If Mr. Palladino can assume his stewardship without prejudice, that is all to the good.

Nuclear energy has been revered, and reviled, in recent weeks. Some look upon it as the atomic savior in time of emergency, perhaps a key to getting the United States out from under the yoke of foreign domination. Others, in the wake of the Three Mile Island disaster, want to banish nuclear power forever as an enemy of society.

Anyone who can take over the chairmanship of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission without having been smeared by one of these extremist brushes is in a good leadership position. The dean of engineering at Pennsylvania State University, Nunzio Palladino, is such a man. When asked by a senator to express his attitude toward nuclear power, the dean replied:

"I believe nuclear power is an important part of our nation's energy mix."

Little wonder there was no opposition to this man about to assume a key position in the Reagan administration.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Ex-CIA man's greed led him to Qaddafi

WASHINGTON — By the nature of their work, undercover agents are given wide latitude in the way they spend the money allotted for their operations. It's an open invitation to steal with little chance of getting caught.

Jack Anderson

This is the story of one sticky-fingered spook who responded to the invitation with a degree of greed that is impressive even in the world of clandestine double-dealing. He stole impartially from the U.S. government, from his associates and from the foreign dictators with whom he did business.

The swindler is Edwin Wilson. He worked with another ex-CIA agent, Frank Terpil, who was convicted in absentia of illegal munitions dealings. Both are on the run after being indicted for illegal arms sales to Libyan dictator Muammar Qaddafi. Wilson is hiding out in Tripoli; at least he was until a couple of weeks ago.

By all accounts, Wilson is a shrewd, cold businessman who lets neither sentiment, patriotism nor simple morality stand in the way of a lucrative deal. When his mother died several years ago, he flew off to Libya on business the next day and missed her funeral.

In his years as a CIA contract agent, Wilson either resisted the temptation to profiteer or was able to cover his tracks. He was involved in the Bay of Pigs fiasco, as well as the subsequent secret war against Fidel Castro, which included a cockamamie scheme to have trained dolphins attach explosive charges to Cuban ships.

It was when Wilson left the CIA that opportunity knocked. He joined the Navy's supersecret "Task Force 157" — a group of about 75 agents who gathered intelligence around the world under the cover of export-import operations.

Wilson's assignment was to set up a "front" firm called Consultants International, through which agents would be run and supplied. It was a joint CIA-Navy operation: The Navy gave the orders; the CIA paid the rent.

Terpil told a confidant that Wilson made a fortune from Task Force 157. Wilson was the paymaster for his agents, Terpil explained, and would charge the government $20,000 a head — but pay some agents as little as $11,000 and pocket the difference.

Terpil also said Wilson once was given $70,000 to buy a Russian mine. But he never bought it, claiming that his contact had absconded with the money, or some such excuse.

Wilson also made a bundle from the then-shah of Iran through his CIA-Navy front. Sources told my associate Dale Van Atta that Wilson had particularly good contacts in Iran during the shah's regime, including members of the American group that advised the Iranians on military purchases.

Wilson had access to the "wish list" of equipment for SAVAK, the shah's dreaded secret police, and was once paid by a private contractor to eavesdrop electronically on meetings of Army supply officials at the Pentagon.

At one point, Wilson arranged — for a healthy commission — to have a fishing vessel, fitted with spy gear, constructed in Ireland for the Iranian Navy. The $400,000 boat snapped its propeller en route to Iran and had to be towed to a South African port for repairs.

On another occasion, Wilson contracted with the Iranian military for nine million pairs of socks, at $3 a pair. He was paid in full but delivered only 100,000 pairs. He also sold the Iranians boots and barbed wire.

The full extent of Wilson's thievery may never be known, but he managed to acquire a 1,500-acre ranch and other properties worth millions of dollars — supposedly while working as a middle-level government employee.

Word of Wilson's depredations eventually reached Adm. Bobby Inman, now the No. 2 man at the CIA, who was in charge of Task Force 157. With the nerve of a burglar, Wilson offered to set up another, similar task force and said he'd help get the necessary funds from Congress if Inman would grease the skids for Wilson's own companies. The outraged admiral responded by having Wilson fired from Task Force 157. Soon after, Inman disbanded the group.

Footnote: Wilson may also have overplayed his hand with his current protector, Muammar Qaddafi. Sources say the Libyan dictator is upset by reports that Wilson overcharged the Libyans for the arms he sold them. For example, thousands of explosives timers that cost Wilson $4.50 to $6 each were sold to Libya for as much as $250 apiece.

MANUFACTURED MANDATE: Though his proposal to eviscerate the food stamp program was moderated by cooler heads in Congress, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., used the issue to solicit funds for the Congressional Club, a conservative political action committee.

Starting in April, the club sent out nearly 100,000 tracts signed by Helms, arguing against the food stamp program and enclosing pre-typed postcards of support addressed to Helms.

Helms lashed out against the strikers and students who get food stamps — without mentioning that out of 22 million people in the program only 25,000 are strikers and 47,000 are students.

Helms went on to make a pitch for donations to the club, writing, "Your contributions for as little as $15 today can save the American taxpayer billions of dollars in the years ahead."

An official of the Congressional Club — which had a surplus of $665,192.95 after last year's election — assured us the Helms mailing wasn't intended to "manufacture a mandate, but to mobilize the one already out there."

●

WATCH ON WASTE: One point that was missed in the air traffic controllers controversy was that as many as 66 control towers around the country are under-utilized and probably could be shut down. A few years ago, Congress gave the Federal Aviation Administration some $210,000 to shut down five unneeded towers, but nothing was done.

CHARLEY REESE

Justice wins when reality is recognized

Years ago I happened to sit in on the interrogation of a burglar. This fellow was a third-generation criminal and well known to the local cops. As a matter of fact, he was rather well thought of because he never resorted to violence.

Charley Reese

The detective was puzzled. This man had always been what is known as a "peeler," which is someone who pries or rips the doors off safes. This time he had used an acetylene torch and so the cop asked the burglar why he had changed his method of operation.

"Heck," said the burglar, "the last time you sent me up they taught me welding, and using a torch is a whole lot easier." You might also like to know that this enterprising professional was also taking a correspondence course while he was in prison — in locksmithing.

So much for rehabilitation. The liberal approach to criminal rehabilitation was doomed to failure from the start because it is based on a false premise, that crime is caused by poverty. When Aristotle first said that, it was true because in those days poverty was poverty and most any rational person, given the choice of watching his children die of hunger or of breaking society's rules, will break the rules.

That kind of poverty vanished in America a long time ago. I used to keep company with a number of criminals and I have never known one who turned to crime because he needed to buy food for himself or for his family. There are simply too many organizations, including government, standing in line to dole out the goodies. Between unemployment pay, food stamps and other such benefits, you can clear a lot more being poor than you can sticking up convenience stores. It's a lot easier to get a job, hurt your back and get a lawyer than it is to rob a bank.

A lot of criminals do it for the fun of it. They are what you call, in old-fashioned terminoloy, hell-raisers. They like the excitement. They are the kind of men who make great soldiers in wartime.

Some criminals break the rules because they are just plain hostile. They have a lot of anger inside them and our insipid society today offers no legitimate outlets for the guy who is hostile but not especially athletic. Those are the people we used to call "mean."

I can empathize with them because I get hostile occasionally myself. The point is that criminals are not alien creatures. They are human beings just like us, only sometimes a little bit less lucky or a little bit less disciplined. Sometimes they just have a different value system. Idiot liberals think every human being on earth has the same value system they do and those who don't must be sick. Hogwash! There are a lot of perfectly rational people who see nothing wrong in cutting a throat or racking a skull.

We won't get a criminal justice system that works until we tell off the do-gooders, social workers and academics. You can't con a con artist. The criminals are winning because they're in touch with reality and the criminal justice system isn't.

INSIDE REPORT:

Aides 'protecting' Haig after his Kirkpatrick criticism

WASHINGTON — Word in the White House following Secretary of State Alexander Haig's stunning put-down of United Nations Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick was a determined (but unpublicized) "Protect Al Haig."

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Senior presidential aides, who felt they had disposed of earlier problems with the secretary of state, will do everything they can to prevent the attack on Kirkpatrick from escalating into an internal crisis for President Reagan that could befoul Haig's standing both inside the administration and in foreign chancelleries.

Why did Haig permit — or instruct — his press aide, Dean Fischer, to spoil Kirkpatrick's brilliant diplomatic achievement in toning down Iraq's anti-Israeli Security Council resolution to the point where the U.S. could vote for it? One explanation: Haig really did feel the ambassador had not stayed in close enough touch with the State Department during her long, private negotiations with the Iraqis. Another explanation: His grievance, aired on his plane in the Far East, was a product of extreme fatigue after two weeks on the road.

But the effect of the put-down of Kirkpatrick was devastating. Even if she did "exceed her authority," which is doubtful, the end result was a diplomatic triumph greater than President Reagan dared hope for. Although the White House Thursday accepted Haig's word that he had nothing to do with Fischer's background criticism of Kirkpatrick, no one believes Fischer could have acted independently. 'GET GRAMM'

Rep. Phil Gramm of Texas, the brainy "boll weevil" who has proved indispensable to President Reagan's radical attack on government spending, is under increasing fire from regular Democrats, including Democratic Party Chairman Chuck Manatt.

Without help from Democrat Gramm, Reagan's budget-cutting program could not have succeeded nearly so well as it has, despite the president's current problems with the Democratic-controlled House. Gramm's success, regarded as apostasy by party leaders, has infuriated the regular Democrats.

The first attack on Gramm was a whispered, cloakroom campaign threatening to remove him from the Budget Committee. Then Manatt swung from the rug, threatening to run Gramm out of his party. In fact, there is far more smoke than fire in the assault on Gramm, but it shows that spirits are reviving within the Democratic Party after six months of hiding in the closet out of fear of Ronald Reagan and his popularity.

REAGAN EYES CIVIL DEFENSE

Without fanfare, President Reagan has approved a move by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger that could lead to a long overdue effort to build America's "passive defense" system — that is, civil defense.

All officials agree that the Soviet Union is far ahead of the U.S. in a civil defense system for its population, particularly in large cities. That includes evacuation routes, trenching tools for average citizens to dig temporary shelters against radiation and other safeguards.

Weinberger has asked former Air Force Secretary Tom Reed, a California engineer-financier with national political credentials, to study the civil defense question as part of the broader question of military defense against possible enemy attack. Reed's opening gambit was a meeting June 25 with the high-level Defense Science Board. Any decision to move on the civil defense front would cost hundreds of millions of dollars.

ALLEN RAMPANT

Richard V. Allen, President Reagan's national security assistant, told Jewish leaders in a hush-hush White House talk last week that those four F-16 aircraft destined for Israel but delayed because of the Israeli raid against Iraq's nuclear installation would be sent to Israel shortly after the June 30 Israeli election.

But Allen warned the conference of Presidents of Major Jewish Organizations, the top-level leadership of the American Jewish community, that if word leaked out about the F-16s — or even about the fact that he had held the hush-hush meeting — he would deny publicly what he had said.

In fact, the Jerusalem Post, in a story by its well-informed Washington correspondent, Wolf Blitzer, said last Thursday that Allen had threatened not to hold any more private briefing sessions with the Jewish leaders if word got out about last week's session.

SENATE CHRISTMAS TREE

Chairman Bob Dole of the Senate Finance Committee is slowly building a Christmas tree out of the Reagan tax bill now being written in his committee.

Both the Treasury Department and White House aides are unhappy about Dole's willingness to accept Republican-sponsored amendments — and some from the Democrats — into the basic bill: a three-year cut in marginal tax rates, a reduction from 70 percent to 50 percent in the rate on income from dividends and interest and faster tax write-offs for capital investment.

The worst offender, in administration eyes: a new provision to stimulate savings, principally in mortgage-lending institutions, many of which are now in danger of bankruptcy. But that amendment at least had broad support in the committee. Other amendments dealing with special relief for truckers and timber operators have very limited application. Dole is willing to accommodate these special constituency amendments in the interest of speed and of keeping his committee together, but in doing so he is angering the administration.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 30, 1934, Adolf Hitler began a purge in Germany, removing hundreds of political and military leaders.

On this date:

In 1777, British forces in the Revolutionary War evacuated New Jersey, crossing to Staten Island, N.Y.

In 1834, the Indian territory was created by an Act of Congress.

In 1859, 5,000 people watched as a French acrobat — Emile Blondin — crossed Niagara Falls on a tightrope.

We have frequently chastised declarer for taking a finesse instead of searching for an alternate, higher percentage, line. This time we are taking declarer to task for ignoring a finesse which, at first glance, seems unnecessary!

Looking at all four hands, the best contract is six clubs by South—played by North, it might be defeated by a diamond lead. Since it was difficult to get to the perfect spot, six hearts was as good a slam as any and declarer did have the cushion of 100 honors.

With no really good lead, West made the mildly deceptive attack of the eight of spades. Declarer won in dummy, drew three rounds of trumps, ending on the table, and took the diamond finesse. That lost and, since there was no way to avoid a club loser, declarer ended up down one.

A trifle unlucky perhaps, but also not the best way to tackle the hand. Declarer lost his chance for glory, and a hefty score, at trick one!

Despite the fact that he held a singleton spade, declarer should have finessed the jack at the first trick. That play cannot possibly cost, for if the finesse fails, declarer can discard two clubs on the ace and king of spades. That would mean that he will still have the diamond finesse in reserve for his slam.

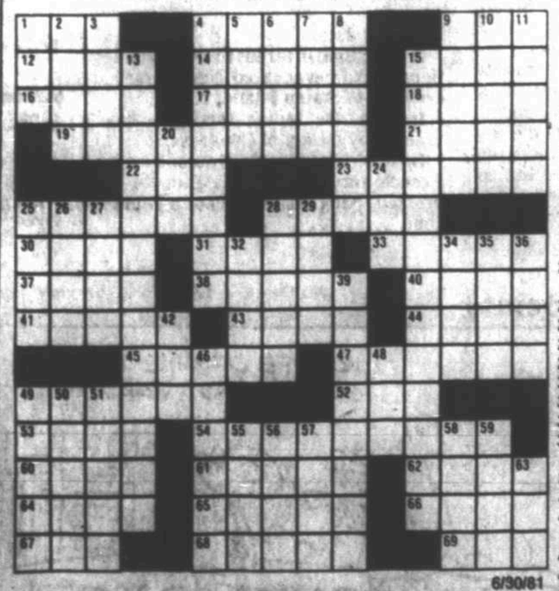

In this case, however, the spade finesse wins. Now declarer can draw trumps, discard two clubs on the ace-king of spades, and take the diamond finesse for an overtrick. The seemingly useless spade finesse actually increases declarer's chance of making his slam by a full 50 percent. Whereas the diamond finesse is strictly a 50-50 proposition, declarer builds the odds in his favor to 3-to-1 by playing for one of two finesses—either in diamonds or in spades—to succeed.

'Sunbean' may provide new source of protein

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Plant scientists are edging near their goal of developing crops that can draw nitrogen directly from the air, the Agriculture Department says

Officials said scientists at the University of Wisconsin have successfully transplanted a gene from a bean seed into a sunflower cell, creating what they dubbed a "sunbean" which could provide new sources of protein.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block called it a "breakthrough achievement" that "opens a whole new era in plant genetics."

"It is the first step toward the day when scientists will be able to increase the nutritive value of plants, to make plants resistant to disease and environmental stresses and to make them capable of fixing nitrogen from the air."

Developing crops that take nitrogen directly from the atmosphere would mean tremendous savings in fertilizer and energy costs.

Block told a meeting of the American Seed Trade Association in Atlanta that the gene transfer "could open many doors for creating genetic variations that have been unavailable in the past."

The genetic engineering project was led by biochemists John D. Kemp of the department's Agricultural Research Service and Timothy C. Hall of the University of Wisconsin at Madison.

"What the scientists have done is to transfer a gene that directs the production of major protein from its native location in the French bean seed into the foreign environment of a sunflower cell," the department's announcement said. "They call the new plant tissue 'sunbean.'"

The bean gene "is stable in its new environment" as part of the sunflower material and now is being watched to see if it will produce bean protein, it said.

To achieve the genetic transfer, the scientists used a bacterium which causes crown gall disease in certain species of plants. This bacterium, the scientists said, has been called "nature's genetic engineer" because it transfers a small piece of its genetic material into a host plant's cell.

"What we did was to turn the bacteria's exploitation of plant cells into a tool for the transfer of genes useful to us," said Kemp, one of the team leaders.

Kemp said that although the bean protein is not yet being produced in the new plant tissue, he and the others "plan to modify their new methods until they attain high levels of protein production."

Not everyone is feeling the effects of the heat wave that's gripping Moscow. This young Muscovite was all smiles as she rested in her mother's arms in a Moscow park Monday.

Even Pravda unable to beat the heat

By MARC ROSENWASSER
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — It's been so hot in the Soviet Capital for the past week that ideology is going to the Muscovites' heads. They're making sun hats out of Pravda, the Commmunist Party newspaper.

After an unseasonably warm winter that produced more flu than skiing, the temperature each day approaches the city's record for June of 94 degrees.

Air conditioners are a rarity, and those that are available are very expensive. A one-room unit costs about 500 rubles, nearly three times the average worker's monthly wage and about $700 at the official exchange rate.

Seeking relief, people swarm to swimming pools and recreation areas and consume huge quantities of ice cream, beer, kvas, American cola and soda water from machines located around the city. Each machine has a single glass that the customer is supposed to wash before using.

"It's just been terrible, terrible," said one young woman walking on the street Monday afternoon. "I've had no time to go swimming and my apartment is very hot. I've been trying to go outside as often as possible."

Another woman complained that many of the older buildings have only very small windows, making it seem even hotter than it is.

Women have taken to loose-fitting dresses. Men have donned sandals, though often with socks.

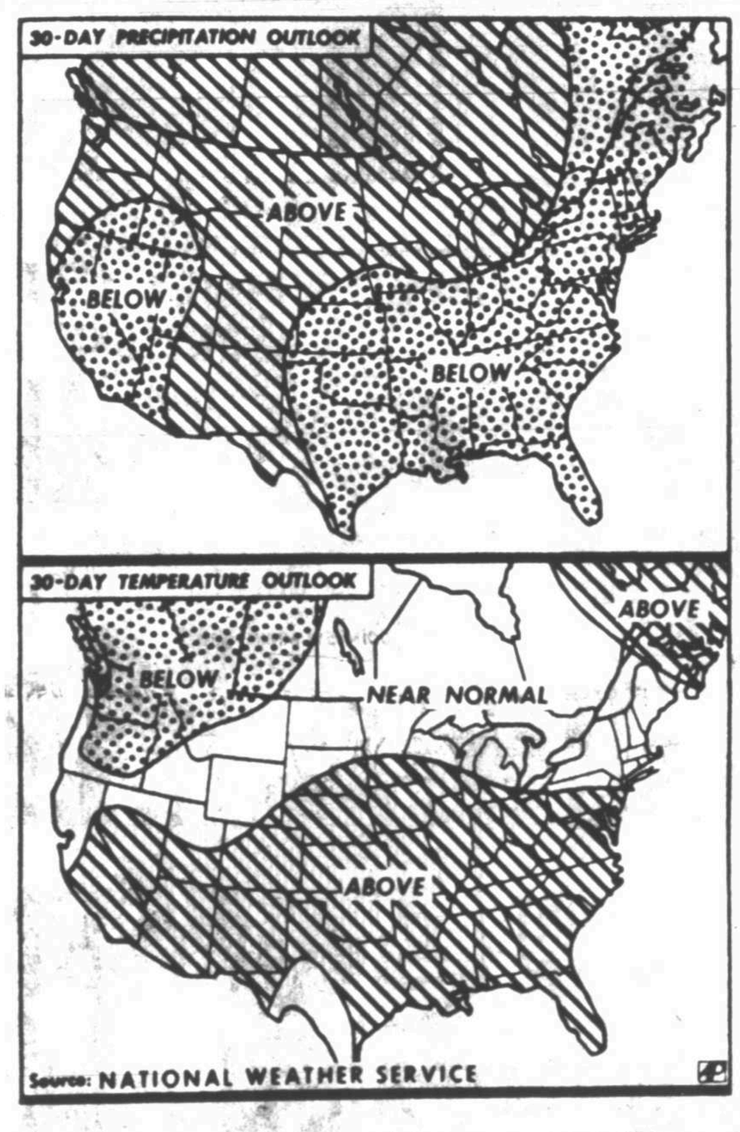

Children wear shorts. One tiny tot spotted in a park had on a large hat and nothing else.

Two-piece bathing suits are in vogue for women at the beaches, but they are generally not as daring as some found in the West. Nude bathing in public is out.

One man said the recreation area he visited during the weekend was packed, with foreigners as well as Russians.

"I just drank and drank and drank," he said.

He was talking about soft drinks. But he said he thought the consumption of vodka has probably increased also since the heat wave began June 22.

Record corn crop planted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers have planted an estimated 84.7 million acres of corn for harvest this year, 1 percent more than in 1980 and the most in 32 years, the Agriculture Department said Monday.

The department's Crop Reporting Board said surveys among 126,000 farmers on June 1 also showed increases from last year's plantings for most other grain crops, peanuts and tobacco. However, farmers indicated they are cutting back on soybeans and cotton.

In all, plantings of the major crops this year are expected to total 365.5 million acres, 8.6 million more than in 1980 and the most since 1944.

Earlier, based on surveys as of March 1, farmers indicated they would plant slightly less than 84 million acres of corn this year for all purposes, including grain and forage.

The report said corn to be harvested as grain was estimated at almost 74.6 million acres, up from about 73.1 million in 1980.

However, officials cautioned that wet weather during the spring delayed plantings in some major areas and that further revisions in 1981 acreages will be forthcoming in the weeks and months ahead.

Corn is the largest and most valuable farm crop grown in the United States. It is the key ingredient for much of the nation's food supply, primarily as feed for livestock and poultry, and is a prime item in the export trade.

Last year's corn harvest was severely reduced by drought and hot weather to 6.65 billion bushels from a record of 7.94 billion in 1979.

Department economists have projected the 1981 corn harvest at about 7.7 billion bushels, allowing for a return to normal weather and yields. However, the department's first official 1981 production forecast will not be issued until July 10.

The report also showed:

—Sorghum plantings, 16.1 million acres, up 1.6 percent from 1980.

—All wheat, 88.8 million acres, up 10.4 percent. That included winter wheat, 65.8 million acres, up 14.5 percent; durum, 5.84 million, up 5.7 percent; and other spring wheat, 17.2 million, down 1.8 percent.

—Oats, 13.6 million acres, up 1.9 percent.

—Barley, 9.7 million acres, up 16.6 percent.

—Soybeans, 68.5 million acres, down 2.2 percent.

—Rice, 3.84 million acres, up 14.2 percent.

—Cotton, 14.2 million acres, down 2.3 percent.

—Peanuts, 1.56 million acres, up 2.7 percent.

—Tobacco, 945,800 acres, up 3.4 percent.

—Sugarbeets, 1.26 million acres, up 2 percent.

—Sugarcane, 743,600 acres, up 2.7 percent.

Wormlike corn pest under investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department scientists say they are investigating a new potentially destructive pest of U.S. corn and other crops that was first discovered in this country three months ago.

It is the corn cyst nematode, a small, wormlike pest which was found in a routine soil sample taken from a field in Kent County, Md., in March.

Further investigative work is being conducted by the department's nematology laboratory at Beltsville, Md., in cooperation with the University of Maryland.

Identification of the corn cyst nematode — the first to appear in the Western Hemisphere — was by Dr. Morgan Golden, curator of the department's nematode collection.

The nematode, he said, was first discovered in India in 1971 and also is found in Pakistan and Egypt.

Steaming summer forecast

WASHINGTON (AP) — July will be hotter than normal for most of the nation, the National Weather Service said Monday in its 30-day outlook.

Temperatures will average above seasonal norms over the southern half of the West and from the central and southern Great Plains to the middle and south Atlantic coast, the Weather Service said.

Below average temperatures are indicated for the Pacific Northwest and near normal temperatures will prevail in New England and in other unspecified areas.

Rainfall will exceed the median average from the Pacific Northwest through the northern Great Plains to the Great Lakes. An area from the Rio Grande Valley to eastern Arizona and northward to Colorado also will have higher than average rainfall.

Lower than median rainfall is expected in the rest of the nation, the Weather Service said.

Turtles prove slow, but sure in Midland race

By DORIAN MARTIN
Staff Writer

Although none of the entrants will ever grace the turf at Churchill Downs, the races at the less renowned Hill Park provided Midlanders with some Turtle Derby spirit early Monday morning.

The field, consisting of many backyard turtles of varying sizes and shapes, was ready for the 9 a.m. posttime. Many had been groomed with fingernail polish and paint to be easily identifiable by owners and spectators alike.

The time before the race was spent in varying stages of preparation. Some turtles were let out of their "stalls" (boxes and buckets seemed to be the most popular) to stretch their limbs, while others were left in their boxes to psych-up.

The races proved to be rather slow, with the participants often taking a not-so-straight path to the finish line.

In the race for youngsters under 5 years of age, the blue ribbon was won by a turtle owned by Kris McPherson, age 2½. The next two places were taken by the brother duo of Justin and Jason Tervooren, ages 5 and almost 3.

Justin's turtle, White Lightning, started out in the right direction, but soon had reversed his course back toward the starting line.

Making another U-turn, the turtle increased its pace to close within several inches of McPherson's entry. However, the distance proved to be too great for White Lightning to overcome.

Meanwhile, the third place finisher was left far behind, having not yet inched over the starting line.

Although showing good speed during the race, White Lightning was not specially bred for the event. "My next door neighbor gave him to me," said Justin. He also added that there was no special training or feeding involved in readying the turtle for the event.

In the race for the 6-8 year olds, the turtles were skittish before the start as one racer snapped at his handler as it was placed on the starting line.

The race's winner was clear cut. "Harold," owned by William Peterson, 8, moved his shell over the line with no hesitation.

Peterson, who recently moved to Midland from Corpus Christi, revealed no special training regimen. "I just let it walk everyday," he said. "I lost it two times."

To increase his speed, Harold stayed on a minimal diet. Peterson fed him a special diet of lettuce, "but he wouldn't eat it," his owner said.

The second and third place turtles provided the most heated battle: the suspense was whether any turtle would make it to the line at all.

After much hesitation, a turtle owned by Shawn Hull edged over the line to take the runner-up spot.

Third place honors went to Sonia Cunningham's turtle, who couldn't decide whether to cross the line or run parallel to it.

After two preliminary heats for the category of 9-year-olds and up, the final results showed the winning turtle to be owned by Eddy McCarthy.

Second place went to Rolo Builta while third was garnered by Robbie McBride.

Prizes were awarded to the top three finishers in each division. The race was sponsored by the Midland Parks and Recreation Department.

Three-year-old Jason Tervooren was suffering from turtle-phobia Monday at the Turtle Race at Hill Park. Jason didn't want to have anything to do with the "speedster" being held by his mother, Linda Tervooren.

Police investigating knife slashings

NEW YORK (AP) — Police were trying to determine today whether a series of weekend slashings of eight men — mostly drifters who had been drinking — were committed by the same person.

They said there were no indications the slashings were connected to similar attacks last winter.

The victims were slashed at four different locations in separate attacks that started late Saturday night and didn't end until after midnight. Several of the victims described their attacker as a stocky, 5-foot-9 black man in his 30s.

Police said the method, timing and location of the stabbings indicated they were all done by the same man.

Seven of the eight victims required hospitalization. They were listed in stable condition following treatment for neck lacerations.

One investigator, Sgt. James Knott, said several neck wounds were nearly fatal. "Another half-inch and we could have lost three of them," he said.

According to Capt. Harold Wischerth, the slasher cut five of the men while they were sleeping on park benches and crept up behind the others.

The injured were identified as Charles Edwards, 41; Miguel Ancarmacion, 30; Gus Loges 65; Lary Ruchman 27; Willie Townsend, 58; Robert Brown, 43; Charles Vann, 43, and Jerome Jordan, 53.

Wischerth said there was no indication the slashings were related to two series of slashings and stabbings in November and December last year.

In the November episode, a man ran amok, killing one person and injuring four more in attacks around Bellevue Hospital. No one has been charged with those crimes.

In December, four men with dark complexions died after being stabbed in midtown. Army Private Joseph G. Christopher, 25, who has been charged with the slayings of three black men in Buffalo, was indicted last month in one of those murders.

Communists preparing for party's 60th anniversary

PEKING (AP) — The Chinese Communist Party Central Committee is expected to end its secret session shortly and issue a final communique tonight as China prepares to celebrate the party's 60th anniversary, diplomatic sources said.

Foreign journalists have been alerted to get ready for a special transmission from the 215-member committee, reportedly meeting since Friday or Saturday.

Chinese officials have declined to say when the committee convened, following a policy of not announcing party meetings in advance. But the committee was expected to adjourn well before the Wednesday anniversary.

china's traditional calendar is arranged in 60-year cycles, so the anniversary is akin to a centennial in the West.

The committee is also expected to issue a document assessing the role Mao Tse-tung, late party chairman and leader of the Chinese revolution that brought the Communists to power in 1949.

The assessment is believed to stress his achievements first but also take up mistakes in his later life, especially the disastrous Great Leap Forward of 1958 and the 10-year Cultural Revolution that began in 1966. Both movements plunged China into economic turmoil and are officially criticized.

The committee is also expected to endorse modernization programs and economic relations with the West, policies spurned during the Mao years.

A major speech is awaited on anniversary day from Hu Yaobang, by all accounts the next party chairman. Hu, the party general secretary, is a close ally of Vice Chairman Deng Xiaoping, architect of China's modernization drive and in effect the nation's leader.

Hu will replace Hua Guofeng, Mao's handpicked successor who has seldom been seen since September.

Safety short courses are available at MC

Midland College puts the emphasis on safety next week, offering a short course in Defensive Driving and another in Motorcycle Safety.

Beginning July 8, Carol Chidlaw instructs new students in the techniques used to establish and maintain safe motorcycle driving habits. While the course is intended for inexperienced drivers, those already operating a motorcycle will benefit from learning updated safety procedures.

Cycles will be provided for students and classes meet 7 to 9 p.m. Wednesdays and 5 to 9 p.m. Saturdays for three weeks. Course fee is $50.

For those wishing to take the Defensive Driving course but unable to attend classes week nights, a Saturday course will be held July 11.

Study which normally requires three evenings to complete has been incorporated into a one-day session meeting from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. The fee is $15.

The course, co-sponsored by Midland College and the Texas Safety Association, is offered in an effort to reduce loss of life and property from motor vehicle accidents.

Students learn preventive techniques and defensive maneuvers that will improve driver capability.

Pre-registration for either course may be completed now in room 156 of the Midland College Administration Building between 7 a.m. and noon and 12:30 to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

For more information, call 684-7851, extension 147 or 216.

Midland woman testifies against alleged rapist

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A sobbing 22-year-old Midland mother testified Monday afternoon in 142nd State District Court that she was raped at knife-point, while her 16-year-old assailant was vexed by the constant crying of her 2-year-old daughter.

The youth threatened to kill her and the baby, the mother said of the accused, who, she said, lived next door to her with his brothers and parents.

The woman said the attacker, Finn Lee Patton, who has been certified as an adult to stand trial for the felony offense, had paid her a visit on mid-afternoon last April 3 to check on a used refrigerator and stove the woman had for sale. Her husband was at work, she said.

She said Patton left her house after she told him that she had traded the applicances for new ones and how she and her husband had arranged credit to buy the replacements.

Minutes later, he returned, she said, and after a brief chat at the door to get more information on the applicances, he stepped into the house and threatened her with a kitchen butcher knife.

"HE PUSHED ME DOWN, and he locked the door," said the woman. "He got the knife and put it in my face and told me I better shut up. He pushed me to the sofa."

The dark-haired woman, under examination by prosecutor Robert Rendall, said she tried "to be rough with him" to dissuade him from assaulting her.

Her "little girl" in the nearby rocking chair "started crying and crying."

"He said I better make her shut up, but I can't."

Patton grabbed the baby to quieten her, the mother said.

"She started crying more and more."

"And then he jumped on me. I kind of pushed him" and told him, "You better get out of here."

Patton, she testified, retorted: "'You better shut up, or I'm going to kill you.'" Her assailant also warned her that "I had better make her (the baby) shut up, because he was going to kill me and her."

The woman said Patton then pushed her to the large sofa.

"He started saying that he wanted me.... He put the knife on me and told me to take off my clothes off.

"He was still getting mad at me because the baby wouldn't stop crying," she said.

"And then he threw me on the floor," she sobbed. "He got on top of me. He started kissing me all over."

AFTERWARD, he raped her, she said, and "talked about his girl friend, that she was Mexican or something. He told me that he knew that I was going to go to the police."

She said she told him she wouldn't do that.

"He offered me some money." She refused.

The prosecutor retired, and turned the victim over to court-appointed defense attorney Les Acker.

The woman sobbed even more under Acker's impersonal but relentless and soft-toned questioning which upset the woman. By his cross-examination, he asked the woman to retrace the incident.

"He touched me all over," she said.

"With his hands?" asked Acker.

"Of course!" she yelled.

Acker asked the woman what else happened.

"He started touching me and kissing me all over."

"Was he kissing you with his mouth?" he asked.

"Of course!" she again cried.

"I feel sick," she sobbed. "I feel sick."

Co-prosecutor Jim Rex requested a recess to allow the woman to recover her composure, and Judge Pat Baskin asked the seven-man, five-woman jury to step into the jury room for a 15-minute recess.

THE WOMAN SAT weeping in the witness stand. Her hand was over her bowed head.

Her husband, who may be called as a witness, was not there.

Just as the recess was nearing an end, the woman suddenly sat up, covered her mouth, made heaving sounds, and rushed to the restroom. A woman deputy followed her.

After another 15-minute period, the trial resumed.

Midland Police Detective Sgt. Michael Huckabay, who investigated the incident, said that the women was "in quite an hysterical state" when he arrived at her house in east central Midland. "She was flushed, pale-looking, sweaty, and hysterical."

Another investigator, Bob Miller, said the woman was "quite upset. She did know the actor (the defendant). He did live next door."

Miller said that the woman identified the 16-year-old youth as her assailant, after the youth and his three older brothers were in a line-up on the afternoon of the alleged rape.

Patton, jailed in lieu of a $50,000 bond, is awaiting trial in Hobbs, N.M., for assault with intent to commit rape.

If convicted of aggravated rape, he could sentenced from five years to 99 years or life in prison.

Oil producer thinks it's high time to institute oilfield 'hot line'

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Thieves can carry off a $60,000 wellhead in 15 minutes or drain 40 barrels of crude oil and be gone in "10 minutes or less," says an independent oil producer.

Gene Wright of Gilmer, a member of the Texas Independent Producers & Royalty Owners Association, and Texas Ranger Capt. Bill Wilson announced Monday a "hot line" is being set up at Wichita Falls to curb up to $200 million a year in oil and gas thefts.

Wright, head of TIPRO's task force on oil field theft, said thieves got $50,000-$60,000 worth of equipment from him last year.

Oil and gas thefts "bring quick cash and very few people have ever being caught stealing wellheads," Wright told a news conference.

The phone number for collect calls — 817 723-1114 — will go into operation Wednesday on a six-month trial basis.

Wright also said several asssociations have established a $2,500 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of thieves.

He said new laws increasing the penalty for stealing oil field equipment and requiring detailed records on the sale and exchange of used oil field equipment also should help.

Asked how much equipment is being stolen, Wright said $50 million to $100 million a year in Texas, and he added, "It could be twice that."

Wilson said Texas Rangers already are spending 20 percent of their time on "oil field-related thefts. It's not our No. 1 priority, but it is a high priority."

Wright said TIPRO "decided it is high time we start making some positive steps toward eradication of the problem, perhaps."

"We're full behind you, 100 percent," said Wilson. "Oil and gas thefts are a major problem right now due to the fact that there's a tremendous amount of money being spent on equipment, and there's a tremendous amount of money to be made in the oil field business, which makes the thieves come out."

Wilson said the biggest problem is identifying equipment as stolen equipment.

Wright said in addition to having to pay for equipment that is stolen, it also takes a long time — up to 15 months — to replace some equipment.

Asked what was being stolen, Wright said pumping units, wellheads, valves, engines and drilling tools.

"If you've got oil field equipment to get rid of, you can find someone to buy it," said Wilson.

Wright said thefts raise the cost of doing business, "and it's got to be the consumer who ultimately pays for it."

Local authorities join in oil field theft effort

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Members of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association and Midland County Sheriff's Office unveiled a program Monday morning that will combat theft of oilfield equipment in the United States.

The local involvement is part of a statewide plan adopted by the State Legislature, according to Arden Grover, president of PBPA.

On July 1, officials from six oil and gas trade organizations will begin a theft reporting system where individuals may telephone collect to report a theft or information regarding a theft. That number is 817-723-1114.

Prompt reporting of an oilfield theft increases the chance of getting the property returned by 10-fold, said Ed Thompson with PBPA.

This first state-wide reporting system, coupled with the passage of two new laws passed by the 67th State Legislature and signed by Gov. Bill Clements, was devised to stop the growing crime wave in the oil patch.

This theft-reporting system will be located in Wichita Falls, said Grover, with its base at the North Texas Oil and Gas Association office. The phone line will be manned 24 hours a day. After the information regarding the theft has been taken, the proper law enforcement officials and area news media will be notified.

One major point of the legislation is the stiffer penalties that will be levied on persons convicted of oilfield thefts. The new laws also require more detailed record keeping on the sale and exchange of used oilfield equipment, Grover noted.

George Thompson with the Sheriff's Office explained the need for such a state-wide reporting. "We in Midland County know what has been reported. And people in Ector County know what's been stolen." But there has been no coordination between them or among other counties and other states. And it's not unusual to locate stolen equipment as far away as Ohio, he said.

To entice more people to become involved in catching the thieves, several associations have established a reward program of up to $2,500 for the arrest and conviction of a person or persons who have stolen oilfield equipment.

The organizations involved are the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association, Austin; North Texas Oil and Gas Association, Wichita Falls; West Central Texas Oil and Gas Association, Abilene; Panhandle Petroleum Association, Amarillo; Permian Basin Petroleum Association, Midland; and the Petroleum Committee of East Texas Chamber of Commerce, Longview.

These organizations are urging land owners and royalty owners to take note of suspicious-looking vehicles or persons on oil and gas leases, and report these citings via the anti-theft telephone number.

George Thompson noted that in 1978 a survey in Midland County showed oilfield thefts amounted to $240,000.

This new reporting system is being started for a six-month trial basis, with the ending date to be Dec. 31.

Drying is one of the oldest methods of food preservation and is also one of the simplest. It requires only basic equipment which can usually be made at home at little to moderate cost.

Betty Ambrose, home economics teacher at Lee High School, and Mary Kay Rattan, home economics teacher at Odessa High School, demonstrated drying techniques at a food preservation seminar held recently at Lee High School.

Drying involves removing enough moisture from the food to prevent spoilage. This must be done as fast as possible at a temperature that does not seriously affect the flavor, texture and color of the food. A too low temperature at the beginning may cause the food to undergo undesirable microbiological changes before it dries adequately. If the temperature is much too high and the humidity too low, the water-filled cells of the food may expand and burst or the food may harden on the surface. This makes it more difficult for the moisture to escape and the food to dry properly.

Fruits and vegetables contain certain enzymes that are responsible for the maturation. These enzymes cause color and flavor changes, some of which may become more extensive when food surfaces are cut and exposed to air. The changes continue during drying and storage unless the enzyme activity is retarded or stopped. Therefore, pretreatment such as antioxidant coating, blanching and/or sulfuring may be recommended.

There are many variations in drying and it is best to work out your own methods to find which techniques work best for different situations, according to Ms. Rattan.

Regardless of the methods used, these facts should be kept in mind:

- Cleanliness and safety are important throughout the process. "The less you handle the foods, the less trouble you will have with them," said Ms. Rattan.
- The quality of the finished product can be no better than that of the raw material from which it is made.
- The flavor of dried fruits and vegetables will be different from their fresh, canned or frozen counterparts.

GENERAL PREPARATION

Wash or clean all fresh produce thoroughly to remove any dirt or spray. Sort and discard any defective food. Decay, bruises, or mold on ay piece may affect an entire batch of food being dried. Peel, pit and cut the food into uniform sized pieces. A stainless steel knife helps to prevent foods from discoloring. Before drying, remove any excess moisture from a pretreated food by spreading the food on paper toweling or clean cloths.

Vegetables

Vegetables, with few exceptions, should be treated before drying to stop the enzymatic action that allows these foods to undergo undesirable changes. (The exceptions include mature peas and beans, and some types of corn.)

Blanching is the treatment used for vegetables. The steam-blanching method is preferred over the boiling water method.

Fruits

Fruits generally make a better product if they are treated by one or more methods before being dried. The following methods may be used.

Sulfuring

Sulfuring preserves color as well as flavor. It decreases loss of vitamins A and C and minimizes microbial spoilage and insect infestation. This method is usually recommended for cut fruits that are to be sun-dried.

Sulfur is readily available as flowers of sulfur or sublimed sulfur at most pharmacies. Garden dusting sulfur is not suitable.

Blanching

Fruits may be steam-blanched if they are to be dried under controlled conditions (oven or dryer) or if it is not possible to sulfur them. Blanching gives a darker colored product and may make the fruit soft and difficult to handle.

Syrup-blanching

Syrup-blanching fruit before drying gives a sweetened, "candied" type product. It also helps keep the color in apples, apricots, figs, nectarines, peaches, pears and plums if they are not sulfured.

Make a syrup using 1 cup corn syrup and 1 cup sugar to 3 cups water. Or, use 1 part syrup to 1 part water. Heat the syrup to boiling, add the prepared fruit and simmer for 10 to 15 minutes. Remove the pan from the heat and let the fruit stand in the syrup for 10 minutes longer. Lift out, drain and cool.

Fruit treated this way will take longer to dry and, because it will attract insects, should be well protected if dried outdoors.

Treating with ascorbic acid

Pure ascorbic acid (vitamin C) is an antioxidant that helps to keep fruit from darkening as it is being prepared for drying.

DRYING METHODS

Sun-drying

"I think sun-drying is so easy," Ms. Ambrose said.

Place trays of pretreated fruits or vegetables in the direct sun, either flat or tilted, in an arrangement that allows air to circulate underneath them. Select a drying area that offers some protection from dust and dirt, as well as from animals. To protect against insects, place cheesecloth or screening over the food, but not in contact with it.

Turn the food occasionally to help it dry evenly.

An electric fan directed onto the food will hasten the drying and help keep insects away. (For safety, be sure the fan has a grill covering the blades.)

When the food seems about two-thirds dry, move the trays into the shade and continue drying until "done." Do not allow the sun to scorch or sunburn the food.

If there is a chance for moisture during the night, bring the trays indoors or stack them, covered, in a sheltered area. Let the food cool somewhat before covering it.

Oven-Drying

Products dried in controlled heat generally will be superior to sun-dried ones in color, flavor, cooking quality and nutritive value. Also, the food more likely will be free from insects and insect eggs which often result from outdoor exposure.

Controlled-heat drying has the advantage over sun-drying of reducing drying time since it goes on continuously even after sundown, and during rainy as well as sunny weather. However, the cost is more for equipment and operating expenses.

When using a home oven for drying, limit the oven load to no more than 4 to 6 pounds of fresh prepared food at one time.

Use trays that are at least 1½ inches smaller than the width and depth of the oven. Separate trays by about 2½ inches. Allow at least a 3-inch clearance from each the top and the bottom. A larger space between the bottom tray and the oven floor may be needed if the temperature cannot be set as low as 140 F.

Disengage, remove, or do not light the top heating element of an oven. Preheat the oven at its lowest setting. Allow it to cool down if necessary, by turning the heat off and/or opening the door slightly, before the food is put in. Be careful with a gas oven which does not have an automatic shut-off. Do not let the flame go out unnoticed during drying.

Prop open the oven door to maintain an even low temperature and to let the moist air out. The opening will vary among ovens, from a ½ inch crack yp to 8 inches.

Use a thermometer to keep track of the temperature in various parts of the oven. If using other than an oven thermometer, make sure the bulb does not touch any surface.

Turn the food occasionally on the trays. Trays next to the top and bottom dry fastest. Shift them around every half hour or so. Also turn trays from front to back.

Most vegetables take 4 to 12 hours to dry; fruits, 6 to 20 hours. Time varies according to the kind of fruit or vegetable being dried, the size of pieces and the load on the tray.

Other Methods

Sun (solar) heaters and dehydrators or dryers sometimes are used to dry foods. They can be made fairly easily at various costs. Sun heaters are effective when drying foods requiring humidity or when drying small lots of food. Dehydrators are best used when drying large amounts of food.

CONDITIONING AND PASTEURIZING

Most fruits should be allowed to "sweat" or condition for a week after drying. This equalizes the moisture. To condition, place fruit in a sturdy nonporous, nonaluminum container. Place the container in a warm, dry, well ventialted and protected area. Stir the food gently each day.

Sun-dried foods, vegetables cut in small pieces sot that in the drying process the heat is not high enough or long enough to kill spoilers and foods that are allowed to stand exposed to air should be pasteurized. Use either of the following methods:

1. Heat fruits and vegetables on trays in a 150 F. oven for 30 minutes.
2. Heat the food on trays in a 175 F. oven. Heat vegetables for 10 minutes and fruits for 15 minutes.

PACKAGING AND STORING

Dried foods should be thorougly cooled before packaging.

Pack the food as tightly as possible without crushing into clean, dry, insect-proof containers.

Fruit that has been sulfured should be separated from a metal can or lid by putting the fruit into a plastic bag or by inserting a cellophane or polyethelene sheet under the lid. Color changes take place when sulfur fumes react with metal.

Most dried foods should be stored, tightly sealed, in a cool, dry, dark place. Recommended storage times range from six months to one year.

PREPARATION FOR TABLE USE

Properly dried foods refresh well. They return practically to their original size, form and appearance. If carefully handled, they retain much of their aroma and flavor, as well as the minerals and appreciable amounts of vitamins.

Roughly, 1 to 2 cups of dried foods will serve 6 persons.

Fruits

One to eight hours are required for refreshing most fruits. The time varies with the kind of fruit, the size of the pieces and whether the refreshing process is done with hot or cold water. Hot water takes less time.

Add water just to cover — more can be added if needed. Do not oversoak.

To cook, cover and simmer in the soak water to retain the nutritive quality.

Sometimes less sugar is needed in cooking dried fruit than in cooking fresh fruit. In the drying process, some of the starch in fruit may change to sugar. When sugar is used, it should be added at the end of the cooking process so it will not interfere with the fruit's absorption of water.

Adding a few grains of salt helps bring out the natural sweetness of most fruits. Lemon, orange or grapefruit juice added to the fruit just before serving will help give a fresh fruit flavor and add vitamin C to the food.

Vegetables

To replace the moisture removed from most vegetables, soak them in cold water just to cover for 20 minutes to 2 hours. Cover greens with boiling water. Bring vegetables to a boil and simmer until done. Allow excess water to evaporate during cooking.

The amount of water used for soaking and cooking should be as nearly the same as the amount the food will take up. It is better to add water during the cooking process than to start with more than is needed.

Like fresh foods, dried ones will lose both texture and flavor if overcooked. Dried vegetables already have been parially precooked and therefore can be prepared for the table in a short time.

Use powdered products and herbs without soaking.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — Drivers using the New Jersey Turnpike can expect to make faster exits after January 1982 when a new automated toll collection system becomes operative.

The computer system is the first of its kind in the nation, according to the New Jersey Turnpike Authority. It will become operative with the installation of 330 computerized ticket machines along the entire length of the Turnpike.

Features will include faster handling of trucks and faster issuance of toll receipts. The system is being developed and installed at a cost of $7 million.

DEAR ABBY

Husband's inhibitions make him fear exhibition

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have a very frustrating problem. On many occasions my husband (I'll call him Joe) and I find ourselves spending vacations or holidays at the home of a relative. We have a wonderful time except when it comes time for bed, then Joe refuses to make love because he says it's not polite to make love in someone else's home. Abby, we have a separate room and all the privacy we need, but Joe is very stubborn about this.

This frustrates and infuriates me — especially when the vacations last a week or two. Joe and I have a very healthy relationship at home or in a hotel, and these loveless vacations are making me very unhappy. Can you help me? — DEPRIVED IN BUFFALO

DEAR DEPRIVED: Joe's inhibitions are not uncommon. I hope he is sufficiently considerate of your feelings to get professional help to overcome his hangups about boudoir behavior. The alternative is to stay at a hotel where you can both enjoy a carefree vacation, complete with marital relations. It's expensive. But having a frustrated and furious wife could be even more expensive.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from Patricia Conklin led me to wonder if Patricia and her husband Roger Campbell have fully considered the social implications of their scheme of naming children by hyphenating the husband's and wife's names.

Let's consider another generation. Assume Bill Green and Sally Brown were married at the same time as Roger and Patricia. Now, assume also that Bill and Sally use the same naming scheme, and a bundle from heaven arrives which they name Edward Brown-Green. About the year 2006, young Edward pops the question to Jane Conklin-Campbell. A year later, along comes Peter Conklin-Campbell-Brown-Green.

And did you know that Peter has a first cousin, James Conklin-Campbell's and Susan Fitzsimmon-Henderson's girl, Mary Fitzsimmon-Henderson-Conklin-Campbell?

Let's assume that such a custom had been followed since the year Jesus Christ was born. Also assume that children are born, raised and have children of their own every 25 years. Then how long would a name of a young boy or girl be today?

According to my calculator, the number of hyphenated names would be a number consisting of 25 digits. I would hate to have to put that on a Form 1040!

Now, you may call me a bull-headed, addle-brained, dim-witted, hyphen-happy nincompoop, but you would be only up to five hyphens. You still have a long way to go. Sign me a mathematical buff from Apalachin, N.Y. My real name is ... — NEIL G. GARGES

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Love those liver strips

DEAR HELOISE:

Your recent hint on cutting liver into strips using kitchen shears, prompted me to search for the recipe for french-fried "Liver Strips" given in your column some time ago.

It was a melt-in-your-mouth recipe but, needless to say, the search was to no avail.

Could you please repeat the recipe as even those who don't usually care for this nourishing food ask for seconds. (Well, maybe not everyone — we all have those "dislike hang-ups"... mine is grated coconut.)

Keep up the good work! — Mrs. Louise Vinson

+ + +

Folks, if your dislike hang-up is indeed liver, you should at least try it french fried, as it really is very good. And I'm one of those persons who would never touch the stuff.

As mentioned, use your kitchen shears to cut the liver into strips, as for french fries. Coat the strips (place them in a bag) with seasoned cornmeal and fine cracker crumbs, then fry them in deep hot fat. (A blender does a great job making the crumbs.) The liver fries in minutes and is very tender.

If desired, the strips can be frozen and thawed out quickly by just putting them in very warm water. Drain before putting them into the cornmeal and cracker coating mixture.

Absolutely delicious! — Heloise

NO FLYAWAY FOAM

Dear Heloise: I just have to take time to share my happy discovery with those unfortunates trying to handle fly-away shredded foam rubber.

Just take a sheet of fabric softener — the kind with several slits in it — and put your fingers through the cuts. (Use your right hand if you are right-handed, etc.) Pull the sheet up between your fingers, then wrap the solid sections over your wrist and secure with a rubber band.

You can do your whole project without fighting with static electricity. Really tames that pesky stuff. — Kathleen

ODOR-FREE FEET

Dear Heloise: With summer here, my husband and son just can't keep their feet dry and odor-free. Please help! — I.M.P.

+ + +

After the nightly bath, have them dry their feet thoroughly then spray them with an anti-perspirant. (We use a deodorant of some type under our arms, why not on our feet!) Have them wear cotton socks and change them every day.

If taking a morning bath, they should spray feet afterwards with the anti-perspirant, but let them dry completely before putting on socks.

Baking soda may be used in the shoes to help eliminate any existing odor but, as with any cosmetic or pharmaceutical product, discontinue use if any irritation develops. — Heloise

NEEDLE THREADING

Dear Heloise: After many years of frustration trying to thread my sewing machine needle (especially at night), I slipped a piece of firm, white material behind the hole in the needle.

Now I'm able to hit the bulls-eye on the first jab every time! — Jean Jamieson

CHICKEN FRY

Dear Heloise: When frying chicken, place a metal colander over the pan as a cover.

Enough air will sift through to continue the browning process, and you'll be protected from most spatters. — Ann Ruschah

COOKING BACON

Dear Heloise: If you love bacon for breakfast when you camp out but hate the mess and the time it takes to cook it, I have the solution...

Before you leave for the campout, cook the bacon in the microwave or conventional oven; drain, put it in a plastic sandwich bag and take it with you in your ice chest. Then just warm it up mornings.

No greasy mess, plus plenty of hot bacon for everyone. — Christine Driggs

Lifes savers

NEW YORK (AP) — Child-restraint devices, if used, could prevent some of the 1,000 deaths and 70,000 automobile injuries inflicted every year on children aged 5 and under.

According to Family Circle Magazine, only 8 percent of the nation's children are adequately protected when they ride in cars.

The effectiveness of the devices is illustrated by the fact that when restraint devices are required by law, auto injuries to children are cut.

In Tennessee, which enacted a mandatory law in 1978, not one child under the age of 4 has been killed in an auto accident while wearing a child-restraint device, and auto injuries have been reduced 50 percent.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Experts uncertain of rubella vaccine

Dear Dr. Solomon: Would it be advisable for a pregnant woman to be immunized with rubella vaccine? I am now pregnant, although it was not planned, and as far as I know I have never had rubella. Would getting the vaccine now have any effect on the baby? — Mrs. A.I.

Dear Mrs. I.: The experts are still uncertain about the advisability of immunizing pregnant women with rubella (German measles) vaccine. Dr. J.A. Frank Jr. of the Center of Disease Control, has reported on more than 100 pregnant women who were inadvertently immunized. None of the children born to these women had any signs of the congenital rubella syndrome.

On the basis of this study, Dr. Frank and his colleagues concluded that the maximum risk of damage to the fetus from rubella immunization during pregnancy is between zero and five percent. This compares with a risk of natural infection during the first three months of pregnancy of from 20 to 25 percent. However, the number of cases studied so far is too small to permit any definite conclusion.

At this time I doubt that anyone would be willing to say that there is no risk in giving a pregnant woman the rubella vaccine.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A week ago I gave birth to my first child. Although I don't do very much around the house, I find that I become tired very easily. Is this normal? I used to be a very active person, and my inability to do the things I want to do bothers me. Would you have any suggestions for overcoming this feeling of weakness? — Mrs. C.O.

Dear Mrs. O.: It is neither surprising nor unusual for a woman to tire easily during the first several weeks after giving birth. Since you say you were a very active person, perhaps you're trying to do too much too soon.

Try to arrange a schedule that provides the opportunity for frequent periods of rest. For example, try to take a nap when your baby is sleeping. In addition, if you feel tired at any time during the day, sit down or lie down. But check with your doctor about the amount of bed rest you require since it is not advisable to stay in bed too long.

If you live in a home with more than one floor, plan your activities so that you don't have to walk up and own the steps more than necessary. After the first week, it is a good idea to take short walks in the fresh air as long as you can manage to avoid large crowds.

The lighter household tasks, such as preparing meals or washing dishes, can be performed after about the first week. If you can sit while carrying out these chores, so much the better. Heavy housework should be avoided for at least the first six weeks after giving birth.

In short, take it easy. Don't try to do too much, too soon. I feel certain that after another few weeks, the tiredness and weakness you now experience will be only a memory.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

The Newspaper BIBLE

IS YOUR GOD TOO SMALL?

"God, who knows men's hearts, confirmed the fact that He accepts Gentiles by giving them the Holy Spirit, just as He gave Him to us. He made no distinction between them and us, for He cleansed their lives through faith, just as He did ours. And now are you going to correct God by burdening the Gentiles with a yoke that neither we nor our fathers believe that all are saved the same way, by the free gift of the Lord Jesus?"

There was no further discussion, and everyone now listened as Barnabas and Paul told about the miracles God had done through them among the Gentiles.

When they had finished, James took the floor. "Brothers," he said, "listen to me. Peter has told you about the time God first visited the Gentiles to take from them a people to bring honor to His name. And this fact of Gentile conversion agrees with what the prophets predicted. For instance, listen to this passage from the prophet Amos: 'Afterwards' says the Lord, 'I will return and renew the broken contract with David, so that Gentiles, too, will find the Lord -- all those marked with My name.'

"That is what the Lord says, who reveals His plans made from the beginning. And so my judgment is that we should not insist that the Gentiles who turn to God must obey our Jewish laws, except that we should write to them to refrain from eating meat sacrificed to idols, from all fornication, and also from eating unbled meat of strangled animals. For these things have been preached against in Jewish synagogues in every city on every Sabbath for many generations." Acts 15:8-21

Man returns cash, gems

MARINE CITY, Mich. (AP) — James Amato is an electrician by trade. But a Florida woman thinks he's just too good to be true.

On his way to work, the 41-year-old Marine City man spotted a purse, stopped to pick it up and found it contained $667 and three diamond rings that turned out to be worth about $8,200.

He gave the purse and its contents to state police at Friday night after he called and was told that Dorothy McLean — the owner who had lost it the night before — was looking for it.

"He's a remarkable man," said Mrs. McLean, 52, of Cudjoe Key, Fla., who was visiting her daughters near Detroit.

Mrs. McLean said the purse must have fallen out of her car early Friday near Marine City when she got out along Michigan 59 to examine her tires after driving over a pothole. When she realized the purse was missing, she searched a four-mile stretch of road with members of her family to no avail.

Amato already had spotted the purse on the side of the road and said he had tried unsuccessfully the whole day to contact the owner.

Roger Moore allowed to buy Swiss chalet

GSTAAD, Switzerland (AP) — Roger Moore, star of five James Bond movies, has won official permission to join Elizabeth Taylor, Julie Andrews, David Niven and other stars as a property owner in this Alpine resort.

A spokesman of the Swiss justice ministry, Ulrich Krebs, said Monday federal authorities withdrew an appeal against the proposed purchase by the 53-year-old British actor. Moore is purchasing an eight-room villa for a reported $850,000.

Roger Moore

He said the appeal, filed with the Swiss Supreme Court and based on a law restricting sales of real estate to non-resident foreigners, was moot because Moore obtained a residence permit in Switzerland.

Krebs said the permit was extended to Moore because he had been a regular visitor to Gstaad during the past 14 years. Also, he said, Moore's children attended school in Switzerland.

News of permission to buy the chalet, known as "The Hayloft," came two weeks after the largest Swiss magazine, Schweizer Illustrierte, quoted Moore as saying he and his Italian-born third wife wanted to move to Switzerland to be near the children and friends.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Saying "I'm just going to continue to be myself," S.I. Hayakawa has thrown his trademark tam-'o-shanter into the political ring again.

S.I. Hayakawa

The Republican U.S. senator, who turns 75 next month, announced Monday he will run for another term in 1982. He said he would relish a fight with his most likely Democratic opponent, California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.

Hayakawa, a former college professor, pooh-poohed political polls that suggest his popularity is fading among voters. "The chances of my being behind in December are nil," he said.

Reps. Barry Goldwater Jr. and Paul "Pete" McCloskey have announced plans to challege Hayakawa for the Republican nomination, but Hayakawa says he is "perfectly confident" of beating both men.

Brown has not yet announced his candidacy but is expected to do so.

"Some people have asked if I have a special strategy for Jerry Brown, and I say no," Hayakawa said. "I'm just going to continue to be myself. If he continues to be himself, there's no problem."

LONDON (AP) — Princess Margaret, who stirred up a diplomatic storm on her last trip to the United States, has canceled plans to visit Washington next month.

Princess Margaret

On the advice of her government, Queen Elizabeth's younger sister has bowed out of a scheduled July 14-16 visit intended to raise money for the Royal Opera House at Covent Garden.

In a brief announcement from Kensington Palace, Margaret's official London residence, no reason was given for the change in plans, except that Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government recommended it.

A spokesman for Mrs. Thatcher declined to elaborate, but it is believed the British are upset at the raucous Irish nationalist protests that greeted Prince Charles during his June 17 trip to New York City.

For her part, Margaret caused hard feelings among Irish-Americans during her last visit to the United States in October 1979. In an aside to Chicago Mayor Jane Byrne, the princess was quoted as saying "The Irish, they're pigs." She later denied the statement but was met by pro-Irish demonstrations for the remainder of her trip.

Lillian Carter, 82, recovering from mastectomy surgery

AMERICUS, Ga. (AP) — Lillian Carter, the 82-year-old mother of former President Jimmy Carter, was recovering without complications today from a mastectomy performed after surgeons found a malignant breast tumor, hospital authorities said.

"She's resting quietly and having a good night," Don Smith, nursing supervisor at Americus-Sumter County Hospital, said early today. "She's stable, alert and talking.... She's doing excellent."

Mrs. Carter spent the night in the hospital's intensive care unit following the surgery Monday and was expected to return to her private room sometime today, Smith said.

During the surgery, a tumor was removed from Mrs. Carter's left breast for examination and, after it was found to be malignant, a modified radical mastectomy was performed, said hospital administrator James R. Griffin.

Mrs. Carter recovered quickly from the anesthesia and was talking when she left the operating room, Griffin said, adding that her personal physician, Dr. John H. Robinson, "feels very optimistic about the outlook and anticipates a full recovery."

All four of Mrs. Carter's children, including the former president, were at the hospital during the surgery, the administrator said.

It was the second major operation in nine months for Mrs. Carter, known to friends and family as "Miss Lillian."

Last October, she underwent surgery for a broken hip after a fall at her home in nearby Plains. She was injured in another fall in February and spent about a month recuperating at an Americus nursing home.

Rapturists still waiting

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — With their deadline passed, Christian fundamentalists who waited for heavenly ascent say they'll wait some more, but won't pick a date.

"Study the word. Find out where I'm wrong so I can get corrected by it," said John Vickers, a 32-year-old member of the Lighthouse Gospel Tract Foundation who maintains that "rapture" will come to pass — and soon.

"Keep your eyes on Israel," said Vickers, one of those who quit his job or sold his house or possessions recently.

Vickers said he left his position with a glass firm and sold his house four months ago to "work with the foundation to get the message out."

Members of the group, which was founded in 1970 by Bill Maupin, believe the state of Israel is the key that will determine the return of Jesus Christ.

Getrude Goose gets care she has needed

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A Canada goose that eluded game wardens, shunned drugged grain and dodged cannon-fired nets for a month despite an 18-inch arrow stuck in its thigh has been caught by a net-wielding boy. And the arrow is out.

The goose — who was dubbed Gertrude by those who chased her — underwent surgery Monday and was expected to be well enough to be released later this week. An 18-year-old man is accused of shooting her in April.

Meanwhile, Ellie Foote, a suburban housewife whose grain handouts attract wildfowl, said Gertrude may really be Esther, a honker who disappeared a few weeks ago leaving behind a sulking gander named Omar.

Omar has been "extremely lonely. For a while he would hardly eat," Mrs. Foote said.

Fourteen-year-old William Nehrkorn spotted the wounded goose Monday and used a fishing net and a cardboard box to subdue her.

She was the second waterfowl to elude capture in recent months despite being pierced by an arrow. In Las Vegas, Nev., this spring, a tiny mallard duck nicknamed Donna finally was caught by a rescuer and an arrow was removed after numerous attempts to net and drug her failed.

Wardens were alerted to Gertrude — or Esther's — plight May 29. Despite the protruding arrow, she was agile enough to fly out of range of nets fired from cannon as she fed with other geese on suburban ponds.

She ignored doped grain that wardens left for her, hoping she would eat and become drowsy enough for capture.

Ozaukee County game warden Rick Wolff said the wound may at last have exhausted the goose enough to allow her capture.

Nehrkorn, of suburban Mequon, said he saw the goose on 57-acre Lac de Cour in Mequon.

"I parked the sailboat and ran across a neighbor's yard, grabbed a fishing net and chased her across anoher neighbor' yard," he said.

Nehrkorn said he trapped the goose against a picket fence with the net, then covered her with a large cardboard box while authorities were telephoned.

She made "quite a bit of struggle but not a lot of noise," Nehrkorn said. "She almost bit me once."

Wolff took the goose to the Schlitz Audubon Center in Bayside to recover from the 15-minute arrow-removal operation by veterinarian Fleming Sandersen.

She needs "a couple of days in a pen to relax and calm down," Wolff said.

The state Department of Natural Resources said Friday Joseph J. Heckenhamp, 18, of Brookfield was charged with having shot the goose April 26 out of season.

The department said it received an annonymous tip after the Wisconsin Bowhunters Association, responding to the publicity over the hunt for the wounded bird, offered a $250 reward.

A Canada goose dubbed Gertrude by game wardens who pursued her for a month is cradled by Wisconsin Natrual Resources Department employee John Burmesch. The goose is recuperating from surgery to remove an 18-inch arrow from her thigh.

It took some high-placed help to get health care for baby

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — A 1-pound, 11-ounce baby girl was flown to a hospital here — with the aid of the Pentagon and White House — after doctors were unable to find her a room in 10 Florida hospitals with facilities for premature infants, hospital officials said Monday.

Stephanie Marie McElrath was born nearly three months premature Saturday at Southeast Medical Center in North Miami Beach, Fla., to Carleen and Gary McElrath. She arrived at Augusta's Talmadge Memorial Hospital late Sunday.

The 13-inch-long baby is stable, but her condition remains critical, said Pam Tinsley, head nurse of Talmadge's neo-natal intensive care unit.

"None of these babies have a good prognosis when they come in here," she said. But babies smaller than Stephanie have survived in the unit.

After Stephanie was born, doctors began seeking a hospital able to provide intensive care for premature infants.

Variety Children's Hospital in south Florida was checked first, said Becky Burke, director of public relations at the Southeast Medical Center. Variety had facilities but not enough staff.

At Hollywood Memorial Hospital, the next facility checked, "The first question they asked was, 'Does the family have insurance,' " Miss Burke said. The young couple doesn't.

She said eight other Florida hospitals with facilities to care for premature infants all reported no vacancies.

The Medical College of Georgia's Talmadge Hospital was contacted next and, Miss Burke said, the baby was accepted immediately.

However, she said a private ambulance firm wanted $3,000 in advance to transport the baby to Augusta.

U.S. Air Force officials agreed to arrange air transportation, she said, but when hospital officials arrived at the airport they were told the mission had been canceled.

The flight was resheduled after hospital officials called the governor, the Pentagon and the White House, Miss Burke said.

"The thing that gave me cold chills is a half-hour after the plane took off, President Reagan called" to make sure the baby was on her way, Miss Burke said.

Miss Burke said she called the White House on Monday to confirm that Reagan was the one who had called and to thank him for his interest. But she said she was told by Mary Catherine English in the White House media liaison office that Reagan and his top aides were unavailable and it could not be confirmed that Reagan had called.

Ms. English said she was able to verify, however, that the plane had been sent on an Air Force request rather than a presidential request, Miss Burke said.

White House spokeswoman Sue Mathis said Monday night that she could not verify what role, if any, Reagan played in getting the baby transported to Augusta.

Jury convicts Parnell in kidnap

HAYWARD, Calif. (AP) — A 16-year-old boy who spent nearly half his life with Kenneth Parnell after allegedly being abducted says he's "glad" the ex-convict he called "Dad" was convicted of kidnapping a 6-year-old boy.

And Steven Stayner said he's prepared for Parnell's next trial, in which the 49-year-old drifter is accused of kidnapping Stayner.

"I guess this (trial) sort of got me ready," Stayner said by telephone from his home in Merced after being informed of the Monday verdict by a reporter. But, he said, the trial "hasn't really been worrying me too much."

Stayner hitchhiked and walked with 6-year-old Timmy White to the Ukiah police station 16 days after Timmy was abducted on Feb. 14, 1980. Stayner said he didn't want Timmy to live a life like his.

Parnell faces a possible seven-year sentence on his conviction in Alameda County Superior Court for kidnapping Timmy. The jury rejected Parnell's story that another man was responsible for grabbing Timmy on Valentine's Day 1980.

"We obviously thought the defendant wasn't entirely truthful," said jury foreman John Fagan. The jury deliberated about 2½ hours.

Parnell bowed his head and sighed when the verdict was read. Prosecutor George McClure said he hoped Parnell would get the maximum term when sentenced Aug. 4.

Parnell's lawyer, Scott LeStrange, said he thought Timmy's testimony recounting his 16 days at Parnell's mountain cabin sealed Parnell's fate.

The prosecution said Parnell kidnapped Timmy with the help of Randle Sean Poorman, 16, bribing him with $50, liquor and marijuana. Poorman was convicted in juvenile court.

Parnell made a surprise claim during his trial that a man named Henry Mettier Jr. had kidnapped Timmy. Mettier, who had been attending the trial because he lived with Poorman's mother, denied the charge and said he had never seen Parnell until the trial.

Stayner told police that Parnell had attempted to kidnap other children, "and he tried to get me to help him. But I just sort of ... tried to mess things up for him instead of helping him."

No trial date has been set in the kidnapping of Stayner, who was snatched as he walked home from school in Merced in 1972. He was 7 at the time.

Parnell could be sentenced to an additional 11 years if convicted in the Stayner case.

He served three years in San Quentin Prison on a lewd conduct conviction in connection with the one-day abduction and molestation in 1951 of an 8-year-old boy.

Three-month siege of city at end

KSARA, Lebanon (AP) — About 100 Christian militiamen pulled out of the eastern city of Zahle today, ending a confrontation with Syrian troops that spawned the Israeli-Syrian missile crisis.

Lebanese police in armored vehicles rolled into the city after daybreak and brought out the militiamen, who are loyal to the right-wing Christian Phalangist Party.

The Lebanese police remained inside the city to take permanent control as part of an agreement to end the siege worked out by Arab mediators.

Reporters stationed in this nearby wine-making community watched the withdrawal but were denied entry to the city.

The convoy of armored vehicles bringing the militiamen out halted at the Syrian checkpoint on the fringes of Ksara. Mortars, machine guns, rocket-propelled grenades and other weapons were unloaded and piled on the ground. Then the vehicles pulled out, taking the militiamen to Phalangist headquarters in Beirut.

Lebanese radio reported thousands of Zahle residents celebrated the end of the three-month-long seige, which caused about 300 deaths and 600 injuries. Most of the casualties occurred before a June 9 ceasefire dampened the fighting.

The Christian-Syrian clashes around Zahle began April 1, when Syrian forces under a peacekeeping mandate from the Arab League moved to halt the militias from building a road linking the city with Phalange-controlled Christian mountain country to the west.

Fighting soon spread to the mountains and to the capital of Beirut, 25 miles west on the Mediterranean coast.

Zahle, the only major Christian stronghold in the Bekaa Valley, received food and other essentials via Red Cross convoys. During the height of the fighting, residents stayed in basement shelters to escape Syrian shelling.

Israel sent planes to aid the Christians and shot down two Syrian helicopters April 28, prompting Syrian President Hafez Assad to order advanced Soviet-made SAM-6 anti-aircraft missiles deployed in east Lebanon. Israel threatened to destroy the missiles but Syria has refused to withdraw them, raising tensions to the brink of war.

Lebanon state radio said the end of the siege will help efforts of an Arab foreign ministers committee to stop the sectarian and political violence that has plagued this nation of 3 million since the 1975-76 civil war.

The pro-Syrian Beirut daily newspaper As Safir said the agreement to end the siege called for the Christian militiamen to surrender their heavy machine guns, mortars, cannons and other weapons and close their political offices. Lebanese police will take over security inside the city and the main highway.

City says raise taxes

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — City Manager Dan Davidson says city property taxes will need to be raised between 25 percent and 80 percent next year or residents will face cuts in services.

The first of two options presented by Davidson's staff calls for a $147.5 million budget that would require an 80 percent tax increase. This figure, Davidson said, would finance all current services, as well as additional programs the city council has authorized for next year.

The second option, a $127.3 million budget calls fo a 25 percen property taxincrease. That option calls for no more personnel and provides no money for progams already aproved by the council.

"These figures are arbitrary," Davidson told the council.

Forget Fourth of July, it's kaput

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Forget the Fourth of the July. It is gone, finished, kaput.

There will be no last-minute Perils of Pauline rescue for the Fourth. It is beyond salvation, the latest victim in the mounting casualty count of the discouraging, disastrous baseball strike.

There are still light years separating the two sides in this traumatic episode and there is no settlement on the immediate horizon. It would take an instant peace pact — one we won't get — to put baseball in major league parks this weekend.

Even with the impossible — a complete settlement today — teams would require at least a week to gather all their players and give them workout time. That means another weekend, this one the Fourth of July, is gone.

So you can resign yourself to firecrackers, sparklers, hot dogs, apple pie, perhaps a beer or two at the backyard barbecue and no baseball for the Fourth.

It seems incredible, an unbelievable turn of events.

What is important now is not to whine and whimper over the more than 200 games wiped out by the strike. They are not going to be retrieved, so they are best forgotten. Instead, let us concentrate on the calendar and what we can salvage from this mess.

First and foremost, there is the season. About one-third of the 162-game schedule had been played when the walkout occurred. How many games can baseball lose and still call 1981 a complete season?

The thought here is that teams must play a minimum of 100 games to have a viable season, a decent barometer of winners and losers. Even that number may not be sufficient, but if you're looking for an arbitrary figure, 100 seems as good as any.

When the strike came, California and Oakland each had played 60 games, the most for any teams in baseball. Pittsburgh's 48 were the fewest. For the Angels and A's to hit 100, they would need about five weeks worth of games. The Pirates would need slightly more than that.

The season is scheduled to end Oct. 4, so we are talking about a mid-August resumption of games and an Aug. 1 settlement to provide ample preparation and workout time. Coincidentally, management's $50-million strike insurance, the umpires association notwithstanding, expires Aug. 8.

Diablos beat Cubs again, 5-4

BY TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

For a team still demoralized from losing the first half pennant race on the last day and came limping into Midland on a wing and a prayer, the El Paso Diablos have been disturbingly vital at Cubs Stadium the last two nights.

With excellent relief pitching from Jim Koontz and a game-deciding eighth inning homer by Stan Davis, the Diablos beat the Cubs, 5-4, for the second straight night to open up a one-game lead in the Texas League West Division.

It was the Cubs third straight setback, a loss in which the Bruins, once again, failed to come up with the big hit when they needed it most.

ONE REASON was an El Paso defense that repeatedly turned in rally-ruining defensive saves, but as you might expect from a manager, Tony Muser was remembering the defensive lapse that made it necessary for Davis hit his league-leading 19th homer with two out in the eighth. It was the second homer in two nights for the Virginian and his 75th rbi, also tops in the TL.

The homer dealt Randy Clark his seventh loss as he went after his sixth straight win and spoiled a route-going seven-hitter in which only three of the runs were earned. But that's the way it has been for Clark this year.

It was a three base error by Al Manning on Craig Kornfeld's grounder in the seventh that set up Mel Hall's sacrifice fly to left that tied it at 4.

BUT THE Diablos began foiling the Cubs at the pass early. In the fourth, the first three Cubs reached base against starter Tony Torrez and Joe Carter hit a triple to right-center, only trouble was that fast Eddie Irvine, skidding on his chest after a long run, one-handed the ball off the grass for an out. The Cubs scored two runs and drove Torrez to an early shower before the inning ended, but they still might be batting if it hadn't been for Irvine.

In the seventh, leftfielder Davis made a fine catch on Hall to turn a hit into a sacrifice fly and in the eighth, Carter walked to lead off, but Koontz turned J.W. Mitchell's bunt in front of the plate into a force at second and then shortstop Willie Lozado ranged behind second and backhanded to the bag for the force on Mike Shepston's tough chance.

THE DIABLOS also got an extra run in the second after a Davis single, an error and singles by Lozado and Manning plated one run and had the bases loaded with none out. Two runs romped home as the Cubs failed in an attempt to get a 3-6-3 double play on Terry Shoebridge's grounder to first to make it 3-0.

Midland tied it with a run in the third when Randy LaVigne singled, took second on a wild pitch and scored on Shepston's hit and added two more in the fourth, an inning in which the Cubs had two hits and three walks.

Jerry Lane singled home a run in the sixth for a 4-3 El Paso lead, but the Cubs tied it on the error and fly in the seventh.

The Diablos are 4-2 in the second half, despite a roster that sounds like a sick bay roll call. Catcher Bill Schroeder has been out with a split finger and Outfielder Bob Skube will miss the entire series with an injured left elbow. Doug Loman has been summoned to AAA, so Muser has been using relief pitcher Chick Valley at first and first baseman Davis in left and first baseman John Evans as DH.

"Valley hasn't hurt us at first. He was primarily a first baseman last year in A ball and did a little relief pitching. However, with prospects like Davis and Evans on the club, I made a bid for him when we left spring training as a bullpen pitcher. He is 6-1 with five saves out of the bullpen and at first he's probably the best in the league defensively."

But when John Hanson arrives today, Valley will be back in the bullpen with Evans and Davis alternating at first and DH.

Also arriving today will be Sonny Clark from Stockton, Cal League, "He's the only Korean in pro ball," says Muser, "And he'll start tonight."

More bad news for the Cubs, Schroeder will be behind the plate.

Koontz pitched three-hit ball over the final 5 1/3 innings for the win, yielding only an unearned run. His record is now 2-4.

BRUIN BREWIN'S—Javier Fierro singled in the fourth to extend his batting streak to 11 straight...Lefthander Phil Nastu, 3-1, is scheduled to go for the Cubs, "I don't know where it got started that I have had a sore arm. The only trouble with my arm has been disuse. I pitched only seven innings and spring training and wasn't used much the first three months of the season."...Fritz Connally's two hits raised his average to .358, tops on the club...

Trevino believes strike could be good for golf

By DOUG TUCKER

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Major League baseball strike may be the best thing that could have happened to the professional golf tour, says Lee Trevino.

"I think golf needs something to stimulate it," Trevino said in a news conference Monday prior to an exhibition match with Tom Watson and Jack Nicklaus.

The three golfing greats, who among them have won 29 major tournaments and more than $8 million, all had ideas of how to spark interest in their sport.

"I'd like to see some match play on the tour," said Watson. "I think we need it and I think people would like to see it. But television is against it and the tournaments are against it. Maybe we could do it with some nontelevised tournaments."

Nicklaus and Trevino both find merit in a recently introduced idea of splitting the PGA into wo separate tours.

"Today is a perfect example," said Nicklaus, gesturing around the Blue Hills Country Club Course where several thousand persons showed up to watch the match for the Children's Mercy Hospital fund. "If you bring golf to more places that aren't on the tour, it will be supported. We need to go into more cities, to broaden our base. We have enough places like Kansas City, Salt Lake City, Pittsburgh, Detroit andx seattle that can't get on the tour and they would welcome golf events."

Nicklaus said he did not know exacty how an auxiiary tour could be put together.

"But by having two tours we would develop more players," he said. "There are some problems with it. But we're going to have to develop more players to give golf a chance to grow."

"I tink the country could support two tours," said Trevino.

In response to another question, the three veterans said they have noticed a renewed dedication to physical fitness among professional golfers, particularly among the newer tour members.

"We see a lot less drinking and among among the younger guys on the tour," said Watson.

Players, Owners still worlds apart

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Their Manhattan offices are separated by only about a half dozen short city streets, but the striking Major League Players Association and baseball's Player Relations Committee remained much farther apart than that today.

No talks were scheduled in the walkout, which has shut down baseball for 19 days and almost certainly has added the July Fourth holiday weekend, traditionally one of the sport's top gate attractions, to its mounting casualty count.

Both sides talked briefly with Federal Mediator Kenneth Moffett on Monday but no progress at resuming negotiations was reported. Donald Fehr, general counsel of the players association, thinks the stalemate over compensation to teams losing free agents is the re-entry draft is destined to continue for a long time.

"I believe a significant number of owners have written off the season," said Fehr. "If that happens, then the strike will still be on next April. If the summer is over, there is a lot less incentive to settle it over the winter. The owners think the players will collapse but they won't. This thing could go on forever."

MEANWHILE, THE players missed an entire paycheck for the first time today. Players are paid on the 15th and 30th of each month.

Fehr characterized a revised management proposal on compensation made at last week's bargaining sessions as "so minimal ... not something that will lead to an agreement."

Management reduced its formula for defining ranking players who would qualify for compensation from 50 and 33 percent to 40 and 25 percent and increased the number of second level players who may be protected in any compensation from 18 to 20 last week.

"It's like somebody driving up to your house in an old, broken down car with no engine, no wheels, the windshield shattered and the tail light broken and asking you to buy it," said Fehr. "You say, 'No,' and so, the next day, he comes back with the tail light fixed. Will you buy it then?"

Fehr said the next move is up to management.

"But as far as the players are concerned, it's been their move for a long time."

ELSEWHERE on the strike front, a federal judge in Philadelphia refused to return to state court a suit filed by the Major League Umpires Association, which seeks to block payments from a $50 million strike insurance policy. The insurance provides the owners with $100,000 for every canceled game after a 153-game deductable.

Judge Donald Van Artsdalen last Friday dissolved a temporary injunction won by the umpires in state court and then denied a petition to return the case to the state court's jurisdiction on Monday. "It seems to me there is federal jurisdiction," Judge Van Artsdalen said. "There are federal questions of colective bargaining and unfair labor practices."

Attorney Richie Phillips, representing the umpires, appealed the ruling.

In another Philadelphia courtroom, two fans filed a $10 million civil suit against both sides in the stalemate.

WILLIAM HALLORAN and Maury Galonoy charged "intentional and reckless disregard for the rights of others," and charged that the players and owners had "injured and damaged innocent bystanders," by denying the fans their right to see baseball games.

The suit added that the public will be subjected to violent crimes by individuals unable "to rid themselves of tensions and problems," by attending games.

Paterno meets to disuss conference

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Penn State Athletic Director Joe Paterno, who favors an Eastern Collegiate Conference, including football, is coming here Wednesday to talk pro and con on the subject.

He'll be joined by representatives from Syracuse, Boston College, West Virginia and Rutgers.

Although Pittsburgh is adamantly against the league, Paterno is hopeful that if the schools — joined perhaps by Army and Navy — could get the league started, Pitt might change its outlook.

Shriver to face Chrissie in semis

By WINSOR DOBBIN

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Pam Shriver has something to prove to herself: that she can win a string of great matches, and not just one.

She played a great match Monday, defeating her 18-year-old rival Tracy Austin 7-5, 6-4 to reach the Wimbedon semiinals. It earned her a crack at top-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd, who has beaten her in all seven of their previous meetings.

The statistics will not worry seventh-seeded Shriver too much. The 5-foot-11 Lutherville, Md., player, who will turn 19 on Saturday, ended an 11-match losing streak against Austin in front of a packed crowd of 14,000 on Wimbledon's center court and said afterward she was full of confidence for the semifinals.

"That must be my greatest win," she said. "I played an almost perfect match.

"I now know I can play a great match. Now we are going to see if I can string together a sequence of great matches.

"Today was good for me. I couldn't ask for anything better before playing Chris."

Lloyd, who defeated Shriver, then 16 years old, in the final of the United States Open three years ago, defeated 10th-seeded Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia 6-2, 6-2 in a little over an hour to clinch her place in the semifinals.

"It doesn't worry me who I'm playing," said Lloyd, who reached the semis for the 10th straight year.

"I like playing Pam because she is a serve-and-volley player. That gives me something to aim at — and she's a pretty big target," Lloyd joked.

"Mentally, it would have been tougher for me to play Tracy. She has a better record against me, but I try not to worry about my opponent. I worry about my own game."

Lloyd, 26, had very little to worry about Monday. The chunky Jausovec, who had earlier upset fifth-seeded Andrea Jaeger, did not have the consistency to disturb the No.1 seed.

The Yugoslav player mixed up her shots intelligently but made too many unforced errors.

"It would have been tougher if I'd played Andrea," said Lloyd. "She is a better player than Mima."

The other semifinal is a much tougher match, according to the seedings, with second-seeded Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia playing Czechoslovakian-born Martina Navratilova, who is seeded No.4.

Mandlikova overwhelmed Wendy Turnbull of Australia 6-0, 6-0 in 40 minutes, while Navratilova ousted Virginia Ruzici of Romania 6-2, 6-3.

Turnbull was hampered by a wrist injury, but Mandlikova, the 19-year-old reigning French Open and Australian Open champion who is halfway to the Grand Slam, said: "I know the result looks easy on paper, but I had to work for every point."

"I am playing better every match, but it was not as easy as the result looks," she said.

There is debate on whether a player must win all four major titles — Wimbledon and the French, U.S. and Australian Opens — in the same year or consecutively to capture the "Grand Slam."

Mandlikova, who once acted as a ballgirl for Navratilova, five years her senior, cme into Wimbledon troubled by a back injury and had to pull out of both the women's and mixed doubles.

"The day before Wimbledon, I said to myself: 'Maybe next year,'" she admitted. "Now that I've reached the semifinals, I think I can win it. But it is still far away."

Striking ballplayers make ends meet with odd jobs

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

They are truck drivers, construction workers, plumbers, loggers, roofers, bartenders and brick masons. They sell hardware, automobiles, car parts, boots and shoes. They sing, tell jokes, forecast the weather and perform magic tricks. They are doctors and artists. They fish, and they farm.

Striking major league ballplayers are finding an assortment of ways to make ends meet, or just keep busy, while America goes without its national pastime.

Today would have been payday for most major leaguers — who get paid on the 15th and 30th of each month — and the players who make the major league minimum salary of $32,500 a year will begin to feel the financial pinch. Others have just become bored out of their skulls.

"We're feeling the crunch," says Minnesota rookie infielder Chuck Baker. "We're having to watch our money. My wife's still looking for work, and I might have to find something, too.

"I figured this thing might go a couple of weeks," he said. "Now, it seems like it's going to last forever."

Like many players, Baker has put himself on hold for the moment, hoping to ride out the strike without looking for work. Many players, however, already have found parttime work, and others are beginning to look just to fill the idle hours.

"I'm running and playing catch," says Angels pitcher Dave Frost, "but I'm mostly sitting around in limbo. I don't know what to expect anymore, but I do know that I can't keep driving myself crazy by waking up every morning and thinking today is the day (the strike ends).

"If I get a job, it won't be out of necessity, but rather to escape from going stir crazy," Frost says.

Royals outfielder Clint Hurdle is one of those already at work parttime. He is a bartender at Thirsty's in Kansas City, and he's doing commercials for a home improvement company.

"I spill a lot, but it's good showmanship," he said. "We have a blast. That other night, somebody asked me to make him a cadillac, and I said, 'What the hell do you think I am — a bartender?'"

Giants pitcher Al Holland was supposed to start a job driving a truck for a San Francisco Peninsula firm today. Cincinnati catcher Joe Nolan is working at his own construction firm, and Milwaukee infielder Jim Gantner is doing his apprenticeship as a plumber.

Jack Morris of the Detroit Tigers has taken up logging in Minnesota, and Mike Sadek and Dave Bergman of the Giants are working in the San Jose, Calif., roofing business of former teammate Don Carrithers.

"I don't want to make a big deal of it," Carrithers said. "I'm just helping out some ballplayers who have asked for work. Sadek has done a great job. Randy Moffitt worked one day last week and hasn't been back.

"It's not an easy job," Carrithers said. "The best think you can say about it is that it's outdoors."

Minnesota first baseman Ron Jackson, who won a $200,000 arbitration ruling, has gone home to Birmingham, Ala., to lay bricks for his father's company. Los Angeles rookie pitcher Dave Stewart had been earning $75 a day at the Smith Fastener Co., a hardware firm, in Bell, Calif.

Doug Corbett of the Twins was supposed to start selling cars at a dealership in Bear Lake, Minn., but he was sidelined with a broken toe. Dodgers outfielder Jay Johnstone has started fulltime at his own auto parts store.

Bob Watson of the Yankees and Milt Wilcox of the Tigers both have their own businesses. Watson sells boots; Wilcox peddles shoes.

Other players preferred the soft shoe to the hard sell. Doug Flynn of the New York Mets, who has performed before at a Manhattan country-Western bar named Cody's, went on a four-day singing tour with the Oak Ridge Boys. Lenny Randle, who fancies himself a standup comic, has been touring Seattle area night spots with his "Seattle Mariners Variety Show." Scott McGregor was the first of six Orioles who have taken turns giving a "Bird's Eye View" of the weather on Baltimore's WBAL-TV, which is not paying the players.

"There's no grand design," says John Zarrella, executive producer of the station. "It's just to hhave a little fun. They've been a little nervous. It's not like selling underwear."

The trickiest of the show biz boys might be the Chicago Cubs' Mike Lum, who's doing magic three nights a week at the Moon Shadow Saloon in Atlanta.

Then, there are those who have turned in their spikes for a white collar. Doc Medich of Texas is, of course, a doctor and parttime practitioner. Indians relief pitcher Mike Stanton has been readying an exhibit of his own artwork, to be displayed at Boston Mills, Ohio.

Pat Putnam of the Rangers has been catching shrimp off the Florida Gulf Coast, and Atlanta Braves veteran Gaylord Perry just finished chopping and spraying 115 acres of peanuts on his 600-acre farm in North Carolina.

Sammy Stewart, the Orioles pitcher, says that between weather forecasts, he's enjoying his first summer off since high school. He hasn't managed to entirely avoid the drudgery, however.

"My wife's got me painting the house and digging up the garden," he said. "She doesn't pay me for it, though."

WBA takes action to force fight on Weaver

An AP Sports Analysis
By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Sports Writer

"Mike Weaver does not own the championship," Bob Lee, a vice president of the World Boxing Association, said last week.

Lee's statement came at a meeting where the WBA Executive Committee took action in Houston to force the heavyweight champion to fight the No.3 contender rather than the No.1 contender or risk being stripped of title recognition.

"Along with the title comes the obligation to follow the regulations," added Lee.

WELL, MIKE Weaver seems to have decided to follow regulations — regulations that certainly are not consistently enforced — and defend against James Tillis instead of Gerry Cooney.

"Right now, if I were to decide between $3 million (his purse for a Cooney fight in October) and my title, I'd rather have my title," Weaver said over the weekend. "It means more than money.

It means more than anything."

The championship apparently means more to Weaver than it does to the WBA, which is willing to water down its version of the boxing's most important championship.

Tillis is unbeaten and shouldn't be deprived of a shot at the title, but why is it so pressing that he get one before Weaver fights Cooney? Tillis' opponent, should Weaver be stripped, would be Greg Page, another young unbeaten fighter who hasn't paid his dues, but has the ability to pay them in full. Fighting for a title made vacant by politics would only cheapen the winner's accomplishment.

IS WEAVER being put in a corner because, as the WBA Executive Committee ruled, Tillis was the leading available contender for Weaver in March when the champion supposedly had to sign for a mandatory defense?

Did the fact that promoter Bob Arum announced a Weaver-Tillis fight for February, which reportedly was sold to CBS-TV, have anything to dowith it? Arum was an interested observer and sometime participant in the Executive Committee meeting.

Does it matter that Weaver and his manager, Don Manuel, could not come to terms with Arum and that after they received a negotiating extension, Cooney became available?

So, now what we have is a Keystone Kops situation ... and nobody plays such a situation better than boxing people.

Last Thursday, the day after the Executive Council meeting, Manuel said Weaver would fight Cooney with or without WBA sanction, and noted that the fighter "... already had made the statement he was the heavyweight champion and he was going to fight the No.1 contender. That is Gerry Cooney."

JAMES KAULENTIS, Tillis' manager, left Houston hoping Tillis would get a fight with Page in September. Shortly after arriving in Chicago, Kaulentis got a call from Sam Glass of Tiffany Promotions, which holds a contract on a Weaver-Cooney fight.

Kaulentis said Glass offered Tillis $200,000 to fight Weaver but was told someone else had offered $250,000. Then Glass called back and said, according to Kaulentis, "I'll give you $250,000. I discussed it with Manuel."

Why is Glass suddenly interested in a Weaver-Tillis fight. Well, in Houston, the WBA set a July 15 deadline to accept purse offers for a Weaver-Tillis fight and gave Weaver until July 25 to accept the best offer before steps were taken to withdraw title recognition from him.

Now Arum says there will be no purse offers, that he has the fight. "We're taking the position that we're exercising our option with Mr. Weaver. I'm sure the Weaver people will come in and sign a contract to get rid of me," said Arum.

The Weaver people have been trying to get rid of Arum. They have filed suit in California, trying to void an option contract with Arum on three fights. They contend that Arum violated the contract by offering $500,000 plus a percentage, which would add about another $100,000, instead of $750,000 which Weaver was supposed to get for the second fight, which would have been against Tillis in February.

ARUM, WHO said Weaver got $2.5 million instead of the contracted $600,000 for his first defense when he knocked Gerrie Coetzee, said it will be a long time before the California litigation is settled.

Long, dreary strike

(From 1D)

If you buy that scenario, it means another month to this long, dreary strike.

But suppose instead, you're an optimist. Suppose instead, by some miracle, the negotiators are struck by a sudden sense of urgency. Suppose instead, some beam of reason shines through the bargaining table rhetoric and the two sides decide that it might not be such a very good idea for America to get accustomed to going without baseball every day and every weekend for an extended length of time.

Then you look for an alternative and there is one staring us in the face. It is July 14, the All-Star Game in cavernous Cleveland Stadium. It offers a chance — perhaps the only chance — for baseball to make a meaningful recovery from this disaster.

If the strike can be settled this week, perhaps, in a stroke of patriotism, over the Independence Day weekend, then it will have lasted about 25 days, some 3½ weeks. Given the Players Association formula of 2½ days of workouts for each week lost, that means another week or so of practice. That brings you up to July 12 — two days before the All-Star Game.

What a wonderful way it would be to bring back baseball if the players return for that event. The All-Star Game is the sport's second most important showpiece, overshadowed only by the playoffs and World Series. Cleveland Stadium is sold out with 76,000 fans guaranteed. There would be a national television audience. What a perfect setting to tell America that baseball's back!

Perhaps this is a pipedream, devoid of reality. But is a summer without baseball a reality? An All-Star Game return is a marvelous prospect to consider. It would really help erase the bitter taste of the strike and help the country rediscover its national pastime.

Will it happen? Nobody knows. We can only hope.

Wyoming Oil Leases To Be Awarded in July

ONTARIO, CALIF. — Hundreds of average citizens will acquire oil lease rights in upcoming public awards conducted by the State of Wyoming. Some may achieve overnight wealth by selling their rights to oil companies and retaining life-long royalties on any oil or gas production.

Incredibly, most will risk no more than $25 and a minimal filing fee to enter the little-known program that offers every American the opportunity to compete on an equal basis with giant oil companies for leases of public lands.

Information and entry details are available from The H. Kirk Sanders Co., Public Lands Division, Box 3697, Ontario, Calif. 91761 (2032 Caroline). Enclose $1 for postage and handling.

Official entry cards will be rushed by return mail to permit the timely filing of entries before cut-off date.

NOTED HYPNOTISTS IN MIDLAND TO HELP SMOKERS & THE OVERWEIGHT

WADE M. GENTHNER, F.A.T.H.
Director of Techniques For Living

Are you overweight or a cigarette smoker? Have you tried to lose weight or stop smoking, only to fail time and time again? If you find yourself answering "yes" to either of these questions then the Techniques For Living Seminar, under the direction of Wade M. Genthner F.A.T.H. at the HOLIDAY INN WEST 3004 WEST WALL will be the place for you to be on TUESDAY JULY 7. Techniques for Living will be conducting their famous Lose Weight-Stop Smoking Seminar which has helped thousands of people throughout the United States. Techniques For Living is a national organization dedicated to helping Americans solve these and other problems that have kept them from enjoying their lives to the fullest."

The subject of numerours newspaper and magazine articles as well as television appearances, Mr. Genthner and his staff have been conducting these seminars throughout the country. In a comprehensive and fascinating three hour program, those who attend the seminar experience the relaxing and beneficial effects of clinical hypnosis. Not only do people permanently lose weight and stop smoking as a result of the seminar, they also report that they sleep better, feel more energetic, and generally enjoy life more than they had previously.

Mr. Genthner's skill in clinical hypnosis was noted by Dan Rather of CBS ' "60 Minutes", who referred to him in a nationally televised report as a well-trained and highly experienced hypnotist".

"Clinical hypnosis is the easiest way there is to solve these problems", Genthner syas. "Simply put, it helps to eliminate these types of problems permanently."

Genthner says that the reason clinical hypnosis is so successful is that "it removes the causes of problems, not just the symptoms." For example, he explains: "People who are overweight go on diets. A diet is only good for as long as you can follow it. Once you stop the diet you regain the weight. Hypnosis is permanent because it eliminates the causes of overeating, not just the symptoms." The same holds true for smokers where the need to prevent cravings for cigarettes or weight gain is just as important. Both problems are covered at the seminar, and each seminar leader is personally trained by Mr. Genthner. Further information can be obtained by calling, toll FREE 1-800-445-5454

SMU's Ron Meyer taking no vacation

DALLAS (AP) — This is the time of year when most college football coaches are chasing rainbow trout and resting up for the grinding Saturdays of autumn.

But not Ron Meyer.

HE'S STILL answering letters and telephone calls, trying to explain why the Southern Methodist Mustangs got a year in the slammer from the NCAA.

Meyer won't be going on vacation this summer.

"Professionally it's the low point of my 18-year career," said Meyer. "I've never been involved in anything like this. I've had disappointing Saturdays and overome them ... I'll overcome this."

SMU was placed on probation for two years by the NCAA. The penalty includes sanctions for one year that will prohibit the football team from playing in bowl games and on television.

THE NCAA found SMU guilty of improper recruiting inducements and entertainment of prospects. It was the third time in the last seven years the SMU football program had been caught doing something wrong.

"I'm embarrassed by this thing," says Meyer. "The stigma attached to it is a lot greater than the alleged violations that were committed. A lot of people just read the headlines. Not many read the allegations."

Some SMU backers feel the infractions were so minor it was like getting five years for stealing an Eskimo pie.

Others believed the Mustangs were under the microscope because of past probations and the NCAA was ready to pounce at the slightest deviation from the rules.

But some have speculated the Mustangs were guilty of greater sins and the NCAA settled for the lesser trespasses.

"MY MAIL has been 1,000 percent supportive," said Meyer. "The SMU alumni have been fantastic."

He said he has spoken with every player on the football team and that their emotions ranged from disappointment to anger.

"There was very much a set-jaw type of approach about the coming football season," said Meyer. "Just because we can't play in the Cotton Bowl Jan. 1, our players want to make sure folks have an SMU nick on their record. A notch-on-the-gun-belt attitude was prevalent." He added, "I've even had four or five players call and encourage me."

Meyer has had numerous opportunities to coach elsewhere, but said not only is he glad he's still at SMU, but he hopes he will finish his college coaching days at the school. "If they give me a lifetime contract I'm willing to sign it," said Meyer.

ASKED if he could be enticed by an offer from the professional ranks, Meyer said, "My plans are to be here on a long-term basis. I've made a committment and I'm going to see it through."

Meyer said his biggest concern at the moment is the players who will be seniors on the 1981 team.

"I wanted them to be in a bowl as a reward," said Meyer. "This season will be unfair to them. We've just got to make sure it never happens again around here."

Coleman wins baseball prize

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Steve Coleman, catcher for the Class 5A state champion Lubbock Monterey, has been named the 1981 outstanding Texas high school baseball player by the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce.

Coleman batted .542 over the season, setting a record for the school that racked up its third state championship since 1972. He struck out only twice during the season.

Loughery signs to coach Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — Kevin Loughery has completed what Atlanta Hawks General Manager Stan Kasten called a "formality" by signing a three-year contract to coach the National Basketball Association team.

Kasten said the signing took place Monday in the New York office of Loughery's agent, Larry Fleisher, but he refused to reveal other details of the contract.

Homer in 10th wins for Jackson

By The Associated Press

Ed Cuervo's solo homer in the 10th inning gave the Jackson Mets a 1-0 Texas League baseball victory over the Tulsa Drillers Monday night.

In other Texas League action, El Paso edged Midland, 5-4, and Arkansas beat Shreveport, 5-3. San Antonio's scheduled game at Amarillo was postponed because of rain.

Cuervo's homer ended what had been a pitching duel between winning pitcher Terry Leach, 4-1, and Kevin Richards of Tulsa. Jack Lazorko, 3-4, who relieved Richards in the eighth, was the losing pitcher.

Fred Tisdale's two-run single ignited a four-run rally in the ninth inning and gave the Arkansas Travelers a 5-3 victory over the Shreveport Captains. Arkansas also scored on a passed ball and a sacrifice fly in the ninth inning.

The winning pitcher was Rafael Pimentel, 6-2. Jim Dunn, 3-4, was the loser.
